IN the latter half of the twelfth century, if not, as is most probable, at a still earlier period, there existed in Scotland burghs, holding of the Crown, possessing a structure and constitution not essentially different from those of a much later date, and enjoying various privileges and immunities, of which a monopoly of trade and commerce was one of the earliest, and not the least important.

In their general constitution, as in the minuter details of their internal economy, these Burghs possessed many features of resemblance to the English Burghs of the same, and of an earlier date. But, in England, the Burghs do not appear ever to have entered into any confederation for mutual advice and support. In Scotland, on the contrary, they seem to have entered at an early period into combinations for these purposes. One of these associations, known as the Hanse, was established to the North of the Grampians, a century before the great Hanseatic Confederation of the Baltic came into existence. Another, as old almost as the original constitution of Burghs, existed in the South, and was presided over by the Great Chamberlain of the kingdom.¹ This association included at first only Edinburgh, Stirling, Berwick, and Roxburgh, and from these Burghs in their Court or Parliament, is supposed to have emanated the code of Scottish burgal regulations, known as the Leges Quatuor Burgorum. But in 1368, when Berwick and Roxburgh had fallen into the hands of the English, an Act of a Parliament of King David II.,¹ held at Perth in that year, appointed Lanark and Linlithgow to take their place as two of the Four Burghs. At that time the Four Burghs appear to have met annually in Haddington for the purpose of disposing of Appeals from judgments of the great Chamberlain in his Air or Circuit. In 1405, however, they are found assembled in Stirling, at which place they passed an Act extending their constitution, by ordaining two or three sufficient burgesses of each Royal Burgh on the south side of the water of Spey, having sufficient commission, to compear yearly at their Convention, wheresoever held, to treat, ordain and determine upon all things concerning the utility of the common weal of all the King's Burghs, their liberties and Court.² Some years later, Edinburgh was the place of the annual meeting of the Burghs, and King James I., who reigned from 1406 till 1437, ordained, with consent of the three Estates of his realm, that it should continue thenceforward to be so. This ordinance was confirmed by King James II., who, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal, dated 5th November 1454, commanded his Great Chamberlain and his deutes to cause the Court of the Parliament of the Four Burghs to be held at Edinburgh yearly, in manner used and wont; calling together and summoning to compear thereat, the commissioners of the four principal Burghs, to wit, Edinburgh, Stirling, Linlithgow, and Lanark, with the attendants or assessors of the said Court.³

So, in all probability, matters remained till the reign of King James III., when it was enacted by the Parliament held at Edinburgh in 1487,

“that zerely in tyme tocum certane commissaris of all burrowis baith south and north convene and gadre togiddir, anis in ilk zere in the burgh of Inuerkethin on the morne eftir sanct James' day” [25th July] and quhat brugh that comperis not the said day, be thair commissaris to pay to the costis of the commissaris five ll., and zerely to haue our Souerane lordis lettrez to distrenze thairfor and for the inbringing of the samyn.⁴

Notwithstanding this enactment, the Burghs still held meetings in Edinburgh, and it seems that even so late as 1500,¹ these assemblies retained the designation of "the Parliament of the Four Burghs," and continued to be presided over by the Lord Chamberlain. How long that high officer of State attended these assemblies, or how long they retained the title of the "Court or Parliament of the Four Burghs," does not appear, but a minute in 1529, and all the minutes subsequent to that date, refer to the acts set forth in them as having been passed by the commissioners of the Burghs alone, and make no mention of the Lord Chamberlain.² Several of these Conventions, it may be remarked, seem to have been held in obedience to royal letters issued to the Burghs, requiring them to send commissioners to a particular town, at a specified time, to treat of the several matters enumerated in the letters.³ In other cases the commissioners of some of the Burghs fixed the time and place of the annual meetings, and missives were thereupon directed to all the Burghs requiring them to send up their commissioners to the Convention so fixed.⁴ As regards the time and place of their meetings, the Burghs seem to have acted without any reference to the statute of 1487, c. 17.

No record of any meeting in Inverkeithing is now extant, and the practice of holding annual Conventions there, if such a practice ever existed, seems to have been speedily discontinued; for an act of Convention, held at Edinburgh, on 4th April 1552, referring to the old statute merely as a matter of understanding, appointed the whole Burghs of the realm, by their provosts or commissioners, to convene annually, on the last day of July, in such place as might be appointed.⁵ This resolution, however, seems to have been very imperfectly observed, notwithstanding that, in 1555, the fine to be exacted from Burghs who did not appear by their commissioners was raised by an act of Convention to £10.⁶ The irregularity in the meetings of Convention arose in a great measure no doubt from the unsettled state of the times, but sometimes also, it appears, from the carelessness of the Burgh in which the Convention was appointed to meet, who neglected to dispatch the missives to the other Burghs, requiring their attendance at the time appointed. With reference to St. Andrews, which appears as a defaulter in this respect, an appointment to hold a Convention there, in January 1570, is accompanied with the certification that, "gif thair failze thar sall nocht be ony conventioun appoyntit to be in thair toun at ony tyme heirefter, becaus thair was syndrie conventionis appoyntit to be in the said toun abefoir, and nocht keipit in thair default."¹ In 1578 the Burghs were authorized by an act of a Parliament of King James VI. held at Stirling,

"to convene four tymes in the zeir for sic materis as concernis thair estait And that in quhat burgh it salbe thocht expedient to the maist pairt of the saidis burrowis ; Providing alwayis for eschewing of tumultis that thair be present at the saidis conventionis for euerie burgh in nowmer ane except the toun of Edinburgh to haif ane ma nor the vtheris burrowis."²

It will be observed, however, that as previous to this act the Burghs sometimes held two or more meetings in the course of a year, whenever they chose to appoint, so after it was passed, they did not exercise the power of convening four times a year. They seem just to have adhered to their old custom of meeting at such times and places as best served their purpose,—fixing their conventions frequently with reference to the meetings of Parliament, of which the representatives of the Burghs formed a constituent part.³ But no year between 1577 and 1631⁴ passed over without Conventions

In the famous Parliament of King Robert the Bruce, held at Cambuskenneth on the 15th of July 1326, the representatives of the Burghs are, for the first time, distinctly mentioned as being present [Acts of the Parliaments of Scotland, i., 113]; and they thereafter formed an essential part of all Parliaments and General Councils. The Burghs had, however, from a much earlier date, contributed to the necessities of the State, and were probably included in the "majores communitatum," who took part in the settlement of the Crown on Edward Bruce in 1315 [Ibid i. 104]. There is some reason to believe that they may have been present at the Parliaments of King Robert the Bruce in 1314, 1315, and 1318. Some of the Burghs were certainly parties to the ratification of the Treaty with France in 1295 [Ibid i. 97.]

being held. The practice of the Burghs' fixing the time and place of their meetings to suit their own convenience is referred to, and sanctioned, in the preamble of the Act of 1581, c. 26, which ratified and approved the former Acts of Parliament, relative to the Convention of Burghs,

“Forsamekill,” it says, “as it wes found necessar to oure Souerane lord, and his hines predicessouris, that the commissionaris of burrowis convene at sic tymes as they suld think guid, in quhat burgh they thocht maist expedient with full commission : Thairfoir,” it proceeds, “oure Souerane lord with advise of his thre Estatis of this present Parliament Ratifeis and appreis the saidis actis. And for bettir obseruatioun of the saidis conventionis be sic burrowis as hes heirtfoir not send thair commissioneris at onie tyme thairto, hes statute and ordanit that in tyme cuming, quhen onie conventionis of burrowis is appointit to the maist pairt of the saidis burrowis, or be the burgh of Edinburgh, and onie sex or aucht of the rest, The burgh warnit thairto be onie missiue bill of the provest and bailzeis of the burgh, quhair the said conventioun is to be haldin, or vther wayis lawfullie cytat thairto, and not compeirand be thair commissioner sufficientlie instruct, sall pay to the chargeis of the burghis that sall convene the sowme of twentie pundis. And ordanis the Lordis of counsell and sessioun, to grant and direct letteris of hornyng or poinding aganis the burrowis absent, fra the same conventioun, and adiudget be the remanent burrowis, to haue incurrit the said pane and unlaw, and this at the instance of the burgh of Edinburgh without farther proces and calling of pairtie thairto. The saidis Lordis seand the act autentikle subscrivit be the clerk of that convention, that thair absent and convict as said is.”¹

It is to be observed, however, that previous to the passing of this act an act of Convention, held at Stirling in 1579,² had increased the penalty on Burghs who failed to attend to £20, and this fine was imposed on absentees from the following Convention at Aberdeen in 1580.

In conformity with the act 1581, c. 26, the Burghs met from time to time at such places as the majority were pleased to appoint. But in 1586, an act of Convention was passed whereby, to secure unanimity on the part of the Burghs, they were appointed to meet previous to the assembling of national

The Act 1581 c. 26 is still in observance, except in so far as it directs letters of horning to pass at the instance of the burgh of Edinburgh. After a time, the Clerk, Agent, or Collector of the Convention of Burghs was appointed to recover the penalties incurred by absentees;¹ and in 1607, according to Sir George Mackenzie, an Act of Parliament allowed execution to pass at the instance of the Agent, in whose name the letters are now raised.²

Sir George Mackenzie states³ that in his day the Burghs met in July at Edinburgh, Perth, Dundee, Aberdeen, and Stirling. But if that statement was intended to mean either that the Burghs met in these towns in rotation, or that they assembled in those towns only, it was not supported by the actual practice. All the general and particular Conventions between July 1676 and February 1692, both inclusive, were held in Edinburgh; the general Conventions in 1657 and 1675 were held in Glasgow; the general Convention in 1656 was held in Haddington; that in 1650 was held in Cupar; that in 1649 in Queensferry; that in 1630 in Jedburgh; that in 1629 in Culross; that in 1627 in Ayr, and that in 1626 in Dunbar. Of the fifty-one general and particular Conventions recorded between 1625 and 1656, both inclusive, three general and thirty-nine particular Conventions were held in Edinburgh, one general Convention was held in Glasgow, and one in Perth, the remainder being held as above stated. Of the forty-two general and particular Conventions recorded between 1657 and 1675, both inclusive, twelve general, and twenty-four particular Conventions were held in Edinburgh, two general Conventions were held in Glasgow, and one in each of, Aberdeen, Dundee, Perth, and Stirling. With the exception of the general Conventions in July 1692, and in 1697, 1698, 1703, and 1704, which were held respectively in Dundee, Perth, Aberdeen, and twice successively in Glasgow, all the other Conventions and meetings of Committees of Convention between 1692 and 1704, were held in Edinburgh. Since 1704 the meetings have been invariably held in Edinburgh. Propositions to revert to the old custom have been submitted to the Convention on two or three occasions, but have never been received with any favour.

