[NOTE.—Each male member of the family is known by the numeral which precedes his name. The numbers following refer to his ancestors in direct succession, beginning with his FATHER. (Except in the cases of (No. 1) to (No. 17) inclusive. In these the first numeral following refers to the most remote ancestor and the last number to the man's father.)—EDITOR.]

INTRODUCTORY.

IN presenting this brief memoir to those of his kin who, either from general interest or family pride in an honorable name, desire to preserve the written and traditional records of several centuries, the writer feels it a pleasure to record the motive of its inception. To Lucy Elliot, wife of Augustus F. Smith, Esq., of New York, a woman of rare talent as well as grace of mind and manner, is due whatever of credit there may be for the accuracy and completeness of the facts and dates hereafter recited.

A deep and lasting friendship having sprung up in girlhood for her cousin, John Henry Elliot (91), of Keene, N. H., then a student at Harvard, she inspired him with a love of family history, reproaching him for his ignorance of their remote ancestry; moved by her earnestness, he applied his leisure to collecting and collating facts and traditions with such success that in 1835 he issued a pamphlet giving extended information of his own direct line and much of collateral branches from the first appearance in Puritan New England of the progenitor of the American stock.

One of these pamphlets falling into the writer's hands in 1886, awakened in him a desire to extend it to embrace the names and records of every descendant born of the American line.

While engaged in this work he developed facts concerning the parent stock in England quite remarkable and most unexpected. How far back into the shadows of the past a careful and systematic search will carry the line, it is impossible to say. As yet, that most valuable source of such information, the probate and land records, are untouched. The section of England where they resided, viz., Somerset, Cornwall and Devon, is reputed to be the richest in such records in the kingdom. This field of research, therefore, promises most interesting results to any one with leisure to investigate.

So full and accurate have been the sources of information opened up to the writer among our American branches, that he challenges the reader to find an important error. He will always be pleased to correct any that may be found.

His heartiest thanks are due for the aid rendered by Rev. John E. Elliott, of Bridgewater, Conn., and of distinctly different family, near and remote, whose collection of notes and pedigrees of every family of the name of Eliot, Elliot, Elliott and Eliott is the most remarkable of any family record extant.

The many hundred letters received in connection with this search will ultimately be filed among the archives of the New England Geneal. and Biographical Society at Boston.

At his leisure, after the completion of this volume of American Eliots, the writer will issue to all who hold a copy of it a supplement, giving similar facts and historical data relative to the parent English stock, and he doubts not that it will prove of interest to all of the name.

As far as possible throughout the work, the name has been spelled as the individual himself wrote it. In all doubtful cases El(1)iot.

It is hoped that those living in Beverly and Salem, and who are descendants of the same man, will take it upon themselves to examine the records in those towns and discover the descendants of the one or two members whose posterity is not given on the key chart. By sending information to the writer he will do the principal part of the work in completing.

The author hopes that whoever receives this volume will send him what they can to improve it for a second edition. Suggestions, facts, clippings—anything of interest—will be duly acknowledged.

He would feel doubly indebted if every male member of the family given on the chart would send him his likeness, and those of his Eliot ancestors, if only as a loan. It is intended to perpetuate them by copying in miniature ten to twenty on a page by photography, after which the originals will be returned if desired, or filed with all other originals in the archives of the Mass. Gen. and Biog. Society in Boston.

It has been disappointing to find how little importance has been attached to the spelling of the family name. A few branches have adhered to one orthography consistently through several generations, but by far the larger number, including the writer's immediate ancestor, have departed from it upon what appear to be entirely insufficient grounds. It is therefore desirable that in this volume should be given the proper spelling and the authority therefor.

Beginning with the original emigrant to this country, viz., Hon. Andrew (1), of Beverly, we find in his will, which is still in perfect preservation and on file in the Register's office in Salem, that the name is spelled many times throughout the body of the will "Eliott." It is signed in an infirm hand, thus :

[Seal.]                Andrew  Elliot.
His mark.

The diphthong and seal are by the testator himself, the latter being an impression from his ring; but the words "Andrew Elliot" and "His mark" are in the same hand as the body of the will. The penman of the will may have been some assistant to the testator when the latter held the office of Town Clerk. Why such a person, knowing Andrew Eliot well, should have written it "Eliott" in the will and "Elliot" in the signature, can only be surmised, or based upon the assumption that upon signing it for him he asked Eliot how he should spell the name, and wrote it "Andrew Elliot" by his direction. Upon this theory rests the only basis for the use of the "Elliot" orthography.

On the other hand, Andrew Eliot, who was for many years Town Clerk, and who "wrote a fair hand," invariably signed his name Eliott to all papers of consequence, notably in the Recantation paper signed by the twelve jurors after the Salem Witchcraft Trials. His grandsons on all sides have dropped the extra "t." In the writer's mind this would seem to settle the matter beyond any possible doubt, and he reluctantly abandons the use of "Elliot" as followed by his father (and by his grandfather during the latter years of his life—he, with his brother, having abandoned their father David's practice of spelling his name Eliot for that of Elliot).

The name is, unquestionably, Norman, and was originally spelled Aliot, corrupted into the Welsh Elyot, in a few instances abroad, but never in America.

From the year 1375, at least, has the E replaced the A. Both history and tradition prove* that among the Norman invaders of England who fought at Hastings was a Norman knight, William de Aliot, who is the accredited ancestor of the Eliotts of Stobs and Elliotts of Minto, in Scotland (Co. Roxburgh), distinguished collaterals † of the Eliots of Cornwall, Somerset and Devon, in southwestern England. The family undoubtedly settled first in the latter county, the earliest records there showing the presence of gentry bearing the name.

‡ The family originally bore arms alike, viz: "A baton, Or, on a field, Azure, with an arm and a sword for a crest, with the motto—Per Saxa per Ignes Fortiter et Recte," and modifications of this are born by most of the Scottish and a few of the English branches. Early in the Sixteenth century, however, the Devonshire and Cornwall families adopted other arms, and in the "Visitation of Devonshire," 1620, we find them thus: Arms—Argent, a fess gules between four cotises wavy azure, a mullet for difference. Crest.—An elephant's head, coupéd argent.

In the "Visitation of Cornwall," 1620, is a shield of 12 quarterings, viz: Arms 1.—Elliot, argent, a fess gules between 4 cotises wavy, B; 2. Cutland; 3. Arg., a trefoil slipped vert; 4 B., a tilting spear palewise between 2 mullets, or; 5. Pawlherman; 6. Brewin; 7. Kerswell; 8. Downe; 9. Brawle; 10. Briston; 11. Arg. on a chief B., 3 mullets, or; 12. Gill. Crest—An elephant's head, coup. A., collared gu.

That the Somerset family, from which Andrew Eliot sprung, was allied to this Devonshire stock, there can scarcely be the shadow of a doubt. The only Eliots recorded as resident in Somerset, other than Andrew's immediate ancestors, appear to be the family of Hugh Eliot (or Elyot), of Bristol, whom Burke and the "Visitation of Cornwall" both ascribe to the Cornwall family.

The will of Andrew (1) bears the impression of the seal of his ring in perfect preservation (1887), the armorial bearings of which the author is unable to trace among his (Andrew's) English connections, but which will probably develop facts of interest abroad. The design of said seal, roughly sketched, will be found in the copies of this work to be filed in the Genealogical Society House in Boston, and in the Columbia College, and Astor Libraries of New York city.

On the will of his son William (2) was found, in 1886, an entirely different seal, with the main features given on the chart of this volume. This seal was badly cracked on all sides, and liable to be damaged with the slightest handling. An elaborated seal made from it will be seen in the Astor Library copy of this work. The ring, from which the seal on the will was undoubtedly made, must be still in the possession of some member of the family. It is mentioned in the Inventory of Estate of William Elliott (2), of Beverly, now on file in Probate Records of Salem. It is again mentioned in the Inventory of the Estate of his son John Eliot (6), also on file there. On examining the will of this William (2), again in July, 1887, the seal had almost entirely fallen to pieces, leaving but the smallest corner still attached to the paper, and that very insecurely. The difference between these seals of Andrew (1) and his son William (2) the writer cannot understand. Perhaps some person better versed in such matters can explain.

The first Eliot who appears in Somersetshire, so far as known at present, is :

Edmund Elyot, 1417. "In 1433 Walter Eliot was returned among the gentry of the (neighboring) shire of Devon, where he was resident in great hospitalitie." He was son and heir to John Eliot (b. abt. 1375), of same county, who married Joan Sigdon, daughter of W. Sigdon, of Sigdon, Co. Devon.

On December 9th, 1503, Hugh Eliot, of Bristol, in Somersetshire, took out a patent to explore new countries, and "was in his day the prime pilot of our nation."

COKER.

Nestled among the hills and meadows of the heart of Somersetshire, the garden spot of England, is the little hamlet of East Coker, three or four miles S. W. from Yeovil, on the London & Southwestern Railway. Here, almost under the shadows of a fine old parish church, dating back to the fifteenth century, was the home for a century or more of the Eliot family previous to their departure for America and religious liberty.

