C O M M I S S I O N .

VICTORIA R.

Victoria, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and L.S. Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith.

To our right trusty and well beloved Councillor Sir George Jessel, Knight, Master or Keeper of the Rolls and Records in Chancery ; Our right trusty and entirely-beloved Cousin and Councillor Robert Arthur Talbot, Marquess of Salisbury ; Our right trusty and right well-beloved Cousin David Graham Drummond, Earl of Airlie, Knight of Our Most Ancient and Most Noble Order of the Thistle ; Our right trusty and right well-beloved Cousin Philip Henry, Earl Stanhope ; Our trusty and well-beloved Edmond George Fitzmaurice, Esq. (commonly called Lord Edmond George Fitzmaurice) ; the Right Reverend Father in God Charles Bishop of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe ; Our right trusty and well-beloved James, Baron Talbot de Malahide ; Our right trusty and well-beloved Richard Monckton, Baron Houghton ; Our right trusty and well-beloved John Emerich Edward, Baron Acton ; Our trusty and well-beloved Sir William Stirling Maxwell, Baronet ; Our trusty and well-beloved Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, Knight, Deputy Keeper of the Records ; Our trusty and well-beloved Charles William Russell, Doctor in Divinity, President of the College of St. Patrick, Maynooth ; and Our trusty and well-beloved George Webbe Dasent, Doctor of Civil Law, greeting.

Whereas We did, by Warrant under Our Royal Sign Manual bearing date the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and by subsequent Warrants, authorise and appoint Our right trusty and well-beloved Councillor John, Baron Romilly (since deceased), together with the several noblemen and gentlemen therein named, or any three or more of them, to be Our Commissioners to make inquiry into the places in which Documents illustrative of History or General Public Interest belonging to private persons are deposited, and to consider whether, with the consent of the owners, means might not be taken to render such Documents available for public reference, as by the tenor of the first-recited Warrant under Our Sign Manual, dated the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, does more fully and at large appear :

Now know ye, that We have revoked and determined, and do by these Presents revoke and determine, the said several Warrants and every matter and thing therein contained :

And whereas We have deemed it expedient that a new Commission should issue for the purposes specified in such Warrant of second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine :

Commission appointing Commissioners to make inquiry as to the places in which Documents illustrative of History or General Public Interest belonging to private persons are deposited, and to consider whether, with the consent of the owners, means might not be taken to render such Documents available for public reference.

Further know ye that We, reposing great trust and confidence in your ability and discretion, have appointed, and do by these Presents nominate, constitute, and appoint, you the said Sir George Jessel; Robert Arthur Talbot, Marquess of Salisbury; David Graham Drummond, Earl of Airlie; Philip Henry, Earl Stanhope; Edmond George Fitzmaurice (commonly called Lord Edmond George Fitzmaurice); Charles, Bishop of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe; James, Baron Talbot de Malahide; Richard Monckton, Baron Houghton; John Emerich Edward, Baron Acton; Sir William Stirling Maxwell; Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy; Charles William Russell; and George Webb Dasent, to be Our Commissioners to make inquiry as to the places in which such Papers and Manuscripts are deposited, and for any of the purposes set forth in the original Warrant under Our Sign Manual, dated second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine:

And for the purpose of carrying out the said inquiry We do hereby authorise you to call in the aid and co-operation of all possessors of Manuscripts and Papers, inviting them to assist you in furthering the object of this Commission, and to give them full assurance that no information is sought except such as relates to Public Affairs, and that no knowledge or information which may be obtained from their collections shall be promulgated without their full license and consent:

And We do further by these Presents authorise you, with the consent of the owners of such Manuscripts, to make abstracts and catalogues of such Manuscripts:

And We do hereby direct that you, or any three or more of you, shall form a quorum, and that you, or any three or more of you, shall have power to invite the possessors of such Papers and Records as you may deem it desirable to inspect, and to produce them before you.

And Our further will and pleasure is that you Our said Commissioners, or any three or more of you, do report to Us from time to time in writing under your hands and seals all and every your proceedings under and by virtue of these Presents:

And for the better enabling you to execute these Presents We do hereby nominate, constitute, and appoint Our trusty and well-beloved John Romilly, Esquire, Barrister-at-Law, as the Secretary to this Our Commission to attend you, whose services and assistance We require you to use from time to time as occasion may require.

Given at Our Court at St. James's, the seventh day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, in the Thirty-ninth Year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command.

Victoria, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith.

To our trusty and well-beloved William Hardy, Esquire, Deputy Keeper of the Records, greeting.

WHEREAS We did, by Warrants under Our Royal Sign Manual bearing date respectively the seventh day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and the fourth day of October one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, authorise and appoint Our right trusty and well-beloved Councillor Sir George Jessel, Knight, Master or Keeper of the Rolls and Records, together with the several noblemen and gentlemen named in such Warrants, or any three or more of them, to be Our Commissioners to make inquiry as to the places in which Documents illustrative of History or General Public Interest belonging to private persons are deposited, and to consider whether, with the consent of the owners, means might not be taken to render such Documents available for public reference :

Now know ye, that We, reposing great trust and confidence in your zeal, discretion, and ability, have authorised and appointed, and do by these Presents authorise and appoint, you the said William Hardy to be a Commissioner for the purposes aforesaid, in addition to and together with the Commissioners whom We have already appointed by the above-mentioned Royal Warrants.

Given at Our Court at St. James's, the Twelfth day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, in the Forty-second year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command.

RICHD. ASSHETON CROSS.

William Hardy, Esquire, additional Commissioner to inquire as to Historical Documents of Public Interest.

SEVENTH REPORT

OF THE

ROYAL COMMISSION ON HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

WE, Your Majesty's Commissioners appointed by Your Royal Commission to inquire what papers and manuscripts belonging to private families would be useful in illustrating constitutional Law, Science, and the General History of this country, and to which their respective possessors would be willing to give access, respectfully beg leave to submit this our Seventh Report to Your Majesty.

Since the publication of their last Report Your Commissioners have had to lament the loss of two of their number by death. To the wide historical and antiquarian knowledge of Sir William Stirling Maxwell and Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy the success of the Commission has been largely due, and Your Commissioners cannot pass by this opportunity of briefly expressing their many obligations to their departed colleagues.

In pursuance of a warrant under Your Sign Manual bearing date 12th July 1878, Mr. William Hardy, the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, was added to the Commission.

The ordinary work of inspection during the past year has been carried on by Mr. A. J. Horwood, Mr. J. C. Jeaffreson, and Mr. R. B. Knowles for England; by Mr. Fraser for Scotland; and by Mr. Gilbert for Ireland. Mr. Brewer had continued his examination of the Cecil documents at Hatfield House to the time of his unexpected decease in February of this year. Your Commissioners are indebted to the Rev. J. A. Bennett for a Report on the manuscripts belonging to Capt. St. John Mildmay.

The number of collections examined under the directions of Your Commissioners since the issuing of the first Commission now exceeds 500; and, judging from the work in hand and in prospect, there seems no likelihood that the labours of Your Commissioners will shortly cease from want of material upon which to operate.

The Reports of the Inspectors, printed in the Appendix, pp. 1-834, include the following collections:—

In England and Wales.—The House of Lords; the Marquis of Salisbury; the Earl of Denbigh; the Earl of Egmont; Lord Sackville; Sir Frederick U. Graham, Bart.; Sir Alexander Malet, Bart.; Sir Harry Verney, Bart.; Ayscough Fawkes, Esq.; G. H. Finch, Esq., M.P.; G. E. Frere, Esq.; G. A. Lowndes, Esq.; Capt. St. John Mildmay; W. More Molyneux, Esq.; S. E. E. Bouverie-Pusey, Esq.; the Rev. Thos. Webb; the County of Somerset.

In Scotland.—The Duke of Athole; the Earl of Southesk; Fenton Livingstone, Esq.; Oliver Rutherford, Esq.; James Douglas of Cavers, Esq.

In Ireland.—The Marquis of Ormonde.

Among other collections, accounts of which are being drawn up for publication in future Reports of Your Commissioners, may be named those of—the Duke of Marlborough; the Duke of Manchester; the Duke of Abercorn; the Duke of Leinster; the Marquis of Drogheda; the Marquis of Waterford; the Earl of Ashburnham; the Earl of Jersey; the Earl of Portsmouth; the Earl of Meath; the Earl of Roden; Lord Braybrooke; Lord Emly; the O'Connor Don, M.P.; Mr. Bankes, of Corfe Castle; Mr. Wingfield Digby, of Sherborne Castle; Magdalen College, Oxford; Trinity College, Dublin; the Trinity House Corporation; the Royal College of Physicians; the Chester and Leicester Corporations, &c., &c.

Your Commissioners beg to subjoin a brief account of the chief collections the examination of which has been completed since their last Report was issued. Full particulars of each collection will be found in the Appendix.

The House of Lords.—The most interesting papers of the House of Lords calendared in the Appendix to the present Report are perhaps those relating to the Act of Uniformity.¹ These documents, and the Manuscript Committee Book for the period, give much information respecting the proceedings upon the Bill in the House of Lords. The Book of Common Prayer, still preserved in the library, was sent by the King to the Upper House on the 23rd of February 1661-2, and was by the Lords substituted for the Book of Common Prayer of 1604, which accompanied the Bill when sent up from the House of Commons. This first book was apparently returned to the House of Commons, for at the end of a paper of amendments sent to the Commons by the Lords is this note. "That the booke sent vp wth the Bill may be taken of, and the manuscript booke herewth deliuered may be annexed to the bill;" but all trace of the first book is now lost, and it no doubt perished with the rest of the records of the House of Commons in the fire of 1834. The manuscript proceedings of the committee clearly show that no amendment was made in the book itself by Parliament, except the one verbal amendment, "vitium scriptoris," specially referred to in the journal. The Bill was much amended; the Lords, possibly out of deference to the King, being much more inclined to give way than the Commons. The Lords inserted a proviso, recommended by the King, to empower him to dispense with the wearing of the surplice and the use of the sign of the cross in baptism, which the Commons rejected, as they did also another proviso introduced by the Lords to enable the King to give to ministers dispossessed under the Act a fifth of the income of their livings, an allowance made under the rule of the Parliament to the ejected royalist clergy.

The warrant for the King's execution is, as is well known, carefully preserved in the library of the House of Lords. The warrant seems to have remained in Hacker's possession after the execution until the Restoration. The original order¹ for his examination by the Lieutenant of the Tower is thus noted:—"According to the content of this order I have examined Coll. Hacker, who confesseth that he hath the warrant in y^e order menconed at his house in the countrey, and that he beleeves it agrees wth w^t is printed; his wife & family are in toun soe that hee saith wthout sending his wife doune hee knowes not how further to give satisfaction." His wife was in consequence sent to fetch the warrant, which she did, and on the 31st of July the Lieutenant of the Tower delivered it to the House. Amongst the documents now calendared are also the original warrants² for the execution of the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Holland, and Lord Capel. Charlotte de la Trémouille, Countess Dowager of Derby,³ prays for condign punishment on the judges of her late husband, and annexed to her petition are many papers relating to his trial, amongst them the "Journal of the Court Martial held at Chester 1651 for the trial of the Earl of Derby, &c.," containing a full report of the proceedings of the court, commencing on the 1st of September and ending on the 1st of October 1651, while Robert Duckenfield⁴ and others of the Earl's judges pray for a full hearing as, though acknowledging that they sat as judges, they say that they were no way consenting to the death or imprisonment of that honourable person, but laboured to the utmost of their powers and interests with friends to have prevented the same. On page 147 is a certificate signed by the Countess of Derby testifying that James Chaloner suffered close imprisonment in the Isle of Man for his affection and service to herself, the Duke of Albemarle, and many others of the royal party. This certificate is annexed to a petition of Edmond Chaloner⁵ praying that his deceased father may not be put in the same rank with the cursed regicides. A certificate from Sir John Owen in favour of James Chaloner is also annexed to the same petition.

There are many other documents relating to the regicides, but as they are most of them given in extenso in the calendar it will only be necessary to refer briefly to them here. William Heveningham⁶ petitions for mercy on the plea that he refused to consent to His Majesty's death by holding up his hands as the others did, or by signing the warrant, although he was pressed thereunto with much importunity by Sergeant Bradshaw, the then president. Hugh Peters⁷ gives a long and incoherent "narrative," and professes before "His holy Majesty, angels, and men that he never had head or hand in the contriving or managing the late King's death directly nor indirectly as is most scandalously suggested by black mouths, but was all that day (he died) sick and sad in his chamber."

Nicholas Love⁸ prays for mercy, asserting that when the King on his trial demanded a conference with the Lords and Commons before sentence was passed, he earnestly pressed that such conference might be had before any further proceeding, which was violently opposed by Cromwell, Ireton, and others, and he clamorously reviled as an obstructor of that black design. Love did not sign the warrant for the King's execution. Colonel John Hutchinson¹ prays the Lords to extend the same clemency to him that the Commons have shown "upon his signal repentance which how early and real" it was his deportment for many years past hath made clear." Colonel Hutchinson signed the warrant. An interesting certificate in his favour is annexed to the petition. Thomas Lister² asserts that when summoned to the High Court of Justice he went thither to understand the cause, where finding it was for the trial of the King he altogether disliked the same, and came away, leaving the Court sitting, and never was there but that one time. Lister did not sign the warrant.

Mathew Thomlinson³ asserts that by some mistake his name was inserted amongst those who sat and gave judgment upon the late King, though he was never present upon any proceeding therein, but received a special recommendation of favour from the late King to his son, now King, and therefore prays to be excepted out of the number of those who sat as judges on the King. According to Nalson, Thomlinson was present on two occasions at the trial. He was, however, pardoned on account of the consideration he showed to the King whilst in custody. Lord Monson⁴ declares that his design in sitting at the King's trial was, if possible, to prevent that horrid murder, but the violence and bloody design was not to be declined, he withdrew himself with a great abhorrence of it, he is now under a sentence so much beyond death as he had rather choose to die a thousand times than outlive the shame and ignominy of it; he prays the House to remit what is most ignominious in his sentence. The sentence was that he should be drawn from the Tower through the City of London to Tyburn, and so back again with a halter about his neck, and to be imprisoned for life. Whether he died in prison or not is unknown. Sir Henry Mildmay,⁵ whose sentence was the same as that upon Lord Monson, prays for commiseration, alleging that he was present at the trial that he might be better able to improve his utmost care and diligence to preserve His Majesty's life, which he endeavoured with all his diligence. Neither Lord Monson nor Sir Henry Mildmay signed the warrant. A certificate from Dr. Warner is annexed stating that Sir Henry Mildmay is suffering from a rupture, and that if the sentence of drawing him in a sledge from the Tower to Tyburn is carried out it will endanger his life. Robert Wallop⁶ states that in sitting at the King's trial he was actuated by a similar desire of saving His Majesty's life. He was only once present at the trial, and did not sign the warrant. Henry Smith⁷ prays for mercy because he was a very young man at the time of the King's trial, and was drawn into the pretended Court by threats and importunities. He signed the warrant for the King's execution. James Temple,⁸ in a very curious petition, declares that Dr. Goffe, with the advice of Dr. Hamond, came to him as from the late King desiring and requiring him not to decline acting, on purpose that he might discover what resolutions were taken concerning His Majesty, and who were the chief promoters thereof. Temple nevertheless signed the warrant. Thomas Waite⁹ declares that he was made one of the Court without his consent; was induced by threats to come to town; and then, being a young man and ignorant of the laws, was by the devices of Cromwell and Ireton trepanned out of the House, and forced by them into the detestable Court; and that he was afterwards further forced by them to sign a writing not knowing what was contained therein. Waite signed the warrant. Gilbert Millington¹⁰ acknowledges his prodigious offences (he signed the warrant) and prays for mercy. There are several affidavits put in on behalf of John Downes¹¹ (attached probably to a petition now lost), intended to show that he endeavoured to gain a further hearing for the King, and containing many interesting details. Downes signed the warrant. George Fleetwood¹² maintains that he came to Westminster about other occasions, and unfortunately met with Oliver Cromwell, whose power, commands, and threats frightened him into the Court. He signed the warrant.

Pages 88 to 93 of the Appendix contain some most interesting records under the heading "Papers relating to the late King's goods." On the 9th of May 1660 a committee was appointed to consider and receive information where any of the late King's jewels and pictures were, and to advise of some course how the same might be restored to His present Majesty. The committee was afterwards empowered to order the seizure of all such goods as should be discovered to them, and Thomas Beauchamp, late clerk to the trustees for the sale of the King's goods, was ordered to deliver his books of inventories to Mr. Webb, His Majesty's surveyor. Amongst the existing returns and inventories sent in in pursuance of this order are to be found descriptive lists, with the estimated values, of paintings, statues, arras hangings, armour, furniture, &c., belonging to the various palaces, and of the King's horses at Tidbury Race. Amongst the documents are returns by Peter Lely, John Stone, Emanuel de Critz, and George Goldrop, the friend of Vandyke and Lely.

The letter and declaration of Charles II. from Breda,¹ referred to in the First Report of the Commissioners, are included in the period now under consideration. There are also copies of several of his speeches² to Parliament, which are interesting as being in the King's own handwriting.

We must not omit mention of a contemporary copy of a letter from Oliver Cromwell³ when Lord Lieutenant of Ireland addressed to the Speaker of the House of Commons, a version of which is given in Cromwelliana, and also in Carlyle's Letters and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell, but the copy in the Archives of the House of Lords contains various passages omitted in both those authorities, passages relating to the losses, want, and sufferings of the Parliament forces, suppressed no doubt at the time in order that the real condition of the army might not be known; a condition further illustrated by letters from Colonel Michael Jones,⁴ whose death is recorded in the letter from Cromwell just mentioned, and by a petition from the City of Dublin.⁵

On the 5th of February 1658-9, Richard Cromwell⁶ signs letters patent for protecting Thomas Bushell and his co-adventurers in draining and working the deserted works of Sir Bevis Bulmer in Mendip Forest. Bushell was governor of Lundy Island for Charles I., and at p. 81 a number of papers are noticed relating to the surrender of the island in 1647, and also to Bushell's mining schemes; amongst the latter is an interesting affidavit of Walter Basbee, who says that about fifty years ago, when he was "Say Master" to Goldsmith's Hall, he was sent by King James to the Emperor of Russia to make him a standard of gold and silver in his mint in the city of Muscovia, and no sooner was this done than he was commanded by the Emperor to refine the gold of a rich copper mine in Siberia, five hundred miles beyond the Volga, which held to the value of three, four, or five hundred pounds of gold to every ton. Basbee remained there until taken prisoner by the Tatars, but was afterwards exchanged and sent to England, where he has ever since spent his time under Mr. Bushell's philosophical way taught him by the late Lord Chancellor Bacon, by which he believes this age may exceed all former ages in mineral discoveries. Bushell expects that the royalties on the products of his mining operations will relieve the subjects from a considerable part of their heavy taxes, and quotes a saying of Lord Bacon "that most politic expedients for the increment of a Prince's coffers have a strong influence upon the people's purses, but innocent mineral productions come nearest the idea of divine bounty," he also gives an explanation of his mining plan, hoping, he says, to verify thereby the old proverb that "Hingston Down well wrought is worth London Town dearly bought."

Amongst a long list of complaints made by some of the inhabitants of Yeldon, Beds, against their rector Wm. Dell, they accuse him of countenancing and suffering upon Christmas Day last "one Bunyon⁷ of Bedford, a tinker, "to speak in his pulpit to the congregation," no orthodox minister officiating in the church that day. The complaint was referred to the Committee for Petitions, and by them dismissed.

In May 1660, Dr. John Oliver⁸ prays to be restored to the presidency of Magdalen College, Oxford,⁹ and in July of the following year a petition is presented in the name of the president and fellows of the college, signed however by two only of the fellows,

H. Yerbury and Nath. Chyles, complaining that in the year 1646 a messenger from the House of Lords, under an order for seizing popish reliques, carried away from the college a mitre, crozier, staff, copes, and other things, the venerable remains of their founder, reputed to be worth about 2,000*l*. The messenger pretends that he delivered them to Mr. Alexander Thane, then usher of the Black Rod, who, with Wheeler, a goldsmith, converted them to their own use. The petitioners pray for relief, in vain apparently, for the petition is marked dismissed, and there is no mention of it in the journal. Several other papers relate to the dispossessed fellows of Magdalen.

Gilbert Sheldon,¹ who was in a few months to become Bishop of London, and later Archbishop of Canterbury, prays that the profits of the parish of Newington, Surrey, may be secured in the hands of the churchwardens until his claim to the living is decided. This petition is one of a very large number of similar petitions from the royalist clergy, amongst which are petitions from Robert Skinner, Bishop of Oxford,² and John Warner, Bishop of Rochester.³ Bridget Wright,⁴ widow of Robert, Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, appeals for redress against Sir William Brereton, who seized all her plate, jewels, and money, contrary to the conditions under which Eccleshall Castle was surrendered after a siege, in which her husband died, and she herself was severely wounded.

Robert Pory, chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, complains to the House, in 1661, of the desecration of Archbishop Parker's tomb,⁵ at Lambeth by Scott and Matthew Hardy, praying that Hardy (Scott had been executed) may be ordered to reveal where the bones of the Archbishop are, in order that they may be restored to the place where they were first deposited in the chapel, as the monument is still extant, and capable of being again fixed in the place where it was originally erected. Strype and other authorities attribute the restoration of Archbishop Parker's tomb to Sir William Dugdale, the antiquary, in Archbishop Sancroft's time.

On the 22nd of February 1647-8, is a notice of the ordinance to attain David Jenkins⁶ for repudiating the authority of the Parliamentary Commissioners of the Court of Chancery, and for adjudging divers persons guilty of high treason for adhering to the Parliament; and on page 78 is a copy of Colonel Shapcott's⁷ speech against Whitelock's proposal of making the Protectorship hereditary.

On the 4th of May 1648, Edward Lord Herbert of Chisbury,⁸ complains that of the 20*l*. a week allowed him upon the surrender of Montgomery Castle is much in arrear, which he prays may be paid, and the order for payment continued, if not during his life, at least till he is satisfied for the losses he has sustained. He died on the 20th of August in the same year, and in the following September his son Edward prays that he may have the sole privilege for fourteen years of printing and publishing his father's History of Henry VIII., Tractate de Veritate, and other works, the manuscripts of which are in his hands—a petition resisted by Thomas Whitaker, citizen and stationer of London, who maintains that the printing was entrusted to him by the late Lord Herbert, and that the copies in his possession are his Lordship's ultima manus.

On the 19th of September 1648 Colonel Monck,⁹ informs the Parliament by letter of the surrender of Carrickfergus and Belfast, and on the 26th of July 1660 is a certificate by Monck, then Duke of Albemarle, in favour of Wm. Lenthall, the late Speaker of the House of Commons; while another certificate from him, dated 27th of November 1661, supports the appeal for mercy of the regicide Fleetwood, whose appeal is also supported by Lord Ashley.¹⁰ Abraham Dowcett¹¹ prays for consideration on account of his faithfulness to His late Majesty. He was one of the King's servants at Carisbrook, and accessory to his futile attempt at escape through one of the windows of the castle. Elizabeth, widow of Captain John Burley,¹² prays that Sergeant Wyld, and the other judges who sentenced her husband, may be excepted out of the general act of pardon. This petition corroborates the account given by Lord Clarendon of Burley's foolish attempt to effect a rising of the inhabitants of the Isle of Wight, and of his subsequent execution. Burley was the first who was made guilty of high treason for adhering to the King. Sir Sackville Crow, ambassador from Charles I. to the "Emperor of Turkey" details the barbarous usage inflicted on himself and his family by Sir Thomas Bendish,¹ the representative of the Parliament, of whose conduct the two brothers of Sir Henry Hyde also complain.

An allusion to Ben Jonson's works is not without interest. Thomas Walkley, on the 20th of December 1648, complains that having about six years since bought a piece of poetry of Mr. Ben Jonson, which cost him 40*l.*, and having printed it by authority, which cost him 300*l.* more, new licensers have been appointed by the Parliament, of whom one, Sir Nathaniel Brent, is out of town, and the other, Mr. Langley, pretends business, so he cannot peruse the poem.

Robert Danvers alias Villiers, whom their Lordships are pleased to honour with the title of Viscount Purbeck,² desires to divest himself of his peerage, as he has not an estate in any competent degree to support such an honour.

The destitution, even of those who had fought on the winning side in the long struggle between the King and the Parliament, is shown in many applications for payment of arrears of pay, applications which continued to be made in spite of an order of the 13th of October 1648 against officers disturbing the Houses for their arrears. The wife of Colonel Hercules Huncks,³ who was so prominent at the time of the trial and execution of the King, prays that some part of the arrears due to her husband may be paid her; 1,500*l.* being due to him for service in Ireland, whither he has again returned to spend his dear blood for the good of that kingdom, while she has nothing left meantime for the maintenance of herself and her children. Jane Farrett⁴ applies to the Commons for a fourth of the 400*l.* due to her late husband, to enable her to bury his corpse, which still lies above ground; while Anne, widow of Captain Henry⁵ Bowen, makes a like application, 760*l.* being due to her late husband, who died on Saturday last leaving her with four children, and having in his last sickness pawned all that ever he had, so that she and her children are ready to perish and she has not wherewithal to inter his corpse. Captain Thomas Plunkett⁶ prays for stay of execution of sentence of death upon his kinsman, Captain James Plunkett, who having long attended in vain for some part of his arrears, until driven to despair and ready to perish for want, and being a soldier and merely to avoid starving, which is contrary to nature, did most unfortunately meet with one upon the highway, and took from him about 15*l.* in money, merely to keep himself alive, using no violence nor doing any hurt to the man, for which he is found guilty and is like to suffer death. George Wither⁷ complains that by want of his arrears of pay his family is reduced from eighteen household servants to one, his diet from several dishes at a meal to many meals out of one dish, and otherwise to no meal in the whole day; he is now feeding upon his household stuff in hope that when that is consumed God will take him and his out of this unmerciful world. Much local information is contained in the calendar with respect to the King's River,⁸ or new river from Longford to Hampton Court through Hanworth, Feltham, and the neighbouring places; to the navigation of the Wey⁹ from Guildford to the Thames; to the condition of the fens,¹⁰ and the quarrels between the inhabitants, and the "undertakers" and settlers; to the disputes between the towns of Yarmouth and Lowestoft¹¹ about their respective fishing rights; to Sackville College,¹² East Grinstead; to the "Wells, called Tunbridge Wells,"¹³ and many other places; while the condition of debtors, and the state of the prisons, emigration, and transportation to America, the jurisdiction of the House of Lords, and the privileges of members of both Houses of Parliament, and of their dependents, are illustrated in numerous papers.

It must not, however, be supposed that this enumeration exhausts the papers, which contain interesting matter of historical, local, or personal interest, for even a cursory glance at the pages of the calendar will show how many persons and subjects well deserving attention have been left unnoticed.

The Marquis of Salisbury.—The late Mr. Brewer had completed his chronological list of the historical papers at Hatfield House (Appendix, p. 182). A calendar of them is in progress, a portion of which we hope will be sufficiently advanced to be printed in your Commissioners' next Report.

The Earl of Denbigh.—The manuscripts of Lord Denbigh, which have already enabled the Commission to add so much that is valuable as throwing light upon the domestic and public history of the times of the Civil War, have supplied a number of equally interesting documents relating to the Revolution of 1688. Amongst them is a series of letters from 1686 to 1693, written, with one exception, from London to a correspondent at the Hague, and entering minutely into the political events of the time. Though the series is broken, only one letter belonging to the first mentioned year, there is enough to show that the letters were intended for the information of some one at the Hague who was deeply interested in the events which the Revolution had brought about, and who was a strong adherent of the new order of things. Mr. R. B. Knowles gives his reasons (Appendix, p. 196) for contending that they were addressed to Dykevelt. If he be right, and there is some warrant to believe that he is, the letters acquire an additional importance. But taking them simply as records of passing events at so critical a period of English history, they may be reckoned amongst the most important family archives which the Commission has brought to light.

The Earl of Egmont.—The collection of Lord Egmont contains many volumes of heraldry and genealogy, the original entry book of the High Court of Castle Chamber at Dublin tempp. Elizabeth and James I.; and a vast number of original letters to various members of the family of Perceval in the 17th and 18th centuries, giving information on Irish affairs. There are also several volumes of copies of letters, including many from George Berkeley, afterwards Bishop of Cloyne, to Sir John Perceval, afterwards Lord Perceval, which throw light on the circumstances of Berkeley's earliest ecclesiastical preferment, and give notices of various events at Dublin, London, Italy, and Rhode Island. Several volumes of Adversaria contain characters and anecdotes of various persons. A great part of this collection seems to have been gathered, and some part compiled, by Sir John, first Lord, Perceval. The report on the collection is at p. 232 of the Appendix.

Lord Sackville.—A further portion of Lord Sackville's manuscripts at Knole Park is reported on at p. 249 of the Appendix. The papers are miscellaneous, chiefly of the time of Lionel Cranfield first Earl of Middlesex. Many relate to the customs; many to Irish affairs; there are numerous petitions for payment of salaries by employés of the Crown; a copy of the articles for the capitulation of Heidelberg Castle; warrants for grants of land and money to Buckingham and others; and a draft of a letter of the King for a grant to the Earl of Holderness, who had helped to rescue him from the Gowries. Some of the letters and papers are of the time of Charles II.; and a paper of 1695 gives the names of the players at the Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre and Salisbury Court Theatre.

Sir Frederick Graham.—These manuscripts, of which an account is given at p. 261 of the Appendix, consist of the official papers of Sir Richard Graham, Viscount Preston while Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of France, 1682–1685, and while Secretary of State at the end of the year 1688. They comprise his letter books during those periods, and original letters from Secretaries of State and other ministers in England, and our ministers abroad, and letters from various persons in France and England, including letters by James II. as Duke of York and as King. There are a good many papers relating to Charles the Second's mediation between France and Spain; and the letters during Lord Preston's short period of office in 1688 are very interesting; among these are letters by several foreign Princes and towns to James II., congratulating him on the birth of his son. There are notices of the Abbé Primi, and of his book, which Lord Preston caused to be suppressed because it reflected on the conduct of Charles II.

Sir Alexander Malet.—The additional manuscripts submitted by Sir Alexander Malet comprise a good copy of the Tree of Commonwealth, by Edmond Dudley; notes on the controversy between Bucer and Alasco in the matter of ecclesiastical vestments; copies of letters by and to Beza and the Archbishops of Canterbury and St. Andrews; papers on Scotch affairs in 1585 and 1586, including a curious account of a scene in an Edinburgh church where the king was present. There is also a long defence by James Maitland of his father William Maitland of Lethington against the calumnies of Leslie Bishop of Ross, and various other papers on English and Scotch civil and ecclesiastical matters in the 16th and 17th centuries. An account of these manuscripts is at p. 428 of the Appendix.

Sir Harry Verney.—This collection consists chiefly of several thousands of letters of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. The letters noted in the Appendix (p. 433) range from 1640 to 1688, and a few of later date. The majority are to and from Sir Ralph Verney, son of Sir Edmund Verney, who was slain in the battle of Edge Hill, and of whose death an account is given. The letters from Ireland in 1641 and 1642 are very interesting, and there are notices of the military movements of both sides in England. Sir Ralph Verney could not make up his mind to take the covenant, so in 1643 he refrained from taking his seat in Parliament, and went abroad, where he remained some years, during which time he kept up an active correspondence with Sir Roger Burgoyne and other friends, who gave him information of English affairs and of the conflicts between the contending parties. The letters give much court and town news, including an account of the last moments of the life of the Duchess of York in 1671, and of the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Commission against the Bishop of London in 1686.

Mr. Apsough Fawkes.—The manuscripts of Mr. Fawkes of Farnley Hall include a number of early deeds formerly belonging to Fountains Abbey. (See App. p. 509.)

Mr. G. H. Finch, M.P.—This collection comprises many volumes of law, some compiled by and some copied for Sir John Finch, Lord Keeper, and Sir Heneage Finch, Lord Chancellor and Earl of Nottingham; some letters by Sir Heneage in the 17th century, and letters by several members of the Finch family in the 18th century; a number of volumes containing accounts of tours on the continent by Lord and Lady Pomfret in 1736 and 1738, and diaries by Lady Pomfret from 1738 to 1764. There are some papers about Lord Berkeley's claim to precedence in the time of Charles II.; a curious deposition by Mr. Lestrangle about the publication of Andrew Marvell's book called the Rehearsal Transposed; and a fine early copy in Greek of the four gospels. (See App. p. 511.)

Mr. G. E. Freere.—The manuscripts of Mr. Freere, of Roydon Hall, comprise the originals of the third and fourth volumes of the Paston Letters, and some others which have not been published; also numerous very interesting letters by Philip Gawdy in the 16th and 17th centuries, giving court and town news and his own adventures. There are also many Paston letters of the 16th and 17th centuries; among them are letters by Thomas Henshaw (an early member of the Royal Society) to the first Earl of Yarmouth, one of them telling of the robbery of the Duke of York's closet at Whitehall. A letter of 1682 tells of the Duke of Monmouth's popularity at Chester; and one of 1683 gives an account of the procession to Westminster of the newly created serjeants-at-law. (See App. p. 518.)

Mr. G. Alan Lowndes.—The manuscripts of Mr. Lowndes, of Barrington Hall, include the charters of the Priory of Hatfield Regis, and a deed resettling the economy of the house on the occasion of the permanent addition of two monks; and numerous letters by and to the Barringtons in the 16th and 17th centuries. Sir Thomas Barrington was a member of Parliament and the chief man in Essex on the parliamentary side during the civil war; and the letters of this period furnish interesting information on the military proceedings between the contending parties. There are letters of Oliver Cromwell, Hampden, Pym, and the Earls of Essex and Manchester. In October 1643 is a letter about the siege of Hull; and in 1655 a long letter giving details of the expedition against the West Indian Islands and the taking of Jamaica. (See App. p. 537.)

Captain St. John Mildmay.—Among the papers of Captain Harvey G. St. J. Mildmay, of Hazelgrove, there is an interesting manuscript volume of 1686 in which there are lists of the ships with their armaments, the castles upon the coasts of England, and the number of men in each county available for the defence of the country. There are also many interesting papers relating to the royal jewel house from the year 1625 to 1660. These consist of extracts from the office books, and notes made by Col. Carew Harvey Mildmay, who was one of the officers of the jewel house, and remained in sole charge of the office after the King left London. It appears that he was called upon to account for his charge both by the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1649 and by the King in 1660, and that these papers are the notes which he drew up and made use of in preparing his answer. The three crowns were seized by the Commissioners in 1649, and the last of the royal plate, viz. 1,023 oz., was given to Col. C. Mildmay in the year 1653 in satisfaction of his claim for arrears of salary. (See App. p. 590.)

Mr. W. More Molynæus.—The vast collection of manuscripts belonging to Mr. Molyneux, of Loseley Park, near Guildford, has been long known to students, and selections from it have been published in a volume edited by the late Mr. John Kempe, and in various historical and topographical works. It will be seen, however, from Mr. Jeaffreson's very full report on the papers (see p. 596 of the Appendix), that much new material of historical and antiquarian interest is yet to be gleaned from them. Mr. Jeaffreson's remarks, introductory to his abstracts of the papers, sufficiently indicate the general value of this remarkable collection, and it will be unnecessary for your Commissioners to dwell at any length upon them. The bulk of the correspondence ranges in date from the reign of Henry VIII. to that of Charles II., and the chief persons to whom the letters are addressed are Sir Thomas Cawarden, of Blechingley, Master of the Revels, Sir William More, and Sir George More, of Loseley, who occupied prominent positions in Surrey in the 16th and 17th centuries. Among the letter writers may be named Anthony Browne Viscount Montagu, Lord Keeper Puckering, Sir John and Lady Wolley, Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, Lord and Lady Lincoln, Dr. Tobie Matthew and Dr. Donne, Dean of St. Paul's. To a later period belong two characteristic letters of Dean Swift. Much interest attaches to some papers connected with the sale, by Sir William More, of the old Revels storehouse in the Blackfriars "to some that meane to "make a playe howse of yt," namely, to James Burbadge and others, who there founded the famous Blackfriars theatre.

The Rev. Thomas Webb.—The collection of Mr. Webb contains a number of letters to and by members of the Coningsby family in the reigns of James I. and Charles I.; letters of the Duke of Somerset and of Sarah Duchess of Marlborough to Sergeant Pengelly in the time of George I.; instructions by the Duchess to her counsel in her suit with Sir John Vanbrugh, and a draft of intended alterations in her will; papers relating to the Protector Richard Cromwell; a volume of surveys during the Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell of estates belonging to Charles I., his Queen, and the Prince of Wales; and many professional papers of Serjeant Pengelly, who was afterwards Chief Baron of the Exchequer. (See App. p. 681.)

Somerset County Records.—These comprise a perfect series of Rolls of enrolled deeds from 28 Henry VIII. to 4 George II.; a series of Sessions' Rolls from the time of Elizabeth; and a register (in twenty carefully kept volumes) of Proceedings at Sessions in the county of Somerset, which, with the exception of the eight years 1802–1810, covers the entire period 1646 to 1864. The Somerset manuscripts, preserved at Taunton and Wells by the Lord-Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the shire, are notably rich in documents that illustrate the social life of the county in the seventeenth century, some of the writings having reference to incidents of the civil war temp. Charles I., whilst others relate to the Duke of Monmouth's rising in James the Second's time. Some of the Commissions of the Peace, preserved with the older documents at Taunton, are important, as they passed the Great Seal of Charles the First or of the Commonwealth in the period covered by the great chasm in the series of the Patent Rolls. The numerous seventeenth century petitions to justices of the peace are also an interesting feature of the Taunton collection; and amongst other curiosities are two grants in survivorship under James the First's Great Seal, licensing two several sets of patentees to keep ordinary inns in towns of Somersetshire. The Register of Sessions Proceedings, kept at Wells, affords a great deal of precise information respecting the wages of agricultural labour in James the Second's time, and, together with other notable orders, a singular certificate touching the medical treatment of the rebels in Ilchester gaol after the battle of Sedgemoor, and a minute of proceedings (1 July 1685) at Bridgewater for the restoration of "Keynsham Bridge pulled down furor Belli" by the King's adherents "to prevent the passage of the late rebels over the same." The Wells collection of county manuscripts is also greatly valuable on account of its long series of awards, made in pursuance of Acts of Parliament, for inclosures and works of drainage, which afford the original titles of so considerable a proportion of the real estate of the county of Somerset. (See App. p. 693.)

Charters of the Duke of Athole.—The present report, by Mr. Fraser, on the Athole muniments embraces the collection of charters in the possession of his Grace; the letters, relating to a more recent period than the charters, and to events in which the Athole family were conspicuous actors, will form the subject of a second report. The introductory notice to the report shows that the House of Athole was greatly divided against itself in the trying times of the rebellions of 1715 and 1745. In the latter year brother fought against brother, and the family castle was besieged by one of the Duke's sons. Through later reconciliations and unions, the papers of both the rival parties centred in the Athole charter-chest. As explained in the introduction to the report, there are preserved in the Athole charter chest, and in the same bundle, letters from James claiming to be King James the Third, from his son Prince Charles Edward, and from their lieutenant-general, Lord George Murray, with letters from William Duke of Cumberland, the victor of Culloden, and Sir John Cope, who was vanquished at Preston. The introductory notice to the report contains a letter holograph of Prince Charles Edward, and another of Lord George Murray, on the condition of the army of the Prince in the rebellion of 1745. Lord George made certain propositions to the Prince to induce His Royal Highness to consult the "principal people" concerned in his cause instead of the "little people," as Lord George calls them, who were the only persons consulted, and managed everything to their own personal advantage. The remonstrance of Lord George was resisted by the Prince, who made answer in a spirited letter, which he says he has made insensibly much longer than he intended, and to which he might add much more. "But I choose to cut it short; and shall only tell you that my authority may be taken from me by violence, but I shall never resign it like an idiot."

The report mainly consists of an abstract of one hundred and twenty-four charters bearing on the history of the earldoms of Athole and Strathearn, and their early possessors, from the first half of the reign of King William the Lion to the year 1631. Two charters, granted about the beginning of the 13th century, contains gifts from the Earl of Strathearn to the Abbey of Inchaffray; and several relate to the see and "city" of Dunkeld at the close of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth centuries, and to the condition of the central district of Scotland immediately after the battle of Flodden (Appendix, p. 703).

Muniments of the Earl of Southesk.—The report, by Mr. Fraser, on the collection of papers at Kinnaird Castle contains a selection of the more important charters and letters, with a few miscellaneous papers. The charters have very considerable interest from the light they shed on some of the more curious feudal customs in early Scotland; and the first in the report shows us the monks of Balmerino receiving a grant of portion of a peat moss from the constable of Scotland, about the year 1230. An inquest of Angus lairds found in the year 1451-5 that the lairds of Carnegie held the lairs of Kinnaird and others in the thanedom of Old Montrose for the keeping of the King's ale-cellar in the shire of Forfar whenever His Majesty might reside there; and scarcely less amusing is the peculiar mode of seizin shown in a writ of 1479, when John Carnegie is invested in the lands of Kinnaird by being inclosed in a house on the estate, which is afterwards opened by the sheriff-depute; the ritual being completed by his receiving a gray-horned seizin-ox. Of two charters by Cardinal Beaton, one bears his private seal with the family arms, and was given while he was commendator of Arbroath. Among the royal letters at Kinnaird Castle is one, given in extenso in the Appendix, addressed by Mary Queen of Scots to Sir John Carnegie during her captivity in England. Three of the miscellaneous papers printed in the report relate to the part taken by the Earl of Southesk in the rebellion of 1715 (Appendix, p. 716.)

Mr. Douglas of Cavers.—The family of Douglas of Cavers traces its descent from the hero of Otterburn. The series of documents noted by Mr. Fraser begins with a charter by King David the Second to William Lord of Douglas in the year 1351; besides the extensive territorial possessions granted, alike in the north of Scotland and in its English border, the singular right is conferred of the ducatus or leadership of the men of the shires of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, and the Upper Ward of Clyde. Several of the papers relate to the active support rendered by the laird of Cavers to the Duke of Argyll during the rebellion of 1715. (Appendix, p. 726.)

Mr. Fenton Livingstone of Westquarter.—The family of the Livingstones, Earls of Calander, is historically associated with the tutorship of the royal minors of Scotland, and among the papers preserved in this small collection is a charter by King James the Sixth, erecting the lands of Calander and burgh of Falkirk into a free regality, in consideration of the care exhibited by Lord and Lady Livingstone in the education of the King's two daughters. Other papers refer to an outbreak of the plague at Falkirk in 1641, and to the offices of constable of the Castle of Blackness and keeper of the Palace of Linlithgow. (Appendix, p. 732.)

Mr. Oliver Rutherford of Edgerston.—The collection of muniments in the possession of this border family is not extensive. The first paper noted by Mr. Fraser is a grant, in Scotch, by the Abbot of Jedburgh, to Robert Rutherford and his wife, of lairs within the choir of the abbey, and is dated 1161. The late Mr. Cosmo Innes, in his treatise on "Scotch Legal Antiquities" in 1872, remarked that the right of sepulture is perhaps the only possession never separately granted in Scottish charters. It is satisfactory to be able to show that such grants do exist. Several of the other writs relate to Andrew Earl of Teviot, the distinguished military commander, and a benefactor of the University of Edinburgh. (Appendix, p. 735.)

The Marquis of Ormonde.—In reference to the work of the Commission in Ireland, we have the satisfaction of stating that Mr. Gilbert has been able to resume his labours there, and an extensive report from him on a further portion of the Ormonde archives will be found in the Appendix, pp. 737–834. This portion of the collection comprises letters and papers from 1680 to the eighteenth century, written by and in connexion with important personages in England, Ireland, and abroad. As the number of these documents extends to some thousands, it must suffice here to refer to Mr. Gilbert's report upon them, and to mention generally that they afford new historical information on many important affairs of the times in which they were written. Among some of the matters previously to 1689 specially illustrated by them the following may be mentioned, the personal intercourse of Charles II. and James II. with the Duke of Ormonde and his eldest son the distinguished Earl of Ossory, whose premature death in 1680 was deplored as a public calamity in England, Ireland, and Holland; the relations of Charles II. with his confidential advisers; the Government of Ireland; the political movements of Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, republicans, and fanatics; the discoveries of alleged "plots;" the condition of the native Irish; the acts of the organised bands of outlaws in Ireland, styled "tories," and the measures adopted by Ormonde to cut off their noted leader, Count Redmond O'Hanlon; proceedings in Ireland on the accession of James II.; and particulars of the latter days and death, in 1688, of the first Duke of Ormonde. Subsequently to 1688 the collection is rich in valuable letters and papers of the second Duke of Ormonde in connexion with his administration of the Government of Ireland, and relating to the high civil and military offices which he held in England and on the Continent under his relative William III., Mary, and Anne. We may add that Mr. Gilbert's report, in addition to new and valuable historic material, supplies interesting particulars on the relations which existed between the House of Ormonde and some of the foremost men of learning and literature in England, John Fell, Bishop of Oxford; John Tillotson, who, we learn from these papers, was offered a see in Ireland; John Evelyn; John Dryden; Matthew Prior; Sir Richard Steele; and Jonathan Swift, on whom the Deanery of St. Patrick's, Dublin, was conferred by the second Duke of Ormonde.

We beg here to express our sense of the obligations which the public are under to the Marquis of Ormonde for the liberality with which he has continued to afford Your Commissioners access to this most important and valuable historical collection.

Also, Your Commissioners have to express their thanks to Mr. Frederick Peake, of Bedford Row, for his gift to them of the manuscripts belonging to him (chiefly relating to the ancient family of the Nevilles, of Holt, cc. Leicester), a full account of which was given in the Third Report on Historical Manuscripts to Your Majesty. These manuscripts are for the present deposited in the Public Record Office.

Gratifying testimony to the interest taken abroad in the labours of Your Commissioners is borne by Baron Fernand de Schickler, who has lately issued a small volume containing a series of articles contributed by him in the Journal des Savants on the additional illustrations to French history found in Your Commissioners' Reports. Copies of this volume, "L'Histoire de France dans les Archives privées de la Grande Bretagne," have, with the utmost courtesy, been presented by the Baron to Your Commissioners, their inspectors, and to other gentlemen officially connected with their operations.

Report

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE calendar of MSS. in the repository of the House of Lords is carried in the present report to the end of the year 1665. Messrs. Fulkes and Lawson, whose assistance we have again to acknowledge, have completed the dating and arrangement of the papers to the year 1810.

House of Lords,
1st Jan. 1878.

1647-8.

CALENDAR OF HOUSE OF LORDS MANUSCRIPTS.

Jan. 1. Draft ordinance for James Danby to be clerk or register of York. L. J., IX. 622.

Jan. 1. Draft order for granting the sequestrations of the counties of Northumberland, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne to those counties for their relief. L. J., IX. 622. In extenso.

Jan. 1. Draft order for payment of 40*l.* per annum to Lieutenant Butler, who has lost both his eyes in the service of the Parliament. L. J., IX. 623. In extenso.

Jan. 1. Draft order for adding the Commissioners for raising 60,000*l.* a month in the county of Derby to the committee of sequestrations in that county. L. J., IX. 623. In extenso.

Jan. 1. Similar order for the Northern Association. L. J., IX. 623. In extenso.

Jan. 1. Draft of preceding.

Jan. 1. Draft order for payment of 30*l.* to the officers of Margaret's Church, Westminster. L. J., IX. 623. In extenso.

Jan. 1. Draft ordinance to clear Baptist Lord Viscount Campden of his delinquency. L. J., IX. 623. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. A memorial concerning Sir Wm. Armyne to be considered when the Viscount Campden makes his composition at Guild Hall. On the 11th of June 1643 Viscount Campden's forces came to Sir Wm. Armyne's house at Osgodby, Lincolnshire, and plundered it of goods and writings, taking away what they liked best, drove off sheep and cattle, destroyed his park, and killed and drove out his deer, and since then his tenants have been made prisoners, and large sums taken from them, by which Sir Wm. Armyne and his tenants are damnified at least 500*l.*

Jan. 1. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency. L. J., IX. 623-626. In extenso.

Sir Henry Knollis (two copies).	Anthony St. Leger (two copies).
Richard Culme.	Edward Wright.
William Shercliffe (two copies).	Peter Jennings.
John Headlam.	Jonathan Jennings.
Francis Layton (two copies).	Edward Trimlett and others (two copies).
Griffin Higgs (two copies).	Robert Gosnold (two copies).
	Thomas Stockton.

Jan. 1. Petition of Colonel Henry Grey; his accounts have been audited by the Committee for the county of Leicester pursuant to ordinance, but the Committee say that they have not power to pay him without an order from the House; he prays that this may be granted to enable him to return to his regiment in Ireland.

Jan. 1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Garnons Daunser has been approved for the cure of Moreton-upon-Lugg, Herefordshire.

Annexed:—

1. Deed of resignation of the living by James Warwick, rector. 1 Aug. 1647.

U 84062.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
1647-8.

Jan. 1. Petition of Humphrey Gould and others on behalf of themselves and many hundreds more in the county of Surrey; the petitioners in Sep. 1641 sued out a commission to inquire touching the meres, metes, and bounds of the forest of Windsor, but by order of the House of the 13th of December 1641 the commission was adjourned till January following; it was afterwards executed and returned into and enrolled in the Petty Bag Office in Chancery, but by order of the 11th of Jan. 1641-2 the House prohibited during its pleasure all proceedings upon the commission and inquisition, and the clerks of the Petty Bag consequently refuse to exemplify the record; petitioners, who are thereby denied their rights, pray for an order that exemplification be granted to them.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 13 Dec. 1641.

2. Copy of order of 11 Jan. 1641-2.

Jan. 3. Petition of Edward Davis, defendant in a writ of error brought by Solomon Smith; prays for a short day for arguing the errors. L. J., IX. 626.

Jan. 3. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., IX. 627-634. In extenso.)

Benjamin Cutler.	William Marshall (two copies).
Gregory Armitage.	Peter Bartowe.
Francis Sherrington (two copies).	John Mitchell.
Thomas Slingsby (two copies).	Jean Stroade.
John Shalcrosse.	Roger Knight.
Joseph Hillary (two copies).	Charles Jackson (two copies).
Robert Burre (two copies).	Francis Chocke (two copies).
John Coventry (two copies).	Richard Longe (two copies).
William Bromley (two copies).	William Coriton (two copies).
John Soame (two copies).	Tobias Swinburne (two copies).
George and Thomas Southcoate.	Edward Phillipps (two copies).
James Watkinson.	Alexander Moore.
Thomas Blackwall.	Sir Maurice Berkley.
Walter Chetwin.	Sarah Coxe (two copies).
Christopher Thompson (two copies).	Richard Newman.

Jan. 3. Petition of John Walbancke and others; the House having ordered that the sessions for the county of Buckingham should be held at Aylesbury, the petitioners attended there on the 29th of April last, but have been fined by some justices who met at Buckingham for not attending there; petitioners pray that their fines may be discharged. L. J., IX. 634. In extenso.

Jan. 3. Draft order for discharge of the fines.

Jan. 4. Petition of Warwick Lord Mohun; he complains that Sir Henry Carew has not attended before the referees according to their Lordships' order; that one of the referees has been unavoidably absent, and that the report is imperfect; he therefore prays that the hearing before the referees may be allowed to go on, and that he may have satisfaction for the costs and damages caused him by the contempt of Sir Henry Carew and others. L. J., IX. 635.

Jan. 4. Petition of Sir Henry Carew and others; they complain that Lord Mohun, when in command of some of the King's forces, seized the lands now in question, that he has prevented petitioners from proceeding against him at law by claiming privilege, and has thrown delay in the way of their obtaining a hearing before their Lordships, alleging that they have been guilty of contempt of the orders of the House; they pray to be permitted to proceed at law, or that a speedy day may be appointed for hearing their case, and that meantime Lord Mohun may be prohibited from cutting timber, or taking tin and other profits from the lands in question. L. J., IX. 635.

Jan. 4. Report of Sir Edward Leech on the cause. L. J., IX. 635. In extenso.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Jan. 4. Petition of Captain John Lea; he complains that while he and his eldest son were serving at Lyme, Lord Mohun quartered in a house in Dorchester in which were petitioner's mercery and household goods worth 600*l.*, and caused them to be plundered; petitioner, who has served Parliament in person and estate, while his son has lost one of his hands and has received in all eleven wounds, prays that he may have reparation from Lord Mohun, or be permitted to proceed against him at law. L. J., IX. 635.

Dame Joan Boteler. Thomas Broughton.

Jan. 4. Petition of Sir Anthony Morgan; he complains that, whereas certain lands belonging to his brother were by ordinance of Parliament assigned to trustees for the payment of the debts of John Pym and maintenance of his children, the trustees have taken possession of the manor of Heyford and other lands in Northamptonshire which belong only to petitioner; he prays leave to try his title at law, and that meantime no persons may be permitted to meddle with the woods, or rents. Noted. Read, nothing done.

Jan. 4. Petition of Giles Peny, of East Quantoxhead, in the county of Somerset; when living near Bridgewater petitioner was taken prisoner by the King's party, almost starved and forced to take a major's commission, he never acted upon it, but came into the Parliament upon the surrender of Bridgewater, and has since served with three men, his arrears for which are unpaid, he has been sequestered and fined, his estate being only for the life of his wife, who is aged and sick, he is now in want of necessary living, and prays the House to acquit him of his fine in lieu of his arrears.

Jan. 4. Application for an order for institution and induction for Heseiah King to the rectory of Fulmer, in the county of Cambridge (?).

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that King has been approved for the cure. 3 Jan.

Jan. 4. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that George Fische has been approved for the cure of Ellington, Northumberland (?).

Jan. 5. Draft ordinance to clear Thomas Lord Cromwell of his delinquency. Read this day and respited. L. J., IX. 636.

1. Certificate of his delinquency. 16 Dec. 1647. C. J., V. 386. In extenso.

Jan. 5. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., IX. 637-639. In extenso):—

Thomas Beamont.	Thomas Metcalfe.
Daniel Maude.	Spencer Lucy.
Edward Lewen.	Sir Edward Berkley.
William Thomas.	Richard Berkley.*
Henry Slaughter.	Sir Edward Griffin.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of ordinance being sent from the House of Commons.

Jan. 5. Draft order nominating additional members to the Committee of Excise. L. J., IX. 639. In extenso.

Jan. 5. Draft ordinance to clear Samuel Isaack of his delinquency. C. J., V. 418.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of delinquency.

Jan. 6. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency. L. J., IX. 641-2. In extenso.

Richard Sikes.*	Edward Copley.*
Laurence Bull.*	James Longe.

Jan. 6. Draft order for removal of suspected persons from about the King. L. J., IX. 642. In extenso.

Jan. 6. Draft order for payment of 100*l.* to Lady Shirley. L. J., IX. 642. In extenso.

Jan. 6. Additional directions for the billeting of the army when they are upon a march or settled in their quarters. L. J., IX. 642. In extenso.

Jan. 6. Draft ordinance to clear Sir Rowland Berkeley of his delinquency. C. J., V. 420.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of delinquency.

Jan. 6. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Nathaniel Crab has been approved for the cure of Sutcombe, Devon.

[Jan. 7.] Petition of Sir Stephen Scott; he complains that George Morgan has applied to the House for review of a decree in Chancery on untrue grounds, as may be proved by the records of the proceedings. Morgan has obtained his liberty by Habeas Corpus to pro-secure his bill of review, and has made use of it to arrest petitioner upon a counter bond which by the decree in Chancery he was ordered to deliver up; petitioner prays that after eleven years' suit he may have the benefit of his decree. See L. J., IX. 643.

[Jan. 7.] Similar petition of same.

Jan. 7. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that John Lidston has been approved by them for the cure of St. Mellin [St. Mellion], Cornwall. See L. J., IX. 663.

Jan. 7. Certificate of delinquency of Sir Edmond Pye. C. J., V. 421. In extenso.

Jan. 7. Petition of Colonel Thomas Morgan, Governor of Gloucester; on the surrender of Hartlebury Castle the petitioner pledged himself to Colonel Samuel Sandys, of Omberley, to endeavour to the best of his power that the sequestration of Sandys' estate might be taken off without fine or composition; on the faith of this promise Colonel Sandys effected the surrender of the castle. Petitioner prays the House to be tender of his honour and to grant performance of his promise. C. J., V. 422.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from Colonel Morgan of his promise to Colonel Sandys. 4 Dec. 1647.

2. Duplicate of preceding. 24 Dec. 1647.

Jan. 7. Petition of divers of the inhabitants of the City of Chichester to the House of Commons; the Cavaliers, the better to defend the City against the Parliament forces, fired and pulled down the suburbs without even giving the inhabitants notice, by which some of the petitioners are utterly undone and all have suffered much; they annex a schedule of their losses and pray that they may have relief from those who did the wrong. C. J., V. 423.

Annexed:—

1. Schedule of losses sustained by the petitioners.

2. Petition of Grace Staker, widow, at the request of her poor neighbours in and about Chichester, to the Committee for Sequestrations. Many distressed inhabitants of Chichester and the parts adjacent are utterly ruined in their estates and brought into a perishing condition by the spoiling and burning of their houses and goods for the security of the City of Chichester. Prays the Committee to find out some means for the immediate relief of the poorer sort, they being in daily want of bread. (Undated.)

3. Another petition of same, addressed "Noble Peer," praying for relief for the poor inhabitants. (Undated.)

Jan. 7. Copy of order on the hearing of the writ of error, Butler v. Butler, remitting the cause to the Court below to give execution.

Jan. 8. Draft ordinance to clear Francis Lord Seymour and Charles Seymour, his son, of their delinquency. Passed this day in the House of Commons, but respited by the Lords on the 18th of Jan. following. C. J., V. 391; L. J., IX. 644.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of their delinquency. C. J., V. 391. In extenso.

Jan. 8. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (with certificates of their delinquency annexed). L. J., IX. 644-6. In extenso.

William Hickman.	Roger Mollineux.
James May.	Amias Isaack.
Edward Lloyd.	Thomas Chandler.
John Bretton.	Sir Gerrard Fleetwood.

Jan. 8. Draft of resolutions for Dr. James Usher to preach at Lincoln's Inn, and to be one of the Assembly of Divines. L. J., IX. 646. In extenso.

Jan. 8. Another draft.

Jan. 8. Draft order for restoring Duke Hamilton's pictures, &c. to him. L. J., IX. 646. In extenso.

Jan. 8. Draft ordinance for constituting a Committee of Militia within the Hamlets of the Tower of London. L. J., IX. 646. In extenso.

Jan. 8. Draft ordinance to acquit William Gibbs and others for paying 200,000*l.* to the Scots. L. J., IX. 646. In extenso.

Jan. 10. Draft order for a general collection for relief of the town of Bridgnorth. L. J., IX. 657. In extenso.

Jan. 10. Another draft.

Jan. 10. Petition of William Gyse, of Elmore, in the County of the City of Gloucester; petitioner is named Sheriff of the County of Gloucester; though ever ready to obey the commands of Parliament, he submits whether, as for the past seven years he has had no freehold estate in the county, he is a fit person for the office, and therefore prays that some one else may be appointed thereto. Noted. Nothing done in it.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 8 Jan.
2. A list of four gentlemen of the County fit to be sheriffs.

Jan. 11. Certificate of delinquency of Peter Dayrell. C. J., V. 425. In extenso.

Jan. 12. Petition of Arthur Eveling and others; on the 17th of November last the House ordered Sir John Brooks to answer their former petition within three days, but he has never done so, and they therefore pray that he may be ordered to pay them their just debts, or else that they may have leave to arrest him and proceed at law against him.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of former petition. See Calendar, 17 Nov. 1647.
2. Copy of order on preceding petition for Sir John Brooks to answer. 17 Nov. 1647.
3. Affidavit of service of preceding order upon Sir John Brooks. 3 Jan. 1647-8.

Jan. 12. Draft order for issue of the monies come in upon the ordinance for adventurers for Ireland. L. J., IX. 658. In extenso.

Jan. 12. Petition of Dr. William Gouge and others, surviving trustees for the disbursing of the moneys contributed for the increase and maintenance of the six lectures in the parish church of St. Antholin, London, and other pious and charitable uses, praying for reversal of a decree of the Exchequer Chamber. L. J., IX. 658. In extenso.

Jan. 12. Petition of the Provincial Assembly of London for an increase of the number of delegates, &c. L. J., IX. 659. In extenso.

[Jan. 12.] Petition of the officers and soldiers of the garrison of Portsmouth; they complain that their pay has been much in arrear, especially whilst Colonel Norton was governor, and that the soldiery have become very troublesome, for they are so much in debt that the town will not trust them any further, and they have therefore no means of subsistence; they pray that their arrears may be speedily satisfied. C. J., V. 429.

Jan. 13. Draft ordinance for raising a further sum of 50,000*l.* for Ireland. L. J., IX. 661. In extenso.

Jan. 13. Draft proviso to preceding. L. J., IX. 661. In extenso.

Jan. 14. Draft order for payment of 5,000*l.* to Lady Brooke for the benefit of her son Fulke Greville, born after the death of his father Lord Brooke, who was slain in the Parliament service. L. J., IX. 661. In extenso.

Jan. 14. Certificate from Colonel Robert Tichborne, Lieutenant of the Tower of London, that the Earl of Cleveland rendered himself prisoner on the 13th instant: on the same paper is a copy of the Earl's recognizance of the 13th of July 1647, when he was allowed three months liberty on bail, and an order of the 23rd of November 1647, granting him four months further leave.

Jan. 15. Draft resolutions for vesting the powers formerly granted to the Committee of both kingdoms in the members alone of that Committee who are members of Parliament, and for adding new members thereto. L. J., IX. 662. In extenso.

Jan. 15. Draft order adding new members to the Committee of the militia of Westminster. L. J., IX. 663. In extenso.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar.
1647-8.

Jan. 15. Draft order for payment of 1,000*l.* for Munster. L. J., IX. 663. In extenso.

Jan. 15. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Richard Jennings has been approved for the cure of Combes [Coombs], Sussex. L. J., IX. 663.

Jan. 17. Petition of the Committee for the Militia of Westminster and parts adjacent; they complain that having issued a warrant to Robert Flood, High Constable of Westminster, requiring him to cause the petty constables to take the names of all persons belonging to the trained bands or auxiliaries, or fit to be listed in either, by his neglect the warrants to the petty constables were issued so close to the day for making the returns, that the service was retarded, and the militia is unsettled; the petitioners have no means of punishing Flood, and therefore think meet to represent the case to the House. L. J., IX. 663.

Jan. 17. Draft of declaration by way of preamble to the resolutions against making any further addresses to the King. L. J., IX. 664. In extenso.

Jan. 17. Another draft of the declaration. (Mutilated.)

Jan. 17. Draft of the resolutions. L. J., IX. 664. In extenso.

Jan. 17. Draft order for printing and publishing the preceding declaration and resolutions. L. J., IX. 665. In extenso.

Jan. 17. Order for a patent to be prepared for Dr. Thomas Hill to be Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. L. J., IX. 664. In extenso.

Jan. 17. Draft of preceding.

Jan. 17. Order appointing additional Commissioners for the monthly assessments of the City of Bath. L. J., IX. 665. In extenso.

Jan. 17. Draft of preceding.

Jan. 17. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that John Osborne has been approved for the cure of Westwoodhay, Berks. L. J., IX. 665.

Jan. 17. Petition of William Symonds alias Harriott. On the 12th instant petitioner was ordered to show cause this day why the judgments against him of Fitzhugh and Wells should not be confirmed; he prays the House to consider the annexed affidavit showing the hard measure he received, and to grant him a new trial, or longer time to prosecute his cause.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Wm. Symonds that Henry Fitzhugh and Richard Wells left at his house, not numbered money, but something sealed up in several purses for him to carry from Bedford to London; deponent is no common carrier, and did not negligently lose the money, but he was set upon and robbed by three or four thieves on the highway before break of day between Mims and Barnet, and lost not only this money but almost all the rest of what he had to bring to London, by which he is utterly undone, and can make no satisfaction for any of the goods left in his trust; yet Fitzhugh and Wells have prosecuted him at law, obtained a verdict against him, and laid him prisoner in the King's Bench. 13 Jan.

Jan. 18. Draft order for removal of the books, manuscripts, and other antiquities in the Library, Chair House, and His Majesty's Cabinet at Whitehall to the Library at St. James', there to remain for a public use. L. J., IX. 666. In extenso.

Jan. 18. Draft order for payment of the moneys that come in upon the ordinance for adventurers for Ireland to the Vice-Treasurer for Ireland. L. J., IX. 666. In extenso.

Jan. 19. Petition of inhabitants of Deene and Deenethorpe, in the County of Northampton, praying that Samuel Tayler may be appointed their minister. L. J., IX. 667.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Tayler is orthodox in doctrine, of competent learning, and unblameable in life and conversation.

Jan. 19. Petition of Charles Earl of Nottingham; when two pensions, one of 500*l.* per annum, the other of 1,000 marks, formerly granted to him were six years in arrear he petitioned their Lordships to recommend his case to the House of Commons, and that House then ordered him payment of 500*l.* a year out of the King's revenue, and 500*l.* a year from the Committee of Surrey in part payment of the pension of 1,000 marks, but no order was made for payment of the arrears; he has become much indebted for necessary support whilst in the service of the State, and without receiving his arrears cannot satisfy his creditors; he therefore prays their Lordships to recommend his case to the House of Commons. L. J., IX. 667.

* A certificate of delinquency is annexed.

House of Lords.
Calendar.
1647-8.

1. Certificate of the Earl of Nottingham's arrears upon his several annuities. 23 July 1647.

Jan. 19. Petition of Thomas Budd, prisoner in Newgate; at the sessions before the Lord Mayor and Justices of the City of London in December last the petitioner was sentenced to death as a popish priest, but upon consideration of the evidence that the things pretended against him happened no less than 22 and 28 years ago, and on his humble address for a small time for examining some absent witnesses the Lord Mayor and Justices granted petitioner a reprieve; the House required an account of this and were informed of the reasons, but the Lord Mayor and Justices apprehending that their Lordships were displeased by the reprieve have warned petitioner to prepare to suffer death on Friday morning (21st Jan.), refusing to receive any evidences or proofs of his innocency; petitioner therefore appeals and flies to the highest court of justice, and beseeches that his blood may be so precious that before he suffers there may be a review of what is charged against him, and, if he is not able clearly and fully by sufficient witnesses to demonstrate himself free of the charge, he desires justice may have its course. L. J., IX. 667. The Lords sent word to the Lord Mayor in answer to this petition that having had complaint made to them of the reprieve of three persons, they wished to be certified of the cause of the reprieve, but did not intend to limit the Lord Mayor and Justices in reprieving or not reprieving them as they saw cause.

Jan. 19. Petition of Katharine, one of the daughters of William Prude alias Prowde, late of Canterbury, Esquire, deceased; petitioner, who was born abroad of English parents, about the beginning of this Parliament exhibited a Bill for her naturalization in the House of Commons under the name of Hobart, and paid the fees and took the oaths, but his Majesty soon after departing from Parliament the Bill could not be formally enacted; she prays that her naturalization may now be granted, and passed by ordinance of both Houses. L. J., IX. 667.

Jan. 19. Draft ordinance forbidding the exportation of wool from Ireland, except to England and Wales. L. J., IX. 668. In extenso.

Jan. 19. Draft order for Sir Walter Erle and others to be added to the Committee of Indemnity. L. J., IX. 669. In extenso.

Jan. 19. Draft order for no general collection to be made, by way of brief, for demanding the charity of people, except under the Great Seal. L. J., IX. 669. In extenso.

Jan. 19. Draft orders for appointment of sheriffs in the counties of Brecon, Carnarvon, &c. L. J., IX. 669. In extenso.

Jan. 19. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Mathew Allflat has been approved for the cure of Clutton, Somersetshire. L. J., IX. 669.

Jan. 20. Petition of John Greene, clerk, administrator of Edward Wymarke, Esq., that a day may be appointed for the hearing of his case against Earl Rivers. L. J., IX. 670. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Draft order for sending moneys to Munster. L. J., IX. 670. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Draft order for Lady Fairfax, widow of Sir William Fairfax, to receive the profits of the estate of Sir Henry Griffith until she be paid 1,500*l.* formerly ordered to her. L. J., IX. 670. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Draft order for payment of six months' arrears to the officers and soldiers of Dover Castle, &c. L. J., IX. 671. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Draft order for payment of 50*l.* a-piece to Joanna Peytoe and others. L. J., IX. 671. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Draft ordinance empowering a committee in Kent to exercise the powers contained in the ordinances for indemnifying soldiers and others for acts done by authority of Parliament, or for the service thereof. L. J., IX. 671. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Another draft.

Jan. 20. Another draft (two papers).

Jan. 20. Petition of Joseph Nicholson, late minister of God's word at Plumland in Cumberland; by order of the 7th of October last petitioner was instituted and inducted to the rectory of Plumland, but this order has been since reversed on information given that Richard Skelton, patron of the living, was in arms against the Parliament, but petitioner was then resident in Oxford, and knew not of it, and Skelton has since conformed. The House has, however, conferred the living on Mr. Gawin Eglesfield, who was also in arms against the Parliament as the annexed oath shows; petitioner prays the House not to deprive him of the rectory, his sole livelihood, nor to confirm another therein who has been guilty of the same delinquency as the patron. Noted.—Nothing done therein. On the 25th of Feb. following the House re-established Nicholson in the living. L. J., X. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Sir Henry Fetherstonhaugh, of Kirkswold [Kirkoswald], Cumberland, that Gawin Eglesfield, then scholar of Queen's College, Oxford, bore arms under William Vallett, captain of a troop under Colonel Sir John Byron immediately before the fight at Worcester. 15 Jan.

2. Copy of order of 7 Oct. 1647 for Nicholson's institution and induction.

Jan. 21. Petition of Dame Frances Weld, widow; she prays leave to proceed at law for recovery of the manors of Stepney and Hackney, extended by her in Oct. 1646 upon a statute of 10,000*l.* acknowledged by Thomas Earl of Cleveland in July 1631, and that an order of the 1st of Feb. 1646-7 forbidding her to proceed thereon may be discharged. L. J., IX. 672.

1. Copy of order of 1 Feb. 1646-7.

Jan. 21. Petition of Thomas Goodale, complaining of the delays procured by James Kist and others by bringing writs of error and other means to delay execution on a judgment obtained by petitioner, by which he has been kept out of his own for seven years, and praying that the writ of error may no more be renewed, but that he may have execution on his judgment the first day of next term. L. J., IX. 672.

Annexed.

1. Petition of Thomas Goodale; on reading his former petition, the House referred the case to the judges to consider of an ordinance that might prevent such obstructions of justice as that complained of, but though they have met three times they have made no report, and petitioner is therefore left remediless, whilst Mr. Hale, his counsel, tells him that the House of Lords alone can grant him execution on his judgment; he therefore prays for an order to this effect. (Undated.)

Jan. 21. Draft order for Robert Martin to be Sheriff of the County of Radnor. L. J., IX. 672. In extenso.

Jan. 22. Petition of John Honor, treasurer for the magazine of arms and ammunition for the city and liberties of Westminster. By an ordinance of the 4th of September 1643 petitioner was appointed treasurer, and was to receive 6,000*l.* to be collected within one month. He has spent much time and trouble in collecting the money, and perfecting books and accounts for the last four years, and has paid in 5,000*l.*, and has in his hands upwards of 120*l.*, chiefly in farthing tokens, which were then current: he was to have received one penny in the pound, which would have been good recompense had the money been collected within the time limited, but in consideration of his time and labour he prays that under the circumstances some allowance may be made to him on the passing of the ordinance respecting the Westminster Militia. L. J., IX. 672.

Jan. 22. Draft ordinance for the Committee for Sequestrations of Arundel Rape, in the County of Sussex, to fell and sell beech wood of the Earl of Arundel sufficient to pay a debt due from the Earl to Peregrine Pelham. L. J., IX. 672.

Jan. 22. Petition of William Martin and others, prisoners in the custody of the Gentleman Usher; they have been in custody for the last fourteen days for a contempt untruly alleged against them in a petition of Thomas Worsley and others for not delivering certain goods taken in extent for debt; the goods, as the Worsleys know, were sold before the order of the 7th of Oct. last, and the petitioners have always been ready to repay the money, deducting their charges; no affidavit has been lodged in support of the charge of contempt, and the petitioners therefore pray that they may be discharged or liberated upon bail, and that the Barons of the Exchequer, before whom the case is now depending, may be ordered to certify the true state of the case, or that the House will hear it speedily. L. J., IX. 672.

1. Copy of order of 7 Oct. 1647 for restitution of the goods.

Jan. 22. Petition of the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London, Governors of Christ's Hospital; praying that, according to the certificate of the judges to whom their claim to certain lands devised by Thomas Hawes was referred, the Trinity House may be ordered to put in security for the mesne profits of the same, or, if the Trinity House refuse to do this, that petitioners, on giving such security, may be put into possession of the lands in question. L. J., IX. 672.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the judges in the cause. 12 Jan. L. J., IX. 673. In extenso.

Jan. 22. Petition of Warwick Lord Mohun; the referees to whom it was referred to examine the contents of Sir Henry Carew and others are ready to report, and if the House does not think fit that he should call further witnesses he submits thereto, praying to be restored to possession of the lands in question, with costs and damages. L. J., IX. 672.

Jan. 22. Petition of Sir Henry Carew and others; the report of the referees is now before the House, but Lord Mohun still keeps the petitioners out of possession of part of their inheritance, and endeavours to take away the residue; they pray that they may be speedily heard upon the report, and that they may then also be heard upon their title, or have liberty to proceed at law. L. J., IX. 672.

Jan. 22. Report of the referees in the cause. L. J., IX. 673. In extenso.

Jan. 22. Letter from Lord Hunsdon to Edward Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords pro tempore, desiring him to communicate the following letter to the House. L. J., IX. 673. In extenso.

Jan. 22. Letter from Lord Hunsdon to the House of Lords, desiring that liberty may be granted to him as it has been to the other lords in the like case. L. J., IX. 673. In extenso.

Jan. 24. Draft order to give the committee at Derby House power to suppress insurrections and tumults. L. J., IX. 676. In extenso.

Jan. 24. Draft order appointing additional commissioners for assessments in Devon. L. J., IX. 676. In extenso.

Jan. 24. Application for an order that the papers of the Assembly of Divines be printed only by persons appointed by Adoniram Byfield one of the scribes of the Assembly. L. J., IX. 676.

Jan. 24. Draft order giving Thomas Kerige, Sheriff of Suffolk, leave to come to London, &c. L. J., IX. 676.

Jan. 25. Petition of Doctor Wm. Clerke and others, the creditors of Robert Walthew, deceased; they complain that they have been fraudulently debarred from recovering their debts by Thomas Wayte, who, pretending himself to be indebted to the King, procured Walthew and his eldest son to become bound to the King for payment of 2,080*l.*, and then used the King's prerogative to the exclusion of the petitioners contrary, as they conceive, to statute and common law and to the King's proclamation; they pray for relief. L. J., IX. 677.

Jan. 25. Draft order referring the petition to the consideration of the Barons of the Exchequer. L. J., IX. 677. In extenso.

Jan. 25. Petition of Sir Oliver Luke, John Trenchard, and Henry Trenchard; as the undoubted patrons of the living of Exford, Somerset, the petitioners presented George Trenchard, who was duly instituted and inducted by order of the House, but he was afterwards displaced by the committee of the county, who put another in his place, and continued him there by the strength of a troop of horse, until the House ordered the restoration of George Trenchard, who has, however, been again disturbed by the county troop, so that he cannot safely discharge his duties, whilst the parishioners have been forbidden to pay him their tithes. Petitioners pray the House peremptorily to order his peaceable enjoyment of the living, with all dues and profits thereto belonging. L. J., IX. 677.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Nich. Rawlinson and another to Mr. Trenchard, by order of the committee of the county; the parishioners are summoned to pay all tithes for two years past, or else to appear and answer for their contempt before Thursday next; the writers desire Trenchard to inform his counsel, and let them hear his answer before that day. 14 Jan.

2. Affidavit of Richard Gely in support of the petition. 7 Jan. L. J., IX. 677. In extenso.

Jan. 25. Petition of Ygnacio de Landahola, Spanish merchant. Petitioner was imprisoned in May last by Matheo de la Fita, who claims part of the plate brought over in the "Clare" by petitioner, all of which was made use of by the Parliament; the House in May last ordered petitioner's release, but the order has not been obeyed, and a new writ has been brought against him; he prays that he may not be kept in prison for money which the Parliament has, without the money being restored to him, but that an effectual order may be made for his release. L. J., IX. 677.

Jan. 25. Petition of Wm. Martin and others, prisoners in the custody of the Gentleman Usher, praying for discharge upon bail, or for a speedy hearing of their case, &c. L. J., IX. 677. Duplicate of the petition presented on the 22nd.

Jan. 27. Certificate from George (Lord?) Berkeley recommending Richard West for institution to the rectory of Okeford Shilling, Dorset. L. J., X. 3.

Jan. 27. Message from the Commons to desire the concurrence of the Lords in naming Commissioners to go into Scotland. L. J., X. 3.

Jan. 27. Draft order for disbanding the supernumerary forces, and paying the army to prevent free quarters. L. J., X. 4. In extenso.

Jan. 27. Order appointing additional Commissioners of Assessments for Wilts. L. J., X. 4. In extenso.

Jan. 27. Draft of preceding.

Jan. 28. Petition of Henry Stuart; petitioner is quite ready to pay his creditors proportionably out of the first money that he shall receive under the ordinance granted to him, but some will not be satisfied without arresting him, and have taken out writs for that purpose, forcing him to keep out of the way, and so exposing him to all manner of hardships; he prays for protection to enable him to follow his case and receive the money ordered to him. L. J., X. 4.

Jan. 28. Articles of the Commons assembled in Parliament in maintenance of their impeachment against Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham, whereby he stands charged of high treason, and other high crimes and misdemeanors: the articles charge him with treason for consenting to the proceedings of Parliament in July 1647, when the Houses, coerced by a mob of reformed officers, apprentices, and others from the City, revoked a former ordinance respecting the City Militia, and for his conduct in raising and arming forces to destroy the army under Sir Thomas Fairfax. L. J., X. 5. These articles are the same as those against Sir John Maynard which are entered in extenso. L. J., X. 13. (Parchment Collection.)

Jan. 28. Petition of inhabitants of Thorncomb, in the County of Devon; besides robberies, exiles, imprisonments, and wastings of their estates for their fidelity to Parliament, the petitioners have for more than twelve months past suffered the want of a preaching minister, on account of the delinquency of the late incumbent, now deceased; they pray the House (the patron being unable to present on account of his delinquency) to confer the living on Wm. Bragge, a godly, able, and orthodox divine. L. J., X. 6.

Jan. 28. Report of the Judge to whom it was referred to require John Baker to put in security for the value of the ships, the matter of the cause between him and Wm. Allen. L. J., X. 6. In extenso.

Jan. 29. Copy of Mr. Manley's relation that men are being enlisted under commissions from the Spanish Ambassador for raising four regiments to be transported into Flanders. L. J., X. 8. In extenso.

Jan. 29. Draft ordinance for all persons comprised within the articles of Oxford, Exeter, and all other garrisons to repair to the Committees of the Counties where they are, and produce their passes, and engage themselves by promise not to bear arms against the Parliament, nor do any acts prejudicial to its affairs. This ordinance was passed in the Commons on the 10th of July 1646, and is entered in extenso. C. J., IV. 613. It is noted. Laid by on the 29 January 1647-[8]. This is to be read in a full House and Peers to be excepted.

Jan. 29. Petition of Margery Riggs, of Winchester, widow, and Thomas and Edmond Riggs, sons to Ralph Riggs, late of Winchester, gentleman, deceased, in behalf of themselves and other orphans. In October 1641 Ralph Riggs agreed to renew a lease of the manor of Fareham, held from the Bishop of Winchester, on payment of 400*l.*, but the new lease was not sealed till March following. In 1645 the petitioner, Margery Riggs, lent Ralph Riggs 1,000*l.* on security of the lease, but by the ordinance of Oct. 1646, for taking away bishops' lands, all estates taken of bishops since Dec. 1641 are declared void, and therefore in strictness the lease on which the petitioners' money is secured falls to the ground; there was no fraud in any of the proceedings, and the petitioners therefore pray that their estates may be confirmed to them, for they will otherwise be reduced to great extremity. See L. J., IX. 619, &c.

Jan. 29. Draft resolutions to discharge Mr. John Glyn from being Recorder of London, to recommend Mr. William Steele in his place, and to discharge Mr. Glyn from being steward of Westminster. C. J., V. 450.

Jan. 31. Petition of Thomas Kirke, of Bourn, in the County of Lincoln. As an inhabitant of Bourn petitioner has right of common of pasture for cattle in Bourn North Fen, out of which the Earl of Lindsey and the rest of the undertakers have enclosed 1,100 acres of the best to the great prejudice of the commoners. On Michaelmas Day, 1640, seven beasts, and three horses, (being all petitioner's livelihood) then pasturing in the fen, were, with many other beasts belonging to the poor inhabitants, driven to Pinchbeck, several miles distant, by Richard Wright and other agents of the undertakers, and there impounded. Petitioner, with divers of his neighbours, went to Sir Edward Heron to recover the cattle, but could not have them unless he would subscribe to the granting away of the common; he thereupon procured a replevin from the Sheriff, and finding that his cattle had been driven from Pinchbeck to lands of Sir Wm. Killigrew taken out of Donington fen, he endeavoured to serve his replevin, but was assaulted and beaten by Sir Wm. Killigrew's agents, who threatened to shoot him; he tried to serve the replevin again, but the officers were outfaced and defied, and though petitioner tried all legal means to recover his cattle they were driven from Donington to Heckington Hall Yard, belonging to Sir John Brooks, thence to Lincoln Market, and there sold by James Fawcett and John Winfray, agents of the undertakers, without account or restitution of any part to petitioner, though worth 55*l.* and more, to his utter undoing; he was then forced to leave his home for fear of pursuivants, who were sent down for many of the poor inhabitants, of whom those who signed the decree granting away their commons were set free, whilst those who refused were forced to appear at great charge and trouble. Petitioner has faithfully served Parliament since the beginning of the troubles, and is now in actual service under Sir Thomas Fairfax; he seven years ago petitioned for relief in the matters above stated, and has had three several days of hearing before the House, but nothing has been determined; he prays the House to consider his extreme losses and expenses in prosecuting his petition, and to summon Sir Wm. Killigrew, Sir John Brooks, Sir Edward Heron, and others to appear before the House, so that justice may be done. L. J., X. 9.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.

2. Affidavit that John Winfray and James Fawcett were duly served with the order to answer the preceding petition. 13 March 1647-8.

Feb. 3. Petition of Captain Anthony Morgan. On the 19th of December last Griffith Lloyd by untrue surmises obtained an order from the House to stay petitioner's proceedings against him at law; petitioner recapitulates his case, and prays that the matter may be dismissed the House with costs, and left to the law. L. J., X. 18.

Feb. 3. Petition of Sir Henry Carew and others; the House has acquitted them of the contempts alleged against them by Lord Mohun, but they still dare not take the profits of the lands in question in consequence of the order of the 4th of January forbidding both parties from taking any of the profits until further order from the House; they pray now to be permitted to take the profits, and that a speedy day may be appointed to hear them as to their title, or else that they may be left to the ordinary course of common law.

Feb. 3. Order upon preceding petition. L. J., X. 18. In extenso.

Feb. 3. Testimonial from Dr. Robert Bedingfield and others that Thomas Harris is a man of sober and pious life, a watchful pastor, a sedulous and orthodox preacher, &c. L. J., X. 20.

Feb. 4. Petition of Edward Lord Vaux; petitioner, in the name of Thomas Bullock, has obtained a judgment in an action of ejectment against Robert Knighton and others, and a writ of error has been brought to stop execution, on the ground that Knighton is an infant, though really 30 years of age; petitioner prays their Lordships to examine this abuse of justice, or to refer it to some of the judges, with such speed that the petitioner may proceed this term. L. J., X. 21.

Annexed:-

1. Certificate that Robert Knighton was baptized on the 2nd of March 1616-17 at Irlingborough [Irlingborough], Northamptonshire.

2. Affidavit in support of the certificate. 3 Feb.

Feb. 4. Petition of Sir Nathaniel Brent, Thomas Manley, and Ann Vernon, widow of Captain Vernon; petitioners have, pursuant to the order of the House, put in affidavits respecting the lands at Gedney, out of which they have been put without law in these troublesome times, and they pray that the sheriff of the county may be ordered to restore them to possession. L. J., X. 21.

Feb. 4. Petition of Sir David Watkins; he complains that the Earl of Bridgwater owes him 2,000*l.* (orphans' money with which petitioner is trusted), but that he now only acknowledges part of the debt; that sometimes he has importuned petitioner to find him chapmen for land, promising to satisfy him, but when petitioner has done so the Earl has refused to lease or sell; petitioner has no remedy against the trustees, to whom the Earl says he has conveyed lands for payment of his debts, and therefore prays the House to give him leave to proceed against the Earl at law. L. J., X. 21.

Feb. 4. Petition of the shopkeepers in the New Exchange, and the inhabitants in the Strand and near thereunto. Petitioners complain that they and passengers that pass that way are much prejudiced and annoyed by a multitude of hackney coaches that are continually standing in and pestering the streets thereabouts, they desire that order may be given that no coaches may be permitted to stand in the streets. Annexed:-

1. Certificate respecting the fine imposed on Smart by the High Commission Court.

2. Printed copy of orders, &c. in Smart's case.

Feb. 4. Draft order in accordance with the prayer of preceding petition. L. J., X. 21. In extenso.

Annexed:-

1. Petition of John Heath, of Old Grange, in the bishopric of Durham; he complains that the House, on reading a petition of Peter Smart, has ordered a distress for 60*l.* to be levied on the estate of John Heath without any other addition, and that he is threatened with the distress, though the person intended is the receiver of the Court of Chancery of Durham; he prays that the order may be vacated or explained. (Undated.)

2. Draft ordinance for granting reparation to Smart. Apparently drawn up and submitted by him. (Undated.)

3. Paper which Mr. Smart humbly desires may be read with preceding ordinance, being the substance of it, and giving reasons to induce the passing thereof.

Annexed :—

1. Report of George Manley, Esq., upon the preceding petition referred to him by order of the House. Major Burges was committed to the Gatehouse prison because on his own confession he had been in actual arms against the Parliament, and had not taken the negative oath or the covenant, whilst his man was committed for adhering to the enemy; Major Burges' commission from the Spanish ambassador has been referred to the Committee for foreign affairs, which has not yet met, and the further consideration of the matter is therefore left to the House.
2. Certificate from the Committee of the Militia respecting the imprisonment of Col. Burges, and his man. 27 Jan. 1647-8.

Feb. 7. Letter from George Manley, one of the Justices of the Peace for the City of Westminster, to the House of Lords. Complains of the great disorders and wicked actions of some hundreds of school boys in and about the cloisters and abbey church of Westminster, on the previous day, being the Lord's day. The writer, having been credibly informed by a gentleman that did see, that about 50 scholars in the cloisters had violently laid hold on a maid aged about 15 years, and thrown her down, went there and found the scholars making great uproar, but could get no assistance, and could not find any beadle or constable. Being unable to discover the schoolmasters of these boys, the writer prays that all the schoolmasters in Westminster may be ordered to go on the Lord's day and apprehend their scholars for breach of the Sabbath, and that the steward of the court house at Westminster may be ordered to punish all constables and beadles who neglect their duty. L. J., X. 32.

[Feb. 7.] A note of the names of such as have concealments (Langdale, Sunderland, and two others), and of names of four delinquents who have not yet compounded.

Feb. 9. Petition of Arnold Breames and others; they complain that having obtained judgment in the Court of Admiralty against Nicholas Gould and others for 1,000*l.* for the freight of the "Lioness" of Dover, confirmed upon appeal to the Delegates, they are now vexed by actions at the common law, on the ground that the Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction in the matter; they pray that, as the Lords alone can give redress in matters of oppression of this nature, they would call the parties before them and hear and determine the case, and for the general good of the kingdom would remind the House of Commons of the ordinance for settling the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. L. J., X. 34.

Annexed :—

1. Another petition of Breames to the same effect as preceding.
2. Copy of Orders in Council approved by the Judges for settling questions of disputed jurisdiction between the Court of Admiralty and the Courts of Common Law. 18 Feb. 1632-3.
3. Another copy of same.

Feb. 9. Petition of Captain Henry Bell; through his long imprisonment one of the tellers of the receipt demands 175*l.* which he pretends to have paid; petitioner prays for an order to enable him to search in the offices of the receipt for the manner of payment of the sums and allowances that concern himself, and that his cause may be heard by the Committee of the Revenues, or referees named by them, without the long circumstance of a suit in the Exchequer, which petitioner cannot undergo. L. J., X. 34.

Feb. 9. Petition of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House; the late Nicholas Hawes devised certain lands in Kent to petitioners for relief of their poor and maimed seamen, to which the Governors of Christ's Hospital pretend a claim; the petitioners are ready to put in security to answer the rents from the time of their interest, according to the report of the Judges in the cause, in case the title should prove against them; they pray for directions as to who shall receive the security. L. J., X. 35.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of Judges report. 12 Jan. 1647-8. L. J., IX. 673. In extenso.
2. Copy of order thereon. 22 Jan. L. J., IX. 672. In extenso.
3. Copy of order of 22 Sep. 1647, reviving the cause in the name of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, Governors of Christ's Hospital after the death of Anne Hawes.

4. Petition of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House. Pray that the hearing of the cause may be postponed. (Undated.)
Feb. 9. Draft order to settle 60*l.* per annum upon the minister of New Brentford, Middlesex. L. J., X. 35. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Draft order for payment of 687*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* to Captain John Cambell. L. J., X. 35. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Draft ordinance for payment of debts due by Ulick Earl of St. Albans and Clanricard to the Earl of Northumberland, and Sir Robert Pye. L. J., X. 36. In extenso.

Feb. 9. A list of the Parliament's ships to be set forth for the next summer guard. L. J., X. 36.

Feb. 9. Draft orders for the Committee of the Navy to fit out the ships, and name commanders. L. J., X. 36. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Draft ordinance for repairing churches, and for payment of church duties. L. J., X. 37. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Petition of Alice Jennings and Anne Jennings, two of the daughters of Sir John Jennings, Knight of the Bath, deceased, to the House of Commons; petitioners, being unable by any fair means to obtain from their brother Richard Jennings the portions left them by their father, preferred a bill of complaint against him in Chancery to which he demurred, but the demurrer was overruled; he now refuses to answer because he is a member of the House of Commons; petitioners pray that in the case of so near relationship privilege may not be allowed, but that they may have liberty to proceed against him at law. C. J., V. 459.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of order in Chancery overruling the demurrer of Richard Jennings, and ordering him to put in his answer. 21 Oct. 1647.
2. Certificate that Jennings has not answered. 26 Nov. 1647.

Feb. 9. Letter from Leonard Darbey in Ludgate Prison to his much honoured friend Mr. Johne Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments; if you will let me know who says that I accused you of suborning witnesses I doubt not to put them to shame, for no one can accuse me of such a thing; I pray you have mercy on me and mine; God is merciful at all times, especially on submission; but since I wrote in submission to you I have found less mercy, for now you threaten to bring an action against me and to proceed to execution. I beseech you that I may find grace in your sight, that you will not believe the false charges against me, but that I may be restored to my home to work for my wife and children, who are likely hourly to be turned out into the streets.

Feb. 10. Petition of Sir Edward Leche, one of the Masters of the Chancery; petitioner with others stood bound in large sums of money for the Earl of Leicester, and formerly obtained a protection from the House; petitioner has paid some debts out of his own purse, and would have paid William Baker, by whom he is now prosecuted, if he would have accepted moderate interest as the other creditors did, but Baker stands upon extremities, and petitioner therefore prays for protection as the money due is the proper debt of the Earl of Leicester. L. J., X. 40.

Feb. 10. Copy of order for protection of Sir Edward Leche. L. J., X. 40.

Annexed :—

1. Petition of Sir John Thorowgood, of Billingbeare, in the County of Berks; about six years ago petitioner, in the name of William Baker, lent 500*l.* to Sir Edward Leche and others, but Sir Edward refuses to pay, pretending the debt to be the Earl of Leicester's, though the Earl is no party to the bond, and though Sir Edward and the others have very good security in land for money lent by them to the Earl; petitioner having filed a bill against Sir Edward Leche in the Petty Bag Sir Edward has obtained an order from the House to stay the proceedings; petitioner prays leave to proceed at law. (Undated.)

Feb. 10. Petition of Thomas Sturmy, praying to be discharged from imprisonment as he has been guilty of no contempt in the arrest of Ignatio de Landahola for though his name as clerk of the Court of King's Bench was to the writ he was no party in procuring it. L. J., X. 40.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of affidavit of Nicholas de Ferrara upon which the order was made for the attachment of Sturmy. 31 Jan.

Feb. 10. Petition of Sir Edmund Duncombe and Dame Hester his wife, administratrix of the goods and chattels of John Theaker and Diana his daughter, both deceased; they pray that all leases and writings relating to the manor and Castle of Crake and of Stockton and Norton brought into the late Court of Wards during proceedings there may be delivered to Thomas Danson for their use. L. J., X. 40.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Court of Wards for bringing the deeds, &c. into the Court. 20 Oct. 1624.

Feb. 10. Petition of John Cooper and Daniel Wilgrice. On the 12th of June 1644, for default of their counsel in not attending a former hearing of the cause between petitioners and Thomas Turner, the House ordered them to pay 20l. into the hands of the Clerk of the Parliaments, which they did; they have several days attended at great expense for the hearing of their cause, but Turner has not prosecuted it for a long time; they pray that they may have again the money so deposited upon given security to abide the hearing. L. J., X. 40.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for payment of the 20l. into the hands of the Clerk of the Parliaments, and of his receipt for the same. 14 June 1644.

Feb. 10. Petition of Warwick Lord Mohun. By order of the 3rd instant Sir Henry Carew and others are allowed to take the profits of that part of the lands in dispute which they have in their possession, but petitioner is not allowed to do the same with regard to the lands in his possession, unless he will waive his privilege. He prays that both parties may be equally dealt with.

Feb. 10. Petition of Richard Beringer, one of the philazers of the Court of Common Pleas. He has been nominated Sheriff of Bucks, which would deprive him of his office, and be the ruin of himself and his family; his case is now before the House by petition. He prays to be discharged from being sheriff, or that a day may be appointed for hearing his reasons.

Annexed:—

1. Reasons which Richard Beringer, one of the philazers of the Court of Common Pleas offereth for his discharge from the office of High Sheriff of the county of Bucks; he is bound by oath to attend the Court personally, and would forfeit his place if he did not so attend; the two offices are therefore incompatible, and he conceives that, by the privilege of a great Court of Justice, he ought to be exempted from the office of Sheriff.

Feb. 11. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Giles Workeman to the rectory of Alderley, Gloucestershire. L. J., X. 41.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Workeman has been approved for the cure. 7 Feb.

Feb. 11. Draft ordinance for suppression of all stage plays and interludes. L. J., X. 41. In extenso.

Feb. 11. Information and certificate of the Committee for Sequestrations within the barony of Kendal, and county of Westmoreland, respecting the violence offered to them in August last by Anthony Knipe and others, to the number of about 400, who came armed to Kendal and seized and imprisoned the Committee. L. J., X. 42. In extenso.

Feb. 15. Petition of Thomas Trescott, minister of Shobrooke, in the county of Devon; the rectory was given to petitioner by order of Parliament when sequestered from Edward Cotton, the late incumbent; Cotton is now dead, and petitioner prays to be confirmed in the living. L. J., X. 43. Trescott is called Prescott in the Journal.

Feb. 15. Certificate from the Committee for the county Devon that they have sequestered Cotton from the living, and placed Trescott in his room.

Feb. 15. Draft ordinance appointing Trescott to the living.

Feb. 15. Petition of Alexander Lord Forbes; by waiting nineteen months for the money due to him from the Parliament he and his family have been put to great streights, and his creditors have arrested him, thereby preventing him from following his business for his own and their satisfaction; he prays the House to command his release, and to protect him in freedom to follow his business till such time as Parliament shall pay him. L. J., X. 43.

Feb. 15. Petition of Thomas Morgan, of [St.] Maughan, in the county of Monmouth, and others. By lease made to them by Sir John Wyntor, before these wars, and since allowed by the Committee for Sequestrations, the petitioners hold certain iron mills, forges, and furnaces in Dean Forest, with other property, in trust for payment of Sir John Wyntor's debts, and for portions and maintenance for his lady and children; but Parliament having by ordinance granted to Colonel Edward Massey all the iron mills, forges, and furnaces in Dean Forest either belonging to the King or Sir John Wyntor, Colonel Massey has seized the mills, &c. above mentioned, to the ruin of Sir John Wyntor's lady and children, and the undoing of his creditors. Petitioners pray that they may be allowed to hold the mills, &c. without interruption. L. J., X. 43.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Committee for Sequestrations, allowing and confirming the lease to the trustees. 28 Jan. 1647-8.

Feb. 15. Petition of John Earl of Shrewsbury and Frances his wife in the behalf of themselves and others, the co-heirs and persons entitled by and under the co-heirs of Anne Lady Arundel of Wardour, deceased; a cause in the Court of Wards between the petitioners and Lord Baltimore respecting the honour and hundred of Christchurch and Westover, in the County of Southampton, was stopped when ready for hearing by the dissolution of the Court; petitioners pray the House to hear and adjudge the cause upon the proofs there taken, otherwise they will be put to great expense and delay. L. J., X. 43. In extenso.

Feb. 15. Certificate of ministers that Benjamin Collins is well fitted for the ministry. L. J., X. 44.

Feb. 15. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Jeremiah Levett has been approved for the cure of Plumtree, in the County of Nottingham. L. J., X. 44.

Feb. 16. Petition of John Perry, defendant in a writ of error at the suit of Thomas Gill, praying that the case may be argued the next day appointed for such business.

[Feb. 16.] Petition of sundry Scots officers, who were omitted in the first list, with their fellow officers and countrymen. Petitioners have long faithfully served the State, and in April 1645, being reduced, had order for stating their accounts, which they have long since done. The House of Commons was yesterday (15 Feb. 1647-8) pleased, upon a report of their several accounts being made, to order only one third part of their arrears, without interest, to be paid to them in full discharge of the whole. Petitioners, having in consequence of their long attendance since their reduction contracted great debts, pray that some further proportion may be allowed them whereby to discharge their engagements and transport themselves, and that interest at the rate of eight per cent. may be allowed to the advancers until they shall be repaid, and that the remainder of their accounts may be allowed to them. C. J., V. 462.

Feb. 17. Petition of Alexander Lord Forbes; he has in obedience to the command of the House made an assignment to Colonel Kempson of all that he can claim, and therefore prays for enlargement that he may have reparation for the affront done to him, and protection till his other petition can be considered. L. J., X. 47.

Feb. 18. Petition of Humfry Browne, of Gainsborough, in the county of Lincoln, yeoman, defendant in a writ of error brought by Richard Webster and his wife merely for delay. Prays that a short day may be appointed for the hearing.

Feb. 19. Petition of John Perry, of London, linendraper, defendant in a writ of error at the suit of Thomas Gill. The cause was appointed for hearing on the 18th, and he then attended with his counsel, but the cause was not heard; he has been at vast expense through Gill's unjust delays, and prays that the case may be again appointed for hearing with precedence over those not fixed for the 18th. L. J., X. 65.

Feb. 19. Order for Richard Beringer to take upon him the office of High Sheriff of the county of Buckingham upon peril of punishment for refusal.

Feb. 22. Petition of Thomas Jones and John Hetherley, dyers. In March 1645-6 a former petition against John Rutter was referred to a Committee, who, after a full hearing of both parties, made report to the House, which then ordered that Rutter should not proceed further at law against petitioners, and should discharge two judgments corruptly obtained against them as bail for Richard Fincham; this Rutter in contempt never did, but in February last, by a petition misinforming the House of the true state of the case, obtained an order reversing the former order, since which petitioner's goods have been seized, and 15*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* levied upon them unheard by virtue of the judgments, which ought to have been discharged. Petitioners pray that the money may be brought into the House till the cause be reheard, and Rutter called upon to answer for his contempt. L. J., X. 72.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same to the like effect.

2. Affidavit of Richard Wilkins. 12 June 1646.

3. Affidavit of Samuel Hall, keeper of the Marshalsea. 22 April 1645. See Calendar, 19 March 1645-6.

4. Affidavit of Thomas Purnell that Rutter tried to get Fincham into the country that he might recover his debt from Hetherley. 25 June 1646.

5. Petition and answer of John Rutter to the petition of Jones and Hetherley. He entirely denies their charges of corruption and undue proceeding, alleging that they are merely endeavouring by delay to prevent the execution of his judgments legally obtained. He prays that their petition may be dismissed with costs. 13 March 1647-8.

Feb. 22. Petition of James Risley. Petitioner has right by lease to certain lands in Wiltshire called Fountell Farm, which escheated to the Bishop of Winchester by the attainder of Mervin Lord Audeley, Earl of Castlehaven, and Henry Skipwith. He has now a suit depending for the said lands, and prays that he may have copies of the indictments of the Earl and Skipwith. L. J., X. 72.

Feb. 22. Petition of William Leonard, Robert Leonard, and Mary Leonard, the three children of Fiennes Leonard, Esq., deceased (second son of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Leonard, late Lord Dacres), and of Mary the wife of the said Fiennes, one of the daughters of William Prude, alias Proude, late of the City of Canterbury, Esq., deceased. The petitioners were born abroad of English parents, but have lived from their infancy in England, professing the true Protestant religion, and behaving as true subjects. About the beginning of this Parliament they exhibited a bill to the House of Commons for their naturalization, and paid the usual fees to the officers of the House, but His Majesty soon after departing from the Parliament the bill could not be formally enacted, they pray therefore that their naturalization may now be granted by ordinance of both Houses, that they may have the benefits of the laws of the kingdom.

Feb. 22. Draft ordinance for the naturalization of Wm. Leonard and the other petitioners. L. J., X. 72.

Feb. 22. The answer of John Lord Cobham, one of the defendants unto the petition of Thomas Kirke, of Bourn, in the county of Lincoln. Conceives himself in no way obliged to make Kirke satisfaction, as being no undertaker in the part of the fen where the cattle were supposed to be taken, and as having no interest in the distraint, nor is there any charge against him except that the cattle were impounded in Heckington Hall Yard, which however does not concern him, as there is a common pound there, and it is lawful for any man to bring cattle thither to be impounded, if taken within the lordship, and to take them away again without the knowledge of the Lord of the Manor. The House took notice that the answer was presented in the name of Lord Cobham, whereas in the order he was styled Sir John Brooks, and thereupon ordered him to show how he came to claim the title of Lord Cobham. L. J., X. 72.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of James Fawcett, of Dunnington, in the county of Lincoln. In answer to the petition of Thomas Kirke, petitioner says that he has produced his warrant for what he did concerning Kirke's cattle, and that his warrant was allowed to be sufficient for his discharge by both Houses of Parliament. (Undated.)

[Feb. 22.] Petition of Sir William Killigrew; he attended in person to answer the petition of Thomas Kirke, but finding that the summons from the House would not secure him from arrest he was advised, as he owes 11,000*l.*, to return home, and to put in his answer in writing; Kirke's cattle were taken on lands passed to the Earl of Lindsey and his participants by decrees of sewers, Kirke being one of the chief actors in and encouragers of the riots for destroying the public drainage works; his complaint of being threatened and assaulted is frivolous, and as for his being asked to sign the decrees of sewers it is foolish, for his signature would not have added to their validity, but some poor men who had cut the Earl of Lindsey's drains at Kirke's suggestion, and put their cattle into the drainers' corn, had their cattle delivered back to them upon their submission and tears, and the like favour may have been offered to Kirke, and by him rejected; Kirke and his neighbours have treated with contempt previous orders of the House in the matter, and could Kirke have been found he would have been taken instead of his cattle and brought before the House as his neighbours were, who were committed, fined, and ordered to make public acknowledgment in the market towns of their contempt; yet now Kirke, who was more faulty than the rest, has the confidence to seek justice from the House for his unjust complaints; petitioner therefore prays that Kirke's case may be deferred till the House has leisure to hear the whole matter, this will require time, as many of the persons concerned and petitioner's papers are many miles away; the drainers have lost 30,000*l.* by the conduct of Kirke and his neighbours, and petitioner lastly prays the House to consider the poor estate of himself, his wife, and family, who do beg their bread, which misery is fallen upon them by the riotous acts of Kirke and his associates contrary to law and equity, and in contempt of the orders of the House.

[Feb. 22.] Petition of Sir Edward Heron, Knight of the Bath, in consideration of his being 74 years of age, petitioner prays that this his answer to the petition of Thomas Kirke may excuse his appearance; at a conference of both Houses this complaint of Kirke's was debated by counsel on both sides, and it was then held that the drainers were justified in what they had done, but before any order was made Lord Say was pleased to move on Kirke's behalf that he was a poor man in great want and therefore to be pitied, in consideration of which Sir Wm. Killigrew agreed that the drainers should pay Kirke, by way of charity, whatever the House should appoint, and it was thereupon ordered that they should pay him 13*l.*, the uttermost his cattle yielded in the market, which was done, and was after to be allowed to petitioner as part of his tax for the lands.

Feb. 22. Ordinance for the attainting of David Jenkins, late of Grays Inn, in the county of Middlesex, Esquire, of high treason; for that he, when brought to the bar of the Court of Chancery at the suit of John Earneley, and being asked what answer he had to Earneley's bill, threw into Court a traitorous paper containing these words: "I have beene required to appeare in Chancery

Feb. 24. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Philip Gardiner has been approved for the cure of Tackley, Oxon. L. J., X. 78.

Feb. 25. Petition of Colonel Nicholas Kempson; whilst petitioner was serving under Lord Forbes in Ireland, his Lordship, being called thence with the rest of the officers, desired them to give him power to negotiate for their arrears, and petitioner, with others, then delivered all his papers to his Lordship upon promise of payment with the first, but Lord Forbes received and appropriated large sums of money, and particularly assigned 1,700*l.* charged upon the moiety at Goldsmith's Hall to strangers to his own use, until at last petitioner was obliged to arrest his Lordship, who, in petitioner's absence about the disbanding of his regiment, has procured a discharge and is about to go into Scotland; petitioner prays that Lord Forbes may be returned to custody or else required to give good security for petitioner's satisfaction. L. J., X. 78.

Feb. 25. Petition of Wm. Petty; he has contrived sundry ways of double and multiple writing, the effects and feasibility whereof, and consequently the profit which may redound to the Commonwealth is attested by many credible persons, petitioner therefore prays that in recompense of his pains and expenses an ordinance may be passed to enable the Commissioners of the Great Seal to grant him Letters Patent for the sole benefit of the invention. L. J., X. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Wm. Petty produced two copies exactly resembling one another of the first chapter of Hebrews in a quarter of an hour, being in less time than a professed writer wrote one copy. 22 Dec. 1647.

Feb. 25. Petition of Jos. Nicholson, late minister of God's word at Plumbland, in the county of Cumberland; petitioner inducted by order of the House to the rectory of Plumbland was afterwards ejected for the patron's delinquency, and Mr. Eglesfield superinducted in petitioner's place; but by oath annexed to a former petition (see above, Jan. 20) Mr. Eglesfield's delinquency was shown, and he was thereupon called upon to answer, but he has contemned the order from the Committee for Plundered Ministers to appear before them; petitioner therefore prays that the order in Eglesfield's favour may be reversed, and that petitioner who has attended for eight weeks at great loss of time and vast expense may be re-established in the rectory. L. J., X. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of service of the order of the Committee for Plundered Ministers upon Eglesfield. 16 Feb.
2. Copy of petition of 20 Jan.
3. Copy of affidavit attached thereto.
4. Copy of order for Nicholson's institution. 7 Oct. 1647.

Feb. 25. Petition of Edward Walker and others, owners of the ship called the Golden Angel; they complain that the mariners having wilfully or negligently damaged another ship, the Seaflower, at or near (St.)

HOUSE OF LORDS.

1647-8.

Bartholomewgate Bay, within the body of the county of Kent, petitioners have been wrongfully sued by the owners in the Court of Admiralty, and forced to give bail. petitioners thereupon applied to the judges for a prohibition, who by rule of court ordered them to draw up such suggestions as they would stand by, but the owners of the Seaflower continue their prosecution hoping in vacation time to exclude petitioners from the common law, they therefore pray that proceedings may be stayed until the judges of the King's Bench have delivered their opinion.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of rule of court mentioned in preceding. 3 Oct. 1647. Noted.—This House will do nothing in this petition.

Feb. 29. Petition of Sir Nathaniel Brent and others; their former petition to be restored to their lands at Gedney, the possession of which had been taken from them without law during the late troubles, was referred to certain judges who have now made their report showing that petitioners have been for some time in possession but have been disturbed of late years; they therefore pray to be restored to their possessions, in which case they offer to appear gratis and speed a trial in any court at Westminster whenever the pretenders to right of common shall require. L. J., X. 79.

Feb. 29. Copy of preceding.

Feb. 29. Order for the inhabitants of Gedney to answer the petition of Sir Nathaniel Brent and others. L. J., X. 79.

Payne v. Asty.

Feb. 29. Writ of certiorari, &c. for Frances Darke. L. J., X. 79.

Feb. 29.] Petition of Frances Darke, a poor distressed widow; she complains that Wm. Sherman sued her for the rent of a house in Dean's Yard, part of which had been pulled down, and the rent thereby extinguished, and outed her and her six small children; the Lords thereupon granted her a writ of error, but the roll has since been abused, and petitioner prays that the errors may be stopped until a report thereon be made to the House.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Martyn that the roll was altered and many erasures made by one Phipps. 12 Feb.

Feb. 29. Draft ordinance to clear Sir Gervase Clifton of his delinquency. L. J., X. 80.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of his delinquency. 13 Jan. 1647-8. C. J., V. 429. In extenso.

Feb. 29. Draft of preceding.

Feb. 29. Draft resolutions to prevent the raising of forces upon pretence of transporting them for the service of any foreign prince. L. J., X. 81. In extenso.

Feb. 29. Copy of preceding.

[Feb. 29.] Petition of Thomas Johnson and others, plaintiffs in a writ of error brought to reverse a judgment in the Court of King's Bench obtained by Thomas Barret and another; they pray that they may have till next term to return the certiorari.

March 1. Petition of the parishioners of Edmunds, Lombard Street, in London; pursuant to the order of the Committee for Plundered Ministers they have forborne to employ Mr. Wm. Launce as their minister, but he has taken the covenant, and expresses his zeal towards the present government; they pray that their deplorable case in being without a preaching minister may be considered, and that Mr. Launce may be restored to them. L. J., X. 83.

March 1. Petition of Martin Bentley and Katharine his wife, administrators of Anthony Hooper, deceased; in Hooper's lifetime power was given by order of the House to several merchants to examine accounts between Hooper and others; this they did, and a book was kept of the accounts and proceedings, the book, with other papers, examinations, &c., was delivered to the referees and then to Dr. Aylett for perusal, in whose hands it still is. Petitioners pray that the book, papers, &c. may be delivered to them that they may proceed to recover Hooper's debts. L. J., X. 83.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Order for petitioners to have sight of the documents. 10 Feb. 1647-8.

3. Affidavit of service of preceding order upon Wm. Le Cœur. 26 Feb. 1646-7.

4. Copy of an order in the matter of 1 May 1645.

5. Copy of order of 3 May 1645.

March 1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that George Cadworth has been approved for the rectory of Shenton?, Salop. L. J., X. 83.

March 1. Draft order for payment of 10,000*l.* to Sir Henry Vane, Treasurer of the Navy. L. J., X. 83. In extenso.

March 1. Orders concerning the return of the classes, and for removing obstructions in the settling of Presbyterian government. L. J., X. 83. In extenso.

March 1. Draft of preceding, &c.

March 1. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., X. 84, 85. In extenso.)

Robert Walker.

Tobias Jenkins.

Thomas Kempe.

John Style.

Sir Michael Wharton.

Humphrey Hide.

March 1. Petition of Dr. William Gouge and others, trustees for disbursing of moneys contributed for the increase and maintenance of the parish Church of St. Antholins, London, and other pious and charitable uses; the judges to whom the case of the petitioners was referred are of opinion that the decree complained of ought to be reversed, and petitioners therefore pray that an ordinance may be passed for this purpose.

[March 1.] Petition of Samuel Winter, minister of the church in Cottingham, in the county of York; the stipend of the vicarage is 29*l.* per annum, and 60*l.* rent reserved upon a lease of the parsonage inappropriate to the Bishop of Chester; Sir Michael Wharton is tenant to the Bishop, a man as disaffected to the ministry as to the Parliament, who is about to make his composition; petitioner prays that the parsonage may be excepted out of Sir Michael's composition, and that petitioner may continue to enjoy the same as he now does.

March 2. Petition of Anthony Fernandez Carvahal praying for redress against one Gore by whom he is unjustly troubled about certain "premios" of assurance. L. J., X. 86.

March 2. Note that the vicarage of Yealing[?], Middlesex, is vacant by the death of Mr. Cooper, and that the Bishop of London used to collate thereunto. L. J., X. 86.

March 2. Draft ordinance ejecting Dr. Samuel Fell, Dean, and the Canons of Christchurch from their places, and appointing Edward Reynolds and others in their stead. L. J., X. 87. In extenso.

March 2. Draft order for certain papers respecting the disposal of the King's person to be communicated to the Parliament of Scotland. L. J., X. 87. In extenso.

March 3. Petition of Robert Edbrook and others, of Exford, in the county of Somerset; in April 1646 the rectory of Exford was sequestered by the committee for the county from John Hunt for his delinquency, and John Langford was appointed by ordinance of Parliament to the cure, but on the 31st of December following, upon pretence of a voluntary cession of the living by Hunt, the House ordered George Trenchard, presented by John and Henry Trenchard, to be instituted and inducted to the living, and by a subsequent order directed Hunt to be removed and Trenchard to be put in possession, since which Trenchard is also sequestered by the Committee of the County for delinquency and scandal, yet the House on the 25th of Jan. last (not knowing the premises) has ordered Trenchard to be replaced, and petitioners to be attached for non-payment of tithes to him, already paid into the hands of the sequestrators; petitioners pray the House to peruse the orders to restore Langford to possession of the living, and to vacate their contrary orders in the matter. L. J., X. 88.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Committee for the County for Langford appointed to the cure by them to continue therein, as the House of Lords had not been informed of the facts of the case when they appointed Trenchard. 2 March 1646-7.
2. Copy of order of the same Committee sequestrating Trenchard's estate for scandal and delinquency. 24 July 1647.

March 3. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Nathaniel Rawlins has been approved for the rectory of Tunworth, Southampton. L. J., X. 89.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Thos. Mar to — asking him to get orders for two presentations from the House.

March 3. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Sampson Smart has been approved for the rectory of Greatworth, Northamptonshire. L. J., X. 89.

March 3. Draft ordinance for declaring Colonel Payer, and his adherents, traitors and rebels, if within twelve hours after notice hereof they shall not surrender Pembroke Castle. L. J., X. 89. In extenso.

March 3. Petition of Christopher Browne and others, defendants in three writs of error brought by Richard Eyre to delay execution; they pray that a short day may be appointed for hearing.

March 4. Petition of Sir John Maynard, Knight of the Bath, now prisoner in the Tower of London; he prays that further time may be allowed him to answer respecting the question of law that has arisen upon the articles of impeachment brought against him by the House of Commons, as divers of his counsel have gone circuit. L. J., X. 89.

March 4. Draft orders for the declaration concerning the Scots Commissioners' papers touching the four Bills, and the propositions presented to the King at the Isle of Wight, to be printed and published, &c. L. J., X. 89.

March 4. Petition of Colonel Owen Roe and Colonel Francis Roe; a sum of 6,457*l.* is owing to Colonel Owen Roe from the State, and large debts are due to Colonel Francis Roe both in England and Ireland, while he owes money to others to whom Colonel Owen Roe is surety; petitioners who are threatened with arrest by their creditors pray for protection. L. J., X. 90.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of sums due to Colonel Owen Roe.

March 4. Petition of John Baker; he has given Wm. Allen good security for the two ships, the Pearl Hoy and the Box Tree, and therefore prays to have the benefit of the former orders of the House in the matter. L. J., X. 90.

March 4. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., X. 90-97. In extenso.)

Giles Penny.	Samuel Davison.
Henry Boothby.	William Walker.
Richard Bishopp.	Ferdinando Stanley.
William Garway.	Mary Countess Dowager
Sir Henry Frederick	of Northampton.
Thynne.	George Chamberlaine.
Sir Roger Palmer.	Gawen Brathwaite.
George Snell.	John Fletcher.
William Blithman.	Henry Gilbert.
Haward Bickerstaffe.	Edward Berkley.
Robert Hildiard.	John Martin.
Walter Noell.	Richard Taylor.
Richard Bassett.	Sir Francis Monckton and
George Thorold.	Sir Philip Monckton,
William Lockton.	his son.
Thomas Waller.	Christopher Dudley.

March 4. Draft order to prevent the inconveniences that are daily sustained by the means of hackney coaches that pester and fill up the streets in and about the City of London. L. J., X. 97. In extenso.

March 4. Another draft.

March 4. Draft of similar order for Westminster, L. J., X. 97. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order upon a petition of the watermen of the Thames referring their complaints against the hackney coachmen to the Justices of Middlesex and Westminster for consideration. See L. J., IX. 577.

2. Another copy.

March 4. Draft order for the Judges on their circuits to see to the due execution of the ordinances for relief of maimed soldiers, and widows, and orphans. L. J., X. 97. In extenso.

March 5. Letter from Colonel Thomas Rainborowe to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers; I have this morning received command from the Committee at Derby House to send a ship to Milford Haven in case the Governor (of Pembroke Castle) do not surrender within twelve hours; a ship is ready accordingly and a fit person shall be appointed to it.

March 6. Draft ordinance appointing an attorney-general for the Counties of Chester and Flint, &c. L. J., X. 98. In extenso.

March 6. Draft order for 5,000*l.* more to be paid to Major General Richard Browne. L. J., X. 99. In extenso.

March 6. Draft order for payment of 1,448*l.* to Colonel Edmund Harvey. L. J., X. 99. In extenso.

March 7. Draft of additional instructions for the Commissioners of both Houses in Scotland. C. J., V. 483. In extenso.

March 8. Petition of Captain Henry Chaloner. At the beginning of these troubles petitioner delivered up Southsea Castle, the repair of which had cost him 700*l.*, to the Parliament, and went to Oxford where his family had resided for some years past; he was immediately committed close prisoner, and tried for his life, but was at length allowed liberty upon bail, but still as a prisoner until the surrender of the town, meantime his estate was sequestered, and he has been obliged to compound at Goldsmith's Hall; petitioner, when under restraint, his estate sequestered, and his family ready to perish from want, granted to Leonard Bowman (to whose father petitioner was indebted) an annuity of 20*l.* per annum secured upon his estate; Bowman is prosecuting petitioner for three years' arrears of the annuity which was granted without valuable consideration, so that petitioner can raise no money to satisfy his composition; he appeals to the House for equity and justice, and prays that Bowman's proceedings may be stayed. L. J., X. 100.

March 8. Draft order referring the preceding petition to a Committee. L. J., X. 100.

March 8. Draft ordinance to clear Sir Jacob Astley of his delinquency. L. J., X. 101. In extenso.

March 8. Draft order for felling timber in Frith Wood for repair of Chepstow Bridge. L. J., X. 101. In extenso.

March 8. Order giving Mr. Marshall leave to return from Scotland. L. J., X. 102. In extenso.

March 8. Draft of preceding.

March 8. Draft order for the Chancellor and other officers of the University of Oxford to take possession of their places. L. J., X. 102. In extenso.

March 8. Petition of Theophilus Earl of Lincoln and the other impeached Peers, praying that they may have further time to answer the articles of the House of Commons, as some of their counsel have gone on circuit. L. J., X. 102. In extenso.

March 8. Petition of Philip Starkey, citizen and cook of London, to the House of Commons; prays to be paid 200*l.* advanced by him for suppression of the rebellion in Ireland, with interest thereon. C. J., V. 483.

March 8. Petition of Colonel Nicholas Devereux to the House of Commons; he and his family are in such want that he can no longer desist from importunity; he prays for some present support as upwards of 5,300*l.* are due to him. C. J., V. 484.

[March 8.] Petition of the officers in several lists who were to receive part of their arrears by ordinance of the 16th of June 1647, to the House of Commons; all the money allotted is already issued out, and many of the petitioners are not paid; they pray the House to take speedy course for supplying 8,000*l.* for their payment. C. J., V. 484.

March 8. Application for an order to stay a suit commenced by Christopher Rellison against John Johnson for a house and land which he holds as tenant of Elizabeth Countess of Lindsey. L. J., X. 104.

March 9. Draft ordinance to settle upon Lieutenant-General Oliver Cromwell manors, lands, and tenements of the clear annual value of 2,500*l.* L. J., X. 104. In extenso.

March 9. Draft ordinance whereby Clement Falthroppe, Esquire, is appointed and authorised to be High Sheriff of the County Palatine of Durham and Sadberge, and for regulating some other things concerning the said office, and supply of justice in that County. L. J., X. 105. In extenso.

March 9. Draft order admitting Sir John Strange-waies and his son to compound for their delinquency. C. J., V. 489.

March 10. Petition of Thomas Hill, Master of Trinity College in Cambridge; in the statutes of Trinity College there are divers absurd things savouring of the darkness of those popish times wherein the college was founded, he therefore prays the House to command the master and eight seniors, or the major part of them, with all convenient speed, to represent to the House the particulars which they conceive need reformation. L. J., X. 106.

March 10. Petition of Thomas Hill, Master of Trinity College in Cambridge; praying for inquiry into the disposition of the twenty beadsmen's places founded by King Henry the Eighth. L. J., X. 106.

March 10. Petition of Thomas Lord Cromwell, Baron of Owckham; petitioner has paid in 400*l.*, being one moiety of his composition, but cannot by any means raise the other moiety as he has only a life interest in his estate; his whole estate in Ireland has been swept away by the rebels, and his troop of horse has been given to Lieut.-Col. Clotworthy; petitioner prays that the 400*l.* still due may be remitted, that he or one of his sons may be re-established in command of his troop, and that some employment befitting his quality may be conferred on him in Ulster that he may testify his good affection to the State. L. J., X. 106.

March 10. Petition of Toby Worlich, Doctor of Laws. In 1636 the office of register of the Exchequer Court of York was granted by Dr. Neale, late Archbishop of York, to petitioner for life, in trust for the use of John Peires, lately deceased, who had long before enjoyed the office, which for divers years has been exercised by Thomas Thompson, public notary, according to the trust; the House has lately voted that it should be conferred upon another without taking any notice of petitioner's interest; he prays to be admitted to prove his title, and that until the matter be settled he may enjoy the benefit of the office. L. J., X. 106.

March 10. Petition of Richard Beringer. He has been voted Sheriff of Bucks, but the oath on undertaking the office is of such a kind that he dares not take it; he therefore craves commiseration and mercy. L. J., X. 107.

March 10. Petition of John Giffard, of the city of Gloucester, gentleman, for what concerns him in answer to a petition lately preferred by Thomas Morgan, of (St.) Maughan, in the county of Monmouth, and others. By ordinance of the 27th of Oct. 1645, the House conferred the iron mills, forges, and furnaces in the Forest of Dean belonging to Sir John Winter upon Colonel Edward Massey. Petitioner became partner with him, and the works being burnt and decayed, they laid out 800*l.* upon them; these works had always been held by Sir John Winter, and though the ordinance was for twelve or thirteen weeks under debate, no objection was raised by any of the complainants. In June last Colonel Massey sold his interest in the stock, utensils, and other things connected with the works to petitioner for 2,000*l.*, and leased the works to him for five years, and if they should now be taken from him he will be utterly ruined, having lost much of his property in the service of the State, and expended the rest in rebuilding and stocking these works. The complainants have obtained an order of the 15th Feb. last upon false statements, and petitioner therefore prays to be permitted quietly to enjoy the works, and that his interest granted by ordinance may not be prejudiced by the lease pretended to be granted by Sir John Winter for the benefit of his wife and children. L. J., X. 107.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of ordinance of 27 Oct. 1645.
2. Copy of order of 15 Feb. 1647-8.

March 10. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Samuel Pretty has been approved for the cure of Weston Zoyland, in the county of Somerset. L. J., X. 107.

March 10. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., X. 107-110. In extenso):—

Michael Warton.	Lyon Bamford.
George Kingesley.	Hugh Croker.
Richard Stewart.	John Colleton. (Two co-
Henry Appleton.	pies.)
John Cooke, the younger.	James Barker.
George Rives.	Edmond Pooley.

March 10. Order of the Committee for the Affairs of Ireland, at Derby House that it be reported to both Houses that it is the opinion of the Committee that the Great Seal of Ireland is not safe in the present Chancellor's hand.

March 11. Draft order for the auditing of the accounts of the soldiers that are to be disbanded. C. J., V. 492. In extenso.

March 13. Reasons of Richard Beringer against taking the oath of High Sheriff for the county of Bucks. He is a philazer of the Court of Common Pleas, and by oath tied to personal attendance on his office, and by the Sheriff's oath he would be bound to abide within his bailiwick, so that by taking the office of Sheriff he would run the risk of losing his present place, and would lose a good conscience by wilful perjury. L. J., X. 110.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 10 March for Beringer to deliver in his reasons against taking the oath.
2. Copy of a philazer's oath on taking office.
3. Copy of a sheriff's oath.

March 13. Petition of William Lord Brereton and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, the Lord Goring's daughter, praying that William Brereton their son, who is between sixteen and seventeen years of age, may be authorised to join in a common recovery of lands in settlement to enable Lord Brereton to raise 2,538*l.* 18*s.*, for discharge of the sequestration of his estate. L. J., X. 111.

Annexed:—

1. A particular of the lands, part of the Lady Elizabeth Brereton's jointure, whereof a common recovery is desired.

March 13. Letter from Sir Thomas Fairfax to William Lenthall, Esq., Speaker of the House of Commons. Sir Richard Vivian was a person comprised within the articles of the City of Exeter, and ought therefore to have enjoyed his personal estate and disposed thereof as he pleased, but contrary to the articles his estate has been seized on and his cattle and goods taken from him by order of the Committee of Cornwall. The goods were worth more than 300*l.*, and the Committee promised he should be allowed this sum in his composition, and Sir Thomas cannot therefore in honour and justice but deem him a person very fit to be relieved herein, and therefore recommends him to the House for their favour to further him in his request to be allowed the sum mentioned, which is part of his composition at Goldsmith's Hall, and yet unpaid. C. J., V. 516.

March 14. Petition of Sir Henry Anderson, of Pendley, Herts. He prays for a considerable abatement of the fine imposed on him for his delinquency, as at the time of his composition, for want of his deeds, he was charged more than the amount to which his estate was properly liable. L. J., X. 112.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Commissioners for Compounding, &c. staying the sequestration of Sir Henry Anderson's estate for two months to give him time to address Parliament. 8 March.

March 14. Application for the release of John Flower, servant of the Earl of Arundel, arrested in Nottinghamshire, when engaged on his Lordship's affairs, on a pretended action of account, and rudely handled and carried to prison contrary to privilege. L. J., X. 112.

March 14. Draft pass for Francis Buller and Francis Lane to embark at Dover or Rye for France. L. J., X. 113.

March 14. Draft order for payment of 5,000*l.* to Colonel Christopher Legard. L. J., X. 113. In extenso.

March 14. Draft order for payment of 3,000*l.* to trustees for the younger children of Sir Thomas Norcliffe. L. J., X. 113. In extenso.

March 14. Draft ordinance to prevent delinquents from being elected or having any voice in the election of municipal officers at Norwich for one whole year. L. J., X. 114. In extenso.

March 14. Draft ordinance to confirm the election of the Mayor and Sheriffs of Chester. L. J., X. 114. In extenso.

March 14. Draft order for the Commissioners in Scotland to desire that divers soldiers and others, who have lately gone into Scotland without leave, may be delivered up by the Parliament of Scotland. L. J., X. 114. In extenso.

March 14. Resolution approving of the engagement of the 4th of August 1647 of the members that left the Houses and went to the army. L. J., X. 114. In extenso.

The engagement "to live and die with Sir Thomas Fairfax and the army in vindication of the honour" and freedom of the Parliament" is entered in extenso on the 13th of August 1647. L. J., IX. 385.

March 14. Draft of preceding.

March 14. Certificates of delinquency in the case of the following persons (C. J., V. 495. In extenso.)

William Davenport. Roger Owen.

March 14. Petition of Thomas Cullum, Alderman of the City of London, to the House of Commons; he acknowledges the favour of the House in permitting him to enjoy the benefit of his own dwelling since his confinement, and though he may justly fall under displeasure for signing the letter to Kent, yet he declares his abhorrence of the tumult at Westminster in July last, and if he fell short of his duty in endeavouring to repel it, though at the hazard of his life, he yet prays the House to remember his past services and to restore him to his former liberty. C. J., V. 495, 498.

March 14. Petition of John Marston and others, merchants, part owners, of the good ship called the Golden Angel; they pray that all proceedings against them in the Admiralty and Delegates Courts for damage done by their ship to another ship, the Seafower, may be stayed until the judges of the King's Bench have decided whether or no a prohibition should be granted. Noted.—Rejected.

March 14. Duplicate of preceding.

March 15. Draft ordinance appointing Thomas Carter to the rectory of Saltwood, Kent. L. J., X. 115.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Thomas Carter was about four years since appointed by the Committee of Plundered Ministers to officiate the cure of Saltwood with the approbation of the Assembly of Divines. 9 March 1647-8.

March 15. Petition of William Jhans. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his cause against John Robinson and Mary Farren. L. J., X. 115.

March 15. Draft order for payment of £1,800*l.* to Major George Wither in satisfaction for his losses. L. J., X. 115. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Major George Wither; praying that some part of what is due to him may be paid, as he has advanced borrowed money for the service of the State, has been imprisoned for non-payment of the same, and has been wheeled about from Committee to Committee.

March 15. Ordinance committing the Great Seal to the custody of Commissioners. L. J., X. 118. In extenso.

March 15. Draft order appointing a day for hearing the cause between Captain Henry Chaloner and Leonard Bowman the elder and another.

March 15. Report by Mr. Lisle to the House of Commons, upon the petition of Sir John Danvers, respecting the estate of the late Earl of Danby. The Committee report that the estate of the Earl of Danby stands sequestered by the authority of Parliament. They find that Sir John Danvers, the Earl's brother, claims the estate as heir at common law, and that Lady Gargrave and others claim some interest in the lands under the will of the Earl, and they further report that Sir John Danvers submits whether the House of Commons will be pleased to confer the interest in his brother's estate upon him, until Lady Gargrave and others can make their right appear. C. J., V. 498.

March 15. Petition of Katherine Lady Gargrave. Petitioner, having acquitted herself of the charge of delinquency, earnestly prosecuted against her by Sir John Danvers, prays that she may be permitted to enjoy the estate settled upon her for life under the will of the late Earl of Danby, who has now been dead almost four years.

March 17. Petition of Anne and Elizabeth Somerset, daughters of Edward Earl of Worcester. About a year since the Committee for Sequestrations allotted a proportion of their father's sequestered estate for their maintenance, but as many of the manors and lands have already, by ordinance of Parliament, been granted away to several persons, petitioners have not received in the year more than 50*l.*, and if there shall be any further disposal of the lands they will be left without means for their livelihood. They therefore pray that some competent proportion of the lands remaining may be settled upon them by ordinance of Parliament. L. J., X. 116.

March 17. Draft order appointing Anthony Tuckney, Master of Emanuel College, Lady Margaret's Divinity Lecturer in Cambridge. L. J., X. 117.

March 17. Letter from William March to Lord Howard of Escrick. Is in custody at the suit of Francis Dickins, being surety for the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, deceased. Prays Lord Howard to be a means to his obtaining his liberty. L. J., X. 117.

March 17. Petition of Hannah, wife of Ambrose Terrent, a distressed prisoner in the gaol in Winchester House, to the Commissioners for the Great Seal. Petitioner was at the summer assizes held in Southwark in 1645 wrongfully indicted for poisoning her mother-in-law, and by the false testimony and malicious prosecution of her husband and others found guilty and condemned to death. After her trial the prosecutors' testimony was suspected and petitioner's innocency conceived, and Judge Greene who presided was pleased to grant her a reprieve, and remanded her to prison where she has ever since remained. The justices of the county, having spent much time in finding out the plot against her, certified their opinion of her innocence, and that it was a devilish conspiracy amongst the prosecutors to take away her life. Petitioner has been long in prison only for want of money to sue out her pardon, and pay her fees, but now by God's providence good people out of charity having furnished her with money for the purpose she prays the Commissioners to acquaint Parliament with her deplorable condition, that so she may have a pardon granted to her whereby she may be freed from her long imprisonment undergone for a crime she never committed. L. J., X. 117.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition noted by the Justices of Surrey, with certificate that they have received such satisfaction from credible witnesses, that they are persuaded that the evidence given against petitioner at the trial was false and malicious. The petition is also noted by Justice Greene, that petitioner was reprieved at the desire of the justices who had examined into the matter.

2. Copy of order of the House of Commons for the Justices of Counties to certify the names and offences of any persons they think fit for mercy and pardon. 20 Jan. 1645-6. C. J., IV. 411.

March 17. Draft order appointing Sir Gilbert Gerard, Chancellor of the Duchy and County Palatine of Lancaster. L. J., X. 118. In extenso.

March 21. Petition of Elizabeth Wylde, one of the daughters of Sir John Wylde, late of the city of Canterbury, deceased. In the year 1640 Woolly Lee and John Denham became bound to petitioner in the sum of 1,000*l.*, and soon after went to the King, and adhered to him. Lee died leaving all his lands entailed and little or no personal estate, and Denham came in and was a prisoner in the King's Bench, where petitioner obtained a judgment against him upon her bond, but he was soon after discharged by their Lordships, and has ever since hid himself. His estates are now sequestered, and he has not begun to make composition for his delinquency; petitioner therefore prays that his lands may be sold or the sequestration thereof granted to her.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for Denham's discharge referred to in preceding. 11 May 1646.

March 22. Petition of Dame Alice Viscountess Moore, Dowager of Drogheda. The sum of 8,000*l.* was due to petitioner's late husband, Viscount Moore, who was slain by the Irish rebels, and the accounts have been duly audited and certified. Petitioner prays that some satisfaction may be made to her out of the sequestration of estates of delinquents who have either not compounded, or who have not paid in their compositions. L. J., X. 130; C. J., V. 509.

March 22. Petition of Major Robert Burgis. Petitioner and his servant, Ellis Lloyd, were about eight weeks since committed to the Gatehouse by the Committee of the Militia of Westminster, but upon information that petitioner had a commission from the Spanish Ambassador for raising a company their Lordships referred the business to the Committee for Foreign Affairs, who have not proceeded to relieve petitioner, having no absolute authority from their Lordships otherwise than as is endorsed on the letter of the Spanish Ambassador. Prays that the Committee, upon finding his commission to be true, may be ordered to discharge him without any further trouble. L. J., X. 130.

March 22. List of Committee appointed to consider the ordinance to prevent the printing of parliamentary proceedings. L. J., X. 130.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the ordinance. C. J., V. 493. In extenso.

2. Petition of Henry Walker. Prays that none of the transactions of Parliament may be published without order from one or both Houses, and that provision may be made for giving allowance to such as shall discover and take the authors, printers, and publishers of scandalous and seditious papers.

Annexed:—

1. Paper of amendments to preceding.

March 22. Petition of William Liptratt. Since the beginning of this Parliament petitioner has constantly attended the service belonging to the King's printers by furnishing the Clerk of the Parliaments and other officers with books, standishes, boxes, parchments, paper, ink, pens, &c. for the daily service of their Lordships, but he is now threatened with arrest upon some pretended debts. Prays that the privilege of Parliament may be granted to him during his present employment. L. J., X. 134.

March 22. Draft ordinance for payment of 42,000*l.* out of Bishops' lands; of this sum 30,000*l.* is to be paid to poor people, who, having formerly lent money, plate, or horse upon the propositions, are not able to double the sums lent, and are now in want. C. J., V. 509.

[March 22.] Petition of Lady Ellen Drake, widow. Petitioner has ever since the beginning of these troubles manifested her good affection to the Parliament by contributing 100*l.* to the propositions, by furnishing the inhabitants of the town of Lyme in their necessity with provisions, and giving them notice of some designs of the enemy, and by animating her tenants in seven adjoining parishes to adhere to the Parliament. For these actions she became the object of the enemy's rage, who burnt her house and plundered her goods to the value of 6,000*l.*, taking from her and her children the very clothes on their backs. She was then compelled to take to spinning and knitting of stockings for a livelihood, in which miserable condition she continued until the siege of Lyme was raised, by means whereof she got away and came up to the Parliament, who were pleased to confer upon her 5*l.* per week. About two years since (2 May 1646) the House of Commons referred the question of reparation for her losses out of Lord Poulett's estate (in respect that most of her sufferings had been by soldiers under his command) to the Committee at Goldsmiths Hall, who would have made some progress therein, but in the meantime Lord Poulett's exception from pardon being taken off, and he left to compound for his delinquency, it hath there rested without anything else being done. Prays that some allotment may be made to her out of Lord Poulett's or his son's fines. C. J., V. 508.

March 23. Another draft.

March 23. Letter from the Committee of Somerset, at Ilminster, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker pro tempore. The writers have received a letter from three prisoners (Robert Edbrooke and others) committed by their Lordship under the notion of contempt. The truth of the case is as follows: George Trenchard, a minister, was by their Lordships' order settled in the living of Exford, but shortly afterwards a charge of delinquency and gross scandal was proved against him, and the Committee of the County accordingly sequestered him, and granted their general warrant requiring the inhabitants not to pay any tithes or dues to him, whereunto these poor men yielded obedience. The writers therefore pray that they may be discharged without payment of fees. See L. J., IX. 677.

March 23. Petition of Thomas Tressam, Esq. Prays that Edward Tressam, who is a professed friar beyond the seas, and who is the most material witness for petitioner in a trial about to take place at the Common Pleas bar, may have a safeguard granted to him to repair hither and give evidence without being questioned in his person, petitioner engaging that he shall not act anything to the prejudice of the Kingdom during his abode about the said business. Noted.—“Read and rejected.”

March 23. Petition of Captain John Musgrave. Petitioner being charged with some miscarriage by his intemperate speech, and committed to the loathsome prison of Newgate, has suffered six months imprisonment amongst thieves and murderers. Prays for his discharge. Noted.—Read, nothing done.

March 23. Certificate of delinquency in the case of Thomas Windebank. C. J., V. 510.

March 24. Answer of inhabitants of Gedney, Lincolnshire, to the report of Justices Bacon and Godbolt and to the petition of Sir Nathaniel Brent and others (vide 29 Feb. 1647-8). The respondents say, that neither Sir N. Brent nor the other pretenders have any title to the lands in question; that the respondents have time out of mind had right of common in the lands; they deny that they have gained possession either by force or against law, and pray that the pretenders may be left to their remedy at law if they have any. March 27. Copy of pedigree of Sir John Brooke claiming to be Lord Cobham, extracted from the records at Herald's College by George Owen, York Herald. L. J., X. 157.

[March 27.] Petition of Sir Francis Willoughby; he has lately presented a relation to the House showing his faithful services, many sufferings, dearly earned arrears, and disbursements, with an earnest desire to be again employed in Ireland; he has received no answer to his former petition, and prays that he may be restored to his command in Ireland, or if this cannot be, that he may then be paid some part of his arrears and disbursed moneys, that he and his family may be preserved from perishing. L. J., X. 157.

Annexed:—

1. The humble remonstrance of Sir Francis Willoughby, Knight, setting forth his faithful services, his many sufferings, and his earnest desires to spend the rest of his days in the service of the Parliament against the rebels of Ireland: he has served in the wars with honour and reputation forty-seven years, twenty-five in the service of the States of the United Provinces, the remaining twenty-two years in Ireland, where he has been Governor of Cork and Limerick, a Councillor of Munster, Governor of the port of Galway, and being accidentally in Dublin at the time of the outbreak of the rebellion was commanded by the Lords Justices to take the command of the Castle there; he was afterwards made major-general and a colonel; all which places he discharged with fidelity and honour, yet some malicious persons have secretly traduced him to Parliament, had they done so to his face he would have proved his own innocence, and shamed them; he was one of the Commissioners employed by the Marquess of Ormonde to surrender Dublin and other places into the hands of the Parliament, and for the purpose came to England in the depth of winter at his own charge; he was chosen by the Committee at Derby House to return with letters of credence to the Marquess of Ormonde, and promises of succour, which encouraged the inhabitants of Dublin and the soldiers to work with undaunted resolution in the trenches. He has attended seventeen months as a petitioner to Parliament to be restored to his former commands, and the House has given him some small relief, for which he is humbly thankful, but he has for the most part served at his own charge, besides supporting his company, supplying beeves to the victual-master-general; his money has been seized for the service of the State; his son has died in that service; he again prays to be restored to his former post of command, or that some of the money due to him may be paid as he has no property left but what is in the rebels quarters. Certificates are appended in support of his statement.

March 27. Petition of John Lord Poulett. On the 22nd instant the House of Commons ordered that Lady Drake should receive 1,500*l.* out of petitioner's rents remaining in his tenants' hands, and that the remainder should be paid to the Treasurer of Goldsmiths Hall, and their Lordships concurrence was desired in this order. Their Lordships have ordered the Committee at Goldsmiths Hall to give an account of the proceedings touching petitioner's composition. Petitioner prays that when this account is returned he may have a copy of it, and that he may be heard by counsel before any thing prejudicial to him is done in the matter. L. J., X. 157.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Lady Vere, widow to Lord Vere. Petitioner has a daughter married to Sir John Poulett, son to Lord Poulett, who has submitted himself to the Parliament, resolving to adhere thereunto with life and fortune, but petitioner finds that Lord Poulett is in danger of inevitable ruin, being excepted out of the propositions through misinformation to the House of Commons of some foul acts of which he was never guilty, particularly burning Lady Drake's house, which petitioner is assured he was so far from directing that he resented it with much grief and horror, neither was he an instrument for bringing Prince Maurice's army against Lyme, nor ever sat in the mongrel Parliament at Oxford, nor joined in any of the councils for fomenting this unnatural war, altho' often invited thereunto by the King. Prays that Lord Poulett's exception may be resipited until the examination of the charges against him. (Undated.)

March 31. Petition of creditors of John Earl of Bridgwater. Petitioners have used all possible mediation by their frequent and humble addresses to his Lordship for obtaining their just debts, but cannot by any entreaties obtain satisfaction. They therefore pray that they may have leave to take the benefit of the law against the Earl's estate, the rather since his Lordship has not manifested any affection to the Parliament. L. J., X. 165.

Annexed:—

1. List of creditors.

March 31. Order upon preceding petition. L. J., X. 165. In extenso.

March 31. Petition of Aletheia Dowager Countess of Arundel and Surrey. In September 1641 petitioner went over with her deceased lord into the United Provinces by leave of the King and Parliament, and has ever since remained there, never acting anything against the State. Notwithstanding this the Committee of Derby have lately sequestered the manor and rectory of Glossop, being petitioner's inheritance, upon a bare supposition that she is a recusant, altho' they confess they have no proof of it. Prays that the Committee of Derby may be ordered to stay proceedings until petitioner be heard before the Committee for Sequestrations, and that in the meantime she may not be deprived of her subsistence. [April 4.] Petition of David ap David and other poor inhabitants of Wrexham Regis, in the county of Denbigh. On the 6th of May 1643 about eleven o'clock in the forenoon a fire occurred in the town so fierce, owing to the dryness of the season, that in two hours one hundred and forty-three dwelling houses, and most of the goods in them, were reduced to ashes, besides kilns, barns, stables, and other buildings, about a fourth of the town, the estimated value being above 4,000*l.*; most of the houses have not yet been rebuilt owing to the poverty of the inhabitants; the petitioners pray the House to grant them orders and briefs for a general collection for their relief in London and Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, and also in Wales and the counties adjoining thereto. L. J., X. 178.

April 4. Petition of John Bland prays that he may be heard by counsel before the ordinance depriving him of his office of Receiver General for the revenue of the county of York is passed by their Lordships. L. J., X. 178.

April 4. Order upon preceding. L. J., X. 178.

April 4. Petition of William Barton, minister. Petitioner has, with Francis Rous, prepared a Psalm Book, intitled "An exact emendation of the whole book of "Psalms, begun by Francis Rous, Esq., and perfected "with sundry hymns and aliters thereunto annexed by "William Barton, M. of A., and minister of John "Zacharies, London." All have been diligently reviewed and compared with the original by sundry learned men, and fitted for four score tunes already extant, in four parts, yet so as six or seven of the most common tunes in all the kingdom will properly serve them all. Petitioner prays that an order may be made for the book to be printed, and that none do presume to print or reprint it but by the correction and appointment of the authors. L. J., X. 178.

April 12. Similar answer of William Lord Maynard.

April 12. Similar answer of John Lord Hunsdon.

April 12. Similar answer of George Lord Berkeley.

April 12. Petition of John Lord Poulett. Prays leave to make addresses to the House of Commons concerning some informations given in against him which reflect much upon his honour, and tend even to the questioning of his life. L. J., X. 186. In extenso.

April 12. Petition of Walter Fowke. Prays that, although the ordinance for restoring him to his office of Receiver-General of Yorkshire has not yet passed their Lordships' House, he may have leave to go or send down to receive the monies due, for the bringing in of which to the usual place at York on the 20th instant he has sent down his precepts. L. J., X. 186.

April 12. Petition of several merchants, owners, and masters of ships trading to and from the Port of London, on behalf of themselves and all others of this Kingdom concerned in trade, shipping, and navigation. The encouragement of merchants, the building of ships, and the improvement of navigation much depend upon the settling of the Admiralty jurisdiction. Petitioners therefore pray their Lordships to give speedy despatch to the ordinance for that purpose, which has already passed the House of Commons. L. J., X. 186.

April 12. Affidavit of William Jhannes respecting the service of annexed order. L. J., X. 187. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Order for John Robinson and Mary Farren to answer the petition of William Jhannes. 15 March 1647-8.

April 12. Affidavit of Colonel George Payne respecting his arrest. L. J., X. 187. In extenso.

April 12. Petition of Colonel George Payne. Complains that, notwithstanding the protection granted to him by the House until the arrears due to him from the State have been paid, he has been arrested and is detained prisoner at the suit of Susan Elliott. Prays for his discharge. On the same paper, copy of order for his protection of 11 Sep. 1646.

April 12. Copy of preceding petition, order, and affidavit.

April 12. Draft order appointing a day for hearing the writ of error, Rogers v. Wilde, et. al. L. J., X. 187.

April 12. Certificate that John Hutchinson is orthodox in his judgment, religious and unblameable in his conversation, and well affected to the Parliament. L. J., X. 187.

April 12. Petition of Thomas Salmon. Prays that the writ of error, Roe v. Salmon, may be speedily heard.

April 13. Narration of the late riotous tumult within the City of London, and proceedings of the Lord Mayor, Committee of Militia, and Common Council of the City concerning the same. (Six papers.) L. J., X. 190. In extenso.

[April 14.] Petition of Colonel William Herbert. Petitioner having expended 588*l.* 12*s.* for the service of the State at Plymouth, an ordinance was passed giving the public faith of the kingdom for his repayment. There is also money owing to him for his service under Sir Thomas Fairfax and also in Ireland; he has of late been forced to keep his chamber by reason of his hurts received in service, and constrained to run into debt for the necessary subsistence of himself and family. Prays that he may receive the moneys due to him, with interest, or that he may have protection for six months in order that he may have freedom to treat with his creditors. L. J., X. 192.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of ordinance referred to in preceding. 6 June 1645.
2. Duplicate of preceding petition.
3. Another copy of the ordinance of 6th June 1645.

April 14. Petition of Sir John Maynard, Knight of the Bath. Prays that further time may be granted to him to put in his answer to the impeachment against him. L. J., X. 192.

April 14. Petition of Mary Wright, widow of Gerrard Wright. Prays that an estate extended upon a recognizance for repayment of money belonging to petitioner may be assigned to her, according to a decree and order of the Court of Chancery. L. J., X. 192.

April 14. Draft ordinance concerning arbitrary government. It enacts that neither House of Parliament shall hear any petition or complaint betwixt party and party, or touching matter of title, interest, trespass, &c., unless it be in cases of privilege or matters done contrary to some express order of Parliament; all other cases, whether civil or criminal, shall be left to the ordinary courts of justice, but in cases of maladministration of justice in any of such courts, Parliament will give such relief as shall be requisite. The matter was referred to a Committee this day, and the draft is endorsed "Laid by." L. J., X. 193.

April 14. Petition of William Hussey, minister of the Word of God. Prays that an order may be granted to enable the Commissioners of the Great Seal to present petitioner to the rectory of Merstham, Surrey, which living was formerly in the gift of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and above value in the King's book. L. J., X. 193.

April 14. Draft order for 1,000*l.* to be bestowed as a gratuity upon the officers and soldiers at the Mews, and Whitehall, for their service in suppressing the insurrection. L. J., X. 194.

April 14. Order for Brent, prisoner in the Tower, upon suspicion of having a hand in the rebellion in Ireland, to be brought to trial in the King's Bench. L. J., X. 194. In extenso.

April 14. Draft of preceding.

April 14. Order giving liberty to William Savage, Sheriff of Dorset, to come to London. L. J., X. 194. In extenso.

