SIXTH REPORT

OF THE

ROYAL COMMISSION ON HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

WE, Your Majesty's Commissioners appointed by Your Royal Commission to inquire what papers and manuscripts belonging to private families would be useful in illustrating constitutional Law, Science, and General History of this country, and to which their respective possessors would be willing to give access, respectfully beg leave to submit this our Sixth Report to Your Majesty.

In pursuance of a warrant under Your Sign Manual bearing date 24th of October 1876, the Marquis of Bath was added to the Commissioners whom Your Majesty had previously appointed on 7th of December 1875.

In the execution of Your Majesty's commands, Your Commissioners have continued their inquiries on the subjects mentioned in Your Commission, and in accordance with the terms of the circular they have invited the co-operation of all persons possessing private collections of manuscripts. [A copy of this circular will be found in the Appendix, p. 780.]

The ordinary work of inspection during the past year has been carried on by Mr. Alfred J. Horwood, Mr. H. T. Riley, Mr. J. C. Jeaffreson, and Mr. R. B. Knowles for England; by Dr. Stuart and Mr. Fraser for Scotland; while Professor Brewer has continued his examination of the Cecil documents at Hatfield House.

In accordance with the original circular of the commission, the Report of every Inspector has been submitted to the owner of the papers to which his Report refers; and no Report has been published of any manuscripts until consent for its publication has first been obtained from the owner of them.

In the course of the past year about 50 additional collections have been examined, and detailed accounts of most of them have been prepared for our present Report; notices of the remainder are withheld until the Inspectors' examination of them shall have been finished. Your Commissioners have now the gratification of assuring Your Majesty that since the commencement of their operations more than 470 different collections of manuscripts have thus been examined. Besides which, numerous applications have been spontaneously made for the services of the Inspectors, and the utmost willingness has been evinced by various noblemen and gentlemen to assist the work of the Commission.

The Reports of the Inspectors, printed in the Appendix, pp. 1-780, embrace the following collections:—

In England and Wales.—The House of Lords; the Duke of Northumberland; the Marquis of Exeter; the Marquis of Lansdowne; the Marquis of Ripon; the Marquis of Salisbury; the Earl of Denbigh; Lord Leconfield; Sir Frederick U. Graham, Bart.; Sir Reginald Graham, Bart.; Sir A. Acland Hood, Bart.; Sir Henry Ingilby, Bart.; Sir Edward Strachey, Bart.; Sir George W. Dasent, D.C.L.; F. Brumell, Esq.; P. Davies Cooke, Esq.; Miss Ffarington; F. Bacon Frank, Esq.; P. Wykeham-Martin, Esq., M.P.; T. Stamford Raffles, Esq.; Corporation of Bridport; the Black Book of the Archdeacon of Canterbury; Registers of Carisbrooke Parish; the Corporation of Faversham; the Hospital of St. Bartholomew, Hythe; Lambeth Palace; the Corporation of Launceston; the Corporation of Morpeth; the Corporation of New Romney; Merton College, Oxford; Pembroke College, Oxford; Queen's College, Oxford (Records of God's House at Southampton); the Corporation of Tenterden; the Corporation of Wallingford; and the Corporation of Winchester.

In Scotland.—The Duke of Argyll; the Earl of Moray; Lord Monboddo; Sir William Gordon Gordon Cumming, Bart.; Sir Robert Menzies, Bart.; the Family of Carruthers of Holmains; George Ross, Esq.; H. Mackay Gordon, Esq.; King James's Hospital, Perth.

In Ireland.—The Marquis of Ormonde.

Among the collections of which the examination is still in progress may be named those of the Duke of Manchester, the Duke of Marlborough, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Egmont, and Mr. G. H. Finch, M.P. Other noblemen and gentlemen have expressed their willingness to submit their muniments to Your Commissioners' inspection.

We append a brief account of some of the chief collections examined since the issue of our last Report; full particulars of these will be found in the Appendix.

The House of Lords.—The calendar of the manuscripts in the House of Lords has been carried up to the end of the year 1647, in the Appendix to the present Report, and Mr. Monro and Mr. Thoms report to Your Commissioners that, in addition to the portion printed, they have completed the calendar up to the time of the Restoration, and that all papers up to the year 1800 have now been dated and arranged.

Amongst other papers of an earlier date than those in the present calendar, which have been quite recently discovered, must especially be mentioned a manuscript journal of the proceedings in the House of Commons from the 21st of June to the 5th of July 1625. This document is especially interesting as it fills up a hiatus in the journals of the House of Commons. In the printed journal, after the 22nd of June 1625, is this note: "Here is a blank in the journal, left probably for the entry of the proceedings of the House in the interval betwixt the 22nd of June and the 4th of July." The discovery of such a document as this shows the importance of continuing the sorting and arrangement of the papers until all have been brought into their proper places.

Mr. Monro and Mr. Thoms have called the attention of Your Commissioners to many interesting papers in the portion of the calendar now printed. The papers taken in the King's cabinet at the battle of Naseby were fully described in the First Report of this Commission. A complete list of the papers is given at page 219; some of them have been discovered since the date of the First Report, and those not previously printed are now printed in extenso.

This remarkable series of papers is still unfortunately incomplete, but it is quite possible that some of the papers may have been separated from the rest in the lapse of upwards of two hundred and thirty years, and may have been calendared under their respective dates. The King's instructions to Richard Harding (6 Aug. 1644), printed at p. 21, embodying proposals from His Majesty to the Earl of Essex, is not improbably one of the Naseby papers. It is folded in the same manner as many of the King's letters, and does not appear to have been sent by Essex to the Parliament; it may therefore be inferred that it was returned by Harding to the King, to be preserved by him, only to fall at last into the hands of his opponents.

There are many letters and other papers relating to incidents connected with the civil war deserving special notice. Amongst these may be mentioned a letter from the Earl of Essex to both Houses of Parliament (3 Sept. 1644), written after his escape to Plymouth, when the army under his command had laid down their arms, an event which he describes as "the greatest blow and weakening to the Parlyam^t forces" "that has bine since the warres beganne," the "sad relation" of which he chooses rather to send by Colonel Pyndar than in writing.

A long and very interesting letter from Secretary Nicholas at Oxford to Colonel Ashburnham at Weymouth (22 May 1644), contains much news of the proceedings of the armies in the south of England, and of other current events.

A copy of a letter from Oliver Cromwell to the Committee of both Kingdoms (28 April 1645), gives an account of a skirmish near Brampton Bush and the subsequent storming of the house in which the defeated party took refuge.

A letter from Colonel John Hutchinson to Gilbert Millington (15 Oct. 1645), gives an account of the extreme dejection of the King's army in the neighbourhood of Welbeck, and also some details as to the betrayal of Trent Bridge.

Two long letters from John Rushworth to the Speaker of the House of Commons. The first from Torrington (17 Feb. 1645-6), gives a description of the taking of that town by the Parliament forces, and describes a skirmish near Squire Roll[c]'s house, in which the contending forces "faced one another within half musket shot" "for about two hours, exchanging coarse language and bullets now and then." The second letter is a diary of the proceedings of the army on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd of March.

A petition of Henry Brime (14 Nov. 1645), details the steps taken by Lady Bancks for the defence of Corfe Castle.

Amongst the papers relating to the rebellion in Ireland may be mentioned a letter from Colonel Michael Jones, at Dublin, to the Committee at Derby House (12 Aug. 1647), sending an account of the advance of his army against the rebels; annexed to this letter is a diary of the proceedings of the army between the 1st and 10th of August 1647, and a list of the prisoners taken at Dungan Hill.

There are several petitions from William Prynne, John Bastwick, Henry Burton, and Alexander Leighton, praying redress for the punishments inflicted upon them by the sentences of the High Commission Court and Star Chamber. Prynne, Bastwick, and Burton give minute details of the mode in which their respective sentences were carried out, and Dr. Leighton states in his petition that he is in daily expectation of death, and that the greatest remaining sting is that he has been hindered by his thirteen years' imprisonment in providing for his children.

Amongst numerous papers relating to the cities of London and Westminster, the following present features of special interest :—

A petition of Sir William Middleton and the Company of the New River (19 July 1644), describing the advantages to the city by the conveying of the river water by pipes into infected houses, the cleaning of the streets, and quenching of sudden and dangerous fires. The petitioners complain that of late disaffected persons have in many places dammed up the passage of the river and cut the banks and pipes, and they pray that some course may be taken to prevent the like offences in future.

Petitions of wharfingers, brewers, woodmongers, lightermen, timber merchants, and other inhabitants beyond the chain in the Old Palace to the Horseferry (7 and 26 Oct. 1644), with reference to the building of a new bridge beyond the Old Palace towards the Horseferry in the place of the King's bridge, which was ever the landing-place for wood, coals, &c., and also with reference to the roadway through the Old Palace and Dean's Yard.

A petition of Cornelius Cooke, vintner (23 Jan. 1646-7), stating that time out of mind there have been stairs into the Thames from his house, very near London Bridge, which stairs have been made use of by all persons, both of the nobility and others, and even by the King himself, to avoid the danger of shooting the bridge; in 1638, when all stairs from taverns into the Thames were forbidden, these were expressly excepted, on account of the accommodation they afforded; and even during this Parliament they have been made use of by the Lieutenant of the Tower when conveying prisoners to and from Westminster, as in the case of the Earl of Strafford, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and others; last winter the stairs were carried away by the ice, and petitioner rebuilt them, but not so far into the river as before, without applying, through ignorance, to the Water Bailiff's Court, who are consequently trying to remove the stairs on pretence of their being an annoyance to the river.

A petition of the workmen lately employed for repairing St. Paul's (26 April 1645), praying that some scaffolding stuff and other materials belonging to the church (which as the work goes not forward will decay and be lost) may be sold for their benefit, as they are ready to perish for want of the money due to them for work done.

Various petitions and other documents concerning the re-building of St. Gregory's Church, which formerly abutted on the south-west corner of St. Paul's Cathedral, and which had been pulled down by order of Archbishop Laud.

The following papers also cannot be passed over without mention :—

A petition of the minister and inhabitants of Twickenham (2 April 1645), complaining that the ancient custom of bringing two great cakes into the church on Easter Day to be distributed amongst the younger sort of people causes great disorder by reason of the scrambling and contention; and praying that it may be discontinued.

A petition of Capt. Peter Cannon (26 Sept. 1645), claiming the invention of iron and brass ordnance to be loaded at the "britch," as others now are charged at the mouth, an invention never before attained unto.

Two petitions of Patrick Ruthven (25 March 1645, and 26 Feb. 1646-7) respecting the pictures left by the late Sir Anthony Vandyke.

A petition of William Barton, minister of St. John Zachary, London (7 Oct. 1645), praying that his translation of the psalms of David may be referred to the Assembly of Divines, and another petition (26 March 1646) praying that his psalm book may be permitted to be sung in public congregations when desired by the minister and people.

A petition of the officers of His Majesty's works (27 June 1646), signed by Inigo Jones and Henry Wicks, respecting the payment for the timber work of the court for the trial of the Earl of Strafford in Westminster Hall.

A petition of Francis Lord Cottington (2 Sept. 1646), praying that as he is excepted from any composition of his estate, he may have license to go beyond the seas, and leave to sell such of his poor goods as are yet left him (scarce worth the mentioning), towards the buying of bread.

This petition is noted rejected, but another petition of Lord Cottington (26 Nov. 1646), praying leave to return to England, and that some competent means may be allowed to him out of his estate, seems to show that, failing to obtain the license for which he petitioned, he went abroad without it.

A petition of Henry Earl of Worcester (16 Dec. 1646) praying that on account of his great age (near fourscore years) and infirmity, and inasmuch as his life cannot continue many days, he may be freed from custody and die out of restraint, and not in the nature of a prisoner. The Earl was in the custody of the Usher of the Black Rod, having given himself up upon the treaty at Ragland; and two days after the presentation of this petition his death was reported to the House. The petition is endorsed, "16 Dec. Nothing done. Dead. 18 Dec. 1646."

A petition of Dr. Godfrey Goodman, late Bishop of Gloucester (31 July 1647), stating that when his whole estate was sequestered, he retired into North Wales, where he lived in the most obscure and mean manner upon the profits of a tenement worth 30*l.* a year, which he had formerly conveyed to pious uses, but was obliged to resume it for his own benefit. He prays that some competent maintenance may be allowed him for the short remainder of his life.

A petition of John Lord Finch (14 July 1647) for leave to come to England, that he may die in his native country. The anticipation of a short life, expressed by Lord Finch in his petition, was not realised, as he lived until the year 1660, sat in the first Parliament of Charles II., and was appointed one of the commissioners for the trial of the regicides.

A holograph petition of the great physician and anatomist, William Harvey (24 Nov. 1646), praying for a pass to go to Newcastle or elsewhere to attend His Majesty.

A petition of Edmund Waller, the poet (24 Sept. 1644), praying that in regard of his free and ingenuous confession, and discoveries made upon promised favours, the House will hold his life precious, that 10,000*l.* may be accepted for his fine, and that if not held worthy to serve the House he may be banished to some other part of the world.

The following papers are interesting as originals:—

Two letters from Elizabeth Queen of Bohemia (14 May 1646), one to the Speaker of the House of Peers, the other to the House of Commons, returning thanks for the provision made for her support.

A letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax (7 March 1644–5) to the Lords in Parliament, sending the names of officers nominated by him upon the new modelling of the army.

A letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax and other commanders of the army (8 June 1645) to the House of Lords, desiring that General Cromwell may be appointed to command the Horse.

The bill or estimate for the jewel made for Sir Thomas Fairfax by order of the House of Commons (18 Oct. 1645). The cost was 800*l.*, which was ordered to be paid "out of the fine of the first delinquent not yet disposed of."

The examination of Sir Henry Vane, senior (11 and 13 March 1643–4), taken before a commission, with reference to the advice given by Archbishop Laud to the King to raise money without the consent of Parliament.

A safe conduct, signed by Prince Rupert, to Sir Robert Pye to go to London to procure his exchange for Colonel Henry Tillyer or Colonel Monck (3 June 1645).

A letter from the Princes Rupert and Maurice to the Earl of Manchester, with reference to their departure from Oatlands (28 June 1646).

A warrant, signed by the King, to Sir Thomas Glemham and others, governors of Oxford, Lichfield, Worcester, Wallingford, &c. to deliver up the cities, towns, castles, and forts entrusted to them, upon honourable conditions, and to disband the forces under their several commands (10 June 1646).

The articles agreed upon between the Committee of the Parliament of England and the Commissioners of the Parliament of Scotland for the payment of 400,000*l.* to the Scots, and for the departure of their army out of England. Signed by Oliver Cromwell, amongst others (23 Dec. 1646).

In addition to the papers specially mentioned above, others will be found relating to the East India Company, the colonies of Maryland and Virginia, the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and other subjects of general interest.

The Duke of Northumberland.—The largest and most valuable portion of the Duke of Northumberland's manuscripts is at Alnwick Castle, and has been fully described in a former Report. His Grace has now laid open to Your Commissioners' inspection the manuscripts at Syon House, and Mr. Horwood's account of them will be seen at p. 221 of the Appendix to the present Report.

Here is the original document by which Henry, the 4th Earl of the Percy family, pledged his fealty to Richard Duke of Gloucester; and it may be supposed that he was satisfied of Richard's complicity in the death of King Edward V., which would have vacated the engagement, for the Earl was one of those noblemen who, though following the Duke (as Richard III.) to meet Henry of Lancaster at Bosworth, did not support him there. Among the more important of the documents are a cartulary of the Priory of Tynemouth, and a custumal of the Manor of Isleworth, both of which contain valuable illustrations of land tenures; as do also the early court rolls. The personal expenses of Henry the 9th Earl, and of his family, are well illustrated by a long series of rolls, all of which have been examined, and from which extracts have been made. This Earl was suspected of being privy to the Powder Plot, and for many years he was imprisoned in the Tower. From these rolls may be gathered hints of the way in which he passed the period of his captivity. He was on intimate terms with Sir Walter Raleigh: and although Sir Walter's name appears only on the rolls of the time of Queen Elizabeth, it cannot be doubted that he and the Earl were often allowed to communicate; and that the still-house, which, according to the rolls, the Earl was allowed to construct, was the scene of some of Sir Walter's experiments; and that the numerous books which the Earl bought, particularly in 1610, were of service in the compilation of that History of the World which is a lasting monument of Sir Walter's industry and genius. The Earl seems to have lived within the Tower pretty much as he liked, directing the management of his estates, providing his own diet, receiving the visits of his family and friends, and having the society of literati; and spending, perhaps ostentatiously in defiance of King James, large sums in the purchase of pipes and tobacco. Notices occur of Harriot and Warner, to whom he allowed yearly pensions; and, in the earlier rolls, of George Peele the poet, and Hilliard the portrait painter.

The Marquis of Exeter.—The Marquis of Exeter's library contains a fine copy, on vellum, of Trevisa's translation into English of Higden's Polychronicon; and in the same volume are translations by Trevisa of other works, including Archbishop Turpin's romance chronicle of Charlemagne and his Peers at Roncevalles. This volume was probably the property of William Cecil, Lord Burghley, for his handwriting is seen on the margin of one of the leaves. A beautiful volume, of French execution, contains descriptions of the persons and paintings of the coats of arms of King Arthur and his Knights and Companions of the Round Table; the date of it is about the end of the 15th century. Charters of King Henry II. and King Richard I., and the numerous charters of the Monastery of Revesby, are in the muniment room. All these and the other items of the collection are described on p. 234 of the Appendix.

The Marquis of Lansdowne.—Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice has completed his Report on the Papers of the Marquis of Lansdowne in London. The most important of these Papers have been used by him for his recently published "Life of William Earl of Shelburne." (See App., p. 235.)

The Marquis of Ripon.—The Marquis of Ripon's collection of manuscripts includes a cartulary, a chronicle, books and rolls of accounts, and a very large number of the early charters of Fountain's Abbey. A large volume, written about the year 1700, treats very fully of the government of England by means of conventions and Parliaments from Saxon times to the end of the reign of King Henry III. There are many volumes treating of nobility and titles of dignity, pedigrees, coat-armour, ceremonials of state and other formalities, either compiled by or the property of one of the heralds in the first half of the 18th century:—A volume containing extracts from numerous early deeds in private hands, relating chiefly to Cheshire, compiled in the 17th century. A volume of ordinances in relation to the court gives minute directions for the ceremony of the King washing poor men's feet on Holy Thursday, and one of the heraldic books is the presentation copy to Lord Burghley, to whom it was dedicated by the author, Francis Thynne, whose autograph signature it bears. The Marquis of Ripon's manuscripts are fully described at p. 243 of the Appendix.

Earl of Denbigh.—(Second Report.)—In the First Report upon Lord Denbigh's manuscripts, three volumes of letters and despatches during Lord Fielding's embassy in Italy were mentioned. Those addressed to him, of which there are two volumes, are the most interesting, and they form the subject of the present Report. Amongst them are some news letters in which Lord Fielding is informed by his correspondents in London and elsewhere upon such topics as ship-money, the resistance made to it, and the decision of the judges; the measures taken for the recovery of the Palatinate, and the reception of Marie de' Medici by Charles I. on her coming to England; and other matters of interest. The letters occupy the period from 1635 to 1643, and towards the latter year there are foreshadowings in a few of them of the calamities which were then beginning. (See App., p. 277.)

Lord Leconfield.—Many of Lord Leconfield's manuscripts, described at p. 287 of the Appendix, were the property of the 9th Earl of Northumberland, whose prison life is illustrated by the Duke of Northumberland's manuscripts at Syon House. Among the early English volumes at Petworth is a good copy of the Wicliffe translation of the Bible into English, and a fine copy of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, which Lord Leconfield has allowed to be printed by the Chaucer Society. The register of Ely Priory, of which a full abstract has been given, will be found useful for the history of that religious house.

Algernon, the 10th Earl of Northumberland, was Lord High Admiral, and for him it may be surmised were gathered together the many volumes on naval matters in this collection, among which are a good copy of the Black Book of the Admiralty, and some of the other documents lately printed in the Rolls Series of Chronicles and Memorials of the Middle Ages; a set of the Naval Treatises of Sir William Monson; unprinted accounts of sea voyages, and tracts on naval officers and political and commercial subjects; and volumes illustrating the history of the marches of Scotland and Ireland. Attention may be drawn to Archdeacon Harpsfeld's Account of the Marriage and Divorce of King Henry VIII., inasmuch as the printing of a copy of that work has been announced. Extracts will be found in the Appendix, p. 316, from the letters by the Earl of Anglesey to the Earl of Orrery on Irish affairs. The political papers and correspondence of the Duke of Somerset and the Earl of Egremont, in the last century, give much information on West Indian affairs, and on the efforts made for peace in the beginning of the reign of King George III.

Sir Frederick Graham.—The section of Sir Frederick Graham's manuscripts of which an account is now given, includes an early copy of the French version of Sir John Maundeville's travels, at the end of which is a singular early English poem on the Evil of Pride. But the gem of the collection is John Milton's Common Place Book, described by Mr. Horwood at p. 320 of the Appendix. The contents of this volume, which throws much light on Milton's studies and mode of study, and reveals his opinions on many matters, have, by Sir F. Graham's liberal permission, been printed by the Camden Society, and been reproduced in facsimile (to the extent of 100 copies) by the autotype process. The report on the valuable and interesting correspondence of Viscount Preston will appear in the next volume.

Sir Reginald Graham.—Sir Reginald Graham's collection contains accounts of the Gentleman of the Horse to the Duke of Buckingham in King Charles I.'s time, and Mint Papers during the time of Henry Slingsby, who was Master of the Mint in the reign of King Charles II. The first show somewhat of the economy of the stables of King James and King Charles, and some characteristic personal traits of the Duke; the latter are much occupied with the projected coinage of a farthing, and the amounts of bullion used at the Mint and the mode of coining. In 1661 the mill and press were introduced, but the workmen opposed the new process, preferring the old way of coining by the hammer. There are some papers about the Healing Medals, and an account of a large sum of money, most likely sent from France, which was to be recoined here. A few letters in the first year of the Great Rebellion give military news. Henry Slingsby's country seat was at Kippax, and while he was there his friends, Sir Paul Neile, Sir Robert Murray and others, informed him of what was the news in London or at the Court. The letters contain notices of Lord Lauderdale and Lord Shaftesbury. Sir John Denham is said to have become mad in consequence of injudicious treatment by the quack Valentine Greatrakes. A long letter in 1732 tells how Lord Howe declined an engagement with the combined French and Spanish fleets. (See App., p. 322.)

Sir A. Acland-Hood.—Sir Alexander Acland-Hood's manuscripts comprise a very fine copy of a translation into English (of the 15th century) of Trivet's French Chronicle. The existence of such a translation does not seem to have been heretofore known. The story of Constance, which Chaucer must have borrowed from Trivet's Chronicle, is given at great length; and this English version of it has recently been printed for the Chaucer Society by Sir A. Acland-Hood's permission. A contemporary roll of the grievances, and their remedies, which resulted in the statute of 28 Edw. I. known as Articuli super Chartas, is valuable as showing that all the demands of the people were not granted by the King. There is a fine copy of the Wiclifite translation of the Bible. The accounts of the churchwardens of Stoke-Courey early in the 16th century are curious, and many extracts have accordingly been made. There are many materials for Somersetshire topography and pedigrees, and a copy of the laws of the Mendip mines. Some of the many treatises of the 16th and 17th centuries seem to be unprinted. One of them gives notice of an edition of Father Persons's Responsio ad Edictum, &c. earlier than any yet noticed. Another is a long political work by Thomas Alured, M.P., a fierce opponent of the first George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham. The treatises on abuses in trade and commerce by Procter and Saunderson are not mentioned as printed, either by Watt or by Lowndes. Mr. Horwood's report on this collection is at p. 344 of the Appendix.

Sir Henry Ingilby.—Manuscripts of great value are in Sir Henry Ingilby's possession, and a full account of them is given at p. 352 of the Appendix. Among them are works by the Venerable Bede, Nennius and Alexander Necham, and 15th century copies of Langland's Vision of Piers Plowman and Chaucer's Canterbury Tales; and some other early English poetry. Autograph signatures of two of the daughters of King Edward IV. appear in one of the MS. volumes. A very early copy of the Opuscula of Ralph de Diceto has been recently used in the edition of that author for the Rolls Series of Chronicles and Memorials of the Middle Ages. There are versions in English and French of the Brut Chronicle. Many of the early manuscripts in this collection once belonged to Fountains Abbey, and there are portions of a fine register, and several books of account of and early grants to the Abbey. William Brewyn, a priest of Canterbury, made a pilgrimage to Rome and the Holy Land in 1477, and a volume here gives his account thereof. A 17th century volume contains, amongst other things, comparative statements of the royal and parliamentary forces and fortresses in 1645 and 1646, and a journal of Sir Thomas Fairfax's marches and victories. Two folio volumes contain original letters by Sir Robert Paston, Earl of Yarmouth, to his wife, and other original letters by and to him; the letters to Sir Robert by Thomas Henshaw, who was a Court physician, and one of the first members of the Royal Society, are interesting. The letters of Lady Paston to her husband were, in accordance with her request to him, regularly destroyed; her husband's good faith in this matter must be applauded, although the letters of a lady working hard at the Court of King Charles II. for the advancement of her husband and children, must have contained many curious and interesting notices of persons and events. (In the collection of Mr. Frere, of Roydon Hall, Norfolk, are a number of Paston letters of the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries. These Mr. Frere has sent to London for the purposes of this Commission, and an account of them will be given in a future Report. Among them is a portion of one letter by Lady Paston, and it justifies the opinion that her letters to her husband would have been found very entertaining.) Another volume, which in the last century was the property of Earl Verney, contains letters by Arthur Charlett, Master of University College, Oxford, Wm. Derham, Jonathan Richardson the artist, and others, to Ralph Palmer, mostly in literary matters; in the same volume is a letter giving an account of the preparations for the treaty of Ryswick in 1697.

Sir G. W. Dasent.—Sir George Dasent's volume, described at p. 407 of the Appendix, is one of a class of which there are very few examples. It contains the statutes (in English and in Latin) and copies of the deeds and documents relating to the estates of the Fraternity and Gild of St. Peter-on-Cornhill. It is a valuable contribution to civic history and to London topography.

Miss ffarington.—The manuscripts of Miss ffarington comprise two royal letters of the beginning of the 16th century directed against the practice of keeping a large number of retainers with the badge of the employer: a letter and depositions regarding some strong language used by one against Anne Boleyn shortly after her marriage with King Henry VIII.; and some very interesting letters concerning the rebellion known as the Pilgrimage of Grace, in the reign of the same King. Of a later period is an original letter by Oliver Cromwell; and a long series of original letters by Richard Bradshaw (a nephew of the Regicide), who was British Resident at Hamburgh and elsewhere; these letters are of the year 1650, and give information on British affairs, and the doings abroad of some of the exiled Royalists; one of their sports was to carry about an effigy of Cromwell in a cage. Richard Bradshaw's agent in London, was James Waynwright, and his letters to Bradshaw from 1650 to 1658 are very numerous, and give news of the doings in England and Scotland, personal notices of the Protector and his family; and comments on our foreign policy, particularly as regards the Dutch. (See App., p. 426.)

Mr. Bacon Frank.—Mr. Bacon Frank's very large collection consists mainly of a portion of the original documents gathered, and copies made, by Dr. Nathaniel Johnston of Pontefract, in the latter half of the 17th century, and of the lives which he compiled of the 5th, 6th, and 7th Earls of Shrewsbury. Johnston's transcripts towards the civil and ecclesiastical history of Yorkshire are very extensive, and to these many volumes of transcripts were added in the last century by and under the direction of Mr. R. Frank. For the lives of the Earls, the foundations were the original Shrewsbury papers, once preserved at Sheffield Castle, the greater number of which are now in the College of Arms. Among the original letters will be found one by the Earl of Leicester, containing pointed remarks concerning Queen Elizabeth, and letters by Sir Walter Raleigh, King James I., and Count Olivares; an original memorial to Queen Elizabeth, on behalf of the King of France, against the execution of Mary Queen of Scots. There are copies of several letters of Arabella Stuart, and a number of original letters by Sir William Dugdale. In one of the volumes is an extraordinary story of the circumstances preceding the birth of the father of the first Earl of Strafford. There are collections for the history of the families of Bruce, Fairfax, and Reresby, and a fine Armorial of Yorkshire, compiled probably for one of the Reresbys; also letters in the 17th century giving public news. A deed of the date of 1249 gives the names of nine Templars. A beautifully written copy on vellum of Chaucer's poem of Troilus and Cressida, written about the year 1400, seems to have been made for a member of the royal family of England. Many of the volumes contain much also regarding Lancashire and Westmoreland. This large collection is described at p. 448 of the Appendix.

Mr. Wykeham-Martin.—The manuscripts of Mr. Wykeham-Martin are but few, the Fairfax letters having been some years ago lost to Leeds Castle by an accident. But the autograph of Lord Fairfax's "Short Memorials &c." remains, as also a revised copy, and Brian Fairfax's tract called "Iter Boreale," in which he tells how he went by Lord Fairfax's direction to General Monk, for the purpose of ensuring their union in opposing Lambert, and he insists that Fairfax was the first man to propose the restoration of King Charles II. There is a long holograph letter (in French) by Queen Henrietta Maria to Lord Culpeper, in which she expresses her dissatisfaction with the distrust shown by her son King Charles II. The letter is dated in 1655, and a facsimile of it is in the printed description of Leeds Castle by the late Mr. Wykeham-Martin. In 1707 is a letter by a servant in attendance at the deathbed of George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham; the writer says that the Duke died at the best house in Kirkby Moorside, and received the Sacrament with great devotion. Among the miscellaneous letters is one by Elizabeth Elstob, the Anglo-Saxon scholar, and several by Archbishop Wake. A funeral sermon on Thomas Lord Fairfax, composed by his chaplain, adds a few items to the details of his life. The armament and siege of Gibraltar are the subjects of some papers. (See App., p. 465.)

Lambeth.—At Lambeth Palace are a number of bags the contents whereof were not known, and at the request of the Archbishop of Canterbury an examination was made. They are found to contain several hundred rolls of parchment and paper, being court rolls, rentals, and ministers' accounts of manors and estates belonging to the See of Canterbury; the earliest being of the time of King Edward I., and latest being of the time of King Charles I. Your Commissioners have suggested that these rolls should be put in order and catalogued, as they must contain much that will be material to the history of Kent. Among the miscellaneous rolls is one which contains some French poems of the 13th century. A brief notice of these rolls is at p. 322 of the Appendix.

Carisbrooke.—The register books of the parish church of Carisbrooke, in the Isle of Wight, contain a few notes of events, including visits to the island by King James I. and his son Prince Charles, and a note of King Charles I. being taken from Newport to Hurst Castle. These volumes are described at p. 499 of the Appendix.

Sir Edward Strachey, Bart.—The collection of Sir Edward Strachey, Bart., of Sutton Court, Somersetshire, consists of three groups of documents: (a.) The manuscripts of John Strachey, Esq., F.R.S., including his unpublished History of Somersetshire, which after many years of labour he had prepared for the press in 1736. (b.) The manuscripts left by Sir Henry Strachey, the first baronet, of Sutton Court, including the great mass of official and private correspondence that came to his hands as the confidential secretary and executor of the first Lord Clive; papers relating to affairs in America during the American War of Independence, and documents relating to the Anglo-American treaty of Paris. (c.) The Kirkpatrick papers, consisting chiefly of official writings left by Colonel William Kirkpatrick, military secretary to the Marquis of Wellesley, when his Lordship was Governor-General of India, and by the same Colonel William Kirkpatrick's brother, Colonel James Achilles Kirkpatrick, who was for several years resident at Hyderabad. The MSS. of John Strachey, F.R.S., are remarkable for their abundance of information respecting Somersetshire, and the Kirkpatrick papers comprise some important documents relating to matters of Anglo-Indian politics during the concluding five years of the last and the opening five years of the present century. But most important of all are the manuscripts left by Sir Henry Strachey, who, after acting for many years as Lord Clive's secretary, was appointed in 1774 (the year of Lord Clive's death) secretary to Lord Howe and General Sir William Howe during their mission to "restore peace to the colonies" and plantations of North America," and who in 1782 was sent to Paris with Mr. Oswald to assist in the negotiations with the commissioners of the United States for the treaty which put an end to hostilities between Great Britain and her independent colonies. Besides the Clive papers, which afford conclusive evidence that, at least in respect to his domestic kindness, biography has hitherto failed in justice to the victor of Plassy, Sir Henry Strachey's Indian MSS. comprise, together with other noteworthy correspondence, some remarkable letters from Sir Philip Francis in India to his friends in England. Had not their numbers been reduced by the person who removed to the United States the document, which, to the surprise of historians, was published in 1860 by the New York Historical Society under the title of "Treason of Charles Lee, Major-General, second in command in the American Army of the Revolution," Sir Henry Strachey's papers respecting affairs in America during the War of Independence would have been more entertaining and instructive; but the searcher of what still remains of them at Sutton Court will find among other interesting matter, copies of Governor Tryon's letters to the Earl of Dartmouth (1774-1776), the copy of George III.'s "General Instructions" to Lord Howe and General Howe for pacifying the North American colonies and plantations, the copy (certified as correct by a note in Lord Howe's handwriting) of the King's "Separate Instructions" to the commissioners, the original memorial of the loyalists of New York to Lord Howe and General Sir William Howe, with the signatures of the memorialists, and the official copy of General Howe's reply to General Washington's letter of complaint, respecting the treatment of prisoners by English authorities. Containing a memorandum of Lord Shelburne's special instructions for Sir Henry's action towards the American commissioners, the papers relating to the Anglo-American treaty of Paris afford some particulars concerning the negotiations for that treaty. (See App., p. 395.)

Mr. P. B. Davies Cooke.—Together with a folio of Yorkshire documents and three still larger folios of Welsh writings, Mr. Davies Cooke preserves at Owston Hall, near Doncaster, the important collections of manuscript books that were formerly a part of the famous Llanerch library, and descended to their present owner from his ancestor, Robert Davies, Esq., of Llanerch and Gwysaney, counties Denbigh and Flint, the well-known antiquary and lover of old literature. To indicate the value of this last-named part of Mr. Davies Cooke's library, it is enough to say that it comprises the Chartulary of Branchief, of the 15th century; the Liber Sanctæ Mariæ, of Holmcultram Abbey, Cumberland, of the 13th century, and a copy of the celebrated Liber Landavensis, which, after resting in the custody of the Bishop and Chapter of Llandaff for five centuries, passed through the hands of successive borrowers and lenders to the first possessor of the Llanerch library. Mr. Cooke has also several important or curious manuscripts, which came to him through lines of ancestry distinct from his Welsh progenitors, e.g., the Book of the Four Gospels, given by Lord Burghley to the 8th Earl of Northumberland; Walter Stonehouse's Memoir of Turkish History (A.D. 1613), followed by his notes on the "Ordo Successionis Rectorum Medietatis Ecclesiæ parochialis de Darfield in comitatu et diocesis Eboracensi ab anno Domini 1228 ad annum 1631;" and the "Pupill Books of Accounts," 1658-1663, kept by Ralph Eaton, M.A., tutor of Brasenose College, Oxford. With the exception of papers that relate to members of great families of the county, and the few documents signed by successive Washingtons, of Adwick-le-Street, ancestors of the American President, which merit the attention of local annalists, the Yorkshire folio affords scarcely any material for historical inquirers. The Welsh folios, however, contain several writings that throw light on the social condition of the Welsh in the 16th and 17th centuries. Some of the wills drawn in the earlier of those centuries are curious, and collectors of facts for the Church History of Wales should examine the documents that commemorate the spiritual destitution of the parishes of Nerquis and Treythin, in the time of Charles II., and the remarkable series of writings that exhibit the jealous care with which the gentry of North Wales guarded and transmitted their rights to church pew and church graves, in the times of the later Tudors and earlier Stuarts. (See App., p. 418.)

Mr. Stamford Raffles.—Consisting chiefly of the autographs of famous persons, which his father, Dr. Raffles, the late Nonconformist preacher of Liverpool, collected during many years and arranged in more than 100 folios, the miscellaneous collection of MSS. in the possession of Mr. Thomas Stamford Raffles, the police magistrate of the borough of Liverpool, contains a proportion of documents that are of considerable interest and historic value. Notable amongst the more important writings is a group of warrants and letters addressed by Lords of the Council, in the reign of Elizabeth, to the mayor, aldermen, and other authorities of Chester respecting the payment and transport of soldiers on their way to Ireland, and other matters of public business. The collection exhibits some other interesting Elizabethan papers, e.g., a fragment of a letter from Mary Queen of Scots to her faithful adherents, Rohan Gordon and William Douglas; the Treasury warrant for the payment of Solicitor-General Egerton's services in the prosecution of the Scottish Queen, setting forth some particulars of those services, and the curious letter addressed by Sir George Bromley, justice of Chester, to the mayor and sheriff of Chester, requiring more liberal entertainment from them, whenever he should visit their city in the performance of the duties of his office. The more important writings of the 17th century comprise Prince Rupert's epistle to the gentlemen of Montgomeryshire, imposing a monthly tax of 6*d.* in the pound on all men's possessions in that county; Andrew Marvell's budget of gossip from Westminster to Sir Henry Thompson, of Eserick; and the Hon. H. Radclyffe's graphic description of the rejoicings at London on the acquittal of the seven bishops, sent in a letter to his father the Earl of Derwentwater, at Newcastle-on-Tyne. (See App., p. 468.)

The reports of Mr. Riley upon the muniments of Pembroke College and Merton College, Oxford, and of the Corporations of Bridport, Faversham, Launceston, Morpeth, Tenterden, Wallingford, Winchester, begin at p. 475 of the Appendix. They are in no respect below the inspector's previous reports upon like collections, and afford equal variety of material for historical and antiquarian purposes; but Your Commissioners have been unable to insert here the usual summaries of their contents, on account, they are sorry to say, of Mr. Riley's long-continued illness.

The Duke of Argyll.—The first report on the muniments of his Grace the Duke of Argyll by Mr. Fraser, printed in the Fourth Report of the Commissioners, dealt mainly with the charters, together with Royal grants and commissions. The present Report (pp. 606–634) contains an account of the correspondence and miscellaneous papers. The two forfeitures in the family subsequent to the Restoration resulted in the dispersal of many of the Argyll papers; but a large number still remain of much historical interest. This Report is divided into sections. I. Royal Letters. These contain five letters from Mary Queen of Scots, six from Queen Elizabeth, eight from King James VI., and several from King Charles I. and his Queen Henrietta Maria. There are also letters from King Charles II., including the instructions sent by him from Breda in 1650 to the Marquis of Ormonde, his Lieutenant-General in Ireland. The letters of Queen Mary possess much interest and are chiefly written after she had sought refuge in England to Archibald, 5th Earl of Argyll, who had been appointed Lieutenant-General of the Queen's army at the battle of Langside. Several postscripts to the Queen's letters are holograph, and show the imperfect acquaintance which she had with the language of her own kingdom. The letters of Queen Elizabeth among other matters contain a request to the Earl of Argyll to use his influence in restraining certain Scots of the north who had been giving assistance to the Irish against her authority. In this section will also be found the farewell letter written by Archibald Marquis of Argyll to his son, Lord Neill Campbell, the day before his execution. II. Royal grants of offices, licenses, charges, &c., 1543–1686, mostly relating to the lawless condition of the Highlands. One of the papers announces the reward granted for services against the Clan Gregor, "notorious lymmeris and male-factours." Section III. contains the general correspondence of the family of Argyll. It includes a number of letters and other papers relating to Archibald Marquis of Argyll, and among them will be found the original letters produced at the trial of the Marquis by General Monck, which were mainly instrumental in ensuring his condemnation. The letter from the Marquis to Campbell of Inverawe, containing instructions for the destruction of Lord Ogilvie's house of Forthar, is printed here; the incident has been commemorated in the ballad of "The Bonnie House 'o' Airlic." There are two letters written by Archibald, 9th Earl of Argyll, to his sons before his execution; and a number of letters containing much information regarding the condition of the Highlands and the movements in the various Jacobite rebellions. IV. Commissions from Sovereigns and Lords of the Privy Council to the Earls of Argyll, 1564–1680. V. Commissions from the Committee of Estates. VI. Bonds of manrent. VII. Papers relating to the Spanish Armada, and concerning a ship of the Armada wrecked near the Isle of Mull, and the means employed to recover the treasure supposed to be sunk in her. VIII. Papers relating to robberies by the Macleans, Macdonalds, Camerons, and others, 1676–1690. IX. Papers connected with the trial of Archibald ninth Earl of Argyll. The miscellaneous papers in Section X. contain many notices of the disturbed state of the Highlands and the turbulence of the Clan Ean, Macleans of Mull, and others.

The Earl of Moray.—The papers at Donibristle belonging to the Earl of Moray are very numerous, and are of unusual interest and importance. (See App., p. 634.)

Among these is a series of letters from Mary Queen of Scots, addressed to the Commandator of St. Colmes Inch and to the Countess of Murray (widow of the Regent), with a series of the Queen's ciphers, two of which are given in facsimile in the Report. In this division is a remarkable letter from Queen Elizabeth to the Regent Mar, describing the change of policy to which she had been led, through the discovery of the "pernitious practises" of the Scottish Queen, and a letter from King James VI., written on the first intelligence of his mother's death. Two of the documents relate to the Earl of Bothwell, one of them being a letter from him as Duke of Orkney to Cockburn of Langton, written about the end of his Scottish career, and just before he took to sea.

Another division of the papers refers to the Regent Murray, and in it are several original State Papers, lists of jewels and plate pledged by the Regent with the Laird of Drumlanrig and others for raising money; letters by and to the Regent, among which is a characteristic one from Queen Elizabeth, dated a few weeks prior to his assassination, in which she demands the surrender of her rebel the Earl of Northumberland. There is also the original contract for the erection of the Regent's tomb in the church of St. Giles at Edinburgh, with an account of the disbursements at his funeral; a list of the debts contracted by him during his regency, and sundry lists of his household furnishing. One of these, dated in 1562, describes certain pieces of tapestry "that hang my lordis chalmers in the college of prallis in perische," from which we discover that "the sculis" in which the youthful Prior of St. Andrews had been a student was the College de Presles in the University of Paris. Another entry in this homely record describes certain vessels sent to Lochleven "at the queeneis cuming thair" at a time shortly after Mary's return from France, and when her relations with her brother were of a cordial nature.

Lady Anna Keith, the wife of the Regent, was a woman of great vigour of character, who carried on an extensive correspondence after her husband's death, both on public and family affairs. Among the letters addressed to her is one from Randolph, the English Ambassador, with a message of condolence on the Regent's death from the English Queen, and another with a suggested form of a letter to be sent by her to Queen Elizabeth. Several letters to the Countess from Sir William Kirkcaldy of Grange, while Governor of Edinburgh Castle, are of considerable importance, while a series addressed to her by Lady Margaret Erskine, mother of the Regent, is of much interest. One of them gives a very circumstantial account of the illness and death at Lochleven of a daughter of the Regent, who is unknown to the peerage writers.

Some very characteristic letters from John Wood, the secretary of the Regent Murray, occur in this series, as well as various letters about the refusal of the Countess to surrender the Crown jewels, which were in the Regent's custody at the time of his death. A book of disbursements of the Countess contains the items spent by her on household and travelling expenses, books, dress, alms, and law.

The Balmerino papers contain an extensive correspondence carried on by King James VI. and his Secretary of State on public affairs. Among these are several from Queen Elizabeth, Henry IV. of France, and various foreign princes. The chief feature of the collection is a series of letters to and from the Master of Gray, who was a conspicuous political plotter of his time; a like series of letters to and from Foulis, the King's Ambassador at the English Court, and several from James Beaton, Archbishop of Glasgow, who represented the King at the Court of France.

Among the miscellaneous documents are various instruments of early date relating to the Abbots of St. Colme's Inch; the will of the Earl of Murray (son of King James IV.), and a book of ordinances by King James VI., dated in 1603, for the Queen's officers at Court, and those in the establishments of Prince Henry and the Lady Elizabeth.

Lord Monboddo.—The MSS. preserved at Monboddo House have already been reported on by Mr. Fraser in the Fourth Report of the Commissioners. Reference was made in that Report to a portion of the papers of Lord Monboddo now in the custody of Mr. Arthur Burnett, advocate, late sheriff-substitute of Peebles-shire, a grandson of his Lordship. It is that section of the MSS. with which the present Report deals (pp. 673–681). Lord Monboddo held a prominent position among the men of letters at the end of the last century, and his correspondence is varied and interesting, extending over a wide range of subjects. Among his correspondents were the Lord Chancellor Thurlow, Dr. Horsley, Dr. Richard Price, Mr. Welbore Ellis, Lord Lyttelton, Lord Hailes, Sir Joseph Banks, Professors Dugald Stewart and John Hunter. Extracts are given from the correspondence showing his opinions on philosophy and kindred subjects; his curious researches into the supposed relations of the orang-outang with the human species, and his observations on the study of philology and history. A catalogue of his MSS. is also appended, bearing date 1794, principally consisting of essays and notes taken in the course of his varied studies.

Sir Robert Menzies, Baronet.—The muniments of the family of Menzies preserved at Castle Menzies, in Perthshire, are reported on by Mr. Fraser (pp. 688–709). The mansion-house of Weem, now Castle Menzies, was burnt by Niell Stewart, of Forthingall, in 1503, and many of the family writs are believed to have been destroyed at that time. The writs and manuscripts which still exist, and which are now reported on, form a collection both numerous and interesting, including a number of papers concerning the Marquis of Argyll which are specially noticed in the Second Report on the Argyll muniments. They are divided into the following sections:—I. Ancient charters dating from 1296 to 1561. The first being a charter by John Earl of Athole to Sir Alexander Meyners [Menzies] of the lands of Weem and Aberfeally-beg [Aberfeldy] about the year 1296. The second is a charter in French, dated 1315, relating to the lands of Culter and others in Lanarkshire. II. Royal letters. These include letters from Mary of Guise and Mary Queen of Scots, referring to the Clan Gregor in Rannoch; from James VI. on the same subject, and the broken men of Lochaber and Athole; letters from King Charles I.; also letters from King Charles II., his mother Queen Henrietta Maria, and James Duke of York to Archibald Marquis of Argyll, referred to in the Argyll report. This section also contains the instructions sent in reference to the treaty of Breda by King Charles II. to the Marquis of Ormonde, his Lieutenant-General in Ireland. III. Argyll letters, principally from Archibald Marquis of Argyll, including two letters to his second son Lord Niell Campbell, written shortly before his execution. IV. Consists principally of letters from the Regent Morton, the Earls of Gowrie, Arran, and others respecting the arrangement of differences between the Laird of Weems and neighbouring chiefs. V. Letters written between 1600–1700 by statesmen and others playing a prominent part in Scots affairs, including one from the Marquis of Montrose desiring the Laird of Weem to send as many highlanders as he can raise to join the expedition, and another written by the Marquis a few years afterwards still more urgently pressing the Laird to join the opposite faction. The “barbarous and detestable lymmaris,” the Clan Gregor, are also treated of in several documents. VI. Letters of Major-General Hugh Mackay, Commander-in-Chief of the forces in Scotland, treating of his movements previous to the battle of Killiecrankie. VII. Letters from Colonel John Hill, commander of the garrison at Inverlochy, on the state of the Highlands. VIII. Letters dealing chiefly with the condition of the Highlands during the rebellion of the Earl of Mar in 1715, and written for the most part immediately after the battles of Preston and Sheriffmuir. IX. Bonds of manrent. X. Papers relating to the Clan Gregor, 1518–1661. XI. Concerning a disputed settlement of a minister in the parish of Dull. The presbytery on proceeding to the ordination were met at the door of the church by 100 armed retainers of the Duke of Athole, who opposed their entrance. XII. This section is composed of miscellaneous papers extending between the years 1503 and 1747, including the decret of the Lords of Council in 1504 concerning the destruction of the mansion-house of Weem, with an enumeration of the articles destroyed and their value.

Carruthers of Holmains.—Reported on by Mr. Fraser (App., p. 709). The charters and writs of this Dumfries-shire family are now in the possession of Alexander Erskine Murray, Esquire, advocate, one of the sheriff-substitutes at Glasgow. They comprise charters by King David II. as Lord of Annandale, 1361; by George Earl of March, 1375; Archibald Earl of Douglas, 1409–1424; Archibald Earl of Douglas and Longueville, 1425; and others: and bear on the history of the family of Grierson and other possessors of the lands of Holmains, as well as the ancient owners of the name of Carruthers.

Gordonstoun.—These comprehend papers of the families of Gordon of Gordonstoun, and Cumming of Altyr. Sir Robert Gordon, a son of the 15th Earl of Sutherland, was the first of the House of Gordonstoun. He was in great favour with King James VI. and Charles I.; and administered the affairs of the earldom of Sutherland during the minority of the Earl's nephew, to whom he was tutor. He afterwards wrote a history of this earldom, and was one of the first created of the order of baronets. His correspondence contains letters from Charles I., the Duke of Lennox, the Earl of Carlisle, the Marquis of Montrose, and General Monck.

A series of papers of Sir Robert Farquhar throws considerable light on the movements of the covenanting leaders in the north, while another contains various letters of Robert Barclay of Ury, the apologist of the Quakers, relative to the settlement of East Jersey in America.

Among the miscellaneous papers are several of considerable interest relating to John Gordon, Dean of Salisbury, several letters from Samuel Pepys, and a characteristic challenge and letters from Sir Thomas Urquhart of Cromarty, the translator of Rabelais.

The papers of the Cummings of Altyr consist chiefly of the family charters, which are numerous, and some of them of early date. (See App., p. 681.)

Hospital of James VI.—The documents belonging to the Hospital of King James VI. at Perth, consist of the charters of the monasteries of the Dominicans, Carmelites, Carthusians, Franciscans, and other religious houses in that town. Some of these are of early date, and throw light on the ecclesiastical usages of the time, while all afford materials for genealogy, and the local history of the district for several centuries. (See App., p. 713.)

Mr. Gordon of Abergeldie.—The papers of Mr. Gordon of Abergeldie are chiefly valuable for illustrating the early topography of Strathdee. The lands originally formed part of the earldom of Marr, but about the middle of the fourteenth century were granted by Earl Thomas to Duncan son of Roger, and in some questions which occurred in the beginning of the 16th century, the claims of the Crown as in place of the old Earls of Marr were rejected, and it was found by the Privy Council that the lands of Abergeldie “ar distinct landes fra the Erledome of Marr.” (See App., p. 712.)

Ross of Pitcalnie.—These papers, reported on by Mr. Fraser (App., p. 715), are in the possession of George Ross, Esquire, of Pitcalnie, in the county of Ross, who is heir male of the ancient Earls of Ross and Lords of Skye. The collection consists of charters, letters, and miscellaneous papers. The charters contain grants by Cardinal Betoun, the bishops of Ross and others, of lands in Ross-shire and Inverness to the lairds of Baluagowan and Pitcalnie. Among the papers is a bond entered in between certain persons of the name of Rollok and the family of Baluagowan, concerning the slaughter of Patrick Rollok, which illustrates the method of settling disputes of that nature in the 16th century, in consideration of certain payments in money. There is also printed in full an agreement amongst a number of persons of the name of Ross, which throws some light on the relationship between the clansmen and their chief. Among the letters is one from John Earl of Sutherland, in 1638, respecting the innovations in the Service Book, and two letters from Duncan Forbes, of Culloden, expressing his anxiety to prevent the son of Ross of Pitcalnie from continuing to take part in the rebellion of 1745.

The Marquis of Ormonde.—In Ireland the operations of Your Commissioners have been confined entirely to a further examination of the collection of the Marquis of Ormonde, which, besides being the largest, they regard also as one of the most important yet thrown open to them, whether taken from a historical, a biographical, or a literary point of view. A brief abstract would give but a poor notion of the value and variety of the contents of these papers, but the long report by Mr. Gilbert, printed at p. 719 of the Appendix, will fully bear out Your Commissioners' opinion. Mr. Gilbert, with regret it must be added, was wholly prevented by serious illness from completing this examination, and it became necessary to place the work in other hands. The final report upon one portion of the Ormonde papers, therefore, which will probably be printed in the next Report of the Commission, is now being prepared by Mr. Thomas McGhee, of Dublin.

The vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Tabrum, the assistant secretary to the Commission, reference to which was made in the last report, has been filled up by the appointment of Mr. James J. Cartwright, M.A., formerly of St. John's College, Cambridge.

That very great interest is taken by the reading world in the labours of Your Commissioners is amply shown by the ready sale of their five preceding Reports. Some of these have had to be reprinted, and have again become so scarce that single copies in the booksellers' hands fetch more than the published price.

In conclusion, Your Commissioners wish to state, as in previous Reports, their perfect satisfaction with the success of their inquiry, so far as it has proceeded at present. They are confident that their past labours have tended greatly to the advancement of historical literature by bringing to the notice of the world many important papers and manuscripts the existence of which was quite unknown; and from the vast store of materials yet awaiting their use, they feel quite as assured that their future labours will be equally advantageous to the public. Your Commissioners believe that their further operations will include nearly every private collection of any extent or importance which has not yet come under their cognizance.

This will make a great diversion of the enemy's forces. I beseech you move the Lord General for the sending of more men. The intention is to seize upon Grantham and Bever [Belvoir] Castle. There are two pieces of ordnance, and abundance of ammunition, and some arms in Bever Castle. There is no force at all in Nottingham except Captain Quhyt's [White's], who has retired to the castle and victualled it. They have cast three pieces of ordnance in Nottingham, which lie as yet in the town. If, for my regiment of a thousand muskets, which I am not able to raise, being thus employed, his Lordship would be content that I might levy five companies of Scots lancers, amounting to three hundred, I would undertake to get them quickly, and do very good service with them.

Jan. 24. Copy of examination of James Hudgebant, gentleman to the old Lady Lovelace. States that he has carried letters between Sir Henry Vane, the younger, and Lord Lovelace, but that he knows nothing of the contents. Describes how he conducted Mr. Moses Wall from Maidenhead to Henley, where he had a long interview with Lord Lovelace.

Annexed:—

1. Examination of Moses Wall, chaplain to Lord Warwick. States that he was desired to go to Windsor by Sir Henry Vane the younger, Mr. Solicitor, and Sir Arthur Haslrigg, and that others were present in the room when he was so desired. Remembers that Sir H. Vane read to him a letter from Lord Lovelace, in which his Lordship stated that he found Sir H. Vane of a public spirit, and ready to entertain what might conduce to the public peace, and he therefore desired that a messenger might be sent, to whom he would impart some propositions from authority, which might lead to public peace. In his answer to this letter Sir H. Vane named examinant as the messenger. "He accordingly went to Windsor, where he met Hudgebant, who had come from Lord Lovelace with a safe conduct signed by Sir E. Nicholas. Upon receipt of this pass examinant went with Hudgebant to Henley, and there met and had speech with Lord Lovelace, having first produced to his Lordship a copy of the letter which Sir H. Vane had previously written to his Lordship as a token and sign that examinant was the true messenger. After general discourse of news and the like, Lord Lovelace said he had, from authority, order to make some propositions for the public good, which examinant pressed might be put in writing; but his Lordship would not give way to, but promised to repeat the propositions as often as examinant pleased. "The propositions in effect were three: "The first was, That the King did esteem Sir Henry Vane and his party the honestest men of them that stuck to the Parliament; And that the King would be willing to prefer them before any other. The second, that the King will yield to the annulling of laws which are made against tender consciences. The third, that the King will give any security for the performance of this which could be desired: And that it was expected that Sir Henry Vane, and not the King, should propound what that security should be." The next morning examinant took leave of his Lordship, who asked if he remembered the propositions, and offered to repeat them if needful. Hudgebant conducted him back to Maidenhead, and then demanded the passport signed by Nicholas. Upon his return to London examinant drew up in writing the substance of his conference with Lord Lovelace, and delivered it, in a withdrawing room of the Court of Wards, to Mr. Speaker, Sir H. Vane, Sir A. Haslrigg, and Mr. Browne. He further states that he questioned Sir H. Vane whether it was safe for him to undertake this meeting, and Sir H. Vane answered that he might safely do it, because it was according to an ordinance of Parliament which doth not forbid to receive or send letters to or from any, so that Mr. Speaker be acquainted with it. This discourse was in Sir H. Vane's house, and in the presence of Mr. Sterry.

2. Copy of the letter (as near as Mr. Wall remembereth) sent by Sir H. Vane in answer to the letter of Lord Lovelace. Sir H. Vane recommends Wall to his Lordship, as a man with whom he may be as free with as with himself.
3. Examination of Peter Sterry, chaplain to Lady Brooke. States that he saw the letter from Lord Lovelace, and Sir H. Vane's answer. That he was present when Sir H. Vane proposed to Mr. Wall to go as messenger to Lord Lovelace. Sir H. Vane then stated that he had acquainted Mr. Speaker and Mr. Solicitor with the letter, and that he was the more desirous to send Mr. Wall, with the hope that he might get some further knowledge of the plot then newly discovered in London, and of the persons who might be engaged in it.

These papers were communicated to the Lords by the Lord General, who informed the House that the originals had been delivered to the House of Commons, but had not been returned to him. The papers were then read, and the thanks of the House given to the Lord General for his care in enquiring to the bottom of this business. L. J., V. 391; see also C. J., III. 369.

The warrant agreed upon by Mr. Boughton and the writer was shewed by the clerks to the Committee, who took exception that it imposed the raising of horse upon the country by way of taxation, which was contrary to the order sent to his Lordship, which only left him to persuade the people to a voluntary contribution. The writer, fearing his Lordship's intentions might be hindered in the speedy raising of horse, shewed a draft which he had made, and which the Committee, with a little alteration, desired him to send as the warrant they most approved. Wishes his Lordship would put himself from company but one half hour, and draw a declaration to the people, expressing his intention to serve the public, and persuading them to alacrity and cheerfulness in laying out themselves for expediting the work.

The wants and non-performance of additions to the army in Ireland have brought them to extreme misery, and extreme misery and discontent of some of their officers may bring them to mutiny, and induce them to come over here, and not disband until they get satisfaction for their arrears. In the meantime they have nothing to cover their nakedness, and no livelihood but arms. Entreats Lord Warristoun to solicit entertainment for them, and also for the army in England. The writer will move this kingdom (Scotland) to extend themselves to the uttermost, but without concurrent aid from England it will be impossible to entertain these armies.

April 25. List of Committee appointed to examine witnesses concerning the speeches against the Lord General. L. J., VI. 526. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Examination of Silvanus Taylor, Sergeant-Major of Sir James Harrington's regiment. Denies that at the meeting of the Committee of the Common Council at Coopers' Hall, on the 18th of the present month, he or any other person present said that the adding greater forces to the Lord General's army was but putting a sword into their hands to cut our own throats with it, or to go with it to the King. That Parliament would have reformed the army, but that the Lord General opposed it. Confesses that both there and the next day at the Guildhall he said he was against the manner of raising the 20,000 men, but not against the matter, and that Alderman Gibbs did not reprove him for any words spoken by him. 25 April, 1644.

2. Examination of John Langham, Esq., Alderman of London. Did not, at the meeting at Coopers' Hall, hear any words of disparagement of the Lord General's army.

3. Examination of Lawrence Brinley, of London, merchant. Heard Sergeant-Major Taylor and Mr. William Ball say, at the meeting at Coopers' Hall, that the going on of the proposition for raising 20,000 men for the Lord General's army would rather do hurt than good.

4. Another examination of Lawrence Brinley, Mr. Francis Allen, and others; advised deponent and others to call for a reformation of the Lord General's army.

5. Examination of Edmund Pott, haberdasher. Mr. Brinley and Mr. Thompson came to deponent, at the meeting at Coopers' Hall, and advised him to try for a reformation of the Lord General's army.

6. Another examination of Edmund Pott. Heard Sergeant-Major Taylor say at the meeting that to advance such an army to the Lord General's, under such commanders as he had, might be to put a sword into the enemy's hand.

7. Examination of Humphrey Foorde, of London, merchant, touching the words spoken by Mr. Ball.

8. Another examination of Humphrey Foorde.

9. Examination of James Bunce, sheriff and alderman of London. Remembers that Mr. William Ball and Sergeant-Major Taylor were present at the meeting at Coopers' Hall, but whether Taylor spoke words of dislike of the Lord General he cannot express. Such words were spoken, but deponent thinks by some of the Committee of Westminster.

10. Examination of Nicholas Bowater, of London, merchant, with reference to the speeches made by Mr. Ball.

11. Examination of William Ball, gent. Denies the speeches imputed to him.

[April.] Petition of Sir Thomas Wyseman the elder, knight, to the Committee for Sequestrations. Petitioner's estate has been withheld from him almost twelve months by the Committee for Sequestrations in the counties of Essex and Kent, upon suggestion that he was a Papist, which petitioner has made fully appear to be a great mistake, by his constant practices to the contrary, and by his free taking of the oath of abjuration, and the solemn league and covenant. May 9. Petition of the Western Gentlemen, Merchants, and others. Pray that Lord Roberts may be appointed Commander-in-Chief of the counties of Devon and Cornwall, and Governor of the Town of Plymouth. L. J., VI. 545.

Annexed:—

1. Petitioners' reasons for proposing the appointment of Lord Roberts. He is an experienced soldier and well acquainted with the situation of these counties. He is a man of great reputation and large estate, and the only man desired as Commander by all the well-affected gentlemen in the western parts. If any other Commander should be sent he would only be able to keep the town at the great cost of the State, Plymouth being already much exhausted, having been besieged about eighteen months, whereas Lord Roberts would very soon be able to take the field and sustain the war in those parts with very little assistance. Many western gentlemen of great credit and reputation would go with him. Divers merchants of London would raise great sums of money upon reasonable security for his Lordship's speedy advance. He could speedily send to Plymouth an experienced Commander, which is extremely wanting for the preservation of the place. The King being at Exeter, and his forces pressing westward, will have a special eye at the taking of Plymouth; and the Irish rebels that are to come over are to be embarked at Munster, and will probably be landed in the western parts. It is alleged that Sir William Waller expects his main subsistence out of Devon, and is therefore unwilling to spare these two counties; but there is at present no part of Devon under the power of the Parliament (Plymouth excepted) which cannot sustain itself. In military affairs diversions are of great consequence, and while Sir William Waller is falling upon the eastern counties under his command, Lord Roberts may fall upon Devon and Cornwall, and so make Waller's expedition towards the west the more facile. It is said that the two counties are within the command of Sir W. Waller, but it is not in his ordinance; and if it be by commission, then petitioners answer that it was formerly granted unto Colonel Wardlaw by commission, which is still in force.

Mr. Pitt, the late usher, upon petitioner's marriage with his daughter, in consideration of 2,000*l.*, agreed to resign his place to petitioner, who was accordingly admitted and sworn. Some difference arising between them, the matter came before the Master of the Rolls, who committed petitioner to the Fleet, where he is now a prisoner. May 17. Copy of letter from the Council Board in Ireland, to General Major Monroe. Have lately received intelligence that General Monroe on Tuesday last marched into Belfast and possessed himself of the town and of His Majesty's ordinance there, and then sent on many more men to Lisnegarvy and attempted the like on that town. By the articles of treaty agreed upon between the English and Scotch Commissioners, it is provided that the commanders of the Scottish army should from time to time give an account of their whole deportment and proceedings to the chief governor or governors of this kingdom. In virtue, therefore, of the powers and authorities committed to them by His Sacred Majesty, the board require the General immediately to render up and restore to Colonel Arthur Chichester the quiet and peaceable possession of the town of Belfast, with all the arms, ammunition, &c., whereof he was possessed; and if the General has already possessed himself of Lisnegarvy, then in like manner to restore that town to those from whom he took it; and if he has not possessed himself of the town, to forbear meddling with it, or making any like attempts on that or any other of His Majesty's towns, forts, or garrisons. The General is further required to certify the reasons moving him to such acts of open hostility on His Majesty's towns and good subjects.

May 19. Copy of letter from the Committee of Lancashire, at Warrington, to the Earl of Denbigh. regard Colonel Dodding's regiment is commanded into Westmoreland by Lord Fairfax to join with the Scots, and the siege at Latham yet continueth. The enemy advances from Chester to raise the siege at Latham and to invade the whole county, and the writers therefore cannot conceive it safe to draw off any force, having no other strength than those two broken regiments, which are most of them engaged in the siege at Latham, and in keeping of the fords upon the borders of the county. If these forces should be drawn out, the enemy may very easily enter and spoil the county without resistance. The writers, therefore, desire his Lordship to excuse the not marching of these forces for the present.

I thank ye^o for yo^r kinde l^r, and assure ye^o I shalbe as redy to s^re ye^o as any freind ye^o have here soe far as my tyme will extend; I am very glad ye^o have mett wth a spye, y^e example yo^r make of him will (I hope) p^rvent the villany of others, for certeynly there are many designes to surprize Weymouth, and I much doubt yo^r have some in y^e Town that are not truly affected to his Ma^{ty}, though they comply for y^e p^rs^{nt}. I am sorry there is no better course taken wth the Queen's Regim^t of horse, whereof I heare very great and insufferable complaints and disorders. I thank ye^o for yo^r intercepted l^rs, there is none of them that hath any thing in it, and as concerning Saint Hamilton's petⁿ I know not whether it were ever delivered; if he be innocent of all that is by severall witnesses charg'd upon him, he is very unfortunate to be accused by soe many noble personages vpon Oathe of horrid crimes: Ye^o may see by some of y^e l^rs that were intercepted, that y^e Rebels of Scotland wishe for him, w^{ch} argues noe abundance of innocency in him.

Att London they app^rhend vs very weeke, but I assure yo^r Sir Tho. Lunsford this day came from S^r army and saith there are about 10,000 horse and foote of as likely men as euer he sawe in his life. There are very great dissencons amongst the Rebels in London; noe perfect friendship betwene y^e E. of Essex, and S^r W^m. Waller, y^e first being y^e ielousy, the other y^e minion of that Rebellious City. Redding is slighted, and Munday night a party of our horse of 100 did beate vpp 200 of theirs w^{ch} were q^utered there, tooke 30 or 40 horse and killed as many more. As concerning Mr. Stroudes shipp taken by a man-of-warre belonging to S^r Nic. Crispe, there is noe doubt (as I conceaue) but she is lawfull prize, though the Judge of the Adm^v here sayes there is only salvage due; when the petⁿ was deliv^d to me I referred it to y^e Com^r of the Adm^v to treat wth S^r Ni. Crispe to see what he would be content to spare to Stronde, and I heare they are agreed to render y^e one half of that prize to y^e first owner, and to keepe y^e rest.

I assure you I shalbe redy to encourage such men of warre as adventure to sea wth l^res of Marq^r for the King, knowing well that they doe his Ma^{ty} very great s^rv^{ce}. There is a great designe for taking of Weymouth as a place w^{ch} hath done his Ma^{ty} extra^{ord}nary s^rv^{ce}, and much p^rjudice to y^e Rebels, and therefore I pray looke well to it. My Lo. Hopton saith that he gave order 8 monethes since for building a fort at or neere Weymouth for security of the place, I pray yo^r next advertise in what forwardnes that fort is, yo^r shall doe well to make the Castle and island of Portland safe, w^{ch} it is said may be donne wth a very small charge, and if the Towne of Weymouth should be taken, the island and Castle of Portland wilbe a meanes to reduce it againe in case the Kings forces should come thither and be M^{rs}. of y^e field. If Waller come into the west y^e Kings Army will follow him att y^e heeles I am confident the Spy yo^r have taken can discout^r to yo^r all such as should correspondency wth the Rebels, and yet live amongst you in Weymouth and Dorseth: and it were good to apprehend them and make them sure in the first place: I believe that Waller will not bring, if he come any considerable strength of foote wth him by land, what may meeete him by sea. I know not, but he is strong in horse. I wishe yo^r would speedily now put it to a pushe to see what may be donne vpon Lyme, w^{ch} I am confident had before this bene taken, had yo^r bene left to yo^rselves wthout receiving orders from here; the truth is wee are here overwise.

My Lo. Duke thinks Burnard a knave and that my Lady Aubigny hath not much ag^t him:

I pray have a care of Weymouth, have a care of Weymouth, Soe sayes,

May 25. Letter from the Committee of Lancashire to the Earl of Denbigh. Received his Lordship's letter (dated May 11) late yesternight, and are persuaded that the misinformation of the condition of the county given to his Lordship and the Committee of State was the cause why more was expected than the writers were able to perform. As to the present condition of the county, think it convenient to commend it to the report of the bearers to whom they desire his Lordship to give credence.

May 24. Petition of Henry Earl of Stamford (Stamford). About seven months since, petitioner exhibited articles against Mr. Nicholls, a member of the House of Commons. Finds the preparatory-examinations most costly, and has scarcely wherewithal to feed himself and his small family. Prays that a joint committee of Lords and Commons may be appointed to take informations upon oath, and make a speedy despatch for all parties. Has faithfully served the Parliament, ventured his life many times, lost all his estate, and exhausted the vigour of his youth by hard, cold, and wet marches; fears that unless he takes some care to prevent his growing infirmities, he will become sooner impotent than by the course of nature might be expected. June 6. Letter from Robert Horsman to []. Captain Hatcher and some other of the well-affected are, by Lord Grey, sent prisoners to Leicester, and the rest are put to flight. The men and arms sent by the writer to make up the defects of Burleigh are commanded away, and not ten men left to maintain that garrison, and those every moment ready to go away, urged thereunto by fears and discontents. He fears are long that that garrison will be in the hands of the enemy. There is a defect of power, not will in the Committee to help their country, and there is nothing left them but to complain. If they have not speedy relief the Committee will be constrained to leave the county to the insolencies of open enemies and false friends, and if they cannot be righted, it is the wish of all that they may have a fair dismission, for they will not willingly bear the name of a Committee longer than they are able to serve their country.

June 7. Petition of inhabitants of the hamlet of Wapping, Middlesex. Wapping is part of the parish of Whitechapel, which is so populous that for many years the church has not been able to contain all the inhabitants. There is a Bill depending in Parliament to make the hamlet a parish, and petitioners pray that until the Bill be passed the tithes and other parochial duties of Whitechapel that belong to Wapping may be sequestered into the hands of John Cope and others, to be paid by them to the chief minister of the chapel. Returns thanks for the favour granted to him in giving him notice of the meeting of the committee, in order that he might be heard concerning his assessment. Regrets that he is unable to give his personal attendance, but has long kept his house and is unable to go up and down stairs. Was left a competent estate by his father, though, perhaps, less than his rank and degree require, and than it is by some conceived, and spoken to be. Has sold part of it, and cannot by much pay his debts, and of late years has been unable to pay the interest for the moneys he owes. His extremities and pressures have been such of late times that he has been forced to lessen his family, and to sell his plate and jewels, to maintain and feed it and himself. His rents for the most part have been suspended and in divers places taken out of his power, and his arms, horses, goods, and household stuffs taken from him. Has suffered so much that 1,500*l.* or more will not repair his losses, besides free quarters in several places, and soldiers and horses billeted at his house. Has been assessed in other places contrary to the ordinance. Could say much more concerning his present condition, but hopes their Lordships will take this short and sudden narrative into their noble and charitable consideration. See L. J., VI. 639.

Beseeches the House to give him leave to go, and to grant him a safe conduct for passing thither with a litter, with three horses and two littermen, and two other horses and two servants, with his ordinary and necessary clothes; and for his quiet abode at Bath during the time he shall stay there, and his return to London, if it shall please God to grant him some help and longer life. Affidavit of Richard Pantoun of Burnham, that, on the 21st of May last, he saw George Asser and others, with twenty or thirty sail, dredging and taking away oysters and brood of oysters in Burnham Water, and that they continued dredging all the week following, and made great destruction of the oysters, and they and others to the number of eighty sail have remained thereabouts ever since fishing and taking away the oysters, and that the fishermen have combined together to give a weekly allowance out of their labours in that river to make a stock to defend suit against whomsoever shall oppose them, and have affirmed that thereby they shall be able to deal with any Earl or Countess in England. 21 June 1644.

July 10. Petition of Nehemiah Rogers. Petitioner, who was formerly rector of the parish of Botolph without Bishopsgate, was, by an order of the 23rd of May 1643, deprived of his living. During his continuance in the parsonage, a great part of the tithes were (and still are) unpaid, and petitioner, being thereby unable to pay the duties due to His Majesty, put in sureties in the Court of Exchequer. His sureties are now sued, not only for the arrears due before the time of the sequestration, but also for the time since, which is contrary to the order of Parliament. Prays that he may be discharged from the payment of any duties due since the sequestration; and for the time precedent, that he may have an order to enable him to receive the tithes due to him, to the end he may make true payment of what is due from him to His Majesty.

Annexed:—

July 19. Petition of Sir William Middleton, Bart., Governor, and the Company of the New River, brought from Chadwell and Anwell to London. The spreading of the infection has been much prevented by means of the river water conveyed by pipes into divers infected houses; the streets have been cleansed, and many sudden and dangerous fires quenched. Sundry ill-disposed and disaffected persons have of late in many places dammed up the passage of the river, and cut the banks and pipes, letting out all the water, to the great prejudice and danger of the city and works. Petitioners pray their Lordships to grant them a similar warrant to that annexed to their petition, or to take some other course for preventing the like offences in future. The Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London add to the petition their certificate that the river water has quenched many dangerous fires, and is otherwise of great use and advantage to the City, and implore their Lordships to grant the prayer of petition. L. J., VI. 640.

Annexed:—

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the list of ships, &c. demanded by the Ambassadors. L. J., VI. 633. In extenso.
2. Report from the Committee with reference to the first three ships demanded by the Ambassadors. The Ambassadors desired a direct answer to their demands, either in the affirmative or negative, to which the Committee replied that they had no power from Parliament to grant or deny, but after treaty to represent the state of things to the Houses. The Ambassadors then desired report to be made to the Houses, and their resolutions made known unto them before any further debate. The Committee have therefore resolved to refer it to each House, whether they think fit to debate and resolve it themselves, or to refer it to the Committee, with further powers to restore or not to restore.

Pierpoint, and Gilbert Millington, Esq., to the Committee for Nottingham. L. J., VI. 642. In extenso.

July 19. Petition of George Morgan. Prays that his suit against Sir George Scott may be recommended to the Commissioners of the Great Seal for a re-hearing, and that execution of the decree made by the late Lord Keeper Finch may be stayed until such re-hearing.

Pray that such an order may be granted as may privilege their persons from arrest. L. J., VI. 642.

July 22. Message from the Commons impeaching Sir Robert Heath, Sir John Bankes, Sir Robert Foster, and Sir John Glanvill. L. J., VI. 643. In extenso.

The matter was, in compliance with the desire expressed in this message, referred by the Lords to a committee for examination.

Annexed:—

1. Interrogatories for witnesses produced to be examined upon oath by a Committee of the Lords in the behalf of the impeachment of Sir Robert Heath, Sir John Bankes, Sir Robert Foster, and Sir John Glanvill. 2 August 1644.
2. Examination of Henry Twogood. Was present at Salisbury in December last, when Sir Robert Heath and the other impeached judges sat by virtue of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, and of gaol delivery, which commission was dated at Oxford, and heard the Earl of Pembroke, the Earl of Salisbury, and others, indicted for yielding obedience to the Parliament, and executing the commands thereof, and for taking up arms. Sir Robert Heath gave the charge to the grand jury. Four were condemned at that time, one for plundering horses for the Parliament service.—Examination of William Coles, of Warminster. Was present at the sitting of the Court referred to in preceding examination, and, intending to take some notes of the proceedings, took forth a piece of paper for that purpose, but Sir Robert Heath caused him to put away his paper, and would not suffer him to write. Sat in court the two first days of the sitting, when a Bill of Indictment of High Treason was brought in and founded against him under the Statute 25 Edward III. for setting forth a horse and arms for the Parliament service under Sir Edward Hungerford.—Examination of Richard Hill, of Salisbury. Well remembers Sir Robert Heath and the other judges sitting at Salisbury in December last, but was not present in Court.—Examination of Arthur Mallacke, of Axmouth. Remembers Sir Robert Heath and the other judges sitting in the Castle at Exeter in December last, and that Captain Turpen was indicted for coming into the kingdom in a piratical way and stealing certain goods of Sir Ames Ameriditch's and others. Deponent was present when Sir Robert Heath pronounced judgment against Turpen, the other judges being in Court. Was also present when Robert Mallacke was indicted for congregating men at Taunton, and heard the clerk say that he was indicted of high treason.—Examination of John Searle. Deponent in December last, having lain prisoner six months in the Castle gaol at Exeter, and hearing that Sir Robert Heath and the other judges were sitting in the Castle, petitioned them that he might be bailed, but could not obtain the same. Deponent heard that Captain Robert Turpen and some other soldiers were indicted at the same sessions for taking certain goods of Sir Ames Ameriditch's out of Powderham Castle, and that Turpen was found guilty, and had sentence of death pronounced against him: Deponent believes this to be true, because he had sight of the calendar of persons condemned at that sessions, and found there Captain Turpen's name subscribed by all the judges. These examinations are on the same paper, and were taken the 14th of August 1644 before the Earls of Kent and Lincoln, who subscribe them.

3. Another examination of John Searle to the same effect as preceding. Taken the 16th of August 1644, before the Earls of Kent, Rutland, and Stamford.

4. Examination of Edmond Edgecumbe, of Broad Hinton, in the county of Wilts. Deponent knows that Sir John Glanvill sat in the counties of Devon and Wilts, in December last, by virtue of a commission of non obstante. Knows that many persons were indicted, amongst others the Earl of Pembroke, but knows not the cause of such indictments. Taken the 16th of August before the Earls of Kent, Lincoln, and Rutland.

July 22. Petition of the inhabitants of the hamlet of Wapping. The examination of their former petition about settling competent means upon a minister of their own out of their own tithes in Wapping was referred by their Lordships to the Assembly of Divines. Dr. Johnson, the present incumbent of Whitechapel, refuses to bring in the books of rates, duties, tithes, &c. of the whole benefice of Whitechapel and Wapping, whereby petitioners are delayed of their happy expectations. Pray that Dr. Johnson may be ordered forthwith to bring in his books to the Assembly. L. J., VI. 644.

July 24. Message from the Commons respecting the appointment of Mr. Clarke to be preacher in Sutton's Hospital. L. J., VI. 645.

July 24. Petition of Catherine Baldwin, widow, executrix of Thomas Baldwin, her late husband. Prays that the Commissioners of the Great Seal may be ordered to grant their letters to the Earl and Countess of Holland, requiring them to appear and answer petitioner's bill in Chancery. The Earl of Holland was at the time of the death of petitioner's husband indebted to him in a large sum of money expended by him in building a house at Kensington, but since his death the Earl pretends he has no money to pay, and the workmen and others, who are very importunate for their arrears, have commenced suits against petitioner. L. J., VI. 645.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
 2. Draft order for a copy of the petition to be delivered to the Earl of Holland.
 3. Another petition of Mrs. Baldwin. Prays that a letter may be written to the Earl, enjoining him to answer her bill in Chancery, and that in the meantime her person and estate may be protected.
 4. Affidavit of Samuel Stephens, that he delivered to the Earl of Holland a copy of Mrs. Baldwin's petition. 1 Aug. 1644.
- July 24. Draft order for the exchange of Justice Mallett, a prisoner to the Parliament, for Mr. Mitchell and his son, and Captain Halling, now prisoners at Oxford. L. J., VI. 646. In extenso.
- July 25. Letter from the Committee at Wem to the Speaker of the House of Commons. When the county [Shropshire] was wholly under the power of the enemy, and the rest of the country gentlemen either engaged against the Parliament or durst not appear for it, the writers left their habitations, and have since endured the loss of all their estates, and some have been proclaimed traitors by His Majesty. All this did not discourage them from doing their duty, and when the county was in a most desperate condition they engaged themselves for great sums in order to raise some small strength of horse and foot for the work of the county. They afterwards obtained the favour of the House to be associated with other counties, the Earl of Denbigh being appointed commander-in-chief, from whom they expected much, but for twelve months they have been fed only with fair promises; and though care was taken by the Committee of both Kingdoms to hasten the Earl's march, Wem is as yet unrelieved, and Oswestry, newly taken, is left unfortified. Both garrisons are exposed to a powerful enemy, especially if Sir Thomas Myddelton should withdraw his forces. The forces out of Cheshire under the Earl of Denbigh, who were willing to have assisted the county, were withdrawn under pretence of going to the North, and disbanded. The writers are now threatened to be pulled out of the county by their ears by Major Fraser, one of his Lordship's officers, and divers of them are vilified by others under his Lordship's command and with his knowledge, and for no other cause than their desire to preserve their country from plundering, a thing so practised by his Lordship's horse that the parts of the county where they have been are not only much impoverished, but much alienated from the cause. The rudeness and disorders of these troopers is so great, no discipline being observed and no justice being done upon them, that should they be the deliverers of the county the writers expect to fall but out of one bondage into another. Beseech that the county may be put under the protection of such an one, as will not only intend the reducing of it to its due obedience, but endeavour to promote religion, and countenance those that have been most faithful to the Parliament, otherwise the writers desire that they may quit the employment in the county. C. J., III. 604.

July 26. Petition of the daughters of Captain Turpin. Much mutilated, and almost destroyed by damp. L. J., VI. 646.

Annexed :—

1. Order respecting the daughters of Captain Robert Turpin, executed in Devon, for his good service done to the Parliament. This paper is dated 26 July 1644, but the order was not agreed to by the Lords until the 10 Nov. 1645. L. J., VII. 687.

In extenso.

July 26. Draft order respecting a winter guard at sea. C. J., III. 570. In extenso.

July 27. Petition of Sir John Glanvill, Kt., serjeant-at-law, prisoner in the Tower of London. Has lately been accused of high treason by the House of Commons, and his person imprisoned in the Tower of London, without any certain articles, or charge in writing to which he might make answer. The House of Commons having so many and weighty businesses now in hand, and others of like importance daily occurring which may much interrupt the speedy proceedings against him, he prays that, until his cause be heard, his goods or estate may not be taken away nor meddled with, nor his wife or menial servant molested contrary to the privilege of Parliament, petitioner being one of the assistants of their Lordships' House, and having already sustained as much damage in his possession, and estate as any man of his degree and calling in England, by reason of the unnatural civil wars and other troubles of the time. L. J., VI. 647.

July 27. Copy of preceding.

July 27. Order against sequestrating Sir John Glanvill's estate until he shall be tried upon his impeachment. L. J., VI. 647.

July 27. Report of the examination of Lord Rich respecting his coming from Oxford. L. J., VI. 647. In extenso.

July 29. Petition of Peter Tryon. Prays that Sir Edward Wortley, and his lady, may be called before the Lordships, to show cause why a library of books of great value, left by Abraham Tryon, petitioner's uncle and godfather, should not be delivered to him. The testator by his will left all his books to such an one of his brother's sons as should be brought up a student or scholar, and petitioner, being a master of arts of Oxford and admitted of Lincoln's Inn, and no other being capable of the said library, sued in the Ecclesiastical Courts for the same, whence the lady appealed to the Delegates, where petitioner obtained sentence. The power of the Ecclesiastical Courts being taken away, petitioner is without remedy but in this High Court, and the books being unknown, are dispersed and conveyed away. L. J., VI. 648.

July 29. Petition of Henry Chapman. Prays that a day may be appointed for the hearing of his cause against Wincott. L. J., VI. 648.

July 29. Draft order respecting the tenants of Sutton Marsh. L. J., VI. 648.

Aug. 2. Certificate of Thomas Shadwell, Deputy Escheator to the Lord Mayor of London, in answer to the petition of Mrs. Mary Roch (see Pet. 8th June 1644). At the trial at the Guildhall of Mrs. Roch's suit, after reading the writ of mandamus, the Deputy Escheator, at the request of Mr. Waller, one of the counsel against Mrs. Roch, handed the writ to him, not doubting that he would return it again. After full hearing of the cause the jury drew near to deliver in their verdict, and the Deputy Escheator called openly upon Mr. Waller for the writ, having no power to take the verdict without it. Mr. Waller replied that he had it not, having laid it down in court, as he alleged. The Deputy Escheator caused diligent search to be made, but the writ could not be found, and he was, in consequence, compelled to adjourn the cause, and not hearing of the writ, has since examined one or two upon oath, who he thought might be likely to have it, but has been unable to examine Mr. Waller, who has never appeared in the business since the losing of the writ. The Deputy Escheator believes the writ was embezzled, in order to prevent the taking of the verdict to prejudice the poor gentlewoman, Mrs. Roch, and is such an abuse that he has never known the like of, and trusts their Lordships will make an example of the embezzler of the writ if he is found out to deter others from a like offence. L. J., VI. 649.

Aug. 2. Petition of Ezechiel Johnson, clerk. Complaints that Thomas Bowden, and certain other inhabitants of Paulerspury, refuse to pay their dues to petitioner, notwithstanding their Lordships' order. Prays that they may be sent for to answer for their contempt. L. J., VI. 649.

Annexed :—

1. Affidavit of Johnson, that the parishioners of Paulerspury have been made acquainted with their Lordships' order, both publicly in the church and also privately and particularly, and that certain of them refuse to yield obedience thereto. 30 July 1644.