Less than one hundred miles away in Cornwall is yet to be found the seat of a powerful family of the name resident there since 1400, and flourishing previously for several centuries in the neighboring county of Devonshire.

In 1538 there was passed in England a law compelling every parish to keep a complete record of baptisms, marriages and burials. It appears to have gone into effect with more or less force between 1540 and 1550, and to have shown itself as soon in Devon, Cornwall and Somerset, as in any other part of the kingdom. It is, therefore, not remarkable that we at once find record of the Eliots in E. Coker, Somersetshire.

Being members of the Established Church of England at the period of Cromwell's accession to power, and when Roundhead intolerance became as oppressive as had previously been the Romish influence, it would not be surprising if the Eliots had found emigration to this country as necessary as the thousands of others who flocked to the neighboring ports of departure, Plymouth, Bristol, &c., to seek a more congenial home in America.

They were well educated, highly respected, well-to-do members of the landed gentry of the shire, and certainly well connected. They had been seated in the county for 100 years or more before the departure of the first of the line for the colony of Massachusetts Bay.

An examination of the parish records, still (1886) in good preservation, there appears the name of—

(D) Thomas Elliott, buried 3d June, 1597.

Katharine Elliott, whose son Francis was bap.
March 3d, 1596.

Stephen Elliott, buried 3d April, 1600, who married Mary ———, who was buried 12 May, 1592 and their children :

Katharine, baptised August, 1563.

Elizabeth, “ 10 May, 1567.

Agnes, buried, 22 November, 1568.

Next we find the name of Jerome (?) Elliott, and his son, William, baptized 23 Sept., 1586.

After these :

- (C) Henry, married Alice ———, who was buried 15 Dec., 1590, and their children :
Henry Elliott, baptised 3 March, 1576.
- (B) William, baptized 23d June, 1577.
Buried, 29 Mar., 1642.

Next comes :

William Elliott, and his children :

Margaret, baptized 9 April, 1574.

John, " 1 Oct. 1576.

William, " 26 Feb. 1581.

Henry, " 23 Sept. 1586.

Then :

- (A) William Elliott, baptized — Feb. 1603 ; married Emma ——— Marie, bap. — Sept. 1607.

The children of William (A) were :

- (1) Andrew Elliott, son of William Elliott, who was baptized on the 24th Apl., 1627, or June 10th, 1627.

He married 23 Apl., 1649, Grace Woodier.

She was buried 8 Feb. 1652.

Edith, dau. of Wm. Elliot, Jr., bap. 6 July, 1629, buried 16 Mar. 1631.

Judith, dau. of Wm. Elliott, Jr., bapt. 1 April, 1632.
Marie, dau. of Wm. Elliott and Emma, bapt.
Nov. 1634.
John, son of Wm. Elliott and Emma, bapt. 17
Dec. 1637; d. 25 Jan. 1645.
Grace, dau. of Wm. Elliott and Emma, bapt.
5-6 Feb. 1639, buried 16 Oct., 1640.
Grace, dau. of Wm. Elliott and Emma, bapt.
31 Dec. (?), 1641.

Of Andrew (1) were born :

(3) Andrew Eliot, 30 Jan., 1650 (son of Andrew Elliott and Grace, his wife).

Emma, dau. of Andrew Elliott, buried 8 Mar., 1661. ^

Mary, dau. of Andrew Elliott, bapt. 11 Jan.
1662 (dau. of Andrew Elliott and Mary, his wife).

No other Eliot name or date appears in the parish subsequent to 1668, when Andrew Elliott's name appears on the record, quite apart, in a page.

For more than 100 years thereafter nothing appears in connection with the family in Somersetshire, but we encounter them in Beverly, Mass., in 1670 and 1679,
Feb. 13, and here begins the American line.

(No. 1). Hon. ANDREW ELIOTT, baptized in East Coker, England, in 1627, was last mentioned there in 1668, and appears next in America, as joining the first church of Beverly, 1670; also December 4th, 1675, when "John Raiment and Andrew Elliot took an inventory of the estate of John Batchelor of Salem, who died November 13th, 1675." (Essex Ins. His. Col., Vol. 2, page 183.) From same authority, Volume 3, page 146, we find inscription in Beverly Graveyard of his death. Thus: "Here lyes buried ye body of Andrew Elliott, age 76 years, departed this life March ye 1st, 1703-4." He married first, on the 23d April, 1649, in East Coker, England, Grace Woodier (who died February 8th, 1652); he married second, <sup>1654</sup>, Mary ——, and had daughters Emma (who m., 1st, Andrew Woodbury, 2d, Henry Herrick, and died March 8th, 1661), and Mary, (who m., 1st, Nicholas Woodbury, 2d, Capt. Kinsley Hall. She was baptized January 11th, 1662); she was daughter by second wife, as may probably have been Emma. His first wife, Grace, belonged to one of the most prominent families in Somersetshire. He was a man of property, education and ability, and a member of the Established Church of England. Emigrating to America and settling at first in Salem and then in Beverly, he seems to have taken up for a time the trade of "Corwinder," and became a member of the First Church of Beverly. On February 13th, 1679, "Andrew Elliott and Nehemiah Grover had liberty to cut two loads of timber on the Town Commons, to be used in building a ketch." (See Stone's History of Beverly, page 316.) Where we find (pages 212-3) that "he was one of a committee to plead with the General Court against taking away Pastor Hale to be Chaplain to the expedition against Canada in 1690." On page 193 we find him among the list of Representatives in the General Court, where he served five years, one of the longest terms. Pages 111-2 of the same says: "September 1st, 1684, Sam'l Hardie (son of a London tailor—Ed.), schoolmaster of Beverly, was employed with Andrew Elliott to transcribe the town records into a new book." The population of Beverly in 1668 was 600, and in 1708 had increased to 1680. From the same authority we quote: "Although the town records begin in 1665, no town clerk was chosen until April 11th, 1690, when Andrew Elliott was elected, and his compensation fixed at thirty shillings in money or forty shillings in pay, i. e., produce. Up to this period the records had been kept by the selectmen, whose doings are blended with those of the town. Elliott was a native of Somerset County, in the West of England. He came early to Beverly, and became a member of the church in 1670. He appeared to enjoy the entire confidence of his townsmen, and was frequently chosen Selectman, Representative, &c., and was 63 years of age when he entered upon the duties of Town Clerk. He suffered under the arbitrary administration of Sir Edmund Andros, on account of which the town made him a grant.

In 1686 he was one of the five witnesses taken from Beverly to attend at the execution of the Indian deed of the Town of Salem. He wrote a fair hand, and was very circumstantial in his record of events. The following entry of the decease of his son is a specimen of his method :

ANDREW ELIOTT, the dear and only son of Andrew Elliott, whose mother's name was Grace, and was born in East Coker, in the County of Somerset, in Old England, being on board a vessel appertaining unto Philip English, of Salem, one Bavidge being Master; said vessel being then at Cape Sables, by an awful stroke was violently thrown into the sea, and thus perished in the water, to the great grief of his said father, the penman hereof, being aged 37 years, on the 12th day of September, about 10 o'clock in the morning, according to the best information, in the year of our Lord 1688.

The second volume of town records he commences as follows: "On the third of November, 1685, then this book was improved for the Town of Beverly, as a town book to record the town concerns by the selectmen of said town successively. For former concerns in this matter, any concerned may have recourse unto a former parchment-covered old book extant, and likewise for some ancient records of marriages, births and burials, which said was the first year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, King James Secundus.

"Truth justifies herself when falsehood comes to naught,
How few improve the first, but with the last full fraught;
Oh! thou tyrant custom what havoc dost thou make,
Thy cruel bonds, fetters and clogs, most men do captivate."

He died March 1st, 1703-4, aged 76 years. Andrew Eliot, a merchant in Boston, who suffered by the great fire in 1711, was his great grandson, and Rev. Andrew Eliot, a distinguished clergyman of the same city, was his great-great-grandson. The daughter of Andrew Elliot, the merchant, was married to Nathaniel Thayer, and was grandmother to the late Rev. Dr. Thayer, of Lancaster, Mass.

He was one of the jurors on the Witch Trials in Salem, and with the other jurors afterwards made a public recantation, and greatly reproached himself for the part he had taken. The following is the text of the paper they signed :

DECLARATION OF REGRET FOR PART TAKEN IN SALEM
WITCHCRAFT, CIRCULATED AND SIGNED BY THE JURORS.