April 14. Draft of preceding.

April 14. Draft order for payment of 3,963*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.* to William Sykes for arms and ammunition. L. J., X. 194. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.
2. Copy of order of the House of Commons charging the sum due to Sykes upon the moiety of the receipts of the Excise. 30 Dec. 1647.

April 15. Petition of Dame Elizabeth Hussey, widow and relict of Sir Edward Hussey, late of Harrington, in the county of Lincoln, Knight and Baronet. Her husband's fine was assessed at Goldsmiths Hall at 8,750*l.*, of which sum in December last he paid in 4,500*l.*, and secured the remainder by bond, hoping for an abatement when his case should be presented to the House. He is now dead, and the greater part of his estate goes to his grandchild, a portion to petitioner for her jointure, and the remainder to two of his younger sons. He died leaving two daughters unmarried, and wholly unprovided for, and was indebted to several persons by bonds to the extent of 6,000*l.* He only had an estate for life in his lands, though part was subject to a power of revocation by his personal act, which by reason of his death cannot now be executed. Petitioner therefore prays that what has been already paid may be accepted in full of his fine, and that the bond entered into for the remainder may be delivered to her to be cancelled. L. J., X. 196.

April 15. Draft order in compliance with prayer of preceding petition. L. J., X. 196.

April 15. Answer of John Robinson and Mary Farren to the petition of William Jhannes. Petitioners deny that they made any such promise as is pretended in Jhannes' petition, and pray to be dismissed with their costs and charges. L. J., X. 196.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same. Petitioners have been taken into custody for contempt in not putting in their answer to Jhannes' petition as ordered by their Lordships. The order was served upon petitioner Robinson, but not upon Mary Farren, and they could not therefore give in their answer. Pray for their discharge, and that Jhannes may be ordered to give them satisfaction for their imprisonment.

April 15. Petition of Sir Henry Mildmay. Prays that he may have the benefit of the general order for quieting the possession of lands, with regard to the marsh called North and South Somercotes, in the county of Lincoln, which was leased to him by order of the Committee of the King's Revenue. L. J., X. 196.

Annexed:—

1. Order of Committee of the King's Revenue referred to in preceding. 21 March 1647-8.

April 15. Petition of Edward Fisher. Shortly after petitioner came of age he was drawn by William Blaythwaite into several great engagements, and sued by him upon a bond of 1,400*l.* in the Court of Pleas in the Exchequer, and pretending to have privilege there, Blaythwaite made himself a debtor to the King of purpose to take advantage thereof against petitioner, who thereupon brought a supersedeas out of Chancery to remove Blaythwaite's proceedings. The same being delivered and the fees tendered and allowance thereof duly prayed by petitioner, the Barons and Judges there refused to yield obedience thereunto, but on the contrary gave judgment upon the bond against him. Prays that Blaythwaite may be called upon to answer, and the judges to show cause why they refused to allow the writ of supersedeas. L. J., X. 196.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of William Blaythwaite. Conceives that as a debtor to the King he legally prosecuted Fisher for his just debt according to the rules of the Court of Exchequer.

April 18. Petition of Sir John Gayer, Knight and Alderman of London. By the 29th chapter of the Great Charter all Commons are to be tried by their equals, and there are thirty sessions of Parliament which confirm the Great Charter being a statute declaratory of the common law, especially the petition of right and the Act for abolishing the Star Chamber and regulating the Council Table. By several declarations and ordinances their Lordships have declared that ordinances are no laws, but temporary during the wars, and the cause of necessity being taken away their Lordships have promised that the free people of England shall be governed according to the known laws of the land, as appears by the ordinance of the 15th of January 1647-8. Petitioner who is a free commoner of England claims his birthright, which is to be tried by God and his country in his Majesty's Court of Justice by the sworn judges of the law and by a jury of his equals of his own neighbourhood where the pretended fact was done, the Courts of justice being now open. This petition is referred to in the journals as "A paper brought in from the Lieutenant of the Tower which he received from Sir John Gayer, a prisoner there, wherein he questions the jurisdiction of this House." L. J., X. 207.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Thomas Adams, Alderman of London. Almost identical with preceding. (Undated.)

2. Similar petition of James Bunce, Alderman of London. (Undated.)

April 18. Draft order for estreating the fine of Sir John Maynard. L. J., X. 207.

April 18. Draft order for taking the sequestration off the estate of Sir Oliver Cromwell, of Ramsey Moore, Huntingdon. L. J., X. 207. In extenso.

April 18. Petition of Thomas Stayno and William Elliott, officers to the Sheriffs of London. Petitioners are under restraint for arresting Colonel George Payne who stood protected by an order of the House; they are heartily sorry for having incurred their Lordships' displeasure and pray for their discharge. L. J., X. 186.

April 19. Petition of John Perchard, inhabitant of the Isle of Guernsey. Some differences arising between petitioner and John Rowland concerning the succession of the estate of petitioner's elder brother, the issue came before the Judicature of the Island, by whom petitioner (contrary to the law and custom there) was condemned. Thereupon he made his appeal in the form formerly used before the King and his Council, which was allowed and confirmed by the acts of the bailiff and jurats, but as this form of appeal is not now in use petitioner conceives this high court to be the proper judges of appeal. He therefore prays their Lordships to hear the matter and to order Rowland to answer, and the bailiff and jurats to transmit under the seal of the Island all the processes, pleas, &c. in the case. L. J., X. 207.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Copy of the acts of the bailiff and jurats of the Island referred to in the petition.

April 19. Petition of William Jackson, a poor inhabitant of the town of Cambridge; prays that a beadsman's place in Trinity College, Cambridge, which is now vacant, may be bestowed upon him as he is very poor and has a wife and eight small children whom he is no way able to maintain by his utmost pains and endeavours. April 20. Petition of Edward Eltonhead, Esq., one of the Masters of the Chancery, and an attendant upon the House of Peers. Petitioner was in quiet possession of a house called Shepping at Woodham Water, Essex, where he kept two servants. On the 27th of March last, when he was in attendance upon their Lordships' House, William Ham and others furiously assaulted his house in the absence of one of his servants, broke open the door, and violently dragged out his other servant, Mary Newman, under colour of an arrest upon some process, and then got into and took possession of the house, which Ham still detains. Petitioner prays to be restored to the possession of his house, and that Ham and the other offenders may be sent for and punished. L. J., X. 211.

2. Affidavit of Thomas Lynes. 8 April 1648.

April 20. Draft ordinance appointing three ministers to preach at Windsor. L. J., X. 211.

April 20. Petition of Henry Babington. Petitioner's mother, Mary Babington, dying at Oxford at the time it was a garrison for the King, John Greaves, astronomy lecturer there, a mere stranger, set on foot a writing purporting to be her last will and testament; but upon a hearing in the Prerogative Court in London this will was pronounced invalid, and administration granted to petitioner. Greaves thereupon appealed to the Judges Delegates, and sentence was then given against petitioner. The Commissioners for the Great Seal, upon petitioner's application, granted him a commission of review to hear and determine the cause. Some of the Commissioners therein named are unwilling to proceed in the matter without the confirmation of Parliament, because the petition was not presented in person to the King. Prays that the Commission may be ratified and confirmed. L. J., X. 212.

April 20. Petition of Nathaniel Bambrigg, brother of John Bambrigg, doctor and physician, and of Abraham Bambrigg, both deceased. Prays that the Commissioners of the Great Seal may be ordered to issue a commission of review to hear and determine the question as to the administration of the goods of petitioner's two deceased brothers. L. J., X. 212.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. The Commissioners of the Great Seal have issued a Commission of review, but the Judges Delegates are unwilling to proceed in the matter unless the commission be confirmed by Parliament. Petitioner prays that this may be done.

April 20. Answer of Sir Thomas Walsingham to the petition of Robert Ramsey, a prisoner in the Fleet. Details the losses he has suffered by the many vexatious suits brought against him by Ramsey, in which he has been compelled to spend almost 3,000*l.*; he recites various orders made in his favour, all of which Ramsey refuses to obey. Ramsey has caused the effect of his last petition to their Lordships to be put in print in a scandalous pamphlet, wherein he reflects upon the honour and justice of both Houses, and likewise upon the justice of the Court of Exchequer. Sir Thomas Walsingham prays that Ramsey may be ordered to pay him further costs, and be punished as he deserves for his false and scandalous petition. L. J., X. 212.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Court of Exchequer committing Ramsey to the Fleet for contempt in neglecting to obey a decree of the Court. 19 Oct. 1638.
2. Order of Committee for examination of abuses in imprisonments and Courts of Justice remanding Ramsey to the Fleet, finding no cause to relieve him of the decree obtained against him in the Exchequer Chamber by Sir Thomas Walsingham. 22 Jan. 1640-1.
3. Order of the House of Commons in the matter. 31 Oct. 1645.

April 20. Order for Robert Ramsey to have a copy of Sir Thomas Walsingham's answer. L. J., X. 212.

April 20. Votes respecting the removal of Mr. Glyn from the recordership of London. L. J., X. 212.

April 20. Draft order for 30*l.* a-piece to be bestowed upon Captain Davies and Captain Barrington who lately came out of Munster with the Commissioners. L. J., X. 212. In extenso.

April 20. Petition of Mathew Draper, Captain of the late Earl of Essex's troop. Petitioner has from the beginning of the wars faithfully served the Parliament to his utter ruin, 1,245*l.* being due to him for arrears, besides losses to the amount of 3,500*l.* He has now been cast into the King's Bench upon a judgment and execution for 60*l.* obtained against him by Nicholas Young. Prays for his discharge and for protection until Parliament shall take into consideration the payment of his arrears. L. J., X. 212.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate of the Earl of Essex as to Captain Draper's services. 20 March 1645-6.
2. Certificate of the Committee for taking the accounts of the whole Kingdom as to the arrears due to Captain Draper. 14 April 1646.
3. Petition of Nicholas Young: Understands that Draper has petitioned for his discharge, but on what ground petitioner knows not. Prays that his just proceedings at law may not be stayed, that he may have a copy of Draper's petition, and that no order may be made to his prejudice until he has been heard by counsel.

April 20. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Robert Gifford to the rectory of Elsefield alias Ulesfield(?) in the County of Southampton. L. J., X. 212.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that Gifford has been approved for the cure. 19 April 1648.

April 20. Affidavit of Henry Parre and Thomas Gore that they heard Henry Halfepenny say to Lord Cromwell "You are a base conditioned fellow, and I will have my money or I will tear the clothes from your back."

April 20. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Richard Isaacson to the rectory of Woodford, Essex.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of ministers in favour of Isaacson.

Rutland Snoden.	Richard Wickstead.
Ralph Skipwith.	Edward Michell.
Stanley Burroughes.

April 22. Letter from Alderman Adams to Colonel Tichburne, Lieutenant of the Tower. I have received a paper seeming to authorise you to carry my person before the Lords to answer to a charge. I am constrained to inform you that my person ought not to be hurried to and fro, or disturbed at the pleasure of any man, neither can I yield obedience to the command of any that are not legal; therefore if you intend to disturb me on Tuesday next I expect to see a legal warrant from some person or court which has jurisdiction over me. The Lords have no legal power to summon me to answer to any crime whereof I am accused or suspected, and therefore you must expect to answer for whatever injury you offer to my person, and know hereby that I shall not voluntarily go from hence to Westminster, but shall suffer you to carry me if you send force which I cannot resist. L. J., X. 223.

April 23. Similar letter from Alderman Langham. L. J., X. 223.

April 23. Similar letter from Alderman Bunce. L. J., X. 223.

April 24. Petition of Roger Draper. Complains that George James has vexed him with many unjust suits with reference to the lease of a rectory purchased by petitioner's late uncle Tomas James from a prebendary of Chichester, of which petitioner has become lawfully possessed, but to which George James pretends a title. Prays their Lordships to vouchsafe him a speedy hearing, and that in the meantime all suits at law may be stayed. L. J., X. 223.

April 24. Draft ordinance to prevent the taking of free quarter. L. J., X. 224. In extenso.

April 24. Report of the Committee for His Majesty's revenue concerning the Receivership of Yorkshire. L. J., X. 224. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Order for the Committee to ascertain whether John Bland has forfeited his right to the Receivership, and in the meantime to receive the revenues to the use of the State. 18 April 1648. L. J., X. 207. In extenso.

April 24. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct John Eastbrooke to the rectory of Kingston Deverill, Wilts. L. J., X. 224.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Eastbrooke has been approved for the cure.

April 24. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that Samuel Aldus has been approved for the rectory of Freston, Suffolk. L. J., X. 224.

April 24. Petition of Sir John Monson. Petitioner came in upon the surrender of Oxford, but has not received the benefit of the articles, &c.; prays that the remainder of his fine at Goldsmiths Hall may be remitted, and that his ordinance may not pass until he has been in some way relieved. L. J., X. 225.

April 24. Another petition of same, praying that his ordinance may be respited.

April 24. Pass for Francis Kinloch and others to go into France. L. J., X. 225.

April 24. Draft of the additional instructions for the Commissioners from the Parliament of England to the Parliament of Scotland. L. J., X. 228. In extenso.

April 24. Draft ordinance for the continuance of the Committee of the Army and the Treasurers at War. L. J., X. 228. In extenso.

April 24. Printed copy of two preceding ordinances.

April 24. Draft ordinance for bringing in the arrears of the assessments for the army within the City of London. L. J., X. 229. In extenso.

April 25. Order for hearing the writ of error, Burrowes v. Trippett. L. J., X. 231.

April 25. Draft order for maimed soldiers to have the use of Ely House. L. J., X. 232. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Release of Edward Birkhead of any former contract made for Ely House. 17 April 1648, L. J., X. 231. In extenso. On the same paper: Order of the House of Commons for Ely House to be given up to the Treasurers for maimed soldiers. 14 April 1648.

April 25. Draft letter from the Parliament to Lord Fairfax respecting the preservation of the wardrobe in the Tower. L. J., X. 233. In extenso.

April 27. Application by Joseph Murdock to the Earl of Manchester for a pass to go into Ireland to bring over his wife and children. L. J., X. 233.

April 27. Petition of divers merchants, owners, and merchants strangers interested in navigation and foreign commerce. Pray that the ordinance of the 12th instant for settling the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty may be extended as well to all marine causes now depending either in the Admiralty or Delegates Court, as for the future to those that shall be begun before the expiration of the three years limited by the ordinance. L. J., X. 233.

April 27. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons in Common Council assembled. They have received information from one John Everard of an intention on the part of the army to disarm and then plunder the city. Pray that the chains within the city may be repaired and set up again, that the army may be removed to a greater distance, and that Major-General Skippon may be appointed to the command of the forces within the lines of communication and the weekly bills of mortality. L. J., X. 234. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Affidavit of John Everard referred to in preceding. 23 April 1648. L. J., X. 234. In extenso.

April 28. Petition of Roger North. After a solemn hearing of the cause between petitioner and Thomas Conisby their Lordships made an order for petitioner to take all trees and woods in Mims Common, in the county of Hertford, but by reason of interruptions he has not been able to receive any fruit of the order. Prays that the sheriff of Herts may be ordered to assist him in the execution of the order, and that Thomas Conisby, and all others pretending under him or his title, may be inhibited to molest or interrupt petitioner and his workmen in cutting and taking away the trees. L. J., X. 235.

April 28. Affidavit of Edward Radford in support of preceding.

April 28. Application by the Earl of Dorset privilege may be granted to Richard Colebeck his menial servant, who has been arrested at the suit of John and Alexander Baker. L. J., X. 235.

April 29. Affidavit of Richard Colebeck that he has been again arrested notwithstanding their Lordships' order for his release.

April 29. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Theophilus Luddington to the rectory of Halstead, Suffolk [Essex]. L. J., X. 236.

May 1. Petition of William Cokayne, merchant, on the behalf of himself, Bartholomew Brickwood, William Ham, and others, in answer to the petition of Edward Eltonhead (vide 20 April 1648). Petitioner being lawfully seized of the farmhouse and lands called Sheepen, Essex, Edward Eltonhead without any title caused the house to be broken open, and forcibly entered into part thereof, and kept it from petitioner's tenant. Petitioner being advised that he had cause of action against the parties who had been put into the house, and knowing that Eltonhead was acquainted with the sheriffs and bailiffs, and therefore if he had taken a writ with a warrant to the ordinary bailiff the same would have become fruitless, obtained a warrant from the Sheriff of Essex to Marshall Clench and others, special bailiffs, who going to the house, and finding the doors open, peaceably and quietly entered as lawfully they might,

William Ham, the younger, with his father has since generally enjoyed the same until Eltonhead's petition, with the affidavit of Mary Newman annexed, was presented to their Lordships, who ordered Ham to be removed, and brought up prisoner with Brickwood and others. Petitioner prays that his counsel may be speedily heard that the parties who have been brought up may be allowed to depart to their homes, petitioner being ready to answer for them, that he may be restored to the possession of the house, and that the matter may be left to determination in the courts of law and equity. L. J., X. 237.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Eltonhead's petition.
2. Copy of affidavit of Mary Newman.
3. Petition of Edward Eltonhead by way of answer to the matter suggested in the petition of William Cockayne. Petitioner denies every allegation contained in Cockayne's petition, and prays to be heard by his counsel in the matter. (Undated.)

May 1. Letter from Dr. John Arrowsmith, Vice-Chancellor of the University, to the House of Peers respecting the order for repairing and cleansing the streets in Cambridge. L. J., X. 238. In extenso.

May 2. Order for adding Richard Bradropp and others to the Committee for Assessments for Dorsetshire. L. J., X. 240. In extenso.

May 2. Order for adding Sir Edward Gilborne and others to the Committee for Assessments for Kent. L. J., X. 240. In extenso.

May 3. Copy of letter from the Parliament of Scotland (letter dated 26 April) to the Speaker of the House of Peers, pro tempore, to be communicated to the Lords and Commons, forwarding "their just and necessary" demands to the Honourable Houses of the Parliament "of England, to which the Parliament desires a clear" and satisfactory answer." L. J., X. 242. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Desires of the Parliament of Scotland to the Honourable Houses of the Parliament of England for the covenant to be taken, for a treaty with the King, for the return of the excluded members, for Lord Fairfax's army to be disbanded, &c. L. J., X. 242. In extenso.

May 4. Petition of Edward Lord Herbert of Cheshire. Upon the surrender of his Castle at Montgomery he had 20*l.* a week allowed him. Much of this money is now in arrear, and he prays that it may be presently paid and the order continued, if not during his life, as the Earl of Mulgrave had it, yet at least until he be satisfied for the losses he sustained for two years and three months during which time he kept his castle until he submitted it unto the Parliament, which losses appear by good certificate to amount to divers thousand pounds. L. J., X. 243.

May 4. Answer of George James to the petition of Roger Draper (vide 24 April). Denies many of the allegations contained in Draper's petition, and prays that the order made thereon may be discharged and the matter left to the ordinary course of the law. L. J., X. 243.

May 4. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Richard Hopkins to the vicarage of Cleeve Pippard [Cliffe-Pypard], Wilts. L. J., X. 243.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of ministers that Hopkins is a godly, able, and orthodox divine, &c. 20 Jan. 1647-8.

May 4. Certificate that Clement Paman is a man able for his learning, orthodox in his doctrine, and unquestionable for his life and conversation. L. J., X. 244.

May 4. Petition of Isaac Williams, defendant in a writ of error, wherein John Dyrrett is plaintiff. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing.

May 4. Similar petition of John Hanbury, defendant in a writ of error, wherein Francis Finch is plaintiff.

May 5. Petition of Edward Fisher; prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his cause against William Blaythwaite. L. J., X. 245.

May 5. Petition of George Raleigh. Complains that he is sued by Robert Vivers and others for matters done merely as a soldier, and in obedience to the commands of his superior officers. Prays that an order made by their Lordships on the 16th of June 1646 for his protection may be revived, and that a day may be appointed for him to make good and prove the suggestions of his petition upon which the said order was granted. L. J., X. 245.

Annexed:—

1. Pamphlet containing copies of various petitions in the matter.

May 5. Petition of Michael Grigg; petitioner, having legally arrested William Wrawtrey for debt, is stayed in his prosecution by a pretended general order from their Lordships. Prays that he may have liberty to prosecute his action. L. J., X. 245.

May 5. Petition of William Cockayne, merchant. Complains that Mr. Eltonhead, taking advantage of there being now no sheriff in Essex to grant any replevin, on Tuesday last caused all the cattle belonging to petitioner's tenants to be driven away, to the disturbance of his title, and the destruction of his tenants' stock. Prays that an order may be granted for the tenants quietly to enjoy the houses and lands held by them until the hearing of the cause now depending between petitioner and Mr. Eltonhead. L. J., X. 245.

May 6. Pass for Mrs. Blake to go into France. L. J., X. 245.

May 8. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct William Ellis to the vicarage of Foulden, Norfolk. L. J., X. 247.

May 8. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Robert Stafford to the vicarage of Pakenham, Suffolk. L. J., X. 247.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate in favour of Stafford. 6 May 1648.

May 8. Petition of Edward Eltonhead by way of answer to the last petition of William Cockayne. Prays that, for avoiding delay and charges, their Lordships will be pleased to refer the consideration of the question between him and Cockayne to any of the reverend judges that they may make report thereof to the House. L. J., X. 248.

May 8. Petition of John Silver, of Stoke, in the county of Kent, husbandman; by the will of William Allen, deceased, petitioner became his executor, but in opposition thereto, Thomas Raynes, by the advice of Peter Stowell, late registrar to the Bishop of Rochester, sued out letters of administration in the name of John Bishop of Rochester two months after the date of the two ordinances, the one for abolishing bishops, and the other for constituting Sir Nathaniel Brent to the grant of administrations. Raynes, pretending title to the estate, prosecuted suit against petitioner, encouraged by Stowell, who said he would make the administration in the bishop's name valid and sufficient in spite of any ordinance of Parliament. Petitioner prays that Raynes and Stowell may be sent for to answer for their contempt, and that he may be relieved for the great charges and trouble incurred by him by the unlawful grant of the administration. L. J., X. 248.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 3 April 1648.

May 8. Pass for Charles Viscount Andover and his servants to go into France. L. J., X. 248.

May 9. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the city of London in Common Council assembled. They conceive that there is an expectation that the Parliament shall be guarded by the city forces, which petitioners are ready to do, being put into a capacity to perform the same by settling the Militia, and being authorised so to do. They have received information that the bringing in of bullion is much impeded and merchandising greatly diverted by reason that the former favour afforded to the city of nominating the Lieutenant of the Tower hath been of late suspended, and many soldiers therein placed unknown to petitioners, whereby trading is much decayed and poor people in extreme misery for want of employment, and the city greatly endangered by their important necessities. Petitioners pray that they may be authorised by ordinance of Parliament to nominate and present to Parliament a Committee for the Militia of the City, that the command of the Tower of London may be put into the hands of such a person as they shall nominate and present to Parliament, and that the soldiers now remaining there may be removed. L. J., X. 249.

May 9. Petition of Sir Paul Pindar. Prays their Lordships to suspend the execution of the order made on the 4th instant for ousting him of the possession of the alum works and mines at Mulgrave, Yorkshire, and giving possession thereof to the Earl of Mulgrave, until petitioner has been heard concerning his title thereto. L. J., X. 249.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 4 May 1648.
2. Another petition of Sir Paul Pindar. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his title to the mines, works, &c. for which he paid a great and valuable consideration. (Undated.)

May 10. Petition of ministers of the city of London. Petitioners being deeply sensible of the deplorable condition of the college near Dublin, and sadly weighing how religion would suffer by the ruin of that pious, royal, and profitable foundation and the fair library there, to the joy of adversaries and grief of the godly, pray that some order may be settled for upholding that honourable and useful society, and that for the present supply of their extreme necessity, under which they are ready to expire, a public collection may be ordered on some one Lord's Day in all churches and chapels within the province of London. L. J., X. 250.

Annexed:—

1. Statement as to the deplorable condition of Trinity College, in consequence of the occupation of their lands by the rebels, by which many of the fellows and scholars have been obliged to seek sustenance elsewhere, while the college buildings are falling into decay for want of repair, the truth of which statement is attested by the Archbishop of Armagh, Vice-Chancellor of the College, and others.

May 10. Draft of additional ordinance touching the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty. This ordinance was reported from the Committee on the Admiralty this day, and referred to a Committee of the whole House, but no further proceedings appear to have been taken. L. J., X. 250.

May 10. Draft ordinance for rectifying many superstitious habits and customs in the Universities. The ordinance forbids the wearing of surplices or copes in all cathedrals, churches, chapels, and college chapels, and halls. Hoods (though they may have their use by way of civil distinction of degrees in university meetings) are not to be pressed upon any under penalty to be worn in any part of the service and worship of God. The imposing of subscription upon students is forbidden, and the Vice-Chancellor and heads of the Universities are speedily to consider what ceremonies, vestures, habits, and customs at any time used in the Universities are needless or unseemly for ministers of the Gospel, in order that they may be forborne and totally removed. This ordinance was read and committed this day, but does not appear to have been further proceeded with. L. J., X. 250.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the House of Commons that the statute for imposing upon young scholars a subscription according to the 36th article of the canons is against the law and liberty of the subject, and ought not to be pressed upon any students or graduates whatsoever. 20 Jan. 1640–1.
2. Copy of order of the House of Commons enlarging previous order. 9 April 1641.
3. Copy of order of the House of Commons for all copes and surplices to be taken out of all cathedrals and collegiate and parish churches and chapels, and applied for the relief of maimed soldiers. 3 Oct. 1643.

May 10. Draft letter from the Speaker of the House of Lords to the Earl of Northampton, desiring his Lordship to come to London to appear as a witness in the cause between Raleigh and Vivers, and assuring him that he shall suffer no prejudice or damage to himself or retinue either in coming up, during his stay in London, or on his return back to the place from whence he comes. L. J., X. 251.

May 10. Petition of Dame Audrey Poyntz Littleton, late wife of Sir Adam Poyntz Littleton, Baronet, deceased, complaining of the conduct of Isabel Smith, and Andrew Booth, the keeper of Newgate, and praying that Booth may be sent for to answer for his high contempt and misdemeanour in permitting Isabel Smith to be at liberty, and that Smith may be removed to some other prison. L. J., X. 251. In extenso.

May 10. Petition of Thomas Marsh, of Hackney, in the county of Middlesex. Petitioner has been nominated sheriff of Cambridge for the ensuing year. He never had a house or inhabited in that county, for six years he has been troubled with a quartern ague which disables him for any public employment, and he is one of the Committee for Middlesex. He therefore prays to be dismissed from the office of sheriff of Cambridge. Noted.—Nothing ordered.

May 11. Petition of John Burrowes, defendant in a writ of error wherein Robert Trippett is plaintiff. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing. L. J., X. 252.

May 11. Judgment in the writ of error between John Hawke and Robert Crewe. L. J., X. 252.

May 11. Petition of Sir Thomas Trollope, Baronet. Prays leave to proceed at law against Mountague Earl of Lindsey for the recovery of a debt. L. J., X. 252.

May 11. Certificate in favour of George Ward, minister. L. J., X. 253.

May 11. Instruction for the Commissioners from the Parliament of England to the Parliament of Scotland. The Commissioners are to signify to the Parliament of Scotland that the two Houses of the Parliament of England take notice and very much resent the unusual address of the letter, with the paper of desires enclosed, it not being the style which hath been and is used to the Houses of Parliament. The letter was addressed "To the Right Honble. the Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore, to be communicated to the Lords and Commons assembled in the Parliament of England at Westminster." C. J., V. 556. In extenso. This instruction was agreed to by the Commons, and sent up to the Lords this day. On the 13th the Lords referred the matter to a Committee, who on the same day reported an amendment which was rejected by the House (L. J., X. 256, 257). On the 15th the Lords rejected the instruction. L. J., X. 258.

May 12. Order in the cause between Ralph Wiseman and Henry Rooper. L. J., X. 253.

May 12. Petition of Lucie Powlett, one of the daughters of Lord Henry Powlett. William Earl of Bedford was indebted to Lady Elizabeth Hatton, petitioner's aunt, 4,000*l.*, which sum Lady Hatton devised to petitioner for her marriage portion, and then died. The Earl having refused to pay this sum, petitioner preferred her bill in Chancery against him, but this he refuses to answer, making use of his privilege as a peer of the realm. Petitioner prays that the Earl may be ordered to pay what is due to her, with damages for the detaining thereof, or to answer her bill in Chancery. L. J., X. 254.

May 12. Report of Dr. Benett and Edward Eltonhead, two Masters in Chancery, of the costs incurred by Robert Edbrooke and others in consequence of their arrest and detention on the complaint of Sir Oliver Luke and others. L. J., X. 254.

Annexed:—

1. Order for the discharge of Edbrooke and others, and for Sir Oliver Luke to pay their costs. 18 April 1648.
2. Note of the costs and expenses that Robert Edbrooke, William Tucker, and Silvester Williams were at in their journey towards London, together with the expences they paid for other messengers.
3. List of fees due to the officers of the House from Robert Edbrooke and others.

May 12. Petition of Sir Oliver Luke and others. Pray that they may be fully heard to make good their charges of contempt against Robert Edbrooke and others, and that in the meantime the order for the payment of costs may be suspended. L. J., X. 254.

May 12. Petition of Bartholomew Savery, defendant in a writ of error wherein William Doe is plaintiff. Prays for an early day for hearing. L. J., X. 254.

May 12. Report of Mr. Justice Bacon and Mr. Baron Atkins upon the petition of Thomas and Edmond Riggs and others, concerning the manor of Fareham. L. J., X. 255. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Order referring Rigg's petition to the judges. 31 Dec. 1647.
2. Further order in the matter. 29 Jan. 1647–8.
3. Affidavit of Richard Pearce in the matter. 18 April 1648.
4. Printed statement in the cause.

May 12. Petition of John Earl of Rivers. John Greene has petitioned their Lordships to take from petitioner his privilege. Prays that the ancient and lawful privilege of a peer may be allowed to him, and that during the time of Parliament he may not be molested with suits at law.

May 13. Petition of William Kendall, citizen and common councilman in the city of London. Petitioner has been a sufferer by the late rebellion in Ireland to the value of at least 5,000*l.*, and has at present goods to the value of 500*l.* in Cork and Kinsale which he cannot get without a license to send a ship to fetch them. He prays that leave may be granted to him to send a ship to bring away his goods, and to send thither by his factor a small quantity of lawful exportable merchandize, which according to his factor's contract he has already bought. L. J., X. 256.

May 13. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel Walter Owen. Petitioner has served the State from the first to the last of the late war, and has long waited for his arrears, but does nevertheless waive importunity of suit in consideration of the present and public want. He prays that he may have leave for raising a regiment of seven companies for Italy, composed of supernumeraries, malignants, and idle persons fit for foreign service, but dangerous and a burden at home, petitioner giving undeniable security for the certain transportation of the companies free, and far off from any purposes against the State. L. J., X. 256.

May 13. Amendment to the letter to the Parliament of Scotland concerning the answer to be sent to their desires. L. J., X. 257, 259.

May 13. Report of Sir Edward Leche and Mr. John Page concerning the imposts of wine due to peers. L. J., X. 257. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Order for Sir Edward Leche and Mr. Page to report upon the matter. 18 Jan. 1647-8.
2. Petition of Lawrence Lisle. In obedience to their Lordships' orders petitioner has endeavoured to gather in the arrears of impost yet unsatisfied, and to discover the impediments therein, and has procured several certificates from the farmers of the customs, whereby it appears that William Leachland received the moneys for the impost for the years 1633 to 1641. He is since deceased, and his widow has married Sir John Poole, from whom petitioner has several times demanded the moneys, but he refuses to pay. Prays that some course may be taken to compel the executors of Leachland to pay over the moneys received by him. (Undated.)
3. Particular of bills of impost signed and remaining in the custody of Lawrence Lisle, which are unsatisfied by Mr. Leachland, notwithstanding he hath received the moneys.
4. Certificates of the farmers of the customs referred to in Lisle's petition. 17 Aug. 1647.

May 13. Answer of Ralph Wiseman to the petition of Henry Rooper (vide 22 Feb. 1647-8). Prays that Rooper's petition may be dismissed as it does not contain anything which has not already been examined and decided by former causes. L. J., X. 74.

May 14. Letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Marshall (the messenger who brought the letter from the Parliament of Scotland) to the Earl of Manchester. Complains that he has been arrested by one Dickens, a bailiff, at the suit of Mr. Burges, notwithstanding they both knew upon what business he was in town. Expects to know their Lordships' pleasure herein suddenly. L. J., X. 258.

May 15. Petition of ministers of the county of Rutland and the parts adjacent. Pray that Samuel Oates, weaver, a known and professed Anabaptist may be proceeded against for blasphemy, &c. L. J., X. 259. In extenso.

May 16. Petition of divers thousands knights, gentlemen, and freeholders of the county of Surrey, together with the borough of Southwark. Pray that a personal treaty may be entered into with the King, and that the army may be disbanded. L. J., X. 260. In extenso.

May 16. Draft answer of the Lords to preceding petition. L. J., X. 260. In extenso.

May 16. Order of the Committee for the affairs of Ireland, recommending that Sir Robert Meredith be put in the place of Baron Hilton as one of the Keepers of the Great Seal of Ireland. L. J., X. 262.

May 16. Copy of preceding.

May 18. Petition of the well affected parishioners of Coumd, in the county of Salop. Richard Wood, late rector of the parish, was sequestered for his delinquency, and Samuel Smyth, a godly and orthodox divine, settled to officiate in his stead. Wood is now dead, and Sir Richard Lee and Mr. Pitt are joint trustees of the patronage, but as Lee is a delinquent under sequestration, the disposal of the living is wholly with Parliament. Petitioners pray that Mr. Smyth may be confirmed in the rectory. L. J., X. 261.

Annexed :—

1. Duplicate of preceding.
2. Certificate of Committee of Salop recommending Smyth for the living.
3. Copy of preceding.

4. Draft ordinance appointing Smyth to the living. L. J., X. 261.

5. Another draft.

May 18. Draft order adding Gilbert Ireland and others to the Committee of Sequestrations for Lancaster. C. J., V. 564.

May 18. Order referring the petition of Katherine Wollascott to the Committee at Goldsmiths Hall. C. J., V. 564.

May 19. Instructions for Sir William Playter and Sir Thomas Barnadiston, appointed to go to Bury to suppress the insurrection there. L. J., X. 268. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Letter from the Committee at Bury (dated 15th May) to the Committee for the safety of the Kingdom, giving an account of the proceedings at Bury, and enclosing the following papers, all dated 14th May and printed in extenso. L. J., X. 268-269.
2. Statement that the magistrates of the town are unable to appease the tumult, and have therefore written to Mr. Wrindue to come over and treat with Sir Thomas Barnadiston and Major Disborough.
3. Proclamation issued by Sir Thomas Barnadiston calling upon the inhabitants of the town to deliver up their arms and depart quietly to their homes.
4. Copy of letter from certain of the inhabitants of the town to Sir Thomas Barnadiston and Major Disborough, requesting that certain gentlemen who came out of the country for the defence and good of the town may be permitted to depart with their arms.
5. Answer to preceding letter.
6. Order of the Commissioners of the associated counties directing the constables of Nowton to send twenty horse with arms and men for the service of the town of Bury.

May 20. Testimonial as to the fitness of Walter Flay for the Church of St. Mary's College, near Winchester. L. J., X. 272.

May 20. Petition of Cheney Rowe, D.D., sometime prisoner in the Spanish Inquisition. Petitioner was, upon misinformation, ejected by the Earl of Manchester out of the rectory of Orwell, Cambridge, the rectory being an appropriation and no cure of souls, albeit petitioner has since been acquitted from scandal and left free to the course of justice by the Committee for Plundered Ministers, but he is stopped by the Committee for Indemnities, in regard there is no appeal from the Earl's acts except to their Lordships. Prays that his case may be considered or referred to some committee or other indifferent persons that may have power to examine the justice thereof. L. J., X. 272.

Annexed :—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

May 20. Petition of James Halton, minister of the Word. Petitioner was, by order of the House, instituted and inducted to the Church of Aikton, Cumberland, but the possession thereof was forcibly detained from him by Mr. Sharpeles who pretended right thereto. Sharpeles is now dead and petitioner has got possession of the church, but the parsonage and glebe lands are possessed by the widow. Petitioner prays that he may be quieted in the possession thereof until he is evicted by due course of law. L. J., X. 272.

May 20. Petition of William Cockayne, merchant. Prays for a hearing of his cause against Mr. Eltonhead. L. J., X. 272.

May 20. Petition of Joseph Batailhey, merchant. Petitioner, being born at Bordeaux, did about sixteen years since become a factor here for Mr. Leachland, the King's wine merchant, since whose decease petitioner has served wines to His Majesty by order of the Committee of the Revenue. He was bred a Protestant and has spent most of his time here, and has married an English woman. He prays that an ordinance may be passed to naturalize him and make him a free born subject of this land. L. J., X. 272.

May 20. Order in the cause between the Earl of Shrewsbury and Lord Baltimore. L. J., X. 272. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Answer of Cecil Lord Baltimore to the petition of the Earl of Shrewsbury and others (see 15th Feb. last); all the petitioners except one were of full age at the time of the proceedings in the Court of Wards, and ought not therefore to have sued in that court, the petitioners allege that the lands in question were settled upon them by good assurance at law, and that the deed under which respondent claims is void in law, and therefore on their own shewing the petitioners have no cause to trouble the House; Lord Baltimore prays to be left to the ordinary proceedings of law and equity.

May 20. Certificate of the Committee for accounts of the arrears due to Lieutenant-Colonel Ambrose Tyndall. L. J., X. 272.

May 20. Petition of Robert Edbrooke and others. Sir Oliver Luke and John and Henry Trenchard have refused to pay the 100*l.* awarded to petitioners for their costs and charges, and petitioners have now received an order to pay the Gentleman Usher and the other officers of the House 60*l.* They pray that they may not be compelled to pay this sum until they have received the 100*l.*, and that for the payment of this some speedy course may be taken in order that they may return to their homes. L. J., X. 272.

May 20. Petition of Priscilla Webber, spinster, administratrix of Anne Trowte, late of the City of Exeter, widow, deceased. Anne Trowte having obtained a judgment against Thomas Melhuish in the Court of King's Bench, he, in order to oppress her, brought a writ of error into this House, which has now become abated by her death. Petitioner prays that the transcript of the record may be sent back to the Court of King's Bench in order that she may have the benefit of the judgment obtained against Melhuish.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of petitioner respecting the death of Anne Trowte. 9 Feb. 1647-48.

May 20. Order that, if Melhuish does not within fourteen days bring in a new writ, the present record and writ are to be remitted to the Court of King's Bench.

May 20. Petition of Sir Edmund Duncombe and Dame Hester his wife. Pray that Mr. Audley, register of the Court of Wards, may be ordered to deliver up to them a certain assignment produced in the cause between petitioners and Sir Robert Bell. See L. J., X. 88.

May 20. Petition of William Rowland, chirurgion, to the Earl of Manchester. Petitioner having taken to wife a Frenchwoman, to whom an estate in Rouen is lately come, prays his Lordship to procure him a pass for himself, his wife, a servant, and three horses, in order that they may go over and take possession.

May 22. Petition of all the field officers and captains of Colonel Herbert's, Colonel Eyre's, Colonel Graye's, and Colonel Humfreys' regiments formerly designed for the service of Ireland. Petitioners, being supernumeraries, were by ordinance of Parliament disbanded, to which they cheerfully submitted being assured of receiving two months pay as all the other forces in the Kingdom have had; they have been contented for the present with two months half-pay, but are now brought to a very low condition, and inevitable ruin is like to follow them if they are not speedily supplied. They have already applied themselves to the Committee of the Army, from whom they have had no relief. They pray that speedy and effectual orders may be given to the commissaries or treasurers of the several counties where they were disbanded that they may have equal satisfaction with all other forces in the Kingdom. The whole sum to be paid in four several counties will not amount to 1,000*l.* L. J., X. 273.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding, noted with certificates of officers of various regiments, that at their disbanding they received two months' full pay.

May 23. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the city of London in Common Council assembled. Pray for the release of the Aldermen and other citizens now confined in the Tower. L. J., X. 278. In extenso.

May 23. Draft of the answer of the Lords to preceding petition. L. J., X. 276. In extenso.

May 23. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Ambrose Clare has been approved for the rectory of Poltimore, Devon. L. J., X. 278.

May 23. Draft order for payment of 3,000*l.* to the soldiers in the county of York lately under Lord Fairfax. C. J., V. 570. In extenso.

May 24. Petition of Lady Anne Lake. Charles Smeaton granted to petitioner a lease of a house in Drury Lane for divers years yet to come, but on the 22nd of Feby. 1643-4 the Committee of Sequestrations for the city of Westminster seized the house to the use of the Commonwealth. Smeaton has now arrested and sued petitioner at law for the rent due since the time of the seizure. Petitioner addressed herself to the Committee of Indemnity, and several days were appointed for hearing the cause, but it was not heard until Smeaton, taking advantage of petitioner being sick and her witnesses absent, procured her petition to be dismissed. Petitioner, having no means of redress in the ordinary courts of justice, prays their Lordships to take some order for her relief. L. J., X. 279.

Annexed:—

1. Order of Committee of Sequestrations for the seizure of petitioner's house. 22 Feb. 1643-4.

May 24. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Samuel Peachy to the vicarage of North Stoke, Oxon. L. J., X. 281.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Dr. John Arrowsmith in favour of Peachy. 15 May 1648.

May 24. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Edward Partington to the rectory of Aka alias Rock, Worcester. L. J., X. 281.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that Partington has been approved of for the cure. 23 May 1648.

May 24. Petition of Eliz. Willan, widow, to the House of Commons. James Temple, Esq., of Chadwell, Essex, now a member of the House, some years since became bound to Martha Brocklebie in a bond of 400*l.*, and to Susan Withe in a bond to a like amount, which sums were their sole existence, they being orphans and committed to petitioner's charge. Mr. Temple has refused to pay the same, and by obscuring his person and conveying away his lands has frustrated the actions brought against him. Martha Brocklebie has now perished of want, bequeathing the said debt to petitioner in part recompense for her great charge. The House of Commons lately published an order for the relief of creditors against members, and petitioner accordingly proceeded against Mr. Temple, causing two writs to be served upon him, but he threw them on the ground and spurned them with his foot, and hath not answered thereto. Petitioner prays that he may be ordered forthwith to pay to her and Susan Withe the monies due to them. C. J., V. 572.

May 25. Petition of the right hon^{ble} Lady Maryan Countess Dowager of Mulgrave, on the behalf of herself and the sons and daughter of Edmund, late Earl of Mulgrave and the said Lady Countess. Petitioners have a lawful interest in the sum of 1,640*l.* per annum out of the alum mines at Mulgrave, which sum is all the provision left them by the late Earl. They hear that under colour of some order of the House the alum works are now interrupted, and they fear that thereby they may be wholly deprived of their livelihood. Petitioners pray that the works may continue in such hands as they were formerly in without interruption. L. J., X. 282.

May 25. Petition of Charles Smeaton, mercer, of London. Prays for further time to put in his answer to the petition of Lady Anne Lake. L. J., X. 282.

Annexed:—

1. Plea and answer of Charles Smeaton to the petition of Lady Anne Lake, and his petition against her. He has obtained a verdict for the rent due to him in the King's Bench, and the lady has brought a bill in Chancery against him, which he has answered; she also brought the matter before the Committee for indemnity, who after full hearing dismissed her petition. He therefore prays to be dismissed from further attendance in the matter.

May 25. Petition of Anthony Wither. Complains that the Earl of Chesterfield is raising an additional building to a house in Covent Garden adjoining petitioner's in such a way as will prove noisome to divers neighbours by depriving them of light and air, and contrary to the covenant made with the Earl of Bedford. Prays that the building may be stayed. L. J., X. 282.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same. Prays leave to proceed at law against the Earl of Chesterfield notwithstanding his privilege. (Undated.)

May 25. Order for two justices to view the building, and proceed therein according to law. L. J., X. 282.

May 25. Order for adding Sir John Northcott and Sir Nicholas Marten to the Committee of Militia for Devon. L. J., X. 282. In extenso.

May 25. Order for adding Mr. Trefusis and Mr. Penrose to the Committee of Militia for Cornwall. L. J., X. 283. In extenso.

May 26. Draft resolution recommending the paper containing the desires of the County of Surrey for an answer to their petition, &c. to the House of Commons. L. J., X. 283. In extenso.

May 26. Petition of Henry Babington and Nathaniel Bainbrig. By an order of the 20th of April last the business between petitioners was referred to Justices Bacon and Rolle. Justice Bacon being sick cannot at present sit, and petitioners therefore pray that some other judge may be appointed in his place. L. J., X. 284.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 20 April 1648.

2. Order of Justices Bacon and Rolle appointing a day for hearing the matter. 15 May 1648.

May 27. Petition of John Cartwright, Robert Vivers, Henry Benson, and Nathaniel Vivers. Their Lordships have appointed the 20th of June next for hearing the complaint made by George Raleigh against petitioners. They pray to be dismissed to their ordinary course at law, or at least that an earlier day may be appointed for the hearing.

May 27. Order for the hearing of the cause Raleigh against Vivers and others. L. J., X. 285.

May 27. Letter from Lord Fairfax at Windsor to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker pro tempore. Desires that an ordinance may be passed for confirmation of the articles for the surrender of Oxford. L. J., X. 310. In extenso.

May 29. Draft message to the House of Commons respecting the adding of more members of both Houses to the Committee at Derby House. L. J., X. 289. In extenso.

May 30. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that Thomas Theoderick has been approved for the rectory of Rockland All Saints, Norfolk. L. J., X. 293.

May 30. Petition of Thomas Jones and John Hetherley. Pray that a day may be appointed for hearing their cause against John Rutter. (See 22 Feb. 1667-8.)

May 31. Letter from the Committee for Lancaster to the Speaker of the House of Lords pro tempore. The writers have just received their Lordships' order of the 23rd instant (L. J., X. 276) for the release of Mr. Lamplugh and Mr. Skelton, and conceive it to be their duty to acquaint their Lordships that the enemy being in Cumberland and Westmoreland drawn up to the very confines of the county of Lancaster, these two gentlemen came into the writers' quarters making their journey through the county from one end to the other, and were brought before the Committee of the County to prevent their giving intelligence to the enemy, the one having been in arms against the Parliament, and the other being a Popish recusant. The negative oath was tendered to them, which they refused to take, and they were, in pursuance of a letter from the Speaker of the House of Commons concerning proceedings with such like persons, and for prevention of danger by their intelligence, secured by the Committee in the town of Lancaster where they now remain. The writers desire these circumstances to be made known to the Lords, whose order thereupon they will readily and cheerfully observe.

June 1. Order of the Committee of Trustees for Bishops' lands for Mr. Noel to apply to the Speakers of both Houses to appoint how the writings remaining in Lambeth House, not touching the lands belonging to the late Archbishop of Canterbury, shall be disposed of. L. J., X. 293.

June 1. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel Ambrose Tyndal. Petitioner has been arrested by Robert Tucker for non-payment of a bond extorted from him when he was in prison for another debt. He has served faithfully ever since the beginning of the eruptions, and his arrears of pay amount to 800*l*. Prays that he may be released, and receive some portion of his arrears. L. J., X. 294.

June 1. Pass for William Davis, son of Sir Paul Davis, to go to Ireland. L. J., X. 294.

June 1. Another pass for William Davis.

June 1. Draft order for Colonel Ralph Welden to be discharged of the several sums taken up by him for the poor soldiers of the garrison of Plymouth. L. J., X. 295. In extenso.

June 1. Draft order for Serjeant-Major General Skippon and others to be added to the Committee at Derby House. L. J., X. 295. In extenso.

June 1. Draft order for James Herbert and others to be added to the Committee of Wilts, &c. L. J., X. 295. In extenso.

June 1. Order for William Bosseville to be added to the Committee of Yorkshire. L. J., X. 295. In extenso.

June 1. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled. Petitioners have received the annexed petition which they pray the House to take into consideration. L. J., X. 295. In extenso.

Annexed :—

1. Petition of divers well affected citizens, and other inhabitants within the City of London, to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council. Petitioners desire a personal treaty with the King, the association of the Militia of London and the counties adjoining, &c. L. J., X. 296. In extenso.

June 1. Petition of William Ibson, of the City of York, to the Commissioners of the Great Seal of England. Petitioner, as register or clerk of the Court of York, and in pursuance of the order of the House of Lords of the 13th of July 1641, has preserved the records and evidences of that Court from the spoil of the soldiers on both sides, by whom the same were several times endangered. He is now sued in the Court of Chancery by several persons for bonds and writings remaining in his custody and, if he be compelled to answer all the suits that may be brought against him the charge will be very heavy, and he will be unable to bear it. He therefore prays to be discharged from answering, or if he does answer that it may be at the charge of the parties demanding the writings. L. J., X. 296.

Annexed :—

1. Abstract of prayer of preceding petition.

2. Copy of order with reference to the custody of the records of the Court of York. 13 July 1641.

June 1. Petition of Edward Fisher. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his cause against William Blaythwaite.

June 1. Application for passes for Robert and Edmund Brudenell.

June 2. Petition of Nathaniel Ward, minister. Prays that the parsonage of Althorpe, Lincolnshire, now void, may be conferred upon him. L. J., X. 297.

June 2. Order for discharge of James Fossett upon his entering into bond to appear when summoned. L. J., X. 296.

June 2. Answer of the Common Council delivered by Alderman Gibbs to the Committee of both Houses that went to the city concerning the Kentish business. L. J., X. 300. In extenso.

June 2. Petition of Anne Morte, widow. Petitioner's late husband, Adam Morte, brought into the Court of Wards divers evidences respecting petitioner's jointure and title of dower, and she cannot be permitted to see or have copies of the same without their Lordships' order, for want whereof she cannot maintain her writ of dower, which for a year past has been ready for trial at the Lancaster Assizes. Prays that her counsel or solicitor may have leave to view and peruse the evidences, or that they may be deposited in the hands of Richard Shuttleworth and others, all members of the House of Commons, to produce at the trial and afterwards to redeliver them as their Lordships shall appoint. L. J., X. 300.

Annexed :—

1. Orders of the Court of Wards with reference to the bringing in of petitioner's writings, &c.

2. Affidavit of Anne Morte that she cannot proceed to trial for want of her deeds. 5 May 1648.

3. Copy of preceding petition, orders, and affidavit.

June 2. Copy of order upon Ann Morte's petition. L. J., X. 300. In extenso.

June 2. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Thomas Fothergill has been approved for the vicarage of Holme on Spalding Moor.

June 2. Letter from Alexander Rigby, one of the Committee for Lancaster, at Preston, to the Speaker of the House of Lords. Since the letter of the Committee of the 31st of May last, Mr. Lamplugh and Mr. Skelton have procured Mr. Charles Hudson, of Bowtherbeck, Cumberland, to be imprisoned by the enemy upon pretence that his son, Captain Hudson, gave some information of their malignancy. The writer prays that the Committee may be allowed to detain Mr. Lamplugh and Mr. Skelton until by their means the enlargement of Mr. Hudson is procured.

June 5. Order of the Court of Common Council of London for the Committee for the Militia of London to raise what forces they can for defence and safety of the Parliament and city. L. J., X. 334. In extenso.

June 5. Petition of John Farmer. In 1641 petitioner presented a petition to be relieved against a judgment recovered against George Farmer, his surety, by Thomas Darker, and their Lordships referred the matter to the Earl of Newport, then Constable of the Tower, and Justices Reeve and Heath. On the 12th Feb. 1641-2 a report was made dismissing petitioner's surety, but Lord Newport went to Oxford before he had returned the report to the House, so nothing was done. Darker having revived the judgment depending in the King's Bench upon a writ of error, and gotten the same affirmed against petitioner's surety, petitioner again petitioned their Lordships who, on the 15th Sept. 1647, referred the matter to Justices Phesant and Godbolt, who have also made their report. Petitioner prays that the orders and reports may be read, and that he may receive some relief in the matter. L. J., X. 306.

Annexed:—

1. The Earl of Newport's report upon the case. 12 Feb. 1641-2.
2. Duplicate of preceding.
3. Copy of petition presented 15th Sept. 1647.
4. Order referring the matter to Justices Pheasant and Godbolt. 15 Sept. 1647.

June 6. Draft order for the Committee at Derby House to give a commission to Colonel Rosseter. L. J., X. 308. In extenso.

June 7. Petition of George Raleigh. Petitioner, having compounded with the Committee at Goldsmiths Hall for his delinquency, obtained an order to the Committee of Oxfordshire to restore his goods, but Sir William Cobb, Robert Vivers, and William Allen, members of the Oxfordshire Committee not only refused to obey the order but proceeded to make sale of his goods. Prays that the offenders may be ordered forthwith to restore his goods or their value, or to appear before their Lordships to show cause for their refusal. L. J., X. 310.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Committee at Goldsmiths Hall that the goods have been sold contrary to their order, and that they can obtain no satisfaction from the Oxfordshire Committee. 15 March 1647-8.

June 7. Draft of letter which the Assembly of Divines desire leave to send to the General Assembly in Scotland. L. J., X. 310. In extenso.

June 8. Petition of Arthur Annesley. John Earl of Bridgewater stands indebted to petitioner in the sum of 2,000*l.* Petitioner has used all possible mediation by frequent addresses to his Lordship, but cannot by any entreaties obtain satisfaction. Prays that he may have leave to take the benefit of the laws against the Earl's estate. L. J., X. 313.

June 8. Resolution approving the action of Colonel Thomas Wayte in suppressing the insurrection in Rutlandshire, Leicestershire, and Northamptonshire. L. J., X. 314. In extenso.

June 8. Draft letter of thanks from Parliament to Colonel Thomas Wayte. L. J., X. 314. In extenso.

June 8. Petition of Edward Davenport, defendant in a writ of error wherein John Ware is plaintiff. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing. L. J., X. 314.

June 9. Petition of William Saby, blacksmith. About four years since petitioner took a lease of a tenement in London of John Caesar, now a prisoner for debt, and paid a great fine, and has spent much money upon repairs, but now George Hatt pretending title thereto has brought his ejection, which is now ready to be tried. Prays that the clerk of the office of the Court of Wards may be ordered to produce at the trial the original will of Lady Susan Caesar, which is absolutely necessary for clearing the title, and which cannot be produced without an order of the House. L. J., X. 315.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same to the like effect.

June 9. Petition of the knights, gentlemen, clergy, and commonalty of the county of Sussex; that the King may be received to a safe treaty with the two Houses of Parliament; that the army may be paid and disbanded; that the kingdom may be governed by the known laws of the realm; that the estates of petitioners may be freed from taxes, and no garrisons maintained in their county. L. J., X. 315. In extenso, with the exception of the signatures, of which there are twenty-five skins. (Parchement Collection.)

June 10. Petition of William Sykes, of Kingston-upon-Hull, merchant. Petitioner has disbursed great sums of money for the use of the Parliament, and his accounts have been duly audited. He has already suffered twelve weeks imprisonment at the suit of one of his creditors, and is again threatened with arrest. Prays that some course may be taken for his satisfaction. L. J., X. 316.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Committee of Accounts as to the sum due to Sykes. 30 July 1647.

June 12. Letter from Lord Maynard to the Commissioners of the Great Seal. I have received a letter to appear in the Chancery at the suit of one Bowell, a mean servant who took away an unfortunate sister of mine, who is since dead, the suit being for her portion. I stand to the judgment of the House of Peers for my privilege. I beseech you to hold me excused, it not being out of any contempt to that high court, nor any doubt of your honours' justice. L. J., X. 316.

June 12. Notice from the Sheriff of Norfolk to the Deputy Sheriffs of the county, that he has allowed Mr. Wortham's protection in his office, it being signed and owned by Lord Maynard. L. J., X. 316.

Annexed:—

1. Writ for arrest of Wortham. 15 May 1648.

June 12. Petition of John Earl of Thanet Island. Prays that privilege may be granted to him for the stay of proceedings upon a pretended decree of the Court of Chancery. L. J., X. 316. In extenso.

June 12. Draft order appointing a day for hearing the matter respecting the appointment of Mr. Launce, as minister of St. Edmund's, Lombard Street, London. L. J., X. 317.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of parishioners of Edmund the King, Lombard Street. By an order of the House of the 30th of October last the Assembly of Divines were to certify their opinion as to the fitness of Mr. Launce to be minister of the parish according to the desire of the inhabitants thereof. The Assembly, on the 13th of February last, certified that they could not in conscience give him their approbation. Petitioners pray that a day may be appointed on which Mr. Launce and his accusers may be convented, and each party heard, and that in the meantime Mr. Launce may be allowed to continue his labours in the ministry amongst them.

2. Petition of inhabitants of the parish of Edmund the King, Lombard Street. Pray that Mr. Launce may be appointed rector of the parish.

3. Certificate of John Browne, churchwarden of the parish of St. Michael le Quern, that Mr. Launce took the solemn league and covenant. 29 Oct. 1646.

4. Certificate of Solomon Cole and another that the scruples they had about taking the solemn league and covenant were removed by Mr. Launce, and that upon the satisfaction given them by him they took the covenant. 29 Oct. 1646.

5. Application of the parishioners of Edmund, Lombard Street, that a day may be appointed for hearing the matter.

6. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that they cannot give Mr. Launce their approbation. 14 Feb. 1647.

7. Statement of the Assembly of Divines giving their reason for refusing their approbation.

8. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines approving of Mr. Launce to be minister of Edmund, Lombard Street. 9 June 1648. L. J., X. 320. In extenso.

June 12. Draft order for payment of the arrears due to the officers of Cumberland. L. J., X. 318. In extenso.

June 12. Order for payment of 20*l*. to Mr. Mosse, the messenger who brought the good news of the taking of Tenby Castle. L. J., X. 318. In extenso.

June 12. Draft of preceding.

June 12. Draft order for payment of 10*l*. to John Williams, and 20*l*. to the rest of the messengers who brought the news of the victory at Maidstone. L. J., X. 318. In extenso.

June 12. Draft Order for the Committee at Derby House to take some fitting course for the safety of the Isle of Anglesey and the counties of North Wales. L. J., X. 318. In extenso.

June 12. Order for William Hawkins to be Commissary General of provisions for Ireland. L. J., X. 318. In extenso.

June 12. Draft of preceding.

June 12. Draft order for the Commissioners of the Navy to treat for six merchant ships for service.

June 13. Petition of Maryan Countess Dowager of Mulgrave on behalf of herself and younger children. Prays that Sir Paul Pindar may be allowed peaceably to proceed in the alum works in Mulgrave without stop of materials, or other interruption, by the now Earl of Mulgrave or his agents, and that if they do disturb him they may not be protected from proceedings at law by any privilege of Parliament. (See 25 May 1648.) L. J., X. 320.

June 13. Petition of Sir Paul Pindar. Prays that he may be left in quiet possession of the alum mines and works in Mulgrave until he is evicted by some just and legal proceeding, and that he may be allowed to sue the agents of the Earl of Mulgrave for their attempts to disturb him in his possession. L. J., X. 320.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Thomas Shipton and others, agents of the Earl of Mulgrave, notwithstanding they were showed their Lordships' order of the 9th of May, obstructed the carrying away of alum, threatened the carriers, and forbade the agent to come upon the ground again upon peril of trespass. 12 June 1648.

June 13. Resolution approving of the actions of the General in reducing the county of Kent, &c. L. J., X. 320. In extenso.

June 13. Draft of preceding.

June 13. Draft resolution respecting the discovery of persons who have not compounded. L. J., X. 320. In extenso.

June 14. Pass for Mr. Finch, brother of the Earl of Winchilsea, to go to any port of this Kingdom to embark for Holland. L. J., X. 321.

June 14. Petition of Thomas Kirke. James Fossett [Fawcett] was, by virtue of an attachment, brought before their Lordships and ordered to put in security for his appearance within fourteen days after notice. Notwithstanding this order he is gone, and given no security, to the great prejudice of petitioner, who prays that a warrant may be granted to bring Fossett before their Lordships that he may give in good security for his appearance. L. J., X. 321.

June 14. Order for the clerk of the late Court of Wards to deliver to George Speake, late his Majesty's ward, his bonds and indentures. L. J., X. 322.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of preceding.

2. Copy of order of the Court of Wards respecting the wardship of George Speake, &c. 11 Nov. 1615.

June 14. Petition of John Donne, Doctor of Divinity. Petitioner, who is chaplain in ordinary to the Earl of Denbigh, complains that he has been arrested contrary to privilege by James Vickars. Prays for discharge, and that Vickars may be sent for to answer his contempt. L. J., X. 322.

June 14. Report of the Judges in the cause between the Governors of Christ's Hospital and the Trinity House respecting certain lands left by the late Thomas Haynes. L. J., X. 323. In extenso.

June 14. Rota of Judges for the next Summer Circuit. L. J., X. 324. In extenso.

June 14. Draft order for payment of 20*l*. to William Clarke. L. J., X. 324. In extenso.

[June 14.] Petition of Alexander Lord Forbes. After two full years continual attendance and five months tedious and chargeable restraint, petitioner obtained an order of both Houses for 602*l.*, being part of his account payable by the Committee of the Navy, who gave order to their Treasurer, Sir Henry Vane, junior, for payment thereof, but both he and his deputy refuse to pay the same. Prays that Sir Henry Vane may be sent for to answer for his disobedience, and that some course may be taken by their Lordships for petitioner's present relief. L. J., X. 324.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. Petitioner, after a long attendance in hope to get some of his account, was (as the annexed paper will inform) content to respite 392*l.* in the Parliament's hands till a committee could be appointed to reconcile a difference between William Pennoyer, merchant of London, and Robert Gilchrist, of Barbadoes, planter, who have each obtained an ordinance for deducting the above-mentioned sum for the same parcel of tobacco, Pennoyer pretending he paid the money to Gilchrist, and Gilchrist denying that he received it. The assignees of Gilchrist threaten to have this sum out of the first money ordered to be paid to petitioner, who prays that Pennoyer and Gilchrist's assignees may be sent for, and the difference between them speedily determined in order that petitioner may be freed by one payment. (Undated.)

June 14. Draft order for payment of 200*l.* to Jane, widow of Colonel John Meldrum slain in the Parliament service. L. J., X. 384. In extenso.

June 14. Draft order for the "St. George" and the "Unicorn" to be sent to sea as part of this summer's guard, &c. L. J., X. 324. In extenso.

June 14. The answer of Roger Hill, of Taunton, guardian to Samuel Darker, an orphan, and administrator during his minority, to the petition of John Farmer and reports thereupon; he humbly offers reasons why the judgments obtained in the Courts of Common Pleas and King's Bench should not be vacated. Vide 5 June 1648.

June 15. Affidavit of Henry Lemon respecting the arrest of Henry Cooke, solicitor to the Earl of Mulgrave, at the suit of John Warren, contrary to privilege. L. J., X. 324.

June 15. Petition of Henry Vernon. Prays that Robert Cudworth may be summoned to appear and show cause why certain degrees irregularly and unduly obtained by him against petitioner should not be reversed and made void; the degrees were pronounced during the absence of petitioner upon the service of the State at Nantwich, in a suit concerning the administration of the property of the late Mr. Justice Vernon who died intestate, and whose only daughter was married to petitioner. L. J., X. 325.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Council of War at Nantwich, that Vernon was by special command attending upon the Council at the time of the making of the decrees. 10 April 1648.

2. Certificate from the office of the Six Clerks as to the irregularity of Cudworth's proceedings. 9 Oct. 1645.

June 16. Petition of Dame Anne Countess Dowager of Middlesex. Lionel late Earl of Middlesex being much pressed during the late troubles to raise money, prevailed upon petitioner to deliver her jewels to him for him to pawn, which he did for the sum of 1,100*l.*, promising to redeem them in a short time. He failed to do this before his death, but by his will devised and bequeathed them to petitioner, and required James now Earl of Middlesex, whom he made sole executor of his will, to pay the sum for which they were pledged; notwithstanding he has often been desired by petitioner to redeem the jewels he denies to do so, contrary to all equity and conscience. Petitioner prays leave to sue the Earl of Middlesex in the Court of Chancery, or wherever else she may be advised, and as regards such suit that he may stand unprivileged as she is otherwise without remedy against him. L. J., X. 325.

June 16. Draft ordinance for making the Planters born in New England free denizens of England. Brought in this day, read twice and committed, but no further proceeding. L. J., X. 325.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Committee for Foreign Affairs, recommending preceding ordinance for the approval of Parliament. 14 June 1648.

June 16. Draft order giving power to the Committee at Derby House to grant commissions to Captain William Boteler and others to raise volunteers for securing the County of Northampton, and suppressing tumults in those parts. L. J., X. 328. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order authorising the Committee at Derby House to nominate Commissioners for the safety and preservation of the town of Northampton.

June 16. Draft order referring it to the Commissioners of the Great Seal to consider of fit persons to be appointed judges, &c. L. J., X. 328. In extenso.

June 16. Draft of additional ordinance for putting papists and delinquents out of the late lines of communication. L. J., X. 328. In extenso.

June 17. Petition of Edward Odling, doctor in physic, one of the physicians who were first employed in the service of the Parliament for the curing of sick soldiers. Petitioner at the beginning of the war served under the late Earl of Essex for three years, but his pay is still in arrear. He was then ordered to serve in certain houses made hospitals for which he received only half pay, and about two years since he was dismissed, notwithstanding the declaration of Parliament to employ those before others who should most engage in the service of the State. Prays that he may have some competent satisfaction for his services, sufferings, and expenses, and that he may be appointed physician to the hospital in Ely House. L. J., X. 330.

Annexed:—

1. Brief remonstrance of petitioner's service, sufferings, and expense.

June 17. Petition of Captain John Jessop. Petitioner, who lost a considerable estate, both real and personal, by the late rebellion in Ireland, has served the State under the Earls of Essex and Stamford, for which service there are arrears due to him to the amount of 600*l.* He has now been arrested for a small sum by Percevall Ebbotson, and remains a prisoner in Newgate. Prays that an order may be made for his release in accordance with the precedent annexed. L. J., X. 330.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for release of Captain Jasper Hartwell. 2 June 1646.

2. Petition of Elizabeth Ebbotson. Petitioner's husband, Percevall Ebbotson, before the beginning of these troubles, kept one of the greatest inns in the city of Exeter, and maintained himself and family in good fashion. The city was twice besieged, and during those times he was forced to quarter many soldiers, for which he could get little or no payment. Mr. John Jessop, being Marshal General under Lord Stamford, did during the first siege take up quarters at the inn for himself, his wife, and servants; the reckoning for his expenses and the money borrowed came to 30*l.*, for which, being unprovided with money, as he said, he gave a bill. Petitioner and her husband having no means of subsistence, and having pawned and sold all that they had, even to their very clothes, after many entreaties for some satisfaction from Jessop, caused him to be arrested upon the bill. Jessop in order to defraud them of their debt threatens to accuse petitioner's husband of malignancy, though he never took up arms or did any act hostile to the Parliament. Petitioner prays that her husband may have free liberty to proceed against Jessop in due course of law for the recovery of his debt. (Undated.)

June 17. Draft of preceding.

June 19. Draft order for payment of 200*l.* to Lady Elizabeth Gray. L. J., X. 333. In extenso.

June 19. Draft ordinance for payment of 42,000*l.* to certain officers and soldiers. L. J., X. 333. In extenso.

June 19. Order for the more speedy bringing in the assessments for the army. L. J., X. 333. In extenso.

June 19. Draft of preceding.

June 19. Draft ordinance for sequestration of the estates of Major-General Langhorne, and divers other papists and delinquents in the late rebellion, in the counties of South Wales and Monmouthshire. L. J., X. 333. In extenso.

June 19. Draft instructions for the Commissioners for the sequestration of the estates of Major-General Langhorne, and divers other delinquents. L. J., X. 334. In extenso.

June 19. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that they have approved of Richard Culverwell for the rectory of Grundisburgh, Suffolk. L. J., X. 334.

June 19. Affidavit of Robert Erlambe with reference to the forcible entry of Rowland Furnis and others into the mines of the Earl of Rutland in the manor of Nether Haddon, Derbyshire. L. J., X. 335.

Annexed:—

1. Similar affidavit of Jonas Crossegill.

2. Similar affidavit of Thomas Needham.

June 19. Order of the House of Lords for the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall to grant permission to Elizabeth Countess Rivers to remain with her retinue in and about the cities of London and Westminster. L. J., X. 335. In extenso.

June 19. Similar order of the House of Commons.

June 20. Petition of Sir Henry Frederick Thynne. There are divers great suits now prosecuted against him concerning his whole estate by his brother Sir James Thynne. Prays leave to remain in town to attend to these suits, being willing in any way to engage himself from acting or any way intermeddling to the prejudice of the Parliament. L. J., X. 335.

June 20. Answer and petition of Edmond Earl of Mulgrave to a late petition delivered by the Countess Dowager of Mulgrave and others. Petitioner denies that the Countess Dowager ever had 1,640*l.* per annum paid to her by Sir Paul Pindar for her younger children, by virtue of any grant of the alum mines and works at Mulgrave, and asserts that if they have any interest at all in the 1,640*l.* per annum, or any security for any competent livelihood, they are beholden to petitioner for it, as, being all settled upon him, it was in his power to decide what portions they should have, or indeed if they should have any portion at all. The letters patent granted to Sir John Gibbon, which were assigned to Sir Paul Pindar, and under which he claims, were declared by both Houses to be illegal and void, and Sir Paul is now in high contempt for not obeying the order to bring them in. Petitioner prays that some course may be taken by which he may be settled in the quiet possession of the mines of which he is legally possessed. L. J., X. 335.

June 20. Answer and petition of the Earl of Mulgrave to the petition of Sir Paul Pindar. Very similar to preceding. L. J., X. 335.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Henry Leman with reference to the proceedings of Sir Paul Pindar and his servants.

June 20. Draft ordinance for Lady Newburgh to have returned to her the deeds deposited by her in the late Court of Wards in her suit against Sir Humphrey Foster. L. J., X. 336.

June 20. Draft ordinance confirming the articles for the surrender of Oxford. L. J., X. 338. In extenso.

June 20. Draft declaration against those who take up arms against the Parliament. (Three papers.) L. J., X. 338.

June 20. Petition of James Earl of Middlesex. Petitioner's late father, himself, and those under whom he claims, have been in possession of the manor of Forthampton, Gloucestershire, since 33 Hen. VIII. He complains that whilst under the restraint of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod one of his tenants on the manor has been put out of possession by John Parker, junior. Prays that his tenant, William Cooke, may be restored and petitioner righted as a peer of the realm. L. J., X. 338.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of William Cooke detailing the circumstances of his ejection.

June 20. Petition of Robert Sprague, defendant in a writ of error wherein William Glide is plaintiff. Prays for an early day for hearing.

June 20. Petition of Stephen Pacye. Captain Bushell being in London, by order of the House of Commons, concerning the surrender of the Isle of Lundy, and having his Excellency's pass and protection, was arrested at the suit of one Snellock, and forced to give bail for his appearance. Petitioner, with others, became bail for him, and he not appearing, Snellock caused petitioner to be arrested, notwithstanding his Excellency wrote a letter commanding him to forbear. Prays that Snellock and Gabriel Clinkard, the bailiff who arrested petitioner, may be sent for to answer for their contempt, that Snellock may be ordered to produce his Excellency's letter, and that petitioner may be discharged and have good costs and damages for his false imprisonment.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

2. Copy of letter from Lord Fairfax at Windsor to Snellock desiring him to forbear his proceedings against Captain Bushell's bail, &c. 4 May 1648.

June 21. Petition of George Ralegh. Petitioner has, in accordance with their Lordships' order, summoned his witnesses in his cause against Vivers and others, but some of them, with himself, being comprehended within the late ordinance of restraint from coming within twenty miles of London, he prays that some day may be appointed when he and his witnesses may attend without offending against the ordinance. L. J., X. 339.

June 21. Order for attendance of witnesses at the hearing of the cause, Ralegh v. Vivers et al.

[June 21.] Petition of Sir Arthur Loftus to the House of Commons. Petitioner has from the beginning faithfully served the Parliament, and for publicly manifesting his affection thereto suffered twenty-five weeks imprisonment in Dublin Castle. As soon as he could after the unfortunate cessation in Ireland he came over to England, for which all his estate (out of the hands of the rebels) was seized upon and disposed of by order of Lord Ormonde. There is due to him for the Parliament service in the province of Leinster 2,848*l.*, and besides this he has disbursed 2,331*l.*, as appears by the annexed accounts. He has never received any recompense, but has lost a good estate by the rebels, and by his attendance on the Parliament service, and by much sickness; he has been put to great charges, which have much increased his debts, for satisfaction whereof he and his friends stand engaged, and he is at the present time a prisoner. By the late revolt and indirect practices of Lord Inchiquin petitioner is deprived of all command, and by that means of all subsistence to support his great charge of a wife, six children, and family. Prays that 3,000*l.* may be assigned to him out of the Excise, or some other ready money payment, whereby he may be enabled to disengage himself and friends, and that towards the relief of himself and family some weekly allowance may be appointed whereby they may be preserved from starving. C. J., V. 609.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Accounts of sums due to Sir Arthur Loftus for money disbursed by him for the Parliament in the province of Leinster, and for his arrears in that province. (Two papers.)

3. Petition of Sir Arthur Loftus, Knight and Colonel; about 6,000*l.* are due to him for arrears of pay, but he is prisoner in the King's Bench for debt, and cannot repair to Dublin, where he has lately been appointed colonel of a regiment of foot; he

June 22. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Symon Pecke to the rectory of Boreford alias Husbands-Bosworth, Leicester. L. J., X. 343.

Annexed.

1. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that they have approved of Pecke for the cure. 21 June 1648.

June 23. Pass for the Countess of Worcester and her retinue to pass out of France to any part of this Kingdom. L. J., X. 345.

June 23. Petition of John Dillingham. Petitioner has for three years past, at great cost and pains, collected the martial actions of Christendom, which he has published weekly under the title of the "Moderate Intelligencer." The licenser has this week refused to license petitioner's copy, and has licensed another man's by the same title. Prays that his copy may be licensed for time coming, and none other by that name. L. J., X. 345.

Annexed:—

1. Remonstrance and petition of Gilbert Mabbott gentleman, licenser of the weekly sheets; in answer to the order of the House that he should show cause why he did not license the book entitled the Moderate Intelligencer last week, he says that about the 8th of May last John Dillingham, the pretended writer of the book, malignantly and to the dishonour of Parliament wrote this passage of French therein, "Dieu nous donne les Parlyaments briefs, Rois de vie longue," and did not send the sheet as usual for petitioner's perusal, fearing lest he should correct it; complaint was made by many members of the House of Commons (in whose esteem petitioner much suffered, his name being printed on the copy as if he had really licensed it), and petitioner thereupon wrote to Dillingham requiring him in his next book to vindicate the honour of Parliament, and crave pardon for that malignant expression, but he has ever since refused so to do; petitioner therefore prays that Dillingham may be left to be punished under the ordinance of the 28th of Sept. 1647, and enjoy no privilege from the House.
2. Petition of Robert White, printer and stationer; by the rights and customs of the Stationers' Company, of which petitioner is a member, and by the ordinances in confirmation of those rights, petitioner has always had all the interest, right, and title in the pamphlet called the Moderate Intelligencer, which under the ordinance of the 28th of Sept. 1647 was licensed, printed, and registered by the Company as the proper copy of petitioner; he prays the House to be tender of any violation of the custom and ancient privileges of the Company of Stationers, and to restore to him his title of Moderate Intelligencer, as he ought to have free liberty to write the sheet himself, or to employ whom he shall think fit to write it for him.
3. Printed copy of ordinance against unlicensed or scandalous pamphlets, and for the better regulating of printing. 28th Sept. 1647. L. J., IX. 457. In extenso.
4. Certificate of Henry Walley, clerk of the Company of Stationers, that the pamphlet called the Moderate Intelligencer has always been licensed, printed, and registered as the proper copy of Robert White.

June 23. Order for Mordant Snellock to cause Stephen Pacye to be immediately released, or to attend the House to show cause why he does not do so. L. J., X. 345.

June 23. Draft ordinance for confirming certain persons in places in Oxford University. L. J., X. 346.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments proposed by the House of Commons, and agreed to by the Lords. C. J., V. 612.

June 23. Answer of Robert Cudworth to the petition of Henry Vernon (vide 15 June). If there is any error or irregularity in the degree complained of by Vernon, he may in an ordinary course have his bill of review, and Cudworth therefore prays to be dismissed with the costs and charges he has sustained. L. J., X. 325.

June 23. Draft order of the House of Commons for a message to be sent to the Lords, desiring that a committee may be nominated to examine into the allegations of Richard Osborne in his letters to the Speaker of the House of Commons and Lord Wharton. C. J., V. 611. In extenso.

June 26. Petition of Colonel Thorpe. Petitioner served the Parliament faithfully until the reduction of the army, and has since had the command of a regiment in France. Prays that a pass may be granted to him in order that he may return to his command. L. J., X. 347.

June 26. Draft order for the release of Stephen Pacye, bail of Captain Bushell. L. J., X. 347.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Thomas Lord Fairfax, at Windsor, to the Earl of Manchester. He gave a safe conduct to Thomas Bushell to come to town about the surrender of Lundy Island, and thereupon agreed that he should have protection from arrest for two months, but whilst in London Bushell was arrested by Snellock, and Lord Fairfax desires that he may be set at liberty as the business for the surrender of Lundy is obstructed, and Bushell, if he had not presumed on his safe conduct, would not have exposed himself to arrest. 11 Dec. 1647.

June 26. Petition of Mordant Snellock. Captain Bushell has for seven years past been indebted to petitioner for commodities amounting to the value of 150*l.*, and petitioner hearing that he was in town and able to make payment arrested him for the debt, whereupon Bushell said he was a Parliament man, and produced a piece of paper, which appeared to be nothing more than a soldier's passport. Petitioner prays for leave to proceed at law against Bushell and his bail for the recovery of his just debt.

June 26. Draft ordinance appointing a Committee of both Houses to hear and determine all complaints touching the breach of the Articles of Oxford, and other capitulations, made by the General and confirmed by Parliament. L. J., X. 347.

June 26. Draft order for appointment of a Committee to consider of a Treaty for Peace. L. J., X. 347. On the same paper are notes of proceedings on the subject upon several subsequent days.

June 26. Petition of John Gough, defendant in a writ of error, wherein John Morgan is plaintiff. Prays for an early day for hearing. L. J., X. 347.

June 26. Report from the Committee for the Militia of Westminster upon the committal of two of the Marquess of Winchester's servants by the Committee. Francis Gainsford when brought before the Committee said that he had lived for eight or ten years with Lady Thymbleby, confessed that he was a Roman Catholic, denied to take both the oath of allegiance and supremacy, said that he had lived at Bristol and Newark when they were the King's garrisons, and had no licence to remain in town. George Gifford, who was brought before the Committee at the same time, confessed that he was a Roman Catholic, and that he lived in the house with the Marchioness of Winchester, that he had been at Bazing, Oxford, and other places in the King's quarters; he denied to take the oath of supremacy and had no licence to remain in town. For these causes the Committee, by virtue of the ordinance of the 28th of May last, committed them to prison. This report was made in pursuance of an order of the 15th instant. L. J., X. 325.

June 27. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled. Pray for a personal treaty with the King, the settlement of religion, &c. L. J., X. 349. In extenso.

Petition of the commanders, masters, and mariners of the shipping belonging to the River of Thames whose names are subscribed; praying that there may be a speedy treaty with His Majesty for the settling the peace of the Kingdom, and that meantime His Majesty may be entreated to remove to one of his houses which may be most convenient, where he may be with honour, freedom, and safety. L. J., X. 352. In extenso, with the exception of the signatures.
- June 29. Petition of the Provincial Assembly of London; praying that the larger and lesser catechisms may be enjoined, the confession of faith sanctioned, the directory for church government established, and the ordinances for the better sanctifying of the Lord's Day and observation of the public fasts, as also for the [unclear] of [unclear] more effectually put in execution. L. J., X. 352. In extenso.
- June 29. Draft ordinance that the purchasers of bishops' lands to whom money is owing, under the ordinance of the 13th of May 1647 for advance of 200,000*l.* for the State, may set off the money so owing to them against money due from them on their purchases. C. J., V. 616. This ordinance was much altered in the House of Commons before it was sent up to the Lords on the 24th of July. L. J., X. 393.
- June 29. Petition of Thomas Goter, defendant in a [unclear] against John Dunsen; prays that a day may be appointed for hearing before the circuit of the judges.
- June 29. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that George Dorwood has been approved for the cure of [unclear] [unclear], Gloucestershire.

June 30. Petition of Robert Cudworth; praying that the cause between him and Henry Vernon may be heard. L. J., X. 353.

June 30. Report from the Committee appointed to consider of what should be proposed to the King. L. J., X. 353.

June 30. Draft ordinance appointing John Diggle rector of Chiddingfold, Surrey, in the room of Dr. Edward Layfield, removed as unfit for any ecclesiastical preferment. L. J., X. 354. In extenso.

[June.] Petition of Joshua Gosselin, one of the jurats and a public deputy of the Island of Guernsey; petitioner is employed to represent to Parliament what is necessary for the Island, and taking notice of an ordinance about to pass, formerly petitioned for by only a few of the inhabitants of the Island without the concurrence of the generality, he feels bound to present a remonstrance against it, and prays in the name of the inhabitants of the Island that his remonstrance may be considered before the passing of the ordinance. See L. J., X. 335.

Annexed:—

1. The humble remonstrance of Joshua Gosselin against the ordinance about to pass. As to disabling delinquents from holding offices in the Island, it is conceived that there is no one there who has borne arms against the Parliament, the pretence for this proposal being an insurrection some three or four years ago in the Island, not directly against the Parliament but for some grievances amongst the islanders themselves, and the effect of questioning persons for this now may be very dangerous especially as the enemy have a castle within musket shot of the Island; as for repairing the houses battered by the castle, it is provided for by order of Parliament out of the sequestered estate of Sir Peter Osborne, and it is more reasonable that his estate that did the wrong should make reparation rather than the revenue of the Governor who protected the houses, which has many present burthens, and besides whilst the castle is still in the enemies' hands the houses may be battered down again; the Commissioners proposed to be sent over are not empowered to decide matters, and there are many private differences which will necessitate the parties coming over to get them determined, and lastly Parliament in all former orders and commissions has ordered that the islanders should be preserved in their laws and customs, but there is no such clause in the present ordinance; it is therefore prayed on the part of the inhabitants that the ordinance may not pass, or that it may be suspended until the castle is reduced, and fuller information obtained as to the state of the case in regard to the whole Island.

July 1. Draft ordinance for Sussex to raise 4,547*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*, two troops of horses, and a company of dragoons to suppress the insurrections there. This ordinance was brought from the Commons this day, but was negatived by the Lords. L. J., X. 355, 402.

July 1. Draft orders for a committee to go to the army before Colchester to see that it be supplied out of the assessments of the county of Essex. L. J., X. 356. In extenso.

July 1. Draft order for advance of 1,000*l.* to the city of Bristol for repair of the fort and castle, &c. L. J., X. 356. In extenso.

July 3. Order for the further hearing of the cause between Henry Rooper and Ralph Wiseman. L. J., X. 357.

July 3. Certificate of ministers that Simon Smeath is a godly and orthodox divine, and of pious life and conversation. L. J., X. 358.

July 3. Papers from the Committee at Derby House respecting an intercepted letter, partly in cipher, acquainting Lord Andover that the Prince is going to Calais, &c. L. J., X. 358. In extenso.

1. Report of Lord Andover's examination.
2. Copy of the letter deciphered.
3. Copy of the letter partly in cipher.

The letter which is signed "220" was probably from Wm. Murray. See the cipher amongst the Naschy papers.

July 3. Draft ordinance to settle the militia of Lincolnshire. L. J., X. 359. In extenso.

July 3. Draft order for paying the troops under Captain Greenwood, and others, out of the sequestrations in the county of Derby. L. J., X. 359. In extenso.

July 3. Draft order for commissions to be granted to Captain Robert Greenwood and others for raising forces in Derbyshire. L. J., X. 359. In extenso.

July 3. Ordinance to assign the fine of 1,000*l.* set upon Sir John Harrison for his delinquency to Colonel Ralph Weldon, Governor of the Forts and Island of Plymouth, to enable him to repair to his charge, &c. L. J., X. 359. In extenso.

July 3. Draft of preceding.

July 3. Draft order appointing Deputy Lieutenants for the Isle of Ely. L. J., X. 360. In extenso.

July 4. Draft order for raising a troop of three score horse in the Isle of Ely. L. J., X. 360. In extenso.

July 3. Petition of Henry Daniell; petitioner having been arrested by Anthony Whitchurch, the House was pleased to order his release on the 18th of Nov. 1647, but Whitchurch, in contempt of their Lordships' order, proceeded against him at law, and having very indirectly obtained a judgment, violently seized petitioner by the aid of soldiers of the garrison of Wallingford, and has ever since detained him a prisoner; petitioner prays that Whitchurch may be sent for to answer for his contempt. See L. J., IX. 531.

July 4. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., X. 360):—

Edward Carne.*	John Hurleston and John
Francis Anderson.	Hurleston his son.
William Morgan.*	Charles Hughes and others.*
Robert Wilde.*	Henry Rhoads and others.*
Hugh Hodges.	John Spencer.*
George Watts.	Amos Paulett, son of Lord
John Tint.	Paulett.*

July 4. Petition of Abraham Dowcett; he complains that he is yet a prisoner in Peterhouse at a very great charge which he is not able to support, and prays for enlargement upon bail. L. J., X. 361.

July 4. Order for the Commissioners at Goldsmiths' Hall to give an account of what ordinances for pardoning delinquents are passed, and why the rest are unpassed. L. J., X. 361. In extenso.

July 4. Draft of preceding.

July 4. Draft order for allowing an additional 100*l.* per week for sick and maimed soldiers. L. J., X. 361. In extenso.

July 4. Draft order for adding 50*l.* per annum to the salaries of each of the treasurers for sick and maimed soldiers. L. J., X. 362. In extenso.

July 4. Petition of Edward Walford, messenger to the House of Commons; he complains that on Thursday last he was violently hurt and beaten upon the head by Mr. Jenyns, a servant of their Lordships; he prays the House to hear his case as an old servant and to do therein as they shall think fit.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of Thomas Jenyns to preceding; he went to Walford's house with their Lordships' order concerning Major Rolph, and after some conversation Walford declared that the order gave no power to search his house, spoke slightly of it, giving Jenyns the lie with other uncivil language, whereupon Jenyns acknowledges that he took the opportunity only to touch his pate with his cane, for which he humbly craves pardon.

July 5. Order for the hearing of the cause of Henry Rooper against Ralph Wiseman. L. J., X. 362.

July 5. Message to the Commons that the Lords think fit that London shall be the place where the personal treaty shall be had with the King, &c. L. J., X. 362.

July 5. Application from Lady Frances Stourton for a pass for her Lord, herself, her children, and servants, with their coach, horses, and other necessities, to go to Stourton in Wiltshire, there to remain free from trouble and intrusion, they demeaning themselves quietly to the Parliament. L. J., X. 363.

July 5. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Robert Pepys has been approved for the cure of Arkesden, Essex. L. J., X. 363.

July 5. The humble declaration, tender, and petition of divers cordial and well-affected mariners, commanders of ships, and members of the Trinity House, praying that the orders for providing and manning a fleet for the reduction of the revolted mariners, whom the petitioners entirely disavow, may be diligently prosecuted. L. J., X. 363. In extenso.

July 5. Copy of report from the Committee at Derby

House, that they are informed that many horses have lately been raised in and about London, and that great numbers of men left London last night, and are now at and about Kingston, Reigate, Betsworth [Betchworth] Castle, and Croydon; it is said that many persons of quality are engaged, and that they intend in a short time to fall upon the Parliament and City; the Committee have taken care to prevent danger, having ordered all horses to be stopped and extraordinary guards to be ready; they have also written to the Lord General to send a regiment of foot to London, and to Sir Michael Livesey and his forces to march forthwith to Kingston to suppress those there; the Committee have also spoken to some officers about the town to get what men they can mounted forthwith in case of danger; the Committee request the Houses to take further order in the matter, and to desire their members to say what horses and arms they will raise and pay for the next ten days, and that a Committee may be appointed to go into the City to represent the state of affairs to the Common Council.

July 6. Resolution that the militias of Westminster, Southwark, and the Hamlets of the Tower be joined to the militia of the City of London. L. J., X. 366. In extenso.

July 6. Draft of preceding.

July 6. Draft order for release of Colonel Zacharie. L. J., X. 366. In extenso.

July 6. Draft order giving the Committee at Derby House power to grant commissions for raising forces in Northamptonshire. L. J., X. 366. In extenso.

July 6. Order for the exchange of Lord Inchiquin's son for Sir William Fenton and others. L. J., X. 366. In extenso.

July 6. Draft of preceding.

July 8. Report upon the proceedings against Major Rolph. L. J., X. 369. In extenso.

July 8. Draft order for payment of 500*l.* to Captain Henry Jervoise. L. J., X. 370. In extenso.

July 8. Draft order for a thanksgiving for the victory in the North. L. J., X. 370. In extenso.

July 8. Draft order for payment of interest on 5,000*l.* ordered for Major-General Richard Browne. L. J., X. 370. In extenso.

July 8. Draft order for payment of interest on a further sum of 4,016*l.* 0*s.* 0*d.* ordered for Major-General Richard Browne. L. J., X. 370. In extenso.

July 8. Draft order for payment of 4,324*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* to Colonel Christopher Copley. L. J., X. 371. In extenso.

July 8. Draft ordinance to discharge Sir John Maynard from all penalties for not perfecting a contract for the purchase of the manor of Bugden [Buckden], Hunts. L. J., X. 371. In extenso.

July 8. Draft ordinance to add John Bradshaw and others to the Committee for Sequestrations in the county of Westmoreland, &c. L. J., X. 371. In extenso.

July 8. Petition of Thomas Raynes, of Warborough, in the county of Kent [?]. Petitioner became administrator of Wm. Allen, but acting in ignorance of an ordinance of Parliament was ordered to be apprehended for contempt, and now remains in the messenger's hands, to his exceeding charge and loss of time. The whole matter in difference amounts not to 10*l.*, and petitioner therefore prays for immediate discharge upon bail, or for an early day for a full hearing of the matter.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Charge made by Richard Rawlins against Thomas Raynes and his son of resisting the order of the House for the apprehension of Raynes. See L. J., X. 248.

3. Petition of John Silver. The petitioner's complaint against Thomas Raynes was, by order of 8th July, fixed for hearing on the 8th of August, but could not then be heard as the House was upon the more weighty affairs of the Kingdom, of which Raynes taking advantage has withdrawn from further attendance. Petitioner prays that Raynes may be again ordered to attend on a short and certain day to answer his complaint. See L. J., X. 370.

July 10. Petition of George Warner. He applied about two years ago to the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall to be admitted to composition, but finds his way obstructed by a pretended sale of his mansion house and lands at Wolston, in the county of Warwick, to Sir Peter Wentworth, though the wood and building alone are worth a great deal more than the sum pretended to have been paid for the whole estate. His estate was bought and sold over his head without his having any know-judge thereof, though he is neither a papist nor excepted person, and no delinquency is laid against him, but that he left his own house and resided for some time in the King's garrison at Liefield. Though eighty years of age he has been violently turned out of his house and lands by a number of soldiers, and has no other house for the present to put his head in, and neither utensils or household stuff, for the soldiers have broken and destroyed them all. He prays for review of his case, and that until it can be heard he may be restored to possession of his house and estate. L. J., X. 372.

July 10. Petition of Bridget Bray, wife of Thomas Bray, one of the Prince's bedchamber; her husband had a pension of 200*l.* a year payable out of the Court of Wards, and on their parting, some fifteen years ago, he agreed to give her 100*l.* a year out of the pension, of which there is now about 90*l.* unpaid; the 100*l.* a year is her only means of support, she therefore prays the House to commiserate her deplorable condition and allow her some part of her arrears.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

2. Letter from the Lord General (Thomas Lord Fairfax), at Windsor, to the Earl of Manchester, recommending Mrs. Bray's petition to the favourable consideration of Parliament. 20 May. L. J., X. 372.

July 10. Order for some allowance to be given to Mrs. Bray. L. J., X. 372. In extenso.

July 10. Draft ordinance that no member of either House shall hold any place of profit not enjoyed by him before these wars, lest, fearing that by a settlement of a lasting peace he might lose his place, he may be swayed to fit his vote to his private interest rather than the public. This ordinance was twice read and committed this day, and on the following day when the House went into Committee it was declared "That the Lord that brought in this ordinance hath given no offence to the House in bringing of it in," but it does not appear to have been further proceeded with. L. J., X. 372, 373.

July 10. Draft order for raising and maintaining a troop of horse in Surrey. L. J., X. 373. In extenso.

July 10. Draft of similar order for Hants. L. J., X. 373. In extenso.

July 10. Draft of similar order for the county of Carnarvon, and for measures to be taken for reducing the Isle of Anglesey. L. J., X. 373. In extenso.

July 10. Draft order appointing additional Commissioners for the county of Carnarvon. L. J., X. 373. In extenso.

July 10. Draft ordinance for raising horse, &c., in the county of Essex, for suppressing the tumults there. L. J., X. 373. In extenso.

July 10. Draft ordinance for settling the Militia in Exeter. L. J., X. 374. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.

July 10. Pass for Sir Theodore Mayerne and his family to go beyond the seas. L. J., X. 374. In extenso.

July 11. Petition of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies; the trade to the East Indies will certainly be lost to this nation if not encouraged by Parliament; the petitioners pray that the ordinance for raising a joint stock for better prosecuting the trade, and for preventing the spoil of it by interlopers, which has been long before Parliament, may be passed with all convenient speed. L. J., X. 374.

July 11. Copy of preceding.

July 11. Order appointing a Committee to consider the Company's petition. L. J., X. 374.

July 11. Draft ordinance for taking, stating, and determining the accounts of all such officers and soldiers or widows of officers that have served the Parliament in the late wars, and have not been under the entertainment and pay of the particular counties or associations of this Kingdom, nor of the present army under the command of Thomas Lord Fairfax. L. J., X. 375.

July 11. Petition of Captain Thomas Plunkett in the behalf of his kinsman Captain James Plunkett; they have both served Parliament since the beginning of these distractions, and petitioner has advanced 11,000*l.* and large arrears are due both to himself and his kinsman, and the latter having long attended to get some part of his arrears for his subsistence and not being able to obtain the same was driven to despair and was ready to perish or want, and being a soldier, and nearly to a old starving, which contrary to nature, he did most unfortunately meet with one upon the highway, and took from him about 15*l.* in money merely to keep himself alive, using no violence nor doing any hurt to the man, for which he is found guilty and is like to suffer death; petitioner prays the House to consider the services of himself and his kinsman and their affection to Parliament, and to stay the execution of the judgment of death, as they are both ready to give satisfaction. L. J., X. 375.

July 11. Draft ordinance for the continuance of the excise. L. J., X. 375. In extenso.

July 11. Draft ordinance for raising 1,500*l.* per memem for maintenance of horse and foot in Lincolnshire. L. J., X. 376. In extenso.

July 11. Draft ordinance for allowing to the Commissioners of Excise such monies upon their accounts as have been taken away by force from them. The ordinance details the cases in which money belonging to the Commissioners has been seized by the Scots, by governors of garrisons and other officers, by the enemy, and by unknown persons. Read twice and committed this day in the House of Commons, but not passed by the Lords till the following October. C. J., V. 631; L. J., X. 525.

July 11. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Thomas Kidnor has been approved for the cure of Hitchin, Herts.

July 12. Petition of Ellinor Durson, the wife of John Durson, commander of the ship Loyalty, of London; about sixteen months since petitioner's husband on his way home from the East Indies was forced to put into the Isle of Wight, his ship having sprung a leak, and whilst he was there one Goater "agreed for some drugs," but not coming for them and the leak being mended and the wind serving, her husband, who was lying there at a charge of 20*l.* a day, was forced to come away, since which time Goater, who was not one penny damaged, has obtained a verdict by sinister means for far more than the goods in question were sold for; petitioner's husband brought a writ of error to the House, but it is now fifteen weeks since he left home on another voyage; she prays that the proceedings may be stayed until his return, which she hopes will be within nine months. See L. J., X. 376.

July 12. Pass for Lady Stanhope and her company to go to Bagshot and back. L. J., X. 377.

July 12. Letter from Lord Howard of Charlton, at Dover Castle to the Speaker of the House of Peers; driven on shore by tempest in the Isle of Thanet he has been arrested; he acknowledges that he was on his way to join his master the Prince, he appeals to be heard before the Lords in Parliament. This letter, which is dated the 10th, was read and entered in extenso on the 12th. L. J., X. 379.

July 12. Postscript from Lord Howard of Charlton, desiring that he may come to town. L. J., X. 379. In extenso.

July 12. Draft orders concerning the reducing of the revolted ships, &c. L. J., X. 379. In extenso.

July 12. Petition of divers well-affected magistrates, ministers, citizens, and other inhabitants in the City of London, and parts adjacent; petitioners, who are ready to adventure their lives and estates with the Parliament, pray the Parliament to adhere to the protestation, vows, and covenant, and to take such a course as will secure that neither His Majesty nor any other may have occasion or opportunity of renewing the old or raising a new war. L. J., X. 380. In extenso.

July 12. Draft of the Lords' answer, thanking the petitioners and assuring them of the determination of Parliament to adhere to their protestation, vows, and covenant in maintenance of the cause in which they are engaged. L. J., X. 377. In extenso.

July 12. Copy of preceding.

July 12. Draft order appointing a day of public thanksgiving for the late victories. L. J., X. 381. In extenso.

July 13. Draft order appointing 600*l.* for victualling and repairing the castle and fort of Chester. L. J., X. 381. In extenso.

July 13. Petition of Theophilus Earl of Lincoln for redress against Isabella Lady Dowager De la Warr, who owes him 2,000*l.*, and who, presuming on her privilege as a peeress, wholly neglects payment both of principal and interest. L. J., X. 381. In extenso.

July 14. Petition of Mary Kirke, wife of George Kirke. In April 1647 petitioner's husband, on going out of town, deposited 100*l.* in the hands of Mr. Fitchett, yeoman of the woodyard, till he should call it back again. Her husband has written to Fitchett several times to let petitioner have the money for her maintenance, but he still detains it. She prays that as Fitchett has a protection from their Lordships they would either order him to pay her the money or else leave him to the justice of the law. L. J., X. 382.

July 14. Order for Fitchett to answer the preceding petition.

July 14. Petition of Robert Cudworth. He has answered the petition of Henry Vernon, and prays that a day may be appointed for hearing the cause. L. J., X. 382.

July 14. Petition of inhabitants of Marsland (?), in the county of Norfolk, and the parts adjacent thereto. It is provided by statute made 13 Eliz. that the Commissioners of Sewers should not be compelled to make any return of their commissions, or of any of the ordinances, laws, or doings by authority of those commissions, nor should have any fine set upon them, or be in any way molested for that cause; but of late this has been explained to relate only to proceedings in Chancery, and the petitioners have been molested by writs of certiorari from the King's Bench, and by great fines set upon them, and have been enforced to make return of their laws for levying money for repair of the breaches made by the extraordinary floods which happened last winter twelvemonths. The Commissioners, who have expended great sums of money, and raised part thereof, will be unable to raise the remainder, and will be in danger of a multiplicity of actions, should any defect be found in their laws, which will prevent all men in future from acting on commissions of sewers, and will be the ruin of many thousands of families, and the loss of many townships. Petitioners pray the House to take steps for their protection. L. J., X. 382.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of an ordinance to extend the ordinance of 13 Eliz. mentioned in preceding to proceedings in the King's Bench as well as in Chancery.

July 14. Draft declaration to induce the revolted mariners to come in to the Parliament. L. J., X. 382. In extenso.

July 15. Draft order for Greville Verney, Sheriff of Warwickshire, to execute eight prisoners condemned at the last assizes for that county. C. J., V. 636. In extenso.

[July 15.] Copy of petition of John Coventrie and Frances Neville to the Committee for Sequestrations. Petitioners are trustees of certain estate of the late Sir Wm. Saville (who died in Jan. 1643-4) for the payment of his debts and the raising of portions for his younger children, but his estate is under sequestration, which prevents their having any profit from the estates, while they, as sureties, are likely to be utterly undone by the prosecutions of the creditors. They pray that the sequestration may be taken off as Sir William Saville was only tenant for life. See C. J., V. 637.

July 18. Petition of Stephen Payce [Payce]. He is prisoner as bail for Captain Bushell, late Governor of Lundy Island, who had a protection from the Lord General to come to London to perfect the agreement for the surrender of the Island: on the 26th of June last the House was pleased to order that petitioner should be released, and the bail bond delivered up. The order was duly served on Snellock, the creditor, King, the bailiff, and Sturmeay, the attorney, but they all refuse obedience. Petitioner prays that they may be apprehended for their contempt, and kept in custody till they give obedience to the order of the House.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 26 June referred to in preceding.

2. Affidavit of Thomas Robson that he served the preceding order on Snellock and Sturmeay, and that the former said he would lie in prison all the days of his life before he would obey it. L. J., X. 383.

July 18. Affidavit of Samuel Watkins, that Clement Paman was duly presented to the cure of Thatcham, Berks, but, having gone into Suffolk to get his books, was detained there by sickness; that during his absence John Vicars, a man who spends great part of his time in drinking in alehouses and taking tobacco, and who has thereby procured the friendship of many of the meaner sort, has taken violent possession of the pulpit and vicarage of Thatcham, pretending that the parishioners of every parish have power to choose their own pastor, while he totally neglects his own parish of Ruscomb. L. J., X. 383.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Humf. Dolman and Roger Knight at Thatcham to Sir Francis Pile and Sir John Trevor; Vicars refuses to give up possession of the church or vicarage till it has been adjudged whether he or Paman has the best right to it. 10 July.

July 18. Petition of the Waterman belonging to the River of Thames. They are in family above twenty thousand persons, and all are undone and like to perish by reason of His Majesty's absence, kept away notwithstanding his many former gracious offers. They pray that he may be invited to London with honour, freedom, and safety. L. J., X. 385. In extenso, with the exception of the signatures. (Parchment Collection.)

July 18. Draft answer to preceding that the Lords have not been wanting in their endeavours to bring His Majesty to a treaty in London. L. J., X. 384. In extenso.

July 18. Petition of divers well-affected inhabitants of the City of Westminster, Hamlets of the Tower, and Borough of Southwark, and parishes adjacent, within the weekly bills of mortality, for a personal treaty with the King, and for their militia to be united to the City militia. L. J., X. 385. In extenso. (Parchment Collection.)

July 18. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the city of London in Common Council assembled, praying that the forces within the late lines of communication may be united in one militia. L. J., X. 385. In extenso.

July 18. Report from the Committee at Derby House, that if the colliers will furnish the Lord Admiral with two men from each ship the embargo put upon their ships may be taken off. L. J., X. 385.

July 18. Draft order for providing 500*l.* for victualling some garrisons of consequence. L. J., X. 385. In extenso.

July 19. Letter from Colonel Michael Jones at Dublin to Sir Arthur Loftus, in London. I wish you were with me for honest men are very scarce. Ormonde's coming, though it has not changed the minds of men, has yet pulled the vizard off their faces; the business of Duncannon is at a stand, it is said that Preston has got Wexford and O. Roe Duncannon; now that my men are mustered and clothed, I intend to be out next week to enlarge our quarters and destroy those of the enemy; not a week has passed since we have had grass, but I have sent out two parties which have taken from the enemy above five thousand cows. I suffer no corn, bread, iron, nor salt to go out of this place, but to those in the pale and only to the English. I have furnished a great many, and, God willing, will not leave what I can reach unburned. Ormonde is coming, therefore supplies should be hastened hither. I care not what commander-in-chief comes over so that I may be discharged, no slave is in that condition that I am in; should there be anything here worthy of you I will not forget you. I have and shall secure the malignants.

July 19. Letter from Captain Robert Batten, at Holy Island, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers; he has been in a besieged condition nearly six weeks; the enemy have made a garrison of Haggerston House, which is within two miles of the Island, and hinder all things coming to the relief of the poor inhabitants and of the garrison, who for fear of attack are put to extraordinary duty, and are in want of provisions and money; this day the Scots came into Berwick while the Cavaliers marched out, and Colonel Brandling delivered up his command to the Scots' governor; Berwick has lain open for six weeks past and many vessels have gone in thither, and three are now lying at anchor before the bar; he beseeches that a ship or two may be sent to his assistance that he may be able to give the better account of that his frontier garrison, which is of great concernment to that part of the country. See L. J., X. 406.

July 20. Draft pass for Colonel Thorpe to go into France with four horses custom free. L. J., X. 383. In extenso.

July 20. Draft order for the persons concerned in the late design upon Chester to be tried by martial law. L. J., X. 388. In extenso.

July 20. Report from the Committee at Derby House respecting a letter from Colonel Mytton at Denbigh of the 5th instant, and other letters and papers.

July [20]. Copy of a letter giving a short account of the retreat of the English forces under Colonel Harrison to Appleby before the advance of the Scotch under the Duke of Hamilton. C. J., V. 646. See Rushworth, IV. ii. 1200.

July 21. Application for a pass for John Stone and his brother to travel. L. J., X. 389.

July 22. Pass for Mr. Archibald Cambell to go into Scotland. L. J., X. 389. In extenso.

July 22. Order signed by the Earl of Manchester to all postmasters, &c. to furnish Cambell with horses and guides.

July 25. Petition of William Barker. By order of the 26th of April 1646 petitioner, as messenger to the Magazine, was protected from arrests; but Ralph Ginder has caused him to be arrested for a debt of twenty-eight shillings, treating their Lordships' order with scorn. Petitioner prays that the judge of the Sheriff's Court may be ordered to dismiss the action. L. J., X. 395.

July 25. Draft ordinance for raising a troop of horse in Huntingdonshire. L. J., X. 396. In extenso.

July 25. Message from the Commons with an order for the recall of the Commissioners that are in Scotland. L. J., X. 396.

July 25. Petition of Major David Melvin. Petitioner being quartered at Tickhill by General Leslie's order, George Hackell and other inhabitants there broke into his chamber with pitchforks and halberds, struck him on the head, and lamed both his arms when he stood upon his defence, and having inhumanly left him in his blood, another company came in, robbed him of his clothes, and forced him in that sad condition to walk on foot to Pontefract, which well nigh put a period to his days. Petitioner represented the matter to the Parliament Commissioners with the Scots' army at Newark, and their honours having received ample testimony, promised to see him repaired his losses amounting to 110*l.* 15*s.*, but in respect of the more weighty affairs of the State, petitioner was loth to be troublesome. Prays that he may receive satisfaction for his losses.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.
2. Another similar petition of same. (Undated.)
3. A particular of Major David Melvin's losses, occasioned by the inhabitants of Thickhill, for horses, saddles, pistols, &c.

July 27. Message from the Commons, with votes, respecting the revolted ships, &c. L. J., X. 397. (Two papers.)

July 27. Petition of Godfrey Goodman, once Bishop of Gloucester. Petitioner has suffered as much proportionably as anyone in the kingdom, and though his pockets have been twice searched, and all his letters perused to find an accusation against him, yet has he ever been found innocent; having lost all, wanting means to subsist, and holding only one parsonage in commendam, West Hildesly [Hilsley], Berks, one Mr. Newbery has intruded into it; petitioner never having been called to answer in his defence, prays the he may be left in possession, and Mr. Newbery be judged an intruder, until some sufficient legal course appear to the contrary. L. J., X. 397.

July 27. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Edward Hackett has been approved for the cure of Redmarley Debetat [D'Abitot], Worcestershire. L. J., X. 397.

July 27. Certificate that the vicarage of Harrowden alias Harweden, Northamptonshire, is now void. L. J., X. 397.

July 27. Certificate of ministers that Thomas Henchman is of an orthodox judgment, godly, sober, and exemplary life. L. J., X. 397.

July 27. Draft order authorising the Lord Admiral to grant indemnity to such of the revolted mariners as shall come in within twenty days. L. J., X. 397. In extenso.

July 27. Draft order for payment of 40*l.* arrears of an annuity payable out of the Hanaper in Chancery, to John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments. L. J., X. 398. In extenso.

July 27. Draft ordinance for raising 16,000*l.* in Suffolk for payment of the forces there. L. J., X. 398. In extenso.

July 27. Draft ordinance to charge 20,000*l.* raised for the Northern forces upon the receipts of the Grand Excise. L. J., X. 399. In extenso.

July 27. Petition of Isabella [Lady De] La-Warre, Dowager, by way of protestation and not by way of answer to the Earl of Lincoln's petition complaining that she owes him 2,000*l.* She says that the time for payment has not yet come, but she has nevertheless offered her lands for sale in order to pay her debt, and desires that he may still be allowed privilege as a peeress. L. J., X. 400. In extenso.

July 28. Petition of William Lord Petre; he conceives that by his privilege as a peer he ought not to be charged with holding these arms in the country, but though all the arms in his house have been taken away, yet he hears from his servant in Essex that endeavour is being made to put upon him a charge of three horses completely armed, though he holds nothing but a house and park, and some little demesnes about it, the rest of his estate being let to tenants who all find arms, and two parts of it kept under sequestration: he prays that, as he is not permitted to keep arms, he may not against privilege be charged with horse or arms. L. J., X. 400.

July 28. Draft ordinance to discharge the treasurers of Lincolnshire of 1,100*l.* taken by force from their Treasury. L. J., X. 401. In extenso.

July 28. Draft order for the Lord Admiral to fight with the revolted ships. L. J., X. 401. In extenso.

July 29. Draft order for Henry Morris to have the place in the Wine License Office vacant by the death of Mr. Swetenham. L. J., X. 401.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Henry Morris; the House after making an order to give petitioner a place in the Wine License Office subsequently put the House of Commons in mind of the same by message, but whilst petitioner is waiting for the concurrence of the House of Commons he finds that a Mr. Bodurda is executing the office pro tempore, and expects the salary; as petitioner's claim is far better than Mr. Bodurda's, he prays that for the present he may be joined with Mr. Bodurda in the execution of the office and receipt of the profits till the pleasure of the House be further known. (Undated.)

2. Petition of same; petitioner having done their Lordships good service as a clerk, they were pleased to recommend him to the Committee of the Revenue, and that Committee afterwards ordered that he should have the next place which fell vacant, but no vacancy has occurred until lately by the death of Mr. Legg, late Clerk of the Endorsements in the Alienation Office, but this place petitioner finds has been given by ordinance to Colonel Thompson, which petitioner believes would not have been done if the House had known the relation in which the Committee for the Revenue stood to that office; the place of Deputy Clerk of the Hanaper is also void, and petitioner prays the House to revoke the ordinance, giving the place of Clerk of the Endorsements in the Alienation Office to Colonel Thompson, whose merit seems far too great for so mean an employment, and to bestow it upon petitioner, or to pass an ordinance to give him the other vacant place. (Undated.)

3. Draft ordinance to confer the place of Clerk of the Endorsements in the Alienation office upon Morris.

4. Draft ordinance to confer upon him the place of Deputy Clerk of the Hanaper.

5. Draft ordinance to confer upon him the office of Clerk of the Treasury in the Court of Common Pleas.

July 29. Petition of Edward Walford to the House of Commons; since the beginning of the Parliament he has served the House of Commons, has many times risked his life in riding night and day, and run many other hazards and undergone many scorns and reproaches, and of late some blows, and is now threatened by many with hanging, and is as a mark pointed out for the rage of many that scorn him for his zeal to the House; he has spent money out of his own pocket, and has received little except 150*l.* from the House, which he accepts with thankfulness; he has ever sought the interest of the House rather than his own preferment, but now he is forced to sell his goods to buy bread, and his whole family is visited with pain and misery. On the 8th of Sept. last the House having given away a vacant place of King's waiter at the Custom House for which petitioner had applied was pleased to order the Speaker to put them in mind of him should another place fall vacant; a post is now vacant at the Wine License Office by the death of Mr. Swetenham, which petitioner prays the House to bestow upon him.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 8 Sept. 1647 referred to in preceding.

July 29. Petition of Ralph Hall to the House of Commons; petitioner has been a great sufferer by his good affection to Parliament while the King's army lay in Yorkshire, and also by the taking away of the Court of Wards by which he lost 400*l.* a year; the House by way of reparation ordered him a deputy register's place in Chancery, which has taken no effect; he prays to be employed as Commissioner and Receiver in the Wine Office in the place of Lawrence Swetenham, deceased.

Annexed:—

1. Petitioner's grounds for recompense.

[July 29.] Petition of Clement Baker to the House of Commons; the place of one of the agents and receivers of the wine licenses is vacant by the death of Lawrence Swetenham, petitioner having for four years served the Committee of the Revenue is the better able to execute the place, which he prays may be conferred on him, the rather as he has no certain salary allowed him for his continual pains in sorting, cataloguing, and looking to the papers of public concernment, of which he has the custody by order of the House.

[July 29.] Petition of Lucie, the wife of Thomas Herbert, Esq., to the House of Commons; petitioner's husband who has always been a faithful servant to Parliament has been for almost two years past and is now in strict personal attendance upon His Majesty, to his great expense and hitherto without benefit, whilst his estate which is mostly in the North, has during these distracted times been in the enemies' hand, and is at present invalid to the great suffering of petitioner and her children; she prays the House to take notice of her husband's services and sufferings, and to confer upon him the place of receiver of the Wine License Office now vacant by the death of Mr. Swetenham.

[July 29.] Petition of Captain Edward Dendy to the House of Commons; he has since the war began served Parliament with the hazard of his life, and has thereby incurred the displeasure of all his relations; above 1,200*l.* are due to him for arrears, and he has little hope of future subsistence unless supported by the favour of the House; he prays the House to confer upon him, in lieu of his arrears, the place of Commissioner and Receiver of the Fines and Rents for wine licenses vacant by the death of Lawrence Swetenham.

[July 29.] Another petition of same.

July 29. Petition of John Poyntz alias Morris, Mary his wife, Leonard Darby, John Harris, and Isabella Smith; by their Lordships' order the petitioners have been adjudged to four several prisons for a supposed forgery of certain deeds and of a copy of an Act of Parliament; they have been above a year in prison, and are like to starve if not speedily enlarged; they pray the House to consider that they are not in prison for debt, but only by their Lordships' command; that Sir Adam Littleton and his wife, in whose name Sir Adam laid claim to the estate in dispute, are both dead without having proved petitioners' guilt by witnesses, they therefore pray the House to consider their miserable condition and to grant them their liberty, restoring to them the copy of the Act and the writings taken from them by violence, returning the deed found in the Tower and the records found in the Court of Wards to their respective treasuries, and leaving petitioners to a fair trial at common law, the birthright of the subject. The following request, numerous signed, is written after the signatures of the petitioners:—It is also desired by the tenants and divers others that have hazarded lives and estates for the good of their country and commonwealth that the petitioners may have their humble request granted. L. J., X. 401.

Annexed:—

1. Another similar petition. (Undated.)

July 29. Order referring the petition of Poyntz alias Morris and others, to the Judges. L. J., X. 401. In extenso.

July 29. Petition of Isabella Lady [De] La-Warre, Dowager; by way of protestation and not by way of answer to the petition of Hugh Lord Coleraine complaining that she owes him 3,000*l.*, she states that she has offered her lands for sale for payment of her debts, and hopes the House will allow her privilege as a peeress. L. J., X. 402.

July 29. Draft ordinance to enable the Commissioners (appointed by ordinance of the 19th March of 1645–6 to hear and determine abuses committed in or by the bearing, assuming, or allowing any coat or escutcheon of arms, &c.) to depute lieutenants under them with similar powers. This ordinance was read and committed this day, but does not appear to have been further proceeded with. L. J., X. 403.

July 29. Draft answer to the petition from the city of London pressing for the repeal of the ordinance of the 12th instant giving Major-General Skippon power to raise forces. L. J., X. 402. In extenso.

July 29. Petition of Edward Keling, Clerk to the Company of Shipwrights, Robert Derrant, their late beadle, and Wm. Beadle, their present officer; in March 1645–6 the Company was ordered to pay petitioners their salaries, and in Aug. 1646 an ordinance was passed for the establishment of their corporation; petitioners House of Lords. have attended long, but have received neither arrears nor salaries, and are with their families, reduce to great extremities. They pray the House to give them relief, and that the public instruments entrusted to them may be disposed of, and be indemnified for them. L. J., X. 402.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the wardens and others of the Corporation of Shipwrights: they have consented to pay the established duties of the Corporation as directed by order of the House, but Peter Pett and other principal members, and great dealers in that mystery, withhold and refuse to pay the duties for support of the Corporation, and so the wardens have not the means to pay the salaries of their officers or their house rent, to relieve their poor, to make their due surveys upon ships, or to pursue an ordinance for settlement of their government which passed the House of Peers eighteen months ago, and now remains in the House of Commons. 29 Feb. 1647-8.

2. Letter from the Earl of Warwick to his son-in-law the Earl of Manchester; prays him to present to the House a petition of Edward Keling and others for redress from the Corporation of Shipwrights. 12 July 1648.

July 29. Petition of Francis Newton and others, messengers allowed by the Houses of Parliament, and of Richard Rawlins and others, assistants to the said messengers; since the beginning of this Parliament petitioners have been employed by its authority to discover, and apprehend seminary priests, Jesuits, and other malignants, and have actually brought thirty-one priests and Jesuits to condign punishment; they have also discovered and impeached divers dangerous malevolent persons now in prison, in which service they have spent above 500*l.* for intelligence and otherwise; Queen Elizabeth, King James, and his present Majesty have usually in such cases allowed and paid according to established laws out of the Exchequer 5*l.* for every priest or Jesuit convicted legally, this makes 1,550*l.* due to petitioners, which with the 500*l.* actually disbursed by them comes to 2,050*l.*, but petitioners have as yet received nothing for their services, nor for their great pains and charge in attending the trial of the late Archbishop of Canterbury from time to time until the proceedings became final; they pray the House to order them present payment and satisfaction for their services, and to establish some certain course for the future that they and their agents may be encouraged to persevere according to their conscience and desire. L. J., X. 403. Copies of several orders of the House, &c. relating to the apprehension of priests and Jesuits follow the petition.

Annexed:—

1. The names of such Jesuits and Romish priests as have been apprehended and prosecuted by and at the charge of the messengers, whereof some have been condemned, some executed, and some reprieved since the beginning of this Parliament. Then follows a list of thirty-two persons, of whom twelve it is stated were executed at Tyburn, seven died in Newgate, one was reprieved and pardoned, one made his escape, three were reprieved by the King and still remain in custody, three reprieved or begged by the Spanish ambassador, four reprieved and banished or delivered by warrant to go beyond seas, one reprieved by the now Lord Mayor and Justices and still in custody. The House appointed a Committee upon this information to inquire by whose authority the above-mentioned persons had been reprieved.

July 29. Petition of John Overed; prays the House to give him satisfaction for his enjoying the rectory of St. Andrew's, now void by death of Mr. Burnell; he claims it and is entitled by the will of the said, having enjoyed it the last ten years and a half by an order from the Committee for Plundered Ministers.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate in favour of Overed.

July 29. Draft ordinance appointing Overed minister of St. Andrew's.

July 29. Draft ordinance for the Committee for Sequestrations in the county of Kent to put in execution the votes for the sequestering of delinquents engaged in the late insurrection in the county. C. J., V. 652.

July 29. Petition of Robert Bassnett and others; they were tenants of certain lands near Coventry under the Earl of Leicester, but being put out of possession by Edward Johnson by process out of the Exchequer, unduly procured, they were forced to become tenants to him as they had no winter provision for their cattle but what was on the land, they afterwards found that Mr. Johnson's proceedings were contrary to the Earl of Leicester's privilege as a peer, and the House has ordered that they should again become tenants to the Earl; Johnson has commenced suits against them upon their leases from him; petitioners pray that, as they have acted in obedience to the orders of the House, Johnson may be ordered to cease his proceedings and to deliver up the leases.

July 31. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that William Stooke has been approved for the cure of Dunchidock, Exon. L. J., X. 404.

Aug. 1. Draft ordinance giving a discharge to Reuben Parke, collector for the wapentake of Elloe, Lincolnshire, for 200*l.* taken from him by the Committee for the County for the public service. Read twice and committed. L. J., X. 405. No further proceeding mentioned.

Aug. 1. Petition of Sir Lewis Kirke; petitioner was a party to the articles for the surrender of Oxford, and compounded accordingly, but has nevertheless been sued by Edmund Bishop contrary to those articles for goods seized by petitioner's command when he was Governor of Bridgnorth for causes merely relating to the war; petitioner has obtained several summonses against Bishop to appear before the Committee for Complaints of Breach of Articles, but not only has Bishop not done so, but has proceeded to judgment against petitioner and obtained a verdict for 300*l.*; petitioner has brought in a writ of error to the House, and prays for consideration. L. J., X. 406.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate that Sir Lewis Kirke has compounded under the articles for the surrender of Oxford. 31 March 1648.

2. Order of the Committee for Complaints of Breach of Articles for Bishop to appear before them. 19 May 1647.

3. Further order of the same Committee for stay of Bishop's proceedings at law. 27 April 1648.

Aug. 1. Petition of Captain John Copley; petitioner has been in actual service for the Parliament since the beginning of these unhappy differences, for which service arrears amounting to 500*l.* are due to him, but he is threatened with arrest for debts partly incurred in raising a troop; he prays that either his arrears may be paid or that he may be protected from arrest. L. J., X. 405.

Aug. 1. Draft ordinance for the levying and raising of money in the county of Nottingham. L. J., X. 406. In extenso.

[Aug. 1.] Petition of Sir Robert King to the House of Commons; petitioner is sued for a debt of Sir George Radcliffe for which he became bound on promise of security from Sir George; he prays for indemnity out of the estate of Sir George Redcliffe. C. J., V. 654.

Aug. 1. Draft order for the adjournment of the Lancaster assizes, &c. C. J., V. 655.

Aug. 1. Another draft.

Aug. 2. Petition of Stephen Pacye; no obedience having been given by Snellock to the former orders of the House for him to deliver up the bail bond under which petitioner stands bound for Captain Bushell, petitioner once more prays that Snellock, the attorney, and the bailiff may be committed close prisoners. L. J., X. 408.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the case of 26 June 1648.

2. Copy of order of 25 July 1648.

Aug. 2. Letter from Major Robert Huntington to the Earl of Manchester. Speaker of the House of Peers, presenting a narrative of late proceedings of the army, which have induced him to lay down his commission. L. J., X. 408. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Sundry reasons inducing Major Robert Huntington to lay down his commission, which are briefly these, that the principles, designs, and actions of those officers who have a great influence upon the army are very repugnant to and destructive to the honour and safety of the Parliament and Kingdom from whom they derive their authority; the narrative which follows gives an account of the negotiations carried on by Cromwell and Ireton with the King. L. J., X. 408-412. In extenso.

Aug. 2. Draft ordinance to settle the militia of Middlesex. L. J., X. 412. In extenso.

Aug. 2. Draft order for payment of 500*l.* to Ralph Darnall, clerk assistant in the House of Commons, in part satisfaction of his loss of his office as one of the attorneys of the late Court of Wards. L. J., X. 413. In extenso.

Aug. 2. Draft order for payment of 20*l.* a-piece to Margaret Roberts and Jane Smith. L. J., X. 413. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Jane Smith and Margaret Roberts; they formerly preferred a petition to Parliament for relief of their wants, and in respect of the service they have daily executed for the Parliament, but by long waiting they are brought to such extreme want that they are not able any longer to subsist; they pray the House to renew their business by message to the House of Commons that they may have some speedy relief.
2. Another similar petition of same to the House of Commons.

Aug. 2. Draft ordinance for raising a troop of horse in the Isle of Ely. L. J., X. 413. In extenso.

Aug. 2. Petition and answer of Humphrey Newbery, clerk, to the petition of Dr. Goodman, once Bishop of Gloucester; as the late Bishop was specially nominated in an ordinance amongst many other persons to be sequestered, petitioner conceives that the parsonage of West Ilsley was therefore sequestered, and that he himself was duly placed there by the Committee for Berks by the power given them by another ordinance; he has served the cure for above two years without any complaint against his doctrine and conversation, and prays therefore to be continued in his place.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of ordinance for seizing and sequestering of the estates, both real and personal, of certain kinds of notorious delinquents to the use and for the maintaining of the army raised by the Parliament, and such other uses as shall be directed by both Houses of Parliament for the benefit of the Commonwealth, with the names of the committees who are employed in the several counties of this Kingdom for the execution of this ordinance. 15 March 1642-3. See C. J., III. 1.
2. Order of the Committee for Berks settling Newbery in the rectory of West Ilsley. 13 April 1646.
3. Copy of petition of Godfrey Goodman, once Bishop of Gloucester, and of the order for Newbery to answer. 27 July 1648.

[Aug. 3.] Petition of Frances, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Hercules Huncks; praying that some part of her husband's arrears may be paid to her. L. J., X. 414.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same to the House of Commons: the sum of 1,500*l.* is due to her husband for service in Ireland, whither he has again returned to spend his dear blood for the good of that Kingdom, meantime she has nothing left to maintain herself and her children; her nephew George Blundell has compounded for his delinquency for 310*l.* and has in his hands a legacy of 500*l.* left to petitioner by Sir George Blundell, she prays that the 310*l.* may be paid to her in part satisfaction of her husband's arrears.

Aug. 3. Petition of William Dumville, of Lincoln's Inn; petitioner has engaged himself for various debts of the Lord Viscount Ranelagh, late Lord President of Connaught money disbursed for the public service amounting to 1,174*l.* 9*s.*, and secured by various orders of the Committee for Irish affairs, but the money which should have satisfied the claim has been otherwise disposed of; petitioner much pressed for these debts prays for some speedy relief. L. J., X. 415.

Aug. 3. Petition of Isabel Vaux, the distressed wife of John Vaux, Esqre.; she was the only daughter of Thomas Musgrave, the eldest son and heir apparent of William Musgrave, of Haiton [Hayton] Castle, Cumberland; after the death of her grandfather and grandmother (her father being before dead) she, then about six years old, was proved heir to their property, but her uncles, Sir Edward Musgrave and Leonard Musgrave, having got much of her property into their own hands by confederacy between themselves, married her while yet under age to John Musgrave, youngest son of Sir Leonard Musgrave, having made an agreement with John Musgrave that for 1,300*l.* and lands worth 120*l.* per annum she and he, on her coming of age, should release her uncles of all claims upon the lands of her grandfather and grandmother which they had appropriated, but afterwards discovering the wrong she refused to ratify the agreement, and has ever since been kept out of her rights; Sir Edward Musgrave, son and heir of her uncle Sir Edward, deceased, has been three times in arms against the Parliament, and is so now again. About four years after the death of her husband, John Musgrave, petitioner, married her present husband, who possessed himself of the manor of Catterlin (in which her children had an interest) and of other lands in Cumberland, and, though not worth 20*l.* in all the world when he married, thereby accumulated money to buy the reversion of the manor of Catterlin, but, notwithstanding all his promises before marriage, he refused to sue for her rights of inheritance, and some fourteen years since there being suits between him and petitioner's children respecting the profits of Catterlin, he cruelly used her, beat her, and causelessly put her from him; she had nothing from him for two years, and after a long suit in the High Commission Court at York was forced to consent to accept 40*l.* per annum for alimony, which he paid her till the beginning of these wars, but not since, saying that she and her son, John Musgrave, were enemies to the King because they adhered to the Parliament. On the reduction of Cumberland she went to Catterlin Hall, but her husband refuses to come to her, to pay her arrears, or to allow her any maintenance; she has in consequence contracted great debts, and can get no relief from the Committee of Cumberland, and therefore prays the House to call upon her husband, John Vaux, and upon Sir Edward Musgrave to answer, and to give her speedy relief.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

Aug. 3. Petition of Thomas Worsley, of Hovingham, in the county of York; petitioner's father was indebted to Robert Charnock in the time of Queen Elizabeth, which led to the mortgage and ultimate sale of the manor of Booth, Lancashire, by which petitioner conceives himself to be aggrieved, and prays for relief against Thomas Charnock, heir and executor of Robert Charnock. L. J., X. 415.

2. Letter from the bailiff and jurats of Guernsey to the Lord assembled in the High Court of Parliament; Perchard has given security for the costs of the appeal in case he fail therein; he has been duly received to prosecute the same, and they therefore desire that both parties may be summoned to appear before their Lordships. 27 May 1648.

Aug. 4. Petition of John Phillips and others, of Gillingham, in the county of Dorset; petitioners were attached and brought up, by warrant on the 8th of July last to answer for their supposed contempt in disobeying certain orders of the House in which Lord Bruce Earl of Elgin was concerned. Their case was heard on the 28th of July, but though no order was made they are still kept in custody; their longer imprisonment will inevitably be their utter ruin as they are poor countrymen, and harvest time is approaching; they therefore beseech the House to give order for their speedy enlargement without fees or further charges. L. J., X. 418.

Aug. 4. Petition of Thomas Lord Bruce, Earl of Elgin; after hearing the business concerning a breach of his privilege, and contempt of the orders of the House by divers tumultuous persons who destroyed the mounds, hedges, and ditches on his lands, part of the late forest of Gillingham, their Lordships directed him to prove the reading of their order in Gillingham church, and the giving of notice thereof to the rioters; this he has done by affidavit, and he prays that the offenders may be ordered to repair the mounds, hedges, and ditches, and to give security that they will not disquiet his possession in any illegal way.

Aug. 4. Draft of a set of laws and ordinances of the sea ordained and established by the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, regulating and better governing of the navy and fleet, and all and singular persons, ships, and vessels thereunto belonging, or which are or shall be under the power, command, or jurisdiction of Robert Earl of Warwick, Lord High Admiral of England, Ireland, and Wales, and Captain-General of His Majesty's seas and Navy Royal, and to be observed and duly obeyed by the vice admiral, rear admiral, captains, lieutenants, masters, masters' mates, and all other officers, mariners, and seamen, and all others that shall come within these laws and ordinances may be enforced by the pains and penalties therein expressed. These laws enact that any one guilty of blasphemy shall have his tongue bored with a red hot iron; that oaths and execrations shall be punished with loss of pay, &c.; that profaneness shall be proceeded against at discretion, and that all commanders shall see that

Almighty God be reverently served, and serious and prayers duly frequented aboard their ships; that holding intelligence with the enemy shall be punished with death; injuring the allies of the State, with death; theft or robbery, exceeding the value of ten shillings, with death, under ten shillings, with whipping, &c.; mutiny, sedition, and insubordination, with death; that none shall obey the commands of their superior officers if those commands tend to disloyalty to the Parliament, but shall disclose the matter to the lord admiral or chief in command; that spies, deserters, and traitors shall be punished with death; that all commanders who do not take advantage of every opportunity against the enemy shall be proceeded against as ill affected; that none of the masters or mariners of foreign ships taken as prize without resistance shall be stripped of their clothes, pillaged, beaten, or evil intreated, but that the ships and goods shall be preserved entire to receive judgment in the Admiralty Court; that none shall refuse, upon pain of death or less punishment, as the case may be, to weigh anchor upon pretence of want of victual or stores, but shall in such case civilly impart the same to his captain, that a survey may be taken, and a supply made if there shall be cause; that anyone wilfully setting fire to any ship, magazine, &c. shall be punished with death; sleeping on the watch, with death; mutinous words, with whipping; none shall refuse, on pain of death or other punishment, to serve on shore if need so require, and shall observe order and discipline when so serving; that on occasion of fight none shall refuse to fight or be backward or discourage others; when engaged in conveying merchant ships all shall do their utmost to protect them; no provost marshal shall refuse to receive prisoners; none shall menace a court of justice, while all shall assist in bringing offenders to punishment. These "Sea Laws" were sent up this day from the House of Commons, and were returned agreed to by the Lords on the 21st. L. J., X. 418, 447. C. J., V. 676.

Aug. 7. Draft order for payment of interest to the reduced officers on 3,526*l.* 12*s.* L. J., X. 423. In extenso.

Aug. 7. Draft order for 75*l.* formerly ordered for Mrs. Martha Pigott to be paid to her by 5*l.* a week. L. J., X. 423. In extenso.

Annexed:

1. Petition of Martha Pigott, widow; the 200*l.* formerly ordered for her will be so long before it comes to be paid in course, that it will not pay the debt she has contracted in her attendance for it above a year and seven months, so that she will not derive the comfort from it which she conceives the House intended for her in consideration of the murder of her husband by the rebels, the loss of his estate worth 900*l.* per annum, the greatness of the arrears due to him, and the sad condition of herself and her children: she prays that she may have some weekly allowance to preserve her and them from perishing for want of food. (Undated.)
2. Copy of preceding.
3. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)
4. Copy of preceding.
5. Another copy.

Aug. 7. Draft order for payment of 3,000*l.* to the petitioners comprehended in a list of divers soldiers of the parishes of Bradford, Leeds, and other adjacent towns in the county of York, late under the command of the late Lord Fairfax. L. J., X. 423. In extenso.

Aug. 7. Certificate of Ministers that John Beridge, clerk, has for the space of almost two years lived with the Earl of Desmond in Osterley Park, and has spent that time in a very commendable way, &c.

Aug. 8. Draft order for the Committee in Cheshire to raise money for paying Captain Carter's troop, and for providing ammunition for Chester. L. J., X. 424. In extenso.

Aug. 8. Draft order for payment of 2,000*l.* to Ralph Darnall, clerk assistant in the House of Commons, in lieu of his sufferings and loss of office as one of the attornies of the late Court of Wards. L. J., X. 425. In extenso.

Aug. 8. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled; praying that the King may be freed from restraint and invited to a personal treaty, that there may be a cessation of hostilities, that the government of the church may be settled according to the covenant, that Ireland may be relieved, the liberty of the subject restored, the self-denying ordinance observed, and the merchants protected from the fleet under the Prince of Wales. L. J., X. 427. In extenso.

Aug. 8. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct John Nye to the rectory of Acton, Middlesex. L. J., X. 428.

Aug. 8. Certificate of ministers that Wm. Knaplock, master of the free school of Crediton, is orthodox in judgment, of an unblameable conversation, and well affected to the Parliament. L. J., X. 428.

Aug. 8. Another certificate in favour of Knaplock.

Aug. 8. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Samuel Withers to the rectory of Wotton alias Woughton alias Wokenton upon the Green [Woughton upon Green], Bucks. L. J., X. 428.

Aug. 8. Certificate that Withers, who has for twelve years past been incumbent of Honingham, Norfolk, has always been of unblameable life, painful in his duties, of humble meek and Christian behaviour, studious of peace, and of sound doctrine.

Aug. 8. Draft pass for John Colleton to go to Calais and back.

Aug. 8. Three papers of proceedings in the House of Commons this day. C. J., V. 664. In extenso.

Aug. 9. Petition of John Lord Poulett; in returning the order of the House of Commons of the 22nd of March last (which ordered that, after payment of 1,500*l.* to Lady Drake, the rest of petitioner's rents should be applied to the use of the State), their Lordships were pleased to add that if 200*l.* per annum were settled upon Lyme and the 1,500*l.* paid to Lady Drake, this should be taken as petitioner's fine, and the remaining rents should go to him; but not only have the House of Commons not agreed to this addition, though petitioner and his son have settled land worth 4,000*l.* on Lyme, but on the 7th instant an order passed the House of Commons by which two thousand oaks are to be cut on the lands of petitioner and his son for reparation of the losses of Lyme, though in other cases the practice has been to preserve houses and timber; petitioner, knowing that these extremities have come upon him by misinformation, desires that every action of his during the late unhappy war may be examined, but knows not how to procure this, nor how to prevent the ruin which presses on himself and his family, and therefore, as one though of the meanest and most unhappy of the peers, applies to their Lordships for relief in his sufferings. L. J., X. 428.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the House of Commons of 22nd March 1647-8.
2. Copy of Lord's amendment to preceding.
3. Copy of order of the House of Commons of 7th Aug. 1648.

Aug. 9. Draft ordinance for the further and better regulating the sequestrations of papists' and delinquents' estates. L. J., X. 429. In extenso.

Aug. 11. Answer of Isabella Lady [De] La Warr to the petition of Roger Drake; she has used her utmost endeavour to sell lands to pay her debts, but these distractions have diverted all purchasers; her estates have felt the sharpness of these times by quartering, taxes, and contributions, whilst her houses have been burnt to the ground by the King's forces, so that she is rather in a condition to petition for reparation, than to be petitioned against; she therefore prays that her privilege as a peeress may be continued to her. L. J., X. 431.

Aug. 11. Draft pass for Lady Portman to go into Somersetshire, with all necessaries for the journey, to remain there with quietness, and to return when she shall think fit. L. J., X. 431.

Aug. 11. Petition of the poor people of Sackville College in East Grinstead, in the County of Sussex; Robert Earl of Dorset charged his land with 350*l.* to be paid annually to petitioners for their maintenance, the lands at his death descended to his son Richard Earl of Dorset, who sold some of the lands so charged, and died before any apportionments were made for the payment of the annuity; after his death there was a suit in Chancery about the apportionment, which proceeded so far that a decree was made for settling the matter, provided no exception was taken thereto for a day long since passed; a great part of the lands so charged have now come to John Earl of Thanet, who has married one of the daughters and co-heirs of Richard Earl of Dorset; the Earl of Thanet and his tenants have for a long time detained the sums payable for petitioner's maintenance, whereby they have been brought to such extremity that they were ready to starve, and were forced to apply in Chancery for leave to sue in forma pauperis; they proceeded so far in their suit as to procure attachments against some of the tenants, but the Earl of Thanet by petition to the House of Lords procured an order on the 16th of June last to stay petitioners' suit in Chancery till review should be had of the decree; petitioners are so extreme poor that they are not able to live until a review may be had, and they therefore pray that the Earl and his tenants may be ordered to pay their rateable portion, which is not above 14*l.* in the pound, till the cause be determined upon review, or else that they may have leave to proceed in Chancery. L. J., X. 431.

Annexed—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Answer of John Earl of Thanet to preceding petition; Robert Earl of Dorset being minded to build a hospital in East Grinstead, and to endow it for the maintenance of one-and-thirty men and women, by his will (10 Feb. 1608-9) directed his executors, William Lord Howard and Sir George Rivers, to purchase land whereon to erect it, that it should be incorporated, and that the poor should be elected from time to time by his heirs; and that whenever any of them should die, marry, be put out, or depart that his heirs should have full power to fill up their places; the Earl charged all his lands with a rent of 350*l.* per annum for the maintenance of the hospital, and died leaving Richard Earl of Dorset his son and heir; the executors proved the will, purchased land, and the hospital was erected; Richard Earl of Dorset conveyed the inheritance of divers manors and lands out of which the 350*l.* per annum issued to Lord Wm. Howard and Sir George Rivers and their heirs, by which in point of law the charge was extinguished, which the Earl, taking notice of by his will (26 March 1624), charged only the manors of Buckhurst, Munckloe, Hendall, and Fiscarede with the 350*l.* per annum, specially providing that none of his lands should be charged with a double charge, but that this new charge should take the place of the old extinguished charge; Richard Earl of Dorset shortly after died leaving the Lady Margaret, now wife of the Earl of Thanet, and the Lady Isabella, now wife of the Earl of Northampton, his daughters and co-heirs; Lord Howard and Sir George Rivers for some time paid the rent to the poor, but there being some arrears (because they knew not, as they affirmed, where to levy it, as divers of Robert Earl of Dorset's lands were entailed), there was a suit in Chancery to settle the matter, to which neither the Countess of Northampton nor the Countess of Thanet were parties, and a decree was made by which it is pretended that the inheritances of both of them are charged without making them parties, and without any mention of the new charge made by the will of Richard Earl of Dorset; the persons calling themselves the poor of Sackville College were not placed there by the heirs of Robert Earl of Dorset, and ought not therefore to have any benefit from the gift of the founder; the Earl of Thanet acknowledges that in right of his wife he holds lands late the property of Richard Earl of Dorset, but he conceives that they are not liable in law to the charge nor to the decree in Chancery to which he and his wife were no parties, but that the mortgage should issue solely out of the manors of Buckhurst, &c., which he trusts to prove by review in Chancery; not only are the petitioners not placed in the college according to the will of the founder, but they are not qualified for an hospital, few of them being resident in the college, some of them tradesmen abroad, and many of debauched and most of idle lives; the Earl of Thanet therefore prays that, according to the order of the 16th of June last, stay may be made of all proceedings against his servants or tenants under the decree in Chancery until there has been a review of the same before the Commissioners in Chancery; he promises to prosecute the review with effect, and to use his endeavour for the speediest settlement he can of the 350*l.* per annum on the hospital, and prays that meantime he may not be ordered to pay anything to the petitioners. (Undated.)

3. Petition of the poor people of Sackville College; the Earl of Thanet has put in his answer to their petition, and therein says that he intends with all possible speed to exhibit a bill for review of the decree made in Chancery for settling a maintenance for petitioners who are ready to starve, and some of them already starved; they pray that a time may be appointed to hear counsel touching their poor estate and the means for their relief. (Undated.)

4. Copy of affidavit of Emery Allen, a poor almsman of Sackville College, in the cause between William Vergis and others on behalf of himself and of the College of East Grinstead against Henry Campton and others: deponent affirms that William Vergis, late warden of the College, lived in great want and misery because the pay was detained from the College, and was forced to pawn or sell his gown for bread and had not wherewith to subsist, but did merely starve for want of subsistence, having nothing wherewith to relieve himself or to satisfy his creditors; deponent further declares that William Harman, late one of the almsmen of the College, lived in great misery for a long time for want of his pay, ran into debt, sold his bed, and lay upon straw, and, though he had two gatherings made for him in East Grinstead Church, at last starved for want of sustenance; another almsman lived in great misery for a long time, went about the country begging, and finally died for want of sustenance; whilst other almsmen have been forced to run into debt, and are very likely to starve if speedy relief be not given them. 3 Nov. 1648.

Aug. 11. Information of Richard Stobart that he heard some of the men enlisted under Major-General Skippon say that they rejoiced that Parliament would not grant the desires of the Common Council in recalling the ordinance given to the Major-General for enlisting men and horse; that they hoped to see some of the men who went with gold chains wear halters ere long about their necks, and that all would not be well until they pulled the Lords out of the House by the ears; and Stobart answering that they would leave that to the army, they replied they would do it themselves. L. J., X. 431.

Aug. 11. Petition of Major Robert Huntington; many aspersions have been cast upon him, in particular that he was cashiered, and that therefore in discontent he lately presented his narrative (see above, Aug. 2); he prays therefore that the General's letter and his own discharge may be ordered to be printed in vindication of his conduct. L. J., X. 431.

Aug. 12. Ordinance to clear Thomas Coke of his delinquency. L. J., X. 435. In extenso.

Aug. 12. Draft of preceding.

[Aug. 12.] Petition of Thomas Elliott, prisoner in the King's Bench; about three years since he was committed as prisoner of war to the Tower, where he remained a year and a quarter; he was afterwards removed by Habeas Corpus for debt to the King's Bench, likewise charged as a prisoner of war; he has no support but the pensions allowed him by His Majesty and the Prince, of which he is now deprived, and must probably starve in prison, having neither meat nor drink but what is allowed him by the courtesy of Sir John Lenthall; he prays to be bailed that so he may endeavour to procure a livelihood. (See C. J., IV. 251, V. 668.)

[Aug. 12.] Petition of Katherine Needham, widow, the late wife of Colonel Simon Needham, who was slain at Colchester; prays for some weekly allowance for support of herself and her children until she shall receive the arrears due to her late husband, who lost to the value of 3,000*l.* by the rebellion in Ireland, and whose arrears amount to 2,796*l.* 11*s.* See C. J., V. 668.

Aug. 14. Petition of Isabella Countess of Holland, praying that her husband, the Earl of Holland, now prisoner in Warwick Castle, may be removed to some place nearer London that he may have the advice of Sir Theodore Mayerne for his health. L. J., X. 436.

Aug. 14. Petition of George Halyburton; after his return from the Isle of Wight he was informed that his residing longer in London to attend the orders of the Committee of Estates in Scotland had caused suspicion and jealousy; he is unwilling to give any distaste, and prays therefore for a pass for his safe return either by sea or land. L. J., X. 437.

Aug. 15. Petition of William Allen and John Heath, merchants of London, for themselves and many planters, inhabitants in Virginia; petitioners have equipped two ships, the "Honor" and the "Prosperous Susan," to transport many planters, with their wives, children, and servants, in number about four hundred, to Virginia, all are on board, and the ships are at Gravesend ready to depart, but they are stayed by the general embargo on all ships; not only are petitioners thereby losing 20*l.* a day, having to provide the planters with food till their arrival in Virginia, but the navigation of the Kingdom will lose, for the petitioners are informed that the Dutch have fitted out twenty-five sail with goods and merchandize for the colony; the petitioners pray that the Lord Admiral may be directed to allow their ships to proceed on their voyage, and they will engage to endeavour to send their ships by the North of Scotland, or by the coast of France, shunning the Downs [where the revolted ships are lying]. L. J., X. 446.

Aug. 15. Letter from Thomas Lord Fairfax, at the leaguer before Colchester, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers; concerning the removal of the Earl of Holland from Warwick Castle. L. J., X. 442. In extenso.

Aug. 16. Petition of Anthony Sterling, he was seven years ago committed for a contempt and fine in the Star Chamber, but upon Habeas Corpus the House directed that he should have his liberty; but now, seven years after, upon hearing the petition of Thomas Fowke, a delinquent, full of false suggestions, the House referred the matter to two of the judges, and on their report, made upon false information from Fowke, which petitioner had not time to answer, petitioner is remanded to prison; he prays for a final discharge and that his case may be heard before the House or before the Committee for Suffolk. L. J., X. 442.

Aug. 16. Copy of preceeding.

Aug. 16. Petition of Henry Walker; petitioner thanks the House for their order of the 30th June last, granting him license to publish Fridays' occurrences, in contempt of which order Gilbert Mabbott, who has no authority to license but under order from the House, has not only threatened petitioner, but has disturbed the printers and sent men to break their presses, scorning their Lordships' order, and telling the men that he would bear them out; Mabbott, besides his licensing, which is alone worth nearly 100*l.* per annum, collects the intelligence of Monday's Journal and other sheets of news, which is worth much more; and being both writer and licenser he has liberty to make use of what he pleases to advance his own writing, and to leave out to disparage others; for these reasons, when he licensed under his master John Rushworth, the House of Commons put him out; petitioner prays their Lordships to call Mabbott to account for his contempt of their order, to consider whether it is fit to continue his license, he being a writer, and that the order of the 30th of June last may be confirmed. L. J., X. 442.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceeding. 12 Aug.

2. Draft of an order for the hearing of the case.

Aug. 16. Petition of John Claydon, one of the curators of the High Court of Chancery, praying for a pass to go into France. L. J., X. 442.

Aug. 16. Information that divers horses belonging to Lord Craven and his servants have been taken from Hampstead Marshall, Berks, though he has never borne arms against the Parliament. L. J., X. 442.

Aug. 16. Application from the Gentleman Usher that he may turn over to the Gatehouse or Fleet Prison Rowland Furniss and (Jonas) Crossgill, apprehended for working mines on the Earl of Rutland's manor of Nether Haddon, in the county of Derby, as they have been in custody since the 19th of June last, and refuse to submit or to acknowledge their offence. L. J., X. 442.

Aug. 17. Petition of John Tanner, commander of the "Victory," William Haddock, commander of the "America," and John Wood, commander of the "Hopewell"; they are hired by Mr. Lobb and Company for a voyage to Falmouth, there to lade pilchards of the first season for Venice, Leghorn, and Naples, and have victualled and manned their ships accordingly, but by the restraint laid upon shipping they have been lying detained at Gravesend for fifteen days to their great charge; and not only are they likely to lose their engagement, but the pilchards will be utterly ruined; petitioners, encouraged by the favour already granted to two ships bound for Virginia, pray for an order to the Earl of Warwick to free their ships from restraint. L. J., X. 443.

Aug. 17. Petition of Thomas Blackemer and Richard Paris; they pray the House to consider the annexed articles charging Henry Wollaston, keeper of the gaol of Newgate, and his deputies with high crimes, misdemeanours, and oppressions, and to suspend him from his office: the matters in complaint have before this been represented to several Lord Mayors, but specially to the present one, Sir John Wollaston; but for so appealing petitioners have been threatened with imprisonment by the power and interest of Henry Wollaston with his brother Sir John Wollaston. L. J., X. 443.

Annexed:—

1. Articles against Henry Wollaston, chief gaoler of Newgate, that he wilfully suffered divers eminent priests, Jesuits, and papists to escape, viz., Edmund Cole, John Wright, and Philip Morgan, though convicted traitors, that he allowed mass to be read in the prison, and papists to come from time to time to hear it and to exercise the popish religion, and that he also allowed other popish prisoners to go out at large, by which means divers of His Majesty's subjects have been seduced from their Protestant religion; that he suffered Colonel Gradoo, an Irish rebel, to escape, who confessed that he had imbrued his hands in the blood of many Protestants in Ireland; that he also suffered John Bodman and several other persons convicted of felony, and one committed for murder, to escape; that he suffered Robert Ratcliffe and others convicted of felony to go at large to rob and steal, and to return to the gaol for sanctuary with their stolen goods; that he has defrauded the poor prisoner, for debt of legacies and gift amounting to 2,000*l.*, that he removed the poor prisoners brought from the place called Justice Hall a place for their better more comfortable, and saving, where they had a better maintenance from the charity of well-disposed persons than they in the common gaols, and jails, and houses, and chambers, and, having a poor wretch or man before his eyes, suffered them to be maliciously beaten, wounded, and abused by those felons and murderers, and many of them to be miserably starved, and such and other such like, and would not suffer any coroner or jury to examine into their deaths before they were carried; for all these crimes the petitioners desire that Henry Wollaston may be called upon to answer, and that he may receive such condign punishment as he shall deserve.

