INTRODUCTION.

This work has been prepared, not especially “for the purpose of supplying a want long felt by the reading public,” but for the purpose of perpetuating the recollection of our ancestors. The desire to be remembered after death is universal.

“How frightful the grave! how deserted and drear,” if we were to be immediately forgotten after being placed there, and, particularly, be forgotten by those who, by ties of blood are the nearest and dearest to us. That the memory of the dead might the longer be cherished, and kept from obliteration it has long been the custom for the friends of the departed to erect monuments of marble to mark the last resting-place of those who have nothing more than preceded them. This custom has become a duty, consequently our burying-grounds are studded with marble slabs and shafts. There is another way of perpetuating the memory of the dead—by literarum monumenta, in the form of biographies. These are co-eval with the former class of monuments as far as the present age is concerned, for both have existed from “a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.” Both these classes can exist at the same time, for the one marks the last resting-place, while the other gives some idea of the deceased, but the objects of both are the same.

This work is arranged in seven Sections. The first section contains biographical sketches of William Marshall and his five sons and one daughter. The second section is composed of sketches of the descendants of John Marshall, the oldest son of William. The third is composed of sketches of the descendants of James Marshall. The fourth gives accounts of the descendants of Margaret (Marshall) McGaughey. The fifth tells of the descendants of William Marshall, Jr. The sixth gives sketches of the descendants of Archibald Marshall. The seventh contains a history of the descendants of Samuel Marshall, the youngest son of William. There is also an Appendix containing a few facts that are closely connected with our subject.

The author has endeavored to make this work essentially a FAMILY HISTORY, attractive and instructive. He has given the statistics which it contains as accurately as is in his power, and though the liability for mistake in such a work is very great, it is thought there are few in this. With these few observations it is presented to the public.

WILLIAM MARSHALL.

The man whose name stands at the head of this sketch was born about 1722 on the Emerald Isle. Of his ancestors nothing can be learned, but the object of this volume is to give an account of his descendants. He was probably an uncle of Mrs. Isabella (Marshall) Graham, of New York City, who in the early part of the present century was connected with, and a noted worker in, the missionary societies of this country. William Marshall, when a young man, emigrated to Scotland, where he met Elizabeth Armstrong, a native of that country, who afterwards became his wife. They were married about 1748, and shortly afterward emigrated to America. They settled in the southern part of the Province of Pennsylvania, about 60 miles northwest from Baltimore, Md., near where Marsh Creek crosses the Pennsylvania and Maryland line. This locality was known as Conecogheague Settlement and is now included in Adams county, Pa. Baltimore, Md., was their trading point, according to statements of their grandson, Joseph Marshall, late of Belknap, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall lived in Conecogheague Settlement until their family were all born. They had six children, whose names were John, James, Margaret, William, Archibald and Samuel. About the year 1783, William Marshall, together with a part of their family, removed to Westmoreland (now Indiana) county, Pa., where their sons, John and James, had migrated several years before, but having been driven away by the Indians, John and his family returned to Conecogheague and James, who was then unmarried, stopped at Sewickley Settlement. William settled on a tract of land on Blackley's creek, now included in the township of Conemaugh, Indiana county, Pa., where he and his wife resided during the remainder of their lives. He died in 1796, and his wife survived him ten years. Hence she died in 1806. Below is a copy of the will of William Marshall :

JOHN MARSHALL, the eldest son of William and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Marshall, was born near Marsh creek, in what is now Adams county, Pa., in 1750. He lived in that neighborhood until after his marriage, which was April 16, 1776, to Jane Scott, a native of Ireland. They soon afterward removed to what is now Indiana, Co., Pa., but were not allowed to live there long, on account of the hostility of the Indians. They returned to Conecogheague Settlement, from whence they had come, and remained there until the danger was past, when they again migrated to the West and settled, where they had formerly settled, in Westmoreland (now Indiana) county, Pa. They had been absent about seven years. A part of the farm on which they settled and lived during the greater part of their lives, is now owned by their grandson, Elder Marshall, but it was a large tract and included several farms adjoining that now owned by Mr. Marshall. At another time Mr. John Marshall and family were compelled to flee on account of the Indians. They took refuge across the Conemaugh river, in Westmoreland county, and left some of their goods; among other things some corn, of which they became very much in need, Mr. Marshall set out with two horses to procure some of it. When he reached the Conemaugh he found the river full of slush ice and he was compelled to swim his horses through. Thus his clothing were wet and, the weather being cold, they were soon frozen, yet he could not have a fire until he reached his cabin, which was about five miles distant, and made one for himself. When night came on he was in his cabin shelling corn, when he imagined from the actions of his dog that there was some one outside, and, fearing it were Indians, he concluded it would be safer out in the woods than in the house; so, taking his gun, he went out, but did not wait long until he heard a panther cry. He decided that was the cause of the trouble, and returned to the cabin to finish his corn-shelling. Mr. Marshall died November 24, 1824. His wife died March 28, 1838. Their grandson, J. M. R. wrote of them: He, —“In stature about 5 feet, 10 inches, long visage, a little bald headed, very fair complexion, a member and ruling elder in the Presbyterian church at Ebenezer, a man of pure motives, always letting conscience be his guide as regarded his duties to God and his fellow-men, died as he lived a true Christian.” She, —“In stature low, very fair complexion, amiable in disposition, never manifesting anger or ill-temper, a member of the Presbyterian church, governed by an enlightened conscience, contented in life, calm and happy in death.” They are both buried at Ebenezer, Indiana Co., Pa. The children of Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall were nine in number, as follows: Elizabeth, William, Jane S., Margaret, John, Scott, James, Samuel and Mary. Section II will be composed of sketches of these nine and their descendants.

JAMES MARSHALL, the second son of William and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Marshall, was born in Conecoghague Settlement, now Adams county, Pa., in the year 1752. When a young man he migrated to the northward, and was for a short time in what is now Indiana county, Pa., but returned on account of Indian hostilities to Sewickley Settlement, in the southern part of Westmoreland county, Pa., where he married his first wife, Miss Elizabeth Whitesides, in 1785. She was a resident of Sewickley Settlement and was born in 1764. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall resided in this settlement until her death, which occurred in October, 1788. He then removed with his two daughters, Margaret and Elizabeth, to where his father and brothers lived, near Blackley's creek. He purchased a tract of about three hundred acres of land, which is situated in Young twp., Indiana county, Pa., and known as the Thomas Walker farm. Mr. Marshall married Margaret Thompson, in 1796. She was born April 13, 1764. Mr. Marshall, his wife and his two daughters, resided on the land which he had previously purchased during the remainder of his life. He died January 27, 1807. He was the father of only the two children, daughters, an account of whose descendants will be found in Section III. Mrs. Marshall, after the death of her husband, lived with step son-in-law, George McComb, until her death, October 2, 1832. She died near Glade Run, Armstrong county, Pa., and she is buried in the Glade Run Cemetery. James Marshall is buried at Ebenezer, Indiana county, Pa., and his first wife, Elizabeth, was buried in Sewickley Settlement.

