SIR GEORGE LESLIE, FIRST BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

*George, First
Balquhain.*

THE distinguished family of Balquhain is, as Sir Walter Scott styles it, an ancient and honourable family of an ancient and honourable name. It is descended from Sir George Leslie, fifth son of Sir Andrew de Leslie, sixth Dominus Ejusdem, or of that Ilk, by his wife Mary Abernethy.

Sir George Leslie got the estate of Balquhain, in the Garioch in Aberdeenshire, from his father, and obtained a royal grant of it for his services to Robert Bruce in his wars against Edward II., and in those against Edward Baliol during the minority of David II., from whom, in 1340, he received charters of the lands and baronies of Balquhain, Syde, and Braco, which his family have continued to possess for upwards of 500 years. Hence he and his successors received the style and title of Barons of Balquhain, and use supporters to their arms—a privilege allowed only to the oldest barons, and acquired by this family very deservedly for its public services, antiquity, extensive possessions, and the number, rank, and quality of its descendants. The Barons of Balquhain were wont to be created knights-bachelors, a dignity then only conferred upon earls and great barons, and many of them held the office of Sheriff-principal, or chief magistrate, of their native county of Aberdeen, which office was intrusted solely to the highest nobility.

The following noble and distinguished families in Scotland, Ireland, France, and Germany, are descended from the family of Balquhain :—

- I. The COUNTS LESLIE, in Germany.
- II. The LESLIES of PITCAPLE, from whom are descended the Leslies of Old Craig.
- III. The LESLIES of KINCRAIGIE.
- IV. The LESLIES of WARDIS, baronets, from whom are descended the Leslies of Warthill, the Leslies of Bucharn, the Leslies of Clisson in France, the Leslies of Dyce, the Leslies of Tarbet in Ireland, and the Leslies of Glasslough, also in Ireland.
- V. The LESLIES of NEW LESLIE, from whom are descended the Leslies of Kininvie, and the family of Leslie, Earls of Leven.
- VI. The LESLIES of CRICHIE, from whom was descended General Sir Alexander Leslie of Auchintoul.
- VII. The LESLIES of IDEN, from whom is descended the family of Tytler of Woodhouselee.
- VIII. The LESLIES of CULTS, from whom was descended John Leslie, Bishop of Ross in the reign of Queen Mary.

Sir George Leslie, first Baron of Balquhain, married Elizabeth Keith, daughter of the Baron of Inverugie, and by her had a son, Hamelin, who succeeded him as second Baron of Balquhain.

SIR HAMELIN LESLIE,

SECOND BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

SIR HAMELIN LESLIE, son of Sir George Leslie, first Baron of Balquhain, by his wife Elizabeth Keith of Inverugie, succeeded his father as second Baron of Balquhain in 1351.

Hamelinus de Leslie had a passport or safe-conduct, for himself and two knights, to go into England as far as the city of Canterbury, with liberty to remain there till the ensuing Michaelmas, and then to return to his own country—dated at Westminster, the 10th November 1362.*

Sir Hamelin Leslie married Ann Maxwell, daughter of Lord Maxwell of Carlaverock, whose successors became Earls of Nithsdale. By her he had issue—

I. ANDREW, who succeeded as third Baron of Balquhain.

II. A Daughter, married to the Laird of Baldathsche.

SIR ANDREW LESLIE,

THIRD BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

SIR ANDREW LESLIE, son of Sir Hamelin Leslie, second Baron of Balquhain, by his wife Ann Maxwell, succeeded his father as third Baron of Balquhain in 1378.

*Andrew,
Third
Balquhain.*

Sir Andrew Leslie is documented by an indenture, dated 24th November 1390, between Andrew de Leslie, VIII. Dominus Ejusdem, and Norman Leslie, his son and heir, on the one part, and Andrew de Leslie, Dominus de Syde (third Baron of Balquhain), his cousin, on the other part, relating to the settlement of certain lands; to which indenture Andrew and his son Norman are obliged to procure the confirmation of George de Leslie, Dominus de Rothés, heir of entail to the said Andrew and Norman. By this indenture, Andrew de Leslie of Syde and Balquhain got a grant of £13:6:8 of annual rent, out of the lands of Leslie and Cushnie, from Sir Andrew de Leslie, Dominus Ejusdem, and his son Norman.*

Sir Andrew Leslie seems to have been a turbulent baron, and of very loose morals. He had a numerous progeny of natural children, from whom many Leslies are descended. The Leslies of Buchanstone, Andrew Leslie of Cortashy, James Leslie in Aberdeen, David Leslie in Meikle Durno, George Leslie in Drumdollo, Andrew Leslie in Pitscurry, and many others, were all descended from, or were natural sons of, Sir Andrew Leslie.

One of these natural sons, Andrew Leslie of Pitscurry, was the cause of a great feud between the Leslies and the Forbeses. He carried off the daughter of Thomas Bisset of Balhagarty, commonly called the Fair Maid of Kemnay, and married her,—she being at the time betrothed to Sir John Forbes of Druminnor, ancestor of the Lords Forbes, and who was bailie to the Earl of Mar for the lands of Balhagarty. Forbes having gathered together a great number of men, attacked the castle of Balquhain, and took and burned it. This occasioned much bloodshed, for Sir Andrew Leslie raised his friends, vassals, and followers, and pursued the Forbeses into their own country, and, in retaliation, destroyed the house of Sir John Forbes, and devastated a great part of the Forbeses' lands, killing many of the people and burning their houses.

It was probably in consequence of this feud with Sir John Forbes, and because he had also given offence to the Earl of Mar, that Sir Andrew Leslie withdrew from Balquhain, and occupied an old fortress on the almost inaccessible pinnacle of Bennachie, nearly 2000 feet high, and not far from the castle of Balquhain. Having repaired this strong post, he remained there till he made his peace with the Earl of Mar, when he returned to Balquhain; but he still retained the fort on Bennachie as a place of security.

It is said that, during his abode on Bennachie, he made an incursion, accompanied by a large body of retainers, up to Strathdon, and devastated the lands, and carried off the daughter and heiress of the Baron of Cray, chief of the Clan Allan, and who was called the Fair Maid of Strathdon ; others say that the lady he carried off was a daughter of Sir James Stewart of Inveravon, also called the Fair Maid of Strathdon. It seems certain that by one or other of these ladies he had a natural son, Malcolm, to whom he gave the lands of Cults, and whose great-great-grandson was John Leslie, Bishop of Ross in the reign of Queen Mary.

Sir Andrew Leslie was Master of the Horse under Alexander Stewart, Earl of Mar, and was one of his chief commanders at the battle of Harlaw, fought against Donald, Lord of the Isles, 24th July 1411, about two miles from the castle of Balquhain. In this desperate action Sir Andrew Leslie lost six sons, in commemoration of whom a cross was erected on the field of battle and called Leslie's Cross.

On account of another feud with the Forbesees, Sir Andrew Leslie again withdrew to his fortress on Bennachie, and a force was brought against him under the Sheriff of Angus. Sir Andrew Leslie, having assembled his friends and vassals, came down from his stronghold, and gave battle to his opponents at Braco, about two miles from Bennachie, 22d January 1420. In the heat of the action, his wife, Isabel Mortimer, came and threw herself between the combatants, entreating them to stop the carnage. But her efforts were vain. Sir Andrew Leslie was slain, and many of his vassals fell with him. His widow erected a chaplainry near the spot where he was buried, and appointed a chaplain, and bequeathed an annual rent for the priest in all time coming, to pray for his soul. Patrick Ogilvie, of Ogilvie of Granden, with consent of his father, Alexander Ogilvie, Sheriff of Forfar, also granted an annuity of ten merks forth of the lands of Strathalva in the sheriffdom of Banff, which failing, from the baronies of Owchtirous and Essy in the sheriffdom of Forfar, to a chaplain performing divine service in the chapel of the blessed Virgin Mary of the Garioch, for the soul of Sir Andrew Leslie, knight.*

This chapel, after the Reformation, about 1620, was converted into a parish church, and now gives the name to the parish of Chapel of Garioch, formerly called Logydurno.

Sir Andrew Leslie married Isabel Mortimer, daughter of Bernard Mortimer of Craigievar, and by her had—

- I. WILLIAM, his successor.
- II. ALEXANDER, married to Margaret Leslie, daughter of David de Leslie, IX. Dominus Ejusdem, from whom she received the barony of Leslie in the Garioch, from which her husband derived the style and title of Leslie of Leslie, or of that Ilk.
- III. A Daughter, married to Glaster of Glack.
- IV. A Daughter, married to Munroe of Foulis.
- V. A Daughter, married to Raynold Cheyne of Straloch.

Sir Andrew Leslie, third Baron of Balquhain, was slain, as has been narrated, at Braco, 22d January 1420, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir William Leslie, fourth Baron of Balquhain.

THE BATTLE OF HARLAW.

FOUGHT 28TH JULY 1411.

NEAR this you'll see where famed Harlaw was fought,
When curst rebellion direful mischief wrought ;
Here dreaded Donald from the Isles came down,
Fired with ambition, to attack the crown :
Deep, cunning, artful, he, by various wiles,
Indeed the chieftain of the Western Isles.
Here Mar resolved the rebel force to try,

The gallant Fraser, Baron of Philorth,
Of well-known courage and undoubted worth ;
The Keiths and Forbeses, in bright array,
By him were joined upon that dreadful day ;
Angus, high-sheriff, joined them, with the rest
Of Airly's sons, in manly armour drest ;
From Aberdeen two hundred warriors came,
All clad in steel, and not unknown to fame :
Brave Provost Davidson led this chosen band,
And bold Hugh Rose held next the sub-command.
Mar led the centre—the wings extend at large ;
All keen advance, in order to the charge ;
The noble Keith joined Forbes in the van,
Who led his friends and bravest of his clan ;
Drum and the Leiths, and Leslies of Balquhain,
Upon the left the gallant Gordons join.

The signal given, loud pipes and trumpets sound ;
The direful charge the neighbouring hills resound.

First Keith and Forbes to the battle flew ;
The brave example all the rest pursue.

Like wolves rapacious, these daring foes engage ;
 Scots rush on Scots, soon all was blood and rage.
 The brave Maclean fought on Macdonald's right ;
 He, like the mountain bear, maintained the fight ;
 Though wounded, sorely pressed, and bathed in blood,
 He kept his ground, and made his party good ;
 Still used to conquer, and unknown to yield,
 Hopes still to gain the glory of the field.

At last the Leslies, bordering on the Don, Fired by their chief, who led his warriors on,
 First pierced the ranks, then broke Macdonald's horse,
 And brought the foe to own superior force ;
 Then Drum's proud baron, on a dapple grey,
 Spoke to the Keith, and pointed out the prey ;
 Then as the savage tiger scours the plain,
 They force their way o'er mountains of the slain.
 Now rushing forward, with a well-aimed thrust
 Drum stretched the gallant hero in the dust.

Donald, enraged, called out to all,
 "Revenge Maclean ! or bravely by him fall.
 Let it not now, my gallant friends, be said,
 That we, for courage famed, like cowards fled."
 The yielding islanders at these words now turn,
 Then onward rush, where combats fiercely burn.
 Maclachlan and his clansmen fresh pursue,
 And kindle all the rage of war anew ;
 Though lost their chief, not unrevenged they mourn,
 But wound for wound, and blow for blow return.

Six of the bravest Leslies pressed the plain,
 While round these warriors lay whole heaps of slain.
 Gordons and Forbeses promiscuous fall,
 Death and destruction seemed to threaten all ;
 Through studded targets spears were forceful driven,
 At every blow sad mortal wounds were given.
 Bravely they mock all quarter foes can give,
 Their leader killed, they think it mean to live.

In reward of his services and undaunted bravery, succeeded his father as seventh baron, 16th April 1496.

William Leslie was a proud and boisterous baron, though he lived very honourably according to the fashion of his time. Kennedy, in his Annals of Aberdeen, narrates that on Sunday 1st October 1525, William Leslie, Baron of Balquhain, Alexander Seton of Meldrum, and John Leslie of Wardis, three potent barons in the Garioch, in revenge of an injury supposed to have been done to them, entered the City of Aberdeen at night, with their confederates and retainers, numbering eighty men, armed with spears and other weapons. They attacked the inhabitants with great fury. These instantly flew to arms, and gave battle to the invaders. After a bloody conflict, in which eighty citizens, including several magistrates, were killed or wounded, the invaders were repulsed and driven out of the town. On a complaint made by the citizens to King James V., the affair was investigated, and was finally terminated by the arbitration of certain bishops and nobles. At Aberdeen, 12th February 1527, before the Lords-Justices and Compositors, William Leslie of Balquhain and John Leslie of Wardis entered into an obligation for themselves, their kin, friends, tenents, servants, adherents, and partakers, that they would not molest, vex, inquiet, or trouble, the provost, bailies, council, community and inhabitants of the burgh of Aberdeen, or any one of them, in any manner of way, in time coming, in their persons, lands, or goods, otherwise than the law will, under a penalty of £2000.

After this affair, great precautions were taken by the Magistrates of Aberdeen to prevent the recurrence of such an assault. The ports or gates of the burgh were ordered to be repaired; the vennels, back-dykes, and waste places, to be built up; a watch to be kept by sixteen persons every night, and two sentinels in every steeple by day, to give the alarm on the appearance of any horsemen; all able men to be supplied with culverins, cross-bows, hand-bows, and shooting-pieces; ten additional gunners to be engaged for the artillery, and wappenshaws to be held weekly.

At this time also, as John Leslie, Bishop of Ross, informs us in his History of Scotland, great feuds existed among the barons of Aberdeenshire, and particularly between the powerful families of Leslie and Forbes. A sharp war was carried on between these two families, in which many barons, gentlemen of great consideration, and others of inferior rank, fell, and many murders were committed. Almost the whole of Aberdeenshire came to be engaged in the quarrel, most families siding with one party or the other, so that the county was divided into two factions. During these feuds in 1526, the Forbesees attacked and burned the castle of Balquhain, the stronghold of the Leslies. At length, in 1527, peace was restored by the intervention of Archibald, Earl of Angus, Lord High Chancellor of the kingdom, the lords of the Council, and other noblemen, friends of both parties, who interested themselves, and made these powerful families come to an agreement. But unfortunately, not long afterwards, the Master of Forbes, son of Lord Forbes and the heir of the family, with the Laird of Lentusk, laid wait in ambush for Alexander Seton, the Baron of Meldrum, a great friend and ally of the Leslies, and basely murdered him. The quarrel between the Leslies and the Forbeses broke out again more violently than before, and much injury was inflicted on both sides. The nobility again interfered, and by their intervention peace was restored. The murderers were banished, and took refuge in France. To prevent the recurrence of the feud, John, Lord Forbes, infested William Leslie of Balquhain in the lands of Cultercullane and Pettemwk, and in twenty-four shillings of annual rent furth of the alehouse of Fudess, in fulfilment of the decret-arbitral given at Aberdeen, 11th February 1527, and for security and keeping kindness, and eschewing of troubles and inconveniences.

Although this peace continued to be maintained between the Leslies and the Forbeses, yet there always remained animosities between the families, because the house of Balquhain and its numerous branches always adhered to the Earls of Huntly in their quarrels with the Forbesees, and William Leslie of Balquhain was one of those who signed the general band of noblemen and barons of the North, whereby they bound themselves to George, Earl of Huntly, to obey him in his office of Lieutenant of the North, and to search, seek, and apprehend malefactors, and to punish them, or to deliver them to the Judge-ordinary of the said Lord-lieutenant—dated at Elgin 8th December 1544.*

In 1530, William Leslie repaired, or rather rebuilt the castle of Balquhain, which had been burned by the Forbesees, and he erected the noble square tower or keep, so as to make the castle a place of some strength, and capable of offering resistance to any further assault. He also added to the family estates the lands of Whitecross, Inveramsay, Pitbee, and Newlands, which he acquired by purchase.

William Leslie of Balquhain was one of the jury in the service and retour of Abercromby of Birkenbog, at Banff, 31st October 1506, and he was chancellor of a jury consisting of fifteen persons, at the Burgh Court of Aberdeen, held 12th December 1544 for the trial of defaulters.

William Leslie got a precept of Chancery, 23d July 1511, for infefting him in the lands of Balquhain; the Nethertown and Oldtown of Knockinlews; four bovates of the lands of Harlaw; the lands of Selbie, Lochtilloch, Whitecross, and Knockallochy, with the mill; two bovates of the lands of Ressavate; two parts of the lands of Wardis Flemyng, and of Wraes; the lands of Syde, with the mill and alehouse; the lands of Seggyden and Erlesfield, in the regality of the Garioch; and on the 29th July 1511, he obtained from King James IV. a royal charter of the above-mentioned lands united into one free barony, the barony of Balquhain.

On the 7th April 1514, William Leslie of Balquhain, and Elizabeth Ogilvie his wife, got a charter from King James V. of the lands of Syd, with the mill, Erlisfeild, Segateden, and the Wraes, in the earldom of Mar and lordship of the Garioch.

John Leslie, eldest son of William Leslie, seventh Baron of Balquhain, styled heir-apparent of Balquhain, and who succeeded as eighth baron, had a son also called John Leslie, styled younger or fiar of Balquhain, to whom his grandfather made over his rights to the family estates. JOHN LESLIE, EIGHTH BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

1545. JOHN LESLIE, eldest son of William Leslie, seventh Baron of Balquhain, by his first wife, Elizabeth Ogilvie, succeeded as eighth baron, on the death of his father, in 1545.

1546. John Leslie of Balquhain was chancellor of a jury at a Burgh Court, held in Aberdeen, 22d January 1546, for the trial of William Anderson, a publican, accused of purchasing wine from foreigners, and selling it before the price was fixed by the bailies and council. He was Deputy-sheriff of Aberdeen in 1548.

1548. On 16th January of that year we find him presiding at the court held in Aberdeen, for taxing all the lands within the sheriffdom of Aberdeen, by command of the Queen and Council, that money might be raised for resisting the threatened invasion of the realm by our old enemies of England. Among the lords and barons forming the assize, we find Alexander Leslie of Wardis, and Alexander Leslie of that Ilk; and among the landowners who were taxed, we find the Laird of Balquhain, for his lands of the same, xx. lib.; the Laird of Leslie, for his lands of the same, x. lib.; the Laird of Pitcaple, for his lands of the same, v. lib.; the Laird of Iden, for his lands of the same, iiij. lib.; the Laird of Coclarachy Leslie, xxx. sh.; Gordoune Leslie, portioneris of Warthill, ilk ane of thaim, xxx. sh.; Alexander Leslie of Wardess, for his lands Gareauche and Kyntour, of old extent, feftie libs.; the Laird of Auchinhuwff, for his lands of the same, ix. libs.*

Soon after this, John Leslie was raised to the office of Sheriff-principal of Aberdeen, and we find that George Leith of Edingarioch was served heir to his uncle, George Leith of Barnes, before John Leslie of Balquhain, Vicecomes de Aberdene, 13th January 1550.

John Leslie of Balquhain was a staunch adherent of George, Earl of Huntly, and we find him frequently as a witness to the bands of manrent entered into between that nobleman and the barons and gentlemen of the northern counties. John Leslie, styled of Syde, during the lifetime of his father, William, seventh Baron, is witness to the band between James Garioch of Kynstair, and George, Earl of Huntly, 10th June 1536;† to the band of Alexander Gordon of Strathoune, 5th

As has been related, Alexander Seton of Meldrum, an ally of the Leslies, had been basely murdered by the Master of Forbes and his followers, one of whom was Alexander Forbes, commonly called Spangare. John Leslie, son and apparent-heir of William Leslie of Balquhain, Alexander Leslie of Kincaigie, and an adherent called John Keith, appear to have attacked and slain this Alexander Forbes, or Spangare, on a Sunday, for which they obtained a remission under the Privy Seal, from King James V., 9th February 1527.

John Leslie of Balquhain, and William Leslie, his son, are witnesses to an inventory of the silver and gold work, sacred utensils, and church-furniture, of the Cathedral of Aberdeen, which were delivered to the keeping of the canons of the said cathedral, by William Gordon, Bishop of Aberdeen, 7th July 1559. NINTH BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

WILLIAM LESLIE, son of John Leslie, eighth Baron of Balquhain, by his wife Elizabeth Leslie of Ardoyne, succeeded as ninth Baron of Balquhain, on the death of his father, in 1561.

William Leslie was a man of great abilities, and acquired so much influence that he was held in great esteem by all the great nobility. Indeed, by his means the Earls of Huntly and Atholl, between whom serious feuds existed, were brought to a reconciliation. Hollinshed, in his Scottish Chronicles, vol. ii. p. 306, writes, "Great troubles were in divers parts of the realm, and openly betwixt the Earl of Huntly and the Earl of Atholl. There was taking of prisoners and overthrowing of houses on either part, and great preparations made and arms in readiness to invade either other's countries. But this business was pacified by the good mediation of Mr. Alexander Gordon, Postulat of Galloway; Mr. John Leslie, Official of Aberdeen; and William Leslie, the young Laird of Balquhain, who agreed them in all matters of controversie, and caused them to go to either other's houses."

William Leslie had the honour of receiving and entertaining Queen Mary in his castle of Balquhain. The queen being at Aberdeen on her progress to the north, William Leslie invited her to visit him at his castle of Balquhain, which is situated about eighteen miles north-west of Aberdeen, near the great north road to Huntly and Strathbogie. Queen Mary accepted the invitation, and passed the night at Balquhain Castle, 9th September 1562. During her stay there she attended Mass in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin of the Garioch.

It was on this occasion, and in the castle of Balquhain, that it is said the Earl of Huntly designed to sacrifice his rival, the newly-created Earl of Moray, Lord James Stewart, the queen's natural brother, who was one of the guests. But William Leslie would not on any account consent to become accessory to such a deed, and by his influence he dissuaded the Earl of Huntly from the design. The different writers of the period give different versions of the story, each relating it according to his difference of party and religious feelings. The facts seem to be as follows:—

1524. George, fourth Earl of Huntly, who succeeded to the earldom in 1524, was made Lord Chancellor of Scotland on the death of Cardinal Beaton, and got the Great Seal in 1546. He also got a grant of the earldom of Moray from Queen Mary, 1546. 13th February 1548, and was appointed the queen's Lieutenant in the North. During the queen's absence in France, Huntly had been deprived of the chancellorship, which the queen, on her return, restored to him, but at the same time took from him the earldom of Moray, which she gave to her natural brother, Lord James Stewart, Prior of St. Andrews, who had recently been created Earl of Mar. This gave rise to implacable enmity between the two earls, of which the enemies of Moray, and of his friend the Earl of Morton, took advantage to plot his ruin. Huntly being at the head of the Catholic party, the queen's maternal relations of the house of Guise had great expectations that he would restore that religion, and they held out hopes to him that the queen would marry his second son, Sir John Gordon of Findlater. It is possible that Huntly entertained this project proposed to him, although he never intended to seize the queen, or to force her to it against her will, as his enemies gave out. If this had been his design, he might easily have executed it, as the queen was frequently in his power, had he been disposed to use force.

In a History of the Douglas and Angus family, we are told that Huntly gathered a force under pretence of receiving the queen in her journey north, but really with a view of cutting off Moray and Morton; and that the queen went from Aberdeen to Bowhane in August 1562, the house of one Master Leslie, a gentleman, twelve miles off, and that this was thought by Huntly and his friends to be a fit place to execute their designs on Moray and Morton; but Leslie, although he was Huntly's friend, would upon no terms give way to have it done in his house.

David Scott, in his History of Scotland, book vi. p. 394, says that Queen Mary, in her progress to the north, arrived at Aberdeen about the 15th of August 1562, and on proceeding on her journey towards Inverness, she lodged the first night with John (William) Leslie of Balquhain at his castle; the next night at Rothiemay; and the third day was invited by the Earl of Huntly to his castle at Strathbogie. But the queen denied this, or any favour to him, until his son, John Gordon, had given obedience to her command. So she kept on her journey, and the next day she arrived at Inverness.

Another account states that the queen being at Aberdeen in August 1562, she was there met by the Countess of Huntly, who interceded in behalf of her second son, Sir John Gordon, who had been taken prisoner for having wounded Lord Ogilvie in a fray, and, having made his escape, had been declared an outlaw. The countess begged that the queen would grant his pardon, and allow him to come into her presence and kiss her hand. The queen replied that she could not admit him into her presence until such time as he should surrender himself to justice; whereupon the countess promised that he would surrender, and Lord Glamis was appointed to conduct Sir John to Stirling Castle. On his way, however, Sir John altered his resolution, and made his escape, and retired to the north, and collected a large body of followers, which much incensed the queen. In the meantime, the queen had proceeded on her journey northward, intending to go to Huntly's house in Strathbogie, where great preparations had been made to receive her. The Earl of Huntly met her on the way, at Balquhain Castle, and he there besought her to pardon his son, Sir John, but she remained inexorable; and the earl having pressed her more solicitously than was proper to go to his castle, she determined not to go. Others say that Mary came to this resolution at the instigation of the Earl of Moray. Be it as it may, the queen proceeded to Inverness without visiting Huntly, and on her arrival there she found, to her surprise, that the Earl of Huntly's deputy-governor refused to admit her into the castle without the orders of Lord Gordon. The queen, having raised the forces of the country, prepared to carry the place by assault, which was rendered unnecessary by the surrender of the governor, who was hanged, and the queen returned to Aberdeen.

Whether Huntly's ambition, which had spurred him on, now necessarily drove him forward as he had gone too far to retrace his steps, and he resolved either to procure a full pardon, or to seize the queen; or whether he dreaded Moray's influence with the queen to effect his ruin; he determined to collect troops to protect or to avenge himself. With his followers he moved towards Aberdeen, threatening to attack Moray, who was there with the queen. It is said that he received secret intelligence from his friends, the Earl of Sutherland, the Laird of Balquhain, Black Arthur Forbes, and others, then within the city, who informed him of all that took place there, and assured him that the town's people, being his kindred or allied to him, neither would nor dared oppose him. But the letters of the Earl of Sutherland and of the Laird of Balquhain were intercepted, and the designs of Huntly upon the town were discovered and defeated.

Moray and Morton resolved to attack and disperse the force which Huntly had collected. They had only one hundred men with them, but, armed with the queen's authority, they issued a proclamation calling upon all who could bear arms to attend the queen. About 2000 men answered the summons, and amongst these were a considerable number of Leslies, under their chief, the Laird of Balquhain; Moray trusting that, though they were inclined to favour Huntly, yet their duty and allegiance to their queen would not suffer them to betray her. On the 28th October 1562, Moray marched with these forces from Aberdeen to attack Huntly, who was lying at the Loch of Skene, about ten miles distant, with a force which had melted away to about 500 men. The principal leaders of Moray's army were the Earl of Errol, Lord Forbes, the Laird of Balquhain, in the vanguard; and John, Prior of Coldingham, with some horsemen: the main body being commanded by the Earls of Moray, Morton, and Atholl. The vanguard drove Huntly from the Loch of Skene to Corrichie, a place on the Hill of Fair, about six miles distant, where they skirmished with him, and sent word to the Earl of Moray to come up with the southern men. When Moray came up the vanguard prepared to engage, and began to attack. But, as the chronicler says, "incontinent thereafter thae fled back upon the gentlemen of Louthian; and, as some say, purposing to have causet them to flee also, and to be overrun to the effect that the Earl of Huntly might have obtinet the victory. But the gentlemen of Louthian stand firmle still, and the said Erles company coming upon the Louthian men, was put upon their bakkes with speiris and thereafter fled, quhan followit great slaughter."

The truth seems to be that these unwilling enemies of Huntly marched boldly up as if to attack him, and then turned and fled, calling out, Treason! Huntly, thinking to drive Moray before him during the confusion caused by the retreat of the vanguard, too hastily left his strong ground and advantageous position, and was attacked on the low ground by Moray, Morton, and Atholl, with the horse, and suffered a complete defeat. The Earl of Huntly himself was slain, and his son, Sir John Gordon, was taken prisoner, and was immediately executed. The immense estates of the family were seized by the crown, and the title was forfeited.

David Scott, in his History of Scotland, book vi. pp. 394, 395, gives the following account of the defeat of the Earl of Huntly:—

"After the castle of Inverness was taken, the queen remained in it a few days, and then set out for Aberdeen, where she arrived in four days. The Countess of Huntly came with offers of submission from her husband, but was denied access. Huntly, finding matters turn out contrary to his expectations, assembled his friends and approached the town of Aberdeen, he having great hopes to attain the queen's pardon for his being in arms, by the intercession of the Earl of Sutherland and the Baron of Balquhain, who were with the queen and kept close correspondence with the Earl of Huntly. But their letters being intercepted, the Earl of Sutherland made his escape, and Leslie of Balquhain being brought before the Council and examined, confessed what he knew, whereupon he was pardoned, and continued in the queen's service. Huntly upon this would have dismissed his forces, and returned home; but hearing that the Earl of Moray was approaching with a party of the queen's forces raised in Lothian, Fife, Angus, Strathern, etc., he resolved to give them battle. The Earl of Moray, with the Earl of Morton and Lord Lindsay, advanced. Finding Huntly resolved to fight, Moray seemed to retire by bringing his men to some ground of greater advantage, which retreat being mistaken for a flight by Huntly's party, they advanced precipitately, and coming disorderly to an engagement, were soon worsted with great slaughter."

William Leslie was Sheriff of Aberdeen under the queen's Lieutenant of the North, the Earl of Huntly. In this capacity he afforded the utmost assistance in protecting the cathedral of Aberdeen from the ravages of the Reformers, and he preserved that ancient edifice from being demolished by the furious zealots in 1560. As a magistrate he defended from the attacks of the Reformers the Bishop of Aberdeen, William Gordon, brother of the Earl of Huntly, and supported him in his diocese by force of arms when all the other bishops of Scotland were persecuted. The bishop, as a mark of his gratitude for the kindness and services shown to him in those trying times, bestowed on William Leslie the barony of Fetternear, with the palace, which was the bishop's summer-residence, the tower and fortalice of the same, with the salmon-fishing in the river Don, and all other pendicles; the lands of Talzeaucht, lying in the shire of Fetternear; the lands of Bonyngton, with the mill, multures, and crofts of the same; the lands of Lowesk, and the third part of the town and lands of Ledintusche; the lands of Custestoun, in the shire of Rayne; the lands of Auchlyne, with the mill of the same; the croft of Blairdinny, in the shire of Clatt, with all their pendicles, lying within the county of Aberdeen. The bishop granted to William Leslie a charter of all these lands, dated 8th June 1566, which charter was confirmed by a Royal charter,

If this is correct, it would appear that William Leslie was thrice married.

John Leslie of Balquhain was Sheriff-principal of Aberdeen for many years. Patrick Leith of Likelyhead was served heir to his father, George Leith of Barns and Edingarioch, before John Leslie of Balquhain, Sheriff of Aberdeen, 4th October 1580. Again, in 1584, John Leslie of Balquhain succeeded the Earl of Huntly as Sheriff of Aberdeen; and in the Diet-book of the Sheriff-court of Aberdeen we find him frequently mentioned, as presiding as Sheriff, up to 1597.

John Leslie of Balquhain lived in splendid magnificence, and by his expensive habits he much encumbered his estates. He never rode out without an escort of at least twenty vassals or followers, who attended him on horseback. We find the following account of the Baron of Balquhain and his retinue in the Book of Bonaccord:—

Munroes and the Clan Cheinzie, two families of great power and influence in the county of Ross, owing to the following circumstance:—John Leslie, Bishop of Ross, made over his right and title to the castle of the Channonrie of Ross, with the castle-lands, to his consanguineus, or cousin, John Leslie, then fiar, afterwards tenth Baron of Balquhain. But it happened that the Regent Moray, some time in 1569, the year before his death, had given the custody of this castle to Andrew Munroe of Miltown, to which he got the Baron of Balquhain to agree, on condition that he was to get a portion of the lands of Tintries, in Buchan, in lieu of the said castle and its lands. But the untimely death of the regent, 23d January 1570, interrupted this agreement, and Andrew Munroe was disappointed in his hope of retaining peaceable possession of the castle. However, the Earl of Lennox and the Earl of Mar, successive regents of the kingdom, kept Munroe in possession of the castle, whereupon the Clan Cheinzie purchased from John Leslie of Balquhain his right and title to the castle and the castle-lands, and then besieged the castle, which the Munroes defended for three years. Great loss was sustained on both sides, and the castle was finally given up to the Clan Cheinzie by an act of pacification.

In 1594, the three Catholic lords, Huntly, Errol, and Angus, were excommunicated by the Scotch Kirk, and were also attainted by a summary proceeding of the Scottish Parliament, under the presence that they had conspired against the Kirk and the State. James VI., urged by Queen Elizabeth and his own ministers, much against his will, consented to the forfeiture of these nobles, and the Earl of Argyle was appointed the king's lieutenant-general to reduce them. Argyle, accompanied by the Earl of Tullibardine, Sir Lauchlan Maclean, the Laird of Grant, Macintosh, the whole Clan Campbell, Clan Gregor, and many others, whom hatred of the Gordons or the hope of gain had induced to join him, mustering in all about 12,000 men, marched through the mountains to the Highlands. On the 27th September 1594, Argyle attacked the castle of Ruthven in Badenoch, but he was obliged to raise the siege, the castle being gallantly defended by the Clan Macpherson. He then returned to the Lowlands, and, in the king's name he summoned and called on Lord Forbes, Leslie of Balquhain, the Irvines, the Ogilvies, and others, and on Lord Lovat, the Frasers, the Clan Cheinzie, the Munroes, and others in the Highlands, to join him. In the meantime, he had marched from Badenoch towards Strathdown, and on the 2d October 1594 he encamped near Drimmin, upon the river Avon.

Huntly and Errol, on learning the great preparations which had been made against them, displayed great courage and resolution: Errol went to Strathbogie, with 100 mounted gentlemen and some artillery, to join Huntly. They advanced to Auchindown with 1500 resolute horsemen, all determined to die in the field rather than submit to the mercy of their enemies. Huntly, having got intelligence of the designs of Argyle, and of the route by which he was to descend from the mountains, moved forward on the 3d October from Auchindown, and sent in advance Captain Thomas Ker, with a party of horse, to reconnoitre the country, and to ascertain the movements of the enemy. This patrol, meeting a party of Argyle's men sent out for the same purpose, attacked and killed them. This incident so much encouraged Huntly, that he determined to fight Argyle before Lord Forbes and the other forces could arrive. So he continued his advance towards the enemy, who had passed Glenlivat, and was at Alachanlochan in Strathdown.

Argyle was astonished to find that Huntly, with such a disparity of force, should venture to meet him. He immediately prepared for battle. He arranged his forces upon a steep, rough, heather hill, between Glenlivat and Glenrinnis, the lower slope of which, as well as the foreground, was mossy and full of peat-holes or pits. His advanced corps, consisting of 4000 men, of whom 2000 were hagbuteers and musketeers, was under the command of Sir Lauchlan Maclean and Macintosh; while Argyle himself, and the Earl of Tullibardine, were with the main body.

Huntly's advanced guard consisted of 300 mounted gentlemen, under the Earl of Errol, Sir Patrick Gordon of Auchindown, Gordon of Gight, and Captain Thomas Ker. Huntly himself followed with the rest of his force, which consisted entirely of cavalry, having the Laird of Cluny-Gordon on his right, and Gordon of Abergeldie on his left flank. Owing to them being all horsemen, the nature of the ground was much against them, because, in order to reach the enemy, they were obliged to pass the mossy ground, and to ride up the rough hill through high heather.

Huntly began the attack by ordering a battery of three field-guns, under Captain Andrew Gray, to open upon the enemy, which was done with much effect, causing great confusion among them, and killing Macneil, the third son of the Laird of Barra, one of their bravest officers, and Campbell of Lochnell, who carried the standard. The advance-guard, perceiving the disorder of the enemy's ranks, instantly charged. Sir Patrick Gordon, with his own men, galloped right up the hill against Sir Lauchlan Maclean, while Errol made a detour to attack the right flank. Maclean received the charge with great firmness, and a furious fight was continued for some time, and Sir Patrick Gordon was slain; Maclean's force being vastly superior, he nearly surrounded his assailants, and the Earl of Errol was in danger of being cut off. Huntly, however, speedily advanced to his support, and in doing so, he had a horse shot under him. The battle was renewed, and continued for two hours, when Argyle's main body began to give way, and fled towards the burn of Alachanlochan, leaving Maclean still fighting manfully. At length Maclean retired in good order, and Huntly pursued the enemy beyond the burn of Alachanlochan, when the steepness of the mountains prevented his further progress.

Argyle lost 700 men, and his standard was found on the field of battle, and was taken in triumph to Strathbogie, where it was placed on the top of the Great Tower. On Huntly's side, Sir Patrick Gordon of Auchindown and twenty other gentlemen were slain, and forty or fifty were wounded. Argyle had assured himself of victory, and among his personal baggage, which fell into Huntly's hands, there was found a document in which the lands of Huntly, of Errol, and of their supporters, were promised to the Earl of Argyle and his army.

In the meantime, Lord Forbes, John Leslie of Balquhain, and Irvine of Drum, had, in consequence of Argyle's summons in the king's name, assembled all their followers, in order to join him against Huntly. But on learning Argyle's defeat, some of them, Lord Forbes and others, resolved to join the Highlanders who were coming from Moray and Ross to Argyle's assistance, and to attack Huntly as he returned from Glenlivat, thinking that it would be no difficult matter to overcome him, and thus revenge old quarrels. With this design, all the Forbeses, with some of the Leslies and Irvines, met at Druminnor, Lord Forbes's place, under cover of a dark night, and commenced their march. During the march, a gentleman of the name of Irvine was killed by a pistol-shot, close by the side of Lord Forbes. The pistols of the whole party were immediately examined, and were all found loaded, so that it was never ascertained who fired the shot. It was conjectured that it was done by some adherent of the Gordons, who might have got close to them in the darkness of the night. The untoward incident created much confusion, and cast such doubts on the minds of the Forbeses and Irvines, every man suspecting his neighbour, that they parted company, and all returned to their homes. The northern clans were prevented from joining Argyle by the persuasion of John Dunbar of Monyness, whose mother had married Sir Patrick Gordon of Auchindown as her second husband.

The king, James VI., on hearing of Argyle's defeat, advanced from Dundee to Strathbogie, and, though much against his own inclination, he permitted the houses of Huntly, Errol, Gordon of Newton, and of other adherents of Huntly, to be burned or destroyed, under the pretext that priests were harboured in them. Huntly had retired into Sutherlandshire while the king was marching towards Strathbogie. When the king went south again, he left Lennox as his Lieutenant in the North. Huntly and Errol went to Lennox in Aberdeen, where he resided, and they consented to leave the kingdom during the king's pleasure. Huntly embarked at Aberdeen in March 1595, and went to Flanders and Germany, where he travelled for some time, till he was recalled by the king, and, together with Errol and Angus, was restored to his honours and estates at a parliament held at Edinburgh in November 1596. He was created Marquis of Huntly in 1599, and the Forbeses, Leslies, Irvines, and the northern clans, willingly reconciled themselves with him.

It is certain that the king was not sorry for Argyle's defeat, and that he made jests about it. Lennox, whom he made his Lieutenant in the North, was Huntly's brother-in-law. Gordon of Straloch states that he found among the papers of his father, Sir John Gordon of Pitlurg, letters in the king's own hand to Huntly, giving him advice how to behave in the several conjunctures that might happen, and that his father did service to Huntly by conveying his messages to the king; and that this correspondence continued while the king was at Aberdeen, by means of Pitlurg, who, four nights after the king's departure, gave Lennox a treat (a supper) in his own house in that city, at which Straloch himself, then a young man, was present; and that he saw there the Earl of Huntly and John Leslie of Balquhain, a man of prime note in these parts; and that this could not be done without the king's knowledge.* The king's political exigencies compelled him to act against Huntly and Errol, but he never looked on them as his enemies, and his feelings were shared by many who answered Argyle's summons to join him against them, especially by the Leslies and the Irvines. That the Leslies were not Huntly's enemies is plainly shown by the presence of John Leslie of Balquhain at the interview between him and Lennox in Pitlurg's house, and by their subsequent friendship, and by the bond of manrent, executed 21st March 1603, between George, Marquis of Huntly, and his special friend and servant, John Leslie of Balquhain. That the Leslies of Balquhain and the Irvines of Drum were not enemies of the Earl of Errol, is shown by the letter of John Crychtoun, younger of Fren draught, to John Leslie of Balquhain, and by that of Alexander Irvine of Drum and John Crychtoun to John Leslie, purporting that they three—John Leslie of Balquhain, Alexander Irvine of Drum, and John Crychtoun of Fren draught—had been chosen as impartial arbiters in a dispute between the Earl of Errol and the Earl Marischal.

John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, granted a procuratory for resigning the lands and barony of Fetternear into the hands of Patrick, Bishop of Aberdeen, for new infeftment to be given to John Leslie, his eldest son, 3d July 1621. He also resigned the office of Constable of the Bishop's palace, Aberdeen, in favour of Patrick, Bishop of Aberdeen.†

1621.

John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, married, first, in 1564, Elizabeth Grant, daughter of the Baron of Grant. The marriage-contract is dated 15th February 1564, and by it William Leslie, ninth Baron of Balquhain, obliged himself to infeft his eldest son and apparent heir, John Leslie, and his future spouse, Elizabeth Grant, in the lands of Kirkhill.‡ By Elizabeth Grant John Leslie had issue—

I. JOHN, who succeeded as eleventh Baron of Balquhain.

II. WILLIAM, who succeeded his nephew John as thirteenth Baron of Balquhain.

John Leslie is said to have divorced his first wife, Elizabeth Grant.

John Leslie of Balquhain granted a charter, 20th February 1595, to George, Earl Marischal, of the lands of Pitbee and Inveramsay, during the lifetime of Lady Elizabeth Hay, spouse to the said John Leslie.* By Lady Elizabeth Hay John Leslie had issue a daughter—

ISABELLA, married to Alexander Hay of Dalgety.

Lady Elizabeth Hay obtained a decret of divorcement against her husband, John Leslie of Balquhain, before the Commissaries of Edinburgh, 9th March 1597;† and John Leslie, reader at the kirk of Fetternear, granted a certificate that he had read the said decret of divorcement in the kirk of Fetternear, and proclaimed the said John Leslie his banns to marry when, where, and whom he pleased, 23d April 1598.‡ John Leslie, fiar of Balquhain, confirmed the provision made by John Leslie of Balquhain in favour of Lady Elizabeth Hay, 23d September 1597;§ and Lady Elizabeth Hay, Lady Pitcullen, renounced all right which she had in the barony of Balquhain, in favour of John Leslie of Balquhain, her former husband, 7th April 1609.||

It is said that all the three wives of John Leslie of Balquhain were alive at the same time, and that on one occasion they were all in the same kirk of Chapel of Garioch.