Aug. 17. Application for an order for Dr Aylett to institute and induct Thomas Pyc to the rectory of Frodsham, Frodsham, Suffolk. L. J., X. 443.

Annexed.

1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Pyc has been approved for the cure.

Aug. 17. Draft order for payment of 500*l.* to Colonel Needham's widow. L. J., X. 443. In extenso.

Aug. 17. Draft orders for payment of 200*l.* and 50*l.* to William Ryley, clerk of the records in the Tower. L. J., X. 443. In extenso.

Aug. 17. Draft order for payment of 2,815*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.*, to Robert Carr and Company of Merchants of Bristol for corn, &c., taken from them by Colonel Anthony Buller, Governor of Scilly for supply of that garrison. L. J., X. 443. In extenso.

Aug. 17. Draft order for payment of Captain Richard Hamlyn's arrears. L. J., X. 444. In extenso.

Aug. 17. Order for payment of interest upon the arrears due to certain officers in four lists until the arrears are paid. L. J., X. 444. In extenso.

Annexed.

1. Draft of preceding.

2. Petition of reduced officers contained in four lists, in number three hundred and twenty; they are in a perishing condition for want of the arrears due to them, and pray that their sad condition may be recommended to the House of Commons, and order given for payment of the arrears of interest due to them. (Undated.)

Aug. 17. Draft order for payment of 500*l.* to Sir David Hasteville, and for 50*l.* thereof to be immediately advanced for relief of his crying necessities. L. J., X. 445. In extenso.

Annexed.

1. Petition of Sir David Hasteville to the House of Commons; petitioner, a Protestant, for conscience and religion left his native country, France, and his father's house, and therewith a plentiful estate which his younger brethren now enjoy; in 1643 he applied himself to the service of this State, and was appointed general of artillery under Sir William Waller, and at his own charge raised three hundred and fourteen men; he is thereby out of purse nearly 400*l.* and has never received a penny from the State, and is now in danger of arrest for 150*l.* owing for lodging of his soldiers, and is constrained to conceal himself as a recluse; he prays that he may be paid for his disbursements and services, to save him, his wife, and children from ruin, or that he may be supplied with the means of transporting himself and his family into France, where he has some estate befallen him. See C. J., V. 669.

Aug. 17. Draft order to clear Sir Robert Fernand and his son of their delinquency. L. J., X. 444. In extenso.

Annexed.

1. Certificate of their delinquency. C. J., V. 600. In extenso.

Aug. 17. Letter from the Earl of Warwick, about the "S. George" in Tilbury Hope, to Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons. I am informed that the "Alexander" and "Dragon" frigates have lately come from the coast of Ireland to Portsmouth, and that the "Elizabeth," "Expedition," and "Cygnets" frigates are lying at Bristol ready for sea; the not paying those at Portsmouth forceth their continuance aboard at a very great charge; the not paying those at Bristol keeps them in harbour and so leaves the coast of Ireland open to them; I am also informed that if 80,000*l.* be not provided for speedily furnishing the fleet, 17,000*l.* will add to the admiralty's debt to the Treasury, and 300,000*l.* to the Treasury, and that the safety of the navy will be at a stand; I am also certified by the officers of the ordinance that at this present there remain in the stores of the office but a very few barrels of corn powder upon the navy account; I also hear of the great necessity of the ordinance at Chatham, who, by reason of many months arrears, are due to such straits as may endanger a tumultuous address to Parliament unless "speedy provision be made for their satisfaction." I am very sensible of the present exigencies for want of money, and unwilling to add thereto, but the thing is of such importance that my duty obliges me to desire you to represent what I have said to the House of Commons that they may do therein as they think fit. C. J., V. 678.

Aug. 18. Petition of Sergeant Glanvill, one of the assistants of the House; prays that his attendance may be spared, and that he may have a pass to go into the country on urgent occasions and to return without molestation. L. J., X. 445.

Aug. 18. Petition of Richard Bovett. The cause between Sir John Stowell and petitioner was referred in May last to Mr. Justice Phesant and Mr. Justice Goddell, but the latter is dead, no hearing of the matter having been had, petitioner prays that Mr. Baron Atkins may be joined with Mr. Justice Phesant to hear the case. L. J., X. 445.

Aug. 18. Draft order for payment of 600*l.* to Sir Edward Povey. L. J., X. 445. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Draft declaration of Parliament in grateful acknowledgment of the contribution of 31,218*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.* made by the well-affected people in the United Provinces for relief of the British and Protestants within the realm of Ireland. L. J., X. 445. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Draft order for payment of 1,000*l.* to the Commissioners who negotiated the Netherlands contribution. L. J., X. 446. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Letter from Major Robert Harley at Llanidlas [Llanidloes], giving an account how after following a body of the enemy of about three hundred horse and foot from Leominster, he finally routed and dispersed them not far from Llanidlas; with list of prisoners. C. J., V. 679.

Aug. 19. Affidavit of George Vaux, servant to the Countess of Peterborough, that Pollard, a hackney coachman, whipped and beat about the heads the horses of the Countess of Peterborough when standing in the coach at the door, and the deponent and another servant of the Countess having interfered to protect the horses, Pollard procured a warrant from Mr. Justice Edwards to apprehend them, and Harris a constable came into the Countess's house, and served it upon them; they are informed that the warrant was unduly obtained as Mr. Justice Edwards was in the country. L. J., X. 446.

Aug. 19. Petition of Thomas Worsley, of Hovingham, in the county of York, for relief against Robert Charnock in a matter relating to the mortgage of the manor of Booth, Lancashire. L. J., X. 447. This petition is a duplicate of that presented on the 3rd August.

Aug. 19. Petition of Sir William Button; having come in under the Articles of Oxford, petitioner's fine was assessed at 2,380*l.*, of which he paid half, and secured the remainder by bond; he has applied often, but in vain, to the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall for a reduction because he was assessed at two years' rent instead of one year's, as if he had an estate in fee, whereas he had only an estate for life; since this his personal estate has been seized and sequestered, unduly as he conceives, and a further fine of 300*l.* laid on him, besides charges; he prays that his case may be referred back to the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall to make a reduction in his fine, and to allow the 300*l.* as part of his second payment. L. J., X. 447.

Aug. 21. List of sums required as bail from Wm. Pendred and others, accused of misdemeanors and of uttering words tending to sedition near the House of Lords.

Aug. 22. Petition of Edward Gunnell, commander of the ship Sara, bound for Virginia, John Rand, commander of the ship Mary and Frances, William Hutchins, commander of the ship Elizabeth, and Robert Scott, commander of the ship Desire, bound for Plymouth to take in fish, and then for the Straits; petitioners are stayed at Gravesend by the general restraint laid on shipping to their great charge, while the commodities for which they traffic are like to be lost and spoiled; they pray their Lordships to give order to Lord Warwick to free them from the restraint, as has been done in the case of two ships bound for Virginia, and three bound for the Straits. L. J., X. 449.

Aug. 22. Petition of Henry Tyson and John Bevins, commanders of the ship Samuel, and John Rand; their ships are hired by John Harris and others, merchants, to lade pilchards of the first season at Falmouth, and so to go to the Canaries, but they have been fifteen days detained at Gravesend by the restraint on shipping; not only will they lose their voyage, but the pilchards will be spoiled to the ruin of the merchants; petitioners therefore pray for an order to the Earl of Warwick for release of their ships, as was granted to three others in like case. L. J., X. 449.

Aug. 22. Petition of Edward Bigg, defendant in a writ of error brought by John Young; prays for a speedy day for hearing.

Aug. 22. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct Nicholas Owen to the vicarage of Kenarth, Carmarthenshire. L. J., X. 451.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Owen is a godly able divine, of a sober life and civil conversation, well qualified for the discharge of his ministry. 18 August.

Aug. 22. Application for an order for Dr. Aylett to institute and induct William Evatts to the rectory of Normanton, Lancashire. L. J., X. 451.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of ministers that Evatts is of pious, sober, and honest life, and has never held or preached anything but what the church of England approves. 1 Aug.

Aug. 22. Letter from John Eldred and William Harlakenden, at Cambridge, to Sir Henry Mildmay; the Committee at Colchester appointed the writers to attend the general meeting at Cambridge, where they debated the 6th and 8th articles (of the propositions of the Eastern Association) according to their instructions, and carried it clearly that the Committee should be subordinate to the Lord General, and that commissions should be taken from him, but some members of the House of Commons coming in before the explanations were subscribed caused them to be framed as they are now presented, to which the writers entered no dissent, not wishing to put a stop to so hopeful an undertaking, and not doubting but that the House of Commons, by Sir Henry Mildmay's mediation, will judge what is fittest for the writer's safety, and explain it in the ordinance, which they desire may be speedily passed. See C. J., V. 681.

Aug. 25. Draft order to bestow 200*l.* on Major Berry and 100*l.* on Edward Sexby, who brought the news of the wonderful great success over the Scots army in Lancashire. L. J., X. 455. In extenso.

Aug. 25. Draft of additional ordinance for the better regulating and speedy bringing in the sequestration money arising out of the real and personal estates of Papists and delinquents already or hereafter to be sequestered, according to former ordinances of Parliament. L. J., X. 459. In extenso.

Aug. 26. Petition of William Pendred, citizen and barber surgeon, London; at the instigation of Mr. Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, petitioner was committed so hastily to the Gatehouse by Mr. Justice Manley on the 19th instant that he was prevented from procuring bail; on the 21st, having procured substantial bail, he was legally discharged by Sir Edward Powell, but whilst attending in the afternoon before the judges on behalf of Poyntz alias Morris, Mr. Browne and Mr. Manley so threatened Sir Edward Powell for taking bail that petitioner was reconveyed to the Gatehouse, where he remains prisoner without charge or warrant against him, and no justice will take bail for him; this is not petitioner's case alone, but Mr. Browne has gone about from prison to prison threatening the keepers that if they allow Poyntz alias Morris or any of his witnesses liberty they shall lose their places, saying that his person was sufficient order for this; petitioner, by his endeavour to remove the odium cast on their Lordships by the cruelty of Mr. Browne, and to keep Poyntz alias Morris and his witnesses from being destroyed, is himself imprisoned, though he has for these seven years done faithful service to the State, and received no satisfaction; he prays the House to assist him in procuring his discharge, his detention being without warrant. L. J., X. 460.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of George Manley, justice of the peace, to preceding petition; he apprehended Pendred by order of the House, and found just cause to bind him to good behaviour, as it was proved upon oath that Pendred, being at the door of the House of Peers, gave printed petitions to the guards telling them he wondered they would be such fools as to be made slaves by those they came to guard, saying that this Court was now as bad as the Star Chamber, the High Commission, or the Spanish Inquisition; Pendred is a dangerous fellow, and endeavoured to provoke the guards to the endangering of the House of Lords; he said that if the Speaker of the House of Commons had his due he should have been beheaded in the room of Sir John Hotham; Pendred was civilly used, and asked for bail, but could produce none sufficient, upon which respondent made a mittimus to send him to gaol, and when he heard that Pendred was bailed out, he went to Sir Edward Powell, and informed him that Pendred was a dangerous man, stirring the people to sedition against the House of Lords and the Speaker of the House of Commons; upon which Sir Edward Powell said he had been circumvented by fair words, and sent his clerk to apprehend Pendred; Manley concludes by craving reparation for the false aspersions cast upon him by Pendred.

2. Copy of Pendred's mittimus.

3. Affidavit of John Wright.

4. Information of John Walker.

Aug. 26. Petition of Henry Wollaston, keeper of the prison in Newgate; prays the House to give him time to answer the numerous charges brought against him by Thomas Blakemer and Richard Paris as he is much occupied with business, and did not know of their Lordships' order for him to answer until the 22nd; he doubts not to prove himself defamed, as the charges have been Order for Wollaston's release. 17 Aug.

Aug. 26. Petition of Thomas Blakemer and Richard Paris, the House has imprisoned Wm. Larnier, Richard Oxerton, John Poyntz alias Morris, Leonard Darby, John Harris, and others upon information of crimes laid against them; but Henry Wollaston, Keeper of Newgate, who they have charged with treason and felony, is not concerned; they pray that he may be forthwith committed to prison and suspended from the execution of his office.

Annexed

1. Affidavit of Nathaniel Neale, that Henry Wollaston, present keeper of Newgate, who came into that office about Michaelmas 1641, turned all the poor debtors out of Justice Hall, a strong prison where they had been kept a part, and placed them amongst the felons in the common gaol. 12 August.

Aug. 26. Petition of John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments: John Poyntz alias Morris and others were on the 21st of September last sentenced for notorious crimes to a fine of 2,000*l.*, and adjudged to pay 500*l.* to petitioner before their enlargement, to give security for their future good behaviour, and to stand committed to prison during the pleasure of the House; they lately (29th July) by petition aspersed the justice of the House, and pressed for release, and the House thereupon ordered the judges to consider how they might be released without prejudice to any person as regards their fines; Wm. Pendred, a chief solicitor for these parties, and Richard Paris, one of their companions, have spoken in such terms of the House (as appears by the annexed affidavits) that petitioner feels it his duty to inform the House thereof, and prays their Lordships in deciding the whole matter to consider the judgment as yet unsatisfied by Morris and the other parties, and the insolences of Pendred and Paris. L. J., X. 460.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of proceeding.

2. Affidavit of John English; that a man called Pendred, about eleven o'clock on the 18th instant, walked to and from the door of the House of Peers with a parcel of printed petitions in his hands, and read out that the Lords had committed divers of the petitioners (one of them a man of 2,000*l.* a year) and that Browne kept them in prison unknown to their Lordships, and so abused the House of Lords that it was worse than the Star Chamber or High Commission Court, nay, than the Spanish Inquisition, and that he would have Browne hanged or he should hang him.

3. Copy of proceeding.

4. Another copy of English's affidavit; and on the same paper copy of an affidavit of John Walker respecting the words spoken by Pendred.

5. Affidavit of John Wright respecting the words used by Pendred, and that one Paris seconded them.

6. Copy of proceeding.

7. Affidavit of John Wright that Pendred gave a copy of the printed petitions he held in his hands to the guards attending the House, and told them he wondered they would be such fools as to be made slaves by those they came to guard, &c.

8. Printed copy of petition of John Morris alias Poyntz, Mary his wife, Leonard Darby, John Harris, and Isabella Smith, presented 29th July 1648.

9. Statement of John Ingoldsby that in Feby. last, coming with Mr. Browne through St. Martin's in London, they met Pendred, who railed at Mr. Browne with a loud voice, calling him a knave, and when Ingoldsby would have struck him for his base speeches Mr. Browne would not let him, saying that he was a fellow not worthy for a gentleman to lay hands on, and that he used such insufferable language whenever he met him, trying if he could thereby gain any advantage. 17 Aug. 1648.

10. Note, in Browne's handwriting, respecting the case against Morris and the others.

11. Another note about Leonard Darby, &c.

Aug. 26. Draft order upon consideration of the judges' report, in answer to the petition of John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments, with the affidavits annexed, and the argument of the House of the 21 Sep.

1647 against John Morris alias Poyntz and others, that when the said John Morris alias Poyntz and the others have brought into the House the forged documents mentioned in the judgment the House would then consider the question of their release. L. J., X. 460. In calenso.

[Aug. 26.] Petition of Sir Fulke Grevill, Maurice Barrow, William Littleton, Poyntz Littleton, and all the other children of Sir Adam and Dame Audrey Littleton deceased; in September last John Morris and others were convicted of forging a copy of a pretended Act of Parliament and other documents, and were ordered to bring in the said forged copy of the pretended Act that it might be vacated, yet they have not done so, but make use of it to draw others to their party, and to cozen many of great sums of money upon pretence of title to petitioners' inheritance, by which petitioners are put to excessive charges to defend their title, and can expect no peace whilst this forged copy remains uncanceled in the hands of persons judged guilty of such notorious crimes, who, even during their imprisonment, have not ceased to set on foot new forgeries, and if set at liberty will become the more audacious. The petitioners therefore pray that these persons may bring into the House the forged copy of the pretended Act that it may be cancelled, that no use may hereafter be made of it to impeach the title of petitioners or their posterity, and that the offenders may be bound to good behaviour during their lives.

Aug. 26. Order respecting the meeting of the Committee on the ordinance for the East India Company. L. J., X. 460.

Aug. 26. Petition of John Halke, Minister of God's Word. About three years since a malicious complaint was made against petitioner by some of the parishioners of Upminster to the Committee for Plundered Ministers, but was dismissed by that Committee, and petitioner's innocence publicly vindicated; but his adversaries withheld his dues and profits, and overrated him for taxes, and again complained to the Committee charging him with breach of an agreement (which charge, if true, was triable at law), and the complaint being heard in the absence of petitioner's chief counsel, the Committee sequestered him from his living, of which he owned the advowson, and on which he had spent much money. The parishioners have broken open his house, seized his goods, and commenced several malicious suits against him; the Committee have, however, since testified to his fitness for the ministry, and given him leave to seek preferment notwithstanding his sequestration; he prays for a hearing before the House that his innocence may be vindicated, or that he may be restored to his living and its profits until the business can be determined. L. J., X. 460.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Committee for Plundered Ministers dismissing the first charge against Halke. 19 Nov. 1644.

2. Copy of order of same Committee permitting Halke to seek preferment notwithstanding his sequestration. 26 Nov. 1646.

3. Certificate of parishioners of Upminster that John Halke hath in life and conversation carried himself piously, and in his ministerial function preached the word of God powerfully and to edification, and also continually exhorted, in public and private, to stand for the Parliament, and to minister voluntary contribution accordingly.

4. Similar certificate of Ministers. 1 July 1648.

5. Petition of the parishioners of Upminster, in the county of Essex. Wearied with the misdemeanors and contentious practices of John Halke, their minister, they tried all peaceable means to be rid of him, which by his falsehood proved ineffectual; at length, on a full hearing, they procured an order of the Committee at Romford for his sequestration; he has now obtained a summons from the House against the present minister, and has, they hear, procured a certificate in his favour from ministers in the City, for none in his own neighbourhood would testify for him; they pray that the cause may be dismissed to prevent this vexatious man, after so many hearings, from further impoverishing them, as they would rather leave their dwellings than ever receive him again as their minister. (Undated.)

Aug. 28. Petition of Thomas Lord Cromwell, Baron of Owkham [Okeham], in the county of Rutland, to the House of Commons. Many months ago a petition presented by him was recommended from the House of Lords to the House of Commons, in which were set forth his great losses, and inability to make the second payment for his composition; this petition was read once, but a rumour being noised abroad that petitioner was dead the petition has slept ever since; he prays that the petition and himself may receive a new life, and that the House with compassionate eyes will look on him and it in his great and present misery. C. J., V. 688.

Aug. 29. Petition of Dr. Cornelius Burges, Lecturer in Paul's, London; by ordinance of the 23rd of April 1645 the House conferred upon him 400*l.* a year out of the revenues of the Church of Paul's, together with the house belonging to the late Dean; he prays for an order from both Houses of Parliament for the Solicitor-General to prepare the grant, and for the Commissioners to pass it under the Great Seal. Aug. 29. Draft ordinance for payment of 600*l.* to John Sleigh, late Mayor of Berwick. L. J., X. 475. In extenso.

Aug. 29. Petition of Isabella Baroness Dowager de La Warr. She has answered the petitions of the Earl of Lincoln, Lord Coleraine, and Drake, and prays that her privilege as a peeress may be continued to her, as she has endeavoured in vain, owing to the distractions of the times, to sell lands in Essex to satisfy her debts; she has also had heavy losses in Hampshire and Gloucestershire, several of her farmhouses having been burnt to the ground by the King's forces, so that she is not only unable to pay her debts but has not even a tolerable subsistence out of her own revenue. L. J., X. 475. The Journal breaks off abruptly in the middle of this petition.

Aug. 31. Petition of Samuel Withers, clerk. On the 8th instant the House granted an order for petitioner's institution and induction to the rectory of Wofton [Woughton-on-Green], Bucks; yet is he kept out of the living by Hugh Case and Peter Burches, the pretended assignee of the late sequestrator, who has procured an order from the Committee of the County directly contrary to the order of the House, on the strength of which Burches has officiated in the cure and received all the profits. Petitioner prays for an effectual order by which Major Shelbourne, or some other in command, may be enabled to remove Burches, that he and Case may be summoned to answer for their contempt, and the Committee for the County of Bucks forbidden to intermeddle further in the business. L. J., X. 476.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Arthur Annesley to the Lord Rotchfort. Prays that according to promise Lord Rotchfort would procure an order from the House directing the inhabitants of Wofton to keep their tithes in their hands until after Peter Burches has answered for his contempt. 8 Sept. 1648.

Aug. 31. Pass for Major Alexander Urry to go into Scotland. L. J., X. 476.

Aug. 31. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled; a petition from divers citizens to the Parliament, and a paper annexed thereto, has been brought to them, which they think it their duty to present as matter of high concernment; mention is therein made of some jealousies concerning the city of London, which they hope cannot be justly charged upon them, and from which they will be ready to vindicate themselves. L. J., X. 478. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of divers, well-affected ministers, citizens, and others of the city of London, and parts adjacent, praying for the consideration of the annexed paper of their humble desires for the allaying and removal of the jealousies and dis-contents, the visible causes of the present sad divisions and distractions. L. J., X. 479. In extenso.

2. Paper setting forth that the present great divisions and jealousies in this Kingdom, in reference both to church and State, among those that have been formerly united and engaged in the cause of the Parliament and Kingdom, have given great advantage to the malignant party to make their late insurrections, and to lay the foundation of a second war; and that the jealousies and discontents throughout the Kingdom are such as principally concern the Parliament, city, and army; jealousies of Parliament, because it is thought they do not really intend to settle church government according to the covenant, nor to execute justice upon delinquents, but to alter the fundamental government by King, Lords, and Commons, to govern the kingdom by perpetually maintaining an army, and that they have no real intentions of making a peace with the King; jealousies of the city, because they seem to recede from their former desires for peace, for reformation of religion, &c., and are less ready in discovering the plots of the malignant party, as is shown by the listing of horse and foot in the city, and the coming of one from the Scottish army to levy money upon the faith of the kingdom of Scotland, for the Scotch army invading England; jealousies of the army, because of their averseness to the settlement of religion, and countenancing of persons of unsound judgment, their intermeddling in transactions of State, and the suspicion that if they should be able to overcome the present insurrections raised against the State they would turn their success to the advancement of their own private power and ends; remedies are suggested for all these causes of complaint. L. J., X. 479. In extenso.

Aug. 31. Draft ordinance for paying the 50,000*l.* still due by agreement to the kingdom of Scotland, as follows, viz., 40,000*l.* for the navy, 7,000*l.* for furnishing the stores with powder and other ammunition, and 3,000*l.* for the forces of Lancashire. L. J., X. 480. In extenso.

Aug. 31. Copy of preceding.

Sept. 1. Petition of John Perchard, inhabitant of the Isle of Guernsey; several days have been appointed for the hearing of the cause concerning petitioner and John Rolland, but more weighty affairs have prevented the hearing; he prays that it may be appointed for a short and peremptory day as his counsel are going circuit. L. J., X. 481.

Sept. 1. Draft order to bestow 100*l.* on Captain James Pitson and 50*l.* upon James Noble who brought the particulars of the defeat of the Scots' army. L. J., X. 481. In extenso.

Sept. 1. Draft order to bestow 200*l.* on Major Smithson, who has done very good service, especially in the late defeat of the Scots, and to pay him immediately 300*l.* of his arrears. L. J., X. 482. In extenso.

Sept. 1. Draft order for payment of 450*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.* to Captain James Pitson, formerly Scoutmaster-General to the army under Sir William Waller. L. J., X. 483. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of James Pitson, Scoutmaster-General to the army under Sir William Waller, to the House of Commons; petitioner has been in the service of the Parliament since the war began, he has been plundered, was taken prisoner and laid in irons, and has never received one penny for his losses, and there are due to him for disbursements and arrears 450*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.*, he prays that this sum may be paid, and that his former sufferings and losses may be remembered, the better to enable him to do further service, as he is engaged for Ireland. Sept. 1. Pass for the Countess of Holland to go to her Lord, the Earl of Holland, in Warwick Castle, and back.

Sept. 2. Petition of Henry Ingram and others, officers and soldiers late under the command of Colonel Sir John Norwich; in July 1647 the articles exhibited by them against Sir John Norwich were referred to the Committee of accounts, but the Committee having done nothing therein, though it is confessed that Sir John Norwich has come short by 7,000*l.* in his accounts, and petitioners have tendered a surcharge of greater value, referred the business to the Committee of the soldiery, that the truth might not be made known; the petitioners pray that the Committee may again be excited to a speedy progression in the matter so that a real return may be made to the House. L. J., X. 482.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 3 August 1648.

2. Copy of order of the Committee of accounts referring the matter to the Committee of the soldiery. 20 July 1648.

Sept. 2. Petition of Ann Vannenden, widow; about seven months since, whilst she was attending the Committee for the County of Oxford to show her title to an estate in that county which had been sequestered, the chairman, Sir William Cobb, reviled her, called her counsel fools, and pressed the rest of the Committee to join in committing her to their Marshal, and when she produced the order of the House of Lords for her protection from restraint, Sir William Cobb laughed and jeered at it, saying that he was not to be squared out by Lords' orders, and so prevailed with the Committee to commit her; she prays that Sir William Cobb may be brought up in custody to answer for his contempt of their Lordships' order. L. J., X. 482.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Ann Vannenden in support of preceding. 30 Nov. 1647.

2. Similar affidavit of Edward Evans. 30 Nov. 1647.

3. Copy of order for protection of Mrs. Vannenden during the dependency of her cause. 13 July 1647.

4. Petition of Sir William Cobb; Mrs. Ann Vannenden, being convened before the Committee for Oxfordshire for misdemeanors of a high nature, was committed (according to ordinance of Parliament), she afterwards made her escape from imprisonment, and intends, as he is informed, to complain to the House against the proceedings of the Committee; he prays that whenever such complaint is made he may have convenient time to answer it, which he will be quite ready to do, and prays further that Mrs. Vannenden may be made responsible to answer what shall be charged against her. (Undated.)

Sept. 2. Order of the Committee at Derby House for the Lord Admiral's letter, and the papers enclosed therein, and the information of Mr. Pett, to be reported to the House. L. J., X. 483. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of examination of Wm. Kerby, of Rochester, taken by Peter Pett; that on Tuesday last he found some of the channels almost filled with drift wood which must have come from the fleet, and afterwards saw both the Earl of Warwick's and the Prince's fleet with their standards up. 31 Aug. 1648. J., X. 483. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the poor distressed inhabitants of the town of Great Faringdon and Westbrook, in the county of Berks, lately consumed by fire, to the House of Commons; a petition from them has been long depending in the House, in which they pray for relief out of the estates of those who kept the garrison, but these men are now either included in the Articles of Oxford or have fled, so that the petitioners can expect no relief in that way; they have been forced to press upon the inhabitants of the county for habitation and maintenance, who now on account of the dearth of corn can no longer relieve them, so that the petitioners are likely to starve, whilst it is miserable to see the multitudes of inhabitants and their children flocking in the streets of the bordering towns and villages without a house to put their heads in; petitioners' losses have been proved before the Judges, Justices, and Grand Inquest at Reading, as appears by their certificates; the petitioners therefore pray that they may be relieved "by brief" over all the counties, cities, islands, corporations, and towns in all England and Wales. See C. J., V. 693.

2. Petition of same to the judges and justices of the peace for the county of Berks, the petitioners state their material losses, and also that by the death of their late orthodox vicar they are destitute of food and aliment for their souls, and pray for relief. March 1646-7.

3. Copy of certificate of the able workmen appointed to estimate the damage done to the town and church of Faringdon, and the cost of repairing the same.

4. Copy of certificate of Judges and Justices in support of the petition. 13 March 1646-47.

5. Copy of similar certificate from the Grand Inquest at the general assizes holden at Reading 13 March 1646-7.

6. List of documents in support of the petition, the originals being in the hands of Sir Robert Pye, the elder.

Sept. 2. Draft order to bestow 50*l.* upon Mr. John Rushworth to buy him a brace of geldings for his good service in giving timely and constant notice of the proceedings of the Parliament forces. L. J., X. 485. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Draft order for a day of humiliation to seek for a blessing upon the treaty. L. J., X. 485. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Draft order respecting the payment of the 50,000*l.* appointed for the use of the navy. L. J., X. 485. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Copy of preceding.

Sept. 4. Draft pass for Peter Newton, Chief Gentleman Usher for Clement Kynnersley, chief officer of His Majesty's removing wardrobe, with wardrobe stuff and all other provisions for His Majesty, and the Commissioners for the treaty in the Isle of Wight, and for Mr. Henry Murray, with servants and horses, to pass freely and quietly from London to the Island. L. J., X. 486.

Sept. 4. Petition of Charles and John Moore, the orphans of Arthur Moore, son to the Lord Viscount Moore; they were left fatherless when one of them was four and the other but two years old, a few years before the rebellion in Ireland, by which they and their mother were despoiled of all their estate in the rebels quarters, while the rest has been wholly applied to the use of the army, so that petitioners and their mother have received nothing, and have been obliged for their subsistence and education to the charity of a friend, to whom they remain accountable, and who is now less able to help them; they therefore pray the Lords to recommend them to the House of Commons for some allowance. L. J., X. 486.

Sept. 4. Draft letter to the King, with the names of the Commissioners appointed to treat with him at Newport, dated the 2nd instant, but entered in extenso in the Journal this day. L. J., X. 486.

Sept. 4. Draft order for payment of 200*l.* to Colonel Eyles for the service of Hurst Castle. L. J., X. 487. In extenso.

Sept. 4. Draft order for payment of 2,010*l.* to Colonel Thomas Wayte for arrears, &c. L. J., X. 487. In extenso.

Sept. 4. Heads for the conference respecting the restoration of Tattershall Castle to the Earl of Lincoln. L. J., X. 487. In extenso.

Sept. 4. Petition of Solomon Smith, gent., Marshal of the Court of Admiralty; a petition of his is now in the House praying for relief in equity from the proceedings of Edward Davis, who complains against petitioner for selling goods under a warrant from the Court of Admiralty; a writ of error in the same matter is also before the House; prays that the writ may be retained until the House has leisure to hear and determine the cause in equity. Noted.—Read, nothing done.

Sept. 5. Doctor's certificate that the Earl of Cleveland is in such a state of health that he is in much need of fresh air and more exercise. L. J., X. 490.

Sept. 5. Draft order for 100*l.* to be bestowed upon Edward Evans, secretary to the Lord Grey. L. J., X. 490. In extenso.

Sept. 5. Order for payment of 200*l.* to Colonel Eyres for his services. L. J., X. 490. In extenso.

Sept. 5. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 5. Petition of Edward Herbert, son of the Lord Herbert of Cherbury, deceased; he prays that he may have the sole privilege and license for fourteen years of printing and publishing divers books written by his father, the manuscripts of which remain in his custody, amongst which are the history of Henry VIII., Poems, and a Tractate de veritate. L. J., X. 490.

Sept. 6. Petition of several tradesmen, creditors of the Duke of Buckingham and the late Lord Francis Villiers deceased; praying that they may have order for the payment of the debts due to them out of the estates of the said Duke and Lord. L. J., X. 491.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance to settle the militia for the county of Wilts. L. J., X. 491.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance for raising one hundred horse and three hundred foot in the county of Worcester, and a sum of money not exceeding 100*l.* a week for their maintenance. L. J., X. 491.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance for raising money in the county of Dorset for maintenance of the forces there. L. J., X. 492. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft order revoking the two orders of the 1st of January last concerning His Majesty's restraint in Carisbrook Castle. L. J., X. 492. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft order to continue the Lord Admiral's power of giving indemnity to the revolted mariners for forty days longer. L. J., X. 492. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance giving the Earl of Northumberland and the other Commissioners power to treat with the King upon the propositions formerly presented at Hampton Court, and such other propositions as shall be offered by His Majesty or Parliament. L. J., X. 492. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft order for payment of 300*l.* to Lieutenant-Colonel John Lilburne in part of his arrears. L. J., X. 493. In extenso.

[Sept. 6.] Petition of Richard Tredwell, Robert Jeffery, and Eliz. Wright, relict of John Wright, deceased, to the Committee for the affairs of Ireland; upon a former application for payment for arms supplied for use of the State in the province of Munster the Committee desired to know why the Earl of Inchiquin had not paid them out of moneys supplied him for providing arms, they now annex his answer and pray that it may be reported to the House of Commons, so that an order may be made for their payment. See C. J., VI. 8.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Lord Inchiquin, at Cork, to the Committee for Irish affairs; the sum voted for arms was insufficient for the purpose, and he therefore took up arms from the petitioners on the credit of the next supplies; it was only the necessity of the State's service, to which alone they were applied, that induced him so do, and he thinks that he therein did good service, but if he erred it was from earnest desire of promoting the service of the State. 10 Jan. 1646-7.

Sept. 8. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency, (L. J., X. 493), with certificates of delinquency annexed. The certificates are given in extenso in the Commons' Journal:—

Sept. 8. Petition of Henry Walker; prays that some approved person may be appointed licenser of printing in the place of Gilbert Mabbott, who has brought printing into disorder through his covetousness, as no reform can be expected whilst the licenser is himself a writer. L. J., X. 494.

Sept. 8. Petition of Wilks Fitchett, in answer to the petition of Mrs. Mary Kirke, wife of George Kirke, pursuant to an order of the 14th of July last; petitioner acknowledges that George Kirke deposited 100*l.* with him, but says that Kirke, not having demanded it before the City tumult, petitioner, in fear of the tumult, laid out the money upon fuel for the House, for which 890*l.* and upwards are due to him; he is ready to pay the money out of what is due to him, or to give security for so doing, and therefore prays that he may still have the protection of privilege of Parliament. L. J., X. 494.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 14 July 1648 for Fitchett to answer Mrs. Kirke's petition.

Sept. 8. Draft order to bestow 200*l.* upon Sir James Barry. L. J., X. 495. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Draft order for Colonel Jones, Governor of Dublin, to put Lady Anne Harcourt, relict of Sir Symon Harcourt, in possession of the lands settled upon the heirs of Sir Symon Harcourt by ordinance of Parliament. L. J., X. 495. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Draft order for payment of 500*l.* to Samuel Warcup. L. J., X. 495. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Draft order for payment forthwith of 174*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* to Sir Edward Dodsworth. L. J., X. 496. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Draft order for payment of 50*l.*, part of the arrears of Captain Lieutenant Edward Nicholson, deceased, to his widow, Dorothy Nicholson. L. J., X. 497. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Application for orders for institution and induction for Thomas Kaye to the rectory of Heath, in the county of Derby, and Roger Sanderson to the vicarage of Eyton [Eaton Bray?], in the county of Bedford. L. J., X. 497.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of ministers that Thomas Kaye is orthodox in his judgment, diligent in the work of the ministry, well affected to the Parliament, and of honest life and conversation.

2. Copy of certificate from the Assembly of Divines of the fitness of Roger Sanderson to be admitted to the Church of Gadsen [Gaddesden] Parva, Herts. 2 Nov. 1646.

Sept. 9. Petition of George Pitt; he has brought a writ of error to Parliament against Sir Gilbert Gerrard, and prays that the time for bringing up the record may be enlarged. L. J., X. 498.

Sept. 11. Draft order giving Mons. de Beleton leave to transport six horses into France custom and impost free. L. J., X. 498.

Sept. 11. Petition of Richard Burton, Master of Arts, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; in April last petitioner having been presented to the rectory of Kirke Deighton, in the West Riding of the county of York, by the University, applied to the House for institution, but was required to have the presentation amended, as it was directed to the Bishop (the University not yet having given any other precedent therein); but whilst this was being done Mr. Alexander Young misinformed the Commissioners of the Great Seal that the living had lapsed, and thereupon obtained a presentation from them, and an order for his institution from the House, but the patron's six months have not even yet lapsed, and the University have amended their presentation; petitioner therefore prays the House to reverse the order in favour of Young, in which not petitioner only but the whole University will acknowledge their Lordships' justice. L. J., X. 488.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate from the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, in favour of Burton. 1 Sept. 1648.

Sept. 11. Petition and answer of Marmaduke James, Minister of Upminster, in the county of Essex, touching the petition of John Halke, formerly minister of the parish; the matters suggested in Halke's petition have been already debated before the Committee for Plundered Ministers, and he has been sequestered after a full hearing; whilst an order of the 26th of Nov. 1646 permitting Halke to seek preferment elsewhere was soon after reversed; petitioner therefore prays that he may not be further troubled before their Lordships, and that Halke may be dealt with according to justice for his strange presumption and unjust misinformation of this High Court. L. J., X. 498. See above, 26 Aug.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Committee for Plundered Ministers, sequestering Halke from Upminster for deceitful and unfaithful practices and for profaning the Lord's Day. 12 Oct. 1646.
2. Copy of order of the same Committee appointing Marmaduke James to officiate the cure in the place of Halke. 15 Oct. 1646.
3. Copy of order of the same Committee annulling their order of 26 Nov. 1646, which permitted Halke to seek preferment elsewhere. 20 July 1647.

[Sept. 11.] Answer of Jasper Mayne to the petition of Joel Barnard; he hopes to be excused for not having put in his answer sooner, as he was in entire ignorance of any order for him so to do; he was presented to the vicarage of Pirton by Christ Church College, Oxford, whose right of donation has never till now been disputed, being one of the livings bestowed upon the College by King Henry the Eighth to be conferred upon some member of that House, and not upon a stranger, which Mr. Joel Barnard is; though well assured of his title, Dr. Mayne, to deliver himself from further vexation, has frequently offered to submit to arbitration or to a trial by consent at the common law, but Mr. Barnard has constantly refused his offers; Dr. Mayne presents a testimonial from the inhabitants of Pirton, who well know that Joel Barnard contested the title of Dr. Morris, the late incumbent, but at length, convinced of the weakness and illegality of his own title, allowed his claim to drop; Dr. Mayne lastly prays that if he has not fully satisfied the House he may have further time to do so, when he doubts not to give full satisfaction. See L. J., X. 445. Noted. The petition was withdrawn after the petitioner saw this answer.

Annexed:—

1. Testimonial from the parishioners of Pirton in favour of Dr. Mayne, and desiring that he may be continued amongst them in his just and rightful possession.

Sept. 13. Petition of John St. John; prays that a trial at law by which John Chamberlaine claims certain land assigned by petitioner to Sir Richard Halford, only to secure him from payment of 1,000*l.* for which he was jointly bound with petitioner, may be stayed until the matter has come before the Committee of Indemnity. L. J., X. 499.

Wm. and Charles Salesbury.	Sir Wm. Ingleby.
Richard Marshall.	Sir Peter Richaut.
John Boys.	William Cartwright.
Peter Leicester.	Arthur Heveningham.
Sir Henry Clarke.	Edward Palfreyman.
Wm. Helyar.	John Johnson.

Sept. 13. Petition of Sergeant-Major Andrew Pawlett; though many hundred pounds are due to him for arrears he is in such want that he is not certain of a morsel of bread or of a shelter for his wife and family; he prays that 300*l.* may be paid him, whereby his friends who have assisted him may be repaid, his credit redeemed, his distressed wife and children relieved, and his life prolonged to do the Parliament further service; he prays further that his accounts may be audited according to the first allowance before the establishment of the Lord General's army. L. J., X. 500.

Annexed:—

1. Account of sums due to petitioner for himself and his inferior officers, amounting in all to 805*l.* 7*s.*

Sept. 13. Order for payment of 6,000*l.* for defraying the expenses of the King and his household during the treaty. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 13. Order for payment of 3,000*l.* for defraying the expenses of the Committees nominated to treat during the treaty. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 13. Draft ordinance for a collection in aid of the parish of Plaxtole, Kent, for building a church there. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Order for payment of 500*l.* to Sir Edward Sydnam and others for providing of coaches, horses, footmen's liveries, and other provisions out of the money intended to supply the occasions of the treaty. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 13. Order for payment of 500*l.* for providing linen and other necessary accommodations for the treaty. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 13. Draft order for payment of 300*l.* to Lady Joane Countess of Kildare, part of the arrears due to her husband. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft order that the 700*l.* formerly ordered to be paid to the Lady Joane Countess of Kildare be made 1,000*l.*, and be forthwith paid her on her husband's account. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft order for payment of 20*l.* to William Ripley. L. J., X. 500. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft order for payment of 40*l.* to Gilbert Mabbott, agent for the Lord General Fairfax, for his good service in bringing up the articles for the surrender of Colchester, &c. L. J., X. 501. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft order for payment of all arrears due to Captain Thomas Evans and others out of such papists' and delinquents' estates as they shall discover. L. J., X. 501. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft ordinance for the effectual execution of the ordinance of the 5th of Jan. 1645-6 for payment of Mr. Pim's debts, and for providing for his children. L. J., X. 501. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft letter from both Houses of Parliament to the King that they cannot grant the safe conducts with blanks desired by His Majesty to be sent by him to Scotland. L. J., X. 501. In extenso.

Sept. 19. Petition of inhabitants of the chapelries in the parish of Prestbury, in the county of Chester, to the Lords and Commons; there are nine chapelries in the parish that are in great want of some additional means for supporting the ministry, having none other than voluntary subscriptions; the petitioners pray that the Committee at Goldsmith's Hall may be empowered to purchase from Thomas Legh, Esq., an impropriation of about 60*l.* per annum which lies within the parish, and to abate the value out of the fine laid upon him for his composition, part of which is yet unpaid. C. J., VI. 22. See L. J., X. 130.

Sept. 19. Draft order for Mr. Blackwell to be discharged from the penalty for not proceeding in his purchase of the Manor of Lambeth Wyke alias WyCourt. C. J., VI. 23. In extenso.

Sept. 19. Letter from Colonel George Monck, at Knockfergus [Carrickfergus], to the Speaker of the House of Commons. Parliament having declared all such as assisted in the late expedition under Duke Hamilton to be proceeded against as enemies, and it appearing by several evidences that General Major Robert Munro assisted in sending over forces that were in the Scots army, and that he endeavoured to make a party here against the Parliament, and the writer, having received orders from the Committee at Derby House for the demanding of the garrison of Belfast (the rendition whereof Munro not only refused, but endeavoured to maintain the same against the Parliament), determined to attempt the gaining of the Port Towns of Belfast and Knockfergus, and the removing of the person of General Major Munro. Wherefore, with the assistance of such officers of both nations as were nearest and of known fidelity, he successfully surprised the town and castle of Knockfergus and took Munro and the whole garrison prisoners upon the 16th of this instant; and upon the same morning after this work was done Major Rawdon marched to Belfast about eight miles distant and entered the town without the knowledge of any except the Governor, Colonel Maxwell, who had given his private consent thereunto, so that it pleased God to possess the Parliament of both those garrisons in one morning without loss of blood, wherefore to His name be the only praise. Considering the danger it would be for General Major Monro to remain in Ireland, the writer has sent him over with Captain Brugh to be disposed of as to the wisdom and justice of Parliament shall seem meet. The proofs of these and other charges against Monro are preparing and will be transmitted by the next passage. This letter was read in the House of Commons on the 2nd of October 1648, and General Major Monro was committed to the Tower for high treason. C. J., VI. 41.

Sept. 20. Draft ordinance to clear Sir Henry Spiller of his delinquency. C. J., VI. 24.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of his delinquency. C. J., VI. 24. In extenso.

2. Petition of Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery; he hears that the composition for Sir Henry Spiller's delinquency, after having laid quiet for about twelve months, has lately been revived and has passed the House of Commons, and if it should pass the House of Lords without the petitioner being heard, he may be very much prejudiced in a cause between him and the Knight; petitioner, whose personal attendance is required upon the weighty matters allotted to him by Parliament (the Earl was one of the Commissioners appointed to treat with the King), prays that the proceedings upon Sir Henry Spiller's composition may be respited. (Undated.)

Sept. 21. Petition of Sir William Cobb; he has been sent for in custody to answer the matters alleged against him in the petition of Mrs. Vannenden, matters untrue and maliciously prosecuted by persons indicted for felony; he prays that in consideration of his attendance being required for the public service, and of his age and disability of body, he may be discharged from custody, and some speedy day fixed for hearing the matter. L. J., X. 503.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Timothy Ogle, that though present at all the proceedings against Mrs. Vannenden he never heard Sir Wm. Cobb use any words disparaging the orders of the House of Lords, &c. 18 Sept.

Sept. 21. Petition of Thomas Sewell, late an inhabitant of the city of Carlisle; prays that the Commissioners of the Great Seal may be ordered to pass him a grant of the customer's place of that city, which has been conferred upon him by the Committee for the Navy, as he has been a great sufferer by the Scots and the Cavaliers. L. J., X. 503.

Sept. 21. Petition of Katherine Scott, wife of Edward Scott; when petitioner married her husband Edward Scott, son of Sir Edward Scott, late of Scots Hall, Kent, 145*l.* per annum was secured upon her by deed and 100*l.* per annum more by promise, neither of which sums having for divers years been paid she was forced to go to her father, then at Oxford, to intreat him to supply her wants, but when she wished to return to her husband all her messages were by the evil counsels of some persons about him rejected; and on her coming in person in hope of a better welcome she was not only not admitted to her husband, but was also charged with horrid untruths; petitioner thereupon hoping to content her husband retired to her jointure-house, resolved to lead a private life, whence however she has been forcibly driven, to the danger of her life, by persons pretending authority from her husband, who gave public notice that no one should trust her for a penny; petitioner has received nothing from her husband for seven years past, and would have had nothing but for the support of her father and mother, and this now failing she prays the House to order her husband to receive her again, or else to pay the arrears due to her, and a further yearly maintenance proportionable to his estate. L. J., X. 503.

Sept. 21. Draft ordinance for borrowing 10,000*l.* from the city of London, and for securing the repayment thereof. L. J., X. 503. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft ordinance for the better clearing of one other ordinance of the 14th of April 1648, enabling the contractors named in the ordinance of the 16th of November 1646, for sale of the lands of the late Archbishops and Bishops, to purchase and have lands conveyed to them in lieu of and towards their salaries expressed and allowed in several ordinances of Parliament. L. J., X. 504. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft letter from the Parliament to the King, enclosing the annexed resolutions. L. J., X. 505. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft resolutions that a safe conduct be granted to Sir James Carmichael, but not to Lord Carnegie or to Sir Alexander Gibson. L. J., X. 503. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft order for payment of interest on certain sums of money advanced for the army. L. J., X. 505. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft ordinance for raising 100*l.* a week in Herefordshire for maintenance of one troop of horse and four companies of foot. L. J., X. 505. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft ordinance appointing Thomas Falconberge to receive the portion yet unpaid of the 10,000*l.* to be lent by the city of London. L. J., X. 506. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft order for payment of 700*l.* to Captain Wilkinson for his losses, and charge in raising horse and foot for the service of Parliament. L. J., X. 506. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft order for payment of 200*l.* to Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Allen. L. J., X. 506. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft order to take off the sequestration of the estate of Walter Grosvenor. L. J., X. 506. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that John Witham has been approved for the cure of Bentley Parva, Essex. L. J., X. 506.

Sept. 21. Memoranda respecting the presentation of Robert Bennet, household chaplain to Lord Wharton, to the rectory of Waddesdon, Bucks. (Two papers). L. J., X. 506.

Sept. 22. Petition of the inhabitants in and about Long Acre, in the parish of Martin in the Fields and Covent Garden; the petitioners complain that John Barley has enclosed a small plot of ground at the lower end of Mercers' Street in Long Acre, upon which as yet there was never any building, and has set up a brew-house, whereby as well divers honourable personages and gentlemen of quality, as the neighbours dwelling thereabouts in general will be much prejudiced in their health and substance by the continual stench and annoyance of the sea-coal smoke and unwholesome vapours occasioned thereby; petitioners pray that order may be given to stay further building. L. J., X. 506.

Sept. 22. Petition of Philip Prichard; petitioner when Under Sheriff of the county palatine of Chester was commanded by his High Sheriff to order the constable of Chester to keep Thomas Ratcliffe prisoner until further order; for which Ratcliffe, out of vexatious intent and taking advantage of these distracted times, has brought an action for false imprisonment against petitioner, laying the damages at 1,000*l.*, without prosecuting the High Sheriff or constable; petitioner, who for many years has been and now is a menial servant to a peer, prays that further proceedings against him at law may be stayed until the matter may be heard by their Lordships. L. J., X. 507.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Philip Prichard in support of his petition.

[Sept. 22.] Petition of John Halke, minister of God's word; prays that a short day may be appointed for hearing the case concerning his claim to the rectory of Upminster, Essex. L. J., X. 507.

Sept. 22. Draft ordinance to continue Thomas Foot and others as Commissioners of Excise. L. J., X. 507. In extenso.

Sept. 22. Draft order for payment of 2,000*l.* to Penelope Lady Brooke out of the estate of Sir Edward Bishop. L. J., X. 507. In extenso.

Sept. 22. Petition of Anthony Sterling to the Earl of Manchester; petitioner has lain in prison almost a quarter of a year, and nothing now stays him but want of an order upon Baron Atkyn's report, the clerks are ready with all things expecting when the Lords will make an order upon the report, and one word from his Lordship will do it presently.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of a petition of Sterling to the House of Lords.

Sept. 22. Report of Mr. Baron Atkyns in the matter. L. J., X. 508, 510. In extenso.

Sept. 23. Petition of John Dillingham; upon reading a former petition the House ordered that none but petitioner should use the title of "Moderate Intelligencer," yet notwithstanding a book railing against the King and Parliament passes under that title, one word only being left out, which is a great dishonour to Parliament, and a great prejudice to petitioner, who is on account of the title supposed to be the author, and threatened therefore by some to be killed, by others to be beaten;

Sept. 23. Draft order to secure pardon to all persons who may have been in part guilty of the transporting, melting, clipping, or washing coin upon their making discovery of other persons concerned in the same. L. J., X. 510. In extenso.

Sept. 25. Petition of Mary, daughter of John Earl of Lauderdale, Lord Maitland, in the kingdom of Scotland; petitioner complains that the furniture of her grandmother Mary Countess of Hum., in her houses in Aldersgate Street, left to petitioner's mother for life, with remainder to petitioner, has for some delinquency imputed to petitioner's father been ordered to be sold, and has already been inventoried. She prays that the sale may be forborne until she had been heard, and her right to the furniture determined. L. J., X. 511.

Sept. 25. Petition of Captain Henry Worth; he has served Parliament since the eruptions until the disbanding of Colonel Sanderson's regiment, for which he is much in arrear of pay, while he has exhausted his whole estate, and his wife and children are reduced to want and misery; petitioner has been arrested by Richard Briggs, a brewer, for a small debt of about 5*l.*, and cast into the prison of the Marshalsea, where he has lain about ten days to his utter ruin; he prays the House, to order his release without payment of fees as he has no subsistence left, and is most willing to pay his debt out of the first arrears he shall receive. L. J., X. 511.

Sept. 25. Petition of Dedier Foucalt. Two ships, the "Pearl Hoy" and "Box Tree," were sold to petitioner under an order of the House of the 22nd of March 1647-8, made in the cause between Wm. Allen and Hans Baker; but the ships have been arrested by Captain Maynard, who pretends a title to them from Allen, to the great damage of petitioner, who was intending to make a voyage with one of them. Petitioner prays that his ship may be freed from arrest. L. J., X. 511.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 22 March 1647-8.

Sept. 25. Draft order for printing the shorter catechism. L. J., X. 511. In extenso.

Sept. 25. Draft of additional ordinance for the better raising of the yearly sum of 8,000*l.* for the support of His Highness Charles Lodowick, Prince Elector, Count Palatine of the Rhine. L. J., X. 511. In extenso.

Sept. 26. Pass for Mr. Simpcutt, with his servants and horses, to go into the Isle of Wight and to return. L. J., X. 512.

Sept. 26. Petition of the Grand Inquest, the representative body of the county of Herts, at their general assizes holden the 19th of Sept. 1648. This petition is addressed to His Majesty's Judges of Assize for the county, and was brought before the House on the 26th by Judge Bacon. The petitioners represent that the county has been extremely burthened for some years past with taxes for the maintenance of the army, and other taxes, far above their proportion as compared with other counties, by which their estates are much disabled, and they unable to continue the ready assistance they have hitherto contributed. The petitioners pray the judges to recommend their case to the consideration of the Houses of Parliament, that upon due examination of the inequality of the imposition, the proportions may be more equally laid upon the several counties. L. J., X. 512.

Sept. 26. Petition of Christopher Duckett and Alice his wife, defendants in a writ of error brought by Thomas Boone and others, praying that a short day may be appointed for the hearing.

Sept. 26. Order for the hearing of the cause. L. J., X. 512.

Sept. 26. Petition of Edmund Bishopp, defendant in a writ of error brought by Sir Lewis Kirke, praying that a short day may be appointed for the hearing. L. J., X. 512.

Sept. 26. Draft ordinance to discharge the accounts of Commissioners of Excise for the year ending the 29th of September 1646. L. J., X. 514. In extenso.

Sept. 28. Petition and answer of Marmaduke James, Minister of Upminster, in the county of Essex, touching the petition exhibited by John Halke, clerk. Petitioner thought that he had satisfied the House of his claim to the living by the production of the orders of the Committee for Plundered Ministers, and it was only on Tuesday night last that he heard of the order to appear before the House this present Thursday; he was therefore obliged to travel to London yesterday, being the fast, leaving the flock to his and their great grief, unprovided, and now that he is come he understands that his chief counsel is absent on circuit. Petitioner has been requested by the justices for the county to preach at Chelmsford on Tuesday morning next before the quarter sessions begin, and is therefore obliged to return into the country. The presence also of most of the inhabitants of the parish is required to prove the article against Halke, which cannot be without great damage to them at this seasonable time of harvest after the long unseasonable weather; petitioner therefore prays that either the suit may be dismissed or a convenient time after harvest appointed for further satisfying the House in the matter. L. J., X. 515.

Sept. 28. Draft order that no proposition should be held binding if the treaty for a peace should be broken off. L. J., X. 515. In extenso.

Sept. 28. Copy of preceding.

Sept. 28. Draft pass for Sir James Carmichael to go to the King in the Isle of Wight. L. J., X. 515. In extenso.

Sept. 28. Draft ordinance for a further sum of 120*l.* per week to be added to the allowance for the relief of sick and maimed soldiers and widows. L. J., X. 516. In extenso.

Sept. 28. Draft order for a pass to be granted to Sir James Carmichael to attend the King, &c. L. J., X. 516. In extenso.

Sept. 30. Answer of Sir Wm. Cobb, Knight, to the petition and complaint of Anne Vannenden, widow. He details the circumstances which led to her arrest; absolutely denies having treated any order of the House of Lords with contempt, having ever served the Parliament with zeal, and yielded ready obedience to the orders of both Houses during all these times of distraction, and therefore hopes that the petition and affidavits of persons who are indicted for felony, who have been found guilty by a grand jury and have fled from the judgment of the law, will have little credit or esteem against him. L. J., X. 521.

Sept. 30. Petition of James Duke of Richmond and Lenox. Prays that his fine may be abated in consideration of his loss of the office of Constable of Dover Castle, Chancellor, Admiral and Warden of the Cinque Ports, in which he has a freehold estate. L. J., X. 522. In extenso.

Sept. 30. Draft order that a conference should be had with the House of Commons upon the preceding petition. L. J., X. 521. In extenso.

Oct. 2. Petition of Isabella Baroness Dowager De la Warr. Prays that the orders made in her cause against Lord Coleraine may be left in full force until she can find a possibility of selling her land to satisfy his Lordship and all her other creditors. L. J., X. 525.

Oct. 2. Draft order for Benjamin Norton and Edward Horsman to be added to the Committee for Rutland. L. J., X. 526. In extenso.

Oct. 2. Order appointing trustees of the estate of Clement Paston. L. J., X. 526. In extenso.

Oct. 2. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 2. Draft order for freeing part of Clement Paston's estate from sequestration. L. J., X. 527. In extenso.

Oct. 2. Petition of George Morgan, one of the defendants to the Bill of Complaint in Chancery of Sir Stephen Scott. Complains that their Lordships dismissed his petition without hearing anything of the merits of the cause, and that he is therefore left without any relief. He prays that an order may be made in accordance with the annexed propositions, or that he may be admitted to his bill of review.

Annexed:—

1. Propositions referred to in preceding.

2. Copy of agreement entered into by Edmund Scott, Stephen Scott, and George Morgan. 16 August 1620.

3. Copy of order dismissing Morgan's petition. 7 Jan. 1647-8.

Oct. 3. Draft ordinance to dispose of impropriations lately belonging to the Bishops, &c. L. J., X. 528. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Petition of Edward Herbert, Esq., son of Edward Lord Herbert of Cherbury, deceased. Notwithstanding their Lordships' order of the 5th of Sept.

last, Whitaker presumes to proceed with the printing of Lord Herbert's History of Henry VIII.; petitioner prays that Whitaker may be sent for to answer his contempt, and that his presses may be seized. L. J., X. 529.

Oct. 4. Draft resolutions approving of the conduct of Colonel George Monck, and appointing him Governor of Carrickfergus, &c. L. J., X. 529. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Draft order for payment of 200*l*. to Captain Brugh, who brought General Major Munro from Ireland. L. J., X. 529. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Draft order for the Lieutenant of the Tower to deliver Lord Inchiquin's son to Lieutenant-Colonel Beecher, who is appointed to carry him to Ireland and exchange him for certain prisoners. L. J., X. 529. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Draft order for the appointment of a Council of War for the trial of soldiers in the County of York. L. J., X. 529. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Petition of Lady Inyce Blundell and Christopher Rotherham. The late Lord Ranelagh, Lord President of Connaught, became indebted to petitioners by bonds under his hand and seal, but his estate being all destroyed by the rebellion he was unable to satisfy them. There are several arrears due to his Lordship as Colonel of Foot, Captain of Horse, and Constable of the Castle of Athlone, and for the maintenance of thirty wardens there at his own charge, which arrears have been assigned to petitioners. Petitioners pray that the Committee for Irish affairs may be ordered to compute the several arrears, and to take some speedy course for their satisfaction. L. J., X. 529.

Oct. 4. Letter from Colonel Michael Jones, at Dublin, to the Earl of Manchester. The writer has lately returned from the enemies' quarters, where he has taken their two main strengths in these parts, the strong fort of Ballisonaw and the Island of Allen, with some other considerable pieces. His next work will be to destroy all belonging to the enemy, which until now could not be done, neither is the time yet fully serving thereunto, most of their corn not yet being made up, and not till then to be destroyed. In this necessary spoil of corn will be taken from him all means of subsistence other than what must be elsewhere acquired, which would be of timely consideration, that thereby no obstruction be to the service, and that the contracts to be made may be to the State's best advantage. As for money there has not been so much as one penny in the Treasury for a whole month past, which must be a main stop to the service if not speedily supplied. "Whereunto is added the weakness of this your army, short in men and horse, and that in this time of greatest action, wherein with competent supplies may be done very much to the destruction of the enemy and settling of your interests here; whereunto yet I shall not be wanting as far as may be possibly be done by this handfull."

Oct. 5. Petition of Sarah, daughter of Benjamin Crokey, deceased. Prays that John and Mary Smith, executors of John Smith, and others, may be ordered to answer her complaint respecting the pretended purchase of certain lands belonging to the Free School at Wotton-under-edge, Gloucestershire, L. J., X. 529.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Benjamin Crokey, of Bristol, merchant, and Sarah his daughter. Many years ago John Smith and others (since deceased) suppressed a school at Wotton-under-edge, Gloucestershire, of which petitioner was a tenant, and appropriated the endowments; in 1621 and 1641 petitioner attempted to bring them to justice, and obtained several orders of Parliament in the matter, but by the evil practices of Smith and others he has been defamed, imprisoned, and impoverished; prays for redress. (Undated.)

Oct. 5. Petition of Anne Lady Lauderdale, Mary Maitland, her daughter, Lady Theodosia Dudley, Robert English, and Bridget Webb. Pray that certain goods seized for the delinquency of John Earl of Lauderdale may not be removed out of a house in London until petitioners have been heard with respect to their rights to the same. L. J., X. 529.

Oct. 5. Petition of Thomas Whitaker, citizen and stationer of London. In answer to the charge against him of printing the History of Henry VIII. by the late Lord Herbert of Chesham, he states that the copy which he prints was given to him by Lord Herbert to the end he should print it after that Lord's decease. After Lord Herbert's death, according to the ordinance of Parliament and the ancient custom of the Company of Stationers, he caused the book to be licensed and entered in the Hall book of the Company before any order of their Lordships was procured to the contrary. Prays that he may be allowed quietly to enjoy his said copy and to proceed with the printing thereof. L. J., X. 530.

Oct. 5. Draft ordinance to clear John Smith of his delinquency. L. J., X. 530.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of his delinquency.

Oct. 6. Petition of Major Herbert Blanchard. The sum of 400*l*. is due to him for his arrears, and he is now fallen upon by his creditors, and has been cast into Newgate by Simon Hawkins for a debt under 10*l*. Prays for his discharge, he being willing to assign a greater sum out of his arrears than will satisfy the debt. L. J., X. 530.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Committee of the House of Commons for Reformados for the payment of 100*l*. 16*s*., being six months' reformado pay to Major Blanchard. 20 Feb. 1644-5.

2. Certificate of Sir William Balfour that Major Blanchard commanded a troop of horse under his late Excellency the Earl of Essex. 21 March 1647-8.

3. Certificate of the Earl of Stamford that Major Blanchard had command of a company of dragoons in the year 1642 under Colonel Chudleigh. 1 July 1648.

Oct. 6. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency, L. J., X. 530, with certificates of delinquency annexed. The certificates are given in extenso in the Commons' Journal:—

Gilbert and John Atkin-son.	Richard Spencer.
William Sleaford.	Sir Gervase Scroope and
Edward Standish.	Adrian Scroope.
Roger Mostyn.	Sir Thomas Wolrich.
Peter Ball.	Tobyas Lawe.
David Walter.	William Booth.
	John Hoskins.

Oct. 6. Petition of Captain Henry Bell. Nearly eight years since the King sent petitioner's complaint to their Lordships by the Lord Privy Seal, with a certificate that it should be speedily heard, that his great complaint against the Council Board and his other sufferings should not be brought in public before the House of Commons. In relation thereto petitioner has had ten orders for the hearing of his cause, but it has not yet been heard, whereby his two children have been lamentably starved to death, and he himself by the extreme misery heaped upon him is in the same condition to follow his starved wife and children to the dust. Prays that a certain and present day may be appointed for hearing his complaint, or that the matter may be referred to the House of Commons. L. J., X. 531.

Oct. 6. Draft ordinance to continue the assessments for the army. L. J., X. 531. In extenso.

Oct. 6. Certificate of Presbyters of the first Classis of the Province of London, that they have examined, approved, and ordained John Price, upon his presentation to the rectory of Mavesyn Ridware, in the county of Stafford, presbyter, in the form and manner ordained by Parliament for ordination of ministers. L. J., X. 531.

Oct. 6. Testimonial in favour of George White for the rectory of Llanvihangelysternllewern, in the county of Monmouth. L. J., X. 531.

Oct. 7. Petition of Richard Shute, of London, merchant; petitioner assured a ship called the "Peter" of London to the amount of 200*l*. in the same policy with other merchants who assured it for other sums. The ship having sustained much loss, the damage was estimated at 50 per cent., at which rate petitioner long since gave satisfaction for the moneys assured by him, and so was discharged of his engagement. The other assurers stood out and have not yet given satisfaction for the sums assured by them, and the Commissioners for causes of assurance being moved by false information endeavour to make petitioner liable for part of the other assurers' loss, and to make void his release contrary to equity and justice and against any precedent ever used, whereof they were told by the register who has been thirty-five years an officer of the court. Prays that the Commissioners and deputy register of the Court may be ordered to forbear any proceedings against him until the matter be heard by their lordships. L. J., X. 532.

Oct. 7. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., X. 532), with certificates

Oct. 9. Petition of Anne Countess Lauderdale, Mary Maitland, her daughter, Theodosia Lady Dudley, Robert English, and Bridget Webb. Complain that Richard Cole refused to see or give obedience to their Lordships' order of the 5th instant, and pray that he may be sent for to answer his contempt. L. J., X. 533.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. L. J., X. 534.

In extenso.

2. Copy of order of 5th Oct. referred to in petition.

Oct. 9. Petition of Richard Eyre. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his writ of error against Benson and Browne. L. J., X. 533.

Oct. 9. Petition of Isabella Baroness Dowager [De] La Warr. Petitioner received an order to bring counsel to plead the business between her and Lord Coleraine, which order since appears to be a mistake, the order being only that the point of privilege in the case of dowagers should be pleaded, and forasmuch as after diligent search she cannot find out any counsel to whom she can rely for a business of that consequence to herself and others, she prays that time may be granted her until the middle of the term, when her own counsel will attend, in order that a cause of so great concernment may not be betrayed for want of an advocate. L. J., X. 533.

Oct. 10. Petition of Theodosia Garrett, widow, daughter of John Stepkin, and late wife of George Garrett, deceased, second son of Sir George Garrett, Alderman of London. Complains that Sir George Garrett refuses to settle a certain sum of money upon her and her son, which he had promised to do before the death of her husband. Prays that he may be sent for to answer. L. J., X. 534.

Oct. 10. Order for the Gentlemen Usher to attach the body of Richard Cole for his contempt in disobeying an order of their Lordships. L. J., X. 534.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavits of John Smallman and John Foulke that Cole refused to obey the order for staying the removal and disposal of the goods seized in the house of John Earl of Lauderdale. L. J., X. 535. In extenso.

Oct. 10. Answer of Henry Wollaston, Master Keeper of Newgate, to the articles exhibited against him by Thomas Blackmoore [Blakemer] and Richard Paris (vide 17 Aug. 1648). Denies the whole of the charges made against him. He never connived at the escape of prisoners, and when any did escape took every means in his power and expended much money in their recapture. Denies that he ever allowed mass to be said in the prison, but on the contrary caused a little stone table which stood in the Justice Hall where the recusants are imprisoned to be removed, because the same had formerly been used by several Popish priests for an altar in the saying of mass, he also caused some Popish inscriptions over the table to be put out and written over. He details the circumstances attending the escape of certain prisoners, and the means taken for their recapture. Denies that he ever defrauded the prisoners of any legacies, charitable gifts, or benevolences, or that he suffered any prisoners to be starved; when their allowance failed he allowed them to hang out bags to receive the charity of people, which was better than their weekly allowance, and he has disbursed out of his own purse more than 400*l.* for bread and other necessities for the relief of the poor prisoners since he has been Master Keeper. The reason the coroner did not view the bodies of certain prisoners who died was that the plague was in the gaol, and the coroner refused to view the bodies because he could not get a jury to go into the prison, but when the plague is not in the prison every prisoner that dies is duly viewed by the coroner. L. J., X. 535.

Oct. 10. Draft report of the Committee upon Anthony Hungerford's ordinance of Composition. L. J., X. 535.

Oct. 10. Petition of Sir Thomas Peyton, prisoner in Windsor Castle, to the House of Commons. Prays that he may be discharged upon bail to prosecute his composition with the Committee of Kent. C. J., VI. 49.

Oct. 10. Draft ordinance for payment of arrears due to officers who served under the late Lord Fairfax. L. J., X. 535. In extenso.

Oct. 10. Petition of Joseph Murdock, merchant, to Edward Earl of Manchester. Petitioner lately came out of Ireland, where he has divers goods, and since his coming there is a stop of shipping for Munster. Prays the Earl to procure him a pass from the House of Peers to freight a small barque with merchantable goods that he may then return with his property, he not carrying any implements of war in prejudice of the Parliament's forces.

Oct. 11. Petition of Mary Secker, of the City of York, widow. About two years since Captain Francis Swayne, of York, became bound to petitioner for payment of 60*l.*; she impleaded in the Court of York for payment of the bond, but the proceedings are stayed by an order of their Lordships, whereby Captain Swayne is privileged. Petitioner prays that the order may be reversed, and that she may be allowed to prosecute her suit according to law. L. J., X. 536.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 13 Mar. 1646-7.

Oct. 11. Petition of Edward Scott, of Scotts Hall, Kent. Prays that further time may be granted to him to answer the petition of his wife Katherine Scott. L. J., X. 536.

Oct. 11. Information of Robert De Luke concerning the Governor of Tattershall Castle. L. J., X. 541. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Nicholas Levett has been approved for the rectory of Wiggoholt-cum-Greatham, Sussex.

Oct. 11. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Wm. Ambrose has been approved for the rectory of Farmborough, Somerset.

Oct. 12. Petition of Sir Lewis Kirke; at the instance of the defendant this day was fixed, as appears by the annexed order of 26 Sept. last, for the hearing of the writ of error depending between petitioner and Edmond Bishop; petitioner has prepared for the hearing, but the defendant, as it seems, is endeavouring to delay it; petitioner prays that Monday or Tuesday next may be fixed for the hearing. L. J., X. 542.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 26 Sept. 1648 mentioned in preceding.

Oct. 12. Petition of Samuel Carleton, Lieutenant-Colonel. Their Lordships were pleased, upon the 29th of April 1645, to afford petitioner protection against all suits and actions for debt until his arrears were paid. Notwithstanding this protection, and that he has in addition offered his creditors all his estate, his arrears and all that he has upon public faith, and to sell his wife's jointure and his lands of heritage, he is threatened to be arrested, so that he cannot with safety render his service to the Parliament. Prays that his protection may be continued, that he may not be left to the cruelty of those who, for his faithful service to the Parliament, desire to have him end his days in prison, to the utter ruin of himself and family. L. J., X. 543.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding. (Undated.)

2. Order of 29th April 1645 granting him protection.

Oct. 12. Petition of Captain Henry Bell. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his cause against Oct. 13. Order appointing Colonel Algernon Sydney Governor of Dover Castle. L. J., X. 546. In extenso.

Oct. 16. Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled. Pray that the impropriations of the late Archbishops and Bishops, the houses or lands now or late belonging to Deans, Chapters, and Prebends within the Province of London, and the rents and revenues thereof, may be settled for an augmentation of maintenance for the ministry of the Province. L. J., X. 545.

Oct. 16. Petition of Thomas Symes that a day may be appointed for hearing his writ of error against John Gregory and others. L. J., X. 545.

Oct. 16. Petition of Nicholas Folkingham, clerk. Some time since petitioner left South Weald, Essex, a living which had been bestowed upon him, when sequestered from Dr. Samuel Baker. Since which time the parishioners have much disagreed about the election of another, by means whereof petitioner has been put to many expenses, and stands engaged to other ministers who supplied the place during this disagreement. The sum of 200*l.* at least is due to petitioner from the parishioners, and he prays that some order may be made for his relief. L. J., X. 545.

Oct. 16. Letter from the Earl of Warwick, aboard the St. George, to the Earl of Manchester. A business is depending in the House of Peers concerning Mr. Salomon Smith, an officer of the Admiralty, about a verdict of 400*l.* obtained against him at common law, at the suit of Mr. Davis, for executing a decree under the seal of the Court of Admiralty. This matter is of grave concernment to the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty, to which the writer's trust, under the Parliament, hath so near a relation. He therefore beseeches the Earl of Manchester to present his request unto the House that the cause may be forborne until his return. He hopes this request will not be considered unreasonable, considering that the party did but pursue his duty in executing the warrant. L. J., X. 547.

Oct. 17. Answer of Sir George Garrett to the petition of Theodosia Garrett. Denies that he ever made the promise to settle a sum of money upon his son as stated and prays that the matter may be left to the ordinary course of the law. L. J., X. 547.

Oct. 17. Petition of Sir William Button. Petitioner coming in upon the Articles of Oxford was assessed by the Committee of Goldsmiths' Hall to pay a fine of 2,380*l.*, one half whereof he paid, and secured the remainder by bond. He then presented several petitions to the Committee for some abatement, in respect that a great part of his estate was an estate for life, yet he was fined as if he had an estate of inheritance, but could obtain no benefit from the Committee who reported the fine to the House of Commons; the House accepted the fine, and the ordinance has already been presented to their Lordships for their concurrence. Prays that before the ordinance is passed it may be referred back to the Committee at Goldsmiths' Hall to have the fine reduced. L. J., X. 547.

Annexed:—

1. Application of same for the reduction of his fine.

Oct. 17. Order that the hearing of the matter of difference between the inhabitants of Long Acre and John Barley, touching his building and using a brewhouse near Long Acre, be postponed. L. J., X. 547.

Oct. 18. Draft order for payment of 200*l.* to Sir Henry Cholmeley. L. J., X. 552. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Petition of Richard Parris. The Lord Mayor and Justices of London were, by an order of their Lordships of the 10th instant, ordered to answer the complaint of petitioner, and Thomas Blakemer; but the time for answering has elapsed, notwithstanding the order was demanded in due time of Mr. Browne; petitioner complains that when he yesterday again demanded the order, Mr. Browne caused him to be arrested at his (Mr. Browne's) suit of 1,000*l.*, and imprisoned in the Gate House. Prays that the order may be revived, that he may be forthwith released, and that he may obtain such reparation against Mr. Browne for his most unjust abuse as may be a terror unto him in the future, and to all other wicked and vexatious obstructors of justice. L. J., X. 552.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same, praying for his discharge. (Undated.)

Oct. 19. Draft ordinance imposing a duty on goods imported from or exported to France to pay the expenses of the officers of the Company of French merchants, in recovering their ships detained in France. L. J., X. 554. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Draft order for payment of 100*l.* to William Allen. L. J., X. 555. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Ordinance for payment of 50,000*l.* for the Navy out of the receipts of fines and compositions at Goldsmiths' Hall. L. J., X. 555. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 19. Draft order for payment of 20*l.* to Mr. Taylor, the messenger who brought the news of the good success from Colonel Stone, Governor of Stafford. L. J., X. 555. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Petition of Richard Eyre, bailiff to the Commissioners of Sewers for the City of Westminster. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his writs of error against John Benson and Christopher Browne.

Oct. 20. Petition of Sir William Russell and others. On the 22nd of April last an order passed the House of Commons for some additions to an ordinance for settling the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; to which additional order their Lordships' concurrence has not yet been granted. Notwithstanding this, John Marston and Thomas Lenthall make use of this order as an ordinance of both Houses, and upon certificate of the Judges do proceed against petitioners in the Court of Admiralty and Delegates against the known laws of the land and against their Lordships' order of the 27th of July 1647, made upon the Judge's certificate and the prohibition of the Court of Common Pleas. Pray that Marston and Lenthall, the Judges of the Court of Admiralty and the Commissioners Delegates may be prohibited from proceeding in the cause. L. J., X. 555.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of Declaration of 17th April 1646 referred to in preceding. C. J., IV. 513. In extenso.

2. Copy of the opinion of the Judges, that a prohibition doth lie in this case. 1 May 1647.

3. Copy of order in the cause. 17 June 1647.

4. Petition of Thomas Lenthall and others. Pray that the cause may be left to the ordinary course of law. (Undated.)

Oct. 20. Message to the House of Commons, with letter from the Chancellor of Scotland and the Marquess of Argyll, proposing that certain Scotch prisoners should be transported for foreign service under Colonel Robert Mountgomery. L. J., X. 555.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Lord Loudoun and the Marquess of Argyll, at Edinburgh, to the Earl of Manchester, referred to in preceding. L. J., X. 556. In extenso.

Oct. 20. Petition of John Perchard, inhabitant of the Isle of Guernsey. Petitioner has used all diligence to get his writings passed under the seal of the Isle, according to their Lordships' order, which he has sent by way of France, and also by way of Southampton and Portsmouth; but in regard to the present distractions at sea, and especially about the Isle of Guernsey, he has as yet had no answer. Prays that if he should be unable to get his writings under seal within three weeks or a month's time, his writings under the hand of the sworn officer of the Royal Court of the Isle and other credible men may be received for the clearing of his cause. L. J., X. 556.

Oct. 20. Petition of Mordant Snellock, prisoner in the Fleet. Thomas Bushell, a desperate malignant, has long been and is still indebted to petitioner by bond and otherwise in the sum of 200*l*. Bushell having absconded petitioner could not for a long time arrest him, but at length at a great charge he did, with one Russell, cause him to be taken into custody. Petitioner about four years since made over Bushell's debt to Russell, who was petitioner's creditor; Bushell having put in bail is now gone away, whilst the Sheriff of Middlesex and his officers have informed their Lordships that petitioner has infringed their privileges in arresting Bushell and petitioner is committed close prisoner for refusing to deliver up the bail bond. Prays for his discharge. L. J., X. 556.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Affidavit of Peter Russell that Bushell's debt, which was made over to him by Snellock, was to secure him a debt of 450*l*. due to him from Snellock, without any combination or sinister end whatsoever. 5 Oct. 1648.
3. Petition of Stephen Payce [Payce]. Petitioner became bail for Captain Thomas Bushell, late Governor of the Isle of Lundy, who was arrested notwithstanding he had the Lord General's protection. Prays that his bail bond, now remaining in the hands of the under bailiff, may be forthwith delivered up into the Supreme Court, there to remain until the pleasure of the House be further signified. (Undated.)

Oct. 20. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that William Smyth has been approved for the rectory of Dunkerton, Somerset. L. J., X. 556.

Oct. 20. Petition of John Cooke, an orphan and ward of the late Bishop of Durham, by Captain Thomas Gregson, his guardian. In January 1640-1 petitioner exhibited his petition to their Lordships against the Bishop of Durham, and on the 15th of June following received a hearing before a Committee, and the result was that a report was ordered to be made by the late Lord Brook, the Chairman, that 40*l*. per annum, and arrears since the death of the orphan's father, should be paid to petitioner. In consequence of the death of Lord Brook, and petitioner's employment in the State service, the report has not yet been made. The Bishop gave the wardship of the orphan to Henry Blakiston, his kinsman, a known recusant, and much wilful waste has been done to the estate by one of Blakiston's tenants. Petitioner prays that the report of the Committee may be ordered, and that the Committee for the sale of Bishops' lands may be ordered to pay petitioner's arrears and the growing rent of 40*l*. per annum, &c. See L. J., X. 574.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Cooke's petition presented in Jan. 1640-1; petitioner's father, Timothy Cooke, died in 1636, seized of certain lands worth 112*l*. a year in the county palatine of Durham, held from the Bishop by Knight's service, charged with annuities to Lady Swinburne and petitioner's mother; petitioner, who was nine years old when his father died, became ward to the Bishop; at this time the plague in Newcastle, where Cooke was living, was so severe that the inhabitants were not allowed to go abroad, and petitioner's mother therefore sent to the Bishop the day after her husband's burial, praying him not to dispose of the wardship of her son until she should have opportunity of seeing him to make composition for his wardship, the Bishop however, in less than a month, gave the wardship to Henry Blakiston, then one of his gentlemen, and now a papist living beyond the seas, and when the sickness ceased petitioner's mother could not obtain composition; Lady Swinburne died about six months after petitioner's father, and the lands were thus discharged from a payment of 60*l*. per annum; application was then again made to the Bishop to compound, but he at first demanded

1,000*l*. and then 500*l*., which petitioner's friends could not raise, though they offered 250*l*.; petitioner's mother continued her suit for two years to the Bishop, till in 1638, coming home without any hope after many uncomfortable and bitter answers, she languished and died within twenty days; by her death the lands were freed from all charges, and the Bishop or Blakiston have received as much as 400*l*. from them and have allowed petitioner nothing for maintenance since his father's death, while Blakiston has let the lands on lease without any restriction against waste; petitioner prays the House to order that composition should be accepted, or an allowance made for his maintenance and education, and that the Bishop may be called upon to answer.

Oct. 21. Draft order for payment of 20*l*. to Mr. Noble. L. J., X. 558. In extenso.

Oct. 21. Draft order of the House of Commons respecting the transporting two thousand Scotch soldiers for service in foreign parts. C. J., VI. 57.

Oct. 23. Petition of John Silver; prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his cause against Thomas Raynes. L. J., X. 558.

Oct. 23. Petition of Dorothy Godbold, relict and executrix of John Godbold, late one of the Justices of His Majesty's Court of Common Pleas. Divers fees and duties of the profits of the last Trinity term belonging to the judges received by the officers and clerks are now remaining in their hands not accounted for, whereof one moiety is due to petitioner in right of her late husband; prays that the officers of the court may be ordered to pay her the one moiety, or that it may be kept in their hands until their Lordships shall further order. L. J., X. 558.

Oct. 23. Petition of William Duppa, plaintiff, against John Whittney, defendant; petitioner obtained a decree out of the Chancery at the great sessions held for the county of Radnor against the defendant for 120*l*., and the judges having granted an attachment for non-payment defendant was by virtue thereof attached; he thereupon paid the 120*l*., was discharged, and then commenced suit in the Exchequer of Pleas against petitioner, the deputy sheriff, and the gaoler upon an action of false imprisonment; petitioner pleaded the decree to which plea the defendant demurred, and is like to have judgment and a writ to enquire damages, and by that means he will reimburse the money decreed and paid. Petitioner exhibited his bill in Chancery to have the decree confirmed, whereunto defendant demurred, which was argued and declared to be good, but because it was a business of so grave consequence as the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery in Wales, and may be a precedent against those who have acted by force of power derived from the Court of Requests, the Council at York, the Council in the Marches of Wales, and the Counties Palatine, it was not determined but referred to their Lordships, as appears by the annexed order. Prays their Lordships to take the matter into their consideration, and to declare their opinion thereon, and that an injunction may be awarded to stay the suit at law. L. J., X. 559.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the case.
 2. Order of the Court of Chancery referring the matter to the consideration of the High Court of Parliament. 23 June 1648.
 3. Copy of preceding.
- Oct. 23. Draft declaration concerning delinquents to be exempted from pardon in the Propositions. L. J., X. 559. In extenso.

entrusted to seize horses for the Parliament service, arrested him in the King's Bench for a gelding of the value of 25*l.*, which Shercliffe declares petitioner took away, although he accepted a ticket for the same and knew it was listed according to the ordinance for the service of the Parliament. Prays that all proceedings against himself and Steventon may be stayed. L. J., X. 559.

Oct. 24. Draft ordinance to clear Sir Humfrey Mildmay of his delinquency. L. J., X. 563. In extenso.

Oct. 24. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that they have approved of William Stanley for the rectory of Ripple, Kent. L. J., X. 563.

Oct. 24. Answer of Edward Scott to the petition of Katherine Scott. Denies the charges brought against him by his wife, and prays that her petition may not be granted. See L. J., X. 503.

Oct. 24. Answer of Thomas Lenthall and John Mars-ton to the petition of Sir William Russell and others. Deny the truth of the allegations contained in their adversaries' petition, and pray that the order made thereon upon misinformation may be discharged, and that the judges may be left free in the matter to act as to justice shall appertain. See L. J., X. 555.

Annexed:—

1. Report of a Committee of the House of Commons on the case. C. J., V. 165.

Oct. 26. Draft order directing the judges to take steps to discover the person who sent a threatening letter to John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments. L. J., X. 565. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Anonymous letter referred to in preceding, threatening Browne for his proceedings against Poyntz alias Morris and others, and specially requiring him to procure the release of Paris. (Undated.)

Oct. 26. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that they have approved of Lewes Downes for the rectory of Thornby, Northamptonshire? L. J., X. 565.

Oct. 27. Petition of Katherine Mylles, widow. Petitioner was admitted by the Contractors of Bishops' lands to have the pre-emption of a mansion-house and farm at Bitterne, in the county of Southampton, parcel of the lands of the Bishop of Winchester, of which she was tenant, but now others have been admitted over her head. Prays that she may not be deprived of the liberty of pre-emption. L. J., X. 566.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Copy of order of the Contractors for sale of Bishops' lands for petitioner to have the pre-emption, she giving a considerable value for the same. L. J., X. 566.

3. Certificate of the Contractors. Petitioner was at liberty to make an agreement for the premises, but she refused in point of price, not only in reference to the annual value, but also to the gross value of the timber and wood, and another person coming in to treat for the whole manor, whereof petitioner's lease was but a part, and she not "accepting of the box" (the usual way of sale in case of competition) for the said whole manor, the Contractors, to the best of their skill and knowledge and the words of their oath, contracted for sale with the other person. 8 Nov. 1648.

Oct. 28. Draft letter from the Parliament to the Commissioners with the King, respecting letters received from Ireland. L. J., X. 569. In extenso.

Oct. 28. Petition of Thomas Kent and Dorothy Compton, widow. Pray that a day may be appointed for hearing their writs of error against Richard Painter and others. L. J., X. 569.

Oct. 28. Affidavit of Mathew Hassall respecting Thomas Grigg's contempt of their Lordships' order with reference to the attachment of Thomas Conisby. L. J., X. 569. In extenso.

Oct. 28. Application from the Earl of Northampton for a pass to come to London on the business of his composition.

Oct. 28. Petition of Bartholomew Gutteridge and another, defendants in a writ of error, wherein John Spencer is plaintiff. Pray that a day may be appointed for the plaintiff to join in demurrer with the defendants.

Oct. 30. Petition of Henry Daniell. Petitioner, a servant to Lord Craven, having been heretofore arrested at the suit of Anthony Whytchurch, made his humble address to their Lordships, who were pleased to give order for his release. Whytchurch in contempt of this order proceeded at law and obtained judgment against him, and with the assistance of some soldiers belonging to the garrison at Wallingford seized him and carried him from his house at Caversham to the Castle at Oxford, where he has ever since remained a prisoner. Petitioner prays that he may have the benefit of their Lordships' former order for his liberty, and that Whytchurch may be sent for to answer for his contempt. L. J., X. 570.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

2. Copy of order for petitioner's release. 18 Nov. 1647.

3. Another copy.

4. Affidavit of Daniell detailing the circumstances of his arrest.

5. Affidavit of Richard Younge.

6. Affidavit of Robert Reeve.

Oct. 30. Draft order appointing John Clerke a sergeant-at-law. L. J., X. 570. In extenso.

Oct. 30. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that they have approved of Richard Swinhow for the rectory of Langton juxta Partney, Lincolnshire. L. J., X. 571.

Oct. 31. Draft of an additional ordinance for relief and employment of the poor, and punishment of vagrants and disorderly persons within the city of London and liberties thereof. This ordinance was brought in and read 1st this day, it was read 2nd Nov. 7, but no further proceeding is mentioned. L. J., X. 571, 580.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of divers well affected citizens and inhabitants of London; they thank the House for what has been done in the business concerning the poor, and pray that the last additional ordinance may be read a third time and completely passed. (Undated.)

2. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

Oct. 31. Petition of the Committee for accounts for the County of Leicester. Petitioners in pursuance of their trust summoned Colonel Francis Hacker to account, who failing to bring in his accounts was committed by them to prison, where he continued not above half an hour, being restored thence by the Standing Committee of the County. The warrant for his commitment being not so formal as the law required, he commenced an action for false imprisonment against petitioners, and by indirect means obtained a verdict for 100*l.* damages. Petitioners then resorted to the Committee for Indemnity, but by reason of a mistake of the clerk a dismissal of their petition was entered. Pray that a new day of hearing may be appointed before the Committee, when they doubt not to vindicate their proceedings against Colonel Hacker, against whom they have given a surcharge of many thousand pounds, which he detains in his hands from the State, and that in the meantime all proceedings at law may be stayed. L. J., X. 572.

Oct. 31. Petition of Thomas Worsley, of Hovingham, in the county of York, Katherine his wife, John his son, and Elizabeth his daughter. Although petitioners have ever detested popery, they have been great sufferers under the prelates for their nonconformity to the Book of Common Prayer, and have been indicted and convicted for recusants, and several charges for many years have issued and do still issue out upon their lands; although the Book of Common Prayer has been taken away and declared against as popish, the statute of recusancy is still pleaded in bar to such actions as petitioners bring against any. Petitioners have many ways manifested their good affection to the Parliament, by taking the protestation, by their willing and free contributions, and by their many sufferings in the Parliament cause. They pray that the Barons of the Exchequer may be ordered to stay all further charges against them, to deliver up to be cancelled all recognizances entered into by them, or by any other for them, that the present sheriff of Yorkshire may be ordered to return the goods taken from them by the late sheriff for their recusancy, and to forbear further levying, and that they may have the benefit of the law for the recovery of their rights and just debts. L. J., X. 572.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition Thomas Worsley, of Hovingham, in the county of York, John his son, and Elizabeth his daughter, to the House of Commons. To the same effect as preceding. (Undated.)

Oct. 31. Draft order for issue of writs for appointment of William Powell and others as serjeants-at-law L. J., X. 572. In extenso.

Nov. 1. Draft resolutions that the King's answer to the proposition concerning delinquents is unsatisfactory, &c. L. J., X. 573. In extenso.

Nov. 1. Letter from the University of Oxford to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords; the University desires to thank the Lords for their goodness and bounty, for their care in purging the fountains of learning, and their liberal encouragement thereof even in these times of darkness; and having had experience of the Earl's favour are emboldened to beseech him to countenance the humble desires contained in a petition which they are now presenting, that so the University may enjoy a comfortable support.

Nov. 2. Petition of Katherine, the unfortunate wife of Edward Scott; her husband has answered her former petition to the House, in which she desired relief touching 145*l.* per ann. secured to her by deed with arrears, but he can allege nothing to retard judgment except that he refuses to live with her upon suggestion of disloyalty on her part towards him, which false and unworthy scandal is fomented by some of his near relations for their own ends upon him and his estate, who hope to delay her in obtaining redress; she is most ready to vindicate her innocence before the House, but prays that a short day may first be granted for determining the point concerning the 145*l.* per annum. L. J., X. 574.

Nov. 2. Petition of Isabella Baroness Dowager de la Warr; she has offered to make over her land to third persons, upon condition that if they do not sell it by the 10th of February next, they shall deliver it to the Earl of Lincoln at the price he offers, or to Lord Coleraine, or to both of them, but this is refused, with an intention she supposes utterly to undo her; she requests the House to appoint some of their members not at all interested to whom she will wholly refer herself and her lands. L. J., X. 574.

Nov. 2. Petition of John Cooke, an orphan and ward to the late Bishop of Durham, by Captain Thomas Gregson, his guardian. L. J., X. 574.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of the petition presented 25 Jan. 1640-1. These petitions are duplicates of those presented on the 20th of October 1648. See above.

Nov. 2. Draft ordinances to clear the following persons of their delinquency (L. J., X. 574), with certificates of delinquency annexed. The certificates are given in extenso in the Commons' Journal.

Henry Binge.

Sir Thomas Lucas.

John Hamond.

John Piggott.

Hugh Roberts.

Sir Thomas Mallett and

Arthur Brookes.

John Mallett his son.

Thomas Ashton.

William Dallison.

Nov. 2. Draft resolutions respecting the King's answers to the propositions concerning Ireland, &c. L. J., X. 574. In extenso.

Nov. 2. Affidavit of Thomas Raynes, yeoman; he has three several times appeared in obedience to order of the House in the cause between him and John Silver, but nothing has been done, and the last time he so appeared he was damaged 30*l.* because he could not attend to the inning of his harvest, the greater part of which was therefore spoilt, and now when he is summoned again he has such short notice that he cannot be prepared for his defence; he therefore prays for a further day for the hearing of the cause. See L. J., X. 575.

Nov. 2. Order of the Judges appointing a day for hearing the complaint of John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, against Thomas Blackmer and others. See L. J., X. 565.

Nov. 2. List of 6 Ordinances for Compositions past both Houses, and remaining with the Clerk of the "Parliaments." The list gives the dates, the names, and abodes of the compounders, and the amounts of their fines. The dates range from 19 Dec. 1645 to 2 Nov. 1648.

Nov. 3. Draft ordinance to clear Sir Richard Minshull of his delinquency. L. J., X. 575.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of his delinquency.

2. Petition of Sir Richard Minshull; he complains that while endeavouring the review of his composition, the report has passed the House of Commons, and has come up to the Lords, by which he is fined as for an estate in fee for various lands, of which he is only tenant for life; he is besides doubly rated in several cases, and incumbrances are not allowed him in others; he prays for review of his case, and for stay of the ordinance now before the House in the meantime. L. J., X. 575.

3. Another petition of Sir Richard Minshull, stating that he bought the manors of Oundle and Bigging from Lord Herbert, now Earl of Worcester, and praying that his ordinance may pass when he shall desire it, and his former petition be recommended back for allowances. (Undated.)

4. Order of the Commissioners for compounding with delinquents in Sir Robert Minshull's case. 5 Oct. 1648.

5. Proviso to Sir R. Minshull's ordinance that, though the manors of Oundle and Bigging had been included in his composition, it should not give him any better title to them than he had before.

Nov. 3. Petition of Captain Lieutenant William Wade; he has served Parliament for four years, for which considerable sums are due to him, but he has threatened to be thrown into prison for a debt of 50*l.*, to the utter ruin of himself, his wife, and children; he prays for protection from arrest, and that his creditor, Alice Ball, may be satisfied out of his arrears. L. J., X. 575.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate from Colonel Litcott that Wade served under him both in Jersey and at Northampton, and never received either pay or free quarters. 24 Oct. 1646.

Nov. 3. Petition of William Williamson for himself and John Steventon; they thank the House for ordering Shercliffe, the plaintiff at law, to put in his answer in Parliament; they aver that his gelding was taken away and listed in the Parliament's service under the powers of the ordinance of the 31st July 1647, and a ticket accepted by Shercliffe; they think it just that horses so taken away should be paid for, but pray that they themselves may be indemnified until Parliament direct how satisfaction is to be made. L. J., X. 575.

Nov. 3. Petition of Bartholomew Gutteridge and another, defendants in a writ of error in which John Spencer is plaintiff; pray for a short day for hearing a demurrer put in by them, as the writ is brought only to delay execution of judgment. L. J., X. 575.

Nov. 3. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Henry Searle has been approved for the cure of Alborough [Albrough] cum Hasselwood [Hazlewood], Suffolk.

Nov. 3. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Guy Carleton has been approved for the cure of Bucklebury, Berks.

Nov. 4. Petition of John Gough, defendant in a writ of error in which John Morgan is plaintiff, praying for a short day for hearing. L. J., X. 579.

[Nov. 4.] Petition of Colonel Heriot Washbourne to the Lords and Commons; at the beginning of these unnatural wars, petitioner subscribed money, horse, and arms for the Parliament, and accepted a command for the safety of the City and parts adjacent, though he had a wife and nine children, and many useful servants, not thinking that he should be sent further, but that still he might have an eye to his own affairs; he was afterwards "commanded abroad," and served both as colonel of foot and captain of horse; after the relief of Gloucester he laid down his commission as colonel of foot under promise that his command of horse should be made up into a regiment, and though disappointed in this he served till the disbanding at Abingdon; the want of his pay has been very hard upon him, as he has lost his way of trading, and has expended so much on service that he has been obliged to mortgage a sum of 160*l.* per annum, and cannot redeem it without timely relief from the House; his arrears amount to 1,112*l.* and he prays that he may be paid out of the sequestration of the estate of John Benson, late of Lincoln's Inn, and other delinquents. Nov. 4. Petition of Robert Edbrooke and others. In a suit brought by Henry Trenchard against them the House ordered him for his vexatious proceedings to pay them 100*l.* of which they have to pay 60*l.* to the officers of the House, though their damages were proved to amount to 140*l.*; Trenchard refuses to pay the 100*l.*, and has otherwise acted in contempt of the House; the petitioners therefore pray that the sequestrators of the county may be ordered to levy the sum upon his estate. L. J., X. 579.

Nov. 4. Petition of Dame Mary Butler, the relict of Sir Stephen Butler, Knight, deceased. She has lost all her estate by the rebellion in Ireland, suffering more than others, being stripped of all her clothes and exposed to the violence of winter's extreme cold by the barbarous rebels while on her way to Dublin, where she laboured with her hands to support her young children; but the greatness of the charge upon her so far outweighs her endeavours that she and her children are likely to perish for want of bread; if the performances of her husband may weigh with the House, then the plantations that he made of English should do so, Bealtirbert [Belturbet] and others, more important as they were than any except Londonderry; the unavoidable ruin of herself and her children compels her to pray the House to confer upon her such a considerable sum of money or weekly allowance as may preserve their lives till it please God to restore her to some competency. L. J., X. 579.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Copy of petition of Edmond Philpott, Esq., and Dame Mary Butler his wife, the relict of Sir Stephen Butler, Knight, deceased, in behalf of themselves and five young children of the said Sir Stephen, to the Lords Justices and Council in Ireland. The petitioners, after relating their sufferings, pray the Lords Justices to sign the annexed certificate to support an application to the Parliament of England for relief. On the same paper is copy of certificate, dated 1 March 1642-3, signed by the Lords Justices.

3. Another copy of Philpott's petition and certificate.

Nov. 4. Draft order for the Commissioners of the Great Seal to proceed according to the usual course in the case of Mr. Greene against Earl Rivers, who has refused to answer Greene's suit. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Draft resolutions respecting the King's answer about the Earl of Ormonde, &c. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Draft resolution that the Commissioners should be instructed to present the shorter catechism to the King. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Draft resolution for the continuance of the treaty for fourteen days longer. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Draft letter to the Commissioners transmitting the preceding resolutions. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Draft order for Anthony Nicol to be Master of the Armoury in the Tower of London and at Greenwich. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Draft order for Henry Rolle to be Chief Justice of the King's Bench. L. J., X. 579. In extenso.

Nov. 4. Petition of Dame Mary Beamont, late wife of Sir Jeremiah Beamont, Knight, deceased, to the Lords and Commons. She was plundered by Colonel Lord Goring's forces to the value of 2,000*l.* and upwards, as appears by a certificate from her neighbours, which has lain in Parliament for three years past, but no relief has been given, by which she is reduced to such misery and want that she has no means to procure either bread or clothing; she prays the House to consider her deplorable condition, and to give her some succour for her present sustenance.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate mentioned in preceding. 27 March 1644.

Nov. 6. Petition of Thomas Whitaker, citizen and stationer of London. In obedience to the order of the House he stopped printing the History of Henry VIII., written by the late Lord Herbert, and applied to one of the executors to take the matter into consideration; this was refused, and petitioner thereupon referred the matter to referees, one chosen by Mr. Herbert, one by himself. The referees met and compared the two copies of the book, when petitioner's copy appeared to be his Lordship's ultima manus, but the referees parted without being able to agree. Petitioner prays that, as he has already gone to great expense in printing, he may be allowed to proceed, and if he intrenches on anyone's rights he will willingly undergo any censure that the law shall inflict on him. L. J., X. 580.

Nov. 6. Draft order appointing a day for hearing the cause between Duppa and Whitney. L. J., X. 580.

Nov. 6. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Josiah Hall has been approved for the cure of Addington Magna, Northamptonshire. L. J., X. 580.

Nov. 7. Petition of Captain Bestmey Mason. An execution has been taken out against him to recover 100*l.*, for which he became surety about seven years since at the request of Mr. Gouldisbrough and Mr. Hallum, his tenant; petitioner, who has lost his blood, suffered imprisonment, and set forth horses and arms, and voluntarily lent money to the Parliament, prays that he may be freed by Habeas Corpus, as he verily believes that the other parties, though well able to pay the debt, have combined to make him pay only for his faithfulness to the Parliament. L. J., X. 580.

Nov. 7. Petition of John Smyth and others; praying for further time to put in their answer to the petition of Sarah Crokey. L. J., X. 580.

Annexed:—

1. Order for John Smyth, et al., to answer. 5 Oct. 1648.

2. Affidavit of John Smyth that Crokey's petition relates to matters transacted in above thirty suits in former Parliaments, in all the courts of Westminster Hall, the Exchequer, Star Chamber, and Marches of Wales for more than three score years, which were fully settled, as he hopes to prove, and to none of which he was a party, so that he will be forced to peruse a great number of deeds and writings before an answer can be put in.

Nov. 8. Petition of Wm. Wright, late a constable in the Covent Garden, defendant in a writ of error brought by Edward Wyld and others; prays for a short day for the determination of the errors. L. J., X. 581.

Nov. 8. Application for a hearing of the writ of error, Johnson, et al., against Barrett, et al. L. J., X. 581.

Nov. 8. Petition of Wm. Winter, defendant in a writ of error brought by Thomas Roberts, senior and junior; prays for a hearing. L. J., X. 581.

Nov. 8. Reply of Theodosia Garrett, widow, to the answer of Sir George Garrett, Knight, to the petition of the said Theodosia. She avers the truth of her petition, and as to the suit which the respondent pretends is depending between her father John Stepkin and the respondent in the Mayor's Court she was never a party to it, and it has been legally dismissed, and cannot be any bar to her suit before the House; she prays therefore that a day may be appointed for the hearing of her cause. L. J., X. 581.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 7 Nov.

2. Certificate that John Stepkin has entered a non prosecutur in the suit brought by him against Sir G. Garrett in the Lord Major's Court. 6 Nov.

Nov. 8. Petition of John Earl Rivers; petitioner has put in several answers to the petition exhibited against him in Parliament by John Greene, clerk; but Greene has declined to proceed to a hearing, and has exhibited a bill against petitioner in Chancery, endeavouring by process out of that court to force him to answer there contrary to his privilege as a Peer; the Earl prays that privilege may be allowed him, and that he may be freed from arrest during this present Parliament. L. J., X. 581.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition of John Greene, clerk, administrator of Edward Wymarke, praying the House to hear his claim to a debt due by Earl Rivers' father to Wymarke, his efforts to recover which for several years past have been defeated by the Earl's absence in the King's quarters or by his assertion of privilege.

2. Copy of petition of Earl Rivers in answer to preceding, expressing his readiness to abide a hearing in the matter before the House, but desiring to be protected from legal proceedings.

3. Copy of two orders in the matter, dated 5 March 1645-6 and 8 April 1646.

Nov. 8. Draft order for 3,155*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*, now payable to Lord Francis Willoughby of Parham, to be paid to Alexander Norris for the use of the forces of Lancashire to be disbanded. L. J., X. 581.

Nov. 8. Draft order for payment of 4,000*l.*, out of the sequestrations of Cumberland, to the forces of Lancashire. L. J., X. 581. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Draft order for auditing the accounts of the officers in Lancashire. L. J., X. 581. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Affidavit of Isaac Gildard; that after Roger North had killed five oak trees on Mimms Common, a servant of Thomas Williams, the son-in-law of Thomas Goring, came and carried one tree away, and as he believes did others also. L. J., X. 582. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Affidavit of John Duell, Deputy to the Gentleman Usher, that after he had attached Thomas Grigg, constable of North Mimms, Grigg and another prisoner Gaffer were violently rescued by Grigg's son and others. L. J., X. 582. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Copy of letter from the Ambassadors and Counsellors of the Electors, Princes, and States of the Holy Roman Empire, engaged in the negotiation for universal peace, to Charles Ludovic, Count Palatine of the Rhine, Duke of Bavaria, Prince Elector of the Holy Roman Empire. The Duke is not ignorant of the miseries caused by the war which has lasted for thirty years; the writers enclose for his information the results of the negotiations at Osnaburgh and Munster, and earnestly desire his adhesion thereto. (Latin.)

Nov. 8. Petition of Peter Bergen, a Dutchman; he complains that he never received from the Lord High Admiral, pursuant to an order of the House in the matter, a sum of 142^l expended by him in wages to workmen employed upon a ship called the St. John Baptist, that he had borrowed this money, and now lies in prison for not repaying it. Solomon Smith, who then was and now is Marshal of the Admiralty, is willing to pay petitioner the money if authorised so to do by a new order from the House, for which petitioner therefore prays.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. (Undated.)
2. Copy of order of 6 Sept. 1641 for payment of Bergen.
3. Another copy.
4. Another copy.
5. Copy of order in a case between George Warner and Robert Armestead for the sale of the St. John Baptist unless Armestead should pay a certain sum adjudged to be due from him to Warner. 13 Aug. 1641.
6. Copy of order for Warner to be first paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the ship, and then Peter Bergen out of the residue, if any. 29 October.
7. Copy of order for Solomon Smith and Peter Bergen to appear before the House. 6 July 1646.
8. Account of moneys laid out on the St. John Baptist in 1641 by Peter Bergen.
9. Affidavit of Bergen in support of preceding account. 18 Oct. 1641.
10. A true demonstration of the particular wrongs and losses which Peter Bergen hath sustained by George Warner and Solomon Smith.

Nov. 9. Petition of Anthony Whitechurch; complains that Henry Daniell plundered him of goods to the value of upwards of 400*l*, for which petitioner has recovered 200*l* and a bill, but Daniell who has been in execution for a whole year, pretends that he is a servant to Lord Craven, and thereby endeavours to obtain his discharge, which if obtained will be petitioner's utter ruin, he prays therefore that it may not be granted. L. J., X. 582.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Henry Daniell; being arrested at the suit of Anthony Whitechurch contrary to privilege, as petitioner is a servant to Lord Craven, the House by order of the 18th of November 1647 ordered his discharge; but he has been again arrested and most unavailingly dragged out of his house by a party of soldiers to the Castle of Oxford, Whitechurch despising the order then shewed to him, and saying the House had no power to grant such orders; petitioner prays for a further order for his release, and that Whitechurch may be called upon to answer for his contempt. (Undated.)
2. Copy of order of 18 Nov. 1647.

Nov. 9. Affidavit of John Blowitt; that John Barly, by the order of the House, forbidding him to go on building his brewhouse in Long Acre was shown to him, said that he would go on all the same, and brew there.

Nov. 10. Another affidavit to the same effect as preceding.

Nov. 10. Draft order for repayment of 1,000*l* lent by the City for carrying on the treaty. L. J., X. 584.

Nov. 10. Draft order to revoke the order giving Dr. Brewster leave to go to the King in the Island of Wight. L. J., X. 584. In extenso.

Nov. 11. Draft resolutions for the banishment of three Lords and four Commoners. C. J., VI. 72. The Lords objected to the Commons passing a resolution for the banishment of Peers, and brought in an ordinance themselves to banish the Lord Goring, the Earl of Holland, and Lord Capell. L. J., X. 585, 586.

Nov. 11. Petition of John Perchard, inhabitant of the Island of Guernsey; he has received his writings from Guernsey under the seal of the Island, and prays that the order to the judges to hear his cause may be renewed. L. J., X. 585.

Nov. 11. Duplicate of preceding.

Nov. 11. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines, that Thomas Grigson has been approved for the cure of Panton, in the county of Lincoln. L. J., X. 585.

Nov. 11. Draft order that the persons mentioned in the first branch of the proposition concerning delinquents be proceeded against, and their estates disposed of as Parliament shall think fit, that they shall be incapable of pardon by His Majesty, but that the lives of not more than seven shall be taken. L. J., X. 585. In extenso.

Nov. 11. Draft order to remove the same persons from His Majesty's councils, &c. L. J., X. 585. In extenso.

Nov. 11. Draft order that no person who has been engaged in the late war against the Parliament since the 1st of January last shall be admitted to composition for his delinquency, but at a full year's value more than other persons. L. J., X. 586. In extenso.

Nov. 11. Petition of Colonel William Herbert; whilst lying sick in his chamber of wounds received at the taking of Berkeley Castle he was arrested for debt, and though some of his creditors have accepted payment out of his arrears, those who are now troubling him will not do so; he prays the House to take some speedy means for his enlargement. See L. J., X. 587.

Nov. 13. Petition of Sir Robert Hannay; petitioner has been affronted with arrests whilst entrusted by Sir Charles Coote, Lord President of Connaught, to negotiate with Parliament what may conduce to the carrying on of the work against the rebels in Ireland, and this, though about 3,000*l*. are due to him for arrears. He is ready to satisfy all his creditors as soon as it shall be in his power so to do, and prays to be protected from arrest that he may prosecute the public affairs entrusted to him. L. J., X. 586.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of commission from Sir Charles Coote to petitioner to negotiate in England for supplies, &c. for his forces in Ireland. 1 May 1646.
2. Copy of certificate of petitioner's losses and sufferings. 1 Nov. 1647.

Nov. 13. Petition of Captain Bestmeyer Mason; he is taken in execution for a debt for which he is only surety, the principals being well able to pay, though he has suffered much in the Parliament service, and arrears to the amount of 1,000*l*. are due to him; he prays for release by Habeas Corpus. L. J., X. 587. This is a duplicate of the petition presented on the 7th.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate respecting arrears due to Captain Mason. 31 Oct. 1648.

Nov. 13. Draft order for Mr. Justice Rolle to be constituted Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench. L. J., X. 587. In extenso.

Nov. 13. Draft order for calling and swearing serjeants-at-law. L. J., X. 587. In extenso.

Nov. 13. Draft order to suspend the swearing of Mr. Whitelock as a serjeant-at-law. L. J., X. 587. In extenso.

Nov. 13. Draft order that Lawrence Whittacre may lay his judgment for 200*l*. obtained against John Denham upon Denham's lands now under sequestration. L. J., X. 587. In extenso.

Nov. 13. Petition of Henry Tonge, Master of Arts both in the Universities of Cambridge and Oxon, and Chaplain of Merton College in Oxon; prays for an order for his institution to the vicarage of Sleaford, to which he has been presented by Nicholas Greenhill, the patron. On the petition is a certificate signed by Sir Nathaniel Brent and others of the petitioner's good life and conversation, &c. L. J., X. 587.

Nov. 13. Order of the judges to whom was referred the business on the complaint of John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, against Thomas Blackmer and others appointing a day for the hearing. See L. J., X. 565.

Nov. 14. Petition of Francis Lord Dacre; he complains that when the Scottish army advanced into England last summer, the servants or soldiers of Sir Thomas Sandford, a colonel in that army, took possession of and still detain the castle and park of Dacre, though petitioner had been in peaceable possession for three years last past; he prays for an order from the House to the sheriffs of Cumberland to restore him to possession. L. J., X. 587.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

Nov. 14. Petition of Lieutenant James Lomax, prisoner in the Gatehouse, Westminster; petitioner has faithfully served the State, for which near 300*l.* are due to him, and has sustained losses, wounds, and hardships, which have brought him into debt to his landlady Anne James for rent, to his brewer Edward Hammond, and to one Richard Bennet, in all to the amount of about 70*l.*; for this he has been cast into the Gatehouse, though Mrs. James has some security for her rent, and petitioner is ready to make assignments out of his arrears; he prays for release or that he and his creditors may be heard before their Lordships. L. J., X. 588.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 27 Oct. 1648.

Nov. 14. Certificate of the orthodoxy, &c. of Timothy Woodroffe, Bachelor of Divinity, presented to the rectory of Kingsland, Herefordshire. L. J., X. 588.

Nov. 14. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that John Man has been approved for the cure of Rawreth, Essex. L. J., X. 583.

Nov. 14. Draft ordinance to secure money advanced for the guards attending the Houses. L. J., X. 590. In extenso.

Nov. 14. Draft order for payment of 4,443*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* to the executor of William Gould, deceased, late Governor of the fort and island of Plymouth. L. J., X. 590. In extenso.

Nov. 14. Order of the Court of the Lord Mayor of London directing two aldermen and two sheriffs to consider and answer the order of the House of Lords of the 19th of October, and the petition of Blackmer and Paris. See L. J., X. 552.

Nov. 14. Answer of Robert Cudworth to the petition of Henry Vernon (presented 15th June); he maintains that the proceedings in Chancery complained of by Vernon were just, as Vernon himself showed by paying part of the sum decreed; Vernon is now in the Fleet Prison for contempt in not paying the residue, and Cudworth prays that the decree in Chancery may not be disturbed, but the matter dismissed from the House with costs. See L. J., X. 325.

Nov. 14. Petition of Captain Edward Saltmarsh in the behalf of his son-in-law Edward Topham, his ward; great sums of money are demanded of petitioner as the ward's guardian for composition made with the Court of Wards before the votes for taking that court away; but petitioner cannot pay as the tithes of the impropriate rectory of Swaledale, Yorkshire, and a messuage there have been sequestered for the delinquency of the ward's late father; petitioner prays that the sequestration may be taken off the ward's estate as it was laid upon it after the grant of the wardship to petitioner's wife, and so to him.

Annexed:—

1. Draft ordinance to secure the estates to petitioner discharged from the sequestration.

2. Copy of certificate of the value of the estates.

Nov. 15. Petition of Henry Trenchard; Sir Oliver Luke, John Trenchard, and petitioner, as guardians of Edward Trenchard, a lunatic, in a case against Robert Edbrooke and others were ordered by the House to pay 100*l.* costs, but Sir Oliver Luke and John Trenchard refused so to do as Parliament men, and petitioner was thereupon ordered to pay the money; he prays that John Trenchard, who is no Parliament man, and who has always managed the lunatic's estate, and received the profits thereof, may be ordered to pay the money. L. J., X. 590.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Henry Trenchard that he has not any of the lunatic's estate in his hands, or had any management thereof. 2 Nov.

Nov. 15. Petition of Sir Robert Hannay; he thanks the House for granting him a protection, which, however, Mr. Browne will not deliver to him until he has made an assignment to his creditors out of his arrears; he is ready so to do, though a great part of the debt was contracted as surety with Sir Charles Coote, Lord President of Connaught, for provisions for the soldiery there, but no part of his arrears is yet settled to be paid at any place, and no assignment therefore would be valid; he prays the House to order Mr. Browne to deliver to him his protection, that he may be able to follow the business of the Province of Connaught, which is greatly suffering by his restraint, and he promises to make assignment to his creditors as soon as his arrears are settled. L. J., X. 591.

Nov. 15. Draft resolutions respecting the King's answers concerning the Church. L. J., X. 591. In extenso.

Nov. 15. Draft resolutions respecting the restoration to the King of all his houses, honours, manors, and lands upon the ratification of the treaty, respecting his honour, freedom, and safety, and the passing of an act of oblivion. L. J., X. 592. In extenso.

Nov. 16. Petition of John Appleton, Doctor of Physic; he is by nation an Englishman, by religion a Roman Catholic, and therefore suspected of being dangerous to the State, and for no other cause he has been committed prisoner to the new prison, and has there remained for eighteen months deprived of all his goods to the ruin of himself, his wife and children; he prays for an immediate order for his enlargement that he may return to the open practice of physic, giving security sufficient to clear him from any act or attempt prejudicial to the State for the time to come, or rather than let him perish in prison that the House would order him to his adventure in some foreign country. L. J., X. 592.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of Justices of Middlesex for the commitment of Appleton for confessing himself a Roman Catholic and refusing the oath of allegiance.

Nov. 16. Draft letter from the Parliament to Colonel Hammond, with a vote that the King's parole binds him for twenty days after the treaty. L. J., X. 593. In extenso.

Nov. 16. Draft of the vote. L. J., X. 593. In extenso.

Nov. 16. Draft order for Sir Thomas Beddingfield to be sworn. L. J., X. 593. In extenso.

Nov. 16. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that John Alexander has been approved for the cure of Alderton, Suffolk. L. J., X. 593.

Nov. 16. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Henry Steinner has been approved for the cure of Little Bentley, Essex. L. J., X. 593.

Nov. 16. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Robert Everden has been approved for the cure of Heathfield, Sussex. L. J., X. 593.

Nov. 16. Petition of Captain Bartholomew West; he has been in the actual service of Parliament since the beginning of these troubles, for which great arrears are due to him; prays for license to raise a thousand men, volunteers, or prisoners not yet disposed of, giving security to transport them to foreign parts, and not to return with prejudice to the Parliament.

Nov. 17. Draft of additional order for payment of 4,218*l.* 18*s.* 4½*d.* to Henry Peck. L. J., X. 594. In extenso.

Nov. 18. Draft letter from the Parliament to the Earl of Warwick, Lord High Admiral, thanking him for his services in reducing the revolted ships. L. J., X. 596. In extenso.

Nov. 18. Petition of Alexander Young, clerk; petitioner under an order of their Lordships of the 14th of July last was inducted into the rectory of Kirk Deighton, Yorkshire, and retained peaceable possession until Richard Burton obtained an order on the 23rd of September, vacating the former order, without a hearing being given to petitioner, who prays that the order in his favour may be confirmed until he be legally heard.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding. (Undated.)

2. Another similar petition of same. (Undated.)

Nov. 20. Certificate that Robert Lancaster, Master of Arts and Preacher of the Gospel, is a man of good ability, sound and orthodox in doctrine and judgment, pious and blameless in life and conversation, and well affected to the Parliament. L. J., X. 596.

Nov. 20. Letter from the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers pro tempore, to Lord Fairfax, General of the Forces, about the removal of the Earl of Holland from Warwick Castle to the Tower of London on account of his ill health. L. J., X. 537. In extenso.

Nov. 21. Petition of William Kendall, citizen of London; in May last the House granted petitioner license to send a ship to Cork to bring off his goods which lay there, but this was prevented by his sickness, on which he directed his factor to convert the goods into pilchards and other merchandize for the Straits, intending to send the Eagle of Ipswich, burthen 200 tons, under Wm. Pagett, on that design. This was however prevented by Pagett's death, and order has since been issued by the Lord Admiral forbidding trade to that province. Petitioner therefore prays for a renewal of the license formerly given him to send a ship to Cork or Kinsale, and that he may have liberty to send in the ship ten or twelve tons of "salterie" and haberdashery wares, so to provide a full loading for the Straits. L. J., X. 598.

Nov. 21. Petition of Cecil Lord Calvert, Baron of Baltimore, praying that the cause between him and Henry Swetnam may shortly receive a hearing. L. J., X. 599.

Nov. 21. Petition of John Whitford, defendant in a writ of error in which Thos. Oliver is plaintiff, praying that the cause may shortly be heard. L. J., X. 599.

Nov. 21. Draft resolution that the King's final answer respecting the proceedings of Lord Ormonde in Ireland is not satisfactory. L. J., X. 599. In extenso.

Nov. 21. Draft order for continuing the treaty until the 25th instant. L. J., X. 599. In extenso.

Nov. 21. Draft of additional order for payment of 2,000*l.* to Colonel Edward Rosseter and 100*l.* to Captain Charles Norwood. L. J., X. 599. In extenso.

Nov. 21. Draft order for payment of 200*l.* to the executors of Cornet Lewes, deceased. L. J., X. 599.

Nov. 22. Petition of William Willoughby in the behalf of William Godfrey; more than a twelvemonth ago, when he had full power so to do, Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham assigned all money payable to him out of Goldsmiths' and Haberdashers' Halls to William Godfrey, who has often attended for payment; petitioner thanks the House for allowing Godfrey some time for producing his assignment, but beseeches the House to grant further time on account of Godfrey being far distant. L. J., X. 600.

Nov. 22. Petition of John Silver; the cause between petitioner and Thomas Raynes has been often appointed for hearing, but has been put off for the weightier affairs of Parliament, while petitioner by so often bringing up his witnesses from Kent, and keeping them in town, has been put to an expense of seven score pounds, and has scarce a morsel of bread left, which is just what Raynes wishes, for he has threatened to spend 500*l.* but he would leave petitioner not worth a groat. Petitioner therefore prays that to save him from utter ruin a speedy and certain day may be appointed for the hearing. L. J., X. 600.

Nov. 22. Petition of Thomas Shadwell; petitioner having been appointed Comptroller of the Customs of Lyme Regis by ordinance of the 21st, and by letters patent of the 24th of August last, repaired thither in September to demand possession; but Thomas Toll, who had been placed in the office by the Committee for the Navy only during the pleasure of Parliament, refused to yield possession, while Toll's father repaired to London and obtained an ordinance making void that in petitioner's favour without any notice to him. Petitioner, who has done nothing surreptitiously in the matter, and has been put to great expense for fees and travelling, prays that the order in Toll's favour may be recalled. L. J., X. 600.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 20 Nov.
2. Copy of order in the matter. 3 Oct.
3. Printed statement of the case between Toll and Shadwell.

Nov. 22. Draft resolution for the securing of the Scotch who have assisted the Parliament of England, and for settling peace between the two nations, &c. L. J., X. 600. In extenso.

Nov. 22. Draft order for payment of the guards attending the Houses of Parliament. L. J., X. 600. In extenso.

Nov. 22. Petition of Richard Mapowder, defendant in a writ of error in which Sir Richard Prideaux is plaintiff, prays for a short day for hearing.

Nov. 23. Draft ordinance to clear Sir William Button of his delinquency. L. J., X. 601.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of his delinquency.
2. Amendment to the ordinance.

Nov. 23. Petition of Anne James, widow; prays that James Lomax, late alchouse keeper, but now prisoner in the Gatehouse, her debtor for rent, may not receive protection from the House, but that the case may be left to trial at law. L. J., X. 601.

Nov. 23. Petition of James Earl of Suffolk; petitioner's late father, Theophilus Earl of Suffolk, being indebted for wares to William Geere and to the widow of Benjamin Henshawe to the amount of 1,000*l.* became bound with Marmaduke Moore and John Jenifer, two of his servants, in a bond of 2,000*l.* to Thomas Marsham, one of the farmers of the pre-emption of tin. This bond was unlawfully assigned to the King, and some of petitioner's lands not liable to the debt have been thereby extended; upon a former complaint the House ordered that all proceedings in the Exchequer against petitioner's lands should be stayed; part of the debt has already been paid and offers made for payment of the remainder, but these have been refused by Geere and Henshaw, in the hope of recovering the penalty under the bond, and Jenifer has been arrested; the whole prosecution at the King's suit was unlawful and criminal; petitioner therefore prays that the parties concerned therein may be sent for to answer, Jenifer released, and satisfaction given to himself for the damages he has received. L. J., X. 601.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for staying the proceedings in the Exchequer. 10 March 1641-2.
2. Affidavit of Thomas Lee, solicitor to the Earl of Suffolk, in support of the petition. 22 Nov. 1648.
3. Certificate from the auditor that Thomas Marsham was not indebted to the King, and that there was therefore no claim against the lands over which he farmed the pre-emption of tin. 10 Dec. 1647.

Nov. 23. Petition of Christopher Lee; in June 1648 Colonel Francis Zachary was ordered to pay petitioner 50*l.* damages within eight days for unjust molestation and suit, and though he has never paid one penny he in July last obtained an order for his release upon his indemnifying petitioner; but, as petitioner cannot be indemnified unless he be paid, he prays that Colonel Zachary may be remanded to prison, or a short day be appointed for him to appear before the House and show cause to the contrary. L. J., X. 601.

Nov. 24. Petition of the Dean and Prebends of Christ's College in the University of Oxford; they complain of a proposed inclosure of land in Hollowell, in the parish of Gillesbrough [Guilsborough], in the county of Northampton, whereby the tithes of corn belonging to the College will be in a manner wholly lost, and as petitioners have no glebe there the inhabitants pretend that they cannot hinder the inclosure; petitioners pray that if the inhabitants are allowed to make the inclosure, the tenth acre may be set out for petitioners in lieu of their tithes, which they have readily accepted in the case of other inclosures, though much less in value than the tithes in kind. L. J., X. 602.

Nov. 24. Petition of Colonel William Herbert; on the 14th instant the House ordered that he should be released from imprisonment upon his making an assignment to his creditors out of the arrears due to him; he accordingly tendered an assignment, with a copy of the order, to Thomas Vaughan and Henry Kemp his attorney, at whose suit petitioner was arrested, but they slighted the order, refused obedience to it, and still violently prosecute him; he therefore prays the House to take some steps to secure his discharge. L. J., X. 602.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 14 Nov.
2. Affidavit in support of the petition. 22 Nov.

[Nov. 24.] Petition of Major William Salkeld; praying for a new trial in an action of trespass, assault, and battery brought against him and others. See L. J., X. 602.

Nov. 24. Affidavit of Salkeld that he was unable to produce material witnesses at the hearing.

Nov. 24. Draft ordinance appointing Edmund Prideaux, Solicitor-General. L. J., X. 602. In extenso.

Nov. 24. Draft ordinance appointing Thomas Waller, Steward and Judge of the Court of Pleas for the Isle of Ely. L. J., X. 602. In extenso.

Nov. 24. Draft order for payment of 352*l.* to Richard Heywood and Joseph Saxton lent by them to Colonel Bulstrode for the fortification, &c. of Aylesbury. L. J., X. 603. In extenso.

No. 24. Draft resolution that the King's answer to the proposition concerning the church is not satisfactory, and that the treaty should be continued until the 27th. L. J., X. 606. In extenso.

Nov. 24. Lists of persons presented as fit for the office of high sheriff in several counties. (39 papers.) See L. J., X. 607; C. J., VI. 85.

Nov. 25. Petition of Major Herbert Blanchard; on the 6th of last month their Lordships ordered the release of petitioner, then in restraint at the suit of one Hawkins for a small debt, when 400*l.* of arrears were due to him, but before he could obtain his discharge other actions were brought against him for small sums; he again prays for the interference of their Lordships to protect himself and his family from ruin, promising on the word of a gentleman that, as soon as his arrears are stated, he will assign to his creditors all that they can justly demand. L. J., X. 607.

Annexed:—

1. List of actions against petitioner.

Nov. 25. Certificate from the Committee for the county of Cumberland that William Granger is of known abilities and sufficiency, orthodox in doctrine, painful and industrious in his ministry, &c. L. J., X. 607.

Nov. 25. Copy of order of the House of Commons referring the petition and appeal of John Poyntz alias Morris, and Mary his wife, Leonard Darby, John Harris, and Isabella Smith, prisoners in several prisons upon a warrant of the Lords for pretended forgery of a copy of an Act of Parliament, to a Committee to examine the matter. C. J., VI. 86. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding, &c.

2. Printed paper addressed to every individual member of the House of Commons who is a lover of justice for justice sake; desiring that he would be present on the reading of the petition of Morris alias Poyntz to support his plea for a trial per pares.

3. Duplicate of preceding.

4. Letter from ——— to John Browne, Esqre., in the Old Palace Yard at Westminster; the writer encloses a paper and desires Browne to consider it, as it will be presented to the House of Commons against him unless he releases the plaintiffs, their witnesses, solicitors, and adherents. Noted. This is the letter wherein was inclosed a printed paper intitled the case and vindication of John Poyntz alias Morris, and his friends; received November 9th, 1648. John Ingoldsby.

5. Letter from [Wm. Littleton] to [John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments]; the writer was yesterday taken upon an illegal warrant, as it appears, merely to detain him till a warrant could be procured from Mr. Edwards, a Justice of the Peace, to bring him before a justice about the searching for the forged Act at Morris' house; he has been charged with felony because he went at Mr. Baker's desire to show him the house; Mr. Edwards made a mittimus to keep the writer till delivered by due course of law; he was had before Justice Carter, who will he knows release him upon the security he shall tender this night; Mr. Weekes, the keeper, has used him very uncivilly, not vouchsafing him a word; Harris, a malapert fellow, went along to the justice and mentioned that the business was this day presented to the General, and is to-morrow to be brought into the House of Commons; Poyntz alias Morris and the others have exhibited divers articles to the Lord General; the writer is resolved to right himself from the base courses taken against him. On the same paper is a breviat of the case of Poyntz alias Morris.

6. Note from Wm. Littleton to Mr. John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments; sends his discharge from Justice Carter; before it came he was drawing a petition to the Lords for his release; wishes to know whether he had best proceed in it or not; would not have his friends bound for him as they now are, as it is only for directing Mr. Baker to the house and the parties who had the forged Act; if he thought he could procure an order this day he would not make use of the discharge, but possibly he may use this and get an order besides.

7. Warrant from Justice Carter committing to the Gatehouse prison Wm. Littleton, charged with divers others to have broken open the house of John Poyntz alias Morris, and to have taken away divers writings and books of accounts. 11 Dec. 1648.

8. Printed paper, headed An Appeal to each individual member of the present Parliament and Army, in the case of John Poyntz alias Morris, Mary his wife, Isabella Smith, Leonard Darby, and John Harris, who, by the power, policy, treacherous insinuations, and scandalous suggestions of John Browne, Clerk of the House of Lords (who has combined with one Littleton), have been illegally imprisoned in four several prisons, by virtue of the Lords' order, for the space of twenty months, and by the Lords fined and sentenced without crime, without legal hearing, without evidence, not being suffered to enjoy the benefit of law, or make their lawful defence as by law they ought; then follows a statement that John Morris alias Poyntz and the others had appealed to the House of Commons; that on Saturday (the 25th of) Nov. 1648 their petition was referred to a Committee, of which Master Pryne (Master Browne's special friend) was to have charge, by whose means they never could get a Committee to sit, and were in despair, until Thomas Lord Fairfax and the forces under his command appeared for the relief of the distressed; then follows a copy of the articles exhibited to His Excellency Thomas Lord Fairfax, General, &c. against John Browne, Clerk of the House of Lords; and lastly, a copy of the articles against Browne exhibited upon the 11 Dec. 1648 to Lord Fairfax by Richard Paris, alleging that Browne by virtue of his office, upon the 17th Aug. 1648, drew up an order to conceal a horrid act of injustice done by a Court of Aldermen in not bringing Henry Wollaston, the gaoler of Newgate, to a trial for many high crimes of wilful murder and felony, and that Browne caused him, Paris, to be arrested, imprisoned, and otherwise molested.

9. Duplicate of preceding.

10. Copy of petition and appeal of John Poyntz alias Morris, and Mary his wife, Isabella Smith, Leonard Darby, and John Harris to Thomas Lord Fairfax, General of all the forces raised for the nation's defence; they complain that they have been imprisoned by order of the House of Lords, obtained upon a false suggestion of John John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments; they have appealed to the House of Commons, and allege that they have never had a legal trial; they pray his Excellency to free them from their cruel imprisonment; they repeat their allegations against Browne, declaring that he falsely accused them of forging an Act of Parliament, that he broke open the house of Morris alias Poyntz, and seized his evidences, and by unjust means procured the sentence of the House of Lords against them, and the imprisonment of themselves and their witnesses.

11. Copy of petition and appeal of Richard Paris and Thomas Blakemer, late private soldiers, to Thomas Lord Fairfax, General of the forces raised for the defence of the nation; they complain that, having been employed to bring delinquents to justice, they attempted to bring Henry Wollaston, keeper of Newgate, to punishment for many high crimes and misdemeanours, and first applied to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, but were not only denied justice but threatened for appearing in the matter; they then addressed themselves to the House of Lords, but Mr. Browne drew up an order clean contrary to the intention of the House, and has since caused a vexatious action to be entered against the petitioners, and Paris has in consequence been many weeks imprisoned; the petitioners pray Lord Fairfax to free Paris from his imprisonment, and to cause Browne and Wollaston to be attached in order to a legal trial.

12. Copy of articles exhibited by Richard Paris, gent., against John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, accusing him of using his office to stifle justice, and to prevent the petitioners from bringing Wollaston to a legal trial.

Nov. 27. Order for Mr. Bulstrode Whitelocke to be Attorney of the Duchy. L. J., X. 610. In extenso.

Nov. 27. Draft letter from the Parliament to Colonel Hammond, enjoining him not to leave his charge in the Isle of Wight. L. J., X. 611. In extenso.

Nov. 27. Draft letter from the Parliament to Lord Fairfax on the same subject. L. J., X. 611. In extenso.

Nov. 27. Copy of certificate in favour of Richard Michell, presented to the living of Rugby, Warwickshire. L. J., X. 611.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate of Committee of Divines in favour of Michell upon his appointment to the sequestrated living of Abberton, Essex, in Oct. 1644.

Nov. 27. Petition of Walter Tucker, defendant in a writ of error in which John Stanbury is plaintiff: prays that the cause may shortly receive a hearing. L. J., X. 611.

Nov. 28. Petition of George, son of Syrack Spaban, in Persia, merchant. About four months ago, when going from Marseilles to Leghorn in a French barque, petitioner was taken at sea by a Naples man-of-war. 8,000 crowns taken from him, and he turned back to Marseilles, whence he went to Paris, hoping for some reparation, and failing in this, came to England in order to get a readier passage to Persia. He is now in extreme necessity, and likely to perish, and therefore prays the House to grant him a commendatory letter to the ministers of London and the suburbs, that they may mention his miserable condition to their congregations, and desire their charities for his subsistence and transportation. L. J., X. 611.

Nov. 28. Draft resolutions respecting the appointment of Sheriffs of Kent, Cardigan, &c. See L. J., X. 612. (Three papers.)

Nov. 28. Petition of George Warde, Vicar of Yalding, in the county of Kent. In May last the House ordered that petitioner should have institution and induction to the vicarage of Yalding, but he is opposed by William Brooke, who keeps possession of the glebe, saying that petitioner came not in by the King's power, and therefore he may try his right. Petitioner prays that Brooke may be ordered to deliver up possession of the glebe or to appear and answer before the House. L. J., X. 612.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding. (Undated.)

Nov. 28. Petition of John Mustard. Prays leave to sue the Earl of Bridgewater for a debt of 800*l.* due since June 1642. L. J., X. 612.

Nov. 28. Draft order for the Committee for Sequestrations in London to call the collectors of assessments for the army to account for the money received and paid by them. L. J., X. 612. In extenso.

Nov. 28. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Henry Bennett has been approved for the cure of Chale, in the Isle of Wight. L. J., X. 613.

Nov. 30. Petition of John Greene, clerk, administrator of Edward Wymarke. Petitioner details the proceedings taken by him against the late and present Earl Rivers for recovery of money due to Wymarke's estate, and prays that he, who has always adhered to the Parliament, may have liberty to proceed in the ordinary course of law against the Earl, who has actually borne arms against the Parliament. L. J., X. 613.

Nov. 30. Petition of Edward Aylmer, gentleman. Petitioner made composition for an estate of inheritance upon a report that one of his brothers was dead beyond seas; but his brother returned to England, and petitioner thereupon prayed for a review of his composition; before, however, he could effect anything the ordinance had passed both Houses. He prays leave to proceed with the review notwithstanding. L. J., X. 613.

Nov. 30. Certificate of clergy in favour of John Oglander whilst minister at Lymington. L. J., X. 613.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of Committee for the county of Southampton appointing Oglander to the living of Lymington. 6 April 1647.

Nov. 30. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Benjamin Agas has been approved for the cure of Chenies, Bucks. L. J., X. 614.

Nov. 30. Answer of Solomon Smith, Marshal of the High Court of Admiralty, to a petition of Peter Bergen, lately presented. The respondent, by virtue of his office, did take into his custody and sell the ship called the St. John Baptist for 1,600*l.*, and paid the money to George Warner, merchant, in obedience to orders from the Lord High Admiral and from the House. Bergen has already proceeded against the respondent in Chancery, and put him to 500*l.* unnecessary charges; he prays to be dismissed from further trouble in the matter, and that Bergen may be ordered to repay him his unnecessary disbursements.

Nov. [30]. Petition of Edward Davis, of London, merchant, for a speedy hearing of the writ of error brought by Solomon Smith, which has been long delayed.

Dec. 1. Petition of Thomas Andrews and others; petitioners being desired to adventure to the coast of Malabar, in India, for the support and supply of the English factory there, and to advance English trade, and keep it out of the hands of strangers, sent thither the Ruth, with a cargo of lead, cloth, &c., but as soon as the goods were landed for sale they were arrested by the creditors of Mr. Courteen, who had been disappointed of about 5,000*l.* which the East India Company had received of his in India, and this money not being paid is likely to be the cause of this stay, and of that of other merchants who are like to perish; the petitioners therefore pray that the East India Company may be ordered to pay over this money that the merchants in captivity, as it were, may be redeemed, and petitioners' goods freed, the factories on the coast of Malabar preserved, with freedom to send ships to trade thither, or at least that the petitioners may send to recover their estates left there to the value of above 16,000*l.* L. J., X. 617.

Dec. 1. Draft order in petitioner's favour.

Dec. 1. Petition of John Bridges; his sister Mary Talbot about two years since left the kingdom with her only child, and lived in a nunnery in Paris, where the child was bred a Roman Catholic, but she has now been privately brought to England, and kept obscurely, so that petitioner cannot speak with her; upon the death of his sister petitioner took out letters of administration of her estate, his only desire being to preserve it for his niece, and to keep her in England, to be bred a Protestant, that it may not be wasted in a nunnery, as it is chiefly in money; but John Sandall (whose wife is suspected of being a Roman Catholic) has inveigled the child to consent to his taking out letters of administration of her mother's estate, and applying to Sir Nathaniel Brent to avoid those granted to petitioner: prays that the administration granted to himself may continue in force, and that he may be at liberty to produce his allegations in the Prerogative Court. L. J., X. 617.

Dec. 1. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that William Hawling has been approved for the cure of Wrangle, Lincolnshire. L. J., 617.

Dec. 1. Petition of Anthony Libbe and Mary his wife, daughter and heir of Leonard Keate, deceased, and late His Majesty's ward; pray for an order for a certain lease, &c. now in the Court of Wards to be delivered to them to be produced at a trial at Oxford. L. J., X. 617.

Dec. 2. Affidavit of William Windrid that the servants of Thomas Williams did in June or July last cart and carry away five oak timber trees felled in May on Mimms Common, Herts, by order of Roger North. L. J., X. 623.

Dec. 2. Certificate from inhabitants of Fremington, Devon, that they have reaped much benefit from the ministry of Richard Wood during the absence of their late vicar, and desiring that he may succeed to the cure. L. J., X. 623.

Dec. 2. Certificate of Wood's ability and sufficiency for the ministry.

Dec. 4. Testimonial from neighbouring ministers that Samuel Crooke is upright, learned, and laborious. L. J., X. 623.

Dec. 20. Petition of John Humfries; prays that in consideration of his services he may be appointed surveyor or supervisor of the customs of the port of London. L. J., X. 635.

Dec. 20. Petition of Colonel Arthur Hill; petitioner having faithfully served the Parliament since the first eruption of the rebellion in Ireland was ordered by Colonel Monk and other officers in Ulster to attend the Parliament as their agent; petitioner's demands for satisfaction of money expended by him for the State were referred by the House of Commons to the Committee at Derby House; but before report was made to the House, petitioner, hardly able to subsist, much less to pay his own debts, has been arrested and cast into prison for a debt for which he is bound with Lord Chichester, and must unavoidably perish unless speedily relieved; he prays not only for release, but for protection for the future until he shall have received the money due to him from the State. L. J., X. 635.

Annexed:

1. Report from the Committee at Derby House upon Colonel Hill's claims. 8 Sept. 1648.

Dec. 20. Petition of Henry Witham and Elizabeth his wife; Henry Witham, a merchant in foreign parts, has much dealing with his father, also a merchant, who now owes petitioners 2,500*l*., besides arrears of an annuity; they are disabled to contest in law against their kindred, as all their means are in their father's hands, and suits are unnatural between father and son, they therefore pray the House to refer their differences to Aldermen of London, merchants, to state and settle, that they may have some relief in their sad condition. L. J., X. 635.

Dec. 20. Draft order for the ship Dreadnought to be broken up. L. J., X. 635. In extenso.

Dec. 20. Draft of additional ordinance respecting the election of officers for the city of London. L. J., X. 635. In extenso.

Dec. 20. Petition of the Stationers and Printers of London; by order of Parliament Sir Nathaniel Brent, Mr. Farnaby, and Mr. Langley, the schoolmaster of Paul's were appointed to license for the press all books of history, poetry, humanity, and philosophy; but Sir Nathaniel Brent has been since employed in greater business, Mr. Farnaby is dead, and Mr. Langley cannot spare time in regard of his school, so that divers books that would be beneficial to the Commonwealth lie unprinted, and trade is much hindered; the petitioners pray the House to add some additional licensers.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Thomas Walkley, stationer. About six years since petitioner bought a piece of poetry of Mr. Ben Johnson's, which cost him 40*l*., and printed it by authority, which cost him 300*l*. more. Sir Nathaniel Brent and Mr. Langley, the schoolmaster of Paul's, have been appointed by Parliament to license all books of poetry and humanity, so that petitioner's former authority is excluded. Sir Nathaniel Brent is out of town upon public affairs, and Mr. Langley pretends business so he cannot peruse the poem. Petitioner prays that Mr. Langley, or some other whom he may appoint, may be desired to peruse the copy and re-license it, in order that it may be entered in the Common Hall according to custom.

Dec. 23. Draft order for adding Mr. Love and others to the Committee for Sequestrations. L. J., X. 636. In extenso.

Dec. 23. Petition of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London; pray that the ordinance of the 20th instant, which enacted that no person who had subscribed or promoted the engagement for a personal treaty with the King in London should be elected to any office in the city of London, may be re-considered, as it is likely to deprive them of officers altogether, and that they may have liberty to elect honest, able, and well affected persons, fit to perform the several offices and duties. L. J., X. 637. In extenso.

Dec. 23. Order of the Court of Common Council appointing persons to present the preceding petition. L. J., X. 637. In extenso.

Parry v. Holmes. (Do.)

Dec. 26. Petition of Richard Williams, one of the yeomen of His Majesty's chamber in ordinary, aged sixty-four years and upwards; from the beginning of these distracted times the petitioner, with consent of both Houses attended the King in his place; he has never borne arms against the Parliament, and ever since the surrender of Oxford has resided peaceably in the Parliament's quarters, but nevertheless certain small rents belonging to him in the city of London have been sequestrated; he is aged, sickly, and illiterate, and is one of those on whose behalf Lieutenant-General Cromwell has interceded; he prays that the sequestration may be taken off his poor estate, and he enabled to receive the rents due last Michaelmas which are yet unpaid. L. J., X. 638.

Dec. 26. Testimonial to the piety and learning of Samuel Brunsell, minister of the Word. L. J., X. 638.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Walter Strickland at the Hague, to Stephen Marshall, one of the Assembly of Divines at Westminster; recommending Brunsell to his favour and courtesy, as well fitted to take the cure of a church in Nottinghamshire to which he has been called. 22 Dec. 1648.

Dec. 26. Certificate from the Assembly of Divines that Stanley Gowre has been approved for the cure of Trinity Church, Dorchester. L. J., X. 638.

Dec. 28. Draft order for freeing the lands of Alderman Isaac Pennington from a statute or recognizance due to Sir John Pennington. L. J., N. 640. In extenso.

Dec. 29. Petition of Alexander Lord Forbes; he has long attended the pleasure of both Houses concerning the accounts for his services in Ireland, which are now ready to be determined; he is desirous of embracing some honourable employment abroad, and prays liberty to levy and transport two thousand volunteers, that he may engage with some foreign prince. Noted.—Read nothing done.

Petition of Alice Dame Lyngen (wife of Sir Henry Lyngen) in the behalf of her said husband; petitioner, whose husband is a prisoner in Redd Castle, Montgomeryshire, prays that he may have liberty for six weeks to engage his estate for raising money to pay the fine upon his composition, and to settle some provision out of the poor remainder of his estate for the maintenance of herself and seven children, in case the heavy sentence of banishment must be inflicted upon him. Sir Henry Lyngen was ordered by the House of Commons to be banished 10 Nov. 1648, C. J., VI. 73; the sentence was revoked 13 Dec. 1648. C. J., VI. 96.

Petition of Dame Elizabeth Bale, wife of Sir John Bale, of Carlton Carliew, in the county of Leicester, and heretofore the wife of John St. Andrewe, Esq., deceased. Complains that her husband to whom on her marriage she brought jointure lands and a good personal estate, and by whom she has had two daughters, has not for eight or nine years allowed her any maintenance, and she has consequently been dependent upon the charity of friends. In the beginning of the war Sir John withdrew himself into one of the King's garrisons, and has now gone beyond the seas, having passed over his estate to his son Sir John Bale, the younger. Petitioner, having no remedy in the ordinary courts of justice at this time, prays their Lordships to make some order for her future maintenance.

Draft ordinance for removing Samuel Hall from the rectory of Petertavy [St. Peter Tavy], Devon, and confirming Andrew Gove in the living.

Draft resolution that if His Majesty shall come to enter into a treaty with his Parliament concerning the propositions, the House will provide 4,000*l.* a week for his expenses during the treaty.

Petition of Captain John Walker, sometime Scout-master General to Sir William Brereton. Petitioner at the beginning of these wars disbursed a very considerable estate in raising men and horse for the Parliament. He faithfully discharged his services, and now in his attendance upon Parliament for some part of his just disbursement and arrears he is arrested and imprisoned in the Compter in Wood Street, at the suit of Peter Lee and another for 80*l.*, which he is unable to pay by reason that he has exhausted his estate, and there is due to him above 3,000*l.*; prays for his release, and that his creditors may be ordered to receive their debts in such sort as petitioner shall receive what is due to him from the State.

Copy of preceding.

Petition of Thomas Snelgrave to the House of Commons. In Nov. 1641 petitioner lent 200*l.* for the suppression of the horrid rebellion in Ireland, and was to have been repaid with interest at 8 per cent. out of the moneys raised upon the 400,000*l.* bills, but he has never received any part thereof; prays that he may receive a like order to that granted to Philip Starkey (C. J., V. 483) to receive his money from such high collectors as are in arrear for the 400,000*l.* bills in the counties of Southampton, Berks, and Oxon.

Petition of Sir Robert Stewart, Knight and Colonel. Before the rebellion petitioner resided in Ireland, was captain in the standing army, and had the fort and Castle of Kilmore under the Great Seal during his life. Upon the breaking out of the rebellion, petitioner, being authorised by commission, raised and armed a regiment of foot and a troop of horse at his own charge, but he never received anything considerable towards the maintenance of them, although it pleased God to render both him and them very successful. Notwithstanding he is dispossessed of his command, he is very sensible of his own sufferings in all his undertakings, extending even to imprisonment and ruin. He took up on credit from several merchants provisions and ammunition for the relief of the Parliament forces and garrisons in Ireland to a very great value, and is likely to suffer for the same unless relief be speedily afforded him. Prays that as these provisions were taken up upon credit in the height of extremity, and when the Parliament was not in a condition of relieving the British there, he may be relieved from these engagements, and receive payment of his arrears.

Petition of Anne Gee, Alice and Vallentine, her two sisters, three distressed young gentlewomen, having neither father nor mother. The Earl of Antrim, who is in rebellion in Ireland is indebted to petitioners in the sum of 1,600*l.*, besides which they have lost by the rebellion an estate of 300*l.* a year, and are left destitute of all means of livelihood. Pray that the 1,600*l.* may be paid to them out of the Earl of Antrim's estate in this kingdom, which he has in right of his wife the Duchess of Buckingham, and in the meantime that they may be allowed six pounds a week out of the Treasury for sequestrations at Goldsmiths' Hall.

Petition of Elizabeth Scott, widow of Doctor Scott, late Dean of York, deceased, to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner's husband lately died in the King's Bench, where he had been imprisoned for seven years, and where he endured a hard restraint, and was thereby deprived of the benefit of renewing leases to provide for his family; during all this time there was an extent upon his whole estate, so that petitioner and her many children scarcely received a competent subsistence, and she is now deprived of all livelihood. Prays that some allowance may be made to her and her four daughters out of the lands belonging to the deanery of York, and that some place of habitation may be assigned to her.

Petition of Captain Robert Stevenson and others, all whose accounts are stated; petitioners, who have all according to their several duties discharged the trusts reposed in them, not only to the jeopardising of their lives but likewise to the exhausting of their estates, are now exposed to an unexpected strait in reference to their subsistence, and are constrained to remind their Lordships of an ordinance of Parliament vouchsafing relief to such persons as should bring to light the estate of any delinquent, recusant, or rebel, not yet discovered. Petitioners are able to prove that one Fitzwilliams, of Ireland, was not only a delinquent but a recusant and rebel, actually engaged in arms against the Protestant party, and possessed of a very large estate, part whereof remains in the hands of some of this kingdom, the whole being liable to sequestration. Petitioners pray their Lordships to appoint a time for the speedy hearing of such testimony as is ready to be tendered, and thereupon to grant them relief for the discharge of their arrears according to the ordinance.

Petition of divers officers and soldiers, to the Lords and Commons. Out of their good affection to the Parliament, and in defence of the true Protestant religion, and the laws and liberties of the subject, petitioners enlisted themselves in 1642 in the brigade under the Earl of Stamford, and were at the taking and reduction of several garrisons, in which services they cheerfully exposed themselves to all hazards, receiving many desperate wounds and other losses to the utter disabling of them to follow their callings. Pray that some speedy course may be taken for the payment of their arrears.

Petition of Colonel Thomas Morgan, late Governor of Gloucester, and the supernumerary officers of his regiment, lately disbanded by the ordinance of the 24th of December last (1647), whose accounts are all stated and registered by the Committee of the Army, to the Lords and Commons. Petitioners have with all fidelity served the Parliament, even in the saddest times, and have cheerfully submitted to the late ordinance for disbanding; seriously considering the distracted condition of the Parliament and kingdom they have hitherto been very tender in pressing their necessities; being most of them soldiers of fortune they will be reduced to an exigency if not speedily taken into consideration. They pray that one moiety of their arrears may be afforded them for the present and that the other moiety may be charged upon the excise. At the foot of the petition is a list of the services done, and the places stormed and reduced by the petitioners.

Annexed:—

1. List of officers of Colonel Thomas Morgan's regiment lately disbanded.

Petition of Thomas Chapman, Robert Steaphenson

William Brotherton, captains, Thomas Crompton, chaplain to Colonel Morgan's regiment, Nicholas Snell, commissary, Edward Babington, lieutenant, and Mathew Babington, to the Lords and Commons. Petitioners have great sums of money due to them from the Parliament for their arrears as appears by their debentures, and, forasmuch as they have discovered several delinquents, and several sums of money due to them for arrears of rent lying in their tenants' hands, petitioners pray that they may have the benefit of those discoveries towards their arrears.

Petition of Edward More, Esq.; petitioner is like to be defrauded of 6,000*l.* worth of lands by colour of a contract into which he was drawn by William Smith (a person well versed in bargaining), and of a fine passed upon a writ of covenant antedated at Oxford, whither Smith went presently after, and continued in actual war against the Parliament until he was taken prisoner at Hillesden House. Petitioner has no ordinary means to be relieved at law against the fine, and therefore prays that the record of the writ of covenant and dedimus potestatem upon which the fine is grounded may be commanded before their Lordships, and if it appears that the same was sealed at Oxford in the time that the Great Seal was surrupted hence, contrary to the ordinance of Parliament, then that the same may be taken off the file, and all proceedings grounded thereupon vacated.

