THE Collection of Manuscripts formed by Walter Macfarlane was purchased by the Faculty of Advocates in 1785 from his niece Miss Janet Macfarlane, for the sum of twenty-one pounds. Among those manuscripts, in addition to the two volumes of Genealogical Collections—now by the permission of the Faculty published for the first time—were The Geographical Collections, 3 vols., the publication of which is shortly to be undertaken by the Society; Collections relative to several Scottish Families, 2 vols.; Index to the Register of the Great Seal to 1762, 5 vols.; Diplomatum regiorum quæ in publicis archivis extant abbreviaciones, 10 vols.; several volumes of transcripts of charters, including the charters of Melrose, Balmerinoch, and other religious houses; and various other transcripts.

The following biographical notice of Walter Macfarlane is taken from The Chiefs of Colquhoun and their Country, by the late Sir William Fraser, vol. ii. pp. 99, 100 :

‘Walter Macfarlane, one of the most laborious and accurate antiquaries of his age, was the son and successor of this John by his wife, Helen, daughter of Robert, second Viscount of Arbutnot. He transcribed with his own hand many old cartularies and muniments deposited in private charter-chests. He was very liberal in allowing access to his valuable collections and transcripts, which are still consulted and often quoted by authors, being regarded as of high authority. To his industry we owe the existence of a copy of the Levenax Cartulary, the original of which is now lost. He married Lady Elizabeth Erskine, daughter of Alexander, sixth Earl of Kellie. Little is known of his history, which appears to have been chiefly that of a student, without any remarkable incidents to record. In Anderson's Diplomata Scotiæ, published at Edinburgh in the year 1739, the learned editors, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Thomas Ruddiman, in an acknowledgment of their obligations to those who contributed the original charters engraved in that great work, notice in favourable terms the assistance given them by the Laird of Macfarlane: "In this list of most noble and most eminent men deserves in particular to be inscribed by us a most accomplished young man, Walter Macfarlane of that Ilk, Esq., Chief of the Macfarlanes, one of the most ancient of the clans, who, as he is conspicuous for the utmost urbanity, and for his acquaintance with all the more elegant, and, especially, the antiquarian departments of literature, most readily devoted much labour and industry in explaining to us the names of men and places." The eulogium pronounced upon him by Smollett is afterwards¹ quoted. He died, without issue, at his town-house in the Canongate of Edinburgh, on 5th June 1767. After his death his valuable collections were purchased by the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh. His portrait, an excellent original painting, which exhibits a remarkably intelligent, manly, and open countenance, occupies a place on the walls of the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, to whom it was gifted in 1786 by his nephew, Walter Macfarlane. This portrait was engraved for the late Mr. W. B. D. D. Turnbull, for the purpose of being introduced into his "Monasticon of Scotland," a work which was never completed.'

The Cash Book of the late William Macfarlane of Portsburgh, W.S., who died on 13th July 1831, contains, under date 1785, the following notice:

'Walter Macfarlane of Macfarlane (20th), of Arrochar, was the second but eldest surviving son of John Macfarlane (19th) of Arrochar and Lady Helen, daughter of the 2nd Viscount Arbuthnot. He succeeded his father 13th May 1705. He married, 21st April 1760, Lady Elizabeth Erskine, daughter of

Alexander, Earl of Kelly, by whom he had no issue. He died in his house in the Canongate, Edinburgh, on the 5th, and was buried in the Grayfriars, Edinburgh, betwixt the two west pillars of the New Kirk, on the 8th of June 1767. He was succeeded by his brother, Dr. William Macfarlane, as 21st of Arrochar, who sold the estate in March 1784, after having been five hundred and fifty-nine years in the family.'

The original sources from which Macfarlane's transcripts have been derived are occasionally indicated by him, and some account of these may be here given.

Martine of Clermont, from whose manuscripts the history of the Balfours, Leslies, Maules, and others has been taken, was George Martine, the elder, born 1635, died 1712. He was secretary to Archbishop Sharp, and author of the Reliquiæ divi Andreae, or The State of the Venerable See of St. Andrews, written in 1683, but not published till 1797. Nothing is now known regarding these manuscripts. The history of the Martines will be found in vol. ii., pp. 183-197, of this work.

The 'Person of Quality' who wrote the genealogy of the Mackenzies (vol. i. p. 54) is said by Sir William Fraser in his Earls of Cromartie, vol. i. p. xii, to have been Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbat, afterwards first Earl of Cromartie, and he states that the original history in manuscript is at Tarbat House. Other authorities—among them the British Museum Catalogue (the Genealogy was published in Dingwall in 1843)—give as the 'Person of Quality' John Mackenzie, second of Applecross, known as 'Ian Mollach,' or hairy John, son of Patrick Mackenzie, and grandnephew of Kenneth, first Lord Mackenzie, of Kintail. Several copies of the manuscript are known to exist in Mackenzie collections. Sir Alexander Muir Mackenzie of Delvine has one in his possession, and in all probability it is the one from which Macfarlane made his transcript. Stonyhurst College possesses another copy, and the editor is indebted to the courtesy of the Rev. Father Coupe, S.J., the present librarian at Stonyhurst, for a description of that manuscript. The archives, he says, give no information as to where the manuscript came from, but he suggests that Kenneth Francis Xavier Mackenzie, who entered the Society in 1739, may have gifted it to the library.

Mr. James Chapman, who is said to have written The Genealogy of the Grants (vol. i. p. 103), was the son of an Inverness merchant. He graduated M.A. at Aberdeen University in 1695, was ordained to the parish of Cawdor in 1699, translated to Cromdale in 1702, and died there in 1737, aged sixty-three.

Matthew Lumsden of Tillycairn, who composed The Genealogie of the Name of Forbes (vol. ii. p. 207), was the second son of Robert Lumsden of Balnakelly and Medlar. He married Anapel, a natural daughter of Lord Forbes. From accounts given of him by the family historian, he does not seem to have possessed a very good character. He died 27th June 1580. The genealogy was published in Inverness in 1819. Mr. William Forbes, by whom Lumsden's narrative was 'improved' (vol. ii. p. 471), belonged to the Corsindae branch of the Forbeses, and was a member of the Faculty of Advocates, having been admitted to that body on 8th February 1696. He received the appointment of Professor of Law in the University of Glasgow in 1714, and held the office till his death on 23rd October 1745. His father, Dr. Thomas Forbes, who, according to the Lyon Register, was descended from the second son of the second Lord Forbes, graduated M.D. at Padua, and was at one time a professor in the University of Pisa.

The account of the House of Ranfurlie (vol. ii. p. 284) was written by David Crawford of Drumsoy (1665-1726), Historiographer Royal for Scotland, author of Memoirs of the Affairs of Scotland, and other works.

Dr. Miln's 'Lives of the Bishops of Dunkeld' (vol. ii. pp. 302 and 304, note), referred to as then in manuscript, has since been published in Transactions of the Literary and Antiquarian Society of Perth, 1827.

The Life of Sir Simon Fraser, who, in 1807, three times defeated the English in one day, was written by Dr. Abercromby (vol. ii. p. 316, and note), and will be found in Abercromby's Martial Achievements of the Scots Nation, pp. 552-7.

In editing these volumes, the editor has endeavoured to reproduce as faithfully as possible the manuscript as it stands. No attempt has been made to fill up the numerous blanks in the narratives, to correct errors, or to rectify the spelling. The only departure from this rule has been the insertion, under the sanction of the Council of the Society, of a translation, by the Rev. Walter Macleod, of the genealogy of the Mackintosh family. The few notes of the editor relate merely to the external condition of the text, as, for example, marking interlineations or additions by others than the transcriber. The notes to which an 'M' is appended have been added to the transcript by Macfarlane, and those between extended lines are in the handwriting of Macfarlane's transcriber, and were, in all probability, in the original manuscripts.

The importance of these collections as sources of genealogical information is evidenced by the fact that they are being constantly used by those making inquiries into family history, and it must be a satisfaction to the Society that, through the appropriate and acceptable action on the part of Sir William Fraser's trustees, and the courtesy of the Faculty of Advocates, they have been enabled to make the collections, hitherto confined to a single manuscript, so much more widely accessible.

EXCERPTS FROM THE GENEALOGICAL COLLECTIONS OF
MR. MARTIN OF CLERMONT.

ACCOUNT of THE FAMILY OF BALFOUR vol. i. p. 99.¹
BETHUNE as I got it from The present
LAIRD OF BALFOUR.

BALFOUR. The Origin and Etymon of The name Balfour See p. 27, at 1.² is Bal, ane Irish Word which signifies a Tower or House, and Oar from The Water of Oar, near which Water The House stands. So The word signifies a Tower on (or at) Oar.

The Coat Armour of Balfour is a Cheveron charged with an Otter's Head erased. It is matriculate so in The Lyon's Books. But it should be a Selch's Head: For Tradition bears That One Balfour of The House of Balfour being at the Be-seiging or Beleaguring of a Castle in Ireland the house was laddered, and this Balfour undertook first to advance up The Ladder; For The King had promised That whoever went first up and returned to witness and declare The State and Condition The House was in, whatever he brought to testify his being in The House, he should have The same for his Cognizance or Arms. So this Balfour brought with him at his Return from The House a Selch's Head erased, and this is The Arms of The antient Family of Balfour to this Day.

The House of Balfour is chief of The Surname carrying The Arms of Balfour quartered w^t The Arms of Bethune; [page 2.]³ For, failing Heirs Male, The Fortune fell to a Daughter who married Monsieur Bethune a French Gentleman who was descended of The House of The Count of Swillie, whose Surname is Bethune. This Gentleman should have changed his Surname and Arms from Bethune to Balfour. But, it not being ordinary in these Times, he only quartered his Paternal Coat of Armour with The Coat of Armour of Balfour as it is yet quartered, and Quartering of Coats was not much known then, and there were few Coats quartered before.

KING Malcolme Canmore (Malcolme The Third) began his Reign in Scotland Anno 1057, & about Nine Years after, to wit, 1066, William Duke of Normandy conquered England. At which Time there came out of England and Hungary sundry Surnames, and out of France came diverse others as Bruce, Balliol, Bethune, &c. See Bishop Leslie and Monepennie their Histories.

In the Year 1292 King Edward of England, surnamed Langshanks, being elected Judge in The Controversy betwixt The Bruce and Balliol upon The Failing of Heirs of King Alexander 3d. of Scotland, Robert Bethune was one of The Barons of Scotland named by King Edward who convened at Berwick for Hearing The Claims of The Bruce and Balliol to The Crown of Scotland. Sir George Mackenzie.

See p. 27, at 2. The old Evidents of The House of Balfour are not yet well perused & considered. Also there is a Precept of Seasine granted by Duke Murdake (Grand Child to K. Robert, 2d. Duke of Albany and Governour of Scotland) in Favours of Archibald Bethune of Balfour, son to John Bethune of Balfour, of The Lands of Holkettle in Fife, dated at Dundee [page 3.] The Day of March 1421, of this Tenor :

See p. 27, at 3. ARCHIBALD BETHUN Fourth Son to The Laird of Balfour was Laird of Pitlochrie and Kapeldrae.

ANDREW BETHUN Fifth Son to The Laird of Balfour was Prior of St. Andrews. Other Notes call this Man Henry.

vol. i. p. 101.

MR. JAMES BETHUN Sixth Son to John Bethun of Balfour was made Arch-Bishop of St. Andrews, Chancellor of Scotland, Abbot of Dumfermline, Abbot of Arbroth, and had been Arch-Bishop of Glasgow, from which he was translated to St. Andrews upon The Death of Arch-Bishop Andrew Foreman in Anno 1524. He was a good, wise, godly and charitable Man, and promoted all his Brethren to Honourable Estates, Places and Offices in The Kingdom, and so great an Interest he had then in The Court that at his Death Anno 1539 he got his Nephew David Bethun (afterwards The Cardinal) secured to succeed him in The Abbacy of Arbroth and Arch-Bishoprick of St. Andrews and Robert Pitcairn his N to succeed to him in The Abbacy of Dumfermline. He builded many Bridges to The Number of Fourteen, viz., The Bridge of Dairsie, The Over and Nether Bridges of Oar, The Bridge of Lochtie, The Bridge of Camron, The Bridge of Kembark, The inner Bridge of Lewchars, The Two Bow Bridges of St. Andrews, and compleated The Guard Bridge. His Arms are upon them all and Six Times on The Guard Bridge. He built also The House of Monymeal (a Mensalkirk of The See of St. Andrews), The Wall about The Yard thereof, and planted The most Part of The Yard with Fruit Trees brought from France, and, when he had compleated it, he gave The same freely to King James 5th in his Minority for his more commodious Hunting in Edinsmoore. He also built The whole Fore-Work of The Castle of St. Andrews and several other Works there. He built The Church of Saint Serfe called Newburne. This Arch-Bishop his great Enemies were Archibald Earl of Angus (called Cheeping Archibald who married King James 4th his Queen Margaret after The Battle of Flowdown) and Sir George Douglas of Pittendreich his Brother whose Malice to him was great. But he after served them same shrewd Turns and cryed Quutts with them to ELIZABETH BETHUN The First Daughter was married to Alexander Kid Provost of Inverness.

JANET BETHUN The Second Daughter was married to The Laird of Durrie of that Ilk and bore
Durrie
The Laird and Andrew Durrie.

See p. 28, at 1.

MARGARET BETHUN The Third Daughter was married to Andrew Subbald of Lethelme or Lethem.

GRISSEL BETHUN The Fourth Daughter was married to James Hay of Foodie. She had a Daughter married to The Laird of Kynneir.

ISOBEL BETHUN The Fifth Daughter was married to John Ferret of that Ilk. She bore a Son who was Laird of .

JOHN BETHUN of Balfour Eldest Son to John Bethun of Balfour with Marjory Boswall his Lady succeeded to his Father and married Elizabeth Monepennie Daughter to Monepennie Laird of Kinkell. She bore these Seven Sons John, James, David, Walter, Thomas, Mr. George and James Bethuns and these Daughters Five Beatrix, Elizabeth, Catharine, Margaret and Janet Bethuns. John Bethun his Eldest Son succeeded him.

JAMES BETHUN Second Son to this John Bethun Laird of Balfour was Laird of Balfarge. He married Helen Melvill Heretrix of a Part of Drummaird and had 5 Sons and 3 Daughters.

See p. 28, at 2.

JAMES BETHUN Son to James Bethun of Balfarge was Arch-Bishop of Glasgow at The Time of The Reformation and then or some Time thereafter he fled to France, and carried with him all The Writs and Evidents of The See of Glasgow with The Vessels and Ornaments of The Cathedral of Glasgow, The Image of our Saviour in beaten Gold and The Pictures of The Twelve Apostles in Silver, all which he consigned in The Hands of The Carthusian Monks at Paris, appointing The same to be redelivered how soon The See of Glasgow should become Catholick again. Under The Government of The Regents in King James 6th his Minority he was forefaulted and deprived of his Living. But after that Queen Mary established him her Resident Ambassador in these Parts, for her Affairs, which Office he enjoyed and faithfully discharged during her Life, and King James 6th at his Majority restored him to his Dignity, Honour and Living employing him likewise for his Ambassador in France. He was a Man Honourably disposed, faithfull to The Queen and to The King her Son, a Lover of his Countrey, and liberal according to his Means to all his Countrey-Men. In his Last Will he bequeathed all his Means to pious Uses, leaving 10,000 Crowns for The Education of poor Scholars being Scotch Men born, by founding a College at Paris. He died Anno 1603, being aged 66 years. He is justly termed that Hospital Bishop.

vol. i. p. 103.

DAVID BETHUN Third Son to John Bethun of Balfour and Elizabeth Monepennie was Arch-Bishop of St. Andrews, Bishop of Mirepoise in France and Cardinal de Monte Cælio, Legatus natus and Legatus a latere to The Pope, as was his Unce Mr. James. (Also see more of him in The Memoirs of The B.B. and Arch-Bishops of St. Andrews. G. M.¹) He feued out The Lands of Kilrinnie to his Nephew John Bethun of Balfour and repaired The Hall of Balfour where his Name and Coat of Armour is, and is different from his Paternal Coat only in The Crest and Motto, The Crest being a Crosier and The Motto Intentio, whereas his Uncle Mr. James The Arch-Bishop his Motto is Misericordia. He was a great Man, did great Things, was Ambassador to King James 5th in France concerning his Marriages First and Last, as Histories do abundantly witness. He was serious and violent for his Religion knowing no better. For his Death it was never justified by any Rational Christian. In short fuit homo superbo ingenio natus, also there was never a good Account of any who was accessory to his Murder. He married by Dispensation, or, at Least, accompanied with Mareon alias Marjory Ogilvie Daughter to The Lord Ogilvie as his Concubine who bare to him Four Sons David, Mr. Archibald, Mr. James, and John Bethuns and these Three Daughters Margaret,

He was murdered in St. Andrews Castle 29th May 1545.

DAVID BETHUN Son to David Bethun The Cardinal was Laird of Melgun. He got a Charter from The Cardinal of the Kirklands of Aberlemno for £5 yearly. The Charter is dated 15th March 1545. He married First Margaret Lindsay Daughter to John Lord Lindsay who bore him

BETHUN The Cardinal's Third Daughter married Lindsay of Vaine, and had 3 Sons and these Daughters Lindsay married to of Fettercarne. Lindsay The Second married Fotheringhame Brother to Powrie Fotheringhame. The Third Lindsay was married to Durhame Brother to Durhame Laird of Grange in Angus.

To conclude all that may be said of David Bethun The Cardinal his Posterity, which was great and numerous, it is to be remembered That The Great Duke of Lauderdale said of The same That there was more of his Blood running in the Veins of the Nobility of Scotland than of any One single Man since his Time. Which being true proves this Account of him but lame. See The Memoirs of The B.B. and Arch-Bishops of St. Andrews, G.M. SEE also, The Posterity of David Earl of Southesk.

Nota. David Bethun Last Laird of Creich having no Children of his own Body and having only One Brother Mr. William Bethun who had but One Daughter who was married to The Laird of Kilspindie did in Anno 1655 or thereby dispone to this James Bethun of Balfour his whole Estate about 80 Chalders Victual with The Burthen of 80,000 or 90,000 Merks or thereby reserving to himself The Liferent of The most Part thereof and his Lady's Liferent of 32 Chalders Victual. He died in Anno 1661, and his Lady married The Laird of Cromlix and died Anno 1670. The Reason why Creich disposed his Estate to this Laird of Balfour was because Balfour's Second Son then David who is now Laird of Balfour and Creich also was Heir of Tailzie their being no Heirs Male except his Brother Mr. William who had but One Daughter which would have put The Fortune out of The Name against The Purpose & Intent of all The former Lairds because of which Creich's Right to Balfour was redeemable by The said David his then Second Son from his Father for Payment of a certain Sum, & Creich judged his Brother Mr. William not so dutifull and kindly to him as he desired. But further The said David Bethun then Second Son to James Bethun of Balfour is nearest Heir to The Last Laird of Creich. For Creich's Eldest Sister Anna Bethun was married to Sir John Moncrief of that Ilk, and did bear to him only Two Daughters. The Eldest Anna Moncrief married to James Bethun of Balfour and was Mother to The said David Bethun who is now Laird and Elizabeth Moncrief who died unmarried. This James Bethun of Balfour died 27th February 1690.

SOME NOTES concerning The Family of BETHUN of BALFOUR.

OUR Historians and Genealogists all agree That The Bethuns of Scotland were not of The antient Scottish Race, but came Originally from beyond Seas in some of The later Ages, but when or upon what Account has not been yet determined with any Certainty.

Mr. Peter Cayer Author of The Funeral Panegyrick on James Arch-Bishop of Glasgow A. 1603 tells us That amongst other considerable Gentlemen of Quality who came to Scotland Anno 1449 in The Retinue of Mary Princess of Gueldres then married to King James 2 was one Mr. Bethun for whom The King conceived a singular Fondness, and therefore to engage him to live in Scotland he married him to The Daughter and sole Heiress of The Baron of Balfour in Fife which gave Rise to The Family of Balfour Bethun and The Bethuns in Scotland.

THIS indefinite and uncircumstantiated Account Mr. Du Chesne Author of The Great Genealogy of The House of Bethun illustrates by endeavouring to determine The Name and Person of this Mr. Bethun who had The Happiness to please The King and enjoy The Heiress. From a great many Probabilities and Conjectures he concludes That it was

James (Jacotin) de Bethun Fourth Son to John Bethun Lord of Baie &c. and Isabell D'Estoutteville his Wife and younger Brother of Robert Bethun Lord of Baie &c. after his Father & Predecessor of The present Duke de Sully in France.

ALL this fine Scheme is indeed plausible enough, but not a Word of it true or founded upon any solid Proof. We know not The least Ground Mr. Cayer could have for what he affirms. None of our antient Historians mention any of The Name of Bethun in The Princess of Gueldres Retinue, and, as to Mr. Du Chesne's Improvements and Conjectures though Jacotin de Bethun lived at that Time, there is not The least Evidence of his ever being in Scotland. Enquerran de Monstrelet a Contemporary Historian, who speaks at Large of him and others of his Kindred, mentions no such Thing no so much as of his ever leaving The Low Countries.

BUT, really, Mr. Cayer The Orator and Mr. Du Chesne The Genealogist, however willing they were to do Justice to The House of Balfour Bethun being at such a Distance and having no Correspondence with this Countrey were not sufficiently acquainted either with The Beginning or antient History of that Family. The Bethuns were of considerable Note in Scotland many Generations before they fell in to The Estate of Balfour, and yet that happened long before The Princess of Gueldres or Jacotin de Bethun were born.

LESLY and some other of our Historians tell us That The Bethuns came from France into Scotland in The Reign of Malcolm 3d., who began to reign 1057, and who died 1093. We know not now upon what Grounds they said so. However, The Thing though not absolutely certain is not at all unlikely; For we are sure That not long after this they made a good Figure in this Kingdom being Lairds of Westhall in Angus.

IN The Reign of King William who succeeded to The Crown A. 1165 but 72 years after The Death of King Malcolm 3d. Robert de Betun is Witness to a Charter of Rogerus de Quincy Earl of Winton to Seyerus de Seaton of an Annuity of The Mill Lands of Tranent.

DAVID DE BETUN and Joannes de Betun are Witnesses to a Charter by King Alexander 2d. (who began to reign A. 1214 and died A. 1249) to The Abbacy of Aberbrothick de Terris in Territorio Kermuir.

BUT a stronger Evidence of The High Station of that Family in these early Times is That both Mr. Prynne and Mr. Rymer mentions Robert de Betun present with King Edward at The Discussing of The Plea for The Crown of Scotland betwixt John Balliol and Robert Bruce. This is confirmed beyond all Doubt by some of The Seals yet preserved that are appended to King Edward's Decision A. 1292 among which is that of Robert de Betune de Scotia. It is The Arms of The Bethun Family in Artois at that Time with a File of Three Pendants in Chief as a Mark of Cadency.

THIS Robert de Betune de Countie de Farfar and several others of that Name are mentioned by Prynne as swearing Allegiance to King Edward A.

DAVID DE BETUNE Miles and Alexander de Betune were at The Parliament of Cambuskenneth Anno 1314 and One of their Seals is appended to The Act of Forfaulture past in that Parliament, which is The same very Coat of Arms that is upon The forementioned Seal of Robert de Betune.

THIS Alexander continuing Loyal to The Royal Family of Bruce is particularly named by Hector Boyse as One of The Leading Men killed on that Side in The Great Battle of Duplin Anno 1332.

THE Family of Bethun of Westhall in Angus continued to subsist for several Generations. But Robert a younger Son of this Alexander married Janet Bafour Daughter of Michael de Balfour of that Ilk and Sister to John Balfour. This Family was likewise Brucean, and, accordingly, when King David Bruce was restored Anno 1342 this John being then after his Father's Death Laird of Balfour was made Vicecomes de Fyffe.

HE dying in a few years about A. 1346 without Children, his Estate fell to John Bethun his Nephew The Son of Robert Bethun and Janet Balfour. This John First of The Bethuns of Balfour acquired from Duncan Earl of Fyffe The Lands of Holkettle. The King's Charter of Confirmation of Earl Duncan's Disposition is still extant, and some little Time after that Earl's Death which happened Anno 1353 by a Charter from his Daughter Isobell Countess of Fyffe he got The Lands of Tollybrecks pro bono et fidei Servitio.

HE married Catharine Stewart a Daughter of The Laird of Innermay. Her Original Seasine of Liferent is still extant Anno 1386.

HIS Son and Heir was John Bethun Second Laird of The Balfour Bethuns who married Stewart Daughter to The Lord Rosaith. There is extant a Service relating to him, and it was he that built The East Part of The House of Balfour which stands to this Day.

HE was succeeded by his Son Archibald Bethun Third Laird of this Family, whose Charter from Duke Murdoch The Governour Anno 1421 is still extant wherein he is designed dilecto nostro Consanguineo Archibaldo Betoun; For he was related to The Royal Family both by his Mother Rosaith's Daughter and Grand-Mother Innermay's Daughter.

Archibald Bethun was succeeded by his Son John The Fourth Laird. He married Catharine Stirling Daughter to The Laird of Keir and got in Tocher with her The Eighth Part of The Lands of Kennoway, which was The Beginning of their Interest there. The Papers relating to him are lost, but he is mentioned as Witness in several Writs of The Neighbourhood that are still preserved.

HE was succeeded by his Son John The Fifth Laird who marrying Marjory Boswall Daughter to The Laird of Balmuto had by her 6 Sons and 5 Daughters. [page 26.]

To him succeeded John Bethun his Eldest Son The Sixth Laird. He married Elizabeth Daughter to The Lord Monipenny of Kinkell. Of which Marriage were 7 Sons and 5 Daughters. He died Anno 1514.

HIS Eldest Son John Bethun 7th Laird succeeded him. He married Christian Stewart Daughter to The Laird of Rosaith by whom he had 2 Sons and 2 Daughters.

JOHN BETHUN his Eldest Son The 8th Laird succeeded him, and was married to Agnes Anstruther Daughter to The Laird of Anstruther. Of which Marriage were 3 Sons and 4 Daughters.

To him succeeded his Eldest Son John 9th Laird who married Elizabeth Pitcairn Daughter to The Laird of Pitcairn and Forthar, but dying without Issue was succeeded by His next Brother Robert Bethun 10th Laird married to Agnes Trail Daughter to The Laird of Blebo. They had 4 Sons and 4 Daughters.

DAVID The Eldest Son 11th Laird succeeded & married Margaret Wardlaw Daughter to The Laird of Torry who bore to him 5 Sons and 3 Daughters.

JOHN BETHUN 12th Laird.

whom it is fit to enlarge in this Place in Respect he was The First Laird of Creich of The Surname of Bethun. Also he was Thesaurer of Scotland and Captain of Falkland which remained with The Sons of Creich till Sir David Murray of Scoone (after Viscount of Stormont) Creich's own Son in Law for The Time obtained The Same by Moyen of Court. This David Bethun conquest and acquired The Lands of Creich from The Littles, Lithills or Liddells in The year 1502. He married Janet (Some Notes call her Jean, others Isobell) Duddingstoun Daughter to The Laird of Sandforde Duddingstoun in Fife. She bore to him a Son John Bethun who succeeded him and Two Daughters Janet & Bethuns. This Laird of Creich being Thesaurer of Scotland and having other good Offices in The Publick resided almost constantly in Edinburgh waiting upon The King, The Session and his Charge, and ordered his Son The Young Laird to stay at Home and look after The Fortune ut infra when we come to him.

JANET BETHUN Eldest Daughter to David Bethun First Laird of Creich and Janet Duddingstoun was married First to Sir Robert Levingstoun of Easter Weyms, & thereafter to James Earl of Arran (Hamilton). She bore to her First Husband Two Daughters both Heretrices and Livingstouns. The Eldest was married to Sir James Hamilton of Finnard Author of The House of Evandale. See The written Notes on Buchanan ad Fol. 124. Lin. 19. He was Bastard Son to The Earl of Arran Hamilton, and bore to him (as The Notes say) James Lord Evandale, Galvine and George Hamiltons and a Daughter Elisabeth Hamilton who was married to Archibald Earl of Argyle called by The By-Name Archibald Roy to whom she bore Archibald Earl of Argyle whom Buchanan calls Gillespicus (which is all One with Archibald) and he married Lady Jean Stewart Natural Daughter to King James 5th begotten upon Elizabeth Bethun Daughter to John Bethun Second Laird of Creich ut infra.

That he was The Son of Lady Margaret Stewart Sister to King James 3d. and The First Earl of Arran of The Hamiltons ; For his Father who married King James 2d. his Daughter was never Earl of Arran because he did not outlive James Boyde who was that Lady's Son of her First Marriage with Thomas Boyde Earl of Arran. She bore to him for certain (Albert. The Notes say otherwise) James Earl of Arran who also was Duke of Chastleherault Prorex and Governour of The Kingdom in The Minority of Queen Mary Daughter to King James 5th. and Sir John Hamilton of Samuelston called John of Clidisdale whose Daughter Elizabeth Hamilton was thrice married, First, to The Laird of Johnstoun, Then, to David Earl of Angus, and, Lastly, to The Laird of Whytelaw, and she also bore Two Daughters, Helena and Margaret Hamiltons although Balfour's Notes by a great Mistake bear That her Children to The Earl of Arran were Three Sons, John The Lord Hamilton, James Earl of Arran who died sans Issue and The Lord Claud Abbot of Paisley after Earl of Abercorne who married Seton Daughter to The Lord Seton and these Three Daughters Elizabeth (or Barbara according to Bishop Leslie) married to James Lord Flyming, Jean married to ~~James~~ Lord Montgomery and Anna or Agnes married to George Lord Gordon after Earl of Huntlie, where I observe this double Mistake in The Notes, First, That James Earl of Arran The Governour was for Certain not Janet Bethun's Grand Child by Livingstoun her Daughter, but he was her Son by her Second Husband The Earl of Arran Lady Mary Stewart's Son, For Sir James Hamilton who married this Livingstoun Heiress of Easter Weyms (Janet Bethun's Daughter) was The Lord Hamilton's Bastard Son, and is always so stiled by Buchanan, and so his Son could never be Earl of Arran. The next Mistake is That her Grand Children (to wit) James Earl of Arran Captain of The Scotch Company in France who never married & turned frantick, John Lord Hamilton Commendator of Arbroth and after Marquis of Hamilton, Lord Claud Hamilton after Earl of Abercorne and Lord David Hamilton who married Kennedy Daughter to The Earl of Cassils, and The Three Ladies above named were all Children to the Governour Duke Hamilton by Douglas The Earl of Morton's Daughter, albeit by Balfour's Notes and Accompt they are made by this Janet Bethun Countess of Arran her Children, at Least, her Grand Children by her Daughter Livingstoun, which is a great Mistake both Ways ; For these being The Governour's Children were Janet Bethun's Grand Children, The Governour being her Son, and I rectified Balfour's Notes.

MARY BETHUN Second Daughter to David Bethun First Laird of Creich and Janet Duddingston his Lady was married to John Lyle of whom Montgomery of Lainshaw is The Lineal Heir (1712), in whose Time The Fortune and Honours perished. She bore to him a Son Lyle and a daughter Jean Lyle married to Sir Neil Mountgomerie Brother to The Earl of Eglintoun or Lord Mountgomerie. But this Family perished about this Time.

vol. i. p. 112.

JOHN BETHUN Second Laird of Creich Son to David Bethun The First Laird and Janet Duddingston was ordered by his Father to attend The Fortune at Home while his Father as Thesaurer of Scotland waited on The King, The Session and his other Offices at Edinburgh. This young Laird of Creich had often Occasion to be at Dundee selling Victual &c. where he contracted Intimacy and Friendship with The Young Constable of Dundee who both resorted much to and haunted The House of John Hay Provost of Dundee and Brother to The Laird of Naughton who kept a Change. He was of good Birth, rich and had a fair Daughter called Janet Hay whom both these Youths courted. But The Young Laird of Creich by The Taverner's Means insinuate with The Young Gentlewoman who had The Credit of her Father's House and kept her Father's Money and Jewels amongst which was a Cabinet with 6000 Merks of Gold in it (a good Sum in these Days). At Length Creich under Promise of Marriage got her with Child, and on a Morning before Day with her own Consent and The Assistance of The Young Constable (who seeing The Matter go so condescended hereto) with some other Associates carried her away with The Cabinet by Broughtie to St. Andrews where placing her with The Constable and his Friends in The best Inn he himself went quietly to The Castle where The Arch-Bishop James Bethun his Uncle resided to whom he declared The whole Business and Purpose. The Arch-Bishop hearing The Relation would needs see The Gentlewoman and The Gold and finding all right as The Young Laird of Creich his Nephew told him he sent for a Priest and married them, and then wrote an Accompt of all to The old Laird of Creich The Thesaurer his Brother, and gave a good Testimony of The Gentlewoman's Birth, Breeding, Desert and Means &c. who was well pleased with The Marriage. Nota. That it is observed & reported for a Truth That The Race and People of Balfour and their Descendents were always black and not beautifull and fair, but That ever after this Laird of Creich married this Janet Hay The Bethuns of Creich have ever been yellow haired for The most Part and of beautifull Countenances.

THIS Janet Hay bore to The Laird of Creich Four Sons David and Robert Bethuns both Lairds of Creich successive and Mr. Archibald and Mr. Galvin Bethuns and these Seven Daughters Janet, Grissel, Christian, Elizabeth, Bethuns.

DAVID BETHUN his Eldest Son succeeded to him.

ROBERT BETHUN his Second Son succeeded to his Brother.

MR. ARCHIBALD BETHUN his Third Son was Dean of Aberdeen and Commissary of Glasgow.

MR. GALVINE BETHUN his Fourth Son was Parson of Govean.

JANET BETHUN his Eldest Daughter married First

Laird of Cranstoun. Next she married

Laird of Craigmiller and bore a Daughter to him called Elizabeth. She parted with him and married Sir Walter Scot of Bucclewgh Elder and bore to him Four Daughters, Grissel Scot married to The Lord Borthwick, Dorothea married to The Laird of Cranstoun Crichtoun, Margaret and Jean.

GRISSEL BETHUN The Laird of Creich his Second Daughter married Sir Walter Scot of Bucclewgh Younger and bore to him Sir Walter Scot of Buccleugh Janet Scot Lady Farnherst (Mother to Sir Robert Ker The Earl of Somerset), Margaret Scot Lady Johnstoun, Mary Lady Blackbaronie, Anna Lady Balmerinloch and Eupham Scot married to Captain of Crawfoord. This Grissel Bethun after The Death of Sir Walter Scot her Husband married Murray of Blackbaronie to whom she bore Murray of Blackbaronie, Sir Gideon Murray Treasurer Depute of Scotland Father to Sir Patrick Murray of Eliebank, William Murray of Knokdiffie & a Daughter called Elizabeth Murray who married First James Borthwick of Newbyres to whom she bore a Daughter called Borthwick married to Mr. Thomas Hamilton after Earl of Haddingtoun and bore to him these Three Daughters Christian Hamilton married to Robert Lord Lindesay, Hamilton married to David Lord Carnegy and Hamilton married to James (Lord Ogilvie after) Earl of Airlie. Thereafter this Lady Haddingtoun married Thomas Hamilton of Priestfield and bore to him Two Daughters Hamilton Lady Grange Kirkaldie and Hamilton Lady Innerweik also Five Sons Sir John Hamilton of Magdalens Clerk Register, Sir Andrew Hamilton of Reidhous, Sir Patrick Hamilton of Little Preston, Mr. Alexander Hamilton General of The Artillery (commonly called Deaf Sandie) and Mr. James Hamilton.

CHRISTIAN BETHUN Third Daughter to John Bethun Laird of Creich married Sir Michael Balfour of Burghlie and bore to him only a Daughter Dame Margaret Balfour who was Heretrix of Burghlie and married Sir James Balfour Clerk Register and bore to him Michael Lord Burghlie.

ELIZABETH BETHUN Creich his Fourth Daughter bore a Daughter to King James 5th. called Lady Jean Stewart who married Archibald Earl of Argyle. But she bore to him no Children, and after this Elizabeth Bethun married Stewart Lord of Innermay and heired his Estate bearing to him Two Sons and Five Daughters, to wit, James Lord Innermay (who married Helen Ogilvie Daughter to The Lord Ogilvie) and Stewart his Brother, also Catharine Stewart married to William Ruthven of Banden, Marjory Stewart married to Lindesay of Vain, Elizabeth

Stewart married to Ochterlonie of Kellie and Jean Stewart married to The Laird of Leyes. Nota. That this Elizabeth Bethun was Lady Innermay and Mother to all these his Children, albeit The Notes say That King James 5th's Daughter was their Mother which is false; For Lady Jean Stewart The King's Daughter and Countess of Argyle was never married but once and was barren and died before her Husband who after her death married Jean Cunynghame Daughter to Alexander Earl of Glencairne who bore only Daughters, and therefore Colin his Brother succeeded to him.

BETHUN The Laird of Creich his Fifth Daughter married Forbes Laird of Rires.

ISABELLA BETHUN The Sixth Daughter married Gilbert Ogilvie of Powrie.¹

vol. i. p. 114.

BETHUN the Seventh Daughter married Chisholme of Cromlix.

DAVID BETHUN Eldest Son to John Bethun Laird of Creich and Janet Hay succeeded to his Father and died unmarried in Anno 1539. He was The Third Laird of Creich.

ROBERT BETHUN Second Son to John Bethun of Creich and next Brother to The said David Bethun The Third Laird of Creich succeeded to his Brother. He went to France as Page of Honour to Queen Mary when she went there to be married to Francis The Dolphin of France after King of France, who did not long outlive The Marriage. The Queen having no Children to him returned Home to Scotland Anno 1561 and with her this Robert Bethun of Creich and was made The Queen's Master Household, Heretable Stewart of Fyffe and Keeper of Falkland. He married Dame Joanna Renwall alias Grysoner One of The Queen's chief Dames of Honour who came out of France with her. She bore to him David and Mr. James Bethuns both Lairds of Creich successive, (Mr. James was First Parson of Roxburgh) also these Eight Daughters

MARY BETHUN Eldest Daughter to Robert Bethun of Creich was One of The Queen's Dames of Honour, an excellent Lady, as appears by The Four Epigrams made by Buchanan on her to her great Praise and Commendation on The Occasion of her being a Queen by Lot. The First begins thus :

Regno animus tibi dignus erat, tibi Regia virtus,
Et Poterunt formam sceptrum decere tuam.
Fortuna erubuit sua munera sola deesse
Quae tibi nunc plena dat cumulata manu.

She married First The Laird of Boyne Ogilvie and then The Laird of Finlatter.

ELIZABETH BETHUN (forte Second) Daughter to this Laird of Creich married Sandilands of St. Monance.

BETHUN another Daughter was married to The Laird of Dun Areskine in Angus.

BETHUN another Daughter was married to David Bethun of Melgum Son to Cardinal David Bethun being his Second Wife.

BETHUN another Daughter was married to Forbes Laird of Rires in Fyffe.

BETHUN another Daughter was married to Claud Hamilton of Cochnay.

BETHUN another Daughter to this Robert Bethun Laird of Creich married Mr. Henry Kinneir Abbot of Balmerinoch.

Also I find That One of The Daughters was married to a Burgess of Dundee.

DAVID BETHUN Eldest Son to Robert Bethun of Creich and Dame Janet Renvall succeeded to his Father. He married Eupham potius Beatrix Leslie Daughter to George Earl of Rothes who bore to him Anna Bethun his only Daughter shortlie after whose Birth he became jealous of [his]¹ Lady being come of The House of Flisk and finding her Carriage not good he intented Process of Divorce from her, but not having nor finding sufficient Probation against her he took another Course and lay with her Gentlewoman and begot on her a Son called Bethun who became a Doctor of Medicine. So he took The Fact upon himself and parted from his Lady & paid her her Dowry. This Lady Creich after The Divorce married John Auchmowtie of that ilk with whom she was suspected before. But she had no Children to Auchmowtie. The Laird of Creich having but One Daughter and being unwilling That The Fortune should go out of The Name of Bethun agreed with his Brother Mr. James The Parson of Roxburgh to make him Laird of Creich upon Condition That he should marrie his Daughter upon a sufficient Baron of as good an Estate as himself which he did ut infra. At this Time was The Fortune of Creich tailzied to The Second Son of The House of Balfour, failing Heirs Male of Mr. James his Body which was One of The Reasons for which The Estate of Creich was disponed to The Laird of Balfour James Bethun under Redemption from him by his Second Son then David who is now Laird both of Creich and Balfour. So then this David Bethun Laird of Creich upon The Bargain with his Brother Mr. James disponed to him The Lands, Fortune, Rents and Charter Chest of Creich.

ANNA BETHUN only Lawfull Child to David Bethun Laird of Creich was by her Uncle Mr. James Bethun married to Sir James Chisholme of Cromblix, and of that marriage are descended The Chisholmes of Cromblix. The Notes say that there was another Daughter married to Weyms of Rungay.

MR. JAMES BETHUN Second Son to Robert Bethun of Creich and Younger Brother to David Bethun of Creich succeeded to his Elder Brother David and was Laird of Creich by Disposition from him. He married twice. First he married Helen Leslie Heretrix of Kinnaird beside Dunbug and she bore to him Two Daughters, The Mother dying in The Birth of The Second, and shortlie after both The Daughters died. Next he married Margaret Weyms Eldest Daughter to David Weyms of that Ilk (called David with The Birken Flower). She bore to him these Sons David, Mr. John, Mr. Robert and Mr. Archibald Bethuns and these Four Daughters Margaret, Elizabeth, Catharine and Helen Bethuns. Nota. When he came to be Laird of Creich he disponed his Parsonage of Roxburgh to Mr. James Bethun Brother to The Laird of Balfour. David Bethun his Eldest Son succeeded to him.

MR. JOHN BETHUN Second Son to Mr. James Bethun Laird of Creich.

MR. ROBERT BETHUN his Third Son.

MR. ARCHIBALD BETHUN his Fourth Son.

MARGARET BETHUN his Eldest Daughter married
Ferny Laird of Wester Ferny of that Ilk.

ELIZABETH BETHUN his Second Daughter married Sir David
Murray Viscount of Stormont, Lord Scoone. But She had no Children.

vol. I, p. 184.

Bears Or an Eagle pearching on an Helmet Gules.

Nota. I find That at an Insurrection of The Hill People of Ross against The Earl of Ross in The Year 1299 they having taken The Earl his Second Son at Balnagowan The Earl of Ross assisted by The Monros and Dingwalls pursued The Highlanders and fought them at Beal-by-na-broig where The Clan-Iber, Clan-Talivach and Clan-Leave were almost utterly extinguished and 140 of The Dingwalls and 11 of The House of Fowlis who were to succeed one another and The Succession fell to a Child in The Cradle for which The Earl of Ross gave Lands to The Monros and Dingwalls.

GEORGE MONRO of Fowlis was Chief and Representative of The Family of Monros in The Reign of King Robert Bruce and was Lineally and Lawfully descended of Donald Lawfull Son to The Chief of O Caan in Ireland called The Prince of Fermonaugh. This Donald came to Scotland with his Sister Aine married to Angus MacDonald of Ylla Lord of The Isles. The People then being much addicted to call Men Patronimically or from The Places from whence they came always called Donald O Caan's Son Donald Abunro and his Successors Abunro in Irish as Irish Writs yet extant do testify and were called in English and Latin Munro and that because O Caan's Residence and Castle was on The Ro Water, and it is informed That this Donald called where he got his Residence in Scotland Fowlis after a Land so called near Loch Feoil in Ireland.

THIS George Monro with his Friends and Followers having owned The Right and Interest of King David Bruce did march under The Command of Archibald Douglas Third Son to William Douglas called The Hardy Brother to good Lord James then General of The Scotch Forces into Northumberland where they fought The English at Halidonhill, and this George was with The General killed and The Scotch routed 22d July 1333. His Son was Robert of whom next. This George had a Brother John Monro aliàs Bac-lawigh who was Tutor to his Brother's Son in his Minority. From this John came The Family of Miltoun.

He married Forrester a Daughter to The Laird of Corstorphine. She bore to him Three Sons Hugh, Thomas and John. Thomas married Heretrix of Duncrub. This Robert Monro was killed in Defence of William Earl of Ross in Anno 1369. He succeeded being Minor and his Tutor was John Monro called John Bac-lawigh because he was mutilate of a Hand in a Conflict with The M^cIntoshes at Clagh-re-herey beside Kepack where The Chief of The M^cIntoshes was killed about 1341, and John Monro Tutor of Fowlis was carried out of The Field half dead by The Lord Lovat having lost One of his Hands in The Fight. From this John are descended The Monros of Miltoun.

HUGH MONRO of Fowlis succeeded to his Father Robert and married Isobell Keith Daughter to Keith Marshall of Scotland, Lady Mareon Cheyne being her Mother. She bore to him George and John Monros. John was The First of Miltoun. This Hugh died Anno 1425.

GEORGE MONRO of Fowlis succeeded to his Father Hugh and married daughter to of Belnagowan. She bore to him a Son and after her Decease he married a Daughter of The Laird of M^cCulloch of Plaids &c. She bore to him John and Hugh Monros. This Hugh was The First of Cowll. This George and his Eldest Son of his First Marriage was killed at The Conflict of Bellachnabrog 1452.

ROBERT MORE MONRO of Fowlis succeeded to his Father Robert, and married Margaret Ogilvie Daughter to Ogilvie of Finlater. She bore to Him Robert and Mr. Hector Monros, and after her Death he married Catharine Ross Eldest Daughter to Alexander Ross of Balnagowan, her Mother being The Earl of Caithness's Daughter, and she bore to him George of Obsdaile, John Monro of Daan and Andrew Monro Predecessor to Lemlair. This Robert with his Friends and Followers waited upon Queen Mary at her being at Innerness. Buchanan Lib. 17 says, 'Audito Principis periculo, magna priscorum Scotorum multitudo, partim excita, partim sua sponte affuit, imprimis Fraserii et Monroi hominum fortissimorum in illis gentibus Familiae.' And Arch-Bishop Spotswood says, 'The Queen being at Innerness upon The Rumour that went of The Danger The Queen stood in there flocked out of all Quarters to her Numbers of Highlandmen, The Frasers and Monros chiefly with their Followers and Friendship.' This Robert Monro of Fowlis was Principal Baillie to The King James 6th in The Earldom of Ross and Lordship of Ardmannoch as may be seen and proven by The 111th Act of The 7th Parliament of King James 6th holden at Edinburgh 24th October 1581. This Robert died in November 1588.

ROBERT MONRO Younger Fiar of Fowlis notwithstanding of his being married several Times died without any Male Succession Three Moneths before The Death of his Father.

MR. HUGH MONCREIF The Third Son married Isobell Hay Daughter to _____ Hay of Megginsh or Pitfour.

[page 65.] MR. DAVID MONCREIF The Fourth Son (says The Tree) married Margaret Beatoun Daughter to _____ Beatoun of Creich. Nota. I suppose this is wrong; For he married Margaret Moncreif Daughter to _____ Moncreif of Balcaskie being Heiress, and so he became Laird of Balcaskie.

JAMES MONCREIF The Fifth Son.

ROBERT MONCREIF The Sixth Son.

CHRISTIAN MONCREIF Sir William Moncreif his Eldest Daughter married Robert Forbes of Rires.

ANNAS MONCREIF The Second Daughter married James Ramsay of Corstan.

CATHARINE MONCREIF The Third Daughter was Lady Logie-wishart.

JEAN MONCRIEF The Fourth Daughter married
Hay of Leys.

NICOLAS MONCRIEF The Fifth Daughter married John Dundas of Fingask.

BETHSHEBA MONCRIEF The Sixth Daughter married Sir David Barclay of Cullerny.

SIR JOHN MONCRIEF of that Ilk succeeded to his Father Sir [vol. i. p. 193.]
William Moncreif. He married twice, First, Anna Beaton
Daughter to David Beaton of Creich. She bore to him a Son William and Two Daughters Annas and Elizabeth Moncreifs.
Thereafter he married Mary Murray Daughter to William or John Earl of Athol. She bore to him Five Sons Sir John Moncreif The Eldest and David, Henry, James and William Moncreifs and a Daughter Margaret.

succeeded to his Father.

WILLIAM MONCRIEF The only Son of The First Marriage died without Issue.

ANNAS MONCRIEF Eldest Daughter of The First Marriage was married to James Beaton of Balfour. She bore to him
Two Sons John who died young and David now Laird of Balfour and Creich.

MARGARET MONCRIEF Daughter of Sir John Moncreif his Second Marriage married (ut puto) George Murray now of Pittencreif Brother to Lord Eliebank.

ELIZABETH MONCRIEF was never married being The Second Daughter of The First Marriage.

DAVID, HENRY, JAMES and WILLIAM MONCREIFS all Sons to Sir John Moncreif of his Second Marriage had no Issue.
David had The Title of Knight Baronet, and now after him
Sir James brooks it.

SIR JOHN MONCRIEF succeeded to his Father Sir John Moncreif of that Ilk being his Eldest Son of his Second Marriage who came to The Estate under great Burthens (through The Profuseness of his Mother which he could not overcome). He sold The Estate to Thomas Moncreif One of The Clerks of Exchecquer by Birth an Orkney Man now Knight Baronet. Sir John is now dead without Issue, and so that antient and honourable Family is now quite extinguished as are also these other Cadets of it, to wit, Easter Moncreif, Colfargie, Wester-Rind and Kintullo. Only Tippermallo stands and is well.

THIS Last Sir John was an accomplished Gentleman discreet and prudent. He never married, and so has no Posterity.

THE Fortune is acquired by Thomas Moncreif who came from Orknay about The Year 1648. He married Bethia Hamilton Daughter to Mr. Alexander Hamilton Writer to The Signet. He has been long Clerk to The Exchequer and Thesaury of Scotland; As yet he has no Issue, but is The richest and has The most opulent Fortune that ever any of The Name had in The Kingdom, and is a Knight Baronet having risen to Riches and Honour by The Favour and Means of John Earl of Crawford Thesaurer of Scotland and by his own Industry and Parsimony.

THE GENEALOGY of The MACKENZIES preceeding The Year 1661 written in The Year 1669 by a Person of Quality transcribed from a Manuscript in The Hands of Mr. John Mackenzie of Delvin Writer to The Signet.

THE Family of The Geraldines were transplanted from Florence (as Cambden relates) to Bretaine in Two Brethren of The Name who accompanying William The Conqueror from France to The Conquest of England Anno 1066 were by him rewarded among other Chiefs by a Share in The Purchase. They settled in The West of England where they lived in The Duty of Peaceable Obedience till Glory called them with Strangbow to Ireland in Assistance of Dermond King of Leinster, in which War they attained to such Repute by The Valour of Maurice FitzGerald, who was The next in Power to Pembrock, that he and others of his Relations were Eyed by The King as fit to attempt a sufficient, at Least, to begin a Conquest for him of that Isle. Nor did they fail his Expectation, that Family and that only at First acquiring and ever retaining what they conquered there.

THIS Family confident of their own Merits, or, perhaps, by an innate Generosity, as they were never at Ease when their Prince had War, so in The Time of Peace they were never amongst those Court Drons that fed on The Honey of other Mens Labours, but being ever notable in War, so they were ever private in Peace, and, because it was below their Humour to truckle under Court Parasits, they therefore frequently smarted under Favourits Odiums. The Records of England and Ireland are stuffed with The Geraldines Actions for their Prince and Countrey and their Sufferings unjustly by Courtiers Malice as often noted. How oft does Ophaly retain, as at First his Predecessors gained, Ireland? And as oft do The State Ministers, who were but Hearers of their Glorious Actings, triumph over them by Pretences of Legal Power. Yet The Fate of The Geraldines was too strong for their Enemy's Malice, and never were cast down so by them but that their Rise was in greater Glory.

THE greatest Stroke that ever reached them was that given by Sir Richard Bothell aliàs Capell, as Holinshed notes; He slew John Fitz Thomas then Chief of The Geraldines and in The Irish Chronicle called Lord John together with Maurice his Eldest Son Anno 1261. John his Son called also by Holinshed Lord John fled to England whence he was restored to his Barony of Ophaly and afterwards created Earl of Kildare by King of England Anno 1290.

HIS other Two Sons Colin and Galen fled to Scotland where they were graciously received by King Alexander, and The next Year 1262 they valourously assisted at The notable Defeat given to The Dains at Largs. This is brought down to us not only by unquestioned and constant Tradition but in a Fragment of The Records of Iycolumkiel that is preserved by Sir George Mackenzie of Tarbet, where Mention is made of The most eminent Actors in that Battle. They name with The Steuart & The Cummin Walter Steuart Earl of Carrick and March The Thayn of Argyle, Robert de Loudon, James de Striveling, Walter Cummin, Thomas Maltiver, Perigrinus et Hibernus, Nobilis ex Familiâ Geraldinorum, qui proximo Anno ab Hiberniâ pulsus, apud Regem benignè acceptus hucusque in Curtâ permansit, et in præfato Prælio strenuè pugnavit.

FROM this Battle of Largs Walter Steuart was sent with Forces to reduce The Isles then associate with The Norwegian. To retain them in Obedience he built a Fort in Kintail which took it's Name from it's intended Use, and was called The Danting Isle fitly situate to attack any who stirred in a great Part of The Isles, and in it they placed Colin Fitz Gerald with a Garrison. This, as it is transferred by Tradition, so The said Fragment asserts The same with The Account of that Expedition made to The Isles speaking of these who encouraged Walter Steuart among other Names this Gerald with this Note de quo supra in Prælio ad Larges, qui postea se fortiter contra Insulanos gessit, et ibi inter eos in præsidium relictus, being left in Kintail. Tradition says He married The Daughter of M^cMahon Heritor of The Half of Kintail. This M^cMahon, which ineptly is Englished Matthison is descended of The antient Fitzursuli or Ursini of Ireland and are of The Roman Lineage. The other Half of Kintail at this Time belonged to O Beolan, whose Chief called Ferquhar was created Earl of Ross, and his Lands in Kintail were given by The King to Colin Fitz Gerald. This Tradition carries enough of Probability to found Historical Credit. But I find no Charter of these Lands proorting any such Grounds; For that First Charter of Kintail is given by this King Alexander to this Colin Anno 1266. It being The First, I shall relate it's full Tenor. Alexander Dei Gratiâ Rex Scotorum Omnibus probis Hominibus totius Terræ suæ Clericis et Laicis Salutem. Sciatis præsentis et futuri me pro fideli servitio mihi navato per Colinum Hibernum tam in Bello quàm in Pace ideo dedisse et hâc præsentis Cartâ meâ concessisse dicto Colino et ejus Successoribus totas Terras de Kintail Tenendas de nobis et successoribus nostris in liberum Baroniam cum Guardia Redden.

Servitium forinsecum et Fidelitatem. Testibus Archibaldo Episcopo Moraviensi, Waltero Steuart, Henrico de Baleoch Camerar, Arnald. de Campan. Tho. Hostiar. Vicecomite de Innerness. Apud Kincardine IX Die Jan. Anno Regni Domini Regis XVI. This Kincardine may be that, probably, on Dee; For about this Time it is reported That, The King hunting in The Forrest of Mar, a Hart pursued him and with Probability to have hurt him if Colin Gerald had not killed him in his Approach with an Arrow. For which Cause The King allowed a Hart's Head pussant bleeding from a Wound in The Fore Head to be his Coat Armorial supported by Two Gray Hounds, The Head in a Field Azure, which all descending of him have ever since carried.

This Colin had a Son by M^cMahon's Daughter whom he Named Kenneth after Kenneth Matthison his Father in Law Colin was killed at Glackchailen in Lochailsh by The M^cMahons envying his Succession to Their old Heritage. But The Garrison consisting mostly of Mac Raes and Mac Lennans did so valiantly defend their Young Master's Right that maugre his Opposers they retain his Possessions to him. To Colin succeeded this Kenneth. It seems The Government of The Fort was Heritably conferred on this Family; For, as there is no Mention of any Change, so we find those Isles kept Peaceably, and, when any Stirs were raised, assoon did this Garrison dissipat them. Buchanan insinuates anent these Islanders as if they were retained in Peace by The King's Ministers, but tells not who these were, these remoter Actors and Actions being little noticed by Historians whose Information as well as Knowledge did not oft exceed The adjacent Provinces.

ALL that descended of this Kenneth were by The Highlanders called Mac Chainichs taking The Patronymick from The Mac Mahon rather than from Colin whom they esteemed a Stranger. He married Morba Daughter to Mac Dougal of Lorne.

To Kenneth succeeded Kenneth his Son by Mac Dougal's Daughter and Sister Daughter to Cummin Earl of Athol. Yet, albeit Mac Dougal sided with The Baliol against The Bruce, Kenneth did own The other Partie, and was One of those who sheltered The Bruce in his Retreat and assisted him in his Recovery. I shall not say He was The only. But this stands for that Assertion That all who were considerable in The Hills and Isles were Enemies to The Bruce, and so cannot be presumed his Friends. The Earl of Ross William did most unhandsomely and inhumanely apprehend his Lady at Tayne and delivered her to The English Anno 1305: Donald of The Isles on Rothell or rather Ranald with all The Hebrides

Armed against The Bruce, and were beat by Edward Bruce at Deir in Buchan Anno 1308.

ALEXANDER Earl of Argyle parted The Baliol. His Country therefore was wasted by Bruce Anno 1304 and himself taken Prisoner by him Anno 1309.

Mac Dougal of Lorne fought against The Bruce and took him Prisoner. From whence he notably escaped. So That there is none in The District left so considerable as this Chief who had an immediate Dependence on The Royal Family, and had this strong Fort, which was never commanded by The Bruce's Enemies either English or Scotch, and That his Shelter and Assistance was from a remote Place and Friend is evident in all our Stories.

[page 89.] But all The Neighbours being stated on a different Side from The Mackenzies ingendered a Feud betwixt him and them, especially, The Earl of Ross and Donald of The Isles, which never ended but with The End of The Earl of Ross and Lowering of The Lord of The Isles.

To Kenneth The Second of The Name succeeded Kenneth The Third of that Name. He married Finguala Daughter to MacLeod of Lewis. Before his Marriage he had Three Bastard Sons, viz. Hector Birrach. He married Helen Loban or Logan of Drumnamargne but forced from his Right by The Oppressions of The Earl of Ross Superior of Drumnamargne he turned Outlaw and died at Edderachilish having a Son called Henry of whom are descended The Sleight Henrick there. The Second Bastard was called Fewald Deirgaldach. Of him are descended John Mackenzie Commissary Depute of Ross thereafter in Cromarty and Mr. Rorie Mackenzie Minister at Croy with several others. The Third Bastard was called Alexander of whom are descended many of The Commanes of Brae Ross.

THIS Kenneth was called Kenneth Nistroin from his Great Nose. He was surprized by his Enemy The Earl of Ross and executed at Inverness. He had by MacLeod's Daughter Murdoch Dow and by another Wife Murdoch Riach. Kenneth murdered thus by The Earl of Ross, his Estate was possessed by The Oppressor's Followers. But Isleandounnan kept still out maintaining themselves on The Spoil of The Enemy. All being trod under by Insolence and Oppression, Right had no Place. This was during David Bruce his Imprisonment in England. One MacCaula, who commanded Isleandounnan, when he knew That The Earl of Ross had murdered his Master, conveyed his Son for Safety to MacCoule of Lorne. He married Daughter to MacCaula of Lochbroom. This MacCaula was killed by Leod MacGillandris. So The First Rights of The Lands of Lochbroom and Cogach fell unto Murdoch in Right of his Wife. But The Earl of Ross Superior of them assumed to himself by Force. Yet Murdoch assisted by his Cousin MacLeod of Lewis revenged his Brother in Law's Death on Leod; For Leod having appointed a Rendezvouz at Keam-Loch-Ew in Order to have spoiled Mackenzie's Lands, Murdoch prevented him by keeping The Rendezvouz and seizing on all Leod's People as they came he killed himself and made Paul his Son Prisoner. This Paul was released, and turned a common Depredator. Having drawn Murdoch Riach Brother to Mackenzie in Association with him they oft spoiled Caithness, where at Last Murdoch Riach was killed by Budge of Toftinga, and Paul obtained Peace from The Earl of Ross by giving his only Daughter to Ross of Balnagowen in Right of which Wife he enjoys The most of Stracharron and Strahockell.

DURING this turbulent Age Securities and Writs as well as Laws were little regarded. Each Man's Protection lay in his Strength till David Bruce's Return Anno 1357. The Kingdom being more Peaceable, and Law was more regarded. There is a Charter granted by David King of Scotland to this Murdo filio Kennethi de Kintail &c. Dated at Edinburgh 1362 et Regni Domini Regis 31. Testibus Waltero Senescallo Ramsay et Aliis.

To Murdoch Dow succeeded Murdoch Nidroit his Son so called because his Mother being with Child of him had been saved after a Fearfull Fall from The Bridge of Scattoll into The Water of Connan. He married Fingala Daughter to MacLeod of Herries. King Robert gave him a Charter at Edinburgh Anno 1380. Testibus Gulielmo de Douglas, Archibaldo de Alloway et Joanne Cancellario Scot.

THIS Murdoch was The only Chief in The North Highlands that refused Assistance to MacDonal'd when he fought against The Governour's Forces at Harlaw. This Family esteeming The Authority of The Magistrate as an inviolable Obligation, he was Prisoner by The Earl of Ross at Dingwall but was released in Exchange for Balnagowne who was taken for that End by some of Mackenzie's faithfull Servants. To Murdoch succeeded Alexander for his Righteousness called Inrick. He was The chief Instrument that settled The Earldom of Ross to The King after The Resignation thereof Anno 1477.

FOR which good Office he had some Part of it, viz. Strachonnan, Stragarriue and others disposed to him by a Charter dated at Edinburgh in September that Year. He married [page 91.] First Anna Daughter of MacDougal of Lorne by whom he had Kenneth and Duncan of whom is descended The Families of Logie and Hiltown, and by his Second Wife Margaret Daughter to MacDougal of Morir he had Hector The First of The House of Gairloch.

KENNETH his Eldest Son was in his Father's Lifetime married to Margaret Sister to Donald Lord of The Isles (and Daughter to John of Isla) who is accounted Earl of Ross but wrongfully; For this was long after The Resignation of The Earldom to the King. By her he had One Son called Kenneth Oig, that is Younger. But on a Discord with her Brother Donald of The Isles he sent her Home, the Grief whereof shortly killed her. This renewed The old Feud to a fatal Height which shortly ended in The Ruin of M^cDonald and in The Period of all his Pretences to Ross; For M^cDonald convocate a great Power to extirpate Mackenzie. On The other Side Kenneth had but few yet all Men of tried Valour, w^t whom at Blairnypark he overthrew Donald, killed most of his Men and all his Commanders and took himself Prisoner, whom he released some Moneths thereafter on Oath never to pretend to Ross or any Part thereof thereafter. At this Battle was killed Gillespick, a Bastard Brother of John of Isla, a valiant Man, and Father to Alexander MacGillespick, of whom by a Daughter is descended The House of Glengarrie, and on which Pretence they ridiculously found a Claim to The Succession of The Earldom of Ross, whilst not only Gillespick was a Bastard, as several Writs in Ross, especially, in Fowl's Evidents carry expressly, but also John The Lawfull Son and Brother to this Gillespick invaded The Earldom long after his Father had resigned it to The King. This Kenneth called Kenneth i'vlaire from that Victory married to his Second Wife Anne Daughter to The Lord Lovitt by whom he had John, Alexander, Rorie and Mr. Kenneth. Of Alexander are descended Davachmaluoch, which is numerous. Of Rorie The Family of Achilty, Fairburne and Tollie and of Mr. Kenneth The Family of Suddy, Ord and Inverlael. Kenneth i'vlaire lived all his Lifetime a good and Peaceable Subject to his Prince and Friend to his Neighbours. He is buried at Beau-liew at Mackenzie's Isle on The Right Side of The Altar. Kenneth died leaving his Children young under The Tutory of Hector his Brother; For Duncan had more Courage than Prudence.

KENNETH OIG The Son of The First Marriage died Young; For being amongst those that King James The Fourth secured at Edinburgh as Hostages for keeping The Highlands in Peace and escaping thence was killed by The Laird of Buchannan near The Torwood (Buchanan being at this Time an Outlaw) and thereby Buchanan was reconciled to The King. For having killed Young Mackenzie, he took MacIntosh who had escaped with him. Of a Natural Son of this Kenneth Oig are descended The Mackenzies in The Braes of Mar.

DURING Hector's Tutory Sir William Monro of Fouls, Baillie to The Duke of Ross, a Man of a high Spirit, but insolent, oppressed The Mackenzies. At Last his Actings incited Hector to such Resentments that, Sir William having convocate a great Number and with them pillaged such Places of Brae-Ross as belonged to Mackenzie, Hector in his Return fell upon him with a few but resolute Number, recovered The Spoil and chaced all Sir William's Forces and killed many, especially, of The Names of MacCulloch and Dingwall at a Place called Knock-Ferrell or Mount Ferrell in Strapeffer. Some Animosities arose after Kenneth Oig's Death betwixt Hector and his Pupill John (who succeeded his Brother) anent The Tutory which continued a long Time but was totally removed in The Time of Colin Earl of Seaforth. This Hector was a Man of great Valour and Prudence, and in his own

Time purchased a Part of Gairloch, which afterwards was wholly acquired by his Successores and now enjoyed by them.

To Kenneth i'vlaire John Eldest Son to Lovitt's Daughter succeeded. He married [Elisabeth Grant]¹ Daughter to The Laird of Grant, and was a Man of extraordinary Prudence whereby he had The Esteem of an eminent Person. He was Privy Counsellor to King James The Fifth and to Queen Mary. In his Time he purchased much of The Brae-Lands of Ross and secured both what he had acquired and what his Predecessores had by well ordered and Legal Security. So That it is doubtfull whether his Predecessores Courage or his Prudence contributed most to The Rising of his Family. He was of a great Age, died at Inverchonran 1561, and is buried with his Father in Beauliew. He had only One Sister who was married to Rorie M^cLeod of Lewis.

To John succeeded Kenneth The Fifth of that Name. He was served Heir to his Father Anno 1561. He married Elisabeth Steuart Daughter to the Earl of Athol, and by her had Colin and Rorie. Of Rorie are descended The Families of Readcastle and Kinraig. This Kenneth was a Man of good Qualifications. He carried so prudently that he had The good Liking of his Prince and Peace from his Neighbours. He had many Daughters. One of them married Glengairrie and after Glengairrie's Death To The Chisholme of Comer. Another married to Belnagowen, One to MacIntosh, One to Cromartie, One to Fowles, and One to Innes of Innerbreackie. He sent his Eldest Son to join with Huntley for The Queen after her Escape from Loch Leven. Huntly sent Colin as One whose Prudence he confided to advise The Queen's Retreat to Stirling, where she might stay in Security till all her Friends were convocated. But by unhappy Counsel she refused this Advice & fought at Longside, where Colin was present, and when by The Regent's Insolence after that Victory, all The Loyal Subjects were forced to take Remissions for their Duty, as if it were a Crime, amongst The rest Mackenzie takes One, The only One that ever any of his Family had, and this is rather a Mark of his Fidelity than Evidence of Failure and an Honour, not a Tash, to his Posterity. Ere he returned his Father Kenneth died at Killin The 6th June 1568, and was buried with his Father in Beawlie.