What were the precise functions of the Court or Parliament of the Four Burghs cannot now be fully ascertained; but it is obvious that it decided questions involving the usages of Burghs, and the rights and privileges of burghesses, and even legislated in regard to such matters as the principles of moveable succession. Accordingly, in a Parliament held at Newcastle by King Edward I. in 1292,¹ it was ordered on the motion of the parties in a private suit depending on the law and practice of the Burghs of Scotland, that the Four Burghs should be consulted. This having been done, judgment was pronounced in conformity with their record and verdict. Again, in 1295,² the burghesses of these burghs, assembled at Holyrood Abbey, are found issuing an ordinance as to the division of moveables among heirs and other children. It also appears from the Act of the Parliament of King David II., in 1368, that the Four Burghs were in use to determine appeals from the judgment of the great Chamberlain of the kingdom. At that time, as has been said, both Berwick and Roxburgh were in the hands of the English, and are referred to in the Act as towns "quae sunt et esse debent duo de quatuor burgis qui habent, ex antiquo, curiam facere camerarii semel in anno apud Hadington, super judiciis, si quae forent, coram ipso in itineribus suis ubicunque contradicta," &c. At a somewhat later period these Burghs are found exercising still more important functions. The decree of the Court of Four Burghs held at Stirling in 1405, to which allusion has already been made as having extended its own constitution, also enacted a series of regulations of a general character, affecting the rights, privileges, and duties of the burghesses. These functions, or functions scarcely less important, appear to have been recognised and indirectly sanctioned by the Crown somewhat later;

for King James II., in his Charter to the Burgh of Edinburgh in 1454, already referred to, defines the duties of the Parliament of the four principal Burghs of Edinburgh, Stirling, Linlithgow, and Lanark to be

“ Ad subeundum ordinandum et finaliter determinandum de et super judiciis Burgorum vniuersalem regni nostri curiis datis siue contradictis ac eciam mensuram vine ferlote siue bolle lagine et petre more solito ligiis et communibus nostris dandum liberandum et recipiendum : Necnon omnia alia et singula facienda et exercenda qui in huiusmodo curia Parlamenti secundum leges statuta et Burgorum consuetudines sunt tractanda subeunda et finaliter determinanda.”

And the Act 1487 c. 17 empowered the whole Burghs, at their annual Convention in Inverkeithing,

“ To commoun and trete apoun the weelfare of merchandes, the gude rewle and statutis for the commoun profit of burrowis, and to provide for remede apoun the scaith and injuris sustenet within burrowis.”

In ratifying the whole privileges of the Burghs, and empowering them to convene four times in the year, in whatsoever burgh the majority might determine, the Act 1578 c. 11 declared the object of their Convention to be simply “for sic materis as concerns thair estait.” The Act 1581 c. 26 again, in still farther enlarging their powers as to meeting “at sic times as they suld think guid, in quhat Burgh they thocht maist expedient,” defined the object of their meetings to be

“ To treat vpoun the weifair of merchandis, merchandice, guide rewle, and statutis for the commoun profit of burrowis, as at mair length is contenit in the actis of parliament maid thairanent, and anent the privelege of burrowis.”

But, after all, the Records of the Convention themselves afford the only satisfactory materials for ascertaining what were the subjects dealt with by the old burgal parliament of Scotland, and what were the nature and extent of its action. Upon that subject it is not intended to enter here. But a very cursory inspection of the present volume, will show that scarcely anything affecting the Burghs of Scotland, in their internal administration, or in their commercial relations at home and abroad, escaped the cognizance of the Convention. It defined the rights, privileges, and duties of Burghs; it regulated the merchandise, manufactures, and shipping of the country; it exercised control over the Scottish merchants in France, Flanders, and other countries in Europe, with which from time to time commercial relations existed; it sent commissioners to foreign powers, and to great commercial communities, entered into treaties with them, and established the staple trade of Scotland wherever this could be most advantageously done; it claimed the right, independently of the Crown, to nominate the Conservator, and it certainly did regulate his emoluments, and control his conduct; it sometimes defrayed, and sometimes contributed towards, the expenses of ambassadors from the Scottish Court to that of France and other foreign powers in matters affecting the Burghs and the common weal; it allocated among the whole Burghs of the kingdom their proportions of all extents and taxes granted by the three Estates of the realm; it adjudicated on the claims of Burghs to be admitted to the privileges of free Burghs, and to be added to its roll; it took cognizance of weights and measures; it submitted propositions to parliament in regard to all matters affecting the interests of the country, and influenced to an incalculable extent the national legislation. In a word, it formed a complete and powerful organization for the protection of burghal rights and privileges, and for the promotion of whatever the Burghs conceived to be for their own interest and that of the country generally. Its records thus contain much that throws light on every department of Scottish history, and their publication will, it is believed, facilitate the labours of the future historian.

In the early period of the Convention as has already been remarked, the Burghs used to meet from time to time in various towns. As a rule, the Provost of the Burgh in which the Convention was held presided over its meetings, and the Town Clerk acted as its Clerk, and wrote and apparently retained its minutes. The inconvenience of this arrangement as regarded the records induced the Burghs, in their Convention at Aberdeen in July 1580, to pass an act whereby, "finding thame greitlie preiugit be that inlaik of ane generall buke quhilk suld contene the hail lawis and constitution of burrowis," they unanimously empowered the Burgh of Edinburgh to require all the Burghs in which Conventions had been held, to send, previous to the 1st of September thereafter, and under a penalty of £30, extracts of the whole laws, acts, and constitutions made at these Conventions, in order that these extracts might be engrossed in a general book to be made for the purpose. Edinburgh was further required to produce the book, with all the extracts engrossed therein, at the next general Convention, and also to require all the Burghs to send their Commissioners "maist ancient and wysest, fullie instructed, to the said next Conuention, for approbation ratification and confirmation of the acts and constitutions used and registrat in the general buke foirsaid." The subject was again under consideration at the next general Convention in Edinburgh on 18th April 1581, when the former act was renewed, and every Burgh, "but speciallie Lynlythqu," was ordained to search out the acts of the Conventions held within it, and to send them to Edinburgh with expedition, in order to their being engrossed by John Guthrie. The minute of this Convention also bears that Dundee and Cupar exhibited "sic acts as thai declarit was in thair burchis, and nocht contentit in the buik of Edinburgh and delyuerit thame to the said Ihon and thairvpoun askit instrumentis."² At the following general Convention in Perth, held in June 1582, John Guthrie presented the book, prepared in terms of the previous acts of Convention, when it was unanimously resolved that it should be kept, during the pleasure of the Burghs, by Edinburgh, the commissioners of which should bring it to every Convention wheresoever held. And because the want of the book had in times past been the cause of great ignorance and confusion among the most part of the whole burghs, and to the effect that they might be better informed as to the laws and constitutions made for the welfare of their estate in years bygone, Edinburgh or its Clerk, was directed to make and deliver to every Burgh wishing it, a book of the same size as the general book containing the whole laws and constitutions of Burghs mentioned therein up to that time, at a cost of ten merks for each volume.¹ John Guthrie was thereafter appointed common Clerk of the Convention and keeper of the general book.² It is believed that the office has since been held by the Town Clerks of Edinburgh, under an obligation to attend the Convention wherever it was held, and to produce the Records of the body.

There is every reason to believe that the first volume of the MS. Records of the Convention is that prepared by John Guthrie in conformity with the acts of 1580 and 1581, and probably it contained all the minutes which were furnished to him, but it obviously does not contain the minutes of all the Conventions which had been held. Reference, for example, is made in pp. 10, 13, to acts of a Convention held at Perth in August 1555, but the Record contains no such minute. A Convention was also appointed to be held in Stirling on 31st July 1553³, but the next minute is that of a Convention in Edinburgh on 29th May 1555.⁴ Conventions were ordered to be held in St. Andrews on 30th June 1556,⁵ and on Trinity Sunday 1567, or the next lawful day thereafter,⁶ but no minute of either meeting exists in the Records. It is probable, however, that neither was held owing to the negligence of the Provost and Bailies already alluded to. It will also be observed that there are no minutes of any Convention at Linlithgow in the Records previous to 1581, though it appears from the act of the Convention in April of that year that Conventions had been held in that Burgh, the minutes of which were then specially called for.

In these circumstances, and while the present volume was passing through the press, it was considered probable that minutes or other documents connected with the Convention, of an earlier date than any of its own records, might be discovered in the Registers of other Burghs. A minute examination was accordingly made not only of the Council Records of Edinburgh in the Archives of the city, but also of a MS. volume in the Advocates' Library containing extracts made in 1570 by Alexander Guthrie Town-Clerk, from older Records not now extant, and among these were found an Act of the Court of the Parliament of four Burghs at Edinburgh in November 1500, minutes of Conventions held at Edinburgh in March 1533, Dec. 1539, April 1541, Feb. and March 1563, March 1583, and Jan. 1586, and Extent Rolls of the Burghs in 1535, 1545, 1550, 1556, and 1557.

Communications were afterwards addressed to the Town-Clerks of Perth, Stirling, Dundee, Aberdeen, St. Andrews, Haddington, Linlithgow, and Inverkeithing, asking them to assist in making the present publication as perfect as possible, by causing a careful search to be instituted in the Archives of these burghs, and by allowing copies to be taken of any important documents or minutes connected with the Convention prior to 1600 which might be found in them. These communications were courteously received, but in the case of Aberdeen alone has the result been the discovery of any documents available for the present purpose. From Perth the reply was that the Burgh records do not go farther back than 1597; that there is no entry in the Council records relative to the Convention prior to 1600; and that if any minutes of Convention are extant they must be in some other volume unknown to the Clerk. In Dundee the records are in a state which made it a work of labour on the part of Mr. Kerr to afford the following information which, however, is of so much interest as to justify its quotation.

“We have a volume of Acts of the Head Courts of the Burgh from 1554 to 1582, and Minutes of the Council from 24th September 1561 to 21st January 1568. Then we have a volume of Minutes of the Council from 7th March 1587-8 to 25th January 1603, and thence downwards, except that there is a blank from 1653 to 1663,—a volume being astray.