By Jean Erskine John Leslie had issue—

It would appear that John Leslie had another son, probably a natural one, who had two sons, one a lawyer in Edinburgh in 1652, named Alexander, and the other, William, who was a bailie in Edinburgh. These two, in letters written by William, thirteenth Baron of Balquhain, and his successor, Alexander, fourteenth baron, are called the nephews of the said barons.

John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, died in June 1622, and was succeeded by his eldest son, John Leslie, eleventh Baron of Balquhain.

JOHN LESLIE, eldest son of John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, by his first wife, Elizabeth Grant of Grant, succeeded, as eleventh Baron of Balquhain, on the death of his father in June 1622.

We find by the Records of the Sheriff-Court of Aberdeen that, 1st October 1616, John Leslie, fiar of Balquhain, and John Cheyne of Arnage, at a meeting of freeholders held at the Michaelmas Court in Aberdeen, were elected Commissioners conjunctly to attend Parliament. This appears to be the earliest election of which mention is made. In those times the Members of Parliament for shires were usually elected annually, and they required a qualification of forty shillings land in superiority, holding of the king, of old extent, or when this extent did not appear, then of lands worth £400 Scots rent, holding of the king.

John Leslie, like his father, lived very expensively, and by his extravagant habits he involved the family estates still more. He wadsett or mortgaged great part of his property, particularly the lands and barony of Fetternear, Alexander Abercromby, eldest son of Hector Abercromby, obtained a confirmation of the above charters from Pope Clement X., 20th September 1670; and the barony of Fetternear remained in the possession of the Abercrombys until it was redeemed by Patrick, Count Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, in 1690.

Twelfth
Balquhain.*

JOHN LESLIE, eldest son of John Leslie, eleventh Baron of Balquhain, by Janet Innes his wife, succeeded as twelfth Baron of Balquhain, on the death of his father, in 1638.

1638.

Owing to the expensive habits and mismanagement of his father and grandfather, the tenth and eleventh barons, John Leslie found the family estates much reduced, and deeply in debt, so that little remained to him but the castle and Mains of Balquhain. He therefore left his estates to nurse, and being a gallant young gentleman, he served in the civil wars from 1639 till 1647, as captain in the troop of Guards of Alexander Leslie, Earl of Leven, General of the Scotch army. After this he left his native country, and went first to Germany, and from thence to Russia, where he entered the Muscovite service, in which he attained the rank of colonel of cavalry.

In the time of John Leslie, twelfth Baron of Balquhain, Alexander Gordon of Kincaigie had the lands of Syde, with the mill, the Peil, the customs of St. Rule's fair, the alehouse-croft of Syde, Arnbrig, Erllisfeild, Seggydene, Kirkhill, and Mostown, adjudged to him from the heirs of Balquhain on the following grounds:—

But Walter, Count Leslie, having acquired large properties and high rank in Germany, also renounced his right in favour of his elder brother, Alexander Leslie, called the Goodman of Tullos, with whom William made an arrangement, on receiving an annuity, to give up the succession in his favour, about 1659. Alexander Leslie bound himself to pay an annuity of 700 merks out of the lands of Tullos to Walter, Count Leslie, during the lifetime of William Leslie, 24th June 1659; and by a letter, dated 17th February 1660, Walter, Count Leslie, desired Alexander Leslie to pay the said annuity to William Leslie. †

William Leslie of Balquhain married Marjory Bernard, an English lady, by whom he had five sons and five daughters, who all died in their minority, except one daughter, Mary, who married Sir Elias Lechton, knight, who was colonel of a regiment.

The Laurus Leslaena observes that it is remarkable that of all the Barons of Balquhain none of them hitherto had failed to have a male heir of their own bodies to succeed them, except this William, the thirteenth baron, and his predecessor, John, the twelfth baron, who were the only two of the family who had become Protestants, and the Laurus says the same has happened in other Scotch families. It may also be remarked that James, Count Leslie, the seventeenth baron, Ernest, Count Leslie, the eighteenth baron, and Peter Leslie Grant, the nineteenth baron, who were Protestants, also died childless.

COUNT ALEXANDER LESLIE,

FOURTEENTH BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

ALEXANDER LESLIE of Tullos, third son of John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, by his third wife, Jean Erskine, sister of Thomas, first Earl of Kellie, succeeded as fourteenth Baron of Balquhain on the death of his brother, William Leslie, thirteenth baron, in 1671. He had held the estates of Balquhain since 1659, when William Leslie resigned them in his favour, but he did not assume the title of Baron of Balquhain during his brother's lifetime, but was styled Alexander Leslie of Tullos.

Alexander Leslie lived long very frugally upon the small property of Tullos, and his brother Walter, Count Leslie, frequently remitted to him considerable sums of money from Germany, which, with his own prudence, enabled him wonderfully to retrieve the family fortune, and, in some measure, to restore it to its ancient splendour. He was created a count of the Holy Roman Empire by the Emperor Leopold I., by patent dated at Vienna, 31st May 1662; the Emperor bestowing this honour on him to show his appreciation of the services rendered to the empire by his brother Count Walter Leslie. centis et amplius annis prosapia illa floret, ex variis authoribus, manuscriptis et testimoniis fide dignis in unum collecta. Graecii, Apud Heredes Widmanstadij, Anno 1692. The Honourable John Gordon, aged 80, second son of John, third Earl of Aboyne, stated in his evidence, given in 1760, in the law-process between Anthony, Count Leslie, and Peter Leslie Grant, that he had been educated at the Scotch college at Douai, where he became acquainted with the Rev. William Leslie, who was residing in the Scotch college there, and was remarkable for having a hare-lip; and he afterwards saw the Rev. William Leslie in Scotland, where he was superior of the Catholic missions; and that he knew that some time afterwards he went to be rector of the Scotch college at Rome. During the time that he was at Douai, in 1693, the Rev. William Leslie informed him that he was the chief compiler of the Laurus Leslæana—a work containing the genealogy and the history of the family of Leslie, published in 1692, and also presented him with a copy of the work. He recollected seeing in the college at Douai a picture in oil, said to be the portrait of one of the German branch of the family of Balquhain—a copperplate copy of which picture is at the beginning of the Laurus Leslæana, which is dedicated to James, second Count Leslie. There is a great eulogium of the Rev. William Leslie in Sir Andrew Balfour's "Advice for Travelling." Besides the Laurus Leslæana, the Rev. William Leslie also wrote in Italian La Vita di Santa Margarita, Regina di Scozia, published at Rome in 1691. In the Laurus Leslæana, under Alexander, fourteenth Baron of Balquhain, he makes the following mention of himself:—"Tertiogenitus Guilielmus Aloysius relicto canonicatu Wratislaviensi Romae Societatem Jesu ingressus, ibidem postea fuit Colegii Scotorum Rector." In his enumeration he calls himself the third son of Alexander, fourteenth baron, not counting the first-born son John, who died young.

V. ALEXANDER, a Count of the Holy Roman Empire, who went over to Germany to his brother James, second Count Leslie, by whom he was educated. Being a man of genius, he first applied himself to letters, and made great progress in learning. But on receiving the rank of lieutenant-colonel in Mansfeld's regiment from the Emperor, he quitted the closet and signalised himself as much in the field of Mars as he had done in the school of Minerva. He was also appointed chamberlain to the Emperor. During the famous siege of Vienna by the Turks in 1683, Alexander, Count Leslie, commanded his regiment with great gallantry. Being ordered by Count Staremburg, the governor, to make a sortie on the besiegers, while commanding and leading on his men, he was mortally wounded, and died with pious resignation 8th August 1683, and was buried in the Leslie Chapel at the Scotch Benedictine Abbey in Vienna. He married Cressentia Christina, Countess Heberstein, only daughter and heiress of George Gunthereus, Count Heberstein, and by her had a son, Francis James, Count Leslie, who died without issue in 1700.

succeeded as fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, on the death of his father, 3d March 1677, in consequence of his elder brother, James, having succeeded his uncle, Walter, Count Leslie, in Germany, in 1667.

Patrick, Count Leslie, was born in 1640. He was made a Privy Councillor by King James VII. in 1686. The Laurus Leslæana says of him "Est hic Patritius a serenissimo nostro rege et clementissimo Domino Jacobo VII., in intimum Scotiæ consilium adlectus, vir prudens justus et fidei avitæ tenax." Patrick, Count Leslie of Balquhain, is on the roll of freeholders, 8th October 1690, who were obliged to give suit, service, and presence, at the three head-courts held yearly by the Sheriff of Aberdeen.

Patrick, Count Leslie, was a frugal and virtuous gentleman. With the aid of money which he received from his brother, James, Count Leslie, in Germany, he redeemed much of the property which had formerly belonged to the family, but which had been alienated or mortgaged by his predecessors, particularly the barony of Fetternear, which, as has been related, was alienated by John Leslie, eleventh Baron of Balquhain, in 1625, to his brother-in-law Sir Alexander Hay of Dalgety, who transferred his wadsett rights to Hector Abercromby of Westhall, second son of Alexander Abercromby of Birkenbog, in 1627. By documents in the charter-room at Fetternear, and by others in the possession of the Birkenbog family, it appears that Count Patrick Leslie purchased or redeemed the barony of Fetternear, 20th August 1690, from Francis Abercromby, Lord Glassford, who married Lady Sempill. Alexander Abercromby of Aquhorsk, a member of the Birkenbog family, who rented the mansion-house of Fetternear, renounced his possession in favour of Patrick, Count Leslie, 23d August 1690. Patrick, Count Leslie, after his succession to the Leslie estates in Germany, on the death of his brother Count James in 1694, also made additions to the Balquhain property, purchasing the lands of the barony of Insch, Boddam, Greenhall, Muiryheadless, Knockenbaird, Scotstown, and Aquhorties.

We gather much information regarding Patrick, Count Leslie, from the evidence given by witnesses in the law proceedings which took place during the disputed succession after the death of his grandson, Ernest, Count Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, who died without issue in 1739. William Watt in Nethertown of Fetternear stated in his evidence that he was upwards of 75 years of age; that he knew Count Patrick Leslie, and was aware that he received remittances of money from his brother, Count James Leslie in Germany, with which he redeemed the lands of Fetternear, which had been alienated to the Abercrombys.

After recovering possession of Fetternear, Count

Patrick Leslie occasionally resided there. In the law proceedings above alluded to, Jean Erskine, widow of James Moir of Stoneywood, deponed that she often visited Count Patrick Leslie both at Balquhain Castle and at Fetternear. John Steel, Mill of Fintray, aged 85, deponed that his father was gardener at Fetternear, and that when very young he used to go with his father and carry fruit from Fetternear over to Balquhain, and that he afterwards lived with Count Patrick Leslie both at Balquhain and at Fetternear.

Count Patrick Leslie afterwards abandoned Balquhain Castle as his principal residence, and took up his abode at Fetternear House permanently about 1692. Fetternear House then possessed many advantages, being built on a fine site near the banks of the Don, commanding a splendid view of the surrounding country. The domain was richly wooded, having extensive avenues of magnificent trees. The pleasure-grounds were curiously laid out, and there were excellent gardens, which were renowned as being peculiarly productive. The mansion-house was extremely spacious and commodious, and formed three sides of a square. It was handsomely furnished, and was adorned with a fine collection of paintings, including many family portraits, amongst others those of James Ernest, Count Leslie in Germany, of his lady the Princess Berne de Lichtenstein, and of their son Count Joseph Patrick

*Patrick,
Count Leslie,

Count Patrick Leslie had also a town-house in Aberdeen. It is recorded in the Journal of the Presbytery of Aberdeen that there were four priests residing in Aberdeen in 1698, and that mass was publicly celebrated in the dwelling-house of Count Patrick Leslie of Balquhain in Aberdeen, by his brother the Rev. William Leslie. In the list of Catholics sent by the Presbytery of Aberdeen to the General Assembly in 1700, eighty were named, and amongst them were Count Patrick Leslie, Lady Wartle, and the Laird of Hilton.

Count Patrick Leslie, seeing that his elder brother, Count James Leslie in Germany, had no children, and that he himself was the next heir to the family estates in Germany, thus having the prospect of uniting the Scotch and German estates in his own person, was desirous of establishing two families. Therefore, in 1692, he executed a primary deed of entail, settling the estates of Balquhain on his second son, George Leslie, with clauses regulating the succession of heirs-male to the Scotch and German properties. On the death of his brother, James, second Count Leslie, in 1694, without issue, Count Patrick succeeded as he expected to the German estates, and henceforth was known by the style and title of Count Patrick Leslie. John Lumsden, law-agent in

*Patrick,
Count Leslie,

Edinburgh, deponed, in the law-process already mentioned, that he knew Patrick Leslie of Balquhain, who was styled count after, but not before, the death of his brother, Count James Leslie in Germany in 1694, although he had a right to the title previously through his father, Count Alexander Leslie, fourteenth Baron of Balquhain.

Count Patrick Leslie now proposed to put his son, Count James Ernest, in immediate possession of the German estates, on condition that he should renounce all claim to the Scotch estates in favour of his younger brother, George Leslie, Count Patrick's son by his second marriage. To this proposition James Ernest acceded, as is testified by a letter written by him to his father, 9th December 1695, in which he says that if he were put in possession of the German estates he would have enough, and that it would be a prouder thing for the family to be represented by him in Germany, and by his half-brother George in Scotland, than if both fortunes were held by the same person. In this letter James Ernest refused to bear the title of count during his father's lifetime.

In consequence of this agreement, Count Patrick Leslie executed another deed of entail in 1700, in which he revoked some clauses of the former entail of 1692, and altered others, at the same time confirming the settlement of the Scotch estates on his second son, George Leslie ; and he added new clauses in case of failure of direct heirs-male, regulating the succession of the male issue of his daughters, Ladies Marjory, Ann Francisca, Teresa, Mary, Margaret, and Jean, with regard both to the Scotch and German estates. These entails were written by William Grant of Crichtie, from Count Patrick Leslie's directions.

Patrick, Count Leslie, married first, 24th November 1661, Elizabeth Douglas, daughter of Gavin Douglas of Bridgford, son of William, Earl of Angus. In the legal proceedings already alluded to we find that Walter Leith, merchant in Aberdeen, aged 30 years, produced a Latin copy of the Bible in folio, printed at Paris in 1537, which he had bought from David Angus, bookseller in Aberdeen, in 1744, and on which there were written on two leaves, then produced, the following entries:—

“1669. 20 June, Sunday, was born James Leslie, Baptized the same day.” 1669.

“1678. 21 November, died Elizabeth Douglas, mother of the above, in childbed of a daughter Elizabeth.” 1678.

“The 3rd August 1679, was married Patrick Leslie of Balquhain, and Mary Irvine, daughter of the Laird of Drum.” 1679.

“1682. August 26th, Saturday, George Leslie was born and baptized this day.” 1682.

By Elizabeth Douglas Count Patrick Leslie had issue—

I. JAMES ERNEST, born 20th June 1669. He succeeded his uncle James, second Count Leslie in Germany. See hereafter. 1669.

II. ALEXANDER, born 1670. He died young in Germany. 1670.

III. MARJORY, born 1663; married, about 1693, Alexander Leslie of Pitcaple. Their son, Sir James Leslie, claimed the Balquhain estates in 1740, against Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie. See hereafter. 1663. 1740.

1672. IV. ANNE FRANCISCA, born about 1664. She was a pensioner for six years in a convent at Mons, under Madam Leslie, the lady abbess. She returned to Scotland in 1680, and was married in November 1689 to John Grant of Ballindalloch. John Watson, aged 85, deponed that he got money from George Leslie of Balquhain when he was playing as a piper on the occasion of the marriage of Anne Francisca Leslie, Count Patrick's daughter, with John Grant of Ballindalloch. Their grandson, Peter Leslie Grant, claimed and recovered the estate of Balquhain from Anthony, Count Leslie, in 1762, and became twentieth Baron of Balquhain. See hereafter.
1672. V. TERESA LESLIE, born about 1672; married in 1699 to Robert Duguid of Auchinhove. Their son, Patrick Leslie Duguid, eventually succeeded to Peter Leslie Grant as next heir of entail, and became twenty-first Baron of Balquhain. See hereafter.
1678. VI. ELIZABETH LESLIE, born in November 1678. She became a nun, and was lady abbess of the Ursuline convent at Lisle. She was usually styled Lady Betty Leslie. She died in 1767, having lived to a great age, much esteemed by all who knew her. There is a painting of her in the dining-room at Fetternear House.
1678. Elizabeth Douglas died in childbed of her daughter Elizabeth, 21st November 1678; and Count Patrick Leslie married, secondly, 3d August 1679, Mary Irvine, eldest daughter of Alexander Irvine of Drum by Lady Mary Gordon, daughter of John, Marquis of Huntly. marriage, and to provide 30,000 merks for the younger children of the same. The issue by this marriage was—

- I. GEORGE, born 26th August 1682, and was baptized on the same day. He succeeded his father as sixteenth Baron of Balquhain.
- II. MARGARET, born in 1683, married to George Leslie of Iden. Their marriage-contract is dated 8th January 1709.* Margaret Leslie is sometimes styled Lady Kinnaires. She died 17th June 1744.
- III. JEAN, born 1685, married 3d November 1713 to Patrick Gordon of Aberlour, as appears from a deed in which George Leslie of Iden and Robert Duguid of Auchinhove are trustees for her portion.
- IV. HENRIETTA, who died young.
- V. MARY, who also died young.

Patrick, Count Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, died in 1710, and was succeeded by his eldest son of his second marriage with Mary Irvine of Drum, George, sixteenth Baron of Balquhain; James Ernest, Count Leslie, his eldest son of his first marriage with Elizabeth Douglas, having succeeded to the German estates in 1694.

Irvine of Drum, succeeded as sixteenth Baron of Balquhain, on the death of his father in 1710, in accordance with the agreement made with his elder brother, Count James Ernest Leslie, and in conformity with the deed of entail executed by Count Patrick Leslie in 1700.

From the evidence given in the law process regarding the succession to the Balquhain estates, we learn the following circumstances:—John Steel, Mill of Fintray, deponed that when he was a servant to Count Patrick Leslie at Fetternear, he heard the Count tell his company or visitors that George, his second son, had gone abroad to meet his elder brother, James Ernest, and to get from him a right to the Balquhain estates. William Watt in Nethertown of Fetternear, another witness, stated that George Leslie went abroad in 1695 to arrange with his brother the family affairs, on which occasion George Leslie had wished to go to his brother's place of residence, but James Ernest sent him word that if he could not appear with a retinue of horse and men amounting to the value of 30,000 merks, he behoved not to come to the place of his residence in Germany; but that he, James Ernest, would meet him at Cologne, where George Leslie accordingly went, and met his brother, James Ernest, who there, by an agreement, made over to him his right of succession to the Balquhain estates. Patrick Gordon of Aberlour, another witness, who had married Count Patrick Leslie's youngest surviving daughter, Jean, stated that George Leslie went abroad to meet his elder brother, Count James Ernest, which he did at Cologne. They there arranged and made a final settlement with regard to the succession of the Balquhain estates, which Count James Ernest resigned in favour of his brother George, who, on his part, gave up all claim to the annual remittance which had been promised to him out of the German estates.

George Leslie got a charter of the lands of Largie, proceeding on the resignation of his father, Count Patrick Leslie, 13th June 1694; sasine followed 9th July 1694.†

- II. ERNEST, born in 1714, who succeeded his brother as eighteenth Baron of Balquhain.
- III. A Son, who died soon after his birth.

Count George Leslie died 17th June 1715 at Fetternear, aged 34 years, in the vigour of manhood, as appears by an inscription on a stone above the gateway of the old family burying-place at the chapel at Fetternear. He was succeeded by his eldest son Count James Leslie, seventeenth Baron of Balquhain, then a child four years old. From this time the ancient splendour of the house of Balquhain began to wane, and the bitterness of anti-Catholic prejudice brought ruinous consequences on the family, which firmly adhered to the religion of its forefathers.

His mother, having been left the tutor of her children, resolved to bring them up Protestants, as is shown in the following evidence. The Honourable Mary Elphinstone, wife of Thomas Buchan of Cairnbulg, advocate, stated that her sister, the Honourable Margaret Elphinstone, married George Leslie of Balquhain in 1706; that George Leslie and his sisters were all bigoted papists; that she knew there was a popish chapel in their house, and a popish priest always kept at Fetternear; that when her brother-in-law, Count George Leslie, died in 1715, his widow, her sister, sent for the popish priest, and desired him to pack up the popish trinkets, vestments, baubles, and many popish books, and to carry them away, which he accordingly did; and that she was resolved to bring up her children, James and Ernest, and to educate them, as Protestants, which she did. The Honourable Mrs. Buchan added that the family of Balquhain had then several trinkets and vestments which, she was informed, had been sent from Germany by James, Count Leslie, for the use of the chapel and priest. These church vestments and plate, which were thus sent away were of the richest brocaded stuffs, gold and silver cloth, and precious metals and jewels, being made out of articles taken from the Turks in various battles in which Field-Marshal James, Count Leslie, had defeated them. Besides these, many other valuable articles were carried away from Fetternear, amongst the rest many family portraits, much silver plate and rich furniture.

Not content with this, the Honourable Margaret Elphinstone also induced her son, Ernest, Count Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, to dismember the family estates. She had a locality, that is the revenue of certain lands for her jointure on the lands of Inch and Boddam, belonging to the Balquhain estates. After her husband's death, about 1720, she married Sir James Gordon of Park, by whom she had a son, James Gordon, styled of Cobairdy, and she prevailed on her son Ernest, when he succeeded to the Balquhain estates, to dispoise part of the lands of Inch, and the lands of Boddam, to the said James Gordon, his uterine brother, which was in defraud of the deed of entail made by Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron, in 1700. Count Anthony Leslie, nineteenth Baron of Balquhain, sought to reduce this iniquitous disposition, but he did not succeed, as will be shown hereafter.

While still a minor, Count James Leslie went abroad to travel, and on his way home again he died at Paris, 29th January 1731, in the twentieth year of his age, unmarried. Some time afterwards his body was brought over to Scotland, and interred in the old chapel at Fetternear. 1731.

We have seen that immediately after the death of his father, his mother, the Honourable Margaret Elphinstone, expressed her determination to bring up her two infant sons as Protestants, which she did accordingly, as is stated in a letter from Count

Charles Cajetan Leslie to Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, 7th July 1740, in which he says:—"The possession of the lands of Balquhain has always been in the hands of Catholics except the last, the late Ernest Leslie, who was educated, contrary to the inclination of his father George Leslie, in the Protestant religion."

Count Ernest Leslie was served heir to his brother, Count James, in the lands of Balquhain, 17th July 1739, and established in his own person the proper titles both to the estates of Balquhain and to the lands of Inch and Boddam; but in the retour of his service to the lands of Inch and Boddam he neglected to insert the prohibitive, irritant, and resolute clauses of the entails of 1692 and 1700, against alienation of the property. On the 26th July 1739 he resigned the whole of the lands of Balquhain mentioned in the entail, excepting the lands of Greenhall and Knockenbaird, in favour of himself and the heirs-male of his body; and on the same day he got a charter, under the Great Seal, of the lands and barony of Balquhain; sasine followed thereon 16th October 1739, and was registered at Aberdeen 20th October 1739.* Thereafter he granted a procuratory for resigning the lands of Inch and Boddam in favour of himself and the heirs-male of his body, with remainder to James Gordon of Cobairdy, his half-brother, the son of his mother by her second husband Sir James Gordon of Park, and the heirs-male of his body, with remainder to the sister of the said James Gordon of Cobairdy and the other heirs therein mentioned. This breach of the entail was made by Count Ernest Leslie at the instigation of his mother, the Honourable Margaret Elphinstone, and the consequence was that, on the death of Count Ernest without issue in 1739, James Gordon of Cobairdy took possession of the lands of Inch and Boddam, which were thus lost to the true heirs of the Balquhain estates.

Count Ernest Leslie is said to have been a thoughtless youth, who, having an opulent fortune unexpectedly thrown upon him by his brother's death, led a wild life, and made too free with his constitution, and thereby undermined his health. He went abroad to travel, and when in Germany it seems he had proposed to visit his relations there; but the German branch of the family were so disobliged at their Scotch relatives, because Count Patrick had prevailed on his elder son, James Ernest, Count Leslie, to renounce his birth-right to the Balquhain estates, that Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, the son of Count James Ernest, would not receive a visit from his cousin Ernest Leslie of Balquhain. Count Ernest Leslie therefore returned to Scotland, and after remaining a short time there he went abroad again. His intemperate habits brought on disease, and he was obliged to return home again. He died at Edinburgh 20th November 1739, aged 25 years. His remains were buried in Lord Balmerino's burial-place in the chapel of Holyrood.

Count Ernest Leslie was the last male heir of the house of Balquhain in Scotland. The succession to the estates was disputed by Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, and his two sons, Count Joseph Leopold and Count Anthony, and Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, and was decided in favour of Count Anthony Leslie, nineteenth Baron of Balquhain, by a judgment of the House of Peers, 29th April 1742.

ANTHONY, COUNT LESLIE, ^{Pr}

NINETEENTH BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

By a decision in his favour, pronounced by the House of Peers 29th April 1742, Count Anthony Leslie, second son of Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, the son of James Ernest, Count Leslie, the elder son of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, succeeded his cousin Count Ernest Leslie as nineteenth Baron of Balquhain.

By the death of Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, without issue, 20th November 1739, the succession to the lands and barony of Balquhain opened to Charles Cajetan, Count

Leslie, second son of James Ernest, Count Leslie, as heir of provision under the deeds of entail. But Count Charles Cajetan having succeeded to the family estates in Germany by the death of his elder brother, Count Joseph Leopold, and of his father, Count James Ernest, in 1738, he could not also hold the Balquhain estates in Scotland, as by the deeds of entail the Scotch and German estates could not be united in the same person. He was therefore bound to convey the Balquhain estates to that person who by the entail stood next in the order of succession thereby established. Such being the case, the next heirs of entail in the order of succession preferred their claims, and three processes were brought against Count Charles Cajetan Leslie: one at the instance of Count Joseph Leopold, his eldest son; another at the instance of his second son, Count Anthony; and a third at the instance of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, as the son and heir-male of his mother, Lady Marjory Leslie, eldest daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, the entailer. The scope of these three actions was to have it declared that Count Charles Cajetan Leslie could not hold both the Scotch and German estates, and that he was bound to denude himself of the Balquhain estates in favour of one or other of the pursuers. Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple took steps immediately to prosecute his claims to the succession, and wrote the following letter to Mr. James Cattnach,

Paris, January the 16th, 1740, N. S.

Sir—I am told by late Count Leslie's entail, and my cosen, the late Balquahn's death, the entailed estate of Balquhan devolves to me. I therefore empower you, as my procator, to procure warrants from the Lords of Session, or Commissars of Aberdeen, for inspecting the papers of that estate, and consult Lawiers by the advice of Sir Alexander Reid of Barra, Mr. Erskine of Pittoderie, Mr. Horn of Horn Castel, Mr. Elphinston of Glack, and Captain Urquhart, or any two of them, and to doe everything as my procator and Lawier, and to expedd my service if necessar, for which this is your power, authority, and warrant, and will obleage Your humble servant,

J.A. LESLIE.

This missive letter was registered in the Commissary Court books of Aberdeen 26th January 1740.

Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, with the view of dissuading Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple from disputing his succession to the Balquhain estates, wrote to him two letters, in which he states the grounds of his claim, and endeavours to persuade Pitcaple from entering into litigation, and offers him the management of the estates in the most liberal terms. The following is a copy of these two letters, translated from the originals written in French:—

Gratz in Styria, 30th April 1740.

My dear Cousin—Being informed by my aunt, the holy sister Mary Elizabeth, Abbess of the Ursulines at Lisle, of the favourable inclinations you entertain to favour my interests in the succession to my deceased cousin, Mr. Ernest Leslie, Baron of Balquhain, which falls to me in consequence of an agreement made at Paris in 1700 between my father and grandfather, by which it is evidently stipulated that if one branch should fail through want of issue, the succession to the failing branch should fall to the second son of the other; consequently, my late uncle, Count George, son of the late Count Patrick, leaving none but the deceased Mr. Ernest Leslie, who was never married, the succession belongs to me as the second son of my father, Count James Ernest, my elder brother Joseph having died in 1732, leaving only one daughter, who died of the small-pox in 1738. This is only consistent with justice, since, vice versa, if my branch had come to fail of issue, their estates would have belonged directly to those who had survived of the descendants of Count George. However, should my succeeding be disputed, the succession at least belongs lawfully to the second of my sons, in order that the foresaid agreement be faithfully executed according to the intentions of the contractors. I have three sons: the eldest, Joseph Leopold, born 1728, aged 12 years; the second, Anthony, born 1733, aged 7; the third, Charles, aged 4 months; and three daughters, the eldest born 1730, aged 10; the second born 1732, aged 8; and the third born 1737, aged 3.

They may perhaps occasion me some difficulties with regard to my religion before they grant me free administration of succession in Scotland; but I hope these will be easily removed when they consider that the said contract was agreed upon solely by two persons who were Catholics, and that the government of Scotland has permitted it, and caused it to be registered in the public records. They may also require that either I or my son should come to Scotland to take personal possession, which would not be practicable at present on account of the tender age of my son, and the risk he would run of changing his religion; and with regard to myself, the places and employments which I hold under his Imperial and Catholic majesty, and other circumstances would likewise prevent my doing so. I have therefore determined to empower some person to take up the said possession, either in my name, or in that of my son. I entreat you, my dear cousin, to inform me without delay what would be the best method for me to manage this affair. It will be easy for you to do so, as you are acquainted with the laws and customs of Scotland. I would wish to be indebted to your friendship for these hints on account of the blood whereby we are so closely connected. As for me, I should avail myself of every opportunity of rendering you every service in my power; and if you consider that anything that I can do would be useful to you, pray address yourself freely to me, who beg to assure you with the utmost sincerity of the tender affection with which I am, and ever will be, with all respect, my most honoured cousin, your obedient and humble servant,

CHARLES CAJETAN, Count Leslie,

of His Imperial and Catholic Majesty.

P.S.—Pray do me the honour to let me hear from you, if only to show that you have received this.

To this letter Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple replied, 28th May 1740, asserting his own claims, and stating the opinion of lawyers whom he had consulted; and Count Charles Cajetan Leslie answered as follows:—

Gratz, 7th July 1740.

My dear Cousin—Your sincere and affectionate expressions of esteem, contained in your letter of the 28th May, have afforded me great pleasure; in consequence of which I frankly confess I should have no regret to see you in quiet possession of the barony of Balquhain in Scotland, if that only regarded myself, being well aware that from my possessing the lands, and fidei commiss, and feoffment in trust in Germany, I cannot, by the entail, at the same time, hold or enjoy those in Scotland. But in consequence of the substitution made in favour of our family, it is clearly stipulated that in the event of the branch of Balquhain in Scotland happening to fail, the succession ought to belong to the second son of the same family in Germany, before the succession can fall to the line of Pitcaple. Therefore, as I informed you in my last letter that I have three sons, it is not in my power to allow others to enjoy what belongs to my second son; but, on the contrary, it is my duty, as an affectionate father, to do everything I possibly can to obtain for him the possession of an estate which justly belongs to him by the laws of God and man. The opinion of the lawyers you mention is certainly so far correct that the succession cannot belong to me, because, at the death of our cousin, Ernest Leslie, I was not the second son. But surely these lawyers could not have been informed that I have several sons, the second of whom cannot be excluded from enjoying the said succession; but who, according to the family agreement, ought to be called to it, because, if the Scotch line should happen to fail, the inhibition is not at all limited, but will fall to my family, and as long as the survivor shall have sons, the second ought to possess the Scotch succession; nor can I comprehend how it can be considered an obstacle that I and my second son were both born in this country, as the condition is not at all mentioned; particularly as the Scotch government made no objection of the kind when they caused it to be registered in the Public Records, while they knew very well that I and my deceased cousin Francis James, Count de Leslie, who were expressly named in the said inhibition, were not born in Scotland. Hence it is natural to conclude that they cannot at present legally propose such a difficulty with regard to my second son, since such objection could only refer to me myself by the literal terms of the said inhibition, and which constitutes the justice of his claims. For the same reason, the obstacles which they might raise on account of our religion cannot avail, seeing that the possession of the lands of Balquhain has always been in the hands of Catholics except the last, the late Ernest Leslie, who was educated, contrary to the inclination of his father George Leslie, in the Protestant religion ; and who, although consequently being of different religious opinions to those of his ancestors, yet was not able to change the nature of the property, which the said inhibition guaranteed to the German branch in the event of the Scotch failing in issue. You see, my dear cousin, all that I can write to you concerning this affair, I put all my confidence in you, trusting to your conscience and the regard you have for my interest, entreating you to interest yourself not only for our house, but also for our religion, in order that we may not lose these lands, and that those to whom they lawfully belong may possess them according to the disposal and intentions of our ancestors. And as I am too far from Scotland, where I have no acquaintance, I make no doubt, my dear cousin, but that, considering justice and the sense of friendship, and the blood whereby we are related, you will take up the cause of me and my family, and I hope that you will look upon my second son as a second father. Should such prove the case, I assure you that if you are inclined to take possession of these lands in the name of my second son, I will make over to you the management of them during my life, only reserving to myself the right to advise with you, in a manner which I feel certain will prove most satisfactory to you, with respect to the rents, so that both you and my second son shall reap advantage from it. Although you write to me that these lands are of little consequence, yet I must tell you that Ernest Leslie alienated a great deal of those which were included in the entail, as the lands of Telernes and Tolos, and others, whereof he had no liberty to dispense, and which ought to be restored to the true possessor of Balquhain, agreeable to the destination of my grandfather Count Patrick. I hope, my dearest cousin, that on an occasion so interesting to our family, you will apply yourself very effectually, and do all that lies in your power that our family may not lose their property ; and I promise you that I will make such a contract with you, in the name of my second son, as will be quite to your own satisfaction; and I assure you that I reckon myself extremely happy to have found an occasion to make myself acquainted with you, nor shall I neglect to avail myself of every opportunity of testifying to you the inward consolation it affords me. All my family beg to assure you of their affectionate friendship, as well as myself, who am with the sincerest attachment, dearest cousin, your obedient servant,

Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple did not accept these offers of Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, but resolved to assert his own rights to the succession, relying on the following clause contained in the deed of entail executed by Count Patrick Leslie, in 1700:—"In case it should happen that any heirs-male of the said Count Patrick Leslie's body should succeed to both the said estates, the estate of Balquhain in Scotland and the estate in Germany, in that case the foresaid estate of Balquhain, and others above specified, should fall and belong to the next heir-male to have been procreate of the said Patrick's body of his then present or any other marriage; which failing, to the subsequent heirs of tailzie aforesaid, in the order of succession above mentioned, to whom, and in whose favours, the said heir-male, and the heirs of his body, who should succeed to the said lands and estate of the said Count Leslie in Germany, should be holden and obliged, by their acceptance of the said deed of tailzie, to dispone and resign the said lands and estate of Balquhain ; and the same should from thenceforth be redeemable by the other and next heirs-male, and the other heirs of tailzie foresaid, from the said heirs-male, who should succeed to both the said estates, and his heirs-male foresaid, by payment of the sum of ten merks Scots."

This case had now happened, and Sir James Leslie of Pitcapple claimed to be the next heir of tailzie, to whom Count Charles Cajetan Leslie was bound to dispone the estate of Balquhain in terms of the deed of tailzie ; and he brought an action of declarator in the Court of Session for ascertaining the devolution of the succession in his favour.

Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, having no acquaintance in Great Britain, placed himself entirely in the hands of Abbé Bernard Baillie, Abbot of the Scotch Benedictine Abbey of St. James's in Ratisbon, who took a great interest in his cause, and who recommended his cousin, Thomas Dundas of Fingask, a lawyer in Scotland, as a suitable person to conduct the Count's law affairs in Scotland. Under Thomas Dundas's direction, Count Charles Cajetan Leslie defended himself against the action of Sir James Leslie of Pitcapple, on the ground that he claimed the estate of Balquhain in virtue of the following clause contained in the deed of entail executed by his grandfather, Count Patrick Leslie, regulating the succession to the said estate :—“which failing” (viz. the heirs of Count George, sixteenth Baron of Balquhain), “to the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, second son lawfully procreate betwixt the said James Ernest, Count Leslie, and Berne, Princess of Lichtenstein, his spouse, and the heirs-male lawfully to have been procreate of his body.” Therefore Count Charles Cajetan claimed the estate in virtue of this express limitation to him by name ; and though he was already in possession of the estate in Germany, yet he was entitled to hold both estates, and was not bound to resign or denude the estate of Balquhain, either to his own sons or to Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, because he was not called to the succession to the estate of Balquhain as the heir-male of Count Patrick Leslie’s body, or of his son, Count James Ernest Leslie, his own father, but by being specially named.

For greater security it was deemed advisable to bring two other actions at the instance of Count Joseph Leopold and Count Anthony Leslie, the two eldest sons of Count Charles Cajetan Leslie.

Count Joseph Leopold raised his action on the ground that if his father, Count Charles Cajetan, was obliged to resign the estate of Balquhain, it must be in favour of him, Count Joseph Leopold, as next heir of tailzie, and who was not entitled to the estate in Germany during his father’s lifetime, and whose right to the estate of Balquhain ought not to terminate till he got possession of the German estate, which may not happen during his lifetime.

Count Anthony Leslie raised his action on the ground that his father, Count Charles Cajetan, having succeeded to both estates, he was bound in terms of the entail to resign the estate of Balquhain in favour of him, Count Anthony, his second son, who could not, in any sense, during his brother's lifetime, be considered either heir-presumptive or heir-apparent to the estate in Germany; and Count Charles Cajetan, and his eldest son and heir, Count Joseph Leopold, being to be considered one person, are both bound to denude in favour of the next substitute, and he, Count Anthony, was that next substitute.

Upon the report of the Lord Ordinary, Arniston, the Court of Session, 11th February 1741, pronounced judgment, finding "That Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, being an heir-male of Patrick Leslie of Balquhain's body, and having succeeded to both estates, he and the heirs-male of his body were obliged to denude of the estate of Balquhain in favour of the next heir of tailzie, and that the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and the heirs-male of his body, being thus excluded from the estate of Balquhain, in the event that had happened of his succeeding to both estates, James Leslie of Pitcaple was the next heir of tailzie, on whom the estate of Balquhain then devolved ; and that Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, was obliged to denude in his favour ; and that Count Joseph Leopold and Count Anthony Leslie being by the substitution in the entail called to the succession in their order, only as heirs-male of the body of the said Count Charles Cajetan, they were, in like manner, as heirs-male of his body, excluded from the succession to the estate of Balquhain, in the event that had happened of their father succeeding to both estates ; and that therefore Count Charles Cajetan, their father, could not denude in their favour, but ought to denude in favour of James Leslie of Pitcaple.”

In consequence of this decision, Sir James Leslie took possession of the estate of Balquhain, and lifted the rents from Martinmas 1739 to 1742. Whitsunday 1742. But Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, and his sons, Count Joseph Leopold and Count Anthony, carried the case by appeal to the 1742. House of Lords, who, 29th April 1742, reversed the decision of the Court of Session, and pronounced “ That the said appeals of Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and Leopold, Count Leslie, be dismissed ; and that Anthony, Count Leslie, second son to Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, was the next heir of tailzie, to whom the estate of Balquhain, in the event which had happened, devolved, according to the true intent and meaning of the deeds of entail mentioned in the said appeals ;” and it was thereby ordered that the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, should denude himself of the estate of Balquhain in favour of the said Anthony, Count Leslie, and that the same should be redeemable by the said Anthony from the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and his eldest son, or his heirs-male, by payment of the sum of ten merks Scots, in terms of the said entail ; and that the Lords of Session give the necessary directions for carrying that judgment into execution.

In obedience to this order, the Lords of Session, by interlocutor, dated 29th June 1742, “ Found and declared that the said Anthony, Count Leslie, second son of the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, was the next heir of entail to whom the estate of Balquhain, in the event which had happened, devolved, according to the true intent and meaning of the deeds of entail in the said judgment and decree mentioned ; and decerned and ordained the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, to denude himself of the said estate of Balquhain in favour of the said Anthony, Count Leslie ; and found and declared that the said estate was redeemable by the said Anthony, Count Leslie, from the said Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and the said Leopold, Count Leslie, his eldest son and heir-male, for payment of the sum of ten merks Scots money.”

During all the pleadings of this lawsuit no objection was ever made to Count Charles Cajetan Leslie and his sons on the ground of being aliens. Sir James Leslie had the assistance of several of the most eminent counsel then at the bar ; particularly Robert Craigie, afterwards Lord President of the Court of Session ; James Graham, afterwards Lord Easdale ; and James Ferguson of Pitfour, afterwards Dean of Faculty. As it was then generally supposed or believed that Count Charles Cajetan himself, as well as his two sons, Leopold and Anthony, though descended from the family of Balquhain, were born in foreign parts, it could not escape so many eminent and acute lawyers to consider with suitable attention what influence that circumstance might have on the question then depending, touching the right of succession to the Balquhain estate ; whether, supposing Count Charles Cajetan and his two sons to be born in foreign parts, outwith the allegiance of the sovereign of this country, they were thereby to be considered as aliens, and consequently incapable of succeeding to or holding any land-estate in Scotland, whether as heirs by descent or as heirs of tailzie. That this point was specially under the consideration of these eminent lawyers is a certain fact, as appears from the testimony of Arthur Gordon of Wardhouse, a witness adduced by Peter Leslie Grant in his action of reduction, brought a few years afterwards against Count Anthony Leslie. But it appeared to them that this exclusion or disability, under the circumstances of the case, had no foundation or authority either in the principles or practice of the law of Scotland, and it was resolved that no such plea should be made. Arthur Gordon of Wardhouse stated, in his evidence above alluded to, that, in a conversation with Mr. Graham, afterwards Lord Easdale, who was one of the lawyers engaged by James Gordon of Cobairdy in defending the action brought against him by Count Anthony Leslie for the reduction of the deed whereby the lands of Inch and Boddam were settled on him, in which defence it was pleaded successfully that Count Anthony was an alien, and had no right to pursue or raise the action, he asked Mr. Graham why the same plea had not been made in behalf of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple against Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, and Mr. Graham answered that he was for doing it, but an eminent lawyer, who was also one of Pitcaple's counsel, did not think it proper at the time; and that he afterwards asked the said lawyer why he did not think it proper, and he answered that he did not think the Court of Session would have paid any attention to that plea. Hence it would seem that Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple lost his lawsuit and the estate of Balquhain through this erroneous opinion of his counsel.