MARGARET MARSHALL, the only daughter of William and Margaret (Armstrong) Marshall, was born in Conecogheague Settlement, in 1754, and lived there until she married Thomas McGaughey, in 1770. Mr. McGaughey was a native of Scotland and was born about 1746. He was the only one of that name who is known to have come to this country, with one exception, that is a Rev. McGaughey, a Presbyterian minister who came from Ireland a few years ago. This Rev. Mr. McGaughey informed J. M. McGaughey, of Dayton, Pa., who met him at a Presbyterian Synod, that a few generations back in his ancestry there were four brothers born in Ireland, two of whom remained in Ireland and the other two migrated to Scotland. He considered it very likely that J. M. McGaughey was a descendant of one of the latter two brothers since the Irish pronunciation of the name is still retained, and since his ancestor, Thomas McGaughey, came from Scotland. Thomas and Margaret McGaughey nee Marshall are the ancestors of the many families of McGaugheys in Armstrong, Indiana, and adjoining counties. Consequently, a history of the descendants of William Marshall includes these families. A few years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. McGaughey migrated to near the Loyalhanna river, Westmoreland county, where they resided on a farm until about 1808, when they removed to Indiana county, where they stopped but a short time, when they moved over into Armstrong county, to a farm which had previously been settled by their son, Alexander. This farm is now owned by Archibald McGaughey, a grandson of Thomas and Margaret, (see Sec. IV.) and is situated in Cowanshannock township, about two miles from Rural Village, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. McGaughey lived on this farm until their respective deaths. They were the parents of eight sons, whose names were, John, William, (who died when young), Thomas, Alexander, James, Archibald, Samuel and William. Sketches of these sons and their descendants will compose Section IV, of this volume.

WILLIAM MARSHALL, the third son of William and Margaret (Armstrong) Marshall, was born in Conecoghague Settlement, in what is now Adams county, Pa., June 3, 1756. He married Catherine Wilson in the year 1779. She was of the same locality and after their marriage they lived there for a short time, and then migrated to what is now Indiana county, Pa., and settled on a tract of land. This tract included what is now the farms of Christ. Shirley, Mrs. Black and John Earhart, in Conemaugh township. They lived on this land until 1803, when they sold it to his brother, Archibald, and removed to what afterwards became Glade Run Settlement, Armstrong county. Their son, Joseph, had preceded them, and made the first improvements, which consisted in clearing a field, where the Dayton Fair Grounds are now located, and building a cabin. These were the only improvements for miles around. Little did they think that they were clearing a site for a fair ground. In the barn of William Marshall was preached the first sermon ever preached in the neighborhood of Dayton, and he was one of the first elders of the first Presbyterian church organized at Glade Run. He could not procure a title for the land on which he had settled, consequently he purchased an adjoining tract, and built a house on it, where the residence of William Marshall, his grandson, is now situated. This house was the home of this aged, pioneer couple during the remainder of their lives. She died about 1817, and she is buried on the farm of Benjamin Irwin, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, about one and one-half miles from Dayton, Pa. He died April 28, 1831, and is buried in Glade Run Cemetery. This couple were the parents of nine children, viz., Joseph, Elizabeth, Margaret, Mary, William, John, James, Robert and Samuel. Section V will be composed of sketches of the above nine and their descendants.

ARCHIBALD MARSHALL, the fourth son of William and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Marshall, was born in what is now Adams county, Pa., March 29, 1762. He married Margaret Wilson, a half-sister of Catherine, the wife of Archibald's brother, William. Margaret's mother was a native of Germany and there was consequently more German blood in Archibald's wife than there was in William's wife. Archibald and Margaret were married in 1787. They first lived in Conecoghague Settlement until about 1800, when they migrated to Westmoreland (now Indiana) county, where his parents and brothers already resided.

They lived near Ebenezer part, if not all, of the time on land formerly occupied by his brother, William, until 1814, when he sold and removed to Armstrong Co., Pa. He purchased land about two miles from his brother William's residence and one and one-half miles from the present site of Dayton, Pa. He and his sons cleared away the brush and built a cabin where the house of his grandson, Harry S. Marshall, now stands. There was no cleared land on his tract. They had no stable, hence their horses had to be contented with the meager accommodations of standing tied to trees, or being turned loose with bells on their necks. Their sheep were brought in and put into a pen at night to save them from the wolves. There were no fields in which to keep their cows, even at night, and they often strayed away. One morning in particular they were compelled to go across Cowanshannock creek, a distance of about five miles, after them. Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Marshall resided on this farm until their respective deaths. He died in November, 1835. She died in 1837. They are both buried at Glade Run. Their children were, Catherine, William, Joseph, John, Margaret, Archibald, James and Samuel. Sketches of these and their descendants compose Section VI of this volume.

SAMUEL MARSHALL, the youngest son of William and Elizabeth (Armstrong) Marshall, was born in York Co., (now Adams). He married Mary Sterling, May 20, 1791. They lived during their whole married life on the farm now owned by William Parks in Conemaugh township, Indiana county, Pa. His farm consisted of about three hundred acres, which was probably the same which his father willed to him. He came to Indiana county with his parents. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Marshall were as follows: Mary, Walter, Joseph, Elizabeth, Jane, William S. and Sarah, (twins), Archibald, Samuel S., Rebecca and John. An account of these and their descendants will be found in Section VII. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are both dead.

ELIZABETH MCKEE, nee MARSHALL.

This lady was born Sunday, March 9, 1777. She was married by Joseph Henderson to John McKee, of Indiana county, Pa., June 21, 1804. Mr. McKee was born May 15, 1781. They lived during their lives on a farm in Conemaugh township, Indiana county, Pa., about two miles from Clarksburg, Pa. Mr. McKee was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church at Saltsburg, Pa. He died "in full assurance of a happy immortality," September 18, 1849. "She lived and died a model christian." Her death occurred January 28, 1855. They had just two children, Jane and Elizabeth, twins, born June 21, 1805.

