CONTRACT OF MARRIAGE BETWIXT
ALEXANDER OGILVIE OF BOYNE
AND MARY BETHUNE.

M D L X V I .

CONTRACT OF MARRIAGE, &c.

THE following document, (of which the original is preserved in the General Register House at Edinburgh,) notwithstanding the interest which attaches to one of the principal parties to the contract, will probably be thought to derive its chief value from bringing together, as engaged in one friendly transaction, a number of persons who played important and generally hostile parts in the most interesting period of Scotch history.

Of the contracting parties, Alexander Ogilvie of Boyne was the representative of an old and respectable branch of the powerful family of Finlater. The lady, one of the Queen's four Maries whom Scotch tradition and song have so intimately associated with the history of their unfortunate mistress, was the eldest of eight daughters of Robert Bethune of Creich, descended of a younger son of the family of Bethune of Balfour in Fife. Her father, who did not succeed to the family estate till after the death of an elder brother, was early attached to the Royal household, and is said * to have attended the young Queen to France as a page; and after her return to Scotland, to have been appointed master of the household, heritable Steward of Fife, and keeper of Falkland palace. Perhaps, however, there is here some confusion between this person and his father Sir John Bethune of Creich, who was keeper of Falkland palace in the reign of James V.* The mother of Mary Bethune was a French lady of honour to the Queen, whose name is variously given (and probably in both cases corruptly) Joanna Renwall or Gryfoner.

The family of Balfour rose into high consideration from furnishing two successive Archbishops to St. Andrews, of whom the Cardinal in particular exercised an influence that did not fail to advance the fortunes of his relations. To this probably are to be attributed the connexions, somewhat above their rank, formed by two successive and very numerous families of daughters of the Bethunes of Creich.†

* Act Parl. v. ii. p. 296.

† One of these, Janet, the eldest daughter of Sir John Bethune of Creich, and aunt to Mary Bethune, the party in the present contract, married for her third husband Sir Walter Scott of Buccleuch, and is the Lady of Buccleuch, the traditional belief of whose character and mysterious endowments has been embodied and immortalized in 'The Lay of the Last Minstrel.' An original letter of her's to the Queen Regent, Mary of Guise, which happens to be preserved in the General Register House, although of little intrinsic interest, has been thought worthy of a place here, as affording a good specimen of the style of a Scotch lady of that day, and preserving the autograph signature of that remarkable woman.

TO THE QUEENYS GRACE.

MADAME, efter maist humnyll commendatioun of service, empleise your grace be aduertisit, I haif tareit heir thir aucht days bipast, in houp of your cumyng to this towne, awaiting thairupone to haif spoking your grace at lenth in all my Little more has come to our knowledge of Mary Bethune. The traditional fame of the beauty of those attendants on the unrivalled Queen, is in her case supported by no common testimony. Buchanan has celebrated her in the following verses, in his Valentiniana.

Unde queam dominæ ſerta parare meæ.
Quique fuit cultu Muſarum fertilis hortus

Si tamen adſpiret zephyrus Betonidos auræ,

Alexander Ogilvie, and his wife, were still alive in 1606. An original portrait of Mary Bethune has been preserved at Balfour House in Fife, the seat of Colonel Bethune.

The contract,* to which, as will be observed, the Queen and Henry Darnley are parties, is subscribed by them, by the Earls of Huntly, Argyll, Bothwell, Murray and Atholl, as cautioners for the bridegroom, by Alexander Ogilvie himself, subscribing his territorial style of "Boyne," and by Mary Bethune. Her father's signature, with that of Michael Balfour of Burleigh, his cautioner for payment of his daughter's tocher, are wanting.

The date of this transaction, which brings together on terms of mutual confidence personages in general so irreconcilable, fixes the period midway between the escape of Mary from the murderers of Rizio and the birth of her son.

OBLIGATION BY JOHN EARL OF CASSILLIS

BROTHER HUGH KENNEDY OF BRUNSTON, UPON HIS TAKING THE LAIRD OF AUCHINDRAIN'S LIFE.

ANNO MDCII.

OBLIGATION BY JOHN EARL OF CASSILLIS TO HUGH KENNEDY OF BRUNSTOUN, ETC.

THE following very singular document might have incurred the risk of being thought grossly fictitious, but for the light thrown on the deadly feuds of the Clan Kennedy by several recent publications. The most curious of these, in its minute details, is an anonymous History of the Clan, written, or at least concluded, in the year 1607 or 1608, edited by Mr Pitcairn;* confirmed and illustrated as it is by various proceedings in the Criminal Courts of Scotland, given to the public by the same gentleman;† nor is it to be forgotten, that on one very remarkable portion of the story, were shed the latest rays of the poetic genius of Sir Walter Scott.‡

Referring to these sources of more ample information, it may here be enough to mention, that in May 1602, about four months prior to the date of the following paper, Sir Thomas Kennedy of Cullean had been assassinated by Thomas Kennedy of Drummurchie, (of the family of Bargany,) for which, and for other causes, he and his known accomplices were afterwards forfeited in Parliament ; but that, from the first, the author and secret instigator of the murder was believed to have been John Muir, the laird of Auchindrain. The ordinary course of justice, however, proved by far too slow and uncertain to satisfy the vindictive zeal of the families of Cassillis and Cullean ; a plan for the destruction of their artful adversary appears to have been devised and prosecuted with great activity and perseverance ; and to this design must be ascribed the murderous family compact between the Earl of Cassillis and his immediate younger brother, Hew Kennedy of Brunstoun, more usually denominated the Master of Cassillis. Of his various unsuccessful attempts " to take the laird of Auchindrain's life," and earn his promised reward, the " History of the Kennedys" will be found to furnish abundant details ; and the reader of the works above alluded to, must be already aware that a different and more suitable destiny awaited, and though tardily, overtook that relentless ruffian.

The original document, in the hand-writing of John fifth Earl of Cassillis, and of which an exact lithographic fac-simile is here given, would appear to have been placed by the parties in the hands of Sir John Vans of Barnbarrach, their cousin-german and active adherent ; and in the possession of the representative of that family it still remains.

LETTER FROM KING JAMES VI. TO THE PRIVY COUNCIL OF SCOTLAND, AND PRO-CLAMATION BY THE PRIVY COUNCIL, ANENT THE ROBES OF EARLS, JUDGES,
MAGISTRATES, CHURCHMEN, ADVOCATES, CLERKS OF THE SESSION AND SIGNET, ETC.

M.DCVI—M.DCX.

ROBES OF THE NOBILITY, JUDGES, MAGISTRATES, CHURCHMEN, ETC.

IN Scotland the attention of the government was turned at a very early period to the regulation of the dresses of all ranks. It was thought necessary here, as in the early legislation of other countries, to repress the luxury of extravagant clothing, and of no less importance to keep up the external distinctions of rank. Some of the most curious of the ancient acts of the Scottish Parliament relate to these two objects. The endeavour to restrain expense of dress in an age and country where the barest poverty affected somewhat of a gorgeous exterior, necessarily failed, as we learn by repeated re-enactments of sumptuary regulations, caused by the inefficacy of those preceding. Whether the statutes prescribing formal dresses for each order and degree of society were more effectual, it is not now easy to ascertain; but the lawgivers of different periods seem not to have been sufficiently of one mind to produce much uniformity of observance among the lieges. In the reign of

James II.* earls are ordained in all Parliaments and general councils, to use “mantillis of brown granyt opyn befor furred with quhyt and lynit before outwith ane hand braide to the belt stede with the samyn furring with litill hudis of the samyn claith, and to be usyt upon thair schulderis : And the uther lordis of Parliament to haif ane mantill of rede rycht sa oppinnit befor and lynyt with filk or furred with crifty gray grece or purray togidder with ane hude of the samyn claith and furred as saide is And all commissaris of burrowys ilk ane to haif ane pair of clockis of blew furred fut fyde opyn on the rycht schulder furred as efferis and with hudis of the samyn as said is ;” while “forspokaris for the cost,” (hired advocates,) are to have habits of green of the fashon of a tunicle, with sleeves open as a tabard.

In subsequent Parliaments, we meet with frequent denunciations of “the great abuse of the subjects of mean estate presuming to counterfeit His Highness and his nobility, in the wearing of costly clothing ;” but the grievance is attacked rather by repressing the extravagance of the lower ranks, than by an endeavour to fix appropriate and peculiar dresses for those of hereditary or official dignity. It was not until James VI., whose taste led him to take a personal interest in these details, had enjoyed for some time the security and splendour of his English Court, that he attempted to introduce a formal and graduated order in the public apparel of all classes of his Scottish subjects. His attention may have been particularly directed to the subject by the “leude error” into which the Earls in Parliament were about to fall, when admonished by the first of the following documents, preserved in a volume of Royal letters, addressed chiefly to the Privy Council, now in the General Register House, and which was speedily followed by an Act of Privy Council, (24th April 1606,) ordaining “that the haill Marqueffis and Earlis of this kingdome “fall leave of thair former resolution anent the weiring of “velvett robes in tyme of Parliament;”—“and that thai fall “provyde thamefelffis with robes of reid scarlet cloath again

“the nixt Seffioun of Parliament, whilk Godwilling will be “about the middil of June nixtocum.” *

Three years after the date of that letter,† Parliament taking into consideration, “that the greatnes of his Majesteis em“pyre magnificence of his courte fame of his wifdome and “justice and of the civilitie of his subjectis hes begun alreadie “to allure divers forane princes and utheris strangeris of all “estaittis to mak mair frequent repair to his Countrey nor euir
“they did in ony preceding age,—and by them na doubt re“porte will go throwch all the warld of the estait and governa“ment of the kingdome according to the ordour whilk they “fall fie obserued within the samyn;” and understanding that his Majesty has prescribed for the nobility apparel for the Parliament becoming their honourable estate, but that the remanent members of that high court have not reformed themselves to the like conveniency,—ordained all magistrates of boroughs and their commiffioners to Parliament, the Judges of the land, civil, criminal, and ecclefiastical, and churchmen, efpecially thofe having vote in Parliament, to wear each a particular drefs to be appointed by the King, whole order “ being fent in wrytt “ to his Clerk of Register, fhall be a fufficient warrant to “ him for inferting thereof in the buikis of Parliament, to have “ the ftrength and effect of ane act thereof.”

The order appointed by the King is accordingly contained in a letter to Sir John Skene, Clerk of Register, of date the 16th January 1610, which is preferved in the volume of Royal letters already mentioned. Its commencement is characteriftic of the writer and his times. “ Trustie and weilbelovit coun- “ fellour, We greite you weile. The efteatis of that our king- “ dome, having, as in many other particulars of more moment, “ heirtofoir repoifit thair truſte and confidence in us for pre- “ ſcriving and ſetting down of ſeveral foirtis of habitis and “ apparrell, for Judgeis, Magiſtrats and Churchemen, that ſo “ the promiſcuous undiſtinguiſhed weiring of apparrell now “ uſed may not in any ſtrangeiris (who ar the beholdars of it,) “ mak impreſſioun of the ſtates negligence in this point; and “ We being by our Eſteatis humblie ſolicited to certifie our “ pleaſour and will heirin, bothe for the conveniencie of the “ mater itſelf deſirit, whiche no doubt will breid reputatioun “ to that eſtate, and alſua impres in the commoun foirt, “ (whome outward ſhowe do mucche move,) a ſpeciall regaird, “ with all dew reverence towards thame in heicher place, “ and alſo ſhowe our willingnes to concur and adviſe thame “ heirin.”

