Foreword

This little volume, history of the Samuel Kirkpatrick family, who so many years ago, braved the hardships and dangers of the wilds to journey westward from Pennsylvania to make a new home in Ohio. We should think of the many hardships endured by this pioneer family, their limited faculties, trials and tribulations.

This history has taken several years to compile, together with a vast amount of labor to which I dedicate to you and yours. It would be impossible to have the genealogy in this book up-to-date, owing to the many changes, however, it was complete when data was taken on each family. Blank pages have been inserted for correction and additions.

The greatest stress, in completing this volume, has been placed on the early history, which I believe will be the most interesting to the present generation. About a few members of the early families, it has been impossible to secure complete information, hence we were compelled to go to press with just meager material.

We have the deepest appreciation for those who so diligently labored to gather material to make possible the printing of this book. It is hoped that this history will unite the members of this family more closely; doing deeds of kindness for those who need help.

“Scatter a little sunshine, scatter it far and near;

So many hearts are broken, so many lives are drear;

Scatter a little sunshine, a little will go so far,

Scatter a little sunshine, scatter it where you are.”

Backward, turn backward. O Time in your flight,
 Make me a child again, just for tonight;
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
 Take me again to your heart as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
 Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair,
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep—
 Rock me to sleep mother—rock me to sleep.

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!
 I am so weary of toil and of tears,—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain,—
 Take them and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay,—
 Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away;
Weary of sowing for others to reap;—
 Rock me to sleep, mother,—rock me to sleep!

Early History

Many years ago, there lived in Ireland a family by the name of Patrick and one in Scotland by the name of Kirk. A few miles of water separated them, and after a time the Patrick families journeyed across the narrow channel in sailing vessels to the shores of Scotland, where they united with the Kirk families to form a border clan in Dampiershire, near Solway Firth, Scotland. In the uniting of these two families, they elected a chief who lived in Clovernook Castle, which is still in a good state of preservation. The date these families were united is unknown, but it is believed to have been several hundred years ago. The clan, now named Kirkpatrick, was large and wealthy, so part of them lived in Ireland and part in Scotland. Before the reign of Henry VIII, the Kirkpatrick families embraced the Catholic faith as their religion. Henry VIII had so many marriages and divorces that they were not approved of by the Pope, and in time caused a break between Church and State, and most of the subjects of Henry VIII embraced a new religious order; the Presbyterian Church. The Kirkpatrick families were among the first to join the new order, and they still belonged to it when they sailed for America. Samuel and his family were members of the same Church at Collinsville, Ohio, which was erected several years after they emigrated to Ohio. Samuel was married in Pennsylvania about 1802, and in 1809 started westward with his family. His brother John, at about the same time, came to Ohio, but did not live long after arriving at his new home.

Early History

The early history of the United States is a story of exploration, discovery, and the struggle for independence. It begins with the first European settlers who arrived on the eastern coast of North America in the early 17th century. These settlers, including the Pilgrims and the Jamestown colonists, established permanent European settlements in the New World. The early years were marked by hardship and conflict with the Native American populations. The struggle for independence from British rule culminated in the American Revolution, which resulted in the United States becoming a sovereign nation. The early history of the United States is a testament to the courage and determination of the early settlers and the founding fathers.

It is not known where he settled or anything about his family, or where he is buried. On arrival in Wayne Township, Butler County, Samuel decided to make this his home, which was one and one-half mile east of Collinsville, Ohio. A few settlers had come to this section of the State at this time, but his nearest neighbor was miles away. Fort Hamilton was 12 miles to the south on the banks of the Great Miami River, and his nearest trading post. Fort Hamilton then was a military post for protection against the Indians. On arrival at this new home he at once began the task of building a log house for his family, which he did, a small cabin, about 18 feet wide and about 24 feet in length, and built at the junction of two streams at the foot of a hill. The door and windows faced the south, and a stone chimney was built on the east. This cabin was torn away about 1886. Samuel and his family lived in this cabin for several years when a new home, a two story log structure was erected on a hill about two hundred feet south of his first home. About three hundred feet east of his new home he built a large log barn that was in use until a few years ago. The house is still standing and occupied; it has been remodeled but the original log part is still in use.

When Samuel settled on this tract it was a wilderness, wooded with beech, oak, walnut, hickory, poplar and sugar trees which he cleared with the help of his few neighbors, rolling the logs in huge piles and having a community bonfire, which lasted for several days, and in this way cleared the most of his 172 acre tract, which he purchased from the United States Government. This tract of land is located just one half mile west of "The Old Trace Road" made by General

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the success of any business and for the protection of the interests of all parties involved. The text outlines the various methods and systems that can be used to collect, store, and retrieve financial data, highlighting the benefits of each approach. It also discusses the role of technology in modern record-keeping, noting how digital systems can improve efficiency and reduce the risk of errors. The document concludes by stressing the need for regular audits and reviews to ensure that the records are up-to-date and accurate.

