

REFERENCES

1. Douglas, Gavin (c.1525). Prologue to translation of the Aeneid. Specimens of Middle Scots. Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh 1902.
2. Lindsay, Sir David, Ane Satyre of the Thrie Estaitis, Specimens of Middle Scots. Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh 1902.
3. McLellan, Robert, Collected Plays I, John Calder, London, 1981.
4. Scott, Paul H. (1997), SCOTLAND An Unwon Cause, Canongate 1997.
5. Campbell, Donald (1993). The Fraying Rope, CENCRASTUS 44.
6. Robinson, Mairi (1973) Modern Literary Scots: Ferguson and After, in Lowland Scots Occasional Papers No.2 , Association for Scottish Literary Studies.
7. Campbell, Donald (1992). The Fraying Rope, Part Two, CENCRASTUS 43.
8. Campbell, Donald (1992). The Fraying Rope, Part One, CENCRASTUS 42.
9. Daiches, David (1980). Literature and Gentility in Scotland, Edinburgh University Press, Edinburgh.
10. Bell, Barbara (1998). In A History of Scottish Theatre, Polygon, Edinburgh.
11. Hutchison, David (1998). In A History of Scottish Theatre, Polygon, Edinburgh.
12. Reid, Charlotte (1991). List of plays in Scots. Glasgow City Libraries, Glasgow.
13. Purves, David (1992). The Puddok an the Princess, Brown, Son & Ferguson, Glasgow.
14. Purves, David (1992) The Tragedie o Macbeth, Rob Roy Press, Edinburgh.
15. Purves, David (1997) The Way Forward for the Scots Language, Scottish Council for Economic and Social Research, Peterhead, 1997.
16. Purves, David (1997) A Scots Grammar, Saltire Society, Edinburgh, (Revised and extended edition, 2002).