“We, whose names are underwritten, being in the year 1692, called to serve as jurors in Court of Salem, on trial of many who were by some suspected guilty of doing acts of witchcraft upon the bodies of sundry persons, we confess that we ourselves were not capable to understand, nor able to withstand the mysterious delusions of the powers of darkness and Prince of the air, but were, for want of knowledge in ourselves and better information from others, prevailed with to take up with such evidence against the accused as, on further consideration and better information, we justly fear was insufficient for the touching the lives of any (Deut. xvii, 6), whereby we fear we have been instrumental, with others, though ignorance and unwittingly, to bring upon ourselves and this people of the Lord the guilt of innocent blood, which sin the Lord saith in Scripture he would not pardon (2 Kings xxix, 4), that is, we suppose, in regard of his temporal judgments. We do therefore, hereby signify to all in general, and to the surviving sufferers in special, our deep sense of, and sorrow for, our errors in acting on such evidence to the condemning of any person ; and do hereby declare that we justly fear that we were sadly deluded and mistaken—for which we are much disquieted and distressed in our minds, and do therefore humbly beg forgiveness, first, of God, for Christ's sake, for this our error, and pray that God would not impute the guilt of it to ourselves nor others; and we also pray that we may be considered candidly and aright by the living sufferers, as being then under the power of a strong and general delusion, utterly unacquainted with, and not experienced in matters of that nature.

“We do heartily ask forgiveness of you all, whom we have justly offended; and do declare, according to our present minds, we would none of us do such things again, on such grounds, for the whole world,—praying you to accept of this in way of satisfaction for our offence, and that you bless the inheritance of the Lord, that he may be entreated for the land.

He seems to have been a man enjoying the confidence of his townsmen and holding successively every office of honor in the gift of the town.

His will (drawn Feb. 26, 1703-5, proved April 3, 1704), is on file in Salem, in perfect preservation, and bears a seal from his ring and a diphthong "Æ" in an infirm hand, being evidently too old or infirm to write his name. Accompanying it is an inventory of his property real and personal.

His wife, Mary, made a will, Dec. 8, 1718, proved Aug. 1, 1720.

He had daughters, Mary and Emma (See under head, (2.)

(No. 2). WILLIAM ELIOTT, (1) born in East Coker, married (July 10, 1681) Mary Parker, [widow of Nathan Parker (by whom she had dau. Mary, He d. 6/4/1679), and daughter of Francis Browne, of Newbury, Mass., (born 15/4/1657—d. 4/4/1679)], and is mentioned in the will of his father. He had sons, Andrew, who died an infant; Andrew (4), William (5), and John (6); also daughters, Judith, b. 24/3/1685, bap. 24/6/88, m.(—) Thos. Cocks; Mary, bap. 5/2/91, m.(—) William Tuck; Emma, bap. 16/5/97, and Elizabeth, bap. 8/10/99. He had sisters, Mary (who married Nicholas Woodbury), and Emma (married first, Andrew Woodbury; second, A. Blower(—). His will, made Jan. 19, 1721-2, is on file in Salem, proved February 19, 1721-2.

(No. 3). ANDREW ELIOTT, Jr., (1) baptized in East Coker, Somersetshire, England, 1651; married in 1680, probably in Beverly, Mercy Shattuck, and was lost off Cape Sable from on board a vessel belonging to Philip English, of Salem, on the 21st of September, 1688, leaving two sons (7) and (8), and daughters: Mercy (b. —, 1681), and Grace (b. —). Made freeman of Beverly, May 18, 1683. (See p. 345, Mass. Hist'l Coll., 1849.) His widow married Benjamin(?) Trask before 1700. (Essex Wills, VII, 209).

(No. 4). ANDREW ELIOT. (1) (2). This is probably the man who inherited the homestead in Beverly, according to the will of Andrew (1).

(No. 5). WILLIAM ELIOTT, (1) (2) born in Salem or Newbury; married Anna, dau. of Israel Porter, of Salem, and had children Benjamin (17); Anna, (b. 30/9/1710, m. Peter Groves, 1733 and d. 26/7/1798); Elizabeth, (m. Andrew Woodberry 26/2/1734); Israel, (243); Judith, (b. 16/12/1719, m. Thos. Poland of Ipswich, 1748);

Mary, (chris'd 14/10/1722, m. Benj. Trask, Jr.); Sarah, (ch'd 7/2/1725, m. Sam. Porter); and Emma, (ch'd 27/11/1726).

(No. 6). JOHN ELIOT, (1) (2) born in Beverly, and there lived and in Newbury (?), m. (1) Apr. 20, 1715, Elizabeth, (b. 1696, daughter of Freeborn Balch), who died May 1st, 1718; had children, Skipper (16), a tailor of Newbury; John (15). Then married Hannah Waldron, of Wenham, 20/4/1720, and had sons, Nathaniel (14) William (13). probably d. young; Francis (born July 26, 1723, d. 2/11/1745, at Cape Breton); and daughters, Elizabeth, (born June 26, 1725, m. John Canada), Abigail, (born June 15, 1729, m. (1) C. Larcom, (2) Israel Dodge), and Hannah (born January 1st, 1736, m. 1763 Peter Woodberry), and Abigail (b. Feb. 11, 1726-7, died young). He made his will Ap'l 6, 1751; proved 6/5/1751. It contains an inventory of his effects, real and personal. He gives to his sons (16) and (15) his land known as Hardy's land to be equally divided between them. To (14) and (13) he gives the land on Beaver pond, and to his three daughters £13, 6s, 8d, each. William (13), the residuary legatee, gets the homestead and its lands, Woodberry's pasture and all his personal estate.

HIS executors are wife, Hannah, and son, Wm., when he comes of age.

He wrote a handsome hand which can be seen on his father's will. The signature on his own will is bad he being nigh unto death.

(No. 7). ANDREW ELIOT, 3d., (1) (3) was of Boston. He married (1) Ruth Symonds, of Beverly, by whom he had one son Andrew, b. 19/11/1706, d. 23/11/1713. He m (2) Mary Herrick in 1707, and had Ruth (b. 29/9/1708, d. 7/1/1710); Ruth (b. 20/9/1711, m. Nathaniel Thayer—ancestor of the Thayers of Lancaster, and Boston, Mass.—and d. 1746); Mercy (b. 25/8/1716, d. 8/1/1718), and three sons. Mary Herrick Eliot, his wife, died 26/9/1760, æt. 85. He was undoubtedly one of Prince's subscribers, Andrew, Jr., and Samuel, his sons, being two others.

He was a shoemaker and ultimately merchant in Cornhill, four doors below the corner or State St., Boston. Suffered by the great Cornhill fire in 1711, losing most of his property. He was buried in Granary Burying Place.

(No. 8). SAMUEL ELIOTT, (1) (3) a cordwainer, born at Beverly, Mass., married Martha Glin. Men-

He was a cooper, and enlisted as a soldier with his younger brother David (21) in Captain Towne's company of Col. James Reed's regiment at Bunker Hill. He moved, when a child, to Mason, N. H., with his father, and after many years' residence there, removed with David (21) to Dublin, N. H., and died in Pelham, probably in the home of his daughter, Sarah Pearson, above mentioned.

He "came with his wife, Rachel, to Dublin, May, 1779, and lived on Lot 5, Range 1. Children—Meriam, b. Dec. 16, 1771; Sarah, b. Aug. 22, 1779." (See History of Dublin, N. H.)

(No. 19). REV. WILLIAM ELIOT, (15) (6) (2) (1) of Mason, N. H., was born in Bradford, Mass., Dec. 9th (O. S.), 1748, and died in Mason. His first wife, Dorothy Merrill, dau. of Rev. In Mar., 1787, Rev. Wm. Eliot again married Rebecca Hildreth, of Townsend, Mass., who was b. 5/10/1764, and died 18/10/1828, by whom he had, besides sons, daughters, as follows, all born in Mason:

Rebecca, b. 5/8/1794, d. 12/1/1823; *Susan, b. 22 or 5/3/1798; Elcy, b. 15/10/1803, d. 13/4/1834; Julia, b. 12/1/1811, d. 27/8/1844.

*Rev. William Eliot was the son of John and Sarah Eliot. He was born in Bradford, Mass., December 1, 1748, O. S. About the year 1766, his father purchased a lot of land in the northwesterly part of Mason. William was his second son. He then being but eighteen years old, with the assistance of his younger brothers, David and Andrew, commenced the preparation for a farm and residence upon the lot, being then an unbroken wilderness, and built a house and made arrangements for the comfort of the family, before his father removed from Bradford. His father is rated in the first tax assessed in the town, in the year 1769, and was probably then a resident. William continued to live in town, and on the same farm, with his father. His first wife was Dorothy, the daughter of the Rev. Mr. Merrill, of Nottingham west, now Hudson. They were married in September, 1772. They had six children, two sons and four daughters. His wife Dorothy died June 14, 1785. His second wife was Rebecca Hildreth, daughter of Mr. Oliver Hildreth, of Townsend. They were married by the Rev. Mr. Dix, of Townsend, March 20, 1787. Their children were twelve, eight sons and four daughters. She died October 18, 1828, aged 65 years. He died June 4, 1830, aged 81 years and nearly six months.

