We have a place and a date for the Crawford Family Convention to be held in the Spring of 2016 for the purpose of electing a future Chief of the House of Crawford: George Hotel in Edinburg on Saturday, May 7th, 2016.

Family History Day at the John Gray Centre, Haddington

A family history day is taking place at the John Gray Centre, Haddington, on 29 August. The event promises to be an interesting day, packed with helpful hints and tips for ancestry hunting, fascinating guest speakers covering different aspects of history, and useful approaches to family history. There will also be free guided sessions on using ScotlandsPeople, research workshops on the resources available at the John Gray Centre, and talks from the Scottish Place Names Society, the National Library of Scotland, Alistair Moffat on 'Scotland's Ancestral DNA', and historical novelist Theresa Breslin talking research and writing for her First World War novels. And that's not all – there will be storytelling, crafts and a code-cracking ancestor trail for children too! The event is free to attend, but please visit John Grray Centre at Address: 15 Lodge Street, Haddington EH41 3DX, Scotland. Phone Number: +44 1620 820690

The hotel will be accepting invitations for overnight stay. You will need to make your own reservations with the hotel.

Those of you who have received an invitation from the Clan Crawford Association officers and indicated your intention of attending are on the list and can make a reservation at the hotel for the nights you would like to stay there. There are other locations nearby also.

In addition, Simon has offered to organize a tour of Crawford sites with stays at Craufurdland. There will be more information in the future, but do feel free to contact Simon (simonhc125@gmail.com) if you are interested.

If enough people sign up, you will make it happen.

blood, marriage and a common heritage.

For centuries our leader, the Chief of our Crawford Clan, though never officially recognized, was generally reckoned to be the head of the Crawfords of Auchenames, the earliest of whom, Hugh, was rewarded by Robert the Bruce for his exploits at Bannockburn in 1314.

For over six centuries the line of Auchenames descended from Hugh, the first Laird of Auchenames down to Hugh Ronald George the 23rd and last Laird, who sold the old Auchenames estate and emigrated to Canada where he died in 1942.

To find his heir, his closest blood relative, we have had to look a long way back, right back to Thomas, the 4th Laird who was alive in 1401.

From Thomas two lines descend - one leads to Hugh Ronald George Craufurd, and the other leads to Sir Robert Craufurd, 9th Baronet of Kilbirnie.

We have had a close look at all the generations between them and their common ancestor, Thomas, and despite careful research we have found nobody who has a closer link to our last Chief.

If you would like to see more, please visit the Clan Crawford website at www.clancrawford.org

Sir Robert links us back to Crawfords who fought for Britain through the Napoleonic wars, for Scotland in victory and defeat right back to Bannockburn and beyond.

For us who value our Scottish heritage over so many centuries, we believe that Sir Robert should be our rightful Chief.

Thank you to Clan Crawford.

Highland Titles: Built On Deception & Stolen Heritage Hopefully Soon Gone and Easily Forgotten

H.E. Chev. W. James Nethery, GCTJ, SMTJ ,
Prior, Priory of Robert the Bruce

For those who have followed the Highland Title saga over the years, you may finally be able to draw this issue to a close, if a pack of Scottish land lawyers have their way. The entire scheme of selling wee plots of ground in Scotland to buyers who then entitle themselves with really offensive monikers such as Laird and Lady of Glencoe has been found to be faulty and open to unravelling.

Despite being long over due, the collapse of the smarmy Highland Titles empire will not be very surprising when it happens. The people selling the wee plots (12 x 12 – you get the picture) are very simply con men, and not the particularly affable lovable types either. Note the juvenile antics of the Highland Title idiots assaulting ScotClans.com for exposing the legally tenuous stupidity of what Highland Titles does. Of course we will all keep bothering them with the law and ethics until they are gone but goodness knows others like them exist and someday someone else will come up with some other ridiculous schemes to relieve the world's prideful, vain and less than honest characters of their money.

The part of the Highland Titles equation that is more difficult to understand is the buyer – the future Lord and Lady Airhorn of Glen No' Watitseems.

Why_do_they_buy_this? Most say 'aw, its all in good fun'. Fun maybe but a 1' x 1' plot of Scottish highlands is no 10 cent small prize at the carnival. The economics of the Highland Titles scam has been significant and you better be prepared to shell out up to several hundred dollars for the privilege of de-frauding your friends, colleagues and acquaintances with likely one more representation that you are something you are not – this time with a quaint Scottish theme that clothes you with a convenient air of superiority that is so refreshing these days. These are con men trading with con men. A true victimless crime unless one counts the ancient and noble Scottish heritage and those who lived, loved and sacrificed for it.