“We have an early volume of Laws and Statutes of the Burgh enacted at the Head Courts from 5th October 1550 to 30th September 1622.

“Earlier than these dates there are various minutes of the Town Council to be found in the Register of Decrees, &c., of the Burgh Court, . . . which begun in 1520, and seems to contain Acts of the Head Courts and very likely much curious matter."

No minute book of the Town Council of St. Andrews exists, so far as is known, prior to 1656. The minute books of the Town Council of Inverkeithing previous to 1689 are all lost. There are older sasine records, and the guildry minute book goes back to 1580, but no trace can be found in them of any meeting of Convention as having been held in the burgh. It was stated, however, that the house used to be pointed out where the early meetings of Convention were held. The ancient records of Haddington¹ and Linlithgow remain to be examined, and it is believed that the Councils of these Burghs will afford every facility for having this done. Mr. Angus forwarded excerpts from the Index of the Council Records of Aberdeen from 1491 to 1783, in so far as reference is therein made to the Convention; and he afterwards most kindly caused the requisite extracts to be made from the valuable registers in his custody,—the oldest and most complete of any burghal records in Scotland. He has thus not only supplied the Minutes of a Convention held at Edinburgh in April 1529, but has shown that commissioners were elected by the Burgh of Aberdeen to attend Conventions in 1491, 1497, 1530, and 1555, no minutes of which, however, have as yet been discovered. Other extracts from the Aberdeen registers have also been given to illustrate the mode in which the election of commissioners to the Convention of Burghs was made at an early period.

Probably a minuter search than most of the Town Clerks, with their multifarious official and professional engagements, can find time to make among the old records of the more ancient Burghs of Scotland, might bring to light many documents that would supplement in a very interesting way the defective early records of the Convention. In such records most valuable materials for local and national history are to be found; and it is earnestly to be hoped that the various Town Councils and other corporate bodies in Scotland may take means to have their records put into such a form, and so preserved, as to be really accessible. On the representation of the Town Clerk of Dundee, following on the communication above alluded to, the authorities there have had their attention directed to the matter. The subject was earnestly pressed on the consideration of the representatives of the Burghs present at the last Convention, and was then warmly received; and it is to be hoped that subsequent volumes of the Convention Records may afford pleasing evidence that it has not been lost sight of.

¹ Mr. Thomas Thomson, W.S., F.S.A. Scot., has contributed to the Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland an interesting "Description of the oldest Council Books and other Records of the Town of Haddington, with copious Extracts" [Vol. II. 384], and from that paper it appears that the two earliest volumes containing Acts of the Town Council and Decrees pronounced in the Burgh Court, and Deeds of Mortification and Bequest to the Church, extend, the first from 6th March 1423 to 23d June 1463, and the second from June 1530 to 30th April 1555. The "Counsale Books or Acts and Statutes of the Counsale," so far as described by him, consist of three volumes, the first extending from 13th December 1554 to 3d March 1580, the second from 13th October 1581 to November 1602, and the third from 14th January 1603 till 24th June 1616. None of the extracts given in this paper, however, relate to the meetings or affairs of the Convention.

In explanation of the arrangement of the present volume, it may be stated that the first 500 pages contain the proper records of the Convention, as these are engrossed in its Minute Books from 1552 till 1597. The portion of the book extending from page 500 to page 533 contains supplementary extracts from other records of minutes of Conventions, extent rolls, and minutes of election of Commissioners to attend Conventions—all of them of equal authority with the earlier records of Convention. The remaining portion of the book, extending from page 535 to page 562, contains copies or abstracts of various documents relating to the affairs of the Burghs,—the sources from which they have been obtained being in every case specified.

To make the volume more serviceable, a chronological list of Conventions has been prepared, with references to the documents in which the Conventions are alluded to. Whether some of the Conventions to which Commissioners were elected actually took place cannot be assumed, but it is to be hoped that entries in the records of other Burghs may be discovered and communicated which will throw light on this subject. A table of contents arranged in chronological order has also been added.

Preface.

Considerable progress had been made in the preparation of an index of matters, to be appended to this volume; but the last Convention having authorised the publication of another volume similar to the present, it has been considered expedient to make the general index applicable to the entire work.

The Copy of the Instructionis efter the quhilk Alexander Segait salbe reullit in the effaires committit vnto him be the tovne of Campfeir, to entreit or handill with my Loirdis Commissionairis or Deputes of Estaitis of the gude tovnnes of Scotland.

ITEM, in the first, he sall present vnto thair wisdomes and gudnessis our maist effectuell commendationis, with oure offeris of seruice at all tymes, quhensoeuer occasioun sall serue, or quhen we salbe requyrit be thame thairto.

Thanking thame maist hertfullie of thair gude ancient lufe and affection born at all tymes towardis ws, and now as we vnderstand at this present they haue and beris towardis ws, be report of the said Alexander Segait.

Beseking thame that they will continew thair gude will toward ws and oure tovne, the maist mutual ancient lufing affection quhilkis we haif born aither towardis vtheris of auld tymes.

Excusing ws, alsua, that we have na qualefeit persoun of ouris for this tyme to send to thame to be at the dyet of thair assemble, quhilk we vnderstand to be haldin at Edinburgh in the moneth of Julij nixt 1578, for to intreit with thame vpon the returning and establisment of thair merchantis of thair stapil within this oure said tovne.

Vtherwyes, to schaw thame that we had na vthir persoun qualefeit amangis ws that was prompt or perfyte of the Scotis langage, except George Kincaid, quha haid sindry tymes of befoir being requyrit be ws to accept the sam charge, hes excusit himself, declaring for syndry his particular busynessis, he mycht nocht wait vpon the said weyage, and he beand for the present in Handwarp, and we nocht certan of his return againe, quhairthrow the weyage of the said Alexander Segait mycht be hinderit, quhilk we desyre to be maist forderit and avancit.

Alsua, we haif thocht gude for the fidelitie

ancient lufe born towardis ws lyke as we vnderstand he zit beris to ws and quhome we beleve hes na les credit with zour lordschips. Thairfoir fyndis proper and meit that he sall handill and treit with zour lordschips in this effaires, quhilk we pray ze will accept and interpreit to the best pairt. This done, the said Alexander sall cause thair lordschips vnderstand, in the best maner or forme that he can, that the magistratis of the tovne of Campfeir sall do thair devoir and vtter diligence, to the end that the Scotis nation may be mantenit in thair auld ancient privileges, friedomes, and liberties, nocht alanerlie that they had and brukit of auld tymes, bot alsua that they vsit and joysit the tymes of thair last frequentation heir,—althocht or howbeit ony quarrell or actioun suld happyn or mycht fall betuix ony of the said natioun and subiectis of this cuntrie, ather ciuill or criminall, quhither it be of the effaires or actions criminallis amangis the merchantis of the Scotis nation alanerlie,—bot alsua to promeis thame alsweill for the pairtis of the saidis magistratis, as particularlie for the pairt of the present baillie, to quhais charge the estait and office of the effaires appertenis mair nor vttheris, that nocht alanerlie they salbe confermit or avancit of thair auld ancient rychtis and privelegis vsit heir, bot alsua that they salbe accomodat and helpit in all thingis resonabill heirtofoir rehersit, sua that the honour and ayth of the said baillie and magistratis be nocht violentit nor interest.

Forther, to assure thame that we sall agrie with thame for the place of ane hous for the natioun, of fyve or sax principall houssis of factouris, quhair of we refer the naming or chosing to the discretioun of the commissioneris of thair saidis tovnes, or to the conseruatour and the foir namit George Kincaid, quhither they pleis.

And alsua that we vnderstand and promeis that the saidis houssis salbe exemit and frie frome ludging or intertenyng of ony soldartis or men of weir.

And as tuyching the friedome of the excyse or ony kynd of impoist, alsweill vpon the wyne as vpon the beir, sall schaw vnto thame that they salbe frie of sic ane quantietie of barrellis according to thair houssis and houshaldis, lykeas the said conseruatour and George Kincaid, together with the Magistratis of the tovne of Campfeir sall fynd convenient for the sam, to the end they salbe contentit with resoun, and greitlie to thank the liberalitie of the said magistrat of Campfeir mon agrie thairfoir, and mak payment of the samyn to the estaitis of Holland againe to the last penny.

And geve peraventour it suld happin that ony question suld ryse at thair cuming betuix ony merchantis of the said natioun, and the customer of the said tovne, lyk as oft tymes befoir hes happynit, assuring thame that we sall laubour so far with the said customer, that he sall submit the said action in the handis of the magistrat of the said tovne of Campfeir, the quhilk we sall nocht suffer on na maner of way that nane of the said natioun, zet nocht yeles of thame sall suffer ony dommage, hurt, or evill intertenement. And to the end that they sall knaw quhat they sall pay to the said customer, we sall geve to the conseruatour ane iust copy of the said custome roll.

Schawing thame alsua, that at this tyme, atoure requeist and persute, the ordour is tane with the generall estaitis of the Low Countries for the ressait of the custome of Zeland be provisioun maid within the tovne of Handwarp efter the auld vse and custome.

And geve they desyre or requyre to be excusit fra the paying of the convoy gilt or license, quhilk is very liklie to be done, schaw vnto thame that we ar besy solistand for the exemption of the sam, in the sam maner and soirt lyk as the natioun of England hes already, and lyk as we vnderstand is aggreit, and as we hald almaist done and endit, awayting daylie foroure commissioner with the octroye or ordinance of the sam.

Alsua, ze may assure thame that the channell entrie or gate of Campfeir is for the present sua gude as ever it was, and, nochtwithstanding, till help and accommodat thame forther, we have putoure tunniss and markis in the said gat, alongis all places neidfull and accustomat.

How alsua we vnderstand surelie ordour to be tane for help of the said channell be laubour of dyking and mending of the heides and bekynniss, in all places neidfull and accustomat.

Augmenting alsua, that we haif procurit that they of Flussing hes taikin ordour of the pylot, for entring and outpassing of schippis at thair tovne; and as tuching otheris, thay salbe helpit and accommodat in all reson to thair contentment.

As for the accommodatig of thaim and thair schippis in our tovne and havin, for to help them forther, we sall causeoure awin schippis, and fischaris, and vtheris, to mak thame place.

And gif it suld happin that thay doubt at oure warkmen, maisteris of schippis, or vtheris, wald exaction or tak mare for thair laubouris nor resoun, assure thame that we will nocht suffer the sam on nauyes, how that we ar begvn already and labouring to tak ordour for the sam to be publest and ordanit, of the quhilk, alsua, we sall delyuer ane copy to the sade conseruatour, in sic soirt, that thay sall haif na occasioun to plenzie, and inlykmaner better cheip service nor thay haif bene in vtheris places.