Aug. 2. Petition of William March, servant to the Earl of Arundel and Surrey. Complaints that the Earl's castle at Rising, in Norfolk, is now being pulled down by command of Colonel Walton, and that the offenders already complained of still continue felling the timber and killing the deer. Prays that Colonel Walton may be ordered to revoke his command to deface the castle, which is of no defence, but only of antiquity, and that the felling of the timber may be stayed, and that already cut down disposed of for the Earl's use. L. J., VI. 650.

Annexed :—

1. Affidavit of Thomas Shardelowe, that he served their Lordships' order upon Becroft and others, but that they continued to fell the Earl's timber; that deponent was sent for to Lynn by Colonel Walton for serving the order; that when their Lordships' messenger came to bring the offenders before their Lordships, Becroft carried the messenger to Lynn, where he was discharged by Colonel Walton, and Becroft sent back to fell more timber. 20 July 1644.

Aug. 6. Instructions to Richard Harding, Esq., August 6th 1644. You are forthwith to repair unto y^e Earle of Essex with y^e Lord Beauchamp in y^e way y^e most unsuspected you can, of any other designe but y^e accompanying of him. You are to deliver unto him, att a fitting opportunitie the lre from Us, which if you cannot suddenly gaine, you may cause it to be delivered by y^e Lo. Beauchamp, hee acquainting y^e said Earle that y^e Credence in the letter relates to you who come instructed from Us.

You are by all means possible to endeavour the obtaining of free and private conference with y^e said Earle, wherein if admitted, you are to governe yourselfe according to yo^r best discretion, upon these following grounds.

To assure him that our aime in this overture, is in short this, to procure, if it bee possible a union of his power with ours in a hearty and through pursuance of one Comon End, namely y^e preservacon of this miserable Kingdome from y^e danger of a Conquest by y^e Scotts, and from certaine ruine and desolation every way, should these unnaturall wars continue, and y^e settlement of a happy peace upon a firme establishment of y^e Protestant religion, Lawes of y^e Land, Liberties of y^e Subject, and priviledges of Parli, and of y^e undeniable and unseparable rights of y^e Crowne in a full and free Convention of Parliament.

To assure him of our most reall intentions in all that Wee professe unto him, as well concerning y^e publike, as y^e particular interests of him and his Army, and all others that shall joyne in this good worke.

That Wee shall most readily consent to give all y^e Cautions (on our part) that can be reasonably desired, for y^e full performance of all things that shall bee agreed upon, as well as by y^e trust and power, which wee shall give unto y^e said Earle himselfe, as by y^e solemnest engagem^{ts}, both of our owne Royall Faith, and of our Nobilitie, Councill, and principall Officers of our Army whereby such a Confidence may bee raised, as may fully satisfie and remove all Jealousies and distrusts, w^{ch} otherwise might hinder y^e happy Conclusion of that which is propounded.

You are to assure him of the General concurrence both of my Nephewes, Rupert and Maurice, the Court, y^e Armies, and of the Lords at Oxford, in y^e earnest desire of such a happy accomodation.

You may also use it as an argument of o^r reallity in this overture that the present posture wherein hee may know us to bee here, may assure him that it arises not from the Weaknesse of o^r Condition.

You are to enforce y^e necessitie of this way as y^e onely visible meanes to preserve this Kingdome from utter ruine, from y^e danger of a Conquest by y^e Scotts, which side soe ever prevayle, if not prevented by this union, and both it & himselfe from y^e insolencies & ingratitude which must bee expected from a prevailing populace. You are to presse unto him the glory of y^e worke to redeeme his Nation from y^e greatest extremities, to fix soe high an Obligation upon y^e Crowne, the Nobilitie and Gentry of this Kingdome, and to bee author of soe universall a Joy, as this agreement will begett in y^e People.

You are to presse unto him y^e prudence of this designe not onely in order to his owne honour and safety, who can expect neither, if either the Scotts, or y^e other violent party at London prevails, but also in point of probability of successe in y^e maine. How improbable it will bee that that violent party should bee able to oppose y^e power of y^e Armies thus joyned for y^e attaining of such just and pious ends, as must needs convince, and reclaime many such that have beene misled. What strength y^e reputation of it, with y^e said Earles Interests, will adde, what distrac^{cons} those violent men are likely to bee surprised with, and lastly how likely it is that when those persons shall find it out of y^e power to hinder this blessed Worke, they themselves may, without y^e hazard of a battle, bee brought to yield that a firme peace may bee settled in a full and free Convention of Parliament. If hee shall speake unto you of any addresses to be made in this businesse to those at Westminster, you are to shew that over & above y^e unfittingnesse of itt for Us, in regard of soe many former rejec^{cons}, it is impossible in point of tyme. That y^e attempt of it will bee a Certaine bane to y^e whole businesse, without a possibility of ever having y^e opportunitee againe.

That y^e temper & engagement of those of y^e house of Com^{ons} at London, is such that there is noe hopes the honest men among them dare appeare against y^e declared sense of y^e house, untill they shall see a power on foote sufficient to protect them. But then it is to bee hoped y^e the Major part of y^e Members of both houses now present at Westminster will give a good appl[r]obation & bee carryed on to that w^{ch} shall bee safe as well as just, w^{ch} if propounded unseasonably, and unbackt with power would certainly bee rejected. Soe that as y^e present Condition of both Armies stands here (considering y^e possibilitie of Waller's approach, if time bee given when y^e whole businesse will thereby bee made impossible) any delay under pretence of necessitie of address to them cannot bee otherwise understood then as a pure negative.

If you shall find y^e said Earle (as wee hope you will) sensible how happy hee may make his King, his Country and himselfe in this Course, & that hee bee disposed to joyne in this glorious worke. You are then to informe yourselfe from him of y^e Constituc^{on} of his Army, w^h persons of power are most likely to oppose it, what is to bee done to gaine them, if it may bee, if not to prevent their doing hurt, what dangers are to bee avoyded in y^e managing of this businesse, whence y^e rise of y^e treatie is to bee taken, whether from some publike message from Us, or otherwise, how the worke is to bee timed with all other Circumstances which may conduce to it.

In Fine if you shall find y^e said Earle soe happily inclined as aforesaid. You are to proceed with him with all franknesse & open heartednesse, and to lett him knowe, that as Wee have not hitherto permitted any address or application to any of his Army, but only to himselfe, soe neither shall Wee, but by his Advise, wherein as in all other things of relation to this great Worke, Wee shall expect his Councell and directions, and much relye upon them. You are from time to time to give Us an account what effect you find of this negotiation, and what further powers shall bee necessary to bee sent you from Us.

Aug. 20. Petition of William Prynn, Esq. :
To the Right Hon^{ble} the Howse of Peeres Assembled in Parliam^t.

The humble Petic^on of William Prynn, Esq^r, Sheweth :

That yo^r Petic^oner though conscious to himselfe of noe criminal offence whatsoever was yet through the vnjust p^{er}secution of D^r Laude, Archbp. of Cant. Anno 1633, brought into the Starchamber for some misinterpreted passages in a Booke of his against com^on enterludes, intitled Histriomastix (licensed for the presse by Mr. Buckner, Archb^p Abbots Chaplain, and so confessed in the Informac^on) for w^{ch} he was fined 5,000*l.* to his Ma^{tie} expelled the Vniuersite of Oxon and society of Lincolnes Inne, degraded, disbarred, set on the Pillary at Westminster, and in Chesapeake where he had both his eares cutt off, his Booke burnt before his face by the Hangman, and adjudged to p^{er}petuall imprisonment^t, though there appeared neither in the Informac^on Replicac^on or Sentence any one offensive Clause for w^{ch} he was thus severely censured.

That yo^r Petic^oner lying a Prison^r in the Tower under this heavy censure and fine (for w^{ch} the Bookes of his Studdy were vnduely seised, and severall extents awarded against his estate) was in the yeare 1637 by the said Archb^p malice p^{er}secuted in Starchamb, the 2^d time for a pretended combinac^on wth D^r Bastwick and M^r Burton in publishing certaine Books against his Popish In^ovac^ons, during w^{ch} suit yo^r Petic^o was shutt vp close prisoner, denied liberty to putt in his Answers vnder his owne hand though a Barrester, debarred pen inke and paper to instruct his Councell to whome he could not have access, his serv^t that should sollicite his business kept close Prisoner in a Messenger's hands, and the Bill wth out any the least Proove of Guilt against him (contrary to all P^{re}cedents) taken Pro Confesso, for his p^{er}tended contempt in not answering the same, when as he tendred an Answer thereto both at the Starchamber office and in open Co^{rt} vnder his Councell's hand w^{ch} was refused wthout cause, and could not be p^{er}mitted to put in an Answer vnder his owne hand according to sundry P^{re}sidents of that Co^{rt} though he oft petio^{ed} for lib^{tie} to do it. By w^{ch} exorbitant p^{er}ceeding yo^r Petic^o was there fined the 2^d time 5,000*l.* to his Ma^{tie}. Pillored, Stigmatized on booth cheeks, deprived of the smale rem^t of his eares in a most barbarous manner to the hazard of his life, adjudged to p^{er}petuall close imprisonment^t in Carnarvan Castle in Northwales, whether he was sent before his wounds were healed, and there shutt vp Close Prison^r remote from all his freinds and deprived of the vse of pen, inke, paper, Books. And some freinds of his that visited him in the way at his Inne when there was noe restraint to the contrary p^{er}secuted before the Councell and fined in the high Com^{is}sion to their undoeing. After w^{ch} yo^r petic^o by an extreudiciall order made at Councell Table wthout any new cause att all was exiled and secretly transported in the Winter season in a Leaking Barke among Papists through the Irish Seas (to the hazard of his life the spoyling of his Clothes and bedding) to the Isle of Jersey, and there shutt vp Close Prison^r three yeeres space in Mountorgueil Castle wthout any allowance of diet, all access of freinds or letters from them together with the vse of pen, inke, paper, Books, being there by speciall order denied him, vnder w^{ch} seuerall pressures and imprisonment^t he lay languishing neare eight whole yeares, till by the Justice of the hon^{ble} Howse of Com^ons he was sent for and released, which vpon full hearing of his Grievances vnanimously resolved vpon the Question y^t his said Sentences, Fines and Imprisonem^t were illegall vnjust and ought to be reuersed and discharged as appeares by the votes herevnto annexed.

Now for as much as the pressing publike affaires of the Kingdome have for above two yeeres space interrupted the Transmission of yo^r petic^on causes from the howse of Com^ons to yo^r Lord^{sh}ps, and the iniustice of his sentences have benee fully p^{ro}oued to this Hon^{ble} House in the Evidence giuen against the said Archb^p, And for that the said fines of 5,000*l.* apiece are estreated into the Co^{rt} of Excheq^r and yo^r Petic^on p^{er}sons and estate still liable to the same, He humbly beseecheth y^r Lord^{sh}ps soe farre to relieue him as to vacat the said sentences, Estreats, fines and all p^{er}ces for levying the same for the p^{er}sent till the publike affairs of the Realme will afford Leasure for a Transmission and finall hearing of his cause, or otherwise to apoynt a daye for examining the Iniustice of the said sentences.

And hee shall ever pray, &c.
Wm. Prynn.

Aug. 30. Petition of Sir John Wollaston, Knight, Lord Mayor, and the rest of the Court of Aldermen in London. The gaol of Newgate is greatly overcharged with many poor prisoners who have had judgment to die, but who, having been conceived persons fit for mercy, have been from time to time reprieved. The gaol in consequence has been very noisome, and has of late been infected with the plague, so that the keeper, to his great trouble and charge, has been several times constrained to send infected persons to the pest-house. The Commons have lately made an order for the pardon of some of the persons that lie convicted in the gaol, which order has been presented for their Lordships' concurrence. Pray their Lordships to give their concurrence to the speedy completing of the said order, to the end that a pardon may be prepared for these prisoners, and that the gaol may be delivered of them by the next gaol delivery for London.

Aug. 31. Petition of William March, servant to the Earl of Arundel and Surrey. Complains that the Committee at Wem have, by imprisonment, forced the tenants to pay several sums of money, part of their rent, pretending for the 5th and 20th parts of the Earl's estate, and that they cause the woods and timber to be cut down and disposed of without giving any satisfaction for the same. Petitioner further complains that James Vines and others continue to cut down the timber at Arundel, notwithstanding their Lordships' order of the 15th of June. Prays that the Committee at Wem may be forbidden to take any more of the rents, and to abstain from cutting timber, and that James Vines and others may be sent for to answer for their contempt. L. About three years since petitioner presented a petition for relief against Colonel Thomas Lunsford for certain sums of money owing by him to petitioner, whereupon he was ordered to appear and answer, but never did so, since which time there has been no further proceeding, and petitioner's papers have ever since remained in the hands of Mr. Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, who will not deliver them up without their Lordships' order, for which petitioner now prays.

My Lords and Gentl^{rs},

It can bee no pleasure to mee to send yo^r this sadd relation, and therefore choose rather to send it by Colonell Pyndar then in wryting. It is the greatest blow and weakening to the Parlyam^t forces that has bine since the warres beganne. For my owne pticular, Although I had the misfortune to haue the chiefe command, yet I am confident that myselfe nor most part of my Officers are no way Guilty of this greate losse, and that wee shall bee ready to answere it whensoever wee are called vpon. I haue taken the best care I can to secure this Towne, but wthout a p^{re}snt supply of men and monie it will be in great danger, vnlesse there bee strong forces coming this way: To w^{ch} purpose I haue sent my horse hoping to meeete them, (I pray God send them a safe passage) and if they haue not power enough to resist the Kings forces then to make their repaire towards Dorchester. I am this day taking shipping wth my Lord Admirall, and intend to put in at Weymouth to see how that is strengthened, and from thence to Porchmouth, where I intend to tarry vntill I know the Parlyam^t pleasure, whether I shall repaire to giue them a p^{re}snt accompt, or tarry till the foote comes vp, they being to do no hostile act vntill they come either to Southampton or Porchmouth. I shall onely adde this, that if reliefe had come in any time, by the grace of God the warre had bine ended, but for want of it Gallant men are put to the greatest shame that can befall men of honor. My Lords For the pticulars of the acts & requests it is referred to Colonell Pindar.

Your lo^{vs} humble servant,

Sept. 6. Petition of John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments. selves and others of the said county. Have for the last two years been under the power of the enemy, who have exacted large sums of money from the county, besides seizing cattle and horses without payment; petitioners have besides suffered at the hands of the Parliament forces, who in their inroads and requisitions made no distinction between the ill-affected and well-affected. There is now a great opportunity for reducing the county entirely, and petitioners desire that there may be no delay in passing the ordinance for that purpose sent up by the House of Commons and now before their Lordships. L. J., VI. 698.

Sept. 9. Petition of inhabitants of Kettering in the county of Northampton. The town is a market town, and contains three hundred communicants and upwards; the parsonage is worth 200l. per annum, which is withheld from the minister by a pretended lease by Sir Lewis Watson, a delinquent, and only 40l. allowed to the minister, a faithful, industrious, godly man, which makes the stipend not only small but scandalous, and the petitioners are not to lose him, as he has many offers of better preferment. Pray that a competency may be allowed to the minister out of the parsonage, with liberty to question the legality of the lease by which it is now withheld from him. L. J., VI. 699.

Sept. 9. Petition of Elizabeth Hamond, widow, inhabitant of the parish of Chersey [Chertsey], in the county of Surrey. The congregation consists of near fifteen hundred communicants, whilst the minister's stipend is only 30l. per annum, and the parsonage, impropriate worth about 120l. per annum, in the hands of a delinquent, Thomas Orpe, is sequestered by the House. Sept. 13. Draft orders respecting the Scotch Commissioners and the Committee of the Assembly, &c. C. J., III. 626.

Sept. 13. Copy of letter from Sir Wm. Waller to the Committee of both Kingdoms. Upon his march between Salisbury and Blandford was met by a trumpeter from His Majesty with the enclosed letters, which he thought right to despatch with all speed. [The enclosed letters were from the King to both Houses of Parliament:— 1. To accommodate differences. 2. To appoint persons to treat with him about a peace. L. J., VI. 708. In extenso.] Finds that part of the country in great distraction, and unless a considerable force be at once put into the field there it will be impossible to raise its drooping spirits; has taken the best course he could to preserve the port towns by distributing his foot amongst them, and means to keep the field with his horse; the Lord General's horse has moved eastward towards Wimborne, and if they march homewards he is likely to be in a worse condition; but his trust is in God, from whom cometh his help.

Sept. 16. Draft ordinance for Edmond Prideaux, Esq., to be postmaster. This ordinance was passed in the Commons (C. J., III. 621. In extenso); but was delayed in the Lords till the Earl of Warwick should be heard, who claimed the office. The ordinance seems to have been dropped in consequence.

Sept. 16. Draft order for employing Lord Coventry's and Mr. Palmer's assessment of the 20th part for the western counties. L. J., VI. 707.

Sept. 16. Petition of Thomas Lord Coventry. His estate lay wholly in the King's power, and was consequently drawn into contribution; but upon advance of the Lord General to Worcester, he voluntarily came in and submitted himself, and subsequently a sentence against him and others was, in his case, wholly remitted, except that he should not sit or vote in Parliament during this session; petitioner thankfully submitting to this, voluntarily contributed 2,000l., and afterwards, by leave of their Lordships in May 1643, went over into France, where he has since lived with his two sons, his only child ren, taking care of their education; notwithstanding all this, a sequestration has been laid upon some East India Company's stock belonging to him, and also a stay made of moneys due to him in Norfolk; the matter was by the House referred to the several committees for London and Norfolk, but no return has been made by them; and now the Committee at Haberdashers' Hall has assessed petitioner first at 1,500l., and then at 3,000l. more, under pretence that he is no longer to enjoy privilege of Parliament; he conceives that this was not intended, or that he should be assessed by any but his peers. Prays the House to consider his voluntary contributions, and that his estate lies wholly in the King's power, and to protect him from the assessments unduly laid upon him.

His master went with the leave of the House to his castle of Montgomery for his health's sake, and there remained, rejecting all offers from Prince Rupert and others to join them in the execution of the array; and has since preserved the peace in those parts and assisted the well affected from time to time, but was prevented by sickness from coming to London or disposing of his castle, which is of very great consequence, and the key of Wales, and is now delivered up to the Parliament, as the accompanying papers will show. Gardner, with his whole troop of horse, his cornet, and quartermaster, and about twenty-eight troops, the rest fled; some sixty horse were taken, and but few arms, for they had not many, and thirty-six barrels of powder, intended for Chester, where they want it. Sir Thomas and his force came by forced marches from Oswestry to Newton, with much difficulty, on account of the foulness of the roads and the breaking of the bridges by the enemy, the water being so high that they could not pass through any ford.] The Prince, with his beaten forces, has gone from Chester by Ruthin, &c. to Bishop's Castle; desires that the sending of money and arms may be hastened. 5 Sept. 1644. Sept. 23. Remonstrance of the Committee of Warwickshire to the House of Commons, by way of answer to certain aspersions cast upon them by petitioners of that county. It is well known that they who are now assailed by neutrals were those who in the first breaking out of the war saved the county from the cavaliers, and there are many in the county who wished to get up a counter petition, but this the Committee would not consent to, not wishing to foment differences, though the petition against them was circulated in print and signatures obtained in the most improper way. To the petition were appended reasons to induce an addition to the committee:—(1.) That the Committee consists of colonels and other commanders, who assessed the county at their pleasure, but without them no one would have secured the county, and this would apply to every committee; besides they are all men belonging to the county, and served without pay till their estates were in the enemy's hands. (2.) That the other members of the Committee are men of little or no estate, and strangers, and therefore insensible to the burdens of the county; but the want of truth in this is shewn by the lowness of the assessments, which are paid by all the Committees, including the commanders. (3.) That the Committee have not, according to the ordinance appointed assessors for the 5th and 20th parts in every division, by which means some have been overburdened, some exempted; none, however, would have accepted the office of assessor, for no one would have been safe outside a Parliament garrison; at the same time the spirit of the ordinance was as far as possible followed out, and no injustice done in the assessing. (4.) That they imprisoned before they distrained, though distress was to be had; there may have been an instance of this, but if so it might well be excused from the difficulty of the case; for these reasons the opposers desire that the old members of the Committee may be put out, that they themselves, who have done nothing, but secretly favour the enemy, may appear of importance. To these reasons they add grievances: they complain that during the payment of the weekly tax they have been charged with free quarters of the soldiers to whom they paid it; but they were never so charged by the Committee, and if the soldiers took free quarter it was redressed upon complaint; what the county really complained of was that the Earl of Denbigh's soldiers, who promised to discharge their quarters, when they had their pay, did not, and now, having their pay in Worcestershire, they have taken free quarter in Warwickshire; they complain that the herds of whole townships were distrained upon without regard to those who offered to pay their shares; this may have happened from the urgency of the case, and the fact that towns that paid voluntarily to the enemy had to be compelled to pay to the Parliament; they complain that soldiers have plundered when distraining—this was only done in one case when they were resisted—when a soldier was killed, and the rest had to take what they could get; they complain that horses were taken, and then sold because they were not wanted; that Northamptonshire maintains almost as many horse and foot as Warwickshire, upon a weekly tax of less than half. The Committee only wish that other counties had done as well as theirs, for then they would have been freed from the frontier garrisons of the enemy; as for troops, the Committee have more than the complainants say, and if they had as many garrisons in Northamptonshire, they could not maintain them upon less. They complain of insolent conduct from commanders and soldiers, and no redress upon complaint; this is true of some of the Earl of Denbigh's men, but not of those of the Committee; they complain that, notwithstanding the heavy charges, the county is not protected, but when there are garrisons of the enemy on all sides it is impossible to protect every village, nor would it be for the good of the State to keep our forces solely within the limits of the county. The Committee conclude by explaining charges of lenity to malignants, of inequality in assessing towns, and of rough and threatening conduct in collecting assessments, and say that, though they may have committed errors, it has been in attempting to do question how he would be tried; he put in a special plea that Magna Charta, made in England, which provides that the King should not condemn any one but by lawful trial of his peers, was afterwards accepted and established in Ireland; and in the fourth year of his reign King Charles created the Lord Macguire's father Baron Macguire of Inskelling, and that on his father's death, the barony descended to him, and so at the time of the supposed treason he was, and still is, a peer of the Parliament of Ireland, and was taken and imprisoned for the said supposed treason during Parliament time, and brought over to England against his will, and committed to the Tower of London. He prays that he may be tried by his peers of the kingdom of Ireland. To this plea the King's Attorney demurs, as not sufficient in law. The first Friday in the next ensuing term is appointed for hearing counsel on the validity of this plea, but as there is but one judge now sitting in the Court of King's Bench, and as the question is one of privilege of peerage and of Parliament, he desires to let both Houses know of it, that they may decide whether he shall proceed in a court of ordinary jurisdiction in a matter of so high concernment.

Oct. 7. Petition of Susanna Bastwick, wife to John Bastwick, Doctor in Physic. Petitioner's husband having written a book against Popery, called "Elenchus having written a book against Popery; called themselves "Religious Papistes;" and an addition thereto, called "Flagellum Pontificis et Episcoporum Latialium," a pursuivant, with a warrant from the Archbishop of Canterbury, was sent in 1632 to her husband's house in Colchester, who ransacked the house and seized all the papers, and would have taken her husband also, but that he happened to be in London. Shortly after proceedings were instituted against him in the High Commission Court, and in Feb. 1634/5 he was sentenced to pay a fine of 1,000*l.*, was excommunicated, and declared incapable of practising his calling; his books were ordered to be burnt, and he was committed to the Gatehouse till he should make recantation; but her husband, desiring to expose the erroneous doctrines as to the King's supremacy expressed by the Bishops on his trial, published a book, called "Apologeticus ad Preeules Anglicanos;" for this and for another book, called the "Litany," an information was exhibited against him and others in the Star Chamber, and because he could get no counsel to sign his answer, the charges against him were taken pro confesso, he was fined 5,000*l.*, and sentenced to stand in the pillory, to lose both his ears, to suffer perpetual close imprisonment in Launceston Castle, Cornwall, a place so ruinous that it was formidable to behold, yet before his wounds were healed, he was removed thither, and the use of pen, ink, paper, and books denied him; while petitioner, who had followed him thither, was not allowed to come near him, even to dress his wounds. After he had been eight weeks in Launceston Castle he was, by Order of Council, transported to the fort in the Isle of Seilly, where he was most inhumanly treated, and petitioner forbidden, under pain of imprisonment, to set foot in the island. Her husband was thus for full three years exiled from her, to the utter undoing of themselves and their children. All the proceedings against her husband, were by vote of the Commons more than two years ago, declared to be illegal and against the liberty of the subject; and petitioner, therefore, prays that a time for hearing the matter may be appointed, that so her husband may be absolutely freed from all fine and censure, and some reparation be made him. — L. J., VII. 17.

LORDS.
1644.

Oct. 7. Petition of wharfingers, brewers, woodmongers, lightermen, timber merchants, and other inhabitants beyond the chain in the Old Palace to the Horseferry, that keep wharves, cars, and drays for the good of themselves and of all Westminster. The common landing place for wood, coal, faggots, meal, malt, and other commodities for the inhabitants of Westminster was ever at Kingsbridge, in the New Palace, until the 19th of June 1636, and then it was ordered in Council that a bridge should be made beyond the Old Palace towards the Horseferry, and Mr. Inigo Jones and others were appointed to survey the same, who, finding it necessary for the service of Westminster, caused the bridge to be placed as it now stands; yet as many persons still presumed to land goods at Kingsbridge, an order was made on the 7th Jan. 1636-7 authorising Justice Heywood to commit to prison all persons landing any goods at Kingsbridge; and because there is no other commodious place for landing goods, petitioners situated themselves beyond the chain, and have built cranes, wharves, &c. at great cost. Now the roadway from petitioners' habitations into King Street was ever through the Old Palace till about twenty months since, when the House ordered that petitioners should pass through Dean's Yard; but, upon complaint made, this way has also been barred against them, to their utter undoing. They pray that the chain in the Old Palace may be set open at such times as will not hinder the passage of the peers to and from Parliament, petitioners promising to keep the Old Palace clean at their own charge; and they also pray that the burgess and assistant of the ward beyond the chain may have power to appoint a man to look to the chain, to keep the Old Palace clean, to see that no carman or drayman stop in the Old Palace, so as to hinder the passage of the peers, or give distaste to their servants, and to stop the passage of any wharfingers, &c. who refuse to pay their assessments towards keeping the Old Palace clean. L. J., VII. 17.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 19 Dec. 1642 for the erection of two posts with a chain in the lane leading between the Old Palace and the Mill, to prevent the passing of carts which are directed to go through Dean's Yard. See L. J., V. 498.
2. Copy of order of 30 Sept. 1644, upon report from a Committee that there never was any common passage through Dean's Yard, but that the ancient way from the Millbank was through "Tuttle" Street, repealing preceding order so far as it permitted carts, &c. to pass through the Dean's Yard. See L. J., VII. 1.
3. Certificate of Mr. Sergeant Whitfield. Has considered what has been urged on behalf of Westminster College, and finds that the King's Bridge was anciently used for a landing place for wood and coals till 1636, when an order in Council was procured by Wm. Reynolds and John Foster, by which the unloading of lighters and barges there was forbidden, and Reynolds and Foster allowed to build a bridge into the Thames above the Parliament stairs for landing of wood, coals, &c.; about thirty years ago many houses were built beyond the chain, and many wharfingers and lightermen have planted themselves there and built cranes, wharves, warehouses, &c., and have been in the habit of passing with their carts through the Old Palace, and not through Dean's Yard; and if allowed to continue so to do, they will keep the yard clean, and use the passage at such times as shall be no annoyance to the House. 15 Oct. 1644.

Oct. 12. Petition of Henry Burton, minister of God's word. Petitioner, for two sermons preached in his own church of St. Matthew, Friday Street, in Nov. 1636, was summoned to appear before Dr. Duck, who tendered to him the oath ex officio, to answer certain interrogatories, which petitioner refused, and appealed to the King; but nevertheless he was shortly after illegally suspended by the High Commission Court, his house broken open, his study searched, and himself seized and committed to the Fleet. During his imprisonment an information was exhibited against him and others in the Star Chamber, whereby he was charged, amongst other things, with publishing an apology for an Appeal with his two sermons, entitled, "For God and the King." Petitioner's answer to this information was rejected as scandalous and impertinent, except the Not Guilty; the information was taken pro confesso, and petitioner sentenced to a fine of 5,000*l.* to be deprived of his ecclesiastical benefice; degraded from his ministerial functions and degrees in the university, ordered to be set on the pillory, where both his ears were to be cut off, and to be confined in perpetual close imprisonment in Lancaster Castle; debarred the access of his wife and of every one except his keeper, and denied the use of pen, ink, and paper. With the exception of the fine, the sentence was carried out to the full; and further, after twelve weeks' confinement in the common gaol in the castle, he was, by some extra-judicial order, transported by one Brian Burton in the winter season to the castle of Guernsey, where he has remained a close prisoner and exile for almost three whole years, his wife meantime being forbidden to set foot on the island. These proceedings were above two years ago voted by the Commons to be illegal, and contrary to the liberty of the subject. Petitioner therefore prays that his cause may be taken into consideration by their Lordships, that the fine may be taken off the file, and some reparation made him for his wrongs. L. J., VII. 21.

[Oct. 18.] Answer of the sequestrators of the parsonage of Botolph's Without Bishopsgate, to what, by their Lordship's order of the 2nd of this instant October, is of them required; state that they never made any promise to Mr. Vincent to pay him 200l. if he would leave the parsonage, but that about three weeks ago he offered to leave on receiving 100l., when they agreed to give him 80l.; so many of the wealthier inhabitants have left the parish, leaving their houses empty, that it is with difficulty the whole profits of the living can be brought up to 200l. Oct. 18. Oct. 19. Letter from A[lexander] H[enderson] at Newcastle to []. The writer and others went into Newcastle with terms from the Lord General for the surrender of the place, but after much parleying the Mayor and others refused to agree to the fair terms offered; in consequence mines were sprung, breaches made, and the place carried, after considerable resistance and loss of blood, amongst others Major Robert Hepborne was killed, whose loss cannot be enough lamented. The Mayor and some others fled to the castle, and presently beat a parley with the General, who would not hear of it then, as they had been the instruments of so much bloodshed.

P.S. Let this suffice for my Lord Chancellor and all other our friends there, because I am in haste and cannot write to all. See L. J., VII. 34.

Oct. 21. Report from the Committee appointed to consider the case of Major Hammond, who, after having killed Major Gray, appeared in one of the committee-rooms. There is no evidence before the House of Major Hammond's crime, nor that he is in custody by order of the House of Commons. L. J., VII. 30.

Oct. 21. Petition of Andrew Durdant, Clerk of His Majesty's Works for Whitehall, and this His Majesty's House of Parliament. Petitioner has received a ticket from the Committee at Whitehall, ordering him or his servant to appear completely armed at the rendezvous of Col. Sir James Harrington; but petitioner and his servant are constantly employed on reparations by order of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, besides the paying of the Old Palace Yard, which was done by order of the House, and for which he has never received a penny. Petitioner prays to be protected, with his servant, in the quiet performance of their duties. L. J., VII. 30.

Oct. 21. Petition of John Gibbs, master and part owner of the ship called the Merchant Adventure, in the behalf of Maurice Thompson, Colonel William Wiloughby, and himself, and of others, part owners of the said ship. Petitioner when in Spain let the ship to freight to Thomas Amery and Richard Croker, but Amery broke his contract and arrived secretly with the ship at Bristol; petitioner afterwards had him arrested there upon a writ from the Court of Admiralty, but Amery, having been bailed, procured a rule for a prohibition from the King's Bench, and a stay of all proceedings; and now the petitioner's witnesses and the defendant have gone beyond seas, and if the prohibition is granted the bail will be discharged. Prays their Lordships to provide him some remedy.

Oct. 23. Draft order for payment of 500l. for Colonel Massie's regiment of horse. L. J., VII. 31. In extenso.

Oct. 24. Petition of the several fishermen inhabitants within the county of Essex. Petitioners have, time out of mind, fished and dredged for oysters in an arm of the sea within the vice-admiralty of Essex, called Burnham Water, alias Walfleet, until about three years since the Earl of Sussex, pretending that the fishing belonged to him as part of the manor of Burnham, brought an action against John Andrewes, and obtained a verdict against him in the Common Pleas, for fishing on a part of the water called Ray Sand, where anciently the owners of Burnham pretended to have some "wares or kidies;" and since the Earl's death, Eleanor Dowager Countess of Sussex pretends a right to the fishing and dredging within the whole water of Burnham, and has obtained an order from their Lordships prohibiting petitioners and others from fishing there, to the utter undoing of many hundreds of poor people. Petitioners pray that the order may be taken off, and that if any one trespass on the Countess's rights she may be left to take her remedy at law. L. J., VII. 32.

Oct. 24. Petition of the knights, gentlemen, and freeholders of the Isle of Wight, that the manor of Bowcombe, lately in the possession of Sir Henry Knowles, and now sequestered to the use of the State, may be reannexed to the office of Governor of the Island, now held by the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. L. J., VII. 32. In extenso.

Oct. 24. Petition of William March, servant to the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Arundel and Surrey, and employed in his Lordship's estate in his absence beyond the seas. By an order of their Lordships of the 31st of August last James Vines and others were ordered not to cut any more of the Earl's woods and timber in Sussex, and to make restitution for what had been already cut down, which they refuse to do, while in the county of Derby, the bailiff of Glossop has received an order to detain the Earl's rents in his hands until the Council of the Lord General of the North be further satisfied, and the Earl's officers have been taken prisoners, to prevent them from collecting the rents, and his deer and game killed; and though the Earl has been already assessed for and paid the 5th and 20th parts of his estate, yet the Committees in Yorkshire and Nottinghamshire threaten to levy the same again. Petitioner prays that Vines and the others may be called upon to answer for their contempt, and that an order may be made for preserving the Earl's property and protecting his officers in performance of their duties. L. J., VII. 32.

Annexed:—

Oct. 24. Letter from the Commissioners of both Houses at Newcastle to Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons. Since their last letter, attempts have been made to induce Tynemouth Castle to surrender, but Sir Thomas Riddell returned answer that he durst not hazard his life in giving up the castle; another summons is to be sent him to day, and the writers trust that, should he refuse, some means may be found to protect the shipping coming into the haven, which are much annoyed, not so much by the castle, where it is said the plague is very sore, as by a fort called the Spanish Fort. Now that Newcastle has been given into their hands, they trust that Parliament will frame the Government of the town so as to prevent the recurrence of the mischiefs that have happened, which arose from the obstinate disposition of some of the greatest and richest amongst the citizens, to the great wrong of many who have long been banished from their homes, and now hope to see better days. They desire that some learned ministers may be sent down into those parts. P.S.—Sir John Morley and the rest in the castle of Newcastle have surrendered, and he is, at the writer's desire, in the custody of the Sheriff of Northumberland. They wish to know the pleasure of the House as to further proceedings against him. This letter was read in the House of Commons. 31 Oct. C. J., III. 682.

Oct. 25. Petition of Oliver Brown, His Majesty's upholsterer. Petitioner's duty is to make and repair all the packs, seats, forms, and other furniture of the Parliament Chamber, which he diligently performs; and though his estate of more than 2,000*l.* is in the King's hands, and no payment made him on account of his place, from which he is greatly decayed in estate, yet has he been and still is enforced to send a soldier to the forces when it falls to his lot. Prays that he may have privilege of exemption from service, like other officers of Parliament. L. J., VII. 34.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same. It is now forty months since petitioner paid out of his own purse for the hire of four suits of tapestry hangings for furnishing the House, and for the last Parliament before this he made ready the House and adjoining rooms, for all of which he has never received any payment; while his estate is in the King's hands, and he has been imprisoned for not sending out a soldier, when he was quite unable to bear such a charge. Prays for relief and protection. (Undated.)

Oct. 25. Petition of Robert White and Ellen his wife, claiming 1,500*l.* out of the estate of Robert Gray, deceased, instead of 110*l.* adjudged to them by Sir Hen. Martin and the Archbishop of Canterbury, and praying that Symon Middleton and John Batty, who have the estate of Robert Gray, may be ordered to shew cause why the money should not be paid. L. Oct. 26. Petition of William Copeland, master and part owner of the ship called the Robert Bonaventure. Prays that two writs of error may be granted to him against a judgment in the Court of King's Bench, and that no execution may be sued out against him upon the judgment until the record be sent up to their Lordships, and the errors examined. L. J., VII. 38.

Oct. 26. Petition of same. James Kirke and George Hanger have long owed petitioner 936*l.* for freight of the ship from Malaga, and the sailors, being unpaid in consequence, have sued petitioner in the court of Admiralty; Kirk and Hanger, who in this suit were ordered to deposit 260*l.* for payment of the sailors have severally sued petitioner in the King's Bench for suing in the Admiralty respecting a matter arising in the body of the county. Petitioner prays for a writ of error in each suit.

2. Another petition. (Undated.)
3. Another petition. (Undated.)

Oct. 26. Petition of the distressed inhabitants, brewers, woodmongers, wharfingers, timber merchants, lightermen, carmen, &c. beyond the old Palace Yard to Lambeth horseferry to the House of Commons. Petitioners and their predecessors have usually had a right of way through the old Palace Westminster, to their own private benefit and the public advantage of the inhabitants of Westminster, by them supplied with provisions; but the way has been lately obstructed by a chain, to the great injury of petitioners, who, hearing that the chain had been put up by order of the House of Lords upon some misinformation, as petitioners believe, applied to their Lordships' House (see above, Oct. 7), but can obtain no relief, they are therefore obliged to apply to the representatives of the Commons of England, of whom petitioners are part, that they may not be deprived of their right without a hearing. L. J., VII. 39. This petition was sent up to the Lords by the Commons.

Petitioners pray that two parts of the rectory inappropriate worth about 80*l.* per annum, and now sequestered on account of the recusancy of Sir Francis Manock, the owner, may be applied to the maintenance of their ministers, as the inhabitants are poor, and the better sort impoverished by their forwardness in their contributions to the State. Nov. 4. Petition of Ellionor Countess Dowager of Sussex, in answer to the petition of divers fishermen, according to the direction of an order of this honourable House, the 24th of October last. Edward late Earl of Sussex held the manor of Burnham with the sole right of fishing in Burnham Water, alias Walfleet, and Ray Sand, with remainder to petitioner for life for jointure ; being disturbed therein by divers fishermen, he brought an action against them in the Common Pleas, and obtained a verdict in support of his claim ; but the fishermen continuing to molest him, he obtained various orders from the House to secure him in quiet possession of his rights. These orders have been continued for protection of petitioner, and she is willing to grant any of the fishermen the right of fishing at a reasonable rent, provided they do not destroy the brood or spat of the young oysters ; and if any of them will try the question with her at law, she is ready to lay by her privilege, and leave the matter to be decided by the ordinary Courts.

He now prays that she may be permitted to go with him. L. J., VII. 49.

Nov. 7. Petition of John Viscount Pourbecke. On petitioner's marriage with the daughter of Sir Edward Cooke, Sir Edward and his son Sir Robert granted petitioner an annuity of 900*l.* per annum during the life of Lady Elizabeth Hatton (who is still alive) out of certain lands in Suffolk, Norfolk, and Cambridge. The annuity was duly paid till Lady Day, 1642, when the lands in Cambridge and Suffolk were sequestered. In 1643, on the application of petitioner, the Committee for Sequestrations made orders, that he should be paid 300*l.* per annum by the Committee in Cambridgeshire, and 400*l.* by the Committee in Suffolk ; but these orders were fruitless, as the rents were received by a Mr. Jervoise, by order of the Committee at Haberdashers' Hall. Petitioner applied there, but in vain ; and now, after the assessment for the 20th part has been satisfied, the lands are again sequestered to buy arms, &c. for the Earl of Manchester, so that petitioner is deprived of his whole estate, and has been put to very great expense besides. Dec. 21. Petition of the Colonels and other chief officers of the Lord General's infantry. The petitioners desire to represent the necessities and evils that press upon themselves, the army, and the whole country, through want of the pay and provisions promised them. Discipline has not been maintained, officers and soldiers being forced to carve out a subsistence for themselves, many outrages committed in consequence, and places through which the army marched discouraged from joining the Parliament; many officers and soldiers, whose consciences will not permit them to live by violence, have left the army, while the reinforcements from the trained bands and auxiliary forces of London are more destructive than supporting, "for by their great pay" in hiring soldiers they induce ours away, and do but "give us our old soldiers, put under new commanders." The ministers who used to pray for and preach to the army have left them for want of maintenance, a main cause of the licentiousness and profaneness of the army, while officers and men determine to quit the service unless a more certain maintenance can be provided for them. Petitioners desire that the officers and men may receive half payment of their arrears, and debentures for the remainder, by which their losses may be in part repaired, and themselves put in a fit condition for service, and that certain provision may be made for the continuance of pay for the future. These measures petitioners believe, will remedy all existing evils. L. J., VII. 110. The petition is signed by Thomas Pride, then a major, James Harrison, a captain, and many others.

Dec. 21. Message to the Commons desiring that the Scottish Commissioners may be consulted with, in the returning of an answer to the Duke of Richmond and Earl of Southampton. This message, according to a note in the journal was recalled, not sent. L. J., VII. 110.

Dec. 21. Affidavit of Richard Pulley, that Sir Richard Minshall, William Peter, and Edmund Church were papists and delinquents, and known to have been with the King.

- Dec. 28. Letter from Roger Le Strange, in New Prison, in Maiden Lane, to the Earl of Essex. The writer is in question for his life, or would not intrude on the Earl's serious affairs; expects this day to be sentenced to be hanged as a spy for coming from the enemy without trumpet or drum, according to the custom of war, and without a pass; there is no precedent for proceeding against any man taken in arms, and with a commission from his superior upon him, otherwise than as a prisoner of war. He humbly desires the Earl's intercession in his favour. See L. J., VII. 105, &c.
- Annexed:—
1. Petition of Roger Le Strange, prisoner in Newgate, to the Earl of Essex. Petitioner, for endeavouring to execute the King's commission according to the law of arms, is condemned to die, under the article which condemns to death anyone who attempts to betray a town to the enemy; he cannot understand how this article can refer to him, who has ever been firm to the King's party; he complains that on his trial he was interrupted in his defence, and when he offered his defence in writing the paper was burnt; the original of that paper he humbly presents to the Earl, with a copy of the King's commission, according to which he acted; so that, though they tried so to do, the Court could not make him out a spy, and therefore had recourse to the article above mentioned. He prays the Earl to interfere between his sentence and execution. (Undated.)
 2. Printed copy of His Majesty's commission granted to Mr. Roger Le Strange "for the betraying of the town of Lynn into the hands of the enemy."
 3. Le Strange's defence. His commission made him a soldier, and no spy. There are many honourable precedents for his conduct in his attempt upon Lynn.

- Dec. 31. Examination of Hezekiah Woodward, confessing himself the author of a book colled "Inquiries into the Causes of our Miseries, whence they issue forth unto us, and reasons wherefore they have borne us down so low, and are like to carry us yet lower." That he gave a printer named Symons, living near Aldersgate, 55*l.* to print it; that he asked Mr. Carroll, minister of Lincoln's Inn, to grant a license for the printing, but was refused, and then printed it without license, though he knew of the order of Parliament against unlicensed printing; and that he was to have some of the profits of the sale; and, further, that some thirty other sheets were his composition, and that he had a license from Mr. Batchelor for printing them. See L. J., VII. 118.

Form for warrants from the Commissioners of the Great Seal in all ordinances.

List of tenants of some estate not mentioned, and of the amounts of their rents.

Petition of Hugh Grundy, gentleman, an inhabitant of the parish of Llangendearne, in the county of Carmarthen; Henry Vaughan, M.P., has in his hands six parish churches, with several chapels from Henry Percy, Esq., at the yearly rent of 750*l.*, or thereabouts, out of which he is to allow twenty nobles a piece, or thereabouts, for the maintenance of ministers in those churches, and 30*l.* a year more for sermons. In these churches six unworthy and scandalous ministers, no preachers, are placed; and for twenty or thirty years past there have been no constant preachers in those churches or chapels, except that twelve years since, for the space of about a year, a poor blind man had or was to have half-a-crown a sermon to preach in each of those six churches; and since this Parliament began Mistress Vaughan, in her husband's absence, procured a Mr. Evans to preach, who was to look to Master Vaughan's courtesy for his pains, and who has been since put out; while the six ministers or curates who serve those cures are some of them drunkards, others do hedge, ditch, and hold the plough, and sell ale and beer, and engage in such like scandalous employments. Petitioner desires the House further to consider the number of papists in those parts, of whom Sir Thomas Sherly, and Walter Lloyd have been entertained by Master Vaughan; and then to think whether Vaughan ought to be himself a Commissioner for examining scandalous ministers, or should nominate those that are to be. See C. J., III. 389.

Petition of Godfrey Goodman, Bishop of Gloucester. His property lies in effect between the two armies; his house were he did reside, and all his other houses, as he is informed, have been plundered, his doors, trunks, chests, broken open, his sheep and cattle carried away, while the soldiers threaten to pull down his houses, and have already stolen the casements, and irons, and burnt the wainscots, and he knows not what he has lost, for he has money and plate in most of those places. All this he takes patiently, as the just judgment of his sins, and desires no relief, but forgives and remits all; he prays only for protection from further mischief, that he may not be utterly undone. He further can receive neither rents, nor debts, nor money for his ordinary expenses, while he has to account for large sums to the Exchequer. Prays that some course may be taken to save him harmless, and that being, as God knows, an innocent man in all these troubles, he may have liberty to go to his own houses, and there have free ingress and egress for himself, his servants, and goods, without let or molestation.

Petition of Samuel Gosse, who, having become bail for Thomas Scott, a merchant in London, is likely to be taken in execution, the judge and officers fearing to arrest Scott without an order from Parliament because he is a Sergeant-Major in the Parliament service. Petitioner, who is himself employed in the same service, prays that Scott may be ordered to yield his body to custody, or to make satisfaction to his creditors.

Petition of John George. Petitioner has for many years past kept an ordinary in Westminster, to which many noblemen, gentlemen, and others, have resorted, and lately many officers, English and Scotch, hoping to receive their pay, have run much into petitioner's debt, who has in consequence become heavily engaged to butchers, fishmongers, and others, and is by them threatened with arrest, which would be his ruin. Prays for protection for eight months, in which time he doubts not to meet his engagements.

Petition of Thomas Gery. His father left him a legacy of 800*l.*, to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the manor of Little Stanton, in the county of Bedford, but in consequence of the delinquency of his elder brother, his father's sole executor, and the consequent sequestration of his estate, petitioner cannot obtain his legacy. Prays the consideration of the Houses, as he has done nothing to make him incapable of receiving their favour.

Duplicate of preceding.

Petition of Elizabeth Garret, widow, and Henry Garret, her son, to the House of Commons, praying for relief from certain decrees in Chancery (obtained many years since, by corruption as they allege), inasmuch as these and the like misbegotten decrees are to be extirpated and banished out of so well a governed Commonwealth. Noted.—Rejected.

Petition of George Huntly, clerk. Complaints of injustice on the part of the Judges of the High Commission Court, and of other Courts, in certain causes raising out of proceedings between petitioner and Dr. Kinsley, Archdeacon of Canterbury, which have been Petition of Wm. Douglas. Was employed by the Earl of Denbigh and some of the Committee of Coventry to maintain himself in Ashby de la Zouch, to give information thence, but on his coming to Coventry, after the Earl's return to London, was committed to prison, and though afterwards honourably acquitted by the Committee of Examinations, he can obtain no employment at Coventry, but is again threatened with arrest there. Prays for an order that his horse and arms may be restored to him, and that he may be at liberty to continue an employment given him by the Sub-Committee of Accounts there, otherwise he, and his wife, and children must want bread and be utterly ruined.

Petition of divers inhabitants of the parish of St. Lawrence in the Jury, in London. Complain of their vicar, Mr. Crane, on account of infrequent, cold, and unprofitable preaching, his drinking and swearing, his innovations, and refusal to give the sacrament to those that will not come up to the rails, and his refusal to read any orders of Parliament. Pray the House to provide a remedy for the miserable condition of the parish.

Petition of Major William Salkeld. Arrears to the amount of 2,500*l.* are due to petitioner, for want whereof he has suffered much. Prays that protection may be granted to him until his arrears shall be paid, as he has often hazarded his life in the Parliament service.

Petition of Richard Horton of Yardley, in the county of Worcester. Complains that he was drugged in an alehouse by Thomas Haddon, bailiff to Sir Thos. Holt, and there made to sign an acknowledgment that he owed 2*5*l. to Sir Thomas Holt, and 20*l.* to Haddon. During the course of subsequent proceedings Haddon has died in prison, and petitioner, a countryman, aged and illiterate, is likely to be ruined. Prays for redress against Sir Thomas Holt.

A list of Courts of Law, &c.

Petition of Maurice Thomson, Gregory Clement, William Pennoyre, Robert South, and Company, merchants of London. Petitioners having sustained great loss from the State of Spain, His Majesty gave power to the Judge of the Admiralty, some years since, to issue letters of reprisal, by virtue whereof they took a Spanish ship in the West Indies and brought her to Plymouth, hoping to obtain a sentence in the Admiralty before this time; but the Spanish Ambassador, having made a relation to His Majesty concerning the prize, grounded upon strange suggestions, has obtained a letter from His Majesty to the Judge of the Admiralty, to the great prejudice of petitioners. Pray that a pass may be granted to Robert South and his servant to ride to the Court at Oxford, to represent the truth of their cause to His Majesty. See L. J., IV. 401.

Petition of Patrick Ramsey. Prays leave to withdraw a petition presented by him on behalf of himself and others respecting an estate left by John Earl of Holderness, long since deceased.

Statement of the case concerning a riot committed in the late Forest of Gillingham. On the 24th of April 1643 their Lordships ordered that from that time forth none should break down the hedges, ditches, and mounds of the inclosures belonging to the Earl of Elgin without due process of law, for contempt of which order some were then apprehended and punished; since which time the possession has been quiet until now, when the actors and abettors, taking advantage of the late commotions, have broken down all the mounds and laid open the part of the forest called Bayliffe's Walk; and the better to countenance their proceedings have set two at a time to work, pretending thereby to avoid a riot, and have by this means laid open about five hundred acres. The Earl desires, in regard that the offenders have not only damned him in his just right by this and former riots 5,000*l.*, but have also condemned the orders of the House, that they may be severely punished and ordered to pay his Lordship's costs and damages, and give security for their future good deportment. See L. J., VI. 15, &c.

Petition of the inhabitants of the parish of St. Saviour's, Southwark, to Sir John Wollaston, and the other executors of the late John Marshall, who died in 1627, leaving a house for the minister and 700*l.* for the building of a new church in the parish. Formerly Paris Garden Liberty belonged to the Inner Temple, and the remainder of the parish was in times past two parishes, and had two churches until the reign of Henry VIII., when the whole was thrown into one parish, and one of the churches was taken away, and is now the Compter Prison, and Courthouse for the borough. Now, though

St. Saviour's Church is very large and fitted with galleries and pews, yet it is so built that all the parishioners cannot come near enough to hear with profit, and therefore many, especially in winter, go to other churches. Nothing has been done towards carrying out the testator's wishes for the last sixteen years, and petitioners therefore pray the executors to proceed in the execution of the good work.

Petition of the distressed Protestants, who by the Honourable Committee are conceived fit objects of commiseration, and have tickets for relief. Petitioners, to the number of five hundred with their wives and children, have long waited for relief after their sufferings in Ireland, but in consequence of some money having been otherwise disposed of, there is nothing to pay them with. Pray to be recommended to the Commons.

Proposals from John Shawe for making known his inventions of chariots proof against bullets of robbers, or of soldiers; of warlike munition equally capable of protecting an army from cannon shot, or of improving waste lands; and a plan for drawing gold and silver into the country, and keeping it there.

Petition of divers merchants of the City of London, importers of tobacco. The Houses made an ordinance that all merchants that paid duties in ready money should have a reduction of fifteen per cent.; this the Commissioners of the Customs are not willing to allow. Pray that direction may be given to the Customs' officers to obey the ordinance.

Petition of Sir Robert Willoughby, Knight. Complains that when about fourteen years old he was persuaded to marry Elizabeth Thornborough, daughter of John late Bishop of Worcester, and by the deceit of his wife, her brother Sir Benjamin Thornborough, and others, he has been defrauded of the manor of Turner's Puddle, Dorset, while his wife, after deserting him, and living as a nun for seven or eight years at St. Omer, has become a recusant convict, and lives riotously and audaciously. Prays that the rents of the manor may be paid to him, until she can show cause to the contrary.

Petition of Dorothy Matthews, the distressed widow of Serjeant William Matthews, to the House of Commons. Petitioner's late husband was one of the first that declined Goring's command at Portsmouth upon his proving himself an apostate, and did ever faithfully serve the Parliament, and lost his life in their service at Havant fight. Prays for an order for the 40*l.* arrears of pay due to her late husband.

Paper endorsed, "Loose Notions of Conduct for the 'Warr.'" The writer does not wish that the King should come in of himself, or be taken before York be taken; for if he were at London there would be such fair and spurious declarations set forth every day as would increase his party, especially amongst the neutrals. Would not besiege Oxford, because it is strong and well virtualled; and if the summer prove wet, our army might get some great sickness, as they did last year at Thame. Would keep the field, and thus break both the King's contributions and his army. Would relieve Lyme, which is of great consequence, because the Queen is at Exeter. Thinks it were an easy matter, by prosecuting the King's army vigorously, to dissipate his foot and take his artillery and carriages, and his horse being followed closely by horse, would moulder away, as the army lives on plunder. Wishes therefore that his Excellency and Sir W. Waller would follow the King's army wheresoever it goes, and that the Committee of both Kingdoms would send to the Scots, Lord Manchester, and Lord Fairfax, to send 4,000 horse and 6,000 foot to join with Lord Denbigh and his Excellency to find out Prince Rupert before the rebels come over, or Prince Rupert relieves Latham House and raises the papists in Lancashire. Believes it would be better soldiering to find out Prince Rupert and invade him than to let him relieve York, or fall upon Lancashire. Supposes there is something in the wind that Prince Rupert comes not to the King's relief, seeing we are masters of the field. They may hope our armies will be engaged before Oxford, and the King will go into Oxford to invite them, and so enter into a treaty for his coming to the Parliament to prevent the 17th article concerning the conservators of the peace. This will be much opposed, because it will destroy all private accommodations, so that many will be deprived of their hopes of preferment of honour and offices; it will suppress the nobility, and exalt the gentry and commonalty, and turn all to anarchy; thus it is divulged by those who study nothing but their private preferments. Let his Excellency, Sir W. Waller, Manchester, Fairfax, the Scots, Denbigh, and the Lancashire and Cheshire forces all join and dissipate the King's and Prince Rupert's armies, and then think of taking towns. York may then be taken, and Newcastle will follow. If we be actual masters of the field our army will increase, and the King's will fly, and his party will desert him, especially the mercenaries. Then the King's credit will fail for money and ammunition. If he loses his contributions, his party will be ruined, trade will consequently increase, the excise will rise, and all neutrals will declare for the Parliament. When our armies are marching all faction ceases, but if we lie still or besiege a town, expect faction everywhere; therefore by all means invade Prince Rupert's, and the King's armies, and do not meddle with sieges. Observe, Prince Rupert never invaded but upon treachery, as at Newark; therefore invade him, and his army will soon be brought to nothing; it is composed of forced men, who will be the ruin of his old soldiers; besides, there were never so many old soldiers in his Excellency's and Sir W. Waller's armies as now, for those that are called citizens are veteran soldiers. This paper, which is a copy, is in the handwriting of J. Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, but there is nothing in it to show by whom the propositions were made.

Paper endorsed, "Some considerations about Accises." The writer contends that the management of the "Accises" should not be committed to one man, although he were the trustiest and wisest man in the whole Kingdom, but that six, or at least four, persons, with like authority and power, should be chosen to administer the business. The paper is undated and unsigned.

Petition of Thomas Austen, clerk, parson of Grafton Regis, in the county of Northampton. Complains of the oppressions suffered by him at the hands of Dame Mary Crane, who has detained his tithes from him and caused others to do the same. Prays that he may receive his tithes, according to their Lordships' order, and that the prosecution commenced by Lady Crane against him at the quarter sessions of the county of Northampton may be stayed.

Petition of Richard Bryan, of the parish of St. Clement Dane's, in the county of Middlesex, tailor. Complains of an unjust warrant of Justice Hooker, by which he, and his wife, were with great cruelty turned out of a room they held from John Michell, a baker, and petitioner himself imprisoned for nine weeks in the Gate-house. Prays for relief.

Prince Rupert, was at Lodley [P] on Friday night with some forty horses; his army is left behind him, some in Shropshire, about Wellington and Tong, and others about Chester. He is thought to have five or six thousand at least, and to have gone to get a new commission to press or hang those that refuse. The Lord prosper his cause. P.S.—The news about Prince Rupert is very uncertain, therefore be not troubled by it; desires Swinfen to send him a box of sealing wafers, which may be bought in Westminster Hall; the thickest are best.

Jan. 13. Draft of preceding.

Jan. 14. Remonstrance from the Portuguese Resident concerning the seizure of certain pictures belonging to him: about two years ago, when intending to return to Portugal, he bought various pictures from Humphrey Weld for 400*l.*, and ordered them to be packed in cases and sent to the house of Francis Sayon, a foreign merchant, a Protestant, living near the river, for embarkation, but receiving at this time an order from the King, his master, to stay longer in England, he agreed with the merchant that the pictures should remain in his house. About two months since these pictures were seized by order of a sub-committee of the Committee of Examinations, on the plea that they belonged to a malignant, but on his explaining the circumstances to the Committee he had expected that the pictures would have been immediately restored, instead of this the Committee pretended that the bill of sale was invalid, and severely examined all parties to the transaction, without in any way invalidating his claim to the pictures; nevertheless they finally sent him word that they did not restore the pictures because they found they were none of his, though they could give no evidence or reason for this. Now, as the members of the sub-committee are persons of no legal knowledge and of slender ability for deciding this matter, the Resident desires, if the House is not satisfied as to his claim, that the case may be referred to some persons of learning, quality, and experience, to be judged according to law, provided that Mr. Miles Corbett be not one of the judges, who, for his own interest as it would seem, has framed certain chimeras in this matter; the Resident intends, when time serves, to bring an action against him and others, and meantime desires that the pictures in their cases may be kept in safe custody till the matter be decided.

This paper was sent to the Commons, as reflecting upon a member of that House, but nothing seems to have been done upon it. L. J., VII. 137.

Jan. 18. Petition of Peter De la Salle, merchant stranger, bail for the Duke of Espernon, and now in prison by a judgment unduly obtained by one Pickering and others, who have further obtained, by false suggestions, a commission of bankruptcy against petitioner; the Commissioners have not only seized his books and papers, but have intercepted letters coming from his foreign correspondents, to his great damage and discredit, and still detain him prisoner, so that he cannot follow his business. Prays that his letters may be delivered to him, the Commission stayed, and that he may have liberty by writ or rule to follow his business. L. J., VII. 144.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commons referring the matter to the Commissioners of the Great Seal. 10 Jan. C. J., IV. 15.

Jan. 18. Petition of the inhabitants of Watton, in Hertfordshire; pray that Mr. Wells, who was appointed their minister when Mr. Inglesby was sequestered for his malignancy, may be settled in the living now that Mr. Inglesby is dead. L. J., VII. 144.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding, and on the same paper copy of a petition of same to Sir John Butler, Knight of the Bath [patron of the living]. Pray Sir John not to bestow the living upon the present curate, who is not a quiet and peaceable man, and who will neither bury nor christen, nor administer the sacrament, so that the parishioners are compelled to carry their children to be christened in other parishes, and to go to other churches to receive the sacrament.

2. Certificate signed by John Wells, that whoever takes the presentation to the parsonage of Watton at the hands of Sir John Butler, who is imprisoned at Peterhouse for malignancy, takes it, 1st, against an order of the House of Lords recommending him (Wells) for the presentation; 2nd, against the choice of all the good and well affected in the parish; 3rd, against the will and without the consent of him (Wells), who was put into the place by the authority of Parliament, and who has enjoyed it almost two years.

3. Petition of inhabitants of Watton, that an allowance may be made to Mr. Wells, as their lecturer, out of the parsonage.

Jan. 20. Petition of William Le Ceur, merchant stranger. Complaints of proceedings by relatives and partners of Anthony Hooper, deceased, to deprive him of his claim upon Hooper's estate; further complains of arrest whilst following his suit before Parliament. Prays for examination of the process by which he was arrested, the bail required, and the truth of the allegations made by Bentley, Farvax, and Legay. L. J., VII. 148.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of letter from Louis XIV. to his Resident in England, desiring him to assist Le Ceur in obtaining redress against the representatives of the bankrupt Hooper. 16 Jan. 1644-5. See L. J., VII. 147.

3. Petition of Le Ceur that he may be protected from arrest (undated).

Jan. 20. Petition of Thomas Coninsby, poor prisoner in the Tower of London. In his absence on Thursday last, at the hearing of his cause, the annexed order was passed against him for contempt, when he was truly prisoner in the Tower, and unable to appear. Prays for an order to the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring him to the House at the hearing of the cause. L. J., VII. 148.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 16 Jan.

Jan. 20. Petition of Robert White and Ellen, his wife. Pray that their case, respecting the estate of Robert Gray, deceased intestate, may be recommended to the consideration of Sir Nathaniel Brent, Judge of the Prerogative Court, as Sir Henry Martin, before whom the case originally came, and Katherine Gray, late administratrix of the estate, are both dead, and petitioners know not against whom to proceed to obtain their rights. L. J., VII. 148.

Jan. 20. Petition of Symon Middleton. Petitioner has married Katherine, niece and administratrix of Robert Gray, through whom he claims Gray's estates. Prays that preceding petition may be dismissed, and the matter left to the ordinary course of law.

Jan. 20. Petition of John Ogle. Has been for six months and upwards a prisoner in Winchester House; is hardly able to exist for want of means, as his friends are either in Denmark or Holland, of which last country he is a native. Prays to be allowed to return to Holland on finding sufficient bail. L. J., VII. 148.

Jan. 20. Petition of Thomas Smith, Captain Tokeley, Phineas Andrews, George Pryor, James Pickering, and others, owners of the ship Unity. Petitioners having been prejudiced by the Duke of Espernon, arrested his person, when De la Salle and Andrews became bail; petitioners, getting no redress from the Duke, who had left the country, were obliged to proceed against De la Salle, and finding that he was paying large sums of money while they received nothing, they obtained a commission of bankruptcy for seizing all his estate, and thereupon sent to Mr. Withering's for all letters addressed to De la Salle. They understand that an order has been made for all such letters to be brought to the House, and they pray that some one may be appointed to open them in the presence of De la Salle and themselves.

Jan. 21. Petition of Peter De la Salle. Prays to see his letters now in the custody of the House, that so he may have opportunity to meet the requirements of his correspondents. L. J., VII. 149.

Jan. 21. Petition of Robert Coninsby. The cause of Roger North against petitioner and others chiefly concerns Thomas Coninsby, who has all the papers, &c. relating thereto. Petitioner prays that he may be exempted from the order of the 16th inst., imposing costs for the non-attendance of Thomas Coninsby, then prisoner in the Tower, and that he may have liberty to return home, as his livelihood depends on husbandry.

Jan. 22. Petition of Clement Kynnersley, yeoman of His Majesty's removing wardrobe, and daily attending their Lordships by virtue of his place; complains of arrest by John Cambridge, a bailiff, at the suit of Florentine Tanturier contrary to privilege. Prays for the punishment of those that have arrested him. L. J., VII. 149.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of warrant for attachment of Kynnersley.

2. Petition of Florentine Tanturier. Petitioner, holding in trust the estates of divers widows and orphans, lent 1,500*l.* to Wm. Caldwell, who was declared delinquent, and certain houses, &c. of Caldwell's were sequestered by the Committee of Sequestrations to the use of the Parliament; on petitioner's proving his debt, he was allowed to receive the rents till he should have repaid himself, but Mr. Kynnersley refused to pay arrears due from him unless petitioner would accept of 5*l.* instead of 10*l.* On this petitioner brought an action against Kynnersley, who has complained to their Lordships. Prays for an early hearing of the case.

Jan. 22. Copy of the King's propositions for a peace. L. J., VII. 151. In extenso.

Jan. 23. Petition of Lettice Lady Pagett. Petitioner has lands in Middlesex, Berkshire, and Warwickshire, but since Parliament began has given over housekeeping, lessened her attendants, and taken lodgings, and reduced herself to a private condition below her rank, that she might be better able to contribute to the Parliament, which she has freely done on all occasions, and has besides supplied her children, who by many misfortunes have been at a low ebb; she receives nothing from her estates in Berkshire, which are in the King's quarters, and very little from Warwickshire, where her tenants have been plundered, made prisoners, and taxed both by the King's forces and for the Parliament; much of her rents in Middlesex she cannot receive, yet the taxes are very great, and she has no abatement, though she pays a fee farm of 240*l.* to the Crown; and, above all, petitioner has now been taxed a great sum by the Committee at the Savoy for supply of the army. This she is at present quite unable to pay, having already been obliged to sell some of her goods to supply her with meat and other necessities. Prays that the assessment made by the Committee at the Savoy may either be discharged, or the payment of all taxes in London deferred, as she pays so much in other places. L. J., VII. 152.

Jan. 23. Draft order for sending arms for the encouragement of the forces in Montgomeryshire. L. J., VII. 153. In extenso.

Jan. 23. Report of Dr. Aylett on the cause between Le Ceur, Farvax, and others. L. J., VII. 153. In extenso.

Jan. 23. Petition of Wm. Le Ceur, complaining that exorbitant bail is demanded of him, and praying for liberty and redress.

Jan. 24. Petition of divers of the inhabitants of St. Ives, in the county of Huntingdon, that the impropriate tithes, worth about 94*l.*, now in the hands of the sequestrators, may be given to their minister, Mr. Tookey, whose health is impaired by the duties entailed by the number of his parishioners, and the size of the church (where there are about eight hundred communicants), while the living is not worth 52*l.* a year. L. J., VII. 154.

1. Similar petition. (Undated.)
2. Reasons in favour of the petition: the impropiator, Thomas Audley, is a notoriously wicked man, and has been in actual war against Parliament.
3. Certificate of the sequestrators that the impropriate tithes of St. Ives are let out for 94*l.*, and the assessments, &c. last year amounted to more than 20*l.*

Jan. 24. Report of proceedings at the Committee of both Kingdoms at Derby House respecting the treaty. L. J., VII. 154.

Jan. 24. Petition of Thomas Withring, Esq. Complains that seventy-five pieces of "Howנסcott says," with a parcel of Flanders lace, sent by him from Dover to Malaga, had been there seized by order of the Spanish Admiral, who had also caused debts due to petitioner there to be stopped, by which means a ship of his was obliged to return home dead freight, to his loss of 10,000*l.* Prays that after legal examination of his witnesses, and proof of the damage done him, reparation may be obtained by laying an embargo on all "Howנסcott says" and Flanders goods that come to Dover. L. J., VII. 154.

Jan. 24. Petition of Lucy Staveley, wife of Arthur Staveley. Supplicates their Lordships to vouchsafe one half hour to hear some of the particulars of her case; she is a daughter of Richard Estwick, Esq., and has brought her husband, to whom she has been married for twenty-eight years, 2,000*l.*, and borne him two daughters, yet, by his cruelty and oppression towards herself and her parents, he has brought her to the extremity of either begging or starving, and, taking advantage of these times, withholds from her an allowance of 40*l.* alimony ordered to be made her some years since on her complaint to the King. L. J., VII. 154.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Richard Kilvert in support of preceding. 2 Dec. 1643.
2. Affidavit of Lucy Staveley. 7 Dec. 1643.

Jan. 24. Draft letter to the States General, thanking them for the contributions levied for Ireland in the United Provinces. L. J., VII. 155. In extenso.

Jan. 25. Petition of Peter De La Salle, merchant stranger. Thomas Smith and others last week intercepted the letters from his correspondents, on pretence that he was a bankrupt, when the House ordered that the letters should be placed in the hands of Mr. Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, till the question of bankruptcy should be determined; they have again intercepted his letters this week in order to disgrace and ruin him. Prays that these letters also may be placed in Mr. Browne's hands, and that he may see them in order to reply to his correspondents. L. J., VII. 157.

Annexed:—

1. Application from Smith and others, creditors of De La Salle, that the letters may be sent to the Commissioners in Bankruptcy to peruse.

Paper respecting a right of way across the property of Lady Newburgh at Alurlye [Ardleigh], Essex, where about thirteen years ago an old way was closed, and a new way opened instead; application is made for an order that nothing be done till the cause be legally heard and determined. L. J., VII. 157.

Jan. 27. Reasons from the Committee at the Savoy, for assessing Lady Pagett at 50*l.* None are excepted from the assessment, but the members and assistants of either House, and persons not worth a thousand marks. Many persons of much less worth than Lady Pagett are assessed, otherwise it would be impossible to raise the sum allotted, and if the 22,000*l.* to be raised were assessed in small sums it would exceedingly distract the Commissioners and their accounts; as the security is so good and the assessment cannot be made general, the committee thought fit to set no smaller sum than 25*l.* upon the meanest person assessed. L. J., VII. 157. The House was of opinion that Lady Pagett should lend but 25*l.*

The cause between petitioner, and Anthony Hooper, and others, has depended since 1638; for two years in the Court of Admiralty, where petitioner obtained sentence for 632*l.* the defendants thereupon appealed to the Delegates, but after about a year, when the cause was ready for hearing, Hooper brought a rule for a prohibition from the King's Bench, by the judges of which court it was left to their Lordships, but the hearing has been interrupted by greater affairs. Prays for a speedy conclusion. L. J., VII. 160.

Feb. 10. Petition of Peter de la Salle and Peter Matthews, French merchants on the behalf of themselves, and the most excellent Prince Bernard Duke D'Espéron in the kingdom of France. An English ship called the Unity was seized by the French naval forces on a voyage between Passage and St. John de Luce, and condemned as prize, and James Pickering and others, part owners, failing all other remedy, brought an action against the Duke D'Espéron on pretence that the ship was employed under a promise of recompense from him, to carry men and ordnance, though the Duke was never at the place where the promise was said to have been made; nevertheless, though not a witness was examined on the Duke's part, judgment was given against him for 8,500*l.*, and De la Salle, his bail, charged in execution, imprisoned upon a ne exeat regno, and a commission of bankruptcy taken out against him. De la Salle prays that, as he can have no redress elsewhere according to the strict forms of law, the House would take some means to discover the truth by examination of witnesses, and that he may be set at liberty so that he may be able to continue his business with his correspondents abroad. L. J., VII. 185.

Petitioner is guiltless, but has lain nevertheless close prisoner ever since, to the undoing of himself and family, as his and their subsistence depends upon his credit and daily labour. Prays for release, at the least upon bail. L. J., VII. 185.

Feb. 10. Order for Mr. Justice Reeve and Mr. Justice Bacon to return their certificate of Tew's case to the House.

Annexed:—

1. Examination of Nicholas Tew before the Justices. Confesses that a printing press was brought to his house in Coleman Street, and was used there by Robert Overton, who lodged there, and others, but who, he knows not; also confesses that a letter written by Mr. Lilburne to Mr. Pryne, and a book of Mr. Lilburne's were printed there, but from whom he received them or how much money he made by them he cannot tell. 17 Jan. 1644-5.

Feb. 10. Report upon the case of Francis Church, alias Churchman, for speaking treasonable words against the King; that he should be sent to Sandwich, and the matter there examined by Sergeant Finch, steward of the town.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavits of David Cassey and others, that Francis Church, of Wickham Brooks [Wickham-breux], when drinking with two other countrymen at an inn at Sandwich, called the King a rogue, a rascal, a rebel, and no king. 25 Jan. 1644-5. See L. J., VII. 164.

Feb. 11. Petition of Susan Russell, late wife of Edward Rich, Esq., deceased, for and on the behalf of herself, and her six young children. Prays that she may be allowed to proceed against Symon Lawrence for arrears of rent due from him for a certain tenement on the Bankside, notwithstanding his pretence of protection from the Earl of Clare, which has already stopped her proceedings. L. J., VII. 186.

Feb. 11. Petition of Peter De la Salle, merchant stranger. Prays that direction may be given to the Marshal of the King's Bench to permit him to attend the House at the hearing of his cause. L. J., VII. 186.

Feb. 11. Petition of Capt. Thomas King, who for two years past has served in Sir John Merriek's regiment under the Earl of Stamford, and yesterday was summoned by the Committee at the Savoy for not setting out half a man when the red regiment went out. He appeared in answer to the summons, and was sentenced to a fine of 42*s.* 6*d.*, and when he said he could not pay it, but would pay double when he received his arrears, the Committee sent for a constable, charged him with riot, and caused him to be stripped of his coat, sword, and knife, and kept him prisoner in the Savoy for three hours. Petitioner, to whom arrears amounting to 11*5*l. 10*s.* are due, prays that some part may be paid him for the support of his wife and children, and to recruit him for further service, and that what was taken from him may be restored, as he is willing to spend the last drop of his blood in the service of Parliament. L. J., VII. 187. On the same paper is an order for the Committee at the Savoy to answer the petition, and their answer, in which they state that King has for a twelvemonth past kept a disorderly alehouse in Turnebowle Street, and refused to pay any assessments, that he was only charged with the cost of half a man, which he would not pay, nor appear when summoned; he was therefore sent for, and committed according to the ordinances of Parliament, and as for the stripping, they deny it.

Feb. 11. Petition of John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments. He hears that divers persons have cut and spoiled his woods at Twickenham, and broken down his fences, and give out that they do it because he is a Roundhead. Prays that he may have protection from the House, as in regard of his daily attendance he cannot look after his own affairs, and that the offenders may, upon due proof, be attached and punished. L. J., VII. 187.

Petitioner while serving under Colonel Martin, Governor of Aylesbury, was sent to London in charge of Colonel Busbrigg and other prisoners, and as he was returning, was arrested at the suit of his mother-in-law, Katharen Alston, and hurried to prison; and this was done though she knew his employment. She is a malignant, desires petitioner's ruin, and has a protection from the Queen; and since she heard he had applied to Parliament she has moved her lodging, and lives obscurely. Prays for enlargement that he may return to service, his only provision for himself, his wife, and children. L. J., VII. 191.

is suffering from his imprisonment; prays that he may be set at liberty upon parole or bail. L. J., VII. 192.

Feb. 13. Petition and answer of Jeremy Stephens, clerk, touching the prebend of Biggleswade. Petitioner was presented and admitted, and performed the cure, and preached and paid tithes, &c. in the absence of Mr. Osbaston, who was supposed to have deserted the kingdom. Petitioner prays that he may not be called upon to restore any part of the profits, the rather because the prebend was bestowed upon him for his chargeable service to the kingdom in printing and publishing the first volume of the English Laws, Constitutions, and Decrees for the first five hundred years before the Conquest, a work begun by the learned knight, Sir Henry Spelman, to whom petitioner was appointed assistant in his great old age. Further prays that if the House is not satisfied with this answer he may have further time allowed him, and may be heard by counsel in the matter. See L. J., VII. 185.

Annexed:—

1. Petition and addition and answer of Jeremy Stephens, touching the prebend of Biggleswade. In addition to the great work on Ecclesiastical History and Laws previously mentioned, petitioner has undergone great charges and pains in the public library at Oxford, with Dr. James, the keeper thereof, and Dr. Prideaux, Dr. Twist, and other principal divines, who were employed at first by Sir Thomas Bodley and Archbishop Abbott to compare the popish editions of the Fathers with the old books and manuscripts in all the libraries and colleges; which work continued many years, and twelve large volumes, or tomes, being exactly collated, the popish corruptions, additions, detractions, and falsifications committed in them are discovered. All these volumes were transmitted into petitioner's hands, and he has already printed divers treatises out of them, and has much more in readiness to be printed, at his great charge and labour. The prebend was given to him as a reward and encouragement for proceeding in his work, the charges about which are much more than the profits of the prebend during Mr. Osbaston's absence. Part of the first fruits being paid into the Exchequer, the money can hardly be recovered, and an extent is sent forth for the rest. Prays that the matter may be referred to some judges, and further that Mr. Osbaston, who has a legal course by action of debt to recover his rents against the tenants, may be left to the ordinary course of the law.

Feb. 14. Letter from the Duke of Lorraine at Brussels to the Gentlemen of the High Court of Parliament. Thanks them for the justice they have done to his Resident Fortescue, his only cause for dissatisfaction is that the order of the House for restoration of that which has been taken from his agent has had no effect; but if the order is just, to see it obeyed is equally so, and this he desires may be done. See L. J., VII. 43.

Petitioner was two years ago sequestered for having been taken in the town of Lynn at the time of its surrender; he appealed to the Committee for Sequestrations, who considered his case to come within the terms of the articles of surrender, as much as those of many other gentlemen unsequestered, and reported accordingly to the House; the Lords have long since sent down an ordinance for taking off his sequestration, but the Commons have not had time to consider it. Prays that his contributions and payments towards the public service and his youth may be taken into account, and his cause determined. (Undated.)

2. Order of Committee for Sequestrations, that the case of Mr. Beck be reported to the House for consideration, as many other cases depend upon the decision.

3. Draft ordinance for the discharge of the estate of Jeremiah Beck, of Norfolk, gentleman, from sequestration.

4. Another draft.

5. Another draft.

6. Copy of articles of agreement for the surrender of the town of King's Lynn. 16 Sep. 1643. See Rushworth, III. ii. 283.

March 5. Petition of the ministers within the counties near unto the City of London. Petitioners reluctantly represent that they are unduly burdened with taxes, while their churches are ruinous, their remuneration inconsiderable, and their position uncertain. They pray that they may have relief from taxation, and a competent maintenance and comfortable encouragement assigned to them out of the revenues of the lands of Bishops, Deans, and Chapters. L. J., VII. 263.

Annexed:—

1. Remonstrance of the ministers in the counties near London, shewing why they ought to be eased in their taxes, as they humbly conceive. Many men receive their rents without labour, and leave them to their children after them; a minister's income dies with him, while his education costs much; hospitality is expected of him, and he is forbidden to engage in trade.

March 5. List of Committee appointed to consider preceding petition. L. J., VII. 263.

March 5. Alterations in the Directory, proposed by the Assembly and sent up from the Commons this day. L. J., VII. 264. In extenso.

March 5. Draft order for 50l., to be given to the messengers that brought the good news from Weymouth. L. J., VII. 264. In extenso.

March 5. Draft order for the Commissioners of Excise to repay themselves 2,000l. advanced for pay of the Lord General's Foot. L. J., VII. 264. In extenso.

March 5. Draft ordinance for raising 50,000l. upon the Customs. L. J., VII. 265. In extenso.

March 5. Copy of preceding.

March 5. Draft declaration respecting the soldiers in mutiny. L. J., VII. 265. In extenso.

March 6. Petition of Symon Plichar [Plychar]. The hearing of his case against Sir Henry Marten, Judge of the Admiralty Court and Thomas Flute, which was appointed to be heard in July 1641, has been delayed by the death of Sir Henry Marten, and the absence of Flute beyond seas. Prays that the executors of Sir Henry, and Flute (now in or about London) may be ordered to attend and abide judgment. L. J., VII. 265.

1. Copy of order of 17 July 1641 referred to in preceding.

2. Petition of Plichar for a speedy hearing. (Undated.)

3. Petition of Plichar. Prays that the examination of John Duboya, who is petitioner's chief witness and is now in town may be taken. (Undated.)

March 6. Draft order for the Commissioners of Excise to repay themselves 2,000l. advanced for the garrison of Weymouth. L. J., VII. 266. In extenso.

March 7. Affidavit of Thomas Richards, of Walsall, in the county of Stafford, that Captain Stone refused to obey the warrant of the House for his attachment, saying that he was ordered by the Committee of both Kingdoms to command Stafford till further order from them. L. J., VI. 267.

March 7. Letter from Sir Thos. Fairfax to the Lords assembled in Parliament, sending the names of officers nominated by him.

March 10. Petition of Julian Viscountess Campden, dowager. As sole executrix of the late Viscount, who died on the 8th of March 1642-3, she became possessed of household goods, &c. in his house in Maiden Lane; the late Viscount, though sometimes absent from Parliament on account of his health, yet left his proxy with the Earl of Pembroke, and never did anything to make him liable to sequestration. Petitioner has herself obeyed all orders for advance of money, yet, unknown to her, orders have been issued by the Committee of Examinations to seize and inventory her goods in Maiden Lane. Prays that all proceedings may be suspended until after examination of the case. L. J., VII. 267.

March 10. List of the names of the officers of Horse proposed in the ordinance for new modelling the army under Sir Thomas Fairfax, with the alteration proposed by the Lords. The names are given in extenso. L. J., VII. 278.

March 10. List of officers of Foot. In this and the preceding list there are many alterations, amongst others the Lords wish to insert Major Pride's name as Major of Colonel Barkley's regiment of Foot. There was a conference respecting these lists on the 13th, when the Commons gave reasons why the names should not be altered. On the 14th the Lords in a Committee adhered to their exceptions, but withdrew any recommendations, leaving it to Sir Thomas Fairfax to nominate persons in the room of those excepted, and communicated their decision to the Commons at a conference on the 15th, when the Commons insisted that if the Lords had no reason against any of the persons named so great as to endanger the whole business, it was requisite to agree to the lists as they stood. The Lords, after the report of this conference, divided on the question whether they would pass the list as it stood, when the numbers were equal; but after an examination of the admissibility of proxies the Earl of Mulgrave's proxy was admitted on the following day, and the question therefore carried in the affirmative. 3. Copy of another order of the Council Board in the cause. 4 June 1634.

March 10. Petition of Colonel Robert Keys or Kays, a distressed prisoner in the King's Bench. Petitioner formerly served in the King's army, but took advantage of the declaration of grace to submit to Parliament, and has since served in Lord Fairfax's army; but on coming to town petitioner was maliciously accused as a dangerous person, and committed by the Committee of Examinations to prison; and though the Committee afterwards ordered that he should be set at liberty and his commissions, clothes, &c. restored to him, yet is he still kept in restraint, and is in sad extremity, for lands in Oxfordshire have been given away from him by the King for his fidelity to Parliament, and other lands were formerly sequestered from him for bearing arms in the King's army. Prays for an order for his immediate enlargement, as he is ready to sacrifice his dearest blood in the service of the House. L. J., VII. 268.

A copy of the Directory is appended to the ordinance. The ordinance was sent up from the Commons on the 1st of January, and passed after much consultation with the Assembly of Divines, and was with the Directory ordered to be printed this day. L. March 14. Petition of Mabella Lady Finch. Immediately after her departure into Holland to her husband, with the leave of the House, his estate was sequestered, which forced her to return. The estate is but 300*l.* per annum, and the 5th part, 60*l.*, will, she trusts, be thought insufficient for her maintenance; she, therefore, prays that some fit allowance may be made her. L. March 17. Petition of James Earl of Carlisle. His late father being indebted to various persons conveyed the Carribee Islands, and certain lands in Ireland, and other things of great value far exceeding his debts, to Sir James Hay and Archibald Hay, in trust for payment of his debts. He also made a deed of gift of his goods, dividing them equally between his wife the Countess of Carlisle, and petitioner, who thus had not one foot of land from his father. Petitioner left the management of the trust entirely to the feoffees: against them and petitioner a Bill in Chancery was brought by the creditors, which petitioner was by a Committee of the House ordered to answer, notwithstanding his privilege, in order that his father's estate might be discovered; a decree was made upon a report by a master of the court in which petitioner was included, though he could have proved that he had nothing to do with the trust, but owing to the distractions of the times he could not produce the deed of gift. The execution of the decree is now prosecuted with great violence by the creditors, who seek to attach petitioner; he conceives that he has never waived his privilege, and prays the protection of the House. L. J., VII. 276.

March 18. Petition of Bazill Earl of Denbigh. Hears that on the manors of Rowell and Orton, Northamptonshire, which are now sequestered, but are to descend upon him in reversion, liberty is taken not only to plough up the land, but to cut up the woods. March 20. Petition of Francis Yonge, gent., Keeper of the Great Park of Windsor, under the Earl of Holland. Disorderly soldiers have for some time past broken into the park and killed the deer; and on the 26th of February last the keepers, finding many dogs coursing the deer, endeavoured to shoot them, upon which a trooper fired at Symonds, a keeper, and wounded him so severely that he died within four or five days.
There are but few deer left, and those have been preserved only by the extraordinary pains and industry of petitioner, who prays that an order similar to that for Hyde Park may be made for the protection of the deer and timber, and that Colonel Venn may be ordered to see it carried out, and that in future no soldiers may be quartered in the park. L. J., VII. 281.

stored to him to be shipped again to Spain. L. J.,

March 24. Petition of Peter Smart, much distressed prebendary of Durham. Recapitulates the case between the prebendaries of Durham and himself; and prays that she was doing anything contrary to any ordinance of Parliament, but now finding that she has offended because Sir Lewis is at Oxford, she is exceedingly sorry, and entreates compassion, as she is seventy-two years of age, and has constantly lived in the Parliament quarters, and contributed above 890*l.* for the public service, and her house is now a garrison of Parliament, and so long as she lived there she received 300*l.* yearly, but has since had nothing. For about two years petitioner has been in the service of the Parliament in the garrison of Stafford, but having been summoned to town as a witness in the Earl of Denbigh's business against some of the Committee of Stafford, he has been arrested by his creditors, who, on account of the times, put an extraordinary value upon their commodities. March 31. Petition of John Griffith. Has been six months prisoner by their Lordships' warrant, in which no cause for his commitment was expressed, and he can neither discover the cause of his arrest nor procure enlargement on bail, though he has often petitioned the House. Petitioner, who is at great expense on account of his restraint, and has and is still willing to adventure his life and estate in the service of the State, thinks it strange that he, a free commoner of England, should be thus long detained prisoner, contrary to the law of the land, for by law no one ought to be detained above twenty-one days without a charge, or bail granted to him; and he is not conscious to have done anything not bailable, or anything deserving their Lordships' indignation so severely as that he should be refused the benefit of going to church, which favour since his commitment he has never been able to obtain from his keeper. Prays that he may either be discharged or bailed until the House has time to give him a legal trial. L. J., VII. 293, &c.