The decision of the House of Lords in favour of Count Anthony Leslie is thus noticed in the Scots Magazine, April 1742, vol. iv. p. 193 :—

“The Lords, April 28 and 29, were upon the appeal, Cajetan Leslie, a Count of the Roman Empire, against James Leslie of Pitcaple, Esq., in Aberdeenshire, and reversed the decree of the Court of Session, so that the count gets the estate of Balquhain.”

Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, as tutor and administrator to his son, Count Anthony, appointed Thomas Dundas of Fingask to be commissioner and manager of the Balquhain estates for behoof of Count Anthony, who was served heir of entail to Count Ernest Leslie, last of Balquhain, 2d August 1742.

During the dependence of the process with Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, discovery had been made of the deed of settlement executed by Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, whereby he had granted procuratory for resigning the lands of Insch and Boddam in favour of himself and the heirs of his body ; with remainder to James Gordon of Cobairdy, his uterine brother, and the heirs of his body ; whom failing, to the other heirs therein mentioned, in prejudice of Anthony Count Leslie's rights to these lands under the deeds of entail of 1692 and 1700 ; whereby not only the estate of Balquhain and the other lands therein mentioned, but also all the lands which Count Patrick Leslie, the entailer, then had, or should thereafter acquire, were limited and devised to a series of heirs, under the usual prohibitive, irritant, and resolute clauses de non alienando. Count Charles Cajetan Leslie therefore, in the name of his son Count Anthony, still a minor, brought an action against James Gordon of Cobairdy, who had assumed the possession of the lands of Inch and Boddam under the settlement, to have the said settlement reduced, and to have it found and declared that those lands did of right belong to Count Anthony under the two deeds of settlement above mentioned; and consequently that Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, had not power gratuitously to give away these lands to James Gordon of Cobairdy, his uterine brother.

No compearance was made for Cobairdy himself, but his sister Elizabeth, Lady Forbes, and the other substitutes under the settlement, having appeared for their interest, it was objected in limine, that as Count Anthony, in whose name the action was brought, was in foreign parts, process could not be maintained at his instance without a proper mandate, or power of attorney authorising the same; that the commission or power of attorney granted by Count Charles Cajetan, as administrator-in-law to his infant son, to Thomas Dundas of Fingask, produced and referred to for obviating the said objection, did allennarly respect the estate of Balquhain, and therefore could not be sustained as a proper mandate for carrying on the suit respecting the lands of Inch and Boddam; besides, that as Count Charles Cajetan professed the popish religion, he was, by the laws of Scotland disabled to act as guardian or administrator-in-law to his son.

The Lord Ordinary, by interlocutor dated 24th July 1747, sustained the factory produced as sufficient to begin the process, the pursuer's procurator producing a more explicit one before extract. This interlocutor was acquiesced in by both parties; and though the factory produced was thereby sustained to the effect only to begin the process, matters were so slovenly conducted, that the cause was carried on to the final conclusion thereof by an interlocutory sentence of the Court of Session, without any other factory or mandate having been produced.

In the further proceedings in this cause, the defenders averred that Count Anthony Leslie was born in foreign parts, outwith the allegiance of the sovereign of this country, and consequently that he was an alien; and this fact being supposed or admitted by the counsel for Count Anthony, they proceeded, upon that supposition, to argue the abstract point, whether, by the laws of Scotland, one born in foreign parts, and in that respect most erroneously supposed to be an alien, was capable of succeeding to, or of holding and enjoying, any land-estate in this country. It was doing great injustice to Count Anthony's interest in this cause to confine the question to this abstract point of law. For, though no man can be an alien to that country in which he is born, it does not follow, by necessary consequence, that every person born out of the country is an alien. Indeed, the consequences would be dreadful were the child of every British subject casually born in foreign parts to be deemed an alien, and, as such, incapable of succession to his inheritance in this country. Various other circumstances, unknown or not adverted to by those who conducted this process in Count Anthony's name, and which were essential and necessary to be taken into consideration in the decision of the cause, were totally overlooked.

Upon this imperfect state of the case, the Court of Session, by an interlocutor dated 9th June 1749, found that by the common law of Scotland an alien not naturalised cannot succeed to any heritage in this country; and that the pursuer, Count Anthony Leslie, is an alien, and therefore has no right to carry on this action for the recovery of a land-estate. This interlocutor declared Count Anthony to be an alien upon no other evidence or foundation but its being supposed or admitted by the counsel employed for him that he was born in foreign parts, upon which the erroneous consequence was grafted that therefore he was an alien.

Thus James Gordon of Cobairdy succeeded in keeping possession of the lands of Inch and Boddam, which actually belonged to the estate of Balquhain, and which the true heirs have lost for ever.

Count Anthony Leslie, on attaining his majority in 1754, came over to Scotland to take personal possession of the estate of Balquhain.

The extraordinary judgment pronounced by the Court of Session respecting the lands of Inch and Boddam had the effect of instigating Peter Grant, son of Captain John Grant, late of Ballindalloch, whose mother was Anne Francisca, second daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, a remote substitute under the entail of the Balquhain estates, to abjure the Catholic religion, in which he had been born and educated, and had professed, and which his own father continued to profess; and, under the pretence of being the next Protestant heir, he brought an action to evict the estate of Balquhain from the true and nearest heirs, including his own father.

Lady Anne Francisca Leslie, second daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, married John Roy Grant of Ballindalloch in November 1689. By him she had a son, John Grant, who was a captain in the Dutch service, and who professed the Catholic religion. He married the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman in Fife, and she became a convert to the Catholic faith. They had a son,

Peter Grant, born in 1741, who was baptized by a Catholic priest. But one of his mother's relations, David Orme, a lawyer in Edinburgh, aware of the penal laws existing against Catholics, brought him over to Scotland from Holland when he was fifteen years of age, and induced him to take the formula prescribed by law, by which he renounced the Catholic faith and professed himself to be a Protestant. Thereafter, in September 1756, David Orme, as curator ad litem for Peter Grant, brought an action of reduction in the Court of Session against Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and his son Count Anthony Leslie, then in possession of the Balquhain estates, and the other sons of Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, and Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, and his own father Captain John Grant, the next heirs of tailzie to the said estates, and sought to have it declared that he, Peter Grant, was the true heir to these estates on the following grounds:—

- I. That the defenders were either aliens, and consequently, by the laws of Scotland, incapable to succeed, or to hold any land-estate in Scotland ; or,
- II. That the whole defenders were either professed Papists, or born of parents professing the Popish religion, and educated therein ; and, as such, by the statute of 1700, entitled "Act for preventing the growth of Popery," rendered incapable to succeed to or to take and enjoy any land-estate in Scotland until they should renounce that religion in the form and manner, and within the time limited and appointed by the act, by taking and subscribing the formula.

III. That the pursuer was the nearest Protestant heir called to the succession of the estate of Balquhain under the deed of settlement executed in 1700.

Therefore he concluded against Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, that, in terms of the devolving clause contained in the settlements of the said estate, he should be decerned and ordained to grant, subscribe, and deliver, a valid and sufficient disposition, containing procuratory of resignation, and all other necessary clauses, of the said lands and estate of Balquhain, to and in favour of the said Peter Grant.

*See App.
No. XXIII.*

David Orme produced in Court a letter addressed to him, 1st October 1755, from Captain John Grant, informing him that his eldest son, Peter Grant, was born 5th April 1741, and this proved that Peter Grant was fifteen years of age at the date of the action. He also produced a certificate under the hands of the moderator and clerk of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, dated 2d March 1755, testifying that Peter Grant had taken the formula by which he had abjured Popery. The Lord Ordinary, 30th June 1757, found it proved that the pursuer, Peter Grant, was the eldest son of Captain John Grant, late of Ballindalloch, in the service of the States-General of Holland, who was the son of John Roy Grant of Ballindalloch, and Anne Francisca Leslie, and that the pursuer was entitled to bring and maintain the said action.

In order to prove that the defenders were Catholics and aliens, David Orme, as curator ad litem for Peter Grant, collected evidence at home and abroad, and exposed to public view all the transactions, both public and private, of Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and of Count Anthony Leslie, and their family.

By proofs taken at Venice in November 1759, before a notary, in order to prove that Count Charles Cajetan Leslie and his sons were papists, it was shown that Count Charles Cajetan had a chapel with three altars in his palace at Pernegg in Upper Styria, and that mass was said there daily; and that, as far as could be judged, the count and his sons were devout persons, and on meagre days ate no flesh meat; and a witness deponed that he had seen the count receive the sacrament at the Romish church at Marioncelli, where he had a large estate, and that if the Counts Leslie had not been Roman Catholics, they could not have held public offices about the Imperial Court, and could not have been admitted to the posts and dignities which they enjoyed in the empire; Count Charles Cajetan being a Councillor of State, Actual Privy Councillor to the Empress Queen, and President of the Revisary Court of Justice of Lower Austria, in causis privatorum; Count Joseph Leopold being actual Imperial and Royal Councillor of Lower Austria ; and Count Anthony Leslie being a gentleman of the bed-chamber of the Archduke Joseph, for which reason he always resided in Vienna.

In a letter from Jerome Reccunct, a merchant in Venice, dated 11th September 1759, to Thomas Gordon, merchant in Aberdeen, it was stated that, "With regard to the papers you sent relating to Count Leslie's affair, I shall send them over to my friend in Germany, but am apprehensive it will be almost impossible to succeed according to your wishes. The family of Count Leslie resides in Styria, and is held in great consideration, not only in that part of the country but likewise at the Court of Vienna."

Lord Newark stated that about the year 1754 he visited Count Charles Cajetan Leslie at Gratz, in Styria, as he had learned from Mr. Thomas Dundas of Fingask that the count had desired that he would wait upon him ; and that Count Leslie told him that one of his sons had gone over to Scotland with the Austrian ambassador, and also spoke of a lawsuit which he had regarding the estate of Balquhain. He also stated that the count talked in French, and none in English.

John Frederick Ordos, a Hanoverian, stated that he was house-porter to the Imperial ambassador in London, Count Colorado, who had a private Romish chapel in his house, and that he had often seen Count Anthony Leslie, when in London, in 1753 and afterwards, go with the ambassador into the chapel, and that Count Anthony Leslie, when disengaged, generally dined with Count Colorado.

Jacob Frey, a German tailor, stated that in August 1753 he saw Count Anthony Leslie at Count Colorado's, the Austrian ambassador's in London, for whom he used to work; that he was engaged by Count Anthony to make clothes for him and his servants; that he had seen Count Anthony at mass in the chapel of Count Colorado's country house at Brentford; that Count Anthony lodged, on his first coming to England, at Mr. Rosenberg's in Bury Street, St. James's, and afterwards at a milliner's in Great Grosvenor Street; and, on his return from Scotland, he lodged again with Mr. Rosenberg; that he had often observed a crucifix at the head of Count Anthony's bed, and that he had found in the pockets of one of the count's coats sent to be mended by him, a handkerchief, gloves, and a set of beads; and that, happening to be in the count's room when he was undressing, he saw the pictures of two saints on his breast and back next the skin.

Archibald Campbell, vintner in Aberdeen, stated that about five years before, in 1754, a gentleman who had come from Edinburgh, and who was called Count Leslie, lodged in his house, and was on his way to his own house of Fetternear; and that, from his dialect, he took him to be a foreigner, although he spoke English pretty well.

The Rev. Patrick Simpson, minister at Inverurie, stated that he was often with Count Anthony Leslie during the time he was at Fetternear in July 1754; that there was a painting of Count Charles Cajetan's house at Gratz in the dining-room of Fetternear, and Count Anthony recognised it as his father's house on first entering the room; and that Count Anthony, from his language, appeared to be from Germany, and the witness did not imagine that Count Anthony was a native of Great Britain.

The Rev. Alexander Simpson, minister at Monymusk, stated that when Count Anthony Leslie was at Fetternear about 1754, he met him at the house of his son, Patrick Simpson, then minister at Kemnay, and that Count Anthony spoke with a foreign accent.

1754.

John Clerk senior, advocate in Aberdeen, stated that he was several days with Count Anthony Leslie in July 1754, at Fetternear and other places in Scotland; and that he was also in company with him for several days in the south country in July 1758, during the count's second visit to Scotland.

first Baron of Balquhain, says, "The year 1758 I was myself in Scotland during the war, when everybody said and believed it to be the highest injustice if I ever lost the inheritance which had been for so many years in the family of Leslie ; even the former king (George II.) spoke to me concerning it."

The Rev. Robert Farquhar, minister at Chapel of Garioch, aged sixty, stated in his evidence that he had been twenty years a minister of the parish, in which a great part of the estate of Balquhain lay ; that in 1754 Count Anthony Leslie came and stayed some days at the house of Fetternear, and came one Sunday and heard divine service performed by him at the kirk of Chapel ; and that he conversed that day and the next day with Count Anthony at Fetternear, and could perceive from his dialect that he was not a native of this country.

Mrs. Isobel Leslie, sister of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, stated that about five years before, in 1754, when Count Anthony Leslie was at Fetternear, she saw the Rev. James Hamilton, a religious, abbot of Augsborg, who told her that he was at the Scotch College at Ratisbon, along with Count Anthony Leslie and his brother, when they were studying there, and that he had received a letter from Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, desiring him to take care of Count Anthony while in Britain, particularly in matters of religion, meaning that he should not deviate from the Catholic religion, and that he intended to have come to Scotland with Count Anthony, but the Count gave him the slip, and went off to Scotland before him. The witness stated that Mr. Hamilton mentioned these facts to her after she had told him that Count Anthony Leslie had been hearing divine service at the kirk of Chapel of Garioch.

Mrs. Teresa Leslie, sister of Mrs. Isobel Leslie, stated that the Rev. James Hamilton told her that, when travelling down to this part of the country, he met Count Anthony Leslie returning south again, and that the Count told him he had been at mass the preceding Sunday; and that, when Mr. Hamilton came to Pitcaple, the witness informed him that the mass which the Count had been at was that he had been that Sunday at the kirk of Chapel of Garioch.

Christian Rosenberg, oculist to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, stated that Count Anthony Leslie lodged in his house in Bury Street, St. James', both before and after his journey to Scotland in 1754, and that the Count's servant had told him laughing, that the Count had been at a church of the established religion, and had given five guineas in charity on that occasion, and that the Count had done it out of frolic.

Another witness stated that, in 1758, Count Anthony Leslie passed through Rotterdam on his way to London, and it was also stated that he was at Fetternear in July 1758.

In order to obviate one objection to his title to retain the estate of Balquhain, Count Anthony Leslie took the legal formula purging himself of popery; and his counsel produced a certificate to that effect, signed by the moderator and clerk of the presbytery of Stirling, dated the 15th July 1758.

At a meeting of the freeholders of the county of Aberdeen at the Michaelmas head-court, held 3d October 1758, John Clerk senior, advocate in Aberdeen, produced a petition from Count Anthony Leslie, praying to be enrolled among the freeholders of the county, in virtue of a charter under the Great Seal, dated 26th July 1743, of the lands and estate of Balquhain. Against this it was objected by Sir Archibald Grant of Monymusk, that Count Anthony Leslie was an alien, and therefore could not hold any heritable subject in Great Britain, and he craved that the meeting would delay enrolment as there was a lawsuit depending before the Court of Session upon the point. Mr. Clerk admitted that there was a lawsuit depending at the instance of Peter Grant, who claimed the estate as next Protestant heir, but that the objection to Count Anthony's title had been removed, he having qualified himself in terms of the law, and had taken the necessary formula; and that, though the Court of Session had found Count Anthony presumed to be a foreigner or alien, yet the House of Peers had reversed the interlocutor of the Court of Session ; and, as Count Anthony had been in possession of the estate of Balquhain since 1743, he ought to be enrolled among the freeholders of the county. On a vote of the meeting to enrol or to delay enrolment, the latter was carried by a majority, and it was determined to delay enrolment till the action then pending was decided.

1757. While the law process was lingering on, Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, one of the nearer heirs of entail, died, 12th March 1757 ; and a short time afterwards Captain John Grant, father of Peter Grant, also died, so that then Peter Grant fairly stood the direct and nearest heir of the female line of Count Patrick Leslie's daughters.

1750. On the death of Count Charles Cajetan Leslie in 1760, his eldest son, Count Joseph Leopold, having died in 1750, Count Anthony Leslie succeeded to the family estates in Germany, and, in terms of the deeds of settlement, was bound to denude himself of the estate of Balquhain to the next heir of entail ; and having no surviving brother and no son, that next heir of entail was Peter Grant, who had now a better ground for claiming the estate than his former invidious grounds of action. However, the case continued to be argued on the former grounds, and was finally decided against Count Anthony Leslie in favour of Peter Grant, by an interlocutor of the Court of Session, 4th December 1761, finding it proved that Captain John Grant, the pursuer's father, was a professed papist; that Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and his sons Leopold and Anthony were born abroad, out of the king's allegiance, whereby they, being aliens, cannot succeed to any heritage in Scotland; and therefore they found the retour of Count Anthony Leslie, as heir of tailzie to Ernest Leslie, last of Balquhain, 2d August 1742, with the instrument of sasine following thereon, to be null and void; and by another interlocutor, dated 5th February 1762, by which the Court found and declared Peter Grant to be the nearest Protestant heir entitled to succeed to the estate of Balquhain; and found the Counts Leslie obliged to denude of the said estates in favour of Peter Grant, and repelled all the other defences. This decision having been confirmed by the House of Peers, Peter Grant became twentieth Baron of Balquhain. For the life of Anthony, Count Leslie, see the Records of the Counts Leslie in Germany.

ter of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, was declared nearest Protestant heir of tailzie to the estate of Balquhain; all the other nearer heirs being declared incapable to succeed because they were either aliens born out of the allegiance of the crown of Great Britain, or were persons professing the popish religion. Therefore Count Anthony Leslie, who had succeeded to the estate of Balquhain as nineteenth baron, in virtue of a decision of the House of Lords in his favour, 29th April 1742, was obliged to denude himself of the estate of Balquhain in favour of Peter Leslie Grant, who became twentieth Baron of Balquhain.

Lady Anne Francisca Leslie, second daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, married John Roy Grant of Ballindalloch in November 1689. Her husband, John Roy Grant, being a man of no prudence, and being of irregular habits, very unhappy differences arose between them, and he not only ruined his own estate, but also involved several of his friends and neighbours. He mortgaged his estate of Ballindalloch, and lost it by adjudication, when it was sold to Ludovic Grant of Grant in 1710. They had one son, John Grant, who was educated in the Catholic religion. Having little or nothing of his paternal inheritance to depend on, John Grant determined to try his fortune abroad. He went to Holland and entered the Dutch service, in which he attained the rank of captain, as appears from the evidence of witnesses in the law proceedings between his son Peter Grant and the Counts Leslie. We find Colonel William Murray of the Dutch service stating in his evidence that he had known Captain John Grant since 1708, when Captain Grant first entered the Dutch service; that he was a very good officer, but his being a Roman Catholic prevented his promotion; that they served together in General Colzier's regiment; and that he had received letters from Captain Grant within seven or eight years, informing him that his children had been baptized by Catholic priests.

Edward Manhard, a merchant, stated in his evidence that he had known Captain John Grant since 1727, when he went over to Holland along with him as a volunteer; that he was in the Captain's house when his son Peter Grant was born; and that he, as well as the captain's other children, was baptized by a Romish priest; and that Captain Grant was a Roman Catholic, and converted his wife, who was the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman in Fife.

Captain Robert Johnston stated in his evidence that he had served with Captain John Grant in Colzier's regiment from 1739 to 1742; and that in the nomination for promotion returned by General Colzier to the States of Holland, Captain Grant was always returned as a Papist, which was the reason given for his being so often-disappointed in preferment.

Captain John Grant married, about 1740, the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman in Fife, and she afterwards became a Catholic. By her he had—

I. PETER, who became twentieth Baron of Balquhain.

II. ELIZA, who, late in life, married Patrick Leslie Duguid of Auchinhove.

Although Peter Grant was born of Catholic parents, and was baptized and educated as a Catholic, yet, on attaining the age of fifteen years, by the persuasion of a relation of his mother, David Orme, a lawyer in Edinburgh, he renounced the Catholic faith, and then claimed the estate of Balquhain as the nearest Protestant heir of tailzie, and brought an action of reduction against all the nearer heirs, including his own father, Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, and the Counts Leslie in Germany, as being either persons professing the popish religion, or aliens born out of the king's allegiance, and consequently incapable of inheriting any land-estate in Scotland. As has been shown, after a litigation of six years, during which time the Court of Session pronounced several interlocutors, and several appeals were carried to the House of Lords, Peter Grant was declared nearest and true and lawful heir professing the Protestant religion to the estate of Balquhain, 5th February 1762, and was served heir to the deceased Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, 11th March 1763, and obtained a precept of chancery for infeftment in the lands and barony of Balquhain, 25th April 1763.* He then assumed the name and arms of Leslie.

Peter Leslie Grant entered the Dutch service, and during the period of his service he used occasionally to come over to Scotland and reside at Fetternear. But having lived rather freely, he fell into delicate health, and was obliged to retire, when he took up his permanent abode at Fetternear. He was a most gentlemanlike man in his manners, and had a very amiable disposition. He used frequently to have to stay with him Patrick Leslie Duguid of Auchinhove, the next heir to the estate of Balquhain.

Peter Leslie Grant was deeply in debt to his law-agent, David Orme, who had rendered him much assistance in obtaining possession of the estate of Balquhain, and had advanced sums of money at various times. In payment of this debt, Peter Leslie Grant in 1769 granted to David of Fetternear. This lease was radically unjust and illegal, seeing that the whole estate was most strictly entailed, and could in no manner be disposed, and the manor-house and domain of Fetternear could in no case, by law, be let beyond the lifetime of the heir of entail in possession. This lease, which was registered 7th July 1774, proved of ruinous consequence to the family, as will be shown.

Peter Leslie Grant was never married. He died at Fetternear in 1775, and was succeeded by Patrick Leslie Duguid of Auchinhove, son of Teresa Leslie, third daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain.

PATRICK LESLIE DUGUID,

TWENTY-FIRST BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

1775.

PATRICK LESLIE DUGUID, tenth Baron of Auchinhove, eldest son of Robert Duguid, ninth Baron of Auchinhove, by his wife, Teresa Leslie, third daughter of Patrick, Count Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, succeeded his cousin, Peter Leslie Grant, as twenty-first Baron of Balquhain in 1775. Patrick Leslie Duguid was born in 1700, and succeeded his father in the estate of Auchinhove in 1731.

1731.

We find by the evidence given by Patrick Leslie Duguid in the law-process between Peter Leslie Grant and the Counts Leslie regarding the succession to the estate of Balquhain, that he was educated abroad. He stated that his cousins, Counts Joseph and Charles Cajetan Leslie, the sons of his uncle Count James Ernest Leslie, his mother's brother, while making a tour with their tutor, paid a visit to their and his aunt, Lady Betty Leslie, abbess of the Ursuline convent at Lisle; and on her informing them that he, Patrick, their cousin, was at Douai, they came over to see him. He also stated that for several years he used to go from Douai to Lisle and stay there for eight or ten days at a time with his aunt Lady Betty Leslie, and that, since his return to Scotland he had frequently corresponded with her. He also stated that when his half-uncle, George Leslie, second son of Count Patrick Leslie by his second wife, Mary Irvine of Drum, went over to Paris to meet his elder brother, Count James Ernest Leslie, it was arranged that George should succeed their father, Count Patrick Leslie, in the estate of Balquhain, and James Ernest in the German estates; also that Count James Ernest wrote to his sister, Teresa, Patrick Leslie Duguid's mother, that as he never intended to return to Britain, he had sent her by his brother George his picture and a ring set round with diamonds.

Patrick Leslie Duguid returned from Douai before 1715. On the breaking out of the rebellion in that year, he espoused the cause of the Stuarts with the utmost zeal, so that, though he was only a lad of fifteen years old, he was "out," as the Jacobite expression was. Again, when Prince Charles Edward landed in Scotland in 1745, Patrick Leslie Duguid joined his standard, with a considerable body of men which he had raised on his own estate, and in other parts of Aberdeenshire, and which he maintained at his own expense, for which purpose he borrowed large sums of money on the security of his estate of Auchinhove. He was present and was wounded in the engagement which took place at Inverurie, 23d December 1745. He joined the force under Lord Lewis Gordon at Aberdeen, 27th November 1745, with about fifty men. Lord Lewis Gordon was appointed by the Prince Lord-Lieutenant of the counties of Aberdeen and Banff, where from his family connection he had considerable interest. He commenced immediately to raise men: every proprietor was obliged to furnish a man or £5 sterling for every hundred pounds Scots of his valued rent. By this means two battalions were raised, one of which was placed under the orders of James Moir of Stoneywood, and the other under Gordon of Abbachy. He also raised a considerable sum of money, notwithstanding that his views were much thwarted by his brother, Cosmo, Duke of Gordon, who kept up a fair appearance with the government.

To put an end to Lord Lewis Gordon's recruiting and exactions, Lord Loudon, the king's Commander-in-chief in the North, despatched the Laird of Macleod, 10th December 1745, from Inverness with 500 of his clansmen, followed by 200 men under Major Munro of Culcairn, and 500 men under the Laird of Grant. Lord Lewis Gordon ordered his forces to fall back on Aberdeen, where he assembled a number of men raised in Forfarshire and Kincardineshire, and some of Lord John Drummond's French troops, lately landed at Montrose, and 300 Farquharsons and others under the Laird of Monaltrie, and the Aboyne battalion, and the Aberdeen battalion under James Moir of Stoneywood.

The Laird of Grant, fearing for his own country, returned homeward; Munro took post at Old Meldrum, and Macleod advanced and occupied Inverurie, 16 miles north of Aberdeen. Lord Lewis Gordon, on learning this incautious movement, determined to attack his opponents with all despatch. He moved from Aberdeen on the morning of the 23d December with about 1100 men and five small pieces of cannon, which had been taken from a vessel in the harbour. With the main body of his army he crossed the bridge of Don, and took the route by Fintray up the left bank of the river, while he sent a detachment of 300 men, French and others, by the Tyrebagger road, the usual road to Inverurie, so as to deceive the enemy with regard to the true point of attack.

About four o'clock in the afternoon, when it was getting dark, the French party, who had marched by the right bank of the Don, dashed into and waded across the river, and attacked the enemy on the south-west side of Inverurie. Lord Lewis Gordon, who had reached the Urie on the east side of the town, hearing the din of battle, immediately crossed that river near the church, and attacked the town on that side. He came on the enemy so unexpectedly, that they were completely surprised. The Macleods opened a fire from the ditches and from behind walls, but being vigorously pressed, they gave way and fled in all directions. Their chief was placed in great peril, particularly as his men were not over zealous in the cause against the Stuarts. He got his followers together as well as he could, and retreated for some time fighting by moonlight. Many of his men were killed or wounded, and about fifty were taken prisoners, among whom were Gordon, younger of Ardoch, Forbes of Echt, and John Chalmers, formerly Principal and Professor of King's College, Aberdeen. The Macleods continued to retreat till they crossed the Spey and reached Elgin. There they told their chief that he had deceived them by making them believe that he had raised them and brought them out of their country to serve the Prince, and had afterwards told them so at Inverness. They promised to follow him still if he would return to his duty, and be faithful to Prince Charles Edward, but otherwise they would return to their country, which latter they did.

Patrick Leslie Duguid was also engaged in the battle of Culloden, fought 16th April 1746. He was excepted from the general pardon granted by the government of King George to those engaged in the rebellion, on account of the bold and active part which he had taken in the unfortunate cause of him whom he considered his rightful sovereign.

After the suppression of the rebellion, Patrick Leslie Duguid could not return to his own house at Auchinhove, because a party of the king's troops, under Captain Hardy, was quartered on the estate and occupied the castle. He was therefore obliged to skulk about the country. Being a most resolute man, he determined to sell his life as dearly as possible, particularly as Captain Hardy had sworn and declared in the most brutal boasting manner, that if Auchinhove was out of hell, he would take him dead or alive. Patrick Leslie Duguid got a guard for his safety and protection, a band of six faithful old followers and companions in arms, who were well armed, and remained constantly with him in the various places to which he resorted for security, in the fastnesses of Coul, and the neighbouring hills and mountains, where he concealed himself and dexterously evaded every attempt of the king's troops to surprise or take him. He frequently observed the soldiers searching the neighbourhood for him.

During this unhappy period, his wife, Lady Auchinhove as she was usually called, remained with her three infant children at the castle of Auchinhove, and was kept in a state of continued alarm and anxiety not only with regard to her husband's safety, but also for her own, and on account of the continual intrusion of the soldiers into her privacy under the pretence of searching for her husband. One day Captain Hardy abruptly entered her room, and hearing some noise in an adjoining closet in which her son James, then a child only five years old, usually slept, he thought that it was perhaps the laird who might have got secretly into the castle, and was concealed there. He rushed in great haste to examine the closet, when, to his great mortification, he found only the little fellow. Captain Hardy was not a little abashed, but, to conceal his chagrin, he flourished his gay cocked hat and feathers, and told the child that he would give it to him if he would cry Hurrah for King George! To his surprise the boy smartly answered, "Na, na; I'm a Prince's man."

Some time afterwards, Captain Hardy, finding that he had little chance of succeeding in apprehending the Laird of Auchinhove, and becoming enraged at being baffled in all his attempts, cruelly ordered the castle to be burned, without giving notice or warning of any kind to the unfortunate lady or her family. At the hour of midnight, he barbarously gave the order to set fire to the castle. After it was in a blaze, Lady Auchinhove made her escape with her children by a window, and retired to the top of a neighbouring hill, where she sat shivering in the cold, mournfully looking on until the castle and all its valuables were reduced to ashes. She took refuge afterwards in the gardener's house.

Lady Auchinhove, on afterwards seeing Captain Hardy, made no reproach to him, but simply remarked that her uncle General Irvine, the Commander of the Forces in the North, would not thank him for what he had done. The captain was thunderstruck, and tried to excuse himself, saying that if he had known she was a relation of General Irvine he would not have done it. She replied, "That shows your evil disposition, as you had no orders to do it." His employers were equally culpable, however, as no merited punishment followed the crime, and no redress was ever obtained. The laird witnessed the heartrending sight of his ancient castle in flames from a spot on the hill of Coul, which is still pointed out by the country people. A gable-end and the foundations of the castle of Auchinhove still exist, and the traces of the fire may still be seen in the blackened walls of a house which formed part of the barn-yards or office-houses.

In addition to his other misfortunes, Patrick Leslie Duguid had incurred large debts in consequence of borrowing money to raise and to maintain his men during the rebellion, so that his barony of Auchinhove was deeply mortgaged. Trustees, one of whom was his brother-in-law, James Irvine of Kingcaussey, were appointed over his estates to manage them and to pay his debts; but, with every endeavour to save the estates, they were obliged to sell them to pay the encumbrances. The estate of Auchinhove passed into the possession of the Farquharsons of Finzean.

About 1763, Patrick Leslie Duguid got from his cousin, Peter Leslie Grant, twentieth Baron of Balquhain, the house of Tullos, on the estate of Balquhain, to live in, and a small piece of ground, about a boll and a half sowing. There, with his children, he was supported by an allowance of twelve bolls of meal out of a public mortification called Dr. Anderson's, which was managed by several gentlemen, among whom was James Irvine of Kingcaussey, his brother-in-law, and other twelve bolls of meal which he got for some time from the granary of Balquhain. His miserable situation at this period appears from letters which he wrote to Mr. Orme, writer in Edinburgh, who produced them in the law-process which afterwards took place regarding the lease of the estate of Balquhain. He was reduced to the necessity of selling some of the meal allowed to him for the sustenance of his family, in order to get money to pay the wages of the maid-servant.

On the death of Peter Leslie Grant, twentieth Baron of Balquhain, without issue, in 1775, Patrick Leslie Duguid of Auchinhove, the next heir of entail, succeeded as twenty-first Baron of Balquhain. Patrick Leslie Duguid, eldest son and heir of Teresa Leslie, third daughter of Count Patrick Leslie of Balquhain, was served heir of tailzie to the late Peter Leslie Grant, of Balquhain, in the lands and barony of Balquhain, 17th April 1775. A precept was issued furth of the Chancery for his infestment as aforesaid, 25th April 1775. Sasine followed thereon 11th May 1775, registered at Aberdeen 22d May 1775.*

On succeeding to the estate of Balquhain, Patrick Leslie Duguid found that he had new difficulties to contend with. The last possessor, Peter Leslie Grant, being of careless habits, by these, and by the expenses incurred in disputing the succession with the Counts Leslie, had involved himself deeply in debt, particularly to David Orme, a lawyer in Edinburgh. To relieve himself from his difficulties, and having no family to provide for, as has been related he granted to this David Orme, in 1769, a lease of the whole estate of Balquhain for five times nineteen years, or ninety-five years, for the small consideration of a yearly rent of £733 : 13 : 4, payable to himself and his heirs of entail during the currency of this long lease, in which were included the manor-house and domain of Fetternear. This lease was manifestly unjust, and contrary to all established law, seeing that the whole estate was strictly entailed, and could not in any manner be alienated; and further, the manor-house and domain of Fetternear could in no case by law be let to any tenant beyond the lifetime of the heir of entail in possession.

By this iniquitous settlement, Patrick Leslie Duguid found himself not only deprived of the revenue from the estate of Balquhain which he had a right to enjoy, but he was also excluded from his own family mansion-house of Fetternear, David Orme having taken possession of the house, and acting as lord and master of the whole estate. Being unwilling to submit to such injustice, Patrick Leslie Duguid, 2d July 1776, raised an action of reduction against David Orme, for reducing the lease.* In the meantime he was obliged to continue to occupy the house of Tullos, which had formerly been a hunting-seat of the Barons of Balquhain, and was situated in a small open plain at the foot of Bennachie, which rises majestically behind it.

* Balquhain Papers, No. 1006.

Besides his difficulties with David Orme, Patrick Leslie Duguid found himself exposed to new vexations on his accession to the estate of Balquhain. His brother, James Duguid, had an illegitimate son, Joseph Duguid, and this Joseph took advantage of an act of the sixth Parliament of King James VI., entitled "Act anent the youth and others beyond sea suspected to have declined from the true religion," to declare himself a Protestant, and as a Protestant to be the nearest and rightful heir of entail in the estate of Balquhain to Peter Leslie Grant, twentieth Baron of Balquhain. He brought an action against Patrick Leslie Duguid; James Duguid, his eldest son; Charles Duguid, his second son; John Duguid, his third son; Patrick Duguid, his fourth son; Alexander Duguid, his brother-german; and Ernest Leopold Patrick, son of John, third son of Patrick Leslie Duguid; who, he contended, should all be passed over and excluded from the possession of the estate of Balquhain, because they all professed the Popish religion. The summons is dated 30th May 1775.

Patrick Leslie Duguid, finding his age and infirmities increase, and being unable to undergo all the anxieties and trouble attending the management of the legal proceedings and the affairs of his estate, and being desirous of securing his property to his own family, formally renounced his liferent right and title to the lands and barony of Balquhain in favour of his third surviving son, John Leslie, his two elder sons being in holy orders, and being thereby excluded from the succession by the terms of the entail.

Patrick Duguid granted a bond of corroboration in favour of Count Ernest Leslie, then eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, as heir served and retoured to the deceased Count James Leslie, seventeenth Baron of Balquhain, his brother, for six thousand pounds, dated 14th December 1734. He disposed a piece of moss, part of the Mains of Auchinhove, in favour of Francis Farquharson of Finzean, 11th July 1737. He sold to Francis Farquharson of Finzean the lands of Meikle and Little Tillylair, 17th June 1738; and granted him a disposition of the same, dated 5th July and 13th November 1738. He also granted to him a disposition of heritable tolerance of a road to the Lochs in 1738. Ernest, Count Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, disposed and translated the several bonds granted to him by Patrick Duguid, with the letters of inhibition and decret of adjudication therein contained, in favour of Francis Farquharson of Finzean, 6th December 1738, who obtained letters of inhibition on the said disposition against Patrick Duguid, 19th February 1740. In 1750, Patrick Duguid paid Elspet M'Combie for a horse taken from her in 1745.

Patrick Leslie Duguid married, first, Isabella Dickson. Their marriage-contract is dated 27th and 28th August 1731. By it Robert Duguid of Auchinhove, and Teresa Leslie his spouse, disposed the lands of Tillylair and others, under the burden of a bond for £6000, due to James, Count Leslie, seventeenth Baron of Balquhain, in favour of Patrick Leslie, their eldest son, and Isabella Dickson, his spouse, in liferent, and the heirs-male of their marriage. This marriage-contract was registered in the Sheriff-Court books of Aberdeen, 29th December 1735. Patrick Leslie Duguid had three sons and one daughter by his first wife, Isabella Dickson, but they all died young. He married, secondly, 16th July 1740, Amelia Irvine, daughter of James Irvine of Kingcaussey, by his wife, Lady Mary Forbes, daughter of the Earl of Granard. By her he had—

Being in holy orders, he was excluded from the succession to the Balquhain estates. He came to Scotland when his father died, in 1777, but, being disgusted with the prejudices then prevailing against Catholics, and with Lord George Gordon's riots in Edinburgh in 1780, he returned to England, and served the Grafton Mission for nine years. He was afterwards chaplain to Anthony, Earl of Newburgh, at Slindon Hall, in Sussex. He then succeeded his brother, the Rev. Charles Leslie, in the Oxford mission in 1806. He left Oxford in 1812, and became chaplain to Peter Middleton, Esquire, at Stockhill Park, in Yorkshire. He received the honour of the Croix de la Fleur de Lys from Louis XVIII., King

By his amiable manners and classical taste he commanded the respect and acquired the esteem of many learned members of the University. He was carried off by a paralytic stroke, 28th December 1806, and was buried in the sanctuary of his church. The following epitaph is inscribed on his tomb :—

then at Terregles with her infant son, Ernest, John Leslie mentions that his father, Patrick Leslie Duguid, was at Tullos, and was not very well. Patrick Leslie Duguid wrote a letter to his daughter-in-law, Violet Leslie, dated at Edinburgh, 15th January 1777. By a letter, written 11th April 1777, by John Leslie to his wife Violet, addressed to her at Kingswells, it appears that Patrick Leslie Duguid was then dead. He was succeeded by his third surviving son, John Leslie, twenty-second Baron of Balquhain. His third wife, Elizabeth Grant, died in the following year.

JOHN LESLIE,

TWENTY-SECOND BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

1777.

JOHN LESLIE, born 13th January 1751, third surviving son of Patrick Leslie Duguid, twenty-first Baron of Balquhain, by Amelia Irvine of Kingcaussey, his second wife, succeeded as twenty-second Baron of Balquhain on the death of his father in April 1777; his two elder brothers, James and Charles, being excluded from the succession by a clause in the deeds of entail excluding heirs who were in holy orders.

Scotland being at the time in a very unsettled state, in consequence of the troubles of 1745, and there being then no schools for the education of young people professing the Catholic religion,

John Leslie was sent abroad at an early age, about 1761, to be educated at the Scotch college at Ratisbon, where the Counts Leslie in Germany had made a foundation for the education of members of the family. John Leslie prosecuted his studies with great success, and became an elegant classical scholar and an excellent linguist, speaking most of the modern languages with fluency.

During the time John Leslie was at Ratisbon, Peter Leslie Grant, then in possession of the estate of Balquhain, fell into delicate health, and there appeared to be no probability that he would marry. Patrick Leslie Duguid and his family, therefore, became anxious that John Leslie should return to Scotland, which he was induced to do at their urgent request, as appears by a letter from his eldest brother, the Rev. James Leslie, written 17th March 1770. John Leslie returned home with some reluctance, because he had made up his mind to enter the Austrian service. It was desirable that he should relinquish this plan, as, in the event of the death of Peter Leslie Grant without issue, he became immediate heir-apparent of entail to the estate of Balquhain, his elder brothers being excluded from the succession, being in holy orders.

On his return home, in order to improve himself and to obtain a knowledge of the laws of the country, and so to qualify himself to understand the duties of a country gentleman, John Leslie studied civil and canon law at the University of Edinburgh, and attended various other classes there. By these studies, combined with the accomplishments acquired in foreign lands, he became a most finished gentleman, and, being of a lively disposition, a most agreeable companion. During this period he used frequently to pay visits to his cousin, Peter Leslie Grant, at Fetternear.

1775. Peter Leslie Grant, twentieth Baron of Balquhain, died in 1775, and was succeeded by Patrick Leslie Duguid of Auchinhove as twenty-first Baron of Balquhain. Finding himself unable from his years to manage the estates and the lawsuits in which he found himself involved, as has been narrated, he resigned his estates in favour of his son John, in 1776. Patrick Leslie Duguid did not long survive his resignation : he died in the following April, 1777.

- 1777.
- As has been narrated, Peter Leslie Grant, having been in difficulties with regard to money, granted a lease of the whole estate of Balquhain to David Orme, writer in Edinburgh, for a period of five times nineteen years, from Whitsunday 1769 to Whitsunday 1864, being a duration of ninety-five years, at the rent of £733 : 13 : 4 a-year. On the death of Peter Leslie Grant in 1775, his successor, Patrick Leslie Duguid, brought an action of reduction against David Orme, to reduce this long lease ; but during his lifetime little progress was made in the action. When John Leslie succeeded his father in the estates, he continued the process for the reduction of the lease. In the meantime, he was put to the greatest inconvenience, as David Orme had taken possession of the mansion-house of Fetternear, as appears by a letter written by John Leslie to his wife, dated 28th April 1776. In consequence of this, John Leslie was obliged to remain at Terrcgles with his father-in-law for upwards of a year, and his first child, Ernest, was born there. After that he took up his residence at Kingswells in 1777, a place belonging to his law-agent Mr. Durno, several miles from Fetternear, on the Skene road to Aberdeen. Afterwards he went to live at Tullos, a small and inconvenient house on the estate of Balquhain. During this period he was subjected to every sort of annoyance and persecution on account of his religion. Few of the country people would afford his family even the smallest assistance or service for any money ; they would hardly sell them an egg or a chicken. There were some honourable exceptions—people who were attached to the cause of the Stuarts, and who had been out with Mr. Leslie's father in 1745. These worthy people and their descendants continued faithful adherents to Mr. Leslie through life, on account of the difficulties to which the family was subjected. But they were the exception. When Mr. Leslie's brothers, the Rev. James and the Rev. Charles Leslie, visited him, and said mass privately in his house, the women of the neighbourhood, getting to hear of it, threatened to break the windows. Being obliged to go to Edinburgh in 1780, on law business, accompanied by his brother the Rev. James Leslie, and his sister-in-law Miss Margaret Dalzell, they happened to arrive during the anti-Catholic riots raised by Lord George Gordon, and no person would take them into a house, and they were obliged to take a small boat and cross the Frith of Forth on a dark and stormy night, and seek shelter on the opposite coast.

