Waynesville, North Carolina: Flora MacDonald Gammon, 71, passed away on Thursday, March 22, 2018 at her home.

Flora was born in Fayetteville, North Carolina, May 17, 1946. She was the daughter of the late Reverend and Mrs. Richard R. Gammon, in addition to her parents she was preceded in death by her husband, John A. Dall.

She graduated from East Carolina University School of Nursing and was the operating room supervisor at Haywood Regional Medical Center.

Flora was an elder and choir member at the First Presbyterian Church of Waynesville, North Carolina.

After leaving nursing, she began working with the South Carolina Arts Commission as Artist in Residence throughout the schools of South Carolina and the Road Scholars program.

Flora was Director of Music at Grandfather Mountain Highland Games in Linville, North Carolina. She continued to teach Scottish history, music and dance.

In 2008 she received The Exceptional Celtic Women's Award. Flora was on the Board of Directors for the North Carolina Folkmoot USA, the State International Festival of North Carolina.

Flora's long and fruitful association with the Sovereign Military Order of the Temple of Jerusalem (Knights Templar) began with her investiture on November 4, 1989 as a Dame. With her husband, John Dall, she was active in bringing into the order other civic-minded and charitable individuals too many to number. She progressed through the ranks of the Order, serving in multiple capacities in both the Preceptory or the Highlands and Priory of St. Andrew, most notably Co-Master of Postulants for the Priory until stepping down in 2012.

The Artist Making Bunches of Banana Art

Keisuke Yamada carves faces, animals, and more into fruit.

With thanks to Atlas Obscura.
Just visit their website to subscribe for free.

Bananas are a fleeting treat. If you wait too long to eat one, it will brown and turn. But the time limits seem to be freeing for artist Keisuke Yamada, who carves incredible designs—from pop culture figures to grotesque faces—on bananas.

Based in Shiga Prefecture, Japan, Yamada spends his days as an electrician and his spare time as a banana sculptor. (He also occasionally teaches classes on fruit carving.) Over email, Yamada explains that he started sculpting bananas in 2011. Bored, he peeled a banana, and had an idea. What would happen if he carved a face into it?

From there, Yamada—noting that the Internet loved his creations—began sculpting much more than just faces. “You can carve human beings, animals, whatever,” he says, adding that he often finds inspirations in people’s movements and favorite movie characters. The texture of the bananas makes some of these creatures, such as snakes, appear even more sinister as they slither out of the peel. Others, such as his elephants and horses, have an astoundingly life-like quality.

It takes Yamada about an hour to make one banana sculpture, and on a record banana-carving day, he made nine works in 15 hours. His tools are everyday household items: a toothpick and a spoon.

Yamada admits that he’s gotten tired of the taste of bananas over the years, and that he “ate too much and gained weight.” Nevertheless, he still loves bananas and the unlikely faces and places he can carve out of them.

A Minion bananaized - and a horse, too.

Vikings as salespeople

A true story!

Mary Tudor (sometimes called 'Bloody Mary' for the number of Protestants she had burned at the stake) was queen for 5 years before dying of cancer. Elizabeth then ascended the throne and ruled for 45 years.

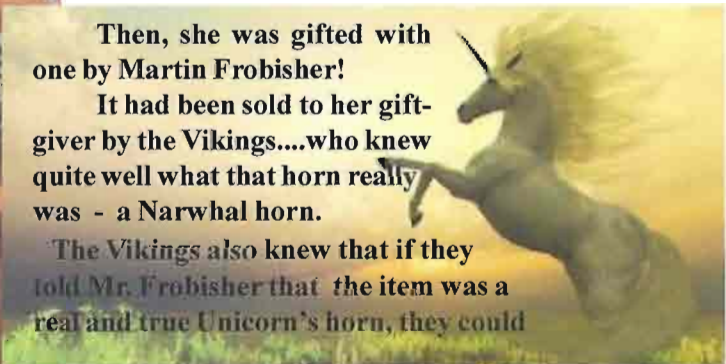

Her cousin, Mary Queen of Scots, had in her possession a Unicorn's horn...known back then as the most powerful magical talisman a person could own.

Elizabeth I was very jealous of that Unicorn's horn and wanted one for her very own.

Then, she was gifted with one by Martin Frobisher!

It had been sold to her gift-giver by the Vikings...who knew quite well what that horn really was - a Narwhal horn.