COLIN succeeded his Father Kenneth. He was called Colin Caume because he wanted an Eye. During The Civil Wars and Debates after Langside he meddled with no Party. But when King James The Sixth took The Government, there was none in The North for whom he had greater Esteem than for this Colin. He made him One of The Privy Counsellors and oft Times invited him to be Nobilitate. But Colin always declined it aiming rather to have his Family remarkable for Power as it were above their Quality than for Titles that equalled their Power, albeit his Predecessores were active both in War and Peace and prudent in acquiring their Estate, yet this Man acquired more than all that went before him, and made such a solid Progress in it that what he acquired was with The Good Will of all and by clear unquarrelable Titles. In his Time The seed of War was sown betwixt Glengairrie and him, and grew by The Outragious Sorninges of Glengairrie's Followers and The sharp Resentments of Rorie of Readcastle against them. But Colin did prudently dissemble some Inquiries rather than fall into Hostility which he well knew would not be so easily accorded if noticed. He bought several Lands from Glengairrie, and wodset others. He acquired Right from Bishop Lesly to several Lands of The Bishoprick which The Regent had sacrilegiously forced from him and detained by The Monros of Miltoun. But Mackenzie following The juster Side attained to The former Title, and at Last secured by Law he owned his Right by Force and expelled The Monros from their unjust Pretensions, in which there were some Skirmishes but always with Advantage on The Mackenzies Side. He protected his Cousin Torkill MacLeod of Lewis when he was oppressed by his unnatural Relations and natural Uncles, and from this he acquired a Right to The Lands of Assint, albeit The Possessores being always Outlaws kept him long from The Possession of that Purchase. He married Barbara Grant Daughter to The Laird of Grant, and by her had many Daughters whom he married thus, One to

Simon Lord Lovitt, One to MacLean, and One to MacDonald of Slait. His Sons were Kenneth, Rorie, Alexander and Colin, and by Margaret Mackenzie Daughter to Davachma-luach he had another called Alexander. Of Rorie are descended The Families of Tarbet, Scatwall and Tarvie and Bolton. Of Alexander Kilcoy, Muir and Findone. Of Colin Kinnock and Pitlundie. Of The other Alexander Applecross, Cowl and Assint.

THIS Colin lived beloved of Prince and People, and died Regreted by all The 14th of June 1594 at Readcastle, and was buried at Beauliew.

KENNETH his Eldest Son The Sixth of that Name succeeded to him. He is served in all his Father's Lands holden of The King in November 1594. He married Ross Daughter to Belnagowen by whom he had Colin and John, Barbara who was married to The Lord Rae and Janet who was married to Sir Donald MacDonald of Slait Nephew and Heir to The former MacDonald of Slait. After her Death he married Isobell Ogilvie Daughter to Powrie Ogilvie, and by her had George, Thomas and Simon and Sibilla who was married to MacLeod of Herries.

THIS Kenneth was truely of an Heroick Temper, but of a Spirit too great for his Estate, perhaps, for his Countrey, yet bounded by his Station so as he resolved to seek fit Employment for him abroad. But no sooner had he gone to France but Glengairrie most outrageously without any Cause and against all Equity and Law convocates Multitudes of People and invades his Estate sacking, burning and destroying all. Kenneth's Friends sent Mr. John Mackenzie of Tollie to inform him of these Wrongs; Whereupon he made a speedy Return to an Affair so Urgent and so suitable to his Genius; For, as he never offered Wrong, so he never suffered any. His Heat did not overwhelm his Wit; For he took a Legal Procedure, obtained Commission of Fire and Sword against Glengairrie and his Accomplices, which he prosecute so bravely as in a short Time by himself and his Brethren he soon forced them to retreat from his Lands, and following them to their own Hills he so dissipate and destroyed them that Young Glengairrie and many others of their boldest Men and most outrageous were killed and The rest forced to shelter themselves amongst The other MacDonalds in The Islands and remote Highlands leaving all their Estates to Kenneth's Disposal. In which Condition they remained all his Lifetime. This was esteemed so good Fortune by King James that he Nobilitate Kenneth making him by Patent Lord Kintail Anno

He reduced Assint, to which his Father had acquired Right and made them Peaceable. On their Submission he gave a few of Assint to Donald MacNeil aliàs MacLeod for Service. The Lewis at this Time was possessed by a Rebellious Crew, Seven or Eight Bastard Sons of Rorie MacLeod of Lewis, who turned Turkle, The Righteous Heir out of Possession and became so Rebellious that on their Default The Lewis and it's Inhabitants are proscribed, and their Isle with others adjacent disposed to Balmerinloch, Balcornie, Wormistoun and others as a Place to be planted, which they attempted, but with bad Success; For they were thrice forced from it by those Bastards; The Righteous Heir Turkle being all The While sheltered by his Cousin Mackenzie kept only The Coigach of all his just Possessions and The Evidents of The rest. These he gave in Custody to Mackenzie. At Last, his only Son John being murdered by these Rebels, he disposed his Estate to his Daughter Margaret, whom he married to Rorie Mackenzie Brother to Kenneth. But both of them were unable to reduce these Rebels, and by Turkle's Sloth and Necessities The Fife Adventurers had acquired Legal Titles. But The Bastards kept Possession against both The Fife Men and Turkle's Right till, at Last, Turkle and Rorie making over The Title of The Lewis for certain other Lands disposed to Rorie & Sums of Money advanced to Turkle's other Daughter. The Fife Men also wearied with frequent Defeats, their Title also was disposed to Kenneth, and he Armed with a Commission against The Rebels invaded them, forced them to retreat, and resolving to attack them shortly with a greater Force he returned to Ross where he died at Brahan Anno 1611 and was buried at Beauliew with his Predecessors. By Reason of his great Business and Troubles he was forced into great Expences whereby he left his Estate in great Burthen to The Management of his Brother Rorie on whose Judgement in all his Affairs he had ever great Confidence.

ROBIE finding his Brother's Fortune under much Debt and The Family necessarily involved in Feuds and Wars with Glengairrie and The Rebels in The Lewis, fearing That he should not overcome those Difficulties was loath to engage in The Tutory. But, when all others refused to undergo The Charge, he set resolutely to The Work. The First he did was to assault The Rebels in The Lewis, which he did so suddenly after his Brother's Death and so unexpectedly to them that what The Fife Adventures had spent many Years and much Treasure in without Success he in a few Moneths accomplished; For having by his Youngest Brother Alexander chased Neil The Chief Commander of all The rest from The Isle pursued him to Glasgow, where apprehending him he delivered him to The Council, who executed him immediately. He returned to The Lewis, banished those whose Deportment he most doubted, and settled The rest as Peaceable Tenants to his Nephew. Which Success he had with The more Facility, because he had The only Title of Succession to it by his Wife, and they looked on him as The just Master. From thence he invaded Glengairrie who was again recollecting his Forces. But at his Coming they dissipate and fled. He pursued Glengairrie to Blairy in Morray, where he took him, but willing to have his Nephew's Estate settled with Conventional Rights rather than Legal he took Low-Country Men Sureties for Glengairrie's Peaceable Deportment, and then contracted with him for The Reversion of The former Wodsets which Colin of Kintail had acquired of him, and for a Ratification and new Disposition of all his Lands formerly sold to Colin, and paid him 30,000 Merks in Money for this, and gave him a Title to Laggan Achindrom, which till then he possessed by Force. So That Glengairrie did ever acknowledge it as a Favour to be overcome by such Enemies who over Disobligements did deal both justly and generously.

ROBIE employed himself thereafter in settling his Pupill's Estate, which he did to that Advantage that ere his Minority past he freed his Estate leaving him Master of an opulent Fortune and of great Superiorities; For he acquired The Superiority of Fronterness with The Heritable Stewartry of The Isle of Sky to his Pupill, The Superiority of Rassay and some other Isles. At this Time MacLeod, partly by Law, partly by Force had possessed himself of Slait and Fronterness a great Part of MacDonald's Estate. Rorie now Knighted by King James owned MacDonald's Cause as an injured Neighbour, and by The same Methods that MacLeod possessed Slait and Fronterness he recovered both from him marrying The Heir thereof Sir Donald MacDonald to his Neice Sister to Lord Colin, and caused him take The Lands of Fronterness holden of his Pupill. Shortly after that he took The Management of MacLean's Estate, and recovered it from The Earl of Argyle who had fixed a Number of Debts and Pretences on it. So by his Means all The Isles were composed and accorded in their Debates & settled in their Estates, from whence a full Peace ensued amongst The Islanders, MacNeil of Barray excepted, who had been an Hereditary Out-law. Him by Commission Sir Rorie reduced, took in his Fort of Kisemull, and carried him Prisoner to Edinburgh, where he procured his Remission. The King gifted his Estate to Sir Rorie, who restored it to MacNeil for a Sum not exceeding his Expences and holding it of himself in Feu.

THIS Sir Rorie, as he was beneficial to all his Relations, establishing them in free and secure Fortunes, he purchased considerable Lands to himself in Ross and Morray besides The Patrimony left him by his Father The Lands of Coigach and others which in Lieu of The Lewis were given him by his Brother. His Death was regreted as a Public Calamity, which fell out in September 1626 in The 48th year of his Age.

To this Sir Rorie succeeded Sir John Mackenzie of Tarbet, and to him Sir George Mackenzie. Of whom to write might be more Honour to him than Safety to The Writer as Matters now stand.

To Kenneth Lord Kintail succeeded Colin. His Minority [page 98.] past with Advantage to his Affairs under his Uncle's Tutory. He married Margaret Daughter to The Earl of Dumfermling Chancellor of Scotland, by whom he had several Children. But all of them died before him, except Two Daughters.

Jean married to The Master of Berridale Heir to The Earl of Caithness and thereafter to The Lord Duffus and Anne married to Alexander Earl of Balcarras and afterward to Archibald Earl of Argyle.

THIS Colin was a Noble Person of virtuous Endowments beloved by all good Men, especially, his Prince. He made him Earl of Seaforth Anno 1623. He fell into Legal Debates with The Earl of Argyle which necessitate him oft to Court, and thereby to Expence and Debt, and, albeit he retired from Court in Order to recover his Fortune from Burthen, yet his short Life allowed him not Success. He acquired and settled The Right of The Superiority of Mudiart and Arosaig The Captain of Clan Ranald's Lands which his Father Lord Kenneth formerly claimed Right to but lived not to accomplish it. Thus all The Highlands and Isles from Ardnamurachan to Strathnaver were either The Mackenzies Property or under their Vassalage, some very few excepted, and all about him were tied to his Family by very strict Bonds of Friendship or Vassalage, which, as it did beget Respect from many, it begot Envy in others, especially, his Equals. He died at Chanonrie Anno 1632, and was buried there in a Place destinate for that by himself. His Brother John died before him without Heirs Male. So The Estate fell to George The Eldest Son of Kenneth Lord Kintail by his Second Marriage with Isobell Ogilvie. Thomas The Second Son had The Estate of Pluscarden transferred to him, and Simon The Third had The Estate of Lochslin. Of this Simon is descended Sir George Mackenzie of Rose-haugh.

GEORGE Earl of Seaforth succeeded his Brother Colin. He married in his Brother's Lifetime Barbara Daughter to The Lord Forbes, and by her had Kenneth, George, Colin and Rorie & Three Daughters. Jean married to The Earl of Mar and afterwards to The Lord Fraser, Margaret to Sir William Sinclair of May and Barbara to Sir John Urquhart of Cromertie.

[page 99.] THIS George being a Nobleman of excellent Qualifications shared in The Fortunes of his Prince King Charles the First, for whom he suffered all The Calamity in his Estate that envious or malicious Enemies could inflict. He was made

Secretary by King Charles The Second in Holland, but died in that Banishment before he saw an End of his King and Countrey's Calamities or of his own Injuries. He died at Schidam, and is buried there 1651.

KENNETH Earl of Seaforth succeeded to his Father George both in his Fortune and in his Fate at First; For The Rebels possessing The Authority oppressed all The Loyal Subjects and him with The First. His Estate was overburthened to it's Destruction. But Nothing could deter him so as to bring him to forsake his King and his Duty. Where-ever any was in The Field for him he was One seconding that falling Cause with all his Power, and, when he was not in The Field against The Enemy, he was in The Prison by them untill The King's Restauration, whereby he attained to his Wishes in his Prince and to The Geraldine Fate in himself, which, as was remarked by many, so more narrowly by that famous Writer Geraldus Cambrensis.

THE GENEALOGY of The Successors of HECTOR ROY MACKENZIE The only Son of The Second Marriage of The Seventh Laird of Kintail.

HECTOR ROY MACKENZIE after The Death of his Eldest Brother's Son Kenneth Alick did all he could to keep his Eldest Brother's Children gotten with The Lord Lovitt's Daughter from The Estate. But after some Wrangling John The Eldest of them, though very young, dispossessed him thereof, and made him acknowledge him as his Chief, and yet was content to give him The Administration of his Estate as Tutor for Six Years, during which Time he attended The Court for his Education. Hector mean while managed his Affairs against all The Malice of his Adversaries. For Sir William Minro of Fowles having The Place of Lieutenant of The Earldom of Ross, he came to hold Courts to The Town of Kinnellan, which was then One of The Places of Mackenzie's Residence, where there were Two fair and large Barns after The Manner of those Times and Sir William to put an Indignity on Hector The Tutor would needs have One of The Barns carried away to Fowles, which was done without Opposition. The Tutor residing else where at that Time. But, how soon he was told of it he sent a Gentleman to acquaint Sir William That The other Barn he left was as good as that he took away, but That he doubted it might be worse to carry, seeing he resolved to wait upon him in The Place. Sir William by his Answer discovered his Intentions of accepting The Challenge, and accordingly took his Opportunity of Carrying away The other Barn. But being overtaken by Hector with Seven Score of his best Men at a Place called Drumchat on The Side of Lochoussie above Dingwall notwithstanding of The great Inequality of their Numbers, The Lieutenant having several Hundreds of his own & others of The People convocate on Purpose, Hector fell upon him, rooted him, and committed a great Slaughter upon his Men pursuing himself to The Burn of Lemlair.

[page 104.] HECTOR after he gave his Nephew The Management of his Estate had several Debates with The Shiellilichallum having purchased Legal Titles to such Parts of The Lands of Gairloch as were at that Time in their Possession. Upon which there followed some Skirmishes with The Advantage always on Hector's Side whereof The most notable happened at a Place called Beallach Glaisteid, where his Nephew assisted him with The Kintail Men.

THIS Hector had taken to his First Wife Daughter to The Laird of Grant. But she died before The Solemnizing of their Marriage; Yet she bare him a Son called Hector afterwards nicknamed Hector Caume, who was Possessor of Ochterneid and Cultaleod, and was married with Daughter to MacKye of Far, by whom he had Alister

Roy MacHeachin and Murdoch MacHeachin. This Alister was married with a Daughter of John Nattuoy Macilichallum. She was Mother to Hector MacAlister vic Heachin, who lived in Kinnellan, and was nicknamed The Bishop. He was married with The Laird of Rasay his Daughter with whom he had no Succession but One Daughter that is married with Hugh Mackenzie He left Two Natural Sons, Duncan Mackenzie that lived in Tarbet and was married with a Daughter of Mr. John Mackenzie Minister of Dingwall and Captain Hector Mackenzie who is married with a Daughter of Little Findones Murdoh Hector Caume his Second Son was married with a Daughter of Murdoh Buy MacVahon. HECTOR Roy had after Grant's Daughter's Death Ronald MacRanald aliàs Ranald Bayne Laird of Muidiart his Daughter. She was Mother to John Glassich MacHeachin, to Kenneth MacHeachin, to John Tuach MacHeachin, to Dougall Roy MacHeachin, and Hector had another Son called John beg MacHeachin, of whom hath descended The Clan ean vig vic Heachin. He had One Daughter married with The Good Man of Tulloch. John Glassich married Agnes Fraser Daughter to James Fraser Brother to The Lord Lovitt. With her he got The Lands of Kinkell and Ardnancraisk. She bare him Three Sons. The Two Eldest died without Succession, and The Youngest who was called John, became Heir. John Glassich left Two Natural Sons Alister Roy and Hector Caoil. John Glassich's Enemies misinformed his Chief against [page 106.] him in making his Chief believe That he intended to follow his Father's Intention. For which his Chief sent for him to Brahan, where he came with One single Man called John Keir. His Chief not believing his Vindication caused apprehend him. His Man John Keir seeing him apprehended did not look to those that apprehended his Master. But where he saw Mackenzie sitting at The Head of The Table he drew his Two Handed Sword, and let such a Stroke at Mackenzie that had he not bowed his Head beneath The Table, he had killed him. Mackenzie's Guards immediately seized The Man, and offered to have rent him in Pieces. But their Master strictly commanded they should not touch, and, when he was asked Why he struck at Mackenzie and not at those who had laid Hands on his Master, his Answer was, He saw none there whose Life was a worthy Exchange for his Master's save Mackenzie only.

JOHN GLASSACH was sent to be kept Prisoner in The Danton Island, where he died afterwards, and was buried in Beauliew.

JOHN, who was his Third Son, falling to be his Heir married to his First Wife Daughter to The Laird of Glengairrie with whom he had Six Sons and Five Daughters. THE GENEALOGY of The GRANTS said [page 168.]¹ to be written by Mr. James Chapman Minister of Cromdall &c. in Anno 1729.

THE Tree of The Family of Grant abridged from The Chronicles of Norway sent by an Herauld from The Court of Denmark to The Representative of The House of Grant informs of The Descent of that Name and declares That Wffa a Saxon Lord descended of The Champion Ouden aliàs Wodine (much extolled among The Poets for his Heroic Actions especially in Norway & Saxony) was The First King of East Angles in The Year of Christ 575.

Wffa A.C. 575.

AMONG others descended of Wffa was Hacken Earl of Lagen and Tronde Lagen in Norway his Great Grand Son who did succeed as his Heir of Line and Representative. Hacken for Power and Conduct was so reputed not only in Swedland and Denmark but also in Norway where he was unanimously chosen as Lord High Protector of that Kingdom. In which great Trust he managed with such Approbation that he was honoured to bear their Coat of Arms of Three Crowns quartered as also an Ax and Rampant Lyon, and his Posterity continued to bear The same. He was a Man not only in great Power but also of great Strength, and was therefore commonly called Hacken Grandt aliàs Grant or Grott, which in their Language is The same as Great or in Latin Grand is, Great or Valourous, and all his Posterity after him are commonly called Grants.

Hacken and Swenhilla.Protector of Norway.

Coat of Arms.

As there be few especially in Power who want their Enemies, so The Protector Hacken Grandt had his own who much envyed him. On a certain Time falling occasionally among some of them, he was attacked by them. It is reported That being unarmed he took as a Weapon, which he then pulled by The Roots, a Standing Tree, being The First Thing that came to his Hand, and with this Tree he so managed his Enemies that he rescued himself, and chased, or, as is reported, slew some of them. This Action was reputed so

Heroic that his Strength and Valour was further remarked at Court, and therefore he was honoured to bear in his Coat of Arms not only The Three Crows quartered but also Two strong Men with their standing Trees in their Arms as Supporters of The Crowns with The Motto Stand fast or sure and firm, which The Family of Grant as yet retains.

HACKEN GRANDT The Protector of Norway married Suanhilla The Daughter of Swenerman a Danish Prince of whom he begat several Children.

HEMMING GRANT his Second Son is The Progenitor of The House of Grant. He married Tora Daughter to Adlistein The First of The Norwegian Kings who professed The Christian Religion. Among others instructed in The same were Hemming and his Wife Tora which was disagreeable to his Father Hacken The Protector seeing they did abandon The Heathenish Custom of Worshipping and Offering Sacrifice to his Progenitor Wodine aliàs Oudine reputed among them formerly as a God.

HEMMING being thus made uneasy by his Father thinks fit to remove with his Wife Tora out of Norway and come to Ireland, where his said Lady died in Exile leaving behind her several Sons and Daughters. The Eldest Daughter called Astred married Killel Krog younger Son of Tourstoun Earl of Northumberland. The younger Daughter named Gurrie married The Baron of Birkeroe, of whom several Noble Families in Swedland and Norway are descended. These Two Sisters were well instructed in The Christian Religion, and took Care to adorn their Principles with suitable Practice. They caused build Two Christian Churches adorned with Steeples within a Fathom of each other and covered them finely with Lead, to which they gave The Name of Grants, and The Parish is called Grandtsogn, that is Grant's Parishioners, The which Churches and Steeples ly nine Miles from Christiania and remain as yet.

HEMMING GRANT is said to have Four Sons who came along with him and afterwards thought fit (upon their Father's marrying a Second Wife named Isobella Daughter to The Prince of Dublin) to push their Fortunes and came to Scotland Anno 1000.

THE Four Sons are said to be Alland aliàs Andlaw, Gregore who is said to be The Progenitor of The Clan Gregore aliàs Mac Gregors, Fingon The Progenitor of Clan Fingons aliàs MacInnons and Rowan aliàs Ruthven because red haired, who is The Progenitor of The Ruthvens, of whom was The Earl of Gowrie, and of them is said,

Hinc Grantes, Fingon, Ruthven, Gregorius orti.

THE Chronicles of Norway together with The said Tree of The Family of Grant are more full in The Account of The Root and Branches of Hacken Grant The Protector of Norway and Progenitor of The Name of Grant. But purposing to follow his Offspring as far as concerns The Family and Name of Grant we take more particular Notice of Andlaw aliàs Allan Grant The Son of Hemming came to Scotland in The Tenth Century. He married Moral Daughter to Neil Mac Gregor a Gentleman lineally descended of Gregorius King of Scotland, by whose Interest and Portion The Barony of Fruichy was purchased. She bore several Children, and

PATRICK GRANT SON to Allan Grant of Fruichy did succeed his Father about The Year 1090. He married Fergusia a Relation of Alpinus of whom he begot One Son and Four Daughters.

WISHILLA The Eldest Daughter married Duncan The 2^d The 38th King of Scotland, who was Anno 1096 killed by Mackpender Thane of Mearns.

FERGUSIA The 2^d Daughter married Hacken a Norway Prince. Moral The 3^d Daughter married Dunbar Earl of March, and Collobella The youngest Daughter married William de Monte The Progenitor of The Movats aliàs Moffats. [page 165.]

ALLAND SON to The said Patrick Grant of Fruichy succeeded his Father about The Year 1150, and then married Dorvaggilla Daughter to The Thane of Fife, of whom he begot One Daughter and Four Sons. Isobella his Daughter married Bancho Stuart of Lochaber. Patrick his Second Son married Ingelram's Daughter. He was Earl of Coucey in France, whose Sister Mary was married to Alexander 2^d 94th King of Scotland about The Year of Christ 1212; And Laurance Third Son to The said Allan was Bishop of Murray; And Malcolm his Fourth Son was The King's Lord Lieutenant of The North of Scotland. He is The Progenitor of The Malcolms in Scotland.

ALLAN The Laird of Grant was much respected at Court. His Childrens honourable Marriages made him more known. He was honoured with a Commission to be Sheriff Principal of Inverness, and purchased The Lands of Stratharrick in that Shire about The Beginning of The Twelfth Century.

GREGOR GRANT Eldest Son to Allan Grant of Fruichy and Stratharrick Sheriff Principal of Inverness succeeded his Father. He married Mary Daughter to My Lord Lovat, who bore to him Four Sons, namely, Patrick The Eldest, who succeeded his Father, Richard The Second, who succeeded as Archbishop of Canterbury in England immediately after Archbishop Langtoun in The Year 1229, as The Annals inform. Allan The Third Son is The Progenitor of The Family of Auchernick, and his Posterity are commonly called Clan Allan, i.e. Allan's Posterity; of whom there are severals descended. And Lucas his Youngest Son commonly called Kiar alias Kearan for his being of a gray dark Hue is The Progenitor of Auchinarrow now called Dalchapple, whose Posterity is commonly called Clan Chiaran; of whom there are severals descended.

PATRICK GRANT of Fruichy and Stratharrack succeeded his Father Gregor in Honours and Inheritance about The Middle of The 13th Century. He married Bigla only Child of Cumming Lord Glenchernick. She was commonly called for her low Stature Bigla Beg. Her Friends designed her in Marriage for a Relation of The Name of Cumming. But She herself thought otherwise, and her Affection led her to marry The Laird of Grant, which at Length was obtained to The Satisfaction of both though disagreeable to The Name of Cumming, which occasioned their Envy against The Grants. Bigla bore to The Laird of Grant Two Sons named John and Rodolphus and a Daughter called Mauld aliàs Muriel, who were all taken Care of as to their Education.

JOHN LE GRANT aliàs Sir John Grant of Fruichy and Stratharrick was a Man of Publick Spirit and of great Account. He thought fit with his Brother Rodolphus to take a Concern in The Defence of their Countrey against The Insults and Cruelty of Edward commonly called Longshanks King of England; For at that Time King John Baliol to confirm himself as King of Scotland subjected himself and The Nation to Edward as his Superior, and notwithstanding this foolish and treacherous Behaviour of Baliol King Edward in less than Four Years expelled him and miserably oppressed The Kingdom of Scotland to such a Degree that a great many of The most valiant and Noble Men in Scotland were apprehended by him and carried up to England as Hostages for The Good Behaviour of The Scotch towards The Kings of England in all Time after. Among these Hostages were John Le Grant and his Brother Rodolphus, who after they had been long kept there were at Length dismissed upon Terms as appears in Rymer's Fœdera Vol. 2^d Page 776. Anno 1297. under The Title Manu captio Magnatum Scotiæ &c. Both these Brethren John and Rodolphus dying without Issue were succeeded by their Sister. [page 166.]

MAULD She married Andrew Stuart Son to The Sheriff of Bute, who by Articles in The Marriage changed his Name, and was called Andrew Grant aliàs Stuart. They had a Son and a Daughter. The Daughter named Mary married Lord Lovat her Cousin, and The Son named Patrick succeeded his Father in The Estate about The End of The 13th Century. He was commonly called Patrick Mac Mauld as being The Son of Mauld aliàs Marjory or Murriel. He married Bathia Daughter to The Earl of Ross about The Year 1305, and afterwards he married Florence Daughter to The Laird of MacLean. They had a Son and a Daughter. The Daughter was married to The Laird of Fowlis The Progenitor of The Monroes, and The Son named John afterwards called,

SIR JOHN GRANT of Fruichy and Stratharrick succeeded his Father. He married Mauld Daughter to Gilbert of Glenchernick, & by her came The Lordship of Glenchernick and Dullenside to The Family of Grant, as appears in The Charter for that Effect as yet extant of Date about The Beginning of The 14th Century. She brought forth Two Sons to him, viz, Robert and Duncan.

ROBERT was a Man of great Account in his Time for Influence and Courage. He distinguished himself in his Skill of handling Arms. His being The Champion appointed for Scotland to fight in Duel against Thomas Del Strother for England shows The same; For by Appointment of Publick Authority in The Time of Robert 2^d King of Scotland and Richard 2^d King of England Anno Christi 1380 The said Robert was chosen to fight The said Duel, in which he so distinguished himself that he came off with The Applause of The Spectators. This is recorded in Rymer's Fœdera Vol. 7th Page 275, where it is told That King Richard gave Letters of safe Conduct to these Champions.

THE Broils betwixt Scotland and England as yet continuing, The French joined The Scotch against England, and assisted them in carrying on a War. They gave them 40,000 Flanks to be distributed among The Noble and great Ones, of which The said Robert Laird of Grant had a Share as recorded in The foresaid Annals. He was so taken up with The Publick Affairs of The Nation that he seldom stayed at his own House, and dying unmarried he was succeeded by his Brother.

SIR DUNCAN GRANT, who married Leslie Daughter to The Earl of Rothes, of whom he had Two Sons, viz, John and Patrick. Gilbert of Glenchernick was Grand [page 167.] Father to Sir Duncan, and resigned to him The Lordship of Glenchernick and Dullensiden as The Charter given by King David dated Anno 1364 in Favours of Gilbert and by Gilbert in Favours of Sir Duncan Grant (who is called his Oye in The said Charter) more fully bears. The Animosities and Misunderstanding betwixt The Cummings continuing occasioned to dispose of The Lands of Stratharrick in Order to purchase several other Lands contiguous to Balachastle and Glenchernick; For at That Time there were several Baronies on Spey Side to be disposed of, which The Laird of Grant took Care (because of their Contiguity to his Inheritance there already) to purchase that so he might have his People and Followers round about him, and that they might be better in Case to offend or defend in One Body as Occasions required. The Friends and Dependents of The Laird of Grant that were in Stratharrick did relish this Proposal and thought fit to leave their Possessions there, and came to Strathspey, where they took Possessions which they called after those they had in Stratharrick as Gartenmore, Gartenbeg, Auchinarrow, Delchapple, Balchernich and The like.

THE said Sir Duncan besides his Sons lawfully begotten had other Two Sons, The Elder of which called Patrick is The Progenitor of The Family of Tullochgorm, and his Posterity is commonly called Clan Phadrick, and The other Son called Duncan is The Progenitor of The Family of Gartenbeg, and his Posterity is commonly called Clan Dunachy. It is reported That a familiar Spirit ordinarily haunted The Family of Tullochgorm, and attended for Intelligence and Drudgery. This Ghost was commonly called Meg Mulloch as having The Loof of her Hand hairy. It appeared usually in The Shape of a Female about Six or Seven Years old in common and coarse Habit. The Presbytery of Abernethy being The Church Judicatory in these Bounds took Care to enquire into this Ghost's Haunting The Family of Tullochgorm about The Year 1647, and after citing Tullochgorm and several Witnesses before them The Result of all was That there was such a familiar reputed to haunt Tullochgorm, That severals saw The same in The said Shape, & That suddenly it disappeared. But since The more clear Preaching of The Gospel there is no Account at all of any such Apparition.

PATRICK Second Son to The said Sir Duncan Laird of Grant is The Progenitor of The House of Balnadallach, who is now low in his Estate. But of him are descended several Cadets, as Grant of Delvey, aliàs Dunlugas Grant of Delay Tamnavoulin Tulloch &c. The said Patrick his Eldest Brother Sir John succeeded his Father Sir Duncan both in Honours and Inheritance. He was red haired and had a Vein of Poetry, and Therefore was usually called Bard Ruoh, i.e. red Poet. He married Lucia Gordon Daughter to The Earl of Enzie aliàs Huntly by whom he had One Son named also John, who succeeded his Father in Honours and Inheritance. He in his younger Years before Marriage visited The Stuart aliàs Baron of Kincardine, and got his Daughter with Child; Which Child was afterwards because of his Talness and big Stature called John More. He is The Progenitor of The Grants of Glenmorrison, and his Posterity are usually called Slick Ian vore, of whom was afterwards descended Grant of Carron. Sir

John married Margaret Ogilvie Daughter to James Ogilvie of Deskford alias Findlater. Their Marriage Contract yet extant gives Account of The Tocher, Jointure and Friendship betwixt these Families. The Tocher given by Sir James [page 168.] Ogilvie with his Daughter to The Laird of Grant was Three Hundred Merks paid at Five Terms or years, that is, Fourty Pounds Scots yearly, and The Jointure given by The said Sir John to his Lady together with The Provision of The Children to be procreated betwixt them both was Twenty Marks worth of Land Yearly. Such was The Friendship betwixt these Two Families that they entered into a Bond of Association to maintain One another's Quarrels and keep from Robbing, Thigging, Sorning or taking One another's Possessions by themselves, Friends or Dependents, as The said Contract of Marriage dated at Bog of Geith 1484 more fully bears. The said Sir John had Two Sons with The said Margaret Ogilvie viz. James and John. This John was The Progenitor of The Families of Corrimony and Shaoglie,* and his Elder Brother, viz. James commonly called James na Creach succeeded his Father Sir John Grant in Honours and Inheritance about The Year 1525. He married Barbara Erskyne Daughter to The Earl of Mar, who brought forth One Son and Two Daughters. Anne The Elder was married to Allan Cameron Laird of Lochziel, and Janet The Younger married to William Sutherland Laird of Duffus in The Year 1552 [and afterwards to James Dempster of Auchterless].²

JAMES was well known and in Favour at Court. King James The 5th took such Notice of him that for his Good Services done The Publick he gave him a distinguishing Mark of his Favour, which is rarely granted to a Subject, namely, His Majesty was pleased to give him a Charter signed under his Hand and sealed with his Seal, wherein he is privileged with a Discharge and Exemption from being summoned or appearing all The Days of his Life before any Temporal Judge or Judicatory under The Privy Council or Session in Scotland for any Cause whatsoever. all his Friends, Tenants, Householders and Servants whatsoever belonging to him, as The said Charter of Exemption dated at Stirling Anno 1535 as yet extant more fully bears. James na Greach distinguished himself in assisting The Earl of Huntly his Cousin against The Insults of several Enemies, and, particularly, in revenging The Murder of Gordon Baron of Braachally in Dee Water Side, who was murdered by The Country Men there. The Revenge went such a Length that above Six Score Orphans were left in The desolate Country on Dee Side, no Body knowing who their Parents were. These miserable Orphans were out of Pity and Commiseration carried by The Earl of Huntly into his Castle, where they were maintained and fed. Thus a long Trough of Wood was made, wherein was put Pottage or any other Kind of Food allowed them, & The Young Ones sitting round about The Trough did eat their meat out of it as well as they could. James The Laird of Grant at a Time visiting The Earl was for Diversion's Sake brought to see The Orphans slabbing at their Trough. Which Comical Sight so surprized him that he proposed to carry The One Half of them to Balchastle alleging That having a Hand in destroying their Parents he was bound in Justice to take a Concern in their Preservation and Maintenance. These of them that were brought to Castle Grant are to this Day called Slick-Nam-mor i.e. The Posterity of The Trough, and they are promiscuously called Grants or Gordons. This happened 1540.*

JOHN GRANT succeeded his Father in The Estate. He married Marjory Stuart Daughter to The Earl of Athol about The Year 1555. Their Children were Duncan, who succeeded his Father in The Estate, and Patrick, who married Jean Gordon Daughter to The Laird of Echt.² He was commonly called Patrick na Muckrach being The Possessor of that Land. He was a Man in good Account, and had The Bailliary of Huntly and Strathspey, and by this Means was Judge from

The Eastern Sea to The Western. He is The Progenitor of Rothemurcus and Colonel Grant of Balnadallach. His Lady while a Widow caused build a House in Muckrock which is extant as yet with their Names engraven upon it Anno 1598. The Daughters of The said John Laird of Grant were Mary, who was married to Colin Mackenzie of Kintail, of whom The Representative of The Mackenzies, viz., The Earl of Seaforth is descended. The Second Daughter married Innes of Balveny and Espeth Third Daughter of The Laird of Grant married William Fraser of Struy The Tutor of Lovat in The Year 1560.

THE Name of Grant continued firm in their Loyalty to their Sovereign, and Hawthornden in his History of The King Jameses informs That they continued loyal and steady to King James The 4th when several other Chiftans deserted him.

MARJORY STUART The Lady Grant being removed by Death her Husband John Laird of Grant married Isobell Barclay Daughter to Barclay of Towy, of whom he begot One Son, who became The Progenitor of Grant of Balintome, and of him are descended Sir Francis Grant Lord Cullen One of The Senators of The College of Justice, Grant of Monymusk, Grant of Airndelly aliàs Auchonyony &c.

DUNCAN GRANT of Fruichy succeeded his Father John Grant. He married The Laird of MacIntosh's Daughter about The year 1570, of whom he begot Four Sons and One Daughter. The Daughter married The Laird of Calder in The Shire of Nairn. The Sons are John, who succeeded as Laird of Grant. Robert, He is The Progenitor of The Family of Lurg.

PATRICK of Elchies. He is The Progenitor of Grant of Easter Elchies and

JAMES The youngest Son The Progenitor of Grant of Moyness. Duncan Grant lived in Abernethy, and was commonly called Duncan Chiush because he delighted in The Fir Woods. In his Time severals of The Name of Grant applied themselves to Studies. Mr. Edward Grant was famous for his Skill in The Oriental Languages. His Greek Lexicon printed at London Anno 1581 shews his Skill in Greek and Latin, as being The best before his Time extant, and, as The Reformation from Popery and Superstition was going on a Pace in his Time, so Mr. Grant aliàs Duglass so called because he was of a grim Hue distinguished himself for Zeal and Success in The Work of The Gospel, and Joined Mr. Knox and The Laird of Dun in preaching The same, as Mr. Calderwood informs in his Church History.

DUNCAN Laird of Grant died young.

JOHN GRANT succeeds his Father Duncan as Laird of Grant. He was commonly called John of Fruichy and much regarded for his Stock of Prudence and Conduct in The Management of Affairs, and Therefore was termed The Wise Laird of Grant. [page 170.] He purchased several Baronies of Land in his Time such as Lethen, Adneedly &c. He married Lillias Murray Daughter to The Earl of Tullibardine now Duke of Athol. The which Marriage was honoured with The King and Queen their Presence about The Year 1585. She was a Lady who distinguished herself in Management of her Affairs. She brought forth One Son and Two Daughters to him, namely, Anne Daughter to John Grant of Fruichy married Lauchlan Mac Intosh of Dunachton Captain of Clan Chattan 1611. Jean Second Daughter to The said John of Fruichy married William Sutherland of Duffus Anno 1612.

THERE was a great Correspondence at this Time betwixt The Family of Grant and Mac Intosh. The Insults of Mac Donalds and Camerons against Mac Intosh occasioned John of Fruichy's joining in Association with him against these Lochabrians as their Bonds of Friendship in Castle Grant as yet extant more fully bear. It is remarkable That in One of these Bonds The Laird of Mac Intosh engages to give The Lands on The other Side of Lochy in Lochaber to Allan Mac Calday aliàs Cameron for Honours and Services payable to him with some small Duty, as John Grant of Fruichy shall determine, and The Concern which John Grant of Fruichy had in both these Chiftans gave Way to their mutual Friendship and Lochziel's peaceable possessing of these Lands as yet.

JOHN of Fruichy dying, his Son John Grant alias Sir John succeeds; For by his attending at Court and being of a public Spirit, known in The World, he was as his Predecessors Knighted. He married Mary Ogilvie Daughter to The Earl of Findlater, of whom he begot Eight Sons and Four Daughters.

HE had also a Son before Marriage whom he called Duncan. He is The Progenitor of Grant of Clurie who was a Young Man of much Sagacity, for whom his Father Sir John had possessed much Kindness, and gave him The Lands of Clurie.

THE Childrens Names are as follows. James The Eldest succeeded as Laird of Grant.

JOHN Second Son of John Grant of Fruichy was put in Commission as Colonel of a Regiment, in which Post he died in Holland without Issue.

PATRICK The Third Son was also Lieutenant Colonel and Tutor of Grant, had Three Daughters well married.

ROBERT The Fourth Son lived in Muchroch.

GEORGE The Fifth Son was also in Commission as Major, & died Governour of The Castle of Dunbarton.

ALEXANDER The Sixth Son died without Male Issue.

MUNGO The Seventh Son is The Progenitor of Grant of Knockando purchased 1700 and Grant of Grantsfield aliàs Ballogie, who both are free Barons holding of The King.

[page 171.] THOMAS Eighth Son commonly called Balmacaan had also Two Sons Lodovick and Patrick.

THE Daughters are Lillias married to Byres Laird of Cottis; Margaret married to Mackenzie Laird of Gairloch brought forth The Representative of that Family. The Third married Ogilvie of Kempkeurn, and Mary Grant The youngest Daughter of Sir John Laird of Grant married Gordon Marquis of Huntly. She is Mother to The Representative of that Family. She was also afterwards married upon The Earl of Early.

JAMES GRANT of Fruichy did succeed his Father Sir John as Laird of Grant. He married Lady Mary Stuart Daughter to The Earl of Murray, who bore to him Two Sons and Three Daughters.

THE Elder Son Ludovick succeeded his Father as Laird of Grant, and The Younger Son named Patrick is The Progenitor of Elchies on Spey Side in Knockando Parish.

The Daughters are Mary, who married Patrick Ogilvie of Boyne in Bamf Shire. The Second Daughter married Sir Alexander Hamilton of Hags and Margaret The Youngest Daughter was married upon Roderick Mackenzie of Red-Castle in Ross-Shire.

THE Laird of Grant died at Edinburgh in The Year 1663, and was buried in The Abbay Church there.

LUDOVICK GRANT of Friuchy succeeded his Father James Laird of Grant. He was a Man of Publick Spirit and awful Mien, reckoned The Best of Chiftans, commanding with Authority and Love, on all Occasions ready to express his Mind with Freedom. He married Janet Brodie only Child of Alexander Brodie Laird of Lethin in Nairn Shire. She was a Woman justly remarked for Piety and Virtue. The whole of her Conduct savoured of Prudence and Justice. She had Eight Children who survived her. Alexander The Eldest succeeded his Father. James Second Son to Ludovick Grant of Friuchy married Anne Colquhoun Heritrix of Luss. George and Ludovick are in The Army and reputed Men of Courage and Conduct. George is Captain in Colonel Harrison's Regiment, and Ludovick is Major in My Lord Orkney's Regiment.

THE Daughters are Elizabeth, The Eldest, married to Hugh Rose of Kilraack. She is Mother to The Representative of that Family. Anne Second Daughter to The Laird of Grant married Colonel William Grant of Ballindallach. She is The Mother of The Representative of that Family.

JANET Third Daughter of Ludovick Laird of Grant married Roderick Mackenzie of Skatwell. She is The Mother of The Representative of that Family.

MARGARET youngest Daughter of Ludovick Laird of Grant married Simon Lord Fraser of Lovat. She is Mother to The Representative of that Noble Family. [page 172.] It is remarked of all these Sisters That, as there were no Subjects Daughters had better Education, so they all improved The same, and were distinguished for Piety and Virtue in their respective Families.

LUDOVICK Laird of Grant was in great Account during his whole Lifetime, and firmly adhered to The Protestant Interest. His early Appearance against a Popish Pretender, his being put in Commission by King William Anno 1689 as Colonel of a Foot Regiment and his Publick Concern in The Defeat of The Rebels at Cromdale Hill, where none of The King's Forces were killed, though so many Hundreds of a Popish Faction and Highlanders died in The Battle, which gave The finishing Stroke to The Popish Pretender's Cause during King William's Reign, I say, all this shews The Man. He was so attached to The Protestant Interest that none professing Popery had so much as a Tack of Land or Dwelling in all his Inheritance. He was Sherriff Principal of Inverness as his Predecessors & always Member of Parliament, where on all Occasions he distinguished himself in his Faithfullness to The King and Love to his Countrey, and he obtained the great Privilege and Honour of having his Lands erected into a Regality Anno 1694. He died at Edinburgh in The Year 1717, and was buried in The Abbay Church there with his Fathers James and Sir John Lairds of Grant.

ALEXANDER GRANT succeeded his Father Ludovick in Honours and Inheritance. He was born in The Year 1677 & married upon Elizabeth Stuart Eldest Daughter of James Lord Down in The Year 1698, of whom he had no Issue. He was a Man who distinguished himself in his Affection to The Protestant Interest and against Popery. He not only was Sherriff Principal of Inverness, Lord Lieutenant of Inverness and Murray Shires, but also was always Member of Parliament, and put in Commission of a Colonel of a Foot Regiment he engaged in Person for The King & Protestant Interest against a Popish Pretender at Sherriff Muir Battle in The Year 1715, and was after The Battle put in Commission of Brigadier General, and, as he himself appeared in Person for The King and Government against The Rebels in The South, so likewise he had all his own Men under Arms in The North to The Number of Eight or Nine Hundred maintained at his own proper Charges under The Command of his Brother Captain George Grant. They appeared so zealous and faithfull in that Cause as to defeat and give The finishing Stroke to a Popish Interest in The North of Scotland at that Time. He died also at Edinburgh, and was buried with his Fathers in The Abbay Church there Anno 1719.

JAMES GRANT of Grant succeeded his Brother Alexander as Laird of Grant Anno 1719. He is a Man of solid Learning & good Temper, but when offended very sensible of Offences given him. He is remarked as a Man endowed with a Principle of Justice and Honesty. He married Anno 1702 Dame Anne Colquhon Heretrix and only Child of Sir Humphry Colquhon of Luss, who left him Five Sons and as many Daughters, namely, Humphry Eldest Son; Ludovick his Second Son by Articles in Marriage is Heir of Luss and Representative of The Name of Colquhon. He studied The Law, and was admitted Advocate in The Year 1728. He is married on Marion Dalrymple Daughter to Sir Hew Dalrymple of North Berwick Lord President of The Session in Scotland. James Francis and Charles The Youngest Sons to James Laird of Grant are at their Education in Schools. The Daughters are Jean Grant The Eldest married William Duff of Bracco. She is The Mother of The Representative of that Family and several other Children. [page 173.]

ANNE Second Daughter to James Laird of Grant married Sir Harry Innes of Innes. She is The Mother of The Representative of that antient Family. Sophia Penuel and Clementina The Three Youngest Daughters are as yet at their Education, and in The Esteem of all acquainted with them very deserving Virgins.

JAMES Laird of Grant as his Predecessors continues stedfast in his Attachment to The Protestant Interest, is Member of Parliament, and though by Act of Parliament The Sherriffship cannot (he being Member of Parliament) lodge in his own Person, yet his Eldest Son is put in Commission as Sherriff Principal of Inverness Shire.

THE Name of Grant in his Time as well as in his Predecessors Days continues in good Account for Influence and Interest in The Countrey; For besides The several Field Officers as yet in his Majesty's Service and other Officers in Commission there are above a Dozen of Free Barons holding of The Crown capable to chuse or be chosen Members of Parliament, such as Grants of Elchys, Grant of Monymusk, Grant of Rothemurcus, Grant of Easter Elchys, Grant of Balnadallach, Grant of Auchoinony, Grant of Glenmorrison, Grant of Dunlugas, Grant of Knockando, Grant of Ballogie aliàs Grantsfield, Grant of Carron and Grant of Grant.

A BRIEF GENEALOGICAL ACCOUNT of the FAMILY of MACLEAN from it's First Settling in the Island of Mull and Parts adjacent in the Year 1716.

THE Surname Maclean or more truly MacGillean signifying Son of Gillean is derived from One Gillean Predecessor of this Family. He was called Gillean ni tuoidh from his ordinary Weapon a Battle Ax called in the Irish Language Tuoidh, which his Posterity to this Day bear in their Crest 'twixt a Lawrel and Cypress Branch.

TOUCHING this Gillean we have Nothing on Record, nor is there any Tradition concerning him that can be much relied on by which at this Distance of Time we can fix on the Place of his Residence or what Character he had in the World, only That by the universal Consent of Tradition an Irish Man of that Name was Predecessor of those Families called after him MAC GILLEANS as in all antient Writs or MACLEANS as now write. This Family had their Shenachies and Bards as every Family of Distinction in the Highlands had. Yet they were so ungratefull to their Benefactors or so ignorant as to have left Nothing upon Record worth Noticing preceeding the Family's Settlement in the Island of Mull, or, if they did committ any Thing of this Kind to Writ, it has been lost by the Injuries of the Times.

ALL that remains is a bare Catalogue of Names from Gillean upwards to Inghisteurteamher who is said to have reigned in Ireland Five Generations before Fergus the First King of Scotland. This Catalogue was in the Custody of Mr. John Beaton the Last of the Shenachies a Man pretty well skilled in Irish Antiquities. There was also another Catalogue agreeing with this exactly in an old Genealogical Manuscript preserved for a long Time in the Laird of Coll's Family which is now lost. Doctor Kennedy in his Genealogical Dissertation of the Royal Line of the Stewarts affirms the Macleans to be descended from Loghirni mor Brother to Fergus the Second King of Scotland and Son to Ere. From which the above mentioned Catalogue differs only in this, That they call Loghirni Son to Fergus and Grand Child to Ere. He also gives a Catalogue of the Predecessors of Ere upwards to Inghis Teurteamher, which agrees most with the Two fore-mentioned. Moreover Mac Varich Shenachie to the Family of Clan Ranald in a Panegyrick upon the Macleans affirms their being originally related to Curi Mac Dari whom Doctor Kennedy calls Brother Son to Hiar or Eri and Grand-Son to Deoadhie both who are mentioned in the fore-said Catalogues in near the same Order with that of the Doctors.

THIS Poem was composed, at least, Thirty Years before Kennedy's Book was published. All these laid together would seem to argue the Genuineness of those Catalogues preserved among the Macleans, and, although Macvurich in Hope of a Reward should be induced to forge an illustrious and antient Descent for those he designed to flatter, Yet I see no Reason That Doctor Kennedy a Stranger to them writing in a foreign Countrey should do so, or make any Mention of them at all, if he had not found in some Record worthy of Credit That they were so descended. [page 176.]

THERE has been in all Ages a Friendship 'twixt the MacKenzies and Macleans and among them both a received Tradition of their being descended of Two Brothers. But I could never find any Authority for this or any seeming Probability even from those who affirmed it most. Mr. Buchanan of Auchimar makes Mention of it, and supposes the Macleans to be descended of the Gerald Earl of Kildarr, and I have heard That Doctor George Mackenzie in his Genealogy of the MacKenzies affirms some such Matter. But as Mr. Buchanan gives no Voucher, and the Doctor's Book has not appeared in the World, and the forementioned Tradition has few Vouchers, and yet fewer that gives it Credit, I am always more apt to believe the most received and better vouched Tradition above related; Yet, if the Doctor's Book

Matters of greater Moment than this, and may here be allowed of. So, I think, if any Credit be due to any One of those Catalogues, it strengthens that of the other. I am more enclined to believe with Doctor Kennedy That Loghirni mor was rather Brother than Son to Fergus the Second: For, were he his Son, his Name in all Appearance would be inserted in the Scottish History. Whereas, being but a Brother, and he and his Posterity living out of the Kingdom, there is no such Reason for his being mentioned. But to return to Gillean.

GILLEAN begot Gilise, who begot Gillicollum, whose Son was called Eoin Duih, whose Sons were called Lauchlin lubanich Predecessor of the Family of Dowart and Eachin reganich Predecessor of the Family of Lochbuy. 'Tis as uncertain where Gilleans Offspring lived or what their Station in the World was untill Lauchlan and Eachin's Time as what or where Gillean himself was. But 'tis very probable they were of Noble Extraction and of an antient renowned Family, or those Two last mentioned could not have had such Honours conferred upon them or come at such great Fortunes or Alliances as they afterwards did, especially, considering That in those Days Nobleness of Birth was thought preferable to any other Merit in procuring Alliance: For, as it was once in Rome thought a great Dishonour for a Person of Consular Dignity to match in a Plebeian Family, so in the Highlands there was no matching but with Equals. Moreover, the Greatness of their Ambition and Actions would seem to show That their Birth was above the common Rank.

ABOUT the Beginning of the Reign of Robert the Third King of Scotland, which was in the Year 1390, those Two Brothers Lauchlin lubanich and Eachin or Hector Reganich came, as some say from Ireland to Mac Dougal of Lorn's House, where being kindly received and obtaining much of Mac Dougal's Favour they had in some Time the Fate of all foreign Favourites, which is generally to be hated by those who think themselves injured by such Intruders. They wrought so far as to bring Mac Dougal at last unto the Design of taking away the Lives of the Brothers, of which they being advertized gave their Enemies the Slip, & came to the Great MAC DONALD of the Isles. Here again their good Behaviour procured them Mac Donald's Favour. But, as in the former Case, so now they began to be hated by those who were affraid of their obtaining too much Favour. The First that vented his Ill Will to them was the Laird of M^cKinnon speaking harshly to them when returned from Hunting where they had been with Mac Donald. They resolved Revenge when an Opportunity should offer, which in a little Time did in this Manner.

[page 178.] MAC DONALD going from Aros in Mull to the Continent upon some Expedition sailed away. The Laird of Mac Kinnon was to follow. But the Brothers killing him as he was going on Board manned his Galley, and followed Mac Donald resolving to make their Fortunes or dy in the Attempt.

ASOON as they came along Side of him, they boarded and made him Prisoner carrying him to the Island of Garrivelich, where giving them fair Promises, they brought him to I Collum kill. Here he vowed Friendship to them upon certain Stones called black Stones where Men were used to make solemn Vows in those superstitious Times, and granted them by * Charter the Lands which they and their Successors enjoyed afterwards. † This Mac Donald was John Lord of the Isles who was married to Lady Margaret Daughter to Robert 2^d King of Scotland. To Lauchlan he gave in Marriage Elizabeth his Second Daughter, made him his Lieutenant General in Time of War, and gave him and his Posterity the Right Hand of all the Clans in Battel. For Eachin he procured Mac Leod of Lewis's Daughter in Marriage who was then a great Man in those Parts.

THIS would seem to be the proper Place of enquiring which of the Brothers was oldest, and, consequently, whose Representative should be Chief of all the Posterity of both Lauchlan and Eachin. I could never hear of any Writ by which this Question could be decided, and seeing we know of none, we must have Recourse to the next best Method of deciding it. 'Tis well known to all those who have any tolerable Knowledge of the Clan of Maclean That the Successors of Lauchlan Lubanich or the Representative of the Family of Dowart did enjoy the Characteristicks of Primogeniture for 300 Years and upwards, and, seeing the Possession without Interruption is of so old a Date, I am sure 'tis easier to acquiesce in it than to prove the Contrary. Yet to put the Matter in as clear a Light as I can, I shall impartially set down the Arguments of each Side, and allow the Reader to judge which of the Families bids fairest for it.

THE only Argument used by the Family of Lochbuy is That they have had a well received Tradition among themselves in all Ages That their Predecessor Eachin Reganich was the oldest Brother. After conversing with the most knowing Men now alive of this Family upon this Head I could never find any other Argument than this nor any Thing to support this uncertain and much contradicted Tradition but a Supposition That Lauchlan might have been the prettiest Man or the most cunning to insinuate himself in Mac Donald's Favour and so run away with the Birth Right and Blessing. Nor have they any other Answer to make when pressed with the Marks of Primogenitures being in the other Family in all Ages. But 'tis a known Maxim Supposito Quolibet, sequitur Quidlibet. So those Might and May bes do not in the least strengthen the Tradition. On the other Side there is a constant well received Tradition not only among those of the Family of Dowart but among all their Neighbours That Lauchlan was the oldest Brother, and his Successors were reputed Chiefs of the Clan, not only at Home, but every where they were known, and that not of late but Time out of Mind. Moreover, some of those who owned their Descent from the Family of Lochbuy never owned any Chief but the Representative of the Family of Dowart. This Tradition is strengthened by what follows.

THAT Lauchlan Lubanich got from M^cDonald the greatest Estate and the most Honourable Alliance, That he made him his Lieutenant General in Time of War, and conferred this Honour not only upon him, but also entailed the same to his Posterity, and gave them the Honour of the Right Hand of all the Clans in Battle. Moreover, in Time of War the Lairds of Lochbuy always served as Lieutenant Colonels under those of Dowart, and never aspired to any higher Command. In Time of Peace as well as War the Lairds of Lochbuy gave the Place of Honour to the others without any Dispute. All those Things are known beyond Contradiction. In antient Writs the Lairds of Dowart are often stiled Maclean Laird of Maclean; Whereas those of Lochbuy are never stiled but by the Title of Lochbuy as far as I could ever read or hear. The Lairds of Dowart have used the Stile of THAT ILK, and it has been given them by all those that knew them; Whereas those of Lochbuy never used the same or contradicted the others for so doing. On the Contrary the late Murdoch Maclean of Lochbuy in backing his Letters for the late Sir John Maclean added of that Ilk, which many now alive can attest. The Lairds of Dowart of sometime past subscribed Maclean without their proper Names by Way of Preheminence; Whereas those of Lochbuy never did or argue against the others doing it. All which impartially weighed, the Family of Dowart thinks sufficient Proofs of Primogeniture, especially, considering there is Nothing against them but an ill vouched Tradition supported by some Suppositions, which is but begging rather than proving the Argument, and the whole believed by a few interested Persons only. Upon the whole I may be allowed to make those few Reflections. As there are no Grounds for supposing Eachin to have been in any Thing inferior to his Brother and so to have been outwitted by him, the supposing of it is but a very weak Handle or rather none at all to invalidate the Family of Dowart's Right to the Superiority.

In the next Place let us consider what Way those Brothers got their Estates from Mac Donald. It was not through Love or Favour but by Force against his Will. He their Prisoner carried by them where they pleased, obliged to give them his solemn Oath of Friendship, to grant them such Lands as they pleased to ask and his Daughter in Marriage to One of them. From which Circumstances 'tis reasonable to conclude That, seeing they had the making of their own Fortunes, the eldest would never suffer his Brother to cheat him before his Face, and not only to get the best Estate and the greatest Alliance, but also the Superiority in every Point, and that not only he himself should be subject to his Younger Brother contrary to the Order of Nature, but that all his Race should be so to his Brother's Representatives. This is much the more incredible because that in those Days Men picqued themselves upon Superiority, it being of so much Honour and Advantage to them, But even supposing but not granting Hector to have been such a weak Man as some of his Descendents would have us believe he was without any Shadow of Reason, and That he should freely consent for himself and his to be subject to, and denude himself of his Birthright in Favours of his Brother and his Posterity, I think it does not much mend the Matter. For in that Case all Men and Laws would look upon his Brother as his Superior, it being known to all the World That there is Nothing a Man is possessed of but he may divest himself and his Posterity of, yea, even of his very Birth Right of which there has been innumerable Examples, and, though there cannot be shown a formal Renunciation under Eachin's Hand, yet his very consenting to the Matter and his Posterity's acquiescing in that Consent would have made it as valid as if there was a formal Renunciation. This very Argument may be retorted upon this Family; For Charles Lochbuy's eldest Son divested himself of the whole Estate to a very little in Favours of his younger Brother, and he and his Posterity, while any of them remained, were Subjects to the Posterity of the younger Brother whose Successors are to this Day in Possession of the Estate. I doubt if they can show a formal Renunciation according to Law under this Charles his Hand, yet I am sure the present Lochbuy would laugh at any of Charles's Posterity that would come to ask either a Part of the Estate or challenge any Superiority upon Account of a Birthright which his Predecessor had voluntarily renounced, and in which his Posterity had acquiesced. He might also plead long Possession without Interruption and Prescription. Which Arguments, if they would hold in this Case, why not in the other, they being parallel, if it could be proven That Eachin was the First-Born. From all which I think Lochbuy has little to say for his being Chief of the Macleans.

LAUHLAN LUBANICH had by Mac Donald's Daughter a Son called Eachin ruoidh ni Cath or Hector Ruffus bellicosus. He commanded as Lieutenant General under the Earl of Ross at the Battle of Harlaw in the Year 1411, where he and Irvin [page 181.] of Drum seeking out one another by the Armorial Bearings on their Shields met and killed each other. His Body was carried from the Field of Battle by the Clan Innes & Clan vic vilvory of Morvern and buried at I Collumkill.

WE have a Tradition That this Eachin ruoidh performed many brave Actions in his Time which justly gained him the Title of Bellicosus, particularly, That he commanded an Army in Ireland, took the City of Dublin & a Fleet that lay in the Harbour with several other Things omitted here because there is no Authority for them but Tradition. He was married to a Daughter of the Earl of Duglas, & had by her Two Sons Lauchlin and John. After the Battle of Harlaw there was a mutual Agreement 'twixt the Lairds of Drum and Maclean to exchange Swords, which was kept up for a long Time by both Familys to cancell all Enmity for the future that might happen on Account of the above narrated Slaughter. Such another Agreement there was 'twixt the Families of Grant and Maclean.

To Eachin Ruoidh succeeded his eldest Son LAUCLAN BRONICH or big Bellyed. He had a Son before Marriage by Mac Eachern of Kingerloch's Daughter called Donald of whom are descended the Families of Ardgour and Borera in Uist. His First Lady was MacLeod of Harish his Daughter by whom he had Neill & John Garve. Of Neill descended the Family of Ross called Slichd Neill vic Neill, otherwise called Slichd i chlaive ierin or Iron Sword, because of their Signal Valour, and the Family of Shunay. Of John Garve (so called for his Gigantick Stature and Strength) is descended the Family of Coll. Lauchlin Bronich was taken Prisoner, and kept so for a long Time by the Earl of Mar after the Battle of Harlaw, during which Time his Brother John was Factor to his Estate and in Conjunction with Donald Balloch Mac Donald defeat the Earls of Mar and Caithness at Inverlochic in the Year 1432.

LAUCLAN BRONICH's Lady dying during his Imprisonment or before it took to his Second Lady a Daughter of the Earl of Mar. It seems That in his Contract with this Lady he was obliged to make the Heir Male of that Marriage his Successor in Prejudice of his Sons of the First Marriage, which he did accordingly ; For Neill the Eldest renounced his Right to the Estate and Superiority, so that to him succeeded LAUHLIN OIG his Son by Mar's Daughter, who married Catharin Daughter to Colin First Earl of Argyle and Chancellor of Scotland, by whom he had Eachin oir ni nimbristin, and a Daughter called Florance or Finvola, who was married to Celestine de Insulis of Lochalsh designed Frater Carnalis to John Earl of Ross in a Charter by the said Earl to him of many Lands in Inverness Shire and to his Heirs Male to be procreat 'twixt him and the said Finvola.

EACHIN OIR was Lieutenant General to Mac Donald the Elder against his Son at a Sea Fight in the Bloody Bay in Irish called Barirereg near Tobermory Bay in the Island of Mull, where both Mac Donald the Father and Maclean were taken Prisoners. He was at continual Strife with his Neighbours, who gained Nothing at his Hands, particularly, Clanronald. He was killed at the Battle of Flowdon Hill September 9th 1513. 'Tis said of him That seeing the King in imminent Danger from the English Archers he interposed himself and received in his Body the Arrows levelled at his Majesty, so dyed bravely by his own Body shielding that of his Sovereign's. He was married to MacIntosh's Daughter by whom he had his Son and Heir. [page 182.]

LAUHLAN CATANICH so called because he lived in his Youth among the Clan Chattan. He married First Elizabeth Daughter to Archibald Earl of Argyle, but had no Issue by her nor by Auchinbrek's Daughter, whom he married for his Second Lady. He had by Maclean of Treshinish's Daughter Eachin mor, who succeeded him and Allan ni Sop. He lived to a great Age, and was murdered by his own Brother in Law the First Campbell Laird of Calder in his Bed at Edinburgh. To him succeeded his eldest Son.

EACHIN MOR, who built the Castle of Dowart. He took his Place in Parliament as One of the Lords of the Kingdom. I have been informed by the late Brolos That he saw among his own Papers a Letter from Mac Clelland Lord Bombie Earl of Kirkudbright directed to this Eachin mor thus, To my worthy Chief Lord Hector MacLean of Dowart. The Letter is now lost with Papers of greater Value, which were known to have been in Brolos's Custody.

THIS Eachin was a very frugal Man and a great Merchant. In his Time the Family of Argyle began the First Encroachments upon the Family of Maclean, but could gain Nothing by it. After some Bickerings they made all Odds even by a mutual Alliance; For Argyle married Julian Maclean's daughter, and gave his Daughter Janet in Marriage to Eachin oig Maclean's Son and Heir.

THIS Earl of Argyle was called Archibald oig ruoidh. Maclean's Daughter was his Second Lady, by whom he had no Issue. After his Death she was married to Oneil and after him to ODonil in Ireland, and last to Stewart of Appin. She was famous for her beauty. Eachin mor was married to a Daughter of Hugh MacDonald First Laird of Slate and Brother to the Earl of Ross, by whom he had Eachin oig his Successor, and Eoin or John duih, from whom descended the Family of Kenlochalin.

AND Seven Daughters all matched to Highland Lairds. Julian the Second Youngest matched as above written. Eachin oig lived but Three Years after his Father, in which Time he spent all the money his Father left him leaving behind One Son by Argyle's Daughter called Lauchlan Mor. [page 183.] She married again Eachin Son to Allan ni Sop, and after his Death was married to Mac Leod of Harrish.

LAUHLAN MOR OR MAGNUS (justly so called for the Greatness of his Mind and Body) being but a Child when his Father died, the King took Care of his Education, and Eachin Mac Allan ni Sop his Grand Uncle's Son made himself Tutor to his Estate with the Design never to restore it if he could. He was a brave, but wicked, Man, who never studied the Justness of his Pretensions providing he was able to maintain them by Force. Having married the Lady Maclean and being Tutor he expected he might easily make his Peace, although he should cut off his Pupill when he came to his Hands. But Lauchlan Mor's being at Court and continuing there till he was of Age to manage his Business hindered his Design. Maclean coming Home to take the Management of his Estate was very much cajolled by his Tutor, who at the same Time endeavoured to give his Clan a bad Impression of him giving out he was but a Fool. Yet, young as he was, he saw through his Tutor's Politicks, and looked upon himself no better than a Prisoner where he should be Master, none but the Tutor's Creatures coming near him, and well understanding That there wanted but a fit Opportunity of cutting him off he fell a counterplotting with his Uncle Eoin duih and Mr. Lauchlan the Laird of Lochbuy's Son. He opening the Castle of Dowart to them by Night, they surprized Eachin Mac Allan in his Bed, and carrying him to the Island of Coll cut off his Head. Lauchlan Mor going to Court King James the Sixth proposed a Match 'twixt him and the Heiress of Athol. He coming Home to make ready for the Wedding visited at the Earl of Glencairn's, where falling in Love with Margaret Earl William's Second Daughter he married her, by which he lost the great Estate of Athol. Soon after this some of the MacDonalds of Slate going to Islay were Wind bound in the Island of Jura, where Maclean had Possessions. They either out of Want or Ill Will killed a Number of Cattle belonging to Maclean's Tenants. Of which Injury the Tenants going to Dowart and complaining, Maclean raised such of his Clan as lay nearest him, and going straight to Jura surprized the MacDonalds early in the Morning at a Place called Inir i crochd vricht, and killed many of them, the rest flying to Islay in their Boats. The MacDonalds being in all Ages Men readier to revenge than pocket Injuries, the whole Clan South and North gathered, and landed in Mull. Maclean being not in Readiness to receive them in the fair Fields sheltered himself and his Men with all their Cattle in the highest Hill in the Island giving strict Orders That none should descend to the Plains. Yet contrary to Orders a Gentleman of Argour's Family skirmished with the Enemy, and was defeat with some Loss. Among others that were killed there was a brave Gentleman of the Family of Treshinish called Alan killed. [page 184.] The MacDonalds finding none to make Head against them in the Plains, and not being able to force the high and steep Mountains left the Island designing to return very soon in greater Numbers, and, as they were preparing for this, Maclean called together his whole Clan, Dependents and Vassals, among whom were the Lairds of M°Kinnon and Barra and Maclean of Barera, who, though he lived among the Mac-

LAUHLAN MOR being prepared to give them a warm Reception and understanding That all the Families of the MacDonalds were joined as One Man against him thought it not prudent to allow them to come again to the Heart of his Countrey, but attacked them in an Island South of Kerira called Bacca, where he was at a great Disadvantage. They having Possession of the Island were drawn up in good Order on the Shoar untill they were forced to give Ground by the frequent well ordered Volleys of Arrows from Maclean's Galleys. After landing and coming to handy Blows and fighting long and obstinately the MacDonalds were wholly routed, and betook themselves to their Galleys on the other Side of the Island having lost a great Number of Men. In this Battle MacNeill of Barra and Maclean of Borera behaved bravely. The MacDonalds were so much weakened by their Overthrow that, as far as I could learn, they never again invaded the Island of Mull, and Angus MacDonald of Islay was so heartily wearied of the Quarrel that he sought by all Means a Reconciliation, which was soon after brought about. But he was a Man neither to forgive or forget Injuries. He could not be easy with a Neighbour that was able to put a Stop to his Ambition, and being a compleat Master of the Art of Dissimulation resolved to effect that by Fraud which he could not by open or generous Force, which he did in the following Manner. After both sides had laid down their Arms MacDonald invited Lauchlan Mor to his House in a friendly Manner as a signal Mark of a hearty Reconciliation. But Maclean doubting his Honour would not go. Upon which MacDonald, to make his Fraud pass the better, and being sure Maclean would not violate the Laws of Hospitality, came to the Castle of Dowart where he was well received and heartily entertained for several Days. As he was going away he gave Maclean a Second Invitation, who depending too much upon the Honour and Friendship of his perfidious Neighbour accepted it.