Petition of many well affected people within the late lines of communication, London, who have voluntarily laid out themselves for the public safety. Petitioners have greatly disenabled themselves to manage their trades and callings, and to make payment of their just debts, many of which have been contracted purposely to serve the State, by means whereof, together with the decay of trade occasioned by the distemper of the times, many of them are brought to great want and poverty. Such confidence have they had of the integrity and prudent care of their Lordships to discharge the public debts out of the estates of delinquents and malignants, that, although their condition has been necessitous, they have forborne to make known their wants or to importune for their money; but now since the troubles of the land are in a great measure abated, and all the proposed ways of raising money to satisfy public debts are open, petitioners hope to find relief in their present address, and that it will not be thought unreasonable for those who have been most forward to assist the State in the time of extreme necessity now to expect a reimbursement of the money they advanced; pray that satisfaction may be made to them with all possible speed.

Petition of Ambrose Jenkins and Rice, his son, to the House of Commons; petitioner Ambrose was nineteen years ago for several debts imprisoned in the county of Montgomery, and, having then a suit in the Court of Chancery he employed Lewis Reynolds to be his solicitor, who, whilst Ambrose Jenkins was still in prison, brought in his notes of accounts of 329*l.*, which he pretended he had really laid out, and forced him to assign by conveyance certain lands in the county of Montgomery, valued at 27*l.* a year. After the death of Reynolds petitioners commenced a suit in the Court of Requests against his executor for the recovery of the lands, but the suit was dismissed. Petitioners pray for relief.

Petition of Mary Graves, wife of Nathaniel Graves, citizen of London. Petitioner's husband, to manifest his real affection to the Parliament, left his trade and freely went into service, as one of the life guards to the Earl of Manchester. He has since continued in the service, and is greatly in arrear of his pay, and is now fallen very sick, and not only he but petitioner and her children (after many intolerable sufferings and miseries) are like to perish for want of relief, and to be turned into the streets for their rent, and so to lose the benefit of their lease. Prays that her husband may receive the arrears due to him.

Petition of Thomas Goodwin, prisoner in Newgate, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords. Petitioner was lately employed in the Parliament service in Lord Fairfax's own regiment, and being disbanded retired with his debenture to petition for his arrears. He lent his horse to one Mr. Rosse, a gentleman of good repute as he conceived, but who, as it otherwise appears, did upon petitioner's horse with others commit a robbery upon Hounslow Heath. Upon the return of his horse petitioner was apprehended and committed, and at the last sessions condemned for the robbery, though he still denies the same, and will do so with a clear conscience to his last breath. Petitioner is descended of good parentage, and was never heretofore accused for the like or any other gross misdemeanour. He prays the Earl to send letters for his reprieve, and hopes in a short time to get the principal actors in the robbery apprehended and brought to trial.

Petition of the Mayor, Sheriffs, Common, and Citizens of the City of Dublin. Notwithstanding the great care taken by Colonel Michael Jones for the preservation of petitioners in drawing forth the army which was burdensome unto them, and keeping it for a long time in the field enduring all the miseries that a bitter winter season could inflict, wherein his honour suffered as much as the meanest, still enlarging his quarters and maintaining his army on the spoil of the enemy, yet the unavoidable necessities of the army since its return (occasioned by the want of timely supplies of money) have obliged petitioners to advance great sums for its relief, which, being levied weekly by way of cess, has so exhausted them that when money failed they spared not to expose for sale their household goods. The exigence whereof has forced many of the inhabitants to forsake the city, and others daily follow, not from any disaffection, but for want of subsistence, whereby the city will be suddenly dispeopled if supplies be not speedily dispatched. Pray their Lordships to commiserate their sad condition, and with them the army (so well deserving) being now reduced to such extremity that they are hardly in a condition to live, much less to prosecute the great advantage they have of the enemy, and which, if lost, will not be regained without much blood and treasure, but which may be improved with far less expense and with advantage to the English nation, whereby the safety of the kingdom may be provided for, many English Protestants relieved, and condign vengeance taken on the inhuman rebels, but this can only be accomplished by a speedy and plentiful supply of money, corn, and other necessities.

Petition of John Dobbs. By a decree in Chancery, made in the year 1627, petitioner was to enjoy a farm in Turvey, in the county of Bedford, for his life, and the possession thereof was accordingly settled in consideration of marriage and building, and of long and good service done by petitioner's father and mother, who had attended Lord Mordant and his lady, the late Earl of Peterborough's father and mother. Petitioner has ever since quietly enjoyed the same till of late the now Earl of Peterborough has sealed a lease to Thomas Bellingham to eject petitioner, and has proceeded at law and got a verdict by default, and has since procured judgment and execution and miserably turned petitioner out of doors. Petitioner prays that he may be permitted to proceed with the ordinary process of the Court of Chancery against the Earl of Peterborough, notwithstanding any privilege.

Petition of Elizabeth Crant, late wife of Captain Thomas Crant, deceased, Captain Lieutenant to Colonel Jones, to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner's husband faithfully served the Parliament from the beginning of the war until he was slain at Rowton battle in Cheshire. Since his death petitioner has had his arrears audited, and there is due for his services 500*l.* She has now attended more than two years and a half, but has obtained no satisfaction, except one month's pay last July twelvemonth. She and her children have been deprived of all their estates to the value of 4,000*l.* by the rebels in Ireland. She prays that an order may be granted, whereby she may be paid out of the estates of such papists or delinquents as she or her agents shall discover.

Petition of Jacob Cooke to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner held several lands in Thorpe Lubnam [Lubnam], in the county of Northampton, under George Warner, who, proving a delinquent, had his estates sequestered for public uses. Soon after the unhappy taking of Leicester by the King's forces, Major William Warner and George Warner, then in the King's army, and nephews of the delinquent, caused to be taken away from petitioner 800 sheep, and 500 lambs, besides beasts and other goods, to the value of 1,000*l.* for rent which they pretended to be due, but which petitioner had paid to the Committee of Northampton for the use of the Parliament. Petitioner prays that satisfaction for his losses may be made to him out of Warner's estate.

Petition of Noel Boteler to the Lords and Commons. Petitioner was heretofore one of the attorneys of his Majesty's Court of Whitehall, but upon the breaking out of the war His Majesty removed to Oxford, and caused the records of the Court to be carried thither, and commanded the officers to attend their places there.

Petitioner, being conscious of his duty to Parliament, could not by any persuasions be drawn to forsake his duty, although he saw no way but ruin to himself, his wife and family. He is now brought to such sad condition that unless something is done for his speedy relief he will be utterly undone, and although he hath hitherto forborne to trouble their honours in regard to the many weighty affairs, his cause is now so hopeless that if his application be fruitless he will be left without hope any longer to exist. Prays that relief may be afforded him out of some delinquent's estate, or that some place of employment may be conferred upon him.

Petition of Captain William Bedwell and others to the Lords and Commons. Petitioners have long and faithfully served the State, their arrears being wholly unsatisfied. They are ready to perish in prison, being there restrained, some for trivial debts, others for feigned actions, their arrears being far beyond their debts and engagements. Pray that their creditors may be ordered to accept assignments out of their several debentures and that petitioners themselves may have their liberty.

Petition of same, with certain others, to the same effect as preceding.

Petition of William Astry, an orphan of fourteen years of age, to Edward Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the Higher House of Parliament. Petitioner's father was born in Bedfordshire, and educated at Cambridge, but afterwards benefited at Bally Kelly in Ireland, where he lived until the late troubles, when he was plundered of all his substance, driven from his dwelling, and so ended his life, leaving petitioner destitute of livelihood; his father had taken care to have him brought up in learning, wherof he is ready to give account of his proficiency in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. He prays the Earl to recommend him to the care of the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge to take such course for his progression in learning, and for his competent livelihood as shall be fitting.

Draft ordinance that no privilege of Parliament be allowed to any peer who has deserted the Parliament or adhered to the King, or in any way assisted against the Parliament, or to any person deriving protection or privilege from such peer.

Petition of divers well affected people in Nottinghamshire and in the town of Nottingham, to the House of Commons. The county of Nottingham has from the beginning of these sad times borne a proportionable share with the deepest sufferers in the kingdom, and in some particulars unparalleled burdens have been put upon petitioners, as witness the vast charge towards maintaining the Scotch leaguer before Newark, &c. The county at the breaking out of the late troubles raised a regiment of horse, when other counties of far greater ability raised but one or two troops, and this regiment having received large contributions from petitioners for their maintenance do at present live upon free quarters in the county. These charges, together with the monthly assessment, free quartering of the army upon their several marches, and the new levies for the siege of Pontefract, cause petitioners (though unwillingly) to complain of their insufferable pressures. They do not doubt that the promoters of the late unsafe treaty were confederate with that perfidious rabble of Scots who, under the command of their traitorous Duke, lately invaded this kingdom. Petitioners pray Parliament fully to proceed in acting impartial justice upon the principal instruments of the late troubles, that all who shall be found to have been confederates with the Scots, or any other rebellious disturbers of the peace of the kingdom in the late commotion, may be proceeded against as rebels and traitors, that all officers of State employed for the receipt and disbursement of public money may be called to a strict and speedy account, and that having effected the good things for the kingdom contained in the remonstrance of the army, and whatever else may be necessary for the establishment of a true peace, and having provided for the succession of future equal representatives, then that they will prefix a short period to their own power, that so all the world may see they do not fear to have their actions searched by so indifferent a judicatory as a future Parliament. Petitioners further pray that the regiment of horse now quartered upon them may (being duly satisfied for their faithful service) be speedily disbanded or brought into the establishment of the army.

Reasons why it is humbly conceived that Colonel Whitecoat, Governor of Windsor Castle, should be considered with a larger allowance of pay than ordinary. He has been a Major-General in the field, and has commanded some of those who now have more pay voted for them than is voted for himself, which seems a dishonour to him. His losses for the Parliament's sake, by ships taken from him at sea and money lent, besides great arrears due to him, amount to 6,000*l*. Had he been governor at some seaport he might have helped himself by trade, but at Windsor there is no advantage that way. Windsor Castle, being an eminent place and much frequented by strangers, has occasioned more than ordinary expenses to the Governor, so that all he has hitherto received has not been sufficient to defray charges. The same argument on behalf of the Governor of Bristol has occasioned an augmentation of his pay. See C. J., VI. 108.

Jan. 11. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that John Wallis is well known to the Assembly as orthodox in judgment, painful in the work of the ministry, and of a godly life and conversation. L. J., X. 645.

Jan. 13. Petition of Sir Gervas Clifton; petitioner being rated for his composition at two thirds, the Commissioners at Goldsmiths' Hall upon information given that he was much over rated, referred his case back to the sub-committee, but by some mistake the composition at two thirds was reported to the House of Commons, and is now brought up to their Lordships. Upon petitioner's attending to rectify the composition, the Commissioners answered that they could not meddle therein till their former certificate was recommended back to them from their Lordships. Petitioner prays that his composition may be sent back to the Commissioners to be taken into their second consideration, in order that he may be rated at the same proportion as all others in the same condition and qualification. L. J., X. 645.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Commissioners referring the case to the sub-committee. 9 Jan. 1646-7.

Jan. 13. Certificate of the Assembly of Divines that they have approved of Richard Wolley for the rectory of Salwarpe, Worcestershire.

Jan. 16. Petition of Henry Walker. On the 30th of June last, their Lordships gave petitioner the benefit of publishing a book called "The Perfect Occurrences," which book has been approved of by the officers of the Lord General's army, but the officers of the Company of Stationers are not satisfied that all this is a sufficient license, except it be expressed in the words of the ordinance for printing of the 28th Sept. 1647; prays that he may be licensed to publish the book during the pleasure of the House. L. J., X. 645.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 30th June 1648.

2. Copy of certificate of Colonels and other general officers of the Lord General's army approving of the book. 13 Jan. 1648-9.

Jan. 16. Petition of Thomas Marsham and others about the 22nd of Nov. last the Earl of Suffolk complained against petitioners, who were thereupon ordered to put in their answer, which they have accordingly done. They pray that as they have done nothing contrary to law they may be dismissed. L. J., X. 645.

Jan. 16. Petition of Solomon Smith, Marshal of the Court of Admiralty. Of late many persons have brought actions at common law against petitioner for executing warrants and decrees under the seal of the Court of Admiralty, and especially Edward Davis who has recovered 400*l*. in the King's Bench against petitioner upon an action of trover. Prays their Lordships to grant an order discharging and vacating all judgments obtained against him, and to secure him from actions in time to come.

Feb. 5. Copies of various orders respecting the Committee for the revenues of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. C. J., VI. 132.

[Feb. 14.] Petition of Paul Tymmerman, of Amsterdam, merchant. About three years since petitioner freighted a ship's lading of wheat at Amsterdam for Lisbon, but was driven by contrary winds to put in at Plymouth, where the ship's lading, worth 1,200*l.*, was seized by the Mayor of the town; petitioner thereupon commenced an action against him to recover the same, but the House of Commons, by an order of the 12th of July 1644, took the charge upon the Parliament, and ordered petitioner to stay his action; since that time he has received no payment; he prays for speedy satisfaction or that the order prohibiting his proceeding at law may be dissolved. C. J., VI. 143.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 12 July 1644 mentioned in preceding.

1648-9. March 6. Original warrant for the execution of Henry Earl of Holland. See below, 20 June 1660.

Mar. 8. Petition of Sir John Owen, Knight, to the House of Commons. Petitioner is now under sentence of death, being charged for a gentleman's death, which he humbly conceives he has much to plead against. Prays that his life may be spared. C. J., VI. 159. Sir John Owen was condemned to death by the High Court of Justice, but upon this petition his execution was respite, and he was subsequently pardoned.

Mar. 19. Order of the Committee to whom the petition of John Poyntz alias Morris and others was referred appointing a day for hearing the matter.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Wm. Littleton to John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments; on Saturday morning, about three o'clock, thirty or forty soldiers (as they said they were) came to Northokenden Hall and violently broke open the doors, and forced all the people out of the house, driving the men along the highway before them through the dirt, punching them and pricking them with their swords; some of the soldiers went away with what they thought fit, whilst others stayed to keep possession and remained till about four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, when Col. Carew Mildmay, a Justice of the Peace, came, and being refused admission commanded the constable and countrymen there present to enter and apprehend the soldiers, which was done, and they are now conveying them to Colchester gaol. Marriott is in custody as an abettor of this burglary, for which I intend to prosecute them all at the next assizes; they pretend ignorance in the business, saying that they came peaceably at eight in the morning, and that nobody was in the house; they had with them a quire of printed papers containing their petition and articles to the General, whereof they gave one to the justice and to those that would receive them; I am glad we have caught them at this advantage though with much damage to us. I have been advising with Mr. Walker about the regular way to proceed, as also about the information against them for perjury. 1 Jan. [1648-9].

2. Letter from Thomas Robinson to Mr. Browne, at his house in Stannaway [Stanway] Essex. The writer understands that Mr. Browne can give testimony with respect to the Act of Parliament, 43 Eliz., for the establishment of the estate of John Poyntz alias Morris, which Act Mr. Browne, the Clerk of the Parliaments, and others, pretend to be forged. The writer, who is engaged as solicitor for Mr. Poyntz, has, with Major Hurst counsel for Mr. Poyntz, obtained a Committee of the House of Commons to hear the matter, and he requests Mr. Browne to refresh his memory and strengthen himself with all the information and knowledge at his command, and in the interim to conceal what knowledge he has and not to impart it to any. 1 Mar. 1648-9.

3. Letter from T. Robinson to Mrs. Atkine; thanks her for the care she has taken of his letter to Mr. Browne; begs her to accompany him into Essex to see Mr. Browne, or if she is unable to do this he requests that she will give him a letter certifying that he comes on behalf of Mr. Morris. 26 Mar. 1649.

4. Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Atkine to Colonel Walton; prays that Captain Phillips and Captain Pace may be ordered to attend the Committee for Indemnities, in order that she may be acquitted of the great scandal which now lies upon her. 17 April 1649.

Mar. 24. Petition of the Committee for the Militia of Westminster and parts adjacent to the House of Commons; petitioners have been, by an Act of Parliament of the 19th instant, appointed a Committee for the Militia for one year. They have no room to sit in, or magazine, and they pray that rooms in Worcester House may be assigned to them. C. J., VI. 173.

April 21. Resolutions of the House of Commons respecting the transferring of certain sums formerly charged upon the excise to the deans and chapters' lands. C. J., VI. 199. In extenso.

Annexed:

1. Draft of portion of preceding.

[1649, May 5.] Petition of Sir Henry Radley, of Yardburgh [Yarborough], in the county of Lincoln, to the House of Commons. Prays for a mitigation of the fine of 200*l.* which is demanded of him at Goldsmiths' Hall, as he has only an estate for life of 90*l.* per annum. C. J., VI. 202.

[1649, May 8.] Petition of the undertakers, adventurers, and purchasers, with Robert Earl of Lindsey, deceased, in the draining of that part of the fens in Lincolnshire lying between Bourn, Boston, and Lincoln, commonly called the Earl of Lindsey's draining. Petitioners were, by several judgments of Commissioners of Sewers warranted by statute, put into possession of fourteen thousand acres of the said lands, being their recompense for their great charge and hazard of the works. At the beginning of this Parliament certain persons petitioned the House of Lords, pretending wrongs in the prosecution of the drainage works, and after divers days hearing of the matter their Lordships ordered the quiet possession of the lands to the Earl of Lindsey and his participants. The business was heard at the same time before a Committee of the House of Commons, and was nearly ready for a report, when the complainants taking advantage of the public distractions became their own judges, and threw petitioners out of possession, and ever since detained the lands, much impairing the public works to the great loss of the Commonwealth and ruin of many of the petitioners. Pray that the matter may be referred for hearing to a joint committee of the two Houses. C. J., VI. 204.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same, praying that the matter may be heard in such manner as their Honours shall be pleased to appoint.

[1649, May 9.] Humble proposals of Sir John Pakington, Baronet. Offers to pay 4,000*l.* in addition to 500*l.* he has already paid in full discharge of his fine. C. J., VI. 206.

May 10. Order of the House of Commons for the report concerning Sir John Danvers to be made this day sevensnight. C. J., VI. 206. In extenso.

May 15 to Oct. 16. Orders signed by Robert Coytmore to Edward Husbands; to deliver copies of various Acts and declarations of Parliament for distribution amongst the Fleet, &c. Nine papers.

[1649, May 17.] Petition of John Barnes and others, twenty-four servants to the Right Honourable Henry Earl of Danby, deceased. Petitioners having spent their youth and strength in his Lordship's service, he, by his will made in December 1640, gave them several legacies, proportionable to their annual wages during their lives, to be paid by his executors out of particular lands. By a codicil annexed to the will, which begat a second publication in December 1643, the validity of the will became to be questioned as against the State for his delinquency. Petitioners pray that allowance may be made to them of their several annuities and legacies out of the great estate of the Earl under sequestration. C. J., VI. 211.

[1649, May 25.] Petition of the Dutch officers, widows, and fatherless children to the Supreme Authority of England, the Commons in Parliament assembled. Petitioners, who are strangers and who have faithfully served, are now brought to such miserable extremities by their long attendance that they are ready to perish and are likely to be cast into prison for debt. Pray that they may be furnished with the means of transporting themselves and families to their native country that they may not go begging home, some of them living in the farthest part of Germany. C. J., VI. 217.

[1649, May 26.] Petition of Jane Farrett, widow, late wife of Captain James Farrett, deceased, to the Supreme Authority of England, the Commons in Parliament assembled. Petitioner's husband, who served the Parliament in the army of the late Earl of Essex, died lately in Bedford Bury, in the parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, being starved to death for want of necessary sustenance (as the searchers are ready to make oath), leaving petitioner with five children ready also to perish with hunger. There was due to petitioner's husband 400*l.* and upwards for arrears, a fourth part of which, with interest, was about two years since charged upon Goldsmiths' Hall, but he only received some small interest, although his name was in the Scottish list to be paid in course. Petitioner prays an order for present payment of the said fourth part for burying her husband, whose corpse still lies above ground, and for the relief of herself and four children. The petition is noted with a certificate of William Williams, parish clerk of St. Martin's, that the searchers specified that Captain James Farrett was starved to death. C. J., VI. 217.

June 12. Draft letter from John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, to Mr. Hurst. I have heard of your discourses about me touching Morris' business, but little value any of your speeches, and for your own sake only desire you to forbear the like for the future; it is well known how desirous I have been to have the business heard, that so a full discovery may be made of the greatest perjury, forgery, and combination ever heard of; your conscience cannot but tell you that there is no such Act as is pretended, but if you are determined to act as you have done (as appears by intercepted letters) beyond the limits of a counsellor at law, you will be but a blemish to the profession of the long robe. The strength of your confidence is discovered, and when the business comes to a full examination that truth will be told that you and your clients little dream of. This I thought fit to let you know in cold blood.

June 13. Letter from John Hurst to Mr. Browne in reply to preceding. Takes Mr. Browne's letter in good part and hopes, though as counsel he endeavours to discover a most subtle contrivance, that no prejudice to the long robe shall arise by any act of his. Is sure that no letter under his hand hath been intercepted or written which in anything concerns Morris. Has told Mr. Powis that he shall endeavour the discovery of the truth in no other way than shall be for the glory of God and the satisfaction of the whole world, let the blame lie where it will.

[1649, July 9.] Petition of Lady Spottswood to the House of Commons. Petitioner was one of the first to suffer by the rebellion in Ireland, having her servants murdered, her houses plundered, and her goods and lands seized upon by those bloody rebels. She was compelled to fly to England her native land, where she has since sojourned with her children, and, though reduced to much misery, and want ordinary subsistence, she never presumed to trouble the House for relief as many others in her case did, fearing to interrupt the weighty affairs of State, but she is now constrained by her crying necessities to pray the House to compassionate her case, and bestow upon her some competent sum of money, whereby she and hers may be relieved until she may recover her own. She desires satisfaction for a parcel of timber of the value 300*l.*, which Sir Henry Tichborne employed in fortifying Dundalk, and for use by the soldiers of the garrison of Enniskillen ever since the rebellion of a small parcel of land value 56*l.* per annum. C. J., VI. 255.

[1649, July 9.] Petition of John Bartlett, citizen and stationer of London, to the Supreme Authority of England, the Commons assembled in Parliament. In 1634 petitioner was committed to Newgate for refusing to pay the first ship money (contrary to the Petition of Right), and was detained without bail many weeks to the peril of his life by reason of the infection of the plague raging there. In 1637 he was by means of the Archbishop of Canterbury brought to the Council Board and committed to the Fleet, where he remained for six months without any just cause, whereby he was damned at the least 1,000*l.* Petitioner has received no redress and there is due to him now 25*l.* for two thousand remonstrances of the 2nd of May 1642 delivered into the House. The persons who have wronged him are now dead and their estates disposed of, and petitioner therefore prays that his great sufferings may be taken into consideration, and that some reasonable compensation may be granted to him either out of the estates of Deans and Chapters, or otherwise as the House shall deem most expedient. C. J., VI. 256.

July 14. Draft order for continuing the allowance of 400*l.* per annum granted to Dr. James Usher for six months longer. C. J., VI. 260.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the House of Commons granting the allowance. 5 Oct. 1647. L. J., V. 327. In extenso.

Aug. 1. Draft of an Act for disposing of the sequestrations of the new delinquents in the county of York towards the disbanding of the forces in the county. C. J., VI. 273.

Aug. 4. Draft of an Act for settling courts for the administration of justice to the people in cases of wills, administrations, legacies, marriages, and divorces. C. J., VI. 274, &c.

Aug. 15. Petition of divers Officers and Servants to the Sergeant-at-arms attending the House; they have attended to their duties with great diligence, and have spent time and pains and some of them money therein, but have received no salaries; the Committee to which their case was referred in February last has reported, but the House has been so occupied with weighty affairs that nothing has been done in the matter; they pray for relief. Sept. 19. Petition of Major George Wither to the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses in Parliament assembled; his patience has been exercised for almost six years past, but he thanks them for their charitable respect to his sufferings and services, and hopes that upon further information their gracious intentions will be more effectual for his relief; for want of the arrears and disbursements due to him his family is reduced from eighteen household servants to one, his diet from several dishes at a meal to many meals out of one dish, and otherwise to no meal in the whole day; he is now feeding upon his household stuff, in hope that when that is consumed God will send more or take him and his out of this unmerciful world where their sad condition is neither believed nor regarded. Sickness has already given an earnest thereof; nonpayment of rent is likely soon to render him harbourless, unless a prison, which has never yet received him for his own debt, shall harbour him for an engagement for the State. He prays that certain sums already voted to him may be paid, and that a considerable portion of the estate of John Denham or others may be conferred upon him, that so he may possess the gate of his enemies to the encouragement of himself and others in the service of the State. C. J., VI. 298.

Dec. 19. Copy of letter from Oliver Cromwell, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to the Speaker of the House of Commons:—
Mr. Speaker,

Not long after my last to you from before Waterford, * [finding the indisposition in point of health increasing, and our foot falling sick near ten of a company every night they were upon duty, and our numbers, not above three thousand healthful foot in the field, being necessitated to put so many into garrisons as I have given you an account all along, the enemy mustering about ten or twelve thousand horse and foot, having well near as many in the town as we without, our bread and other necessities not coming to us] by reason of the tempestuousness of the weather, we thought fit and it was agreed to march away to winter quarters to refresh our men until God shall please to give further opportunity for action. We marched off the second of this instant, it being as terrible a day as ever I marched in in all my life. Just as we marched off in the morning, unexpected to us the enemy had brought an addition of near two thousand horse and foot to the increase of their garrison, which we plainly saw on the other side of the water. We marched that night some ten or twelve miles through a craggy country to Kilmaethomas, a castle some eight miles from Dungarvan [where we had to many scarce straw, food, or firing, being deceived in reports of the place]. As we were marching off in the morning from thence the Lord Broughill (I having sent before to him to march up to me) sent a party of horse to let me know he was with about twelve or thirteen hundred of the Munster horse and foot about ten miles off, near Dungarvan, which was newly rendered to him. [And, indeed, upon this occasion I must needs say that in the bringing in of this garrison, Kingssale, the fort of Bandonbridge, Mallow, and divers other garrisons, his Lordship hath been most eminently serviceable unto you, and I do earnestly and humbly desire he may be taken into consideration, his Lordship never having shrunk from your interest, though under as great trials and necessities as any man, he having his whole fortune under the power of the enemy, which was in Ireland, and that little in England so engaged that I dare say his wants were scarce to be paralleled; and as yet his estate lies in those countries which are under the enemy's power. Sir, I take no pleasure to mention these things of charge, but where eminent services are done, and those enabling the State to give marks of their favour and good acceptance, I trust it will be accounted no fault in me to represent the merits of men to you.] In the midst of those good successes, wherein the kindness and mercy of God hath appeared, the Lord in wisdom and for gracious ends best known to himself, hath interlaced some things which may give us cause of serious consideration what His mind therein may be; and we hope we wait upon Him, desiring to know and to submit to His good pleasure. The noble Lieutenant-general (whose finger to our knowledge never acked in all these expeditions) fell sick (we doubt upon a cold taken upon our late wet march and ill accommodation) and went to Dungarvan, where (struggling some four or five days with a [pestilential and contagious spotted] fever) he died, having run his course with so much honor, courage, and fidelity as his actions better speak than my pen. What England hath lost thereby is above me to speak. I am sure I have lost a noble friend and companion in labours. [Before that my poor kinsman, Major Cromwell (if I may name him), died before Waterford of a fever; since that two persons eminently faithful, godly, and true to you, Lieutenant-Colonel Wolfe and Scout-Master-General Rowe, are dead at Youghall. Thus] you see how God mingles out the cup unto us; indeed, we are at this time a crazy company, yet we live in His sight, and shall work the time that is appointed us, and shall rest after that in peace. But yet there hath been some sweet at the bottom of the cup, of which I shall now give you an account. Being informed that the enemy intended to take in the fort of Passage, and that Lieutenant-General Farrell with his Ulsters was to march out of Waterford with a considerable party of horse and foot for that service, I ordered Colonel Zanchie (who lay on the north side of the Blackwater) to march with his regiment of horse and two pieces of two troops of dragoons, to the relief of our friends, which he accordingly did, his party consisting in all of about three hundred and twenty. When he came some few miles from the place he took some of the enemy's stragglers in the villages as they went, all which he put to the sword; seven troopers of his killed thirty of them in one house. When he came near the place he found the enemy had close begirt it with about five hundred Ulster foot under Major Oneale; Colonel Woogan also, the Governor of Duncannon, with a party of his, with two great battering guns and a mortar-piece; and Captain Browne, the Governor of Ballehack, was there also. Our men furiously charged them and beat them from the place. The enemy got into a place where they might draw up, and the Ulsters, who bragged much of their pikes, made indeed for the time a good resistance, but the horse pressing sorely upon them broke them, killed near a hundred upon the place, took three hundred fifty prisoners, amongst which Major Oneale and the officers of five hundred Ulster foot, all but those which were killed; the renegade Woogan, with twenty-four of Ormond's fuseses, and the Governor of Ballehack, as* concerning some of these I hope I shall not trouble your justice. This mercy was obtained without the loss of one of our party, only one shot in the shoulder. Lieutenant-General Farrald was come up very near with a very great party to their relief, but our handful of men marching towards him, he shamefully hasted away and recovered Waterford. It is not unworthy taking notice that, having appointed a public day of thanksgiving throughout your territories in Ireland (as well as a week's warning would permit) for the recovery of Munster, which proves a sweet refreshment to us, even prepared by God for us after our weary and hard labour, that that very day and that very time that men were praising God was this deliverance wrought. [Sir, in all my addresses to you I have much declined to make discourses either of the enemy's numbers or other advantages or of what remains to be recovered to you, or of the ways and means best to break and hinder the enemy's design or interests or what might best promote your own, or indeed to trouble you with many discourses of this kind, desiring chiefly to present you with narratives of fact. But forasmuch as there is an aptness from a current of successes to apprehend a work to be done when indeed the greater part rest behind, and thereby that which should enable to finish and perfect may be withdrawn or slackened, to the prejudice of public interest, I thought fit to take the boldness to present you with a true view of the state of affairs here so far as occurs to me. At the present Oneale's party are in full conjunction with the Earl of Ormond, by which they contribute the assistance of near 7,000 effective horse and foot, these being the eldest sons of the Church of Rome, most cried up and confided in by the clergy. The rest of the army consists of the old English-Irish, some protestants, some papists, and other popish Irish, who are carried by the interest of Ormond, Clanreckerd, Castlehaven, Muskere, Taff, and other old English and Irish, both lords and gentlemen, who are able to bring, and have already in the field very considerable numbers of bodies of men not to be neglected upon any human confidence, or undervalued. They have so much of Ireland still in contribution as ministers to them a livelihood for the war, all the natives, almost to twenty, being friends to them, but enemies to you. And although God hath blessed you with a great tract of land in longitude alongest the shore, yet it hath but a little depth into the country; and the people that are under your contribution, being so daily robbed by their neighbours, are disabled from following their tillage whereby to pay the same; and we cannot be in all places to protect them, unless we should resolve to keep no body of an army in any one place. I mention this not to increase your charge, but to prevent mistakes concerning an over value of your Irish contributions as yet. And, therefore, if the money out of England allotted to this army be not continued to us the army will no ways be able* to subsist, nor to prosecute your business. In the next place, if† this interest grow purely popish, which the Roman clergy are highly labouring, and are in a probable way to accomplish, then it cannot be expected but supplies will come to them from foreign parts, which do too fast already. And, therefore, it is humbly presented that such shipping as will be necessary for this coast may be continued to us. The ports by which the enemy expects their supplies of powder and all other ammunition (which, indeed, being kept from them will disable them to their defence, they having no manufacture within themselves) are Waterford, which we have not as yet been able closely to shut up, and where less than two ships cannot be applied for the ends aforesaid, as also for the straightening of it, and the fort of Duncannon, where now no ships are, partly because those determined for the winter fleet are not yet come, which we desire may be speeded. Next, the bay of Dingle, in the river of Shannon, whither (as we are informed) divers ships with ammunition are coming, Galloway, in which two places less than three or four ships (whereof one or two of countenance) cannot be, and Sligo. As also two ships to lie between Scotland and the North, and some to follow the motions of the army for their assistance with necessaries. This is the sum of what I thought fit to present unto you at this time; and if we may be allotted any share of judgment (being upon the place) we hope we have represented nothing unworthy of due consideration. And although this‡ bespeaks a continuance of charge, yet the same good hand of Providence, which hath blessed your affairs hitherto, is worthy to be followed to the uttermost. And who knows, or rather who hath not cause to hope, that He may in His goodness put a short period to your whole charge. Than which no worldly thing is more desired and endeavoured by Petition of divers officers of Munster. By the violent indirect and contrary practices of Lord Inchiquin petitioners were forced from their several trusts, wherein through great difficulties and exigencies they faithfully served against the rebels. The House of Commons granted an order for the stating of their accounts to satisfy them in part out of such discoveries of delinquents as they should make. This course they humbly conceive (in regard to their present sharp necessities) too difficult and too dilatory for those of their capacities to affect or attend. Pray that an order may be made for payment of a portion of their arrears for their present comfort and relief, and to enable them for future service.

Petition of Elizabeth Eldred, widow, relict of Walter Eldred, his late Majesty's silkman, and now your honours' tenant of Mote Park in Berks, to the Supreme Authority of England, the Commons assembled in Parliament. There is due to petitioner by two Privy Seals the sum of 10,142*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.*, besides 400*l.* for her husband's arrears for wares delivered to his late Majesty. Although petitioner was long a suitor to the Committee of the Revenue she never received one penny, but was told that if she could find out any of the King's revenue not disposed of she should have it. Upon inquiry she found that Mote Park was undisposed of, which then lay common, the fences being pulled up, and no profit received from it by the committee who upon her petition granted it to her at a rent, which she has since paid in full, she has also been at great charge in new making the fences and repairing the houses which were ready to fall down. She prays that in consideration of her great charge of twelve children, and the sums of money owing to her late husband, the debt may be paid out of his late Majesty's revenue, and that Mote Park may be assured to her with some reasonable allowance.

Petition of divers poor Inhabitants of the parish of Sutton, in the Isle of Ely and county of Cambridge, to the Supreme Power of the Nation, the Commons of England in Parliament assembled. About four thousand acres of common fens and marshes, which formerly belonged to the poor of the parish, were in the year 1624 unjustly taken away and inclosed, and some of the best part given by some rich men of the parish, to whom it did not belong, to the Dean and Chapter of Ely for obtaining their end in defrauding the poor of the rest. In 1645 petitioners applied to the House of Commons for redress of their grievances, and for so doing seven of them were committed to the gaol of Ely by Sir Miles Sands, who by force kept them from going forth to assist the Parliament against the late King. Petitioners pray that the poor of the parish may enjoy the commons and other benefits belonging to them, that the land unjustly given to the Dean and Chapter of Ely may be restored to those to whom it belongs, that the poor may receive satisfaction from those that have wronged them, and that they may be set to work as in other countries, so that they may not all perish of famine in the time of plenty.

Petition of distressed Officers and Captains to the House of Commons. Petitioners have all been upon actual service, and many have been wounded and imprisoned, but are now unfortunately left out. Pray that their sad condition may be taken into consideration, and that some may be appointed to take a view whether a disability in their profession or disaffection to the cause be the reason of their abandoning, and if any such be made apparent then they pray that justice may swiftly take hold on them, that the rest may not perish for company, but that they may be kept from starving, a death that some of their quality have tasted, choosing rather to perish in silence than to be the finger mark of the world or a trouble to so great a Council.

Petition of Christopher Dodington. Upon some mistake the Committee for Somerset seized petitioner's estate, he being then in London. Upon notice whereof he appealed to the Committee for Sequestrations, who, by two several orders of the 8th Jan. 1646-7 and 1st March 1647-8, ordered the case to be reported to both Houses of Parliament, and because there was no judgment against petitioner respited the receiving the rents and profits of his estate, but by reason of public affairs there was no report made. Petitioner never aided the late King or his party, but advanced 240*l.* upon the propositions, and has always been conformable to the acts of the Commonwealth. There is no judgment against him, and he has always received the rents of his small estate, but by reason of the said seizing his name has been returned by the Commissioners for compounding for the additional bill of sale. Prays the House to take into their grave judgment the state of his case as it stands certified by the Committee.

1. Order of Committee of Sequestrations referred to in preceding. 8 Jan. 1646-7.
2. Further order of the Committee. 1 Mar. 1647-8.

Petition of those reduced Officers and Officers' widows that have tickets under the hand of Mr. Richard Wilcox, auditor, to the Supreme Authority of the Nation, the Commons of England in Parliament assembled. Notwithstanding several ordinances have been passed for their relief they have not at present received any part of the arrears due unto them. They pray that Mr. Pocock and Mr. Greenhill may be appointed to pay them, with all convenient expedition, the 9,100*l.* voted for them by the order of the House of the 4th of April 1648 (C. J., V. 526), proportionably as the money will hold out, and that some other may be appointed in Mr. Greenhill's place, if he still deny as he does now to agitate in the distribution.

Statement of various orders made for the relief of reduced officers and officers' widows.

Petition of Sarah Bastard to the Supreme Power, the Parliament of the Commonwealth of England. Was the 18th child of her father, who settled upon her a piece of land near Castle-Derrick in Ireland, and a stock of cattle worth 40*l.*; she has been stripped of everything by the rebels, and forced to seek refuge in England. Prays for relief.

Petition of Katherine Green, widow, to the Supreme Authority of this Commonwealth, the Parliament of England. Was deprived of an estate near Athlone in Ireland by the last rebellion; is now 80 years of age; has charge of a grandchild, and is in great want, and likely to perish if not speedily relieved; prays that a competence may be granted for her subsistence.

Jan. 3. Copy of order of the Committee of the House of Commons appointed to hear the business upon the petition and appeal of John Poyntz alias Morris and Mary his wife, and others, fixing the hearing for the 10th instant, and ordering John Browne and Wm. Littleton to attend and produce the documents, &c. used at the hearing before the late House of Lords.

Annexed :—

1. Abstract of appeal of John Morris alias Poyntz.
2. Reasons why the appeal should be dismissed, the plaintiff dis-paupered, &c.

Jan. 10. Copy of order of the Committee for reformation of the Universities for the removal of certain enumerated Fellows of New College, Oxford, who continue to hold their fellowships contrary to the authority of Parliament.

Feb. 20. Copy of order of the Committee upon the case of Poyntz alias Morris and others for the hearing of the case on the 22nd instant.

Feb. 25. Order of the same Committee for the hearing of the case on the 4th of March.

April 11. Draft orders respecting the repair of Carlisle. C. J., VI. 396. In extenso.

April 18. Draft order respecting the form of the Commission empowering Commissioners to manage the public treasury of the Commonwealth. C. J., VI. 400. In extenso.

April 26. Draft order for 1,400*l.* to be paid Dr. Thomas Mooreton, late Bishop of Durham, out of the arrears of the revenue of the late bishoprick, he first taking and subscribing the engagement. C. J., VI. 404. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Copy of bill of complaint to the Commissioners of the Great Seal presented by John Poyntz alias Morris for review and reversal of the proceedings brought against him and others by the late Sir Adam Littleton and others. Upon the death of Poyntz Poyntz the complainant John claimed to succeed to certain estates at North and South Okenden and elsewhere as heir male, whereas Sir Adam Littleton claimed by right of his wife as heir female. The complainant at a trial at Colchester produced a copy of an Act of Parliament in support of his claim, which was afterwards declared by the House of Lords to be a forgery; his house was also broken into by John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, by virtue of an order of the House of Lords, and various documents taken away, whilst John Poyntz alias Morris and others were sentenced to fine and imprisonment. The complainant alleges that all these proceedings were unjust, that the witnesses produced against him were perjured and suborned, and desires a reversal of the proceedings, restoration to his rights, and vindication of his character.

Annexed :—

1. Draft of the several answer of John Browne, Esq., late Clerk of the Parliaments, one of the defendants to the bill of complaint of John Poyntz alias Morris. Browne knows nothing of any settlement of the lands in question, having no interest whatever therein, unless Morris alludes to a paper document purporting to be an Act of Parliament relating to those lands, and to two parchment writings purporting to be fines, which were all by judgments of the House of Lords declared to be forgeries, and to be for ever vacated and cancelled, in connexion with which Leonard Darby was convicted of perjury. All other allegations against himself Browne absolutely denies.
2. Affidavit of Thomas Elslyott. He happened to be present at the house of Mr. John Browne, late Clerk of the Parliaments, about four years ago, when Mrs. Isabel Smith and Leonard Darby met

Mr. Browne and showed him a copy of an Act of Parliament touching Morris' estate, and asked him if the signature were his, to which he answered that it was, and that he would justify it and who durst deny it. The deponent happened also to be present on another occasion in the Tower, where the records of Parliament were transcribed, when Mr. Browne came and asked his clerks which of them had made a copy of the Act and given it to Morris to use at Essex assizes against his friend Sir Adam Littleton, to which they answered that they had but copied and delivered it in the usual way, and were not to blame; upon which he asked for the record, and having received it, as deponent believes, went away in great displeasure. 27 July 1650.

3. Information of Frances, the wife of John Croft, of Westminster. She has heard Wm. Hunt deny that he had ever given an Act of Parliament from Mr. Browne to Mrs. Isabel Smith. 29 Oct. 1650.

4. Information of Anne Hunt, relict of Wm. Hunt. Her late husband called the Act concerning Morris a pretended Act and no Act; and she has heard him say that Morris Poyntz, Mrs. Smyth, and the rest of the pack had done such a piece of roguery as never was heard of in England. 30 Oct. 1650.

5. Memorandum that the bill of complaint is brought merely for vexation, and is full of scandals, falsities, and defamations. (Undated.)

Jan. 3. Order of the Committee for Indemnity for the Clerk of the Peace for the city of London to furnish the Committee with a copy of the indictment against Mr. John Browne for burglary, for his searching with constables and officers in a house, by order of the late House of Peers, for a counterfeit Act of Parliament.

Jan. 16. Draft letter from the Parliament to the King of Spain, thanking him for his good will expressed through his Ambassador Don Alonzo de Cardenas, but desiring the punishment of the murderers of Antony Ascham, Resident of Parliament in Spain. C. J., VI. 524.

[1652, June 30.] Copy of petition of the Roman Catholics to the Supreme Authority of this nation, the Parliament of the Commonwealth of England. Petitioners have long waited some happy leisure when a hearing might be allowed them of their many sad pressures. Even such as are sequestered for delinquency have still comforted their sorrows with the hope that they should at last be received to mercy, since the general votes for compositions of the 17th of March 1648-9 seem clearly to imply them capable thereof, when the rules concerning them should be agreed upon. The wisdom of Parliament now applying itself to establish the people of this commonwealth in a quiet and settled condition, petitioners have confidence that they alone shall not be excluded from so universal a benefit. They pray that the laws and proceedings concerning them may be taken into consideration, and clemency and compassion used towards them by composition or otherwise as may consist with the public peace and with their living in their native country. They further pray that Parliament will vouchsafe them the permission of clearing their religion of whatsoever may be inconsistent with government. (Much mutilated.) This paper is undated, and is not mentioned in the journals, but a Committee was this day appointed "to consider what is fit to be done in reference to popish recusants that shall conform." C. J., VII. 147.

Nov. —. Paper (not signed) purporting to be a declaration and acknowledgment by John Poyntz alias Morris and Mary his wife, that whereas in October 1647 they presented a petition to the late Lord General Fairfax at Putney against John Browne, then Clerk of the Parliaments, accusing him of having embezzled out of his office an Act of Parliament pretended to be made in the reign of Queen Elizabeth for joining the estates of the Morris' and Poyntz' together after a copy had been made and compared therewith, and of having hired one Godfrey Cade, a prisoner in the Fleet, to swear that he had forged the said copy; now they, the said John Poyntz alias Morris and Mary his wife, freely and voluntarily declare and acknowledge that the aforesaid petition is false and scandalous in all and every the charges and accusations therein contained. They desire Mr. Browne to forgive them and to accept this public acknowledgment as satisfaction for the same, and for the 5,000*l.* justly recorded against them at his suit, as in regard of their poverty they are unable to give him any other recompense.

Nov. —. Another copy in Browne's handwriting.

Nov. —. Draft of same.

Nov. —. Draft of another declaration to the same effect by Mary Poyntz alias Morris.

1652. Copy of judgment delivered in Easter term 1652 in an action for debt before the Keeper of the liberty of England, by authority of Parliament in the Upper Bench at Westminster, between Robert and John Loder and the Earl of Berks.

Annexed:—

1. Bond for 600*l.* entered into by the Earl of Berks and Henry Stevens for payment of 312*l.* to Robert Loder. 3 Aug. 1638.

2. Particulars of the real estate of Thomas Earl of Berks now prisoner in the Upper Bench prison.

3. Power of attorney from Robert and John Loder to William Whitehead to act for them in their suit against the Earl of Berks. 28 Oct. 1654.

[1652, Dec. 6] Engrossment of an additional Act, with further directions to the trustees for sale of the lands of the late King, Queen, and Prince, and the Auditor-General's accounts at Worcester House. See C. J., VII. 226.

Jan. 27. Draft order respecting the answer to be given to the letter of the Archduke Leopold received this day. C. J., VII. 251. In extenso.

[1652-3, Feb. 9.] Petition of John Freer to the Committee for the county of Suffolk for relief of creditors and prisoners; he obtained judgment against John Prentice of Clare for a debt, upon which Prentice was committed to Bury Gaol, but he fraudulently conveyed all his estate to his sons, and then by swearing that he was not worth 5*l.* obtained his discharge; prays that Prentice and his sons may be examined on oath, that the fraud may be discovered and petitioner be relieved according to justice.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the cause between John Prentice and John Freer. (Undated.)

2. Affidavit respecting the apprehension of Prentice.

3. Proposal for a composition in the matter.

[1652-3, Feb. 9.] Petition of Anne Bowen, the most distressed widow of Captain Henry Bowen, deceased; her husband faithfully served the Parliament in the army of the late Lord General Essex, for which 760*l.* are due to him for arrears of pay; after lying sick for nine months he died last Saturday, leaving her with four children; in his sickness he spent and pawned all that ever he had, and she and her children are ready to perish, and she has not wherewithal to inter her husband's corpse; she prays that some money may be given her for the purpose, and for the relief of herself and her children. May 5. Letter from John Thurloe at Whitehall to Henry Scobell; he is commanded to send to Scobell for the Bill prepared by the Parliament concerning the lands forfeited in Ireland, and for such papers as are in the House touching that business. Noted with a list of documents received.

July 19. Articles of agreement between Henry Glemham, Doctor of Divinity, executor as to the last will and testament of Paul Viscount Bayninge, of Sir Thomas Glemham, Knight, surviving executor of the said Paul Viscount Bayninge of the one part, and of Cornelius Vermuyden, of London, Knight, of the other part; the articles recite a sale of land in King's Sedgemoor, alias Queen's Sedgemoor, in the county of Somerset, to the trustees of Paul Lord Viscount Bayninge for 12,000*l.* and a yearly rent of 100*l.*, and after reciting various mesne proceedings and the deaths of persons therein concerned, conclude with an assurance of the premises to Sir Cornelius Vermuyden upon payment to Sir Thomas Glemham of fifteen thousand pounds, subject to certain provisoes and stipulations for securing the same.

July 24. Indenture of agreement between Aubrey Earl of Oxford and Anne Countess of Oxford of the one part, and Henry Marquess of Dorchester and Henry Glemham, D.D., executor of Sir Thomas Glemham (as to the last will and testament of Paul Viscount Bayninge), of the other part. The indenture recites another deed whereby it was agreed between the same parties that lands therein mentioned should be let to the Marquess of Dorchester and Dr. Glemham upon certain conditions. The indenture further recites that the debts in the schedule annexed to the first deed are not so ascertained, but that some of them may not be so much as is mentioned in the schedule, and it is therefore agreed between the parties that the Marquess of Dorchester and Dr. Glemham shall be obliged to pay no more of the debts than shall appear to be due upon a true account to be made by the creditors.

Annexed:—

- 1-70. Receipts from the Marquess of Dorchester, from the Earl, and dowager Countess of Oxford, and from others for legacies and other payments received under the will of the late Viscount Bayning, with other papers relating to the administration of his estate by Dr. Henry Glemham, Dean of Bristol. (Seventy papers.)

July 25. Order of the Council of State at Whitehall, referring a petition of the inhabitants of Hampton, Hanworth, Teddington, and other towns thereabouts, in the county of Middlesex, to Gilbert Barrell and John Browne,* Esquires, to examine the same, and certify the state of the business to the Council.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order signed by John Browne and Gilbert Barrell appointing a time for proceeding with the case. 9 Aug.
2. Letter from the trustees appointed for the sale of the late King's parks to Mr. Barrell and Mr. John Browne; they understand that Mr. Barrell and Mr. Browne are appointed by order of the Council of State to survey the New River at Hampton Court, which had lately its ordinary course and channel through all the four parks at Hampton Court, viz., the two house parks, Bushy Park, Jockey Park, and the meadows and hare warren there; and they certify that great discommodity is caused to the Commonwealth in the sale of the parks through the want of the running and passing of the said river through them, as they are extremely parched and dried up at this summer season for want of the water of the river, besides the damage and wrong to the country thereabouts, the writers are therefore of opinion that if the New River may have its wonted course through the parks and meadows as formerly it will much advance the benefit of the same in the sale thereof, or in case they shall be reserved for the use of the State. Dated at Worcester House, 23 Aug. 1653.
3. Petition of the inhabitants of Hanworth in answer to a petition lately delivered to the Council of State by the inhabitants of Hampton; they hear that a petition has been delivered by some of the inhabitants of Hampton, desiring that the river made by the late King might run again, which formerly so much annoyed and drowned the parishes thereabouts; the petition, though called a petition of Hanworth, was without their knowledge or consent; the river was not destroyed, as in that petition is alleged, by the malice of the country people, but by necessity; for had it continued the petitioners could not have subsisted, but must have left their farms and dwellings by reason of the drowning of their corn and hay in the fields, and the rotting of their sheep and cattle, so much so that petitioners have waded to the knees in harvest to fetch out corn and hay, whilst passengers were unable to travel from parish to parish or to market without great danger [on account of the foulness of the roads], for which petitioners were often threatened with indictment, so that the loss they sustained whilst the river did run could not be less than 400l.; petitioners therefore pray that the matter may be considered, and that for the pleasure and private ends of some few whole parishes may not be ruined and overthrown. Recd. 29 August 1653.
4. Petition of inhabitants of Feltham, same as preceding. Recd. 29 Aug. 1653.
5. Letter from Sam. Rowe at Whitehall to John Browne, Esqre., at Twickenham. I am now going out of town, and yet am importuned to write something to you in reference to the New River upon Hounslow Heath. I perceive that the inhabitants of Hanworth and Feltham are most against it, and I believe the ground is because some of them have moneys in their hands, and all of them have been trespassers in pulling up the "tumbling bay" and the bridges, which they will be enforced to make up; and at a court held for Hanworth in 1652 [? 1650] the homage made themselves so much parties to the business, as though they confessed that themselves and most of the neighbours were guilty of pulling up the bridges within Hanworth, yet they refused to present who they were that did it, contrary to their oaths, as Mr. Baron Tomlins (steward there) and I myself shall be ready to testify; now the great objection will be that the water passeth not currently through Hanworth Park and the Heath. My Lord will take care for the passing of it through the park, and it will be demonstrated to you that it is feasible, and the petitioners will undertake to pass it currently from the park pale to Hampton, and this being undertaken and performed I hope will take away all objections, especially if you consider that my Lord Bradshaw, Lord of Hanworth, and Mr. Rawligh, Lord of Feltham, consent to the running of it. Sir, I pray you present my service to your lady, and excuse the hasty scribbling of your servant. 31 Aug. 1653.

6. Copy of proceedings at a Court Leet and Court Baron of the Right Honourable John Bradshaw, Sergeant-at-law, Lord President of the Council of State, holden at Hanworth 16th Oct. 1650. Endorsed.—Notes of a Court held (16 Oct. 50*) at Hanworth to be sent to Mr. Baron Tomlins.
7. Certificate of inhabitants of the Town of Kingston-upon-Thames that the turning of the water of Longford River to run in the new cut or course made for that purpose over Hounslow Heath into Hampton Court Parks was heretofore, when the waters so ran, a very great nuisance, and spoiling of the highways leading from Staines and Uxbridge and other places to Kingston, so that carts and carriages could not pass or come to and from the market without danger; they therefore pray that the water may not be drawn to run in the new course at any time hereafter. 1 Sept. 1653.
8. Certificate of inhabitants of Tuddington [Teddington], Middlesex, that they have suffered great loss and damage in their corn and cattle to the value of 200l. by the running of the New River, and if the river run again they do justly fear they shall suffer the like loss again. 2 Sept. 1653.
9. Letter from Alexander Turner to Mr. Williams at Hampton; has sent him the papers that were in the Attorney-General's hands, there are three more behind, but no warrant for sending them.
10. Copy of petition of the inhabitants of Feltham, Hanworth, Longford, Tuddington, and Bedfont, with divers others, to the Committee for the public revenue; the petitioners hearing it given out that the late cut river from Longford to Hampton Court shall run again, having formerly suffered great loss thereby, are forced to present their grievances; it drowned the corn fields, dwellings, and commons, and ruined and rotted cattle and sheep, so drowning the fields that petitioners were forced to wade to the knees to fetch out corn and hay; it was of no use for it did not drive any mill, but only hindered four other mills which stand within three miles of the head thereof whilst it so drowned the highways and passages to Kingston that passengers could not travel; petitioners, finding the burden unsufferable, sought redress from Parliament, but as, on account of other urgent occasions, they could obtain no answer, they were forced to make stoppage of the river; they are confident that their present governors will little countenance the oppression of the former, and humbly desire that what was done may not be taken as an affront to any lawful authority, and pray that the river may not be allowed to run again to the ruin and undoing of so many poor inhabitants.
11. Examination of Peter Bing, of Hanworth, in the county of Middlesex, husbandman, taken 27th of May 1652; about four years ago all or most part of the inhabitants of Hanworth, with their wives, children, and servants, threw down all the pales remaining about the new inclosure of Hanworth Park, called the Free, and thereby laid waste and common about threescore acres of land which were formerly inclosed; deponent was from home at the time of the riot, but heard of it from Lord Saye

- and Sele's servants, particularly from Wm. Goddard, the elder, then servant to Lord Saye and Sele, and now to Lord Bradshaw, and also from Mistress Fiennes, Lord Saye and Sele's daughter.
12. Another examination of Peter Bing, also taken on the 27th of May 1652; about three years ago the deponent with many others, at least 100 in number, met together at the village called Longford, where the New River begins, which runs through Hounslow Heath to Hampton Court, and there stopped the passage of the river by sinking the bridge and throwing stones and gravel thereupon to make the passage for carts and horses as formerly, but he denies that either he or any others to his knowledge threw down any of the banks of the river; they were moved to stop the passage of the river in order to save their corn from drowning by the overflowing of the river, and because it so spoiled the roads that there was no safe travelling for foot or horse either to Kingston or Brentford, the market towns thereabouts, while the commons of Feltham, Hanworth, Teddington, and Bedfont were so full of water that the sheep and other cattle of the inhabitants died of the rot, and many of the houses in those villages were overflowed with water, so that the inhabitants were very sickly with the damps in their houses and yards.—This deposition is confirmed in all points by Ralph Lawrence, examined the same day.
13. Deposition of William Chary, a customary tenant of Hanworth: deponent, who had furrow for furrow with the inhabitants, and in the most likely place for the river to overflow or leak, yet never sustained any prejudice, or thought that any of his neighbours did; he never heard one of them complain of the river, but only commend it; as to the bridge in the Free he heard Robert Browne confess before the steward in open Court at Hanworth that it was better to take the bridges away than let them be stolen away; four of the chief men in Hanworth took away the bridge at the town's end, while the four planks that were laid for passages over the river hard by the park pale were taken away by Peter Bing, and now stand in the street before his own door.
14. Notes of several depositions taken at Hampton; the river was made by the late King at his own charge, and cost 8,000*l.* or 9,000*l.*; it was eight or nine miles in length, and ran from Longford to the Thames; it did little hurt to the country unless it was at first before the earth was settled, while the benefit to the parks was great; the bridges which were erected by the King were pulled down in 1648 and the river stopped; the river was made too shallow at first in many places, which was the reason of its overflowing so much, especially in Hanworth Park and other places in Hanworth and Feltham.
15. Affidavits of William Cumbar, John Goding, and others, about the cost of the bridges in Hanworth, &c., and that in 1642 and 1643, the labourers were not paid for keeping up the banks of the river and clearing away the weeds, though Mr. Manning who employed them had 700*l.* in his hands out of the money collected for making the river.
16. Letter from Alexander Turner to Mr. Barrell, of Thissleworth, or Mr. Browne, of Twickenham; he hopes that they will be able to let him have copies of the letter of the trustees and of the order of the Council of State concerning the New River about which he and John Williams have been at great charge, and now the parks are sold they are like to lose both pains and moneys, unless they have copies of the letter and order. 23 Nov. 1653.

May 2. Letter from Thomas Littleton, at Beaves Marks, to John Browne, Esq., at his house at Twickenham. Powys and Holland are the names of the plaintiff and defendant in the great trial which the writer had against Morris, &c. at Guild Hall, which lasted till 10 o'clock at night; the verdict which lies contrary upon them they foolishly hope to get laid aside; he does not understand how it concerns or is proper for Browne, who is only a witness in the cause, to take notice of it; he means to take a copy of the rule and inform himself what he can of the business; they have not as yet given him any notice, which he thinks they should have done in the first place.

Annexed:—

1. Report of Mr. Edwin Rich respecting the admission of certain affidavits in the cause of John Poyntz alias Morris against Thomas Littleton and others. 20 Feb. 1653-4.
2. Letter from Thos. Littleton to John Browne; believes he has found out the bottom of the business; before the great trial at Guild Hall an order was made that the forged records should be deposited in Mr. Barrell's hands, which order Browne performed, detaining only the copy of the Act of Parliament to which his own hand was counterfeited, he is now questioned for this, and it is desired that the Act, as well as the other writings, should be in Mr. Barrell's hands; but by a subsequent order a copy only was to be given; the writer has taken copies of both these rules; will be prepared, and does not fear anything; thinks it would be very proper if Browne could appear personally in court, but will not fail to be there himself.

May 31. Letter from John Bunbury, at Dublin, to Wm. Symon, clerk to Mr. Scobell; desires Symon to send him a copy of an order relating to the payment of the army in Ireland, &c.

[1654, Oct. 19.] Collonell Shepcott [Shapcott], Mr. Sheriffe of Devon; his answer to a p'posall y^t my Lord Whitlock moved in the Howse y^t the p'tectorship might be hereditary:—

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman y^t spoke last hath made a motion to this howse y^t wee establish these 3 kingdomes vpon y^c P'tectour & his heires in respect of his great deservings as a reward to his virtue (farre short of his meritt). If to vndoe 3 kingdomes bee meritorious hee deserues farre aboue any. If to violate y^c lawes and liberties of this nation by imposing new lawes, viz., the Spanish inquisicon by another name, to take away the orthodoxe Clergie and institute Anabaptisticall preachers in their roome. If by imposing taxes of seuerall kindes, insupportable and wthout any cause or reason but of state, not the state of the nation, but his owne vsurped gov'n^t and tyranny over vs. If his erecting a Cort to destroy the nobility and gentry, contrary to the lawes of the Kingdome, vnder coulor of their Reliefe of the Creditors and poore prisoners. If these be meritts for w^{ch} hee deserues 3 kingdomes at once to be given to him and his posterity; let him have it. But if wee must needs have a king againe, why not hee? whose indubitable right it is. What hath he done to be excluded, to be dispossessed of his vnquestionable right? Unlesse we intended to p'petuate the curse of God vpon vs and our posterity for ever in giving away w^t is not o's to give, by an act owning to o'selves all the murders, p'iury, and treasons of this man, and consequently intaile the curse of God, & in us, o' posterity, and the whole nation.

Whitlock merely says, "the House sat this day and the three former days in a Grand Committee about the government, and had much debate whether it should be elective or hereditary, as to the single person, the "Protector of the Commonwealth" (p. 607). The Parliamentary Register, Vol. XX., p. 376, quoting Thurloe, says that Major-General Lambert tried to persuade Parliament that it was necessary to make the office of protector hereditary, but that on a division the motion was negatived by 200 to 60 to the great surprise of the public and the family of the Lord Protector. No notice is taken of the debate in the journal further than that the House was resolved into a committee of the whole House upon the government. Ser C. J., VII. 377.

[1654, Dec. 15.] Petition of Sir John Monson to the House of Commons; petitioner some years since undertook the draining of the level by the River Ancholme from Bishop Bridge to Ferry Bridge, as a servant of the country without any eye to his own advantage, but his conduct has been much reflected upon with unjust clamour; he prays that a committee may be appointed to examine the whole business, before which he doubts not but that all his actions will pass with approbation. 1655-6.

March 10. Petition of James Poyntz otherwise Morris, an infant, by Mary his mother, to His Highness Oliver Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, &c.; about the end of the reign of Elizabeth the estates of James Morris, petitioner's great grandfather, and those of Gabriel Poyntz were joined and settled by Act of Parliament upon the heirs male of James Morris; about eight years ago this Act was seen in the Tower at Westminster, where the records of Parliament were kept in the custody of Mr. John Browne, the clerk to the Lords' House, and petitioner's father, John Morris alias Poyntz, had a copy of the Act signed by John Browne for a true copy, but Browne combining with the adversaries of the petitioner's father got this copy into his own hands, and then alleged that the original Act itself was no more to be found; petitioner's father thereupon preferred a bill of discovery in Chancery against John Browne and others, to which John Browne answered confessing that he had the copy of the Act, but refusing to give it up, affirming that his signature was counterfeited thereto; petitioner has put in a bill of review, but cannot proceed in the case until the copy of the Act in question is produced; prays that Browne may be ordered to bring the copy of the Act into court forthwith that the cause may proceed to a speedy trial, according to equity and justice. Noted, His Highness referreth this petition to the consideration and order of the Lords Commissioners for the Great Seal. Nath. Bacon.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Lords Commissioners for John Browne to answer. 9 May 1656.
2. Answer of John Browne, Esqre.; denies that there ever was any Act for joining the estates of Morris and Poyntz, but declares the truth to be this, that there is a paper document purporting to be a copy of such an Act of Parliament, and to be signed by him, but it was declared by judgment of the House of Lords of the 21st of Sept. 1647 to be counterfeited, and to be for ever vacated, there being no trace in the journal of any such Act; and about Easter 1649 Leonard Darby was convicted of perjury before the Court of Upper Bench for swearing that the forged writing was a true copy; the forged document was then delivered to petitioner, who hopes that he will not be ordered to give it up, as it is a forgery, by which his good name has been aspersed, and he fears that if the infant and his confederates got it into their hands they would use it to set on foot some desperate design. There was a bill in chancery brought by John Poyntz alias Morris to which petitioner answered, confessing that he had the forged writing, upon which he was served with an order to bring the same into court, or show cause to the contrary; whereupon petitioner having by his counsel shown good cause to the contrary the subpoena duces tecum was discharged by order of the 20th of May 1653; this being the true state of the case he humbly leaves it in their Lordships' hands, only praying them to consider the serious import of such a forgery, and that the actors therein may receive exemplary punishment.
3. Order to discharge a subpoena duces tecum, and to allow the cause shown by Mr. Browne why he should not bring in the forged copy of the pretended Act. 20 May 1653.

Feb. 5. Letters patent signed by the Protector Richard Cromwell; to confirm and protect Thomas Bushell (who has given good testimony of his abilities in mineral affairs, and of his remarkable successes in following the philosophical directions of his late master, the Lord Chancellor Bacon) and his co-adventurers in the draining and working of the deserted works of Sir Bevis Bulmer, in Rowpitts and Greenacre, on the forest of Mendip, in the county of Somerset. 1660.

April 2. Order of Council of State at Whitehall [signed Arthur Annesley, President] made upon complaint of inhabitants of Enfield, Edmonton, Hadley, and South Mims of spoil and waste done to the trees of Enfield Chase by Edward Randall, of Enfield, a blacksmith, and others, contrary to the custom of the manor; gives authority to Sir John Potts, Sir Thomas Dacres, and others to restrain and punish persons doing such damage.

April [$\frac{4}{11}$]. Letter from the King at Breda to the Speaker of the House of Peers and the Lords there assembled, enclosing his declaration. L. J., XI. 7. In extenso.

April [$\frac{4}{11}$]. The King's declaration from Breda. L. J., XI. 7. In extenso.

May 1. Heads for a conference with the House of Commons concerning the King's letter and declaration from Breda. L. J., XI. 8. In extenso.

May 1. Petition of Walter Long; in consideration of his sufferings under a sentence of the Court of Star Chamber the sum of 5,000*l.* (which he never received) was adjudged to him in 1642, and the Chief Registership in Chancery was secured to him by patent for life; he continued to exercise this office until forced to go beyond the seas by the then army, when the office was executed by Mr. Miles Corbett in the name of himself and Robert Goodwin; but in 1654 Oliver Protector caused Jasper Edwards, William Goldisborough, and others to be put into the office, under an ordinance which expired in 1657, when petitioner brought an action at law against them, but the very day before the trial Edwards obtained a patent from Richard Protector to make him sole register, and with such despatch that it passed all the offices and seals in one day. This was however set aside, and petitioner restored to the office in 1659, and in October last he was by order of the Commissioners directed to have the custody of all the books and papers belonging to the Court; but he is thwarted in every way by Edwards, Goldisborough, and the other clerks of the office, who keep the profits from him, and have put new locks upon the doors to prevent his coming into the office; petitioner hearing that some of the books had been carried out of the office to a house near the Savoy, having obtained a warrant from the Master of the Rolls, endeavoured when the doors of the office were open to carry the records, &c. to another place for security, upon which he was assaulted by Goldisborough, and a great tumult raised, so that he was obliged to go out a back way and put the records over a wall for safety; Goldisborough complained to the Commissioners of the Great Seal, who made several orders respecting the custody of the documents. Meanwhile Goldisborough and his clerk have broken open the door of a room where petitioner had secured some of the records, and petitioner, who is responsible for their custody, knows not what damage he may incur; prays to be quieted in his lawful possession, and that he may have the custody of the records and the profits of the office, according to the original ordinance and patent in his favour. L. J., XI. 8.

May 2. Petition of Uriah Babington, Keeper of Greenwich house, gardens, and park; was appointed to the office in 1634 for life, and was also barber to the late King for above ten years, being employed to attend His Majesty by order of Parliament, for which services the sum of 3,814*l.* is due to him; in Jan. 1654-5, when in quiet possession of the house and park, he was forced out by William Gunn, who committed great waste; in June last after a full hearing, petitioner was restored to his office; he found near eighty families there, some thirty of them disorderly persons, who commit waste and spoil and refuse to be regulated; he prays to be continued in possession, and empowered to regulate all disorders and wastes; that such as refuse to obey may be removed by the assistance of the justices of the peace, and that all others may be ordered to provide themselves with habitations elsewhere. L. J., XI. 9.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order in accordance with the prayer of the petition. L. J., XI. 12. In extenso.

May 2. Petition of Dame Mary Jermyn and Robert and Elizabeth, children of Sir Thomas Jermyn, deceased; claim the office of Register in Chancery under patent from the late King to Henry Lord Jermyn and Thomas Jermyn for their lives, in trust for Sir Thomas Jermyn, by whom the profits of the office were settled on the petitioners, which they received until the ordinance regulating the Chancery; since which time the clerks have taken them, whilst Mr. Walter Long pretends to claim the office under a grant from the Parliament; pray to be admitted to exercise the office by deputy, and to receive the profits thereof. L. J., XI. 9.

May 2. Draft ordinance appointing General Monk Captain General of the Forces. L. J., XI. 9.

Annexed :—

1. Draft of an Act to the same effect.

May 2. Statement respecting the arrest of Thomas Chamberlaine, servant to the Earl of Denbigh, at the instance of John Seagrave, a tailor. L. J., XI. 11.

Annexed :—

1. Order signed and sealed by Basil Earl of Denbigh to all bailiffs, &c. for the release of Chamberlaine. 30 April.

May 3. Draft order restoring Edwyn Rich and Edward Eltonhed, Masters in Chancery, to their precedence. L. J., XI. 12. In extenso.

May 3. Another draft.

May 3. Draft order to stay waste on the Duke of Buckingham's lands. L. J., XI. 12. In extenso.

May 3. Copy of letter from the House of Lords to the King in answer to His letter and declaration from Breda. L. J., XI. 12. In extenso.

May 3. Draft of preceding.

May 3. Another draft.

May 3. Order of the House of Commons to acquaint the Lords that they have prepared an answer to the King's letter. C. J., VIII. 11. In extenso.

May 4. Petition of Walter Long; Lady Jermyn's petition, claiming the Register's office in Chancery, seems in some degree to justify the proceedings of Gouldsborough and his clerks, but he lately declared that he was not her deputy; the claims of petitioner and Lady Jermyn were by the late Parliament referred to the now Speaker of the House of Commons and Mr. Denzill Holles, who have given no decision; prays to be left in possession of the office which he holds by authority of Parliament, and that the question between himself and Lady Jermyn may be determined. L. J., XI. 13.

May 4. Petition of several people (called Anabaptists) inhabiting in and about the city of London; petitioners have bought and built several houses in London for their public meetings to worship God; one of which, on the 1st and 2nd instant, was broken open by a riotous multitude, and the doors, seats, windows, galleries, and floors carried away to the value of 200*l.*, and the like is threatened to be done in other places, and this without the least provocation; for petitioners' practice is to be obedient to magistrates and to venture their all for such as will protect them in their lives and estates, and just liberty to worship the Lord without restriction or compulsion; but they apprehend that the duty is reciprocal, subjection on one side, protection on the other; if some amongst them miscarry they pray that it may not be imputed to all, no more than to others differing from them, some of whom endeavour to clear themselves by clamouring upon petitioners, tending to incense both magistrates and multitude against them; they pray the House to consider not only their injuries, but the danger of such tumults to the nation and city, and to protect them in their civil and religious liberties according to the promise contained in the King's late declaration. This petition is not mentioned in the journal, but an order is this day made against riots in London upon information given of a great riot and violence offered to some inhabitants of the city. L. J., XI. 13.

May 4. Draft order vacating the judgment against the nine lords impeached by the House of Commons for joining the King at York in 1642. L. J., XI. 14. In extenso.

May 4. Petition of Antonio Vas, a Portuguese; on pretence of his being of the Spanish faction petitioner was seized here in England by the Portuguese Ambassador, and has for the last nine months been kept prisoner in the Ambassador's house in extreme misery in a dark room, in hourly fear of being murdered or of being carried to Portugal to be tried by the Inquisition, of which the Ambassador is a member. The Council of State made an order for petitioner's discharge, but by reason of the alteration in government it was not executed. Petitioner prays to be put in a lawful prison and fairly tried. L. J., XI. 14.

May 4. Draft order for preceding petition to be shown to the Portuguese Ambassador, and the petitioner demanded of him unless he show cause to the contrary, &c. L. J., XI. 14. In extenso.

May 5. Petition of Thomas Swalowe; considerable progress towards His Majesty's return has been made, the arms of the Commonwealth have been defaced, and His Majesty's arms restored, but the arms of the Commonwealth are still continued in the coining of money, and cannot be altered nor the making of money stayed without order of Parliament; petitioner was appointed by King James clerk of the coining irons, and surveyor of the melting of gold and silver in the mint within the Tower of London, but was displaced by Richard Pight in 1648 under pretence of a patent from the later powers; petitioner has been restored by order of the present Council of State, but is still kept out of certain rooms anciently belonging to his offices, without which he cannot with safety perform his duties; prays that the making of money may be stayed until His Majesty's pleasure be known, and that the present Lieutenant of the Tower may be ordered to put petitioner into possession of all the rooms and perquisites belonging to his offices. Noted.—Ordered as to rooms, respited as to coining. L. J., XI. 14.

Annexed :—

1. Order of the Council of State restoring Swalowe to his office. 28 March 1660.

May 5. Draft preamble to the order to stay waste on the Duke of Buckingham's lands. L. J., XI. 14.

May 5. Petition of Daniel Parr; claims one of the places of entering registers in the Register's office in the Court of Chancery into which some five years ago Mr. Scoble, then clerk of the Parliament, being very potent, appointed Henry Devenish his kinsman, who, taking advantage of the distraction in the office for want of a master, will neither give up the place nor account for the profits; prays for relief according to justice which has been so long perverted. L. J., XI. 15.

May 5. Copy of preceding.

May 5. Draft declaration that by reason of the extraordinary and important affairs of the kingdom there will be no proceedings in the courts of law or equity at Westminster until the 28th instant. L. J., XI. 15. In extenso.

May 7. Draft declaration against tumults and riots, and for continuing sheriffs, justices, &c. in their offices. L. J., XI. 17. In extenso.

May 7. Letter from the Portuguese Ambassador to the Lords assembled in Parliament; desires that Vas, who is a Portuguese subject, who has been guilty of high treason, and who was delivered up to the writer by the late Parliament and the Council of State, may be left in his hands (Portuguese.)

Annexed :—

1. Translation of preceding. L. J., XI. 17. In extenso.

2. Copy of letter of thanks from the King of Portugal to the Parliament for the delivery of Antonio Vas. 16 Aug. 1659.

3. Copy of the paper delivered by the Ambassador to the Council, whereupon it was resolved that the prisoner Vas should be at the Ambassador's disposing.

May 8. Draft order for a pass for six ministers from the city of London to go to attend the King. L. J., XI. 18.

May 8. Address of the Commissioners employed for the kingdom of Ireland to the Lords assembled in Parliament; that they would concur with the Commissioners in an address to the King to call and hold a Parliament in Ireland for remedy of the unsettled condition of that kingdom. L. J., XI. 19. In extenso.

May 8. Duplicate of preceding.

May 8. Copy of same.

May 8. Draft proclamation of both Houses of Parliament proclaiming His Majesty King. L. J., XI. 19. In extenso. (Two papers.)

May 8. Resolutions of the House of Commons that proceedings under the Great Seal shall pass in the King's name from the 5th instant. C. J., VIII. 17.

May 8. Resolutions of the House of Commons that all proceedings under the Great Seal of Ireland shall pass in the King's name from the 5th instant, &c. C. J., VIII. 17. In extenso.

May 9. Petition of Margaret Countess of Worcester; she complains that Commissary Coapley is endangering the foundations of Worcester House (now in the hands of the trustees for sale of lands pretended to be forfeited to the Commonwealth), under colour of some order from the Council of State to search for hidden treasure; prays for an order to stop any further proceeding therein. L. J., XI. 19.

May 9. Draft of an Act for the constituting of a Committee of both Houses of Parliament for managing the great affairs of the Kingdom, and settling the militia for the safety thereof. This draft was reported this day from a Committee which had been appointed to prepare it, was read, 1st and 2^d, and was then recommitted, but there was no further proceeding upon it. L. J., XI. 19.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Act of 25 Feb. 1659–60 for constituting a Council of State, and of the instructions for the guidance of the same, &c. See C. J., VII. 852, &c.
2. Draft list of the Committee to whom the ordinance for managing the great affairs of the kingdom was referred. L. J., XI. 19.
3. Draft proviso saving the right of Lord Saye and Sele to be Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and Constable of Dover Castle, and that the ordinance should only continue till the King's further pleasure should be signified. L. J., XI. 20.

May 9. Message from the Commons, with their resolutions, that the King be desired to make his speedy return to his Parliament, and to the exercise of his kingly office. L. J., XI. 20.

May 9. Draft order that the assumed arms of the late pretended Commonwealth, wherever they are standing, be forthwith taken down and the King's arms set up instead. L. J., XI. 20.

May 9. Petition of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies; in the year 1648 (besides their smart in the common oppression of the nation) petitioners especially suffered by the invasion made on their trade by private adventurers warranted by the then usurped powers in contempt of petitioners' chartered rights; by the ignorance of which traders, and the power and subtlety of the Hollander, the trade of petitioners has been almost ruined; to recover and reinforce it about two years ago they raised a new stock to be managed by the authority of Royal Charter in such ways as might most rationally conduce to the reputation of the English name and the common good of the interested; the whole nation were invited to subscribe towards this stock, and there are at least nine hundred considerable families concerned in it; this new stock has been carried on with all tender respect to the interest of those who had formerly entrenched on petitioners' charters; notwithstanding this Hugh Forth, Daniel Skinner, and others have provided a ship called the Restoration, professedly designed for the East Indies, from which they are excluded by petitioners' charters, and notwithstanding fair admonition to desist, they have resolved that their ship shall presently depart; petitioners pray that the ship may be stopped from leaving the Thames until the merits of the case have been heard and determined by the House. L. J., XI. 20.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate to the Committee for Petitions from Nicholas Pennyng and others, to whom the matter in dispute between the East India Company and Forth and Skinner and others had been referred, that the parties had come to an agreement that the ship should desist from her intended voyage. 15 May 1660.
2. Copy of preceding.

May 9. Draft orders for all ministers to pray for the King in the public prayers, and for a general thanksgiving. L. J., XI. 21. In extenso.

May 9. Copy of preceding.

May 9. Draft order for advance of 500*l*. to General Mountague, one of the generals at sea. L. J., XI. 21. In extenso.

May 9. Draft order for General Mountague to obey the King's commands respecting the fleet in order to His Majesty's return. L. J., XI. 21. In extenso.

May 9. Draft order for the King to be proclaimed in Ireland. L. J., XI. 21.

May 10. Draft instructions for the Committee that are to go to the King. L. J., XI. 22. In extenso.

May 10. Report of conference respecting the use of the Great Seal. L. J., XI. 23. In extenso.

May 10. Notes of preceding in the handwriting of the Earl of Manchester, who reported the conference.

[May 10.] Certificate from Sa. Hinde, minister of Banstead, that the timber and wood of Worcester Park, near Nonsuch in Surrey, is constantly carried out and disposed of by the relic of Colonel Pride. See L. J., XI. 22.

May 11. Petition of Thomas Bushell; upon the rendition of Lundy Island (of which Bushell was governor for the late King) articles were granted to him by General Fairfax and Lord Saye and Sele on behalf of the Parliament that he should be restored to the possession of all his estate, and his person protected until he enjoyed the same; but in contempt of the articles and the honour of that Parliament petitioner is detained a prisoner out of a malicious plot to extirpate his "mineral design" for the general good, and also the hopes of his creditors' satisfaction, who have joined in the annexed petition; a letter from Lord Fairfax for petitioner's right of articles could not be read in the late Parliament on account of its sudden dissolution; petitioner prays that the spleen of any self-willed person may not be allowed to dishonour the articles, but that he may receive satisfaction for his long suffering, and the utmost countenance for this public affair of discovering minerals, if on perusing the treaty and reason annexed the House think him fit for patronage, and that he may be protected from arrest for seven years to enable him to pay his debts as most of his creditors desire. L. J., XI. 24.

Annexed:—

1. The case of Thomas Bushell; giving an account of the actions laid against him and his various arrests.
2. Articles of agreement for the surrender of Lundy Island made between Bushell and Sir Thos. Fairfax and Lord Saye and Sele, 10th of Sept. 1647. Bushell agrees to surrender Lundy Island, in consideration of which his sequestration is to be taken off, he is to be restored to his estate and such right as he or his assigns had in the mines of Devon, Cornwall, and Wales before the troubles, and is to be protected from arrest until he obtain possession of his estate. The articles are signed T. Fairfax, and sealed.
3. Order of the Lords and Commons ratifying the preceding articles. 10 July 1647. L. J., IX. 321. In extenso.
4. Copy of preceding.
5. Petition of divers orphans and widows, with others, creditors of Thomas Bushell; pray that if Bushell is not restored to his estate according to the articles of Lundy he may be enlarged out of prison and protected from arrest at least for seven years to enable him to pursue the great design of his master's philosophy expressed in his remonstrance. L. J., XI. 24.
6. Affidavit of Christopher Wright; was sent as steward for direction of Bushell's minerals underground in Wales, at 100*l*. per annum salary; and, considering Bushell's plan of pursuing a drift to recover the mines of Rowpits from inundation likely to be successful, Wright and others agreed to receive only half wages from the time that the miners of Mendip invited Bushell by a decree of their court to have half the profit, bearing half the charge of working after the water was drained; deponent believes that Bushell's plan will be in a short time perfected, and will be the greatest work done by any mineralist these hundred years if not hindered by malice, for some wicked person about midnight turned a great lake of muddy water into the swallow on purpose to choke it, thereby nearly drowning the men that were at work, and at another time so much under timber of Bushell's shaft was pulled out that the whole groove of earth fell into the drift when the men were at work; but nevertheless Bushell's drift goes on towards the rich works known to lie one hundred and fifty fathoms before him. 3 Dec. 1658.
7. Affidavit of Walter Basbee, aged about eighty years; was say master about fifty years ago to Goldsmiths' Hall, and was sent by King James to the Emperor of Russia to make him a standard of gold and silver in his mint in the City of Muscovia, and no sooner was this done than he was commanded by the Emperor to refine the gold of a rich copper mine in Siberia, five hundred miles beyond the Volga, which held to the value of three, four, or five hundred pounds of gold to every ton; deponent remained there until taken prisoner by the Tartars; he was afterwards exchanged and sent to England, where he has ever since spent his time under Mr. Bushell's philosophical way taught him by the late Lord Chancellor Bacon, which, in deponent's judgment, cannot be paralleled by any, and if practised according Bushell's printed remonstrance, and the order of the mineral grand jury of Chewton, he believes this age will exceed all former ages in mineral discoveries. 7 Dec. 1658.
8. Humble remonstrance of Thomas Bushell, Esq., to His Most Excellent Highness Richard Lord Pro-

rector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, &c., is ready to suffer death as the greatest delinquent if he accomplishes not his mineral proposals according to the model annexed: though so great a work as recovering the many drowned and deserted mines of Mendip can have but a slow progression; his mineral service, grounded on the philosophical theory of his master Lord St. Albans, may prove so advantageous as to relieve the subjects from a considerable part of their heavy taxes; the plan is further recommended by the saying of his master, "that most politic expedients for the increment of a Prince's coffers had a strong influence upon the people's purses, but innocent mineral productions came nearest the idea of Divine bounty;" he annexes a model of Hingston Downs to show his plan for draining mines, and adds an opinion of the chief lawyers to show that all mines are mines royal in which the gold and silver countervalue the charge of refining, or are of more worth than the base metal spent in refining it. Stitched to this remonstrance is a printed paper, headed "A table setting forth the manner of that great philosopher Lord Chancellor Bacon's searching for metals by making addits through the lowest level of hills or mountains, and conveying air into the innermost parts of their centre by pipe and bellows; as well by art to mollify the hardest stone, without the tedious way and inestimable charge of sinking aery shafts; and is now intended to be put in practice by his menial servant Thomas Bushell, on Hingston Down and other places, according to his Lordship's command and the approbation of that great mineralist Sir Francis Godolphin." Then follows a diagram of the works at Hingston Down showing the position of the shafts, pipe, bellows, &c. Bushell then gives as his reasons for engaging in the work his desire to answer the trust reposed in him, to follow his master Lord Chancellor Bacon's invention for the public good, and to benefit the poor miners and the western parts; he explains the position of his addits or aqueducts by which he expects to command all the lodes, rakes, and veins of metal in the hill by using pipe and bellows to convey air into the innermost parts of the addit without sinking air shafts, by which he hopes to verify the old proverb, "Hingston Down well wrought is worth London Town dearly bought;" in this work he desires no partner, having found by experience more assistance from Providence than from the purses of men whose hearts were more ruled by greediness of gain than the desire to illustrate the Creator's glory.

9. Order of the mineral grand jury of Chewton; after detailing Bushell's endeavours to drain the deserted works at Rowpits and Green Acre, and the malicious opposition that he has met with, order is made for Bushell's protection, that all "new pitches" since the 28th of May last shall be void, and that if any misdemeanor be proved to be done against Bushell, or his servants, the offenders shall not only be banished from their occupation upon Mendip, but his Highness shall be implored to send them to the copper mines at "Jammeca," that they may not infect others, or bring scandal upon the whole profession of miners. 28 July 1658.
10. Draft order confirming the articles made between Bushell and Sir Thomas Fairfax and Lord Saye and Sele, but limiting the time for Bushell's protection from arrest to seven years; and further confirming the decrees and orders of the grand jury at Chewton for regulating the miners and for the protection of Bushell and his servants in working the mines there. 19 May.

May 11. Petition of Awbrey de Vere Earl of Oxford; claiming the office of Lord Great Chamberlain, his title to which was disputed in the time of the late King by Robert Lord Willoughby of Eresby afterwards Earl of Lindsey, and is now disputed by Mountague Earl of Lindsey, his son. L. J., XI. 24. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Summary of proceedings in the matter from the 1st of March 1625-6 to the 1st of May 1626.

May 11. Draft order for application to be made to the King to call a Parliament in Ireland. L. J., XI. 25. In extenso.

May 11. Draft order for all Commissioners and other officers who were in office on the 25th of April last to proceed in the execution of their offices, and to exercise them in the name of the King. L. J., XI. 25. In extenso.

May 12. Petition of Nowell Warner, Master of the Barges, to King James and King Charles; the place of Master of the Barges was granted to Petitioner under the Great Seal in 1614, and he enjoyed it until 1648, when he was dismissed by order of the House of Commons, and the barges were taken from him, after he had kept them nearly six years at his own charge; he prays that he and his fellows, the King's watermen, may be restored to their places. L. J., XI. 25.

May 12. Copy of preceding.

May 12. Petition of George Charnock [to the Committee of Lords and Commons appointed for the reception of the King's Majesty]; the late King had always sixteen sergeants-at-arms attending upon him, of whom at present there are only two in being; petitioner, who was a sergeant to the late King during the troubles and suffered much in his estate for his fidelity, and is desirous of serving His Majesty both in his reception and coronation, prays that he may be appointed a sergeant-at-arms to attend His Majesty, in which case he will provide a mace at his own charge for the better expediting of the service. L. J., XI. 25.

May 14. Petition of Charles Lord Stanhope, Baron of Harrington; by patent of 5th Jac., grant was made to petitioner's father and to himself of the office of Master of the Posts and Messengers, both inland and foreign, with the fee of one hundred marks per annum, together with all avails and profits thereto belonging; petitioner succeeded to the office about 39 years ago upon his father's death, and held it quietly until April 1637, when by the contrivance of one Witherings, and some great persons, he was summoned to bring his patent before the Council, and after writing his name upon the back to leave it there; words purporting to be a surrender of the patent were afterwards written above his name and copied on to the enrolment; the late King offered him a new patent if he would agree that Sir Henry Vane, senior, should be joined with him, but this petitioner declined, being advised to appeal to the Parliament then about to meet; in consequence, however, of the troubles increasing, petitioner, with leave from the Parliament, went to France, and Mr. Prideaux, since deceased, the Chairman of the Committee of the House of Commons to whom the matter was referred, took the management of the place, and though he promised to be faithful to petitioner, took all the profits to himself; petitioner during the late changes of government made application for his patent at every opportunity, but in vain; he prays to be restored to his office, and to have recompense for his losses from Mr. Prideaux's executors. L. J., XI. 26.

Annexed:—

1. Draft list of committee to which the preceding petition was referred.
2. List of certain witnesses in the cause. 15 May.
3. Another list of witnesses.
4. Draft order of the Committee for the attendance of witnesses. 16 May.
5. Report from the Committee of the evidence produced for Lord Stanhope, and of their opinion that he should be put into a position to recover the profits of the office since the 25th of April 1637. Noted. Memorandum, that the report being read and awhile debated, the House (being possessed of the said cause) did respite the debate and further consideration thereof. 26 May. There is no mention of this in the Journal.
6. Draft of preceding, with notes of Lord Stanhope's case, &c.
7. Lord Stanhope's request that the surrender of his patent may be declared illegal, &c.
8. Copy of letter of the 5th of Sept. 1644 from Mr. Prideaux to Lord Stanhope; about erecting stages in all the roads for the service of the State. Produced before the Committee to show that Mr. Prideaux recognised Lord Stanhope's right in the office.

10. Petition of George Porter to the Committee sitting on the Lord Stanhope's business; in 1635 Lord Stanhope appointed petitioner his deputy postmaster during his Lordship's life, and promised not to revoke the deputation nor to surrender his patent without petitioner's consent; petitioner, who is attending on His Majesty, and cannot at present produce the original writing, prays that he may have time to be heard in the matter. 23 May 1660.

May 14. Information given by Thomas Freebody that Justice Bancs, a brewer in Southwark, spoke treasonable words at the proclamation of the King. L. J., XI. 26.

May 14. Petition of Henry Millett; he and a ship of which he is owner and commander were on the 1st of September last surprised by the inhabitants of Lee [Leigh, Essex], and he sent prisoner to London, and there imprisoned in Lambeth House for 12 weeks, upon suspicion of combination with Sir George Booth and his party; he prays that his detained ship may be restored, and some command conferred upon him to repair his losses. L. J., XI. 26.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Millett's case; was commander of the Judith, of Jersey, and by virtue of letters of marque from the King of Portugal took a Holland merchant ship in Torbay, and put on board his Lieutenant Hase [Hayes] as commander; Hase allowed the ship to escape, and under pretence of recovering it induced petitioner to give him his commission, which was to be returned the next day; petitioner waited four days in vain, and was then forced to put to sea by stress of weather, but fearing to keep the sea without a commission, put into Leigh in Essex, where he was questioned for carrying arms, and being unable to produce a commission was sent prisoner to London; on his discharge petitioner succeeded in arresting Hase, and brought an action against him, but was nonsuited because he could not produce his commission, or give sufficient evidence of its nature; the House of Lords have ordered the inhabitants of Leigh to restore the ship or show cause to the contrary, but upon serving the order 16*l.* was demanded for the score of the ship's company; this Millett has engaged to pay, and he now desires a final order in the matter.
2. Order of the Committee for Petitions for the hearing of the cause. 22 May.
3. Draft order for the attendance of Thomas Weaver a prisoner in the Compter in Wood Street as a witness in the cause. 25 May.
4. Applications for orders for attendance of witnesses.
5. Copy of translation of letters of mart [marque] from the King of Portugal to Justice de Bills, captain at sea, and war in the service of His Majesty, to act against the subjects of the King of Spain and the United Provinces, 10 Feb. 1658-9, and on the same paper an authority from Justice de Bills to act as his deputy. 25 Jan. 1659-60.
6. Copy of translation of the capitulation and order which the captains do carry who have letters of marque given them.
7. Bond by Mathew Hedge that if Henry Millett pays him 16*l.* 1*s.* on or before the 30th of May, Hedge will deliver up the ship Judith. 16 May.
8. Petition of Henry Millett; he cannot get back his ship, though he has tendered the money due; prays the House to hear and determine the matter. (Undated.)

May 14. Petition of Richard Tomlyns, Puisne or Cursitor Baron of the Court of Exchequer; petitioner was appointed to his place by both Houses of Parliament in or about Sept. 1645, and for some time received his salary, which was only 163*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* a year, but for many years past he has received no part of his salary, the arrears of which now amount to 1,300*l.* and upwards; petitioner has faithfully executed his office, and will endeavour so to do for the future; he has a wife and many children yet undisposed of for want of his salary, and but little other means and that not sufficient to maintain them; he prays for payment of his arrears, and that his salary may in future be paid either out of the Custom House, London, as the Judges and other Barons are paid, or else out of the receipt of the Exchequer. L. J., X. 26.

May 14. Copy of preceding.

May 14. Petition of Edward Watkins; was in 1633 appointed Head Searcher of the Port of London, and exercised his office faithfully until unduly dispossessed at the time that their Lordships and many of the members of the House of Commons were secluded; London is the key of the nation, by which all or most part of dangerous and suspected persons pass away, and bullion and other prohibited commodities are transported; prays to be restored to his office and that Samuel Bordman may be employed to assist him therein. L. J., XI. 27.

May 14. Petition of Robert Grove and others, Fellows of New College, in Oxford; in 1648 a Committee of Lords and Commons were authorised to appoint visitors of the University, and petitioners then made it appear that without breach of their oaths they could not submit to visitors who were members of the University, and they were in consequence left in the quiet enjoyment of their fellowships during the continuance of that Committee, but after the force put upon the Parliament divers soldiers who styled themselves a Committee for Reformation of the University, without giving petitioners an opportunity of being heard, ejected them from their fellowships upon pretence that they had not submitted to the authority of Parliament at the time of the former visitation, and petitioners have in consequence been kept out of their fellowships for the last ten years, to their general losses of 400*l.* a-piece and upwards; petitioners, who have suffered only for preserving their consciences free from perjury, pray to be restored to their rights and fellowships. L. J., XI. 27.

May 14. Petition of Francis Wetherid, Comptroller of His Majesty's works; understands that the House of Lords has appointed 5,000*l.* for repair of some of His Majesty's houses for his present reception; petitioner, who holds a grant for life under the Great Seal of the place of Comptroller of His Majesty's Works, prays to be restored to the execution of his office. L. J., XI. 27.

May 14. Draft warrant for the attachment of Henry Birch and another.

May 15. Petition of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of Trinity House of Deptford Strand. Petitioners claim the Ballast Office under a grant from Queen Elizabeth, and complain of interruption in the execution thereof by Richard Younge and Thomas Browne, under pretence of a grant made in the 12th year of his late Majesty, though there is in that grant a special reservation of any grant to the Trinity House by his Majesty's predecessors; petitioners therefore pray that they may not be interrupted in receiving the dues and rights belonging to the Office, which are a considerable part of the revenue granted for the support and relief of poor decayed seamen and their widows and children belonging to the Corporation, as they are willing to give security to answer for the profits of the office to any persons who maliciously endeavour to interrupt them in the duties thereof in case these pretenders shall by law be found to have any right thereto. L. J., XI. 28.

Annexed:—

1. Reasons for quieting the possession of the Ballast Office. Four hundred families depend for their livelihood on the taking of ballast for ships, and cannot proceed in their labour till the office is settled, and must therefore starve. No ship can go to sea without ballast, and trade must therefore cease, and the receipt of money at the custom house also. The Trinity House are willing to give security to answer for the profits of the office to any pretenders.

May 15. Petition of the assignees and trustees of William Mountjoy, Esq., deceased. King Charles I., in the 12th year of his reign, granted to Wm. Mountjoy and others all the soil and sand of the River Thames, and the lading and ballastage of all the ships in the river, for a yearly rent of one thousand marks, and Mountjoy accordingly entered upon the office, received the profits, and constantly paid the rent; but for the last seventeen years neither petitioners nor their predecessors received any profit from the office. Petitioners pray for an order to encourage them in the speedy settling of the office, and that nothing may be done against them until they be heard. L. J., XI. 28.

Annexed :—

1. Statement of the case. The assigns of Mountjoy claim by a lease made by King Charles I. for thirty-one years, under a rent of 400*l.* for the first five years, and afterwards one thousand marks. Trinity House claims by an old patent from Queen Elizabeth, in which no rent is reserved and which was declared void by the Court of Common Pleas in the time of King James. If the lease of the assigns is laid aside a thousand marks a year and all arrears are lost to the revenue, and the honour due to his deceased Majesty may receive some prejudice. Mountjoy was in quiet possession before the wars and some time since, and desires to be restored to possession again, being only interrupted by Oliver's grant procured by one Boreman, who now sets on foot the pretended title of Trinity House.

May 15. Petition of Edward Birkhead. Was created a serjeant-at-arms for life in 1637; prays to attend his Majesty when he comes to London. L. J., XI. 28.

May 15. Petition of Walter Long. Is ready to yield obedience to the order of the House that he should restore to Gouldsbrough and Edwards the books and records belonging to the Register's Office in Chancery. Prays that the books, &c. may be inventoried and he saved harmless from all suits and actions concerning them. L. J., XI. 28.

May 15. Draft order appointing a Committee to consider of Acts and ordinances made since the Lords were voted useless, which now pass as Acts of Parliament, &c. L. J., XI. 28.

Annexed :—

1. Petition of Edward Rich, of Lincoln's Inn. The late Parliament, from a pious desire to promote learning and religion and to provide preaching ministers, from 1645 purchased many rectories and impropriations from compounders to the value of 112,000*l.*, and petitioner was appointed counsel to the trustees to perfect the legal assurances and see to the execution of the trusts; this he faithfully performed though without pay till, by order of the late Protector of the 2nd of September 1654, all the deeds, &c. were taken from petitioner and put into the hands of Mr. Phelps, clerk to the Committee for Plundered Ministers, who was by that order appointed clerk to Sir John Thorowgood and the other Commissioners, to whom the estates of the trustees were transferred. These Commissioners have shared the profits amongst themselves, their officers, and such mechanic preachers as they found fittest for their purpose. All this tends to defeat the pious intent of Parliament, and to undo many poor ministers and parishes. Petitioner holds himself bound to inform Parliament thereof, that some speedy course may be taken for giving redress to petitioner and others.
2. Statement of Rich in support of his petition.
3. Draft order of the Committee for taking into consideration the Act of the 8th of June 1649, for providing maintenance for ministers, &c., and for Mr. Phelps to bring in all the books, writings, &c. relating to the execution of the same. 16 May.
4. Order of the Committee for attendance of Phelps. 16 May.
5. Draft order of the Committee for two of the judges to draw a repeal.
6. Minutes of proceedings before the Committee; draft order, &c. 22 May.
7. Petition of the trustees for maintenance of ministers and other pious uses. Edward Rich has lately presented a petition containing many scandalous aspersions upon them, which they have not had the opportunity of refuting, as the House was too much occupied to hear them on the day appointed for their case, since which time both Houses of Parliament have made an order for the late Commissioners (whereby the petitioners conceive themselves to be intended) to give an account to Edward Rich, to be presented to Parliament of all profits, disbursements, and salaries to themselves or others, by which they suppose is meant on account of the revenue with which they have been entrusted. They have, by order of those lately in power, prepared such an account at great cost for the period from 1649 to 1658. They have no power now to call their officers to account for 1659: they therefore pray that their accounts which were delivered to the Committee for inspection may be accepted, and care taken to preserve the revenues and pious intentions of the trusts. 9 June.

8. Certificate from Edmond Bostock in the absence of Mr. Phelps, that he cannot bring in the books, &c., as Mr. Pryne and Col. Bowyer have seized the books and taken all the keys.
9. Catalogue of books and other writings late belonging to the late trustees for maintenance of ministers.
10. Minutes of proceedings of the Committee on several days.

May 15. Petition of Nowell Warner, Master of the Barges to His late Majesty, with the rest of His Majesty's watermen. Before the order to restore them to their places the Barge called the Brigantine was carried away, by what order they know not. They desire that they may have her for His Majesty's service, as there is not a barge on the river fit for the purpose but the Earl of Northumberland's. See L. J., XI. 29.

May 16. Application for an order for securing a brass horse with a figure of His late Majesty upon it, lately discovered by the Earl of Portland. L. J., XI. 29. In extenso.

May 16. Petition of inhabitants of Bidborough, Southborne [? Southborough], and Rusthall, in Kent, and other places thereabouts. The wells called Tunbridge Wells have been much frequented for fifty years and upwards by many of the nobility, gentry, and others, who have found much benefit by drinking the waters, and the petitioners and many hundreds of poor people have gained a good livelihood thereby, and it hath been always free for the poor women to dip and give the waters without restraint, and great charge was bestowed by noble persons to set a marble cistern in the well, and to pave it and rail it round; but John Wybarne, a saddler, "for by ends to himself hath lately digged up the " cistern and paving stones and carried them away, and " hath cut down some of the birches set in a walk there " for shadow by those that frequented the wells, and " doth threaten to cut down the rest and to dig the rails " about the wells, and fill them up unless he may have " the ordering and disposing of the water, though the " same do stand in the highway at the end of a common." Petitioners pray that Wybarne may be compelled to set the cistern and pavement as they were, and that all persons may have liberty to take the waters as heretofore without interruption, and if Wybarne neglect [to obey that petitioners may take the cisterns and stones and lay them as before. L. J., XI. 29.

May 16. Estimate of plate, linen, diet, coaches, furniture, &c. required for the present reception of His Majesty. L. J., XI. 30.

May 16. Petition of John Gardner and others. In 1648 and for divers years before they were possessed of fellowships in New College, Oxford, and for not submitting to the visitors then appointed, which they could not do without violation of their oaths, they were expelled from their College and University, and others unstatutably appointed in their places. They pray that their case may be referred to a Committee and timely relief given them. See L. J., XI. 31.

May 17. Petition of Richard March, Keeper of His Majesty's Stores, and Edward Sherburne, Clerk of His Majesty's Ordnance. Petitioners held their places for life by patent, until they were without cause dispossessed of them and of their dwellings in the Tower. They have been sufferers only for discharging their trusts and duties and pray to be re-admitted to their places and dwellings. L. J., XI. 31.

May 17. Order for restoration of petitioners to their offices. L. J., XI. 31.

May 17. Letter from the Lords who went to wait on the King, to the Earl of Manchester. They delivered the letter and message with which they were entrusted by the House of Peers, and found a most gracious reception from His Majesty, who intends to leave the Hague on Monday next to land at Dover, and after a short stay at Canterbury to continue his journey to London, and there to reside with his Court at Whitehall. From the Hague. L. J., XI. 38. In extenso.

May 17. Petition of Christopher Barker, Esquire. The office of King's printer was granted to petitioner's grandfather and grandfather for their lives and for thirty years after their decease. The surviving patentee died in 1646, and the office then devolved upon petitioner for the term of years, who enjoyed it until sequestered for delinquency then so called, viz., for carrying the printing presses to the city of York as commanded by his late Majesty, whereupon the office was disposed of by the assumed government to the almost undoing of petitioner, his wife, and children. He prays that all orders to his prejudice may be recalled, the more so as he has already been kept out for the full half part of his term.

May 17. Petition of Richard Downing, a sworn servant to the late King Charles of glorious memory, deceased, and his Royal Queen, in the place of Skinner to their Majesties, and Abraham Downing, son of the said Richard, as servants in ordinary for the keeping and taking care of the Queen's rich furs. They have always executed their duties with fidelity, and pray to be settled and continued in their employment. Noted. Not ordered.

May 18. Petition of George Clarke, clerk of the deliveries in the office of His Majesty's ordnance. Petitioner has His Majesty's letters patent for the place, but has been for many years dispossessed; prays to be restored thereto. L. J., XI. 32.

May 18. Petition of Lady Jermyn on behalf of herself and her children. Under colour of the order of the House that Walter Long should deliver the books, &c. belonging to the Register's Office in Chancery to Wm. Goldsborough and Jasper Edwards, he has evaded giving them up at all, demanding an acknowledgment first that they are the whole of the books that he took away. This is no part of the order, and petitioner prays that positive order may be made for him to deliver up all the books, &c. at a fixed time. L. J., XI. 32.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Commissioners of the Great Seal for the hearing of the cause in Chancery, between Lady Jermyn and Walter Long. 16 April.
2. Order of same for Long to restore the books and writings he had taken away, &c. 19 April.
3. Order of same taking notice that Long has not restored the books, and that the business in Chancery is much hindered thereby, &c. 28 April.
4. Draft report of the Committee for Petitions that all books, &c. taken away by Long ought to be restored, and the profits of the office stayed in the hands of Goldsborough and Edwards whilst the case is pending. 9 May.
5. Draft order in pursuance of preceding report. 12 May.
6. Affidavit of John Amherst that Long obtained violent possession of the keys at the Register's Office and carried away books, &c.
7. Affidavit of Francis Eglesfield on the same subject.
8. Similar affidavit of William Brerewood.
9. Report of the Committee for Petitions upon Lady Jermyn's claim to the Register's Office deduced from a patent granted to Henry and Thomas Jermyn, in the 14th year of Charles I., as trustees for their father Sir Thomas Jermyn, who directed the profits to be applied to the maintenance of Lady Jermyn and her children. Long's title depends on the delinquency of Lord Jermyn, one of the trustees, and his own appointment by various ordinances. Long was outed under the self-denying ordinance, but restored in April 1647, until, he being beyond the seas, Miles Corbett executed the office by agreement till 1653, when a new regulation was made. In 1659 Long brought an assize against Edwards, who then held a patent from the Protector, and Long was ordered by the Commissioners to execute the office, Parliament in March last vacating Corbett's interest. 9 May.
10. Draft judgment directing that all books, &c. should be restored by Long to Goldsborough and Edwards, and that they should execute the duties of the Register's Office and receive the fees for the benefit of Lady Jermyn and her children.

May 18. Message from the House of Commons with the resolutions of that House, that all the persons who sat in judgment upon the late King's Majesty when sentence of death was pronounced against him shall be forthwith seized and secured; that nothing herein shall apply to Colonel Mathew Tomlinson, and that the ports be stopped that none of those who are ordered to be apprehended escape. L. J., XI. 32. In extenso.

May 18. List of persons to be apprehended. Noted. The pretended high court of justice. L. J., XI. 32. In extenso.

May 18. Petition of Richard Pight, Clerk of the Irons in the Mint, in the Tower of London. Petitioner was appointed to the office in 1642, and was confirmed therein in 1649, but has of late suffered much trouble and disgrace from one Violet and Mr. Swallow, the latter of whom claims the office under patent from King James, which, as petitioner conceives, is void in law. In 1649 an order of the Council was made to prepare an Act against false coiners, and petitioner has been at great charge in prosecuting such persons, some of whom are so bold as to stamp silver money and foreign coin under pretence of stamping farthings, there being no law established to prohibit their presses. Petitioner's estate is much exhausted by suits brought against him by persons whom he has prosecuted in discharge of his public duty, and he prays to be confirmed in his office, to be reimbursed what shall appear justly due to him, and that he may be empowered to prosecute false coiners with indemnity for his proceedings in so doing. L. J., XI. 33.

Annexed:—

1. List of false coiners prosecuted by Richard Pight from 1650 to 1660.

May 18. Petition of Dame Barbara Villiers, widow of the late Sir Edward Villiers. King James by letters patent granted to her late husband for life the sum of twopence by tale upon every pound weight of silver moneys coined, to be taken out of the moneys remaining in the Mint upon delivery and payment of the silver moneys coined there, the officers' fees, diet, and other necessary charges being answered. The same benefit was granted to petitioner after the death of her husband by the late King Charles for several terms of years, of which about four years only are still to come. She has been kept out of the benefit of the grant by the troubles and disorders of the times, and prays that she may enjoy it for the short remainder of the term. L. J., XI. 33.

May 18. Petition of John Oliver, Dr. in Divinity. In the year 1648 petitioner was ejected from the Presidency of Magdalen College, Oxford, for not submitting to the visitation, though contrary to the local statutes of the College. Dr. Thomas Goodwin has voluntarily receded from the place, and petitioner prays to be restored thereto after his long suffering. L. J., XI. 33.

May 18. Petition of Edmond Veale. Claims certain lands called Whites at East Burnham, Bucks, from William Lidgold, under the will of Mrs. Dorcas Wollerson, deceased, about which there have been various proceedings in Chancery. Prays for a determination of the matter by the House. See L. J., XI. 72.

Annexed:—

1. Case of Edmond Veale, and pedigree of the claimants. (Printed.)
2. Veale's case.
3. Summary of proceedings in this matter.
4. Summary of the case.

May 18. Order authorising Baynham Throckmorton, and others to stay waste in the Forest of Dean, to preserve the coal and iron works there, to provide for the finishing of the ship now building there, and for the preservation of the vert and venison in the forest.

May 18. Draft of preceding.

May 18. Petition of Marmaduke Darrell. Charles Lee claims certain lands in Bucks in right of his wife Elizabeth Elwes, which petitioner alleges were only mortgaged to Lee; the Court of Chancery has, however, decided that they were sold. Prays for reversal of the decree.

May 18. Petition of Robert Thornton, chaser of wax and purveyor of wax for the Great Seal of England. By virtue of letters patent from King James petitioner enjoyed and executed the said places with fidelity until the unhappy differences, at which time he was outed. Prays to be restored.

May 19. Petition of Francis Nicholls, Major of His Excellency's regiment, Deputy Governor of the Tower, and clerk of His Majesty's ordnance there, and John Falkener, Keeper of His Majesty's stores in the place aforesaid. Nicholls holds his office by order of the present Council, and Falkener by letters patent under the Great Seal. Notwithstanding this their Lordships, by an order of the 17th instant, have upon pretence of former patents restored Richard March and Edward Sherburne to the said offices. Petitioners pray that they may be continued in their present employments. L. J., XI. 33.

May 19. Report from the Committee to whom the petition of Robert Grove and others was referred; directing that petitioners should be restored to their fellowships in New College, Oxford. L. J., XI. 34.

Annexed:—

1. Instructions for drawing the report.
2. Application that John Price, one of the first thrown out of his fellowship, may be admitted into the order of re-admission.

May 19. Petition of Cornelius Hooker, Recorder of the city of Winchester. In 1651 petitioner was duly elected recorder of Winchester, and enjoyed the office until 1657, when Thomas Muspratt (whose election to the mayoralty of the town petitioner had for just reasons opposed), immediately after his election as mayor, called together a party under the notion of an assembly, and by his power caused a vote to be passed to suspend petitioner. Muspratt, who is neither counsellor at law or attorney, but a shoemaker, has since taken upon himself to execute the office, ruling the sessions and sitting as judge in the court of Common Pleas in the city, and receiving the fees. Petitioner prays that he may be restored to his office, that he may receive his fees and all arrears, and that the vote for his suspension may be vacated.

May 19. Petition of John Fynch, of Preston, Kent. In the year 1642 petitioner by license of Parliament left his small estate in Preston, and travelled beyond the seas. Upon his return in the year 1650 he found two parts of his estate sequestered under pretence of an ordinance of Parliament made in 1643, and although he made it appear that he was never convicted of recusancy, and was absent by license of Parliament, yet by the power of Sir Michael Livesey and others his estate was still continued sequestered and charged with 54*l.* per annum, which was extorted from him until last year when he forbore to pay the same. Francis Whitewick, the receiver of the county, under colour of a late declaration, now threatens to distrain petitioner's tenants for the pretended rent, whereas it was never intended, petitioner conceives, to comprehend his unjustly sequestered estate within the declaration. Prays that the receiver may be ordered to forbear any levy for the arrears. L. J., XI. 60.

May 19. Petition of soap boilers. Complain that the London patentees broke into their houses and most illegally seized and destroyed their soap and soap materials, imprisoned their persons, forced divers of them to fly into foreign parts, and bound many of them in bonds of great penalties never to boil soap more. Petitioners brought their actions under the statute 21 Jac. against monopolies, but the patentees by the richness of their purses and by enhancing the price of soap, have kept some of the petitioners in law above eighteen years, by obtaining special verdicts, putting in pleas of three hundred and thirty-six sheets of paper, and obtaining injunctions and writs of error. Six of the patentees submitted themselves to reference, and have satisfied petitioners 10 per cent. according to their proportions of their respective stocks in the patent, but the remaining party obstinately refuse to satisfy them. Petitioners pray that the persons mentioned in the schedule may be ordered to fully satisfy them in like manner as the other patentees have done, and that some person may be appointed by their Lordships to collect and distribute the money.

Annexed:—

1. List of patentees who have submitted to reference, and list of those who refuse to pay their proportions with their stocks in the patent.
2. Petition of the aggrieved soap boilers. Pray that a day be appointed for their petition to be debated and their counsel to be heard.

May 21. Petition of Wm. Heveningham as follows:—

To the right hon^{ble} the Lords assembled in Parliament.

The humble petition of William Heveningham, Esq. Sheweth.

May 21. Petition of John Baker. Petitioner's father died in the year 1649, leaving to petitioner, then eleven or twelve years of age, lands at Benfield, and divers houses, stables, and tenements near Charing Cross. Immediately after his father's death his sister Katherine, who has since intermarried with William Kniveton, sent him away privately to Virginia, where he served as a slave, and endured great hardships for nine years. Whilst he was in Virginia, Francis Laude, a cooper, since deceased, a confederate of his sister, by violence and menaces forced him to pass away his whole estate to Laude, who re-conveyed it to petitioner's sister. Kniveton, being a crafty attorney, doubting whether the deed made in Virginia was sufficient in law, procured petitioner about a year since to be brought over again into England, and kept him almost a prisoner until six or seven weeks since when he got him to a tavern, called the Lamb, near St. Clement's Church, where having made him drink an abundance of burnt and raw wine he caused him to sign and seal three several deeds by which he conveyed away the whole of his estate for no consideration whatever. Petitioner prays that Kniveton may be sent for to answer the charges made against him, and that petitioner may have counsel assigned to him. L. J., XI. 35.

May 22. Petition of William Warren. Petitioner having heard that Edward Medborne had spoken treasonable words against the King, apprehended and committed him to prison, but afterwards consented to join with another justice of the peace to bail him. Petitioner re-apprehended Medborne and delivered him into the custody of the Black Rod, where he now is. Petitioner prays that he may be discharged of his miscarriage herein. L. J., XI. 36.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same for his discharge from the custody of the Black Rod.
2. Copy of the information of James Bayley and John Kingston of the treasonable words spoken by Medborne. 11 May 1660. And on the same paper copy of the recognizance of the two justices upon which Medborne was bailed. 14 May 1660.

May 22. Petition of Percy Lord Powis. Petitioner's name was inserted in the first bill of sale of delinquents' estates, and thereby the manor or lordship of Keriunion, parcel of the barony of Powis, in the county of Montgomery, wherein petitioner hath but an estate for life with impeachment of waste, was sold by the trustees at Drury House to Charles Lloyd, of London, merchant. Since the purchase Lloyd has erected an iron mill, and made a great destruction of timber, having felled and sold away more timber than his whole purchase money amounts to. Petitioner prays that as he is only tenant for life a stop may be made of destroying any more of the timber, and of carrying away what is already cut in order that there may not be a total destruction of the estate which descends to his son. L. J., XI. 36.

May 22. Petition of Edward Drope and others, late Fellows in Magdalen College in Oxford. By an ordinance of the Lords and Commons made in May 1648 certain persons were authorised and appointed to visit the University and colleges according to the statutes, and petitioners being called before them, and it being demanded whether they would submit to the power of Parliament in that visitation, they craved time to consider thereof, not daring to give positive answers, as they conceived they could not submit to visitors who were actual members of the University without manifest breach of their college oaths and statutes. A few days after this without any further summons or hearing they were forcibly ejected from their fellowships by the visitors and soldiers to their very great loss and damage. They pray to be restored. L. J., XI. 36.

Annexed:—

1. Case of the petitioners, repeating the statements in their petition.
2. Draft of order desired by petitioners.

May 22. Draft order for the clerks of both Houses to take an inventory of all records, books, papers, &c. in the keeping of John Phelps belonging to the public and remaining in his house. L. J., XI. 36. In octavo.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.
2. Draft of a further order for all the records, books, &c. above mentioned to be placed in the custody of Mr. Edward Rich.

May 22. Information against Captain Anthony Belcham for treasonable words spoken against the King. L. J., XI. 36.

May 22. Petition of Mary Lady Petre, of Ingatestone, in the county of Essex, widow, the relict of Robert Lord Petre, deceased. Prays that the sequestrators may be ordered to forbear levying any moneys upon petitioner's estate until the merits of her cause have been duly heard and determined by law. L. J., XI. 36.

May 22. Petition of Harman Sheafe and Thomas Ruche, citizens of London. In April 1659 John Gifford did by attachment out of one of the Sheriff's Courts arrest a hogshead of beaver skins as the goods of Henry Webb, of New England, for a pretended debt of 300*l.*, and for want of bail caused the goods to be appraised and sold. Webb has since affirmed to petitioners that he owes Gifford nothing, and they have accordingly become bail for him in the action. Gifford knowing the proceedings of all the courts of justice at Westminster to be obstructed, whereby no means can be used by Webb to make his defence to the action, or produce witnesses from New England, does with all eagerness endeavour to get the cause heard on Thursday next, and will obtain the same, and thereby take petitioners in execution unless their Lordships in the vacancy of law courts at Westminster will be pleased to stay his proceedings. They pray that all proceedings may be stayed. L. J., XI. 38.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of affidavit of William Heathfield that in the year 1653 Gifford supplied Webb with 21 tons of iron, but deponent does not know whether he paid for it.
2. Draft of the attachment out of the Sheriff's Court.

May 23. Petition of Captain Anthony Belcham. Petitioner does not desire to excuse himself of the matters sworn against him, though he remembers not that ever he spake such words as are deposed. Prays their Lordships to grant him the benefit of His Majesty's declaration, and to discharge him from his imprisonment. L. J., XI. 38.

May 23. Letter from General Montagu to the Speaker of the House of Peers; announcing that the King and the Dukes of York and Gloucester had embarked at Scheveling for Dover. L. J., XI. 41. In extenso.

May 23. Petition of Elizabeth Dendie, prisoner in the Gatehouse. Petitioner complains that being imprisoned for words she never spake she is most uncivilly used in the prison. Prays that some course may be taken to save her from utter ruin until her complaint can be heard. L. J., XI. 42.

May 24. Order appointing a Committee to draw up a letter to the King to express the great sense of the House for His Majesty's safe landing, and to know where the House may wait upon him, &c. L. J., XI. 40. In extenso.

May 25. Draft letter from the House of Peers to the King; congratulating His Majesty upon his safe arrival. L. J., XI. 41. In extenso.

May 25. Draft letter from the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers, to the Commissioners with the King; desiring them to present preceding letter to His Majesty. L. J., XI. 41. In extenso.

May 25. Petition of John Giffard. Prays that the order made by their Lordships to stay his proceedings against Henry Webb for the recovery of a just debt may be recalled. L. J., XI. 41.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 22 May 1660.

May 25. Petition of Thomas Walker, D.D. Petitioner was duly elected Master of University College, Oxford, and continued in quiet possession for many years until he was removed in 1648 for not submitting to the visitation there. Upon petitioner's removal Dr. Hoyle was placed in his room, who is since dead, and Mr. Johnson now enjoys the place, having been put in by Oliver Cromwell without any election of the fellows, pretending the same was a sequestration in regard petitioner was alive. He prays that, in tender consideration of his great sufferings, nothing of scandal or insufficiency being ever objected against him, he may be restored to his place in the college, being his freehold.

May 25. Petition of Humphrey Babington. Petitioner was about ten years since outed from his fellowship in Trinity College, Cambridge, for refusing to take the engagement against His Majesty and the House of Peers, nothing else having been proved against his life or doctrine. Prays to be restored to his fellowship. Endorsed, "Read and ordered."

May 25. Petition of Richard Clarke, late Keeper of the Stores in the Armoury Office in the Tower of London. Petitioner was in the year 1637 by a patent from the late King appointed to his office, and disbursed for the repair of arms, 610*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*, and the arrears of his wages amounted to 503*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* Soon after the death of the late King petitioner was forced by the Committee for regulating the Navy and Customs to resign his place to Edward Anslow. Petitioner, who has long suffered under the oppression of the late government, prays to be restored to his former employment.

May 25. Petition of Abraham Babington, Citizen and Draper of London. Petitioner in times past being tenant to Alderman Bunce for two houses and two shops, upon sequestration of the Alderman had the offer of pre-emption, which he constantly refused to accept, until towards the expiration of the term in the Act mentioned, the lady of the Alderman much importuned him to purchase, and promised that he should be harmless from them or any of theirs in so doing, assuring him she had full power from the Alderman. Whereupon petitioner was induced to purchase the premises and to rebuild them at the cost of 2,000*l.* The House of Commons has now ordered that the whole of Alderman Bunce's estate shall be restored to him, whereby petitioner is liable to the loss of his money and also of his whole livelihood. Prays that he may find such favour from their Lordships as the equity of the cause shall deserve.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of petitioner's case.

May 26. Petition of Thomas Wood, D.D. In the year 1635 petitioner was presented to the rectory of Whickham, in the bishopric of Durham, and officiated there until 1651, when he was ejected by persons who pretended to be commissioned by such as at that time assumed the power, nothing appearing that in the least reflected upon him saving his being one of His Majesty's chaplains. Upon his ejection his own parishioners, and divers in the neighbouring parishes who were frequent hearers of him, voluntarily and without his privity petitioned for his restoration, nevertheless he could have no redress, but has peaceably continued and patiently waited upon God under his unjust sufferings. Prays to be restored to his living. L. J., XI. 42.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate as to the truth of petitioner's statements. 22 May 1660.

May 26. Order upon Dr. Wood's petition. L. J., XI. 42. In extenso.

May 26. Disbursements made by Clement Kynnersley, His Majesty's wardrobekeeper, for furnishing the Lords House of Parliament and the rooms adjoining. L. J., XI. 44.

May 26. Letter from the King at Canterbury to the House of Peers in answer to the letter from the House of the 25th instant. L. J., XI. 44. In extenso.

May 28. Information of John Rennalls, of Ewell, Surrey, of treasonable words spoken by William Rewer alias Drywater against the King. On the same paper confession of Rewer that he used the words imputed to him. L. J., XI. 43.

May 28. Information of Captain John Pulford of treasonable words spoken against the King by Captain Henbury. L. J., XI. 43, 45.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Captain Stephen Henbury. The words wherewith petitioner stands charged are pretended to have been spoken in March last, a time when men took too great a latitude in speaking against the kingly Government. Although he denies having spoken them, yet since it hath pleased His Majesty to grant his most gracious and free pardon to all his subjects who shall within forty days lay hold upon his grace and favour, and shall by any public act declare their doing so, he prays that he may have the benefit of His Majesty's most gracious pardon, and be discharged of his imprisonment.

May 28. Paper endorsed Sir John Lenthall's papers concerning persons that have spoken treasonable words against the King. L. J., XI. 43.

Annexed:—

1. Informations of Adrian Pinckard, wife of William Pinckard, of St. Olave's, Southwark, oarmaker, and others, of treasonable words spoken by Thomas Blacklock against the King. Blacklock

- being examined utterly denied that he spake the words, but refused to subscribe to this examination.
2. Information of Elizabeth Evans, of the Upground, in St. Saviour's, Southwark, that she heard Lewis Powell say that if the King should land and the barge should go down for him, he would have an oar in the same barge with some others that he knew, and that he would sink the barge and every man and mother's child that was in it, for he valued not his own life so he might not come in. Powell being examined denied every particular charge in the information.
3. Information of Sarah Crockford that she heard Margaret Dagger say that the King, meaning our Sovereign Lord King Charles, was a bastard, and that Bridewell was the fittest place for him. Dagger being examined denied that ever she said any such words.

May 28. Resolution of the House of Commons respecting the proclamation touching the rebels in Ireland. C. J., VIII. 47. In valensio.

May 29. Draft order of the Commons desiring the Lord's concurrence in a proclamation against Jesuits, seminaries, popish priests, and recusants. C. J., VIII. 48.

Annexed:—

1. Draft proclamation for putting into execution the Acts against Jesuits, &c. This proclamation was received by the Lords on the 30th of May, but allowed to drop. L. J., XI. 47.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE LATE KING'S GOODS.*

1. May —. "A p'ticular of the inventories of the King's goods brought into the Lord's Committees," being a catalogue of returns, twenty-seven in number, made by persons who had become possessed of any of the goods of the late King, showing in most cases whether they were still in their possession or how disposed of, and for what sum. The returns are as follows, viz.:—

i. Francis Trion sold six pieces of arras, of the story of Vulcan and Venus, to a French jeweller for 300*l*.

ii. Edw. Martyn has four pictures called the Dukes of [Somerset?] and another, a St. Francis, bought for 11*l*.

iii. Edw. Annesley, storekeeper and proof-master of the Armoury of the Tower of London, has in his custody all the armour brought from Greenwich to Guildhall and from thence to the magazine in London about the year 1644, except one rich gilt armour delivered by order of the Council to General Cromwell. Annesley enumerates nine suits of armour, besides one armour of great value of his late Majesty's made last for his own person, and one small armour made for Prince Charles, his now Majesty, both put to sale at Somerset House, the which he procured of one Willit to prevent the loss of them.

iiia. Petition of Edward Annesley, keeper of the stores and proof-master in the office of armoury within His Majesty's Tower of London; being skilful in making and keeping of arms he was in the year 1642 called to serve the late King and Parliament in the Magazine of War in London, was appointed clerk of the armoury in the Tower in 1647, and about two years later keeper of the stores and proof-master; he has been very instrumental in preserving the armour of his late Majesty at great expense to himself, and prays to be confirmed in his employment.

iv. Henry Kem, at the Swan Inn, King Street, Westminster, gave 30*l*. for carpets which may have belonged to his late Majesty.

v. Wm. Froggitt, at the Pheasant, in King Street, makes a return of goods that he knows of in various persons' hands, amongst them in the hands of Edward Martyn, six pictures, one being the Duke of Florence; in the hands of Lord Whitlocke, "the Slaughter of the Hellena of Greese," &c.

vi. Thomas Osborne has a Joseph and a St. Francis by Gentelico, a picture by Woter, five pictures of the King's family in little, the King's family in water-colours, &c.

vii. Thomas Beauchamp knows that the Chief Justice St. John has four brass heads, &c. in his possession.

viii. Wm. Bacon has a statue of Deianira, and a picture of Mary and Angels.

ix. John Embree has the following pictures received in part payment of a great debt due to him for work and materials in repairing his late Majesty's houses:—

xiiia. Petition of Arthur Samwell. The pictures in the above list were delivered to him in part payment of his wages as gentleman pensioner in ordinary to his late Majesty; he is ready to give them up, humbly praying that he may be satisfied what is justly due to him.

xiv. Henry Browne, Keeper of the Wardrobe and Privy Lodgings at Somerset House was forced to deliver to Clement Kinnarsley, and the rest of the contractors appointed to sell his late Majesty's goods, all the pictures, plate, jewels, and household stuff in his hands, except those usually made use of by the wardrobe keeper, which were given to him in part payment of his wages, and were so old that they were never intended to be used again; he has in his possession old carpets, curtains, &c., and a picture of the Queen of Scots, "the rest of the goods mentioned in his contracts he was forced to put off for the buying of both their Majesties' pictures done by Sir Anthony Vandyke, and other things of value which were sent her Majesty"; 3,619*l*. 14*s*. 8*d*. is due to him for wages, &c.

xv. Nicholas Corsellis, junr., of London, merchant, engages that the following shall be forthcoming when lawfully demanded,—one piece of landscape wrought with a needle, Moses in the Mount by Bassin, an Ecce Homo by Titian, and a Virgin Mary by Andrea del Sarto.

xvi. The Earl of Peterborough has in his custody four or five pictures that possibly did belong to the King, bought from several persons.

xvii. A note of pictures in the hands of John Cade, at the sign of the Globe in Cornhill, near the Old Exchange, which he supposes belonged to his late Majesty, with the price they cost when he took his house and shop, most of them being bought of creditors at an under-value:—

* On the 9th of May 1660 a Committee was appointed to consider and receive information where any of the late King's goods, jewels, and pictures were, and to advise of some course how the same might be restored to His now Majesty (L. J., XI. 19); the Committee was afterwards empowered to order the seizure of all such of the goods as should be discovered to them; and Thomas Beauchamp, late clerk to the trustees for the sale of the King's goods, was ordered to deliver the books of inventories of the King's medals, rings, &c. to Mr. Webb, His Majesty's surveyor.

William Latham, woollen draper to his late Majesty for his household and his great wardrobe, took in part of his debt and others with him, which were in the 4th lot drawn at Somerset House the 23d of October 1651, the parcels following remaining unsold the 17th of May 1660: Two heads of stone valued at 50*l.*, a picture of Lord Darnley, valued at 2*l.*, a picture of a Mary, valued at 30*l.*, a Nativity at 10*l.*, a landscape at 10*l.*, a picture called a "Lenday" at 6*l.*, a Mary at 4*l.*, Sebastian at 20*s.*, a landscape at 30*s.*, a King Edward the 6th at 2*l.*, a landscape at 2*l.*, a Mary at 4*l.*, the Prince Elector at 3*l.*, a statue of stone called Adrian at 80*l.*, a statue of brass at 50*l.*, a statue of stone called a Diana, 60*l.*

2. Petition of Thomas Beauchamp* to the Committee of Lords for securing the King's goods; by Act of Parliament of the 26th of June 1649, the King's goods were appointed to be sold for payment of his debts due before the wars began to his servants and creditors, in pursuance whereof 110,000*l.* or thereabouts in goods were according to their appraisement distributed amongst the creditors and servants; the goods were bought up by agents from beyond the seas and so were transported, diuers pictures and statues were bought by petitioner which he refused to transport, and has preserved them, and restored and amended the breakings and other defacings done thereunto by Colonel Pride's soldiers and others; petitioner in presenting a schedule of the goods in his hands prays that he may be reimbursed the money he is out of purse as for part of the goods he is still indebted, and the money he spent was all the estate he had for supportation of his family.

6. Inventory of the King's goods (consisting of twenty-eight pages) delivered by Thomas Beauchamp; page 1 runs thus,—

To the Right Hon^{ble} the Committee of the Council to whom the ordinance for further relief of the late King's servants and creditors is referred:—

In obedience to your Honors' order of the 4th of this instant July I have examined what of the late King's goods have been reserved for the use of the State or disposed of for the use of the navy, and do find the particulars thereof to be as followeth:—

Imprimis, out of the first moneys arising by sale of the late King's goods there was paid in ann ^o 1649 unto Sir Henry Vane, jun ^r , for the use of the navy the sum of	£	s.	d.
-	-	-	26,500 00 00

More paid in money by order of Parliament unto Col. Downes, then a member thereof, the sum of -	-	-	01,500 00 00

28,000 00 000

Of all which no part thereof hath yet been repaid.

Goods reserved, viz^t.:

By an order of the Council of State, dated the 27th of September 1651, the particular goods hereafter named are reserved from sale until the pleasure of the Parliament be further known therein.

Then follow descriptive lists of the goods, the places to which they belong, and the values. The lists themselves are too long for more than headings, places, and total prices to be given here; in many cases marginal notes state that the goods have been restored to His Majesty's service:—

"Examined by mee Tho^s. Beachampe, the 19th of July 1654, sometyme reg^d to the trustees for sale of the late King's goodes."

On the next page is a memorandum "to enquire what pictures and other goodes and of what value have byn sent for to Whitehall since the goodes aforesaid were delved," followed by a rough list of pictures, arras hangings, &c., valued in all at 15,388l. 1s. 6d. The following are amongst the pictures, Herod with Baptist's head by Titian, 150l.; a family by Parde-noone, 80l.; a Madonna by Titian, 60l.; a woman's picture by Andrea del Sarto, 30l. On the last page is a list apparently of persons who had bought or made away with goods, with the penalties required from them set against their names.

7. May 23. Paper endorsed "Committee for Reception, &c. and Information, &c.," containing the following documents:

- i. Draft order of the Committee for Colonel Fock, and the other trustees for sale of the King's goods, to attend the Committee with their books and accounts. 12 May 1660.
- ii. Order of the Committee for Mr. Geldropp to seize all goods, pictures, jewels, and moveables belonging to the Crown in the hands or custody of any person. 19 May 1660.
- iii. Similar order for Colonel William Anselme. 21 May 1660.
- iv. Similar order for Colonel William Hawley. 23 May 1660.
- v. Letter from John Webb to [the Earl of Dorset]. Requests his Lordship to order that such pictures as the writer may find fitting to be set up in His Majesty's lodgings at Whitehall may be delivered to him by the Committee. 23 May 1660.

vi. Petition of John Webb, architect, to the Committee. Petitioner was about 20 years ago, by the late King's special command, brought up in the study of architecture by Inigo Jones, His Majesty's then surveyor of the works, and was made by Mr. Jones his deputy; when he went from his house at the beginning of the late unhappy differences. Petitioner managed the office until upon a false suggestion of Mr. Carter to the Committee of the Revenue that Jones was at Oxford with the King, petitioner was dismissed and Carter employed, but he not long enjoying the fruits of his indirect dealing, Mr. Embree was put in. Petitioner prays that he may be restored, as he is informed that Embree is now suspended.

vii. Application for an order for the goods belonging to the King, and lately shipped by Gregory Clement of Greenwich, to be seized by Colonel William Hawley. (Undated.)

viii. Application of Hugh Woodward, housekeeper at St. James's, for an order for 50l. for cleansing and preparing the house and gardens fit for His Majesty, the same at present being in every part very noisome by reason of having been a garrison for quartering soldiers and their families for eleven years past, whereby is contracted an abundance of filth and soil very chargeable to be cleansed removed.

ix. Petition of Henry Twyford, stationer. In May 1641 petitioner by appointment delivered in several wares, such as paper, ink, and wax for the use of His Highness the Prince of Wales, and continued to supply the Prince until the time of the unhappy wars, but as yet he has received no satisfaction. Prays that he may be employed to serve his now Majesty with stationer's wares.

x. Application of Henry Browne, keeper of Somerset House and gardens, that an allowance of 382l. may be granted for the cleansing of the house and gardens, the regiments that have lately been quartered there having left the house very foul and noisome, the gardens being utterly spoiled and defaced.

xi. Application to the Committee with reference to divers statues and pictures of the King's which were sold to sundry persons, and would now be of great use in beautifying the gardens and lodgings of the King's houses, and which could be bought in for very small sums of money.

xii. Petition of Thomas Lockington, yeoman of the fish and salt store to His Majesty. The room called the fish storehouse, with the rooms belonging to that office in the west side of Westminster Hall, are now possessed by persons put in by the late Parliament, who refuse to give them up, and petitioner is thereby unable to lay in his provisions of salt and fish for the use of His Majesty's household. Prays that he may be ordered possession of the rooms, and that the records and the persons there inhabiting may be forthwith removed.

xiii. Account of the particular goods of the late King's, Queen's, and Prince's that are reserved, and that are in the custody of Clement Kynnersley, wardrobe keeper to the King's Majesty, consisting of rich hangings of arras with gold in the drapery, tapestry hangings, beds, carpets, &c., of the estimated value of 40,758l. 18s. 6d.

8. Application for an order authorising Colonel William Hawley and Colonel Hercules Low, who have seized sundry of the King's goods, to deliver them to Clement Kynnersley, &c. L. J., X. 43. 26 May.

9. Application from Colonel Hawley to the Committee appointed to receive information concerning the King's goods, that his papers may be returned to him in order that he may complete his inventory, that Mr. Beauchamp may be appointed his assistant, and that some person may be appointed to seize all the goods and personal estate of the late King's judges.

10. Inventory of goods received into the Treasury House at Whitehall from the 19th to 26th of May. Endorsed, Colonel Hawley's inventory of goods in Whitehall. (Two papers.)

11. Draft order for Mr. Harrison, the King's embroiderer, who has in his custody a rich cloth of state (wherein he has a share with others of His Majesty's servants), to deliver it to Clement Kynnersley, he giving a receipt for the same, in order that Harrison and the other sharers may hereafter receive satisfaction. L. J., XI. 44. May 28.

12. Application by Clement Kynnersley for an order for him to receive the cloth of state mentioned in preceding, which is valued at 500*l.* and cost above 1,100*l.* in the year 1638. "Never used but twice, and that in the Banqueting House for the late King, never seen nor used by the late Oliver Cromwell."

13. Application for a warrant for Francis Deakins to seize a silver bason and other pieces of plate belonging to the King's chapel, and other goods belonging to His Majesty, discovered by Deakins.

June 1. Petition of Thomas Weaver, merchant, complains that he has been arrested, and is now imprisoned in the Poultry Compter at the unjust suit of Thomas Hayes and others, and being a stranger is unable to procure bail. Prays for his enlargement. L. J., XI. 49.

June 1. Complains that Sir George Vane, the pretended Captain of the county troop of Militia of Durham, only admits into his troop such as have been in actual service against the late King and his now Majesty, and are known to be Anabaptists or Quakers. Sir George Vane, and the other Commissioners now appointed by Act of Parliament, were also Commissioners acting personally in the last summer against Sir George Booth, and by reason of their authority they secured the arms of every cavalier that was charged to send in either horse or foot arms, and now refuse to deliver up the same to be used in His Majesty's service. The Quakers and other fanatics, to the number of one hundred at least, meet most every night at Ramshaw (?), at the house of Anthony Pearson, the principal Quaker in the north, and two or three horse loads of skeene knives and daggers have lately been conveyed to Pearson's house. Colonel Wren, one of the Commissioners of the Militia, upon complaint of Mr. Feak, a godly and well affected minister, doth not proceed in securing the King's peace, and apprehending the breakers thereof, and Mr. Feak has been forced to have his church guarded in consequence of Thomas Boulton, a Quaker, having threatened to burn it. Thomas Parkinson, of Cockerton, has spoken treasonable words against the King, and the magistrates of the county do not prosecute him for the same according to law. L. J., XI. 51.

June 4. Petition of William Lord Craven. In the year 1641 petitioner went by leave of the House beyond the seas to his charge in Holland, where he remained until of late, without acting anything to the prejudice of Parliament. During his absence by the practice and false oaths of some evil persons his whole estate, both real and personal, was seized and kept from him under colour of a vote made in the House of Commons, being then but a small part of the long Parliament, and after the excluding of the major part of that House, by which means petitioner has been already damnified above 200,000*l.*, besides the total loss of all his real estate. Prays that his annexed case may be taken into consideration, and that to avoid multiplicity of suits he may by the favour of the House be restored to the possession of his estate, and have reparation for the damages he has already sustained. L. J., XI. 52.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Lord Craven's case.

June 4. Petition of Dorothy Lady Grey, heretofore the wife of Thomas Lord Grey, of Groby, deceased, and now the widow of Gustavus Mackworth, Esq., also deceased. Lord Grey advanced considerable sums of money, including petitioner's jointure of 1,000*l.* per annum, upon an Act made for raising money upon the security of several estates thereby exposed for sale for maintaining the late wars against the Dutch nation; and part of the estate of William Lord Craven, being one of those exposed by the Act, was conveyed to Lord Grey in satisfaction of his money so advanced. Upon the death of Lord Grey petitioner married Gustavus Mackworth, who was slain in the late Cheshire rising, leaving petitioner and two children she had by him destitute of all means except the 1,000*l.* per annum going out of the estate of Lord Craven. Petitioner prays that, as Lord Craven's estate is about to be restored to him, their Lordships will order restitution to her of part of the money advanced by Lord Grey, or some annual payment in lieu of her jointure. L. J., XI. 52.

June 4. Copy of order of the Council of State at Whitehall of 24th of April last concerning the preservation of the wood in Enfield Chase. L. J., XI. 52.

June 4. Petition of Sir Trevor Williams and Elizabeth his wife, Sir Thomas Harthopp, and Dame Mary his wife, Katherine Wyndham, widow, and Sir Baynham

Throckmorton, co-heirs of Ralph Lord Hopton deceased. Lord Hopton, for his constant loyalty and eminent service to his late Majesty, was sequestered, and the whole of his real estate was disposed of by some pretending authority. Those to whom it was conveyed have destroyed all the timber and woods growing on the estate, to the value of 30,000*l.*, and have taken the whole profits which upon the death of Lord Hopton (in 1652) should, according to the laws of the kingdom, have descended to petitioners, who have suffered much in their particular estates for their loyalty. Petitioners pray that they may be put into possession, and that the pretended purchasers may be ordered to give an account of the spoil and waste they have committed, and of the rents and profits they have received. L. J., XI. 52.

June 4. Another petition of same to the like effect.

June 5. Resolution of the Committee for Privileges, that the Lords assembled in Parliament of right are to choose their own Speaker. See L. J., XI. 54.

June 5. Petition of Richard Pight, clerk of the irons in the Mint of the Tower of London. In the year 1649 petitioner was by patent granted by the then Parliament, and by indenture of the Mint appointed to be clerk of the irons, no person having any pretence of right thereunto, except Thomas Swallowe, who claimed the office by colour of a patent granted by King James, which is, as petitioner conceives, void by law. Petitioner has been industrious and faithful in discharging his duty, having prosecuted eighty offenders for false coining within the last four years, and the sum of 500*l.* and upwards is due to him, besides 100*l.* arrears of salary. Mr. Swallowe has now been, by their Lordships' order of the 5th of May last, restored to his place and appointed to execute the office, since which several days have been appointed for petitioner and Swallowe to attend in the matter, but Swallowe has hitherto failed. Petitioner prays that the Warden of the Mint for the time being, or Mr. Thomas Burch, in one of whose hands petitioner's salary remains, may be ordered to pay him 100*l.* thereof to enable him to execute the office, and that Swallowe's order may be discharged. L. J., XI. 53.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same to the Lords and Commons. Prays that he may receive an order for some part of his arrears, and that he may be protected and indemnified against all suits brought against him for prosecuting false coiners, &c. (Undated.)

June 5. Petition of many oppressed victuallers inhabiting in the city of Winchester, and many other inhabitants there, groaning under the burden of oppression: complain that Thomas Muspratt, a journeyman shoemaker, who came to Winchester not long before the late unhappy times, and who by his adhesion to the enemies of the late King advanced himself twice to the office of mayor of the city, where now he is an alderman, being a great maltster, has caused two brew-houses to be set up and by his tyrannical power has ordered that no inhabitant or victualler shall brew beer or ale to sell, but shall take it from the brew-houses, though never so ill brewed, and at intolerable rates. By these means many of the inhabitants who formerly under that employment lived well, being able to pay taxes and to relieve others, are now so impoverished that without speedy redress in the removal of so great a monopoly they must inevitably be ruined. They pray their Lordships to take the premises into their grave and serious debate.

June 5. Petition of Abraham Babington, citizen and draper of London. Similar to petition of 25 May 1660. See above.

June 6. Petition of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of Deptford Strand, in Kent; when the case concerning the office of lastage and ballastage of ships was heard, the House ordered that the matter should be referred to law in regard of His Majesty's absence; now as a trial at law will require some time, and in the interim the trade of the port of London will be much damaged, and the poor of the corporation for whom petitioners are entrusted will be much prejudiced, they pray that they may enjoy the office and the profits until the trial, they giving any reasonable security to be answerable for the profits to whomsoever the same shall be adjudged. L. J., XI. 54.

Annexed:—

1. Reasons humbly offered by the masters and owners of shipping for the quieting the possession of the ballast office; the office is one of great public concern, and any quarrel about it obstructs trade and the King's revenue, the masters of ships know not where to demand ballast, nor whom to pay for it, many families are reduced to beggary, disorderly persons dig and take ballast contrary to the rules for the preservation of the Thames to the great damage of the river : 2,000*l.* will not make good the damage done on Saturday night last in the late breach in Poplar Marsh ; claims may be set on foot merely to extort double duties, and for want of the profits of the office the Trinity House will be unable to relieve the poor seamen and their wives and children.

June 6. Petition of Stephen Henbury, now prisoner in Newgate. Petitioner was committed by their Lordships on the 30th of May last upon the information of Captain Pulford for treasonable words spoken against His Majesty. Although petitioner knows he is innocent he desires to have the benefit of His Majesty's declaration of grace and favour. Prays for his discharge. L. J., XI. 47.

Annexed :—

1. Certificate of Sir Thomas Aleyn, Lord Mayor, that Henbury appeared before him and publicly declared that he desired to lay hold on his Majesty's grace and favour, as expressed in his declaration of the 14th of April last. 1 June 1660.

June 7. Petition of Doctor Thomas Hurst, Chaplain in Ordinary to the late King, and divers other ministers. Petitioners residing sometime in Newark to avoid the violence of the wars and to enjoy liberty of conscience, the County Committees, by ordinance of 31 March 1643, seized all their estates only for delinquency, not scandal, and put others into the livings where they have continued about 16 years. Petitioners pray to be restored to their parsonages till they are evicted by law and justice, or that the profits may be secured in responsible hands until they can finish their legal trials against the present intruders. L. J., XI. 55.

June 7. Petition of John Brayne. Their Lordships, on the 30th of May last, ordered the Commissioners lately appointed for the preservation of the woods of the Forest of Dean to cause a stop to be made of the removal of coal or iron at the iron works belonging to Captain John Brayne, and adjoining Woolaston's Wood, lately held by Oliver Cromwell. Petitioner has three iron works adjoining the wood built upon his own proper estate, and no part or parcel of the estate held by Cromwell, and he will sustain great damage, if not utter ruin, if he be debarred of the use and disposition of his stock. Prays that the order, so far as concerns his estate, may be discharged. L. J., XI. 55.

June 7. Petition of John Marquess of Winchester and Daniel Wicherley. Pray for the reversal of a decree pronounced by Mr. Fountain, one of the Commissioners for the Great Seal, in a suit brought against petitioners by Lord St. John, son and heir of the Marquess. The Commissioners of the Great Seal, on the 12th of January 1658-9, after hearing the cause, ordered a trial at law to be had, after which they would give their final judgment therein. Notwithstanding this Mr. Fountain, who had been counsel in the cause for Lord St. John and his lady, on the 4th of June 1659, the first day that the Great Seal was delivered to him, ordered the cause to be set down for judgment on the following day, and without the assistance of any one judge, and before there had been a trial at law, and without hearing any counsel for petitioners, pronounced a decree against them. Petitioners pray for reparation against Mr. Fountain for the damages they have sustained, and that in the meantime all further prosecution upon the decree may be stayed. L. J., XI. 56.

June 8. Petition of Elizabeth Burley, widow, late wife of Captain John Burley, deceased, for herself and on the behalf of her four fatherless children. When the late King was a prisoner at Carisbrook, in December 1647, such a strict restraint was put upon His Majesty that none of his chaplains or servants could have access to him, whereupon petitioner's husband, fearing that some evil might proceed from thence to the person of his sacred Majesty, did, as he was in duty bound, use the utmost of his endeavours, by beating drums in the island, to give timely notice to the people to appear and preserve his Majesty from that destruction which afterwards fell upon his sacred person, but his intentions were frustrated by an over power, who seized him and committed him to the common gaol at Winchester ; he was afterwards tried in a most unjust manner, and a verdict being brought in against him, he was sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered as a traitor, and the sentence was in the most barbarous manner put in execution upon him. Petitioner prays that justice may be done upon the judges, jurors, and prosecutors for the murdering of her husband, and that Serjeant Wyld and the other judges who passed the sentence may be exempted out of the Act of general pardon and oblivion, and that reparation may be made to petitioner and her children out of the estates of those who were guilty. L. J., XI. 57.

Annexed :—

1. Draft proviso to except the persons concerned in the trial and execution of Captain Burley from the benefit of the Bill of Indemnity.

June 8. Petition of Sir Arthur Gorges. In 1640 a judgment was entered in the King's Bench against petitioner for 160*l.* debt and 40*l.* costs at the suit of Hugh Rosse, and in the following year he was charged in execution ; about five months after Rosse petitioned the Lords in Parliament against Sir John Lenthall for suffering petitioner to be at liberty. Rosse and petitioner were both heard, and an order was made wherewith Rosse was so satisfied that he never troubled petitioner afterwards, though he lived eleven years. That judgment has since been unduly taken off the roll at Westminster, and another entered upon another roll against petitioner for the same debt and costs, by colour whereof his lands are extended by Katharine Rosse, administratrix of Hugh Rosse, many years after his death. This has all been done by the undue practice of some attorneys of the Court of King's Bench. Petitioner prays for relief for himself and his tenants. L. J., XI. 57.

Annexed :—

1. Another petition to the same effect. 17 July 1660.

2. Copy of preceding.

3. Copy of Order of the Committee for Petitions for Sir John Lenthall to give account why he allows Sir Arthur Gorges charged in execution to go abroad. 1 July 1641.

4. Copy of order in the cause. 11 July 1641.

June 8. Petition of John White of London, merchant. Prays for the reversal of a decree in Chancery obtained against him by Hester Shaw.

June 8. Form of declaration for those who desire to lay hold upon His Majesty's grace and favour in accordance with the declaration. See L. J., XI. 7.

June 9. Information of Joyce Cotton of treasonable words spoken by Clement Wakelin against the King. L. J., XI. 58.

June 9. Petition of Charlotte Countess Dowager of Derby. L. J., XI. 58 :—

To the Right Honourable the Lords assembled in Parliament.

The humble peticon of Charlotte Countess Dowager of Derby.

Sheweth—

Whereas James Earle of Derby, yo^r pet^r's late husband was in the yeare 1651 for his loyalty to Our dread Sovereigne Lord King Charles, by color of some p^tended authority derived from the late Tyrant and Usurper Oliver Cromwell, barbarously, and contrary to all law, imprisoned, sentenced, and put to death by Colonel Humfry Mackworth, pretended President of an illegall Court set up for that purpose, and other desperate p^sons whose names are under written, though some of their owne party, convinced of their unjust proceeding, opposed the same. And thereupon all his estate was seized upon, sold, and disposed of, and your pet^r and her family exposed to all extremities of want and misery, to their unspeakable griefe and p^rjudice.

And forasmuch as the said sentence against your p^r's husband was a great violacon to the Peerage of this Realme, and an indemnity to such p^sons (who acted in so horrid a murder) may bee an encouragem^t to others to shed more innocent blood upon the like occasion.

And in regard your pet^r hath now no legall remedy by her appeale to prosecute the offenders for the death of her husband.