The second part of the document provides a detailed overview of the accounting process. It begins by defining the key terms and concepts used in accounting, such as assets, liabilities, and equity. It then describes the steps involved in the accounting cycle, from identifying transactions to preparing financial statements. The text also discusses the importance of internal controls and the role of the accounting department in a business. Finally, it offers some practical advice on how to implement an effective accounting system, including the selection of software and the training of staff.

Anthony Wayne in 1792, from Fort Hamilton to Greenville, Ohio, in pursuit of the Indians.

The furnishings of the first log cabin of this pioneer family were very meager. Their worldly goods were just what they could transport in their covered wagon. After their first cabin was erected, they made their beds from poles; their fireplace gave them warmth; their cooking was accomplished by a swinging crane above the fireplace. Oiled paper was used for window glass. After building his home, and as his family became larger, a huge stone oven was built a few feet from the house, where they baked and roasted meat. His wife spun the wool to make all the clothing they needed. Their home was lighted with candles, the molds they used are still in possession of one of the family, also their fireplace tongs and tin lantern supposed to be used on their trip from Pennsylvania, also the sickle used to cut their grain by hand.

The opportunity for an education of Samuel's children was very limited and it is presumed that most of their learning was given by the parents. It was several years after he settled in this section that a log school was erected. It was located about three miles northeast of his home and the children walked this distance night and morning. In those days the children did not attend school regularly; they were needed for work on the farm.

Benjamin Kirkpatrick

Benjamin Kirkpatrick, the father of Samuel, is the earliest relative we have any record of in this country and who lived in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. It is not known if he was one of the members who came from Ireland many years ago. It is not known the number of children in his family, but four survived him at his death in 1826; Rebecca Samuel, Polly and Benjamin Jr. Another son, John, came to Ohio with or about the time Samuel emigrated. He died in Ohio before the death of his father.

Benjamin fought with the Colonies in the Revolutionary War, and has a Revolutionary War marker. He is buried in the Poke Run Cemetery, in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania.

Samuel Kirkpatrick Sr.

Samuel Kirkpatrick, son of Benjamin and Jane Kirkpatrick was born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, December 7, 1779. He married in Pennsylvania and had four children when he emigrated to Ohio in 1809. He settled on a tract of land in Wayne Township, Butler County, near Collinsville. Samuel was a very jolly man, always ready to play a joke on someone. Barbara came from a family of slave owners, she was rather stern and not very tolerant. Samuel spent the rest of his life on this farm, rearing a large family and died at the age of seventy years on October 27, 1849.

Daughters of American Revolution

Thru the untiring efforts of Mrs. A. J. Wickard of Camden, Indiana, who secured the Revolutionary War Record of Benjamin Kirkpatrick, it was made possible for herself and other direct descendants of this family to become eligible for membership in the exclusive D. A. R. In 1937 Mrs. Wickard and granddaughter, Miss Betty Wickard, were made members of the "Charles Carroll Chapter, D. A. R."

A vote of thanks is due Mrs. Wickard for her splendid work in securing this important data for this history.

Family

Benjamin Kirkpatrick

First child of Samuel and Barbara Kirkpatrick, was born on September 3, 1803, in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania. He emigrated to Ohio with his parents in 1809. He went to Carroll County, Indiana and entered Government land and purchased it on October 2, 1831. He married Hannah McCain on March 11, 1830 and with his wife and two children moved from Butler County, Ohio, in 1833 and settled fourteen miles south of Logansport, Indiana. He and his family were supposed to be the first white settlers in Carrollton Township. When they came, there were plenty of Indians. They were fond of corn bread and had to keep in hiding from them at all times. When Benjamin and his neighbors journeyed to Delphi, to pay their taxes, which required two days to make the trip, the Indians knowing the men folks were away, would come to the house and dance before the fireplace until late at night, then sleep on the floor until morning, and leaving without molesting the family.

Benjamin died on September 30, 1880, at the age of seventy-seven years.