To add to these difficulties, David Orme, fearful of losing the power which he had acquired over the estate of Balquhain, carried his ill-will and prejudice so far, that he used every endeavour to produce a Protestant claimant to the estate; and he attempted to set up as such one Joseph Duguid, an illegitimate son of James Duguid, a brother of Patrick Leslie Duguid, twenty-first Baron of Balquhain.

James Duguid was the third son of Robert Duguid, ninth Baron of Auchinhove, by his wife, Teresa Leslie. Being of a very unsettled disposition, he fell into difficulties and enlisted in the 42d Highland Regiment, in which he became a sergeant. He married a woman of the name of Brodie, who went with him when he accompanied his regiment to America. When he returned home again, his wife remained in America, and was kept by a lieutenant in the regiment, and afterwards became a common prostitute. James Duguid then took up with another woman in this country, and cohabited with her while his own wife was still living. This woman had a son called Joseph, and James Duguid was supposed to be his father. But James Duguid, on his death-bed, solemnly declared that he never was married to Joseph's mother. The said Joseph was at best an adulterous bastard. But this did not prevent Mr. Orme from bringing him forward as a Protestant heir to the estate of Balquhain.

Mr. Orme founded Joseph Duguid's claim to the estate of Balquhain on the seventy-first act of the sixth parliament of King James VI., entitled "An Act anent the youth and others beyond sea suspected to have declined from the true religion," and the third act of the 8th and 9th sessions of the first parliament of William III., dated 3d November 1700, entitled "An Act for preventing the growth of popery;" by which acts persons professing the popish religion, and neglecting to purge themselves of popery by taking the formula prescribed by law, or who sent their children, or had themselves been sent abroad to be educated in popish religious houses, were excluded from any right which they might have to succeed to any real estate in Scotland, and the nearest Protestant heir was entitled to succeed to such estate, in the same manner as if the nearer Catholic heirs were dead.

Joseph Duguid founded his claim on these acts of parliament, and brought an action of reduction against Patrick Leslie Duguid, late of Auchinhove, now designed of Balquhain; James Duguid, his eldest son; Charles Duguid, his second son; John Duguid, his third son; Patrick Duguid, his fourth son, and Alexander Duguid, his brother-german; and sought to have it found and declared that all these were persons professing the popish religion, or had been educated in popish religious houses abroad, and as such incapable to succeed to, or to take, hold, enjoy, or possess, the lands and estate of Balquhain, but were obliged to resign the same in favour of him, Joseph Duguid, the next Protestant heir of entail.

*See App.
No. XXV.*

Foreseeing that the legitimacy of Joseph Duguid would be disputed, David Orme brought an action of declarator of his legitimacy before the Commissary of Edinburgh. Appearance was made for John Leslie of Balquhain, who offered to prove that the said Joseph Duguid was an adulterous bastard, the reputed son of James Duguid, born to him during the lifetime of his wife, from whom he was separated. This offer put an end to this process. David Orme then bethought him of the device of serving Joseph Duguid as heir-in-general to James Duguid, his supposed father, before the bailies of the Canongate, without attempting to serve him as Protestant heir-in-special to Peter Leslie Grant; finding it impossible to accomplish the latter on account of Joseph's bastardy and the existence of nearer heirs of entail.

On the part of Joseph Duguid, David Orme further raised objections to the service and retour of John Leslie of Balquhain, on the ground that John Leslie had two elder brothers, who, although in holy orders, were not excluded from the succession by the clause of the deed of entail, because the clause did not exclude such heirs as were in holy orders at the time the succession opened to them, but only such as should receive holy orders after the succession opened to them; also on the ground that John Leslie was a papist, and as such his service to the estate of Balquhain ought not to proceed.

On the report of Lord Kames, one of the assessors in the competition of breves between John Leslie and Joseph Duguid, the Lords of Session found that the service of John Leslie could not proceed, and that the service of Joseph Duguid might proceed; and they remitted to the macers to proceed in the service of Joseph Duguid accordingly.

By this judgment matters were brought to an extremity; and there being no appeal against the unjust law of which David Orme had taken advantage, John Leslie thought it prudent to get a Protestant friend of the family to take charge of his infant son and heir, Ernest, who was born while the process was pending, and who would be considered by law as a nearer Protestant heir to the estates while under the guardianship of a Protestant, than Joseph Duguid. Accordingly, James Irvine of Kingcaussey, John Leslie's maternal uncle, applied by petition to the Court of Session that it might be ordained that Ernest Patrick Leslie, the son of John Leslie of Balquhain, now an infant, should remain under the keeping of James Irvine of Kingcaussey, to the end that he might be educated suitably to his station, and especially that he might be instructed in the principles of the Protestant religion by law established, and that he might remain under his charge till further orders of the court, and that such a sum might be appointed in name of aliment, to be paid to James Irvine out of the means of John Leslie, the father, to defray the expense of the education and maintenance of the said Ernest Patrick Leslie; and this in virtue of an act of parliament passed in 1661, entitled "An Act against popish priests and Jesuits," which, after discharging them from saying mass within the kingdom, commands all sheriffs and magistrates to send to parliament or to the Privy Council lists of such persons as are known or suspected to be papists, that course might be taken with them conform to the laws, enacts as follows:—"Likewise his Majesty, considering how dangerous it is that children be educated by persons popishly affected, do therefore, in conformity to former acts of parliament, appoint that children under popish parents or curators, shall be taken from them and committed to the education of some well-affected and religious Protestant friend, by order of his Majesty's Privy Council." The Court of Session granted to James Irvine the prayer of his petition, and he got possession of the infant, Ernest Leslie. The child was seized with an alarming illness, of which he nearly died, and his parents got permission to visit him. Mrs. Leslie risked her life in visiting her sick child. It was in November, and the snow fell so fast and heavily that the carriage could not proceed, and Mrs. Leslie with her infant daughter, whom she was then nursing, had to get out and wade through the snow. It was only when John Leslie, compelled by the necessity of the case, submitted to a degrading form of law, that his infant son was restored to him.

John Leslie, having the prospect before him of being deprived of his estate, and seeing his son taken from him to be educated in a religion different from that which he and his ancestors had professed for so many centuries, had been frequently urged by his legal advisers and Protestant friends to take the formula, by which means, nominally renouncing his religion, he might have his son restored to him, and his estate secured. John Leslie was very reluctant to do this, and for a long time he refused. His uncle, James Irvine of Kingcaussey, wrote to him the following well-meant letters, urging him to comply with the requirements of the law.

Edinburgh, 25th November 1777.

Dear Nephew—We got safe here Friday last, but too late to meet with the Lord Advocate. Yesterday I had a long conversation with Mr. Colquhoun Grant upon your affairs. It seems there is a necessity for taking the formula within the Presbytery of Garioch. Here it cannot be done, and all your lawyers are of opinion if that is not done little Pat must be served heir, and the widow also for her terce. This you must know will be destruction and beggery, and the child taken away from you for ever. I have at a distance talked with two of our judges, and I assure you they said just what Mr. Grant will tell you by this post. You have an army of the best lawyers against you, and it really gives me great concern to think of the consequences if you do not do what you should do. I need say no more, but compliments to Mrs. Lesly and Miss Dalzell, and that I am always, dear nephew, yours, &c.

Edinburgh, 6th December 1777.

Dear Nephew—Altho' I have had no answer to my last, yet as your affairs are now in that situation that a few days more must, if you still persist in not doing what you ought, you and all your family ever live in beggery and want, and I am sure with good reason heartily curse you, and lament you ever were born. If you had not married, I should not have felt what I now do, and from henceforward shall not trouble you upon this subject. Do not flatter yourself with idle nonsense of a division of the House of Peers. That will not do, and Mr. Grant is determined to serve your son heir, and Mrs. Leslie in her terce, and by this post Mr. Durno will have orders for doing so, and indeed you have not a friend that can condemn him. How soon this service is over, little Pat shall be sent for, and neither his mother, nor you, nor any of his Roman Catholic friends, must have anything more to say to him. Mr. Grant will write to you this day, and altho' I expect no answer to this, yet I can answer to myself that I have done everything in my power to save you and your family from utter ruin; and with compliments to Mrs. Lesly and Miss Dalzell, I am, your aff. uncle and humble servt.,

JAMES IRVINE.

John Leslie was deeply moved by the opinion which his Protestant friends expressed with regard to his conscientious scruples against taking the formula, and at last, after much reluctance, and with great repugnance, he took it before the Presbytery of Aberdeen. But David Orme persisted in his plan of opposition, and brought an action in the Court of Session to reduce the proceedings of the Presbytery of Aberdeen, alleging that John Leslie did not then live within the bounds of that presbytery, and that he had only signed the formula without repeating the words. To put an end to these objections, John Leslie was obliged to take the formula again before the Presbytery of the Garioch.

He was then required to prove that his two elder brothers, James and Charles, were in holy orders, and thereby excluded from succession to the estate by an express clause in the deeds of entail. This he proved, and the Court of Session pronounced a declarator against the said James and Charles Leslie as papists and priests of the Romish Church, 21st January 1778. John Leslie was then served and retoured heir to his father, Patrick Leslie Duguid, in the lands and barony of Balquhain, 26th January 1778; and a precept of Chancery for infesting him in the said barony was issued to the sheriff and bailies of Aberdeen, 31st January 1778.*

Thus were the claims of Joseph Duguid disposed of. It was not possible that it could long be the law of the land that such a claimant could bring an action to eject lawful proprietors from their estates on account of their religion. In the very following year, 1779, an act of parliament was passed allowing Roman Catholics in Great Britain and Ireland to educate their own children without incurring the punishment of perpetual imprisonment; and Catholics were declared capable of acquiring landed property by purchase or inheritance, and of transmitting it to others. England and Ireland acquiesced in this small measure of favour granted to fellow-Christians. But in Scotland the intolerant spirit of presbytery stopped the current of brotherly love, and stirred up a spirit of hatred which terminated in the riots of 1780, when Lord Mansfield's house in London was sacked and burned by a mob led by the fanatic Scotchman Lord George Gordon; and the Catholic church and Bishop Hay's house in Edinburgh were destroyed, and the house of Principal Robertson was attacked by a furious populace, who were restrained only by military force from sacrificing the Principal's life to their vengeance, because he had said in the General Assembly that these slender concessions ought to be made to Catholics.*

Years had now passed, and the law-plea which was to decide the validity of the lease granted by Peter Leslie Grant to David Orme was still pending. The deeds on which David Orme defended his claim were the following:—

|---|-------|
| I. A Lease of the whole estate of Balquhain, granted to him by Peter Leslie Grant in 1765 for nineteen years. | 1765. |
| II. A Lease of the whole estate of Balquhain, granted to him by Peter Leslie Grant for four times nineteen years, from Whitsunday 1769, for a rent of £733 : 13 : 4. | 1769. |
| III. An Assignment, dated 29th March 1769, to him by Peter Leslie Grant of the said rent of £733 : 13 : 4, with the exception of a sum of £300 a-year to be paid to Peter Leslie Grant—the balance of rent being assigned to pay his debts. | 1769. |

IV. A Ratification of the above three deeds, dated 14th September 1769, by Patrick Leslie Duguid, the next heir of entail.

V. A Lease, dated 7th September 1773, to him by Peter Leslie Grant of the Manor and House of Fetternear, for four times nineteen years from Whitsunday 1773.

VI. A Lease, dated 11th September 1773, to him by Peter Leslie Grant of the whole estate and premises contained in the former leases, for nineteen years, to commence at the termination of the second lease, viz. at Whitsunday 1845.

David Orme's views at first seem to have extended no further than to get every possible security for the repayment of the money due to him by Peter Leslie Grant. But afterwards he came to entertain ideas of a very different kind. He availed himself of Peter Leslie Grant's necessities, and of the confidence which he reposed in him, and aimed at getting possession of the estate of Balquhain under the form of a lease for a number of years amounting nearly to a perpetuity, coupled with such other deeds as would render his possession absolute. Indeed, Peter Leslie Grant, in spite of his inexperience and want of reflection, and the unlimited confidence which he placed in David Orme, became sensible of the unfair advantage which had been taken of him, as appears by a letter written, 8th February 1773, to John Leslie, declaiming in the most bitter terms against the whole transactions as a piece of gross imposition put on him under the mask of friendship.

But his turn for dissipation was continually leading him into fresh extravagance, and his debts went on accumulating so as to render any redress impossible.

In the law proceedings it came out that the lease for four times nineteen years, from Whitsunday 1769, was sent to Peter Leslie Grant, then in Edinburgh, on the 28th March 1769, with a note in David Orme's handwriting, informing him that he might keep the lease till next day, but must bring it with him to dinner at a tavern named. On Peter Leslie Grant's part no friend or lawyer had been consulted, and being permitted only one day for reflection, he had not time to give sufficient consideration to so important a matter. He went to the tavern next day, 29th March 1769, and there signed the lease without further inquiry. In order to secure this lease, David Orme applied to Patrick Leslie Duguid, the next heir of entail, to get a ratification of it, so that it might not be reduced on his succession. David Orme invited Patrick Leslie Duguid to dine at Fetternear, and after dinner he produced a ratification of the lease, and by artifice he induced him to sign it, 14th September 1769.

David Orme, in his defence, stated that the execution of the lease and deed of assignation and restriction was witnessed by one of the judges of the Court of Session ; that the whole transaction was known to Patrick Leslie Duguid, the then next heir of entail, who resided on the estate, and who, 14th September 1769, executed a deed mentioning the obligations which all the heirs of entail lay under to him, David Orme; that the lease for four times nineteen years which Peter Leslie Grant had given him, and the deed of assignation and restriction, were just and equitable; that it was reasonable that he and Peter Leslie Grant's other creditors should have every security which it was in the power of the heir of entail in possession to grant; that having taken opinion of counsel how far Peter Leslie Grant, then an infant, the nearest Protestant heir called to succeed to the estate of Balquhain, and who was a native of Great Britain, could exclude the other heirs named before him in the entail, in respect of their being papists and aliens, and having been advised that his claims were well founded, he, David Orme, who was Peter Leslie Grant's first cousin, brought him over from Holland, where he resided with his father; that he maintained and educated him, and, in 1756, when he was fifteen years of age, he raised an action in his name for the recovery of the estate of Balquhain from the Counts Leslie; that he had involved himself in great expense to prove that the Counts Leslie were Roman Catholics and aliens; that a great part of the evidence to prove these points being taken by commission in foreign parts, particularly at Vienna, whither it was necessary to bring witnesses from Gratz in Styria, where the Counts Leslie resided; that he had himself to go abroad several times in the cause; that he gave up his whole time and business to it, and staked all that he had, and all the credit that he could command, on it; that the action against the Counts Leslie commenced in 1756, and they, being people of great opulence and power, contested every point; that no less than thirty-six interlocutors were pronounced in the cause by the Court of Session, and five appeals carried to the House of Lords; that the cause was continued for more than six years, when it was decided in favour of Peter Leslie Grant; that the expenses of the process were very great, and the whole were defrayed by him, David Orme—Peter Leslie Grant having neither money nor credit of his own, except £343 lent to him by Sir Ludowic Grant, and £150 lent to him by his relations, which he, David Orme, paid; that Peter Leslie Grant, sensible of the service which he had rendered to him, settled an account on his coming of age, 15th April 1762, for the money expended by him in the lawsuit since 1756, with an allowance for his trouble and advances, and granted a bond for £3080, with interest from 16th April 1762; and that he settled a second account, 26th April 1763, for further expenses incurred, and gave him a bond for the balance of £155 : 3 : 3; that on the 25th

April 1765, with a view to pay him and others what he owed them, Peter Leslie Grant executed a deed whereby he leased the whole estate of Balquhain to him for nineteen years from Whitsunday 1765, for the rent of £300 a-year, to be paid to him, his heirs, and assigns—the surplus rent to be applied to the payment of Peter Leslie Grant's debts, after deducting necessary charges, provided Peter Leslie Grant did not apply such surplus rent to other necessary purposes; that for four years after the date of this lease, Peter Leslie Grant found it necessary to apply the surplus rent to other purposes, and, in consequence, his debts increased; that Peter Leslie Grant, being sensible that some other plan must be adopted for the payment of his debts, took the opinion of counsel, with respect to his power under the entail to grant a long lease of the estate as a security to his creditors; that what followed was in conformity with the opinion of counsel; that John Lumsden, a tenant on the estate, and his brother, were appointed to make out a statement of the rents and of the fines or grassums which the tenants paid for their leases, and to give their opinion what grassum each farm would likely yield, supposing the lease to be out; that their report was laid before Mr. Farquharson, accountant in Edinburgh, with a memorial that Peter Leslie Grant had resolved to grant a total lease of the estate of Balquhain for four times nineteen years, at the present rent, in favour of him, David Orme; and desiring him to make a calculation as to what the various farms might yield by way of grassum in present money, supposing the farms to be worth the appraised money at the commencement of each term of nineteen years, and at what rate the victual or meal rent should be taken on an average of the fiars for the preceding twenty years; that Mr. Farquharson stated in his report that, supposing the current leases to be as stated, the grassums for four times nineteen years would amount to £992 : 15 : 6 sterling; and that, in respect of the endurance of the tack, and that the last seven years had been years of scarcity all over Britain, he was of opinion that the price of bere should not exceed £7 Scots, or 11s. 8d. sterling, per boll, and the whole meal should not exceed £5 : 14s. Scots per boll, and that at these prices he had drawn up an abstract of the whole rental, amounting to £9062 : 8 : 3 Scots; that, in consequence of this report, the lease for nineteen years granted to him in 1765 was annulled, and, on the 29th March 1769, Peter Leslie Grant gave him a new lease, whereby, for the sum of £992 : 15 : 6 sterling premium or grassum, he let or devised to him, his heirs and assigns, the whole lands and barony of Balquhain for the term of four times nineteen years; and he, David Orme, became bound to pay to Peter Leslie Grant, his heirs and assigns, the yearly rent of £9062 : 8 : 3 Scots, or £733 : 13 : 4 sterling; the amount of the rental as valued by Mr. Farquharson—always deducting the minister's stipend and other public burdens; that the lease contained a clause to the effect that if Peter Leslie Grant, his heirs or assigns, chose to possess the house, gardens, and Mains of Fetternear, he, David Orme, should be obliged to yield them up upon twelve months' warning, being allowed a discount from the rent; that in 1769 Peter Leslie Grant's debts were as follows, viz.—due to him, David Orme, after deducting £992 : 15 : 6 paid as a grassum for the lease, £2398 : 11 : 5½; repaid by David Orme to Sir Ludowick Grant, principal and interest, £411, 14s. 9d.; fees of counsel, for which David Orme had given bond in trust for him, £851 : 13 : 10. Balance due to London solicitors for last appeal, £560 : 3s.; due to physicians, during a long illness, and to the surgeon in whose house Peter Leslie Grant had lived in London, £867 : 4 : 8; due to sundry persons, for which David Orme became security, £558 : 15 : 11 :—in all £5648, 3s. 7½d.; that to make a sinking-fund for the payment of these debts, and to provide an allowance for Peter Leslie Grant himself, and to put his affairs on a clear footing for the time to come, another deed was executed on the same day as the lease, whereby, after reciting the lease and the debts due as above, Peter Leslie Grant assigned to him, David Orme, his heirs and assigns, for himself, and in trust for the other creditors, the sum of £4770 : 1 : 9 Scots, being the yearly rent or tack-duty due for the lease, being the balance, after deducting the sum of £3600 Scots, reserved to himself and his heirs, and £692 : 1 : 9 Scots, being minister's stipend and other public burdens; which annual sum of £4770 : 1 : 9, he, David Orme, was bound to apply—first, in payment of an annuity of £60 to Elizabeth Grant, only sister of Peter Leslie Grant, in case she should survive him, and the remainder for the extinction of the principal and interest of the debts due by Peter Leslie Grant; and to the end that the said sum should be punctually applied to the said purposes, Peter Leslie Grant discharged him, David Orme, and his heirs and assigns, as lessees, of that portion of the rent until all the said debts were extinguished; and he provided that, in the event of the heir of entail who should succeed to him refusing to ratify these deeds, by virtue of the power vested in him to set tacks for any yearly rent he might think proper, being satisfied that all the sums due to him, David Orme, and the other creditors, except the debts lately contracted, were spent in rem versam of all the heirs of entail, he restricted the rent of £9062 : 8 : 3 Scots, payable by the lessee, to the sum of £300 sterling, payable to himself and the heir of entail in possession for the time being, till the whole debt should be paid off; that under this lease, he, David Orme, entered into possession of the estate of Balquhain, and went and resided with his family on it, but found that it would be necessary either to build a dwelling-house or to repair the house of Fetternear, which was in ruins; that from the latter course he was deterred by the power reserved to Peter Leslie Grant, his heirs and assigns, to resume possession of the mansion-house of Fetternear; but that, to obviate this difficulty, Peter Leslie Grant executed another deed, dated 4th August 1769, restricting this right to himself and his heirs, exclusive of assigns, and permitting him, David Orme, to cut barren timber for building or repairing the tenants' houses, and for restoring Fetternear House, and fencing such fields as he should take into his own possession, and obliged himself to give an allowance for such repairs as should be made in the house of Fetternear, and in the office-houses; also that he should take down such parts as could not be repaired, and use the materials for other building, and that no additional rent was to be charged for the privilege of cutting timber; and, in the event of limestone being found on the estate, he, David Orme, was to pay at the rate of a penny a boll for what he should dispose of after serving his own tenants; that, having been at considerable expense in repairing Fetternear House, he thought it would be a hardship if the succeeding heirs were to turn him out of possession of it and the surrounding enclosures ; therefore he prevailed on Peter Leslie Grant to restrict the power of recovering possession of it to himself and the heirs-male of his body ; and, in consideration of the extensive repairs done at Fetternear House, and for a grassum of £55, to grant to him, his heirs and assigns, a lease of the manor and house of Fetternear, with the avenues, gardens, enclosures, office-houses, and Mains, for four times nineteen years from Whitsunday 1773 ; and further, another lease for nineteen years, to commence on the expiry of the former lease for four times nineteen years, for a grassum of £25 sterling ; that Peter Leslie Grant died in 1775, and was succeeded by Patrick Leslie Duguid, who was not in a position to assail the above leases and deeds, on account of his ratification of the same, 14th September 1769.

After a lengthened process, the Lord Ordinary, having advised the process of reduction at the instance of John Leslie of Balquhain against David Orme, and the counter-process of the said David Orme ; the two deeds of entail made by Count Patrick Leslie in 1692 and 1700 ; the tacks and other deeds under challenge ; the memorials for both parties, and the answers thereto, pronounced an interlocutor, 18th July 1788, to the following effect, viz.—

I. With respect to the first deed—viz. a lease of the whole estate of Balquhain granted in 1765 by Peter Leslie Grant in favour of David Orme, for nineteen years—as it was renounced, the Lord Ordinary assoilzies the defender David Orme.

II. With respect to the second lease of the whole estate of Balquhain for four times nineteen years from Whitsunday 1769, granted by Peter Leslie Grant in favour of David Orme, the Lord Ordinary finds that by a clause in the deeds of entail, Count Patrick Leslie permitted heirs of tailzie to grant tacks of any part of the estate, and that under the then rental if such heirs should think fit; and therefore that the tack in dispute is not liable to be challenged by the pursuer John Leslie.

III. With respect to the deed of assignation, dated 29th March 1769, whereby Peter Leslie Grant reserved to himself the sum of £300 out of the rental, and assigned the balance for the payment of his debts, the Lord Ordinary finds that such assignation cannot be effectual beyond the lifetime of Peter Leslie Grant and such of the other heirs of tailzie as should have ratified the same; and as it was ratified by Patrick Leslie Duguid, the pursuer's father, he therefore assoilzies the defender from the reduction of the said deed for the period during the life of Peter Leslie Grant and of Patrick Leslie Duguid, till 1777, but reduces the same in so far as regards the assignation of the said rent from and after Patrick Leslie Duguid's death.

IV. With respect to the ratification of the leases above-mentioned, and the assignation of the rental payable under the same, made by Patrick Leslie Duguid, 14th September 1769, the Lord Ordinary sustains the same.

V. With respect to the lease made by Peter Leslie Grant, 7th September 1773, in favour of David Orme, of the manor-place and house of Fetternear for four times nineteen years, and the restriction of resuming possession of the same to the said Peter Leslie Grant, and his heirs-male, excluding heirs of entail, the Lord Ordinary finds that as Peter Leslie Grant was under no limitation for granting tacks of all or any part of the estate, and for such rent as he thought proper, therefore the pursuer cannot challenge the said lease as comprehending the manor-place and mansion-house of Fetternear, or as restricting the privilege of resuming possession of the same to the heirs-male of Peter Leslie Grant; and further finds no evidence that Fetternear is the mansion-house of the family, or has been occupied as such for many years; therefore, as the entail makes no exceptions, he repels also that reason for reducing the said lease.	CHAP. VI. With respect to the lease, dated 11th September 1773, whereby Peter Leslie Grant not only ratified the former lease of the whole estate of Balquhain in favour of David Orme for four times nineteen years from Whitsunday 1769, but also grants a new lease of the same for another period of nineteen years, to commence at the expiry of the former lease, thus giving the lease a duration of five times nineteen years, or ninety-five years, from Whitsunday 1769 to Whitsunday 1864, the Lord Ordinary sustains the said lease, and assoilzies the defender, David Orme, from the reduction of the same.	1773. 1769. 1769-1864. not be lawful for heirs of tailzie to sell, alienate, or dispose of, any part of their entailed lands, or to contract debts, or do any other deed whereby the same may be oppressed, adjudged, or evicted from the other heirs of entail. John Leslie made representations against the interlocutor, but they were rejected by the Lord Ordinary. Neither was David Orme satisfied with it, because it reduced the deed whereby the balance of the rent payable under the lease was assigned to him. Therefore both John Leslie and he appealed to the Court of Session.

In the further proceedings, John Leslie endeavoured to show, by investigation of the transactions and deeds, that Peter Leslie Grant had suffered gross lesion, and that, in making the bargains, some of the most essential circumstances had been misrepresented or fraudulently concealed from him, which amounted to a breach of trust. At length, in 1781, the Court of Session pronounced a decision to the effect that David Orme's lease should stand good for four times nineteen years, and that the mansion-house of Fetternear, with the manor-place, should be restored to John Leslie.

By this decision, only nineteen years were struck off from the duration of the lease, and the unwarrantable dispositions made by Peter Leslie Grant, contrary to the entail, were sustained. The grounds on which the Court of Session sustained a lease of such unusual duration, contrary to the terms of entail, appear to have rested on the plea of equity. The court seems to have considered that David Orme was entitled to indemnification for the expenses incurred by him in recovering the estate of Balquhain from the Counts Leslie in Germany, and thus opening the succession to the descendants of the daughters of Count Patrick Leslie. But the decision is contrary to all decisions given by the Court of Session ever since.

When John Leslie recovered possession of the once fine family seat and mansion-house of Fetternear, with its once magnificent domain, he found it in desolation, and reduced almost to a barren waste. The fact was, that David Orme, being aware that John Leslie was a Catholic, and knowing how unfavourable the laws were to Catholics, thought he was quite secure, and would be enabled by law to keep undisturbed possession of everything granted to him by his lease. He carried his insolence so far, that he refused John Leslie, or any member of his family, permission even to enter the house of Fetternear, although they wished to do so only as a matter of curiosity to see it. When, therefore, he found himself likely to be ejected, with great malice he did everything possible to dilapidate and destroy the place. He ordered all the woods to be cut down, even the ornamental timber and the superb old avenue of trees which led up to the house in triple rows on either hand. Some of the neighbouring gentlemen and friends of the family, with the view of preserving the woods from destruction, and of saving them for the family, purchased them, and left them standing. But David Orme insisted that this was a breach of bargain, as the woods were sold under condition of being cut down. Therefore he repossessed himself of them, and in consequence of this, the finest trees were sold for the smallest trifle. He swept them all away, and destroyed the fine old gardens. Orchards, shrubberies, and walks were allowed to go to ruin; and then he pulled down the two side wings of the house of Fetternear, and used the beams and timbers as firewood. Since the death of Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, in 1739, without issue, and the consequent disputed succession, first between Sir James Leslie of Pitcapple and Count Charles Cajetan Leslie in 1740, and the continued absence of Count Anthony Leslie in Germany, then the law-process between him and Peter Leslie Grant, and, lastly, the alienation of the property to David Orme, the estate of Balquhain had been for upwards of forty years under the control and management of lawyers and factors, who took no interest in improvements, or in keeping up the condition of the estate.

John Leslie, on obtaining possession of the mansion-house of Fetternear in 1781, put it into a state of repair, and set about improving the domain according to the newest and most approved mode of agriculture. He had the merit of introducing one of the finest breeds of cattle ever seen at that period in the north of Scotland. They were originally of the pure Galloway breed, and by crossing with others of an approved description produced a breed which was held in great esteem by the farmers in the country. He lost no time in planting trees about the place. He planted the Cottown and Gallowhill parks, and extensive tracts of barren ground, besides ornamental plantations on the domain.

Soon after the ending of the lawsuit in 1781, David Orme became bankrupt, and his lease of the estate of Balquhain devolved to William Keith, as trustee for the creditors. William Keith, by an assignation dated 17th July 1782, and recorded in the Register of Sasines 30th July 1786, transferred the lease to Henry Lumsden, advocate in Aberdeen, from Whitsunday 1781, and Henry Lumsden made Alexander Lumsden a partner with himself in it from Whitsunday 1789. Articles of agreement were executed between Henry and Alexander Lumsden, and assignation was made of the lease by Henry Lumsden, in favour of himself and the said Alexander Lumsden, 21st December 1790, and 1795. Several kind neighbours, knowing the untoward position in which John Leslie was placed, came forward and most handsomely offered their security to him if he could succeed in buying up the lease from the Lumsdens. This, after a lengthened negotiation, he succeeded in doing. Henry and Alexander Lumsden agreed to dispose of their remaining interest in the lease from Whitsunday 1795, on consideration of receiving the sum of £3727 : 10s. for the lease, and £20 a-year to Henry Lumsden for his lifetime in lieu of his factorship. In consequence of this agreement, Henry and Alexander Lumsden assigned the lease to Charles Bannerman, advocate in Aberdeen, agent for the trustees, 26th April 1796. 1796.† These trustees were Miss Elizabeth Fraser of Castle Fraser, Alexander Burnett, Esq. of Kemnay, and Colonel Horne Dalrymple Elphinstone of Logie, who had become security for John Leslie until the price of the lease should be paid up by yearly instalments.

1813. In 1813, the whole sum, £3727 : 10s., the price of the lease, being paid up, the trustees were released, and John Leslie got the lease into his own possession, so that he became full proprietor, and had the command of his paternal inheritance. With a view of providing better for his younger children, instead of renouncing the lease in his own favour and then destroying it, he kept it up as a distinct right in his own person, which could be transmitted to his heirs and assigns whomsoever, as a separate fund from the annual rent of £733 : 13 : 4 payable to the heir of entail in possession under the lease. This arrangement proved a serious misfortune. Having little knowledge of business, and the management of country affairs, and being of an easy temper, and being embarrassed by having borrowed money to pay the price of the lease and to maintain his family, he found himself in difficulties. To relieve himself from these, for inconsiderable grassums he let excellent farms at rents far under their value, and agents lent him money at ruinous interest on the security of the lease. One agent actually got possession of the lease as security for money advanced by him, and thus matters were as bad as if the lease had never been purchased.

John Irvine got a lease of Old Town of Balquhain for four times nineteen years, or seventy-six years, from John Leslie in 1814. Colonel Charles Leslie, twenty-sixth Baron of Balquhain, John Leslie's fifth son, in 1859, purchased the remainder of this lease, 31 years, from John Irvine's representatives for £2192 : 8 : 11.

At length John Leslie got so involved in his difficulties, that, 23d June 1825, he assigned the lease and the woods of the estate of Balquhain, valued at £6000, to his eldest son, Ernest Leslie, and to Mr. Fraser of Strichen, Mr. Fraser of Lovat, and John Ewing, advocate in Aberdeen, as trustees, reserving to himself an annual sum for his maintenance, and appointing the balance for the payment of his debts and for providing patrimonies for his younger children.

In 1796 the farm of Aquhorties, consisting of nearly 800 acres, was out of lease. It was in a miserable state, only some scattered fields here and there being under cultivation. The other parts were either hills covered with heath, or low marshy lands. It happened that the venerable Bishop Hay, Vicar-Apostolic of the Lowland district of Scotland, at that time was anxious to get a place where he might establish a college for the education of young men destined for the priesthood to serve on the Scotch mission, the French revolution having obliged the Scotch colleges at Paris and Douai to be closed. The good bishop having private property of his own, which he piously devoted to the service of the church and the good of religion, took a lease of the farm of Aquhorties for ninety-nine years. He built a college, and commenced agricultural operations. He was so successful that in the course of a few years the face of the barren country was completely changed. The whole farm was regularly laid out in fields and enclosed and fenced. Every acre capable of cultivation was brought in by trenching and draining, and the remainder was planted so as to be ornamental and useful. Aquhorties remained the only Catholic college in Scotland till 1829, when the college was transferred to Blairs in Kincardineshire. In 1844, the representatives of Bishop Hay renounced the lease of Aquhorties on condition of receiving an annual sum during the currency of the lease.

John Leslie married, at Terregles Castle in Dumfriesshire, 14th November 1774, Violet Dalzell, daughter of John Dalzell, Esq. of Barnecrosh (grandson of Sir Robert Dalzell, Bart. of Glenae, and cousin of Robert, Earl of Carnwath, who was attainted and condemned to be beheaded in 1715, but obtained a reprieve), by his wife, the Honourable Harriet Gordon, only daughter of William, sixth Viscount Kenmure, Lord Lochinvar, who suffered for his zeal in the cause of the Stuarts, being beheaded on Tower Hill 24th February 1716. William, Viscount Kenmure, had married the Honourable Lady Mary Dalzell, sister of Robert, Earl of Carnwath, so that Violet Dalzell's father and mother were cousins. She was a lady possessing great beauty and personal charms, adorned with every virtue, and of graceful and pleasing manners. By her John Leslie had issue—

- I. ERNEST LEOPOLD PATRICK, who succeeded him as twenty-third Baron of Balquhain.
- II. JOHN, born at Tullos 1st May 1780. He was sent with his elder brother, Ernest, to the Scotch college at Ratisbon in Bavaria, in 1789, when he was only nine years of age. In 1795 he returned to Scotland, and, as he intended to enter the Austrian service, he prepared himself for the military profession by studying mathematics and the art of fortification. He left Fetternear 4th October 1797, and sailed from Leith 13th October for the Continent, and proceeded to Vienna. In a letter to his mother, dated 4th December 1797, he stated that he had been kindly received by Major-general Worensdorff, of the Polish Guards, also by Prince Lobkowitz, to whose regiment of Light Dragoons he had been appointed, and that he was about to proceed to Italy, to join his regiment, which was then serving in that country; and that he proposed to call on Count Leslie as he passed through Gratz in Styria, on his way to Italy, because the English ambassador at Vienna had told him that Madame Buchenberg, wife of Count Lilsen, colonel of the regiment in which his brother Ernest was serving, had mentioned to the ambassador that Count Leslie had said that he wished to see some member of the family. By another letter from him, dated at Padua, 1st February 1798, we learn that he left Vienna 12th January of that year, and had called upon Count Leslie in Gratz, and that he had joined Prince Lobkowitz's Light Cavalry regiment as a cadet. He likewise mentions that his brother Ernest was then with his corps in Bohemia. In another letter, dated 18th February 1798, he says that his uniform was white with blue facings, and that he was learning his exercises. In a letter written to his father, dated in camp under the Alps at Venola, three miles behind Genoa, 22d December 1798, he states that he had been wounded in the leg on the 17th October, but that he did not go to the hospital at Lodi, as he had soon got well again, and

had since been in several engagements. The greatest battle, he says, was at Genola, 4th December 1798. He was at the siege of Alexandria, July 1799. By a letter, dated near Tortona, 29th July 1799, he informs his friends that he had been engaged on the 19th, 20th, and 22d June at the battles which took place at the castle of St. Giovanni. He was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant, and attached to the staff of Marshal Suwarroff as an orderly officer. He was present at the battle of Novi, 15th August 1799; at the siege of Genoa, in April 1800; at the battle of Marengo, 14th June 1800; at the battle of the Mincio, 25th December 1800. He afterwards returned to Scotland, and attended the funeral of his brother-in-law, Alexander Fraser of Strichen, in 1803. He took a passage in a foreign vessel then lying at Aberdeen, and about to sail for Dantzic, he having the intention of rejoining his regiment then in Poland. The vessel sailed from Aberdeen 3d December 1803, and was never afterwards heard of. It was supposed that she foundered at sea, and that all on board perished.	CHAP. John Leslie, twenty-second Baron of Balquhain, died 27th February 1828, aged seventy-seven, and was succeeded by his eldest son Ernest, Count Leslie, twenty-third Baron of Balquhain. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Violet Leslie went to live at Leslie Lodge, or Aquhorties, where she died, 23d September 1836, in the eighty-eighth year of her age. This venerable lady was upwards of sixty years resident on the estate of Balquhain, beloved and respected by all classes in the country. She retained all her faculties to the last; and as she possessed a peculiarly retentive memory, her conversation was most interesting and entertaining, especially when she related stories of 1715 and 1745, which she had heard from her relations and friends, many of whom had suffered in the Stuart cause. She used to tell how she and her sisters dressed themselves up in the cloak and gown of the brave Countess of Nithsdale, in which her husband, the Earl, effected his escape from the Tower of London—the relics being preserved in the Castle of Terregles, of which her father had a lease from the Nithsdale family. She used also to tell how, when she was at school at the convent at York, the head of her grandfather, Lord Kenmure, still

ERNEST, COUNT LESLIE,

TWENTY-THIRD BARON OF BALQUHAIN.

ERNEST, eldest son of John Leslie, twenty-second Baron of Balquhain, by his wife Violet Dalzell, succeeded as twenty-third Baron of Balquhain, on the death of his father, 27th February 1828.

Ernest Leslie was born at Terregles Castle 28th November 1775. In 1788 he was sent, with his brother John, to the Scotch college at Ratisbon for his education. Having finished his studies there, he determined to make the army his profession. Being precluded at that period by his religion from entering the British army, he resolved to enter the Austrian service. He did this the more willingly, as several members of the family had risen to great distinction in that service. In 1795, when he was twenty years of age, he joined La Tour's Dragoons as a cadet. In the following year he served at the siege of Kehle, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. In 1798 he served with his regiment in Bohemia, as appears by a letter written to his mother by his brother John, dated at Padua, 1st February 1798. In April 1799 he returned to Scotland to visit his friends. He left Fetternear,

23d September 1799, for Edinburgh, but not finding a vessel there, he returned to Aberdeen, and sailed from thence to Hamburg, 3d October 1799, and reached that city on the 7th after a stormy passage of four days. On the 27th he was at Nuremberg, and in November he was in Augsburg. He was appointed to Hohenloe's Dragoons, and was present at the battle of Hohenlinden, fought 3d December 1800. In 1803 he was at Horodenka, as appears by a letter written to him by his agent at Vienna, 10th February 1803, informing him that he had 335 florins to be forwarded to him. In 1803 he again returned to Scotland. He arrived at Aberdeen in a ship from Dantzic. His brother Charles went aboard to meet him, and next day he went out to Fetternear, where he met his brother John for the first time since they had left the college at Ratisbon. He was present at a dinner given on the occasion of his nephew, Thomas Alexander Fraser of Strichen, now Lord Lovat, being served heir to his father. He returned to Germany, and was employed in partisan service. When General Mack surrendered with the Austrian army at Ulm, Lieutenant Leslie had the good fortune to give timely notice of the disaster to Prince Ferdinand of Austria, who was marching with an army to join General Mack, and thus a portion of the Austrian army was saved. Afterwards Lieutenant Leslie was made a captain in Prince Ferdinand's Hussars. In 1806 he got a troop in Mehrfeldt's Hulans or Lancers. In 1809 he was appointed to a squadron in Prince Ferdinand's Hussars. He was present at the battles of Eckmuhl and Ratisbon in April 1809, and at Aspen, Eslang, and Wagram, in June 1809. In 1811, he was in Upper Hungary.

When the Emperor Napoleon compelled Austria to join him, and to declare against England, and commenced his campaign against Russia, Ernest Leslie, not wishing to serve in the army of a power which was then acting against his country, obtained leave of absence. He returned to Scotland with his wife, the Baroness Fanny Stillfried, whom he had just married. So strictly were Napoleon's decrees of blockade of the ports of Europe against England observed, that he had considerable difficulty in leaving the Continent. He was obliged to travel under an assumed name, and at last he reached Denmark, from whence he succeeded in embarking for Scotland. In 1813 he again left Scotland, and went to Prague, where he left his wife and joined his regiment. Soon afterwards he was promoted to a majority in Mehrfeldt's Hulans, and was present at the battle of Dresden, 17th August 1813. He was wounded on the following day, and was taken prisoner and sent to France. In passing through Verdun he received assistance from Captain Patison of the 29th British regiment. He was released at the peace of Paris in May 1814, when he returned to Prague. In 1816 he again visited Scotland, and on the 31st May 1817 he was again at Prague in Bohemia. Soon afterwards he went to Brussels, where his wife's aunt, the Baroness de Mirwart, lived. At her death she left him her house and plate and some lands in the Ardennes, which, being wooded and wild, he sold far under their value to Mr. Cockerel, who found coal there, and made a large fortune. In 1825 Ernest Leslie again visited Fetternear. In 1831 he took up his residence there. In 1834 he went to live at Frankfort.

Ernest Leslie assumed the title of Count, which had been so long borne by the German branch of the family, and the title was allowed him by the Austrian government, who addressed him in all official and military documents as Count Ernest Leslie; and as such he appears in the Almanach de Gotha, among the Counts of the Holy Roman Empire.