Fynally, in quhat maner of wy we may help, plesour, or benefite the said nation, in generall or particular, that we sall nocht fail to lat thame vnderstand be oure doingis, with als gude hert or will as ever we did plesour or service to ony man in this warld.

Because of the publict exercyse of thair religion, as it is vsit for the present in Scotland, quhilk aucht to be the end and principall of all thingis, thay ar surelie informit and assurit be our letteris send to thame, quhairof thay neid nocht doubt.

And quhairas sum of the nation wald think to conceave unhelsum air of the saltpannis, quhilkis ar biggit and set in ane nuik of the tovne, they sall knaw be experience of thair cuming, that thair is litil reson for the samyn.

And for the occasioun of the saltpannis, thay sall nocht find thameselues to be sua discontentit, as thay ar persuaded, because thair is bot ane wynde from the north that makis ony reik, the quhilk apperandly blawis north euery day. And aboue that, the pannis gangis bot ane season of the zeir. Nochttheles, the natioun beand heir, thay sall zit be accommodat and helpit in sic soirt, that thay salbe contentit with resoun, insamekill that we vnderstand, with litill expenssis and skayth the awner of the saidis pannis may be remedit and helpit; In the quhilk foirsaid, befor the cuming of the said natioun, it can nocht be brocht to effect without skayth, etc. etc, it all in their power to continue with them, that as long as we will see the

 that it will be better to have a separate union as they would the consideration of well management, especially if it makes that said nation to be done the treating of their properties, if any party should. Further and last we refer to their own discretion, and the Lord be with you.

We desire most cordially that you remember with the assistance of the judges of Cambray to procure at the Princes hands the names of the goods which we desire of Flanders from your distinguished Money Russell, Alexander Clerk, Alexander Russell, Master John Forward, John Henryson, Mark Bar, &c. For this purpose we have sent you the extract of the peace between Emperor Charles and we think believe that your goods can never be launched by the labour of any wars past.

From the desire the name of Handway, be procurement of the name of Cambray that your nation may have liberty in transporting of their goods to Handway without impediment in any regard had to their goods or revenues, and that that may have the privilege of Francis Hayes as that can best agree, but stop as said is.

The Copye of the Commission and Procuration given be the King of Cambray concerning the said matter as follows.—

The Copy of the Instructionis efter the quhilk Alexander Segait salbe reullit in the effaires committit vnto him be the tovne of Campfeir, to entreit or handill with my Loirdis Commissionairis or Deputes of Estaitis of the gude tovnnes of Scotland.

ITEM, in the first, he sall present vnto thair wisdomes and gudnessis our maist effectuell commendationis, with oure offeris of service at all tymes, quhensoeuer occasioun sall serue, or quhen we salbe requyrit be thame thairto.

Thanking thame maist hertfullie of thair gude ancient lufe and affection born at all tymes towardis ws, and now as we vnderstand at this present they haue and beris towardis ws, be report of the said Alexander Segait.

Beseking thame that they will continew thair gude will toward ws and oure tovne, the maist mutual ancient lufing affection quhilkis we haif born aither towardis vtheris of auld tymes.

Excusing ws, alsua, that we have na qualefeit persoun of ouris for this tyme to send to thame to be at the dyet of thair assemblie, quhilk we vnderstand to be haldin at Edinburgh in the moneth of Julij nixt 1578, for to intreit with thame vpoun the returning and establisment of thair merchantis of thair stapil within this oure said tovne.

Vtherwyes, to schaw thame that we had na vthir persoun qualefeit amangis ws that was prompt or perfyte of the Scotis langage, except George Kincaid, quha haid sindry tymes of befoir being requyrit be ws to accept the sam charge, hes excusit himself, declaring for syndry his particular busynessis, he mycht nocht wait vpon the said weyage, and he beand for the present in Handwarp, and we nocht certan of his return againe, quhairthrow the weyage of the said Alexander Segait mycht be hinderit, quhilk we desyre to be maist forderit and avancit.

Alsua, we haif thoct gude for the fidelitie

ancient lufe born towardis ws lyke as we vnderstand he zit beris to ws and quhome we beleve hes na les credit with zour lordschips. Thairfoir fyndis proper and meit that he sall handill and treit with zour lordschips in this effaires, quhilk we pray ze will accept and interpret to the best pairt. This done, the said Alexander sall cause thair lordschips vnderstand, in the best maner or forme that he can, that the magistratis of the towne of Campfeir sall do thair devoir and vtter diligence, to the end that the Scotis nation may be mantenit in thair auld ancient privileges, freedoms, and liberties, nocht alanerlie that they had and brukit of auld tymes, bot alsua that they vsit and joysit the tymes of thair last frequentation heir,—althocht or howbeit ony quarrell or action suld happyn or mycht fall betuix ony of the said natioun and subiectis of this cuntrie, ather ciuill or criminall, quhither it be of the effaires or actions criminallis amangis the merchantis of the Scotis nation alanerlie,—bot alsua to promeis thame alsweill for the pairtis of the saidis magistratis, as particularlie for the pairt of the present baillie, to quhais charge the estait and office of the effaires appertenis mair nor vtheris, that nocht alanerlie they salbe conformit or avancit of thair auld ancient rychtis and privelegis vsit heir, bot alsua that they salbe accomodat and helpit in all thingis resonabill heirtofoir rehersit, sua that the honour and ayth of the said baillie and magistratis be nocht violentit nor interest.

Forther, to assure thame that we sall agrie with thame for the place of ane hous for the natioun, of fyve or sax principall houssis of factouris, quhair of we refer the naming or chosing to the discretioun of the commissioneris of thair saidis tovnas, or to the conseruatour and the foir namit George Kincaid, quhither they pleis.

And alsua that we vnderstand and promeis that the saidis houssis salbe exemit and frie frome ludging or intertenyng of ony soldartis or men of weir.

And as tuching the friedome of the excyse or ony kynd of impoist, alsweill vpon the wyne as vpon the beir, sall schaw vnto thame that they salbe frie of sic ane quantietie of barrellis according to thair houssis and houshaldis, lykeas the said conseruatour and George Kincaid, together with the Magistratis of the towne of Campfeir sall fynd convenient for the sam, to the end they salbe contentit with resoun, and greitlie to thank the liberalitie of the said magistrat of Campfeir mon agrie thairfoir, and mak

payment of the samyn to the estaitis of Holland againe to the last penny.

And geve peraventour it suld happin that ony question suld ryse at thair cuming betuix ony merchantis of the said natioun, and the customer of the said tovne, lyk as oft tymes befoir hes happynit, assuring thame that we sall laubour so far with the said customer, that he sall submit the said action in the handis of the magistrat of the said tovne of Campfeir, the quhilk we sall nocht suffer on na maner of way that nane of the said natioun, zet nocht yeles of thame sall suffer ony dommage, hurt, or evill intertenement. And to the end that they sall knaw quhat they sall pay to the said customer, we sall geve to the conseruatour ane iust copy of the said custome roll.

Schawing thame alsua, that at this tyme, at oure requiest and persute, the ordour is tane with the generall estaitis of the Low Countries for the ressait of the custome of Zeland be provisioun maid within the tovne of Handwarp efter the auld vse and custome.

And geve they desyre or requyre to be excusit fra the paying of the convoy gilt or license, quhilk is very liklie to be done, schaw vnto thame that we ar besy solistand for the exemption of the sam, in the sam maner and soirt lyk as the natioun of England hes already, and lyk as we vnderstand is aggreit, and as we hald almaist done and endit, awayting daylie for oure commissioner with the octroye or ordinance of the sam.

Alsua, ze may assure thame that the channell entrie or gate of Campfeir is for the present sua gude as ever it was, and, nochtwithstanding, till help and accommodat thame forther, we have put oure tunnis and markis in the said gat, alangis all places neidfull and accustomat.

How alsua we vnderstand surelie ordour to be tane for help of the said channell be laubour of dyking and mending of the heides and bekynnis, in all places neidfull and accustomat.

Augmenting alsua, that we haif procurit that they of Flussing hes taikin ordour of the pylot, for entring and outpassing of schippis at thair tovne ; and as tuching otheris, thay salbe helpit and accommodat in all reson to thair contentment.

As for the accommodatig of thaim and thair schippis in our tovne and havin, for to help them forther, we sall cause oure awin schippis, and fischaris, and vtheris, to mak thame place.

And gif it suld happin that thay doubt at oure warkmen, maisteris of schippis, or vtheris, wald exaction or tak mare for thair laubouris nor resoun, assure thame that we will nocht suffer the sam on nauyes, how that we ar begvn already and labouring to tak ordour for the sam to be publest and ordanit, of the quhilk, alsua, we sall delyuer ane copy to the sade conseruatour, in sic soirt, that thay sall haif na occasioun to plenzie, and inlykmaner better cheip seruice nor thay haif bene in vtheris places.

Fynally, in quhat maner of wy we may help, plesour, or benefite the said nation, in generall or particular, that we sall nocht fail to lat thame vnderstand be oure doingis, with als gude hert or will as ever we did plesour or seruice to ony man in this warld.

Because of the publict exercyse of thair religion, as it is vsit for the present in Scotland, quhilk aucht to be the end and principall of all thingis, thay ar surelie informit and assurit be our letteris send to thame, quhairof thay neid nocht doubt.

And quhairas sum of the nation wald think to conceave unhelsum air of the saltpannis, quhilkis ar biggit and set in ane nuik of the tovne, they sall knaw be experience of thair cuming, that thair is litil reson for the samyn.