April 2. Petition of the minister, aid divers of the inhabitants of the parish of Twickenham. Upon pretence of an ancient custom, two great cakes are yearly brought into the church on Easter Day to be distributed amongst the younger sort of people, which causes great disorder by reason of the scrambling and contention. April 4. Petition of Lady Alice Hastings. Petitioner, being unmarried, and having 3,000*l.* bestowed upon her by her grandmother, the Countess of Derby, entrusted the same about eight years since to the Earl of Bridgewater, who agreed to pay her interest at the rate of seven per cent. After many delays and much impotency she has lately obtained the interest money, but having no other means to exist in these unhappy times, and no friends to supply her, she has often solicited the Earl to pay her back her principal money, or to give her new security by his own bond for the same. This he refuses to do, although he acknowledges the debt, and petitioner cannot proceed at law against him by reason of his privilege. Prays their Lordships to take the matter into their consideration. L. J., VII. 303.

April 4. Petition of Sir Thomas Walsingham and Edward Polhill, heir-at-law to Robert Moulton, deceased. Pray that Sir John Baker may be ordered to attend, and that the cause between him and petitioners concerning the manor of Hunton, Kent, may be settled in a summary way. L. J., VII. 304.

L. J., VII. 304.

April 4. Petition of Michael Baker, their Lordships' messenger and servant. Prays that John Griffiths may be removed out of his custody, as petitioner has already expended 40*l.* for two men, day and night, to secure his person, and Griffiths persists in his outrageous courses, blasphemous oaths, base language against their Lordships and other noble persons, railing against the trained bands, and passengers going along the street, and never ceasing to assault, revile, and strike petitioner, his wife, and servants. L. J., VII. 304.

April 4. Petition of Edward Carter, His Majesty's surveyor of the works. By an order made by their Lordships on the 16th of May 1642, Thomas Nevill, and Ralph Hawtrey, two inhabitants of St. Gregory's, near St. Paul's, were authorised to take such materials for the rebuilding of their church as should be found convenient for them and useless for the great work of St. Paul's. Petitioner is now required by the inhabitants of St. Gregory's to furnish two hundred and seventy-four tons of stone lying in the Bishop of London's stable yard, fifty loads of oak timber, and six hundred of deal boards, with scaffolding poles for the work. Petitioner, not understanding their Lordships' order as the said inhabitants do, prays for further directions in the matter. L. J., VII. 305.

Annexed:—

2. Requisition of the parishioners of St. Gregory's for the materials mentioned in Carter's petition. 22 March 1644-5.

Commanded five hundred men at Bideford and Barnstaple, as is well known to the Earl of Stamford. due to them, and the remainder when the work was completed, but petitioners only received 43l. The work has been finished now more than two years, and petitioners, being very poor men, are become much indebted, and some of them have lately been arrested and cast into prison, their goods distrained for rent, and their wives and children turned out of doors. Pray that their case may be recommended to the Committee of His Majesty's Revenue for payment of the money so long since due unto them. See L. J., VII. 31.

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 2 Nov. 1642.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the Vice-Chancellors, and other the heads of colleges in the University of Cambridge. Several of the colleges are brought to great necessity by the falling of their rents, which cannot be received in these times of trouble and distraction; some are enforced to abate their ordinary food, the members of petitioners' societies are deprived of their means of maintenance, and the University is like to be dissolved if the colleges and students shall be required to pay the contributions for the public service, now imposed by the ordinance of Parliament, but from which payments they are freed by the Act, 13 Elizabeth, and from which they have formerly been exempted. Pray their Lordships to compassionate their poor condition, and to continue to them their ancient freedom from these impositions.

April 12. Draft order respecting Sutton Marsh. L. J., VII. 315.

April 12. Petition of Henry Hopkins, Warden of the Fleet. By an order of their Lordships of the 4th inst., John Griffiths was committed to petitioners' custody, and by an order of the House of Commons of the 5th inst., petitioner was charged to keep Griffiths very safe, as he will answer for him body for body. Prays that Griffith, who is to be proceeded against for murder, rapes, and other misdemeanours, may be removed to some other prison, for the better securing his person, until his trial, the Fleet, not having been accustomed to the custody of such capital offenders, has not the strength and safety of other prisons, where offenders of such a nature are in custody. L. J., VII. 315.

1. Copy of order of the Commons referred to in preceding. 5 April 1645.

April 12. Petition of Colonel Robert Kay [Keys], now prisoner in the King's Bench. Petitioner being in the service of His Majesty took advantage of the Declaration of Grace issued by the Parliament for a pardon to all such as should desert the service of His Majesty, came in unto Sir John Meldrum, who was in service at Gainesborough, and took conditions from Lord Fairfax for raising a regiment of horse, and has since done faithful service. Coming up to London by the General's order, his commissions and pass were detained from him, and he himself committed to Newgate, by the Committee for Examinations, upon complaint of some ill-affected persons upon suspicion of felony, but he was afterwards acquitted by proclamation. During the time of his confinement he had several actions charged upon him for pretended plunder when he was an enemy, and other mean pretences, but was again discharged by the Committee. The order for his discharge was withstood by the Sheriff of London, by reason of its not being from their Lordships, or the House of Commons. Petitioner then removed himself to the King's Bench, where he still remains in great misery, having his estate sequestered, and that part of it lying in the King's quarters given away by His Majesty. Has never received any pay since he has been in their honours' service, although he raised three troops of horse, and armed them at his own charge. Prays that the Marshal of the King's Bench may be ordered to bring him before their Lordships, and produce his book, showing what causes are charged against him, in order that he may be acquitted from his unjust restraint, and enabled to return to his former employment. L. J., VII. 316.

April 12. Lettter from Colonel Kay, in the King's Bench, to the Lord-Grey of Warke. Encloses preceding petition, and begs his Lordship to present it to the House.

April 12. Draft ordinance for the payment of 8,000l. for ships taken up for the service of the State. L. J., VII. 317. In extenso.

April 13. Petition of Arthur Staveley. Petitioner was ordered on Thursday last to pay 40l. to his wife on this day; but their Lordships have now appointed Wednesday next for a further hearing of the business, when petitioner hopes that such matters will appear against his wife, that they will not allow her any money at all. Prays that in the meantime he may deposit the 40l. in the hands of the Clerk of the Parliaments. See L. J., VII. 313.

April 14. Report from the Joint Committee of Lords and Commons, for regulating the household of the King's children. L. J., VII. 317.

April 15. Petition of Nicholas Ryter, commander of the ship called the Golden Sun, which belongeth to the King's Majesty of Denmark, to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner's former petition was referred to the Committee appointed to receive the complaints of the States Ambassadors, who declared they would not release the ship until they should receive advertisement of the effect of a negotiation had by their agents with the King of Denmark. Petitioner has heard nothing since of that negotiation, but since that time the King of Denmark has granted free trade up the River Elbe to the English nation, whereby they may continue their wonted trade and traffic. Petitioner therefore prays for the releasement of the ship and goods, as the detainment thereof tends to the great damage of the King of Denmark, and to the utter ruin of petitioner, and the rest of the officers and seamen, who will be compelled through necessity totally to relinquish and abandon the ship, if she be not speedily released. April 27. Letter from Ri. Warde to Thomas Webb, Secretary to the Duke of Richmond and Lenox; met his letter on returning to Exeter from a journey for settling the excise in the county. He cannot send any account concerning the license of white cloths, as, on account of the enemy's garrisons at Taunton and Lyme, no white cloths have been brought from Somersetshire, Wiltshire, and Gloucestershire; and the sum in hand therefore is so inconsiderable, that he durst not send it for fear it should be thought that he had failed in duty to his grace; he trusts not to fail in duty in the next account, to be subscribed by Mr. Kendall, a man of known integrity to His Majesty's service; a character which Mr. John Ashburnham would justify. The writer suggests that his grace should obtain, in lieu of his great sufferings by reason of the want of transportation of white cloths, an allowance from the King of some reasonable sum of money out of the license money to be collected for His Majesty upon all sorts of cloths to be sent into the enemies' quarters out of Somersetshire and Wiltshire, of which white cloths will not be the least part; otherwise the Duke will receive no benefit.

This letter may perhaps have been one of the papers taken at Naseby, as it thus endorsed by Secretary Nicholas "This seal was thus broken in taking of it "out of the packet, and, I assure you, hath not been "opened by any. I pray let me hear from you by this "bearer, and hasten him back with letters.—E. N."

Copy:

My Lords and Gent:

Since my last it has pleased God to blesse me wth more successes in yo^r service. In pursuance of yo^r Comands I marched from Blethington to Middleton Stonnie, and from thence towards Witny as privately as I could, believing that, to be a good place for interposing betweene the King & the West, whether he intended, Goring & Greenevill or the two Princes. In my march I was enforced of a body of Foote w^{ch} were marching towards Faringdon (w^{ch} indeed were a comanded Party of 300 w^{ch} came a day before from Faringdon, under Col. Rich: Vaughan to strengthen Woodstocke against mee, & were now returning) I understood they were not above 3 howers' march before me. I sent after them, my forlorne overtook them as they had gotten into Inclosures not farr from Brampton Bush, skirmished wth them, they killed some of my horses, mine killed & got some of them, but they recovered the Towne before my body came up, & my forlorne not being strong enough was not able to doe more than they did, the Enemy p^{re}sently barricadoed up the Towne got a pretty strong house, my body coming up about Eleven in y^e night. I sent them a Suitions, they slighted it, I put my selfe in a posture that they should not escape mee, hoping to deale wth them in the morning, my men charged them up to their Barricades in the night but truly they were of soe good resolution that wee could not force them from it, and indeed they killed some of my horses and I was forced to waite untill y^e morning besides they had got a passe over a brooke; in the night they strengthened themselves as well as they could in the Store house. In y^e morning I sent a Drum to them, but their answer was they would not quit except they might march out upon honorable Termes, the termes I offered were to submit all to mercy, they refused wth anger. I insisted upon them, & prepared to storme, I sent them word to desire them to deliver out the Gent. & his family w^{ch} they did, for they must expect extremity, if they put me to a storme, after some time spent all was yielded to mercy, Armes I tooke Musquets near 200: besides other Armes about 2 Barrells of Powder, Souldiers & Officers near 200; Nine score besides Officers, the rest being scattered & killed before: the Chief Prison^{ers} were Colonell S^r Rich: Vaughan Lievt^{en} Col^l. Littleton & Maio^r Lee, 2 or 3 Captaines & other Officers.

As I was upon my march I heard of some horse of the Enemy w^{ch} crossed mee towards Evesham, I sent Colonell Fiennes after them, whom God soe blessed, that he tooke about 30 Prison^{ers} 100 horse & three horse Colours, truly his diligence was great & this I must testifie that I finde noe man more ready to all services then himselfe. I would say soe if I did not finde it, if his men were at all considered I should hope you might expect very real service from them, I speake, this the rather because I finde him a Gentleman of that fidelity to you, and soe conscientious that he would all his Troops were as Religious & Civill as any, & make it a great par[t] of his Care to gett them soe. In this march my men alsoe got me of the Quene's Troopers & of them & others about 100 horses. This morning Col. John Fiennes sent me in the Gent. that waites upon the Lord Digbie in his Chamber, who was going to Gen^l Goring about exchange of a Prisoner, he tells me the King's forces were drawn out the last night to come to relieve S^r Rich: Vaughan, And Leg comanded them, they were about 700 horse & 500 Foote, but I believe they are gone backe, he saith many of the Horse were Volunteers, Gent. for I believe I have left him few others here, I looked upon his letters & found them directed to Marl[b]orough. He tells mee Goring is about the Devises, I asked him what further Orders he had to him, he tells me he was only to bid him follow former Orders I pressed him to know, what they were, and all that I could get was that it was to hasten wth all he had up to the King to Oxford. He sayth he has about 3,000 horse & 1000 Foote, that he is discontented that Prince Rupert comanded away his Foote. I am now quartered up to Faringdon. I shall have an eye towards him. I have that wth was my Regim^t & a part of Colonell Sydneys 5 Troops were recreated & a part of Col. Vermudens and 5 Troopes of Col. Fiennes 3 whereof & St John & Capt. Hamonds I sent wth the first Prison^{er} to Aylesbury. Its great pity wee want Dragoones I believe most of their petty Garrisons might have bene taken in & other services done for the enemy is in high feare, God does terrifie them, its good to take the season, & surely God delights that you have endeavoured to reforme yo^r Armys, & I begg it may be done more & more, bad men & discontented say its faction, I wish to be of the faction that desires to avoyd the oppression of the poore people of this miserable Nation, vpon whom you car looke wthout a bleeding heart, truly it grieves my Soule Our men should still be upon free Quarters as they are. I beseech you helpe it what & as soone as you can. My Lords pardon me this boldnesse, it is because I finde in these things wherein I serve you, that Hee does all, I professe his very hand has led me, I preconsulted none of these things.

My Lords & Gent. I waite yo^r further pleasure goods carried away by John Wheeler and others, for what cause she cannot conceive, as she saw no warrant, and is not behind, either by herself or her tenants, for any taxes or assessments imposed by the Parliament. Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

May 17. Draft order calling upon John Wheeler and others to answer preceding petition.

May 17. Petition of the inhabitants of Fen Drayton, in the county of Cambridge. The parsonage of Fen Drayton is impropriated without any endowed vicarage unto Christ College, Cambridge, who have from time to time provided ministers of scandalous life, and unsound doctrine, and have only allowed them about 30*l.* a year. Petitioners proceeded against their late minister, who was thereupon thrown out, and they obtained Mr. Griffith, an able and faithful teacher, and a man of godly life and conversation. The means allowed him are not more than 28*l.* per annum, without any dwelling-house, and petitioners are therefore likely to lose him, to their great discomfort. Pray that some additional means may be allowed to him out of the sequestered estates of the Dean and Chapter of Ely.

May 19. Petition of Marmaduke Darrell. The late Sir Samuel Darrell, petitioner's father, obtained a decree in Chancery against William Drury, respecting the manor of Hedgeley; after his death Drury, upon pretence that the decree had been unjustly obtained, and in order to delay its execution, presented a petition to their Lordships, which petitioner answered, and Drury has never since taken any proceedings thereupon. Prays that Drury may be ordered to proceed to a hearing within a short time, or that his petition may be dismissed. L. J., VII. 382.

May 19. Copy of preceding.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. Prays that certain money due to his late father as victualler of the Navy may be paid to petitioner for the payment of his father's debts. (Undated.)

May 19. Copy of preceding.

Annexed:—

1. Answer and petition of William Drury. Petitioner is blind and weak, and hath only an annuity of 40*l.*; his solicitor is just dead, and his witnesses far remote from hence, so he cannot come to a speedy hearing without great prejudice to his cause. Prays that the middle of Michaelmas term may be appointed for the hearing.

2. Affidavit of Ferdinando Clark to the same effect as preceding.

May 21. Petition of Edmund Staunton, Minister of Kingston-upon-Thames. The vicarage of Kingston, and the chapels annexed of Richmond, and Petersham, afford but poor maintenance to the minister; this is owing partly to the taxes, and free quarter, but chiefly to the impropriation of the parsonage in the hands of Mr. William Murray, of the bedchamber, which takes away all the great tithes. Petitioner is informed that the said impropriation is sequestered, and therefore prays that some better allowance may be made for the maintenance, and encouragement of the minister. L. J., VII. 385.

May 22. Letter from the States Ambassador to the Speaker of the House of Commons with reference to the restitution of certain ships, &c. (French).

Complain that Sir William Parsons and the other members of the Council in Ireland refuse to obey their Lordships' order of the 9th of September 1642. Pray that a warrant may be issued for the arrest of the said defendants, or in case they cannot be found, then that so much of their lands, goods, and chattels may be seized as will satisfy petitioners for their damages and costs.

May 23. Petition of the Committee of Common Council for supply of the cities of London and Westminster with fuel. Upon Lady Camden's petition representing that the cutting of timber in Lady Wootton's Park, near Canterbury, would deface the house and spoil the park, the Lords made order to stop the felling of trees there, but the trees marked for felling were decayed, and stood about a mile from the house, in a bottom. Petitioners pray that, on consideration of the misinformation given by her Ladyship, the order for stay of the felling may be taken off. L. J., VII. 388.

Has been engaged in the public service since the beginning of the war, yet cannot now walk with security, but is in danger of being arrested for a fine for an action of battery committed seven years ago, and for which he has already paid the plaintiff 100*l.*, only for cutting off his thumb. Is at present one of the officers reduced by order of the Parliament, but has a charge in the Scottish army, to which he is ordered to repair. May 24. Petition of Sarah Vincent, wife of John Vincent, minister. Upon petitioner's husband resigning the rectory of St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, in October last, their Lordships ordered the sequestrators to collect the arrears due to him, and to pay them to his assignees. The sequestrators have neglected the collection, and have now appointed an assignee to collect with an allowance of 20*l.* per annum. Prays that John Norbury, who is willing to undertake the duty, may be appointed to collect, and that the money which the sequestrators acknowledge to have received may be paid over to petitioner, who has come two hundred miles, and passed through many dangers to receive the arrears, her husband having been appointed by the Parliament to another cure in the Bishopric of Durham. [May.] Petition of John Charles. Petitioner was lately attached for beginning to stub a little wood called St. John's Wood, in Lambourne parish, in Essex. This wood before it came into petitioner's hands had been very ill felled and not fenced, whereby the deer and cattle have come into it and spoiled it, so that a great many of the stubs are dead, and the rest are never likely to be useful to the public, or profitable to petitioner, who was induced to stub it up on account of the great scarcity of firing in London. Prays for the discharge of himself and the poor man employed by him in the work, who is also attached without paying the great fees which are demanded, and that he may have license to proceed with the stubbing of the wood. See L. J., VII. 386.

She has daily paid over twenty shillings whilst she lived at Bourn for the Parliament service, besides billet and free quarters to sometimes ten, and at other times twenty, of the Parliament soldiers. Petitioner prays, on behalf of Mrs. Browne, that Fitchett may be ordered to repay the money owing to her with interest within some reasonable time, and in case he fails that she may have leave to take the benefit of the law against him.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for Fitchett's protection, referred to in preceding. 5 April 1644. L. J., VII. 15. June 3. Petition of John Nicolo de Franchi, one of the gentlemen of the State of Genoa. In 1636 Walter Stuart laded ten chests of Spanish reals on board a ship called the Victory, at Corunna, to bring them to England for petitioner's use, but when he arrived at Dover or in the Downs, instead of delivering them to the consignees, he converted them to his own use. Petitioner was consequently obliged to come to England to try and recover them; he sued him in the Admiralty Court, and obtained sentence against him, and again on appeal before the Delegates, and after that before the Council, when the King himself was present. Stuart was thereupon committed to the Marshalsea, but by indirect practices he managed to escape out of prison, so to defraud petitioner, who thereupon petitioned the House for redress, at the commencement of this Parliament, but his petition is still unheard in the hands of the clerk of the Parliaments in consequence of more urgent affairs. In answer to a petition of Stuart, petitioner prays that he may be ordered to give up the chests of reals, or their value. See L. J., VII. 356.

About four years since petitioner having lost 500*l.* by the Spaniards, presented a petition for relief, which, with Sir Henry Martin's report upon it, has been long in the hands of Mr. Browne, clerk of the Parliaments. During his absence on service his wife died, when some ill-affected persons, alleging that petitioner was also dead, took out letters of administration, and defrauded him of an estate worth about 150*l.* Petitioner is very poor, and has four small children dependent on him, and is likely to be imprisoned, and so ruined, if he cannot repay the money advanced for his ransom. June 20. Draft ordinance for preservation of timber and woods; repeals the ordinance of Oct. 1643, made for supplying London, and the suburbs, with wood for fuel in consequence of the surprisal of Newcastle, no cause now existing for the continuance of the ordinance under colour of which great damage is done. 1. Copy of preceding, with order thereon for Lord Carlisle to answer.

2. Answer of James Earl of Carlisle. Conceives that if Latham and the other creditors had in their petition mentioned an order of their Lordships of the 17th of March 1644-5, petitioner would not have been further troubled in the matter. Prays that this order may be confirmed. (Undated.)

3. Copy of order referred to. 17 Mar. 1644-5. L. J., VII. 276.

June 21. Paper from the Spanish Ambassador. It has always been the custom for all Ambassadors to be exempted from payments of all duties upon their household provisions, but this privilege was so unreasonably used in Spain that the King was obliged to withdraw all "dispenes," and to direct that the Ambassadors should receive a proportionate allowance in money, and directed his own Ambassadors abroad to decline all dispenses on receiving an allowance in money, that so no offence might be given to nations in amity with His Majesty. Formerly the farmers of customs on certificate from the Ambassador granted him bills of store for his household provisions, but of late these have been refused. He desires the House to exempt him from payment of any custom or excise for what shall be exported or imported for his own provision, as was done in the case of the Dutch Ambassadors extraordinary. June 26. Petition of Cornelius Burges, lecturer of Pauls, London. Complains that William Antrobous, a draper, pretending to have a lease, and being in possession of an outlet, parcel or appurtenance to the house late belonging to the Dean of St. Pauls, and now enjoyed by petitioner by virtue of an advance of Parliament, has stopped up all the lights to the principal cellar of the house, and is erecting a frame of building upon petitioners wall, and refuses to pay any rent. Petitioner being constantly employed in the service of Parliament in the Assembly cannot attend any law suits, or recover anything for want of the evidences, as Antrobous refuses to show his lease. June 26. Another draft.

June 26. Petition of Ralph Brownrigg, Bishop of Exeter. Has been under restraint for ten weeks, by order of the Committee of both Kingdoms. Prays to be discharged upon bail.

June 26. Petition of Colonel Thomas Midford of the county of Durham. Petitioner being ordered by the Committee of the county to arrest Crosier, a captain under the Earl of Newcastle, a delinquent and dangerous incendiary, endeavoured to take him, but he violently resisted, and being too strong for petitioner's soldier, petitioner was compelled to relieve the soldier with his drawn sword. Crosier refused to yield, and stood upon his defence, and in the dispute received a prick, and in three days died. The Mayor of Newcastle has now issued warrants to apprehend petitioner, and threatens to bring him to trial at common law, which tends to a great discouragement of his soldiers, who have laid down their arms until they see the event of this accident. Prays that the matter may be referred to the Committee, for Examinations, or to a Council of War.

June 27. List of servants, &c., to be put into Lady Haddington's pass for France, and draft order for the pass. L. J., VII. 458.

June 27. The remonstrance of Edward Broughton, Henry Stone, John Swynfen, Thomas Pudsey, and John Symcox, some of the Committee for the county of Stafford, and defendants in the cause of the Earl of Denbigh. They take the following exceptions to their Lordships' judgments in the matter:—1. That the witnesses were served to appear before a Committee of Lords and Commons, and were sworn to make true answers to the questions put to them by the House, or a Committee thereof, whereas they were examined only before Sir Edward Leech, who is not a member of either House of Parliament. 2. That three articles were added after the oath was exhibited to the witnesses. 3. That the examination being taken privately, they were deprived of the benefit of further examining the witnesses, and of knowledge how to examine witnesses in their defence; besides which they are informed that Sir Edward Leech in taking the examinations inclined to leave out such part of the depositions as made for them. Their last and main exception is that being commoners, and the House of Commons being possessed of this charge, they cannot answer before the Lords in this cause, actually depending in the House of Commons, without violating the privileges of that House. L. J., VII. 463.

June 27. Petition of John Walker, quarter-master to Sir Samuel Luke, Governor of the Garrison of Newport Pagnell, in the county of Buckingham. Has been arrested at the suit of Sir Arthur Smiths for a pretended debt. Prays for discharge. L. J., VII. 463.

June 28. Copy of Impeachment of Henry Earl of Stamford, and Henry Polton and Mathew Patsall, his servants, by the Commons, for a breach of their privileges and for an assault and other injuries done unto a member of their House. L. J., VII. 462. In extenso.

June 28. Draft letter from both Houses to the Earl of Leven to march with his army towards Worcester. L. J., VII. 464. In extenso.

June 30. Petition of William Antroubus of London, woollen draper. In obedience to an order made by their Lordships upon the petition of Dr. Cornelius Burges, petitioner forbears to proceed in the finishing of his building upon an outlet, which is used as part of his house, but which is pretended by the doctor to belong to the mansion house of the Dean of St. Pauls. This is a great prejudice to petitioner, whose shop is exposed to the danger of being robbed until the building is finished. Prays for a speedy hearing, or that the matter may be referred to the Committee for the sequestration of the revenues of the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls, of which Committee both Dr. Burges and petitioner are members. L. J., VII. 465.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the case.

2. Affidavit of Christopher Babb with reference to the service of the order. L. J., VII. 465.

3. Petition of John Crosse in answer to the complaint of Cable. Denies all the charges made against him, and prays to be dismissed from further attendance.

June 30. Complaint against Samuel Winne, and — Watts for forging protections in the names of the Earl of Northumberland and Mr. Corbett. L. J., VII. 466.

June 30. Petition of Colonel William Oglebie. Petitioner received a commission in October 1643 for the command of a regiment under the Earl of Warwick, and was shortly afterwards ordered to repair to the North to assist Lord Fairfax, for all which service he has received only one month's pay, and has disbursed the greatest part of his own money in buying horses, saddles, pistols, &c. for himself, and six officers who went with him. Lord Fairfax recommended him to the Committee for safety for a supply of money, upon which he waited upon the Committee for five or six months, but received no pay or satisfaction. He afterwards repaired to the Lord General's Army, where he remained from the 7th of November 1643 until the late reduction of the army, with seven able horses kept at his own charge, but as there was no regiment void for him to command the Lord General promised he should be paid as Reformado Colonel, and Captain of Horse. Prays that the auditor may be ordered to certify his arrears, in order that he may receive such part thereof as will in some measure satisfy his engagements, relieve his present wants, repair his losses, and transport him into his own country. L. J., VII. 466.

June 30. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel James Gordon. Petitioner, who served as Lieutenant-Colonel of Dragoons under the Earl of Manchester, from the 9th of January 1643–4 until the reduction, when he was excluded, lately moved that his accounts should be audited, in order that he might receive satisfaction for his arrears, as other Scotch officers. The House of Commons ordered that Mr. Tate (one of the members) should cause petitioner's accounts to be audited, and he gave petitioner an order upon the late Treasurers for the association, who refused to audit his accounts unless he would pass under the notion of a Reformado, which is contrary to his commission, and the intention of the Earl of Manchester. Prays that the auditors may be ordered forthwith to audit his accounts. L. J., VII. 466.

June 30. Petition of Thomas Shemons, one of the keepers of the Great Park of Windsor. In the beginning of March last James Joyce, and other troopers, broke into the Great Park with greyhounds, pistols, guns, and other weapons of war, and killed four deer. Petitioner's son and servants coming to them to know by what authority they came, the troopers fired several shots at them, and killed petitioner's son; for this they were all apprehended, with the exception of Richard Wilson, and committed by warrant from the Earl of Essex to Windsor Castle, from which two have escaped, but the others are there remaining. Upon Sir Thomas Fairfax coming to Windsor, petitioner hoped to have justice done upon the murderers of his son, but Sir Thomas did not think fit to meddle in the matter, because the fact was committed before the date of his commission. Petitioner cannot proceed against the murderers by indictment, because there have been no assizes or quarter sessions held in the county since the murder. Wilson and Hercules Trew threaten petitioner with death for prosecuting the malefactors. Pray that those already apprehended may be kept in safe custody until they receive a legal trial, and that Wilson may be committed to Windsor Castle in like manner. L. J., VII. 466.

1. Affidavit of Thomas Shemons. 19 June 1645. L. J., VII. 466. In extenso.

2. Letter from Thomas Shemons to Francis Young, at Kensington. A messenger, John Checklye, came last night to Windsor to say that there were some two hundred soldiers billeted about Watford, and that if Mr. Tanslowe himself, and the Moore Park keepers did not send a brace of bucks each to his house before Tuesday, they would come on Wednesday morning and pull up the pales and kill the deer, as they have Lord Capell's. Checklye, the veriest rogue in the country, is the man who means to bring the soldiers. Desires that his Lordship may be informed and a speedy course taken, for the rogues, Prays that Tomlinson may be sent for to answer. L. J., VII. 598.

The following papers, dated in June and July, relate to the charge made by Lord Savile against Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitelock—that they held correspondence with the King's party at Oxford. On the 7th of June a letter from Lord Digby* to Col. Legge, Governor of Oxford, which had been intercepted by Col. Massie, was read in the House.

This letter hinted at a design and propositions in a manner likely to raise suspicion. On the 10th of June a report was spread upon the Exchange by Mr. Cranford, minister of St. Christopher's, one of the neighbouring churches, that some of the Committee of both Kingdoms had assumed to themselves the power of a sub-committee, and had for some time past been treating secretly with the King to make peace for themselves, and deliver up the Parliament's forts, castles, and garisons; and that a Committee of Lords and Commons had been appointed to examine into the matter, and that divers of them were of the former sub-committee that treated with the King.† This coming to the knowledge of the House, the matter was referred to a committee that had already been appointed to consider Lord Digby's letter.

The same day (June 11th) Mr. Hollis informed the House that Lord Savile reported that he had received letters from Oxford, wherein a member is charged with holding correspondence with Lord Digby, and this matter was also referred to the same Committee.

From the examinations taken it appeared that Lord Savile, after his return from Oxford, had intimated to Lord Saye and Sele, that he knew that there were many at Oxford who were most discontented at the failure of the treaty, and hinted that Goring was ready to come over with the Horse under his command, and that Col. Legge might be induced to deliver up Oxford.

Lord Savile further desired some authority for continuing to hold communication with Oxford in the interest of Parliament. Lord Saye and Sele hereupon procured the appointment of himself, Mr. Solicitor St. John, and Mr. Crew, as a sub-committee from the Committee of both Kingdoms, with power to treat for the delivery up of towns, forts, &c. to the Parliament, for which there was ample precedent. This sub-committee, to which the Lord Chancellor of Scotland, or in his absence Lord Warriston, was subsequently added, never formally met. Lord Savile only professed to have received one letter in cipher from Oxford, which he deciphered in Lady Temple's presence, in which it was said that Hollis was the man who held correspondence with Oxford. No further information could be obtained at the time in the matter, Lord Savile refusing to name the person from whom he received the letter. On the 12th of June Lord Warriston acquainted the Committee of both Kingdoms, and on the 14th Lord Saye and Sele acquainted the House with all they knew in the matter.‡ On the 2nd of July Lord Savile sent a letter to Mr. Gurdon, a member of the House of Commons, containing a paper in which he accused Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitelock of holding correspondence with the King's party whilst engaged in negotiations for peace at Oxford in November 1644.§

On that occasion they had a long conversation with the King at the Earl of Lindsey's lodging, where Lord Savile happened to be, and were asked by the King what answer he should give to the propositions, and at the King's request retired alone into another room and wrote a paper, which they left on the table for the King to read. Out of this, no doubt, Lord Savile hoped to ground a charge which would obtain him favour with at least one party amongst the followers of the Parliament.

After giving an account of these proceedings at Oxford, Whitelock says:¶ “This being the truth of those secret and private passages for which Hollis and I were afterwards accused in Parliament by the Lord Savile, no indifferent person can justly censure us for any unfaithfulness, or the least breach of our trust to the Parliament whose servants we then were. And this may be answered for us, that what we did therein was in compassion to our bleeding, distressed country, and for the effecting of that which was universally longed for, the settlement of a just and happy peace. But this was not imparted by us to our fellow-commissioners, nor could all the examinations at committees and in the House of Commons get it out of us.”

Mr. Hollis defended himself at the time that Lord Savile's letter to Mr. Gordon was read; and Whitelock, who was not then in the House, did so two days later; and after some further examinations the House of Commons, on the 21st July,¶ declared their opinion that Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitelock had no ill intention in their proceedings at Oxford, and that, as concerned them, the proceedings should be finally laid aside, at the same time giving them leave to prosecute Lord Savile for repuration if they saw cause.

With the exception of the last three papers are all numbered, and have therefore been preserved in their original order.

Lord Savile was committed to the Tower, where, notwithstanding many applications from him for release on account of ill-health, he remained till the month of May 1646, when his resolution gave way, and he made a full confession to the House of all he knew in the matter, stating that the letter from Oxford accusing Hollis was written by the Duchess of Buckingham. 19. "Lord Savile's paper, received from him 17 June 1645." This paper is written and signed by Lord Savile. He states that when he came from Oxford he was much grieved at the breach of the treaty, and so were all his friends whom he left behind there, who gave him to understand that if certain reasonable propositions were offered by Parliament, and they could not procure the acceptance of such propositions by the King, that they also would come over to Parliament. Lord Newport especially commissioned Lord Savile to acquaint Lord Saye and Sele about Goring and Legg, which he did; and the matter was left in Lord Saye and Sele's hands. Lord Savile confesses that in pursuance of his plan he treated with N[icholas], and used all means that certain propositions might be presented to the King, and the well affected be thereby persuaded to act; and that he also tried to find out who held secret correspondence with Oxford. With regard to 10,000*l.* being offered to those men Lord Savile never thought it would have much effect, as the chief motive of those men was the peace and safety of the kingdom. Lord Savile denies that his communications with the King's party at Oxford had ever any other object than those mentioned above, and maintains that all means of communication with this object were justifiable. Concerning the letter reflecting upon Mr. Hollis, Lord Savile can tell nothing more than he has already said, and cannot, after a scrutiny with his heart, discover that the naming the person who sent the letter will do any good to Mr. Hollis, or in any way tend to clear up the matter; and as he felt bound in honour to discover the letter, so he feels bound not to reveal the name of the sender.

1. Printed copy of petition of Sir Richard Strode, and Dame Fairfax, the late wife of Sir William Fairfax, to the Lords and Commons. Sir W.

Fairfax being lately slain in doing acceptable service for the Parliament, needs no particular expressions to procure compassion towards his children. Petitioner Strode has for many years endured much tyranny and oppression for opposing all ship-money projects, and is thereby damaged above 1,000*l.*, besides his loan money, and the pay due to him as Scout-Master. Petitioners, who are now reduced to the greatest extremities, pray that one moiety of all delinquents' estates, which they may present and prove before the Committee, may be enjoyed by each of them respectively, until they are fully recompensed for their particular arrears and damages.

July 2. Petition of Edward Holt, servant to the Right Honourable the Earl of Pembroke. Complains that Richard Draper caused him to be arrested by Michell, a Sheriff's Bailiff, within the liberty of the Earl, notwithstanding petitioner showed a warrant under the Earl's hand, which Michell much slighted. July 2. Petition of Wm. Stephens against Joseph Peeters, and others. By order of the 26th of March 1644 the sequestrated rents of Sutton Marsh, Lincolnshire, were directed to be paid to the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery till it should be decided by law to whom they belonged; but the tenants not only refuse, with threatening words, to pay their rents to petitioner (the Earl's servant), but intend, being foreigners, after they have got in this summer's crops, to leave the county with large arrears of rent in their hands. Petitioner prays that the tenants who refuse to pay their rents may be committed to custody, and that the crops now standing may be seized in part payment of the rents, with the assistance of the Militia and military forces of the Associated Counties. See L. J., VI. 486, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Note that Mr. Welby is ready to account for 1,100*l.* of the rents.
2. Note of proceedings in the case of Lord Herbert and others against the Duke of Richmond and others for a proportion of Sutton Marsh.
3. Notice from Wm. Stephens, Deputy of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, to the tenants to pay their rents to him at his Chamber in Elm Court, Middle Temple. 23 June 1645.
4. Affidavit of William Brown, that it is generally reported that the tenants of the Marsh, many of them Dutchmen, intend to get in their crops, and then leave the county. 27 June 1645.
5. Affidavit of Wm. Wise, that Joseph Peeters has been brought up by writ of Habeas Corpus to Westminster, but has not been brought into court to be delivered to the Marshal, and on another writ being taken out, the Sheriff said that Peeters was in the bailiff's custody, and that deponent having warrant to distrain for the rent of Peeters and others, the tenants threatened to knock his brains out if he came on their lands. 27 June 1645.

July 3. Petition of William Harborne, minister. In January last, upon the death of Dr. Bucknell, their Lordships granted the rectory of Chevening, Kent, to petitioner, who has since supplied the place, but in consequence of the order for his appointment, which has been twice sent down to the Commons for their concurrence, not having been yet read in that House, petitioner has hitherto received none of the profits of the rectory.

July 3. Petition of Purbecke Temple, Major in Colonel Fiennes' regiment. Petitioner, who has faithfully served the Parliament ever since Kenton [Kineton] Field happened to be quartered a short time since at Hill Deverill, in the county of Wilts, lying in the house of Mrs. Margaret Giles, where the enemy quartered the night before. Four of the horses of the troopers under petitioner's command being much wearied in the service, Mrs. Giles, having four horses which she might spare upon exchange, upon a warrant from Colonel Fiennes and Lieutenant-General Cromwell, willingly exchanged horses with the troopers. Petitioner, at Mrs. Giles' desire, gave her a note under his hand testifying this exchange, and the quarter taken for him and his company for one night, and she has now, by the procurement of George Ludlowe, caused petitioner to be arrested upon an action for 200*l.* damages, for no other cause than as above, and out of purpose maliciously to disgrace petitioner. Prays that Mrs. Giles and Ludlowe may be sent for, and that petitioner may have the privilege of a soldier, and upon examination receive reparation. L. J., VII. 474.

Annexed:—

July 4. Petition of Sir John Baker in answer to two petitions, one in the name of Sir Thomas Walsingham and Robert Multon, and the other in the name of Sir Thomas Walsingham and Edward Polhill. July 5. Answer of Sir Arthur Smithes to the petition of John Walker. After three years' legal proceedings petitioner obtained judgment against Walker for a debt, and Walker has now petitioned their Lordships for relief, pretending himself to be a prisoner in the Fleet upon a judgment obtained against him by petitioner by undue course. Prays leave to proceed against Walker for recovery of his debt in due course of law. See L. J., VII. 463.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Warden of the Fleet, that Walker is not a prisoner there in execution at the suit of Sir Arthur Smithes. 4 July 1645.

July 5. Petition of Colonel Whitecote, Governor of Windsor Castle, to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London. Petitioner has reported the sad and desperate condition of the garrison of Windsor to the Committee of both Kingdoms, who have made an order for their relief, but in consequence of Sir William Waller, who should make the report of the Committee to the House of Commons, being out of town, their vote has not been confirmed. Prays the City to move the House of Commons to furnish him with a present supply of money for the garrison. C. J., IV. 197.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Colonel Whitecote as to the condition of the garrison. Instead of having fifty horse and four hundred soldiers, with officers and gunners, with constant pay, as voted by the Committee of both Kingdoms, there are now only two hundred soldiers, part of them very aged and unserviceable, and part of them the "rifle racks" of the country, that know not how else to live, and the willing and well-affected part are so disenabled and in such necessity for want of pay that they offer to desert the service. There are only sixty soldiers to maintain the garrison every night; they are divided into six courts of guard, besides the line about the town, "Tarras" walk, and batteries. All this encourages the ill-affected in Windsor town and Eton, who are plotting at mischief, there having been whisperings of private invitations given to the enemy to come in; some townsmen have been so bold as to blurt out that they are as strong as the garrison and could master it, and there is notice of private store of arms kept by them contrary to the commands given. There is a great want of match, and also of 400*l.* in ready money, without which Colonel Whitecote expects upon his return a total mutiny and desertion.

2. Draft order for payment of [400*l.*] to Colonel Whitecote for the garrison at Windsor. C. J., IV. 197.

July 8. Draft ordinance appointing Thomas Jackson preacher of God's Word in the Cathedral Church of St. Peter's, Gloucester. L. J., VII. 489. In extenso.

July 8. Letter from Joseph Hunscoote to Mr. Baker. Prays him to inform the Lords that the Wardens of the Stationers, having received the warrant for stop of printing the letters taken from His Majesty, repaired to all the printers, and showed them the warrant; notwithstanding this Peter Cole, John Field, and James Mesole continue printing them.

July 9. Petition of Sir Robert Banaster. Hears that he has been ordered to answer a petition preferred against him by Lord Maynard, is unable to travel on account of his age and sickness, and has not yet seen the petition. Prays that he may have sight thereof, and convenient time given him to answer. L. J., VII. 489.

Annexed:—

1. List of witnesses on behalf of Lord Maynard.

July 9. Petition of Captain Blyth. Petitioner, after doing good service to Parliament, was attending the Committee for Reduced Officers to get his accounts audited, his arrears amounting to more than 400*l.*, when he was arrested for a pretended debt at the suit of Edward Harwick, in whose house he was lodging, and imprisoned in Wood Street Compter, though known to be a commander. Prays to be delivered out of prison, as he is quite ready to pay his debts as soon as he can. L. J., VII. 490.

July 11. Petition of the Committee for the Militia of the Tower Hamlets on the behalf of Abraham Woodroffe. Woodroffe, as Sergeant-Major of Colonel Zachary's regiment of the trained bands of the Tower Hamlets, did service in the West last summer, under Sir Wm. Waller, but since his return he has been arrested as security for a debt of John Good, and his creditors will accept no reasonable composition. Petitioners pray that as the trained bands have been out on service so long, and as they have no one so fit as Woodroffe for his place, he may be set at liberty for the good and safety of the Hamlets. See L. J., VII. 503.

Petitioner implores leave to proceed against Temple, who sold some of the goods and converted them to his own use. Petitioner, whilst attending this business before the House, was assaulted in the Painted Chamber by Temple, and struck so violently that he could hardly keep his feet. Craves such repair as the House thinks meet, or otherwise to permit him to take such other course therein as may be fit for a gentleman so abused in so honourable a place. L. J., VII. 494.

July 14. Draft ordinance for the enabling of the Commissioners of the Navy to prepare ships and perform divers other things in the affairs of the Admiralty and the Navy. This ordinance passed the House of Lords, and was sent to the Commons on the 6th of August, but does not appear to have been proceeded with in that House. L. J., VII., 496, 527.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.

July 15. Draft order for hearing counsel in the cause between the Earl of Suffolk and Sir R. Hitcham's trustees. L. J., VII. 496.

July 15. Report from the Committee of Lords and Commons for receiving propositions for Ireland, that authority may be given them to send away the soldiers already enlisted out of the prisoners for the service of Munster, and also to write to Sir Thomas Fairfax to know what prisoners out of those now taken in the West may be fit for the same service.

July 15. Petition of Thomas Turner, mariner. His suit against Cooper and Wilgrice has depended more than four years, during which time petitioner has spent all his means, and has nothing left to fee counsel; his wife is lately dead, to his great grief, and he has four small children dependent upon him, whilst he is himself too ill for service at sea. Prays that he may have the 20*l.* deposited in the hands of the Clerk of the House by the defendants for breach of orders.

July 16. Petition of Purbeck Temple. He denies that he is in any way guilty of the charges brought against him of having injured Mrs. Ludlowe and Mrs. Giles, but confesses to have struck Mr. George Ludlowe, under great provocation, and in ignorance of the high offence to the House; he has freely adventured his life in the just cause of Parliament, and is ready to do so again; is heartily sorry for his error and crime, and most humbly craves the mercy and forgiveness of the House. L. J., VII. 497.

July 16. Letter from Lord Grey of Warke, Speaker of the House of Peers, pro tempore, thanking Sir Thomas Fairfax for relieving Taunton, and for following up his success. See L. J., VII. 496.

July 18. Answer of the master and officers of the Court of Wards concerning an appeal of Mary Stapleton from a decree of that court. L. J., VII. 502. In extenso.

July 18. Petition of John Swynfen, one of the committee of Stafford, in answer to a petition of Sir Edward Leech, a Master in Chancery, to whom the examination of the witnesses in the case of the Earl of Denbigh against the Committee of the county of Stafford was referred. So far as the defendants know, it is not according to precedent to examine witnesses privately, and in saying, that Sir Edward left out parts of the depositions, which made for the defendants, they spoke upon the authority of persons of known credit. See L. J., VII. 475.

[July 18.] Petition of Captain John Collingwood, one of the captains of foot belonging to Aylesbury garrison, to the Committee for the county of Bucks. Petitioner was taken from the garrison of Aylesbury to do service under Major-General Browne, and was afterwards sent with his two hundred foot to Abingdon, where he has now been for five weeks, and has had no pay for himself or his men since leaving Aylesbury, and cannot, being in garrison, live at free quarters like the horse; as he has supplied his men as long as he could from his own purse and credit, and now, though old soldiers and well experienced, they must be disbanded, unless provided for. Prays that they may have pay from the county. Noted by the committee, that by reason of the excessive free quarters and levies by the Parliament's army, and the plundering incursions of the enemy, they cannot pay half the charges of the forces of the county, and consequently advise the petitioner to apply speedily to Parliament. See C. J., IV. 211.

July 19. Petition of Captain John Treise. Petitioner, who has command of a company of foot at Plymouth, was lately convened before a Council of War there, from which he appealed to Parliament. Prays that the charge against him may be brought in by a certain day, or else dismissed. L. J., VII. 502. In extenso.

July 19. Order upon preceding, for the prosecutors to bring in the charge.

July 19. Petition of Elizabeth Countess of Peterborough. She has lost her husband in the wars, and is unable to pay for his funeral, as a debenture for 736*l.* from the House of Commons for his arrears is unpaid, while administration of his estate is taken out by a stranger. She has, notwithstanding, been assessed at 1,000*l.*, which forces her to appeal to the House of Lords that she may be assessed only by them, and that some part of her debenture may be accepted by way of abatement. L. J., VII. 503.

July 21. Draft order for the Lords who are members of the Committee at Haberdashers' Hall to give account of their grounds for assessing the Countess of Peterborough. L. J., VII. 503. In extenso.

July 21. Petition of John Griffith, praying that he may have liberty to be bailed for his health's sake. L. J., VII. 504.

July 23. Petition of the distressed inhabitants of Leighton-Buzzard, Bedfordshire. By a fire which happened on the 7th of March last, great damage was done to buildings and property in the town, amounting to 14,368*l.* 17*s.* Petitioners, who have been forward in all payments for Parliament, and have in consequence been mercilessly plundered by the enemy, pray that the House will grant them a collection in London and elsewhere for their relief. L. J., VII. 504.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Justices of the Peace of Bedfordshire in support of preceding.

July 23. Draft order for payment of 10,000*l.* for the forces of the Northern Association. L. J., VII. 505. In extenso.

[July 24.] Petition of Sir John Barrington. Petitioner's late father, Sir Thomas Barrington, for the good of the kingdom and the promulgation of the Gospel of Christ, became an adventurer, with many peers and others, to the island of Katharina, otherwise Providence, and not only spent money of his own, but became bound with the other adventurers for other large sums. The island, by the hard and undue dealing of those who then ruled the affairs of the kingdom, was exposed to the rapine of the public enemy, by which the adventurers were much prejudiced; petitioner's father is dead, and he is sued not only for his father's debts, but for those of the adventurers, while the other adventurers are protected by privilege of Parliament. He prays to be protected from the creditors of the Company, until such time as they are satisfied by the joint assistance of those from whom the debts are due. An ordinance concerning Sir John Barrington was brought in this day. L. J., VII. 506.

July 24. Petition of the four waiters of the House. They have, ever since the beginning of this Parliament, now almost five years, attended the service of the House, and faithfully discharged their duties, but have received neither fee nor salary, either from the House or the Gentleman Usher. They have in consequence become very poor, and much indebted, and pray that they may receive some present allowance. L. J., VII. 506.

July 24. Draft order appointing a Committee to consider the case.

July 24. Draft order for Sir Thomas Fairfax to be Governor of Pomfret Castle. L. J., VII. 507.

stairs. The causeway going down from the stairs is so much out of repair that petitioners cannot conveniently land a fare at low water, or perform the duties of their place for their Lordships. Pray that the causeway may be surveyed and repaired. L. J., VII. 508. In extenso.

July 25. Draft proclamation for all officers belonging to the army under Sir Thomas Fairfax to repair to Reading. L. J., VII. 509.

July 25. Petition of Alexander Thayne, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. The little park of Windsor anciently belonged to petitioner's office, and about eighteen years ago was annexed to it by a chapter of the Knights of the Garter. The office of Black Rod was granted to Mr. Maxwell and petitioner for their joint lives, and the life of the longer liver, and the park was enjoyed with it. At Michaelmas 1642 petitioner, by agreement with Mr. Maxwell, took the sole execution of the place, and had possession of the park; but that winter the army quartered there, and the soldiers put petitioner's servants out of the lodge, destroyed the deer, burnt the pales, and spent petitioner's hay worth 200*l.*, besides other damage. Upon that distraction, Colonel Venn took possession of the park and lodge, and procured an order from the Committee of the revenue by which he keeps petitioner out of the profits of the park. Petitioner has thus lost much, and the rest of his estate being in the West, he can have no benefit from it, and is therefore unable to support himself in his office. Prays to be restored to possession of the park, with reparation for damages, and mesne profits. L. J., VII. 509.

July 25. Draft order for hearing the cause between Lord Maynard and Sir Robert Banastre.

July 26. Copy of preceding.

July 28. Petition of four score poor men, pensioners in Sutton's Hospital in the Charter House. Their weekly allowance of 4*s.* 5*d.*, and their quarterly stipends of 35*s.* 2*d.*, used to be regularly paid, to their great comfort, but by reason of the seat of war being in divers counties, whence most part of the revenues of the hospital are derived, and Parliament being compelled to impose taxes and assessments on other lands of the hospital, the governors have been obliged to reduce the weekly allowance to 4*s.* 4*d.*, and the quarterly stipend to 20*s.* They pray that the taxes imposed upon the hospital lands may be taken off, as petitioners are most of them aged, blind, or decrepid; if not, their allowance will be further shortened, and their gray hairs brought in sorrow to the grave. L. J., VII. 513.

Petitioner prays that Richard

[July 31.] Petition of Mongo Moody. Captain Thomas Shafto, Governor of Holy Island, deputed petitioner to defend Fern Island, where petitioner was then living. Whilst watching in his fishing boat or coble, between eight and nine o'clock on the night of the 8th of November 1643, he perceived eight men seizing his goods on the land, and carrying them away to their boats, and when he asked them why they were so doing, and by whose authority, they gave him no answer, but pursued him, intending to take him, his men, and boat; upon which in self defence, and for the safety of the island, he shot at them with small shot, and killed two of the assailants, who turned out afterwards to be Major Cresters's men, then in arms against the Parliament. The Major has since come over to the Parliament, and has procured a warrant to apprehend petitioner, intending to try him at the assizes for killing the two men. Petitioner, who was acting only in pursuance of his commission and in defence of the island, prays to be tried by a Council of War, to the end he may return to his habitation and live in peace and safety. See C. J., IV. 225.

L. J., VII. 523. In extenso.

Aug. 4. Petition and remonstrance of Dominiq Petit and others. They complain that Leonard Rednes, and James Gardiner, instead of carrying out an agreement of the 3rd Dec. 1644, by which they had been hired as masters of two ships to be employed in raising a wreck near Harwich, by means of an invention of petitioners, have only interrupted them, breaking part of a wheel, and destroying four cables by their delays, and yet claim wages. Petitioners pray for redress, and that masters and seamen, nominated by Captain Hunter, Governor of Harwich, may be put in the places of Rednes and Gardiner. L. J., VII. 523.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of Dominiq Petit and others. It is impossible to make any direct answer to the petition of Leonard Rednes and James Gardiner, their charges against petitioners being too general. Pray that an order may be made for both parties to make their appearance each to other in one and the same court, for the settlement of the matter. (Undated.)

2. Another petition similar to preceding. (Undated.)

3. Copy of letter from Captain Hunter, at Harwich, [to the Speaker of the House of Lords]. Rednes and Gardiner will neither give up the engines of Petit and his partners, nor come to any reasonable agreement for working them. 26 May 1645.

7. Copy of acknowledgment by Rednes and Gardiner of the terms of the agreement made between them, and Petit and his partners. 10 June.

8. Examinations of masters of ships and others, taken before Captain Hunter, stating that Rednes and Gardiner, when they put to sea to the wreck, refused, for some days of fair weather, to work, and afterwards used uselessly small anchors and cables, and then sent their men to demand ready money from Petit; and, further, allowed a cable belonging to Petit to become rotten by neglect; jeered at him when it broke, and thwarted him in every way. 22 July.

9. Copy of letter from Captain Hunter, at Harwich [to the Speaker of the House of Lords]. He has done all he could to assist Petit and his partners, but seven days' such fair weather as could be desired have been lost by the cross and thwart conduct of the two masters. 24 July.

10. Another copy.

11. Letter from Captain Hunter [to the House of Lords]. Notwithstanding the order of the House, the masters of the ships refuse to deliver the engines to Mr. Petit, who desires to remove them out of the two ships, and lay them on shore in a dry house for their better preservation. Prays that a warrant may be issued for taking out the engines, and that the masters may be punished for their disobedience, as an example to others. 18 Sept. 1645.

12. Copy of preceding.

Aug. 4. Petition of Leonard Rednes and James Gardiner. They complain that Petit and his partners, after engaging petitioners and their ships, have not fulfilled their covenants, and when largely indebted to petitioners gave over their invention, and, to save themselves from their creditors, obtained a protection, so that petitioners have no remedy at law. They pray that their claims against Petit and his partners may be satisfied, or the whole matter referred to gentlemen acquainted with sea affairs for determination. L. J., VII. 523.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Rednes and Gardiner. Pray their Lordships to hear their cause against Dominique Petit and the other Frenchmen with respect to the hire of petitioner's ships. (Undated.)

They have since sold the ships to another, telling petitioner to get his money,

Her husband was sequestered by order of the House in May 1643, since which time she has received no allowance; her husband has no means but a house and a little land, not worth in all 20l. per annum; she and her family are now sheltered in the house, but she receives nothing from the land, which is untenanted, and she has been forced to sell her goods, even to her bedding, to defray taxes and assessments, and buy food. Though ordered to be discharged, they are still detained in custody for fees to the Clerk, Gentleman Usher, and others, amounting to about 170l. Petitioners are only poor countrymen, and could never pay such a sum if they were kept in prison all their lives, while imprisonment and suits about the Common and Forest have cost Phillips more than 600l. since its disafforestation and enclosing.

In 1641 the House ordered that her husband should allow her 50*l.* per annum, secured in the hands of trustees; this has been duly paid, but her husband comes and reviles her at her house, and threatens to take away her cattle and goods, so that she is in continual fear, and void of all comfort or hope of redress, except from their Lordships, from whom she prays for protection. L. J., VII. 537.

Aug. 15. Petition of Captain Thomas Awdeley, now prisoner in the Gatehouse. Is heartily sorry to have given the House cause to commit him. Will strive never to give a shadow of cause again, and prays the House to remit his fault and release him from "his sad insurance sans fees," as it is publicly known that he hath nothing but his liberty to support himself, his wife, and children. Noted.—The printer of Britannicus hath a license from my Lord General for the printing thereof. Awdeley was committed for licensing a number of Britannicus containing a passage scandalous to the King. L. J., VII. 525, 539.

Prays the House to give order for his enlargement.

Aug. 15. Answer of Nicholas Hawes to the petition of Anne Hawes, widow, and the Mayor and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, Governors of Christ's Hospital, respecting the title to certain lands in Kent.

Aug. 15. Answer of the Committee of the Militia of the City of London why they have not paid the waggoners employed by them the full sum due to them. They have paid the waggoners of Sir James Harrington's brigade one moiety of their pay, that is, 1*s.* 3*d.* per day for each horse, which they think a competent allowance, as their horses were very poor, and drew but half loads, and had much free quarter; besides, the rest of the money intended for their pay has by both Houses been voted for the payment of the City forces at Abingdon, and has been so disposed of. With regard to the forces that went to Petworth, Parliament undertook to pay them; with regard to those that went to Cornwall, the Committee have paid them as far as 20,000*l.* would extend, and money has been issued to that amount. The Committee conceive themselves no further bound to pay the waggoners of these or other expeditions unless Parliament provide them with the means of so doing. This answer was read in the House of Commons on the 23rd of August, when the House was not satisfied, and directed the Committee to pay Sir James Harrington's waggoners in full. See C. J., IV. 250.

J., VII. 546. In extenso.

Ptolemy Tollemache, by falsehood and combination with Sir Henry Felton and others, obtained administration of Sir William's estate, entered his house at Ipswich, and got possession of his deeds and writings, but upon complaint to the House the administration was revoked and warrant issued for his apprehension, but he so lurks in secret places that the messenger cannot find him; Sir Henry Felton, pretending to have found a will in his favour, keeps possession of Sir William's house and all his papers, and has taken out extents upon his lands for debts. Pray that all the parties may be summoned to show cause why petitioners should not have possession of the evidences of their title.

We sent a ticket for 400*l.* to the Earl of Thanet towards the 18,000*l.* ordered to be raised in the county for our brethren of Scotland, not supposing him to be a member of the House, as he was sequestered for delinquency. We now perceive by the order of the House that he is to enjoy the privileges of the House of Peers, sitting and voting only excepted; we, therefore, desire that he may be rated at the sum we have put upon him, otherwise we cannot bear so great a burthen, as Romney Marsh lies in a lathe in which not many, if any, gentlemen inhabit. L. J., VII. 565.

Sept. 2. Letter from John Boys, Governor of Dover Castle, to Sir Henry Heyman. The garrison is in sad condition for want of pay, which is fifty weeks in arrear, and if the soldiers had not been of more than ordinary good temper it would have been impossible to keep them quiet so long. I have engaged myself so far for them to the brewers and bakers that neither I nor they can be trusted any longer. One of the soldiers, who has been two months imprisoned for his mutinous words, did not stick to say that if they were not suddenly paid they would surrender the Castle to those that would pay them again and again, and that the major part would join with him. It is no small grief to hear their daily complaints. Nothing could oblige me more than that you would move the House of Commons for payment of the arrears. C. J., IV. 271.

Her husband was sequestered from the rectory of Lambourne, Essex, about two years ago, and she cannot provide subsistence for herself and children but by thrusting herself upon the charity of her friends, while the Committee for Sequestrations refuse to relieve her without a reference from the House. She prays to be allowed a fifth part of the rectory for her maintenance. L. J., VII. 569.

The government of the college is by the statutes placed in the hands of the Master and eight seniors, one of whom is to be Vice-Master; but now the affairs of the College are much retarded, as six of the eight have either been ejected, or have withdrawn themselves, and Mr. Barton, the Vice-Master, is dead. They pray that Dr. Robert Metcalfe, of Trinity College, and Hebrew Professor in the University, may be put into one of the senior fellowships, void by ejection; and that Dr. Pratt, Dr. of Physic, who commenced of Emmanuel College last year with great approbation, may be put into the Physic Fellowship in Trinity College, and that both may be enabled to exercise the duties and enjoy the privileges of seniors. She and her family are in extreme distress; she desires that some part of her husband's arrears may be paid her, to enable her to return to her native country, Poland, leaving her dear husband to the Providence of the Almighty, and Parliament's pious employments. Noted,—Read, and nothing done upon it. C. J., IV. 266.

Sept. 9. Draft ordinance concerning the revenues of the Northern Counties, and the Association, directing the Committee of the 'several counties to deliver duplicates of their assessments to the receivers, and also that no further assessments shall be imposed upon the revenues of the King, Queen, or Prince, by any Committee after the 1st of December next. L. J., VII. 574.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of Nicholas Loftus to preceding. Whilst Paymaster of the old Army in Ireland, he was persuaded by Sir Frederick Hamilton to accept some bills of exchange, to be satisfied out of Sir Frederick's future pay, but the breaking out of the rebellion deprived them of their estates and left them no means to pay the bills; for which, however, they are ready to give all the security they can by bond till better times; but Sir Frederick is in Scotland, and cannot, therefore, immediately join in the bonds. Petitioner prays that his protection may be continued to him. Sept. 15.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Robert Metcalfe, Dr. of Divinity. Petitioner has been Public Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge for twenty years, and now, on account of age and infirmity, is desirous of relinquishing his lecture, and becoming Fellow of Trinity College, as provided by the statutes. The master and seniors of the College, after putting petitioner to great expense, agreed that he ought to be admitted a fellow; but although all of them except one are his juniors, they refuse to admit him to that seniority, which is his right by statute, but would have him, who is above sixty years of age, junior to all the fellows, some of whom are not much above twenty. Prays to be admitted fellow in his seniority according to statute.

Sept. 11. Petition and reply of Ann Hawes, widow, and of the Mayor, and Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, Governors of Christ's Hospital, to the answer of Nicholas Hawes. The lands of the wards lie wholly in the King's quarters, and a great part of the petitioners' lands also, yet in the King's name 500*l.* is demanded for composition for the wardship by process out of the Court of Wards, which the Sheriff of Middlesex is ready to execute. Prays that his goods and cattle may be restored. L. J., VII. 579.

L. J., VII. 588.

Sept. 20. Petition of Charles Baron de la Warr. His estate in the county of Southampton has sustained much damage by the quartering of both armies upon his tenants, and the cutting down of his woods by the soldiers, and now it is intended to make his house at Whorwell, Hampshire, into a garrison, contrary to the order for protection of Peers' houses, which is likely to spoil the house, and be of little advantage to the State, by reason of the hills which adjoin it. Prays for protection. L. J., VII. 588.

Sept. 20. Draft order for settling the accounts of James Lawrence to whom Parliament is largely indebted. L. J., VII. 590. In extenso.

Sept. 23. Petition of Sence Wheatley, widow of Thomas Wheatley, late citizen and apothecary of London. Petitioner's husband left her by will 600*l.* besides her thirds, to which she is entitled by the custom of the city; but Nathaniel Deards and Francis Bownest, the executors, have thrust her out of the house and shop, and only given her 700*l.*, 400*l.* in money and the rest in her own goods, on pretence that her husband's debts were great, and his ventures uncertain, though the property has been sworn worth near 12,000*l.* Prays that her case may be referred to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, with power to summon and examine all parties. L. J., VII. 591.

Sept. 23. Petition of George Geldorpe, merchant, stranger. Petitioner has for twenty-two years past lived inoffensively in London and Westminster, yet because he is a Roman Catholic he has been ordered by the Committee at the Savoy to depart out of the lines of communication. He has always obeyed the ordinances of Parliament, and never held communication with any of the King's party throughout this unnatural war. He was born a subject of the King of Spain, and prays that he may enjoy the privileges of a merchant stranger, and be permitted to live in his present abode without interruption. L. J., VII. 591.

Sept. 23. Petition of George Lord Berkeley, one of the Peers of the House. Petitioner is informed that the ancient seat of his progenitors is likely to be reduced to the obedience of the Parliament; he desires that the castle may not be demolished, because it is the only bulwark to keep up intercourse by land and water between Bristol and Gloucester, and is a safe retreat for those parts; because he has lost 20,000*l.* already between the two parties that have held the castle; and because if demolished it could not be rebuilt for 100,000*l.* Prays that if reduced the castle may be occupied as a garrison, under Colonel John Berrowe, and that special order to prevent its destruction may be sent to the Committee of Gloucester, and those who command at the siege. L. J., VII. 591.

Sept. 23. Petition of John Lord of Balmerinoth [Balmerino]. His cause against Sir Robert Heath, Lord Chief Justice of the Kings Bench, was, after many delays on Sir Robert's part, appointed to be heard on the 20th of January 1642-3, by an order of the 3rd of that month, but petitioner was called home to Scotland on the public affairs of the Kingdom, and has but now returned. Prays that the cause may again be appointed for hearing.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 3 January 1642-3, mentioned in preceding.

2. Copy of grant by James I. of the reversion of the office of Chief Clerk of the Court of the King's Bench, after the death of Sir John Roper to James Lord Balmerino, and Sir Robert Heath.

Sept. 23. Draft ordinance for repayment of 500*l.* advanced for the garrison of Gloucester. L. J., VII. 596. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the officers and soldiers of the two Regiments of Foot, of the garrison of Gloucester. They have with equal patience and faithfulness long waited for their arrears. Through the necessity of the soldiers the pay of the officers has been entirely kept back, and the soldiers obliged to accept a scantling of 12*d.* a week; they and their friends have exposed their lives for the reduction of the garrison at Berkeley, and now that it is reduced they understand that some intend to divert the contributions of all that division to other forces, if so a Regiment of Foot and most part of the Horse at Gloucester must be disbanded, and the neighbourhood left a prey to the enemy, and petitioners receive no satisfaction for past arrears, or present maintenance. They pray that they may receive the whole of the contributions for the county of Gloucester, that so they may not be disappointed of their expectations. (Undated).

2. Remonstrance of the militia of the garrisons of Gloucester in support of preceding. (Undated).

Sept. 25. Answer of Thomas Tomlinson, late Under-Sheriff of the County of Surrey, to the complaint of Charles Earl of Nottingham. He was commanded to levy 15*l*. upon the Earl's estate, as by the annexed copy of the extent, and writ appears; he had no note, as had been promised, from the Earl's secretary, what lands were liable to the extent, and was not told till after the money was levied, that the lands in Eflingham were not liable. L. J., VII. 598.

1. Copy of extent.

2. Copy of writ for execution of same.

Sept. 25. Petition of Robert Partridge, and Prudence Ticknor, his sister. About four years ago upon a petition for relief against William Arwicker, and others, an order was made for examination of witnesses, of whom some were examined, but some refused. Partridge and his family are in the greatest misery through his long imprisonment in the Fleet, and he is likely to be again imprisoned for debt unless relieved from the oppressions of his adversaries. Prays that his cause may be heard, or else referred to the Commissioners of the Great Seal. L. J., VII. 598.

Sept. 26. Petition of Captain Peter Cannon. Petitioner was one of the first employed to provide the train of artillery for the State, and to show his fidelity to the cause of God maintained by Parliament, he has spent much time and money in inventing iron and brass ordinance to be loaded at the "briche," as others now are at the mouth; in this way they may be loaded and discharged much oftener than others, and are more secure by sea and land to the saving of gunners killed in loading, and spunging other ordinance at the mouth. Petitioner prays that, as he has by his own industry discovered this invention never before attained unto, the House would grant him an ordinance for the making, and casting of such ordinance; and that if any one else should presume to cast any pieces after his invention without his leave, they may be forfeited to the use of the State.

An ordinance to the effect desired passed the House of Lords, and was sent to the Commons, but though often put in mind of it by the Lords, the Commons allowed it to drop. See L. J., VII. 607. C. J., IV. 293.

Sept. 27. Petition of John Throckmorton. Complains that John Furbunch, and others, rushed into his house and seized some of his goods, on pretence of some payments in arrear, which he never refused to pay, and this contrary to his privilege, as an assistant of the House. Petitioner, being in actual service of the Parliament, and about 400*l.* in arrear of pay, was, notwithstanding, arrested and imprisoned by Edward Harwicke. Their Lordships were pleased, by an order of the 9th of July last, to appoint a day for hearing the matter, but before the hearing Harwicke and petitioner came to an agreement, by which Harwicke promised to withdraw his action; but after conference with Gerrard Carpenter, his attorney, he refused to do so, and continued his prosecution of petitioner, who was compelled at great charge to sue out His Majesty's writ of Habeas Corpus. Harwicke is since dead, and by his death petitioner was by the law of the land discharged from the action; but on the day after his death Carpenter entered an action against petitioner at the suit of the widow, although she had not taken out letters of administration, and so keeps him still in prison. Prays that Carpenter may be sent for, to answer for his dealings.

Petitioner being in the service of the Parliament under Sir William Brereton, and coming to London to attend further commands, was arrested by his creditors, and is now a prisoner in the Poultry Compter. Has offered them his whole estate, which they are all willing to accept, with the exception of one or two, whose resistance renders the good intentions of the rest fruitless. Prays for enlargement.

L. J., VII. 630.

Oct. 8. Petition of George Paule, His Majesty's ward, and Dame Rachel Paule, widow of Sir George Paule, his mother, and Committee. The office of Register of the High Commission, and Delegates, was granted by letters patent to Sir George Paule, who upon his death, in 1635, declared that John Oldbury should execute the office, and receive the fees, and pay petitioners 40*l.* annually. This he did for seven years, when Francis Paule, who had previously executed the office upon trust for Sir George, upon a petition cunningly preferred against Sir John Lamb and others, producing only a copy of the patent, and not mentioning the trust, obtained an order from their Lordships for his admission to the office, which he has since held, but refuses to pay petitioners their allowance. Pray that Oldbury may be restored to the sole execution of the office; and that Francis Paule, and his deputies may be ordered to give an account of all the fees and profits they have received.

become payable within two months after Cromwell, or petitioner, should arrive in London. Upon petitioner's arrival the cochineal proved to be silvester, and not worth 4s. a pound, and yet one Roiston has in Jackson's name arrested petitioner, and he now remains in the Poultry Compter. Oct. 13. Another copy.

Oct. 13. Petition of Captain James Forrester. At the beginning of these unhappy differences petitioner raised a company at his own charge, and faithfully served the State under the Earl of Essex. For keeping his company full, and by reason of his slow payments (his arrears, amounting to 400*l.*), and by the loss of all he had by the sad accident in Cornwall, he was enforced to borrow several sums of money. He has been arrested and carried prisoner to the King's Bench, where he still remains. Prays an order for his enlargement, upon his giving assignments to his creditors to receive their dues out of his arrears.

Oct. 15. Draft order for the payment of 100*l.* to Mr. Bedford, Scoutmaster-General. L. J., VII. 644. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Petition of Richard Gibbs, and Thomas Noel, in the behalf of themselves and others of their profession. Pray to be heard before the Committee, to whom the ordinance for laying an excise upon gold and silver thread and wire is referred, as the ordinance is of great concernment to them in their trade, and they conceive that they can offer somewhat to the Committee, which shall be more advantageous therein to the Parliament, and more equal to such as shall be ordered to pay the duty. The ordinance referred to is that for a new excise for the paying of the debts from the Parliament to artificers and others. See L. J., VII. 629.

Annexed:—

1. Exceptions taken by petitioners to the ordinance.

2. Proviso to be inserted in the ordinance imposing the duty upon the buyer in the place of the manufacturer.

3. Petition of the Silkmen of London to the Commons. This petition apparently relates to the same subject, but is almost illegible from damp. (Undated.)

Oct. 15. Letter from Colonel John Hutchinson, at Nottingham, to Gilbert Millington. The King's quarters at present are about Welbeck, and Warsop Manors, where he has not above 1,500 Horse, and those so tired and ill-armed that he is able to do little service with them. During their quartering on the south side Trent near us we continually alarmed them, and found them of so daunted and dejected spirits that twenty of our men charged fifty of theirs in a town where the Queen's regiment quartered, and killed and took thirty of them, and if ours had had more strength they must have brought away many more; they took thirty Horse with some good luggage. At another time forty of ours charged a hundred and twenty of theirs at Langar, routed them, killed near twenty, and took fourteen, one of whom is a major, who is sore wounded. Cannot say what the King intends, but reports are some for the relief of Skipton, others Chester, and some say that Colonel Rossiter so visited their quarters that they make trial of the other for more security. I have made some more discovery of other countrymen who were engaged in the betraying of the Trent Bridge, and they testify that Sir Gervase Clifton was engaged in the plot against the Castle. Kirke, the chief actor, is condemned by a Council of War to be hanged on Saturday next.

Dec. 23. Petition of Lady Brudenell on the behalf of Thomas Lord Brudenell, her husband. Lord Brudenell was, by the violence of the ruder sort of people, driven from his usual habitation into the King's quarters, which is the only delinquency that can be proved against him. He is now taken prisoner at Hereford, and committed to a common gaol; and being very aged and deprived of all means of subsistence, except petitioner's fifth part, is utterly disabled to endure a strict restraint without certain ruin. Prays that he may be brought before their Lordships, and such a course be taken that a person of his age, and quality, may not perish in his confinement. L. J., VIII. 61.

happy wars his father withdrew from his usual habitation only to secure himself from the danger to which he was daily exposed on account of his religion, and not only refused to contribute to an assistance to the King, but also specially commanded his son to remain beyond the seas. Now, as no delinquency, but absence from his home, can be proved against Lord Brudenell, who was in no way privy to the actions of petitioner's uncle, Captain John Brudenell, petitioner prays that his father may continue in the favour of the House.

2. Answer of Lord Brudenell to the charges of recusancy made against him. Was never in Beever [Belvoir] Castle after the death of George Earl of Rutland, nor acquainted with the Governor, and did not contribute to the support of the garrison. Was not acquainted with the raising of horse about Lincoln, but at that time was living quietly at Northampton; never raised any regiment or marched at the head of any regiment, but, being forced out of his own house, was driven for safety into Newark, and went thither upon his bailiff's horse; was forced from all his dwellings, and wandered to eight or nine places for safety only. He was pursued, and his lady and servants pillaged upon their way to London (he having escaped out of the coach), notwithstanding the commanders saw the pass from the House. (Undated.)

Dec. 23. Petition of Edward Lord Gorges, and Dame Jane, his wife. King James granted unto John Levington, one of the grooms of his bedchamber, and to petitioner Jane, then his wife, for their lives and the longest liver of them, an annuity of 500*l.* per annum, to be received out of the great Customs. The annuity was duly paid unto Levington during his life, and after his death to petitioner Jane, both before and since her marriage to Lord Gorges; but, by reason of the troubles of the times, it has now been unpaid for four years and a half. Petitioners did not press for payment whilst they could enjoy their own estate; but ever since the King had power in the West, that has been wholly taken from them, and disposed of to others. Pray that the Commissioners of the Revenue may be ordered to pay petitioner their arrears, and to continue the payment of the pension during the life of petitioner Jane. L. J., VIII. 64.

Petition of David Mallogh, and Adam Fullerton. Captain Alexander Glenn, a Scots officer, having served a long time in the West under the Earl of Stamford, and having due to him for that service above 360*l.*, could not obtain payment of any part of his arrears, though he was often a petitioner to the House; and so yesterday, for want of means to sustain nature, departed this life, and his condition was so miserable that he hath not left anything to defray the charge of his interring. Petitioners have been left by him in trust to see his debts paid, if any of his arrears can be procured; and their suit is that the House will be pleased to afford some present sum towards his burial, that was so faithful in its service.

Petition of Dame Dorothy Mansell. Petitioner obtained a writ of error for the recovery of certain records out of the Court holden by the Lord President and Council in the Principality, and Marches of Wales in a cause against her late husband, Sir Walter Mansell. The records are ready to be returned into their Lordships' House, but the Lord President, on account of his great infirmity and sickness, is unable to bring them. Prays that some order may be made whereby the records may be certified, and brought before their Lordships.

Petition of William Orton. Complains of the unjust proceedings of Robert Tookesey, and others with reference to a bond entered into by them as sureties for petitioner. Prays for redress.

Petition of the reduced officers of the Earl of Stamford's late Army in the West. The question of the payment of arrears due to the officers of the army of the Earl of Essex, and some others, has been referred to a Committee. Petitioners pray that their accounts may be audited and referred to the same Committee, and that they may receive an equal measure of subsistence.

Petition of the troopers in Colonel Sir John Norwich's own troop in the Earl of Manchester's army. Petitioners are all old soldiers, and have for a long time been in the Parliament service, and are now forty-six weeks in arrear of pay. They have wives and children to support, and no other means of maintenance, and therefore pray that some way may be provided for the payment of part of their arrears.

Petition of William Norton. Complains that, by the palpable neglect of George Harris, his solicitor, and Jeremy Bracebridge, his attorney, he has been non-suited in his cause against Thomas Hill for the recovery of certain land at Pickering Leigh [Lythe], in the county of York. Prays for redress.

Petition of Peter Mathieu, of London, merchant stranger, to the House of Commons. Prays that a pass may be granted to him and his servant, Gratian Perennant, to go into the western parts, as he has important business to despatch at Exeter and Plymouth. He also prays leave to go to Oxford, to obtain a pass to enable him to travel from thence without fear of danger from the King's forces. The petition is noted with the desire of Monsieur de Gressy to the Speaker to obtain the pass, as desired by the petitioner, who is a French merchant.

Petition of John Mason, and Lidia, his wife, late wife and administratrix of Roger Feest, deceased, to the House of Commons. Pray that Baron Southerton may be called upon to answer for his unjust proceedings against petitioners with reference to a lease of the parsonage of Frampton granted to him by Roger Feest.

Petition of Frances Reade, of London, widow. Prays for the reversal of a decree of the Court of Exchequer pronounced in 1635 in her suit against Sir Nicholas Salter, and Sir Henry Garway. The proceedings commenced in the year 1627, and were with reference to a 24th share of the wine farm granted by King James in 1607.

Petition of John Packer, and William Hawkins, two of the clerks of His Majesty's Privy Seal. Petitioners held their offices until October 1643, when they were displaced upon a petition of William and Thomas Watkins, informing His Majesty that petitioners adhered to the Parliament. Pray that they may receive some reasonable fee for all grants, pardons, licenses, &c. passing under the Great Seal of England, remaining with the Commissioners appointed by Parliament; and they will be ready to make and keep entries of all such grants, &c. as formerly.

Petition of William Pomfret. Prays for redress against Henry Peyton, and Sir David Watkins, Examiners of the Court of Chancery, who unjustly dismissed petitioner from his office of Deputy Examiner, and afterwards procured him to be committed to the Fleet, because he declared his dislike to some irregular practices and abuses allowed in the office, and countenanced and maintained by Peyton.

Petition of Loue Owen. Was married about fifteen years since to Richard Owen, Rear Admiral of the Navy, and for many years cohabited with him, but about three years ago, without any cause, he left her upon pretence of employment, and promised to allow her sufficient maintenance, and alimony. This he has failed to do, and her creditors, being in these calamitous times themselves exceedingly necessitated, will give her no further credit. She therefore prays that her husband may be ordered to pay her just debts, and give her some annual competency for her support.

Petition of divers inhabitants of the parish of St. Lawrence in the Jury, London. Time out of mind the custom in the parish has been to hold a vestry on the Wednesday in Easter week for the election of churchwardens and other officers, when the junior churchwarden for the preceding year was usually confirmed as senior for the year ensuing. Mr. Crane, the vicar, who is an earnest maintainer of superstitious innovations, hindered the assembling of a vestry on the Wednesday in last Easter week, to prevent the confirmation of Mr. Nettleship to be senior churchwarden, because he had, in pursuance of an order of Parliament, removed the rails from the Communion table, which the Vicar wished to retain. A vestry was therefore called on Thursday, when Mr. Nettleship's election was confirmed by the major part of those present, whereupon divers of the parishioners, being of the Vicar's party, many of them favourers of innovations and opposed to the Parliament, departed, and those who remained proceeded to the election of the other officers, duly entered the same according to custom, and then dissolved the vestry. Afterwards, on the same day, the Vicar's party, without any summons, entered into the Vestry, and made choice of other churchwardens, one of whom is a common swearer and curser against good ministers, and hath openly refused to take the Protestation; and the other, though well affected in religion, is vehemently suspected of incontinency, and hath not taken the Protestation. Pray that some order may be made to prevent the inconveniences which are likely to arise from these proceedings.

Petition of Robert Schofield. Petitioner has, ever since December 1641, served in the Irish wars as chirurgéon under Lord Conway, and has cured the wounded both in the Foot and Horse service, and the poor inhabitants, without any reward. In all this time he has only received three months' pay, and has expended above 50*l*. in instruments and medicine, which being now all spent, he has come over for a supply. He prays for 30*l*. for supply of his chest and for payment of part of his arrears for his present support, and to enable him to return to his charge.

Petition of Edward Somerville, second son of Sir William Somerville, lately deceased. Petitioner's rents at Somerville Aston, in the county of Gloucester, are unduly detained by Sir Robert Tracie, who has been in actual arms against the Parliament at the taking of Cirencester and at the siege of Gloucester. Petitioner was pillaged and imprisoned by the late Earl of Northampton on his march towards Stafford, and his house at Alcester, Warwick, was afterwards broken into, and his goods taken away by Prince Maurice; and when he distrained for his rents at Somerville Aston, the distresses so taken have been rescued by soldiers. Prays that the tenants may be ordered to pay the arrears due to him, and that if they refuse he may have the assistance of some of the soldiers under the Earl of Denbigh for levying distresses.

Petition of William Street, one of His Majesty's littersmen. Has been arrested at the suits of Peter Gwilliams, a brewer, and Katherine Baldwin. Upwards of 200*l*. are due to him from His Majesty, which he cannot receive, and he is thereby unable to satisfy his creditors. He has disbursed divers sums of money for his son, who is in the service of the Parliament as Cornet to Sergeant-Major Dewett. Prays to be enlarged from his imprisonment.

Petition of Margaret Kingsmyll, wife of Josiah Kingsmyll. Complains that her husband, upon causeless displeasure, after she had lived thirteen years with him, and borne him three children, has put her away without making any provision for her maintenance. She is in a lost and perishing condition, and has no means to prosecute a suit against him in Chancery, and prays that he may be ordered to make her an allowance.

Petition of inhabitants of the town and parish of Buckingham to the House of Commons. There is great want of good preaching in the town, and in many other parishes thereabout. Mr. Whitty, the vicar, and some other orthodox divines, who are benefited men and are able preachers, are willing freely to keep a lecture in Buckingham every Saturday, which will tend much to the honour of God and the increase of religion. Pray for an order for these ministers to set up the said lecture without interruption.

Petition of the poor servants of the Cathedral Church of Christ Church, in Canterbury, to Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. When his Lordship was in Kent he was pleased to give ear to the information of petitioners, expressing their sad condition through the diminution of their pay, and to encourage them to petition Parliament. Prays his Lordship to continue his favour towards them, and to further their modest and just request.

Petition of Edward Bond. Prays for reversal of a decree in Chancery in a suit between petitioner and his partner, Michael Arnold, concerning their respective interests in a brewhouse at Westminster; for the smoke of which petitioner was much prosecuted by the late Archbishop of Canterbury. Pamphlet containing "All the several Ordinances and Orders made by the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament concerning sequestering the estates of delinquents, papists, spys, and intelligencers; together with instructions for such persons as are employed in sequestering of such delinquents' estates." Very useful to those whom it doth or may concern." Printed by Laurence Blacklock at the sign of the "Mearmayd, at the Middle Temple Gate, 1645." The dates of the orders range from 31 March 1642-3 to 18 Nov. 1645.

Copy of petition of most of the inhabitants of the parish of Twickenham, in the county of Middlesex [to the Committee of the Commons concerning plundered ministers]. Petitioners hear that the Committee have granted an order for Mr. Samuel Basford to have the cure and to receive the tithes and profits of the vicarage, the appointment having been obtained but by a few, and they holding but little land in the parish. Pray that a day may be fixed for petitioners to be heard in the matter, that so a minister may be appointed with the general consent of the parishioners.

Petition of Peter Fogge. Complains of the unjust practices of John Cock and others, whereby he has been deprived of certain lands and tenements of the manor of Shantony [Saham Toney], in the county of Norfolk, and prays that they may be sent for to answer.

Petition of Sir Edmund Sawyer to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner was employed by the House of Commons at the beginning of the Parliament in the examination of the accounts of the farmers of the Customs, for which service he was ordered 150*l*., but he has never received any part of this sum. When the King's forces came into Berks, petitioner, for the preservation of his estate, repaired to his house between Windsor and Reading, where he has ever since remained, sometimes under the power of the King's army and sometimes of the Parliament's. Has obeyed all ordinances of Parliament, contributed according to his estate, has taken the Covenant, and has spent 500*l*. in free quarters for the Parliament soldiers, yet, by the practices of some of his neighbours, a sequestration has been awarded against him. Prays that the Committee for Bucks may be ordered to re-examine his witnesses, and if they do not find him proved a delinquent within any ordinance of Parliament, then that his sequestration may be taken off.

Petition of William Faldoe, guardian of Thomas Marryett, Esq., His Majesty's ward. Prays that Sir Edward Underhill, and others, may be sent for, to answer for their proceedings in respect to the wardship of Thomas Marryett.

