*This volume is respectfully dedicated to my father
HARRY JUDSON McINTIRE
on the one hundredth anniversary of his birth.*

*His indefatigable interest and invaluable assistance kindled the ambition and enthusiasm which have enabled me to transform an early dream
—the content of the work herewith offered to the family—from concept to realization.*

FOREWORD

In the foreword to DESCENDANTS OF PHILIP McINTIRE, published in 1941, the author stated that it was his intention to continue his researches in order to obtain a more nearly complete record of the family. During the ensuing forty-one years, a considerable amount of additional information has been obtained and this volume is now published to update the earlier edition.

The original genealogy did not include records beyond the children of McIntire daughters. This volume is a distinct departure from that plan. Although, as stated at that time, a complete history of the descendants of McIntire daughters may more properly belong in genealogies of their respective family names, insofar as available, such records are included in this volume. The justification for their inclusion is threefold. Biologically they are no less descended from the immigrant ancestor than are those bearing the McIntire name. Interest in this project by descendants of McIntire daughters has been considerable. Finally, failure to include these records would most certainly result in the loss of much genealogical information for future generations.

It has been said that the genealogist, amateur or professional, who gives undue importance to variations of spelling of his family surname reveals himself as a novice. The spelling in vital records is not conclusive, since the clerk may have erred. Nor is the spelling on gravestones always conclusive, for stonecutters made many mistakes. In the town records of Reading and Salem, Mass., alone, twenty-four different spellings of the surname appeared before 1850. These variations include: Maccantire, Macentier, Macentire, MacIntier, MacIntire, MacIntyre, Mackantire, Mackentier, Mackentire, Mackentyre, Mackintier, Mackintire, Mackintyre, Macontire, Makentier, Mackentire, Makintir, Makintire, McEntire, McIntier, McIntire, McIntyer, McIntyre and McKentire. Although most members of the clan in Scotland still retain the MacIntyre spelling of the surname, recent descendants of Philip have most often used the Americanized McIntire spelling.

While every effort has been made to simplify the arrangement of the genealogical facts which are presented in this volume, a word of explanation may be helpful. The sequential numbers enclosed in parentheses which follow the names of many of the sons or daughters in the lineal listings indicate that more extended accounts of these individuals appear later in the family record. Further, the abbreviation q.v. following any name in the text, male or female, indicates that another reference to that individual will be found elsewhere in the volume. Use of the index will enable the reader to locate such additional information readily. The reader is reminded that endogamous marriages were quite prevalent in colonial times. Many descendants, the author included, are able to claim more than a single line of descent from the immigrant ancestor. Finally, the small exponents are generation numbers.

The accumulation of the material for a genealogy of this type is a plodding business - of compiling rather than composing. While a high order of ability may not be essential to perform this kind of work, persistence, patience and system are vital. Although every precaution has been taken to assure a maximum of accuracy, the author does not in any wise infer that this volume is infallible and much less that it is complete. He trusts that such errors that may have crept in will be judged as leniently as may be.

The author is indebted to a countless number of descendants who have furnished a wealth of material about their respective families. It would be impossible to name them all. He wishes, however, to acknowledge his indebtedness to Mrs. Gwen Hannah (Robison) Boyce of Rigby, Ida., Mrs. Linda Ann (Douglass) Roush of Ridgecrest, Cal., and Robert Everett McIntire of E. Longmeadow, Mass., for supplying much valuable information. To Leslie Donald MacIntyre of Silver Spring, Md., the author of Clan MacIntyre, 1977, and the founder and first president of the Clan MacIntyre Association, he is greatly indebted for much of the early clan history and legends and, more particularly, for pertinent information concerning the clan chiefs. Finally, he wishes to thank his wife Helen for her assistance in the arduous and time consuming task of proofreading. To them and to all others who, in whatever degree, have aided and encouraged this undertaking, he expresses his deepest gratitude.

MacINTYRE CLAN HISTORY

The traditional history of the MacIntyre Clan indicates that they are probably a sept of the MacDonalds of Sleat, Skye. This theory gains support by the fact that the MacIntyres have always made use of the MacDonald badge, the heather.

A romantic legend suggests that on one occasion the MacDonald chief's galley sprang a dangerous leak. Without other means to stop it, a clansman forced his thumb into the hole and cut it off with his dirk so that he might be at liberty to assist in the work of sailing the vessel. By this drastic expedient he saved the crew from drowning and was henceforth called Saor na h-ordaig, the Thumb Carpenter.

Another explanation, which is equally fantastic if not quite so heroic, suggests that two or three brothers of the MacDonald Clan quarreled over the ownership of an island. It was agreed that each row out to the island and that the first to touch it should become its owner. One brother realizing that he was losing the race drew his knife, cut off a left finger, and tossed it upon the shore whereupon his brother "cursed him long and loud and deep."

A metrical version of that legend appeared in the Oban Telegraph, Aug. 11, 1882:

A chieftain bold was Somerled
Chief of a mighty clan
Lorn, Mull and Skye and other lands
Ruled this brave Highlandman.

This powerful chief had three fair sons
Rónald the eldest born.
Came Dougald next and Duncan last,
The bravest youth in Lorne.

But he was a wild callant too
His tricks plagued folks full sore.
And for his pauky roystering ways
Ill will against him bore.

And this brought Duncan trouble once
As I must soon relate.
Which happened when his youngest son
Had come to man's estate.

The chieftain called his sons by name
He called his children three
And said, "There lies the Isle of Skye
Beyond the stormy sea.

"Now launch your boats and he who first
 Shall touch the rock crowned strand
 Shall be the chieftain in my stead
 Of all that sea-girt land."

Then eager to obtain the prize
 'Gan each his boat prepare
 Last flew the news, and neighbours came
 The young men's task to share.

One who 'gainst Duncan had a grudge
 Contrived his boat to spoil.
 For stealthily a hole he bored
 That must his efforts spoil.

The boats were launched a son in each
 Beneath the father's eye.
 Six sturdy arms plied six strong oars
 To row to distant Skye.

Soon Duncan through the treacherous hole
 Saw gurgling water come.
 A moment paused then seized his axe
 And struck off his stout thumb.

A moment more and that red thumb
 He in the leak did place.
 And quick snatched up his oars again
 And rowed his furious race.

And though thus maimed he took the lead
 And kept it to the end.
 But Dougald saw 'twas not too late
 A bad day's work to mend.

The boats sped on, and as they neared
 The island's storm strewn strand.
 He grasped his axe, cut through his arm
 And flung on shore his hand.

And cried "I older am than thou
 And stronger claim is mine
 See, Duncan, See my bleeding hand
 Has touched the land ere thine."

So Dougald won the Isle of Skye
 And ruled it well and long.
 He gave for it his good left hand
 His right hand still was strong.

But Ronald though the race he lost
 Nor hand or thumb lost he
 Yet soon broad lands fell to his share
 And islands of the sea.