JANE MCKEE married Rev. John H. Kirkpatrick, September 4, 1827. He was born April 28, 1791. They lived at Armah, Indiana county, Pa., for five years, and from there removed to Harmony Presbyterian church, near Greenville, Pa., where they resided until their respective deaths. She died March 27, 1875. He died January 20, 1877. Upon the report of his death to the Presbytery of Kittanning, of which he was the oldest member, the following minutes was adopted:

“With a renewed impression of our own mortality, and of our obligation to ‘work the work of Him that sent us while it is day,’ Presbytery record the death of John H. Kirkpatrick, in the eighty-sixth year of his age, on the 20th of January, 1877, for nearly four years the oldest member of the Presbytery. Father Kirkpatrick was born in Westmoreland county, Pa., but in early life removed with his parents to Armstrong county, where he passed his academic studies under private tutors, and then graduated at Jefferson College in Cannonsburg, Pa. He studied theology under the venerable patriarch, Rev. Samuel Porter, of Congruity, the pastor of his childhood, and was licensed by the Presbytery of Redstone, about the year 1825. In 1826 he began to preach at the churches of Armah and Harmony in Indiana county, where he was ordained and installed the same year. About ten years later he demitted the charge of Armah and was soon after installed half his time as pastor at Washington church soon after its organization. Ten or twelve years later he was released from Washington and became stated supply at Rayne till about 1856, when on account of his crippled condition, and much exposure in riding on horse-back over a charge so extensive in regions so rugged, becoming prematurely debilitated, he resigning his charge and without changing his residence during the last twenty years of his life, awaited the Master’s call.

cated about one hundred rods from the south-west corner of the county, on an elevation of two hundred feet above the Kiskiminitis river. As he turns his eye down on the Indiana side into Armstrong county, an old Indian burial ground can still be observed, and high bluffs. As the morning sun peeps above the horizon it smiles on the same spot, and until the sun drops below the horizon, the sight is grand to behold. They still reside upon this farm which they have successfully managed.

Within the last few years they have erected new buildings and improved the farm measureably. They have two children, Martha and Ida.

They afterwards removed to Dayton, Pa., where he engaged in mercantile business, and still continues at the same business, being one of the firm of W. W. Caldwell and Bro. ANNA ELIZA MARSHALL, the youngest daughter of Samuel and Nancy (Guthrie) Marshall, was born October 20, 1835, in Indiana county, Pa. She came to Armstrong county Pa., with her parents when about 12 years of age. The remainder of her single life she spent near where the village of Bryan is now located. She married John C. He worked at his trade for many years and it is only recently that he turned his attention chiefly to farming. During the late rebellion he enlisted in Co. K. 155th Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf., and served for three years. He was promoted to corporal January 1, 1865. After Mr. Russell's marriage to Miss Marshall they removed to a farm which he had previously purchased,

He is not a politician or a public man of any kind but cultivates his farm well. He once visited Terra Haute, Indiana, where he spent several months working at his trade.

MARY MARSHALL.

The name which stands at the head of this sketch is the one that was borne by the youngest child of the family of John and Jane (Scott) Marshall. Mary was born November 29, 1794, in the southern part of what is now Indiana county, Pa., about one mile from Clarksburg, Pa. She spent her youth there with her parents until her marriage, which occurred in 1814, and was to Wm. Cochran, a native of Armstrong county, Pa. Shortly after their marriage they removed to Armstrong county, and settled on the farm now owned and occupied by James Hilty, which is situated in Cowanshannock township, about one and one-half miles from the present location of the village of Atwood. Their first house was a mere cabin in the woods, which was without chimney, floor and door (for a time at least) and there was a stump in the cabin which served for a seat. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran resided on this farm and improved it until 1831, when they sold it and purchased a farm at Glade Run, in Armstrong county, now owned by their son, Samuel Cochran. This farm was also at that time almost all woods, but by industry and perseverance it was converted into tillable land, and made a comfortable home for the old couple in their declining years. They both died upon this farm, he November 1

1876, and she August 3, 1878. They were of a quiet and peaceable disposition. A short time before his death Mr. Cochran said that he had never had a quarrel with a neighbor in his life. He was often instrumental in allaying strife. We will give an instance of this which fell under the writer's own observation. One of his neighbors had a road through another neighbor's land, and the man who owned the land made a clearing on both sides of the road and fenced the clearing thus shutting up the road. The man who used the road claimed that it could not legally be shut. He had no road to get out in that direction. He could not cut a road around the clearing without being considered a trespasser by his neighbor, with whom he had "locked horns," nor he would not have done so if he could have. A law-suit seemed inevitable. Mr. Cochran, then a man 85 years of age, and being on good terms with both of the belligerents, took his ax and cut a road around the clearing, thus making a way for his neighbor to get out, and averting the impending law-suit. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran were the parents of twelve children whose names are as follows: Nancy, Jane, Eliza M., John, Mary, William M., James L., Samuel, Robert, David Sloan, Levi and Sarah Ellen. Levi was born in March 1837, and died when about eleven months old. Samuel and Mary still live on their father's old farm in Wayne township, about two miles from Dayton, Pa. He has always been a farmer. He has been to the Western and to the Southern States. He is a successful farmer and takes much interest in the Dayton Agricultural and Mechanical Association of which he is a stock holder and has and has been an officer. Neither Mr. Samuel Cochran nor his sister, Mary, were ever married. Their nephew, George B. McC. Cochran, lives with them, and has lived with them ever since he was about six years of age, which was in the year 1869.

Jane Cochran was born July 3, 1818, and married W.

W. Marshall April 5, 1838. (See section V).

Eliza M. Cochran was born January 23, 1820, and married Watson S. Marshall, January 4, 1848. (See section VI).

Mr. Calhoun was born March 25, 1817, and was a son of Hon. John Calhoun, whom we have occasion to mention in Section VI. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun lived with his father until he could erect a house on the farm which he had previously purchased. At the end of the first year they removed to this farm, which is situated in the northwestern corner of Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa. They resided on this farm until the spring of 1882, when they removed to Dayton, Pa., and now live somewhat of a retired life. Mr. Calhoun has taken some interest in politics and has held the office of School Director and Supervisor for several terms. In 1875, he had the Democratic nomination for Commissioner of Armstrong county. He was never an office seeker, and was not as much of a politician as he was a farmer, at which he was very successful. He is an admirer of fine stock, and takes much interest in the Dayton A and M. Association, of which he was one of the managers in 1883, and was re-elected for 1884. He was a lover of music and his children were all musicians, though Mr. McComb himself was no musician. Mrs. McComb died May 26, 1857, and he died February 17, 1859. JOSEPH MARSHALL.