Petition of James Finch, of the county of Warwick, gent., now prisoner in His Majesty's prison in the King's Bench. Petitioner purchased a field in East Kent of Sir Matthew Mynnes, who promised to enter into bond that it contained full one hundred and sixty-eight acres. Petitioner thereupon entered into possession and bestowed much stock upon the tillage, and spent upwards of 600*l*. for cost of cattle and for sowing the land. Upon survey, the field was found to be twenty acres short in measure, and Mynnes then denied to give the bond he formerly promised, and according to his usual dealings, before the rent was due, distrained and sold petitioner's cattle, broke into his house, and turned his wife and children out of doors. Petitioner thereupon brought a suit against him in the Court of Chancery, but he has for twenty-six months stood in contempt, and can by no means be brought to answer. Petitioner, who has lain in prison in Canterbury and the King's Bench upwards of thirty-two months, prays that Sir Matthew Mynnes and his confederates may be called up to answer.

Copy of preceding.

Petition of Sir Frederick Hamilton. Has during all the rebellion maintained a garrison in Manor Hamilton Castle, which has been a terror to the rebels and a comfort to many distressed Protestants. Hears that the Commons intend to appoint a new Governor in Connaught to take charge of the town of Sligo, lost by the late Governor, and recovered by petitioner, with a loss of near three hundred men to the rebels. Prays that when informed of his fortunate services the House will not think fit to subject him to the command of any private Governor.

Petition of Captain Nicholas Charlton. His pay is in arrear above 300*l*., he has been wounded besides, and has been arrested by Newman Little and his wife for a debt of 5*l*. Prays for protection from arrest until his arrears are paid.

Petition of divers godly ministers in the county of Norfolk. Divers sequestrators and others assume to themselves to appoint vicious, ungodly, and ejected ministers to preach, to the profanation of religion. Pray that no ejected minister may be permitted to exercise his ministerial function until their Lordships are satisfied that there is in him a ministerial qualification and fitness unto the public exercise of his ministry.

Petition of several Lords, Knights, Officers, and Gentlemen of Ireland, now attending the affairs of that kingdom here. Owing to the distracted state of England no attention has been given to the affairs of Ireland, and in consequence the surviving faithful subjects will be exposed to the fury of the inhuman rebels. Petitioners, in view of the pacification now under consideration, pray that effectual succour to Ireland may be no longer delayed.

Extracts from letters of Lord Jermyn to Lord Digby, and from Dr. Gosse to Lord Jermyn, about the raising of a fleet in France to assist the King, and about the support given to the Queen. The date of the latest letter mentioned in this paper is 25 Aug. 1645.

List of "Papers perused the afternoon when the House sat, being 33 in number." Two of the papers mentioned in this list were papers taken at Naseby.

Petition of Philip Lord Herbert and the Lady Penélope Viscountess Bayninge, his wife, Francis Lord Dacre and the Lady Elizabeth, his wife, Mary Viscountess Grandison, relict of William Viscount Grandison, in the realm of Ireland, deceased. Petitioners formerly presented a petition concerning Sutton Marsh against the Duke of Lennox and Bevil Wimberley. The case was partly heard, but was interrupted by the great affairs of the kingdom; meantime the rents have been sequestered (26 March 1644, L. J., VI. 486) into the hands of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery; Viscount Grandison, and Bevil Wimberley are dead. Petitioners pray that the cause, which is a matter of 18,000*l*., may be revived, and a final determination made.

Memorandum that Dr. Heath is to institute Mr. Pake-man to the benefice of Harrow-on-the-Hill, Middlesex, on the presentation of Mr. Pitts.

Letter from the soldiers of some garrison not named to the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, requesting him to present a petition from them to the House for their speedy relief, as they are almost famished for want of maintenance; they are only one hundred in number, have to maintain six guards, and receive no pay.

Petition of Henry Edes, of Lawford, Essex. Complains that an excessive composition has been fixed for the wardship of Robert and Thomas Cook, grandchildren of Robert Cook, whose only daughter Mary is married to petitioner, and that he has not only been deprived of all benefit of 500*l*. left to himself, but has been forced to spend 150*l*. of his own money by order of the Court of Wards.

List of Lords Committees for petitions.

Petition of the Company of Vintners. Pray to be heard by counsel against the imposition or excise of 6*l*. in the tun upon all wines, lately voted by the House of Commons, which petitioners are no way able to pay, and by which they are likely to be ruined.

Annexed:—

1. Application that an injunction may be granted to settle the possession of the lands in question.

Jan. 2. Petition of Lawrence Hewer, alias Oxsbrough. About ten years since petitioner was indicted at Hick's Hall for a riot supposed to have been committed upon Lady Paulett, and was in due course acquitted. The lady afterwards preferred a bill against him in the Star Chamber for the same riot, whereupon he pleaded his former indictment and acquittal, but the lady by the indirect means of friends with the then Lord Keeper (Coventry), procured the plea to be overruled, and petitioner was forced to answer. The lady is since dead, but Mr. Pitt, her husband, procured the cause to be brought to a hearing, and petitioner was illegally sentenced to a fine of 300*l.* to the King, and 100*l.* damages to Pitt. Petitioner's estate has been extended for the same, and a great part has been levied. Prays to be discharged from payment of the residue, as the Court of Star Chamber is now taken away by Act of Parliament, by reason of the great oppressions suffered thereby by the subject.

Jan. 3. Petition of Rice Vaughan. Prays that the office of Prothonotary, and Clerk of the Crown for the Counties of Montgomery and Denbigh, which is become forfeitable to the State by the delinquency of Mr. Kenricke Eaton, Sir Ricard Lloyd, and Mr. Edgbury, who had the office for their successive lives, may be conferred upon petitioner. L. J., VIII. 78.

Jan. 3. Petition of inhabitants within the chapelry of Ashton Newton, and New Church, within the parish of Winwick, in the county of Lancaster. Petitioners live far from their parish church and have no maintenance for preaching ministers at their chapels. Mr. Hearle the rector has hitherto contributed beyond his ability, which, together with the collections freely made by petitioners, has kept the ministry of the word amongst them until lately, when they have been so plundered by the enemy for adhering to the Parliament that they are unable longer to continue that charge. Pray that the annexed ordinance may be passed for their relief.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Charles Hearle, Rector of Winwick. Petitioner's predecessor, Mr. Horne, after a tedious suit, overthrew a pretended lease of the rectory, and for several years had possession thereof. Petitioner likewise had possession of the rectory, until the daughters of Sir Edward Standley, pretending a right by the said lease, procured an inquisition out of the Duchy Court to put petitioner out of possession, and he, being disenabled to proceed in the suit, submitted to a composition, whereby he has only 220*l.* per annum to pay all duties to the King, and all other charges upon the rectory, which for the last four years have amounted to near as much as he receives. Prays for the passing of the annexed ordinance to settle a constant maintenance upon the ministers of the chapels, and for the remainder of the profits of the living to be bestowed upon himself and his successors.

Jan. 12. Petition of Sir John Danvers, brother and heir of Henry, late Earl of Danby, to the House of Commons. The Earl of Danby, who always lived in great love and friendship with petitioner, promised to leave him the most part of his real and personal estate, but residing near Oxford when the late differences happened, was unhappily drawn to adhere to the King's party, and being thus taken off from his former brotherly love to petitioner, was induced by divers persons near him, who only aimed at their own advantage, to sign a paper purporting to be a will, by which almost the whole of his estate was left to persons, either in arms against the Parliament, or residing in the King's quarters and garrisons. Petitioner, who has always adhered to the Parliament, notwithstanding many powerful invitations to join the adverse party, prays for redress. C. J., IV. 403.

Jan. 13. Draft ordinance for the execution of martial law. This ordinance was reported with amendments, and read a 3rd time this day. It was then resolved that it should not pass with the amendments, and a new ordinance was ordered to be brought in. L. J., VIII. 99.

Jan. 15. Petition of Edward Perkins, student of Katherine Hall, in Cambridge. There is a vacancy for a fellow in Christ's College, Cambridge, and after debate in the college it was devolved to the power of Parliament to be disposed of, as to them, of right belonging. Petitioner, who has been a student in the University almost eight years, and who desires to continue his studies there, prays that he may have the fellowship conferred upon him. L. J., VIII. 101.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Dr. Thomas Bainbrigg, Master of Christ's College, to William Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons:—

We received your letter on behalf of Edward Perkins, whom we would gladly have elected to the vacant fellowship, but the truth is, intending an election, we met with so many scruples, and doubts from grounds of statute, that before your letter came, being no way able to resolve them, we agreed to leave it wholly to the decision of the Parliament, who may confer it upon Mr. Perkins, or upon whomsoever they like. If your more weighty occasions will lend you so much leisure as to peruse the doubts that trouble us, I commend them to your consideration:—1. Whether since the place was voided by power from Parliament upon the party's death before it was filled again, the same power was to supply it, or that it returned into the ordinary way of election by Master and Fellows? 2. Our statutes not suffering above two non-sacerdotes at one time, and the Parliament having placed eight, that are not in orders, whether we can choose any but those that are now in orders. 3. The chiefest doubt is this: the statute requiring that of the nine Northern shires named in it there shall always be six fellows, and there are now no more left than three, whether those other three are not to be first supplied before we can choose any Southern man? And now I must be a humble suitor to yourself, to take into your consideration the much wronged condition of the north country, that you will join with those that shall endeavour the righting of it by bringing into the way again what is so far run out of course, not only in the breach of this statute, but many more. 8 December 1645.

2. Testimonial in favour of Edward Perkins, signed by five of the Fellows of St. Katherine's Hall.

3. Another petition of Edward Perkins. After an order of their Lordships for the admission of petitioner, the right of election to the vacant fellowship was by ordinance returned to the Master and Fellows, by whose neglect of the prescribed time the election devolved on the Vice-Chancellor, and two senior doctors; the Vice-Chancellor has, contrary to the two senior doctors, by his single vote nominated Mr. West, a man who deserted the University eight years ago, who has never appeared for trial of his ability, and who, when Lincoln was taken by the Parliament, was preacher to the Governor, and there taken prisoner. Petitioner prays for relief.

4. Certificate of Samuel Collins, and Thomas Comber, the two senior doctors, that no one but Mr. Perkins appeared for examination, and that they gave their votes for him.

Jan. 17. Petition of Dame Mary Barkeley, wife of Sir Maurice Barkeley. About nineteen years ago petitioner was married to Sir Maurice Barkeley, she bringing with her a portion of 2,800*l.*, and he making her a jointure of 400*l.* per annum; they lived together for seven years, but then fell out because she would not release any portion of her jointure. Subsequently, before the High Commission Court, he agreed to pay her 50*l.* per annum, and has done so till within about a year and a half, but now, as the authority of that court has been taken away, he refuses to pay her. She prays that Sir Maurice may be ordered to pay her allowance, or some competent sum for her maintenance, as she has no other means of support. L. J., VIII. 107.

Jan. 17. Petition of Captain Thomas Plunkett, for relief from a sentence of the Judges Delegates, by which he is condemned to pay to Andrew MacAlexander, and others, the value of certain French wines, the cargo of a ship belonging to John Todd and others, taken out of her at Kinsale by order of Lord Inchiquin. L. J., VIII. 107.

Jan. 17. Petition of Sir William Russell, and others. Complain that Thomas Lenthall, John Marston, and others, in contempt of the orders of the House for the hearing the appeal of petitioners against the sentences passed against them in the Admiralty, and Delegates' Courts, have caused petitioners' bail in the Admiralty Court to be arrested. They pray that he may be released, and Lenthall and the others punished for their contempt. L. J., VIII. 108.

Jan. 17. Letter from Wm. Boreman to Mr. Thomas Webb:—I have lost no opportunity of writing, but have received no letter since June last; had I known of messengers going to Oxford with my Lord Governor's letter to Secretary Nicholas about transporting the Princess into France, you should have heard from me; we are in a very miserable condition, in a manner besieged, ever since the taking of Bristol; provisions at treble the rates they were, all trade stopped, we six weeks in arrear of our assignment out of the Excise, all the avenues to the City obstructed, only a loophole left to Tyngmouth [Teignmouth], by the seaside, by which we have had intercourse with Dartmouth, but since Monday the town has been besieged, but not very closely, for three hundred horse marching to Tavistock mistook their way and came hither this morning to eat the small remainder of provision left about the town. Since the beginning of December I have abated two dishes a meal out of my Lady's diet, otherwise I could not have kept within compass. I should have sent you an account for the last half year of xxi. (sic), but the bearer will not adventure to carry so large a volume, but I will not fail to send it, and please assure my Lord that I have not exceeded my assignment, and will not fail to employ my best skill to steer my course as I have begun. P.S.—The Prince is at Tavistock with ten thousand men; but the Cornish men are very "resty," made up with those that were withdrawn from before Plymouth. I desire directions how I shall dispose of the household servants in case the Princess be carried into France.

Jan. 19. Draft ordinance for sale of the lands and houses belonging to the Earl of Worcester, and to his sons, Lord Herbert, and Sir John Somerset, at Acton, in the Strand, Tower Street, Stepney, and elsewhere in the cities of London and Westminster, on account of their treasons and offences, and for payment out of the proceeds of such sale of the money due to Wm. Jan. 19. Petition of Thomas Lenthall and others. In answer to the petition of Sir William Russell and others, the petitioners conceive, that, as by their Lordships' order of the 13th instant, all parties were left to their course at law, their subsequent proceedings before the Delegates are no contempt of the orders of the House. See L. J., VIII. 98.

Jan. 20. Letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax to the Speaker of the House of Peers, pro tempore, giving an account of the taking of Dartmouth. L. J., VIII. 121. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Draft ordinance for granting a pardon in the King's name to Bridget Gowe convicted of bigamy. This draft is endorsed as read a first time in the Lords on the 12th of February, but is not mentioned in the Lords' Journals. It was passed on the 20th of Jan. in the Commons. C. J., IV. 411. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Fragment of a petition of Bridgett, the wife of James Peter Gowe, to the House of Commons. She appears to have been first married to one De Nevill, who, whilst travelling abroad, was imprisoned by means of Jesuitical papists, who, by feigned letters, made her believe that her husband was dead, in consequence of which she married again; but De Nevill afterwards escaped from imprisonment and returned home, and her second husband, Gowe, wishing to marry another woman, then indicted her for bigamy; she has been reprieved by the Justices of Gaol Delivery, but remains in great want, and prays the House that she may be granted a pardon under the Great Seal.

Jan. 21. Petition of John Guile, Dutch gentleman, agent and attorney for Joannes Higenius, doctor of physic, administrator of the goods of Gerrard Pulman, late of Westphalia, deceased at sea in a ship of the East India Company of England, 1641. Upon reading a petition against the East India Company and the late Earl of Lindsey, the House granted a commission for examination of witnesses, under which many witnesses have been examined. Higenius is now dead, and the period of the commission has expired, and cannot be renewed on account of the distractions of the times, but the depositions have been sealed up and left in the hands of the Commissioners. The curator of John Pulman, son and heir of Gerrard Pulman, and the Tribunal of the county of Zutphen, his guardians, desire to see the depositions, fearing danger to them at the present time, but the Commissioners will not part with them without an order from the House. Petitioner prays that the depositions may be delivered to him to carry beyond seas for a time, and that he may be continued in full management of Higenius' estate, in which he has had great expense and trouble. L. J., VIII. 113.

Jan. 21. Copy of preceding, and of order upon it for Henry Morgan, Hugh Lewis, and others, the Commissioners, to make answer thereto. L. J., VIII. 113.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of Henry Morgan and others, Commissioners under the Great Seal of England, in the behalf of Dr. Higenius, in obedience to an order of the House of the 21st of January last. The Commissioners are, and have always been, ready to return their commission and records to the House; they have exerted themselves to the utmost to enable Mr. Guile to bring the business to maturity; neglecting their own affairs, they have travelled night and day, and used their best endeavours to find out the evidences and testimonies that would conduce to the benefit of the cause, and have in these times of distraction preserved the commission at great hazard to themselves, for which they are only partly paid; they say not this as complaint, for Mr. Guile has always been generous in his promises, but because it is desired that the commission and records may be sent beyond seas, and because they hear that the Tribunal of Zutphen has appointed another agent instead of Guile to follow the cause, by which he will lose his pains, and the Commissioners the arrears due to them. They therefore pray that an order may be made according to the prayer of Guile's petition. (Undated.)

2. Petition of John Guile, Dutch gentleman. The Commissioners pursuant to the order of the House of the 21st of January last have delivered their records and original commission; petitioner therefore prays that order may be made respecting his further desires. (Undated.)

4. Depositions of witnesses showing that after the death of Pulman on board the Discovery, Christopher Adams, ship's carpenter, broke open the head of a chest belonging to Pulman, and took out a great quantity of pearls, diamonds, emeralds, and other precious stones of immense value; that of these jewels some were given to the Earl of Lindsey, then Governor of the East India Company, who procured a grant from the King, of Fulman's effects failing the appearance of any heir; some were sold to jewellers for but a few pounds; and that Adams was afterwards arrested, and kept many months in prison by the Earl of Lindsey. Prays that Sir Robert Carr, who was seized by a guard of musketeers at Aswarby, in Lincolnshire, in May 1644, and has been debarred all access of his friends, may have liberty to answer at the bar what shall be objected against him, as he cannot procure his freedom by law, a false return having been made to his writ of Habeas Corpus. Jan. 21. Petition of John Scroope. He has unhappily fallen within the notion of a delinquent for being in his own house, Bolton Castle, when it was defended against the Parliament forces; but about the beginning of November last he surrendered the Castle, and coming to town to take the benefit of the ordinance in favour of delinquents, presented himself before the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall, where his case has been so far proceeded in that his fine has been cast up, and composition ready to be made for his estate; but now he hears that upon some misinformation it is proposed to except him from the benefit of the said ordinance; considering that he never stirred from his house, and committed no other crime but what, by his youth, he was misled into, he casts himself and his estate upon the mercy of Parliament, and prays that he may not be excluded from the benefit of the ordinance. See L. J., VIII. 142.

Jan. 24. Petition of Thomas Brundishe, of Felsham, in the county of Suffolk, clerk. Prays that Sir Nathaniel Brent may be ordered to give him institution to the rectory of Felsham upon the presentation of John Risby, the patron. L. J., VIII. 122.

Jan. 24. Petition of Wm. Ryley, Lancaster Herald. As the prime officer of arms, and the sole herald attending his place, it is his duty to preserve the pedigrees, books, and records belonging to the office. On the 14th of March 1642-3 the Commons passed an order that the books, &c. should not be defaced, and the House of Lords has passed another ordinance for rectifying and regulating the office and officers of arms, but this ordinance, delayed by other business, has not yet passed the House of Commons; petitioner is therefore obliged to apply to the House to prevent the strange abuses and enormities of Robert Browne, Blue Mantle, set forth in the annexed articles, and prays that the doors of the office may be sealed up. L. J., VIII. 122.

Annexed:—

1. Articles against Robert Browne, Blue Mantle, the puisne pursuivant of arms. He has been an actor against Parliament, and was created Doctor of Civil Laws at Oxford for his services; he has been taken prisoner, but has not compounded for his delinquency; he has embezzled various records from the office, especially His Majesty's pedigree, the French King's descent, and the descents of the Earls of Rutland and Bedford, and sold them to one Wm. Wheeler; he has devised coat armour for persons of inferior condition, particularly for one Brunskeel, and others; he has abetted persons in bearing coats of arms in no way due to them; he has animated the Company of Painter Stainers against petitioner, persuading them that the Lords' ordinance tends to their ruin; he has persuaded others that the ordinance will prejudice the Earl Marshal's office; he has proclaimed the Parliament traitors, and has had a warrant for 100*l.* for his service done in the King's army.
2. Copy of the arms of Ambrose Brunskeel, of London, merchant, son of Philip Brunskeel, of Bowes, in the county of York, whose ancestors descended out of the North.
3. Letter from Wm. Ryley to Mr. Throckmorton, at his house in St. Anne's Street, Westminster. Desires orders for the attendance of Ambrose Brunskeel, and other witnesses.

Jan. 24. Order upon preceding petition for the doors of the office to be sealed up, and for Browne to answer the articles. L. J., VIII. 122. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Robert Browne, officer of arms. Petitioner and others gave information against William Ryley of keeping up intelligence with the enemy at Oxford, and of holding a special dispensation from His Majesty to reside in London, and to look to the records in the Tower and the Herald's Office; for these and other delinquencies Ryley stands sequestered, and his study was on Thursday last sealed up by order of the Committee at Camden House. Now since his sequestration Ryley has in recrimination exhibited articles containing much that is frivolous and untrue against petitioner, who has served the State with all faithfulness, and has in consequence for two years past had a lodging assigned him in the Herald's Office. Petitioner prays that the charges may be soon heard, that his own innocence, and Ryley's malice, may appear to the House, and that meanwhile he may have access to the Office of Arms as formerly. (Undated.)

The Earl of Nottingham granted a protection to petitioner for three years, his creditors agreeing to forbear their claims for that time, that so he might improve his estate for their better satisfaction; but one Arthur Terry has, notwithstanding, sued petitioner for a debt of about 100*l.*, and caused him to be taken in execution, to his utter ruin. Petitioner prays for punishment upon Terry and relief to himself.

Sir Thomas White left a certain sum of money to the City of Coventry, whereby they were to raise 40*l.* per annum for ever, of which 20*l.* a piece was to be paid to two scholars to be sent from the Grammar School at Coventry to St. John's College, Oxford; but as Oxford is the King's garrison, and Parliament has forbidden all persons to go thither, petitioner was by his friends placed at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, with the consent of the Mayor and Aldermen of Coventry; but by the strict wording of the will they cannot, without special order, pay him the 20*l.*, the rather because the Committee sequester the same. Petitioner prays that 20*l.*, with the arrears due, may be paid to him without any interference on the part of the Committee for Sequestrations. L. J., VIII. 129.

Jan. 30. Intelligence concerning Ireland and the Earl of Glamorgan intercepted at Ruthin, received Jan. 30. Copy of letter dated the 26th, from John Sworde at Denbigh, to Mr. Reignolds:—I am sorry not to be with you at this time; the business I went about is not yet come, when it does my Lord's grace of Canterbury has promised to furnish me with my desire. L^d St. Paul will be here to-night, let me hear the condition of the enemy, I have letters for Doctor Floyd from my Lord of York.—Copy of letter, dated 21st Jan., from John Archbishop of York at Conway to Dr. Werden of Ruthin:—I thank you for your letter, and

I will satisfy the bearer. "I beseech you to return to the noble governor the Duke of York to be sent him so soon as may well be, for in Ireland they will not be gainsaid, that he is at Ludlow the boat saith."—Copy of letter, dated 21st Jan., from Geo. Lord Digby at Dublin to the Archbishop of York:—I am glad you do not take such alarm at the commitment of Lord Glamorgan as to despair of the relief of Chester, which I believe will now go on speedily, and of this I desire you to certify Lord Byron.—Copy of letter, dated 25th Jan., from John Archbishop of York at Conway to Sir John Walter, Governor of Cherke [Chirk] Castle:—Read, and then seal the enclosed, and you will know all I can tell you of this great business. Colonel Butler, a servant of the Queen, will be with you before this letter, and will impart to you all the news from Ireland.—Copy of letter, dated 25th Jan., from John Archbishop of York to Lord Ashley:—I received your letter of the 12th Jan. late on the night of the 24th, and have communicated the Marquess of Ormond's letter to Lord Byron; his answer to it implied some fear as to holding out Chester; Colonel Butler tells me that the men and shipping are still ready in Ireland, though retarded by the distractions there, which are so far composed that the Earl of Glamorgan is out on bail. There is no relying upon these Irish forces for this service, though if they come they shall be carefully sent to the fittest rendezvous, and you shall be informed of their landing and condition. Lord St. Paul, under Colonel Gilbert Byron, is at the head of six hundred, or as I believe of five hundred horse and foot, good men; Lieutenant-Colonel Roger Moston has landed with a piece of a regiment of Lord Digby's raised in Ireland, which after a day or two's refreshment will be at your Lordship's disposal; your Lordship probably knows from the noble Governor of Cherke more than I of the forces our garrisons can afford, but I am told that there are about four thousand fighting men at Chester. I pray God bless your design, and desire your Lordship to esteem of me as one who hath long loved your Lordship, and may truly write myself your Lordship's most affectionate and humble servant.—Copy of letter, dated 19th Jan., from the Marquess of Ormond at Dublin Castle to the Duke of York:—I hear a report, though I cannot credit it, that your Highness intends to come to Ireland, and I therefore think it my duty to inform you that as yet there is no peace concluded here; that through an accident lately fallen out (in which the Earl of Glamorgan has a part) His Majesty's affairs are in such uncertainty that we are in continual danger both from the Irish and the Covenanters. I therefore humbly desire your Highness to wait His Majesty's further pleasure.

Jan. 31. Copy of letter from the King to the Speaker of the House of Peers, of the 29th instant, disclaiming any knowledge of the Earl of Glamorgan's treaty with the rebels in Ireland, &c. L. J., VIII. 133. In extenso.

Jan.—. Petition of Captain Ralph Nicholls. Abraham Chamberlain applied to the House for reversal of a decree in Chancery, and on the 20th instant obtained an order for the hearing of the cause; it is the constant practice that no appeal should be allowed until obedience has been yielded to a decree, and petitioner, who was the first man to raise a company for Parliament in Buckinghamshire, and served under Colonel Hampden as long as his health would permit, prays that Chamberlain may be ordered to pay the money decreed, or else that petitioner may have leave to enforce him to obedience. See L. J., VIII. 112.

Jan.—. Letter from Captain John Crouther at King's rode (P), on board the Entrance, to the Speaker of the House of Commons. Having seen the letter directed to the Admiral, Captain Robert Moulton, about sending some persons from Glamorganshire to London, Crouther, in the absence of the Admiral, has sent a vessel to Cardiff for the purpose; the enemy have defeated the Parliament forces in Monmouthshire. The town of Cardiff being in want of ammunition, he has sent some thither, fearing for the security of the place, and desires an order to justify his conduct.

Prays that Poyer may be summoned to attend the Committee of Accounts there to answer petitioner's charges, and show the particulars of his disbursements.

Feb. 4. Petition of Captain Gerrard Booth. He has for about two years past done true and faithful service in Ireland under Lord Inchiquin, Lord President of Munster, but coming to town with his Lordship's license, and attending on him, he has been arrested at the suit of one Shipp, a tailor, for an old debt of 13*l.*, and carried to Newgate. Annexed:—

1. Certificate signed by Lord Inchiquin that Booth is in the State's service in Munster.

They have for the last fifteen years endeavoured to obtain a trial at law with the participants or drainers of Hatfield Level of their ancient right and title to certain commutable lands, but the participants on the 10th of December last obtained, by misinformation to the House, a binding order in the matter, although the Committee at Lincoln had shortly before settled the business by consent. Annexed:—

1. The true relation of the manner and reasons of staying the Frenchman or courier at Rochester, and sending him with his letters up to the Honourable Committee of both Kingdoms. The man was stopped by the guard at Rochester Bridge on the 3rd instant, and when asked whence he came and whither he was going, he produced an old pass from the Mayor of Dover, expressing his landing there, and that he might travel to London; he said that he had no letters, refused to allow his portmanteau to be searched, and offered one of the guard half a crown to let him pass. He was afterwards searched, and his portmanteau opened, and the letters were then found, and amongst them a paper which he said was a pass from the French King, to which no credit was given on account of his previous underhand behaviour; but it was thought necessary for the good of the State to send him and his letters in custody of an officer to the Committee of both Kingdoms. (Undated.) See L. J., VIII. 167.

2. Letter from the French agents to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords, expressing their thanks for the order of the House of Monday last (the 9th) for the protection of the couriers of foreign agents in future; and for the evidence shewn of the desire of the House to give full satisfaction for the wrong done. They will acquaint the King their master as soon as possible, to prevent the springing up of any acrimonious feeling, and in conclusion, they request that a pass may be granted them to carry their despatches to the King at Oxford or elsewhere. (Undated.)

L. J., VIII. 153.

Feb. 11. Petition of Sir Henry Mildmay of Moulsham, Knight, cousin and heir of Robert, late Earl of Sussex, Lord Fitzwalter. By an order of the 13th of January last the House appointed the 10th instant for the hearing of his claim to the title of Lord Fitzwalter, and his counsel attended accordingly; but when the day came the cause was neither heard nor adjourned, by which it stands sine die. He prays that another day may be appointed for the hearing. L. J., VIII. 156.

Feb. 11. Petition of Edmund Deney, and others. Petitioners were, by order of the House of 23 May 1643, appointed sequestrators of the tithes and profits of the rectory of St. Botolphs without Bishopsgate, and were, by an order of 21 October 1644, to pay 80*l*. thereout to Mrs. Vincent for the use of her husband, the late rector, upon his giving up his right to the rectory. They have paid this money, but have been unable to collect it all by about 30*l*., on account of the obstinacy of Thomas Russell and others, who refuse to pay their dues, though often demanded; Abraham Ewers and others have also refused to pay what is due from them to Mr. Harris, appointed by the House to the rectory upon the resignation of Mr. Vincent. Petitioners pray that Thomas Russell, and the others, may be ordered to appear and answer for their contempt. L. J., VIII. 156.

Feb. 11. Petition of Mountjoy Blount, Earl of Newport. He is now prisoner in the custody of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, but the charges are so great that he cannot bear them, as no part of his estate comes to his hands. [Feb. 11.] Petition of the vicars choral, Sherborne clerks, lay vicars, and other inferior officers of the church of Chichester. Petitioners are very poor men, with wives and children dependent upon them, and have from their youth been brought up for the service of the Cathedral (then in use) and thereby made incapable of other employment. By the ordinance sequestering the revenues of cathedrals, their means were likewise sequestered; they have since lived in a deplorable condition, and are likely to end their days in misery, unless the House shall commiserate their poor estate. They pray that they may receive from the sequestrators all the dues formerly paid them by the Dean and Chapter, with all other rents, dues, and arrears, which anciently belonged to them by virtue of their places. See L. J., VIII. 157.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John Stronghill to the Committee for Sequestrations, desiring that the Committee for Berkshire may be directed to send in their charge against him, that his case may be determined.
2. Copy of order of the Committee for Sequestrations for the Committee for Berkshire to hear the case and examine witnesses, and make certificate thereupon. 2 August 1645.
3. Copy of petition of John Stronghill. He was lately sequestered for having lent 100*l.* to the King about November 1642, and 800*l.* to the inhabitants of Reading then under the power of His Majesty's army; he has since lent 450*l.* to the Parliament, and paid all rates, taxes, and assessments, as some of the Committee for Berkshire well know; yet they have made certificate in his case without examining any witnesses, as was directed. He prays that they may be ordered to examine his witnesses, and then to make certificate. 25 Nov. 1645.

Feb. 12. Petition of James Harrington, Knight, and Colonel of the trained bands of the City of Westminster. His whole estate, worth more than 700*l.* per annum, is within six miles of Oxford, and his house there has been twice plundered by His Majesty's soldiers, twenty-four "bays" of building burnt to the ground, his tenants' cattle taken and driven away, which has caused the non-payment of his rents, and all for no cause except his faithful service to the State and Parliament. And as if this were only the beginning of their malice, they have, since his being in actual arms at Alton, sequestered his whole revenue, receiving all rents, profits, and arrears, the support of himself, wife, and ten children; and have given warrant for cutting down 2,000*l.* worth of his woods, part of which is already felled, after an offer of preserving it, if he would lay down his commission. Petitioner prays that according to that distributive justice which eminently shines in this Parliament, the House would grant him subsistence, and retaliation out of the estates and woods of delinquents and malignants near London, or in such other way as they shall think fit, the well-being of the parts necessarily conducing to the preservation of the whole.

Feb. 16. Petition of the parishioners of Gregory's, near Paul's, London. About eight years ago part of their church was pulled down, by order of the Council Board, to make way, as was pretended, for the repair of Paul's Church; but at the beginning of this Parliament, upon their complaint, it was ordered that they should have 1,000*l.* out of the stock of Paul's, and some materials besides, but they have not received more than 500*l.*, and could get no materials till Mr. Carter, His Majesty's surveyor, made a certificate in the matter; and now, when they are again beginning to rebuild their church, they are stopped by the Sub-Committee for Paul's, and since then, by an order from the House of the 11th instant, till the Sub-Committee shall have viewed the materials, and made certificate to the House; but there is no time limited for this, so that petitioners may be left another year destitute of a church. They pray that they may be allowed to continue the building, or that a short day may be fixed for the Committee to view the materials delivered to petitioners. L. J., VIII. 169.

The Earl of Salisbury has likewise paid all the assessments hitherto laid upon him.

Feb. 17. Petition of Nicholas Bacon, of Culford, in the county of Suffolk. Four months ago petitioner took the Covenant, and compounded for his delinquency. He has for two years been very infirm and sickly, and, in the opinion of his physicians, is not likely to recover unless he goes to a hotter climate. Petitioner having come to England to enter into negotiations for re-establishing the intercourse of free trade between the Crown of England, and the City of Bruges, was, upon his return from the King, taken at sea, and has ever since been detained in the Poultry Compter, although the ship and goods are by due course of law acquitted. Prays for his enlargement, in order that he may be enabled to effect a business so beneficial as this will prove for the increase of trade and navigation. L. J., VIII. 174.

Feb. 17. Letter from J[ohn] R[ushworth], at Torrington, to [the Speaker of the House of Commons]. On Saturday, the 14th, we marched from Crediton to Chimligh [Chumleigh], ten miles; the day very rainy, and the ways deep. On Sunday we marched two miles, when we had intelligence that Lord Hopton was at Torrington; and hearing that there was a troop of horse at Burrington, the General sent a party against them, who routed them and brought Lieutenant-Colonel Dundashe prisoner, mortally wounded, to Ring's Ash [Ashreigny]. This is the Dundashe who ran to the enemy when the Earl of Essex's forces lay about Thame. Another party of horse sent out at the same time also routed some of the enemy, and shot Major Brette, who, being well mounted, escaped. Meantime a broken bridge had been made up, and three regiments of horse and three of foot marched some four miles towards the enemy; the rest returned to Chimligh with orders to march by break of day. We hoped that the enemy, after the alarms we had given them, would have taken their resolution before morning, whether to go East or West, which we were very desirous of knowing. February the 16th the General, with his forces, joining those that had gone on to Ring's Ash, drew up his army in battalia on the moor within five miles of Torrington, and then advanced towards the town. After some skirmishing, a party was sent against Squire Roll's house, which the enemy quitted without resistance. After some further skirmishing between the forlorn hopes on each side, the enemy drew out their foot into the closes, about a quarter of a mile from the town; our forlorn hope then lined the hedges, and so the men faced one another within half musket shot for about two hours, exchanging coarse language, and bullets now and then. When all the horse and foot had come up they were drawn out in Mr. Roll's park, and supports immediately sent to second the forlorn hope. It was now growing dark, and after a council of war the General and others rode up to the forlorn hope to see the posture of the forces, and find out whether the reports of the flight of the enemy were true. Six dragoons were ordered to creep under a hedge near to the barricades to see if the enemy would answer. Their fire was returned by a very sharp volley, upon which the forlorn hope, seeing the dragoons engaged, also gave fire; the enemy replied all along their line, and our reserves coming up to support the forlorn, the whole army advanced, and so, about eight at night, the battle was begun about six fields from the town. We beat them from hedge to hedge into their barricades, which our men carried after about an hour's fighting, after several repulses, and so forced the enemy into the town; whereupon the horse were set in, and charged the enemy in the streets, and after hard fighting drove them out of the barricades at the further side of the town. Many prisoners were taken and put into the church; but many more threw away their arms and escaped in the darkness. No sooner were we possessed of the town than the enemy's magazine, about eighty barrels of powder, which were in the church, blew up; whether fired by accident or on purpose we cannot yet learn. Many of the prisoners were killed, many houses defaced, and the whole town shaken. Some of our men in the churchyard were killed, and two great pieces of lead fell within half a horse's length of the General. One whole barrel of powder was blown out into the street without taking fire. The enemy, seeing the explosion, made another charge under John Digby, brother to Lord Digby, but were repulsed by our musketeers; and our horse, instantly advancing, began the pursuit at eleven at night, and, I hope, will give a good account of the business. Thus has it pleased God to rout Lord Hopton's forces, foot and horse. We trust soon to follow them, and reduce the remnant. We hear that there were from 2,500 to 3,000 men. They fought valiantly, and defended their barricades at push of pike, and with the butt ends of their muskets, till our men got over a hedge and flanked them, which forced them to give way. The old Cornish foot, and Greenville's and Goring's old soldiers, English and Irish, were engaged, but are now scattered. The hedges in these parts are so thick that each hedge was a bulwark for the enemy. There are many wounded, but few slain on our side; of the enemy many. You shall have further particulars hereafter. Let the glory be given to God. Torrington, Feb. 17, 5 in y^e morning. We hear some of the horse are going towards Barnstable. Col. Cook is that way; but Colonel Whaley should quarter nearer Newbury to follow any that may come from Oxford, and not divert our horse, that are on so probable a design to settle the West of England. for relief to the House, but when the cause was fixed for hearing would not appear. They have since, by a plot, managed to get possession of the ships. Feb. [21]. Letter from Captain John Crouther in Cardiff Roads, to the Speaker of the House of Commons, giving some account of proceedings in Glamorganshire, and of a rising of the townsmen of Cardiff, when the Governor, with about three hundred men, was forced to take refuge in the Castle. Crouther battered the town from the sea to encourage those in the Castle to hold out, and they were shortly relieved by Major-General Langherne, and the town again reduced to obedience. This letter is much mutilated. See C. J., IV., 457.

Annexed:—

1. A perfect relation of the occurrences happened in Glamorganshire, in and about Cardiff, together with the manner how that town was taken. Colonel Kearne, a Committeeman of Glamorganshire, a discontented man, on the 6th Feb., pretending to defend Cardiff against the Ragland rogues, joined with them, rose against the Governor, and forced him, with some seamen whom the writer had put into the town, and the well-affected, to take refuge in the Castle, and strictly begirt them, offering quarter to all but Committeemen and seamen. The writer encouraged those in the Castle to hold out by daily approaching as near as possible with six barks and boats, and firing upon the town with large ordnance. On the 18th Major-General Langherne and others came to the relief of the place, and routed the enemy, who marched out to meet them, but on the 20th they surrendered upon terms; the articles, however, were afterwards broken by them, and they were pursued and many slain.

Feb. 24. Petition of Richard Ingle. Sailing to Maryland with letters of marque, he there supported the well-affected party against the papists and malignants; but since his return actions at law have been brought against him in the name of Thomas Cornwallis, for his conduct. Now as the House ordered, 25th Dec. 1645, that an Act should be framed for settling the command of Maryland under protestants, he prays that his case may be heard at the bar, or before a Committee. L. J., VIII. 186. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 25 Dec. 1645, mentioned in preceding. L. J., VIII. 186. In extenso.

2. Statement of the case on behalf of Cornwallis. He planted himself in Maryland many years ago, and about two years since Ingle came there to trade, in a London ship, and was there accused of high treason for words spoken against the King in communication about the differences between the King and the Parliament in England. He was arrested, and his ship and goods seized; but Cornwallis, to show his affection to Parliament, found means to free Ingle and restore him to his ship and goods, for which he was fined, and paid the highest sum that could by law be laid upon him, and for safety of his person was forced to leave his estate in the hands of a servant, and fly with Ingle to England, where Ingle gave testimony before a Committee of his affection to Parliament, and of his sufferings in the cause. Ingle again going to Maryland, Cornwallis entrusted him with goods to the value of about 200*l.*; but Ingle kept the goods, and taking advantage of Cornwallis' absence, landed some men near his house and rifled him to the value of 2,500*l.* at least; and on his return to England, complained against Cornwallis before the Committee for Examinations, as an enemy to the State, thereby hoping to shelter himself from the law; but after full debate Cornwallis was left to the law, and has brought his action accordingly, and obtained a commission for examination of witnesses in Maryland. To stay these proceedings Ingle caused Cornwallis to be arrested, and imprisoned upon two feigned actions of 15,000*l.*, but Cornwallis got out of prison by the help of his friends. That project failing, Ingle has, by false allegations, obtained an order in Parliament to stop the proceedings at law till the matters contained in the petition are determined, and having obtained this order, he absents himself and prosecutes the matter no further; and now Cornwallis, who has attended the House several days with counsel, and can no longer bear the expense, prays that the case may be speedily heard, or else that he may be left at liberty to try his action at law.

Feb. 28. Paper from the Scots Commissioners. They are to receive instructions from Scotland by the Lord Chancellor, who is now with the army before Newark, and will speedily give an answer to the desires of both Houses of the 26th instant.

March 1. Letter from John Rushworth to Mr. Speaker : I have already acquainted you with the coming of the armies to Launceston, and the taking of three hundred horse near Stratton. The army rested two days at Launceston, and then advanced towards Bodmin, taking some scouts prisoners on the way. Hearing that two companies of dragoons sent towards Camelford to gain intelligence were in danger of being cut off by Sir James Smyth, a thousand horse were sent to relieve them, but before they came the dragoons had made good their retreat to a church without losing a man, and now Sir James is likely to be cut off in his turn, as we have in a manner got between him and Bodmin. The country people, who had heard that Cornish men would get no quarter, are much surprised at the civil conduct of the soldiers, and have brought provisions to market, and were glad to bring them on their backs, Goring's forces having plundered them of all their horses. Friday was the day for the posse of the county to appear, but many refused to come, saying that they found us friends, and no enemies, and that they had no greater enemies than Goring's horse; and indeed nothing can be of more advantage to us than to drive Goring's force before us, for their conduct is so barbarous that they make every man's hand against them. We might have been at Bodmin to-day, but it was determined to quarter in the fields and villages to-night, and to-morrow to march thither in a close body of horse and foot, as more secure. Prisoners say that they are glad to be taken, for they knew that they should all be taken at last. Some gentlemen of quality have sent privately for protections, which keeps all their part of the county quiet; and we hear that Lord Mohun is unwilling to obey Lord Hopton's commands, but rather stands upon his guard. Unless the enemy's horse break through this very night, which they are not like to do, we shall drive them into a corner, for they are between us and the Land's End.

Bodmin, March 2. Ten at night. As the messenger stays till the morning, I send you a further account. At break of day this morning the army was drawn up on the heath within two miles of Bodmin, and a party, sent out to discover if the enemy were in the town, brought intelligence that horse and foot quitted it about ten o'clock last night, the latter mostly Welshmen with leeks in their hats, and drunk and disorderly. Lieutenant-General Cromwell, who went last night to relieve our dragoons, was sent to secure Warre Bridge, and intercept some of the enemy's horse that we heard had gone in that direction. The townspeople are glad at our coming, having had no market for two days, for Goring's horse robbed them, and took away their horses. Where we are we can see the sea on both hands, and if the enemy had had any gallantry left in them they would have showed it here, for their only strength consists in horse, who would have had room enough on the heath to play their game. The intelligence about the smallness of the number of foot that appeared at the posse on Friday, and about Lord Mohun, is confirmed; it is unfortunate we have not a squadron of ships towards Falmouth, for they might have intercepted rich booty and persons of great quality. The Prince is at Pendennis, and will, I believe, be in France within two days, if the wind hold. Listrythell [Lostwithiel] has been occupied, and four wainloads of ammunition taken, and some musketeers brought in prisoners. The enemy are so alarmed at our parties that they are obliged to keep in bodies, and can get no rest. We keep strong guards at Lostwithiel, Warre Bridge, and the fords upon both rivers. Sir John Greenville's lieutenant-colonel and divers others are taken prisoners. The messenger stays till Tuesday morning. I can only add that we hear the enemy bends west towards Truro; the messenger takes pains for so long a journey.

Bodmin, March 3, 12 at noon. Since the writing of my letter a gentleman, Mr. Fourné, who married Sir Nicholas Crispe's daughter, is come to the army. He says the Prince embarked yesterday at Falmouth, and set to sea this morning with Lord Berkshire, Lord Capel, Culpepper, and Hide; other ships are gone with Sir Thomas Fanshawe and others; another ship, with their finest horses on board, split upon the rocks; Hopton and his forces bend west as fast as they can go, and give all for lost. The Prince, it is thought, is not gone for France, but for Scilly. If our ships were come up yesterday there might have been fine sport.

This letter was read in the Commons on the 7th. C. J., IV. 467.

March 2. Draft ordinance to continue the Commissioners in Ulster. L. J., VIII. 192. In extenso.

March 2. Draft order for payment of 500*l.* to Sir Charles Egerton, out of the estates, fines, or compositions of any of the persons (set down in a paper presented by him) which he himself shall nominate. L. J., VIII. 194. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Another copy.

2. Paper presented by Sir Charles Egerton of the names of persons who have estates, and who have raised forces within the parishes of Ripon, and Kirkby Malzeard against the Parliament.

March 2. Petition of Mary Foorde in behalf of the protestant inhabitants in Virginia and Maryland. Captain Cornwallis stands guilty of the facts mentioned in the paper annexed, and she therefore prays the House to proceed against him according to the demerits of his offences.

Annexed:—

1. Charge to be preferred by Mary Foorde, widow, against Captain Cornwallis, who stands under bail to the Committee of Examinations to answer any matter of fact that shall be objected against him there, or elsewhere. Cornwallis is an agent for settling a popish faction in Maryland, ready to rob, murder, and destroy any that should oppose them; and the better to effect his purpose it was intended to plant that place with children in whom his principles might be fixed, for which purpose Cornwallis stole two children from Mrs. Foorde, one a boy of three or four years old, the other a girl of five or six, to be brought up there according to his will. Cornwallis about eleven years since, in further pursuance of his design, attempted to seize a boat of Virginia in Chesapeake Bay, a free place for trade for all the inhabitants, and when the Virginians stood upon their guard he commanded his men to fire upon them, when Mr. Warren was killed, and others hurt; and lastly, in 1644, Cornwallis and one Brent treacherously surprised a ship belonging to Richard Ingle, and tried to force the crew to sail for Bristol to fight against the Parliament. See L. J., VIII. 186.

March 3. Draft ordinance for making Gilbert Gerard Clerk of the Assizes for Norfolk circuit, in the place of George Parker, who has been in actual arms against the Parliament. L. J., VIII. 195.

March 3. Draft order giving the High Sheriff of the county of Gloucester leave to live in the city and county of the City of Gloucester. L. J., VIII. 196. In extenso.

March 3. Draft order for payment of 2,000*l.* for the garrison of Abingdon. L. J., VIII. 196. In extenso.

March 3. Petition of Anthony Fernandes Carvaiall, subject to the King of Spain. Prays that Martin de Lazon may be directed to prove his title to certain cochineal and silver, brought home in the ship Clare, and now claimed by him, or that the matter may be left to be decided at law. L. J., VIII. 196. In extenso.

March 3. Copy of order referring the matter to a hearing at the Common Law. L. J., VIII. 195.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of orders of the Commons for portion of the cargo of the Clare to be sold, the value to be secured upon the public faith, and the claimants thereto to be left to the law. 22 Dec. 1642. C. J., II. 899. In extenso.

2. Copy of an order for portion of the cargo of the Clare to be taken possession of by the Deputy-Lieutenants of Southampton and others, to prevent any wrong to the foreigners, who may have claim thereto. 27 Aug. 1642. L. J., V. 328. In extenso.

3. Petition of Carvaial disputing De Lazon's title to the goods in question, and praying that they may be left to try their claim at law. (Undated).
4. Copy of another petition of same respecting the hearing of the matter before referees. (Undated).
5. Copy of report from the Committee of the Navy that the value of the goods in question should be secured by ordinance to De Lazon, but that as Carvaial had advanced money to Parliament upon the cochineals, and made returns to persons in Spain on account of the same, that no determination should be given in the matter until the account is audited and perfected. 20 Sept. 1645.
6. Statement of the case. In August 1642 the ship Clare arrived at Southampton from the West Indies laden with silver, cochineal, ginger, hides, and other commodities. The House hearing that the ship was brought there without the owner's consent, made several orders about seizing the goods, and finally ordered the silver to be brought up, and the other goods warehoused, but afterwards released the goods to the merchants upon bail of 50,000*l.*; some part of the goods were sold by Carvaial as agent for Diaz of Rouen, but the goods really belonged to Martin de Lazon, a subject of the King of France, who had formerly lived and traded in Spain, and had a stock in the West Indies, but had returned to live in his own country; this stock had been sent over in this ship, but not in De Lazon's name, as he durst no more trade openly in the King of Spain's dominions; the poor man has been in litigation to recover his own for three years, has been brought to extreme want, and spent to his shirt in following the suit, and has lain twelve months in prison for debts contracted in this way, which cannot but be a grief to any man's soul that hears it, especially of the members of the House of Commons, who must answer it to God that any poor creature should perish by their act, for the House first seized upon this man's goods, and having suffered him to prosecute his right before them and their committees, not only for months but years, ought not now to leave him a poor man, who knows not a word of English nor the formalities of our courts, to law to recover his own (as it plainly appears to be), and that in the possession of the House.
7. Petition of Captain Martin De Lazon, French merchant. Carvaial has, in petitioner's absence by false representations, obtained an order for the case to be heard at Common Law; petitioner prays that, as the case has already been heard before the Commissioners of the Navy, it may, to avoid the prolixity of the law, be heard before them again. (Undated).

March 3. Paper from the Scots Commissioners, desiring that the order for paying 15,000*l.* per month for their army before Newark may be made effectual. L. J., VIII. 197. In extenso.

March 4. Report from the Committee appointed to assess the Peers, &c. The Duchy liberty consists of very poor tradesmen and artificers, and only a few peers, and if they are not assessed at 40*l.* the assessment cannot be raised. L. J., VIII. 197.

March 4. Assessment for the Duchy Liberty towards raising 193*l.* 6*d.* for maintenance of the army under Sir Thomas Fairfax for two months, beginning the 1st of Dec. 1645. L. J., VIII. 197. In extenso.

Dec. 4. Petition of William Latham and eighty others, creditors of the late Earl of Carlisle, that the Committee, to whom the case was referred, may have power given them to consider of some course for satisfaction of petitioners' claims, not only out of the Carribee Islands, but also out of the Earl's personal estate, and other estates liable to the payment of debts. L. J., VIII. 197.

March 4. Message from the Commons, with an answer to the Scots Commissioners that no further propositions are to be offered to the King, except one concerning delinquents. L. J., VIII. 197. In extenso.

March 4. Petition of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London. Petitioners were, by order of Parliament, appointed sequestrators of the rents, revenues, and materials of Paul's. The House of Lords lately ordered, upon certificate of Mr. Carter, Surveyor of his Majesty's Works, that certain materials from Paul's should be delivered to the parishioners of Gregory's for the rebuilding of their church, by virtue of which they have possessed themselves of great quantity of freestone, hewed and squared, not in their order. The petitioners, by another order, were directed to raise by sale of the materials for Paul's 500*l.* for payment of the workmen employed upon Gregory's, and after that to raise, by sale of some scaffolding, 1,746*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* for Colonel Jephson's regiment. Now the petitioners are of opinion that the materials are much wanted for the repair of the fabric of Paul's, that the workmen might long since have been paid, and the parishioners of Gregory's provided with a church at far less expense; and they therefore hold it their duty to present the annexed certificate, and pray that the materials of Paul's may be preserved, to be employed by them on the repair of that ancient building; and that the workmen may be satisfied by Mr. Grigg, who has in his hands above 9,000*l.* of the money contributed towards the re-edifying of Paul's. L. J., VIII. 197.

Annexed.—

1. Certificate of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London.—

i. Touching Gregory's church and parish by Paul's. The House decided as they have heard that those who pulled down Gregory's should rebuild it; 500*l.* has already been given out of the contributions for Paul's, which would do the whole work, if Parliament would assign some part of Paul's Church, which is already built, to the parishioners of Gregory's. Under the order of the 29th of August 1645, the parishioners have gotten into their hands a great part of the stone allowed them, ready hewed and squared, the working of which costs 4*d.* for every foot, and if the order is to be carried out they must have all the oak timber except about half a load, though the whole of it, and much more, is wanted for the steeple. Much money has been laid out in re-edifying that part of the walls of the church of Paul's, to which Gregory's church adjoined, and it would be uncomely to build another church like a shed against it, since the houses about it are all pulled down, and the place where Gregory's church stood is very useful and necessary, especially in these troublesome times to be laid all open for public use, and particularly for the drawing up of horse or foot for the public safeguard of the City.

ii. Touching the materials that were ordered to be sold for the payment of poor workmen. Mr. Grigg, paymaster of the workmen, has in his hands 9,000*l.* for the purpose, and they might long ago have found him out, as it is some months since he returned to London to compound for his delinquency. Mr. Carter sells materials, without giving account, so that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen can give no perfect account thereof either.

iii. Touching the scaffolds and money for supply of Colonel Jephson. The only scaffolds of any value are those about the great steeple, and if they are taken the steeple must be taken down, as it is much decayed, the scaffolds having been set up to prevent danger; to take down the scaffolds will cost half as much as they are worth, if not more, and the steeple cannot be taken down without them. Part of the walls, most of the roofs inside, and the floors and windows are in great need of speedy repair, which will cost a round sum, and if not done, will be dangerous to those that resort to the church. No power has been granted for renewal of leases, while the taxes on the present revenue are great, and many of the evidences and Court rolls have been embezzled by those that had the custody of them, so that much of the revenue cannot be discovered, and the yearly rents now received are not sufficient to satisfy the payments, which are above 1,040*l.* yearly.

March 4. Petition of the parishioners of Gregory's by Paul's, London. About eight years ago their church was taken down by order of the then Council Board, to make room for the repair of Paul's, contrary to the will of the parishioners, upon whose complaint at the beginning of this Parliament the House of Commons proceeded against the offenders by way of impeachment before the Lords, and an order was made that 1,000*l.* should be paid to the parishioners, and certain materials granted out of those prepared for repair of Paul's to enable them to rebuild their church on its original site; they have, however, never received more than 500*l*. and certain materials, and now, when they have set men to work to rebuild their church, they are stopped by the Sub-Committee at Paul's. They pray that the orders of the House may not be thus superseded, but that they may be permitted to go on with their work, and to take the benefit of the season of the year therein. L. J., VIII. 197.

March 4. Petition of Roger Norton, citizen and stationer of London. Upon pretence that some books were wrongly entered to petitioner in the register of the Stationers' Company, contrary to the custom and orders of the society, they have crossed the entry, whereby petitioner is deprived of the benefit of the ordinance for printing. He prays that the House would hear the case, which is a question of the custom of the Company, or else refer it to a judicial hearing in Chancery. L. J., VIII. 198.

March 4. Draft order for Major-General Langherne to have Mr. Barlow's estate in Pembrokeshire. L. J., VIII. 199.

Petitioner, desirous of retiring from the King's quarters into the Low Countries, to his mother, sisters, and friends, came to town on Friday, expecting the benefit of the ordinance for those who should come in before the 25th instant, he went on Saturday to the Committee, but found no admittance, and was afterwards taken by the keepers of Lambeth House. He prays to be released, and to have leave to go into the Low Countries, as he has engaged never directly or indirectly, to do anything against the Parliament. L. J., VIII. 200.

L. J., VIII. 205. In extenso.

March 6. Petition of Dominic Petit and Peter de Liques. The House having given a protection to petitioners whilst pursuing their invention for raising sunken ships, appointed the disputes that have arisen between petitioners and Rednes, and others, to be heard in December last, and the hearing was prevented by weightier matters; and in contempt of the House Rednes and others have proceeded against petitioners in other courts, and laid them both in Newgate. Petitioners pray to have the benefit of their protections to be set at liberty, and to have their ships, engines, &c. restored to them. L. J., VIII. 201.

March 7. Draft of an ordinance of the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament, after advice had with the Assembly of Divines for the electing of Elders consisting of Parochial, Classical, Provincial, and National Assemblies in subordination to one another, trying of elders elected, suspending of ignorant and scandalous persons from the Lord's Supper, ordering of appeals, and other matters conducing to the speedy settling of the Presbyterian government within the Kingdom of England and Dominion of Wales, and in particular within the province of London, wherein the substance of all former ordinances of Parliament touching Church Government (with some necessary additions and alterations) is digested into one, for the more clear and easy putting of the same into speedy execution within the Church of England.

This ordinance, Mr. Hollis said, in bringing it up, contained all former votes on the same subject. It was brought from the Commons on the 7th, and read twice the same day, was debated in Committee on the 13th, passed, with amendments, on the 14th, and returned from the Commons, with the amendments agreed to, on the 16th. It is not entered in the Journal. See L. J., VIII. 202, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Committee for the county of Essex that the following offenders should be pardoned: a labourer for stealing a mare, a woman for murder by witchcraft, a labourer for burglary, two labourers for stealing two geldings, two women for murdering their bastard children, eight women for feloniously entertaining evil spirits, and a labourer for burning a dwelling house, and likewise a barn with corn therein. March 11. Application for Mr. John Fordham to be instituted to the rectory of West Tilbury. L. J., VIII. 207.

March 11. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled. They desire to thank the Lords for their endeavours to prevent the subversion of the laws and the introduction of arbitrary government, but they hear that Commissioners are to be chosen in every province to have superintendent power in Church Government; and they learn by a petition that this is likely to be a great discouragement to those who are willing to submit to the Presbyterian Government established by Parliament, and the want of further directions as to the choice and employment of parochial elders is likely to obstruct the votes of the House of February last. The petitioners have therefore thought it right to offer the following considerations to the House, that the Commissioners may be required to act according to certain prescribed rules, to prevent the exercise of arbitrary power; if Church Government cannot be settled without entrusting some persons with arbitrary power concerning sins not enumerated, the Commissioners, being men, are as likely to err as the Assemblies; and the petitioners hear that the choosing of the Commissioners is well pleasing to those that have opposed the establishment of Presbyterian Government. They therefore request that no Commissioners or other officers may be appointed to exercise any church censures contrary to the Scriptures; and if the appointing Commissioners be according to the word of God, that then the obedience of all the subjects of this kingdom may be equally required thereunto, and to the rest of the Church Government, which is and shall be established by both Houses of Parliament according to the solemn League and Covenant. Noted.—Read and sent to H. C. from the LL. Martij xi.

There is no mention of this petition in the Journals.

Annexed:—

1. Questions and resolutions upon preceding whether the petition is a breach of privilege or not. Resolved in the affirmative. Whether to communicate to the Commons the petition, and vote upon it, and to desire them to appoint a committee to join with a Committee of Lords to represent this vote to the Common Council of London in as fair a way as shall be thought fit by both Houses of Parliament. 2. Copy of foregoing resolutions.
3. List of Committee appointed in pursuance of preceding resolution.
4. Instructions for the Committee: to observe the constant good affections expressed by the City of London for the preservation of the privileges of Parliament, and the importance of keeping those privileges inviolable; to state those privileges are broken, when Corporations or others offer reasons against resolutions in matters depending between the two Houses, especially when this is done in the very House that passed the resolutions, and when Corporations or others receive petitions from any persons in matters concerning the whole kingdom, and depending between both Houses; to state the reasons of the House for appointing Commissioners; that there is no charge made except as to who should exercise jurisdiction in keeping scandalous men from the sacrament; to let the Common Council know that Parliament expects that they will forbear such proceedings hereafter, and deliver up to Parliament the petition mentioned in their petition; and, lastly, that the Committee have power to meet and consider amongst themselves the foregoing heads.

March 13. Petition of Lieutenant George Hume. Petitioner is now in service under Colonel Sands [Sanderson], and was to have gone to his charge this day, but yesternight was arrested at the suit of Mrs. Heatly. Petitioner had agreed for cure of a wound, and for taking out a bullet, for 5*l.*; of this he has already paid 3*l.* 10*s.*, but 20*l.* is now demanded; he is not a field officer, and has a wife and four small children dependent upon him; cannot pay more than the 5*l.*, and has 300*l.* owing to him for arrears of pay. He prays to be released from the Gatehouse, that he may return to his charge. L. J., VIII. 208.

Annexed:—

off of his ears, close imprisonment and banishment, were illegal, and unfit to continue upon record; yet has he had no damages for his unjust sufferings and corporal punishment, which were executed upon him with such severity that in the cutting off of his ears an artery was cut, which has deprived him ever since of the hearing of one of his ears; neither has he had any reparation for his loss in estate, for his father left him 200*l.* a year in money and lands, and he gained as much more some years by his practice; but by all the expenses of his suits and imprisonments he has been brought to such want that he has been obliged to sell great part of his land, his wife releasing her jointure, for support of themselves and their family, while almost one half of the rents remaining to him are taken for assessments; and if his friends try to prefer him to any public place, though detracting tongues can say nothing against him, yet they plead his poverty as an argument against his preferment, saying that he is a beggar, and will but be a burthen to the Commonwealth; thus they make indigence the cause of further misery to petitioner, who was born to a competent estate, and ever lived (before his troubles) both at home and in foreign nations as a gentleman of credit, worth, and reputation. Petitioner prays that a day may be appointed to award him reparation for his losses, that indigence, which usually conciliates favour, may no longer lie as a reproach upon him. L. J., VIII. 214.

Annexed:—

1. Paper containing the names of those that voted against Dr. Bastwick at the several sentences pronounced against him at the High Commission Court, 12 Feb. 1634-5; in the Star Chamber, 14 June 1637; and at the making of the order of the Council Board for transferring him into exile in the Isle of Scilly. 27 Aug. 1637.

- March 17. Petition of Thomas Lenthall, Francis Lenthall and John Marston, merchants, praying that the order of the 27th of February, staying the proceedings of petitioners at law against Sir Wm. Russell and others, patentees for the sole trade of Barbary, which was made without hearing the petitioners, may be discharged, and that petitioners may be left to pursue their course at law before the Judges Delegates, according to the order of the 13th of January last. - March 17. Petition of Howell Jones, and Alice his wife, late widow of Captain Gerrard Wright. Pray that the Committee for Sequestrations for the county of Warwick may be ordered to pay to petitioners arrears of composition arising out of certain lands in the county, which the Committee pretend to belong to Mary Yaxley, a papist, though petitioners are ready to prove that they belonged to the late Captain Wright, who was slain at the siege of Reading. L. J., VIII. 215.
- March 17. Petition of Christopher Savery of Devon. For his zealous adherence to Parliament petitioner has been dispossessed of his estate for three years and a half past, and has exhausted his credit by borrowing 200*l.* to lend to the State, and 200*l.* to redeem his eldest son from the enemy, besides other sums for maintenance of himself and his family; being thus unable for a time to raise any money he fears the merciless malignity of some of his creditors, and therefore prays protection against all suits upon his giving security for payment whenever he shall have some possibility of so doing. March 17. Paper from Lord Inchiquin. The House of Commons thought fit that 12,000*l.* should be sent for the relief of the soldiers in Munster to keep them together till further supplies could be sent, but the House will please to take notice that 6,000*l.* of this sum was to pay debts and engagements to officers, so that only 6,000*l.* was left for future relief; and though the money has been voted, no means has been taken to raise it, and none of the cities will advance the money upon the ordinance without security upon the Excise. He therefore desires that the House may be moved to mortgage the Excise as security for the money, for the province of Munster is likely to be lost unless the money is speedily sent to keep the soldiers together.

Annexed:—

1. Draft letter from Parliament to Walter Strickland in pursuance of preceding petition.

March 19. Petition of Sir Robert Carr, stating that last May twelvemonth he was apprehended by warrant from Mr. Speaker, and desiring that the Lords' order for him to appear before them may be so worded as to secure him from any offence to the House of Commons. L. J., VIII. 220.

March 19. Petition of Thomas Jones and John Hathorley, citizens, and dyers of London. About two years ago they became bail for Richard Fincham at the suit of John Rutter, and at the trial, no one appearing, judgment was given against Fincham, and petitioners called upon to pay damages and costs; they afterwards arrested Fincham and imprisoned him in the Marshalsea, but he succeeded, by combination with Rutter, in obtaining his release on a warrant obtained by misinformation to the Earl of Essex, that Fincham was a trooper. Petitioners, who are thus left to pay the damages and costs, and great expense besides, pray that all the parties may be called before the House and compelled to do justice. J. J., VIII. 220.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of affidavit of Samuel Hall, keeper of the Marshalsea, that about ten days before Fincham was discharged, Rutter came and desired to see him, and to drink a pint of wine with him, and told Fincham in the tavern that if he would get himself discharged he knew how to get his money. 22 April 1645.
2. Statement of the case.
3. Order, signed by the Earls of Manchester and Warwick, appointing a day for hearing the case referred to them. 10 April 1646.

March 19. Petition of Mountjoy, Earl of Newport.

He has suffered much by the spoiling of his houses, and had only one house called the College, in Fotheringhay, left, to which he intended to send his children for their present abode, but he now hears that it is likely to be much defaced, by cutting down the leads, and the pipes that convey water to the house, and breaking down wainscot doors, which will make the place not fit for habitation. He prays that some of his servants may be allowed to abide in the house, to preserve it in a condition to receive his children, who have no other place to repair to. L. J., VIII. 220.

March 20. Draft resolutions respecting the names of delinquents to be left out of the Propositions for Peace. See L. J., VIII. 222.

March 20. Petition of Thomas Devenish, keeper of Winchester House prison. Praying that he may be allowed to set at liberty certain prisoners committed for petty misdemeanours, upon security from Captain William Fortescue that he will transport them to Barbados, who if detained till the next Quarter Sessions will then be discharged in course, to the danger of the country. L. J., VIII. In extenso.

March 21. Petition of Edward Corbett, Fellow of Merton College, in the University of Oxford, and a Member of the Assembly of Divines. The parsonage of Haseley, in Oxfordshire, is void by the death of Dr. Potter; it was formerly in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, but is now at their Lordships' disposal. Petitioner, who was by ordinance of Parliament presented to the living of Chartham, Kent, which is far from his own county of Shropshire and from Oxford, where till driven out he had a comfortable subsistence, prays that the living of Haseley may be conferred upon him, and Chartham given to another.

March 21. Draft ordinance for the appointment of Corbett to the living of Haseley. L. J., VIII. 224. This ordinance passed the Lords, but was laid aside in the Commons; a subsequent ordinance, however, to the same effect passed both Houses. C. J., IV. 634.

March 21. Petition of Lieutenant George Hume [or Haines]. Petitioner served in the army from the beginning, but having been wounded at Newbury and in Cornwall he was obliged to remain in Plymouth at his own charge for seven weeks, and then coming to town engaged a surgeon Heatly for further cure and care of his wounds, and gave him 3*l.* 10*s.* Heatly is dead, and his widow has arrested and cast petitioner into prison upon a demand for 14*l.* more, which he cannot pay, though 300*l.* is owing to him for arrears. Prays for enlargement. L. J., VIII. 224.

March 21. Petition of the participants in the draining of the level of Hatfield Chase, and parts adjacent in the counties of York, Lincoln, and Nottingham. Upon a former complaint from petitioners of the outrages and riots committed by some of the tenants of the manor of Epworth, the House, on the 10th of December last, ordered that the Sheriff of the county should, at the request of the participants, appoint a deputy to suppress such riots, but the Sheriff of Lincoln refused; saying there was no law enabling him so to do, and should the participants recover the lands now drowned by the rioters, they are liable to the like malice again. Upon complaint to the Committee of Lincoln, the Committee made an order which the poor tenants are forced to enter into bonds to obey, the effect of which will be to oust the landowners, and to settle the commoners, who have committed these outrages, in their places. Petitioners pray that the bonds may be brought into the House and justice done, some of the principal rioters sent for, and the Commissioners of Sewers ordered to re-edify the sluices, &c. by demolishing which the rioters have caused all the loss. L. J., VIII. 224.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Gibbon, that Francis Clynton, High Sheriff of the county of Lincoln refused to appoint a deputy to suppress the riots. 9 March.
2. Copy of order of the Committee for the County of Lincoln that the tenants to the participants shall give bonds for payment of their rents for the following year into the hands of the Committee, and shall thereupon plough and sow their lands; and if within the year the participants shall not obtain some legal confirmation, then the tenants shall quit their lands to the inhabitants. 18 October 1645.
3. Affidavit of Edward Hill, that on the 6th of October last Wm. Wash, bellman of Belton, went to the houses of all the inhabitants and told them to go into the improved grounds in the manor of Epworth, and pull down the houses and fences of the participants, and put in their own cattle, which they did, destroying the crops, cutting to pieces the ploughs and harrows, and wounding and beating all who opposed them, laying waste more than 3,000 acres. 10 February 1645-6.

4. Affidavit of Robert Palmer, of Epworth, to the same effect as preceding. 10 February 1645-6.

5. Affidavit of Edward Hill, that in December 1642 Thomas Peacock and others pulled up the shuttledoors of the sluice called Snow Sewer, and let in the spring tides of Trent, which drowned above 6,000 acres, with the houses, crops, and stacks, and then they let down the shuttledoors again and kept the land drowned; and when the deponent and others came to pull up the doors and let the water run off, Peacock and the rest, armed with muskets, forks, &c., beat them away and kept the level drowned. 10 February 1645-6.

6. Affidavit of Jacob Vernoy, similar to the first affidavit of Edward Hill. 10 February 1645-6.

7. Copy of order of the House of the 10th of December 1645 mentioned in the petition. L. J., VIII. 36. In extenso.

8. Petition of inhabitants within the manor of Epworth in the Isle of Axholm, in the county of Lincoln. Some of the tenants to the participants of the Level of Hatfield Chase, adjoining the Isle, have, by order of the Committee at Lincoln, given bonds for payment of their rents due at Lady Day and Michaelmas for ground lying within the Isle to which petitioners lay claim; the bonds are to be deposited in the hands of the Committee for the use of those to whom the lands shall be found to belong after trial at law; issues are now joined, and the bonds are taken in the names of John Wray and Thomas Leicester, who are well worthy of the trust. Petitioners therefore pray the House to dispose no otherwise of the bonds till they shall be heard to show cause to the contrary.

March 21. Warrant for the Gentleman Usher to attach and bring before the House Thomas Peacock and other rioters. L. J., VIII. 224.

March 21. Petition of Thomas Willys. For two years and a half petitioner attended the House as Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, losing all profits for a year because of the carrying away of the Great Seal. In August last, having sold his plate, and having no further means of subsistence, he obtained leave to go to his house in Hampshire to see if he could raise means to support himself and his family, but he was made prisoner by Captain Lovelace, and many of his horses and goods taken; for redress of this, and to save the rest of his goods, he was constrained to go to Oxford, and when there was forbidden to depart without leave; in his absence Mr. Bolls, a clerk, left by petitioner as his deputy, has been sworn in his place, in favour of petitioner as he conceives, till he should return to execute it himself; petitioner having got out of Oxford has voluntarily come in, and in his absence has been ready to do all service for the friends of Parliament. Prays to be restored to his office. L. J., VIII. 225.

March 21. Draft ordinances for continuance for one month longer of a former ordinance for the Northern Association. C. J., IV. 482. In extenso.

March 23. Petition of the parishioners of Gregory's, near Paul's, London. Notwithstanding the orders of the House, they have been stopped in rebuilding their church by the Sub-Committee for Paul's, Dr. Burgess saying that their church should not be built as a shed against Paul's. They pray to be allowed to go on with their building, that they may not lose the time of year. L. J., VIII. 226.

March 23. Order for the meeting of the Committee appointed to consider the matter. L. J., VIII. 226.

March 23. Message from the Commons for the appointment of a Committee of both Houses to go to the Common Council of the City of London, to acquaint them with the articles for the disbanding of the forces of the enemy in the West, &c. L. J., VIII. 227.

March 23. Paper from the Scots Commissioners pressing for the speedy discovery of Robert Wright, and the unknown knight who aspersed the Scots. L. J., VIII. 231. In extenso.

March 24. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel John Lilburne. The House declared the sentences against petitioner illegal, and gave him 2,000*l.* damages, to be raised equally out of the estates of Lord Cottington, Sir Francis Windebank, and James Ingram, late Deputy Warden of the Fleet, but Lord Cottington's estate is already settled upon the Prince Elector for payment of 6,000*l.* per annum, though worth much more. Sir Francis Windebank's estate lying about Berkshire is sequestered, and Ingram has no personal estate, and his real estate is under extent, and nothing likely to be realised from it for a long time. Petitioner therefore prays that so much of each of their lands may be settled upon him by ordinance as will be equal to the sums appointed to be raised from them respectively at the rate of eight years' purchase, as lands were worth before the wars, and if he can receive no present benefit from Ingram's estate, that he may have interest at eight per cent., and the principal in lands when the extent has run out. L. J., VIII. 234.

March 24. Paper respecting the manor of Milton, Bucks, the estate of Wm. Stafford, of which Sir John Corbet is to have the profits. L. J., VIII. 234.

March 24. Petition of the merchants, owners of shipping, seamen, and fishermen of the port of Plymouth. Before the war the fishing trade of the Newfoundland was the seminary of seamen, and chief support of trade in these parts, and now, having obtained some relaxation from their hostile employments, the petitioners are desirous to revive their trade, but are much discouraged by Sir David Kirke, a notorious malignant, who occupies the principal places for fishing, burns petitioners' stages, and "train fats," takes away their salt boats, and other necessities, and sets up taverns and tipping houses by which the seamen are much "deboysed;" and last fishing season he threatened to seize petitioners' ships for the King, terming them rebels, contrary to law and His Majesty's Commission for the well governing of Newfoundland. They pray that Sir David Kirke may be brought home to answer these charges, and that they may for the future be protected in their fishing. This petition is referred to in the Journal as that of the Mayor of Plymouth and others. L. J., VIII. 234.

March 24. Letter from Lord Stourton at Oxford to Lord Grey of Warke:—Fearing my former letters have miscarried, I renew my suit that you would procure a pass for me to come to London to compound, if the Lords so please, or to go into Wiltshire to any tenant's house to reside and compound there, for all my estate is sequestered, and my wife, children, and grandchildren have not beds to lie on. I pray you to present my sad condition to the Lords.

March 24. Letter from Lord Stourton at Oxford to the Earl of Pembroke; almost identical with preceding.

March 24. Petition of Captain William Fortescue. By an order of the 20th instant the House directed that two justices of the peace for the county of Surrey should consider the offences of the prisoners in Winchester House, that they might be delivered to petitioner to be taken to the Island of Barbadoes, but the justices are of opinion that they have not sufficient authority under the order for the purpose. Petitioner therefore prays that Sir John Evelyn and Mr. John Goodwyn, or some other justices, may be authorised to deliver certain prisoners to him, as they are committed for petty felonies, and not for murder or manslaughter, and have given their consent under their hands to go with petitioner.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the 20th instant. L. J., VIII. 222.
2. Draft of an order in accordance with the prayer of the petition.

March 26. Petition of the eighty poor men, pensioners of the Hospital of King James, founded in Charterhouse by Thomas Sutton, Esq. In July last the quarterly stipends of pensioners, and of the scholars and officers of the hospital were reduced, and also their weekly allowance of diet; so that since that time they have had only their dinners, and but two suppers a week. It was then ordered that speedy means should be taken to obtain an ordinance to discharge the hospital lands from hearing all future taxes. Such an ordinance passed the House of Lords, and was sent to the House of Commons for concurrence, and was there read above six months ago, but since then nothing further has been done for petitioners' relief; they are lame, blind, aged, infirm, and sick persons, and their diseases and infirmities are increased for want of competent diet. They therefore pray the House to commiserate their condition, and to take steps for procuring the passing of the ordinance. L. J., VIII. 236.

March 26. Application for Wm. Clerke to be instituted and inducted to the rectory of Stockton. L. J., VIII. 236.

March 26. Petition of William Barton, Master of Arts, and minister of John Zacharies' [St. John Zachary's], London. Their Lordships commended two psalm-books of petitioner's composing to the Assembly of Divines to be read over and judged of by them; these two psalm-books he has since contracted into one, and has presented it also to the Assembly, and of late presented their Lordships with several copies, approved, attested, and applauded under the hands of more than forty eminent divines, most of them of the Assembly, with other large encomiums of most learned men annexed thereunto; wherefore (in regard also that this psalm-book is composed in common tunes, and containeth above fourscore choice cullings of the old psalms exactly amended, and the cream of the best authors). Petitioner prays their Lordships to order that his psalm-book may be permitted to be sung in public congregations, when and where godly ministers and people shall desire the same for their edification. L. J., VIII. 236.

March 26. Petition of the Fellows of Trinity Hall, in the University of Cambridge. They have unanimously elected John Bond, Doctor of the Civil Law, a member of the House of Commons, and a man of worth and known integrity, to the Mastership of their Hall, and pray that the election may be allowed. L. J., VIII. 236.

March 26. Paper from the Commissioners of the Church of Scotland. They complain of the delay in settling Church government in England, and the consequent increase of heresies and sects; and remind Parliament that the two nations entered into the solemn league and covenant to promote unity in religion and uniformity in Church government in the three kingdoms, and it will be a shame to them if heresies be allowed to multiply, and liberty of conscience which is pleaded for should have place. They also complain of the ordinance of the 14th instant, with the directions of the 19th of August last, in these points: first, concerning the subordination of the assemblies of the Church to the Parliament, whilst allowing that Parliament is superior to the assemblies of the Church in place, dignity, honour, and earthly power, they desire the alteration of the word subordination, which might imply that the civil power was to be exercised ecclesiastically, with a supremacy such as was sometime in the Pope, and was retained in England as the foundation of the High Commission and other corruptions; secondly, they desire that the provincial commissioners for judging of scandals may be further considered, there being no warrant for such a mixture in Church government, for it cannot be supposed that a few civil men, having no calling from God, are more able to judge of such matters than assemblies of the Church, this may be made the beginning of a new High Commission or of episcopacy, a new partition wall between England and Scotland; thirdly, they allow that the supreme magistrate may call a National Assembly, when he judges it necessary, but they think that, independently of this, fixed times ought to be appointed for the meeting of the assembly, as have been appointed for the meeting of the inferior assemblies of the Church, for the hearing of appeals from such inferior assemblies, and for control of their proceedings. There are other points they would desire to have examined by conference or otherwise, being confident that the liberty of their expressions will be taken in good part, as it is done in pursuance of the ends of the covenant. Endorsed,—Never read in the House. Parliamentary Register. XIV. 335. In extenso.

March 27. Petition of Patrick Young. Thomas Jennings owes petitioner more than 100l. for rent, for which he forbore to press during the continuance of Jennings' [Jennings'] suit before the House, having promise of satisfaction as soon as the cause was determined; but the business has been decided and petitioner is deluded, and cannot proceed at law against Jennings on account of the protection granted to him by the House. Prays that the protection may be recalled.

1. Copy of order of 28 February 1645-6, for protection of Jennings. L. J., VIII. 189.

March [28]. Petition of Sir Henry Anderson to the House of Commons. He has been two years and a half imprisoned without anything being laid against him; he knows not how to subsist, for his own estate in the country is quite ruined, and his health much impaired by imprisonment. March 30. Draft order to prevent any further cutting down of the Earl of Newport's woods on the manors of Alaxton, and Loddington, in the county of Leicester. L. J., VIII. 245.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Robert Johnson and others. In Alaxton the woods of the manor are sixty acres at least, of which the Earl cut down four or five acres every year, making a constant revenue of 80l. or 100l. per annum, but the Committee of Leicester have felled, and sold all the woods, destroying the revenue for twenty years at least. In Loddington are eighty acres and more, which used to be sold in the same way. Of these woods the Committee have already felled twenty acres, and given directions for felling the rest, which will ruin the supply of the inhabitants of the manor, and the revenue for twenty-one years.

March 30. Letter from both Houses of Parliament to Sir Thomas Fairfax directing him to forward the preceding letter to the Prince. L. J., VIII. 247. In extenso.

March 30. Petition of Thomas Deacon, and Nicholas Corselles of London, merchants. In May 1642 petitioners were ordered not to molest Thomas Bushell or his sureties, and the difference between them was referred to the mediation of the Lord Privy Seal, since which time nothing has been done; Bushell is a delinquent, and has deserted the Parliament, and petitioners therefore pray that the former order may be reversed.

March 31. Petition of John Lord Lovelace. Petitioner, sorrowing much for his deviation, about a week since surrendered himself to their Lordships, and has been committed to the Gentleman Usher of the Black-Rod, a place neither suitable to his health nor present fortune; he is entirely resolved to conform to the Parliament, and prays that he may have such liberty, as shall be thought fit, that it may be possible for him to make his composition, and do what else is required. L. J., VIII. 247.

March 31. Petition of Thomas Cornwaleys [Cornwallis]. Prays that his cause against Ingle, who is trying to evade justice, may be speedily heard, or that the order of the 24th of February last, which stays his proceeding at law, may be taken off. L. J., VIII. 247.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 24 Feb. 1645-6 mentioned in preceding. L. J., VIII. 183.

March 31. Draft order for payment of 300l. to Sir Percy Smith. L. J., VIII. 247. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Sir Percy Smith, praying that in consideration of his sufferings and services a sum of money may be advanced to him to be deducted from the pay due to him. See L. J., VIII. 216.

2. Copy of order of the Commons referring preceding petition to the Committee for the affairs of Ireland. 26 March. C. J., IV. 489.

3. Report of the Committee for Ireland. Sir Percy Smith has served as Governor of Youghal since the 13th of June 1645, the town being for great part of the time besieged by the rebels; he has discharged his trust as became a man of honour, and has spent his own means to support the soldiers there. At the beginning of the rebellion he was possessed of a fair estate, of which he was in part despoiled by the rebels, and with the remainder he raised a troop of horse and company of foot to serve the Parliament, but is now reduced to so indigent a condition that he can no longer support himself and his family. The Committee therefore recommended that a sum of money should be paid him to enable him to return to his command, and to serve for his future relief and encouragement. 28 March.

4. Certificate in support of preceding, signed and sealed by Lord Inchiquin. 27 March.

March —. Petition of Sir Henry Midway of Moulsham, Knight, son and heir of Robert, late Earl of Sussex, Lord Fitzwalter, deceased. Several days have been fixed for the hearing of his claim to the title of Lord Fitzwalter, the last being the 20th instant, but the cause was not then called on. Prays that another day may be fixed for the hearing. See L. J., VIII. 255.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order appointing the 10th of February for the hearing. 12 January 1645-6. L. J., VIII. 96.

2. Copy of order appointing the 20th March for the hearing. 24 February. L. J., VIII. 183.

[March—] Petition of Robert Master, and Peter Bonamy, of the island of Guernsey. Petitioners are natives of the island, and since their youth have been brought up in the care of vessels going to and from the island, and have experience of the seas thereabouts; they request, therefore, to be preferred to command in the shallops, now making ready for the reduction of the Island. See L. J., VIII. 213.

April 1. Petition of Lady Wotton, Baroness of Marleigh, and Vincent Cupper, clerk. In 1625 Sir Arthur Throgmorton, Lady Wotton's father, presented Gerence James to the parsonage of Paulerspury [Paulerspury], Northamptonshire. In 1631 Ezekiel Johnson, on a pretended charge of simony against James, got a presentation from the King, and sued some of the parishioners for tithes, but was non-suited. He then proceeded against James in the High Commission Court, and got sentence of deprivation against him, when Dr. Beale stepped in, got Johnson also deprived and procured presentation to himself from the King, and entered and enjoyed the living till the beginning of this Parliament, when James, being very aged and practising physic, sat still, but Johnson preferred a complaint against Dr. Beale to the Committee for petitions, and got an order of the 11th of March 1640-1 for the possession of the parsonage against all disturbers; but Lady Wotton affirms that she, as patroness of the living, never had notice of these proceedings until the order was passed. In 1644 the living was sequestered from Johnson for his delinquency, and given by the Committee for plundered ministers to the petitioner, Cupper. Johnson, by misinformation, however, procured an order from the House for the payment of the tithes to him, and caused divers of the parishioners to be attached and brought before the House; when informed of Johnson's conduct, the House confirmed the sequestration to Mr. Cupper, and committed Johnson for non-payment of fees, but he has broken prison and escaped to the King's quarters. Now there has been no lawful parson of Paulerspury since James, who is lately dead, and Lady Wotton desires to present Cupper to the living, but understands that she is prevented by the order of the 11th March 1640-1 in Johnson's favour. Petitioners therefore pray that this order may be taken off, Johnson set to his remedy at law, and institution and induction granted to Cupper. L. J., VIII. 248.

April 1. Petition from [de Vaux] and [du Balieu], Frenchmen, prisoners in Newgate, committed on suspicion of burglary, begging Sabran, the French Ambassador, to intercede with Parliament on their behalf. On the same paper is a letter from Sabran to the House of Lords, praying for mercy towards the prisoners.

April 3. Petition of Lady Brudenell. Her Lord is under close restraint, which, at his great age, is dangerous to his health. She prays that he may not now be deprived of the comforts of a small family, but that she and her son, who has never contracted the least suspicion of endeavouring to prejudice the proceedings of Parliament, and one man-servant and three maid-servants, who were never in the King's quarters nor guilty of any delinquency, may have license to remain within the lines of communication. L. J., VIII. 249.

April 3. Petition of Elizabeth Countess of Rivers. Her houses in Suffolk and Essex, with all her personal estate, are utterly wasted and destroyed, so that if she and her family are forced to leave their present residence they must be exposed to a misery not to be expressed, both she and her servants have taken the negative oath, and she therefore prays for a license for herself and family to remain in her house in Queen Street. L. J., VIII. 249.

April 3. Petition of Elizabeth Fleetwood, the mother and committee of William Fleetwood, His Majesty's ward. His woods in Berkshire are so cut down and spoiled by disorderly persons living near, that without some speedy remedy they will be utterly wasted. Prays that the Sheriff and others may be ordered to apprehend the disorderly persons. L. J., VIII. 250.