HE, accordingly went to MacDonald's House at Kintire accompanied by his Uncle John Duih and Seventy more mostly Gentlemen of his Family, where after they had car-roused most Part of the Night they were laid to sleep in a Kiln, where they were not long before the House was surrounded by armed Men with MacDonal'd at their Head. Maclean and his Men betook them immediately to their Arms, and seeing they could not resist such superior Numbers they began to capitulate upon Honourable Terms, which were soon granted them, but assoon broken: For, as they went out of the House they were bound Two and Two with Ropes, and Two of them whom Angus hated more than the rest he caused to burn the Kiln over them, and next Morning contrary to Capitulation he caused execute Two more of them, and continued so doing every Day till of the Seventy Maclean and his Uncle only remained. While this was acting, Two Gentlemen of the Family of Islay were taken Prisoners in Mull, which MacDonal'd of Islay hearing he agreed to release Maclean and his Uncle upon Condition those Gentlemen that were Prisoners in Mull should be set at Liberty. Accordingly he let Maclean go, and kept his Uncle as Hostage untill the fore-mentioned Gentlemen were liberate. Some Days after Maclean was gone, Mac Ieain of Ardnimurchuan coming to MacDonal'd informed him That, assoon as Lauchlan Mor arrived in Mull, he caused execute the Two Gentlemen. Upon which without further Deliberation Eoin duih was execute. But Maclean, as he had Regard to his Word and Honour, also knowing his Uncle to be in Danger, made all Haste to relieve the imprisoned Gentlemen, who came to MacDonal'd the next Day after John duih's Execution. Sir George Mackenzie in his Criminals in the Title of Parricide says That it was a received Tradition That Act 51 Parl. 11 James 6 enacting That Murther under Trust should be punished as Treason was First made upon MacDonal'd's killing the Laird of Maclean. Which Passage seems to relate to the above written Action; For, though Maclean was not killed, yet his Uncle and Seventy of his Men were basely murthered under Trust. [page 185.]

IN the year 1594 Maclean was ordered by the King to join the Earl of Argyle against the Earl of Huntley. Both Armies meeting in the North at Glenlivet. My Lord Argyle with the Forces under his Command retired. Lauchlan Mor drawing up his Men at some Distance from the Main Body of the Army kept his Ground, and, when the Gordons began to attack him, his Men poured such Showers of Arrows upon them that they were obliged to give them no more Trouble. So standing their Ground till the Evening they joined Argyle that Night. Lauchlan Mor offered That, if Argyle should allow him to choose 500 Men out of the whole Army together with his own Clan, he would bring him the Earl of Huntley dead or alive, w^{ch} Argyle rejected, and Huntley hearing the Proposal studied Revenge, which he afterwards effected against Lauchlan Mor's Son, as shall be told in its Place.

LAUHLAN MOR was not a Man that could tamely sit with the Injuries done him by MacDonal'd of Islay in murdering his Uncle and other Friends. So applying himself to the Government the forementioned Act of Parliament was made upon this Occasion. He got, moreover, Letters of Fire and Sword against MacDonal'd with an Order to the Lairds of Macleod and Lochiell to assist him to put the same in Execution, which he did going to Islay and fighting the MacDonal'ds and burning the whole Island. Angus after his Defeat having locked himself up in his Castle, having been hotly pursued to the very Gates, who seeing he could not resist the Storm was resolved to buy his Peace, which he did by giving over the Half of Islay to Maclean. Twenty Pound Land of which belonged before this to the Family of Maclean. The best Harbour upon the Sound of Islay is called Port Ascaig. This Place Maclean would have in his Division of the Island as being the most convenient for landing in from any other Part of his Estate. It was also the most convenient for MacDonal'd, who would not therefore give it; So disagreeing upon the Matter they appointed to meet some Time after to adjust Differences in a friendly Method. Accordingly, Lauchlan Mor went to Islay against the Day appointed with his eldest Son and his whole Clan landing in an Island called Island Niave, where he left his Son and Men, except Seven Score, who accompanied him to Grunoir't being the Place appointed from whence he sent his Proposals to MacDonal'd, who was James the Son of the fore-said Angus Heir to his Father's Wickedness and Perfidy as well as to his Estate. James sent back some Gentlemen with an indifferent Answer, and ordered them at the same Time to spy how Maclean was guarded. They seeing his Men few in Number and seeing the Boats of those in the Island ebbed past the Possibility of being launched by Reason of the Length of the Shoar, the Depth of the Sands and the Bulk of the Gallies returned to MacDonald telling him That now or never was his Time for being upsides with Lauchlan Mor. Upon which he immediately attacked him all his Islay Men. Maclean made a brave Resistance, and obliged the MacDonalds to give Ground Three several Times. But the Kintyre Men coming up overpowered Maclean and his small Number, himself being shot in the Belly through his Steel Targe. The greatest Part of his Men were cut to Pieces about him bravely choosing to die rather than survive their beloved Chief and Master. The few that survived could not launch their Boats, and go to the Island, but were obliged to fly to other Parts from whence they could get safe Passage Home.

THUS in the Year 1598 fell the brave Lauchlan Mor the Scourge of the MacDonalds much lamented by all his Neighbours. He was the First Protestant Chief of the Macleans.

HE left Issue by Glencairn's Daughter Eachin oig his eldest Son and Heir, Lauchlan Oig Predecessor of the present Family of Torloisk, Gillean Allan and Charles and some Daughters one of them married to Lochbuy.

ARCH-BISHOP Spotswood in his Church History gives him a splendid Character, and, the famous Mr. Johnston writes his Epitaph in the following Words.

LAUHLANUS MACLANUS Duartius excelsus prosus animo et [page 187.]
 Heroicâ corporis dignitate pariter et robore, cum nobilissimis Heroum veterum virtutis laude comparandus, ex insidiis per sororis suæ filium indignissimâ morte peremptus est Anno Christi 1598.

Heroum veterum nova gloria, fama novorum,
 Fama vetus, pariter gloria prisca, recens.
 Objice tela, neces et mille pericula rerum,
 Deficiunt citiùs tela, pericla, neces,
 Quàm Maclano animi, aut animus sua robora Dexter
 Pectora, pectoribus conciliivæ vigor.
 Nusquam, heu ! tuta fides. Ferit impia dextra repotis Heroem hæc nullum secula ferre valent.

EACHIN OIG succeeding his Father and returning from Islay, where he was by the unlucky Situation of the Place an idle Spectator of his Father's Death and the Defeat of his Friends, immediately set himself in a Posture of being revenged, which he soon did; For raising Letters of Fire and Sword against James MacDonal'd he landed in Islay being accompanied by the Lairds of MacLeod, Lochiell, MacKinnon and Barra, and defeat the MacDonal'ds in a pitched Battle at a Place called Beinbigirie, and burnt the whole Island. After this I could not learn any Difference 'twixt him and the MacDonal'ds.

HE was a severe Justiciary. He got the Estate into his Hands when it was in it's best Circumstances amounting to about Five Hundred Merk Land, but was very much impaired in his Time. The Marquis of Huntley studied to be revenged for the Offer that Lauchlan Mor made to the Earl of Argyle the Night after the Battle of Glenlivet, and had an Opportunity of being so in the following Manner. There was a Convention of Estates to be holden at Stirling by a certain Day, where all those cited were to answer to their Names or forfault a certain Share of their Estates. Maclean being One of those cited came to Stirling by the Day appointed. But, while he was changing his Clothes, his Name was called, which he not answering to was forfaulted of the Twenty Pound Land of Garghavich in Lochaber, of which Huntley took a Gift, and all the Friends and Interest that Maclean could make could never get the Sentence recalled. Several other Parts of the Estate was in his Time lost, of which I cannot give a Distinct Account for the Want of the Papers of the Family.

[page 188.] HE married First the 2^d Daughter of Colin Mackenzie of Kintail Predecessor of the present Earl of Seaforth, by whom he had Eachin Mor his eldest Son, who succeeded him, and Lauchlan, who also succeeded him. He married again a Daughter of Atheson of Gosefoord, by whom he had Donald, of whom Brolos is descended and John Duidh.

To him succeeded Eachin Mor. He married Margaret eldest Daughter of Roderick Laird of Macleod, but had no Issue. He was accounted a good Man but unactive. He out-lived his Father but about Five or Six Years, and died leaving his Estate to his Brother.

SIR LAUCLAN, who was Knighted in his elder Brother's Life Time by the Title of Sir Lauchlan Maclean of Morvern. He was much courted by the Marquis of Argyle in the Beginning of the Civil War. But Nothing would persuade him from his Duty to his King and Countrey, which made him join the Marquis of Montrose assoon as he could. The Evening before the Battle of Inverlochy he met him in Lochaber, and was present at the Battle accompanied with 30 Men only. After which coming Home he raised his whole Clan, and joined Montrose immediately after the Battle of Alford, and continued with him till after the Battle of Kilsyth, when coming Home he and the brave Alexander MacDonald defeat a Party of Argyle's consisting of Seven Hundred Men at Laggan mor in Lorn, they having but about Two Hundred, the rest of their Men being severed from them by the Darkness of the preceding Night. He made ready a Second Time for joining Montrose, and, after he began his March, he was acquainted That the King had ordered Montrose to disband his Army. Upon w^{ch} Maclean kept himself quietly at Home. Sometime after Sir David Lesley coming to the Island of Mull with a strong Party of Horse & Foot obliged him to deliver Eight Irish Gentlemen, who sheltered themselves with him, Seven of whom were execute at Aros, the Eighth making his Escape by the Swift-ness of his Horse. Sir Lauchlan's Character suffered much for giving up the Irish. But, if the Circumstances he was in were well known and impartially considered, he would not be so much blamed; For his then only Son and apparent Heir being at School at Dumbarton was taken Prisoner, and would be liberate upon no other Terms than the giving up of those very Eight Irish Officers, and Who would not do as he did? His Enemies being Masters of his Son and a very strong Party of them in the Heart of his Countrey, where they destroyed all with Fire and Sword Foot forward, he and his Men not able to engage them because of their Numbers were forced to take Shelter in the highest of the neighbouring Hills without any Hope of Relief. Nor could he obtain Peace for himself, nor Liberty for his Son but on the foresaid Terms. The Estate of Maclean paid none of the Publick Dues during the Civil War, and Maclean serving the King at his own Charges thought the Publick Dues of his Estate but a small enough Compensation for the great Expences he could not miss to be at, nor did he think it consistent with his Loyalty to pay them to those who so unjustly usurped the Royal Authority. But the Marquis of Argyle, who might be truly said to Cromwell it in Scotland, made the Laird of Maclean the sole Butt of his Malice for joining the contrary Faction.

So intending a Process got a Decreet against him for the foresaid Publick Dues. Maclean going to Inverary to accommodate Matters was taken by Caption and imprisoned in the Castle of Carrick in Cowell, where he was obliged to give his Bond for the pursued Sum before he would be set at Liberty. This was the First Grounds of that Debt which at last ruined the Family. Sir Lauchlan married Mary Second Daughter to Roderick Laird of MacLeod, by whom he had Sir Hector and Sir Allan and Two Daughters, the eldest married to Sir Euin Cameron of Lochiell and the Second to Lauchlan Laird of MacKinnon. Very soon after his Imprisonment he died in the Year 1648 or 49, and was succeeded by Sir Hector, or,

EACHIN RUOIDH, who was One of the compleatest Gentlemen of his Time for Parts and Person. As he came to the Estate his People in the Island of Mull and in Morvern were harassed by Thefts and Robberies daily committed by Argyle's People of Ardnimurchuan and Lorn, and after Sir Hector had made repeated Complaints to Argyle of those Depredations to no Purpose, he went to Ardnimurchuan, and there kept Court, & so far terrified the Inhabitants that they paid him Homage as they would do to their lawfull Superior, and made Restitution of what they had taken away for the Seven preceding Years. The same Way he treated those of Lorn. When Argyle questioned him for doing so he answered That, since His Lordship either would not, or could not, bridle his unruly Thieves, he was resolved That he would make them keep clear of his People or make their Necks suffer for it.

He set his Heart upon paying his Debt to Argyle, of which he paid in One Sum a great Part, and would have done it compleatly, had he lived in Peace for any Time. Some Camerons that lived in Morvern having killed Maclean of Kingerloch and wounded his Son made their Escape. Sir Hector killed all their Cows to the Number of 3 or 400, and was resolved upon a further Prosecution of them had he lived. The Mac Iains of Ardnimurchuan much about the same Time murdered Maclean of Isle of Muck Brother to the Laird of Coll a [page 190.] Gentleman very much lamented, whose Death would not pass unpunished but that his King and Countrey's Cause called Sir Hector, and made him lay aside his private Resentments. In the Year 1651 he went to Stirling at the Head of Seven Hundred Men, where after a short Stay he was ordered to Innerkeithing with the Laird of Buchannan under the Command of Sir John Brown and General Holburn of Menstrie, who commanded the Horse, to stop Cromwell's Passage over the Firth. But Holburn being either rank Villain or Coward or both, assoon as he saw the Highlanders fairly engaged, made off with all his Horse, and left them naked to the Mercy of double or triple Numbers, where all their gallant Behaviour could avail them little, but being surrounded on all Sides were cut to Pieces. Here fell the brave Sir Hector in the 27 or 28 Year of his Age nobly sacrificing his Life and Clan for the Publick Interest, and more could not be done by the most famous Patriots of Greece or Rome. Of the Seven Hundred Macleans that engaged not over Fourty ever returned to their Countrey, and those always carried about them the Marks of their untainted Loyalty and Courage. The Buchannans escaped no better. The Earl of Clarendon must have been misinformed in laying the Loss of this Battle to the Charge of Sir John Brown, who fought bravely, was wounded, taken Prisoner & died of those Wounds. Whereas the Battle was lost by Holburn's Villany.

To Sir Hector succeeded his Brother Sir Allan being about Five or Six Years of Age. His Uncle Donald Maclean of Brolos and Murdoch Maclean of Lochbuy were his Tutors. During his Minority there was Nothing done towards the Payment of his Debts. At the Age of Nineteen he married Julian Daughter to John Laird of Macleod. He made many Attempts to agree with the Earl of Argyle, but all to no Purpose. Argyle bought up all the Debts he could against him. He was at last obliged to go to London by the Way of Ireland to implore His Majesty's Assistance. But Duke Lauderdale being Argyle's fast Friend, and having the King's Ear, robbed Maclean of his hoped for Success, untill the King peremptorily ordered Lauderdale to see him have Justice. The Duke at his next coming to Scotland patched up a Kind of Accommodation, by which Argyle obliged himself to give so much of the Estate to Maclean, and the King was to buy so much more from Argyle as in whole would make up to Maclean an Estate of £500 Pounds Sterling per Annum. During these Transactions Sir Allan died in the 29th Year of his Age in the Year 1674 leaving by his foresaid Lady his only Child.

[page 191.] SIR JOHN at the Age of four Years to the Tutelage of Lauchlan Maclean of Brolos and Lauchlan Maclean of Torloisk. Immediately, as they began to manage, they joined to themselves by good Pensions My Lord MacDonald and Sir Ewin Cameron of Lochiell to strengthen them against Argyle's Power, and, notwithstanding of the foresaid Agreement, came to several Acts of Hostility with him to keep him out of Possession. But Sir Ewin, though he was bound to the Macleans by Alliance, Money and a solemn Oath, yet renounced all upon Argyle's quitting to him a Debt of 40,000 Merks, which he owed him, which occasioned a By-Word then used upon that Head (Ewin has lost his God, but the Earl his Money). In the Year 1680 the King wrote to his Privy Council in Scotland to see the forementioned Agreement ended, which was done, and My Lord Argyle had the Island of Tyrie for his Share of the Estate, and Maclean all the rest. In the Year 1682 the King appointed Sir George Gordon of Haddo Chancellor, William Marquis of Queensberry Treasurer, John Marquis of Athol Privy Seal, James Earl of Perth Justice General, Kenneth Earl of Seaforth, Sir George MacKenzie of Tarbert Clerk Register, and Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh King's Advocate, Overseers of Maclean's Estate. In this Year, Argyle making his Escape from the Castle of Edinburgh and being forefaulted, the Macleans repossessed themselves of Tyrie, and lived very quietly till the dethroning of King James. In the Year 1686 Torloisk died, and Brolos the next Year Upon which Sir John began the Management of his Estate.

HAVING appointed Four Gentlemen his Friends Factors of his Estate he went to his Travels, First to England, thence to France, from whence he returned to Ireland in Company of King James, and came to Scotland from the Siege of Derry accompanied by Sir Alexander Maclean of Otler Son to the Bishop of the Isles. My Lord Dundee at this Time raising Forces for King James, Maclean sent Hector Maclean of Lochbuy his Lieutenant Collonel with 300 Men to his Assistance, who were attacked early in a Morning by 4 or 5 Troops of Horse commanded by Major ——— at a Place in Badenoch called Knockbreck. They defeat the Horse, and killed their Commander with the Loss only of Lochbuy's Ensign-Bearer and a few Centinels, and next Morning joined Dundee. This was the First Blood shed for this Cause in Scotland.

SIR JOHN understanding That his Friend and Neighbour MacNeill of Kalchelly was surrounded by some English Ships of War at the Island of Gidha sent a Detachment of his Men to relieve him under the Command of Sir Alexander Maclean, who brought Kalchelly safe off with the Loss only of the Arm of One of Mr. MacNeill's Men shot off by a Cannon Bullet. Assoon as Sir John could be ready, he marched off to join My Lord Dundee leaving his Castle of Dowart well provided commanded by James Maclean, which was furiously attacked soon after by Sir George Rook and the Men of War under his Command cannonading it for several Days to no Purpose. At the Battle of Kellicranky Maclean with his Clan being upon the Right were obliged to take up double Ground to equal the Extent of Two Regiments that were drawn opposite to them. Dundee being killed here, although the Highlanders won the Day, yet they were not so expert in using the Victory, nor had they a Commander agreeable to their Genius, but an old unactive Man, One Colonel Cannon, who, as they were passing by the Duke of Athol's House at Dunkell, where the Cameronian Regiment was garrisoned, caused them to attack it; Whereas they had Nothing fit for such a Work, and all they got by doing it was to lose a Number of their Men, and to be obliged to retreat shamefully. Here Sir John lost Two

Captains, and Sir Alexander Maclean's Leg was broke. He sent Captain Allan Maclean his Cousin and Captain John Maclean Brother to Sir Alexander and a Detachment of his Men to the North with Colonel Cannon, who with other Highlanders were attacked upon the First of May at Cromdell Hill. They stood till surrounded by the Enemy. Then the Soldiers threw down their Arms, and made the best of their Way. But the Two forementioned Officers stood, and were made Prisoners. Sir John returning Home with his Men kept Possession of his Estate untill Argyle had procured a Commission from King William to bring the Macleans to due Obedience, which he began to bring about with Fire and Sword coming to Mull with 2500 Men. Sir John would have given him a warm Reception, but that he looked for Glengarry and Lochiell, who faithfully promised him Assistance of Men, but, both failing, he did not see it reasonable to engage, seeing all his Friends, save his own Clan, had forsaken him, and that he knew, although he should get the better of Argyle, yet being Rebell and Argyle in Favour with the Government, he might soon recruit a greater Force. So he resolved to another Way to Work. Causing all his Friends take Protections from Argyle he with a Number of young Gentlemen and Soldiers went to the Island of Kernburg, where they took several Ships belonging to the Government, One of which was loaded with Necessaries for the Army in Ireland. He staid in Kernburg till the Year 1692, when having King James's Orders he capitulated with the Government, and went to London, where he was graciously received by King William offering him a Regiment, which Sir John declining, he desired he should go Voluntier to the next Campaign, and, when he returned, he would see Argyle and him reconciled, and desired One Johnston Secretary for Scotland to see he would get no Injustice done him, while he was absent. Sir John came to Edinburgh to prepare for the Campaign, and Johnston, instead of being his Friend, proved his Enemy; For, when he put him in Mind of the King's Commands, he denied it, and threatened laying Sir John up in the Castle. Upon which he rode Post for London, and designed for Flanders after the King, who was gone before. When he came to London, the Queen told him That she had received Intelligence from Scotland That he was gone to the Highlands to raise a Rebellion, but That she was glad it was not so, and wrote in his Favour to the King her Husband. He proceeded on his Way to the Camp as far as Bruges in Flanders, where, getting the Account of King William's Defeat at Landen, and not waiting for a true Account of that Battle, his evil Genius hurried him on to his Ruin; For expecting That all was irrecoverably lost on King William's Side, and That every Thing would turn to the old Channell, he posted away for St. Germain, where he remained untill Queen Anne's Accession to the Throne, and married Mary MacPherson Daughter to Sir Æneas MacPherson of Essy.¹

At Queen Anne's Accession to the Throne there was an Indemnity issued out to all who were abroad. Sir John embraced this Opportunity of trying his Fortune once more in Britain. But his Lady being big with Child fell sick at Calais, where she was delivered of a Son in November 1703. This postponed Sir John's Voyage, so that the Day prefixed in the Indemnity passed before he came to England. Yet trusting the Queen's Clemency he embarked assoon as his Lady and Child could bear the Sea, when coming to London he was put in the Tower and tried for Queensberry's Plot, or rather My Lord Lovat's and assoilzied. When he was liberate, the Queen gave him a Pension of 500 Pounds Sterling a Year, which he enjoyed during her Life. The greatest Part of this Time he staid at London, and sometimes in the Highlands of Scotland. Being at the Garrison of Inverlochy when the Queen died, they attempted to take him and Lochiell Prisoners. But they made Way through the Guards, and left them.

THE Earl of Mar raising an Army for the Pretender in the year 1715, Sir John joined him with his Clan at Ochterardor some Days before the Battle of Sheriff Muir was fought, where he was present at the Head of his Regiment, and had One of his Captains and Four private Men killed, and Donald Maclean of Brolos a noble and brave Gentleman his Lieutenant Colonel wounded. Sir John was by this Time fallen into a Decay, and was at Perth so ill that he could not go to Scoon to pay his Court to the Pretender. When the Army broke up from Perth, and came to Montrose, he was offered to go aboard the same Ship the Pretender went aboard of. But he refused it. He parted with his Men at Keith, and went to Gordon Castle, where this brave Unfortunate ended his Days the 12 of March 1716, and was buried in the Church of Raffin in the Shire of Bamf in the Burial Place of Gordon of Buckie.

EPITOME OF THE ORIGIN AND INCREASE OF THE MACKINTOSHES.

To —————.

By these presents, most illustrious sir, I offer you this manuscript treatise, comprising the Genealogy of the Mackintosh family, and some other chronological observations belonging to the same, in which (as in all human actions, even such as are most exactly conformed to rule, especially in matters of this kind, and of such antiquity) there occur, I doubt not, many defects; and various notable points upon which I have not obtained any information are omitted. But yet, as to establishing the truth of the statements, I venture to say that nothing is there written of any importance or weight, except on the undoubted authority of famous chroniclers, early manuscripts, common tradition, and other memorials of that sort. Where I find the truth clearly vouched, I take care to have it written down boldly; but where there is the least occasion of veritatis tramitem mihi insistendum sedulò curavi. Non in familiæ Makintoshiæ antiquitatis, aut honorabilis unde oriunda est stemmatis ostentationem consummandam hoc mihi proposui pensum, minimè vero.

In eâdem cum Juvenale omnino sum sententiâ Quod Nobilitas sola atque virtus.

Sed quod maximè me ad operam meam Genealogiis hisce, et observationibus colligendis impendendam excitavit, imo ipsisimum (si ita fari liceat) Totum ante oculos hâc in re habitum est, ut, omnibus Makintoshiis et Catanis suam originem ignorantibus, veram descensus notitiam commonstrarem; Cumque ita se res habeat, etsi collectanea ipsa aliquid confusa sint et promiscua, stylo donata humili et inculto, non calamistratis verborum flosculis ornata, non lucidis sententiarum gemmulis [page 200.] instructa, cum nihilominus materia hic tractata ad tuam spectet et familiam, haud abs re erit, ut hoc (vel huic omni ex parte consimile exemplar speciosiori concinnatum manu) in finem cui destinatur domi concerves, sique diligenti ejusdem prælectione, doubt, I name the author: for in every point, however small, I have been, to the best of my ability, sedulously careful to adhere to the path of truth. For I have not set this task to myself by any means in order to parade the antiquity of the Mackintosh family, or of the honourable lineage from which it has sprung. 'For family and ancestry and those things which we have not ourselves made I can scarcely call our own.' I am entirely of the same mind with Juvenal, that virtue is the only nobility.

But what has chiefly moved me to expend my labour on these genealogies, and on the collecting of observations—nay, the very thing itself, if I may so speak, to be kept in view in the whole of this matter—is that I may make clear to all Mackintoshes and Chattans, ignorant of their origin, the true knowledge of their descent. And as the matter stands thus, albeit the collections themselves may be somewhat confused and promiscuous, presented in a humble and uncultured style, not adorned with the artificial flowers of rhetoric, nor set forth with sparkling gems of literature, when, nevertheless, the matter here treated relates to you and to your family, it will not be out of place that, seeing the end to which it is destined, you should preserve this (or a copy, wholly or partly like to this, executed by a more beautiful hand) in your house; and if by diligent perusal of the

PRÆFATIO LECTORI.

BENEVOLE LECTOR,

Si veritatem eorum quæ (præsertim de Mackintoshiorum origine et antiquitate) in hâc Epitome asseruntur dubitaveris, tibi innotescat quod ea argumenta, Documenta ac testimonia, quæ pro Regnorum, Rerum-Publicarum, Civitatum et antiquarum Gentium quarumcunque origine plerumque proferri solent, (viz. Chronica, annales, historiæ, veterum amanuensium Scripta et traditiones universaliter receptæ) eadem (inquam) pro hujus familiæ Originis veritate allegantur.

1° Mackintoshius, ut ait Buchananus lib. 17 Rerum Scotticarum, est magnæ inter priscos Scotos familiæ Princeps. Hæc sunt Buchanani ipsissima verba, quæ non solùm cognomentum (Mackintosh) priscum, sed illam etiam familiam expriscis Scotis oriundam esse demonstrant.

same you shall add somewhat to the things already discovered by you concerning the genealogy of your family (so that you may be able to instruct others) then to him who undertook the work for the sake of yourself and your friends occasion will be given for thinking that his labour has been well bestowed. Farewell.

PREFACE to the READER.

BENEVOLENT READER,

If you should doubt the truth of the statements which are made in this Epitome (especially concerning the origin and antiquity of the Mackintoshes) you should know that such arguments, documents, and testimonies as are wont, for the most part, to be adduced for the origin of kingdoms, republics, cities, and ancient peoples whatsoever (namely, chronicles, annals, histories, writings of old amanuenses, and traditions universally received), the same, I say, are alleged in evidence of the origin of this family.

1. Mackintosh, as saith Buchanan, book 17 of his Rerum Scotticarum, was the chief of a great family among the ancient Scots. These are the very words of Buchanan, and they show, not only the original surname (Mackintosh), but also that the family was sprung from the ancient Scots.

2^o Clanchatani et Clanchi Anno Dom. 1396 insignes inter se inimicitias summâ crudelitate exercebant, et vicinos magnopere infestabant, ad quos reprimendos Moraviæ et Crafordiæ Comites cum copiis a Rege missi sunt, sed eos suis viribus domare non poterant. (Ita Buchananus Lib. 10 Rerum Scoticarum. Boethius Lib. 16 Scot. Hist. et Major Lib. 6 Cap 6. de Gestis Scotorum). Ex quo Makintoshiæ Gentis antiquitas luculenter apparet, Nam, si Makintoshius Clanchatanorum Princeps (ita enim a Buchananus lib. 16 Rerum Scoticarum et a Lesleo lib. 9 de rebus gestis Scotorum designatur) si, inquam Anno 1396 Makintoshius tanto erat bellipotens, non dubitandum est ejus antecessores per multos stetisse annos priusquam ille ad tantas vires pervenerat.

3^o Mackintoshius et Macleanus in Bello Harlaensi Anno 1411 fuere (post Donaldum Hebrideanum) decem mille virorum præcipui Duces (ita ait Boethius lib. 16 Scot. Hist. et Buchananus lib. 10 Rerum Scot. Donaldi Heb. exercitum ita numerat.) Ex hoc etiam non minus Makintoshii antiquitas quàm potentia est patefacta; Nam exercituum ducatus iis temporibus non in peritiores milites, sed in potentiores Gene-

2. The Clanchattan and Clanchi in the year of the Lord 1396 carried on remarkable feuds among themselves with the greatest cruelty, and exceedingly troubled their neighbours. To repress these men, the Earls of Moray and Crawford were sent by the king with forces, but could not by their power subdue them. (So Buchanan, book 10, Rerum Scoticarum; Boethius, book 16, Scotorum Historiæ; and Major, book 6, chap. 6, De Gestis Scotorum.) From which the antiquity of the Mackintosh people clearly appears. For, if Mackintosh, chief of the Clanchattans (for so he is designed by Buchanan, lib. 16, Rerum Scoticarum, and by Leslie, lib. 9, De Rebus Gestis Scotorum), if, I say, in the year 1396, Mackintosh was so puissant in war, it is not to be doubted that his ancestors had flourished for many years before he had attained to such power.

3. Mackintosh and Maclean at the battle of Harlaw, in the year 1411, were (after Donald of the Isles) the principal leaders of ten thousand men (so says Boethius, lib. 16, Scotorum Historiæ, and Buchanan, lib. 10, Rerum Scoticarum, so numbers the army of Donald of the Isles). From this also the antiquity of Mackintosh is not less plain than the power: for the command of armies in those times was not conferred upon trained soldiers, but upon the archas a monticolis conferebatur et ipsa ejus potentia cum tunc non Neotericum fuisse indicat.

Horum amanuensium Scripta, ut fabulosa aut commentitia, nequaquam rejiciendasunt. Magna enim pars rerum notabilium in iis contentarum, aut expressim in Scotchronicis memoratur, aut quodom modo in illis attingitur. Imò nullus amanuensium quasi a Chronicis in iis rebus quæ ad familiam more powerful chiefs of clans, and such power of itself indicates that it was not then new.

4. The writings of three old amanuenses abundantly testify to the origin and genealogy of the Mackintoshes, namely, the writings of Ferquhard, laird of Mackintosh, who was incarcerated at Dunbar; of Andrew Weaver, priest; and of George Monro of Davocharti, who sometime dwelt at Connage. Ferquhard traces the genealogy of the family from Duncan, third earl of Fife, to the decease of Duncan, laird of Mackintosh, who died in the year 1496. Andrew Weaver describes the genealogy of the Mackintosh family from the aforesaid Duncan, Earl of Fife, to William, laird of Mackintosh, who was killed in the slaughter at Strathbogie; and George Monro narrates the history of three Mackintoshes only, namely, the aforesaid Ferquhard, William, slain at Inverness, and Lauchlan oig (that is) younger, murdered at Ravock in the year 1524, and of the deeds performed by the Clanchattan tribe in those times.

The writings of these amanuenses are nowise to be rejected as fabulous or feigned: for the most part of the notable events contained in them are either expressly mentioned or in some way treated of in the Scots chronicles. Indeed, not one of the Makintoshianam pertinent dissentire videtur, præterquam quod Clanchatanorum ductor in pugnâ ad Septentrionale Urbis Perthæ latus Anno 1396 a Boethio lib. 16. Scot. Hist. Christe makeean et a Majore lib. 6. Cap. 6 de gestis Scotorum Christe Johnson designatur. Sed a Ferquharo Makintoshio et Andrea Textore amanuensibus Shaus Makgilchrist vik ean vik Innish nominatur, et in hoc Amanuenses Chronicis sunt præferendi; Quippe Shaus Makgilchrist vik ean vik Innish (Æneæ Domini Makintoshii pronepos vulgò Christe makeean a suis designatus) a præcipuis illius familiæ Historicis ab ævo in ævum Clanchatanis in illâ pugnâ præfuisse dicebatur. Nam ab ipso tribû (Lauchlano Clanchattanæ tribûs Genearchâ tunc grandævo et imbecilli) ob ejus magnanimitatem et fortitudinem eorum Ductor in illo conflictû electus est. 2^{do} Boethius lib. 16 Scot. Hist. Dominum Makintoshium in Bello Harlaensi interemptum fuisse narrat. Sed Ferquhardus et Andreas amanuenses Milcolum Makintoshium tunc Clanchattanorum Ducem ad Annum 1457 vixisse aiunt, et in hoc etiam Boethius est mendosus; Nam Makintoshius nunc Clanchattanorum Genearcha habet chartas eidem Milcolumbo datas Annis 1443, 1447, 1456. et amanuenses is found to differ from the chronicles in what relates to the Mackintosh family, except that the leader of the Clanchattans, in the fight at the north side of the town of Perth in the year 1396, is designed by Boethius, book 16, Scotorum Historiæ Christy Makeean; and by Major, book 6, chapter 6, De Gestis Scotorum, Christy Johnson; but by Ferquhard Mackintosh and Andrew Weaver, amanuenses, he is named Shaw Macgilchrist vic Ian vic Innish; and in this the amanuenses are to be preferred to the chronicles: because Shaw Macgilchrist vic Ian vic Innish (great-grandson of Eneas, laird of Mackintosh, commonly called by his own people Christy Makeean), by the principal histories of the family, from age to age, is said to have been chief of the Clanchattans in that fight. For he was chosen by the clan itself, on account of his magnanimity and bravery, their leader in that combat (Lauchlan, captain of the Clanchattans, being then very aged and imbecile). 2nd Boethius, book 16, Scotorum Historiæ, narrates that the Laird of Mackintosh was killed in the battle of Harlaw. But Ferquhard and Andrew, the amanuenses, say that Malcolm Mackintosh, then chief of the Clanchattans, lived to the year 1457; and in this also Boethius is erroneous: for Mackintosh, now captain of Clanchattans, has charters given to the same Malcolm, dated in the years 1443, 1447, 1456; and Major,

Major Lib. 6. Cap. 10. de rebus gestis a Scotis scribit Macleanum Donaldi Insulani Campi-Ductorem in Bello Harlaensi occisum; Sed de Makintoshio tunc nihil recenset. Præterea in hâc re Amanuenses quippe antiquiores, et iis temporibus quibus hæc evenerant proximiores Chronologi sunt præponendi.

5° Ipsum vocabulum Makintoshich familiæ originem digito quasi demonstrat; Nam Makintoshich est Thani filius, et iste honoris titulus (ex omnium Scotorum Chronicorum consensu) a Milcolumbo Tertio Scotorum Rege in Comitibus titulum permutatus est Anno 1157 aut 1161, Ex quo constat quod tunc aut brevi post Cognomentum Makintosh ortum habuit. Sed dices forsitan Shaum Makintoshium familiæ primum (ex meo concessu) Comitibus (et non Thani) Fifæ fuisse filium. ad hoc R. Primi Makintoshii genitor erat, et Thanus et Comes; Nam ii qui Comites a Milcolumbo Tertio creati sunt, Thani postea ex consuetudine (et Hibernicâ Linguâ Toshich Perenne) book 6, chapter 10, De Rebus Gestis a Scotis, writes that Maclean, general of Donald of the Isles, was slain in the battle of Harlaw: but of Mackintosh then he recites nothing. Moreover, in this matter the amanuenses are to be preferred, because more ancient and nearer in point of time to the period in which these things happened. It is also to be noted that although Malcolm survived the battle of Harlaw, yet James Mackintosh, laird of Rothemurchus, and son of Shaw (who commanded the Clan Chattan at Perth in the year 1396), fell by the sword in that battle; and in this the error of Boethius takes its rise and becomes manifest.

5. The word Mackintosh itself points out, as with the finger, the origin of the family. For Mackintosh is son of the Thane: and that title of honour (by consent of all the Scots Chronicles) was changed by Malcolm third, King of Scots, into the title of Earl, in the year 1157 or 1161: from which it appears that then, or shortly afterwards, the surname of Mackintosh arose. But you will say, perhaps, that Shaw, the first of the family of the Mackintoshes, was (by my own admission) son of the Earl, and not of the Thane of Fife. To this I answer, the father of the first Mackintosh was both Thane and Earl: for those who were by Malcolm Third created Earls, were afterwards, by custom, appellabantur, et sic eorum posterī per quosdam Annos, Exempli Gratiā, Thani Lenni (seu Levinix) et Cathenesiæ fuerant Comites a Milcolumbo 3 creati, et ita a Buchanano et Majore continuò ex inde designati sunt. (Buchananus lib. 7 rerum Scot. Major lib. 4. cap. 6. de gestis Scotorum). Attamen Boethius lib. 13. Scot. Hist. easdem Personas quas Buchananus et Major Comites, ille verò Thanos nuncupat. Ita nunc Montis rosarum et Atholiæ Marchiones, Argatheliæ, Perthæ, Seafordiæ Comites, Lovattæ, Rajjæ et Makdonaldorum Dynastæ, quamvis Marchiones, Comites et Dynastæ a Rege creati sunt, attamen Linguâ Hibernicâ. Gram-mach-mor, Monach-mor, Mackallen-mor, Drumordach-mor, Makynich, Mackimmi, Mackigh, Mackalister, (secundum eorum antecessorum designationem) denominantur.

7° Vetus fraternitas et amicitia inter Wemesios, Shaos, called Thanēs (and in the Gaelic tongue always Toshach), and so their posterity also for some years. For example, the Thanēs of Lennox and Caithness were created Earls by Malcolm the Third; and so they are designated continually thereafter by Buchanan and Major (Buchanan, book 7, Rerum Scoticarum; Major, book 4, chapter 6, De Gestis Scotorum). Boethius, however, book 13, Scotorum Historiæ, calls the same persons Thanēs whom Buchanan and Major call Earls. So now, the Marquises of Montrose and Atholl; the Earls of Argyll, Perth, Seaforth; the Lords Lovat, Reay, and Macdonald, although created by the King, Marquises, Earls and Lords, are yet denominated in the Gaelic language Grammach-mor, Monach-mor, Mackallen-mor, Drumordach-mor, Makynich, Mackimmi, Mackigh, Mackalister (according to the designation of their ancestors). Even so, Shaw, the first of the Mackintoshes, although son of the Earl, was yet rightly surnamed Mackintosh from the old title of honour of his progenitor.

6. The chiefs of the Mackintoshes have continually borne the ensigns of the Thanēs of Fife (under the surname of MacDuff) which plainly indicates their origin and descent.

7. The ancient brotherhood and friendship always observed between the Wemesys, Shaws, Duffs, and Mackintoshes, as kinsmen Duffos et Makintoshios jugiter observata, ut consanguineos ex eodem stemmate (Macduffo) oriundos, familiæ originem exprimit.

MAKINTOSHIANA origine et antiquitate ita ab incerto clarificatâ, plurima quidem, tàm in hujus familiæ Genealogiâ, quam in Chronologicis observationibus, quæ ad meam notitiam non pervenerant, defectiva esse fateor. Sed, si Scriptorum, qui priscis temporibus in Septentrionali Scotiæ plagâ hominum acta aut Genealogiam scriptis mandârunt, paucitas; Si immanis ruina, quæ ex belli eventû et aliis accidentibus amanuensium scriptis fideliter imitandis intensio perpensè consideretur, deliqua in tali tractatû esse minimè est admirandum.

sprung from the same stem (MacDuff) expresses the origin of the family.

8. The common tradition universally received as undoubted truth from age to age (for it is the nature of tradition to endure), as Livy says in reference to Curtius (where antiquity lessens sure belief), and the testimony above written render the origin and antiquity of the Mackintoshes indubitable: whence it is that since the family of the Mackintoshes is the offspring of nobles and great men, it is often in Gaelic designated Suill vigh kin toshich, that it may be distinguished from certain plebeian families of Clanchattans (and others of that kind).

The Mackintosh origin and antiquity having thus been cleared from uncertainty, there are yet many things as well in the genealogy of this family, as in the chronological observations, which have not come to my knowlege, which I confess to be defective. But, if the fewness of writers who in early times in the northern regions of Scotland committed to writing the acts or the genealogy of men, if the wild ruin, occasioned by the event of war and other accidents, the intentness of the amanuenses bent on faithfully imitating writings, be duly considered, it is not to be wondered at that in such a treatise there are defects.

DENIQUE notandum est quod, quotiescunque (ânte Annum Domini 1600) menses Januarius, Februarius et primi 24 dies mensis Martii in hâc Epitome occurrunt cum præcedenti anno annumerandi sunt. Nam ante prædictum tempus Annus in Scotiâ a 25 die M. Martii incipere solebat. Sed sub finem Anni 1599 in conventû publico Annum a Cal. Januariis Anno 1600 et sequentibus inchoari statutum est.

NEM.

PRÆLUDIUM.

ALPINO Scotorum a Brudo Pictorum Rege in prælio (non procul a Taoduno) capto, et paulo post crudeliter obruncato, ejusque capite conto affixo, et in conspectissimo loco Abrenethii (maximi apud Pictos oppidi) ad ludibrium pro-

In conclusion, it is to be noted that as often as (before the years of the Lord 1600) the months January, February, and the first 24 days of the month of March occur in this Epitome, they are to be reckoned with the year preceding: for before the time aforesaid, the year in Scotland used to begin from the 25th day of the month of March: but in the end of the year 1599, in a public convention, the year was ordained to begin from the calends of January in the year 1600 and onwards.

CONCERNING FIFE DUFF and his successors, Thanes and Earls of FIFE (by the surname of MACDUFF) whence the family of MACKIN-TOSH derives its Origin.

PRELUDE.

Alpin, King of Scots, having been taken in battle, not far from Dundee, by Brud, King of the Picts, and shortly after cruelly beheaded, and his head fixed on a pole set up in the most conspicuous place of Abernethy (the chief town of the Picts) for posito, Kenethus Secundus Alpini filius paternæ necis ultionem ita perniciousiter adversus Pictos est persecutus, ut, illorum viribus multis asperis præliis fractis, tandem eos ex omni Britannia expulit, et Pictorum Regnum suo Imperio adjecit Anno Christi 839.

Pictis ita prostratis, agros (per eos antea occupatos) pro virtute cujusque suis divisit, et, ut simul cum Pictis eorum memoria interiret, statuit illorum Possessiones, Regiones, Urbes et Castra novis nominibus (veteribus oblitteratis) designari, et in hæc Divisione Otholiniam (regionem ad id usque tempus ita vocatam) Fifo Duffo viro nobili et bellicoso, et ex priscis Scotis orto (inclaruerat enim hujus viri virtus in bello adversus Pictos gesto) elargitus est.

Hic Fifus Duffus fuit primus Fifæ Thanus, et omnium Fifæ Thanorum Comitumque [cognominis Makduffi] progenitor. Inter Fifum Duffum primum, et Duncanum Fifæ sextum et ultimum, Thanum, sed primum Comitem, quatuor intervenere Thani, quorum Nomina in Scotorum Chronicis non recedantur.

mockery, Kenneth, second son of Alpin, so swiftly prosecuted vengeance against the Picts for the slaughter of his father, that their forces having been vanquished in many fierce battles, he at length expelled them from all Britain, and added the Kingdom of the Picts to his empire in the year of Christ 839.

The Picts, having been thus destroyed, he divided the lands (formerly occupied by them) among his own people for their bravery; and in order that, together with the Picts, the memory of them should perish, he ordained their possessions, countries, cities, and castles to be designated by new names (the old being obliterated); and in this division he gave Otholinia (the district which until that time was so called) to Fife Duff, a man noble and warlike, and sprung from the ancient Scots (because the valour of this man had been very notable in the war carried on against the Picts).

Henceforth, this country was denominated Fife, as a lasting memorial of the deeds strenuously done by Fife Duff.

This Fife Duff was the first Thane of Fife, and progenitor of all the Thanes and Earls of Fife [of the surname of Macduff]. Between Fife Duff the first and Duncan the sixth and last Thane, but first Earl, four Thanes intervened, whose names are not recorded in the chronicles of the Scots.

1. DUNCANUS MAKDUFFUS Sextus Fifæ Thanus, omnium Scotorum Procerum (ut scribit Buchananus) longè potentissimus erat Scotorum primus qui Comitibus titulo est honoratus, et, quia Regni e manibus Makbethi Tyranni restituendi primus fuerat Author, Rex Micolumbus Tertius [cognomine Kendmor] ut ejus nominis factique gloria ad posteros perveniret, illum tribus [vel, alii scribunt, quatuor] privilegiis donavit. Primum, ut posterius ejus Fifenses Thani Regem coronandum in Cathedrâ collocarent. Secundum, ut in Regio exercitû primæ aciei præessent. Tertium, ut ob hominis generosi cædem impræmeditatam 24, ob plebeii 12 Marcas argenti solummodo solverent. Concessit etiam ut tribui Mackduffo perpetua esset Regalitas, hoc est, ut potestatem haberent quoslibet in suo tribû creandi Magistratus aut Judices juridicundo constituendi quâcunque in Actione extra Crimen Majestatis læsæ et, ex quâcunque Regni parte, si quis ex Makduffi tribû vel regione in jus vocatus esset, ad suos revocandi Judices. [page 206.]

2. DUNCANO MAKDUFFO successit filius Micolumbus Secundus Comes, de quo nihil memorabile scriptum in Scoti-Chronicis.

1. Duncan Macduff, sixth Thane of Fife, by far the most powerful (as Buchanan writes) of all the nobles of the Scots, was the first who was honoured with the title of Earl; and forasmuch as he was the prime author of delivering the kingdom from the hands of the tyrant Macbeth, the King, Malcolm Third [sur-named Canmore], in order that the glory of his name and work might descend to posterity, gave him three [or others write four] privileges. First, that his descendants, Thanes of Fife, should set the King to be crowned in his chair: second, that in the royal army they should be preferred to the first rank: third, that for the unpremeditated slaughter of a gentleman they should pay only 24 merks of silver; for the slaughter of a commoner 12 merks. He granted also that to the clan Macduff there should be a perpetual regality: that is, that they should have the power of creating any persons in their tribe magistrates, or of appointing judges for administering the law in any action whatever, excepting the crime of lese majesty; and of recalling from any part of the kingdom, any one of the clan Macduff, or of their country, who might be called in judgment, to their own judges.

2. To Duncan Macduff succeeded his son Malcolm, second Earl, of whom nothing memorable is written in the Scots chronicles.

3. DUNCANUS Milcolumbi filius et Tertius Fifæ Comes fuit vir admodum potens et prudens et Regi suo per quam fidelis, in quo David Rex (Milcolumbi Tertii filius) moribundus tantum sperabat, ut, Milcolumbum nepotem illi peculiariter commendavit et Anno 1153 per eum curavit per universum Regnum circumducendum et pro indubitato Regni Successore accipiendum.

Hic Fifæ Comes quatuor habuit filios, viz., Milcolumbum, Shaum, Johannem et Duncanum. A Milcolumbo Comitibus natû maximo descendere omnes Fifæ Comites usque ad Roberti Secundi Regis tempora.

Shaus Comitibus natû Secundus Præfectus (seu Constabularius) arcis Invernessæ a præfato Milcolumbo Quarto Scotorum Rege est constitutus, et, ibi cum habitaverat, a vicinis Shaw Mackintoshich (id est, Thani filius) vulgò vocabatur, et hoc modo cognomen Makintosh ab eo initium sumpsit, et in ejus posteros transiit.

Ab Johanne Comitibus natû Tertio familia Wemisia originem duxit. Nam uamh est Spelunca vel Antrum, et hic Johannes vulgò a loco habitationis designabatur Jojn moir na wamh, hoc est, Magnus Johannes ab Antro, et processû temporis

3. Duncan, son of Malcolm, and third Earl of Fife, was a man most potent and wise, and very faithful to his King, in whom King David, son of Malcolm Third, when dying, trusted so much that he specially committed to him his grandson, Malcolm; and in the year 1153 he caused him to be led about by him through the whole kingdom, and to be received as his undoubted successor.

This Earl of Fife had four sons, namely, Malcolm, Shaw, John, and Duncan. From Malcolm, the eldest born, descended all the Earls of Fife, until the times of King Robert the Second.

Shaw, second son of the Earl, was appointed by the aforesaid Malcolm Fourth, King of Scots, governor (or constable) of the castle of Inverness; and while he dwelt there he was commonly called by the neighbours Shaw Mackintoshich (that is, son of the Thane), and in this manner the surname Mackintosh took beginning from him, and passed on to his posterity.

From John, third son of the Earl, the Wemyss family derives its origin. For uamh is a cave or den, and this John was commonly designated, from the place of his habitation, Jojn moir na wamh, that is, Big John of the cave, and in process of time the word vocabulum wamh corruptè pronuntiabatur weem, et sic Johannes Comitis Fifæ Tertius filius a Speluncis quas frequentabatur cognomen sibi et posteris acquisivit.

A Duncanò Comitis Fifæ natû minimus Barones a Fandui et Craighead et multi alii cognominis Makduffi pervenerunt.

4. MILCOLUMBUS MAKDUFFUS præfati Duncanii filius primogenitus et Quartus Fifæ Comes bina Monasteria fundavit Anno Chr. unum virorum in Culrossiâ, alterum vero mulierum in Septentrionali Bervico.

5. Milcolumbo successit Duncanus Quintus Fifæ Thanus (unus e Sex Regentibus tempore Interregni post Alexandri Tertii Regis obitum) qui per Abernethios postea extinctus est.

6. MILCOLUMBUS MAKDUFFUS Sextus Fifæ Comes apud Varium Sacellum pugnans pro Patriâ adversus Anglos interemptus est Anno Christi 1290.

7. DUNCANUS prædicti Milcolumbi filius et Septimus Fifæ Comes cum Roberto Brussio adversus Anglos fideliter inserviit, et Davidi Brussio adversus Balliolum constanter adhæsit. Nam primo apud Duplinum a Balliolo Anno 1332 et deinde in wamh was erroneously pronounced weem; and so John, third son of the Earl of Fife, acquired, from the caves which he frequented, a surname to himself and his posterity.

From Duncan, youngest son of the Earl of Fife, have come the Barons of Fandui and Craighead, and many others of the surname of Macduff.

4. Malcolm Macduff, eldest son of the aforesaid Duncan, and fourth Earl of Fife, founded two monasteries in the year of Christ , one of men, in Culross, the other, of women, in North Berwick.

5. To Malcolm succeeded Duncan, fifth Thane of Fife (one of the six Regents in the time of the Interregnum after the death of King Alexander the Third), who was afterwards killed by the Abernethies.

6. Malcolm Macduff, sixth Earl of Fife, was slain while fighting for his country against the English at Falkirk, in the year of Christ 1290.

7. Duncan, son of the aforesaid Malcolm, and seventh Earl of Fife, served faithfully with Robert Bruce against the English, and constantly adhered to David Bruce against Balliol. For first at Duplin he was taken by Balliol in the year 1332, and then in the prælio Dūēlmeni cum Davide Brussio ab Anglis captus est Anno a Christo nato 1348.

Huc, deficiente prole masculo, successit filia (Isabella Makduff) Fifæ Comitissa, quæ post patris obitum jus Comitatus Fifæ in favorem Roberti Stuardi Montethiæ Comitis resignavit Anno Christi 1371.

Sic incepit, crevit, floruit et desiit per antiqua et præ nobilis familia Makduff, quæ in summo honore, potentiâ et æstimatione steterat per spatium 532 Annorum.

DE
EPITOME.

DE SHAO MAKINTOSHIORUM PRIMO.

SHAUS Duncani Makduffi Tertii Fifæ Comitis (sed Octavi Thani) Secundus filius in uxorem duxit Ægidiam Montgomeriam Hugonis Montgomerii Aulici filiam, ex quâ tres reliquit filios, viz. Shaum, Milcolumbum et Duncanum.

battle of Durham he was taken by the English with David Bruce in the year from the birth of Christ 1348.

To this man, failing an heir-male, succeeded a daughter (Isabella Macduff), Countess of Fife, who, after the death of her father, resigned the right of the earldom of Fife in favour of Robert Stuart, Earl of Monteith, in the year of Christ 1371.

So began, increased, flourished, and came to an end, the very ancient and most noble family Macduff, which had stood in the highest honour, power, and esteem for the space of 532 years.

AN EPITOME of the ORIGIN and INCREASE of the MACKINTOSHES.

CONCERNING SHAW the first of the MACKINTOSHES.

Shaw, second son of Duncan Macduff, third Earl of Fife (but eighth Thane) took as his wife Egidia Montgomerie, daughter of Hugh Montgomerie, courtier, of whom he left three sons, namely, Shaw, Malcolm, and Duncan.

OBSERVATIONES CHRONOLOGICÆ.

Hic Shaus in Septentrionalen Scotiæ plagam venit cum Milcolumbo 4 Scotorum Rege ad supprimendam insurrectionem (per Morravos excitatam) Anno Ch. 1163, et ob ejus virtutem et fortitudinem in Rebelles a Rege arcis Invernessæ. Præfectus (seu Constabularius) eodem Anno est constitutus et agrorum Pettie Brachliæ cum Saltû Stratherniæ (quæ olim Moravorum in illâ Rebellionem interfectorum prædia erant) possessionem accepit.

SHAUS in arce Invernessensi habitans per vicinos Makintoshich vocabatur (id est, Thani filius): Nam pater ejus licet Comitibus titulo honoratus vulgò Toshach, i.e. Thanus a plebe designabatur.

THANUS erat honoris seu dignitatis titulus: Nam Primores Regni Scotorum Thani tunc dicebantur, et Linguâ Hibernicâ Thanus interpretabatur Toshach, i.e. Regionum Primarius seu Princeps, et Makintoshich est Primarii filius, et hæc est cognominis Makintoshich significatio et origo.

SHAUS fatis occubuit Anno ab incarnato Christo 1179.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This Shaw came to the north country of Scotland along with Malcolm iv. King of Scots, to suppress an insurrection, stirred up by the men of Moray, in the year of Christ 1163, and for his valour and fortitude against the rebels he was, in the same year, appointed governor (or constable) of the Castle of Inverness, and received possession of the lands of Petty Brachley, with the forest of Stratherne, which formerly were the estates of the men of Moray slain in that rebellion.

Shaw, while dwelling in the Castle of Inverness, was called by his neighbours Mackintoshich (that is, son of the Thane). For his father, though honoured with the title of Earl, was vulgarly designated by the common people, Toshach, that is, Thane.

Thane was a title of honour or dignity. For the nobles of the kingdom of the Scots were then called Thanes, and in the Gaelic tongue Thane was interpreted Toshach, that is, the chief or prince of the country, and Mackintoshich is son of the chief, and this is the signification and beginning of the surname Mackintosh.

Shaw died in the year from the incarnation of Christ, 1179.

CONTEMPORANEUS huic Shao fuerat Soraldus Makgilbridus (aliàs Summerledus) Argatheliæ Thanus, Ronaldi pater, et Donaldi avus, a quo familia vulgo Clandonald est ita denominata. Circa hoc tempus incepit cognomen Shaw a quodam nuncupato Milcolumbo Makshaw Makduff, qui Fifensis Thani fuerat pronepos, et eâ ratione hujus Shai Makintosh patrueilis, et ab hoc Milcolumbo Shai de Sauchi et Grinok exorti sunt.

DE SHAO MAKINTOSHIO EJUS NOMINIS ET COGNOMINIS SECUNDO.

SHAUS MAKINTOSH prædicti Shai filius Mariam Sandilandiam Sandilandorum Principis filiam duxit, quæ illi quatuor peperit filios, viz. Milcolumbum, Ferquhardum, Gulielmum et Edwardum.

OBS. CHRON.

SHAUS Secundus Makintoshiorum Dominus in Præfecturam arcis Invernessensis patri suffectus erat primus illius familiæ

Contemporaneous with this Shaw was Sorald Makgilbrid (otherwise Summerled), Thane of Argyll, father of Ronald, and grandfather of Donald, from whom the family, vulgarly Clan Donald, is so denominated. About this time began the surname Shaw, from a certain man called Malcolm Macshaw Macduff, who was grandson of the Thane of Fife, and on that account cousin, on the father's side, of this Shaw Mackintosh; and from this Malcolm the Shaws of Sauchie and Greenock are sprung.

OF SHAW MACKINTOSH, second of his NAME and SURNAME.

Shaw Mackintosh, son of the aforesaid Shaw, married Mary Sandilands, daughter of the chief of the Sandilands, who bore to him four sons, namely, Malcolm, Ferquhard, William, and Edward.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Shaw, second laird of the Mackintoshes, having succeeded his father in the governorship of the Castle of Inverness, was the first qui se Makintoshium subscripsit, et arcis Invernessæ Præfecturâ 30 Annos potitus est, et ob summam ejus erga Regem fidelitatem, et in arce defendendâ contra Donaldum Insulanum (qui Rossiam et Moraviam prædæ et direptioni exposuit, arcemque Invernessæ obsedit) strenuitatem Quaestor Regis proventuum circa Invernessam a Rege Gulielmo est designatus.

ILLIUS frater Milcolumbus Annavici cum Gulielmo Rege captus brevi post reditum decessit Anno 1176, et erat Makintoshiæ familiæ primus qui in Templo Franciscanorum Invernessæ humatus est. Duncanus frater alter pugnans pro Patriâ contra Insulanos prope Invernessam morte occubuit Anno Christi 1196. Huic contemporaneus erat Ronaldus M^cSorald vick gilbrid et ejus filius Donaldus, a quo Clondonaldi originem traxerunt.

DE FERQUHARDO MAKINTOSHIO 3^{tio} FAMILIÆ DOMINO.

FERQUHARDUS ejus Nominis Primus, et Dominus Makintosh Tertius Saram (seu Sorocho) Mackduff Milcolumbi Quarti Fifæ of that family who subscribed himself Mackintosh; and having enjoyed the governorship of the Castle of Inverness for thirty years, he was, both on account of his eminent fidelity towards the King, and his valour in defending the castle against Donald of the Isles (who subjected Ross and Moray to robbery and plunder, and besieged the Castle of Inverness), by King William, designated Quæstor of the King's revenues about Inverness.

His brother, Malcolm, of Annatown, was taken with King William, and died shortly after his return, in the year 1176, and was the first of the Mackintosh family who was buried in the church of the Franciscans of Inverness. Duncan, the other brother, fell in death while fighting for his country against the Islanders, near Inverness, in the year of Christ 1196. To him was contemporary Ronald M^cSorald vic Gilbrid, and his son Donald, from whom the Clan Donald derived their origin.

OF FERQUHARD MACKINTOSH, THIRD LAIRD of the FAMILY.

Ferquhard, the first of his name, and third Laird Mackintosh, took to wife, Sara (or Sorocho) Macduff, daughter of Malcolm, fourth Comitis filiam uxorem cepit, liberosque per eam habuit. Sed omnes filii ante ipsum decesserunt adeo ut nepos ex fratre Gulielmo erat ei succedaneus.

Hic Gulielmus Ferquhardi frater vir formæ amabilis, et ex omni parte perfectus duxit Beatricem Lermontham Fifensem, per quam genuit Shaum, Fergusium et Alexandrum.

EDWARDUS Ferquhardi frater in Fifâ plerumque mansit, ibi que etiam obiit, et ab eo Toshii de Monyvaird processû temporis originem duxerunt.

OBS. CHRON.

FERQUHARDUS a teneris Annis apud Milcolumbum Fifæ Comitem educatus est, et Milcolumbo fratre natû maximo sine liberis defuncto, patri successit Anno 1210, et erat unus e Ducibus qui Anno 1211 cum eodem Milcolumbo profecti sunt adversus Gothredum Makwilliam insignem Cathenensem Rebellem.

GULIELMUS ejus frater Regiam aulam secutus erat ex numero eorum qui Alexandrum Regem comitati sunt, cùm antiquum fœdus cum Philippo Septimo Francorum Rege renovavit Anno 1216.

Earl of Fife, and had children by her. But all his sons died before himself, so that his nephew, by his brother William, was successor to him.

This William, brother of Ferquhard, was a man of a lovable form, and being perfect in every part, he married Beatrice Lermonth, a Fife lady, by whom he had Shaw, Fergus, and Alexander.

Edward, brother of Ferquhard, remained for the most part in Fife, and there also he died; and from him, in process of time, the Toshachs of Monzievaird derived their origin.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Ferquhard from his tender years was brought up with Malcolm, Earl of Fife; and his eldest brother, Malcolm, having died without children, he succeeded to his father in the year 1210, and was one of the leaders who, in the year 1211, went with the same Malcolm against Gothred Macwilliam, the noted Caithness rebel.

William his brother haunted the court, and was of the number of those who accompanied King Alexander when he renewed the ancient league with Philip the Seventh, King of the French, in the year 1216.

CONTEMPORANEUS his fuit Gillicattan Makgellespick chlerich (a quo Clanchattani sic vocantur) qui a Connoght Hiberniæ Provinciâ in Lochabriam venit Anno Salutis nostræ 1215.

DE SHAO DOMINO MAKINTOSH 4^{to}.

SHAUS præfati Gulielmi et Beatricis filius, Ferquhardo patruo successit, et uxorem habuit Helenam Calderam Calderiæ Thani filiam, ex quâ quinque susceperat filios, viz. Ferquhardum, Duncanum, Alexandrum, Shaum oig (i.e. juniorem) et Milcolumbum. Fergusius Shai frater Hiberniam petiit, et ab eo Makintoshii, qui in Hiberniâ degunt, descendere.

DE Alexandro Shai fratre ejusque posteris nihil in Annalibus annotatur.

OBS. CHRON.

Hic Shaus erat suæ familiæ Primus qui in Septentrione uxorem duxit, et priusquam hæreditate paternâ potitus est, ab Andréâ Moraviæ Episcopo (qui Templum Cathedrale Elginiæ

Contemporary with these was Gillichattan Macgillespic chlerich (from whom the Clanchattans are so called) who came from Connaught, a province of Ireland, into Lochaber, in the year of our salvation 1215.

OF SHAW, FOURTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

Shaw, son of the aforesaid William and Beatrice, succeeded to Ferquhard his father's brother, and had to wife Helen Calder, daughter of the Thane of Calder, of whom he had five sons, namely, Ferquhard, Duncan, Alexander, Shaw oig (that is, younger), and Malcolm. Fergus, the brother of Shaw, went to Ireland, and from him the Mackintoshes who live in Ireland descend.

Of Alexander, the brother of Shaw, and his posterity, nothing is recorded in the annals.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This Shaw was the first of his family who married a wife in the north country; and before he obtained possession of the paternal inheritance he acquired from Andrew, Bishop of Moray (who fundavit) agrorum Rothemurchensiam possessionem acquisivit Anno 1236. Erat etiam familiæ Makintoshiæ Primus qui possessionem agrorum vulgò Mikl-geddès et Rait obtinuit, quam ejus posteri per multos Annos retinuerunt. Excessit e vivis Anno Salutis Christianæ 1265.

DE FERQUHARDO DOMINO MAKINTOSHIORUM v^{to}.

FERQUHARDUS MAKINTOSH Quintus familiæ Genearcha erat patre præcelsior, vultû amabilis, omnique genere virtutis in generoso requisito longè præcellens.

He was also the first of the Mackintosh family who got possession of the lands commonly called Meikle-Geddès and Rait, which his descendants retained for many years. He departed this life in the year of Christian salvation 1265.

Contemporary with this Shaw were David, the first of the Lindsays whose proper name is commemorated in writing, Laurence, the first of the Grants, Gillean, and Leod, progenitors of the Macleans and the Macleods.

OF FERQUHARD, FIFTH LAIRD of the MACKINTOSHES.

Ferquhard Mackintosh, fifth chief of the family, more illustrious than his father was, amiable of countenance, and excelled in every quality requisite in a gentleman.

He married Mora Macdonald, daughter of Eneas oig Macdonald of the Isles, who bore to him an only son, by name Eneas.

Duncan, brother of Ferquhard, was tutor of the aforesaid Eneas, Tutor, et ejus Posteritas Rothemurchusæ sistit usque ad tempus certaminis inter Clanchatanum et Clankevill Anno 1396.

OBS. CHRON.

Hic Ferquhardus strenuus et bellicosus Juvenis Rothemurchusæ degens, patre adhuc vivente, electus est Populi Badi-nachensis Dux in expeditione ab Alexandro Tertio Rege contra Achonem Norwegiæ Regem facta Anno 1263, et erat e præcipuis Ducibus qui insequente vere cum Atholiæ Comite ad Hebrides Insulas sub Scotorum Regis Imperium reducendas missi sunt, ex quo itinere innotescit Æneæ Insularum Domino, cujus filiam paucos post Annos (ut supra memoratum) in Matrimonium accepit. his nephew, and his posterity continued at Rothemurchus until the time of the fight between the Clanchattan and Clankevill in the year 1396.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This Ferquhard, being a valiant and warlike young man, living at Rothemurchus, while his father was yet alive was chosen leader of the Badenoch people in the expedition made by King Alexander the Third against Haco, King of Norway, in the year 1263, and was one of the principal leaders who were thereafter sent with the Earl of Athol to reduce the Hebrides under the power of the King of Scots, on which journey he became known to Eneas, Lord of the Isles, whose daughter, a few years later, he took in marriage, as above mentioned. But he did not long enjoy the union, for in the third month after the marriage, when playing chess with a certain gentleman of the Islands, he also playing, they stabbed one another with their dirks. This happened in the year of Christ 1271.

In the year 1263, Gilbrai, progenitor of the Clan Macgillivray, betook himself with his posterity under the wings and tutelage of Ferquhard, and became bound by oath.

DE ÆNEÂ DOMINO MAKIN-TOSHIORUM VI^{to}.

ÆNEAS Ferquhardi filius, cum vix decimum sextum ætatis annum attigerit, Evæ filiæ et unicæ proli Gilpatrici Makdughall vikkillichattan (suzæ familiæ Primarii) Matrimonio devinctus est, ex quâ septem masculos et duas filias genuerat, [page 212.] viz. Muriella nupta erat Domino de Cullodin, et Slaina erat Mater Davidis du de nud, a quo Clandai florentissima a quondam inter Catanos familia provenere.

ÆNEAS habuit unam notham nomine Isabellam, quam duxit Duncanus Makgilivrai cognominatus alin, i.e. elegans, suzæ familiæ primarius.

OBS. CHRON.

ÆNEAS possessionem terrarum Glenlui et Lochairkag in Lochabriâ unâ cùm hæreditariâ Præfectura et Imperio Clanchattanorum pro dote cum Evâ accepit.

OF ENEAS, the SIXTH LAIRD of the MACKINTOSHES.

Eneas, son of Ferquhard, when he had scarcely reached the sixteenth year of his age, was engaged in marriage to Eva, daughter and only child of Gilpatric Macdugal vic Gillichattan (chief of his family), of whom he begat seven sons and two daughters, namely, William, John, Eneas oig, Malcolm, Ferquhard, Duncan, and Shaw beg, that is, little, Muriell, and Slane. Muriell was married to the laird of Culloden, and Slane was mother of David du. of Nude, from whom are descended the Clan Dai, formerly the most flourishing family among the Chattans.

Eneas had a bastard, named Isabella, whom Duncan Macgillivray surnamed alin, that is handsome, chief of his family, married.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Eneas received with Eva as dowry possession of the lands of Glenlui and Locharkaig, in Lochaber, together with the hereditary chiefship and command of the Clanchattans.

ERAT vir admodum et audax et fortis, frigoris, laboris, et inediæ patientissimus, erat etiam crispicapillus, et ob fidelitatem erga Regem Robertum Brussium ab eo multum amatus.

SUB hoc tempus Gens Cumminea (potens tunc familia) agros Mikl-geddes et Rait (olim Shai Makintoshii Æneæ avi prædia) sibi assumpsit.

ANGLICANA etiam factio (quam Cumminea familia tunc sequebatur) totam fere Morraviam subjugans, arcem Invernessam in suam ditionem redigit, et Cummineis Mackintoshii inimicis custodiendam tradidit.

HÆC erat fons inimicitiae per multos Annos inter Gentem Cummineam et Makintoshiam. Florente Cummineâ factione, Æneas (suam percipiens impotentiam ad Cummineam vim resistendam) Lochabriæ commoratus est usque ad Annum 1308, et tunc arx Invernessensis a Rege Roberto Brussio intercepta et subversa est.

SUB id tempus Æneas e Lochabriâ reversus in Rothemurchusiâ plerumque habitabat, et, quoties rei bene gerendæ offerebat occasio, Cummineos aliosque Regis adversarios cum amicorum cohorte, quæ ei adhæsit, semper infestus premebat.

