GENEALOGY OF THE HENDERSON FAMILY

Henderson is a name derived from Henry-Henry's son or from Hendrick-Hendrick's son; in time it became Henrison-Hendrickson, Henderson. The name is an old one in Scotland, and the family has been living in Fife 400 years and over. The chief seat is at Fordell; "Henderson of Fordell" is a term of distinction, and well known throughout the United Kingdom.

One Progenitor was Robert, aman of prominence in the reign of James III. James of Fordell was a great favorite in the time of James IV, Lord Justice and King's advocate, and he received a charter under the great seal. Accompanying James in the unfortunate expedition into England, both he and his eldest son lost their lives, with their royal leader, at the field of Fodden.

George Henderson, of the next generation, was granted lands in the shires of Fife and Edinburg by Queen Mary of Scotland, and his wife was one of her maids of honor. He, too, gave his life for his country. His son, James, married Jean, daughter of William Murry, Baron of Tullibardine.

James Henderson was a man of parts, and in great favor with James VI, who conferred a singular favor upon him, on terms of great honor both to himself and to his family.

"James Henderson of Fordell is hereby excused from attending the wars all the days of his life, in consideration of the good, true and thankful services, not only done by himself, but also by his predecessors, to us and our predecessors, of worthy memory, in all times past, without defection at any time, from the royal obedience, that becomes good and faithful subjects. Dated at our place of Holyrøadhouse, February 27, and the twenty-first year of our reign". Signed by the King.

Gallant officers in Danish and French wars were of Henderson stock, and Sir Francis, a colonel under the Prince Of Orange, like so many of his race, was slain in battle.

One of the great names in the history of Scotland is Alexander Henderson, and next to Knox, the most famous of Scottish ecclesiastics. The Presbyterian body in Scotland largely owes to him its dogmas and organization, and he is considered the second founder of the reformed church.

Of the assembly in 1641, sitting at Edinburgh, he was the moderator. Here he proposed that a confession of faith, a catechism and a form of government should be drawn up. Afterwards he was one of those sent to London, to represent Scotland in the assembly at Westminster.

He was chaplain to King Charles, when he visited Scotland, and more in sympathy with his religious views, perhaps, than his friends liked to believe.

While nominally professing respect for the royal office, the covenant prepared by Henderson was entered into, for "the defense of the true religion, as reformed from Popery."

The spirit in which it was signed was that of great fervor. Many subscribed with tears on their cheeks, and it was commonly reported that some signed with their blood. Those were the days when men died for their religion, and when women did not possess their souls in patience. At a church service, where a certain ritual was introduced, unpopular with the people, its use provoked an uproar, of which the stool flung at the dean by Jenny Gaddes was the symbol.

A scholar of great linguistic attainment was Ebenezer Henderson, Scottish missionary, living at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

The romance of the family is furnished by a certain Sir John, who frightening the natives in darkest Africa, was "rescued by a lady," so the records say. Ladies do happen along, now and then, at the most opportune times. But this isn't all. She was a royal, or a noble personage, which adds just so much interest and thrill to the narrative, and she probably was wearing her crown at the very moment of the rescue, for descendants of the hero of this story still preserve, under glass, "a picture of this lady, with a coronet on her head, and a "landscape" a representation probably of the very scene of the rescue.

If only more ancestors had delightful stories like this locked away in family archives, the pages of ancestral lore would be vastly more cheerfully reading. Sir John was knighted by Charles I.

About the time of the revolution, Hendersons found their way, from Scotland to Virginia, and North Carolina, and were prominent in the Continental army.

Leonard Henderson, son of Richard, was Chief Justice and a man of national reputation. His brother, Archibald, of Salisbury, N.C., was also a great lawyer. A monument was erected to his memory by the bar of the state.

A partner of Daniel Boone, in the purchase of Kentucky from the Indians, was Richard Henderson, son of Samuel, who was born in Virginia, in 1700, and married Elizabeth Williams of Wales. Richard's brother, Samuel, married Elizabeth Calloway, who had a romantic career, just like the heroine of a novel. They were married August 7, 1776 in Fort Boonsborough. She was captured by Indians and rescued by her lover, Samuel. Their daughter, Fanny, was the first white child born in the present state of Kentucky. Fanny was born May 29, 1777.

James Henderson of the southern branch of the family was one who, his state and his country delighted to honor. He was secretary of State of Texas in 1837, having moved early in life from North Carolina, where he was born, to Texas. He was Minister to England, to procure the recognition of Texan Independence, and a few years later he was special Minister to the United States to secure the annexation of Texas. He was a member of the state Constitution Convention, and afterwards chosen Governor. He was also United States Senator.

The Hendersons ever proved themselves patriots. Lieutenant-Colonel William was in the Revolution, throughout the war, and in every battle fought in South Carolina. He was popular with his soldiers, requiring nothing of them not shared by himself.

The roster also includes Serg.-Maj. Pleasant Henderson, Capt. Thomas and Samuel.

The family were among the principal founders of the State government at the close of the war.

As a race, they have never been distinguished for intellectual endowments.

We find a great number of college graduates, and the women, even in the early days, were educated as well as the men. Other characteristics are hatred of effeminacy and scorn of cowardliness and physical pain.

Marriage connections included the families of Gov. Alexander Martin, of North Carolina, the Wallaces, the Daltons of Mississippi, and the Brodoux family of North Carolina, the latter armigers from the time of Henry VI, of England.

The Scottish branch intermarried with the families of Bruce, Stuart, Dalrymple of Burleigh and Sir John Hamilton, Lord Chief of Justice.

The arms reproduced, that of the Hendersons of Fordell, and taken from the Baronage of Scotland, in gules, three piles issuing out of the sinister side argent, and on a chief of the last, a crescent azure, between two spots of ermine, with the baronets badge in the center, supporting the mestrices ermine.

Crest, a hand holding a star, surrounded by a crescent.

Motto, Sola Virtus Nobilitatus. (Virtue of nobility alone)