April 3. Petition of Dorothy Lady Andover. She has taken the oath never to assist the King in this unnatural war, and has given no cause for suspicion of disaffection to Parliament. She cannot leave town without danger to her own health and her lord's affairs, who has long since submitted to Parliament, and she therefore prays leave to continue within the lines of communication. L. J., VIII. 250.

[April 4.] Petition of Henry Lord Morley and Mount-eagle. His whole estate is under sequestration, and his person under restraint, as he is charged with having voluntarily resided in one of the King's garrisons during the late unhappy wars; he is thus deprived of all livelihood. He prays to be allowed such a maintenance out of his estate as may, in some degree, preserve him according to his condition. L. J., VIII. 253.

April 4. Draft order for Vincent Copper to have institution and induction to the rectory of Paulerspury, Northamptonshire. L. J., VIII. 253.

April 4. Petition of Elizabeth Viscountess Mountague. She has never been in the King's quarters, and neither her lord nor she have adhered to that party, but have always obeyed the Parliament. She is now in a course of physic under Sir Theodore Myerne [Mayherne], to desist from which would be very destructive to her health. She therefore prays for leave to remain within the lines of communication. L. J., VIII. 253.

April 4. Petition of Thomas Turner, mariner. He has attended many days at great expense for the hearing of his cause against Cooper and Wilgres, by which his means are exhausted, and he is kept from gaining his livelihood at sea. He prays that 20*l.* paid into court by the defendants for damages may be given to him, and that a peremptory day may be fixed for the hearing of the cause. L. J., VIII. 253.

April 4. Petition of Heritage Harford, praying the House to pass an ordinance to confirm him in the rectory of Cheriton, in the county of Southampton, to which he was appointed in Aug. 1644 by the Committee for Sequestrations, but to which Hugh Haswell, one of the prebends of Winchester, a delinquent, has been collated by the Bishop of Winchester.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition.
April 4. Draft ordinance to confirm Harford as rector of Cheriton. L. J., VIII. 254.

April 4. Order of the Committee of both Kingdoms at Derby House for report to be made to both Houses of a letter from the Earl of Leven, of the 23rd of Feb. last, desiring protection for the person and estate of Sir John Wolstonholme, of Nostell [Nostal], under the 11th article of the treaty for the surrender of York. L. J., VIII. 254. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Pamphlet, numb. 6. A continuation of true intelligence from the armies in the North, from the 10th day to the 27th of this instant July 1644, wherein is given a full and particular account of the surrender of York, and of the removes of the armies since. By Sim. Ash, Chaplain to the Earl of Manchester, and one of the ministers of the Assembly. Published by Authority, and entered according to order. London, printed for Thomas Underhill, at the Bible in Wood Street, 1644. This pamphlet contains a copy of the articles for the surrender of York, which is no doubt the reason of its being annexed to the preceding report.

2. Letter from the Earl of Leven, at Newcastle, to the Committee of both Kingdoms, on behalf of Sir John Wolstonholme. 23 Feb. 1645-6. L. J., VIII. 254. In extenso.

3. List of Committee appointed to consider the articles for the surrender of York. L. J., VIII. 254.

April 6. Draft of preceding order, &c.

April 7. Petition of Colonel Robert Martin, in the county of Radnor. Petitioner had commission from Major-General Langherne to be Colonel of a regiment of horse raised for reducing the county in December last, and about six weeks since, coming to London, he was charged by two captains, cashiered by him, of having murdered one of his own soldiers and taken away two horses. He conceives that anything done during the time of his command is triable at a council of war, and prays the House to order accordingly. L. J., VIII. 257.

April 7. Draft order approving of Mr. Henry Dawson as Mayor of Newcastle during the absence of Mr. Blakiston, a member of the House of Commons. L. J., VIII. 257. In extenso.

April 7. Draft order for Clement Ray to be appointed Rector of St. Andrew's, Hertford. L. J., VIII. 257. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Paper from the Scots Commissioners complaining that the Committee appointed to meet them respecting their objections to the propositions had only power to argue, and no power to alter any point, and desiring that proper authority may be given to the Committee to confer with them for the removal of their objections. 6 April. L. J., VIII. 258. In extenso.

[April 8.] The humble desires of the poor almsmen of Eastham, in the county of Essex, that the House would confirm the Commissioners' information, settle the lands according to the donor's will, and cause the houses to be repaired, and the arrears and damage justly due to be paid to the almsmen. See L. J., VIII. 259.

April 8. Answer of Hugh Haswell, clerk, Rector of the Parish Church of Cheriton, in the county of Southampton, to the ordinance of Heritage Harford, clerk, desiring to be settled in the same by an ordinance of Parliament, and to out the respondent thereof. Petitioner is a gentleman of ancient family, son of Sir Nicholas Haswell, and was brought up to learning in the University of Oxford, where he was Fellow of All Souls and Proctor of the University; he was afterwards presented to the parsonage of West Codford, Wilts, by the now Earl of Pembroke, and promoted to a prebendary in Winchester Cathedral, which he enjoyed till the troubles of these times, and the reducing of that part of Wilts under the King's power; the living of Cheriton, which lay more under the authority of Parliament, becoming vacant by the death of the incumbent, petitioner was, in August 1644, collated thereto by the Bishop of Winchester, and thereupon resigned the benefice of Codford. He never heard of Harford's claim until Nov. following, and conceives that the Bishop had full power to make the appointment. The Committee for plundered ministers have confirmed his appointment till the case should be heard, and he has never been guilty of any delinquency. Prays that Harford's ordinance may not be passed. L. J., VIII. 259.

April 8. Petition of John Earl Rivers in answer to the petition of John Greene, clerk. As soon as he shall be able to collect his evidence, petitioner will be ready to abide a hearing before their Lordships, and doubts not to satisfy them, that as regards the lands conveyed by his father for payment of his debts, he has done all that in honour and honesty he was obliged to do; but as to legal proceedings, which Greene desires, the Earl prays that he may still enjoy privilege of Parliament. L. J., VIII. 260.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition of John Greene, clerk, administrator of Edward Wymarke. See L. J., VIII. 200.

2. Copy of order upon preceding. 5 March.

April 8. Translation of a letter from Christina, Queen of Sweden, to Charles Ludovic, Count Palatine, &c. Has constantly ordered her commanders to defend and maintain the Elector's cause, and the restitution of his territory and dignity, which they have to their utmost endeavoured. At length the Protestant states of the empire are likely to be more careful, that the Electoral College be restored, and an equality of votes preserved. She will, by every means, still try to promote his welfare. She believes that the object of the Duke of Bavaria's negotiation with the King of France is to secure the settlement of the electoral dignity upon his heirs. This she will, by all means, endeavour to thwart, and so informed the French Ambassador. It is very expedient that the King of France should direct his Commissioners at Munster to satisfy the Elector's desires.

April 9. Transcript of the record, &c., in the writ of error Underwood et al. v. Parker. L. J., VIII. 261.

April 9. Paper from Monsieur Sabran, the French Resident, complaining of the levies of men for Flanders, and that he is obstructed in sending men that he has raised to France. (French.)

April 10. Answer to the paper from the Scots Commissioners concerning the propositions to the King. L. J., VIII. 265. In extenso.

April 11. Petition of William Allen, the elder, Leonard Rednes, and James Gardiner, masters of the two ships "Elizabeth" and "William and Sarah," of Harwich. About sixteen months since petitioners' two ships were hired by Dominic Petit and others, Frenchmen, to weigh a wreck sunk in the sea, near Harwich. Petitioners are unable to get the money agreed to be paid to them for the hire of their ships, and the Frenchmen have obtained divers orders from their Lordships to secure their persons, engines, and two small ships, which attend the wreck, for the purpose of defeating petitioners and their other creditors. Petitioners have attended their Lordships many days, with their counsel, at great charge, but cannot obtain a hearing by reason of the more weighty affairs of State, and therefore pray that the cause may be left to the law. L. J., VIII. 267.

April 11. Copy of articles for the surrender of the Castle and Island of Portland on the 4th instant. L. J., VIII. 268. In extenso.

April 11. Petition of Sir Henry Mildmay, of Moulsham, Knight, cousin and heir of Robert late Earl of Sussex, Lord Fitzwalter, deceased. The hearing of petitioner's claim to the title and dignity of Fitzwalter has been several times appointed, and on the 6th instant was ordered to be heard on that day month, but on the 23rd instant petitioner must claim or disclaim the title upon a suit depending at law. He therefore prays that some day before the 23rd may be fixed for the hearing of his claim. Noted.—Nothing done. See L. J., VIII. 255.

April 11. Petition of Lady Vera Murrey, daughter and administratrix of the Right Honourable the Earl Tillebardin [Tullibardine]. Her father appointed two of her brothers executors of his will, but, as they were out of the country, petitioner took upon her the administration of her father's estate. She finds that he was indebted about 1,500*l.*, and had debts owing to him of greater value; in particular, 2,000*l.* from Sir John Jacob, and Sir John Nulls, and others, who are protected by Parliament, so that she cannot recover that debt, while she is prevented by the troubles of the times from getting in other debts, but is eagerly prosecuted for the debts owing by her father. She intends no diminution of their debts to any of the creditors, is unwilling to waste the estate in suits, and therefore prays that she may for the present have the protection of Parliament to save her from arrest. Noted.—Nothing done.

April 13. Application for a pass for Lord Purbeck, his servants, &c. L. J., VIII. 269.

April 13. Petition of Cuthbert Orfeur. Petitioner heretofore prayed to be restored to possession of Drumburgh Castle, Cumberland, which he held for many years from the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, and from which he had been violently ousted by John Hodgson, agent to Lord Dacre, assisted by Colonel Douglas, Governor of Carlisle. Upon Lord Dacre's answer, the parties were left to try their title at law, if they thought good to lay by their privileges on both sides, and the Governor of Carlisle was ordered to return answer to the petition. This he has not done, and petitioner therefore prays that the witnesses he has brought up may be sworn and examined, to prove the force used, that upon proof thereof he may be put into the same condition as he was before the act of violence, and then he will be ready to defend his possession in the ordinary course of law. L. J., VIII. 269.

[April 15.] Petition of the Mayor, Masters, Burgesses, and other the inhabitants of the parish of St. Cuthbert's, in Wells. The parish is very large, consisting of fourteen villages, besides the town of Wells, and contains nearly eight thousand communicants, besides many of tender years daily dependent upon the minister. In former times there was always a vicar and an assistant, who was a preaching minister, but for several years past the assistant has been only a reading minister. Mr. Westly, the vicar, has for the last half year been under sequestration, and for four months together during that time petitioners have had no sermon; in which sad condition they applied to the Committee of the County for relief, and that Mr. Thomas, of Ubley, as minister, and Mr. Oliver, of Cameley, as assistant, might supply the place. This the Committee ordered, and the petitioners pray that these appointments may be confirmed by ordinance of Parliament, and provision made for a competent maintenance for men of such worthy parts and eminency of learning. See L. J., VIII. 272.

[April 15.] Two petitions identical with preceding, but without other signatures.

Draft resolution that a book, intitled "Some Papers of the Commissioners of Scotland," containing matters scandalous and false, shall be burnt by the common hangman, and that the author is an incendiary between the two kingdoms. This vote was made in the Commons on the 13th (C. J., IV. 507. In extenso.), and was sent up to the Lords on the 15th, after much debate. The Lords on the 18th agreed to the resolution, with amendments, which are incorporated in this draft. L. J., VIII. 281. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of examination of Robert Bostock, of Paul's Church Yard, printer. Says that he printed the book entitled, "Some Papers of the Commissioners of Scotland," &c. On Thursday or Friday last, whilst he was absent, a stranger came to his shop and gave a bundle of papers to his wife, telling her to have them printed forthwith, upon which she distributed them between three printers. On his return she told him that she thought they came from the Scots Commissioners. On Friday last Mr. Buchanan sent for him to meet him in Paul's, and bid him make haste with the printing; but not let it be known that the papers had come from him. The proofs were sent to Mr. Buchanan, and were returned with corrections in his handwriting; and as soon as the book was printed, twelve copies were sent to Mr. Cheisley's man for the Scots Commissioners. Bostock, when summoned to appear before the Committee, heard on his way that the Commissioners had sent for him, so turned into Worcester House, where Mr. Barkley asked him how he would justify the matter before the Committee, to which Bostock answered that he should say the book was printed without his knowledge, and presently wrote to his wife to answer to the same effect. Bostock says that the book was printed without license, and was not entered at Stationers' Hall because he was so hastened by Mr. Buchanan. 13 April. Examination of Robert Harrison confirming the preceding statement, except that he says that his master distributed the sheets to the several printers. 13th April.

Petitioner conceives that he can satisfy the House why he should neither pay the money nor give up the bond, and prays that a day may be appointed for hearing the case.

Prays to be admitted to attend the Great Seal as serjeant-at-arms, as he has been in actual service with Sir Thomas Barrington, and has spent above 1,000*l.* in the service of Parliament, besides the loss of his fortunes at the Court, where he had served above twenty-six years.

granted to the bearer of the answer of the Prince of Wales to Parliament. L. J., VIII. 295. In extenso.

April 27. Petition of Sir William Russell and others. A point of law arising in petitioners' case against Thomas Lenthall and others was referred to the judges, but there are now but two judges in the Court of Common Pleas, and they are divided in opinion. Petitioners pray that some course may be taken to decide the matter. L. J., VIII. 286.

1. Copy of order referring the question to the Judges. 27 Feb. 1645-6.

April 27. Certificate of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Corporation of Shipwrights. Andrew Brograve, of Deptford, a builder of ships, absolutely refuses to contribute what is due from him towards the payment of the debts of the Corporation, and the support of the Government; and his example has caused the rest of the members to withhold their duties, so that the Corporation cannot obey the order of the House of the 23rd of March last, that they should pay to Edward Keeling, their clerk, his wages and house rent. L. J., VIII. 286.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 23rd March, mentioned in preceding. L. J., VIII. 282. In extenso.

Petitioner, as servant and messenger to the Magazine in London, has diligently discharged the trust reposed in him, and by virtue of his office has from time to time seized two thousand four hundred arms at the least, which had been pawned or sold by fugitive soldiers. For this service there is due unto him 64*l.* 8*s.* Notwithstanding this, he is now most unjustly and maliciously arrested and sued by Edmund Hunt and Stephen Wild for an unjust debt. Prays that he may receive the money due to him, that he may have protection from any further trouble and molestation, and that those who have arrested him may be sent for, to answer for their contempt. L. J., VIII. 286.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of petitioner in support of preceding. 28 April 1646.

[April 27.] Petition of James Du Fresne to the Commons. Petitioner, a Frenchman born and a Protestant, forsook his own country and his employments to bring over advice of great concern, as he apprehended, to the State and Church of England. It is now four months since he delivered it into the hands of the Speaker, and all this at his own costs and charges, by which he is brought into great distress for want of means. He prays for some present relief, with some office or employment to enable him comfortably to enjoy his life and religion in England.

April 28. Petition of Jane Rookes. After her father's death she was unfortunately married to John Rookes, when only twelve years old by those in whose custody she was left. She brought a considerable estate to her husband, which he riotously wasted, refusing to allow her any maintenance; but lately having agreed to allow her and her seven children 15*l.* per annum, he yet refuses to pay the allowance. In consequence of the death of her mother, who was a lunatic, and therefore under the protection of the Court of Wards, 1,000*l.* is due to petitioner as her mother's sole child, and notwithstanding her husband's attempt to get possession of the money, the Court would have appointed it for the maintenance of herself and her children, had it not been suddenly dissolved. She prays the House to protect her rights. L. J., VIII. 287.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of John Rookes. It is true that he married his wife when she was thirteen, now twenty-seven years ago, he being then nineteen. He received some estate with her, but not nearly of the value which she states. He was forced by his guardians to try and recover money belonging to his wife's estate, and has spent much in so doing. So far from spending her estate riotously, he has improved it by a purchase of land in Lambeth, by which it brings in more than before. She has no reason to complain of want, for she has always had the command of his purse. He would be glad to live with her if she would behave in a quiet and orderly manner. He did allow her the 15*l.* per annum on condition of good behaviour, but on receipt of the first payment she feed a lawyer to complain against him in the courts; she denies him her society, and tries to deprive him of his children, life, and reputation. It is true that her mother was lunatic, and he thinks his wife will prove the same. He prays the House to commiserate his sad state, and to enjoin his wife to live in conjugal obedience, sociably and orderly, without clamorous and opprobrious language. (Undated.)
2. Reply of Jane Rookes (daughter of Dr. Barlow, late Bishop of Lincoln) to her husband's answer. She reiterates her complaints against her husband, denies his assertions, and maintains that, should she prove lunatic, his conduct has been enough to unsettle a wiser head than hers. (Undated.)

April 28. Petition of Richard Fenton. Prays that a short day may be appointed for Henry Fitzakerley alias Fitzacre, to assign errors in a writ of error brought only for delay. L. J., VIII. 288.

April 28. Petition of William Cooke, mariner. Prays for a short day to be appointed for Thomas Fincham and Arthur Sleppey to assign errors in a writ of error brought only for delay. L. J., VIII. 288.

April 28. Petition of Captain Henry Somarster. Arrears to the amount of 800*l.* are due to him, but he has been arrested and cast into Newgate for a small sum, in spite of a protection from Mr. Nicolls. He prays for enlargement, and that his creditors may be satisfied out of his debentures. L. J., VIII. 288.

April 28. Petition of Major Henry Sanders. Petitioner was a commander in the first regiment raised in London, and has ever since continued in the service, for which there is due to him 1,100*l.* and more, and 1,600*l.* besides are owing to him from Mr. Kirke, of His Majesty's bedchamber, and Edward Bradborne, both of whose estates are sequestered by the Parliament. Petitioner cannot therefore satisfy his creditors, and prays for the protection of his person, horse, and arms, that he may do the state further service till his arrears are paid. L. J., VIII. 288.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from Colonel John Venn, that Sanders served under him for two years and more, and that considerable arrears are due to him, for which he has no debenture, as the accounts are not yet audited.

2. Petition of the creditors of Henry Sanders. He is largely indebted to petitioners and others, but has means to pay if his liberty be secured for a short time. Some evil disposed persons have, however, entered various actions against him, not considering that the imprisonment of his body is the ready way to disable him from making satisfaction. They pray that Sanders may have protection from Parliament. (Undated.)

April 28. Proclamation of Colonel Henry Sanderson at Bampton, for all officers belonging to his regiment of Reformados to repair to their colours within eight days.

April 30. Petition of James Earl of Northampton, praying to be admitted within the lines of communication to take the Covenant. L. J., VIII. 289. In extenso.

May 1. Petition of Arnold Child. Sir Edward Spencer, knowing petitioner reposed much trust in him, induced him, when sick, to sign a judgment for 600*l.*, and to assign him other property. Sir Edward has since cast petitioner into prison upon the said judgment and another feigned action, which can only be vacated by authority of the House. Prays for relief. L. J., VIII. 290.

May 1.
Letter from René Augier at Paris to [the House of Lords]. The Queen of England went back from Paris to St. Germain last Saturday; 15,000 francs a month have been added to her entertainment for the expenses of the Prince of Wales. It is said that Haesdonck, whom they wished to engage some time back to go to Scilly to cure His Highness, has orders to conduct the Prince from Jersey to France; several dresses have been prepared for His Highness; his ordinary abode will be St. Germain, without coming to Paris, except privately. Of the nobility, she will only find there the Duke of Anjou, the Governor, the rest having followed the Court on Tuesday last to Chantilly, there to remain a few days, thence to go to Compiègne, and return to Paris towards the end of the month. Cardinal Mazarin is to go to Chantilly to-morrow; the Chancellor and the rest of the Council do not leave this place. The Queen Regent having taken it very ill that Mr. Jermyn should have had preaching in the old castle of St. Germain, it has been thought fit that Mr. Browne should have a house in the town there, in which to preach, and that the English should resort there, but that the Prince of Wales might have preaching in his own apartment for himself, and his own people only. This happens very luckily for Mr. Browne, for he had nothing left to pay his rent here, and Dr. Davison, his surety, has had to pay the last quarter for him. Lord Hopton is to come with the Prince; Richard Grenville is said to be at Rouen. Colonel Goring leaves this to-day for Holland. Mr. Jermyn only came back the day before yesterday to St. Germain, having stayed at the Louvre to give orders about the Prince's equipage, and also to look after their intrigues, in pursuit of which I hear that some one is to go again hence to pass by Brussels into Holland. However, I understand that this Court, despairing of the affairs of the King of England, would rather hear the result of the siege of Oxford, at a distance from St. Germain, than in Paris. The Duke d'Enguien left this last Tuesday to go by Chantilly and Compiègne, towards Luxembourg. Marshal Thurenne may join him to reconnoitre towards Cologne without going beyond the Rhine, where this Crown will do nothing during this campaign for lack of the levies, which it was led to expect from Denmark and elsewhere; it also gives signs of not being so much in anger against the Duke of Bavaria as before, whether it recognises the impossibility of reaching his states on account of the great devastations which he has caused to be made about 20 or 30 leagues on this side of the Danube, or that it judges that it cannot in any other way obtain its object there. The Duke of Orleans will not leave the Court before its return to Paris.

The King and Queen of Poland have sent an ambassador there at small cost to thank their most Christian Majesties for the honours they have done them. The dispute with the Pope is daily embittered. A short time will tell us on what point the forces will fall, which France is moving towards that part by sea and land. The Duke of Florence is fortifying his posts, and has called on those of Lucca to do the same, or if not he will do it himself. Cardinal Francisco Barberini leaves this for Lyons, whither it is believed that Cardinal Anthonio will also shortly go. The Duchess of Longueville is preparing to leave Paris at the end of the month for Munster; her departure is not a sign of the approach of peace. The Spaniards not being able to hold Termes, have set fire to it. The Lord of Montrécor, a younger son of the House of Bourdeilles, has been imprisoned in the Bastille on suspicion of being one of the "Impartians," that is to say one of the cabal of the Duke of Vendosme, and of holding correspondence with Madame de Chevreuse. He was a servant of the Duke of Orleans, and it is thought that his greatest crime is the not having been loved by the Abbé de la Rivière, His Highness's favourite. As the Ministers of State have not dared to tax the merchants of Paris, for fear of some rising, they have made the weight fall as much as possible upon the strangers, specially the Flemings, whom they make pay, as well to do persons, and as foreigners. It will be difficult for the few English who are here to get exemption from paying as foreigners. The said Ministers make us no satisfaction for our grievances, but cry out more than ever at the reprisals made upon them by the Parliamentarians, either out of complaisance towards the Queen of England in this decline of her affairs, and on the expected coming of the Prince of Wales, or because they really do not wish to come to any conclusion with the Parliament by itself. A little while will enable us to see further in advance. Some Guernsey merchants have just assured me that the Prince of Wales immediately on his arrival at Jersey caused the Parliamentary prisoners there to be set at liberty, and restored them their goods, and that he has sent my Lord Capel to the King, his father, to know whether he wishes him to pass over into France or not.

559. Mr. Bellievre will not avow that they have allowed those ($\frac{15}{15}$) francs increase to the Queen of England. (French.)

In the years 1640 and 1641 petitioners bought 1,250 tons of lead of Thomas Bushell and Edmond Goodier, to be delivered out of the mines royal in the county of Cardigan on certain days then to come. In May 1642 Bushell petitioned the House, pretending that he was disturbed in the working of the mines by Sir Richard Price, and that he was unable in consequence to perform his contracts with petitioners. Their Lordships referred the petition to the Lord Privy Seal, giving his Lordship power to mediate between Bushell and petitioners, their forbearing any further prosecution in law against Bushell for eighteen months. Petitioners were never served with this order until the day for payment, when they sent a ship to fetch away their lead, and the ship master was then served with the order, and forced to take away his ship without any lead at all. About this time Bushell took himself into the King's quarters, where he has ever since remained. Petitioners hear that the mines are now in the power of the Parliament, and therefore pray either that Bushell may be ordered forthwith to perform his several bargains with them, or that they may have license to carry materials for the supply of the mines, and to transport lead and ore therefrom, they paying all duties. For no other reason than the protection of his person, he went into the garrison of Banbury, and was afterwards drawn to take command upon him. In November last, according to the Ordinance, he intimated his desire to submit himself to Parliament, left the King's service, and endeavoured to make composition for his delinquency. During his attendance upon the Committee for Composition he was arrested by Robert Vivers and others, and charged with several actions pretended to be done by him in the way of a soldier, which will tend to his utter ruin. June 6. Petition of Sir John Sedley, one of the Deputy-Lieutenants and Justices of the Peace of the county of Kent. Complains that John Balden [Baldwin], a man of mean condition, but a most seditious and turbulent spirit, lately came into Birling Church, where there were about two hundred persons assembled at a burial, and endeavoured to raise a combustion in the church, animating the people to quarrel and fight. Upon due proof of this, petitioner and another deputy-lieutenant of the county, committed Balden to the stocks, who, not contented with this moderate punishment, caused a writ to be served and petitioner to be arrested at a public session, where he and others were met for the distribution of justice. Prays that Balden may be sent for and ordered to desist from his suit, and that he may receive such further punishment as their Lordships shall think fit. L. J., VIII. 361.

Annexed:—

1. Articles preferred against John Balden of West Malling, Kent. Balden being a poor miller was, at the time when the Ecclesiastical Courts were in their height of power, used as an instrument by the Bishop to vex and prosecute divers religious ministers, wherein he was so active that he became the pest of the country. This wicked course of life not prospering, he was reduced to extreme poverty, and received sixpence a week from the parish. When the distempers broke out in the kingdom he, professing great integrity to the cause of the Parliament, obtained so much favour from some of the committees that he was employed as an inferior messenger to summon delinquents, and was also joined with some responsible men to collect money upon the Scottish tickets, wherein he so abused his trust, cheating both the Parliament and the country, that he was speedily removed from all employment. He afterwards pretended to have been appointed to levy fines upon several men for giving aid and countenance to the commotion in the county, and then made composition with them and took forty shillings from some of them, as a bribe to himself, and discharged them of twenty pounds due to the Parliament.

They are allowed neither free quarters nor contributions without much reluctancy and opposition. The infection is spread generally over the whole Association, and is broken out with open violence in the turbulent county of Glamorgan. The Colonel-General signified that it was the desire of most of the Committee that none of my men should quarter in that county, but they have paid no manner of contribution that I might otherwise provide for them.' If the House will direct my course, I shall not be wanting in my endeavours to observe their commands. The gentry of the country are so averse that they will wait their own designs if they find that I do but favour them. Aug. 13. Draft of proposed order, reciting that Nicholas Gibbons, D.D., had made offer to the church of a body of "Divinity Real," which had been examined by two members of the Assembly of Divines, and certified to be of a great use; but this work in MS., with other paper books, having been lost, the Committee for the West had given him power to search for it. Now, as the search will be tedious and uncertain, the House requires all persons, as well soldiers as others, into whose hands the said books may have come, to return them with all speed to the Doctor, and directs the Committee of Dorset to publish this order in all convenient places. Noted.—No order drawn out of this by direction [of the] House.

Through the sequestration of their late rector for his malignancy, petitioners are destitute of a godly pastor, and likely to perish for want of knowledge; the rectory, which belongs to Exeter College, is now, as they are informed, at the disposal of Parliament. They pray that Samuel Austin, an orthodox and godly divine, heretofore of Exeter College, be appointed. See L. J., VIII. 464.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the articles for the surrender of Ragland Castle. L. J., VIII. 476. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Petition of Elizabeth Countess of Berkshire, in behalf of the Earl her husband. When intrusted with the charge of the Prince, the Earl endeavoured as much as he could the safety of the kingdom, and when he could no longer prevail with the Prince and his counsel, he chose rather to desert his charge than to consent to the Prince going beyond seas, and though the Earl was conscious of his integrity to his country, yet doubting how he might stand in the opinion of their Lordships, he passed into Holland. The Countess prays that he may have leave to come to London to compound for his estate. L. J., VIII. 465.

Aug. 18. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel George Kekewich. Has actively served the State in Plymouth, Cornwall, and Devonshire since the eruption of these distempers; but now, being reduced, he prays for some employment in those parts. L. J., VIII. 465.

Aug. 18. Petition of Joseph Jackman, menial servant to the Right Honourable Baptist Lord Viscount Campden. Three days ago petitioner, when on his Lord's business, was arrested in Drury Lane, and forced to put in bail, at the suit of Wm. J., VIII. 466.

Aug. 19. Petition of William Adames, of Peterchurch, in the county of Pembroke. Out of affection to Parliament, he served with several men and horses at his own charge under Major-General Langharne, and when the enemy were in the county, voluntarily gave way for firing divers of his houses in the suburbs of Pembroke. He was afterwards obliged to take refuge with his wife and child in Pembroke, and the enemy then fired his houses and corn, and drove away all his cattle; he subsequently came by ship to London, and has there remained above twelve months. He has been plundered of all he had, is much indebted, and prays the House to give him some assistance in rebuilding his house, &c. L. J., VIII. 468.

Aug. 19. Draft order for Captain Beddall to command the Adventure frigate, and Captain Abraham Wheeler the Cygnet. L. J., VIII. 468. In extenso.

Aug. 19. The several defence of George Duncombe, gent., steward of the manor of Woking, in the county of Surrey, to a petition of the tenants of the manor. He denies that he has wrested any customs or rights from the petitioners; he believes the fines of admittance to the copyhold and customary lands of the manor are arbitrary and uncertain, and that Mrs. Zouch, since the death of her husband, has taken very moderate fines, to the satisfaction of all but a few of the tenants; but as to the alleged waste of timber, and to the proportion of firewood to which the keeper is entitled, and as to whether the tenants are entitled to the mast, he cannot speak, as he has no knowledge. See L. J., VIII. 446.

Aug. 20. Application for a pass for Mr. Gibby and another to go beyond the seas. L. J., VIII. 469.

Aug. 20. Petition of Ann Hawes, the distressed widow of Thomas Hawes, deceased, and of the Governors of Christ's Hospital. Nicholas Hawes' plea for further time to answer, on the ground that his counsel had gone circuit, is frivolous, for several counsel well versed in the cause are in or near London; his applications for delay are only that he may remain in possession of the lands in question; and she prays that if further time be given him, the tenants may be ordered to retain their Michaelmas rents in their hands till after the hearing of the cause.

1. Copy of petition of Nicholas Hawes, of the 14th instant, for further time to answer. See above.

Aug. 21. Answer of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies. What Alderman Fowke's adventure in the Company was the books will show; the adventure was stayed by decrees in Chancery, and as to his allegations that the honourable person who pronounced those decrees, since deceased, was an adventurer in the Company, and consequently a party concerned, they say that his proportion of the sums decreed only amounted to *4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d., and they hold such allegations to be malicious, and not likely to weigh with the House; and they believe the decrees complained of were made according to justice. See L. J., VIII. 464.

Aug. 25. Draft ordinance for Samuel Greenhill to be vicar of Cuckfield, Sussex. L. J., VIII. 470.

Aug. 25. Petition of Francis Lord Dacre. Upwards of a year ago he presented Richard Sharples to the parish church of Acton [Aikton], Cumberland, and he has continued in quiet possession ever since; but in consequence of an order of the House of July last, very prejudicial to petitioner's title, being without a salvo jure, Dr. Aylett has granted institution and induction to another. Petitioner prays that Sharples may continue in possession at least till both sides have been heard. L. J., VIII. 470.

The Lords resolved that they did not approve of subjects of this kingdom being employed into this kingdom as public ministers from a foreign Prince. L. J., VIII. 479. In extenso.

Aug. 27. Order of the Commons for the treasurers at Goldsmiths' Hall to pay out the money for Colonel Sanderson's regiment, and all other sums of money charged upon them to be issued by order of the House of Commons, notwithstanding any order of the House of Lords to the contrary. Aug. 28. Draft ordinance to clear Lady Ann Farmer, widow, and Sir William Farmer of their delinquency. L. J., VIII. 476. In extenso.

Aug. 30. Letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Allen in Wood Street Compter to Robert Earl of Essex. He thanks the Earl for the order of the 28th for his enlargement, which, however, the Sheriff of London refuses to obey, saying that it is not a sufficient discharge. He prays that the Earl would settle some medium for his plenary enlargement, either by bringing him before the House by writ of Habeas Corpus and then discharging him, or transmitting him to the Fleet, the warden of which would be more obedient than the Sheriff.

Sept. 1. Draft pass for Viscount Campden, with four servants, &c. to go into Rutlandshire, and back again. L. J., VIII. 477.

Sept. 1. Petition of Sir Edward Leche (Leech), one of the Masters of Chancery attending upon their Lordships. Petitioner is farmer of two rectories, and of the "tithe of wool and lamb," in part of the Peak in Derbyshire, for which rents are reserved amounting to 221l. 13s. 4d.; during these times the greatest part of the profits have been taken from him by the King's army, and the stock of sheep almost destroyed; he has also in other ways lost by these wars, and partly by the Parliament forces, for which he desires to come to an account, yet the Committee for the County have appointed certain persons to receive his rents and tithes until the arrearages due to the State for three years last past be paid, forbidding petitioner's servants to claim them. He prays that the order of the Committee may be suspended. L. J., VIII. 477.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Committee for Derbyshire referred to in preceding. 21 August 1646.

Sept. 1. Petition of Sergeant Glanvill, prisoner of the House in the Tower of London. He has been two years imprisoned, and his health, estate, and credit are so far decayed that he is no longer able to subsist. While he cannot personally endeavour to make his peace with the House, he therefore prays that he may be bailed. L. J., VIII. 478.

Sept. 1. Order for Roger Porter to be Judge of the Admiralty in the county of Cornwall. L. J., VIII. 479. In extenso.

Sept. 1. Draft order for payment of 40l. to Captain Humphrey Cupid. L. J., VIII. 479. In extenso.

Sept. 1. Draft order for 30l. for the messenger that brought the news of the taking of Flint Castle. L. J., VIII. 479. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Petition of Warwick Lord Mohun. At the beginning of the war he served His Majesty against the Parliament, and is therefore justly liable to the censure of that power against which he acted, yet as soon as he was sensible of the injustice of the cause in which he was engaged, he publicly deserted, and could not be won back either by threats or promises, though by his conduct he exposed himself to the utmost malice of the party in power of which he then was. He alone refused to join an association in Cornwall and Devon against the Parliament in January 1643-4; he alone protested against the resolutions of the peers at Oxford in March 1643-4, who voted the members of Parliament at Westminster to be traitors. In August 1645, petitioner, by letter to a friend in London (then shewed to the Close Committee of both Kingdoms), offered either to come to London, or to reserve himself to serve the Parliament in the place where he then was; and when Sir Thomas Fairfax came into Cornwall petitioner publicly refused to declare or appear against the Parliament forces; for this a party of the King's Horse was sent to take him prisoner and plunder his house. In all these efforts to redeem his offence of acting against the Parliament, petitioner has lost to the value of 4,000l., and exposed his life and fortune to utter ruin. He prays that he may have opportunity of proving his statements, and may then be dealt with for his delinquency as to their Lordships shall seem meet, and that in the meantime order may be given for his estate to remain as hitherto. L. J., VIII. 480.

Sept. 2. Draft order for a pass for Mr. Armorer to go to Scotland, and Mr. Wm. Murray to Newcastle. L. J., VIII. 480.

Sept. 2. Petition of Francis Lord Cottington. Petitioner is excepted from any composition for his estate. He prays license to go beyond the seas with his servants and goods, and doubts not so to behave himself in the future as to regain their Lordships' good opinion and favour. He further prays to be allowed to sell such of his poor goods as are yet left him (scarce worth the mentioning), towards the buying of bread. And, lastly, that as it is God's pleasure that in his old decrepid age he must wander from his house, his friends, and his native country, so poor as not to have wherewithal to buy bread, he may be allowed some competent means out of his estate for his future subsistence, lest he perish for want of maintenance; and that he may be permitted to represent his condition to the House of Commons. Noted.—Rejected.

Sept. 3. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Thomas Marston to the vicarage of Meriden, Warwickshire. L. J., VIII. 480.

Sept. 3. Petition of Arthur Gwynn and Roger Gwynn, ministers of the Gospel. Pray for passes to Ireland and back: Arthur, that he may redeem his mother and two children, now captive amongst the rebels, anxious as he is about their bodily wants, but much more for fear the papists should work upon his mother's age, or his children's infant years; Roger, that he may bring away his wife and children from Cork, who are likely to sink under their miseries. Petitioners further pray the House to recommend them to the charity of good Christians to whom they may address themselves on their journey. L. J., VIII. 481.

Sept. 3. Order in accordance with prayer of preceding petition.

Sept. 3. Draft order for continuing the present Commissioners of the Great Seal for one month longer. Noted.—Put to the question and rejected. L. J., VIII. 481.

Sept. 3. Amendments to the ordinance for the Northern Association. L. J., VIII. 481.

Sept. 3. Petition of Richard Evans, one of the Committee for the City of Exeter, to the House of Commons. Petitioner has lent 1,000l. to Parliament, has spent about 500l. as a Captain, and given security for greater sums; his estate has been plundered, his house burnt, himself imprisoned, and his family exiled, besides actions brought against him for executing the ordinance of the 20th part, and especially for levying about 100l. upon the goods of Lady Vincent. Her son, Sir John Ackland, forcibly entered and seized petitioner's manor of Ashklift, and converted it to his own use, to the value of about 2,000l. Petitioner prays for satisfaction out of the estate of Sir John Ackland, a notorious delinquent, and one excepted out of the propositions. C. J., IV. 661.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Committee of Devon in support of preceding. 7 August 1646.

Sept. [3]. Petition of Captain Peter Sevelat and John Sallis, quartermaster, both strangers. They have faithfully served in the Parliament's army from the beginning of the wars, but whilst attending upon the Committee for Accounts for their arrears they have become indebted for meat, drink, and lodging to their landlord, who has cast them into prison to their utter undoing. They pray that some speedy course may be taken for their enlargement.

Sept. 4. Petition of Francis Turgis, of Ringwood, in the county of Southampton. About four years ago Lord Crawford's regiment quartered at Ringwood, was beaten up by Col. Morley, and Lord Crawford, suspecting petitioner of having given intelligence, threatened to hang him; and whilst he was a prisoner three or four officers came to him with their swords and pistols, and threatened him with present death unless he would drink a glass of beer, and say, "I wish this drink may be my poison if "I wish not confusion to all that fight against the "Cavaliers," which words, through base fear, he spake, and for so doing he has been troubled with horrors of conscience ever since. He can find no exemption or redress, and conceives he is bound in conscience publicly to acknowledge his great sin against God and the Houses of Parliament, and scandal against religion, and prostrates himself to receive condemnation, or absolution from the Houses of Parliament, whom next under God he has most highly offended. L. J., VIII. 482.

Sept. 4. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct William Noyes to the rectory of Sherfield-English, in the county of Southampton. L. J., VIII. 482.

Sept. 4. Draft order that such part of the debt owing by the Earl of Arundel to Sir Edmond Pye, a delinquent, as belongs to the State, be paid for the use of poor soldiers' wives and widows, &c. who have money due to them from the State. L. J., VIII. 482.

Sept. 4. Petition of Sir Edmond Pye. He was living in Oxford at the time of the surrender, and is therefore included within the terms of the articles by which he is enabled to dispose of all or any part of his personal estate during the space of six months, or to compound for the same. About a month ago he presented a petition at Goldsmiths' Hall to compound, yet the Committee at Haberdashers' Hall have proceeded against a part of his debts, which is chargeable upon the Earl of Arundel's estate, and are now passing an ordinance in the matter. He prays the House to stop any proceedings therein. L. J., VIII. 483.

Sept. 12. Petition of Frances Dutton. The House having granted her 50*l.* per annum, payable out of the estate of Sir Ralph Dutton, in February last ordered the Committee for Gloucester to pay the same to her, but she has never received any part of it. She has incurred some debts in consequence, and it is now in the power of the House to preserve her, or to leave her and hers desolate for ever. If she has incurred the displeasure of the House, she prays that it may be imputed to error of judgment rather than of will. L. J., VIII. 489.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same that a day may be appointed for hearing her cause. (Undated.)

2. Letter from the Committee of Gloucester to the House of Peers, desiring further instructions before they pay the 50*l.* per annum to Mrs. Dutton out of Sir Ralph Dutton's lands at Standish, for the lands have been miserably ruined by the soldiery, and have not yet lain two years under sequestration, and Mrs. Dutton is accused of delinquency for concealing Sir John Somerset's estate. 1 May 1646.

3. Copy of examination of Frances Dutton respecting Lord (sic) John Somerset's estate. 30 August, 1645.

4. Petition of Giles Dutton, prisoner in the King's Bench. He is the youngest son of Wm. Dutton, of Sherborne; he had but 100*l.* a year left him by his father, unhappily got no preferment by his marriage, and has for many years been a prisoner for debt. His wife, who absented herself from him by untrue suggestions, principally on pretence that he would not live with her, obtained an order for 50*l.* per annum to be paid for herself and her two children; one of the children is lately dead, and the other she has sent to Barbados. He is most anxious to live with his wife, and prays to be restored to his estate. (Undated.)

Sept. 12. Copy of propositions from the City for raising 200,000*l.* L. J., VIII. 489. In extenso.

Sept. 14. Letter from Anthony Fortescue, Resident for the Duke of Lorraine to the House of Lords. He some time since returned to this country with fresh letters of credence, which he has delivered to the Speakers of both Houses of Parliament. He complains that he is not treated as his place requires; that his house has been plundered and his servants imprisoned, and that though Parliament has ordered restitution the Committee for Middlesex has not obeyed. If Parliament still entertains any suspicion that his master intended to come to England with forces (as the French King solicited him to do), Mr. Thelwall, the agent for Parliament in Flanders, is to blame, before whom the Duke repudiated the imputation; but if any suspicion remain Fortescue desires that, considering his blameless conduct for ten years past as resident, Parliament would either ensure him the full enjoyment of his privileges, or give him a pass to leave the kingdom, with restitution of the goods yet withheld from him. He trusts that the open enemies of his master may never give Parliament more trouble than his master, or that his application to levy men against them had been more favourably received.

[Sept. 24.] Petition of the Deputy Lieutenants of Cheshire, and the Governor and Committee of the City of Chester, to the House of Commons. Almost since January 1642-3 two armies have been maintained in this small county, and on the treaty for the surrender of Chester the petitioners, to save the city from plunder, engaged themselves to give all the officers and soldiers that served in the leaguer one month's pay, amounting to nearly 20,000*l.*, while the sequestrations will fall far short of what was expected. The horse, dragoons, and volunteer companies are all six months in arrear, and the county cannot satisfy them; and the soldiers are growing so impatient that the petitioners are in as great danger of being despoiled by their own necessitous soldiers, as they were before by the enemy; so many soldiers have been withdrawn that the malignants outnumber those that are left, and North Wales is in danger of being overrun by the enemy. The county is in want of a member to represent them in Parliament; is destitute of a godly and learned ministry, and the courts of justice are obstructed. The petitioners pray that considerable sums of money may be speedily ordered them out of the estates of delinquents, that a sufficient number of soldiers may be maintained at Chester for the safety of the city, and that the other grievances of the county may be redressed. See C. J., IV. 674.

[Oct.] Petition of Henry Slingsby. Petitioner is much engaged for his sister's late husband, Chichester Portescue, now dead, in the State's service in Ireland, and she cannot obtain payment of any part of his arrears, nor proceed against several of his creditors, who are protected. Petitioner also stands engaged for some members of the House of Commons, who, being themselves privileged and protected, leave him to pay, so that he dares not stir abroad for fear of imprisonment. He therefore prays for protection, that he may be able to follow his suits, and seek payment of his debts. See L. J., VIII. 515.

[Oct.] Similar petition of same.

Nov. 3. Answer of Captain Thomas Kingerby to the complaint of George Sibsey. The allegations in Sibsey's petition are altogether false. Petitioner was Captain of the Guard for the garrison of Boston, when Sibsey came thither, and being a man very suspicious, petitioner apprehended him, and carried him, his horse, and cloak-bag, to the Committee sitting at Boston, who examined him, and ordered his cloak-bag to be seized, and his money to be taken out and disposed of for the use of the Parliament. Petitioner having had several commands both by land and sea, and being in the actual service of the Parliament, has been committed to prison, and charged in execution at the suit of Richard Reddnall. This he conceives to be contrary to privilege, and prays that a writ of Habeas Corpus may be granted to him, and that upon hearing his cause the same justice may be done to him as has been done to others in the like nature. L. J., VIII. 554.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of order for release of Peter Allston, brought to the bar by virtue of a writ of Habeas Corpus. 25 Feb. 1644-5.

Nov. 6. Petition of Henry Earl of Worcester. Petitioner, upon the surrender of his house at Ragland, chose rather to cast himself upon the favour of the Parliament than to secure the liberty of his person and disposal of his goods upon the articles offered to him by Sir Thomas Fairfax. Petitioner's reason for fortifying his house was to defend himself from the unruliness of soldiers, and during all the time he was himself governor there, he never levied any contribution from the country, or oppressed his neighbours with free quarters or other incumbrance. He did not embrace a commission sent to him from the King to be General of South Wales, intending nothing but his own preservation; and has for these three years kept his chamber and most part of that time his bed, through his great infirmities, and never summoned a council of war or issued any one order, save that for the delivery up of his castle. Nov. 9. Petition of Everard Poole, minister. The Church of Weston-upon-Trent, in the county of Derby, becoming void, petitioner was thereunto instituted and inducted upon the 13th of May last, by an order of their Lordships, upon the presentation of Thomas Stitch, the undoubted patron. Notwithstanding this the University of Cambridge, upon misinformation that the church was still void, and the patron a recusant convict, have presented Mr. John Bollston to the church, and obtained an order from their Lordships for his institution. Upon Sunday, the 4th of October last, he violently entered the church, barred up the doors, and kept out petitioner and the rest of the inhabitants, and because petitioner did not surrender the parsonage house, obtained an attachment against him for contempt of their Lordships' order. Petitioner prays their Lordships to discharge him from the attachment, and to revoke the order of institution granted to Bollston. L. J., VIII. 559.

Annexed:—

1. Request of inhabitants of Weston-upon-Trent, that the matter may be referred to a fair trial at law, and that in the meantime Mr. Poole may be ordered to officiate in the church.

Nov. 10. Letter from the Scots Commissioners, at Worcester House, to the Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore.—We yesterday received letters from the Earl of Leven representing the great necessities of the Scottish Army, and the extreme suffering of the Northern parts. The Parliament forces are quartered in and about Yorkshire, notwithstanding they have the whole of the rest of the kingdom wherein they might quarter; and the four most Northern Counties, which are the most barren places of the Kingdom, have, besides all their former sufferings, been at the charge in some measure to entertain the army for six months past. The Scottish Army has been very desirous these three months past to return to their native country. We cannot understand how the ways and means for providing the 200,000*l.* for that army are so obstructed and retarded, when the sufferings of the people and the state of affairs so much require expedition. We can do no more than renew our earnest desires that the Houses of Parliament would take effectual course for the speedy payment of the 200,000*l.* for the easing the pressures of the people, and preventing further distractions and troubles by approaching armies. This letter is not mentioned in the Lords' Journals, but a letter from the Scots Commissioners, probably a duplicate of this, was read this day in the Commons. See C. J., IV. 718.

Nov. 13. Petition of Thomas Smyth, late Alderman of St. Edmund's Bury. Henry Chapman being indebted to Robert Heigham 800*l.*, Heigham took a bond in the name of Gardiner Webb, but received the greatest part of the money himself, and sent his man to receive the residue and to deliver up the bond. Heigham being a known recusant, the money was attached in the man's hands and delivered to petitioner, and the Earl of Manchester lying with his forces before the town of Lynn, the money was seized upon by his Lordship's warrant, taken out of petitioner's hands, and employed for the urgent necessities of the Commonwealth. Webb now, pretending the money to have been his own, has brought an action at law against petitioner, and by verdict at the last assizes in Suffolk recovered 226*l.* 17*s.* damages. Prays for relief. L. J., VIII. 562.

Petitioner's husband was a protestant and all his children are protestants, but she herself being a recusant, her jointure is sequestered, save only a third, which by reason of the burthen of the Scots Army in the parts where her estate lies, produces nothing to support her, and her eight younger children. Prays that she may be recommended to the Committee where the lands lie to make some further competent allowance for her, and to admit her son Edward to become tenant of the lands upon some moderate rent. C. J., IV. 722.

Petitioner has faithfully served the King and Parliament for the space of two years, and has laid out much money for the maintenance of his troop, but has only received 44l. 3s. In May 1644, petitioner lent 360l. to Sir Thomas Middleton for the advance of his forces into North Wales: Prays that this sum, with interest thereon, may be repaid to him out of the estates of the delinquents of the six counties in North Wales, who are now in composition for their estates at Goldsmiths' Hall. The estates of his father and grandfather are sequestered, and he, who is entitled in reversion after their deaths, and who never offended against Parliament, is without the means for his maintenance and education. He therefore prays for an allowance out of the estates, and that he may be tenant of the residue at a reasonable rent. L. J., VIII. 570.

Nov. 18. Letter from the Committee at Truro to Francis Buller and Anthony Nicoll, Esquires, members of the House of Commons, at Westminster. Their late short vacation has caused an accumulation of business: the Irish agents pressing for a more speedy collection of the Irish rate; Colonel Cobbett writing for a hundred beds for Pendennis Castle, and eight and twenty pounds a week for firing, &c.; while the six companies called off by Sir Thomas Fairfax have terrified the people, stripping men on the highway, and plundering houses, while some of the officers countenance them, saying, How can they help it when the men have no pay? Their want of clothes and shoes is evident, but the county, already drained, cannot supply them. The people are amazed with rates, free quarters, and assessments, and the great delinquents compound in London. The writers are ready to answer any complaint against them, but they specially desire help in the matter of Pendennis. They conclude by enclosing the examination of Richard Lloyd, which they think right to report, though they think there is no truth in what he says; he is in custody, and Wm. Cowes, one of the witnesses, is this day setting forth to London, so that he can be examined videlicet. C. J., IV. 728.

Annexed:—

1. Examination of Richard Lloyd respecting the charge made by him against the Earls of Northumberland and Pembroke, of having sent money to the King at Oxford. L. J., VIII. 578. In extenso.

A Committee of the House of Commons having decided that the water guards should continue till March next, on account of their usefulness for the Excise, an ordinance was passed for payment of their arrears. The petitioners pray their Lordships' concurrence in this ordinance, as their pay is now seven months in arrear, and they are in great necessity in consequence. L. J., VIII. 570.

Nov. 19. Petition of John James, of Southampton, merchant. Prays that the place of Comptroller of the Customs of Southampton, now vacant, may be conferred upon him, in consideration of the losses he has sustained by the Spaniards, in expectation of some redress for which, he has attended for above five years. 2. Affidavit of John Moore that he served a copy of the petition and of the order of the House upon the Earl. 5 Jan. 1646-7.

3. Statement of the proceedings upon the petition.

4. Answer of John Earl of Bridgewater. He has taken steps by placing lands in the hands of trustees to secure the payment of all his debts, and it is only the hardness of the times that has prevented his default; he therefore prays that the benefit of his peerage may be continued to him. 20 Jan. 1646-7.

Petitioner, who came to the House to instruct counsel and give evidence on behalf of his father Smart, is heartily sorry for any offence he may have committed, and prays for discharge from custody, that he may perfect his composition. L. J., VIII. 571.

Nov. 19. Petition of Peter Smart, a poor distressed minister of God's word. Petitioner was served with a warrant for hearing of the matters between him and some of his adversaries on the 17th instant, and, on account of his old age and other infirmities, being unable to prosecute his own affairs, committed them to his son Ogle, and if deprived of his assistance petitioner can never hope for any relief. He therefore prays that Ogle may be discharged from commitment, that he may perfect his own composition, and assist the poor petitioner to recover out of his miseries.

L. J., VIII. 573.

Annexed:—

1. The case betwixt Everard Poole, Clerk, and John Boilston, Bachelor of Divinity, both competitors to and for the rectory of Weston upon Trent, in the county of Derby. Thomas Stitch, the patron, presented Poole, and the House confirmed the presentation; but on being informed that Stitch was a convicted recusant, reversed their order, and appointed Boilston upon the presentation of the University of Cambridge: the matter therefore rests upon the point whether or no Stitch be a recusant.

2. Statement intended to show Stitch's recusancy.

3. Copy of report from the Committee for Sequestrations that Thomas Stitch, one of the attorneys in the office of the Treasurer's Remembrancer in the Exchequer, is a convicted recusant, and his wife and children papists; that his continuing to hold his office would be of dangerous consequence, and that his estate ought to be sequestered. 4 Dec. 1644.

Prays that the rectory of Ivychurch, now void, may be conferred on him, as he has never received an augmentation of 50l. granted to him by the Committee for Plundered Ministers, and the Committee recommended him for another living, which was bestowed before his petition could be read. L. J., VIII. 573.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of inhabitants of Ivychurch, that the rectory may be conferred on John Banks for the comfort of their poor souls.

Nov. 21. Order for Fitchett to answer.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of Wilks Fitchett to the petition of Elizabeth Rous, widow. Petitioner claims, as a set-off against part of his debt, certain sums due to him from Mrs. Rous' sister, who, with her husband Dickens, formerly administered Clegborne's estate; Mrs. Rous will not allow this, nor accept the decision of certain arbitrators appointed by mutual consent, but still pursues petitioner, so that he, on account of his daily attending the House, and having expended large sums of money on fuel for the same, was obliged to ask for protection from arrest. He prays that he may not be exposed to her rigorous prosecution, as he is ready to pay all that is justly due to her on being himself paid.

Nov. 21. Petition of Archibald Armestronge. In order to secure the means for educating his children petitioner bought a farm and lands in Yorkshire, which he let at 100l. per annum to Henry Thompson, Alderman of York, who, though well able to do so, refuses to pay his rent, and is 500l. in arrear; he has stopped petitioner's proceedings against him by injunction in Chancery, and has got possession of the counterpart of the lease. Petitioner prays that, as his extreme want will admit of no delays, the Alderman may be sent for by a messenger, and required to restore the counterpart of the lease, or an authentic copy thereof, so that petitioner may be able to proceed at law. Noted,—Nothing ordered.

Nov. 21. Petition of Edward Dilke, of Barwell, Leicestershire. Petitioner lately represented to the House his loss by fire, and the miserable condition of himself and his eight children, for whom he could scarce acquire subsistence by reason of the frequent payment of taxes. He prays that, in consideration of his woeful and distressed condition, he may be allowed a collection in London, and certain counties, or that his case may be recommended to those places for relief. Noted,—Laid by.

He prays to be discharged from commitment or enlarged on bond for his appearance, or otherwise that he may retire into the country, or have a pass to go into Holland. L. J., VIII. 575.

Nov. 23. Petition of William Walter. If he has used any unbecoming words in contempt of the orders of the House he humbly submits himself to their Lordships' compassion, and prays to be heard before them, as his whole estate is sequestered, and he is ready to perish for want of livelihood. Nov. 23. Petition of John Bodvell. Whilst petitioner was in the country a friend sent him word that a petition had been presented against him, and on coming to town he found that an order had been made by the House to take his children from him. Nov. 23. Reply of James Earl of Northampton to the answer of Thomas Doughty. Doughty was servant and solicitor to the late Earl, and so continued to petitioner. The writings in question are the principal deeds by which his estate is settled, and without them he cannot perfect his composition. Doughty about ten months ago acknowledged that he had them, and if he gave them to the Dowager Countess he ought never to have done so. Petitioner prays that Doughty, who has betrayed his trust, and is a mean person, may be secured until he delivers up the deeds in question. L. J., VIII. 575.

Nov. 24. Draft ordinance concerning Maryland, in America. The Commissioners for Foreign Plantations have informed Parliament that many of the inhabitants of Maryland have petitioned against the oppressions they have undergone under the tyrannical government of recusants, who have not only seduced but forced many persons from their religion; they have also considered the letters patent concerning Maryland granted by His Majesty to Cecil Calvert, Lord Baltimore, who deputed Leonard Calvert to be Governor there under him, to whom a commission from Oxford was given to seize such persons, ships, and goods as belonged to any of London, under which one Brent, the Deputy Governor, actually seized a ship employed under the Parliament, and tampered with her company, intending to carry the ship to Bristol, then in hostility against Parliament; the Lords and Commons therefore ordain and declare that Lord Baltimore hath wickedly broken the trust reposed in him, and they repeal and make void the letters patent, and remove the Governor and all other officers appointed by him, and empower the Commissioners for Foreign Plantations to appoint an able governor and other officers, with full powers in the place of those removed. L. J., VIII. 576. Lord Baltimore petitioned to be heard in support of the letters patent to him, but the matter does not appear to have come to a hearing.

The Fellowship has for many years been both honourable and profitable to the nation, but of late has suffered so much loss that the adventurers are utterly discouraged in proceeding some course be taken to prevent interlopers and private traders, for whose misdoings the factors of the company residing in India, and their stock, have been seized; and unless a further subscription be made by the members of the Fellowship and the persons entitled to come into it, the trade will be entirely gained by foreign nations, who will exclude the English and destroy their forts and factories, which have cost above 40,000*l.* It is therefore ordained that the company shall continue a Corporation with perpetual succession, and be known by the name of the Governor and Company of Merchants trading into the East Indies. The bounds of the trade are to be from beyond Cape de bona Sperance, beginning at the Isle of Succatoria in Africa, and the Red Sea, with the coasts of Africa bordering thereupon inclusive, and all along the coast of Asia into Japan inclusive, together with all the islands, creeks, and places adjacent. Petitioner has been several times employed to go to the King of Denmark on the public affairs of the kingdom and the opening of commerce through his dominions, and, in particular, he was last year employed to explain to the King the rejection of his agent, Henderson, and of the King's proffered mediation; these matters and the question of trade he has happily effected. Petitioner is shortly to return to Denmark on behalf of the merchants, and he prays that the King's letters sent in June last, which have been long lying in the House of Commons, may be read, that so he may take back a satisfactory answer to the King, whom, with his council and people, he left in a very good temper, and esteem of Parliament and its proceedings.

Lord Docwra, Baron of Kilmore, was captain of a Foot company in Ireland, but the rebels having seized all his estate, he was forced to come to England, hoping for some employment against them; but not having the happiness to obtain this he was exposed to great want, and after a tedious illness, the expense of which was borne by petitioner, to his utter undoing, Lord Docwra died, leaving nothing to pay for his decent interment. Petitioner prays the House, by Lord Docwra's wish, in consideration of the services of his family, to order payment of a sum sufficient for his decent burial, and for satisfaction of petitioner. L. J., VIII. 608.

Dec. 12. Petition of William Hodges. In February 1639-40 petitioner lent 400*l.*, raised by mortgage of a house in Covent Garden, to Walter Stuart, to free him from arrest, who soon after went abroad, leaving petitioner unpaid; the house was consequently forfeited. Dec. 15. Letter from Dr. Thomas Hill, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, to the Earl of Manchester. Mr. Wotton, Fellow of Trinity College, lately said at an inn, when they were speaking of the horridness of the Irish rebellion, that the Parliament of England were guilty of a greater rebellion. Complaint being made to the writer, he sent for the witnesses, committed Wotton to prison, and wrote to Mr. Bacon for directions, who advised that Wotton should be expelled from the University. The writer, after consultation with wise men, cannot find that the statutes of the University enable him to expel Wotton, or that the statutes of Trinity College warrant him in ejecting him from his fellowship, although they warrant expulsion upon lesser crimes. He thinks it would not be safe to exercise power where he has it not, but conceives that the best course would be for the House to order Wotton to be delivered up to the Committee of the County, and to appoint them to send him up. Some say he was drunk, others that he was mad, so his Lordship will judge what an ornament he is to the College. He escaped the stroke of their Lordships' ordinance by absence, when others were ejected. L. J., VIII. 620.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Laurence, that he heard Mr. Wotton say that the rebellion of the Parliament was worse than the rebellion in Ireland.

Thomas v. Simson, (Do.).

Payne v. Bacon, (Do.).

Dec. 16. Petition of John Bankes, that the writ of error, Baggott v. Blockley, in a cause respecting the title to certain lands at Eltham and Chiselhurst may be stayed until a trial of Henry Went, compass maker of Wapping, for perjury in the cause has been decided. Noted.—Read, nothing done.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of certificate that the Grand Jury at Westminster have found a true bill against Bent. 30 Nov. 1646.

[Dec. 16.] Petition of John Simpson, jun. Defendant, in a writ of error brought by Joanna Thomas and others merely for delay, prays for a short day for hearing.

Dec. 16. Petition of Joseph Bent. Petitioner was at first persuaded to be captain of a troop of horse under General Hastings, but soon found his error, and came in to Parliament at Michaelmas 1644, and submitted to his composition, and has given good evidence of his fidelity, as appears by the annexed copy of a certificate from the Committee of Leicester. Nevertheless, John Swinfen has brought an action for false imprisonment against petitioner, for taking him prisoner by command of General Hastings, and a London jury has given a verdict against petitioner, while Swinfen has encouraged other persons to bring similar actions. Petitioner for protection has brought a writ of error to the House, and submits that, considering his submission and composition, he ought not to be subject to private suits for what he acted as an officer of war. He prays that Swinfen may be called upon to appear, that upon hearing both sides petitioner may have relief.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of certificate from the Committee for Leicester mentioned in preceding. 20 Dec. 1645.

Dec. 16. Petition of Henry Earl of Worcester. Petitioner, who is near upon fourscore years of age, upon the treaty at Ragland, put himself wholly upon Parliament, and was brought up to the custody of the Usher of the Black Rod, where he has remained eight or nine weeks. On account of his age and infirmities he cannot walk in his chamber, or to his bed, without help, and has no means of his own to defray his necessary charge, and pay his great fees. He prays their Lordships that, inasmuch as his life cannot continue many days, they will be pleased to order that he may be freed of that charge, and that he may die out of restraint, and not in the nature of a prisoner, and may forthwith have such allowance for his maintenance as they in their wisdom shall think fit. L. J., VIII. 613. This petition was ordered to be sent to the House of Commons, that in regard of his sickness and want he might have some means allowed him out of his own estate. On the 18th the House was informed of the Earl's death, and application was made for the means to bury him. The petition is noted.—Read 16 Dec. 1646; Nothing done. Dead. 18 Dec. 1646.

Dec. 16. Petition of John Sanders, complaining that John and William Bedwell have alleged diminution in a writ of error in an action of ejectment, brought by petitioner to recover lands in Essex, and have not prosecuted their writ of error, while their agents are committing waste upon the lands. Sir Lewes prays that no proceedings may be taken under the order until he has been heard. L. J., VIII. 613.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.

2. Draft of the ordinance.

3. Another draft.

4. Copy of petition of Anthony Laphorne. In September last petitioner was recommended by the Committee for Plundered Ministers to the Committee of the Northern Association as a fit person to be rector of Sedgfield, and the Northern Committee made an order accordingly for him to enjoy the said living from the first of October; but when petitioner came to officiate at the church on the 18th of October, followed by a great number of persons, he was kept out of the church by one Ralph Butler, who took away the keys; and when petitioner read the order of the Committee, Butler cried out that they appealed from that Committee to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner was again excluded on two following Sundays, and forced to preach and baptize in the church porch. Petitioner, who is above seventy-seven years of age, and has suffered more than any other minister under the tyranny of the High Commission, and has been plundered for the cause of God and the Parliament, prays that the rectory of Sedgfield may be secured to him by ordinance of Parliament. On the 18th of Dec. the Committee for Plundered Ministers referred the matter in dispute between Mr. Laphorne and petitioners, who have chosen Mr. Innes as their minister, to the Committee of the County, who have since confirmed Mr. Innes in the living. Petitioners pray that Mr. Laphorne's petition to the House may therefore be dismissed, and that they may not be forced to take a tedious journey of two hundred miles when the premises have been already settled by the Committee for Plundered Ministers. (Undated.)

9. Copy of order of Committee for Plundered Ministers, that on Mr. Laphorne's withdrawing his petition for an ordinance of Parliament, the matter in question should be referred to the late Committee for the County of Durham. 1 Jan. 1646-7.

11. Petition of parishioners of Sedgfield. Since their former petition, which they hear has not been read, Mr. Laphorne has committed several outrages, disturbing Mr. Innes in the performance of Sabbath duties, bringing soldiers to the church, and commanding him out of the pulpit, and striking and reviling some of petitioners, so that they cannot go to church without fear and danger. They pray that their former petition may be considered, and Mr. Laphorne's dismissed. (Undated.)

12. Petition of same. Mr. Innes was at first the choice of a few, but is now the choice of all; his ministry has brought a sensible blessing, and worked a remarkable alteration in hundreds; he is further recommended by his sufferings for the cause, and the testimonials in his favour, yet petitioners' wishes, and the orders of the Committee, are thwarted and traduced by Mr. Laphorne, against whom they have more just exceptions than before. They pray to be protected from him, and that they may be secured in the enjoyment of Mr. Innes' ministry. (Undated.)

Dec. 25. Petition of Thomas Fincham and Arthur Slipper, of London, merchants. In Sept. 1643 they laden with sixty quarters of malt a small ship, of which Wm. Cooke was master, who was to transport the malt to Scotland, there sell it, and bring back great Scotch coals; for performance of this Cooke engaged his vessel to petitioners. Having sold the malt, however, he appropriated most of the proceeds, and then intended to go to some foreign country, but was driven by stress of weather into Yarmouth Roads, where he kept on board his ship, which obliged the petitioners to apply to the Court of Admiralty. By order of that Court the ship was arrested and condemned in part satisfaction to them for the value of the malt; upon this Cooke sued them under the statute of 2 Hen. IV. for proceeding in the Admiralty Court, and they were sentenced to pay 160*l*. Against this petitioners have brought a writ of error: their malt was worth 150*l*., and they have nothing but an old rotten vessel, valued at 45*l*. They pray that all proceedings may be stayed until the Court of Admiralty be settled, or that some way may be taken to protect them from ruin.—The judgment of the Court of King's Bench against petitioners was this day confirmed. See L. 1. Report from the Committee for the Admiralty and Cinque Ports. By an ordinance of the 24th of October 1644 it was declared that no quarter should be given to any Irishman, or papist born in Ireland, taken in hostility against the parliament, whether at sea or in England, but that they should, if taken, be forthwith put to death; and instructions in accordance with this ordinance were issued by the Committee to the commanders of the fleet. Now the Committee learn from various letters from persons in the West of England, addressed to Sir John Northcott and others, that trade has been much interrupted by Irish frigates, and that prisoners taken at sea by the Irish have suffered much; and further, from these letters, and from the letter of a prisoner at Wexford, they learn that the prisoners there, about one hundred and fifty in number, despair of mercy, in consequence of Captain Gilson having thrown some Irish prisoners overboard, unless the said ordinance be repealed. The Committee have also received a copy of a letter from Jasper Bolor, Mayor of Wexford, complaining of the throwing of prisoners overboard by Captains Gilson and Plunket, and threatening, unless the Irish hear before the first of February next that such thing shall never happen again, and unless the said captains be sent over to be punished, that one hundred and sixty-eight persons, now prisoners at Wexford and elsewhere, shall be put to death, and all those who hereafter fall into the hands of the Irish shall receive the same measure. The Committee have also considered a petition to Parliament from the wives and friends of some of the prisoners, praying Parliament to procure their release. The Committee desire therefore that both Houses of Parliament would declare their pleasure in these matters, and direct what instructions shall in future be given to the commanders. 17 December 1646.

2. Printed copy of the ordinance of the 24th of October 1644, for giving no quarter to Irishmen taken in arms at sea, or in England or Wales. L. J., VII. 34. In extenso.

3. Copy of letter from Jasper Bolor, Mayor of Wexford, to the Houses of Parliament, stating that English prisoners have been treated with the utmost care until they could be exchanged, but threatening reprisals for the deaths of the Irish prisoners thrown overboard by Captains Gilson and Plunket, unless a satisfactory answer be received by the bearer of the letter. 12 Nov. 1646.

4. Copy of letter from Robert Vennard to his wife. He and others were taken on the 11th of October, and brought prisoners to Wexford, where they at first received good usage; but on news coming that Captain Gilson, of the "Constant Warwick," had thrown fifteen Irish prisoners overboard, they were put into a woeful dungeon; until some Irish returning to Wexford, who had been taken prisoners and received good usage from Captain Molton, they were put into a far better prison, and now receive an allowance of 2*d*. a day. If the cruelty of throwing men overboard be allowed, the English will suffer more than the Irish, and great will be the number of widows and fatherless. The writer desires that all means may be taken to stop such cruelty, and to procure the enlargement of the English prisoners in Ireland. 9 November 1646.

5. Petition of Thomasine Wills, Ursula Vennard, and others, praying Parliament to take steps to procure the release of their husbands and sons taken in the "Prosperous," of Topsham, by an Irish frigate, and now prisoners at Wexford, in fear of death.

Dec. 31. Draft order to continue the pay of the garrison of Hull for three months. L. J., VIII. 638. In extenso.

Dec. 31. Petition of Robert Lord Rich. Complains that he was arrested by the Sheriffs of London upon a capias ad satisfaciendum on the 29th, and that they refuse to release him pursuant to the order of the House made on that day. Prays for the preservation of his right and privilege. L. J., VIII. 638. In extenso.

Dec. 31. Petition of same, praying for condign punishment upon Samuel Gosse, at whose suit he has been arrested. L. J., VIII. 638. In extenso.

Dec. 31. Petition of Thomas Cullum and Simon Edmonds, Sheriffs of London. They understand that if they set Lord Rich at liberty it would be an escape in law, and that they would be liable for his debt; they therefore pray further directions from the House. L. J., VIII. 639. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Samuel Gosse, citizen and grocer of London. Petitioner at various times during the last twelve years has lent money to Lord Rich, and in order to obtain payment he on one occasion arrested one of the sureties, who was violently rescued by Lord Rich, the Sheriff's officers being beaten and wounded. Petitioner subsequently advanced further money to Lord Rich, who confessed a judgment, besides promising payment on his honour and salvation out of the annuity allowed him by his father, Lord Warwick; but not getting payment, petitioner was constrained on Tuesday last to arrest Lord Rich, which he thought he had liberty to do under the judgment of the House depriving his Lordship of privilege, of which he annexes a copy, but the House has ordered his Lordship's discharge. He prays that before the matter be concluded he may be heard by his counsel, and that if the House think not fit, to let the law have its course he may have satisfaction some other way.

2. Copy of the sentence against the nine Lords, of whom Lord Rich was one, impeached by the House of Commons for joining the King at York, depriving them of their privileges, &c. 20 July 1642.
3. Another petition of Gosse, excusing his conduct in arresting Lord Rich, and praying for satisfaction of his debt. (Undated.)
4. Narrative of the state of the case between Lord Rich and Samuel Gosse.

[Dec. —.] Petition of Benjamin Worsley. In November last, upon a petition from him, the House directed an ordinance to be prepared to privilege an invention of his for the production of saltpetre, but owing to more important affairs the ordinance has never been read. Prays that letters patent may be granted to him for his invention. See L. J., VIII. 574.

[Dec. —.] The desire of the University of Oxford on behalf of the Margaret Professor (of Divinity). The arrears due to the Professor are to be paid to him from Lord Paget, by order of a Committee of the House of Commons of the 10th of December 1646, but by order of the House of Lords of the 21st of December the payment is suspended. The University desire the House to take such course as by their wisdom shall be thought fit for the payment thereof. See L. J., VIII. 620.

Petition of John Adkine and others. They complain that for selling small parcels of tobacco at Colchester, they have been unwarrantably arrested, and imprisoned by the patentees of tobacco there. They pray for relief.

Petition of Richard Amaris, a very poor, aged man. Petitioner claims an interest in a certain messuage and lands, part of the manor of Abbots Salford, Warwickshire, about which he has been in litigation for the last eighteen years; he is now reduced to great want, and prays for relief.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same to the Lord Keeper Coventry in the matter. 19 Nov. 1632.

Petition of parishioners of the parish of Aystermouth [Oystermouth], in the county of Glamorgan. Time out of mind they have enjoyed free use, possession, and pasture over lands called the Moor, Clyne, and Copley, on payment of thirteen shillings and fourpence to the Lord of the Manor of Gower; and also over other lands, called the Clenes and Knowles of Limestones, and sixty acres called Bradley, on payment of four shillings per annum,—in all about seven hundred acres; but of late years they have been excluded from these lands by the officers of the Earl of Worcester, the present Lord of the Manor. They pray leave to destroy the obstructions made to prevent their having access to these lands, and that they may have the benefit of the same as formerly.

Petition of Margaret Baylie. Prays that the Earl of Huntingdon may be enjoined to pay her 135*l.*, secured on a bond given by the late Earl for provender supplied by her husband for the Earl's horses; or otherwise that she may have leave to proceed at law for recovery of the same.

Petition of freeholders and other inhabitants of Over Bentham, Nether Bentham, Fowgill, and Graystone Gill to the House of Commons. Petitioners have time out of mind enjoyed right of common over Ingleborough Hill, in Bentham, in the county of York; but Wm. Lowther, when Lord of the Manor of Ingleton, by his greatness, converted the common to his own use, and he and his have enjoyed it ever since, to the great impoverishing of the petitioners, who pray for relief; the more so that the present Lord of the Manor, Wm. Lowther's heir and grandchild, is a delinquent and has been in arms against the Parliament.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of freeholders to the truth of the petition.
2. Copy of a similar petition.

Petition of Dame Mary Boyd, late wife of Sir Andrew Boyd, Knight, deceased. Her husband, an ancient and faithful servant to King James, as Cupbearer, purchased with petitioner's money an annuity for their joint lives and for the survivor of them, from the Earl of Worcester, payable out of the Exchequer, confirmed under the Great Seal. The arrears of this annuity now amount to more than 6,000*l.*, and she has no refuge but the compassion of Parliament to keep her from being chargeable to the parish; she prays, therefore, that some portion of the annuity may be paid her quarterly for her subsistence.

Similar petition of same.

Petition of Jean Armand de Bueil, son of the Duc de Neunty, Comte de Sancerre, &c. Petitioner came to England in order to live in peace and quiet of conscience, but has met with persecution here, and fears more. He therefore prays the House to extend its protection to him, that he may live in peace and without any fear. (French.)

Petition of William Chipp, that Richard Wigmore may be called upon to answer for his fraudulent dealings with regard to a copyhold farm at Ivington, Herefordshire.

Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel Penfound Cory and Major Wm. Boteler, on behalf of themselves and other the distressed officers late under the command of Colonel Were. Petitioners, who have suffered much at Lyme and in Cornwall, being plundered to their shirts, have several times petitioned the Committee for the Relief of the Western Garrison for their arrears, but can obtain no answer, except that they shall be satisfied if they can find any money belonging to the Parliament that can be raised in advance. They are credibly informed of several papists and delinquents yet undiscovered, and pray that a warrant may be granted them to seize any rent or goods yet undiscovered, that they can find, and to discount it for arrears, that they may be able to do the State further service, for without this they are likely to perish.

Petition of Edward Cole and Frances, his wife, praying that a judgment for 500*l.* out of the estate of the father of Frances Cole may be maintained against the fraudulent conduct of the executor and creditors.

Petition of Thomas Dabbs and Ann, his wife. Owing to the suicide of the father of Thomas Dabbs, and the deaths of other parties, petitioners have no legal remedy for the loss of certain lands at North Wingfield, Derbyshire, and therefore pray for redress from the House.

Petition of Thomas Dammeyn. About thirteen years ago he married Sarah Cegate, who lived honestly with him for three years, but has ever since left him, and consorted with strangers, and borne them children, to the scandal and reproach of herself and him. He can obtain no remedy but from their Lordships, and therefore prays that on proof of his statements he may obtain a divorce from her, and be repaired in damages by those that have been her abettors.

Petition of John Eldrington. By the corruption of his agent, Thomas Parramore, petitioner, who is under age, has been prevented from recovering from Edward Turner, William Peacock, and others, property which belonged to his grandmother, wife of Sir Edward Eldrington, Knight and Alderman in the time of Queen Elizabeth. Petitioner, who is still under age, prays that the parties may be called to answer before the House, that he may have relief.

Petition of Peter Fiott, a distressed young scholar of the isle of Jersey, to the Earl of Manchester. Petitioner, who had formerly a desire of advancing himself in the study of good letters, is now capable of entering the University, but his mother's means are insufficient to enable him to go there by reason of her exile from her native country, her adherence to Parliament, and her having received no help, though long since ordered. Petitioner therefore prays the Earl to further his journey to Oxford, to enter his name there by liberal contribution, that so his endeavour may not be frustrated by want of means.

Petition of Dame Jane Garrard, widow, committee of the body and lands of Benjamin Madox, Esq., His Majesty's ward. Many of the tenants have acted in a wasteful manner, to the injury of the ward's inheritance, whilst all the writings and most of the ward's goods in hazard of perishing were brought into the Court of Wards before the wardship was committed to petitioner. Now that the proceedings of the Court of Wards have been stayed, not knowing where to obtain redress, she applies to the House that the writings relating to the ward's lands, and also his goods, may be delivered to her, and she will use her best endeavour to protect him in his inheritance.

Petition of Thomas Hanham. Having retired to his house in the county of Dorset, on account of sickness and old age, he was there surprised by the King's forces and forced to go to Oxford, but did not stay more than three days, and returned home again; for this he has been fined both by the Committee in the West and at Goldsmiths' Hall the tenth of his estate. Petitioner was never in arms against the Parliament, but has often contributed to its support. Prays consideration of his case, that he may not pay more than the regular composition.

Petition of John Jago. Petitioner held certain lands in Cornwall belonging to the Bishopric of Exeter from Nicholas Burlace, for the lives of himself and his brother; but whilst petitioner was in the Parliament service, Burlace, a colonel in arms against the Parliament, and a reputed papist, possessed himself of the lands, turning petitioner's wife and children out of doors with great cruelty, assaulting and abusing petitioner's brother, who not long after died, and committing waste and destruction of trees and crops on the property, by which petitioner has lost more than £2000., besides suffering fourteen months' severe imprisonment at the hands of the enemy; and now, notwithstanding all this, Burlace gives out that he means to buy the property (on which petitioner and his ancestors have lived for above three hundred years), under the ordinance for the sale of Bishops' lands, which will be more ruinous to petitioner than all that has gone before. He prays that the freehold of the property may be given to him in consideration of his losses, or that he may be admitted to treat for it before Burlace, at a price bearing some proportion to his present condition, further reparation being given to him out of Burlace's estate.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of John Jago in support of his petition.
2. Copy of certificate of Jago's fellow-sufferers and fellow-prisoners to the truth of his petition.
3. Certificate of John Penros, and John Thoms, in support of Jago's petition.

Petition of John Irishe, of Combe, in the county of Somerset, yeoman. At the beginning of these wars he sent out his son and son-in-law, at his own cost, and maintained his son's wife and children. He has been six times imprisoned by the Cavaliers; has lost property worth 4000., besides free quarter and contributions to the Parliamentarians worth 2000. more. His said sons have never received a penny pay, and have consequently become much indebted, and are likely to be arrested, and if so, to starve in prison; but if time be given them, they doubt not by their industry to satisfy all their creditors. He prays, therefore, for protection from arrest for himself and his son.

Copy of petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled. They thank the Lords for their endeavours to prevent the subversion of the fundamental laws, and the introduction of arbitrary government, but they understand that Commissioners are to be chosen in every province to have some superintending power in Church Government, which is discouraging to those who are willing to submit to Presbyterian Government as established by Parliament, and likely to obstruct the prosecution of the votes passed in Feb. last (See L. J., VIII. 177.). The petitioners suggest that the Commissioners should be bound by the same rules as the parochial classical, provincial, and national assemblies, for the Commissioners are liable to error, and the choosing of them is said to be well-pleasing to those who have opposed the establishment of Presbyterian Government. The petitioners therefore desire that no Commissioners may be appointed to exercise any Church censures contrary to the Scriptures, and that if the appointment of these Commissioners be according to the word of God, that then all the subjects of the kingdom may be equally required to obey them, and other rules of Church Government established by Parliament.

Petition of Isabell Meeringe, the distressed widow of Captain Wm. Meeringe, deceased. Petitioner's husband was lately slain at the storming of Shelford Manor, leaving behind him divers children in a most miserable condition, deprived of all their father's means by the enemy, while no part of his arrears has been paid since his death. Petitioner's only subsistence is 100. per annum settled upon herself and her husband out of the land of the now Lord Savile, under a Decree of the Court of Requests; but Lord Savile refuses to pay, and as the Court of Requests is now dissolved petitioner is remediless, unless relieved by their Lordships. She prays that some course may be taken that she may receive not only the rent but the arrears thereof.

Petition of Colonel William Oglegby. Petitioner has attended since the late reduction in expectation of the arrears due to him, but in vain; and being desired to go to the Scots Army, he was hastening there, and had engaged some of his wearing apparel for money to defray his charges; but yesterday the rest of his apparel, linen, papers, and passes from foreign princes, which were packed in two trunks, were seized by a bailiff, a disgrace without precedent to a gentleman, who has ventured his life in the service of another nation. Petitioner, who is ready to satisfy all just debts as soon as his arrears are paid, prays that his goods may be delivered up to him, and reparation made him for the affront.

Petition of Thomas Ogle. Petitioner had a very good estate in the Fens, in Lincolnshire, but by suits of law, the sad condition of those parts, and malice against petitioner for his good service to Parliament, it has been totally destroyed. He was bred up in a complete knowledge of accounts and ciphering, and is confident of being able to do the State extraordinary good service in the Customs, and therefore prays to be appointed Comptroller of the Petty Customs in the port of London, now vacant.

Petition of Frances Lady Stewart, relict of Sir Wm. Stewart. Her late husband at the beginning of the rebellion in Ireland raised a regiment of foot and troop of horse, and did good service in maintaining English authority; he became in consequence very heavily indebted; his two sons also behaved very gallantly, the eldest having received ten wounds; her husband's estate was wholly wasted by the rebels, and she and her children are left in a very sad and disconsolate condition. She prays that the command of the regiment and troop of horse raised by her late husband may be conferred on her sons, and that she may be relieved by payment of arrears due to her husband, or out of lands of the rebels.

Petition of Sir Henry Spottiswood. He was one of the first to suffer by the rebellion in Ireland, his servants being murdered, his house plundered, and he himself obliged to fly to England with his wife and children, where he has lived in great want, unwilling to apply to Parliament for relief, fearing to interrupt the weighty affairs of State; but now that they are brought to a period he is obliged by his necessity to apply to

In 1645 petitioner was forcibly thrust out of possession of a house called Pully Preeth and other tenements, by Jenkin Llewellyn, assisted by horse and foot of the King's soldiers. Llewellyn still continues in possession of the premises, and cannot be made to give them up, because there is no Justice of the Peace in the county, as all are disabled by their delinquency. Petitioner prays that the High Sheriff and Coroner of the County may be ordered to resettle him in possession of his property. L. J., VIII. 643.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

2. Statement by the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, that he has appointed two fit persons to put Evans in possession of his property. 9 Jan. Endorsed.—Read; nothing done.

Jan. 4. Petition of Sir Arthur Aston. Petitioner, a soldier of fortune, was bred up from his youth in foreign wars, but some years before the late troubles he came to England, and betook himself to quiet retirement, till commanded by several summonses to serve the King. He, however, voluntarily quitted that service about two years since, and went by a pass from Parliament to Dublin, where he has lived without any military employment; but now, fearing lest he should be compelled to engage against the Parliament, he prays to be allowed to come to England, or else to have leave to depart the kingdom again. L. J., VIII. 643.

Jan. 4. Clarke v. Lloyd. Transcript of record, &c. L. J., VIII. 643.

Jan. 4. Application from Lord Petre, that he and his agents may have license to come to London for the hearing of his case before the Committee for Sequestrations.

Jan. 5. Petition of Sir Francis Willoughby. He was employed by the Marquess of Ormond, and the Council of Ireland, for the rendering to Parliament of Dublin, and all other places under the Marquess' command. Petitioner has attended the pleasure of the House almost a year, not only without any recompense, though others have been plentifully rewarded, but, by misinformation that petitioner was a delinquent, more than 600*l.* of his estate have been sequestered. He prays that the Committee that sentenced him may be ordered to certify their charge against him, and that if he should prove his innocence, as he doubts not to do, his estate may be restored, and he further relieved for his services and sufferings. L. J., VIII. 645.

Jan. 5. Petition of Henry Middleton. For fourteen years petitioner has been servant to the King, and for the last five years has lost all benefit from his places of keeper of the library, distilling house, and privy garden at Whitehall, worth to him 500*l.* a year, and the sole subsistence of him, his wife, and children. He has always been well-affected to Parliament, notwithstanding his position, and has adventured his life as commander of a troop of horse. Ever since Serjeant Birkhead has attended the House of Commons, petitioner has acted as Serjeant-at-Arms to the Commissioners of the Great Seal. He prays that, upon the determination of the interest of Serjeant Birkhead, he may be admitted in his place. L. J., VIII. 645.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Commissioners of the Great Seal, approving of Middleton as their Serjeant-at-Arms. 23 February 1645-6.