Your pet^r doth humbly pray that such of the said persons as are living may bee proceeded against in a course of Justice, and brought to condigne punishment. And that their p^sons and estates, and also the estates of such of them as are dead, may bee excepted in the Acts of indemnity and for confirmacon of sales w^{ch} are now to pass. And that your peticoner and her family may have

1. Order of the Committee for Privileges for the attendance of those who were judges of the late Earl of Derby or their survivors. 18 June 1660. L. J., XI. 67.
2. Copies of orders empowering the Committee to send for the judges of the late Earl of Derby. L. J., XI. 64, 67.
3. Copy of resolution of the Parliament that James Earl of Derby is a fit person to be brought to trial, and order for his trial by court-martial at Chester. 11 Sept. 1651. C. J., VII. 16. In extenso.
4. Copy of warrant of Oliver Cromwell addressed to Major General Mitton and others to call a council of war or court-martial at West Chester for the trial of any person residing or apprehended in Lancashire, Cheshire, Salop, and North Wales, who have offended against the Act passed on the 12th August 1651, "prohibiting" correspondence with Charles Stewart or his "party." The Court is further empowered to sentence and put in execution the sentence pronounced against any person found guilty, and is required to observe such rules and limitations as are set down in the Act, and to keep a true record of all their proceedings. 11 Sept. 1651.
5. Letter from the Council of State, at Whitehall, to Colonel Robert Duckenfield, Governor of Chester. The two letters of the 27th instant, concerning the business of the Isle of Man, have been read at the Council, and the business referred to the Lord General from whom Colonel Duckenfield will receive directions. The regiments appointed to that service have their tents, and orders have been given about pioneers' tools, which will no doubt be furnished. Order has been given by the Parliament with regard to the Earl of Derby, which is effectually to be pursued without expecting any interposition from the Council. The letter is signed "Jo. Bradshawe." "Psidt," and sealed with the seal of the Council of State. Endorsed: A letter from Ld. Bradshawe as president respecting the Earl of Derby and his reprieve. 30 Sep. 1651.
6. "Journal of the Court Martial held at Chester, 1651, for the trial of the Earl of Derby, &c." This manuscript book contains a full report of the proceedings of the Court at the trials of the Earl of Derby, Captaine John Benbowe, and Sir Timothy Fetherstonhaugh, commencing on the 29th of September and ending on the 1st of October 1651. All the prisoners were found guilty and condemned to death, Lord Derby was sentenced to be beheaded at Bolton in Lancashire, Sir Timothy Fetherstonhaugh to be beheaded at Chester, and Captain Benbowe to be shot at Shrewsbury. The book is a fair copy of the following papers from which it was no doubt compiled.
- 7-20. Original notes of the trials, articles exhibited against the prisoners, and their answers thereto, affidavits, &c. The answers are signed respectively by Lord Derby, Captain Benbowe, and Sir Timothy Fetherstonhaugh.

June 9. Petition of John Halke, rector of Upminster, in the county of Essex. In the year 1646 petitioner was sequestered by the Committee for Plundered Ministers, principally touching a breach of contract between himself and some of his parishioners. In 1648 he petitioned their Lordships that the sequestration might be taken off, on the ground that he was innocent of the false insinuations of scandal inserted in the order for his sequestration, but a further order was unduly obtained from the committee, and John Robotham, a wheelwright and Anabaptist, was by Cromwell and the powers then in being placed in the rectory. Petitioner prays to be restored. L. J., XI. 58.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition.
 2. Paper, intituled the wretched positions of John Robotham, a wheelwright, late teacher to Colonel Sydenham's regiment, and still teacher in public at Upminster, in the county of Essex, found in his printed book, intituled "The Mysteries of the two Witnesses unveiled."
 3. Another paper with similar title.
- June 9. Order referring Halke's petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 58.
- June 11. Note respecting the timber and wood lying felled in Havering Park. L. J., XI. 56.

June 11. PAPERS RELATING TO THE ACT OF INDEMNITY.*

1. Petition of John Lord Abergavenny; Wm. Say, one of the judges in that execrable murder of his sacred Majesty King Charles the First, having in 1646 got possession of petitioner's manors and lands in Kent, received the profits till the year 1655, unjustly detaining from petitioner during that time 2,000*l*. and upwards; prays that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Act of attainder and forfeiture of Say's estate.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso that the lands of Wm. Say forfeited by his attainder shall be liable to payment of the sums due by him to John Lord Abergavenny.
2. Petition of Arnold Beake and others, of London, merchants; in 1653 Robert Sedgwick and John Leverett surprised and seized upon the coast of England a ship and goods of petitioners, without any legal proceedings, and carried them to New England, pretending that they belonged to Holland, and there, though petitioners sent over legal proofs that the ship and goods were theirs, disposed of them; petitioners have recovered their ship by law, and are now in suit for their goods, having already spent near 400*l*.; they pray that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Bill for general pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso saving to petitioners their right to continue their proceedings at law.
3. Petition of Captain Thomas Booth and others; petitioners being in the King's service in the garrison of Newark in the year 1645 were ordered out upon a party by Lord Bellasis, the Governor, and were taken prisoners by Francis Fiennes alias Clinton, and, notwithstanding the articles of surrender in which they were included, he by his own power detained them prisoners; pray that Fiennes, so far as concerns this matter, may be excluded out of the Act of general pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.
4. Petition of Wm. Browne; as bailiff of the corporation of Ledbury, in the county of Hereford, petitioner in 1651 proclaimed King Charles the Second, for which cause Cornet Day came with a party of horse, seized and wounded petitioner, and plundered his goods to a considerable value, and with a pistol in one hand and a sword in the other forced him to proclaim His Majesty a traitor, swearing that else they would forthwith murder him; prays that Day may be excepted out of the Act of general pardon, that so petitioner may have reparation against him at law.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to except Day from pardon for wounding William Browne.
5. Petition of Cressy Barnett and others; about the year 1642 petitioners lent great sums of money to divers gentlemen of York upon bonds for repayment of the same with interest, but upon information to the Committee for advance of money that the money was lent to foment the war, petitioners were proceeded against as delinquents and forced to deliver up their bonds; they pray that Samuel Moyer and the rest of the committee, and also their agents, Francis Nevile and others, may account for the money they have received towards satisfaction of petitioners' just debts, and that no proviso may be admitted in the Act of oblivion to their prejudice.
6. Petition of Elizabeth Colt, widow, daughter and co-heir of John Dutton, late of Sherborne, in the county of Gloucester, Esq., deceased; petitioner's father being engaged for great sums of money for his late Majesty at Oxford, which he since paid, did, to reimburse himself, purchase from the trustees appointed by pretended Acts of Parliament divers fee-farm rents belonging to His Majesty; he died in 1656, and by his will left the residue of these rents, after other bequests, to petitioner under certain conditions; she prays that the annexed proviso saving her rights to these rents may be inserted in the Act of general pardon.

* The Act of free and general pardon, indemnity, and oblivion, was brought from the House of Commons on the 11th of June 1660, and received the royal assent on the 29th of August following. L. J., XI. 57, &c. 12 Car. II. c. 11.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

7. Petition of Ralph Constable, Richard Harland, and Oswald Harland, of the county of York, gentlemen; pray that Luke Robinson and others, who in order to support the tyranny of the late usurper violently seized petitioners, and without any charge long detained them prisoners in York Castle, with unusual restraint and cruelty, contrary to all the known laws of the land, may not enjoy the benefit of the Act of grace and pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso, saving petitioners' right to proceed at law against Luke Robinson and others.

8. Petition of Thomas Daniell and Ralph Warton. In the year 1659, John Pockley did, by force of arms, take petitioners from their habitations and sent them to Kingston upon Hull, where they were detained close prisoners for many months without any charge against them, to the great damage of their health and estates; pray that Pockley may be excepted out of the Act of pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

9. Petition of William Elrington, of Beverley, in Yorkshire. Richard Wood and Charles Vance did about seventeen years ago, by force of arms, seize and carry away cloth and goods belonging to petitioner to the value of about 500*l.*; petitioner prays that they may be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity, and that the statute of limitations may be no bar to his proceeding against them.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

10. Petition of John Freeman, gent. Petitioner and his predecessors have been ancient tenants to the Queen, of the castle of Wallingford, which was in 1641, by order of his late Majesty, made a garrison, and large storehouses and other buildings for the service of the garrison erected; in 1652, by colour of a pretended warrant, Major Arthur Evelin and others pulled down not only the storehouses and buildings but also the ancient walls, and in so doing destroyed petitioner's gardens, orchards, &c., so that it cost him 300*l.* to repair the same; prays that the persons above named, and also Wm. Cooke, who without any pretended order carried away a great part of the stone and other materials, may be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

11. Petition of Angell Grey. Petitioner's mother-in-law, Lady Elizabeth Griffin, agreed to put 3,000*l.* into his hands on which he was to pay her interest for life, and after her death to dispose of the money for the preferment of his four younger children. The money was paid and a bond entered into, Sir John Danvers and others becoming trustees, who in 1644 (petitioner being of the King's party) brought the matter to the notice of the Commissioners sitting at Haberdashers' Hall, as a debt due from petitioner, though he had compounded under the Articles of Oxford, and the trust had been proved. Petitioner, who still pays the interest to Lady Griffin, and will have to provide the principal at her death, prays that nothing in the Act of Oblivion may prevent his proceeding at law or in equity for reparation.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to save Grey's right of proceeding for reparation.

12. Petition of Johan Herbert, the relict of Matthew Herbert, late rector of Llangatting [Llanganten] and the chapels thereunto annexed, in the county of Brecknock, and late rector of Kevenillys [Cefnillys], in the county of Radnor, on the behalf of herself and her distressed children. Petitioner's husband for his service to his late Majesty was, contrary even to the orders of the then Parliament, sequestered from his livings before any charge was exhibited against him, and the profits to the value of 400*l.* per annum were taken from him for thirteen years; after several imprisonments he died in February last, leaving petitioner and her children destitute and with many debts to pay; prays that the persons who took the profits of the livings may be ordered to pay her all arrears of fifths, and that her children may not be stopped by the general Act from their remedy at law or equity for so much of the profits of the livings as has not been paid to the public treasury.

Annexed:—

1. Reasons in support of the petition.

2. Proviso proposed to be inserted in the Act.

13. Petition of John Hinde, executor of the last will and testament of Dr. Thomas Winston, deceased. No proof of delinquency appearing against Dr. Winston, an order was made on the 9th of March 1646-7 for restitution to be made to him of what had been taken from him by the sequestration of his estate; prays that the annexed proviso to make the treasurers for sequestrations liable for what they have levied may be inserted in the Act of Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of Committee for Sequestrations of the 9th of March 1646-7.

2. Proposed proviso.

14. Petition of Colonel Richard Ingoldsby. In 1658 Sir Hardres Waller, by judgment of the Court of Common Pleas in Ireland, became indebted 2,000*l.* to petitioner, and not being able to pay on the day appointed conveyed various goods and chattels to him in satisfaction of his claim, but the Commissioners for the present managing of the affairs of Ireland seized them for the use of His Majesty; the goods were petitioner's for valuable consideration, and without any fraud, and he prays to be restored to possession of them.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso saving petitioner's rights.

15. Petition of Thomas Kittermaster, gent. Francis Blyth, brother-in-law of Sir Arthur Hazlerigg, after attempting to evade a bond by fraudulently cancelling it, when petitioner had recovered a judgment against him, used his influence as one of the Committee for Sequestrations at Leicester to arrest petitioner and force him to acknowledge satisfaction for the bond; prays that Blyth may by proviso be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

16. Petition of Roger L'Estrange, Esq. By commission from his late Majesty petitioner endeavoured to reduce Lyme Regis, but was betrayed and delivered up to Colonel Walton, by whose order he was tried by the City Court Marshal for his life, condemned unheard, and notwithstanding a protest from Sir John Corbett, President of the Court, and from the then House of Lords, was imprisoned in Newgate for four years, to the loss of his health and liberty, and to the ruin of his fortune; prays that his remedy at law against Robert Titchburne and others may be specially excepted out of the Act of Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

17. Petition of Francis Mathew, of Tunstone [Turna-stone], in the county of Hereford; prays that James Parry and others, who broke open his house, took away his goods, and imprisoned his daughter on account of his loyalty to His Majesty, may be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

18. Petition of Mary Moloy alias Lewis, widow; her late husband, a citizen and goldsmith of London, and a servant of his late Majesty, having occasion to trade into Shropshire in the late distempers, Sir Francis Otley, then governor of Shrewsbury, took from him a thousand pounds worth of jewels, rings, and plate for the supply of his late Majesty, giving him a ticket and appraisement of the goods, which has never been satisfied; she prays for relief for herself and her fatherless children that are in a perishing condition, and that her right of action may be saved by proviso in the Bill of indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

19. Petition of Richard Newcourt, of Somerton, in the county of Somerset; a trial at law is now pending respecting petitioner's title to a farm at Tiverton, in the county of Devon, purchased upon a false pretence during the late troubles by Captain John Stent; petitioner prays that the purchase may be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

20. Petition of Elizabeth Poulton, widow, late wife of Thomas Poulton, deceased. Petitioner's late husband, with divers others, endeavouring the suppressing the illegal and tyrannical power of the pretended Protector, being overpowered by the forces of Colonel Croke and Colonel Shapcott, yielded themselves to Colonel Croke upon articles granting them their lives and estates, notwithstanding which they were delivered over to the then civil power, imprisoned in the gaol at Exeter, tried for high treason, found guilty and executed. Petitioner prays that the judges who tried her late husband, John Coppleston, the then sheriff of Devon, and Colonel Croke may be excepted out of the Act of general pardon and oblivion.

21. Duplicate of preceding.

22. Petition of Richard St. George, Esquire; in the year 1644 petitioner's goods and estates were seized by James Whinnell, an agent for sequestrations in the Isle of Ely, and this in spite of an order for their discharge from the Committee for Sequestrations in the whom Whinnell, using horrible words against the King, accused of being malignants; petitioner prays that, though the execrable offence against His Majesty be pardoned, yet that his own right of proceeding at law may be saved.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

23. Petition of Robert Salvin, of Durham, gentleman, executor of the last will and testament of Rebecca Salvin, widow, deceased; in 1644 Rebecca Salvin, petitioner's mother, was forced to take refuge in Hartlepool, of which garrison Major Thomas Salvin, his brother, was governor. The place was afterwards surrendered upon articles of agreement that no person within the garrison should be damned to the value of twopence, but contrary to this Thomas Lilburne, now called Major Lilburne, who commanded a troop of horse against the town, plundered petitioner's mother of gold and silver plate, and jewels of the value of 1,500*l.* and upwards, while by his own loyalty petitioner has lost or expended upwards of 6,000*l.*; he prays that his right of proceeding at law against Major Lilburne may be saved in the general Act of pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

24. Petition of Robert Scott and others, dealers for lead in the county of York. In 1644, contrary to the articles for the surrender of York, the Commissioners then attending the Scottish army unjustly seized and sold to their private benefit, but pretendedly for the public, lead belonging to petitioners of the value in all of 940*l.* Petitioners pray that they may have the benefit of the law, notwithstanding the Statute of Limitations and the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

25. Petition of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House of Deptford. Since the year 1648, Colonel Richard Deane and others have taken upon themselves the management of the house, received the profits amounting to 5,000*l.*, and converted them to their own use. Pray that they may not be acquitted by the Act of Indemnity from answering for the same.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

26. Petition of Robert Walters; his father lost his life in His Majesty's service against the Scots, and petitioner addressed himself from his earliest years to his late Majesty's service, continued faithful to the end, and has since followed His Majesty through the whole course of his misfortunes; petitioner's sufferings have been aggravated by Thos. Dickinson, Alderman of York, who, desiring to unite petitioner's estate to his own, because they lay next to one another, accused petitioner of delinquency, and upon feigned pretences committed him to gaol for two years, and afterwards pretending that petitioner was instrumental in a rising on behalf of His Majesty clapped him close prisoner in the mews, turned his wife and family out of doors, and seized his estate, and not only denied his wife any maintenance, but imprisoned her also; petitioner prays that provision may be made in the Act of Indemnity to preserve his right of redress by law.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

27. Petition of Richard Washington, Esq. Prays that Thomas Bouchier and others may be excepted out of the general Act of pardon and indemnity until they have made reasonable reparation to petitioner for the unjust sale of his late grandfather's estate.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

28. Petition of Swithin Welles and Frances, his wife; Thomas Helliard, father of Frances Welles, in the year 1654 by virtue of His Majesty's commission appeared in arms at Salisbury, endeavouring His Majesty's restoration. Being taken prisoner, with John Penruddock and others, and carried to Exeter, he was tried before John Glynn, sergeant-at-law, and others, condemned and hanged. Prays that John Glynn and the others may be excepted out of the general pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

29. Petition of Luke Whittington and others, dealers for lead in the county of York; in 1644, contrary to the articles for the surrender of York, the Commissioners then attending the Scotch army unjustly seized and sold to their private benefit, but pretendedly for the public, lead belonging to petitioners of the value of 10,580*l.* Petitioners pray that they may have the benefit of the law, notwithstanding the Statute of Limitations and the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

2. Duplicate of preceding.

30. Proviso that all persons that have been in actual service and arms for the late King, and deserted him and bore arms against him and petitioned for his death, shall be excepted, as to estate, out of the Act.

31. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to persons who have alienated, demolished, ruined, destroyed, or defaced the building, fabric, or site of any cathedral church or churches, churchyards, or places used for burial, or have robbed or carried away the plate, bells, pulpits, seats, or utensils of any cathedral or parochial church.

32. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the making good of any office or place by patent that is forfeited by law since 1641 and before, wherein the King's immediate profit or advantage is or was concerned by way of trust to the Crown.

33. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to any persons who assumed Parliamentary powers to themselves from the 7th of December 1648 until the 12th of February following, after the House of Lords was voted useless, and the greatest part of the members of the House of Commons, contrary to law and justice, were by force excluded from exercising their office; nor to any persons who sat as judges in any pretended high court of justice; nor to any persons who have abjured the government of the King's Majesty that now is; nor to any persons who were Major Generals and who acted as decimators in decimating divers persons contrary to articles and their own Act of Oblivion; all such persons are from henceforth debarred from being capable to elect or be elected in any Parliament.

34. Proviso that the Act shall not extend or be prejudicial to any persons who have any debt due to them by any person excepted or condemned within the Act either upon bond, judgment, or statute, acknowledged by them before such time as they were guilty of the crimes for which they now stand excepted.

35. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to bar any persons in law or equity from the recovery of so much of their just debts as has been levied or sequestered since the year 1648, and not really paid unto the use of the public.

36. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the indemnifying any persons that have during the late troubles committed waste and destruction of woods, deer, pales, or fences belonging to the King's forests, parks, or chases of Ashdowne and the Broyle, in the county of Sussex.

37. Proviso for indemnifying all persons who are anywise concerned in the engagement commonly called the Yorkshire Engagement, subscribed in the year 1642 for satisfaction of the public debts of that county, undertaken for his late Majesty's service, or in any of the bonds mentioned in a list referred to the late Committee for advance of money at Haberdashers' Hall, by an order of the late House of Commons of 10th of June 1649, or who have paid in their respective proportions of an assessment imposed on them by the said Commissioners, under penalty of sequestration, towards satisfaction of the said bonds and engagement, or who shall before a certain day pay in the same to the Lord Mayor of the city of York, to be disposed of by such order as he shall from time to time receive from the Lord Chancellor or the Lord Keeper towards satisfaction of such of the creditors as shall be ordered to receive the same.

38. Another proviso to the same effect as preceding.

39. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to take away the benefits which any persons have or ought to have by virtue of any judgment, order, or decree made by the late Commissioners for relief on articles of war.

40. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to pardon or indemnify any persons who, in December 1648, committed that horrid violation upon the Parliament, or, by command, warrant, order, or overt act, then or afterwards, as by, from, or under any pretended council of officers or Council of State, forcibly and unjustly imprisoned any person, that was then a member of Parliament (as against those persons only that then were members), but that the said imprisoned persons, within six months of the passing of the Act, shall have liberty to commence actions at common law, and receive damages for their wrongful imprisonments. Nothing contained in this proviso shall extend to the prejudice or trouble of any persons who, upon the 29th May 1660, were or now are of the standing army in England, and have in the late transactions appeared for the happy settlement of the Kingdom.

41. Proviso that no conveyance of any manors, &c. (not being the manors, &c. of the late King, Queen, Prince, or of any pretended delinquent Archbishop, Bishop, Deans, and Chapters) made by any of the persons in the Act by name excepted, in consideration of any marriage and for portion thereupon paid and received, shall be impeached by the attainder or conviction of any such excepted person.

* 42. Duplicate of preceding.

43. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to acquit or discharge persons who have received the rents and profits of any persons who have been sequestered for their loyalty, and have not really and bonâ fide accounted for and paid over the same to the use of the Commonwealth, &c.

44. Proviso that the Act shall not bar any action which Nicholas Borlace may have for anything done contrary to the articles of war, which by judgment or decree of the court of articles were preserved unto him, and afterwards allowed by the Commissioners at Haberdashers' Hall.

45. Copy of preceding.

46. Another copy.

47. Proviso excepting any persons guilty of breach of the articles of Exeter granted to Sir John Stawell in the time of war.

48. Duplicate of preceding.

49. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to discharge or take away any action or suit against the Committee of the county of York for goods belonging to Richard Lord Clifford taken by the Committee contrary to articles.

50. Proviso against indemnifying John and Edward Elliott, of St. Germans, in the county of Cornwall, concerning a debt due from them to Jane Kekewich.

51. Proviso excepting Luke Robinson or any other person, for speaking treasonable, scandalous, and dishonourable speeches against the late King, the Queen, or any of that royal family, or for imprisoning James Wilkinson.

52. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the confirming of a settlement heretofore made by Robert Kirkham, of the impropriate rectory of Cotherstocke [Cotterstock], in the county of Northampton, unto William Mountagne and others.

53. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to discharge any suit brought by Richard Callow against Robert Fenwick.

54. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the pardoning of any misdemeanour or offence in the undue obtaining any deed or writing, or the acknowledgment of any fine from Dame Mary Powel, late wife of Sir Edward Powel.

55. Duplicate of preceding.

56. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the pardoning of any offence committed in the late riots and tumults, in defacing the church, depopulating and pulling down the town and mill at Sandtoft, destroying crops, and other offences within the level of Hatfield Chase, &c.

57. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the indemnifying Philip Lord Wharton as to the sum of 4,000*l.* or thereabouts, which he has received out of the estate of Sir George Savile, Bart., since the year 1647.

58. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to discharge Robert Wallop, Sir Thomas Jervoise, deceased, and Peter Weaver, deceased, their heirs and executors from any restitution or satisfaction to be made to or recovered by John Marquess of Winchester for any money received by them out of his estate.

59. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the pardoning, acquitting, or discharging of Edmund Thorold and Sir Robert Thorold for any wrong done by them to William Coury, His Majesty's agent, during the time of the late war.

60. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to bar Sir

William Batten, of Walthamstow, Essex, from bringing actions for disturbing him in the execution of the office of Surveyor of His Majesty's Navy.

61. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the right that Sir Robert Sprignell and Dame Ann his wife ought to have out of and from the lands of Sir Michael Livesey.

62. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to pardon or indemnify Thomas Pendleton and others for unjustly seizing and detaining the profits of the manors of Walgrave and Northall, in the county of Northampton.

63. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer that sat at Salisbury in 1655, and gave sentence against Thorpe, Woodward, Deane, and others.

64. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to the lands, &c. belonging to Ralph Lord Hopton, Baron of Stratton, deceased.

65. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to discharge or indemnify Sir John Corbett, Baronet, for any profits received out of the manor of Milton, Bucks, by reason of a mortgage thereof unto Sir Lewis Watson, late Lord Rockingham.

66. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to any persons who did in any way promote the indictments of high treason preferred and found against Sir George Booth and Sir Thomas Myddelton in the year 1659.

67. Proviso that the Act shall not debar Robert Lord Lexington from bringing actions at the common law against William Lord Grey for the sum of 5,000*l.* received of Lord Lexington for the discharge of the sequestration of his estate during the late war.

68. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to pardon any of those who sat in a Council of War upon James late Earl of Derby.

69. Proviso that the Act shall not extend to pardon any persons for waste or destruction committed since the year 1645 in or upon any of the lands or of the timber or woods growing thereupon, wherein Henry, then Marquess and Earl of Worcester, or Edward, now Marquess and Earl, were only seized for term of their respective lives without liberty to commit waste, with remainder in fee or fee tail expectant thereupon to Henry Lord Herbert, son of the said Edward, nor shall exclude Lord Herbert from any remedy against persons for such waste.

70. Proviso that the Act shall not debar Katherine Anwell, executrix of Robert Anwell, deceased, from prosecuting in law and equity Sir John Carter and Colonel George Twisleton to recover 1,200*l.* which they in the year 1648, by duress of imprisonment, enforced Robert Anwell to pay unto them for their private avarice and without any just cause.

71. Proviso that the Act shall not prejudice the right and title of Thomas Earl of Cleveland and Thomas Lord Wentworth, his son, to the manors of Stepney and Hackney, in the county of Middlesex, and Toddington and Harlington, in the county of Beds, &c., nor prejudice the cause and petition of the said Earl and Lord now depending before the Lords in Parliament.

72. Duplicate of preceding.

73. Proviso on behalf of the Earl of Pembroke that the Act shall not extend to pardon any riots or trespasses committed in the chase or warren called Albourn Chase, in the county of Wilts, since the year 1641.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE ACT FOR CONFIRMATION OF JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.*

1. List of Committee on the Bill, with dates of adjournments, &c.

2. Draft of clause VII. of the Act, saving recognizances, obligations, &c. to the late protectors. (See Statutes Folio Edition. 12 Car. II. c. 12.)

3. Another draft.

4. Draft of Clause XI. of the Act, declaring the late Government usurped. (See Statutes. Folio edition.)

5. Draft of a clause for the same object as preceding. Endorsed proviso put in to be inserted in the Act for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings, Aug. 1660, but never passed.

6. "The effect of the several provisos"—giving very briefly the effect of certain provisos.

14. Petition of Nicholas Errington, of Pont Island, in the county of Northumberland, Esq., and of Mark Errington, son and heir to the said Nicholas; in 1652 the name of petitioner Nicholas was inserted in the Act for sale of delinquents' estates, and when his life interest was sold his friends were not permitted to treat for the same, because Sir Arthur Haselrigg wished to purchase, and accordingly did so, after which petitioner Nicholas, not knowing which way to turn for food for his wife and six children, applied to Sir Arthur to commiserate his sad condition, but could only induce him to take off his heavy hand from the estate upon condition that the petitioner Mark would join in conveying the inheritance of a portion of the estate called Meersfen to him absolutely; this, out of fear of Sir Arthur's power and on payment of 600*l.*, which has been fully reimbursed out of the estate, was done; the petitioners pray that the conveyance thus obtained through fear and necessity may be annulled, and they restored to their birthright and inheritance.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Bill.

15. Petition of Francis Ewre, son and heir of Edward Ewre, in a suit brought by Sir Edward Freere and Thomas Tawyer against the said Sir Edward Ewre and others, that a proviso may be inserted in the Act saving his right of inheritance to the manor of Oddington, Oxon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso. Noted rejected.
2. Duplicate of preceding.

16. Petition of Hugh Hodges and Richard Higdon, the surviving administrators of John Pysinge, deceased; Pysinge died intestate in 1647, having in his lifetime obtained judgment for 519*l.* and costs against John Cole, of Lillington, Dorset, who on pretence of his fidelity to the Parliament obtained an order enjoining the petitioner who, with Lawrence Swetnam since deceased, had sued out letters of administration to acknowledge satisfaction of the judgment, which in fear of imprisonment they were enforced to do; they pray that the annexed proviso saving their right of recovering their just debt may be inserted in the Bill.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

17. Petition of William Warner, gent., nephew of George Warner, Esq., deceased; in 1643 George Warner, who was then near eighty years of age, fearful of the insolvency of the soldiers, retired into the garrison of Lichfield, for which his estate was sequestered, and in 1649, being unable to obtain any relief, he was forced to make an absolute assurance of his lands in Wolston and Marston for a very inconsiderable sum to Sir Peter Wentworth, in order to preserve the rest of his estate; petitioner, who on his uncle's death succeeded to his rights, prays that upon repayment by him of the money received Sir Peter Wentworth may be ordered to account for the mesne profits and to reconvey the lands in question.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to except the proceedings mentioned in the petition from the effect of the Act.

18. Petition of Henry Earl of St. Albans, Sir George Carterett, Knight, Vice Chamberlain to His Majesty, and others, freeholders of the Islands of Guernsey and Jersey, on behalf of themselves and other the inhabitants of the said Islands; they understand that contrary to custom the Act now passing for confirmation of judicial proceedings includes by name the proceedings in the Islands of Guernsey and Jersey; pray that the Islands, and all proceedings and persons there, may be omitted and left either to His Majesty's or the assembly's order.

Annexed:—

1. Reasons to omit the Isles of Jersey and Guernsey and the adjacent islands out of the intended Acts of Indemnity and for Confirming Judicial Proceedings; when Normandy revolted in King John's time the Islands remained faithful, and by him and his successors their ancient laws and customs were preserved; under these they had, besides the governor authorised by the King of England, a bailiff and twelve justices or jurors to administer justice in each island; abrogating, altering, reforming, or new making any laws was never done by the Parliament of England, but by an Assembly, which consisted of one or more commissioners sent by the King of England, the King's Governor of the Isle, the bailiff, the jurats, and the rest of the states of the Island, who by summons by the Governor as a Parliament acted all things of that nature, which being after confirmed by the King and His Privy Council stood as law; now though the Islands, if specially named, might be bound by general Acts of the Parliament of England, yet it is not reasonable that they should be so named in the present case, because the Islands having assemblies of their own may pass an Act themselves, because their interests are not represented in the Parliament of England, and because it will be contrary to their ancient laws and privileges.

19. Petition of divers inhabitants of the Island of Guernsey on the behalf of themselves and the rest of the said Island; pray that the inhabitants of Guernsey may be comprised in the Bill of Oblivion and the Bill for Confirming Judicial Proceedings.

20. Another similar petition of same.

21. Proviso that no fine or judgment made good by the Act should bar or prejudice any person other than the parties to the fines, their heirs and assigns, &c.

22. Proviso to meet the numerous applications for exceptions, proposing that certain persons not named should be appointed to hear cases before the 1st of August 1662, "according to equity and good conscience, without respect to the ordinary rules of proceedings in courts of law and equity."

23. Proviso saving the right of all persons from whom any money has been levied under colour of a pretended Act of Parliament for the preventing of the multiplicity of buildings in and about the suburbs of the city of London, and within ten miles thereof, to sue for and recover the same.

24. Duplicate of preceding.

25. Proviso to except from confirmation all assignments or other assurances of tithes, rectories, or annuities made by any persons for their compositions.

26. Proviso that the Act shall not confirm any decree which stands reversed upon appeal.

27. Duplicate of preceding.

28. Proviso to empower the Judge for the Prerogative Court of Canterbury to proceed in and determine all matters and causes left undetermined in the late Court of Probate of wills and granting of administrations.

29. Proviso that any person who has not satisfied any judgment against him for any cause of action by reason of his being a soldier for the late King, or in any other way promoting his service, may relieve himself by audita querela, and the suggestion of acting in the King's service shall be sufficient authority to the judges to examine the case, and thereupon to admit the prisoner to bail.

30. Proviso to except from confirmation any indictment or other proceeding for high treason against any person for levying war against the late tyrant Oliver Cromwell.

31. Proviso that the Act shall not confirm any decree reversed upon writ of error, &c.

32. Proviso to exempt from confirmation any inquisitions, seizures, extents, or other process of any court for levying or obtaining any sum taxed or assessed at Goldsmiths' Hall upon any person by way of fine or composition for loyalty to the late or now King.

33. Proviso to except a judgment obtained by Thomas Boughton against John Viscount Rochford in 1650.

34. Proviso to except a judgment obtained by William Grigg against John Viscount Rochford in 1657.

35. Proviso to except a decree in Chancery obtained by Sir John Conyers and others concerning the lands of Charles Brandeling, in the counties of Northumberland and Durham, &c.

36. Proviso to except a decree made in Chancery at the suit of Amphilis Musters and others against Sir William Smith concerning the deanery of Crantock, &c.

37. Proviso to except a decree made in Chancery at the suit of Edmund Prideaux and others against Sir William Smith and Dame Mary his wife concerning her dower.

38. Proviso to except a judgment against Sir William Smith at the suit of George Farmer, &c.

39. Proviso to except an order in Chancery in a suit between Lady Anne Basset, deceased, and Richard Cooke, executor of Elizabeth Trelawney.

40. Proviso to except a decree in Chancery for Holland, plaintiff, against the Earl of Lincoln.

41. Proviso to except any order made by the Commissioners for removing obstructions in the sale of delinquents' lands against John Jackson and John Hedworth, an infant, concerning lands and coal mines within the lordship of Harraton, Durham, at the suit of Josias Primate.

42. Proviso to except any decree or order by the Commissioners of Sequestrations sitting at Haberdashers' Hall for seizing 800*l.*, for the pretended delinquency of Sir Philip Knyvett.

43. Proviso to except a fine or fines levied in 1651 by Dame Mary Powell, late wife of Sir Edward Powell, deceased, to Anthony Bassett, if it shall appear by any judicial proceedings within five years next ensuing that there was any force or fraud in obtaining the same.

44. Copy of preceding.

45. Another copy.

46. Proviso to except a decree made in Chancery against John Marquess of Winchester, Daniel Witherly (Wicherley), and others at the suit of Charles Lord St. John, son and heir apparent of the said Marquess.

47. Proviso to except any judgment obtained by John Coliton of Exeter, in 1656 against John Harris for rent of a house or houses near Exeter after the same were pulled down in the first war in 1643.

48. Proviso to except from confirmation all actions, judgments, &c. against Sir John Stawell relating to the late unhappy differences, and for which he ought to be indemnified by the articles of Exeter.

49. Proviso to except a decree made in Chancery in June 1656 in a cause in which Samuel Trelawney was plaintiff against Sir John Grenville and others concerning the manor of Lanowe, Cornwall.

June 13. Commission for Sir Orlando Bridgeman to supply the Lord Chancellor's place in the Lords' House in his Lordship's absence. L. J., XI., 59.

June 13. Draft of "An Act for restoring of Charles Earl of Derby to the possession of the manors, messuages, lands, and hereditaments belonging unto James Earl of Derby, his father." Read a first time this day. L. J., XI., 59.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 17 Aug. L. J., XI., 132. Inchoans.

2. Minutes of proceedings of the Committee.

3. Amendments to the Bill.

June 13. Petition of George Duke of Buckingham. In the year 1651 petitioner's estate was sold by a pretended Act of the remaining part of the House of Commons, commonly called the Rump, not only without the consent of the House of Peers, but contrary to an Ordinance of Indemnity made by them in petitioner's behalf, the privilege of peerage and the fundamental laws of the land, without hearing, or proof of any charge against him. Prays that his case may be considered, and the same right and favour done to him as to Lord Craven. L. J., XI., 59.

June 13. Petition of the ancient citizens of the City of Winchester there inhabiting before and in the year 1648. Shortly after the death of the late King the persons mentioned in the annexed paper, and their adherents, by the power of the then usurping Parliament outed petitioners for their loyalty to his sacred Majesty; they have ever since done many heinous and horrid acts, as by an annexed paper appears. Pray that both parties may be converted before their Lordships while the Act of Indemnity or Oblivion is passing through Parliament. L. J., XI., 60.

Annexed:—

1. List of those that were citizens of Winchester before the new modelling of that corporation by the then pretended Parliament in the year 1649; and copy of order of the House of Commons appointing the new corporation. 13 Sept. 1649.
2. Copy of preceding.
3. Statements of the notorious crimes and abuses committed by the intruding corporation of Winchester since the 30th of January 1648–49, upon the former corporation then there being. Gives an account of the desecration of some of the churches in Winchester, &c.
4. Printed copy of petition and statement.
5. Application of petitioners to Richard Earl of Dorset, requesting his Lordship to obtain an order for the present Mayor of Winchester and the three cofferers to deliver up the keys of the coffers to Richard Goddard and others, councillors at law, inhabiting in the city, to be safely kept until the further pleasure of the House be known &c.
6. Another petition of the ancient citizens of Winchester. Pray that a proviso may be inserted in the Act of Indemnity saving their right to prosecute their suit against the intruding corporation.

7. Proviso proposed by petitioners.

June 13. Copy of petition of the Lords and Commons to the King; that His Majesty's proclamation against profaneness may be read in churches. L. J., XI., 60. Inchoans.

June 13. Printed copy of order for settling the master, wardens, and assistants of the Trinity House at Deptford Strand in possession of the office of lastage and ballastage of all ships lying between London Bridge and the main sea eastwards until the title to the office is determined at law, upon their giving security to be answerable for the mesne profits in case they shall be legally ejected. L. J., XI., 60.

Annexed:—

1. Bond for 10,000*l.*, in pursuance of preceding order on behalf of the Trinity House, to answer for the mesne profits of the office of lastage and ballastage of ships until the title to the same shall be determined at law. 14 June.

June 13. Petition of Francis Viscount Mountague. For years past petitioner, under pretence of his being a popish recusant, has groaned under the heavy burden of a sequestration of more than two thirds of his estate. By the laws of the realm he is not subject to sequestration, never having been convicted of recusancy, yet not having any legal power to make his appeal for relief, through the violence of the times he was forced patiently to submit himself. Prays that his condition as a peer may be considered, that he may no longer live under these oppressions, and that the levying of any money on his estate may be suspended until the merit of his cause be heard and determined by law. L. J., XI., 60.

June 13. Petition of Thomas Weaver, merchant. Has been arrested at the suit of Thomas Hayes, and being a stranger cannot in any way find bail. Prays for enlargement.

June 13. Petition of John Lord Pawlett. Petitioner's father, being comprehended within the articles of Exeter in 1646, applied himself to make his composition, but found he was named an excepted person; an order was made for trial of him for his life in reference to matters acted in time of open hostility and this chiefly by the prosecution of the town of Lyme in Dorsetshire, near which he had his residence; he was also enforced to settle lands of the value of 200*l.* per annum to feoffees for the use of the town, and petitioner was compelled to join therein, but no allowance was made thereof, but the same was over and above the composition, which came to a very great sum. Besides this petitioner's father was charged with 1,500*l.* to Lady Drake, upon her pretence of losses in the late war. The town of Lyme also got an order for the rents of the lands that had been sequestered. Petitioner prays that the assurance for 200*l.* per annum may be made void, and that the corporation of Lyme may be held accountable for the mesne profits which they have so unjustly extorted. See L. J., XI., 98.

June 13. Petition of Abel Hodges; complains that Robert Clarke has by subornation of witnesses and indirect practices obtained a judgment at law against him. Prays that Clarke may be ordered to appear before their Lordships, and that in the meantime all proceedings at law may be stayed.

June 13. Petition of William Souch, clerk, vicar of Amport, in the county of Southampton, where he has been minister almost forty-seven years, and now a prisoner in the Fleet. Petitioner was ejected out of his vicarage in March 1655–6 by virtue of an ordinance of State made by Oliver Cromwell and his pretended council, and not by any Act or Ordinance of Parliament. The chief article to eject him was his and his sons' loyalty to the King, for which both his sons were arraigned for their lives upon the insurrection of Salisbury. Robert Lancaster the now pretended incumbent being no ways ordained a minister either by bishop or otherwise, has for full four years enjoyed the vicarage, never yet administering the Lord's Supper or using the Lord's Prayer, but declaiming against it and the use thereof as sinful and dangerous. Petitioner prays to be restored, and that satisfaction may be made to him for the profits so unjustly kept from him, or at least that the fifths may be paid to him for his present supply and the discharge of the debts for which he is now a prisoner.

June 15. Petition of Martha Hatt alias Arundell, the oppressed widow of Cornet Simon Hatt, deceased. Petitioner's husband was an officer of horse in the old standing army in Ireland, and died in actual service against the rebels. Petitioner was robbed of a very plentiful estate by the rebels, and what they left has since the death of her husband been most unjustly detained from her by the illegal protections given by Sir Theophilus Jones. Petitioner has attended long in England to obtain a legal hearing of her sad case, which in Ireland she could not get, and she has now nothing left to maintain herself and her orphan daughter but the sale of her apparel and the overburdened charity of friends. She prays that, as Sir Theophilus Jones and the other persons concerned are now in England, a day may be appointed for hearing her cause. L. J., XI. 64.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of report of the Earl of Orrery and the rest of the Commissioners from Ireland upon a petition presented by Martha Hatt to the King; the arrears she claims are provided for in the declaration for the settlement of Ireland, and if she have just cause she may take her remedy at law against Sir Theophilus Jones, but considering her low condition and her great losses and sufferings the Commissioners recommend her as an object of compassion and charity for some present relief. 8 Nov. 1660.
2. Petition of Martha Hatt alias Arundell, praying the House to extend their bounty and Christian charity towards her and her distressed family to keep them from perishing by pining want whilst the above report is under the consideration of His Majesty. (Undated.)
3. Draft proviso to some Bill not mentioned saving the right of Martha Hatt alias Arundell to lands in Ireland.
4. Copy of preceding.
5. Another copy.

June 18. Petition of Andrew Sandeland, clerk, late chaplain to the late Marquess of Montrose. About sixteen years since the rectory of Skerningham [Scrayingham], in the county of York, was sequestered from petitioner by the powers then in being for his affection to the late King. Prays that a fifth part of the profits, with the arrears, may be forthwith paid to him, and that the remainder may be secured in responsible hands until he be restored thereto by due course of law. L. J., XI. 66.

June 18. Petition of Lady Elizabeth Capell, the disconsolate widow of the late Lord Capell. Petitioner's late husband was in the year 1648 [March, 1648–9] arraigned and condemned to die by a pretended high court of justice, contrary to the laws of the land, the privilege of peers, and the articles of agreement interchangeably signed by the Commissioners of the assailants and defendants at the siege of Colchester, and in pursuance of this unjust sentence he was barbarously murdered contrary to the solemn engagement of the army. Petitioner prays that all those who have had a hand in this notorious wickedness may be brought to condign punishment. L. J., XI. 66.

Annexed:—

1. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for privileges. L. J., XI. 66.
2. List of the names of the judges of the High Court of Justice for the trial of James Earl of Cambridge, Henry Earl of Holland, George Lord Goring, Arthur Lord Capell, and Sir John Owen. Thirty-two of the names are marked with asterisks apparently to show those who tried Lord Capell, as the paper is endorsed "A list of the Lord Capell's judges." See L. J., XI. 85.

June 18. Letter from Henry Smith, at Coventry, to []. Announcing that Colonel James Temple, who has confessed that he was a Parliament man and one of the late King's judges, is in the custody of the Sheriff of Coventry. L. J., XI. 66.

June 18. Order for John Parker, who has been guilty in conveying away Colonel Joyce and who is a dangerous person and now in custody, to be examined by the King's counsel. L. J., XI. 66. On the same paper, Note by Sir Wm. Wyld, Recorder of London, that the person conveyed away by Parker was not Colonel Joyce but one William Harris. L. J., XI. 69.

June 18. Petition of Edward Lord Vaux. Petitioner has for many years suffered under a decree of sequestration of his estate in Northamptonshire, upon pretence of recusancy, whereas by the laws of the realm he was not, nor ought to be, liable thereunto; but he could not till now, by reason of the violence of the times, appeal to any legal power for relief. Besides the loss of his lands there was taken from him by the sequestrators personal estate to the value of 10,000*l.* and upwards, by which great oppressions he is exposed to very great wants, not having above 300*l.* per annum for the maintenance of himself and family. Prays that an order may be granted to suspend the levying of any further money upon his estate till the merits of his cause shall be heard and determined. L. J., XI. 67.

June 18. A Roll of the Peers of the Kingdom of England according to their births and creations. Garter's roll. Signed Edw. Walker, Garter. (Parchment Collection.)

Annexed:—

1. Paper copy of preceding.

June 19. Petition of Richard Sharlocke, B.D. Petitioner was presented to the rectory of Winwick, in the county of Lancaster, by the lawful and undoubted patron, but one Mr. Jessop hinders the impropiator of his due rights, and petitioner from the possession of the rectory, by an illegal grant from the Commissioners of the pretended Great Seal, after the interruption of the late Parliament so called. Prays that Mr. Jessop may be ejected. L. J., XI. 68.

June 19. Petition of Charles Earl of Lichfield. Petitioner entrusted George Bowerman with the office of subsidy and aulnage upon the old and new draperies, but divers disaffected persons taking advantage of petitioner's late sequestration refuse to give an account or to pay moneys which they have contracted to pay to his agent. Prays that these persons may be ordered to clear their accounts and pay the rents due, or show good cause to the contrary.

June 20. Petition of Henry Ferne, D.D., Rector of Medbourne, Leicestershire; Humphrey Henchman, D.D., Rector of Wyke Regis, Dorsetshire; George Gillingham, D.D., Rector of Chalton, Hants; Clement Breton, D.D., Rector of Church Langton, Leicestershire; Brian Walton, D.D., Rector of Sandon, Essex; John Oliver, D.D., Rector of Adsum [Adisham], Kent; Mathew Nicholas, D.D., Rector of West Dean, Wilts; John Earl, D.D., Rector of Bishopstone, Wilts; George Morley, D.D., Rector of Mildenhall, Wilts; Thomas Paske, D.D., Rector of Much Hadham, Herts; Richard Watts, Rector of Morcott, Rutland; Samuel Cotton, Rector of North Kilworth, Leicestershire; George Chamberlain, Rector of Duxford, Cambs; Nicholas Preston, Rector of Droxford, Hants; John Carter, Rector of Setterington, Yorkshire; Robert Ward, Rector of Barrowden, Rutland; Thomas Walker, D.D., Rector of Handborough, Oxon; Herbert Thorndale, Rector of Barlow [Barley?], Herts; and Edward Bayns, Rector of Hertingfordbury, Herts. Petitioners' rectories were divers years ago sequestered by the powers then in being, for causes relating only to the late differences. They pray that four parts of all the profits of their benefices may be secured into the hands of the churchwardens or overseers of the respective parishes until Parliament shall take further order therein, or petitioners be restored thereunto by due course of law, and in the meantime that the fifth part may be paid to them. L. J., XI. 69.

June 20. Petition of James Dugdale, D.D., Rector of Shepton Beauchamp, in the county of Somerset; Emanuel Utye, D.D., Vicar of Chiswell; John Clement, Rector of South Perrot; William Peirce, Rector of Buckland St. Mary; Alexand. Huish, Rector of Bockington; James Masters, Rector of Bath and Widcombe; Nicholas Ridgeway, Rector of Burton; Richard Sterne, D.D., Rector of Yeovilton; Walter Foster, Rector of Auler [Aller]; Matthew Osborne, Rector of Maiden Newton; Thomas Holt, Vicar of Weston-Zoyland; Robert Kingman, Rector of High Ham; Elias Wrench, Rector of Trent; John Douch, Rector of Stalbridge; and William Gollop, Rector of Abbott Stoke. Petitioners, by the violence of the late wars were driven from their houses and flying to Oxford and other of His Majesty's garrisons for refuge, have been by the Committees in the country thrown out of their respective possessions to the utter ruin of many of their families, having never received anything by way of fifths; delinquency (which was indeed nothing but the discharge of a good conscience towards God and man) being their only crime. They pray that they may receive the same right and justice from the House as Dr. Hurst and the other ministers about Newark have of late received, their case as they conceive being parallel. L. J., XI. 69.

June 20. Petition of John Chappell, who went to the garrison at Newark. Petitioner, to avoid the violence of the wars and for liberty of conscience, resided sometime in the late King's garrison, for which delinquency, not scandal, his parsonage of Irnham, in the county of Lincoln, has been possessed by others for about sixteen years to the ruin of himself and family. Prays that the profits of the living may be sequestered until the title thereto has been tried. L. J., XI. 69.

inhabitants of Yeaveiden Yeldon, in the county of Bedford; complain that William Dell, the rector, has been guilty of the offences mentioned in the annexed articles, and pray that he may be deprived of his incumbency, and some course taken for the better supply of his place. L. J., XI. 69. This petition was referred to the Committee for Petitions, and is endorsed as dismissed on the 25th of July.

Annexed:—

1. Articles against William Dell: he has reported that the King and his followers were like the Devil and his angels, and has approved of the murder of the King, and the taking away of the House of Lords; he has for 12 years past neglected the due administration of the sacraments, in consequence of which many children are unbaptized; he has ceased to sing any psalms or read any chapters in the Holy Bible on the Lord's-day in the congregation; he has cut down most of the timber trees growing on the parsonage, declaring he would make the parsonage 300*l.* the worse for the next incumbent; he has taken undue tithes, has neglected his ministerial office on the Lord's-day; has asserted that Sir George Booth would have cut the throats of all the godly in England; has entrapped the gentry of the county into discourse, and then given false information against them; he hath declared in the public congregation that he had rather hear a plain country-man speak in the church that came from the plough than the best orthodox minister that was in the country; upon Christmas-day last one Bunyon, of Bedford, a tinker, was countenanced and suffered to speak in his pulpit to the congregation, and no orthodox minister did officiate in the church that day." Since the restoration of the secluded members of Parliament he has declared that the power was now in the hands of the wicked, and that the land was like to be overflowed again with popery; he has put forth several seditious books, and before the horrid murder of the late King he declared publicly in the congregation that the King was no king to him, Christ was his king; Venice and Holland were without a king, and why might not we be without; and that he did not approve of earthly kings.

June 20. Petition of Robert Earl of Holland, Frances Lady Paget, and the rest of the children of Henry, late Earl of Holland. The late Earl, for his affection to his Royal Master and his zeal for the maintenance and defence of the laws, was, in 1648, shut up in prison and afterwards, by a pretended and usurped power under the name of a High Court of Justice, arraigned, condemned to die, and afterwards executed, many of those who took upon themselves to be his judges being yet living and unpunished. Petitioners pray that the actors in so horrid a murder may be brought to condign punishment. L. J., XI. 69.

Annexed:—

1. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Privileges.
2. Abstract of petition and notes of proceedings thereon.
3. Copy of warrant for the execution of Henry Earl of Holland. On the 7th July 1660 the Earl of Bristol reported to the House that Alderman Viner had delivered the warrant to the Committee for Privileges, who were of opinion that the persons signing should be secured, which was accordingly ordered by the House. L. J., XI. 85. For warrant see above, 6 Mar. 1648-9.
4. List of persons who signed the warrants for the executions of the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Holland, and Lord Capell.

June 20. Petition of Henry Gilbert Clark, parson of the parish church of Clifton Campville, in the county of Stafford. Petitioner was at the beginning of the late wars, for promoting the service of his late Majesty, plundered and imprisoned by the army then on foot, and constrained to pay great sums for his enlargement, and at last sequestered and turned out of his parsonage, and George Cross was placed therein by the Committee of Stafford, who has not for 14 years allowed petitioner any part of the profits, to the utter undoing of himself, his wife, and nine small children. Prays that he may be re-admitted into his parsonage. L. J., XI. 70.

June 20. Petition of Richard Aunsam, clerk. The rectory of Hopesay, in the county of Salop, was divers years since sequestered from petitioner for his affection to the late King. Prays that a fourth part of the profits of the rectory may be forthwith paid to him, and the remainder secured in the hands of some responsible persons until petitioner be restored. L. J., XI. 71.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.

June 20. Petition of the Marquess of Worcester. Petitioner was during the late troubles dispossessed of his estate, having undergone as many pressures and difficulties as any person whatsoever. A time of deliverance has now come for such as have been oppressed, and many persons have been justly restored to their estates, and petitioner hopes he may partake of the same favour and justice. He therefore prays to be restored to such parts of his estates as have not been sold, that there may be a stay of any rents, and also of waste in houses, lands, timber, wood, and coals upon the rest of his estate until further order, and that he may have view of such papers, writings, and records as are in the possession of the late trustees or their officers. L. J., XI. 70.

June 20. Petition of Sir James Bunce, Knight and Baronet, Alderman of the city of London. Petitioner was for his loyalty and service to his late Majesty, by the power and malice of an usurped authority, disabled and discharged from being an Alderman of the city of London, and his estate was sequestered and sold by their pretended votes and acts without any legal summons, hearing, charge, trial, or conviction, contrary to the Great Charter, and the fundamental laws of the realm, to his damage of three score thousand pounds. Prays to be restored to the actual possession of his real and personal estate, together with all arrears of rents and profits, and to all timbers and woods cut down and remaining upon his lands, and further that he may not be prejudiced by any Bill or Act which may pass for indemnifying any persons whatsoever. L. J., XI. 70.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the House of Commons disabling and discharging petitioner from being an Alderman of the city of London. 7 April 1649.

2. Order of the House of Commons for sequestering petitioner's estate. 25 Dec. 1649.

June 20. Order upon Sir James Bunce's petition. L. J., XI. 70.

June 20. Order for payment of 20,000*l.* for the Queen's present occasions. L. J., XI. 70.

June 20. Draft of preceding.

June 21. Petition of Thomas Paske, D.D., and George Pierce, clerk. Petitioners were many years since by force and against law sequestered from their livings to their great loss, and were left without any capacity of relief by legal course. They pray to be restored to their benefices, or that the fruits and profits thereof may be sequestered into responsible hands until their respective suits shall be determined. L. J., XI. 71.

June 21. Petition of Dr. John Cosin, Dr. Gabriel Clarke, Dr. Josias Naylor, John Neile, Elias Smith, Alexander Davison, Ralph Blakiston, and Robert Faucon. Petitioners were by the late powers illegally thrust out of their ecclesiastical livings. They pray that the respective possessors may be summoned to show cause why petitioners should not be restored, and that in the meantime the profits may be sequestered, into the hands of the churchwardens of the respective parishes. L. J., XI. 71.

June 21. Petition of Richard Irons and Abraham Honor, citizens and woodmongers of London. Petitioners for valuable consideration purchased of Mr. Rider the timber and wood growing within Wallwood, Essex, and hoped to have enjoyed the same without interruption, but upon information given to the late Council of State that Wallwood was not Rider's land but part of His Majesty's Forest of Waltham, it was ordered that none of the wood or timber should be cut or carried away. Petitioners then applied to the Council, who thereupon ordered them to remove the wood at their pleasure, giving 2,000*l.* security to answer the value thereof in case the law should determine the title for His Majesty. Upon like information to their Lordships they were pleased to order as the Council did, by means whereof petitioners have suffered great loss and are much prejudiced in their trades and credit, and others evilly disposed have taken advantage in the meantime to steal more wood than the petitioners have yet had. They pray their Lordships to repeal the order. L. J., XI. 71.

June 21. Petition of the Right Hon. Dame Mary Hewytt, one of the daughters of the Right Hon. Robert Earl of Lindsey, deceased. Petitioner's late husband, Dr. John Hewytt, was, in May 1658, cruelly sentenced to die as a traitor by a tyrannical High Court of Justice, and soon after put to death on Tower Hill to the unspeakable grief and irreparable loss of petitioner and her fatherless children. Prays their Lordships to except those presumptuous murderers out of the Act of Oblivion, and to bring all or some principal of them to speedy and exemplary justice. L. J., XI. 71.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee of petitions. L. J., XI. 71.
3. Original warrant of the Court, holden at Westminster the 25th of May 1658 before the Commissioners appointed by virtue of a Commission under the Great Seal of England in pursuance of an Act of Parliament, intituled an Act for security of His Highness the Lord Protector his person, and continuance of the nation in peace and safety, and continued by adjournment to the 2nd of June 1658, for the execution of John Hewet, Doctor of Divinity adjudged by the Court a traitor to His Highness the Lord Protector and the Commonwealth. The sentence was that Dr. Hewet should be conveyed back again unto the Tower of London, and from thence through the middle of the City of London, directly to be drawn unto the gallows of Tyburn, and upon the said gallows there to be hanged, and being alive to be cut down to the ground and his entrails to be taken out of his belly and (he living) to be burnt before him, and his head to be cut off and his body to be divided into four quarters, and that his head and quarters should be placed where His Highness the Lord Protector should be pleased to assign. The sentence was to be carried out on Saturday the 5th of June.
4. Letter from Sir Ralph Freeman to the Lords' Committees for Petitions. My attendance upon His Majesty makes me uncertain of waiting upon your Lordships' Committee, but thus much I am bound to certify that my daughter Freeman (Sir Richard Onslow's daughter) did from the Lady of Peterborough and the Lady Mordant importune Alderman Foot to sit in that High Court of Justice (so called) where Doctor Hewett and the Lord Mordant wth others were brought to trial for their lives; And I did hear my daughter Freeman often say that she prevailed wth the Alderman to sit wth very much difficulty, he declaring his dislike and unwillingness to sit in that Court; and when she heard that the Lord Mordant was acquitted but by one voice; she expressed much joy that she was instrumental in the Alderman's appearing for the saving a person of so much honour as the Lord Mordant was, all wh^{ch} I can aver for truth. Endorsed, "14 July. Sir Ralph Freeman's l^re concerning Alderman ffoote, "voted not to be read."

June 21. Petition of Sir Thomas Slingsby, Bart., Henry Slingsby, and Barbara Slingsby. Petitioners think themselves obliged in duty and conscience to represent to their Lordships the cruel and insolent murder of Sir Henry Slingsby their father, which was so much the more barbarous in that he being a close prisoner under lock and key, and at the wills of his enemies, was ensnared to the loss of his life by the treacherous practices of Colonel Smith, Governor of Hull, and Major Waterhouse and Captain Overton, then officers in the garrison. Being denied the benefit of the law to be tried by jury, which he again and again demanded, he was sentenced to death by those that called themselves a High Court of Justice (which was then declared illegal by all the judges of the land), and afterwards executed upon Tower Hill. Petitioners pray that justice may be done upon those who have been guilty of that barbarous murder, and that reparation may be made to petitioners as far as their irreparable loss is capable of. L. J., XI. 71.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the Right Honble. Dame Mary Hewitt and Thomas Slingsby, Henry Slingsby, and Barbara Slingsby. Petitioners, having petitioned their Lordships against the murderers of Dr. John Hewitt and Sir Henry Slingsby, find counsel scrupulous in being retained, the question being matter of life and blood. They therefore pray that counsel may be assigned to them. (Undated.)
2. Original warrant for the execution of Sir Henry Slingsby at the same time and place and in a similar manner to Dr. John Hewet.

June 21. Petition of Thomas Hyde, Doctor of Laws, and James Hyde, Doctor of Physic, brothers of Sir Henry Hyde, deceased. Sir Henry Hyde was in the year 1649 commissioned by His Majesty as his agent to the Grand Signor to establish the trade of England in the Levant, and His Majesty wrote at the same time to Sir Thomas Bendish, then residing in quality of King's ambassador, requiring his assistance therein. Bendish, by his malicious and traitorous suggestions and practices together with Samuel Barnadiston and others at Constantinople, caused Sir Henry Hyde to be seized on and imprisoned, and his lands, houses, goods, papers, and books to be plundered and ransacked, and then sent his person by force to England; where upon his arrival he was committed to the Tower, and a high court of justice having been erected, whereon Richard Keeble, Samuel Moyer, and others, sat as judges, he was tried and condemned to be beheaded for high treason; Keeble then declaring upon the Bench that any person who should own his now Majesty as King of England, though but on an ale bench, was guilty of high treason, and Sir Henry Hyde was accordingly beheaded. Under pretence of furnishing the court with evidence, all his commissions, letters of credence, books, papers, and writings were seized, and are still detained from petitioners who are his executors. They pray that these arbitrary and malicious proceedings may be condemned in Parliament, and that the parties complained against may be made exemplary for their treachery, murder, and rapine, by exempting them out of the general Act of pardon and oblivion. L. J., XI. 71.

Annexed:—

1. Warrant of Sir Thomas Bendish commanding all of the English nation residing in Constantinople, Galata, and the places adjacent, not to countenance, abet, or assist Sir Henry Hyde in any way, nor to accompany him either to the Grand Signor, Vizier, or any public minister. 15 May 1650.
2. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Petitions.
3. Another petition of same. Petitioners, having preferred their petition against Sir Thomas Bendish and Samuel Barnadiston to their Lordships, have, as they conceive, sufficiently proved their charges, but the defendants, trusting rather to hopes of pardon than defence, have taken up so much time for their full hearing that petitioners have reason to believe the Act of Oblivion may pass before their cause be determined by their Lordships. Petitioners desire to exclude them from the benefit of the Act only in relation to the life and estate of Sir Henry Hyde, whereof they pretend themselves in no wise guilty, and if they be innocent no wrong is done to them by being exempted in relation only thereunto. Petitioners pray that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Act. (Undated.)
4. Proposed proviso.

June 21. Petition of Edward Cherry, of Much Holland, in the county of Essex. In the year 1643 petitioner was sequestered, and his estate seized for delinquency, he never being admitted to defend himself. He prays that the fifth part of the profits of his rectory may be ordered for the subsistence of his wife and children, and that the other four parts may be secured in safe hands until he can finish his legal trial against the present intruder. L. J., XI. 71.

June 21. Draft order restoring Dr. Matthew Nicholas to the mastership and Government of the Hospital of St. Nicholas in Harnham, near Salisbury. L. J., XI. 71. In extenso.

June 21. Draft orders to continue the subsidy of tonnage and poundage, and the imposition of the excise. L. J., XI. 71. In extenso.

June 22. Petition of Humphery Leigh, His Majesty's Serjeant-at-arms attending the House. Petitioner was by a grant for his life from King James created Serjeant-at-arms to attend the Great Seal. His predecessors have always been accustomed to attend upon the House of Peers, executing the office of Serjeants-at-arms to the House, and this right was at first enjoyed by petitioner; but in the beginning of the late unhappy distractions James Maxwell, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, in the absence, and without the privity of petitioner unduly procured an order that all warrants for apprehending delinquents should be directed to him only and to such as he should appoint, to the great prejudice of petitioner by the destruction of his freehold, and contrary to all former precedents. Prays to be restored to his right, which cannot be reputed any injury to the present Gentleman Usher, seeing that he hath a distinct fee belonging to his office from every prisoner that is brought into the House by the Serjeant-at-arms. June 22. Petition of William Lewis, D.D., Master of the House or Hospital of St. Cross. George Lawrence was in the violent times put into the chaplain's place of the hospital: petitioner believes that he is not in orders, he refuses to marry, bury, christen, or say the Lord's Prayer, and only preaches seditiously as appears by the sermon which has been printed, and which he calls "Peplum Olivani," wherein are many seditious treasonable and scandalous passages derogatory to the honor of His Majesty's Royal Father. Petitioner prays that the sermon may be examined, and Lawrence removed from doing further hurt. L. J., XI. 72.

June 22. Petition of Edward Martin, D.D., and Richard Drake; petitioners were by force and against law sequestered from their livings in the year 1643. Pray to be restored.

June 22. Petition of William Pyke, clerk. In the year 1644; petitioner was lawfully presented to the rectory of Stokeclimsland, in the county of Cornwall, by his late Majesty and had possession thereof for two years, when John Fathers, clerk, taking advantage of the violence of the times, upon pretence that petitioner was a delinquent, not only by terrors and threats, but also by armed violence, forced petitioner to leave his rectory for no other cause but his affection to the King, and has ever since been in possession to the utter ruin of petitioner and his family. Prays that he may receive a like order to that granted to Dr. Hurst and others.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order upon petition of Dr. Hurst and others referred to in preceding. 7 June 1660.

June 23. Affidavit of Anthony Stringer that Richard Baxter and others have refused to obey the order of the House concerning Lord Craven's lands, and have spoken contemptuously of the order. L. J., XI. 73.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Richard Jones in the matter.

2. Affidavit of Edward Brind.

June 23. Petition of Mary Thorpe, widow, late wife of John Thorpe, of New Sarum, in the county of Wilts, and Joane Woodward, wife of John Woodward, late of Fisherton Anger, clothier. Petitioners' husbands out of a sense of their duty to God, the King, and their country, having engaged in the late unfortunate design under Colonel Penruddocke in the West against the late odious detestable traitor and tyrant Oliver Cromwell were arraigned, with divers others, at Salisbury before Justice Rolle and others authorised by Cromwell by a special Commission, and condemned for high treason, and sentence was afterwards executed upon them to the utter ruin of petitioners and their families. They pray that order may be taken for their satisfaction out of the estates of the judges. L. J., XI. 73.

June 23. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 73.

June 23. Petition and appeal of William Biron and others. Pray for reversal of decrees made in the year 1653, 1654, and 1655, by the Commissioners of the Great Seal respecting a mortgage. L. J., XI. 71.

Annexed:—

2. Statement on behalf of the defendants in the cause.

June 23. Order referring preceding cause to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 74.

June 23. Petition of Mary Musgrave, daughter of Sir Andrew Cogan, Bart. Petitioner's father having been active in the Kentish engagement in 1648 was sequestered for delinquency, but paying his composition was discharged. In December 1648 he settled a messuage at East Greenwich upon petitioner, and afterwards went beyond the seas. Gregory Clement, taking advantage of his absence, and by information that he was gone to the assistance of His Majesty, and by confederacy with Samuel Moyer, Chairman of the Committee for Sequestrations, afterwards caused the messuage to be again sequestered, and Sir Andrew Cogan's name to be inserted in the pretended Act for sale of delinquents' estates. Clements having got over the wall into the possession of the premises upon pretence that he was the tenant and had the right of pre-emption purchased the same, and by his power, being a member of the long Parliament, one of the Committee of Obstructions, and one of the judges that sat at the pretended trial of the late King, obstructed petitioner's endeavours for recovery of the property. Prays for reparation out of Clement's estate. L. J., XI. 74.

Annexed:—

1. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Petitions.

2. List of the Committee for Petitions. 2 May 1660. This paper, which does not agree with the list given in the journals (L. J., XI. 9), is endorsed: Mary Musgrave's petition and order of reference. Subcom.: 7 Jul.: To be recommended to His Majesty's Secretary, Gregory Clement's estate being forfeited.

June 23. Application for discharge of the order of the 30th of May last concerning the carrying away woods, coals, and iron at Wollaston Wood, it being part of the estate of the Marquess of Worcester to which he is restored by an order of the 20th instant. L. J., XI. 74.

June 23. Note from George Combe to Mr. Walker. Desires directions concerning a petition of Mr. Voysey, of Thatcham, Berks.

June 23. Petition of Nicholas Bloxam, clerk. Petitioner was about 30 years since presented by his late Majesty to the rectory of Great Waldingfield, in the county of Suffolk, but was in the year 1643 sequestered by the Committee for Plundered Ministers. The articles were exhibited against him by persons of tainted reputations deviating from the orthodox faith, and were not proved on oath, and are therefore invalid. He prays an order for his restitution, or else for permission to try his title at the common law with the present incumbent, who claims his title under the presentation of the late usurper Oliver Cromwell.

June 23. Petition of Richard Halsey. Petitioner was in the year 1648 sequestered from his rectory of East Dean, in the county of Sussex, imprisoned, and plundered of all that he had, for no other reason but his adhering to the royal cause. Prays to be restored to his living.

June 23. Petition of Griffith Morgan, rector of Bangor and Henllan, in the county of Cardigan. Petitioner was in the year 1650 unjustly ejected from his livings by a pretended Committee for the Propagation of the Gospel in Wales; the profits have ever since been detained from him, and for three years past have been received by John Evan, a shoemaker, an unordained and illiterate man, to the utter impoverishment of petitioner and his family. Prays to be restored and that he may receive reparation for the damage he has sustained.

June 23. The following petitions were presented in pursuance of two orders of the House of Lords, one of the 22nd of June for securing the tithes and other profits of sequestered livings in the hands of the churchwardens, or overseers of the poor of the several parishes until the titles of the sequestered clergy and of the present possessors should be determined; the other of the 23rd of June giving the Clerk of the Parliaments power to insert in the foregoing general order the names of those who should bring in petitions to have the benefit thereof. Certificates of the truth of the petitioners' statements are in many cases annexed to the petitions, or written upon them.

the late usurper Oliver Cromwell, and restoring the King. For that cause only all petitioner's estate was shortly after illegally, and by the mere arbitrary power and will of that usurper, seized into his hands, and by him freely given, not sold, to some of his adherents who have ever since enjoyed the same and still unjustly detain possession and commit great waste. Petitioner prays to be restored to the possession of his estate together with all arrears of rent and other profits. L. J., XI. 74.

June 25. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 74.

June 25. Draft order for hearing the cause between Humphrey Leigh, Sergeant-at-arms, and Alexander Thayne, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. L. J., XI. 47.

June 25. Petition of George Porter, of London, Charles Lord Stanhope of Harrington, being by letters patent of King James appointed Master or Comptroller of all posts, messengers, and couriers of England and the dominions of His Majesty in the parts beyond the seas, and having the office of Postmaster-General of England, did by deed constitute petitioner and his father his deputies; with an express covenant that he should not surrender his letters patent without their consent in writing. Notwithstanding this, Lord Stanhope has now surrendered his patent and released his estate in the said office, whereby petitioner is much damnified. Petitioner prays that Lord Stanhope may be ordered to answer the premises. L. J., XI. 74.

June 25. Petition of Sir Trevor Williams and Dame Elizabeth his wife, Sir Thomas Hartopp and Dame Mary his wife, Katherine Wyndham, widow, Sir Baynham Throckmorton, the said Dame Elizabeth. Dame Mary, Katherine, and Sir Baynham being co-heirs of the Right Hon. Ralph Lord Hopton, Baron of Stratton, deceased. Pray to be restored to such part of their ancestor's estate as is yet unsold and undisposed of, and to such other part as has been given away for gratuities or rewards, that there may be a stay of all rents or any further waste in the rest of the estates, that they may have all papers, writings, and deeds concerning the estate as are in the possession of the late trustees or others, and that the sheriffs of the counties where the estates lie may be ordered to pay petitioners all monies they have received or levied out of the premises by virtue of their Lordships late general order of the 18th of May last. L. J., XI. 75.

June 25. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 75.

June 25. Petition of Francis Goodwin, clerk. In the year 1645 Dr. Edward Stanley was invested in the rectory of Hinton Ampner, and also in the rectory of Mottisfont, commonly called Motsont, both in the county of Southampton, and a Bill being prepared in Parliament about that time against any minister having two benefices, Dr. Stanley made his election and declined Hinton Ampner and betook himself solely to Mottisfont, which was of much greater value. In July 1648 the rectory of Hinton Ampner being void, petitioner was presented thereunto, under the Great Seal in the name of the King, and has ever since discharged the duties to the good liking and approbation of the parishioners, and hath not at any time by word or deed said or done anything against the right of the late King or his present Majesty. Dr. Stanley has now, in the name of his lessees, commenced an action of ejectment against petitioner, who is remediless in any of the courts at Westminster, and therefore prays an order for staying all proceedings at common law, and for determination of the matter. L. J., XI. 75.

June 26. Petition of Edward Gibson, grandchild and heir to John Sutton, Lord Dudley. The barony of Dudley came into the name and family of the Suttons in the reign of Edward II. John Sutton, Knight, of Malpas, married Margaret, sister of John Somery, Baron Dudley, who had no issue, and the barony continued in the family of the Suttons. In the reign of Queen Mary Dudley Castle, with all the honours, manors, and appurtenances, was entailed upon the heirs male of the body of Edward Sutton, he having two sons, Edward and John; Edward died in the late King's reign, leaving no issue male, and the barony then came to his brother John, who died, leaving two daughters, Elizabeth who had no issue, and Anne, to whom petitioner is son and heir lawfully begotten by Edward Gibson, third son of Sir John Gibson, of Welburn, Yorkshire. Petitioner, who has been in the service of the States of Holland these fifteen years, has been kept from the possession of Dudley Castle and premises, to which he is the undoubted lawful heir by Sir William Bruarton [Brewerton]. He prays to be invested and settled in the castle and barony. This petition was referred to the Committee for Privileges, but no further proceedings are mentioned. L. J., XI. 75.

June 26. Petition of William Holbrook, of Marlborough, Wilts. blacksmith. In July 1659 Cornet George Joyce and others coming to Marlborough sent for petitioner, and showed him a commission signed Charles R., which they pretended they had from His Majesty, and asked him what friends he thought the King had about that country. Petitioner having drunk much beer and wine was unadvisedly drawn in to mention the names of some whom he thought to be loyal and faithful to His Majesty. Thereupon they immediately set him on horseback and brought him bound to the pretended Council of State, and exhibited a false accusation against the Marquess of Hertford, Lord Seymour, Lord Herbert, and several other lords, gentlemen, and ministers. Petitioner was several times examined by Bradshawe, Sydenham, Desborough, and others, and because he would not swear against those noble and worthy persons he was committed to the dungeon in Newgate, threatened to be racked and hanged, and had great chains put upon his legs, the irons whereof entered into his flesh, whilst he was ready to perish from the noisomeness of the hole in which he lay. Petitioner's mother, an aged woman, and his five young children, who had nothing to live upon but the fruit of his labour, being in the meantime ready to starve. Prays that Joyce and his confederates who basely trepanned him may be excepted out of the Act of general pardon, and that he may have some recompense out of their estates for his grievous sufferings. L. J., XI. 75.

June 26. Petition of Roger Portington, a prisoner in execution in the King's Bench. In 1649 petitioner was at the suit of Richard Dawson and Richard Thompson, and upon the false evidence of Robert Everett, condemned in heavy damages on account of the carrying off of certain cattle by the King's troops in the year 1648 for the support of the garrison of Pontefract. Petitioner had several witnesses to disprove Everett's oath, but neither they nor he dare attend the trial, being threatened to be clapt in prison for disobeying a proclamation then made for restraining persons of the King's party from going above five miles from their houses. Everett has since been convicted of his perjury; and has fled, but petitioner cannot obtain a new trial, and has been a prisoner in execution for nine years. He has expended in prison and been damnified in his estate by reason of his imprisonment to the value of 10,000*l.*, in addition to 2,000*l.* paid for his sequestration. Prays for his discharge and that some relief may be granted to him. L. J., XI. 75.

Annexed:—

1. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 75.
2. Draft proviso to the Bill for confirmation of judicial proceedings to except the judgment complained of in the petition, &c.
3. Another draft.

June 26. Affidavit of Wm. Greenwood, of Caversham, Oxon, that George Harrison refuses to give up possession of a meadow, called the King's meadow, at Reading, belonging to Lord Craven according to an order of the House of the 6th instant. L. J., XI. 76.

June 26. Affidavit of Wm. Greenwood that Elizabeth, wife of George Vaux, refuses to give up possession of a messuage and park at Caversham belonging to Lord Craven. L. J., XI. 76.

June 26. Petition of the participants, purchasers for valuable consideration of lands within the drainage of the level of Hatfield Chase, extending into the counties of York, Lincoln, and Nottingham (signed by John Gibbon and Nathaniel Reading on behalf of themselves and the rest of the participants); in consideration of 16,800*l.* paid 30 years since into the Exchequer, and an increased fee-farm rent of 1,228*l.* 17*s.* reserved to the Crown, and of an expenditure of 175,000*l.* upon works of drainage, petitioners ought to be possessed of 24,000 acres of land, whereof 7,400 lie within the manor of Epworth; quiet possession of these 7,400 acres was by letters patent and by decrees in the Exchequer vested in petitioners, and enjoyed until the year 1642, when the inhabitants of the manors of Misterton and Epworth, taking advantage of the disturbances of the times, rose in tumults and laid waste 4,000 acres, and pulled down all the houses and destroyed all the growing corn; in the year 1645, upon petitioners' complaint, the House made the annexed orders for suppressing these riots and preventing the like for the future, and directed the sheriffs and justices strictly to pursue the statutes made in that behalf, and the Court of Exchequer also issued writs and injunctions to establish the possession of petitioners, but the inhabitants again rose and depopulated the whole of the town of Sandtoft, consisting of 82 habitations, besides barns and stables, pulled down a corn windmill, and waste the remaining 3,100 acres of the improved lands, with all the corn there growing, defaced Sandtoft church, built by petitioners at a charge of 1,000*l.*, forced away the minister and congregation, and converted the same to a stable, cowhouse, and slaughter-house, to petitioners' damage of above 80,000*l.*; notwithstanding all the orders and decrees made, the inhabitants still continue in opposition to all civil and legal authority, and beat, wound and kill all who come to put any order, decree, or law in execution, as appears by the annexed affidavits; petitioners pray their Lordships to renew their former orders, and to inflict such severe punishments on the contemners thereof that petitioners may no longer by force and riots be unduly kept out of their inheritances. L. J., XI. 75.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Nathaniel Reading. On the 31st of May last he attempted to levy a distress for taxes upon the improved lands, but Thomas Dawson, George Gilby, and others, to the number of 50, came armed with guns, pistols, forks, clubs, and other weapons, and when told by deponent that he came in the King's name, they replied that they would obey neither King nor Lords, nor Laws, but cried, Fall on, Fall on; and thereupon assaulted deponent and his company, knocked them off their horses, wounded several, and pursued them to the town of Hatfield, broke open the pound, and about an hour afterwards, when they were drinking in the town, upon notice that one of deponent's company was by the church, Dawson, Gilby, and others ran violently forth and murdered him in the churchyard; William Jervase, another of the inhabitants, has been heard to say, when told that what was done was done by the King's laws, if these be the King's laws, God's curse light upon his heart, for that it was likely he would be a traitor as his father was, and wished him hanged. 21 June.
2. Affidavit of John Amory, similar to preceding, and stating that he has been forced to leave his wife and children and get away for fear of being murdered. 21 June.
3. Copy of order of the 21st March 1645-6 for attachment of Thomas Feacocke and other rioters.
4. Copy of order of same date for protection of the participants.
5. Copy of petition of the farmers and tenants of the level of Hatfield Chase, within the counties of York, Lincoln, and Nottingham, to the King's most Excellent Majesty. Petitioners, who are mostly French and Dutch Protestants, and have suffered persecution for their religion beyond the seas, fled into England for protection in the time of His Majesty's father, and having been planted in the level, built houses, and lived peaceably for many years; but in 1642 the inhabitants of Misterton and Epworth, taking up arms against the King, took advantage thereof to break in upon petitioners, took away their cattle, pulled down their houses, and destroyed their crops; this violence was repeated in 1652, and the inhabitants then on the Lord's day came to the church at Sandtoft, where petitioners were allowed to hold a service in French, forced away the minister and congregation, broke and pulled down and burnt the windows, doors, seats, and pulpits, stole the lead, and made a slaughter-house of the church, and buried carrion in it. Since His Majesty's happy restoration petitioners hoped that the laws would be better observed, and Nathaniel Reading and others therefore made a distress upon the lands on the 31st of May, but were violently attacked by the inhabitants and forced to fly for their lives, one of their number being barbarously murdered; petitioners who have spent much time and money in applications for redress in the late distracted times, pray His Majesty to appoint some means to relieve their former damages and procure them a future settlement. (Undated.)

Letter from the King to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace for the county of York, directing them punctually to pursue the laws against the rioters, and to certify to one of the Principal Secretaries of State the names of the offenders, 21 June 1660.

7. Certificate of the Sheriff and Justices of the county of York in pursuance of the King's letter, addressed to the Right Hon. Sir Wm. Morris, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, corroborating and amplifying the statements in the preceding petitions, and stating that the persons who destroyed the church were headed by Colonel John Lilburn, that two persons have been murdered, and that the petitioners, the poor French and Dutch protestants and some few English tenants, have suffered damage to the amount of about 7,000*l.* 10 July. These papers are endorsed, "13 July 1660. His Majesty being informed that the Lords have this business lying under their consideration will wholly leave and refer the proceedings therein to the Committee of the Lords for the said business of Hatfield Chase to do therein as to their wisdom shall seem meet." (Signed) Will. Morice.

June 26. Petition of Arundell Penruddock, widow of John Penruddock, deceased. Petitioner's late husband having in the year 1654, by virtue of His Majesty's commission, taken up arms against Oliver Cromwell for the restitution of His Majesty to his right and kingdom was with his party overpowered by the forces under the command of Colonel Croke, and taken and imprisoned. He was afterwards tried at Exeter (contrary to the articles made with Colonel Croke, who perfidiously denied them), found guilty of treason by a jury maliciously packed by Sir John Copplestone, the then Sheriff, condemned to death, and afterwards beheaded. Captain James Dewy, before conviction, seized upon her husband's estate to the value of 1,000*l.*, and converted the same to his own and the Protector's use. Petitioner prays that the arbitrary and malicious judgment may be condemned and reversed, that Colonel Croke and the Commissioners who tried her husband may be excepted out of the Act of General Pardon and Oblivion, and that her husband's estate may be restored to her and her children. L. J., XI. 75.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Arundell Penruddock, Jane Grove, and Elizabeth Poulton, widows; pray that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Act for confirmation of Judicial Proceedings, and that all indictments of high treason against their husbands, whose blood has witnessed their loyalty to their Sovereign, may be declared null and void. (Undated.)
2. Proviso proposed to be inserted in the Bill of Indemnity.
3. Proviso proposed to be inserted in the Bill for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings.

June 26. Petition of "Robert Danvers alias Villiers, "whom your Lordships are pleased to honour with the "title of Viscount Purbecke." No man has a more high and honourable esteem of their Lordships than petitioner, but he, not knowing he had any patent or writ, thought it too great a presumption to own a place amongst them, but their Lordships being pleased to think that he has a right, he cannot decline so great an honour. The truth is, petitioner has not an estate in any competent degree to support such an honour, having been forced to pay 2,650*l.* for his composition and decimation, which money he borrowed at interest. He has also many lawsuits and troubles, whereby he has been forced to sell and spend 2,000*l.* a year, so that he has not 1,000*l.* a year left, is 5,000*l.* in debt, and has five small children to provide for. He prays their Lordships to discharge him of his imprisonment without any mark of their disfavour. L. J., XL. 76.

June 27. Petition of Henry Earl of Sterling, son and heir of Mary Countess of Sterling, deceased, Sir Robert Croke, Knight, and Dame Susan his wife, and Henry Alexander alias Zinzan, Esq., and Jacoba his wife, the said Countess, Dame Susan, and Jacoba being daughters and heirs of Sir Peter Vanlore the younger, deceased, who was only son of Sir Peter Vanlore the elder, deceased, and cousins and co-heirs of Dame Mary Powell, late wife of Sir Edward Powell, deceased, one of the daughters of old Sir Peter; Sir Peter Vanlore the elder in his lifetime settled the Castle and parks of the Devezes in Wiltshire and other lands upon Lady Powell and the heirs of her body with remainder to his own right heirs; but Sir Edward Powell, late husband of Lady Powell, who for sixteen years had separated himself from the company of his wife, did about the 5th of September 1651, with William Hinson alias Powell, his nephew, now a member of Parliament, Thos. Levingston, Anne his wife, and others, by force and false pretences, possess themselves of the house where Lady Powell then lay dying, on feigned actions arrested and hurried away her servants, kept the house in a warlike manner with armed men, and having by force secluded from her all persons but themselves, procured her to acknowledge a fine of the property mentioned above to the use of Sir Edward and herself for life, with remainder to the use of the defendants, Thomas Levington, Anne his wife, and their heirs; Lady Powell died on the 6th of October following, whilst still under the same restraint, the fine by ante date and false entry was made a fine of Trinity term, 1651; the petitioners, as soon as they possibly could complained to the Court of Common Pleas, where the judges, whilst expressing their abhorrence of the force and fraud that had been used, were of opinion that the date of the fine was so far past that it was not in their power by the ordinary course of law to undo it, but that they believed that Parliament could and would; the petitioners therefore pray that as they have been declared remediless by ordinary course of law, their Lordships would cause examination to be made into the force and fraud used in obtaining the fine, would vacate the fine, restore petitioners to their birthright and inheritance, and except the misdemeanors of Levington, his wife, and confederates out of the general pardon. L. J., XI. 76.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Order referring the petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 77.
3. Order of the Committee for the hearing of the cause. 2 July 1660.
4. Book in MS., containing upwards of 600 pages of evidence taken in the cause of Levington against the Countess of Sterling and others in the year 1655, from which it appears that Lady Powell very much disliked her niece, Anne Levington, and considered her a person of loose manners, and had frequently refused to see her when she came to call, and though she on one occasion had gone to stay with her niece in Hampshire for change of air, she was during her visit much displeased by her niece's "ranting" conduct, and was careful to compensate her for all her expenses. In September 1651 Lady Powell lay ill at her house at Chelsea, in fact dying, and on the 3rd Mr. and Mrs. Levington came with several followers to the house, assaulted Mr. Thomas Crompton (who lived there, and managed Lady Powell's estate), evidently intending to get possession of the house and of Lady Powell's person, but were foiled by the bravery of two of the servants, who, arming themselves one with a halbert and the other with a pitchfork, rescued Mr. Crompton, while Sir John Danvers, a neighbouring justice, and Lord Commissioner Lisle, who happened to be passing interfered to quell the riot. Mr. and Mrs. Levington passed the night at Chelsea, and went away the following morning; they returned however on the 5th, accompanied by Sir Edward Powell, Mr. Hinson, alias Powell, and a band of armed men in coaches, whom they had collected in the interval, butchers, fencers, and others well experienced in arms; they then got possession of the house, turned out all the servants, and had them arrested and imprisoned on feigned actions, refusing bail; the doors and windows of the house were secured with bars, chains, and shutters, a window that looked on a neighbouring garden was barred up, and the owner of the garden forbidden to allow anyone to attempt to communicate with Lady Powell; regular watches were kept and sentries posted by the armed party in the house as if it had been a garrison, while Lady Powell's relations and friends were not allowed to see her; this state of affairs was maintained until after Lady Powell's death, which happened on the 6th of October, but before her death she was forced to acknowledge a fine of her estate which would otherwise have been divided among the grandchildren of Sir Peter Vanlore, and thereby to settle it upon Thomas and Anne Levington for life, with remainder to their right heirs; the fine was sealed with the seal of Dobson, a fencer.* From the evidence of Anne Hooke it appears that Mrs.

Levingston applied to her to procure something from a cunning man whereby to persuade the Lady Powell to love and affect her, and to give all her estate unto her, but Mrs. Levington afterwards told her that what she gave her had had no effect, but that she had gotten that in a bag which she had hanging next unto her smock about her body from Mrs. Joane Peters, a cunning woman, which had turned Lady Powell's affections towards her, and done her business by altering Lady Powell's mind, so that she had now settled all her estate upon her, which, before she had the bag, she could in no wise obtain of Lady Powell, who until that time would not abide to have her come near her. From the evidence of Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Garland, of Wapping, shipwright, a dealer in foreign fruits and wines, it appears that when the case was before Parliament, Mrs. Levington, in order that her cause might be heard with more favour, wished to present the Speaker, Mr. Lenthall, with a hogshead of Spanish wine, extraordinarily rich and good, and that she and Robert Levington had dealings with a witch, who was afterwards arraigned, convicted, and executed as such at Tyburn.

5. Copy of examination of John Loriman, an apothecary under Sir Theodore Mayerne; he attended Lady Powell, who, when Mrs. Levington and her husband were in possession of the house, complained to him that her servants never came near her, and he then told her in Mrs. Levington's presence that they were not admitted into the house, which caused Lady Powell great distress, though Mrs. Levington absolutely denied his assertions, but the next day Mr. Hinson came to Sir Theodore Mayerne and desired that deponent might not visit Lady Powell again, but that another apothecary might be sent.
6. Copy of statement purporting to be signed by Lady Powell in the presence of witnesses, and written by her niece, Mrs. Anne Levington at her desire, stating that her husband, Sir Edward Powell, since his return is very kind to her, and that she desires to live with him setting aside all differences, that though her own servants have been removed she has no fault to find with those that have been placed about her, and that no restraint has been put upon her, while her niece Levington has been loving and dutiful to her as if she were her own child.
7. Copy of preceding.
8. Notes taken at the hearing of the cause. L. J., XI. 84.

June 27. Petition of Colonel Ratcliffe Gerard, and Sir Gilbert Gerard, the sad father and brother of John Gerard, deceased. By the tyranny of the late usurper petitioners lost a son and brother whose only crime was loyalty and obedience to His sacred Majesty. They pray that all persons instrumental in the tyrannical murder of John Gerard may be excepted out of the general Act of Pardon, particularly Serjeant Glynn and others of the pretended Court of Justice by whom he was condemned to death. L. J., XI. 77.

June 27. Order referring preceding to Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 77. In extenso.

June 27. Draft order for payment of 5,859*l* 15*s*. 6*d*. to General Monck. L. J., XI. 77. In extenso.

June 27. Application of the Marquess of Winchester for an order for liberty to search for and recover goods, household stuff, and plate taken out of Basing House. L. J., XI. 77.

June 29. Petition of John St. John the elder, and John St. John the younger, of Cold Overton, in the county of Leicester. Complain of a decree unjustly made by the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal in July 1652 respecting a mortgage of certain lands belonging to petitioners, and pray for redress against the said Lords Commissioners, Cornelius Burton, and others. L. J., XI. 77.

June 29. Copy of order referring preceding to Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 77.

June 29. Petition of Anne Duchess of Hamilton and Lady Susanna Hamilton, daughters unto James Duke of Hamilton and Earl of Cambridge, deceased. In the year 1648 petitioner's father commanded an army raised for delivering His Majesty from the captivity he was then under, which army was rendered unsuccessful by the forces under Cromwell, and the Duke being made prisoner had articles whereby he was to have his life and the safety of his person; but contrary thereto and to the laws of arms, the municipal laws of the kingdom, and in violation of the peerage, he was by a pretended High Court of Justice arraigned, condemned, and put to death, his estate seized and sold, and his posterity left destitute of relief. Petitioners have not means by appeal or otherwise to bring the offenders to justice if they are included in the Act of Indemnity, and they therefore pray that such of the agents, solicitors, and prosecutors as are now living may be proceeded against, and brought to condign punishment, that their persons and estates, as well as the estates of such of them as are dead, may be excepted in the Act of Indemnity and the Act for Confirmation of Sales, and that petitioners may have reparation for their great damages. L. J., XI. 78. (For original warrant for execution of the Duke of Hamilton, see above, 1643-9, March 6.)

* For these proceedings the parties concerned were convicted of riot, and some of their witnesses were convicted of perjury, but owing to the state of the times no proceedings could be taken until, as stated in the Earl of Sterling's petition, the fine was so long past that the judges did not feel justified in cancelling it. It was however at length vacated by an Act of Parliament, which received the royal assent on the 19th of May 1662.

June 29. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Privileges. L. J., XI. 78.

June 29. Petition of Sir Robert Carr, Baronet, and Dame Mary his wife, on behalf of themselves and their daughters. Petitioners complain of the conduct of their only son Robert, who has risen up against them, and in a terrifying if not warlike way has prevailed upon some of their tenants to pay the rents to him. They pray their Lordships to confirm their order made in the matter on the 20th Sept. 1642. L. J., XI. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in petition.

June 29. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 78.

June 29. Petition of Sir William Huddleston, of Millom, in the county of Cumberland, Knight, now prisoner in the Fleet; prays for redress against a verdict obtained by John Dale respecting certain lands late the property of Ferdinando Huddleston, petitioner's father. L. J., XI. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Printed statement of petitioner's case.

2. Proposed proviso excepting the judgment complained of from the Act for confirmation of judicial proceedings.

June 29. Order referring Sir William Huddleston's petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 78.

June 29. Petition of Edward Baker. Prays to be released from custody, having now submitted himself to their Lordship's order concerning Lord Craven. L. J., XI. 78.

June 29. Petition of John Wood, an orphan, by George Wood his uncle and guardian. Petitioner claims the advowson of the living of Kirby-Wiske, in the county of York, from which his father was sequestered in the year 1645, and to which Syth Elcocke was appointed in his stead by Cromwell; prays for restitution of his rights. L. J., XI. 78.

June 30. Affidavit of George Fenn of scandalous words spoken by Alexander Pepper against the Earl of Suffolk. L. J., XI. 79.

June 30. Similar affidavit of John Parker.

June 30. Similar affidavit of Thomas Runham.

June 30. Draft of an Act for naturalizing of Renée de Sabran, an infant of about eight years of age. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, was passed by the Lords, and sent down to the House of Commons, but was not proceeded with in that House. L. J., XI. 79.

Annexed:—

1. The case of Renée de Sabran: is son of Melchior de Sabran, formerly resident for the French King in England, and of Mary Lake, only daughter of Sir Arthur Lake. Sir Arthur held the rectories of Castle Martin and Melrose, with remainder to the heirs of his body, and after his death his daughter Mary succeeded to the same after a long suit in chancery against Sir Lancelot Lake. Renée was in possession of the rectories until ousted by his uncle, who opposes the Bill.

2. Minutes of proceedings of the Committee on the Bill.

June 30. Application for an order for leave to search the houses of Thomas Nicholes and others for goods belonging to Lord Newport. L. J., XI. 79.

June 30. Information that Arthur Brooker, vintner at the Crown in Rochester, and Richard Greene, Alderman of the city of Rochester, detain divers of the household stuffs belonging to Edward Earl of Dorset. L. J., XI. 80.

June 30. Application for an order for searching the houses of Colonel Edmond Ludlowe, and others, for goods belonging to Lord Arundel of Wardour. L. J., XI. 80.

June 30. Petition of Robert Pitter and William Page, inhabitants of Crawley, in the county of Southampton, in behalf of themselves and many others, their neighbours. The manor of Crawley, parcel of the bishopric of Winchester, was purchased of the trustees for the sale of such lands by John Pigeon at whose hands petitioners, being copyholders of inheritance, have suffered great wrongs. They pray for relief. Endorsed, rejected.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of petitioner's grievances.

[June.—] List of justices of the peace for Middlesex.

July 2. Petition of Edward Lord Viscount Loftus of Ely; complains of a decree pronounced by Sir Edward Bolte, and James Donellan, two of the Commissioners for administration of justice in Ireland, upon a petition of Philip Ferneley and Lettice his wife; and prays for its reversal. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of John Warner, D.D., Bishop of Rochester. Petitioner was legally possessed of the rectory of Barham, in the county of Kent, but was during the late wars dispossessed thereof by Thomas Barton against whom he has brought his action at law. Prays that the profits of the living may be secured in such hands as their Lordships shall think fit until the suit be determined. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of Thomas Earl of Cleveland and Thomas Lord Wentworth, his son. Petitioners being indebted in the year 1634, to Viscount Bayning in the sum of 10,000*l.*, and in the year 1635 to the late Countess of Hume, in the sum of 2,000*l.*, the same were secured by the mortgage of the manors of Stepney and Hackney. The executors of Lord Bayning and the Countess having petitioned their Lordships, a bill was read for the sale of many of petitioner's manors and lands, for satisfying their debts. On the 27th of April 1641 it was ordered by consent of parties that the executors should have possession of the manors, that by the sale of the whole or part thereof, or the mesne profits, the debts might be satisfied, but no part was to be sold until May 1642, or afterwards, without notice to petitioners. Before the time named petitioners were commanded by the late King to attend him in the remote parts of the kingdom, and they have since been constantly engaged in the hazard and dangers of wars, or else under the miseries of banishment and imprisonment for their loyalty. The debts due to Lord Bayning and the Countess are now pretended to have come legally to William Smith, who has possessed himself of the chief part of petitioner's estates, and has sold and embezzled the same, and has endeavoured to swallow up several thousand pounds for the debt, whereas in truth he has raised vast sums of money out of the manors and lands, and has more than satisfied the debts upon a true account. Petitioners pray that Smith and the rest of their creditors, who have intruded into any part of their estates by colour of any pretended Act of Parliament or otherwise since the late unhappy wars, may be summoned before their Lordships, that their accounts and the profits raised by them out of the estates may be stated; and that so much of petitioners' lands may be sold by Act of Parliament as will satisfy their debts, that the remainder may be preserved for the support of their family. L. J., XI. 80.

Annexed:—

1. List of many of petitioners' creditors, and others claiming under the creditors who now have possession of the estates.

2. Answer of William Smith to the petition of the Earl of Cleveland and Lord Wentworth. 9 July 1660.

July 2. List of Committee to whom the petition of the Earl of Cleveland and Lord Wentworth was referred, and report of proceedings upon several subsequent days. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of Jane Grove, widow, late wife of Hugh Grove, deceased. Petitioner's husband, whilst endeavouring with others the suppressing the illegal and tyrannical power of the pretended Protector, was overpowered by the forces of Colonels Croke and Shapcott, and afterwards tried, condemned, and beheaded. Petitioner prays that all persons concerned in his trial may be excepted out of the Act for General Pardon and Oblivion, and that several sums of money illegally taken from him may be restored to her. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of Robert Carr, only son of Sir Robert Carr, Baronet. Petitioner's father is ignorant of the petition presented in his name on the 29th of June last, and petitioner has been unable to get a copy thereof. His father is under the restraint of soldiers and others, but has denied prosecutions of this nature to be his own act, and petitioner is denied access to him. He prays that he may have a copy of the petition and that he may have recourse to his father for the free declaring of his mind, or that the matter in difference may be submitted to two of their Lordships. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of Sir Anthony Aucher. Petitioner is the undoubted patron of the rectory of Kingstone, in the county of Kent, but being in the service of the King when the late incumbent died he was debarred of his right. He prays that the profits of the living may be sequestered into the hands of the churchwardens until his title shall be determined by law. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of Mathew Griffith, D.D. Prays to be restored to his living of Burghfield, in the county of Berks. L. J., XI. 80.

July 2. Petition of Dr. George Wilde. Petitioner was in the year 1644 presented to the rectory of Lambeth by his late Majesty, but by reason of the violent and continued interruptions of Government could not be inducted. Prays that all the tithes and profits of the rectory may be stayed and secured according to the directions of their Lordships in cases of the like nature. L. J., XI. 81.

July 2. Draft order for all papers, &c. concerning the Duke of Buckingham's estate to be delivered to him. L. J., XI. 81.

July 3. Engrossment of an Act for the confirmation and future preservation of the privileges of Parliament and of the fundamental laws made for conservation of the lives, liberties, and properties of the subjects. Brought from the Commons. Dropped in Committee. L. J., XI. 81. (Parchment Collection.)

July 3. Request from the Committee appointed to consider the petition of the Earl of Cleveland and Lord Wentworth that the House would order certain persons to appear before them. L. J., XI. 82.

July 3. Petition of Thomas Johnson, senior, and others, on behalf of themselves and others, of Great Yarmouth, in the county of Norfolk. Petitioners were in the year 1649 deprived of their offices of aldermen and common councilmen of the ancient borough of Yarmouth by the then remnant of the House of Commons for supplying necessaries for His Majesty's fleet then in the roads, by reason whereof the government of the town has been greatly disturbed, many persons being elected who were notoriously disaffected to His Majesty's person and government. Pray that the aldermen and common councilmen who were such before the interruption may meet in the same capacity they then were, and that the number may be completed in all offices according to their charter and custom. L. J., XI. 82.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of articles exhibited against petitioners and others to the Committee for Indemnity. 11 June 1649.

July 3. Draft of an Act for the naturalizing of Edward Bedell and Anne Bedell, son and daughter of William Bedell, late of Molesworth, in the county of Huntingdon. L. J., XI. 82. Dropped in the House of Commons.

July 3. Draft of an Act for the naturalizing of Richard Bogan, of the city of London, merchant. L. J., XI. 82. Read 1^o. No further proceeding.

July 3. Letter from Sir William Whitmore to Lord Craven. There is a discovery made of 1,000*l*. worth of the King's goods formerly taken out of Ludlow Castle. The writer thinks it may be a piece of seasonable service if his Lordship will procure an order for Colonel Moor, Governor of Ludlow Castle, or Captain Vincent Edwards, Deputy Governor, to seize the goods. L. J., XI. 82.

July 3. Petition of Henry Tynte and John Tynte. In the year 1641 Sir Robert Tynte lent 4,000*l*. to Sir William St. Leger, Lord President of Munster, for the preservation of the army then in great extremity, for the repayment of which money Sir Robert had the public faith of the kingdom for his security; 3,000*l*. of this sum he disposed of by will to his eldest son, Robert, father of petitioner Henry, and the remainder to petitioner John; Robert Tynte is now dead, having disposed of the 3,000*l*. by will to petitioner Henry. In the time of the late unhappy wars, when petitioners were engaged in the King's army, William Tynte, youngest son of Sir Robert, came over from Ireland, and combining with Sir John Clotworthy, a powerful man at that time in the Parliament, obtained an order from the House of Commons for the treasurer to pay him the 4,000*l*. with interest, and accordingly both the principal and interest were paid to him, and Sir John Clotworthy got nearly 4,000*l*. to his own use. Petitioners pray that Sir John Clotworthy and William Tynte may be ordered to give them satisfaction.

July 4. Petition of John Rawlinson, rector of Lambeth. Dr. George Wilde by misinformation obtained the benefit of the general order for securing the tithes of Lambeth. Petitioner prays to be heard, and that in the meantime the order may be suspended. L. J., XI. 83.

July 4. Message from the House of Commons that they have received an account from their clerk that he does not know of any papers, books, or evidences remaining in his custody which belong to the House of Peers. L. J., XI. 83.

July 4. Petition of Martha Hatt alias Arundell, a distressed widow. Their Lordships having referred her complaint to the Committee for Petitions, Sir Theophilus Jones could not deny the matter of fact, but to delay justice and add to her misery most maliciously scandalised her good name, and also pretended that the illegal protections he had given were for the necessity of Ireland, and were to be judged of there; she knows by sad experience that when he is there he will, by friends and power, obstruct justice and hinder the reading of any petition she may present, and therefore prays that her case may be recommended by their Lordships to the Parliament in Ireland when called, and that some competent sum may be ordered for her relief and to transport herself and family. See L. J., XI. 64. Noted dismissed.

July 4. Petition of Benjamin Deicrowe. Prays for the reversal of a decree in Chancery obtained against him by James Mayo and Jasper Edwards, respecting a mortgage, and that the cause may receive a hearing before their Lordships.

July 4. Petition of Henry Dutton, rector of Cory [Curry] Mallett with the chapel of Curland annexed in the county of Somerset. Complains that he is kept out of his parsonage and of the profits of the rectory by John Baker, who not only set his own hand to a petition for the bringing on of the horrid murder of his late Majesty (as appears by the original petition kept now in the chamber over the Duchy Court), but likewise persuaded and threatened others to do the like. Petitioner prays that possession may be rendered unto him, or that the profits may be secured in the hands of the churchwardens, and that Baker may be called upon to show cause why he refuses to deliver up possession. Endorsed: To have trial at law for title and to have the benefit of general order.

July 4. Petition of Thomas Lancelott, of London, merchant. In the second year of His Majesty's reign, petitioner resided in Smyrna, where upon the arrival of Sir Henry Hide as agent for His Majesty he was entertained by petitioner. Sir Thomas Bendish, agent for the pretended Commonwealth of England, was much offended at this, and because petitioner would not declare that Sir Henry Hide was an impostor set a great fine upon him and afterwards upon false pretence sent sundry rude and inhuman Turkish officers to carry him prisoner to Constantinople (being above three hundred miles), where petitioner was much injured in his person, and detained many months from his business to his great discredit, loss of employment, and detriment above 30,000*l*. Prays that Sir Thomas Bendish may be excepted in the Act of General Pardon, that he may remain still liable to be prosecuted by petitioner.

July 4. Petition of many thousand poor distressed prisoners in the King's Bench and other prisons in and about London for debt. It is a law of the land and a privilege of the subject by Magna Charter, the Petition of Right, and of express divine authority, agreeing with the laudable practice of neighbouring nations, that no man's person shall be imprisoned for debt, his estate only being liable for payment, out of which the tools of the handicraft and the plough of the ploughman are excepted. Petitioners' miserable condition is occasioned by the decay of trade, many great losses being sustained in the late distracted times. Many of the petitioners are securities for others, who are able but not willing to pay their debts, and being removed from their several employments are become destitute of any means of support for themselves or families and are ready (as many of late have done) to perish for want of bread, there being no provision made as in many places where imprisonment is allowed that the creditors should give security to maintain their debtors during imprisonment. They pray that their deplorable condition may be taken into consideration, and that an Act may be hastened for their release, that such as are in upon designment to defraud their creditors may be compelled to make satisfaction, such as have anything may pay according to their abilities, and such as have not m^og, but Job like are stripped of all and t^hey w^{ill} upon the draught of a prison, there to be buried alive, may by their Lordships' clemency and goodness be released.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of proceeding.

July 6. Petition of Richard Wallis, of St. Anthony, in the county of Cornwall. In the year 1642 petitioner raised a troop of horse at his own cost, under the command of Lord Hopton, and continued in his late Majesty's service until the siege of Pendennis Castle. He has since been several times imprisoned, and Captain Braden and Cornet Elias Wymond articulated against him for being in arms with Colonel Penruddock in the West, and thereupon sequestered and entered violently upon his estate, which they still detain. Petitioner prays to be restored to the possession of his estate, thereby empowering him to take his remedy at law for the profits so long detained from him, notwithstanding the Act of Indemnity intended to be passed.

July 7. Answer of George Lawrence to the petition of William Lewis, D.D. The defendant acknowledges that he was constituted chaplain of St. Crosse Hospital by John Cooke in January 1653-4, having been ordained by Walter late Bishop of Winchester. He denies that he ever was of a fanatic temper, it having been his constant practice to pray daily with the poor of the hospital, and to marry, bury, and baptize according to the directory. He also denies that he ever refused to say the Lord's Prayer, but remembers that he has often expounded it to, and prayed with, his congregation in the very words thereof. He acknowledges that he preached a sermon upon the death of Oliver Cromwell, wherein were several passages in commendation of him, but he does not remember that in either that or any other sermon ever preached by him there were any scandalous or treasonable passages derogatory to the honour of his late Majesty, but if such were or shall be proved against him he hopes that by the favour of their Lordships and His Majesty's most gracious declaration of pardon the same may be buried in oblivion. He prays to be dismissed from any further attendance. See L. J., XI. 72.

July 7. Petition of John Cooke, clerk. Prays to be restored to the rectory of West Thorney, in the county of Sussex.

July 9. Petition of Thomas Gorges, clerk. Ezechiel Powmell has by misinformation obtained the benefit of the general order to secure the profits of the rectory of Wraxall, in the county of Somerset, in the hands of the churchwardens and overseers. Petitioner prays that the order may be recalled. L. J., XI. 86.

July 9. Petition of Tristram Sugge, D.D. Petitioner has been presented to the vicarage of Leamington Hastings, in the county of Warwick, by Sir Thomas Trevor, the undoubted patron, the living being void by the death of John Lee. Petitioner is opposed in his induction by Gylbert Walden, whose only title is that he had the church by the sequestration of Lee. Petitioner prays for the removal of Walden.

Annexed:—

1. Articles against Walden.

2. Petition of inhabitants of Leamington Hastings to Sir Thomas Trevor. Prays that some godly and learned minister may be presented to the vicarage in the place of Walden.

July 9. Letter from Thomas Bampfiele to Lord Chandos, at Manchester House. The Lords' order made on the 2d of May last respecting the stay of waste on Lord Chandos' estate has been referred by the Commons to a Committee. L. J., XI. 37.

July 10. Draft order appointing a Committee to prepare reasons to be offered to the Commons to induce them to order, that the deeds and evidences belonging to Peers, and which were in the custody of Mr. Phelps, may be delivered to the Clerk of the House of Lords. L. J., XI. 86.

July 10. Petition of David Jenkins; prays that the Bill for confirmation of judicial proceedings may not extend to a decree in Chancery of the 6th of April 1649, as he neither appeared or submitted, and utterly denied the power of the judges, but that he may begin his suit at his place. L. J., XI. 86. See also.

July 10. Draft order for Jenkins to bring in provisoes to be added to the Bill of Indemnity and to the Bill for confirming Judicial Proceedings. L. J., XI. 86.

Annexed:—

1. Draft proviso to be added to the Bill of Indemnity.

2. Copy of proceeding.

3. Draft proviso to be added to the Bill for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings.

4. Copy of proceeding.

July 10. Petition of Edward Wilsford, clerk; petitioner was lately presented by the King to the vicarage of Lydd in the county of Kent, which living had been for many years sequestered, and is now in the possession of Mr. Heming, who was chaplain to Colonel Pride, one of the late King's judges, and has no title to it and never was in holy orders. Prays that the profits of the vicarage may be sequestered until the right be determined by order of Parliament or due course of law.

July 11. Petition of His Majesty's loyal and late suffering subjects of the city of Bristol. Many of the Council were for their loyalty to the late King illegally put out of their places by virtue of an ordinance of Parliament of the 28th of October 1645, procured by some of His Majesty's most mortal enemies. Petitioners desire to have their city restored to its ancient privileges and government, both ecclesiastical and civil, and they therefore pray that a writ of restoration may be granted to as many of their ancient senators as are still alive, to displace those who have been illegally chosen, and to make up their complete number according to their charter of such persons as will prove loyal subjects to His Majesty, lovers of the Protestant religion, and free from faction, and that they may have power to displace and place inferior officers as they shall from time to time see cause. L. J., XI. 87.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Jonathan Blackwell on behalf of himself and many others, the Aldermen and Common Councilmen of the City of Bristol. Many of the gentlemen whose names are set to preceding petition totally disown the same, and others whose names are also set seem to be much dissatisfied therewith. Petitioners pray to be heard. (Undated.)

July 11. Order referring the petition from the City of Bristol to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 87.

July 11. Affidavit of Philip Fursdon and another that Edward Acton refused to obey their Lordships' order concerning the searching for the goods, &c. belonging to the Marquess of Winchester. L. J., XI. 87.

July 11. Information of John Polhill of scandalous words spoken against the House of Lords by one Bowen. L. J., XI. 87.

July 11. Reasons to be offered to the Commons why the deeds, &c. belonging to Peers, in the hands of the Clerk of the House of Commons, should be delivered to the Clerk of the House of Lords. L. J., XI. 87. See also.

July 11. Certificate of the Commissioners for settling the militia in the county of Leicester; that they have taken informations, and the certificate of the late Commissioners of the abuses that were put upon the Earl of Stamford, his Countess and family, at Bradgate on the 15th and 16th of August last by Major Hubbert and Captain Shepperdson, and their soldiers, and that they have searched the books of the last militia, and that it appears to have been done without any order or authority.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Commissioners for the settling the late militia for the county of Leicester, that the attempt made upon Bradgate House was not done by any warrant or order from them. These papers were no doubt annexed to a petition of the Earl of Stamford, which appears by the journals to have been presented this day. L. J., XI. 88.

July 11. Petition of John Lord Culpeper, Baron of Thorsway. In 1642 petitioner upon the particular commands of his late Majesty followed and assisted him at Oxford and elsewhere, and has ever since adhered to His Majesty that now is beyond the seas upon all occasions, for which fidelity the assembly of persons, unlawfully assuming to themselves the legislative power and name of Parliament, sold all his estate, both real and personal. Prays to be restored to the possession of his estates, with all arrears of rents due thereupon, and that he may have the same favour and justice herein as their Lordships have been pleased to afford to other peers in like condition. L. J., XI. 88.

July 11. Petition of Anne Viscountess Baltinglas. Prays that a proviso may be inserted in the Bill for confirmation of judicial proceedings, protecting her right to certain lands, parcel of the manor of Burton Dassett, in the county of Warwick, which she claims as heiress to her mother Anne, daughter of Sir Arthur Throckmorton, and wife of Sir Peter Temple, and upon which lands by the misadvice of counsel she was drawn to suffer a common recovery.

July 12. Petition of John Bayly, rector of Fringford, in the county of Oxford. Prays that the order obtained by Mr. King upon misinformation for securing the profits of the living in the hands of the churchwardens may be revoked. L. J., XI. 88.

July 12. Petition of Warwick Lord Mohun: in the year 1651 petitioner was sued to an exigent, contrary to his privilege as a peer, by William Keigwyn through his attorney Thomas Dandy for money lent by Keigwyn's father to his late Majesty upon petitioner's security, and after spending above 100*l.* in prosecution of suits in various courts petitioner was finally compelled to pay 108*l.*; prays that Dandy and Keigwyn may be summoned to answer for their violation of his privileges, and ordered to satisfy him for his sufferings and payments. L. J., XI. 89.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

2. Deposition to the same effect as the last.

3. Exigent in the cause. Hillary Term 1650.

4. Copy of preceding.

July 12. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 89.

July 12. Order empowering the Committee for Petitions to send for Alderman Phillippes, late sheriff of Middlesex, concerning the death of John Gerrard, &c. L. J., XI. 89.

July 12. Petition of Jane Kekewich of St. Germans, in the county of Cornwall, widow. About a year before the wars petitioner lent John Elliott, of St. Germans, and Edward Elliot, his brother 100*l.*, and took their bond for repayment. They not having paid she endeavoured to recover her money by law, but Edward Elliott, on the false pretence that she was a delinquent, and that he had paid the money, obtained an order from the Court of Indemnity to stop the proceedings, and to arrest petitioner if she should not deliver up the bond and pay him 10*l.* costs, which cruel order he caused to be put in execution, had her kept five days in prison and threatened to send her to London, to prevent which great danger to her health and life, being an aged woman, she delivered up the bond, paid him 10*l.* and 26*l.* to the person that arrested her, besides other charges, amounting in all to 70*l.*, and sealed a bond of 200*l.* conditioned to seal a general release upon demand. Prays that John and Edward Elliott may be ordered to make her satisfaction, and in the meantime that they may not be indemnified in the General Act of Indemnity. L. J., XI. 89.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act.

July 12. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 89.

July 12. Petition of John Barwick, D.D., one of His Majesty's chaplains in ordinary. Prays that the profits of the rectory of Houghton-le-Spring, in the county of Durham, to which he was collated in the year 1653, but of which he is kept out of possession by Nicholas Battersby, may be secured in some trusty and indifferent hands until he obtain possession. L. J., XI. 89.

July 12. Petition of Sir Francis Dodington. For his fidelity to the King's service petitioner was declared delinquent and his estate confiscated. Prays that a proviso for his relief may be inserted in the Bill of Indemnity. L. J., XI. 89.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.

July 12. Petition of Sir Sackville Crow, Baronet. In the year 1647, petitioner then being Ambassador for His late Majesty resident with the Emperor of Turkey, Sir Thomas Bendish who came thither with a very disputable authority, by vast sums of money given as bribes to the Turks and Turkish ministers purchased the embassy, seized petitioner's person, plundered his goods, took possession of the papers and records of the embassy, turned his lady, children, and servants out of doors, and in a most barbarous way sent them prisoners first to Smyrna and then to England; upon his arrival, at the request of the Levant Companies upon false informations, and without examination, he was committed to the Tower, where he remained until the year 1656. At last being permitted to sue his right at law he brought his action for false imprisonment in the King's Bench, and the jury returned a verdict for 6,000*l.* damages, but the Court refused to give judgment. Being thereby deprived of the benefit of the law, and being driven to great extremities, he was forced to accept 2,000*l.* in lieu of the 6,000*l.*, and to acquit all other damages done him. Petitioner prays that he may receive reparation from Chief Justice Glynne and Justices Warburton and Newdigate, the judges who tried the cause, for the injustice done him in denying judgment after verdict. L. J., XI. 89.

July 12. Information of Thomas Wofford concerning goods taken from the house of the Earl of Berks at Newelme Park, Oxon. L. J., XI. 89.

July 12. Petition of James Morgan, of Llansawel, in the county of Carmarthen, and Mary his wife. Complain of a judgment fraudulently obtained against them by Robert Stone in the Court of Common Pleas of the Exchequer, and pray for its reversal. Endorsed: Referred to the law for remedy.

July 12. Petition and appeal of Henry Ayscough, prisoner in the Fleet. Prays for relief against certain decrees of the Court of Chancery fraudulently obtained by John Anton and others, with reference to the administration of the estate of Richard Catterton, who died intestate, and whose widow married petitioner.

July 12. Petition of Colonel Henry Farr. Prays for relief against Sir Thomas Honeywood and others, at whose hands he has suffered great wrongs for his adherence to his late Majesty, having been twice condemned to death, committed to many prisons, and prosecuted with actions at law with reference only to His Majesty's service, by reason whereof his estate has been ruined.

July 13. Petition of Hugh Peters as follows:—
To the right honour¹¹ the Lords Assembled in Parliament.

The humble Petition of Hugh Peters, clerk.

Humbly sheweth that y^r petition^r in May last, vpon his Ma^{tys} gracious Declaration of pardoning all his subjects who should returne to their obedience in forty dayes how faulty soeuer, excepting such as had a hand in the Late King's death: Vpon which y^r petition^r tooke hold, as others did. Neuertheles y^r petition^r is accepted vpon some information giuen in the house of Comons, that y^r petition^r (as hee heares) should bee abroad, and very actiue the day of the King's death. Whereas in truth y^r petition^r was not all that day out of his Chamber, which will fully appeare by men of Integrity, as also of his present inability to wayt on y^r Lord^{ps} if y^r Lord^{ps} shall graciously please to heare them. And vpon this cheerfully puts his life, or any thing that can bee proued tending to such an act which hee abhorres. And is truly innocent.

Therefore in all humility prayes, that the matters may bee examined, and such order taken therin as y^r Lord^{ps} shall thinke meet. That y^r poore petition^r may bee preserued from vtter ruine, begging his narratiue annexed may bee read, and hee shall pray, ec.

1. Hugh Peter's narrative:—

They which thinke to vindicate themselues to the world by writing Apologies, rarely reach their ends, because their game is an aftergame—preiudice is strong, and the plaister can hardly bee made broad enough, nor Apologies put into hands who haue preindgd, and receiued the first tincture. And therefore our blessed Sauio^r is slow in that worke, only cleeres the great question of that age by prouing himselfe the Messiah by 4 witnesses, John 5th, but not forward to answer the expectation of the world other wayes. And yet so much of his example there is and of St. Pauls and others, that there seemes to bee a necessity of saying something, though hard to wipe off so much dirt, as is throwne vpon my selfe. Yet at this distance and leasure hearing by printed papers what my Lot is in my native Country I doe in the name and feare of God, and before his holy Ma^{ty}, Angells, and men profes, that I neuer had head nor hand in the contriuing or managing the late Kings death directly nor indirectly, as is most scandalously suggested by Black mouthes, but was all that day (hee dyed) sick and sad in my chamber, which I proue by two substantiall witnesses. And for what is in that pamphlet, June 19th, about my confessing in sicknes at my landing at Plimouth from Ireland, It is most vnttrue and vtterly mistaken, for I neuer was sick at plimouth, nor landed there from Ireland, nor any of that information colourable. And this I auouch in the truth of my soule, and would by my presence iustifye, if weaknes, and lamenes, with this distance did not hinder, yea many yeeres being vpon mee, and an vtter inability to doe my selfe right in these things, if the Lord doe not make my way in the hearts of men. Howener I shall briefly glue an account of my coming into England, my behav^r our syn^d I came, and my present condition in this Iunecture. A Colony going to settle in New England by his late Ma'tys Patent about 20 yeeres synce, I went thither who by my byrth in Cornwall was not altogether ignorant of that place, and that fishing trade, and thither (being often invited), I say, I went and after some tyme by the magistrates of that place was sent with another into England for case in Excise and Customs and some supplies for learning, &c. And because I had bin witnes to the Indians receiuing the Gospell there in faith and practice, they having the Bible translated by vs into their owne language, and part therof printed, and hundreds of them professing the gospell, and teaching each other the knowledge of God, and the more from the example of the English there, where in seven yeers amongst thousands there dwelling, yea many thousands, I neuer saw any drunke, neuer heard an oath, nor saw sabboth broken, nor euer heard of one beggar: all which invited mee vnto England: but coming found the Nation imbroyld in trouble and warre, the preaching was curse yee Meroz from England to Scotland, the best ministers going into the field: In which (not without vrging) I imbarqued my selfe in tyme, and by force vpon mee here was put short of my promise of returning home, which was and is my sad affliction, thus I came.

My first worke here, was with the first to goe for Ireland, which I did with many hazards, then went to sea with my old Patron the Earle of Warwick, then imployd by the city, the Earle of Essex, my Lord Say, and others, and my returne stopt by the power that was. And then was in the last Army in severall places but neuer in the North. In all which affayre, I labord to perswade those to their proper duty, I conversed with.

My principles in Religion guided mee to those orthodox trutthes exprest in our English Confessions of Faith: And am knowne to ioyne with the Protestants of Vpper and Lower Germany, France, &c. I haue and doe herby witnes agaynst all errors of all kindes.

For the warre I thought the vndertakers therof knew their worke and grounds; I was not considerable, men mistooke who thought mee more than a flye on a wheele.

For my Carriage, I challenge all the Kings party, to speake if I were vnciuill, nay many of them had my purse, my hand, my helpe, many wayes, and are ready to witnes it; yea, his present Ma'tys seruants preserued mee through hazards.

I neuer was priny to the Army's transactions about the late King at Holmby or else where, or of any Juncto, Counsell, or Cabal. But when his Ma'ty sent for mee I went to him, with whom I dealt about my New Eng: busines and was 3 or 4 tymes with him, and had his speciall acceptance, and serued him to my vtmost, and vsed all my little skill for his and the Nations good more then twice, for which I haue witnesses, though it bee now hard to cut my way through so many rocks, yet God is good. It is true, I was of a party where I acted zealously but not with malice, or mischief, it hath bin accounted honn^{bl} et Cæsar in hosti probat, to keepe to principles of hon^r and honesty; I neuer quarrelld [with] others for their iudgment and conscience. And it is receiued Relig^{io} ad eundem st^u non coerenda. I saw Reformation growing (as I conceued) lawes made and some kept agaynst debauchery and euill (which I was glad also to reade in his Ma'tys proclamation) I saw a very learned, godly, able ministry as in the world well provided for, I saw the Vniuersities flourishing, which quickend my indeours hauing been long a stranger to my owne Country. I studyed the 13 of the Romans, and wastender and am to Authority, found England and Scotland engaged, & many wayes satisfying the world about their engagements, which tooke mee in also. By the warres I neuer enriched my selfe, I haue often offered my personall estate for 2000^l and so lands I neuer had any but that part of noble mans, which I neuer layd vp penny of nor euene vrged my Lord Grey to buy, not knew of the sale till done, nor iustify any vnworthy thing in it. I neuer plundered nor cheated, neuer sent or made penny ouer sea, nor hoarded any in England.

I was not guilty of secluding the members in 48, nor knew it till done, and sent by my Lord Fairfax to fetch of two of them and to know who they were that were secluded.

I neuer had Jewells or any thing belonging to Court or State more than aforesayd what they gaue directly nor indirectly, neuer had ecclesiasticall promotion in my life in the nation to enrich mee, but liued on my owne whilst I had any thing, nor haue been a louer of mony.

The many scandalls for Vncleannes and others I abhorre as vild and false, being kept from that, and those aspersions cast vpon mee, and such doe make my protest agaynst as before, I know how low my name runs, how titleles, how contemnd. Dauid knew why Shimei curst him. For the lawes of England, I know no place hath better, only hauing liued where matters are more expedite and cheape, I haue shewd my folly, so to say, and hauing no euill intention a very worthy lawyer tooke exception at some thing of myne or my frends, which was neuer intended in his sense by eyther, and crave his excuse.

I can charge my selfe with euill enough, as any excentrick motion of myne from myne owne calling, want of a solemne spirit in slight tymes with vnbeliefe, or if I haue gon about the reaching any spirituall ends by treading vpon any ciuill duty, breaking any couenants, or slighting them, and may feare that the Gospell, yea, the spirit also, may bee vnderualued by myne and others vnworthy dealing with them.

Much to these I might adde, though towards men I could plead innocence, who haue seen many vanities vnder the sun, and the world hung with nets and snares, alas there is nothing to Christ. And lastly I vnderstand—

Lastly I vnderstand what exception is vpon mee for life, and estate, I haue taken hold of his Ma'tys gracious pardon as others did, and know not truly where this exception lyes grounded. I wish I had bin with their Hon^{rs} to haue cleerd it. I hope a vagrant report or ayry noise takes no place with them. For I doe challenge all the world for my innocence for these suggestions, and appeale to their Hon^{rs} and the Noble Lords for a reuiue of the charge and information, and craue no fauor if any sober man can charge mee, otherwise, I most hartily beg iust fauor, (vnles my euill bee only acting wth such a party, w^{ch} I looke vpon as pardoned) I must haue it: For I know before whom my Cause is, and may not despayre.

I must agayne profes, were I not a christian yet as a man (I was saying) a gentleman, and from that extract doe loath and scorne to ingage in the vild things suggested, and that by one credittles witnes, that only supposeth but asserts nothing. I wish from my hart that our present prince may bee, and the nation by him more happy then any euer hath ben, and that the true ends of gouernment may bee had and communicated fully, that euery honest hart may haue cause to reioyce in God, the King, and their Lawes.

And for my selfe (through Grace) I resolute to bee quiet in a corner (if I may) to let God alone with ruling the world, to whose wisdom and power wee ought to submit, yea, to mynd myne owne worke though neuer so small, to bee passiuely vnder Authority, rather then impatient, to procure the quiet and peace of the Nation to my vtmost, to mynd things inuisible, and of a better consistence than these below, and to pray where I can doe no more.

HUGH PETERS.

July 13. Petition of Colonel Robert Duckenfield, Colonel Henry Bradshawe, Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Birkened, Captain John Griffith, and Captain Edward Alcock. Petitioners haue humbly and sorrowfully acknowledged before the Committee for Privileges that they were with others present at the Court Martiall when the late Earl of Derby was tried, but they hope to make it appear that they were no way consenting to the death or imprisonment of that honorable person, but laboured to the utmost of their powers and interests with friends to haue prevented the same. They pray that a full hearing may be granted to them, and that they may be allowed counsel and witnesses to prove what shall be offered on their behalf. See L. J., XI. 87.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Colonel Robert Duckenfield, Colonel Henry Bradshawe, Captain Thomas Parington, Captain John Griffith, and Captain Edward Alcocke. Three weeks since petitioners received an order to attend the Lords Committee of Privileges, and in obedience thereto left their families above one hundred and forty miles distant from London and appeared before their Lordships, who were pleased to command them into the keeping of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. Petitioners pray that the Gentleman Usher may be ordered to take their own bonds for their appearance upon the day appointed for the hearing of their counsel, otherwise their health and lives may be endangered, being most of them infirm and sickly, neither in durance can they prepare their business.

July 13. Petition of Benedict Hall. By colour of an order of Parliament of 1st of May 1646, unduly obtained by Henry Harbert, for raising 3,000*l.* out of the woods of the Earl of Worcester and of petitioner, in the county of Monmouth, the Committee for the county agreed to sell to Colonel Robert Kirle and Captain Braine twelve thousand cords of long wood for 3,600*l.*, out of petitioner's wood only, but their Lordships finding that the order of the 1st May had been unduly obtained discharged the same. Kirle, Braine, and the persons to whom they had sold the wood for 1,300*l.* more than they were to pay were all served with their Lordships' order, but in contempt thereof did, in making up the twelve thousand cords of wood, fell seven thousand timber trees, and commit other great spoils to the loss of 20,000*l.* to petitioner's family. Prays that he may receive recompense from Harbert and the other persons proportionable to the damage they have done him.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Benedict Hall that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Bill of Indemnity.
2. Proposed proviso.

July 13. Petition of Jacob Boevey, merchant. Prays that certain decretal orders of the Court of Chancery and illegal proceedings upon a pretended contempt of Court in his suit against Robert Llewellyn may be discharged, and that he may be released from his unjust imprisonment and sequestration.

July 13. Petition of Elizabeth Rutter, relict of John Rutter, late of Kingsley, in the county of Chester, on behalf of herself and two sons. In the year 1644 through the active malice of Gilbert Gerrard, a man of turbulent spirit and a great enemy to his late Majesty, the whole of the estate of petitioner's husband was sequestered for no other cause but his abode in Chester, one of his Majesty's garrisons. After the death of petitioner's husband Gerrard, by suborning witnesses to prove that petitioner had spoken words in vindication of His Majesty, procured the sequestration to be continued. She prays to be restored to her husband's estate that she may be reimbursed all the expenses unjustly exacted from her out of Gerrard's estate, and that his estate may be excepted by proviso out of the Act of Indemnity.

July 13. Petition of Marcellus Rivers and others. Petitioners were, with about 70 others, after a full year's imprisonment upon pretence of the Salisbury rising, without any conviction at law, transported to Barbados, where in May 1656 they were sold for slaves as the goods and chattels of Martin Noell, Henry Hatsell, and Major Thomas Alderne, since deceased. They pray that Noell and Hatsell may be excepted by special proviso out of the Act of General Pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Another similar petition. (Undated.)
2. Proposed proviso to the Bill of Indemnity.

July 13. Petition of Sir Thomas Gower, Sir John Kay, Sir John Wolstenholme, and Sir Paul Neile, on behalf of themselves and the rest of the 16 gentlemen pretended to be bound to William Lowther in two bonds, bearing date 2 Oct. 1643. In the year 1642 and since divers of the nobility and gentry of the county of York became engaged in several bonds for arms and money taken up for His Majesty's service in the northern parts. William Lowther, who has two of these bonds, is endeavouring to get their Lordships to insert a proviso into the Act of Indemnity to deprive petitioners of the benefit of the Act, upon pretence that the bonds were entered into upon the private account of merchandise. Petitioners pray to be heard by counsel before anything is done to their prejudice.

July 14. Petition of "Robert Danvers alias Villiers,

"whom your Lordships are pleased to honour with the "title of Viscount Purbecke." Has many occasions to go abroad, and also finds his health much prejudiced by his imprisonment; he therefore prays to be discharged from the custody of the Gentleman Usher upon his parole to wait upon their Lordships upon notice. L. J., XI. 91.

July 14. Petition of Gervas Holles, Esq., one of His Majesty's Masters of Requests. Petitioner has been under sequestration nearly 18 years for serving his late Majesty, during which time one of his tenants, Gabriel Neave, has paid a part of his rent to the sequestrators, but the residue and the clear fifth that was allowed for the maintenance of petitioner's wife and children he detains in his hands refusing to render an account. Petitioner prays that Neave may be compelled to give him an account of the rents and profits during his tenancy, whereby petitioner may have the surplussage thereof. L. J., XI. 91.

July 14. Order referring preceding to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 91.

July 14. Draft of an Act towards the reparation and satisfaction to be made unto John Lord St. John, of Basing, Earl of Wiltshire, and Marquess of Winchester, out of the manors and lands of Robert Wallop, Esq., and Sir Thomas Jervoyse, Knight, deceased, for the sum of 19,000*l.*, and damages for the same given unto them by the late pretended Parliament out of the said Marquess of Winchester's estate. L. J., XI. 91. Read 1st this day. Dropped in the House of Commons.

July 14. Draft of "An Act for the present nominating "of Commissioners of Sewers." Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent on the 28th of July. L. J., XI. 91, &c. 12 Car. II., cap. 6.

July 14. Petition of the Freemen and other inhabitants of the city of Exeter. The Mayor and his brethren of the Chamber of Exeter, by their constant adhering to and active promoting of the corrupt interests of the late usurper, obtained in a pretended Parliament holden at Westminster in the year 1657, a sacrilegious Act empowering them to divide the Cathedral Church of St. Peter's and to reduce seventeen other churches to four, contrary to the articles of the last rendition of the city, and investing the Mayor and his brethren with new jurisdiction over petitioners and their estates contrary to their ancient rights and liberties, both religious and civil. The Mayor and his brethren have deprived many godly ministers of their lawful freehold and livelihood, and His Majesty and others of their right of presentation, exposed many churches to sale by the common crier in the market place, and sold as many of them as they could, with express covenants that the purchasers should not employ them to God's service, and have robbed most of them of the plate, bells, seats, and other materials, leaving them a mere carcase of ruinous walls; they have divided the famous cathedral by a brick wall for the use of two of their chaplains, and left but four other churches open which are not capable to receive one half of the people; they have assumed to themselves the power of presentation of ministers within the city, and have rated the inhabitants at 800*l.* per annum for the maintenance of their chaplains, which tax they have not only laid with signal partiality, but have levied with insolence and severity by distress and execution, proceeding against petitioners as perturbators of the peace for seeking relief therein in a petitionary way; and whereas the courts of the city are customary courts for the freemen only, and the extents thereof are little beyond the gates and walls, and the suburbs are distinct, yet by this pretended Act power is given to try not only all actions touching any matters within the city, but other places and parishes in the county lying without its limits are brought under the jurisdiction of the city courts. Petitioners pray that the churches, and the lawful use and benefit of them, may be restored to them and their rightful ministers, and that the Mayor and his brethren may not enjoy any benefit of the intended Act of grace and oblivion, so as to indemnify them from making just and legal reparation. L. J., XI. 91.

1. Printed copy of preceding.

July 14. Petition of Elizabeth White, late widow and relict of Francis Handford, Esq., deceased. Complains that her husband Ayliffe White has combined with Walter Handford, her eldest son, to deprive her of her estate. Prays to be repossessed of what of right belongs to her. L. J., XI. 91.

July 14. Petition of William Cooke. Petitioner was by letters patent appointed by the late King Keeper of the Forest of Pinckley, in the county of Southampton, and enjoyed the office, and carefully preserved His Majesty's deer there until he was evicted by Henry Plapet and others without any order of Parliament, and contrary to His Majesty's gracious proclamation for quieting of possessions. Since Philipot took possession most of the deer have been destroyed and beaten out of their walks by him and other stealers, so that of 120 which laid within the rail of the forest there are not now ten left. Petitioner prays to be restored to his office and the possession of the lodge. L. J., XI. 91.

July 14. Petition of Lemuell Francklyn, rector of Wootton, in the county of Northampton. Complains that Jeremy Stephens served the churchwardens and overseers of the parish with an order purporting to be the general order of their Lordships, signed by John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, for securing the tithes and profits of the rectory. The order being forged, petitioner prays that Stephens may be ordered to appear before their Lordships, and that he may not in future have any order granted to him. L. J., XI. 91.

Annexed:—

1. Forged order referred to in preceding.

July 14. Draft order for payment of certain sums of money to Lancelot Emot, Provost Marshal of Middlesex and Westminster, and to Henry Peek. C. J., VIII. 89. J. 1660.

July 14. Another draft.

July 14. Petition of John Cosin, D.D., Master of St. Peter's College in Cambridge. Petitioner has for seventeen years been wrongfully kept out of the Mastership of St. Peter's College, whereunto he was legally admitted according to the statutes of the College, and when by the violence of the times he could not be suffered to stay there any longer, he was sent over by his late Majesty into France, there to attend the exercise and preservation of the true reformed religion of the Church of England, among that part of the domestic servants who professed the same in the Queen's Court, from whence being now lately returned he has waited a month in hopes to have obtained the benefit of their Lordships' order concerning the restoration of university men forcibly ejected out of their places, but finding some obstruction therein, he prays that he may have a particular order to take possession of his mastership, with all the rights thereto belonging, and that his library, which cost him about 1,200*l.*, and which has been during all the time of his absence and sequestrations there detained, may be restored to him.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

July 14. Petition of Francis Wayte. Complains of the unjust and illegal proceedings against him by Sir Robert Reynolds, a member of the House of Commons, with reference to the payment of a bond entered into by petitioner and his brother. Prays for redress.

July 14. Petition of Francis Ewre, his wife, and children. Pray that their complaint against Samuel Trotman and others with reference to the possession of the manors of Bucknell and Oddington, in the county of Oxford, may be heard by their Lordships.

July 14. Petition of Thomas Haymes, clerk. Petitioner being vicar of Boxley, in the county of Kent, not worth above 60*l.* per annum, had an augmentation of 22*l.* 10*s.* granted to him out of the parsonage impropriate of the said parish belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Rochester by the Committee for regulating the Universities, and afterwards confirmed and paid by the trustees, but withheld for the last three years. Prays that the augmentation may be continued to him, and that he may be authorised to receive the tithes this harvest, of which he will render an account after deducting his own augmentation without any allowance for his pains.

July 14. Petition of John Armiger. Complains of the wrongs he has suffered at the hands of Colonel Robert Jermy, a justice of the peace for Norfolk, a Commissioner for the Militia and Excise, a violent prosecutor of His Majesty's friends, and a member of the High Court of Justice. Jermy having commenced action at common law against petitioner for words spoken against him as a justice, petitioner pleaded justification, and upon proof of many of his notorious crimes as a justice, the jury found for petitioner. To prevent his getting remedy upon the trial, Jermy upon a premeditated design, consisting of acts done for the service of His Majesty, procured him to be imprisoned in the Tower, and when petitioner had procured his Habeas Corpus, he was again committed prisoner to Dover Castle, and there detained, and charged with a general charge of treason, which Jermy and his confederates, which refusing he was threatened to be, and believes had he not escaped he would have been, sent to Jamaica as a slave. During the continuance of the late powers petitioner durst not commence his action to recover relief, and now Jermy and his confederates conceal themselves, and give out that petitioner will be deprived of benefit by the intended Act of Oblivion. Petitioner prays that he may be left to his freedom to recover reparation against the persons concerned in his imprisonment.

July 14. Petition of Isaac Chauncy, rector of Woodborough, in the county of Wilts. Prays that an order obtained by misinformation by Francis Baylie, clerk, for securing the tithes and profits of the living may be revoked, and that petitioner may be quieted in the possession of the rectory until evicted by due course of law.

July 16. Order for release of Richard Baxter under restraint for speaking contemptuous words against the Lords, and disobeying an order of the House. L. J., XI. 93.

July 16. Petition of Sir John Trevor, Colonel George Twisleton, and Andrew Ellis. Petitioners taking notice of an order for hearing a cause depending between them and the Earl of Derby on Wednesday next attended the clerk for an order to summon witnesses, but were informed that he could not issue forth any orders for that purpose without direction of the House, by reason whereof petitioners are straitened in time and cannot get their witnesses ready against that day. They therefore pray that a later day may be appointed, and that a letter of summons may be directed to the Countess Dowager of Derby, and an order for the attendance of the persons mentioned in the annexed paper, who are all material witnesses in the cause. L. J., XI. 93.

Annexed:—

1. List of witnesses.

2. Petition of same. That such letters of summons may be issued as will induce the Countess Dowager of Derby and Lord Chief Baron Bridgman to appear at the hearing and give evidence.

July 16. Information of William Lyme that Captain Hanberry [Henbury] committed by this House for high treason hath by the connivance of Jonathan Hicks, one of the keepers of Newgate, liberty to go about both by day and night to meet his confederates. L. J., XI. 93.

July 16. Petition of divers lords, knights, and gentlemen of Cheshire and North Wales on behalf of themselves and many others. Petitioners, having been in August last in His Majesty's service in Cheshire, were at the then next ensuing quarter sessions presented and indicted for high treason, which indictments still remain on record. They pray that the justices by whom they were presented and the juries may be disabled from bearing any office of trust, and be excepted from the general pardon. L. J., XI. 94.

July 16. Petition of James Long. Petitioner being at Oxford at the rendition thereof, and included in the articles, upon which he compounded within the six weeks prescribed, had bonds for 1,400*l.* for money lent out at interest, which bonds were in the custody of John Hall, by whose negligence or otherwise they fell into the hands of John Dove, of Salisbury, who long delayed his final answer about the restoration of them, and at last declared that they were given to him by the House of Commons, of which he was a member. By which means petitioner has been almost ruined. Forasmuch as the retaining of the bonds is clearly a breach of the articles of Oxford, and has been so adjudged in the case of Sir Edward Pye, petitioner prays that Dove may be ordered to restore them, or in case he has compounded with or released them, then that he may pay the principal and interest due upon them to petitioner. L. J., XI. 95.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same; complains that John Aland sued and obtained judgment for 100*l.* against him for certain things done by him as a committee in the county of Wilts, contrary to the articles at the rendition of Oxford. Prays that Aland may be ordered to repay the 100*l.*, and give petitioner other satisfaction.

July 16. Petition of Thomas Voysey, of Thatcham, in the county of Berks, clerk. Cornelius Holland is bound to petitioner for the payment of 150*l.*, but his whole estate is liable to be forfeited for his most detestable treason in sitting and giving judgment against the late King, whereby petitioner is in danger of losing his just debt. He prays that some relief may be afforded him.

July 17. Petition of Robert Viney, clerk; petitioner is lawfully possessed of the rectory of Barnack, in the county of Northampton, having been presented thereunto by the Earl of Exeter, the undoubted patron. On the 23rd of June last William Towers, clerk, pretending a title to the rectory obtained an order from the House to sequester the tithes and profits. Petitioner prays that the order may be discharged. L. J., XI. 98.

Annexed:—

1. Order referred to in preceding. 23 June 1660.

July 17. Petition of William Lord Mordington. Certain mills and lands within the bounds of Berwick-upon-Tweed having been purchased by petitioner's mother, the daughter and heiress of Lord Oliphant, for petitioner's benefit, were in the year 1649 sequestered for the supposed delinquency of his father James late Lord Mordington, and by an ordinance of Oliver Cromwell and his council, in the year 1654, bestowed upon the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Berwick-upon-Tweed. Petitioner prays to be restored to the possession of the mills and lands, or at least that a proviso may be granted to him that he may not be prejudiced by the Act of Indemnity.

July 17. Petition of Sir Robert Hildyard and others. In the year 1658 Thomas Harrison, pretended sheriff for the county of York, took petitioners from their habitations, and for many months under a strong guard detained them prisoners in York and Hull without laying any charge against them. They pray that Harrison may be excepted out of the Act of Pardon that they may have the benefit of the law against him.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Act of Indemnity. Endorsed: Past not.

July 17. Petition of John Hodges, of Gray's Inn. Petitioner for his loyalty suffered long imprisonment in Ireland, and was afterwards sent to England and obliged to enter into bonds to appear before the pretended Council of State to answer the accusation of high treason. He prays that the bonds may be delivered up and cancelled, and that reparation may be awarded to him from Miles Corbett and the other authors and contrivers of his sufferings.

July 17. Petition of Robert Pare, vicar of Kinoulton, in the county of Nottingham. The impropriate rectory of Kinoulton having been sequestered from Sir Jervas Clifton an order was obtained from the Committee for Plundered Ministers for the yearly sum of 50*l*. to be paid out of the profits of the rectory for an increase of maintenance for petitioner. This sum was paid for three years to John Hough, clerk to the Committee in the county of Nottingham, but petitioner having been in arms for his late Majesty, and that being known to Hough, he could never get any fruits of the order, but was menaced to be sequestered for the rest of his livelihood. Prays that Hough may be ordered to pay him the three years' rent which he has received.

July 17. Petition of Christopher Webb, clerk. Petitioner having obtained an order for securing the tithes and profits of the rectory of Gelston [Gilston], in the county of Hertford, in the hands of the churchwardens or overseers until further order, went down to publish the same in the church, but Thomas Mockett, the present possessor, would not suffer it to be read, but in opposition thereunto read His Majesty's proclamation and slighted their Lordships' order. Whereupon Humphrey Gore, a justice of the peace, called for it and caused it to be read, after which Mockett's wife snatched it out of his hands and detained it, whereby petitioner is likely to be deprived of the benefits which their Lordships intended. Prays that Mockett and his wife may be sent for to answer for their contempt.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of petitioner.

July 18. Petition of Arundell Penruddock, widow. Prays that counsel may be assigned to argue her case before the Committee to whom her former petition was referred. L. J., XI. 96.

July 18. Order for restoring to the Marquess of Winchester such of his lands as were sold without his consent. L. J., XI. 96. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of John Strode, Sheriff of Dorset, that he knows of no estates of the Marquess of Winchester in the county of Dorset that have not been passed, sold, or conveyed away singly by himself or jointly with others.

2. Draft of an Act for restoring unto John Marquess of Winchester all his honors, manors, lands, and tenements in England whereof he was in possession on the 20th day of May 1642, or at any time since. This paper is undated, and is not mentioned in the Journals.

July 18. Petition of Piercy Lord Powis. The sequestrators have for some years past taken possession of certain manors, lands, and tenements vested in petitioner and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, and by their illegal proceedings and usurped authority have sold the most part of petitioner's estate, although neither he nor his wife were ever convicted for recusancy, but for his fidelity and faithfulness to His Majesty and his father. Prays that what part of his and his wife's estate yet remains unsold by the trustees for the sale of delinquents' estates may be discharged of sequestrations, and that the arrears remaining in the tenants' hands or paid into the Exchequer may be paid to him as has already been granted to other peers. L. J., XI. 96.

July 18. Petition of Robert Beezly. Petitioner was lawfully seized of the rectory of Tingewick, in the county of Bucks, but was many years since thrust out only for his loyalty to His Majesty. Prays that the profits of the living may be secured in the hands of the churchwardens or overseers until he pays his tit by due course of law. July 18. Adm. of the Free Church that Sir John Thompson of the County of Devon presented the young Captain Astley's petition, his trial before the High Court of Justice was adjourned until Wednesday in the next term.

July 19. Order for the King's counsel to prepare a Bill to reduce the interest of money. L. J., XI. 97. Ibid. 1608.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of an Act prohibiting any person to take above the rate of six pounds for loan of one hundred pounds for a year.

July 9. Petition of divers of the nobility of Ireland whose names are subscribed on the behalf of themselves and the rest of the peerage of that kingdom. By the Bill for poll money petitioners are assessed to pay according to their several titles and qualities equal with the nobility of England, notwithstanding that neither in Parliament nor by the proceedings of any court of justice in England they receive the privilege of peerage. Having been assessed by the late conventions in Ireland, they have paid to general poll bills and taxes according to their several titles and qualities of peers of Ireland, and must still be liable to whatever taxes the Parliament of Ireland imposes upon them. They therefore pray that by some proviso to the Bill care may be taken that they may not be compelled to pay the taxes here, since it will be a great oppression that those who enjoy the privilege of peerage in Ireland only should be forced to pay the tax assessed upon them both in England and Ireland. L. J., XI. 98.

July 19. Order upon report from the Committee upon Lord Paulett's cause. L. J., XI. 98. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of preceding.

1. Draft of preceding.
2. Proposed proviso to the Bill for confirmation of Judicial Proceedings directed to be brought in by the preceding order.

3. Copy of preceding.

July 19. Petition of William Brewse, patron of the rectory of Little Wenham, in the county of Suffolk. Samuel Tayler, the late incumbent, was by reason of certain articles of scandal preferred against him to the Committee of Plundered Ministers sequestered, and by the pretended power then in being one was placed to officiate the cure and receive the profits without the privity or consent of petitioner. Tayler has lately obtained an order for the profits to be sequestered into the hands of the churchwardens and overseers until the title be determined, but there is but one person in the parish who bears the office of churchwarden and overseer, who is a poor and aged man, altogether insufficient and unable to secure the profits, which petitioner prays may be sequestered into his own hands until the title shall be determined by law, or order taken for his restoration.

July 19. Affidavit of John Gratwick, of West Grinstead, in the county of Sussex, respecting the service upon John Tredcroft of the order of the 22nd of June last, for securing the profits of the rectory of West Grinstead in the hands of the churchwardens and overseers.

July 20. Order of the House of Commons for the instrument for proclaiming the High Court of justice for judging the late King, together with the journal of the proceedings to be sent to the Lords. C. J., VIII. 96. In chancery.

July 20. Petition of Thomas Cabech. Petitioner for his loyalty to his late Majesty was dispossessed of the rectory of Beechamwell, Norfolk, by Mr. Violet, countenanced by the Committee for Plundered Ministers. Petitioner prays that the profits of the living may be sequestered into the hands of the churchwardens until the title thereto be determined by law.

July 21. Petition of Amosell Pease, dock, Lane Grove, and Elizabeth Poulton, widows. Petitioners have a petition depending in the House against Serjeant John Glyme, a member of the House of Commons, and others, for high treason and the murder of petitioners' husbands in which cases privilege has never been allowed. They pray that a summons may be granted against Glyme to appear before the Committee on the day appointed for hearing.

July 21. Copy of proceedings

July 21. Petition of Sarah Calcott, widow, daughter of Benjamin Croker, deceased. Petitioner details at length the various hardships and privations attending her life, and will refer to the lands left by Nathaniel Berkeley in the seventh year of the reign of Richard II. for the endowment of a free grammar school at Wotton-under-Edge. She prays that John Smith and Mary Smith, executors of John Smith, may be called upon to answer the charges made by her against John Smith, the pretended purchaser of the school lands, and that the revenues may be duly settled for the future.

July 23. Order for the Lieutenant of the Tower to examine Colonel Hacker touching the original warrant for the King's execution, and to return the warrant to the House on the morrow. L. J., XI. 101. In extenso. Noted, "According to the content of this order I haue " examined Coll. Hacker, who confeseth that he hath " the warrant in y^e order menconed at his house in July 23. Petition of Colonel John Hutchinson. See

L. J., XI. 101.

To the Right Honorable the Lords assembled in Parliament.

The humble Petition of John Hutchinson, Esquire,
Most humbly sheweth,

That whereas y^e Honorable House of Commons vpon his humble petition did extend their clemency and mercy to y^r L^{ts}ships Petitioner, in not nominating him one of the seven exempted out of the Act of generall pardon & obliuion, for life, and alsoe past a vote that your Petitioner shall not be within that clause of exception in the Act of generall pardon & obliuion as to any fine or forfeiture of any part of his estate; & were pleased to expresse in the sayd resoules that this fauour was extended to y^r Petitioner vpon his signall repentance wth how early and reall it was, his deportment for many yeares past hath made cleare; and those actions being attested by many honorable persons who haue certified the same vnder their hands.

Your Petitioner therefore most humbly prays y^r L^{ds}hips that he having bene the first (when he had the honor to sitt in the House of Commons) that openly layd clayme to his M^{ties} pardon and freely gaue v^p himselfe to be disposed of by the Parliament, that after he hath bene rayd to such high hopes of preservation, both as to life & fortunes, by the votes of the House of Commons, y^r L^{ds}hips would not now cast him downe from them, but confirme that favour & mercy they haue bene pleas'd to shew him, vpon the humble & sorrowfull acknowledgement of those crimes wherinto sedned iudgement, & not mallice, nor any other selfe respect vnfortunately betreyd him; & vpon his serious profession of future loyalty w^{ch} he hopes will find as charitable a beliefe with your Lordships as it did in the House of Commons.

And your Petitioner shall euer pray, &c.