And for the occasioun of the saltpannis, thay sall nocht find thame-selues to be sua discontentit, as thay ar persuaded, because thair is bot ane wynde from the north that makis ony reik, the quhilk apperandly blawis north euery day. And aboue that, the pannis gangis bot ane season of the zeir. Nochttheles, the natioun beand heir, thay sall zit be accommodat and helpit in sic soirt, that thay salbe contentit with resoun, insamekill that we vnderstand, with litill expenssis and skayth the awner of the saidis pannis may be remedit and helpit; In the quhilk foirsaid, befor the cuming of the said natioun, it can nocht be brocht to effect without skayth, etc. etc,

THE QUHILK DAY, in the assemblie and conventioun of burrois haldin the said day, It is statute and ordanit be the hale commisariss of burris of Scotland, that thair stapill be placit and sett down in the Campheir, induring thair willis, conforme to thair commissioun and procuratioun granttit and gevin to the richt honorabill Henry Nysbet, thair commissar, and ane of the counsale of the burch of Edinburgh, with the avise and counsale of Maister George Hacquet, conseruatour for the Scottis natioun over all the pairtis of Flandaris. And to this effect ordanis the said Henry and Maister George to mak this present ordinance to be publischit in all the pairtis of Flandaris, and to charge all the Scottis factouris in tha pairtis with deligence to addres thame, togidder with all Scottis merchantis with thair schippis, guddis, and merchandice to the said toun of Campheir, to mak thair exchange and remanyng thair fra the nixt feist of Mychaelmes furch, quhill forther ordour be taikin. And that thair be vpliftit ten stures of euerye sek of guddis pertenyng to the saidis merchantis, to be deliuerit to the said Henry in recompance of his panys, ay and quhill the sowme of tuentye foir pundis greit be payit to him thairfoir. And, gif neid beis, ordanis the said Maister George, thair conseruatour, to waird, poynd, or arreist thairfoir, and mak the names of the dissobeyaris, with thair duelling, knawin to the saidis commissaris in thair nixt conventioun, to be haldin in the toun of Dundee the last of October nixt, that thair may suffer punishment in thair bodeis and guddis for thair dissobedience. And that the saidis Henry and conseruatour be haldin to mak compt, reknyng, and payment of the sowmes thay ressaue, and intromit with na forther fra the said xxiiij li. greit be payit as thay will ansuer.

Alteratioun of
the taxt rolles

In the first, Forsamekill as the alteratioun and change of the auld taxt roll hes bene concludit vpon in dyueris conventions of the estait of burrowis, to the effect that the dekyit burrowis may be releuit, and the importabill chairges be stentis and taxations be the burghis incescit in riches be proces of tyme, according to equitie and gude conscience. And specially in the convention haldin at Striveling the xxv day of October 1574 zeris, it was concludit, statute, and ordanit, alsweill with consent of the commissioneris of the burgh of Edinburgh, and the remanent of the commissioneris of burrowis than being present, that the auld taxt roll suld be alterit and changit at the nixt convention of the saidis estatis to be haldin in the burgh of Dondie, and the commissioneris for the said burgh of Edinburgh to bring with thame to the said convention the saidis auld taxt rollis, to the effect the samin mycht be alterit, and equalitie maid for releif of the deokayit burrowis, in maner aboue writtin, and to endure for the space of thre zeris, or quhill new occasion of the reformation of the said taxt rollis war offerit. And gif the commissioneris of Edinburgh failzeit in bringing of the said auld taxt rollis to the effect abouewrittin, that it suld be lesum to the remanent commissioneris of vtheris burrowis to be convenit at Dondie, or ony sax of thame to be electit and chosin be voit of the saidis commissioneris, to alter and change the said auld taxt roll, as the said act at mair lenth proportis, quhilk suld haif tane effect and executioun befor ony vtheris materis had bene handelit at this present conventioun; bot in respect that the saidis Maister Iohnn Preston and Henry Charteris, commissioneris for Edinburgh, declairit planelie that they culd on nawayes at this present obtene the saidis ald taxt rollis, and that be reson of the proclamatioun maid for the raid of Iedburgh and Dumfreis, quhairthrow they supponit na present convention suld haif bene within this burgh, and als thair clark quha hes the saidis rollis in keping wes havelye vexit with infirmitie at thair departing fra Edinburgh, sua that the said roll culd nocht be had. And the saidis causis being fund resonabill, the saidis commissioneris now convenit, alsweill of Edinburgh as vtheris, hes all in ane voce concludit, statute and ordanit, that the auld actis preceding, and speciallie that quhilk was maid at Striveling the day foirsaid, the said auld taxt roll suld be alterit and reformit at the next convention to be haldin at the burgh of Cowpar in Fyfe, the saxtene day of Marche nixttocum, and that the commissioneris of the said burgh of Edinburgh to bring with thame the said auld taxt rollis to be alterit and reformit, in maner foirsaid. The same day, efter aduysement vpoun the desyir of the protestatioun aboue expremitt to be admittit be Maister Iohnn Cheyne for him self, and in name of the communitie of the burch of Abirdene, contrair the electioun and admissioun of Maister Thomas Menzes prouest, and Alexander Rutherfurde, commissioneris for the said burch, findis that, nochtwithstanding the allegeances proponit in the contrair be the said Maister Iohnn and Androw King procuratouris for ane certane of the communitie off Abirdene, that in respect of the saidis burrowis auld lawes and constitutionis maid anent the admissioun of commissioneris at euerye thair generall and suerall conventionis of burrowes, the saidis Maister Thomas and Alexanderis commissioun is valed and effectual, and thairby to be admittit conforme to thair act aboue expremitt, becaus the said commissioun is gevin vnder the seill of caus of the said burch, and vnder the subscriptioun of the commoun clerk thairof, and thay chosin be the prouest, baillies, and counsall of the said burch, as all commissioneris, chosin to conventionis generall and suerall of burrowes according to the custome of vtheris burrowes of this realme ar chosin; and thairefter the said Androw King ressauiet vp his procuratioun productit, dissassenting to the admissioun of the said commissioneris, and that thair ressonis, presentlye producit, may be registrat and insert in this thair generall buik of conventioun in forme as efferis, to be gevin and extractit vnder thair generall clerkis subscriptioun; off the quhilkis resounis the tennour followes: We Androw Scherar, Daudid Dudaucht, Alexander Howysoun, Androw King, William Gray, George Forbes, Maister Iohnn Cheyne, George Laing and Iohnn Layng, George Gordoun, Alexander Ewyn Robertsoun, George Elphynstoun, Laurence Mercer, Iohnn Saunders, Mathow Guild, Alexander Stewin, Alexander Patersoun, Androw Myln, Androw Henresoun, Androw Leslye, and William Hay, all persounis, counsall, burgessis of Abirdene, decannis and craftismen of the samin respectiue, for oure selffis, and in name and behalff of the remanent afflictit memberis of the pure commoun welthe of this burch, desyris zour wisdomes for the tender mercyes of God, zour awin honouris, and as ye will ansueir to his Maiestie, and eueit the gryte perell that may fall in your awin commoun weillis, be suffering of the liberteyes of burch to decay, that ye will tack deligent heid to our maist humble and ressonabill suplicatioun, to the propositioun quhairoff we are vrgit be plane necessitye, and nocht vpon ony lycht inconsiderat motioun, having oftymes callit reparatioun, and altogidder refusit. Item to the effect that we be nocht preiugit in the begynning of zour maist honorabill conventioun, we desir that ane lauchfull commissioner, chosin be the maist pairt of the voitis of the toun, be ressaut, and that Maister Thomas Menzes of Dorne, and Alexander Rutherfurde, pretending thame selffis commissioneris be remowit, first, becaus thay haue chosin furth thame selffis, or at leist ar onlye chosin be ane few number of thair awin freyndis priuatlye, without sound of bell, or conventioun of commouneltie, for advysement of thair awin turnis, quhairanent questioun is debatit befor your wisdomis betwixt the communitie and thame, specialy for inhaleing of thame selffis, thair awin kyn, freyndis, and alyes, in the cheiff offices off the toun, as it war thair awin particular heritages, contnewit in thair personis thir dyuers zeiris togider, by the actis of his Maiesties parliament, quhairby this pure burch is alradeye impouaragit, and liklye to incur His Maiesties wreth and importabill punisment, and for maintenance and appropriating of the commoun guidis and and commoun landis and casualities of this burch, quhilk is, and hes bene

this mony zeiris in thairis and thair freyndis handis, onropit, according to the custome of vther burrowes to putt ony maner of proffit or dewtye payit thairfor; Item, in speciall, Maister Thomas Menzes of Dorne can na wayes be commissioner, becaus he as tutour to Gilbert Menzes hes brother or hes withauldin fra the commoun weill of the said toun, the saill small customes thairof, the syss bollis the mettis of coalis, lyme, and salt, the land takis of the said burch, and vtheris commodities of the said burch, without ony payment of ony dewtye, obscuris the haill euidentis of the toun, violentlye mantynes him selff as clerk of the toun without electioun. Item, the said Maister Thomas, being ane landuart barroun, na merchant nor trafficquer, only brocht frome landuert for the mentenance of his freyndis, and continewing of the office of prouestre in thair name, be the assistance of dyueris landuert barrownis hes intruisit him selff in the office of prouestrie, and violentlie continewit him selff thairin, be the spaice of tua yeiris togidder, as his predecessouris hes done continewalye be the space of fyftie yeiris and ma, thairby drawing the estait of His Maiesties frie burch to the similitude and forme of ane burgh of barroney, nocht only aganis his Maiesties lawes bot also aganis the suorne aithis of the haill toun, publictlye convenit at the Michealmes electione of prouest and magistratis in anno fourscoir and sevin yeiris, as the act and ordinance of thair awin buikis will testefye, to the vtter wrak of this haill toun, quhilk act beris in speciall, thay, electar of magistratis for ma yeiris than ane togidder, sall tyne thair fredomes, and incur the paine of periurye, and sa can nocht be commissioner; And for the said Maister Thomas is second thrid feird and nocht in grie defended with the maist pairt of thaus aganis quhome the puire communitie of this toun is to mene thame selffs befour your wisdomis, anentis the wrangis sustenit be the saidis pure commoundis, for reparatioun of the dissipat and waistit commoune guid of this burch. Item, the said Alexander Rutherford is in the lyk condition of the said Maister Thomas awin sister sone, and hes mareit his dauchter, aganis quhom also the communitye hes actioun of purprisioun, for vsurping of ane gryt pairt and quantetye of the commoun landis of the said burch, and thairfor he can nawayes be commissioner of the said burch for ws and communitye foirsaid; And thairfor desyris your wisdomes to give ws ane lauchtfull indifferent electit commissioner, that we may the mair fryley and fairlye mene our vnsufferabill wrangis to your wisdomes; And in caice it micht be allegit that the prouest baillies and counsall of Edinburgh, and vtheris certane burrowes of this realme, ar in vse to elect thair commissioneris, the lyk is nocht the cace in Abirdene, becaus nocht onlye is the commissioneris in vse to be chosin with consent of the haill communitie, without quhais consent nane hes bene in vse to haue bene chosin, and althocht sua war as it is, yet the personis nominat ar suspect and can nocht be admittit commissioneris for the ressonis forsaidis; And incaice your wisdomis will admitt thame, we protest for remeid of law, and we the said communitye of Abirdene be nocht hauldin to leid on or agitat ony of thair caussis befor your wisdomes. To the quhilkis pretendit ressouns, contening certane friuoll obiectiounis aganis the validitye of the commission productit be Maister Thomas Menzes, and Alexander Rutherford, commissioneris for Abirdene, the said Alexander Rutherford anserit, that the samin in effect was proponit befor the saidis Maister Iohnn and Androw King, and that the said commissioun is alradey admittit and found guid, in sa far as thay war chosin be the prouest baillies and counsall of the said burche according to the custom obseruit in all vther burrowes of this realme, anentis the chesing and electing of commissioneris of burrowis to conventiounis and parliamentis, and according to the forme of all commissionis ressauit fra the commissioneris of burrowes, and admittit this day, and heirtofore.