“His advantages for education were limited, having no other means to that end than the ordinary country schools of that day, which furnished very poor and indifferent means for the acquisition of learning. But he possessed naturally a very strong and vigorous mind and a sound judgment, which are of more value in the conduct of life than all the teachings of all the schools, where these are wanting. But he was by no means deficient in education, according to the standard of that day, in his state in life. This is evidenced by the fact, that he was for many years employed as a school teacher, and took a very active and important part in the management of the affairs of the town, especially through nearly the whole period of the revolutionary war, often serving during that period, on important committees, in town business. He served as town clerk and first selectman in the years 1780, 1782-'85-'86 ; was moderator of the annual meeting in 1785, and town treasurer in 1783 and 1784. His records remaining in the town books are well made up, and his handwriting, although possessing no claims to elegance, is perfectly plain and legible. In those days of trouble and disturbance with the people of this town, both in church and state, town meetings were very frequent. A great number and great variety of taxes were raised and assessed, the whole labor, probably, of assessing, certainly of recording which, fell to him. Of course, the records made by him occupy more space than those of many more times the same number of peaceful years.

“He became a member of Mr. Farrar’s church in New Ipswich in 1772, and afterwards, on the formation of the Congregational church in Mason, October 13, 1772, he was one of the original members. His father and mother became members of that church at the same time, and his wife Dorothy in the year 1776. In the unhappy contentions between the Rev. Jonathan Searle, their first minister, and the church and people, he was, with few exceptions, upon all the committees on behalf of the town, for conducting their cause. The records of the church, during this time, contain no allusion to the controversy, but he was, undoubtedly, as active in his sphere in the affairs of the church, as of the town.

But the most important view of his life is his character and service as a preacher of the gospel. It has been stated, that, early in life, he became a member of the Congregational church. It was the church of his fathers. No other denomination was then known, especially in the country places in New England. All serious-minded persons united with the church in their towns. The clergy and the church then possessed a power and authority little dreamed of in these days of license and misrule. But all was peace and harmony. No one thought of or inquired for any other or better way. But, with the war of the Revolution, and with the establishment of independent governments in the former colonies, came juster notions of civil rights, and, as a necessary concomitant, more freedom of inquiry and of religious opinion. The Baptist denomination, soon after the close of the war, began to make itself felt in New England, as an element of religious life. The subject became, with Mr. Eliot, a matter of the most serious consideration and the gravest examination, which ultimately resulted in a settled conviction, in his mind, that the Baptist views of the ordinance of baptism were the only scriptural views. He accordingly adopted them, fully and heartily, and devoted the remainder of his life to a zealous and unwavering support of the principles and practices of that order. It is stated, in the sketch of the history of the Baptist church, that he made these views known by a protest against a vote to raise money to pay for preaching, in town meeting, in 1782. He was one of the three original male members of the church "imbodyed" September 28, 1786. He seems to have devoted himself from that time, to the work of preaching and exhortation, with such acceptance on the part of the church, that in August, 1788, the church, at a meeting, voted unanimously that he be set apart as an evangelist; and arrangements were made for a council to meet to ordain him. At a subsequent meeting, the church voted to give him "a call to settle with them in the gospel ministry, and to continue so long as it shall appear it is for the glory of God and our mutual advantage." He accepted the invitation, and was ordained on the third Wednesday of October, 1788, and continued to be the minister of the church till his death, June 4, 1830, a period of 41 years and 8 months.

"The bible was his book, almost his only book. With its contents he was thoroughly and intimately acquainted. With its spirit, his temper and heart were imbued. From the time he began to preach, he gave up all active participation in the affairs of public, political, and municipal life, and seldom, if ever, attended a town meeting, or cast a vote for any officer, of town, state, or nation. Indeed, his labors were abundant. He not only had charge of the interests of his denomination in his own town, but, for many years, in all the neighboring towns and a large region around. The Baptist churches in New Ipswich, Wilton, Jaffrey, Milford, Hollis, and Townsend, owe their origin and early growth, in a great measure, to his self-sacrificing and almost, in an earthly sense, unrewarded toils.

“He secured for three of his sons advantages of education very much superior to what he had himself enjoyed, and had the happiness to see them all walking in his footsteps in the service of his and their Lord and Master. Israel graduated at the University of Vermont in 1813. He was drowned in Boston harbor, August 29, 1815. Joseph was ordained at Hinsdale, in June, 1809, at which place, and afterwards in many other important churches of the Baptist denomination, he ministered with much acceptance and success, until recently, he has removed to Elliota, Minnesota, the residence of his son, Mr. J. W. Elliot. His son Jesse graduated at the Literary and Theological Seminary, at Hamilton, N. Y., in 1826, was ordained the same year, and is now the pastor of the Baptist church in Mayville, N. Y.

“Notwithstanding the irreconcilable differences of opinion upon many subjects of doctrine, ordinances and discipline, the two pastors of the Congregational and Baptist churches, Mr. Hill and Mr. Eliot, lived in great peace and harmony with each other, mutually entertaining a high esteem and regard, each for the other, manifested by many instances of Christian sympathy and brotherly kindness, in seasons of affliction, with which both were severely visited; and in view of this fact, perhaps no more appropriate close can be made of this sketch of the life of Mr. Eliot, than the extract from a sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Hill, in his own pulpit, on the Sunday, while the remains of his departed friend lay unburied, awaiting the last sad and solemn ceremony of committing "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust." (See History of Mason, N. H., p. 283.)

"Died in Mason, N. H., on the 18th ult., Mrs. REBECCA ELIOT, consort of Rev. WILLIAM ELIOT, aged 64 years.

The deceased indulged a hope in Christ when she was about twenty years of age, during the great revival of religion in New-Ipswich, Mason, and other neighbouring towns, in 1784, but did not publicly profess her faith in Christ until the next year, when she was baptized by the Rev. Mr. Crossman, and united with the Baptist Church in Mason, of which she remained a member till her death. She was married to her bereaved husband in March, 1787, by whom she had twelve children, and was stepmother to five. Twelve of the children of the whole family are yet living. Eleven of the children made a credible profession of their faith in Christ, and were baptized. Among the children, their partners and grand children, are fourteen professors, among whom are three ministers of the gospel, who are yet living. This spiritual change which she witnessed, was the fruit of many prayers and tears, which she with an agonizing spirit had offered to God in their behalf. It may be truly said of her, that "she was a mother in Israel." Few have taken a deeper interest in the salvation of souls. In the revivals of 1801 and 1826, in that town, her husband, who was the acting Pastor in the former, and her son in the latter, found much assistance from her spiritual conversation with the awakened and newly converted. Her piety was not like the blaze of the meteor, but like the steady rays of the sun. She was a decided Baptist in sentiment and practice; and such was her kind, prudent, and truly catholic spirit, that she enjoyed the universal esteem of all Christians with whom she associated. Her meekness, patience, and good understanding, rendered her pleasing and profitable in conversation, and worthy of imitation in example. As a wife, a mother, a Christian, a friend and neighbor, she was much beloved in life, and deeply lamented in death. Her last illness, which she bore with exemplary fortitude and resignation, was short, and being of a pulmonary nature, deprived her friends of the privilege of much conversation. "Precious in the sight of the Lord, is the death of his Saints."—Communicated. [Oct. 1828.]

(No. 20.) Deacon ANDREW ELIOT, (15) (6) (2) (1) born in Bradford, Mass., Sept. 11th, 1756, or '55; married 29/1/1782, Hannah Dakin (b. in Lincoln 20/1/1762; d. 19/10/1840); lived a farmer in Mason, N. H., and was a deacon in the Baptist church. Enlisted as soldier in Revolutionary War, but was relieved before seeing much active service. He had, besides sons, five daughters: Sarah, b. 24/5/1788, d. 17/4/1789; Polly, b. 27/6/1792, d. 3/4/1833; Elizabeth, b. 18/5/1805, d. 29(?) /9/1829; Sally, b. 17/12/1794, d. 11/12/1882; Hannah, b. 3/3/1786, d. 3/11/1870. and 419.) "David Eliot" (as he spelled it himself—Ed.) was a man of marked character.

In the spring of 1775, with his brother John, he joined a company of volunteers, Capt. Towne, marched toward Boston from Mason, N. H., 65 men and joined Col. Reed's regiment. He was early on the ground at the battle of Bunker Hill and in the hottest of the fight, although each man had but a gill of powder and 15 balls dealt out to him.

David had only his fowling piece, which after a few rapid discharges became hot and dangerous. Just then he discovered a good musket on the ground, the owner having been killed or carried away; he seized the piece, expended the remainder of his ammunition with it, brought it off the field and kept it until the day of his death. Capt. Towne's company remained in service until the evacuation of Boston in the following spring, and was then discharged. Among the strong headed men of Dublin, in the olden time, was David. He was a Baptist."

On returning home to Mason, being well educated he became a surveyor, and is said to have surveyed in his time nearly half the State of New Hampshire. His gun and one or more of his surveyor's books in parchment remained for many years in the possession of his grandson, John Henry (91). He married, first, Hannah Adams, of New Ipswich (born 1761, and died 1789), by whom he had John (45) and a daughter, Hannah, (born 1781, and married Amos Emory.) He married, second, Lucy Emory, widow of ——— Campbell (she was born 1756, died 1846,) by whom he had David (44) and Daniel (43).

He was tall, powerful and fine looking; an eloquent speaker and good churchman; restless and fond of adventure, he early left the place of his birth and his father's house to hew a home for himself on the garnet-strewn shores of Dublin Lake, under the shadows of old Monadock mountain.