Beethoven's 10th Symphony

The 10th Symphony, Op. 93, was composed by Ludwig van Beethoven in 1812. It is a symphony in D major, Op. 93, and is the last of his symphonies. The work is in four movements and is notable for its brevity and its use of a variety of instruments, including the English horn and the oboe. The first movement is in 3/4 time and is marked "Allegro". The second movement is in 3/4 time and is marked "Andante". The third movement is in 3/4 time and is marked "Allegro". The fourth movement is in 3/4 time and is marked "Allegro". The work is a masterpiece of Beethoven's late style and is one of the most important works of the Romantic era.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the effective management of any organization. This section outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data, highlighting the need for consistency and reliability in the information gathered.

The second part of the document focuses on the implementation of these practices. It provides a detailed overview of the steps involved in setting up a robust record-keeping system. This includes identifying the key areas of the organization that require attention, selecting appropriate tools and technologies, and training staff members to ensure they are equipped with the necessary skills to handle the data effectively.

The final part of the document addresses the challenges associated with record-keeping and offers practical solutions to overcome them. It discusses the common pitfalls that organizations often fall into, such as data redundancy and lack of standardization, and provides strategies to avoid these issues. The document concludes by reiterating the long-term benefits of a well-maintained record-keeping system, including improved decision-making and operational efficiency.

The document is a comprehensive guide to record-keeping, providing valuable insights and practical advice for organizations of all sizes. It is a must-read for anyone responsible for the management of organizational data.

Members of this family have taken as their life work various professions. A great many of them are farmers, while others are lawyers, doctors, nurses, miners, contractors, teachers and many other lines of business.

Roscoe Kirkpatrick, son of Charles M., was First Sergeant in the World War, and was killed in France, October 31, 1918. His body was returned home and buried at Burlington, Indiana.

Robert Kirkpatrick, son of Benjamin, was a Civil War soldier. He being a Sergeant in the 24th Battery Light Artillery, organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis, November 29, 1862, and mustered out, August 3, 1865. His Battery marched with army of General Burnside, took part in siege of Knoxville and Lookout Mountain. His Battery went as far south as Atlanta with General Sherman on his march to the sea.

Orion E. Kirkpatrick, son of John Jr. has followed the activities of mining for almost half a century.

Otis Kirkpatrick, second son of John Jr. has lived in Indianapolis for over thirty years where he has been engaged in contracting on a large scale. He is known to be very generous in contributing to all charitable and benevolent causes.

EIGHTH

Second child of Samuel and Barbara Kirkpatrick was born on August 17, 1814, near Collinsville, Ohio. Very little is known about his early life or whom he married, only that her name was Mary. He died young, also his children to which four were born to this union. He died on June 27, 1848, at the age of thirty-four years. Mary, his wife lost three children and her husband within two years, and her last child seventeen years later. It is unknown what became of Mary after the death of her family. All are buried in the cemetery at Collinsville, Ohio.

Elliott Kirkpatrick

Eleventh child of Samuel and Barbara Kirkpatrick, was born November 30, 1819 near Collinsville, Ohio. He was married to Mary Burns on September 22, 1846. She was employed at this time at the Kirkpatrick homestead, but the friendship of Elliott for Mary was not approved by Barbara, because she was a poor girl.

Immediately after the marriage they went to Burlington, Carroll County, Indiana, where he operated a grocery for twelve years, his wife baked and canned for the store. He purchased two farms near Burlington, but being afflicted with heart trouble he moved to one and rented the other. In 1863 he purchased 120 acres near Wheeling, Indiana.

He united with the Cumberlain Presbyterian Church a short time before his death, where his wife had been a member for many years.

He died on June 17, 1874 at the age of fifty-five years and buried in the Sharon cemetery, south of Wheeling, Indiana.

General Principles

The general principles of the law of contract are based on the idea of freedom of contract. This means that parties to a contract are free to agree on the terms of their contract, provided that the contract is not illegal, immoral, or against public policy. The law of contract is concerned with the enforcement of these agreements. It is a branch of the law that deals with the legal consequences of the breach of a contract. The law of contract is based on the principle of autonomy of the individual. This means that individuals are free to enter into contracts with others, provided that they are of legal age and of sound mind. The law of contract is also based on the principle of reciprocity. This means that each party to a contract has a duty to perform their obligations under the contract. If one party fails to perform their obligations, the other party may sue for damages. The law of contract is a branch of the law that is constantly evolving. It is influenced by changes in society and the economy. The law of contract is a branch of the law that is essential for the functioning of a free society.

“LEST WE FORGET”

May we pause for a brief period in memory of the many descendants who have gone before.

May we close this volume with an eulogy to our departed relatives.

Their suffering ended with the day
Yet lived they at its close
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.

But when the sun, in all his state,
Illumed the eastern skies,
They passed through glory's morning-gate
And walked in Paradise!