Joseph Marshall, eldest son of William, was born May 20, 1780, near Ebenezer, Indiana county, Pa., where he resided until 1802, when he removed to Glade Run and cleared a field where his father, in the following year, built a cabin. While clearing this field, which was situated near where the Dayton Fair Grounds now are, he boarded with James and William Kirkpatrick, who lived on Cowanshannock creek, James living where John T. Kirkpatrick now resides, and William living where John Cowan now resides. These families were the nearest to his work, being only four or five miles distant. Previous to this he had worked for the Kirkpatricks. He had also hunted through this country for several falls, in company with Benjamin Irwin and James McClelland, who afterwards became his brothers-in-law. This trio were very fond of this kind of sport and many were the anecdotes which they loved to relate, in after years, of their exploits with bears, panthers, wild-cats, deer, etc. March 18, 1806, he married Margaret Marshall, daughter of James Marshall, (Section III), of Indiana county, Pa. Shortly afterward, her father died, and Joseph and his wife moved to the farm of his father-in-law, where they resided for three or four years. He then returned with his family to Glade Run and purchased and improved the farm owned by the late Robert Borland. Afterward other owners claimed and took this farm, the difficulty being caused by an over-lap of tracts. About this time, he, together with his brother James and George McComb, built the mill on Glade Run now owned by Baxter Bowser. This was in the year 1822. In 1829, he having the larger share of this mill, purchased the remainder and removed to it. In 1832, having run the mill three years, he traded it for the farm now occupied by Mrs. Belle Marshall, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., where he resided till his death, November 1, 1859. His first wife died July 26, 1842, and he married Jane Ewing, March 10, 1846. ROBERT MARSHALL.

The man whose name stands at the head of this sketch was born August 19, 1799, in what is now the southern part of Indiana county, Pa. He was only four years old when his parents migrated to Glade Run, Armstrong county. His first enterprise of importance was the building of a still house, in company with his brother, Joseph, which was situated in Wayne township, Armstrong county, near the present site of the U. P. cemetery. They ran this in partnership for several years. Robert Marshall was married December 4, 1821, to Mary Hindman, who was born June 6, 1801, and was reared in the southern part of Indiana county, Pa. Mr. Marshall and his wife resided in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., until her death which occurred December 29, 1869. On July 25, 1871, he married Mary Jane Armstrong, who was born September 14, 1834. Mr. Marshall died October 1, 1881. He was successful in whatever business he engaged. For many years he farmed and while farming he dealt much in farm produce which, at a time when railroads were scarce, he transported by wagon to Philipsburg, Oldtown, Curwensville and many other places, where he exchanged for such merchandise as would sell near home. He drew iron from Philipsburg to Kittanning long before any such useful commodity was manufactured at the latter place. He, together with his brother, Joseph, once took a job of drawing two tons of wood-screws from Philipsburg to Pittsburg, which were transported by W. W. Marshall and David Morrow. This job was taken from William Bagshaw, who once said he believed Robert Marshall was a honest a man as ever lived. Mr. Marshall, together with his sons established a store in Dayton in 1850, under the firm name R. Marshall & Sons. He owned a share in this store during the remainder of his life, though a half interest was sold to John Campbell in 1861, and the name changed to J. Campbell & Co. This store is now progressing under the management of his sons, W., and T. H. Mr. Marshall also dealt largely in land, at one time owning almost all the land in the neighborhood of Dayton. He was one of the founders and elders of the United Presbyterian church at Dayton, Pa., having donated the land for the church and cemetery. He had large interests in both the Enterprise Lumber Company and the Dayton Soldiers' Orphan School. He was also influential in the organization of the Dayton Union Academy and in fact any projects looking to the good of the community had his aid. In 1870 he removed to the town of Dayton, where he lived until his death and where his widow still lives. He was the father of eleven children, all by his first wife as follows: William, Thomas H., Catharine, David, Robert, Caroline, Emeline, Jonathan, Mary, Robert, Jr., Rebecca. Of these, David was born July 23, 1828, and died August 1, 1833; Robert, January 17, 1831, and died August 5, 1833; Robert, Jr., January 24, 1841, and died September 25, 1843; Jonathan was born January 24, 1837, and died March 12, 1854.

WILLIAM MARSHALL, eldest son of Robert, was born September 24, 1822, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., about one and one-half miles south-east of Dayton, Pa. He removed with his parents to where he still lives, in 1829, and has ever since resided there. In 1850 he entered into partnership with his father and brother, Thomas H., in the store at Dayton, and the personal property of the farm. His duties were of an agricultural nature, for the management of the farm fell to his lot. This management carried with it no small responsibility since the farm was quite extensive, yet it was performed successfully. In 1868 he purchased a part of his father's real estate, and since then the partnership with his father and brother has been confined to the store which is now owned by him and his brother, under the firm name of W. and T. H. Marshall. His business interests also include shares in the Dayton Soldiers' Orphans schools and the Enterprise Lumber Company. He has been elected to many township offices, and he has several times been chosen as administrator. He is a member, an elder and a supporter of the Dayton U. P. church and also a supporter of the Dayton Union Academy. Mr. Marshall was united in marriage the 19th of April, 1860, to Mary Ann Blair, who was born near Dayton, Pa., May 7, 1835, and who was a daughter of William Blair, now of Westmoreland county, Pa., but formerly of Wayne township, Pa. They are the parents of eight children, viz., Laura D., born January 29, 1861; Calvin R., Nov. 21, 1862; Mary R., January 19, 1865; Jemima, April 1, 1867; infant, October 21, 1869, (dead); Caroline C., December 1, 1870; Blair P., October 22, 1873; Tirzah May, January 3, 1878. Laura D. was married in the summer of 1883, to James Story.

THOMAS H. MARSHALL, "second son of Robert and Mary (Hindman) Marshall, was born July 29, 1824, about one and one-half miles from Dayton. When he was about twenty years of age his father purchased the land on which a part of the village of Dayton now stands. Six years later he took into partnership his two sons, William and Thomas H., the subject of this biography. The stock owned by this firm consisted of the personal property on a farm of about four hundred acres, and a store which was established by them. It was the especial duty of Thomas

H. Marshall to attend this store, his father and brother carrying on the farm, and this he did until 1861, a period of about eleven years, when a half interest was sold to J. Campbell, who has since conducted the business under the firm name of J. Campbell and Company, the Marshall brothers still retaining a half interest. The partnership of father and sons in the farming interest was continued until April 9, 1868, when Robert Marshall sold his real estate to his sons. The west end of the farm, adjoining and around Dayton, and amounting to about 136 acres, was purchased by Thomas H. Marshall. It included the land on which his grandfather, William Marshall, the pioneer of Glade Run, had settled in 1803. Since he had been in business for himself, Mr. Marshall has gradually increased the amount of his real estate possessions, until at present he owns 520 acres of fine farming land in the immediate vicinity of Dayton. He has been remarkably successful and is recognized as a model farmer. His land has been carefully improved and has thus increased in value from year to year. Building improvements have kept pace with his increase in real estate ownership, his barn at Dayton, for instance, is one of the largest and best in the county, and sheltering as fine stock as one could wish to see. He carries on farming in what might be called a wholesale way, giving employment to many men, and raising upon the average about 4000 bushels of corn, 1000 of wheat, and 100 tons of hay per year. Besides his extensive farming he carries on in Dayton one of the best tanneries in the county, butchers about 100 head of cattle per year, is a partner in the store of J. Campbell and Company, owns considerable timber land, is interested in the Enterprise Lumber Company, the Dayton Agricultural and Mechanical Association, and is a stockholder in the Dayton Union Academy, and the Dayton Soldiers' Orphans' School. He has been treasurer of the last named institution from its organization, and took the first contract looking toward the erection of the building—that of getting out the stone for the foundations.