The house stood for a century, until the fire-fiend left it a heap of ashes; it was a modest but substantial structure of wood and stone, almost all traces of which have disappeared.

(No. 24.) REV. ANDREW ELIOT, (5th) (10) (7) (3) (1) was a distinguished minister at Fairfield, Conn. His daughter, Susan, became 2d wife of Nathaniel Hewitt, of Bridgeport.(?) His family Bible and much of interest is in possession of John T. Burr, 178 S. 9th St., Brooklyn.

He was ordained at Fairfield, Conn., June 22d, 1774, and remained pastor there until his death. He was a ripe scholar, a prudent, faithful and beloved pastor. He devoted himself with great zeal and fidelity to the instruction of young men preparing for college.

The steady affection and esteem, the deserved estimation in which he was ever held by his brethren in the ministry and his acceptance in the churches are honorable testimonies to his worth, candor and unaffected piety, which, with the wisdom that dwells with prudence, were distinguishing parts of his character.

His acquaintance with general science, his urbanity and social affections conciliated the esteem of all ranks.

He was, shortly after his graduation from Harvard (Class of 1762), appointed Butler of the College, and lost all his property in the burning of the old college in 1764. Became Tutor of the College in 1768, and Fellow in 1773. Held both until ordained at Fairfield. In the summer of 1779, when General Tryon burned Fairfield, although he had ordered the preservation of Mr. Eliot's house, it was destroyed, together with all his effects and a valuable library, which his friends in the new North church of Boston, afterwards replaced for him.

He was a member of Conn. Academy of Arts and Sciences, and Corresponding Member and Fellow of Mass. His. Soc. He left a widow and six children. (Sprague's Annals, Vol. I, p. 420.)

(This David Eliot and his brother joined our Army of the Revolution, and were engaged in the Battle of Bunker Hill.) Both parents had been previously married, and their children were children of each marriage. His father died in the early infancy of Daniel. Lucy Eliot, his mother, was a woman of sterling worth, of great force of character, faithful, clear-headed, following "The Master," far-seeing, consistent, persevering, noble in the breadth of her charity for human infirmity, knowing no compromise with conscience, genial, cheery, and possessed of a rare fund of varied anecdote and story. The tender, unwavering affection, and profound veneration, of the son for this admirable mother, were her cherished and fitting reward. She lived to four score years and ten.

Daniel Elliot's "schooling" was secured at the academy of the town, and afterwards, under the Reverend Mr. Livermore, at Keene, N. H. Dartmouth College, in 1813, became his Alma Mater. Among his classmates were Amos Kendall, Gov. Dinsmore, Greenleaf, the mathematician, Congressman Edwards, and other men of mark. He was early recognized as a leading spirit; and graduated at the head of his class, chosen by acclamation to deliver the valedictory address. Music was ingrain to his nature; and he greatly enjoyed his membership in the Handel and Haydn Society of the College. He was also elected to the "Φ. B. K." At this time he was six feet in height, broad of chest and large of limb, clear-eyed, active and fearless; the best foot-ball player of the region. His features were bold, his complexion pure, his eyes grey, large and luminous. His grasp was cordial; and his manner readily friendly, except to the depraved. Vulgarity and ribaldry he abhorred. He was gentle, graceful, modest, sensitive, and refined. Day after day his life seemed one continuous act of kindness to the less gifted of his race.

He turned from academic halls to the study of medicine, surgery, and associated science. His private instructors were Cyrus Perkins (Professor of Surgery in Dartmouth Medical College), and Amos Twitchell (probably within the profession of that day the ablest and most original mind in New England; though the demands of a wide circuit of visits left him few opportunities to meet his compeers in the great cities). Mr. Eliot studied diligently with these earnest and broad thinkers; a close attendant upon their practice (after the manner of the time), an independent reasoner from a large field of observation. But professional theories of that period were, to his mind, unsatisfactory and inconclusive,—remedies in vogue, in no way comparable with the resources of to-day.

Just at this turning point of his life, Augustus Greele (who had been his classmate and most ardent friend) urged upon him a partnership in a large seminary for young ladies at Harlem, then a tranquil and attractive village, quite remote from the bustle of life in the neighboring city of New York, but yet accessible by carriage, Boston mail-coach, or the energy of a vigorous pedestrian. The city population was about one hundred thousand; and the experimental Hudson River Steamboat was talked about with general incredulity. This was about the year 1815. The school was a pronounced success. Mr. Eliot's

Course of lectures and instruction giving it unusual distinction and repute.

Miss Greelé was a well-educated and accomplished young lady, of tall and distinguished figure, exquisite complexion, and commanding dignity and grace of manner. Her tastes were elevated, her knowledge of books exceptional, her study of true art and the higher literature appreciative. On the mother's side, she was a lineal descendant from Roger Sherman, one of the framers and signers of the Declaration of Independence. Much of her character she owed to her intimate relations with the gifted William Ellery Channing. In these early years, she lived in Boston (after death of her widowed mother) with her brother, Hon. Samuel Greelé (of Massachusetts Legislature), and at his house her naturally receptive mind expanded in the light of some of the brightest intellects of the time.

Daniel Eliot continued his interest in the school until he married Miss Greelé.

And now Augustus Greelé, restless and enterprising, saw new fields spread out before him. He submitted to the fascinations of a little fairy from an old Knickerbocker family. (After their marriage, the Brothers Harper had the habit of sending for her perusal books of light literature and fiction, relying upon her decision as to availability for the public taste.)

Greelé and Eliot then established in town a business house for the sale of all varieties of paper, which has retired six partners wealthy, and is at present (1886) Campbell & Smith, the leading paper house of the city; and organized a company for manufacture of window-glass, of which Mr. Eliot was made President. The works were at Bristol, town of Woodstock, Ulster county, N. Y. Appointing a Superintendent, he removed to Bristol for personal supervision of the works. This hamlet was among the Catskill Mountains. Here his love for natural scenery had ample scope. Two sons and two daughters, Lucy A. Elliot (b. 1819), and Caroline Cornelia Elliot (b. 1826), here were born. Books were his cherished friends. Grateful for the thoughtful calm of nine years, in 1827 he made his permanent residence in New York City. He immediately became a member, and presently Trustee, of the "Church of the Messiah," under ministry of Rev. William Lunt. The Society desired a hymnal. His cultured taste, his feeling for music, his natural and unassuming habit of devotion, indicated his fitness for the task. Associated with the pastor and Mr. Henry Sewall, he admirably met their wishes. The Church of the Messiah—this veritable house of worship—was destroyed by fire (I do not now remember in what year, probably 1830), and a new building was to be erected upon Broadway, opposite Washington Place. Mr. Eliot was consulted; and advised, for exterior, a copy of Trinity church, Boston. This was approved. As head of the Building Committee, he secured an edifice dignified, appropriate, and so substantial that, of late, after removal of the church still further north, when the problem of demolishing this structure was essayed, engineering talent was essential to the task, and great was the regret expressed by a modern architect. The question of a church organ was referred to him and solved satisfactorily.

His interest in art was intelligent, broadly critical, and well defined. Many of the best artists visited his house; and he was a welcome and encouraging habitué at most of the studios of the earnest workers. Daniel Huntington painted for him a life-like portrait of one of his daughters, in whose society he had great delight. Talbot painted to his order a picture of Grand Monadnock and the Dublin Lake, scenes of his boyhood life. Brackett modelled a bust of his classmate, brother-in-law, and partner, Augustus Greel . To his daughter Lucy he presented "The Game of Life," by the great German artist, Moritz Retzsch. Among his friends were Huntington, Durand, Cole, Harding, Doughty, Grey, Page, West, Giovanni Thompson, Trumbull, Talbot, Clevinger, Brackett, Launitz, and Ball Hughes. He was one of the early members of the "Apollo Art Association," a wholesome spur to the energies of the Academy of Design.

When Asiatic cholera first visited the city, in 1832, his children were removed to schools in the country, near at hand; but he remained.

In 1835 he built, from his own plans, a house in Ninth street, near Broadway, and only a block removed from a home recently built by his friend, Augustus Greel . In front his windows overlooked the well kept gardens in the rear of Clinton Place. Northward they looked to the open country and the stream of carriages driving to "Burnham's, Cato's, or the Abbey" (Fifth Avenue and Union Square as yet were not; nor any dream of Central Park). For his daughter, Lucy, a pupil of Gambardella, he planned a "Studio." She entertained and visited Bryant and his family, Lowell, George William Curtis, Orville Dewey, and Parke Godwin, William Ware, Dr. Follen (who perished later, saving many lives, on the burning steamer "Lexington"), Gansevoort Melville, Foresti, Le Bœuf, Gambardella, Schaeffer, and Maroncelli (from prison horrors), Renwick, Anthon, and Cranch. Here the sons prepared for college life.