Is erat unus ex Randolphi præcipuis Ducibus in Bello

He was a man singularly bold and strong, most patient of cold, labour, and hunger: he was also curly haired; and on account of his fidelity towards King Robert the Bruce, greatly loved by him.

About this time, the Cummin people, then a powerful family, assumed the lands of Meikle-Geddes and Rait, formerly the estate of Shaw Mackintosh, grandfather of Eneas.

The English faction also (which the Cummin family then followed), subduing almost the whole of Moray, reduced the Castle of Inverness to their own power, and delivered the custody of it to the Cummins, the enemies of Mackintosh.

This was the source of enmity during many years between the Cummin people and Mackintosh. While the Cummin faction was flourishing, Eneas (perceiving his inability to resist the power of the Cummins) abode in Lochaber until the year 1308, and then the Castle of Inverness was surprised and thrown down by King Robert Bruce.

About that time, Eneas, having returned from Lochaber, dwelt for the most part in Rothemurchus; and as often as occasion offered of doing good service, with a band of friends who adhered to him, he made himself always troublesome against the Cummins and other adversaries of the King.

He was one of the principal leaders under Randolph in the

In the year 1336, he sent his son William with supplies to Andrew Murray against John * Cummin, Earl of Athol.

He desired very earnestly to dwell with the people of Badenoch, and therefore he acquired the lands of Benchar, and soon after of all the estates between the river Calander and Guynack. At a great age he departed this life in the year of human salvation 1346.

In the time of this Eneas the seed of discord between the Mackintoshes and Camerons was sown, which thenceforth for 360 years increased and tenaciously endured with the utmost hatred and envy.

About the same time also lived Bean Macmilmor, from whom the family called Clan Bean is so named.

This Bean was a faithful retainer of Eneas against the Red Cummin, the most inveterate enemy of Eneas.

To him were contemporary Nicolas, first of the Campbells whose name we find handed down in writing; also Robert, Kenneth, Hic Donaldus erat avus Eweni Makallan qui Elginix decollatus est Anno 1547.

OF WILLIAM, SEVENTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

William succeeded Eneas his father, and joined to himself in marriage Florence Calder, daughter of the Thane of Calder, of whom he begat Lauchlan and Mora, whom he gave in marriage to Roderic Macallan vic Ronald, laird of Moydart, who bore to him one daughter only, whom Even Macgilloni, chief of the Camerons, took to wife, of whom he begat Donald du Makewin, father of Allan, murdered by the Clanchattans (near Corricheartl.) This Donald was grandfather of Ewen Macallan who was beheaded at Elgin in the year 1547.

After the death of Florence, he being then very old, married Margaret, daughter of Roderic mor (that is big) Macleod of Lewis, of whom he had one son, named Malcolm, and four daughters, the eldest of whom, Janet, he gave in marriage to the laird of Lochlui, surnamed Hay; the second, by name (quæ erat cocles) Hugoni Ros a Kilravock, Tertiam Domino Ogilvy, et Quartam Domino a Cullodin in Matrimonium tradidit.

GULIELMUS ante primum connubium habuit Concubinam Lochabriensem nomine Renildam filiam Donaldi du mak eivin vic Sorald vic gilloni, quæ illi duos peperit filios spurios, viz. SHAUS in uxorem duxit filiam Roberti Makalaster vic Innish, ex quâ genitus est Iacobus Mackintosh (aliàs Sha) de Rothemurchus, qui in Bello Harlaensi occubuit Anno 1411. Iacobus in uxorem sibi adjunxit filiam Gregorii Grant, ex quâ duos reliquit filios, viz. Alexandrum keir, i.e. fuscum, et ai seu Adamum, a quo Shai de Tordarrach enati sunt, et Unam

Mora, (who was blind of one eye,) he married to Hugh Rose of Kilravock, the third to Lord Ogilvy, and the fourth to the laird of Culloden.

William, before his first marriage, had a Lochaber concubine, by name Renilda, daughter of Donald du Makewin vic Sorald vic Gilloni, who had to him two bastard sons, namely, Eneas and Donald; and after the death of Florence he had two other bastards by another concubine, namely, Adam and Sorald, and a natural daughter named Anna, who was joined in marriage to Gothedrus Makdonychi vic Calid.

John, brother of William, begat Gilchrist, father of the toothed Shaw, who was elected leader of the thirty Clanchattans who, at Perth, before Robert Third, King of Scots, fought against as many of the Clankevill, in the year 1396, and from this Shaw, the Shaws of Rothemurchus are descended and denominated.

Shaw married a daughter of Robert Macalister vic Innish, of whom was born James Mackintosh (alias Shaw) of Rothemurchus, who fell in the battle of Harlaw in the year 1411. James took to him as his wife a daughter of Gregory Grant, by whom he left two sons, namely, Alexander keir, that is, brown, and Ai. or Adam, from whom the Shaws of Tordarroch are sprung, and John begat Allan, and Allan, James, the last laird of Rothe murchus by the surname Shaw.

From Alexander have directly proceeded the Shaws of Dell; from James, the Shaws of Dalnivert; from Ferquhard, the Farquharsons of Mar; and from Evander the Shaws of Harris.

Eneas oig, brother of the aforesaid William, dwelt in Athol, and from him have descended the Mackintoshes of Glentilt, who have for many years flourished in Athol with the greatest esteem.

Malcolm, brother of William, had two sons, Ferquhard and Eneas. Of Ferquhard no mention is made. Eneas had one son named William, who on account of homicide perpetrated by him without premeditation at Darnaway in the year 1433, fled into Mar, and from him the Aberdeen Toshes derive their origin.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This William was tall, above the common stature of the people, robust, but not at all fleshy, and was the first of his family who subscribed himself captain of the Clanchattans. After the death of his father he fought continually against the Camerons. One memorable battle he had against them and their leader, Donald du Makeven vic Ian, in the hill of Drumgli, where many Camerons were slain. There also perished Evander M^cConchy vic Gillivray, nephew of William by his sister Isabella.

After this fight, William so vexed and bore down the Camerons that at length he drove the residue of them into exile.

He also, while his father Eneas was still living, acquired right to the Barony of Glenlui and Locharkaig, from the Lord of the Isles, in the year 1336.

Also, he received of new the Barony of Rothemurchus, from John Pilmor, bishop of Moray, on 19th March 1347.

In the year 1348 he was wounded by an arrow at the battle of Durham.

On the last of February 1359, he received from King David Bruce confirmation of the right which he had before of the lands of Glenlui and Locharkaig, at Scone, in the twenty-ninth year of the reign of David.

The remaining course of his life was passed at home in the greatest peace.

To his old ensign (which was a red lion rampant, and a dexter hand gules holding by the thumb a heart proper in a field or) he added a long galley sable in the same field. For Eva, the mother of William, had no proper ensign of her own, and therefore he added the galley to his ensign for the Chattan tribe.

Concerning this William there is a tradition that (although he had dwelt almost constantly at Petty) yet he, in fulfilment of a certain promise, observed seven Christmas days in succession in Lochaber, on the top of mount Torchrona.

He died at Urluster of Petty; but before dying, he ordered his body after death to be carried over and buried in the island of Locharkaig, which was accordingly done, in the year of salvation 1368; and there his sepulchre is to be seen to this day.

LAUCLANUS Gulielmi filius in uxorem duxit Agnetam

In the time of this William lived Nicol Macolan, from whom sprung the family, sometime called Clan Nicol vic Olan, who profess themselves to be of the Clan Chattan.

Milmor Macbean, son of the aforesaid Bean Mac Milmor, and his four sons, Paul, Gillies, Milmor, and Ferquhard, after they had slain the steward of the Red Cummin and his two other servants, Paton and Kesson, took their way straight towards this William (then living at Connage) and, faithfully promising subjection to him, they asked and obtained from him, as their leader and protector, patronage and safeguard for themselves and their posterity.

Contemporary with this William were Alexander Fraser, first of that surname, Lord of Lovat; Hugh Ross, first of his surname of Balnagown; George Monro of Logie, first of the Monros who received the hereditary right of Fowlis; and Nicolas Sutherland of Thorobo, son of Kenneth, sixth Earl of Sutherland, who was the first lord of Duffus.

Eneas, younger, married Mora Mackintosh, daughter of the laird of Glentilt, who bare to him a son named Donald, and two daughters, the elder of whom was married to Donald mac Ian viell, and the younger to John Ross of Ballivat.

This Eneas was killed in the fight at Criny Challiach, in the year 1441.

John, the second son of Eneas, was father of Donald, and grandfather of Andrew, from whom the Mackintoshes in Strathnaver are descended.

Mary, the daughter of Eneas, was united in marriage to Roderic Mactearlich, of whom he had Hector and Margaret mac Rori. This Margaret was married to Gillies Macphail, and of her he begat John, Reoch, Allan the Laird, Paul, Morist, Helen, Margaret, and Katherine. CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

In the year 1370, the Cameron exiles having returned, assembled all at one place, and their friends and retainers having joined them, they secretly passed over through the hills of Badenoch, entered all at once the lower part of the earldom, and drove away the cattle of the country; whom the aforesaid Lauchlan (then living in the village of Benchar) immediately pursued, with those whom, in so sudden and hasty an expedition he was able to collect, and reached them in flight near the village of Invernahavon, where a fierce fight took place. Victory at first inclined to the Camerons, who were the greater number, for almost a whole sept of the Chattans, by name the Clan Dai, was utterly destroyed. The remainder withdrew from the conflict.

Dum hæc agebantur, altera Cattanorum Stirps (nomine Clanvurrich) quæ se pugnatoribus non junxerat, quoniam Clandai a Makintoshio dextro aciei cornu ei prælati fuerant, anxia quod se auxilio speravissent, statim Cameronos priore certamine vulneratos defatigatosque summo furore invadit, et in eos amicorum necem strenuè ulciscitur, prædamque recuperat. In hâc pugná Cameroniorum Ductor nomine Tearloch mor, i.e. magnus Makgilloni cum maximâ sociorum parte cecidit in loco nunc ab illo Corhearlich dicto.

Hujus Lauchlani tempore Catani et Clancai (seu, ut scribit Johannes Major) Clankavilli insigne dissidium summâ atrocitate exercebant. Ad has turbulentas familias reprimendas Morravix et Crawfordix Comites a Rege missi sunt, qui tribuum Duces seorsim allocuti, hanc conditionem iis proponunt, ut ex utrisque triginta gladiis tantummodo armati coram Rege in campo ad Septentrionale Urbis Perthæ latus decertent. Conditio utrisque placet, et dies certamini dictus a bellatoribus exactè observatur. Multo furore et sudore pugnatum est. Omnes Clancai interempti præter unum, qui Taum flumen natando elapsus est. Clanchattanorum vero Whilst these things were being so acted, another sept of the Chattans (named the Clanvurrich) who had not joined with those who were fighting, because the Clandai were preferred by Mackintosh to the right wing of the line of battle, being solicitous that they might expect their aid, forthwith rushed with the utmost fury upon the Camerons, wounded in the former fight and weary, and strenuously avenged upon them the slaughter of their friends, and recovered the booty. In this battle fell the leader of the Camerons, by name Tearloch mor, that is great Makgillony, with the greater part of his confederates, in the place now named from that event Corhearlich.

In the time of this Lauchlan, the Chattans and Clancai, or (as John Major writes), Clankevills, were carrying on dissension with the greatest atrocity. In order to repress these turbulent tribes, the Earls of Moray and Crawford were sent by the king, who, having spoken to the leaders of the tribes separately, proposed to them this condition, that thirty of both sides, armed only with swords, should fight in presence of the king in the field on the north side of the town of Perth. The condition pleased both, and the day fixed for the battle was duly kept by the warriors. They fought with much fury and sweat. All the Clancai were killed but one, who escaped by swimming over the river Tay. Of the Clanchattans there survived eleven, but all were grievously lacerated with wounds, among whom was their chief, namely, the aforesaid Shaw Mackintosh (alias Macgillichrist mac Ian).

But this, by the way, is not to be omitted, that while the king and the nobles were waiting for the battle, one of the Chattans was seized with sickness, in place of whom a certain man, by name Henry Wynd, willingly offered himself unbidden, engaged in the conflict, fought fiercely, and was one of the eleven who survived. From this Henry Wynd, that Clanchattan family (commonly called Slihk ghow Chruim) took rise.

After this conflict, all the Clanchattans (because of their good fortune in that fight under the leadership of Shaw Mackintosh) most strictly bound themselves and their posterity (an oath being added) by a new bond of service and subjection to the aforesaid Lauchlan Mackintosh their chief, to endure for ever.

Shaw also received possession of the lands of Rothemurchus freely from Lauchlan.

In this time lived Gilpatrick Macean, commonly called Kean du Macean, from whom that family of Clanchattans, called Clancheandui, derives its origin. About this time also lived

This Kenneth came from Lochaber into Badenoch, and dwelt first at Tullocher.

He was a tenant and retainer of the aforesaid Lauchlan, laird of Mackintosh. But his brothers, John, Murrach, and Gillies, came thither long before that time. This Lauchlan, laird of Mackintosh, passed away from among the living in the year of Christ 1407.

Eneas and Donald, bastard brothers of Lauchlan, and John his bastard son, on account of the accidental slaughter of some gentlemen (who were kinsmen of Alexander Stuart, Earl of Mar) were suddenly intercepted, and suffered capital punishment at Edinburgh.

About this same time, the Clantarrell, retainers to one of the Mackintoshes, and reckoned among the Clanchattans, flourished at Petty.

Contemporaneous with this Lauchlan were these three, namely, John mor mac Ian vic Innish oig, from whom the Macdonalds of Kintyre, Islay, and Antrim have descended. Ronald Makean vic Innish oig, progenitor of the Macdonalds of Moidart, Morar, Glengarry, and Knoidart; and Igh (or Hugh) Macdonald vic Morgan, from whom the family Maky is derived. This Igh and

OF FERQUHARD, NINTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

Ferquhard, son of Lauchlan, took to wife Egidia Innes, daughter of the Laird Innes of that Ilk, by whom he had three sons, Duncan, Malcolm, and Ferquhard, and many daughters. But because the father, by his vileness and sloth, went down to decay by resigning his heritage, his children were married to persons below their rank. One of the daughters, Isabella, was given in marriage to Duncan Mackynich vic Ewen (commonly designed Parson) and bore to him Bean Macpherson, from whom the family of Brin took rise.

Duncan, first born of Ferquhard, contracted marriage with the daughter of Donald Mackynich vic Ewen, of whom he begat John and Ferquhard. With another woman (whose name is unknown to us), he begat four sons, namely, Roderic, John, Eneas, and Donald gorm. Concerning the posterity of these six brothers, we shall give account at another time. This, in passing, must be

Secondly, Ferquhard mac Ferquhar vic Lauchlan had a son, Eneas, and he begat two sons, Thomas and Hugh. This Thomas (after that Ferquhard, laird Mackintosh, had been brought captive to Edinburgh by King James the Fourth, in the year 1495) went to visit Ferquhard, and fortune so favoured him that he was joined in marriage with a widow woman. This Thomas was commonly designated Thomas mac Innish, but after that southern journey of his he was called Thomas Angus, and from him the surname Angus, now flourishing at Bruntisland, took beginning.

Hugh, brother of the aforesaid Thomas, spent the summer¹ at Inverness (and so his succession), and was the progenitor of Hugh mac Angus, now mariner there. Malcolm mac Ferquhar vic Lauchlan begat Thomas, and Thomas begat Duncan and Lauchlan. Duncan begat Ferquhard, and Lauchlan begat Thomas and Ferquhard. This Thomas M^cLauchlan begat Ferquhard, and Ferquhard begat Hector and Ferquhard oig. This Hector (commonly called Hector M^cFerquhar mac Commi) had six sons, namely, Donald, John, Master Alexander, minister at Petty, Master Ferquhar, Dean of the Isles, Master Lauchlan, FERQUHARDUS vixit tempore Regiminis Roberti Stuardi Fifæ Comitis, vir quieti totus deditus, et brevi post Connubium sponte hæreditatem et primogenituram in favorem Milcolumbi patruî resignavit, possessionem Kylachi et Corrivori sibi et minister of Lochaber, and Master Hector, who died without children. These four have not their genealogy and progeny hereafter discussed, because they lived for three generations among the Frasers, and they were given their degree under the surname of Fraser.

Ferquhard MacLauchlan was of middle height, slender of body, of a dark colour, of a melancholy, indolent, and reserved disposition. From him the whole sept, which is called Slighk Ferquhar vic Lauchlan is sprung. He departed this life in the year of salvation 1417.

From John, brother of Ferquhar, but illegitimate, there sprang the house of Crathymor in Badenoch, whose posterity are called Slighk Ian Lea vic Lauchlan.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Malcolm was a man of a lofty and contriving mind, of moderate stature, very patient in enduring every kind of hardship, of hunger, cold, labour, and want of rest; fortunate in war, and well instructed in every kind of virtue. Only by reason of the turbulence and error of the time and place in which he lived, he was not so imbued with learning as he should have been. His kinsmen and retainers (the Clanchattan) were at that time in great honour and esteem among all their neighbours on account of their brave deeds. He himself had been present in many battles, and victory greatly favoured him.

By consent of Ferquhard, and with the general applause and approval of all his friends, he was, in the year 1409, declared chief of the Clanchattans.

In the year 1411 he joined himself to Donald of the Isles against the Regent Robert Stuart, Earl of Fife and Monteith (in the controversy concerning the Earldom of Ross), and was next after Donald among the principal leaders in the battle of Harlaw; and on account of his merit and service on that day he obtained the hereditary right of the lands of Glenroy and Glenspean, and

IN hoc Bello de suis multos amisit, inter alios Jacobum Makintosh de Rothemurchus Dominum. Multi etiam de tribû Clanbean in hoc prælio desiderati sunt. Paulo post antiquum dissidium inter Catanos et Cumineos redintegratur. Nam jussû Alexandri Cumminei (qui terris Narniæ et Rait potiebatur) Micolumbi pedisequæ numero duodecim unâ omnes prope Rait ob levissimam caussam strangulati sunt.

Quo audito, Milcolumbi bilis efferbuit. Post aliquot dies arcem Narniæ cum suorum decem tantummodo stratagmate ingreditur (ubi tunc Primores Cumminei familiæ) qui Moraviæ degebant (epulabantur) et ellatam sibi injuriam ita retribuit, ut, priusquam Cumminei arma capere potuerint, omnes a Milcolumbo et adjutoribus confodiuntur.

Post hoc factum confestim Cumminei, collectâ vi, Mackintoshiorum terras invaserunt. Milcolumbus contrâ hoc usus est stratagmate; Cum Cummineorum intentio illi innotuit, ducentos viros fortes, audaces et celeres selegit, cum quibus latitans in Sylvâ quæ versus ortum est a lacû Moyensi (per of the office of Steward and Bailie of the whole lordship of Lochaber, and was made hereditary Steward.

In that battle he lost many of his friends, among others James Mackintosh laird of Rothemurchus. Many also of the family of Clanbean were lost in that battle. A little while afterwards the old feud between the Chattans and the Cummins was renewed. For, by the order of Alexander Cummin (who possessed the lands of Nairn and Rait), the attendants of Malcolm, to the number of twelve, were, for a very slight cause, all at once strangled near Rait.

On hearing of this, the wrath of Malcolm boiled over. Some days after, by stratagem, with only ten of his men, he entered the tower of Nairn (where the chief men of the Cummins who dwelt in Moray were then feasting) and so revenged the wrong done to him, that before the Cummins could take their arms they were all stabbed by Malcolm and his helpers.

After this deed, the Cummins having collected a force, forthwith invaded the lands of the Mackintoshes. Malcolm opposed this attack by using a stratagem. When the intention of the Cummins was made known to him, he selected two hundred strong men, bold and swift, with whom lurking in the wood which lies eastward from the loch of Moy (by which the Cummins were to quam Cumminei ituri essent) jussit nonnullos de suis cum armentis in hostium conspectû ad montes fugere, ut nihil fraudis suspectum haberent. Interim, dum securè prope Sylvam Cumminei tendunt, Milcolumbus summâ irâ, furore et audaciâ, cum suis in inimicorum Primores ruit. Cumminei rapidè et ex improvisò adorti terga vertere cogebantur, fugientes et palantes, in quâ fugâ eorum multi fuerant prostrati; Nam fugati sunt circiter sex mille passus, ut lapidum acervi super occisos adhuc testantur.

Hoc evenit paulo antequam Jacobus Primus Rex ex Angliâ liberatus est. Anno 1428 Jacobus Rex, Invernessam, ad jus dicendum, latrociniaque comprimenda, venit, ubi quosdam Latronum Duces in custodias misit, quorum nonnulli, datis vadibus, liberi domos dimissi, alii in custodiis detenti, et quidam supplicio affecti sunt. In the meantime, while the Cummins were coming on securely near the wood, Malcolm and his men rushed upon the leaders of the Cummins, with the utmost rage, fury, and boldness. The Cummins, being thus suddenly and unexpectedly attacked, were forced to turn their backs, fleeing and scattering, and in their flight a great many of them were cut down; for they were driven about six thousand paces, as a heap of stones over the slain bears witness to this day.

This happened shortly before King James the First was liberated from England. In the year 1428 King James came to Inverness to administer justice and to repress robbery, when he put certain of the robber chiefs in custody, some of whom, having given pledges, were allowed to go free to their homes, others were detained in ward, and some were executed. Meanwhile, having learned from the neighbours the fidelity and power of the aforesaid Malcolm Mackintosh, he delivered to him the custody of the castle of Inverness, which office his progenitors had possessed for many years.

At this time Alexander of the Isles, Earl of Ross (on account of many deeds wickedly and cruelly perpetrated by him), was seized

But soon after, having by his friends made trial of the king's leniency, he was sent home, where, as soon as he returned, having gathered a force of men accustomed to live by robbery, he delivered up to them the town of Inverness as a prey; and then, having ransacked the houses, he set them on fire. He surrounded the castle by way of siege, but in vain, for it was manfully defended by this Malcolm, captain of the castle, so that Alexander, on learning that he (Malcolm) was preparing an expedition against him, betook himself in haste to Lochaber. These things were done in the year 1429.

At the same time also Malcolm succeeded in persuading the Clanchattan and the Clan Cameron whom Alexander had enticed to take part with him, to desert him, and to prefer the king's part.

Alexander, on being deprived of that portion of his men, dismissed his forces, and was compelled to take flight to the Hebrides. On Palm Sunday following, in the year 1430, a feud having arisen between these two clans, so fierce was the conflict of mind and force, that while many of the Clanchattans were slain, the Camerons were almost all destroyed.

On the day of the Resurrection of our Lord next following, the aforesaid Alexander, Earl of Ross, clad only with a cloak, threw

The queen, and the nobles who were present, having besought the king earnestly for his life, the king committed him to be kept in the castle of Tantallon. There he was detained until the month of October the same year; in which month King James the Second was born, which event was joyfully celebrated by the public; and in the midst of the rejoicing, Alexander, and other nobles who had offended the king, were pardoned. In the meantime, Donald Balloch, his kinsman, as if he would revenge the injury done to his relative, excited a new tumult, to suppress which, Alexander, Earl of Mar, and Allan Stuart, Earl of Caithness (to whom Malcolm Mackintosh, by the king's command, joined himself), with a forced levy of people, departed to Inverlochy, where they waited the arrival of Donald (for he was daily promising that he would come and would engage with them in battle). In the meantime, the army of the earls being much pressed for want of provisions, some of the leaders of the clans (among whom Malcolm Mackintosh was one) were commanded to go through the adjacent lands, namely, Ardnamurchan, Suinard, and Glenelg, and to carry off their cattle.

ANNO 1452 Milcolumbus senio confectus erat, et Johanni Rossensi Comiti (tunc Rebelli) affinis; Jacobus Secundus Rex

While they were absent, Donald, determining to handle the affair with craft, having marshalled his men without disturbance, about the fourth watch he attacked the earls suddenly and while they were half asleep, and made a great slaughter. There perished there Allan, Earl of Caithness, and almost all his men; while the Earl of Mar, with a few of his, made off by a cowardly flight. After these things, Malcolm having returned home, his whole desire and care was to establish his fortune, and first on 6th February 1437 he acquired from John Innes, Bishop of Moray, possession of the Barony of Moy, in trust during life.

On 5th October 1442, he got the hereditary lordship of the aforesaid lands of Rait and Geddes, from Alexander Gordon (afterwards Earl of Huntly) to whom they then belonged.

On 11th February 1443, he received from the aforesaid Alexander, Earl of Ross, the heritable right of those lands which he possessed in Lochaber. Then, on 13th November 1447 he obtained from the same Alexander the heritable right of the Stewardry and Bailyery of the whole lordship of Lochaber.

In the year 1452, Malcolm was slain in his old age, and by John Earl of Ross, his kinsman by marriage (then a rebel). King James custodiam arcis Invernessæ cuidam cognomine Crichtono dedit, qui per eundem Johannem Rossisæ Comitem Anno 1455 stratagemate inde expulsus est.

ANNO 1454 subitum et in excogitatum dissidium (ob levisimam causam) oritur inter Milcolumbum Mackintosh vulgò—Gillicallum oig, Makgilichallum oig, nepotem prædicti Milcolumbi Domini Mackintosh, et Johannem Monro Tutorem de Fowlis, ex quo acerrimus conflictus sequitur, cujus origo hæc fuit.

the Second gave the custody of the castle of Inverness to one of the surname of Crichton, who was expelled thence by the same John, Earl of Ross, by stratagem, in the year 1455.

In the year 1454, a sudden and unpremeditated discord arose (on account of a very trivial cause) between Malcolm Mackintosh, commonly called Gillicallum oig, Macgillicallum oig, grandson of the aforesaid Malcolm laird of Mackintosh, and John Monro, tutor of Fowlis, on which a very bitter conflict followed, the origin of which was this :

John Monro, second son of Hugh Monro of Fowlis, and tutor of John Monro his nephew by his brother George Monro of Fowlis, took a journey to the south country in order to expedite the affairs of his pupil ; and as he was returning home by Strathardel, a strife arose between the country people and him, in which the Strathardel men basely and shamefully pursued and abused him. He returned home bent on revenge, and informed his kinsmen and friends of the injury done to him, and implored their help. They willingly responded. Two hundred men were selected, who, under the leadership of the said John, advanced with the utmost celerity, and invaded Strathardel before the rumour of Johannes 24 vaccas et taurum offert. Hoc ille fastidiosè [page 224.] et incautè respuit, et prædæ tertiam partem oult, et nihil minus, quod Johannes contemptim venit, et nihil daturus progreditur. Milcolumbus fremens, hoc notum amicis statim facit, et subito accolas Stratharniæ, Pettisæ et Lairchardellæ Johannem insequi, et prædam impedire mandat, donec ipse cum Strathernensibus subsequerentur. Mandato obsequium datur, et Johannem trans fluvium Nessam sequuntur, et, ad locum vocatum Clachnaherri eum cursû apprehendunt. Johannes 40 de suis cum prædâ dimisit, et reliquos pro se pugnare stimulat. Fit atrox conflictus. Pauci utriusque partis evadunt, et Johannes penè exanimatus, ut mortuus relinquitur. Sed Dominus Lovat de eventû certior factus, eum sanari curat. Johannes postea Backhlach, i.e. mutilatus, vocabatur, quia in eo conflictû manû mutilabatur, et ab illo familia Miltonia orta est. Milcolumbus, cujus temeritate hæc evenerunt, non adfuit pugnæ; Nam, ante ejus adventum, their approach had come thither, wasted the lands, and carried off the cattle. On their return, when at the river Findhorn, it so happened that the aforesaid Malcolm oig met them, who having inquired into the whole matter, was moved by the advice of the young men who followed him to ask a part of the booty from Monro. John offered him twenty-four cows and a bull. This he disdainfully and rashly rejected, and demanded the third part of the booty and nothing less; which John contemptuously refused, and, marching on, would give him nothing. Malcolm, in a rage, made this known forthwith to his friends, and at once ordered the men of Stratherne, Petty, and Lairchardel to follow John, and impede the moving of the cattle until he with the Stratherne men should come up. In obedience to this command, they followed John across the river Ness, and overtook him in flight at the place called Clachnaharry. John sent forty of his men onwards with the booty, and stimulated the rest to fight for him. The conflict was fierce: few of either party escaped, and John, almost lifeless, was left for dead. But Lord Lovat, on being informed of the event, used means to restore him. John was afterwards called Backhlach, that is, mutilated, because in the fight his hand was cut off. From him the Milton family sprung. Malcolm, by pugna finita est. Idem Milcolumbus in uxorem duxit Janetam Monro ejusdem Johannis sororem.

In the year 1457, Malcolm laird of Mackintosh departed this life in the island of Moy, and was buried with his ancestors in the church of the Franciscans at Inverness. To this Malcolm, Tearloch, that is Charles mac Ewen vic Volan (from whom the Clan Tearloch derived its origin) subscribed for himself and his posterity as hereditary servant. At this time also, Roderic, otherwise Reven mac Milmor vic Isak, from whom the Clan Reven, and Donald Macgilleandrish, from whom the Clan Andrish are named, came from Moidart, with Mora Macdonald, the aforementioned wife of Mackintosh, whose posterity have counted themselves among the Clanchattans, and devoted themselves to Mackintosh as their chief. So, in like manner, William Macchlerich, from whom the Clan Chlerich are designated, was a domestic of this Malcolm, and for himself and his posterity swore obedience and fidelity to him.

Contemporary with this Malcolm was Hugh Macdonald, bastard son of Alexander, Earl of Ross, progenitor of the Macdonalds of Sleat.

Duncan, the first-born of Malcolm, chief of the Clanchattans, took to himself in marriage Flora Macdonald, daughter of John, Earl of Ross, by whom he had many sons, who all died before their father, except one called Ferquhard, who succeeded him. He had also a bastard named Malcolm, who begat John, commonly called Sir John Malcolmson, who had a son named Duncan, father of Angus and Hector.

This Angus, or Eneas, had a daughter whom Duncan Mackintosh of Aberarder, already of great age, married, and by whom he had children, still alive.

LAUCHLANUS Duncani frater primò duxit filiam Ducis tribûs Makgilliniv, qui Gaskmor in Badenochiâ possidebat, ex quâ nullam habuit progeniem.

POST hujus uxoris decessum ex Elizabethâ Calderâ filiâ Hugonis Calderi Parsoni de Kingusii filium procreavit nomine Milcolumbum, qui nunquam Matrimoniali copulâ devinctus est, neve ullam habuit progeniem nisi unum filium illegitimum Johannem, ex quo stirps illa non diu de hinc cognita per designationem Slighk ean vic gillichallum, et nunc Claneachen, initium sumpsit.

JOHANNES hic erat filius adulterinus, cujus matrem Milcolumbus rapuit. Nam, cum Johannes procreatus erat, mater ejus erat nupta agricolæ in Nudmor, qui vulgò cognominabatur Kendich Grogach, i.e. mercator crinitus.

HIC Johannes Milcolumbi filius (aliter Makcumsonus dictus) ex Euphemiâ Dunbar (Adreæ Monro a Miltoun viduâ) genuit Lauchlanum, qui primò duxit Barbaram Hay, quæ illi nullos peperit liberos, quam repudians, Cameronam Donaldi du mak ewn filiam viduam Fraserii a eldest of whom was married to Bean mac Ian cheir, who had by her Duncan Ferquhard, John mor, Malcolm and James.

Lauchlan, brother of Duncan, married first a daughter of the chief of the Clan Macgillony, who possessed Gaskmor in Badenoch, by whom he had no offspring. After the death of this wife, by Elizabeth Calder, daughter of Hugh Calder, parson of Kingussie, he begat a son named Malcolm, who was never married, nor had he any offspring but one illegitimate son John, from whom that branch, not long since known by the designation Slighk Ian vic Gillicallum, and now Claneachan, took beginning.

This John was born in adultery, whose mother Malcolm ravished. For when John was born his mother was married to a farmer in Nudmor, who was commonly surnamed Kendich Grogach, that is, the hairy merchant.

This John, son of Malcolm (otherwise called Malcolmson), by Euphemia Dunbar (widow of Andrew Monro of Miltoun), begat Lauchlan, who married, first, Barbara Hay, who had no children to him: repudiating her, he forcibly carried off Cameron, daughter of Donald du mac Ewen, widow of Fraser of Sed, ex fœminâ populari Ardmeanachâ Janeta Shirshar, tres spurios progenuit filios, viz. Alexandrum, Lauchlanum et Johannem. Ex aliâ Concubinâ habuit etiam alium Spurium, qui vocabatur Æneas, et, ab his quatuor Hectoris filiis omnes Claneachani descenderunt.

DEINDE hic Lauchlanus Duncani frater duxit Katherinam Grant, Duncani Grant Equitis Aurati filiam, quæ duos illi peperit, Gulielmum et Lauchlanum et quinque filias, quarum primogenita Mora, Domino Makgrigor, et post ejus decessum Baroni de Kincairn Matrimonio tradita est.

and lived with her as his wife; of whom he had Hector, who married a woman of Ross, surnamed Monro, by whom he had Donald, who died without issue. But by a common woman of Ardmeanach, Janet Shirshar, he begat three bastard sons, namely, Alexander, Lauchlan, and John. By another concubine also he had another son, who was called Eneas; and from these four sons of Hector, all the Claneachan have descended.

Afterwards this Lauchlan, brother of Duncan, married Katharine Grant, daughter of Sir Duncan Grant, who bare to him two sons, William and Lauchlan, and five daughters, of whom the eldest, Mora, was given in marriage to the laird of Macgregor, and, after his death, to the Baron of Kincairn.

The second, named Marjory, was married to Ewen Macallan, chief of the Camerons; the third, named Katharine, to Allan Macronald, laird of Knoidart; the fourth, named Johanna, to laird Aslun (Calder), and after his death, to Leslie of Kininvie; and the fifth to Ferquhard Maceachen of Kingortoch.

Alan, brother of Duncan, married Fraser, daughter of the lord of Lovat, namely Hugh the third lord of that name, by whom he had five sons, Lauchlan, William mor, John, Alexander, mor, Johannem, Alexandrum et Hugonem. Tres etiam ex eâ habuit filias, Renildam, (Alexandro Mak Innish nuptam) Euphemiam, (Johanni Shaw aliàs Makalister cheir de Rothemurchus) et aliam Domino de Lud in Atholiâ. Post obitum primæ Allani sponsæ Matrimonio se adjunxit filiæ Domini a Pitsligo, ex quâ procreavit Gulielmum oig et Allandum Reoch. Ab his septem Allani filiis, illa Makintoshiorum familia, quæ Slighk Allan dicitur, est derivata.

MILCOLUMBUS OIG, ex prædictâ Janeta Monro, Hugonis Domini de Fowlis filiâ genuit Gulielmum et Ferquhardum.

DUGALLUS, Milcolumbi filius, tres genuit filios, viz. Dugallum Bayn, Hugonem Roy et Johannem du, et ex posteritate hujus Ferquhardi, nullus masculus extat præter nunc Pettæ degentem.

OBS. CHRON.

DUNCANUS suo tempore non multum fuit rebus turbidus, inquietus, nec, vivente patre, in ullo memorabili conflictû fuisse legitur nisi in illâ pugnâ apud Culloden, ubi, cum fratribus and Hugh. He had also by her three daughters, Renilda, married to Alexander mac Innish; Euphemia to John Shaw, otherwise Macalister cheir of Rothemurchus; and the third to the laird of Lude in Athole. After the death of the first spouse of Alan, he joined himself in marriage to a daughter of the laird of Pitsligo, by whom he begat William oig and Allan Reoch. From these seven sons of Allan, that family of Mackintoshes which is called Slighk Allan is derived.

Malcolm, youngest brother of Duncan, begat Malcolm oig and Dougall.

Malcolm oig, by the aforesaid Janet Monro, daughter of Hugh, laird of Fowlis, begat William and Ferquhard.

Dougall, son of Malcolm, had three sons, namely, Dougall Bayn, Hugh Roy, and John du; and of the posterity of this Ferquhard there is no male now extant but , now living at Petty.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Duncan, in his time, was not much troubled or disquieted with affairs, nor, while his father was alive, is he recorded to have been in any memorable battle, unless in that fight at Culloden, where,

Lauchlano et Alano, paucisque aliis, Gillespicum Macdonald, Alexandri Comitis Rossie Nothum prosecutus est, cum armenta Pettie arripuisset, in qua pugnâ, Makdonaldorum multis cæsis, cæteri (licet numero plures) se in fugam conjiciunt. Nec incruenta fuit victoria; Nam una stirps Clanchattanorum, nempe Clantarrel, penè extincta fuerat. Hæc, paucis, ante Milcolumbi mortem, annis, evenerunt.

with his brothers Lauchlan and Allan, and a few others, he pursued Gillespic Macdonald, bastard of Alexander, Earl of Ross, when he had lifted the cattle of Petty. In which fight many of the Macdonalds were slain, and the rest (albeit many in number) betook themselves to flight. Nor was the victory without blood, for one family of the Clanchattans, that is to say, the Clan Tarril, was almost extinguished. These things happened a few years before the death of Malcolm.

This Duncan, in revenge of the slaughter of Malcolm beg his brother, and of Eneas MacInnish vic William his cousin, at Craig Cailloch, in the year 1441, ravaged Lochaber widely. He dispoined the right of possession which he had of the lands of Rothemurchus to his kinsman Alexander keir Mackintosh (commonly called Alister keir Machamish).

This Alexander was son of James Mackintosh, slain at the battle of Harlaw, and grandson of Shaw the toothed, leader of the thirty Clanchattans who fought at Perth in 1396 against the Clan Quhele.

This Alexander received the feudal right of the lands of Rothemurchus from David Stuart, Bishop of Moray, on 24th September 1464; which right Allan Mackintosh (alias Shaw) of Rothemurchus, grandson of the aforesaid Alexander, afterwards alienated to Adam

THIS INDENTURE made at Forbes the Ninth Day of August, the Year of God One Thousand Four Hundred Three score and Seven Years.

Betwixt an Honourable Lord William Lord Forbes, Sir Alexander Forbes of Pitsligo, Alexander Forbes of Toquhan, Arthur of Forbes and John of Forbes of Brouchous on one Part and Honourable Men Duncan Makintosh Chief and

Gordon, governor of the castle of Ruthven, in the year 1539, reserving only the liferent of James his son. In this manner the right of the lands of Rothemurchus passed away from the Mackintoshes and the Shaws, after it had been possessed by them for three hundred and three years.

This Duncan acquired to himself the heritable right of the lands of Glengarry, Achdrom, Letterfinlay, and of both the Leanachans, from John, Earl of Ross, in the year 1466; but in what manner he lost it is unknown to us.

In the year 1467, William Lord Forbes, and the same Duncan Mackintosh, bound themselves and their posterity in a mutual covenant, that should endure for ever, by an oath sworn between them and others joined with them in the same covenant, which is observed inviolate to this day. This covenant was committed to writing, dated at Forbes the 9th day of August 1467. The obligation is hard and very severe, and the style unusual, and therefore I transcribe it here in its proper idiom, word for word: 'This Indenture,' etc.

DUNCANUS accepit confirmationem Juris Senasculatûs Ballivatus Domini de Lochaber et terrarum quas in illa regione possidebat a Jacobo 3 Rege Annis 1475 et 1476.

Post hæc, præsidio, quod Johannes, Comes Rossiaë, in arce Invernessensi posuit, semoto, prædictus Crichtonius, arcis possessionem sibi resumpsit. Sed, quia hoc sine Regis mandato egit, Ferquhardus Makintosh, præfati Duncani filius, arcem machinamento quodam (quod Sus vocatur) suffodit, et, magnâ parietis parte diruta, Crichtonium aufugere cogit Anno 1491.

Et tunc Duncanus arcem reparavit, et tenuit usque ad Annum 1495, in quo Comes Huntleus, eandem cum officio vice Comitatus de Invernes a Rege accepit, et, Anno sequenti, Duncanus Annum agens 86 Invernessæ vitam morte commutavit, ubi cum antecessoribus in humatus est. Lauchlanus

Duncan received from King James the Third, in the years 1475 and 1476, confirmation of the right of stewardry of the bailiery of the lordship of Lochaber, and of the lands which he possessed in that country.

After these things, the guard which John, Earl of Ross, had placed in the castle of Inverness, having been removed, the aforesaid Crichton resumed to himself possession of the castle. But because he did this without the king's mandate, Ferquhard Mackintosh, son of the aforesaid Duncan, undermined the castle by a certain machine (which is called a sow), and a great part of the wall having been thrown down, he forced Crichton to take flight, in the year 1491.

And then Duncan repaired the castle, and held it till the year 1495, when the Earl of Huntly received it from the king, along with the office of Sheriff of Inverness. In the following year Duncan died at Inverness in his eighty-sixth year, and was buried there with his forefathers. Lauchlan, brother of Duncan, lived for the most part at Galloway in Badenoch, as he was chosen chief of the Badenoch people. On this account he was afterwards called Lauchlan of Badenoch. He was of middle height, robust of body, and of somewhat fair complexion. He lost some of his fingers in a raid against the Camerons at Craig Callioch, in the year 1441. There also his youngest brother, Malcolm beg, and his cousin, Eneas MacInnish vic William, were killed. On account of which, Duncan and Allan, brothers of Lauchlan, as is above mentioned, forthwith invaded Lochaber, ravaging Abertarf. This Lauchlan, on October 2nd, 1481, acquired from George second Earl of Huntly, the heritable right of Galloway.

Allan, brother of Duncan, dwelt chiefly at Balcherrinachy in Stratherrick, and died on 20th February 1476.

Malcolm, the youngest of the brothers of Duncan, was slain (as we have mentioned above) in the battle at Craig Callioch in the year 1441.

About this time lived Eneas, father of Milmor, from whom that family of the Clanchattans called Slighk Milmor vic Innish have taken their name; Paul Gow, grandfather of Andrew M'Phail, from whom the clan Phail; and Finlay keir, from whom the clan Finlay cheir are designated.

DE FERQUHARDO DOMINO MAKINTOSH

Hector duxit Filiam¹ Johannis Grant de Frewchii, ex quâ unum habuit filium Ferquhardum, qui infans duorum Annorum expiravit.

OBS. CHRONOLOGICA.

FERQUHARDUS vir strenuus et perornatus, procerus, sed macilentus, prædia sua Lochabriæ et alibi summâ pace tenuit.

MACKINTOSH.

Ferquhard had for his wife Egidia Fraser, daughter of the Lord of Lovat, who bare to him only one son, named Donald, who died an infant, of the disease of the stone, and four daughters, of whom one was married to the laird of Guthrie, another to the laird of Glenkindy (Strauchan), the third to Alexander mac Allan, chief of the Clanronald, and the fourth to Shaw, laird of Rothemurchus. In the time of his captivity at Dunbar he had by a certain gentlewoman, Hector and William. Hector married a daughter of John Grant of Freuchy, by whom he had one son, Ferquhard, who died an infant of two years.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

Ferquhard was a man strenuous and eloquent, tall but slender. He held his estates in Lochaber and elsewhere in the utmost peace.

In the year 1491 he threw down the castle of Inverness, as Anno 1495 ille et Kennethus Mackenzie a Kintail, propter propinquorum et asseclarum nefanda facinora, a Jacobo 4 Scotorum Rege Invernessæ capti sunt, et deinde in arce Edinburgensi duobis Annis detenti, unde, per funem a summitate arcis parietis evasere. Sed brevi post in Sylvâ Torwood a Domino Buchanano intercepti sunt, ubi Kenethus Mackenzie inter capiendum occisus est, et Ferquhardus captus et Edinburgum delatus, unde, ad arcem Dunbar brevi transfertur, ubi, sedecim Annis, captivus detinetur usque ad Regis necem in Bello Floudouno Anno 1513, quo tempore Ferquhardus cum aliis incarceratis liberati sunt.

before said; and in the following year he received from Ewen mac Allan, chief of the Camerons, a bond of submission and service for himself and his people, against all men, put in writing on 19th of February 1492.

In the year 1495, he and Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail, on account of the wicked deeds of their neighbours and retainers, were seized at Inverness by King James the Fourth, and then detained for two years in the castle of Edinburgh, from whence they escaped by a rope from the top of the castle wall. But in a short time after they were intercepted in the wood of Torwood, by the laird of Buchanan, where Kenneth Mackenzie, while being seized, was slain, and Ferquhard taken and brought back to Edinburgh, whence he was transferred to the castle of Dunbar, where he was detained a prisoner for sixteen years, until the death of the king at the battle of Flodden in the year 1513, when Ferquhard, with the others imprisoned, were liberated.

Immediately after the imprisonment of Ferquhard at Dunbar, Alexander, Lord Gordon, afterwards third Earl of Huntly, received from the king the office of sheriff of Inverness, with the governorship of the castle thereof, together with the land of Connage, in the year 1495, and so the custody of the castle of Inverness passed away the second time from the family of Mackintosh.

Gulielmus alter Ferquhardi Nothus, Forresix mandato

The Earl of Huntly had possession of Connage for sixteen years, until the year of the birth of King James the Fifth, when Petty was given by the king to Sir William Ogilvie, brother of Ogilvie of Banff, because his wife, Anna Rail, was the first to make known to the king the birth of the prince.

This William Ogilvie built the Delzield castle at Petty, and dwelt there until the Clanchattans, under the leadership of the aforesaid Malcolm¹ mor Mackintosh (alias Macgillicallum) and Ferquhard his son (on hearing of the liberation of the laird of Mackintosh from the castle of Dunbar) assaulted the Delzield castle, and burned it, when the son of William Ogilvie, and eighteen others, perished. After this deed, Dougall chased John Ogilvie, brother of William, with his wife and children, away from Connage, where Dougall afterwards dwelt for five years, until he and his sons Ferquhard and Donald Roy were killed in the castle of Inverness

Hector, bastard son of Ferquhard, a man brave and intrepid, was after the slaughter of Lauchlan oig, son of Lauchlan of Badenoch, elected chief of the Clanchattans, and enjoyed this position for the space of five years.

GULIELMUS Lauchlani Badionachensis filius et Ferquhardi patruelis Matrimoniali copulâ conjunctus est Isobellæ Makneven Baronis de Dunachtown hæreticæ Anno 1497, ex quâ nullam suscepit progeniem.

Post Isobellæ obitum, ex Pauli Makwirrich filiâ duos natos totidemque natas progeniit. Nati Æneas et Donaldus Glas. Æneas erat pater Johannis quondam Delliphur possessoris, qui unam tantum habuit filiam, quam Hugo Fraser, aliàs mak ean vic Alister, duxit, ex quâ procreatus est Alexander Fraser de Erchet. Donaldus Glas erat vir admodum strenuus et gnavus, ex quo familia de Stron est orta.

William, another bastard of Ferquhard's, was put to death at Forres, by order of James, Earl of Moray, because he was the leader of those who in 1531 laid waste the parish of Dyke.

This Ferquhard, laird of Mackintosh, without lawful issue of his body, died at Inverness on the 8th of October 1514. On his death, the chiefship of the Clanchattans devolved upon William, eldest son of Lauchlan of Badenoch.

CONCERNING WILLIAM, the THIRTEENTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

William, son of Lauchlan of Badenoch, and cousin of Ferquhard, married Isobella Macnevan, heiress of the barony of Dunachton in the year 1497, by whom he had no issue.

After the death of Isobella, by a daughter of Paul Macvurrich he had two sons and as many daughters. The sons were Eneas and Donald Glas. Eneas was father of John, sometime owner of Dellifur, who had only one daughter, whom Hugh Fraser, alias Makean vic Alister, married, of whom was born Alexander Fraser of Erchitt. Donald Glas was a man of great vigour and activity, from whom sprang the family of Strone.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

William was chosen as next heir male to his cousin Ferquhard, a man of robust body, of handsome form, with a shrewd mind, and inclined to be liberal above his fortune; while in him there was so much sweetness of manner that he won every one to himself, as well strangers as kinsmen. Besides, during the captivity of his cousin, not only did he manage his affairs, but also ruled the whole Clanchattan with the highest credit and equity.

In the year 1496, the Camerons of Lochaber, Appin and Rannoch, with some from Glencoe (came), and on the same night invaded Brae Badenoch and Strathnairn, and stealthily carried off herds of cattle. William made a sudden raid on Rannoch and Appin, where after killing many of the clan Camerons, he wasted their lands.

He inflicted the same punishment on Glencoe, because they assisted the Camerons in these robberies. Lochaber as yet was intact; but William, studying revenge, consulted with his cousin Dougall Macgillicallum, a man courageous and undaunted, who promised to subdue all Lochaber and soon to break the spirits of the Camerons, on this condition: he asked only for thirty brave, swift, and strong youths, whom he himself should select from the Clanchattan tribe; with the possession of the lands of Borlum and Culbairds for the space of one year, for the sustenance of the young men; which, being granted, he had no doubt but that he should suppress those fugitives and vagabonds. This having been agreed to, Dougall, along with his son Ferquhard, forthwith entered upon the business. It was carried out in this manner: in the night-time, the wind blowing from the east, they would quickly pass over to Abertarf, and so coming suddenly on some village determined upon by them, and having destroyed the cattle and the inhabitants of the place, they would immediately return, perhaps six or seven days after, and so waste their lands. This they were doing so far until intestine dissension among the Clanchattans themselves brought it to an end.

This William Mackintosh deserved well of the families of Grant and Mackenzie. In the first place, John Grant of Freuchy, grandson of Sir Duncan Grant, having been ejected from his heritage by his tutor, James Grant of Ballindalloch, complained to this William concerning his tutor and cousin his condition and estate, and implored help. William yielded, and having pity on that young man, he selected two hundred of the Clanchattan tribe, and sent them from Banchar in Badenoch under the leadership of the aforementioned Dougall Macgillicallum, his cousin, with the laird of Grant (then sixteen years of age), to recover his paternal heritage. The first night, they stayed at Kincarny in Strathspey, as if they had come thither to hunt in Glenmor on the following day; on which night, John mor Grant, ancestor of Glenmoriston, was begotten by the laird of Grant, on a daughter of the baron of Kincairn. On the night following they came unexpectedly to Mullachard, where they apprehended the tutor with his associates, and bound him and the chief men of the Grants by an oath, that they would in future be obedient to John, as their just and lawful head and chief; and in this manner they left the laird of Grant in the quiet possession of his own.

About this time Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail (commonly [called] Kynach vlair) who overthrew Alexander Macgillespick (alias Macdonald) of Lochalsh, at the town of Park, begot by a daughter of Donald of the Isles, whom he had married, an only son named Kenneth (commonly called Kynach avig). He it was who was slain at Torwood by the Laird of Buchanan, as was said before. Kenneth, the father, repudiated his wife, the daughter of Donald, and carried off by force from her parental home a daughter of Lord Lovat, and by her had four sons, the eldest of whom was named John.

POSTEA Elizabetha Maknevan, Isabellæ soror minor natû, et,

Kenneth arvig (oig), having been cut off without lawful issue, and the father being dead, Hector Roy Mackenzie, son of Alexander (surnamed Inrick), and John his father's brother, esteeming John his nephew a bastard, and himself the lawful heir of Kenneth vlair, drove John away. He being as yet only a youth, sought out the aforesaid William, declared to him the whole matter, and earnestly craved his advice and aid. William assented, and kept the young man with him until he had reached the years of manhood; and then he sent with him eighty bold and courageous men from Borlum, under the leadership of Dougall Macgillichallum, and Ferquhard his son; who, having advanced rapidly by a night march, came unexpectedly to the house of Killen where Hector then dwelt, and made him prisoner; and, having called together the chief men of the Mackenzies, they all together gave their oath of faithful service towards John Mackenzie, as the Head and Chief of the Mackenzies; and in that state, Dougall and his company left John among his own people.

This William Mackintosh, after the death of his wife, Isabella Macnevan, retained possession of the Barony of Dunachton.

Afterwards, Elizabeth Macnevan, younger sister of Isabella, prædictarum terrarum cohæres, jus suum resignavit in favorem Alexandri Comitæ Huntlei, qui Gulielmo deinde earundem proprietatem pecuniâ vendidit. Et hoc modo jus hæreditarium Baronie de Dunachtown, in Makintoshiorum possessionem illapsum est. Hoc evenit Anno 1502.

ANNO 1513, Ferquharo Domino Makintoshio e carcere liberato, hic Gulielmus, in testimonium diligentie et curæ tempore suæ administrationis 1800 Clanchattanorum, in campo Inverind coram Ferquharo delectum fecit, quos statim ei tradidit. Quo facto, se regimine exiit, quod, 18 Annos antea, tanquam vicarius, summâ laude tenuit.

ANNO sequenti Ferquhardus e vivis excessit, et idem Gulielmus, ut proximus hæres masculus, illi successit. Sed Johannes roy Makintosh (aliàs mak Lauchlan vic allan) Gulielmi consanguineus ægrè ferens quod Gulielmus totâ hæreditate potiretur, studet per fas et nefas aliquam possessionem ab illo extorquere, aut multis molestiis illum vexare. and co-heiress of the aforesaid lands resigned her right in favour of Alexander, Earl of Huntly, who thereafter sold the property of the same to William for money: and in this manner the heritable right of the Barony of Dunachton passed into the possession of the Mackintoshes. This happened in the year 1502.

In the year 1513, Ferquhard laird of Mackintosh having been liberated from prison, this William, as a testimony of his diligence and care in the time of his administration, in the field of Inverind in the presence of Ferquhard, made choice of 1800 of the Clanchattans, whom he forthwith gave to him. This having been done, he divested himself of the government, which for eighteen years before he held, as deputy, with the highest praise.

In the following year Ferquhard died, and the same William, as his next heir male, succeeded to him. But John Roy Mackintosh (alias MacLauchlan vic Allan), kinsman of William, grieving much that William should possess the whole heritage, set himself rightly or wrongly to extort some possession from him, or to vex him with many troubles. Wherefore, he won over the Frasers, his kinsmen by his grandmother, to his interest, with whom, at Dundaviot, William Mackintosh met by appointment. John demanded the lands of Meikle Geddes: William refused. John raged, and threatened to burn Geddes, if it was not given to him. On hearing this William grew very angry, and ordered all his friends then present to reject John; and indeed he even charged them under the heaviest penalty not to receive him under their roof, or help him with anything necessary to life: and so the meeting dissolved.

Shortly after this William resided at Inverness without any suspicion. As soon as this was known to John, he with his accomplices came to the town by night, and inhumanly stabbed him as he lay in bed sleeping securely, without retainers or servants, on 22nd May 1515, in the forty-eighth year of his age.

Immediately after this barbarous murder of William the assassins fled. Lauchlan Mackintosh, brother of the victim, when the news reached him, ordered Dougall Macgillicallum, and his son Ferquhard, with a band of twenty brave soldiers, to pursue the murderers, whose footsteps were easily found, for all the people on every side held them in detestation.

Dougall, with his handful, pursued them into Caithness, thence to Strathnaver, thence to Assint, thence to Lochalsh; from Lochalsh he followed them to Abertarf, thence to Strathspey, through Hæc evenerunt Anno 1516.

DE LAUHLANO DOMINO MACKINTOSH XIII.

LAUHLANUS MAKINTOSH, Lauchlani Badionocensis filius, Gulielmo fratri suffectus, uxorem sibi adjunxit Joannam Gordoniam filiam unicam et hæredem Domini Lochinvarriæ sororem uterinam Jacobi Stuarti Moraviæ Comitis filii illegitimi Jacobi Quarti Regis, quam, ex Janetâ Kennedy, Comitis Cassilissæ filiâ susceperat.

Strathspey to Strathdee, and thence to Glenesk, where the assassins, wearied with the chase, and suddenly intercepted, were all to a man taken, being thirteen in number, and beheaded. Their heads were brought to Lauchlan, and by his order were fixed upon spikes, to strike terror upon those who should dare to do such deeds. These things happened in the year 1516.

This William, in the aforesaid expedition made by him into Rannoch, brought away Bard MacIntyre, from whom the MacIntyres in Badenoch, now called Clanchattans, are descended.

OF LAUHLAN, the FOURTEENTH LAIRD of MACKINTOSH.

Lauchlan Mackintosh, son of Lauchlan of Badenoch, having succeeded his brother William, took to himself as his wife Jean Gordon, only daughter and heiress of the Laird of Lochinvar, sister uterine of James Stuart, Earl of Moray, illegitimate son of King James the Fourth, whom he begat by Janet Kennedy, daughter of the Earl of Cassillis.

LAUCLANUS, ex hâc Joannâ genuit Gulielmum successorem, et Margaretam, quæ nupta erat Gualtero Innesio a Calrossi.

HUIC etiam duo spurii filii nati sunt ante connubium, viz. Johannes, cujus mater erat filia Dallassii a Cantray, et, a Johanne, Makintoshii, qui quondam litle Dunachtown possidebant, venere. Alter Spurius Gulielmus vocabatur, Makintoshiorum, qui Kinrara et Pittowry possidebant, progenitor, cujus mater erat filia mor Maktearlich. Tres etiam filias Spurias habuit, viz. Agnetam, Ronaldo Makdonald glash nuptam, Katherinam, Johanni Grant de Elachi, et Marioram, quæ nupta erat Dugallo Makpherson, qui Essich coluit. Johanna Gordonia post mariti obitum matrimonio tradita est Jacobo Ogilvio de Cardell Domino de Finletour fratri Margaretæ Ogilviæ postea Dominæ Makintosh.

Hic Lauchlanus erat improcerus (et ideo sæpe Lauchlanus beg, i.e. pusillus denominatus), sed admodum robustus. Romanum nasum et Aquilinos oculos habuit, cæsariemque [page 234.]

Lauchlan, by this Jean, begat William his successor, and Margaret, who was married to Walter Innes of Calrossie.

There were born to him before marriage two bastard sons, namely, John, whose mother was a daughter of Dallas of Cantray; and from this John came the Mackintoshes who sometime possessed little Dunachton. The other bastard was called William, progenitor of the Mackintoshes who possessed Kinrara and Pittowry, whose mother was a daughter of mor Maktearlich. He had also three bastard daughters, namely, Agnes, married to Ronald MacDonal glash; Katherine, to John Grant of Elchie; and Marjory, who was married to Dougall Macpherson, who lived in Essich.

Jean Gordon, after the death of her husband, was given in marriage to James Ogilvie of Cardell, laird of Finlatour, brother of Margaret Ogilvie, afterwards Lady Mackintosh.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This Lauchlan was low of stature (and so often called Lauchlan beg, that is little), but very robust, had a Roman nose and eagle eyes, and hair of a colour inclining to yellow.

Apud vicinos omnes, ob corporis animique virtutem, sed, speciatim, propter ejus frugalitatem, erat multum honoratus, et licet multis pressus difficultatibus, durantibus octo Annis, in quibus Clanchattanis præerat, Baroniam tamen de Drumchardin et Beufoord eo tempore sibi acquisivit. Erat (ut narrat Lesleus de rebus gestis Scotorum) vir agrorum locuples, prudentiâ tam singulari præstans, ut suos omnes præ cæteris, inter officii lineas præclarè quidem continuerit. Connubium inter ipsum et Johannam Gordoniam consilio et persuasione prædicti Comitæ Moraviæ finitum est, ut suam in Septentrione factionem auget, et, quo hanc suam intensionem facilius assequeretur, donum Wardæ et Maritagii Lauchlani cepit.

ANNO 1520 prædictus Dugallus Makintosh (aliàs Makgillichallum) Lauchlani patruelis, vir elati animi, reminiscens acta, quæ suo tempore fecerat, dixisse fertur, se Domini Makintoshii

Among all his neighbours he was much honoured on account of his strength of body and of mind, but especially for his frugality; and although during the eight years in which he ruled over the Clanchattans he was oppressed with many difficulties, yet in that time he acquired to himself the Barony of Drumchardin and Beufoord. He was (as Leslie narrates, De Rebus Gestis Scotorum,) a man rich in lands, acting with such singular prudence that he very successfully kept all his people, more than others, within the bounds of duty. The marriage between him and Jean Gordon was accomplished by the advice and persuasion of the aforesaid Earl of Moray, that he might increase his faction in the North; and that he might the more easily follow out this his intention, he received the gift of the ward and marriage of Lauchlan.

In the year 1517 Lauchlan gave liberal assistance to John Maky, son of Aoidh roy, against Neil Nawrach and his sons; and chiefly by his aid the possession and right of the lands of Strathnaver came to the children of Aoidh roy Maky.

In the year 1520 the aforesaid Dougall Mackintosh (alias Macgillichallum), cousin german of Lauchlan, a man of a haughty disposition, remembering the deeds which in his time he had nepotem esse non minùs quàm Lauchlanus oig (ita enim Makintoshius vulgò vocabatur) et majora in honorem familiæ fecisse quàm Lauchlanus Badionochensis et ejus filii, et tribùs Ducatum ante quemlibet alium meruisse, et, brevi post hæc dicta, possessionem arcis Invernessensis sibi assumpsit, et, in omni, tanquam Clanchattanorum Dux se gerere conatur. Sed in ipso in cæpto prostratus est. Nam Anno 1521, arce Invernessæ stratagemate captâ, Dugallus et filii, Ferquhardus et Donaldus Roy (ob eorum insolentiam) gladio perierunt, et deinde Dominus Makintosh, arcem Invernessensem et Connagiam, antiquas suorum antecessorum possessiones, ingreditur.

Sub id tempus orta est controversia inter Dominum Makintosh et Johannem Campbellum Calderium Equitem Auratum, qui duxit Muriellam Calderiam Calderiæ hæredem de terris Miklgeddes et Rait. Inter quos (post multa atrocia facta) fit reconciliatio hâc conditione, ut, agris istis controversis, Makintoshius, dum in vivis esset, potiretur, quæ reconciliatio Sacramento sancita scriptis mandata est apud Bandchar in Badenochiâ 20 Aug. 1521 adhuc inter Makintoshii chartas extans.

done, is reported to have said that he was grandson of the laird of Mackintosh not less than Lauchlan oig (for so Lauchlan was commonly called); and that he had done more for the honour of the family than Lauchlan of Badenoch and his son, and was deserving of the chiefship of the clan before any other.

Soon after making these assertions he took possession of the Castle of Inverness, and endeavoured in every way to carry himself as chief of the Clanchattans. But his enterprise was nipped in the bud; for in 1521 the Castle of Inverness, having been taken by stratagem, Dougall and his sons, Ferquhard and Donald Roy, perished by the sword for their insolence; and then the laird of Mackintosh entered into the Castle of Inverness and Connage, the ancient possessions of his ancestors.

About this time there arose a controversy between the laird of Mackintosh and John Campbell of Calder, knight, who married Muriel Calder, heiress of Calder, concerning the lands of Meikle-Geddes and Rait. After many atrocious deeds, reconciliation was made between them, on this condition, that Mackintosh should possess these disputed lands while he lived; which agreement was ratified by oath, and committed to writing at Bendchar in Badenoch on August 20th, 1521, still extant among the charters of Mackintosh.

Hic Lauchlanus Dominus Makintosh Anno 1522, agrorum Connagiæ possessionem per aliquot Annos, prædicto Johanni Malcolmsono (aliàs Makgillichallum) nepoti suo illegitimo ex fratre Milcolumbo, gratis dedit, ad hunc finem, ut, Euphemiam Dunbarram, Andreæ Monro, a Miltown viduam, Matrimonio illi obtineret, et hoc modo, Johannem a pristinis grassationibus mansuefacere putavit. Aliter tamen evenit, ut, a Lesleo de rebus gestis Scotorum ample narratur.

This Lauchlan, laird of Mackintosh, in the year 1522, freely gave possession of the lands of Connage for some years to the aforesaid John Malcolmson (alias Macgillicallum) his illegitimate nephew, by his brother Malcolm; for this purpose, that he might obtain for him in marriage Euphemia Dunbar, widow of Andrew Monro of Miltown; and in this way he thought to tame John of his wonted maraudings. It happened otherwise, however, as is fully narrated by Leslie, De Rebus Gestis Scotorum.

Lauchlan endeavoured to keep all his people within the bounds of duty; but this greatly alienated from him the minds of many who felt it grievous to be so constrained by the strict law of duty. Among those whose barbarity Lauchlan abhorred, this John Malcolmson continued incessantly in his accustomed depravity and lawlessness, which very greatly distressed Lauchlan. He sent for him, and resolved to reprove him gently. Meanwhile there was present one named Milmor mac Dai, foster brother of Lauchlan, and his principal henchman, who, having become enamoured of a certain widow at Brin, it happened that Dougall Macqueen, another kinsman of Lauchlan, carried her off; which Milmor judged could not likely have been done unknown to Lauchlan, and without his consent; and therefore he meditated revenge. Concealing his hatred, he seized this opportunity.

celat, et hanc ansam arripit. Johannem Malcolmsonum, quem, alta molire et dominari ambire sciebat, clanculum præfatur, dicens Makintoshium, de illo ignominiosè locutum esse, et Satyricè, illum Makcheandich grogich denominâsse, illum odio habere, et insuper quod, illum, a possessione Connagiæ ejicere, intenderit. Hoc non priùs dictum quàm creditum. Johannes simultatem et sævitiam in tenebrionis corde (contra suum Dominum) radicatam percipiens, hunc perfidum et flagitiosum nebulonem sibi associat, et ambo in unum conjuncti, suum in noxium Ducem trucidare conspirant, et, ni cunctatio conatum detegeret, horrendum hoc facinus sequenti die perpetrare instituunt. Makintoshius tunc Loindvulgæ in Badenochiâ pernoctabat, ubi rem aggredi non audebant. Cùm proximo die in reditû venaturum (in loco Breravock vocato) sciebant, et ibi illum interficere conclusum est.

SUMMO mane 25 die Martii Anno 1524 Makintoshius, ad fatalem sedem venatoriam iter aggreditur. Sed Johannes Malcolmsonus, Milmor, et ejus frater Gulielmus cum tribus aliis sceleris sociis intervallum faciunt, et, quum primum Makintoshium solitarium in sede venatoriâ viderent, cum invadunt, et ex insidiis perfidè confodiunt 34 ætatis Anno.

He conferred secretly with John Malcolmson, whom he knew to be ready for high attempts, and ambitious to bear rule, telling him that Mackintosh had spoken of him contemptuously, and had, by way of satire, named him MacKynich Grogich, regarded him with hatred, and that, moreover, he intended to eject him from the possession of Connage. This was no sooner said than believed. John, perceiving malice and cruelty rooted in the heart of the knave against his chief, associated to himself this perfidious and wicked scoundrel; and having both become of one mind, they conspired to murder their blameless chief; and lest delay should reveal the plot, they determined to perpetrate this horrid villainy on the following day. Mackintosh was then spending the night at Loindvulgie in Badenoch, where they dared not make the attempt; but as they knew that on his return the next day he would hunt in the place called Breravock, it was concluded to kill him there.

Early on the morning of the 25th day of March 1524 Mackintosh took his way to the fatal hunting seat. But John Malcolmson, Milmor, and his brother William, with other three wicked accomplices, made a halt until they saw Mackintosh alone in the hunting seat, when by an ambush they set upon him and treacherously stabbed him, in the thirty-fourth year of his age.

In revenge of this parricide, Donald Mackintosh (alias Glas), nephew of Mackintosh by his brother William, and Donald Mackintosh (alias MacWilliam vic Allan), his kinsman, with the help of the laird of MacGregor, who had married the sister of the murdered man, about three months after, apprehended John Malcolmson, near Anakelt, and put him bound in chains on the island of Rothemurchus, where he should be detained until the Earl of Moray, Regent of Scotland (and brother-in-law of the slain man) came to the north, in whose presence he was beheaded on 1st May 1531. But the rest of the Mackintoshes so fiercely pursued the murderer, that they soon after punished him and the other associates of his wickedness by death as they deserved. Leslie, book 9, De Gestis Scotorum. In like manner, Milmor, with his brother and the residue of their companions in crime, were taken, and suffered merited punishments, and their hands were stuck upon a pole where they had murdered their chief.