The Vikings also knew that if they told Mr. Frobisher that the item was a real and true Unicorn's horn, they could get Mr. Frobisher to pay ten times the weight of the "Unicorn" horn in gold.

He did.

Queen Elizabeth was happy. Mr. Frobisher, who got many favors from the queen - was happy.

Happiest of all were the Vikings.

of the Order at West Point in 2010, she and husband, John, were asked on short notice to prepare and lead the first ever Postulants' Vigil at a Grand Convent. That event was so successful that they became the first ever Co-Grand Masters of Postulants for the Grand Priory. They held this office until John's death in January, 2012, when Flora asked to be relieved due to her declining health.

In 2012 Flora received the Order's Meritorious Service Medal, awarded for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services and achievements. This award was based on her nearly 25-years' contribution to the Order, specifically as Co - and Master of Postulants for the Priory and GPUSA, as well as lending her beautiful voice to the enrichment of Templar services for many years..

Flora was selected for and elevated to the Dignity of Grand Croix, the Order's highest rank, at the Grand Convent in Philadelphia in 2013. Promotion to this rank is rarely awarded and such promotion is reserved for those individuals who have made an extraordinarily effective and sustained effort for the good of the Order.

Certainly one of the highlights of her extraordinary Templar career was when she went on the Order's Pilgrimage to the Holy Land in the fall of 2016. It was a delight to her heart to tread in the footsteps of Christ, and to meet the student being sponsored in honor of her husband, John. The joy she found there was a blessing to her and to all of those with whom she shared it.

Flora was all things Scottish and encouraged everyone to trace their roots. She inherited an interest in her Scottish heritage at an early age.

Flora is survived by her uncle, Donald F. MacDonald, of Myrtle Beach, South Carolina; aunt,

Many of us revel in the glorious autumn colors of hickories, maples and oaks.

We put on heavier jackets and walk into the dusk admiring the gleaming woods.

As winter approaches and the nights become colder and darker, my thoughts turn to my Aunt Rowena and the fragrance of her kitchen: homemade brown bread, steaming fiddlehead ferns and vegetables, cherry pies and bannocks.

At the family homestead, autumn and winter brought their own celebrations of harvest and Yule. It was the time of ardent conversations and stories while sitting around the wood stove.

In early October, my Shaw and Henderson family would descend up on the old homestead ready to help our Aunt Rowena as she put final touches on the meal.

In the dining room, the old maple table sat ready and waiting.

It was set with my aunt's mismatched, but lovely, flow blue and white plates. Silver eating utensils were also "put together" from the drawers of odd silver in the kitchen.

Bouquets of late blooming asters and golden-rod added splashes of color.

Set in front of each plate were photos of our two families' ancestors, some smiling, some grim-faced.

Young cousins loved seeing these images and remembered many of their ancestors/ names and snippets of their conversations: "Here's Great Uncle John who never missed a family picnic or outing.

Don't you love his white beard?"

"He always visited us dressed in his best clothes. In the summer, he always had a white rose in his top pocket of his jacket which he snatched from Grampie's rose garden."

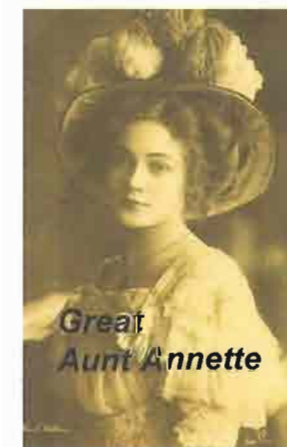

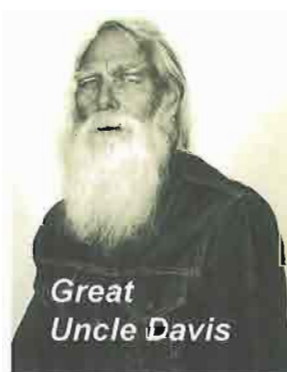

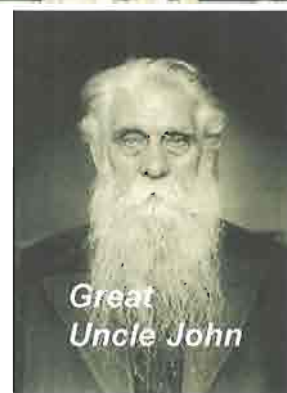

"Great Uncle John said that he wore the white rose to honor Bonnie Prince Charlie and the Stuart family. We have some Stuart blood also."