Count Ernest Leslie married, 22d January 1812, at Cassorie, in Upper Hungary, the Baroness Fanny Stillfried, daughter of Emmanuel, Baron Stillfried, Chamberlain of the Emperor and Knight of Malta, by his wife Teresa, Baroness Steinbach. She was born at Horn in Austria 20th November 1794—her father, then in the army, being stationed there. By her Count Ernest Leslie had issue—

Count John Edward Leslie was sent to the Catholic college of Oscot, near Birmingham, for his education, in 1828. In 1834 he left college, and was sent to Wiesbaden to finish his education when his parents went to live at Frankfort. After the death of his father in 1836, he entered the Austrian service as a cadet. In the Austrian Army-list for 1843, we find Herr Graff John Edward Leslie, as a lieutenant in the 9th Regiment of Hussars, of which Nicholas, Emperor of Russia, was colonel.

Count John Edward Leslie became of age 22d June 1841. He returned to Scotland in July of that year to take possession of his estates; on which occasion the tenantry, to testify their respect for their landlord, entertained him at dinner at the old castle of Balquhain, when his cousin Lord Lovat and all the neighbouring gentry joined the tenants in welcoming the young Count. In October 1841 Count Leslie was present at the Inverness meeting. In the following winter he went abroad and travelled in Belgium, France, and Italy, and visited Rome. In 1842 he returned to Scotland, and was present at the Aberdeen steeple-chases, and at the Inverness meeting and races of that year. In the winter he went to live at Manheim, in the Grand Duchy of Baden, where he became acquainted with Mr. Greville, then visiting the Grand-Duchess Stephanie of Baden, and he proposed to marry Mr. Greville's daughter, who was companion to the Princess Mary Amelia of Baden, who married the Duke of Hamilton. But the intended marriage was broken off.

In 1843 Count Leslie returned to Scotland, and was present at the races and ball held at Aberdeen 30th March, and at the steeple-chases and fancy ball held there during the following winter; and also at the Aberdeen races, 24th May 1844.

1844. Count John Edward Leslie went out to shoot grouse on the hill of Bennachie, with his friend Mr. Gordon of Nethermuir, 12th August 1844. When he was overheated he drank a glass of cold water from one of the springs on the hill. Inflammation ensued, and he died in consequence, 19th August 1844. He was succeeded by his uncle James Michael Leslie, twenty-fifth Baron of Balquhain.

1844. The following lines by William Thom, the Inverurie poet, were written on the death of John Edward, Count Leslie, and were published in the second edition of Thom's Poems, p. 67 :—

the grave by a weeping tenantry.*

OH why ? but God alone knows why—
Do churls cling aye to earth,
While the brave, and the just, and the generous die—
The hour that owns their worth ?

Alas ! and woe ! so sad, so true,
The blink that's brightest, briefest too.

'Twas a dolefu' dawn yon morning saw
 On the turrets of brown Balquhain,
 When the Leslie lay on red Harlaw,
 Wi' his six good sons a' slain ;
 But nane less leal the sigh and the tear,
 And the waesome hearts round Fetternear.

Don's waters deftly wandered on Sae wantonly and sae clear,
 And dazzling danced beneath the sun
 That gleamed o'er Fetternear ;
 While the lov'd of the land is bounding away,
 Like his own bold stream, to the risen day.

O bid him bide, ye birdies that sing,
 Or bid him nae fend sae fast ;
 Haud back your tears, ye witchfu' spring,
 Whase waters weird his last : *
 But away and away, he bodes a bier,
 For the woods look fay round Fetternear.

We lend no lay to living man,
 Nor sing for fee or fear ;
 Our cheek, though pale, yet never faun'
 The stain of a mimic tear :
 In truth we mourn the bud that sprung, Unblossom'd, blighted, fair, and young.

second Baron of Balquhain, by Violet Dalzell his wife, succeeded his nephew, John Edward, Count Leslie, twenty-fourth Baron of Balquhain, as twenty-fifth Baron, 19th August 1844.

James Michael Leslie went to the grammar-school in Aberdeen for his education in 1796. On finishing his education he was sent to Liverpool, where he entered a West India mercantile house; but, having no turn for mercantile pursuits, he went to Jamaica—then the most flourishing of the British colonies—where he acquired some property. On his accession to the estate of Balquhain, he returned to Scotland to take possession in 1845. He roofed the remains of the old chapel at Fetternear, which was used as the family burial-vault, and adjoining to it he built a new chapel.

James Michael Leslie was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant of Aberdeenshire. He never married. He died at Fetternear 2d January 1849, and was succeeded by his brother Colonel Charles Leslie, K.H., twenty-sixth Baron of Balquhain.

Charles Leslie was sent to the grammar-school in Aberdeen for his education, and there he was a fellow-student with Lord Byron. He entered the army, and served with the 29th Regiment in the Peninsula, under the Duke of Wellington; and was present at the battles of Roleca, Vimiera, Oporto, Talavera, Albuera, the siege of Badajos, the Lines of Torres Vedras, Redenha, besides various other affairs and skirmishes, for which he received the Peninsular war-medal and four clasps. He was severely wounded at the battle of Talavera, and he has still the musket-ball in his right leg.

CHAPTER II.

WALTER,

FIRST COUNT LESLIE.

*Walter,
Leslie.*

THE family of the Counts Leslie of the Holy Roman Empire is descended from the ancient family of Leslie of Balquhain in Scotland. Walter, first Count Leslie, was the second son of John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, by his third wife, Jean Erskine, daughter of Sir Alexander Erskine, Baron of Gogar, and sister of Thomas, first Earl of Kelly. He was born in 1606, and went over to Germany when he was but a youth, and entered the Imperial service, in which he served with great distinction and honour in the war against the Swedes during the reign of the Emperor Ferdinand II.

After the death of Count Tilly, Wallenstein was reappointed to the command of the Imperial army, and immediately began operations against Gustavus Adolphus, who had intrenched himself at Nürnberg. Wallenstein appeared before Nürnberg 26th June 1632. Finding Gustavus entrenched, when urged to attack him, Wallenstein said that battles enough had been fought already, and that it was time to try another method. He resolved, therefore, to subdue by famine those whom he could not subdue by arms, and with great judgment took up a position about five miles to the south-west of Nürnberg, so as very much to narrow and nearly block up the channels through which Gustavus received his supplies.*

We find in Grant's Memoirs and Adventures of Sir John Hepburn, who served in the Swedish army under Gustavus Adolphus, that on the 28th July 1632, Gustavus Adolphus, having received powerful reinforcements, and provisions becoming scarce in the camp and city, "marched one thousand musketeers and eight hundred horse to Bergtheim, to cover an attack that Colonel M'Dougal (whose nom de guerre was Dewbattel) was about to make on an Imperial magazine. These fell suddenly on the forces of Sparre, a sergeant-major di battaglia, whom Wallenstein had ordered to drive back M'Dougal. Sparre led his own regiment of musketeers, four troops of Gonzaga's horse, and four of Colorado's, with twenty squadrons of Croatians, and a thousand Scottish and Irish musketeers, led by Colonel Gordon and Major Lesly, two Scottish officers who served the Emperor.

"Among the rough and rocky ground, three miles from Altenburg, a long and desperate but desultory conflict ensued between these forces and those of Gustavus, which were ultimately successful. Each after the other the Imperial regiments were swept away in succession, and the one thousand musketeers of Gordon and Lesly alone stood firm, maintaining their posts behind every tree, rock, and wall, with the most steady gallantry. Gustavus frequently applauded their valour, and declared that if these were Scots and fell into his hands as prisoners, he would release them unransomed: adding that, if all the Imperialists had fought as well, he must have lost the field that day.

“Long and resolutely these brave Scots and Irish fought side by side, and from the cover of a thick wood kept the Swedish troops in check until the mass of their less gallant comrades, the Germans, had effected a safe retreat; but on the flight of Gonzaga (whom, although the nephew of the Empress, Wallenstein tried by a court-martial), being left single-handed, Sparre, Colonel Gordon, and Major Lesly, were taken prisoners, and brought to the Swedish camp. Having on a former occasion violated his parole of honour, the first officer remained a prisoner; but three days after, Gordon and Lesly were released by the Swedish conqueror, who complimented them on their valour and spirit. Hepburn, Munro, and other Scottish officers, would not allow them to return for five weeks, during which time they had to visit and make merry with them all in succession, and were not permitted to bid adieu to Nürnberg until Gustavus was preparing to attack the Imperialists.

“They returned to the camp of Wallenstein; and these were the two Scottish officers who, on the treachery of that great noble being discovered, so boldly slew him in the now ruined castle of Eger in Bohemia.

“Colonel Gordon was a presbyterian, yet he was created a Marquis of the Empire, Colonel-General of the Imperial Army, and bearer of the gold key as High Chamberlain to the Emperor.

“Major Walter Lesly was the youngest son of Lesly of Balquhain in the Garioch: he was captain of the body-guards and colonel of a regiment. By the Emperor Ferdinand III. he was created Count Lesly, and Lord of Neustadt in Bohemia, an estate worth two hundred thousand florins. He became a Field-Marshal, Governor of Slavonia, and Knight of the Golden Fleece,—an order which he received from Leopold I. before his departure as ambassador to Constantinople.”*

Walter Leslie served with great reputation under Wallenstein during all his splendid exploits.

* Memoirs and Adventures of Sir John Hepburn, Knight, Governor of Munich, Marshal of France under Louis XIII., and Commander of the Scots Brigade under Gustavus Adolphus, by James Grant, pp. 188-190.

He was one of the captains of his guards, and was very much in his confidence. But when Wallenstein's ambitious views and his treasonable design of betraying the Emperor and the Imperial army to the enemy, as discovered by his letters to the Swedes, became known, and appeared to be fully confirmed by the movement to Eger, towards the enemy, Walter Leslie found that he was called to choose between treason and duty—between a legitimate sovereign and a fugitive rebel; and although Wallenstein had been his benefactor, yet he felt that his choice could not be doubtful, and that he was bound to lend his aid to frustrate the traitor's designs, and to secure him as a prisoner.

On arriving at Eger in the suite of the Duke, Walter Leslie revealed the designs of Wallenstein to Colonel Gordon, a Scotchman, who was commandant of the town, and to Colonel Butler, who commanded a regiment of dragoons, and who had also come to Eger with the Duke. They resolved on the bold step of taking Wallenstein prisoner, and delivering him up alive to the Emperor. However, when Wallenstein imparted to them his resolution of delivering Eger and the passes of the kingdom into the hands of the enemy, the Palatine of Birkenfield, and told them that he expected the immediate approach of Duke Bernard of Weimar, they altered their plan. The urgency of the case admitted no delay, as Eger might be in the hands of the enemy at any moment. To prevent such a misfortune, they resolved to put Wallenstein's chief associates to death.

In execution of this design, Colonel Gordon, the commandant, and Colonel Butler, invited Wallenstein and his friends, Counts Illo, Terczka, and Kinsky, and Rittmeister Naumann, to an entertainment to be given in the citadel the next evening. They all came except Wallenstein, who was too agitated to enjoy company, and who seldom joined such convivial parties. The guests were in high spirits at the thought of being beyond the reach of their enemies, meaning the Emperor's faithful generals. But after the dessert was placed, parties of dragoons, who had been placed in rooms at opposite ends of the saloon, rushed in with drawn sabres, shouting, "Viva! viva! la Casa di Austria! Wer ist gut Kaiserlich!" Butler, Gordon, and Leslie immediately sprang up, and called out, "Vivat Ferdinandus!" The unfortunate guests, surprised and thunderstruck, said nothing, and the dragoons immediately attacked them and cut them down.

Walter Leslie hastened to the town below to prevent tumult. He declared to the different guards the whole circumstances of Wallenstein's conspiracy, and the means which were already taken to frustrate it by the fall of the four officers. He exacted from the troops an oath to be faithful to the Emperor, and admitted into the town one hundred dragoons, to whom he gave orders to patrol and maintain tranquillity. A detachment was sent to surround Wallenstein's residence, to prevent him from escaping or receiving assistance, it still being the intention to secure him alive as a prisoner.

However, after the tragedy in the citadel, a council was held to consider what was to be done. Colonel Gordon raised a feeble voice in the cause of humanity, to save the life of Wallenstein. But his scruples were overruled by Butler, who represented the near approach of the Swedes and Saxons, and urged that the only chance of the final success of the Emperor's cause lay in the immediate death of the Duke. Towards midnight, Colonel Butler, taking with him Captain Devereux and six Hollanders, went to Wallenstein's quarters, as if to call on him. The guards allowed him to enter, and while Butler remained below, Captain Devereux and his party burst into the chambers of the Duke, who, alarmed by the noise, was standing half-dressed at a window. Seeing their design of taking his life, he threw his arms wide open, and received the deadly thrusts in his breast, and fell down dead without a groan, 25th February 1634.

Walter Leslie was despatched to Vienna to convey to the Emperor the important intelligence of Wallenstein's death and the defeat of his conspiracy. For his fidelity on this occasion the Emperor Ferdinand II. made him captain of his body-guard, the colonel of a regiment, and governor of a garrison ; and also bestowed on him other testimonies of imperial favour. Ferdinand III., who succeeded his father as Emperor in 1637, also held Walter Leslie in great esteem, and presented him with the lordship of Neustadt in Bohemia, valued at 200,000 florins ; created him a Count of the Holy Roman Empire, Lord of Neustadt and Pittau, by a patent dated 15th March 1637 ; made him Imperial Chamberlain, Privy Councillor, Lieutenant and Governor of Verusden, and Warden of the borders or confines of Slavonia and Petrinia, and a Field-Marshal of the Imperial army. The Emperor Leopold I. created him a Knight of the Golden Fleece.

Walter Count Leslie's patent of the dignity of Count of the Holy Roman Empire was granted to him and his two brothers, William and Alexander, and their heirs, that, in case he died without issue, they might succeed him in his titles and estates.

Being possessed of great wealth, Count Walter Leslie frequently remitted sums of money to his brother Count Alexander Leslie, fourteenth Baron of Balquhain, and his nephew Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron, and enabled them to retrieve their estates, then very much embarrassed by the extravagance of former possessors.

After the victory gained by the Imperial General Montecuculi against the Turks at St. Gotthard, on the banks of the Raab, 1st August 1664, Count Walter Leslie was sent as Imperial Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary by the Emperor Leopold I. to the Sublime Porte, for the purpose of adjusting the terms of a lasting peace. Count Leslie arranged everything relating to the embassy on the most magnificent scale. His retinue was the most splendid which ever went from Europe to Constantinople, and amongst those who accompanied him was Lord Henry Howard, afterwards fifth Earl of Arundel. They proceeded in great state down the Danube in gay barges to Presburg and Buda, and arrived at Belgrade, from whence they proceeded in state-coaches by easy journeys through Samandria, Nissa, Philippopolis, to Adrianople. Two hundred waggons were employed to convey the baggage. The entrance into Constantinople bore all the characteristics of a triumphal march. Indeed, so superb was his brilliant cortége, that the Grand Signor himself, who beheld from a window the entry into the seraglio, where he received them, and granted the Count an audience, was heard to say that in all his life he never saw so splendid a show, as is related in Monsieur Riccati's preface to his book on Turkish fashions, where he speaks of Count Leslie in terms of high commendation.

An account of this embassy was published at Vienna, in 1672, by the Rev. Father Paul Taferner, a Jesuit, who had been chaplain to Count

Walter Leslie. In this work, dedicated to Count Walter's nephew and successor, James, second Count Leslie, Walter Leslie is styled Count of the Holy Roman Empire, Imperial Legate to the Ottoman Porte, Lord of Pittau and Neustadt on the Moldau, Imperial Privy Councillor, Member of the Aulic Council, Field-Marshal, and General of the Marches of Sclavonia and Petrinia. An account of the embassy was also written by John Burbury, in his "Relation of a Journey of the Right Honourable Lord Henry Howard, and his brother the Honourable Edward Howard, from London to Vienna, and thence to Constantinople, in the suite of his Excellency Count Leslie, Knight of the Golden Fleece, Councillor of State to his Imperial Majesty, Ambassador-Extraordinary from Leopold, Emperor of Germany, to the Grand Signor Sultan Mahomet Hau the Fourth. Count Walter Leslie married, in 1640, the Princess Anne Francisca de Dietrichstein, daughter of Maximilian, Prince de Dietrichstein, Prime Minister and Grand-Chamberlain to the Emperor; with her he received considerable possessions. Having no issue, he entailed his estates on his nephew, Count James, eldest son of his brother, Count Alexander Leslie, fourteenth Baron of Balquhain, and his heirs-male; whom failing, on Patrick Leslie, younger son of the said Count Alexander Leslie, and his heirs-male; failing

Walter, Count Leslie, died at Vienna 4th March 1667, aged sixty-one years, and was buried with great pomp in the Leslie chapel in the Scotch Benedictine Abbey there. He was succeeded by his nephew James, second Count Leslie.

JAMES,

SECOND COUNT LESLIE.

*James,
Count Leslie.*

When but a youth, he was called over to Germany by his uncle Count Walter Leslie, in 1655. Count Walter, having no children, adopted him as his heir, and gave him a finished education, to complete which he sent him to travel through Germany, Poland, France, Spain, and Italy. When his education was completed, he entered the Austrian service, in which he greatly distinguished himself, and gained the highest honours. He was much esteemed by the Emperor Leopold, who appointed him one of the gentlemen of the Imperial bed-chamber in 1660, and, in the same year, gave him the gold key as Chamberlain. We find by the Austrian Army-list that Major General Count James Leslie was colonel or proprietor of the Galizisches Infantry Regiment, No. 24, from 1665 to 1675, during which period it was called Leslie's Regiment, after his name. Count James Leslie was afterwards raised to the rank of Field-Marshal, and in the Austrian Army-list it is stated that Field-Marshal Count James Leslie in 1675 raised the Bohemian Infantry Regiment, No. 36, and remained colonel of it till his death in 1694, when Prince Philip Erasmus de Lichtenstein got the regiment.

Count James Leslie held a distinguished command under the generalissimo of the Imperial forces, the Duke of Lorraine, during the famous siege of Vienna by the Turks under Kara Mus-tapha, when the siege was raised and the city delivered by John Sobieski, King of Poland. The Turks began the siege 16th July, and were compelled to raise it 12th September 1683. John Sobieski, King of Poland, passed the Danube, 8th September 1683, at Kremps, and gained the heights of Calemberg on the right bank of the river above Vienna. On the 11th September he moved down to prepare to attack the enemy, and on arriving in the evening at the plain at the foot of Camaldoli, he ordered Count Leslie to take post with his troops at the opening of a wood which extended to Vienna, and to erect a battery to secure the pass. Count Leslie's gallantry was most conspicuous on this occasion. The city being in great distress on account of the want of men and provisions, he seized a favourable opportunity and broke through the Turkish army, and threw a large force and supplies into the city, and thus afforded a most seasonable reinforcement and relief, which greatly contributed to the success of the Imperialists. In the battle which took place the following day, 12th September 1683, the Turks were completely defeated and were obliged to raise the siege. The banner of Mohammed was taken and sent to the Pope as a trophy, and Count Leslie received much valuable spoil; amongst others were cloths of gold and silver brocade, which were made into church vestments and sent to Fetternear, where they are still preserved; and also jewelled arms, which were also sent to Fetternear, and remain there. These church vestments and jewelled Turkish arms, and the portraits of Counts Walter and James Leslie, also preserved at Fetternear, were exhibited during the meeting of the British Association held in Aberdeen in 1859, and were especially noticed by the late Prince-Consort.

In 1685 Count James Leslie was sent to act on the Drave, having a body of Croats under his command. He stormed and took Verovilaze, and having defeated the Turkish army, he drove the enemy out of Essick, and took possession of the town. But the castle or citadel holding out, and he being pressed for time, he blew up the Turkish magazines, plundered the town, burned the famous bridge, and recovered great part of Hungary.

Essick is a large and populous city in eastern Slavonia. It lies very low, and the streets are planked or paved with wood instead of stones. It is a place of great commerce, being the principal thoroughfare between Turkey and Hungary. It is not naturally a strong place, but the Turks bestowed great pains in fortifying it. It is remarkable for its bridges, built of oak, one being 8565 paces long and 17 paces broad. Leading from the city it passes over the Save, through broad marshes, and across the river Tennes, to the fort of Darda in Lower Hungary. Another bridge leads from Essick over the Drave and the marshes on each side of the river, which bridge is five miles long, and so broad that three waggons may go abreast. It had wooden fortified towers every quarter of a mile. These bridges were erected by Solyman the Magnificent, in 1521, after he had taken Belgrade. By them the Turkish armies were enabled to pass from Constantinople into Hungary. Near this place the unfortunate Louis, King of Hungary, was defeated in attempting to arrest Solyman's passage into his kingdom. The latter bridge was the one burned by Count Leslie, and it was again destroyed by the Duke of Lorraine in 1687.

Soon after this exploit, Count Leslie, suffering much from gout and ill-health, was obliged to relinquish his command. During his long services he performed many glorious achievements, especially during the last two years of his command against the Turks. Indeed, in twenty pitched battles in which he commanded against the Turks, he always came off victorious. Prince Louis of Baden was bred under his orders. The Historical Observer and Fun, published by Sir John Lauder of Fountainhall, from 1680 to 1687, gives the following account of the siege of Vienna, and the war against the Turks which followed:—

“On the 2d September 1683, Vienna had been besieged by a Turkish army, 150,000 strong, for upwards of two months, under Cara Mustapha Bassa, the Grand Vizier. The Turks had at one time gotten possession of the Scotch part (so called from a monastery there founded by Scotsmen, and whereof the foundation required Scotsmen to be abbots), standing near the river Vien, which there falls into the Danube. But Count Starenberg, a Swede, defended it with great courage, until the last extremity of famine, with bloody and diminished numbers.

“At last, the Christian army commanded by the Duke of Lorraine, John Sobieski King of Poland, the Electors of Bavaria and Saxony, attacked and defeated the Ottoman forces, taking 120 cannon, many standards, all the baggage, rich tents, etc. The Christians sustained but small loss, there not being above 1000 killed, and few of them of note, except our countryman, young Count Leslie, Alexander.

“In June and July 1684, the Imperial forces, under the Duke of Lorraine and Count James Leslie, defeated the Turkish forces, forcing them to abandon Vacerse, Vuvitzie, and Pest. They then besieged the city of Buda, the capital of Hungary, took the lower town, and drove the Turks into the higher town and castle.

“In the summer of 1685 it proved very fatal to the Ottomans, because, besides the defeats they sustained in Greece by Morofine, general of the Republic of Venice, our valiant countryman, James, Count Leslie, of the house of Balquhain, defeated the Turks at the Bridge of Essick, so that the Serasqueer Basha, by a letter closed up in satin to the Duke of Lorraine, humbly asked for peace.”*

Count James Leslie was several times employed as ambassador on important missions to different foreign courts. He was a Privy Councillor, and was appointed Governor of Lower Austria, and President of the Council of War of that province. In the Laurus Leslæana, or History of the Family of Leslie, written by his brother, the Rev. William Leslie, and dedicated to him, Count James Leslie is styled “Illustrissimus et Excellen-

Count James Leslie married, in 1666-7, the Princess Maria Teresa de Lichtenstein, daughter of Charles Eusebius, Prince de Lichtenstein and Duke of Troppau. Their marriage was celebrated in the most magnificent manner. The Emperor Leopold, the Empress Margaret Teresa, and all the principal nobility of the court, attended the marriage out of respect to him and his uncle, Count Walter. The expenses incurred on the occasion were estimated at 50,000 rix-dollars, which were defrayed by Count Walter Leslie.

But there was no issue by this marriage, and after several years, Count Leslie, finding that it was not likely he would ever have children of his own, called over from Scotland his nephew, James Ernest Leslie, the elder son of his brother, Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, and adopted him as his heir. He was also in the habit of remitting sums of money to his brother, Count Patrick, to enable him to redeem the mortgaged portions of the estate of Balquhain, and to add to the property.

Count James Leslie made his will in 1690, and appointed his nephew, James Ernest, his successor to his titles and principal estates. He bequeathed Pernegg, which he purchased himself, to his nephew, Francis James, Count Leslie, the son of his deceased younger brother, Colonel Alexander, Count Leslie, who was killed at the siege of Vienna 1683. He built a military asylum or hospital for invalided soldiers at Neostad, in Bohemia, and left his estate of Neostad for its support. He also left an annual provision to the Scotch Benedictine Abbey at Ratisbon, for the education of young Scotch gentlemen of small fortune, and particularly for those of the name of Leslie.

Count James Leslie retired from court to his country seat near Pittau. He suffered much from gout, and at last he was seized with apoplexy, which carried him off in 1694. His widow, the Princess Maria Teresa de Lichtenstein, married John Balthasar, Count Wagenberg, and died 4th February 1715-16.*

by Count Walter Leslie in 1667. But in 1692 and in 1700, Count Patrick Leslie made an entail by which he settled that the family estates in Germany should belong to the eldest son, and those in Scotland to the second son, so that they might always remain distinct and separate. In order to obtain the consent of his eldest son, James Ernest, to this arrangement, Count Patrick resigned the German estates to him immediately on the death of Count James Leslie; and thus James Ernest became third Count Leslie in Germany, and Count George, Count Patrick's second son, succeeded to the family estates in Scotland as sixteenth Baron of Balquhain, at Count Patrick's death in 1710.

Count James Ernest Leslie was the eldest son of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, by his first wife, Elizabeth Douglas of Bridgeford, and was born 20th June 1669. In 1686, when he was seventeen years of age, he was sent over to Germany to his uncle, Field-Marshal James, second Count Leslie, who took most paternal charge of him, and had him educated with the utmost care. In the law-process regarding the succession to the Balquhain estates on the death of Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, Jean Erskine, widow of James Moir of Stoneywood, and upwards of sixty-seven years of age, deponed that when she was four years old she went with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Erskine of Pittodrie, to the castle of Balquhain, they having been invited there to an entertainment given to the friends of the family on the occasion of James Ernest, Count Patrick Leslie's eldest son, going away to Germany, and she thought him a pretty young boy of about sixteen years of age. She recollected going with him into the garden, where was also Count Patrick's lady, his second wife, who, James Ernest told her, was not his mother. He then brought her into the castle, and showed her his own mother's picture, and Count Patrick afterwards joked her and him for remaining so long together in the garden. Several years afterwards, about 1696, Count Patrick sent her a message to come and see pictures which his son, James Ernest, her old acquaintance, had sent over from Germany, of his children, a son and a daughter. She thought there were also pictures of Count James Ernest himself and his lady. William Nicol in Blairdaff, aged 100 years, then, 1758, living on charity, deponed that James Ernest, Count Patrick Leslie's eldest son, went over to Germany previous to Count Patrick's leaving the castle of Balquhain to go to live at Fetternear, which he did about 1692.

On the death of James, second Count Leslie, as already mentioned, his brother, Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, succeeded also to the family estates in Germany, and being desirous of establishing two families, he proposed to his eldest son, James Ernest, to put him in immediate possession of the German estates, if he would consent to give up his right to the estate of Balquhain in Scotland in favour of his half-brother, George, Count Patrick's son by his second wife, Mary Irvine of Drum. James Ernest consented to this proposal, as is proved by a letter to his father, dated 9th December 1695, in which he says that if put in possession of the German estates he would have enough, and that it would be a prouder thing for the family to be represented by him in Germany and by his half-brother George in Scotland, than if both fortunes were held by the same person. But he declined to take up the title of Count during his father's lifetime. John Lumsden, writer in Edinburgh, in the law-plea which afterwards took place regarding the succession to the Balquhain estates, stated that his father, John Lumsden, who was agent for Counts Charles Cajetan and Anthony Leslie, had in his possession the disposition and resignation of the estate of Balquhain made by Count James Ernest Leslie in favour of his half-brother, George Leslie, dated 9th December 1695.

Through the influence of his uncle, Count James, Count James Ernest Leslie made a high matrimonial alliance. He married, in 1692, the Princess Berne Maria Aloysia de Lichtenstein,

She writes, "With regard to my nephews, the two Counts Leslie of Germany (Joseph and Charles Cajetan), with whom you came to see me with your cousin Mr. Leslie (of Pitcapple), both returned to their studies ; and my eldest brother (Count James Ernest) went off immediately to Paris to see the King of France and the Chevalier de St. George ; and my brother Balquhain (George Leslie) returned to Scotland. These two sons of my brother came to see me in 1717, and their father recalled them both to marry them to two princesses, d'Eghemberge or Eggenberg. The elder, Count Joseph, died without children (male issue) ; and the other, Count Charles Cajetan, has several, one of whom (Count Anthony) has taken possession of our estates in Scotland, but does not wish to reside there on account of the religion."

Count James Ernest Leslie lived chiefly at Gratz in Styria. There he received a visit from his nephew the Rev. Alexander Leslie, a Jesuit, brother of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, who was on his way home from Rome.

Patrick Leslie Duguid, afterwards twenty-first baron of Balquhain, son of Teresa Leslie, third daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, states that Counts Joseph and Charles Cajetan Leslie, sons of Count James Ernest Leslie, his mother's brother, when travelling with their tutor, paid a visit to their aunt, Lady Betty Leslie, abbess of the Ursuline convent at Lisle; and on her informing them that he, their cousin, was at Douai, they came there to visit him, about the year 1717; and, as has been related, Lady Betty, in a letter to her nephew, Captain John Grant, says—
“These two sons of my brother (Joseph and Charles Cajetan) came to see me in 1717, and their father recalled them to marry them to two princesses, d'Eghemberge or Eggenberg.”

On the death of Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, without issue, in 1739, the direct line of heirs-male of the Scotch branch of the family failed—all the heirs in Scotland being sons or grandsons of Count Patrick Leslie's daughters. Count Charles Cajetan therefore claimed to succeed to the Balquhain estates as being next in the order of nomination in the deed of entail executed by Count Patrick Leslie. Count Charles Cajetan's claim was opposed by Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, and by his own sons, Count Joseph Leopold and Count Anthony Leslie. The Court of Session, 11th February 1741, decided in favour of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple; but the Counts

During the law-process many interesting particulars relating to Count Charles Cajetan Leslie and his family were brought forward in the evidence of the various witnesses. One witness stated that in 1753 he visited Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, who was then living at his house at Pernegg in Upper Styria; that he was very good-humoured, and would often make his chaplain drink with him, and would lay wagers which could drink most; and that Count Charles Cajetan had the character of wishing to make everybody who came to his house happy and merry. By proofs taken at Venice in November 1759, before a notary, in order to prove that Count Charles Cajetan Leslie and his sons were papists, it was shown that they had a chapel with three altars in their palace, where mass was said daily; and, as far as could be judged, the Counts were devout persons, and on meagre days ate no flesh meat. One witness deponed that he had seen Count Charles Cajetan receive the sacrament at the Romish church at Marioncelli, where he had

In a letter from Jerome Reccunct, a merchant in Venice, dated 11th September 1759, addressed to Thomas Gordon, merchant in Aberdeen, it is stated that, “with regard to the papers you sent relating to Count Leslie’s affair, I shall send them over to my friend in Germany, but am apprehensive it will be almost impossible to succeed according to your wishes. The family of Count Leslie resides in Styria, and is held in great consideration, not only in that part of the country, but likewise at the Court of Vienna.”

- was educated in the Scotch college at Ratisbon. By a judgment pronounced by the House of Lords, 29th April 1742, he was declared next heir of entail to his cousin Ernest, Count Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, in the estate of Balquhain in Scotland, and was served heir accordingly.
1747. In 1747 his tutors raised an action of reduction against James Gordon of Cobairdy, for reducing the settlement made by Count Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, whereby he settled the lands of Inch and Boddam, part of the entailed lands of the barony of Balquhain, on his uterine brother, James Gordon of Cobairdy. James Gordon of Cobairdy pleaded that Count Anthony Leslie was an alien, born out of the king's allegiance, and consequently was incapable of bringing an action for recovering a land-estate in Scotland. The Court of Session, 19th June 1749. 1749, sustained this plea, and Cobairdy was allowed to retain the lands of Inch and Boddam, which the true heirs of the Balquhain estates have lost for ever.
1756. Afterwards, in 1756, Peter Leslie Grant, son of Captain John Grant, son of John Roy Grant of Ballindalloch, and Anne Francisca, second daughter of Count Patrick Leslie, claimed the estate of Balquhain as the nearest heir of entail professing the Protestant religion—all the nearer heirs being either aliens, born out of the allegiance of the Crown of Great Britain, or persons professing the Popish religion, among which latter he included his own father Captain John Grant. After a long litigation, the Court of Session, 5th February 1762, found that the pursuer Peter Leslie Grant was the nearest Protestant heir entitled to succeed to the estate of Balquhain, and this judgment was affirmed by the House of Lords 2d February 1763. Consequently Count Anthony Leslie had to resign the Balquhain estates to Peter Leslie Grant, who became twentieth Baron of Balquhain.*

But this seems to be a mistake, or perhaps it may be a second marriage. In a letter, written 18th November 1780, to the Rev. These estates remained in the Dietrichstein family till the death of the last heir-male of the line, Joseph, Prince de Dietrichstein, in July 1858, when the succession opened to the descendants of the heirs-female of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain. By Count Walter Leslie's will, the entail was now at an end, and the estates were liable to be divided.

Colonel Charles Leslie, K.H., of Balquhain, his brothers and sister; Colonel Macdonell and his brothers and sisters, children of Elizabeth, daughter of Patrick Leslie Duguid, twenty-first Baron of Balquhain, married to Captain Macdonell of Leich.

The Counts Attems and Lamberg appealed against this decision, which prolonged the legal proceedings until 1867. Then they proposed a compromise by which they were to receive seven-twelfths of the whole heritage, and the Scotch claimants were to receive the remaining five-twelfths. This compromise was carried into effect by a formal agreement in 1868. The legal agent at Vienna, in a letter dated 1st February 1869, stated that the agent at Gratz had informed him that all the parties had agreed to the above terms, and that he hoped to be able very soon to state that the affair was favourably settled. In March 1869, the Gratz agent stated that the revenue arising from the accumulation of the rents during the legal proceedings would most likely be divided shortly, but that the sale of the estates to realise the money might yet require a year or two.

The portraits of Count Charles Cajetan, Count Joseph Patrick, and Count Anthony Leslie, were in the possession of the late Colonel Tytler, Edinburgh, who got them from Mr. Dundas of Carron Hall. These had been sent from Germany to Mr. Thomas Dundas of Fingask, the agent for the Counts Leslie in their lawsuit with Peter Leslie Grant. It may also be mentioned that the portraits of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, of Count George Leslie, sixteenth baron, and of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, are at Logie Elphinston—being three of the family portraits which were sent away from Fetternear House by the Honourable Margaret Elphinstone, widow of George, Count Leslie, sixteenth Baron of Balquhain.

THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF WARDIS, BARONETS.

Wardis.*

THE family of Leslie of Wardis, Baronets, is a branch of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

Alexander Leslie, first Baron of Wardis, born about 1445, was the eldest son of Sir William Leslie, fourth Baron of Balquhain, by his second wife, Agnes Irvine of Drum. He got from his father the lands of Wardis, Drummies, Middleton, and others * about 1465. Sir William Leslie of Balquhain, styled of Wardis, granted a charter of sale to his kinsman Duncan Forbes, son of Alexander Forbes, of the half of the lands of Corban-chory, in the barony of Cushney, dated at Aberdeen, 20th July 1464; and to this charter, Alexander de Leslie, afterwards first Baron of Wardis, and George de Leslie, afterwards first Laird of New Leslie, sons of the said Sir William Leslie, are witnesses. King James III. granted a charter of the lands of Balcomy in Fife to his familiar Esquire, Alexander de Leslie, and Isabella de Lauder, his spouse, which lands belonged in heritage to the said Isabella, and which in her virginity she had resigned into the hands of the king; dated at Stirling, 27th September 1465. Alexander Leslie, Dominus de Balcomie, granted a charter of sale of the lands of Corbanchory to Duncan Forbes of Drummellache, dated at Aberdeen, 30th January 1469, and confirmed by Queen Mary 24th May 1545. James III. granted to his familiar Esquire, Alexander Leslie of Wardis, a charter of the king's lands of the thanage of Kintore, to be held by him and his heirs for an annual payment of four pounds four shillings Scots to the Bishop of Aberdeen, and of three pounds Scots to the Sheriff of Forfar, and his successors, the heirs of the deceased Alexander Ogilvie of Ochterhouse; dated at Edinburgh, 30th September 1473. King James III. granted a charter, mortifying an annual rent of twelve merks from the lands of Balcomie in Fife, which failing, from the lands of Wardis and Quylpat, in the Sheriffdom of Aberdeen, given by Alexander Leslie of Wardis for the support of a chaplain at the chapel of St. Mary of Garioch, for behoof of the souls of the said Alexander Leslie, and Isabella, his spouse, dated 28th November 1474. King James III. granted a charter, dated 4th February 1479, confirming a charter by John of Ila, Lord of the Isles, to his kinsman, Alexander

Leslie of Wardis, of the lands of the barony of Kynnedward, commonly called the Casteltown, and the lands of Estirtiry, Kynnaroquhy, and Faithly; but reserving to the granter three merks of the lands of Casteltown, with the Castlehill, for the service due to the king from the lands and barony of Kynnedward; dated at Edinburgh, 22d December 1478.

Alexander Leslie, first Baron of Wardis, was Quæstor or Receiver-General under King James III.; he was also king's shield-bearer. He married Isabella Lauder, heiress of Balcomie in Fife, with whom he got the lands of Balcomie. By her he had issue—

I. JOHN, his successor.

II. WALTER, one of the Marischals of the king's household. He got a charter of the lands of Balcomie from James IV. on the resignation of Isabel Lauder, his mother, 1st September 1499.

III. ELIZABETH, married, first, to William Seton, Baron of Meldrum, and secondly, to John Collison, in Aberdeen, and had issue by both. Willelmus Seton de Meldrum, et Elizabeth Leslie, his spouse, got a charter under the Great Seal of the lands of Balcairn, 15th March 1490. They had a son, Alexander, who was served heir to his grandfather in 1512.

Alexander Leslie had four other daughters by his wife Isabella Lauder, married respectively to Spence of Boddam, Robert Livingston, provost of Dysart, John Sinclair, and Robert Keith, who was killed at Flodden in 1513. Alexander Leslie, first Baron of Wardis, died in 1500, and

JOHN LESLIE,

SECOND BARON OF WARDIS.

1460. JOHN LESLIE, born in 1460, succeeded as second Baron of Wardis on the death of his father in 1500.

1492. George Lord Gordon, John Leslie of Wardis, and Walter Leslie, his brother, were witnesses in a compromise regarding the marches of the parishes of Croy and Kildrummy, between Andrew, Bishop of Moray, and Hugh Ross of Kilravock, at Nairn, 13th August 1492.* John Leslie of Wardis was appointed one of the Sheriffs of Aberdeen by King James IV., to give sasine of the barony of Invernochty to Alexander Elphinstone, and Elizabeth Barlay, his wife, 8th August 1507.†

1507. As has been related, William Leslie, seventh Baron of Balquhain, and John Leslie, second Baron of Wardis, with Alexander Seton of Meldrum and others, in revenge for some injury done to them or their friends, entered the city of Aberdeen during the night, 1st October 1525, with eighty men armed with spears and other weapons, and attacked the citizens. A bloody conflict ensued, and by the bravery of the citizens the invaders were expelled, but in the fray eighty citizens were either killed or wounded, including some of the magistrates in the number. It appears that John Collison, a former Provost of Aberdeen, was the instigator of this affair, which was afterwards terminated by the arbitration of Robert Bishop of Moray, James Bishop of Ross, John Earl of Moray, and William Earl of Montrose.

King James IV. granted a charter to John Leslie of Wardis of the lands of Balcomie in Fife, resigned by his brother Walter, dated at Stirling, 14th February 1500. Also, the king granted a charter to John Leslie of Wardis, in recompense of certain sums due by the king's father to the father of the said John Leslie of Wardis, the deceased Alexander Leslie of Wardis, when he was the king's comptroller, of the office of bailie of all the king's lands of the regality of the Garioch—namely, Glanderstoun with the mill, Tulyfoure, Duncanstoun, Donydure with the mill, Rochmuriel, Knokinbard with the mill, Ardoun, Buchanstoun with the mill, Harlaw, Mekle Durno with the mill, Torreys, Rihill, Warthill, and the Davach of Inverurie with the mill—the office of bailie being annexed to the lands of Wardis; dated at Edinburgh, 16th June 1508. King James IV. also granted a charter of feu-ferme to John Leslie of Wardis, of the lands of the thanage him; but to this he answered that he had no power to command her in things concerning her soul and conscience, nevertheless, he would do what he could to persuade her. The presbytery does not seem to have been satisfied with this limited promise, and therefore the moderator, in name of the rest, ordained that he and his lady should be present and satisfy the kirk, under pain of excommunication. The presbytery met again, 6th February 1601, when John Leslie was accused of not having compeired at the kirk of Dyce according to his promise, but sent a letter instead, excusing himself because it was a weighty matter, and he was a young man, and not well resolved in the heads of his faith, and desiring that the kirk should wait till he was better informed, when he would do as he was desired; whereupon the presbytery, according to their idea, finding that he had mocked both God and his kirk, and that he had violated his promise made to them, ordered Mr. William Neilson to summon him to appear before them on the 20th day of the month, to hear the censures of the kirk pronounced against him. On the 20th February 1601, Mr. William Neilson produced before the presbytery the summons duly executed against John Leslie, and Elspet Gordon, his spouse, who, being willfully contumacious, were ordered to lie under the censures of the kirk. On the 27th February the presbytery ordered John Leslie and Elspet Gordon to be excommunicated after admonitions and prayers, and ordered Mr. William Neilson to give them the first admonition on the following Sunday. The presbytery met again 13th March 1601, when Mr. William Neilson excused himself for not having given the admonition, because Elspet Gordon had offered to subscribe the covenant and to communicate within forty days. The presbytery required John Leslie to satisfy their requirements within forty days, under a penalty of two thousand merks. On the 10th April 1601, Mr. William Neilson reported that he gave the last admonition to the Laird of Wardis and his lady on the preceding Sunday, the 5th day of the month; and in respect of their obstinacy and the admonitions already past, Mr. William Neilson was ordered under pain of deprivation to pass to the kirk of Dyce, and there proceed against them with the first prayer for them, and Mr. Robert Mercer to pass there on the Sunday following, and proceed to the second prayer.