And when the father heard the tale
 And saw his young son's plight.
 "Heed not," quoth he, "for thou has't proved Thyself a good ship wright."

The word the chieftain used for wright
 In gaelic is "intyre"
 And MacIntyre the race was named
 That called brave Duncan sire.

The tradition adds that a son of the original thumbwright became known as Mac-an-t-saoir, the Carpenter's Son. Resolving to seek his fortune elsewhere, he departed from Sleat in his galley taking with him his revered white cow and vowing that he would settle wherever she would first lie down to rest after landing. This she did at Glen Noe near Bunawe in the district of Lorne, a place still known as Larach na Ba Baine, the Site of the White Cow.

A legend which has survived for generations suggests that during Montrose's invasion of Argyll in 1644, Alaster MacColkeitch with his brigade marched through Glen Noe. In the belief that he was still among his traditional enemies, the Campbells, he ordered that all the houses be destroyed. The absent chief's dwelling which was roofed with heather was the first to be consigned to the flames. A burning coal was brought from the hearth and thrust deep into the thatch, but before the fire had made progress Alaster was informed that it was the home of Duncan, chief of the MacIntyres. "Then forbear," he exclaimed, "and extinguish the flames, for it is the house of our blood." The coal, it might be added, was extracted from the roof and, as a relic to prove the respect paid by a Scotsman to the traditionary ties of kindred, was carefully preserved by the MacIntyres for many generations.

From this point the history of the Clan is well documented. It is a certainty that the MacIntyres of Glen Noe occupied these lands from 1300 until 1806 and served as Hereditary Foresters of the Stewarts and Campbells, Lords of Lorne. The tenure by which they held Glen Noe from the Campbells of Glenorchy was a payment annually in summer of a snowball and a white fatted calf. The high crags of Ben Cruachan would yield, from their frosted peaks, a snowball, even in summer, and they always bred white cows in their herds so that the little white calf was readily procurable to pay the rent. Each year it was delivered at a stone called Clach an Laoigh Bhiadhtha, the Stone of the Fatted Calf. This arrangement continued until the beginning of the eighteenth century when the landlord desired to change this centuries old guerdon for a prosaic money payment. Unfortunately, the chief consented. In time this rent was increased to such a large sum that Donald, the fourth chief, was unable to make the required payments and in 1806, the MacIntyres were obliged to leave their hereditary home.

There was a large colony of MacIntyres resident for many generations at the village of Cladish, Loch Awe, where they carried on an extensive weaving industry. A specialty with them was the production of very finely woven hose and garters which were made in the various clan tartans. No Highland costume, however expensive, was complete at that period without a pair of Cladish garters. There were MacIntyres in Badenoch who were attached to the Clan Chattan, while others of the clan, in the district of Rannoch in Perthshire, were famous for centuries as musicians and from 1680 were the hereditary pipers to chiefs of the Clan Menzies.

The MacIntyres of Glen Noe have, however, been the clan's chiefs. Duncan, the first chief of record, was married to Mary Campbell, dau. of Patrick Campbell, first Lord of Barcaldine by his second wife, Bethia Murray, and a descendant of Robert I, King of Scotland. Duncan died in 1695, aged about 87, and was buried in Ardchattan Priory.

Donald, second chief of the MacIntyres, first married Janet, dau. of Gillespie MacDonnell of Keppoch, and then in 1714 married Catherine, dau. of Alexander MacDonald of Dalness. Leslie Donald MacIntyre, clan historian, recounted the following tradition: "At the Falkirk Fair, a piper of the Stewarts of Appin played a tune which Donald considered insulting to the MacIntyres, so he plunged his dirk into the bag of the pipes, but the force carried it through the bag, into the piper and killed him. After a time he returned from Lochaber to Glen Noe, but did not venture into Appin without a bodyguard of twelve men and a piper. Eventually Stewart and MacIntyre made peace through the help of Keppoch."

James, third chief of the MacIntyres, was born about 1727; died 1799; married Ann, dau. of Duncan Campbell of Barcaldine. She was said to have died at the age of 103. James has been called an excellent Gaelic scholar and a bard. L. D. MacIntyre wrote that "Opportunity once came to James to own Glen Noe outright. The Earl of Breadalbane inherited through marriage a third of the land of the old Stewarts of Lorn. A dispute arose among the Campbells regarding the boundary line and as James MacIntyre had studied law, he was asked to settle the matter. He managed the settlement so well that Breadalbane offered him any spot of land he chose. It was said that he didn't accept the offer because he felt his judgment might be considered to have been bought. The story goes that on his deathbed Breadalbane said in Gaelic, 'The man who made the offer was a fool, but the man who refused it was seven times a fool."

Donald, fourth chief, studied medicine in Edinburgh, went in 1783 to New York and there maintained a medical practice; married in 1784, Esther Haines of Mamaroneck, NY. He died at Northumberland, Pa., 1792, and was buried at Sunbury, Pa.

James, fifth chief, was born at Newburgh, NY, Dec. 1, 1785; went to Scotland in 1806, and there married Oct. 9, 1817, Ann, dau. of Peter Campbell of Corries, born Inveraray, Scotland, July 27, 1792; died Johnstown, NY, Feb. 26, 1887, aged 94. In 1822, he returned to the United States and settled on a farm north of Johnstown, NY, where he died Aug. 9, 1863.

Donald, sixth chief, was born in Argyllshire in 1818, the eldest of six sons; resided on a farm near Fonda, NY, and died at Johnstown, Sept. 29, 1887. By his wife, Phoebe Shepard (born Dec. 6, 1812; died Aug. 2, 1882), he had five daughters and a son.

James, seventh chief, was born at Fonda, Jan. 24, 1864; a farmer; died Sayre, Pa., June 26, 1946; married Oct. 31, 1888, Elizabeth Hopple (born 1866; died 1915).

Donald, eighth chief, born at Sayre, Pa., Jan. 12, 1896; married Apr. 3, 1921, Catherine Mary Hughes, born Palatine Bridge, NY, Sept. 4, 1901. He resided on a farm near Sharon Springs, NY. Unable to carry on any clan matters, he resigned and in 1979 designated Leslie Donald MacIntyre of Silver Spring, Md., as Commander (Ceann-Cath) "to act for his chief in such matters that call for action - a precedent drawn from the stormy 1700's."

Most celebrated of all of the clansmen was Duncan Ban MacIntyre, the Gaelic poet of the eighteenth century who ranks next to Ossian as the bard of the Gaelic race. He was born of poor parents at Druimliaghart in Glenorchy in 1724, fought as a Hanoverian at Falkirk in 1746, and served as a private in a Highland fencible regiment until it was disbanded in 1799. He was imprisoned when he "gave voice to a strenuous indignation" to an act which forbade use of the traditional Highland garb. Thirty-five years later, when the act was repealed, he "burst forth in joyous strain" with his Song of the Breeches. "No longer are Scotsmen obliged to blush when in the presence of the fair." he exclaimed, "and now the men of the hills appear again in their loved tartans, the coat with the strife of colors; gracefully stream our belted plaids, our hose reach not the knee, nor hinder the step." Although he was unable to write or to speak English and received no formal education, he excelled in every kind of verse. It has been said that he could repeat in Gaelic all of his poems, some seven thousand verses. A tenth edition of his works was published in Edinburgh in 1887, seventy-five years after his death.