"This is Great Uncle Davis, who died when he drank too much cold creek water during haying time."

"That was after he lost his hearing from typhoid fever."

"Ooh, wow! Look at Great Aunt Annette Hill. I love her Italian lace dress. It's embroidered with tiny pink roses and seed pearls.

McDonald's very first mascot?

Nope, not Ronald. It was a man with a chef's hat on top of a hamburger-shaped head, called Speedee. By 1967 Speedee had been replaced by the clown, Ronald McDonald.

The company first filed a US trademark on a clown shaped man having puffed-out costume legs. The company trademarked the name McDonald's on 4 May 1961, and on 13 September of that year, filed a logo trademark on the overlapping, double-arched "M" symbol.

"Do you remember her story?"

"How could I forget it? She was secretary for Charles Hill in Boston. He owned a fancy shoe company and he and Aunt Annette fell in love."

"She was so beautiful with her red hair piled up on her head."

"Uncle Charles' parents were horrified that their son wanted to marry someone from a lower class and forbade the wedding. Uncle Charles's father took Annette to lunch one day and offered her $5000 to call off the wedding. She didn't do it and they were disowned by the Hill family."

"Do you remember that every summer they visited the farm and helped out with chores? They did laundry, churned butter and even helped make soap and quilts."

"They also picked vegetables and canned them and Uncle Charles mucked out the stables and dairy barn."

Musings about ancestors ceased when platters of wild turkey, mashed potatoes, gravy and hot brown bread, pickled beets and fiddlehead ferns were brought to the table.

Aunt Rowena had also made apple and cherry pies, one chocolate layer cake - and best of all, fern cake - a Scottish treat.

Who will you be inviting to your table for our next holidays? If you start now, you can find old photos and bring your own ancestors to dinner."

Stories may raise questions about the war, family secrets, those who were lost, and things we discover through our research.

Take a walk with me for five weeks, through a WWII family story. Each week you will receive access to a new module to help you explore your family & military stories. The target of this course is to help you put a story on paper and view it from multiple perspectives to see how you, your family, and the story have grown, found answers, peace, and closure. Finally, you will have the opportunity to witness the changes in one of my stories as I vulnerably talk about moments in my life.

We will discuss:

Why We Write, Identity, Perspective, Transformation.

ber for over 35 years and attended and convened many Scottish Games and Festivals in the Virginia area, where many members got to meet this likeable man.

Bill was active in several other organizations including the Scottish American Military Society; Saint Andrews Society of Richmond where he was Vice President; and the Saint Andrews Societies in Knoxville and Williamsburg.

He helped organize and was a past President of the Williamsburg Highland Games.

Bill was a graduate of East Michigan University and a member of the Army ROTC. He served during the Cold War as an Armor officer commanding a M-60 tank unit in West Germany.

He was honorably discharged from the Army with the rank of Captain. The discipline and leadership skills honed during his military service were applied when he took on the challenge of teaching fourth graders at Richmond Preparatory Academy, his last and most enjoyable teaching position.

Bill is survived by his daughter Erin; son SSG. Sean J. Bierwirth (stationed in Germany); father William Roy Bierwirth I and brothers, Roy and Bruce; former wife and friend Christine; and four grandchildren, four nieces and seven nephews; and special friend, Kathleen Dart.

Bill was a loving father, grandfather, son, brother and a good friend. He will be dearly missed by his family, and his Clan Wallace Society family.

Meghan Markle will receive a special gift before her marriage to Prince Harry

Kate Middleton got one before she married into the family, too

J.K Rowling is a Scot!

Although born in England, author and creator of the Harry Potter novels, J.K. Rowling (a.k.a. Joanne Murray) has been adopted by the Scots as one of their writers.

This is in part because in 2001 she married Neil Michael Murray, an anesthetist, lives in Scotland at Killiechassie House on the banks of the River Tay, and is even a member of the Church of Scotland. She also has honorary degrees from the University of St. Andrews, the University of Edinburgh, Napier University and the University of Aberdeen. She also is the first billionaire author.

According to a new report, Meghan Markle has a lot to look forward to ahead of her wedding to Prince Harry. Apparently, Markle will be given an extra special present before she becomes a member of the British royal family.