Take a look at the work of Scottish blogger, author and activist Andy Wightman and others as they have 'followed the money' flowing into the Highland Titles coffers. The numbers are surprisingly large and it will surprise few that the trail leads off shore.

We certainly look forward to the day that we can exclaim "Good riddance Highland Titles". We will not be sad to see you go. But we wonder what your former 'clients' will be buying next!

Bagpiper Millin: Some Germans who claimed to have seen him didn't shoot because they believed he was crazy.

With thanks to Evelyn
Chagnon and the Clan
Davidson Society

And War
History Online

ANY reasonable observer might have thought Bill Millin was unarmed as he jumped off the landing ramp at Sword Beach, in Normandy, on June 6th 1944. Unlike his colleagues, the pale 21-year-old held no rifle in his hands. Of course, in full Highland rig as he was, he had his trusty skean dhu, his little dirk, tucked in his right sock. But that was soon under three feet of water as he waded ashore, a weary soldier still smelling his own vomit from a night in a close boat on a choppy sea, and whose kilt in the freezing water was floating prettily round him like a ballerina's skirt.

But Mr Millin was not unarmed; far from it. He held his pipes, high over his head at first to keep them from the wet (for while whisky was said to be good for the bag, salt water wasn't), then cradled in his arms to play. And bagpipes, by long tradition, counted as instruments of war. An English judge had said so after the Scots' great defeat at Culloden in 1746; a piper was a fighter like the rest, and his music was his weapon. The whining skirl of the pipes had struck dread into the Germans on the Somme, who had called the kilted pipers "Ladies from Hell". And it raised the hearts and minds of the home side, so much so that when Mr Millin played on June 5th, as the troops left for France past the Isle of Wight and he was standing on the bowsprit just about keeping his balance above the waves getting rougher, the wild cheers of the crowd drowned out the sound of his pipes even to himself.

His playing had been planned as part of the operation. On commando training near Fort William he had struck up a friendship with Lord Lovat, the officer in charge of the 1st Special Service Brigade. Not that they had much in common. Mr Millin was short, with a broad cheeky face, the son of a Glasgow policeman; his sharpest childhood memory was of being one of the "poor", sleeping on deck, on the family's return in 1925 from Canada to Scotland. Lovat was tall, lanky, outrageously handsome and romantic, with a castle towering above the river at Beaulieu, near Inverness. He had asked Mr Millin to be his personal piper: not a feudal but a military arrangement. The War Office in London now forbade pipers to play in battle, but Mr Millin and Lord Lovat, as Scots, plotted rebellion. In this "greatest invasion in history", Lovat wanted pipes to lead the way.

He was ordering now, as they waded up Sword Beach, in that drawly voice of his: "Give us a tune, piper." Mr Millin thought him a mad dog. The man beside him, on the point of jumping off, had taken a bullet in the face and gone under. But there was Lovat, strolling through fire quite calmly in his aristocratic way, allegedly wearing a monogrammed white pullover under his jacket and carrying an ancient Winchester rifle, so if he was mad Mr Millin thought he might as well be ridiculous too, and struck up "Hielan' Laddie". Lovat approved it with a thumbs-up, and asked for “The Road to the Isles”. Mr Millin inquired, half-joking, whether he should walk up and down in the traditional way of pipers. “Oh, yes. That would be lovely.”

Three times therefore he walked up and down at the edge of the sea. He remembered the sand shaking under his feet from mortar fire and the dead bodies rolling in the surf, against his legs. For the rest of the day, whenever required, he played. He piped the advancing troops along the raised road by the Caen canal, seeing the flashes from the rifle of a sniper about 100 yards ahead, noticing only after a minute or so that everyone behind him had hit the deck in the dust. When Lovat had dispatched the sniper, he struck up again. He led the company down the main street of Bénouville playing “Blue Bonnets over the Border”, refusing to run when the commander of 6 Commando urged him to; pipers walked as they played.

Scotland and the Flemish People

Some estimates suggest that up to a third of the current Scottish population may have had Flemish ancestors. While this is almost certainly an exaggeration, many Flemish emigrés did settle in Scotland over a 600 year period between the 11th and 17th centuries. Many shed their continental sounding names to take on the name Fleming or its variants. Others took on different names that give little clue as to their country or region of origin.