The terms regulating the different dreses are copied in the following proclamation, with one or two trifling variations. Instead of first prescribing the robes of the Chancellor, the King's letter commences with regulating the dreses of magistrates of boroughs; and in doing so his Majesty makes no distinction in favour of the seven greater boroughs, but prescribes for all the dress which the proclamation orders for those only of less "power and habilitie."

It appears that the Clerk of Register failed to comply with the statute appointing the Royal letter to be inserted in the books of Parliament; but the concluding extract records the exhibition to the Town Council of Edinburgh of the pattern robes appointed for their use.

The Proclamation is taken from the Register of Privy Council, and the Record of the Council's Acts of Sederunt furnishes the entry prefixed to it.

HOUSEHOLD ACCOUNT OF LUDOVICK
DUKE OF LENNOX, WHEN COMMISSIONER TO THE PARLIAMENT OF SCOTLAND.

ANNO M.DCVII.

THE following account of the expenses of Ludovic second duke of Lennox, while holding the office of High Commissioner to the Parliament of Scotland,* is printed from the original preserved in the General Register House.

The first part of the account comprehends the period from the Duke's arrival at Edinburgh "from Court in England," on the 26th July 1607, till the conclusion of the Parliament on the 11th day of August thereafter; during which time his Grace appears to have kept his court with much of the magnificence and expense of royalty. We meet, however,

* The Privy Council granted warrant to the Chancellor to append the great seal to his commission, (which is engrossed in the books of Parliament, Acta Parl. v. IV. p. 365.) on the 21st day of July 1607. On the same day the following entry appears in the Registers of Privy Council, "Anent the ryding to the Parliament.—The quhilk day the Lordis of Secreite Counsaile hes concludit and resolvit that the Estaittis of Parliament sall God willing ryd upoun Fryday the last of Julij instant and ordanis publicatioun to be maid heiroyf at the mercat croce of Edinburgh, quhairthrow nane pretend ignorance heiroyf."

On the 28th July, there appears the usual "Proclamatioun for keiping of peace during the tyme of the Parliament;" and on the next day, the following "Warrant for keiping of a gaird within the burgh of Edinburgh,—Forsameikle as it is maist necessar and expedient that during the present sessioun of Parliament guid with a curious mixture of simple tastes and habits, with a display of the most expensive luxury. The enormous charge for foreign fruits, spices, and confectionary of forgotten names, contrasts amusingly with the charge for “four pyntis of curdis and quhay, vi š. viii d.—Item, for reim, xiiij š. iiij d.” We are not informed what length of time was allowed for consuming “fourscoir fyftene gallounes of aill furneift at the Parliament, conforme to Walter Alexanders compt.”

The next division of the account commences with his Grace's coming “from the Northe,” beginning on the 21st September at the ferry of Brouchty, and minutely detailing his expenses at St Andrew's for two days, at Kirkcaldy, Burntisland, on the Ferry (including ix lib. “to play at the kairtis in the boite,) and rule and quietnes be keipit within this burgh; Thairfore the Lordis of Secrite Counsale ordanis ane maiser or officiar of airmis to pas to the mercat croce of Edinburgh, and thair be oppin proclamatioun to command and charge the bailleis of Edinburgh to caus a sufficient guaird be keipit in thrie seuerall pairtis of this burgh during the tyme of this present Parliament, and to begin thair guaird upoun Thursday the penult of this instant; and in cais ony tumult or commotioun happin or fall out in this burgh, that they tak and apprehend the pairteis, and present thame before the Lordis of his Majesteis Counsale to be tane ordoure with and punisit as accordis; as the saidis baillies will ansuer upoun thair obedience.”

The next order of the Privy Council regarding the ceremonial of this Parliament is on the last day of July, “Anent the Ranking and voiting of the Bischopis in the Parliament—The Lordis of Secrite Counsale remembering how that of auld the Bischopis of this kingdome who represented the spirituall estate, wer ever preferrit, rankit and voitit in Parliamentis and Generall Counsallis before the Lordis of the temporall estaite; and the Lordis of Secreit Counsall being weill myndit that in this present sessioun of Parliament, and in all tymes heir-after, the saidis Bischopis sall have the lyke place and rank as thair predecessouris during a stay of three days in Edinburgh, which he leaves on the 28th for Stirling. On the 6th October we find him journeying from Glasgow to Donypais, and next day to Edinburgh, probably to attend a single meeting of Privy Council. On the 8th he "lape on horse" to return to Donypais. He again came to Edinburgh to Council on the 14th, and rode to Lithgow on the 17th of the same month. On the 13th and 14th days of the following month, the Duke is at Stirling along with his daughter; soon after which time he appears to have returned to England.

Archbishop Spotiswood, in noticing the death of the Duke of Lennox, which he says affected the king exceedingly, records his character in the following terms:—"The 16th of February formerlie bruikit and possesit; Thairfore the saidis Lordis statuteis and ordanis, that in this Parliament, and in all Parliaments heirefter, the Archibischopis and Bischopis sall ryde in estaite to the Parliament house immediatlie before the Honnouris, and that they salbe rankit before the haill temporall estaite, and sall voit before thame."

On the day preceding the dissolution of Parliament (10 Aug.) the Council books record the following order for a "Proclamation anent the Ryding to the Parliament—Forsameikle as my Lord Commissionair his grace and Lordis of Privie Counsale hes thoct meit that the estaitis sall ryde the morne God willing to the Parliament and to be in the Parliament house sone be nyne houris afair none; Thairfore Ordanis herauldis, pursevantis and messingeris to pas to the mercat croce of Edinburgh, and thair be oppin proclamatioun mak intimatioun heirop to the Estaitis, quhairthrow they pretend no ignorance of the same; and to wairme all the prelattis, nobilitie and remanent estaittis, to addresse thame-selffis to the palice of Halyruidhous the morne be aucht houris before none, and to accompany the Commissionair his grace thairfra upoun horsbak to the Parliament house, as they will ansuer upoun thair obedience."

(1625,) Lodowick Duke of Richmond and Lennox deceased, to the great regrave of all that knew him; a nobleman of excellent parts, whose very aspect and countenance did promise much good. He was thrice married, first to a sister of the Earl of Gowrie, by whom he had no children; his second wife was a sister of the Lord Loudon, by whom he had a daughter and son, that died both young. In his third and last marriage, with the Countess of Hartford, he found more content than in both the other,* but lived with her only some few years, being taken away in the 48th year of his age."

It may be mentioned that the "Lady Athoill," on whose account several payments are stated, was Mary Countess of Atholl, second daughter of William Earl of Gowrie, and widow of two successive Earls of Atholl. She was sister to the Duke of Lennox's first wife.

In the account of David Lord Scone Comptroller, for the year 1606—7, we find the following entries:

"Item for halding my Lord Duik his hous the tyme of the Parliament, j<sup>m</sup> li<sup>b</sup>.
Item for wyne to the Lordis of the Articles in the Tolbuthe, x li. iij s. iiij d."

* This hint of the unhappiness of his former marriages, is corroborated with regard to the second, by an entry in the Record of Privy Council, 24th Sept. 1607, from which we learn that the Duke had recourse to legal measures to compel dame Jeane Campbell his wife to deliver to his care their daughter Lady Elizabeth Stewart, whom she "violently detenit and withheld,"—she "being now come to that aig that scho is capable of instructioun and learning." It will be observed, that two months later the Lady Elizabeth is in company with her father.

INDENTURE OF A HORSE RACE BETWIXT
THE EARLS OF MORTON AND ABERCORN AND THE LORD BOYD.

ANNO M.DC.XXI.

HORSE racing has never borne a prominent place among the national amusements of Scotland. So long as this country continued a separate kingdom, war formed at once the occupation and the amusement of her nobles, who were from necessity not less than from choice amateurs of the art. The noblest of domestic animals was regarded as an article of use rather than of luxury, and the cares of the legislature were directed to preserve horses from injuries by malice or carelessness, and from exportation beyond the realm. In a country little adapted for the pastimes of the chase, and a climate alike unfavourable to the breeding of stock and to the abundant supply of suitable sustenance, speed and pedigree were scarcely attended to. Accordingly the race course was rarely resorted to by our early Kings and their associates, who preferred the martial exercises of weaponshaws and butts, or sought relaxation in cards, dice and other games of hazard. One entry, however, occurs in the Treasurer's accounts of 1504, and must be considered as an exception. It is in these terms :

“ Item, the secund daij of Maij to Dande Doule quhilk
 “ he wan fra the King on hors rynning,                      xxviij s.”

It does not appear on what course this royal match was run, but in 1552, a race had been established at Haddington for a silver bell, as is shewn by the following extract from the records of that Burgh.

1552, May 10.—The quhilk day John Forrois, burgess of Hadingtoun, came cautioner that ane worthy and mychty lord, George lord Seytoun, sall bring the silver bell that his horse wan upon the x day of Maij the yeir of God I<sup>m</sup> V<sup>c</sup> fiftie twa yeiris, to the said burgh of Hadingtoun, upon the thrid day of November the samyn yeir of God, and present the same to the provost and baillies of the said burgh of Hadingtoun, with ane augmentation lyke as the said lord pleases to augment for his honour ; and the same bell to be run for the said day, swa that the wynnar thereof may have the same again ; and for observing of thir premissis the said John Forrois has actit himself in the common buyk of Hadingtoun, the said x day of May, the yeir of God above specifit.

In the course of the following century this new taste of our ancestors had gained such ground that their excessive passion for the turf called for the interposition of Parliament. The preamble of Stat. 1621 chap. xiv. is in these terms :
 “ Confiddering the monyfold evillis and inconvenientis whiche
 “ enfew upoun carding and dyceing and horse races, whiche “ ar now over much frequented in this cuntrey to the gryit “ prejudice of the liegis ; and becaus honest men ought not “ expect that anye wyning hade at anye of the games abone “ writtin can do thame guid or prosper,”* &c. The statute goes on to limit all wagers upon horse races to the sum of one hundred merks, under penalty of forfeiture of the surplus to the poor of the parish.

The records of other Royal Burghs afford curious notices of the progress of this passion. Some such have been recovered by the care of Mr Motherwell from the records of Paisley, and appeared in the Paisley Magazine. The earliest of them is to this effect :

Act anent the Silver Bell.—April 1608. Item, it is concluded that ane silver bell be made of 4 oz. weight, with all diligence, for ane Horse race yearly to be appointed within this burgh, and the bounds and day for running thereof to be set down by advice of my Lord Earl of Abercorn Lord Paisley and Kilpatrick.

The prize thus instituted was, like that run for at Hadding-ton, subject to the arrangements of modern champion-cups, and the owner of the horse that “ bore away the bell” was obliged to find caution, under a penalty of 100 pounds, for again producing it at the race of the following year, while the stakes which accompanied it became his property.
 All this, and other curious details, are fully set down in the next “ act” of the sporting bailies of Paisley.