Jan. 6. Petition of Colonel Symon Rugeley, of Knightthorpe [Knight-Thorpe], in the county of Leicester. Petitioner was by order allowed 979*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* out of the estate of Sir Edward Littleton, but he has only received about 500*l.*, and now the sequestration has been suspended, Fisher Littleton and Sir Wm. Hickes having leave to proceed upon judgments for great sums of money against the estate, so that petitioner cannot be paid his arrears. He prays to be compensated out of the fines of delinquents. L. J., VIII. 647.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order for compensation of Rugeley out of the compositions of delinquents.

2. Order for payment of the 979*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* to Rugeley mentioned in his petition. 24 June 1644.

Though there are many evidences to show the priority of the Vice-Chancellor, yet Richard Timbs, the present Mayor of Cambridge, challenges his precedence, and the controversy between them is likely to be prejudicial to the dignity and quiet of the University. Jan. 7. Petition of Matthew Clarke, minister of Strettham, in the isle of Ely. Complains that, having told his parishioners that Christmas Day ought not to be observed as a holiday, they brought a soldier into the church to preach on that day, and afterwards forced petitioner also to preach, and dragged him violently from his house to bury the corpse of a woman, which they had sung to church contrary to the directory. He prays for protection. L. J., VIII. 651. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Articles in support of his petition exhibited by Clarke against some of the inhabitants of Strettham.
2. Petition of Humfry Lawrence, and Richard Bent, of the parish of Strettham, in the isle of Ely, husbandmen, to the Earl of Manchester. Mr. Clark, their minister, having conceived some offence against petitioners, has procured a warrant against them, and they are now detained in the custody of Mr. Baker, a messenger. They are ignorant that they have ever wronged Mr. Clark, but if they have unwittingly done him offence they are very sorry for it; being poor countrymen they cannot tell how to come to the knowledge of what is charged against them, and, for want of friends and means, are like to be brought to great misery. Pray his Lordship to be the means for their enlargement. L. J., VIII. 693.

Jan. 8. Examination of John White of South Perrot, in the county of Dorset. A husbandman who, moved as he says, by an angel, secreted himself in Westminster Abbey, and mutilated the effigy of the Earl of Essex. L. J., VIII. 653. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John White, a poor distressed prisoner in the Gatehouse, aged eighty years. He has been a prisoner ever since three weeks before Christmas for defacing the statue of the Earl of Essex, which the phrenzy of his distracted thoughts caused him to do, and for which heinous crime he is humbly and heartily penitent. He prays that his long and miserable imprisonment may expiate his offence, and that the House will order his release, he being, as he is, ready to starve. (Undated.)

Jan. 8. Petition of John Reading, now prisoner in the Fleet. Is heartily sorry to have incurred their Lordships' displeasure, and prays for his discharge, that he may follow his employment, for the support of his wife and many children.

Jan. 8. Petition of John Cooper and Daniel Wilgrice. The case between them and Thomas Turner cannot be heard on account of the weighty affairs before the House. They therefore pray that the 20l. deposited by them in the hands of Mr. Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, may be delivered to them on their giving security to abide the order of the House in the cause. Noted,—Read, nothing done.

Annexed:—

Jan. 8. Petition of Sarah Vincent, widow of Mr. John Vincent, late minister of Sedgfield, in the county of Durham. Upon the death of her husband in August last the parishioners were very earnest that Mr. Innes should be appointed their minister; but Mr. Laphorne is trying to force himself upon them, leaving a cure in Durham of 150l. per annum wholly unfulfilled. He procured the hearing of his case when the petitioners' counsel were out of town. She prays that Laphorne's ordinance may be suspended until there can be an impartial hearing.

Jan. 9. Petition of Peter Smart, a poor distressed minister, and sufferer for God's word. He is now in the greatest extremity, unable from age and poverty to follow his cause himself, whilst his son Ogle, his only support, cannot find money to satisfy his composition, and will never, if kept in prison, be able to do so. It was necessity that forced Ogle to Oxford, but he voluntarily left the place and went abroad, when he might have taken arms against Parliament. At petitioner's request Ogle appeared for him in his cause. Smart prays the House to remember that he was protomartyr in the late persecution, presented as a fit object to be relieved, not destroyed, as he is likely to be by the six years' dependency of his cause. He desires satisfaction, out of the estates of his oppressors, for his great losses and for his almost fourteen years of imprisonment; and prays that Ogle, for whose fidelity he will engage his life and reputation, may be discharged, and not destroyed for one necessitated, and oft-repeated error. They are entitled to an estate in Gedney in Lincolnshire, but have been dispossessed, since the sitting of this Parliament, by the inhabitants, who have thrown down the inclosures and thrown the lands into common, without any title of law. They pray that they may have the benefit of the general order for protection of inclosures, and be restored to possession of their lands.

Jan. 22. Petition of Colonel Francis Thompson. He complains that he has been arrested at the suit of Mrs. Robinson for a debt of 46*l*. for swords and belts for his soldiers, contrary to the protection granted to him in Oct. last. L. J., VIII. 682.

Thompson was cashiered by the Earl of Essex about three years ago, and has been in no service since; he has lately received considerable sums of his own estate, and of arrears due to him; he has now shipped his goods for Barbados, and is ready to be gone, to defraud his creditors. Petitioner's husband for the last three years served as a captain in the Parliament service, and is lately dead, leaving many debts due to, and from him. Petitioner has legally arrested Thompson, and prays that he may not be discharged until he has paid the 46*l*. L. J., VIII. 682.

Jan. 23. Petition of Cornelius Cooke, vintner. Time out of mind there have been stairs into the Thames from his house, which is very near London Bridge; these stairs have been made use of by all persons, both of the nobility and others, and even by the King himself, to avoid the danger of shooting the bridge; and when, in 1638, by order in Council, all stairs from taverns into the Thames were forbidden, these stairs were expressly excepted, on account of the accommodation they afforded; and even during this Parliament they have been made use of by the Lieutenant of the Tower when conveying prisoners to and from Westminster, as in the case of the Earl of Strafford, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and others; but last winter the stairs were carried away by the ice, and petitioner rebuilt them, but not so far into the river as before, without applying, through ignorance, to the Water Bailiffs' Court, who are consequently trying to remove the stairs on pretence of their being an annoyance to the river. Petitioner prays for an order to protect his stairs. L. J., VIII. 684.

Jan. 23. Petition of the Master and Warden of the Company of Stationers, London. The warden of their Company, and others, lately attended the House to give account of their proceedings under an order to search for and seize a libel called "Regal Tyranny," and on their way out of Westminster Hall meeting the wife of one Eeles, a Mercury woman, a common disperser of all kinds of dangerous pamphlets, and seeing her lap full of books, they searched her, requiring to see what books she had, upon which she reviled their warden with disgraceful language, and she and her husband have since caused him to be arrested, which will be of evil consequence, besides the disgrace, unless the offenders receive exemplary punishment. Petitioners pray that the suit brought against their warden may be stayed, and Eeles and his wife called upon to answer for their contempt. L. J., VIII. 684.

Jan. 23. Petition of the well-affected gentry and inhabitants of the county of Cardigan. They pray that a free school may be established in the town of Cardigan, annexed to Jesus College, Oxford, and 100*l*. per annum be allowed thereto out of the impropriations sequestered from delinquents in the county. L. J., VIII. 684.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same.

2. Another petition.

3. Schedule of proposed constitution and endowment of the school.

4. Copy of preceding.

5. Another copy.

6. Reasons showing the necessity of a free school to be erected in the town of Cardigan, and the benefit that may consequently ensue to the inhabitants of that county, presented to the Committee of Lords by Thomas Wogan, Esq., a member of the Honourable House of Commons serving for that town. There is no free school within forty miles, and the inhabitants are so poor that they are not able to have their children educated in any other county. None save the best sort of gentry can read or speak the English tongue, so that preaching does not at all edify them, they being not capable of understanding for want of breeding. In the whole four score parish churches, there are not one dozen ministers who can speak in their language. Mr. Wogan then gives many reasons why the town of Cardigan is the best place in the county for a free school.

7. Extracts from the "Liber Regis," temp. Henry VIII., showing the value of the first fruits and tithes of livings appropriated to the canons and preceptor of St. David's Cathedral, out of which it is proposed to endow the school.

8. Draft ordinance for erecting a free school in the town of Cardigan. L. J., IX. 97.

Jan. 23. Petition of Thomas Gery (or Geere). Petitioner's father left him 800*l*. on his attaining twenty-one, but he cannot be paid, because the estate is sequestered for the delinquency of his elder brother, the executor. He prays for relief, having done nothing to incapacitate him from enjoying the favour of the House. L. J., VIII. 685.

Jan. 23. Petition of Thomas Cullum, and Symon Edmonds, Sheriffs of the City of London and County of Middlesex. They have been served with the order for discharge of Colonel Francis Thompson from the Poultry Compter, and are ready, to obey it; but as divers actions have been charged upon him, besides that of Sarah Robinson, at whose suit he was first arrested, they pray that he may be brought before the House by Habeas Corpus, which will clear him from all actions, and free them from all future trouble. L. J., VIII. 685.

Jan. 23. Petition of Michael Baker, their Lordships' messenger, and deputy to the Gentleman Usher attending the House. A bill has been filed against him in the Petty Bag office for recovery of money due on a bond really satisfied, but which was by accident not cancelled. Petitioner, who has been a servant of the House for thirty years, and never hitherto made use of his privilege, prays that all proceedings in the Petty Bag office may be stayed until he can collect evidence of the satisfaction of the debt. L. J., VIII. 685.

Jan. 23. Petition of Sir Mathew Boynton and Dame Katherine his wife, that the House would give judgment in the case of Mrs. Mary Stapleton, widow, against the Master and Council of the Court of Wards, brought merely to delay a suit of the petitioners' against her. L. J., VIII. 685.

Jan. 23. Application in Lord Baltimore's cause, that the examination of witnesses taken in the Admiralty Court concerning Maryland may be read, &c. L. J., VIII. 685.

Jan. 23. Draft of an ordinance for securing 5,000*l*. per annum to Sir Thomas Fairfax, General of the Parliament forces. See C. J., V. 61.

Finch and the late Lord Keeper Littleton refused to seal. Scott, about three years after the decree was signed, obtained, contrary to an ordinance of Parliament, an order at Oxford for the sealing, and has since imprisoned petitioner. Prays their Lordships to re-hear the suit or to refer it to the Commissioners of the Great Seal, and in the meantime to grant him his liberty. L. J., VIII. 694.

Jan. 29. Copy of Commission to Sir Thomas Bendish to be Ambassador at Constantinople. L. J., VIII. 694. In extenso.

Jan. 29. Draft ordinance for preceding Commission to pass the Great Seal. L. J., VIII. 694. In extenso.

Jan. 29. Petition of William Walter. Prays for a rehearing of his suit against Elizabeth Walter, his wife, on his depositing the money which he received out of the rents of his lands, contrary to their Lordships' order, in some indifferent hands, and undertaking not to meddle again, or receive any rents in the meantime.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of report of Mr. Justice Heath. 12 May 1642.
2. Report of the Judges to whom the cause was referred. 28 Jan. 1646-7. L. J., VIII. 694. In extenso.
3. Copy of preceding.
4. Affidavit in the cause.
5. Another Affidavit.

Jan. 29. Petition of Elizabeth Walter. Complains that her husband has, in contempt of their Lordships' order, fraudulently received the rents of lands which were ordered to continue in the possession of Commissioners authorised to receive the profits thereof for her use. Prays that George Howard may be examined upon oath as to the amount which her husband has received, and that he may be ordered to pay her, the whole of her arrears. She will be then ready to offer herself for a fair trial upon the merits of the whole case.

Jan. 29. Petition of the young men, seamen and apprentices, that presented a petition to this Honourable House in the behalf of themselves and divers others the 26th of this instant, January. Pray that their petition may be forthwith taken into consideration, on account of their desperate condition.

Jan. 30. Petition of Phillips Cooper, daughter of Sir John Cooper, deceased. Petitioner, upon the earnest desire of John Earl of Bridgewater, lent him, in December 1639, 2,000*l.*, being the fortune her father left her; for security whereof the said Earl, William Courten, his son-in-law, and Sir Edward Littleton became bound to pay 2,800*l.* to Edward Tooker, in trust for petitioner, on the 10th of June next following. Notwithstanding that she has earnestly solicited the Earl, he has not paid her one penny, and she is now in great distress. Prays for relief, as she has no remedy in law against the Earl by reason of his privilege. L. J., VIII. 695.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of the Earl of Bridgewater to preceding petition. Was drawn into an engagement with Mr. William Courten and Sir Edward Littleton for securing 2,000*l.* to Edward Tooker, but the debt was not his, although he was first named in the bond; he did not at all desire that the money should be lent, and is very sorry that the debt is not discharged. Prays their Lordships not to give way for any prosecution against him, who will with all care endeavour not only the satisfaction of his own debts, but the freeing himself of this engagement. (Undated.)

Jan. 30. Petition of Peter Smart, a distressed minister of God's word. Their Lordships ordered that he should receive 204*l.* out of the estates of Thomas Burwell and John Heath, delinquents; and also ordered Mr. Gilbert Marshal, the receiver of the rents of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, to pay him his stipend, with all his arrears. Petitioner has not received one penny from Burwell and Heath, because the sequestrator of their estates is committed to Goldsmiths' Hall, and the receiver refuses to pay him his stipend. Prays that he may receive his 204*l.*, or that he may be authorised to take possession of Burwell's office at Durham, and of Heath's lands at Old Durham, and also that the receiver may be ordered to pay him his arrears. L. J., VIII. 694.

Jan. 30. Petition of James Earl of Middlesex. Petitioner has suffered a great loss for the service of the State by the burning of his chief mansion-house called Milcote, in Warwickshire, which was done by command of the Committee for Warwick to prevent the enemy placing a garrison there. He has also suffered many other losses, amounting in all to at least 14,000*l.* Prays that he may receive compensation out of delinquents' estates, or in some other way, that he and his family may not be exposed to ruin, who have always faithfully adhered to the Parliament. L. J., VIII. 695.

Jan. 30. Letter from the Commissioners with the King to the Earl of Manchester, respecting the delivery up of Newcastle to General Skippon, &c. L. J., VIII. 699. In extenso.

[Jan.] Petition of Sir Benjamin Ayloff, to the House of Commons. On the 25th of Dec. last (C. J., V. 28) the House granted him liberty upon bail, but required him to give security for a fine of 2,000*l.*, of which he had no previous notice, and which he can in no way discharge. He prays the House to set him at liberty, in consideration of his four years' imprisonment, and to remit his fine, or else to refer his annexed case to a Committee for favourable consideration.

Annexed:—

1. A particular of Sir Benjamin Ayloff's case. In Nov. 1642 he received a commission to be Sheriff of Essex, but was commanded by the House of Commons not to act upon it, while leave was refused him to go to the King to endeavour to be freed from that employment. Two months later he received and accepted another commission; for this and for publishing a proclamation in one town only he was committed to the Tower, his goods were seized and sold, and his lands have since been sequestered; he took the Covenant within the appointed time, and thinks that he is now the only man still kept in prison who has done so. His case has been represented to the House by several petitions. Of most of his estate he is only tenant for life, while he has six children, and many debts greatly increased since his imprisonment.

Feb. 1. Petition of the servants and officers of the Earl of Pembroke on behalf of the Earl. They complain that Lady Wilde [or Weld], under pretence of some dormant statute, and taking advantage of the Earl's absence on the affairs of the State, has endeavoured to gain possession of the manors of Stepney and Hackney, to which manors the Earl has a good and lawful title. They pray that Lady Wilde and her agents may be ordered to stay all proceedings until the Earl shall have been fully heard upon the whole matter. L. J., VIII. 696.

Feb. 12. Application for a pass for Mrs. Dike, rocker to the Princess.

Feb. 12. Letter from Sir John Byron,* at Dublin, to the Earl of Northumberland. Since the course which the writer has taken in his service to His Majesty has been so displeasing to the Parliament as to condemn him unheard, and to exempt him from pardon, he beseeches the Earl to procure him license for himself, with his wife, family, and goods, to depart the King's dominions. Is certain that he has committed no offence that is capital by any law that was ever enacted, and is yet willing to inflict upon himself a punishment which is next to death, that is banishment, which is termed by lawyers a civil death; but howsoever great the punishment may be, the writer will take it as an extraordinary favour if by the Earl's means he may obtain it.

Feb. 12. Letter from the Earl of Stamford (Stamford), at Berwick, to the Earl of Manchester. He came with the hostages of Scotland to this town on the 12th instant, about 3 o'clock; the garrison marched out about two hours before, and all the Scottish forces in these parts have returned into their own country. As for Carlisle, the writer has received no more certain intelligence than is contained in the enclosed letter from thence. Will go to Edinburgh as soon as he receives a good account of things at Carlisle, and the hostages are re-delivered.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of letter from the Commissioners for slighting the works of Carlisle, to the Earl of Stamford. They commenced the work of slighting the fortifications on the 26th of January last. Found the town (as the sword, famine, and plague had left it) the model of misery and desolation. The following pieces of ordnance were found in the town, viz., 2 old large murderers, 4 sakers, 2 minions, 2 ring pieces, and 6 sling pieces. Being destitute of an engineer, the writers contracted with one commended to them by the garrison to help down the pieces upon the castle citadel and walls, and remount them upon the carriages, which are so decayed and deprived of their irons as to be unserviceable for these weighty burdens. Considering these defects, the deepness of the moorish ways, and the weakness of the country draught beasts, the writers esteem it altogether impossible to convey the ordnance to Cocker mouth, so they will proceed to have them removed three or four miles till fitter opportunity. The two murderers have of old time continued upon ground within the castle; the writers desire to be resolved how they are to be removed. The garrison is yet in town, but at their departure the writers will give a further account of what arms and ammunition they receive. L. J., VIII. 650.

Feb. 13. Petition of Matthew de la Fitta, of Bayonne in France, merchant. Petitioner has borrowed large sums of money on the security of his friends for repairing and fortifying the town and Castle of Pembroke, where he has been Governor for upwards of four years, and for ammunition, clothes, victuals, and pay for the garrison. Prays that he may be repaid the money so expended by him for the necessary occasions of the Commonwealth, together with his arrears, out of the composition of certain delinquents. L. J., IX. 14.

Feb. 13. Petition of William Wotton, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Has been detained in prison nine weeks for some pretended words alleged to have been spoken by him, of which offence he is in no sort guilty. Prays for his discharge. L. J., IX. 14.

Feb. 13. Draft order to clear Henry Bishop of his delinquency. L. J., IX. 14. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from the Grand Assembly in Virginia to [Mr. Speaker].—We desire to thank the House of Commons for all its favours, but especially for informing us, by letter of the 18th of October 1644, that all sequestrations upon the goods of planters and others of Virginia were taken off; in return, the merchants of London have enjoyed trade with the colony, and free admission to her Courts of Justice. The savage king, who contrived the massacre of our people, is so abandoned by his people, and they so routed and dispersed, that they are no longer a nation, and we now suffer only from robbery by a few starved outlaws, whom, by God's assistance, we doubt not to root out in another year. We send this by Mr. Henry Bishop, who formerly served the King in these unhappy wars in England, but is now a member of our colony, and actually engaged by plantation and servants upon the place. His lands are in sequestration, and we humbly pray that the sequestration may be taken off, that he may be enabled to strengthen his plantation with people, and supply those already seated there. 17 March 1645-6. L. J., IX. 14.

2. Affidavit of Henry Bishop respecting his estate at Henfield, Sussex. 8 Jan. 1646-7.

Feb. 13. Petition of Doctor Alexander Leighton. Petitioner being now in daily expectation of death, prays for some suitable reparation for the sufferings, both in body and estate, which he has endured since 1628, for no other crime than a book which he wrote against the evils of episcopacy. The greatest remaining sting of his sufferings is that he has been hindered by his thirteen years' imprisonment in providing for his children.

Feb. 14. Letter from Major-General Skippon at Newcastle, to the Speaker of the House of Peers. On Thursday last the rear of the Scots' army passed over the Tweed, and on Friday they quitted the garrison of Berwick, and the same night the Commissioners went into the town. On Thursday at Kellsy [Kelso?] they disbanded six regiments of horse; the foot disbanded in parties as they marched, some on the south, some on the north side of the Tweed. They drew out of the chiefest both of men and horse as commanded men for the new model, 5,000 foot and 1,200 horse. The better party bear the sway in the command, which much stomachs the disbanded party, amongst whom there is a general discontent, both at the disbanding and also that the other party bear the sway in the command of the new model. At the disbanding they gave them an oath never to bear arms against either kingdom, contrary to their covenant, and took the pistols of those horse that were disbanded, but left them their swords and their horses, they having brought them with them. The writer intends this week to take a view of the garrisons of Hartlepool and Stockton, and then to give an account thereof to their Lordships.

The custody of the Castle was committed to petitioner by patent under the Great Seal in the sixteenth year of His Majesty's reign, and petitioner has ever since faithfully discharged the trust, but is now unable to continue the personal attendance which is requisite, by reason of sickness and the losses he has sustained in these times. He is therefore willing to resign the command, and prays that an ordinance may be passed conferring it by patent upon Captain John Arthur, who has for some time supplied petitioner's place, is of known ability and integrity, and certified to be a fit man by the Committee of the West.

Feb. 23. Petition of Captain Alexander Wilde. The greatest part of petitioner's estate in Gloucestershire has been wasted and destroyed by the enemy, and he is now ordered to be Sheriff of Hertford, which place he is no way able to undergo, as well in respect of his present disability of estate, as also that he must necessarily look after that little fortune which, by God's goodness and the Parliament forces, is recovered again unto him. Prays that some other may be appointed to the place, for which he conceives there is very good choice.

Feb. 24. Draft order for a collection to be made in London and Westminster for the poor infected inhabitants of Totnes, Devon. C. J., V. 97. In extenso.

Feb. 25. Letter from Major-General Skippin, at Newcastle, to the Speaker of the House of Peers:—The provision of victual, ammunition, and oats sent hither is safely laid up. Last week the writer viewed Stockton and Hartlepool, and left some few men in each. Stockton is a very inconsiderable place; not worth the keeping, and were better demolished. Hartlepool is exceeding poor, but lieth convenient to hinder a foreign invasion, yet not without great charge of being fortified. The country thereabouts, as the rest of these parts, is much impoverished, and would gladly be eased of all soldiers. Knows not what will be done with the county troops and forces in these northern parts, but they help to increase the burden. Bad weather and other business have not given the writer leave to view Holy Island, which he hears is a considerable place lying upon the sea within ten miles of Berwick. Tyne-mouth Castle is a very considerable place, and ought to be well fortified, as the very key of all these parts; and of necessity, if it should be made and kept serviceable, there must be some extraordinary allowance for the repair of the works, and keeping them in repair, and procuring beds fit for soldiers to lie in, through want whereof, there being nothing but the bare walls, the writer is compelled to quarter them in the country, and to cause them to watch therein by turns. For the greater safety of the place it would be requisite that one of the Parliament ships of war should constantly lie in the haven. Since the great business between both kingdoms is now happily ended, he desires to know what it will seem good to the Parliament to do with Newcastle and Tyne-mouth, and with himself in relation thereto. The general has been pleased, for the ease of these parts, to call back to the army Colonel Lilburne's regiment of foot and all the horse that were of the writer's convoy, except his own and Captain Barton's troops, nevertheless the country is as discontented and complaining as before.

Feb. 26. Petition of Patrick Ruthen, Esq. Complains that Richard Andrewes has, in contempt of their Lordships' order, transported beyond the seas certain of the pictures and other goods of the late Sir Anthony Vandike, and embezzled and sold others, and converted the money to his own use, and that he intends to convey himself into foreign parts with the residue of the goods, whereby the heir and executor of Sir Anthony Vandike, who is an infant and an orphan, will lose all benefit due to her by the law, and intended for her by their Lordships' order. Prays that Andrewes may be sent for, and compelled to put in security to answer and abide such suits as shall be brought against him. L. J., IX. 37.

Annexed:—

1. Order referred to in preceding. 25 March 1645.

2. Affidavit of service of preceding order upon Andrewes. 23 February 1646-7.

3. Affidavit of Deirich Hess, that Andrewes has transported certain of the pictures and goods beyond the seas, and disposed of others within this kingdom, and that he refuses to give any account of the same. 25 February 1646-7.

Feb. 26. Petition of Sir Henry Mildemay, claiming the title and dignity of Lord Fitzwalter. Has been arrested for debt, and is now detained in the Fleet prison. Prays that he may have His Majesty's writ of Habeas Corpus until, and upon, the day fixed by their Lordships for the hearing of his claim. L. J., IX. 37.

Feb. 26. Petition of Mary Brewer in behalf of her wounded and languishing husband, Roger Brewer, and three small children. Petitioner's husband served the Parliament from the beginning of the wars until last Christmas twelvemonth, when he came home dangerously wounded, and has ever since languished in great extremity. There is due to him from the State 60*l.* and upwards upon his debenture, but he remains destitute of relief, and is ready to perish with his family for want of bread. Feb. 26. Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgees of the City of Gloucester. Petitioners both at, and before the siege of Gloucester, disbursed and engaged themselves for many thousand pounds for the diet and clothing of the Parliament forces. Towards payment thereof, about two years since, the House of Commons passed an order for 4,000*l.* due from Henry Poole to Sir Humphrey Tracy, a delinquent, to be paid to them, which order has ever since depended before their Lordships upon a bare pretence of Sir Humphrey Tracy that he had no other assets to satisfy legacies bequeathed by his father's will. Petitioners have been sued for part of the money for which they engaged themselves, and are likely to be cast into prison, to their utter undoing, and therefore pray their Lordships to make a speedy end of the said ordinance.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. List of Committee to which the matter was referred.

granges within the wapentake of Clare, within the West Riding of the county of York. They pray that the fortifications and garrison of Knaresborough Castle may be maintained, as it is far from any other garrison, in a vast moorish part, and is a protection to the neighbouring inhabitants from outrages at the hands of straggling soldiers, is an assistance to the collectors of assessments, &c. in the performance of their duties, and is the Court house to which all the neighbourhood repairs for trial of causes and controversies, keeping of records, &c. See C. J., V. 99.

L. J., IX. 41.

1. Affidavit of Packer, that the Judge Advocate cannot possibly be ready with his witnesses and writings at the next assizes in Kent. 2 March 1646-7.

March 1. Petition of Anthony Hungerford, of Blackbourn, Oxon. He was enforced to Oxford by a party of horse, and did not when there vote against the House of Commons; he submitted himself before October 1644, which was not clearly presented to the House of Commons when they imposed the greater fine upon him. Conceives that he is an object fit for mercy as well as justice, and prays that the greater fine may be reduced to the lesser, as he never acted against the Parliament, and is charged with a wife and eight small children. Seeing no other means of escape, he took up arms under Prince Maurice, and having written to Colonel Bingham, Governor of Poole, to send a party to him, he at last made his escape, taking over with him a good party of men and horse from the King to the Parliament ser-

Petitioner, who was a merchant in London in good employment, has been for upwards of four years in the service of the Parliament, and was shot at the storming of Bristol, where he lay three months under cure. accordance with the 13th article of the treaty. C. J., V. 113.

March 13. Letter from Randoiph Caldecott, at Holdenby, to Richard Oldisworth, a member of Parliament at the Cockpit, St. James's. Is commended by his Lord [Stamford] to send the enclosed letter [letter wanting], which has even now come to his hands from Sir John Byron, and which his Lordship would have carried to the Committee of Safety, that thereby he might be exonerated. His Lordship, at the time of his attendance at Newcastle last before this, received some lines from the same party, which he showed to Mr. Goodwin, one of the Commissioners there. The purport of the letter was to ask leave to come and speak with his Lordship. The answer returned, which was agreed to by Mr. Goodwin, imparted his Lordship's utter refusal of any speech with him, leaving him to make his address to Parliament. His Lordship commands that you present this to the Committee, and enjoins your care thereof that he be not misunderstood. Sir John was in Newcastle long before, and upon the Commissioner's coming "avoided," and sent in that first letter, and his Lordship never saw nor heard from him since the troubles, but as before mentioned.

3. Another petition of Morgan, praying for a hearing of the cause.

4. Petition of Sir Stephen Scott. The Court of Chancery granted a writ of Habeas Corpus to Morgan, in order that he might prosecute a bill of review against petitioner, but afterwards revoked and suppressed it, finding that Morgan had no ground to maintain his bill. March 23. Letter from Thomas D'Abridgcourt, in Paris, to []. The writer beseeches his "sweet" cousin to use his influence with the Speaker to obtain a pass, in order that he may come to England for two months to see his father, whose age and sickness are evident arguments of no long life, and also to travel into Flanders, which he cannot do from Paris without much danger and trouble, passes from both sides being now very difficult to be obtained. Undertakes to do nothing, either directly or indirectly, prejudicial to the Parliament affairs during his stay. L. J., IX. 97.

March 23. Petition of Anthony Berrow. Petitioner is the man who acted the constable's part in the desperate design of surprising and taking the City of Hereford, which was the chiefest occasion of regaining that part of the kingdom, then in the enemy's hands, without the loss of much blood. The House of Commons have been pleased to pass an ordinance granting a rent charge of 50*l.* per annum to petitioner out of the estate of Sir Henry Lingen, a person who was in arms against the Parliament from the very beginning until he was taken prisoner by Colonel John Birch, in one of the last castles that was taken. Petitioner prays their Lordships to concur in passing the ordinance.

March 24. Petition of Edward Rumsey, of Crickhowell, Brecon. Petitioner has sustained divers wrongs and injuries in his person and estate by the means of the Earl of Worcester and his son, Lord Herbert, by whose command his house was battered and plundered by Colonel Morgan, a Popish commander; petitioner was afterwards by his command arrested, imprisoned, and tried for his life, being charged with treason for his service to the Parliament; having with great difficulty escaped this danger, the Earl commanded his forces again to apprehend petitioner, and he was in consequence obliged to leave his habitation (which the Popish forces twice attempted to burn with wildfire) and live abroad, to his great expense, and the utter neglect of his estate, the benefit whereof the Earl of Worcester has for divers years enjoyed under pretence of wardship and other means. Prays that the matter may be referred to the Committee of Brecon, or some other Committee of South Wales, to certify the truth of his statements, in order that he may receive some satisfaction for his losses. 1. Certificate of petitioner's service to the Parliament, and of his great losses.

Petitioners lived in good quality and fashion in Ireland, being there entrusted in great offices of the Commonwealth, until the rebellion, when for their affection to the Protestant religion and the Parliament, they were forced to fly for their lives. They have been employed in the Parliament service, and have much pay due to them; they are still most willing to manifest their duty to their country, have long waited for employment, and have no means left upon which to subsist. Pray that there may be granted to them a regiment of firelocks of fifteen hundred, and a troop of one hundred horse, upon such conditions of advance as others have, upon half pay, the other half upon the rebels' lands. L. J., IX. 99.

March 24. Petition of Edward Martin and Richard Sterne, prisoners in Ely House. Petitioners being Masters of Queens' and Jesus' Colleges, Cambridge, and resident upon their places, were in August 1642 sent for and committed to prison by the House, not having before been ever questioned, nor since so much as charged with anything in life or doctrine. Their masteries and livings having been totally taken from them, and they not having, during all the time of their imprisonment, been allowed one penny out of them to buy bread, have hitherto subsisted (though very meanly) by the Providence of God, and their credit with their friends; but this supply now failing them, they pray that a subsistence may be granted to them out of their livings and places, or that they may have their liberty upon bail, in order that they may seek a livelihood abroad, and not perish in prison for want of food.

March 25. Petition of Captain John Erlysmen, now prisoner in the King's Bench. Petitioner's creditors, in wilful contempt of their Lordships' order of the 5th instant, refuse to release him, and Sir John Lenthall, Marshal of the King's Bench, pretends that the order is not sufficient discharge for him in law. Petitioner prays that a writ of Habeas Corpus may be granted to him, in order that he may be brought up and discharged. L. J., IX., 103.

March 25. Order for Sir John Lenthall to appear and answer for disobeying their Lordships' order. L. J., IX., 103.

March 25. Petition of Sir Thomas Windebank. Prays to be admitted to compound for his delinquency. L. J., IX., 104. In extenso.

March 26. Petition of Patrick Young, Thomas Jenyns being indebted to petitioner in the sum of 100l. for rent due three years ago, petitioner willingly forbore to proceed against him during the dependence of his suit before their Lordships, since the decision of the suit, however, petitioner, finding himself still deluded, was constrained to seek redress by course of law, but is likely to be stopped by a protection, which was formerly granted to Jenyns. Prays their Lordships to recall the protection. L. J., IX., 105.

March 26. Rough notes of the conference with the Commons respecting the ordinance for regulating Oxford University. L. J., IX., 105.

3. Petition of gentlemen, freeholders, and yeomen, inhabitants in the Isle of Thanet, to the Committee for the Admiralty and Cinque Ports. Petitioners and their predecessors have, time out of mind, shipped their corn at Margate, and have always been and still are ready to pay all ancient and accustomed duties for the maintenance of the pier and harbour. These duties hitherto have been, and still are, sufficient for the purpose, and the town is not in that danger which is falsely suggested in the petition of John Smith. The inhabitants will undertake to maintain the works now standing against the sea, with a moiety of the timber desired by Smith, and without any new imposition laid upon the country, which would compel petitioners and their successors to ship their corn elsewhere, to the utter ruin of the inhabitants. Pray that the old duties may be maintained, and that they may be collected and disposed of by pier wardens chosen as they have been accustomed to be chosen time out of mind.

4. Letter from Henry Crispe, sen., and Henry Crispe, jun., at Queakes [Quex], to the Earl of Warwick. Having been directed by the Committee to survey the decays of the jetty works at Margate, they have made their report. They have seen both the petition presented by Smith, and also that from the inhabitants of Margate, who, for the real performance of the works and safety of the town, faithfully promise to give six times the security proffered by Smith. 'This the writers desire may be taken into consideration. 27 Mar. 1647.

[March 30.] Petition of wives and widows of divers officers and soldiers. Petitioners' husbands, to whom large arrears are owing, have faithfully served the Parliament, and still hold their pristine faith, though many others have deserted, yet petitioners, with their husbands and children, are ready to starve for want of bread, while some of their husbands are in prison for debt, and some dare not stir abroad for fear of arrest. Petitioners pray the House to grant them some relief, as the Commons did on the last fast day. L. J., IX., 110.

March 30. Petition of Captain Thomas Ogle. Petitioner has been a prisoner for four months, having been committed by their Lordships until he should compound and make his peace with the Parliament. He has been admitted to his composition, but cannot perfect the same for want of money, which, during the abode of the Scots in the North, he was not able to procure. He therefore prays to be discharged upon bail. L. J., IX., 111.

James Rodd, senior.

March. Petition of Lucy, wife of Arthur Staveley. About fifteen months since petitioner's husband was committed for his contempt in not paying her the alimony adjudged to her by their Lordships. He still persists in his contempt, and has settled all his lands upon his daughter, professing that he will rather die in prison than pay petitioner one penny. Prays for an order for the payment of her alimony out of the profits of his lands.

March. Petition of Edward Higgons. Prays for the reversal of a decree in Chancery, obtained against him as executor of the will of his late father, Richard Higgons, by Hugh Over and Katharine, his wife.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of decree of the Court of Chancery complained of by petitioner. 8 Feb. 1646-7.

2. Report of Mr. Page, one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, as to the amount due from Edward Higgons to Hugh and Katharine Over. 1 Mar. 1646-7.

March. Petition of Captain William Poe, Petitioner faithfully executed the commands of the Parliament from the 21st Feb. 1642-3, until the 11th of August 1646, during which time he performed many great services. He has borrowed large sums of money to pay for his soldiers' quarters and other necessities, and there is now justly due to him and his officers 4,495*l*. 18*s*. 10*d*. On the 10th of December last their Lordships ordered him to repair to the Committee for Suffolk, for examination and payment of his accounts; this he has done, and the Committee have examined the same, and have certified that they have no money. Prays that what is due to him and his officers may be paid, in order that he may repay the money he has borrowed. He undertakes to raise three troops of horse, eighty in each troop, and carry them to the waterside at his own charge; and if 1,000*l*. more be advanced to him he will raise two troops in Ireland within six weeks after his arrival.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate of the Committee for Suffolk of the amount due to Captain Poe.
2. Copy of a further certificate of the same Committee.
3. Copy of letter from the Committee of the Eastern Association to the House of Commons, testifying to the good services performed by Captain Poe. 10 June 1645.
4. Copy of letter from the Committee for Suffolk to the House of Commons. To the same effect as preceding. 14 June 1645.
5. Account of money due to Captain William Poe, his officers and troopers, from the 10th of Feb. 1644-5 (which day he passed his accounts) until the 9th of April 1645.
6. Copy of order of the Commons for a petition of Captain Poe to be taken into consideration. 9 Oct. 1645. C. J. IV. 303.

April 1. Petition of Nicholas Leake, Esq., son and heir to Francis Lord Deincourt. Two years since petitioner was admitted to farm all his father's estate in the county of Derby, upon a certain yearly rent, which he has duly paid to the use of the State. Petitioner is now discontinued from holding the estate by reason of an order from the Committee at Goldsmith's Hall, whereby it is directed that no person shall farm an estate having a relation thereto. Two tenants, who by the purport of the order are equally disabled from farming the estate, are notwithstanding admitted, by means whereof the pasture lands are likely to be ploughed up, and the timber growing thereon cut down, to the great prejudice of the estate. Petitioner prays that he may be re-admitted to farm the estate upon the terms on which for two years he has enjoyed the same, or that some person recommended by him may be admitted on the same terms, and that in the meantime an order may be given that no timber or underwood shall be felled. L. J., IX. 117.

April 1. Petition of Patrick Lord Baron of Kerry and Lixnaw. Petitioner had an ancient estate of inheritance in Ireland, competent to support him in his quality, from which, being forced by the rebels, he came into this kingdom in 1641, with his wife, seven children, and some poor retinue, utterly deprived of all that ever they had, excepting a few necessities which they brought along with them. He has ever since continued in this kingdom, where he has no means and but little acquaintance; and not having for five years received one penny of his revenues, his necessities are now so great and pressing that he has not wherewith to feed or clothe his family, and his calamity is at present heightened by a great sickness, which it has pleased God to inflict upon him. Prays that something may be allowed out of the public stock for the support of himself and family. L. J., IX. 117.

April 1. Petition of William Courteene. Prays that the East India Company may be ordered to restore to him 5,000*l*. in Barbary gold, which by the wreck of one of his ships came into the hands of their agent in the Indies in the year 1644. L. J., IX. 117.

April 1. Petition of Dr. Edward Martin and Dr. Richard Sterne, prisoners in the Lord Petre's house in Aldersgate Street. Upon their former petition their Lordships were pleased to order that they should be liberated on bail upon their taking the Covenant. This they cannot possibly do, though it were to save their lives and gain this whole world's goods. They pray that since they must be continued in this miserable thraldom some way may be devised whereby they may be sustained from famine. L. J., IX. 117.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Dr. Edward Martin, prisoner in the Lord Petre's house in Aldersgate Street. He has been five years in prison, has been plundered to the very clothes on his back, and being unmarried can make no plea to a fifth part of his estate; in answer to a petition for relief, the House replied that for maintenance out of his estate it was not in their power to allow it, but that they would grant him liberty upon bail on his taking the Covenant. The petitioner in a long argument shows that, having sworn allegiance to the King, and as a member of the Church of England, he cannot conscientiously take the Covenant, and therefore prays that his five years' probation may suffice to prove that no means in life or death can move him to enter into the Covenant, and that the House would therefore think of some other way to satisfy their displeasure, rather than to order him perpetual imprisonment, even to death, and that by want and famine. Dr. Martin, Dr. Beale, and Dr. Sterne were committed to prison upon an information from the House of Commons in 1642. See L. J., V. 364, &c.

April 1. Order for release of Colonel Edward Allen, upon his assigning a portion of his arrears to his creditors. L. J., IX. 117.

April 1. Petition of John Nicholas, of London, butcher. Prays that an order may be directed to the treasurer, to pay the debt due to petitioner from Lieutenant-Colonel Allen out of his arrears. L. J., IX. 117.

April 1. Petition of Major Francis Rogers. Has been arrested by Robert Walker for not repaying money which he borrowed, and which was wholly disbursed in the service of the State. Prays that he may be discharged, and protected until he receives his arrears, which far exceed what he owes. L. J., IX. 117.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Petition of Robert Walker. Prays that Major Francis Rogers may not be discharged until he gives security for the debt.

April 1. Draft order for payment of 30*l*. to Richard Theobalds, the messenger who brought the last letter from Newcastle. L. J., IX. 118. In extenso.

April 1. Petition of James Harrington and others, inhabitants, &c. within the wapentake of Elloe, in the parts of Holland and county of Lincoln. Pray that, on account of their losses by inundations, satisfaction may be made to them for free quarters, that they may be relieved of all Parliamentary taxes, and that they may be no more charged with the billeting of soldiers, &c. L. J., IX. 118. In extenso.

April 2. Petition of Thomas Calveley, to the Commissioners for Compounding with Delinquents. Petitioner was entrusted by Sir Hugh Calveley, a delinquent, to pay the fine imposed upon him, but Ralph Hughes and Susan Anyon pretending a debt due to them from Sir Hugh Calveley, have caused the money so appointed to be paid to be attached in petitioner's hands. Prays the Commissioners to order the attachment to be taken off, and the money to be paid as agreed. L. J., IX. 119.

April 2. Petition of Lewis du Moulin. In consideration of his father, their Lordships were pleased to vote petitioner into the place of History Professor in the University of Oxford, being worth about eight score pounds per annum, for which place their Lordships apprehended he had a mediocrity of gifts; but the place which is settled upon Mr. Whear, now almost of the age of eighty years, is not like for the present to be void. Petitioner therefore prays that he may be recommended to the Committee for regulating the University for some vacant place, as might be that of Hart's Hall or Mary Hall, joined with a prebend of Christ Church, which may afford him a competent subsistence and encourage him with more leisure and freedom from domestic impediments to bend the force of his studies to the service of the Church and State, and in particular to follow his intention of compiling the history of these times in Latin, to justify the Parliament's proceedings for the better satisfaction of foreign nations. L. J., IX. 119.

April 2. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines approving of Thomas Fyson to be rector of Woolpit, Suffolk. L. J., IX. 119.

April 2. Draft letter from the Parliament to Monsieur Augier, their agent in Paris. A small vessel belonging to the Parliament, laden with arms, ammunition, and soldier's clothes, for the supply of the forces in Ireland, has been taken by a ship of Jersey and carried into St. Malo. M. Augier is to take the first opportunity to address himself to his most Christian Majesty or to the Minister of State, to acquaint them with this accident, and to pray them to give order to the Governor and Admiralty in St. Malo to deliver the ship to him or to such as he shall appoint, and also to deliver up the takers thereof, who are subjects of the Crown and pirates, in order that they may be proceeded against. M. Augier is likewise to acquaint the French Government that the Parliament of England takes notice of very great obstructions and delays in redressing similar complaints, which have been transmitted to them by the Committee for Foreign Affairs or otherwise. L. J., IX. 119.

April 2. Petition of Serjeant Glanvill. Prays leave to go to Bath for the benefit of his health. L. J., IX. 120. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Dr. John Craig and Dr. Richard Catcher, that Serjeant Glanvill labours under a great and dangerous disease, of such a nature that, if neglected, it may soon increase and prove incurable, and that it is most expedient that he should enjoy the free air, and at this season of the year use the Bath. 12 Feb. 1646-7.

April 6. Petition of Captain William Hackeridge. In 1630 petitioner, having a good ship of his own, was invited to Tunis by the English merchant factors residing there, to be employed by them. He first went to the isles of Archipelago, and having freighted his ship with wines and other commodities, sailed for Tunis, and arriving at that port found there a fleet of twelve "Argier" and two "Sally" ships, all men-of-war. The Admiral commanded petitioner to come to his ship, and told him that if he had no Italians on board he should not be at any loss or damage. Upon search being made none but Englishmen were found, yet the men-of-war took his ship and goods, worth above 3,000l., made prize thereof, and sold petitioner and his men, thirty-two in number, in Argier. Petitioner remained in miserable slavery twenty-three months, until he had paid 400l. for his ransom, but all or the greatest part of his men are still under the Turks' most barbarous and heathenish cruelty, by reason whereof their wives and families live in great want here. Upon petitioner's return in 1635 he made many humble petitions to His Majesty for license to set forth two ships at his own charge against the pirates of Argier and Tunis, for reparation of his losses and redemption of his captive men, and obtained many references to the Lords of Council for his relief; yet after seven years' prosecution of his just suit, through the opposition of the Turkey merchants, he has been unable to prevail therein, and has hitherto received no satisfaction for his great damages. Prays that he may have leave to right himself upon these Turks of Argier and Tunis, or that he may be relieved in some other way. L. J., IX. 121.

April 6. Petition of Lettice Shane, widow of Patrick Shane, late Sheriff of the county of Down. Petitioner's late husband, in the discharge of his office and continual service against the rebels, contracted sickness whereof he died, having lost by the rebellion his estate in Westmeath to the value of 500l. per annum, his house being burnt and all his stock destroyed. Petitioner and her children were reduced to such extreme misery and poverty that they were forced to betake themselves to the wilderness, upon the frontiers of Lecale, where petitioner built a fort, to her great charge, and remained there until the late defeat at Benburb (Benburb), when she was forced to leave that place, and has since been reduced to great misery and want, and been necessitated to come to England, her native country, for relief and support. Prays for some present relief, to maintain herself and children until it shall please God that she shall enjoy some part of her former estate. Noted.—Nothing ordered.

April 6. Petition of John Hughes to the Committee for regulating the University of Oxford. Petitioner has for two years served in the Northern Army, first as Secretary to General Poyntz, and since as advocate, but has received no pay, though for the most part in field service. Petitioner, being utterly divorced from his former calling, the study and practice of the law, prays that his name may be inserted in the ordinance for Oxford to attend the Committee as clerk, or that the paper annexed may be subscribed by the Committee for his confirmation, whereby he may be provided with subsistence for the future, and that others who served the Parliament in places of benefit may not be admitted to his prejudice.

April 8. Petition of John Peacocke, in behalf of himself and other merchants of London trading into Holland. Petitioners have often represented to the Committee of the Admiralty the great losses they have sustained by Captain Fowther and Captain Coleman, who surprised their ships at sea and carried them to Ostend. Petitioners have obtained many letters from the Committee to the Governor of Flanders, and to the Judges of the Privy Council there, to desire restitution of their ships and goods, but can get no reparation, the judges having sentenced the goods to be lawfully seized,—sentence, as petitioners conceive, against justice, the law of nations in amity of this kingdom, and the treaty. Petitioners pray that five hundred barrels of powder, and forty tons of match, now at Dover ready to be transported into Holland, may be stayed, until they can obtain satisfaction for their losses. L. J., IX. 128.

Upon their former petition their Lordships were pleased to pass an ordinance for continuing the Earl of Warwick as their Governor, which ordinance was sent to the House of Commons for their concurrence, but has remained unread, in consequence of a petition presented by a company of Anabaptists, and others suspected of felony in the island, some of them being still upon bail, who by their 'false suggestions retard the reduction of the island, to the total ruin of many true Protestants and well affected. Pray that the House of Commons may be put in mind of the ordinance.

Sir Arthur having bought a parcel of land of de Renzi, gave him in part payment an impress bill to Mr. Nicholas Loftus for 129*l.* out of his next half year's entertainment. Loftus gave an account under his hand that he had paid the 129*l.* to de Renzi, but really kept the money himself, and Sir Arthur has in consequence been unable to obtain possession of the land in a legal way. Pray that Loftus may be ordered to make present payment of the money so detained by him. L. J., IX. 129.

April 20. Draft order to provide 20,000*l.* for the service of Ireland. L. J., IX. 145. In extenso.

April 21. Petition of William Newman, of Hunworth, Norfolk, tanner. A true bill was found by the grand jury at the last general assizes held at Theford against petitioner, for speaking blasphemous words. Petitioner, who denies the charges made against him, tenders a certificate of worthy and godly magistrates, ministers, and others, who have long known him to be of godly, sober, and inoffensive carriage; and prays that he may have a full release, or that some of the Justices of the county may be authorised to accept bail for his appearance to answer anything that may be objected against him. L. J., IX. 146.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of divers knights, gentlemen, ministers, and others of the county of Norfolk. The bill was found against Newman by reason of the unadvised oaths of Edmond Gooding, and Edmond Bougin, who had a private grudge against him, having its first spring in a dispute arising about the observation of Christmas Day, three others of better credit being in the house at the time deny that such words were spoken as the deponents allege. The accusers are men of scandalous and irreligious lives, and the prisoner a man of godly and modest carriage, and an exemplary Christian.

2. Copy of bill of indictment against Newman.

April 21. Petition of Edmond Goodere, and Thomas Deacon. Pray that all proceedings in their cause against Mrs. Francis Thomas may be stayed until the end of next term, and that they may have leave to produce witnesses at the hearing, and to cross-examine those produced for Mrs. Thomas. Leechland discharged all the bills of impost, for which he received allowance in the first three of those years, and there is a tally struck for 7,200*l.* due to him for the year 1641, of which sum petitioner has received no part, nor had any allowance at all for any bills of impost of that year. Petitioner prays a recommendation to the Committee for the King's revenues for speedy payment of the 7,200*l.*, out of which she will forthwith pay all such impost bills for the year 1641 as yet remain unsatisfied. Prays that a committee may be appointed to take view of his accounts, which are already stated and ordered to be reported, and that some competency may be allowed for the transportation of himself and family to Scotland, and that a pass may be granted to him and such as go with him by land, and another for baggage and such as go with it by sea. April 30. Translation of the answer of the French Ambassador to the paper given him from the Houses of Parliament. When M. Angier spoke at the French Court about the ship carried to St. Malo (vide 2nd April 1647), he was answered that the King would not permit the ammunition and clothes taken in her to be bought in France, and letters were offered him to signify His Majesty's will at all the ports to which the goods might have been carried. If the ship had been carried to St. Malo or any other port of France the Court would have had advice thereof, and in case she should be there such order will be taken that the Parliament shall have good satisfaction. The intention of France in this, as in all other businesses that may befall, is to contribute per offices, and whatsoever doth lie in her, to the union, quietness, and good of this estate of England.

[April.] Petition of Captain Lazarus Howard. Prays that he may receive payment of 128*l.* 12*s.*, due to him for arrears, as he is bound for service in Ireland.

Pray for an order for speedy payment.

[April.] Petition of the Aldermen, Merchants, and Citizens of the City of Chester. The river Dee is choked up and made unnavigable by reason of the stone causey erected near the city to serve the Dee Mills, which for many years has occasioned a great decay of trading, and frequent inundations on the Welsh side. The Commissioners of Sewers for those parts during King James's reign resolved that the causey should be demolished, but this resolution took no effect in regard of the power of those whose private interest in the mills was concerned. Petitioners pray that they may have an ordinance for taking down the causey and mills, and that the materials may be used for erecting tide mills for the service of the city.

[April.] Petition of Mary Overton. Was, upwards of thirteen weeks since (6th Jan. 1646-7), committed to Bridewell by their Lordships, during which time she has, besides many other miserable inconveniences, suffered the loss of a child. 1. Petition of sundry Scotch officers who were omitted in the first list, with their fellow officers and countrymen. Petitioners have long and faithfully served the State in their several charges, and in April 1645, being reduced, had an order for stating their accounts, which have been long since stated. It pleased the House of Commons on Wednesday last (21st April) to order one third part of their arrears to be paid to them without interest. Petitioners have never since their reduction received any part of their arrears, and have necessarily contracted great debts, and therefore pray that they may not only receive some further proportion, but that interest, after the rate of eight per cent., may be allowed them until the same shall be paid. C. J., V. 150.

May 1. The names of the commanders and officers of the regiments to be sent out of North Wales for the service of Ireland. L. J., IX. 168. In extenso.

He was never served with any order of the House until Lord Cromwell took him out of his lodging and sent him to the messenger, and prays that he may be discharged from the messenger's hands, whose fees he cannot pay; that his debt may be considered, and satisfaction allowed out of money agreed to be paid by Lord Cromwell to Sir John Mills, who has not compounded for his delinquency. L. J., IX. 170.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

2. Certificate of the Commissioners at Goldsmiths' Hall that Sir John Mills has not effected his composition as a delinquent. 24 April 1647.

L. J., IX. 170.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate from the Lord Mayor, &c. of London, that though Borros has been concerned in some four burglaries he has given evidence which has led to the apprehension of many persons charged with felonious acts, and his evidence is of importance in a large number of cases.

2. Order relieving the sentence passed upon Borros until the next Sessions. 1 March 1646-7.

May 1. Draft ordinance for pardoning the delinquency of Somerset Fox pursuant to an engagement made by Colonel John Birch. C. J., V. 150. In extenso. Read once, and respited by the Lords this day. L. J., IX. 170.

1. Certificate from Colonel John Birch, that when engaged in reducing Ludlow he received private instructions from the Committee of both Kingdoms that, in order to the speedy reduction of the town and castle, he might promise pardon of their delinquency to two persons; and that having been much assisted by Colonel Somerset Fox, he made such promise to him, and that this promise was subsequently confirmed by the House of Commons.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Sir Walter Erle to Mr. John Goodwyn, entreating that Colonel Hume's name may be put into the list of Scots officers who are to receive an allowance; for as to his leaving the army for a while, it was only as a prisoner and under compulsion; and as for Stamper's charge against him of taking away goods, it is like to fail, as the same charge has already failed against the Mayor of Christchurch. 12 April 1647.

He relates his efforts in opposing the Commission of Array in the county; that he was subsequently made prisoner and carried to Ragland Castle, and thence to Oxford, and he was forced to sit in the Parliament there; but as soon as he was able he returned on bail to his own county, and declared for the Parliament. He prays that a difference may be made between himself and others who joined the King, and that he may be permitted to take his seat in the House.

May 3. Message from the Assembly of Divines, certifying that they have perused Captain Henry Bell's translation of Martin Luther's last "Divine Discourses," and though it contains many good things, most of which are extant in his own works, yet there are many passages contrary to truth, gravity, and modesty, which make it very unfit for public use. May 6. Answer of Thomas Jenyns to the petition of Patrick Younge. Jenyns, while acknowledging his debt to Younge, says that he has offered him full security, has never taken any unfair advantage of his protection; and though his cause before the House has been decided, he has as yet received nothing under the judgment in his favour, but is involved in further litigation in the Court of Exchequer; he has large sums owing to him, and to put him in restraint would be his ruin. He prays that his protection may not be taken from him.

Annexed:—

1. Reasons why the coals and collieries of papists and delinquents in the Northern parts ought forthwith to be sequestered and sold for the benefit of the State. Persons of known integrity should be appointed for securing and selling the coals, to prevent their being sold by delinquents for their own use; many of the partners in the collieries are well affected, and care ought to be taken to secure their interests, to keep the pits open and the labourers employed, and a considerable salary should be allowed to those employed in the service. Then follows a list of Commissioners whose appointment is desired.

2. Another list of Commissioners.

May 7. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct William Greene to the rectory of Bootle, Cumberland. L. J., IX. 182.

May 7. Letter from Edward Allem, at Montgomery Castle, to Edw. Lord Herbert, of Cherbury and Castle Island, in Queen Street. Last Tuesday night upwards of three score soldiers marched from Pool in a hostile manner and surrounded Sutton House, and, after about two hours' resistance, broke open the doors and took Mr. Griffith to Montgomery town, where they brought other gentlemen prisoners; the soldiers then fired upon the castle, but the writer would not permit his men to reply, for fear of making the soldiers use their prisoners worse, for whose release they demand 300*l.* The writer then tried to obtain men from the town to strengthen his garrison, but none would come unless they were paid. Captain Lloyd, however, procured twenty of his old soldiers, and Mrs. Herbert required her servants to come from Stallow, with which help he doubts not to hold the castle, notwithstanding the threats of such desperate men as these soldiers are. The writer has not so much as meat to give his auxiliaries for their service, and desires speedy directions for his conduct. L. J., IX. 186.

May 11. Order upon information being given to the House that a copy of a forged Act of Parliament had been produced at Chelmsford Assizes, referring the matter to a Committee. L. J., IX. 182. In extenso.

May 11. Copy of warrant for the attachment of John Morris, alias Poyntz, and Mary, his wife, Thomas Smith and Isabel, his wife, Leonard Darby, and John Harris, supposed to be concerned in the forgery. L. J., IX. 182.

Annexed:—

1. Paper "received of Sir Adam Littleton, 8th May '1647," stating that Mr. Browne (Clerk of the House) has searched from the 35th year of Elizabeth downwards, and can find but one Act concerning the lands of Poyntz or Morris; but a false writing in paper, without date, has been produced, subscribed by Mr. Browne, whose signature was sworn to by Darby, a wiredrawer, and Harris, a cooper, as a true copy of an Act, 43 Eliz., to confirm a former Act for settling certain lands of James Morris and Gabriel Poyntz upon John Morris. At the request of Thomas Smith, lessee of John Morris, a certiorari has been directed to the Clerk of the Parliaments to certify an Act, 21 James, relating to the manor of Little Munden, Herts, which he has done. This Act does not concern Smith or Morris, but was procured (as is conceived) that they might be able to counterfeit the hands of Mr. Browne and his clerk, so to forge another certificate of an Act according to their false copy, and to that end they have now procured another writ of certiorari to the Clerk of the Parliaments, to certify an Act according to that copy. It is desired that when the certiorari is brought, the bringer should be demanded his name, and required to show the false copy as a means whereby the record may more easily be found, and when the copy is produced special notice should be taken whether it be not forged. It concerns Mr. Browne's reputation, and may concern the true owners of the lands deeply. Morris, Smith, and Darby are wiredrawers, and Harris a cooper, all men of low and desperate condition; they have gotten up great sums of money on pretence of this title, and are followed by a rabble of others of like condition.

2. Title of the Act which Morris is accused of having forged: "An Act to enable and make 'good a conveyance and assurance made of the 'manors of Chipping Ongar, Northokenden, 'Southokenden, in the county of Essex, and 'Beaves Markes, alias Buries Markes, in London, 'by James Morris, Esq., and Gabriel Poyntz, 'Esq., to John Poyntz, alias Morris, and his

1. Petition of John Browne to the King. When returning from abroad, the vessel in which petitioner sailed was boarded by the captain of another ship, who, pretending commission from His Majesty, took from petitioner all his money and goods. Petitioner prays His Majesty to send warrant to the captain to restore his property. On a second sheet of paper attached to this petition is Mr. Ashburnham's letter in cipher; this was afterwards deciphered, and is given in extenso. L. J., IX. 203.

2. Copy of examination of John Browne. He received the petition and ciphers from Mr. Ashburnham; the petition was merely written as a cover for the ciphers. 11 May. L. J., IX. 190. In extenso.

3. Copy of examination of Mistress Mary Cave, daughter of Mr. William Cave, of Stamford, Lincolnshire. She saw that there was more than the mere petition on the paper, but agreed, nevertheless, to deliver it. 11 May. L. J., IX. 190. In extenso.

He accuses Lady Thynne, his step-mother, second wife of Sir Thomas, of having unduly influenced her husband to assign lands, and make a will, for the benefit of herself and her son; of having enforced the will by proceedings in the Star Chamber, and thereby excluded the three sons of Sir Thomas from their just rights, besides obliging them, during their father's lifetime, to leave home for the sake of peace. Petitioner prays for that relief from the House which he cannot obtain elsewhere. L. J., IX. 189.

May 13. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Elkanah Gladman to the vicarage of Wing, Bucks. L. J., IX. 190.

L. J., IX. 192.

May 13. Petition of John Cartwright on the behalf of himself and Mistress Mary Cartwright, his mother. At the beginning of these troubles he and his mother, having shown their fidelity to Parliament by their contributions, were indicted at Oxford of High Treason, and thereupon plundered by the King's forces, and wholly dispossessed of both their estates lying between Banbury and Oxford; and after the taking of Banbury petitioner's house at Astrop was demolished, and his mother, who was above seventy years old, was cruelly used, being burnt with matches put between her fingers, and a sword run through her gown, narrowly missing her body; and lately petitioner's house at Aynho has been burnt down by the garrison at Banbury under the Earl of Northampton. He prays that 10,000*l.* out of the Earl's composition may be granted to him and his mother towards reparation of their losses. C. J., V. 170.

to the Countess Dowager and her children; from their position in the North petitioner's estates have suffered greatly, and his Castle of Mulgrave has been long occupied as a garrison; he is engaged to pay 1,000*l.* in less than a twelvemonth, and no part of the allowance of 50*l.* a week made to his grandfather is continued to him. May 18. Answer of Nicholas Loftus, Esq., to the complaint of Sir Arthur Blundell, Knight, and Mathew de Renzi, gentleman. In 1641 the defendant was deputy to Sir Adam Loftus, Treasurer-at-wars in Ireland, and did then make up and pay what was due to Sir Arthur as captain of a foot company; 129*l.* was then left unpaid for the use of de Renzi, but whether since paid or not defendant cannot say, as all the records are in Ireland; he conceives that Sir Adam Loftus, his principal, is alone responsible, and doubts not that if he were here he would show a receipt or pay the money. Defendant, who has lost all his estate by the rebellion in Ireland, prays the House to consider the great inconvenience that will arise if he is exposed to such complaints as the present, whilst he is in the service of Parliament, and prays that his protection may be renewed, and absolutely confirmed. L. J., IX. 192.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Christopher Syms. Claims 225*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* from Nicholas Loftus, agent to Sir Adam Loftus, Treasurer-at-wars in Ireland in 1641. He prays for relief in the matter, or for leave to sue Mr. Loftus for the money. (Undated.)

L. J., IX. 197.

May 19. Petition of Thomas Symonds (or Shemonds). Petitioner has for the last ten years been keeper of the Great Park at Windsor, and whilst all other parks within the forest of Windsor have been quite destroyed, he has preserved the Great Park, but in so doing has spent 300*l.*, has been himself wounded, and his son killed. About a fortnight ago Colonel Farre came to take possession of petitioner's lodge, by command of the Earl of Holland, to whom petitioner answered that he was put there by the King, and would remain there till the Parliament or Committee of His Majesty's revenue put him out, but he denies that he said that he would keep it for the King only. Mr. Morrice at his first coming associated with those who had been in arms against the Parliament; he prayed for the King; he affirmed in his preaching that the vilest and basest are the greatest professors; he called the godly party in the parish, that stood for the Parliament, factious fellows; when taxed for not praying after the sermon, the next time he did pray after the sermon, but immediately afterwards, at the clerk's shouse (being an alehouse) he fell to scoffing at his own practice, saying that therein he had played the fool and talked he knew not what, but if playing the fool would please his parishioners, they should have enough of it, &c.

May 25. Draft order for payment of ten pounds to the Commissioners last employed to the army to dispose of as they shall think fit. L. J., IX. 206. In extenso.

May 25. Petition of John Poyntz, alias Morris. Petitioner is right heir to an inheritance of lands and tenements lying partly in London and partly in Essex, worth 2,000*l.* per annum, entailed upon him by James Morris and Gabriel Poyntz about 38 Eliz., confirmed by Act of Parliament about 43 Eliz. The estate descended to him about Sept. 1644; he then made demand for the same, and most of the tenants attorned tenant to him. Three offices have been found at different times to prove him the right heir, and in obedience to an injunction from the Court of Wards, the tenants in London yielded him quiet possession in Feb. 1645-6. In Sept. 1646 one Mr. Hunt repaired to Mr. John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, for a copy of the Act of Parliament above mentioned, which was accordingly taken out and delivered to petitioner; but now Mr. Browne pretends that the record is lost, and denies the copy signed with his own hand; and Sir Adam Littleton (who pretends a title to the land) has combined with Mr. Browne and his deputy to misinform the House that petitioner forged the copy of the Act of Parliament, and they have made petitioner's chief witnesses, who heard Mr. Browne confess that the copy was signed with his hand, parties to the forgery merely to take off their evidence. By virtue of a warrant from the House, procured by this false suggestion of forgery, Mr. Browne and others, about midnight on the 10th of May, broke open petitioner's house on pretence of searching for the copies of the Act, and rifled all his papers, and have since imprisoned his wife, and Isabel Smith, and others, and are lying in wait to apprehend him and his assistants, hoping by this cruel oppression to bereave him of his credit, liberty, life, estate, and friends, and to crush all those that would assist him; not finding the papers they wanted, Mr. Browne and the rest have procured an order from the House of Commons to Mr. Twisden, a member of that House, and one of petitioner's counsel, in whose hands the papers were, to deliver them to Mr. Browne which has accordingly been done. Petitioner therefore prays the House, without respect of persons, to grant him an order for the safe appearance of himself and his evidences to enable him to prove his statements, that the cruelty of the offenders being discovered they may be brought to condign punishment, and petitioner be reinstated in his quiet possession.

May 25. Questions to be asked of Leonard Darby, John Harris, Mary Morris, Isabel Smith, &c.

May 25. Examination of Leonard Darby. Mr. Hunt brought the copy of the Act in question to the Dog Tavern (where were Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Smith), with a note of the fees and charges. The copy was subscribed with the name of John Browne. Examinant afterwards went to Mr. Throckmorton about certifying of an Act for the confirmation of the manor of Little Munden. Darby further states that, hearing that Mr. Browne denied that a copy of the Act in question had passed under his hand, he went with Mrs. Smith and showed it to Mr. Browne as he was getting into a coach, and asked him if it was his signature, and Mr. Browne then said, Who dares deny it?

May 25. Examination of John Harris.

May 25. Examination of Mary Morris.

May 25. Examination of Isabel Smith. She has seen the copy of the Act which was produced in evidence at Chelmsford, and thinks it is now in the hands of one of the counsel. She had it from one of the clerks of the House the latter end of last summer, having had notice of the existence of the Act from Mr. Samford, who dwells near Chipping Ongar. The copy was examined at Mr. Browne's; but she does not know who wrote it, or set Mr. Browne's name to it. There was but one copy. She fetched a certiorari from Mr. Clayton concerning this Act. L. J., IX. 198.

May 27. Petition of Captain Robert Constable. In the year 1641 petitioner was in command of a ship called the Ruth, in which he had a large venture, first for Ireland and thence to Barbados; but whilst riding in the Downs a command came to him from Parliament that he should take his ship to Ireland as a man-of-war, by which he lost his venture, though to this day he pays interest for the money he had expended. In Ireland he disbursed 3000*l.* out of his own purse for the relief of the fort of Galway, and brought over about twelve hundred protestants from Ireland to England; afterwards coming to Bristol, his ship was laden with provisions and 6,000*l.* in money, which he faithfully conveyed, though Captain Kettleby, now in prison for infidelity, would have forced him if he could to have carried them to the King; in 1643 Major George Sanderson tried to induce petitioner to join in a plot against the State, but by information given by petitioner the Earl of Warwick caused Sanderson, and Elizabeth Gray, and a servant, his confederates, to be arrested; petitioner was afterwards made commander of the Star frigate, with which he served three years and took a ship of Bristol, richly laden, and various other prizes, for which most of the ship's company except himself have received their shares; besides all this ten months pay is due to him, which is stopped for 32*l.* received by him at Plymouth, though really much more is owing to him for victualling. He prays to be allowed to answer any articles falsely laid against him, that he may not be put out of the service in so disgraceful a manner, but that he may have preferment, and that until his arrears, &c. are satisfied he may have the same protection that was granted to Mr. Richard Wiltshire, master of the Ruby. L. J., IX. 207.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of testimonial from the Governor and other officers of the fort of Galway to the good service done by Captain Constable in relieving them. 28 March 1643.

 4. Copy of certificate from the officers of the Star frigate, that when driven by stress of weather to Ireland, and their provisions were all spent, Captain Constable supplied their wants at his own cost. 30 May 1645.

1. Petition of Sir Walter Erle, a member of the House of Commons, to that House. About three years ago petitioner, in consideration of his services to Parliament, was made Lieutenant of the Ordnance, which he held until the ordinance was passed disabling members of either House to hold any such employment. He thinks that it was not the intention of the ordinance that members should be for ever excluded from such places, for some have been already restored to their posts; and he therefore prays that he may be restored to his former employment. C. J., V. 182.
 - May 27. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines, that Sackvill Blickard has been approved as rector of Malden, Surrey. L. J., IX. 208.

They pray that a day may be appointed for the hearing, or else that the case may be left to the Common Law. L. J., IX. 210.

[May.] Petition of Giles Thorne. After five years' imprisonment the House lately gave him six weeks liberty on bail; he had hoped in that time to have procured some maintenance from his friends, but he finds they have much ado to support themselves, and he has therefore been obliged to return to custody. Prays to be discharged, or to have some relief allowed him out of his

June 1. Petition of Captain Henry Courtney. His father, a gentleman and a man of good repute in the county of Cornwall, with his whole family faithfully adhered to Parliament; he has lost personal estate, and a fee-simple in land of 150*l.* per annum; nothing is left but naked land. Prays that his arrears, amounting to 1,150*l.*, or some portion of them, may be paid, to enable him to support his father and his family. L. J., IX. 225.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Captain George Courtney. He has long attended for the auditing of his arrears for service in Plymouth garrison, and prays for a month's pay, to relieve him here and support him in his journey home.

June 1. Petition of Patrick Young. Prays that his case against Thomas Jenyns for recovery of a debt long due may be heard, or that he may have liberty to recover by course of law. L. J., IX. 225.

June 1. Petition of John Morley, minister of Wootton-Courtney in the county of Somerset. About two years since his small estate was sequestered on supposition of his having assisted the King's party, but he never contributed anything to that party except what was wrested from him by force (a garrison of the King's being within two miles of him); whereas he has voluntarily contributed to Parliament. He was, however, persuaded by his friends to compound, and in so doing to acknowledge his delinquency; in consequence the tithes and dues of his living are detained from him, and he is prohibited from officiating the cure which he has exercised with approbation above thirty years. He prays that his sequestration may be suspended, and he restored to his ministerial functions. L. J., IX. 225.

Annexed:—

June 1. Petition of Wm. Gregorie, of Plymouth. He thanks the House for their late order to the Committee for the Admiralty for his employment, which was, however, too late, for all the places in their gift were disposed of. He learns that a small old vessel, an Irish man-of-war of thirty tons burden, taken by Captain Gibson, is now lying at Tower Wharf, and prays that it may be given to him, with the two small guns and furniture belonging to it, as some compensation for his services. L. J., IX. 229.

since which time he has been much vexed and opposed by some few in the parish, who wish to get the election for themselves. The Earl prays the House to call the contemners of their authority before them, and to confirm Morice in the vicarage till he shall be proved unworthy of protection. L. J., IX. 229.

June 1. Petition of Wm. Morice, vicar of Kenilworth. Petitioner was instituted and inducted by order of the House of the 22nd of December last, confirmed by an order of the 1st of May last; but Zachary Taylor and Thos. Mathews have inveighed against him causelessly before the Committee for Plundered Ministers, and caused him to be sequestered. He prays to be restored to his living, and protected therein. L. J., IX. 229.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 13 May 1647.

June 1. Draft ordinance "concerning the colliers," appointing commissioners to discover, seize, and sequester the estates of delinquents in the North. L. J., IX. 229.

June 2. Petition of Sir Arthur Blundell and Mathew de Renzi. They hear that Mr. Loftus, who has three months given him to answer their claim against him, intends to leave the kingdom privately. He has been imprisoned now for almost four weeks. He prays that he may be called to his answer, when he doubts not to clear himself. L. J., IX. 229.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

2. Another petition to the same effect. (Do.)

3. Another petition to the same effect. (Do.)

June 2. Petition of Thomas Folkes, clerk. In 1639 Anthony Sterling, an attorney, was committed to the Fleet by sentence of the Star Chamber for forgery and other foul misdemeanours, but was afterwards enlarged by order of the House, and the matter referred upon supposed errors to the Judges of Assize; the house and lands in question to continue in the same possession until the judges should report; Sterling has not only omitted to prosecute the case, but his sons have got possession of petitioner's house and lands, and spoiled and taken away goods to the value of 300l. Petitioner prays to be restored to possession, and that Sterling may be forced to make him satisfaction. L. J., IX. 229.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Boothman, that Sterling was sentenced in the Star Chamber at the suit of Folkes and his wife to pay 500l., and 300l. damages; to stand in the pillory, and to be cast over the bar for forgery, &c.; and that execution was had upon the lands of Sterling; but he and his sons have violently interfered with Folks, to prevent his getting any profit from the lands. 28 May 1647.

2. Affidavit of John Fayerweather that Anthony Sterling broke into the parlour of Henry Sterling's house and took away a good quantity of household stuff generally supposed to belong to Mr. Folkes. 24 May 1647.

4. Copy of order of 9th July 1641, securing Folkes in possession of the house in question.

5. Copy of order of 8th June 1641, referring the matter to the Judges of Assize.

June 2. Answer and petition of John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments, in the matter touching him, represented in a late petition of complaint (see above, 25th May 1647) of one calling himself John Poyntz, alias Morris. He knows nothing of the complainant's title to the estates, or of the Act 43 Eliz. in his petition mentioned; he declares all complainant's statements to be untrue, and says that, having heard that a forged document purporting to be a copy of such an Act had been produced at Chelmsford Assizes, he thought it his duty to inform the House, and thereupon an order was made to attach the persons complained of, and to seize the forged document. Petitioner joins with the complainant in desiring a speedy examination of the matter, which he doubts not will discover impudent forgery and perjury, and prays for due reparation, and that exemplary justice may be done upon the complainant, and his accomplices. L. J., IX. 229.

June 2. Draft of preceding.

June 2. Answer and petition of John Throckmorton, Gentleman, Deputy Clerk of the Parliaments, to so much of a petition of complaint of one John Poyntz, alias Morris, as concerns the petitioner. This is similar to the petition of Mr. Browne. Throckmorton adds that at the time at which it is stated that application was made to Mr. Browne for the copy of the Act in question, Browne was many miles away in the country. L. J., IX., 229.

June 2. Petition and answer of William Hunt, gentleman. He denies all the statements of John Poyntz, alias Morris, affecting himself, except that he transcribed and delivered to Mrs. Smyth a copy of an Act concerning Poyntz and Morris for Abbot's lands in Essex, of 21 Jac. He prays reparation from those who have vilified him. L. J., IX. 229.

June 2. Copy of the petition of John Poyntz, alias Morris, of the 25th of May, and of the preceding petitions of Browne, Throckmorton, and Hunt.

June 2. Petition and answer of Sir Adam Littleton, Bart., to a late petition or complaint of one who calls himself John Poyntz, alias Morris. Sir Adam Littleton says that the complainant has no right to the lands in question, or to the surname of Poyntz, but that the lands belong to petitioner's wife, Dame Audrey Littleton, sole daughter of Thomas, son of Gabriel Poyntz. The injunction of the 23rd Dec. 1641 in complainant's petition mentioned was obtained in the Court of Wards, but upon evidence of undue carriage it was suspended until a certificate should be made, and before this could be done the court was dissolved. The complainant and his accomplices have since forged various documents, viz., two fines pretended to be levied at St. Alban's, 37 Eliz.; a license or pardon of alienation upon the said pretended fines; the copy of a pretended plea in the Exchequer; the copy of an indenture dated 1st March, 38 Eliz., setting forth and declaring the uses of those pretended fines; and, lastly, the copy of this pretended Act of Parliament. Of these documents two were produced at the last assizes for Essex, and were supported by the false oaths of Leonard Darby and John Harris. The complainant has besides threatened petitioner's tenants, and forcibly entered on his lands until removed by the Justices. Petitioner has often desired Morris to produce the pretended fines for which petitioner has searched in vain in the offices, but has always been refused. Sir Adam Littleton denies the charges of oppression and combination made against him. He is content that the complainant should safely and quietly appear before the House, and produce his evidences if he can, and desires that the whole matter may be thoroughly examined with all convenient speed; that whosoever shall be found guilty may be brought to condign punishment, and the wronged parties have reparation. L. J., IX. 230.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Francis Blake, Keeper of the Books for searches of fines and of the records thereof in the Chirographer's Office, that he can find no fine from Gabriel Poyntz and Wm. Cutts, or either of them, to any person of any lands in Essex or London, &c. 6 May 1646.

June 2. Order appointing a day for hearing the cause respecting Poyntz alias Morris. L. J., IX. 230.

June 2. Affidavit of Martyn Holbeche, that in Dec. last he served Richard Taylor and John Murdock, both of Coventry, with the order of the House of the 7th of that month, by which the Earl of Leicester was restored to possession of certain lands of which he had been deprived by writ from the Court of Exchequer, at the prosecution of Edward Johnson. L. J., IX. 230.

June 2. Affidavit of Thomas Barlowe, bailiff and receiver of rents to the Earl of Leicester, that Taylor and Murdock did and still do refuse to pay their rent to him.

June 2. Petition of John Baker. Petitioner was employed by Dominic Petit and Peter Deliques for many months as master of two ships, the "Pearl Hoy" and June 3. Articles exhibited against Sir John Norwich by Captain John Holmes, that after commanding him to march to Harrold, near Bedford, then full of the King's men, he left him unsupported, to be beaten back with loss. At Sherrington, when the troops were receiving constant pay, he drove off the poor people's cattle and sold them to his servants. Holmes further accuses Sir John of imprisoning him and others without cause, depriving him of his command, taking his horses, and rifling his portmanteau. L. J., IX. 235.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of Sir John Norwich to the articles exhibited against him by Captain John Holmes. Any danger incurred by Captain Holmes at Harrold was entirely owing to his own negligence and disobedience to orders; the rest of the charges Sir John absolutely denies. 8 July 1647.

June 3. Answer of Sir John Norwich to the articles exhibited against him by Lieutenant Nicholas Deane and others. With regard to the money he is accused of embezzling, he had warrant for receiving it, and employed it only for the service of the State, as an audit of his accounts will show; all the other charges he utterly denies. L. J., IX. 235.

June 3. Duplicate of preceding.

The ratification of the treaty is very acceptable, and the punctual performance thereof will lead to the removal of all causes of difference between the two kingdoms; the present state of his affairs will not permit the immediate payment of the money due to the merchants, but good security shall be given for the same. (Latin.)

Affidavit of Robert Briscoe, of Kenilworth, that Stephen Mathews and others deny the authority of the House of Peers, have taken forcible possession of Kenilworth churchyard, and have unjustly molested Mr. Morice, endeavouring to obtain the free election of a minister of their own. Annexed:—

1. Petition of divers of the inhabitants of Kenilworth, in the county of Warwick. Mr. Wm. Morice was formerly sequestered and removed for delinquency from the livings of Wickham and Plumstead, in Kent, by the Committee for Plundered Ministers, and thereby rendered incapable of holding any other living; but the Earl of Monmouth, not knowing of this, presented him to the living of Kenilworth. He was again sequestered for contempt and disobedience to their orders by the same Committee, and when brought before them, was ordered to be kept in custody till he should give good security for giving up possession of the vicarage, whereon Morice threatened to trouble the inhabitants before the Lords. Petitioners pray that, should Morice make any representations against them, they may be heard in their defence, and may for the future be freed from his turbulent vexations. (Undated.)

2. Articles exhibited to the Committee for Plundered Ministers against William Morice, curate of Wickham, Kent, that he is a swearer and drunkard; has drunk Prince Rupert's health in an ale-house with malignants on a fast day, and kissed the mistress of the house; has neglected to read the ordinances of Parliament, &c. On the same paper is a copy of an order of the Committee for Plundered Ministers of the 11th of May 1647, sequestering Morice from the living of Kenilworth.

3. Articles preferred to the Lords of the Upper House of Parliament against Wm. Morice, late vicar of Kenilworth, by which it is desired that Morice, before he be enlarged out of custody, may find good surety to be of good behaviour. Having been formerly captain of a trained band in Herefordshire, by inducements and threats he accepted a commission from the King, and within three months after, in March 1642-3, he was taken prisoner by Sir Wm. Waller, who discharged him on his taking oath not to attempt anything against the Parliament; this he has faithfully kept, and has besides saved the lives and protected the estates of many of the friends of Parliament, and done other good offices for the Parliament party, as is certified by the Earl of Essex and others. He has lost an office at Ludlow, the chief support of himself and his family, and has but 107*l.* per annum for maintenance, and that heavily charged. He hopes that he is a fit object of pity, as he came in so early, and has borne taxes and free quarters to a great value, and therefore prays to be discharged from his sequestration. since his death, has shifted from place to place to escape arrest. Petitioner at last succeeded in arresting him at great cost, when Cross, who is well able to pay the debt, produced a protection from the House, and was consequently released by the bailiffs. She complains that John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, and John Throckmorton, his deputy, who, with Sir Adam Littleton, are the adversaries of her husband and herself in their cause, draw up what orders they please, keep her husband's writings, and give him but two days' warning to attend with his counsel and witnesses, which it is impossible for him to do, on such short notice, though he is ready to prove every allegation of his former petition, but in consequence of Mr. Browne's potency they can get no counsel to appear for them. Petitioner prays that a fortnight's time may be given them to prepare their replication, and that the writings rifled from them may be restored, and that Sergeant Jermin and others may be assigned them for counsel.

June 24. Application for an order for institution and induction of Wm. Durham to the rectory of Burfield [Burghfield] Berks. L. J., IX. 290.

C. J., V. 223.

Every second Tuesday in every month throughout the year is to be kept as a day of recreation and relaxation in lieu of the festivals commonly called Holy Days. L. J., IX. 301. In extenso.

June 28. Three printed copies of preceding.

June 28. Petition of Colonel John Fox, complaining that Robert Porter will not give him possession of the lands at Edgbaston, &c. pursuant to order of the 18th instant. L. J., IX. 301.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

June 28. Draft order for attachment of Robert Porter and others. L. J., IX. 301. In extenso.

June 28. Letter from the Scottish Commissioners at Worcester House, complaining that a messenger of theirs has been stopped by some troopers between Huntington and Stilton, and their letters broken open and carried away to the General. L. J., IX. 302. In extenso.

June [29]. Letter from Anthony Buller to the Earl of Warwick. The island of Scilly is in great distress, the islanders and soldiers having for fourteen days been reduced to an allowance of half a pound of bread a day, and scarce any other provision. The House of Commons having appointed the writer Governor of the Island, he thinks it right to inform the Earl of the condition of the islanders, and of his readiness, if a supply be ordered for their necessity, to make immediate provision for their relief. L. J., IX. 301, 303.

June 29. Order for Mr. Hakewill to deliver a certain box of papers, &c. to John Morris, alias Poyntz, provided that the said papers be produced at the hearing of the charge brought by John Browne and others against Morris. L. J., IX. 303.

June 29. Petition of Captain John Limbery. Petitioner having obtained a verdict for 18,000l. against Alderman Langham, has been delayed by bill in Chancery, and then by petition to the House, from obtaining any benefit, and has therefore brought an action of debt to recover his damages. The Judges to whom the matter was referred by the House are to deliver their opinions on the 13th of July; but petitioner prays leave to proceed to a judgment, staying execution, on his action of debt, for fear either party should die meanwhile. L. J., IX. 304.

June 29. Draft letter from the Parliament to the Commissioners with the King, to let them know that the Houses of Parliament have written to the King to beseech him to return to Royston or Newmarket. This draft was not agreed to, a message being sent up from the Commons with a note for the removal of the King back to Holdenby, to which the Lords agreed. See L. J., IX. 304.

June 29. Draft letter from the Parliament to the King, deprecating his coming to Richmond, and praying him to return to Royston or Newmarket.

June 29. Petition of the clothiers and others of the county of Gloucester. They, with their counsel and witnesses, are ready at the door, pursuant to the order of the House of the 2nd instant; and pray that their cause against the Earl of Northampton may be heard, that so they may be despatched, being near one hundred miles from home and lying in town at great charge.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 2 June 1647.

June 29. Letter from the Commissioners with the army to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore; they have communicated the votes of Parliament to the General, and requested him to remove the head-quarters of the army further from London. L. J., IX. 305. In extenso.

June. Petition of Henry Blithwaite (or Blenthwaite) and Mary his wife, that their writ of error against Hudson, which has been depending this twelve-month, may be heard.

June. Petition of the parishioners of Wandsworth, in the county of Surrey. About three years ago, when there was a great scarcity of coals and wood, an ordinance was passed (see L. J., VI. 639) for the digging of turf for fuel, and now certain idle persons in the parish make this their whole employment, and dig more turf than was dug in time of the greatest necessity, ruining the common, and depriving the poor and others of the benefit of pasture for their cattle. Petitioners pray that this abuse may be redressed.

July 1. Petition of the clothiers and others of the county of Gloucester. They attended for the hearing of their cause on the 29th of June, but were then told that it was put off for a month on account of the present urgency of the public affairs. They, with their witnesses, amount to about one hundred persons, so that their charge will be very great; they therefore pray that their cause may either be heard sooner, or left to the Common Law. L. J., IX. 306.

July 1. Order for the Judges to go circuits for the summer assizes. L. J., IX. 309. In extenso.

July 2. Draft order to put a stop to the opposition, begun at St. John's College, to the peaceable government of the University of Cambridge. L. J., IX. 309.

July 2. Another draft.

July 2. Order for the King not to reside nearer to London than the quarters of the Army. L. J., IX. 309. In extenso.