The same day, efter ressouning vpoun that heid of the missiue concerning the burghes of Edinburghes desyre of reimbursment of xij^c merkis and enteris peyit thairfor and aduancit be thame in name of the burrowes, as thai allegit, to Adame Foullertoun, in thair effairis to England, as in dyueris actis sett down obefoir thairanent at lenth is contenit, and in speciell in ane act maid in the generall assemblye of burrowes at Sanct-androis the elevint dey of Apryle 1589, quhairby the commissioneris of Edinburgh, than present, war ordanit to produce and bring to this present conventioun the contract and instructiounis gevin be thame to the said Adame the tyme of the first sending of him to Inglande in the efferis forsaidis, to the effect the burrowes mycht be certefeit of the said Adames deligence and proceedinges in the said mater, continewis all anser geving thairto, as obefoir, to thair nixt generall assemblye of burrowes, quhaireuer the samin salhappin to be appoyntit to he hauldin, becaus thai haue nocht satifeit the desir of the said last act maid at Sanctandrois, and thairfor can nocht give ansuer to the desir of the said supplicatioun; ordaning the commissioneris of the said burch, now present, as they wald be exped and have ansuer to thair supplicatioun at the said next generall conventioun of burrowes, to satiffye the desyr of the said act maid at Sanctandrois, and ordanis the saidis burrowes to send thair commissioneris instructit thairto, and to be rememberit in thair misseves; quhairvnto, and to all continewatioun, the commissioneris of Edinburgh dissassentit, protesting that in respect of the money deleyis haid heirintill, that the persuit heirfor be the law suld na wey be offensabill to the saidis burrowes, but that thai nicht suit reddress herein.

Nono Iunij 1590.

Guthrie, Generall clerk to burrowis.

The same day, the commissioneris forsaidis efter lang ressoning vpoun that heid of the misseue, quhairvnto thay war ordanit to cum instructit to give ansuer concerning the continewatioun of Iohnn Guthrie, thair generall clerk, in his office of clerkschipe to thame, and maner of peyment of his bygane stypend, and expenssis in keiping of thair generall conventioun, as is at leynt sett down in ane act maid at Sanctandrois the xij day of Apryle 1589, findis, in respect of the said Iohnnes guid and deligent seruice heirtofor done be him in thair effaris at all tymes quhen occasioun seruit, that for the spaice of ane yeir frome the moneth of Iulij nixt vnto the moneth of Iulij in anno four scoir alevin yeiris, he salbe continewit, lyk as thai continow him in the said office of generall clerkschipe, vpoun the conditiounis mentionat in his first act of admissioun. And finding the said Iohnnis stypend of ane hundreth poundis from Iulij four scoir nyn to the moneth of Iulij next tocum to be restand awand vnto him, as alsua his ordinar expenssis in keiping of generall conventiounis sen the conventioun hauldin at Edinburch in November four scoir sevin, that of the first and raddiest of the vnlawes incurrit be the burrowes absent frome this conventioun, he sall, with all deligence possibill, be peyit of his said stypend of ane hundreth poundis, and of the sowme off thrie scoir poundis for his bygane expenssis in the keiping of the conventiounis aboue expremit.

The same day, the commissioneris forsaidis hes adiugit and adiugis the burrowes of Lawder, Irrewene, Air, Dinfres, Kirkcubricht, Quhithorne, Rothesay, Dumbartan, Ranfrow, Ruthuglen, Cullan, and Thayne, to haif incurit, ilkane of thame, the pane and vnlaw of twenty poundis for thair nocht comperance to this present generall conventioun, the maist pairt thairof, as nocht exemit thairfra, and the rest being exemit, in the nocht obseruing of the tenour of thair act bering that thai at euerye senerall generall conventioun suld send thair misseue appreuing the haille actis to be concludit thairat, and this in respect of the lauchtfull citatioun vsit, schawin, and productit be Maister Thomas Mollysoun, clerk of Abirdene, to quhome, according to thair actis for sending and serving of the saidis missives direct to the keping of this present conventioun, they assigne the sowme of tentye poundis, as for the vnlaw of the burch of Vnlawing burrowis absent, and assignatioun of ane part thairof to Guthre clerk, and the clerk of Abirdene, and thair agent to be collectour thairto.

to this present conventioun, and for collectioun thairof, and of the haille vnlawes aboue exemit, ordanis the agent to be nominat for the burrowes to be collectour thairof, and gif neid beis, letteris and executoriallis to rais and execute aganis the refusaris to pey, to the effect that of the first and raddiest thairof, the said Iohnn Guthre, clark, may be peyit of his bygaue stepend and expenssis modefcit, and the said Maister Thomas of the vnlaw foirsaid; the said collectour alwayes being comptable to the saidis burrowes at thair said nixt generall conventioun vpoun the ingathering and peyment of the saidis vnlawes, deduicing the assignatiouns forsaidis, and his ordinar expenssis, to be debursit for recouery of the samyn.

The same dey, anent the continewatioun of ane ansuer to haue bene gevin to ane certane supplicatioun gevin in be Allane Lentrone, citiner in Sanctandros, to the commissioneris of burrowes convenit thairat in the moneth of Apryle 1589, craving the actioun depending befor the Loirdis of oure Souerane Loirdis Sessioun, at the instance of the four burrowis of Edinburgh, Perth, Dondy, and Abirdene for reimbursing to thame, in name of the remanent burrowes, the sowme off ane thousand merkis givin to him for suppressing of certane piratis being on this coast and Ingland, quhairinto he was ordanit to haue reportit his diligens, and nane, as thai allegit, was productit, quhairvpoun actioun was intentit and dependand befor the saidis Lordis. Findis that the intenteris thairof, in respect of the said Allanis diligence, now at this present conventioun maid notorious Lentrone's actioun befor the Lordis of Sessioun dischargit.

to thame, sall desist frome all forder persuit, and remittis the said Allane simpliciter, and all that he nicht haue incurrit thairby, sua that he sall incur na danger nor persuit thairfor heirefter, bot simpliciter, as said is, dischargis the said Alane of the said persuit and actioun for euer.

10. Contract anent the Staple Trade betwixt the City of Antwerp and the City of Edinburgh, dated in April 1540.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 395,] as follows :—

Contract entered into betwixt the Burgomasters, Magistrates, and Council of the Town of Antwerp in Brabant, and certain Commissioners or Deputies sent from the Provost, Baillies, and Council of Edinburgh, of the Kingdom of Scotland, on the one and other parts : Wherein is set down the powers and Commission by the Magistrates of Edinburgh to their said Deputies, to treat with the town of Antwerp anent the privileges to be granted to the Scots Nation on account of their Staple Trade, and freedoms. and exemptions in consequence thereof: which commission bears date at Edinburgh the 2nd of March, 1539. After which the Contract bears, That those of the town of Edinburgh and others, their allies of the Kingdom of Scotland frequenting the Emperor's Dominions, having hitherto kept their principal staple and residence in Campvere in Zealand, yet, for certain reasons, they had agreed to seek out a more commodious place ; And having seen and visited all the towns and harbours in the Low Countries, they did find no Place, City, or Harbour so proper as that of the Town of Antwerp : Which the Magistrates of Edinburgh and others of the Kingdom of Scotland taking to their consideration, they appointed certain commissioners to commune with the Burgomasters and Council of Antwerp thereanent, and after long deliberation, the said Burgomasters of Antwerp and Deputies from Edinburgh and others of the said Kingdom of Scotland, agreed upon the following Articles :—

IMPRIMIS, That the said Nation of Scotland, being of the town of Edinburgh and others their adherents, should have a fair and pleasant House appointed for the residence of their Conservator and others of the said Nation ; in which house they might also lodge their packets and merchandizes, and otherways use it at their pleasure during their residence in the said Town.

Item, That those of the said Nation should be free and exempt from all excise of Wine and Beer or Ale that should be drunk in the said House : and in case of a fleet of ships coming from Scotland, and their merchants being numerous, the Burgomasters and Council, on being advertised thereof from the Conservator or otherways, should be obliged to order and assign one, two, or three other houses according as their number required : and they should in like manner be exempt from all excise of Wine or Ale drunk in these houses, provided, that no other haunted or frequented them but those of the said Nation.

Item, That the cognizance of all complaints, questions, and causes, that might arise amongst themselves, viz., between one Scotsman and another, should belong to the Conservator of that Nation. And to strengthen the decrees of the Conservator, the Burgomasters, at his request, should give their concurrence to see and cause the sentences by him pronounced to be put to execution, and have their full force and effect.

And, in like manner, when any burghess or other stranger commenced a suit against any of the said Nation, he should be obliged to bring it, in the first instance, before the Conservator, and after judgement past by him thereupon, the party thinking himself lesed, and willing to have a further trial, should be holden in that case to bring his matter of appeal before the Burgomasters &c. allenaryly.

As also, when any of the said Nation intended to commence a suit against any Burgess of the town of Antwerp, or against any one of any other nation than they of Scotland, he should be obliged to bring it before the Burgomasters, &c., and the Conservator should no ways meddle or interfere therein.

Item, That it should be lawful to the Merchants of the said Nation to sell and dispose in the said town of Antwerp of all kinds of merchandize that are accustomed to be sold there ; And particularly, salt fish packed in lasts, half lasts or barrels, or otherways as to them should seem most convenient. Also that it should be lawful to them to open their barrels, and sell their salt fish by retail, provided they should be first seen visited and judged of by the Masters of Police, commonly called, Cure Masters of Fishes.