Act setting downe ane hors Raiss.—Apud Paislay decimo tertio die
 mensis maij 1620. The quhilk day Andro Crawford and Jo<sup>n</sup> Algeo

Thairfoir it is now concludit and ordanit be the saidis baillies and counsell, with advyse and consent fairsaid, that yeirlie in tyme cuming thair bell raice salbe rwe on the saxt day of Maij in manner following, viz. to be start at the gray stane callit St. Connallis stane, and fra that richt eist to the lytill house at the calsayend of Renfrew, and fra that the hie Kingis way to the walnuik of Paislaye; and quhat horse first comes over a scoir at Renfrew sall have ane dowbill aingell, and the horse and maister yairof that first comes over the scoir at the said walnuik of Paislay, sall have the said bell with the said burghe's airmes yairvpoun, for yat yeir, togidder with the rest of the gold that salbe gevin in with the said bell in maner following; except ane dowbill aingell that salbe given to the secund horse and his maister yat comes nixt over the scoire to the foirmest; and to that effect the saidis bailleis and counsell present and to come, with advyse of thair said lord proveist, obleist yame to give in yeirlie with the said silver bell the pieces of gold following, viz. the said lord proveist ane dowbill aingell, the saidis bailleis and counsell ane vther dowbill aingell. Lyikas the noblemen haifand landis within the parochin of Paislay, as my lord Sempill ane singell aingell, my lord Rose, my lord of Blantyre, everie ane of thame ar willing, for the vphalding of the said bell race, yeirlie to give in ane single aingell yairvnto; and everie awner of the horse that rwnes to produce ane singill aingell of gold to the said bailleis befor the foir. The horse be drawn out, lyikas all the awnneris of the horses that sall happen to ryne yeirlie salbe obleist to be present within the bur<sup>t</sup> of Paislaye, dayes at leist befor the said raice day, and thair to be ready with thair ryderis befor ten houris befor nowne, and the rydaris to be weyit at the trene of the said bur' of Paislaye                      stane wecht; quhair the maisteris or vtheris haifand power of thame salbe present, with the rydaris in the tollbuthe of the said burgh, for gifing up thair names, casting of the dyce for thair places in outleiding and the wandhandis. And because this present yeir is so far spent, it is concludit be the said lord proveist and vther noblemen, with advise of the saidis bailleis and counsell of yis bur', that the said bell raice be rune the first day of Junij nixtocum, fra the gray stane callit St Connollis stane to the said lytill house, and fra yat to the walneuk of Paislaye, as said is, haifand yair pens to wone the said bell, keipand thair wecht in manner above written, being weyit againe at the said trone, sall have the said silver bell hung at his horse heid, and ye gold foirsaid. With this provisioune, that the maister of the horse or onie vtheris haifing power of him salbe actit as principall, with ane sufficient burgess man as cautioner for him conjunctlie and severallie, for productione of the said bell to the saidis baillies of Paislaye, als gude as he sall resave the samyn, with what augmentatioun pleist him to adde, yeirlie apoun the said saxt day of Maij befoir nyne houris in the morning, and quatever horse beis not keepit and dyettit within the said burgh the space foirsaid befor the said day, and led fra Paislaye to the starting place, they sall not be sufferit to runne in tyme cuming, and quatevir horse winnis the said silver bell three yeiris together, the maister owner yairof sall have the said silver bell to himself conforme to the manner of vther burrowes.

Item, it is concludit be the saidis bailleis and counsell of the said bur', with advyse of my lord proveist, that ane efterschot raiss sall be run yeirlie in all tyme cuming, fra ane scoir at the sclaittis of Elliralie to ane vther scoir at the calsayheid of the said bur' of Paislaye, be horse of the price of ane hundreth merkis, ryddand with the wecht foirsaid, for ane furnaischeit sadill, quhilk salbe yeirlie presentit be the saidis bailleis of Paislaye present and to cum, at the scoir at the said calsayheid. And guhilkis of the saidis horses that sall happin to cum first over the said scoir at the said calsayheid, the awner yairof sall have the said sadill, stok thairof and covering; and the awner of the secund horse, that sall happin to cum secundlie over the said scoir, sall have the furnisching of the said sadill then presentit: the ryders allwayis of the saidis horses keipand thair wechtis they war weyit of befor their furthdrawing, and na vther wayis.

The anxiety of the authorities of Paisley, in favor of a pastime so much in contrast with what are now supposed the characteristic pursuits of the citizens of that community, may be perhaps accounted for by the taste and influence of their provost, the Earl of Abercorne. The "act" last quoted is drawn with the skill of a connoisseur, probably from the special dictation of that nobleman, and may have assisted in calling from the legislature a few months afterwards the testimony against turf sports which has been quoted. At all events, the interposition of the law does not appear to have checked the Earl's propensities to this species of gambling; for about the very day in which the statute was passed, he, in open breach of its enactments, became a party to the following indenture:—

In 1622, the Paisley bell-race and cup were gained by another of the parties to this curious obligation, the Lord Boyd.

The Mercurius Caledonius for the first week of March 1661 contains this quaint advertisement :

“ The famous Horse Course of Couper in Fyfe, which by the iniquity “ of the times hath been so long buried, to the great dissatisfaction of our “ Nobility and Gentry, is to be run, conform to the institution, upon “ the secund Tuesday of April: There is a considerable number of “ Horses to carry on the work of the day ; among others a Waywood of “ Polonia hath a Tartarian horse. This noble Gentleman was pleased “ to come to this Nation to congratulate our happy restauration ; And it “ is to be desired that such curious Gallants as comes from Forreign “ Nations to see the Course, that they do not as others formerly did, “ sleep in the time of the Solemnity. It is now clearly made to appear “ by a frequent concourse of Gentry in these Fields, that the report of “ the Horse Infection was an absolute aspersion.”

The Cuper races are mentioned repeatedly by the gossiping author of the Diary of Fife, who fixes their institution in 1621, being the same year with the preceding indenture, and with the prohibitory statute. It does not appear, however, that the meeting of 1661 was graced by the novelties promised in the Mercurius.

Apr. 30. 1661.—The laird of Philiphawch his horse wan the race att Cuper this yeire, and Stobs horse surnamed Scot was second. Onlie thir two ran, and as they went foorth so they returned, Philiphawch his horse being still first. That which was formerlie money is now conuerted to a large siluer cupe, worth 18 li<sup>5</sup>. sterl. or therby, as is reported. The rydar that wan was Johne Hoome. On the morrow being the first of May, they ran for a siluer cup, worth 5 li<sup>5</sup>. sterl. given in by the prowest of Cuper for the tyme, videlicet, the earle of Rothies, wher Powry Fotheringames horse in Angus caried the day, the same Johne Hoome being the ryder, and William Arnot's horse, Fernys brother, was the last of the fowre horses that ran. *

The town-council of Stirling were also patrons of a horse race, and in 1664 the prize was a silver cup. More recently the sports of that burgh became very diversified, and the relic of courtly jousts, which it is easy to detect in the tilting match patronized by the Guildry, is strangely contrasted with the goose race proposed by the Maltmen.

Apr. 16. 1706.—The councill appoints intimatione to be made upon the next May ffair, and the two Fridayes before that there is ane goose race to be ridden for by the maltmen of the burgh upon the Saturday immediatlie before Whitsunday nixt, a little without the burrowes gate, which is to begine at nyne aclocke in the morning : As also ane horse race for ane fyne sadle and furniture, to the value of twelue poundis fourteen shilling, to be ridden for the said day at one o'clock in the afternoon, betwixt the burrowes gate and William Shirrayes in Cambusbarrone, back and foir, value of each horse to run not to exceid sixty pound : As also ane foot race betuixt the burrowes gate and Whytehill at thrie aclock the said day for ane pair of stockings, new shoes and blue bonnet.

Apr. 21. 1707.—The councill appoints ane horse race to be run at Stirling upone the                      day of May next for ane silver mug, to the value of                      which is to bear in great letters STIRLING PRIZE : As also ane foot race to be run for the said day by men only for ane pair of shoes, ane pair of stockings, ane pair of gloves, and ane bonnet : As also recommends to the gildrie, to order ane race for ane large gold ring to be run for upon horse back with lances the foresaid day ; and to the maltmen to appoint ane goose race the samen day ; and the omnigatherum to appoint another race for ane load sadle, ane pair of sods, and ane new sack full of coals the samen day ; and appoints all the foresaids races to be put in the weekly gazzett for six weeks to come to the effect the leidges may be acquainted thairwith.

LETTERS FROM HENRY II. KING OF FRANCE, TO HIS COUSIN MARY, QUEEN DOWAGER OF SCOTLAND.

MDXLV—MDLIV.

THE originals of the following Letters from Henry II. of France are contained in the first volume of the Balcarras MSS., in the Advocates' Library. That valuable collection is comprised in eight folio volumes, lately arranged and bound. It was presented to the Advocates' Library by Colin third Earl of Balcarras, in the early part of last century, and consists of a mass of public documents, besides many papers relating to the family of Balcarras, and to the University of St Andrews. The public documents were probably collected by John Lindsay, parson of Menmure, one of the Senators of the College of Justice, who was appointed Keeper of the Privy Seal, Mar. 8. 1595, and Secretary of State, May 26. 1596,* and who is well known as an active statesman in the reign of James VI.

HENRY THE SECOND of France, was the second son of Francis I. He was born in 1518, succeeded to the crown in 1547, and died in 1559. He married in 1533 the celebrated Catherine de' Medici, daughter of the second Lorenzo, by whom he had Francis II., Charles IX., and Henry III., successively Kings of France. His sister Magdalen was the first wife of James V. of Scotland, but she died in 1537, a few months after her marriage. Her widowed husband married afterwards Mary of Guise, widow of Louis Duke of Longueville. Her descent may be thus briefly sketched.

* Registrum Secreti Sigilli, lrviii. 126, 169.

Claud, a younger son of René II. Duke of Lorraine, obtained from Francis I. the duchy of Guise, and had by Antoinette de Bourbon, with other issue, Francis Duke of Guise, Claud Duke d'Aumale, Charles and Louis both Cardinals, Francis Great Prior of France, René Marquis d'Elbeuf, and Mary Queen of Scotland, to whom the following letters are addressed. Her marriage with James V. took place in 1538, and the only surviving child was Queen Mary, to whom, upon her father's death in 1542, devolved that fatal heritage the crown of Scotland, when she was but a few days old. She was carried to France in 1548, and was married there in 1558 to the Dauphin, afterwards Francis II.

These observations may suffice to shew the relative position of the parties referred to in the subjoined letters, most of which were addressed by Henry II. to his cousin the Queen Dowager of Scotland, between 1545 and 1554. The letters themselves may however require more particular notice.