Because, as Leslie writes, the son of Mackintosh seemed unfit, by reason of his tender age, to govern by fear and punishment subjects somewhat unruly, his kinsman, Hector Mackintosh, was by common consent elected chief, until the youth, his kinsman, should by maturity of age be able to hold the government of his clan. So Leslie.

This Hector, now chosen leader of the Clanchattans, as is said above, was bastard son of the aforesaid Ferquhard, laird of Mackintosh, begotten of a gentlewoman (whose name is unknown to us) in the time of his father's captivity at Dunbar. He held the government for five years with singular prudence, and was much esteemed by all the neighbours.

With him the lairds of Calder, Foulis, Sleat, and Kilravock joined together in a bond of amity, confirmed by oath, whereby the three barons became bound to have common friends and enemies with Mackintosh; that they should not, without his consent, make league or war, or send help to such as asked for it. These old letters are dated at Inverness the last day of April 1527. The witnesses were John Williamson, Donald Williamson his brother, and Donald, notary public. The same Hector became bound also with Colin, Earl of Argyll, in a bond of amity in the same year. This bond also is still extant among the charters of Mackintosh.

While Hector was exercising the office of tutor manfully and with probity, the Earl of Moray (as Leslie writes), when he saw with how great difficulties young Mackintosh would be pressed on Hector's anger burned vehemently when the child was thus craftily taken away from him. For, while he declared how greatly he was thereby bereft of his credit and authority, he tried every means by which, if the boy were of new asserted to be in his power, his credit and authority might be reaffirmed. But all were of opinion that his great solicitude to have the child declared in his power, was in order to strengthen the succession of himself and his family to the perpetual rule of the clan when the boy was gone. Which opinion was so deeply impressed upon Moray that he guarded the boy with all care and diligence lest he should by any means fall into the power of Hector. On which account the latter gnashed his teeth with rage, and determined to pour out his wrath against Moray in whatever way he could.

He therefore stirred up his brother William, and his other kinsman, in order that by joining their forces to him they might harry the fields and lands of the Earl of Moray by devastation and pillage, which they did with such fury that, having plundered the town of Dyke and besieged the castle of Darnaway, they gave many proofs of their unbounded cruelty by slaughters, burnings, and robberies, promiscuously destroying the men and women who were favourites of the earl.

When the Earl of Moray beheld them wildly exulting in ravaging his lands and in their other villainies, he obtained from the king and his council the appointment of lieutenant in that war, so that he might by force of arms punish their fury and audacity in wasting the commonweal. So Leslie.

Soon afterwards, the earl, accompanied with a great force, came to Inverness (to minister justice as it was given out); thence he made for Strathnairn, as it were to manage the affairs of the laird of Mackintosh, for he was appointed tutor. Meanwhile he summoned the people of Petty, Stratherne, and Strathnairn to Tordarach, where eighteen of these who were at the plundering of Dyke were hung upon a beam of the house in which the court was held. This was done within the house, lest those who were loitering at the doors should have hindered the execution.

Leslie writes (but upon erroneous information) that two hundred were there strangled with the rope. Of these, says Leslie, such was their loyalty to their leader, that when they were led forth one by one to the cross, life was offered to them if they would disclose the place in which Hector had hid himself, they all, with the utmost constancy, declared they did not know; but that if they did know, they would not by any sort of punishment or fear be induced by betraying their trust to make it known. So Leslie. But a little while thereafter, one named Dugall Bayn M'Farquher vic Coul, who had married Euphemia Dunbar, widow of the aforesaid John Malcolmson, betrayed William, brother of Hector, who was hanged at Forres. Hector, when he considered that he was now excluded from the succour of every one, making use of the loyal help of Alexander Dunbar, Dean of Moray, betook himself as a suppliant to the king; for he preferred to crave mercy of the king doubtfully, than certainly to undergo the vengeance of Moray. On his humbly praying for the pardon of his crimes the king received him into favour, and as he was a man of great spirit, judgment, and courage, he was by and by employed in more intimate matters. Thus Leslie.

Afterwards at St. Andrews, on 25th January 1532, he met his death suddenly at the hands of one James Spens, a priest; on which account Spens, being afterwards degraded from the dignity of the priesthood, paid the penalty of murder with his life.

By some it is stated that this Hector was, by King James the

OF WILLIAM, the FIFTEENTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

William, son of the aforesaid Lauchlan, took to wife Margaret Ogilvie, daughter of the laird of Finlatour, by whom he had William (who died an infant), Lauchlan, who succeeded his father, and Margaret, who was first Lady of Grant; secondly, Lady of Abergeldie, then Lady of Pitsligo, and lastly, Lady of Duffus.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This William was of a desirable stature, had a body well knit, eagle eyes, beautiful hair, and a ready and very shrewd mind. He was three years of age at his father's death; and then, by the care of the Earl of Moray, his uncle, he was sent to the laird of Finlatour, with whom he resided for about seven years. He was thereafter sent to the Earl of Cassillis, who was so careful in educating him, that in a short time (as Leslie says) he was so brought up, even from his childhood, in goodness of manners and of life, that when he entered upon public life all the chiefs of those in the remote parts of Scotland, to whom the Irish language was vernacular, admired him as a perfect example of virtue, an artificer well skilled for promoting the public good. Buchanan writes that he was a man ignorant of evil devices, and who, in politeness, modesty, and every kind of accomplishment, vied with those who were instructed with the greatest care by their parents and teachers, to the exercise of virtue. Books 16, 17.

Through his mother he was lawful heir to the Barony of Lochinvar, and should have possessed the inheritance, if his mother had not been circumvented by her kinsman, to whom, unknown to her future husband, the right had been privately disposed before her marriage. Nevertheless, as he was the lawful heir, William added the crest of the Gordons (which was a head cut off) to his arms.

In the year 1540, he began to administer his own affairs and to exercise the rule of the Clanchattans, and was embraced by his subjects with all their heart (for they had long been in want of a leader). But to the neighbours, namely, the Grants, the Frasers, and the Cummings, it was very displeasing that the Clanchattans

On 12th May 1543 he received from George, second of the name and fourth Earl of Huntly, a Charter of Letting, for his lifetime, of the lands of Benchar, Clune, Shiplin and Essich; and in the same year he received in like manner, from the queen regent, the right of the lands of Petty Breachly and Strathern. For his forebears were wont so to hold the same lands.

In the year 1544, he accompanied the Earl of Huntly in the expedition made by the Lord of Lovat against the chief of the Clanronalds; and after returning from Lochaber, having discovered that the Clanronalds were lying in wait for Lovat and his men, he offered himself and his people by way of support, which Lovat refused, asserting that he himself was able to subdue Clanronald. Huntly, being informed of the whole matter, praised Lord Lovat and brought Mackintosh with him towards Badenoch.

Lovat and his men were marching straight home when, at Lochloch, near Laggan achdrom, the Clanronalds threw themselves in the way of the Frasers. The battle was bitterly fought on 25th July 1544. Victory inclined to the Clanronalds, for Lord Lovat and his eldest son, with almost all their men, were there slain, and of their adversaries few escaped.

ANNO 1547 Makintoshius, ut Huntlei vicarius, Eugenium Macallan Cameroniorum Ducem et Ronaldum Makdonald Glas, Rebelles, ob nefanda facinora, declaratos, apprehendi curavit, quos Huntleo tradidit. Nam ejus mandato capti

It was an advantage to the Clanronalds on that day that one named Bean Clerach, a captain and servant of Lord Lovat, having been ordered to attack the Clanronalds from behind, violated his trust in the very beginning of the fight and fled with one hundred chosen troops.

It is to be noted that twelve countrymen of Petty, after the return from Lochaber, while making their way home through Abertarf, were slain by the Clanronalds (ignorantly as they asserted), for which they were punished soon after.

On 30th October 1544 Huntly appointed Mackintosh lieutenant in the north under himself. On 20th October 1545 he received from Patrick Hepburn, Bishop of Moray, a new right to the Barony of Moy, for the old charters were wasted by the injury of time.

On 25th May 1546, in revenge of the slaughter committed on the men of Petty in 1544 (as above narrated), Mackintosh not only harried the lands of Glengarry by wasting and plunder, but also slew the country people who resisted him.

In the year 1547 Mackintosh, as lieutenant of Huntly, apprehended Ewen Macallan, chief of the Camerons, and Ronald Macdonald Glas, declared rebels on account of their nefarious misdeeds, and delivered them to Huntly, as it was by his order

Sed hoc non profuit. Nam Lauchlanus, cordis simultatem pro tempore dissimulans, omni sinistro modo, suum innoxium Ducem tollere statuit, ut ex eventû apparebit. Anno 1549 Huntleus, cum, hujus Makintoshii potentiam suspectam haberet, nec, ingenio recto, ad scelerum ministeria, abuti posse videretur (ut ait Buchananus) nec non, ab omnibus vicinis et montanis cum multum honoratum cerneret, ejus virtutis splendorem invidere cœpit, et ideo, sibi illum vinculis obligare desiderat, quibus, a Causâ they were taken. They were afterwards beheaded at Bog o' Geicht and the head of Ewen Cameron was fixed upon the Tolbooth of Elgin.

In the year 1548 Mackintosh received into favour Lauchlan, son of John Malcolmson (who murdered his father), and granted to him possession of the lands of Connage for some years. And Lauchlan, in order that he might keep inviolate his allegiance to his kinsman as his chief and the head of the family, not only bound himself by bond, ratified by oath, to give faithful obedience and service to Mackintosh, but also George Monro of Davochgarty, James Dunbar of Tarbat, and Robert Dunbar of Durris, his cousins and kinsmen, pledged the greater part of their fortune for his fidelity. But this proved of no avail: for Lauchlan, dissembling for a time the malice of the heart, determined by every sinister means to make away with his innocent chief, as will appear from the event.

In the year 1549, Huntly, as he regarded with suspicion the power of Mackintosh, and (as Buchanan says) was unable to make use of him, with his upright mind, to subserve his evil purposes; as he perceived him also to be honoured by all his neighbours, and by the Highlanders, he began to envy the splendour of his virtue, and therefore wished to bind him to himself by such bonds as to make him stand for his (Huntly's) cause whether good or bad. But William absolutely refused to commit himself to his power. Wherefore Huntly, being very angry, deprived him of the lieutenantancy and jurisdiction, and John Hamilton was put into his place.

A little while afterwards, Lauchlan, son of John Malcolmson, who (as Leslie says) had before laid violent hands on the father of this Mackintosh, laying hold of this occasion, perfidiously calumniated him to Huntly, asserting that he had heard him say he would revenge the indignity done to him at the cost of Huntly's life: a notorious calumny! For (as Buchanan writes) this Mackintosh was an honest man, unacquainted with evil devices; and who in courtesy, sobriety of mind, and every point of good breeding, vied with those who were most carefully educated by their parents and teachers to the exercise of virtue. But yet, Huntly, having consulted with those who formerly laid violent hands on the father of Mackintosh, that is to say, with this Lauchlan, son of John Malcolmson, and his associates, now purposing to remove Mackintosh also by a violent death, seized him unawares, and cast him into prison at Strathbogie.

It happened at this time that Huntly was one of those who in Galliam comitaturus esset, arbitratus non satis tutum Makintoshium post se liberum relinquere, quamvis, nullam dignam expetendi supplicii causam reperiebat, tamen sub prætextû Legis de vivis ducit, ubi, in Prætorio Abredonensi 2 Aug. 1550 curiolâ habitâ, de proditione adversus Huntleum (tunc Reginæ vicarium in Septentrione) accusatur. were to accompany the queen regent to France. Concluding that it was not quite safe to leave Mackintosh at freedom, though he found no just occasion for punishing him, yet he sought to deprive him of life under colour of law, when in a court held in the Tolbooth of Aberdeen, on 2nd August 1550, he was accused of treachery against Huntly (who was then the queen's lieutenant in the north). Those nominated on the assize were William Seton of Meldrum, William Udney of that Ilk, Alexander Crawford of Fedderet, John Forbes of Towy, Alexander Leslie of that Ilk, William Cheyn of Strathloch, Gilbert Gray of Shives, Thomas Chalmer of Cuits, Thomas Meldrum of Iden, Alexander Chalmer of Belnacraig, Patrick Cheyn of Essilmont, knight, Alexander Con of Auchry, and John Seton of Disblair, all retainers of Huntly. The witnesses brought forward were Donald M^oWilliam vic Dai dui, servant of the late John Malcolmson aforesaid, beheaded at Rothemurchus for the murder of Lauchlan laird of Mackintosh, father of the accused: and the other witness, the aforesaid Lauchlan, who, as Leslie says, was supposed to have suggested and laid the plot for destroying William Mackintosh.

Mackintosh objected that Huntly ought not to be accuser and judge in the same cause, and that his own: 2nd, That the witnesses were his (the defender's) chief adversaries: and 3rd, That the assizers were all clients of the accuser. These exceptions having been repelled by the judge, the Provost of Aberdeen, repeating the exceptions, appealed to Parliament; and having protested against the sentence about to be given in that cause, he left the court. But this availed nothing; the matter was put to trial, and the jury, being induced by Huntly to believe that he sought nothing but honour in the affair, and that if they would put the accused in his power, he should permit him, with a good grace, to go free without any harm. They, trusting in this assurance, gave forth their sentence, referring the accused to the clemency of the judge. Whereupon, the judge gave sentence that he should be beheaded on the hill (commonly called the Woman Hill) on the same day, about the second hour after noon; and that his goods be escheated.

This sentence having been published, the Provost of Aberdeen, assembling the citizens, hindered the execution. Huntly being enraged, led Mackintosh captive again to Strathbogie: and finding that he could not by law take away his life, considering the aforesaid protestation, therefore, dissembling his hatred, he arranged with his wife that in his absence, she should inflict the punishment upon the guiltless man (thinking that the blame of the wicked deed would be laid on her); nor (as Buchanan says) was this strong-minded woman slow to take the business in hand, for on the 23rd of August 1550 (her husband being absent), she caused him to be beheaded, in the 29th year of his age.

On the 29th of August, the Clan Chattan carried the body of Mackintosh to Inverness, where he was buried with his ancestors.

It is to be noted that on 21st of August 1550, Lauchlan, son of John Malcolmson (for his false witnessing against Mackintosh at Aberdeen), got from Huntly, not only possession of the lands of Connage for his lifetime (for Huntly, after the death of James Stuart, the king's brother, was created Earl of Moray), but also was appointed chamberlain and collector of the rents of the lands of Petty, Brachlie, and Stratherne. And that he might be the better fortified against those who wished him ill, he was, on the last day of August, the year aforesaid, joined with Robert Monro of Fowlis in the office of sheriff-depute of Inverness. The parchments granted on these appointments are still extant among the charters of the Laird of Mackintosh. These things being accomplished, Lauchlan returned home forthwith, and entered the Castle of Petty. He exercised the office of sheriff for a short time; and for fear, he had an armed band around him continually, and forced many of his kinsmen to adhere to him. These means,

Accordingly, having by stratagem gained entrance to the Castle of Petty, they seized Lauchlan, son of John Malcolmson, above mentioned, and having condemned his followers to exile, they slew him as confessedly the betrayer of their chief, on the last day of September 1551.

The murder of Mackintosh grievously moved the minds of Gilbert, Earl of Cassillis, grand-uncle of the victim, and of others who were very friendly to him, against Huntly, and should (as Leslie says) have stirred up great tumults, but for the prudence of the queen whereby the latent enmity was somewhat allayed.

In the year 1557, the Earl of Cassillis, then Treasurer of Scotland, summoned Huntly and his son Lord Gordon, and John Hamilton the earl's deputy, with the rest of the judges who condemned Mackintosh, before the Parliament at Edinburgh, for the slaughter of Mackintosh, and for reduction of the sentence of forfeiture. But Huntly, thinking that he might be able to transfer the blame of the crime upon his wife, compared; and having been privy to the crime was found guilty, and therefore kept in prison. But in regard to the punishment to be inflicted there was a difference of opinion, some were for banishing him so many years to France; others were for beheading him. At length it came to this that he should for the murder satisfy the party; that he should be retained in custody until he surrendered the right which he claimed to himself in Moray, and to the customs of Orkney, of the Shetland Islands, and of Mar; and, in fine, that he should abstain from the whole of the royal patrimony which was situated in that country, and from his jurisdictions in that province, from which great advantages had accrued to him; and that he should freely permit all the profits to be used and enjoyed by the taxmen and collectors, as to the regent might seem good. Some write that besides these, he was adjudged to five years of exile, but that for the sum of five thousand pounds he was permitted by the queen to remain in the country. A little while afterwards, the Earl of Cassillis, who alone managed the affairs of Mackintosh, died, whereupon Mackintosh, being then a minor, was for a time quiet.

OF LAUHLAN, the SIXTEENTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

Lauchlan, son of the aforementioned William, married Agnes Mac-

Agneta Mackenzie filiam Kenethi Mackenzie a Kintail (agnomine Kynach naquirk), ex qua 7 habuit filios, Angusium (seu Æneam), Gulielmum, Milcolumbum, Johannem, Duncanum, Allatum et Lauchlanum; et 6 filias, Janetam Dominam Makleod, Katherinam Dominam Glengarry seniore, Margaretam Dominam Glengarry juniore, (postea de Finzean), Marioram, 1^o Dominam Macdonald (postea Dominam Fowlis), Isabellam Dominam Glenurchi, et Elisabetham, quæ Matrimonio, Davidi Ross de Holm tradita est.

OBS. CHRON.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This Lauchlan was seven years old when his father was killed. He was tall of stature, above the common, of great strength, of a good constitution, and having an equal mixture of valour and prudence; otherwise he could not have resisted adversaries so powerful as he had.

When his father was slain, the child, having many enemies, was privately carried over to the laird of Mackay, namely, Aiodh mac Donald vic Ky (who was of kin to this Mackintosh by his mother, and was a chief favourite of the Mackintosh family).

The boy was, however, intercepted on the way by the aforesaid Kenneth Mackenzie, with whom he was courteously brought up for some years. During his pupilarity his estate was managed by the tutor, Donald Mackintosh, William's son.

In 1560, resignation having been made by him, in the hands of the queen, of his lands in Lochaber, he obtained from her a new right to himself of the same, and of the office of stewardry and bailiery of the whole lordship of Lochaber; and then he remained at Court for two years, until the queen came to Inverness in 1562.

At this time Huntly was the head of the Popish faction in Scotland, and James, Earl of Moray, bastard brother of the queen, was head of the orthodox party; which factions were in opposition to each other. Huntly, powerful in arms and resources, and being of the same faith with the queen, aspired to marry her to his second son, John Gordon of Finlater, and if she refused, he would attempt to force her to it; and to that end he purposed to cut off the Earls of Moray and Morton while they were in the north with the queen, not only because they hindered his intention in that affair, but also because they were the chief promoters of the reformed religion. The queen came to Inverness in the month of September 1562, and wished to pass the night in the castle, which was her own house, but Alexander Gordon (of the

In the meantime it was reported that John Gordon of Finlater, the aforementioned son of Huntly, was in the field with a thousand armed men; and that the Badenoch men, who were coming to help him, were not far off. The queen, considering the danger, was afraid to sojourn in the town, which was unfortified. That night the guard was doubled at the gates of the town.

Mackintosh, who was by no means favourable to Huntly, was then present, and his friends and retainers were next to the town. He was called aside by the queen, who besought him to gather together his kinsmen speedily for her defence. He remained in the town the whole night, and indicated to Donald Mackintosh, his tutor, and the rest of his kinsmen, the position in which the queen was placed.

On the next day, the Clanchattans, having entered the town in military order, protected the queen until the rest of the neighbours should arrive. When Mackintosh heard that the Badenoch men had come to the river Nairn in order to support Huntly, he met them in the way, and brought them all to the queen. On hearing of this, John Gordon, who was then about nine miles from the town, raged, and returning to the other side of the Spey, he joined with his father. On the following day the Frasers and the Monros were joined to the queen's forces, and were her guards that night. Thus aided, the queen laid siege to the Castle of Inverness, which, as it was not sufficiently fortified to bear the assault, was surrendered, and Alexander Gordon, captain of the castle, was hanged; but his companions in arms were dismissed unharmed, and the queen returned to Aberdeen.

On the 28th of October the battle of Corrichie was fought, where of Huntly's men one hundred and twenty were slain, and a hundred taken prisoners; of the other side no one was hurt. Among the captives was Huntly himself, and his two sons, John and Adam. The father, being aged and corpulent, was suffocated in his armour in the hands of his captors.

The prisoners having been brought to Aberdeen, five of the more distinguished of them were hanged on the 30th day of October; and on 2nd November, John Gordon of Finlater, and George Gordon of Coclarachy, were beheaded.

In the year 1568, on the 7th of June, by the mediation of John Leslie, Bishop of Ross, George Gordon of Shives, knight, Robert Innes of Invermarky, George Barclay of that Ilk, Mr. George Gordon of Beldornie, and John Ross of Ballivat, the Earl of Insuper accepit jus de novo Baroniae de Dunachtown, etc., et Huntleus et Makintoshius, se et posteros, stricto amicitiae vinculo, sacramento confirmato, obstrinxerunt, quod adhuc extat inter Makintoshii Chartas. Hæc unio in contaminata observabatur quoad vixit ille Huntleus. Sed paulo post ejus successor, eandem fregit.

ANNO 1570 dissidium inter Makenzios et Monroos ortum est, quod, Makintoshium utriusque familiae Genearchis affinitate devinctum, nonnihil inquietavit (nam Robertus Monro a Fowlis, Monroorum Princeps, Margaretam Ogilviam, Makintoshii matrem, in uxorem habuit, et Colini Mackenzie a Kintail, Makenziorum Genearchæ, soror Agneta, Makintoshio erat Matrimonio conjuncta). Attamen, has tribus, Makintoshius, Huntly, son of the aforementioned earl who died at Corrichie, and Mackintosh, embraced one another, and the dissension was removed. At that time Mackintosh received from the Earl of Huntly the hereditary right of the lands of Benchar, Clune, Shiplin, Kinraig, Essich, Tordarroch, Dundelchak, and Bunchrubin. Moreover, he received of new the right of the barony of Dunachton, etc. Huntly and Mackintosh also bound themselves and their posterity in a strict bond of unity, confirmed by oath, which is still extant among the Mackintosh charters. This union was observed inviolate while this Huntly lived; but his successor broke it soon after.

In the year 1569, Mackintosh leased to Donald M'Ewan, alias Cameron, and John his brother, the lands of Glenlui and Locharkagg, for their service and submission, for the sum of eighty merks yearly, as is contained in the agreement.

In the year 1570 there arose contention between the Mackenzies and the Monros, which not a little troubled Mackintosh, who was by affinity allied to the chiefs of both the families; for Robert Monro of Fowlis, chief of the Monros, had married Margaret Ogilvie, the mother of Mackintosh, and Agnes, sister of Colin Mackenzie of Kintail, chief of the Mackenzies, was married to Mackintosh. But for all that, Mackintosh could not by any persuasion reconcile these families.

The cause of the dissension was this. The castle of Chanonry belonged by right to Leslie of Balquhan, by the gift of John Leslie, Bishop of Ross. Nevertheless, the Earl of Moray (then regent), gave the custody of the castle to Andrew Monro of Milton, a very arrogant man, and promised to recompense Balquhan in some other way. Shortly after, the regent having been slain, Andrew Monro, by permission of the Earls of Lennox and of Mar (who succeeded as regents), retained possession of the castle. The Mackenzies, emulous of Andrew, bought the right of the castle from Balquhan, and laid siege to it. On this there followed some slaughter, and as Mackintosh was unable to bring the contending parties to concord by any other means, he came with six hundred of his men to Craigwood, near the castle of Chanonry, where he could be seen both by the besiegers and the besieged, and vowed that he, with his men, would help that party which he should perceive most inclined to peace and concord, so that the other party would be rendered tractable and tame. Both the clans being in this manner forced to concord, they chose Mackintosh, as bearing good will to both parties, to be judge arbiter; and he, without delay, adjudged possession of the castle, ANNO 1572 et die 12 mensis Junii Ronaldus filius Ronaldi Makdonald glaisch a Gargochiâ, hæreditariam obligationem obsequii et servitutis pro se, posteris, propinquis et clientibus, jurejurando dato, contra omnes mortales (Atholiæ Comitæ tantummodo dempto), Makintoshio et posteris dedit. Hoc ligamentum datum est apud Insulam Moyensem coram his testibus, Gacobo Makintosh a Gask, Johanne Forbes a Tolly, Guilelmo Cuthbert, et Johanne Ker, Invernessæ Civibus, Nigello Makconil vic niel dicti Ronaldi servo, Donaldo Du mak hamish vic Alister Badenochensi, et Johanne Gibson Notario Publico.

EODEM Anno, et die 7 mensis Septembris, Hector, Johannis Malcolmsoni supra dicti nepos, Dugallum Makpherson a Essich (in vindictam cædis Lauchlani, ejusdem Hectoris patris, in Castello Pettienensi, Anno 1551, ut supra memoratum), ex improvisò prope dignam vallem trucidavit. Quamobrem idem Hector, ex Domini Makintoshii mandato, hoc eodem Anno in and of the lands pertaining thereto, to the Mackenzies; and the estates of the Monros, which in time of the strife were forcibly possessed by the Mackenzies, he restored to the Monros; and in this manner, by the aid of Mackintosh, whose authority availed very much with both the parties, that discord was allayed.

In the year 1572, on the 12th day of June, Ronald, son of Ronald Macdonald glaisch of Gargochy, gave to Mackintosh and his posterity a heritable obligation of manrent and service for himself, his posterity, kindred and dependents against all mortals (excepting only the Earl of Atholl), an oath being interposed. This bond is dated at the island of Moy, before these witnesses, James Mackintosh of Gask, John Forbes of Tolly, William Cuthbert and John Ker, citizens of Inverness, Niel Makconil vic Niel, servant of the said Ronald, Donald Du mac Hamish vic Alister of Badenoch, and John Gibson, notary public.

The same year, on the 7th day of September, Hector, grandson of the above-mentioned John Malcolmson, unexpectedly murdered Dougal Macpherson of Essich, near Dingwall; in revenge for the slaughter of Lauchlan, father of this Hector, in the castle of Petty, in the year 1551, as before mentioned. Wherefore, the same Hector was by the command of the laird of Mackintosh, taken villâ Dunisostray captus et decollatus. Caput ejus supra Praetorium oppidi Invernessæ publicè ad contumeliam, aliosque exemplo terrendos, statumini affixum est. Eodem etiam supplicio eodemque sceleris socii afficiebantur.

ANNO 1573, et 14 die Martii, controversia inter Makintoshium et Georgium Monro a Davochgarti de possessione Connagiæ, ex mediatione et arbitrio Colini Makenzii a Kintail, Walteri Urquhart a Cromarti, Roberti Monro a Fowlis et Hugonis Ross a Kilravock, semota est, et Connagiæ possessio Makintoshio adjudicata. Controversiæ caussa hæc erat, viz., Statim post cædem Lauchlani, Johannis Malcolmsoni filii Anno 1551 præfatus Georgius (Lauchlani frater uterinus) possessionem Connagiæ, a Barbarâ Hay (Lauchlani Relictâ) pro pecuniarum summâ accepit (nam illa, earundem terrarum vitalem redditum a Comite Huntlei habebat). Deinde idem Georgius Monro (Makintoshio tunc puero), earum fiduciarum locationem pro quibusdam Annis a Regente accepit. Nam, a Catanâ tribû tota Connagia depopulata est Anno 1568. and beheaded the same year, in the town of Dunisostray. His head was ordered to be set above the Tolbooth of Inverness, for disgrace, and as an example to terrify others. At the same time the associates of his wickedness were subjected to the same punishment.

A controversy having arisen between Mackintosh and George Monro of Davochgartie concerning the possession of Connage, it was, on the 14th of March 1573, removed by the mediation and award of Colin Mackenzie of Kintail, Walter Urquhart of Cromarty, Robert Monro of Fowlis, and Hugh Rose of Kilravock, the possession of Connage being adjudged to Mackintosh. The cause of the controversy was this: Immediately after the slaughter of Lauchlan, son of John Malcolmson, in the year 1551, the aforesaid George (brother-uterine of Lauchlan), received possession of Connage, for a sum of money, from Barbara Hay, relict of Lauchlan (for she had the liferent of these lands from the Earl of Huntly). Thereafter the same George Monro (Mackintosh being then a child) got a trust-lease of the lands from the Regent, for certain years: for the whole of Connage was laid waste by the Clanchattan in the year 1568. Mackintosh assumed the vacant possession of these lands as his own heritage: for these estates were possessed by fourteen chiefs of his family before that year;

familiæ Genearchis, ante illum Annum, possidebantur, et Georgius Monro, in fratris sui cædis vindictam (Makintoshio tunc puero), Connagiæ possessionem modo prædicto tantùm acquisivit, et hujus controversiæ hæc erat fons et origo.

ANNO 1579, et die 27 Januarii, fœdus inter Atholiæ Comitem et Makintoshium prius ictum renovatur, et, scriptis, jurejurando dato, mandatur apud Pertham coram testibus, Johanne Montis Rosarum Comite, Duncano Grant de Frewchy hærede, Jacobo Meanzies de eodem, et Georgio Drummond a Blair. Anno 1580, ad Lochabrianorum arrogantiam domandam, Insulam in lacû vulgò Lochlochi erigendam Makintoshius curavit, quæ Ellan-darrach, i.e. lacus querneus, dicebatur. Nam super querneas trabes extruebatur, et, dum hoc ageretur, Makintoshius, bis mille & quingentos armatos secum in Lochabriâ habebat, a vigesimo nono die Maii usque ad vigesimum primum diem Augusti, in hâc Insulâ præsidium collocavit, quo durante, omnes Lochabriani, suis superioribus admodum subditos et morigeros sese gesserunt. Sed, quamprimum Insula erat diruta, Lochabriani in solitam rebellionem et nequitiam recurrunt.

while George Monro, in revenge for his brother's death (Mackintosh being then a child), acquired possession of Connage in the manner aforesaid only. This was the spring and origin of this controversy.

In the year 1579, on the 27th day of January, the covenant formerly executed between the Earl of Atholl and Mackintosh was renewed; and, being sworn, was committed to writing, at Perth, before these witnesses, John, Earl of Montrose, Duncan Grant, heir of Freuchy, James Menzies of that Ilk, and George Drummond of Blair.

In the year 1580, in order that he might subdue the insolence of the Lochaber men, Mackintosh caused an island in the loch commonly called Loch Lochy, to be constructed, which was called Alan-darrach, that is, the oaken island: for it was built upon oaken beams; and while he was engaged on this, he had 2500 men along with him in Lochaber, from the 29th day of May to the 21st day of August. In that island he placed a garrison, and while it was there, all the people of Lochaber were very submissive and obedient to their superiors: but as soon as the island was broken down they relapsed into their wonted rebellion and mischief.

ANNO 1587 Comes Huntleus, coram quibusdam Primoribus exprobravit Makintoshium non audere officium Ballivatûs et Senescalatûs in Lochabriâ exercere. Makintoshius respondet, quamdiu patriis legibus et Regiâ autoritate patrocinatus esset, se, nullam oppositionem timere; Dixit etiam, quod in animo habuit illo uti officio in mense Augusto tunc proximo, et quod, ni vi majori impediretur, intensionem prosecuturum esset, et, ad hoc promissum implemendum, cum copiis sub finem Julii in Lochabriam progreditur, et in tribus Curiis (quarum prima in Achachar, secunda in Makommor, et tertia in Keppoch) sontes et vitiosos mulctat, et latrones sine impedimento punit. Hoc, ex Instrumentis inter Mackintoshii Chartas luculenter patet.

ANNIS 1587 et 1588, Sutherlandix, contra Cathanesix Comitem, Makintoshius strenuè et amanter opitulatus est. Semper enim tam copiis quam consilio Sutherlando adfuit, et tandem, Makyum cum suis (licèt Cathanesii generum), ad Sutherlandix Comitibus partes attraxit. Quo facto, illa contro-

In the year 1587, the Earl of Huntly, in presence of the chiefs, upbraided Mackintosh, asserting that he dared not exercise the office of Bailiery and Stewartry in Lochaber. To this Mackintosh answered that as long as he had the defence of the laws of the country and the royal authority he did not fear any opposition. He said also, that he was of a mind to use that office in the month of August then next; and that unless he was hindered by greater force, he would carry out that intention. In order to fulfil this promise, he went with his forces in the end of July into Lochaber, and in three courts (of which the first was in Achachar, the second in Makommer, and the third in Keppoch), he fined the offenders and evil doers, and punished thieves without impediment. This clearly appears from an Instrument among the charters of Mackintosh.

In the years 1587 and 1588, Mackintosh strenuously and amicably assisted the Earl of Sutherland against the Earl of Caithness: for he was ever present with Sutherland to help him, as well with men as with counsel; and at length he brought over Mackay (though he was the son-in-law of Caithness) with his men to the side of the Earl of Sutherland, whereupon the controversy came to an end.

versia finita est. Anno 1588 Januarii 15 Gulielmus Macleod a Dunvegan stricto amicitiae vinculo, se et suos hæredes, contra omnes mortales (Regiâ Majestate solummodo exceptâ) astrinxit. Hoc vinculum apud Cullodin datum est.

On 15th January 1588, William MacLeod of Dunvegan bound himself and his heirs, in a strict Bond of Amity (with Mackintosh) against all mortals (his majesty only excepted). This bond is dated at Culloden.

In the same year, on the 25th of February, Alexander MacRonal of Garrochy became bound in a strait bond of manrent and service, not only for himself and his heirs, but also for all his kindred and dependants, to Mackintosh and his heirs, against all mortals, excepting only the king and the Earl of Huntly. This is dated at Dunkeld, before witnesses, namely, Thomas Stewart of Grantully, Knight, John Stewart Macandrew of Inverchyriachan, John Stewart, James's son, of Tillipurie, William Mackean duy of Corribroch, and Thomas Gow, notary public.

In the month of February 1589, Angus, son of the laird of Mackintosh, by order of the Earl of Huntly, harried the lands of the Earl Marischal as well in the Mearns as in Buchan, with every kind of violence, and brought away from thence a large booty. The occasion of this devastation was this. The Earl Marischal having offended Huntly (among other things by rash and vaunting words uttered at Perth, before Huntly and other nobles) said that he was second to Huntly neither in wealth nor in power. Huntly spondet, Non est quod te mihi viribus compares; Est enim mihi Vassalus, qui te, suis viribus, ex Merniæ finibus exterminare valet, et, ut, hanc jactantiam probaret, quamprimum domum rediit, Makintoshio rem totam narrat, et illi mandat, ut, depopulatione, aut alio contemptibili modo, Martialem dehonestet, quod incunctanter Makintoshius suscepit, et instanter, prædictum suum filium (manû 600 virorum validorum) cinctum, in Merniam misit, ut supra dictum, qui totius Merniæ prædam, at Strathbogiæ portas, sine certamine perduxit, quam postea inter suos divisit. Hæc expeditio, etsi nimis levi de causâ fuisset suscepta, Huntleus tamen ejusque fautores et Clientes multum gaudebant. Martialis vanitatem ita fuisse refutatam. Brevi post Huntleus indignabundus quod, suos proventus in Badenochiâ amplificare non poterat, Castellum Ruthvenense reparare statuit, et, quo, hoc ejus institutum, majori cum expeditione exequeretur, Makintoshium per literas rogat, ut ejus agricolæ et asseclæ, in lapidibus, lignis, cementis, et aliis necessariis asportandis, Architectis et Ministris adsint. Makintoshius, tali ministerio nullo modo astrictus, et, præsidium in eo loco sibi et suis noxium futurum præsciis, suppetias taking this boast, not without pain, replied: 'That your compare yourself to me in power is nothing; there is, forsooth, a vassal of mine who with his forces is able to exterminate you from the bounds of the Mearns.' And, in order to prove this boast, as soon as he returned home he told the whole matter to Mackintosh, and ordered him, by spoliation, or in some other humiliating way, to disgrace Marischal. Without delay Mackintosh undertook the business; and forthwith arming his son aforesaid, he sent him, with a band of 600 strong men, into the Mearns, as was said above, who, without a fight, brought the booty of the whole Mearns to the gates of Strathbogie, and afterwards divided it among his men. Although this expedition was undertaken on a very trivial occasion, yet Huntly and his favourers and clients were very much pleased,—the vanity of Marischal having been so confuted. Soon afterwards Huntly, being angry that he could not increase his revenues in Badenoch, determined to repair the castle of Ruthven; and that he might carry out this purpose of his with greater expedition he wrote to Mackintosh asking that his tenants and friends should assist the architects and servants by carrying stones, timber, lime, and other necessaries. Mackintosh being nowise bound to afford such service, and foreseeing that it would be against the interest of himself and his people that a garrison should be in that place, utterly refused to carry the supplies. On learning this, Huntly raged, and boasted that he would construct a fortress in Badenoch sufficient to overawe all the Chattans of that country.

The Badenoch people, perceiving Huntly's design, determined to hinder his attempt; and first, they openly impeded the work; then they frightened the builders as to supplying the necessary materials; and so the work was, for the time, left off. Meanwhile, Mackintosh, having drawn together his forces, went into Lochaber to subdue the robbers. At the same time Huntly, by his emissaries, forbade the Clan Cameron and Clanronald to obey the orders of Mackintosh. Yet, for all that, some attended the courts, and the absentees having been fined, Mackintosh returned home about the 16th of July 1590.

In the following autumn there arose a grievous feud between the Earls of Huntly and Moray, the cause and origin of which was this: John Grant, tutor to Grant of Ballindalloch, was much displeased because John Gordon of Birmore (brother of Thomas Gordon of Cluny, knight,) had married the widow of Grant of Ballindalloch, and was dwelling among the Grants. For this small affair he quarrelled with him, and in the brawl slew a servant of Gordon's. On being summoned to trial he did not compear, Sed Granteus, se subduxit, et, sub, Comitis Morraviæ clientelâ se protegit, cujus patrocinium, Comes, lubenti animo suscepit. Quo quamprimum cognito, bellum hinc inde indicitur. Morraviæ Comitis partes, Atholiæ Comes; Clanchattanorum, Grantorum et Dunbarrorum Genearchæ cum Domino de Calder tueri statuunt. Sed horum præcipui (præterquam Makintoshius, Clanchattanorum Dux), Morraviæ Comitis partes intempestivè deseruerunt. Nam Dominus de Grant, tametsi ejus privata Causa tunc agebatur, et, has inimicitias excitavit, et quod Dominus de Calder erat is, qui, Morraviæ et Atholiæ Comites, et Makintoshium, ad, Grantei Causam suffulciendam stimulavit et induxit, hi tamen fueri primi tergiversatores; Nam, ante exitum Anni 1592, sese per-clam Huntleo reconciliârunt. Makintoshius verò, Comitis Morraviæ partibus ita obnixè adhæsit, ut Huntleus, totas vires et potentiam in Makintoshium, et Makintoshius, suas in illum, usque ad finem belli, crudeli clade et depopulatione gnaviter extendit.

and therefore he and his accomplices in the crime were denounced rebels, and their goods confiscated. Huntly (as sheriff of Banff) having taken the part of his kinsman, laid siege to the castle of Ballindalloch on 21st November 1590. It was soon surrendered, but Grant withdrew and sheltered himself under the guardianship of the Earl of Moray, who willingly undertook his protection. As soon as this was known, war was declared. The Earl of Atholl, the chiefs of the Clanchattans, the Grants and the Dunbars, with the laird of Calder, determined to take part with the Earl of Moray. But of these, the principal persons (excepting Mackintosh, leader of the Clanchattans) unseasonably deserted the Earl of Moray's interest. For the laird of Grant, although he was then acting in his own cause, and had stirred up these enmities; and though the laird of Calder was he who had stimulated and induced the Earls of Moray and Atholl, and Mackintosh, to uphold the cause of Grant, yet these were the first to turn their backs. For before the end of the year 1592, they secretly reconciled themselves with Huntly. But Mackintosh firmly adhered to Moray, so that Huntly vigorously employed his whole force and power against Mackintosh, and the latter did the same against him in cruel slaughter and devastation to the end of the war.

On 12th November 1590, the lairds of Mackintosh and Grant became bound in a firm and hereditary covenant (under a penalty of 8000 merks) against all earls who should unjustly trouble them. This covenant was written and signed at Forres on the day aforesaid. Shortly afterwards the Earls of Atholl and Moray, and the lairds Mackintosh, Grant, and Calder, together with the Sheriff of Moray, met at Forres, to consult about war. Huntly hastened to dissolve this convention so secretly and swiftly that the earls and their associates were almost intercepted unawares; for Huntly was scarcely a hundred paces distant from the town when the rumour of his coming reached their ears. They, greatly terrified, fled with all possible haste to Darnaway. Huntly fiercely followed them. Darnaway was fortified before his arrival. But the Earl of Atholl, Mackintosh, Grant, Calder, and the Sheriff of Moray hastened to assemble their friends and dependants, that they might the sooner bring assistance to their own party in case Darnaway was besieged. Huntly with his men drew near to the castle; but John Gordon of Birsmore, armed with a spear, went nearer, reproaching the garrison with such insolence and bravado, that he was shot through with a bullet from the castle, and fell dead. Huntly, having no hope of possessing the castle, returned home on 24th November 1590.

In the year 1591, after some hostilities on both sides, the Earl of Moray and the sheriff thereof, were suddenly and cruelly murdered by Huntly; which event gave occasion for many slaughters, devastations, ravages, and burnings between Huntly and Mackintosh during the next four years. For Mackintosh was the only one of the Moray faction, who, with his friends and clients, earnestly sought to revenge that murder, even to the end of the war. The murder was perpetrated on the 7th Ides of February 1591.

At this time Huntly stirred up the people of Lochaber to vex the Mackintoshes and the Grants. The MacRonalds of Lochaber harried and plundered Strathspey, and the Camerons did the same in that part of Badenoch which was next to them, and treacherously slew Duncan Mackintosh of Crathie, with some others of the Badenoch people. Within a few days Mackintosh, having gathered a band of his friends, overran the lands of the Camerons, and drove away therefrom a huge booty; and Patrick Grant, son of the laird of Grant, that he might avenge the mischief done to his friends, invaded Brae Lochaber with his Interim Alexander Makronaldus a Gargochiâ (qui, non ita pridem, suum servitium, stricto vinculo et jurejurando, Makintoshio contra omnes) Atholiæ Comite solummodo dempto (obligavit) se Huntleo adjunxit, Castrique Invernessensis custodiam suscepit. Sed diu ibi non manserat, cum, anonæ indigentia, præsidium deserere est impulsus. forces, and after wildly harrying it returned home with great spoil.

Meanwhile, Alexander MacRonald of Gargochy (who not so long before had become bound by a strict bond, by swearing to render service to Mackintosh against all men, the Earl of Atholl only excepted) joined himself to Huntly, and undertook the custody of the castle of Inverness; but he had not been long there when from lack of provisions he was compelled to desert the garrison. He attempted to withdraw secretly with his principal friends to Huntly, in order to consult about all matters; but fearing that all the land routes were blocked and guarded by Mackintosh, he resolved to convey himself and his associates by boats over to the Findhorn district. When this came privately to the notice of Mackintosh, he sent Lachlan and Alexander (sons of Angus Mackintosh of Termet), with twelve strong men in two boats, to meet them, who by good luck in the night-time encountered the boats in which the MacRonalds were sailing. The boat in which their chief was made off to the nearest land; but the other boat, in which were MacRonald of Insh and his companions, glided into the midst of the enemy. They fought a long time; but at last, as some of them were slain, and the rest mortally wounded the MacRonalds surrendered; two of their leaders, namely,

Quippe, a Makintoshio nutriti, illique jurejurando vincti, fide violatâ, sine ullâ caussâ se, Huntlei partibus adjunxerant. Brevi post Cameroni pecora, quæ, a Stratherniâ abegissent, in campo Morillensi interimerunt. Nam, ea tuta, in Lochabriam se introducere posse (si Catani eos insequerentur) non prospiciebant.

MENSE Feb. 1592 Æneas, Domini Makintoshii primogenitus, cum selectâ suorum manû, terras Glenbuket et Aberzeldi, omni calamitatis genere fœdavit, eodemque mense Catanorum copiæ, sub eodem Duce magnam prædam, e terris Glenlivat et Strathdoun propulerunt. Mense Octobri sequenti Huntleus, [page 249.] Badenochiam ingressus, Badenochenses ita inter se distraxit, ut, Makphersonorum nonnulli, Makintoshium (suum quanquam Ducem et Genearcham) deseruerant, et Huntleo, tanquam Domino et superiori, adhæserant.

BADENOCHENSIBUS ita inter se divisus, Huntleani, præsertim Cameroni (quos Huntleus tunc in suppetias citaverat) quasdam Makintoshiorum domus cremârint, et, nonnullo pecora abegerunt, et, quoniam Huntleana factio in Badenochia erat Makin-

Gothred Dhu, and his son, were hanged the next day on a tree; because that they, having been fostered with Mackintosh, and bound to him by oath, had without cause violated their fealty, by going over to Huntly's side. A short time afterwards, the Camerons, in the Haugh of Morill, slew the cattle which they had taken away from Stratherne, for they did not see how they could bring them safe into Lochaber, if the Chattans pursued them.

In the month of February 1592, Angus, the first-born of the laird of Mackintosh, with a select band of his people, destroyed the lands of Glenbucket and Abergeldy, with every kind of mischief: and in the same month the forces of the Chattans, under the same leader, drove away a great booty from the lands of Glenlivat and Strathdoun. In the month of October following Huntly, having invaded Badenoch, and so divided the people there that some of the Macphersons deserted Mackintosh (although he was their leader and head of their clan), and adhered to Huntly as their lord and master.

The Badenoch people being thus divided among themselves, the Huntlean faction, especially the Camerons (whom Huntly had then called to his assistance), burned some houses of the Mackintoshes, and took away some cattle. And because his toshianâ multo imbecillior, Huntleus, Castrum Ruvinese reparare et munire, in eosque præsidium collocare statuit. Sed Makintoshius, huic æquo ac priori conamini obstitit. Nam Catanorum quidam (sub Domini Makintoshii primogeniti ductû) totam calcem, quæ, Huntlei jussû a Rothemurchusiâ ad Castrum Ruvenense asportabatur, portitoribus contusis (erant enim hi ex Badenochensibus desciscentibus), in aquam Speiam conjecerunt. Huntleus (ejus conamine ita subverso) magnopere infensus domum rediit. Cameroni verò illi astiterunt donec, Strathdouniam præteriisset. Sed per montes Marrianos (veriti ne Catanatribus, iis insidias tenderet) regressi sunt. Makintoshius, ut, damna, ab Huntleanis et Cameronis in Badenochia tunc accepta, ulcisceretur, Æneam Makintoshium (vulgò Williamsonium, virum strenuum, cum Catanorum selectâ manû,) ad Gordoniorum agros spoliandos misit, qui 10 Novembris 1592, terras Strathdee et Glenmuick aggressi, quicquid, ferro flammâque fœdavi poterat, corrumpunt ac diruunt. In hâc expeditione Henricus Gordoun a knock, Alexander Gordoun a Toldu, Thomas Gordoun a Blar-charrish cum Barone de Breachly cumque aliis nonnullis generosis unâ cum 120 plebeiis, occisi fuerant.

faction in Badenoch was much weaker than that of Mackintosh, Huntly determined to repair and fortify the castle of Ruthven, and to plant a garrison among them. But Mackintosh withstood this just as he had done the former attempt. For certain of the Chattans (under the command of his eldest son) threw the whole of the lime, which was by Huntly's order being brought from Rothemurchus to Ruthven Castle, into the river Spey, after they had beaten the carriers, who were of the revolting Badenoch men. Huntly, seeing his project thus frustrated, went home greatly offended. The Camerons, indeed, stuck to him till he had passed Strathdoun; but fearing lest the Clan Chattan should lie in wait for them, they went back by the Braes of Mar.

In revenge for the losses then inflicted on Badenoch by the Huntly faction and the Camerons, Mackintosh sent Angus Mackintosh (commonly called Williamson) a strenuous man, with a select company of the Chattans, to spoil the lands of the Gordons. They accordingly, on 10th November 1592, invaded the lands of Strathdee and Glenmuick, and spoiled and destroyed whatever they could with fire and sword. In this expedition Henry Gordon of Knock, Alexander Gordon of Toldu, Thomas Gordon of Blaircarrish, with the baron of Breachly, and some other gentlemen, together with one hundred and twenty of the common people, were slain.

HISCE ita perpetratis, Makintoshius, totos Huntlei proventus, tam in Badenochiâ, quam in Invernessensi possedit, et, tanquam suos (durante Bello) detinuit.

POSTEA, Lochabriam (collectâ quam poterat magnâ manû) ingressus, totâ illâ plagâ, ferro et flammâ depopulatâ, cum ingenti hominum clade pecorumque prædâ, domum sine certamine se contulit, post cujus reditum multæ viles incursiones in Gordonorum agros factæ sunt.

EODEM tempore prædictus Æneas, Domini Makintoshii primogenitus, istam Makphersonorum manum, quæ, hosti se adjunxerat, prosternere totis viribus contendit, quorum principalium nonnullos apprehensos, suo patri castigandos tradidit. Sed is semper clementiâ plenus, eos, jurejurando dato de fidei servitio, sibi, tanquam Genearchæ, præstando, dimisit. Hi tamen, fide violatâ, hosti denuo se adjunxerunt, et magis infensè quàm ante adversus Makintoshium se gesserunt. Æneas ideo multum ultioni deditus, sed hâc in re a patre impeditus, Regno deserto, Hierosolymam proficisci statuit, et, proximo vere, iter ingressus est.

HIC notandum quod, tempore illius controversiæ inter

These things having thus been accomplished, Mackintosh detained as his own (during the war) the whole rents of the lands belonging to Huntly, as well in Badenoch as in Inverness. Afterwards, having gathered as large a force as he could, he went into Lochaber, and having wasted that country with fire and sword, with a great slaughter of men, he betook himself homewards with a large prey of cattle, without a fight. After his return many small incursions were made upon the lands of the Gordons.

At the same time, the aforesaid Angus, eldest son of Mackintosh, strove with all his power to overthrow the company of the Macphersons who had joined with the enemy; and having seized some of the chief men thereof, he delivered them to his father to be punished. But he, always full of mercy, dismissed them, on their swearing to yield faithful service to him as their chief. They nevertheless soon violated their oath, and joined the enemy again, and behaved themselves more offensively against Mackintosh than before. Angus, therefore, was strongly bent on revenge, but having been hindered in that by his father, he left the kingdom, having resolved to depart to Jerusalem; and, indeed, on the next day he set out on his journey.

It should be noted that, in the time of this controversy between Huntleum et Makintoshium, tota tribus (quondam Clanwurrichia, nunc Macphersona, dicta) Makintoshio suo Genearchæ adhæserant præterquam pauci (ex eâ familiâ vulgò Slighk kynich vic Ewin), qui, Huntleo, tanquam suo Domino superiori, adjunxerant. Immò verò et hi, finito Bello, sub Makintoshii clientelam se receperunt, & stricto obsequii vinculo ac jurejurando obstrinxerunt.

ANNO 1593 Huntleus cum magnis, tam equitum, quam peditum copiis, Baroniam de Petty, omni calamitatis genere devastat. Hoc eodem die quo Petty crematur, Makintoshius, ut, Damna accepta ulcisceretur, pari crudelitate Gordonorum agros pervagari conatus, Gulielmum suum filium, ad terras, Cabbrach Achindun, et Blackwater, vastandas, cum paucis, Catanorùm et Makronaldorum numero, misit. Huntleus tunc in villâ Culâ Pettiensi castra metatus, cum pro certo haberet Gulielmum Makintoshium eo progressum reditum, quâ poterat celeritate, ad suos agros tuendos properat, eamque Catanorum manum dissipatam (dum Cabbrach excideretur) adortus, eorum 14 occidit, reliquosque in fugam facile conjecit. Nam Ronaldus mak Ronald ab Insh ejusque assectores, quibus Gulielmus potissimum confidebat, perfidè et ignominiosè aufugerant.

Huntly and Mackintosh, the whole tribe, formerly called Clan Vurich, now Macpherson, adhered to Mackintosh their chief, excepting a few (of that family, commonly called Slighk Kynich vic Ewin) who joined Huntly as their lord superior. But these also, when the war was ended, betook themselves again to the protection of Mackintosh, and bound themselves to him in a strict bond and oath of submission.

In the year 1593, Huntly, with great forces both of horse and foot, wasted the Barony of Petty with every kind of calamity. On the same day in which Petty was burned, Mackintosh, in order to avenge the mischiefs so inflicted, by an attempt to ravage the lands of the Gordons with the like cruelty, sent his son William, with a few of the Chattans and a number of the MacRonalds, to harry the lands of Cabrach, Achindoun, and Blackwater. Huntly, having then pitched his camp in the Coultown of Petty, when he heard for certain that William Mackintosh was on his way thither, hastened his return with all possible speed to defend his lands; and having attacked the straggling band of Chattans, while they were leaving the Cabrach, he slew fourteen of them, and easily put the rest to flight. For Ronald MacRonald of Insh and his followers, in whom William trusted too much, Ronaldus erat qui occultè, Huntleum, ad hanc aggressionem invitavit. Anno 1593 Sept. 10 Invernessæ præpositus, Prætores, ejusdemque Senatus, stricto vinculo Syngrapho signato Makintoshio perfidio in pyramide Invernessensi collocaturo sese hâc lege obstrinxerunt, viz. quod ipsi, pro Regis servitio, pyramidem tutè ac viriliter, adversus Huntleum ejusque factionem, durante Bello, propugnarent, quâ in re, si deficerent, se, et, Makintoshii, tribûsque Catanæ capitales inimicitias lubenti animo in perpetuum subituros fideliter promittunt. Hoc vinculum signârunt Johannes Cuthbert de Old Castlehill, Alexander Patersonus Ballivus, Gilbertus Patersonus Ballivus, Johannes Ros, Jaspardus Dempstorus, Gulielmus Cuthbertus, Gulielmus Cumming, &c. Hic notandum quod Atholiæ Comes (tunc Scotiæ Septentrionalis Præfectus, Andreas Ochilttriæ Regulus, et Dominus Makintoshius, ad Huntleum ejusque participes persequendos, Regis mandato, in Comitibus Morraviæ necis ultionem missi fuerant, tametsi Makintoshius, suâ tribû solummodo adjutus, hoc officio perfunctus est.

Hoc Anno Nov. 10 Makintoshius, ut, suas partes, accessione virium, adversus tam potentes hostes, firmaret, Argatheliæ Comitem fœdere sibi adjunxit, quo pactum est quod eorum treacherously and basely ran away. It was Ronald who secretly incited Huntly to this aggression.

On the 10th September 1593, the provost, bailies, and council of Inverness, by a strait bond, written and sealed, to be laid up in the steeple of Inverness, bound themselves to Mackintosh under this stipulation, that is to say, that they would during the war securely and manfully defend the steeple for the service of the king against Huntly and his faction; in which matter if they should fail, they promised faithfully and with willing mind to undergo the deadly enmity both of Mackintosh and the Clanchattan for ever. Those who signed this bond were John Cuthbert of Old Castlehill; Alexander Paterson, bailie; Gilbert Paterson, bailie; John Ross, Jaspas Dempster, William Cuthbert, William Cumming, and others. Here it is to be noted that the Earl of Atholl, then Lieutenant of the North of Scotland, Andrew, Lord Ochiltree, and the laird of Mackintosh, had been sent by the king's command to pursue Huntly and his accomplices, in order to avenge the slaughter of the Earl of Moray; yet Mackintosh, assisted only by his clan, performed that duty.

In this year, on the 10th of November, in order that he might strengthen his party by an accession of power against such potent enemies, Mackintosh joined to himself the Earl of Argyll in a treaty, quilibet, cœterorum fœderatorum clientibus et amicis, adversus omnes mortales, Regiâ Majestate et Morravie Comite exceptis, auxilio foret. Hoc fœdus signatum est Inveraræ coram testibus, Æneâ Makintoshio, alias Williamsono, a Termet, Gulielmo Maky fratre Hugonis Maky a Far et Magistro Georgio Erskin &c.

This covenant was signed at Inveraray, before these witnesses, Angus Mackintosh, alias Williamson, of Termet, William Mackay, brother of Hugh Mackay of Far, Mr. George Erskine, etc.

In the month of March following, Huntly, with all his forces, as well from Badenoch and Lochaber as from the level country, invaded Petty, and burnt it and the other estates of the Mackintoshes, and reduced them almost to ruin.

In June following, the Earl of Argyll, who was then the king's general, having mustered a large army, went, by order of the king, against Huntly and his partisans (then rebels), and on the 27th of September besieged the castle of Ruthven in Badenoch. After wasting some days in fighting there to no purpose, he raised the siege, and going on towards Strathdoun, pitched his camp on the 2nd of October near to Drummin Castle. Huntly with his men was then tarrying at Strathbogie, until he should find out how far the enemy was distant. On the 5th of November 1594, Huntly encountered Argyll at the burn commonly called Althunlechan, where they fought for about two hours. At last the Argyll men being put to flight, about five hundred of them were slain, the principals of whom were Archibald Campbell, laird of Lochinnell, with his brother James (heirs of the Earl of Argyll if he should die without children), and Gillean MacNeill of Barra. On Huntly's side were killed sixteen, of whom the most distinguished was Patrick Gordon of Auchindoun, Knight, Huntly's uncle: many on both sides were wounded; many horses of the Gordons, being thrust through with darts, died. Great and valuable were the spoils divided among the victors. This battle of Altchunlochan, otherwise Glenlivet, is by some called Aviniane.

Shortly after this conflict, these castles were, by the king's order, thrown down, namely, of Strathbogie, of Slains in Buchan, of Culsalmond in Garioch, Balgay and Craigie in Angus, which belonged to the Earls of Huntly and Erroll, to Gordon of Newton, Walter Lindsay, Knight, and John Ogilvie, also Knight. These things having been so done, and the king having taken his course toward the south country, he left behind him in the north the Duke of Lennox, the Chief Justice of Scotland, who appointed Mackintosh his depute, as his commission dated at Elgin, the 1st of January of the same year, bears witness.

On the last day of March of the same year, the Mackintoshes of Strone, the Farquharsons of Braemar, and the Mackintoshes of Glenshee, bound themselves and their posterity in a strait bond of manrent to the laird of Mackintosh their chief, in the usual terms. The witnesses were Thomas Gordon of Cluny, and George Drummond of Blair. In 1595 the lands of Tullich and Elrig were acquired by Mackintosh.

On 30th June 1597, the covenants formerly made between the Earl of Atholl and Mackintosh were renewed, in the ordinary form; the witnesses being Sir Walter Rollock of Latoun, James Stewart of Auchmadies, Knight, Angus Mackintosh, alias Williamson, of Termet, and Walter Dog, writer. This bond is dated at Foss, the month, day, and year aforesaid.

On 26th July 1597, Huntly and Mackintosh were reconciled at Elgin, all their past feuds being obliterated.

In Parlamento Edinburgi tento 19 Decembris 1579 statum est, ut omnes Hæreditarii Possessores Insulani et Montani, prædiorum suorum in iis locis diplomata et instrumenta coram Seaccarii Judicibus ante 15 diem sequentis Maii producerent sub pœnâ eorundem confiscationis. Hoc tempore Makintoshii diplomata, in manibus quorundam amicorum (ipso inscio) custodiendi caussâ, seposita fuerant. Nec tunc sciverat ubi invenienda. Unde evenit quod pœnam subire est coactus. Verum Anno 1609

The same year, on the 19th of November, Mackintosh and Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail agreed in a strait bond of mutual friendship, for themselves and their posterity, in the usual manner. This deed was executed at Inverness, in presence of Roderick Mackenzie of Ardfalie, James Mackintosh of Gask, John Mackenzie of Garloch, Angus Mackintosh of Termet, Alexander Mackenzie of Fairburn, Lauchlan Mackintosh of Strone, Kenneth Mackenzie of Brocudill, Lauchlan Mackintosh, son of the aforesaid Angus of Termet, Kenneth Mackenzie of Kili-christ, William Mackintosh of Rait, and Roderick Mackenzie of Cultaleod.

In the year 1598, Mackintosh lost his right of the lands of Lochaber. The cause of the loss was this: In the Parliament held at Edinburgh on 19th December 1577, it was enacted that all heritable owners of the Islands and Highlands should produce the charters and instruments of their estates in those places before the Judges of the Exchequer, before the 15th day of May following, under pain of having the same confiscated. At that time Mackintosh had his charters in the hands of certain friends, in whose custody they had been deposited without his knowledge, Eodem Anno 1598 Makintoshius, dimidium terrarum Glenluy et Lochairkagg Allano Cameron a Lochzield pro Summâ 6000 Marcarum pignori dedit, alterum verò dimidium pro servitio Militari et obsequio ei collocavit pro spatio 19 Annorum hâc lege, quod si Allanus aut ejus Hæredes, durante pignore, Makintoshium hostiliter invaderent, hoc casû et pignus et locationem et possessionem in perpetuum amitteret; Si verò Makintoshius aut ejus posterî Allanium adoriretur, eo casû terras non sine pignoris et locationis duplo redimendas licitum fore.

But in the year 1609, Sir Alexander Hay, Clerk Register, lest others in malevolence to Mackintosh should become possessed of this advantage, agreed with the king in regard to the right of the lands of Lochaber, as well of those belonging to Mackintosh as those of MacLean. In 1614 he disposed the portion of Lochaber pertaining to the MacLeans to Lord Gordon; and also resigned the other part in favour of Mackintosh himself. In the same year 1598 Mackintosh gave to Allan Cameron of Lochiel the half of the lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig, in wadset for the sum of 6000 merks, but the other half he let to him for military service and obedience, for the space of nineteen years, on this condition, that if Allan or his heirs, during the wadset, should invade Mackintosh in hostile manner, he should in that case lose both the wadset and the lease and possession for ever: but if Mackintosh or his posterity should attack Allan, then it would not be lawful to redeem the lands without doubling the wadset and the lease.

In the year 1601, by command of the king, Mackintosh, in conjunction with the Earl of Argyll, acted vigorously in the expedition against the Clan Gregor (then rebels) that unruly and

For by his assistance their lands were wasted, some of their chief men taken, and others slain; so that the king acknowledged the zeal and diligence of Mackintosh in that warfare as very acceptable service performed to him, in testimony whereof he sent to him a very friendly epistle, in which he ordered Duncan MacGregor (alias MacEan chaim), captured by Mackintosh, to be beheaded, and his head to be sent to Edinburgh. This letter, which is still among the writs of Mackintosh, is dated at the Abbey of Holyrood on 30th March 1603.

Among the expeditions against the Clan Gregor there was one by William, second son of Mackintosh, and William Mackintosh, son of James of Rait, which ought not to be passed over in silence. The affair happened in this way. Mackintosh, being by the king's command associated with the Earl of Argyll against that turbulent tribe, sent to Rannoch one hundred and twenty select men of his clan, besides servants, under the leadership of his son aforesaid, and of William Mackintosh of Rait. The Clan Gregor, greatly fearing an assault, dispersed their cattle for the sake of protection among their relatives and friends in Atholl. William went quickly into Rannoch; and when he saw that he was deceived, and knew not how, he directed his course

Hic favor ab Atholis contemptim respuitur, et nihil iis præterquam integra pecorum restitutio satisfaceret. The Atholl men, when they got word of this, hastily, but in disorder, pursued those who had driven off the prey, and overtook them in their route on the high grounds between Atholl and Badenoch. When William saw them, he sent off the booty with the servants, and informed the Atholl men by messengers, that he was sent against the Clan Gregor by command of the king, and had driven away some of the rebels' cattle; and that he wished to know by what assurance any one dared to interrupt him in carrying out that mandate. But if any of the Atholl men alleged that their cattle had been carried off with the rest, that had happened by their own rashness and provocation, because they had taken upon them the protection and defence of outlaws, and therefore all their goods were confiscated: but yet, on account of the old treaty, which for many years had stood unbroken between the house of Atholl and that of Mackintosh, he would restore to them all the cattle pertaining to the Atholl men only. This favour was by the Atholl people contemptuously refused, and nothing would satisfy them but the full restitution of the cattle. William being greatly offended by this response, when he saw the Atholl men (then in number 300) in disorder, but increasing,

FAMILIA Makintoshiana et Campbella Calderiana, licet, multis, amicitie et sodalitatis vinculis, inter se conjugatæ fuerant, ter tamen inter se virulenter dissidiis laborârunt. and girding themselves for the attack, swiftly and all of a sudden broke upon them, and turned them all and every one to flight. The Chattans indeed pursued them so fiercely that they were forced to throw away their arms and plaids, that they might run the faster. Few were killed, but many were taken, of whom thirteen were of the chief men of the Stewarts and the Robertsons, and only two of the Clan Gregor, who although they were led as prisoners to the island of Moy, were yet treated by Mackintosh with the utmost courtesy for the space of nine weeks, and afterwards set free. In this expedition that small band of the Chattans won both honour and great spoil of cattle, seventy plaids and fifty bows and swords, for the Atholl men were forced either to surrender their swords, bows and plaids, or to throw them away in their flight.

The families of Mackintosh, and Campbell of Calder, although they were bound together by many bonds of friendship and fraternity, yet they were on three occasions grievously troubled with mutual strife. The first controversy was about the lands of Rait and Geddes (as we have narrated above in the chapter concerning Lauchlan, second of that name, and fourteenth laird of Mackintosh). The second happened between Campbell of Calder and Lauchlan, third of that name (of whom we are now treating), the cause and origin of which was this. This Lauchlan and his ancestors held possession quietly for many years of the lands of Ardersier and Delnies. These lands, however, belonged by right to Leslie of Findrassie, who offered to sell them to Mackintosh. In the meantime, Campbell of Calder bargained with Findrassie for a larger price than was offered by Mackintosh, and paid the money. Mackintosh determined to be avenged for this wrong. Such was the enmity that arose on this account that the lands in question lay waste for three years, which greatly vexed Calder. While matters were standing thus, Calder having been informed that Mackintosh was at the wedding of Dolace of Budyet, in Lethen, gathered of his vassals twenty horsemen and forty foot, and proposed to seize or to kill Mackintosh as he returned, accompanied with only nine of his followers, and these on foot. Mackintosh, finding himself thus intercepted, ran, in sight of the enemy, to a corn-yard, not far from the village of Allenaha, and committed himself and his men to the yard as to a fortress. Calder, mounted on a swift horse, and confiding too much in his coat of mail, breastplate and trappings, rode a long way before his men, and coming near the yard, his horse having been pierced

Hoc enim accidit Mense Februario Anni quem, cùm pars adversa humi jacentem perspexerat, hortum, ad Calderum interficiendum transvolat. Sed Makintoshius altâ voce exclamat et deprecatur ut Calderi vita preservaretur, et sic, Makintoshii operâ, Calderus, ex hostium manibus liberatur, et, ad arcem Calderiam, a suis amicis transportari permittitur. In hâc tamen pugniculâ Calderanorum sagittâ cœsus et alter vulneratus est. Hæc insignis benevolentix nota in Calderi vitâ salvandâ (eo verò tempore quo ille, ad Makintoshium interficiendum illuc venerat), repentinx concordix inter partes, dum vixerant, occasionem præbuit. Tertii verò dissidii inter hos accolæ caussa erat hæc. Anno Gulielmus et Duncanus, prædicti Lauchlani Domini Makintoshii filii, Magistrum Donaldum Campbellum et Colinum ejus fratrem, ob directionem, ab illis in villâ Dunachtoniâ perperam factam, apprehendunt, et, quibusdam ex eorum clientibus cœsis, aliisque vulneratis, captos et vinctos, ad patrem suum Makintoshium, tunc Collodini degentem dimitunt, quod pater in the breast with a barbed arrow, both horse and rider fell violently on the ground, whence it happened that the head and body of the rider, though fully armed, were painfully bruised on the ice, for this fell out in the month of February of the year ; when the adverse party saw him lying thus on the ground, they ran over from the yard to kill him: but Mackintosh called out with a loud voice and entreated that Calder's life should be spared; and thus by the help of Mackintosh, Calder was rescued from the hands of the enemy, and was permitted to be carried by his friends to the castle of Cawdor. In this skirmish, however, one of Calder's party was slain with an arrow, and another wounded. This signal mark of goodwill in saving Calder's life, at the very time when he had come there to kill Mackintosh, gave occasion of a sudden concord between the parties, which lasted while they lived.