Caroline, his youngest child (delight of her teacher of song, Altrocci), developed a voice of rarest breadth and purity. Living with her uncle, in that day, in dreams of poetry and music, courted by a circle of the sweetest girls of the time, she was a vision of grace. His daughters married men of brilliant success at the Bar of New York: Lucy A. to Augs. F. Smith, and Caroline to Hon. George Cornell, who declined the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor of New York. His sons were devoted to the practice of Medicine and the Ministry. He found a farm among three hills, at Marlborough, upon the Hudson river. Here again he planned, and built himself a home and in 1843 settled. When aged seventy-four, he rose to the "Company of the Just made Perfect."

Among his trusted friends were Channing, Dewey, and Gannett, Ware and Follen, Bryant, Grinnell and Corcoran, Lossing and Morse, O'Connor and F. U. Johnston, Harding, Huntington and Cole, Clevenger and Ball Hughes—men of mark and power.

The exalted character of Daniel Eliot was the outcome of large natural gifts and of broad culture. His was a mind made up of faculties most admirably in equipoise. In him a noble tact, born of perception both acute and prompt, brought just conclusions through a chain of reasoning, all whose links were close and well adjusted. A scholarly German quaintly said of him, "in matters to think about, his judgment seems almost infallible."

The panic of 1837 brought financial ruin to a large majority of New York merchants. Chiefly in consequence of his wise foresight and generous spirit in business, Greelé and Eliot weathered the storm: and not a shadow rested on the name.

During 1842, he was one of a Committee of nine appointed by the New York Chamber of Commerce to visit Washington in the interest of an important revision of tariff, and held interesting interviews with Senators Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Benton, Buchanan, Rives, and Frelinghuysen, to whom the tariff then was an important question. Chief-Justice Marshall, Judge Story, and Chancellor Kent also gave him hearing.

In 1853, at the celebration of the centennial of the town of Dublin, he was chosen to respond to the toast of "Grand Monadnock." Unable to be present, he sent a response, in grace of diction, grandeur and breadth of thought, and depth of feeling, seldom equalled." (See History of Dublin, N. H.) [Extracts from a Memorial by A. G. E.—April, 1887.] His portrait will be inserted hereafter.

He had besides sons, four daughters :

Mary Elizabeth, b. 24/5/ 1823, d. 23/4/ 1839 ; Hannah Amanda, b. 15/12/ 1827, d. 2/9/ 1829; Caroline Melissa, b. 6/9/ 1832, mar. 21/4/ 1868, Charles Russell Cushing, of Ashburnham, Mass., and resides (1887) in N. Y. City. Susan Maria, b. 2/11/ 1834, d. 28/6/ 1859, mar. Henry Cragin, of Mason, N. H., and died there.

(No. 47). WILLIAM ELLIOT, (20) (15) (6) (2) (1) born in Mason, N. H., and well educated there.

Painted and sketched a set of twelve family trees of his immediate connections, which, presented to each of his brothers and sisters, was examined by the writer.

He died young.

(No. 48). GEORGE EL(L)IOT, (20) (15) (6) (2) (1) b. in Mason, N. H. Educated in the town school, and was a wealthy merchant there.

Besides (85) he had four children, who died in infancy.

We quote the following:

“GEORGE ELLIOT, was descended, by both his parents, from early settlers in the town. His father was Dea. Andrew Eliot, a son of John Eliot, and brother of Eld. William Eliot. His mother, Hannah Dakin, was a daughter of Dea. Amos Dakin. He was born in Mason, April 24, 1797. He was but fourteen years old when his father died; after which he labored several years at farm work, a part of the time on the homestead, for his elder brother Andrew, and, at other times, for farmers in the neighboring towns. His education was obtained in the short terms of the district schools of his own neighborhood.

“When nearly twenty-one years of age he and his brother Amos, carrying their bundles, travelled on foot in search of employment, to Troy, N. Y. After driving coach a short time, he engaged in school teaching at Castleton, Vt., at which place and in Greenbush, N. Y., he spent two or three years teaching schools, returning home once or twice in the meantime, walking both ways.

“In the fall of 1820, he came home, and taught a term of the district school. Early in the following year he bought a stock of goods of Dea. T. Dakin, and commenced trade in the village. On the 19th of April, 1821, he married Sally Farnsworth, of Sharon. She died August 17, 1827. By this marriage, he had two children. One died in infancy. The other, Lucius Alva, born October 25, 1825, is now a merchant in Boston. On the 2d of September, 1828, he married Eliza Cumings, of New Ipswich, who survived him a few years, and died August 9, 1855. By this marriage he had several children, all of whom died in infancy.

“Mr. Elliot was a large sufferer by fire. In 1823, his store, with all its contents, was burned. It was rebuilt, and the second story occupied as a dwelling. This shared the same fate about two years after. Nothing was saved. His wife, with an infant child in her arms, followed by the nurse, barely escaped over the burning stairs. Absent at the time, Mr. Elliot returned only to find his property in ashes, and his little family without shelter, food or clothing, except as furnished by neighbors. Yet his heart failed not. He was liberally aided by his fellow citizens, and the present building was erected on the old site, and he was soon again in successful business. He afterwards lost two or three other buildings by fire, on none of which was there any insurance. Insurance against losses by fire had not then become common. He continued trade at the old stand, till his death, nearly thirty years. His son was associated with him in business for a year or two before he died, and afterward he sold the stock of goods to William Claggett, who still occupies the store.

“Mr. Elliot was remarkable for his industry, frugality, and perseverance. He not only prosecuted his own business with energy and success, but took an active part in the affairs of the village and town. He was public spirited and liberal, the friend of morality, good order, and general education. In private life, he displayed many excellencies of character. His sympathies were quick and active, and his manners bland and deferential. He was a regular attendant on public worship, and contributed generously for the support of the Baptist society, to which his ancestors and relatives generally belonged.

“When the Peterborough and Shirley Railroad was projected, he engaged heartily in the enterprise, and subscribed liberally to its stock. He was chosen one of its directors, and also one of the executive committee for superintending the building of the road. The financial difficulties in which the road became involved induced him, and others of the board, to pledge their private securities to carry on the undertaking. In the midst of such labors and perplexities, he was seized with the typhoid fever, which terminated fatally on the 15th of November, 1850. His age was 53 years. His memory is cherished by his numerous friends, as that of one by whom the duties of life were faithfully fulfilled.”—J. B. Hill's History of Mason, N. H., page 276, et seq.

Educated in Mason, N. H.; elected one of first members of the Common Council of Boston, 1822. Contracted cholera Sept. 10, 1832, while at his regular duty, and died same day. Had issue, besides sons, three daughters, Lucy Ann (b. 8/9/1810, married Ed. J. Long, of Boston, and d. 21/4/78. Has son, Fred'k Elliot Long, at 28 State St., Boston.) Caroline (b. ——— mar. John W. Hartwell, of Littleton, Mass.), she d. in Cincinnati about 1840. Anna M. (b. 1821—resides Hollis St., Boston, unmarried.) His second wife was Mrs. Harriet Langley (née Flint, of Hillsboro, N. H.).

(No. 54). REV. JESSE ELLIOT, (19) (15) (6) (2) (1) born in Mason, N. H. Educated at Hamilton (N. Y.) College, (?) class of 1826, and was pastor for many years at Batavia, N. Y. and elsewhere, and died there March 24, 1880, at age of 81. Baptized at Roxbury,

Mass., by his brother, Rev. Joseph, while only 23 years of age. He was for fifty-six years a Baptist minister. He married 27/6/1827 Phœbe Yeomans, of Greenville, N. Y., and by her had issue, besides, sons, Seth Addison (b. 11/12/1829, d. 2/1/1831); Emily R. (b. 17/9/1828, m. J. M. Scarff, of Bethany, N. Y.); Elizabeth, (b. 28/10/1831, d. 19/10/1858). His wife died October 22d, 1840, and on May 16th, 1842, he again married Mary C. Willis, of Western N. Y., (b. 17/6/1818), and had, besides sons, a daughter, Mary C. (b. 10/8/1842, m. ——— Filkins, lives Bethany Centre, N. Y.). The last year of his life he went 40 Sundays a journey of 18 miles. to preach in Perry, N. Y. He preached at a funeral Saturday, drove 18 miles, preached Sunday, contracted Typhoid Pneumonia and died 24 days later, 24/3/1880, at Perry.

Editor Examiner :—While visiting Rochester, N. Y., I received an invitation to attend the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination to the ministry of Rev. JESSE ELLIOT, brother of SETH ELLIOT, (now deceased,) a resident of this village more than fifty years. The anniversary was held at Batavia, in the First Baptist Church. The church was decorated with flowers by the ladies of the village.

Rev. D. D. BROWN, the pastor of the church, wrote a poem, expressly for this occasion. I was somewhat surprised to see the love manifested toward Father ELLIOT (as they called him) by the pastor and people of that church. Father ELLIOT gave a short sketch of his labors in the vineyard of his Lord, for the last fifty years. His manner was simple, and that grace of graces, that characterizes the man, shone forth in all its beauty. Looking on Father ELLIOT, as he arose and commenced talking to the people, his silver locks flowing on his shoulders, his body slightly bent forward, the scene was impressive. He stands alone, his early comrades have passed away—like a lone oak in a forest, his fellows fallen by the sweeping elements or by the woodman's axe. He no longer assumes the pastorate of a church, but is ever ready to fill vacancies or officiate at funerals. Truly, he is ready to lay down his armor and receive his crown. E.