J. HUTCHINSON.

These are to certify that about seven yeares agoe, and from time to time euer since, Collonell Hutchinson hath declared his desire of the Kings Maiesties returne to his kingdomes, and his owne resolutions to assist in bringing his Maiesty back: and in order therevnto hath kept a correspondency with some of vs, when signes haue bene on foote for that purpose; and hath vpon all occasions bene readie to assist and protect the Kings friends in any of their troubles, and to employ all his interests to serue them. He gaue the Earle of Rochester notice & opportunity to escape when Cromwells ministers had discovered him the last time he was employd in his Maiesties service here in England. He receiued into his house, & securd there, Arms prepard for the Kings service, well knowing to what intent they were provided, and resolving to ioyne with vs when there had bene occasion to vse them. For these, & other things, Cromwell some time before his death had a very iealous eie over him, & had intentions to secure him, which some of vs vnderstanding gaue him notice of; That vsurper being the more exasperated against him, because he could neuer by all his allurements win him to the least compliance with or action vnder his authority. Nor were his resolutions of serving the King only in Cromwells time, but when the Armaie invited the remainder of the House of Commons to returne to Westminster

July 23. Petition of Peter Heylinge, D.D., Rector of the parish church of Old Alresford, in the county of Southampton, with the chapels annexed. Petitioner's living has been sequestered from him since the year 1645 for waiting on his late Majesty as chaplain in ordinary, when he was pleased to make his residence in Oxford at the time of the war. Prays that the profits may be sequestered in the hands of the churchwardens and overseers until the title to the living is determined by a trial at law.

July 23. Petition of George Dance, Vicar of Kidderminster, in the county of Worcester. Petitioner, who was about 14 years since sequestered out of his vicarage for his allegiance to his late Majesty, prays that he may have the benefit of the order for detaining the tithes in the hands of the churchwardens and overseers.

July 23. Petition of Leonard Alexander, Rector of Iping, in the county of Sussex. Petitioner, who has for many years been sequestered from his rectory, prays for an order for the churchwardens and overseers to detain the tithes.

July 24. Petition of Thomas Lister. See L. J., XI. 115:—

To the right hon^{ble} the Lords Assembled in Parliament.

The humble Petic^{on} of Thomas Lister, esq^r, Sheweth,

That yo^r Petic^{on} maketh bold in all humility hereby to represent the truth of his Case, That he was not in the howse, nor in the towne, but one hundred myles distant from it when the members of Parliment were pulled out of the Howse by the Souldiers, as likewise when the order was made for His late Maiestyes Triall, That immediately vpon his returne he was sum^{oned} to appeare att the high Court of Justice, and went thither to vnderstand the Cause, where finding it was for the Triall of the King he altogether disliked the same, and Came away leauing the Court sitting, and neuer was there but that one tyme, yett euery day after sum^{oned} to appeare, though he hearith he is represented to haue bene the same day in the Paynted Chamber, w^{ch} he doth denye, and is much afflicted and heartily sorry that he was there that one tyme, which proceeded through his weakness and Inadvertancy, For w^{ch} he humbly Craueth the mercy and fauor of this hon^{ble} Howse.

And he shall euer pray, &c.

July 24. Petition of James Smith, physician. In the year 1648 a petition was drawn in the names of the committee, gentry, ministry, and inhabitants of the county of Leicester to the House of Commons, desiring that his late Majesty might be brought to trial, and that personal justice might equally and speedily be administered. The Committee and sequestrators for the county forced many of the inhabitants to subscribe the petition, threatening those that denied them with sequestration and plundering. Petitioner refused, for which his house was plundered and all that he had taken away to the value of 4,000*l*. and upwards. He prays that the Committee and sequestrators may be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity and general pardon, and that he may have satisfaction out of their estates.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition referred to in preceding.

July 24. Copy of petition of the well affected of North Wales to Thomas Lord Fairfax, General of all the forces in England and Wales. They condemn the Members of Parliament who were for treating with the King; they declare themselves resolved to sink or swim, live or die with his Excellency and the army, who have bound kings with chains and nobles with fetters of iron, and in conclusion they say let nothing hinder the speedy executing of justice upon all delinquents, especially the grand adversary of the kingdom, let them go to the pit, and let no man stay them, for better, as Solomon saith, is a roaring lion, a raging bear, than a wicked ruler. [Endorsed] 24 Jul. 1660, North Wales, petic^{on} read at grand Co'mittee for the Bill of Indemnity. King's death.

July 25. The following petitions of ministers are similar to those presented on the 23rd of June last. The petitioners claim the livings, and pray that the tithes and other profits may be secured in the hands of the churchwardens or overseers until the titles thereto are determined.

July 26. Petition of Bridget Wright, widow; in 1643 his late Majesty sent Captain Thomas Bird to make a garrison of Eccleshall Castle, then the habitation of petitioner and her husband, the Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield; they were besieged about ten weeks; while helping in the works of the castle petitioner received a wound by a shot in the shoulder, of which she lay sick and weak for six months; her husband died and lay for five weeks unburied; the Queen hearing of their distressed condition sent Lord Lowthberrie with forces to relieve them, and petitioner being wounded then went out of the castle, leaving her servants with Lord Lowthberrie's soldiers to keep it; they were afterwards obliged to deliver it up upon conditions to Sir William Brereton, one of the conditions being that petitioner should have all the goods, plate, jewels, and money belonging to her, contrary to which Sir William Brereton has converted them to his own use and refuses to give them up, amounting as they do to the value of 5,000*l*.; petitioner has lain five years in prison for debts contracted by her husband in the time of the late wars, and is in a most necessitous condition. She prays that Sir William Brereton may be ordered to make her satisfaction for her goods, plate, jewels, and money, which would both maintain her and satisfy her creditors, and that this her right against him may be excepted in the Act of general pardon. L. J., XI. 160.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.

2. Proposed proviso to except Sir William Brereton from the Act of Indemnity.

July 26. Petition of the sons and executors of Sir Peter Rychaut, K^t, deceased; pray for satisfaction of a debt of 2,400*l.*, out of the estate of Sir Arthur Haslegrave, of whom they accuse him of having unjustly extorted a lease, and then after having procured the sequestration of his estate. L. J., XI. 106.

July 26. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Petitions. L. J., XI. 106.

July 26. Petition of Edward Heath, Esq., and Francis Heath, gent.; in 1643 petitioners were duly admitted to the office of Justices Bevisham, &c. of the King's Bench, then forfeited by Robert Dewhurst and Justinian Paget, for not attending the court according to the King's proclamation. Dewhurst is dead, and Paget never returned to Oxford, but possessed himself of the office of Westminster, and has in many ways rendered himself incapable of holding it, while petitioners by adhering to the King have not till now been in a position to lay claim thereto; they pray to be re-admitted or that Paget may be suspended until the title to the office has been decided at law.

July 26. Petition of Sir John Stawell; his estate was sold contrary to the articles of Exeter, and he has been reduced to such want by imprisonment, and by being kept out of his estate, that he is not able to recover possession in a legal way, or even to subsist, as his rents are kept in the tenants' hands by their Lordships' order of the 10th of May last; he therefore prays that the seizing and selling of his estate may be declared null and void, and that he may be restored to the possession, with all arrears of rents and profits. See L. J., XI. 23. 137.

July 26. Petition of Michael Warton, Esq., of Beverley, in the county of York; petitioner's grandfather Sir Michael Wharton was plundered and sequestered for his affection to the late King, to his damage of 30,000*l.*, or thereabouts, and forced to compound for his estate; petitioner's father, being a member of Parliament, was excluded the House for attending the King at Oxford, and petitioner after his father's death compounded for his estate, and he and his grandfather were besides forced to pay large sums for the fifth and twentieth parts; after all this Colonel John Fielder, pretending that some arrears of pay were due to him, obtained a pretended order of Parliament for payment out of estates compounded for at an under value that he should discover, and though already satisfied out of the profits of the Deanery and Free School of Westminster, he, by procuring persons to swear to false values, extorted a sum of 2,000*l.* out of the estate of petitioner's grandfather, and converted it to his own use; prays that Fielder may be excepted out of the general Act of pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso, excepting Fielder from protection against legal proceedings.

July 26. Petition of Anne, the wife of Peter Du Moulin, Doctor in Divinity; in 1645 petitioner's husband was ejected for his loyalty out of the rectory of Wheldrake, York, and Henry Byart took possession, and has ever since held the same, and has by his influence with those in power evaded payment of the fifth part of the yearly value ordered to be paid to the wives and children of sequestered ministers, having only paid petitioner one 20*l.*, though the rectory has been worth 200*l.* per annum; petitioner and her husband were therefore forced to serve for their livelihood, and have no legal remedy. She prays that the arrears may be paid out of Byart's goods, that the tithes and profits of the living may be secured in the hands of responsible persons, and Byart excepted out of the Act Indemnity.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Committee for Plundered Ministers threatening to sequester the living from Byart, unless he should pay the fifth part due to Du Moulin's wife. 18 Sept. 1646.

July 26. Application for an order that Anne Tisser, who holds the Gatehouse, part of Worcester House, and other tenants who hold adjoining houses called Carlisle Rents, may be summoned to answer for their contempt in not giving them up pursuant to the order for restoring the Marquess of Worcester to his estate. See L. J., XI. 105.

July 26. Petition of Sarah Rodney, widow, relict of General Rodney, deceased, complains that John Cole, of Odiham, Hants, combining with his brother-in-law, John Cole, of London, in the year 1649 set up a vacated Statute Staple for 1,000*l.*, which was illegally extended by John Stewkly, then sheriff of the county, who at midnight broke up the doors of her house and threw herself and family out of possession, seizing their goods and furniture, &c., to the value of 3,600*l.*; in the year 1656 they obtained a judgment under which they ought to have received satisfaction out of Cole's estate, but by Lisle's influence sitting in judicature, and the partial delays allowed by him, Cole by fraudulent settlements and obscuring of his person was enabled to render the judgment ineffectual, and now by lapse of time petitioner is deprived of her just remedy at law against the sheriff, and is destitute of all relief by any ordinary course of justice; she prays the House to give her satisfaction out of the estates of Cole, Lisle, or Stewkley. See L. J., XI. 140.

Annexed:—

1. Mrs. Rodney's case.

July 26. Certificate from General Monck, Duke of Albemarle, in favour of William Lenthall, late Speaker of the House of Commons.

These are to certify, That having particular notice of the Deportment of William Lenthall, Esq^r. late Speaker I found him very instrumentall in the restoring our nationall Happinesse. In Scotland, att Berwick, all the way of my March to London, hee furnished and supplied mee with frequent and important Intelligence, had a very signall hand in breaking and dividing the late Officers and Sould^rs of the Army heere, very violentlie opposed (and prevented in a great measure) the Oath of Abjuration, refused and hindered the issuing out any New Writts to patch and piece vppe that House, whereof hee was Speaker, expedited the Returne of the seclused Members and dissolution of the Longe Parliam^t and vpon private Consultations with mee was very pressing and importune, and I am sufficiently assured very Cordiall for Restoring his Ma^{ty} to his Dominions.

If these services of his are sufficient to over ballance his faults, which have bin the Effects of his feare and Frailty, I hope for the Encouragement of all seasonable Returnes to Loyalty noe person will thinke butt that hee has merited att least to bee forgiven. Given vnder my hand and seale att the Cock-pitt, the 26th day of July 1660.

July 27. Information that Michael Torwood, servant to the Earl of Oxford, has been arrested contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 107.

July 27. Petition of Nicholas Dingley, minister of the rectory of Kingstone, in the county of Kent. Petitioner has for divers years peaceably enjoyed the rectory, to which he was presented by Frederick Primrose, Doctor in Physic, the undoubted patron. Their Lordships, upon a suggestion that the rectory is a sequestration, have ordered the detaining the profits in the hands of the churchwardens, whereby petitioner, his wife, and six children are like to suffer great want and misery; he therefore prays that the order may be suspended. L. J., XI. 108.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 23 June 1666.

July 27. Speech delivered by the King this day expressing his desire for the speedy passing of the Bill for Indemnity and Oblivion. In the King's handwriting, L. J., XI. 108. In ead. usq.

July 27. Letter from Sir William Morice, at Whitehall, to the Lords of the Committee for Petitions. Is commanded to signify His Majesty's pleasure concerning the petition of Robert Long for his estate in Gualtres, that the Committee proceed to do Long such justice and favour as the equity of his case and former sufferings for His Majesty shall deserve, notwithstanding any interest that might accrue to His Majesty by the forfeiture of William Say or Slingsby Bethell.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Robert Long. Petitioner's estate in Gualtres (?), in the county of York, was about July 1651, by Act of the pretended House of Commons, ordered to be sold for his supposed delinquency, and a contract was made by the trustees at Drury House for the sale thereof in the name of one Tandy as the purchaser, but to the use of William Say, one of the late King's judges, now excepted for life and estate. Say passed over the estate to Slingsby Bethell, one of the Council of State, to that part of the late Parliament called the Rump, who, with others of the Council, abjured and renounced His Majesty and the rest of the royal family, and is otherwise a person of known ill affection to the Government. Petitioner prays to be restored to the possession of his estate.

July 30. Petition of John Earl of Lauderdale. The late Countess of Home, petitioner's mother-in-law, left certain copyhold messuages and lands in Highgate and Aldersgate Street to her daughter for life, and after the death of the Countess petitioner and his wife entered into all the houses and enjoyed the same. In 1651 Alderman John Ireton, pretending that the lands in Highgate belonged to petitioner, who for his loyalty was then deemed a delinquent, obtained a grant of them from the usurpers, and has ever since enjoyed the same. The houses in Aldersgate Street were also sold to William Dudley though no money was passed either by him or Ireton. The whole of the furniture in the houses was sold, and out of the furniture of the houses in Aldersgate Street Edmund Temple received 600*l.* as being discovered by him, though that furniture was bequeathed to petitioner's daughter. Petitioner prays to be restored to the possession of the messuage and lands at Highgate and the houses in Aldersgate Street, the 600*l.*, and any of the furniture he can discover.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

July 30. Petition of Sir Henry Puckering alias Newton, Bart., and Sir John Bayle, Bart., who married Jane, the only surviving daughter of Sir Thomas Puckering. In the eleventh year of the late King Sir Thomas Puckering made his will, and left Sir Symon Archer, John Wightwicke, and Francis Graner his executors, and appointed that the surplusage of his personal estate, and the rents and profits of his lands, after payment of his debts, legacies, &c., should be put into a chest to be kept until Jane Puckering, then about five years of age, should attain the age of twenty-one years. After the death of Sir Thomas, which happened in 1636, the executors received the personal estate and the rents of his lands, and put the surplusage into a chest as directed by the will until the year 1642, when John Wightwicke, in whose house the chest was placed by consent of the executors, left the city of Coventry where he then resided, went into the King's quarters, and died at Worcester in 1645. The chest remained concealed until 1646, when the house was forcibly entered by soldiers at the instigation of William Purefoy, deceased, Thomas Basnett, and other Committee men, then members of the garrison. Mrs. Wightwicke and her servants were kept long in prison for refusing to discover where the chest was, and a guard of soldiers was placed in the house, who breaking up the vaults and narrowly searching found the chest, which was seized and disposed of by Purefoy and his confederates, the money therein amounting to 2,600*l.*, which they kept, as the deceased Mr. Wightwicke's own money. Petitioners pray that Basnett and his confederates may be examined by what authority they took the money, and how they disposed thereof, and that they may be ordered to restore the same with damages, or that they may be excepted by a proviso out of the Act of Oblivion and General Pardon.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso excepting Thomas Basnett and others from the Act of Indemnity.

July 31. Draft order concerning the Forest of Dean. L. J., XI. 111.

July 31. Petition of Sir John Owen. Petitioner for his loyalty to his late Majesty was in the year 1648 committed prisoner to Denbigh Castle, and from thence brought to Windsor Castle, there kept close prisoner for six months, then brought to St. James', and afterwards, with Duke Hamilton, the Earls of Holland and Norwich, and Lord Capel, contrary to law, arraigned by persons who took upon themselves the title of a High Court of Justice, and unjustly condemned to be beheaded, though by God's mercy he escaped the execution of that sentence. He prays that all those who were actors therein may receive punishment, and that reparation may be made to him for his sufferings.

July 31. Petition of Sir John Awbery, of Llantrithyd, in the county of Glamorgan. Petitioner prays that a proviso presented to their Lordships by David Jenkins to be inserted in the Bill for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings, whereby a decree obtained against Jenkins may be excepted out of the Bill, may not be admitted until petitioner is indemnified for paying 15,000*l.* to John Earnley, which sum was lent to petitioner by Jenkins out of the estate of the late Lewis Thomas, of which estate Jenkins was trustee, and of which Earnley has now come into possession.

July 31. Petition of Anne Ghossipp, widow. The rectory of St. Tudy, Cornwall, was in the year 1646, by the powers then in being, sequestered from petitioner's husband for his affection to the late King, and remained so until his death in March last. The present occupant of the rectory withholds from petitioner all the profits allotted her by the said powers to her great impoverishing and undoing. She prays that an order may be granted to compel him to pay her the profits so long unpaid.

July 31. Petition of Nathaniel Jones, of Bridgwater, in the county of Somerset, clerk. Petitioner was sequestered in the year 1648 for his fidelity to the late King; whereupon he appealed to Haberdashers' Hall, but they not being empowered to give relief in such cases his name was inserted in an Act of the then Parliament for sale, whereby he was deprived not only of his spiritual employment, but his own temporal means, and his wife's maiden estate were also sold. Petitioner prays that his temporal estate so unjustly sold may be restored to him.

Aug. 1. Petition of Colonel Mathew Thomlinson. L. J., XI. 113:—

To the right Hon^{ble} the Lords assembled in Parliament.

Sheweth,

That yo^r pet^r vpon some mistake hath his name inserted amongst those who sate and gave Judgment vpon the late King though hee was never present vpon any proceedings therein but had a recomenda^{on} by the late King to his sonne now King in a way of respect and favour by M^r Henry Seymour. That yo^r pet^r vpon informac^{on} given to the House of Com^{ons} was by their order 17^o Maij last exempted when those that sate in Judgment on the late King were ordered to bee secured. That yo^r Lord^{ps} also were pleased in yo^r order, dated 18^o Maij last, likewise to except yo^r pet^r out of that number.

That in his Ma^{ty} Proclamacon dated 6^o Junij, requiring those by name that sate in Judgm^t when sentence was pronounced against the late King to appeare within 14 daies yo^r pet^r name is not menc^{on}ed.

That yo^r pet^r (as hee is informed had a further Testimony of yo^r Lord^{ps} favour in preserving him out of that number on Monday last being the 23th of July this present moneth.

Vpon all which may it please yo^r Lordships

Forasmuch as yo^r pet^r hath hitherto obteyned the fauour of both houses, And forasmuch as yo^r pet^r had a speciall recomenda^{on} of favor by the late King to his sonne now King by Mr. Henry Seymour which surely would not haue been if hee had seen yo^r pet^r in that Court Forasmuch also as yo^r pet^r professes in the presence of God and before yo^r Lord^{ps} that hee never was present in that Court, or any Com^{ee} thereof vpon any debate or consultac^{on} whatever The Premises Considered yo^r pet^r humbly praises yo^r Lord^{ps} to take his case into yo^r most graue and wise considerac^{on} and to preserve yo^r pet^r out of that number who sate as Judges vpon the King

And hee shall ever pray, &c.

MATH THOMLINSON.

Aug. 1. Petition of Thomas Hunt, gent.; was taken in the action at Salisbury in 1654 for endeavouring the restoring of his sacred Majesty, was convicted of high treason against Oliver Cromwell before a pretended commission, and sentenced to death, but the night before the time appointed for his execution by God's direction and the assistance of his two sisters, he escaped out of gaol, for which his sisters endured two years and a half imprisonment; petitioner fled beyond seas to preserve his life and endured much hardship; prays that the Commissioners who sentenced him may be so far excepted from the general indemnity that he may have leave to proceed against them at law.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to except William Steele, Robert Nicholas, and others out of the Bill of Indemnity.

Aug. 1. Petition of John Deane, gent.; was taken and sentenced in the same manner as preceding petitioner, and at great expense obtained his reprieve, but suffered two years' imprisonment; prays liberty to proceed against the Commissioners who sentenced him.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to except the Commissioners out of the Bill of Indemnity.

Aug. 1. Petition of Richard Porter, of Launcells, in the county of Cornwall; after suffering much for his loyalty to the late King, petitioner compounded for his estate; the trustees that sat at Drury House sold his manors of Bodiniell and Mills, worth 5,000*l.*, to Daniel Elye, of Plymouth, for a very inconsiderable sum, though served with an order from the pretended court of articles to forbear; petitioner prays that Elye, who has cut down timber to a great value, may be ordered to give up possession of the manors, and to render an account of the profits from the time of his purchase.

Aug. 1. Petition of Richard Browne, of Lockeridge, in the county of Wilts; petitioner set forth his sons and servants for His Majesty's service in the late war, and thereby lost at least 5,000*l.*, and whilst his lands were under sequestration 32 acres were by an order from Haberdashers' Hall given to Wm. Goodrich, a major under Lambert, who has now obtained a command under Colonel Bethell, and keeps possession of petitioner's land to this day; while John Gorges, treasurer for the county of Somerset under Cromwell, has received more than 200*l.* of petitioner's rents; prays that as he is too poor to contest at law the 200*l.* may be repaid to him, and that he may be restored to his estate.

Aug. 1. Petition of Colonel Henry Bradshawe to the Committee for Privileges; as an officer under the then General Cromwell he was commanded to be present at the court martial at Chester for the trial of James late Earl of Derby, and was sometimes present, but never subscribed the warrant for his execution, but on the contrary laboured to preserve his life; at the instance of the now Earl he presented a petition to Colonel Mackworth president of the court, and at the request of the late Earl wrote to the then president of the Council of State with the same object; petitioner has but a small estate, and has a wife and eleven children to maintain, and has never intermeddled with the estate of the Earl's family or done anything maliciously against them and therefore craves the benefit of his Majesty's pardon, intending for the future to show himself capable of it by demeaning himself as an obedient subject.

Aug. 1. Petition of Ezechiel Pownall, rector of Wraxall, in the county of Somerset; the House on petitioner's application ordered the profits of the living to be secured in the hands of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor until the title at law should be decided, but upon false suggestions of Dr. Gorges, and without hearing petitioner, this order has been recalled; prays to be heard and that Gorges may be called upon to make good his suggestions, or else that the first order may be confirmed.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding. 14 Aug.

Aug. 2. Draft of an Act towards the reparation and satisfaction to be made unto George Earl of Bristol out of the manors and lands of Carew Raleigh, Esq., for the sum of 6,500*l.*, which was raised out of the said Earl's estate, and paid to the said Carew Raleigh for the redemption of certain of the said Earl's lands, given to the said Carew Raleigh by the late pretended Parliament. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, passed the House of Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 115, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Colonel Carew Raleigh; in consideration of an annuity of 400*l.* per annum payable out of the Exchequer, with four years' arrears, and in consideration of the loss of his father's life and whole estate, the Parliament gave petitioner 500*l.* per annum out of the Earl of Bristol's estate then appointed to be sold; and at the earnest desire of Lady Digby, now Countess of Bristol, petitioner sold his annuity to her for 6,500*l.*; and the State being then in the heat of the Dutch war he lent 6,000*l.* of this money for the use of the navy, then thought a great service, for which 500*l.* per annum was afterwards allotted to him out of Lord Craven's estate appointed to be sold for the use of the navy; as petitioner has lost both land and money, Lord Craven having his estate again, the State petitioner's money, and the Earl of Bristol the lands purchased of petitioner without fraud or force, he conceives the House will not think it reasonable that the Earl of Bristol should be relieved against his own act out of petitioner's poor estate to the utter ruin of him and his whole family, especially as the Earl of Bristol's Bill is so diametrically opposite to the Act of Indemnity.

Aug. 2. Draft order for assigning 40,000*l.* for a month's pay for the army. L. J., XI. 115. In extenso.

Aug. 2. Petition of Edward Marquess of Worcester; he has been dispossessed of his whole estate and suffered very great hardships only for his loyalty to his late Majesty, and by reason of his necessities was forced to pass his estates to some who had got possession of them under pretence of public titles for less than a hundredth part of their value. Prays that all persons to whom he shall repay the sums paid by them may be ordered to vacate their conveyances.

Aug. 2. Petition of Abraham Dowcett, gent.; was for a long time a faithful servant to his late Majesty, waiting on him in the Isle of Wight, and there at the hazard of his life and fortune attempted His Majesty's escape, which was almost effected, when a severer hand of Providence thought fit to ruin the design. Not long afterwards the resolutions of some of those men in authority in the army to extirpate His Majesty's name and issue, being then in their infancy, and not appearing barefaced, they endeavoured first to destroy His Majesty by the hands of a private assassin, Major Rolph, now prisoner in Newgate, who, being accused by petitioner of endeavouring to pistol His Majesty, was imprisoned by order of the House, but by the prevailing of his own party in the House of Commons was afterwards rewarded with 150*l.*, whilst petitioner was sequestered, imprisoned, and constrained to leave England for two years, all which has cost him at least 1,500*l.* Prays for consideration and satisfaction.

Aug. 2. Petition of Walter Powell, sequestered and ejected contrary to law out of the vicarage of Standish, in the county of Gloucester; the House made order for securing the profits of the living in the hands of the churchwardens and overseers, but they have slighted the order as appears by the letter of Nathaniel Beard. Petitioner prays that they may be sent for to answer for their contempt, and that William Hill, who is now in possession of the vicarage by an unjust presentation from Oliver, late Protector, may be ordered to show his ordination and presentation.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for securing the profits of the living in the hands of the churchwardens, &c. 23 June 1660.
2. Letter from Nathaniel Beard to Mr. Walter Powell; the order is not valued a pin, because it has no seal nor the hands of any of the Parliament men to it; the vicarage hay is carried and the corn will be as soon as it is ripe. 15 July.

[Aug. 2.] Amendment to the Bill for poll money, being a schedule of names of Commissioners for the Cinque Ports. C. J., VIII. 109.

Aug. 3. Draft order for bestowing 10,000*l.* upon Sir George Booth as a mark of respect for his eminent services and great sufferings. L. J., XI. 117. In extenso.

Aug. 6. Certificate that Peter Maydwell made a resignation of the rectory of Weston-sub-Edge, Gloucester, and cannot therefore claim any right to the profits thereof under the general order of the House for securing the profits of livings in the hands of the churchwardens, &c.

Aug. 6. Draft order of the Committee on the Bill for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings for the consideration of the proviso offered by Lady Baltinglas.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Anne Viscountess Baltinglas. Prays that a common recovery which she suffered in 1654 of certain lands which she inherited from her father, Sir Peter Temple, under a settlement made upon his marriage with Anne, daughter of Sir Arthur Throckmorton, may be excepted out of the Act for Confirmation of Judicial Proceedings, as she entered into it by misadvice to secure some of her husband's debts, and has thereby unwittingly forfeited one moiety of her estate to Sir Richard Temple, a younger son of Sir Peter by another wife. (Undated.)
2. Printed copy of case on behalf of Lord and Lady Baltinglas.
3. Sir Richard Temple's case.
4. Proposed proviso.

Aug. 7. Draft of an Act for restoring unto William Marquess of Newcastle all his honours, manors, lands, and tenements in England, whereof he was in possession on the three and twentieth day of October one thousand six hundred and forty-two, or at any time since. Read 1st this day. Received the royal assent on the 13th of Sept. L. J., XI. 119, &c.

Aug. 7. Draft of an Act for restoring to John Lord Poulett and his heirs certain messuages and lands in the county of Dorset. Read 1st, 2^a, and committed; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 119, 125.

Aug. 8. Draft of an Act for restoring to Charles Lord Gerrard, Baron of Brandon, all his honours, manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, whereof he was in possession on the three and twentieth day of October one thousand six hundred and forty-one, or at any time sithence. Read 1st this day. Received the royal assent on the 13th of Sept. L. J., XI. 120, &c.

Aug. 8. Petition of John Cooke, rector of West Thorney Island, in the county of Sussex; on the 25th of June last petitioner obtained their Lordships' order of sequestration and charged the churchwardens therewith, but John Laynge, the present possessor, with others, has by force of arms detained the glebe and reaped the corn before it was ripe, and carried it and a great part of the tithe corn away in the night and laid the same in a hired barn. Petitioner prays that Laynge and his confederates may be apprehended to answer for their contempt.

Aug. 8. Affidavit in support of preceding petition.

Aug. 9. Copy of order to stay the demolishing churches in Exeter, &c. L. J., XI. 122. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of proposed addition to preceding. 10 Aug.
2. Application for an order for attendance of witnesses.

Aug. 9. Petition of John Halke, rector of Upminster, in the county of Essex; for the relief of ejected ministers the House ordered that the profits of benefices should be sequestered into the hands of the churchwardens or overseers, but in petitioner's parish the churchwardens are the men who prosecuted him to a sequestration, they have continued churchwardens for several years, and one of them has had part of the tithes for the last fourteen years, and has allowed a portion to the parties who have officiated, the present incumbent having been a mean tradesman, a wheelwright. Petitioner prays that Agmondisham Pickayes, and others, responsible men, may be authorised to gather in the tithes and profits of the rectory until the case is determined. L. J., XI. 122.

Annexed:—

1. Another similar petition. (Undated.)

Aug. 10. Affidavit of Henry Widdrington; that the Earl of Northumberland and his tenants have been turned out of possession of certain lands in the county of Northumberland by pretence of some surreptitious judgments gained last term in feigned actions. L. J., XI. 122.

Aug. 10. Petition of William Heveningham:

To y^e right Hon^{ble} y^e Lords assembled in Parliament. The humble petition of Will^m. Heveningham, Esqr., Most humbly sheweth,

That y^or Petitioner hopeth y^or Lo^{pp}s haue not that displeasure agst him as he hath sorrow & greife of heart agst himselfe, that by y^e threatenings of y^e cunning Contrivers of that horride murder of y^e late King p^ttending y^t nothing was intended by them agst y^e life of his Ma^{tie} he was vnhappyly betrayed into that misfortune to be p^rsent in that vniust Court; but when he saw their intentions, did not consent therunto by holding vpp his hand, nor the signing & sealing that fatall warrant for his sd Ma^{ties} death, & neuer was acquainted or prerie to anie of their secret plotts & contrivances or gott any advantage by them; and did euer oppose what might anie waye strengthen or countenance y^e late Oliuer or his sonns tirannicall gouernment: Hee did alsoe order his brother Jaye (a gentleman of Northfolke) in February last, to take vpp five hundred poulds for his Ma^{ties} service, which was iustified to S^r Horatio Townshend & S^r Rob^t Kempe, and was y^e first that surrendered himselfe vppon y^e late proclamacon. And although nothing can excuse this great offence, yet he hopeth it may speake something in extenuacon of this fault. And for y^or petitioners Estate it is much ouerualued & in Joynture, engaged & lyable to pay large annuities; besides a great debt of y^e petitioners. Alsoe y^e portions & fortunes of y^e widow & sixe children (that he is intrusted with) of his only brother Coll. Arthur Heveningham, deceased, whoe was raise and levy the sum of two thousand six hundred and eighty pounds, and damages, out of the manors and lands of John Hutchinson, Esquire. The draft recites that Robert Lord Lexington, by the name of Robert Sutton, Esquire, Sir Thomas Williamson, Knight and Baronet, deceased, and others did, in 1642, become bound for several sums of money amounting in all to 2,680*l.*, employed for the service of the late King in the garrisons of Newark; that these debts were sequestered, and by order of the late pretended authority paid to or for the use of John Hutchinson upon his own discovery, and unjust prosecution, and therefore enacts that Robert Lord Lexington and Sir Thomas Williamson, son and heir of Sir Thomas Williamson, deceased, shall enter into possession of the lands of John Hutchinson and receive the profits thereof until the said sums of money, with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent. per annum, be repaid to the creditors. L. J., XI. 125. This Bill passed the House of Lords, but was thrown out on the second reading in the House of Commons. C. J., VIII. 205.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.

Aug. 13. Petition of John Hutchinson, Esquire; he understands that there is a Bill brought in against him to levy certain sums of money upon his estate, which would again plunge into ruin both him and his unhappy family, and sink them in that port where they were blessing God for the safety they thought they had arrived to by their Lordships' gracious clemency; petitioner therefore most humbly prays that their Lordships would not destroy their own mercies before they allow him a favourable hearing of what he can herein answer for himself. L. J., XI. 125.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.

2. Paper containing copies of orders of the Committee for advance of money, &c. made in 1648 for levying from the estates of Robert Sutton and others the sums of money advanced by Mr. Chambers, of Hull, and others, for the King's service.

3. Paper containing copy of order of the Committee for the advance of moneys, &c. for payment of 2,672*l.* to Colonel Hutchinson in discharge of his arrears of pay. 25 July 1649. Copy of his receipts for the same, 19 and 22 Oct. 1649; and copy of the receipts in the Treasurer's books for the sums of money owing by Robert Sutton and the others to Gilbert Atkinson, a delinquent, and to Hercules Clay, a delinquent 19 and 20 Oct. 1649.

4. Certificate of the Committee at Nottingham that Gilbert Atkinson, prisoner there, had compounded for his enlargement. 14 April 1649.

5. Petition of John Hutchinson, Esquire; a duplicate of the petition presented on the 23rd of July, 1660. See above.

Aug. 13. Draft of an Act for putting Edward Marquess and Earl of Worcester into possession of such part of his estates hath been sold or conveyed away under colour of several Acts and ordinances of Parliament since the beginning of the late unhappy wars within this realm, as also by several deeds and conveyances made by him, the said Marquess for inconsiderable sums of money to him paid during his restraint and imprisonment by such persons as were already possessed thereof, either under colour of some pretended Acts or ordinances of Parliament as aforesaid, or by fraud, surprisal, or circumvention used against him, the said Edward Marquess and Earl of Worcester. Read 1st this day, but afterwards dropped. L. J., XI. 125, &c.

Aug. 13. Another draft.

Aug. 13. Petition of Richard Lord Byron; prays to be restored to possession of the inappropriate rectory of Rutzah, Recheate and Saditworth, in the counties of Lancaster and York, for the remainder of a term of twenty-one years, devised to his mother Dame Ann Byron in 1642, by William late Archbishop of Canterbury, of which petitioner was dispossessed by the pretended trustees for maintenance of ministers under colour of the ordinance made in 1646, declaring that all acts done by bishops after 1641 should be void. L. J., XI. 126.

Aug. 13. Draft order in the matter between John Earnley and Daniel Jenkins; that Earnley shall exhibit a Bill in Council to which Jenkins shall answer; and that a former decree made in the matter shall be suspended until the case is fully heard, &c. L. J., XI. 126.

Annexed:—

1. Draft report from the Committee for Petitions on the case.

2. The case between Earnley and Jenkins arising out of a matter of wardship.

Aug. 14. Petition of Vincent Cupper. Petitioner claims the rectory of Paulerspury by right of presentation from Lady Wotton, the undoubted patroness, in April 1646, and by legal institution and induction from Dr. Heath, then Chancellor of the diocese of Peterborough, under an order from the House; petitioner refused to take the engagement against the King and the House of Lords, and will be a great loser if dispossessed of the present profits of the living under their Lordships' order sequestering the profits into the hands of the churchwardens, as he has sowed much of the glebe, and the sequestrators refuse to bring the corn to the parsonage barns, though he has offered them the keys to secure them, but sell some, and bring the rest to their own and their neighbours' barns. Prays that the order of sequestration may be taken off, and Ezechiel Johnson left to try his pretended title at law, petitioner being left to receive the profits quietly as he has done for the last fourteen years. L. J., XI. 127.

Aug. 14. Draft order that 50,000*l.* of the three months' assessment be assigned for payment of the army, and 40,000*l.* be employed for disbanding. L. J., XI. 128. In extenso.

Aug. 14. Petition of Nicholas Dingley, minister of the rectory of Kingstone, in the county of Kent; prays that the order of the 23rd of June last that the tithes should be detained in the hands of the churchwardens may be suspended, as petitioner, who is the present incumbent, came in upon a clear title, being presented by Dr. Prinrose, the undoubted patron. L. J., XI. 128.

Aug. 15. Engrossment of an Act to enable the county of Durham to send knights, and the City of Durham to send burgesses, to serve in Parliament. Brought from the Commons this day, dropped in Committee. L. J., XI. 129, &c.

Aug. 15. Petition of Amice Andros De Sammares and Nathaniel Darell, deputies of the Island of Guernsey; they were empowered by the inhabitants of the Island to address themselves by petition to His Majesty, and humbly to beg his pardon which he has been graciously pleased to grant; pray their Lordships "to let them "enjoy the benefit of His Majesty's said particular act "of grace and mercy, they relying wholly thereupon "according to their immediate relation to the Crown "only as remains of the ancient Dukedom of Normandy." See L. J., XI. 129.

Aug. 16. Draft order for present payment of 1,400*l.* for relief of maimed soldiers, widows, and orphans, and to secure a further sum of 2,000*l.* for the same purpose. L. J., XI. 130.

Aug. 17. Affidavit of John Stainer, of Uppington, Salop; that Andrew Lloyd, of Aston, in the same county, refused to obey the order of the House for restoration of the Earl of Newport's goods. L. J., XI. 131.

Aug. 17. Affidavit of John Stainer and another, that Colonel Thomas Hunt, of Shrewsbury, refused to obey the order of the House for restoration of the Earl of Newport's goods.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the order referred to. 30 June 1660.

L. J., XI. 79.

Aug. 17. Petition of Robert Medley, Synon Maw, and others, inhabitants within the manor of Epworth, in the Isle of Axholm, in the county of Lincoln; by procurement of Nathaniel Reading and John Gibbon, petitioners were warned to appear before the House on the 14th of July last to show cause why they should not obey certain decrees of the Court of Exchequer; they attended on that and subsequent days, and have been obliged to keep their witnesses in town for five weeks; and now their case is appointed for hearing on the 23rd instant, when their council will have gone out of town. The case is of great concernment and intricacy, so that no new counsel could state it aright; they therefore pray that some day next term may be appointed for the hearing. L. J., XI. 131.

Annexed:—

1. List of witnesses to be summoned. 20 Aug.

2. Proviso to the Bill.

Aug. 18. Petition of Robert Carr, Esquire, only son of Sir Robert Carr, Bart.; petitioner's mother Lady Carr has petitioned the House against him, and prosecuted him in his father's name contrary to his father's mind, who has frequently disowned proceedings of a like nature whenever he could get any liberty from the restraint put upon him by his lady; Lady Carr pretends that he is free from restraint, but when petitioner went into the country to the house where his father is kept, taking with him two justices of the peace, he was denied access to him by Sir Edward Rossiter's soldiers; prays that he may have free access to his father to know his mind with regard to Lady Carr's proceedings. L. J., XI. 133.

Annexed:—

Read 1^a this day; received the royal assent on the 29th of December. L. J., XI. 133, &c.

Aug. 18. Petition of William Ives, minister of Stow, in Northamptonshire; he complains that the churchwardens, contrary to the intention of their Lordships' order for securing the profits of the living, have sold some part at an undervalue, spoiled some, and converted some to their own use; have cut down in the night the glebe corn which petitioner sowed, and have carried it wet to another man's barn, which needs must spoil it, while they have taken his cattle from the common, forcing him to sell all except one horse on which he rides, and this they have twice impounded out of the churchyard; prays to be permitted to receive the profits of the rectory on giving good security to be responsible for the same according to determination of Parliament. L. J., XI. 134.

Aug. 20. Petition of Dame Mary Carr; not long since she presented a petition complaining of the unnatural conduct of her only son Robert towards his father, mother, and sisters, and his terrifying the tenants so that they refuse to pay their rents, making petitioner and her family destitute, but petitioner was dismissed to law; Robert Carr has now delivered a petition, fortified by certificate of two justices, one of whom is his abettor, pretending that he is denied access to his father, &c.; she denies the statements in his petition, and accuses him of trying to force his father to sign such writings as he had prepared, and of associating with dissolute persons to terrify and molest her servants, obliging her to have three soldiers quartered in the house for protection. L. J., XI. 135.

Aug. 20. Affidavit that Ann Tisser refused to obey the order of the 26th of July to deliver the Gatehouse at Worcester House to the Marquess of Worcester. L. J., XI. 135.

Aug. 20. Petition of Robert Cheeke, Esq.; petitioner presented the annexed petition touching his claim to the barony of Fitzwalter, which has been referred by His Majesty to the House; prays the House to appoint a day for the hearing. L. J., XI. 135.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Robert Cheeke, Esq., to the King; the barony of Fitzwalter was a barony by tenure from the time of Henry the First, and the next heir of the whole blood and no other did constantly inherit the honour; petitioner is son and heir to Sir Thomas Cheeke, who was next heir of the whole blood to Edward last Earl of Sussex and Baron Fitzwalter, who was next heir of the whole blood to Robert Earl of Sussex and Baron Fitzwalter, who died without issue in the year 1629; petitioner's father, Sir Thomas Cheeke, after the decease of Edward Earl of Sussex put in his claim for the barony, but by the distraction of the times, and the dissolution of the Lords' House, never brought the same to any perfection; petitioner prays to be restored to the honour and dignity. Noted with an order signed by Sir Edward Nicholas referring the petition to the consideration of the House of Lords. L. J., XI. 135.

Aug. 20. Order for the hearing of the case. L. J., XI. 135. In extenso.

Aug. 21. Engrossment of an Act for indemnifying of certain officers in courts of justice; providing that the places of those officers who remained in London and did not as required by the King attend at Oxford shall not be thereby forfeited. Brought from the Commons, and read 1^a, no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 136, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Aug. 22. Draft of an Act for the preserving of the Earl of Derby's right of action and entry into the manors, lands, and hereditaments heretofore sold by William Earl of Derby. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, was referred to the Committee on Lord Derby's other bill, see June 13, and on the 28th of August was reported with amendments and alterations which are embodied in the annexed draft. L. J., XI. 137, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of an Act for restoring of Charles Earl of Derby to the possession of the manors, messuages, lands, and hereditaments belonging unto James late Earl of Derby, his father. Under this title the Bill went down to the House of Commons, where it was only read a first time. C. J., VIII. 207.

Aug. 22. Petition of Captain John Griffith; in the year 1651 petitioner, then an inferior officer in the city of Chester, was amongst others summoned to appear at a court-martial, where finding them upon the trial of Lord Derby petitioner presently withdrew, and was never present at any question or sentence of death, but has notwithstanding been summoned with the rest that sat in that Court; petitioner has suffered much for his adherence to His Majesty's party, and particularly was sequestered and very much abused by the Rump for assisting Sir George Booth in his late rising, but has not hitherto had an opportunity of truly informing the House of his case; he prays to be speedily discharged from his imprisonment, which he has now suffered above a month, and the charge of which he is not able to bear. L. J., XI. 137.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same to the Committee for Privileges; confesses that he was one of those who sat in the court-martial upon the Earl of Derby, but positively affirms that he knew not of his execution, or who gave orders for it. The conclusion of the petition is similar to the preceding one. (Undated.)

2. Statement in favour of Griffith, and that the Earl of Derby consents to his release.

Aug. 22. Petition of Sir John Stawell; prays that the committee on his case may be empowered to proceed in the matter as originally ordered, as he has summoned the purchasers of his estate to appear on the 23rd and show cause why he should not be restored to possession, and if the case is now stopped the purchasers will be put to a great deal of trouble without a hearing. L. J., XI. 137.

Aug. 23. Petition of John Collins, of Paul's, Covent Garden, in the county of Middlesex, merchant tailor; when Sir John Stawell's estate was sold by the trustees appointed by the late Parliament, Lady Stawell appointed her good friend John Farwell, of the Middle Temple, to buy the manor of Netherham, in the county of Somerset, and in 1656 Farwell, with Lady Stawell's consent, sold the manor to petitioner for 1,600*l.*, which money was employed partly to pay her debts and partly to redeem her jewels: in 1659 petitioner bought an estate worth near 100*l.* per annum belonging to the manor, and which will be a great advantage to the lord of the manor; petitioner prays that his money may be repaid him with interest, and that meantime he may quietly enjoy the lands as security, being accountable for the profits. L. J., XI. 138.

Aug. 23. Petition of Ralph Nevill, clerk, minister of the Gospel, Master of Arts, and of Episcopal ordination; in 1646 Jervas Keck, then minister of Evenlode formally resigned the cure, and petitioner was presented to the same by the rightful patron, and was legally instituted, and inducted by Mr. Keck himself, who has now obtained an order of the House to sequester the profits, to the great disturbance of petitioner and the parishioners; prays that the order may be revoked. L. J., XI. 138.

Aug. 23. Petition of Thomas Porter, clerk; complains that William Treise, the present possessor of the rectory of St. Mabyn, Cornwall, and others, have resisted the order of the House for securing the profits of the living, striking and drawing blood from Robert Vivian, servant to one of the churchwardens, who attempted to execute the same. Prays that they may be sent for to answer for their contempt. L. J., XI. 138.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Robert Vivian in support of preceding. 9 August.
2. Copy of the order for securing the profits of the living. 23 June 1660.

Aug. 23. Petition of the participants, purchasers upon valuable consideration of lands within the level of Hatfield Chace, in the counties of York, Lincoln, and Nottingham; petitioners repeat the account of the wrongs done them by the inhabitants of Misterton and Epworth set forth in a former petition (see above, 26th of June), and pray that their cause, which has been referred to their Lordships by the King, may be heard at the time first appointed, as they are attending with witnesses, most of them a hundred and twenty miles from their habitations, and that some extraordinary power may be ordered to assist the sheriff in settling petitioners in the possessions decreed to them by the Court of Exchequer. L. J., XI. 139. The petition is signed by John Gibbon and Nathaniel Reading.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Elizabeth Foster, respecting the profanation and destruction of the French church, and the violence offered to herself and her children.

Aug. 23. Petition of the parishioners and inhabitants of the parish of Twickenham, in the county of Middlesex; pray for the removal of Thos. Willis, who in the times of the late troubles obtained possession of the rectory.

Annexed:—

1. Articles against Thomas Willis; he has never been at either University, but was bred in New England, and is not a lawfully ordained minister; he has for months together refused to read the Holy Scriptures; he is a liar, promoter of discord between neighbours, and is turbulent and contentious, takes upon himself arbitrary power in the exercise of his ministerial office, has been a persecutor of orthodox ministers, is a bitter enemy to His Majesty, having thanked God for the pulpit after the murder of his late Majesty for delivering the nations from the hands of that bloody family, has accused the King's friends from the pulpit of malignancy and treason, has always read the declarations of Cromwell and of the pretended Parliament, but has refused to read those lately published by His Majesty.

Aug. 24. Petition of Thomas Lord Brudenell. Prays for an order to restore to him his library and goods. L. J., XI. 139.

Aug. 24. Petition of Banastre Maynard, Esq., by William Lord Maynard his father and guardian; the manor of Wood Plumpton, Lancashire, purchased by Sir Robert Banastre, petitioner's grandfather, and now belonging to petitioner, was let upon lease, and was of late sequestered for the recusancy of the lessees, whose leases have now all fallen in. Petitioner prays that the sequestration may be discharged and he restored to the profits of the manor. L. J., XI. 139.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

Aug. 24. Petition of Richard Harbord and others, tenants to the manor of Cawood, in the county of York; the castle of Cawood, with the chapel, &c., formerly belonging to the bishopric of York has been in great part pulled down during the late troubles, and the materials sold and carried away by George Hewly and Wm. Rowden, to the dishonour of God, the prejudice of the bishop's see, and to the great grief and damage of petitioners; Roden continues to pull down and carry away what is left to the utter destruction of the premises. Petitioners pray for some speedy order to prevent this. L. J., XI. 140.

Aug. 24. Petition of Joseph Hayhurst; petitioner, who has been possessed of the rectory of Iping-cum-Chithurst, Sussex, for above 15 years, complains that Leonard Alexander, upon pretence of a title to the living, has procured an order for stay of the tithes and other profits, though he was never possessed of it, nor was it sequestered. Petitioner prays for the recall of the order. L. J., XI. 140.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of inhabitants that Alexander was never in possession of the rectory.

Aug. 24. Petition of Dame Frances Cobham, widow, late wife of John Lord Cobham, deceased; prays for an order to search in the house of Captain John Nelthorpe and elsewhere for goods taken from the houses of her late husband. L. J., XI. 140.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same, that Nelthorpe may not be included in the general Act of Indemnity. (Undated.)
2. Proposed proviso to exclude Nelthorpe from the benefit of the Act.

Aug. 24. Petition of Samuel Pepys; in 1656 Jonathan Wood for scandal and insufficiency was ejected from the cure of Preston Bisset, Bucks, by the then Commissioners for ejecting scandalous ministers, though he was an asserter of their cause and interest, and petitioner was then presented to the cure by the rightful patron; but now Wood has obtained the benefit of the general order of the House for securing the tithes, &c. as if he had been ejected for his loyalty, and so entitled to relief. Petitioner prays that the order may be taken off. L. J., XI. 140.

Aug. 24. Petition of Zachary Cawdrey, rector of Barthomley, Cheshire; by the practice of John Smith and his adherents petitioner was unjustly sequestered in 1649 contrary to law and the consent of the parishioners; Smith constantly refused to pay any part of the fifths to petitioner's wife and children, has lately reviled and threatened the churchwardens for executing their Lordships' order for securing the profits of the living till the title should be determined, and has proved himself a scandalous person and an enemy to His Majesty. Petitioner prays the House to order his speedy restoration to the rectory upon his giving security to answer for the profits in case John Smith should be awarded any part thereof. L. J., XI. 140.

Aug. 24. Petition of parishioners of Barthomley, Cheshire; there are not five amongst them out of 200 that ever owned John Smith, whom they have formerly proved to be a drunkard, reviler, brawler, &c. They pray that he may be immediately removed and Zachary Cawdrey restored.

Aug. 24. Petition of John Fish, Doctor in Divinity; petitioner having shown in a petition that he was lawfully entitled to the rectory of Hallingbury Parva, Essex, obtained their Lordships' general order for securing the profits, and had it published in church on the 29th of July last after morning sermon, but Thomas Waterhouse the present possessor not only refused to obey the same, but read His Majesty's proclamation, and said that by virtue thereof he was not to be molested; he has since reaped the glebe corn, and carried away all the tithes he can come by. Petitioner prays that Waterhouse may be sent for to answer for his contempt. L. J., XI. 140.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

Aug. 24. Petition of John Carye, Esq., and Sir Richard Tracey, Bart., son and heir of Sir Humfrey Tracey, Bart., and Dame Elizabeth his wife, for reversal of a decree in Chancery obtained by Anne Cromwell illegally, as petitioners affirm, by the power and influence of Oliver Cromwell and Ireton (her kinsmen) upon Keeble and Lisle, then Commissioners in Chancery, contrary to the opinion of Whitlocke, the other Commissioner. The petition, with the exception of the above allusion to Oliver Cromwell and Ireton, is given almost in extenso in the Journal on the 5th of December following, when the House reversed the judgment of the Court of Chancery. L. J., XI. 141, 199.

Aug. 24. Petition of Sarah Rodney, widow, relict of George Rodney, deceased: by order of the 28th of July last her cause was fixed for hearing on the 6th instant, but was put on sine die on account of more urgent business; she has been at ruinous expense in bringing witnesses up and keeping them in town, and implores that a short day may be fixed for the hearing. L. J., XI. 141. See above, 26 July.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 28th July 1660 mentioned in preceding.

2. The true state of the case between Sarah Rodney, widow, complainant, and John Cole, of Odiham, in the county of Southampton, defendant.

Aug. 24. Order for the hearing of Lord Mohun's cause on the question of damages for breach of privilege. L. J., XI. 141. In extenso.

Aug. 24. Petition of William Heveningham. L. J., XI. 142. This petition is almost identical with that presented on the 10th instant. See above.

Aug. 24. Petition of Henry Nevill; petitioner married the executrix of the Countess of Totnes, who left his wife a personal estate to the value of 20,000*l.*; sixteen loads of the best of these goods, consisting of tapestry, carpets, velvets and satins for bedding, and other furniture, fine linen, rich furs, &c., which were deposited in the Earl of Newcastle's house at Welbeck for safety, were seized by Colonel Hutchinson and others, who cannot be prevailed upon to restore them. Petitioner, who is liable for the debts of the Countess of Totnes, prays that the annexed or some other Act may be passed to enable him to recover his goods for payment of the Countess's debts, and the remainder for his own use. See L. J., XI. 143.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of an Act for the enabling of Ursula Nevill, wife of Henry Nevill, Esquire, as executrix unto the late Countess of Totnes, to demand and receive by law certain goods heretofore belonging unto the said Countess.

Aug. 24. Draft report of the Lords to whom it was referred to end all matters of difference between the freemen and inhabitants and the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Exeter. See L. J., XI. 152, where the report is set out at length.

Aug. 25. Draft resolution of the Lords concurring with the Commons in the proviso to be inserted in the Bill of Indemnity concerning Sir Arthur Haselrigg, &c. L. J., XI. 144.

Aug. 25. Petition of George Bush, of South Halstead, in the county of Essex, feltmaker; complains that in 1645 Thomas Cooke, pretended Colonel of a foot regiment, seized and imprisoned him for his loyalty to His Majesty, and because he would not impeach Thomas Digby and Dr. Edward Ingram as agents for the late King; by the decay of his trade and the expenses incurred petitioner was utterly ruined. He prays that Cooke may be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity so that he may proceed against him for his horrible and unjust oppressions.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of inhabitants of Halstead to the truth of preceding petition.

Aug. 27. Certificate of churchwardens of Winwick, in the county of Lancaster, in the case between Richard Shirlock and Thomas Jessop, the present incumbent of the rectory, that they have been unable to execute the order of the House for securing the profits of the living, Mr. Jessop, the farmers and tenants, refusing to yield obedience thereto. L. J., XI. 144.

Aug. 27. Draft of an Act for the naturalizing of Dorothea Helena Countess of Derby, wife of the Right Honble. Charles Earl of Derby, and Emilia, called Countess of Ossory, wife of the Right Honble. Thomas Butler, called Earl of Ossory, son and heir apparent of the Right Honble. James Marquess of Ormond and Earl of Brecknock, and Margaret Lady Culpeper, wife of the Right Honble. Thomas Lord Culpeper, Baron of Thorsway, and the Right Honble. Charles Kirkhoven, Lord Wotton, and Dame Emilia his sister, children of Katharine Stanhope, Countess of Chesterfield, by John Kirkhoven, Lord of Hemflett. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, received the royal assent on the 13th of September. L. J., XI. 145, &c.

Aug. 27. Certificate that Lady Margaret Culpeper is a good Protestant, and has received the supper of the Lord in the Dutch congregation of London. L. J., XI. 145.

Aug. 30. Petition of Robert Creighton, Doctor in Divinity, and one of His Majesty's chaplains in ordinary; petitioner, the legal incumbent in possession of the deanery and parsonage of St. Burian, in the county of Cornwall, in 1645 by command of His Majesty, then Prince of Wales, attended him when he departed out of England until His Majesty's late restoration; in petitioner's absence one Hull intruded himself into the parsonage only by the power of Cromwell; he has violently resisted the order for securing the profits of the living in the hands of the churchwardens, and gives out that petitioner shall never receive any of the tithes; petitioner prays for an order for removal of Hull, and that he himself may be peaceably admitted to the living. See L. J., XI. 148.

Aug. 30. List of persons in whose hands the profits of the living are to be secured. L. J., XI. 148.

Aug. 30. Draft of an Act for the necessary support of the work of draining the great level of the fens; the Bill declares that a pretended Act made the 29th day of May 1649 for draining the great level of the fens, &c. shall be in force until the 29th of September 1661, but that from the 29th of September the King shall enjoy certain portions of the level set forth for the benefit of the late King by a law of sewers made at Lynn in the sixth year of his reign, called Lynn law. This Bill passed the House of Lords, but was dropped in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 148, &c.

Aug. 30. Draft list of Committee on preceding Bill, with minutes of proceedings showing that the Bill was reported the next day as fit to be engrossed without amendment; that on the 3rd of September a Bill for the draining of the fens in the county of Lincoln, &c. (see next paper) was referred to the same Committee, the objectors to which were on the 6th of September ordered to put in their objections by the 13th of November following, when Sir John Munson, Sir Charles Dallison, and Sir Wm. Killigrew appeared as objectors; various amendments were made and the Bill was ordered to be reported on the 28th of November. L. J., XI. 148, &c.

Aug. 30. Draft of an Act for the draining of the level of fens in the county of Lincoln extending itself from the river of Gleane and Bourne to Kyme Ea, as well within the parts of Kesteven as Holland (the eight hundred fen excepted), and from the said Kyme Ea to the city of Lincoln, and thence westward to the banks of Trent commonly called Lindsey Level. The advantages to be derived from the draining are set forth, the lands to be drained (72,000 acres in all) are particularly described. The draining of these lands was undertaken by Robert late Earl of Lindsey, Sir Wm. Killigrew, and Sir Edward Heron, and in June, in the 11th year of the late King, 24,000 acres were divided amongst the Earl and his participants by twenty lots in recompense for the vast expense they had incurred; they made some progress in the work of draining, but by reason of some interruption it has fallen into decay; Sir William Killigrew and Henry Heron, son of Sir Edward Heron, and the participants are willing to proceed effectually forthwith in the work of draining; they are therefore declared to be the undertakers, and shall at or before the 10th of October 1667, without prejudice to navigation, cause the moor to be drained, and all the level made "winter grounds," 7,000 acres being left as receptacles for the waters upon floods, besides meres not to be drained; George Bampffield, of Wells, Somerset, Edward Walpole, of Gray's Inn, and Edward Towthby, of Towthby, Lincolnshire, shall enjoy the whole 24,000 acres set forth in June aforesaid, in trust for the participants who have the 20 lots, any differences that may arise to be decided by Commissioners thereafter named; the participants are empowered to do all acts necessary to the work of draining, to collect old and levy new taxes on the 24,000 acres for the charges of the work, to make orders and appoint officers, and when the work is finished to do all acts necessary for maintaining the same; any person whose lands may be damaged by such draining to be recompensed by lands out of the 24,000 acres, and similarly the owners of lands benefited thereby to make proportionate allowances to the undertakers; the participants are to meet a fortnight after the passing of the Act in Gray's Inn Hall and choose a treasurer and clerk, and cause the names and shares of the adventurers and participants to be entered in a book, and no future conveyance of any share shall be valid until there entered, or enrolled in Chancery; the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper for the time being, the Duke of Albemarle, and others are appointed Commissioners to decide all differences. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, passed the House of Lords, but was not read in the Commons. L. J., XI. 149, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Breviate of preceding.

Aug. 32. Draft of an Act for restoring Henry Lord Arundell of Wardour, to the possession of his estate. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, received the royal assent on the 29th of December following. L. J., XI. 149, &c.

Aug. 30. Draft of an Act for restitution of Thomas Earl of Arundell, Surrey and Norfolk, to the dignity and title of Duke of Norfolk. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, received the royal assent on the 29th of December following. L. J., XI. 149, &c.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill appointed 5th September 1660, with minutes of adjournment, witnesses to be examined, &c. on that and subsequent days.

2. Amendments to the Bill.

Aug. 30. Parchment copy of an Act for naturalizing of Gerard Vanheythusen and others. The only other person mentioned by name is William Hammer, born "at Angiers in France," son of Sir Thomas Hammer, in the county of Flint, Bart. The Bill was brought from the Commons this day, and received the royal assent on the 29th of December following. L. J., XI. 149, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Aug. 30. Draft order to charge 1,000*l.* due to Robert Swale upon the receipt of the excise. L. J., XI. 149. In camera.

Aug. 30. Draft order to charge 2,155*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* due to Lord Willoughby of Parham, upon the receipt of the excise. L. J., XI. 149. In camera.

Aug. 30. Petition of John Eeles; petitioner was committed by order of the House upon a complaint that he, as deputy to the Sheriff of Oxfordshire, did not assist Moses Perkins in executing the warrant for the arrest of Colonel Scroope; petitioner is not deputy to the sheriff nor any officer under him, and therefore conceived himself not concerned by the warrant; he is besides aged and very infirm, and has ever been forward to serve His Majesty, their Lordships, and the kingdom; prays for discharge as it is urgent for him to be personally present at the next assizes. L. J., XI. 149.

Aug. 31. Petition of Andrew Wanley; in the year 1641 petitioner lent a sum of 1,000*l.*, and in 1642 a further sum of 1,000*l.* to the now Marquess of Worcester upon mortgage of certain houses in Blackfriars, and certain sheep walks in Gloucestershire; in 1644 when the Marquess' estate was sequestered petitioner was put to great trouble and expense, and was forced to compound on hard terms for the premises or lose the whole of his money; about the year 1654 the Marquess, sensible of the great charges to which petitioner had been put, released his equity of redemption and levied a fine on petitioner's behalf; after which petitioner spent great sums of money upon the property by which it is doubled in value; but now by order of the House and by Act of Parliament the Marquess is endeavouring to obtain restoration to his estate to the undoing of petitioner; prays that the property above mentioned may not be included in the order of restoration. L. J., XI. 150.

Aug. 31. Order referring Wanley's petition to the Committee on the Marquess of Worcester's Bill. L. J., XI. 150.

Sept. 1. Petition of Thomas Wythe, Doctor in Divinity; though petitioner, who was illegally ejected only for his loyalty, has obtained the general order of the House for securing the tithes and profits of the rectory of Shipdham, in the county of Norfolk, in the hands of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor, Mark Lewis, the present possessor, persists in reaping and carrying away the glebe crops, and otherwise acting in contempt of their Lordships' order; petitioner prays that Lewis may be sent for to answer for his conduct. L. J., XI. 152.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding. 16 Aug. 1660.

2. Copy of order for securing the tithes and profits of the living. 23 June 1660.

Sept. 1. Petition of Mark Lewis; Thomas Wythe had the two parishes of Shipdham and Pockewick, Pockewick, Norfolk, but in consequence of the ordinance against pluralities he resigned Shipdham, and Mr. Castleton succeeded him there; after six years Castleton voluntarily relinquished the living, and after thirteen months' vacancy petitioner succeeded him, and now Wythe asserts that he was ejected for his loyalty, and has obtained an order from the House for securing the profits of the living; prays that this order may be recalled. L. J., XI. 152.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate in support of preceding.

Sept. 3. List of Committee to whom was referred the Bill for Lindsey Level. L. J., XI. 153.

Sept. 3. Petition of Sir Wm. Killigrew, Henry Heron, George Hampden, and others, adventurers and purchasers with Robert Earl Lindsey deceased, who joined with him in the hazard and charge of draining the fens in Lincolnshire. In the 12th year of the late King, and some years before, under several decrees of sewers petitioners undertook the draining of the fens lying between the river Gleane and Kyme Ea, and from thence northward to Lincoln and the Trent; at a cost of 80,000*l.* they perfected the drainage of the part between the Gleane and Kyme Ea, and in the 15th year of the King had a decree in Chancery for possession of fourteen thousand acres in severalty in recompense of their expense, hazard, and trouble, and thereupon built several houses, some of great value, and ploughed and sowed the land for two years with great benefit to the Commonwealth and themselves; but in the third year, whilst petitioners had a petition in Parliament for securing them in quiet possession, a great number of common people, abetted by others more rich, secret, and malicious, entered into petitioners' possessions, demolished the houses, destroyed the drains, works, and fences, and with great herds of cattle and burning made most barbarous devastation of the corn and grain then growing and almost ripe, and as if a reward were due to such riots they have enjoyed the profits of those lands ever since, by which the petitioners, or most of them, are utterly ruined; pray to be restored to their possessions, and that some course may be taken for the discovery of the rioters and their abettors, that they may be brought to make reparation to petitioners, and to condign punishment for their insolencies. L. J., XI. 153.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order to secure the Earl of Lindsey, and all claiming through him, in quiet possession of the lands in question. 6 April 1641.

2. Copy of order for the Sheriff, &c. of the county of Lincoln to take measures for securing the quiet of the fens. 4 June 1641.

3. Copy of order of the House of Commons directing the Speaker to write to the Sheriff to suppress tumults, and copy of the speaker's letter. 10 and 11 July 1641.

4. Copy of order, upon a petition of Sir Wm. Killigrew and others, for suppression of riots. 9 May 1642.

5. Copy of order for Lord Willoughby of Parham, Lord Lieutenant of the County, to use his power and authority to secure Sir Wm. Killigrew and the rest of the undertakers in quiet possession of their lands. 23 May 1642.

Sept. 3. Minutes of proceedings of the Committee for putting into execution the Act for poll money, so far as concerns the speedy bringing in of the money that is to be paid by the Peers of this realm; with draft of letter proposed to be sent to each peer. See L. J., XI. 154.

Sept. 3. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 3. Certificate that there have been great assemblages of Quakers and Anabaptists (many of them of Lambert's party) meeting in Northamptonshire, sometimes twice a week, plotting and praying against the peace of the Church and State, by which the peace of the county is much disturbed. L. J., XI. 154.

Sept. 3. Petition of William Awbery, the son of Richard Awbery, in the parish of Boughrood, in the county of Radnor in South Wales; during the late times of cruelty and oppression petitioner's father, who was marked for a sufferer for his loyalty, was induced by Wm. Watkins and another, for 300*l.* to levy a fine and suffer a recovery of lands worth 1,500*l.*; this, after deceiving him, broke his heart, and within a short time he died; petitioner prays for inquiry that the fine and recovery may be cancelled, and right done to him as legal heir.

Sept. 4. Petition of Samuel Coates, Master of Arts; petitioner for 17 years past has been, and now is, in actual possession of the rectory of Bridgford ad Pontem alias West Bridgford, Notis, but Edward Greathead who has an ecclesiastical benefice at Leverton, in the county of Lincoln, worth 100*l.* per annum, and never was possessed of Bridgford, has yet obtained the general order of the House for securing the tithes and profits of the living; prays that this irregularly obtained order may be vacated. L. J., XI. 155.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Jonathan Boole that Greathed acknowledged that he had never had possession of the parsonage house or church of West Bridgford otherwise than by digging or cutting up a sod or turf out of the churchyard. 25 July 1660.

Sept. 5. Draft of an Act for preventing inconveniences which may arise by reason of patents or grants made or pretended to be made during the late troubles. This Bill was prepared by order of the House by the Committee on the claims of the Marquess of Worcester and Marquess of Hertford to the Duke of Somerset; it enacts that all patents obtained from the late or present King between the 1st of June 1642 and the 22nd of May 1660 shall be brought into the Court of Chancery to be viewed and examined, and if not so brought in shall be void and of no effect, but a number of Peers are excepted by name from the operation of the Bill. The Bill passed the House of Lords, and was sent down to the House of Commons, where it was dropped after having been read twice and committed. L. J., XI. 156, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.
2. List of witnesses to be summoned.

Sept. 5. Draft of an Act for restoring unto Morough alias Morgan, Earl of Inchiquin [Inchiquin] all his honors, manors, lands, and tenements in Ireland, whereof he was in possession on the three and twentieth of October one thousand six hundred forty-one, or at any time since. This Bill, which was read a first time this day, received the royal assent on the 13th instant. L. J., XI. 156, &c.

Sept. 5. Petition of Henry Mildmay, Esq.; his annexed petition claiming the barony of Fitzwalter has been referred by His Majesty to the House; he prays that a day may be appointed for the hearing, and that he may have timely notice thereof that he may come prepared with counsel to clear his claim. L. J., XI. 157.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same, to the King; claims the Barony of Fitzwalter by descent from Robert Fitzwalter, who was seized as of fee and right to him and his heirs of the style and dignity of Lord Fitzwalter, and in the time of King Edward I. was summoned and sat in several Parliaments by the name of Robert Fitzwalter; the claim of Robert Cheeke to the honour is to petitioner's wrong and disherison, and he therefore prays His Majesty to hear his claim and right, and thereon to do as to his wisdom shall seem just. Noted, Whitehall, July 14, 1660. His Majesty's pleasure is that nothing be done in the premises until the claim and right of the petitioner be duly heard and considered.—Will. Morice.

Sept. 6. Application for an order for removal of Wm. Browne and his wife and others, who are in possession of the Duchy House in the Strand, and refuse to render possession or to pay any rent. L. J., XI. 159.

[Sept. 6.] Certificate of the Mayor and Aldermen of the town of Colchester, in the county of Essex; for about ninety years past there has been a congregation of Dutch people in the town, who by the special favour of Queen Elizabeth were tolerated to practise the art and trade of Bay and Say making, and had for that purpose divers good constitutions and orders for upholding the credit of the trade and punishing fraud and deceit therein; these orders were confirmed by King James and by the late King Charles, and the execution of them, and the great care of the Governors of the Dutch Bay Hall and their officers in their strict and exact searching, sealing, measuring, and stamping of their bays has brought that kind of drapery into very high credit both at home and in foreign parts, by which means many thousands of poor families, not only in Colchester but in divers towns and villages for above twenty miles about, are set at work, employed, and maintained; the mayor and aldermen therefore think that great harm would be done to the trade if these bays were allowed to be sold and bought at home, or to be transported beyond the seas without being duly searched and sealed to assure the goodness thereof at the Dutch Bay Hall, the governors of which are men of humble and peaceful spirits, and that the ratifying of their orders and the giving them all the encouragement possible in their trade will be of great advantage, not only to the town but to the merchants at home and beyond the seas. See L. J., XI. 159.

Sept. 6. Petition of Christopher Stone; petitioner was presented five or six years ago to the rectory of Sigston [Sigston Kirby], Yorkshire, by the undoubted patron, and also holds a resignation of the rectory under the hand and seal of Nicholas Cordell, who now, however, under pretence of being within the number of the sequestered clergy has obtained an order to sequester the profits of the living into the hands of the churchwardens; petitioner believes that had the House known that he had been a sufferer for his loyalty, had ever desired to be faithful in his duty, and had a wife and nine children, the order would not have been made. Prays for such remedy as shall seem good. L. J., XI. 159.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate in support of preceding.

Sept. 7. List of Committee appointed this day to consider the Bill for confirmation of leases and grants made by colleges, &c., with minutes of proceedings on the 15th of November, and some subsequent days. L. J., XI. 161.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Thomas Bromfield, Esq., John Arthur, Doctor in Divinity, and Lawrence Marsh (trustees of Henry Colbron, deceased), James Colbron, orphan of the said Henry, and the Company of Drapers, London. Henry Colbron by his will directed the petitioners, Bromfield, Arthur, and Marsh, to buy a lease of the rectory of Kirkham, Lancashire, the place where he was born, from Christ Church College, Oxford, and to lay out the profits for the first sixteen years (except 100*l.* a year to his son) in purchasing lands to maintain schools and poor people, and when bought to settle the lands upon the Company of Drapers for the uses aforesaid; the trustees purchased the lease accordingly at a cost of near 2,000*l.*, without any profit as yet, as the lease did not commence till this last harvest; petitioners are informed that by a proviso in the Bill concerning college leases this lease is taken from them and given to Thomas Clifton, the former tenant, though he knew of the original purchase of the lease and gave his consent thereto. Petitioners pray to be heard before the proviso is passed.
2. Letter from the King to the Committee for confirmation of college leases; desiring the Committee to allow a proviso inserted in the Bill by the House of Commons to restore Thomas Clifton to possession of certain tithes and lands of great value of which he was deprived by Doctor Owen, late usurping Dean of Christ Church, Oxford. 1 Dec. Signed by the King and Sir Edwd. Nicholas.
3. Proviso that the Act shall not make good any lease or grant of any houses, orchards, or other lands belonging to any archbishops, bishops, deans, prebendaries, heads or masters of colleges or hospitals which have been reserved for them or in their own hands for the use and accommodation of any of them or their societies.
4. Proviso with reference to lands belonging to masters of colleges, &c.
5. Proviso that the Act shall not confirm William Hook in the mastership of the Hospital of the Savoy, &c., or confirm a lease of the manor of Dengie, Essex, or Garstang, Lancashire, made by Mr. Bond, the late pretended master of the Savoy in trust for his wife.
6. Affidavit of Walter Payne, of the Savoy, respecting the lease made by Mr. Bond.
7. Proviso saving John Lord Culpeper's right of renewal of a lease of the rectories and parsonages of Randall [Ravendale] and Little Coates, Lincolnshire.
8. Copy of order of the Committee for Richard Canning, lessee of the rectories, tithes, or glebe lands of Hampton, Wichenford, Badsey, Aldington, Offenham [Offenham], South Littleton, North Littleton, and Middle Littleton, Worcestershire, to attend in order to be heard concerning a proviso relating to the said rectories. 22 Nov.
9. Copy of another order for the attendance of Richard Canning. 3 Dec.
10. Proviso that the Act shall not make good any leases made against the consent of the "old tenant."
11. Proviso that the Act shall not confirm any lease of the rectory of S. Aegergh, Yorkshire, made since the year 1642.

12. Quæries respecting the Bill, &c.; whether the provisions do not check the Act of Judicial Proceedings, the Act of Indemnity, or the body of this Act itself.

13. Answers of Mr. Justice Browne.

14. Paper of amendments, &c.

15. Petition of Thomas, William, and Elizabeth, children of Wm. Reynolds, late of Triplow or Thriplow, in the county of Cambridge: pray that a lease taken by their father in 1645 of the rectory of Triplow from Peterhouse College, Cambridge, may be confirmed by the Act now passing.

16. Petition of William Moses, lately of Pembroke Hall, in the University of Cambridge. In the year 1655 petitioner was chosen Master of the College in the room of Dr. Benjamin Lang, who had been displaced twelve years before; petitioner constantly resided in the College, and took so much pains that partly by improving the estate of the College, and partly by obtaining contributions from friends (notwithstanding the unhappiness of the times), he did more in the five years he was Master for the good of the College in repairing the old buildings and adding new than had been done in three hundred years before, in recognition of which the Society in the year 1659 granted a lease of the rectory of Soham in trust for petitioner upon payment of a reasonable fine; prays that this lease may not be excepted out of the benefit intended by the Act for confirmation of college leases.

17. Petition of Edward Earl and Marquess of Worcester. By reason of the late unfortunate times, petitioner, adhering unto the principles of loyalty and performing his duty to his late Majesty, was unable to renew former leases made to him and his ancestors by bishops, deans, and chapters, and consequently forced to let them run out and expire. He might now by this happy revolution have enjoyed the pre-emption and his just title thereunto, but is interrupted by reason of a proviso inserted into the Act for the confirmation of leases and grants from colleges and hospitals, contrary, as he conceives, to law and justice. Prays to be heard against the clause before the Act be confirmed.

Sept. 7. Draft of an Act for the settlement of Ireland. All lands forfeited or escheated by reason of the late rebellion in Ireland that have been allotted or assigned to any persons under any Act or ordinance of Parliament, in consideration of moneys advanced or paid for any purpose for the service of Ireland before the 23rd of April 1653, of which lands the said persons, their heirs, executors, or assigns, were possessed on the 7th of May 1659, are confirmed in the possession of such persons for ever, to be held in free and common soccage upon payment of the following rents, viz., 3*d.* for each acre in Leinster, 2½*d.* in Munster, 1½*d.* in Connaught, and 1*d.* in Ulster; the Bill further provides for the satisfaction of the adventurers for Ireland out of other lands, if those above mentioned should not be sufficient, for securing the interests of the Marquess of Ormonde, his wife and children, for restoration to their lands of dispossessed Protestants who were not in rebellion, for satisfaction of the arrears of Protestant officers who served in Ireland, for confirming in possession papists of Youghal, Cork, and Kinsale, who have obtained decrees for certain forfeited lands in the county of Cork, in lieu of their claims to any houses or lands in the towns of Cork, Youghal, and Kinsale. The Bill provides for payment of a proportionate sum by all persons upon whom any lands are settled, for assessment of the value of such lands, and for the settlement of any disputes or differences that may arise; and contains further various saving clauses, and provides that persons, excepting Jesuits and seminary priests, engaged in the rebellion mentioned in certain Acts relating thereto shall be pardoned only so far that there shall be no forfeiture of life or personal chattels; all persons who shall by His Majesty's grace be restored to any forfeited lands shall before the 1st of Sept. 1661 procure satisfaction to be given to the persons to be dispossessed by such their restoration, or shall be themselves barred from all claim thereto, and if restored shall hold the lands at the rents provided in this Act, if the rent formerly reserved exceed not the same. The Bill further provides that all persons who have been transplanted to lands in the Province of Connaught from other provinces shall be secured in possession until the Parliament of Ireland shall give order therein; that no person who has not exercised his freedom without interruption since the 1st of Feb. 1659-60 shall be free of any corporation in Ireland; that the right of Sir George Lane in certain lands shall be saved, and the Act itself shall be further confirmed by Acts to be passed in the Parliament of Ireland. Read 1^o this day, not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 161.

Sept. 8. Petition of the Provost and College of the College Royal of the Blessed Mary of Eaton, near unto Windsor, in the county of Bucks, commonly called the King's College of Our Blessed Lady of Eaton; petitioners are seized of the manors of Goldcliffe, Nash, and Coldry, in the county of Monmouth, and the copyholders have time out of mind until the late unhappy wars paid fines arbitrary for admittance, and such payment was confirmed by a decree of the Court of Chancery made in the 6th year of King James, but since the year 1644 the copyholders have refused to pay any fines but such as they please; petitioners and their farmers have for ten years past endeavoured to maintain their right in the Court of Chancery and have the former decree confirmed until legally reversed by Bill of review, or to have an indifferent county assigned for the trial at law, but such was the number and potency of their adversaries and the strength of their purses, being at least two hundred joined together, that though petitioners have expended at least 1,000*l.* and are able to expend no more, yet can they not obtain confirmation of the decree or payment of the fines since 1644; they pray, for consideration of their sufferings, for an order confirming the decree securing them their fines until legally reversed by Bill of review, and for a summons for tenants refusing to pay to appear before the House. L. J., XI. 162.

Sept. 8. Petition of Stephen Poole; a petition has been presented to the House in the name of Thomas Thompson, stating that he was possessed of the rectory of Cranworth-cum-Letton, Norfolk, and was ejected only for his loyalty, and an order was obtained for securing the profits of the living; Thompson is in the East Indies, and could not therefore present any such petition, and was ejected for drunkenness and other misdemeanors; petitioner therefore prays for the recall of their Lordships' order. L. J., XI. 163.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

Sept. 8. Petition of Richard Edwards, minister of Chislehurst, in the county of Kent; Richard Chase who voluntarily resigned the rectory has obtained an order for securing the profits upon the false suggestion that he was unduly sequestered, by which petitioner is not only deprived of his livelihood but made to suffer under the odious notion of an intruder; prays for discharge of the order. L. J., XI. 163.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Chase's resignation. 5 Sept. 1654.

Sept. 8. Petition of Thomas Birch; an order has been granted upon the petition of William Evans to secure the profits of the rectory of Hampton Bishop, Herefordshire, upon pretence that he was forcibly ejected, but this plea has been heard and examined by the Lord Chancellor and found empty, there being no proof that Evans was ever legally presented; petitioner prays that the order may be reversed. L. J., XI. 163.

Sept. 10. Draft for an Act for restoring of Sir George Lane, Knight, to the possession of the manors of Rathclyne and Lisduffe, and other lands in Ireland. This Bill, which was read a first time, passed through all its stages, and was sent to the House of Commons, this day, received the royal assent on the 13th instant. L. J., XI. 165, 172.

Sept. 10. Petition of William Viscount Stafford; complains that William Foster and John Walker, of Bedford, have entered upon the manors of Wyboston and Soakes, of which petitioner has been lawfully seized for the last thirty years by gift of his grandmother Anne Countess of Arundel, and have forbidden the tenants to pay their rents; prays that the offenders may be brought up in custody to answer before their Lordships for their breach of privilege. L. J., XI. 165.

Annexed:—

1. Statement in support of preceding.

Sept. 10. Order for attendance of Foster and Walker to answer the complaint made against them. L. J., XI. 165.

Sept. 10. Draft order for the King to be moved to issue a proclamation respecting the payment of excise. L. J., XI. 165. In camera.

Sept. 10. Draft of an Act for the levying of certain moneys due upon the collection for the Protestants of Piedmont; 8,000*l.*, part of the money collected for relief of the poor Protestants in Piedmont, was in December 1657 lent to Nathaniel Temms, Alderman of London, deceased, and to Martin Noel, of London, with security for repayment on a certain day, with interest at four pounds ten shillings per cent. by the year; of this sum 3,050*l.* was repaid, but the remainder, with interest, is still unpaid, and if not provided for is in some hazard of being lost; the lands, goods, and chattels of the late Nathaniel Temms and of Martin Noel are therefore charged with the sum so unpaid, which is to be forthwith levied by process out of the Exchequer, and paid to the Chamberlain of London, to be disposed of for relief of the poor Protestants in Piedmont, leaving the executors of Temms and Noel to settle their respective liabilities. This Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, received the royal assent on the 29th of December following. L. J., XI. 166.

Sept. 10. List of Committee appointed to consider the preceding Bill, with minutes of proceedings on this and various subsequent days, showing that Temms and Noel were sent for by Oliver Cromwell to advance 8,000*l.*, and accordingly paid that sum to the Treasurer for the Navy; Alderman Viner says that this was Piedmont money, and that Noel knew that it was, did not deny the debt, and offered lands as security for his share of it after Temms' death; the Committee refers the matter to Sir Thomas Viner and other indifferent persons to settle, adjudge, and award how and when, within four years after the date of such settlement and award, the said sum of 8,000*l.*, or so much thereof as is yet unpaid, shall be paid by Martin Noel, and the executors and administrators of the late Nathaniel Temms, with interest at six per cent. by the year for any part unpaid, and appoint Mr. Kendall as umpire; the award was brought in on the 8th of December, and the Piedmontese were then heard in French to the effect that they were content to allow four years for the payment of the money so they might have six per cent. interest.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of joint and several bond by Nathaniel Temms and Martin Noel to Oliver Lord Protector for payment of 8,000*l.* with interest. 20 Dec. 1657.
2. Certificate of payment of 8,000*l.* into the receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer by Francis Noel on the 24th of Dec. 1660.
3. Certificate out of the Exchequer of 8,000*l.* allowed to Noel in repayment of 8,000*l.* principal money lent to His late Highness on the 24th of December 1657 for supplying the pressing occasions of the Commonwealth (22 Oct. 1658), and of the interest thereon (6 May 1659).
4. Certificate that what interest has been paid upon the 8,000*l.* lent in December 1657 out of the moneys collected for relief of the poor Protestants in Piedmont has been paid by Martin Noel. 7 Sept. 1660.
5. Statement of Maurice Thomson that Noel promised to clear all engagements in which he and Alderman Temms stood bound, &c. 7 Sept. 1660.
6. Petition and remonstrance of the Deputies of the poor churches of Piedmont; they have been sixteen months in the kingdom prosecuting the affairs of the poor churches, at the charge of their desolate flocks, who can neither rebuild their houses or pay their pastors, while Temms and Noel have for three years past had 5,000*l.* of their money in their hands, and paid neither principal nor interest; petitioners understand that the House of Lords before passing the Bill sent to them from the House of Commons desire to see the original bonds of Temms and Noel, but Mr. Robert Blaney who has them will not produce them without a special order from the House; they pray that their expenses if they are any longer detained about the money may be paid by Temms and Noel, and that Blaney may be ordered to deliver to them the original bonds. 10 Nov. 1660. See L. J., XI. 183.
7. Certificate of Thomas Kendall, that the arbitrators desire him to join in their report, but he cannot do this unless the House are pleased to allow two or three days more for the hearing, and to add him to the number of the arbitrators.
8. Certificate or award of Thomas Kendall; the arbitrators have not been able to agree upon an award; he has therefore considered the matters to him referred in the presence of Francis Dashwood, who married the widow and executrix of Nathaniel Temms, Mr. Neel, and Mr. Smith, counsel for the prosecutors of the Bill, and is of opinion that if the 4,950*l.* still due to be paid by instalments of 500*l.*, to commence on the 24th of June next, with interest at 4*l.* 10*s.* per cent., the last instalment to be 450*l.*, all parties concerned will be satisfied that the Bill should pass. 8 Dec. 1660.

Sept. 11. Petition of Edward Marquess and Earl of Worcester; petitioner's Bill to restore him to such part of his estate as was disposed of by pretended ordinances and Acts of Parliament has been read and committed, but the adjournment of Parliament is likely to hinder petitioner from the speedy relief intended for him; he therefore prays that the rents of all lands, of which either the late Marquess or himself were seized in April 1642, since sold, may be stayed in the hands of the tenants, that the felling and carrying away of timber may be stayed, that he may be put into immediate possession of all such part of his estate as has been given away by any pretended Act or ordinance since April 1642, and also of such part of his estate as has been disposed of since that time to Adrian Scroope, Hugh Peters, or any other person excepted by name out of the Act of general pardon. such order made as is pretended, and all persons are to take notice that the said pretended order is a feigned, false, and fictitious thing.

Nov. 6. Petition of Thomas Levingston, Esq., and Anne his wife, defendants to the petition of the Earl of Sterling and others; the cause was ordered to be put off in order that a case might be agreed upon and presented to the judges for their opinion; the defendants have accordingly stated a case, of which they annex a copy; but the petitioners, the Earl of Sterling and others, refuse to agree to it, pretending that it was not delivered in due time, but any default herein was due to the sickness and death of the defendants' counsel, Mr. Francis Finch; the defendants therefore pray the House to appoint some person to state and settle the case, and that they may be heard thereon before their Lordships or the judges. L. J., XI. 177.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of defendant's case; setting out the allegations contained in the petition of the Earl of Sterling and others of the 27th June 1660 in above, and contending in answer thereto that by the Act of confirmation of judicial proceedings the fine alleged to have been procured by force and fraud was by the general words of the Act confirmed, and that by the Act of free and general pardon and indemnity made in the present Parliament, and passed before the petition was preferred, the offences pretended in the petition not being excepted, were pardoned. The questions therefore are whether the matters of crime charged in the petition against the defendants are not discharged and pardoned by the general pardon, and whether the House of Peers, as a court of judicature (admitting that the force and fraud alleged in obtaining the fine were proved), can vacate the fine without an Act of Parliament?

Nov. 6. List of Committee on and amendments to the Bill for restoring Lord Arundel of Wardour to his estate. L. J., XI. 177.

Nov. 7. Report from the Commissioners for disbanding the forces, headed, An humble representation of the Commissioners appointed by Act of Parliament for disbanding of the forces of this kingdom, both by land and sea, of what progress they have made in that service, declaring what forces they have paid off, and are disbanded and discharged, and what sums of money have been paid to every particular garrison, regiment, troop, and company, and for discharging ships; and what forces are not paid off and discharged, with an estimate of what money will be necessary to pay off the land forces to 6th of November instant and the ships to the 12th day of September last; and what money, both certain and casual the Parliament hath consigned to those uses, with a balance between the charge and the money consigned; and the method observed by the Commissioners in the disposing of the money arising by the Poll Bill, what the total of that bill may come unto according to the best of their intelligence. This report was presented by the Lord General, the Duke of Albemarle. L. J., XI. 177.

Nov. 9. List of Committee on the Bill for confirmation of marriages, and notes of some proceedings thereon. L. J., XI. 178.

Annexed:—

1. B. Papers of amendments.

Nov. 10. Petition of Mary Mountjoy, executrix of William Mountjoy, Esq., deceased, for her possession in the Ballast Office; upon the 25th of August last petitioner attended with her counsel for the hearing of her cause, but the attendance became fruitless, His Majesty's pleasure being signified to hear the case himself before the Privy Council; and when the cause was fully heard before the Council she was ordered as formerly to apply to their Lordships for a re-hearing; she prays for a speedy day for the same as she is unable to contend with so potent an adversary as the Trinity House, which having obtained possession endeavours to keep her out with considerable and diuturn attendances. L. J., XI. 184.

Annexed:—

1. Order in Council by which after hearing the cause of the several petitioners to the office of Ballast and Tonnage, and to the ballasting of ships in the river of Thames, viz.: the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of Trinity House of the one part, and those who derive their title from the executors and assigns of Wm. Mountjoy, patentee or lessee for a terms of years of the other part, the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral, having also exhibited his claim, Sir Kenelm Digby having discovered a pretence of his grounded upon a promise from his late Majesty, and the city of London having put in a claim to the soil of the Thames as conservators of the same, it was ordered that the persons claiming through Wm. Mountjoy might apply to the House of Lords for repeal of the order of the House of the 13th of June last, whereby the Trinity House was under certain conditions and limitations settled in the enjoyment of the office. 24 Oct. 1660.

2. Petition of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of the Trinity House; petitioners who have disbursed and engaged themselves by contract for several thousand pounds in performance of the duties of the ballast office since their Lordships' order which secured them in possession thereof until the title should be decided at law, upon their giving security to be answerable for the mesne profits, pray that that order may be maintained. (Undated.)

Nov. 10. Petition of Edward Rowson, clerk, on the behalf of himself and divers other ministers of the Gospel; in the Act touching the confirming and restoring of ministers there is something dubious, and petitioner prays the House to interpret whether a minister admitted on a simoniacal contract and after outed for misdemeanor were lawfully presented, and so ought to be restored.

Nov. 12. Draft of an Act for settling a rent charge issuing out of Knowle, in Kent, upon lands of the Earl of Dorset in Sussex; the draft recites that Richard late Earl of Dorset, uncle to Richard the present Earl, mortgaged the manors of Knowle, Seal, and Kemping [Kemsing] to Henry Smyth, of London, who afterwards having absolutely purchased the same, conveyed them to trustees for the benefit of the poor of the several parishes of St. Saviour's, Southwark, St. Olave's, St. George's and St. Mary Magdalen's, Bermondsey, and Clapham, in the county Surrey, and of several other parishes; in the year 1653 the trustees let the manor house and park of Knole as the same is bounded with a pale or fence to the present Earl of Dorset for eighty-two years at a yearly rent of 100*l.*, and by another lease of the same date let certain woods and commons, parts of the same manors, to him for the same term at a yearly rent of 30*l.*; the poor of the parishes mentioned above receive no further benefit than these rents amounting to 130*l.*, nor are the premises likely to be improved as the house standing in the park of Knole will require 150*l.* annual charges to keep the same in repair, and is only fit for a person of honour, and the "several things" now let by the two leases are fit to be enjoyed with the house for the accommodation of the person living therein, the reversion of the property is absolutely vested in the trustees upon the trusts aforesaid; the bill vests the manors aforesaid in the Earl of Dorset absolutely, free and discharged from all trusts, for the benefit of the poor of the said parishes, in consideration of the Earl charging his manors of Bexhill and Cowding, Sussex, with a perpetual charge of 130*l.* per annum for the benefit of the poor of the said parishes.

The title of the Bill was changed to an Act for settling the manors of Knole, Seale, and Kemping, in the county of Kent, upon the Earl of Dorset and his heirs, and charging the manor of Bexhill and the manor or farm of Cowding [Cowden] and other lands, in the county of Sussex, with a rentcharge of 130*l.* in lieu thereof. The Bill which passed the House of Lords was dropped in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 184, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of new title.
2. Paper of amendments.
3. List of committee on the Bill. 13 Nov.
4. Notes of proceedings of the Committee.

Nov. 12. Petition of James Waynwright and others. By the importunity of Charles Earl of Derby they purchased a portion of his father's estate in Lancashire, for which the Earl engaged himself to repay the money and interest, but he has now violently seized on the estates by pretence of an order from the House of Lords; petitioners pray that the order may be recalled, and they restored to their possessions and rents until the Earl performs his agreement. L. J., XI. 184.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the 14th of August 1660 for restoring the Earl of Derby to his estates.

Nov. 12. Petition of James Palavicine, son and heir of Toby Palavicine, deceased; prays to be restored to possession of the manors of Foxton and little Shelford, in Cambridgeshire, from which he is excluded under a lease for 99 years made by his father. L. J., XI. 184.

Nov. 13. Draft of an Act for the naturalising of Francis Astley, son of Isaacke Astley, Lord Astley, an infant of the age of six years or thereabouts, born in Holland. Passed the House of Lords, but not proceeded with in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 184, &c.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 16 Nov. L. J., XI. 186.

Nov. 15. Order for the hearing of the cause of the Earl of Sterling and others against Thos. Levinston and Anne his wife. L. J., XI. 185. In extenso.

Nov. 16. Affidavit of Mary Batt that Thomas Hawksworth confessed that he had arrested Dorothy Lady Dacres. L. J., XI. 186.

Nov. 16. Draft of an Act for the naturalising of Abraham Wachter, born beyond the seas. Read 1st this day; received the royal assent on the 29th of December. L. J., XI. 186, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Wachter is yet under 17 years of age, and was born at Amsterdam. 10 Nov.

Nov. 16. Petition of John Cropley, of Clerkenwell, in the county of Middlesex. Petitioner's father, before the year 1642, lent to William, then Earl and now Marquis of Newcastle, 1,200l.; in 1654 the Earl conveyed his mansion house and site of the late dissolved monastery of Clerkenwell and the manor of Flawborrow, otherwise called Delhow, in the county of Nottingham, to Charles Viscount Mansfield his son, and other trustees for payment of his debts, and petitioner, by the urgent importunity of the trustees, was induced to buy the mansion house and manor, which were accordingly conveyed to Samuel Boardman in trust for petitioner; but now the Marquis pretends to claim the property under an Act of this present Parliament for restoring him to all the estate which he enjoyed before May 1642. Petitioner prays to be allowed to take such course either in law or equity as may best secure his estate.

Nov. 17. List of Committee appointed to consider of some way to prevent the standing of carts and cars in the streets for the hindering of the passage of coaches and passengers in and out in the streets. L. J., XI. 187.

Annexed:—

1. Resolution of the Committee that the Justices of the Peace and other officers of the City of Westminster to be commanded to take care that no carts or cars pass in the streets between Whitehall and the Old Palace in Westminster between the hours of nine in the morning and one in the afternoon during this sitting of the Parliament. 19 Nov.

Nov. 17. Petition of Thomas Hillyard, of Newton Nottage, in the county of Glamorgan, clerk; prays that Arnold Butter, who alleges that he was illegally ejected from the rectory of Newton Nottage, and has by virtue of an order of the House gathered in the tithes of the rectory and converted them to his own use, may be called upon to appear and show cause why petitioner should not enjoy the rectory and tithes.

Nov. 19. Petition of Dame Margaret Herbert, widow, late wife of Sir Edward Herbert, knight, deceased; in 1633 petitioner and her then husband, Thomas Cary, deceased, second son of Robert late Earl of Monmouth, were possessed of a house and lands at Parson's Green, Fulham, near which were about three acres of wet marsh common ground, belonging to the freeholders, copyholders, and commoners of the manor of Fulham, of which the Bishop of London was then lord; petitioner's husband for the accommodation of his own and his neighbour's dwellings, agreed to exchange a like quantity of good ground for this marsh ground, and to leave a way from Parsons Green to Southfield at the west end of the marsh ground, and thereupon at great charge subdivided, inclosed, drained, and planted the marsh ground, leaving the way as agreed; this settlement was undisturbed until about three years ago Edmund Harvey, the then usurped lord of the manor, combining with Francis Thorne, a tailor, locked up a gate at the end of the way leading into Southfield, and then claimed a way through petitioner's gardens and inclosed ground, and obtained two judgments at law against petitioner; she prays the House to give her redress, and to confirm the inclosure and way from Parson's Green to Southfield by Act of Parliament.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Committee to whom the matter was referred, affecting a compromise between the parties. 24 Nov.

Nov. 20. Draft of an Act for restoring of Thomas Ratcliffe, Esq., to all his lands and possessions in England and Ireland; to restore him to possession of all the manors, castles, lordships, lands, tenements, and hereditaments in England and Ireland, which Sir George Ratcliffe his father or he himself held before the 23rd of October 1640, but without any mesne profits or arrears before the 25th of April 1660. This Bill did not pass, but a Bill with the same title passed the following year. L. J., XI. 188, &c.

Nov. 20. Draft of an Act for confirming the sale of certain lands made by Ferdinando, late Earl of Huntingdon. Read 1st, 2^a, and committed; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 188, &c.

Nov. 22. Draft of an Act for vacating all such deeds and conveyances as were passed by any person whatsoever of any impropriations or portions of tithes for their compositions for adhering to his late Majesty. The Bill, besides the general provisions, contains a special clause vacating a deed by which Sir John Pakington, and Dame Dorothy his wife, in Jan. 1649-50 were forced for abatement only of part of a fine imposed upon them for adhering to his late Majesty to convey to Christopher Henn and others in trust for the town of Aylesbury a certain pasture called Heydon Hill, in the parish of Aylesbury, and also the market house, markets, and fairs there, with the waste ground where the markets and fairs are held, with the houses and stalls, and the tolls, customs, and stallages arising therefrom, and the court leet and whatever appertained thereto within the borough. The Bill was thrown out on the first reading. L. J., XI. 190.

Nov. 22. Petition of Henry Peck; prays the House to concur in an order sent up from the House of Commons for payment of certain money due to him. See L. J., XI. 206.

Nov. 24. Draft of an Act prohibiting the planting of tobacco within the kingdom of England. The Bill was read 1st this day, passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 191, &c.

Nov. 26. Draft of an Act for the more speedy and ready way for tanning and dressing of all sorts of leather; leather has grown dearer than before from the want of oak bark for tanning, and Charles Howard, 4th son of Henry late Earl of Arundel, Surrey and Norfolk, has several secrets and new inventions for tanning hides in less time and with less charge into leather of a better quality than heretofore produced, and that without the use of oak bark; the Bill reserves to him the sole benefit of his invention for fourteen years on payment of one fifth of the profits and one fourth of all penalties to His Majesty. The Bill was read 1st this day, passed through all stages in the Lords, but was thrown out in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 192, &c.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 27 Nov.

2. Amendments to the Bill, &c.

Nov. 26. Message from the House of Commons for Sir Edward Turner to put the Lords in mind of several Bills. L. J., XI. 192.

Nov. 26. Draft order in the cause of the Earl of Sterling and others against Thomas Levinston and Anne his wife for the Clerk of the House to intimate to the petitioners that they may bring in a Bill for their relief. L. J., XI. 192.

Annexed:—

1. Draft resolution that the fine complained of was obtained by force. 24 Nov. See L. J., XI. 191.

Nov. 26. Draft order for payment of 3,450l. to Thomas Lodington for provisions furnished by him for the garrison of Dunkirk. L. J., XI. 192. In extenso.

Nov. 27. Petition of John Earl of Lauderdale and Dame Anne his wife; pray to be put into possession of a copyhold house and land at Highgate, the cause respecting which has been often appointed for hearing; the property is claimed through Mary Countess of Hume, who died about September 1644, leaving two daughters, Anne Countess of Lauderdale and Margaret Countess of Murray; the property was taken possession of in 1649 by John Ireton, Alderman of London, who as lord of the manor would not permit Lady Lauderdale to proceed in claiming the property, but tore up her plaint, saying that her husband was a traitor to the State and should have no lands there. Nov. 27. Petition of Letitia Kemeys, widow and relict of Erasmus Bedloo, son of Isaac Bedloo, merchant deceased. About twenty-five years since the participants in the level of Hatfield Chase contracted with Isaac Bedloo to build a church and minister's house in the Level, for doing which his late Majesty had given them leave. Isaac Bedloo accordingly built and finished the church and house at his own cost of 1,159*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*, but the participants very unjustly refusing to satisfy him, he was necessitated to commence a suit at Lincoln assizes in 1640, and obtained a verdict; the participants agreed to pay 6*d.* per acre throughout the level, upon which Bedloo was persuaded to cease the prosecution, but the wars then commencing he was ruined and undone, and died having assigned his interest in the debt to petitioner's husband who is also dead without any satisfaction given him, leaving petitioner, with two children, executrix in a very poor condition. Petitioner prays that the participants may be ordered to pay her the sum disbursed, with all interest and charges accrued since the disbursing thereof. L. J., XI. 193.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Order of the Committee for Petitions referring Letitia Kemeys' petition to the Committee upon the Bill concerning the draining of Hatfield Chase. 3 Dec. 1660.

Nov. 27. Affidavit of William Hughes and another; that Valentine Jones, and John and Henry Stephens refused to give up possession of certain lands to the Marquis of Worcester's bailiff pursuant to order of Parliament. L. J., XI. 193.

Nov. 27. Draft order for the Committee for preventing stoppages in the streets between the House and Whitehall to send for the Justices of the Peace and consider of some course for preventing the inconvenience. L. J., XI. 193. In camera.

Nov. 29. Engrossment of an Act for the due observation and better preventing the profanation of the Lord's day commonly called Sunday. Brought from the Commons, read a first and second time, and committed but no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 194, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 15 Dec.

Nov. 29. Engrossment of an Act against profane swearing and cursing. Brought from the Commons and read a first time only. L. J., XI. 194. (Parchment Collection.)

Nov. 29. Draft of an Act for the prevention of all adulterated gold, silver, bullion, and prohibited goods and merchandises; the Bill proposes to appoint John Covert and others searchers for adulterated articles, and that they should receive one moiety of all forfeitures for their pains. Read 1^a, and rejected. L. J., XI. 195.

Nov. 29. Draft of an Act for restoring Sir George Hamilton unto his lands and estate in Ireland. The Bill received the royal assent on the 29th of December. L. J., XI. 195, &c.

Nov. 30. Draft of an Act for making void certain fines unduly procured to be levied by Sir Edward Powell, Knight, and Dame Mary his wife. The preamble recites that in so important a foundation of right as the passing of fines, though by a vote of their Lordships in judicature (in the case of the Earl of Sterling and others against Thomas Levingston and Anne his wife), they have resolved that the fines had been obtained by force, they yet thought fit to vacate the same by way of Bill rather than by way of judicature. This Bill, after passing through the House of Lords, was dropped in the House of Commons, but a Bill for the same purpose received the royal assent on the 19th of May 1662. L. J., XI. 195, &c.

Nov. 30. Engrossment of an Act for erecting and augmentation of vicarages perpetual out of inappropriate rectories. Brought from the Commons this day, but not proceeded with. See L. J., XI. 195. (Parchment Collection.)

Nov. —. Petition of the Mayor and Chamber of the city of Exeter; on the 1st of September last the House ordered that certain churches in Exeter should be repaired at the charge of the parishioners, that the bells, plate, utensils, and materials taken away should be restored to those churches, and that the partition wall built in the cathedral and the new seats in the choir should be taken away; this order was served upon petitioners so shortly before the adjournment that they had no opportunity of making their supplication to the House, and showing their readiness to yield obedience to the order in all points within their power; petitioners gave notice to the churchwardens of the several churches to fetch away their bells, utensils, and materials still in being which some have done, and the others may do so when they please; as for plate none was taken, and few of the churches were touched by the petitioners, and those the smallest and least useful, thirteen out of the eighteen churches of Exeter being incapable of receiving such a congregation as could maintain a preaching minister; petitioners have neither received or demanded the money mentioned in the order, but have delivered up the one bond to the parties concerned; as to that part of the order which requires them forthwith to take away the partition wall in the cathedral, and the new built seats, Dr. Gawden, the Bishop elect, is willing that they should remain until he has had an opportunity of considering their convenience or inconvenience; petitioners are besides advised by counsel that they would be trespassers on the Church and liable to action if they were to pull down the wall and seats, and that the Dean cannot give them leave to do so; the wall and seats were built before the 24th of June 1660 by virtue of a pretended Act made by the Assembly then sitting at Westminster, and the building thereof is therefore covered by the general Act of Indemnity; two congregations now meet for divine service in the east and west parts of the cathedral, and if the wall be pulled down before the other churches are prepared or enlarged thousands of people will have no place to resort to for the worship of God; besides there is, as petitioners hear, danger that some part of the fabric of the cathedral should come down, in preserving which they, with others, have in these miserable times spent 2,400*l.*; petitioners pray that they may enjoy the benefit of the Act of Oblivion, and not be compelled to take down the wall and seats, but that they may be left for the Bishop to dispose of as he shall think fit. See L. J., XI. 91, 152.

Dec. 1. List of Committee on the Bill for the making void certain fines unduly procured to be levied by Sir Edward Powell, Knight and Baronet, and Dame Mary his wife, with notes of the proceedings of the Committee on this and subsequent days, &c. L. J., XI. 197.

Annexed:—

1. Another list of the Committee.
2. Draft preamble to the Bill.

Dec. 3. Draft of an Act for the restoring of Sir Thomas Grymes [Crimes], Baronet, to his estate. Read 1^a, this day, and received the royal assent on the 29th Dec. 1660. L. J., XI. 197.

Dec. 3. Petition of Constantine Skinner. Petitioner is the bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration of certain lands in the counties of Berks, Kent, and elsewhere which formerly belonged to Lady Powell, late wife of the late Sir Edward Powell. The title to the lands depends chiefly upon a fine firmly levied by the said Lady Powell. The Earl of Sterling and others have petitioned their Lordships to reverse the fine, and have only made Mr. Levingston and his wife parties in the cause, wherein such proceedings have been had that petitioner is informed a vote has been passed by their Lordships that the fine was levied by force. To all which proceedings petitioner is a stranger, and yet solely concerned in interest as to his lands. He prays that in any further proceedings in the cause he may be heard and allowed to make his just defence that his inheritance may not be lost to him unknown. L. J., XI. 197.

Dec. 3. Petition of Chaloner Chute; petitioner's late father purchased the castle and park of the Devises in Wilts of Anne wife of Thomas Levingston and her trustees at the full rate of eighteen years' purchase, the title whereof was derived to Mr. Levingston by certain fines levied and deeds made by Sir Edward Powell and his Lady in 1651. Petitioner and his father paid 1,500*l.* part of the purchase money, and petitioner has secured the residue by mortgage of his own lands now forfeited. He takes notice that a Bill has been brought into the House for vacating the fine on which his title depends, upon some suggestion of misdemeanor in Thomas Levingston and his wife in the obtaining thereof. Prays that no Act to the prejudice of his title may be passed, he having never been heard or made party to any proceedings before their Lordships concerning the same. L. J., XI. 197.

Dec. 3. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee upon Sir Edward and Lady Powell's Bill. L. J., XI. 197.

Dec. 4. List of Committee to whom the Bill for restoring Sir Thomas Grymes [Crimes] to his estate was referred, and report of proceedings of the Committee. L. J., XI. 198.

Dec. 11. Draft order for payment of 3,443*l.* 12*s.* 5½*d.* to Henry Pecke. L. J., XI. 206. In extenso.

Dec. 11. Petition of Sir Symon Fanshawe. Prays for the reversal of an unjust decree obtained against him in the Court of Exchequer in the year 1651 by Thomas Impey. Barons Nicholas, Parker, and Hill who heard the cause denied justice to petitioner, and openly professed much animosity against his whole family. The present Lord Chief Baron and the other Barons of the Exchequer have declared that they could not admit a Bill of review, but conceived that petitioner had good cause to be relieved before their Lordships, who are not so strictly tied up to the forms and rules of proceeding as the Court of Exchequer. L. J., XI. 207.

Dec. 11. Petition of Francis Coventry. In the year 1641 the late Lord Hopton became indebted to petitioner in the sum of 1,000*l.*, for payment of which debt in the year 1657 (a widow's estate falling in at that time) petitioner, after a trial in the Court of Exchequer, obtained possession of a tenement worth 50*l.* per annum. By an order of their Lordships of the 18th of July last the co-heirs of Lord Hopton have taken possession of that part of the estate conveyed to petitioner without regard to his debt. Petitioner prays that the order may be so limited that he may receive from the heirs satisfaction of principal, interest, and charges, or that he may be again put in possession. L. J., XI. 207.

Dec. 13. Draft of an Act for making the precinct of Covent Garden parochial. Read 1^a this day; received the royal assent 29 Dec. 1660. L. J., XI. 208, &c.

Annexed:—

- 1-8. Provisoes and amendments to preceding.
9. Petition of the inhabitants of St. Paul's, Covent Garden. The precinct of Covent Garden is parcel of the parish of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, and the inhabitants therefore are tithe free and liable to no other taxation than the rest of the parish, the Earl of Bedford being bound to endow it. By an ordinance procured by some particular persons in the year 1646 to make it a parish, they have not only great taxes levied upon them for the payment of a minister, but have likewise been troubled with vexatious suits at law. The House of Commons upon a like suggestion of particular persons, without the consent of the major part of the said precinct, have lately passed the effect of the said ordinance by Bill, which if passed into an Act will make petitioners for ever suffer what they conceive they have too long endured. They pray that no Act may pass whereby they may be debarred of such privileges as they ought to enjoy, and that no government may be imposed upon them, but what is according to the laws of the Kingdom. (Undated.)

Dec. 15. List of Committee on the Bill for the draining of Hatfield Level, &c. L. J., XI. 211.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Symon Mawe, William Tong, and Robert Bernard, on the behalf of themselves and others, the freeholders and commoners within the manor of Epworth, in the Isle of Axholme. Certain persons calling themselves participants, without naming any except John Gibbon and Nathaniel Reading, have procured an order from their Lordships to summon Thomas Dawson, Anthony Lacy, George Gilby, and William Lockier, charging them with breach of decrees in the Exchequer, and other unlawful acts. Lockier was slain before the date of the order, for which Reading stands indicted for murder and is to be tried next term. The other three persons have attended their Lordships since the beginning of this Parliament to make their defence, but the participants (waiving their former accusations) have lately brought in a Bill for an Act against petitioners and the other commoners, against which petitioners exhibited a petition to their Lordships to have time to make the truth of their case appear. The participants now endeavour to obtain an order to exclude petitioners from their common of pasture, common of turbary, and other just rights. Petitioners pray that no order may be made until they have been heard. (Undated.)

2. Another petition of same praying to be heard against the Bill. (Undated.)

3. Petition of John Crosse, Joseph Edlington, and Leonard Cowley, on the behalf of themselves and of the freeholders and commoners within the manors of Misterton and Stockwith, in the County of Nottingham. Pray to be heard against the Bill. (Undated.)

Dec. 17. Transcript of record, &c. in the writ of error, Ayleworth v. Evett. L. J., XI. 213. (Parchment Collection.)

Dec. 17. Draft order for payment of 2,200*l.* to Sir Robert Honywood and the other late Commissioners in Sweden for their allowance, and for mourning at the King of Sweden's death. L. J., XI. 213. In extenso.

Dec. 17. Petition of Dame Margaret Banastre. Prays that the co-heirs of the late Lord Hopton may be ordered to give her satisfaction for certain obligations entered into by Lord Hopton, and now in her possession as executrix of Sir Arthur Hopton, &c. L. J., XI. 213.

Dec. 17. Petition of Francis Warner and William Love, late Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. Notwithstanding their Lordships' order of the 26th of May last, that Thomas Bushell, a prisoner in their custody, should have his liberty to attend his cause during the session of Parliament, Mary Edney, one of his creditors, combining with one Crofts, and Ogden, an attorney, have sued petitioners for an escape, and prosecute it with all violence, giving out that they will receive their money in spite of their Lordships, with many other scandalous speeches of the same nature. Petitioners pray to be indemnified for their obedience to the order, and that directions may be given to the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer to stay the proceedings at law. L. J., XI. 214.

Dec. 17. Draft order for payment of 1,000*l.* for the buying of a jewel for Francis Windham for his great and eminent service in securing the person of the King's Majesty after the battle of Worcester. L. J., XI. 214. In extenso.

Dec. 17. Copy of account of disbursements made by Clement Kynnersley, yeoman of His Majesty's wardrobe of beds, for furnishing the House of Parliament for the King's Majesty and the Lords, being from the 25th of April to the 15th of December 1660. L. J., XI. 215.

Dec. 17. Order of the House of Commons for a message to be sent to the Lords to desire them to sit this afternoon in respect of the shortness of the time and the weight of business depending, and to put them in mind of the Bills sent up from the House of Commons, and to desire their speedy despatch therein. C. J., VIII. 211. In extenso.

Dec. 18. List of Committee upon the Excise Bill, L. J., XI. 215.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to the Bill.

Dec. 18. List of Committee upon the Bill for taking away the Court of Wards. L. J., XI. 215.

Annexed:—

1-7. Draft provisos and amendments.

8. Petition of the officers of the Court of Wards. Petitioners' offices in the Court were their freeholds and chiefest livelihoods. All former Parliaments which have attempted to take away the Court have thought it equitable that the officers should have satisfaction, it being a court of revenue and the King's undoubted right and prerogative. The House of Commons have in the present Parliament declared that petitioners shall have satisfaction, and have appointed a Committee to report each officer's particular compensation, which report is now ready to be made, but through want of time could not be finished. Petitioners pray that an effectual proviso may be inserted in the Bill for satisfaction for the loss of their offices. See L. J., XI. 217.

9. Petition of the clerks of the Petty Bag on behalf of themselves and their under clerks. Petitioners are comprised in the statute of Henry VIII. as officers of the Court of Wards, which if it shall please Parliament to take away petitioners' offices will be dammified 2,000*l.* per annum for the future, as they have already been for several years past. Their places yield little other profit but what relates to the business of the Court of Wards, yet they are at as great charge as formerly in making out all writs or summons for Parliament, subsidy, commissions, and other services without fee or reward. They pray that such recompense and satisfaction may be allowed them as to other officers of the Court of Wards and Chancery. (Undated.)

Dec. 18. Petition of Frances Duchess of Somerset, relict and executrix of William Duke of Somerset, deceased, and of Francis Lord Seymour, Sir Orlando Bridgeman, Sir Robert Hyde, and others, trustees of the estate of the late Duke. After the death of Henry Lord Beauchamp, son and heir apparent of the late Duke, Lady Beauchamp his widow, and her son William now Duke of Somerset (now eight years of age) lived with the late Duke until her intermarriage with Lord Herbert, since which the infant has been in the custody and lived with the late Duke, who by his will did, as much as in him lay, assign over the custody and estate of the infant to petitioner, the Duchess of Somerset, and made it a dying petition to His Majesty to grant it accordingly. As the law yet is, it is in the power of His Majesty to dispose of the body and lands of the infant at his pleasure, but by the Bill for taking away the Court of Wards, the custody thereof will devolve to Lady Herbert as guardian in socage though married again, and it will be out of His Majesty's power to grant the late Duke's dying request. There is a great debt upon the estate, and if Lady Herbert should have the custody according to the Bill it would be a certain prejudice to the infant to the value of 20,000*l.*, and probably to the value of 100,000*l.*, and the trustees will not dare to take upon them the trust which also concerns the provision for Lord John Seymour and Lady Jane Seymour, children of the late Duke and Elizabeth Seymour, daughter of Lord Beauchamp by Lady Herbert. Petitioners pray that a proviso may be inserted in the Bill whereby the matter concerning the custody of the infant and his estate may be left, as yet it is, in the power of the King to do what His Majesty in his great wisdom shall think most agreeable to justice and for the good of the infant. Annexed:—

1. Petition of Dame Mary Herbert, wife of Henry Lord Herbert. Petitioner's late husband, Henry Lord Beauchamp, did near the time of his death, in the presence of the late Duke of Somerset his father, make it his last and earnest request that his children should never be taken away from petitioner, which the Duke promised to see performed. Accordingly after the death of Lord Beauchamp her children constantly remained with her during all the time she lived with her mother Lady Capel, and since with the late Duke, and before petitioner entertained any thought of marriage she was advised and satisfied by counsel that her marriage could not in the least prejudice the right she had in the education and custody of her children. Since her intermarriage with Lord Herbert she did at the request of the late Duke permit the children for the most part of the time to continue with him, which he always acknowledged as her courtesy. Petitioner is informed that the Duchess of Somerset proposes by a proviso to be inserted in the Bill for taking away the Court of Wards to gain to herself the custody of petitioner's son the now Duke of Somerset, and to debar petitioner of the common benefit hitherto extended to all the people of England, and intended by the Bill to be continued. Petitioner prays that their Lordships will not without just grounds appearing and without hearing petitioner alter what the fundamental laws of England, always grounded upon the best reason, have in this case provided for.

Dec. 20. List of Committee to whom was referred the Bill for further supplying and explaining certain defects in the Act for speedy provision of money for disbanding and paying off the forces of this Kingdom both by land and sea. L. J., XI. 218. The Bill for establishing a Post Office and the Bill for prohibiting the transporting of wool, wool fells, &c. were referred to the same Committee.

Annexed:—

1-8. Draft amendments to the Bill concerning wool.

9. Petition of divers inhabitants of the Isles of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark in the behalf of the said Islands. The only livelihood and subsistence of above fifty thousand persons in the islands depend upon the manufacture of woollen stockings. The Kings of England have been pleased, time out of mind, to grant the inhabitants several competent quantities of wool towards their manufacture, without which the poor people must be reduced to an inevitable starving. His Majesty has lately confirmed by his proclamation two thousands todde of wool for Jersey, one thousand for Guernsey, two hundred for Alderney, and one hundred for Sark, this being the least quantity they have need of. Petitioners pray their Lordships to preserve the inhabitants in the possession of that gracious grant, without which the Islands cannot subsist or avoid utter ruin.

Dec. 20. Draft report and proceedings of the Committee upon the Bill concerning Hatfield Level. L. J., XI. 218.

Dec. 20. Draft order for payment of 1,000*l.* as a mark of respect to Mrs. Lane and in testimony of the Parliament's high resentment and value of her service in being so signally instrumental to the preservation and security of the person of His Royal Majesty. L. J., XI. 219. In extenso.

Dec. 20. Order for payment of 1,400*l.* for the wounded and maimed soldiers and widows in Ely House and the Savoy. L. J., XI. 219. In extenso.

Dec. 20. Draft of preceding.

Dec. 20. Petition of Sarah Rodney, widow. Petitioner prays that, inasmuch as the weighty affairs of the kingdom cannot permit their Lordships to give a hearing to her cause against John Cole during this session of Parliament, they would recommend the cause to the Lord Chancellor to proceed therein as shall seem meet for her relief. L. J., XI. 219.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same that the House will proceed to a speedy judgment. (Undated.)

2. Another petition of same for redress. (Undated.)

Dec. 21. Petition of Awbrey de Vere, Earl of Oxford. Petitioner states that he is lawfully entitled to the office of Great Chamberlain of England, with all the profits and privileges thereunto belonging. About the first year of the reign of the late King a petition was exhibited to His Majesty against petitioner's father by the father of the present Earl of Lindsey, in which the then Earl of Lindsey claimed both the Earldom of Oxford and also the office of Great Chamberlain. The matter was referred to the Peers then sitting in Parliament, and upon that reference the right of petitioner's father to the Earldom of Oxford was certified to be clear without one dissenting voice; as to the right of the office of Great Chamberlain, there was an equal difference of opinion for some time, Lord Chief Baron Walter and Lord Chief Justice Crew being fully satisfied that the right was in petitioner's father, though Justice Dodridge and Justice Yelverton were of another mind, until at last by the casting voice of Baron Trevor, who came in at the end of the debate, the opinions were made three against two, and thereupon their Lordships were advised to induce his late Majesty to confer the office on the Earl of Lindsey, ever since which time it has been held by the late Earl of Lindsey and his son Mountague the present Earl, who having gotten into his possession several evidences and writings concerning the office now claims it as his inheritance. Petitioner prays that the claim to the office may be re-heard, and the consideration thereof referred to all the judges of the law, or if they cannot all be conveniently assembled, then to six of them, to report their opinions to their Lordships, and that the Earl of Lindsey may be ordered to produce all the books, writings, and evidences in his custody concerning the office. L. J., XI. 220.

Dec. 21. Dethick v. Bradborne, Writ of error: Transcript of Record, &c. L. J., XI. 220. (Parchment Collection.)

Dec. 21. Petition of Thomas Hutchins, Marshal's man. Petitioner is under restraint for arresting Lewis Nassiabenia, a servant of the Earl of Lincoln, contrary to privilege. Prays for enlargement as he was ignorantly drawn in to execute the writ by one Price, who pretended that he had waited upon the Earl of Lincoln who disowned Nassiabenia to be his servant; Nassiabenia when arrested was very refractory and refused to show his protection. L. J., XI. 221.

Dec. 21. Draft list of Committee on the Bill for raising 420,000*l.* for disbanding the remainder of the army and paying off the navy. L. J., XI. 222.

Annexed:—

1-5. Draft amendments, &c. See C. J., VIII. 233.

6. Petition of many merchants, tradesmen, and artificers in and about the city of London and other places in His Majesty's realm of England. Petitioners have delivered into the naval stores for the supply of the royal navy great quantities of hemp, cordage, timber, &c., and all sorts of provisions for maritime affairs, for which there are great sums of money due to them as appears by their bills and accounts presented to the House of Commons. Petitioners pray their Lordships to set forth some speedy and certain way for their payment that the want thereof may not be their ruin. (Undated.)

Dec. 27. Petition of William Parker, clerk. Petitioner, who is rector of Wrotham, Kent, complains that his tithes are detained from him by the churchwardens and overseers of the parish under pretence of the order of the 23rd of June last, though there has been no eviction by law against him. He prays that the persons who have fraudulently abused the order may be dealt with as their Lordships shall think fit. L. J., XI. 228.

Dec. 27. Engrössment of an Act for the encouragement of the fishing trade; the Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, but not proceeded with, places certain restrictions upon foreign fishermen, specially forbidding them to use the "troll," or any set or stake nets after the last day of Feb. 1660-1, it also contains provisions for limiting the fishing season in England, &c., for the better preservation of the spawn, and for the protection of the fry of the poor John or cod on the coast of Newfoundland, &c. L. J., XI. 228. (Parchment Collection.)

Dec. 27. Draft order for 10,000*l.* to be presented to the Duke of York as a testimony of great respect to his Highness. L. J., XI. 229. In extenso.

Dec. 27. List of Committee on the Bill concerning the rectory of Preston. L. J., XI. 229.

Annexed:—

1-2. Draft amendments to the Bill.

3. Petition of Nicholas Colman, clerk. About twenty-three years since petitioner was lawfully presented, instituted, and inducted to the vicarage of Preston, Suffolk, but for eighteen years he has for his loyalty been sequestered and kept from the same, until by an order of the 11th of this instant December of His Majesty's justices of the county (authorised thereunto by Act of Parliament) he was restored. He understands that a Bill has been sent up to their Lordships from the House of Commons for uniting the inappropriate rectory of Preston to the vicarage, and the presentation thereunto is for the future to be in Emanuel College, Cambridge. The name of William Manninge, the intruder, is by mistake inserted in the Bill as the present incumbent to hold the vicarage during his life, which will totally deprive petitioner of his right. He therefore prays that his name may be inserted in the place of that of Manninge.

Dec. 27. Petition of Daniel Lyre and others on behalf of themselves and all the rest of the postmasters of England, Ireland, and Wales, being about 300 of them. Petitioners having formerly presented a petition to the House of Commons, setting forth their rights to their several post places, with the manner and rise of the letter office as the product of their labour, constant charge, and contrivance, the House of Commons upon the 17th of this instant December ordered that such of the persons who have contributed their pains in improvement of the revenue of the Post Office should be recommended to His Majesty for consideration. Petitioners have also presented a petition to their Lordships setting forth their grievances, to which they have had no answer or redress. They pray their Lordships to recommend His Majesty to restore them to their former places with their accustomed salaries. Noted: Read, but nothing ordered.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of the postmasters. In the reigns of Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I., the under postmasters were to receive 4,500*l.* per annum out of the Exchequer for carrying their Majesties' letters, packets, and expresses, but in the year 1637 they were upwards of 60,000*l.* in arrear of their wages, whereof they have never received one penny. Being tired in such His Majesty's service for want of their wages, and being for the most part poor innkeepers, they, in the year 1637, found out an expedient at their great cost, to do the service of His Majesty, and to the greater benefit of all His subjects, by undertaking the carriage of private letters weekly, to the great increase of trade and correspondency, by setting up a letter office in London from whence letters were conveyed to all parts of His Majesty's dominions and elsewhere. They likewise took care that no service of His Majesty or his ministers was neglected, but better done than before, when they were to have received wages for it, and thereby exonerated His Majesty from any future pay out of his Exchequer, but satisfied themselves out of their own labours; which carrying of private letters was never used by the King's postmasters. Oliver Cromwell perceiving a profit to arise out of the labours and contrivances of the postmasters farmed the same out, with the postmaster's office, at 10,000*l.* per annum, but had respect to the rights and services of the postmasters, whose salaries were preserved and satisfied by every farmer and patentee. About ten months since the Letter Office was disposed of upon account (by order of the last Council of State), but the weekly or under postmasters were still employed and paid their salaries; about six months since, without any notice being given them, the profits of their labours were exposed to farm at 21,500*l.* per annum, and letters patent were granted to Henry Bishop for seven years, with an unlimited arbitrary power to dispose of the under postmasters and lessen or take away their salaries at his pleasure, unless they served under him at his own terms (which is not half their wages), besides paying for their places again and giving an unheard of security by bond not to disclose the conditions they make with him. Petitioners are threatened to be expelled from their employments for asserting their rights, and many are already turned out, and they and their families are likely to be ruined unless their Lordships provide for their relief in the Act for settling the Post Office. They pray that they may be heard before the Bill be passed or the patent put in execution. Dec. 1660.

Dec. 27. Affidavit of Edward Holland respecting the service of the order of the 6th of September last, concerning the draining of the level of the Fens in the county of Lincoln, upon the inhabitants and commoners. See L. J., XI. 160.

Dec. 28. Copy of order postponing the consideration of the claims to the office of Great Chamberlain of England until the next session, &c. L. J., XI. 229.

Annexed:—

1-2. Precedents for adjournment of cases from one session to another.

Dec. 28. Draft order for 10,000*l.* to be presented to the Queen of Bohemia as an evidence of great respect to Her Majesty. L. J., XI. 231.

Dec. 28. Petition of Mountague Earl of Lindsey, Lord Great Chamberlain of England, to the king, claiming the Earldom of Oxford; referred by his Majesty to the House of Lords. L. J., XI. 230. In extenso.

Dec.—Petition of Samuel Bordman; prays for the reversal of a decree in Chancery obtained against him by Francis Needham, with reference to two small closes at Gadsby [Gaddesby], in the county of Leicester.

Petition of Henry and Rowland Burghill, sons of the late Colonel Robert Burghill. By an ordinance of the 23rd of April 1647, 2,826*l.* was allowed by the Commissioners for compounding at Haberdashers' Hall to certain trustees for petitioners and their mother, Elizabeth Burghill, in full satisfaction of all service, pay, and demands due to Colonel Burghill. Petitioners' mother not having received any part of that sum, and being put to great straits to maintain herself and her children, was wrought upon by William Cawley to release for a very inconsiderable sum, and without the consent of petitioners or the trustees, all the debt, to the utter ruin of petitioners. Cawley is fled (being one of the triers of the late King), and his estate is ordered to be seized for the use of the public, so petitioners are despairing to have any satisfaction from him. They pray for relief out of Cawley's estate.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commissioners for compounding with delinquents referred to in preceding. 29 April 1647.

Petition of Peter Barrett, His Majesty's searcher in the port of Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, and the members thereunto belonging. Petitioner was lawfully invested and sworn in his office, and had a patent under the Great Seal, nevertheless certain persons (pretending authority by virtue of two intitled Acts of the 16th and 20th of January 1648-9 for regulating the officers of the navy and customs) outed him contrary to the law, and the words and meaning of both the said Acts. Petitioner prays their Lordships to take his long and sad sufferings into their consideration, and to authorize him to execute the said office and to receive the usual fees.

Petition of William Roe. Petitioner married the only remaining child of Humphrey Hixon, late Keeper of His Majesty's standing wardrobe at Greenwich, which office has been in the possession of that family for many generations. Petitioner having been bred up in such a way as makes him fit for the execution of the office, and having been a great sufferer for his loyalty to His Majesty, prays to be admitted and sworn into the place of yeoman of His Majesty's standing wardrobe.

Petition of John Robinson. The late King by letters patent granted the office of register of affidavits in the Court of Chancery to William Robinson and petitioner for their lives. William Robinson is dead, and the right has therefore accrued to petitioner, who employed Sheffield Stubbs to execute the office, but he upon a false and extra judicial oath before a Master in Chancery that petitioner was with the Earl of Newcastle's army, gained the office, whereas in truth petitioner was always true and faithful to the King and Parliament, and was never engaged in any war since the sad troubles began. Prays to be restored to the office.

Petition of Francis Lord Newport. In 1646 a fine of 10,000*l.* was imposed upon Richard Lord Newport, deceased, and petitioner his son and heir for their (then called) delinquency, after a sequestration of all their real and personal estate, and demolition of their dwelling-house, beside the said fine for composition. In discharge of the fine petitioner and his father were compelled to pay a great part in ready money, and for the residue to convey their tithes and rectories in the county of Salop to William Pierrepont and Humphrey Edwards, deceased, and their heirs in trust for the augmentation of the maintenance of the ministers of the several parishes. Petitioner hopes their Lordships will not interpret his and his father's loyalty and faithful adherence to his late Majesty as a crime, and prays that he may be restored to the estate and possession of the rectories and tithes so extorted as aforesaid, they being the only remaining part of the fine not swallowed up unrecoverably, and to that end that the surviving trustee may be ordered to regrant and convey the said rectories and tithes to petitioner and his heirs, and that persons in whose hands the deeds and conveyances made thereof by petitioner and his father remain may be ordered to deliver them up to be cancelled.

Petition of John Price, aged seventy-two years, living at the sign of the Crooked Billet in Dowgate, London. Complains that Richard Hutchinson has wronged him by paying 16*l.* besides "Pinchgutt money," to a wrong person, when it should have been paid to petitioner, as will appear by the books of the Pay Office, and has put petitioner off by delay above two years. Prays that Hutchinson and his books may be examined, and petitioner righted according to justice and equity.

Petition of Christopher Metcalfe, Surveyor-General of the Customs by patent from the late King. Petitioner was restrained from the execution of his office upon pretence of an Act of the Commons assembled in Parliament, dated 16th January 1648-9, without any cause shown or crime laid to his charge. Prays to be restored to his office.

Petition of Francis Cottington. Petitioner's late uncle, Francis Lord Cottington, was for his faithful service to His Majesty and his late father sequestered, his estate, both real and personal, seized on, and his real estate, by a pretended Act, conferred upon that most execrable traitor Sergeant Bradshawe, since which time petitioner, though heir to his uncle, has been kept out of possession. Petitioner prays that a proviso may be inserted in the Act for confirming public sales, that the Act shall not extend to the confirmation of any grant or other estate made of the lands or inheritance of Francis late Lord Cottington, deceased, to John Bradshawe, deceased, or any other person or persons in trust for him.

Draft of an Act for settling and confirming Thomas Hodges, D.D. in the rectory or parsonage of the parish church of St. Peter's, Cornhill, in the city of London, and for the ejecting and putting out of William Blackmore, clerk, from the same. The Act recites that in the year 1657 Blackmore, by undue practices and false suggestions, procured himself to be nominated to the church of St. Peter's, Cornhill, being then void by the death of Dr. William Fairfax, and that he has ever since been in actual possession, to the great prejudice and damage of Dr. Thomas Hodges, who had a just title to the living from the rightful patrons; but, as some doubts may arise whether Dr. Hodges can be settled in the rectory or parsonage by the Act for confirming or restoring of the ministry in regard he has never actually been in possession, the Bill proceeds to enact that he shall be declared and adjudged to be the real and lawful incumbent. This Bill is not mentioned in the journals.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the grant of the advowson of the living of St. Peter's, Cornhill, to Dr. Hodges by the Court of Aldermen of the city of London. 27 Sept. 1627.

2. Another copy of the grant.

Printed statement respecting Sutton's Hospital, called the Charter House. The house, with land to the value of about 4,000*l.* per annum, was given by Thomas Sutton for the dwelling and maintaining of eighty old decayed gentlemen and forty scholars at the Charter House, and twenty-eight scholars in the universities, who are clothed, taught, and dieted. The charge of their maintenance, as directed by the founder, amounts to the full revenue yearly. The hospital lands have of late paid all manner of taxes, which takes off a fourth part of the revenue, by means whereof the charitable intentions of the founder cannot be performed, the charge of the hospital cannot be defrayed, the house runs into debt, the pensioners and scholars want their allowance, and if not speedily prevented, the loss by the late fire by tenants breaking and running away, by the abatement of rents, and by the taxes is such that the foundation will be destroyed and the poor men and scholars not maintained. The lands belonging to Christ-church, St. Thomas', and St. Bartholomew's Hospitals are exempted from payment of the monthly assessment. It is prayed that the Charter House lands may be also excepted, or that the Parliament will please, by the same Act by which they grant an assessment, desire His Majesty to discharge all the lands belonging to Sutton's Hospital from the payment of any taxes thereby imposed upon them.

Petition of many owners and masters of ships in and about the river of Thames, London. Petitioners are very sensible of the many abuses, mischiefs, and inconveniences which have befallen them and the navigation trade and trading ships of His Majesty's dominions by the late unnatural wars and usurpations at home, and by the sad breaches with other nations abroad. They complain of the great employment of foreign built ships, and of the sailing of their out and home with strangers, of the colouring of strangers' ships, vessels, and goods belonging to His Majesty's subjects, and of the fraudulent seizures made by the directions of the offender and for his benefit. By these means His Majesty is defrauded, navigation and trade decayed, petitioners impoverished and discouraged, merchants, mariners, and seamen ruined, the kingdom's stock drained and exhausted, ships and shipping destroyed (above two thousand ships and vessels of His Majesty's subjects having been lost within very few years by reason that the trade has been carried on by strangers and ships of little or no force). Many considerable merchant ships have been broken up, and very few are now built for want of employment. Petitioners pray that something effectual may be done in the matter before the adjournment of the Parliament.

Petition of the poor prisoners for debt in several gaols, prisons, compters, holes, and dungeons of cruelty in England and Wales. They pray that an Act may be passed whereby all able debtors may yield satisfaction to their creditors by their real and personal estates, and all poor men and women now prisoners for debt may be set at liberty, in order that prisons may no longer continue sanctuaries for the rich and able debtors, and murdering dens of cruelty to poor men and women.

Petition of Nathaniel Hawes and George Payne. In 1637 their ship the Elizabeth, while sailing peaceably to Virginia, was taken by the Spanish West India fleet, the passengers and crew cruelly used, and the ship carried to Spain contrary to the articles of peace. In 1647 the petitioners and the Company of the Isle of Providence petitioned the House for satisfaction out of 50,000*l.* belonging to the Spaniards arrested by petitioners in 1642, and by law liable for their satisfaction. On the 12th of July 1647 this petition was transmitted to the House of Commons for their concurrence, but by reason of the interruption of the House of Lords no answer was received. Petitioners, ruined by this long delay, pray the House to commiserate their sad condition and afford them relief.

Copy of a petition of the Governor and Company of Adventurers of the city of Westminster for the plantation of the Islands of Providence, Henrietta, and the adjacent Islands upon the coasts of America. They complain that a ship of theirs had been set upon near the English coast by a Dunkirk man-of-war and carried to Dunkirk. Prays for reprisal against the St. Clara, a Spanish ship and her goods detained in England.
3. Paper containing copy of Sir Henry Marten's certificate to the Privy Council about the capture of the Elizabeth, dated 15 March 1638-9, copy of letter from the Lords of the Privy Council to Sir Arthur Hopton, Ambassador in Spain, desiring him to represent the damage done to the petitioners, and to press for satisfaction, dated 30 April 1639; and copy of Sir Arthur Hopton's answer that, notwithstanding repeated representations, he has as yet been unable to obtain any satisfaction; dated 20 May 1640.

Petition of George Earl of Norwich. For his loyalty in taking up arms for his late Majesty, petitioner was in the year 1648 shut up a prisoner in Windsor Castle, from thence carried to the Tower, and after long imprisonment there arraigned and condemned to die by certain persons pretending themselves a high court of justice, but was mercifully preserved from the execution of the sentence; prays that all who were actors in so audacious a wickedness may be brought to condign punishment, and that he may have reparation for the indignities put upon him by the said trial and other his sufferings. (Undated.) George Goring was created Baron Goring in 1628, and Earl of Norwich in 1644, and died in 1662.

May 10. A Roll of the Peers of the Kingdom of England according to their birth, creations, and offices. Garter's Roll. Signed Edm. Walker Garter. (Parch-ment Collection.)

May 11. Draft of an Act for making navigable of the rivers of Soar, Stour, and Salwarpe, Salwarpe, and the rivulets and brooks running into the same, in the counties of Worcester and Stafford. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent, 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 250, &c.

May 13. Draft of an Act for the reversing of the Earl of Strafford his attainder. L. J., XI. 252, &c. 13 & 14 Car. II., cap. 29.

May 13. Another draft.

May 13. Draft of an Act against tumults and disorders upon pretence of preparing or printing public petitions or other addresses to His Majesty or the Parliament. L. J., XI. 252, &c. 13 Car. II., cap. V.

May 13. Petition of Joseph Bastard, servant to Warwick Lord Mohun; complains that he was arrested at the suit of Richard Neve before the expiration of twenty days after the dissolution of the last Parliament, and has been detained prisoner in Newgate and the Fleet ever since, contrary to privilege. Prays for his release and for reparation for the great damages he has sustained. L. J., XI. 252.

May 13. Affidavit of William Willoughby with reference to the seizing of the goods of Thomas Rogers, servant to Lord Willoughby of Parham, by John Holgate. L. J., XI. 252.

May 13. Commission for Sir Orlando Bridgeman to supply the Lord Chancellor's place in the Lords' House. (Parchment Collection.)

May 14. Draft of an Act for the draining of the level of fens in the county of Lincoln, extending itself from the river of Gleane and Bourne to Kyme Ea as well within the parts of Kesteven as Holland (the Eight Hundred Fen excepted) and from the said Kyme Ea to the city of Lincoln, and thence westward to the banks of the Trent, commonly called Lindsey Level. The Bill passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 253, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Draft list of committee on the Bill. 16 May 1661.

2. Draft proviso.

3. Petition of freeholders and commoners bordering upon the fens lying between Bourne and Kyme Ea, Lincolnshire, to the Committee appointed for Lindsey Level. The commons to the extent of many thousand acres, and many inclosures of pasture, meadow, and arable, are now altogether useless by reason of the great weight of water lying upon them, and the highways and passages have become so dangerous that without guides there is no passing into or out of the country, which is occasioned by several dams made by malicious persons over the drains and rivers made by the undertakers who drained the country. Petitioners pray that an order may be granted to empower them to cut the dams whereby they may be eased of the water, and that the sad condition of the country may be taken into consideration. (Undated.)

May 15. Draft of an Act for settling the manors of Knowle, Seal, and Kensing, in the county of Kent, upon the Earl of Dorset and his heirs, and charging the manor of Bexhill and the manor or farm of Cowding [Cowden], and other lands in the county of Sussex, with a rent charge of one hundred and thirty pounds per annum in lieu thereof. The Bill passed through all stages in both Houses, but does not appear to have received the royal assent. L. J., XI. 254, &c.

May 15. Draft of an Act towards the reparation and satisfaction to be made unto John Marquess of Winchester out of the manors and lands of Robert Wallop, Esq., for the sum of ten thousand pounds and damages for the same given unto him by the late pretended Parliament out of the estate of the said Marquess of Winchester. The Bill was rejected upon the first reading. L. J., XI. 254.

May 15. Affidavit of John Quinn with reference to the seizure of the Earl of Oxford's coach, contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 255.

May 17. Draft of an Act for the naturalizing of Sir William Throckmorton, Knight, and Dame Elizabeth his wife, with William Throckmorton and Thomas Throckmorton, Margaret Elizabeth Throckmorton, and Dorothy Lucie Throckmorton, children of the said Sir William. The bill passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 257, &c.

May 17. Draft of an Act for amending and keeping clean the streets and highways in and near the city of Westminster and other cities and towns. L. J., XI. 257.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 25 May 1661.

May 17. Petition of John Wynyarde. Prays to be restored to his office of Yeoman Usher. L. J., XI. 257. In extenso.

May 17. Petition of George Lord Berkeley to the King, for his place in the present Parliament above and before the Lord De la Ware. L. J., XI. 257. In extenso.

May 17. Application for an order to stay a suit in which Lord Mohun is concerned, and which has been brought contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 257.

May 18. Petition of William Earl of Bedford, and others, participants and adventurers for draining the great level of the fens. By the Act for the necessary maintenance of the work of draining the great level of the fens passed in the last session of Parliament, petitioners are quieted in the possession of the 95,000 acres, settled as a recompense for the inestimable charge in draining the level, until the 29th of this instant May, by which time it was conceived that another Act would have passed for a perpetual settlement of the business. Petitioners pray for an order against all unlawful force, riots, and assemblies, &c. until Parliament shall take further order therein. L. J., XI. 258.

May 18. Petition of Sir Symon Fanshawe for reversal of a decree of the Court of Exchequer. Copy of petition presented 11 Dec. 1660. Endorsed: Dismissed. L. J., XI. 258.

May 21. Petition of Goddard Leigh, prisoner in the Fleet for four years last past. Prays for the reversal of a decree pronounced by William Lenthall, late Master of the Rolls, in a suit brought by Sir Henry Piggott with reference to the title to the manor of Dame Ellingsbury, in the county of Bedford, and that petitioner may be released and left to the common law for trial of his title.

May 21. Petition of James Davenport. Prays for the reversal of a decree of the Court of Chancery dismissing his Bill against Sir Edward Longville and Thomas Longville his son for relief against a bond of 500*l*. for performance of covenants, and that the judges of the Court of King's Bench may be ordered to issue a writ of Habeas corpus for petitioner to have his liberty during the time of his attendance on their Lordships. Noted: Dismissed.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of petitioner's case.

May 22. Affidavit of John Gee with reference to the arrest of William Winston, servant of the Earl of Thanet, contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 263.

May 24. Draft of an Act for settling certain drained grounds lying within the level of Hatfield Chase, and parts adjacent within the counties of York, Lincoln, and Nottingham. The Bill passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 263, &c.

May 24. Draft of an Act for restoring of Thomas Radcliffe, Esq., to all his lands and possessions in England and Ireland. Read 1st this day; received the royal assent 30th July 1661. L. J., XI. 263, &c.

May 24. Petition of the participants of the level of Hatfield Chase. Petitioners have made due publication of their Lordships' order of the 20th of December last, notwithstanding which John Maw and other commoners have disturbed petitioners' tenants, and riotously drawn away and detained their goods until they compelled the tenants to pay such sums of money as they demanded. Petitioners pray that the rioters may be sent for in custody lest the rest of the commoners receive encouragement from the impunity of those insolences, and the whole possession which has been settled with so much charge and difficulty be again lost. L. J., XI. 263.

May 24. Petition of John Viner, clerk. Petitioner was many years since lawfully presented to the parsonage of Kinnersley, in the county of Hereford, and enjoyed the profits thereof until about eight years since, when he was dispossessed of the same for having publicly protested in print against shedding the innocent and sacred blood of his late Majesty before the execution of that most hellish treason and murder. Petitioner claimed the benefit of the late Act for confirming and restoring of ministers, but by the power of Mr. Pitt, who pretends to be patron of the living, yet presumed to sit as a commissioner contrary to the express provisions of the Act, he received several delays, and was at last utterly denied relief. He prays to be restored to his parsonage and to have the moiety of the last year's profits, and that Pitt and others may be sent for to answer for slighting the Act of Parliament.

May 24. Petition of Ellen Briscoe, widow, one of the daughters of Sir John Drake, late of Ash, in the county of Devon, deceased. Petitioner's father before his death settled certain lands upon Sir Henry Rosewell, since deceased, and other trustees for raising portions for his six daughters. Sir Henry after paying petitioner a small part of her portion, refused to pay any more upon pretence that her late husband served His Majesty in the wars. Petitioner thereupon exhibited her Bill in Chancery against the trustees, who were decreed to pay her 1,628*l*. 8*s*., but before any payment was made Sir Henry died without issue, seized of the manor of Limington, in the county of Somerset, and other lands, which he devised to Dame Dorothy Rosewell and her heirs, but left no personal estate out of which petitioner could have satisfaction. She is destitute of all relief in the ordinary courts of justice, and prays that an Act may be passed that so much of the manor may be sold as will satisfy her for her portion and damages. See L. J., XI. 315.

May 24. Petition of Abraham Van den Bende, heir of John Van den Bende, who was son of one of the daughters of Sir Peter Vanlore the elder, deceased. Prays for relief against Thomas Levingston and Anne his wife, respecting the possession of the manor of Beenham, in the county of Berks.

May 25. Draft of an Act for restoring of Charles Earl of Derby to the possession of the manors, lands, and hereditaments belonging unto James late Earl of Derby his father. Read 1st this day, and withdrawn after various subsequent proceedings. L. J., XI. 265, &c.

May 25. Petition of the inhabitants of the town of Lowestoft, in the county of Suffolk. Petitioners have time out of mind exercised a free trade of fishing and buying herrings of the western fishery in the roads of Lowestoft without molestation, until lately the inhabitants of Great Yarmouth taking advantage of petitioners' poverty occasioned by the late wars and a lamentable fire in the town, which consumed one hundred and forty houses, with goods and tackling, have by force and violence disturbed petitioners in their buying of herrings in the roads, which tends to their utter ruin. They lately petitioned His Majesty, who was graciously pleased, together with the Lords of his Privy Council, to hear their grievances, and both parties were ordered to attend Mr. Attorney General, who upon consideration of divers charters, Acts of Parliament, and orders was to report the true state of the whole matter to His Majesty, which was accordingly done, and upon the 3d of May instant, it was ordered by His Majesty in Council that petitioners should apply to their Lordships to consider their complaint and afford them relief. Petitioners therefore pray that the matter may be taken into consideration, whereby they may have relief in their sad condition. L. J., XI. 265.

Annexed:—

1. Printed narrative of the case between the town of Lowestoft, in the county of Suffolk, and the town of Great Yarmouth, in the county of Norfolk.

May 25. Petition of Dorothea Gifford, widow. Prays that the order made on the 17th instant on behalf of Lord Mohun, staying petitioner's proceedings at law, may be repealed. L. J., XI. 265.

May 25. Petition of Henry Earl of Sterling, son and heir of Mary Countess of Sterling, deceased, Sir Robert Croke and Dame Susan his wife, and Henry Alexander alias Zinzan, and Jacoba his wife, the said Countess Dame Susan and Jacoba being daughters and heirs of Sir Peter Vanlore the younger, deceased, who was only son of Sir Peter Vanlore the elder, deceased, and cousins and co-heirs of Dame Mary Powell, late wife of Sir Edward Powell, deceased, one of the daughters of the old Sir Peter. Petitioners in the last Parliament petitioned their Lordships that certain fines, and indentures leading the uses thereof, whereby they are disinherited, might be vacated, as being obtained by force and fraud from Dame Mary Powell by Thomas Levingston and Anne his wife, and their accomplices. Their Lordships after long examination, upon the 26th of November last, ordered that a Bill should be brought in for vacating the fines, which being passed by their Lordships was sent down to the House of Commons, where it was once read, but by reason of the shortness of Parliament, and business of public concernment intervening, it could then proceed no further. Petitioners pray to be admitted to tender the like Bill this present session, or that (if not the fines) at least the indentures leading the uses thereof may be vacated by some judicial order, that the same may never more be given in evidence. L. J., XI. 265.

Powell, Knight and Baronet, and Dame Mary his wife. This Bill, which was read 1st this day, received the royal assent on the 19th of May 1662. L. J., XI. 265, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Paper of amendments.

May 25. Petition of Henry Evett. Complains that Richard Ayleworth has not prosecuted a writ of error brought in by him during the last Parliament to which petitioner is defendant. Petitioner prays that Ayleworth may be ordered to assign errors within a short time, or that the record may be remitted. L. J., XI. 265.

May 30. Petition of Thomas Bushell. The gaoler of Newgate was ordered by their Lordships in the late Parliament to attend ad locum to answer petitioner's complaint of his great sufferings by wrongful imprisonment, contrary to Parliament articles made by consent of his late Majesty for debts contracted in his service. By the malicious practice of one Crofts and others in suing the sheriff for an escape, petitioner was brought back into prison when he was on a bed of sickness, during the session, contrary to all precedent and the fundamental privileges of Parliament. He prays that his articles may be ratified, and that the order for the commitment of Crofts and the other refractory creditors may be renewed. L. J., XI. 268.

Annexed:—

1. Precedents applicable to petitioner's case.

May 31. Application that the Earl of Strafford may have his privilege as a peer in the suit brought against him in the Court of Common Pleas by William Scudamore. L. J., XI. 269.

May 31. Application for an order for the arrest of John Higgins for contempt of privilege in seizing a coach and six horses belonging to the Earl Rivers. L. J., XI. 269.

May —. Petition of Bridget Robinson, widow of John Robinson, deceased. Petitioner's late husband was well benefited in the diocese of Cloyne in Ireland, and served his late Majesty in the war, as well by the sword as with the word, in England, Ireland, and Wales, until the fight at Worcester, about which time he lost his life, having previously lost all his estate, which was of considerable value. Petitioner prays that some relief may be granted to her for the maintenance of herself and five small children.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate as to the truth of petitioner's statement.

June 5. Draft of an Act for confirming of an inclosure of land formerly used for a common highway from Parsons Green to Southfield in Fulham, and the settling of other land for a common highway there in lieu thereof. Read 1st this day; received the royal assent 13 July 1661. L. J., XI. 271, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Paper of amendments.

June 5. Petition of Sir Allen Zouche. Petitioner, who is one of His Majesty's sworn servants in ordinary, has by the unfortunateness of the late troubles involved himself in a greater debt than he can at present possibly satisfy, and by the malice and violence of some of his creditors is closely imprisoned, whereby he is impeded to do His Majesty's service according to his oath, or to recover what is due to him. He prays that a Habeas Corpus may be granted to bring him before their Lordships, in order that such favour may be shown to him as has been demonstrated to others in precedent Parliaments in like case. L. J., XI. 271.