The concluding words of compliment and the signature are always in the King's hand-writing, and the counter-signature of Bordelet his Secretary of State is generally appended. The first two letters were written by Henry before he succeeded to the throne, and may be regarded merely as expressions of kindness and affection. We are informed by Lesley, that in the spring of 1545 Monsieur de Lorge Mongumry, "ane knyght of the ordour of France," arrived in Scotland with 5000 troops to support the French party in that kingdom, bearing with him the Order of St Michael to the Regent Arran, and to the Earls of Angus, Huntly and Argyle. To this expedition the former of these two letters appears to refer. Montgomery was captain of the Scottish archer guard of Henry II., and from his lance that monarch received, at a tournament held in honor of the marriage of the Princess Elizabeth, the unfortunate wound of which he died in 1559. On this accident it was remarked, Quem Mars non rapuit, Martis imago rapit!

The third of the series was written about the same time, to intercede for John Lord d'Aubigny, who had been imprisoned in consequence of the intrigues of his brother the Earl of Lennox with the English party. From this interference it may be presumed that d'Aubigny was secretly in favor of the French alliance for the young Queen, to which his brother was so actively opposed. This is the more probable from his being in the service of France, in which he commanded the Scottish archers and the garrison of Avignon.

Another letter, without date, commending in warm terms the exertions of the Queen Dowager in support of Henry's views, is here introduced, as it was about this time that these exertions became important. Robertson says, that "after the death of Cardinal Beaton, [in May 1546,] "Mary of Guise took a considerable share in the direction of affairs. She "was warmly attached by blood and by inclination to the French interest, "and in order to promote it, improved with great dexterity every event "which occurred." The defeat of the Scottish army at Pinkie rendered necessary an urgent application for aid from France, and gave an opportunity to the Queen Dowager and the French ambassador d'Oysel to effect Henry's grand object, of obtaining possession of the person of the infant Queen, by making this the condition of sending an army to Scotland. These terms were reluctantly agreed to by the Regent in the end of 1547; and a new incursion of the English, under Lord Grey de Wilton, in April 1548, hastened the dispatch of succors from France. On the 16th of June a fleet arrived at Leith, bringing 5000 men under the command of Monsieur d'Essé, and Queen Mary was forthwith sent to France. There were with this army some of the most distinguished officers of France,—Brissac, d'Estanges, de Biron, Strozze Prior of Capua, the Conte Reingrave, &c. Those who wish to learn the details of the expedition may consult the minute narrative of Lesley, or the gossiping pages of de Brantome; and in particular, Beaugue's Histoire de la Guerre d'Ecosse, presented to the Club by William Smith, Esq. The importance of its services during two campaigns was scarcely worthy of the chivalrous motive which the latter writer ascribes to Henry ; and it is not difficult to see that the custody of the young Queen, and a diversion of the English from Boulogne, were to him objects of greater moment than fulfilling the duties of knight-errantry "comme protecteur des personnes affligées." Numbers five, six and seven of the subjoined documents bear upon these transactions. The Sire de Montluc was John Bishop of Valence, brother of the Marechal de Montluc, one of the most accomplished diplomatists of his time, whom de Brantome, generally the most indulgent of biographers, characterizes as "fin, delié, rinqnant, rompu et corrompu, autant pour son sgavoir que pour sa pratique." The intention of sending the Marechal de Termes as Lieutenant-General does not appear to have taken effect until the summer of 1548, when, according to the authorities above quoted, he superseded Monsieur d'Essé, in consequence of the latter having suffered from a severe attack of jaundice.

Number eight recommends to the Queen the services of Captain Fauchet, and is probably that alluded to in the immediately subsequent letter. The Madame de Vallentinois mentioned here was Diana of Poitiers, the favorite mistress of the King ; but the chief interest of the letter consists in the concluding sentence being in the hand-writing of Henry, for which reason it is selected as a specimen of his autograph.

The next letter alludes to an insurrectionary movement which took place in Guienne in 1548, in consequence of the discontent against the odious Gabelle, or salt tax. A more interesting portion of its contents relates an anecdote of court gossip in reference to the Queen of Scotland, at the marriage of the Duke d'Aumale. Moreri fixes the 1st of August 1547 as the date of this marriage, but Mary's presence proves that it must have been in the following year.

The Archbishop d'Armacan, or of Armagh, appears to have been Abbot elect of Dryburgh, and in his favor the King of France writes in 1549, praying that he may be put in possession of that preferment with all dispatch.

In the summer of 1549, King Henry mustered his forces in order to wrest Boulogne from the hands of the English. He therefore recalled a force of four galleys under M. de Villegaignon, by the three letters which follow next in order.

Numbers fourteen and fifteen anxiously press the Queen Dowager to obtain the release, by exchange, of James fourth Lord Fleming from his captivity in England. Henry had been urged to this by the mother of Lord Fleming, who was one of the ladies in attendance on Queen Mary in France.

In the next letter the King highly commends the service of David Panter Bishop of Ross, ambassador resident at his Court from Scotland.

The preparations against Boulogne being completed, Henry took the field; and on the 28th of August, he writes to the Queen Dowager of his success in reducing Ambleteux and other forts.

The war, commenced in 1551 between Henry and his hereditary rival Charles V., had led to important advantages in favor of the former during 1552. In the following year, the Emperor made great exertions to recover Metz and other losses; but these were met by equal energy on the part of Henry, and although Therouaine and Hesdin fell, the arms of France were generally successful, until in 1554 victory crowned them at the great battle of Renti. To some of these events the next four letters refer. Numbers eighteen and nineteen testify the zeal of the French monarch to bring his strength into the field; but amid the din of arms, he pays a pleasing tribute to the lamented death of the amiable Edward VI. of England. The two others present us with minute and interesting details by Henry, of the campaign during August and September 1553.

The remaining four letters do not concern matters of public moment, and are remarkable only as showing the minute attention which Sovereigns were then ready to give to private interests. In these instances it might perhaps not be difficult to trace, or to conjecture, inducements for Henry's interference: his intercession in favor of Achessone may have been gained by the offer to raise a troop of light horse for his service; and possibly the ruined merchants, whose entire means and substance were in the hands of Scottish pirates, may have still been able to raise a timely contribution to his treasury. The exact situation of "Millport, near Leith," may now be doubtful, but the compact is curious by which an individual offers to construct a fortified harbor, to be repaid in benefices or pensions. The last of the series recommends the Sire de Fleming, probably John the fifth Lord who was then heir presumptive to his brother, and whose family were much in attendance upon the young Queen of Scotland.

LETTERS OF MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS,
DURING HER RESIDENCE IN FRANCE,
TO HER MOTHER MARY THE QUEEN
DOWAGER OF SCOTLAND.

THE following four letters, addressed to the Queen Dowager by her daughter, form an appropriate addition to the preceding collection. They were written in France, and are printed from the originals in the handwriting of Mary, which are preserved in the General Register House. The first is in the stiff hand of a very young person, and was evidently written before the Queen's marriage. The next two seem to have been sent with the Commissioners who had gone from Scotland to attend her nuptials in 1558. The last probably relates to the succours obtained from France by the Queen Regent in 1559, against the Lords of the Congregation.

THE following document seems scarcely to require any historical illustration in this place. The ill-omened marriage of the Queen of Scots and the Earl of Bothwell was solemnized on the fifteenth of May 1567. On the fifteenth of the following month, after taking her last farewell of her husband, the Queen surrendered herself, at Carberry Hill, to the confederate nobles who had come in arms against her ; and on the following day, in violation, as has been contended, of the conditions of her surrender, she was conducted as a captive to the solitary castle of Lochleven. The original warrant under which this bold measure was carried into execution, has been preserved in the archives of the Earls of Morton, the lineal representatives of the Laird of Lochleven, to whose keeping the Queen of Scots was committed ; and to the ready permission of the present Earl, the Club is indebted for the fac-simile here given of this interesting paper. It was first printed by Mr Laing, in the Appendix to his " Dissertation on the Murder of Darnley," from a copy found among the Manuscript Collections of Mr Walter Goodall ; the inaccuracies of which appear to have been numerous, and such, in some instances, as to obscure its meaning. Its publication in this authentic form, may be therefore regarded as an accession to the genuine materials of Scottish history.

ROYAL LETTERS AND OTHER ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS ADDRESSED TO THE LAIRDS OF BARNBARROCH.

MDLIX—MDCXVIII.

THE family of VANS of BARNBARROCH, in whose archives the originals of the following documents are preserved, possessed in 1451 the lands from which this designation was taken, and appear to have been settled in that part of the country at least a century earlier. Sir Andrew Vaus of Galloway is mentioned as one of the companions in arms of William first Earl of Douglas at the battle of Poitiers in 1356, in which he is said to have fallen; and Alexander Vaus was Bishop of Galloway in 1426. VAUS has been generally considered the same as DE VAUX or DE VALLIBUS, a name conspicuous for centuries among the chivalry of Europe, and supposed to have been introduced into Scotland in the suite of the sainted Queen Margaret. The Barons de Vallibus were located at Dirleton in the thirteenth century, and since the failure of the male line under Robert III., their blood has descended through families of distinguished rank. From them the house of Barnbarroch is said to have sprung, and though the name has been corrupted into VANS, the armorial bearings support this belief. Such a corruption is indeed very ancient; for we find "Johannem de Vans" among the hostages for the ransom of William the Lion in 1174: See the Liber Niger Scaccarii, edited by Hearne, vol. i. p. 36. On the other hand, Rymer, Prynne and Leland, spell the name according to its other varieties.

The third in descent from Robert Vans of Barnbarroch who lived in 1451, was JOHN, to whom seems to have been addressed the first of the Barnbarroch papers. He was heritable Crouner of Wigton in right of his wife Janet, daughter and heiress of Sir Simon M'Culloch of Myretoun. To him succeeded his eldest son, ALEXANDER VANS OF BARNBARROCH, who subscribed the association in support of the infant James, on the forced abdication of the crown by Queen Mary in 1567. It would seem however from number 4. of these papers, that, like many of the politicians of that day, he was in correspondence with both parties. He married first the Lady Janet, daughter of Gilbert second Earl of Cassilis; and secondly Euphemia, daughter and coheiress of Sir John Dunbar of Mochrum. Having no male issue of either marriage, he was succeeded by his brother,

MR PATRICK VANS OF BARNBARROCH, one of the busy spirits of a bustling age. Bred to the church, he successively obtained the rectories of Wigton and Douglas, and was appointed an ordinary Lord of Session on the spiritual side in 1576-7. Although the letter of Mary, addressed to him in 1571 from Sheffield (No. 10.), exhorts the parson "to abyde constant at our obedience," and plainly designates the dominant faction as "rebels," yet there seems reason to conclude, from the memorials here preserved of his political connections, that he was trusted as well as rewarded by the most bitter opponents of the unfortunate Queen. His ecclesiastical profession did not prevent his aspiring to civil offices and honors: he was a knight, a privy councillor, a lord of the articles, and a commissioner for the provision of ministers and the augmentation of stipends. It is said that he was the first to suggest to James a marriage with the Princess of Denmark; at all events, he was selected as envoy to propose that alliance, and sailed in the summer of 1587, accompanied by Mr Peter Young, the King's preceptor. Their mission appears to have failed for the time, but a year afterwards was renewed with better success. When the Queen was expected in August 1589, after the marriage ceremony had been performed by proxy, Barnbarroch received, in numbers 20. and 21., his Majesty's commands as to the services which were expected of his loyalty on her arrival: and after she had been forced back by stress of weather, Sir Patrick accompanied his royal master in his romantic voyage to meet his bride. He was present at the nuptials at Upsalo on the 23d of November; and on the 15th of December he returned to Leith with Lord Dingwall and others, bearing "news of his Majesteis guid succes and estaite." To him likewise were entrusted the arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the Danish suite, by numbers 22. and 23. of these documents.*

Sir Patrick Vans married first Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Hugh Kennedy of Girvanmains; secondly Kathrine, daughter of Gilbert third Earl of Cassilis. By the latter he had

SIR JOHN VANS OF BARNBARROCH, who succeeded on the death of his father in 1597. In his youth the interest of his father procured his nomination as Commendator of the abbay of Crossraguel, and he was appointed of the Privy Council and household of James VI.