Many MacIntyres migrated to America during the great Scottish migrations of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries and settled along the entire Atlantic seaboard from Nova Scotia to Georgia.

The MacIntyre arms are quartered. The original family arms, which appear in the upper left and are repeated in the lower right, consist of a red spread eagle on a gold background and indicate service in the foreign wars. The designs in the upper right and lower left are arms of the MacDonalds and the Campbells and were acquired through marriages of MacIntyre chiefs to heiresses of these families. Their background throughout is silver. The galley, black with red flags, indicates service in Spanish Armada campaigns. The design in the lower left and the cross-crosslet fitchee are sable and, consequently, indicative of a crusader. The esquire's helmet above the escutcheon indicates the rank of the owner. It is surrounded by a mantelet or lambrequin in the original metal and color of the MacIntyre, red and gold. The wreath of entwined ribbon which surmounts the helmet is a relic of the tournaments of the fourteenth century. The crest, a "dexter(right) hand holding a dagger in pale (perpendicularly) proper (in natural colors), pays tribute to the early ancestor who severed with a dirk the thumb on his left hand to fill a hole in the side of his vessel.

ARMS - Quart 1 and 4: Or, an eagle displayed gules; 2: Argent, a galley, her sails furled sable, flags gules; 3: Argent, a hand holding a cross-crosslet fitchee sable.

CREST - A dexter hand holding a dagger in pale proper.

CLAN PIPE MUSIC - Gabhaidh sinn an rathad mor. (We will take the highway.)

MOTTO - Per ardua (Through difficulty).

WAR CRY - Cruachan, a mountain near Loch Awe.

It has been said that the MacIntyre Clan tartan is one of the most beautiful of all the Scottish plaids: woodland green and soft blue, with a little orange-red, and some slim, white lines that may have been reminiscent of the snow-white cow who brought the family to Glen Noe.

The badge of the clan is fraoch gorm, "the bonnie purple heather."

DESCENDANTS OF PHILIP McINTIRE

After he had defeated the English Royalists, beheaded King Charles (1600-49), and turned a rebellious Ireland "into a bloody shambles," Oliver Cromwell, with an army of 15,000 men, proceeded to the conquest of Scotland, the last kingdom remaining loyal to the Stuarts. Many of his men were seasoned veterans of the Irish campaign; a third were mounted troops. Leading his "fanatical Croppies," he reached Edinburgh after several minor skirmishes and marched on to Dunbar, a town on the east coast of Scotland at the mouth of the Firth of Forth. Gen. David Leslie, in command of the Scottish troops, by encamping upon the heights of Lammermoor above the town and seizing Cockburnspath, cut off any possible English land retreat to Durham and Berwick-on-Tweed.

Leslie was aware that while his troops outnumbered Cromwell's forces, they were untrained clansmen and had little hope of winning any major encounter with their trained opponents. He cautiously proposed to retain his own unassailable position and to starve out the trapped English. When informed by the zealous Presbyterian preachers who had "wrestled with the Lord in prayer night and day and finally had assurance in a 'revelation' that the Lord of Hosts would deliver Agag (Cromwell) into their hands," Leslie abandoned his caution and on Sept. 3, 1650, marched his army down the hillside. Within an hour, the English had slain 3,000 Scots and had taken 10,000 prisoners. About half of the prisoners were so exhausted by their flight and disabled by their wounds that they were released.

In all, 150 Scottish prisoners were placed on board the good ship UNITY, which on Nov. 11, 1650, set sail for the colonies. John Becc of London, who was interested primarily in the Saugus iron mines, had financed their transportation. Col. Charles E. Banks has written:

The UNITY buffeted the tempestuous, wintery seas of the Atlantic, and as it usually took six weeks to cross in favorable seasons, she could not have made Boston harbor before the end of December. They suffered from scurvy on the voyage, but how many died is not known. The prisoners remaining, after sixty were sent to Lynn, were sold to purchasers willing to pay the price and were distributed to numerous towns in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Maine. The prevailing quotation was between twenty and thirty pounds for each man, which was received for their transportation.

A year later, the Scots under the youthful Charles II, whom they had proclaimed as their king, resolved to invade England. Cromwell, learning of the Scots' advance, proceeded to Worcester where the Covenanters had encamped. On Sept. 3, 1651, a year to the day after the "Race of Dunbar," he surrounded the town and after a fierce five-hour engagement virtually annihilated the Scots. Thousands of Highlanders fell in battle. Subsequently, 272 of the prisoners were shipped to Boston in the JOHN AND SARAH. Like those taken at Dunbar they were distributed throughout the colonies and sold into slavery.

At least three of the MacIntyre Clan, Philip, Micum and Robert, were among the captives taken by the redoubtable Cromwell and deported to America on the UNITY. A number of authorities have contended that they were brothers or near cousins. Where there is no documentary proof to support such a belief, neither is there any to refute it.

Romantic legends which have survived the centuries recall Micum's heroic escape from impending execution at the Cathedral of Durham, his marriage to the young McEneer widow whom he had "inherited from a neighboring cousin," and his subsequent display of pugnacity when "with his great foot and hand he kicked and cuffed Sam Treathy so he could neither go or stand." After serving seven years as an indentured servant at Dover, NH, he settled at Salmon Falls, NH, but before 1670 removed to York, Me., and engaged in fishing and farming until his death.

Robert, as a witness in a trial in the Essex (Mass.) Court, Nov. 24, 1653, stated that he was twenty-four years of age and was employed to "cart coals" at the Lynn Iron Works. It seems probable that he went with his employers to Rhode Island where the foundry was removed a few years later. No further record has been uncovered. Early in the eighteenth century, there were McIntire families in Smithfield, Gloucester, Cumberland and Pawtucket, RI. It appears possible that they may have been his descendants.

After serving his seven years' compulsory service to "work out the expense of his passage and sustenance," Philip settled in the northeastern part of Reading, Mass., within a few miles of the Salem line. The ancient seat of the family was said to be "in the Thomas Rayner field, northeast of his residence where there is, or recently was, an old cellar hole."

His name first appears in the town records in 1665, when he paid a ministerial tax of ten pence. The following year, he drew land in the "Division of the Great Swamp" when the town of Reading ordered that "the Great Swamp and all other Swamps that are wett and fitt to make meadow shall all be (divided) quantity and quality considered to every man according to each man's proportion."