As the Flemish left Flanders over a relatively long time period they were absorbed into Scottish society gradually. So while the Flemish may well be one of Scotland’s largest immigrant groups the question of why they came, their significance in Scottish history, and their broader impact on the economy, society and culture of their adopted homeland has never been examined in detail.

The overall aim of the Project is to provide an accessible overview of the impact of the Flemish people on Scotland and the historical interactions between Scotland and Flanders (the Low Countries or modern-day Belgium). Combining genealogical and historical research, the project will reassess the settlement of Flemings in Scotland – their distribution and local impact – as well as reviewing the role of the Flemish in the broad sweep of Scottish history.

The Project has been made possible by a generous grant from the P F Charitable Trust and the support of Alex and Susan Fleming and is conducted through the St Andrews Institute of Scottish Historical Research.

BECOME A PATRON FOR 2015

This is an urgent call for you to serve as a Patron of the College for 2015. The economy continues to impact us all adversely, and the College realizes, and appreciates, the difficulty of wresting even a small amount of surplus funds from already-strapped wallets. As a reminder, Patrons' donations not only augment membership fees in the publication of The Armiger's News, but also support the regular publication of The Heraldic Register of America, which remains in a constant state of preparation throughout the year, adding new registrations as they come in. And, we are proud to display our 2015 Patrons' names, city, state, and Arms in the Patron section of the HRA when published, as well as in this Fall's issue of The Armiger's News.

These efforts all help us take great strides towards supporting and enhancing the heraldic tradition in America. We urge you to serve as a Patron for 2015 and be included in the Patron listing of all publications. Your minimum gift of $75 (over and above your membership fee) will help to ensure the publication of these vital texts and thereby contribute significantly to our American cultural heritage. Naturally, donations larger than $75 are accepted - and EXTREMELY appreciated - as well*.

The American College of Heraldry lists details about Patrons as supplied by the individuals themselves. Such listings, including any and all degrees and/or postnominals shown therein, are accurate only in as much as they have been provided by the Patron. Any errors/omissions/updates should be brought to the attention of the Executive Director at info@americancollegeofheraldry.org. Because the United States recognizes no Orders of Chivalry or Dynastic Orders, the American College of Heraldry does not comment on the validity of any Orders that its Patrons/Registrants wish to include in their registration. The American College of Heraldry (ACH) supports the efforts of the International Commission on Orders of Chivalry (ICOC) in compiling a list of orders that have met certain standards set forth by that organization, but the ACH also maintains that the ICOC's list is not necessarily an exhaustive list of valid chivalric and dynastic orders. Orders marked with an (t) do not appear in the ICOC's current Register of Orders of Chivalry.

Adventure # 12 – Spring in the UK

Spring is here - the yellow gorse is in bloom on the rocky hillsides and the purple heather is beginning to show up in protected locations.

I spent an afternoon at Carlisle Castle, which was having a St. George Festival the week of St. George's Day (April 23).

There was a mummers play, the likes of which the village people would have staged on a festival day in the 15th century. Naturally, St. George was the hero of the play, defeating the evil-doer in a sword fight.

Later in the afternoon, George saved the day by rescuing the village children from the threatening dragon. But in this play he did not slay the dragon (they are an endangered species, you know), but tamed it instead.

Flowers of the Forest

Lois Marie Randle Parks October 16, 1919 – February 23, 2015 Editorial note: Marie was Joanne Crawford's first cousin once removed. She was the genealogist in the family. She did a lot of research on her grandfather and Joanne's great-grandfather William Jackson Crawford.

She recently passed away.

Born in Rochester, NY, her parents Louis & Marie Crawford Randle were Baptist missionaries to China where Lois spent her first 7 years.

Lois met her husband Roy Parks at Marin Junior College. She attended Redlands University and graduated in 1942 with a BA in Literature and a minor in religion.

They were married September 19, 1943.

Lois moved to Tomales and embraced being a rancher's wife and an active member of the community. At the Tomales Presbyterian Church she was a Sunday school teacher, a Deacon, an Elder, and was president of the Presbyterian Women's Group for 10 years and program director for over 18 years.

Lois edited a zucchini cookbook for the Presbyterian Women which sold over 10,000 copies.

She played the organ for the church service for over 40 years and directed the choir. She is a Life Member of the Tomales PTA, a past board member of the Tomales Elementary School Board and worked long and hard for the unification of the local school districts. Lois was a 4-H leader and supported her children in 4-H, FFA, sporting and school events.