John Leslie, sixth Baron of Wardis, was created a Knight Baronet of Nova Scotia, and received a charter of the free barony and regality of Leslie in Nova Scotia, from King Charles I., 1st September 1625. The dignity of Baronet was granted to him, his heirs-male and assigns whomsoever. He also got a charter of the lands of Balcomie in Fife, 30th July 1629.

pated gentleman, and that Sir Alexander Gordon of Cluny being in the habit of staying much with him, became too intimate with his wife, Elspet Gordon. After this, says an old manuscript history of the family, Wardis never prospered, God Almighty most wonderfully overthrowing that once opulent estate, and that by such small and trifling circumstances as visibly made it appear that the finger of God was in their destruction. The first occasion of his getting into trouble was his selling a bargain of oatmeal to Sir Robert Farquhar in Aberdeen, under certain penalties, as is ordinary on such occasions, of so much for each boll not duly delivered at the specified time. Wardis, not fulfilling his bargain with Sir Robert, suffered his estates to be compromised. It so happened just at this time that the Earl of Mar, who held the superiority of much of the lands of Wardis, pursued him for the payment of feu-duties long in arrear. To avoid this inconvenience, Wardis, being infatuated to his own destruction, for the whole debts on the estate were not very large, made over his lands to Cluny, of whom he received back-bonds. But Cluny himself being at the horn or under summons for debt, and an inhibition having been pressed against him three years before, the creditors of Cluny, as well as those of Wardis, seized upon the estates of Wardis. Sir John Leslie, finding himself thus entangled, and being unable to extricate himself, disposed his whole estate in 1634 to the Earl of Rothes, in the expectation of getting some part of it restored to him should the Earl recover it. But neither the Earl of Rothes, to whom it was disposed, nor his son, the Duke of Rothes, ever intermeddled.

By his wife Elspet Gordon Sir John Leslie had issue—

- IV. JANET, married, first, to John Gordon of Avochie, and, secondly, to George Gordon of Newton.
- V. ELIZABETH, married, first, to Sir John Gordon of Cluny. They went to England during the civil war. The Earl of Huntly went to the castle of Tillyfour, 24th May 1644, and took possession of certain bonds, and of the rents in their name. Elizabeth Leslie was married, secondly, to Colonel Sir George Currier.

Sir John Leslie did not long survive his accession to the baronetcy. “Upon the third of February, anno 1645,” says Spalding,† “Sir John Leslie of Wardis, Knight-baronet, departed this life in New Aberdeen, a great enemy to the Laird of Cluny, who had mellit with his estate, Cluny wairdit in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh.” Sir John Leslie was

THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF WARTHILL.

THE family of Leslie of Warthill is descended from the Wardis branch of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

William Leslie, first Laird of Warthill, born 1490, was the second son of John Leslie, second Baron of Wardis, by his third wife, Margaret Forbes of Echt, widow of Walter Stewart of Dryland. He was a prudent and clever man, and was bailie of the courts of his father John, and of his brother Alexander Leslie, Barons of Wardis, who at that period had a great inheritance. He got from his father a lease of the Kemmils of Durno for his lifetime, and to his heirs for nineteen years after his death. He got in wadsett the lands of Ryehill, which being redeemed, he took in tack, and was in possession of them till his death.

Some years before his death, William Leslie of Warthill was struck to the ground by one Tullidaff, possessor or wadsetter of the other half of Warthill, at Laurence fair, at Old Rain, which was so resented by the Baron of Wardis and his sons, who supposed him to be killed, that they followed Tullidaff to the Kirk of Rayne, about two miles off, where they overtook him, and he, being almost surrounded, returned back, and was slain at a place on the Moor of Rayne, where there remains at this day a small heap of stones, called Tullidaff's Cairn.

William Leslie married, first, a daughter of William Rowan, burgess in Aberdeen, in 1511, and by her he had a son, John, who was slain at the battle of Pinkie along with his uncle, Robert Leslie, son of John Leslie, second Baron of Wardis, in 1547.

William Leslie married, secondly, in 1518, Janet Cruickshank, heiress of Warthill, only surviving child of John, son of Adam Cruickshank of Tillymorgan, who in 1482 acquired the lands of Little Warthill and two ploughgates of the lands of Harlaw from Alexander Glaster of Glack. With his wife, Janet Cruickshank, William Leslie got the half of the lands of Little Warthill, and became first Laird of Warthill of the name of Leslie. He had issue twenty-one children, of whom the following were married.

I. STEPHEN, his successor, born 1520.

II. NORMAN, who married, it is said, Isabella Gordon, daughter of William, Bishop of Aberdeen, son of the Earl of Huntly.

III. WILLIAM, who married Elizabeth Gordon, daughter of the Laird of Auchindoir. He was killed by William Gordon of Gight in a quarrel between George Troup of Begshall and William Gordon, but more by accident than design.

IV. ALEXANDER, who married Isabel, daughter of George Leslie of Kincaigie.

V. GEORGE, who married Margaret Dunbar, widow of George Leslie of New Leslie.

- VI. JAMES, who married Isabella Chalmers, daughter of the Laird of Balbithan.
- VII. PATRICK.
- VIII. WALTER, who married, and had issue two sons, William and Patrick, and two daughters, Margaret and Marjory.
- IX. MARJORY, married to John Lamb of Rothie, commonly called Laird Lamb.
- X. MARGARET, married, first, to Alexander Leslie in Meikle Durno, and, secondly, to Alexander Anderson of Bonniton.
- XI. JANET, married, first, to Alexander Cruickshank, son of the Laird of Tillymorgan, and, secondly, to George Leslie, Overboat of Spey.
- XII. CHRISTIAN, married to John Leslie of Buchanston.
- XIII. CLARA, married to John Singer or Seinzour of New Rain.
- XIV. ISABELLA, married to James Cruickshank, son of the Laird of Tillymorgan.
- XV. JANE, married to David Archibald, commonly called the Laird of Lewis. She was married, secondly, to Robert Abercrombie, son of the Laird of Birkenbog.
- XVI. ELIZABETH, married to Alexander Lyall of Middlehall, and had three sons and a daughter. At her marriage her father and mother were so strong and vigorous that they danced at a ball given on the occasion in the hall at Warthill. The family party, including the old couple, their children, and their children's wives and husbands, amounted to thirty-four in number.

William Leslie, first Laird of Warthill, died in 1561, upwards of seventy years of age. His widow, Janet Cruickshank, being a spirited lady, though upwards of sixty years old, and having had twenty-one children, took another husband, Michael Leslie, according to some a son of George

SECOND LAIRD OF WARTHILL.

STEPHEN LESLIE, eldest son of William Leslie by his wife Janet Cruickshank, heiress of Warthill, succeeded as second Laird of Warthill on the death of his father in 1561. He got from his father the lands of Sighill, and from William Leslie, ninth Baron of Balquhain, the other half of Warthill in wadsett during his life, and for nineteen years thereafter, for the payment of twenty merks yearly. This half of Warthill had been held in wadsett by Tullidaff from Balquhain, but upon the quarrel in Laurence fair William Leslie of Balquhain paid off Tullidaff's heirs, and wadsett the lands to Stephen Leslie of Warthill, there being now blood between him and the Tullidaffs. Stephen Leslie also got a lease for nineteen years, from Whitsunday 1582, of the Long Croft of Mekil Warthill with the teind-sheaves and vicarage dues of the same, from William Leslie, fourth Baron of Wardis, who ordered John Murray, his bailie in Old Rain, to give Stephen Leslie sasine in the said lands and pertinents, 1st March 1582.

*See App. No.

Stephen Leslie was much given to field sports, as most of the family were. It is related that, being once very ill, there came a bird in at the window of the room where he was lying, and sat and sang at his bedside although several people were in the room, and on going away it dropped a feather, which Stephen kept carefully and wore about him till his dying day.

Stephen Leslie married, first, Marjory Leith, daughter of Patrick Leith of Likelyhead, and had issue—

- I. WILLIAM, his successor, born 1560.
- II. ALEXANDER, married Isabella Runciman, daughter of John Runciman, parson of Oyne.
- III. JULIA, married to John Anderson, son of William Anderson of Bonniton. Her husband being dangerously ill, she took his sickness so much to heart that she died of grief.
- IV. MARGARET, married to Andrew Edwards, son of William Edwards of Old Rain, and had a son and two daughters.

Stephen Leslie married, secondly, Bessie Spence, daughter of the Laird of Boddam, and widow of the Laird of Largie. He died in 1610, and was succeeded by his eldest son, William Leslie, third Laird of Warthill.

WILLIAM LESLIE,
THIRD LAIRD OF WARTHILL.

After going through a course of classical studies at the school of Rain, and finishing his academical studies at the University of Aberdeen, he was settled as schoolmaster in the parish of chapel of Garioch, where he remained for some years. In 1684 he left Scotland for foreign parts, and went to study at the University of Padua, where he became a Catholic, and received holy orders. He was so greatly noted for his learning, that Cardinal Barbarigo appointed him Professor of Theology at Padua. It appears that he next went to Germany, and attended Count James Leslie at Pittau, near Gratz, during his illness, and arranged all his affairs. After the death of Count James Leslie in 1692, William Leslie remained in Germany with Count James Ernest Leslie, son of Count Patrick Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, assisting him in the management of his family affairs. By his own abilities and merits, and through the influence of his relatives the Counts Leslie, William Leslie was made Bishop of Waitzen in 1716, and in 1718 he was promoted to the bishopric of Laybach in Styria, and was made metropolitan of Carniola, and a Prince of the Holy Roman Empire. He wrote to his brother, Alexander Leslie, sixth Laird of Warthill, the following letter, dated 25th February 1718 :—"Dear Brother—I have endeavoured to purchase here credit and esteem in all stations, and am more and more assured of his Majesty the Emperor's grace and clemency. It has pleased his Majesty to transport me out of Hungary, which is a country not much civilised or cultivated as yet for conversation, nor secure from foreign or intestine wars, and he gave me a much more honourable preferment and seat in the hereditary countries at Laybach, the metropolis of Carniola, to which belong many estates with fine castles, near the castle of Petau, which belongs to Count Leslie. By means of this promotion I am advanced to the dignity of Prince of the Empire, which is a great honour to our name and family, seeing none before was elevated | — William Leslie, Fifth Laird of Warthill. |

to this title. This Emperor, whom God preserve ! not by reason or regard of borrowed merit, but without vain-glory for my own comportment, has advanced me within three years to three steps of honour, one higher than the other. I would needs adventure the present to let you know that I live—how long God knows, and his will be done—in a most honourable station. Be pleased to present my duty to all friends and relations. My residence is on the high post-way between Vienna and Venice. In the meantime I remain, with all fraternal affection,” etc. In 1725 he sent home an original portrait of himself, with his diploma from the University of Padua, to his brother, Alexander Leslie, sixth Laird of Warthill, and they are still preserved in the family. In a letter, dated 1st July 1725, he says, “You may direct to me in this manner—‘To the Bishop of Laibach, Metropolitan of Carniola, betwixt Vienna and Venice, Privy Councillor to his Imperial Majesty.’ The title of Right Reverend here is due to others who are inferior to Bishops ; and albeit I be a Prince of the Empire, which the Emperor himself and all the other Princes in Germany allow me who enjoy their courtesy of their grace, yet I am nowise desirous of those titles in a foreign kingdom, much less in the Land of Cakes. I judge, nevertheless, fitting that the graces and honours which his Majesty has bestowed on me be known to my best friends and nearest relations, as a badge of the esteem of the greatest of monarchs, and as an evidence of my comportment and behaviour, whereby I have not degenerated from my birth and pedigree.” In another letter he says, “I represent a greater person in the theatre of this world than I ever could have aspired to, or flattered myself to obtain ; far higher than I deserved, for which I wish I may be grateful to God and my master.” In these high stations, William Leslie, Prince Bishop of Laybach, continued till his death, and in every scene in life he demeaned himself with great dignity. He died in 1727, universally regretted and looked up to as an honour to his country.

III. JAMES, a merchant in Aberdeen. He married Janet Ragg, but had no issue.

IV. JOHN, a writer to the Signet in Edinburgh. Having joined the army of King James at the Revolution, he was obliged to take refuge in France, and was never heard of again.

William Leslie, fifth Laird of Warthill, died, aged fifty-six, in 1676, three years before his father. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Alexander Leslie, sixth Laird of Warthill.

ALEXANDER LESLIE,

THE family of Leslie of Little Folla is descended from the Warthill and Wardis branches of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

I. WILLIAM LESLIE, first Laird of Little Folla, was the second son of William Leslie, third Laird of Warthill, by his wife Margaret Gray. He got the lands of Little Folla from his father in 1611. The lands of Little Folla were bought by William Leslie, third Laird of Warthill, from Gordon of Tillichoudie, his son-in-law. In buying these lands William Leslie met with great opposition from the Raits, who were the tenants of the lands, but by the influence of his friends, particularly of the Baron of Pitcaple, he succeeded in concluding the purchase. In revenge, the Raits cut deep pots in the back of the little moss, commonly called the kitchen-pots, with a design to mar the marsh between Meikle Warthill and Little Folla, which pots—says the manuscript history of the family, dated 1741, are not filled up to this day.

William Leslie, first Laird of Little Folla, married Marjory, daughter of William Crichton, brother of Viscount Fren draught. The marriage took place at Glack, where Marjory was staying with her mother, who, after William Crichton's death, had married Elphinstone, Laird of Glack. On William Leslie's settlement at Folla with his wife, the manuscript history says they suffered much from incantation or witchcraft. "Who were the authors of this, God only knows, although there wanted not suspicion." The issue of the marriage was—

- I. JAMES, who succeeded as second Laird of Little Folla.
- II. MARGARET, married to James Thomson.
- III. ELIZABETH, married to Robert Burnet.
- IV. MARJORY, married to Patrick Adam.

William Leslie married, secondly, a daughter of Leith of Harthill, but had no issue by her. He died in 1657, and was succeeded by his son—

II. JAMES LESLIE, second Laird of Little Folla, who was born in 1630. He married Isabella Milne, a worthy and virtuous woman, daughter of Alexander Milne of Monkshill, and had issue—1630.

I. WILLIAM, born 1651, who succeeded as third Laird of Little Folla.

1651.

II. GEORGE, born 1655, married Isabella Cheyne, daughter of William Cheyne of Kaithen. He succeeded his brother as fourth Laird of Little Folla.

1655.

III. JAMES, born 1661, married Janet Rait, daughter of John Rait, portioner of Meikle Folla, and had issue—

I. GEORGE, who got from his uncle, William Leslie, third Laird of Little Folla, money with which he bought the lands of Kinbruin and Rothie-norman, and was the founder of the family of Leslie of Rothie, of whom hereafter.

IV. JANET, married, first, to Alexander Wood, and, secondly, to George Milne, her cousin.

James Leslie married, secondly, Agnes, daughter of Mr. Innis, merchant in Aberdeen. He was not very fortunate in this second marriage. He got into pecuniary difficulties, and his second son, George Leslie, procured for him from his father-in-law, William Cheyne of Kaithen, the sum of 1100 merks, in consideration of which James Leslie disposed the shadow half of Little Folla to his said son, George Leslie, and his heirs. By this second marriage James Leslie had issue—

I. ALEXANDER, died unmarried.

II. WALTER, went abroad, and died unmarried.

III. STEPHEN, who died unmarried.

IV. MARJORY, who also died unmarried.

1693. James Leslie, second Laird of Little Folla, died in 1693, aged sixty years, and was succeeded by his eldest son—

1684. III. WILLIAM LESLIE, third Laird of Little Folla, who, having finished his academical studies, went to Ireland, and was provided with the church living of Aquareagh, in the county of Fermanagh. In 1684 he was styled of "Buttler Newtowne in the county of Fermanagh, Clerk." He remained in Ireland till he was upwards of sixty-three years of age, when, finding himself declining, and longing to be buried in the sepulchre of his fathers, he returned and settled at Little Folla, the place of his nativity, in 1714. Having amassed a large sum of money, he got in wadsett Roger's Seat and Kinbruin in 1715, and made over all his substance to his nephew, George Leslie, son of his youngest brother James, in consequence of a disagreement with his second brother George, who, when his late father James, second Laird of Little Folla, was in want of money, got his father-in-law, William Cheyne of Kaithen, to give him 1100 merks, for which James disposed to George Leslie, his son, the shadow half of Little Folla, as has been related. William Leslie resented this division of the paternal inheritance so much, that he left all he could to his nephew George, leaving to his brother George, his heir of entail, only the lands which were entailed. The Rev. William Leslie, third Laird of Little Folla, was never married. He died in August 1722, and was succeeded by his brother—

I. WILLIAM, his successor.

III. Agnes, died unmarried.

V. JANET, married to Robert Farquhar, Mains of Law.

1730. George Leslie, fourth Laird of Little Folla, died 21st June 1730, aged seventy-five years, and was succeeded by his eldest son—

V. WILLIAM LESLIE, fifth Laird of Little Folla. There were a few rigs of Temple Land in the township of Little Folla, of a different holding, which were not included in the entail, and which had been disposed by the Rev. William Leslie, third laird, to his youngest brother James, and his heirs. William Leslie, fifth laird, bought these rigs of land from his cousin, George Leslie of Rothie, son and heir of James Leslie. William Leslie, fifth Laird of Little Folla, after taking his degree as Master of Arts, was for some time schoolmaster at Auchterless, from whence he went to Ireland to his uncle, the Rev. William Leslie, third laird, rector of Aquareagh. After some years spent there he returned to Scotland, and got himself ordained, and then returned to Ireland to assist his uncle. He got a settlement in Ireland, but could not swallow the state oath, so he eventually returned to Scotland in 1710, and settled as pastor of the Episcopal congregation at Ellon, where he remained till the rebellion in 1715, when he was ejected and his chapel was burnt down—the Episcopal clergy being looked upon at that period as disaffected to the government, and more particularly so after the rebellion, when they were much harassed. William Leslie continued to preach to some few adherents in his own room at Little Folla, till his death, 31st July 1743, in his sixty-fourth year. He was never married, and was succeeded by his brother—

VII. GEORGÉ LESLIE, seventh Laird of Little Folla, who married Mary Leslie, third daughter of Alexander Leslie, eighth Laird of Warthill, who, on the death of her brother, Alexander Leslie, ninth Laird of Warthill, became heir-female to Warthill. They had issue—

George Leslie, seventh Laird of Little Folla, sold the lands of Folla to Mr. Gordon of Cocklarachie, and these lands were bought back again by his son, William Leslie, tenth Laird of Warthill, to which property he succeeded on the death of his uncle, Alexander Leslie, ninth Laird of Warthill, 16th January 1799, in right of his mother, Mary Leslie, eldest married daughter of Alexander Leslie, eighth Laird of Warthill. William Leslie was also the lineal male representative of the Warthill family, through his father, who was the direct male descendant of William, second son of William Leslie, third Laird of Warthill. George Leslie, seventh Laird of Little Folla, died in 1807, when the family merged in that of Warthill.

Rothie.*

THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF ROTHIE.

THE family of Leslie of Rothie is descended from the Little Folla, Warthill, and Wardis branches of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

I. GEORGE LESLIE, first Laird of Rothie, was the eldest son of James Leslie, third son of James Leslie, second Laird of Little Folla. James Leslie, third son of James Leslie, second Laird of Little Folla, married Janet Rait, daughter of John Rait, portioner of Meikle Folla, and had issue—

I. GEORGE, who became first Laird of Rothie.

II. JOHN.

III. WILLIAM.

} Both died without issue in 1711.

1711.

James Leslie and his eldest son George were declared heirs by the Rev. William Leslie, third Laird of Little Folla, to all his unentailed property, in consequence of the Rev. William Leslie having taken umbrage because George Leslie, his next brother, had got from his father, James Leslie, second Laird of Little Folla, the shadow-half of the lands of Little Folla, in consideration of having procured for the said James, the second laird, the sum of 1100 merks to relieve him in his embarrassments. On the death of the Rev. William Leslie, third Laird of Little Folla, his nephew, George, obtained the reversionary right of Roger's Seat and Kinbruin, and a considerable sum of money, with which he purchased the lands of Upper Rothie or Rothie Norman, Longman's Wells, and other lands, in 1723; and to these he added the lands of Crannie, Cranabog, and Mill of Barnes, in 1728, and became the founder of the family of Leslie of Rothie. He married Margaret, daughter of James Gordon of Chapeltown, and had issue—

I. JAMES, his successor.

II. MARGARET, married to Hugh Gordon of Muggiemoss, and had a son who died aged fourteen years.

III. ELIZABETH.

Margaret Gordon died in 1737. Her husband, George Leslie, denuded himself of the estate of Rothie in favour of his son James, on his marriage in 1760, and died in 1781.

II. JAMES LESLIE, second Laird of Rothie, married, in 1760, Jane Gordon, second daughter of William Gordon, Laird of Badenscoth, in right of whom he succeeded to the half of the lands of Badenscoth—the said Jane, and her elder sister, Catherine, wife of Alexander Forbes of Blackford, being co-heiresses of Badenscoth on the death of their only brother, James Gordon, without issue, in 1778. James Leslie of Rothie bought the other half of Badenscoth from his wife's sister, Mrs. Catherine Forbes of Blackford, and thus the estate of Badenscoth was united to that of Rothie. James Leslie also purchased, in 1761, the feu-duty and superiority of the lands of Rothienorman from the Earl of Rothes. James Leslie of Rothie had issue—

I. JAMES, his successor.

II. GEORGE, who succeeded his brother as fourth Laird of Rothie.

III. JOHN, who died at sea, without issue.

IV. WILLIAM, who died in India, without issue.

V. JONATHAN, some time a merchant in Dublin. He died without issue at Badenscoth.

VI. ROBERT, who succeeded as fifth Laird of Rothie.

VII. MARY.

VIII. GRACE.

IX. CATHERINE.

} All died unmarried.

1794.

James Leslie, second Laird of Rothie, died in 1794, and was succeeded by his eldest son—

III. JAMES LESLIE, third Laird of Rothie. He built the present house of Rothie, about three miles west of the parish church of Fyvie, and also the house of Kinbruin, about a mile south-west of Rothie. He was never married. Being of a capricious disposition, he executed a deed of entail in 1821, entailing his whole property on his next brother, George, and his heirs-male, with remainder to his youngest brother, Robert, and his heirs; whom failing, to Jonathan Forbes, youngest son of John Forbes of Blackford, and his heirs-male; whom failing, to the said Jonathan's next elder brother, and his heirs-male, and so on, ascending to the elder brothers successively, till it reach the one in possession of the Blackford estate, when the succession devolves to the Warthill family, beginning with the youngest son of William Leslie, tenth Laird of Warthill, and ascending in like manner. James Leslie in this entail passed over his own brother Jonathan Leslie. He died in 1823, and was succeeded by his next brother—

IV. GEORGE LESLIE, fourth Laird of Rothie, who laid out the grounds about the mansion-house of Rothie with great taste, and ornamented them with thriving plantations. He had a great turn for agricultural pursuits, and farmed to a great extent, thereby greatly improving the estate. He paid great attention to the breeding of cattle, so that his cattle and sheep were of a superior description, and were very much admired. Indeed, CHAP. III.

*Leslie of

from his long experience, he turned his cattle out better than most people, and was most successful in gaining prizes at the agricultural shows. He was an upright and worthy gentleman, universally respected, beloved, and esteemed, and he was of a benevolent and hospitable disposition. It was long the custom of the Rothie family to have a large party of neighbours to dinner on Auld Yule day, 5th January. During fifty-four years, George Leslie of Rothie, and William Leslie, tenth Laird of Warthill, met, with only two exceptions, annually at Rothie on that day, and cherished their friendship at the festive board. After a lingering illness, George Leslie of Rothie died unmarried 12th January 1842, and was succeeded by his brother—1842.

V. ROBERT LESLIE, fifth Laird of Rothie, according to the deed of entail executed by his eldest brother in 1821, in preference to his elder brother, Jonathan Leslie. Robert Leslie of Rothie married Barbara Niven, daughter of Robert Niven of Bruckhills, but had no issue. At his death, in 1861, the estate of Rothie, according to the dispositions of the entail, went to Lieutenant-Colonel Jonathan Forbes, 78th Highlanders, youngest son of John Forbes of Blackford. He assumed the name and arms of Leslie after the paternal name of Forbes, and he is the present proprietor of the estate of Rothie. It may be remarked that though James Leslie, second Laird of Rothie, left six sons and three daughters, all of whom, except two, attained the goodly age of threescore years and upwards, yet not one solitary descendant exists, and his property of Rothie, after having been held by three of his sons successively, has passed from the family of Leslie.

THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF BUCHARN.

Bucharn.*

THE family of Leslie of Bucharn is descended from the Wardis branch of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

I. ANDREW LESLIE, first Goodman of Bucharn, was the fourth son of John Leslie, second Baron of Wardis, and his eldest son by his fourth wife, Agnes Gordon of Haddo. He married Violet Menzies, daughter of Thomas Menzies of Pitfoddes, Provost of Aberdeen from 1525 to 1535, and by her had twelve sons, named after the twelve Apostles, and six daughters. Of these children there is record only of the following:—

I. ANDREW, who succeeded to the lands of Bucharn.

II. BARTHOLOMEW, who married, first, Marjory Dun of Kettle, and had a son, Robert, and a daughter, Isabella. He married, secondly, Elizabeth Garioch of Carstairs, by whom he had two sons, Alexander and William.

III. PHILIP, who went to France, and was progenitor of the Leslies of Clisson there, of whom hereafter.

II. ANDREW LESLIE, second Goodman of Bucharn, succeeded on the death of his father.

- II. GEORGE, of Hillbrae, who married Marjory Annand of Pitgavney, and had three sons, William, Andrew, and Alexander, who all died without issue; and two daughters, Jane and Margaret.
- III. WILLIAM, a merchant in Elgin. He bought the Glen of Rothes, to be holden of the Earl of Rothes. By his first wife he had a son, Andrew, who was a bailie in Elgin, and married Margaret Hay, by whom he had a son, James. William Leslie married, secondly, Margaret, daughter of John Innes of Auchluncart, and had a son, George, and four daughters.

Andrew Leslie, second Goodman of Bucharn, had other three sons and two daughters, but of them there is no record. He was succeeded by his eldest son—

III. ALEXANDER LESLIE, third Goodman of Bucharn, who seems to have sold the property of Bucharn; at least the property of Bucharn soon went out of the family of Leslie.

I. The Right Rev. JOHN LESLIE, D.D., eldest son of George Leslie, by his wife Marjory Leslie, was born about 1571. The earlier part of his education he received at Aberdeen, the latter part at Oxford. He afterwards travelled into Spain, Italy, Germany, and France, and acquired such a proficiency in the languages of all these countries, excepting the last, that he spoke them with the fluency of a native. He remained twenty-two years abroad, and was present at the siege of Rochelle. He also accompanied the Duke of Buckingham on the expedition to the isle of Rhé. He stood high in favour with King Charles I., who made him a privy-councillor. He was made Bishop of Orkney, whence he was removed to the See of Raphoe in Ireland in 1633. There he built a handsome palace, which he afterwards held out against Oliver Cromwell. He went abroad after the execution of Charles I., and remained abroad till after the Restoration, when he returned to England, and in 1661 he was translated to the See of Clogher. The Right Rev. Dr. John Leslie of Glasslough, Bishop of Clogher, died in September 1671, upwards of one hundred years old, being then the oldest bishop in the world, having filled that dignified station for fifty years. He was succeeded in the estate of Glasslough by his sixth, but only surviving son—

II. The Rev. CHARLES LESLIE, who commenced his education at Enniskillen, and was admitted a fellow-commoner in Trinity College, Dublin, in 1664. After the death of his father in 1671, he came over to England, and entered himself in the Temple at London, and for some years he studied the law. Finding this an uncongenial pursuit, he relinquished it, and applied to divinity. In 1680 he was admitted into Holy Orders, and in 1687 became Chancellor of the Cathedral Church of Connor, and also acted as a justice of the peace.
At the Revolution, in 1688, he was deprived of his preferment because he refused to take the oaths to King William. He followed the fortunes of James II., and when Ireland was disturbed in 1689 he removed with his family to England, where he employed himself in writing political pamphlets to serve the cause which he had embraced. He also wrote many controversial works against Catholics, Quakers, Jews, Deists, and Socinians, which gained him considerable reputation as a champion of the Church of England. His political pamphlets gave such offence to the ruling party that he found it necessary to quit the kingdom in 1713, when he went to Bar le Duc, and took up his residence by invitation with the Chevalier de St. George, whom he accompanied into Italy in 1716, after the unsuccessful rebellion in England in 1715. There he remained till 1721, when he found his situation so disagreeable that he determined to return to his native country. He married Jane Leslie, and had issue—

I. ROBERT, his successor.

II. HENRY, who went abroad, and married a Spanish lady, but died without issue. He acquired the lands of Pittigo, which he left to his nephew, Charles Powell Leslie of Glasslough.

THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF KINCRAIGIE.

THE family of Leslie of Kincraigie is descended from the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

I. WILLIAM LESLIE, first Laird of Kincraigie, was the second son of Sir William Leslie, fourth Baron of Balquhain, by his first wife, the Honourable Elizabeth Fraser, daughter of Hugh, first Lord Lovat. He got from his father the lands of Craigtowie, and he bought the lands of Kincraigie from his brother, Alexander Leslie, fifth Baron of Balquhain, in 1470. He married Miss Ross of Achlossan, and by her had—

I. WILLIAM, his successor.

II. WILLIAM LESLIE, second Laird of Kincraigie, married Bessie Strachan, daughter of Robert Strachan of Dalhousie in Angus, and had issue—

I. ALEXANDER, his successor.

II. PATRICK of Lochtilloch.

III. JAMES of Kirktown of Knokinglews.

IV. A Daughter, married to Mr. Leighton in the Mearns.

III. ALEXANDER LESLIE, third Laird of Kincraigie, obtained an attestation by a notary-public that he had presented himself at the pier of Loch Canmor in Cromar, to have presence of the Earl of Huntly, that he might ask release of his lands of Kincraigie recognised in the Earl's hands; that the Earl sent Master John Irving to the said Alexander Leslie, saying that he could not have presence of the Earl at that time, but that the Earl would give an answer to the notary; that the notary being admitted to the Earl's presence, asked release of the said lands of Kinraigie in name and behalf of the said Alexander Leslie, offering to do homage in his name; that the Earl appointed the said Alexander Leslie to show the charters by which he claimed the said lands at a court to be holden at Cluny on the 27th November next ensuing, when justice should be done to him—dated 7th November 1529. He also obtained another attestation by a notary-public, that, in the court of the Earl of Huntly, held at Cluny by Thomas Davidson his bailie, Alexander Leslie of Kinraigie had asked release, as from his overlord, of his lands of Kinraigie, offering the homage used and wont, but that the Earl's bailie had refused the release so sought—dated 20th January 1530. These difficulties with the Earl of Huntly were surmounted, though the account of the transactions regarding them does not seem to have been preserved. Alexander Leslie was engaged with John Leslie of Balquhain in the slaughter of Alexander Forbes. He married Margaret Gordon, daughter of George Gordon of Hallhead, and had issue—

I. GEORGE, his successor.

II. JOHN of Durno, married, first, Jean Gordon of Braco, and had—

Queen's host at Roslin Muir, at the first siege of St. Andrews, at the raid of Langholm, and at the siege of Haddington; 18th July 1548. He also obtained a charter from George, Earl of Huntly, Lord Gordon and Badenoch, Chancellor of the whole realm of Scotland and Lieutenant of
ship of Tough, dated at Aberdeen, 14th April

IX. GEORGE LESLIE, ninth Laird of Kincraigie, a promising young man, who, after he had finished his course at college, went to Holland and studied the law. He went to London, and entered as attorney there. Afterwards, by his father's advice, he returned to Scotland, and was an advocate in Edinburgh. He was served heir to his father Patrick Leslie, 2d November 1705.

He married, first, a daughter of Dr. Hay, and had a son—

I. JOHN.

His first wife died soon after the birth of her son. He married, secondly, when advanced in life, a daughter of Bailie Brand of Edinburgh. This lady acquired great influence over him, and he was entirely governed by her, and became estranged from his son John, who had taken orders in the Episcopal Church, and had obtained a living in the north of Ireland, through the influence of his relatives, the Leslies of Glasslough. John Leslie remained in Ireland till the death of his father, when he returned to Scotland to claim the patrimonial estate of Kincraigie, which he found in the possession of his stepmother's family, to whom his father had devised it, having taken the steps necessary according to Scotch law for that purpose, although, except under peculiar circumstances, entails can lawfully be barred only with great difficulty. John Leslie was obliged to compromise matters with his stepmother and her family, and relinquished his claim for £5000, a large sum in those days. With this money he returned to Ireland, and purchased from Sir James Colquhoun the manor and castle of Rosamonil and Corkee, to which he gave the name of Kincaraigie. He had several sons, of whom the three eldest succeeded successively to the estate of Kincaraigie in Ireland. The eldest reduced the estate greatly by his extravagance. He died without issue, and was succeeded by his next brother, who also died without issue, and was succeeded by his next brother, Charles. John Leslie had a fourth son, Matthew, a man of excellent character, who was rector of the parish of Kilmacronan. He had four sons, one of whom was a doctor in Cork, and fourteen daughters, one of whom married Mr. Paterson in the north of Ireland, and another married James Grove, and had twenty-one children.

Charles Leslie of Kincaraigie in Ireland had a son who succeeded him, and had a son, Charles Leslie, the present proprietor of the estate.

“The estate of Kincaraigie in Scotland,” says the old manuscript history of the family, “is gone from the name of Leslie after they had enjoyed it for the space of 230 years, and it is now purchased by one Alexander Achindachy, a person risen from the very dunghill, being of very mean, not to say worse parents. After he had been a servant to one Jamieson, a Popish priest, he fell in about the Earl of Dunfermling's house, and after the said Earl's death at St. Germans, he became so intimate with the Countess of Dunfermling that she not only made him her chamberlain while she lived, but made over all her effects to him after her death. He is now a man of great substance, and his daughter is married to John Elphinston of Glack, the blind baggage (money) of this world having such a prevailing with some, as to make them deaf as well as blind. His only son, George Achindachy, is married to Isabel, daughter of William Gordon of Rothnie, whose head (as it was truly said of Richard Cromwell) is not like to fill his father's bonnet." This manuscript history is dated 1741.

John Leslie ruined his estates by his prodigality. He sold the lands of New Leslie, in 1649, to John Leith of Edingarioch, who sold the lands of Kirk-town of Rayne, and bought the lands of New Leslie, Peill, Syde, Arnbog, and others; and his son, James Leith, afterwards built on the lands of Peill the house of Leith-hall, now the residence of his descendants, the Leith-Hays of Leith-hall.

“Mortlach,” according to the description given by the Rev. George Gordon, “is situated in Banffshire, in the province of Moray, about fifty miles to the north of west from Aberdeen. King Malcolm II. gave a charter to the first Bishop of Mortlach in 1010. The see was transferred to Aberdeen in 1139. A part of the barony of Kininvie lies in this parish, which is, and for centuries has been, in the possession of a branch of the ancient family of Balquhain, and of which James Leslie, Esq. of Kininvie, the only resident heritor, is the present laird (1793), an excellent farmer himself, and a kind landlord to his tenants, and a most hospitable gentleman. *Leslie of Kininvie stands upon the east side of the rivulet Fiddoch, and is environed with natural woods. The scenery is very romantic of hill and dale, woods and water,—Glenfiddoch, the Craig of Baldorny with the old castle, the Giant's Chair, and the cascade of the Linen Apron, or the water of Dullan. The church is of venerable antiquity, being built about the eleventh century. The walls are of extraordinary solidity, without any magnificence of architecture. The windows are long narrow slits, 6 feet high, and only about 11 inches wide outside, but sloped inwards through the thick walls, to out 10 feet wide inside. There is only one effigie remaining, which is a figure lying at full length over the door which leads from the choir to the Leslie Aisle, or burying-ground. There is no inscription, but tradition reports it as a Leslie, a predecessor of the Kininvie family, who was a celebrated person of marvellous gallantry."

The present representative of the family, and the proprietor of the estate of Kininvie, is George A. Young Leslie, Esq., a deputy-lieutenant and magistrate of Banffshire.

THE family of Leslie, Earls of Leven, is descended from the Drummuir, Kininvie, and New Leslie branches of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

GEORGE LESLIE, second son of George Leslie, first Laird of Drummuir, acquired the lands of Balgonie. He was captain of the castle in Blair of Athole in the reign of King James VI., and was held in great esteem as a brave soldier. He married Sybil Stewart of Ballathan, and had issue—

I. JOHN, who entered the French service, and was a captain in the Life Guards of the King of France. He returned to Scotland, and lived with his sisters at Newtown in Fife.

II. GEORGE, who went to Germany, entered the army, and attained the rank of Colonel. He was killed at a siege, leaving a daughter, who was married in London to the Laird of Newhall.

III. DAVID, who died a student at Douai.

George Leslie had also several daughters, with whom their brother John lived at Newtown in Fife, after he retired from the French service. Besides these, he had also a natural son, Alexander Leslie, afterwards created Earl of Leven. After the death of Sybil Stewart, George Leslie married Alexander's mother to legitimatise him, who was then a general.

Alexander Leslie betook himself early to the profession of arms. He was a captain in the regiment of Horatio, Lord Vere, in Holland, and assisted the Dutch against the Spaniards. He acquired the reputation of being a very good officer during this campaign. He then entered the service of Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, who raised him to the rank of lieutenant-general, and field-marshal. In 1628 he was sent to take command of Stralsund, and successfully resisted the siege of that place by Wallenstein, the Imperial general, who was obliged to retire. In 1630, General Leslie drove the Imperialists out of the Isle of Rugen. He continued in the Swedish service, after the death of Gustavus Adolphus, under Queen Christina, with great glory and renown, till 1639, when he was invited to Scotland, by the Covenanters, to take the command of their army. He accepted the invitation, and joined with the Scotch covenanting nobles in requesting the assistance of the King of France, as appears by the following letter addressed to Louis XIII., King of France, in 1639:—

General Leslie took the castle of Edinburgh, without the loss of a single man, in 1639. He commanded the Scottish army at Dunse Law in May 1639. On the pacification of Berwick in June following, the Scottish and English armies were disbanded without proceeding to hostilities. But the pacification was of short duration. In 1640 another army was raised in Scotland, and General Leslie was appointed commander-in-chief. He marched into England in August 1640, and attacked and routed the Royal army at Newburn on the 28th of that month; and obtained possession of Newcastle, Tynemouth, Shields, and Durham. Peace was restored by the treaty of Ripon. The articles of peace were ratified by

1642. In 1642 the Earl of Leven was appointed general of the Scottish forces raised for suppressing the rebellion in Ireland, and he went over to that kingdom, from whence he was recalled by parliament in 1643, to take the command of the Scottish army. The army, which consisted of 21,000 men, assembled at Berwick, crossed the Tweed in January 1644, joined the Parliamentary forces, and defeated the Royalists at Marston Moor, 2d July 1644.

1648. Afterwards, the Earl of Leven, being dissatisfied with Cromwell's measures, withdrew from the Parliamentary party, and showed some inclination to join the Royalists. When an army was raised for the rescue of Charles I. in 1648, the command was offered to the Earl of Leven, but he declined it.
1649. He sat in parliament in 1649, and served as a volunteer at the battle of Dunbar, in 1650.
1650. When forces were raised to accompany Charles II. into England, the Earl of Leven had a meeting with several noblemen to concert measures for furthering that enterprise. They met at Eliot in Angus, and were surprised by a detachment from the garrison of Dundee, 28th August 1651, and were carried prisoners to the Tower of London.
1651. At the intercession of Christina, Queen of Sweden, the Earl of Leven was released, his sequestration taken off, and no fine imposed on him. He returned to Scotland in May 1654, and from thence he went to Sweden to thank the Queen for her intercession.

Alexander, Earl of Leven, acquired great landed property. He bought the property of Balgonie in the parish of Markinch, on the banks of the river Leven in Fife. He much enlarged the mansion-house, and laid out new gardens, and enclosed a large park on both banks of the Leven. The property formerly belonged to the ancient family of Sibbald. Sir Andrew Sibbald of Balgonie, who died in the reign of James IV., left an only daughter, Helen, heiress of his estates. She married Robert de Lundin, a younger son of the Baron of Lundin. The ancient baronial castle of Balgonie stands on a steep bank overhanging the Leven. The old part consists of a donjon or keep, 80 feet high, and 45 feet by 36 feet in length and breadth. The basement storey is dimly lighted by a narrow slit in the massive walls; it and the storey above are both vaulted. The summit has projecting battlements with turrets at each angle, the roof being flat and laid with slabs of freestone. On the roof is a lodge or watch-tower, with a sloping roof. Besides the additions made to it by the first Earl of Leven, one of his successors added another wing on the foundations of former structures, thus forming two sides of a quadrangle, the other two sides being formed by a strong wall. The main entrance to the court is an arched gateway flanked by two towers. Over the arch was a chamber which communicated with the main tower or keep by a passage through the walls. The castle was formerly surrounded on three sides by an earthen rampart and deep fosse, the inaccessible nature of the position on the side next the river requiring no other defence.

In 1823 the estate of Balgonie was sold by David, tenth Earl of Leven and seventh Earl of Melville, to James Balfour of Whittingham, for £104,000.

Besides the estate of Balgonie, Alexander, first Earl of Leven, acquired the property of Inchmartin, in the Carse of Gowrie, which he bought from the Ogilvies in 1650, and to which he gave the name of Inch Leslie. Charters were granted to Sir Alexander Leslie of Balgonie, major-general in Lower Saxony, to his wife and son, of the barony of Balgonie, and other lands, in the counties of Berwick, Fife, and Roxburgh, 6th

Alexander, second Earl of Leven, died 15th July 1664, and having no male issue, was succeeded by his elder daughter—

III. MARGARET, third Countess of Leven, in terms of the entail, dated 13th February 1663. A royal charter, proceeding on the entail and resignation made by Alexander, second Earl of Leven, was granted 7th September 1665.* This charter bears that the king was willing that the Countess Margaret, notwithstanding that her father, Alexander, second Earl of Leven, died before a charter and precept could be obtained, on his resignation of the honours and estates of Leven in favour of the heirs mentioned in the deed of entail, should yet inherit the honours and estates. This charter, given at Edinburgh, did not proceed upon the sign-manual, and is not warranted by the king. It was passed only in common form, by the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, upon a simple escheat, without the doquet of the Secretary of State countersigned by him, and the superscription of the King.*

Margaret, third Countess of Leven, married, in 1674, the Honourable Francis Montgomery of Giffen, second son of Hugh, seventh Earl of Eglinton, but died the same year in minority, without issue. She was succeeded by her sister.—

title and estates of Leven devolved on David, second son of George, Earl of Melville, by his wife, Lady Catherine Leslie, daughter of Alexander, Lord Balgonie.