 Thomas H. Marshall was united in marriage March 14, 1850, with Miss Rosetta P., daughter of Robert Neal, of Cownshannock township, who was born September 26, 1827. The offspring of this union are five children, living, Silas W. and David Duff, both married and following farming; Robert Neal, who is engaged in the study of medicine; Clark Hindman, who has graduated after a four years course at Princeton, and has been one year at the U. P. Theological Seminary at Allegheny City, and Mary Samantha.”—Armstrong County History. Silas W. married Agnes Craig, in 1874. Their children are, Emma Edith and Nay. D. D. married Ida May Haines in 1878.

CATHARINE MARSHALL, the oldest daughter of Robert, was born August 23, 1826, and married John Wilson Marshall, son of John, in 1850. (See Section VI.)

CAROLINE MARSHALL was born January 17, 1833. She married William Sloan, July 1, 1853. They first lived on his father's farm near Concord Church, in Plumcreek township, for a few years. They thence removed to where she still lives, and where he died, February 26, 1878, near Atwood, Armstrong county, Pa. Mr. Sloan was a farmer. He was in the Union army during the late war. He was a son of Samuel Sloan, who died in the fall of 1883, at the advanced age of 90 years. William Sloan was also a nephew of the John and Nancy Sloan who, when children, were stolen by the Indians while working in a corn-field in what is now South Bend township, Armstrong county, Pa., about the year 1789. They were retained by the Indians for several years and finally they were exchanged at Sandusky, O. The trail of the Indians was followed by the settlers as far at least as the Allegheny river which they crossed a short distance above Kittanning, Pa. Mr. Samuel Sloan, shortly before his death, related this story to the writer. He also said that his brother and sister returned home the same year that he was born. The children of Mr. and Mrs. William Sloan are Mary E., Nannie J., Robert Reid, Mima C., Maggie M., Beckie E., Carrie Wilda, and Vernie E., none of whom are married except Nannie J. She married Thaddeus Stuchel, who is a carpenter. They live in Allegheny City, Pa., where he works at his trade. They have one son, Sloan. Mary E. is a deaf mute, and has attended the school at Turtle Creek, Pa., for the deaf and dumb, for several terms. Emeline Marshall, daughter of Robert, and sister of Mrs. Caroline Sloan, was born May 7, 1835, and lives with Mrs. Sloan. She has never been married.

MARY A. MARSHALL was born October 14, 1838. She was married, June 22, 1857, to Prof. David W. Lawson. He was born in Ligonier Valley, Westmoreland county, Pa., May 21, 1836, lived with his parents in Indiana county on a farm until 15 years of age, when he left home to attend the Academy at Elder's Ridge, and taught in Jefferson county the following winter. The next spring he entered Dayton Union Academy, where he completed the academic course. He then entered Allegheny College where he stood high in his classes. At the age of 21 he graduated at Madison College. He taught in Dayton Union Academy, of which he is now Principal, for over two years, and at the same time read law with Col. Todd, of Indiana, Pa. Owing to failing health he gave up the law, and engaged in agricultural pursuits, in which he has showed perseverance and energy. He is now among the ablest and most successful farmers and fine wool growers of Armstrong county, alive to the educational, protective, and labor interests of our country. His farm is situated near Dayton, Pa. He and his wife have seven children: Joseph M., Robert Marshall, Harry W., Flora, John Homer, Edson Edmunds, and Willie. Joseph M. is a medical student at Ann Arbor University.

REBECCA K. MARSHALL, the youngest daughter of Robert and Mary (Hindman) Marshall was born August 16, 1843. She was married January 19, 1865, to Rev. S. C. Reed, (U. P). They live at Hookstown, Beaver county, Pa.

SAMUEL MARSHALL.

Samuel, the youngest son of William and Catharine Marshall, was born September 25, 1803, and was probably the first white child born within a radius of five miles of the present site of Dayton, Pa. His parents had shortly before this removed to their new home on Glade Run, and their little cabin, as has before been stated, stood very near where their descendants and the other inhabitants of this region gather together each fall to spend three or four days at the exhibitions of the Dayton Agricultural and Mechanical Association. He married Julia Ann Lantz in 1824, and they first lived on the farm now occupied by Nathaniel Doty in Indiana county, Pa., for many years. Thence they removed to near the saw mill, then owned by his brother, William, in Jefferson county, Pa. A few years after this he purchased a farm in Jefferson county, Pa., where they lived until the year 1855, when they emigrated by wagon to Illinois, and settled on a farm a few miles from Andalusia, Ill., where they lived for many years. They exchanged this farm for a smaller one in the suburbs of Andalusia where they resided until his death, except a few years, during which time they lived with their daughter, Mrs. Alexander Hays, of Andalusia, Ill. Mr. Marshall died in 1880. He ever clung to the Presbyterian principles instilled into his mind in early youth at Glade Run. At the time of his death he was a member of the church of which Rev. T. J. Johnson, a former student of Glade Run Academy, is pastor, at Edgington, Ill., about eight miles from Andalusia, there being no Presbyterian church at the latter town. Mrs. Marshall still lives with her daughter, Mrs. Alex. Hays. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall were the parents of four children, viz : Catharine, Benjamin Irwin, Elizabeth and Lavina.

CATHARINE MARSHALL, the oldest daughter of Samuel, was born in Indiana county, Pa., and married Robert Cathcart. They settled near Andalusia, Ill., where they resided until his death. Of their children, Jane Elizabeth is married and lives in Northwestern Iowa. Samuel Boyd, Grant Clover and Perry are married and live in Kansas. Several of the children are dead. Mrs. Cathcart is again married and also lives in Kansas.

ELIZABETH MARSHALL, second daughter of Samuel, was born in Indiana county, Pa., near Plumville. She went to Illinois with her parents and married a Mr. Love at Andalusia, Ill., near which town they lived until their respective deaths. They had three children : Lavina Jane, Benjamin I. and Scott. Lavina J. is married and lives near Andalusia. Benjamin I. is dead.

LEVINA MARSHALL, the youngest daughter of Samuel was born in Indiana county, Pa., and emigrated to Illinois by wagon, with her parents in 1855. She married Alexander Hays, a carpenter of Andalusia, Ill., in which town they have ever since lived. They have three children : Charles A., Anna M. and Benjamin Irvin. Charles A. is married and lives a few miles from Andalusia ; Anna M. is a school teacher, and Benj. Irvin is a student at Lenox College, Hopkinton, Iowa, and has also learned the carpenter trade.