Later as her children went to college she worked as a substitute teacher. She was one of five founding members of the Tomales History Center which began in a single file cabinet in a storage room at the local elementary school.

Lois worked tirelessly collecting and archiving local history from the boundaries of the Shoreline School District.

With the help of many local volunteers Lois fundraised to be able to obtain the empty gymnasium at the site of the old high school from the school district to house the growing collection. Lois served as president from 1982-1999 and curator from 1998-2008. She worked daily at the History Center and was there on weekends to cover shifts if the volunteer docents couldn't be there.

For 35 years Lois worked the election board and in her spare time she compiled the family genealogy of both her family and her husband's. She enjoyed two trips back to China with her sister and friends.

Lois was predeceased by husband Roy in 1981 and son Wayne in 2006. She is survived by her sister, Helen Randle, children Bob & Glenn Parks, Sharon (Eric) Knudsen, grandchildren Mike (Sophia), Erik (Terri Ann) & Adam (Laura) Parks, Steve & Johnny Knudsen, Amanda (Chris) Malt, Denise (Robbie) Myers & Will Parks, three great grandchildren, a niece and three nephews.

The family's unending gratitude is extended to the staff at Taking the Journey where Lois was lovingly cared for in her last months.

Donations may be made to the Tomales Presbyterian Church, PO Box 13, Tomales 94971 or the Tomales Regional History Center, PO Box 262 Tomales, CA 94971.

ham, England,... At the age of 15, he was taken for his first airplane ride by Harry Gatsby, a family friend. He was hooked.

After completing secondary education at King Edward's School in Birmingham, the 17-year-old John enlisted in the Royal Air Force and was sent for pilot training to Rhodesia, today's Zimbabwe in East Africa.

By 1952, he had been posted to 145 Squadron at Celle, Germany, flying Vampires.

In 1955, he was posted to RAF Pembroly as an instructor on Hawker Hunters, the new RAF first-line fighter plane, and had been assigned to an RAF aerobatic team. After an air show in Wales in 1955, the team landed to hobnob with the groundlings.

Then John spotted, and was smitten by "...the most beautiful girl I had ever seen. She sat on the grass, somewhat apart from the crowd, a striking figure in a pretty yellow dress, her lovely face framed by the most gorgeous Titian Copper hair ... At that moment the world stopped for me." T

They were married in 1957, a partnership that endured many long separations due to John's RAF assignments and later employment as a commercial pilot.

In 1970 John and Babs got a plum assignment: John was seconded to the United States Air Force to represent the British interest in the development of the Lockheed C-5A. The assignment took them to Charleston, SC, a prolonged acquaintance with the United States and many new friends and experiences.

In 1973, they returned to Britain, and John was assigned to duty with the "Comet Squadron," the special unit that flew government officials. The assignment didn't last long. Driven by disenchantment with the political direction of his native land and lured by the prospect of new adventure, John took early retirement from the Royal Air Force in 1974.

Under a U.S. immigration provision for those willing to invest in a new business in the United States, John and Babs returned to Charleston, looking for an opportunity. A friend suggested the possibility of a restaurant or pub near Clemson University. They went, they saw – and thus was born Pendleton House, a public house, restaurant and bed and breakfast in Pendleton, SC.

It was a natural fit since Babs is a trained and talented chef, while John had experience from childhood with running a pub. They operated Pendleton House until 1987. By both John's and Babs's accounts, those were good years.

In 1976, Kimberley returned from the Grandfather Mountain Highland Games, exclaiming that they simply had to go, and in 1977 they did. There they became involved in the Clan MacRae Society of North America. John was elected President of the Pendleton Merchants' Guild and in that capacity helped to devise and implement a Historic Restoration Plan for Pendleton. John was also Master of the Pendleton Horse Hunt Club, famous for its Boxing Day hunts, where the quarry was Babs with a carload of beverages.

John was a founder of the 78th Fraser Highlanders, a reenactment group often seen at Highland Games in the Southeast; he also joined the Atlanta Burns Club and became active in the Stone Mountain Games.

John's professional flying career came to an end in 1992 when he reached the then-mandatory retirement age of 60.

John was elected President of the Clan MacRae Society of North America in 2000 and served in that capacity until his death. Those who knew him from the clan society, and who were privileged to work with him in that organization, will remember his energy, his devotion to the search for a Clan Chief and his insistence that the Clan present itself with dignity and excellence.