Of the third dissension between these neighbours, the occasion was this. In the year William and Duncan, sons of the aforesaid Lauchlan, laird of Mackintosh, apprehended Mr. Donald Campbell, and Colin his brother, on account of a robbery rashly perpetrated by them in the town of Dunachton, and some of their party being slain and others wounded, they sent these two prisoners bound to their father Mackintosh, who was then residing at Culloden.

Res ita se habuit. He took the matter very sorely, and was greatly troubled. For this rash and foolish deed was the occasion to Mackintosh of vast loss and expense.

In the year 1604, Mackintosh was greatly vexed by an affront offered to him by Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail. He was fully resolved, however, that if he lived for a short time, that dishonour should not go unavenged. The matter happened thus: Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail, who not so long ago was bound in a bond of strict friendship with Mackintosh, meditating the conquest of the island of Lewis to himself, openly engaged to give supplies, friendship, and goodwill to the men of Fife who were then attempting to subdue that island by arms; and that he might confirm this promise, he sent his brother Roderick with forces to help them, and provisions from Ross in a small ship to sustain them. (Privately, however, he was assisting the inhabitants, namely the Schiol Torquils, against the Fife men, both with advice and arms.) In the meantime, while he directed the provisions to the Fife adventurers, he quietly invited the leader of the islanders to seize the ship, in which the provisions were carried over, by the way, so that the Fife men who were trusting to the supply being disappointed, would by this means be forced to desert the Island of Lewis, which accordingly happened. For gruenter accidit. Nam Fifani annonæ indigentes et incepti pertæsi, suum jus et titulum Leogi Insulæ Kintalensi Regulo vendiderunt. Sed, priusquam hoc evenerat, Kintalenses Reguli occulta perfidia contra Fifanos in apertum prædicatur, et quidam cui nomen Nigellus Macleodus (aliàs Nigellus makian) ut index, suspicione violatus est. Quamobrem occulte quodammodo Kintalius eum proscribit. Quo cognito, Nigellus, ad Makintoshium recurrit (erat enim Nigellus Dominæ Makintoshiæ) Kintaliæ amitæ (Collactaneus) ut, eo Mediatore, Nigelli integritas, Kintalio ocyùs manifestaretur. Makintoshius, Kintalii patrocinatedum, Nigello pro quibusdam diebus impetrat, et, ad Canoneam die destinato accedit, & Nigellum sub Kintalii tutelam domi Johannis Irvini sui hospitis relinquit donec, de horâ congressionis constaret. Interea, dum Nigellus in horto hospitis tutus (ut putabat) sine ullo timore perambulabat, Rodericus Mackenzius Redcastalensis et decem criminis socii insidiatores (Domini Kintalensis mandato) præcipitanter et subito innoxium a tergo assultant, et ferociter et perfidiosè eum gladiis confodiunt, et exanimatum relinquunt. Hoc tamen, quantum fieri potuit, occultatur donec Makintoshius et Kintalius separaverant. Sed, quamprimum innotescit, Makthe Fife adventurers, being in want of provisions, and worn out, sold their right and title to the island of Lewis to the Lord of Kintail. But before this happened, the secret perfidy of Lord Kintail against the Fife men was openly declared, and a certain man, by name Neil Macleod (alias Neil Mac Ian) was wrongly suspected as the informer. Wherefore Kintail in some way secretly proscribed him. On learning this, Neil had recourse to Mackintosh (for Neil was foster to the lady of Mackintosh, Kintail's aunt) so that, by his mediation, the integrity of Neil might be more speedily manifested to Kintail. Mackintosh obtained Kintail's protection to Neil for some days, and went on the day appointed to Chanonry, and left Neil, under the safeguard of Kintail, in the house of John Irvine his host, until he should be made aware of the hour of meeting. In the meantime, whilst Neil was walking in the garden of his host, safe, as he thought, without any fear, Roderick Mackenzie of Redcastle and ten accomplices were (by Lord Kintail's order) lying in wait, and swiftly and suddenly attacked the innocent man from behind, and cruelly and treacherously stabbed him with their swords, and left him dead. This was kept hidden, however, as much as possible until Mackintosh and Kintail had separated. But as soon as it came to his knowledge Mackintosh raged and burned with anger. Nevertheless, as he saw that he was not then able to avenge the injury, he became calm, and returned home without delay, nor did he intend that so great an affront should remain long unavenged. But God Almighty, who regulates the government of the world, decreed otherwise, for Mackintosh died at Connage in the month of October 1606. He lived sixty-three years, and was the first chief of the Mackintoshes who was buried at Petty.

DE ÆNEA DOMINO MAKINTOSH XVII.

ÆNEAS Lauchlani primogenitus, Joannam Campbellam, Archibaldi, Argatheliæ Comitis et Regni Cancellarii filiam in uxorem duxit Anno 1582, ex quâ duos filios et totidem filias genuit. Gulielmus, filiorum natû major puer Argatheliæ demortuus est. Lauchlanus verò minor natû, avi hæreditati successit. Filiarum senior Argatheliæ etiam virguncula extincta est. Isobella verò junior, Georgio Rosso Domino Balnagown nupta erat. Hæc vixit Annos 84, et decessit Mense Martii 1672.

OF ENEAS, SEVENTEENTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

Eneas, the first born of Lauchlan, married, in 1582, Jean Campbell, daughter of Archibald, Earl of Argyll, chancellor of the kingdom. By her he had two sons and as many daughters. William, the elder son, died in Argyll when a boy; but Lauchlan, the younger son, succeeded to the heritage of his grandfather. Of the daughters the elder also died in Argyll when a girl; but Isobella, the younger, was married, to George Ross, laird of Balnagowan. She lived eighty-four years, and died in March 1672.

ÆNEÆ frater Gulielmus, Beatricem Innesiam, Domini Invermarkensis filiam uxorem cepit, quæ, illi 4 filios, Lauchlanum, Angusium (seu Æneam), Robertum et Gulielmum peperit. Milcolumbus Æneæ frater primò, Janetæ MacDonald, Domini Glengarriensis filiæ Matrimonio devinctus est, ex quâ genuit Jonannem et filias. 2^{do} duxit Christianam, Magistri Johannis Monro a Fernâ filiam, quæ, unam tantùm natam illi peperit.

JOHANNES prædicti Æneæ frater, Christianam Macky sororem Donaldi primi de Reia Reguli Matrimonio sibi adjunxit, ex qua, unam tantùm filiam habuit nomine Elizabetham, quæ nupta erat Magistro Lauchlano Grant ab Elchis.

DUNCANUS Lauchlani filiorum 5^{to} natus primo in uxorem duxit Beatricem, Æneæ Makintoshii a Termet filiam, ex qua, unum tantum filium habuit nomine Gulielmum patrem Lauchlani nunc ab Abirardará et filias. 2^{do} duxit Dunbariam Dunbari a Grangâ filiam, ex quâ, sex filios, viz. Jacobum, Allannum, Duncanum, Johannem, Æneam et Alexandrum, et unam filiam, habuit. 3^{to} duxit, Æneæ Makintoshii, aliàs Mackonchi vic Sir John, filiam nomine quæ, Hectorem et illi peperit.

William, the brother of Eneas, married Beatrix Innes, daughter of the laird of Invermarkie, who bore to him four sons, Lauchlan, Angus (or Eneas), Robert, and William. Malcolm, brother of Eneas, married, first, Janet MacDonald, daughter of the laird of Glengarry, of whom he had John, and daughters. He married, secondly, Christiana, daughter of Mr. John Monro of Ferne, who bore to him one daughter only.

John, brother of Eneas aforesaid, married Christiana Mackay, sister of Donald, first Lord of Reay, by whom he had only one daughter named Elizabeth, who was married to Mr. Lauchlan Grant of Elchies.

Duncan, the fifth born of the sons of Lauchlan, married, first, Beatrix, daughter of Angus Mackintosh of Termet, by whom he had only one son, named William, father of Lauchlan now of Aberarder and daughters. He married, secondly, Dunbar, daughter of Dunbar of Grange, by whom he had six sons, namely, James, Allan, Duncan, John, Eneas, and Alexander; and one daughter. He married, thirdly, a daughter of Eneas Mackintosh, alias Mackonchi vic Sir John, named who bore to him Hector and ALLANUS Lauchlani filiorum 6^{to} natus duxit Rosam, Davidis Rossi ab Holm filiam, ex quâ, Lauchlanum et Alexandrum et filias genuit. 2^{do} duxit Lilliam Falconeriam filiam Patricii Falconerii de fratris Domini de Halcartoniâ, ex quâ, Æneam et duas natas procreavit. Euphemiam Campbellam, Domini Calderii filiam, uxorem sibi adjunxit. Habuit etiam duos Nothos Johannem et Gulielmum.

LAUCHLANUS filiorum Makintoshii natû minimus Joannam filiam Andreæ Macphersoni a Grangiâ uxorem habuit, quæ, [page 257.] illi duos filios, Æneam et Gulielmum, et quinque filias n. Agnetam, Janetam, Elspetam, Isobellam et Margaretam peperit.

OBS. CHRONOLOGICA.

PRÆFATUS Æneas brevi post conjugium, Catanorum Ducatum sub suo patre in omnibus expeditionibus, dimicationibus, discriminationibusque ad illum tribum spectantibus adfuit, et, in prosequendâ militiâ adversus Gordonos et Cameronos, se hominem strenuum et sagacem semper præbuit. In rebus tamen gravioribus paternis consiliis morigerum fore oportuit. Sed

Allan, the sixth son of Lauchlan, married Rose, daughter of David Rose of Holm, by whom he had Lauchlan and Alexander, and daughters. Secondly, he married Lillias Falconer, daughter of Patrick Falconer, brother of the laird of Halkerton, by whom he had Eneas, and two daughters. He married, thirdly, Euphemia Campbell, daughter of the laird of Calder. He had also two bastard sons, John and William.

Lauchlan, the youngest of the sons of Mackintosh, married Jean, daughter of Andrew Macpherson of Grange, who bore to him two sons, Eneas and William, and five daughters, namely, Agnes, Janet, Elspeth, Isabella, and Margaret.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The aforesaid Eneas, a short time after his marriage, was, under his father, leader of the Chattans, and was present in all the expeditions, battles, and dangers belonging to that tribe; and in prosecuting the war against the Gordons and Camerons, he showed himself ever a man of courage and sagacity. In more weighty matters, however, it behoved him to submit to the advice of his father. But this restraint was so disagreeable to him that when the war was hottest, he forsook his country, wife, and friends, and set out on a journey towards Jerusalem. In the beginning of September 1593, he came to Rome, and at the end of the same month he died at Padua, in the twenty-seventh year of his age. This event was certified by letters, one of which was written by Mr. David King, of Edinburgh, dated from the Port of Hercules, on 2nd October; and the other, written by Mr. George Thomson of Rosmarky, dated at Rome, 22nd October 1593. This young man was magnanimous, brave, imperious, and somewhat severe.

William, brother of Eneas, had the government and leadership of the Chattans in the time of the minority of Lauchlan, his nephew, and was an able and high-spirited leader, and prosperous in all military enterprises, except only in that raid of Cabrach (of which above), where, being betrayed by Ronald MacRonald of Insh, he suffered defeat. In the year 1608, James the Sixth, King of Scots, being anxious about the education of Mackintosh, requested this William (then tutor of Mackintosh) by letter to send the pupil to be educated at the university of Cambridge or of Oxford. This letter (still among the Mackintosh charters) was dated at Thetford, on 6th December 1608.

Is Gulielmus, dum tutulare officium exercebat, controversias et dissentiones, quas recentes tumultuationes, inter quasdam, Cattanorum familias et inter ipsum Makintoshium et eorum nonnullos incitaverant, extinxit, eosque, stricto amicitiae foedere inter se copulavit. This William, while he exercised the office of tutor, extinguished the controversies and feuds which the recent tumults between certain families of the Chattans, and between Mackintosh himself and some of them, had excited, and joined them together in a strict covenant of friendship among themselves. Afterwards he bound the chiefs of the Chattan families in a bond of manrent to Mackintosh, their leader and chief, against all mortals (excepting the King's Majesty, the Earls of Huntly and Moray). To this deed, dated at Termet, on 4th April 1609, those who subscribed with their own hands were: William Mackintosh, chief of the Chattans, Malcolm Mackintosh, John Mackintosh of Dalzeld, Duncan Mackintosh, Lauchlan Mackintosh, son of Angus Mackintosh of Termet, Lauchlan Mackintosh of Gask, William Mackintosh of Rait, Andrew Macpherson of Cluny, Evan Macpherson of Brin, John Macpherson of Breakachy, Donald Macqueen of Corri-brough, Adam MacBean of Tordarroch, and Malcolm Macpherson of Owy. These following subscribed by the hands of the notaries, namely, Angus Mackintosh of Termet, Thomas M'Alister vic Thomas of Pitmean, Angus Macphail of Kinchyle, Alexander Mackintosh of Holm, Alexander Mackintosh, Hector's son, of

This bond and covenant, written by Alexander Duff, notary, is attested by John Cuthbert of Old Castlehill, provost of Inverness, Mr. John Ross, citizen of Inverness, Donald Macqueen, minister of Petty, Malcolm Ego, notary, and the aforesaid Alexander Duff, writer.

As a patrimony, William received the lands of Bendchar in Badenoch; he afterwards acquired the heritable right of the barony of Borlum. He ruled over the Clanchattan very well; but mismanaged the estate of the pupil (for he consulted far too much his own advantage). He died in 1630, in the sixty-third year of his age, and was buried in the family burying-place at Petty. Malcolm, the brother of Eneas, formerly dwelt at Ulrust in Petty, and thereafter obtained the heritable fee of the lands of Brin. He was a very courageous man, but somewhat too liberal. He died in 1634, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, and was buried near to his brother William.

OF LAUHLAN the EIGHTEENTH LAIRD of MACKINTOSH.

Lauchlan, second son of Eneas the laird of Mackintosh younger, succeeded to his great-grandfather (grandfather) Lauchlan, sur-named the great. For his brother William having died in youth, the grandfather outlived Eneas the father.

In the year 1612 he married Anne Grant, eldest daughter of the laird of Grant, by whom he had three sons, William, Lauchlan, and Eneas; and one daughter named Isabella. He had also a natural daughter who died without leaving issue.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

This Lauchlan was born in the year 1593, in the month of June.

interim peregrinandi curam suscipiente, diligenti industriâ amici sui et consanguinei Domini Johannis Campbell a Calder (qui, ex tutoribus, tenellæ ætati præeuntibus unus erat) commodè educatus, omnigenâ eruditione et honestis virtutum studiis instructus est usque quò, suarum rerum, gerendarum potens esset.

ANNO 1613 (a suscepto rei familiaris gubernaculo tertio, ætatis verò vicesimo) Allanus Cameron de Lochield (aliàs Makonilldui) occisis aurorâ quâdam 19 ex præcipuis sui nominis tribûs, putâ Cameroniæ (quibus, suis nimirum clientibus, patrocinebatur Dominus Gordonus). Prælapsâ quippe ætate, nonnullas ex priscis Allani possessionibus, non impetrato ipsius consensû, præoccuparunt. Exlex evadit.

ADVERTIT Dominus Gordonus magnam hoc facinore suæ famæ inustam fuisse maculam. Quapropter, sese penitus in vindictam accingit, sciensque haud penes semet esse, non suffragante Makintoshio, commode suum exequi propositum, Makintoshio (non duntaxat quod esset Huntleo cliens, verùm etiam et propter fomentatas olim inter utramque hanc familiam, Catanam, se et Cameronam, graves inimicitias),

His father having in the meantime undertaken the burden of travelling, he was suitably educated by the diligent care of his friend and kinsman Sir John Campbell of Calder (who was one of the tutors who counselled him in his youth), and instructed in every kind of learning and virtue, until he should be able to manage his own affairs.

In the year 1613 (being the third since he assumed the government of his estate, and the twentieth of his age) Allan Cameron of Lochiel (otherwise M^cConill Du) slew in one morning nineteen of the chief men of his own clan name, that is to say Camerons (to whom, as his clients, Lord Gordon was patron), because in the preceding summer they had occupied some of the old possessions of Allan, without having obtained his consent. Being beyond the law, he escaped.

Lord Gordon considered that by this wicked deed a great affront was done to his honour, and therefore girded himself thoroughly for revenge; but knowing that he could not by himself effectually prosecute his design without the aid of Mackintosh (not only because he was vassal to Huntly, but also because of the grievous feuds which were of old fomented between both the one family and the other, the Chattans and the Camerons), he employed Mackintosh to make war against Allan, offering him conditions of great importance. He promised, moreover, that he would never put end to this quarrel with the Camerons until the Mackintoshes enjoyed their estates with as much peace as he did his own.

But Mackintosh, on the serious advice of his father-in-law, the laird of Grant (who did not at that time much favour Huntly's family), and also on account of the contract long before entered into between his grandfather and Allan, whereby they were both strictly bound not to invade each other in hostile manner, rejected the offered employment, nowise doubting but that it behoved Lord Gordon (for the sake of defending his own honour) to undertake the war against Allan, so that he should, of necessity, grant conditions better by far than those first offered, before he could bring the proposed enterprise to the wished-for end. Lord Gordon took this repulse in bad part, and charged Mackintosh to join him in maintaining that feud against Allan, because he was bound to that effect in virtue of a bond of mutual help agreed upon by his grandfather with the Earl of Huntly in the year 1568. But the laird of Mackintosh held that the said bond was found to be invalid as to him, because of the Act of Parliament in the year 1585, so that he could not be brought on these

Gordon thereupon insinuated himself to the Earl of Moray (under whose protection many of the Mackintosh and Chattan tribe were then dwelling), hoping by this means, that, whether Mackintosh was willing or not, the Clanchattans would adhere to his interest.

In the meanwhile some discord arose between the Earl of Moray and Mackintosh, because the latter threatened to revenge certain reproachful calumnies uttered by Henry Anderson, the earl's groom, at a horse race held near the town of Nairn, which was won by Mackintosh.

As at this very time, Lord Gordon was expecting assistance, the Earl of Moray, by his own authority, ordered all of the Chattan name to rise to the help of Gordon. But Mackintosh as the head and chief of the Chattan name resisted to the last their going forth in arms; and the officer of the Earl of Moray having broken out with unpleasant words, blows ensued; for which reason both the Earl of Moray and Lord Gordon conspired with their mutual power against Mackintosh, and having cited him before the Lords of Privy Council as guilty of oppression, they caused him to be imprisoned in the Castle of Edinburgh (until he should find surety by pledges given for the peaceable behaviour of his family) where he remained for some time; but at length by the favour which he had at court, he was restored to his former freedom without finding any surety.

In the year 1616, upon various complaints of audacious robbery and theft committed by the Clan Cameron, who were bitterly oppressing their neighbours, Mackintosh, with a small company, went into Lochaber for the purpose of administering justice to all. But the above mentioned Allan, upon the rumour of the approach of Mackintosh, secured and closed all the fords and passes of the Water of Lochy. Having no regard to the strict bond formerly agreed upon between them, but moved with hostile intent, he convoked his friends and followers from all parts, and resisted the attempt of Mackintosh to pass over the water, which (as will afterwards appear) was a great loss and detriment both to Allan himself and to his posterity. Upon this repulse, Mackintosh, considering it would be more to his advantage and honour to retire at this time, rather than to rush, with so small a band, on the opposing force, returned home for that time; and having procured power to remove Allan, and as many of the Clan Cameron as dwelt on the lands of Glenluy and Lochairkagg,

Quapropter, discordias suas, delibato sapienti quorundam amicorum consilio determinandas reliquerunt, qui (pensitatis utrinque rationibus), Allanum, omne jus in agros Glenluy et Lochairkagg sine ullo speciosi prætextûs fuco, Makintoshio resignare, quatuorque reperire generosos, opibus, agris potentes, que, eum, ullumve ex suis posteris, Makintoshio, ullive ex suis successoribus aut clientibus in tranquillâ horum agrorum possessione, nullam illaturos injuriam sponderent, dijudicârunt. Quam ob causam, Mak-from their possessions, he soon afterwards summoned Allan and the chief men of his tribe before the Lords of Privy Council, as stained with the heavy crime of oppression; and on account of their contumacy, atrocious murders, dreadful robberies, and many such barbarous crimes of which they were guilty, power was given to Mackintosh to harry them with fire and sword.

In the month of June 1617, Mackintosh was honoured by the king with the dignity of knighthood; and shortly afterwards was admitted as a gentleman of the Privy Chamber to Prince Charles.

In the following month Mackintosh hastened into Lochaber with a great equipage, and Allan, when he saw that he was unable to repel the forces of Mackintosh (especially as he was vested with the king's mandate) freely submitted. Whereupon they left off their feuds, which were settled by the wise counsel of certain friends, who, having weighed the reasons of both parties, decided that Allan should without any specious colour of pretext resign to Mackintosh all right to the lands of Glenluy and Lochairkagg; and that he should find four gentlemen sufficient in wealth and lands, who should be responsible that neither he nor any of his posterity would trouble Mackintosh or any of his successors in the peaceable possession of these lands. They also appointed Mackintosh to pay to Allan £3000, because he had renounced and abandoned the lands of Glenluy and Lochairkagg, which had been for a long period possessed by the Camerons. At first Allan seemed to give his consent to this determination; but afterwards he failed to find security, affirming that he could get no one who was willing to undertake for his posterity. Mackintosh was willing, therefore, to recede from this clause of the agreement, and to accept Allan himself as obliging for his posterity, under a very sure and heavy penalty, if only he provided a sufficient surety for himself and his children born or yet to be born. This also seemed to satisfy Allan. But on the day appointed, he did not stand to his promises, having been persuaded to fail again on this occasion by the instigation of Lord Gordon, who when he saw that his first project for hurting Mackintosh was of no avail, and that he could not be even with him strove with all his might, by force and fraud, and snatching every occasion to disturb him in the

And towards that end (after he had come into favour with Allan again, all their traditional feuds having been consigned to oblivion without any, or the very least, reparation for the wrong done to him by Allan in killing his vassals) he hindered him from entering into friendship with Mackintosh, and prevailed upon MacRonald also not to render the obedience he owed. Mackintosh, finding that Allan had so greatly imposed upon him, charged Gordon, because he was Allan's master and superior, to produce him before the lords of his Majesty's Privy Council. Gordon refused, denying that Allan was his vassal; but he frankly confessed that John his son was his vassal. Mackintosh then charged him to produce this same John. Lord Gordon, confidently judging that John could not be brought within the grasp of the law, or, at least, no way doubting but that by his own influence he should get him off without any risk of loss, obeyed the summons, and brought John Cameron to Edinburgh, where he had hardly lurked the space of two or three days when warrant was granted by the Lords of Council to Mackintosh to apprehend him, after which they imprisoned him in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh. There he was detained prisoner during the three following years, until Sir Lauchlan Mackintosh died, on whose decease the Laird of Grant (regarded as tutor of young Mackintosh, son of Sir Lauchlan), in the year 1622, liberated John Cameron from the bondage of the prison, but unjustly. Mackintosh, as we have mentioned, having imprisoned John Cameron, afterwards girded himself against MacRonal, who having been sent into exile, the affairs of Mackintosh in Lochaber seemed in a brief process of time to be disposed by him to the best advantage.

In the year 1618 Lord Gordon set upon an action against Mackintosh for the eviction of the barony of Bendchar. In this pursuit, however, Gordon failed. Wherefore, having inhibited Mackintosh from proceeding further in collecting the teinds of Culloden (for Gordon had procured these to himself from the Marquis of Hamilton, by a surrender, and of purpose to create trouble to Mackintosh) he resolved to come himself to Culloden at the time of uplifting the teinds, and to collect them. For in this way he was hopeful of branding Mackintosh with a very signal affront. But Mackintosh was unwilling to resist the king's laws to the detriment of his own interest. He therefore did no more than strongly fortify his house of Culloden, with all things necessary for opposing enemies, and delivered the keeping Respondet Duncanus, sese, etiamsi possent, Dominum Gordonum, a Debito suo capiendo, non non impedituros. Castellum tamen, sæ fidei commissum, firmiter se propugnatos assertit. Dato hoc responso, Dominus Gordonus, nullum iis fuisse decimas impediendi consilium advertens, omnino inglorium, sibi que dedecori futurum putavit, in expugnato Castello redire. of it to his uncles, Duncan and Lauchlan Mackintosh, and a few days before the arrival of Lord Gordon to collect the teinds, betook himself on horseback to the English court.

Meanwhile, on 5th November 1618, Lord Gordon, accompanied with seven hundred horsemen, came to Inverness, and on the following morning went, with a great company of soldiers, to Culloden, and, in sight of the garrison, sent Sir Robert Gordon, governor of Sutherland, to Duncan (to whom, along with his brother Lauchlan the safe keeping of the house was committed), declaring that he had come thither in pursuance of the king's laws, and for the purpose of collecting the teinds pertaining to him by right. Duncan replied that although they could, yet they would not hinder Lord Gordon from taking what was due to him, asserting, nevertheless, that they would firmly defend the castle committed to their trust. This answer being given, Lord Gordon, finding that there was no intention to hinder them from gathering the teinds, judged that it would be altogether inglorious and disgraceful on his part to retire without attacking the castle. He therefore sent Lord Lovat (who was then present), the aforesaid Robert Gordon, and George Monro of Miltown (all friends of Mackintosh) to inform Duncan that he had a warrant intrusted to him by the Lords of Privy Council, against Robert Makonchy abbrich (one of the Clan Gregor), who for the sake of security had fled hither, as he had heard; and therefore it was his purpose to search that house carefully, lest he should be hidden there. Duncan retorted that the man of whom he spake was never hidden there, nor would he on any condition permit the house to be searched, especially when such an army was near it. Lord Lovat, perceiving the resolution of Duncan, acknowledged that they had used that device in order the more easily to get access; and therefore he continued to beg very earnestly that they would allow him, with Sir Robert Gordon, George Monro of Miltown, and two others, to go into the hall, faithfully promising that they would not molest the house in any way, and that the soldiers would not dare to over-pass the limits before fixed. To this request of theirs Duncan gave assent; on which account also Lord Gordon was pleased to proceed no further in his purpose of revenge; and so, having dismissed his army, he went home, carrying back but small triumph and less glory, for even the teinds were not gathered.

In the year 1619, Lord Gordon and Mackintosh (by the intercession of some friends) entered into a certain semblance of friendship. But as Gordon afterwards espoused the cause of

In the month of April 1620, Mackintosh being conscious of certain wrongs and many other faults, perpetrated by Angus Macalister vic Ian du, with his brother Alexander, against the people of Glenroy, sent William Mackintosh of Borlum, with a band of thirty able men, on a sudden expedition into Lochaber, to apprehend them: which was readily done and the prisoners brought to Culloden Castle, where they were held in close custody until they gave satisfaction not only for the crimes they had already done, but found surety that they would lead the remainder of their lives with honest and reformed manners.

This Sir Lauchlan Mackintosh was a man who excelled in splendid endowments as well of mind as of body, of great stature, exceeding by head and shoulders the ordinary height, spare of flesh, but very large of bone, of an amiable countenance, courteous and pleasant in speech, and beloved by all his friends. And so great was the favour of his prince towards him, that if divine goodness had granted to him longer life, he would have come to a high degree of dignity; and when he last resided in London, such was the esteem in which Prince Charles held him, that on

Of this sword (which is preserved to this day by the laird of Mackintosh) the hilt is chased with silver, and the whole glitters with splendid golden gilt. At that time also a promise was made to him by the king, that when he next returned to court he should be preferred to the right of the earldom of Orkney. But it pleased the Lord Almighty, who bringeth low the lofty and exalteth the humble, to remove him from this vale of tears and miseries while he was on his way home. He died at Gartenbeg in Strathspay, on the 22nd day of June 1622, aged twenty-nine years, his very early death being deservedly deplored by his friends and neighbours of every degree, quality, lot and condition. He was buried with his ancestors in the church of Petty.

OF WILLIAM the NINETEENTH LAIRD OF MACKINTOSH.

William Mackintosh, son of Sir Lauchlan, was only nine years and four months old when his father died. He married, in 1638, Margaret Graham, eldest daughter of the laird of Fintray (a lady

Lauchlan, second son of Sir Lauchlan, chose as his wife Isabel Graham, only daughter of the laird of Claypots, of whom he had one son named Lauchlan, who died an infant; and two daughters the eldest of whom, named Margaret, was given in marriage to Hector Mackenzie of Assint, and the younger, named Isabel, to William Macpherson of Nuid.

Angus, third son of Sir Lauchlan, married, first, Jean Gordon, only daughter of Robert Gordon of Tillifroskie, and widow of Gordon of Sachon, of whom he had no issue: afterwards he married Majory Robertson, daughter of John Robertson of Inches, by whom he had Lauchlan, Alexander, Elizabeth, Janet, and Jean.

Isabel, only daughter of Sir Lauchlan, on the death of her parents, with no portion left to her, was married to Mr. Alexander

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

During the minority of this Mackintosh, his uncle, the laird of Grant, undertook the care of managing his affairs. But he did not behave himself as became a friendly and careful tutor. For (besides many other losses and disadvantages suffered under his mal-administration) the debts of the minor (by the fault and laziness of the tutor) increased to such a degree that a great part of his estates was, in a manner, taken away for debt.

In the year 1624, two years after the death of Sir Lauchlan, some matters of dissension seemed like to arise between the Earl of Moray and the family of the Mackintoshes. The matter was to this effect. The Mackintosh family and the Clanchattan had ever most firmly adhered with steadfast and loyal fidelity to the Earls of Moray, through the various controversies in which they were involved; and they alone had most eagerly endeavoured, with all their might, to avenge upon the Marquis of Huntly the untimely death of the Earl of Moray (killed at Donibristle).

Nevertheless, the son of that earl, having joined with Huntly in a bond of friendship, attempted by every means to deprive the whole family of the name of Mackintosh and Clanchattan (the laird of Mackintosh being yet in minority) of the lands of Petty, Breachly, and Strathnairn (of the most part of which the Earl of Moray held the lordship as superior), which lands they had possessed heretofore in an unbroken line, during four hundred years. As the Mackintoshes and Clanchattan took this in very bad part, they gathered together three hundred of their own followers, under the leadership of three of the sons of Lauchlan More (grand-uncles of the minor). Then, having joined together against the Earl of Moray, they drove away all his servants from the lands of Petty, and arrested the rents. But as the Earl of Moray was not able by himself to resist them by force of arms (for he had no great following but themselves) he at length obtained [letters forbidding] any of his Majesty's lieges to treat them kindly, or to give them lodging. Then he called to his aid the Stuarts of Atholl and of Doune, but in vain, for neither did these dare to join in open battle with the Clanchattans. Wherefore, what he could not accomplish by force, he endea-nequiret, illud, arcanâ arte exequi sedulò nititur. Ille enim (proposita magni ponderis mercede) cum quibusdam ex eorum præcipuis per emissarios privato elaboravit dolo ut, nonnullos Principum familiæ Cattanæ tunc rebellantis, sceleratâ traducerent perfidiâ, quo recusato, satis subdolè, illis (quos emissarii antea prodi voluerant) egregium hoc mendacium proponendo, quosdam (eos, nempe, qui primò suos traducere abnuerant) brevi contra eos insurrecturos imposuere. Itaque, Comiti Morraviæ sese submittere persuadebantur. Propterea quoque, se præteritæ Rebellionis veniam comparaturum, agrosque alios (vice Pettensium) in Strathern et Strathnairn daturum pollicitus est.

Hoc illis, quibus propositum est, placuit, atque hâc ratione Comes Morraviæ et Tribus Makintoshia et Catanea (quæ tum exlex erat), habitas cum invicem discordias composuerunt. Hunc itaque in modum, sine multo sanguine effuso, tempestuosi harum dissidiarum tumultus, quæ, Comiti Morraviæ certissimo forent dispendio, ni Makintoshii (astutiâ, ne quid acerbius dicam) fraude Domini a Glenurchi et Baronis de Achchyl, voured assiduously to do by hidden craft. For he laboured privately by his emissaries, with some of their leading men (a reward of great value being offered) that they should, by guile, betray some of the chief men of the Chattan family, then in rebellion. They having refused to commit this wicked perfidy, the emissaries, craftily enough, imposed upon those whom before they wished to be betrayed, by setting forth the egregious falsehood that certain persons (meaning those who at first had refused to betray their own friends) were shortly to rise against them. Therefore they persuaded them to submit to the Earl of Moray, for which also it was promised them that he would procure a pardon for their past rebellion, and that he would give them other lands in Strathern and Strathnairn, instead of Petty.

This pleased those to whom it was proposed; and by this means the Earl of Moray and the family of Mackintosh and the Clanchattan (which was then outlawed) settled the discords which existed between them. After this manner, therefore, without much bloodshed, were the stormy tumults of those feuds quieted, which would have caused undoubted loss to the Earl of Moray, if the Mackintoshes had not been forced (by subtlety, that I may not say anything worse) to differ among themselves by the fraud of the laird of Glenurchay, and the baron of Auchyle, who on that occasion were the emissaries on behalf of the Earl of Moray.

In the year 1630, in the month of December, Lauchlan Mackintosh (otherwise called the younger), youngest son of the aforesaid Lauchlan More, by orders received from the Earl of Moray, who was then lieutenant of the northern parts of the kingdom of Scotland, apprehended by force of arms James Grant, a notorious rebel, who had committed many and most wicked deeds of oppression and slaughter against the family of Ballindalloch. You will find the occasion why this James Grant became rebellious shown as follows.

John (commonly called Roy) Grant of Carron, bastard son of John Grant of Glenmorrison, in the year 1550, with evil intent and bloody hand, pursued and killed John Grant, great-grandfather of John Grant of Ballindalloch now living. This villainy was perpetrated by the persuasion and at the earnest desire (as was believed) of the laird of Grant, on account of some grudge which he cherished in his heart against his friend and kinsman Ballindalloch. And hence the beginning of that grievous enmity and strife between both families, which has lasted in an invariable course from father to son to this day.

Several years ago, in the reign of James the Sixth, King of Scots, James Grant, uncle of Grant of Carron, while he was standing in the market-place of Elgin, a town of Moray, one of the name of Grant (of the Ballindalloch family), was observed hotly and violently pursuing Thomas, brother of the said James. The latter put himself in opposition to the assailant, and beholding his brother lying before his eyes on the street, pierced with several wounds, he attacked the aggressor with such vehemence and quickness of spirit that he killed him, and then turned and fled. For this crime Ballindalloch summoned James Grant to the Justice Court: but the latter failing to keep the day, was outlawed. The laird of Grant used his authority again and again to unite them in the bonds of friendship, but in vain. So that although many proposals were offered to his consideration, such as the banishment of the party, and very great sums both of goods and of money, Ballindalloch was so obstinate that no conditions of peace or reconciliation would at all please him without the death of James. The latter, therefore, perceiving that no sacrifice but his life would satisfy his malevolent and virulent enemies, resorted to a desperate course. He openly became an outlaw, and took to himself as confederates a Jacobum Grant a Delnabo (ex familia Ballindallachensi) insecutus occidit, et, in obstinato hoc cursû persistens, inimicos suos impendio vexavit, et depopulatus est.

INTEREA temporis Comes Morraviæ, Borealis Scotia partis Præfecturam obtinuit, cui propterea, hujus Jacobi (intra sui, quippe, officii limites) insecutio et suppressio incumberebat.

COMES, varia, ad Jacobum Grant insequendum, accersivit auxilia, sed operam lusit. Ille enim tutus usque et sine detrimento evadit, adeo ut Jacobus, cæterique criminis socii, ad atrociora perpetranda facinora instimulantur.

JOHANNES GRANT a Carron (hujus Jacobi ex fratre nepos) in patris fulcrum et adjumentum clanculum esse existimatur.

JOHANNES GRANT a Ballindallach, omne adhibuit studium, quomodo, Johannem a Carron (optimæ spei juvenem) prosequi poterat.

JOHANNES GRANT a Carron, Alexandro Grant ab Inveraury et 8 aliis associatus, e domo suâ (ad materiam, in Sylvâ Abernethy, proscindendam) decedit.

BALLINDALLACH, arreptâ hâc ansâ, sedecim ex suis amicis, number of lawless men from the mountains, and went on, not only to create troubles to their enemies, but also to molest divers others of his Majesty's subjects by their robberies and incursions. He pursued and slew James Grant of Delnabo (of the Ballindalloch family), and by persisting in this obstinate course he annoyed and wasted his enemies greatly.

In the meantime, the Earl of Moray obtained the lieutenancy of the northern part of Scotland, and so the pursuit and suppression of this James Grant fell to him as within the bounds of his office. The earl called for various help towards the pursuit of James Grant, but his labour was lost, for the outlaw still got away safe, and without hurt, so that he and his accomplices were the more encouraged to perpetrate their villainies.

John Grant of Carron (nephew of this James by his brother) was judged to be a support and help to his uncle in a private way. John Grant of Ballindalloch used every means he could to prosecute John of Carron (who was a young man of very good expectation). He, with Alexander Grant of Inveraury, and eight others, went from his own house to cut down timber in the wood of Abernethy. Ballindalloch seizing this occasion assembled sixarmis recinctis, convocavit, et, esse, in sylvam, in quâ Carron erat, proripuerè, subdolè prætendentes huc sese appulisse, ut, Jacobum Grant, aliosque ex illiûs sociis (contra quos, datam fuisse illis Commissionem testabantur) disquirerent. Tandem, Carron hostiliter invasere, qui diu, strenuo ac virili animo decertavit. Verùm, furiosos hostium impetus (quippe sine paludamento) ulteriùs sustinere nequiens, manibus Ballindallach interficitur. Thomas Grant a Davoy, Lauchlanus Makintosh a Ravokmor (Johannis Grant a Ballindallach ex Sorore nepos) et plerique alii illius amici, a Johanne Grant Carronensi et Alexandro Grant Inveraurensi fuere interempti. Impune tamen et sine damno evasit hic Alexander. Nam postea, Ballindallach plurimis discruciauit molestiis, variosque ex illius sectatoribus morti dedit, et, Jacobo Grant, ad, Ballindallachii agros depopulandos, suas contulit suppetias.

Hic apprime observanda est, tum et admiranda, secreta Providentia, et arcanum, Dei Omnipotentis Judicium, qui, tantum, Johanni Grant a Carron retribuit calamitatis mensuram, quantam, illius proavus Johannes Roy Grant a Carron, [page 267.] attavo Ballindallachii fuerat ante largitus. Eedem enim teen of his friends, with their weapons ungirded, and stole away into the wood where Carron was, craftily pretending that they came thither to search for James Grant and others of his associates (against whom they affirmed a commission was given to them). At last they assailed Carron in a hostile manner, who for a long time fought with courage and manliness. But being unable (as he was without armour) any longer to sustain the furious onset of the enemy, he was slain by the hands of Ballindalloch.

Thomas Grant of Dalvey, Lauchlan Mackintosh of Ravokmor (nephew of Ballindalloch by his sister), and many others of his friends, were killed by John Grant of Carron and Alexander Grant of Inveraury. This Alexander, however, escaped with impunity and without harm: for afterwards he greatly tormented Ballindalloch with many troubles, slew several of his followers, and gave his help to James Grant in harrying the lands of Ballindalloch.

Here the secret judgment of God Almighty, in His providence, is much to be observed, as well as admired, who rendered to John Grant of Carron such a measure as his great-grandfather, John Roy Grant of Carron, had formerly dealt to an ancestor of Ballindalloch. For on the 11th day of the month, namely, of Mensis Die, xi, putà, Septembris, quo Johannes Grant, Ballindallachii attavum trucidaverat, ipsissimo eodem prædicti Mensis Die, hic Carron, a Johanne Grant a Ballindallach, plurimis interfluentibus Annis, perimitur. Præterea, eâdem (Lævâ, sc.) uterque manû utebatur.

DENIQUE observabile est Johannem Grant a Ballindallach, in Johanne Grant a Carron interficiendo, eâdem loricâ, quâ, Johannes Roy, in cæde attavi Johannis Grant a Ballindallach, indutus erat, fuisse circum munitum. Quam loricam, Ballindallach brevi antea, a Jacobo Grant, in tumultû inter ipsos excitato, abriperit. Hinc, impenetrabilia esse Dei judicia, eumque, sanguinem sanguine puniturum, luculenter cernere possumus. Comes Morraviensis (qui tunc, Septentrionalibus Scotiæ partibus, præerat), audito hoc eventû, Johannem Grant a Ballindallach, adversus Johannem Grant a Carron, illiusque fautores (et si contra statutas Regni Leges) tutari cœpit et defendere, et hoc modo impedimento fuit et obici justitiæ contra Ballindallach exequendæ. Verùm et, illi ita apud Aulam Regiam favet, ut, a Rege, quorundam Annorum cessationem et tutamentum, contra ordinarium justitiæ vitum, illi

September, on which John Grant had slain the ancestor of Ballindalloch, on the self-same day of the month aforesaid, after the lapse of many years, was this Carron killed by John Grant of Ballindalloch. Moreover, they both used the same hand, that is to say the left. And, in conclusion, it is observable, that John Grant of Ballindalloch, when he slew John Grant of Carron, was armed with the same coat of mail with which John Roy Grant was clad at the slaughter of the ancestor of John Grant of Ballindalloch; which coat of mail the latter had a short time before taken by force from James Grant in a skirmish between them. Hence we may clearly discern that the judgments of God are inscrutable, and that He will avenge blood by blood.

The Earl of Moray (who was then lieutenant in the northern parts of Scotland) on hearing of this event, began to protect and defend John Grant of Ballindalloch against John Grant of Carron and his friends (although contrary to the statute laws of the kingdom); and in this way, not only was there a stop put to the execution of justice against Ballindalloch, but also he so favoured him at the royal court, that he obtained for him from the king a cessation and protection for several years against the ordinary course of justice. Hence it has happened that hitherto no obtinerit. Unde evenit quod, nullo adhuc pro cæde Carronis piaculo dato, hæ inimicitia etiam nunc inter partes incompositæ vigent.

VERUM nec quicquam hæc iniquitatis acta valere. Nam, majori indies acerbitate Jacobus et Alexander Grant, contra Ballindallach ejusque fautores, sunt accensi, quos, continuis incursionibus et cædibus, agros possessionesque vastando, indesinenter turbavere, eumque, a Borealibus Scotiæ partibus aufugere, et ut plurimum Edinburgi commorari coegere. Hæc Jacobi Grant facinora, Comitum Morraviæ (qui, quatenus tunc Septentrionis Præfectus, ignominia evitanda causa, hujusmodi contumacias, omnesque insignes Boreales Rebellatores, suppressere devinciebatur) hæsitandum detorquebant animum. Verum enim verò, cum (propterea quod, in eos, qui, Mackintoshios jam dudum rebellantes benignè exceperunt, inclementissimè sese gessisset) in maximo apud omnes haberetur odio, timeretque hos suos clientes, sc. Mackintoshios, non ita pridem variis in se vexatos injuriis, non animitus, aliqua, contra Jacobum Grant subituros hostilia, eò extremi-tatis ventum est, ut, quomodo, se, ex hac difficultate et angustiâ, extricaret, magnopere animo fluctuabat.

satisfaction has been given for the slaughter of Carron, and even now these feuds remain unsettled between the parties.

But neither did this act of injustice avail anything. For James and Alexander Grant were daily more enraged against Ballindalloch and his partisans, whom they incessantly annoyed by continual incursions and slaughters, and by ravaging their lands, so that they forced him to abandon the northern parts of Scotland, and to dwell for the most part in Edinburgh. These exploits of James Grant distracted the wavering mind of the Earl of Moray (who, as then lieutenant of the north, was bound, for the sake of avoiding disgrace, to suppress such obstinate evil-doers, and all the notorious rebels of the North). But yet, as he was by all held in great odium (on account of his unmerciful dealing against those who long ago received the Mackintoshes kindly when they were rebelling), and fearing that those his clients, namely, the Mackintoshes, having been before so vexed by the various injuries done to them, would not be disposed to undertake hostile service against James Grant, he was brought to such extremity that he was greatly tossed in mind as to how he should extricate himself from this difficulty and distress. At Tandem comperiens se (præterquam Makintoshios) parvum satis et vilem, at talia peragenda, habuisse comitatum, (non obstante rigidâ ejus in hanc familiam in clementiâ) ex iisdem quosdam in hâc re collocare statuit. Itaque, Gulielmo Makintosh a Kylachy non spernendum tradidit comitatum, ut, Jacobum Grant, ejusque fœderatos socios, diligenti scrutaretur indagine. Gulielmus munus accipit. Verùm Jacobus Grant (audito Gulielmum, rei hujus curam suscepisse), segregatis undique sociis, adeo caute insectatores evitavit, ut illa hâc vice, re infectâ, regredi cogentur.

Hoc, Comiti novam creavit molestiam. Quippe plurimi ex illius malevolus jactitare minimè dubitabant, illum non, tantâ polluisse authoritate, quantâ, uni Rebelli apprehendendo, sufficeret.

COMES Morraviæ, tantâ rerum perculsus, Lauchlanum Makintosh, cognomine Oig, Domini Makintosh propatrum, ad hujus negotii curam gerendam vocat. Lauchlanus verò (ut, Dominum suum, ab ignominiosis famæ labeculis, conservaret), negotium subire spondet, et sic, Mense Decembri A.D. 1630, Lauchlanus cum triginta strenuis Catanis, tanta last, finding that (excepting the Mackintoshes) he had but a small and worthless company for engaging in such enterprises, he resolved (notwithstanding his severe unkindness towards that family) to assemble some of them for that work. Therefore he delivered to William Mackintosh of Kylachy a considerable company, that he might make diligent search for James Grant and his accomplices. William undertook the task. But James Grant (on hearing that William had taken this matter in hand) dispersed his companions on every side, and so warily avoided his pursuers, that they were forced, for that occasion, to return without effecting their purpose.

This created new trouble to the earl; for many of those who had no goodwill to him were not slow to throw out the taunt that he could not wield so much authority as would suffice to apprehend one rebel.

The Earl of Moray, deeply affected with such a state of things, called for Lauchlan Mackintosh, surnamed Oig, grand-uncle of the laird of Mackintosh, to bear the charge of this affair. Lauchlan (that he might preserve his chief from any taint of dishonour) freely consented to undertake the business, and so, in the month of December 1630, with thirty strong men of the Chattans, he pursued the rebels with such constancy and unwearied animorum constantiâ et indesinenti curâ, Rebelles (cum sectatoribus numero pares) usque quaque sunt insecuti, ut tandem, in terrâ Strathdounensi, cum iis concurrunt, ubi, tam ardenti animorum acrimoniâ Rebellantes premebantur, ut (sine ullo alieni ex Lauchlani sectatoribus inflicto vulnere, dempto uno) septem, e Rebellantium numero, humi cecidere, duo cremati periere, et ipse Jacobus Grant, aliisque ex suis sociis vulnerati, in captivitatem redacti fuere, et Lauchlanus, propter eximium suæ strenuitatis, in hoc negotio adeo probè exequendo, exhibitum specimen, non modò, ingentem consecutus est honorem, verùm etiam, jure hæreditario in agros Corribrochenses (quibus hodie ejus posteri potiuntur), a Comite Moraviensi est donatus.

On account of the notable proof of his valour which he showed in so ably executing this enterprise, Lauchlan not only won great honour, but also got from the Earl of Moray the heritable right to the lands of Corribroch, which his posterity possess to this day.

In the year 1632, Patrick Murray, Earl of Tullibardine, and one named Mason, an Englishman, came to the north part of Scotland, for the purpose of buying some of the best woods in the Highlands. They went to Lochaber to view the woods of the laird of Mackintosh, which, as they answered very well to their expectation, they determined to purchase them. But the laird of Grant (that he might make a bargain to his own advantage, that is to say, by the sale of his woods of Abernethy) got them to change their mind, and refused to bind himself to them in so far as he was tutor to Mackintosh ; and this was one of those unkindly deeds which the laird of Grant did to Mackintosh, his pupil and nephew, during his minority, and much to the detriment of the latter.

In the year 1634, when Mackintosh entered upon the heritable succession in room of his father, he ordered the laird of Grant to show in what manner he had administered the family estate committed to his charge and care during his minority. But the laird of Grant (as he knew he had administered badly) deferred to render account, asserting that he had the gift of the ward and marriage of Mackintosh, and was therefore not bound to render account. But Mackintosh, having learned that the king, on hearing of his father's death, had ordered the Earl of Mar, the Treasurer, to make the ward and marriage of Mackintosh as secure as possible for the advantage of the minor himself, caused a search to be made in the books of the exchequer, and found a bond granted by the laird of Grant, whereby he was bound to use the ward and marriage of Mackintosh for the profit of the latter. The laird of Grant (when he saw that his project was baffled) resolved to molest Mackintosh to the utmost of his power before rendering account, which incited Mackintosh to summon him before the toshio, eum, coram Dominis Secreti Concilii, citandi stimulos adjecit. Verùm Dominus a Grant, priusquam res in aliquem acerbitatis gradum processerat, amicorum neutralium Decretis se subjicere pollicetur. Quod, Makintoshio placuit, et ita discordias suas, Roberto Farquharson de Invergald, Magistro Alexandro Hay uni ex Clericis Sessionis, Magistro Jacobo Baird Causidico, et Magistro Jacobo Farquharson Sigillo Scribæ, determinandas retulerunt. Qui, Dominum a Grant 10,000 Lib. Monetæ Scoticanæ Makintoshio retribuere decernunt. Hæc tamen Summa reverâ erat, illâ, a Domino a Grant justè Makintoshio debitâ, quadruplo minor. Verùm Arbitri ex proposito, summam adeo exiguam retribui jusserunt, ut cuncta malevolentis et odii vestigia, quæ (majori repetitâ summâ), inter conjunctas Personas exoriri poterant, removerentur. Nihilominus Dominus a Grant, prædicti Decreti (quorundam malevolorum instigatione) reductionem inîit, perque integrum Annum, Legis molestiis Makintoshium exerceri fecit. Verùm postea irritâ et frustratâ caussâ, ab incepto destitit. Summam persolvit. Durante hoc animorum divortio, Dominus a Grant, depigneratos haberis Makintoshii agros Lochabrienses, malitiosè satis et inimice, jus suum in hosce agros, Johanni Lords of Privy Council. But before the matter had gone to any extremity, the laird of Grant offered to submit to the decision of neutral friends, which was agreeable to Mackintosh; and so their discords were referred for determination to Robert Farquharson of Invercauld, Mr. Alexander Hay, one of the clerks of session, Mr. James Baird, advocate, and Mr. James Farquharson, writer to the signet, who decerned Grant to repay to Mackintosh £10,000 Scots. In very deed, however, this sum was four times less than was justly owing by Grant to Mackintosh. But the arbiters ordered repayment of such a small sum on purpose to remove every vestige of malevolence and emnity which, if they had demanded a greater sum, might have sprung up between the parties. Nevertheless, the laird of Grant (by the instigation of some evil-disposed persons) took steps for a reduction of the aforesaid decret, and for a whole year he caused trouble to Mackintosh by legal proceedings. But afterwards, finding that his case was frustrated, and in vain from the beginning, he desisted, and paid the money.

Cameron a Lochield (Allani Makoldui filio), manifestissimo Makintoshii inimico, disposuit, et ita, Johanni Cameron, nudam agrorum possessionem (quâ tantum, ante illud tempus, fruebatur) legitimam concessit. Hoc, Domini a Grant facinus, Makintoshio et hæredi (ut postea patebit) magnas peperit molestias, et ingentes sumptus exhausit.

ANNO 1635, grassante per totum Regnum, gravium miseriarum et impiæ oppressionis diluvio, Domini Privati Concilii, omnes Tribuum et Familiarum Principes et Capita, Patriarumque Gubernatores, coram sese evocari mandârunt, ut, pro suis Tribubus et Sectatoribus obligarent, quorum plurimi tunc præsentés, viz. MacConill duy), the manifest enemy of Mackintosh, and so granted to John Cameron plain legal possession of the lands, of which, before that time, he had the profit only. This mischievous action of the laird of Grant brought great trouble to Mackintosh and his heir, and was the cause of vast expense, as will afterwards appear.

In the year 1635, a flood of grievous troubles and impious oppression having spread throughout the whole kingdom, the Lords of Privy Council ordered all the chiefs of lands, and heads of families, and governors of counties to be called before them, in order that they should become bound for their clans and followers, many of whom then present, namely, the Marquis of Huntly, the Earls of Sutherland and Seaforth, the Lords Lorne and Lovat, and the lairds of Grant, MacDonald, MacLean, and many others, gave pledges. But others, namely, Allan Cameron of Lochiel, John his son, the lairds of MacGregor, Glenco, Gleneves, and MacRonald in Keppoch (as they found no surety who would undertake for them) were detained in custody. The laird of Mackintosh alone was freely dismissed, on his only giving a pledge to appear again whenever he might be called, and this favour he obtained, not only because he was a man of a tranquil

ANNO 1637 Makintoshius, agros suos Lochabrienses prædictos, e manibus hæredum Johannis Cameron redemit, et, quia nulla agrorum renunciatio, Makintoshio data esset (Eveno Camerono Johannis filio tunc Pupillo existente), pecunia, in manus Jacobi Cuthbert Invernessæ Præfecti, deposita est, quæ brevi postmodum (Dominorum Privati Concilii jussû), Donaldo Cameron a Lochild Tutori, in ipsius Pupilli commodum tradita erat. Verùm enim verò redempti a Makintoshio agri, per longam Annorum seriem, injustâ satis et acri violentiâ, per Cameronos detinebantur. Anno prædicto 1637 magna, de Religione et Regimine Ecclesiastico, controversia in Regno Scotiano est exorta.

ANNO 1638 plerique ex Nobilibus, Generosis et Verbi Dei Ministris, Fœdus, in Religionis tutelam (ut eorum verbis utar), adversus omnes innovationes &c., inter, invicem pepigerunt, quod, ingenti vastationi, cædi, crudelitati, et cladibus infinitis, per universa Regis Dominia, vigintiduorum Annorum spatio, propatulum præbuit ostium. and peaceable disposition, but also because a great part of his family were retainers and tenants to the Marquis of Huntly, the Earls of Mar, Athol and Moray, and others, and so not subject to his orders.

In the year 1637, Mackintosh redeemed his lands in Lochaber aforesaid from the hands of the heirs of John Cameron, and whereas no renunciation of the lands was given to Mackintosh (Ewen Cameron, son of John, being then minor) the money was deposited in the hands of James Cuthbert, provost of Inverness, and soon after (by order of the Lords of Privy Council) was delivered to Donald Cameron, tutor of Lochiel, for behoof of the said minor. But yet, the lands so redeemed were unjustly and violently detained from Mackintosh by the Camerons, for a long course of years.

In the year 1638, many of the nobles, gentlemen, and ministers of the Word of God joined together in a covenant for defence of religion (as they use the words) against all innovations, etc., which opened a wide door for devastation, slaughter, cruelty, and infinite miseries, throughout the whole of the king's dominions,

Ejus verò consanguinei et sectatores, in propatulo, sese, maximè sinceros, et, in Regis Caussâ promovendâ, propensissimos, demonstrârunt, a deo ut, narratâ Regi Makintoshii fidelitate, Epistolam gratulatoriam illi for the space of twenty-two years. While this tumult of troubles lasted, Mackintosh was very much disturbed in the transaction of his affairs by the Marquis of Argyll and others of the Covenanters (because he defended the royal cause), so that he could not get the common benefit of the laws of the realm against his oppressors; and thus he was, by violence, unhappily, kept from peaceably enjoying his lands of Lochaber, though they were lawfully redeemed.

In the confusion of affairs which now set in the Covenanters were puffed up with such insolence as to arrogate to themselves all authority. For they invented new and hitherto unheard of judicatories against the king; and having abjured the jurisdiction of the prelates, they embraced, as it were with both arms, the presbyterial government, which they defended with all the keenness and assiduous zeal in their power to the very end of the war. Many, however, as well of the nobles as of the gentlemen and the preachers of the Divine Word, stood for the cause of the King against the Covenanters. Among whom was Mackintosh himself, though secretly, because he was infirm in body; but his kinsmen and followers openly showed themselves most sincere and zealous in promoting the king's interest; so that the fidelity of Mackintosh having been reported to the king he wrote him a letter scripsit, cujus hic, ipsi Archetypo (inter Makintoshii Chartas jacenti), omni ex parte, simillimum exhibetur Exemplar. Verba subsequentibus habentur lineis.

‘ CHARLES R.

‘ Trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well. The rumour having been brought to us that you have not walked in the footsteps of the Covenanters but have ever opposed yourself to them, we give you hearty thanks therefor, mightily entreating you to go on in the way you have begun. Trust also in us that we will, by our royal authority, protect you, and all others imbued with the same loyalty of mind as you are, and who continue in complaisant obedience to us. And whereas, also, some years ago, we did confer upon the Earl of Argyll the heritable office of Justiciar within the Islands and other parts mentioned in our grant (within which your lands are comprehended), we, of our princely regard to your affectionate and faithful mind towards our interests at this present juncture, being desirous of freeing you from depending on any one but ourselves, do require you that you in nowise obey or adhere to the said earl, but that you and all yours whom you may join to you from every quarter, as well friends as vassals, be ready to furnish supplies, according to your abilities, to our

Farewell. Given from our court at Durham, 2nd May 1639.'

In this same year the lands of Mackintosh in Lochaber were harried with fire and sword by the Marquis of Argyll, not only because Ronald Macdonald in Keppoch (the principal owner of these lands) gave all his care earnestly to promote the cause of the king, but also because Mackintosh, to whom pertained the heritable right of the said lands, would not join himself to the faction of the Covenanters against the king, nor could he be persuaded by any means to sell these lands to Argyll (whose desire was to have them brought into his power). And also it was the opinion of many (and not without probability) that the lands were then wasted on purpose that, having been rendered useless to the laird of Mackintosh, they should be of less value.

Quandoquidem omnia Campbells) to the Lochaber people were not long unavenged, for in the year 1640 they went, with a band of 120 men, into Breadalbane, and from thence carried away an immense drove of cattle. But the Campbells, having collected a company as hastily as they could (for they were readily increased by about eighty of their chief men who were celebrating the marriage of a certain gentleman not far off) pursued the raiders. A battle took place on a hill called : the fight, however, had not continued long, when the Campbells, although more in number, were defeated, and several of their leaders cruelly killed at the same place. Thereafter the Marquis of Argyll (because he was afraid of being continually molested by the Brae Lochaber men) settled the feuds he had with them, and paid them 3000 merks as compensation for the wrongs he had done to them, and that notwithstanding the great slaughter and pillaging inflicted by them on the Clan Campbell.

In the year 1644, the Scots Covenanters having entered England with an army of 18,000 foot and 2,000 horse, the king wrote a letter to the laird of Mackintosh, containing the matter and almost the words following :

Being therefore forced, for our necessary defence and protection, to think upon the best means, and above all the most suitable methods of averting this imminent evil, and threatened ruin, we resort to those of our subjects who are of a steadfast mind, who are neither

Farewell again, and again. Given at our court at Oxford, 20th January, and of our reign the nineteenth year 1643.

Eight days after the receipt of this letter, another epistle from his Majesty was delivered to Mackintosh, by which he was commissioned to govern the whole district of Moray. The terms of the letter are here set forth :

‘CHARLES R.

‘Right trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well. Whereas those to whom, for the most part, the government of that our kingdom was committed, have so greatly abused the freedom granted to them as to convert it wholly to our detriment, and to the utter subversion of our affairs both here and there: yea, more (what greatly increases and aggravates all their dreadful and treacherous deeds hitherto wickedly perpetrated), they have (without the least appearance of any pretext), like base mercenaries, joined themselves as hirelings to those in this place who are opposing themselves in obstinate rebellion to us and our authority, in order that they may, together with their faithless and treacherous confederates, invade this our kingdom by an insolent attack. We, therefore (for the sake of defending both kingdoms), are forced to deprive these men of the authority given to them, because they are abusing it as a weapon to strike against our breast, and to bestow the same on those whom honour and sincere readiness to obey us will oblige in no wise to mingle themselves with these abandoned and wicked patrons of perfidy: and judging you to be among the chief of those who most undoubtedly do rightly seek glory and honour both to us and to the affairs of this our native kingdom, which, in the opinion of most people, must suffer very many miseries on account of the perfidy of a few, if the better part of our subjects of that kingdom, who have hitherto served us in a constant course of loyalty, shall not stand for our cause and their own as much as the perfidious faction do for foreign rebels. Relying upon you, as one in whom we now repose peculiar trust, we have set you over the whole province of Moray, no wise doubting but that you will give all diligence, not only to preserve the bounds committed to your trust as loyal as possible to us, but also, that you will likewise afford your aid and support to our lieutenant-general of that

Præterea quoque volumus Te in posterum nullatenus ullam, sive Privati Concilii, sive Comitiorum, sive Publicorum quorumlibet aliorum Conventuum, Authoritatem (nostrâ non concurrente) tuo comprobaturum suffragio, neve, ulla ex injustis eorum Decretis intra præscriptos tibi limites, exequi permittas, Teque duntaxat gubernari sinas jussis nostri Proconsulis (vel, illo absente,) fidelissimi nostri et dilectissimi Cognati Georgii Marchionis a Huntley, cui, insuper, mandatum dedimus, tibi, in omnibus ad nos spectantibus, nostram voluntatem fusiùs declarandi, teque, speciatim, nostro nomine certissimum faciendi, nos, sincerum tuum et constans nobis inserviendi studium (quod etiam, memori recondituros pectore ingenuè pollicemur) acuto observâsse oculo. Moreover, we also will, that you do in nowise acknowledge by your suffrage any authority, whether of Privy Council, or of committees, or of whatever other of their public conventions (without our concurrence), nor permit any of their unjust decrees to be executed within the bounds prescribed to you; but that you allow yourself to be governed only by the orders of our lieutenant-general, or, in his absence, of our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin George, Marquis of Huntly, to whom also we have given warrant to declare to you more fully our will in all things relating to us, and particularly to assure you in our name that we have observed, with a keen eye, your sincere and constant care to serve us (which also we do ingenuously promise to lay up in our mindful breast): and when at length by the zealous and diligent labour of you, and such as you, the tumultuous disorders and stormy troubles of that kingdom shall hereafter

Therefore, commending you, and the weighty matters intrusted to your care, to the blessing of God, we heartily bid you farewell. Given at our court at Oxford, the fifth day of February, in the nineteenth year of our reign, 164 $\frac{1}{2}$.'

In August 1644, the whole clan of Mackintosh, and all the vassals who dwelt on the lands of Badenoch, joined themselves to the royalists, and were the first of all who avowedly asserted the royal cause against the Scots Covenanters; and the Badenoch men, and a large part of the remaining kindred of Mackintosh, together with the whole tenants of Brae Lochaber did adhere, with undoubted steadfastness of mind and unwavering fidelity, to the Marquis of Montrose (chief commander of the royal troops), throughout all straits and dangers, and were present in all the battles which he fought, nor did they ever desert him until, by command of the king, he resigned the charge laid upon him and left the kingdom of Scotland. But afterwards, on the departure at that time of the Marquis of Montrose, some of the Badenoch Badenochensi quidam, alique ex Clanchattanis, Marchionem ab Huntley, in Regiâ caussâ tuendâ, sunt secuti, neque unquam amplexam hanc neglexere caussam quamdiu ulli alicujus momenti viri, Ducis officium præstare audebant. Quantum autem ad ipsum Dominum Makintosh attinet, omnibus omnino manifestum est quod, cum valetudinario et infirmo esset corpore, neque, propterea, campis militaribus idoneo, domi commorari oportebat.

ANNO 1648, Makintoshius, propter constantem sui animi fidelitatem, Acto Parlamenti, Inverlochix in Lochabriâ (ut, incolas, ne in solitas prorumperent enormitates, probè dispositos conservaret) Gubernator est constitutus. people, and others of the Clanchattans, followed the Marquis of Huntly in defence of the royal cause, and never neglected to embrace that cause so long as there were any men of any weight who dared to assume the duty of leader. But as to the laird of Mackintosh himself, it was thoroughly evident to all that with a sickly and infirm body, and on that account unfit for military duty, it behoved him to remain at home.

In the year 1648, Mackintosh, on account of his constant loyalty, was by Act of Parliament appointed Governor of Inverloch in Lochaber (that he might keep the people there well affected, lest they should break forth in their wonted lawless doings). But by the altered course of affairs in 1649, the aforesaid decree of Parliament was rescinded by a new one, and the oppressors of Mackintosh (that is, the Camerons) were, as before, bolstered up and indulged.

In the year 1650, King Charles the Second, having been called from Breda by the Scots, and having landed at Garmouth a short while after, when an English army not only invaded the southern parts of Scotland, but almost subdued it, among others of his loyal subjects whom he urgently called to the help of the distracted kingdom, he sent a serious letter to the laird of Mackintosh,

‘ CHARLES R.

‘ Right trusty and well-beloved cousin, and right trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well. The pitiful state and misfortune of this lamentable kingdom cannot but be well known to you—the enemy elated and insolent, all their designs against the forces by us appointed for defence thereof having turned out so successfully, who (after conquering the south side of the Forth and Clyde) have also more recently seized the castle of Edinburgh by the wicked treachery and hidden villainy of those stationed therein. That city these invaders formerly laid waste, the churches they ruined, and also, with insolent arrogance, they burned our palace; and now they insult triumphantly. Such wrongs, as well as the many other evils pressing grievously upon our subjects dwelling in the southern, eastern, and western counties, cry loudly for relief, help, and revenge. Wherefore we, together with the estates of our Parliament, having consulted as to a speedy remedy for these evils and miseries, have emitted this Act of our Parliament, which will come to your jurisdiction, for mustering the troops, and which we

These things, we are sure, will greatly affect your hearts so that you will speedily and effectually render help. We will therefore lay nothing further before you to be pondered in your minds, except our own resolution, which is, either by the favour and help of Almighty God to heal these evils and miseries, and to revenge all that these knavish and obstinate adversaries have, with cruel and impious minds, perpetrated; and to vindicate this nation (hitherto unconquered) from these wretched stains of ignominy, and defiling scandals of reproach, or to suffer the loss of life in the cause we have undertaken; nor would we survive the destruction of our people, for the sake of whose defence we are willing most freely to pledge as many lives (if we had them) as we have subjects. We are persuaded therefore, and assured, that you will in nowise be wanting in your duties, but with all cheerfulness of heart will sacrifice your lives in defence of your religion, country, king, your own honour, your wives, children, liberties, and will show that you are worthy of your forefathers, and like to them in their love of virtue and honour, and in defending their own country. We, therefore (hoping that every one of you will strive who shall first show himself in sight of the enemy), are advancing to Stirling with the force we already have (for there undoubtedly the next assault will be), and there (until you come to our help) we shall be ready to sustain the fierce attacks of the enemy, or to fall in death; and if it should happen that the small number by which we are accompanied should be defeated by a greater (on account of your slowness to succour us) the perpetual stain of infamy shall be branded upon you, that (when earnestly called upon even by your own king, with his Parliament) you did not hasten with a quicker step to the aid of your brethren (now overthrown by enemies). But yet, judging your loyalty, obedience, and most earnest desire to appear for us, to be put beyond the hazard of doubt, we bid you farewell. Given at our court at Perth, the 24th of December 1650, and of our reign the second year.'