†Letter from his son Julius Cæsar Elliot, Dec. 31, '86.

Moved to Moline, Ill. Here he founded a wagon and plow manufactory, sold afterwards to John Deane, who made the town famous with it. From Moline, he moved to Elliota, Minn., which he founded and named. He built a hotel. He made money at everything. Lost all in a fire. Rebuilt and soon left Elliota to settle in Miller Co., Missouri. He began stock raising, and successful at that, he studied for the ministry, preaching the gospel during the last years of his life.

At the breaking out of the Rebellion, he was tendered a colonel's commission and refused on account of his age and infirmities. He died near Springfield, Mo.

His second wife was Lucy Barclay, whom he married at Lebanon, Penn., September 27, 1843, or at Nashville, Tenn.

His son George (207) was by his first wife. His daughter Lucy B., born Dec. 22, 1844, in Moline, Ill., mar. P. Brode, and resides Prosper, Minn.; another daughter Mary W., m. — Ramer, and lives Canton, Minn.; another, Ella G., m. — Corbit, resides Atkinson, Neb.

(No. 68.) HON. JOHN D. ELLIOTT, (58) (19) (15) (6) (2) (1) received his education at Middlebury Academy, N. Y., and read law in New York. He was admitted to the Bar by the Supreme Court of Mississippi, and commenced the practice at Natchez before he had attained his majority. He was made Assistant Treasurer of the United States for Mississippi, giving a bond of half million dollars, and was also made Collector of the Port of Customs, of that State, but continued to practice his profession as before. He took a great interest in Bible revision, and was made first Vice-President of the Southern organization at Memphis in 1850, of which his father subsequently became the principal agent.

He was nominated by acclamation to Congress by a Democratic State Convention, as a bond-paying Democrat, but declined to serve. In 1848, his professional business becoming so large, he removed to Jackson, and in the terrible yellow fever epidemic of 1853 he filled the Executive office of the State in the absence of Henry S. Foote, who had never had the disease. Its frightful desolation in Jackson, Canton, Yazoo City and Vicksburg induced him, under an old law of the State, to send for and obtain physicians and nurses from New Orleans to attend the indigent sick at State expense. He also furnished local physicians, nurses and supplies in the same way.

He purchased the Southern Star printing establishment and converted it into a railroad journal, advocating a trunk line from Jackson to New Orleans. With the aid of Collin S. Tarpley, of Jackson, and James Robb, of New Orleans, he succeeded in the enterprise, obtaining subscriptions in stock and release of the right of way by his individual exertions. The croakers were silenced when it became known that the first year's gross earnings were $1,200,000.

In connection with this printing office he established and published "The Mississippi Baptist," and after its annual income had exceeded $3,000, gratuitously turned it over to the denomination.

His homestead place was known as "Hickory Grove," in the vicinage of Jackson, overlooking the city from embowered heights. He had accumulated one of the most costly and elaborate private libraries in the Mississippi Valley, having a separate building constructed for use. He had accumulated Mss. at great expense for historic use in mature years, and was consulted by the ablest writers in preparation of their works. Some of their prefaces make these acknowledgments, notably J. F. H. Claiborne, in his Biography of Gen. John A. Quitman.

When he discovered that Grant was flanking Vicksburg, and that Jackson was his objective point, he obtained permission to remove his people to the Trans-Mississippi Department, but having only a single night's preparation, could take nothing of value with him. The battle of Jackson was fought on his place, on which both Confederate and Federal breastworks were thrown up, and his improvements were inter media res. As a consequence he lost everything of a perishable character, deploring in the loss his library and Mss., and in an especial manner the loss of a Bible that had descended to him from John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians. [An error, probably belonged to John (15).—ED.]

The Old and New Testaments were bound together, the text of the Old being in alternate lines of Hebrew and Latin, and in the New of Greek and Latin. It had original annotations in those languages from his father up to John Eliot. There is only one other copy of this publication on the Continent, and that is the treasure of Harvard College.

Having the rank of Colonel, on his removal to the trans-Mississippi department, he became a confidential representative of his government, with headquarters at Austin, Texas. The military despotism succeeding the break-up drew him into public life, and over his own signature he called a State Convention at Brenham of the old citizens of that State. The best class of citizens, of the type of Joseph Robinson, who captured Santa Anna, responded, and he was made President of the Convention and Chairman of the Executive Committee. He declared for the right of local self-government in the people, and through this and succeeding organizations, succeeded in procuring for the people, through a free ballot, the men of their choice. This drew him prominently into public life, and for two years he edited and published the Loraca Commercial and Austin State Gazette. Converting the latter into a daily paper, he continued to edit and publish it for eleven consecutive years—refusing, in meantime, the appointment of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and all other office. He defeated the passage of desertion money subsidies calling for $150,000-000, and in obtaining restrictions in the organic law, against State as well as corporate subscriptions. He was the author of the measure setting apart three millions of the public domain for a new State House, under which a building is in process of construction, at a cost of $1,500,000.

In 1879, he removed to Denver, Colorado, resuming the practice of his profession of the law, where he now (1887), resides.—Autobiography.

(No. 85.) LUCIUS ALVIN ELLIOT, (48) (20) (15) (6) (2) (1) was born in Mason, N. H., October 25,

1825. He attended the Literary and Scientific Institution at Hancock, N. H., and Phillips Andover Academy. Having overstudied, he was obliged to leave school. He taught in district schools until it became evident that his health would not stand a college course. His father then admitted him into his business in Mason, which he continued after his father's death. In April, 1856, he entered into copartnership with Frederick Parker, of Boston, to continue, under the name of Parker, Elliot & Co., the book and picture business of Mr. Parker, at 50 and 52 Cornhill, Boston; and, having placed his New Hampshire affairs in competent hands, he removed to Boston during that year. In October, the new firm became insolvent. Mr. Parker's business was too much extended for his resources. Mr. Elliot continued the business, with Josiah Rutter, under the name of L. A. Elliot & Co., retaining the New England agency for publications of Collins, of Glasgow, the Putnams and the Appletons, of New York, and doing a large publishing and printselling business. Although the firm assumed the indebtedness of Parker, Elliot & Co., it weathered the financial storm of 1857, and found itself, in better times, in thoroughly sound condition. The name remained the same until Feb. 16, 1859, when Josiah White was taken into partnership, and the title changed to Elliot & White.

This partnership expiring April 1, 1864, Mr. Elliot continued the print business under his own name. In seven years following he built up a business probably unrivalled at that time. His publications were of much artistic merit. His catalogues, issued from time to time, under the title "The Beautiful Home," were treasuries of condensed information. January 2, 1871, he became the senior partner of the firm of Elliot, Blakeslee & Noyes, doing a general fine-art business at 127 Tremont street, until September 1, 1875. Some time before this the business was divided, Mr. Elliot assuming the publishing and general print departments, at 354 (now 594) Washington street, under the old name of L. A. Elliot & Co. Here, and in addition at 538 Washington street, he continued to do business until his death. After having suffered from Bright's disease for years, he died at Wollaston Heights, Quincy, Mass., June 18, 1881. He was a man of absolute integrity, and unflagging attention to business. He dreaded to cheat another as most men dread to be cheated. To instinctive Yankee shrewdness he united a rare sense of justice, and a spontaneous generosity that showed itself in all relations of life, and made for him many life-long friends.

Mr. Elliot married at Springfield, Mass., October 31, 1848, Marcia Orenda Tracy, who died at Wollaston Heights, Mass., March 14, 1880, by whom he had two children.

Mr. Elliot's home was in Mason Village until 1856, with his father until 1848, and from that time in his own cottage. In Boston, at 22 Tyler Street, 12 Concord Square, 10 Concord Square, and, finally, 741 Tremont Street. In 1865, he bought the house No. 49 Rutland Square, in which he lived until 1873, when, for his wife's health, he removed to the corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Avenues, Wollaston Heights. In this house they both died.

Mr. Elliot was a member, at different times, of various social, literary, musical, military, benevolent, and other organizations, in which he held offices. He was a member of Mount Lebanon Lodge of Freemasons. He was a member of the Baptist church in Mason Village, and afterwards of the Rowe street and the Shawmut Avenue churches in Boston, where he was deacon, and the First Baptist of Wollaston Heights. He held but one political office, being the youngest member of the New Hampshire Legislature at some time between 1848 and 1856. He was frequently solicited to stand as a candidate for other offices, but steadily refused.

Mr. Elliot travelled much, both in this country and in Europe, and was a fascinating raconteur. For years he was an occasional contributor to periodicals, on topics connected with travel, history, art, and belles-lettres, and he never knew the mortification of a returned manuscript. In business, in politics, among neighbors, at home, he never failed to exert a cheering and ennobling influence."

On his return, being behind his fellows in consequence, he was unwilling to attend College, and took to mercantile life for six years. Then went to Havana and Europe, returning, went into business in Holyoke and Chicopee until 1879 when he retired and died in Chicopee.