During his tenure, the Society was several times chosen as Clan of Excellence for the show they made in the Clan Parade at Grandfather Mountain: all in proper kilts, uniform shirts and, pretty much, in step. John led a remarkable life, full of activity and adventure, but at the same time he was a thoughtful, well-read and well-educated man. We may close this appreciation with a few more lines from his letter to his beloved Babs, written in his 75th year: "Perhaps this is the 'Teatime' of our lives, when we look back at a long and eventful day, but look forward to an enjoyable evening ahead, dinner with good friends and a good night's sleep to follow for tomorrow

Clan Bell North America, Inc.

This old West Marche Riding Clan, one of the Border Clans from the early 1100s, were retainers of Clan Douglas and also allied with the best Border families through blood and friendship. Their land holdings were extensive. To survive on the often invaded Borders, they engaged in the “rieving” of the period and participated in many battles against the English.

Declared “unruly” by the Scottish Parliament, many of the Clan were “encouraged” to emigrate to the Ulster Plantation in Northern Ireland after 1610.

After William Bell, called “Redcloak” and Chief of the Clan died in 1627, the chiefship became dormant. Without leadership, the Bells ceased to exist as a viable clan.

Clan Bell North America is a charitable organization of Scottish descendants and friends of Family/Clan Bell dedicated to the study of Bell Genealogy and Scottish history and the perpetuation of family tradition.

CBNA cordially invites membership inquiries from persons named Bell (all spellings), their descendants and friends. A quarterly newsletter is published. Tents are hosted at major Scottish festivals from coast to coast in the USA.

The most interesting part, for me, was a musical duo who played a wide variety of 15th century instruments, such as this French hurley-gurley and Moroccan long pipe

.....and a lute and a Celtic harp.

The next photo shows the bagpipes and the bells being played. I learned something about the bagpipes. It seems that the earliest sets were Arabic, made by attaching a snake charmer's pipe to a bag which was pumped to help blow air through it. The Arabic legions would play this as they marched into battle. The first Crusaders who fought to free the Holy Land brought the instrument back home, where it spread across all of Europe and was quite popular. However, in the 15th century, the violin was invented, and its growing popularity supplanted the bagpipe across Europe everywhere except Scotland. That is why today we think of the bagpipe as Scottish, even though it originally was not.

The camp chef was cooking a pot of cabbage and leeks in butter, another of beef in red wine, and a pot of pasta....made by rolling wheat and egg dough very thin and cutting it into strips with a knife. Smelled good, but I was not invited to lunch.

The archers put on quite a display. The lass in the photo was the one who hit the bulls-eye. The last photo shows St. George training his new recruits on the use of the halberd in battle.

I also learned a lot about more than I knew before about the St. George legend. For starters, he was not the original patron saint of England.....

that was St. Edmund, King of East Anglia in Britain, who was a Christian martyr in the 9th century. Edmund was assassinated after refusing to recant his beliefs. At least he was actually from Britain.

St. George, on the other hand, was a Roman soldier from the area that we now call Palestine. He was also a Christian martyr who refused to recant his beliefs. But he certainly wasn't English. However, he was adopted as a patron by the English soldiers who went to Palestine to fight in the Crusades, because he had been a Christian warrior who fought in that part of the world. He became associated with the flag with a red cross on a white background, because that was the banner that the Pope gave to the Crusaders.

Apparently that whole dragon thing was a mistake. There was a medieval painting, which was supposed to be a picture of Michael, the warrior archangel, (wearing the red cross emblem to honor the pope, even though there is no evidence that either Michael or George ever wore one) putting a sword through the devil. Lucifer is represented, in the painting, as the serpent from the Garden of Eden. The painting was widely copied in drawings, books, and tapestries. This image was misinterpreted in a 13th century book called the Golden Legend, as being St. George instead of Michael, and the serpent was taken to be a dragon. By the 15th century, this version of the story had taken root in England, and the story had evolved to the one we are more familiar with, of St. George slaying a dragon. King Henry elevated St. George to patron saint status, supplanting St. Edmund, because he preferred the image of a warrior. A giant case of mistaken identity becomes a legend. And, of course, it also became a pub

Lowther Castle is a ruin, but its 300 acres of gardens are under restoration, including the recent planting of over 160,000 daffodils, to line one of the paths leading to the castle.