This brief sketch of the individuals of the house of Barnbarroch, to whom the subsequent documents relate, will throw some light upon the matters therein contained. The great-great-grandson of Sir John obtained by marriage the estate of Sheuchan, and in consequence added to his own the name and arms of Agnew, which are now borne by his grandson, Patrick Vans Agnew of Barnbarroch and Sheuchan. In Pinkerton's Correspondence, vol. II. p. 10, there is a letter from the late Mr Vans Agnew, which mentions the collection of original documents at Barnbarroch, amounting to ninety-three. From thirty-two of these the following selection has now been made, and illustrated with three facsimiles, by the obliging permission of Mr Vans Agnew.

1. A letter from [Gilbert fourth?] Earl of Cassilis to his cousin [John Vans of?] Barnbarroch, as to some jealousies existing between the Earl and his neighbour Stewart of Garlies.

* Moysie's Memoirs, Maitland Club Edition, pp 63, 70, 78 to 83: See also, for particulars of this marriage, the contribution of Mr James Gibson Craig to the Bannatyne Club.

2. An exemption by Francis and Mary, subscribed by the Queen Regent, to Gilbert fourth Earl of Cassilis, from the jurisdiction of the Sheriff of Wigton, Agnew of Lochnaw, in consequence of variance between them, 1559.
3. A letter by Francis and Mary to Cardinal Nicola di Simonetta, recommending that Mr Thomas Hay should be preferred to the vacant Abbey of Glenluce, and that a pension of 100 lib. should be provided out of its revenues to Mr Patrick Vans, 1559.
4. A letter from Mr Patrick to his mother, requesting a supply of articles for his wardrobe.
5. A letter from Queen Mary, calling upon [Alexander Vans of?] Barnbarroch to attend the muster at Stirling, against the insurgent lords, on the last of September [1565?]
6. A letter from Queen Mary and Henry Darnley to [Alexander Vans of?] Barnbarroch to the like effect.
7. Another from the Queen to [Alexander Vans of?] Barnbarroch, sent from Wingfield by the Lord Boyd, 1569.
8. A letter from the Regent Murray, calling upon [Mr Patrick Vans of] Barnbarroch to relieve Robert Commendator of Whithorn, natural son of James V., who was besieged in his house of Crugiltoun by the Queen's forces, 1569.
9. Another from the same, instructing Barnbarroch to forward the collection of outstanding stipends, 1569.
10. A letter of encouragement by Queen Mary to Barnbarroch from Sheffield, to remain constant in her service, 1571.
11. A letter from the Regent Mar, desiring Barnbarroch to march and assist the blockade of Edinburgh, 1572.
12. Another from the Regent Mortoun, of similar tenor to number 9, -1579.
13. A letter from James VI, commanding the attendance of Sir Patrick at Dumfries and Perth, on the Justice Ayre and other matters, 1582.
14. Another from William first Earl of Gowrie, with farther instructions on these points, 6th August 1582. The Earl was brother of Sir Patrick, in consequence of the latter having married Elizabeth Kennedy, who was daughter by a former marriage of Lady Janet Stewart, the Earl's step-mother. This letter was written seventeen days before the raid of Ruthven.

15. A letter from the King, continuing the person of John fifth Earl of Cassilis, then a pupil, under the charge of Sir Patrick Vans, who was his uncle by marriage, 1584.

16. & 17. Two letters from the King, commanding the attendance of Barnbarroch at the muster against the Lord Maxwell and the banished Lords then in arms, 1585; immediately before the taking of Stirling by the insurgents.*

18. Instructions to Sir Patrick Vans and Mr Peter Young, ambassadors to Denmark, to obtain facilities for the importation of victual from the Baltic during the scarcity, 1587.

19. A letter from the Master of Orkney to his uncle and foster-father Sir Patrick, engaging his interest against the Justice-clerk Bellenden, probably in the matter of the annexation to the crown of the temporalities of bishopricks, 1587.

20. & 21. Two letters from the King to Barnbarroch, requiring his attendance on the arrival of the Queen from Denmark, and his contribution to the larder on that occasion, 1589.

22. A letter from the King to Sir Patrick from Croneburgh, with instructions for the reception of the Royal suite on their arrival, 1589. The "Ordour" referred to is printed at p. 29. of Mr Gibson Craig's collections relative to the marriage of James VI.

23. An appeal by his Majesty to the loyalty and liberality of the Laird of Barnbarroch, to contribute towards the expenses incurred in entertaining the Danish suite, who had come over with the Queen, 1590.

24. A summons to Sir Patrick to attend the council in the matter of the Prince's baptism, 1594.

25. A letter from the King, commanding [Sir John Vans of] Barnbarroch to demit the house and place of Crossraguel, that it might be repaired for the use of the Prince, 1602.

* Moyzie's Memoirs, p. 54.

26. A letter from the King, desiring that Barnbarroch should attend upon the Commissioner at the ensuing General Assembly at Perth, 1618.

THE subjoined extracts from the Records of the Town-Council of Edinburgh illustrate the origin of the University Library of that city. From them it appears that the Library existed before the College had been founded; for although Robert Reid, Bishop of Orkney, died in 1558,* yet some years elapsed before the magistrates were able to make effectual this legacy of 8,000 merks, bequeathed by him for the endowment of a College. This was at length accomplished in 1582, mainly by the exertions of William Litle, a reputable burgess, afterwards Provost of Edinburgh, and proprietor of the estate of Liberton. His brother was Mr Clement Litle, Advocate and Commissary of Edinburgh, who left to his native town his collection of books, which was very extensive for the time. Mr Clement died on the 1st April 1580, and the following clauses are extracted from the Testament-Testamentar and Inventory of his goods, preserved in the Records of the Commissariat of Edinburgh, and recorded on 20th Feb. 1582.—“ Item his hail bukis of “ theologie, estimat to the soume of ane thousand merkis, quhilkis wer “ left be the defunct in legacie to the Toun of Edinburgh, to be usit be “ the ministeris, eldars and diacones thair of, as is underwritten. Item “ his hail law bukis, and uther bukis for scollaris, estimat and extend“ ing be just calculatioun by the airschip, to the soume of ane hundreth “ fourtie pundis, xvij s. viij d.” It is unnecessary here to anticipate the terms of the Deed of Bequest, nor the steps taken to render it available to "the kirk of God thairin," as these are fully detailed below. It is however worthy of remark, that the addition to Mr Lowson's house, built to receive the books, is supposed to have stood upon the very site now occupied in part by the Library of the Faculty of Advocates. When removed to the infant College in 1584, these books formed the nucleus from which has sprung the valuable Library now belonging to the University; but the inscription, selected by the Town-Council in 1580, still distinguishes them among the mass of after acquisitions. The brothers were, during their lives, useful and eminent citizens, and their memory was celebrated by a descendant in 1683, in this monumental inscription in the Greyfriars' Church-yard:

*Qualis at ille Clemens, quam magnus et ille Littelus, Hoc cives, illud Bibliotheca docet :
Nobile par fratrum ! meritis certatur utrinque, Metropolin, musis, hic fovet, ille fovet.*

INVENTORIES OF BUIKIS IN THE COLLEGES OF SANCTANDROIS.

MDLXXXVIII—MDCXII.

THE Libraries of the several Colleges in the University of St Andrews were long on a very limited scale. The most ancient collection of books appears to have been that which was formed by the Faculty of Arts, a body which held its meetings in the buildings of the Pædagogium, afterwards occupied by St Mary's College. These books were acquired principally by donations, but some of them, (though probably a very inconsiderable part,) may have been purchased by the Faculty Quæstor, who collected and disbursed the several contributions annually made by the candidates for the academical distinctions of Bachelor and Master of Arts. Not a few of the books of St Mary's College were given by Archbishop Hamilton. The Library of St Leonard's College owed its existence to Prior Hepburn, and was increased chiefly by the gifts and bequests of the successive principals,—at least almost all the most ancient books bear the names either of John Hepburn, (founder of the College,) or of Alexander Young, Thomas Cuninghame, John Annand, John Law, John Duncanson, George Buchanan, James Wilkie, and Robert Wilkie, the principals of the College from the time of its erection in 1512 to the year 1611. It was afterwards greatly augmented by the Earl of Buccleuch, by Sir John Scott of Scotstarvet, and especially by the munificent gift of Sir John Wedderburn, physician to Charles I.,

who was a regent in that College from the year 1620 to 1630, and by the legacy of Dr Mungo Murray, son of William Murray of Ochtertyre, (one of the regents from 1625 to 1635,) who was afterwards Professor of Astronomy in Gresham College, and Rector of Wells, and who before his death in 1670 bequeathed several thousand volumes to that College,—a bequest which is thus commemorated in the inscription on his monument,

MORIENS COLLEGIO LEONARDINO
LECTISSIMIS MULTIS INSTRUCTAM LIBRIS
SVAM LEGAVIT BIBLIOTHECAM.

The Library of St Salvator's College was progressively acquired in the same manner as the others.

The University Library was founded in 1612 by James VI., who on his visit to Scotland in 1617, set down the following among other "Articles concerning the Univerfitie of St Andrews :—That the Librarie be finished and furnished with " all possible speed, ne sint magistri sine libris :" and "That " means be used to draw scholars to the New Colledge for the " studie of divinitie ; and, for their maintenance, there be two
" at least to be entertained by everie diocese throughout the " kingdome, by the help of the bishops, noble, and gentle
" men, with the ministers of the said dioceses, *ut non sint
" libri sine magistris.*"

The Inventories here printed, are taken from the Originals preserved in the seventh volume of the Balcarres MSS. in the Advocates' Library, and from a manuscript collection of Documents belonging to the University of St. Andrews.

MR JOHN JOHNSTON, of the Aberdeenshire family of Caskieben, was educated at King's College Aberdeen, and afterwards studied at more than one of the foreign Universities. In 1587 he was at Helmstadt, and in 1591 he resided at Geneva. In 1592 he became one of the colleagues of Mr Andrew Melville in St Mary's College, St Andrew's, where he held the station of second Master, or professor of the New Testament. He died at St Andrews of a lingering and incurable disorder on the 20th of October 1611. He is the author of a number of works, all of considerable rarity, as Inscriptiones Historicae Regum Scotorum, Amst. 1602; Heroes ex omni Historia Scotica lectissimi, Lugd. A. D. M.DC.VI.