July 2. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled; praying that soldiers may, as far as possible, be removed from within the lines of communication; that the management of funds belonging to the State may be put into the hands of fit persons, that laws may be passed for the settlement of Church and State, that Ireland may be reduced, a good correspondence preserved with Scotland, Admiralty causes settled, and an Act of Oblivion passed. L. J., IX. 310. In extenso.

July 2. Draft letter from the Parliament to the Commissioners with the King, enclosing a vote, and desiring them to observe their former instructions. L. J., IX. 311. In extenso.

July 2. Draft letter from the Parliament to Sir Thomas Fairfax, to the same effect. L. J., IX. 311. In extenso.

July 2. Draft vote that the former orders of Parliament (respecting the removal of disaffected persons from about the King) should be put in execution. L. J., IX. 311. In extenso.

July 3. Petition of Sir Gregory Norton. Petitioner has exhibited a bill in Chancery against Nicholas Loftus, who will not appear, standing upon his order of protection from the House, so that petitioner cannot obtain relief in equity. He therefore prays that Loftus may be ordered to appear, notwithstanding his protection. L. J., IX. 313.

July 3. Order upon preceding petition, revoking Loftus' protection. L. J., IX. 313. In extenso.

July 3. Petition and answer of John Poyntz, alias Morris (in the behalf of himself, Mary, his wife, Isabel Smith, Leonard Darby, and John Harris), unto the petition and articles lately exhibited by John Browne, Esq., and Sir Adam Littleton, Bart. Isabel Smith, Darby, and Harris, are made parties merely to get rid of their evidence, as they compared the copy of the Act of Parliament pretended to have been forged with the record in Mr. Browne's house. The petitioner can produce evidence to prove the handwriting to be Mr. Browne's. He prays that the copy of the Act in question may be delivered to one of his counsel; that Mr. Browne and others may be examined on oath, for the better manifestation of truth, as the cause concerns an estate of 2,000*l.* per annum, and an attempt is being made by underhand means to oppress petitioner by accusing him of forging an Act of Parliament, a thing never heard of, and as he believes not feasible, in which Mr. Browne and Sir Adam Littleton have combined, the one endeavouring to deny his own act, and the other endeavouring to get the estate.

July 3. Petition of John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments. He complains that instead of several answers having been put in by John Morris, alias Poyntz, and the others, to the charge against them, as ordered, though particularly served with the order, a paper has been put in by John Morris, alias Poyntz, on behalf of himself and the other defendants, full of new recriminations and slanders. Petitioner prays that the defendants may be again ordered to put in their several answers, and that the charges may be taken pro confesso against those that make default.

July 3. Draft of preceding.

July 3. Similar petition of Sir Adam Poyntz, alias Littleton, Bart.

July 3. Draft order for John Morris, alias Poyntz, and others, to answer.

[July 3.] Petition (to the House of Commons) of the reduced officers and soldiers who have faithfully and constantly served the Parliament, and not received the month's pay upon the ordinance in June last, many of them being recommended by his Excellency to the House, and to the Committee whereof Colonel Martin hath the chair. Petitioners, who have long waited with patience, have received nothing, while others have been paid; they have lost their estates, their blood, and many of them their limbs; some have been imprisoned for debts they could not avoid, and have even died of want, while the rest cannot escape the same fate without timely relief, which they again pray may be extended to them. See C. J., V. 232.

July 4. Letter from the Commissioners with the King to the Earl of Manchester, that the King has removed to Caversham, and that Dr. Sheldon, Dr. Hamond, and others in like condition, have access to him. L. J., IX. 317. In extenso.

July 5. List of persons to be left out from amongst those originally excepted from the benefit of composition, &c. under the propositions of the 11th of July 1646. Besides the persons mentioned in this list, which is given L. J., IX. 315, the Lords propose that Lord Brudenell should be left out, and put in the condition of a recusant, as it does not appear that he has been in arms. See L. J., IX. 335.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Thomas Lord Brudenell. Petitioner attempted to address the House of Commons, in order to show that he had not engaged in any act of hostility against the Parliament, but by accident the petition was not produced at the debate on the propositions, and he was consequently excluded from the benefit of them, on information given that he had marched into Newark at the head of a regiment raised by himself. This he avers on his honour to be untrue, as he neither raised nor marched with any regiment since the beginning of these distractions. He prays their Lordships, as his opportunity of addressing the Commons has elapsed, to take his case into consideration, and not to exclude him from the grace now offered. (Undated.)

July 5. List of persons to be continued in the first qualification, or in other words to be excluded from the benefit of the propositions.

July 5. Another list, with some names the omission of which was agreed to on the 26th of August 1647. See L. J., IX. 406.

July 5. Duplicate of preceding.

July 5. Message from the Commons, with an order for the Commissioners residing with the army to have power to treat, as well upon such votes as shall from time to time hereafter be sent unto them, as upon those that are already sent. The Lords rejected this order. L. J., IX. 315.

July 5. Message from the Commons, with an order to approve of the Commissioners proceeding in the treaty with such of the army as the General shall appoint, notwithstanding the General be not always present. On this order the votes of the Lords were equal. L. J., IX. 315.

July 5. Declaration to explain the meaning of the order for the Commissioners with the Army to send up the results of their proceedings to Parliament. L. J., IX. 316. In extenso.

July 5. Petition of John Baker. By order of the 2nd of June, Captain Hunter was directed to deliver to petitioner two ships, called the "Pearl Hoy" and the "Box-tree," with all the engines and goods therein belonging to Petit and Deliques; but Captain Hunter refuses to act in the matter unless a messenger be sent down to seize the ships. Petitioner therefore prays that he may have a messenger to assist him in seizing the ships, either at Harwich or in London, to which place one of the ships has come. L. J., IX. 316.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 1 July.

July 5. Plea of "Not Guilty" put in by Mary Morris, alias Poyntz, Isabel Smith, John Harris, and Leonard Darby, to the charges of forgery, perjury, and all other misdeameours brought against them by John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, and others.

July 5. Copy of preceding.

July 6. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Edward Smith to the rectory of Icklingham St. James, Suffolk. L. J., IX. 318.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines, that Smith has been approved for the cure. 5 July.

July 6. The plea, demurrer, and answer of Dame Katherin Thynne, widow, defendant to the petition of Sir James Thynne. She denies having used any undue influence over her husband, Sir Thomas Thynne, to whom his sons always had free access, but she thinks such family matters beneath the notice of the House. She is justly entitled to her jointure, which she never relinquished, and respecting which Sir James can proceed at law. Other points in the petition she demurs to answer, and prays that the case may be dismissed.

July 6. Letter from [] to Lord []. Judge Bacon sent this morning to desire that Sergeant Cresheld might be appointed to go along with him this next assize for the Kent Circuit, as Judge of Assize. See L. J., IX. 326.

July 8. Draft order for the Committee for the affairs of Ireland to distribute the 25,000*l.* assigned for that country. L. J., IX. 318.

July 8. The Replication of the clothiers and carriers of Gloucestershire to the answer of James Earl of Northampton, upon their petition. It is impossible for them to show any order of the Earl's for taking their goods, but they are ready to aver that they came into his hands, and were demanded from him shortly after the taking of Banbury Castle, and he then said that it was lawful prize, for they were sending them to the rebels, and he wanted cloth to clothe his men, and horses to mount them. They pray the House, therefore, to appoint a day for the hearing, or to leave the case to the Common Law. Noted.—Dismissed. L. J., IX. 318.

Annexed :—

1. A particular note of the losses of the clothiers and carriers of Gloucestershire.

2. Another petition of same, that their case may be left to the Common Law. (Undated.)

July 8. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, that Parliament would grant them 20,000*l.*, and renew the ordinance of the 11th of June last, empowering them to raise horses, &c. which will otherwise expire in a few days. L. J., IX. 319. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Printed copy of the ordinance referred to in preceding.

July 8. Letter from the Commissioners with the Army at Reading to Edward Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers, enclosing copies of their correspondence with the Committee sent from the City, and with the Commissioners for the Army. L. J., IX. 319. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of correspondence between the City Committee and the Commissioners for the Army, respecting the resort of officers and soldiers to London, the levies of men there, the slow progress of the treaty, and the purging of the House of Commons. L. J., IX. 320. In extenso.

[July 10.] Petition of gentlemen of his Excellency's life-guard, to the House of Commons. In obedience to the late ordinance of Parliament dated the 11th of June 1647, they left their employment, laying down their arms at the command of the same authority by which they had taken them up, and therefore, presuming that they would be in favour; they petitioned for their arrears, but on suspicion that they had a design against the army, though they are ready to aver the contrary upon oath, their suit was suspended. They entered the service of Parliament as the sons of gentlemen, in good equipage at their own charge, but are now worn out in all they had, and in worse condition than the enemies whom they have subdued, and they have become a scorn and reproach to the disaffected. They pray that some money may be paid them on account until their arrears can be stated, that they may depart the service of the House in such meet equipage as they entered it. C. J., V. 240.

July 12. Petition of John Earl of Clare. Contrary to the privilege of Parliament, Sir John Wray has caused a distress to be taken upon petitioner's lands at Lacey, Lincolnshire, for a yearly rent service which he pretends is due to him; and though it was agreed that the matter should be left to the decision of friends, yet Sir John Wray, taking advantage of petitioner's absence, has commenced a suit against him, and is pressing to have it tried at the next assizes. Petitioner prays, on the ground of privilege, that the suit may be stayed. L. J., IX. 327.

July 13. Petition of Peter Le Royer, doctor in physic. Petitioner, who was doctor to the King of France, was about nine years ago sent into England to the then ambassador from France; after which petitioner went into the West, where he was imprisoned by the King's forces for holding correspondence with Parliament, as appears by certificate of the Mayor and Minister of Launceston; subsequently, when bound for France, he was stopped at Dartmouth, his trunks broken open, and himself obliged to fly for his life, and, when living, in Cornwall, by license from Sir Thomas Fairfax, he was plundered by the mayors of Launceston and Bideford, and by the sequestrators for the county of Cornwall. Petitioner, as a stranger who has thus lost his small fortune and is without the means of returning home, prays for redress and recompense. L. J., IX. 328.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate referred to in preceding. 2 July.

July 13. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel Wiltshire. He was taken prisoner at Bradford when in the service of Parliament, and there lost 700*l.*, and though he has attended with wearisome solicitations for three years, has never received any of his arrears. He prays that 60*l.*, ordered to be paid out of his first arrears to one Walker, may be paid to himself on his giving Walker good security for the money. L. J., IX. 328.

July 13. Order in accordance with the prayer of preceding petition. L. J., IX. 328.

July 13. Petition of Sir John Chichester. Petitioner while fencing with his servant, Martin Foyle, accidentally gave him a wound of which he died; for this petitioner has been found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to be burnt in the hand. He prays for the remission of the sentence. L. J., IX. 329. In extenso.

[July 13.] Similar petition of Sir John Lenthall.

[July 13.] Petition of Colonel Thomas Gallop and Lieut.-Col. Robert Duke. On surrendering the island of Portland to Captain Wm. Batten (then Vice-Admiral of the Fleet), petitioners made agreement for their own indemnity, and they were afterwards exonerated by an ordinance which has passed this House for all acts done during the war; but they have had their horses taken from them, and have been sued and imprisoned for acts done during the war; to these suits they have pleaded errors, and the writs are now returned to the House. Petitioners pray that the remittitur to the writs may be stayed, and the House of Commons urged to pass the ordinance for petitioners' protection.

The Courts of law will not recognise the authority of the Court of Admiralty, and petitioner has therefore been sued for executing the decrees of that Court. At the siege of Scarborough, when none could be found to undertake the desperate service of attacking the castle, he adventured for and faithfully performed the same, though divers of his men were wounded, and his vessel, tackle, and furniture shot to pieces, for which as yet he has had no satisfaction, though he and his family are thereby utterly undone. He prays that if the House think not fit to grant him letters of reprisal, some recompense may be made him for his services and losses. L. J., IX. 333.

Annexed:—

1. Copy preceding.

[July 16.] Petition of the Mayor, Burgesses, and inhabitants of Lyme Regis, in the county of Dorset, to the House of Commons. Their pier or cob, which yields large custom dues, and is very useful to the navy, was very much ruined last winter by a terrible storm, and it will cost 3,000*l.* to repair it, which sum the petitioners cannot raise in consequence of the ruin caused by the cruel sieges which they have sustained in the Parliament service. 9. Petition of Thomas Lenthall and others, that an agreement may be confirmed, or some special direction given, by which petitioners may once know when the suit shall have its end. (Undated.)

July 17. Petition of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies, against John Fowke, Alderman of London. At the hearing of the case, in which Fowke complains of two decrees made in Chancery, in the 7th and 11th years of the King's reign respectively, further time was given to examine Bonnel's books, which were part of the evidence on which the decrees were grounded, but the Company have been unable to see the books, as Bonnell is now in the West Indies. The House nevertheless made an order on the 6th of May last, reversing the decrees in Chancery, to the great prejudice of the Company, and by order of the 1st of June last, directed the Company to produce their books of accounts, &c. Now as Fowke was fifteen years before he sought relief against the first decree, and eleven in the case of the other, and that after perusal of Bonnell's books, which cannot be now produced, and as six hundred of the parties then concerned are not now made parties, and as the present members of the Company are interested in a new stock distinct from the old, and as the books of account of the Company cannot be safely allowed out of their possession, being in daily use, petitioners pray, that all proceedings may be stayed until Bonnell's books are produced, and until all persons who benefited by the decrees are made parties, and that the Company may not be obliged to produce their books, which Fowke has had opportunity to peruse; or otherwise that he may be left to his ordinary remedy at law, as there are no obstructions in the Courts of Justice. L. J., X. 336. "Bonnell's Books." See Calendar, 1624, March 25. Historical Manuscripts Commission, Third Report, p. 29. Notice of these books was inserted in the Calendar according to their dates, before any other papers relating to the case had been found.

1. Copy of order of 6th May mentioned in the petition.
- July 17. Petition of Colonel William Herbert, Colonel Nicholas Kempston, and others, on behalf of themselves, their officers, and soldiers. In consequence of the encouragement given them by the Commissioners of Parliament at Saffron Walden, the petitioners have engaged themselves and their soldiers for service in Ireland, but instead of meeting with the respect they anticipated, they are traduced as deserters from the army and obstructors of the relief of Ireland, and what is saddest of all, the House of Commons have voted that they should be utterly disbanded. They pray to be vindicated from the scandals daily cast upon them, and that they may either be recruited and sent to Ireland, or continued on foot as long as the rest of the army. See L. J., IX. 343.
- July 17. Duplicate of preceding, to the House of Commons. C. J., V. 248.
- July 17. Draft ordinance that for the speedier satisfaction of the arrears of Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham, they should be paid out of the fine of Sir Thomas Hanson, if he should prove delinquent, instead of out of that of Sir Thomas Littleton, as previously ordered. L. J., IX. 336.

July 17. Application for an order for Dr. Aylet to institute and induct Robert Dixon to the rectory of Tunstall, Kent.

July 19. Petition of Paul Freeman and others of Leeds, clothiers, to the House of Commons. By direction of Lord Fairfax their dwelling-houses were for the greater safety of the town burnt to the ground, and all they possessed destroyed. They have attended nine months, but have had no relief, being obliged to seek their bread from strangers, whilst their poor children are left in the country harbourless. They implore the House to consider their wretched condition, and to grant them some present supply, to enable them to return to their callings. C. J., V. 249.

July 19. Draft resolution for the keys of the several towns appointed to be disgarrisoned to be delivered to the mayors, or other officers of the said towns. C. J., V. 251. In extenso.

July 20. Petition of Thomas Lenthall and others. They are now attending pursuant to the order of the House of the 17th instant, to show cause against Sir Wm. Russell and others why the 750*l.* should not be taken out of Mr. Browne's hands, and pray to be admitted to their just defence.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 17 July, fixing the 20th for the hearing of the cause.
- July 20. Letter from the Dutch Ambassador, recommending the petition of Judith Sivilett (or Civelett) to the favourable consideration of Parliament.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Judith Sivilett, widow. Petitioner, who is seventy years of age, had a son, who served the King and Parliament since the beginning of these wars, for which service large arrears are due; on his return from the siege of Basing House, he was forced to run into debt, and was arrested by William Pease, a broker, and imprisoned in the Marshalsea in August 1646, where he died from grief and want. Petitioner, coming from Holland to try and recover the arrears due to her son, having taken out letters of administration, has been herself arrested by Pease and imprisoned in the Gatehouse, where she is like to starve and perish, as her son did, being unable to satisfy the extortionate fees demanded by the jailers. She prays for some part of her son's arrears, and for release from imprisonment.

2. Copy of certificate respecting the estate and debts of Captain Peter Sivilett.

July 21. Petition of Edward Lord Viscount Conway and Kilulta, against Sir Jervas Elwes, Francis Chamberlain, and others. Petitioner some years ago borrowed 6,000*l.*, secured on the manor of Luddington, from Sir Jervas; he has always regularly paid the interest, until now, in consequence of his losses in Ireland and the sequestration of his estate, he is unable to do so, but he is ready to take every step to satisfy the debt as soon as possible. Meanwhile an action is being pressed against him at Warwick Assizes, to oust him from the manor of Luddington. He prays that he may have the benefit of privilege, and that the action may be stayed. L. J., IX. 341.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Richard Griffith, attorney, to certain of the defendants in the action mentioned in preceding, that he has authority from them to advise with Lord Conway what he would have them do in the matter. 20 July 1647.
- July 21. Petition of Warwick Lord Mohun. Prays for time to send to Cornwall for his writings and evidences, to enable him to show his title to the lands claimed by Sir Henry Carew and others. L. J., IX. 341.

July 22. Petition of Colonel John Fox. Complains that Richard Middlemore's tenants at Edgbaston, &c. will not pay their rents to him, as directed by order of the House. He prays that John Walter and other tenants may be sent for, to answer for their contempt. L. J., IX. 344.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 20 July.
- July 22. Petition of Robert Porter, tenant of the manor of Edgbaston, in the county of Warwick. By the misinformation of Colonel Fox, petitioner has been sent for by order of the House, though he yielded possession of the manor to Colonel Fox, pursuant to order. Fox's petition is untrue, as appears by the annexed certificates, and the reasons of the Committee of the County for letting the manor to petitioner. Fox surprised petitioner, entered on his hay grounds, forced his under-tenants to pay their rents again to him, and has never made good his charges. Petitioner prays to be allowed to enjoy his grant, and to have his liberty until Fox makes good his charges. L. J., IX. 344.

1. Duplicate of preceding.
2. Certificate and remonstrance of the Committee of Safety for the County of Warwick, &c., that after examining the matter, though Colonel Fox offered much obstruction, they found that he had received his full pay, which no other commander had done, and that there were many complaints of plundering besides, though the garrison at Edgbaston had not been satisfied, and often allowed to starve; the Committee therefore, thinking that it was not the intention of Parliament that he should have any further benefit from the manor of Edgbaston, took it out of his hands, and leased it at its full value to Porter; they desire the House to leave Porter in quiet possession, otherwise they will be unable to pay the soldiery, for none will rent lands, if the grants of the Committee are thus discredited.

July 22. Certificate of Mr. Justice Godbold in the cause upon a writ of error between Deerham and Wise L. J., IX. 344. In extenso.

July 22. Petition of many ministers in sequestrations and others in Cambridge, Essex, Kent, Herts, Sussex, Beds, Huntingdon, and Devon, &c.; complaining of the nonpayment of tithes by their parishioners, and praying the House to take some speedy course to enforce payment. L. J., IX. 344. In extenso.

[July 22.] Petition of divers ministers placed in sequestrations in the county of Essex. They complain that, while faithfully endeavouring to discharge their duties, they are woefully molested by malignant and scandalous ministers deservedly ejected, who try to force them to resign, and to prevent their parishioners from paying tithes by threats and suits. They pray to be protected by ordinance, and indemnified for what has been or shall be done in obedience to the orders of the House.

July 23. Petition of Sir Adam Littleton, Bart., and John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments. The petitioners having proved their charges against John Morris, alias Poyntz, and his confederates, who in contempt of the orders of the House have not produced the documents required, pray the House to proceed to judgment for the condign and exemplary punishment of the offenders. L. J., IX. 346.

1. Certificate of Earnley's delinquency. 13 July. C. J., V. 242. In extenso.

July 23. Copy of libellous paper posted up at the Old Exchange by James Ramsey, accusing the Earl of Newport of putting the writer off from his money, and thereby allowing him to remain prisoner in the Marshalsea. L. J., IX. 347. In extenso.

July 23. Order for the Commissioners with the army to consider with the General how the charge the country is put to for the army may be reduced. L. J., IX. 347. In extenso.

July 23. Petition of David Ouchterlong. Walter Bowen duly presented, and afterwards instituted and inducted, by order of the House, to the rectory of Llandyssil, Cardiganshire, has been disturbed by Thomas Evans and John Lloyd, who took the Church Bible from him, and sent about twenty armed men to levy the tithes of the rectory, and wounded and assaulted Bowen's agents, trying to force the tithes from them. Petitioner prays that those who disturb and oppose Bowen may be sent for, to answer for their contempt.

2. Affidavit of Thomas Phillips. 2 June. L. J., IX. 347. In extenso.

July 23. Petition of Colonel Nicholas Kempston. He has faithfully served Parliament since the beginning of these unhappy wars, but now that there is no further employment for him, nor for those four regiments that are to be disbanded, petitioner prays leave to transport himself beyond the seas (where he has formerly served), with such of the soldiers as are willing to go with him. 2. Certificate of the judges appointed to examine the matter. 11 June 1647.

July 24. Petition of the Mayor and Burgesses of the borough of Newport, in the Isle of Wight, in behalf of themselves, and the inhabitants of the borough. They have for the last five years applied to Parliament to make their town parochial, for in it are four thousand souls and no minister yet settled, but weightier affairs have prevented the passing of any measure. They pray leave to assess the inhabitants at not more than two shillings in the pound towards the maintenance of a godly minister, and assistant. L. J., IX. 351.

Annexed:—

1. Application for an ordinance in accordance with the prayer of preceding petition.

July 24. Petition of Richard Alford, merchant, against Francis Smyth, plaintiff in a writ of error. Prays for a short day for hearing, as the writ has been brought merely for delay, and Smyth is taking no steps to get the errors argued. L. J., IX. 351.

July 24. Petition of Robert Congham. Petitioner was presented by the undoubted patron to the rectory of Blofield, Norfolk, but whilst he was under examination by the Assembly, and obtaining institution and induction by order of the House, Alexander Shipdham got possession of the parsonage, which he now refuses to give up, declaring petitioner's institution and induction illegal, and tries to alienate the affections of the parishioners from him. Petitioner prays for an order to eject Shipdham, and establish himself in quiet possession. L. J., IX. 352.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 2 July.

July 24. Duplicate petition of Robert Congham.

July 24. Order for hearing the matter in difference between Congham and Shipdham. L. J., IX. 352.

July 24. Petition of Martha Pigott, relict of Serjeant-major John Pigott, deceased, on the behalf of herself and children. Petitioner's husband, about the beginning of the rebellion in Ireland, was appointed Governor of Ath, on the River Barrow, where he did very good service until the cessation of arms, when, not wishing to serve against the Parliament, he retired to his castle of Disart, in the Queen's county, which at great expense he fortified as best he could against the rebels; about the beginning of October last he was attacked by them when they were advancing to besiege Dublin, and at last, after defending the castle as long as he could, overpowered by numbers, he surrendered, on promise of quarter; the rebels in spite of their promise rushed in, stripped her husband, herself, and her children naked, dragged him down the stairs, and cruelly murdered him, his son William, Mr. Breerton, a minister, and thirty other English Protestants; which done, they placed her husband and the minister in two chairs, and having torn all the Bibles in the house, put some of the leaves into the dead minister's hands and bade him preach to his patron; they then drew away petitioner and her daughter, naked as they were born, throwing her husband's dead body into a ditch, where it lay unburied for three days; she and her children afterwards escaped to Dublin, and thence to England, where, besides the lamentableness of their condition, they are in want of the means of subsistence. She prays that some present relief may be given her out of the arrears of her late husband, which amount to upwards of 2,000*l.*; his estates, worth 900*l.* per annum, and personal estate worth 5,000*l.* and more, having been destroyed by the rebels. L. J., IX. 352.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

This petition was specially recommended to the House of Commons, but does not seem to have been considered, for on the 18th of January following the Lords remind them of Mrs. Pigott's petition, and send down another of her son, Thomas Pigott. On the 17th of February an order is made to give her 200*l.* for her crying wants, and on the 5th of August 1648 a further order for 175*l.*

Annexed:—

1. Copy of testimonial from the Parliament Commissioners in Ireland respecting Mrs. Pigott's sad case. 26 Nov. 1646.
2. Duplicate of Mrs. Pigott's petition.
3. Duplicate of the Commissioners' testimonial.

July 24. Petition of William Heslerton, an infant, by Isabel, his mother and guardian. Prays that his cause against Lord Eyre, Mr. Justice Berkeley, and others, may be heard in September next; and that the parties, of whom many reside two hundred miles from London, may be then ordered to attend and to produce evidences, &c. L. J., IX. 352.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of an order of 26th of Jan. 1646 in the cause.

July 24. Petition of Captain William Gaulter. He holds a certificate for 49*l.*, disbursed for his company out of his own purse; but the Treasurers will not pay it without an order of the Parliament. He prays the House to consider his extremity, and to grant present order for his satisfaction. L. J., IX. 352.

July 24. Copy of paper of 23rd of July from the Commissioners of the Army to the Parliament Commissioners, about an engagement or covenant entered into in the City to prevent the nearer approach of the army, &c. L. J., IX. 352. In extenso.

July 24. Copy of petition of the citizens, commanders, officers, and soldiers of the trained bands and auxiliaries, the young men and apprentices of the cities of London and Westminster, sea commanders, seamen, and watermen, together with divers other commanders, officers, and soldiers within the line of communication, and parishes mentioned in the weekly bills of mortality, to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, enclosing a copy of a solemn engagement into which they have entered, and in which they desire that the whole City may join, to effect by all lawful means the coming of His Majesty to Parliament, without the nearer approach of the army, that by a personal treaty a firm and lasting peace may be established. L. J., IX. 353. In extenso.

July 24. Printed copy of preceding petition, and of the solemn engagement therein mentioned. L. J., IX. 354. In extenso.

July 24. Draft declaration of Parliament, that whosoever should be found after this notice consenting to or promoting the said engagement should be held guilty of high treason. L. J., IX. 354. In extenso.

July 24. Report of the Judges in the case of Thomas Folkes against Anthony Starling. Starling cannot deny that he was sentenced in the Star Chamber for forgery, and as the damages are not yet paid, the Judges think he ought to be remanded to the Fleet; but as to the title to the lands in question, the parties ought to be left to the law.

July 25. Letter from the Commissioners of Parliament with the Army, at Bedford, to Edward Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore, expressing the satisfaction of the army at the conduct of Parliament in condemning the late petition and engagement, and their readiness to concert measures for the relief of Ireland, and that they will state their desires as soon as possible. L. J., IX. 355. In extenso.

July 29. Copy of letter from the Commissioners of Parliament with the Army, at Bedford, enclosing a copy of a paper which they had delivered to the Commissioners for the Army, respecting the measures proposed for the relief of Ireland, and stating that the news of Monday's work at the Houses had put the army upon fresh councils, and that they were preparing to march towards London. L. J., IX. 359. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of paper mentioned in preceding. 26 July. L. J., IX. 359. In extenso.

July 30. Copy of letter from Mr. Pelham, Speaker of the House of Commons, to the Commissioners of Parliament residing with the Army, enclosing a copy of a letter to Sir Thomas Fairfax, expressing the security of Parliament from any commotions in the City, and the mischief that may arise from the nearer approach of the army, and a vote of Parliament on the same subject.

July 31. Petition of John Mylles on behalf of James Mylles, an infant under age. Prays that a cause in the Common Pleas, in which James Sharpe is plaintiff and Richard Daniel defendant, appointed for hearing at Sevenoaks assizes, may be heard at bar, with two others in the King's Bench relating to the same matter, in Michaelmas term next, as petitioner conceives he will not be able to procure the witnesses, some of whom live in and beyond Southampton, to come to trial in these distracted times. L. J., IX. 361.

July 31. Petition of Richard Taylor and Jeremy Murdock. In Sept. last Edward Johnson was put into possession of certain lands at Coventry, by order of the Court of Exchequer; but since then the Earl of Leicester's agents have demanded possession of those lands, under colour of an order of the House. Petitioners were ready to give up possession if the Earl's agents would hold them harmless for the rent; but this they refusing to do, petitioners would not give up possession, conceiving that the House never intended that they should give up possession, and still be liable for the rent. But by some misinformation petitioners have been sent for, to answer for their conduct. They pray for pardon, in consideration of the equity of the case, and that they may be discharged from their rents and covenants, and from further charge and imprisonment. L. J., IX. 362.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Vincent Crispe in support of preceding. 31 July.

July 31. Order for discharge of Taylor and Murdock. L. J., IX. 362.

July 31. Petition of Dr. Godfrey Goodman, late Bishop of Gloucester. At the beginning of the late wars petitioner's whole estate was sequestered, and as he had nothing to live upon in London, he was obliged to retire into North Wales, where he lived in a most obscure and mean manner upon the profits of a tenement worth 30*l.* a year, which he had formerly conveyed to pious uses, but was obliged to resume for his own support; and now the Committee for the county of Carnarvon intend to sequester this small remains of his estate, which will expose him to absolute beggary. He prays the House to consider his case, as he is above sixty years of age, very sickly and infirm, to allow him some competent maintenance for the short remainder of his life, and to free his tenement from sequestration. L. J., IX. 362.

July 31. Judges' report of the security or obligation to be entered into by Sir William Russell and others in the case between them and Lenthall and others. L. J., IX. 362. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Form of obligation. L. J., IX. 362. In extenso.

[July.] Petition of the commissioned officers of Major-General Massey's brigade, that they may receive the recompense promised them after all their sufferings, and be employed in Ireland or elsewhere.

[July.] Petition of about fifteen hundred distressed soldiers and their wives, who never received any part of their arrears. Most of those in the same position as petitioners have received a month's means. Petitioners pray that the same allowance may be made to them also, as they and their children are likely to starve for want of bread.

[July.] Petition of such whose names are subscribed in behalf of themselves and about three hundred more, to the House of Commons. The House was pleased to grant an order on the 1st of July 1646 to a Committee to examine the demands and certificates of all officers, soldiers, trains of artillery, waggons, their wives and widows, and a sum of 2,000*l.* was ordered to be disposed to the parties expressed in a list presented to the Committee. Petitioners have presented their certificates to the Committee, and some of them have remained there since the 25th of December last, and now petitioners are answered that the money will not serve to give any part of their arrears. Pray that a further sum of money may be raised for them, they being in a sad condition and having done most faithful service, with the hazard of their lives. C. J., V. 152.

[July.] Petition of divers officers. In consequence of the large arrears owing to them, they are unable to pay their trifling debts; some of them are already arrested, and the rest in hourly danger of the same fate. They pray for an order for the release of those of them who are already in durance, and for the protection of the rest till their arrears are paid.

Aug. 1. Copy of letter from the Scottish Commissioners at Worcester House to the Speaker of the House of Peers, complaining of the insult offered to the Earl of Lauderdale, who was driven away from Woburn by soldiers, and not allowed to see the King; and desiring that His Majesty may be invited to come to London with safety, honour, and freedom. Aug. 3. Draft order to give Lord Brudenell leave upon bail, to go anywhere within twenty miles of London, for recovery of his health. Read once and respited. L. J., IX. 372.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Lord Brudenell. The place of his confinement is so environed with houses infected with the plague, besides the contagious time of the year, the present distractions also seeming to threaten this place and the aged and infirm, that he beseeches leave to go into the country for his health, pledging his honour to return when summoned. He names no place to reside in, having nothing left in any house of his own, and therefore cannot say where he shall get residence, but will signify to the Master of the Black Rod the place of his settlement. (Undated.)

2. Petition of Thos. Lord Brudenell. There is no accusation against him, but a mistaken rumour, while the Commissioners judge him not unworthy to be freed from all burthens not fitly laid upon the innocent. He craves that if the repute of his innocency is not fresh in their Lordships' memory, they would look on the annexed paper and not suffer age to stand thus afflicted by a total want of liberty and livelihood. (Undated.)

3. A true relation of Lord Brudenell's comportment during these late wars. About November 1641, the House promised that he should be left quiet, if he would keep at home, and not come to London; but his wife and family were so affrighted by outrages and rapines that he was forced to ask leave to go to France. Before he could start, three hundred horse came from Northampton to take him, but he escaping, they plundered his house inside and out; being afterwards joined by his wife, they both proceeded on their journey, but were pursued, Lord Brudenell escaping out of the coach, whilst his wife and servants were pillaged and forced to return, though they produced their pass for France. Lord Brudenell now disguised himself, and lay sometime concealed at Lincoln, but finding that he was discovered, he borrowed his bailiff's horse and rode with him alone to Newark, from which the rumour has arisen that he raised a regiment and carried it to Newark. Not wishing to share in the counsels of those there, he found himself unacceptable, and therefore retired again to Lincoln, and thence wandered from one place to another; at one time disturbed by the Scots, at another by Prince Rupert's forces, at another by the rising of the Welsh to expel strangers and recusants, until at last he was taken prisoner at Hereford. In all which time he never held place or office, and in this second war has avoided taking any side, and therefore expects freedom, from the justice of the House, and his own innocence. (Undated.)

Aug. 3. Petition of Colonel John Fox. The cause between petitioner and Robert Porter was appointed to be heard in July last, but was then adjourned; he prays that, in consequence of the expense and loss occasioned by keeping the witnesses in town, he may be allowed twenty-one days' notice to re-attend the cause at the better leisure of the House. L. J., IX. 373.

Aug. 6. Draft order for the Committee also to find out the authors of the Covenant of Association lately condemned by Parliament. L. J., IX. 379. In extenso.

Aug. 9. Draft declaration for the vindication of Sir Thomas Fairfax, and the army, for what they have acted in these late troubles for the safety of the Parliament. That the Parliament, whose members have lately been insulted and driven from their places by an insolent rabble, and have been restored to the dignity of a free Parliament by the conduct of the army, desires it to be proclaimed at the head of every regiment that all that the army has done for the vindication of the liberties of Parliament is approved by Parliament, in token of which they have voted the army a month's pay, and are taking steps for the discovery and punishment of the authors of the late tumults. L. J., IX. 379. This declaration was carried in the Lords on the 6th; but was disagreed to by the House of Commons on the 11th, on a division of 110 to 76. C. J., V. 270, 271.

Aug. 9. Draft of a pass for Colonel James Galbreth, a native of Scotland, to go into France.

Aug. 11. Petition of Major Robert Ormesby to the Committee for the affairs of Ireland. On Wednesday the 28th of July petitioner met at Guildhall amongst the reformed and there to be enlisted Lieutenant Fulke Rookesby, who about two years ago betrayed the garrison of Jamestown, Connaught, a well walled town, to the rebels, amongst whom he has since lived up to May last. For these reasons petitioner has caused Rookesby to be arrested, and prays that he may be so dealt with as to deter others from the like treasons. L. J., IX. 383.

Aug. 11. Petition of William Braine, Captain-Lieutenant to Colonel Hardwick (Colonel of the regiment of Trained Bands in Southwark), in behalf of himself and the inhabitants thereof; complaining that they have been insulted, and even assaulted, for their late endeavours for the preservation of the peace of the kingdom, and praying that their reputation and persons may be protected. L. J., IX. 383. In extenso.

Aug. 12. Letter from Colonel Michael Jones, at Dublin, to the Committee at Derby House, sending an account of the late advance of the army against the rebels approved as true by persons on the spot. It is against his disposition so to take notice of matters in which he is himself concerned, but he is forced to do so in the present case by the forwardness of some who have taken upon them to give an account of the matter far from truth. Had he only been furnished with carriages, provisions, and pay, the work to be done in the province, might well nigh have been accomplished, but for want of these he has been forced to march home, giving the enemy time to recruit. His army had not provisions for a day in the field, and there was not in Dublin one week's pay. The most valuable seizure was the train of artillery, and sixty-four oxen worth 16*l*. the yoke : these were the soldiers' due, but Colonel Jones has gathered them in for the public service, promising recompense out of the public treasure, from which he hopes satisfaction will be given. He lost only twenty men, but many horses ; he trusts the riders may be soon mounted again, as the foot cannot march far in winter. C. J., V. 276. Rushworth, IV. ii. 779.

Annexed :—

1. A diary and relation of passages in and about Dublin, from the 1st of August 1647 until the 10th of the same. Colonel Jones marched from Dublin on the 1st to the relief of Trim, which the army marched through on the 6th, and surrounded a place called Trimbleston, which surrendered next day just as Colonel Jones had determined to rise from before it ; he then withdrew his army, leaving a garrison in the place, and after some reconnoitring found the enemy on the 8th drawn up on Dungan Hill, a place of all advantage to them, being on high ground whereunto adjoined a wood and a bog (their usual refuge in distress). They had 7,300 foot and 1,047 horse, according to a muster roll which was found, to which must be added more than 300 horse that joined them the night before the battle ; the armies joined battle about twelve o'clock, and in about two hours the rebels were broken, and some 3,000 betook themselves to the bog ; but Colonel Jones ordered the bog to be surrounded by horse and foot, and the foot following them into the bog, all not admitted to quarter were put to the sword ; 5,470 were slain, besides those gleaned up afterwards. All formerly of the Parliament party, and all English found amongst the rebels, were put to the sword ; 5 Colonels, including the Lieut.-General of Leinster and the Earl of Westmeath, 4 Lieut.-Colonels, &c. ; 32 captains, 23 lieutenants, 27 ensigns, 2 cornets, 22 sergeants, 2 quarter-masters, 2 gunners, the clerk of the stores, 13 troopers, and 228 common soldiers were made prisoners ; their General Preston hardly escaped, leaving behind his carriages, cannon, and 64 fair oxen attending the train, and his cabinet of papers. The loss to Col. Jones' army was not 20, only two cornets and one Captain Gibbs, who, being overheated in the service, died from drinking ditch-water. No men ever carried themselves better, deserving much more encouragement than they have hitherto had, having scarce meat to eat or clothes to put on. All done, a thanksgiving was ordered throughout the army. On the 9th the army marched to Maynooth, which was summoned and surrendered, while the enemy quitted and burnt Naas and others of their garrisons. On the 10th Colonel Jones dismissed some of his forces, engaging himself for their satisfaction as soon as treasure should arrive ; the rest of the army marched to Dublin, where they were gladdened to hear that 1,500*l*. had arrived in the harbour, which, though a small sum, was something in their present distress. Little pillage was got from the enemy, the most valuable prize being the artillery and the oxen, which last Col. Jones bought for the public service from those that took them. This is the greatest victory ever gained in Ireland since the first conquest thereof by the English.

2. List of the prisoners taken at the battle of Dungan Hill. 8 August 1647.

Aug. 13. Petition of John Earl of Clare. Prays privilege for stay of two trials wherein Sir Thomas Williamson is plaintiff, as the Nottingham assizes have come on so suddenly that petitioner cannot be ready for the hearing. L. J., IX. 384.

Aug. 13. Order to appoint a sub-committee of the Committee appointed to find out the authors of the violence lately offered to Parliament. L. J., IX. 385. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Draft ordinance to appoint Mr. Henry Langley Master of Pembroke College, Oxford, in the room of Dr. Clayton, deceased, as the College is not yet visited and the fellows not yet so constituted as that it is fit for them to execute such a trust. L. J., IX. 407. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Petition of inhabitants of Abingdon. The election to the place of master of Pembroke College is of great importance to them, as above twenty fellows and scholars are supplied to the College from Abingdon free school ; the fellows intend suddenly to elect a new master now that Dr. Clayton is dead, whose virtues may not, perhaps, be answerable to the place. The petitioners therefore pray that Mr. Henry Langley, M.A., born in Abingdon, an indulgent tutor to many gentlemen's sons, an ancient member of the College, pious in his religion, excellent in learning and judgment, and of honest and blameless conversation, may be appointed master. (Undated).

Aug. 18. Draft letter from the Parliament to the Commissioners of Scotland, expressing regret that any affront should have been offered to one employed by them, and stating that Mr. Chiesly should freely go on his journey, and that no hindrance should be put in the way of any one sent into Scotland by them. L. J., IX. 387.

Aug. 18. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Francis Cussoly to the vicarage of Axmouth, Devon. L. J., IX. 387.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines, that Cussoly has been approved for the cure. 17 Aug.

Aug. 18. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines, that Henry Frohock has been approved by them for the rectory of Withiel, Cornwall. L. J., IX. 387.

Aug. 18. Petition of some of the fellows of St. John's College in the University of Cambridge. The government of the college is by statute in the hands of the master and the eight seniors, but the present seniors and their deputies have all, with one exception, been fomenters of the late unnatural war, and have never shown any affection to the cause of the Parliament. By the ordinance for regulating the University five of the seniors were ejected for conduct like that which the petitioners are ready to prove against most of those who are now actual seniors, or claim to be their successors ; most of the seniors have further violated the statutes intended to maintain piety and learning in the college, particularly in neglecting the examination of candidates before the election of fellows ; the senior places vacant by ejection have been filled up by election, though in the case of Trinity College it was done by ordinance of Parliament ; there is one senior's place now actually void, and three of the seniors hold livings twenty miles distant from Cambridge, while the petitioners, constituted fellows by authority of Parliament, have been discouraged and affronted by some malignant scholars and college servants. The petitioners pray that all the seniors who have fomented the late war, or are scandalous in their lives, or are possessed of livings, may be disabled, and that some of the fellows appointed by Parliament may be put in their places for the security and protection of the well affected. L. J., IX. 387.

Aug. 18. Petition of divers fellows of St. John's College in Cambridge to the Earl of Manchester. They have submitted in all obedience to the ordinances for the regulation of the University, and have not molested the master or fellows put in by order of their Lordships, but they have notwithstanding been misrepresented as opposers of the government settled among them by Parliament, only because they claim the seniority belonging to them by statute, and reserved to them by Parliament in the instruments for the admission of the fellows put in by Parliament ; they were excluded from their rights by an order from the Committee of the Association requiring them to take the Covenant, which from tenderness of conscience they could not in some respects accept,—an order they conceive to be long since void. They therefore pray that as nothing has ever been objected against them but their not taking the Covenant, they may enjoy their seniority according to statute, and that the fellows put in by Parliament may enjoy their seniority only in reference to themselves.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of an order of the Committee of the Association that no person should be admitted to any office in St. John's College without a certificate from the Committee that he has taken the Covenant, 18 Jan. 1644-5, and of an order to explain the same. 21 Jan. 1644-5.

2. Letter from Thos. Hill, Vice-Chancellor, and Thos. Bachcroft and Herbert Palmer, " Heads of the University," to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore. They have, pursuant to ordinance of Parliament, examined into the late disturbance in St. John's College and endeavoured to quiet it, but without success, and therefore send up the papers submitted to them, from which the nature of the difference, and names of the persons will most clearly appear. 14 Aug.

Aug. 18. Remonstrance from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax and the army under his command, concerning their just and clear proceedings hitherto in the behalf of the Parliament, kingdom, and themselves, and the evil and treacherous dealing they have found from the enemies to their own and the Parliament's and kingdom's peace and freedom, together with their present difficulties and dangers in relation thereto, and their present resolutions thereupon, with the grounds of all these. L. J., IX. 391. In extenso. Signed by John Rushworth, at Kingston.

[Aug. 18.] Petition of Sir John Gifford to the Committee for the affairs of Ireland. At the beginning of the rebellion in Ireland petitioner was made lieutenant-colonel of a regiment of foot, and having had little pay or entertainment, large arrears are due to him. In October last the rebels gained his garrison from him, by which he lost the residue of a fair estate, and his own family and many distressed Protestants were driven from Athlone and other places protected by his garrison. He prays that his regiment may be recruited and continued under his command, and some part of his arrears paid. See C. J., V. 277.

Aug. 20. Petition of Captain Thomas Evans. John Williams, lawful incumbent of Llandysil, Cardiganshire, farmed the profits of the rectory to petitioner and others, but in May last Walter Bowen was presented to the rectory, and procured an order from the House for his institution and induction thereto, as if it had been vacant by Williams's death, though he is alive; under colour of which Bowen's agents have attempted to collect the tithes, and on a petition of David Ouchterlong have procured an order for the attachment of petitioner, as a contemner of their Lordships' orders, when he knew not of them, and when Bowen, if he have any claim to the living, may try the same by ordinary course of law. Petitioner, who is one of the Committee for the county of Cardigan and for the counties of Pembroke and Carmarthen, and is required speedily in the county, prays to be discharged from the attachment. L. J., IX. 388.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Richard Robert, that John Williams, reputed parson of Llandysil, was alive and well on the 25th of June last. 2 Aug. 1647.

Aug. 20. Petition of divers ministers settled by order of Parliament, complaining that they have been turned out of their livings by scandalous and sequestered ministers, and praying for reparation and relief. L. J., IX. 389. In extenso.

Aug. 20. Heads of several complaints from divers ministers in sequestrations against scandalous ministers upon their pretences of order from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, and his council of war, craving a recommendation of their sad condition to the Parliament. L. J., IX. 389. In extenso.

Aug. 20. Application for an order for Dr. Heath to institute and induct William Seymour to the rectory of Iwerne-Courtney, alias Shroton, with the chapel of Farlington, Dorsetshire. L. J., IX. 398.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Seymour has been approved for the cure. 18 Aug. 20. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel John Booker. In consideration of his services the House was pleased to grant petitioner protection from arrest until his arrears should be paid, but he has notwithstanding been arrested as surety for a debt due to James Viccars, and detained until he could procure bail. Petitioner, who is ready to pay his debts as soon as he receives his arrears, prays that he and his bail may be discharged, and that those who arrested him may be sent for to answer for their contempt. L. J., IX. 398.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Booker in support of his petition. 11 Aug.

Aug. 20. Petition of Sir Gervase Elwils. About seven years ago Viscount Conway mortgaged the manor of Luddington, &c., in Warwickshire, to petitioner for 6,000*l.*, and having received neither interest nor principal for the last five years, petitioner commenced an action at law to recover the same; but Lord Conway failing to obtain an injunction in Chancery, has procured an order from the House on the score of privilege to stay the action, and by cutting down woods, &c. has done much to diminish the value of the property. Petitioner therefore prays that the order may be discharged, as Lord Conway ought not to be protected against his own acts, and he has been allowed to deduct the debt due to petitioner in making his composition at Goldsmiths' Hall. L. J., IX. 398.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order to stay petitioner's suit against Lord Conway. 21 July 1647.

2. Certificate of the Commissioners sitting at Goldsmiths' Hall that allowance has been made in Lord Conway's composition for his debt to Sir Gervase Elwils. 19 August 1647.

3. Affidavit in support of the petition. 19 August.

Aug. 21. Petition of Jeremy Bowyers, of Bradford, in the county of York, clothier, to Wm. Lenthall, Esq., Speaker of the House of Commons. During the war petitioner's house was burnt to the ground, his woollacks employed as defence against the enemy's cannon, the rest of his goods plundered and spoiled, and his wife and children driven to seek a new home. His case has been recommended by letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax, and in a report from Mr. Nelthorpe by direction of the Committee of the Northern Association. Petitioner prays that these may be read and speedy relief given him. C. J., V. 281.

Aug. 23. Petition of Colonel John Hardwick. Upon reading a petition of William Braine, petitioner's lieutenant, complaining of the affront offered to him for his late conduct in Southwark for the public safety of the kingdom, the House not only thanked the trained bands of Southwark for their conduct, but further directed that those who had affronted Braine and the others should be sought out and punished; in spite of this; however, petitioner has been publicly insulted and called a traitor by Major Richard Lawrence, who treacherously brought a party into Southwark to have wrought his own designs, (for aught petitioner knoweth) to the effusion of blood, and also by Colonel Lowton. Petitioner prays that a speedy example may be made of these men to deter others from the like conduct. L. J., IX. 399.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of William Hester. 21 Aug.

2. Affidavit of Gowen Goldega. 21 Aug.

Aug. 23. Petition of Giles Thorne, clerk. Petitioner is now in the sixth year of his imprisonment, and nothing against him but what is contained in the annexed copy of his commitment. He prays the House to release him, or to allow him subsistence out of his own means to preserve him from perishing. L. J., IX. 399. Thorne was discharged.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 30th Aug. 1642 for Thorne to stand committed to the Fleet prison until the pleasure of the House be further known. Thorne was committed on the evidence of one witness for speaking blasphemous words. L. J., V. 332.

Aug. 24. Petition of Sir Thomas Bowyer and others. Their estates have been long since sequestered by the committees of their several counties, and they have been kept out of their property some two years, some three, and some more; they have appealed to the Committee for Sequestrations, and have attended long and daily at great charge, but cannot get their cases heard, the Committee sitting so seldom, and now it has adjourned till after Michaelmas. They pray the Lords to concur in an order of the House of Commons for the Committee for Sequestrations to go on sitting. See L. J., IX. 401.

They pray for the apprehension and punishment of all who aided in, and abetted these outrages. L. J., IX. 401. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of proposals of the East India Company.

Having at two general courts declared their reasons for not setting out any more ships upon the fourth joint stock, and fearing that the ordinance of Parliament for the encouragement of the trade of the Company is not likely to pass in time for this year's trading, on account of the many other matters of great concernment, the Company decided, at a general court on the 2nd of July, to preserve and continue the trade by a second general voyage, which shall stand upon its own bottom, and have no relation to any former stock or voyage whatever. Those whose names are underwritten shall therefore promise to venture the several sums subscribed by them, and to pay the same by four quarterly payments, commencing at Michaelmas next, and to divide any profits, or share any losses, in proportion to their subscriptions. The subscription book shall lie open for all brethren free of the Company, and for all others who make themselves such by payment of a fine of 5*l.*, until the 31st of July for those who reside within London and ten miles compass, and till the 31st of August for those that live beyond that compass. continued there for three months longer. L. J., IX. 430. In extenso.

Sept. 9. Petition of Thomas Tisdall, committed for replevying the cattle of Robert Browne, when distrained for tithes. Prays to be released. L. J., IX. 430. In extenso.

Sept. 9. Similar petition of Bartholomew Ashdowne, committed for his share in the same matter. L. J., IX. 431. In extenso.

Sept. 9. The humble petition and answer of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, to the House of Commons. The Court has received the order requiring their positive answer concerning the loan of 50,000*l.* to be advanced out of the arrears of their assessments due to the army. They crave pardon for reminding the House that neither this nor any other assessment was laid upon the Court, but upon the inhabitants of the City, of whom many are dead, many decayed, and many removed with their whole families from the City, and therefore the arrears are likely to fall far short of what is expected. The Court have seriously considered how to raise so large a sum as that required upon the security offered, but find the City Treasury so exhausted in the service of Parliament, and the credit of the City Seal in such disesteem, that nothing can be done there; and for individual persons their means are so strained by the late great loans, and by the decay of trade, that there is no hope of any private persons advancing the money. All that the Court can at present do is to use their utmost endeavours in the matter, and to press the collection of arrears of former assessments. The Court hopes that this answer will be accepted, and that the House of Commons will consider the grief which some of the expressions in their order have caused to the members of the Court, who as a Court have done great services to Parliament; and on the occasion of the "engagement" mentioned in the order of the House, at once assured Sir Thos. Fairfax that they rested on that which both Houses had resolved thereupon, and still hold to that resolution and disavow the said engagement; and therefore hope that the House will not allow such a mark of their displeasure to stand on record against them, which cannot but through them reflect and stick upon the whole City. The Commons resolved that they were not satisfied with this answer, and required that the whole of the arrears should be collected, and that the 50,000*l.* should be advanced on loan by the 18th instant. C. J., V. 298.

Sept. 9. Letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax, at Putney, to Lord Howard, requesting him to move the Committee [for Sequestrations] to relieve Mrs. Parris, the condition of herself and her seven children being so sad that Sir Thomas Fairfax could do no less than recommend it to his Lordship, though it relates not to the army.

1. Petition of Mrs. Joane Parris. She cannot obtain the 5th part of 150*l.* sequestered from her, to which she is entitled by ordinance of Parliament, and prays relief herein. (Undated.)

Sept. 12. Letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax, at Putney, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers. He has received a petition from divers gentlemen comprised in the articles for the surrender of Exeter, expressing the sufferings and losses they have sustained by the breach of those articles; he desires the Earl to move the House of Peers to concur with the House of Commons in approving the articles of Exeter, and all other articles, for surrender of towns already approved by them; and to give command to all judges and other officers to observe the same, the reputation and faith of himself and the army, and public justice, being so much interested therein.

Sept. 14. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines, that Thomas Hallett has been approved by them for the cure of the rectory of Cheddington, Dorsetshire. L. J., IX. 433.

Sept. 14. Draft order for continuing Edward Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore, and Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons, as Commissioners of the Great Seal. L. J., IX. 433. In extenso.

Sept. 14. Affidavit of John Holden that the privileges of the University of Cambridge have been infringed by the officers of the town. L. J., IX. 435. In extenso.

Sept. 15. Petition of Dr. Towers, of Peterborough. He is utterly unable to travel from sickness, and could he do so he is unable to bear the expense of the journey, for his whole means have been sequestered from him, and Mr. Spinks, who has had the profits of the parsonage of Castor (worth 400*l.* per annum), has not allowed petitioner's wife the 5th part prescribed by ordinance for support of her and her children, so that they have subsisted only on the charity of some neighbours. He prays, therefore, to be discharged from any supposed contempt, and from the journey to town; and that his servant, John Parvow, also sent for to appear before the House, may be discharged, as he has done nothing but what petitioner required of him. Petitioner has never received a penny of the tithes, but only entreated the parishioners to keep them in their hands, and since the additional ordinance came forth he has in no way disturbed the incumbent. He further prays that Spinks may be ordered to pay him the fifth of the living from the time of his incumbency. L. J., IX. 435.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of inhabitants of Peterborough that Dr. Towers, their late Bishop, is so infirm and diseased, that he is more likely to die than to recover. 24 August 1647.

2. Petition of John Parvow, servant to Dr. Towers. By entreating the parishioners of Castor to retain their tithes, and reading a printed paper to that effect, he thought he was acting in accordance with the mind of the Army and of Parliament. He has been in restraint since the 24th of August, and can no longer restrain himself. He prays the House to pardon his error and set him at liberty, that he may return home to his sick master, who has no servant to assist him in his great distress, he being not able to get into or out of his bed but as he is lifted.

Sept. 17. Draft order in the case of Edmund Spinks, minister of Castor, against Dr. Towers, late Bishop of Peterborough, and his servant, John Parvow. L. J., IX. 438. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Petition of Simon Rumney, minister of Hanworth, Middlesex. The House, in vindication of its orders, committed Robert Browne for refusing petitioner's tithes, &c. Browne now says that he is thus debarred from a trial at law. Petitioner therefore, to show his love of justice, and to make his ministry more effectual by removing such pretences, prays that Browne may be set free to come to a speedy trial at law, or be brought to some other speedy determination to repay petitioner's charges. L. J., IX. 440.

Sept. 21. Proposals agreed on by his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax and the Council of the army, tendered to the Commissioners of Parliament residing with the army, with explanations or declarations of the sense of his Excellency and the general council of the army upon several particulars in the proposals foregoing, in answer to some queries thereupon made by the Commissioners of Parliament residing with the army. Read this day. L. J., IX. 441. Rushworth, IV. ii. 731, 817. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Another draft of the judgment.

Sept. 21. Draft of the sentence.

Sept. 21. Another draft.

Sept. 21. Order for commitment of John Harris to the Poultry Compter.

Sept. 21. Order for commitment of Isabel Smith to Newgate.

Sept. 21. Lists of witnesses, with the points to be proved by them, interrogatories, and other similar documents used at the hearing of the cause. (Fourteen papers.)

Sept. 21. Brief of the case.

Annexed:—

1. Another brief.

2. Narrative concerning the searching of Morris' house. On the 11th of May 1647 the Deputy to the Gentleman Usher of the House of Peers, having a warrant to attach John Morris, alias Poyntz, and others, and to seize a copy of an Act of Parliament, which they were accused of having forged, went with two constables and an officer about ten o'clock at night to Morris' house in Beaves Marks, and acquainted Mrs. Morris, Mr. Whitby, and others then in the house with the motive of his coming, and demanded admission in the King's name, which being refused he at length forced the door open, and after showing his warrant searched the house (Mr. Whitby and others had escaped by a back way), but a thin paper book was found in a drawer, in which were several accounts of the names of persons who had lent money on the credit of the pretended Act of Parliament, and entries of rents received from Sir Adam Littleton's tenants in Essex; and in an upstairs room a man was found hid in a bed, and between the bed and the mattress a black box; this box was opened in the presence of Mrs. Morris and others, and the papers told over, and as they were thought to be very important for the discovery of the matter, they were replaced, and the box sealed up in the presence of all, and delivered to the Clerk of the Parliaments then present, to keep till the House should require to use them or give directions for disposing of them.

3. Duplicate of preceding.

4. The forged copy of the Act 43 Eliz.: "To enable "and make good a conveyance and assurance "made of the manors of Chipping Ongar, North- "okenden, Southokenden, and other lands in the "county of Essex; and Beaves Markes alias "Buries Markes, in London, by James Morris, "Esq., and Gabriell Poyntz, Esq., to John "Poyntz, alias Morris, and his heirs; and to "establish the said manors upon the said John "Poyntz, alias Morris, and his heirs according "to the said conveyance." Every page of this document, which is attested as a true copy by Leonard Darby and John Harris, is crossed out. It is endorsed by Mr. Browne: "This "being declared to be counterfeit and forged by "judgment of the Lords in Parliament, the 21st "day of September 1647, is cancelled and vacated "according to the said judgment."

5. Certificate from Har[bottle] Grimston that inquiry had been made of his father by Christopher Gooday, whether he had ever heard of an Act of Parliament concerning one Poyntz, and on his father referring Gooday to him he told him that if he knew the year it would be easy to find the Act, either at the Lords' House or in the Tower, &c. 12 July 1647.

6. Copy of lease from John Morris, alias Poyntz, to Leonard Darby of a farm-house, &c., called Bantans, alias Bayntons, in the parish of Chipping Ongar, Essex, at a peppercorn rent. 10 June 1646.

7. Copy of agreement between James Whitby, and John Poyntz, alias Morris. Whitby has recovered a judgment for 200*l.* against Morris, and Morris has granted Whitby a lease of certain lands and tenements in Bevis Markes, alias Buries Markes, in London, for thirty-one years, at a rental of 8*l.*; and if Whitby has quiet possession of the premises during the said term, then Whitby's judgment for 200*l.* is to be void of and of no effect. 30 Jan. 1646-7. This and the preceding paper were probably produced to show the interest of Whitby and Darby in supporting Morris' title.

Sept. 21. Precedents used in the case of Morris, alias Poyntz:—

1. Copy of sentence upon Philip Bembridge for counterfeiting a protection from Lord Fauconbridge. 26 Jan. 1640-1. L. J., IV. 144. In extenso.

2. Copy of sentence upon William Urmfreville for counterfeiting a protection from Lord Audley. 20 Feb. 1640-1. L. J., IV. 168.

3. Copy of sentence upon Clement Walker for scandal against Lord Saye and Sele. 2 Oct. 1643. L. J., VI. 241.

4. Copy of judgment upon Thomas Howett, Peter Legay, Peter Mackerill, and Edmond Bulter for violently seizing goods then in possession of Wm. Harrison and others, by virtue of a decree of the Delegates, where a cause was proceeded in, by order of the House of Lords, at the suit of William Thannes; they are all fined and imprisoned during the pleasure of the House, and Howett and Legacy are to stand in the pillory. 4 Dec. 1645. L. J., VIII. 24.

Sept. 21. Petition of Lieutenant Fulke Rooksby, committed on the information of Major Ormsby for surrendering Jamestown. Petitioner acted by direction of Lord Dillon, and is therefore freed from blame by the articles entered into between his Lordship and the Commissioners of Parliament. He prays to be bailed. L. J., IX. 442. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from the Marquess of Ormonde, at Kingston, to Lord Wharton, in behalf of Rooksby. 13 Sept. L. J., IX. 442. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Richard Remington to the rectory of Lockington in the county of York. L. J., IX. 442.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Remington has been approved for the cure. 15 Sept.

Sept. 21. Petition of Edward Johnson of the Inner Temple. The annexed order, by which the possession of certain lands has been taken from petitioner, and given to the Earl of Leicester, is grounded upon false allegations. Petitioner prays that the same may be examined, and that he may be heard thereupon.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 7 Dec. 1646.

2. Copy of order of 2 June 1647.

Sept. 22. Petition of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, Governors of Christ's Hospital. Petitioners pray the House to order a new trial next term in the suit touching the will of Thomas Hawes, in the name of the petitioners, as Ann Hawes his widow, is lately dead. L. J., IX. 444.

Sept. 22. Petition of Henry Earl of Arundel and Surrey. The Committee of Sussex have on many occasions, under pretence of raising money, cut down timber trees to the value of 20,000, on his estates, which are now under sequestration, and they have lately appointed to cut down as much more as will repair a sea breach in a wall at Littlehampton; this wall ought to be repaired by the county, for the benefit of which petitioner's father allowed the cutting of a haven into his own land; the timber, besides, is not sequestrable, being comprised in a conveyance for payment of his father's debts, and Parliament has ever been careful to forbid the cutting of timber on sequestered estates. He prays for an order to prohibit the cutting of any more timber, or the repairing of the breach out of his estate. L. J., IX. 444.

Sept. 22. Petition of Robert Middlemore. By order of the 28th of June last the profits of the manor of Edgbaston, &c., the property of Richard Middlemore, were to be paid to Colonel John Fox till the pleasure of the House should be further known. Richard Middlemore, who was tenant for life only, is dead; and petitioner, who is entitled in reversion, therefore prays that he may be permitted to enjoy the profits of his estate according to the laws of the kingdom, or that they may be secured till the cause be determined. L. J., IX. 444.

Sept. 22. Duplicate of preceding.

Sept. 22. Remonstrance of Hugh Glover, minister of Debden, Essex, admitted upon the delinquency of Dr. Wilson. Dr. Wilson and his son-in-law, Thomas Hills, sometime a commander in this kingdom, having forbidden the parishioners to pay tithes to petitioner, and published a proclamation pretended to come from the army, but which is utterly disclaimed there, a warrant was obtained to attach Dr. Wilson, who is now in custody of a messenger, and the case is left to the consideration of the House. See L. J., IX. 448.

Sept. 22. Petition of Lady Eleanor Douglas. In 1633 she applied by petition to the King for relief against the late Archbishop of Canterbury and the High Commission Court for seizing and taking from her certain books which she had had printed when abroad, the innocence of which books would appear upon perusal; she was, however, apprehended and kept prisoner in the Gatehouse for two years, exposed to the base behaviour of the keeper and his officers, without being allowed to stir a foot out, or to have a woman-servant to attend upon her, or pen, ink, or Bible, until her freedom was obtained by her daughter, the Countess of Huntingdon, on payment of heavy fees. Petitioner was, however, again arrested and imprisoned in Bedlam, which, after the Gatehouse, was, as it were, to exchange the grave for hell, such were the blasphemies and the noisome scents; here she was kept close prisoner as non compos mentis, without trial for seven years, and then, when stripped of every possession, turned out, and, though not a mile distant from her husband at the time of his death, not suffered to know even where he was buried; deprived of all claim upon his estate, and so made subject to arrests for debt, sometimes carried to the Gatehouse, then to the Compter, then to the King's Bench, and this notwithstanding the services of her father and her husband, and the eminence of her family. She prays for reparation against this combination against her life, and estate, and good name, more dear than both.

Sept. 24. Petition of Robert Porter. The cause between petitioner and Colonel John Fox was to have been heard on the 27th of July last, but, by the adjournment of the House at that time, is left sine die. He prays that a day may be appointed for the hearing within a month, as he and his witnesses live a hundred miles distant. L. J., IX. 448.

Sept. 24. Application on behalf of the Earl of Lincoln that John Chaire and others may be sent for, to answer for their contempt of privilege in arresting John Halsey, the Earl's solicitor. L. J., IX. 448.

Sept. 24. Letter of Henry Gilbert, late minister of Clifton, warning the parishioners not to pay tithes to the present usurper of the living, that they come to no damage when the laws again recover their force. L. J., IX. 449. In extenso.

Sept. 25. Copy of Examinations of Anth. Henley and others, identifying Captain Musgrave and John Ulting as amongst those who encouraged the rioters on the occasion of the violence offered to Parliament on the 26th of July last. C. J., V. 316.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Examinations of Benjamin Spier and another, that on the occasion of the violence offered to Parliament on the 26th of July, a young man named Edward Brace ran down the water lane, asking if any Lords had escaped that way, and was very angry with a woman who had let the Earl of Lincoln pass out of the House of Lords through her house.

Sept. 25. Petition of Thomas Cullum, one of the Sheriffs of the City of London. Apprehension of the heaviness of the charge against him, and of the displeasure of the House, have so cast him down that his spirits are quite overwhelmed; he will not now enter on any justification, though he hopes in some measure to be able to clear himself, at least, to make it appear that he has rather been a weak than a wilful offender, if any at all. He prays that his imprisonment in the Tower may be suspended, and that he may be confined to his own house until the hearing of the case, for the infirmities of his body and the grief of his heart are so great, that he otherwise despairs of living to make any defence to clear himself and his children from shame. C. J., V. 317.

Sept. 27. Petition of Henry Walker and Mathew Simmonds. They have been at great charges in printing the papers from the army, of their declarations and desires, in one volume. They pray for an order for the publication thereof, and that no one else shall reprint it. L. J., IX. 450.

Sept. 27. Petition of Henry Walker, praying that the assistants of the House may be authorised to license the "Diurnal, written by Mr. Perke, and the occurrences" by petitioner, till the list of licensers is perfected.

Sept. 27. Petition of Henry Walker. Out of real affection to Parliament he has hitherto written the occurrences that have been printed on Fridays, to prevent the misrepresentations of malignants, and being desirous of doing nothing against the mind of the House; he prays that some one may be appointed to peruse the notes before they are published, whether Sir Nathaniel Brent, the Clerk of Stationers' Hall, or any other in the list annexed, or whom else their Lordships shall nominate. See L. J., IX. 142.

Annexed:—

1. A particular of the names of the licensers who are appointed by the House of Commons for printing, according to an order of the Lords and Commons dated the 14th of June 1643. (Printed.) 20 June 1643. C. J., III. 138.

2. Notes for an order respecting printing. Sept. 27. Petition of Michael Nightingale and others of Thaxted, Essex. By order of the House they have been attached by a messenger and brought to town.

Nightingale is above seventy years old, and very infirm, and not being able to ride, was obliged to walk nearly thirty miles, and now wants many things necessary to him. Another of the petitioners has no subsistence but his daily labour, and his family are in great distress in his absence. They have been ten days in custody, and having no means to bear the charge of long imprisonment, pray to be admitted to their defence, that they may either clear themselves or confess their error. L. J., IX. 451.

Sept. 27. Petition of Matthew Nightingale, Samuel Hall, and other men and women of Thaxted. Some of the men have been a month in durance, others, husbands in time of seed, and women from their children, are here at great charge; they are heartily sorry for their offences, and pray for their discharge. L. J., IX. 451.

Sept. 27. Order for the hearing of the complaint of the participants of Hatfield Chase against William Lister, Daniel Noddell, and others. L. J., IX. 451.

Sept. 27. Letter from Colonel Michael Jones, at Dublin, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords. He will send over Preston's papers, taken at the battle of Dungannon Hill; he gives some account of the state of the forces, and of the extreme need of provisions and pay. L. J., IX. 479. In extenso.

Sept. 28. Petition of Henry Dickenson and John Bullin, inhabitants in Cambridge. They are attached, as they are informed, for breach of some order concerning the privilege of the University. They pray to be discharged on bail, as they have great charge of wife and children. L. J., IX. 453.

Sept. 28. Petition of Wm. Allen. In 1644 Peter Deliques and two other Frenchmen sold two ships, the Boxtreue and Pearl Hoy, to petitioner, with their tackling and furniture; but John Baker, by untruth and misinformation, on pretence of a debt due to him by the Frenchmen, proceeded against the ships, which no longer belonged to them, in the Admiralty Court, without making petitioner a party; and under colour of these proceedings has misled the House to dispossess petitioner, while Baker, a man of lost fortunes, and an alien, whose person is protected from the law, is selling the ships, their lading, and tackling, and will be gone without possibility of relief. Petitioner prays that Baker may be ordered to deliver back the ships, goods, and furniture to the owners, and he will put in good security to pay Baker any sum found due to him by the House, or any other Court. L. J., IX. 453.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for Baker to be put in possession of the ships. 2 June 1647.

2. Affidavit of Wm. Allen in support of his petition. 11 Aug. 1647.

[Sept. 28.] Petition of Andrew MacAlexander and Thomas Boyd, Scotch merchants. Pray to be indemnified for wines taken by Captain Plunkett out of a ship of theirs, for the use of the State, as he pretended. A petition of Boyd and a report on the case are set out in extenso this day, and satisfaction is ordered to be made. L. J., IX. 453.

Sept. 28. Printed copy of letter from Lord Inchiquin, at Cashel (dated the 12th instant), to Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of the House of Commons. Having approached the Castle of Cahir, Col. James Hipplesley, disguised as a surgeon, was sent to attend on a wounded trooper there, and by his observation of the weak points of the Castle we were able to reduce the place, previously deemed impregnable. There are no cattle in the country, and the soldiers live on roots and corn; we have so much of the latter that we have burned 20,000*l.* worth in the county, but we have no hand-mills, though we have often applied for them, with which to grind it; we have occupied Cashel, the inhabitants retreating to the cathedral, which is seated upon a rock, and very difficult of attack; however, we shall try to reduce it, and then to march against Fethard and Clonmel; the gentry, by the reduction of these places and the burning of their corn, are beginning to sue to be admitted to a contribution, which will be embraced if it conduce to the better carrying on of the war. My only means of doing this and of supporting the army is by keeping the field, but if driven into garrisons by the weather or by an over-powerful army, I know not how we should be kept from starving without supplies from Parliament. See Rushworth, IV. ii. 823.

Sept. 30. Petition of Gilbert Mabbott. Till within three weeks past petitioner has been licenser of the weekly pamphlets, as deputy to Mr. Rushworth, appointed licenser by the annexed order of the House of Commons. Petitioner for the past five years has faithfully served the House of Commons, and acted as agent to Sir Thomas Fairfax in matters relating to the army, though he has lost money by his zeal for the House; a licenser should be privy to the proceedings both of Parliament and of the army, and he therefore prays the Lords to accede to the request of his Excellency in his late letter to the House, and to continue petitioner as licenser. L. J., IX. 456.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for John Rushworth to license pamphlets. 11 April 1647.

Sept. 30. Duplicate of preceding petition and order. Sept. 30. Another copy of same.

Sept. 30. Draft order for the Barons of the Exchequer to give the usual oath to John Warner, the new Lord Mayor. L. J., IX. 456. In extenso.

Sept. 30. Copy of propositions from the army respecting the raising of forces for Ireland, dated at Putney, 25th Sept. If Parliament will declare who are to conduct the forces, and will provide money, clothes, and shipping, the means will doubtless be ready in a short time. The names of the officers shall be presented to Parliament. Colonel Birch's regiment will not go without the month's pay, that the others have; provision to be made for soldiers required in the garrisons in England; 10*l.* per diem to be left to be disposed of by the General to such commanders of garrisons as he should think fit; the additional establishment proportionable to the monthly charge for the service of England and Ireland, and other points, to be considered. Endorsed,—“Reported by the Lord Wharton, 30 Sept. 1647, from the army; not read.” See C. J., V. 325.

[Sept.] Petition of divers gunmakers, saddlers, and other persons, to the House of Commons, in behalf of themselves and others who have trusted the State with several sums of money, parcels of guns, saddles, ammunition, and other things for the expedition under the late Lord Brooke, praying that Richard Floyd and William Watson may be authorised to receive the money due to petitioners, and to give receipts for the same. See L. J., IX. 455.

Oct. 1. Petition of Samuel Hall, now in custody under the Black Rod. He has been a month in prison at great charge, is heartily sorry for his offence, humbly submits himself to the judgment of the House, and promises not to interrupt the sequestrators in the exercise of their authority in Thaxted church. He prays to be discharged, that he may seek some way to maintain himself, being at present in great want. L. J., IX. 458.

Annexed:—

Oct. 2. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct John Gerrard to the rectory of East Aldrington, Sussex. L. J., IX. 466.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Gerrard has been approved for the cure. 1 Oct.

Oct. 2. Answer of Major-General Langhorne to an order of the House upon the petition of Frances Thomas, widow. On the 18th of June the House ordered him to restore a certain quantity of lead to Mrs. Thomas, or to show cause to the contrary within twenty days; in answer to which he says that in 1645, when he had cleared the county of Pembroke, and was in some condition to march into the counties of Carmarthen and Cardigan, then wholly for the King, he found the lead close to the garrison of Aberystwith, and fearing lest it should fall into the hands of the enemy, he caused it to be shipped thence by sea, and that it was afterwards employed for the use of the State in the service under his command, as his accounts will show. See L. J., IX. 279.

Oct. 4. Amendments made by the Lords to the 1st and 7th Propositions for Peace. L. J., IX. 467.

Oct. 4. Draft ordinance to take off the sequestration of the estate of George Duke of Buckingham. L. J., IX. 467. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Draft ordinance to appoint Joseph Symonds Fellow of Eton College, in the room of Dr. Stokes, who has deserted his Fellowship and adhered to the forces raised against Parliament. L. J., IX. 468. In extenso.

Oct. 6. Petition of many citizens of London and of others, that, as in the days of Queen Elizabeth, persons were sent forth to publish the Gospel who had no formal act of ministerial ordination, so now fit persons may be chosen and sent out to preach in England and Wales, where need requires, for the advancement of the spiritual and temporal peace of all sorts of men. L. J., IX. 469. In extenso.

Oct. 6. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Timothy Woodroffe to the rectory of Wenwoe, Glamorganshire. L. J., IX. 471.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Woodroffe has been approved for the cure. 4 Oct.

Oct. 7. Petition and answer of John Fowke, Alderman of London, to the petition of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies. He combats the allegations of the Company in their petition of the 17th of July last, especially that he had not sought relief earlier, his answer being that he often petitioned Lord Coventry; had he done so oftener it would have been equally fruitless until he could apply to Parliament, for no bill of review for injustice merely would lie in Chancery; to the desire of the Company that he may be left to the ordinary course of law he answers that the appeal to the House of Lords, though final and ultimate, is also the ordinary and only way of proceeding in a case of this kind. He therefore prays that the Company may either produce their books that his account may be perfected, or pay him the 7,000*l.* with damages, at which he lays his claim. L. J., IX. 471.

Oct. 7. Petition of Thomas Worsley, John Worsley, his son, and Elizabeth, his daughter. Though they ever detested Popery, yet petitioners suffered under the prelates, and Thomas Worsley was indicted as a recusant for non-conformity to the book of Common Prayer, but the proceedings were stayed by order of the Court of Exchequer, in the beginning of this Parliament; yet

Wm. Martin and others took goods of John and Elizabeth Worsley, to the value of 100*l.*, in June last, for the recusancy of their father, as is more fully set forth in another petition recommended by Sir Thomas Fairfax, to the consideration of the House. Last term the petitioners obtained an order of the Exchequer for restoration of their goods, but Martin and the others refuse to return the goods, save three cows and one ox, by which petitioners are undone, and their land untilld, while they have spent in travel near 50*l.* They pray the House to order them restitution of their goods and reparation for their losses. L. J., IX. 472.

Annexed :—

1. Petition of Thomas Worsley, of Hovingham, in the county of York, Katheryne, his wife, John, his son, and Elizabeth, his daughter. Though petitioners detested popery, yet they suffered under the Bishops for non-conformity to the book of Common Prayer, and were on that account convicted for recusancy; and though the book of Common Prayer has been taken away by ordinance of Parliament, the Statute of Recusancy is still pleaded against them in all suits for recovery of their legal rights or just debts. They have shown affection to Parliament by taking the Protestation against popery, by their contributions and their sufferings. Now, as no provision has been made to meet the case of those in their condition, they pray that all process and further charges against them for recusancy may be stayed, their recognizances discharged, and they enabled to recover their lawful rights and just debts. (Undated.)

2. Duplicate of preceding.

3. Copy of letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax, at Reading, to the Commissioners of Parliament with the Army. He has been importuned by a countryman, Mr. Worsley, for relief. Worsley, though very far from being inclined to popery, has suffered as a recusant, because he had scruples as to the book of Common Prayer. The case is a private matter, but Worsley is fourscore years old, and by reason of infirmity, cannot attend himself, and therefore piety and conscience prompt his Excellency to recommend the petition. 9 July 1647.

Oct. 7. Draft order for payment of 11*l.* to Mrs. Jane Done, sister and executrix of Major Done, slain in the service of the Parliament. L. J., IX. 472. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Draft ordinance to secure the repayment of 32,000*l.* advanced for the service of England and Ireland. L. J., IX. 472. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Petition and remonstrance of the merchants, English and strangers, trading in and by the port of Dover. They pray that the duty of two per cent. on the exportation of silver may be taken off, as the State of Zealand have, by order of the 19th of July last, permitted the free importation and exportation of silver (one-third being brought to the Mint to be converted into coin), in order to draw trade to themselves. L. J., IX. 472. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of order of the States of Zealand of 19 July 1647. L. J., IX. 473. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Petition of Dame Audrey Littleton, late wife of Sir Adam Littleton, deceased, Sir Fulke Greville, Knight, and Maurice Barrow, Esq. Notwithstanding the House lately decided that a pretended Act of Parliament used to dispossess petitioners of their land was a forgery, yet Isabel Smith, one of the persons sentenced for the same, being permitted to go at large, obtained access to the records of the Court of Wards, foisted in amongst them spurious documents, and then obtained attested copies thereof from Hugh Awdley, the Clerk of the Court. Petitioners pray for an examination into the matter, that reparation may be made to them, and that Isabel Smith may be kept close prisoner. L. J., IX. 474. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Answer of Hugh Awdley to the petition of Dame Audrey Littleton and others. As Clerk of the late Court of Wards, petitioner has custody of the records of the Court, which are kept in a room called the Treasury, at Westminster. About six weeks since, when he was out of town, the Clerk who usually waits in the office told him that a woman wanted copies of some parchments, which the book-bearer had brought to the office, and when petitioner came to town, seeing that the records were but copies of originals, and knowing nothing of the proceedings before Parliament, he ordered copies to be made, and signed them as usual. About ten days later some other persons came to the office and took exception against petitioner for giving the copies in question, and asked him to inquire how the parchments were found, when it appeared that Mrs. Smith had desired to search in the Treasury for some records, and that Wm. Berringer, the book bearer, and John Beseley, an ancient clerk, had gone in, and she with them, as has been usual on occasion of searches, for the clerk's better instruction in finding the thing searched for; Beseley first searched in the lower part of a press, where many old patents, counterparts of leases, and other loose things were placed, but not finding what Mrs. Smith wanted, he told the book-bearer to get the short ladder and to go up and look in the upper part of the press, which he did, but refused to meddle with the writings; upon which Mrs. Smith stepped up the ladder and threw down some loose writings and things out of the upper part of the press, the book-bearer and Beseley both observing what she did, and Beseley then finding the bundle of parchment writings, wished her to forbear throwing any more down; but how long this bundle of parchments had been there, or how they came there, petitioner cannot say. 12 Oct.

3. Answer of Isabel Smith to the petition of Dame Audrey Littleton and others. She was intrusted by Mr. Morris to act for him in recovering his lands, and hearing that papers concerning the estate of Morris and Poyntz had been brought into the Court of Wards, and having obtained a note of them, she went with one of the clerks of the Court, the book-bearer, and another client, into the Treasury office to search for them. Search was made in many places, till the clerk himself said he was weary; she entreated him to go on searching, which he did, till he sat down and bade her search, for he could search no longer. He also told the book-bearer to get a ladder and set it against the press, on which she prayed him to go up, but he, being unwieldy and fat, bade her go up, which she did, and with both hands plucked many parchments out of the press, and threw them down upon the ground; and one of the last, which was at the bottom of the press, was the bundle of writings which concerned Morris, which the clerk perceiving by something written on the back, willed her to come down. The clerk, the book-bearer, and the other client were standing close by the whole time, and looking upon her all the time she was in the room. She denies the charge of forgery, or of shuffling in forged papers, or that she had any parchments about her when she went into the room. One of the clerks, when the documents were read, said that he remembered when they were brought into the Court of Wards. She is an innocent sufferer, and prays the House to release her from imprisonment. 30 Oct.

Oct. [7]. Petition of Mary, the wife of John Poyntz, alias Morris, Isabel Smith, John Harris, and Leonard Darby, to his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax. The petitioners assert that after John Morris, alias Poyntz, has been found by two juries in Essex and two in London to be the right heir to an estate of inheritance which has been in his family since the time of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Adam Littleton has laid claim to it in right of his wife, and has induced John Browne, Clerk of the House of Lords, to combine with him, and, by accusing Morris of forging an Act of Parliament, has, under pretence of searching for the pretended forgery, seized all Morris's evidences of title, and having procured Godfrey Cade by giving him 25*l.* in hand and a promise of 5*l.* more to swear that he forged the Act in question, has succeeded in imprisoning the petitioners by order of the House of Lords, by which they will be utterly ruined, unless his Excellency (as petitioners humbly pray him to do), touched with compassion, will request Parliament by letter to leave them and their adversaries to a free trial at law, and meantime to release them from imprisonment, and remit their fines.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Statement of Henry Holland that Leonard Darby, prisoner in Ludgate, said the House had no power to commit him, the matter being one for Common Law; that Browne was a base fellow and offered Cade, a prisoner in the Fleet, 5*l.* to swear against Morris, Darby, and the rest. Darby is an anabaptist, and is suffered daily to go abroad, and has the charity money of the House, though he ought to be imprisoned elsewhere than in Ludgate, which is intended only for freemen of London for debt.

3. Letter from J[ohn] R[ushworth] to John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments. I pray you appoint some friend of yours to be here with me to-morrow morning by (8) o'clock, and let him have a letter from you to some officer in the army whom you rely on to be here to-morrow at the same time, to pursue such instructions as I shall offer to him on your behalf; you may guess about the business. A strong party is made to-morrow, they will move here; appear not yourself, nor any about you, only send me word what officers amongst us you have interest in; if in none, I shall do that which I hope will be sufficient. You might keep this private, that you have this information from J. R. 13 Oct. 1647.
4. Letter from the officers of Colonel Whaley's regiment and four other regiments, to Sir Thomas Fairfax. They are deeply oppressed in their spirits, wherever they come, by the complaints of the poor against the inroads made on their common rights by prerogative and arbitrary violence; and they are especially affected by the case of John Morris, alias Poyntz, and others, who have been supplanted of their common rights by John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, who has abused and misinformed Parliament, and by accusing Morris and the others of forging an Act of Parliament, has procured a sentence of heavy fine and imprisonment upon them, alleging that no such original Act exists in his office, though since the accusation another original record of the Act has been found amongst the records of the late Court of Wards, of which copies have been obtained under the clerk's hand, while Mr. Browne has further bribed Godfrey Cade to say that he forged the Act in question. They therefore pray his Excellency that, according to the prayer of the accompanying petition from the distressed persons, he would recommend their case by letter to Parliament. [14] Oct. 1647.
5. Copy of preceding.
6. Letter from Colonel Edward Whaley, at Odham, to Sir Thomas Fairfax. I have been with my regiment and read them a copy of the letter pretended to be sent from them and four other regiments this day s'enight to your Excellency. They had not heard of it before, and disown it. Our enemies are trying to make us odious to the kingdom by underhand means. My regiment humbly requests to be publicly vindicated. I questioned the private agitators of my regiment about it; they ingenuously told me they had not acquainted the regiment with it, but it being brought to them by a friend, who desired them to subscribe it, they set their hands to it. I acquainted my regiment likewise with a book lately come to my hands intitled, "The Case of the Army stated." That also I found was put out without their privacy. My regiment is disposed to stand to their first engagements and declarations. They are troubled to remain a burthen to the country for want of pay; but are in some fear lest the King and Parliament should "comply" before they and the kingdom get satisfaction; but they doubt not but that your Excellency, with whom they have so often ventured their lives, will not now neglect them. 21 Oct. 1647.
7. Note from Philip Eyton to Mr. Browne. I rode all this morning for a letter which was sent the General from Colonel Whaley, in vindication of your regiment, whereof I am a member. I stay at the door for the answer.
8. Letter from Elizabeth Cooke to Mr. Browne, or Mr. Throckmorton. Hearing of a book, in which was a petition against you, and hearing you so horribly exclaimed against for your honest dealing with Morris and that crew, I endeavoured to borrow the book, but could not. Yet I know it has gone forth in town and country, and I believe you have seen it, but now it is divulged as if lately done to delude people, who will say that if it were not true no one would dare set it forth; but I and my daughter, knowing the falseness of the petition, were much troubled to hear you so much spoken against. I got a friend of mine to get a great price set upon the book, and by that means got it, and have sent it you, that you may, if you please, show it to the Lords. I formerly heard the report about Cade, and thought I could not but inform you. The petition is at the last leaf of the book.