It appears that the town fathers had purchased the site of Reading from the Indians, but had neglected to pay the ten pounds which had been promised to them. In 1686, an assessment was laid to raise the money, and Philip McIntire was taxed one shilling, four pence.

In 1685, the town decided "that all those persons that inhabit on the north side of Ipswich River in our town bounds shall have those two pieces of land namely: the town's lands in Sadler's Neck, so called, and that piece of common land that lyeth at the upper end of Mr. Bellingham's farme and belongs to the towne." Philip, one of the eight inhabitants of this precinct, received one of the grants. Three years later, he contributed three pounds toward the erection of a new meetinghouse.

On Apr. 14, 1719, several months before his death, he conveyed his homestead to his youngest son, David.

PHILIP McINTIRE¹ was married at No. Reading, Sept. 6, 1666, to MARY ----, surname unknown.

They moved from Reading to nearby Salem in 1696, and res. in that section which has since been set aside as Peabody. The Salem Commoners Records from 1713 to 1739 contain a list of the "names of the proprietors of the common lands in Salem living in the middle precinct." Daniel McIntire was assigned one right.

The inventory which was prepared in 1730 by the appraisers in the settlement of his estate listed the following articles: wearing apparel, a cane, two hats, cart and wheels, house tackling, pair of handirons, frying pan, thongs and shovel, two wheels, cart rope and lamp, beetle rings and wedges, three pitchforks, thirty pounds of tobacco, hamper, small quantity of flax in the bundle, bed and bedding, pewter, two tables and a chest, twelve bushels of Indian corn, bushel and half of beans, iron crowbar, twelve sheep, three cows, two year-old heifers, mare and calf, and three swine.

He was a housewright, located at Salem in 1701. On Feb 5, 1730, his wife complained to the court "against her brother Ebenezer Moulton for his concealing and withholding the last will and testament of their father, Robert Moulton, deceased."

He removed to the Charlton district of Oxford before 1746 and signed the petition of Mar. 27, 1754, which requested a separation from Oxford and the incorporation of the town of Charlton.

Because his 84 year old widow, who was "incapable of taking care of herself," resided with her son Thomas "where she is not nor can't be guarded for in any tolerable degree," the town selectmen on July 13, 1757, "fully discoursed with her four sons living in Charlton and found that her son Lt. Obadiah McIntire is very willing and disposing to take care of her if she will tarry with him.

As surveyor of fences in Reading, 1705, he was subject to being "called upon by an interested party to require the erection or maintenance of a legal and sufficient boundary fence." He located at Dedham, Mass., in 1707, and signed the petition for the incorporation of Needham as a separate town in 1710.

After committing his "soul into the hands of God," John McIntire, in his will, Jan. 29, 1746, directed his sons Samuel and Joseph to keep two cows for their mother "as long as she continues my widow." He provided legacies for his other children, then divided the remainder of his estate between Samuel and Joseph, "Samuel to divide, and Joseph to choose."

They moved from Salem to Oxford, Mass., in the autumn of 1733, secured one of the best farms in town, and built a large and substantial dwelling which he maintained as the village tavern and "place of entertainment for strangers and travelers." He has been referred to as "public spirited, liberal, and patriotic, a natural leader of men."

Because they were "more than ten miles from the meeting house, yet always taxed to all the charges of the town," many of the townspeople grew dissatisfied and in 1754 petitioned the General

Court to set off their settlement as a distinct district. Ebenezer McIntire, one of the petitioners, was among the foremost who urged for separate government. The petition was granted, and the first town meeting of Charlton, "to elect such town officers as the law requires and to see whether the district will let their swine run at large the year ensuing," was held at his tavern, Mar. 12, 1755. All of the subsequent meetings, both civil and religious, were held there until 1761.

During the French and Indian War, Aug. 1757, he served in Capt. Richard Dresser's Co. and marched 98 miles to Sheffield on the relief of Fort William Henry.

On Jan. 16, 1758, the townspeople decided that the meetinghouse "should be located at the place of a stake a little north of Ebenezer McIntire's house." In Feb. 1759, "in consideration of the love and good will I do bear to the district of Charlton and to the inhabitants thereof," he donated the land for the meetinghouse, common and training field. Five years later, he presented to the town an acre of land for a "burying yard."

Ebenezer McIntire died intestate. In an agreement made by his heirs, Mar. 29, 1776, it was decided that his widow, "for the maintenance of herself and Daniel, an heir incapable of taking care of himself," should receive 200 dollars, use the pasture, the indoor movables, two cows, the privilege of keeping five sheep annually, the use of the house cellar and chamber, firewood "to be found by Ebenezer," and the "privilege of every ninth barrel of cyder yearly out of Nathaniel's part, she making the same, and what apples she is a mind to use."

Much feeling arose over the hardship of attending town meetings at Oxford. In 1741, he was summoned before the Court of Sessions to answer to a charge of absenting himself from church worship. In making his defense, he pleaded that he lived at the westerly end of the town, a very great distance from the meetinghouse, and that the roads were in such bad condition that it was almost impossible for him to get to the place of worship from his home. He was ordered to pay the costs of prosecution amounting to three pounds and sixteen shillings, but feeling a sense of injury over the imposition of costs, he refused to pay them and suffered himself to be committed to jail rather than to do so. It has been said that his neighbors, whose cause he was representing, paid the costs to release him and that he was soon discharged from custody. In 1757, he marched with Capt. Richard Dresser's Co. to Sheffield on the alarm for the relief of Fort William Henry.

With other farmers of Essex Co., he migrated to Worcester Co. in 1728 and purchased 100 acres of unoccupied fertile land in the western portion of the town of Oxford. In the August term of court, 1736, he was presented "for not attending ye publick worship of God, appeared and made his excuse, and was dismissed paying cost." He was a man of considerable wealth, township constable in 1742, and a member of the first board of selectmen of Charlton in 1755. In Aug. 1757, during the French and Indian War, he marched 98 miles to Sheffield on the alarm for the relief of Fort William Henry. From 1765 to 1773, he owned the old Campbell Tavern.

27 MARTHA McINTIRE³ b. Reading, Mass. In the August term of court, 1736, the selectmen of Dudley, Mass., directed their constable to warn "Martha McIntire, a single woman, to depart this town." She was obliged "to answer for the crime of fornication, appeared in court, confess'd ye crime, and was fined to the king thirty shillings and costs, which she paid, "whereupon she lodged a complaint against Nathan Dennis, q.v., husband of her first cousin, Damaris Putney, dau. of her father's sister Sarah (McIntire), "for his being the father of a bastard child begotten of her body." He appeared in court, but offered no defense, and was forced to sign a 200 pound bond that he would "save and indemnify said town of Dudley from any charge legally laid upon them on account of said bastard child." It appears that she then returned to Reading, for on Mar. 24, 1737 "Martha McIntire and her two children, who came from Oxford or Dudley in Feb. 1737" were warned to depart from Reading.