THE uncertainty which is well known to have existed as to the date of the creation of various Scottish Peerages, became the occasion of frequent and angry disputes as to the order of precedence in Parliaments and General Conventions of the Estates; and among the many laudable endeavours of King James VI. to allay the feuds and contentions of his nobles, that pacific monarch appears to have turned his earnest attention to the adjustment of their respective claims of priority. In that view, the following Act was passed in the Parliament of November 1600 :—

“ COMMISSION ANENT THE RANKING OF THE NOBILMEN

It does not appear that any proceedings took place under this Commission to the Secret Council; but the subject was not lost sight of, and after the King's accession to the English crown, there was issued a Commission under the Great Seal, to a certain number of Peers and Privy Councillors, with powers similar to those conferred by the Act of Parliament; and under this Commission a train of proceedings were held, which terminated in a "Decree of Ranking," dated on the fifth of March 1606. This award of the Commissioners was declared to be liable to challenge in the Court of Sesssion, at the instance of those who might conceive themselves aggrieved by it ; but that no other mode of resistance might be attempted or countenanced, the King addrest the following letter to the Lords of the Privy Council in Scotland :—

Neither the Royal Commission nor any part of the proceedings of 1606 now remain on record ; but in at least two different manuscripts preserved in the Advocates' Library, there are Abstracts or Minutes of the evidence produced to the Commissioners, or found by them in the Public Registers, and copies of the final Decree of Ranking pronounced by them.

From one of these manuscripts, which is in the handwriting of Sir James Balfour of Denmiln, these documents were given in a Collection of "Tracts concerning the Peerage of Scotland," published by James Carmichael in the year 1791. Another copy is contained in a Collection of Legal and Historical Documents made by Sir Alexander Seton of Pitmedden, and is accompanied with a preface, and numerous remarks and additions by Lord Pitmedden himself; and being on the whole more accurate than that printed by Carmichael, it has been thought deserving of republication. The Decree of the Commissioners has been given, not from either of the Manuscripts alluded to, but from an official Extract under the signature of the Clerk of Council, which had been preserved among the family papers of Denniston of Denniston, and has been lately deposited in the General Register House by the present representative of that family.

The additions and remarks printed within brackets appear to have been made by Lord Pitmedden, and some of them are in his Lordship's handwriting.

DE JURE PRELATIONIS, ETC.

PREFACE TO THE READER.

[FOR better understanding of this following manuscript, which contains a Minute of the evidents of some of the ancient nobility, which were produced to instruct the right of precedency anno 1606 before some Commissioneris deputed by the King to cognosce therupon, it is necessary to be knowen that before the year        the nobility of Scotland were not created by patents as now, bot the old way of creation wes by some extrinsick solemnity or ryte, such as girding them with a belt in publick Parliament, or other publick assembly, or by listing them in publick rollis by the titles conferred upon them, or by designeing them so in the publick charters and evidents of ther lands; and which not being alwayes in the custody of the noblemen concerned, many contraversies did arise for precedency and priority of places and votes in Parliament, which were so warme even in the dayes of King James 6th, (at which tyme one wold think the ancient noblemen might have come to some clearing,) that for remeid the King and Estates in the Parliament 1587 were necessitat to make ane Act, which is the Act 41 in number, narrating the same inconveniency: That forasmuch as in divers Parliaments holden by the King and his most noble progenitors, sundry questions had been amongst noblemen for priority of place and votes in Parliament, and therupon sometymes quarrelling, to the disturbance of the suprem Court of Parliament, which ought to proceed with the greatest honor and quyetnes, Therefor, forbiding in tyme coming all such quarrellis or provocation of trouble to others for priority of places and votes in Parliament, otherwayes than by supplication, and to be content with the order and direction of the King and Estates ay and whill there should be a decision by law, under the pain of being repute disturbers of the publick peace of the kingdome, and to be punished therfor at the discretion of the King and Lords of the Articles : and after this they only protested. See the 9th unprinted Act of the Parliament 1604.

This Act cemented differences for the tyme, and the year 1606 a Parliament being to be holden in July, ane effectuall course was taken to obviat all such tumults as had bred trouble in former Parliaments. The King granted commission to some of the nobility and others of the Privy Councill, to call before them all the noblemen that debated, to produce before them such evidents as they had for instructing their precedency ; whereupon summonds were ishued forth at the instance of the King's Advocat against these noblemen, to compeir the        day of        that year ; and most of them compeiring personally or by their procurators, they produced such charters or other writes as they had, wherein they were designed by their titles, and what they wanted they extracted from the Registers and Rolls ; and accordingly the Commissioners did give Decreet, Ranking them in their severall orders, which is therfore called A Decreit of Ranking, and is daitit the fifth of the moneth of March 1606.

Of these wrytes so produced a Minute was taken in order as they were produced, and these are Minutes which follow ; and after the Minutes ther is a copy of the Decreit of Ranking, and after that a List of the noblemen so ranked, taken out of the Decreit ; and last of all, a List of the whole Nobility of Scotland, by all their titles, as they are in the year 1661 and 1685.*

It is lykewayes to be observed, that though the Bishops were not called in this action, yet in this booke, betwixt the production of the

* It has been considered unnecessary to print these Lists here.

Earles and Lords, there is a minute of ane old charter subscribed by them, quherby they swear to the Bruce against the Baliol. Where any alteration has been made since the production be processes, or when I find mention of families in ancient histories, I mark it by way of addition.

Lastly, Its to be observed that ther wes no production made for Dukes and Marqueses, for their creations are but late and weill known. The Duke of Albany is first, as being second brother of the royall family; the Duke of Lennox, who is next, was created in August 1581, Spotswood History, page 315; Duke of Hamilton the thrid.]

COMES ANGUSIÆ

Compeired not; but there was produced for him a write bearing Georgius Comes de Angus frater Isobellæ Douglas Comitissæ de Marr et Garrioch, 9 Nov. anno 8 regni in Rotul. Cartarum [Rob. 3.]

[I cannot understand how he sould be so designed, seeing his sister became Countess of Marr be succession to him onlie, as I am told, for I have not seen the evidents. See quhat I have noted at Marrs productione.

COMES ARGATHELIÆ.

I find no minuta of productione made be Arguile; perhaps it is because he gott the precedence from all other Earles without debaite, for I know he retained it till he wes made Marquis; but it seemes to me ther wes no just ground for his claime, for I have gott a nott of a Charter out of the Duke of Hamiltoun's Charter-kist, past be King James 2. in plaine Parliament, erecting all his lands in one Lordship, dated 3d of July 1445, in quhich, among other witnesses, ther is Alexander Earl of Huntley and Duncan Lord Campbell, who could not be Arguil's eldest sone, for he could be no member of Parliament, and farder I am told be one who sayed he saw Arguiles patent, that it was daitted A. D. 1457.]

COMES CRAWFORDIÆ

Compeared.—Produced ane Infestment given be King Robert, dilecto fratri suo Davidi de Lindsay Comiti de Crawford, [baroniæ de Crawford] cum quatuor punctis Coronæ et in liberam regalitatem, 10 Dec. anno 9 Regni ejus, (in Rotulo Cartar. Roberti 3. B.)

[This David seems to be the sone of James Lindsay of Glenesk, who wes created Earle of Crawford. The date of the Infestment answers to the year 1399, bot Boethius Hist. Scot. lib. [18. fol. 375. v. 70.] and of Ballantynes versione lib. 18, sayes he wes created be Rob. 2. See Lesly upon the Life of the King, pag.

[For a farder informatione of this familie, I add hear a printed Informatione quhich the Earle of Crawford gave me against David Lindsay of Edzel, who layd claime to the title of the familie as mail, and perseued a Declarator therupon in the Parliament 1686, quherof I was a member.]

COMES DE ERROLL.

Compeired, as ane of the Commissioners : Willielmus Dominus de Hay Regni nostri Constabularius, in a Charter given to him of the lands of be K. Ja. 2. 17 March 1449, et Regni sui 14.

EX REGISTRO.

In a Charter granted be the King to the Earle of Douglas Gulielmus Dominus de la Hay Constabularius Regni et Willielmus Comes de Keith noster Mariscallus Regni nostri Scotiæ, are witnesses, 7 July 1451 in Rotul. Cartarum.

Item 12 Feb. 1455, In a Charter granted by the King in of the property to David Stewart of the Earldom of Murray, Willielmus Comes de Erroll Constabularius Scotiæ, Willielmus Dominus de Keith Mariscallus Scotiæ, are witnesses. He is made Earle betwixt the year of God 1451 and 1455.

[ADDITIONS.]

Among the evidents of Sir Alexander Seton of Pitmedden Barronet, one of the Lords of Session, of some land which holds of the family of Erroll, there is a more ancient document than any of these, towitt, a Precept of Clare Constat, granted by William designed Earle of Erroll, dated 13 Dec. 1415, so that the said observation, bearing Erroll to have been made Earle betwixt the 1445 and 1451, is false.

Item, among the said writes there is Instrument of Seasine following on another precept of Clare Constat of the same lands, and contains the precept ingrossed, daited 6 June 1421, which also instructs the creation of the Earle of Erroll to be long anterior to the 1451.

And yet I have seen another observe in these words : 1454, William Lord Hay, Constable of the kingdom of Scotland, created Earl of Erroll, Ja. 2, anno regni 17.

Boetius, in vitam Kenneth 3, who begann his reign anno 977, sayes that Hayius who wes the first of this family, and got his estate for his service against the Danes in the battle there mentioned, wes relatus inter Nobiles at a Parliament then holden at Skoon; but nobility is here only taken in that generall sense in which Toraquell treats of it in his book De Nobilitate.

Evidents of his office of Constabulary belonging to the family of Erroll, and right of precedencie belonging to the office.

The Earle of Erroll claims precedency of all the nobilitie of Scotland nixt to the Chancellour, though of ane ancienter creation than himself, be vertue of his office of Constabulary, of the which that precedency is a priviledge; and to instruct that it is a priviledge, he produces a Report of a Commission that was granted be the King under the Great Seal anno 1631, to take tryall of the priviledges of the Constable; which Report, in the second article therof bears, that the precedency is due to the Constable next to the Chancellor, but he hes never been in possession of it, but only takes place by his antiquity as Earle.]

COMES MARISCHALL

EX REGISTRO.

Wes one of the Commissioners—Primo Aprilis 1426. In the tyme of King Ja. the first, Robertus Marischallus Scotie miles compt is made in the Exchequer in the Shirreff Roll of Kincarden Apud Perth, per Alexandrum Straiton deputatum Comitis Marischalli Scotiæ, 4 Julij 1458, in the tyme of King Ja. 2d. anno regni 21, In Rotulo Vicecomitatum, and in anno 1455, he is called Dominus de Keith. The family of Marischall beganne in the dayes of Malcolm the 2d, sone to Kenneth 3, who entered to reigne anno salutis 1010. The occasion was, that one Kethus a young man fought valiantly against Camus King of the Danes, at Barrie and Aberlemnon in Angus, and at Gamrie and Crochden, vulgo Cruden, in Buchan, and for that service got these lands in Lothian called at this day Keith from his name, and was created Marischall of Scotland. Boet. Lesly and Buchan. upon the Life of Malcolme 2d. See the observation made be us upon the valour of Errolls predecessor.