[We regret that we had not more dates and facts pertaining to this branch of the Marshall family, but it seemed impossible to obtain them. Little was known of Samuel Marshall's family after they removèd to Illinois.]

JOSEPH MARSHALL.

Joseph Marshall was born in Conecogheague settlement October 17, 1792. He came to Westmoreland, now Indiana county, Pa., when quite young, and when the country was new and Indians were plenty. A few years before his death he related incidents connected with his living in Conecogheague settlement and his removal with his parents to the western part of the State. He remembered distinctly of an "Indian scare" which occurred while he lived in Indiana county. At the time of this so-called "scare" the men were almost all away from home, and the women and children took refuge in a rye field where they remained during a night. He was in the war of 1812, and returned through Armstrong county. He was so well pleased with the country that he induced his father and the whole family to come to Glade Run settlement. He married Mary Wilson April 1, 1819, who was born 14 1799, and who was a daughter of Thomas Wilson, of near Plum creek, Armstrong county, Pa. Joseph Marshall and wife settled on the farm now owned by Andrew Brice in Wayne township, Armstrong county. They lived there until the spring of 1832, when they removed to near the lower flouring mill on Glade run. They resided at the latter place a short time and thence removed to Jefferson county, Pa., where they resided until the spring of 1860, when they removed to the farm now occupied by their son, Robert A. Marshall, in Armstrong county. They lived on this latter farm during the remainder of their respective lives. He died June 16, 1877, and she died April 17, 1878. He was a farmer during most of his life, though he worked sometimes at carpentering. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall were the parents of ten children, five sons and five daughters, all of whom are still living and whose names are as follows: Elizabeth, Archibald A., Catharine, Thomas W., Eves W., Joseph

Mitchell, Eunice B., Robert A., Maria Jane and William Neal Sims.

Shortly afterwards they exchanged this small farm for a larger one a few miles from the smaller one. They lived on this larger farm until about four years ago, when they exchanged this latter farm for some land on which is a brickyard in the suburbs of Clearfield, Pa. They still own and reside on this land. They have seven children, two of whom are dead. The names of those living are George, Bert, Willard, Frank and Clifford. They lived on David White's farm for one year. They next lived in Putneyville, Pa., for a short time. From there they moved to Dayton, Pa. About 1870 he built the house now occupied by J. R. JOHN MARSHALL.

The subject of this sketch was born in Concocheague Settlement, Pa., June 29, 1794. He removed to Indiana county with his parents when probably not more than two years of age. There seems to be a difference of authorities concerning the place of his nativity but the above is undoubtedly is correct. He also removed to Armstrong county with his parents, where in 1817 he married Elizabeth Stewart, a native of Indiana county, Pa., who was born in 1789. They settled on a farm near Dayton, Pa., now owned by Thomas H. Marshall, where they resided for many years and in fact during her life, for she died there in 1842. Mr. Marshall married Martha Morrow in 1845. He continued to live on the same farm until he sold it to his son Watson S. He together with his family then removed to Dayton, Pa., where he spent his remaining years and where he died June 1, 1872. Mr. Marshall had followed farming until he removed to Dayton, where he lived somewhat of a retired life. Mrs. Marshall still resided in Dayton after his death until the spring of 1882, when she removed to Atwood, Pa. Mr. Marshall by his first wife had five sons and three daughters, as follows: Archibald H., William S., John Wilson, Sarah Jane, Watson S., Margaret, Alexander S., and Elizabeth; and by his second wife one son and one daughter, Permelia and Gillespie. Of these William S. and Sarah J. are dead. They were never married. Elizabeth is not married and lives with her sister, Mrs. Margaret Good, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa. Gillespie died in February 1870, aged almost 21 years.

Permelia Marshall married William Sturgeon. They live on a farm near Whitesburg, Pa., where they have lived ever since their marriage. They have three children, Carrie, Frankie and Mattie.

ARCHIBALD H. MARSHALL, the oldest son of John, was born in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., in 1818 and married Nancy J. McComb, June 22, 1853, (see page 75). They lived in the following places in succession; for a time near Colwell's furnace, Armstrong county Pa., where he had a contract of cutting wood; on a farm in Indiana county; in Kittanning, Pa.; in Franklin, Pa.; on the farm formerly owned by her father; and finally in the Glade Run gents' boarding house. He died at the latter place, March 21, 1868. He was a teamster during much of his life. They had no children. Mrs. Marshall continued to live at this boarding house until her second marriage, (see page 75).

JOHN WILSON MARSHALL, son of John, was born October 15, 1821, and married Catharine Marshall, February 19, 1850, (see page 170). They settled on a farm near Dayton, Pennsylvania, now owned by Thomas H. Marshall. They resided on this farm for several years, and removed to Dayton, Pa. He, together with Dr. W. Hosick, started the first drug store ever established in that town. Mr. Marshall was at the same time proprietor of what is now called the Exchange hotel, in Dayton Pa. They next removed to Atwood, Pa., where Mrs. Marshall died December 7, 1882, and "where Mr. Marshall entered the mercantile business in which he was engaged for nine years until 1879 when he removed to his new farm residence, where he still lives. He owns about 125 acres of land adjoining Atwood. This village was laid out by Mr. Marshall, and he was its first post-master.. He accomplished the laying out of the Atwood cemetery, and the organization and incorporation of the Association which controls it. The United Presbyterian church of Atwood has been liberally supported by the subject of this biography. He is one of the oldest members and was made an elder of the church, October 12, 1866. The present house of worship, a very creditable structure, was built by him, upon contract, for the sum of $2,300 in 1873." Armstrong County History. He was married to Jane Henry, of Kittanning, on June 12, 1884.