He has been referred to as "a versatile character and jack-of-all trades." Proprietor of the Squantum Mills at Jaffrey, NH, he manufactured flax wheels and "turned the thousands of spindles or balusters that made up the balustrade that crowned the walls of the pews in the old meetinghouse at Jaffrey Center."

During his residence at Bedford, Mass., he kept a journal in which he recorded not only business transactions but riddles and matters of neighborhood interest. Covers of the book were of shaven oak and were held together with rawhide thongs. It has been said that "excerpts from the journal are not only proof of the marvelous versatility of the author, but afford many glimpses into the simple neighborly life of the times."

52 EZRA McINTIRE⁴ b. Salem, Mass., 1730; d. Charlton, Mass., 1799; m. Oxford, Mass., July 20, 1756, ELIZABETH MARSH who d. abt. 1802.

On Jan. 9, 1775, he was selected "to see that the directions of the Continental and Provincial Congresses are strictly adhered to in Charlton." With the outbreak of hostilities, he enl. in Capt. Jacob Davis' Co. and marched to Roxbury on the Lexington alarm of Apr. 19, 1775. When on June 17, 1776, the town voted "to support the Continental Congress in declaring independence of Great Briton with our lives and fortunes if they shall think it expedient for our safety," he was appointed to the Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety. His appointment was reaffirmed in 1777, and again in 1778.

Throughout the war, he served on one or another of the patriotic committees of the town, and whenever word was received that men were needed to repel sudden invasion by the enemy, although upwards of 45 years of age, he shouldered his musket and took his place in the ranks. On the alarm of Dec. 10, 1776, he marched to Providence with Capt. Abijah Lamb's Co. He re-enl. Aug. 15, 1777, and served for several months with the northern army. In 1780, he was elected "to provide for the families of the Continental soldiers."

He was chosen to represent Charlton at the Constitutional Convention which convened at Boston, Jan. 9, 1788, and like 43 of the 50 voting delegates from Worcester Co., voted against the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. In Mass., as in many other states, the rural classes disliked any reduction of the powers of the state which would appreciably lessen their freedom in what they considered their own affairs. The state vote finally stood at 187 to 168 for ratification.

During the French and Indian War, he served in a "troop of horse," and on the alarm of Lexington and Concord as a minuteman in Capt. John Flint's Co.

By his will, May 5, 1791, he bequeathed to his wife "the use of the east end of my new house, the whole of my household stuff," and an annual gift of "two cows well kept summer and winter, five cords of wood brought to the door and cut fit for the fire, two bushels of English meal, ten bushels of Indian meal, one hundred pounds of good pork, fifty pounds of good beef, one bushel of salt, ten pounds of flax well dressed, six pounds of sheep's wool, two pounds of cotton wool, three barrels of cider and barrels to receive it, and apples and sauces of all kinds that she shall need." She was also given "a horse to ride on, doctor and nurses when needed, and a decent burial at her decease."

83 MEHITABLE McINTIRE⁴ b. Reading, Mass., July 6, 1732; d. Burlington, Mass., May 18, 1769; m. JONATHAN McINTIRE. It appears quite probable that Jonathan was her own brother (b. Dec. 2, 1736). In the will of her mother, Deborah, dated Apr. 26, 1791, mention is made by her of her son Archelus, daughter Hannah, the wife of Jethro Russell, and daughter Rachel, the wife of David Russell (Essex Co., Mass., Probate Record 18097). No mention was made of Jonathan nor of Mehitable (who had died 22 years earlier). Curiously, in the settlement of Deborah's estate in 1800, reference is made to the only surviving children of the intestate: Jonathan, (sic), Hannah and Rachel, (Archelus had died May 30, 1791, a month after the will was written). Further, mention is made of Deborah's deceased daughter Mehitable and her children: Joseph, Deborah and Edy, and her grandson David by her deceased dau. Mehitable. (Middlesex Co., Mass., Probate Record 14496).

The vital statistics of Mass. do not record the marriage of Mehitable to Jonathan McIntire, but they do list the birth of children to Jonathan and Mehitable McIntire in 1758, 1761, 1763 and 1766. Further, the Middlesex Book of Deeds, Vol. 141, p. 84, records the sale by Jonathan and Mehitable of a forty acre tract of upland and meadow in Reading to Francis Upton, Mar. 5, 1760. It would seem certain that Mehitable, the daughter of Joseph and Deborah (Russell) McIntire, was the wife of one Jonathan McIntire, and the mother of Deborah, Mehitable, Joseph and Adah. The question that remains concerns the positive identity of her husband Jonathan. And this information is not now available. Jonathan McIntire m. Elizabeth (Ruggles) Rogers, b. Littleton, Mass., Sept. 18, 1756; d. Stow, June 28, 1846, aged 90.

He was grad. from Harvard in 1770; entered on a course of theology under the instruction of Rev. Samuel West of Needham with whom he remained for two years. He was ordained at Stow, Oct. 11, 1774, having received about the same time a call from the church in Putney, Vt.

It has been written that "his ministry was marked with consummate prudence. In sentiment, he was a moderate Calvinist.

"He was remarkable for kindness and benevolence. As he went from house to house, the children commonly found his pockets to be the depositories of raisins or other fruits, which in those days were scarce. If a man met with misfortune or was embarrassed with sickness, he gave him an order on the collector to charge himself the ministerial part of his tax, and frequently more. Thus he sometimes relinquished in a year a quarter part of his salary, which never exceeded $400 and which in the distress incident to the Rev. War was for some years insufficient to pay for the keeping of his horse." - from an account by Rev. John Langdon Sibley, his colleague pastor and successor at Stow.

Authorities have agreed that Samuel McIntire was probably the most highly skilled American woodcarver, designer and architect of his time. Unfortunately, despite the fact that two books have been written about his work, few of the details of his life have been preserved.

Possibly the best sketch of him, and this is exasperatingly brief, is to be found in the diary of the Rev. William Bentley, pastor of the East Church, Salem. On Feb. 7, 1811, he wrote as follows:

This day Salem was deprived of one of the most ingenious men it had in it: Samuel McIntire, aet. 54, of Summer Street. He was descended of a family of carpenters who had no claims on public favor and was educated at a branch of that business. By attention he soon gained a superiority to all of his occupation, and the present Court House, the North and South Meeting Houses, and indeed all the improvements of Salem for nearly thirty years past have been done under his eye. In sculpture he had no rival in New England, and I possess some specimens which I should not scruple to compare with any I ever saw. To the best of my abilities, I encouraged him in this branch. In music he had a good taste and tho not presuming to be an original composer, he was among our best judges and most able performers. All the instruments we use, he could understand and was the best person to be employed in correcting any effects or repairing them. He had a fine person, a majestic appearance, calm countenance, great self command, and amiable temper. He was welcome but never intruded. He had complained of some obstruction in the chest, but when he died it was unexpectedly. The late increase of workmen in wood has been from the demand for exportation, and this has added nothing to the character and reputation of the workmen, so that upon the death of Mr. McIntire no man is left to be consulted upon a new plan of execution beyond his bare practice.