On receiving this letter Mackintosh made all the effort he could to execute the charge committed to him with the utmost diligence. He wrote to his friends and kinsmen, held several meetings with them, being most firmly determined that now or never he would make manifest his power for the cause of his king and country. But the labour was spent in vain: because at this time there were two factions about the king, the one favoured the Duke of Hamilton, the other the Marquis of Argyll. Both professed goodwill and zeal for the king. The former, however, was the more faithful towards him. Argyll strove by every means possible that the command of the army then being mustered should be given to the men of his party; and as he well knew that Mackintosh was a man of a large clan, and had very many followers, and wholly favourable to the royal cause, he laboured craftily to render him altogether useless for promoting the king's affairs, by depriving him of all right to lead his friends and followers of the Chattan name; and to that end (as it was granted to every chief of a clan in the Highlands and northern Verùm (ne egregia hæc fraus perciperetur), eum, tanquam unum ex Badienochensibus Præfectis, memorat, mandans, sc. Dominum a Lochild, Dugallum M^oPherson, Makintoshium, aut ejus fratrem Lauchlanum, Populum Badenochensem producere. Marchio, Populique Badenochensis gubernaculum, Jacobo Menesio Chiliarchæ et præmemorato Dugallo (famulis suis et clientibus) concessit. Insuper, etiam, aliud procurat Actum 30 Januarii Die Anno 1651 datum, quo Dominus a Grant, omnibus, intra priscam Morraviæ Comitibus divisionem, Peditibus præesse mandabatur (ipse enim Morraviæ Comes tunc temporis, suo in campis officio defungendi inidoneus erat). Atque hi Pedites, Makintoshii (ex Tribû, sc. Cataneâ) Consanguinei erant et Cognati. Hâc itaque ratione, non modò, Nominis Catanei Regimen, a Makintoshio (legitimo eorum parts of Scotland to lead forth and command the people of his own name), the Marquis of Argyll, who had a special hand in drawing the act of calling out the troops, caused the name of Mackintosh, as chief of any clan, to be passed over. But (lest this egregious fraud should be perceived) he mentioned him as one of the Badenoch chiefs, charging, that is to say, the laird of Lochiel, Dougall Macpherson, Mackintosh, or his brother Lauchlan, to lead forth the people of Badenoch. But yet, at the very same point of time, he prepared an act, secluding the laird of Mackintosh (although head of his own clan, and chief of that people) from having anything to do with them, and gave the command of the Badenoch people to Colonel James Menzies, and the aforementioned Dougall (his own servants and vassals). Further, he procured another act, dated 30th January 1651, whereby it was ordained, that the laird of Grant should be put in command of all the footmen within the old division of the Earl of Moray (for the earl himself was not then able for doing duty in the field); but these footmen were the kinsmen and near relatives of Mackintosh (that is, of the Clanchattan). On this account, therefore, not only was the command of the Chattan clan craftily and stealthily taken away from Mackintosh (their lawful chief), but an able and loyal people were divided into two parts, the one separated from the other, and so were rendered unable to do their duty to the king. Mackintosh, finding himself aspersed with such a mark of dishonour, his troubled soul was tossed in a vast sea of difficulties, as to what method he should use to wipe it off. Because at that time the party that inflicted the wrongs and losses upon him was swaying almost all affairs. But as he was unable, by reason of bodily weakness, to go to court, he wrote two letters, one to the king, and the other to the Convention of Estates, in which he declared how greatly he was grieved that he alone of all the other chieftains was deprived of leading and commanding his own clan; and therefore he most humbly craved that they would condescend to put him in the same position as the rest. But, as both letters came first into Argyll's hands, he kept them back undelivered, and so, in this instance, Mackintosh could not openly give proof of his affection and loyalty towards the king, while the treachery of the Marquis of Argyll and of the rest of his faction stood in the way. At length, General Middleton coming to Inverness, to hasten the calling out of the army, when he found out the wrongs and hindrances wherewith the laird of Mackintosh was oppressed, gave to him a declaration

Hæc Declaratio data est Mense Martio 1651.

This declaration is dated in the month of March 1651.

In this expedition the leadership and command of the Clanchattans having been given to strangers, the Marquis of Argyll gained his purpose. For those who were appointed their officers, taking money for the abler men, chose the most worthless to MAKINTOSHIUS, durante toto Anglicanæ Usurpationis tempore, in eâdem (non obstante ingeniorum divortio) usque erga Regem perstitit constantiâ et fidelitate, quod etiam, quibusdam ex Anglicanis Ducibus, hostium ejus Clanchameronorum partem in Lochabriensibus asserendi ansam administravit. Moderantibus adhuc rerum fraena Usurpatoribus, campestribus officiis exequendis (ob corporis infirmitatem) impar erat. During the whole time of the English usurpation, Mackintosh (notwithstanding the division of opinions) persisted in the same constancy and loyalty towards the king, which also gave occasion to some of the English commanders to take the part of his enemies, the Clan Cameron, in the affairs of Lochaber. While the usurpers held the bridle of government, he was unable because of bodily infirmity to do duty in the field. Three small companies, however, of the Clanchattan remained continually with the Earl of Glencairn and General Middleton (while they stood for the king): one, that is to say, from Mar, under the command of William Farquharson of Inverey; another from Badenoch, under the leadership of Lauchlan Mackintosh (James's son); a third from Stratherne and Strathnairn, with James Mackintosh, Donald's son, as their leader; and these adhered to the royal interest, with unwavering constancy, notwithstanding that powerful garrisons of the English were at that time in Mar, Badenoch, and Inverness, yea everywhere.

loquar) indocilis temerare pactam, vitâ honestus, et moribus probis. Initam semel amicitiam solido coluit animo, corpore infirmo et valetudinario, atto tamen et ingenti animo, qui, vigesimo secundo Novembris Die 1660 (quo Carolus Secundus suo Regno est restauratus) quadragesimo ætatis Anno, corruptibilem corporis sarcinam deposuit, atque in Templo Pettienſi cum suis Majoribus in eodem reconditus est monumento.

Lauchlan, second son of Sir Lauchlan, went, in 1632, to Marischal College at Aberdeen, where he gave himself to the study of philosophy for the space of three years. On his return from thence, he applied his mind assiduously to the study of letters, until his brother the laird of Mackintosh married. But at that time, the tumult of civil war having arisen between the king and those of his subjects who were called Covenanters, seeing that the laird of Mackintosh himself, by reason of bodily weakness, was not able to give so much labour as would suffice for rightly settling according to rule the difficulties and varied perplexities of his affairs, Lauchlan resolved, with firm purpose of mind, to bear upon his own shoulders all the trouble of these affairs, whereby his infirm brother, with little favourable health, might (in these dark Preferring, therefore, the prosperity of the house and family of Mackintosh to his own private advantage, he managed his brother's affairs, as well in the north as in the south parts of Scotland, with so great fidelity and diligence, and with so little profit to himself, and ostentation before the world, that he had no need to be ashamed of the labour he had undergone.

In the year 1652, having been commissioned by the nobles and gentlemen of Inverness-shire to meet the delegates of the English nation at Dalkeith, before he would put his hand to that paper or declaration, commonly called in our speech the Tender, by which every one subscribing was bound to renounce the king and the Estates of Parliament, he refused and spurned the very lucrative gift of the office of sheriff and commissary of Inverness-shire. For as many as were delegates of the shires at that time were invested by the English, as a mark and testimony of gratitude, with such offices as were in their gift. But he, although he proceeded to Dalkeith for the sake of executing his commission, yet on hearing and knowing for certain that it behoved him to sign with his hand the aforesaid paper before he would be admitted as delegate, having first made known his mind to those who had sent him, he

During the first six years immediately after the death of his brother, he made it a great part of his business to attend to and manage the affairs of his young nephew and chief (which were greatly involved in many straits and difficulties, especially those relating to the Clan Cameron), which at length, through diverse events, and many changes of affairs, after enduring various storms of opposition, anxieties and other troubles of that sort, he reduced to a placid composure of tranquil serenity, as well to the honour as to the advantage of Mackintosh, which, in the following chapter, will be made very manifest to every one.

In the year 1661, this Lauchlan was appointed by the Convention of the Estates of the Kingdom one of the king's justices of the peace, and a commissioner of excise of the shire of Inverness.

Angus, the third son of Sir Lauchlan, was born in the year 1616, and was a man of a meek, placid, and good disposition; peaceable and not factious. In the year 1659, he got the heritable right to the lands of Daviot.

MACKINTOSH.

Lauchlan Mackintosh succeeded to his father, William, at the age of twenty-one years and six weeks.

He was educated in humanity at the schools of Inverness and Elgin; and at King's College, Aberdeen, he studied philosophy for the first two years, but thereafter at St. Leonard's College, in St. Andrews.

On the 12th of September 1667 he married Margaret Lindsay, only daughter of the laird of Edzell.

CHRONOLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The state of his affairs, on his first entry thereto, was involved in many perplexities. For besides those portions of his estate which were either wadset or forcibly detained by the Clan Cameron, there was hardly a fifth part left to be employed for his own use. For some years immediately before his father's decease, he was constantly employed at school, which was the occasion of his being at first somewhat unacquainted with the condition of his affairs, and therefore until he should have better judgment for regulating his own matters, he was forced to devolve the burden and control thereof upon his aforementioned uncle, Lauchlan, as more experienced and skilful to deal with the difficulties in which his estate then was.

Mackintosh his father having died, as stated, in the month of November 1660, a Parliament was held at Edinburgh in January following, in which the Earl of Middleton was the king's commissioner. Mackintosh, taking occasion of this opportunity, made known his case (with all the diligence he could) to the members of Parliament, and complained of the great and heavy wrongs he sustained from the Clan Cameron, who were possessing, with unjust and nefarious violence, his lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig. But the tumultuous discords of that period, and the litigations springing up on every side, were a great delay and hindrance to the purpose of Mackintosh. This Parliament was divided into two factions, the Middletonian and the Lauderdaleian, so called from their heads, namely, the Earl of Middleton, then the king's commissioner, and the Earl of Lauderdale, who was the king's secretary.

At this time the Marquis of Argyll, to whom the Lauderdale faction was favourable, was imprisoned in the castle of Edinburgh; but the other faction prevailing, he was held guilty of high treason, and on 27th May was beheaded at the Cross of Edinburgh.

Ewen Cameron of Lochiel, the adversary of Mackintosh, when he learned that the Marquis of Argyll (on whose family he and his people were dependent) was gone, and that the Lauderdale faction would in a little while give way, he betook himself to Middleton and his faction (that he might lurk there safely). But, in order to give some semblance of sincerity in this matter, he was among the first of those who signed a petition which was presented to the king (by which the Lord Lorn was hindered from enjoying the paternal estate). Whereupon the Earl of Middleton firmly vouched his cause, and employed every method, and interposed every obstacle he could, lest the petition of Mackintosh should be openly read. Because he was afraid that, if the equity of the cause was once heard, Mackintosh would accomplish his purpose against Lochiel. On this account the cause of Mackintosh suffered great delay. But at last, in the month of September 1661, after great opposition made by the adverse party, by the labour, effort, and zeal of the Marquis of Montrose, and the care of the Earl of Crawford (who was then, in the Chancellor's absence, Vice-President of Parliament) and of Lord Duffus, he obtained from the Parliament a strong decree, whereby Ewen Cameron of Lochiel was ordained to denude himself of whatever right he could pretend to the lands of Mackintosh, that is to say, Glenluy and Locharkaig, and to restore the possession thereof to Mackintosh under penalty of 20,000 merks.

His affairs having thus advanced, Mackintosh endeavoured to procure a commission against the Clan Cameron. But the Earl of Middleton, the king's commissioner, and the Earl of Glencairn, Chancellor, who at that time were among the chief favourers of the Clan Cameron, earnestly withstood Mackintosh in this matter also, for two years, pretending that it would obstruct the tranquillity and peace of the kingdom, which caused him no small trouble, and consumed no less expense.

But in the year 1663, the Earl of Middleton having been removed from office, and the Earl of Rothes appointed commissioner in his stead, Mackintosh again made a fresh attempt to obtain a commission against the Clan Cameron, but the Chancellor again withstood him. But at length, in the same year, by the justness of his cause, and the care and effort of his noble friends (amongst whom the Earl of Lauderdale deserved no small thanks), he obtained from the Lords of Privy Council a most ample commission of fire and sword against the Clan Cameron and their retainers, and letters of intercommuning, granting also the help and support of four sheriffdoms, namely, Nairn, Ross, Inverness, and Perth, the execution of which was, on account of the causes following, delayed to the months of August and September of the year 1665.

Having, with great difficulty, obtained this commission, Mackintosh caused it to be promulgated at the market crosses of the aforesaid shires, and early next spring he himself went to all the nobles and gentlemen of these shires, and to others whom he doubted not to be favourable to himself and his cause, and with all the tokens of a humble mind, besought their assistance. But, because on account of the shortness of the time, and the urgency of affairs, he could not then go to Perthshire, he caused serious letters, charged with weighty reasons, to be written to the Earl of Atholl and his vassals. But the vehement requests and serious demands vanished into thin air; for every one, the nobles as well

PRIMI et præcipui eorum, qui, suas suppetias et subsidia (etiãsi, huic præstando Concilii Decretis obnoxii) abnegârunt, fuerant hi, Comites Atholiæ et Seaforthæ, Dynastes a Lovat, Domini a Calder, Balnagown, Fowls, Kilravok, Domini a Grant Tutor (et patruus) Park, Georgius Monro a Caleairn Miles, Chisolmus Comriæ, Titularis a Keppoch Tutor Gulielmus Bailly a Dunain, et Invernessæ oppidi Præfectus etc.

OMNES hi Nobiles et Generosi cum omnibus suis Familiis, Tribubus, Sectatoribus et Clientibus (demptis quatuor privatæ sortis hominibus) Domino a Makintoshio, in maximis ipsius calamitatibus et extremis necessitatibus, suum tum auxilium, tum amicitiam subduxerunt.

IMMO, horum nonnulli, viz. tutelarîs Keppochiæ Tutor et as the gentlemen of these districts (excepting those of the Chattan name that happened to dwell there) simply refused their help, having no respect nor consideration either of kinship, affinity, friendship, merits, the equity of the cause, or of the royal commission; yea, some who were joined to Mackintosh by the ties of blood, and on whose ancestors the lairds of Mackintosh had not spared to confer benefits (as is evident from the preceding notes) were, by hidden deceit, most opposed to him.

The first and principal of those who refused to give their support and subsidies (although obliged to do so by decree of the Council) were these, the Earls of Atholl and Seaforth, the Lord Lovat, the lairds of Calder, Balnagown, Fowls, Kilravock, the tutor (and uncle) of the laird of Grant, the laird of Park, George Monro of Culcairn, knight, Chisholm of Comer, the titular tutor of Keppoch, William Baillie of Dunean, and the Provost of Inverness. All these nobles and gentlemen, with their families, clans, followers, and vassals (excepting four men of private rank) withdrew both their help and their friendship from the laird of Mackintosh in his great distress and extreme necessity. Yea, some of these, namely, the titular tutor of Keppoch and the Frasers of Fraserii Stratharicensis, in propatulo, sese, adversus Makintoshium, Clanchameronis adjunxerunt. Alii, nimirum, Comes ab Athol (etsi, in universâ justitiæ administratione, Scotiæ tunc temporis præerat, et e Regis Consiliaris unus erat) et Domini a Calder et Kilravok, maximâ cum contumeliâ in inhumanitate, quotquot ex Clanchattanis sub illis degebant, et cum Makintoshio Lochabiam adire volebant, graviter interminati sunt. Itidem Dominus Makenzie a Tarbat Miles R. non tantùm ante comparatam, adversus Clanchameronos, commissionem, sese ingentem rebus Makintoshii antagonistam præbuit, verùm et deinceps etiam, expectatis a Makintoshio suppetiis non minori fuit obstaculo, quod fecit non eâ ratione, quâ, plerique ex memoratis Generosis suum retraxerunt auxilium (quippe, viz. sibi damnum illatum iri, et injurias a Clanchameronis prædatoribus verebantur) sed quod ipse et Evenus Cameron a Lochield, eidem factioni (Midltonianæ utpote) favebant. Grantei etiam et Fraserii, prosperæ Clanchattanorum claritati æmulantes, eorum dânnum et dispendium avidis anhelebant animis. Quatuor duntaxat Generosi, suis Personis, Makintoshio, adversus Clanchameronos, subvenerunt (qui peregrini dicebantur), nempe, Johannes Grant a Rothe-Stratherrick, openly joined themselves to the Clan Cameron against Mackintosh; others, that is to say, the Earl of Atholl (although he was then Justice-General of Scotland and one of his Majesty's councillors) and the lairds of Calder and Kilravock harshly threatened such of the Clanchattan as lived under their rule, with the utmost contumely and barbarity, if they dared to go with Mackintosh into Lochaber. In like manner, Sir [George] Mackenzie of Tarbet not only showed himself a great antagonist to the interests of Mackintosh before the commission against the Clan Cameron was obtained, but also thereafter was not less an obstacle to the aid expected by Mackintosh, and this not on the same account as that on which the most of the gentlemen mentioned withdrew their help (because they were afraid that loss and injury would be inflicted upon themselves by the Clan Cameron robbers), but because he and Ewen Cameron of Lochiel belonged to the same faction, that of Middleton. The Grants also and the Frasers, envious of the prosperous renown of the Clanchattan, were striving with all their might for their hurt and detriment. Four gentlemen only, of those who were called strangers, came to the help of Mackintosh against the Clan Cameron, namely, John Grant of Rothemurchus (who had as his wife a daughter of William Mackintosh of Kylachy), William Forbes of Skelleter (married to another daughter of the same), David Ross of Urchany, and John Campbell of Auchindoun (who, in respect of their mother's family, were cousins of Mackintosh); and these adhered to Mackintosh with as much constancy of mind as any of the Clanchattan (during the space of seven weeks until he returned from Lochaber). Nor did less thanks accrue to Rothemurchus that John Grant of Glenmoriston (nearly related by consanguinity to Mackintosh himself) publicly supported the cause of the Clan Cameron, and took care to send some of his people to help them against Mackintosh. Those of the aforesaid families who seemed to favour Mackintosh, but held back lest they should incur the wrath of their chiefs, were Thomas Mackenzie of Pluscarden, Simon Mackenzie of Lochslin, with his son Sir George, Colin Mackenzie of Redcastle, Colin Mackenzie of Kilcoy, Roderick Mackenzie of Davochmaluack, Robert Grant of Elchies, and Sueton Grant of Gartinbeg.

murchus (qui Gulielmi Makintosh a Kylachy filiam uxorem habuit) Gulielmus Forbes a Skeleter (cui altera ejusdem filia consorti data est) David Ros ab Urchny, et Johannes Campbell ab Auchindoun (qui, habito Marternæ Familiæ respectû, Makintoshii Consanguinei erant), atque hi, tantâ animi constantiâ, quantâ ullus Clanchattanorum, Makintoshio (durante septem Hepdomadam spatio, usque quò Lochabriâ regressum fecerat) adhæserunt. Neque minores ex inde Rothemurcho accrevere gratiæ, Johannem Grant a Glenmoristown (ipsi Makintoshio consanguinitate propinquum), Clanchamronorum Caussam publicè sustinendam, et, nonnullos ex suo populo, iis adversus Makintoshium, succurrere destinandos curâsse. Qui ex prædictis Familiis, Makintoshio favisse (sed, ne iram Genearchis suis commoverent) abstinuisse videbantur, erant Thomas Mackenzie a Pluscarden, Simon Makenzie a Lochslin cum filio [page 283.] Domino Georgio, Colinus Mackenzie a Redcastell, Colinus Mackenzie a Coulcowy, Rodericus Mackenzie a Davochmaluack, Robertus Grant ab Elchis, et Suetonius Grant a Gartinbeg.

The conduct of the Earl of Moray in this juncture of Mackintosh's affairs was of this sort. When Ewen Cameron of Lochiel deserted the Earl of Argyll and joined the Middleton faction, isset, statim Morraviæ Comes pro Makintoshio stare cœpit. Sed simulac Argatheliæ Comes (propter cognitâs sibi fines) Eveno Camron, novæ incundæ amicitîæ ostium præbisset, et, congruenter, illum in favorem recepisset, Morraviæ Comes, partim, Comitîs Argatheliæ intentionis, de, Makintoshii agris Lochabriensibus ipsi acquirendis, promovendæ gratiâ, partim verò, ne aliqua, suis de Cataneâ Tribû Clientibus, ex bello et Cameronis excitando, introduceretur perturbatio, a primâ, erga Makintoshium benevolentîâ et promptitudine defecit. Imò, novas, illi in Lochabriam proficiscenti, clanculum creavit molestias, et (ut poste fusiùs declarabitur) ejus illuc expeditionem, quantum potuit, restitit. Itidem Comes de Aboyn (Huntlei Tutor), Makintoshio, nunc favebat, nunc (verso in contrarium animo) resistebat. Quamdiu enim Evenus Camron Midltoniam amplexus fuerat factionem, Aboynus non, quantum auxilii sperabatur, in rebus Makintoshii Lochabriensibus ad optatum perducendis, metam, contulit, quod, multos, ingentes illas ignominiarum maculas, Familiæ, Huntlei, ab Eveni Cameron Majoribus aliisque suæ Tribûs haud antea diu inustas, considerantes (trucidationem putâ the Earl of Moray began forthwith to stand up for Mackintosh. But as soon as the Earl of Argyll (for ends known to himself) had afforded to Ewen Cameron a door of entry to renewed friendship, and had accordingly taken him into favour, the Earl of Moray, partly for the sake of promoting Argyll's purpose of acquiring the Lochaber lands of Mackintosh to himself, but partly lest disturbance should be brought among his own vassals of the Clanchattan by war arising between them and the Camerons, fell away from his former good-will and promptitude towards Mackintosh: yea, he secretly created new troubles against him on his departing into Lochaber (as shall be more amply shown afterwards) and resisted his expedition thither as much as he could.

The Earl of Aboyne (tutor of Huntly), in like manner, was at one time favourable to Mackintosh, and at another (having changed his mind) was against him. For so long as Ewen Cameron embraced the Middleton faction, Aboyne did not afford so much help as was expected in advancing the affairs of Mackintosh in Lochaber to the desired end, which touched many with no small wonder, considering the great marks of ignominy wherewith the family of Huntly was branded not long before by the predecessors of Ewen Cameron and others of his clan, such as the murder of

DEFICIENTE ita, omnium conterminorum Vicecomitatum expectato auxilio, Makintoshius, cum amicis suis et assectatoribus Tribûs Catanæ, conveniendi consilium inîit. Adminiculum enim Vicecomitatum, opus aggrediendum facilitaturum, et brevioris temporis spatio perfecturam, animadvertibat. Populum tamen suum (Clanchattan), præsertim cùm (ut sepiùs polliciti sunt), ad omnia subeunda officia, proclives et paratissimi essent, (aspirante etiam illis Regiæ Majestatis Autoritate) Clanchamronos, temporis progressû, vel, ad debitam

Cameron of Gleneves, John Cameron, alias Bodach, of Erracht, and many others, to the number of seventeen, of the principal Lochaber vassals of Huntly, at Inverlochy, in the year 1613, and the seizure of John Gordon of Invermarky, and of John Gordon of Newtown; and the putting to flight of the Marquis of Huntly himself by the Camerons on the braes of Glenmoriston. But as soon as Ewen Cameron deserted the Middleton party, and was received into favour by the Earl of Argyll, then Aboyne repented of the goodwill he had shown towards Ewen. But this, his late repentance, profited Mackintosh absolutely nothing in his difficulties.

The expected assistance of all the neighbouring shires having thus failed, Mackintosh entered on the design of calling together his own friends and followers of the Clanchattan. For he considered that though the help of the shires would have made the enterprise go on the more easily, yet he knew that his own people (the Clanchattan), especially as they had often promised, and were inclined and very ready to undergo all kinds of services (inspired also by the king's authority), were able enough either to compel the Clan Cameron, in process of time, to the obedience they owed, or wholly to subdue them.

The Earl of Sutherland (though not included in Mackintosh's commission), for the sake of service formerly rendered by the great-grandfather of Mackintosh to the earl his father, not only promised support, but also sent a hundred and twenty chosen and able men, well provided with officers and every requisite, together with sixty servants to take charge of the baggage, well armed, in order that they might remain constantly with Mackintosh during his labours against the Clan Cameron.

In the year 1664, while Mackintosh was waiting the arrival of the force promised by the Earl of Sutherland, and was mustering and reviewing his army and preparing himself for Lochaber, Ewen Cameron, like a fox, set about devising snares and wiles. He wrote letters to the Bishop of Moray, and to other men of peaceful disposition dwelling there, earnestly beseeching them to endeavour to settle, by their mediation, the strife that had arisen between Mackintosh and himself; and professed himself to be most willing to satisfy Mackintosh, without any shedding of blood. Upon hearing this, the Earl and Bishop of Moray, and aliique nonnulli, sese interponunt, ut, suo studio et labore, partium discrimina ita componunt, ut, octo Dierum spatio, ad verbalem consensum, tandem, perventum est. Eveno Cameron, ad suam consensûs partem adimplendum (ut dignos inveniret Fidejussores), menstruale spatium concessum est. Elapso concessi temporis spatio, num spontaneâ, pactam fidem violandi resolutione, an (ut vulgò tradebatur) Comitibus Argatheliæ et Domini a Glenurchy persuasibus, maximâ cum infamiâ nec minori sibi detrimento, Evenus, ab icto fœdere turpissimè declinat, atque ita, detestandâ suâ fraudulentâ, Makintoshium, a perficiendâ suâ in Lochabram expeditione, illâ æstate, impedivit.

FUCOSA hæc et subdola caliditas tantopere Makintoshii animum exasperavit, ut, suæ Tribûs Clanchattanæ præcipuos (qui, quod, tam depressis conditionibus in nupero interloquio habitis, sese subjecerat, caussæ erant) calidam hanc methodum non, sine manifestâ eorum ipsiusque ignominiâ, ab Eveno excogitatum fuisse existimas, eorum benevolentiam ad Lydium lapidem revocare, (et, Familiarum Capita separatim alloquendo) num tunc temporis, ordienti, sc. some others, interposed themselves, and by their earnest efforts they so composed the differences of the parties, that in the space of eight days they came at length to a verbal agreement. A month was granted to Ewen Cameron for implementing his part of the agreement (that he should find sufficient sureties). The space of time granted having elapsed, whether of his own free resolution to violate the compact, or (as was commonly reported) by the persuasions of the Earl of Argyll and the laird of Glenurchy, Ewen, with the deepest dishonour, and not less detriment to himself, most basely drew back from the bargain agreed upon; and thus, by his detestable deceit, he hindered Mackintosh from executing his expedition to Lochaber for that summer.

This sly and crafty trickery so greatly exasperated Mackintosh, that, thinking the chief men of his clan (who were the cause of his submitting himself to such low conditions in the late conference) would regard the cunning method devised by Ewen to have been in manifest contempt of them and of himself, he resolved to put their goodwill to the touchstone, and (by speaking to the heads of families separately) to find out whether they would at that time, that is, at the beginning of autumn, rise to his assistance against the Clan Cameron. And first of all,

TERTIO, ut ipse Makintoshius, unà cum quatuor aut quinque ex sui Nominis præcipuis, propriis testarentur autographis, quicquid adminiculi, Andreas Macpherson a Cluny esset, hâc vice, exhibiturus, non, ex alio, quàm merâ benevolentîâ, profuere fonte, nec, ad hoc conferendum, ut Cliens ad Genearcham, obstringi, sed idem adminiculum, velut in vicino in vicinum, tanquam munusculum, elargiri.

PRIMO Articulo responsum est, 1^{mo}, Honorum et Dignitatis

he spoke to Andrew Macpherson of Cluny, whose sincere affection he had hitherto esteemed to be placed beyond the hazard of doubt, who, instead of a kindly and becoming response, demanded some foolish and absurd articles to be conceded to him, which, if not yielded, he was resolved to refuse his help.

One article was, that the second place should be given by Mackintosh to him, the said Andrew (forsooth!) and his heirs, before all Mackintoshes and Clanchattans.

Another was, that all lands which were ever formerly possessed by the Clan Vurrich (so the Macphersons were formerly called), but now by any of the name of Mackintosh (in whatever way acquired) should be restored to the Clan Vurrich.

Thirdly, that Mackintosh himself, along with four or five chief men of his name, should testify by their own handwriting, that whatever aid Andrew Macpherson afforded on this occasion should be regarded as flowing from no other source than mere goodwill, not as that which a vassal was bound to yield to a chief, but as a favour bestowed by one neighbour on another.

To the first article it was answered:

1. That the conferring of places of honour and dignity was locorum collationem inter Regias Prærogativas annumerandam esse, neque, propterea, a quolibet Subdito (non consentiente ipso Rege) tractandam, et quod sufficiens honor est homini cum dignus honore est. 2^{do}, Nullum promotionis locum ulli Privato Subdito infra Baronetum debitum, civilitatis duntaxat gratiâ nonnullis in more positum esse, aliis, consideratâ eorum Dignitate, Stemmate aut consuetudine inter Majores excultâ, non nunquam etiam (nullo trium enumeratorum in dubium revocato) divitiarum habitâ ratione, Primatum offere, omnesque verò Familiarum Nominis Catanei partes, Andræ Makpherson a Cluny, Dignitate, Stemmate aut Consuetudine inferiores. Imò, quorum res familiaris minor esset (ni, trium præmemoratorum respectû, excelsiorem mererentur gradum), libentissimè cessuros. Neque plus, ullo rationis prætextû, rogari potest.

SECUNDO Articulo hunc in modum obviam itum est. Sicut nullo jure asseri quivit, aliquos Dominorum a Makintosh, ullos unquam ex Clanwurichis, a nativis suis possessionibus (non suffragantibus ipsis), pepulisse, ita, neque majori jure affirmari potest, quemlibet ex Tribû Makintoshianâ, ullos, Clanwurrichorum avitas Possessiones violenter et illegitimè-comparâsse, reckoned to be among the royal prerogatives; and therefore not to be dealt with by any subject without the consent of the king; and that there is honour enough to a man when he is worthy of it.

2. That no place of preferment is due to any private subject below a baronet; to some it is given, by custom, for the sake of civility only; to others in consideration of their worth, their lineage, or custom honoured among the forefathers. Sometimes even (when none of the three points mentioned are called in question) on account of wealth; and, indeed, all heads of the families of the Chattan name, inferior in dignity, lineage, or custom to Andrew Macpherson of Cluny, yea whose estate was less than his (unless they merited higher rank in respect of the three points before mentioned), would freely yield to offer him precedence; and no more, on any pretence of reason, could be demanded.

The second article was met in this way. As it could not be asserted on any just ground that any of the lairds of Mackintosh had ever driven off the Clan Vurrich from their native possessions (without their own consent), so neither could it be affirmed that any one of the Clan Mackintosh had violently and unlawfully acquired any of the ancient possessions of the Clan ipsum, nihilominus, omnes eas Possessiones, quæ aliquando ad Clanwurrichos attinebant, (etsi licitissimè acquisitas) duplici hæc lege paratissimos esse Clanwurrichis restituere. Primò, ut tota pecunia, iis comparandis collocata, retribueretur. Deinde verò ut Clanwurrichi, iisdem conditionibus, omnes eas Possessiones, in quas Makintoshiis olim jus erat, iis restaurarentur.

TERTIUM autem propositum (quod, reverâ, præ se ferebat ut Makintoshius, suâ manû, se non Clanwurrichorum Phylarchum esse testaretur) adeo ridiculum et sibilis excipiendum æstimabatur, et, Makintoshium tantâ exacerbavit irâ, ut semel animo suo, se, nihil, illi articulo, quippe, risû potiùs quàm responsione magis digno, replicaturum statuerat. Veruntamen, ne qui, vinculis illis et relationibus, inter Makintoshium et Tribum Clanchattanam intercedentibus, peregrini erant et extranei, viso et lustrato hoc articulo, eundem, ulla rationis umbrâ, corroborari aut suffulciri existimarent, neve (si nulla, propositori, ne quid verius dicam, stulto, in suâ stultitia opponeretur replicatio) illi inani sibi applauderet ostentatione, præterea quoque, præsentem suarum rerum statum diligenter pensitando, negotiaque sua, indubitatis rationis bene conformatæ regulis, non Vurrich; yet they were ready, nevertheless, to restore all those possessions which at any time belonged to the Clan Vurrich (although quite lawfully acquired) on this twofold condition: Firstly, that all the money given for purchasing them should be paid back; and secondly, that the Clan Vurrich should, on the same terms, restore all those possessions which belonged before to the Mackintoshes.

But the third proposal (which, in truth, presumed that Mackintosh would witness under his own hand that he was not the chief of the Clan Vurrichs) was deemed so ridiculous as to be hissed at, and provoked Mackintosh to such wrath that he at once resolved in his own mind to make no reply to that article, as worthy of laughter rather than an answer. But, notwithstanding, lest those who were strangers to those bonds and relationships subsisting between Mackintosh and the Clanchattan, on the sight of that article, might, without any shadow of reason, consider it as corroborated or supported; or lest if no reply was made to the proposer (may I not say more truly, to a fool in his folly?) he should pride himself with vainglory; and further, on carefully pondering the present state of his affairs, and that his business should be managed according to the undoubted rules of verò turbulentis temerariæ passionis motibus gerenda esse, tam vividam et nervosam exhibuit responsionem, quam, nullus, ratiociniis aut argumentis repellere poterat.

SECUNDO, Authentici omnes et maxime approbati Gentis Scoticanæ Chronologi, Makintoshium Clanchattanorum Ducem et Principem pronunciant. 1^{mo}, Lesleus, in nono de gestis Scotorum Libro, inquit, Tribus Clanchattana vulgò nuncupata Makintoshiana a Principe Makintoshio &c. et in decimo suo libro, Gulielmum Makintosh Tribûs Clanchattanæ Ducem nuncupat. Buchananus etiam, decimo sexto Rerum Scoticarum libro, eundem Gulielmum Catanæ Familiæ Principem appellat.

well-ordered reason, and not by the turbulent motions of reckless passion, he presented an answer so lively and vigorous that no one could repel it by reasonings or arguments.

The first answer, therefore, was to this effect: That it was sufficiently manifest and well known in all parts of this kingdom, by many testimonies thereof in ancient registers and early histories, as well as by various Acts of Parliament, that the lairds of Mackintosh, from age to age, at least since Mackintosh married the only daughter of Gilpatric MacDugall vic Gillichattan, in the year 1291, have not only been esteemed and called, but also have always (until these fifty years last bypast) been designated captains of the Clan Chattan, in their titles, charters, instruments, and diplomas.

Secondly, all the most authentic and approved chroniclers of the Scots nation declare Mackintosh captain and chief of the Clanchattan. First, Leslie, in the ninth book of De Gestis Scotorum, says the Clanchattan tribe was commonly called Mackintoshiana from Mackintosh the chief, etc.; and in his tenth book, he calls William Mackintosh captain of the Clanchattan. Second, Buchanan also, in the sixteenth book of Rerum Scoticarum, calls the same William chief of the Chattan family. Third, in all

3^{to}, In omnibus commissionibus et literis, a Dominis Privati Concilii, in Makintoshii gratiam, adversus Clanchamronos aliosque, concessis, Makintoshius, Clanchattanorum Princeps dicitur et designatur. 4^{to}, et quod majus est, Anno 1609, præcipua Clanchattanarum Familiarum Capita (et cum cæteris Andreas Makpherson a Cluny hujus, adhuc, inter vivos existentis avus), et fœdere & jurejurando, sese et posteros, Principem suum Makintoshium, adversus omnes (demptâ supremâ Authoritate et legitimis suis Dominis), sequi, tueri et succurrere, firmissimè Sygraphâ obligârunt (adhuc inter cæteras Makintoshii Chartas secura) prolixiore verborum serie declaratum exhibetur. Jam enim, si Makintoshius, se, Clanwurrichorum (qui, inter antiquissimas Clanchattanorum Familias, habentur) Genearcham non esse, autographo declararet, æquali jure, se nullatenus, residuarum Clanchattanarum Tribum et Familiarum Principem esse, testari, et, consequenter, jus suum hæreditarium renunciare potuit, quod, quantæ sibi suæque Familiæ ignominie foret et dedecori, quàmque universo Clanchattanorum Nomini ruinosum et lethale nemo (nisi amens) non videat. Si enim, inter ipsos prorumpi permetteretur animorum scissura aut separatio, hoc non modò, eos odiosos et omnibus contemptui habendos, verùm et ab invicem sejunctos omnibus vicinis in commissions and letters granted by the Lords of Privy Council in favour of Mackintosh, against the Clan Cameron and others, he is designated chief of the Clanchattan. Fourth, and what is more, in the year 1609, the heads of the families of the Clanchattan (and with the others Andrew Macpherson, grandfather of him who is still living), by compact and oath, most firmly bound themselves and their posterity, by a written bond (still preserved among the other charters of the Mackintosh) to follow, defend, and succour Mackintosh their chief against all, excepting the supreme authority and their rightful lords, as appears evident in a more extended narration. For, besides, if Mackintosh should declare by his own writ that he is not the chief of the Clan Vurrich (who are held to be among the most ancient of the families of the Clanchattan), by equal right he might testify that he was not chief of the other tribes and families of the Clanchattan, and consequently renounce his hereditary right, which would be so great an ignominy and disgrace to himself and his family as to prove ruinous and fatal to the whole name of the Clanchattan, which no one (unless he be crazy) looks for. Because, if they should give way to a rupture among themselves, the rending asunder of their minds would not only make them odious and hold them up to contempt to everybody, but also deliver them, when divided against each other, as a ready prey to all their neighbours. For, as a threefold cord is not soon cut asunder (Ecclesiastes iv. 12), so (as Christ says, Mark iii. 25) a house divided against itself cannot stand. The event of the lamentable distraction which arose among the tribes of Israel, in falling away from their lawful prince, is an example and admonition to all the families of the earth; and when the matter holds thus, it is matter of wonder what drives men to such shamelessness as to propose articles so foolish to be granted to them.

After giving this answer the aforementioned articles did not cause any further solicitude, for few or none of the Macphersons (except Andrew of Cluny and two others) approved of them.
Many, however (lest they should put any mark of disgrace upon Andrew), were resolved to leave the matter undetermined, rather than declare their dislike to these articles, until Mackintosh and Andrew should alight upon some more excellent way of coming to agreement

About this time, John Macpherson, tutor of Invereshie (who seemed not to favour these articles), proposed to abandon Andrew, and to lead all his tribe, commonly called Slighkean vic Ewin,

MAKINTOSHIUS, illatâ illi, hunc in modum a quibusdam ex suis cognatis, tantâ injuriâ, eorum præcipuos, pristinum illud fœdus (Anno 1609, ab omnibus Clanchattanarum Familiarum Familiarum Capitibus concessum) novâ reiterare solennitate per contari statuit.

HINC verò Alexander Makintosh a Connadus (qui, magnum semper, erga Genearcham, coluisse videbatur amorem, cujusque vestigiis cœteri, ut plurimum, insisterent) imprimis rogatus, planè et sine ullis verborum ambagibus, se, neque fœderi huic subscripturum, neque, quidpiam, in Makintoshii commodum and Slighkgillies (two families of the Clan Vurrich) into the service of Mackintosh, yea though Andrew was unwilling ; on this condition however, that William Mackintosh of Borlum should agree to sell to him the lands of Raits for the same price which he himself had given for them : which was a desire sufficiently unjust and impertinent.

Finding himself in this manner so much wronged by certain of his kinsmen, Mackintosh determined to require the chief men of them to renew with fresh solemnity that ancient bond (granted in the year 1609 by all the heads of the families of the Clanchattan). This bond was first presented to the Macphersons dwelling in Badenoch, who all (excepting the said Andrew of Cluny and his near friends, who were not asked to do this duty) were ready to confirm the offered bond with their subscriptions, provided only the chief men of the name of Mackintosh would go before them in that matter. Hereupon, Alexander Mackintosh of Connage (who seemed always to cherish great affection towards his chief, and in whose footsteps the rest would, for the most part, follow), was first asked. He openly, and without any circumlocution, professed that he would neither subscribe that bond, nor would he do anything tending to the advantage or profit of Mackintosh, aut utilitatem tendens, præstiturum, professus est, ni primò, patrum suum Æneam Makintosh, propriam Daviotæ Possessionem (agri nimirum, Davatam, præfato Æneæ, a Comite Murraviens, 7,000 minis depignoratam, cujus reversionem Connagius, privato, sed inimico, modo, coemendum curavit) renunciare, et, sibimet (usque quò Principalis Summa commodè haberetur) annus 7,000 mercarum reditû satisfacere, sollicitaret et persuaderet, illegitimus, re verâ, et, nullâ, vel rationis, vel humanitatis, umbrâ suffultus Rogatus, quem, Genearchæ in tantis, præsertim, versanti angustiis, proposuisse cognatum maximè dedicebat. Gulielmus Makintosh a Kylachi, ad fœdus suâ stabiliendum manû, advocatus, se nunquam (ni, Alexandrum Makintosh a Connadg præcedentem conspiceret) isti Syngraphæ suffragaturum respondit. Tertio, autem, loco accersitus Donaldus M^cQueen a Corribroch, se, neque illi Syngraphæ manus adhibiturum, neque, Makintoshio, in Coronide rebus Lochabriensibus imponendâ, auxiliaturum, inquit, ni, Gulielmum Makintosh a Kylachi, jus suum in agros de Ravokbeg (quod, tamen, mutuo, Gulielmi Makintosh a Kylachi et Æneæ Makqueen) Donaldi genitoris (consensui omnino contrarium erat, qui, prædictos agros, propter quandam pecuniarum Summam, eodem Gulielmo Kylachensi non diu antea oppignoravit) abdicare cogeret.

unless he would first solicit and persuade his uncle Angus Mackintosh to renounce his own possession of Daviot (that is to say the davach of land wadset by the Earl of Moray to the said Angus for 7000 merks, of which Connage had in a private, but unfriendly way, bought the reversion), and to satisfy him for the annual rent of 7000 merks: an unlawful demand truly, and supported by no shadow of reason or humanity, greatly becoming a kinsman to offer to his chief, especially when in such difficulties. William Mackintosh of Kylachy, on being called to subscribe the bond with his hand, replied that he would never do so until he should see Connage going before him in that matter. But in the third place, Donald Macqueen of Corribroch being called he said he would neither put his hand to that document, nor assist Mackintosh in accomplishing his designs in Lochaber unless he would force William Mackintosh of Kylachy to resign his right to the lands of Ravochbeg (which was, nevertheless, altogether contrary to the mutual agreement of William Mackintosh of Kylachy, and Angus Macqueen, father of Donald, who not long before wadset the aforesaid lands to the same William of Kylachy for a certain sum of money).

MAKINTOSHIUS, datis hisce, a suis amicis, (qui, non acceptâ mercede, Phylarchum minimè comitari determinant) tam ridiculis et nullam rationem redolentibus Responsis, maximâ incaluit indignatione. Verùm, residuos suos amicos et cognatos semel rogatos Syngraphum signaturos, et, difficilem rerum ipsius conditionem, proprio mentis intuitû perpensuros, pro persuaso habens, nullum ulteriorem, in saxo volvendo, facere progressum decrevit, nullus dubitans quin tandem aliquando Deus Opt. Max. suos cognatos, mitigatâ paulatim eorum asperitate, mitiore donaret Mentis Dispositione, quod postea etiam ex animi sententiâ evenit. In Conventû enim, inter Makintoshium nonnullosque ex suis amicis prope Templum Kincairnense in Strathspeiâ 29 Decembris Die 1664, habito, factum est ut omnes Nominis Catanei Generosi tunc temporis præsentés (præmemorato Alexandro a Connage, in propositâ sibi resolutione firmiter persistente, excepto), in Makintoshii, adversus Clanchameronos, subsidium, subsequente Vere, assurgere strictis sese obligârunt vinculis. Huic Conventui Andreas Makpherson a Cluny non aderat.

Mackintosh was greatly incensed by these answers given by his friends (who were determined not to accompany their chief without a reward) so ridiculous and void of all reason. But being persuaded that the residue of his friends and kinsmen would sign the bond as soon as they were desired to do so, and that they would in a better state of mind consider the difficult position of his affairs, he concluded to advance no further in the way of rolling the stone, not doubting but that, when their asperity was by degrees mitigated, God would at length give to his kinsmen a milder frame of mind; which afterwards came to pass according to his wish. For, in the meeting held near the church of Kincairn in Strathspey, on 29th December 1664, between Mackintosh and many of his friends, it so happened that all the gentlemen of the Chattan name then present (excepting the aforementioned Alexander of Connage, who firmly persisted in his resolution) bound themselves by the strictest obligations to rise in the following spring to the help of Mackintosh against the Clan Cameron. Andrew Macpherson of Cluny was not present at this meeting.

On discovering that Andrew Macpherson and Alexander Mackintosh of Connage were (as it seemed) joined as if in conspiracy,

CONTUMELIOSUM hoc et sceleratum Clanchamronorum facinus, usque adeo, Makintoshii mentis quietem, novo curarum accessû, disruptit ut, vel illatam injuriam ulciscendi, vel, saltem, utramque Tribum, Catanam, sc. et Cameronam, sanguine semel effuso, in Bellum provocandi, consilium inire constituit. In cujus rei prosecutionem, viginti strenuos juvenes, in Lochabriam, ut, si fieri possit, nonnullos, ex præcipuis Clanchamronorum in ejus Commissione commemoratorum, apprehenderent, legavit. Hi enim, cum duobus ex Adversariis forte fortunâ congressi, oppo- nentes hostes eodem loci interfecerunt.

His itaque occisis, emissa rediit Cohors. Interea temporis Comes Rothusius Regis Delegatus et Regni Cancellarius (quorundam Nobilium, Eveno Cameron a Lochield faventium rogatibus), Makintoshio Literas, quibus, Edinburgum, omni, quâ poterat, celeritate, accedere jubebatur, dirigendas curavit. Hisce, pariter, obtemperat et obsequitur. Verùm, cùm, illico, attempting, as much as they could, to disturb by all means, and to obstruct by every obstacle, the affairs of Mackintosh, the Clan Cameron resolved to turn this opportunity to their own advantage and gain, and molested the Clanchattan by wicked robberies, and unexpected plunderings, driving away their flocks and herds.

This shameful and wicked deed of the Clan Cameron so broke Mackintosh's peace of mind, that he determined to consult about avenging the wrong inflicted, or at least to stir up both clans to war, with the shedding of blood. In prosecution of which design he sent twenty strong youths into Lochaber that they might seize, if they could, some of the chief men of the Clan Cameron mentioned in his commission. They, therefore, having by chance met with two of the adversaries, who offered resistance, they slew them on the spot. After this slaughter the band returned.

In the meanwhile the Earl of Rothes, the king's commissioner and chancellor of the kingdom (at the request of certain of the nobles who favoured Ewen Cameron of Lochiel), caused letters to be directed to Mackintosh, by which he was ordered to come to Edin- burgh as speedily as he could. These he obeyed and complied with.

illuc pervenisset, procellosis recentium difficultatum et perplexitatum fluctibus agitabatur. Imprimis, per spatium bimestre, jubente Cancellario, detinetur. Deinceps, seriis efflagitabatur rogatibus ut, agros suos Lochabrienses vilissimo et despicabili pretio venderet (cui astipulari nullo modo voluit). MAKINTOSHIUS statim a regressû, suorum cognatorum animos, inviolabili sinceri amoris vinculo, sibimet agglutinare, vigentesque inter illos animositates, tenebroso perpetuæ oblivionis sippario involendas tradere, omnes ingenii nervos intendit, atque ita, Mensem Maium, Junium, Juliique nonnihil, transigit (quippe, datas sibi, a Cancellario discedenti, injunctiones in memoriam revocavit). Verùm, penitiori oculo, tristem rerum suarum statum perpendens, messisque tempora, solito

But, forthwith, when he came there he was tossed on the stormy waves of fresh difficulties and perplexities. First, by the chancellor's order, he was detained for the space of two months. Then he was importuned by urgent request to sell his lands in Lochaber at the lowest and most despicable price (to which he would on no account submit). In the third and last place, he was commanded to oblige all the Clanchattan people to behave themselves quietly and peaceably; which also, for weighty reasons, he refused; but at length he was prevailed upon to yield that his servants and tenants should bind themselves to submit to the law. Fourthly, he was enjoined not to disturb the peace, or, at least, not to raise any forces in the following summer. He was then permitted to return home.

On his return, Mackintosh immediately applied himself with all his energies to attach the minds of his kinsmen to himself, by the inviolable bond of sincere affection, and to give up all the animosities existing among them to be wrapped in the dark veil of perpetual oblivion, so that during the months of May, June and July he accomplished somewhat (for he called to mind the injunctions given to him when he was leaving the Chancellor). But on a deeper and deliberate view of the sad condition of his affairs, and observing that the harvest would come with tardier pace than

This his purpose he made known to some, as it were in a corner (for he was, doubtless, afraid that hindrances and delays would come). It was not, however, kept so secretly but that it came to the ears of some of his kinsmen. William Mackintosh of Kylachy and Alexander Mackintosh of Connage were believed to be the promulgators of this design. For they were not at that time actuated by such good-will towards Mackintosh as they ought, and busied themselves to oppose his determined purpose. Wherefore they betrayed it to the Earl of Moray, and devised this crafty plot, that is to say, that the Earl of Moray (as Sheriff Principal of Inverness) should in the same month of August hold courts by turns in Strathspey, Badenoch, Stratherrick, Abertarf, Urquhart, and Glenmoriston, and that he should summon the whole vassals of the Chattan name to attend upon him as his guards. By these means, therefore, they had no doubt they would prevent the expedition resolved on by Mackintosh into Lochaber.

Mackintosh, observing that all these things were perpetrated for no other purpose but to obstruct his intention, attempted to dis-

Whereupon they both prepared to carry out their proposed expeditions; and on the 10th of August 1665, the Earl of Moray set out from Darnaway, and Mackintosh from Moy in Strathspey.

All the vassals of the Earl of Moray, with one man well trained in arms, from each plough of land, accompanied their superior. But all the rest of the Clanchattan, dwelling in Strathearn and Strathnairn, together with the people of Lerchardell and Lerbendchar, rose to the help of their chief. The Earl of Moray charged all the people of Badenoch to come to keep the courts; and in this way he, with advisers (cunningly enough and foxlike), applied themselves with all their heart to throw in all the delays they could to hinder Mackintosh from carrying out his purpose, and to draw back others who were of a mind to rise to his assistance. But men oppose themselves in vain to those whom the Divine Goodness succours. Notwithstanding all these oppositions which came between, and although the people of Badenoch, Petty and Mar (excepting only William Farquharson of Inverey, with twenty-five active men following him) did not at that time rise to strengthen the party of Mackintosh, yet at his first muster at the Church of Inch he selected about four hundred men of resolute mind, and with the same number, though no others should come to his help, he steadfastly resolved to march into Lochaber before he would put off or lay down the arms then taken up.

In the meantime John Grant of Rothemurchus, William Forbes of Skeleter, John Mackintosh of Fertyn, George Farquharson of Brochderg, with their retainers to the number of eighty brave men unexpectedly joined themselves to him to assert and vindicate his cause.

Those gentlemen of the Clanchattan name who went as guards to the Earl of Moray, when they saw the laird of Mackintosh so fixed in his resolution, and that he had made such progress in that affair that he could not without dishonour now lay down arms without having done any notable deed; and that the blame (if any should be incurred in the business) would deservedly be imputed to them—moved, I say, by these considerations, they judged it opportune and convenient first of all to bring the earl and Mackintosh to a more friendly intimacy, and also that both parties should declare their minds to one another in a more becoming and suitable manner (William Mackintosh of Kylachy and Alexander Mackintosh of Connage were able to rule the earl in this matter as they pleased), which being accomplished they determined to concur with their chief in advancing the design which he had undertaken. They accordingly met with Mackintosh, and promised faithfully that they would defend and maintain him in bringing all his affairs to an honourable end, provided that he allowed himself to be ruled by the advice and counsel of his friends.

This request of theirs he promised to perform in all things during the time of that expedition, if only they were all unanimous in the same opinion, and would abstain from putting a price on his Lochaber lands, and the more readily to expedite their begun engagement, they appointed a meeting to be held between the Earl of Moray and Mackintosh on the 17th of August (for hitherto though dwelling in the same country they had not seen each other). When the meeting took place the Earl of Moray and Mackintosh conferred together a long time in the most amicable manner. On the following day, the Earl of Moray faithfully promised that when these courts of Badenoch were finished he would himself depart, and permit all his vassals of the Clanchattan name to go with Mackintosh into Lochaber.

In the meantime some friends were endeavouring to bring Mackintosh and Andrew Macpherson of Cluny to a friendly agreement. At length Andrew promised to give due assistance to Mackintosh, on this condition, however, that is to say, if he would persuade William Mackintosh of Kylachy to give up his heritable right to the estate of Farr in his favour, for the same price which Alexander Mackintosh (uncle of said William) paid for it. For the better understanding of this matter, it is to be observed that this half davach land of Farr was formerly possessed by a certain Angus Macpherson (sprung from the Brin family), who having exhausted his means, and having no farther right to the place remaining to him but the mere possession of the land, sold his birthright of the place (commonly called Duchis) to Alexander Mackintosh (uncle of the said William), for five hundred merks money, and twenty pounds to be paid to him yearly during his own lifetime. Alexander gave 1000 pounds of Scots money to the Earl of Moray for possession and life rent of the same land, but 500 merks to the laird of Calder for the sake of acquiring the teinds. William Mackintosh of Kylachy, on the death of Alexander, his uncle, succeeding as heir to him, gave a large sum (in name of grassum) to the Earl of Moray to obtain a new right to the lands; and a few years before the expiry of the lease thereof, he acquired them in heritable fee. But now, Andrew Macpherson of Cluny, judging that it would be very advantageous to Mackintosh in this expedition, if himself, with others of his clansmen, should afford their help, refused to rise with Mackintosh unless he prevailed upon William Mackintosh of Kylachy to renounce in his favour that part of his heritage, namely Farr, for a sum equivalent only to that which was paid to the Earl of Moray for the fee of the land; to ask which was, indeed, the last degree of unkindness and injustice. William Mackintosh of Kylachy would in no wise yield to grant this request. Thus frustrated in his expectation, Andrew, by his mediator, Alexander Mackintosh of Connage, endeavoured to find out whether Mackintosh would give him a bond for a hundred pounds sterling (O how need compels!) as a reward for his labours. In regard to this proposal, Mackintosh was at first very much in doubt, considering that Andrew of Cluny was his kinsman, dependor, and vassal; but he was induced by some of his principal friends then present to give his consent, that Andrew might not be left behind while matters stood as they were; and they, that is, the friends, promised to relieve Mackintosh of the payment of this sum on their return.

Illinc enim Comes, se, Satellitium suum, in Makintoshii stipationem, 24 Augusti Die, remissurum, ipsumque, cymbâ, ab Abirtarfia in Auldowriam, transiturum, fideliter promisit. Novum hoc et recens Comitibus Morraviensis consilium (utut blandâ fucatum Apologiâ), Makintoshio minimè placuit, illi, tamen, acquiescere oportuit, atque ita, vigesimo quinto Augusti Die, Makintoshius (agmini illi, ab Abirtarfâ expectato, occursurum se sperans), in Parochiam Lagganensem progredi orditur. Mackintosh, while yielding to their wishes, stipulated that the fulfilment of the bargain should be put off until they had approached within one day's march of Lochaber. This conference between Mackintosh and Andrew Macpherson was held in the place commonly called Shichynnich, on 21st August 1665.

At this season some slaughter took place between some of Lord Macdonald's dependers and the people of Inverness, which afforded occasion to the Earl of Moray to change his former purpose (of returning home from Brae Badenoch), and making his journey into Abertarf. For from thence he had faithfully promised to send back his guard on the 24th of August to attend on Mackintosh, and that he himself would pass over by boat from Abertarf to Aldourie. The same night (as was concluded) he went on towards Abertarf. This new and fresh design of the Earl of Moray (although coloured with a lame apology) did not please Mackintosh, yet it behoved him to acquiesce thereto; and so, on the 25th of August, Mackintosh began to march into the parish of Laggan (hoping to meet with that company expected from Abertarf). But he had no word brought to him from them this whole time, at which he was very much troubled, especially when he considered that not VIGESIMO sexto Die Clanwurrichi (tunc Makphersoni dicti), seipsos coram Makintoshio, Andreas Makpherson a Cluny illiusque Familia, ad Septentrionale fluvii Speyensis latus, Slighkean vic Ewin, et Slighk Gillies vic Ewin (in eâdem simul Cohorte) ad Australem aquæ partem (pari utrinque numero, putà, centum et viginti) quaquaversum lustrârunt. Sub hoc tempus Carolus Farquharson a Monaltry (cum duodecim ex suis Sectatoribus, strenuissimis viris), Makintoshio sese adjunxit.

VIGESIMO septimo Augusti Die Makintoshius, Epistolas a Comite Morraviensi et ab iis suorum Cognatorum qui ex Comitibus Satellitio erant, ad se ipsum missas, illos non promissis stetisse excusantes, et, magnâ cum animi vehementiâ, efflagitantes ut, quandoquidem nota nonnulla, ad Comitibus manus modò pervenissent, Makintoshii et honorem et utilitatem, ut præ se Literæ ferebant, respicientia, ideo ut, ad Stratharrick usque privata comitatû, Populi sui residuo et impedimentis, Badeonly had the Earl of Moray promised, but also William Mackintosh of Kylachy and Alexander Mackintosh of Connage had given their word, confirmed by great oaths, that (if they were well) they would come back on the 24th of August.

On the twenty-sixth day the Clan Vurrich (then called Macphersons), Andrew Macpherson of Cluny and his family, at the north side of the water of Spey, Slighkean vic Ewin, and Slighk Gillies vic Ewin (together in one company) at the south side of the water (both being of an equal number, that is, one hundred and twenty) from every quarter mustered before Mackintosh. At the same time Charles Farquharson of Monaltry with twelve of his followers, very able men, joined with Mackintosh.

On the 27th day of August, Mackintosh received letters sent to him from the Earl of Moray, and from those of his kinsmen who were of the earl's guard, excusing themselves for not standing to their promises, and with great earnestness entreating him, that whereas some notes had just come to the earl's hand, concerning both the honour and advantage of Mackintosh, as the letters themselves showed, that, therefore, he would deign to come down to Stratherrick with a private convoy to hear the things which were to be spoken, leaving the rest of his people nochæ, usque quò regrederetur, relictis, ad ea, quæ dicenda erant, auscultanda, descendere dignaretur, recepit. Desiderium hoc, Makintoshii animum, recenti curarum fluctû, molestè dis-cruciavit, qui, amicis suis, tunc temporis, præventibus, quid in tali casû præstitû utilius esset, consultis, Epistolam, omni, quâ possent, celeritate, Gulielmo Makintosh a Kylachy et Alexandro Makintosh a Connadg, cœterisque amicis Stratharrick tunc commorantibus (fama enim erat discessisse Comitem Morravi-ensem), quanta, si Makintoshius Stratharrick proficisceretur, secutura essent incommoda, commonstrantem, destinandam concludere. Namque, si, eâ tempestate, suas a tergo copias relinquendas statueret, hoc, præterquam quod, eorum incessui ingenti foret objici, maximas enim hactenus et longas satis per-tulerant moras, etiam vulgo, eorum Ducibus Stratharrick cum Makintoshio existentibus, a Signis suis discedendi (instante jam Autumno) ansam præberet. Quapropter (si quicquam alicujus momenti aut ponderis, ad præsens negotium pertinens, dicendum esset), illud vel scripto vel nuncio impertiri rogavit. Epistola hæc, magnâ cum promptitudine, legata est, et, immi-nente jam sequentis Diei tempore vespertino, Lauchlanus Mak ab Abirardor et Donald M^oIntosh ab Auldour, cum, missæ Epistolæ responsione accesserunt. Secunda etiam hæc Epis-and baggage in Badenoch until his return. This demand grievously tormented the soul of Mackintosh with a fresh flood of cares; and having consulted with his friends then present as to what was best to be done in such a case, they concluded that a letter should be directed, with all speed, to William Mackintosh of Kylachy and Alexander Mackintosh of Connage, and the other friends then remaining in Stratherrick (for there was a report that the Earl of Moray had gone away) showing what inconveniences would follow if Mackintosh went to Stratherrick. For if he should leave his forces at that time behind him, besides proving a hindrance to their march (for they had already endured many and long delays) it would also afford occasion to the rank and file, their leaders being with Mackintosh in Stratherrick, to desert their colours, the harvest being just at hand. Wherefore, if there was anything to be said of any moment or weight pertaining to the present business, he requested that it might be imparted either by writing or by messenger. This letter was sent with great promptitude, and forthwith on the next day in the evening Lauchlan Mackintosh of Aberardor and Donald Mackintosh of Aldourie came with an answer to the letter sent. This second tola, Makintoshium Stratharrick adire, non minore quam antea fervore, urgebat, ubi Morraviæ Comes, ex consilio, Makintoshii adventum expectabat, habitumque præ manibus negotium, illius labore dignum esse, et, si, illius animo non satisfactum esset, omnes tunc Comitibus assectatores, Makintoshium, in Lochabriam usque, ante regressum, concomitatos certificabat. Quamobrem, Stratharricam, et ex inde Lochabriam, cum omnibus suis copiis, exercitibus et impedimentis, aliisque id genus necessariis, iter facere determinat, atque, vigesimo nono Augusti Die, castra a Kylarchill (Brebadochensi villulâ) removet, et in Stratharrick progreditur. Pauci, tamen, Clanwurrichorum (dempto Cluny, nonnullisque, ex præcipuis amicorum suorum, Generosis) cum Makintoshio Stratharrick profecti sunt. Quippe, Clanwurrichi, tam subitaneum minimè sperabant incessum, ideoque, viatici nihil Brebadochiam adduxerunt. Ast, sese omnibus suppeditatos necessariis, quamprimum vocarentur, secuturos, polliciti sunt.

Eâ nocte Makintoshius, Killennæ in Stratharrick castra posuit. Succedente vero Die, in Stratharrick umbilicum expansis Insignis profectus est, atque, conscriptis nongintis inconcussi animi viris (non numeratis impedimentorum custodibus) in loco Delchapel appellato Tentori locavit. Ultimo letter also, with no less warmth than before, urged Mackintosh to go to Stratherrick, where the Earl of Moray was, of purpose, expecting his arrival; and certified beforehand that the business treated of was worth his trouble, and if it did not prove to his satisfaction, then all the followers of the earl would, before his return, accompany Mackintosh into Lochaber. Wherefore he resolved to march to Stratherrick with all his forces, men and baggage and other necessaries of that kind, and from thence to Lochaber; and on the 29th day of August he removed his camp from Kylarchill (a small town of Brae Badenoch) and advanced into Stratherrick. Few, however, of the Clan Vurrich (except Cluny and some special gentlemen of his friends) went with Mackintosh to Stratherrick. For the Clan Vurrich did not expect so sudden a march, and therefore had brought no provisions to Badenoch. But they promised that they themselves, with all needful supplies, would follow as soon as they were called.

and encamped in a place called Delchapel. On the last day of August, Kylachy, Connage, Aberardor and both the Corribrochs were sent by the Earl of Moray to Mackintosh and his friends, that with all diligence they should inculcate upon them the manifold toils and disadvantages which for the most part accompanied wars; that, without doubt, the effects of war are pernicious and fraught with loss; the event dangerous as well as uncertain, and that war is sweet only to the inexperienced; that although the friends of Mackintosh should contend along with him in one expedition, in a short time they would be wearied with disgust of the toils of warfare; and that it was far better not to despise a good price offered before undertaking war than to go back from a war began, after suffering various losses (and perhaps not without dishonour); and that they were sent to make known to Mackintosh and his friends, that the Earl of Moray would willingly oblige himself for a hundred thousand merks as an equivalent price for all the Lochaber lands of Mackintosh, and would find a sufficient surety for that effect. This discourse was delivered with such gravity and earnestness, that some of the friends of Mackintosh then present thought he should not reject the price offered. Others, however, were wholly of a contrary erant. Verùm ipse Makintoshius (qui, post missas ad se tam importunas, tot tamque seriis rogatibus usque adeo fartas Epistolas, magni aliquid sperabat), auditâ pretii vilitate, haud parum excanduit, dixitque se nunquam tali fuisse animo, neque ullam coegisse illum necessitatem, totis suis agris Lochabrien-sibus se penitus exuere, ne, si tale unquam cogitasset, se nullatenus adeo despicibili pretio eosdem venditurum asseruit.

JAM animadvertere oportet hanc, Comitum Moraviae, praememorati pretii oblationem, in Argatheliae Comitum utilitatem factam fuisse (praestita, quippe, est Comiti, in hunc finem, securitas, famulusque Comitum Argatheliae cum eo, Makintoshii responsum expectans, morabatur). Cùm autem, Connagius, Aldourius, caeterique omnes cum hac Legatione missi, se, in hoc puncto, nullo modo, prevalere posse comperirent, Evenum Cameron a Lochield, quorundam Dierum intervallo, armorum cessationem Scriptis implorasse, eandemque concedi, Comitum Moraviae suffragium ac desiderium fuisse patefecerunt et testati sunt. Makintoshius, eorum rogatui calculum, imprimis, addere renuit. Quippe, armorum intercapedinem largiri, hostis commodo et utilitati futurum aiebat. opinion. But Mackintosh himself (who, after so many letters sent to him, filled full with such importunate and earnest requests, hoped for something great) was not a little angry on hearing the low price offered, and declared that he never was inclined, neither would any necessity force him to part wholly with his lands of Lochaber, but if he should ever think of such a thing, he avowed he would on no account sell them for so despicable a price.

It ought now to be observed that this offer by the Earl of Moray of the aforementioned price was made on behalf of the Earl of Argyll (for security was offered to the earl to that effect, and Argyll's servant was then staying with him expecting Mackintosh's answer). But when Connage, Aldourie, and the others sent with that message found that they could by no means prevail in that point, they testified that Ewen Cameron of Lochiel had earnestly requested, in writing, a cessation of arms for the space of some days, and showed that it was the Earl of Moray's opinion and desire. Mackintosh at first refused to give his consent to their request, because, he said, to grant an intermission of arms would be to the advantage and gain of the enemy; for by such a concession there would be more time and leisure to supply requisitis suppeditandos, haberetur; Nullum unquam cessationem (nisi impetratoris commodum) impetratum fuisse; Deinde, hanc cessationis largitionem, Populos suos fatigaturam, eosque (exorsâ hactenus messe), a castris recedere coacturam, nec non, dedecori sibi futurum si non adhuc appulsis Lochabriæ finibus cessationem accommodaret. Hisce amici replicârunt, hoc, non tàm in hostis, quàm in suum commodum, cessurum, præsertim cùm, Populos suos, spatio jam menstruali a mansionibus absentes (eorum, saltem, nonnullos, domum regredi, victûs aliorumque apparatusum accercendorum gratiâ, oportebat) omnesque illos, Comitem Morraviensem attendentes, præterquam quod, Dominum suum domum comitari necesse erat, nulla viaticorum (usque quò aliunde supplerentur habuisse genera, quartamque Populi partem) subitanæ excitationis annique temporis respectû (domi fuisse, qui, intra 8 Dierum spatium, in Bellum adduci posset, etiamque) totius Nominis præcipuis unamiffuffragio Lochabriam proficiscentibus (vulgum, Signis vel abesse, vel recedere, haudquaquam ausurum, tantumque abfuisse ut ullum, largiendâ cessatione pateretur dedecus, quin magno potiùs exinde frueretur commodo, quippe, the enemy and his people with all requisites: no cessation was ever asked for, but to the advantage of those who asked for it; and then the granting of this cessation would weary his people, and (the harvest being now begun) would force them to go back from the camp; also, it would be a dishonour to him if he should agree to a cessation when the bounds of Lochaber were not yet reached. To these objections the friends replied that it would not be so much to the enemy's advantage as to his own, especially when his people, having already been absent from their homes for a month (at least some of them) behaved to return home for the sake of procuring victuals and other provisions; and those who were attending the Earl of Moray, besides being bound to convoy their lord home, had no kind of provisions until they should be otherwise supplied; and the fourth part of the people, in respect of the sudden rising, and the time of the year, were at home, and could be brought to the war within the space of eight days: and, besides, all the chief men of the name being of one mind to go forward to Lochaber, the common people would in no wise dare to be absent, or to desert the colours; that there would not appear to be any dishonour in granting a cessation, but rather a great advantage would thereby accrue, because then the tunc exercitus, difficiles quosque et arduos aditus, adversus oppositos hostes, majori incolumitate transgrederetur, verisimileque fore unicam caussam cur Lochieldus, tantâ aviditate, armorum intercapedinem anhelabat, fuisse, ut benevoli amici, majori facilitate, semet, utriusque partis tumultibus sedandis interponerent. Argumenta ista usque adeo profecerunt ut, Makintoshium, ab ultimo Augusti, in undecimum Septembris Diem, illiusque Diei Horam duodecimam, cessationem largiri aduxerunt.