WATSON S. MARSHALL was born December 24, 1821, and married Eliza M. Cochran, January 4, 1848, (see page 64). He purchased the farm now owned by J. C. Russell, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., and built a log house upon it, which Mr. Russell replaced a few years ago by a new frame house. Mr. Marshall and his wife removed to this house in the spring of 1848, and resided there until 1855. He then purchased a part of his father's farm, and built the house where he lived during the remainder of his life, and where Mrs. Marshall and her son George still live. Mr. Marshall died on Christmas 1872. For the last twelve years of his life he engaged very extensively in mail carrying, having at times three or four routes. He had the Dayton Kittanning stage line for several years. He also took much interest in the mail routes of the neighborhood, and was the means of having several important changes made, such as three trips a week from Kittanning to Dayton instead of two, and the Smicksburg and Pinecreek route instead of terminating at Kittanning, was made to terminate at Brattonville. He purchased a large saw-mill on Mahoning creek, near Phoenix, Pa., which he managed for several years, during this time he leased some timber land on Big Run, in Jefferson county, and engaged in lumber running in rafts down Big Run to the Mahoning, and down the Mahoning to his mill. He built houses in Dayton for sale or rent, and he was withal a live, active, energetic and enterprising business man. His early death was a great misfortune to Dayton, and vicinity, the more especially at that particular time, for he had in view a project which would more than likely have made that a railroad town. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall consisted of four sons, as follows: Alexander Lawrence; William Cochran; Curtis Sylvester and George W. S. William C. engaged in mail carrying and stage driving for several years. In 1874 he began to learn the carpenter trade with his uncle J. L. Cochran, with whom he worked for a few years. Since then he has been working as his trade in Armstrong, Clarion and Jefferson counties. He is now at Reynoldsville, Jefferson county, Pa. He is not married. The only other one of the family who is not married is George S. He is a farmer and teamster. He like the rest of the family engaged in mail carrying, but has not been thus engaged for several years past. He lives with his mother on the farm formerly occupied by his father, which is situated about one and one-half miles from Dayton, Pa.

Alexander Lawrence Marshall, was born March 11, 1850 and married Melvina J. McGaughey May 23, 1872, (see page 93). They lived for a time at his father's saw-mill. Thence they removed to his mother's where they resided until the spring of 1864, when they removed to Covode, Indiana county, Pa., where they engaged in keeping hotel, until the fall of 1875. They removed to Dayton, Pa., where they only lived for a short time, when they returned to Covode and he engaged in the mercantile business for about a year. They next removed to Elk City, Clarion Pa. From there they removed to Reynoldsville, Pa., in 1880, where they still reside. They had five children one of whom is dead. The children are Clara Mirtis, born April 20, 1873; Leander Sylvester, born August, 1875; Minnie Eliza, 1877; James Ira, June 3, 1880; and Joseph King, born August 12, 1882. Minnie Eliza died November 23, 1879.

Curtis S. Marshall was born November 20, 1854, and married Tirzah T. M. Elder, July 9, 1879. She is a daughter of Rev. Thomas M. Elder, one of the most noted men of Armstrong County, Pa., being one of the originators of the Dayton Soldiers' Orphan School, the Dayton Union Academy, the Dayton Agricultural and Mechanical association, the Dayton News and other enterprises. Miss Elder was born December 10, 1855. When a youth Mr. Marshall attended Glade Run Academy. He entered the mercantile establishment of J. Campbell & Co., as a clerk in 1872, where by diligence, integrity and courtesy he gained the confidence and esteem of his employers and the public, and was also enabled soon after his marriage to engage for himself in business which he did in company with T. M. Elder and Wesley Pontius. These three established a general store in Dayton, Pa., under the firm name of C. S. Marshall & Co. This store is still successfully managed by Mr. Marshall. His children are Wilda Anna, born May 22, 1880; Winifred Theressa, born August 11, 1881; and Elder Watson, born September 22, 1883. Winifred Theressa died September 15, 1882.

MARGARET MARSHALL, daughter of John, was born February 1, 1827, and married Peter Good, May 7, 1861. Previous to the latter date she had attended Glade Run Academy, and taught school many terms. Mr. Good was born November 24, 1822, in Huntingdon, now Blair county, Pa.

When quite young he came to near Smicksburg, Indiana county where he resided until the spring of 1871 when he and his family removed to where they now reside, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa. Mr. Good is a very successful farmer. He is as well posted man on any subject as the neighborhood contains. He has held the office of school director in both the counties of Indiana, and Armstrong. Mr. Good is a lover of fine stock much of which may be seen on his farm. His stock very often takes premiums at fairs. Mr. and Mrs. Good have three sons Marshall D., John B., and Calvin S., none of whom are married. John B. is a student of Glade Run Academy.

ALEXANDER STEWART MARSHALL, the youngest son of John and Elizabeth Marshall, was born April 29, 1829 near Dayton, Armstrong county, Pa. He received a public school education such as the country schools of those days afforded. So great was his diligence and aptness to learn that in his sixteenth year he became a teacher in the public schools. He entered Elder's Ridge Academy in 1849, and Washington College in 1851, from the latter he graduated in 1853. He studied theology at Western Theological Seminary and at Princeton Theological Seminary, and was licensed by the Blairsville Presbytery in June 1855. He was united in marriage with Mary R. Christy, December 3, 1845, removed to Marion Iowa in the following spring, and preached his first sermon there April 20, 1856. He was ordained and installed Pastor of the Marion Presbyterian church by the Presbytery of Cedar, near the close of the first year of his ministry in that church, and he is still retained in this position. Mr. Marshall has now completed his twenty-eighth year in this field of labor, and they have been years crowned with marked success. "Mr. Marshall's pastorate, now extending beyond a quarter of a century, has been a model in many respects. Faithful, earnest, conscientious, and prompt in the discharge of his duties, he has looked carefully after the interests of his flock, and given each his individual attention. Kind, tender and courteous in his treatment of every one he has always been popular with other denominations and universally respected by those who are not professing Christians." New York Evangelist, December 22, 1881. Mr. Marshall succeeded Rev. J. D. Mason as Stated Clerk of Presbytery of Cedar. At the union of the Old and New school Presbyterians he was elected Stated Clerk and Treasurer of the Synod of Iowa North, and at the consolidation of the synods of Iowa by the action of making one synod to a State, he was chosen the first Moderator of the new synod. His own church from being the weakest has grown to be the strongest in the city. His people are just beginning the erection of a new house of worship costing about fifteen thousand dollars. Mrs. Marshall, a noble Christian lady, died December 3, 1883. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall had five little boys die, all under three years of age. There are four of their family still living: Lizzie R., who during the last three years has been a teacher in the Marion

High School, Charles Hodge, First Clerk to the superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and Council Bluffs R. R., Mary Rosetta, a graduate of the Marion High School, and Bertha Cowan, aged about twelve years.

They were married April 27, 1830, and lived on his father's farm until 1832, when he purchased of his brother, Joseph Marshall, the farm now owned by Andrew Brice, in Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., and removed to it. This farm is situated about three and one half miles from Dayton, Pa. At this time they had two sons, William and Thomas. In the year following the purchase of this farm, his wife and sons all died, their deaths being in close succession. He is also an auctioneer of considerable repute, which profession he has practiced in connection with his other duties for twenty years. Mr. Stuchel has been supervisor and school director, and he was the weightiest man on the board, for he tips the beam at over 300 lbs. Mr. Marshall was always a farmer, and took especial interest in keeping good stock, always trying to get the best and attend to it properly. He was considerable of an apiarian, and delighted in having fine poultry, of which he took great care. He was no politician and his ambition did not tend to lead him towards public life, but towards having affairs properly arranged at home. He is now farming, for his father, on the farm where his grandmother and aunt, Caroline Marshall, lives and he resides with them.