Annexed:—

1. Precedents in which writs of Habeas Corpus have been issued by the House of Lords.

June 5. Petition of the bailiffs of the town of Great Yarmouth, in the county of Norfolk, in behalf of themselves and that corporation. Petitioners have been served with their Lordships' order for the hearing on the 7th instant of the matter between them and the town of Lowestoft concerning a free trade of fishing and buying herrings of the western fishery. Petitioners pray that a further day may be appointed, as in regard of the distance of the place, and the necessity of their bringing many aged and other witnesses (some whereof are at present at sea), of assembling a common council of the corporation for taking out of custody and sending merchants and other witnesses, and of instructing and advising counsel, they cannot in so short a time be duly prepared. L. J., XI. 271.

June 5. Petition of Francis Lovelace, Esq., second son to Richard Lord Lovelace, Baron of Hurley, deceased. Petitioner being inveigled to marry without the privity of his relations, and much below his quality and condition, was afterwards, by the like circumvention and cozenage, induced to settle his whole estate upon trust to the separate use of his wife. A short time afterwards he was and still is unjustly excluded from enjoying the estate so settled, and also from cohabitation with his wife. There being no judicature now in being by which such misdemeanors and practices can be punished and redressed, petitioner appeals to their Lordships, and prays that Ann King, Ann Lovelace, and others may be sent for, and a day appointed for hearing his complaint. See L. J., XI. 285.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of petitioner's grievances.

June 5. Petition of Henry Ayscough, prisoner in the Fleet. Complains of the illegal and oppressive proceedings against him by John Anton and others, and prays that his cause against them may be speedily heard.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same praying for his discharge and for damages against his adversaries. (Undated.)

2. Another petition to the like effect. (Undated.)

June 5. Petition of Scudamore Pitt, Esq., and Dame Katherine his wife, the relict of Sir Thomas Bromley, Knight, deceased. Pray for the reversal of a decree in Chancery unjustly obtained against them by Henry Bromley and others.

June 6. Petition of Nicholas Earl of Banbury, to the King. Prays that a writ of summons may be issued to him to sit in the present Parliament. L. J., XI. 272. In extenso.

June 6. Report from the Committee to whom was referred the petition of the Quakers. The Committee report that after long debate they are of opinion that the proposition of the Quakers, concerning their "yea and nay" to be taken in lieu of oaths, should be rejected. That the proposition concerning respects and the putting off of hats, &c. should be rejected. That the proposition concerning their not coming to public worship is too mighty for the determination of the Committee, who therefore report it to the House to be debated there. That the proposition concerning the paying tithes, &c. be rejected. That the proposition concerning the non-observing days, &c. depends on the other proposition concerning public worship, and is therefore to be debated by the House. L. J., XI. 273.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of the Quakers' petition to the King and the two Houses of Parliament.

June 8. Draft of an Act for the establishment of the level of fen lands formerly drained by Sir Anthony Thomas, Knight, deceased. Read 1st this day. Dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 274, &c.

June 8. Draft of an Act to enable John Lord Abergavenny, son and heir of Henry late Lord Abergavenny, to sell certain lands for payment of his debts and preferment of his brother and sisters. Read 1st this day; received the royal assent 30 July 1661. L. J., XI. 275, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Henry Nevill, senior, Henry Nevill, junior, and Edward Nevill, of Bathwick, in the county of Somerset. The present Lord Abergavenny is only tenant for life of his estate and honors, and has no issue of his body, and no power in law to dispose of or sell any of his lands, manors, or honors, or to defeat or divest the remainders, which ought to come and accrue to petitioners. Notwithstanding this he is endeavouring to prevail with their Lordships by a new Act to alter and annul former settlements to the manifest injury and disinheriting of petitioners. They pray that they may be allowed to make out their just and legal claims.

June 8. Affidavit of Nicholas Turke respecting the attaching of 1507, belonging to the Earl of Ardglass at the suit of Richard Sneed.

June 10. Petition of divers of His Majesty's most loyal and most obedient Roman Catholic subjects, in the name of themselves and others of that persuasion, praying that they may not be excluded from the benefit of His Majesty's gracious intentions with regard to tender consciences, particularly in the point of oaths so penned as to occasion scruple. L. J., XI. 276. In extenso. The petitioners were heard at the Bar on the 21st, when the three papers annexed were delivered in. See L. J., XI. 286.

2. Motives from the Roman Catholics, &c.
3. Motives humbly offered by the petitioners for repeal of the penal laws in force against the Roman Catholics.

June 11. Application for an order to discharge and stay all proceedings by the Duchess of Somerset in the Court of Delegates against the executors of the will of the late Earl of Essex during the time of the privilege of Parliament, the Earl of Manchester and the Earl of Northumberland being two of the executors. L. J., XI. 277.

June 11. Petition of Lord Mohun. Joseph Bastard, petitioner's servant, was arrested by Bolton at the suit of one Nene within twenty days after the dissolution of the last Parliament, and is still detained prisoner. The business having been complained of and heard by their Lordships they were pleased to order that Bastard should be released if petitioner would avow him to be his servant. Petitioner having avowed this prays that Bastard may be released, and Bolton and Nene punished for breach of privilege. Noted: Nothing done in it. See L. J., XI. 252.

June 11. Petition of Colonel Thomas Veale. Prays that the co-heirs of the late Arthur Keymis may be ordered to appear before their Lordships and show cause why they should not discharge and hold petitioner harmless from a bond entered into twenty years since by him as surety for the said Arthur Keymis, and his then son and heir William Keymis. L. J., XI. 278.

June 13. Petition of Challoner Chute, Esq.; Sir Edward Powell, and Dame Mary his wife, in Trinity term 1651 by fine acknowledged before one of the judges of the Common Pleas, and deed duly executed, settled the castle and park of the Devizes, Wilts, upon Mrs. Anne Levingston, Lady Powell's niece, and her heirs. Lady Powell dying before the fine was perfected, complaint was made by the Countess of Sterling, and others, claiming as co-heirs to Sir Peter Vanlore, against the fines acknowledged by Lady Powell, as gotten by fraud; but all the judges of the Common Pleas, after sixteen days spent in examination, adjudged that the fine should be proceeded in and perfected. In 1656 petitioner's father purchased the premises of Mrs. Levingston and her husband for 7,200*l.*, being the full value thereof. He prays that, inasmuch as fines are the highest assurance which any man can have for the enjoying of his estate, their Lordships will not by a subsequent law disinherit him. L. J., XI. 279.

June 13. Petition of Constantine Skynner, Esq. In 1656 petitioner purchased of Thomas Levingston and Anne his wife lands in Berkshire and other counties, and is still in possession thereof. He understands that a Bill has been presented by persons who claim as heirs of Sir Peter Vanlore to vacate the conveyance. Petitioner prays that he may not be divested of his freehold, but permitted to enjoy what he dearly purchased according to the established laws of the kingdom. L. J., XI. 279.

June 15. Petition of Awbrey de Vere, Earl of Oxford, to the King. Prays for a re-hearing of the case concerning the office of Great Chamberlain of England. Noted with a reference of the petition to the Peers sitting in Parliament. L. J., XI. 280. In extenso.

June 15. Petition of Charles Earl of Derby, to the King. Prays for a hearing of his claim to the office of Great Chamberlain of England. Noted with a reference of the petition to the Peers sitting in Parliament. L. J., XI. 281. In extenso.

June 15. Draft of an Act for paving, repairing, and cleansing the streets and highways of Westminster and parts adjacent. Endorsed: 1st Bill laid by.

June 15. Draft of an Act for paving, repairing, and cleansing the streets and highways of Westminster and places adjacent. Endorsed: 2d Bill. This Bill was apparently substituted for the preceding one, as the dates endorsed on both drafts are the same. The Bill was read 3^d and sent to the House of Commons on the 24th of July, but was laid aside there on the score of privilege. L. J., XI. 281, &c.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 28 June 1661.
- 2-9. Amendments, &c.

June 15. Another draft of the bill.

June 15. Petition of Giles Date, of Blackfriars, London, weaver. By an order of their Lordships Edward Marquess of Worcester was restored to all his possessions, and the tenants were required to stay all rents, notwithstanding which Andrew Wanley has sued petitioner for the rent of a house in Blackfriars, lately part of the possessions of the Marquess, upon a pretended title from the State (so lately called), and petitioner is like to be taken in execution for his obedience to the order. Petitioner prays that Wanley's proceedings may be stayed. L. J., XI. 281.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 20 June 1660.

June 15. Petition of Letitia Bedloo, widow, relict of Erasmus Bedloo, son of Isaac Bedloo, merchant, deceased. The participants in the level of Hatfield Chase did about the 12th year of his late Majesty's reign engage petitioner's father-in-law, Isaac Bedloo, to build a church and minister's house in the level, for which he received very little money. Petitioner preferred a petition to their Lordships at their last sitting, desiring that some provision might be made for the remainder of the debt, and their Lordships were pleased to make some progress in the same. Thereupon some of the most eminent participants desired petitioner to desist, promising they would forthwith pay her, and giving her a writing under their hands accordingly, but she has several times since attended them for payment, but has not yet got one penny. She therefore prays their Lordships once more to interpose in order that she may receive the money so long due and so often promised before they proceed to confirm the level to the participants. L. J., XI. 281.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

June 17. Engrossment of an Act for enabling of Sir Anthony Browne to sell lands for payment of debts. Brought from the Commons this day; withdrawn 19 Dec^r 1661. L. J., XI. 282, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

June 17. Petition of the Masters and Owners of shipping trading to and from several ports in this kingdom. It being necessary for petitioners to use ballast and often to exchange the same in the several ports of this nation, they have done so time out of mind without paying anything but very small duties except in the river of Thames, but of late a ballast office has been erected in every port town by James and Edward Halsall and John Walter under pretence of a patent, and petitioners are constrained to pay such excessive fees and duties as many times exceed all the profit they make upon their voyage, not only are great rates exacted when petitioners get ballast at their own cost and labour, but they are often constrained to pay for four times as much as they take. They pray to be relieved, so that they may enjoy the benefit of their own labour which is purchased with no less than the daily hazard of their lives and estates. L. J., XI. 282.

June 17. Affidavit of Nicholas Turke that John Browne, one of the serjeants belonging to Wood Street Compter, has attached 150*l.* belonging to Wingfield Lord Cromwell, at the suit of Richard Snead. L. J., XI. 282.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

June 17. Application for an order for the Usher of the Black Rod to arrest Leonard Robinson and others for breach of privilege in entering upon the lands of Lord Bruce, Lord Darcy, the Earl of Monmouth, and others, upon a pretence of a discovery of a defect in the titles to the estates. L. J., XI. 282.

June 17. Affidavit of Thomas Davile that Leonard Robinson and Wastel Robinson have entered upon and taken possession of certain lands belonging to the Earl of Elgin [Lord Bruce], the Earl of Monmouth, Lord Darcy, and other noblemen and gentlemen in the county of York, who are now members of the Parliament, declaring that they took possession for William Stanley, Sir John Mounson, and Dr. Pilkington, who had a grant of the same from his Majesty.

June 18. Petition of Sir Symon Fanshawe; petitioner having a cause depending before their Lordships against Thomas Impey, and a day being appointed for the hearing, Impey's attorney offered petitioner if he would forbear prosecuting his client before their Lordships, he would consent to a new hearing in the Exchequer, petitioner consented, and their Lordships accordingly allowed the cause to stand sine die. Impey now utterly refuses to stand to the agreement, and petitioner therefore prays their Lordships to appoint a day for the hearing of the cause. L. J., XI. 283.

Simon Fanshawe, notwithstanding Fanshawe's petition for a re-hearing of the cause by their Lordships. L. J., XI. 284.

June 18. Petition of Colonel Guy Monlesworth: in the year 1649 petitioner being then an inhabitant of the Island of Barbados, was, by the malice and false suggestion of Sir James Drax and others without any just cause, made a close prisoner in the Island for three months. And after, those persons calling themselves a Court of War, endeavoured by tortures and other barbarous proceedings used towards certain persons to compel them to accuse petitioner, in order that they might have some pretence to take away his life, but not being able to prove anything against him, they proceeded to banish him, whereby his interest in the Island, then being very considerable, was totally lost, and he, with his wife, children, and forty persons in his family, was forced to sea, and exposed to all hazards in a vessel of no force, and by that means fell into the hands of pirates, to his utter undoing and damage of 20,000*l*. Petitioner prays that the persons complained against may be ordered to appear before their Lordships, and that he may receive some recompense. See L. J., XI. 297.

June 18. Petition of Francis Farrington. Petitioner lived many years in Barbados, where he gained an estate of 1,000*l*. per annum, but having suits with Edward Chamberlaine, William Chamberlaine, of London, his brother, caused petitioner to be seized and brought prisoner to England. He was there without cause kept in durance for two years, and when he endeavoured to repair himself by due course of law, William Chamberlaine, combining with Joseph Briggs, charged him with many feigned actions of a pretended high value, hoping he should not have procured bail, but failing therein they by violence procured him to be again imprisoned, and kept so close and in such great ignorance that they recovered against him in most of the actions, not to force any money from him (for they had already damned him in all his estates to the value of 20,000*l*.), but to get a release or discharge whereby to debar him from obtaining satisfaction for his great injuries; petitioner in order to obtain his liberty, and indeed to preserve his life (for otherwise before this time he would have perished in prison), was constrained to grant a release, whereby he is become incapable of relief in any ordinary course of justice. He prays their Lordships to take the premises into their consideration and give him relief therein.

Annexed:—

1. Demurrer of William Chamberlaine to the petition of Francis Farrington. Every release or discharge given or obtained to gain liberty or to save life in the manner set forth in Farrington's petition is voidable in law, and the Courts of Justice being now open, and it not being agreeable to the ancient course of the High Court of Parliament to determine private differences, where remedy may be had at law, respondent demurs to Farrington's petition, and prays that he may not be bound to make any further answer thereto.

June 19. Petition of the Lady Frances Duchess Dowager of Somerset. Prays their Lordships to revoke the order of the 11th instant for staying during the time of the privilege of Parliament all proceedings in the Court of Delegates in the cause depending between petitioner and the Earl of Manchester and the Earl of Northumberland and others, respecting the validity of the will of the late Earl of Essex. L. J., XI. 284.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Order referred to in preceding.
2. Declaration of Robert Earl of Northumberland, Robert Earl of Warwick, and Oliver St. John, Esq., his Majesty's Solicitor-General, that they agree to waive their privilege in any suit brought against them concerning the estate of the Earl of Essex, deceased. 11 March 1660-1.

June 19. Petition of John Owen, citizen and grocer, of London. Petitioner, at the request of Charles Earl of Derby, purchased part of his lands in Lancashire and Cumberland according to agreement, but instead of performance, although the Earl received part of the money, he makes entrance upon the premises under pretence of an order of the House. Petitioner prays to be relieved before the Earl's Bill for restoring him to his estate passes. See L. J., XI. 284.

June 19. Petition of Henry Bressey. Prays for the reversal of a decree of the Court of Chancery of the 7th of July 1660 pronounced by the then Commissioner Lisle in petitioner's suit against William Babb and Mary his wife. See L. J., XI. 345.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Sarah Lloyd. In the year 1656, being servant to Mr. Bressey, she waited upon her mistress to Westminster Hall the morning the decree was made, and observed Mr. Babb very diligent in attending Mr. Lisle, then commonly called Lord Lisle, who she overheard say to Babb, "Bressey hath a right to the estate, but we'll give him but three hundred pounds," and deponent at the same time observed Babb to follow Lisle into the Court of Wards with a bag of money, which might contain fifty or threescore pounds, under his arm, which made deponent curious to watch Babb coming out again, and accordingly she did so, but could not discover any such bag under his cloak at his return. 1 July 1661.
2. Certificate of the Earl of Peterborough that Sarah Lloyd is now his Lordship's servant, but by reason of going to Tangiers with him she cannot be produced viva voce at the hearing of the cause, but she has made an affidavit before a Master in Chancery, which she has confessed to be true before his Lordship. 21 Nov. 1661.
3. Copy of the joint and several answers of William Babb and Mary his wife, and Andrew Holdsworth, defendants named in the bill of complaint of Henry Bressey, complainant.
4. Depositions of witnesses examined on behalf of Henry Bressey in his suit against Babb and others.

June 19. Petition of Sir John Trevor, George Twisleton, and Andrew Ellis. There is a Bill before their Lordships which, under pretence of restoring the Earl of Derby to his lands, would dispossess petitioners of their lawful estates in certain manors and lands in the county of Flint purchased by them of the said Earl, and assured to them by conveyances, fines, &c., the best estate the law can give them. They pray to be heard at the Bar of the House before the Bill shall be further proceeded with.

June 22. Petition of Daniel Bridge. Prays their Lordships to reverse so much of the order of the 5th of December last made in a cause between John Cary and Ann Cromwell as relates to the manor or farm called Poyle Farm, in the parish of Stanwell, Middlesex, of which petitioner was purchaser for a valuable consideration, he never having been summoned, and not knowing that the cause was to be heard. See L. J., XI. 199.

June 25. Petition of William Lord Viscount Stafford. Complains that Edmund Ellis, pretending himself to be a lessee of Sir George Bennyn, has caused several declarations in ejectment to be delivered to the tenants in the manors of Wyboston and Soakes, in the county of Bedford, of which petitioner is lawfully seized and possessed. Petitioner prays that he may have the benefit of his privilege that neither he nor his tenants may be disturbed in their possessions under pretence of a judgment surreptitiously obtained, but that a fair and legal trial may be had at law. L. J., XI. 288.

June 26. Draft of an Act for naturalizing Sir Bernard Gascon [Gascoigne], Knight. Read 1st this day, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 289.

June 26. Petition of Thomas Levingston. Complaint has been made to their Lordships that petitioner caused Mr. Bowne's hand (without his privy) to be set to a paper for a witness to attend their Lordships' House, by which petitioner is charged with the crime of forgery. He prays their Lordships to afford him a time to make his defence to the charge, whereby he may vindicate his reputation so deeply wounded by that scandal, and in the meantime that he may not lie under their Lordships' displeasure.

June 26. Petition of Edward Bullock. Prays for redress against William Standen, who has unjustly got into possession and detains from petitioner certain manors and lands in the county of Berks, which had descended to Thomas Bullock, petitioner's uncle, from his ancestors, and had been in the name about five hundred years.

June 26. Petition of Owen Owens, son and heir of Rice Owens, deceased, late brother and heir of Morgan, late bishop of Llandaff, deceased, and of Morgan Owens, sole surviving administrator of the said late bishop. By the cunning practices, forgeries, and abuses of Owen Price, heretofore a servant to the bishop, petitioners have been defrauded out of the greater part of the bishop's estate, particulars whereof are fully stated in the annexed paper. They pray that Price may be summoned to appear and answer their complaint.

Annexed:—

1. Schedule of the crimes, forgeries, and abuses charged against Owen Price.

[1661, June 27.] Petition of Anne Browne, widow, relict of George Browne, deceased, in behalf of John Browne, her son, an infant of one year and a half old, and Norris Browne and William Browne, the younger brothers of Sir Anthony Browne. Pray that the Bill brought in by Sir Anthony Browne for setting aside a settlement in which petitioners are interested may not be passed. L. J., XI. 290.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

June 27. Brief to examine witnesses for Lowestoft in the cause between the inhabitants of that town and the bailiffs of Great Yarmouth. L. J., XI. 290.

June 28. Petition of Cuthbert Morley. Petitioner had all his estate sequestered and sold by the late usurped authority, but since His Majesty's return, in order to the recovery of his rights, he has sealed leases of ejectment to Roger Lee of the manors and lands of Hawnbv, Lackenby, and Normanby, and at the late assizes at York had verdicts for the manors of Hawnbv and Lackenby, but for the manor of Normanby, by the practices of John Hill, an attorney and purchaser of the manor, petitioner could have no trial, and now the purchasers of the other manors have brought writs of error to delay his recovery of possession. He prays that Hill and the other purchasers may be ordered to appear, and if they can show no other cause but their purchase from the usurped authority, then that their Lordships will order possession of the premises to petitioner's lessee.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

June 28. Notice from John Butler, at Lyons Inn, respecting an action brought by William Farre against a tenant of the Earl of Salisbury contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 293.

June —. Petition of Edmond Chaloner, son of James Chaloner, Esq., deceased. Petitioner's father was excepted in the Act of Indemnity as a person then living only to such pains and penalties as by another Act to that purpose should be inflicted on him, the House judging his crime not to be of so deep a dye as those who presumed to sit upon the day of that execrable sentence, and signed the warrant for the execution of his sacred Majesty. He was never taken to be of a turbulent or violent nature against any of His Majesty's loyal subjects, but was ever tender to preserve their lives and estates, and gave particular testimony thereof in being instrumental in saving the life of Sir John Owen when he was unlawfully condemned; he was likewise absolutely against the forcible seclusion of the members, and against the abolition of the House of Peers, as by the Journal Book of the House of Commons will appear, and lastly upon the first appearing of the Duke of Albemarle for the bringing in of His Majesty he endeavoured to secure the Isle of Man, where his command then lay, to His Majesty's service, and was upon that account clapt close prisoner in a dungeon in Peel Castle in that Island by order of those who were then in power at Wallingford House, and who looked on him as a person devoted to the royal interest, the truth of which is attested by a certificate from the Countess Dowager of Derby, and the address of the whole country to His Majesty at his return. During his imprisonment being of a tender and weak constitution he took his death sickness, whereof he shortly after died before the Act of Indemnity passed, leaving petitioner and two sisters unprovided for. Petitioner prays that his "father may not be put in the same rank with those cursed regicides in the intended Act, and thereby receive the greatest of punishments and reproaches that can be inflicted on him, being dead, next the ruin of his innocent children by being deprived of his small fortune, and of petitioner, who has been a sufferer with his father upon His Majesty's account;" howsoever their Lordships think fit to deal with his father's estate, petitioner is resolved to live and die a true and faithful subject to His Majesty.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Sir John Owen that James Chaloner was the only instrument under God for the preservation of his life; he therefore prays that what lenity others in his case have received may not be denied him or his children. Signed by Sir John Owen. 27 June 1661.

2. Certificate of Charlotte Dowager Countess of Derby, that James Chaloner suffered close imprisonment in the Isle of Man for his affection and service to herself, the Duke of Albemarle, and many others of the royal party. Signed by the Countess. 27 June 1661.

July 1. Order of the King in Council (dated the 7th of June) referring the two following petitions to the consideration of the House. These papers were delivered to the House this day, were referred to a Committee, and are all entered in extenso. L. J., XI. 293, 294.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the nobility, gentry, and freeholders of the northern counties to the King for the re-establishment of a Court of Judicature at York.
2. Similar petition of the several grand juries of the northern counties on the behalf of themselves and the rest of the subjects there to the King.

July 1. Draft of an Act for the naturalizing of Francis Brudenell, Esquire, son an heir apparent of the Right Honble. Robert Lord Brudenell, and of the Right Honble. Anna Maria Countess of Shrewsbury, daughter of the said Lord Brudenell, and now wife of the Right Honble. Francis Earl of Shrewsbury. This Bill, which was read 1^a this day, received the royal assent on the 30th instant. L. J., XI. 295, &c.

July 1. Another draft.

July 1. Draft of an Act for relief of ancient tenants of lands, parcel of the patrimony of the church of England. Read 1^a. L. J., XI. 295 No further proceeding.

July 1. Petition of divers ancient tenants of lands, parcel of the patrimony of the church of England. The petitioners rejoice in the restoration of episcopacy, for which many of them have hazarded their lives and lost their fortunes, some of them to preserve their tenancies and the church's patrimony purchased the reversion of their leases from the late usurpers, whilst others chose any loss rather than invade the rights of the church, the King engaged his word in the declaration from Breda for satisfaction of the first, and recommended the others to the Archbishop of Canterbury to see the tenants of the church favourably dealt with, and further appointed various persons to mediate between the church and her ancient tenants, and where their labours proved ineffectual has himself interfered, but without exemplary success; petitioners pray for the appointment of commissioners, or some other means for their relief.

July 1. Petition of above six hundred distressed Protestants, most of them having families, who lost all they had by the rebellion in Ireland; they complain that of the 55,000*l.* collected in England and Wales for their benefit, some persons, not themselves, received 15,000*l.*, the residue being converted to other purposes, and that the 31,242*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.* collected in Holland for them was all misconverted to other uses; since which time they continued to supplicate the pretended powers, but without redress; they pray that relief may be given them either by a collection or by levying the money diverted from them from the estates of those who have defrauded them, that so they may be enabled to return to Ireland and to subsist when they get there. L. J., XI. 295.

Annexed:—

1. Another similar petition of same. (Undated.)

July 1. Petition of the poor cripples that have lost their limbs in His Majesty's service; they have for many years suffered calamity, being denied relief because of their loyalty, and in the usurper's time whipt out of town because they had lost their limbs in His Majesty's service, while those who had been maimed in the usurper's service had considerable allowance made them; now that it has pleased the Lord to crown their prayers with success in restoring their gracious Sovereign to them again, and their Lordships to him, they pray that some constant relief may be given to the residue of them, and the collection of the last fast distributed amongst them. L. J., XI. 295.

July 1. Petition of Dorothy Lady Dacre, widow of Richard Lord Dacre, deceased; she is pursued by one Jonas Moore in an ejectment in the Common Pleas to turn her out of her house, which she has quietly enjoyed for some years past; she desires that she may have the benefit of privilege of Parliament. See L. J., XI. 298.

of the manors and lands of Robert Wallop, Esq., for the sum of ten thousand pounds heretofore granted unto him by the then pretended Parliament out of the said Marquess of Winchester's estate. Brought from the Commons this day, reported 12 July. L. J., XI. 297, &c. (Parliament Collection.)

July 2. Petition of Edward Marques of Worcester, he contracted many debts in the service of his late Majesty in the wars, and some of his creditors have obtained judgments against his estate, and are now extending his lands; these judgments were obtained many years ago, and a great part of the estate which petitioner then possessed is now in the hands of some members of the House of Commons, who became possessed of it by the late pretended public purchases, and now use their privilege to stay proceedings against the estate in their hands; petitioner prays for a like protection for himself. L. J., XI. 296.

July 2. Petition of the President and Fellows of Magdalen College in Oxford. In the year 1646 by colour of an order of their Lordship's House for seizing Popish reliques, Michael Baker, a messenger of the House, carried out of the college a mitre, crozier, staff, copes, and other things (being the venerable remains of their founder), reputed to be worth about 2,000*l.*, and as Baker pretends delivered them to Mr. Alexander Thane, then Usher of the Black Rod, who with one Wheeler, a goldsmith (since deceased), without order from the House or any other lawful authority concealed the mitre and other things, or otherwise converted them to their own use without rendering any account of them. Petitioners pray that Baker, Thane, and the executors of Wheeler, may be summoned to appear and give account, and in case the goods shall be found in specie then that they may be restored, and if they have converted them then that they may answer the value, or that some other relief may be given to petitioners. Noted. Dismissed.

July 3. Draft of an Act for recording the matches and descents of the nobility and gentry of England, &c., and for preventing usurpations of their armorial achievements and irregularities in the bearing of them; the Bill provides for the future registration at the Office of Arms of the deaths, marriages, and issue of all persons entitled to bear arms, upon payment of certain fees, for the registration of all deaths, &c. that have happened during the twenty years last past, as far as can be ascertained, and for the punishment of stone cutters, carvers, and other artificers who without authority intermeddle with marshalling of arms, and erecting of funeral monuments whereon arms are to be fixed. (Heralds' Bill.) Read 1st. L. J., XI. 297. Read 2nd, and committed, 337. It does not appear that any report was made from the Committee.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.
- 2-8. Privileges, amendments, &c.

July 3. Draft of an Act for the better relief and employment of the poor, and punishment of vagrants and other disorderly persons within the cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and within the bills of mortality; the Bill proposes to establish a corporation consisting of a president, deputy president, treasurer, and one hundred and twenty assistants, the Lord Mayor of the city of London for the time being to be president, and ten of the assistants to be aldermen of the city of London, four assistants to be burgesses of Westminster, with power to apprehend any rogues, vagrants, sturdy beggars, idle and disorderly persons, and cause them to be kept and set to work, to punish rogues, and send them to the place of their birth or last abode, and if found begging or wandering to proceed against them as incorrigible, and to transport them to any English plantation beyond the seas; to apprehend any poor persons or children unable to work or to maintain themselves, and to punish them for refusing to work or to be educated; and in order to raise funds for the relief of sick, impotent, aged persons and others not able to work, so as to get a competent livelihood, the aldermen, burgesses, &c. within the several parishes shall have power to rate the inhabitants, and all funds raised or bequeathed for relief of the poor shall be paid to the treasurer for that purpose; the president and governors of the corporation are further empowered to erect workhouses for receiving, relieving, and setting the poor to work; houses of correction for punishing rogues, vagabonds, and beggars, and houses of transportation to entertain incorrigible rogues till they can be sent away to the English plantations; constables and overseers are by the Bill required to present to the justices at quarter sessions the names of such aged impotent persons and children who are fit to be relieved by weekly allowances; any persons who shall give or suffer to be given any alms or relief at his door shall forfeit a certain sum for every time he shall give such relief; the beadles are required to visit and clean the streets and highways of their parishes, to compel all cripples and beggars to return to their abodes, and to inflict the punishment upon them by law provided. This Bill, which was read 1st this day, appears to have been dropped in Committee. L. J., XI. 297, &c.

Annexed:—

1. List of committee on the Bill. 5 July.
2. List of aldermen and assistants to be members of the proposed corporation.
3. Report from the Committee on the Bill desiring the assistance of some of the King's counsel, &c. in fitting the Bill for report.

July 4. Petition of Francis Warner and William Love, late Sheriffs of the city of London; pray for renewal of an order of the House for their protection from a suit brought against them by Mary Edney and others for giving liberty to Mr. Thos. Bushell in obedience to an order of the House. L. J., XI. 298.

July 4. Report of the masters in Chancery to whom it was referred to examine the Bill concerning satisfaction to be given to the Marquess of Winchester out of Mr. Wallop's estate. L. J., XI. 299.

July 5. Petition of divers good Christians; they appeal to the King's declaration from Breda, and also his declaration concerning ecclesiastical affairs for liberty of tender consciences, that no man should be disquieted or called in question for matters of religion which do not disturb the peace of the kingdom, and pray that such Christians as intend only to make their calling and election sure, and to discharge a good conscience in their general and particular relations towards God and man, being desirous to live peaceably in all godliness and honesty, may have liberty to meet together to praise God, and to edify one another without incurring penalty under any penal law, or the displeasure of His Majesty, or of any under his authority. (Signed by Dr. Gell and others.) L. J., XI. 299.

Annexed:—

1. Scripture arguments against compulsion of conscience in matters divine. Endorsed: Doctor Gell's arguments. 12 July 1661.

July 5. Petition of divers persons commonly called Anabaptists in the behalf of themselves and others; they thank the King for the liberty of conscience they have enjoyed through his declaration from Breda, and that concerning ecclesiastical affairs, but still many of them have been disturbed and imprisoned for the exercise of their consciences in the worship of God, and they fear that they are still liable to be further troubled and debarred of their liberty if some statutes requiring exact conformity to the worship and discipline established should be rigorously put in execution against them; upon their application to his Majesty he referred them to Parliament, they therefore pray their lordships that they may not under any law be compelled to any outward form of worship contrary to the liberty and persuasion of their judgments and consciences, but that they may be protected in the liberty of professing and exercising their faith and worship in public and private from all force, injury, and molestation whilst they behave themselves soberly and peaceably. L. J., XI. 299.

July 5. Petition of Sir Richard Braham, Knight, a member of the Commons House of Parliament; before the late wars petitioner and Sir Hy. Vane, the elder, purchased an equal interest in the Supersedeas Office in the High Court of Chancery for lives; petitioner from the beginning of the wars continued in the service of his late Majesty, his goods were twice sequestered, and his life drawn into question for his loyalty, while in his absence Sir Henry Vane the elder received his share of the profits of the office to the extent of 4,000*l.*, and after his death his sons entered into possession of their father's estate, and by fraudulent agreement between themselves refuse to make satisfaction to petitioner, whose interest in the office was determined about three years ago; petitioner who has no other remedy for his losses prays the House to refer the matter to a committee for examination, and to give him redress. L. J., XI. 299.

July 6. Draft of an Act for the establishing articles and orders for the regulating and better government of His Majesty's navies, ships of war, and forces by sea. L. J., XI. 300. 13 Car. II. stat. I. c. 9.

July 6. Application on behalf of John Mills, tenant to Lord Crofts, that he may have the benefit of privilege in an action of ejectment brought against him by Thomas Targes. L. J., XI. 301.

July 8. Draft of an Act for the erecting a lighthouse for the preservation of ships at the Spurn Head, near the mouth of Humber; the Bill provides for the establishment of a lighthouse upon the place called the Spurn Head or Spurn Island, a very dangerous place where many ships have been cast away upon a sand stretching itself near two miles into the sea; and for levy of a penny per ton from every English and two-pence per ton from every foreign vessel passing by and having the benefit of the light. Read 1^a. L. J., XI. 301. No further proceeding.

July 8. Petition of John Stephens by order of the House Edward Marquess of Worcester was restored to all his possessions, and the tenants were required to stay all rents, yet in spite of this petitioner is sued for the possession and rent of a house in Blackfriars, part of the Marquess' possessions, by Andrew Wanley and Robert Barker; petitioner prays that the proceedings against him may be stayed.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order mentioned in preceding. 20 June 1660, renewed this day. L. J., XI. 302.

July 8. The King's speech on giving his assent to the Act for confirming public acts, and the Act for a free and voluntary present to his Majesty. In the King's handwriting. L. J., XI. 303. In extenso.

July 9. Petition of Chaloner Chute, Esq.; in the year 1656 petitioner's father bought the castle and park of the Devizes, Wilts, for 7,200*l*. from Mr. Levingston, his wife, and trustees who claimed the same under a fine levied by Lady Powell in 1651: Sir Peter Vanlore's heirs impeach this fine as obtained by force and fraud; petitioner prays that he may not suffer for the crime of others, but that should an Act be passed to vacate the fine in question, the annexed proviso may be added for his protection. Noted. Nothing done it. See L. J., XI. 304.

Annexed:—

1. Draft proviso excepting the castle and park of the Devizes from the operation of the proposed Act.

July 9. Petition of William Lord Stourton; in 1655 petitioner exhibited a Bill in chancery against William Lord Petre for relief from payment of a sum of 3,000*l*. residue of 6,000*l*. payable before the late wars for the marriage portion of Mary, eldest daughter of Robert Lord Petre, father of Wm. Lord Petre, to Edward Stourton, son and heir of petitioner; the cause has been three times brought to a hearing, and on the last occasion Lord Petre having no other refuge claimed privilege of peerage, as appears by the annexed order; as the cause has continued so long, and is between peer and peer, petitioner prays the House either to hear the cause, or to order Lord Petre to waive his privilege.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the cause in the Court below staying the further hearing on account of Lord Petre's claim to privilege of peerage.

July 9. Petition of John Petre, Esq.; petitioner in and before the year 1640 lent 8,000*l*. to Edward Marquess of Worcester, secured by judgment, but after 20 years agreed to accept the principal only without interest; in March last the Marquess consented that petitioner should extend any of his lands for satisfaction of the judgment, and accordingly petitioner extended those in the county of Southampton, but, notwithstanding his consent, the Marquess has procured an order from the House to stay proceedings; petitioner prays that on consideration of the circumstances he may be allowed to prosecute the extent without any breach of the privilege of Parliament.

July 10. Affidavit of Wm. Lillie that Wm. Firth, a servant of Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham, has been arrested at the suit of Robert Johnson contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 305.

July 11. Petition of above six hundred distressed Protestants, late sufferers by the horrid rebellion in Ireland. Having been defeated of relief out of the collection in England in 1641, and also of that in Holland, they appealed to their Lordships, and were by them referred to the Committee for Petitions, which has, however, never sat, and petitioners, whose numbers have been reduced from 1,700 to 600 by want and distress, now pray that a Committee may be appointed to examine their case before the adjournment, that so they may be the nearer relief by their Lordships compassion. July 11. Draft order referring preceding petition to the Committee for the Bill concerning the poor, &c. L. J., XI. 306.

July 11. Application for an order for securing the Earl and Countess of Manchester in quiet possession of the fishing in the river of Burnham alias Wallfleet and Ray Sands, in the county of Essex, formerly belonging to Edward Earl of Sussex. L. J., XI. 306.

July 12. Draft of an Act for the settling of the estate of James, late Duke of Richmond and Lennox, according to agreement of Charles Duke of Richmond and Lennox, Mary Duchess Dowager of Richmond and Lennox, and the Lady Mary her daughter, and the trustees of the said Lady Duchess. This bill, which was read 1^a this day, received the royal assent on the 19th of May 1662. L. J., XI. 307, &c.

Annexed:—

1-4. Amendments and provisoes.

July 13. Draft of an Act for the vesting and settling all such money, goods, and other things in His Majesty which were received, levied, or collected in these late times and are remaining in the hands or possession of any treasurers, receivers, collectors, or others. This Bill, which was brought from the House of Commons this day, received the royal assent on the 30th instant. L. J., XI. 308, &c. 13 Car. II., Stat. I. c. 3.

July 13. Affidavit of Walter Lloyd that the rents of certain lands in the county of Herts, the subject of an action of ejectment between Wm. Goodwyn and John Davys, have for some years past been paid to Edward Lord Howard of Escrick, as guardian of Wm. Lord Boteler, an idiot, son and heir of John, late Lord Boteler. L. J., XI. 308.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Thomas Jekyll, attorney for the defendant in the cause. 10 July.

July 15. Petition of Robert Pory, clerk, chaplain in ordinary to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Complains that Matthew Hardy, having become joint purchaser with the infamous and lately executed traitor Scot, of Lambeth House, and particularly of the chapel, did, out of professed enmity to the Episcopal order and his sacrilegious and covetous mind, cause the body of Matthew Parker, sometime Archbishop of Canterbury, to be taken out of its tomb, and for the base gain of the lead in which it was wrapped to be stripped and thrown into some obscure hole, which he cannot by any persuasions be induced to discover. Petitioner prays that Hardy may be at least required to reveal where the bones of the Archbishop are, in order that they may be restored to the place where they were first deposited in the chapel (which is now repairing), as the monument is still extant, and capable of being again fixed in the place where originally it was erected. L. J., XI. 309.

July 15. List of Committee to whom the examination of the matter mentioned in preceding petition was referred. L. J., XI. 309.

July 15. Petition of James Waynwright, Esq. At the importunity of Charles Earl of Derby, petitioner purchased of the late usurpers part of the manors belonging to the Earl's father, but now the Earl has forcibly entered on the said manors under pretence of certain orders of the House, and keeps petitioner out of possession without giving him any satisfaction. Petitioner prays to be restored to possession. See L. J., XI. 310.

July 15. Petition of Sir John Trevor, Knight, Colonel George Twisleton, and Andrew Ellice, Esq. Complain that having purchased the manors of Hope and Mold, in the county of Flint, from Charles Earl of Derby, and having enjoyed quiet possession, the rents are now stayed in the hands of the tenants under colour of an order of the House of the 14th of June 1660, and a mill, timber, &c. has been seized by Edward Price in the name of the Earl of Derby. They pray to be restored to the possession of their property. See L. J., XI. 310.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 14 June 1660.

cerned with them as adventurers in the draining of the great level of the fens. They complain of the provisions of the Bill relating to the claims of the Earl of Bedford and others, and pray that they may not be turned out of possession of their lands without a legal hearing. L. J., XI. 314.

July 19. Draft of an Act for the erecting of a Court at York. Read 1st this day. L. J., XI. 314. No further proceeding.

July 19. Draft of an Act for the empowering of Sir Courtney Poole and Sir John Drake, Barons, and others to make payment of the portion of Ellen Briscoe, widow, one of the daughters of Sir John Drake, Knight, by sale of the manor of Lymington in the county of Somerset, or by granting estates out of the same or otherwise. L. J., XI. 315, &c. The Bill passed through all stages in both Houses, but the royal assent was refused.

July 19. Engrossment of preceding. Noted. Le roy s'aviserà. (Parchment Collection.)

July 19. Application for an order for stay of proceedings in an action of ejectment brought against certain tenants of the Marquess of Winchester contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 315.

July 20. Engrossment of an Act for confirmation of the office of Register of sales and pawns made to retailing brokers in London and Westminster and places adjacent. The Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, passed through all its stages, but the royal assent was refused. Noted. Le roy s'aviserà. L. J., XI. 316, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

July 20. Petition of Sir James Thynne, Knight. Prays that before the passing of a Bill now before the House for settling certain lands upon Sir Henry Fredk. Thynne, he may be heard at the bar, as he alleges that the lands were unduly settled by Sir Thos. Thynne, under the influence of his second wife Katherine, daughter of Lord Coventry. L. J., XI. 316.

July 22. Petition of Robert Hampson, Esq. On the 27th of June last he was served with an order to make up within three weeks certain Rolls in the Statute Office for the years 1634 to 1640, which could not be transcribed in many months. Petitioner conceives that as an executor he is not compellable by law to make up the said rolls, but he is willing to yield obedience to the order of the House if he may have convenient time to do so after his return to London, which will be about the beginning of next term, and during his stay in town he will give copies of any statutes for which there may be occasion; he therefore prays for such convenient time after the 15th of October next as the length of the business may require. L. J., XI. 317.

July 22. Petition of the inhabitants of the town of Lowestoft, in the county of Suffolk. The matter of law in the complaint of the poor petitioners against the rich inhabitants of Yarmouth was referred by the House to the judges, but owing to the great affairs of the nation and the approaching assizes nothing can be done before October or December; petitioners therefore pray that they may be protected in the free exercise of their trade of herring fishing without molestation from the Yarmouth men until the Judges shall deliver their opinion. L. J., XI. 317.

July 23. Petition of John Walker, Reading Clerk to the House of Peers. He has during the last and this Parliament performed the service of his place both in the House and at all Committees, but there is no allowance made to the Reading Clerk upon the passing of private bills, nor any considerable advantage (other than the credit of so honourable a service) accruing to the office. Petitioner prays their Lordships to consider his faithful and constant discharge of his employment, and to order him such recompense as to them shall seem reasonable. L. J., XI. 318.

July 23. Petition of the Doorkeepers of the House. They have attended daily both this and the last session, but have not as yet received any salary; they pray their Lordships to establish some salary or gratuity for the time they have served, and for their future provision. L. J., XI. 318.

July 23. Petition of the sixteen Sergeants-at-arms in ordinary to His Majesty. They have constantly attended, according to their Lordships' order, in the Painted Chamber and thereabouts to prevent disorders; heretofore the sergeants-at-arms had an allowance from the Court, but the allowance is only 12^d for every day's attendance, and it is so difficult to get that they have little benefit from it, and when this sum was fixed 300 years ago it was more than 100 shillings is now. They pray to be recommended to His Majesty for such an allowance as may encourage them to perform their duty and afford them support answerable to the quality of their place.

July 25. Engrossment of an Act for discharging those whose estates have been sold, sequestered, or decimated for adhering to His Majesty or his Royal father, from all interest except three pounds per centum. This Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, was read 1st and rejected on the 27th. L. J., XI. 320, 323.

July 25. Petition of Wm. Lord Monson. (L. J., XI. 320) as follows:—

To the Right Honourable the Howse of Peeres in Parliam^t assembled.

The humble petition of William Lord Mounson: Sheweth

That your Pet^r (without his Knowledge or consent) was vnhappyly nominated by y^e then pretended Parliam^t to bee one of y^e Judges to sitt vpon y^e tryall of his late sacred Ma^{tie} (of ever blessed memory) and y^e your Pet^r vnfortunately and contrary to his inclynations, for which he humbly begs pardon of God, his now Ma^{tie}, and y^e world did sitt at y^e first, though with designes of duty and Loyalty, if possible to prevent that horrid murder by wyning others to oppose it, but findeing theire violence and bloody designe, was not to bee declyned, hee withdrew himselfe with a great abhorrence of it, as hee is able to proove.

That notwithstanding this, and y^e last Parliaments intentions of mercy to him, in excepting him from a iustly deserved death, hee is now vnder a sentence, soe much beyond it as hee had rather chose to dye a thousand tymes then to outlive y^e shame and Ignominy of itt

Therefore your Pet^r humbly prayeth y^t since hee is more tymely sorrowfull for his fault, then his misfortune, your Lord^{shps} would bee pleased to looke vpon him as a person fitt for y^r mercy and y^t out of your wonted clemency and goodness you would be pleased to remitt such parte of his sentence especially what is most ignominious in it, as you shall thinke fitt since his Crime proceeded rather from an Error in Judgment then disaffection

And your Pet^r shall pray: &c:

WILLIAM MONSON.

July 25. Petition of Sir Henry Mildmay (See L. J. XI. 320) as follows:—

To the right hon^{ble} the Lords in Parliament assembled.

The humble petition of S^r Henry Mildmay

In all humility sheweth:

That yo^r pet^r, being most deeply sensible of y^e iust displeasure of y^e hon^{ble} House of Commons declared against hym & others in the Bill there latelie passed for paines, penalties, and forfeitures, and now depending before yo^r Lo^{shps}, the offence therein charged against him being for sitting and acting in that p^tended high Court of justice for trying & iudging of His late Ma^{tie} of blessed memorie: The onlie end w^{ch} your pet^r proposed to hymselfe for his appearing in that pretended Court, was, that hee might by his being there p^sent, and observing of theire proceedings, bee the better able to improve his utmost care and industry according to his allegiance, and speciall dutie to His late Ma^{ty}, to preserue His said Ma^{ties} life, w^{ch} yo^r pet^r endeavored wth all his diligence; and then also did (as hee now doeth), in the sinceritie of His heart, declare his utter abhorrenciae and detestac^{on} of that most wicked murder of His late Ma^{tie}.

And inasmuch as the suddennes of yo^r pet^r's last appearing before the hon^{ble} House of Commons was such that hee had not then tyme to make prooffe there of this his allegation.

His most humble prayer therefore to yo^r Lo^{shps} now is that before the said Bill bee passed yo^r Lo^{shps} most hon^{ble} House, yo^r pet^r may haue liberty to produce his testimony to yo^r Lo^{shps} for cleering soe much of y^e integrity of his intentions, w^{ch}, howeuer it may weigh with yo^r good Lo^{shps}, hee shall humbly submit to yo^r righteous Judgment; Beseeching yo^r Lo^{shps} in y^e bowells of y^e compassion to him and his distressed children to commiserate his sad condition.

And (as in duty bound) hee shall, &c.

HENRY: Mildmay:

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Dr. E. Warner that Sir Henry Mildmay is suffering from a rapture, and that if the sentence of drawing him in a sledge from the Tower to Tyburn were put in execution it would endanger his life.

July 25. Petition of Robert Wallop (L. J., XI. 320), as follows:—

To the right hon^{ble} the Lords assembled in Parliament.
The humble petⁿ of Robert Wallop, Esqr.
In all humbleness sheweth

That (lying under the insupportable burthen and sense of the iust displeasure of the hon^{ble} House of Commons manifested in their sentence lately pronounced against him; And being apprehensive that the cause inducing that hon^{ble} House soe to proceede against him was for his appearing in the p^tended high Court of Justice for tryal of His late Ma^{tie}) Yo^r pet^r ever did, and doeth from His soule abhorre and detest that most horrid and execrable murder of his late Ma^{tie}; And his appearing in that p^tended Court was for noe other cause but that hee might gaine an advantage thereby of being instrumental in the uprightness of his heart to p^rserve y^e life of His late Ma^{tie}. That being surprized with the suddenesse of his last appearing before y^e hon^{ble} House of Commons, hee had not opportunity by any other evidence then his owne personal assertion and protestac^on to prove y^e truth of what is herein alleaged.

That y^e Bill for paines penalties and forfeitures (wherein yo^r pet^r is most unhappily included) being transmitted from the House of Com^{ons} to your Lo^{pps}.

Yo^r pet^r doeth therefore most humbly beseech your good Lo^{pps} to comiserate his most sad and deplorable condic^on, and to extend yo^r mercie to him and his distressed wife and Children; and for clearing the Integrity of his intentions in this matter, that hee may have libertie before y^e passing of the sayd Bill to produce his testimony and prooffe before your Lo^{pps}.

And yo^r pet^r (as in duty bound) shall euer pray &c.

July 25. Petition of Katherine Lady Harrington, the distressed wife of Sir James Harrington; she is the daughter of Sir Edmund Wright, who was a loyal subject and great sufferer for his late Majesty, and the wife of a miserable gentleman of an ancient family, who has justly fallen under the displeasure of His Majesty and of Parliament, and is reserved to pains and penalties, which will fall not on him only but on the innocent also, on her and on her twelve poor undisposed children; she prays that at least the small proportion of her own father's inheritance, in which her husband never had any interest except in her right, may be preserved to her, that so the punishment of her husband may not extend to take away the bread of his innocent relations.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso saving the lands settled upon Dame Katherine Harrington in jointure.
2. Another copy.
3. Proviso saving certain lands, the inheritance of Sir Edmund Wright, and by him settled upon Lady Harrington.
4. Notes respecting the lands mentioned in preceding proviso.
5. Petition of the creditors of Sir James Harrington: petitioners, as innocent persons who lent money to Sir James long before Michaelmas 1659, pray that they may not by the Bill of pains and penalties be debarred their just debts.
6. Proposed proviso saving any grant, bargain, or sale made by Sir James Harrington, without fraud, for payment of his just debts.

[July 25.] Petition of Sir John Smyth, Knight; prays that the annexed proviso to secure a debt due to him, from Sir Hy. Wallop, deceased, and Robert Wallop his son, may be inserted in the Bill for forfeiture of Robert Wallop's estate.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.

[July 25.] Petition of Nicholas Delves; Sir Henry Norton, son and heir apparent of Sir Gregory Norton, deceased, entered into a statute of 700*l.* to petitioner on the 12th of March 1659–60, petitioner being moved to furnish the money because he had often heard that Sir Gregory Norton had disinherited his son for his affection to His Majesty. Sir Henry was involved in a long and expensive suit at law before he could regain his estate. Petitioner did not know at the time he lent the money that Sir Gregory Norton had been in any way concerned in his late Majesty's death. Parliament having been pleased to allow all statutes, &c. upon the estates of such persons as are reserved to pains and penalties until September 1659, petitioner had hopes his debt had been therein comprehended and secured, but finding the Bill has passed the House of Commons, and that he is therein excluded only in point of time, he prays that in case their Lordships shall think fit to take away the estate of Sir Henry Norton, they will allow petitioner's statute by way of proviso to the Bill.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso.
2. Duplicate of preceding.

[July 25.] Petition of Angell Grey; his wife's mother Lady Elizabeth Griffin did out of affection to his younger children put the sum of 3,000*l.* at his disposing upon trust to pay her the interest for life, and after her death to divide the principal amongst his children, and he thereupon by indenture of the 24th of January 1637–8 gave security for the performance of the trust, and Sir John Danvers and others as sureties, gave Lady Griffin a bond for the 3,000*l.* and interest; but when petitioner compounded under the articles of Oxford for his service to his late Majesty, this debt was pretended to be forfeited, and the bond was taken from petitioner and Lady Elizabeth Griffin and given up to Sir John Danvers, by which petitioner was left responsible both for interest and principal; he prays for satisfaction with damages out of the estate of Sir John Danvers, which will be liable to forfeiture under an intended Act of Parliament.

Annexed:—

1. Proposed proviso to the Bill of pains and penalties, charging certain of the lands of Sir John Danvers with the 3,000*l.*

[July 25.] Proposed proviso to the Bill for pains and penalties, saving a debt of 1,200*l.* due from Sir John Danvers to Dame Philippa Carey, widow of Sir Ferdinando Carey.

[July 25.] Proposed proviso to the Bill of pains and penalties, making the land of Sir Arthur Haselrigg liable for a bond for repayment of 517*l.* 10*s.* to Elizabeth Viscountess Dowager of Campden, deceased, which debt now belongs to Sir Erasmus de la Fontaine.

July 27. Engrossment of an Act for paving and repairing the highways from Charing Cross to the Stone Bridge beyond Piccadilly, and from Charing Cross to St. James', and from thence to the common road and so round the wall of St. James' Park and up to Hyde Park. This Bill, which was brought from the House of Commons this day, was afterwards dropped on a point of privilege. L. J., XI. 323, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

[July 27.] Petition of Thomas Clarke and Jane his wife, the late wife and executrix of Nicholas Bourne, late citizen and stationer of London, deceased (addressed to the Committee for regulating abuses in printing); Bourne purchased for his own copy certain forms for printing bills of lading, for indentures for binding servants to planters in the Islands of Virginia, New England, Barbadoes, St. Christophers, the Summer Islands, &c., and for bills of debts for money, tobacco, &c., and according to a decree of the Star Chamber of the 11th year of his late Majesty, and the orders of the Stationers' Company, entered these forms in the public register for his own particular copies; but during the late licentious times several persons printed and reprinted these forms at their own pleasure without the consent of Nicholas Bourne, or of the petitioners whose just right they now are; they pray that provisions may be made in the Act now before the House to secure their interest in these forms. Endorsed: Printinge. The Bill to restrain unlicensed and disorderly printing was read 1^a, 2^a, and committed this day. L. J., XI. 324.

[July 27.] Petition of Peter Cole; petitioner has laid out his own money and that of divers orphans to the amount of 5,000*l.* in purchasing the copies and printing divers books of anatomy, &c. and in cutting larger and better brass plates for several of them than ever were printed in England before; much is already printed and above 5,000 sheets ready for the press, and if hindered by the charges of licensing, the sale will be spoilt, and petitioner and the orphans ruined; he prays that a proviso saving to him the right of printing all books of anatomy, &c., registered as his in the Book of the Company of Stationers, may pass in the Bill for regulating printing.

Annexed:—

1. Catalogue of his books, with their prices.
2. Proposed proviso.

July 29. Affidavit of William Blounte; he was arrested in Holborn about a fortnight ago by Thomas Adams a sheriff's officer, but not having his protection from Lord Abergavenny about him, he left a ring as a pledge with Mathew Bull, an innholder, till he should produce the protection, and when he did so Bull, and Adams, confederating together, refused to restore either the ring or the protection. Dec. 4. Petition of John Apsley, of Gray's Inn. Prays that the Bill now before Parliament for confirming the estates of His Majesty's copyhold tenants within the honor of Clitheroe, so far as the same concerns him, may be suspended until he has been heard. L. J., XI. 342.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Colonel John Apsley. Petitioner has new matter and evidence which till now he could not attain unto to enforce the truth and equity of his former petition. He therefore prays to be further heard.

Dec. 4. Petition of Thomas Combe. Petitioner, who formerly had a good estate, is now ruined by the illegal and irregular references and proceedings of the late pretended Lord Commissioner, Sir Bulstrode Whitelock, and others. Prays that the persons complained against may be summoned before their Lordships to show cause why he should not have satisfaction for the injuries he has sustained by their means and procurement.

Annexed:

1. Statement of petitioner's case.

Dec. 4. Petition of Dorothy and Elizabeth Lake, daughters to Sir Thomas Lake and Dame Dorothy his wife, deceased. Petitioners pray that steps may be taken for raising their portions of 3,000*l.* a-piece, to which they are entitled under the settlement made upon the marriage of their father, Sir Thomas Lake with Dorothy, the sister of the Earl of Rutland, and for the preservation of the estate of their brother, the present Sir Thomas Lake, until he come of age.

Dec. 5. Draft of an Act to confirm the sale of certain lands sold by Ferdinando, late Earl of Huntingdon, for the payment of his own and his father's debts. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 343, &c.

Dec. 6. Draft of an Act to prevent the inconvenience arising by melting the silver coin of this realm. L. J., XI. 343. 13 & 14 Car. II. cap. 31.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of portion of the Act.

Dec. 9. Petition of Robert Pory, chaplain in ordinary to the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Mathew Hardy having been convicted before a Committee of their Lordships of a most sacrilegious and inhuman act of taking up the body of Mathew Parker, some time Archbishop of Canterbury, despoiling it of the lead wherein it was wrapt, and throwing it into a dunghill, was on the 24th July last ordered by their Lordships to take up the bones of the Archbishop, and put them in the same place where they were first buried, and to erect a tomb over the place of burial as formerly, which order having been duly served upon Hardy he has not obeyed. Petitioner prays that such punishment may be awarded to Hardy as their Lordships shall deem to be deserved by him for his wilful disobedience, added to so abominable a violence committed upon the corpse of that venerable prelate. L. J., XI. 346.

Dec. 9. Petition of Sir Edward Turner, Speaker of the House of Commons, and others, reversioners of several offices and places in the city of London. By the ancient usage and custom of the city of London grants or designations in reversions have been made by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of several offices within the city, and the persons so designed have been admitted to the offices as they became void. Petitioners having such grants have spent much time to fit themselves to succeed, and their parents and friends in expectation of preferment and benefit to come unto them by the said offices have left the less portions to them. During the late troubles, by the power of Isaac Pennington, during his mayoralty, in order to bring in John Bradshaw, an interruption was made in the ancient course of proceeding, and thereby petitioners were debarred the benefits of their grants. They pray that the lord mayor and court of aldermen may be ordered to make good their predecessors' grants by removing those who have intruded, and by admitting petitioners to the enjoyment of their respective offices according to their several grants and designations. L. J., XI. 346.

Dec. 9. Answer of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London to the petition of divers persons, styling themselves reversioners to several offices and places within the said city. The defendants commence by stating that the petition is too general for them to make a particular answer thereunto, nevertheless in obedience to their Lordships' order they humbly offer a general answer to the petitioners' general allegations. Two several petitions have lately been presented to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen to the same effect as the petition presented to their Lordships, whereof the persons possessed of the offices having notice, learned counsel on both sides were heard several days, and it then plainly appeared that all the petitioners' grants or designations which were then produced were expressly contrary to the orders of the Court of Aldermen, the acts of Common Council, and the ancient customs of the city of London; the Court did not therefore conceive it just to give the petitioners' admittance, and thereby enable them to bring vexatious suits for places to which they had no right. The defendants deny many of the allegations contained in the petition, and state, that they know not any of the present officers of the city, who are not and have not been during all the late troubles loyally affected towards His Majesty and his late Royal Father, that many of them have adventured their lives and estates in his late Majesty's service, and been signally instrumental to his now Majesty's happy restoration, many of them have nothing but their offices to support them, and have a clear and just interest and freehold therein, and cannot by any law, reason, good policy, or conscience be divested or hindered of their said places or offices. L. J., XI. 346.

Dec. 10. Draft of an Act for the restoring of Charles Earl of Derby to the manors of Mold and Moldsdale, Hope and Hopesdale, in the county of Flint. Read 1st this day. L. J., XI. 347. The Bill passed through all stages, but the royal assent was refused 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 471.

Dec. 10. Engrossment of preceding. Noted. Le Roy s'avisera.

Dec. 11. Petition of Dorothea Gifford, widow, in behalf of herself and six children. Petitioner prays that the Under-sheriff of Middlesex may have leave to execute a writ granted by the Court of King's Bench, to enable petitioner to obtain possession of certain houses in High Holborn, notwithstanding the pretended privileges of Lord Mohun, who claims to have an interest therein. L. J., XI. 347.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Stoughton Arnold, Under-sheriff of Middlesex, that Lord Mohun threatened to lay deponent and his High Sheriff by the heels for breach of privilege if they executed the writ of possession. 7 Dec. 1661.

Dec. 13. Petition of Edmond Humfrey. Prays that a verdict obtained against him in the Court of Common Pleas by Robert Peyton, one of the examiners in Chancery, by indirect practices, and all proceedings thereupon, may be stayed until their Lordships shall hear the cause.

Dec. 18. Draft of an Act for the regulation and restraining the excessive number of hackney coaches in and about the cities of London and Westminster and the places adjacent. Read 1st this day. The Bill was committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 354, &c.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 19 Dec.
2. Application that the Bill may be respited, as another Bill for the same purpose is in a state of forwardness in the House of Commons, and will very suddenly be with their Lordships.

Dec. 18. Draft of an Act for discharging the manors of Stadscomb and Holwell, and other lands in the county of Devon, from the trust of one hundred and fifty years, made unto John Earl of Exeter, John Earl of Bridgewater, and Oliver Earl of Bollingbrooke. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 354, &c.

Dec. 20. The King's speech to both Houses, thanking them for the grant of 7,000*l.* a month for eighteen months. In the King's handwriting. L. J., XI. 358. In extenso.

[Dec.—] Petition of the cardmakers and wiredrawers of the counties of Worcester, Gloucester, and Salop, to the House of Commons. In the reigns of James I. and Charles I. the whole trade of cardmaking and wire-drawing was nearly spoiled by vagabondious persons, void of habitation, who travelled from place to place collecting old cards, from which they drew out the teeth, scoured them, turned the leaves of the cards and reset the teeth in them, fixed them on new boards, and having counterfeited the marks of substantial cardmakers sold them to the country people. A penal law was in consequence put in execution against the offenders, and the trade again flourished; but since the late unhappy wars there are more deceitful persons sprung up, who not only sell their base commodities in England and Wales, but transport great quantities into Ireland, almost levelling the trade to the ground, to the great disabling of many families that formerly lived in good estate. Petitioners pray that the offenders may be punished. This petition is undated, but was probably presented about Dec. 1661, as the Bill, 13 & 14 Car. II. cap. 19., which contains such a provision as that for which petitioners pray was at that time passing through the House of Commons.

Petition of John Sympson, his Majesty's jeweller in ordinary. In 1639 petitioner married the daughter of Richard Swift, and soon afterwards, upon the breaking out of the war, having to attend his late Majesty at Oxford, conveyed to his father-in-law, by writing, but without taking a counterpart, certain houses, jewels, ready money, and debts to a great value, in trust for himself, his wife and children, hoping thereby to secure his estate from being seized by the then pretended authority. Richard Swift is now dead, and John his eldest son, under pretence of his executorship, refuses to render petitioner any satisfaction. He prays for relief.

Petition of George Adams. Prays for relief against Edward Hollister and others with respect to the equity of redemption of certain houses and messuages in the city of Bristol, mortgaged many years since by William Carne, petitioner's ancestor, the Court of Chancery refusing to give relief in point of redemption after so many years.

E 34062.

Petition of Thomas Chanterell, clerk. Petitioner was, according to the late Act of Parliament, for restoring the right of patronage to Peers, presented by the Earl of Strafford to the rectory of Thurnscoe, in the county of York, and has been duly instituted and inducted; but Mr. Benton, a pretended minister, by an authority from the late tyrant Richard Cromwell violently keeps petitioner out of possession, for which he is forced to bring his action at the common law. He prays that until the question be decided the profits of the living may be sequestered into the hands of the churchwardens.

Petition of Margaret Whitehorne; prays for relief against a decree in Chancery made in 1658.

Annexed:—

1. Notes of the opinions of the Lords Commissioners Lisle and Fiennes on the case. 10 May 1658.
2. Another petition of same for a rehearing.

1661-2.

Jan. 7. Engrossment of an Act for competent allowances to be made to such curates as shall officiate in livings where the proper incumbents do not reside. The Act recites that many ecclesiastical persons, who are qualified by the law to hold more than one benefice, often give such small allowance for serving their cures that few or no persons of ability will undertake that employment, and it therefore enacts that every person holding more than one benefice with cure of souls shall find an able curate constantly to reside in every benefice where they themselves shall not personally reside, and shall pay such curate fifty pounds per annum at the least, or the full moiety of the yearly profit of the living. It further enacts that all securities, bonds, contracts, and agreements made between parsons and their curates for less than the Act provides to be paid shall be utterly void. The Bill was brought from the Commons, read 1st, 2nd, and committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 358.

Jan. 7. Draft of an Act to enable the sale of some of the lands of William Milward, Esquire, for payment of his debts. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 359, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John Earl of Thanet, as well on behalf of the Lady Christian, his sister, wife of William Milward, as of the several children of the said lady by the said William. A Bill has been brought in for enabling the sale of several manors and lands, wherein Milward has only an estate for life, under pretence of payment of debts. The inheritance of the said manors and lands (expectant on the estate for life of William Milward) is by virtue of an ancient settlement lawfully vested in the children of Lady Christian, which settlement was the principal grounds that induced the marriage, and the debts (if any) were not contracted upon the honourable account pretended by the Bill, but by the ill husbandry of Milward, as petitioner can prove. He prays that the Bill may not pass. See L. J., XI. 410.

Jan. 8. Petition of Mathew Hardy. On the 24th of July last their Lordships ordered him to replace the bones of Mathew Parker, formerly Archbishop of Canterbury, in the place where he was first buried, and to erect a tomb as formerly was. In obedience to this order petitioner went to Lambeth House with an intent to have performed the same, but was denied entrance by the Archbishop's servants. On the 13th of December last petitioner was ordered into the custody of the Sergeant-at-arms for a supposed contempt, and has ever since continued a close prisoner. He prays to be enlarged and that his witnesses may be heard. L. J., XI. 360.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Samuel Hardy and others, that on the 4th of November last by direction of Mathew Hardy they repaired to Lambeth House with spades and other instruments to search for the bones of Archbishop Parker, but the servants of the present Archbishop would not allow them to search.

Jan. 8. Petition of Robert Nelson. In 1657 William Lenthall, pretending himself to be Master of the Rolls, received of petitioner the sum of 50*l.*, upon condition to make a lease to him of certain houses in Fetter Lane upon surrender of a former lease. Lenthall being now incapable to take a surrender or renew the lease, and knowing that petitioner has no remedy either in law or equity, most unjustly endeavours to defraud him of the 50*l.* He prays for relief.

Jan. 8. Petition of Richard Walker. Prays that

Jan. 15. Petition of William Bullocke. Petitioner prays that a bill of his cause against William Standen he may have leave to make use of the depositions of witnesses taken about twelve years since upon the former hearing of the cause, many of his most material witnesses being now dead, and others so aged and infirm that they cannot come up to be examined.

Jan. 13. Draft of an Act for enabling Sir Anthony Browne to sell lands for payment of debts. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 363, &c.

Jan. 16. Draft of an Act for preventing the frequent abuses in printing seditious, treasonable, and unlicensed books and pamphlets, and for regulating of printing and printing presses. L. J., XI. 305, &c. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 33.

Annexed:—

1-2. Amendments to preceding.

Jan. 16. Statement respecting the arrest of Clement Oxonbridge, servant to Richard Earl of Carbery (Lord Vaughan) contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 365.

Jan. 17. Petition of Philip Chetwind and Mary his wife, late the widow of Robert Allott, stationer, deceased. Petitioners have paid more than 8,000*l.* to clear the estate of Robert Allott, and have no means to reimburse themselves out by the printing and profits of such original copies as he had purchased, which copies the petitioner Mary was before her second marriage persuaded to assign over in trust to John Legatt and Andrew Crook, stationers, under pretence (petitioner Philip not being free of the Company) that they would by their intermarriage forfeit their right to them. This trust has been the father of a long and expensive twenty years' suit in Chancery, to the utter ruin of petitioners. They pray that some proviso may be inserted in the Bill for regulating printing now before their Lordships, by which the widows and orphans of stationers, booksellers, and printers, who are by law liable to pay the debts of their husbands and fathers, may enjoy the benefit of their purchases, and being free of the city of London (though not free of that particular Company) may have leave to enter their copies in the public register at Stationers' Hall, and not be enforced to make use of trustees, which by woeful experience has proved the ruin of many poor souls. L. J., XI. 366.

Annexed:—

1-2. Two draft provisos to the Bill for regulating printing for the protection of petitioners' rights.

3. Draft proviso granting certain privileges to the widows and orphans of stationers, &c.

4. Petition of the Master and Wardens of the Company of Stationers, London. Petitioners understand that some addresses have lately been made to their Lordships by certain printers, with propositions for better regulating of printing, as is pretended, but which petitioners conceive to be of a contrary nature. They pray to be heard to give their reasons against what is offered by Mr. Chetwind and others before anything be done therein, petitioners not doubting to satisfy their Lordships that the great design of these printers is to obstruct the passing of the Bill, and to gain to themselves the estates of petitioners and others. (Undated.)

Jan. 18. Draft of an Act for erecting a Court at York. The Act recites that doubts have arisen concerning the legality of the Court formerly held at York, the Court has been for divers years suspended, whereby the good people of that county so far remote have been necessitated to attend the Courts at Westminster to their great inconvenience, and provides for the erecting of a Court and the establishment of a Prison at York, Councils in the north, the appointment of officers, forms of proceeding, &c. At the end of the draft are the oaths to be taken by the different officers, ranging from the councillors to the gaoler, and the fees to be paid by the suitors. The Bill was read 1st this day. L. J., XI. 366. On the 25th of a long and angry debate upon a second time of bringing the Bill forward, and the Bill does not appear to have been further proceeded on. L. J., XI. 370.

Jan. 20. Draft of an Act for continuing, explaining, and enlarging an Act intitled an Act for the levying of certain moneys due upon the collection for the Protestants of Piedmont. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 367.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John Escoffier and James Bastie, deputies of the reformed churches in the valleys of Piedmont. Petitioners detail the circumstances under which the Act for the levying of certain moneys due upon the collection of the Protestants of Piedmont was passed (vide 10 Sept. 1660), and pray that in the Bill now before Parliament provision may be made for confirming that Act, that all the moneys yet unpaid, and by the said Act to be paid to the Chamberlain of London, may be paid to petitioners or to their assigns, in order that petitioners may return to their churches, in this juncture of time as much afflicted as ever they were; and that in case the administrators of Nathaniel Temms and Martin Noel fail of the payments in the Act mentioned, and the churches should be obliged to send other deputies, then that the said administrators should defray all the charges of such deputies, both for their journeys and subsistence, as they have already engaged to do.

Jan. 23. Amendments to the Bill concerning Sir Henry Frederick Thynne, reported from the Committee this day. L. J., XI. 369.

Jan. 24. Petition of Francis Farington. Petitioner's cause against Chamberlaine and Briggs was opened before their Lordships on Friday last, but there was not time to hear any witnesses. He therefore prays that another day may be appointed.

Jan. 27. Draft of an Act for relief of creditors and release of poor prisoners imprisoned for debt in the several gaols, prisons, counters, holes, and dungeons within the kingdom of England and principality of Wales unable to satisfy their creditors. The Bill provides for the immediate release, without payment of any fees, of all prisoners for debt, who upon their corporal oaths taken before a justice of the peace shall swear that they are not worth ten pounds in estate, their bedding, plough tackle, plough cattle, working tools, and instrument belonging to their several trades, arts, or callings always to be excepted. Prisoners who possess real or personal estate are to divide the same into three equal parts, two to be disposed of for the payment of their debts, and the remaining third part to be reserved for the subsistence of their families and the education of their children, and they are then to be forthwith set at liberty and not to be questioned thereafter by any of their creditors for debts due before the time of such discharge. Any person in prison for the debt of another shall have power to dispose of two-third parts of the estate of the person for whose debt he lieth imprisoned, and if he be insolvent then the other surety or sureties (if any) shall bear an equal part of the debt with the person imprisoned. If a debtor declares the true value of his estate he shall have six months' liberty for the better sale and disposal thereof. Read 1st this day. L. J., XI. 371. No further proceeding.

Jan. 27. Petition of John Levet, Doctor of Laws, and Marie his wife. Petitioners complain that Francis Neville, by procuring certain leases to be forged, and other corrupt practices, obtained orders in the Star Chamber, whereby a provision of 800*l.* per annum has been kept from them for twenty-eight years. They pray their Lordships to re-hear the cause upon the proofs taken in the Star Chamber. L. J., XI. 371.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same, praying their Lordships to take preceding petition into consideration. (Undated.)

2. Petition of John Levet to the Committee for Petitions, praying that the consideration of his petition interrupted by the adjournment of the House may be resumed. (Undated.)

Jan. 27. Petition of George Porter. Charles Lord Stanhope, being appointed Comptroller of all the Postmasters of England, constituted petitioner his deputy, but contrary to his covenant surrendered his patent, whereby petitioner lost the benefit of his deputation and was necessitated to petition their Lordships in the late Parliament to grant him reparation, or to refer him to take his remedy at law against Lord Stanhope, who was by their Lordships' order to show cause within ten days why the petition should not be granted. Lord Rochford acquainted the House that Lord Stanhope was contented that petitioner should proceed at law, and engaged that an appearance should be given. Summons being afterwards issued out, Lord Stanhope, contrary to his engagement, hath not been pleased to yield an appearance, without which petitioner cannot further proceed. Lord Stanhope is very aged and infirm, and if he should die before the suit be ended his estate is so settled that it would be no way liable to make petitioner satisfaction. He therefore prays their Lordships either to hear the matter or to permit him to take his remedy at law.

Jan. 28. Amendments to the Bill for confirmation of the office of register of sales and pawns. L. J., XI. 372.

Jan. 28. Amendments to the Bill for restoring Charles Earl of Derby to the manors of Mold and Molsdale, Hope and Hopesdale, in the county of Flint. L. J., XI. 372.

Jan. 28. Engrossment of an Act for the execution of certain persons attainted of high treason: Owen Row, Augustine Garland, Henry Smith, Henry Martin, Robert Tichborn, James Temple, Thomas Wayt, William Heveningham, Isaac Pennington, Peter Temple, Gilbert Millington, Vincent Potter, and Thomas Wogan were excepted out of the Act of Indemnity for their treason in taking away the life of the late King, but in that Act a clause was contained that though these persons should be legally attainted, yet execution should be suspended until determined upon by Act of Parliament; they have been legally and duly attainted, and execution remains to be done, it is therefore enacted that they shall suffer pains of death and be executed in such manner and form as persons attainted of high treason ought to be. This Bill was brought from the Commons this day, was read 1st, 2^d, and committed, but after much discussion was dropped. L. J., XI. 372, &c. (Parchement Collection.)

Jan. 28. Draft of an Act for relief of collectors of public moneys, and their assistants and deputies. L. J., XI. 373. 13 & 14 Car. II. cap. 17.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.
2. Amendments to the Bill.
3. Proviso to the Bill.
4. Application that a clause may be inserted in the Bill giving costs to defendants in cases in which the prosecutors become nonsuited, or forbear prosecution, or suffer a verdict against them.

Jan. 28. Petition of Mathew Hardy. In obedience to their Lordships' order petitioner took up the bones of the late Archbishop Parker, and having coffined them intended to bury them where formerly they lay, but some of the now Archbishop's gentlemen declared his Grace's full satisfaction with what he had done and discharged him of that work, affirming that his Grace would himself see the same performed. Petitioner prays that he may now be discharged from his restraint. L. J., XI. 372.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding petition, with certificate, signed Jo. Boys and Robert Pory, that the Archbishop is fully satisfied with Hardy's performance of their Lordships' order, and discharges him from any further charge in that behalf.

Jan. 29. Petition of Nicholas Kidwell, yeoman usher of His Majesty's Chamber. Petitioner having exhibited his Bill in the Court of Requests against Sir Francis Sydenham and his lady, his cause was dismissed for want of a very material witness, whom he has since discovered. He prays their Lordships to rehear the cause.

Jan. 31. Petition of the Mayor and Burgesses of the city of Gloucester. Petitioners pray to be heard against the Bill for disuniting the hundreds of Dudstone and Kingsbarton from the county of the city of Gloucester, and restoring them to be part of the county of Gloucester. L. J., XI. 374.

Jan. 31. Petition of Henry Kirby, now prisoner in the wards of the prison of the Fleet, London. Prays for relief against John Twisleton and James Noell, by whose unjust proceedings he has continued in prison two years and upwards.

Jan. 31. Petition of John Mole, son and administrator of the goods and chattels of John Mole, late of Culworth, in the county of Northampton. Petitioner's father having become bound for the late Thomas Bosse for several great sums of money, Bosse bound himself by counter bonds, but having done so he demised the whole of his real estate to Francis Taverner and George Francklyn, and upon his death petitioner's father was compelled to sell the whole of his estate for payment of the money, to the utter ruin of himself and family. Petitioner prays for redress.

Feb. 1. Amendments to the Bill for sale of Sir Robert Slyngsby, deceased, his lands for payment of his debts. C. J., VIII. 355.

Annexed:—

1. Proviso to the Bill.

Feb. 2. Draft of an Act for settling the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty. Read 1st this day. The Bill having passed through Committee was re-committed but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 375.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.

2. Copy of resolutions passed by the Privy Council on the 18th Feb. 1632-3 for settling the differences concerning prohibitions arising between His Majesty's Courts at Westminster and His Court of Admiralty. These resolutions are referred to in the preceding draft Act.

3. Proviso that nothing in the Act shall prejudice, make void, or infringe the ancient jurisdiction and privileges of the Bishop of Durham in the Admiralty within the County Palatines of Durham and Sadberge.

Feb. 3. Petition of Thomas Lord Windesore; complains that Thomas Marriott and one Mr. Cox (affirming himself to be a trustee for petitioner) have fraudulently obtained a lease from the Dean and Chapter of Westminster of part of the manor of Church Honiborne [Honeybourne], in the county of Worcester, and have brought twelve several writs to eject petitioner's tenants. He claims the benefit of the privilege of Parliament, and prays that he and his tenants may be quieted in the possession of the lands. L. J., XI. 376.

Feb. 4. Draft of an Act declaratory concerning bankrupts. L. J., XI. 377. 13 & 14 Car. II., c. 24.

Feb. 4. Draft of an Act for the sale of some of the lands of Sir Aston Cokaine, Baronet, and Thomas Cokaine his son, and the settlement of the rest. Read 1st this day. The Bill was committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 377, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.

Feb. 5. Report from the Committee for Petitions upon the cause between Sir Allen Zouch and his Lady and Anne Bedingfield, recommending that the decree complained of should be set aside, or that the appellants should be relieved by Parliament. See L. J., XI. 528.

Feb. 5. Petition of Mary Molloy alias Lewis, a poor widow, having been a widow some nine years, and having a great charge of children. Petitioner has been a great sufferer both in England and Ireland, having had jewels, plate, and money to the value of 1,000*l.* taken from her by Sir Francis Otley when governor of Shrewsbury, as he alleged for the supply of his late Majesty. Petitioner's father, Hugh Molloy, for many great services done in Ireland, was in Queen Elizabeth's time, for slaying the Earl of Tyrone, rewarded with a yearly pension of 32*l.*, which he enjoyed during his life; after his decease petitioner received it for some small time, and also some arrears by the appointment of the Earl of Strafford, then Lord Deputy of Ireland. At the beginning of the wars petitioner was brought over to England for her safety, and at her father's death a great estate of lands in the King's County descended to her, but being in England she was hindered to take possession, and Sir William Pettitt and Captain Bennett who have got into possession deny to deliver the same up to her. She prays that the yearly pension of 32*l.* may be settled upon her, for the present relief of herself and family, and that her lands may be restored to her again by the Act of Settlement.

Feb. 5. Petition and appeal of Henry Browne and Ruben Browne. Pray for the reversal of a decree of the Court of Exchequer, in a suit between petitioners and Richard Peter the elder, and others.

Feb. 5. Petition of John Beaumont. Petitioner being a commission officer in the service of the late King, William Wheeler and John Turby brought an action and obtained a verdict and damages against him for trespass done as a soldier. Since the Act of Oblivion, Turby, the survivor, has by his attorney sued process of outlawry against petitioner. The action is discharged by the Act of Indemnity, and yet petitioner has no day in Court to plead the same. He prays for relief against Turby and his attorney.

Feb. 6. Draft petition of several Lords to the King. Petitioners understand that His Majesty has made a grant of all the royal mines north Trent, which is ready to pass the Privy Seal, whereby the patentees have power to break up any man's meadows, park, or gardens, under pretence that there may be mines there. Petitioners pray that no ground may be broken up without the consent of the owner. There is no mention of this petition in the Journal.

The humble peticoⁿ of Thomas Waite a poore condemned prisoner in y^e Tower.

Sheweth

That yo^r poore pet^r takeing much dislike at y^e Armies p^{cs}eedings in imprisoning diuers members of Parliam^t in y^e yeare 1648 for laying hold of his late Ma^{ties} gracios concessions in y^e Isle of Wight, went downe immediately to his owne house 80 miles distant from London, and was wthout his consent made one of the pretended Court for tryall of the late King, and beeing diuers tymes Sum^{oned} to attend y^e house vnder paine of Sequestracon, in obedience to their com^{ands} at length was forced to come vp the day before y^e vnparalleled Sentence passed beeing altogether ignorant of their p^{cs}eedings & intentions whereto hee had a verry great horror and aversion, But beeing here a young man and ignorant of the Lawes was by y^e devices of Cromwell & Ireton trepaned out of the house, and then forced by them into y^e detestable Court not knowing himselfe in y^e least to bee one vntill his name was called, and assoone as his Ma^{tie} desired to bee heard by his Lords & Com^{ons} in y^e painted Chamber yo^r poore pet^r tooke y^e opp^tunity to make a disturbance and desired wth M^r Downes that his Ma^{tie} might bee heard, wherevpon the Court was adiourned into y^e Court of Wards where your poore pet^r and others were not a little menaced by Cromwell whoe were y^e occasion thereof, wherevpon hee returned noe more into y^e Court but Stayed behind in y^e Court of Wards dureing all the tyme sentence was giueing (All the which hee is able to proue) And further hee offers to y^e Lo^{pps} mercifull consideration that hee was none of y^e contrivers or Lawmakers for Setting vp y^e pretended Court, and y^t hee signed noe writtinge for executeing of his Ma^{tie} or any thing leading therevnto. But Some dayes after that horrid fact was committed hee wth others was forced by Cromwell to signe a writing not knowing what was conteyned therein. Hee most humbly further offers to yo^r Lo^{pp}s considerations that hee was put out of all authority for being Serviceable to his Ma^{ties} freinds, and that hee nearely escaped decimation for offering himselfe to bee bound for some of his countrymen that were decimated, and in y^e yeare 1659 when hee was in power hee would not suffer any of his Ma^{ties} freinds to bee imprisoned or their houses searched, beleineing nothing could euer make this nation happy but y^e restrauration of his Ma^{tie}, and glad would haue bene to haue had an opportunity to haue manifested y^e Same.

Yo^r poore pet^r therefore most humbly implores yo^r Lo^{pp}s most fauorable construcc'on (y^e p^rmisses considered) of his actions hee haueing neuer tooke y^e oath of aburation ag^t his Ma^{tie} but alwayes opposed it in his Station, and y^t hee rendred himselfe to y^e Speaker of y^e hon^{ble} house of Com^{ons} in obedience to y^e Kings most grations Proclimacon by aduice of both houses of Parliam^t, All which makes him humbly implore yo^r Lo^{pp}s to Shew some mercy and goodnes to himselfe his poore wife & 8 small children, that see his future life may demonstrate that great reluctancy for his past actions, and doe hartily reioyce at y^e restrauration of his Sacred Ma^{tie} and of yo^r Lo^{pp}s sitting in splendor and Safety.

And yo^r poore pet^r his wife and children shalbee euer bound to pray &c. THO; WAITE.

1. The deposition of William Wetton of y^e county of Middlesex, Esqr.

This Deponent saith that being attending in y^e Court of requests to see y^e Issue of y^e last dayes detestable sentence upon y^e late Kinge: I met wth Col. Waite my old acquaintance, I said to him, sure you are not one of this horrid Court, hee replyde noe, not to his Knowledge, & asked mee if I see my L^d Gray, who had sent to speake wth him, I said noe, then sayes hee, sure hee is here abouts, & goes into y^e Court of Wards, where Cromwell & Ireton were & presently laid hands on him & hurried him away into y^t pretended Court; & I followed in after them, where when his Ma^{ty} desired to be heard by both howses, hauing y^t to offer, y^t would settle y^e nation & preuent bloudshed; Bradshaw refused & would haue proceeded to sentence: but Col. Downes stood up & Col. Waite & said they were not satisfied but desired y^e King might bee heard; then Bradshaw replyde, if our owne Members bee not satisfied, wee must adiourne & adiourned accordingly into y^e Court of Wards, where I pressed in after them: there Col. Downes & Col. Waite did strongly moue y^t y^e Kings proposalls might bee heard, for hee offered without y^e spilling of blood to settle y^e nation for y^e good of all. Cromwell replies shall y^e whole Courts proceedings be obstructed by two or three peeish men, & desired they would returne againe & doe their duty: but Col. Downes & Col. Waite returned not againe into y^e Court nor was at y^e passing of sentence: I asked Col. Waite if hee would returne, he said no, & y^t was an act they would all repent of, & hee was not satisfied in, & sometime after y^t horrid murder committed, at some of our meetings together (which was then frequent) he told mee y^t Cromwell & Ireton had by perswasions & force ouerawed him unto y^e setting his hand to a writing not knowing the contents of it, & did allwayes declare his auersion of y^e murder and y^e proceedings of y^t unwarrantable constituted court.

To the Right Hon^{ble} the Lords spirituall & temporall in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of William Heveningham Sheweth

That your Petitioner never appeared in the pretended high Courte, that sate upon our late gracious Soueraigne, but with firme resolutions to save his most precious life, as farre as his utmost endeavours could extend. Never assented to that judgement, when it was given, and refused to signe and seale the bloody warrant, for that horrid murder. Hath (since y^e death of his late sacred Majestie) bin serviceable to all his true friends, as often as he had opportunity. Did cheerefully acte in settleing the Militia, when the secluded Members came, and offered to disburse large summes of money for that service, if there had bin occasion. Did furnish 500 li towards the expedition, by the noble Lord, then S^r George Booth, for restitution of his Majesty. Was the first that came in upon his Sacred Majesties proclamation, conceiving it held forth mercy, as the hon^{ble} howse of Commons expressed theire intention by setting him at libty upon security in 2,000 li and refusing to admitt others to come in after the day prefixed. That the Noble howse of Peers, on some of these Considerations, were pleased in the last assembly, to passe a Vote in favour of your Petitioner, and petitioned his Majesty in his behalfe.

That your Petitioner hath undergon the shame of a publique Arraignement, stands attainted & corrupted in blood, hath suffered the utmost consequence of the offended lawe, execution only excepted.

That your Petitioner hath nothing left to implore, but (being hitherto by his Majestys and your Lordships mercy suffered to live) to be exempted from a shamefull death: and not put into a worse condition for coming in and trusting to his Majesties Proclamation then those whoe have rejected and disobeyed it.

Which he doth humbly begg, with infinite remorse, for his crime, acknowledging that he hath deserved death, for appeareing in that Courte, though with never soe good a meaning, and that he shall ever abhorre himselfe, as he hath a most afflicted Conscience for it. And if your Lordps^{es} shall graciosly please, to afford him that time of repentance.

He shall (as in all duty bound) dayly praye &c:

Feb. 7. Depositions respecting John Downes.

1. The Deposition of Will^m Wetton of y^e City of Westminster, gent.:

This Deponent saith that in January 1648 the last time the late King was brought before the pretended high Court of Justice Hee this Deponent was there present, and heard his Ma^{ty} denie the Jurisdiction of the said Court, whereupon the President commanded the Clerke to read the Sentence ag^t him, The King replied, before you pronounce your Sentence I desire to speake wth my two houses of Parliam^t. For I haue that to impart to them wth will settle the Kingdome and giue satisfaction to them and you all; The President said hee was only to demand whether hee would plead or not; His Ma^{ty} replied hee could not plead, For that although they had power yett where was their authority? but desired the Court to withdraw & consider of what hee had offered before they pronounced the Sentence. Not wthstanding the President commanded the Clerke to read the Sentence; and y^e Deponent further saith when the Clerke was going to read y^e same hee this Deponent did see one M^r John Downes a member of the said Court stand vp and tould the President hee was not satisfied with nor could consent vnto the Sentence ag^t the King and therefore desired the Court to wthdraw, and consider of what was offered by the King. The President stood vp and said, if any of our owne Members are not satisfied then the Court must wthdraw, So the Court adjourned to the inward Court of Wardes. And hee this Deponent further saith that as the said Court was rising hee this Deponent standing neere Aldeman Allein heard him the said Allein say vnto another Member of y^e said Court whom hee sate next vnto that hee had for some time suspected M^r Downes to bee for y^e King to wth hee the said other Member replied you may bee sure hee is for now hee hath shewed himselfe in his colours, And this Deponent further saith that hee this Deponent went wth y^e said

Allein & the other Member, and by their helpe gott into the said Court of Wardes amongst the Members of y^e said Court. And hee, this Deponent, further saith that assoone as the Court was sate hee this Deponent did heare the Leift Gen^l Cromwell desire the President to demand of the said M^r Downes why hee moved the Court to wthdraw, And this Deponent further saith that hee did heare the said M^r. Downes wth a great deale of Earnestnes argue & affirme that what the King had offered could not in his opinior but satisfie the Parliam^t & their party and that itt was their duty to impart itt to the Parliam^t before they proceeded any further, many words were spoken by him to that effect, w^{ch} now this Deponent cannott remember. But this Deponent doth very well remember that the said Cromwell replied that M^r Downes was a peevish man or words to that effect, and that the Court ought not to bee deterred from their Duty by him seeing itt was apparent though hee pretended Conscience and the publique good yett hee only intended the Service of his old Master, and therefore desired the Court to returne to their Duty, whereupon the Court presently went into Westminster Hall and gaue Sentence ag^t his said Majestie. And this Deponent further saith that hee, this Deponent, went wth the said Court into the Hall and whilst Sentence was giving this Deponent did very exactly looke vpon the Members for the said Downes but could not see him, So hee this Deponent standing neare a Member of y^e Court one M^r Cawley asked if M^r Downes was in Court. The Gentleman replied no, He warrant you my Countryman Downes is not heere hee hath now sufficiently declared himselfe what hee is, and indeed though hee hath laboured to conceale himselfe yett I allwaies discern'd him to bee a Cavaleir, and I hope ere it bee long the Army will purge the house of him & such as hee is, & farther this Deponent saith not.

The Humble Petition of George Fleetwood Prisoner in the tower of London.

Humbly Sheweth

That your petitioner was neither present at vthinge y^e Ordinance for the high Court of Justice nor any way Concurring to it, but had his name inserted without his privacy or consent

That haueing notice therof he purposely absented himselfe from London

That Accordingly he was absent the three first days

That his presence on the fourth and last day was both accidental and enforced; as comming to Wesminster aboute other ocasions, and vnfortunatly meet ing with Oliver Cromwell, whose power commands and threats (being then young) frighted him into y^e Court. The Consideration wherof is most bitter to him and for many yeares past hath cost him much sorrow,

That therfore admitting noe thoughts of improving his small estate by the times he readily imbraced the first opportunity to redeeme his most hainous compliance

That in persute of his resolution in this behalfe; he refused (though exceedingly importuned in y^e time of y^e Committee of safety) to act by any Commission (what-euer) against Generall Monck

That at last comming together of the Me^mbers of the long perliament he Joyned with those that opposed the oath of abjuration

That immediately after he freely ingaged with the said Generall for y^e Kings restawration

That he drew up his regiment (then quartered in Yorke on y^e 11 of May) and with all Chearfullness proclaimed his Majesty

That, lastly he rendred himselfe according to his Majesties proclamation within y^e time therin limitted & at his tryail manifested y^e vnfaigned repentance of his soul

Now therfore y^e y^e sentence of death is by y^e Justice of y^e law past vpon him; as y^e prisoner before y^e bench did wholly resigne himselfe vp for his life to his Maiesties Royall mercy, so now he knoweth noe other meanes of Approach therunto but by y^e Honorable house through whose intercession with his Maiesty y^e petitioner is yet among y^e livinge

The Petitioner most Humbly beseecheth your Honnours mercifully to contemplate y^e premises and espetially his earely & continewed repentance & contrition, how he hath bemoaned this his vnhappy & wicked engagement, & how he gaue glory to god in his Confession at his triall, and therfore to permit him this last hope, that your honors will yet Judg his cause & person to be by your goodness represented to his Maiestie as a fit obiect of his royall Clemency & mercy & to hould his life meerly by his princly Grace

Feb. 14. Affidavit of Thomas Kingston with reference to a suit prosecuted against him by Robert Doyly concerning a messuage and lands belonging to the manor of Bloxham, in the county of Oxford, of which Viscount Saye and Sele is Lord. L. J., XI. 384.

Feb. 15. Petition of William Bokenham. Petitioner is attached by their Lordships' warrant for contempt, whereof he is not in the least guilty. Being one of his Majesty's life guards under the command of Lord Gerard he prays to be discharged, or that a day may be appointed when his accusers may be heard, and that in the meantime the Serjeant-at-arms may be ordered to take bail for his appearance. L. J., XI. 385.

Feb. 17. Petition of William Edgerton. According to their Lordships' order petitioner has appeared, and is now in the custody of the Serjeant-at-arms. Being scavenger of part of St. Clement's Danes he, according to custom, caused the books to be cast up, and (being himself illiterate) amongst those found to be in arrears was the Earl of Clare; according as the law directs he went before Justice Wild, who upon perusal of the list issued out his warrant against the persons named, and the constable of the ward finding the Earl included went to his Lordship's steward and acquainted him therewith, and his Lordship sent for the constable, and took the warrant of him. Petitioner, who never intended to act in breach of the privilege of Parliament, prays for his discharge or for a hearing that he, his wife and children, may not be utterly ruined, he having for many years done personal service to his Majesty, and suffered to the loss of his whole estate. L. J., XI. 386.

Annexed:—

1. Warrant issued by Justice Wild referred to in preceding. 9 Dec. 1661.

Feb. 17. Petition of Philip Jones. Petitioner having bought certain lands of the Marquess of Worcester has in good and firm an estate therein as the laws can give; he therefore prays to be heard before the Marquess' Bill is further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 386.

Feb. 17. Similar petition of Andrew Wanley. L. J., XI. 386.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Another petition to the same effect.

Feb. 17. Similar petition of Valentine Wanley. L. J., XI. 386.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Another petition to the same effect.

Feb. 19. Draft of an act for making rivers navigable in the kingdom of England and dominion of Wales. Read 1^a this day. The Bill passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 388, &c.

Feb. 19. Petition of Thomas Williams and Dame Martha Jones his wife, relict and executrix of Sir Henry Jones, deceased. Pray for redress against John Corbett, a justice for the county of Radnor, and Thomas Hughes, prothonotary of the Court, for their delay, and denial of justice to petitioners in a suit commenced at the great sessions for the county of Radnor in the year 1643.

Feb. 19. Petition of Francis Ewre, his wife and eight children. Pray for redress against Samuel Trotman and others, by whom they have been unjustly deprived of their estate.

Feb. 19. Petition of Francis Sherington. Prays for the reversal of a decree of the 27 of May 1658 obtained against him by Gabriel Croft in the Duchy Court of Lancaster.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

Feb. 20. Amendments to the Bill concerning assurances used amongst merchants. L. J., XI. 389.

Feb. 21. Petition of John Penton. Petitioner exhibited his Bill in Chancery against Leonard Greene for the recovery of his estate, but upon the unjust report of Sir Edward Salter, one of the Masters of the Chancery to whom the matter was referred, he was dismissed without hearing any of his proofs. He prays for redress.

Feb. 21. Petition of Henry Futter, of London, goldsmith. Prays for relief; his grievances being set forth in the case annexed to his petition.

Annexed:—

1. Case referred to in preceding. For divers years before the war petitioner had a third, half, or greater part of the current trade of the Mint, but by the general decay of that trade and other causes he, in the year 1650, became unable to give his creditors present satisfaction. He thereupon entered into an agreement with a majority of them for a composition, whereby he was to retain a fourth part of his estate; but in the meantime a few of his creditors took out a commission of bankruptcy against him, by means of which he will utterly lose his fourth part, and those of his creditors who are not in the commission will be for ever debarred from any satisfaction of their just debts. Noted. Dismissed at his desire.

2. Another petition of same. Petitioner, having put himself upon a final way of accommodation with his creditors, prays that his former petition and case may be totally dismissed.

Feb. 22. Draft of an act to enable William Lord Widdrington to sell some lands for the paying his brother and sisters' portions, and providing for his younger children. L. J., XI. 391. Read 1^a this day but afterwards dropped in the House of Commons.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Lady Mary Widdrington, late wife of William Lord Widdrington, deceased, on the behalf of her younger children. On the marriage of the now Lord Widdrington the manor of Evesden and other lands in the county of Lincoln were settled on trustees for 90 years for raising portions for petitioner's younger children, remainder to his Lady for life, remainder to his sons in tail. Lord Widdrington is now endeavouring to make sale of the manor and premises, as is pretended for raising portions and providing for younger children, but if any Act should pass for avoiding the former settlement, petitioner's younger children will be left destitute of maintenance and portions. Petitioner prays that her counsel may be heard before the Bill is allowed to pass.

his elder brother, and for the raising of portions for his younger children. Brought from the Commons this day; rejected after 3^d reading. L. J., XI. 391, &c., (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 22. Petition of Inhabitants of the town of Lowestoft in Suffolk. Their Lordships were pleased to refer the differences between the poor petitioners and the rich inhabitants of Yarmouth to the judges, who have reported their opinion thereon. Petitioners pray that the seven miles mentioned in the report to be granted to Yarmouth may be taken away, or that they may be measured from the Town Quay, where the free fair is commonly kept, and so towards Lowestoft, and that at the end of the seven miles some apparent mark may be set up, whereby the same may be known; and that all fishers may at all times have free liberty to sell their herrings in any road or place out of the seven miles to any persons without interruption from the town of Yarmouth. L. J., XI. 392.

Feb. 22. Transcript of record in the writ of error, Hardinge v. Peight. L. J., XI. 392.

Feb. 25. Draft of an Act for confirmation of an Act for settling of the Priory of Watton and other lands belonging to the Earl of Winchelsea, in the county of York, in the hands of trustees for the payment of debts, and another Act for enabling Sir George Booth, Baronet, to make leases and sales of part of his estate. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 392, &c.

Feb. 26. Petition of Sir Ralph Clapham, Knight and Baronet, one of His Majesty's gentlemen pensioners in ordinary. Prays that William Bowyer, salter, of London, may be ordered to appear and produce the evidences and writings concerning petitioner's estate which Bowyer unjustly purchased. See L. J., XI. 539.

March 4. List of Committee on the Bill concerning Ancholme Level. L. J., XI. 398. In extenso.

March 4. Petition of divers freeholders within the Level of Ancholme, in the county of Lincoln. Pray that in the Bill concerning Ancholme Level now before Parliament their rights may be protected, and that the Bill may not be passed until they have been heard. L. J., XI. 399.

March 4. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee on the Bill. L. J., XI. 399.

Annexed:—

1. Draft clause respecting the rights of the Bishop of Ely to certain lands in the manor of Thornton in the Moore, in the county of Lincoln.

March 6. Draft of an Act for confirming the award made by the King's Majesty for composing the differences between John Lord Marquis of Winchester and his eldest son Charles Lord St. John, and the conveyances made or mentioned to be made in pursuance of the same award. Read 1st this day. L. J., XI. 400. The last proceeding on this Bill was a reference to referees to be named by the King to make a final settlement.

Annexed:—

- 1-6. Amendments, provisoes, &c.

7. Petition of Lord Henry Powlett. The Marquess of Winchester and his son have preferred a Bill in Parliament to settle all their manors and lands in Southampton and Wilts on the Marquess for life, with remainder in fee to the Lord St. John and his heirs, and to take away a clause in an Act 27 Hen. VIII., whereby they are restrained to alien or do other act to the prejudice of the heirs of the body of the donor in certain manors and lands in Devon, Dorset, and Cornwall in the Bill mentioned. Petitioner and his issue male have title in equity to the manors and lands in Hampshire and Wilts, and a title in law to the manors and lands in Devon, Dorset, and Cornwall. He prays that the title of himself and his issue may be within the saving of the intended Act and reserved to them thereby.

8. Case of Lord Henry Powlett referred to in preceding.

9. Application for an order for Sir George Cony and Daniel Wicherley to attend the Committee as witnesses on behalf of Lord Henry Powlett. 18 April 1662.

10. Petition of Charles Powlett, Esq., son and heir of Lord Charles Powlett, one of the sons of William late Marquess of Winchester. Prays that his claim to the manors and lands set forth in his case may be preserved in the Marquess of Winchester's Bill.

11. Case of Charles Powlett referred to in preceding.

12. Petition of Lord Edward Powlett, one of the sons of William late Marquess of Winchester. Petitioner being of the family and within the provisions of his ancestors, prays that the settlement by the Act of Henry VIII. may stand as it does now, and not be repealed or altered; but that if their Lordships shall see cause to pass the Bill then that some compensation or yearly maintenance may be made to him in respect of his possibility to inherit, the rather that being reduced to a distressed condition of poverty he perceives that the Marquess and Lord St. John will not supply him with any maintenance, notwithstanding Lord St. John's promises. 17 April 1662.

13. Petition of Daniel Wicherley, of the Inner Temple. In July 1651 the estate of the Marquess of Winchester being exposed for sale by the late power, petitioner, at the importunity of the Marquess, Earl Rivers (uncle to Lord St. John), and divers friends of that noble family, and upon large promises of reward, took upon himself the management of their affairs and left all other employments, and by himself and friends borrowed above thirty thousand pounds, for all which he was personally bound, to re-purchase the Marquess' estate, and got allowances of reprisal to above twelve thousand pounds, and other great advantages for the family, without which they would not have had wherewith to subsist. The Marquess and Lord St. John wrote a letter to petitioner, wherein they acknowledged his services, and in part of recompense thereof by deed granted to him the office of chief steward of all their courts, manors, and lands during his life, with all the fees and profits thereto belonging, and petitioner accordingly officiated. Nevertheless, he has lately by chance understood that a Bill has been presented to Parliament (amongst other things) to make void his patent and grant, without any notice being given to him, although he yet stands engaged for over twenty thousand pounds and has not forfeited his patent, which is good in law. He prays that he may have a copy of the award and deed mentioned in the Bill, and that he may be heard by counsel in order that he may not be divested of his right and freehold.

14. Petition of Sir George Cony. Lords Henry, Charles, and Edward Powlett, being tenants of the freehold of the manors and lands of John Marquess of Winchester, in the counties of Wilts and Southampton, for the life of the Marquess, and the remainder thereof being limited unto them and the heirs male of their bodies, after the death of the Marquess without issue male, by a settlement made by William Marquess of Winchester (7 Jac.), the said Lords Henry, Charles, and Edward, joined with Charles Lord St. John in several recoveries of the manors, which were by indenture declared to be to the use of petitioner and John Chicheley, deceased, and their heirs, in trust nevertheless that, after the debts contracted for purchasing the then forfeited estates, and portions raised for younger children of the now Marquess, the manors and lands should be re-settled, with remainders, to the said Lords Henry, Charles, and Edward, and their issue male, and in a suit in Chancery this trust was confirmed. A Bill is now before Parliament to confirm a deed supposed to be made in pursuance of the King's award, unto which petitioner is mentioned to be party, whereas he did not seal the deed, but refused lest he should be guilty of a breach of trust, and he was in no way party to his Majesty's award. In the general saving in the intended Act of all rights petitioner is excepted. He prays that nothing may pass in the Act which may disenable him to perform his trust, but that his freehold and interest may be preserved for the benefit of those for whom he is entrusted.

March 6. Draft of an Act to enable the Bishop of London to lease out the tenements new built upon the site of his palace in London. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J. XI. 400, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to the Bill.

March 6. Engrossment of an Act for the making void of divers judgments and conveyances obtained from James Scudamore, Esquire, by George Colt and Thomas Colt, and their trustees. The Bill was brought from March 7. Draft of an Act for confirmation of agreements made between Thomas Bushell and the miners of Row Pitts, in Somersetshire, for recovering their mined and deserted works. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19th May 1662.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to the Bill.

March 7. Petition of the participants, purchasers for valuable considerations of new improved lands within the drainage of the Level of Hatfield Chace, extending into the counties of York, Lincoln, and Nottingham. On the 20th of December 1660, petitioners obtained an order from their Lordships for quieting and confirming them in the possession of their lands, and in confidence thereof laid out great sums of money in enclosing 7,400 acres, and great quantities of rape, oats, &c. were sowed thereupon, and quiet possession was had until about August last, when certain of the inhabitants of Epworth and Belton invaded petitioners' possessions and drove away their tenants' cattle, forcing them to redeem them at what rates they pleased. Petitioners acquainted the sheriff of the county that, if effectual execution of their Lordships' order was not had, complaint would be made against him, and he thereupon repaired to the place where the rioters were keeping guard, who, to the number of 50, pursued petitioners' tenants and fell upon the sheriff and his assistants, grievously wounding one of them. Proceedings have been had against the rioters both at public and private sessions of the peace, but the smallness of the fines imposed and the encouragement given by a public purse to those prosecuted, have rendered the law appointed for remedy very ineffectual. Large quantities of extraordinary hopeful rape and corn are now growing, but unless exemplary punishment be inflicted upon the rioters for what they have already done the crops now growing will be again destroyed as those for several years have been. Petitioners pray that proceedings may be forthwith had against the offenders. L. J., XI. 402.

March 8. Engrossment of an Act for the repairing and better preserving the quay of the port of Wells, in the county of Norfolk; the Bill fixes the rates to be levied upon the various goods laden and unladen at the port, and provides for the appointment of collectors and receivers. This Bill did not pass, but a Bill for the same purpose received the royal assent on the 27th of July 1663. L. J., XI. 403, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

March 8. Draft of an Act for settling a capital messuage or mansion-house, with the appurtenances, in Kensington, in the county of Middlesex, upon Baptist Viscount Campden and his heirs. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 19 May 1662. L. J., XI. 403, &c.

March 8. Petition of John Atkinson, defendant in a writ of error, wherein Gilbert Crouch is plaintiff. Prays for an early day for hearing. L. J., XI. 403.

March 10. Draft of an Act on the behalf of Edward Marquis and Earl of Worcester, and of the creditors of the said Marquis, for vesting and settling upon feoffees in trust certain manors, lands, and tenements for payment of the debts of the said Marquis. Read 1st this day, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 404.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Phillip Jones. The Marquis of Worcester having some time since a Bill before Parliament, petitioner prayed to be heard against it, and a day was appointed by their Lordships for that purpose; petitioner having prepared his counsel and sent for his witnesses at a very great charge, the Marquis was pleased to withdraw his Bill, whereupon petitioner's witnesses, conceiving themselves discharged from any further attendance, departed homewards. The Marquis has now presented a new Bill of the same nature as the former one against which petitioner prays to be heard.

2. Copy of Jones' petition against the former Bill. See above. 17 Feb. 1661-2.

March 10. Petition of Richard Eedes. Petitioner is in the custody of the Sergeant-at-arms upon misinformation given to the House of certain words spoken to the derogation of their orders, a thing petitioner utterly detests and abhors. He prays to be heard to enable him to clear himself from such aspersions or else to be discharged. L. J., XI. 404.

March 10. Petition of Dorothy and Elizabeth Lake, daughters of Sir Thomas Lake and Dame Dorothy his wife, both deceased. Complain that Richard Eedes and William Buckenham have treated with contempt the order made by their Lordships on petitioners' behalf, and that they still keep their brother, the present Sir Thomas Lake, from them, and although Eedes has lately received great sums of money out of their brother's estate he detains from them their allowance for clothes, so that they are forced to run into debt for necessaries, and daily threatens to turn them out of doors, and to get them imprisoned upon pretended actions, because they have petitioned their Lordships. They pray that Eedes and Buckenham may be examined upon oath concerning their contempts, and not discharged until they produce petitioners' brother alive, and that petitioners may receive either out of the money in the hands of their uncle, Sir Lancelot Lake, or by sequestering some of the profits of their brother's estate present maintenance and relief until their cause, hitherto delayed by their brother's non-appearance, may be determined. See above. 4 Dec. 1661.

March 10. Affidavit of Francis Barghe, of Rettforth [Retford], in the county of Nottingham, concerning the rioters in Hatfield Chace. L. J., XI. 404.

March 10. Affidavit of John Amory.

March 10. Affidavit of William Tomkinson.

March 10. Affidavit of Nathaniel Reading.

March 10. Petition of Thomas Vavasour and others, tenants of Epworth, in the Isle of Axholme. Petitioners understand that complaints of contempt have been made against them by those who call themselves participants in the Level of Hatfield Chace; they are in no wise guilty, and are ready to give security for their appearance to answer whatsoever shall be objected against them, if their Lordships think fit to hear the business. They pray that they may not be taken into custody, and that the prosecutors, whosoever they be, may be distinguished by name (participants being a general name) in order that petitioners may know against whom they shall have costs, in case it shall appear upon the hearing that they are not guilty. L. J., XI. 404.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE ACT OF UNIFORMITY.*

March 10,—

1. Copy of the Act for the Uniformity of Public Prayers and Administration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies. And for establishing the form of making, ordaining, and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons in the Church of England. Endorsed, "The Act (altered by the Lords) for establishing the Common Prayer Book. Began in the House of Commons."

2. Notes of amendments considered by the Committee on the Bill on the 5th of March 1661-2.

3. Order for re-committing the Bill and referring the King's proviso to the Committee. 19 March 1661-2. L. J., XI. 411.

4. Proviso recommended by the King:—

* The Bill was brought from the House of Commons on the 11th of July 1661 under the title of "An Act for the Uniformity of Public Prayers and Administration of Sacraments"; it was read a first and second time, and referred to a Committee on 17th of January 1661-2. A Committee Book, containing proceedings of Committees at this period, shows that on the 7th of March 1661-2 Mr. Justice Hyde, who, with the Attorney-General, had been previously ordered by the House to attend the Committee, was directed to prepare a copy of the Bill, with the provisos, alterations, and amendments made by the Committee, and that on the 10th of March the Bill "new transcribed" was brought in, and on the same day was ordered to be reported. The first paper calendared is no doubt the copy brought in by Mr. Justice Hyde. The report was received by the House on the 13th of March, and on the 17th a proviso recommended by the King was presented by the Lord Chancellor, and on the 19th the Bill was re-committed, and the King's proviso was referred to the Committee. On the 4th of April the Bill was again reported, and after several debates a Committee was appointed upon the 8th of April to draw up a proviso, whereby it might be left to the King to make such provision for those of the clergy as His Majesty should think fit who should be deprived of their livings by the Act, and on the following day a proviso was reported from the Committee, and with some alterations, agreed to by the House. On the 7th May a conference with the House of Commons upon the amendments made by the Lords was reported at great length by the Lord Privy Seal. See L. J., XI. 446. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th of May 1662 under the following title, "An Act for the Uniformity of Public Prayers and Administration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies, and for establishing the form of making, ordaining, and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons."

This proviso was rejected by the House of Commons, 22 April 1662. C. J., VIII. 413.

5. Amendments made by the Lords to preceding proviso.

6. Proviso prepared by the Committee in pursuance of the order of the 8th of April 1662:—

Provided alwaies, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawfull for his Ma^{tie} vnd^r his signe manuell to appoynt and order y^e any Parson, Vicar, or other Ecclesiasticall person or persons whatsoever, who shall by vertue of this Act be disenabled to continue in his or their parsonage, or vicarage, or other spirituall or Ecclesiasticall promotion whereof they, or any of them, are now in possession, and of whose peaceable disposition he shall be informed from the Archbishops or Bishops of the respective dioceses or otherwise as his Ma^{tie} shall thinke fitt, shall from and after the time of his or their remouall from the same receiue and enioy such part and portion of the profitts thereof (not exceeding a fifth part) as his Ma^{tie} shall thinke fitt, for and dureing y^e naturall life of such person soe dis inabled, unless his Ma^{ty} giue order for the contrary, and y^e y^e said persons and euery of them shall receiue and enioy y^e same accordingly any Statute Custome or vsage to the contrary hereof in any wise notwithstanding. Endorsed, Prouiso for y^e fifts.

This proviso was rejected by the House of Commons 26 April 1662. C. J., VIII. 414.

7. Parchment copy of a proviso granting a fifth part of the profits of livings to all persons disenabled to continue therein by the passing of the Act. This clause differs from the preceding in giving the fifth part without the intervention of the King.

8. Draft amendment proposed by the Lords adding a paragraph to the end of the declaration of assent in the second clause of the Bill "for such persons only with whom His Majesty before the Feast of St. Bartholomew, which shall be in the year of our Lord God 1662, shall dispense according to the intent of the proviso in that behalf hereafter in this present Act contained." The words proposed to be added to the declaration were, "Other than as to such things

"only contained and prescribed in the said book. For which the King's most Excellent Majesty hath dispensed with me according to a proviso contained in the Act of Uniformity and according to the intent of the same proviso." This amendment, which was consequential upon the King's proviso, was disagreed to by the Commons.

9-10. Amendments made by the Lords to the Bill. (Two papers.) At the end of the second paper is the following note:—"That the booke sent vp wth the Bill may be taken of, and the manuscript booke herewth delivered may be annexed to the Bill." See L. J., XI. 450.

11-13. Papers showing the amendments made by the Lords, with the resolutions of the Commons thereon and the further amendments proposed by the Commons. The concluding paragraphs are as follows:—"The proviso for dispensing with deprivation for not using the cross and surplice not agreed. The proviso whereby His Majesty hath power to allow to the persons disenabled a portion of the profits not exceeding a fifth was not agreed." "That the Lords be made acquainted that this House hath observed a mistake in the Rubrick after public baptism of infants, (persons) being inserted instead of (children), which they take to be but vitium scriptoris, and desire the Lords will consider of a way how the same may be amended." (Three papers.) See L. J., XI. 446-450.

14. Draft amendment to the declaration in clause 8.

15. Parchment copy of portion of clause 10.

16. Parchment copy of portion of clause 15.

17. Draft of clause 26.

18. Parchment copy of clause 26.

19. Parchment copy of part of clause 26 and of the whole of clause 27.

20. Draft of clause 27.

21. Parchment copy of clause 27.

22-23. Two parchment fragments of clauses apparently cut from the original engrossment of the Bill when amended by the Lords.

24. Draft of a clause enacting that every minister who desires to preach any usual or constant lecture shall first be chosen curate by the parson or vicar of the parish, and be nominated to the ordinary of the diocese for his license and approbation, and shall upon all occasions perform the duties of a curate, and assist the parson or vicar in the administration of the Holy Communion, &c. in such manner and form as the parson or vicar is bound by law to do and observe. It appears by the Minute Book that on the 3d of March 1661-2 a proviso concerning lecturers being made curates in the parish where they shall be lecturers was considered by the Committee, but "not ordered."

March 12. Amendment to the Bill to enable Rowland Oakeover to sell lands for payment of debts. L. J., XI. 405.

March 14. Transcript of record, &c. in the writ of error, Read v. the King. L. J., XI. 407.

March 14. Petition of Jane, the relict and executrix of Colonel Francis Farrington, deceased. The many and weighty affairs thronging upon their Lordships lost petitioner's late husband the opportunity of a hearing of his complaint against Chamberlaine and Briggs though he attended many days with his counsel and witnesses. He is lately, through grief and pinched with famine, dead, and has left petitioner and his children in a deplorable condition. She prays their Lordships to take her distressed cause into their care, and judicious consideration, and give her relief.

March 14. Petition of Humphrey Branes. Complaints of the unjust proceedings of William Wynne to whom petitioner mortgaged his estate as a security for a debt, and prays for relief.

March 14. Petition of Robert Gilbert, of Charleton, in the county of Somerset. Petitioner, having faithfully served his late Majesty in the time of the wars, received many hurts and wounds, whereby he is often liable to much distemper of mind. Thomas Hannum, junior, having a covetous design to enrich himself out of petitioner's estate, combining with Edward Dave and others at the time petitioner's distemper was actually upon him, and when he was deprived of memory and understanding, caused him to sign a warrant of attorney, for acknowledgement of a judgment of 600*l.* in the Court of Common Pleas; judgment was accordingly entered, although there was no consideration ever given to petitioner, who was in pursuance of the judgment arrested last Michaelmas term. He was not allowed his liberty until he had sealed a release of errors, whereby he is deprived of all remedy at the common law. He prays that the judgment may be reversed, or that some other means may be found to vindicate him from so intolerable an injury and oppression.

March 20. Petition of Richard Bedes. Prays for a speedy hearing, or that he may be discharged upon sufficient bail. L. J., XI. 412.

March 20. Petition of Jane Hone, widow of Bartholomew Hone, deceased. Petitioner's husband was always constant to the King's Majesty, for which he sustained great losses and several imprisonments, more particularly in the Tower. For payment of her husband's debts petitioner was forced to consent to the selling of her jointure of 200*l.* per annum, whereby she is now driven into a very distressed condition and in danger of perishing. She prays that some present allowance may be granted for her relief, as to other widows in like case, and for the future such pension as their Lordships may think fit.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate, signed by the Earls of Berkshire and Portland, Lord Howard of Charlton and Andover, and Sir Edward Nicholas, that petitioner's statement are true, and that she is a fit object of pity and compassion. 20 March 1661-2.

March 22. Engrossment of an Act for the more speedy and effectual bringing those persons to account whose accounts are excepted in the Act of Oblivion. This Bill was brought from the Commons this day. L. J., XI. 414. Statutes 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 16. (Parchment Collection.)

March 22. Amendments to the Bill concerning Sir James Enyon's estate. Three papers. L. J., XI. 414.

Annexed:—

1. Proviso saving the rights of the Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield in the manor and lands of Bishops Itchington.

March 22. Petition of Dame Dorothy Roswell, widow. Prays to be heard by counsel at the Bar before the Committee make their report upon the Bill for empowering Sir Courtney Poole, Sir John Drake, and others, to make payment of the portions of Ellen Briscoe, widow, one of the daughters of Sir John Drake, Knight, deceased, by sale of the manor of Limington, in the county of Somerset, or by granting estates out of the same or otherwise, possession and estate in fee simple being in petitioner by good conveyance, and she not having had sufficient notice to attend the Committee. L. J., XI. 414.

March 24. Draft of an Act for making provision for the speedy payment of the debts of the late Duke of Somerset. Read 1^a this day, committee but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 415, &c.

March 24. Petition of Ferdinando Bye, defendant in a writ of error wherein John Woodman is plaintiff. On the 15th of February last the plaintiff was ordered by their Lordships to pay petitioner 20*l.* within ten days after service of the order. He not only refuses to make payment, but has served petitioner with a subpoena into the Chancery in reference to the same business. Petitioner prays that Woodman may be proceeded against for his high contempt. L. J., XI. 416.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 15 Feb. 1661-2.
2. Affidavit of Bye with reference to the service of the order.

March 24. Order for the Committee of Privileges to consider of precedents respecting the preceding case, in what way costs are to be levied in obedience to the judgment. L. J., XI. 416. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Precedents respecting fines imposed by the Lords in Parliament.

March —. Warrant for arrest of John Nicholls and others for killing and destroying His Majesty's game.

1662.

April 3. Draft of an Act for naturalizing of Charlotte Hessen, wife of Thomas Killigrew, Esq., groom of his Majesty's bed chamber, and his three sons, and Katherine Hessen, wife of Sir John Sayers, and his three sons. L. J., XI. 420. This Bill was dropt in the House of Commons, but a Bill with the same title passed in the following year.

April 5. Amendment to the Bill concerning Thomas Deerham. L. J., XI. 422.

April 5. Draft of an Act for discharging from imprisonment poor prisoners unable to pay their debts, and for relief of creditors. The Act provides for the release of every poor debtor who takes an oath before a justice of the peace that he is not worth 5*l.* above the value of the tools, &c. necessary for his trade, his apparel, and his bedding, and that he has not made any fraudulent conveyance of his estate to defraud his creditors. Any person swearing falsely to suffer as a perjured person under the statute 5 Elizabeth. Read 1^a this day, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 422.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Breviat of the Bill.

April 10. Draft of an Act to confirm the invention and manufacture of glass bottles and for preventing of frauds and abuses in the making and public vending thereof. By a statute passed in the 21st year of King James it was enacted that all persons who by their industry and ingenious undertaking attain to the perfection of any new invention tending to the good of his Majesty's subjects, should have the sole benefit and profit thereof for full fourteen years. In pursuance whereof His Majesty, by letters patent, dated 6th of September 1661, granted unto John Colnett, who first invented and attained unto the perfection of making glass bottles, special license and authority to exercise his new invention and solely to enjoy all benefit arising by reason thereof for fourteen years; but whereas the new invention has been used during the late rebellious times, wherein His Majesty's license could not be immediately obtained, to the great discouragement of John Colnett and others from studying and making new inventions for the public benefit, and it has been found that there has been an abuse of His Majesty's subjects by persons fraudulently disposed, in making and vending bottles under lawful sizes and measures, it is therefore enacted by the Bill that the letters patent granted to John Colnett shall be of as good force and effect in law as if the new invention had not been known or used at the time of the granting thereof. Provided that all the bottles manufactured by him shall contain the full measure of gallons, pottles, quarts, and other measures as are lawfully vended according to the standard, and that the bottles shall be marked with Colnett's particular stamp or mark. The Bill imposes a penalty of five pounds for vending or using for gain, after the 20th of May 1662, any bottles containing less than the proper measures and not marked as aforesaid. All bottles not containing the due measures which shall be extant after the 20th of June 1662 may be seized by warrant from a justice of the peace and broken. The Bill was read 1^a, 2^a, and committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 426.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee on the Bill. 11 April 1662.
- 2-3. Amendments to the Bill.

4. Petition of John Vinion and Robert Ward, on behalf of themselves and many others of the trade of making, laying, and selling of glass bottles in and about the city of London. John Colnett, by false allegations, obtained a patent from His Majesty for the sole making of glass bottles, pretending that he was the inventor. There is a proviso in the patent that if it is made to appear to His Majesty that the grant is contrary to law, prejudicial or inconvenient, and not Colnett's invention, then the patent to be void. Directly petitioners had notice that such a grant was obtained, Vinion, in the name of all the trade, petitioned His Majesty to refer the grant to the Attorney General as to the truth and validity of the patent, which His Majesty was graciously pleased to do, and the Attorney General, after a long and serious consideration and examination, certified that Colnett was not the inventor, and that the making of glass bottles is no new invention, for that it has been of trade and public use nearly thirty years. Petitioners therefore pray to be heard by counsel against the Bill for confirmation of the patent.

5. Copy of the report of the Attorney General referred to in preceding. Sir Kenelm Digby first invented glass bottles nearly thirty years since, and employed Colnett and others to make them for him, and they have since been frequently made by him and also by the petitioners. The certificate, whereupon the warrant was obtained, requiring the Attorney General to prepare a Bill to pass the Great Seal, of the sole exercise of this invention, is disclaimed by several of the persons whose names were subscribed thereunto. In Colnett's patent there is a clause that if it appears not a new invention or not his invention the patent is to be void. Colnett offers nothing material in opposition thereunto, but affirms that he has a Bill in Parliament for confirmation of his letters patent and there he desires all parties may be heard. 2 April 1662.

6. Another petition of John Vinion and others to the same effect.

April 10. Report of the conference with the House of Commons respecting the amendments made by the Lords in the Bill for repairing the highways and sewers, and for paving and cleaning the streets of London and Westminster, and for regulating and licensing hackney coaches, &c. L. J., XI. 426.

Annexed:—

1. Resolutions of the House of Commons with respect to the amendments made by the Lords. 5 April 1662. C. J., VIII. 398.

2-9. Amendments and provisoes to the Bill.

10. Petition of the licensed hackney coachmen in and about the cities of London and Westminster. Petitioners pray to be heard by counsel in favour of the insertion in the Bill of certain clauses and provisions for their protection.

11. Statement as to the provisoes desired to be inserted by the hackney coachmen.

April 10. Order of the Committee upon the Bill concerning the relief of the poor, referring it to Lord Chief Justice Bridgeman and Mr. Justice Tyrrell to peruse and report therein.

Annexed:—

1-8. Amendments and provisoes.

9. Application that a clause may be inserted in the Bill for suppressing all such rogues as wander about the country under pretence of selling glass and earthenware.

April 14. Amendments made by the Commons to the Bill declaratory concerning bankrupts. Agreed to by the Lords this day. L. J., XI. 428.

April 14. Engrossment of an Act to enable Charles Barnesley, Esquire, and Gilbert his son and heir apparent, to sell lands for the payment of the debts of the said Charles Barnesley the father. Brought from the Commons read 1st, 2nd, and committed, but not reported. L. J., XI. 428, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

April 14. Petition (to the King) of the sixteen Serjeants-at-arms in ordinary attending His Majesty's royal person. Petitioners constantly attend the Lords' House during the time of their sitting, which is a duty which has not until lately been required of them. The salary they receive from His Majesty is twelve pence a day, the same being settled above four hundred years since, at which time twelve pence was more than five shillings is now. They have fifteen pence a day in lieu of their diet, which is less than his Majesty's inferior officers, in particular the messengers, who have two shillings and sixpence a day board wages. Petitioners presented a petition to the House of Lords that they would be pleased to recommend them to His Majesty for some increase of salary and board wages, which their lordships thought very reasonable, and desired the Lord Steward, the Lord High Chamberlain, and the Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's household to move His Majesty in it. Petitioners pray that their salaries may be increased to three shillings a day, and their board wages to two shillings and six pence. L. J., XI. 429.

April 14. Report from the Committee upon the cause between Cuthbert Morley and Jeremy Elwes and others that Morley cannot be relieved but in Parliament, and that it is therefore a fit case to be heard at the bar. L. J., XI. 429.

April 15. Statement respecting Lord Crofts being disturbed in the possession of his manors and lands at Wembury, Plymton, Yampton, and Plymouth by Sir Edward Hungerford. L. J., XI. 430.

April 17. Engrossment of an Act for confirming a sale of land made by John Copleston, gent., to John Mayne, merchant. Brought from the Commons this day; thrown out on 3d reading. L. J., XI. 431, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

April 18. Amendments, provisoes, &c. to the Bill for preventing frauds and regulating abuses in His Majesty's customs. (Eight papers.) The Bill was reported from the Committee, with amendments, this day. L. J., XI. 432.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of several clothiers of the counties of Essex and Suffolk. By two Acts of the 23rd and 39th of Queen Elizabeth logwood was prohibited to be used in dyeing cloth and woollen manufactures because the colours made with it were false and deceitful. In the Bill concerning the customs now before Parliament there is a clause to repeal these laws under pretence that the colours made with it can be fixed. Wood (woad) and indigo, which dye the same colours as logwood, are of the growth of the English plantations, and pay great customs, and dye fixed and lasting colours, whereas colours dyed with logwood are very false and deceitful; no wood nor other thing, except logwood, can counterfeit the colour dyed with wood and indigo, and petitioners find by sad experience that during the times of licentiousness when logwood was freely permitted to be imported the English woollen manufactures have fallen into great discredit, and the trade has much decayed, whereat the Hollanders have taken advantage, and although many attempts have been made to mix logwood with other things the colours dyed therewith are still deceitful, as to which the Company of Dyers of London and others can give full evidence and demonstration. Petitioners pray that the laws for preventing the abuses by dyeing with logwood may be put into execution for the redemption of the credit and esteem of English woollen manufactures.

2. Petition of Richard Brett. After the passing of the Acts in the reign of Queen Elizabeth against the use of logwood, letters patent were issued for the importation of small quantities to be used upon things of little value, and have been continued from time to time. Upon the same good grounds a patent was conferred upon petitioner with very strict limitations, but he is now informed that there is a Bill before Parliament for repealing those laws. He prays to be heard, and that the Company of Dyers and others may be summoned to give evidence before their Lordships upon the matter.

3. Reasons of the merchants, dyers, and traders in logwood why the two statutes made in the 23rd and 39th years of Queen Elizabeth against the importation and use of logwood ought to be repealed. After many costly experiments the art has been attained to make colours dyed with logwood as firm and lasting and more beautiful than they can be made with any other wood. The discontinuance of the execution of those statutes has brought those colours into general request and use both at home and abroad, and the reviving the execution of those statutes would infallibly give a mortal blow to the already languishing trade of the manufactures of wool, both in clothing and hat making, and also to the trades in silk stuff, linen, and leather, and will signally prejudice merchants trading to Spain and the West Indies, depriving them of so considerable a bulky return and quick despatch to reload their ships, and will cast the whole of it into the hands of the Hollanders. The free importing of the commodity will give great employment to the ships of the kingdom, because it is of very great expense in all Europe so that our neighbours of the eastern parts, Germany and France, who now furnish themselves in Holland and employ Holland ships to export it would buy it here and employ our ships, and the King's revenue would be much increased. The Company of Dyers of London might in future have sufficient authority for the regulation of all abuses in the use of logwood in dyeing, and they would be found very willing to redress them.

4. Copy of so much of the answer of the Company of Dyers of London as concerns logwood, delivered to the Committee of the House of Commons for encouraging and regulating the manufacture of wool, and navigation in August 1660. The company are of opinion that logwood may honestly be used in dyeing, and therefore that the statutes in force against it may be repealed.

April 18. Names of such as have not paid their naturalizing fees in the Bill, wherein Anne Ferrers is first named. See L. J., XI. 421.

did not pass, but a Bill for making illegitimate and the children of Lady Anne Roos passed in a subsequent session.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of the Act, 34 & 35 Hen. VIII., declaring the children of Elizabeth Lady Burgh bastards. Endorsed, Precedents of Illegitimation.
2. Another copy.
3. Printed copy of the Act, 34 & 35 Hen. VIII., declaring the children of Anne Lady Parre bastards.

April 19. Engrossment of an Act for settling and confirming of the manors of Framlingham and Saxted, in the county of Suffolk, and the lands, tenements, and hereditaments thereunto belonging, devised by Sir Robert Hitcham, Knight and late Serjeant-at-law, to certain charitable uses. This Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, was dropped in Committee. L. J., XI. 433, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

April 21. Petition of Anne Lady Roos, wife of John Lord Roos. Petitioner, who is one of the daughters of Henry Marquess of Dorchester, details the great sufferings she has undergone at the hands of her husband, asserts that the child of which she has been delivered is the son of Lord Roos, and prays to be heard, and that the counsel named in her petition may be assigned to her, &c. L. J., XI. 434.

Annexed:—

1. Application for an order for the attendance of witnesses on behalf of Lady Anne Roos.

April 26. Petition of James Earl of Suffolk. The Master and Fellows of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, are endeavouring to have their title to the manors of Framlingham and Saxted, in the county of Sussex, confirmed by a Bill now before Parliament. Petitioner prays to be heard touching his right to the same. L. J., XI. 438.

April 27. Order of the Committee upon Charles Barnsley's Bill for a schedule of the debts of Charles and Gilbert Barnsley, and a particular of the lands intended to be sold to be delivered in. See L. J., XI. 429.

Annexed:—

1. Schedule of Charles Barnsley's debts.
2. Schedule of Gilbert Barnsley's debts.
3. True estimate and survey of the manors and farm of Alkmonton and Spitle, in the parishes of Langford and Barton, in the county of Derby, late the estate of Nicholas Barnsley, Esq., as the same have been letten by the space of seven years last past.

4-13. Amendments, provisoes, &c. to the Bill.

April 28. Draft order for quieting the possessions of the Queen Dowager at Somersham, in the county of Huntingdon. L. J., XI. 439. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft.
2. Application for the order.

April 28. Affidavit of Richard Francke, that the tenants of the manors of Wyboston and Soake, in the county of Bedford, belonging to Viscount Stafford, have been disturbed in their possessions by persons claiming from Sir George Binnion. L. J., XI. 439.

April 30. Copy of report of the judges to whom it was referred to consider whether the Bill for restoring advowsons, &c., taken away upon compositions by the late usurped powers be against the Act of Indemnity and the Act for confirmation of judicial proceedings. L. J., XI. 441. In extenso.

April 30. Commission for giving the royal assent to two Bills. L. J., XI. 443.

May 3. Affidavit of Richard Hickling, that Richard Kinge, a servant of the Earl of Ardglass, Lord Cromwell, was imprisoned at the suit of John Hatton. Endorsed. Nothing done in it.

May 5. Amendments, provisoes, &c. to the Bill for distribution of three score thousand pounds amongst the truly loyal and indigent commission officers and for assessing of offices, and distributing the moneys thereby raised for their further supply. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th of May. See L. J., XI. 444, &c. (Ten papers.)

May 7. Draft of an Act for the avoiding stoppages in the ways to Westminster in the times of holding the Parliament or of the terms there; the Bill provides that no waggons, carts, or drays shall be used or remain in any of the streets or passages leading from the chain of St. Dunstan's to the Old Palace at Westminster between the hours of eight o'clock in the morning and two in the afternoon during the sitting of Parliament, or the terms at Westminster, on pain of forfeiture of the waggons, carts, or drays, and the loss of the oxen drawing the same, unless redeemed by the owners within twenty-four hours by a payment of 10*l*.; the Bill further provides that in order to give notice to waggoners, &c. two bells shall be tolled at St. Dunstan's, St. Clement Dane's, St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, and St. Margaret's, Westminster, for a quarter of an hour at eight o'clock in the morning and two in the afternoon. The Bill, which was read a first time this day, was reported from Committee, and ordered to be engrossed on the 14th, but no further proceeding is mentioned. L. J., XI. 446.

May 7. Engrossment of preceding Bill. (Parchment Collection.)

May 12. Order for release on bail of Thomas Vavasour and others now in custody for some misdemeanors concerning the level of Hatfield Chase. L. J., XI. 456. In extenso.

May 12. Copy of preceding.

May 12. Another copy.

May 13. List of Committee appointed to draw reasons to be offered to the Commons at the conference upon the Bill concerning the militia, &c. L. J., XI. 457.

Annexed:—

1. Draft proviso concerning the assessing and charging Peers with horse and arms. L. J., XI. 458. In extenso.

2. Letter from Lord Chief Justice Bridgeman, Speaker of the House of Lords, to Mr. Walker, [the reading clerk] at the Lords' House, or at the Committee in the Prince's Chamber behind the Lords' House. The writer is afraid there may be some mistake in copying out the paper (viz. preceding proviso) which was so ill written by him, especially in mistaking the words "for" and "and." If there be any such or other literal error the writer hopes it may be amended by the Committee. He is afraid the haste of drawing up the paper may perhaps make it too short in expression, for if he remembers, the words are "in case of default the lieutenant or three deputy lieutenants may cause a distress to be taken," but mentions not in what lands. Prays if it be so that some of the Lords of the Committee may be put in mind of it that words to this effect may be added, "in any of the lands of such defaulter, or within their said counties or limits respectively." 13 May 1662.

3. Account of the sums due to the officers of six regiments of trained bands and six regiments of auxiliaries raised by an Act of the secluded members, dated 12th March 1659-60, in order to His Majesty's happy restoration, and continued upon duty until October the 24th, 1660.

4-39. Amendments, provisoes, &c. to the Militia Bill—The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 3.

May 15. Amendments to the Bill for providing carriages by land and water for the use of His Majesty's Navy and Ordnance. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant. L. J., XI. 460. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 20.

May 15. Order for release of Mr. Middleton, now in custody for breach of privilege relating to the Earl of Northumberland. L. J., XI. 461. In extenso.

May 15. Statement of Edward Cherry, domestic chaplain to Earl Rivers, complaining of arrest by John George and others, though he produced a protection from the Earl. L. J., XI. 461.

May 15. Statement of John Poole, servant and secretary to the Bishop of Chichester, that he has been arrested and imprisoned contrary to privilege upon a supposed promise to pay another man's debt. L. J., XI. 461.

May 15. Draft of an Act for confirming and continuing two Acts for the necessary maintenance of the work of draining the great level of the fens. This Bill, which was read 1^o this day, passed the House of Lords, but was dropped in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 461, &c.

May 15. Amendments, &c. to the Bill for preventing the unnecessary charge of sheriffs and for ease in passing their accounts. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 21. (Seven papers.) L. J., XI. 461.

May 16. Amendments to the Bill against exporting of sheep wool, woolfels, mortlings, shorlings, yarn made of wool, woolflocks, fullers earth, fulling clay, and tobacco pipe clay. L. J., XI. 463. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant.

May 17. Amendments, &c. to the Bill for the restoring of all such advowsons, rectories, inappropriate glebe lands and tithes to His Majesty's loyal subjects as were taken from them, and making void certain charges imposed on them upon their compositions for delinquency by the late usurped powers. L. J., XI. 465. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant.

May 17. Petition of Edward Gower. Petitioner is one of the heirs of Sir Richard Leveson, of Trentham, Stafford, deceased; since whose death there is a will set on foot, whereby (if good) he has devised all his estate from his right heirs. There is a Bill before Parliament for restoring such impropriations as were passed away by His Majesty's faithful subjects in part of the unjust compositions imposed upon them for their loyalty, of which number Sir Richard Leveson was one, who, being dead before the passing of this Act, could not devise the same from petitioner, the estate not being in him at the time of his decease. Notwithstanding the said Act relating to the first day of the Parliament by construction of law, the estate will rest in Sir Richard as from that day, and consequently cause the will to extend to those impropriations, whereby petitioner will be disinherited, and not have like benefit with those heirs whose ancestors died before the first day of the Parliament. There is a general saving offered in the Bill for the rights of all persons till 1662, to the end that petitioner's case, with others, may be provided for, but it is not sufficiently penned to remedy the inconveniences. Petitioner prays leave to offer a particular saving to preserve the rights of Sir Richard Leveson's heirs in the Bill, or that provision may be made for petitioner's relief in the general saving. See L. J., XI. 465.

May 17. Amendments, &c. to the Bill for preventing rapine and theft upon the Northern borders of England. L. J., XI. 466. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant. (Three papers.)

May 17. Amendments and proviso to the Bill for the better relief of the poor. L. J., XI. 467. The Bill received the royal assent on the 19th instant. (Five papers.)

May 19. Amendments and provisoes to the Bill for regulating printing. L. J., XI. 469. The Bill received the royal assent this day. (Eleven papers.)

Annexed:—

1. Application that a proviso may be inserted in the Bill for the protection of the rights of Sir Andrew King to whom the King by letters patent granted the office of Clerk of the Bills in the Custom House, which is the taking an account of all entries made of goods by merchants and others for whatsoever is brought in or carried out of the kingdom to be distributed to the merchants and traders who desire the same. The list of entries passed at the Custom House at noon is immediately printed and delivered to the merchants and others by four o'clock the same day. This can only be done by the continuance of the printing press as it is now over the Custom House in Thames Street. A printer free of the City and of the Company of Stationers has always been employed in this business.

2. Printed bill of imports and exports for the 26th of March 1662.

3. Proposed proviso.

4. Copy of preceding.

May 19. Amendments, provisoes, &c. to the Bill for enlarging and repairing of common highways. L. J., XI. 469. The Bill received the royal assent this day. (Nineteen papers.)

May 20. Writ to John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, to certify into Chancery the Act declaring the pains, penalties, and forfeitures imposed upon the estates and persons of certain notorious offenders excepted out of the Act of free and general pardon, indemnity, and oblivion. Petition of Grace Jackson, widow, addressed to Richard Earl of Dorset and Thomas Earl of Berkshire. Petitioner has faithfully prosecuted the discoveries before their Lordships at the Savoy against the treasurers for maimed soldiers and widows, and by her continued labours and expenses has brought herself very low. She has by her diligence succeeded in attaching the person of Mr. Bressy, who is now in custody. She prays their Lordships' help and favour in obtaining some relief for the supply of her present necessities until the business so effectually prosecuted by her shall be brought to a final order, and that their Lordships would write a line to Mr. Barker that her name may be inserted in the list.

Petition of Michael Crake, water bailiff of Sunderland. Charles I., in the vacancy of a Lord Admiral, settled the water-bailiwick of Sunderland upon petitioner, which office his Highness James Duke of York, Lord High Admiral of England, did, upon his coming in, confirm upon petitioner during his life; but John Bishop of Durham forced possession of the office contrary to law, pretending a right to be Lord Admiral there, but neither he nor any Bishop of Durham had any grant of the admiralty of the county, either from the Crown or from His Highness the Lord High Admiral of England. Petitioner prays to be restored to his office, of which he was unlawfully put out of possession, and he will then maintain His Highness' right at the common law.

2-3. Amendments to the Bill.

Feb. 23. Draft of an Act concerning His Majesty's power in ecclesiastical affairs. The preamble recites that whereas divers of His Majesty's subjects through error of judgment and misguided consciences (whereunto the licentiousness of the late unhappy times has much contributed) do not conform themselves to the order of divine worship and service established by law, and although His Majesty and both Houses of Parliament are satisfied that these scruples of conscience are ill grounded, and the government of the church, with the service thereof as now established, is the best that is anywhere extant, and more effectual to the preservation of the Protestant religion, yet hoping that clemency and indulgence may wear out these prejudices and reduce the dissenters to the unity of the Church, and considering that this indulgence cannot be dispensed by any rule, but must vary according to the circumstances and principles of those to whom it is to be granted, and that His Majesty is the best judge where and to whom this indulgence is to be dispensed, to the end that His Majesty may be enabled to exercise it with universal satisfaction, the Bill proposes to enact that the King may by letters patent under the Great Seal, or by such other ways as to His Majesty may seem meet, dispense with the Act of Uniformity, and with any other laws or statutes concerning the same, or requiring oaths or subscriptions, or which do enjoin conformity to the order, discipline, and worship established in this church, and the penalties in the said laws imposed, or any of them, and may grant licenses to subjects of the Protestant religion, of whose inoffensive and peaceable disposition His Majesty shall be persuaded, to enjoy the use and exercise of their religion and worship, though differing from the public rule. Provided that no such indulgence or dispensation shall extend to the tolerating or permitting the use or exercise of the Popish or Roman Catholic religion, or to enable any person to hold any office of public trust, who at the beginning of this Parliament was by law disabled thereunto. in italics are noted in the margin "to be left out of the Bill." The Bill was brought in and read 1st this day, and after passing through various stages was eventually dropped. L. J., XI. 482, &c.

Feb. 25. Draft of an Act for recording the matches and descents of the nobility and gentry of England, and for preventing usurpations of their armorial achievements and irregularities in bearing of them. Similar to the Bill brought in 3 July 1661 (see above). This Bill was read 1st this day, recommitted 3 July 1663, but was not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 484, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to the Bill.

[1662-3, Feb. 25.] Draft list of Committee for Petitions. The list does not agree with that given in the journals. L. J., XI. 484.

Feb. 27. Memorandum by the Clerk of the Parliaments, and the Serjeant-at-arms that Thomas Vavasour and others refused to pay fees, and have gone out of town without giving bail according to the order of the House of the 13th of May last. This memorandum is made upon a copy of the order referred to. L. J., XI. 485.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of portion of the order of 10th of March 1661-2 for arrest of Vavasour and others, noted with the names of those that appeared, but went out of town contrary to the order without paying fees or giving bail.

Feb. 27. Petition of Elizabeth, Baroness Dowager of Abergavenny; she claims dower and thirds of the manor of Abergavenny, and other manors in right of her late husband John Lord Abergavenny, and complains that George, now Lord Abergavenny, brother of her late husband, has refused her dower, and forced her to recover against him by law, has obstructed her in so doing by his privilege as a peer, has given order for holding court in his own name, and for cutting down woods, and intends to receive the next rents wholly to himself without any consideration of her rights; she prays for an order to stop his proceedings, and that she may be permitted to proceed at law for her relief. (See below, 7 May 1663.)

Feb. 27. Writ of summons to Parliament to James Viscount Say and Seale.

March 6. Application for an order to stay proceedings in the suits brought by one Gobee against the tenants of the Earl of Bedford as trustee for payment of the debts of the late Earl of Carlisle. L. J., XI. 489. In extenso.

March 6. Petition of Richard Earl of Dorset. Prays to be restored to the possession of the advowson of St. Dunstan's in the West, &c. L. J., XI. 490. In extenso.

March 13. Affidavit of Benjamin Rolt concerning a riot in the Queen Dowager's manor of Somersham, in the county of Huntingdon. L. J., XI. 492.

March 14. Application for an order to stay proceedings in a suit touching the manor of Brockton, in the county of Salop, wherein the title of Viscount Stafford is concerned during the privilege of Parliament. L. J., XI. 493.

March 14. Matters which the Committee appointed to review the statutes concerning the streets, poor, highways, and hackney coaches have thought fit to require satisfaction in from the Commissioners and others charged with the execution of the several powers in the statutes. (Two papers.) L. J., XI. 493.

March 16. Draft of an Act to enable Edward Marquess of Worcester to receive the benefit and profit of a water-commanding engine by him invented, one tenth part whereof is appropriated for the benefit of the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors. Read 1st this day. Received the royal assent 3 June 1663. L. J., XI. 493, &c.

March 16. Draft of an Act for the better regulating the manufacture of glass bottles, and for preventing of abuses committed therein. Similar to the Bill brought in 10th April 1662 (see above). Read 1st this day, but rejected upon the question that the Bill be engrossed. L. J., XI. 493, &c.

March 17. Petition of Sir Allan Zouch and Dame Katherine his wife for relief against a decree in Chancery obtained by Eliz. Bradbury, deceased, and revived by her executrix Anne Bedingfield. See L. J., XI. 528.

March 19. Draft of an Act for preventing of abatements of writs of error upon judgments in the Exchequer. The Bill was read 1st this day, passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. A Bill, with a similar title, received the royal assent the following year. L. J., XI. 494, &c.

March 21. Draft of an Act for the making navigable or otherwise passable divers rivers from Greenstead [Grinstead], Arundel, Portsmouth, Petersfield, Dorking, and Farnham, in the counties of Surrey, Sussex, and Southampton, to London, and from Southampton to Winchester and Allsford [Alresford]. The Bill was read 1st this day, but subsequently dropped. L. J., XI. 496, &c.

March 23. Draft of an Act enabling Dorothy Lady Dacre, widow and relict of the Right Honorable Richard Lord Dacre, deceased, late one of the Peers of this realm, to hold and enjoy the site of the manor of Sutton Court, together with the manor and divers lands, tenements, and hereditaments thereunto belonging, for the residue of the term of years in a lease thereof made by Dr. Matthew Nicholas, the late Dean, and the Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in London, to Charles Whittaker, Esq., yet to come and unexpired. Read 1st this day, and upon question rejected. L. J., XI. 497.

March 24. Draft of petition to the King concerning Jesuits and Romish priests. L. J., XI. 498. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the preamble to the Act, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 28, for the dissolution of religious houses.

2. Extract from the King's articles of marriage granting to the Queen the same privileges with regard to her religion as were formerly granted to the Queen mother. See L. J., XI. 495.

March 24. Draft of an Act for the naturalising James Taudin, Didier Foucant, and Mathew Boucheret, all born beyond the seas. The Bill does not appear to have been read, but Taudin and Foucant took the oaths this day in order to their being naturalised. C. J., VIII. 456.

1663.

March 28. Report of the conference with the Commons respecting the petition to the King against Jesuits and Romish priests. L. J., XI. 500.

March 28. Amendments to the petition proposed by the Commons and agreed to by the Lords. L. J., XI. 500.

March 28. Amended draft of the petition. L. J., XI. 500. In extenso.

March 28. Petition of Thomas Vavasour and Peter Clarke, on behalf of themselves and others, tenants and inhabitants of Epworth, in the Isle of Axholme, in the county of Lincoln. Petitioners were, with twenty-two other tenants and inhabitants of the manor of Epworth, ordered to be attached during the last session of Parliament to answer to a pretended contempt of an order of the House. Upon notice thereof thirteen of them came voluntarily in and yielded themselves prisoners, and being brought to the bar, a day was set down for them to be heard, but their Lordships' other weighty affairs and the prorogation of Parliament prevented this. They are again attached upon pretence of contempt of another order of the 13th of May last, although they have ever since demeaned themselves peaceably. The Bill for Hatfield Level, in which petitioners are concerned, is now depending in the House of Commons, and most of the tenants are very poor men, and some of them are undone by this last restraint, and have not yet been heard. They pray that some of them may have liberty to attend before the House of Commons, and the rest to follow their lawful employments in seed time, or that a day may be appointed for them to be heard. L. J., XI. 500.

March 30. Draft of an Act for vesting certain lands of John Copleston, gent., in Sir Francis Vincent, Knight and Baronet, Thomas Waldegrave, Esquire, Charles Cornwallis, Esquire, Thomas Westlake, gent., and their heirs to sell for payment of his debts. Read 1st this day, passed through all stages in the Lords, but was rejected in the Commons. L. J., XI. 501.

March 31. Petition of Thomas Vavasour and Peter Clarke. Petitioners are kept close prisoners for pretended contempts and misdemeanors. They are willing to pay the officers' fees according to their abilities, and pray that a day may be appointed for them to be heard. L. J., XI. 501.

[March —.] Writ of summons to Parliament to Charles Henry Lord Wotton of Wotton.

April 1. Petition of Sir Allan Zouch and Dame Katherine his wife. In the year 1647 Elizabeth Bradbury, since deceased, during the time of petitioner's residence in the King's garrisons, obtained a decree in Chancery against them, which in 1650, after full examination, was reversed by the powers then in being, but has now been revived by Anne Bedingfield, administratrix of Elizabeth Bradbury. Petitioners pray to be relieved against the decree, and that the depositions taken before the commission formerly appointed to examine into the matter may be used, as many of the witnesses are now dead. See L. J., XI. 528.

April 1. Petition of Elizabeth Reynolds, formerly wife to Captain Chillinghall. Petitioner's late husband was murdered at the insurrection in Kent, and petitioner was grievously wounded to the loss of her limbs, and left a desolate widow, with a great charge of five children, having spent all her estate in the service of his late Majesty and His Majesty that now is, as appears by certificate under His Majesty's royal hand (a copy whereof is annexed). Petitioner was also forced beyond the seas for above seven years, and is now married to Thomas Reynolds, a gunner, who served their Majesties from the beginning to the end of the late wars, in which service he was maimed, and rendered altogether incapable to gain a livelihood. He has been arrested in an action of 700*l.* for a debt which was but 80*l.*, and was contracted by reason of his services and sufferings, and has been imprisoned in Wood Street Counter for above three months, although the debt is all paid except 25*l.* She prays that something may be granted towards the enlargement of her husband and for the relief of her children, as she has spent and lost above 1,500*l.* in His Majesty's service.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate referred to in preceding. 7 Aug. 1654.

April 2. Copy of the King's answer to the petition against Jesuits and Romish priests. L. J., XI. 503. In extenso.