Item, That there should be set apart and ordained for those of the said Nation, a wharf in a commodious place, to unload their ships and merchandizes, as to which they should be preferred to all other Merchants.

Item, That the Deputies and Commissaries of the said Nation should visit and inspect the streets and places of the said town of Antwerp, and having found a proper place for their dwelling and residence, the Magistrates of the said Town should speak with the inhabitants and possessors thereof anent the same, and the price of their houses and chambers, and should so commune with them, that those of the Scots Nation should have reason to be contented with the price of the said houses.

Item, That those of Scotland having chosen their place of residence, and brought their goods and merchandize into the City, the Magistrates of the City, with advice of the Conservator, or others of the said Nation, should settle and regulate the wages and payment of labourers and working men in such manner as should be to the reasonable satisfaction and content of the said Nation.

Item, That the said City of Antwerp, upon their own charges and expenses, should furnish Pilots to the said Nation : They coming along with the fleet, as well in coming as returning, beginning to pilot them from the place of La Vere or Flushing, according as the said fleet should arrive : of which coming and arrival of theirs, the said Nation should be obliged to advertise the Burgomasters, &c., And in case the said town so advertised should not provide Pilots, when the Scots Nation should be at the said place of La Vere or Flushing, they were to take and hire pilots at the expense of the town, in such number as should be sufficient for the fleet : which expenses the said Town should sustain for the space of five years ensuing : And in case there was no ordinance for other five years, ay and while an order should be made by the Burgomasters with regard to pilotage for the convenience and relief of Merchants, with which the said Nation should have reason to rest satisfied.

Item, that if it should happen any ship, by the force of tyde or tempest, or otherwise, to be thrown upon a shelve or bank of sand, between Antwerp and the said Town of La Vere or Flushing and that by any means the said ship taken off from the same, the said City should be obliged to order all possible assistance for the recovery thereof, and to contribute towards any expenses debursed for that purpose.

Item, for as much as the Right of the Customs belonged to his Imperial Majesty, and therefore the Burgomasters could not hinder the payment of it : But that those of the Scots Nation might not be imposed upon, it was to be observed the Commissioners of the Receipt of Customs had their Instructions, which they behoved to observe, a copy of which instructions should be given to the Conservator, and if it should be found that the Commissioners of the Customs transgressed their instructions in exacting more than the right, the Burgomasters of the town should cause restitution to be made to the merchant.

Item, That the Burgomasters should every way be assisted to the Scots nation, That while it should please his Imperial Majesty to continue the receipt of the Customs of Zealand in their town of Antwerp, the said Nation should be safe to pay the said custom in Antwerp, without being any way troubled or mollested in Zealand on that account. Also, that they should no ways be obliged to pay the customs of Zealand more than once : and if the officers of the Customs should use them otherwise, the Burgomasters engaged to cause reparation to be made to every one who should be exacted on more than the due and ordinary right.

Item, The said town of Antwerp grants to the Scots Nation the insurance from pillage of all the ships pillaged of the said Nation ; That is to say, from the pillage that shall be done and perpetrated between Antwerp and La Vere or Flushing, and by the Emperor's subjects there, and no otherways : Which pillage the said town of Antwerp should be obliged to pursue for recovery of the goods so taken, in the same manner as if they were their own proper goods : and in case it were impossible to recover them, the said town should be obliged to restore the value thereof.

Item, That the town of Antwerp obliged themselves to keep up and maintain with the said town of Edinburgh, and their adherents, a true, entire, perpetual and lasting friendship and regard, in all and whatever things lawful, reasonable, and honest, and should have a good and favourable report of them in all places. And to demonstrate the sincere affection and goodwill they did bear to the said Nation, in case there should occur any other affairs, than those before mentioned, wherein the said town of Antwerp could serve and accommodate the said town of Edinburgh and Nation of Scotland, without prejudice to the common-wealth ; the said Burgomasters promised, that these affairs should be settled as well to the content and satisfaction to the said town and nation as if they had been presently treated and agreed upon, for which they engaged their good faith and their true and sincere love. And as became two noble, renowned, and triumphant cities, the imperial and royal cities of Antwerp and Edinburgh, they took one another under their mutual and sacred care and protection without fraud or guile.

In testimony of which articles, thus concluded and agreed upon, and of the whole premises, they, the said Burgomasters and Council of the said City of Antwerp, and they the said Provost Baillies, and Council of the said City of Edinburgh, approving and ratifying what their said Commissioners had above done and concluded, caused the Seals of causes of the said Cities of Antwerp and Edinburgh to be appended to these present Letters, the 12th of April, 1540. To which is subjoined as follows : After the conclusion of the which Articles, the Commissioners of the City of Edinburgh compeared before the said Burgo-masters, &c., of the said City of Antwerp in Council assembled, and desired them to ratify the articles before written, which they accordingly did, and engaged for them and their successors in office, to entertain and cause to be entertained the said Merchants of Scotland, Edinburgh and their adherents, so long as they should frequent the said Town, after the form and tenor of the before contract in all points.

Which Ratification and Engagement is dated at the Council Chamber of the City of Antwerp the 20th of April and year foresaid, and is attested by the Clerk of the said City of Antwerp, and subscribed by him at the command of the Burgo-masters, &c., of the said City.

12. Contract anent the Staple Trade betwixt the City of Middleburgh and the City of Edinburgh and other Burghs of Scotland, dated 19th May 1541.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 403] as follows :—

Contract betwixt the Burgomasters and Council of the Town of Middleburgh, on the one part, and certain Commissioners or Deputies from the City of Edinburgh and other Burghs of the Kingdom of Scotland, on the other part, Bearing, That the Burgomasters and Council of the said Town of Middleburgh, for the love they did bear to the said Kingdom of Scotland, being desirous to continue the ancient amity and good will that always subsisted between them, did therefore give and grant to the said nation, the privileges liberties and immunities underwritten, during the time they should keep their residence and Staple in the said City of Middleburgh.

Imprimis, To the end that those of the said nation might be the more willing and heartily disposed to come and reside in the said City, and keep their Staple there, they the said Burgomasters and Council promised to give the said merchants of Edinburgh and others, and each one of them, all possible aid assistance and advice at all times whenever they should be required thereto.

Item, that the said merchants of Edinburgh and others of the said nation might be the more honoured and esteemed in the said town of Middleburgh, they the said Burgomasters, &c., promised, at the expense of their said town, without any charge to the Kingdom of Scotland, to provide them in a very gentle house worthy of the said nation, in which their Conservator or any others the said nation thought proper might lodge and be accommodated : Which house, with the whole family therein residing, should be indemnified and kept free from all excises, imposts and taxes upon Ale and Wine, that are accustomed to be paid in other houses, for the behoof of the said town of Middleburgh ; Provided that it should not be lawful to those of the said house to sell by measure, or otherwise forth of the said house, in prejudice of the said City.

Item, For the further satisfaction of the said nation, and the support of their character, they promised to erect and furnish a Chapel, to the honour of God, with an altar in the same, in whatever place or Church the said nation should think most convenient, which altar should be provided with all necessary ornaments.

Item, That the said Nation in time coming might have no cause of complaint against any workmen that should be employed by them : also that the officers of the Customs might not harrass them in exacting more custom than was due, the Burgomasters engaged to give such orders in that respect as should free them from all such grievances, and they should have their houses, cellars, vaults and other conveniences at the same price and for the same rent as they used to pay at Campvere. Also, that they should pay no more custom than what they had paid these thirty years past, or, at least, what they paid just now at Campvere : and that they should have a Key or Wharf. And that the merchants of Edinburgh, and others of the said nation, might know the good affection of those of Middleburgh, the said Burgomasters did, for their encouragement, promise, that when any merchants from thence should arrive with their merchandize, and by reason of a low market, or bad times, could not get their goods disposed of so speedily, and for want of money or credit could not make a timeous return of goods to Scotland, in that case the Burgomasters should order some of their own Burgesses, men of fortune, who should engage their credit in getting the necessity of such merchants supplied in goods from Bruges or other places, when the same could not be had in Middleburgh ; Provided, that those merchants of the said nation should leave in the hands of their respondents, as much goods, or more, than would amount to the sum for which they should be required to answer.

In like manner, for the honour of the said nation, and to shun not only discord and dissension, but also all suspicion and distrust, that in time coming might arise (as God forbid) between those of Middleburgh and the said nation of Scotland, the said Burgomasters obliged themselves, that when any cause or process, of whatever nature, should happen to be moved before them, between those of the said nation and any other persons of what condition soever, to the end they might have no ground of complaint for any injustice done them, that before passing any definitive sentence in the cause, they should take advice of Monsieur, the conservator for the time, or of any other unsuspected person of high rank belonging to the said nation, that should be called thereto. And that this might be no ways to the prejudice of their dread Emperor, and because the Burgesses of Middleburgh, among other liberties and immunities, have this privilege, that in all cases between merchants, coming before the Burgomasters of their City, and which are discerned to the advantage of either party, it is in the option of the appellant, to bring and prosecute his appeal before the Court and Council in Holland, or without any assistance (sans moyen) before the grand Council at Mechlin, where they judge by arrest, whose sentence should be final; also those of Middleburgh have this privilege, that all their sentences pronounced by them, tho' not final, may yet be executed upon sufficient caution, notwithstanding of any opposition or appeal; and the said Burgomasters considering that the said two privileges may be greatly to the advantage of the said nation of Scotland, if, in time coming, they should have any processes before them, Did therefore promise to secure the said nation in the exercise and enjoyment of these privileges, as fully and freely in all respects as their own Burgesses exercise and enjoy the same.

Item, To ease the said nation of any unprofitable expenses, it was agreed that, when they should think fit to apply to the court of his Imperial Majesty, or his noble Council, for obtaining any of the two privileges under written, the first of which is to have the same favour as the English frequenting the Emperor's Countries enjoy touching the exemption from custom and the other ancient goods robbed or pillaged from the said Nation at sea, that they might have the privilege of recovering the said goods before any judge competent, at one instance altogether; In both these cases the Burgomasters should be obliged to bear the equal half of the necessary charges laid out for purchasing and procuring the said privileges.

And Further, for the better assistance of the said nation, the said Burgomasters promised, that upon being advertised by those of the said Nation, either in the coming to Middleburgh, or in their return to Scotland, of their being attacked by Pirates upon any of the seas, rivers, coasts within the Jurisdiction of the Emperor, in that case to give them all possible aid and assistance in recovering their said goods, and the said town of Edinburgh should bear the half of the expenses necessary thereto.