V. DAVID, fifth Earl of Leven, did not assume the title till 1682, after the death of John, Duke of Rothes, the title being kept in abeyance, as the second son of the Duke of Rothes would have been a nearer heir of entail than the second son of the Earl of Melville. The Lords of Session decided that as the Duke of Rothes might yet have sons, the succession should in the interim merge in the king as pater patriæ. Charles II.,

David Melville, fifth Earl of Leven, took the name and arms of Leslie on his accession to the title. In his youth he went to Germany and served in the army of the Duke of Brandenburg. He returned home after the revolution of 1688, and was made governor of the Castle of Edinburgh by William III. He was also appointed colonel of a regiment and a Privy Councillor.

In 1703 he was appointed Major-General of the forces in Scotland. In 1704 he was appointed General of the Ordnance, and, 2d March 1706, he was made Lieutenant-General and Commander-in-Chief of the forces in Scotland. He was one of the commissioners for the union of Scotland and England in 1707; and in the same year he succeeded his father as second Earl of Melville—his elder brother Alexander, Lord Raith, having died in 1695, before his father, without issue.

David, fifth Earl of Leven and second Earl of Melville, married, in 1691, Lady Anne Wemyss, eldest daughter of Margaret, Countess of Wemyss, sister of David, third Earl of Wemyss, and had issue—

He was a man of undaunted courage and great strength; and although none of the Leiths dared to attack him, yet after many wanderings he was obliged to quit the country, after slaying several of the Leiths who were continually watching an opportunity of avenging Freefield's death. There is a song called "Leslie among the Leiths," or "Auld-Craig's Guise," set to a chivalrous tune, no doubt composed to commemorate the feud in which Auld Craig acted a conspicuous part. if William Leslie, eldest son of the said Duncan Leslie, should die without legitimate heirs-male, then John Leslie and his heirs should be bound to renounce the said lands in favour of his brother Alexander Leslie, and his heirs; dated 8th December 1593. John Leslie of Pitcaple got a charter of the Mains of Balquhain 28th June 1610; of the Kirktown of Daviot, 25th February 1619; of the lands of Pitbee and Knockallochy, with the mill, the lands of Aquhorties, Craigmyle, and others, 27th August 1625. He obtained a precept of clare constat, as heir of his father Duncan Leslie in the town and lands of Aquhorsk, from George Leslie of that Ilk, 10th July 1627.

It was in the time of John Leslie, sixth Baron of Pitcaple, that the mysterious burning of the House of Fren draught happened, and in which the Pitcaple family were concerned. The following is an account of the circumstance:—

William Gordon of Rothiemay sold certain lands to James Crichton of Fren draught, but a dispute arose regarding some salmon-fishings appertaining to the lands, which was decided by law in favour of Crichton. This irritated Gordon so much that he assembled a number of disorderly men, and endeavoured to waste the lands of Fren draught. Crichton obtained a commission from the Lords of Council to apprehend Rothiemay and his associates. For this purpose, being joined by his friends, Sir George Ogilvie of Banff,

George Gordon, his own uncle, and James Leslie, second son of John Leslie, Laird of Pitcaple, John Meldrum of Reidshill, and others, he proceeded, 1st January 1630, towards Rothiemay. Gordon advanced to meet them: a conflict ensued in which he was defeated and mortally wounded, and he died three days afterwards; and on the other side George Gordon was mortally wounded, and John Meldrum was badly wounded. After the feud continued for some time the affair was amicably settled by the intermediation of the Marquis of Huntly, with two commissioners from the Lords of Council—Sir Robert Gordon and Sir William Seton. But John Meldrum, conceiving that Crichton had not rewarded him sufficiently for his past services, and for his wound in the above feud, and that he had delayed to grant him what he required, came one night and carried off two of Crichton's best horses. Crichton accused Meldrum of theft, and obtained a commission to apprehend him. John Meldrum had married a sister of John Leslie, Laird of Pitcaple, and was then lying concealed in Pitcaple's bounds. On Crichton coming to search for him on Pitcaple's lands, he met James Leslie, Pitcaple's second son, who expostulated with him regarding Meldrum. Crichton took this in good part, as James Leslie had been his friend in his former feud when Gordon of Rothiemay was killed. But Robert Crichton, a relation of Fren draught, argued the affair so warmly with Leslie, that from words they came to blows. Robert Crichton drew out a pistol, and shot James Leslie through the arm, and the latter was carried home for a dead man. Fren draught returned home much enraged at his relation. "By this," says the old chronicler, "we see that those who were parties in shedding another's blood, are now by the ears, and made the avengers of another's quarrel."

On this occurrence many families of the name of Leslie confederated against Crichton, and took up arms in the quarrel. Crichton represented to the Marquis of Huntly, and to the lieutenant, the Earl of Moray, how much he was grieved for what had happened to James Leslie. Huntly summoned the several chiefs of parties, and endeavoured to effect a reconciliation. But Pitcaple and his friends would listen to no terms until it was known whether James Leslie would die in consequence of his wound. So the several parties departed, and the Marquis detained Fren draught with him at the Bog of Gight two days. On learning that the Leslies had assembled, and were lying in wait for Fren draught on his return home, Huntly sent his son, the Viscount Melgum, and the Laird of Rothiemay, to escort his guest back to the House of Fren draught. Crichton and his wife, Lady Elizabeth, insisted on Lord Melgum remaining that night at Fren draught, and they entertained him and Rothiemay, and his followers, with every demonstration of kindness, showing themselves happy to have now acquired such friends who had formerly been their foes. But this happiness was but momentary, for that same night the Tower of Fren draught, in which Viscount Melgum was lodged, was burnt, and he and Rothiemay, with six attendants, were burnt to death, 8th October 1630.

The origin of this unhappy occurrence was attributed to various causes, according to the feelings of the different parties then existing in the kingdom:—some casting aspersions on Crichton, as if he had wilfully destroyed his guests who had come to defend him, and others ascribed it to an accidental fire; while many suspected it to have been done by the adherents of the Leslies, as it was said that John Meldrum and Alexander Leslie, Pitcaple's brother, had been heard to threaten that they would burn the House of Fren draught. There does not seem to have been any ground for the suspicion against Fren draught himself, for, besides the improbability of the matter, he lost by the fire a large sum of money, a quantity of silver-plate, many valuable deeds, and all his papers.

In November 1630, John Meldrum and some others of Pitcaple's followers and adherents were apprehended on suspicion of being concerned in the plot, and were carried to Edinburgh, and tried before the Lords of the Council. They all denied the deed, and were remanded to prison, where John Meldrum remained till 1633, when he was brought to trial by reason of his having confessed that the evening before the House of Frendraught was burnt, he had said to Sir George Ogilvie of Banff, and to George Baird, bailie of Banff, when they were earnestly persuading him to a reconciliation with Crichton, that he could not be reconciled to the Laird of Frendraught unless it were instantly done, because Frendraught would be burned before next morning, which actually happened. Meldrum acknowledged having used these words, but denied that he was accessory to the burning of the house. The jury found him guilty, and he was hanged and quartered at Edinburgh, continuing to the last to deny his guilt. There was, however, an impression on men's minds that he was guilty. There were also two men of James Grant's party apprehended at Inverness, who made a confession concerning this affair, and were executed at Edinburgh, when they charged John Meldrum and Alexander Leslie, Pitcaple's brother, with having made use of some such words as John Meldrum admitted having spoken to Sir George Ogilvie.

John Leslie of Pitcaple, perhaps apprehensive that his estates might suffer by these troubles, made over his property to Sir Gilbert Ramsay of Balmain, the father of Agnes Ramsay, wife of his future spouse, of the lands of Harlaw, Temple Croft, Rosseviot, Newplace, Legatsden, and the Mill of Pitcaple, dated 9th December 1619. He also granted a bond obliging himself not to use any diligence against John Leslie, eleventh Baron of Balquhain, his person or estate, for £8000 Scots, due to him by bond, 1st February 1630. John Leslie, younger of Pitcaple, John Forbes of Leslie, and others, made a representation to the Covenanting nobility against the blockade of the harbour of Aberdeen, 31st May 1639.

John Leslie married Agnes Ramsay, second daughter of Sir Gilbert Ramsay of Balmain, and had issue—

- I. ALEXANDER, his successor, and several daughters, one of whom married William Leith of Harthill in 1650, and had three sons—Patrick, George, and William Leith—of whom the two latter signed a disposition, 17th December 1679. Another daughter married James Horn of Westhall, sometime a minister in Elgin.

When the Marquis of Montrose was taken prisoner in the north, he was brought to Pitcaple in April 1650, on his way south. Agnes Ramsay, wife of John Leslie, seventh Baron of Pitcaple, and cousin to Montrose, offered him her assistance to escape, but he resolved to stand his trial at Edinburgh, where he was executed 21st May 1650. The room in which he was confined at Pitcaple was called Montrose's room.

In the month of July 1650, Charles II. sailed from Holland, and landed at Garmouth on the Spey, from whence he proceeded to rest at the Bog of Gight, now called Gordon Castle. When on his journey southward he sent notice to John Leslie of Pitcaple that he would dine with him. Pitcaple received this notice while he was attending St. Sair's fair, and hearing that the king was attended by a considerable number of followers, he was apprehensive that his stock of wine would not be sufficient. Therefore he bought all the claret exposed for sale in the market, to aid in entertaining the royal party. When the king crossed the Urie near the castle of Pitcaple, he was struck with the luxuriance of the crop, and observed that it reminded him of dear England. The farm to which this remark was applied has ever since been called England.

John Leslie, seventh Baron of Pitcaple, was a lieutenant-colonel, and was engaged in the battle of Worcester, where he received a wound of which he died in 1651. He was succeeded by his son—

ALEXANDER LESLIE,

EIGHTH BARON OF PITCAPLE.

ALEXANDER LESLIE, eighth Baron of Pitcaple, got a disposition of the Mill of Pitcaple, with the multures thereof, from his uncle, Sir Gilbert Ramsay of Balmain, 18th December 1652; also of the lands and Mains of Pitcaple, with the fortalice, the croft of land called England,

Alexander Leslie married Elizabeth Leslie, daughter of Leonard Leslie, Laird of Haches, and had issue—

I. JOHN, who got a charter of the lands of Pitcaple and others, 6th January 1657, but died without issue before his father.

II. ALEXANDER, born 23d January 1656 ; succeeded as ninth Baron.

III. CHARLES, died in Holland.

IV. DAVID, also died in Holland.

V. WILLIAM, a Jesuit.

VI. WALTER, also a Jesuit.

VII. JANET, married to David Dunbar of Kirkhill. A decret of adjudication was issued, at the instance of Patrick, Count Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain, against Alexander Leslie, ninth Baron of Pitcaple, charged to enter heir to the deceased Alexander Leslie of Pitcaple, his father, in the lands of Pitcaple. One of the debts mentioned in the adjudication was due to Janet Leslie, sister of the said Alexander Leslie younger, and spouse of David Dunbar of Kirkhill, 7th November 1682.

Alexander Leslie, eighth Baron of Pitcaple, died before 1679, when Elizabeth Leslie, his relict, assigned to Alexander Leslie of Pitcaple, her son, a bond by John Leslie of Aquhorsk, obliging himself to convey to her the teind right of the lands of Pitbee and others. He was succeeded by his son—

ALEXANDER LESLIE,

NINTH BARON OF PITCAPLE.

Patrick, Count Leslie of Balquhain, gave a discharge to Alexander Leslie of Pitcaple of the sum of £3936 : 10 : 10 Scots, and that because the said Alexander had discharged James Leslie, eldest son of the marriage between him and the deceased Marjory Leslie, daughter of the said Patrick, Count Leslie, of the sum of £2330 : 13 : 6 Scots, part of the sum of £5596 : 13 : 4 Scots, with which he had burdened the fee of his said son. The discharge by Patrick, Count Leslie, was signed before John Leslie of Middletoune, 20th October 1709. By Marjory Leslie, Alexander Leslie had issue—

He married, secondly, Henrietta Irvine of Drum, and had issue—

II. JOHN, in holy orders.

III. ALEXANDER, a Jesuit, born 7th November 1693 ; was admitted into the noviciate of the Society of Jesus 12th November 1713 ; made his profession 2d February 1729. He served on the Scotch mission till 1747, when he went to Rome, and died there about 1760. He edited the Mozarabic Missal, published at Rome in quarto in 1755, and he wrote a treatise on the Legions of Rome. His friend, Father Thorpe, says, that in looking over Father Leslie's papers, he observed what he had too much honour to make known during his life—namely, that he had a

SIR JAMES LESLIE,

TENTH BARON OF PITCAPLE.

SIR JAMES LESLIE, tenth Baron of Pitcaple, in his youth had gone abroad and had entered the French service, in which he attained the rank of brigadier-general, and was made a Knight of St. Louis, and Commandant of the Royal Swedish Regiment.

On the death of Ernest Leslie, eighteenth Baron of Balquhain, without male issue, in 1739, the direct line of heirs-male of the Scotch branch of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain, failed, all the heirs-male in Scotland being sons or grandsons of the daughters of Patrick, Count Leslie, fifteenth Baron of Balquhain. As has been related at length in the records of Anthony,

Count Leslie, nineteenth Baron of Balquhain, this event occasioned a dispute regarding the succession to the Balquhain estates. Sir James Leslie of Pitcahle considered himself entitled to succeed to them in right of his mother, Marjory Leslie, the eldest daughter of Count Patrick Leslie. Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, and his sons, Counts Leopold and Anthony Leslie, in Germany, considered themselves entitled to succeed as the direct heirs-male of Count Patrick Leslie, in right of their father and grandfather, Count James Ernest Leslie, Count Patrick's eldest son. Count Charles Cajetan Leslie endeavoured to dissuade Sir James Leslie from asserting his claim, and offered to give him the management of the Balquhain estates on advantageous terms. But Sir James Leslie determined to pursue his claim in the Court of Session, and in the meantime he returned from France, and took possession of the Balquhain estates. After a lengthened litigation, the Court of Session pronounced in favour of Sir James Leslie's claims, 11th February 1741. But the Counts Leslie carried the case by appeal to the House of Lords, who reversed the decision of the Court of Session, and pronounced in favour of the claims of Anthony, Count Leslie, second son of Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, 29th April 1742. Consequently, Anthony, Count Leslie, became nineteenth Baron of Balquhain, and Sir James Leslie was obliged to relinquish his possession of the Balquhain estates, and an execution of arrestment was issued, 11th November 1742, at the instance of Charles Cajetan, Count Leslie, and Anthony, Count Leslie, his second son, in the hands of Mrs. Teresa Leslie, sister to Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, for the sum of £2000 sterling, the amount of the wrongous intrusions of the said Sir James Leslie with the rents of Balquhain from Martinmas 1739 to Whitsunday 1742.

Sir James Leslie, tenth Baron of Pitcaple, died without issue, 12th March 1757, and his brothers being all dead without issue, or in holy orders, and so excluded from the succession, he was succeeded by his eldest sister—

JANE LESLIE, married to John Lumsden, Professor of Divinity in the University and King's College, Aberdeen, and had two daughters, who succeeded her as co-heiresses in the estate of Pitcaple, which they sold to Henry Lumsden, a lawyer in Aberdeen, whose grandson is now in possession of the estate.

RECORDS OF THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF CULTS.

THE family of Leslie of Cults was descended from the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

I. MALCOLM LESLIE, first Laird of Cults, was the illegitimate son of Sir Andrew Leslie, third

Baron of Balquhain, by the Fair Maid of Strathdon. Sir Andrew Leslie had a feud with the Forbesees, and made an incursion with a large body of retainers up to Strathdon, and devastated the lands, and carried off the daughter and heiress of the Baron of Cray, chief of the Clan Allan, and who was called the Fair Maid of Strathdon: others say that the lady whom Sir Andrew Leslie carried off was a daughter of Sir James Stewart of Inveravon, also called the Fair Maid of Strathdon. It seems certain that, by one or other of these ladies, Sir Andrew Leslie had a natural son, Malcolm Leslie, to whom he gave the lands of Cults. Malcolm Leslie of Cults is a witness to a charter of half of the lands of Westhall, granted by Alexander Ramsay of Westhall to his brother, Edward Ramsay, 26th May 1453.* Malcolm Leslie of Cults had two sons—

I. ANDREW, parson of Slink. He had a daughter, Mary, married to John Gordon of Essie, by whom she had Duncan Gordon of Knower, Alexander Gordon of Knockespock, William Gordon, Bridge of Gight, and several other sons, from whom are descended the Gordons of Cairnborrow, of Buckie, of Crimond, and of Crawley.

II. ALEXANDER of Auching.

He had a son, Andrew, who was parson at Fetternear and Oyne, and a daughter, Elizabeth, married, first, to William Tarbet, and, secondly, to William Thain.

II. BERALD, parson of Rothies and vicar of Elgin. He was tutor to the Earl of Rothies, the Baron of Balquhain, and several other noblemen and gentlemen. He was buried in the Chanonrie kirk of Elgin, with his brother Gavin, as their monuments testify.

IV. JOHN LESLIE, who is called by Buchanan a priest's gielt—i. e. the spurious son of a priest—as, according to some authorities, his father Gavin was in priest's orders, and consequently was never married, Miss Ruther being only his concubine. A dispensation or legitimation under papal authority was granted, 19th July 1538, by Alexander Sutherland, official of Moray, in favour of John Leslie, therein designed as John Lesley, scholar in Moray, enabling him, notwithstanding the defect of his birth, to receive holy orders.* John Leslie was educated at the University of Aberdeen, and gave early indications of extraordinary genius. In 1544, when he was eighteen years of age, he was nominated by the magistrates and council of Aberdeen to a prebend, and to the office of organist and teacher of the song-school, with an income of £20 a-year. In 1546 the bishop of Aberdeen made him an acolyte in the cathedral of Aberdeen. In 1550 he was appointed canon of Aberdeen and Ellon, prebendary of Aberdeen, and vicar of Dyce. In

About this time the doctrines of the Reformation began to spread, and great animosities and debates arose among all ranks of people. A solemn disputation between the Catholics and the Reformers was agreed to. We find that in 1560, the Rev. John Leslie, official of Aberdeen, licentiate in both faculties of law, and Mr. Alexander Anderson, the principal of the college, with others, were ordered by the Lords of the Congregation to go to Edinburgh, to meet and discuss points of faith with John Knox, John Willox, and others. But nothing was settled by the discussion. Dr. Leslie was detained in Edinburgh, and was ordered not to preach again.

The troubles in Scotland daily increasing, both parties thought it necessary to invite Queen Mary home from France. Dr. Leslie was sent to France by the Catholic party, and particularly by the Earls of Huntly and Athole, to offer their services to the queen. Lord James Stewart, Queen Mary's natural brother, was sent by the Reformers to offer their services. Dr. Leslie made such despatch that he arrived at the French Court several days before Lord James Stewart. Queen Mary set out for Scotland, and embarked at Calais 20th August 1561, and arrived at Leith six days afterwards. Dr. Leslie accompanied her.

In 1562, Dr. Leslie was appointed professor of canon law in the University and King's College, Aberdeen. Soon afterwards he was appointed one of the Senators of the College of Justice, an ordinary Lord of Session, and a privy councillor.

In 1564 he received the Abbey of Lindores in commendam. In 1565, on the death of Henry Sinclair, Bishop of Ross, Dr. Leslie was appointed to the bishopric of Ross.

The Bishop of Ross, observing that the laws of Scotland were becoming obsolete and ill kept from not being collected into one body, urged Queen Mary to appoint a commission to collect, amend, and correct all the laws. The queen accordingly appointed a commission for this purpose, and to the care and industry of the commissioners, and especially of the Bishop of Ross, we owe the first impression of the Laws of Scotland, printed at Edinburgh, 1566, commonly called the "Black Acts of Parliament,"—so called because they were printed in the black or Saxon character.

The Bishop of Ross joined Queen Mary after her escape from Lochleven. In 1568 he was sent as one of her commissioners to meet the commissioners of Queen Elizabeth at York, to defend the Queen of Scotland against the calumnies of her rebellious subjects. The bishop proved himself most faithful to his queen on this and on other occasions, and acted as her agent and ambassador at several courts, never ceasing, while she lived, to act for her with great earnestness and much labour. When Mary was detained a prisoner by Queen Elizabeth, she sent the Bishop of Ross to Elizabeth to represent the injustice which was done to her. A particular account of what the Bishop of Ross did to further Queen Mary's liberation, taken from his own writings, is preserved in manuscript in the Advocates' Library at Edinburgh.

The Bishop of Ross, finding that Queen Elizabeth paid no attention to his representations, endeavoured by secret transactions to procure the escape of Queen Mary, and forwarded the project of a marriage between the unfortunate queen and the Duke of Norfolk, which being discovered, the duke was condemned for high treason, 16th January 1572, and was executed in June following. The Bishop of Ross was summoned before the English council. He pleaded the privileges of an ambassador, but without avail. He was sent a prisoner to the Isle of Ely, and afterwards to the Tower of London. He was set at liberty in 1573, and was banished from England. He retired to the Netherlands, where he published a treatise in Latin upon afflictions and tranquillity of mind, for the use of his mistress, the Queen of Scots. Afterwards he went to France, and solicited the kings of France and Spain, and the German princes, to interest themselves for Queen Mary. But, finding that all these acted very slowly in the affair, in 1575 he went to Rome to urge the Pope to use his influence with the princes of Europe in the Queen's behalf. While at Rome, in 1578, he published his History of Scotland in Latin, written in a polished and nervous style. This work is entitled De Origine Moribus et Rebus Gestis Scotorum. He visited different countries after leaving Rome, and, in 1579, he was made Vicar-General of Rouen. In 1580 he published in Latin at Rheims several treatises in vindication of Queen Mary; amongst others, an answer to those who opposed her title to the succession to the crown of England; a treatise to show the advantages that would result to Scotland and England from the union of the two crowns; and an answer to those who opposed the government of women. He was appointed coadjutor to the Archbishop of Rouen, but was prevented by the troubles of the times from enjoying this preferment.

When the sorrowful tidings of the execution of Queen Mary reached Brussels, where the Bishop of Ross was then residing, the circumstances and inhumanity of her untimely end filled him with such horror that he retired to a monastery of the canons-regular of the order of St. Augustine at Gertrudenberg, about two miles from Brussels, where he spent the remainder of his days in great devotion. He died in June 1596, aged seventy years, and was buried in the monastery under a monument erected to his memory by his nephew, John Leslie, and bearing the following inscription :—

“Sola Virtus.”

“Joannes Leslaeus, Episcopus Rossensis, Scotus, ex illustri familia Leslaeorum, omnis generis scientiarum cultissimus, orator ad Regem Gall. Franciscum II. Consiliarius Mariae, P. M. An old manuscript history of the Leslie family states, but on what authority does not appear, that John Leslie, Bishop of Ross, had three daughters—Janet, married to Andrew Leslie of New Leslie; a second, married to Richard Irvine; and a third, married to Cruickshank of Tillymorgan.

After many eminent military achievements, he attained the rank of general, and was appointed Governor of Smolensko. At this period there were three colonels and many captains and subaltern officers of the name of Leslie in the Muscovite service, besides General Sir Alexander Leslie. He was twice married, and had two sons—John, a lieutenant-colonel, and Theodore. He died in 1661, aged ninety-five years.

RECORDS OF THE FAMILY OF LESLIE OF IDEN.

THE family of Leslie of Iden, or Eden, is a branch of the family of Leslie, Barons of Balquhain.

One account states that Arthur Leslie, third son of William Leslie, ninth Baron of Balquhain,

near, by the falling of his horse while crossing the river, left a son, Patrick, who also had a son Patrick, who was the progenitor of the family of Leslie of Iden. But there is no mention in any record of the marriage of this Arthur Leslie, and it seems certain that he died unmarried. Another account, which is more probable, states that the progenitor of the family of Leslie of Iden was Patrick Leslie, third son of Patrick Leslie of Logydurno, a natural son of William Leslie, fourth Baron of Balquhain, by Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Meldrum of Fyvie.*

I. PATRICK LESLIE, third son of Patrick Leslie of Logydurno, by his wife, a daughter of Spence of Boddam, was a merchant in Aberdeen. He married Miss Ankret, daughter of John Ankret, burgess of Aberdeen, and had issue—

- I. ALEXANDER, who died young.
- II. WALTER, who also died young.
- III. PATRICK, of whom presently.
- IV. A Daughter, married, it is said, to John Leslie, Baron of Balquhain.
- V. A Daughter.

II. PATRICK, third son of Patrick Leslie, by his wife, Miss Ankret, was a burgess of Aberdeen.
He married Miss Innes of Auchintoul, and had a son, also called Patrick.

IV. SIR PATRICK LESLIE of Iden was Lord Provost of Aberdeen at different periods from 1634 to 1647. He received the honour of knighthood, and bought the lands of Iden from the Meldrums. He married, first, Jean, daughter of John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, and had issue—

I. PATRICK, who married the Honourable Miss Fraser, daughter of Lord Saltoun of Philorth, and had a son, who died without issue at Breda. Patrick Leslie and his wife died in London in 1680.

III. ALEXANDER, who died young.

IV. ISABELLA, married to Alexander Gordon of Lesmore.

V. MARY, married to Alexander Lumsden of Ruthrieston.

Sir Patrick Leslie of Iden married, secondly, Isabella, daughter of John Cheyne, bailie in Aberdeen, and had two sons—

I. GEORGE, his successor in the lands of Iden.

II. WALTER, who died unmarried in Poland.

Sir Patrick Leslie of Iden was a man of great repute, and he figured much in the troublesome times of the Covenant, being a rigid Covenanter. He died in 1660. He was succeeded by his eldest son of his second marriage—

Alexander Fraser Tytler, the elder son, was one of the senators of the College of Justice, by the title of Lord Woodhouselee, and he married Anne Fraser, daughter and heiress of William Fraser of Belnain, and by her he acquired the lands of Belnain. He had three sons—William Fraser Tytler of Belnain, James Fraser Tytler of Woodhouselee, and Patrick Fraser Tytler, the historian of Scotland ; and two daughters—Anne Fraser Tytler, and Jane Fraser Tytler, married to James Baillie of Reolick. GEORGE LESLIE, commonly called the Scotch Capuchin, or Father Archangel, was the son of James Leslie of Peterstone, by his wife Jane Wood, who, after her husband's death, married, secondly, John Leslie, second Laird of Balcairn, of the family of Leslie of Crichtie. George Leslie became a Capuchin monk, and was employed on the Catholic mission in Scotland. He seems to have published some controversial works, as Mr. Andrew Logie, parson of Rayne and archdeacon of Aberdeen, wrote an answer to him under the title "Cum bono Deo Raine from the clouds, upon a Choicke Angel (in reference to George Leslie's name in religion, Father Archangel), or a returned answer to that common quaeritur of our adversaries, 'Where was your church before Luther?' digested into several meditations according to the difference of points. From the third, which is anonymous, we learn that the work was written in answer to Father Archangel.*

Father Archangel is briefly mentioned by Dempster in his Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Scotorum, pp. 43, 44. His name also occurs in the following list of Catholic priests and adherents of the Catholic church in the north-eastern counties of Scotland, drawn up at the beginning of the reign of Charles I. about 1625, and preserved among Sir James Balfour's manuscripts in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh:—

Among a number of papers brought from the Scotch College at Douai, and now in the collection of the late Right Rev. James Kyle, D.D., Bishop of Germanicia, and Vicar-Apostolic of the northern district of Scotland, there is a letter from Father William Christie, a Jesuit, dated at Douay, 29th December 1653, in which Father Christie states that George Leslie, afterwards styled the Capuchin, entered the Scotch College at Douai in 1608, and came to the mission in Scotland in 1623; that he was a very zealous man, but that little more could be said regarding him; that he died in his mother's poor house just over the river Dee, opposite the hill of Aboyne, and was buried in an old ruinous church between that and Huntshall; that the period of his death was not correctly ascertained; that Father Christie believed the book entitled The Scotch Capuchin was a pure romance, not written by Mgr. Rinuccini, Archbishop of Fermo, but that he conjectured that it was written by Father Andrew Leslie, a Jesuit.

The history of Father Archangel, published in Italian under the name of Jean Baptiste Rinuccini, Archbishop of Fermo, and translated into French by Francis Barrault, procureur de la doctrine Chretienne, and of which a second and improved edition was published at Paris in 1682, is of such an extraordinary and romantic character, that it has cast considerable discredit on the subject of the memoir. As the Laurus Leslæana remarks, in this little work more attention seems to have been paid to exhibit the eloquence of the writer than to the truth of the circumstances narrated. It is probable that during the residence of Father Archangel at the Capuchin convent at Fermo in Italy, he related to his brethren his adventures in Scotland; and that these adventures were afterwards written down by men ignorant of Scotch names, places, and manners, and then published under the name of Rinuccini, Archbishop of Fermo, who was afterwards papal nuncio in Ireland. However, the truth of all that is really important in this history of the Scotch Capuchin is fully confirmed by a letter written by Father Archangel himself to Colonel Sempill, concerning the missions in Scotland, dated at Paris, 20th January 1630. There can be no doubt of the truth of the statements made in this letter, as they were made to one who had constant communications with Scotland, and to whom the parties mentioned were well known, and who took a great interest in the Catholic missions in Scotland. A Spanish translation of the original letter is preserved in the Scotch College at Valladolid in Spain. The original was written in English, and, with a Spanish translation, was given to the Spanish government, who then took a warm interest in the Scotch Catholics. This original is probably still in the Spanish archives, which have been carefully arranged and preserved. The following is a copy of an English translation made from the Spanish translation of the original in English. The Spanish translator has misspelled many names, which leaves us in ignorance of many persons named in the letter, and in doubt about others:—

“The manner I have conversed with heretics and the method I have practised in Scotland for these last six years in converting souls, will shortly be published and dedicated to his Holiness—at least, I have been advised to do so by some of those who, flying from the calamities and persecutions in our country, have taken refuge in France. I am more inclined to dedicate it to your Excellency. I have therefore omitted to give it a foreign appearance for many just reasons. I shall send to your Excellency some books of it just published, by which you will see the method I have employed in my vocation in the country.*

“ I wrote three other treatises in Scotland; two on the vocation of ministers, and one in reply to the reasons which induced a certain noble lady to apostatise from the Catholic faith to the Protestant. These treatises have disposed many to follow the Catholic faith, and many learned persons are of opinion that they should be published, and I could not dedicate them to any person more worthy than your Excellency, whose zeal for the conversion of souls and love of the servants of our faith are so well known. Know therefore that the best and most beautiful signs of a nobleman is to serve and fear God, and to take care of religion, as Livy says, and this your Excellency does in your own person by the ardent desire which you have to serve the Holy Roman Church, and to save souls in your country, as is proved by the pension which by the care and solicitude of your Excellency is so liberally distributed among the laborers of the Church, and for which benefit I thank your Excellency with all my heart, and I shall continue to petition our Lord that he may reward it. I therefore wish that this dedication may serve to commemorate the piety and charity which your Excellency has shown towards me and others who dedicate themselves to the conversion of souls in our country. And as these treatises are part of my labors in very perilous and dangerous times, I would be sorry to see them perish in the cradle. In the meantime I beseech your Excellency to be pleased to continue the pension which you gave me while I was on the mission, to pay the expense of publication, and because when I return to Italy I propose getting them published at Venice if your Excellency will aid in the expense.

“For two reasons I return to Italy; first, because the government of our missions has been changed. Formerly all depended on a General who sent those of every nation to labor in their own country of which they were subjects. But now a French father, named Joseph, through the influence of Cardinal Richelieu, obtained from his Holiness the government of all the missions of our order in the east and west. Before this Father became Governor, we had twelve houses of our order in Turkey and Persia, governed by a learned and active gentleman called Father Pacifico; but immediately on Father Joseph becoming Governor in France, he recalled Father Pacifico and all the Italians and Spaniards who were in those places, leaving in his place a French superior, who now admits only Frenchmen in those countries; so that by this change only Frenchmen are admitted into the missions of the east and west, as likewise in England and Scotland.

“The second reason for my journey to Italy is to exculpate myself from some calumnies which have been imputed to me before the congregation of the Propagation of the Faith. To these calumnies I shall oppose all the Catholic ladies and gentlemen who, flying from the persecution, have arrived in these parts, for the many conversions which God has made by means of me afford no trace of those vile things which they impute to me ; for God has used me as an instrument for the conversion of my stepfather, of my mother and brothers, and of all the family ; for the conversion of Alexander Leslie of Afford, of his wife and sons ; of John Gordon of Deuthdies, of his wife and sons ; of Mr. Regower, aged eighty years, and of his sons ; of the Baron of Aquhorties, Leslie, and of his wife ; of the Baron of Kirkadi, and of his wife, who made her first confession to Father Steven of the Company ; of the Baron of Pitcapple ; of the Baron of Cluny, Gordon, whose father for this cause sought to kill me ; of three entire families in the hills of Badenoch ; of the Laird of Brunthill, Hays, who carried the standard when the Earl of Errol commanded the advanced guard in the battle of Glenlivat, against the Earl of Argyle ; of the Laird of Littlehill, Leith. In Angus I converted the eldest son of Viscount Oliphant, and one of his nephews, and two daughters-in-law of the Baroness of Monorgan, who died within eight days, having received all the sacraments. In the village of Fowlis I converted two whole families. In the southern parts of Scotland I converted the Viscountess Herries, and the Baroness of Locharby, and three gentlemen of the name of Maxwell. I converted to a good life the Baron of Lochinvar, who died in my arms, and this nearly cost me my life. In the west of Scotland I converted a daughter and two sons of the Earl of Abercorn, and some servants. In Edinburgh I converted Baron Ridhall Hamilton, and another gentleman and his wife, who doubting the truth of the mass, heard a voice saying three times, " Rise, rise, rise, go to mass." I must omit innumerable other persons, both men and women, for there is not a corner in all the kingdom where I have not left the seed of Faith, thanks be to God, the Fountain of all good.

" This is a summary of the souls I converted in Scotland, and well known by all those acquainted with me. But now, who are those who calumniate me ? Are they perhaps heretics ? No ; for these do not frequent the court of Rome. Are they secular Catholics ? No ; because none of these would venture to say that they ever saw in me any trace of levity. Are they perhaps priests? I say they are; but let them come to particulars, and specify the conversions which they have made, and we shall see if theirs can compete with mine. But enough of this disagreeable matter.

“With regard to the present persecution in Scotland, it continues and increases every day, to the great detriment of the Faith and of souls. It is distressing to see the number of Catholics who, driven from their country, arrive at this part of France, where it would appear that Christian charity is dead, for men sneer at their necessities, rather than think of remedies. There is at Paris a Baroness, widow of the late Baron Crlton Maxwell, whom, after a long imprisonment, they have banished from the kingdom. Her daughters, beautiful girls, remain in Scotland, excommunicated by the ministers, and although the Queen of England has recommended her to the Queen-mother, nothing has been done for her, because charity seems banished from the court of France. I therefore beg to recommend her to your Excellency, because she is a learned, virtuous, and noble lady. There is also a Scotch gentleman named George Mortimer, a most honourable man, and zealous in the service of God and of his country. He has given me the means to pay for publishing my narrative. May I request you to acknowledge his assistance. I have written this to your Excellency in a very humble and common style, because I know I speak with the common Father of all. Supplicating our Lord to multiply your years,

Your Excellency's most obliged servant and poor relation,

FR. ACHANGEL LESLIE, Capuchin.”

Capuchin, published first in Italian, professing to be written by Jean Baptiste Rinuccini, Archbishop of Fermo, about 1650, and translated into French by Francis Barrault, procureur de la doctrine Chretienne, and of which a second edition was published at Paris in 1682.

In that place where Scotland is divided by many mountains, on the coast of the German Sea, the city of Aberdeen lies. James, Count Leslie, and Jane Wood, his wife, persons no less noble than rich, dwelt in Aberdeen. At the end of the first year of their marriage they had a son, George, whom they brought up a Calvinist. Count James Leslie died soon afterwards, and left his son George his heir, and by his testament he provided that the boy should be bred at Paris. Jane Wood, after the death of her first husband, Count James Leslie, married the Baron of Torrey, and her son, George Leslie, being in his eighth year, was sent to Paris with a noble equipage, and a train suiting his rank. He was intrusted to the care of a wise and judicious preceptor, and was recommended above all things to be steadfast in the Protestant religion. He applied to his studies, and became acquainted with two brothers of an illustrious family, who gained his confidence, and who spoke to him on subjects of controversy, and introduced him to their father. The result was that George Leslie was convinced of the errors in which he had been brought up, and at length he became a convert to the Catholic faith. His preceptor, having discovered this change of religion, sent an account of it to Aberdeen. His mother wrote to him a letter threatening to disown him for her son, to abandon him to beggary, to deprive him of his estates, and to blot out his name from the genealogical tree of the family. Threats having no effect, she tried entreaties, but in vain. Then she recalled the preceptor, and withdrew all supplies of money from her son, whom she renounced.

George Leslie, thus disowned by his mother, was received by the father of his two companions, and was treated by him as a son. When he was sixteen years of age he accompanied his friends on a tour through Italy. At Rome he became acquainted with Ange de Joyeuse, a Capuchin monk, known in the world as Count de Bouchage, and was greatly edified by his conversations with him. George Leslie resolved to become a Capuchin, and offered himself to the general of the order, Jerom de Castel-Ferrato. But the general doubted whether he could, consistently with certain bulls of the Pope, receive the son of heretics into the order. George Leslie obtained an audience with the Pope, Paul V., who dispensed him from the objection raised by the general of the Capuchins, and he was received into the order as a novice. He went through his noviciate in an exemplary manner, and made his religious profession, assuming the name of Brother Archangel. He then applied himself to philosophy and theology, and after finishing his studies he began to preach.

His mother was much troubled on learning that he had become a Capuchin. She sent her eldest son by her second marriage, the young Baron of Torrey, to induce him to quit the order, and to return to Scotland, and promised that if he would do so, he would be permitted to enjoy his paternal inheritance of Monymusk. The two brothers met at Urbino. Frederick Maria de Rovere, Duke of Urbino, received the young Baron of Torrey with great demonstrations of esteem, and sought to convert him to the Catholic faith. With the aid of the Capuchins he succeeded, and the conversion was celebrated with much rejoicing. The two brothers now resolved if possible to convert their mother to the Catholic faith, and to sow the seed of the true religion throughout Scotland. For this purpose the Baron of Torrey returned home first, but his mother, having learned his change of religion, cursed him, and commanded him to leave the castle.

George Leslie, Father Archangel, was appointed court-preacher to Mary de Medicis, Regent of France; and when Gregory XV. succeeded Paul V., he appointed Father Archangel chief of the Catholic missions in Great Britain. It happened that an ambassador from Spain to the court of London was then at Paris, appointed to negotiate a marriage between the Infanta and the Prince of Wales, and he wished to have an English interpreter. Father Archangel undertook the office, in order that, disguised as a layman, he might more easily perform his mission. The Spanish ambassador was so much pleased with him that on quitting England he made him a present of a fine horse.

Father Archangel sent for his brother, the Baron of Torrey, from Scotland, that he might concert with him the proper measures for the success of his mission. Then he set out for Scotland, and wrote a letter in his own name to his mother, and dated it from Urbino, and recommended the bearer of it as a gentleman of great worth, and his particular acquaintance. When Father Archangel arrived at Monymusk, his mother was busied, with her two daughters-in-law, in embroidering a silk bed for her eldest son, should he return from Italy. Archangel presented his letter, and his mother read it with some displeasure. Yet she welcomed the stranger, as did also her youngest son, Edward, and a great feast was prepared. Archangel remained undiscovered for five days, when his mother recognised him, and great joy prevailed in the castle of Monymusk. The Baron of Torrey, who had been sent away, was recalled to share the happiness of the family. The news of the safe return of George Leslie went through the town, and the old lady received a thousand visits of congratulation. The fame of the event so long wished for reached even to Aberdeen. Fires of rejoicing were lighted on the battlements of the castle of Monymusk, and the inhabitants of the town discharged their culverins, and let off many sky-rockets, which seemed as the aerial messengers of their gratitude. The lady told her son that this day of joy repaid all the affliction that she had experienced, and all the tears that she had shed for twenty-five years, and she was willing to leave him undisturbed in the religion which he had chosen, and that she looked for the like privilege from him.

Archangel began to preach in the forests and mountains, where he collected what auditors he could. His success was great. In eight months he converted four thousand persons in the neighbourhood of Monymusk and Aberdeen, and he would have converted the whole country if he had not been recalled soon afterwards. What he had most at heart was the conversion of his mother. In this he was at last successful. She, her daughter-in-law, her youngest son, and all the officers and servants of the castle, were converted and received into the Church. A hall in the castle was turned into a chapel, and the divine offices were celebrated in the castle of Monymusk with the utmost solemnity and splendour. After two years spent in Scotland, Father Archangel retired to England, in consequence of a proclamation published at Aberdeen commanding all Catholic priests to quit Scotland within a certain time under pain of death. His mother was excommunicated for contumacy for not attending the Protestant church, and all her goods and property were confiscated. She was obliged to retire to a small house, where she lived on the little she could earn by spinning. Archangel resolved to pay her a visit. He disguised himself as a peasant, and as he drew near Monymusk he gathered some herbs, and pretending to be a gardener, he went forward and cried them about the streets. The guards stopped him at the gates of the town, but he gained admittance. Not knowing where his mother lived, and being afraid to ask questions of any one, he passed three times through Monymusk, crying, "Buy my greens." At last his mother came out of a miserable hovel and cried, "Here, gardener." Archangel was deeply affected at seeing his mother dressed like a servant-maid, and reduced to the necessity of buying vegetables for herself. He made himself known to her, but they were almost immediately interrupted by the king's commissaries, who were in search of priests, and he was obliged to return to England.

On his return to England, Archangel received letters from the General of the Capuchins informing him that he was accused of having transgressed the rules of the mission, and advising him to return to Italy to justify himself. Archangel took the advice, and went to Cremona, where he attended those who were attacked by the plague, which at that time devastated Italy. He was fully acquitted of the charges brought against him, and Pope Urban VIII. granted him permission to return to Scotland, but his superiors thought it proper that he should remain for some time in Italy. He was made Guardian or Superior of the convent of Mount George, in the arch-diocese of Fermo, of which Mgr. Jean Baptiste Rinuccini was then arch-bishop.