A source has revealed to The Express that Markle will be gifted with her own Royal Coat of Arms before she marries Prince Harry on May 19. Kate Middleton received her own before she married Prince William, and Sophie, Countess of Wessex, was also given one before her marriage to Prince Edward.

According to The Express, "If Meghan receives a coat of arms it will also be personal and 'designed to identify' her."

Thomas Woodcock, who is Britain's Garter Principal King of Arms, which makes him the main adviser to the Queen when it comes to all ceremonial and heraldry matters, spoke about the act of bestowing a Royal Coat of Arms on a new member of the family.

Upon Middleton's wedding to Prince William, Woodcock said (via The Express): "It is not compulsory, but as their daughter is marrying into the Royal Family, she will have a need probably to use a coat of arms. Every Coat of Arms has been designed to identify a person, school or organisation, and to last forever.

Heraldry is Europe's oldest, most visual and strictly regulated form of identity and it surrounds us in Britain, giving clues to our history and surroundings."

Have you ever heard about this?

The exposed portion of the Earth's crust that is now Scotland was once part of the North American landmass. Many, many millions of years ago, it broke away and drifted east, the Atlantic Ocean opening up behind it.

It eventually bumped into Europe, where it has remained stuck ever since. No wonder all those Scots who emigrated to the US in the 19th and 20th centuries felt so "right at home" immediately.

George Washington, producer of whisky?

Gastro Obscura

With thanks to Gastro Obscura.
Just type in that name to subscribe for free.

After leaving the presidency in 1797, George Washington settled into a comfortable retirement as one of the new nation's largest producers of whisky—if not the largest.

That wasn't the founding father's intention when he left office for his pastoral home of Mount Vernon in Virginia. But his newly hired plantation manager, a Scot named James Anderson, proposed a distillery after noticing that Mount Vernon had most of the necessary infrastructure (a water supply and gristmill) as well as plenty of rye, which Washington's slaves planted as a cover crop.

Washington had to be talked into the enterprise, but it quickly proved successful. Within two years, his distillery was producing nearly 11,000 gallons of white whisky that sold for over $100,000 in today's dollars—a nice, alcohol-soaked profit.

Washington's whisky was neither bottled nor aged, but sold in wooden barrels for 50 cents a gallon.

The distillery had a short run, as it fell into disrepair after Washington's death in 1799 and eventually burned down. But in 2007, the distillery was resurrected, and it's now open to the public and selling bottles of whisky and brandy. The stills are re-creations of those used by Washington's staff and slaves, and the recipe, like in the 18th century, is 60 percent rye, 35 percent corn and 5 percent malted barley. Unlike in Washington's day, some of the whiskey is now aged. (The unaged stuff is clear.)

As for Washington himself, he was known to enjoy his whiskey on occasion. But he was more of a Madeira man.

Bottles of Washington's Whiskey (and brandy) are available for purchase at the Mount Vernon distillery. They're not sold online, and they sell out quickly. (A large distillery in 1799 is small by today's standards.) But if you try a tippie, be careful. As Steve Bashore, Mount Vernon's director of historic trades and current head distiller, told Food and Wine, "For some people, unaged whiskey is a little strong."

The distillery and grounds are open to the public seasonally. Note that the distillery and gristmill are located a short distance from the main Mount Vernon entrance.

Is this the Caribbean?

Thanks to the Scottish Heritage Society of Southeast Georgia newsletter, Great Scots!

However, may your editor add a note? I've been right there...and actually dipped all 10 of my toes into the gorgeous tropical appearing water. May I add a warning? That is the coldest water I've ever had my footsies submerged into. My experience was maybe 10 years ago...and my toes are still not unfrozen! Brrrr.

In 1950, the Stone of Destiny went missing from Westminster Abbey (where it was still being kept at the time) and remained missing for about four months. ## The Stone of Destiny, continued from page 35 been written in the form of a letter, dated 6 April 1320.

Every English monarch since 1296 and British monarch since 1707 has sat on the Stone for their Coronation. The Coronation Chair was made especially for the Stone by Walter of Durham between 1297 and 1300. It has recently been re-displayed to the public by the Dean and Chapter in a chapel near the west entrance to the Abbey.

Under the conditions of the Royal Warrant, the Commissioners are responsible for ensuring that the Stone returns to Westminster Abbey for the next and all future coronations of monarchs of Great Britain.

The Stone of Destiny is now on display with the other Honours of Scotland at Edinburgh Castle in Edinburgh.