Married dau. of Harvey Chapin, of Chicopee, Mass.

(No. 97.) CHARLES WILLIAM ELIOT, (39) (22) (11) (7) (3) (1) born in Boston, only son of Samuel Atkins Eliot, Treasurer of Harvard College, 1842-53, was prepared for College at the Boston Latin School, and graduated at Harvard in 1853. Was appointed tutor in Mathematics in 1854 by the advice of President Walker, but while he taught, devoted his spare time to the study of chemistry under Professor J. B. Cooke. In 1857 he lectured on chemistry at the Medical School in Boston. In 1858 he was promoted to be Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Chemistry for five years, the grade of Assist. professor being then first created. In 1861 he was relieved of duty in the mathematical department, and placed in charge of the chemical department of the Lawrence Scientific School, where he became well acquainted with the requirements and details of that Department.

In 1863 he went to Europe, studying chemistry, and acquainting himself with the organization of public instruction in France, Germany and England.

While at Vienna in the summer of 1865, Mr. Eliot received and accepted the Professorship of Analytical Chemistry in the Maas. Institute of Technology, then being organized by Prof. Wm. B. Rogers, as a new school of industrial science. He held this until 1867, when he again went abroad, spending fourteen months in France, and in the spring of 1869 was chosen President of Harvard University. He is recognized to-day as the leading educationalist of the country, and his twenty years administration has marked the period of greatest progress and liberal advancement in the history of America's greatest university.

(No. 161.) REV. WILLIAM GREENLEAF ELIOT, (160) (26) (10) (7) (3) (1) married Abbie Adams Cranch. President of Washington University, St. Louis. Forty years pastor of Unitarian Church there. Had daughter, Rose Eliot (lives in St. Louis).

“The death of Wm. Greenleaf Eliot removed from the country and the Unitarian denomination a man of remarkable character, of great influence, and one who accomplished much important work.

One of the most modest as well as one of the most independent of men. It was his often expressed wish that nothing should be said about him in the way of eulogy.

He went to St. Louis in 1834, when he was twenty three years old and remained there since, seeing it grow up from a small town to a great city.

He began the Unitarian church in that place. He founded and helped to build Washington University, an institution based on broad and sound principles of education. He was made its Chancellor in 1872. He may be considered the creator of the Western Sanitary Commission, which did a great work for the soldiers during the Civil War.

He has been the unflinching supporter of the temperance cause, of woman suffrage, and of all movements to elevate the poor and ignorant.

Though he took no prominent part in the anti-slavery movement, he was in private a friend and helper of the colored race, and, when the war came, one of the staunchest supporters of the Union in a city in which .

it was doubted, for a time, whether it would go with the Union or the Rebellion.

His influence in the community and over individuals in the West was as great as that of any man in the whole region. It was the influence of character.

He was a man of ineffable sweetness, and yet with iron in his blood.

He sought no popularity by compromising his convictions.

Revered, earnest, tender, sympathetic, generous, self-sacrificing, loyal, bold, steadfast—there is no anagram of his virtues to be written on his tombstone so rhythmic and melodious as the Aeolian charm of the harp that lies unstrung. His memorial will be the fragrant flowers that spring up on his grave from the seed that he has sown." (JAS. FREEMAN CLARKE.)

One year at Harvard Divinity school. Colleague with his father one and a half years. In 1867 moved to Portland, and has lived there since.

He has sons: Wm. Greenleaf Eliot, b. at St. Louis, 13/10/'66, and Samuel Ely Eliot, b. 22/5/'82, at Portland, Oregon; also daughters: Mary Ely, (b. 22/9/'68, d. 21/4/'78); Dorothy Dix (b. 14/2/'71); Ellen Smith (b. 20/2/1873); Grace (b. 13/9/'75); Henrietta Mack (b. 17/12/'79).

(No. 219) JOHNSON ELIOT, M. D., (215) (26) (10) (7) (3) (1) "son of Samuel Eliot, Jr., and Mary Johnson (daughter of Gov. Thomas Johnson, of Annapolis, Md.), his wife, was born in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, on the 24th day of August, 1814. He received a common school education. When but thirteen years of age, his father died, and much against the wishes of his mother, he apprenticed himself to Charles McCormick, druggist. He remained until 1839, when he was appointed Hospital Steward at the Naval Hospital, in Washington, serving under Surgeons

Foltz and Jackson; during the same year he began the study of medicine, under Dr. Thomas Sewell, matriculating in the Columbian University, D. C., receiving the degree of M. D., in 1842. His thesis being "Amputations." Immediately upon his graduation he was appointed Demonstrator of Anatomy in the same Institution by Dr. Thomas Miller, Professor of Anatomy; he held this position until 1850, when he resigned.

He was one of the founders of the Medical Department of the University of Georgetown, (D. C.), and was assigned to the Chair of Anatomy and Physiology, November 5th, 1849. The Physiology branch he resigned in November, 1852, but continued in that of Anatomy until March 2, 1861, when he resigned it to accept the Chair of Surgery, which position he filled until 1876, when he resigned from active participation in the College duties. During the sessions of 1854 and 1855 he filled, in addition to his other duties, the Chair of Materia Medica. On May 12, 1856, he was elected Dean of the Faculty of the Medical Department of the University of Georgetown, which position he held until the reorganization of the Faculty in 1876. In 1876 he resigned from active service to accept the position of Emeritus Professor and Professor of Clinical Surgery.

In 1869 the honorary degree of A. M., and in 1872 that of Doctor of Pharmacy was conferred upon him. In 1861, '62, '63, and '64 he was Physician-in-Charge of the City Small-pox Hospital. In 1864, he was appointed Surgeon to the Metropolitan Police Force, which position he held until the time of his death, December 30th, 1883.

Dr. Eliot was Surgeon-in-charge of the Providence Hospital, Consulting Surgeon, and one of the Directors of St. John's Hospital, St. Ann's Infant Asylum, Columbia Hospital, Children's Hospital, Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital; a member of the American Medical Association; member of the Medical Society, D. C., Member of the Medical Association, D. C.; Member of the Clinico-pathological Society, D. C.; member of the Alumni of the University of Georgetown, holding at various times offices in each.

On the morning of the shooting of President Garfield, by Guiteau he was summoned by the Police Department to the case; being out seeing his patients, he was notified of the call. His reply was characteristic of his independent spirit: "If they want me they can send for me."

He always contended that Garfield should have been saved; that the wound was not fatal, no organ of importance being wounded; that he was killed by kindness, and that had he been a poor man sent to one of the hospitals, the ball would have been found and his life saved.

He married November 30th, 1850, Mary John, daughter of John Llewellyn, Esq., of St. Mary's County, Md. He had daughters, Katharine Llewellyn (b. 1851, m. Oct. 18th, 1883, Capt. Valentine McNally, U. S. A.); Mary Llewellyn and Nannie Johnson, both unmarried.

Dr. Eliot possessed a fine constitution and a large frame ; his disposition endeared him to both patients and friends. As a teacher of medicine and Surgery, Dr. Eliot is remembered by hundreds of students who have listened to his lectures. His style was more of the conversational character, devoid of ornament.

At the call of Lincoln for volunteers he was among the first to offer his services as a surgeon, but was captured by Stonewall Jackson's men at Chantilly, August, 1861, taken to Headquarters and allowed to return home on parole.

Dr. Eliot was a thorough anatomist, a bold and expert surgeon. He carried his knowledge on the point of his knife. His operations comprised some of the most difficult and rare in surgery. Among them may be mentioned : five cases of ovariectomy ; removal of the superior maxilla, three cases ; amputation at the hip-joint, two cases ; removal of seven and-a-half inches of the humerus ; simultaneous ligation of the subclavian and carotid arteries for aneurism of the arteria inninata ; removal of palato-pharyngeal sarcoma, two cases ; laparotomy for intersception of the intestines, two cases. Dr. Eliot did not publish many articles, but reference may be made to the following papers from his pen ; Knotted Fums ; Bright's Disease ; Stimulants hypodermically ; Large Calculus from a Horse (report) ; Cystic Degeneration of the Thyroid Gland ; Hipotic Abcess (report) ; Amputation of the Finger for Neuralgia following Whitlow ; Aneurism of the Aorta ; Colloid Cancer of the Stomach and Mesentery ; Aneurism of the Arteria Innominata ; Excision of the Elbow-joint ; Strangulated hernia ; Intersusception of the Intestine ; Morphia in Ague ; Diphtheria ; Excision of the Inferior Maxilla of the Left side (report) ; Ovariectomy ; Palato-pharyngeal Sarcoma, two papers ; besides several addresses introductory and valedictory.

In July, 1878, Dr. Eliot, in Amputating the leg of a deaf mute, who had injured himself by jumping from a moving train, contracted a poisoned wound which nearly cost him his life. For months he was confined to his bed. On December 24th, 1883, after exposure to the snow, he contracted pleuro-pneumonia which terminated fatally on December 30th. His funeral took place on January 2d, 1884, from St. Aloysius' Church."