After some time, Father Archangel and Father Epiphanes were appointed to the mission in Great Britain, and they set out on their journey. They passed through Paris, and embarked at Calais. They suffered shipwreck on a rock near the Isle of Wight. Some of the passengers were saved, but most of the crew of the vessel perished. Archangel converted two of his fellow-passengers. When they arrived at St. Calpin, Archangel laid aside his name of Leslie, lest his family should be known, and he assumed the name of Wood, which was his mother's name. Meeting a young Scotch gentleman at the inn, Archangel asked him whether there were many Catholics in Scotland since the persecution. He was answered that formerly there were many Catholics, even of the first families, but that the king, by severe edicts, had expelled them all, and had confiscated all their estates, and that there was only one Catholic family now remaining, and it was established in the large town of Monymusk. To it the king, by an instance of bounty altogether singular, had lately restored all its estates which had been forfeited, and for gratitude for the services done to him by that family, he tolerated it alone in the exercise of the Catholic religion. This young Scotch gentleman proved to be Archangel's youngest brother Edward, and from him he also learned that the court of France had interposed its good offices in favour of the family of Monymusk, and that King Charles I. had restored to it the possession of all its estates. From his brother Archangel also learned the account of his mother's death. She had heard that Archangel was about to return to Scotland, and she grew impatient to get some account of him. She walked every day on the road leading from England to Monymusk and Aberdeen, and, having met some merchants on their return from a fair at London, she learned from them that there had been a great tempest in the German Sea, and that many ships had perished, and particularly one in which were some priests. The old lady immediately concluded that her son Archangel was drowned. A slow fever seized her, and she died nine days afterwards.

CHAP. III.

*George Leslie,
Father Archangel.*

Father Archangel and his brother Edward, and Father Epiphanes, waited on the king at Newport, and were confirmed in their immunities. They then went to Scotland, where Archangel was so successful in his mission that the king was angry, and revived all the proclamations against Catholics, and commanded Archangel and his brothers to be sent to court. Archangel lost no time in setting out for England. He employed himself in preaching by the way. In the neighbourhood of the city of Torphichen he had a conference with a considerable number of gentlemen, and converted the eldest son of Baron Cluny, an Englishman of quality. When he was on the frontiers of England he fell ill of a fever, occasioned by excessive fatigue. A Jesuit, who happened to be in the neighbourhood, performed the last offices to him, and closed his eyes when he died. There was a mountain not far distant, which hardly any man dared to approach, by reason of a constant noise of a pack of hounds in full cry, accompanied with the hallooing of men and the sound of horses galloping. Yet the confidence which the faithful had in the merits of Archangel inspired them with resolution enough to carry his body up to that mountain, where they buried it.

The Archbishop of Fermo concludes his history of Father Archangel with some arguments to prove that Archangel should be held as a saint. In particular, he observes that if there be saints whom the voice of the people alone, commonly called the voice of God, has canonised, no one better deserves that honour than George Leslie of Monymusk.

From the authentic facts known concerning George Leslie, Father Archangel, the Scotch Capuchin, and already related, we are enabled to trace the origin of some of the errors contained in his Life, purporting to have been written by the Archbishop of Fermo. It is necessary now to point out another error in the archbishop's work. George Leslie is described as the son of Count James Leslie of Monymusk. This is a mistake, as it has been shown that he was the son of James Leslie of Peterstone, by his wife Jane Wood. There was no Count Leslie for a considerable time after Father Archangel was born. The first Count of the name of Leslie was Count Walter, son of John Leslie, tenth Baron of Balquhain, created a Count of the Holy Roman Empire by the Emperor Ferdinand III., 15th March 1637. He died in 1667 without issue, and was succeeded by his nephew, James, second Count Leslie, who died in 1694. Neither of these Counts lived in Scotland, and they were the only Counts of the name who could have been contemporaries of Father Archangel.

Then this so-called Count James Leslie is described as proprietor of Monymusk. This also is a mistake. Earlier than the thirteenth century

Monymusk was church property. In the pontificate of Innocent III., 1198-1216, a commission was granted to the Bishop of St. Andrews to examine and reform the monastery of Kildey of Monymusk.* Monymusk remained in the possession of the church till the Reformation, when it became the property of Duncan Forbes of Corsindae, who succeeded his father, Duncan Forbes, second son of James, second Lord Forbes. Duncan Forbes pulled down the monastery of Monymusk, and made use of the materials to build the present mansion-house of Monymusk. He got a charter under the Great Seal, "Duncan Forbes de Monymusk," of the lands of Coclaroquhie, 1st December 1554. He died in 1587, and was succeeded by his eldest son, William Forbes of Monymusk, who died before 1618, and was succeeded by his eldest son, William Forbes, who was created a Baronet by Charles I., by patent "Domino Willelmo Forbes de Monymusk," 2d April 1626. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir William Forbes, second Baronet, who was succeeded by his son, Sir John Forbes, third Baronet, who was succeeded by his son, Sir William Forbes, fourth Baronet, who got a charter from Charles II. "Domino Willelmo Forbes de Monymusk," 22d July 1661.† Monymusk remained in the possession of the Forbesees till 1710, when it was purchased by Sir Francis Grant of Cullen, who was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir Archibald Grant of Monymusk, and in this family the estate of Monymusk has remained till the present time. Thus there never was a family of Leslie of Monymusk.

It is unnecessary to point out the many other evident errors in the archbishop's work. As has been mentioned, it is not at all certain that the Archbishop of Fermo was the author of the Life of Father Archangel. From the want of dates, and the general style of the book, it seems to have been written as a pious romance, founded probably on the narrations given by Father Archangel of his adventures in Scotland to his Capuchin brethren during his stay in Italy. This view seems to be corroborated by the fact that the work was dramatised and published in Rome in 1673, under the title "Il Cappuccino Scozzese in Scena, con la seconda parte, e sua morte, non ancor mai piu stampata. Data in luce dal Signor Francesco Rozzi d'Alatri. In Roma, per il mancini, 1673."

DUGUID,

FIRST BARON OF AUCHINHOVE.

THE first person of the name of Duguid of whom any record is found, is Robert Duguid, who is witness to a deed of resignation made by Thomas Strachan of Glenkindy of all right and title which Duguid married Elizabeth of Balcarne, Auchinrove, and Warthill, about 1445, as is proved by a charter granted by King James III., dated at Edinburgh, 5th March 1470. They had a son, Robert Duguid, who succeeded his mother in the lands of Auchinrove. Duguid, the husband of Elizabeth, heiress of Balcarne, Auchinrove, and Warthill, died before August 1478, at which period it appears that Elizabeth of Balcarne was married to Alexander Hay.

ROBERT DUGUID,

SECOND BARON OF AUCHINROVE.

1470.

ROBERT DUGUID succeeded his mother, Elizabeth of Balcarne, in the lands of Auchinrove, Warthill, and Blalok, as is proved by a charter granted to him by King James III., dated at Edinburgh, 5th March 1470. In this charter the king grants and confirms to Robert Duguid, son and heir of Elizabeth of Balcarne, all and each the lands of Auchinrove, Warthill, and Blalok, with their pertinents, lying in the county of Aberdeen, which lands belonged to the said Elizabeth by hereditary right, and which she had spontaneously resigned into the king's hands.

Robert Duguid of Auchinhove disposed the lands of Balcarne in favour of Alexander Seton of Meldrum, 25th August 1478, as appears by the Burgh Records of Aberdeen. On that day Alexander Seton of Meldrum, and Robert Duguid of Auchinhove, produced in the Burgh Court, held by the bailies of Aberdeen, an instrument relating to the lands of Balcarne, by which Elizabeth of Balcarne, mother of the said Robert Duguid, had resigned to the said Robert Duguid, her son, the said lands of Balcarne, and had given them to him in feu and freehold; and Alexander Hay, now the husband of the said Elizabeth of Balcarne, had ratified and confirmed the said instrument by solemn oath, in open court, before the bailies of Dundee. Alexander Seton then petitioned the bailies of Aberdeen to have the said instrument transferred to him, which they did in due form, and signed with their seal.

Robert Duguid married Agnes Forbes of Brux, by whom he had a son, Robert, who succeeded him as third Baron of Auchinhove about 1500.

ROBERT DUGUID,

THIRD BARON OF AUCHINHOVE.

- ROBERT DUGUID was retoured heir to his father, Robert Duguid, second Baron of Auchinrove, in 1501. He obtained sasine of the lands of Auchinrove, Warthill, and Blelack, with the mill thereof, in 1513, and of the lands of the two Auchinroves, Warthill, Blelack, Tulloch, and the mill thereof, 18th January 1529. A commission under the Privy Seal was granted to the Sheriff of Aberdeen in 1533, on the complaint of Robert Duguid of Auchinrove against Alexander Irvine of Drum, for encroaching upon the lands of Warthill, Auchinrove, and Greencoats, and it was found that Robert Duguid had the right to the said lands. Robert Duguid of Auchinrove was frequently on the assize at Aberdeen from 1503 to 1536.* He entered into a bond of manrent with George, Earl of Huntly, 1st November 1536.
- Robert Duguid, third Baron of Auchinrove, married a daughter of Alexander Irvine of Drum, by whom he had a son, William, who succeeded him. He died in 1537.

WILLIAM DUGUID, son of Robert Duguid, third Baron of Auchinrove, succeeded as fourth Baron on the death of his father in 1537. He obtained a precept furth of the Chancery for infefting him in the lands of Auchinrove, Wartle, Greencoats, Blelack, and Tulloch, with the mill, dated 6th February 1538. Sasine followed thereon 19th May 1538.

William Duguid married, first, Janet Leslie, daughter of John Leslie, eighth Baron of Balquhain, about 1545. He married, secondly, in 1575, Janet Forbes, second daughter and co-heiress of Sir William Forbes of Pitsligo. This marriage is authenticated by a charter by which William Duguid granted the lands of Warthill to Janet Forbes, his spouse, 14th September 1575, who, previous to her marriage with him, had been served heir-portioner to her father, Sir William Forbes of Pitsligo, 22d June 1574.*

Duguid of Auchinhove. This is further confirmed by the proceedings of an assize-court held at Aberdeen, 4th April 1597, for the trial of Margaret Ogg for witching Agnes Ross, Lady Auchinhove. The second charge in the "Dittay or accusation against Margrat Og, spous to Johne Robbie, in Mariewell for hir being a vitche and sorcerar, and vsing the craft thereof, be the inspiratioun of the Devill, thir dyvers yeris bygane," is as follows:—

ROBERT DUGUID,

FIFTH BARON OF AUCHINHOVE.

1593. ROBERT DUGUID succeeded his father, William Duguid, as fifth Baron of Auchinhove, as is proved by the retour of the service of Robert Duguid as heir to his father William Duguid in the lands of Auchinhove, Wartle, Greencoats, and Tulloch, 23d June 1593. Sasine followed thereon 10th September 1593.

1583. Robert Duguid married Janet Forbes, daughter of Robert Forbes of Echt, during the lifetime of his father, when he was styled younger of Auchinhove. Robert Duguid, younger of Auchinhove, was divorced a vinculo, from his wife, Janet Forbes, for adultery committed with Elizabeth Mitchell in 1583. He was afterwards, however, contracted in marriage with Marjory Gordon, as then held, incompetently ; but the king, James VI., feeling some indulgence towards him on account of his extreme youth (minime etatis existens), was induced to pass a remission and dispensation in his favour 29th July 1589, wherein,

1589. after pardoning the offence in a criminal view, he dispenses with the material objection arising from the survivance of Janet Forbes, his former spouse, and specially declares the marriage he was now to solemnise to be adeo fidele in omnibus respec- tibus ac si eandem (Marjory Gordon) in primam uxorem duxisset; that is, to be as binding as if he had married Marjory Gordon as his first wife. The grant, moreover, has an express legitimation of the future issue, to the same effect and as fully as if they had been born of the said Robert's first wife.*

Robert Duguid granted procuratory for resigning the lands of Auchinhove and others in favour of himself and Marjory Gordon, his spouse, and William Duguid, his son, 6th November 1594, and obtained a charter of the same. A precept furth of the Chancery was issued for infefting him in the said lands, 15th March 1595, and sasine followed thereon 10th April 1596.†

By Marjory Gordon, Robert Duguid had issue—

I. WILLIAM, his successor.

II. ROBERT, styled portioner of Ruthven. He married Marian Forbes in 1611, by whom he had a son, Robert Duguid, who went to Poland about 1639, and was alive in 1669, as is proved by a birth-breve sworn before the magistrates of Aberdeen, 16th June 1669.

Robert Duguid, fifth Baron of Auchinhove, died about 1614, and was succeeded by his eldest son, William Duguid, sixth Baron of Auchinhove.

NOTE—WARDIS. See Page 273.

Note.

THE name of Wardis or Wardhouse is said to be derived from the circumstance of King Gregory of Scotland, who died in 893, having built a castle as a royal residence, with a vitrified fort, on the top of the beautiful green hill of Dunodeer, situated in the upper part of the lordship of the Garioch, in the parish of Insch, a mile from the Kirktown, where King Gregory died. The ruins of the castle remain to this day. King Gregory also erected a fortified building at the foot of the heights, to guard and protect the entrance and the road up to this stronghold, and this tower or outpost received the name of the King's Wardhouse. It is also said that this name of Dunodeer is descriptive of the local situation of the castle, and the purpose for which it was intended, being derived from the Celtic Dun-aud-iridh, signifying a fort on the acclivity of a hill (see Kennedy's Annals, p. 6). Others say the name is derived from dun, a hill, and ereith, a signal. The mansion-house of Wardis was situated in a valley, which was beautifully diversified with natural woods, and the gardens surrounding the house were exceedingly rich. The ancient castle of Meiklewardis stood in a narrow valley to the west of the Hill of Dunodeer. The only remaining vestige of it is the fosse by which it was surrounded, although it is not many years since the ruins of the walls were removed. Young Patrick Leith of Harthill, having obtained a commission from the Marquis of Montrose, who was then raising troops in the cause of King Charles I, found that he had no horses to mount his troop. Hearing that Forbes of Craigievar was lying at Inverurie with his troop, Patrick Leith went there in the night with a party of his friends, and made the whole troop prisoners, and mounted his own men on their horses, and joined Montrose in a few days afterwards. Montrose highly commended the conduct and courage of the young gentleman, and entrusted him with the defence of the castle of Meiklewardis, which was besieged by General Middleton. The castle was taken, and Patrick Leith was made prisoner, and suffered death for his loyalty, being beheaded at Edinburgh, 20th October 1647, when he was scarcely twenty-five years old. He was reckoned one of the handsomest youths in the country, and he suffered, like a true and faithful loyalist, with great firmness and constancy.—(Macfarlane's Geographical Collections.)

AD Perpetuam Rei Memoriam. Militantis ecclesiae regimini meritis licet imparibus per ineffabilem diuinæ sapientiae, atque clementiae abundantiam prepositi, illa quae a Praelatis, et personis ecclesiasticis ad fidei Catholicae bonorumque et jurum ecclesiasticorum conseruationem in fauorem personarum eiusdem fidei tuendae zelo praeclarisque in ecclesiam meritis conspicuarum prouidi atque salubriter facta esse dicuntur, ut firma semper atque inuolabilia persistent libenter dum id a nobis petitur apostolici muniminis praesidio constabilimus. Exponi si quidem nobis nuper fecit dilectus filius Alexander Abercambri baro de Balquehane Scotus, quod dudum cum tunc in humanis agens Baro Guillelmus Lessleius auus decem millia librarum monetae Scotiae tunc existentibus Episcopo et Canonicis ecclesiae Aberdonensis in subuentionem ciuitatis Aberdonensis, et ecclesiae huiusmodi tunc temporis propter ciuium dissensiones et excitatas ab orthodoxae fidei hostibus persecutiones in angustias redactae erant praestitisset, et non solum ipse Guillelmus sed etiam quondam Baro ejus genitor qui ad instantiam et preces dicti Episcopi et Canonicorum in dicta Ciuitate ut ad illius defensionem eo promptiores essent habitare elegerant ciuitatem predictam ab huiusmodi fidei orthodoxae hostibus longo tempore personaliter armata manu suisque semper expensis egregie et fideliter defendissent, et praeservassent iudem Episcopus

NINE days after the death of Count Ernest Leslie, 18th Baron of Balquhain, viz. 29th November 1739, John Innes of Tillyfour granted receipt in the Commissary books of Edinburgh for the two keys of Count Ernest Leslie's Charter Chest, to be delivered to the Commissary of Aberdeen, for the interest of all concerned. On the 21st December 1739, Mrs. Teresa Leslie, sister and Factrix to James Leslie of Pitcaple, petitioned the Commissary of Aberdeen that he would go to the House of Fetternear, and seal up the Charter Chest, that the hail writs therein contained might be duly preserved. On the same day the Commissary granted warrant to James Catanach, Advocate in Aberdeen, to go to the House of Fetternear and there seal up the said Charter Chest with the Commissary's seal, in order that the writs therein might be preserved for behoof of Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, and of all other persons having interest.

After the House of Lords, 29th April 1742, pronounced judgment in favour of Count Anthony Leslie's claim to the Estate of Balquhain, Thomas Dundas of Fingask, as Factor and Commissioner for the Count, presented a petition, 28th August 1742, to the Commissary of Aberdeen, showing that upon the decease of Count Ernest Leslie of Balquhain, a closet at Fetternear, in which the Charter Chest of the family of Balquhain was lodged, had been sealed up by his Lordship's authority, and that the law proceedings in relation to the succession to the estates being then ended by the judgment of the House of Lords, whereby the estates were declared to belong to Count Anthony Leslie, the said Thomas Dundas was desirous of having the seals of the Court removed, and the keys of the Closet and Charter Chest, in the custody of the Clerk of the Court delivered up to him; and he craved the Commissary to grant warrant to Alexander Innes, his Lordship's Clerk, to remove the seals and to deliver up the keys to him, Thomas Dundas. The Commissary found the petition reasonable, and on the same day granted a warrant in terms of the petition, and Thomas Dundas granted a receipt for the keys in the following terms:—

Mr. Thomas Mossman, Advocate in Aberdeen, stated that in consequence of a petition from Mr. Thomas Dundas to the Commissary of Aberdeen, a warrant was granted in August 1742, for getting the Charter Chest, or the keys of it, belonging to the family of Balquhain, and that he, Thomas Mossman, some time afterwards, by desire of Mr. Smith, the Factor, went to Fetternear, and brought away the Charter Chest, which was sent to Edinburgh.

1740-42.

Mr. John Lumsden, Writer in Edinburgh, and his son, John Lumsden, Junior, were employed by Thomas Dundas, Manager for Count Charles Cajetan Leslie, and his son, Count Anthony, as law agents in the process with Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple during the years 1740-1742, and afterwards, and John Lumsden, Junior, admitted that during that period they had in their possession, among other documents belonging to the Estate of Balquhain, the following deeds.

I. The deed of Entail made by Patrick, Count Leslie, in favour of his second son, George Leslie, with remainder to others therein mentioned, dated 8th November 1692, and registered 25th February 1698.

1695.

II. The disposition and resignation of James Ernest, Count Leslie, of the Estate of Balquhain, in favour of his half-brother, George Leslie, dated 9th December 1695.

1700.

III. The nomination and deed of Entail made by Patrick, Count Leslie, in favour of his second son, George Leslie, and others, dated 13th July 1700 and registered 30th July 1700.

John Lumsden, Junior, stated that by order of Thomas Dundas he delivered these three deeds, with others, to Walter Stewart, Writer in Edinburgh. Being further called upon oath to exhibit what papers he was possessed of belonging to the Counts Leslie, he exhibited two inventories of writs, deeds and other documents, with a receipt annexed to the first as follows:—

APPENDIX

“Edinburgh, 25th March 1745.

1745.

“Received by me, Walter Stewart, Writer in Edinburgh, by order of Thomas Dundas of Fingask, from John Lumsden, Writer to the Signet, the sixty-seven pieces of writs contained in this and the seven preceding pages of this inventory, in order to be new inventoried with the rest of the writs and other family deeds of the Estate of Balquhain, and to be returned on demand.

“WALTER STEWART.”

These writs, deeds, and documents were fixed on Thomas Dundas by a posterior receipt given by him, 27th December 1750, whereby he not only acknowledged the receipt of the writs contained in that inventory, but declared that these were the whole papers belonging to Count Leslie then in the hands of John Lumsden.

Peter Grant's title for carrying on his action for evicting the Estate of Balquhain from Count Anthony Leslie, which continued in Court from November 1756 till February 1762, was founded on extracts of the two deeds of Tailzie above mentioned, taken from the Register of Tailzies, and although a most protracted and dilatory defence was made by Thomas Dundas on the part of the Counts Leslie, to gain time, yet it was never pretended that the original deeds of Tailzie were out of his hands till the 10th March 1761, when Peter Grant made application to the Lords of Session, by petition, for having a day fixed to advise the whole cause speedily, the then next summer session. Then, and no sooner, in order to prevent a day being so fixed, a petition was presented to the Lords of Session in behalf of the Counts Leslie, praying that it might be found that no proceedings could be made in the cause until the deeds of Tailzie of the Estate, upon which the action was founded, were produced. Whereupon Thomas Dundas was called upon oath to say what he knew concerning these deeds of Tailzie, and he deponed that he had never seen them. Thus these two original deeds were then missing. In the law proceedings between the Counts Leslie and Sir James Leslie of Pitcaple, these deeds of Tailzie were produced in Court, and being now lost, Peter Grant presented a petition to the Court of Session praying that it might be declared that the two missing deeds were of the form, tenor, contents, and date of the copies taken from the Register of Tailzies, which was declared accordingly.

After this period, from 1762, the Balquhain family deeds were in the possession of David Orme, writer in Edinburgh, agent for Peter Leslie Grant, twentieth Baron of Balquhain, after whose death they passed into the hands of Mr. Colquhoun Grant, W.S., who was agent for John Leslie, twenty-second Baron of Balquhain. In 1778 an inventory of writs of the Barony of Balquhain, etc., belonging to John Leslie, Esq. of Balquhain, found in the repositories of the deceased Colquhoun Grant, Clerk to the Signet, was delivered up by Charles Grant, ensign in the 55th Regiment of Foot, his eldest son and general disponee, to Isaac Grant, Clerk to the Signet, agent for the said John Leslie. This inventory contains 1010 writs, charters, and family documents, and fourteen bundles of miscellaneous papers. In a letter, dated at Edinburgh 10th March 1790, Mr. Isaac Grant wrote to John Leslie, twenty-second Baron of Balquhain—"I have got your writings, and they will require a house to keep them properly. I shall take as good care of them as I can." After the death of Mr. Isaac Grant, a Mr. John Leslie, W.S., Edinburgh, appears to have been agent for the Balquhain estates. In a letter to John Leslie, twenty-second Baron of Balquhain, dated at Edinburgh 3d February 1796, he says—"I shall adhere to your instructions in getting your writings and papers agreeable to an inventory which I understand was made of them."

In 1809 Mr. James Mackenzie, W.S., was agent for the Balquhain estates. In a letter to John Leslie of Balquhain, dated at Edinburgh 3d October 1809, he says—"I have got the charter-box containing your titles." After this period the Balquhain writs, charters, etc., passed into the hands of various agents. In January 1840, Mr. Innes, of Mackenzie and Innes, W.S., Edinburgh, told Colonel Leslie, twenty-sixth Baron of Balquhain, that he was pretty certain that they had a quantity of Balquhain papers in a vault, and that he would have them searched out. But unfortunately Mr. Innes died soon afterwards; and Mr. Mackenzie, on Colonel Leslie applying to him in November 1841, said that the Balquhain papers in his hands had some considerable time previously been sent to Sir Charles Gordon and Mackay, W.S., Edinburgh, in order to be sent to Aberdeen. From the long lawsuits in which the family were engaged, and the frequent change of agents, many ancient charters, writs, and other papers belonging to the Balquhain family, are not now to be found, and no account can be got of them.

XXVII.

WALTER, FIRST COUNT LESLIE.

DISPOSITIONS contained in the ENTAIL executed by WALTER, Count Leslie, registered 27th April 1667, the Wednesday after St. Mark's, in the Register Office of the Kingdom of Bohemia at Prague, in the Instrument-Book No. 263, sub litera M, p. 26.

HAVING received from his present ruling Majesty, Leopold I., the permission to make an Entail or Fidei Commissum familiae perpetuum, I therefore make the following dispositions.

Pro primo. That my Estate Neustadt, which I got as a donation from the Emperor Ferdinand III., with all belonging to it, in the Kingdom of Bohemia ;

Pro secundo. The Estate Pettau, in the Dukedom of Styria, which I purchased myself, with all that belongs to it, should be subject to a perpetual entail or Fidei Commissum, and that the succession is to take place in the following manner.

As the Almighty has not blessed me with heirs of my own body, I hereby name, although Cum onere Fidei Commissi, my beloved nephew, James Leslie, eldest son of my brother, Alexander Leslie of Balquhain, in such manner that after my death, all may immediately belong to him—estates, jewels, gold and silver plate, furniture, bonds, &c., that he may enjoy the whole all his lifetime ; and after his lifetime to leave all without the least alienation or diminution, estates, goods, all what I may get, to his eldest son, and failing him, to his grandson; it being understood always conforming to the quality of the Jus primogeniti magistratus or Fidei Commissi; and therefore, all my nephews, the said James Leslie's male descendants, with perpetual exclusion of heirs female, shall succeed hereafter.

Should it happen that my nephew, James Leslie, does not survive me, or that, although he did enjoy my heritage, he might die without male descendants, in that case I institute as heir my brother's second son, Patrick Leslie; and if he be not alive at that time, then his eldest son, or second, or third, each in succession, with all his male descendants after the order and succession, with all the same rights and prerogatives that are mentioned in behalf of my nephew, James Leslie.

Should it ever happen that my brother's line became extinct, and no more male heir existing, then I confer all my Fidei Commiss fortune to the eldest son of Prince Dietrichstein's house (to whom I am related by my wife, and much indebted for many favours), Cum eodem onere fidei Commissi. My heritage shall be united with Prince Dietrichstein's fidei Commiss, and be inherited by the male descendants of the same name and line of the late Prince Maximilian Dietrichstein with perpetual exclusion of the female descendants, they being excluded also in Prince Dietrichstein's fidei Commiss, with the distinction however, that what concerns my present dispositio fideicommissaria et deficiente agnatione, may not extend either to the female descendants of Prince Dietrichstein, or to the Archbishopric of Prague, or to the Archbishopric of Olmutz.

But in the case that all male descendants of the above Prince Dietrichstein's line become extinct, all my heritage shall fall to the descendants of my nephew, James Leslie, without distinction whether they are male or female. Failing them, the other female descendants of his brother shall succeed to the heritage, and so it shall end, and it shall be left to the free will of the first successors of the female line to dispose the heritage to whom or however they may please.

But as long as any of my brother's descendants of the name of Leslie are in possession of the Fidei Commiss, it is my command and will that, in case the possessor is not a Count, because I might not obtain this dignity for all the branches of the family, he should make application to his Imperial Majesty for the title of Count, and also for permission to wear my arms. Otherwise, he shall be unable to succeed; and in case he does not comply with this injunction within the term of one year, unless unforeseen events prevent him, the next agnate who has the title of Count shall have the right to exclude him from the succession.

In case any of my heirs change his religion or enter into a convent, he shall not make any claim to the Fidei Commiss, and the next in succession shall be heir.

Should, what God forbid, this my Fidei Commiss ever fall to an Idiot, or to one unable to manage any business, he may be considered as not being alive. His maintenance shall be given to him, and the person who would succeed to him after his death, is to get the heritage.

In case the Fidei Commiss should ever become the right of one under age, the person who after his death would have the next claim, is to take the Curatel of the Fidei Commiss, after having first given the necessary security, and taken an exact inventory. He is bound to administer it faithfully, and to endeavour to make the most of it, so that considerable sums of money may be saved and other estates purchased, which latter would not be considered as Fidei Commiss, but as allodial, and used for the maintenance of widows, and for the establishment of the daughters, and the younger brothers who never can succeed.

And in order that the Tutor may have benefit for his trouble, and tutorship, he is to get, in conformity with the Bohemian laws, out of the extrades of my Fidei Commiss fortune the sixth part, which he may enjoy unmolested.

And although I enjoin all my successors (what is likewise forbidden by the dispositions fideicommissariae) never to diminish the smallest part of the fidei Commiss, nor to pawn, mortgage, nor to contract any debts on it, yet, because it is necessary that my successors unite themselves with families of high rank and also to establish their daughters, I therefore permit my heirs that at their marriage they may take six thousand florins, never more, as marriage expenses, according to the custom of the country, with one and a half the sum, and then ten thousand florins instead of Dot, and thus altogether twenty-five thousand florins.

APPENDIX

He may settle on the widow three thousand florins per annum, besides lodgings : on a daughter six thousand florins, besides her convenient fitting out. All this may be secured on the Fidei Commiss, if there is no allodial fortune.

All my heirs and successors are forbidden to deduct quartum, sive ex S^a. Trebelliano, sive ex lege falidea, and should any one of my heirs or successors attempt to change this my last will, to alter the clear intent and dispute about it, he shall lose immediately his right, and the next following heir shall succeed.

I enjoin every one of the possessors of the fidei Commiss to take good care of his younger brothers, to give them as much assistance as he can without overburdening the fidei Commiss, to bring them up in virtuous and noble sentiments, and to assist them in whatever profession and way of living they may incline to.

1692. James, second Count Leslie, in 1692, made an addition to the entail executed by Count Walter, adding to the estate—

1688. The amelioration of Count Walter Leslie's Fidei Commiss estate by the Wine tax ; the capital of twenty thousand florins laid out at interest with the Imperial Government in May 1688, for lessening the burden of the annual taxes ; the new gardens planted about the house belonging to the fidei commiss ; the immoveable furniture ; all the silver plate specified in a paper in the wardrobe ; all the tapestries ; and all the money belonging to the estate.

TRIAL of GILDEROY and his "Complices."

GILDEROY, or, as the word may be translated, "the red lad," has been celebrated in the plaintive ballad which takes its name from the hero of it; but, notwithstanding the romance which has thus been thrown about him, he appears to have been a mere robber and cattle-lifter. A wonderful account of his adventures is given in the "Lives and Exploits of English Highwaymen, Pirates, and Robbers," by Captain Charles Johnson, p. 56.

DUGUID OF AUCHINHOVE.

EPITAPH on the LAIRD of AUCHINHOVE, his MOTHER, and CHAPLAIN.

IN twice three days all under one same roof—
Priest, Laird, Old Lady, died at Auchinhuif.
Three such distinguished worthies death has snatched,
As in their stations rarely could be matched.
Of Seaton's noble blood the Priest was come,
On orbs above his mind was fixed, and free
From earthly ties, so heavenly aye was he.
His life was chaste—religious—full of zeal,

Great pity 'twas he died, he lived so well.
 Brave Auchinhuif, the Laird, lived wond'rous fast,
 So next the Priest, he was the next that passed.
 I'll style him man—man every inch—was man
 For strength and manhood—match him if you can—
 Man, both of head and heart and hand together—
 Man, who feared God, and feared no other.
 His faith called for the Priest before he dee ;
 Priest came in time, then stepped into eternity.
 Such blessed example of his dying Priest,
 Revived his soul with hopes to be the next,
 And follow him who bravely led the way.
 To eternal bliss—so just next very day
 At self same hour, the Priest had then expired, Brave Auchinhuif got what he most desired.
 The Virtuous Lady spun out her vital thread
 Eighty one years, she, saint-like lived and died.
 She wished no longer to outlive her son,
 So got her wish five short days after him.
 Thus buried lie those worthies three together—
 The Priest, the Laird, and Lady, the Laird's mother.
 May those they've left to fill the vacant stage

HASSOP HALL.

HASSOP HALL, Derbyshire, the seat of Colonel Charles Leslie, K.H., of Balquhain, is a handsome mansion, situated on a fine acclivity, in a well-wooded domain, which rises to a considerable elevation to the west. The hall is closely embowered with luxuriant park-trees, surrounded with tasteful pleasure-grounds and beautiful terraces, adorned with choice flowers and valuable shrubs. The conservatories and vineries, which are arranged on terraces, from their elevated position have a pleasing effect. Near the entrance to the hall a handsome Catholic chapel was erected in 1816 by the Earl of Newburgh. It is a substantial stone building in the Grecian style of architecture. The interior fittings are of the most chaste and costly description. The altar is composed of various marbles, elaborately worked with foliage and scrolls brought from Naples, and the altar-piece is adorned with an exquisite painting of the Crucifixion by Caracci. There is a good organ erected by Lincoln of London; also a handsome marble monument to the memory of John Thomas, seventh Earl of Newburgh, who died 22d May 1833, and another to the memory of Dorothy, ninth Countess of Newburgh. In the mansion-house are many fine paintings by the first masters, including works of Caracci, Domenichino, Raffael, Guido, Sacchi, Guercino, Canaletti, Watteau, and Snyders, one of the latter being his finest work in England; also many family portraits, including that of Colonel Eyre, who garrisoned Hassop Hall for the king in 1643; of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; and of James, last Earl of Derwentwater, by Sir Godfrey Kneller.

The manor of Hassop formerly belonged to the Foljambes. The heiress of Sir Godfrey Foljambe brought it in the fourteenth century to Sir Robert Plumpton of Yorkshire. His grandson, Sir Robert, sold Hassop in 1498 to Catherine, widow of Stephen Eyre, a younger son of Eyre of Padley. Francis Eyre, the direct descendant of Stephen Eyre, succeeded as Earl of Newburgh on the death of Anthony James, fifth Earl, without issue, in 1814. He died 23d October 1827, and was succeeded by his eldest son, John Thomas, seventh Earl, who died without issue 22d May 1833, and was succeeded by his only brother, Francis, eighth Earl. Francis, eighth Earl of Newburgh, died without issue 15th October 1852, and was succeeded in his titles and estates by his sister Dorothy, ninth Countess of Newburgh, who was born 13th July 1788, and married 21st July 1836, Colonel Charles Leslie, K.H., of Balquhain. She died without issue 22d November 1853, and left all her estates in Derbyshire, Northumberland, Gloucester, and Sussex, to her husband, Colonel Charles Leslie. She was buried in the Leslie family vault, in the chapel of St. Ninian at Fetternear, where a handsome marble monumental tomb was erected to her memory by Colonel Leslie.

SLINDON HALL.

SLINDON HALL, Sussex, is the seat of Colonel Charles Leslie, K.H., of Balquhain, who succeeded to it in right of his late wife, Dorothy Eyre, Countess of Newburgh, who was the last heir remaining to her cousin, Anthony James, Earl of Newburgh. The manor-house is delightfully situated upon a commanding eminence in a finely-wooded park, commanding magnificent views of the sea, as well as a large track of fertile country, extending as far as the Isle of Wight to the west, and Worthing to the east. The pleasure-grounds are extensive, and are laid out with great taste, and kept in the highest order. The beech-groves in the park are singularly beautiful, producing trees of great height and dimensions. In the manor-house is a splendid hall, in various parts of which are emblazoned the arms of the Kempes, the Derwentwaters, and the Newburghs. In the public rooms are many fine paintings, including the celebrated one of the Beggar of Antwerp, besides numerous family portraits by eminent artists.

The lands of Slyndon were given by King Henry I. to St. Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury. The manor-place was first erected in the middle of the thirteenth century by an Archbishop of Canterbury as a summer residence, and was till lately a "peculiar" of the See of Canterbury. Cardinal Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, died at Slindon in 1228. The estate of Slindon was alienated to King Henry VIII. by Cranmer in 1543, and was granted by King Edward IV. to Sir Thomas Palmer in 1553. It was resumed by Queen Mary, and was then granted, and confirmed by her and the constituted authorities, to Anthony Kempe, third son of Sir William Kempe of Ollantigh, Kent, in the second year of her reign, 1555. The estate of Slindon remained in the Kempe family till the death of Anthony Kempe in 1753, who settled it upon his eldest daughter Barbara, the wife of James Bartholomew, Earl of Newburgh, the son of Charlotte, Countess of Newburgh, and Charles Radcliffe, brother of the Earl of Derwentwater, who was beheaded for his ill-fated attachment to the cause of the Stuarts. The Kempes almost entirely rebuilt the mansion-house of Slindon, accommodating the interior arrangements to the taste of their different ages. The family always remained faithful to the Catholic religion, and they had a Catholic chapel fitted up in the upper part of the house, where mass was celebrated secretly during the times of persecution. In 1865 a Catholic church was erected in the village of Slindon.

APPENDIX No. LXVI.

ENTAIL OF THE BALQUHAIN ESTATES.

1692-1700.

JOHN EDWARD, Count Leslie, twenty-fourth Baron of Balquhain, incurred a large amount of debt to various creditors. These creditors called in question the validity of the entails of the estates made by Patrick, Count Leslie, fifteenth Baron, in 1692 and 1700. They commenced legal proceedings against Count John Edward Leslie for the reduction of the entails. To avoid the necessity of each creditor making his claim separately, and to avoid details, all the creditors agreed that one of their number, Mr. Henry Patterson, manager of the North of Scotland Bank, Aberdeen, should act as pursuer in their behalf, and Count John Edward Leslie became the defender.

1843.

A summons of adjudication against John Edward, Count Leslie, was issued, dated Outer House, November 18th, 1843, at the instance of the said Henry Patterson, for the nominal sum of £1000. By this summons Henry Patterson sought to have the estate of Balquhain adjudged from Count John Edward Leslie, the defender, and all others having or pretending to have right thereto, and decerned and declared to pertain and belong to the pursuer. Count Leslie pleaded in defence that the deed of tailzie of 1700, in connection with the deed of tailzie of 1692, was a strict and complete entail according to the provisions of the Act of 1685, chap. 22, by which act a tailzie executed in obedience to its provisions is declared to be real and effectual not only against the contraveners and their heirs, but also against their creditors, comprisers, adjudgers, and other singular successors whatsoever; and that therefore the estate so entailed was not liable to be adjudged, and could not be affected or carried off by the debt or deed of any of the heirs succeeding thereto, in prejudice of the substitutes.

To these defences the pursuer replied that the deed of 1700 executed by Count Patrick Leslie, whereby he revoked the tailzied destination in the deed of 1692, and introduced a new order of succession, under which the defender took as heir, containing no fetters or restrictions of entail, nor clauses irritant or resolute, was insufficient of itself to create any valid or effectual entail in terms of the statute of 1685; that the obligation to make resignation in favour of the heirs called by the deed of 1700, as well as the procuratory of resignation itself in that deed, being unqualified by reference to any fetters or limitations of entail, authorised a resignation in fee-simple in favour of the heirs called by the new destination, and consequently there was no warrant for introducing into the title subsequently made up, any such fetters or limitations, and that the same were ineffectual at least against creditors onerously contracting with the heir in possession; that even if the procuratory of resignation in the deed of 1700 were held to import that resignation was to be made under a reference to the fetters of the old entail, so far as not altered by the new deed, such a reference would not constitute an effectual entail against creditors, inasmuch as the prohibitions and restrictions of entail, and clauses irritant and resolute, were not inserted in the procuratory of resignation, nor in any part of the deed, in terms of the statute of 1685; and that more particularly is such an entail by reference ineffectual where the deed of 1700, and the subsequent and relative deed of 1707, not only introduce a new destination, but also alter to a certain extent the conditions and limitations of the tailzie of 1692, to which the reference was supposed to be made.

1700. Count Leslie replied that the deed of tailzie of 1700 was, according to its terms, and in connection with and by reference to the deed of tailzie of 1692, a strict and complete entail, and was not rendered invalid or ineffectual even against onerous creditors by the introduction of a new destination of heirs, or by the alteration of the conditions or limitations of the tailzie of 1692, as these new destinations or alterations were introduced and made in virtue of a reserved power in the deed of 1692, which deed, except in so far as it was altered or qualified by the deed of 1700, was incorporated with, and with all its fetters made part of the entail of 1700.
- 1692.
1843. The Lord Ordinary, Lord Wood, 5th December 1843, appointed intimation of this summons of adjudication to be made to all the other creditors of John Edward, Count Leslie. On the 13th February 1844, the Lord Ordinary, with the consent of the counsel for the parties, held the record closed.
- 1844.
1844. John Edward, Count Leslie, died 19th August 1844, and Henry Patterson obtained a summons of transference against James Michael Leslie, Count John Edward Leslie's successor, 10th December 1844. James Michael Leslie, 8th January 1845, objected that he was not personally liable to the pursuer for any debt incurred by the late Count Leslie, as he did not represent the said Count in any other character than that of heir of tailzie and provision under the fetters of a strict entail. On the 18th February 1845, the Lord Ordinary having considered the closed records in the original action of adjudication, and the action of transference thereof, with the revised cases for the parties, transferred the original action of adjudication against the said James Michael Leslie, and decerned. He conjoined the said two actions, and in the conjoined actions, he repelled the defences stated in the action of adjudication, and adjudged, decerned, and declared, in terms of the summons of adjudication, reserving to the said James Michael Leslie all objections to his not being liable for the debts of the late John Edward, Count Leslie, beyond the value of the estate of Balquhain; and he found the pursuer entitled to expenses.
- 1845.

James Michael Leslie reclaimed against this interlocutor, 20th February 1845, and on the 1st July 1845 the following decision was pronounced:—

Patterson v. Leslie.

1st July 1845.—The Lords, having considered the reclaiming note for James Michael Leslie, Esq., with the revised cases, and whole conjoined processes—Refuse the prayer of the said reclaiming note, and adhere to the interlocutor of the Lord Ordinary reclaimed against: Find the pursuer entitled to additional expenses: Appoint an account of expenses to be lodged, and remit to the auditor to tax the same and to report: And of new adjudge, decern, and declare, in terms of the conclusions of the summons of adjudication.

D. BOYLE, I.P.D.

Sig^d 2 July.

In consequence of this decision the entails were found to be invalid and ineffectual, and James Michael Leslie became liable for the debts of John Edward, Count Leslie, as burdens on the Balquhain estates, which he could have sold to pay those debts.

NOTE.

Note.

THE three ancient charters given in the first volume of this work, Appendix, Nos. I. III. and VI., are important documents, which prove the first four generations of the original family of Leslie from 1067. These charters are written in black letter, each on a small piece of parchment, and they are now in the possession of the Countess of Rothes. I was anxious to get facsimile copies of these charters for this work, and I was promised photographed copies of them, but I regret to say that this promise has been retracted. However, as I had access to these charters some years ago, I trust that the text given will be found correct.

C. L.

Colonel Leslie's manuscripts of this work were most carefully transcribed and prepared for publication by the Rev. Mr. Wilson, Catholic clergyman at Fetternear, who afterwards revised the proof-sheets for the printer.