It is generally conceded that he worked almost entirely in Salem and probably was the creator of much of the fine wood finish that distinguishes Salem houses that were built during that period. Recent discoveries have strengthened the belief that much of his work remains unproved.

Beginning with the Pierce-Nichols house of 1790, he executed a series of mansions which with their well proportioned exterior and plan, and exquisitely executed detail have made Salem the most distinguished architecturally of the smaller American cities north of Annapolis. Nor was McIntire simply a caterer to the wealthy; turnpike taverns and humble farmhouses in Essex County show unmistakable marks of his style. He designed meetinghouses for Salem and a business block, the fence around Salem common, and the figureheads of Salem ships. Throughout the short years of his active life, which stretched only from the opening of the American world commerce by the Revolution to the closing of it by President Madison, McIntire kept his hand in cabinetmaking and woodcarving as well as architecture; this New England Puritan, like the cathedral builders of the Middle Ages, was always as much craftsman as artist. In brilliance, delicacy, and refinement, his is not inferior to that of the young Duncan Phyfe or the best of the Philadelphia carvers of the Chippendale period, and thus ranks with the finest which has been produced in America.

War, he served as a sailor aboard Capt. Stephen Clay's brigantine LUCY. The list of crew members records that he was "five feet and ten inches in stature and dark of complexion." Like his brothers Samuel and Joseph, he was an accomplished woodcarver and decorator.

He was master of the sixty ton schooner NANCY, which was owned by Samuel Page and registered at Salem, Dec. 10, 1789. In 1795, he became master of the ELIZA, an 88 ton schooner. The following instructions were written by Samuel Page to Capt. Samuel McIntire, Dec. 10, 1789:

You having command of the schooner NANCY now ready for sea, my advice is that you embrace the first fair wind and proceed to Bilbao in Spain. Agreeable to instructions you will receive of Messrs. Brown and Thorndike, who are owners of the cargo you have on board, and when you have discharged said cargo, if you can obtain a freight for Cadiz or Lisbon (without detaining you too long) which will purchase you a cargo of salt at either of the above places, you will proceed accordingly. If you cannot obtain a freight as above, you will lay out one hundred dollars of my money in such articles as will best suit the markets at the Cape Verde Islands and proceed to said islands and purchase me a cargo of salt on the best terms you can, and if you have any of my property on board after paying for the salt, I would have you lay it out on hides or skins if they may be obtained without detaining the vessel too long. If you should have more provisions than you may want to bring home, I would have you sell all you can part with at said islands. You will receive two hundred dollars at the place where you discharge your cargo in part for the freight of the same. I would have you take nothing but silver as there will be a loss of gold as it passes in that country. If you should purchase any handkerchiefs to carry to the Cape Verde Islands, I would recommend the cheapest kind and of different colors as black ones don't turn out so well at said islands. I would recommend your being as expeditious as possible as the voyage much depends on your making dispatch. Wishing you a safe and prosperous voyage, I am your friend.

On Sept. 12, 1794, these instructions were dispatched to Capt. McIntire:

You being master of the schooner NANCY now lying in Beverly Harbor, my advice is that you improve the first fair wind and make the best of your way to Grand Banks and there take as many fish as your salt will save in good order for the European markets, and then proceed to some port in old France, and then sell your fish and oil for the most it will fetch and lay out the net proceeds in brandy or wines of a good quality, and then proceed to America or the West Indies as you may judge will be most for the interest of the voyage. Should you go to the West Indies, you will lay out the net proceeds of your cargo in such produce of those islands as you may think will pay the best freight here.

He located at Fitchburg, Mass., but removed to Amherst, NH, thence to Nelson, NH, and finally in 1820 to Lyndeboro. He purchased a farm on what was then the main road between Nashua, Greenfield, and Hancock, opened a tavern, and "did a thriving business, for it was a favorite stopping place for teamsters going and coming." When the Forest road was completed, the stage route was changed and the patronage of the tavern ceased, whereupon he gave up the business and devoted his time wholly to farming.

It has been said that he was "a man much respected in the community, of strong religious convictions, and a devout member of the Congregational Church." He died at the advanced age of 96.

His name appears in the "descriptive list of men raised to reinforce the Continental Army for the term of six months agreeable to resolve of June 5, 1780." The record indicates that he was "age, 17 years; stature, 5 feet 1 inch; complexion, dark; engaged for the town of Danvers; arrived at Springfield, July 10, 1780; marched to camp, July 11, 1780, under command of Ensign Bancroft." He is also listed in the pay roll of men raised by the town of Danvers for service of six months, marched July 5, 1780; disch. Jan. 9, 1781; service: six months and sixteen days.

With John Pindar, he owned the schooner INDUSTRY, 58 tons, 1787. The ship's tonnage was changed to 62 tons in 1799; registered May 12, 1809. In 1798, Capt. Seth Richardson purchased John Pindar's interest in the INDUSTRY and became Richard Elliott's partner. Records of the Danvers Historical Society refer to his fishing trips, his catches and the money realized on each.

He fought at the Battle of Queenstown, War of 1812; moved to Portland, NY, from Cherry Valley, NY, in Feb. 1817. Although he first built a log house, he erected a frame one "the year the Thayers were hung." He is purported to have written: "I built my log house and moved into it inside of a week. I was first in this county in 1810, and was at the first frame barn raising in the town of Ripley. A frame barn was a wonder in those days. It belonged to a Mr. Cochran. It took all day, and the most notable feature of the whole affair was the large provision of whiskey. Times were hard, but whiskey was meat and drink."

A letter from William Wallace Putney, q.v., to his father Salmon Putney dated at Oakdale, Neb., Nov. 24, 1883, recalled how his father "used to chop wood for Joe Dennison for twenty-five cents a cord, and take your pay in corn at fifty cents a bushel, and then carry the corn on your back to old Peterman's mill, and then the meal home, considerably reduced in weight, however, after his toll. How you chopped a large maple into stove wood for the 'Old Rabbi' for a shilling a cord, and took your pay in pork at a shilling a pound. How you got 'Uncle' Sackett's horses and hauled a hundred bushels of charcoal to Sheridan Center, sold it for four bushels of wheat, and took the wheat to Old Peterman and got only eighty pounds of flour. How you were at one time in need of two quarts of timothy seed which, at the time, was so scarce that nothing but cash would buy it, and cash you could not get for work, wood, or anything else you had to sell until one morning as you started for the barn, you heard a racket in the old soap trough at the south end of the house, and seizing a club killed one of the two mink that were getting breakfast on the grease that adhered to the trough. How you took the skin of this mink and being unable to sell it for money in Forestville, walked with it to the railroad station near Dunkirk and sold it for twenty-five cents, bought the long desired two quarts of grass seed and came home happier than I had seen you for many a day. How you used to make maple sugar and carry it on your back to Forestville, trade it for pork and bring that home by the same mode of transportation."