9. Declaration of Godfrey Cade, that the allegation that he was hired by Mr. Browne to swear that he forged the Act of Parliament is false. 2 Nov. 1647.

Oct. 7. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Henry Miles to the rectory of Dinas, Pembrokeshire. L. J., IX. 474.

Oct. 7. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Joseph Nicholson to the rectory of Plumbland, Cumberland. L. J., IX. 474.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Nicholson has been approved for the cure. 6 Oct.

Oct. 8. Petition of Jeremiah Murdock. After petitioner had suffered twenty days' imprisonment and been put to 20*l.* fees and charges, the House, on the 31st of July, ordered him to be released on his submission, but he has been again taken into custody, for the former business as he supposes. He is quite ready to yield up possession of the close in question to the Earl of Leicester's agents, and prays to be discharged, or to be set at liberty upon bail. L. J., IX. 475.

Oct. 8. Petition of William Heslerton, an infant, by Isabel, his mother and guardian. On the 24th of July last the House ordered the executors of Thomas Heblethwaite, Philip Hunton, and others, to answer the complaint of petitioner, but they have not done so; petitioner prays that they may be sent for by a messenger to answer for their contempt. L. J., IX. 475.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 24 July 1647.

2. Affidavit of service of preceding order upon the respondents.

Oct. 8. Petition of Philip Hunton and others. About nine years ago Wm. Heslerton, an infant by Isabel, his mother and guardian (suing in forma pauperis), questioned the petitioners before the Council at York touching the manor of Weaverthorpe, &c., and after full hearing the cause was dismissed. The plaintiff then preferred a bill in Chancery, which, after full hearing, was also dismissed. By petition to the House, she then obtained a rehearing, when the cause was again dismissed, the Court deciding (23 Nov. 1642) that the plaintiff had no title, colour, or ground for her suit; that had she not been suing in forma pauperis full costs would have been awarded against her, and that if she stirred further in the matter she should pay costs, or be whipped according to the Statute. Nevertheless, she has again petitioned the House to revive the cause. They therefore pray that the judgments in this thrice-heard cause may be confirmed, or that, if the House think fit to hear it, that the plaintiff may be required to give security for costs, and that the petitioners may be allowed to put in their answers in writing, as they live two hundred miles from London, and have already been put to expense greater than the value of the property in question, the greater part of which is now in the hands of Lord Evre, an infant, now in France. L. J., IX. 475.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in Chancery of the 15 Oct. 1640, dismissing the cause.

2. Copy of order in Chancery on rehearing 23 Nov. 1641.

Oct. 8. Certificate from Joshua Crosse and Th. Owen, that there is a fellowship vacant at Lincoln College, and that Mr. Taylor is a very deserving man and fit to live in a collegiate way.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order appointing Taylor a Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford.

that Edmund Castell has been approved for the cure of Woodham Walter, Essex. L. J., IX. 477.

Oct. 12. Petition of John Johnston, merchant, John Raule has brought a writ of error to prevent execution on a judgment obtained by petitioner in the Court of King's Bench; issue is joined, and petitioner prays that a day may be appointed for the hearing. L. J., IX. 477.

Oct. 12. Petition of Hope Sherrard. In August last petitioner was presented by the Commissioners of the Great Seal to the vicarage of St. Clement's in Sandwich, Kent, and obtained an order from the House for his institution and induction, but John Elgate, one of the churchwardens, refuses to take any notice of the order, while the mayor of the town will not assist petitioner in obtaining possession of the vicarage or of the key of the church, and countenanced a riotous assembly opposed to petitioner. He prays that the offenders may be called upon to answer for their conduct, that he may be protected in quiet possession of the living, and reparation be made him for his sufferings.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Hope Sherrard in support of his petition. L. J., IX. 477.

2. Testimonial from divers of the parish of St. Clement's in Sandwich, that Sherrard is painful and profitable in his ministry, of pious, unblameable, and peaceable conversation, and a great blessing to the town; and if Mr. Henry Forstall, who has incensed the rude seamen and others against him, showed himself as much for Mr. Sherrard as he does against him, there would be no opposition to him.

Oct. 12. Petition of Henry Pugh to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords. Petitioner holds a presentation from his Lordship to the rectory of Llanystymdyw, in the county of Carnarvon, but is most rudely debarred from possession by a prevailing gentleman, and his servants, in that parish. He prays for an order for removal of the obstructions which at present detain him from his rights.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Henry Pugh, that when he went to take possession of the rectory and parish church he was hindered and obstructed by Morrice Owen and others, servants of Wm. Lloyd. 7 Oct. L. J., IX. 477.

Oct. 12. Petition of Sir Henry Myldemay, of Moulsham, Knight, claiming the title and dignity of Lord Fitzwalter. The hearing of his case is fixed for the 19th, and he is prisoner in the Fleet, and cannot therefore properly prepare for it. He prays that a writ of Habeas Corpus may be granted him, that he may the better instruct his counsel, and prepare for the hearing. L. J., IX. 477.

Oct. 12. Order fixing the hearing of the cause for the 7th of December. L. J., IX. 477.

Oct. 12. Draft of orders for some of the Committee of the army to go to the army, with power to treat. L. J., IX. 480. In extenso.

Oct. 12. Draft ordinance to bring in the arrears of the assessments for Sir Thomas Fairfax's army. L. J., IX. 480. In extenso.

Oct. 13. Draft order for Mr. Wheeler and others to dispose of the money collected for the Protestants come out of Ireland. L. J., IX. 482. In extenso.

Oct. 14. Petition of divers parishioners of the parish of Clement Danes without Temple Bar, in the name of themselves, and many others. In 1643 the rectory was sequestered from Dr. Richard Dukeson, who had deserted his cure and joined the King's party at Oxford, and Richard Vines and Daniel Evance were appointed to officiate the cure, to the great good and spiritual comfort of the parish; but now Mr. Evance is to be settled in the rectory of Colbourne, in the Isle of Wight, and Mr. Vines can only preach when his attendance on the Assembly keeps him in town, so that petitioners are destitute of a settled minister, whilst they conceive that there is great necessity of an able godly pastor to undertake the cure of so considerable and populous a place, so near the City of London, and which has more than ordinary influence into all parts of the kingdom by reason of many lodgers, and several Inns of Chancery in the parish. They pray that the church and rectory may be vacated of Dr. Dukeson, that by his removal some learned and pious minister may be there settled. L. J., IX. 482.

Oct. 14. Petition of William Allen. He complains that John Baker, after procuring by false information, orders from the House to dispossess him of two ships, the Boxtree and Pearl Hoy, which he bought and paid for three years before, has broken those orders, which only gave him power to recover 400*l.* that Baker is an alien and of lost fortune, and intends to fly the kingdom, and has never obeyed the order of the House of the 28th of September, that he should answer a former complaint of petitioner, who therefore prays that the ships and goods may be redelivered to him, and he will give good security to pay Baker anything that may be found due to him. Petitioner therefore prays that the Commissioners of Customs may be directed to send out one hundred and twenty nags and forty steers, by bill of store, as usually, for New England. L. J., IX. 482.

Oct. 18. Letter from Dr. Thomas Hill (Master of Trinity College, Cambridge) to the Earl of Manchester.

Never had I occasion to trouble your Lordship with such sad complaints; were I not imprisoned with sickness I should lie at the Parliament doors, petitioning them to use their power to recover that which was lately so flourishing and is now a withering University by such a set of new officers lately chosen. The two enclosed papers will represent our condition. One of the University in general: we can think of no better remedy than a commission to some of the honest neighbour justices to come upon the place and inquire how the Directory is observed? what fellows are in places of trust? who have assisted the King with money or plate? what scandals in life? whether there be not some who have been in the King's army? and have now returned to their fellowships? The other paper concerns the late choice of officers. A proper remedy would be to suspend Mr. Cawdrey, proctor, from the execution of his place till he has given the House satisfaction. There are three great matters against him: a paper under his own hand subscribing money for the King; his accepting his place contrary to the order of Oct. 4; his acting contrary to the Directory. A vice-proctor and moderators for the schools should be appointed, and then the Committee might examine other things at their leisure. God hath often helped us by your Lordship's means, and if in this plunge we have relief it will add new life to a drooping University. A great cause of our losing ground is the absence of the heads; malignant presidents act in their absence.

Annexed :—

1. A representation of the condition of Cambridge. Though so many fellows were ejected, yet much the greater part, both of Trinity, St. John's, and diverse other colleges are professed malignants: Many who absented themselves have been encouraged by the late differences between the city and the army to return. Endeavour is made to work the University into its former model, Common Prayer is read, bishops preached up, and masters put in by Parliament called usurpers and thieves. The malignants have already hooked the greatest part of University power into their hands, so that they can deny degrees, and stop any motion made by the Vice-Chancellor. They even hope to make a Vice-Chancellor for their own purpose. By these means the well-affected youths will be discouraged, the indifferent drawn over, and the profane emboldened. It is therefore desired that inquiry may be made—who have assisted against Parliament in the late war? who are scandalous in life? who have been in the King's army, and have now retired to their fellowships? that some means other than tendering the Covenant may be devised for keeping malignants out of places of trust, and that ejected fellows may be prevented from resorting to the University.

2. An humble representation of the choice and carriage of the new proctors and taxers in Cambridge. Mr. Cawdrey and Mr. Moore have been chosen proctors, and must be accepted unless a majority of the heads of colleges take exception by a certain day; and through the absence of the heads this cannot be done. Cawdrey and Moore question the Vice-Chancellor's power to tender them the Covenant, and meantime petition the General on the subject, pretending tenderness of conscience, and so obtain a letter from his Excellency that it should not be pressed upon them. Notwithstanding the ordinance against delinquents' taking office, Mr. Cawdrey, who it appears subscribed money for the King, was not to be put off. Though these proctors pretend to the General that they are not disaffected to Parliament, yet they are no sooner in their places than they begin to practise to choose a caput senatus for their own purpose, and so hinder whatever the Vice-Chancellor propounds; they will choose vice-proctors and moderators like themselves. Mr. Cawdrey has lately publicly married persons with a Common Prayer-book, and with a ring; and the proctors and taxers, when they come to St. Mary's, fall on their knees to their private devotions, contrary to the Directory, to the great encouragement of the disaffected and the great grief of the godly, that they should revive what had been almost wrought out.

Affidavit of David Maddock and John Wilcox, that about the end of July 1646 Thomas Deacon, with divers soldiers and mariners, boarded a vessel called the "Jonas," then lying at Swansea, and forcibly took out of her about twelve tons of lead the property of Mrs. Frances Thomas, and said they had an order from Parliament, authorising them so to do. 6 July 1647.

Oct. 20. Draft order of the House of Commons for the discharge of Hugh Hubbert, arrested when obeying a summons to attend a Committee. C. J., V. 338. In extenso.

Oct. 21. Certificate from the Committee of Paul's, that the mansion house, gardens, and outlets, &c., belonging thereto, having been settled upon Dr. Cornelius Burgess for life, Wm. Parsons and others have trespassed on the premises, partly by building sheds or tenements upon or against the walls, and partly by making new holes and windows in sundry places towards the Doctor's house and gardens, to the prejudice of the Doctor and all who should hereafter enjoy the House, the offenders have often been sent for, but refuse either to come or to make good their promises of redress.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Dr. Cornelius Burges, public lecturer in Paul's, London. When the Houses of Parliament conferred on him the lectures in Paul's, disposing of the vicarage of Watford, where he had spent upwards of 400l. in building the vicarage house, they ordained (23rd April 1645) that he should have 400l. per annum, and the house of Dr. Steward, late Dean of Paul's; but there was no provision in the ordinance to enable petitioner to punish trespassers by ordinary course of law, in consequence of which several persons have lately committed trespasses. He prays that Wm. Parsons and the other persons mentioned in the above certificate may be proceeded against, that he may be empowered to plead the ordinance above mentioned in evidence, and that he may have a grant of the House, under the Great Seal, that Parliament may be no more troubled.

2. Printed copy of the ordinance of 23 April 1645.

Oct. 22. Petition of the parishioners of Old, in the county of Northampton. On the death of their late minister the House put in Frederick Schloer. The petitioners were ready to receive him as a minister fitting to instruct them in the ways of God, and have endeavoured to be edified by him, but he is an alien and a German born, and they cannot understand his language; that they might, however, part friendly with him, he and they agreed to refer the matter to Sir John Dryden and others, members of the House of Commons, in whose presence Mr. Schloer promised that, having the full year's profit of the living, he would be gone by Thomas's Day 1646; he received the profits, but refused to go, and still continues there and vexes petitioners with suits about tithes; they pray that Schloer may be removed, and a godly, orthodox divine be placed amongst them. Oct. 22. Petition of the Doctors of the Civil Laws.

The house called the Doctors' Commons has anciently been and is the College House, or Hospitium, for the Civilians, wherein the judges and advocates in that profession have been used to have their informations and debates, and to show their books and argue upon the Civil Law and Law of Nations, for the discussion of the matters and cases there happening to come in question; and for their better accommodation have had particular chambers and studies there, in like manner as the sergeants at the Sergeant's Inn, and as the benchers and barristers have at the four Inns of Court, and have always been exempt from all manner of taxes for their chambers and studies to any Ward in the City of London, just as the sergeants, benchers, and barristers are exempt; and when ship money was set on foot, some attempting to assess the civilians for Doctors Commons, they appealed to the Privy Council, and the Board decided that they were free, as appears by the annexed copy of the order made. Castle Baynard Ward has, however, lately made an assessment for the maintenance of the army, upon the particular civilians of the Doctors' Commons for their chambers and studies, though the civilians have for some years been divested of the main benefit of their profession, and have most of them houses or places of abode elsewhere, where they have discharged their assessments. Petitioners pray that they may be freed from payment of this undue assessment, and that their privileges may be continued to them as to the Sergeants' Inns, and Inns of Court. L. J., IX, 491.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Privy Council of the 13th of March 1634-5, exempting the house called the Doctors' Commons from the assessment for ship money.

Oct. 23. Petition of Henry Forstall, Mayor of the town and port of Sandwich, and John Elgate, churchwarden of St. Clement's parish there. Whilst the parishioners thought that the right of presentation to their parish rested with the Committee for plundered ministers, Mr. Hope Sherrard, who, on account of his inability to preach and his ill-affections, knew that he would never gain the consent of any considerable part of the parishioners, by secret and indirect means obtained presentation from the Commissioners of the Great Seal. The parishioners immediately appealed to the Earl of Manchester, who promised that the grant should not pass the Great Seal till he had informed the Earl of Warwick, who well knew many of the parishioners, but Mr. Sherrard notwithstanding, by his secret ways, procured the passing of the grant, and an order of induction from the House; and for not permitting him to take possession till they had petitioned the House, the petitioners have been sent for; it was far from their hearts to do anything in contempt of the House, and they pray to be discharged, that they may attend their places and affairs in the country. L. J., IX, 491.

Oct. 23. Petition of Maurice Thompson and Company, praying for an order to the Governor of Virginia to permit them to transport about a hundred oxen from Virginia to Barbados, where they are erecting sugar works. L. J., IX, 491.

Oct. 23. Petition of William Wall, merchant. Having sustained great losses by sea and land, petitioner was unable to pay his debts, and his creditors hold his whole estate by commission of bankruptcy. All the creditors are desirous that he should be set at liberty to help them to get in his debts, save one, Arthur Terry, whose debt is only 170l., in part paid and the rest secured, but he has kept petitioner two years in prison, to his ruin and the general loss of the creditors. Petitioner prays for relief. L. J., IX, 491.

Prays that the estate of Richard Middlemore, sequestered by ordinance of the 11th of June 1644, may still continue sequestered for payment of Edgbaston garrison, though Richard Middlemore is dead, and his son Robert now claims the estate. L. J., IX. 492. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of ordinance of 11 June 1644.

2. Petition of Colonel John Fox. Robert Middlemore not having been proved delinquent has been put in possession of the estates at Edgbaston, &c., but he is now sequestered by the Committee of Sequestration, and petitioner therefore prays that he may be repossessed of the estates, or receive such a sum out of them as may be agreed upon. (Undated).

3. Draft of an ordinance in accordance with prayer of preceding petition. (Undated).

Oct. 25. Petition of Wm. Allen. Complains that John Baker has disobeyed every order of the House about the two ships, the Box Tree and the Pearl Hoy, of which he still keeps possession, and which he is trying to sell; if he succeeds he will depart the country. Petitioner prays to be put in possession of the ships, which he lawfully bought and paid for more than four years ago; he will give good security to pay Baker any debt he can prove. L. J., IX. 494.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Lawrence Dishington in support of preceding. 16 Oct.

2. Further affidavit of Dishington. 21 Oct.

Oct. 26. Letter from Dr. Thomas Hill, from Trinity College, Cambridge, to the Earl of Manchester. I perceive our brethren at London do somewhat blame us for letting the proctors and taxers pass; they judge of things at a distance, and I am confident when they receive our letters they will afford much satisfaction. We will still conflict, and wait upon God for help and further purging of the University, which indeed we most aimed at in our last address. I suppose some of our brethren will wait upon your Lordship, and present our thoughts for an expedient. We have been bold to draw a copy of an ordinance for afternoon preaching, which will be of admirable advantage if procured. Mr. Browne will tender it to your Lordship. Our next plunge is for a Vice-Chancellor. My ague will protect me, and, I hope, cast it upon one so much fitter, worthy Mr. Arrowsmith.

Oct. 26. Petition of Hans (John) Baker. He was unable to obey the order of the House, that he should put in security in the Admiralty Court, because Wm. Allen refused any security offered. He prays that the Judge of the Admiralty may be ordered to appraise the two ships, and he will give security accordingly.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 25 Oct.

2. Answer of John Baker to the petition of Wm. Allen. He denies that Allen lent money to Deliques and the other Frenchmen, or bought the ships from them, but says that he, the respondent, acted as master of the ships for the Frenchmen, and when they would not pay him his wages, he applied to the House, and was referred to the Admiralty, where he obtained a judgment for 408*l.*, in which court Allen was made a party. Allen never got possession of the ships till he did so by forcible means, when respondent was attending the House; as to Allen's charge, that respondent, while claiming 408*l.*, has possessed himself in the ship and goods of 1,200*l.*, he says that the ships and goods were valued, in 1646, by commission from the Admiralty, at only 156*l.* 18*s.* 0*d.*, and there were no goods on board, but old ropes, and a few coals for ballast. Petitioner is no alien, but a free denizen by letters patent, and has paid more scot and lot to Parliament than ever Allen has for ten years. Allen has exhibited a Bill in Chancery merely for vexation against respondent, who has answered, and is ready to go to a hearing if Allen would proceed; but if Allen would pay him the 408*l.* proved due for wages, with costs of suit, he would release his claim upon the ships, and he prays that an order may be made to this effect.

3. Copy of order for Baker to answer Allen's petition. 14 Oct.

4. Copy of valuation of the Pearl Hoy of eighty-ton burthen, aged eleven years or thereabouts, at 87*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.* Copy of valuation of the Box Tree, being very old and not fitting for anything but to break up, at 69*l.* 3*s.* 0*d.* 18 Sept. 1646.

necessaries, besides the want of pay; desires that reinforcements may be sent him, for if money and provisions of all kinds were sent over with a commander-in-chief there would not be a considerable enemy left in the field at the end of six months.

Annexed:—

1. A diary of the proceedings of the Leinster army, from the 2nd of October 1647 unto the 20th of the same. Col. Jones hearing that Owen Roe O'Neale, the rebels' Ulster General, was drawing towards him, committed the City of Dublin to the care of the Earl of Kildare, and marched himself towards Trim, and, being joined by reinforcements on the way, came on the 5th within one mile of that town; on the 6th he summoned Castle Rickard, which surrendered, and several other garrisons also. Port Leicester, a place secured on two sides by bogs, and on the other two sides by the Boyne and another river, was next summoned, but refused to surrender; the following day, however, when the battery began to play, the besieged desired quarter, which was denied them, as a lesson to others; after more shots one square of the castle fell down, and with it some of the besieged; on which some fled and escaped, while all who were found in the place were put to the sword; on the 8th the army took and burnt the Castle of Ballintogher and many other places, and came the same day to Athboy, about five miles from Trim, a place of strength, fortified with strong buildings, the ordinary houses being of stone, and there being besides six castles, with a church and steeple commanding the streets of the town, all manned by the rebels, with colours of defiance flying; but some men uncommanded having carried an old gatehouse about carbine shot from the town, reinforcements were sent to their support, and the town shortly carried by storm, the troops in the castles surrendering upon quarter for their lives only; nineteen officers, and three hundred common soldiers, besides a great number of prisoners, men, women, and children, inhabitants of the place, were taken. Owen Roe had promised to relieve the town in two days, and the taking it so quickly was little less than miraculous; on the following days various castles surrendered, and a prey of cows and sheep was brought in, a great relief to the army. On the 12th Bellahoe [Bellah], a very strong castle commanding all that part of the country, was summoned, but refused to yield. However, Col. Fleming, the commander of the place, surrendered when the ordnance, which had been delayed by the difficulty of the way, came in sight. On the 14th the army marched by a dangerous ford under the Castle of Bellahoe into Monaghan, where Col. Monck with the Ulster forces parted from the Governor to reduce some places thereabouts, the Governor himself with the Leinster forces marching into Cavan. On the 15th Col. Monck reduced two islands on a lough near Carrickmacross, and took a great store of meal, corn, and other provisions. Having meantime reduced several forts, the Governor on the 18th dismissed the Drogheda forces, returning himself the following day to Dublin. The weather all this time had been unusually favourable, a great matter for the soldiers, many of whom are out of clothes, most of them bare-footed and bare-legged, and without tents for shelter; but now, when Owen Rowe is preparing to look out and visit our garrisons, the weather has changed making the rivers unpassable and the ways impossible for ordnance. The effect of these late operations has been very important, as the reduction of so many strongholds enables the army to sit free, and has opened up passages into the counties of Westmeath, Cavan, and Monaghan; while the corn of the enemy has been either destroyed or taken. See Rushworth, IV. ii. 866.

His cause against Edward Davis has been in part heard, and he has removed the proceedings in equity by writ of error to the House. Oct. 28. Petition of William Howe, Minister of God's word at Gedney, in the parts of Holland and county of Lincoln. Petitioner, placed in the sequestered living by ordinance of Parliament, has for almost four years laboured to promote the work of reformation, not without some success, and has met with no considerable opposition, until in August last, under colour of a forged declaration from His Majesty and Sir Thomas Fairfax, William Browne and others have refused to pay their tithes, and petitioner has failed in attempting to compel them. He prays that they may be sent for and made exemplary for their contempts.

Oct. 28. Petition of Christopher Tayler, defendant in a writ of error at the suit of Andrew Collins. Prays for a short day for the hearing of the cause.

Oct. 29. Petition of Thomas Hoyle of the City of York. When that city was under the power of the King's army, Nicholas Towers, a grand malignant, forcibly entered petitioner's house, and carried away his goods to the value of 200l.; for this petitioner sued Towers in the King's Bench, and recovered judgment for 120l. and costs of suit, but Towers, only for delay, brought a writ of error, which is now ready to be argued before the House. Petitioner prays that a short day may be appointed for the hearing, and that, as Towers lives at York, petitioner may only be required to give notice to his attorney in the King's Bench. L. J., IX. 504.

Oct. 30. Copy of order putting off the hearing of the case for a fortnight.

Annexed:—

1. Paper respecting the case, why Mr. Cawdrey, could not be dealt with by the University authorities.

Oct. 30. Petition of the warden, ministers, and moneyers of His Majesty's Mint, in the Tower of London. By various charters, &c. from the time of Edward I. petitioners have been and still are incorporated and privileged, both in their persons and their lands, from all manner of impositions, taxes, and burthens, ordinary and extraordinary, because of their necessary and constant attendance on the Mint, granted to them on account of the importance of coin, and as part of their wages, their salaries without these privileges being inconsiderable. This matter was some years since referred by His Majesty to the House of Commons, by whom it was referred to a Committee, and during their consideration thereof, by order of 24th of March 1642-3, no assessment was to be levied upon the petitioners.

Nov. 2. Application for preceding order.

Nov. 2. Draft judgment in the suit of Lady Littleton and others against Isabel Smith for forging an Act of Parliament, and other documents. The judgment declares the documents to be forgeries, and adjudges them to be cancelled and vacated. L. J., IX. 521. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of preceding, and of the judgment upon John Morris, alias Poyntz, Isabel Smith, and others in the same matter, on the 21st of Sept. 1647, and of two affidavits in the same matter.

2. Letter from Wm. Littleton, at Northokenden Hall, to John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments. Since your going out of town, as I went to hire a coach for our counsel to go to Chelmsford, I heard from the coachmen that Morris and his company have hired at least five or six coaches to go to Chelmsford, where is expected the greatest trial in England, as the words of the coachmen were. Yesterday morning some of Morris's crew took their journey from the Queen's Head tavern, in Smithfield. The noise of this is all over that part of the town. I entreat you let my brother have the certificates which were delivered to you when the Lords passed their last judgment. There will be a spare place in the coach, and if you please to fill it you may hear yourself fully vindicated from the aspersions of these unheard of impudent rogues. 21 [] , at 6 in the morning, 1647.

3. Paper of doggerl verses about the cause.

Nov. 2. Order for George Powell to be Comptroller of the Customs at Milford. L. J., IX. 508. In extenso.

Nov. 2. Copy of report from the Committee for His Majesty's Revenue, that in their opinion the receivers and bailiffs mentioned in the annexed list ought to be confirmed in their places. L. J., IX. 508. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. List of receivers and bailiffs.

2. Draft of proposed ordinance for confirming them in their places.

Nov. 3. Petition of Roger Sutton. He is a servant and steward to Lord Craven, but has been arrested at the suit of Wm. Smith, for a pretended battery committed almost two years since, and forced to give bail to procure his enlargement. He prays for privilege as a peer's servant. L. J., IX. 509.

Nov. 3. Petition of John Edisbury. Prays to be admitted to the office of prothonotary and clerk of the Crown of the counties of Denbigh and Montgomery, to which he is entitled in reversion under letters patent, upon the determination of the interest of Kenrick Eytton and Richard Lloyd, one a delinquent who has compounded under the articles for the surrender of Denbigh, and the other a person excluded by name from pardon in the propositions offered to the King, and whose interests are determined by ordinance of 25 Dec. 1643. L. J., IX. 510.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Copy of ordinance of 25 Dec. 1643, which absolutely determines and makes void the interest in their places of all officers and clerks of the Courts of Record at Westminster, who have absented themselves from their posts, and taken any part against the Parliament.

Nov. 3. Papers relating to the case of Wm. Corbett against Richard Hunt, in which Corbett appeals against a decree in Chancery founded on a report of certain merchants upon the matter in dispute, which is a question of merchants' accounts, Corbett and Hunt having been partners in business. The cause was heard and dismissed this day. L. J., IX. 510. (Fourteen papers.)

Nov. 3. Petition of Solomon Clarke, defendant in a writ of error in which Francis Cole is plaintiff, praying for a short day for the hearing. L. J., IX. 510.

Nov. 3. An humble remonstrance on the behalf of the merchants strangers, in which they pray to be exempted from extraordinary charges, and that they may enjoy the benefit of the laws and privileges formerly granted unto them for their safety and encouragement in trade. L. J., IX. 510. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of merchant strangers. They complain that they are bound to pay one-fourth more custom duty on their goods than the English merchants, in consideration of which they ought to be free from all other taxations, but they are nevertheless forced to pay all and more than the English—double subsidies, Plymouth duty, double dues on the manufactures of wool, lead, and tin, a half per cent for the redemption of the captives in Algiers, 30*s.* per tun more than the English on wines, while no abatement of 15 per cent. is made to them as to the English for ready money; the twelve months allowed for re-exporting goods without payment of custom has been reduced to eight months; they pay double custom on coals laden in French ships; they alone pay an impost of about 20 per cent. of their value on pilchards, while in London they have to pay package and other duties from which the English are free. They are also tied to employ packers and porters, who buy their places from the City and who make petitioners pay twice as much as the English, and for all that do but serve them at their pleasure; they also pay more than the English for cockets and bills; French ships have more duties to pay than English, and may not bring their wines to London, while the English merchants in France pay no more than the French. Petitioners pray for relief in these matters. (Undated.)

2. Copy of preceding.

3. Another copy.

4. Particular grievances in the rates imposed on goods exported by merchants strangers in the case of woollen manufactures, lead, tin, and pilchards. They are ready to pay one-fourth more than English merchants on other goods, but to pay after the rates now newly set is to pay double. A table of duties is given. (Undated.)

5. Grievances in the City duties, the exorbitant fees taken for portorage, package, &c. (Undated.)

6. Copy of preceding.

7. Another copy.

8. Some further reasons represented to the Right Honourable the Lords and Commons in Parliament on the behalf of merchants strangers. (Undated.)

9. Draft order of the Committee to whom the complaint of the merchants strangers was referred for the production before them of tables of the fees for package and other City duties. 20 Nov. 1647.

10. Another draft of preceding.

Nov. 3. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Ralph Poole has been approved for the cure of Bevington, alias Babington [Bebington], Cheshire. See L. J., IX. 508.

Nov. 3. Note from Sir John Maynard to the Lieutenant of the Tower, to let him know that John Lilborne is to attend the Committee appointed to consider his complaint on Friday next.

Nov. '3. Letter from Dr. Thomas Hill, at Trinity College, Cambridge, to the Earl of Manchester:—"I shall no trouble your Lordship no more as Vice-Chancellor, yet whilst I live I shall acknowledge your noble favour in protecting and assisting me these two years, added to all the rest. These bearers, Mr. Allott and Mr. Mowbray, two of the fellows of St. John's College, have the paper of subscribing money tendered to the heads and myself, and heard how far Mr. Cawdrey and Mr. Hutton owned their hands, so can Mr. Whichcott and Mr. Seaman, who are in London, witness. Here is the paper about his protestation in their chapel. His using the Common Prayer-book they will evidence if he deny it. My Lord, the proctor being suspended, and not having power to depose any, we not being able to have a congregation or to choose a new Vice-Chancellor without two proctors, I took the boldness to depose one pro hac vice, in which case of necessity I hope I shall be protected. I hope within 24 hours Mr. Arrowsmith will be Vice-Chancellor, though I could not keep myself from being pricked with him, yet in this my agony may prove felix febris in persuading men to spare me. We cannot as yet find Mr. Hutton, of St. John's Coll. (not Emanuel Coll. as Mr. Browne wrote), but I will watch for him. Be pleased to excuse your humble, crazy servant."

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from Wm. Allot and others, that though Mr. Cawdrey, Mr. Winterbourne, Mr. Hutton, and other fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge, were, by order of the Committee of the Association, confirmed by the Lords in Parliament, prohibited from voting as deputy seniors, or bearing any office in the College, yet at a college meeting, when they were commanded to withdraw, they formally protested against whatever should be concluded in their absence, and afterwards denied the passing of the College Seal to a presentation lawfully granted to one of the fellows, on the ground that they were not present at the meeting for the grant thereof. 2 Nov.

Nov. 3. Letter from John Arrowsmith, at St. John's College, Cambridge, to the Earl of Manchester. He regrets that the Earl's patience should be exercised by the divisions of their College, but as they draw forth his goodness, they will further his account at the great day. He feels it his duty to make known that the paper of subscriptions, which is the grand evidence on the part of the plaintiffs and concerns most of their opposites, was found some months since by a workman employed in taking down shelves in Dr. Beal's study. As the signatures were confessed when the paper was first produced in evidence before the Vice-Chancellor, the writer deemed it unnecessary to make this circumstance known, wishing to avoid odium; but now, as some pretend that the paper is forged, he dares not conceal it, and leaves the Earl to make what use he pleases of the discovery.

Nov. 4. Petition of Hope Sherrard. Petitioner has been presented by the Commissioners of the Great Seal to the vicarage of St. Clement, in Sandwich, Kent, and holds an order from the House for his institution and induction, but the key of the church is kept from him by the mayor and churchwarden, whilst the key of the vicarage house, though often demanded, is detained by the sequestrators, who are making all speed to thresh out and sell away the corn belonging to petitioner, that they may put the money into their own pockets, and use petitioner's own money in wearing him out whilst trying to obtain his right. The mayor and sequestrators combine in this, and advise the parishioners to dispose of other profits belonging to petitioner. He prays that if the keys are any longer refused him he may break open the doors of the church and vicarage house and take possession thereof, and that the sequestrators may be ordered to give an account of the profits of the living since the death of the last incumbent. L. J., IX. 511.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from divers of the parishioners of Clements, in Sandwich. From long knowledge of Mr. Sherrard, they earnestly desire that he may be settled as their minister, for to allow his enemies to triumph would tend to the extreme saddening of divers of the most sober and religious party in Sandwich, who have subscribed a petition of the 18th of August 1647 to the Committee for plundered ministers, an ample testimonial to Mr. Sherrard.

2. Petition of divers inhabitants of the town and port of Sandwich, in the county of Kent, to the Committee for plundered ministers. Mr. Hope Sherrard, minister of Peter's, in Sandwich, whom they have known for some years past for his orthodoxy, piety, and affection to Parliament, has had an augmentation granted him of 60*l.* per annum out of the rents and profits of the Dean and Chapter of Christchurch, Canterbury; the Committee at Maidstone appointed the same to be paid out of the parsonage of Eastry, belonging to the Dean and Chapter, but for upwards of a year the tenant of the parsonage has refused to pay the rent to the collector. Petitioners pray that the tenant may be ordered to pay the rent, or the collector be empowered to take it by distraint. 18 August 1647.

3. Certificate from some of the parishioners of St. Clement's, of their desire to have Mr. Sherrard as their minister. 19 October 1647.

4. Affidavit of Lawrence Saffry, one of the churchwardens, that John Elgar refused to give up the key of the church to Mr. Sherrard, and that the Mayor collected a number of the townspeople to oppose his induction. 21 October 1647.

5. Affidavit of John Swan, minister of Ickham, Kent, to the same effect as preceding. 23 October 1647.

6. Another petition of Sherrard, praying that if the keys of the church and vicarage are refused him any longer, he may be authorised to break open any doors to get possession of them. (Undated.)

Nov. 4. Petition of Sir Wm. Russell and others. Good security has now been given for the 750*l.* paid into Court in the suit between petitioners and Lenthall, Marston and others, and the petitioners therefore pray that the money may be redelivered to them. L. J., IX. 511.

Nov. 4. Petition of John Marston. Prays that the money deposited, due to him by legal sentence, may no longer be detained from him, or that his prisoners in execution, released by their Lordships' power against law or without precedent, may be restored in statu quo, until a final conclusion of the matter.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the case ex parte Lenthall et al.

Nov. 4. Draft order approving the Articles of Exeter. L. J., IX. 511. In extenso.

ing the Lords to concur with the Commons in confirming them; and further to declare that all judges and other officers shall take notice of them, and that all compounders shall be discharged from payment of the 20th and 5th parts of their estates, and may exercise their professions. (Undated.)

Nov. 5. Petition of Christopher Taylor, lessee of Lady Campian. By the annexed order the House directed Mr. Justice Rolle, to consider the state of the case, grounded on matters suggested in the petition mentioned in the order; he desires that it may also be referred to the judge to certify whether the suggestions are not such as by law ought not to be allowed. L. J., IX. 511.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of order upon a petition of the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, as the Governors of the Hospital of Bethlehem, and Andrew Collins, their lessee, referring the matter to Mr. Justice Rolle to certify the true state of the case, and directing that the hearing of the writ of error between Collins and Taylor shall be put off until the judge shall have made his certificate. 30 Oct. 1647. L. J., IX. 504.

2. Petition of Elizabeth Campian and Christopher Taylor. The order for putting off the hearing of the writ of error was obtained on frivolous grounds; pray that a speedy day may be assigned for the hearing. (Undated.)

3. Another copy of the order of 30 Oct. 1647.

[Nov. 6.] Petition of the poor inhabitants of Taynton, in the county of Gloucester. The House was informed by their former petition that the church and minister's house at Taynton were totally burnt by the King's forces; they now pray that both may be rebuilt on a piece of glebe land in the midst of the parish, as the former church was inconveniently placed at least a mile or two from most of the parishioners, by which many, especially in winter, were hindered from partaking of the ordinances. See L. J., IX. 512.

Nov. 8. Draft of additional propositions to be offered to the King for suppressing papists, &c. L. J., IX. 513. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate of his delinquency. C. J., V. 186. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Answer of Arthur Tirrey, or Terrey, to the petition of Wm. Wall. He alleges the creditors do not hold all Wall's estate, but that Wall has money in other mens' names. He denies that all the creditors desire Wall's discharge, or that his own debt was the result of extortion; he has no wish to ruin Wall, but only wants his money.

Nov. 8. Petition of John Baker. About eight days ago, on a petition of Wm. Allen complaining that petitioner had not put in security concerning the two ships, the "Boxtree" and "Pearl Hoy," pursuant to the order of the House, though he was prevented so doing by Allen's intimidating his sureties, petitioner has been taken into custody by the Black Rod, and arrested by Allen on an action for 1,000*l.* He is ready to prove all his allegations against Allen and his confederates, and prays that a day may be fixed for effectually hearing the case.

Annexed :—

1. Affidavit of Edward Williams and another that no goods have been taken out of the two ships since the 25th Oct., for the hatches have been nailed up, and no one aboard but a boy of about twelve years old. 29 Oct. 1647.

upon him, instead of the place he has lost by the voting down of the Court of Wards and Liveries.

Nov. 9. Draft ordinance to confer the post of Customer of the Port of Rye upon Gore. L. J., IX. 515.

Nov. 9. Draft letter from the Assembly of Divines intended to be sent to the Assembly in Scotland. They thank God for the brotherly union of the two nations in the cause of religion, and for the assistance given to the Assembly by the Commissioners from Scotland, by which they have finished and presented to Parliament the Confession of Faith, Directory for public worship, Form of Church Government, and Catechism, in which, though unprofitable servants, they have been faithful in bearing witness against the common errors and corruptions of the times. In parting with Mr. Samuel Rutherford, who is about to return to Scotland, they can but pray for the increase of the number of such burning and shining lights. The Commissioners' affairs are yet in a dark condition, and for not improving the beginnings of Reformation they are still encompassed with many difficulties, and that they trust in God that all these may be removed, and that the two nations may serve God with one heart and in one way, as the two Assemblies have covenanted and sworn.

This draft was presented to the House for approbation, but was not approved, the Speaker returning this answer: That the Lords do not like the draft of this letter, but if the Assembly of Divines here will frame a letter expressing nothing but courtesies, civilities, and respects to the General Assembly of Scotland and to Mr. Rutherford, and tender the same to this House, their Lordships will consider of it. L. J., IX. 516.

Nov. 9. Letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax, at Turbham, to the Earl of Manchester. He formerly applied to the Earl on behalf of some poor men of the Isle of Axholme, then sent up in custody, when, by an order of the House, they were released and left to proceed at law. This they have done, and are now ready for trial before the Barons in the Exchequer. He prays the Earl to recommend the case to the Barons for a speedy trial. See L. J., IX. 518.

Nov. 10. Letter from Colonel Michael Jones, at Dublin, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords, stating that the rebels had advanced to within five miles of Dublin, but that he had driven them back to the Boyne, and requesting supplies for his army. L. J., IX. 537. In extenso.

[Nov. 11.] Petition of the inhabitants within the manor of Epworth, in the Isle of Axholme, in the County of Lincoln. The petitioners are now ready for trial at Common Law, touching their ancient right to certain commonable grounds, which the participants or drainers of Hatfield Chase tried to gain from them about fifteen or sixteen years since by many indirect means; but when they lately moved to set down the cause for hearing, they were told that there was a message from some of their Lordships to prevent it. They pray the House to consider the various orders in the cause, and the vast expense they have been at, and to permit them to proceed to a hearing without delay. L. J., IX. 518.

Nov. 11. Petition of Richard Elmhirst. Complaints that Henry Steward, having obtained an ordinance for payment of 1,500*l.* to himself, and 400*l.* to James Gray, out of the sequestered estate of Sir George Radcliffe, further obtained an order on the 12th of May last to give him possession of the manors of Farburne and Coulton, in Yorkshire; and on the 21st of Sept. last another order (on pretence of contempt of the former order) directing the tenants to pay their rents to him; petitioner, in answer to the order of the 12th May, has laid claim to one moiety of the manors, and is ready to prove his title. He has himself compounded and paid 320*l.* for this moiety at Goldsmiths' Hall, and prays that he and his tenants may not be disturbed in, much less divested of, their possession without legal trial. L. J., IX. 518.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Ayloffe. Petitioner is informed that Richard Fanshawe, His Majesty's patentee for the office of Remembrancer in the Exchequer, is by delinquency made incapable of holding the office, and that their Lordships are passing an ordinance, which forfeits the offices of delinquents, by express words saves the rights of such reversionsers as have not been delinquent. Petitioner never was a delinquent, and is by letters patent invested with full right to succeed to the office of Remembrancer after the death, surrender, or forfeiture of Richard Fanshawe; he therefore prays that a day may be appointed for his counsel to manifest his right to the office, both by patent and ordinance, and in the meantime that all proceedings with reference to the disposing of the same may be suspended.

Nov. 11. Copy of the King's letter to Colonel Whaley on the same occasion. L. J., IX. 520. In extenso.

Nov. 12. Petition of Lieutenant Fulke Rooksby. Upon information given by Major Ormsby that petitioner had betrayed Jamestown, he was committed to prison, but after eight weeks, upon his petition and a letter from the Marquis of Ormond clearing him of the charge, he was released on bail. Ormsby has now left the country, leaving petitioner and his sureties still bound. Petitioner prays that he and his sureties may be discharged; that he may return to Ireland to see after his wife and children, who have lost all by the merciless cruelty of the rebels, and are like to perish for want in his absence. L. J., IX. 519.

Nov. 12. Copy of preceding.

Nov. 12. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that John Harper has been approved for the cure of Morley, in the county of Derby.

L. J., IX. 523. In extenso.

Nov. 13. Petition of Alexander Shipdham, clerk, and William Arnold, labourer. Shipdham was presented by the undoubted patron to the parsonage of Blofield, Norfolk, vacant by the death of Dr. Ambrose Congham; he was instituted and inducted, and continued in peaceable enjoyment for about four months, when Robert Congham, pretending the living to be in lapse, procured a presentation under the Broad Seal, and complains against Shipdham for alienating the affections of the parishioners, and for refusing to give up possession of the parsonage. He conceives he was justified in preserving his rights, and prays to be permitted to enjoy the same till Congham can prove his title at law, where the matter depends by quare impedit. The petitioners, attached by order of the 23rd of Oct., pray that they may no longer be kept in restraint, but that a day may be fixed for the hearing of the case, and that they may be freed on bail. L. J., IX. 522.

Nov. 13. Petition of John Griffith, gentleman. He was legally entitled to the place of registrar or official of the archdeaconry of Lincoln for life, but about five years ago, having occasion to wait on Sir Wm. Boswell, agent in the Low Countries, one Mr. Milwards, in petitioner's absence, inveigled his wife, on promise of great advantage, to give up his patent, and so got himself into possession of the office. Milwards is now sequestered for delinquency, and a deputy is in his place. Petitioner prays the House to restore him to his office, or to recommend his case to the Committee for Sequestrations. L. J., IX. 522.

Nov. 15. Letter from John Arrowsmith, at St. John's College, Cambridge, to the Earl of Manchester. He incloses the first part of a return to the order of the House, and suggests that if Mr. Cawdrey be discharged from the proctorship and Mr. Hutton from being senior regent, it will be impossible to prevent a combustion in the University, unless the House be pleased to command the Masters of Colleges, that shall be resident when the injunction comes, to choose others in their room pro hac vice (not leaving it to the University statutes, which would cast the proctorship on Trinity Hall, where it will not be easy to find a better), or else of themselves to nominate such as they shall like of.

Annexed:—

1. Return to an order of the 18th of August 1647, requiring the Vice-Chancellor and others to examine certain papers and a petition presented to the House of Lords by some fellows of St. John's College. Upon examination it appeared that Dr. Beale, then Master of St. John's College, about the time when the King's letter for lending of money was received in the University, had called a meeting of the fellows, and had procured a paper of subscriptions from them to that end, which was then produced; that Mr. Cawdrey and Mr. Hutton, whose names were found amongst the subscribers, acknowledged their hands; that Mr. Cawdrey, having confessed the tendering a paper to him by Dr. Beale in his lodging, and his subscription thereunto, and being asked by Dr. Hill, then Vice-Chancellor, what that paper was which he subscribed to, answered he could not

Sir John Brooks has for the last six years been largely indebted to petitioners, who could not proceed against him because he was in the enemy's quarters; and now that he has come within the jurisdiction of Parliament it is reported that he is Lord Cobham, and a Peer of this realm, and therefore, out of respect to the peerage, they forbear to arrest him without leave. They pray to be speedily heard or discharged, for they deny ever to have offended, and are prosecuted by Congham to weary them both out of their estates, and Shipdham, who is very infirm and sickly, out of his life. L. J., IX. 534.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Robert Congham. Shipdham and Arnold are trying to get themselves discharged without legally purging themselves of their contempt of the orders of the House, and have got an order for the hearing of the case when they know petitioner's witnesses are not yet come up. farms upon his hands, and he is obliged to let them lie waste for want of means to manage them. He prays, therefore, to be dismissed from serving as Sheriff. See L. J., IX. 535.

[Nov. 20.] Petition of the Committee for taking the Accounts of the whole Kingdom. They have cheerfully performed their duties since their appointment, but are much hindered by the conduct of the Sub-Committees in various counties, and they understand that the 1,500*l.* charged upon the Excise to repay them what they have expended in salaries to their officers, &c., is not likely to be paid for two years. Darby assures Mr. Browne that he never had any intention of injuring him; when brought before the House he heard the charge read, but professes before God and the world that he was no party to it. A suit there is between Sir Adam Littleton and John Morris, alias Poyntz, about certain lands, by which Darby hopes the lands will be given to them to whom they belong; he is incapable of doing the acts with which he is charged. He prays Mr. Browne to desire the keeper of the prison to let him go at large on giving security, or that Mr. Browne would support his petition about to be presented to the House, praying that he may have leave to return home to work for the support of his wife and children, who are ready to starve for want of maintenance.

Nov. 23. Petition of Katherine Highlord, widow. She prays that she and others may be heard before an ordinance of the 16th of April 1647, respecting the payment of certain moneys supposed to be due to Roger Notk and Sir Thomas Nott, is put in execution. L. J., IX. 540.

Nov. 25. Affidavit of Joseph Langley, of Whaplode, in the Parts of Holland, in the county of Lincoln; that a certain piece of marsh ground at Gedney, adjoining the common marsh, has been held in severalty for divers years, as is proved by the letting of the ground and the impounding of cattle trespassing upon it; and that in the year 1635 this marsh was embanked from the overflowing of the sea, and ploughed and sown for four or five years; and that a house was built upon it by Philip Welby, which was afterwards bought by Thomas Manly, with a great part of the marsh, which has since these wars been laid common by the inhabitants of Gedney.

Nov. 25. Petition of the defendants in the case of Bull and others against Gurnet and others. In 1645 a ship called the "Zelandia," belonging to the West India Company of the United Provinces, was cast on the shore and split near the Isle of Wight, but was no wreck, as the men escaped alive to land; the plaintiffs, however, and other inhabitants of the place, possessed themselves of the cargo; the owners thereupon procured a Commission to inquire into whose hands the goods had come, and subsequently another Commission for restitution of the goods, giving the Commissioners power to imprison any persons who should refuse to restore them; under this power the plaintiffs were imprisoned, but now that the Court of Admiralty has been restrained the plaintiffs have brought actions for false imprisonment, and the defendants have no remedy but in Parliament. They pray that the plaintiffs' suits at law may be stayed until the Committee for the Admiralty make answer to a memorandum of complaints from the States Ambassador.

Annexed:—

Nov. 26. Petition of Ferdinando Earl of Huntingdon. Petitioner was drawn into debt by the loss of the greatest part of his estate during his father's lifetime by the rebellion in Ireland, and his debts have been increased by the late wars; to discharge them he has (having no power to sell) put half his estate since his father's death into the hands of trustees, yet some of his creditors, to the great hindrance of his intentions of paying his debts, have commenced suits of law against him, contrary, as he conceives, to his privilege as a peer. He prays the House to preserve his privilege, as he has no intention of using it to delay his creditors longer than necessity enforces. L. J., IX. 543.

Nov. 26. Petition of Jeremiah Murdock. By an order of the 8th of October last he was ordered to attend on the 22nd of Nov., and answer for a pretended contempt. He then appeared, and has attended ever since, but no charge has been brought against him. He prays that if any charge is brought against him it may be speedily heard, or otherwise that he may be discharged. L. J., IX. 543.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 8 Oct. 1647.

2. Duplicate of Murdock's petition.

3. Answer of Jeremiah Murdock to the petition and charge of the Earl of Leicester. Acknowledges that he took a lease of part of the land, the title to which is disputed between the Earl and Edward Johnson, but denies all the undue practices and contemptuous speeches alleged against him, and states that he was quite ready to give up possession of the lands in question to the Earl's agents if they would have secured him against the rent and covenants of his lease. (Undated.)

shire, but some groundless allegations have been preferred against him by some who little know him, not only to stop his admission to the living, but to blast his reputation. He prays that a speedy day may be appointed for him to have the opportunity of answering the charges against him, as he desires no better way of reparation than to have his life and doctrine laid naked before just and impartial judges. L. J., IX. 543.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of neighbouring ministers in favour of Becke. (Undated.)
2. Application from two of the ministers who had signed the preceding certificate to withdraw their names from the same, for before they signed it they had heard nothing but good of Becke, but they have since been otherwise informed. 11 June 1647.
3. Certificate of neighbouring ministers that they are credibly informed that Becke is unfit for the cure, being a close agent to advance superstition and profaneness, and a great divider of the power of godliness. 17 June 1647.
4. Allegations against Becke, that he took the Covenant with limitation, has been frequently seen to bow to the altar, baptizes with the sign of the cross, adheres to the King's party, inveighs against the ministers that preach judgment, saying that there are too many ministers of the spirit of James and John, the sons of thunder, who are ready to pronounce judgment for every small fault, and that on a day of humiliation he withdrew from service after the first sermon, and repaired to a bowling alley, where divers were playing.
5. Another list of allegations against Becke similar to preceding.
6. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that they are not satisfied with Becke's testimonial, and cannot in conscience approve of him for a ministerial charge until he has satisfied them as to his conversation, and acquitted himself from the allegations laid against him. 16 Nov.

Nov. 16. Petition of Lancelot Wharton, minister of the word at Bowness, in the county of Cumberland. About four years ago the living was sequestered from Thomas Warwick for his delinquency, and petitioner, who had suffered much by imprisonment, exile, and loss of goods, for his faithfulness to Parliament, was authorised to officiate the cure. Warwick is now dead, and the Earl of Arundel, the Countess Dowager his mother, and Lord Dacre, each claim the patronage, and have entered caveats to stop presentation, by which means the cure is likely to be deserted, the parishioners frustrated of their ordinary means of salvation, and petitioner left destitute of livelihood. He prays to be permitted to officiate the cure, and receive the profits until the claimants to the patronage have determined their titles at law. L. J., IX. 544.

Annexed:—

1. Similar certificate from ministers in the county. 23 April 1647.
 2. Certificate from some of the Committee of the County in favour of Wharton. 24 April 1647.
- Nov. 26. Affidavit of Thomas Lee, solicitor to the Earl of Suffolk, that a bailiff of Westminster arrested Henry Busby, and, though informed that Busby was his Lordship's coachman, refused to release him unless the Earl would satisfy his debt. L. J., IX. 544.

Nov. 26. Draft ordinance for adding Alderman Abraham Reynardson and others as Committees and Commissioners for bringing in the assessments in London. L. J., IX. 544. In extenso.

Nov. 26. Petition of Nathaniel Grey, late major to Colonel Henry Washington. Claims that, having been taken prisoner of war by the forces under Sir Wm. Brereton, he was almost starved in prison; and though several persons were set at liberty, in exchange for him he could never get free till he had given Sir Wm. Brereton, a bond for 37l. 16s. Sir Wm. has sued him upon this bond, and as petitioner cannot pay, will assuredly cast him into prison, there to end his days in misery, unless the House, to which petitioner has brought the matter by writ of error, interfere in his behalf. Noted.—Nothing done.

Nov. 27. Application for an order for Dr. Aylet to institute and induct John Coplestone to the rectory of Chagford, Devon. L. J., IX. 545.

L. J., IX. 545.

Nov. 27. Petition of Humphry Hooke and others, citizens and merchants of Bristol. Hooke was Mayor of Bristol at the time it was surrendered to Sir Thomas Fairfax, and while in office did nothing against the Parliament but what he was forced to do by the governor of the place, yet several suits at law have been commenced against him and others of the petitioners, one by Thomas Walter for a pretended imprisonment, another by Thomas Hale for a boat pretended to have been seized, and this though, by the articles for the surrender of the city, it was agreed that all the citizens should enjoy the same rights and privileges that other citizens enjoy under the protection of Parliament. Petitioners have brought Hale's case before the House by writ of error, and pray to be heard upon the whole matter of fact. L. J., IX. 545.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same to Sir Thomas Fairfax, General of the Army. (Undated.)
2. Letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax, at Windsor, to Edward Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers. Has received the accompanying petition from Alderman Hooke and others, of Bristol, and as it is matter of public concern, and the petitioners claim the benefit of the articles for the surrender of that city, he humbly presents their case, desiring that the whole business may be taken into consideration. 23 Nov.

Nov. 27. Petition of Captain William Bedwell, now prisoner in the King's Bench. Has faithfully served the Parliament from the beginning of the war, and above 500l. are due to him for arrears, yet above two years ago, while on actual service, he was arrested by John Juxon, a proctor, upon a bond for 1,000l. for performance of the covenants of a mortgage. Juxon has received more than the worth of the mortgage, holds petitioner's estate worth 600l. per annum, besides goods and growing corn, and yet keeps him in prison, by which he and his family are reduced to great extremity. Petitioner prays for payment of his arrears, or that he may be set at liberty, unless Juxon can show good cause to the contrary. L. J., IX. 545.

Nov. 27. Petition of John Bedwell and Captain Wm. Bedwell, his son, now prisoner in the King's Bench. They complain of the conduct of John Juxon, brother of the late Bishop of London, in trying to deprive them of a valuable lease of lands in Essex, which they had always renewed, and in ejecting John Bedwell and his family from certain copyhold lands there. They pray for relief from the House, as they cannot otherwise subsist or recover their estate.

Nov. 29. Petition of Robert Earl of Leicester. *Complains that Jeremiah Murdock and Richard Taylor, after they had been tenants of certain lands of his at Coventry for several years, wrongfully attorned tenant to Edward Johnson, upon pretence of some process out of the Exchequer; that they have treated the orders of the House with contempt, and caused the Earl's receiver to be arrested in breach of privilege. Prays that they may continue in custody till they have given satisfaction for their contempts, and that he may be restored to possession of the lands in question. L. J., IX. 546.

Nov. 29. Information from the Committee of the Militia of London, that a number of persons from the City and suburbs intend to appear this day at the Houses of Parliament, and that the Committee have raised two companies of the Trained Bands in Cripple-gate Churchyard and Salisbury Court, which will there be in readiness to assist the Parliament in case of danger, if Parliament will please to command them. L. J., IX. 546.

Nov. 29. Petition of Henry Hopkins, Warden of the Fleet. Complains that he has been prosecuted by Thomas Richards for allowing Captain Walter Stewart to go at liberty, though Richards holds bail, and though Stewart, at the time he was released, had a protection from the House; this has since expired, and Stewart cannot be found. Petitioner prays for an order to stay the proceedings against him. L. J., IX, 546.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for protection of Stewart from arrest. 20 June 1645.

2. Affidavit in support of the petition. 27 Nov.

Nov. 29. Draft message to the House of Commons, that if they do not proceed in their impeachment of the seven lords, who sat while the Speakers were with the army, the House of Lords will do therein according to the usual course and proceedings of Parliament. L. J., IX, 546. In extenso.

Nov. 29. Draft order for appointment of Sheriffs in Flintshire and Denbighshire. C. J., V, 361.

Nov. 29. Affidavit of Thomas Hunter that he served an order of the House of the 7th of October last on Wm. Martyn, and that John Worseley then demanded restitution of the goods in the order mentioned from Martyn, who said he had sold them for 48*l.*, and deducting 20*l.* for charges, only offered 28*l.* for a full acquittance. See L. J., IX, 566.

Nov. 30. Petition of John Cartwright, Robert Vivers, and others. Petitioners, for their forwardness in the service of Parliament, have been shamefully abused and plundered, and had their houses burnt, and their estates wasted, to their damage of more than 20,000*l.*, and this principally through George Raleigh, captain of a troop of horse and company of foot in the enemy's late garrison at Banbury, by whose means petitioners were also causelessly imprisoned, and one of them arraigned as a traitor for high treason, and his land then begged of the King and enjoyed by Raleigh. Petitioners commenced proceedings at law against Raleigh for redress, but by false pretences he obtained an order from the House on the 6th of June 1646 that all parties should attend there within ten days, and that the proceedings at law should meanwhile be stayed. Petitioners accordingly attended, and the case was appointed to be heard the next day, but neither then, nor at any time since, have petitioners been able to obtain a hearing, whilst the order for stay of their proceedings at law still continues. They pray for a hearing, and that they may have speedy proceedings by due course of law for their relief. L. J., IX, 547.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition of George Raleigh. Forced to take refuge in Banbury, he was induced to accept command, but he afterwards submitted himself to Parliament, according to the ordinance of Nov. 1645, and endeavoured to make his composition; but during his attendance on the Committee for that purpose he was arrested by Robert Vivers and others for acts done as a soldier in this unhappy war, which, as he conceives, is contrary to ordinance. He prays for relief.

2. Copy of another petition of George Raleigh. Upon his former petition the House thought right that he should be relieved, and desired the concurrence of the House of Commons in an ordinance to meet his case and that of others; but the actions against him are ready for trial, and if judgment be obtained he will be forced to lie in prison, to his utter ruin. He prays that all parties may be called before the House, and that meantime the proceedings against him may be stayed.

3. Copy of order on preceding petition for attendance of parties, and stay of proceedings at law meanwhile. 6 June 1646.

4. Copy of order of 16 June 1646, appointing the next day for the hearing of the case.

Dec. 1. Petition of John White, a poordistressed prisoner in the Gatehouse, aged eighty years. He has been a prisoner ever since three weeks before last Christmas-tide for defacing the statue of the Earl of Essex, which the frenzy of his distracted thoughts then caused him to do, and for which heinous crime he is heartily penitent. He prays that his long and miserable imprisonment may expiate his offence, and that in commiseration of his great age and present misery, being ready to starve, the House will grant order for his enlargement. The petition is noted "Exped." but is not mentioned in the Journal. See L. J., VIII, 653.

See L. J., IX, 545.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar,
1647.

Dec. 2. Draft of preceding.

Dec. 4. Petition of Wm. Allen. He has attended on two several days at the bar for the hearing of his case against John Baker respecting the two ships, the "Boxtree" and "Pearl Hoy," and prays that as their Lordships' hands are so full of weightier matters, and the ships are lying at great charge, they may be delivered to him upon good security given. L. J., IX. 555.

Dec. 4. Petition of Robert Congham. His case against Alexander Shipdham, for unlawfully obtaining institution to Blofield, Norfolk, has been in part heard. He prays that the case may be determined, and he put in possession of his just rights. L. J., IX. 555.

[Dec. 4.] Petition of Alexander Shipdham and another. The case between petitioners and Congham was fully heard on the 23rd of Novr. last. Shipdham is very sickly, and has long attended the House at extreme charge, and the petitioners pray that the case may be determined or else left to the law.

Dec. 4. Charge against Mr. Zachary Cawdrey, Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, and one of the Proctors of the University, that he used the book of Common Prayer, married with the ring, baptized with the sign of the Cross, contemned the orders of the House, prayed for the King, and aided and assisted in the war against the Parliament. L. J., IX. 549. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Charge against Mr. George Hutton, Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, and Senior Regent of the University. Similar to preceding. L. J., IX. 549. In extenso.

2. Affidavit of John Pawson, that Cawdrey declared an election of Deputy Seniors in St. John's College to be illegal, because non-covenanters were not suffered to elect. 30 Oct. 1647.

3. An humble representation of the choice and carriage of the new proctors and taxers in Cambridge. Mr. Cawdrey and Mr. Moore, elected proctors, procured a letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax that the Covenant should not be pressed upon them on the plea of tender consciences, and though Mr. Cawdrey has subscribed money for the King, he maintains his place, and in the absence of many heads of colleges they have chosen a caput senatus for their own purposes, procuring the election of Mr. Hutton (who subscribed money for the King) as Senior Regent, and Mr. Sandcroft (who walks in opposition to the Directory, and scarcely ever comes to chapel) as Senior Non-Regent; they can thus hinder whatever the Vice-Chancellor propounds, and there is no expectation of having any good done this year if these men continue in power, for they will elect Vice-Proctors and Moderators like themselves.

4. Petition of George Hutton, Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. He denies that he has ever subscribed money for the King. He has always demeaned himself studiously and civilly in the University, and can produce ample testimony in his favour. He has lately been elected Senior Regent, a place of much trouble and no benefit, which by the statutes he cannot refuse. He has attended full three weeks in answer to their Lordships' summons, and prays them to remit him back to the University to discharge the employments which lie on him there, as his attendance before the House is very chargeable, and he has nothing but a poor fellowship on which to subsist. (Undated.)

Dec. 5. An humble representation from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax and the Council of the army concerning the past endeavours and now final desires for the putting of the soldiery into constant pay for the immediate disburthening the kingdom of free quarter, the prevention of any further increase of arrears, and in order to the better disbanding of supernumeraries, and other things concerning the soldiery, humbly presented to the Right Honourable the Houses of Parliament. Dated at Windsor. Read and entered in extenso on the 7th Dec. L. J., IX. 556.

[Dec. 8.] Petition of George Wadman, defendant in a writ of error brought by John Parsons and Dorothy, his wife, who are in possession of the chief seat of an ancient family, are committing great waste, and have brought the writ to reverse a judgment in an action of ejectment merely for delay. Petitioner prays that a short day may be appointed for the hearing. L. J., IX. 565.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Wm. Nutley, respecting the cutting of timber trees, and the neglect of repairs by Parsons on the house and lands at West Quantoxhead, Somersetshire, the subject of the action. 30 Nov. 1647.

Dec. 9. Petition of Thomas Worsley and others. They complain that Robert Martin and others refuse to obey an order of the 7th of Oct. last for restoration of certain goods, and pray that they may be called upon to appear and answer for their contempt. L. J., IX. 566.

Dec. 9. Affidavit of Thomas Hunter that Martin, when served with the order of the House for restitution of the goods, said that they were sold, and that he would deduct 20*l.* from the price for his charges, and pay the rest to Worsley, if he would give him an acquittance; if not, he might take what course he pleased.

Dec. 9. Petition of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the City of London, Governors of Christ's Hospital. The petitioners claim the manor of Lessnes, in reversion after the death of Anne Hawes, under the will of her late husband, Thomas Hawes, the undue opposition of Nicholas Hawes to which has led to much litigation. The suit was lately abated by the death of Anne Hawes, and the petitioners were then permitted to continue it in their own names; it is again abated by the death of Nicholas Hawes, and they now pray to be put into possession of the manor till legally ejected, and they will be answerable for the rents and profits received. L. J., IX. 566.

Dec. 10. Draft order for payment of 440*l.* for sick and maimed soldiers. L. J., IX. 568. In extenso.

Dec. 10. Petition of the parishioners of Plumbland, in the county of Cumberland. They complain that Mr. Nicholson, under colour of an undue presentation to the living from Richard Skelton, a delinquent, having obtained an order from the House for his institution and induction, did in a most violent way, by force of troopers, enter into the same, contrary to the desires of the parishioners. They pray that the order for Nicholson's institution and induction may be reversed, and Mr. Eggesfield be appointed according to their unanimous desires, and a former order of the Committee for the County.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 7 Oct. 1647 for Nicholson's institution and induction. L. J., IX. 474.

2. Affidavit of Lancelot Wharton, minister of Bowness, that in April 1644 he saw Richard Skelton, then major of a troop of Horse for the King, skirmishing at the head of his troop with 1647.

Dec. 27. Petition of Colonel Charles Doilie, to the House of Commons. Before these unhappy wars petitioners was a student at Oxford, but being obliged to fly thence, was plundered of his whole study of books, and other things of some value; since that time he has faithfully served Parliament in arms, and has been many times dangerously wounded, by which his health and constitution, formerly strong and sound, have been so greatly impaired, as to render him not only unfit for study, but for any hard service. He has himself suffered great cruelty as a prisoner of war, and has been plundered to his shirt. But in all his service no man can say that he has violated any man's estate or person, but he has been content with his pay, and most times without it; he has contributed his mite for Ireland, and would have gone there himself (though unfit) might he have had his regiment with him. The House formerly appointed him Governor of Bristol, from which place he has, however, been suspended after having spent much in providing himself for it, so that, instead of being the better, he is two or three hundred pounds the worse. In consideration of all which he prays that 1,000*l.* of his arrears may be paid him, or the interest thereon, quarterly, or else that some means may be provided to relieve the extremity of himself, his wife, and children, otherwise he must betake himself to some obscure corner in or out of England before that imminent necessity fall upon him which will render him a shame to friends and scorn to enemies. C. J., V. 407.

Dec. 28. Draft ordinance for 1,000*l.* to be paid to Patrick Younge in part recompense of his pains in the edition of a most ancient manuscript copy of the Greek Septuagint Bible, and other Greek manuscripts. L. J., IX. 616. In extenso.

Dec. 28. Draft order for payment to him of a further sum of 1,000*l.* L. J., IX. 616. In extenso.

Dec. 30. Draft ordinance for payment of 5,274*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.* to Richard Aldworth. L. J., IX. 618. In extenso.

Dec. 30. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Abraham Allen has been approved for the cure of Wymondham, in the county of Lincoln [? Norfolk].

Dec. 30. Copy of certificate from the Committee for taking the Accounts of the whole Kingdom, of all moneys received and issued out by Sir Henry Vane, as Treasurer of the Navy; first, from the 8th of August 1642 to the 30th of September 1643; second, from the 1st of January 1643-4 to the 12th of May 1645. The receipts and payments are then given.

Dec. 30. Copy of similar certificate of all moneys received and issued out by Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Treasurer-at-Wars, and his two deputies, from the 1st of August 1642 to the 12th of March 1644-5, and of the State of the account of Henry Pecke.

Dec. 31. Affidavit of Sir Henry Carew, that he attended twice before the referees in the matter of the contempts alleged against him by Warwick Lord Mohun, and made such answer thereto as he trusts will appear satisfactory to the House. L. J., IX. 619.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Sir Henry Carew and others. They pray that Lord Mohun may be ordered speedily to attend and prove the contempts he alleges to have been committed by petitioners; that he may be ordered to desist from cutting timber or taking tin or other profits from the lands in question; and that, though the report of the referees be not ready, the hearing of the cause by the House may not be delayed. (Undated.)

Dec. 31. Draft ordinance to disable all ministers who have deserted the Parliament, or have adhered to the enemies thereof, or have been sequestered for scandal of life or doctrine from holding any ecclesiastical preferment or post in any school, college, or hospital. This ordinance was twice read and committed this day, but does not appear to have been further proceeded with. L. J., IX. 619.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

Dec. 31. Affidavit of Robert Kelsey that John Bent, a household servant of Lord De La Warr, was on Saturday last arrested contrary to privilege. L. J., IX. 619.

Dec. 31. Petition of Thomas Riggs and Edmund Riggs in the behalf of themselves and the rest of the children of Ralph Riggs, late of Winchester, deceased. The manor of Fareham has been held by petitioners' ancestors for above a hundred and fifty years past from the Bishops of Winchester, and was last let on the 24th of March 1641-2; but by ordinance of the 9th of October 1646, all estates taken from Bishops since December 1641 are declared void, by which the petitioners are likely to be ruined. They pray that the estate may be confirmed to them by order of the House. L. J., IX. 619.

Dec. 31. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Josiah Tucker has been approved for the cure of High Bickenton alias Bickington Loges [High Bickington], Devon.

Dec. 31. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Alexander Burnett has been approved for the cure of Colney, Norfolk.

Dec. . Draft declaration of Parliament in answer to a paper from the Scots Commissioners concerning the new propositions of peace, and the four bills to be sent to His Majesty. The paper from the Scots Commissioners, which is of great length, is printed in extenso. L. J., IX. 591. The Lords passed a resolution on the 18th of December that the paper was so long that a present answer could not be expected. To this resolution the Commons agreed. C. J., V. 392. On the 21st of December a further paper from the Scots Commissioners, complaining that their previous paper had not been taken into consideration before the Commissioners were sent to the King, was read in the House, but no order was made upon it. The paper now calendared, which appears to have been drawn up subsequently, in answer to the objections of the Scots Commissioners, is not mentioned in the journals of either House.

Petition of James Viscount Claneboye. The greater part of petitioner's estate in Ireland has been wasted by the rebellion, and the rest eaten up by cess for the maintenance of the Parliament forces, whilst out of a small parcel of preserved lands the Scots have had more than the land has in former years yielded both to landlord and tenant. Petitioner came to England with license from the Commissioners of Ulster to solicit supplies for his regiment and relief for his tenants, and when he had received an express from the Committee at Derby House to return to his charge, was arrested by the Earl of Middlesex for an old pretended debt of petitioner's father, concerning the accounts of the farmers of customs in Ireland about sixteen years ago. Prays for release, and for protection from the House.

Annexed:—

1. Desires of the Lord-Lieutenant and Council of Ireland for the release of Lord Claneboye. 28 Dec. 1646.
2. Certificate of the Commissioners for Ulster in support of the petition. 26 Dec. 1646.
3. Certificate that James Hamelton (Viscount Claneboye) is arrested at the suit of the Earl of Middlesex.
4. Copy of order of the Committee at Derby House for all officers of the forces in Ireland to return to their charges. 15 Oct. 1646.
5. Copy of order for release of Colonel Thomas Powell under similar circumstances. 26 Nov. 1646.
6. Copy of similar order for release of Major Jonathan Newcomen. 2 May 1646.

Petition of Jacob Lucman, to the House of Commons. Petitioner, as a true Christian, denying himself and laying aside all private affairs, has since the 14th of December 1644 faithfully endeavoured to represent to the states of England means by which both in Church and State a Christian peace might be established. Petitioner now intends to return into Holland, but since his attendance here he has been at some charges and necessitated to engage what he had about him for his sustenance. He prays that so much may be bestowed upon him as will redeem his goods out of pawn and transport himself over the sea.

Printed copy of preceding, dated at London, "about the end of the year 1647."

Application from Don Alonzo de Cardenas for a pass to transport six nags into Flanders for the use of the Governor the Archduke Leopold.

Petition of Archibald Armstrong. He complains that Katherine Ferrers, of Barnhams, Surrey, as executrix of her late husband, has got possession of his estate, but has altogether neglected to pay a debt of 30*l.* due to petitioner, and keeps herself close within doors, bereaving him of redress by legal course. He prays that a messenger may be sent to speak with Mrs. Ferrers, that she may either pay the money with damages, or show cause to the contrary if she can.

Petition of the inhabitants of the counties of Cardigan and Pembroke, to the House of Commons. The bridge over the river Tivy [Taivi], which was built about eight years ago at a cost of 1,500*l.*, has been lately broken down by the enemy to the great hindrance of trade between the two counties; it may now be repaired for 500*l.*, but if left for three months longer will cost more than both counties can advance. Pray that 500*l.* may be speedily levied out of delinquents' estates in the county for the purpose.

The state of Mr. Castle's case, touching his being at Oxford with the King. Being clerk of the Privy Seal in ordinary, and being bound by his oath and duty to attend His Majesty in his mouth of waiting, and being summoned to Oxford by Secretary Nicholas, and threatened to lose his office if he came not speedily, he repaired thither in October 1643, being ignorant of any restraint to the contrary. During all the time of his abode there, which was about eighteen months, he never meddled with anything but the duties of his office. For refusing to bear arms or be in commissions, but more especially for denying to deliver moneys which belonged to his brother clerks, he was marked out for a person utterly ill-affected to the King, and after long trouble and sundry uncivil usages offered him by the Committee of Sequestrations, he was at length transmitted to the Council board, where Lord Cottington accused him of holding rebels' moneys in his hands, of giving intelligence to the rebels, and of dishonesty to the King; not long after, it being privately made known to him that there was a purpose to commit him to custody, he was compelled to withdraw himself secretly into the Parliament quarters, where, because Lord Cottington and his commissioners could not reach his person, they caused sequestration to be made of the profits of his office, under which sequestration he remained, when he submitted himself to the clemency of Parliament according to the ordinance of grace.

Petition of Mrs. Olive Cotton. Eighteen years ago she was married to her present husband, bringing him 1,500*l.* in money, at least 500*l.* per annum then, and 800*l.* per annum in reversion, of late years he has absented himself from her, and for the last nine months has left her in such extreme want that she is forced to resort to legal proceedings. She prays the House to grant her relief.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Reasons to show that now that the High Commission and the Bishops are down, the House of Lords is the most proper court to give relief in the case.

Complaint of Gilbert Denaulx to the House of Lords; having come from Rochelle in order to give his services to the French Church in London, he was robbed at Truro of a number of rings and precious stones. He desires redress. (French.)

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Mayor of Truro that he examined the persons accused by Denaulx, but they utterly denied the charge.
2. Further application from Denaulx.
3. Application from Denaulx to the House for 20*l.*, to take him home after his great losses, for which he has had no redress.

Petition of Juliana Dolman. She was solemnly married in August 1645 to Thomas Dolman, of Duncote, in the county of York, but in November 1646 he married another woman, and has ever since lived in open adultery with her, while petitioner has been exposed to great poverty, and dares not live in the county for fear of her life; her husband's estate of 400*l.* is sequestered for his adhering to the enemy; she prays the House to award her some relief for her insufferable wrongs.

Petition of Edward Hanchett, late Usher of the Court of Wards and Liveries. Petitioner bought his place for 4,000*l.*, the value of the office being 450*l.* per annum, and the Committee on the offices of the Court have decided that he ought to have 4,300*l.* in compensation; the office cost him 1,000*l.* more in charges and expenses, some of which money he was obliged to borrow, and is now in execution for it in the King's Bench, and has been there for the last twelve months, having been unable to pay either principal or interest since the Court was put down. He prays that, in consideration of his miserable condition, some course may be taken for payment of the compensation money, and an allowance made him till this can be done.

Duplicate of preceding.

Another petition of same. Petition of many distressed Protestants driven out of Ireland by the horrid rebellion there and residing here. They have received but little from the collections made for their relief after the victories of Lord Inchiquin and Colonel Jones, and pray that the amount of the several sums collected may be printed according to ordinance, and all churchwardens and others directed to pay over any money collected into the hands of the treasurers for distribution amongst petitioners.

Statement respecting John Jones, of Nantons, in the county of Cardigan, a barrister, who published a book in defence of the King's actions, and himself served against the Parliament; quarrelling with the Governor of Aberystwith Castle, he complained to Prince Rupert, and was by him clapped in prison for abusing the Governor, but he got loose and obtained a command under his cousin, Colonel Lewes, and joined with the countrymen to besiege the Governor of Aberystwith. He has procured many of his kinsmen to be of the Committee of the County, and so hopes to compound secretly, that no complaint may be made against him.

Petition of inhabitants of Leighton Buzzard, in the county of Bedford. Pray that, in consideration of their great losses by a fire about two years since (See L. J., VII. 504), and by plunderings during the war, 200*l.* per annum may be granted for the maintenance of their minister out of the revenue yet undisposed of belonging to the prebends of Lincoln, or the dean and canons of Windsor, who are lords of the parish.

Application for the appointment of Roger Lorte, John Eliot, and others, as Committees in the county of Pembroke, for assessing part of the 60,000*l.* on the inhabitants of the county.

Petition of Captain Wm. Owen, to the House of Commons. He has faithfully served Parliament in the garrison of Plymouth since the beginning of the wars until that garrison was reduced, and is still ready to serve; but whilst waiting for his arrears he has been obliged to sell or pawn all that he ever had, is in debt besides, and threatened with arrest. He prays that, instead of his whole arrears, which amount to 300*l.*, some considerable part may be paid him, to enable him to satisfy his debts, and furnish himself with dress and necessaries.

Petition of Clement Writer, plaintiff against John Werfield and Elizabeth, his wife, to the Commissioners of the Great Seal. Prays for speedy relief in a bill of review of certain proceedings in Chancery (in which he is stopped by demurrer), as his small estate in Worcestershire has for five years been wholly detained from him by the King's party, whilst he has for seven years fruitlessly attended on the House of Commons for justice, his life being too far spent for him to hope for relief from them, as their leisure is so little.

Petition of Matthew Woolfe. About twelve years ago he entrusted the evidences relating to his lands in Monmouthshire to Elizabeth Williams, who by confederacy with the tenants has allowed them to get possession thereof, thereby wrongfully to detain his lands from him; petitioner obtained an order from the Committee of Obstructions for the offenders to appear and answer, but he was unable to serve it, as that part of the country was then in the hands of malignants; he is aged, feeble, poor, and naked, and ready to starve for want of sustenance. He prays that his grievances may be referred to Commissioners and that he may be protected till his case be tried.

Petition of inhabitants of the town of Wooton, in the county of Northampton. The Committee of Sequestrations ejected Jeremy Stephens from the parsonage for many scandalous offences, and placed Daniel Rogers in his room, but Stephens has treated with his brother, the patron, and a malignant, to resign the parsonage to one Somes in a simoniacal way, and being defeated, intends to bring in another in the same way. Petitioners pray that he may not be allowed to make void the appointment of the Committee, and bring so great a mischief upon a people made so happy in their minister.

Draft ordinance for relief of persons who have been sequestered for delinquents by misinformation or mistake.

Petition of divers ministers in the county of Cambridge. By ordinance of Parliament divers scandalous and malignant ministers were ejected out of their livings, and petitioners were placed in their room. Of late some of the petitioners and their parishioners have been arrested by the ejected ministers for tithes they have received, and others have been turned out of their houses and churches, the ejected ministers taking possession, reading the Common Prayer Book, and using the ceremonies in it. Others have had their tithes carried away and other dues detained by the parishioners, under pretence of a proclamation from the King and a feigned order from Sir Thomas Fairfax and his Council of War. Petitioners pray that they may be established in their places, and protected from all arrests and molestations whatsoever, and that the raisers of these late tumults may be proceeded against according to justice.

Draft order that whereas some of the Committee of both Houses attending on the King have desired leave to come to London, five of the said committee, whereof two Lords to be present shall continue and act according to the powers already given.

Draft letter from [the Speakers of both Houses of Parliament] to the [Scottish Commissioners], thanking them for their late expression of good affection, and care for the peace and happiness of the kingdom, and informing them that the Parliament is now endeavouring to put that particular concerning the person of the King into such a way as they hope may give satisfaction to both kingdoms.

NASEBY PAPERS.

A VERY full account of these papers, which were taken in the King's Cabinet at the Battle of Naseby, is given in the First Report of the Historical MSS. Commissioners [Appx., pp. 1-9]. The following is a complete list of the papers as yet discovered amongst the MSS. of the House of Lords. Those not previously published are now given in extenso, and references are given to show where those already printed may be found. The two last papers in this list, though not found with the rest, were probably taken at the same time, to judge from the endorsement and numbering.

1. 1641, July 10. Draft letter in the King's handwriting from the King to the Earl of Holland. Hist. MSS. Com., 1st Report, Appx. p. 4. In extenso.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND AT SYON HOUSE.

DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

The most important and the greater number of his Grace's manuscripts are at Alnwick Castle, and an account of them is given in the Appendix to the Third Report of Her Majesty's Commissioners. But at Syon House remain some of much interest, and notes are given below of such of them as seemed likely to give information of the kind desired by the Commission.

The most noticeable are:—An agreement between the Earl of Northumberland and Richard Duke of Gloucester, made in the 14th Ed. IV., whereby the Earl plights his service and faith to the Duke in all things, saving, however, his allegiance to the King and to Prince Edward, and the King's other issue born and to be born.—A folio volume of entries of causes, &c. in the Court of the Official of the Archdeacon of Exeter in the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII. is valuable for local history.—Some papers relating to Sir John Perrot's gift of plate to Magdalen College, Oxford, and to Sir Thomas Perrot, temp. Eliz.—Many papers relate to the sale of coal in Northumberland, temp. James I. and Charles I., and the disputes of the free burgesses of Newcastle with the Corporation of Oastmen: and many papers relate to the sale and measuring of salt in the reign of James I.:—And papers about Royal Mines, temp. James I., worked by the Company of Adventurers under the management, seemingly, of two Germans named Hochstretter.—With two letters to Henry Coventry about the murder of the 5th Duke of Somerset in 1678, there is an official copy of the sentence by the Genoese authorities against the murderers.—There are two volumes of Collections by John Warburton (once Somerset Herald) for the History of Northumberland: such portions as relate to Roman Antiquities were very likely made use of in Warburton's History of the Roman Wall, printed in 1753.—A 4to volume of the 13th and 14th centuries contains a Cartulary and Custumal of the Priory of Tynemouth, and a copy, in French (without title), of Walter de Henley's Treatise called "Hosbondrie," and copies of documents relating to the Priory, including some to which the Abbat of St. Albans was party. One of the documents gives the particulars of a very curious service to the Lord of the Manor of Whiteley.—In 15 Ed. II. are four documents relating to prisoners taken at the capture of Mitford Castle.—A large folio of the 14th century is a valuable Cartulary showing the possessions of the first Earl of Northumberland in several counties.

The Rolls of Account of the various Receivers and Officers of the Earls of Northumberland in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. are very numerous, and notes of (I think) everything of interest are given below. The titles of many books and pictures and their prices are shown. There are notices of members of the Earl's family, and of various friends and acquaintances. New year's gifts to the Queen and others were trifling compared with the large sums spent in plate and jewels. One item is the gift of 3*l.* to George Peele the poet when he presented his poem composed on the occasion of the Earl being made Knight of the Garter in 1593. Sir Walter Raleigh and his elder brother, Sir Carew Raleigh, were friends of the 9th Earl, and Sir Walter and the Earl used to play for money. Sir Walter was in the Tower when the 9th Earl was a prisoner there, and most likely assisted at the experiments carried on at the still-house which the Earl was allowed to erect in the Tower; and at the Earl's conferences with Harriot the Astronomer, to whom the Earl allowed a yearly pension. The expenses of his expedition to Flanders in 1587 are also set down; and (perhaps) with a view to this expedition it was that Sir W. Raleigh sent the Earl a shirt of mail in 1586. Hillyard the artist had only 3*l.* for drawing the Earl's portrait. In 1596 the Earl seems to have adopted the motto, Timeos qui ignorat. In 1597 one of his children died, and the expenses of doctoring and at last embalming and burying him are given. In the same here is a gift of 20*l.* to the Templars against their Christmas sports. The Earl smoked tobacco before he was committed to the Tower, but while he was there the expenditure for tobacco and pipes is large. He got Sir Carew Raleigh's groom to teach his own groom how to make a horse amble; and got the French Ambassador's cook to give lessons to his (the Earl's) cook. While in the Tower he made presents to the Governor and his wife and his daughter. Young Lord Percy, when he visited his father in the Tower in 1609, paid a visit to the lions there. The Earl paid Warner a yearly sum as well as Harriot. In 1615 are given the expenses of Lord Percy at Cambridge. Usquebagh seems, from a Roll of 1615-16, to have been made from Aqua vite, spirits of wine, ambergris, and musk. Henry the 9th Earl seems to have had a fair amount of indulgence while in the Tower: by paying 100*l.* per annum to the Lieutenant he had the privilege of having his meat and drink supplied by his own people; he was allowed to carry on experiments and have the society of his friends and the visits of his family. In 1614 the Earl's imprisonment was drawing near its close, and he sent a number of books thence to Syon House. An old English translation of Vegetius, mentioned in the list, is now at Petworth.

There is a batch of papers giving a particular account of the spoils committed by Border thieves in the Earl's lands on the Borders in 1576 and afterwards.

Several 15th century accounts of the bailiffs of Alnwick Castle.—In May 1594, a Scotchman and a Frenchman stole some of the Queen of Scotland's jewels, and were detained in Tynemouth Castle: a bill of the charges of the guard who took them is at Syon.

The Court Rolls of the Manor of Iselworth are very fine, and come down with a small hiatus from 7 Ed. I. to the present time. Some of the entries are instructive, and the Custumal of the Manor of Iselworth (a small 4to. of the 14th century) is worthy of being printed.

A most exact catalogue of all the documents at Syon House enabled Mr. Williams, the Duke of Northumberland's agent (whose ready assistance I feel pleasure in acknowledging) to lay before me at once anything that was asked for from the collection which his Grace (at Syon, as well as at Alnwick) so liberally opened to Her Majesty's Commissioners.