Wee see there is but short tyme betwixt the rise of these families. The one ryises be the father, and the other be the sone, betwixt the entrie of whose reignes there interveined but 33 years, according to Lesly.]

COMES SUTHERLANDIE

Compeired.—Produced to the Lords Commissioners deput be the Kings Majesty for the declaration of the priority of dignity of the Earles and Lords, &c. A charter given be King David 2, to William Earle of Sutherland and Margaret his spouse sister to the said King, of the barrony of Cluny lyand within the shirrefdom of Aberdeen, dated 14 November 17 year of the reigne of the said King, which is in the year 1346.

[ADDITIONS.

The Earle of Sutherland produced no more the tyme of the Ranking, and therefor he wes ranked in the place as he here stands, after the Earles of Argyre, Crawford, Erroll, and Marischall; bot ther being a Salvo in the Decreit of Ranking, that it should be free for parties grieved to crave a rectification before the Judge Ordinar upon production of new Evidents, the Earle of Sutherland be vertue of this salvo raised a process of Reduction, Improbation and Declarator, against these four Earles, wherein he lybelled that his predecessors, (to whom he hes succeeded jure sanguinis,) were Earles of Sutherland in the tyme of King William the Lyon in the 12 centurie, long before the predecessors of the Defenders were nobilitat, and therfor did call for production of all their auncient wrytes, wherupon they found precedency more auncient than the Pursuers to be reduced and improven; concluding also that his ryght of precedency before them might be declared against the Defenders and their successours for all tyme coming.

This proces wes insisted in before the Lords of Session anno 1667; at which tyme the pursuer, for instructing of his active title, produced the series or progress of the auncient writes following:—

Imprimis, a charter granted be William Dominus of Sutherland, designed also sone to the said Heugh Frisken, confirming the said base charter. The witnesses of both charters are one, and wants dait.

Item, King William the Lyons confirmation of the said Heugh his charter, dated at Sleuchills 29 Apryll.

Item, ane Indenture betwixt William designed Earle of Sutherland and Bishop of Caithness, for dyvers lands in contraversie betwixt the two Earles and the Bishop and his predecessors, dated the 10 of the callends of October 1275. This seemes to be the date bot is ane old character.

This charter is also produced.

Item, a confirmation granted be Robert Duke of Albany, Governour of Scotland, dated at Faulkland the 10 of August 1408, confirming the charter granted be Robert Earle of Sutherland to his brother Kenneth of the lands of Draney, which charter is daited at Dunrobin 22 January 1400.

Item, a charter granted be John Earle of Sutherland of the barronie of Thornboll to Alexander Sutherland upon a sight of the Resignation made be Nicolas Sutherland of Duffus, in the hands of the said Robert E. of Sutherland as superior therof, in favours of Henry Sutherland, the sone of Nicolas, father of the said Alexander, which charter is dated at Pomphray Castle in England 12 July 1444.

Item, a charter under the Great Seal, granted be K. Ja. 2. to John Earle of Sutherland, of the Earledom, dated at Inverness the 24 February 1445. In this charter Marischall is witnes, and designed Dominus de Keith, and Erroll is witness and designed Earle.

land, and to Elizabeth Campbell, Countess of Murray his spous, and proceeds on his own resignation; bot it does not appear by the charter, and this John wes son to Alexander.

Item, the special service of John now Earle of Sutherland as air to the said E. John his father, at Invernes 4 June 1616.

Item, 3 retours whereby the said John now Earle of Sutherland is served air by progres to William first Earle of Sutherland, quho is the second person mentioned in the progress; which three retours are dated at Inverness 24 May 1630, and were exped for carying on the proces of precedencie. This first of them bears, Qui Jurati dicunt Quod quondam Willielmus primus illius nominis Comes Sutherlandiæ atavus quondam Nicolaij Sutherlandii Comitis atavi quondam Alexandri Magistri Sutherlandii atavi Joannis nunc Comitis de Sutherland Latoris presentium obiit ad fidem et pacem Alexandri secundi.

Another bears, quod quondam Willielmus Sutherlandiæ Comes atavus quondam Joannis Sutherlandiæ Comitis atavi quondam Joannis Suther- landiæ Comitiss patris Joannis nunc Sutherlandiæ Comitiss Latoris, Et qui obiit ad fidem et pacem Davidis Regis Scotorum.

The third bears, quod quondam Johannes Comes Sutherlandiæ atavus, quondam Joannis Comitiss Sutherlandiæ patris Joannis nunc Sutherlandiæ Comitiss Latoris presentium obiit ad fidem et pacem Jacobi 4th.

This action being insisted in the year 1671, the pursuer did pass from the Earles of Argyll and Crawford, and insisted only against the Earles Erroll and Marischall, and obtained certification against the defenders documents of honor, not produced, whereof the copy followes.

November 24. 1671.—The Lords grants certification against any patents of honor, wrytts and evidents granted in favors of the Earle of Erroll, his predecessors and authors, to whom he may succeed, jure sanguinis, whereby he may claime place and precedency before the persewers; but refuses to grant certification against any patents of honor, wrytts and evidents granted to other persons wherein the defender is named or designed, and only concerned collateralls, but prejudice alwayes to the defender of any right of precedency due to him as Constable as accords of the law, and superceeds extract of the certification untill the first of Januarij; betwixt and which tyme, what farther the defender shall produce, to be receaved.

Bot before extracting, there was a petition given in for a new hearing, which was assisted by the Earle of Rothes, chancellor, and divers others of the nobility, who thought themselves concerned in this preparative. And after a full debate, the interloquitor was recalled, and the contrare found that no certification could be granted against patents of honor of any noblemen at the instance of another.

The ground whereupon the interloquitor was recalled was, 1<sup>o</sup>. that anent honors, for most part are instructed by Parliament rolls and charters in the registers in which the nobilitie were ranked be their places, and designed be their titles, and these being in publica custodia no certification could be granted against them. 2<sup>o</sup>. No certifications can be granted even against patents of honor, becaus the Persewers title is not sufficient for that effect, and can only be a title to found a declarator of precedency against the defenders, as being more ancient evidents than theirs, bot could be no title of improbation, becaus all titles of improbation should be rights de eodem subjecto. As for example, when ane heretor of lands persewes ane improbation of another mans rights of these lands, he must first instruct his own right to the lands; and no man, before he be infest in lands, can have action for improving another mans infestment thereof, bot the pursuers evidents of honor are of his own titles and dignities only, and the defenders their evidents are rights of their honors, and so are rights of different subjects, and therefor the pursuer's rights could be no sufficient title for improving the defender's rights. This argument was thought be some to be too nice and subtile, yet it was judged be the Lords to be sufficient for recalling the forsaid certification.

After this Interlocutor was pronounced, the pursuers insisted in their conclusion of Declarator of precedency, and diverse alledgeances were made against connexion of the progress of their titles, as also some objections against the formalities of their Retours, which were answered with prescription; bot the material defences were, primo, That the course of succession of the honor and dignitie of the Earle of Sutherland was interrupted by the succession of Elizabeth the airess of Sutherland, who was served to her brother John Earle of Sutherland 1514, married to Adam Gordoun son to the Lord Huntly, by which succession the title and dignity of Earle of Sutherland became extinct, becaus women are incapable of such titles, and they cannot be conveyed to them except the patent be ether taken to them expressly, vel heredibus quibuscunque; and that auncient patents which were taken hæredibus in generall were not sufficient to convoy such titles to women by the ancient Feudale Law: The reason whereof was this, that thes titles did anciently carry along with them offices in warr wherof women were incapable; viz. Comes was one who attended the Prince in warr, so named a comitando ; and Marchio or Marques was so called because he had the defending of borders or marches ; and Dux or Duke was so called a ducendo because they had the leading of the army ; and it's only the late Feudall Law and custom of patents that has introduced the transmission of these titles without offices, and has made the females capable therof. 2°. The defender, Erroll, claimed precedency upon his priviledge as Constable, conforme to the Report that was made to the King upon the tryall of his priviledges, which I have mentioned at his production ; and the Earle Marischall led clame to a precedency nixt to the Constable by his place as Marischall, but instructed no such priviledge, neither did the Lords lay any stress upon this defence, because if ever they had it, they had been more than 40 yeirs out of possession. 3°. It was urged for Erroll, that Boethius and Buchan. upon the Life of Kenneth the 3 do affirme his predecessor to have been relatus inter nobiles, and that in dubio this should have its own weight, according to Theodos. and Valent. in lib. 1. c. de Consulibus lib. 12. quis (inquiunt) in uno eodemque genere dignitatis prior esse debeat nisi qui prior meruit dignitatem.

But the only argument that seemed to have weight with the Lords, was that of the titles becoming extinct by the succession of the airess, and which was so much the stronger, that Adam Gordoun who married her did obtain a Earles patent to himself, and he and his successors retained the armes and sirname of Gordon with the armes of Sutherland in a sheild of pretence only, which imports that they layd no clame to the right of precedency of the family and title of the family as coming to them by succession ; and yet, on the contrair it was urged, that if the successors of Adam Gordon had wanted a right to the auncient title, they could only have taken place from Adam Gordon's patent, and yet they goe further up, being ranked nixt after the Earle Marischall.

The Lords did not determine.]

COMES DE MARR

Compeired.—Produced before the Lords Commissioners a charter of Dame Issobell Dowglas Countes of Marr and Alexander Stewart son to the Earle of Buccan her spouse, of the earledom of Marr, with the castle of Kildrimmy and lordship of Garioch, 9 December 1404. Rob. 3. 14.

Nota, Be this charter and the contract of marriage on which it proceeds, the estaites of Dowglas and Marr belonging to this ladie as aires of both families, was provided to her and her husband, the longest liver of them two in liferent, and to the aires of the mariage, which failzeing, to return to her aires ex utraque parte; and ther being no aires of this marriage, the clause was so interpreted be sentence of law as to divide the families betwixt the nearest respective aires of both, in manner efter subjoynd.

Item, a charter of confirmation made by King Robert 3, confirmeand the charter abovewrittin, primo die Januarij 1404.

Item, a letter be King Robert 3 to Sir Thomas Erskin knight, promissand that the K. should not receave a resignation of the earledom of Marr, to be made be Issobell Dowglas Countes of Marr, dated 22 November, anno 4to regni Regis.

Item, ane Act of Parliament in anno 1587, ratifieing the haill rights titles and provisions made to John Earle of Marr and his predicessors, of the earledom of Marr, as air be progress to Dame Issobell Dowglas Countes of Marr.

Item, the extract of a retour, of the date the 20 March 1588, whereby John Earle of Marr is served air as nearest and lawful air to Dame Issobell Dowglas Countes of Marr. [As to the estaite of Marr the aire of the familie of Dowglas haveing succeded to that familie, as I have said in the marginall note.

ADDITION.