He has been referred to as a "brisk, stirring man oftener engaged in speculation than in sound business, of pleasant manners and plausible speech, public spirited, but after a visionary, grandiloquent fashion that often brought him into differences with his more hardheaded colleagues." For many years he owned the old Black Horse Tavern, the grounds of which he beautified with gardens and hedges at considerable expense. In 1852, he founded the Winchester Gas Co., which "made some experiments in the manufacture of gas, but was never able to raise the capital for commercial success and disappeared leaving behind it no ripple pronounced enough to stir men's memories." In later life, "he was unfortunate; his financial schemes went awry, and his shining dreams faded."

(3) Salem, June 27, 1848, Mary Ann Ropes, dau. of Capt. Timothy and Sarah (Holmes) Ropes, bp. Salem, Apr. 6, 1817; res. there, 1882.

Capt. Bertram embarked with his parents in the ALERT for Baltimore, Md. Owing to a major leak in the vessel, they were obliged to land at Boston, Sept. 1, 1807. In Dec. 1812, he shipped on board the HAZARD bound for Lisbon; Nov. 27, 1813, sailed for Charleston on the private armed schooner MONKEY, which was hardly out of Salem harbor when she was pursued by a British ship and chased into Gloucester. He shipped at Charleston, Mar. 1, 1814, on board the privateer HERALD, a vessel of 300 tons and carrying 125 men and nine guns. During their cruise, they captured a British packet, and Mr. Bertram was put on board as one of the prize crew. They, in turn, were captured and carried to Bermuda, where they were confined on a prison ship and finally sent to England. After the war he returned to Salem, resumed his seafaring life, and in time became master of a vessel and a prosperous merchant. He spent three years on the coast of Patagonia, carried on an extensive trade in South America, Cal., Cape of Good Hope, Zanzibar, Mocha, and Madagascar, and actively engaged in the rubber business at Para, Brazil.

After his retirement from the sea, he became owner of many merchant vessels which sailed to foreign ports in all parts of the world. In 1856, he became a founder and v.p. of the Chicago, Iowa and Nebraska Railroad. At the time of his death, he had amassed a large fortune.

He was a schoolmaster; sailed from New York in Aug. 1851 aboard the steamer ILLINOIS. After a three months' voyage via the Isthmus of Panama, he reached San Francisco, prospected in the vicinity of Sacramento, and mined about three thousand dollars worth of gold. He returned East in 1853, taught for three years, then migrated to Illinois and located at Neponset, where he served as mayor and for twenty years as pres. of the school board. He has been referred to as "a Baptist and a staunch Republican."

On one occasion, a twenty ton haystack standing only six feet from his barn was fired by an incendiary, who had been enraged by Mr. McIntire's dogged attempts to rid the community of saloons. Only the heroic efforts of a volunteer bucket brigade prevented the spread of the flames to the nearby house and barn.

He removed to Iowa in 1881, and settled on land in Jasper County. He raised some of the finest blooded stock in Iowa and for many years was owner of the stallion Tangent, then pacing champion of the old western circuit.

In 1851, he migrated to the gold fields of California. Portions of his diary are included because of their unusual interest.

"Not being of rugged constitution, I started to teach school at the age of seventeen and attended the Bloomfield Academy for several years, teaching winters. In 1851, as every boy seemed to be infatuated with the spirit of adventure brought about by the report of vast and rich deposits of gold in California, I became well satisfied that men were making their fortunes there by the hundreds. Accordingly, I, in company with brothers Erastus and Albion and with many others of the Bloomfield vicinity, started for the distant Eldorado sailing from New York, August, 1851, upon the steamer ILLINOIS. We arrived' at the diggings at Columbia early in November. There we took claims and followed mining with very satisfactory results. In 1853 I returned over the same route. Sailed from San Francisco on the S.S. SIERRA NEVADA on Mar. 27, 1853, passed through the Golden Gate about sundown, and found ourselves upon the broad bosom of the Pacific Ocean. My journal will have to commence April 4th as some of my notes have been lost.

Apr. 4th. We came in sight of Cape San Lucas and met the steamer S. S. Louis from Panama bound for San Francisco loaded with passengers.

Apr. 5th. Crossed the entrance of Gulf of California with a smooth sea.

Apr. 7th. A case of smallpox reported to be on board causing considerable alarm among the passengers.

Apr. 8th. Sea continues calm and sailing along finely. Sometime in the night, the engines stopped. The steamer was making no headway. On inquiry it was found the engineers had allowed the water to get low in the boilers, and they had to let them cool down before replenishing, thus preventing serious accident.

Apr. 9th. Much complaint has been made for days among the steerage passengers about their grub. At supper they called an indignation meeting on deck; appointed a committee of them to wait upon the captain and inform him of the condition of things and ask for better fare.

Apr. 10th. Last night's meeting resulted in better fare. Today, a smooth sea. No land in sight. General good feeling prevailed.

Apr. 11th. The man sick with smallpox died today, and another case was reported. Renewed alarm among passengers.

Apr. 12th. Arrived at San Juan anchorage at 4 p.m. without stopping at any port on the route. The passengers immediately commenced to go to the shore by small boats and all were glad to set foot on land again.

Apr. 13th. Early this morning the passengers were astir after camping upon the ground for the night. The crowds of natives had gathered with mustangs, donkeys, and jacks of doubtful ability, offering conveyance out to Lake Nicaragua, a distance of twelve miles. My brother and I with Mr. Coffin, securing fairly good horses, started out for the trip and arrived at Virgin Bay in the evening, found a small settlement of natives there, mostly engaged in selling to travelers rare birds, monkeys, and other curios. From this point we were to take the steamboat to cross the bay.

Apr. 14th. was spent in getting across the lake. There being no steamboat landing, considerable time was spent in taking the passengers in small boats. We finally arrived at Castillo Rapids, which is at the foot of the lake, in the afternoon. Here we remained overnight and visited an ancient fort. There were a few native soldiers on duty. The fort, which showed great age, is said to be nearly three hundred years old.

Apr. 15th. We took a small steamer called the SIR BULWER to get down the river to Greytown, about sixty miles, the boat being loaded far too heavy had not gone more than a hundred rods when it struck a rock which disabled it. The passengers had barely time to get off before she filled with water. The steamer JOHN M. CLAYTON, her mate, started out at the same time, offered to come back for us, but we dropped down the river a few miles on flatboats where another larger steamboat lay waiting, and took passage on it. But we had not gone far on this boat before it sprung a leak, and all the passengers were put ashore. We passed the night in the woods whilst repairs to the boat were being made. A Mr. Walton of Bangor, Me., was lost overboard while going to shore and drowned.

Apr. 16th. After our steamboat was repaired, we again went on board and ran down the river until night overtook us. The steamer was tied up to the shore and a good many of the passengers went ashore and camped. We were at this point eighteen miles from Greytown, where lay the ocean steamer which was to take us to New York.