MARY J. MARSHALL, the youngest daughter of Samuel and Mary, was born March 12, 1836. She married Wm. Gray Travis, son of John and Catherine (Crisman) Travis, December 17, 1856. W. G. Travis has lived on the farm where he now lives ever since he was two years of age. He was born July 19, 1830, and is of Irish-Welsh descent. His grandfather Travis, an Irish boy, and his grandmother, a Welsh girl, came across the ocean to America in the same ship, and upon arriving in this country were both bound out to the same man to pay their passage, and when their terms of service had expired they had gained confidence enough in each other to enter into a life partnership, hence they went from the bonds of servitude into the bonds of matrimony. Several years afterward they emigrated to the western part of Pennsylvania and he built a mill on the present site of Good's Mill, which is on Mahoning creek, one and one half miles from Dayton, Pa. This grandfather purchased the best part of the farm on which W. G. Travis and family now live for $1.75 per acre. The same land is now worth at least $60 per acre. HARRY S. MARSHALL was born December 30, 1837, on the farm where he and his family now reside, and where he has continued to live ever since. He married Melissa Turk, who was born April 5, 1845. Mr. Marshall had a share in the first separator threshing machine that was ever brought into his neighborhood. He owned and managed this share for several years. Mr. Marshall, in company with Leroy O. Marshall purchased a cane-mill, in the fall of 1880, which they owned in partnership for one season, when he purchased Leroy's share, and since then has controlled the mill alone. In the fall of 1882 he manufactured over 3000 gallons of molasses. These purchases show enterprise, and the success which attends them shows good judgment. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall have eight sons, all of whom are living and whose names are as follows: Ed. Orrin, born October 27, 1862; Alva Bert, born January 17, 1864; Charles Homer, February 26, 1867; Frank Clemon, born November 26, 1868; Samuel Harry, born August 6, 1870; Richard Miller, April 10, 1874; Grier Orr, born July 16, 1876; Carl Camp, born November 11, 1879. ARCHIBALD MARSHALL.

This Archibald Marshall was born February 10, 1805, in the southern part of Indiana county, Pa. He spent the first few years of his life there, and learned the blacksmith trade. On June 29, 1829 he married Elizabeth Bricker who was born November 17, 1807. They lived on his father's farm where he was born, until 1834 when he purchased about 500 acres of land in Armstrong county which was all woods and which was situated in what is now Cowanshannock township, immediately east of Bryan and includes several well cultivated and fertile farms. Mr. Marshall and his family removed to this land in the spring of 1834. They stopped with a neighboring farmer, who lived about a mile from this land until a house could be erected, but this was not long, for the next day all the men in the neighborhood gathered together, cleared away the brush, and built a cabin and Mr. Marshall removed his family into this new home on the following day. This cabin was on the site of the house at present occupied by Simon Cloak about 70 rods east of the postoffice at Bryan, Pa. A few years afterwards Mr. Marshall built a hewed-log house on the site of the house now owned and occupied by Jacob Kroh, which site was on this land. About 1837 Mr. Marshall sold to Robert McMeans a farm off the western portion of this land. In 1840 he sold to Samuel McCartney, a farm off the western part of what remained after the first sale. This latter included the site of Mr. Marshall's first cabin. The next sale he made was from the eastern part of his land, and is now owned by C. A. Logan. The remainder of his land, which is now owned by Mr. Kroh, he sold to James Elder and sons about the year 1846. Mr. Marshall then purchased a farm about one and one half miles from Belknap, Pa. He and his family removed to and resided upon this latter farm until 1868 when they sold it and removed to Illinois. KIRKPATRICKS.

The Kirkpatrick family is connected in places with the Marshalls as will be seen in the foregoing pages of this work. Two Kirkpatrick men and their families settled in Cowanshannock valley now Armstrong county, Pa., before the close of the last century. They were the first settlers in that region, there being no other settlers for at least twelve miles from them. William Kirkpatrick's farm was situated in what is now Cowanshannock township, and is occupied by John Cowan. He was married to Martha Harkley, and they had eight children: James married Barbara Clark; John H. married Jane McKee, (see section II); William married Rebecca Hindman; Sarah married James Laughlin; Mary married William Marshall, (see section II); Margaret married James Marshall, (see section II) Martha married Sohn Marshall, (see section V); Jane married William Porter. James Kirkpatrick's farm was near the site of Barnards post office, Cowanshannock township. He removed to that place from near Elderton about 1795. Shortly before their removal they had a battle with some scouting Indians who came around their house during morning worship. Hearing some one outside Mr. Kirkpatrick opened the door. The Indians fired into the house through the open door killing one of the children. Mr. K. shut the door and ran to the loft of the house where he made port-holes by pulling out some "chunking" from between the logs and fired several times at the Indians. At least two of the Indians was wounded and it was never known whether any of them were killed or not for they withdrew taking all their party with them. James Kirkpatrick was married to Mary Larrimer. They had nine children: John killed by Indians; James married Nancy Coulter; David married Miss Barnes, and second to Mary Thompson, living; John L. married Nancy Larrimer; Moses, living, married Sarah Clyde; Jane married Samuel Gaston;

Nancy married David Sloan; Sarah married John Simpson; Mary married Thomas Hilberry. James was in the war of 1812.

DAYTON, PA.

The history of this town is so interwoven with the history of the Marshall family, that a few observations concerning it may not be out of place in this volume. The first settler on the site of Dayton was Peter Commerdinner. He built a cabin which would occupy a position about the middle of the street, between the store house of W. and T. H. Marshall, and the residence of Theodore Wilson, if it were standing at the present time. Mr. Commerdinner was a tailor and lived there for about three years, and during this time he raised a team of oxen, and was consequently prepared for farming. He purchased eleven hundred acres of land which is now in the western part of Wayne township, Armstrong county, Pa., and still owned by the descendants of Mr. Commerdinner. He moved to this land in 1828. Jesse Cable next lived in the cabin which Mr. Commerdinner had left. He was a shoemaker. The next buildings were a house, and blacksmith shop, opposite where the store house of W. W. Caldwell & Bro. is now situated. Shortly afterwards the store house of Guyer & Laughlin was built on the site of the store house of W. W. Caldwell & Bro. The town of Dayton was laid out in 1850, on land owned by Robert Marshall and John Lias. The growth of this town has not been rapid, yet it has steadily increased in population and business importance. It is truly a village of schools. A graded school, the Dayton Union and the Glade Run Academies and a Soldiers' Orphan's School, comprise its educational facilities.