And being willing that all ground of dissention, that might arise in time coming betwixt them and the said nation, should be for ever taken away, and that their mutual amity and good will might daily encrease: the said Burgomasters, of their own free will and generosity, promised that the said Good Town of Edinburgh, burgesses and merchants of the same, presently residing, and of all others the Cities of the said Kingdom of Scotland, that should for the future come as merchants to frequent the said city of Middleburgh, should be indemnified of such actions as were then depending against them for certain damages and expenses before the High and Mighty Lords, the President, and members of the grand Council of Mechlin, with all that might follow thereon: Excepting alwise and expressly reserving action against such towns in Scotland as neglected to come and keep their residence in Midleburgh.

All which' points and articles, they the Burgomasters, Escheines and Council of the said City of Midleburgh being desireous to keep as valid and binding upon them, did order their Seal of Cause to be thereto appended, and the said Articles alwise to continue in their full force, as long as the said Town of Edinburgh and others of the said Nation should keep their residence and staple in the said City of Midleburgh and no longer; Reserving also that article mentioning the action of damages and expenses above specified, of which they thereby discharged the said Town of Edinburgh, in so far as concerned their part thereof any manner of way, and all under the good will and pleasure of the most victorious Prince, Charles the 5th Emperor of the Romans, their natural and most dread Sovereign.

Given at the Council House of the said Town of Midleburgh the 19th of May, 1541.

15. Confirmation by Queen Mary in 1542 of a Grant by King James V. to James Bannatyne and Thomas Davidson to be Searchers General of English Ships and Goods coming to Scotland.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 213,] as follows :

Letters Patent under the Signet, granted by Mary Queen of Scots, with consent of James Earl of Arran, Protector and Governor of the Kingdom, Ratifying and approving a Grant under the Privy Seal by King James the Vth to James Bannatyne and Thomas Davidson, Burgesses of Edinburgh, making them Searchers General of all parts of the Kingdom, of all Englishmen's Ships and Merchandize, coming within any part of the Kingdon without sufficient conduct and with unlawful merchandize : Containing a new grant of the said office to be exerced by themselves or their deputes, and to unlift the fees and profits in the same way and manner as they might have done by the said King James the Vth's Letters Patent.

These Letters have the Queen's Signet appended thereto, and are under the subscription of the Regent, and bear date the 18th of December in the first year of the Queen's Reign, answering to the year of God 1542.

16. Act of Privy Council, dated 11th January 1555, rating the price of Bread, Ale, Flesh, Fish, &c.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 215,] as follows:—

Extract of an Act of the Privy Council, Bearing, That whereas the Bread, Ale, Flesh, Fish, and other victuals within the Kingdom were risen to such an exorbitant dearth, that the lieges could not be served therewith upon reasonable prices. The Queen and Lords of Privy Council taking deliberation in what manner the same might be repressed, the Provost and Baillies of Edinburgh being called thereto, and their opinion heard, They (the Queen and Privy Council) devised and ordained that the boll of wheat being commonly sold in the market for four merks, the Baxters Freemen of Burrowis should sell fourteen ounce of baked bread good and sufficient stuff for four pennies, and the other Baxters dwelling in the country and unfreemen should eik an once weight for ilk penny to the quantity foresaid, they bringing their bread to be sold in the Market of Edinburgh, and so as the prices of the wheat rises or diminishes the bread to be sold thereafter: And if any man delivers wheat to a Baxter to be baked to him, that he receive seven score pound weight of baked bread good and sufficient stuff for each boll.

ITEM, That the Provost and Baillies of each Burgh shall, at the end of each month, make proclamations at the market crosses upon what prices the malt shall be sold in the month ensuing, conform to the prices of the bear commonly sold in the market, and consequently what the ale should be sold at in the same month. and whatever prices should be stated within Burgh, that the same be universally observed as well in Burgh as in the Country, Regality, as throughout the hail Shire. And because it was difficult to put an order on fleshes otherways, it was ordained, That for a year it should be lawful to all manner of persons, whether they were free in Burrows or not, at their pleasure, to inbring upon all the days of the week, beef, mutton, veal and pork within Burgh, break and sell the same in all the Markets thereof, the said Licence only to endure for the space of one year then next to come.

ITEM the said Provost and Baillies shall advert that in their markets no poultry be sold dearer than at the prices following viz. A capon twenty pennies, an hen fourteen pennies, a gryce , a goose two shilling, a tame duck fourteen pennies, the best couple of chickens from Pasch a couple of doves six pennies, There are several other species mentioned, but not legible, and this Act of Council was to be proclaimed through all the Royal Burghs, all the Shires of Scotland, and by the Lords of Regalities within their respective jurisdictions, and bears date at Edinburgh the 11th of January 1555.

17. Commission by the Magistrates of Edinburgh on behalf of the Burghs of Scotland to certain persons to pursue the Collectors of the Customs of the King of France for exacting more from the Scotch Nation than is due, dated 27th September 1555.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 420,] as follows :—

19. Letters Patent by Queen Mary under the signet anent the plague at Dantzick, dated 16th July 1563.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 217.] as follows :—

Letters under the Signet, Bearing, that her Majesty Mary Queen of Scots understanding that the Plague vehemently raged in Dantzick, and by the trade of the merchants to these parts, and the ships coming therefrom, the Plague might be brought to this Kingdom : Therefore her Majesty strictly commanded that all and sundry persons lately come home, or that should thereafter come home from these parts, to keep themselves and their goods on ship board, at least to go to some quiet place free from Burghs or Common Ports, that none of the lieges trade or bear company, or have any meddling with them, and that none of them repair to any Royal Burgh, Towns, or common passages, ay and while her Majesty declared her will and pleasure thereanent, under the pain of death. These letters bear date the 16th of July in the 22d year of Queen Mary's Reign anno 1563.

20. A Grant by Charles IX. King of France, ordering no more custom to be taken from the Scots' nation for Wine than was due by old Treaties, dated 20 April 1565.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., p. 422,] as follows :—

Grant, or Letters Patent, by Charles, King of France, under his Great Seal, and directed to the Treasurer of France, established at Ageri ; Bearing, That it was humbly meant and shown his Majesty, by the Merchants of Scotland trading to France, that the Receiver-General at Bourdeaux had for two or three years past compelled them, and intended as yet to compel them, to pay ten souls for ilk Tun of Wine that they should load or take in at the Port and Harbour of Bourdeaux, for exportation to Scotland, over and above the twenty-one shillings four pennies which they had been in use to pay conform to the old composition agreed upon in the treaty made betwixt the said nations of France and Scotland; And seeing that this was contrary to the said old Treaty, and that his Majesty had no intention to alter or innovate anything therein contained : Therefore his Majesty, willing to relieve the said Scots Merchants of this burden and charge, and honestly to treat them as old Allies and Friends of his Crown, His Majesty expressly commanded his said Collector at Bourdeaux, to allow the said Scots Merchants who should load and take away wine from the said Port of Bourdeaux and to import into Scotland without fraud, and from that time forth his Majesty quitted and discharged the foresaid ten souls for the ton, and all other new taxation, except the twenty-one shillings four deniers which they had been in use to pay, and should not be bound to pay any other thing, or that they should be any ways troubled or molested thereanent. And it was his Majesty's will that every one should be compelled to desist in this case by all lawful means, notwithstanding of any opposition or appeal, for which it was his Majesty's will that the same should not be deferred notwithstanding of whatever ordinances, commandments, or defences in the contrar.

These Letters patent are granted by the King in his council, and bear date at Bourdeaux the 20th of April, 1565, and of the King's Reign, the 5th year.

N.B.—The principal is in the French Language, and there is a literal Translation thereof in the old Scots Language.

21. A Decree obtained before the Bailie of Dieppe, at the instance of Robert Aikman and Henry Tod against John Edgar, Factor for John Morison, dated 21 August 1566, with Discharge thereof, dated 28 September 1576.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh [Vol. I., 409], as follows :—

Decreet obtained before the Bailie of the town of Diepe in France at the instance of Robert Aitkman and Henry Tod, Burgesses residing in the said Town, against John Edgar, merchant there, as factor for John Morison Merchant residing in Scotland, for the sum of nine score livers, to which the pursuers restricted their claim, being in part for their relief of certain sums, wherein the claimants with other co-obligants had become bound, and had been distressed on Morison's account.

The Decreet is dated the 21st of August, 1566. And on the back thereof there is a receipt by the claimants to the said John Morrison for one hundred and five livres, ten souls, and discharging his part of the obligation claimed on. This Discharge is dated the 28th of September 1576.

N.B.—The principal Decreet is in French, and written in a hand scarcely legible.

On the Back, is the following indorsation, "A Decret of John Morison's whereof the Town has satisfied."

22. Act of Privy Council anent Stamp Money, dated 18th December 1578.—Described in the Inventories of the Charters of the City of Edinburgh. Vol. I., p. 219], as follows :—

Extract of an Act of the Privy Council, Bearing, that there was lately Proclamation made commanding all his Majesty's Lieges havers in their hands of Thirty, Twenty, and Ten Shilling pieces with the Testaine, to bring or send the same to the King's Master Coiner betwixt and a certain day at the prices following, viz., The thirty shilling piece for thirty two shilling six pennies, the twenty shilling piece for twenty one shilling eight pennies, and the ten shilling piece for ten shilling ten pennies, and the Testaine for six shilling eight pennies, to the end that such of the said money as was counterfeit and adulterate might be clipt down and delivered again to the owner, and that the true and lawful money might be marked with a crowned Thistle and also delivered back to the Owner to have course in payment at the following rates, viz., The thirty shilling for six and thirty shilling nine pennies, the twenty shilling piece for twenty four shilling six pennies, the ten shilling piece for twelve shilling three pennies, and the Testaine for seven shilling four pennies.

That albeit there had been a great many of the said pieces marked with the Crowned Thistle given out to have course and payment upon the above prices, yet several of his Majesty's subjects made some difficulty to receive the said pieces at the above prices express contrar to the tenor of the said proclamation, and in high contempt of his Majesty's authority and laws ; Therefore the Lords of Privy Council ordained Letters to be direct to officers at arms, Sheriffs in that part, charging them to pass to the Market Crosses of the head Burghs of the Kingdom and other places needful, and there by open proclamation in his Majesty's name and authority command and charge all his Majesty's subjects, that none of them take upon hand to refuse the foresaid pieces marked upon the prices above written respective in ready payment, under whatever colour or pretence, under the pain of death and confiscation of moveables.