Apr. 17th. This morning some of us concluded to take a flatboat as the steamboat was so heavy loaded. The officers thought best to lighten her load as there were some shoals to pass over. Accordingly, two large flatboats were attached, which were rowed by the natives, and some fifty of us passengers were taken the remainder of the way on them. We reached our home steamer, THE STAR OF THE WEST, at noon. The most of the afternoon was occupied in getting ready to start for New York. At sundown the anchor was hoisted, and we were on our way.

Apr. 18th. The sea was somewhat rough, and a good many were seasick. Land in sight on the left most of the day.

Apr. 19th. Passengers feeling better and are mostly on deck. Groups are gathered together and singing songs.

Apr. 20th. Are getting along splendidly. Sea calm. Are seeing some craft. At six o'clock p.m. sighted Cape San Antonio.

Apr. 21st. This morning the coast of Cuba is in plain sight on our right. At three o'clock p.m. passed Havana.

Apr. 22nd. Entered the Gulf Stream and passed some of the small Bahama Islands.

Apr. 23rd. Today is our sixth from Greytown. Weather about the same. The tropical birds and monkeys are just as lively as the day we started. Sea calmer and little or no sickness.

Apr. 24th. This afternoon we left the Gulf Stream off Cape Hatteras, and a dense fog set in, a very chilly wind blowing from shore which caused much discomfort to the passengers, and the tropical birds and monkeys began to look sick. Poor things! It is too much for them. A good many were procured on the Isthmus to take home to friends.

Apr. 25th. The weather continues cold and very disagreeable as we near New York, and but a few are out on deck. Passed Egg Harbor at 12 o'clock. Our steamer was boarded by the quarantine officers and finally was permitted to proceed. Arrived at the dock at 8 o'clock p.m. having been eight days from Greytown."

He returned East in 1853; taught at Ceresco, Mich., 1854; farmed in Maine, 1855; then located at Neponset, Ill., Apr. 1856. He enl. in Co. H., 93d Regt. Ill. Vol. Inf., Aug. 14, 1862; participated in the battles of Jackson, Champion Hill, Vicksburg, Mission Ridge, Allatoona and the taking of Savannah; took sick at New Bern, NC, and was sent to the hospital at Madison, Ind., where he was disch. He went to sea at thirteen. Conditions on board his ship soon became intolerable. The crew was habitually unruly and abusive. Frequently, he was brutally beaten. When the opportunity presented itself, he and another young boy escaped while cargo was being off-loaded in an African port. He boarded another ship whose captain, named West, had befriended him. It has been said that the search for him extended to his new ship, but that he escaped detection by hiding in the galley wood box. In time, he discarded the name McIntyre and assumed the surname West as a compliment to his benefactor. He settled in Columbus, where he was active in the Masonic order, becoming a 33rd degree Mason.

With his brothers Warren and Eden, he manufactured edge tools and carriages. He was a successful woolen mnfr. owning five mills; was a heavy contributor to a school for negroes, which was founded by Rev. Henry Martin Tupper in Raleigh, NC, in 1865. The enrollment had increased so that by 1870 the Baptist Home Mission Society purchased a larger strip of land upon which to build another building. The present site of the campus was bought, and Mr. Shaw donated the money needed to erect Shaw Hall. The building was erected by Dr. Tupper and his students from bricks baked on the campus in 1870-71. The institution took the name of Shaw Collegiate Inst. to honor its principal benefactor. Shaw Univ. in 1979 had a faculty of 58 and 1400 students.

907 MARY ANN MACKINTIRE⁷ b. Charlestown, Mass., Dec. 25, 1824; d. Burlington, Iowa, June 12, 1893; m. Charlestown, Aug. 25, 1846, REV. WILLIAM SALTER, son of William Frost and Mary (Ewen) Salter, b. Brooklyn, NY, Nov. 17, 1821; d. Burlington, Iowa, Aug. 15, 1910.

At the age of ten, he was put to the study of Latin, at twelve to the learning of Greek, and at eighteen to both Hebrew and Arabic. He was grad. from the Univ. of the City of New York in 1840, and for six months taught in the academy at So. Norwalk, Conn. After attending the Union Theological Seminary for two years and "thinking a change from the din and scenes of a great city to a quiet place would be good," he entered Andover Theological Seminary "for a year of satisfaction and delight." Two days prior to his graduation on Sept. 5, 1843, he received instructions from the American Home Missionary Society to proceed to the Territory of Iowa, "where a frontier folk, lacking preachers and teachers, were busily breaking the prairie sod in preparation for a western culture." In 1846 he was "called to minister to the Congregational flock at Burlington," and for 64 years he made this parish his care. During his ministry, he preached 2050 written sermons and thousands more from notes or extempore. In addition to his parish work, he found time for a large amount of church and historical writing, including biographical sketches of many of the founders of the Territory of Iowa.

The following account has been taken from Philip D. Jordan's Letters of Eliab Parker Mackintire:

"He left by train for Buffalo, Oct. 7, 1843, then proceeded by boat to Chicago, whence he went by wagon to the eastern bank of the Mississippi, opposite Burlington, Iowa Territory, arriving Oct. 24, 1843. Five days later Mr. Salter preached his first sermon at Keosauqua in a room over the village blacksmith shop. On Nov. 5, 1843, he was ordained at Denmark, Iowa, and a few days later took passage on the Mississippi River steamer, NEW BRAZIL, for Davenport, which he reached Nov. 10th. In a blinding snow storm, he set out in a prairie wagon for the forlorn and forsaken settlement of Maquoketa in Jackson County. His field of labor was large, the population thin, and he traveled afoot and on horseback preaching in log courthouses, in crude barns, and at other times in the rude sod houses of the people. The first church he organized had only eighteen members. In this primitive and distasteful field he labored for two years, beset by the most disappointing and discouraging circumstances. He had catalogued himself a failure (In 1845 he wrote: "The only evidence I have that I have preached the truth among them is that they hate me.") when in 1846 he was called to minister to the Congregational flock at Burlington, a call which he received joyfully, immediately making plans to marry his 'Lady Angela' and bring her to the frontier...that inland empire of hard-working, hard-drinking men, fever and ague, log houses, and boundless prairies. The wicked, the wordly, and the backsliders were to comprise her western associates just as they formed the young minister's society. The Valley of Democracy was resisting New England's attempt to stamp it with the ethical parochialism of Boston. It was not yet ready for domestication and culture. Abundant land was to be had, mills were to be raised, streams harnessed, and wealth made. Individualism was far more important to the frontiersmen than organization..."

He was the author of: Psalms for Worship and Instruction, Arranged in Order of Subjects, 1900; Words of Life for 1905, 1905; Iowa, 1673-1846, The First Free State in the Louisiana Purchase, 1905; Sixty Years⁸ Sermons and Addresses, 1907.