LOCHIELDUS etiam, ea tempestate, amicis quibusdam inter partes tutò et sine periculo de re agitatâ conferendi licentiam conciliavit. Hæc enim Libertas, sex, quoscunque nominare libuerit, amicis (si modò, nullos præter famulos suos domesticos secum opportarent) concessa est. Hæc, tamen, cessationis, conditio, a Lochieldo (ut in progressû clarè patebit) turpissimè violata est. Rebus ita procedentibus, Makintoshius, Comiti Morravienensi valedixit, qui, cùm, oblatum pro agris Lochabriensibus pretium, Makintoshium respuisse percepisset, indignabundus, omnes suos Clientes Clanchattanei Nominis, ac si eos non redituros permitteret, secum adduxit.

army might advance with more safety through the difficult and dangerous passes against the opposing enemies; and it was very likely that the sole cause why Lochiel sought with such anxiety an intermission of arms was that well-meaning friends might with the greater facility interpose for settling the feuds of both the parties. These arguments prevailed with Mackintosh so far as to lead him to grant a cessation from the last of August to the 11th of September, and the twelfth hour of that day.

Lochiel also, at that time, got licence for some friends to confer between the parties, safely and without danger, concerning the matter in dispute. This liberty was accordingly granted to any six friends he pleased to name (providing only that they should bring with them none but their household servants). This condition of the cessation was, however, most shamefully violated by Lochiel (as will clearly appear in due course).

When matters were thus going forward, Mackintosh took farewell of the Earl of Moray, who, when he saw that Mackintosh had rejected the price offered for the lands of Lochaber, was very indignant, and took away with him all his vassals of the Clanchattan name, as if he would not allow them to return. But they promised faithfully to Mackintosh, secretly, that they would by no persuasion be absent, but would most certainly betake themselves to him, to whatever place he called them, on the 7th of September.

Mackintosh moved his camp on the 2nd of September from Delchapel and marched to Garten, and there encamped for two nights. From thence he sent some of his principal friends, and a large part of the people, for the purpose of bringing provisions, and sent away three companies, one to both sides of the river Findhorn, the other to the water of Nairn, towards Kilravok and Calder; and lastly, the third around by the water of Ness to Petty, and as far as to Ardersier and Delnes, to raise the Clanchattans of these places, who were either averse or had not as yet been warned, while he kept with himself only his uncle Lauchlan, Cluny, and Inverey, along with two hundred of the ablest of his men as a guard.

On the 4th of September he came to Gortuleg, on the fifth to Aberchallader, where he remained four days, until the rest of his forthcoming forces should come up. On the 6th of September he received a paper indited and subscribed by the Earl of Moray, commanding all his vassals to go to Darnaway on the seventh of that month, under a heavy penalty. This caused

Hoc, Makintoshio haud parvam creavit angustiam (quippe, Edictum istud, de industria, ut Makintoshio obstaculo esset, et, Populum, a debitis suppetiis conferendis, impediret, emissum est). Comes, interea, nullam sibi præstitam obedientiam, cunctosque suos Nominis Clanchattanei Clientes, fixo animo, semet, Makintoshio adjungere determinasse animadvertens, atque neque commodum sibi, neque tutum fore, Regiæ Majestatis Autoritati in propatulo opponere comperiens, resque ita gubernari ut nullus omnino effunderetur sanguis existimans (quippe, rumor erat, quosdam ex suis Clientibus, se, omni diligentia, præsens hoc negotium ita curare, ut, sine effuso sanguine, regressum facerent, allaboraturos pollicitos fuisse) priorem immutavit sententiam, Clientiumque suorum resolutioni favendi quoddam dedit specimen. Amicam nec non Epistolam, Makintoshio (ne quis de eo in suo pectore, inimicitiae suspiciones foveret, quippe, ille, omnia, ex animi sententia, in præsentis hoc negotio, cessura sincerè optabat) conscribendam curavit. In ipsissimo, tamen, hujus Epistolæ sinû includebatur alia, per Comitem Morraviæ (ut videbatur) a Comite Rothusiæ summo Regis Legato, impetrata, candido quasi et placido more petenti ut Makintoshius, a pace disturbandâ, usque quò ipse, Mackintosh no small difficulty (for that order was sent on purpose that it should be an obstacle to him, and prevent the people from bringing the assistance they owed). Meanwhile the earl, observing that no obedience was given to him, and that all his vassals of the Clanchattan name were determined, with fixed resolution, to join themselves to Mackintosh, and finding that it would be no advantage to himself, nor indeed safe, openly to oppose the King's Majesty's authority; and thinking that matters might be so ordered as entirely to avoid the effusion of blood (for the report was that certain of his vassals had promised that, with all diligence, they should labour that this present enterprise should be so guided that they should return without any bloodshed), changed his former purpose, and made some show of favouring the resolution of his vassals. He caused a friendly letter to be written to Mackintosh (that he should not harbour in his breast suspicions of enmity on his part, for in his heart he sincerely wished him success in his present undertaking). In the very bosom of this epistle, however, there was another, obtained by the Earl of Moray (as it seemed) from the Earl of Rothes, the King's High Commissioner, desiring, in a sort of friendly and gentle way, that Mackintosh should abstain from disturbing the peace until he himself should meet with him in conference, recalling to the memory of Mackintosh a pretended promise (to wit, that he would not rise against Lochiel that summer). But this letter was written in the month of August, which was a very strong and indubitable evidence that the letter was procured in the manner aforesaid, not seriously, but by request. For this reason he took care to keep it hidden from his friends, lest it should prove a hindrance in this present business. This letter was delivered to Mackintosh on the ninth day of September, when he was on his way to Glendoum, a town in the farthest part of Stratherrick, towards Lochaber. In that town he encamped two nights, and there another letter was delivered to him by the laird of Glenurchy, younger, requesting a new cessation of arms in favour of Lochiel, in order that some friends might meet together about the present controversy. But the answer of Mackintosh was to the effect, that he would be at Lagganachidrom, in the Lochaber country, on the twelfth day of that same month, where, if he pleased, he might enjoy the liberty of meeting with him.

Thus Mackintosh with his army sojourned for the space of thirteen days in Stratherrick with the greatest tranquillity of

On the 11th of September they removed from Glendo to Abertarf with displayed banners, and there Mackintosh having met with the forces coming from Badenoch according to his appointment, and those dwelling in Brae Lochaber, commonly called Slighkean Dui vik Ronald, he forthwith made choice in Kilwhimen of twelve hundred and sixty men of a brave spirit and unwavering courage (not reckoning two hundred and fifty soldiers, well furnished both in mind and body, and not slightly accoutred, destined for guarding the provisions and baggage); and that night he ordered his camp to be pitched in the town of Kyltire, where several ill-considered and unbecoming petitions were made by Andrew Macpherson of Cluny, of which some were refused, but others (not much to the prejudice of Mackintosh) were granted. There also a council of war was chosen and constituted, and all the forces reduced to regular command. Which being accomplished, and all disputes (that appeared to be among the Clanchattan) removed, they marched, without any disturbance

DECIMO quarto enim Die, per lucos Glastormorenses ad Clunes, villam Makintoshio propriam, gressus direxerunt. Quibus appropinquantibus, Lochieldus ejusque cognati et sectatores, sese cum suis bonis et omnigenis pecudum gregibus, in Australe fluvii Airkakensis latus, rivi ingentis, et, tunc, nullâ arte cymbâ, aut uno, duntaxat, vado, ab adversariis satis into Lagganachrom on the 12th of September. But on the thirteenth day the laird of Glenurchy met with Mackintosh and asked that some friends should be selected who might confer with him about the present controversy. Wherefore William Mackintosh of Borlum, Alexander Mackintosh of Connage, and Dougall Macpherson of Poury (who was believed to have come thither in order, if possible, to withdraw the Macphersons, or at least that he might earnestly strive that the bargain about the lands of Lochaber should be wholly to the advantage of Earl of Argyll) were appointed to take this business upon them. That day was almost entirely spent in conferences, but in vain, and nothing at all certain was concluded; only the laird of Glenurchy, by earnest entreaties, obtained a fresh cessation from arms in favour of Lochiel, until two o'clock in the afternoon of the following Saturday.

But upon the fourteenth day they took their way through the woods of Glastormore to Clunes, Mackintosh's own town; on whose approach Lochiel, his kinsmen, and followers withdrew themselves, with their goods and all their herds and flocks, to the south side of the water of Arkaig, a great water, and at that time not passable by any means but by boat or by the ford only, which munito, pertransibilis, proripuerunt, aquamque, inter sese et Makintoshii agmina, interfluentem, occupare decrevere.

JAM enim animadvertendum est Rivum Airkakensem (uno Milliari longum), e lacû, nomine Lochairkagg, per duodecim milliarium intervallum extenso, in alium lacum (nomine Lochlochi) dimanare, cùmque aqua hæc (uti dictum), nullo alio vado, unico duntaxat excepto, permeari nequeat, Makintoshium (cui nulla tunc temporis erat cymba), utrumque lacûs Airkakensis latus (viginti quatuor milliaria incedendo) circumdare oportebat priusquam, ad locum ubi fixa erant hostis Tentoria, adveniret. Re ita se habente, Clanchameroni (ut fama ferebat), si Makintoshius lacum circummearet, seipsos pecudumque greges, in Boreale aquæ latus transvehere determinârunt, atque, hâc arte, sese, Makintoshii agmina (usque quò totus consumeretur com-meatu) evitatuos sperabant. At Makintoshius (percepto eorum consilio) haud spernendam exercitûs partem, ad fluminis vadum muniendum, relinquere et, cum residuis copiis circummeare concludit. Quindecimus Dies, Colloquiis (observatâ, tamen, inter utramque partem, distantia) etiam impensus est.

was sufficiently guarded from the enemy; and they determined to keep the water flowing between themselves and the army of Mackintosh. For it should be observed that the river Arkaig (being one mile long) flows down from the loch called Loch-arkaig, extending over a distance of twelve miles, into another loch (named Lochloch), and as this water cannot be passed (as was said) by any other ford but one only, it behoved Mackintosh (who at that time had no boat) to compass about both sides of the loch of Arkaig (by marching twenty-four miles) before he could reach the place where the enemy were encamped. The position being so, the Clan Cameron (as was reported) were determined, if Mackintosh should go round the loch, to carry over themselves and their herds and flocks to the north side, and by this device they hoped to evade the army of Mackintosh until their whole provision should be consumed. But Mackintosh, perceiving their intention, concluded to leave no small part of his army to guard the ford of the river, and with the rest of his force to march round. The fifteenth day was also spent in conference (the distance between both parties being nevertheless maintained).

On the sixteenth day, Mackintosh of Borlum (who was one of those conferring) altogether deserted the others, because there senti negotio, quicquam efficiendi, concipiebat, penitus deseruit. Præterea quoque ille aliique duo, quoad res, de quibus colloquia instituebantur, idem sentire minimè credebantur. Borlum enim, Makintoshii tum honorem, tum utilitatem, præ oculis semper habebat. Puryus verò, Comitibus Argatheliæ rebus favebat, et quod ad Connagium attinet, etsi, Comitem Argatheliæ, Nominis Makintoshii decori et commodo longè posthabuit, quoddamque, illi a Makintoshio præmium prout velocibus famæ alis constantia vehebatur, pro hâc ejus in Lochabriam operâ pollicitum fuerit, tantæ illi, tamen, curæ erat Lochieldi utilitas, ut, eum et Makintoshium, amico concordiæ nexû ligare, etiamsi cum Makintoshii detrimento, obnixè laborare statuit. Derelictis (ut antea dictum) a Borlumio Interlocutoribus, eò, residuis duobus, fines suos exequendi minus restabat difficultatis. Quamobrem (cùm, Makintoshium, suam Caussam alacriter vindicaturum noverint) sedulò et sollicitè, maximam Concilii Bellici partem (præsertim, Clunium, qui, plerosque ex suis amicis in hoc Concilio sedentes habuit) in suam attrahere sententiam conati sunt. Prædicti decimi sexti Diei tempore matutino Connagius et Puryus (adducto secum Clunio) in seemed to him no hope of effecting anything in the present affair. Moreover, he and also other two were believed not to be of the same mind in regard to the precise matters about which the conferences were instituted. For Borlum ever had before his eyes as well the honour as the advantage of Mackintosh. But Poury favoured the interest of the Earl of Argyll; and as for Connage, although he held the Earl of Argyll in far less regard than the honour and advantage of the Mackintosh name, and as report was carried on swift wings that he had been promised by Mackintosh a reward for his trouble in going to Lochaber, yet the advantage of Lochiel was so cared for by him that he resolved to labour earnestly to bind him and Mackintosh in the friendly bond of concord, although to the detriment of Mackintosh. Those engaged in conference having been deserted by Borlum (as before stated), there remained the less difficulty to the other two to pursue their own ends. Wherefore (as they knew that Mackintosh would quickly vindicate his cause) they diligently and anxiously endeavoured to draw the greater part of the council of war (especially Cluny, who had many of his friends sitting in that council) to their opinion.

On the morning of the said sixteenth day, Connage and Poury (taking Cluny with them) went to meet with the laird of Glen-

Domini a Glenurchi et Hugonis Fraser a Foyer (qui ex parte Lochieldi interloquebantur) occursum iverunt. Interea temporis Makintoshius, copiis suis, Achnasavil versus incedendi jussa dedit. Arctissimi enim totius Lochabrie aditus, inter villas Clunes et Achnasavil interjacent. Hasce id ciro angustias, ante exactum vocationis tempus, transmeare determinat. Exercitus congruenter progreditur, et, ante elapsam primam temporis pomeridiani Horam, in Achnasavill appulerunt, ubi (refocillato victu Populo) Concilium conclamatum est. Clunius enim et uterque Interlocutor nuper a Colloquiis regressi, præcipuos Nominis Cattanei, iis, quæ dicturi erant, auscultandis, præsto fore cupiebant. Connagius, rupto silentio, omnes Interlocutorum transactiones, blandulo verborum lenocinio repræsentat, se, sc. omnibus omnino usos fuisse methodis, omnem, quam possent, navasse operam, quâ præsens Controversia, ad umbilicum (habitâ etiam Makintoshii utilitatis ratione) perduceretur, nullamque apparere futuræ concordie umbram, ni Makintoshius, agros suos, Glenluy et Lochairkagg vendendi firmum iniret consilium, ipsosque (etsi nullâ donatos libertate) emendi et vendendi leges iniisse, magnoque animi urchy and Hugh Fraser of Foyer (who were on the conference on Lochiel's behalf). In the meantime, Mackintosh gave orders to his forces to march towards Achnasavil. For the most difficult passes of all Lochaber lie between the towns of Clunes and Achnasavil. He resolved, therefore, to pass beyond these defiles before the time of the cessation was run out. The army accordingly went forward, and before the first hour after noon arrived at Achnasavil; where (the people having been refreshed with food) the council of war was called together. For Cluny and both the members of the conference, having just a little before returned from colloquy, were desirous that the chief men of the Chattan name might be present to hear what they were to say. Connage, breaking the silence, in bland and winning terms, showed all that had passed between those on the conference, to the effect that they had used all means, and made every effort they could, that the present controversy might be brought to a point (respect being always had to the advantage of Mackintosh), and that there appeared no prospect of future agreement unless Mackintosh would agree to advise about selling his lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig; and that they themselves (though without warrant given to them) had entered upon conditions of buying and selling, and had with great

MAKINTOSHIUS (cui nullum agrorum vendendorum fuerat consilium, et, licèt tale quicquam statuisset, infra octoginta Mercarum millia vendere se nunquam consensurum decrevit) auditâ hâc sermonis serie, retulit, se priùs, totam fortunam periculis subjecturum, quàm tali unquam astipularetur conditioni. Purius M^cPherson, quosdam ibi Generosos esse, qui (pensitatâ oblationis amplitudine), vitas suas, nullomodo, in hâc controversiâ, periclitarentur, respondit. Clunius M^cPherson (in hujus sermonis fulcrum et corroborationem), se, hostes, numero circiter octingentos aut nongentos, in ordinem militarem redactos, conspexisse, neque, ulli, prælia aggrediendi, eorem imbecillitatem argumento esse, aiebat. Quantum enim ad se spectabat (si oblatæ respuerentur conditiones), ipsum, ad hanc controversiam discutiendam, ne vel manibus gladium arrepturum novit. fervour of mind impressed upon Lochiel that he should offer at least 50,000 pounds; but that at length, after great difficulty, he could be brought no further than to give 72,500 merks; and had bound himself firmly, on his great oath, that he would risk all to the uncertain issues of war rather than yield.

Mackintosh (with whom there was no purpose of selling his land, and though he might resolve on such a thing, was determined never to consent to sell below 80,000 merks), on hearing this line of discourse, replied that sooner than agree to such a condition he would hazard his whole fortune. Poury Macpherson answered, that there were gentlemen there who (considering the largeness of the offer) would on no wise venture their lives in this quarrel. Cluny Macpherson (by way of support and confirmation of that speech) said that he had seen the enemy drawn out in military order, to the number of eight or nine hundred, and no one should venture into battle presuming on their weakness. So far as concerned himself (if the conditions offered were refused) he vowed that he would not take sword in hand to quell this quarrel. Donald Mackintosh of Aldourie and Donald M^cQueen of Corribroch bound themselves with the like vow. In like manner, Connage added, that although the army of Mackintosh was double that of Lochiel, yet he held it for certain that a great part of the people were destitute of provisions, and they could not, without meat and drink, go to war with an enemy ready to fight; and although the enemy were incapable of engaging in war, yet they could at their will avoid occasions of fighting, and so force their adversaries to retire with dishonour. Yea (that I may dismiss the subject in few words), all the rest of the gentlemen on the council, excepting only three who were of opinion that for the credit and honour of Mackintosh and his kinsmen more time should yet be spent for acquiring a larger price, observing that the people were in want of food, and finding in what mind Aldourie, Cluny, Connage, Corribroch, and Poury were upon this matter, considered it good to deliberate upon the price offered before any fighting took place. On hearing every one's particular opinion, Mackintosh, moved with great indignation, rose up and said that he had not the least doubt but that he should find as many of the name of Clanchattan then dwelling in Lochaber, ready and prepared to sustain his cause against the Clan Cameron, as would be able (with the help of God), in this present state of affairs, to carry

HÆC, Mackintoshii mentem, haud leviusculo disturbantium molestiarum cumulo circumquaque onerârunt. Suo, tamen, versans animo quandoquidem, tot, tantisque angustīis et cruciantibus perplexitatibus, in hâc primâ suâ expeditione, occurreret, verisimile fore in secundâ se majoribus occursurum, imò, et illos ex suis cognatis, quos, ob præstitum tunc obsequium, non leve manebat præmium, ipsum, maximis angustiarum fluctibus agitatum, deserturos, nec non, si hostes, sese, suasque pecudes tunc temporis subducerent, victûs indigentiam, tum sibi, tum suo Populo, manifestam dedecoris maculam aspergere out his desires to their destined end, in spite of the opposition of any persons whatever; and having thus spoken, he quickly drew himself up. The army marched forward thence half a mile, and that night encamped at the side of Locharkaig.

On the eighteenth day, the friends again met, and laboured to impress upon Mackintosh the many and harmful disadvantages of going on without provision, and that it would be far more to his advantage and his honour to agree to the aforementioned price than to return home with his main purpose undone; and they all promised that on his return they would provide of their own money 2500 merks to make up the sum of 50,000 pounds.

These things burdened the mind of Mackintosh with no light load of disturbing troubles from every quarter. Yet, when he considered that since in this his first expedition he had met with so many difficulties and cross purposes, it was very likely that, in the second, he should encounter greater: yea, also, that those of his kinsmen, who had no light reward awaiting them for the service then rendered, were about to desert him amidst the heaviest floods of difficulties, and that, if the enemy at that time should withdraw themselves and their cattle, the want of supplies would cast a manifest stain of dishonour both upon himself and his people; and that the yearly rent of the sum promised by Lochiel, as well as the condition proposed by his friends, would yield to him a greater emolument than any other revenue of the lands that could be hoped for by himself or his posterity therefrom, he resolved, though with great reluctance, to yield to the opinion of his friends, and to accept (though against his will) the offered price.

That night Mackintosh, with his people, withdrew by the space of half a mile, and pitched their camp near the island of Locharkaig; and on the 19th of September they marched to Clunes, where (after the discussion of various matters relating to the present business) a contract was written out, and subscribed by both parties, whereby Mackintosh was bound to sell the lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig to Lochiel, or to any other person to be afterwards named by him; while Lochiel straitly obliged himself and six of his principal friends, under penalties of large amount, to pay to Mackintosh the sum of 12,500 merks (part of the price of the lands sold), on the 12th of January next, within the town of Perth: also, on the same day, to find sufficient security for the remainder of the amount (to the full satisfaction of whatever six men should be nominated by Mackintosh), and that the terms of payment should be the feasts of Martinmas of the years 1666 and 1667 respectively.

Hoc inter Makintoshium et Lochieldum Fœdus, multorum, qui (prosperæ et amplæ Clanchattanorum fortunæ æmulantes, scelestamque Clanchameronorum in latrocinia propensionem odio habentes), talem inter eos congressum, qui, in utriusque

On the 20th of September 1665, Lochiel, having passed over the water of Arkaig, Mackintosh and he met together in the village of Clunes, accompanied on each side with twenty-four of the chief men of their kinsmen, and conversed and drank with each other in a friendly manner; and when separating they exchanged swords, in token of sincere reconciliation, thus wiping out (as seemed probable) that original and very ancient hatred, which had lasted with great fierceness and cruelty between their ancestors for the space of three hundred and sixty years. In the afternoon of that day, Mackintosh with his army marched from Clunes village to Lagganachdrom, where, after various demonstrations of friendship, the forces of Badenoch and Mar bade farewell to Mackintosh and the other friends, and so this faithful little army was auspiciously and peacefully dismissed.

This agreement between Mackintosh and Lochiel disappointed the hope of many who (emulous of the prosperous and great fortune of the Clanchattans, and holding in hatred the wicked propensity of the Clan Cameron to robbery) were wishful of such a conflict between them as might tend to the destruction of both,

ILLI etiam, quorum Majoribus (rerum arctarum perplexitatum pelago circumquassatis) sæpe sæpius favebant et auxiliabantur Domino a Makintosh, ut in præcedentibus hisce pagellis clarum est, quique, hâc vice, in, grati animi testimonio edendo defecerunt (ut Mackenzii, Grantei, aliique), suum jam errorem deprehendere aggrediuntur, suæque ingratitude pœnitere cœperunt.

MENSE Januario Anni 1666, Makintoshius, sex ex sui Nominis primis comitatus, Pertham, ut, icti inter ipsum et Lochieldum Fœderis Capita ritè adimpleta videret, profectus est. Verùm Lochieldus, qui, toto hoc tempore, Comitum Argatheliæ utilitati inhiabat, nondum apparuit. Sed Dominum a Glenurchi juniorem (ut ejus excusaret absentiam, aliumque Conventum Edinburgi, Mense Februario inde subsequuturo, habendum, statueret) misit. Quod etiam effectum est, ubi, post varias ortas et discussas contentiones, Pactum de agris and gave occasion of repentance to others, who (fearing that both clans, if once blood was shed, would wage perpetual war) withdrew their help, and so behaved themselves unkindly towards Mackintosh. Those also whose ancestors (when tossed on every side in a sea of straits and perplexities) were again and again favoured and helped by the laird of Mackintosh, as is evident in these foregoing pages, and who on this occasion failed to give any token of gratitude (as the Mackenzies, Grants, and others), began now to discover the error they had fallen into, and to repent of their ingratitude.

In the month of January 1666, Mackintosh, accompanied with six chief men of his name, went to Perth that he might see the chief points of the agreement come to between himself and Lochiel duly fulfilled. But Lochiel, who was all the time looking eagerly to the interests of the Earl of Argyll, did not as yet appear. But he sent the laird of Glenurchy, younger, that he might excuse his absence, and appoint another meeting to be held at Edinburgh in the month of February then following. Which also was done, and here, after various contentions that had arisen were discussed, the bargain anent the lands of

Ad Festum Pentecostes ejusdem Anni Makintoshius, Summâ viginti mille Mercarum solatâ, agros suos Brelochabrienses, e manibus Æneæ Domini Maakdonald redemit. Mense Septembris 1666, cædis nonnihil, inter quosdam Nominis Gordonii et Farquharsonorum Bremarrensium, commissum est, quod, Makintoshio nonnullam creavit molestiam. Glenluy and Locharkaig was, before the 24th of March in the year 1666, concluded, and brought at last to the end desired, and that to the greatest satisfaction of Mackintosh.

At Whitsunday of the same year, Mackintosh redeemed his lands of Brae Lochaber from the hands of Eneas, Lord Macdonald, for the sum of 20,000 merks.

In September 1666, some slaughter was committed between certain of the name of Gordon and the Farquharsons of Braemar which caused some trouble to Mackintosh; in fact, unless the matter had been prudently dealt with, and the door closed in good time against further mischief, it might have drawn both families into worse misdeeds. The affair happened thus:

John Gordon of Breachly, having received from the town council of Aberdeen warrant to punish those who killed salmon in the water of Dee in the time forbidden by law (that is, between 15th of August and 30th of November), fined some of the name of Farquharson, and their tenants, in a strict and inhumane manner; and on the 15th day of the month aforesaid (having called together a band of his clients and followers) he beset certain of the Braemar people on the highway as they were returning from the market held at Kirriemuir, in Angus, and viâ tritâ, obsidendos curavit, atque (flagellatis eorum aliis) illegitimo more, ab iis 16 aut 18 Equos pignore arripuit.

DECIMO septimo memorati Mensis Die, Johannis Farquharson ab Inverey (eorum fere omnium, præfatâ prædatione molestatorum Dominus), ipsissimis Equorum arreptorum heris, aliisque suorum amicorum, associatus, ad Nundinum Tullichense, milliaris intervalla, a prædicti Gordonii Breachliensis ædificio, distans, muniendum, descendit, et, inter eundem, Nuncium Breachlio legavit rogatem ut (quandoquidem memorata Pignoratio illicita fuerat, nonnullique ex Equis arreptis, ad viros nunquam propter Salmonum occisionem multatos, pertinuerant) ideoque, ablatos Equos legitimis suis

On the seventeenth day of the same month, John Farquharson of Inverey (master of almost all those who were molested by the aforesaid robbery), accompanied by the owners of the horses seized, and others of his friends, went down to guard the fair of Tullich, distant about a mile from the house of the aforesaid Gordon of Breachly, and on the way sent a messenger to Breachly, requesting that (as the aforesaid seizure was illegal, and some of the horses taken belonged to men who never were fined for killing salmon) he would therefore be good enough to restore the horses to their rightful owners; and he, that is John Farquharson of Inverey, would promise that all who were guilty of the crime charged should suffer due punishment before they returned from the market. But Breachly refused to restore the horses on any condition. Inverey, indeed, was willing to desist from further demanding the horses, on this condition, that Breachly would consent to leave to certain friends the discussion of the present disagreement within four days after the close of the Tullich market. While Breachly was preparing to reply to this proposal, Alexander Gordon of Abergeldy came to his assistance with a band of armed men. Wherefor Breachly disdained to reason any further on that matter, and, being urged on by a great flame of furious passion, pursued Inverey and his tenants with loaded guns, pistols, and drawn swords. Inverey, being desirous not to engage in bloody conflict with his near neighbours, at first gave way to the attack, seriously entreating Breachly to desist from further assault. But he and Abergeldy and their retainers thereupon became the more fierce, and at length killed two of Inverey's followers on the spot. Wherefor Inverey and his tenants were forced, in their own defence, strongly to resist the fury of their assailants; and, facing the enemy, slew the said John Gordon of Breachly and his brother William, and also James Gordon of Cults (who were undoubtedly pursuing with the greatest impetuosity).

Shortly after this slaughter, the nearest relatives of Breachly pursued Inverey, and a great part of his friends, as guilty of this horrid crime, and dragged him before the Chief Justice of the kingdom. Inverey had recourse to Mackintosh, as undoubtedly his chief, who (calling to mind that not long before, in the Lochaber expedition, the example of a grateful and friendly dis-

Moreover, as the love and friendly behaviour of well-deserving kinsmen towards their chief ought to be held in perpetual remembrance, so the unkindly and malevolent manners of kinsmen, who behave themselves very badly, are not to be passed over in deep silence; and of this kind of wrong Mackintosh had no small experience, as will appear in the following narrative, besides those which he suffered in the years 1664 and 1665.

In the month of September 1667 a rabble of the Brae Lochaber people, coming down to Glensk, about the very time in which Mackintosh married the daughter of the laird of Edzell, took away their cattle from the tenants of that laird. Mackintosh, regarding this affront as inflicted on himself, resolved either to repair the injury and loss of the laird of Edzell, or to be revenged on the perpetrators of this mischief. To this effect, in November following, he called together some of his chief friends at Inverness, where, with much painful feeling, he showed them what wrong he had suffered in honour, estate, and reputation, from the Brae Lochaber people. In the first place, how they had violently kept back the revenues of the lands of Glenluy and Locharkaig; then how they had refused to pay the public dues, which he was far from doubting would at length cause to himself great and unlooked-for trouble; and, thirdly, he related how they had shamefully, and to his manifest contempt and reproach, lately seized and driven away the flocks and herds of his father-in-law. Moreover, he showed them also how hurtful and disadvantageous it was to him that he had not yet exercised the office of bailiery and stewardry of the lordship of Lochaber; and that there seemed to him no time more apt and suitable than the present, not only for repairing the losses and injuries hitherto suffered, but also for re-establishing himself in the aforesaid office; and declared that he had now called them together (because they were his dearest friends) for that purpose, that he might ascertain what was their judgment and advice in regard to these matters.

JAM observandum est, sub hoc tempus, Caussas nonnullas, aliasque disputabiles Questiones inter Makintoshium, Borlumium, Connagium, aliosque agitandos fuisse. Itidem M^cPherson a Cluny, tunc temporis illegitimum debitum (cui solvendo Donaldum Makintosh ab Aldoury obstrictum habuit fidejussorem) a Makintoshio petebat. It is to be observed that about this time some causes and various other disputable questions were agitated between Mackintosh, Borlum, Connage, and others. In like manner, Macpherson of Cluny was at that time craving from Mackintosh an unjust debt (for payment of which he had bound Donald Mackintosh of Aldourie as surety). These four gentlemen were present at the said meeting, and consulting as to the answer that should be given to the laird of Mackintosh, they, considering with themselves that there appeared to be some difficulty in maintaining their causes against Mackintosh in a legal manner, and also that the latter could not well carry on his affairs in Lochaber at that time without their assistance, determined to turn the present occasion to their own profit, so as either to force Mackintosh to grant their desires (whether lawful or not), or to throw delays or obstacles in the way of his carrying out this business; and in order the more successfully to get their demands fulfilled, they went about the matter craftily and skilfully. First of all, they applauded his design of going to Lochaber (declaring that there was no time more suitable and advantageous than winter, for then the Lochaber folks would not drive away their cattle to the mountains); and all of them promised to go thither with him.

Deinde (quo ardentius præsens susceptum perficeretur) decimum Decembris proximè subsecuturi Diem dicunt, quo, omnes, apud Garvam Brebade-nochiæ pagum, ut ex inde semet in Lochabriam accingerent, convenirent. HAEC omnia, a Makintoshio rite effecta sunt, etque, hoc modo, quatuor Generosi, Makintoshium (quandoquidem, huic incepto peragendo tantopere animum adhibuerit) suam Lochabriam adeundi intentionem, non, sine dedecore, immutare potuisse coucluserunt. Quod cum ita esset, nulla-

Then (that he might the more earnestly carry out the present enterprise), they said they would all meet together on the 10th of December next following at Garve, a village of Brae Badenoch, ready armed, to go with him thence to Lochaber. Thirdly, they persuaded Mackintosh that he should, with all possible speed, forcibly remind his friends and kinsmen of Braemar by letters, so that they should all keep the day and place appointed, supplied with all things needful for taking the route. Fourthly, they advised him to summon all those dwelling within the lordship of Lochaber to his courts (at the hours and places then to be appointed). And lastly, that he should signify to the Marquis of Huntly, by his letters, his determination to hold courts in Lochaber; and they exhorted him to request the Marquis that he would cause the Lochaber people to give due obedience and submission to these courts (whereby justice should be administered to the King's subjects).

All these things were duly carried into effect by Mackintosh, and in this way the four gentlemen concluded that Mackintosh (as he had so much set his mind upon the execution of this enterprise), could not, without dishonour, change his purpose of going to Lochaber; which, as it was so, they were no wise doubtful but tenus dubitârunt, quin priùs rogatibus obtemperaret, quàm eorum comitatû destitueretur.

MAKINTOSHIUS, sese huic itineri adimplendo accingens, (dum amicos hosce suos rite et secundum Promissa acturos expectaret) monitus est nec Borlumium, nec Clunium, nec Aldourium (ni eorum desideria qualiacunque largirentur) Lochabriam adituros.

CONNAGIUS, autem, (habito præmanibus magni momenti negotio, quo neglecto, de illius Nomine et Honore actum esset, et cui, non annuente et succurrente Genearchâ, colophonem imponere minimè posset) suum rogatum ulterius inculcare supersedit. Makintoshio, tamen, ut, ex futuris ejus actionibus constabit, in illa expeditione, obstaculo esse statuit. Makintoshius, inhumano hoc et minimè genuino amicorum suorum facinore percussus, haud levi incaluit irâ. Tandem, tamen, Borlumii et Aldourii Petitiones (quippe iniquas et ridiculis impertinentiis confarcinatas) flocci facere, Clunisque verò Postulatis, etsi etiam injustis, si modò fideliter, se, in eâ expeditione finiendâ, animitus processurum promitteret, satisfacere decrevit, et, hâc lege, Makintoshius et Clunius paciscuntur, viz. Makintoshius, Synggrapham, in quam Clunius sibi jus fuisse

While Mackintosh was preparing to perform this journey (and expecting that those his friends would duly act according to their promises), he was warned that neither Borlum nor Cluny nor Aldourie would go to Lochaber (unless he would grant their desires unconditionally). But Connage (having a business already in hand of great importance, in which his name and honour were concerned, and to which he could not make a good end without the assent and succour of his chief) forbore to insist further on his demand. By his future actions, however, it appeared that he resolved to be an obstacle to Mackintosh in that expedition.

Mackintosh, deeply affected by this cruel and unnatural conduct on the part of his friends, was greatly incensed. At length, however, he resolved to make light of the demands of Borlum and Aldourie (as unjust and full of absurd irrelevancies), and to satisfy the desires of Cluny, although they also were unjust, if only he would faithfully promise to go with him heartily to the conclusion of that expedition; and on this condition Mackintosh and Cluny came to terms; that is to say, it was agreed that the bond to which Cluny claimed right should be assigned to his Borlum and Aldourie, finding themselves so greatly deceived in what they hoped for and befooled, endeavoured with all the energies of their mind, and with all their might, to create vexations and troubles to Mackintosh in that journey, if not to stamp upon him a manifest stigma of reproach. For which purpose they first enticed Cluny and Paul MacBean of Kinchyle to violate the promise made to Mackintosh, and dissuaded them and their followers from the expedition.

Mackintosh, nevertheless, went on, accompanied with Invercauld, Aberardor, Corrybroch, Invereiy, Neid younger, Balnespic, Dalmunzie, the tutor of Drumnaglass, and their followers, together with his own tenants, to the number of three hundred brave men, from Garve, a town in Brae Badenoch, into Brae Lochaber, where his tenants of the lands of Glenroy and Glenspean (one hundred and twenty in number) met him drawn up in the best order; and on the day of December he held his first court on the lands of Keppoch, and all due obedience having been given to

Hic in memoriam revocandum est Marchionem ab Huntley (instigante et persuadente Alexandro Gordon ab Arraduil Ballivo suo Badenochensi), prædictæ Makintoshii Epistolæ non modò non annuisse, verùm etiam, eundem Ballivum suum, in Lochabriam, ad Makintoshii consilia et proposita disturbanda, de industriâ adire jussisse. Cui congruenter efficiendo Ballivus totas intendit vires. Makintoshius, tamen, non obstante Ballivi oppositione, duas Curias in Huntlei agris affirmavit. Nam, peractis, tam in Huntlei, quàm in suis agris Brelochabriensibus, negotiis, proximam Curiam, apud Teirlundi (agrorum Huntlei partem) tenere statuit Balivus verò, ut Mackintoshii propositum impediret, Huntlei Inquilinos Lochabrienses convocari jussit. Makintoshius, tamen, floccifactis Balivi convocationibus et comminationibus, in loco constituto, Curiam, conspicientibus imò etiam Adversariis, tenuit. Absentes quoque him there, he thereafter caused the aforementioned flocks, lately taken away from Glenesk by Huntly's Brae Lochaber tenants, to be restored. Then he prepared to hold the courts of the Stewardry on Huntly's lands; and up to this time Connage had not yet come to the company of Mackintosh.

Here it is to be remembered that the Marquis of Huntly (instigated and persuaded by Alexander Gordon of Arradoul, his bailie in Badenoch) not only did not assent to the aforesaid letter of Mackintosh, but also ordered the same bailie to go to Lochaber on purpose to counteract the designs of Mackintosh, which the bailie accordingly, with all his might, endeavoured to effect. Mackintosh, however, in spite of the bailie's opposition, fenced two courts on Huntly's lands; for after transacting his affairs, as well on Huntly's lands as on his own lands of Brae Lochaber, he resolved to hold the next court at Teirlundy (part of Huntly's lands). But the bailie in order to embarrass the purpose of Mackintosh, ordered Huntly's Lochaber tenants to be convoked. Mackintosh, however, making light of the bailie's convocations and threatenings, held his court in the place appointed, yea, even in sight of the adversaries. He also commanded absentees and delinquents to be et Sontes mulctari præcepit. Tum Balivus, Lochieldo, ut, Clanchameronos, Makintoshii opponendi gratiâ, simul congregaret, consulit, atque, ejusmodi minis, Makintoshium, ne, in suo officio Senescalatûs exequendo, ulteriùs pergeret terre facere existimavit. Frivola tamen ist hæc crepitacula ne hilum valuerunt. Nam Makintoshius, in villam Teirlundi (prope Inverlochi), in tuentibus etiam Clanchameronis numero trecentis, advenit, Curiamque legitimè affirmavit. Attamen Clanchameroni (ne de suâ istâ convocatione increparentur), seipsos confestim subdixerunt, atque Lochieldus, coram Makintoshio Apologiis uti cœpit, atque ita Makintoshius, non obstantibus omnibus illis, quæ obvenerunt, difficultatibus, circiter finem Decembris 1667, omnibus adeo feliciter et tanto cum honore ac si tota Clanchattanorum Tribus commearet, gestis, domum regressus est.

fined. The bailie then advised Lochiel to assemble the Clan Cameron together, for the purpose of opposing Mackintosh, and thought that in this way he should frighten Mackintosh from executing any further his office of steward. These silly chatterings, however, availed nothing; for Mackintosh came to the town of Teirlundy (near Inverlochy), even when the Camerons to the number of three hundred were looking on, and fenced the court according to law. But the Clan Cameron (lest they should be reprimanded for that convocation) withdrew themselves forthwith, and Lochiel began to make apologies to Mackintosh. And thus, notwithstanding all these difficulties which he encountered, Mackintosh returned home about the end of December 1667, having accomplished all things as successfully and with as much honour as if the whole of the Clanchattan had gone with him.

In the year 1668, Mackintosh received the right of the lands and castle of Dalcross, in the parish of Croy, in wadset from Major Betman (an Englishman).

In the year 1672, Duncan Macpherson of Cluny attempted to reject the laird of Mackintosh from being any longer regarded as his chief, in order that he himself (without any dependence on Mackintosh) might be called chief of the Macphersons. To this end utitur methodis, quibus Dominum Carolum Erskin a Cambo (Regem Insigniorum) persuadere posset, ut, ipsi, novam Insignium Fabricam, a Makintoshii Insigniis aliquatenus discriminatam, in quâ Makphersonorum Princeps appellaretur, daret. he used all means in his power to persuade Sir Charles Erskine of Cambo (King of Arms) to give him a new coat of arms, someway or other discriminated from the arms of Mackintosh, in which he should be styled chief of the Macphersons. This having been procured by false and misleading information, he caused to be engraven on his coat of arms that he was indeed the historical representative of the ancient Clanchattans; which it was thought he did not so much out of self-conceit and arrogance as at the instigation of certain ambitious and giddy-brained innovators of his own name; partly also as stirred up by others who, as they were animated by ill feeling against Mackintosh, attempted by this means to cut off that branch of the Clanchattan (called Macphersons) that they might no longer look upon Mackintosh as their chief. Afterwards, in that same year, Cluny, along with other chiefs of branches of families, dwelling in the northern and higher parts of Scotland, having been called before the Lords of Privy Council, in order that he should give bond for the good, honest, and peaceable conversation and conduct of his families, servants, tenants, and others deriving their origin from his family, obtained letters of relief against those of his name for whom he had become bound, in which (through the familiarity and friendship between him and the servant of the clerk of the Privy Council) he got himself designed Duncan Macpherson, lord of Cluny, chief of the Macphersons; and on his return to Badenoch he earnestly requested his friends of the name of Macpherson to grant to him a bond of relief under the same designation. Some, however, refused this, declaring that they knew no other person to be called their chief besides their lawful, undoubted chief, the laird of Mackintosh. Whereupon Cluny threatened to cite them, in virtue of the aforesaid letters, before the Lords of Privy Council.

On hearing of these insolent irregularities, Mackintosh betook himself to Edinburgh, and first of all reproved the King of Arms because he had granted new armorial ensigns to his kinsman Cluny (without having received from him a testimony to the truth of his original arms, and of his pedigree and descent); and showed him how greatly his informers had imposed upon him in all they had told him. Then, in order to show that the laird of Mackintosh was undoubted chief and head of the name of Clanchattan, and consequently of the Macphersons, who by their own confession are only a branch growing out of the Clanchattans, he exhibited the following testimonies; and, for that reason, Cluny, as head of

TESTIMONIA, AUTEM, HÆC SUNT.

PRIMÒ, Dominia Makintosh, ab ævo in ævum, usque ab Anno 1291 (in quo Æneas Dominus a Makintosh, Evam, solam, Gilpatrici Makdugall vic Gilchattan) præcipui, tunc temporis, Viri, et, Gilcattani Posteritatis monumenti unici (filiam matrimoniali copulâ sibi conjunxit) non tantùm æstimati et vocati, verùm etiam, in omnibus Scriptis et Chartis, ad illos pertinentibus, titularitur, Clanchattanorum Duces designati sunt, quemadmodum plura antiqua Scripta et Instrumenta, tunc temporis, coram Insigniorum Rege producta testatum dederunt.

2^{do} Omnium Familiarum Clanchattanorum Capita, et, cum cæteris, Andreas Makpherson a Cluny, præsentis Clunii avus, Anno 1609, ipsos, ipsorumque Posteritatem, et Scriptis et Juramentis, Dominum Makintosh, contra omnes mortales (exceptâ Authoritate, et legitimis suis Superioribus) defendere, opitulari, et tanquam Ducem et Genearcham sequi, devinxerunt, prout Syngrapha, tunc temporis, exhibita manifestum perhibuit. Itidem, Anno 1664, præcipui Clanchattanorum (speciatimque Makphersoni), seipsos præsentis Domino Makin-

The testimonies are these :

First. The lairds of Mackintosh, from age to age, ever since the year 1291 (in which Eneas laird of Mackintosh married Eva, only daughter of Gilpatric MacDougall vic Gilchattan, at that time the chief man and only representative of Gilchattan's posterity), have not only been esteemed and called, but also, in all writs and charters belonging to them, have been designated by way of title chiefs of the Clanchattans, as many ancient writs and instruments, then produced before the King of Arms, did bear witness.

Secondly. The heads of all the families of the Clanchattans, and among the rest Andrew Macpherson of Cluny, grandfather of the present Cluny, did, in the year 1609, bind themselves and their posterity, by their writings and oaths, to defend and assist the laird of Mackintosh against all mortals (excepting the authority and their lawful superiors), and to follow him as their chief and head, as the bond then exhibited made manifest. In like manner, in the year 1664, the chief men of the Clanchattan (especially the Macpher-

4^{to} Antiquissimi quique et maximè Authentici Scotici [page 304.]
Gentis Chronologi, Makintoshium constanter Clanchattanorum Ducem designant et prædicant. Imprimis, Lesleus Lib. 9. de Gestis Scotorum, inquit, Tribus Clanchattana vulgò nuncupata Makintoshiana a Principe Makintoshio &c., et Lib. 10. Gulielmum Dominum Makintosh Clanchattanæ Tribus Ducem appellat. Simulatque Rondolphus Hollinshed, præmemoratum Gulielmum, Familiæ Clanchattanæ Caput et Ducem nuncupat. Et Buchananus Lib. 16. Chr. Scot. eundem Gulielmum Cattanæ Familiæ Principem nominat.

5^{to} In Epistolâ a præsentî Rege Carolo 2. 1651 Anno, ad Makintoshium legatâ, ut et in omnibus Diplomatum, Commissionibus, Literis communicationem et commercium prohibentibus, et in aliis quibuscunque Literis, a Dominis Privati sons) bound themselves by bond to the present laird of Mackintosh, that they would assist him, as their chief and head, against the Clan Camerons, as the writs then exhibited showed.

Thirdly. The name of Clanchattan, including the Macphersons, from age to age, for the space of about four hundred years, have again and again owned and assisted the laird of Mackintosh as chief, in many strifes, contentions, battles, and wars, in which he happened to be concerned or engaged.

Fourthly. The most ancient and authentic chronicles of the Scottish nation, constantly designate and speak of Mackintosh as chief of the Clanchattans. In the first place, Leslie, Book ix., De gestis Scotorum, says, 'The tribe of Clanchattan, vulgarly called Mackintoshes, from Mackintosh their chief,' etc.; and, Book x., he calls William, laird of Mackintosh, chief of the Clanchattan tribe. In like manner, Rondolph Hollinshed calls the aforementioned William captain and chief of the Clanchattan family. And Buchanan, Book xvi., Chr. Scot., names the same William chief of the Chattan family.

Fifthly. In a letter sent by the present King Charles II., in the year 1651, to Mackintosh, as also in all charters, commissions, Concilii, in Dominorum a Makintosh gratiam, adversus Clanchameronos Clanronaldos aliosque, concessis, Dom. Makintosh, Clanchattanorum Dux et Genearcha agnoscitur et designatur, ut Literæ Diplomata et Commissiones tunc ostensæ informârunt.

INSIGNIUM Rex, visis et debite consideratis claris hisce testimoniis, cum observasset, sibi, a Clunio, aliisque, in hâc re, maximopere impositum fuisse, Domino a Makintosh (quoniam Insignia hactenus concessa, quippe jam Insignium Libro inserta et inscripta rursus revocare nequiret) subsequentem Declarationem Membranzæ inscriptam, suoque Chyrogapho et Officii Sigillo obsignatum dedit. Nos CAROLUS ERSKIN a Cambo Eques Baronettus, Insignium Rex, conspectis, et ad amussim pensitatis plurimis claris et sufficientibus Testimoniis, ex Historiis, Registris, priscis nostris Monumentis, aliisque Instrumentis, invictè deductis, hisce DECLARAMUS DOMINUM a Makintosh, Nominis Makintoshii nec non et Clanchattani (Makphersonos, Makgillivrayos, Farquharsonos, Maktarlichos, Makqueenos, Makbeanos, Makphailos aliosque comprehendentis) unicum et indubitatum Ducem et Genearcham esse, letters of intercommuning, and in all other letters whatsoever, granted by the Lords of Privy Council in favour of the lairds of Mackintosh, against the Clan Camerons, Clan Ronalds, and others, the laird of Mackintosh is acknowledged and designated captain and chief of the Clanchattans, as the letters, writs, and commissions then shown proved.

The King of Arms, having seen and duly considered these testimonies, when he saw that he had been greatly imposed upon by Cluny and others in that matter (forasmuch as he could not revoke again the arms already granted, and inserted and inscribed in the book of arms), he gave to the laird of Mackintosh the following declaration, written on parchment, subscribed and sealed with the seal of office :

‘ We, Charles Erskine of Cambo, Knight Baronet, King of Arms, having seen and considered, according to rule, the many clear and sufficient testimonies, invincibly deduced from histories, registers, our ancient muniments, and other instruments, do hereby declare that the laird of Mackintosh is the only and undoubted captain and chief of the name of Mackintosh, and also of the Clanchattan (comprehending the Macphersons, Macgillivrays, Farquharsons, Macturlichs, Macqueens, Macbeans, Macphails, and others) is put to us beyond the hazard of doubt; and that we have neither given, nor shall we give hereafter, to any of these families, any arms, unless they acknowledge themselves to be streams flowing from the family of Mackintosh (whose ancestor married the heretrix of the Clanchattans in 1291); and therefore we do testify in particular that we have given arms to Duncan Macpherson of Cluny, as descending from the aforesaid family; and that this declaration may remain to posterity, to be seen and made known to all whom it concerns, whether of the forecited names or of others, we have subscribed the same with our hand at Edinburgh, the day of August 1672; and hereto have caused the seal of our office to be appended.' (So it is subscribed),

Rex Insignium, quo ulteriùs, suam erga Clunium (quod parum candidè, sese, in hoc negotio, gesserat) displicentiam etiram manifestaret, ad illum Epistolam (cujus verba in subsequentibus habentur) misit. Domine, Tibi, Insignium Fabricam, tanquam a Makintoshii Familiâ cadenti, dederim. Tu verò, sub hujus Favoris colore, temet, ut narratum est, sine acceptâ a nobis veniâ, Makphersonorum Ducem exhibuisti, et præterea tui Insignis, tibi (sine meo concessû) portatores assumpsisti, et teipsum, priscorum Clanchattanorum Phylarcham

'CHARLES ERSKINE.'

The King of Arms, that he might further show his displeasure and anger against Cluny (because he had behaved himself with so little sincerity in that business), sent him a letter in the following terms :

'SIR,—I have given you a coat of arms as a cadet of the Mackintosh family. But you, under colour of this favour, without having got leave from us, have represented yourself, as is reported, as chief of the Macphersons; and, moreover (without my permission), have assumed supporters to your arms, and have desig-

The reasons and arguments put forth by Mackintosh, whereby he proved himself to be chief of the Clanchattans, and consequently of the Macphersons (besides those which are given

In the year 1665, the laird of Mackintosh acquired possession and heritable right of the lands of Obsdale, in the parish of Rosskeen. In 1672 he firmly resolved to labour diligently to turn his Brae Lochaber lands to greater profit, and to render their revenues more ample; and, that this might be the better and sooner accomplished, a decret of removing having been obtained against the possessors, he (on account of their obstinate contumacy and forcibly holding to the lands after sentence was given) caused them to be denounced as rebels; and thereafter he directed a supplication to the Lords of Privy Council that they would grant him power to drive them away from the illegal possession of the lands. These rebels (greatly afraid of the power of the laird of Mackintosh) made a league with the Macleans, who also at that time were outlaws for the like reason as the Brae Lochaber folks, that is to say, because they would not remove from their possessions at the order of the Earl of Argyll.

The Lords of Privy Council (on the persuasion, as was thought, of the Earl of Moray, who, as he was ill affected against Mackin-and the Macleans were in the fields against each other, to call together his friends and march into Lochaber, and there to plant a garrison for the better administration of his interests in that place.

The Earl of Moray, then resident at Edinburgh, caused a letter to be sent to Donald Mackintosh of Kylachy, his bailie (who procured the same by his own suggestion and advice), straitly interdicting all his clients and tenants of the Clanchattan name, from rising at that time with Mackintosh, and commanding that they should adhere to Alexander Chisholm, sheriff-depute of Inverness, to help the Earl of Argyll against the MacLeans. And this was done on purpose that delay and hindrance might arise to Mackintosh in reference to his march to Lochaber; and in like manner, because, a little before, the laird of Mackintosh had refused to sell his heritable office of the stewardry and bailiery of the Lordship of Lochaber to the Marquis of Huntly, the marquis charged his bailie, dwelling in Badenoch, that he should permit none of the Clanchattan name holding his lands in that region to rise to the assistance of Mackintosh.

Matters being in this position, the Presbyterians in the western parts of Scotland, having made an insurrection in June 1679, were gathered together in one body; and for the purpose of suppressing this rebellion, many of the lieges, and among others the laird of Mackintosh, and his kinsmen, were commanded to advance with all speed to Stirling Bridge. For the purpose of obeying this command, Mackintosh advanced as far as Perth, where, on the certain information that the Presbyterians were defeated at Bothwell Bridge by the royal troops, he forthwith returned. And when he learned that the Earl of Argyll, who had come as far as Inverlochy, had done nothing to his advantage, according to the power he had received in the commission granted to him by the Lords of Privy Council, and giving up all hope of obtaining a commission in his favour against the Brae Lochaber people, he determined to march with all the expedition he could to his lands of Brae Lochaber for the purpose of holding courts; and in the meantime to attempt to reconcile to himself (if it could be done) his tenants of Brae Lochaber, having no doubt at all but that his friends and kinsmen would accompany him in order to bring such an enterprise more happily to an end. But, truly, he was wonderfully deceived and disappointed in his hope. The occasion and manner of which affair, though fearful to remember, and to be shunned with grief, I cannot but disclose and relate in some tenus detegam referamque. Breviter, igitur, ita sese res habuit. Gulielmus Makintosh a Borlum maximopere exandescens io quod Dominus a Makintosh (post varios et amicè et inimicè tentatos labores) nullatenus, pascuis nonnullis et pabulationibus Badenochensibus Richlagginbeg & Kichan-gour nuncupatis, quæ, re verâ, Makintoshii hæreditatis portio erat, quibus tamen Borlumius, etsi injustissimè, juris nonnihîl habuisse affirmabat, illi elargiendis pertrahi poterat. Non minori indignationis fervore instimulatus Alexander Makintosh a Connage, quod, post varios frustra habitos canatus, Domino a Makintosh, ut, non spemendam pecuniæ Summam, quam sine ullo vel minimo Justitiæ colore, a prædicto Domino, tanquam debitam, postulabat, ut ipsi concederet, prævalere nequibat. Duo, inquam, hi Generosi, nullum non volvebant lapidem, quo, Domino a Makintosh, iter in Lochabriam directuro, obices et impedimenta ponere valerent, atque, in hunc finem, validè juxta ac satis subdolè, sese, Donaldò Makintosh a Kylachy, Duncano Makpherson a Cluny, Lauchlano Makintosh ab Abirardor, Farquhardo Makgilliwwray a Dummaglash, Donaldò Makqueen a Corribroch, aliisque D. Makintosh amicis et cognatis insinuant, illisque, sine datâ unicuique measure. Briefly, therefore, it was thus: William Mackintosh of Borlum, being greatly displeased that the laird of Mackintosh (after various efforts, both friendly and unfriendly, had been made) could not be induced on any account to give him some grazings and pasturages in Badenoch, called Richlagganbeg and Kichan-gour, which, indeed, were part of the heritage of Mackintosh, to which, however, Borlum asserted, though unjustly, he had some right. Alexander Mackintosh of Connage was moved with not less indignation, because, after making various fruitless attempts, he could not prevail with the laird of Mackintosh to grant him a not inconsiderable sum of money, which without any pretext of justice he demanded as due by the laird to him. These two gentlemen, I say, were leaving no stone unturned whereby they might put impediments in the way of the laird of Mackintosh, when he was about to march into Lochaber; and to this end they insinuated themselves with Donald Mackintosh of Kylachy, Duncan Macpherson of Cluny, Lauchlan Mackintosh of Aberardour, Ferquhard Macgillivray of Dummaglash, Donald Macqueen of Corribroch, and other friends and kinsmen of the laird of Mackintosh, and persuaded them that without a due reward of debitâ laboris mercede (quam, procul dubio, asserentibus illis, priusquam eorum comitatû et auxilio, tunc temporis, in Lochabriam progressurus destitueretur, dare non renueret), Makintoshium nullatenus, ne ægrè, quidem, comitari persuaserunt. Generosi hi, longè majori animorum desiderio, lucrum suum et commodum potiùs quam Ducis sui et Genearchæ utilitatem anhelantes, inimicè admodum et maximè in humanè, sine ullâ vel minimâ causâ, consilio dato oplemperârunt, Genearchamque suum in extremis versantem, urgente etiam durissimo necessitatis telo turpissimè deseruere. Desertionis, autem, hujus causæ et rationes subsequentibus exhibebuntur.

their labour being given (which was far from doubtful, since they were assured that rather than be left without their company and aid at this time, when he was to march into Lochaber, he would not refuse to give) they should in no wise go along with Mackintosh. These gentlemen, panting with far more eager desire after their own gain and advantage than for the good of their chief, most spitefully and unnaturally and without the least occasion complied with the advice given, and most basely deserted their chief, even in his extremity, and when pressed by the direst necessity. The causes and reasons of this desertion are shown as follows.

Kylachy, having been called in a very friendly way by the laird of Mackintosh, and ordered to accompany him in the expedition already resolved upon to Lochaber, replied that unless the town of Coignaferne (then possessed by him at a small rent) was [let to him] during his life, and afterwards to his heirs for the space of thrice nineteen years, he would not go a finger's breadth into Lochaber with his chief. Cluny affirmed that the Marquis of Huntly, his lord superior, had commanded him and his kinsmen not to join with the laird of Mackintosh in going to Lochaber. Aberardour declared, that unless he acquired in possession, the grazing of Stratherne named Crolach (which the laird then had in his own hands for pasturing his flock) he would not go to Lochaber. John Mackintosh, brother of Aberardour, although he was then an actual tenant of Mackintosh, yet refused to accompany him, because he would not grant the desires of Aberardour his brother. Dummaglass (being dissuaded by Borlum, Aberardour, and his uncle Kylachy) refused to go to Lochaber; yet he permitted as many of his kinsmen and tenants as inhabited the davach of Dummaglass to go with Mackintosh to Lochaber. Donald Macqueen of Corribroch gave no reason for his refusal: only, he said that as many of the principal men of the name of Mackintosh were determined not to go on that expedition, nobody ought to impute it to him as a fault if he also should withdraw himself therefrom; and thus, these gentlemen, not only most perfidiously and unnaturally remained at home, but also were a hindrance to all who hearkened to and obeyed them.

Here it should be noted that Alexander Farquharson of Invercauld, and the whole of the Farquharsons, to the number of three hundred at least, were at that time prepared to march with Mackintosh in that expedition, but Farquharson of Craignetty, along with John Farquharson, tutor of Brochderg, having a short time before been slain by the Brae Lochaber people, and two of these were at the same time killed by the Farquharsons, Archibald Macdonald, the chief man among the Brae Lochaber people, fearing that the Farquharsons then coming to Lochaber would rather be a hindrance than a help to the establishing of concord between Mackintosh and the people of Brae Lochaber, sent to Mackintosh an earnest letter, in which he urgently requested that he would not bring them with him, otherwise neither he nor any of his tribe or his followers would appear. This letter disturbed the mind of Mackintosh not a little, and held him in suspense; for if he complied with these demands it behoved him to leave behind the half of those forces which, both for defence and counsel, he had then brought with him. If, on the other hand, he should not give heed to the letter, there would then be a very great hindrance to the carrying out of an agreement with the opposite party. But, notwithstanding, since his principal design (his affairs standing as they then did) was to arrange his matters in a friendly rather than in a hostile manner,

After carefully pondering the inhuman cruelty with which many of his chief kinsmen had recently behaved themselves towards him, and as no hope now remained of obtaining from the Lords of Privy Council a commission against that rebellious and stubborn people of Brae Lochaber (that he might no longer seem to beg the assistance of his kinsmen for the sake of finishing this business) he determined to settle his affairs with the Brae Lochaber folks by a method so much the more easy, although somewhat to his own disadvantage; and thus, in the space of three days, he at length put an end to the controversy he formerly had with that turbulent and unruly people: five hundred pounds of yearly increase being added to the old rent of the lands, that he might free them from paying the teinds of these lands, and from every kind of public burdens hitherto imposed, or yet to be imposed, upon them by the king or by the church (during the lease of seven years); and he held them bound and obliged, as surely as they could be, for payment to him of all the previous burdens on the land.

And so, at length, he returned home with as much honour and satisfaction of mind as if his aforesaid kinsmen, deserters, and their followers had accompanied him to Lochaber, the golden bond of peace being meanwhile unbroken; while all those of his kinsmen who having been influenced by a base spirit of disgusting avarice, refused their escort at that time (O wonderful decision of ungrateful inhumanity and inhuman ingratitude!) are deservedly branded with ignominious stains of infamy, and a stigma of disgrace that shall never be effaced.

MEMORIAL relating to the Antient and [page 309.]

PREFACE.

THIS Family has continued for several Ages past possessed of great Honour, a large Estate, much Power and a numerous Train of Followers devoted to it's Fortunes and Interest, has acted a very considerable Part in many of the great Transactions of our Countrey, and stands entitled to all the Marks of Respect that can be due to Antiquity, Power, Birth or Merit.

THOUGH I do not enjoy all the Advantages and Instructions that may be necessary to do Justice to this Family, and to trace it back in the several Steps and Periods of its flourishing State in Order to set it in a clear Light, Yet I shall endeavour to give such a View of the same as may demonstrate it's Greatness & just Claim to Honour.

It is none of my Design to draw a complete History or an exact Genealogy, nor to enumerate all the remarkable Events and various Successes that accompanied this Race through so many Centuries of Years, which are fully related in the M.S. Accompts of the Family both in Latin and English, whence may be had a much better and fuller Narrative of the Originals and State not only of that, but also of the other eminent Families in the Highlands than what I, at least, have seen elsewhere.

ALL I intend is to contribute my poor Endeavours for preserving the Honour of our declining Countrey in doing Justice to those who deserved well of it, & at once to testify my Gratitude and respect to that illustrious House, which has long been the Head and Support of so numerous and powerful a People.

was originally a Son of the Earl of Fife's; For Duncan Mac

Duff Thane of Fife having by his great Power and Loyalty brought about the Restoration of Malcolm the 3rd called Canmore Anno 1057 was rewarded with the Earldom of Fife and greater Honours and Privileges than ever any Subject had enjoyed before him.

NOTE of Differences betwixt the Acccompts given by the M.S. of MAKIN-TOSH'S GENEALOGY and by Sir Robert Sibbald in his HISTORY of FIFE concerning the Earls Macduff and their Descendents.

1^{mo} Though both agree That the First Earl was named Duncan, Yet the M.S. calls his Son and Successor Milcolumbus. But Sir Robert calls him Dufagan, and refers to Sir Ja. Dalrymple's Collect. P. 373, where he is cited as to a Charter granted by Alex^r 1. to

2^{do} The M.S. calls the 3^d Earl Duncan. But Sir Robert Constantine, which he proves by Edelrad's Charter to the Culdees, and by another to the Monks of Dunfermling cited by Sir J. Dalrymple, and says he died Anno 1129.

3^{tho} Sir Robert calls the 4th Earl Gillimichel the Son of Constantine, and proves it by his being Witness to the fore-said Charter to Dunfermling and many Charters of David 1st, and says he died Anno 1139, and That of his 2^d Son Heugo the Father of Eugenius was come the E. of Weems, which Mr. Harry Makum pretends to instruct by a Charter of King W^m's confirming the Donations of said Eugenius to the Priory of St. Andrews, One of which gives the Kirk of Markinch, in which Parish that Family yet has Possessions. But the M.S. calls the said Earl Malcolm, and makes him to have lived about Anno 1220.

4^{tho} Sir Robert calls the 5th E. Duncan, (as the M.S. does) who is found in sundry Charters of David 1st and Malcolm 3^d and 4th, and says he died Anno 1154.

5^{tho} Sir Robert also says That his Son the 6th E. was of the same Name, viz. Duncan, and married Ada Niece of Malcolm the Fourth. He was Justiciarius Scotiæ, and is found in Charters of Malcolm 4th. But the M.S. calls this Earl Malcolm, and adds That he was killed at Falkirk Anno 1290; Whereas Sir Robert says he died Anno 1203. So That the Author of M.S. Genealogy must either have mistaken as to the Number of Earls, when he brings off Mackintosh from the 3^d, or as to the Name.

6^{to} The Manuscript Mentions for Cadets besides Makintosh and Weems, Fanduy and Craighead, and Sir Robert says Toshay of Minevaird, Fanduy and Craigtoun.

7^{mo} The M.S. makes the 7th to be Duncan, and to have been taken at the Battle of Dyplin Anno 1332, and again at Duirham Anno 1348.

Sir Robert says That he was Malcolm, and That he died Anno 1229, and makes him to have founded the Monastery of Culross, which the M.S. ascribes to the 4th Earl.

8^{vo} The Manuscript makes Isobell Countess of Fife to be the Daughter of Duncan the 7th Earl; Whereas Sir Robert will have her to be the Daughter of the 13th Earl, who was also Duncan, and died Anno 1353, betwixt whom and Malcolm the 7th he places Malcolm the 8th, Colbanus the 9th, Duncan the 10th, 11th, and 12th.

C. H. FIRTH, Oxford; SAMUEL RAWSON GARDINER, D.C.L., LL.D.;

Rev. W. D. MACRAY, Oxford; G. W. PROTHERO, Litt. D.

Hon. Treasurer.

J. T. CLARK, Keeper of the Advocates' Library.

Hon. Secretary.

T. G. LAW, LL.D., Librarian, Signet Library.

RULES

1. THE object of the Society is the discovery and printing, under selected editorship, of unpublished documents illustrative of the civil, religious, and social history of Scotland. The Society will also undertake, in exceptional cases, to issue translations of printed works of a similar nature, which have not hitherto been accessible in English.

2. The number of Members of the Society shall be limited to 400.

3. The affairs of the Society shall be managed by a Council, consisting of a Chairman, Treasurer, Secretary, and twelve elected Members, five to make a quorum. Three of the twelve elected Members shall retire annually by ballot, but they shall be eligible for re-election.

4. The Annual Subscription to the Society shall be One Guinea. The publications of the Society shall not be delivered to any Member whose Subscription is in arrear, and no Member shall be permitted to receive more than one copy of the Society's publications.

5. The Society will undertake the issue of its own publications, i.e. without the intervention of a publisher or any other paid agent.

6. The Society will issue yearly two octavo volumes of about 320 pages each.

7. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be held at the end of October, or at an approximate date to be determined by the Council.

8. Two stated Meetings of the Council shall be held each year, one on the last Tuesday of May, the other on the Tuesday preceding the day upon which the Annual General Meeting shall be held. The Secretary, on the request of three Members of the Council, shall call a special meeting of the Council.

9. Editors shall receive 20 copies of each volume they edit for the Society.

10. The owners of Manuscripts published by the Society will also be presented with a certain number of copies.

11. The Annual Balance-Sheet, Rules, and List of Members shall be printed.

12. No alteration shall be made in these Rules except at a General Meeting of the Society. A fortnight's notice of any alteration to be proposed shall be given to the Members of the Council.