The Earles of Marr are more ancient be farr then this productione instructs, for befor this ther were Earles of Marr of that ilk ; to wit, Donald Earle of Marr, contemporarie with King                      to whom succeeded his sone Gretney Earle of Marr, and to him succeeded his sone Thomas Earle of Marr, in whom failzied the maile line, and the estaite not being tailzeid, his sister Margaret succedded both to lands and dignities, and was the mother of the said Isobel Douglas mentioned in the first charter produced ; shee was first married to the Lord Swintoun of that ilk, and hade no ishue be him ; then she married William Earle of Douglas, be whom shee hade two children, to wit, James Earle of Douglas and Marr—some call him George—killed at the battel of Otterburne anno              foght be King James 2. against the Inglish, and the said Isobel, who succeeded to her brother as aire to the estats of both families of Douglas and Marr, and was twice married, first to Malcome Lord Fleeming, and nixt to Alexander Stewart, naturall sone of the Earle of Buchan, who was one of King Roberts sones procreat upon his Queen Euphame Ross, but had ishue be none of them ; and she deceis- sing befor her last husband, he fell to the liferent, and the estaite of Douglas came back to the nearest air of that line, and the family of Marr to the Lord Erskin. Befor the Lord Erskine succedded, his familie seemes to have been great ; for our histories tell us upon the Life of Robert 2d Joannes Major de Gestis Scotorum. lib. 5. fol. 113. in fin. that this King being much opposed in his succession to the crown upon the death of his uncle King David Bruce be the Earle of Douglas, who layd clame to the crowne upon the joynt titles of the Cumyn and Baliol unite in his person, and having assembled ane army against Robert 2d, the Lord Erskin, then Governour of Dumbartan and George Dunbar Earle of March, and the Earle of Murray his brother, did oppose the Earle of Douglas, till at last the contraversie wes ended by matching the Erle of Douglas eldest to one of the Kings daughters, procreat betwixt him and Euphame Ross.]

[OBSERVATION.

Here betwixt Caithness and Wigtoun ther wants ten Earles, viz. Buchan, Murray, Orkney, Atholl, Winton, Linlithgow, Home, Perth, Dumfermling and Dumbar. The reason seems to be, that their place has not been contraverted among themselves, altho Atholl does contravert with Caithnes be way of declarator, bot without declarator he could not be ranked otherways than he is. All the rest does willingly cede to Caithnes, and are before Wigtoun; but this contraversie betwixt Atholl and Caithnes is ended by Atholls being made Marques.]

* The Records of this parish commence in 1636, and like most landseert registers, contain little of general interest, being mostly confined to the detail of local petty misdemeanours against morality,—the cognisance of which would appear to have been the usual business of the Kirk Session. They are, however, curious, as shewing the peculiar jurisdiction exercised by the church at that period, the moral character of the people, and the heinous light in which such peccadillos were viewed, so very different from the present day.

* The Kirk Session Records of the Parish of Humble are not of very ancient date. The earliest volume preserved commences in January 1643, and terminates in April 1677. There is at the end a register of marriages and of births. The M.S. which is in 4to, is in good preservation, and, with the exception of a few pages at the beginning, and a leaf or two of the marriages and births, is very distinctly and neatly written. Some person has, however, purposely mutilated the record of marriages, by cutting away the lower part of one of the leaves. The abstracted entries are between the 22d of June and 7th of July 1647.*

The Extracts which follow, though not possessing the same value as those that precede, are extremely curious, and will form not the least interesting portion of the Miscellany.

* In the list of marriages, under the date of February 14. 1647, occurs that of "James Skirving of Fiewlandhill" to "Marion Boyd." This person was a descendant of the Standard Bearer of the Earl Marshall, who so dexterously preserved the banner from being captured, by concealing it about his body, when the Scottish army was defeated at Flodden Field. An account of this matter will be found in the notes to Weber's Flodden Field. The Standard is now in the Advocates' Library, having been presented to the Faculty by the late Mr William Skirving, musician in Edinburgh, the representative of the family. Early follies compelled him to part with the estate, and he was obliged to earn a livelihood by teaching music. He died at an advanced age, much respected by all his acquaintances.

In obedience to the which act, the brethren and ruling elders of the two presbyteries of Hadingtone and Dunbar having seriouslie considered anent the former three causes, finds that the number of persones above twentie convened to pennie bridles, and the prices exceeding 12*ſ*. the man, and 8*ſ*. the woman, occasiones great lasciviousness and hurt to the poorer sort; as likewise finds that piping and dancing befor and after dinner or supper, and the staying of persones convened for drinking, the dinner and supper being ended occasiones great lasciviousness; moreover that lowse speaches and filthie communication and singing of badie songs and prophane minstrelling in time of dinner or supper tends to great deboshrie; throw all which abuses flowing from the forsaid three causes, pennie bridles in our judgement becomes seminaries of all profanation within our bounds. For redresse whereof we the brethren and ruling elders of the two presbyteries forsaid earnestlie recommends to all magistrates, and those who have the civill power throwout the limits of the two presbyteries, to interpone their authoritie with ours; and for this effect will be pleased to mak ane speciall act, ordaining, under the penaltie of twentie pounds to be exacted of the saide persones that sall be found guiltie to the vse of the poore, that in time coming the number of persones convened to pennie bridles exceed not twentie; that the prices thereat be not above 12*ſ*. the man, and 8*ſ*. for the woman; that there be no pypping or dancing at all befor or after dinner or supper, and no staying of persones for drinking the dinner or supper being ended: and withall that there be no lowse speaches, filthie communication and singing of badie songs or prophane minstrelling in time of dinner or supper; and we the brethren and ruling elders forsaid for our part ordaines all persones sall be found guiltie of any of the former abuses to be convened befor our kirk sessions respective, to have some ecclesiastical censure farder put upon them, and that for their offensive and scandalous cariage: and in regard the causes of the former abuses proceeds alswell from these in whoses houses pennie bridles are made as fra the saids are to be married, therfor ordained for farder restraint of the former abuses that the persons are to be married (at least the man) come themselves and bring with them the pairtie in whose house the bridles to be made, that both bridegroom and master of the house where the bridle holds, some competent time befor the solemnization of the mariage, may consigne the said pecuniall summe of twentie pounds, at least find caution, and act themselves and their cautioner for that effect, and that befor the kirk session where they are to be maried, or such as sall be delegat be them for that wse, that they sall give obedience to the former act in all the particulars therof, and be answerable for all persones conveened to the bridle; which if they refuse to doe, the benefit of marriage to be denyed to them; and obedience be given, ordaines the said penaltie consigned to be refounded, otherwise the said summe to be confiscat to the wse of the poore of the parish where the fault is committed.

RIDING THE STANG, according to Brockett,* was "a punishment among the vulgar ; inflicted upon fornicators, adulterers, severe husbands, and such persons as follow their occupations during particular festivals or holidays ; or at prohibited times, when there is a stand or combination amongst workmen." It is still prevalent in various parts of England : and in many schools in the north country, where a boy is either disliked by his companions, or has committed any petty offence, he is made to Ride the Stang, i. e. is mounted "astraddle on a long pole or Stang," and supported upon the shoulders of his companions, in which unpleasant situation he is "borne about the neighbourhood backwards."

"When," continues Mr Brockett, "they cannot lay hold of the culprit himself, a boy mounts the Stang ; but he is unmolested, though attended with the same tumultuous cries, if not with increased shouts of acclamation. The proxy vociferously proclaims, that it is not on his own account that he is thus treated, but that of another person, whose crime he names." "The ceremony is also resorted to when a woman has gained an improper ascendancy over her husband, so as to make him bear every species of indignity. In this case, it is called 'Riding the Stang for a neighbour's wife;' and a man is placed in the same uneasy situation as before described, so that he may be supposed to represent, or to sympathize with his henpecked friend, whose misery he sometimes laments in doggerel rhyme applicable to the occasion. He is carried through the whole hamlet, with a view of exposing or shaming the viraginous lady, and of thus preventing further outrages on the person of her pitiable partner."*

This custom was also prevalent in Scotland, although presently in disuse; and the curious papers, now for the first time printed, derive considerable interest from the circumstance of one of them being an attempt to legalize this popular mode of punishment, at a period so comparatively recent as 1734. In this instance, Mr John Fraser, whose station in life does not appear from the documents in question, had been guilty of assaulting his wife; and the married women in the neighbourhood, finding that Mr John Gordon of Avachy, baillie of the regality of Huntly, to whom they preferred an application to grant "toleration to the Stang, which has not only ever been practicable in this place, but in most parts of this kingdom," was not disposed to recognise their demand, although there was "no Act of Parliament to the contrair," took the law in their own hand, and "violently attackt the person of the said John Fraser in the face of the sun, about three in the afternoon, tore his cloths and abus'd his person, by carrying him in a publick manner through the town of Huntly upon a tree." For this outrage, the aggressors were punished by fine, and obliged to find caution.

Dr Jamieson tells us that he had been "informed that, in Lothian, and perhaps in other counties, the man who had debauched his neighbour's wife, was formerly forced to ride the Stang." * In some parts of England, and particularly in London, it is understood that, among coal-heavers and persons of that description, it is very usual to punish any one of their number, who may be suspected to be too intimate with a friend's wife, in a similar manner.

Mr Hone, in his Every-day Book,† remarks, that "Riding Stang" is a custom that prevails in some parts of England on New-year's day to the present hour; and upon the authority of a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine (1791) says, "that on the 1st of January, multitudes assemble early in the morning, with baskets and "stangs," and whoever does not join them, whether inhabitant or stranger, is immediately mounted across the "Stang," and carried, shoulder height, to the next public house, where sixpence liberates the prisoner. Women are seized in this way, and carried in baskets; the sex being privileged from riding "Stang," in compliment, perhaps, to the use of side saddles."

It thus appears, that "Riding the Stang" must not be considered exclusively as a punishment for offences, but that it was resorted to at the commencement of the year as a frolick, though certainly not a very pleasing one for the individual who might be thus elevated. With the following amusing account of an exhibition of Stang Riding, which came under the notice of a gentleman well known in the literary world, these observations may appropriately be concluded.

“ Travelling once through one of the midland counties of England, when the coach stopped to change horses at the inn of a populous village, I observed the whole mobility of the place in motion. The principal figure in the procession was a large he-looking fellow, dressed in women’s clothes, with his face smeared with raddle (keel), sitting on a hand barrow, which was hoisted on the shoulders of four stout fellows, who were occasionally relieved by others. These were preceded by a herald, accompanied by the sow-gelder in his actual-service uniform, as trumpeter, with a band of music. On my asking, what was the matter? the herald stepped forward, and made his proclamation with much ludicrous solemnity:—A woman had beaten her husband.—Had the man beaten his wife, they would have horsed him on a pole, and given him a rough ride round the village; “but as it was a woman, they were a bit decent, loike, and made up the best red-faced ter-vagan they could, to shame her about the place.”

“ This exposé finished, HUZZAE followed HUZZAE from the merry rout; the sow-gelder (who was leader of the band) blew his horn of office, tongs and gridiron, marrow-bones and cleavers, struck up,—and the pomp proceeded!”