April 2. Draft of an Act for the settling of lands and satisfaction of moneys disbursed for the benefit of infants, and to compose suits in law against them. The title of this Bill was subsequently altered to an Act for the settling of an annuity of three hundred pounds per annum upon Charles Earl of Portland, and for the benefit of Willoughby Whitlocke, Bulsirode Whitlocke, and Carleton Whitlocke, infants, and for confirming of agreements made to compose suits in law against them. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 3 June 1663. L. J., XI. 504, &c.

Annexed:—

1-3. Amendments and provisoes.

April 4. Draft of an Act for the settling of the lands of the Earl of Kent and the Lord Lucas, on the marriage of the said Earl with the daughter and heir apparent of the said Lord Lucas. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 27 July 1663. L. J., XI. 504, &c.

April 6. Draft report from the Committee for Privileges, recommending that no person who is not capacitated to be present at debates of Parliament shall be allowed near the doors during the sitting of the House, and that the orders of the 15th of May 1661 concerning the Painted Chamber, &c. be amended. L. J., XI. 506.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of orders of 15th of May 1661 amended as suggested.

April 7. Petition of Abraham Forrester. Petitioner having heretofore petitioned His Majesty to make known a new invention for repairing highways, whereby all wains, waggons, coaches, carts, and horsemen may the better travel without danger, and so to repair them that they shall continue durable for many years at a more easy charge than they now are, His Majesty was pleased to command that petitioner should make an experiment, whereby it might appear that the effect might be answerable to the undertaking. In obedience to this command petitioner has made an experiment upon the road leading from His Majesty's Palace at St. James', as appears by a certificate which has fully satisfied His Majesty, whose pleasure is that it be recommended to Parliament to take the business into consideration both for the highways of this nation, and for the paving of all streets whatsoever, whereby the undertaker may be encouraged by an allowance of a salary for him and his agents. Petitioner is bold to present these matters to their Lordships. L. J., XI. 507.

April 7. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee appointed to consider the statute concerning highways, &c. L. J., XI. 507.

April 7. Petition of Windsor Sandys, James Pitson, and others concerned with and for them. In the year 1653 the River Wye [Wey], in the county of Surrey, was, upon the procurement of the town of Guildford, made navigable by James Pitson and his partners at a cost of about 15,000*l.*, and the profits arising thence have been quietly and peaceably enjoyed by the makers and those claiming under them until the last session of this Parliament, when William Dickenson and others illegally and contrary to a decree of Chancery, by making use of petitioner Pitson's name, obtained of the proprietors conveyances of divers parcels of lands which were contracted for for the use of the river, and for which the greatest part of the money was paid. Having thus bought a title to certain lands through which the river is cut, Dickenson and the others have for some months hindered the passage of all boats, but such as by combination pay the whole revenue of the river to them, whereby commerce has been so obstructed that in some weeks five or six hundred quarters of corn and meal, besides other commodities, have been uncarried to the great damage of the owners and the market, and the King's timber for shipping, which is much wanted, is obstructed; all which is contrary to orders from the King and Council. Petitioners pray that the management of the navigation may be put into some fit hands, which, in respect the river is cut through some part of His Majesty's lands, may most properly be in the Chancellor of the Exchequer, or that the revenue and profits may be received and kept until the right therein be settled by Parliament, and that the illegal combinations and practices done in this affair may receive some exemplary judgment. L. J., XI. 507.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. Pray that their complaint against William Dickenson and others may be heard at the bar. (Undated.)

April 7. Order referring preceding petitions of Windsor Sandys and others, to the Committee upon the Bill for making navigable certain rivers in the counties of Surrey, Sussex, and Southampton. L. J., XI. 507. In extenso.

April 9. Draft of an Act for the improvement of Ashdowne Forest and the park called the Broyle Park. Read 1^a this day, passed through all stages in the Lords, but was dropped in the Commons. L. J., XI. 507, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.

April 11. Petition of Sir Edward Heath, Knight of the Bath, and Francis Heath, his brother. Justinian Pagett, who held the office of Custos Brevium in the Court of King's Bench, forfeited the same by the law of the realm for his non-attendance according to the commands of his late Majesty, published by his proclamation at Oxford of the 1st Jan. 1643-4, at which time Sir Robert Heath, being duly constituted Chief Justice of the Court, the office being forfeited and void as aforesaid, granted it to petitioners for their lives, which grant was enrolled, and petitioners were duly sworn and became possessed of the office, and for some time officiated therein, but were and are now by Justinian Pagett and by reason of the late troubles hindered in the enjoyment thereof. For remedy whereof petitioners brought their writ of assize of novel disseisin in the Court of King's Bench against Pagett, but a verdict passed against them because they could not give full and formal satisfaction as to the proof of the proclamation, or other legal adjournment of the Court from Westminster to Oxford, or of the enrolment of the grant, or of their admittance into the office as by the strict rule of the common law was required, the records and other proceedings therein, by reason of the surrender of Oxford, not being extant. Petitioners pray their Lordships to admit them to their proofs, and upon consideration thereof to restore them to their office. L. J., XI. 508.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Another copy.

April 11. Petition of divers persons claiming right of common in the forest of Ashdowne and chase or park called the Broyle, in the county of Sussex, in the name of themselves and others. The forest of Ashdowne, otherwise called Lancaster Great Park, and the chase or park called the Broyle have lately been disafforested by His Majesty's letters patent, and are intended to be enclosed and improved. Petitioners hope they will not be deprived thereby of that which of right belongs to them by way of common; for the better ascertaining of which they pray their Lordships to take into consideration the Bill for erecting a judicature by commission to such fit persons of the county as their Lordships shall judge most proper, and to allot them just satisfaction. L. J., XI. 509.

April 11. Petition of Thomas Sheircliffe. Petitioner has been imprisoned for a month by their Lordships' order for counterfeiting the hand of Lord Hunsdon, which offence was in fact committed by Francis Bird. Petitioner prays that their Lordships will be pleased to grant him his release, forasmuch as he has produced the man really guilty. L. J., XI. 509.

April 12. Petition of Dame Dorothy Rosewell. Prays to be heard against the Bill empowering Sir John Drake and others to sell lands for payment of the portion of Ellen Briscoe. L. J., XI. 510.

April 13. Petition of the inhabitants of the town of Lowestoft in Suffolk. Complain that the under-sheriff of Norfolk refused to join with the under-sheriff of Suffolk, according to their Lordships' order of the 26th of February 1661-2, in measuring the seven miles within which the Corporation of Yarmouth was to enjoy full privileges; they further complain that the Yarmouth fishermen have since the new boundary post was set up come three miles beyond it toward Lowestoft, and have chased the Lowestoft fishers and compelled them to carry all their herrings to Yarmouth, where by reason of the plenty carried thither, the Yarmouth men set a price on them from fifty to thirty shillings the last, and some under, so that the poor fishers, by reason of the small prices, do not get sufficient to make good their tackling, to the ruin of petitioners, who are wearied out with the endless and vexatious suits of their powerful adversaries. Petitioners pray that the admeasurement made in pursuance of their Lordships' order may be confirmed, and that means may be adopted to provide for the future security and quiet of petitioners and the Lowestoft fishermen. L. J., XI. 510.

Annexed:—

1. Narrative concerning the proceedings upon an order of the House of Lords bearing date the 26th of February 1661-2, wherein the determination of admeasuring seven miles from the Crane Key, in Yarmouth, towards Lowestoft is referred to the two several and respective Sheriffs of Suffolk and Norfolk. L. J., XI. 510. In extenso.

April 13. Complaint that the Earl of Salisbury has been assessed at a horse and arms by the Deputy Lieutenants of Somerset contrary to privilege, and that a writ for levying 20*l.* in lieu thereof has been executed against his Lordship's tenant. L. J., XI. 511.

Annexed:—

1. List of the Deputy Lieutenants who signed the warrant, &c.

April 13. Order referring the Earl of Salisbury's complaint to the Committee for Privileges. L. J., XI. 511. In extenso.

April 29. Petition of Roger Smith, of the City of Norwich. Upon misinformation their Lordships were pleased to order petitioner to be taken into custody by the Serjeant-at-Arms, by virtue whereof he is now under restraint, to his exceeding damage and the great neglect of His Majesty's service, having the receipt of a monthly assessment in the county of Norfolk and other moneys belonging to His Majesty. Prays to be discharged, or that a speedy hearing may be granted to him. L. J., XI. 512.

April 29. Names of persons to be attached for arresting a servant of the Earl of Middlesex. L. J., XI. 513.

May 2. Affidavit of Robert Pemberton. Thomas Lodington, a servant to Lord Warwick, being arrested immediately upon the adjournment of the House, deponent was sent by his Lordship to demand him of the keeper of the prison, which he accordingly did, but Samuel Atkins, at whose suit Lodington was arrested, encouraged the keeper to detain him, promising to hold him harmless. L. J., XI. 515.

May 2. Petition of Samuel Atkins. Lodington was arrested before petitioner laid his execution upon him, and although he pretends to be bailiff to Lord Warwick, he was never really concerned in managing his Lordship's estate, and has offered to procure another protection from the said Lord for one Bassett for 20*l.*, whereas which he is a dangerous person, and disaffected to the kingly government. Petitioner prays their Lordships not to protect so unworthy a person. L. J., XI. 515.

May 2. Petition of William Bassett and many others. Thomas Lodington having contracted great debts and being arrested, petitioners became bail for him knowing him to have a considerable estate; this he has since made away with, and intends speedily to go to Ireland, and petitioners and their families are thereby likely to be ruined. Lodington has lately been arrested by some others of his creditors, but is endeavouring to get himself discharged under pretence that he is protected by the Earl of Warwick, of whom he rents certain lands; his being in custody will discharge petitioners, but if he be not detained they are likely to be taken in execution to their utter ruin, as they can never have satisfaction from him. They therefore pray that he may remain in custody.

May 5. Petition of Anne Bedingfield. After debate before their Lordships the cause between petitioner and Sir Allan Zouch and his Lady was by consent submitted to the Lord Chancellor to be examined in a judicial way. Petitioner's counsel accordingly prepared a petition to be presented to his Lordship, but the counsel for the other side refuse to join therein without adding words to which petitioner is advised it would be unsafe for her to subscribe. She prays their Lordships to direct that the matter shall be examined and determined by the Lord Chancellor.

Annexed:—

1. Draft petition to the Lord Chancellor referred to in preceding.
2. Draft of another petition to the Lord Chancellor.

May 5. Petition of Sir Allan Zouch and Dame Katherine his wife. Petitioners complain that Anne Bedingfield refuses to join in a petition to the Lord Chancellor, and therefore pray their Lordships to relieve them against the decree complained of.

May 7. Affidavit of Thomas Chamberlen, servant to Lord Holles, respecting his arrest. L. J., XI. 517. In extenso.

May 7. Petition of Elizabeth Lady Dowager of Abergavenny; when her petition claiming dower of the manors of John, late Lord Abergavenny, and complaining that she was refused the same by George, now Lord Abergavenny, and had no remedy at law by his claiming his privilege as a peer, was lately read in the House (see 27 Feb. 1662-3) Lord Abergavenny seemed to declare some willingness to agree that her dower should be left to the judgment of four Lords, and that in the meantime she should receive the third part of the profits of the lands of which she was dowable by law, but he has received the whole of the rents of the manors, intending only to delay petitioner and force her to recover her rights by law; she therefore prays the House to proceed in endowing her and to make such order for her relief as shall be agreeable to law and precedent. L. J., XI. 518. The consideration of this matter was referred to the Lord Privy Seal, the Earl of Northampton, Lord Lovelace, and Lord Ashley.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of an order adding the Lord Chamberlain and others to the referees. L. J., XI. 538. In extenso.
2. The state of the case between the Lady Dowager of Abergavenny and the now Lord touching the dower demanded by her.
3. Minutes of proceedings on various days from the 19th of June to the 17th of July 1663.
4. Order of the referees for a list of the late Lord's debts to be prepared, &c. 9 July 1663.
5. A schedule of debts.
6. A note of some debts of John Lord Abergavenny, deceased, that are yet unpaid.
7. A note of what debts the now Lord Abergavenny was bound with his brother, the late Lord.
8. Resolution of the referees in favour of Lady Abergavenny's claim of dower. 25 July 1663. L. J., XI. 574.
9. Petition of Henry Nevill, of Bathwick, in the county of Somerset, Henry Nevill and Edward Nevill his sons; petitioners, as heirs in remainder to the Barony of Abergavenny, were promised by the late Lord 200*l.* for their consent to the Bill of last session for raising money by sale of his lands, but have never been paid; they pray that their case may be referred to the Committee appointed to consider the differences between the Dowager Lady Abergavenny and George now Lord Abergavenny. (Undated.)
10. Petition of Frances Nevill. In consequence of the death of John Lord Abergavenny, and the differences that have happened between his relict and George, now Lord Abergavenny, petitioner can neither get her portion under the Act of last session, nor any assurance of payment thereafter. She prays that some course may be taken for performance of the Act on her behalf.

May 8. Petition of Fuller Meade. In the year 1631 Toby Pallavisine exhibited his Bill in chancery against petitioner respecting the possession of the manor of Foxtonbury, Cambridgeshire, which Bill was after long hearing dismissed, and a decree was made by Lord Keeper Coventry, whereby petitioner was to hold the lands in question discharged of all equity of redemption. In 1640 petitioner omitting to make out those evidences and witnesses for his rights (which now he can), the House of Lords was pleased to relieve Pallavisine against the decree, and order petitioner to re-convey the lands, which was accordingly performed. petitioner, who is without relief but in Parliament, prays their Lordships to review and examine the cause. See L. J., XI. 531.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding. 26 May 1663.

May 8. Petition of Henry Pettit, now prisoner in the Fleet, Administrator of Thomas Freeman, late of London, merchant, deceased. Prays to be relieved against a decree in Chancery and other proceedings unjustly taken against him by Lawrence Hyde, and that he may have his liberty to attend their Lordships. See L. J., XII. 95, &c.

May 12. Petition of Anne Bedingfield, administratrix of Elizabeth Bradbury. Petitioner is advised that she cannot with safety consent to the petition to the Lord Chancellor to hear her cause against Sir Allan Zouche and his wife, as it is now penned, and she prays their Lordships to direct such a form of petition as may only refer it to his Lordship to examine the matter, and do therein according to justice.

May 14. Report from the Committee for Petitions upon the cause between Sir Allan Zouche and Dame Katherine his wife, and Anne Bedingfield. See L. J., XI. 528.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of another report from the Committee of Petitions upon the same matter. (Undated.)

May 14. Petition of John Winterborne. Prays for the reversal of an order and decree of the Court of Chancery in his cause against Doctor George Kendall respecting the interest on certain bonds, or that the matter may be referred to the Lord Chancellor for a re-hearing.

May 15. Draft of an Act to enable the Bishop of Winchester to lease out the tenements now built upon the site of his mansion-house in the parish of St. Saviour's in Southwark, in the county of Surrey, and the two parks and other demesnes at Bishops Waltham, and other lands in the county of Southampton. Read 1st this day. Received the royal assent 27 July 1663. L. J., XI. 523, &c.

May 15. Engrossment of an Act to enable John Newport, Esq., to enter into certain messuages lying in Westminster. Brought from the Commons, and read 1st this day, but subsequently rejected. L. J., XI. 523, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

May 18. Petition of Owen Feltham, of Gray's Inn. Petitioner legally married and afterwards cohabited with Mary Portrey, daughter and co-heiress of Alexander Portrey, but Mrs. Katherine Hurlstone, her mother, and Mrs. Jane Sydenham, her sister, and next heir apparent to her inheritance, having got her into their possession have detained her from petitioner's sight, and used strange insinuations and undue practices to prejudice and incense her against him, working much disorder in her mind, whereby she is in danger of distraction; petitioner repossessed himself of his wife, but John Sydenham, being accompanied by the said Jane his wife, and others, whose names are yet unknown to petitioner, at 11 o'clock on the night of the 14th instant, entered petitioner's house, and by force of arms, with swords drawn, took away his wife, and afterwards converted him before a justice upon pretence of felony, who upon examination discharged him and made a certificate to that effect, but Katherine Hurlstone and John and Jane Sydenham still refuse to produce his wife. Forasmuch as the law gives him no remedy proportionable to the injury received, nor can restore him his wife, he prays that all parties may be summoned to appear before their Lordships to the end that such order may be taken in the matter as shall seem meet, and that in the meantime an order may be granted to prevent his wife from being sent away. L. J., XI. 524. Noted. Dismissed.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Justice Humphrey Weld that upon information that Owen Feltham had stolen Mary Portrey, and upon pretence that she was his wife, detained her in his custody, he issued his warrant and caused Feltham to be brought before him, but upon examination of witnesses he found that Feltham and Mary Portrey were married according to the order of the Church of England on the 18th of December last, that the marriage was consummated between them, and that she was forcibly and violently taken away from her said husband by many persons whose names are not yet discovered. 18 May 1663.

May 19. Petition of John Penton. Duplicate of petition of 21 Feb. 1661-2. (See above.)

May 19. Petition of Henry Pettit, now prisoner in the Fleet. Prays that a further day may be appointed for hearing his cause against Lawrence Hyde.

May 21. Petition of Richard Nuttall. Prays to be heard by counsel at the bar against the Bill to enable John Newport Esquire to enter into certain messuages lying in Westminster. L. J., XI. 526.

May 21. Petition of Owen Feltham. On the 18th instant their Lordships were pleased to refer petitioner's complaint to the consideration of the Lord Chief Justice of England, and petitioner accordingly attended his Lordship, desiring a time might be appointed; but his Lordship, although very willing to obey the order, told petitioner that he had not one spare forenoon or afternoon in all the term, and as soon as term ended the sessions came on, so that he knew not when he should be at leisure, and his Lordship, looking upon the order of reference, hinted that he had no power to examine upon oath, or to compel petitioner's wife to come before him. There is undue practising upon petitioner's wife, whose mother is endeavouring to marry her to another, and threatens to be the death of her if she does not disown her marriage with petitioner. He prays that the matter may be referred to some of their Lordships, with power to summon the parties and witnesses before them, and to examine upon oath. See L. J., XI. 534.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. In compliance with their Lordships' order the Lord Chief Justice has examined seven witnesses who have fully proved petitioner's marriage, but his Lordship knows not when he shall be able to appoint another day. Petitioner has discovered tampering to suborn witnesses against him who are encouraged thereto, not being indictable for false swearing in the Lord Chief Justice's chamber, petitioner having no remedy against them, except it were in a Court of Record; his wife is all this time in the custody of the next heir-at-law and of her mother, who threatens that she shall not live with petitioner, though the marriage be proved. He prays their Lordships to consider the extremity of his case, and to give him a hearing at the bar, and that in the meantime his wife may be sequestered into some third hands.

2. Letter from Owen Feltham to Mr. Walker [Reading Clerk]. Requests that his affidavit, &c. of which he has great occasion to make use may be sent to him by bearer. 5 June 1663.

May 25. Petition of George Cooke and others. On the 7th instant their Lordships were pleased to order the Serjeant-at-arms to attach petitioners for arresting Thomas Chamberlen, a menial servant of Lord Holles, and for speaking contemptuous words against his Lordship and the dignity of the House. Petitioners acknowledge their error in arresting Chamberlen, being ignorant that he was a servant of Lord Holles, but they are free from being guilty in speaking the words imputed to them. Pray for their discharge or that a speedy day may be appointed for them to be heard. L. J., XI. 527.

May 25. Petition of Hugh White, Serjeant, and John Kempe, his yeoman, officers attending the Sheriffs of London. Thomas Chamberlen, having been arrested by some of the bailiffs belonging to the sheriffs of Middlesex, requested to be brought to petitioners, near Temple Bar within the precincts of the city of London, which was accordingly done, but petitioners never laid any arrest or restraint upon him. Chamberlen being a servant of Lord Holles their Lordships were pleased to order petitioners, amongst others, to be taken into custody. They pray to be discharged. L. J., XI. 527.

May 26. Petition of George Dannet, William Newman, and others, creditors of his late Majesty of blessed memory, and of Sir Sampson Darrell, deceased, then victualler for His Majesty's navy; petitioners being navy creditors had several judgments at law and a decree in the Court of Exchequer for 2,400*l.* against Sir Thomas Ashfield and his estate, which judgments were vacated contrary to law by Robert Nicholas and John Parker, then Barons of the Exchequer, long after the decree, upon pretence that petitioner's attorney had omitted the entering of a single rule, price 4*l.* His Majesty and Council have referred petitioner's grievances to the new Lord Chief Baron for examination, but Sir Thomas Ashfield, although summoned, would not appear before his Lordship, who declared that petitioners ought not to be defrauded of their just debts, for which, although originally due from the Crown, the estates of Sir Sampson Darrell and Sir Thomas Ashfield were liable. Petitioners pray that Nicholas and Parker may be ordered to appear and answer.

Annexed:—

1. Extract from the Act, 4 Hen. IV. cap. 23, respecting judgments at the common law.

May 26. Petition of Richard Harday; after he had gone over to the King's father at the beginning of the late war with the company of trained bands of which he was captain, had advanced considerable sums and sent his sons and servants into his late Majesty's service, and had been plundered by the Parliament forces, he made a colourable conveyance of his estate to his younger son Robert, in order to avoid the malice of the Committee of the County; he was shortly after carried to Dorchester prison, and by the unworthy contrivance of his son was there kept prisoner for seventeen years, while his son all the time kept his estate without paying his debts, and hardly allowed him bread; since His Majesty's restoration, fearing the influence of petitioner's friends, his son has contrived to have him brought up from the county prison into the King's Bench, and there laid up close prisoner without allowing him so much as a bit of bread to fill his belly; he prays for consideration and relief, and that his son Robert may be summoned to appear before the House.

May 26. Petition of William Hollinshed, son of William Hollinshed, late of London, merchant, deceased: he alleges that certain houses in Holborn, called the Sword and Buckler, were intended by his father to descend to him failing issue male of an elder brother, but that by the negligence or fraud of the solicitor females were not excluded in the deed executed by his father, and he is liable therefore to lose his inheritance; prays for relief.

May 27. Engrossment of an Act for confirming the conveyances made or mentioned to be made in pursuance of the award by the King's Majesty for composing the differences between John Lord Marquess of Winchester and his eldest son Charles Lord St. John. The Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, was read 1^a, 2^a, committed and recommitted, but was dropped apparently because no agreement could be come to between the parties concerned. L. J., XI. 258, &c.

May 27. Draft of an Act for vesting, settling, and establishing the sole making of alum upon His Majesty, his heirs and successors; before the making of alum in England the country was mostly supplied from Italy, by which the Pope made a large revenue, it being then sold in England for 50*l*. and sometimes 60*l*. per ton, and though several persons attempted the making of alum here, yet it was too great an undertaking for them, whereon the late King James took it into his special care, and spent in bringing the work to perfection above 120,000*l*., which was of great honour and profit to the kingdom; after this the late King Charles disposed of the works and sole right of making alum to several persons under leases from the Crown, and all that had been done was so acceptable to the nation that in the Act of 21 Jac. against monopolies this manufacture was expressly excluded, and by the Parliament of 1640, the rents reserved under the leases of the late King Charles were accounted as part of the King's revenue, but during the late troubles the King's right to the sole making of alum was discountenanced, for remedy of which it is enacted that from henceforth for ever the King and his successors, and his or their licensees, shall have the sole right of making and vending alum, that none shall dig for or make alum, or import from beyond the seas or from Scotland any foreign alum, or English alum which has been already exported, upon pain of forfeiting the same. Read 1^a this day, but subsequently dropped. L. J., XI. 528, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Sir Wm. Cholmondeley's case; he became possessed of certain alum works in Yorkshire, and by desire of His Majesty spent large sums in 1657, 1658, and 1659 in turning them into a port for the use of His Majesty, and is thereby heavily engaged, and if he should now be deprived of the use of the works it would be the utter ruin of himself and his family; he desires that by a proviso to the Bill he may be allowed to make and sell a certain proportion of alum.
2. Statement of the case of Thomas and Isaac Fairfax; about fourteen years ago they erected an alum work at their own charge in Yorkshire, and expended thereon between 6,000*l*. and 7,000*l*., and by plunderings and sequestrations for their fidelity to his late Majesty they have now little left except what is included in their alum interest, and, if deprived of that, their and their families' subsistence accompanies it; they pray that the Bill may not be passed without compensation to them.

May 27. Petition of George Cooke and others; are heartily sorry for their offence in arresting Thomas Chamberlen, and pray for discharge, as they and their families are likely to be ruined by their imprisonment. L. J., XI. 528.

May 30. Draft of an Act for the uniting of the rectory of Seavenoake [Sevenoaks], in the county of Kent, to the vicarage of the same. Read 1^a this day, no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 529.

May 30. Petition of Anne Countess Dowager of Dorset, Pembroke, and Montgomery, daughter and sole heir of George late Earl of Cumberland, Lord Clifford, Westmoreland, and Vescy, to the King's most Excellent Majesty, claiming the titles of Clifford, Westmoreland, and Vescy. Noted with the King's reference thereof to the House. L. J., XI. 529. In extenso.

June 1. List of Committee on the Marquess of Winchester's Bill. L. J., XI. 531.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Daniel Wycherley that his interest in the office of steward of the Marquess' estates may be protected in the Bill. This petition is almost identical with one which will be found above, under the date of 6 March 1661–2.
- 2–5. Papers relating to Wycherley's claim.
6. Petition of the Lords Henry and Edward Powlett and of Charles Powlett, Esq., son and heir of the Lord Charles Powlett, deceased; complain of the provisions of the Marquess of Winchester's Bill affecting their interests, and pray that it may not pass into law.
7. Similar petition of Lord Francis Powlett, second son of the Right Hon. John Marquess of Winchester, an infant under the age of 21 years, by the Right Hon. the Lord Ashley his guardian.

June 1. Petition of above a thousand householders, tenants, and inhabitants within the manor of Epworth, in the Isle of Axholme, and county of Lincoln; petitioners have right of common in the waste grounds within the manor of Epworth, but have been much disturbed in the enjoyment of the same by certain persons under colour of laws of sewers, and of an order of the House of the 20th of December 1660 obtained upon groundless suggestions, while some of the petitioners have been summoned to London and put to great charge, though they have obtained several verdicts in their favour at the assizes; they pray the House to hear the case, and declare in whom the possession of the land ought by law to be, and then to quiet the same accordingly.

June 2. Petition of Philip Passer, mariner; His Majesty upon his happy return was pleased to refer the complaints of petitioner, who had been 40 years in law, to Sir Wm. Batten and others, but they have hitherto done nothing for his relief; petitioner, who is upwards of one hundred and two years of age, prays that they may be commanded without further delay, to sit upon the case, and do him right, or else to return him all his papers and writings now in their hands.

June 2. Petition of Humphrey Browne, for relief against Sir Richard Bettinson respecting a mortgage of certain lands.

Annexed:—

1. The case of Humphrey Browne.
- June 2. Commission for giving the royal assent to several bills. L. J., XI. 533. In extenso.
- June 3. Petition of Daniel Hervey, Kt., son and executor of Daniel Hervey, deceased. A debt was due to petitioner from Sir John Byron, whose lands have descended to Richard Lord Byron, and petitioner is now precluded by his Lordship's privilege from entering on his lands to recover the debt; he prays that a clause for his protection may be inserted in Lord Byron's Bill, or that he may be heard at the bar before the Bill is passed. L. J., XI. 533.
- June 3. Copy of order committing the Bill, and referring the petition to the Committee. L. J., XI. 533.
- June 3. Application on behalf of the Earl of Carnarvon, that he may have the benefit of privilege to stay an action at law by Charles Pittcarne against George Russell. L. J., XI. 534.
- June 3. Affidavit of Wm. Garret, that after he had, by warrant from the King's Surveyor-general, repaired the fences on a certain waste called Wildmore Fen, in the county of Lincoln, some of them were in May last thrown down in a riotous manner by the country people. L. J., XI. 534.

June 3. Petition of Isabella Stanhopp, the relict of John Stanhopp, deceased, in behalf of herself and children; she complains that Thomas Thompson has defrauded her of the profits of the office of registership of the Prerogative Court of York, and is trying to delay her proceedings in Chancery, knowing that, owing to her late husband's losses for his loyalty in the late troubles, she is unable to wage law with him, whereby she and her children are likely to be utterly undone, though confident of the justice of their cause whenever it comes to a hearing; she therefore prays that Thompson may be sent for, and a day appointed by the House for hearing the case.

June 12. Report of a quarrel between the Earl of Middlesex and the Earl of Bridgewater, in consequence of a letter written by the latter to Sir Chichester Wray, upon which the Earl of Middlesex sent a challenge to the Earl of Bridgewater. The Earl of Middlesex was committed to the Tower, and the Earl of Bridgewater to the custody of the Gentleman Usher. L. J., XI. 536. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. The Earl of Bridgewater's letter to Sir Chichester Wray; as you inquired the other morning about Lady Elizabeth Cranfield, I think fit now that I have received a message from her to let you know of it, and of what I have done; she complained that Lord Bolingbroke, whom she had chosen as her guardian, had not resolved to prevent her returning to her uncle, Lord Middlesex, she having resolved to endure any hardship rather than do so, and that she was now in such a distressed condition that if I did not assist her she was utterly undone; I could not be deaf to so sad a moan from a person for whom I have never denied to have a very great respect. I therefore went to the King, and having obtained his leave, received her into my house (where you may have access to her if you please) intending to preserve her till some course be taken concerning the guardianship; I only desire you to believe what I told you, and now reiterate, that though there is not a person in the world whom I should more desire to match with my son than her Ladyship, yet I never did intend, or do intend to do anything of that kind without first treating with her relations, of whom Lord Middlesex is one of the nearest, if you will please to assure him of this. I had intended to have told you this when I came from His Majesty, but had not the good fortune to find you at home. 17 April 1663.

[June 15.] List of widows, whose husbands performed great services for his late Majesty, who desire to be added to those to receive relief. See L. J., XI. 507, 557.

June 18. Petition of Lionel Earl of Middlesex; prays that he may be confined to his own house instead of in the Tower, on account of his health. L. J., XI. 538. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Dr. Fran. Prujean that the Earl of Middlesex is indisposed, and taking physic. 17 June. L. J., XI. 538. In extenso.

June 18. Engrossment of an Act for keeping and holding of the court of great sessions and of the general quarter sessions of the peace for the county of Carnarvon, at the town of Carnarvon in the said county, for ever. Brought from the Commons this day, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 539. (Parchment Collection.)

June 18. Copy of order referring to the Committee for Privileges the question whether peers who have to deliver into the Exchequer accounts of moneys received for public employments should do so upon honour or upon oath. L. J., XI. 539. In extenso.

June 18. Petition of Sir Ralph Clapham, Knight and Baronet, one of His Majesty's gentlemen pensioners in ordinary; prays for relief against William Bowyer, of London, salter, who, taking advantage of petitioner's loyalty in the time of the usurpation, has got possession of two houses, the Sun in Friday Street and the Bell in Distaff Lane, to which petitioner cannot now prove his title in Chancery. L. J., XI. 539.

June 19. Draft of an Act against deceitful, disorderly, and excessive gaming. This Bill, after passing through the House of Lords, was dropped in the House of Commons; but a similar Bill was passed in the following session. L. J., XI. 540, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Paper of amendments.

June 19. Copy of affidavit of John Sudbury, respecting the arrest of Wm. Daniel, a servant of the Earl of Oxford, contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 540. In extenso.

June 20. Petition of Charles Lord Gerard, Baron of Brandon; petitioner, in an action at law against William and Alexander Fitton, having proved that a certain deed produced by them was a forgery, they and others drew up and published a writing alleging that he had by intimidation and promises of reward induced Abraham Grainger, a witness in the cause, to swear falsely; this is a matter which can only be properly examined by the House; petitioner therefore prays that the offenders may be summoned to appear, the matter examined, and redress given him. L. J., XI. 541.

Annexed:—

1. Acknowledgment by Stephen Carr that he has received from John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments, divers papers intituled "A narrative of the horrid and detestable design of the Lord Gerard against A. G. Gr. in compelling him to swear against Mr. Alex^r Fitton," which papers are to be delivered to the Lord Gerard. 18 March 1663-4.

June 23. Petition of George Dannett; under colour of a lease for 99 years of lands worth 80*l.* per annum made to secure a sum of 200*l.* borrowed in 1651, petitioner has been arrested and imprisoned, his wife and family turned out of doors, whilst he has besides suffered greatly for his loyalty to His Majesty and His father; he prays to be restored to his estate upon payment of whatever can reasonably be required, and for speedy justice.

June 26. Report of the Committee for Privileges upon the question whether Peers accounting into the Exchequer should do so upon oath or upon honour; the Committee have considered some precedents, and a declaratory order of the House certified into the Exchequer in 1640, and are of opinion that where the Lords account by their servants or agents, it is upon the oath of such servants or agents, but where they account personally it is upon honour only. L. J., XI. 544.

Annexed:—

1. Some precedents touching the accounts delivered in by Peers.
2. Another copy of the same.
3. Copy of declaratory order. 31 Dec. 1640. L. J., IV. 120. In extenso.

June 26. Instructions to the Committee appointed to draw up the judgment of the House concerning the Earls of Bridgewater and Middlesex. L. J., XI. 544.

June 27. Paper of reprehension to the Earl of Middlesex for sending an unfitting letter and a challenge to the Earl of Bridgewater. L. J., XI. 545. In extenso.

June 27. Paper of reprehension to the Earl of Bridgewater for entertaining the challenge so sent. L. J., XI. 545. In extenso.

June 27. Copy of the two preceding papers.

June 27. Copy of the Earl of Middlesex's and of the Earl of Bridgewater's submission. L. J., XI. 545. In extenso.

June 27. Copy of the Earl of Middlesex's acknowledgment to the Earl of Bridgewater. L. J., XI. 545. In extenso.

June 27. Copy of the Earl of Middlesex's submission, and of his acknowledgement.

July 2. Message from the King intimating his intention of proroguing Parliament. (Signed by the King.) L. J., XI. 547. In extenso.

July 2. Engrossment of an Act to prevent the growth of Popery. Brought from the Commons, read 1st, 2^d, and committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 547, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

July 2. Engrossment of an Act to prevent the unlawful meetings of sectaries, non-conformists, and dissenters from the Church of England. Brought from the House of Commons this day. L. J., XI. 547. The Bill not having passed the Lords on the day of the prorogation (27 July), the Speaker of the House of Commons, in a speech to the King at the close of the session, requested His Majesty to issue a proclamation for putting the laws then in force against Popish recusants, sectaries, and non-conformists in effectual execution. See L. J., XI. 578. (Parchment Collection.)

July 3. Engrossment of an Act to confirm a sale of certain lands lying in Shropshire made by Sir Robert Howard to raise money to pay his debts. Brought from the Commons this day. Read 1st, 2^d, and committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 549, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

poor. Many places are not known to be in any parish, or to be liable to parish rates, and the statute 43 Elizabeth is conceived not to extend to such places; this Bill extends the provisions of that statute to all such places. Brought from the Commons and read 1st this day. The Bill was read 2^a and committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 549, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Hugh Webb and other the tenants of Kings Bowood, in the county of Wilts. The parish of Kings Bowood was heretofore parcel of the forest of Chippenham alias Pewsham, and constantly maintained its own poor. Of late the owners of the lands and waste in the forest adjoining the parks have erected many cottages for their own private lucre, and contrary to law, and receive rent from the cottagers, who are many and very poor. Petitioners pray that the annexed proviso may be inserted in preceding Bill, whereby they may not be charged further than with the relief of the poor of the park, as formerly hath been accustomed.
2. Proposed proviso.
3. Proposed proviso saving the rights, privileges, jurisdictions, or charters of bishops, deans, and chapters, cathedral or collegiate churches, and college halls and hospitals.

July 3. Transcript of record, &c. in the writ of error, Witherings v. Roch. L. J., XI. 549. (Parchment Collection.)

July 3. Petition of Samuel Jones and Michael Baker; petitioners arrested George Fielder in ignorance that he was a servant of the Duchess of Somerset, for which the House ordered that they should be taken into custody; they pray to be discharged being poor men, and heartily sorry for their error. See L. J., XI. 543.

July 6. Deposition of John Gastrell and another; that proceedings have been taken by Francis Freeman and others against certain of the tenants of the Earl of Berks, in the manor of Charlton, Wilts. L. J., XI. 550.

July 6. Statement that Samuel Withers, domestic chaplain to Lord Byron, has been arrested contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 551.

July 6. Petition of Mary Roch, an aged poor widow, the relict of Thos. Roch, deceased; petitioner, who has been kept out of her dower, worth 300*l.* per annum, for twenty years past, brought a writ of dower in the Court of Common Pleas against Wm. Witherings, and obtained judgment therein, against which judgment Witherings brought a writ of error into the King's Bench, where the judgment was confirmed, and for further delay he has brought a writ of error to the House; she prays to be allowed to sue in forma pauperis, which has been permitted to her both in the Common Pleas and King's Bench. L. J., XI. 551.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same to Sir Orlando Bridgeman, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, for leave to sue in forma pauperis. Noted with an order by Sir O. Bridgeman granting petitioner's prayer. 20 July 1661.
2. Similar petition of same to Sir Robert Foster, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of England, or any other judge of the Court. Noted with an order by Justice Malet granting petitioner's prayer.

July 7. Petition of Samuel Jones and Michael Baker; are sensible of their error in arresting George Fielder, the Duchess of Somerset's servant, and pray for pardon and discharge. L. J., XI. 551.

July 7. Petition of Dame Katherine Howard, relict of Sir Robert Howard, deceased, and guardian of Hen. Howard, Esq., son and heir of the said Sir Robert Howard, an infant. She prays to be heard on behalf of the infant against a Bill now before the House to confirm an Act passed in 1661 to enable Sir Robert Howard, who was but tenant for life, to sell part of his estate to the disinherison of his son. L. J., XI. 552.

July 8. Petition of the freeholders and owners of land within the soke of Horncastle, in the county of Lincoln, and commoners in Wildmore Fen; they complain that having time out of mind enjoyed right of common, of turbary, and other profits over Wildmore Fen, they were disturbed therein by Sir John Prettiman and others, who, pretending that the soil belonged to His Majesty, have procured an order from the House to secure His Majesty's tenants in possession: petitioners allege that the King's name is only used to colour private designs, and pray that they may not be debarred of their just interest without a judicial hearing. L. J., XI. 553.

July 8. Application on behalf of the Marquess of Worcester for stay of a suit between Sir James Langham and John Warner affecting certain tenants of the Marquess. L. J., XI. 553.

July 9. Draft of an additional Act for repairing, paving, and amending the highways and streets about the cities of London and Westminster. Read 1^a this day, read 2^a and committed on the 18th; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 554, 565.

Annexed:—

1. Some additions proposed to the Act for cleansing the streets.

July 10. Petition of John Corance; claims an interest in certain lands in Bedford level, and prays to be heard at the bar before the Bill for settling the draining of the level now before the House is passed. L. J., XI. 555.

July 10. Similar petition of Wm. Crane.

July 10. Another petition of Wm. Crane.

July 10. Similar petition of Wm. Drax and Henry Dacres.

July 10. Similar petition of Edmond Berry Godfrey.

July 10. Similar petition of Edmond Page and Robert Gale, an infant.

July 10. Similar petition of Thos. Pinfold.

July 10. Similar petition of George Underwood.

July 10. Similar petition of Wm. Weston.

July 10. Similar petition of Edward Woodward, Esq., and Elizabeth his wife, daughter and co-heir of Sir Christopher Lewknor.

[July 10.] Petition of divers owners and inhabitants in the great level of the fens (commonly called Bedford Level); they parted with a great portion of their inheritance in consideration of works to be carried out by certain undertakers, which would preserve their other lands from being hurtfully overflowed, but of late years the repairs of these works have been so neglected, during the dispute which has been going on amongst the undertakers, that petitioners fear the whole work will be lost, and their lands again overflowed; they pray that the undertakers may be required to maintain their works, and a final determination be made of all the disputes.

July 10. Articles of high treason and other heinous misdemeanors against Edward Earl of Clarendon, Lord Chancellor of England. Signed by the Earl of Bristol. L. J., XI. 555. In extenso.

July 11. Engrossment of an Act for taking away of Damage Cleer (Damna Clericorum). Brought from the Commons and read 1^a; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 558. (Parchment Collection.)

July 13. Copy of the opinion of all the judges concerning the articles of high treason against the Lord Chancellor, that the charge has not been regularly and legally brought, and even if admitted has no treason in it. L. J., XI. 559. In extenso.

July 13. Message from the King, thanking the House for a copy of the Earl of Bristol's charge against the Earl of Clarendon, and stating that to his own knowledge it contains many untruths. L. J., XI. 559. In extenso.

July 14. Petition of John Trafford; prays that the equity of his claim to certain lands near the Bedford Level may be examined before Lord Culpeper be permitted to enter thereon. See L. J., XI. 560.

July 17. Minutes of proceedings before the Committee on the Bill for settling the draining of the great level of the fens, called Bedford Level, on this and several subsequent days.

Annexed:—

- 1-10. Amendments, provisos, &c.

July 18. Engrossment of an Act to settle the estate of Phillip Viscount Strangford in trustees for sale, and payment of his debts. Brought from the Commons this day, but not further proceeded with. A Bill with the same title passed in a subsequent session. L. J., XI. 564, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Schedule containing a list of debts of Phillip Viscount Strangford to which the Act refers, and for or upon which interest is to be allowed to the creditors therein named respectively,
2. Schedule containing a list of debts for or upon which interest is not to be allowed.

[July 20.] Petition of the Company of Brewers within the city of London and lines of communication; they are specially concerned in a just regulation of the excise, as those from whose trade a greatest part of the revenue arises, and they would be ruined if the laws of excise were made for the advantage of the farmers of the excise, who only seek a profit to themselves out of His Majesty's revenue, and yield none thereto; petitioners have represented their complaints against the present farmers to the House of Commons (4th April 1663. C. J., VIII. 465), and that House has sent up a Bill (L. J., XI. 566) comprising some fitting redress for petitioners; they pray to be heard before any alteration is made in the Bill for the benefit of the farmers of the excise.

July 22. Engrossment of an Act for the restraining pluralities and increase of the maintenance of curates. No license or dispensation shall after the 29th of September next be purchased by or granted to any spiritual person for the holding of two livings having cure of souls, unless the churches lie within ten miles of each other, and the curate of the benefice, whereon the incumbent shall not commonly reside, shall have at least 50*l.* per annum, or one half of the yearly profits of the benefice for his maintenance. All dispensations for non-residence to be void unless the curate shall have the before-mentioned allowance, and all bonds and agreements for any lesser maintenance to be void. Brought from the Commons this day, but not proceeded with. L. J., XI. 567.

July 22. Resolution of the Committee of the whole House upon the Bill concerning sectaries, that the consideration of the preamble shall be suspended until the other parts of the Bill be gone through. L. J., XI. 567.

July 22. Petition of Wm. Witherings, Esqre., plaintiff in a writ of error wherein Mary Roch is defendant; prays for a time for hearing before the adjournment of the House.

July 22. Copy of preceding.

July 24. Protest of the Earl of Anglesey against the Bill for the encouragement of trade. L. J., XI. 571. In extenso.

July 25. Application for an order to stay a suit brought in the Prerogative Court by Edward Cranfield against Lord Morley. L. J., XI. 574.

July 27. Report of the Committee for Privileges respecting the introduction of peers by descent; that they have right to come and sit without any introduction, without fee to any herald, and that they ought not to be introduced with any ceremony even if they desire it. L. J., XI. 575. In extenso. (Three papers.)

1663-4.

Feb. 16. Draft agreement between Sir James Modyford and John Wright, by which Wright agrees to serve Sir James Modyford in Barbadoes according to the custom of the country for a term of five years, and Sir John agrees to pay for Wright's passage and to find and allow him meat, drink, apparel, and lodging, with other necessities during the term, and at the end to give him the value of ten pounds sterling in sugar. This draft agreement is on a printed form filled up in manuscript.

March 8. Writs of summons to Parliament to—

Robert Earl of Cardigan.

Robert Lord Bruce of Wharleton.

March 15. Commission to Sir Orlando Bridgeman, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas to execute the office of Speaker of the House of Lords in the absence of the Lord Chancellor. L. J., XI. 581. (Parchment Collection.)

March 21. Draft of an Act for preventing of abatements of writs of error upon judgments in the Exchequer. Read 1st this day. 16 Car. II. c. 2. L. J., XI. 583, &c.

March 21. Petition of Robert Robartes, son and heir apparent of John Lord Robartes, and Sarah his wife, sole daughter and heir of John Bodvile, Esquire, deceased, and Charles Bodvile Robartes, an infant, second son of the said Robert and Sarah; they complain that after John Bodvile, who was possessed of an estate in the counties of Anglesea and Carnarvon, worth 2,000*l.* per annum, had made a will in favour of his daughter Sarah and her son Charles Bodvile Robartes, Thomas Wynn, and others, having got entire possession of him when weak in body and mind, induced him to make a will in favour of Griffith Wynn (son of Thomas Wynn) and one Thomas Bodvile; petitioners proceeded in Chancery for relief in 1663, when the annexed order was made declaring that the will was obtained by fraud, but that as there was no precedent for giving relief in such a case, and the Court was unwilling to create one, a year's time was given to the petitioners to seek relief elsewhere, an injunction being granted in the interim to stay proceedings at law upon the pretended will; petitioners pray the House to hear the case and grant them relief. L. J., XI. 583.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of decretal order in Chancery of the 21st of Jan. 1663-4.

March 22. Draft resolution that a letter sent to the Speaker of the House of Lords from the Earl of Bristol should be sent to the King unopened. L. J., XI. 584. In extenso.

March 23. Petition of Sir Thomas Dayrell, Kt., Thomas Wyne, Esq., Timothy Pollard, Esq., and Edward Griffith, gent.; they were only served last night with the order to appear in answer to Mr. Robartes' petition. Sir Thos. Dayrell is in a course of physic, and their counsel have not returned from circuit; they pray that they may not be straitened in point of time, and that not only Mr. Robartes' cause against them but also their cause against him may be heard together, as was the case in Chancery. L. J., XI. 585.

March 24. Draft of an Act for recording the matches and descents of the nobility and gentry of England, and for preventing usurpations of their armorial achievements, and irregularities in the hearing of them. Rejected upon the first reading. L. J., XI. 586.

March 28. Draft of an Act for transporting of persons convicted of felony within clergy or for petty larceny beyond the seas; persons convicted of felony who have benefit of clergy may now be burnt in the hand, and detained prisoners for any time not exceeding one year, and any woman convicted of stealing any money or goods above the value of twelvecpence, and under the value of ten shillings, may be branded in the hand and further punished by imprisonment, whipping, or sending to the House of Correction for any time not exceeding one year, but as it has not been found that these punishments prevent persons from committing the like crimes again, the Bill provides that such offenders may at the discretion of the judge or justices, and either with or without such branding and whipping, be delivered to any merchant, planter, or adventurer, or other person (willing to take them) to be transported to Jamaica, Virginia, or any other English plantation beyond the seas, there to serve for not less than five nor more than nine years, and if any planter shall willingly suffer the convict to escape he shall pay one hundred marks, but if any convict shall without leave run away from service or return to England, he or she shall suffer death without benefit of clergy. This Bill was introduced the previous session, but was not reported from Committee, it was revived this session and again dropped. L. J., XI. 587, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Draft proviso.

2. Another draft of the Bill.

3. List of Committee on the Bill. 29 March.

4. Amendments to the Bill.

1664.

March 28. Affidavit of John Evans that Wm. John has been turned out of possession of certain lands at Llangennech, Carmarthenshire, at the suit of James Rice, the vicar, contrary to the privilege of the Earl of Northumberland, under whom the lands were held. L. J., XI. 587.

March 29. Draft of an Act for the keeping, conserving, ordering, governing, and continuing of the river of Wye [Wey], navigable from Guildford, in the county of Surrey, to the river of Thames, and so to London; under a pretended Act of Parliament made in the times of usurpation an agreement was come to amongst the inhabitants of the county of Surrey, through whose grounds a passage was to be cut for navigation for carrying out the work, inasmuch that at the time of the King's restoration the river had been made navigable for barges, boats, and lighters; a great part of the river being cut through the King's own grounds, the locks and bridges being built with materials taken from the King's houses at Oatlands and Richmond, but His Majesty passed this by, wishing to encourage the work, and therefore appointed John Radclyffe conservator of the river; some few persons however for their private ends obstruct the general good, departing from former agreements, and demanding unreasonable satisfaction for their concurrence; the Bill therefore enacts that John Radclyffe, his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall have the conservatorship of the river from Guildford to the Thames for thirty-one years for a yearly rent, and shall keep the river navigable, and not charge above a certain rate for the merchandise passing along it; he is empowered to make a towing-path; millers are forbidden unduly to draw off water, and no person is to make any breach in the banks without consent; compensation is to be made to all Lords of Manors whose land is taken, and to persons who have already expended money on the navigation, and in case of dispute the amount is to be fixed by Commissioners appointed by the Court of Exchequer. Read 1st this day, but negatived on question of commitment. L. J., XI. 588, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John Radclyffe that he may be heard in support of the King's grant to him of his interest in the River Wey.

March 31. Petition of Elizabeth Petre, wife of William Lord Petre; she was arrested about five months ago by James Walker, a bailiff, and others, at the suit of Wm. Joyce, contrary to privilege; prays satisfaction for the indignity. L. J., XI. 590.

April 2. Petition of Wm. Hollinshed, son of Wm. Hollinshed, late of London, merchant, deceased; duplicate of petition presented 26 May 1663. (See above.)

April [5]. Petition of Wm. Joyce, of Covent Garden, chandler; petitioner in ignorance of the privileges of the House attempted to detain Lady Petre for a just debt due to him for several years, but did not; he is heartily sorry for his offence and prays the House before their adjournment to withdraw the order for his restraint, as he has a great charge of wife and children, and is like to be utterly ruined by his present chargeable restraint and neglect of his calling. L. J., XI. 594.

April 5. Petition of several bargemen and owners of barges (navigating upon the river of Wye (Wey), in the county of Surrey); petitioners gained their whole livelihood by carriage of corn, meal, timber, and other goods upon the river, until some obstinate persons, who pretend an interest in some small parcels of land by the side of the river, which were not fully paid for by the first undertakers, have arrested and prosecuted petitioners and stopped their barges; they pray that some speedy order may be made for keeping the navigation uninterrupted. L. J., XI. 594.

April 18. Draft of an Act for the making of the church erected at Falmouth, a parish church and no part of the parish of [St.] Gluvias or chapelry of St. Budock. Read 1st this day; received the royal assent on the 17th of May. L. J., XI. 594, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Draft clause for raising a maintenance for the parson of Falmouth. C. J., VIII. 561.

- 2-3. Draft amendments to the Bill.

April 18. Petition of Wm. Joyce; prays the House to accept his hearty sorrow for his error, and to order his discharge, otherwise he and his will be utterly ruined. L. J., XI. 594.

April 18. Draft of an Act for the sale of the manor of Ingoldesby and diverse lands in Ingoldesby, in the county of Lincoln, for raising portions for the two daughters and co-heirs of Sir William Armyne, the younger, Baronet, deceased. Read 1st this day; received the royal assent on the 17th of May. L. J., XI. 594, &c.

Annexed:—

- 1-3. Amendments, &c.

April 18. Draft of an Act for confirming eight hundred acres of land, parcel of the late forest of Froome Zelwood (Frome Selwood), unto the Earl of Orrery and his heirs; the Earl claims under an agreement made 14th June 1630 between the Crown and Sir John Hippley upon the disafforestation of the forest. L. J., XI. 595. The Bill was passed in the House of Lords, but was thrown out on second reading in the House of Commons. C. J., VIII. 558.

April 18. Report from the Committee for Privileges upon a complaint made by the Clerk of the Parliaments. He lives in a house belonging to the King, to which adjoins a tower in which the records are kept in a room arched above and below with freestone, and protected on one side by the common sewer, which belongs to the house in which he lives, and to those in which the prebendaries of Westminster live; there was antiently a way by the sewer from the street, by which the Dean and Chapter had all their wood, coals, and such like necessities brought into the college, but of late buildings have been erected by which the way is stopped, and a great part of the common sewer has been filled up, and Mr. Aldridge, who lives in the new buildings, is now trying to obtain a grant of the sewer from His Majesty, intending to fill it up with earth and make a garden of it, and in time probably to build more houses on it greatly to the prejudice of the King's house and the houses of the Dean and Chapter "for want of sufficient watercourse which is now cleansed at every spring tide by a flux from the Thames, and also great insecurity and hazard may come to the records by opportunity of ladders and "other engines which now cannot be effected by reason "of the breadth and depth of the ditch of the common "sewer;" antiently also there was between the wall of the Lord Great Chamberlain's garden and the sewer a piece of ground on which to lay the mud and soil flung out when the sewer was cleansed, but this is now separated from the sewer by another wall, so that there is no place to lay the mud. Mr. Aldridge has applied to the Clerk of the Parliaments for his consent in this matter, but he feels it his duty to leave it to the discretion of the Committee; the Committee recommend that some persons be appointed by the House to view the place and report whether the sewer may be enclosed without prejudice to the records. L. J., XI. 598.

April 18. Draft of preceding.

April 19. Petition of Thomas Boughton and Wm. Baker, on behalf of themselves and the inhabitants of the town of Aylesbury, in the county of Buckingham; a Bill has come up from the House of Commons for vacating all deeds and conveyances of certain lands near Aylesbury made by Sir John Packington to petitioners and others upon valuable consideration; the passing of the Bill will be their destruction; they pray to be heard by counsel at the bar. L. J., XI. 596.

April 20. Petition of Wm. Joyce to the Committee for Privileges; he has endeavoured by all means to obtain Lady Petre's forgiveness for his offence in attempting to arrest her, but she requires a very large sum of money to pass it by, more than he is able to pay; he prays that he may be discharged of his imprisonment, and of the vast charge that he now lies at, which is likely to be his ruin.

April 20. Report of the Committee for Privileges, recommending that Wm. Joyce should be discharged, and that Walker, the bailiff, should be taken into custody. L. J., XI. 598. In extenso.

April 20. Draft of an Act against deceitful, disorderly, and excessive gaming. L. J., XI. 597, &c. 16 Car. II. c. 7.

April 22. Complaints of the East India, the Turkey, and Royal Companies, and others of the depredations committed upon their trade by the Dutch. L. J., XI. 599. In extenso.

April 22. Copy of joint resolution of the Lords and Commons, that the wrongs done by the Dutch to the foreign trade of the country should be represented to His Majesty, and that he should be moved to take some speedy course for redress. L. J., XI. 600. In extenso.

May 4. Petition of James Walker; he acknowledges that in ignorance he served a warrant received from Wm. Joyce upon Lady Petre, but he left her as soon as he knew she was Lord Petre's wife; he prays for pardon, and that he may be shortly heard and discharged. L. J., XI. 607.

May 4. List of persons concerned in arresting Francis Burhill, a servant of the Duke of Buckingham, contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 607.

May 5. Engrossment of an Act for taking away of damage cleer (damna clericorum). Brought from the Commons, but not read. L. J., XI. 607, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

May 6. Engrossment of an additional Act to explain and supply a former Act for settling the draining of the great level of the fens called Bedford Level. Brought from the Commons this day, read 1st; no further proceeding. (Parchment Collection.)

[May 7.] Statement of the value of the lands in Sir William Keyte's Bill. L. J., XI. 609.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.

May 7. Petition of Sir Thos. Dayrell, Kt., and Thomas Wynne, Esq.; pray that if the House thinks not fit to order a trial of the validity of Mr. Bodvile's will at law, without which no will of a sane person was ever laid aside, the proofs may be heard vir à voce.

May 9. Petition of Edward Earl of Manchester, Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's household. Petitioner, being cited to attend on the 6th of February 1663-4 in a cause depending in the Court of Delegates between himself and others, executors of Robert Earl of Warwick, deceased, and the Duchess of Somerset, did not appear, but by his letter claimed his privilege, and the judges upon receipt thereof forbore any further prosecution; petitioner thereupon dismissed some of his witnesses, but upon the 17th of February the judges appointed a meeting at Serjeant's Inn without any formal, legal, or accustomed notice being given to petitioner, who finding himself under a great surprise, and not daring to quit his privilege without direction from the House, again by letter claimed his privilege which was denied, and the judges proceeded to a final sentence in the cause. Petitioner prays that he may not suffer in his cause by his care and tenderness in preserving the privileges of Parliament. L. J., XI. 611.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of an order in the cause. 4 Dec. 1662.

May 9. Order referring preceding petition to the Committee for Privileges, and for notice thereof to be given to the Duchess of Somerset. L. J., XI. 611.

May 9. Petition of Sir John Ayton, Knight, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, John Browne, Esq., Clerk of the Parliaments, and Humphrey Leigh, Serjeant-at-arms attending the House. Edward Lloyd, John Cade, and John Wright were, in July 1663, sentenced by the House to be imprisoned in the Fleet during His Majesty's pleasure for publishing a false and infamous libel against Lord Gerard, of Brandon; His Majesty, at the request of Lord Gerard, in August 1663 granted a warrant for their release; whereupon petitioner demanded the ordinary and accustomed fees, but, instead of satisfaction, had the return of an absolute denial, accompanied with high and threatening language. Petitioners pray their Lordships to give such directions and speedy relief herein as may stand with their wisdom and justice. L. J., XI. 611.

Annexed:—

1. Information of Moses Perkins, messenger to the House, that the persons mentioned in the petition stated that they would pay nothing, and that Lloyd added that he would rather spend five hundred pounds in prison than pay a farthing, and if the officers expected fees, he would show them Magna Charta.

2. Copy of the King's warrant of 26th August 1663 for the release of Edward Lloyd.

May 10. Petition of Lawrence Squibb. The late Lord Cottington, before settling his estate by deed upon Francis Cottington, made a lease of part thereof to petitioner and Mr. Rashley, in trust for payment of such of his debts as could then be remembered, which were mentioned in a schedule annexed to the lease, but his Lordship being at Marlborough preparing for his exile his creditors had no opportunity to remind him of what was owing to them; his Lordship declared that neither his losses nor the hardships he was like to suffer in his banishment troubled him so much as going away indebted to so many poor people, and he charged petitioner to use his utmost endeavour to see all his just debts satisfied, and with intent to enable himself, if he should return, the better to make satisfaction of his debts then not remembered, and of such others as should afterwards be contracted, he inserted in the deed of settlement a proviso and power of revocation. Several debts appear to have been omitted in the schedule, and others were since contracted, but Mr. Cottington having gotten possession of all his Lordship's lands has paid little of the scheduled debts and nothing at all of any others, pretending most unjustly that petitioner and Edward Manning ought to pay them. Petitioner reflecting on the strict charge laid on him by his much honoured master, and the great dishonour to his name by not paying a few small debts, and considering that his Lordship died in exile, and had not the deed to peruse or counsel to advise him for the revoking thereof, as no doubt he would have done had he not been so prevented and impeded, prays their Lordships to take into their consideration the condition of the creditors who by law have no remedy, and also his Lordship's intentions to satisfy all persons, and to stay the passing of the Bill now endeavoured to be obtained by Mr. Cottington to enable him to make a jointure, unless he will engage to satisfy the just debts not exceeding 1,000*l*. At the end of the petition is a list of Lord Cottington's debts. L. J., XI. 612.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of a proviso to the Bill for the protection of the creditors.
2. Statement of the sum due for wages to George Palmer, servant to the late Lord Cottington.
3. Letter from Edward Fyfe and others to Lawrence Squibb, entreating him to take steps to procure the moneys owing to them by the late Lord Cottington, the writers being but poor men and unable to spend money in law.
4. Petition of John Beamont. Petitioner at the earnest entreaty of Francis late Lord Cottington, when he was banished from the kingdom, and his estate was seized by the late usurped powers, lent him 250*l*., besides expending other moneys in following his affairs. Francis Cottington refuses to make petitioner any satisfaction, alleging that his debt is not in the schedule, whereas the money was lent after the schedule was made. Petitioner prays that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Bill.

5. Proposed proviso.

May 10. Engrossment of an Act to enable trustees for the Lord Strangford to sell lands for payment of debts. Brought from the Commons and read 1^a, but not further proceeded with. A bill with a similar title passed in the following session. L. J., XI. 612, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

May 10. Engrossment of an Act to limit pluralities of livings, and for increase of maintenance of curates. Similar to Bill, with same title, brought from the Commons 22 July 1663 (see above), except that in the present Bill an incumbent may hold two livings within twenty miles of one another instead of ten. Brought from the Commons and read 1^a, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 612.

May 10. Engrossment of an Act for naturalizing Dame Katharine Sayer and others. Brought from the Commons this day, and received the royal assent on the 17th instant. L. J., XI. 612. (Parchment Collection.)

May 10. Another engrossment of the same Act. (Parchment Collection.)

May 12. Engrossment of an Act to take away Damage Cleer [Damna Clericorum] in the County Palatine of Lancaster. Brought from the Commons, read 1^a, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 613. (Parchment Collection.)

May 12. Inventory of goods belonging to Lord Byron, seized by the Sheriff of Nottingham contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 615.

May 12. Petition of Charles Duke of Richmond and Lennox. After long contests touching the title to Sutton Marsh, in the county of Lincoln, the King was settled in possession thereof, in the year 1638, by judgments at law, and granted the same to James late Duke of Richmond and Lennox, from whom it has come to petitioner. Lady Dacres, pretending a title to some part thereof, has obtained an order for a trial to be had in the Court of Exchequer on the 18th of this instant May. Petitioner relying upon a treaty lately propounded and accepted on both sides for avoiding of suits, which was almost concluded, but was upon Monday last broken off by Lady Dacres, is not prepared for the trial as his witnesses live a hundred miles away and are some of the oldest men in the county, and cannot possibly be brought to London in time. He therefore prays the benefit of his privilege to the end he may not be surprised in the trial. L. J., XI. 615.

May 12. Writ of summons to Parliament to—

Nicholas Earl of Thanet.

May 13. Draft amendments, provisos, &c., to the Bill for preventing and suppressing religious conventicles, 16 Car. II. c. 4. (Twenty-one papers.) L. J., XI. 616.

May 17. The King's speech at the prorogation of Parliament. In the King's handwriting. L. J., XI. 621. In extenso.

May 26. Engrossed copy of the Act for naturalizing Charlotte Hessen Killigrew and others, certified by John Browne, Clerk of the Parliaments. The Bill, which was read 3^a on the 21st of May, received the royal assent on 3 June 1664. L. J., XI. 534. (Parchment Collection.)

Annexed:—

1. Writ addressed to John Brown to certify into Chancery the passing of the Act.

Aug. 20. Commission for proroguing Parliament to the 24th of November next. L. J., XI. 622. In extenso. (Parchment Collection.)

Aug. 20. Copy of preceding.

Nov. 23. Commission to Sir Orlando Bridgeman, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, to execute the office of Speaker of the House of Lords in the absence of the Lord Chancellor. L. J., XI. 624. (Parchment Collection.)

Nov. 24. A brief narrative of the late passages between His Majesty and the Dutch, and His Majesty's preparations thereupon. Signed by the King. L. J., XI. 625. In extenso.

Nov. 24. Resolution of the House of Commons that thanks be returned to His Majesty for his gracious speech and narrative concerning Dutch affairs. C. J., VII. 547. In extenso.

Nov. 25. Draft of an Act for enabling grants of tithes, and creating tithes where none are payable, to be made to the parsons and vicars of the churches within the precincts whereof the lands do lie. The Bill enacts that all persons seized in fee simple or fee tail, or for lives, or possessed for any term of years in the impro-private tithes, or of any modus decimandi, shall have power by fine, common recovery, writing indented, will, or other solemn assurance in law, to grant the same to the lawful incumbent of the church where the lands lie, out of which the tithes issue. All persons shall have power to create tithes payable out of their lands, though the same are now free by the laws of the realm, and the lands shall afterwards be liable to the payment of the same as if they had been always subject thereto. Parsons to whom such grants are made shall enjoy the same, notwithstanding the statutes of mortmain, and shall have the like remedies for recovery as other parsons have. When any interest or estate in such tithes shall be granted to any parson and his successors, the same shall at his death go to his successor and not to his executors, administrators, and assigns. The Bill was read 1st this day, but was not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 628.

Annexed :—

1. Abstract of the Bill.

Nov. 28. Petition of Robert Robartes, Esqre. (son and heir apparent of John Lord Robartes) and Sarah his wife, sole daughter and heir of John Bodvile, Esq., deceased, and Charles Bodvile Robartes, an infant, second son of the said Robert and Sarah; pray the House to proceed in the consideration of their cause against Thos. Wynne and others, and to give directions to the Lord Chancellor according to the several orders made in May last. L. J., XI. 630.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of petition of same of 21 March 1663-4. (See above.)
2. Precedents and reasons for relief.
3. Answers to Wynne's exceptions to the order in Chancery.
4. Copy of order for the hearing of the cause. 30 April 1664.
5. Copy of order for further hearing. 3 May 1664.
6. Copy of similar order. 5 May 1664.
7. Copy of similar order. 7 May 1664.

Nov. 28. Petition of Joseph Hubbard, of the parish of St. Peter's, in Ipswich, now a prisoner under the Black Rod. Petitioner is heartily sorry for not giving due respect to their Lordships' order of the 10th of May last, and for any words spoken by him in derogation of the House. He prays that he may be discharged. L. J., XI. 630.

Nov. —. Statement of the cause between Thomas Crosse and Thomas Price respecting the recovery of a debt. Noted. Never moved in the House.

Dec. 1. Affidavit of Job Williams respecting an action between Robert Pawley and John Philipps, wherein the title of the Earl of Clare is concerned. L. J., XI. 631.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of preceding.

Dec. 5. Petition of Robert Waite, an attorney of His Majesty's Court of Common Pleas. Petitioner, as attorney for Robert Pawley, having obtained a verdict in a suit against John Philipps for three messuages in Drury Lane, wherein the title of the Earl of Clare is alleged to be concerned, has been summoned to appear before their Lordships to show cause why the verdict obtained within the time of privilege of Parliament should not be suppressed. Petitioner confidently believes that the Earl of Clare has no title whatever in the ground and houses in question, nevertheless if the Earl will own the property to be his, petitioner and his client will be ready to lay aside the verdict and all proceedings upon it, and submit to any order of the House. L. J., XI. 632.

Dec. 5. Affidavit of Thomas Fairfax and William Fairfax respecting proceedings taken by John Millington, junior, against Lord Langdale contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 633.

Dec. 6. Report of the Committee for Privileges concerning absent Lords. L. J., XI. 633.

Dec. 6. Petition and appeal of Francis Downes and Edmond Spring. Petitioners are heirs-at-law of Robert Hogan, who by the practices of Anne his mother during his minority was drawn into such conveyances and assurances that petitioners and their ancestors had a certain relief in Chancery, if ever the merits of the cause could have been heard. These misdemeanours were heretofore examined and punished in the Star Chamber, but the conveyances not being set aside, petitioners exhibited their Bill in Chancery, at which time the said Anne, the mother, having married Sir Julius Caesar, and the Lord Chancellor Bacon, her uncle, having got part of the lands, the Bill was most unjustly dismissed with costs, which dismission being signed and enrolled has been a just ground of dismission of all subsequent Bills. Petitioners having applied themselves to His Majesty, the whole matter was examined by the Master of the Rolls and the Attorney-General, whose report is annexed. Henry Hungate, who now enjoys the lands, holds them not as a purchaser but as heir to Anne, mother of the first wrong-doer. Petitioners pray that Hungate may be ordered to answer their Bill in Chancery in chief, and not plead any former dismission, and petitioners will give security for payment of full costs, if the matter be adjudged against them. L. J., XI. 633.

Annexed :—

1. Copy of the report to His Majesty referred to in preceding.

Dec. 9. Draft of an Act to enable trustees for the Lord Strangford to sell lands for payment of debts. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 2 March 1664-5. L. J., XI. 635, &c.

Annexed :—

1-7. Draft amendments and provisoes.

Dec. 9. Draft of an Act to enable Henry Lord Loughborough to make the river and sewer navigable from or near Bristow Causey, in the county of Surrey, into the river of Thames. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 2 March 1664-5. L. J., XI. 635, &c.

Annexed :—

1-2. Amendments to preceding.

Dec. 9. Draft of an Act to enable the King's Majesty to make leases, grants, and copies of offices, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, parcel of His Highness' Duchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the same, and for confirmation of grants or leases already made. The Bill was read 1st and 2nd, and committed, and the Committee was appointed to meet, but no further proceeding is mentioned. A Bill with the same title passed in a subsequent session. L. J., XI. 635, &c.

Annexed :—

1. The case of the Duchy of Cornwall. Endorsed, Brought in by Mr. Attorney, 3 Feb. 1664-5. Edward the Third, by charter passed in Parliament, gave and settled the Duchy of Cornwall to and upon his eldest son Edward the Black Prince, to have and to hold to him and to the firstborn sons of him and of his heirs Kings of England heirs apparent to the Crown: which manner of limitation of an inheritance, though excellently and wisely designed, yet varying from the rules of inheritance and course of descents at common law, has not been valid but by the authority of Parliament. Since which, alterations, by disunion and union of parts and members to and from the Duchy, have been made by the authority of Parliament. The King until the birth of a son is seized of the Duchy in a special manner of interest and to a special purpose, for his seisin preserves the emergent and contingent descent of the inheritance, so that, it is conceived, leases made by the King will not bind his first son, who comes in paramount the seisin of the King, viz., by descent according to the first gift. In like manner it has been doubted whether leases made by the Duke of Cornwall should bind successors; therefore by an Act 21 Jac. all leases then made by the then Prince Charles bound his successors for thirty-one years or three lives under certain qualifications therein mentioned. The Prince coming afterwards to the Crown had another Act to enable him for the space of three years to make leases for twenty-one years or three lives. His Majesty, that now is, in the thirteenth year of his reign, was by an Act in like manner enabled to make leases for three years, which is now expired, and a further Act is prepared for giving His Majesty power to make leases within three years for three lives or twenty-one years.

2. Amendment to the Bill. Noted. Mr. Attorney's draft. This to be put in instead of the first enacting clause in the Bill.

3. Proviso confirming the leases granted by His Majesty by letters patent of certain lands, &c., parcel of the Duchy of Cornwall, to John Viscount Mordaunt and Elizabeth his wife, and Robert Phelips.

4. Copy of preceding.

Dec. 9. Draft of an Act for the enabling of Thomas Jukes, of Treliddan [Trelydan], in the county of Montgomery, Esq., to sell lands for the payment of his debts and raising of younger children's portions. Read 1st this day, and received the royal assent 2 March 1664-5. L. J., XI. 635, &c.

Dec. 9. Petition of Thomas Juckes. Prays that his Bill may be passed.

Dec. 12. Draft of an Act for draining of the fen called Deeping Fen and other fens therein mentioned, in execution and pursuance of Lovell's law. Read 1^a this day. 16 & 17 Car. II. cap. 11. Folio edition of the Statutes. L. J., XI. 636, &c.

Annexed:—

1-12. Draft amendments and provisos to the Bill.

Dec. 13. Draft of an Act for the settlement of the estate of Samuel Sandys, Esq. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 9 Feb. 1664-5. L. J., XI. 636, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.

Dec. 13. Petition of Samuel Sandys, the younger, Esq. Prays that preceding Bill may be passed.

Dec. 13. Petition of Richard Lord Clifford. Petitioner took a lease of the Earl of Essex of Kent House, in Whitefriars, for seven years, whereof four and a half are now unexpired, during which time until now he was possessed of a coach way down Bolt and Tun Yard as the owners of the house have been for forty years before, nevertheless during the session of Parliament John Carlisle, Francis Carlisle, and Margaret Child have maliciously and contemptuously made a gate and nailed it up across the said way, whereby petitioner is forcibly kept from access to his house. He prays that according to the privilege belonging to a member of this House, the way may be restored to him, and that the parties complained against may receive condign punishment.

Dec. 13. Petition of William Hollinshed, son of William Hollinshed, late of London, merchant, deceased. Petitioner prays their Lordships to set aside a deed executed by his late father, whereby, through the ignorance, fraud, or malice of John Macro, the scrivener who drew the deed, the intentions of petitioner's father are not carried out, and petitioner is in danger of being stripped of his just right and inheritance.

Dec. 16. Draft of an Act for making navigable or otherwise passable for barges and other vessels the rivers of Itchin, Mole, and other rivers, and from Winchester, Bishops Waltham, Rygate [Reigate], and other places, some falling into the sea by or near Southampton or elsewhere, others into the Thames and so to London. Read 1^a this day. L. J., XI. 638. The Bill was amended during its passage through Parliament, and received the royal assent on the 2nd of March 1664-5 under its amended title of "An Act for making divers rivers "navigable or otherwise passable for boats, barges, and "other vessels."

Jan. 17. Petition of John Levet, Doctor of Laws, and Mary his wife. Duplicate of petition presented 27 Jan. 1661-2. See above.

Jan. 19. Draft of an Act for making the river of Medway navigable in the counties of Kent and Sussex. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 2 Mar. 1664-5. L. J., XI. 644, &c.

Jan. 19. List of witnesses and abstract of evidence to be given respecting the complaint of Lord Lucas against Giles Earle. L. J., XI. 644.

Jan. 20. Draft of an Act to supply the defects of such statutes as have been heretofore made touching the approving and enclosing of wastes. The Bill enacts that where any lords of any wastes desire to improve or enclose the same they shall present a petition for a commission to the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, or to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, who shall thereupon issue a commission under the Great Seal to six or more Commissioners, each of whom must have 40l. per annum at least in fee or for life in the county where the wastes are, or be barristers, authorising them to view the wastes and examine by witnesses or otherwise the nature of the same and the rights of all such as claim anything therein; to make rules for enclosing, to determine differences in the title, and to make distribution between lords and tenants and such as have right to common. It further gives power of appeal to the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Keeper, or the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to such as are aggrieved by the orders of the Commissioners. The Bill was read 1^a this day, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 645.

Annexed:—

1. Breviat of the Bill.

Jan. 24. Petition of George Blanshard, an attorney, in the Court of Common Pleas. Petitioner, who is detained in the custody of the Sergeant-at-arms for prosecuting Lord Langdale to an exigent contrary to privilege, was employed by John Millington to prosecute suits against his Lordship and others, and being ignorant of his privilege gave orders to the philazer Clerk of London to prosecute the suits. Petitioner shortly after received a letter from the clerk to say he could not take forth an exigent against Lord Langdale, and proclamations were only sent down against the others, but by inadvertency his Lordship's name was left in the exigent. Petitioner prays their Lordships to forgive his error and order his discharge. L. J., XI. 646.

Jan. 24. Petition of Anne Angel, widow. Petitioner prays for relief against the representatives of Richard Wigglesworth, deceased, executor of her late husband.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of her case.

Jan. 24. Petition of John Apsley, formerly of Gray's Inn, Colonel of Horse in His late Majesty's army. Prays for relief against William Satherthwaite, by whose procurement he has been deprived of his estate, which, having been mortgaged in the year 1640, was forfeited during his service in his late Majesty's army, which continued from the very first until the last.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same respecting the same matter.

Jan. 24. Petition of Edmond Veal and Isabel his wife. Pray that a committee may be ordered to examine into the validity of the will of the late Catharine Ashton, widow, sister of petitioner Isabel, or that the matter may be referred to Sir Orlando Bridgeman.

Jan. 28. Draft of an Act for confirming a deed of settlement between the Earl of Thanet and his younger brothers. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 2 Mar. 1664-5. L. J., XI. 648, &c.

Annexed:—

1-3. Draft amendments and provisos.

Jan. 28. Draft of an Act for confirmation of a contract made by the King's Majesty with the Corporation of Pinmakers of the City of London, comprehending all the pinmakers in England and Wales. The Bill was read 1^a this day, read 2^a and committed, but was not reported. L. J., XI. 649, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Commonalty of the art or mystery of pinmakers of the city of London, comprehending all the pinmakers in England and Wales. Petitioners are but one corporation throughout the realm, and consist of a great number of indigent persons, who for want of stock have hitherto been compelled to buy their wire in small parcels, from hand to mouth, of the second or third buyer, and not being able to give time with their commodity, have been forced, as soon as it was made, to prostitute the same from door to door by the hands of their wives and children to buy them bread, whereby, and by reason of the clandestine importation of foreign pins, the commodity has been beaten down so low that the workmen have not been able to live by their work, and a considerable English manufacture, which has heretofore set on work thousands of His Majesty's subjects, and created a trade in foreign parts, is in danger to be lost to the Dutch and other nations. For remedy whereof His Majesty has been graciously pleased by his indenture under the Great Seal to contract with petitioners for a certain term of years, touching the raising of a stock wherewith to take the commodity from their hands for ready money, and to furnish them with wire from time to time at a certain rate.

1664-5.

Petitioners pray that a Bill may be passed for the confirmation of the contract.

2. Petition of the haberdashers and ironmongers, on behalf of themselves and several other trades in the city of London and elsewhere. Petitioners, who have been heard once before the Committee on the Pinmakers' Bill, understand that the Committee is about to make a report to the House without hearing them further. They pray to be further heard against the Bill at the bar of the House. Noted not read in the House because the Bill was not reported. Feb. 1664-5.

Jan. 28. Draft of an Act to enable the Bishop of Winton to convey one hundred acres of land lying in the great disparked park of Bishops Waltham, in the parish of Bishops Waltham, in the county of Southampton, upon the rector of the said parish church of Bishops Waltham and his successors in lieu of all tithes and payments for tithes due to the said rector and his successors for Waltham Parks. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 2 Mar. 1664-5. L. J., XI. 648.

Annexed:

1. Amendments to the Bill.

Jan. 28. Petition of Robert Rednall, clerk. Complains that Robert Rednall, of Ipswich, knowing petitioner to be one of the domestic chaplains to the Earl of St. Albans, prosecuted a writ of execution against him for a small debt, which had before that been tendered, and arrested him, notwithstanding he showed John Margretts, the bailiff, a grant under the hand and seal of the Earl of St. Albans, constituting petitioner one of his Lordship's chaplains. Margretts threatened to send petitioner to the common gaol, if it cost him his whole estate, unless he gave him and the under-bailiffs a release of the arrest, which he was forced to do, and Margretts then refused to return him his grant, in contempt of the laws of the kingdom and the privileges of the House. Petitioner prays that the offenders may be ordered to appear and answer the contempt and breach of privilege. L. J., XI. 648.

Jan. 31. Commission to Lord Roberts, Lord Privy Seal, to execute the office of Speaker of the House of Lords in the absence of the Lord Chancellor. L. J., XI. 649. In ceteris. (Parchment Collection.)

Jan. 31. Petition of John Millington, of Holme, Yorkshire. Petitioner was ordered by their Lordships to attend to give a reason for his proceedings at law against Lord Langdale. He is heartily sorry to have given cause of displeasure to their Lordships, and prays to be discharged from further attendance. L. J., XI. 649.

Feb. 3. Draft of an Act for confirmation of the disafforestation of the Forest of Roch alias Neroch, in the county of Somerset (disafforested by his late Majesty Charles the First), and for the more sure settling of the lands thereof, formerly liable to the forest laws, to the respective owners, purchasers, and commoners, agreeable to his said Majesty's agreements and covenants with them in that behalf. Read 1^a this day. L. J., XI. 650. On the 13th of February the Earl of Denbigh put in a claim on behalf of himself and others, the co-heirs of Edward late Earl of Bath, to the forest, and the House ordered that the Bill should not be proceeded with until the counsel of the co-heirs had been heard. No further proceeding is mentioned. L. J., XI. 657.

Feb. 3. Petition of Sir Robert Carr and Anne Hume, spinster. Petitioners pray for the reversal of a decree in Chancery of the 24th of January 1650-1, whereby the proceedings brought against Fabian Philipps by John Forreth for the recovery of the profits of the office of philazer in the Court of Common Pleas were stayed; petitioners allege that Philipps held the office in trust only, and contrary to his agreement refused to resign it when called upon. Forreth is dead, and the interest in the office has now come to petitioners. L. J., XI. 650.

Feb. 3. Answer of Fabian Philipps, philazer of the city of London, counties of Middlesex, Cambridge, and Huntingdon, in the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, to the petition of Sir Robert Carr and Anne Hume. Details at great length the various proceedings in the cause which has been in litigation for many years, he submits that it is a matter which ought to be dealt with in the ordinary course of the law, and prays that the petition may be dismissed or referred, with the answer, to the judges of the common law to certify their opinions thereon. L. J., XI. 651.

Feb. 9. Draft of an Act for confirming of an Act intituled an Act to enable Joseph Micklethwaite, an infant, and his trustees to sell land for payment of his father's debts. Read 1^a this day, and received the royal assent 2 Mar. 1664-5. L. J., XI. 653, &c.

Feb. 9. Affidavit of James Swann of scandalous words spoken by Thomas Chadwell against the Bishop of Chichester. L. J., XI. 654.

Feb. 9. Petition of Robert Earl of Cardigan. Complains that Edward Bond, Edward Letts, and William Worth, his menial servants, have been arrested by John Palmer, a bailiff of the Sheriff of Leicester, at the suit of John Baker contrary to privilege. He prays that Palmer and Baker may be sent for to answer their contempt. L. J., XI. 655.

Feb. 11. Order for the High Sheriff of the county of Carmarthen to cause speedy restitution to be made of the corn belonging to Lord Vaughan, forcibly carried away by Rowland Gwynne and others. L. J., XI. 655. On the same paper is a certificate of the High Sheriff of the proceedings taken by him for the recovery of the corn.

Annexed:—

1. Application for preceding order, and for an order for the arrest of the rioters.
2. List of the rioters.

Feb. 11. Engrossment of an Act for taking away damage cleer (Damna clericorum). The Journal does not mention when this Bill was brought from the House of Commons, it was not read a 3^d time in the House of Lords, but a Bill with the same title passed the following year. L. J., XI. 656, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 13. Transcript of record, &c. in the writ of error, Lenthall v. Skynner. L. J., XI. 658. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 13. Petition of Thomas Chadwell. Petitioner, who is in custody for speaking opprobrious words against the Bishop of Chichester, is heartily sorry for his offence, and prays for his discharge. L. J., XI. 656.

Feb. 16. Duplicate of preceding petition presented this day, when at the special instance of the Bishop of Chichester petitioner was ordered to be discharged. L. J., XI. 658.

Feb. 16. Engrossment of an Act for sale of certain lands in the county of Lincoln for payment of the debts of Christopher Beresford, Esqre., deceased. Brought from the Commons and read 1^a; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 658. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 17. Engrossment of an Act for limiting costs in trivial and vexatious actions. Brought from the Commons and read 1^a this day, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 659. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 17. Engrossment of an Act for restoring the right heirs of Michael Molins, Esqre., deceased, unto the equity of redemption of a mortgage of lands in Berks made to Sir Nathaniel Brent, deceased. Brought from the Commons this day, read 1^a, and rejected on the 20th. L. J., XI. 659, 661. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 17. Engrossment of an Act for the making navigable the rivers and watercourses in the county of Cornwall into the sea. Brought from the Commons this day, but not proceeded with. L. J., XI. 659. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 17. Draft of an Act for confirming a contract between Sir Lancelot Lake, Knight, and Renée Sabran, an infant. Read 1^a this day. No further proceeding. L. J., XI. 659.

Feb. 17. Draft of an Act for the settling and improving a certain waste or moor called Wildmore, in the county of Lincoln. Read 1^a this day. The Bill was committed, but not further proceeded with. L. J., XI. 659.

Annexed:—

- 1-3. Amendments and provisoes.

Feb. 17. Engrossment of an Act for satisfaction of a just debt due by Henry Nevill, Esqre., to Colonel Richard Kirby. The Bill, which was brought from the Commons this day, was negatived on the question of commitment. L. J., XI. 659, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 18. Names of persons to be attached for arresting John Goldsmith, servant to Lord Cornwallis, contrary to privilege. L. J., XI. 660.

Feb. 18. Petition of Dame Mary Carr, wife of Sir Robert Carr, Baronet, on behalf of herself and her husband; petitioner's son is without their consent endeavouring to pass a Bill through Parliament, whereby his father's estate stands settled on trustees, leaving petitioners merely pensioners, contrary to all laws divine, natural, common, and national. Petitioners pray that before the Bill be committed by their Lordships they may be heard. L. J., XI. 660.

Feb. 21. Petition of Giles Earle. Petitioner, who is ordered into the custody of the Serjeant-at-arms to answer the complaint of Lord Lucas, is deeply sensible of their Lordships' displeasure, and very ready to make restitution and satisfaction to Lord Lucas; he is nearly eighty years of age, and is not in a condition to travel from Bristol, his usual place of abode, without great danger of his life. He prays their Lordships to remit his personal attendance, and suspend the Serjeant's authority of restraining his liberty. L. J., XI. 662.

Feb. 22. Draft of an Act for repealing a part of an Act of Parliament intituled an Act directing the prosecution of such as are accountable for prize goods. Read 1^a this day. L. J., XI. 663. 16 & 17 Car. II. cap. 6.

Feb. 22. Draft of an Act for enabling the Earl of Mulgrave and Sir Hugh Cholmley to make leases to the King. Read 1^a this day. The Bill was dropped in the House of Commons. L. J., XI. 663.

Feb. [22]. Petition of the Mayor and Commonalty of the borough of Plymouth. In the Bill from the House of Commons for settling salt marshes gained from or deserted by the sea, there is a proviso exempting petitioners from the benefit of the Bill, and precluding them from their just defence at law when their title to any buildings on such lands shall be questioned. Petitioners pray that the proviso may be laid aside, or that they may be heard against it before the committee on the Bill. Noted, not read because the Bill was laid by. The Bill was rejected by the Lords on the 22nd Feb. 1664-5. L. J., XI. 663.

Feb. 22. List of the Committee on the Bill for settling the estate of Sir Robert Carr. L. J., XI. 663.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order of the Committee for the Attorney-General to be attended with the rental of Sir Robert Carr's lands, &c. 23 Feb. 1664-5.

2-8. Amendments, provisos, &c.

Feb. 22. Statement respecting the arrest of John Loanes, a servant of the Earl of Suffolk. L. J., XI. 664.

Feb. 23. Engrossment of an Act to secure the improvement of Sutton Marsh, in the county of Lincoln. Charles I. granted to James late Duke of Richmond and Lenox, and his heirs, the marsh lands called Sutton Marsh, with the shores, coasts, and sands thereunto the reflux or ebbing of the sea, at a yearly rent of 300*l.*, but some doubt has arisen as to the validity of the grant with respect to so much of the shores as is not yet embanked; the Bill confirms the grant of the shores, &c. to low water mark. Brought from the Commons, read 1^a, 2^a, and committed, but no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 664. &c. (Parchment Collection)

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Robert Oldsworth, Esq., and the children of Wm. Wise, Esq., deceased. Petitioners have a just title to Sutton Marsh by patent from the late King, under which 30,000*l.* have been laid out in innuing the land, which is let at eight shillings the acre; nine years after the late Duke of Lenox obtained another patent, which is void in law, and without any right of title the now Duke has procured an Act to pass the House of Commons whereby petitioner's estate, without any trial or examination, will be taken from them; they pray that the annexed proviso may be inserted in the Bill. L. J., XI. 665.

2. Proposed proviso saving petitioners' rights.

3-4. Duplicate of petition and proviso.

5. Proviso saving the interest of Henry Somerset, Lord Herbert.

Feb. 23. Engrossment of an Act for regulating some proceedings in Courts of Equity. Brought from the Commons, but rejected on first reading. L. J., XI. 664, 665. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 23. Engrossment of an Act for the true and well making of brick and tile; contains very minute directions as to the making of bricks and tiles, fixes the respective sizes, the penalties for non-compliance with the Act, and the provisions for putting the Act into execution. Brought from the Commons; read 1^a, 2^a, and committed. No further proceeding. L. J., XI. 664, 669. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 23. Petition of Sir Charles Stanley, Knight of the Bath, to the King. His Majesty has been pleased to pardon petitioner all offences, forfeitures, and attainders touching the death of George Symonds, who was unfortunately slain in petitioner's company. Though petitioner is pardoned by letters patent he cannot be restored in blood except by an Act of Parliament; he therefore prays His Majesty to permit him to present a Bill for the purpose. The petition is noted with His Majesty's permission for a Bill to be tendered to Parliament. See L. J., XI. 661, &c.

Feb. 24. Engrossment of an Act for the relief of poor prisoners. Many persons are detained in prison, and are so miserably impoverished, either by reason of the late unhappy times, their own misfortunes, or otherwise, that they are totally unable to satisfy their creditors, and so become without advantage to any a charge and burthen to the kingdom, and by noisomeness inseparably incident to extreme poverty become the occasion of pestilential and contagious diseases. The Bill provides that such persons upon proof that they are not worth 5*l.* in possession or reversion shall be discharged, and also that persons imprisoned for any offence pardoned by the Act of Indemnity, shall after due inquiry be discharged. Brought from the Commons, read 1^a, and afterwards considered, but not proceeded with. L. J., XI. 665, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 24. Engrossment of an Act for uniting churches in cities and towns corporate. Brought from the Commons, and read 1^a; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 665, 673. (Parchment Collection.)

Feb. 24. Petition of Sir Thomas Nevill, Baronet. Petitioner, who stands surety for his father and brother, Henry and William Nevill, in the sum of 18,000*l.* for their proper debts, about sixteen years since, having only an estate in land in the county of York, parted with the same to enable his father and brother to sell other lands in Essex, upon security given to petitioner by bond to settle upon him lands of a like value, or to pay him 5,000*l.* in lieu thereof. Such purchase or payment never having been made, and petitioner knowing of no other means to secure his money or be discharged of his sureties, consented to an Act lately passed to enable his father and brother to sell lands entailed in remainder upon him, after which, by appointment duly made and decreed in Chancery, part of the lands were conveyed to persons in trust for him, but now Colonel Kirby has procured a Bill to pass the House of Commons to frustrate the former Act, the decree in Chancery, and the conveyance, to pay a debt owing to himself. Petitioner prays that Colonel Kirby may be left to the law of the land for recovery of his debts without seeking such extraordinary means as an Act of Parliament. The Bill referred to was thrown out by the Lords upon this petition. L. J., XI. 665.

Feb. 27. Message from the Commons desiring the Lords to give despatch to certain public Bills. L. J., XI. 668.

Feb. 28. Petition of Henry Shuckford and others. Petitioners acknowledge their great error in arresting and prosecuting John Golsmith, servant to Lord Cornwallis, for which offence they now remain in the custody of the Serjeant-at-arms. As they have submitted themselves to Lord Cornwallis they pray their Lordships to accept their hearty contrition, and to order their discharge. L. J., XI. 669.

Feb. 28. Petition of the six Under Marshals attending at the door of the Upper House of Parliament. Petitioners, in consideration of their attendance during all the time of their Lordships' first session, have received amongst them, by virtue of the order of the 14th of April 1662, the sum of 40*l.*, for which they return their humble thanks. Since that time they have daily given their attendance for two whole sessions without any consideration. They pray their Lordships to grant an order for the like allowance of 40*l.* for each of these sessions. L. J., XI. 670.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Another petition of same. Pray that an order may be granted to the Lord Treasurer for an allowance to be made to petitioners. (Undated.)

Feb. 28. Petition of Robert Gilbert, Thomas Starkey, and John Reeve. Petitioners are in the custody of the Serjeant-at-arms for arresting Sir Hugh Middleton, servant to the Duke of York, contrary to privilege. They pray for their discharge as they did not know at the time of Middleton's arrest that he was servant of His Highness. L. J., XI. 672.

Feb. 28. Draft resolution that His Majesty be humbly desired to appoint a day to be solemnly observed to implore the blessing of God upon the fleet and naval forces employed against the Dutch. L. J., XI. 672.

Oct. 21. Draft of part of the Bill for granting 1,250,000*l.* to the King. Brought from the Commons and read 1st this day and received the royal assent on the 31st instant. L. J., XI. 693, &c. 17 Car. II. c. 1.

Oct. 25. Engrossment of an Act to prevent the importation of foreign cattle and fish; the Act proposes to lay a duty of 5*l.* on every head of great cattle imported except such as are of the breed of Scotland, and on every head of sheep or swine, except as before, twenty shillings, and two shillings upon every stone (of 8 lbs.) of beef, pork, or bacon, and that not more than ten head of cattle or sheep, or more than ten stone of beef, pork, or bacon, shall be imported in one vessel at one time; the Act forbids the importation or sale in England of fish taken or salted by foreigners; the importation of cattle not exceeding six hundred in number yearly from the Isle of Man of the breed of the Island is excepted. Brought from the Commons, read 1st and committed, no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 694, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

Oct. 25. Engrossment of an Act for the encouragement of sowing and planting of hemp and flax; all lands liable to tithe, which shall be planted with hemp or flax, shall pay two shillings and six pence an acre in lieu of all tithes for the next seven years, from the 2nd of Feb. 1665-6, and all hemp or linen yarn or flax not wrought, being of the growth of Ireland, may be imported custom free. Brought from the Commons. Read 1st, 2nd, and committed; no further proceeding. L. J., XI. 694, &c. (Parchment Collection.)

THE EARL OF DENBIGH'S MANUSCRIPTS.

(Third Report.)

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

In my present report upon the Earl of Denbigh's Manuscripts, I have to take notice of a series of news-letters of the reign of William III., which, though it is imperfect, contains much that is interesting and important, the more so inasmuch as letters of this kind are rare in the period to which they belong. The first is dated September 8, 1686, and there is no other until we come to May 29, 1691, though it seems probable that the correspondence commenced at the former date, if not before, and that it was continued bi-weekly for the information of some one living abroad, who had a more than ordinary interest in being kept au courant with the state of political affairs in England. Who this person, according to my conjecture, was I shall presently say, but who was the writer of the letters I have not been able to discover. With the exception of the first, none of them bear any signature, while that is signed only with initials. In one of his letters the writer speaks of himself as a native of Jamaica, where, as appears from another, he held some public employment, the duties of which he discharged by deputy. Once I thought I was on the eve of tracing him. In a letter dated ^{4 Decr} 24 Nov^r

1691, Howe, the Queen's Vice-Chamberlain, is mentioned as having named him in the House of Commons as the person who had formerly distributed money from the French Court amongst its English pensioners, and as having added that the author of the Observator had described the manner in which he made use of the park for that purpose.* There is, however, no record of Howe's speech, nor does Dr. Welwood, the author of the Observator, name the "certain gentleman" to whom he alludes. I am therefore at fault as to the writer. But it is clear from the ability with which the letters are written, and the access which he evidently had to the best sources of information, that he was precisely the sort of man who would be selected by, say such a statesman as Dykevelt, to keep him informed of all that was passing in the political world of England at so critical a time. There are indications in his letters that in some character or other he was about the Court. When the king returns from Holland (Oct. 1691), and arrives at Whitehall, he assists him to alight from his carriage and answers an inquiry about the queen. Some days afterwards the king dines with Lord Montague "dans son petit appartement de Whitehall où j'eus l'honneur de le conduire" "par l'escalier dérobé par ce que les lords, qui l'accompagnoient ne sçavoient pas ce chemin." But whatever were the duties which brought the writer so near the king, they were not of a menial character. He is present at a court ball on the king's birthday, "malgré moy parce qu'une dame de la cour me prit pour son" "ecuyer et je n'en pûs sortir." He is on terms of familiarity with the leading men of the day, interviews foreign ambassadors, frequents the lobbies of both Houses of Parliament, and when any important question is debated, learns from his friends as they leave the House what has been proposed, said, or done, and sends news of it at once to his correspondent at the Hague, occasionally recording more than is to be found in the Journals of Parliament. Nothing likely to interest his correspondent is omitted. There is under date ²³ 13 Nov.

1691, a short but graphic account of the fire at Kensington Palace, in which the king and queen are described as laughing heartily at the ladies of the Court rushing about in chaouis with needless alarm. Here again the writer is on the scene. He arrives at seven in the morning, finds their Majesties in the garden, the king walking about looking at the bundles of goods which had been packed up by each person, and especially

* The passage in the Observator alluded to is as follows:—"There is a certain gentleman in England at this very day who has paid many thousands of pounds of the French king's money in order to ensnare England; and which is strange, both ignorant of the persons to whom he paid it, and notwithstanding a very honest man himself; but the manner of his paying it seems to have been copied exactly from Cardinal Richelieu's pattern. Being in the service of a great foreign minister, the then despatcher of the farangs of Louis XIV., he was sometimes charged with a greater and sometimes a lesser bag of money, according as people's different services deserved; but for the most part St. James's Park was the place, where these showers of gold fell. It was to such and such a particular tree, as numbered in such and such a row in the park, that this gentleman was directed; and there he was, without speaking one single word, to deliver such a particular purse of money to a man he should find in such and such a posture, leaning against the tree in such a particular habit, but always with his face covered some way or another." Mercurius Reformatarius, or the New Observator, Friday July 24, 1691.

EARL OF DENBIGH.

amused at a heap of Dutch cheese, bottles, and bread which some one had got together as if to withstand a siege. Here and there we meet with a good story. A certain Captain Jaquan, a French refugee, who has served on board one of William's ships, makes some observations to the writer on the state of discipline in the English Navy. He particularly objects to the practice amongst the officers of drinking so freely that they are drunk during half their time, never getting up till mid-day, and he adds that in France an officer would be cashiered for a single offence of that kind. The writer repeats the conversation to Lord Berkeley, who shuts him up with the remark that if all the English officers who got drunk were to be cashiered there would be none left. Again, members of Parliament in William's days appear not to have been superior to a very low form of bribery. The House of Commons is informed (letter 16 Jany. 1693) that some of its Committees accept entertainments at taverns from persons interested in their decisions; "curquy," adds the writer, "elle a" deffendu à tous ses membres d'accepter aucun repas " dans des maisons publiques pour obtenir leur appuy en " des affaires que la chambre examine." Once more; on Lord Mayor's day 1691 the king watches the river procession from a balcony at Whitehall. Each handicraft has some new device for its barge, but the most popular of all is a group of Orange trees "avec quantité de " figure de raparies d'Irlande pendus aux branches."

I have above suggested Dykevelt as the person to whom these letters might have been written. There is reason to believe that this supposition is correct. In the first place, they are precisely the communications which he would be anxious to receive, setting forth almost from day to day the state and prospects of the cause for which he had laboured. That, it is true, does not go for much. It happens, however, that the only one of those letters which bears an address—the one which is signed with initials—is addressed "A Monsieur Jean Frederick Molwat, Marchand, demeurant rue du Pape a la Haye." This is evidently a disguise. It was for no merchant that these letters were written; and curiously enough I find amongst Lord Denbigh's papers a letter of the same year as the above, but not included in the present report, from Sir William Trumbull to Dykevelt, in which he writes:—"Je pris la liberté de vous écrire un long detail de tout ce qui s'estoit passé à l'égard des affaires de son altesse Mr. le Prince d'Orange, et j'adressay ma lettre a Monsr. Jean Frederic à la Haye comme vous m'aviez ordonné à Londres." The addresses of the two letters fail to be identical through the absence in the latter of the surname "Molwat," but their resemblance is sufficient to raise a strong presumption that the "Jean Frederic" of the one and the "Jean Frederic Molwat" of the other were the same person, or pretended person, and that letters despatched under either address came into the hands of Dykevelt. This presumption is not shaken by the fact that in the first of these letters Dykevelt is mentioned as if he were a stranger to the correspondence. That was necessary in order to keep up the disguise. But there is yet another fact which strengthens me in the belief that the letters were written to Dykevelt. The letters in Lord Denbigh's collection, which are undoubtedly addressed to him, bear for the most part endorsements of the days on which they were received and answered. So do several of the letters under consideration, and in both cases the handwriting of the endorsements is the same. It would not be easy to come nearer to proof positive without actually reaching it.

The "Miscellaneous" letters may be left to speak for themselves. Amongst the most interesting are the "Memorials" of the second Earl of Denbigh, presented to Charles II., specially notable for the message sent to the Earl by Charles I.; and a paper entitled "Relation du voyage d'Angleterre," from the setting out of the Prince of Orange's expedition from Helvoetsluys to his taking up his quarters at St. James's. I may, in conclusion, observe that in the extracts which I have made from Lord Denbigh's papers, I have transcribed them as they are written, that is to say, often inaccurately. I observe in one instance that "a cette heur" is curiously despatched with "asteur."

I now proceed to give some extracts from the NEWS LETTERS.

The first, as I have already stated, is addressed "A Monsieur Jean Frederick Molwat, Marchand, demeurant rue du Pape a la Haye."

"A Windon le 8 Sept^r 1686, N.S. Je prens la liberté Monsieur, de vous écrire ce billet pour vous donner avis que le Marquis d'Abbeville fut nommé avant hyer pour succeder à Mr Skelton. Cette nouvelle surprit tous les ministres étrangers et les courtisans qui ne s'attendoient pas a ce choix. Le Roy dit publiquement qu'il avoit jetté les yeux sur luy parcequ'il avoit remarqué qu'il estoit bon amy de Mr L'ambassadeur Van-Dykvelt (de quil il dit toujours du bien) et qu'il croyoit qu'il seroit par son moyen bien venu auprez de M. le Prince d'Orange. Voila le premier ministre Catholique Romain (car il ne faut pas conter Rome) que Sa Majesté envoie chez les étrangers et chez des Protestants."

"A Londres le 2^o May 1691 Mardy. Faute de nouvelles, quand je commence cette lettre, je vay vous fair part, Monsieur, de quelques discours que les Jacobites se disent à l'oreille. Ils assurent que les neufs vaisseaux de guerre qui sont depuis long temps à Danquerque sont destiney pour executer un grand dessein qui est de porter le Roy Jaques en Ecosse, où il trouvera un party d'Episcopaux mal-contents prest à le recevoir et à hazarder quelque chose; que du moins cela fera diversion et pourra obliger le Roy de revenir de Flandres &c. A quoy on peut repondre que si cela arivoit que la France envoyât le Roy Jaques en Ecosse le remede pour l'en chasser plus vite que d'Irlande seroit facile, non en faisant revenir le Roy mais en envoyant trois ou quatre mille hommes seulement de Carikfergus en Ecosse, où il n'y a qu'un petit trajet et que par ce moyen les nouveau et futurs rebelles seroient bientot dissipez et le Roy Jaques contraint de se sauver en Norvegue. Il seroit peut estre bon qu'il y eût une guerre civile sur la frontiere d'Ecosse où les Anglois Jacobites accouroient, et où les rangeroit pour une bonne fois, car à ces sortes de gens l'indulgence ne sert de rien qu'à les rendre plus mechants. C'est peut-être à leur égard que bien de gens disent que le Gouvernement d'icy neglige beaucoup de choses et que la plus-part des personnes qui sont dans les grandes affaires de direction ne sont pas soigneuses d'exécuter à temps les ordres de leurs Majestez. . . . Il semble que chacun qui est employé ne pense qu'à faire sa fortune et à éviter de se faire des ennemis en menageant meme les Jacobites nonobstant leur insolences, comme si l'on aprehendoit qu'ils fussent un jour les plus forts. Si en l'aprehendre il faudroit leur rogner les ongles de bonne heure pour les empêcher de faire du mal lors que leur nombre aura grossy.

"On dit par tout qu'en Ecosse il ny a presque point de tronpes, ny munitions, ny argent. Les Principaux Seigneurs de ce Royaume là sont icy, comme le duc d'Hamilton, le duc de Queensbery, Le Marquis d'Athol, le Comte de Tevadel, le Comte de Southerland et plusieurs autres, qui sont assidus a faire leur cour à la Reyne. Je voy meme souvent ensemble, et seul à seul, deux hommes qui estoient incompatibles il n'y a pas longtemps, sçavoir le duc d'Hamilton et le Comte Melville. On croit que le premier veut gagner le second pour le mettre dans son party.

"Il y a du changement dans l'esprit de l'un des nouveaux Eveques, c'est le Docteur Beveridge, qui aprez avoir accepté publiquement l'evêché de Bath Wels, commence depuis huit jours à dire qu'il n'en veut plus par une delicatesse de conscience. On croit que quelqu'un luy a fait peur sur ce qu'on dit que l'ancien Eveque, le docteur Ken, se veut maintenir dans l'evêché contre l'autorité du Roy et l'acte du Parlement, ayant pour cet effect assemblé son clergé pour le faire entrer dans ses interests. Voila une marque qu'il à la conscience fort delicate s'il se met en train de Rebellion. Les Jacobites par des mains tierces l'animent, disant hautement que le Roy Jaques viendra bientot, et qu'il tirera my Lord Preston de prison. On dit qu'il en est si bien persuadé qu'en attendant il amuze le Gouvernement par des choses concerties. Les Jacobites font meme courir un bruit sourd contre l'evêque de Londres comme s'il commençoit a n'être pas content. Et pour ce qui est de l'ancien archeveque de Canterbury ils disent qu'il ne sortira pas du Palais de Lambeth que par force. Cependant le nouvel archeveque a deja engagé à son service la pluspart des officiers de la maison de l'autre qui l'attendent à Lambeth. . . . Depuis ce que Je vous ay écrit touchant le domestique prisonnier de chez l'ambassadeur d'Espagne il à pris si fort à cœnr que le Conseil Privé, où pour mieux dire Nottingham* ne le vouloit pas faire sortir par autorité, en égard à son privilege, qu'il est sorty de son lit malade à une lieue d'icy, s'est fait porter à Witehall chez la Reyne pour luy faire ses plaintes comme en pleurant de rage. La Reyne l'a fort contenté par ses manieres obligeantes, et a fait venir my Lord President pour concéder. Des que Mr de Ronquillo le vit il luy représenta que s'ils estoient venus au Conseil Extraordinaire au soir l'affaire estoit faite suivant que le duc de Norfolk, le Comte de Bedford et autres avoient dit. My Lord President luy repliqua sans s'enmouvoir qu'il avoit proposé le jour auparavant de mettre son domestique en liberté par autorité, que luy même avoit voulu signer le warrant avec deux ou trois autres Conseillers d'Etat, mais que le plus grand nombre s'y estoit opposé sur tout my Lord Nottingham et les gens de robe; qu'il estoit encore prest à signer cet ordre d'élargissement. C'est tout ce que l'Ambassadeur pouvoit souhaiter de luy. La Reyne en suite envoya chercher my Lord Nottingham, qu'on ne trouva pas Samedi au soir. Elle vouloit du moins luy ordonner d'empêcher que ce soir là on ne transportât pas le prisonnier de la maison du constable, où il a demeuré dix jours, à la prison publique comme cela estoit resolu par le creancier Irlandois, qui est papiste. Sur cela l'Ambassadeur s'en retourna assez content. Mais my Lord Nottingham ne s'étant point trouvé dans un si petit espace de temps, car on n'avoit que deux ou trois heures, l'affaire changea entièrement de face. C'est que le prisonnier voyant qu'on le menoit dans la prison publique, et craignant d'y rester long temps, et d'y être même detenu pour d'autres dettes de l'Ambassadeur, sans le consulter, prit le party de donner caution à l'Irlandois pour deux mille pièces; moyennant cela il fut incontinent relâché. Les autres domestiques de l'Ambassadeur en sont bien fâchés parce que quoy qu'ils n'ayent rien contre-signé pour luy, comme avoit fait celui-là, ils appréhendent qu'à tort et à travers on les arrête puis qu'on n'a point d'égard aux privilèges des Ambassadeurs qui ne sont pas si assurés que ceux des membres du Parlement pendant qu'il est assis, car on n'oseroit arrêter leurs domestiques. C'est ce que le creancier papiste Irlandois a dit même lors qu'on l'a interrogé. Il est apuyé par quelque Caballe Jacobite car il parle hardiment.

"A Londres le 1^{er} Juin 1691. Vendredy." "Il [the Spanish Ambassador] poursuit encore l'affaire de son domestique pour décharger sa caution qu'il a donné sans son ordre, pour avoir sa liberté. Le Conseil Privé out estoit la Reyne, ordonna hier au procureur general d'agir pour les privilèges des Ambassadeurs d'une telle manière que celui d'Espagne en fut satisfait; et de faire le proces en même temps a creancier papiste Irlandois comme recuzant. L'Ambassadeur a prié pour luy afin qu'on ne le poursuivit pas. Mais il est juste que le Gouvernement soit satisfait a l'égard d'un tel Papiste insolent qui est apuyé sans doute par la Caballe Jacobite. On vera comment il se tirera d'affaires. On a fait connoître à l'Ambassadeur qu'il feroit bien de ne pas écrire à la cour d'Espagne sur ce sujet jusques à ce qu'on luy ayt rendu la justice qu'il demande."

"A Londres le 5^{me} Juin 1691 Mardy." "Enfin nous avons appris icy il y a trois jours par les lettres de Dublin que le convoi de France est arrivé à Limerick et a Galloway le 1^{er} May. Mr Van Lewen secretaire du General m'a écrit le 20 qu'il y avoit 25 Vaisseaux de guerre qui escorteient environ quatre vingt dix navires chargez de toute sorte de provisions de bouche et de guerre et des armes pour 40^{me} hommes. Il semble que cet avis est exagéré de la moitié. Il me marque que la nécessité estoit si grande parmy les Irlandois au delà du Shannon que partie se vouloit rendre et que partie ne mangeoit que de la chair de cheval ce qui en avoit fait perir quantité; que sans ce secours on comptoit d'achever la reduction de l'Irlande en deux mois, mais qu'à present ce ne fera pas de cette campagne. J'espère le contraire. Mr de Guenkle a marqué un camp à Molingar, et les troupes ont commencé à marcher de ce côté-là. Mr Douglas a semblé son corps à Belturbet et le duc de Wittenberg le sien à Thurles afin de marcher de l'un et de l'autre côté vers Athlone. Mais il sera, dit-il, impossible de courir tout le pais parce que les Irlandois naturels sont contraires. . . . L'affaire des eveques n'est pas encore finie. J'entens dire depuis quatre jours à l'oreille que les vieux ne veulent point quitter les places aux nouveaux qu'après un jugement suivant les loix a banc du Roy, sur tout le docteur Ken Eveque de Bath Wells, qui non content d'avoir animé son clergé anime aussi ses confreres de sorte qu'il se pourra faire que dimanche prochain, jour de la Pentecôte, on en verra par le nouveau archeveque à Lambeth parce que le vieux n'est pas encore disposé d'en aller. . . . L'aveque de Londres l'aveque, me l'ayant dit la semaine dans quatre jours nous verrons si l'opinion naturelle se pourra continuer et si l'on sera obligé de faire la consecration à Foulton, maison de l'aveque de Londres, ou il fait d'ordinaire les consecrations episcopales. My lord Castelmene a été condamné en justice à restituer au roy la vaisselle d'argent de la couronne qu'il avoit eu lors de son Ambassade à Rome, qui vaud 2500 pièces. L'aveque de Lincoln et l'aveque d'Hereford sont morts, et my lord Preston ne mourra pas pour cette fois par le main du boureau puis que le Roy luy a fait grace. Chacun souhaite qu'il l'ayt meritée en parlant comm'il faut, et les Jacobites l'aprehendent."

"A Londres le 12^{me} Juin 1691 Mardy." "L'archeveque de Cantorbery fut consacré avant hier par six eveques dans l'Eglise de Bow au milieu de la ville, sçavoir Winchester, St Azap, Salisbury, Worcester, Bristol et Oxford établis par commission de la Reyne pour cette ceremonie. On raisonne fort sur ce que l'aveque de Londres n'en estoit pas mais il precha le même jour et à la même heure à Whitehall devant la Reyne. Cela n'empêche pas que les Jacobites ne continuent à dire qu'il est mal content et que c'est la véritable cause purquoy il a affecté de prêcher au lieu de faire la Consecration de l'archeveque. On va continuer à négotier auprès du vieux qu'il n'est plus qu'un simple pretre pour l'obliger à quitter volontairement le palais de Lambeth afin qu'on ne soit pas obligé de l'en tirer par force par la voye ordinaire de la justice."

"A Londres le 15^{me} Juin 1691 Vendredy. Enfin nous avons appris icy depuis trois jours un bon événement contre la cour de France puis qu'elle a manqué son dessein sur Liege. Dieu en soit loué! Le Roy y avoit pourveu de bonne heure, et le secours des Allemands sous le comte de Lippe est arrivé bien a propos. J'ay leu lettre de my Lord Portland qui a écrit icy les circonstances de cette bonne affaire et la grande fermeté de l'aveque. Il me souvient des soins que vous preniez pour son elevation. Les Jacobites d'icy sont deconcertez de ce coup. Ils avoient publié et parié que la ville seroit prise et que le Cardinal de Furstemberg en seroit nommé coadjuteur. . . . L'admiral Russell a dit qu'il n'approuve pas les ordres qu'on luy a donnés, mais qu'il les exécutera. A quoy l'on ajoute que le Capitaine Frichman, l'un des Commissaires de l'admirauté, le gouverne entièrement comme sur intime amy qui entend bien la marine, et qu'il a en fort à cœur de s'embarquer avec luy. Tout cela paroît bon, mais voicy le mal, c'est que bien de gens croient que le Cap^e Frichman est un Jacobite caché et adroit, mais d'autres le défendent et disent que l'admiral Russell le connoît mieux que personne, et que luy, étant si affectionné au Gouvernement, ne sera pas la dupe de son amy s'il estoit capable de le mal conseiller. J'ay pris la liberté d'entretenir my Lord Pembroke sur ces deux choses, et de luy demander si l'admiral Russell a dit le mot qu'on luy attribue. Il m'a répondu qu'il ne le croit pas, parce qu'il estoit luy-même present lors qu'on luy donna les ordres et qu'il les approuva. Il m'a assuré que c'est un fait constant, et pour ce qui est de Mr Frichman il en a bonne opinion, ne le croyant point Jacobite, quoy qu'il ayt été fortement attaché au Roy Jaques, avant que cela fut un crime. . . . L'aveque de St Azaph m'a dit qu'il y a apparence que le vieux Archeveque, qui n'est plus rien que pretre, sortira volontairement dans quinze jours ou trois semaines du Palais de Lambeth pour faire place à son digne successeur. Les Jacobites et les Papistes le déchirent par tout par des calomnies qui leur sont ordinaires. Ils disent qu'il n'a jamais été baptisé et qu'il est Socinien, &c."

"A Londres le 18^{me} Juin 1691 Mardy." "Les Wigs croient par avance que my Lord President et my Lord Nottingham gouverneront absolument par adresse ou autrement l'archeveque de Cantorbery pour la disposition des evechez et des autres gros benefices, et qu'ils choisiront parmy leurs amis les plus rigides pour l'Eglise episcopale, au lieu que l'archeveque est d'un sentiment modéré et propre à rabatre l'animosité reciproque. Parmy les Wigs ceux qui ne peuvent convenir que ces deux ministres d'etat ne soient fort habilles pour les affaires du Roy et affectionnez à ses interests, disent contr'eux que le malheur est qu'ils choisissent ordinairement dans les benefices et dans les charges les gens le plus contraires dans le cour au gouvernement de leurs majestez, en un mot des Jacobites chachez qui traversent sourdement les affaires de dissection où ils ont part, et que c'est delà d'où naissent plusieurs retardemens et plusieurs autres maux. Avant hier my Lord Preston fut à Whitehall. Il baiza publiquement la main de la Reyne, et la remercia fortement de la grace que le Roy et elle luy ont fait de luy donner la vie. En suite il luy lit quelques choses de sa et puis se retira. Plusieurs personnes furent curieuses de le voir qui avoient creu de le voir sur une échaffaut. Vous connoissiez sans doute M^r Jepson Secrétaire de la Thresorerie et qui l'étoit du Roy lors qu'il n'étoit qu'administrateur. Il mourut avant hier aprez quelques jours d'une attaque de pleuresie. C'est une perte, sur tout pour le Wigs d'autant plus qu'il y a apparence que celui qui luy succedera sera Tory. On croit que ce sera M^r Gay, qui exerçoit la meme charge du temps du Roy Jaques. Il est fort riche, mais comm'elle vaud cinq ou six mille pieces par an il y pretend de meme que M^r Southwel, M^r Harbart, M^r Montagu Secrétaire du Conseil, M^r Charles Bertue et autres. . . L'Eveque de S^t Azaph, qui m'a encore dit qu'il y aura un grand changement en France dans cette année 1691, ou que si cela n'est pas, il avouera qu'il n'entend rien aux propheties de l'apocalypse (cela pourroit estre), cet eveque, dis-je, vient de faire imprimer un livre pour bien justifier que tout ce qui a été fait icy depuis le dernière revolution est juste. Que c'est Dieu qui donne les royaumes à qui bon luy semble, c'est l'explication du pseume 75, Dieu abaisse l'un et élève l'autre. Que le roy à conquis son droit en conquerant la personne du Roy Jaques non la royaume, car on l'y a appellé. Il fait voir qu'il avoit droit à la couronne par luy-meme et par la Reyne, son epouze, et que puis qu'on vouloit les en exclure il a deu faire ce qu'il a fait et la Convention aussi. Il prouve que les peuples y ont toute sortes d'avantages et qu'ils ont aussi conquis leur droit en conservant leur privileges. Il traite succinctement plusieurs importantes questions touchant les differents gouvernements et les droits des Roys et des peuples. Il attaque le Roy de France sur cet sujet de la persecution contre les Vandois principalement."

EARL OF

"A Londres le 2^e Juin 1691 Mardy." "Les fanfaronnades imprimées du Roy de France l'année dernière qu'il étoit maître absolu de la mer de l'Europe ne sont plus de saison et nous esperons qu'il sera contraint de changer luy-meme de langage. On écrit de Paris qu'il est devenue sombre et pensif en public, apprehendant les evenemens de cette campagne et apprenant de tous cotez l'extreme misere de son peuple qui sera entièrement accablé si la guerre dure encore une ou deux années. Je conois des personnes qui raisonnent sur cela d'une maniere que si elle étoit bien certaine, on pourroit dire que la France a déjà autant perdu que si elle avoit restitué tout ce qu'elle a usurpé depuis la paix des Pyrenées. Car pour depuis la paix de Nimègue ce raisonnement est aparent en égard au dedans du royaume et à la perte du commerce. Tout cela est attribué à son extreme injustice, et à la situation ou Dieu a mis le Roy depuis le temps qu'il reprit Naerden et Bonne. Le chef de Justice Polixfen mourut hier. Les Wigs reconnoissent bien que c'est une nouvelle perte pour eux apres celle de M^r Jepson. Il avoit marié sa fille le jour auparavant et assisté à la nœce. Le lendemain il vomit et en vomissant avec effort comm'il étoit vieux et replet une veine se rompit dont il mourut quelques heures aprez. Sa place valoit environ cinq mille pieces de Revenu."

"A Londres le 2^e Juin 1691 Vendredy." "On dit beaucoup de bien du docteur Kider que leurs Majestez ont choisy pour Eveque de Bath-Wels, et qui ne manquera pas à sa parole comme à fait le docteur Beveridge que personne n'estime et qui est contraint de frequenter à present quelques Jacobites. On dit aussi beaucoup de bien du docteur Hale qui a été fait Eveque de Bristol. . . Les seigneurs Ecossois qui étoient icy en grand nombres s'en retournent. La plupart partoient hier aprez avoir fait soigneusement leur cour. Les Anglois, qui n'ayment guere les Ecossois disent qu'ils étoient venus faire leur recolte et solliciter quelque argent afin de vivre en paix cette campagne. Le marquis d'Athol n'a pas tant fréquenté Witehall comme les autres. C'est le plus acrédité seigneur du party episcopal en Ecosse, et qui auroit bien souhaité, dit on, trouver quelque moyen icy pour l'y retablir. Je conois fort son fils le comte de Moray, passionné Jacobite, et encore plus sa femme qui est aimée par un homme de credit et impénétrable dont vous verrez le nom en chiffre à l'autre feuille.* J'exorte souvent my lord Moray de se ranger à son devoir en s'attachant au gouvernement present. Il dit qu'il ne se mele de rien, qu'il a dequoy subsister doucement quoy que son pere ne soit pas riche, et qu'il attend les evenemens des affaires. Si quelque femme a commerce avec T. c'est la sienne assurément, et je luy en parle librement, l'assurant que tout se decouvre et que c'est le chemin de se perdre tous deux. Il raille sur cela, disant que s'il faisoit quelque chose il ne seroit pas plus malheureux que les autres et que le gouvernement ne punit personne; que la grace accordée à my lord Preston marque bien qu'à l'imitation du bon Dieu on ne veut point la mort du pecheur mais sa conversion et sa vie. . . My Lord Portland a un fils si aymable et si bien fait de corps et d'esprit quoy que si jeune qu'on luy fit un honneur, il y a quelques jours, qui n'avoit jamais été fait aucun seigneur de son âge. C'est qu'il porta l'épee de l'état devant La Reyne en sortant de l'église en ceremonie. Il s'acquie de cette fonction comme s'il y avoit été acoutumé. La Reyne rioit de bon cœur.

"J'eus hier un long entretien avec l'ambassadeur d'Espagne qui avoit fait un effort pour se faire porter chez Nottingham à qui il ne peut s'empêcher de faire quelque reproche de son indifférence de ne l'avoir pas visité, ny fait visiter pendant une si longue maladie, et d'avoir empêché qu'on ne luy rendit point justice en l'affaire de son domestique. Ces sortes de choses luy tiennent si fort au cœur qu'il m'a dit que si on luy evoye un present d'un portrait à diamans lors qu'il partira, il retiendra les portraits du Roy et de la Reyne, et renvoyera les diamans au chambellan pour marque qu'il n'est du tout point content. Je luy ay dit plusieurs choses pour luy faire voir que cela ne se devoit point faire; que ce seroit choquer Roy et Reine et non Nottingham; qu'ils ne sont point cause de ce que Nottingham en uz; mal à son égard; que le Roy d'Espagne meme dezaproveroit qu'il eut fait une telle action &c. Je ne scay si je l'ay bien persuadé d'etouffer son ressentiment, que j'ay fort remarqué par tout son discours. Il demandera bientôt une fregate pour le transporter en Espagne, et comm'il ne croit pas qu'on luy acorde en ce temps, où que du moins on ne le fasse trop languir, il écrit aujourd'hui à Bruges afin qu'on luy tiëne un vaisseau prest pour pouvoir partir dans une quinzaine de jours en cas que sa santé le permette. Il laissera sa maison et ses domestiques engagés à ses créanciers.

"Il m'a aussi dit une chose touchant Nottingham pour faire voir qu'il n'entend pas encore les affaires étrangères, ny les interests des Princes. Lors qu'il l'a voulu persuader que L'Empereur feroit la paix avec les Turcs à la fin de cette campagne Nottingham luy a répliqué que ce n'est pas une chose à souhaiter pour l'interest des allies, nommement de L'Angleterre, parce qu'une telle paix seroit cause que Suede, Danmark, Hanover et memes Zel se joindroient pour faire la guerre à tous leurs voisins en faveur de la France afin qu'elle ne succombât pas entièrement. L'Ambassadeur s'est moqué de ce raisonnement, et luy a faite voir qu'une telle consequence n'arriveroit jamais. Mais l'autre a gardé son opinion, qui ne peut luy avoir été inspirée que par quelque François où jacobite instruit par la cour de France, où bien par un vieux homme que vous connoissez parfaitement, qui le frequente fort, et qui a le mesme employ icy que Oenstierne en Hollande. C'est un des oracles politiques de Nottingham. Apres cela il ne faut pas s'étonner s'il a parlé comm'il a fait à 43. On scait aussi que M^r de la Bastide tient à peu prez ce meme langage à M^r Clarger chez qui il loge, et à d'autres, nommement à Monsieur Burnet son amy intime et qui a répondu pour luy qu'il ne se meloit de rien, et comm'il est amy intime de Nottingham, et qu'ils raisonnent souvent en particulier il peut luy avoir dit la meme chose, non à dessein de faire du mal car il est fort zélé pour le gouvernement present, mais comme une consequence adroitement insinuée et qui arriveroit si l'empereur faisoit la paix avec les Turcs.

On a accordé au duc de Lenster qu'il entrera au Conseil du Cabinet lors qu'il y aura à faire pour ce qui depend de sa charge de general. Il y est entré ce matin. Je me suis informé s'il étoit assis, ou debout. On m'a dit que puis qu'il n'est pas du Conseil du Cabinet il étoit debout mais que la Reyne pour luy faire honneur et plaisir a trouvé bon qu'un tous les conseillers fussent aussi debout pendant le temps que ce Duc y seroit, et elle-meme à bien voulu demeurer debout. Cela a duré un gros quart d'heure. . . Le Chapitre de Canterbury, en consequence du Congé d'Elire et de la lettre de leurs Majestez à eleu unanimement le Docteur Tillotson pour leur archeveque. Les Jacobites avoient publié qu'il y auroit sur ce sujet quelque division parmi les chanoines. Le docteur Beveridge à tellement été opinionatre dans sa retractation, pour refuser l'evêché de Bath qu'on a été obligé de la rayer de la liste des chapelains de la cour. Je demanday hier à l'evêque de Londres par occasion, et pour voir s'il étoit mal content comme les jacobites le disent, en quel temps il luy plaira de consacrer l'archeveque et les cinq Eveques. Il me répondit dans dix jours, à la Pentecote, et oue ce seroit à Lambeth. Je luy repliquay que l'on assuroit que le vieux archeveque n'en vouloit pas sortir que par force. Il me dit qu'il seavoit le contraire, et qu'il en sortiroit auparavant. Si cela arrive, et que les eveques deposedez obeissent aussi quantité de gens seront trompez.

"On dit que my Lord Lucas Gouverneur de la Tour a receu ordre de la Reyne de donner deux fois la semaine à my Lord Nottingham une Liste de personnes que vont voir my Lord Clarendon à la Tour. Il est certain qu'il est fort visité, et il y a bien de l'indulgence a le permettre.

"On a acordé une patente a un homme qui a inventé des machines pour empêcher que dans un combat navel les vaisseaux ne puissent venir a l'abordage."

"A Londres le 3 Juillet 1691 Mardy." "Le Roy a fait un grand plaisir a my lord Godolfin en donnant à M^r Gay la charge de secretaire de la Tresorerie parce que celle qu'il a quitée de Commissaire de la Contume a été donnée à M^r Godolfin son frere quoy que dans la Chambre Basse il ayt toujours été contraire aux interets de sa Majesté mais aparemment il ne le sera plus a l'avenir. J'ay dit au Lord Riche qui est journellement avec my lord Godolfin qu'il doit luy faire bien conoitre la grande bonté de leurs Majestez pour luy en cette occasion et en plusieurs autres afin qu'il soit du fonds de son cœur dans leurs interets comm'il l'a été dans ceux des deux derniers Roys, &c. L'affaire du vieux archeveque ne fut pas playdée il y a quatre jours. On croit qu'il se veut laisser juger par contumace plutot que de reconoitre les juges, et qu'il veut gagner ce terme afin de demeurer encor à Lambeth jusques à un autre terme, puis qu'on a tant de bonté de ne le pas faire sortir par autorité comme un si opinionatre Jacobite le merite.

43* recent hyer la nouvelle de la mort de son frere aisé dont il est l'heritier. Il n'y avoit que moy lors qu'il lout la lettre d'avis. Il pleura beaucoup. Je fus son consolateur. Je luy dit qu'il fera bien de ne pas parler de cette mort puis qu'il doit partir, et que cela l'engageroit a des depenses.

6 Juillet
"A Londres le 26 Juin 1691 Vendredy." "Enfin

le vieux archeveque est sorty de Lambeth sur ce que les juges en trouvé juste qu'il repondit pendant ce terme, ce qu'il na pas voulu faire afin de gagner encor trois ou quatre mois. On a ordonné par contumace que le sherif prendroit possession au nom du roy de sorte que le nouvel archeveque y entrera quand il voudra. . . . C'est à vous, Monsieur, à examiner si la lettre qu'on vous rendra étant envoyée pourroit servir quelque tour a faire donner dans le panneau sur un autre avis plus important. Il me tarde bien que cela arrive, et je ne doute pas que vous n'y pensiez quelquefois. En attendant vos ordre sur cela je continueray celuy que vous m'avez donné il y a plus d'un an d'entretenir cette secrète correspondance dont personne ne profite que Lamb . . . à qui je fais des minutes deux fois la semaine contre les veritable sentimens de mon cœur. Il faut toujours mander la verité de nouvelles publiques et les tourner à l'avantage des ennemis car sans cela on s'apercevrait par les autres correspondans que Lamb, le trompe et ne le traiteroit pas si bien comm'il fait par ses reponces, et par la recompence extraordinaire qu'il luy a déjà fait et qu'il luy promet encore comme vous sçavez. Aprez avoir ecrit cecy l'amy froid a trouvé à propos de vous envoyer luy meme une lettre pour éviter qu'elle fut interceptée car cela decouvriroit la correspondance. Et il y a presentement sujet de croire que cela pourroit arriver, on vous en expliquera une autrefois la raison. Si vous jugez qu'il faille envoyer l'autre lettre à M. votre neveu il n'y a qu'à la cacheter c'est à dire la premiere enveloppe, non les autre du dedans afin qu'il les cachete luy-meme et qu'il voye dequoy il s'agit si vous trouvez bon qu'il le voye, sinon on peut les cacheter avec un chiffre.

"A Londres le 30 Juin 1691 Mardy." "Les Wigs ont beaucoup de joye d'avoir emporté l'election des deux sherifs et du chambelan de la ville, Ils croyent de faire un mayre de leur party et meme que pourroit bien être M^r Wilman. Je luy en ay parlé. Il ne le croit pas et il a raison. Les Wigs disent que si le futur mayer est des leurs comme le sont les trois officiers cy dessus et que je vous ay nommez dans ce precedent lettre c'est le veritable moyen de maintenir la ville de Londres en repos sur tout pendant la guerre, ainsi que l'experience la fait conoitre depuis deux ans. Deux Parlementaires Torys m'ont assuré que lors que leur party dans la ville voudra être bien concerté et agir de toutes ses forces il l'emportera de beaucoup, et que cela arrivera pour le choix d'un mayre. Ils avoient pourtant que celuy d'a present s'est bien comporté pour l'interest de leurs Majestez et de la ville qui n'est qu'un meme interest. My lord Godolfin à l'honneur de parler souvent a La Reyne, en particulier et en public. Hyer à l'issue des prieres il l'entretint environ demye heure entourée de cent personnes. On remarqua qu'il rit deux ou trois fois, ce qui ne luy arrive guère. On remarqua aussi avec reflexion que my Lord Shrewsbury qui étoit present a perdu un pareil honneur de parler d'affaires d'estat avec La Reyne, et qu'il se tient à la porte du conseil du cabinet avec toute sorte de gens pendant que celuy à qui il a bien voulu quiter sa place est non seulement dedans mais qu'il fait la plupart des affaires sur tout pendant l'absence de my lord President comme à present. Les amis Wigs de ce Comte sont encore fachez de ce qu'il s'est conduit par sa tete. Il n'y a que deux jours qu'un de ses intimes amis et le votre mais qui n'est non plus que vous ny Tory ny Wig, me disoit qu'il n'a encore pû imaginer le veritable motif qui luy fit quiter une si bonne place. C'est my lord Mulgrave qui est boiteux depuis un mois d'une piqueure de mouche ou de guespe à la jambe qui la tellement en flée qu'il a été entre les mains des chirurgiens. On l'accuze que c'est pour autre chose. Il vous fait ses amitez.

"Le docteur Frezer, frere de la Comtesse de Monmouth, (celuy à l'occasion de qui le Roy, lors de sa blessure en Ireland, dit un si bon mot et si veritable, sçavoir qu'il à un medecin de trois Roys et jamais d'aucun sujet,) s'est battu contre M^r Bukelay, mary de Sophie, soeur de la duchesse de Richemont, qui est du nombre des Jacobites du parc, et lequel vint par derriere l'épée à la main pour le tuer en sortant de S^t James. Il en fut averty assez à temps pour se deffendre. Ils se porterent quelques coups dont l'un a blessé le medecin à la main. On les separa. My lord Feversham confirmoit hyer que la Reyne-douairiere avoit dessein d'aller faire un voyage en Portugal qu'elle medite depuis cinq ans, disant que si elle s'y ennuye elle reviendra bien tot icy, quoy qu'elle s'y ennuye aussi. Elle ne prendra que peu de ses domestiques avec elle, et son dessein est de passer par la France si le Roy de France le permet dit on. J'ay ajouté qu'il faut que le Roy d'Angleterre le permette aussi car il y aura beaucoup d'inconveniens à une telle permission qui donneroit occasion assurée à quantite de Jacobites de passer, où d'ecrire à Versailles et à S^t Germain. On dit que le Roy de Portugal veut bien envoyer ses vaisseaux en France pour y prendre la Reyne sa soeur et non en Angleterre. C'est une pauvre raison.

"Les Espagnols qui ne font plus rien dans L'Europe et qui seroient tout à fait perdus sans le Roy et les états generaux ont eu quelque avantage dans L'Amerique, ayant tué dans l'isle Hispaniola environ deux mille François, brûlé plusieurs maisons et pris plusieurs navires, suivant le report d'un qui vient d'arriver de mon país, La Jamaïque, d'on il est party il y a deux mois. On m'a dit qu'un nommé Denis (ce n'est pas Denize) marchand François à Londres a été pris à Nieucastel vers l'Ecosse (M^r Denize est a present en Ecosse) et qu'on l'a mené icy en prison, parce qu'il a envoyé du plomb en France, et c'est trahison. Il y en a bien d'autres qui font commerce avec l'ennemy."

Part of a letter without date:—"Je ne sçay si vous avez apris une querelle entre le Comte de Salisbery papiste, et M^r Hampden le fils. Ils soupoient chez le Comte d'Oxford. Aprez le repas la conversation roula sur la chasse et les chasseurs. Quel qu'un dit que le feu Roy Charles tiroit fort bien. Un autre dit que le Roy tiroit bien aussi. M^r Hamden dit que le Roy Jaques tiroit mal et qu'il avoit manqué son coup. My lord Salisbery s'imagina, mal à propos, que ce mot le regardoit parce qu'il est Jacobite et s'emporter contre M^r Hamden. Le lendemain il le fit appeller en duel qu'il accepta. Mais leurs amis trouverent le moyen de les empêcher de sortir de la maison, et l'on fit si bien comprendre à my lord Salisbery qu'il avoit tort qu'il prit le party d'aller chez M^r Hamden et luy fit des excuses.

jugé. Nottingham avoit dit à la Foulereuse qui fait les affaires de Dannemarck et qui sollicitoit pour ce marchand qu'il meritoit d'être pendu. Mais les plus criminels trouvent le moyen en ce pays d'avoir grace ou d'échapper à la Justice comme ce Denis. Je sçay en confidence de chez Nottingham memes par des subalternes que leurs superieurs de memo qualité font bien leurs affaires dans toutes ces sortes d'intrigues de marchands criminels. Si l'on en punissoit quelqu'un cela feroit peur aux autres. C'est aussi apparemment par leur moyen qu'à Douvres et aux environs on entretient des gens qui reçoivent des lettres par des barques de France et qui y en font passer. Chacun sçait cela mais on n'y remédie point. Il faut esperer que quelque jour le Roy remediera à tout."

"A Londres le 7 Septemb. 1691 Vendredy." "Hyér 28 Aout

il arriva un exprez de Dublin, aparemment pour des affaires du gouvernement et par occasion. Il porta la nouvelle de la mort de Tirconnel. On disoit en ce pays-la que quelque diable de son propre party l'avoit empoisonné dans Limerick parce qu'il étoit d'avis de capituler et que par cette meme raison on avoit passé par les armes M^r Lutterel, officier de consideration. L'on a appris aussi que l'armée du Roy arriva devant la place il y a cinq jours dans le dessein de la bombarder et de la foudroyer avec 40 pieces de canon si elle ne capituloit, et que les vaisseaux s'en étoient approchez à deux lieues desorte qu'elle étoit serrée par mer et par terre et que les rebelles suffroient extremement, sur tout la Cavalerie qui seroit obligée de tuer et de manger les chevaux. Le Party qui souhaite d'accepter l'amnistie sera bien tot aparemment le plus fort, car ils voyent assez que Sarsfield et les autres commandans ne se soucient pas de faire perir le reste de leurs troupes pourvu qu'ils retardent l'affaire et qu'ils fassent leur cour à la France et au Roy Jaques. On mande qu'on a mis trois hommes à la place de Tirconnel, qui étoient nommez, en cas de mort, dans un ordre cacheté du Roy Jaques.

"J'ay sçu que le Lord, dont je fais mention auroit souhaité que my Lord Godol . . . ne fut pas du nombre des sept, parce qu'il est bien persuadé qu'il est contraire au gouvernement dans les grandes affaires, et que cela l'a empêché d'accepter a present l'employ. Mais c'est au Roy a juger sur ce point delicat, d'autant plus qu'il est bien averty du pour et du contre à l'égard de ce septieme."

"A Londres le 11 Sept^{bre} 1691 Mardy. "Avant hyér dimanche, deux postes d'Holande arriverent ensemble avec la grande et bonne nouvelle du gain de la bataille des Allemands contre les Turcs dont le principal fruit doit etre la paix entr'eux et une plus forte guerre contre les Francois. Dieu veuille que cela arrive bientôt.

"J'ay vu une lettre du Comte de Windisgrats à M^r Hofman qui luy donne avis que L'Empereur luy a envoyé un pouvoir entier pour traiter avec le Roy, soit en Holande, soit en Angleterre, sur ce que my Lord Paget a fait conoitre à la Cour Imperiale qu'un tel pouvoir est necessaire afin d'abreger le temps que se perd lors qu'il faut attendre des reponses de Vienne et de la Haye. J'ay vu aussi dans la meme lettre le chagrin de ce comte contre la Reyne douairiere d'avoir refusé l'enterrement de Dom Pedro de Ronquillo à Somerset, et la reconnaissance envers la Reyne de l'avoir fait enterrer à Westminster et d'avoir si genereusement soin de ses domestiques qui logent et mangent à ses depens. Il fait des eloges sur cela qu'elle merite bien.

"Quantité de gens apprehend icy que la Cour Imperiale enflée de la victoire ne soit plus si portée pour la paix de Hongrie, mais le Roy luy aura fait conoitre qu'il n'est pas à propos de differer l'occasion. Il n'y a que cette paix qui puisse sauver le grand Visir a Constantinople. Le Comte de Windisgratz marque qu'il ne doate pas que cette prosperité ne produise bien tot la paix de Hongrie."

"A Londres le 15 7^{bre} 1691 Vendredy." "J'ay vu une lettre, en confidence, écrite par le duc de Schonberg à M^r de la Salle Mougnot, par le quelle il luy marque qu'il alloit partir le 20 du mois passé de Piedmont pour aller en Savoye tacher de faire quelque chose, mais qu'il n'avoit point d'argent, non pas meme pour en donner aux Francois du Dauphiné qui pouront le venir joindre. Surquoy il le prie de proposer à la Reyne, par my Lord Nottingham, de luy faire donner s'il luy plaît environ quinze mille pieces sur le bien qu'on a promis à feu son pere, dont il est heritier, et qu'il le depensera de bon cœur pour le service du Roy et de la Reyne, étant persuadé qu'il reussit pour la bonne cause, qu'on trouvera quelque jour le moyen de le dedommager de cette avance. J'ay aussi leu une lettre que le ministre du Bourdieu, écrit à L'amy froid, dont je vay copier l'extrait abregé, a cause principalement qu'on se plaint fort de M^r Vandermer. Ce n'est pas d'aujourd'hui que j'entens faire de fortes plaintes contre luy. Le Capitaine Inhof de Berne tué en Irlande m'en a dit quantité de mauvaises chose." The following is the extract:—

"A Turin le 18 Aout 1691." "Les officiers Reflux, qui servent en Piedmont, se plaignent fort de M^r Vandermer, qui agit comme s'il n'étoit pas Protestant, en effect il n'est jamais allé au preche dans Turin et n'y a pas voulu communier, comme tant d'autres. Il vit avec eclat comme s'il étoit ambassadeur, il fait beaucoup de depenses, il a carrosse, il a des metresses, et allume luy-meme des querelles entre M^r de Lochet et M^r Mallet. On pretend qu'il est coupable de la mort d'environ trois cent Vaudois ou Refugiez qui sont peris de faim et de nudité dans les vallées parce qu'il n'a pas voulu leur envoyer aucun secours dans le meme temps qu'il donnoit à la Cour de Savoye les sommes qui étoient destinées pour ces miserables. Il en uze ainsi à pour avoir icy des protecteurs lors que ses friponneries viendront en evidence. Le duc de Schonberg a creu que pour faire cesser les plaintes contre M^r Vandermer il falloit l'obliger à rendre compte de l'argent qu'il a reçu; mais lors qu'on fut assemblé pour cela il dit qu'il n'étoit pas en état de produire sa recepte ny sa dépense parce qu'ayant apprehendé le siege de Turin il avoit envoyé tous ses papiers à Genève, sans en garder copie. Cette reponce surprit extremement l'assemblée, qui n'avoit pas le pouvoir de le presser. On dit qu'il n'a plus dessein de retourner en Holande, se trouvant si bien en ce bon pays. Si le Roy, où les Etats Generaux, donnoient pouvoir au duc de Schomberg, et à M^r d'Oberkau, de luy faire rendre compte de son administration, on croit que sur les cent vingt mille ecus, qui furent d'abord envoyez il en a relié environ trente mille. C'est aux puissances, de dire qu'il depend, d'y mettre ordre. En attendant le duc de Schonberg dissimulera. Le Secretaire de la guerre du duc de Savoye n'est nullement amy des Vaudois ny des autres protestants. Et pour ce qui est du Marquis de Pianesse, et du Marquis de la Pierre, lieutenans generaux, ils passent pour Francois. C'est un grand malheur. Les commis du Marquis de St Thomas premier ministre d'Etat, on achete par un morceau de pain tout le bien des Vaudois lors qu'on les persecutoit. A present on n'oublie rien pour les laisser perir, et M^r Vandermer est un ministre commode pour cela. "Le duc de Savoye a de la passion pour la belle Marquise de Verrone, mais cela ne derobe pas un moment à son devoir, et à la gloire. J'étudie ce Prince, et je ramasse tout ce que j'entens dire de luy. Je conclus qu'il sera avec le temps un grand homme et un bon general. Il est fort couvert et dissimulé. La France n'a guere de plus grand ennemy que luy, et j'en suis bien-aise. Il est caressant, mais avec dignité. La perte de ses états ne luy a rien fait rabatre de cette noble fierté qui sied si bien aux Princes."

"A Londres le 15 7^{bre} 1691 Vendredy." "Un Eveque Papiste, nommé Lisborne, a été mis en prison. Il en étoit sorti il y a quelques mois a condition de quitter l'Angleterre. Il n'en a pas voulu sortir et memes il s'est melé de certaine choses mal à propos. C'est la cause qu'on l'arrete. J'ay obligé M^r Hofman et le Secretaire de l'ambassade d'Espagne de demander à Nottingham de quelle manière il vouloit qu'ils écrivent sur cela à Vienne et à Madrid. Il a pris leur demande en bonne part, et ils ont écrit comme s'ils ne luy avoient point parlé."

From an imperfect letter without date:—

"On pretend que si L'admiral Russell avoit battu les ennemis on avoit sollicité Le Roy de le mettre à la tete des affaires du Cabinet, et que ce seroit le meilleur moyen d'avoir beaucoup d'argent. C'est sur le sujet de l'argent que les Wigs disent qu'il y aura de grand débats au Parlement, et qu'on n'en donnera suffisamment que lors que My Lord Carmarthen sera hors des affaires du gouvernement. Les Jacobites se confient si fort sur cela qu'ils l'ont écrit au Roy Jaques, du moins j'ay vu une lettre de M^r Mejerrou qui écrit que ce Prince et sa petite cour de St Germain sont persuadez que le Parlement ne donnera plus guere d'argent au Roy, et qu'on n'en donnera qu'à condition de changer les ministres.

"My Lord Dartmouth a dit deux ou trois fois à M^r le Puz qu'il étoit bien malheureux de ce que vous-meme qui etiez si obligeant a son egard ne daigniez pas faire un mot de reponce sur son sujet depuis sa prison.

Il la supporte patiemment quoy qu'on n'ayt pas observé, dit-il. Les formalitez requises par les loix en France tant pour crime de trahison, mais qu'il n'a garde de se plaindre du Gouvernement : qu'il est bon protestant et bon serviteur du Roy et de la Reyne, les nommant par leur nom, pour éviter l'équivoque.

"A Londres le 12^{me} 7^{bre} 1691 Mardy. "L'Evêque Papiste Lisborne a été mis hors de prison sans qu'il luy ayt rien conté. On a arrêté un prêtre de feu Dom Pedro Ronquillo qui disoit la messe trop à découvert dans une maison bourgeoise où il avoit dix ou douze étrangers. Le Secrétaire de l'Ambassade s'indigne de son imprudence et prie my lord Nottingham de le faire pardonner. On parle de marier enfin My Lord Shrewsbury avec une jeune fille, nommée Mad^{lle} Enguefort " [the rest is wanting].

A letter without date and the commencement of which is wanting. "Comte de Lindzey grand Chambellan du Royaume vint au bas de l'escalier recevoir les ambassadeurs les complimentant en Italien et les conduisit à la Chambre où le Roy prend ses habits de cérémonie. Je leur fis bien remarquer cet honneur singulier du grand Chambellan. En suite il alla demander la permission de leur part à tous les seigneurs assemblez d'entrer dans leur chambre pendant leur debat sur un Bill, ce qui fut accordé, autre honneur à des étrangers. Ils virent opiner sur le Bill de la grande Banque Nationale de Terres ou de L'Exchiquier pour un subside de plus de trente millions de leur país. Il n'y eut que les Venitiens qui eurent permission d'entrer, excepté quelques-uns, comme moy, necessaires a leur faire conoitre les formalitez et les principaux Seigneurs. Plusieurs leur firent des compliments en Francois. Le Roy arriva peu apres et incontinent tous les seigneurs prirent leurs robes rouges. On plaça les ambassadeurs proche sa Majesté qui les salua, la couronne sur la tête. On observa un grand silence car il n'y avoit point de femmes, des que les membres de la Chambre basse furent entrez. Leur Orateur harangua le Roy, et dit entr'autres choses que jamais Parlement n'avoit tant donné d'argent ny si promptement à aucun Roy, mais qu'on le donnoit de bon cœur puis que sa Majesté l'employoit si bien &c. En suite elle passa huit ou dix actes, et fit une agreable harangue de remerciement pour le zele que le Parlement avoit temoigné pour la conservation de sa personne et pour fortifier le Gouvernement &c. Apres quoy my lord Gardesaux ayant pris l'ordre de la bouche du Roy prorogea le Parlement jusqu'au 26^{me} Juin. Le Roy alla se faire debailler et les ambassadeurs suivirent. Sa Majesté leur parla, et le Prince de Danemark joignit. Demye heure apres le Roy s'en étant allé, plusieurs seigneurs saluerent et parlerent avec les Ambassadeurs qui furent tres-contents d'une telle matinee. Ils allerent diner chez le duc d'Ormont qui les avoit invitez une heure avant que My Lord Portland les invitât il y à deux jours. Ils m'en temoignerent leur deplaisir car ils souhaitoient de commencer par luy, d'autant plus qu'ils ne pourront plus aller diner chez luy, puis que le Roy commence à les recevoir aujourd'hui et les deux jours suivans, et Vendredy ils auront leur audience public à Whitehall dans la grande salle des banquets. Pendant cet intervalle de quatre jours My Lord Portland fait embarquer sa famille et son equipage pour partir avec le Roy. Aujourd'hui sur le soir les ambassadeurs ont fait leur entrée publique. Le Comte de Radnor a été les prendre à Greenwich dans les berges du Roy. On est descendu à la Tour d'où le canon a tiré et ils ont pris place dans les carrosses de sa Majesté qui estoient accompagnés d'un grand nombre d'autres à six chevaux. On n'a guere veu icy de plus belle entrée ny des equipages si magnifiques. Tout le beau monde de la ville estoit aux fenestres et aux balcons, et le petit peuple remplissoit les rues. Je croy que les ambassadeurs n'en avoient jamais tant vu à la fois ny à Rome ny a Paris. J'avois pour ma part trente personnes dans mon petit logement parce qu'il est vis à vis de la maison où le Roy les traite. Je n'ay pas le temps d'y aller."

"A Londres le 21^{me} Sept^{bre} 1691 Vendredy. J'ay affecté une rencontre pour parler au Comte de Shrewsbury du mariage avec Mad^{lle} Enguefort qui à 80^{me} pieces. Il m'a dit d'abord qu'il ne se fera point et qu'elle n'a pas tant de bien qu'on dit, qu'y qu'elle soit fort riche. Je n'ay pas osé luy demander s'il l'épouserait en cas qu'elle eut 80^{me} pieces, puis qu'il m'avoit dit qu'il ne se marieroit point avec elle. Je luy ay seulement dit qu'il a à choisir parmy toutes les filles d'Angleterre, et qu'on s'étonne fort de ce qu'il n'a pas encore choisy, que cela fait dire qu'il ayme tant de dames, ai-je dit en riant, qu'on croit qu'il n'en pourroit point aymer legitimement une seule. Il a soury aussi. Je ne sçay combien de questions il me fait sur les affaires estrangeres. J'ay fait un helas ! de regret en sa faveur de ce qu'il a bien voulu quitter le Ministère ; que les affaires d'Etat vont bien pourtant icy, Dieu Mercy, mais qu'elles auroient pu mieux aller. Il est serieux sur cela. Il est assidu à faire sa cour journallement . . . J'ay veu une lettre de M^r Mejereron arrivée de Paris en sept jours, qui est fort impertinente. Lors qu'il nomme le Roy Jaques il dit simplement le Roy D'Ang^{re}, et lors qu'il nomme celui qui en est le Roy véritablement il dit le Roy Guillaume. A la bonne heure de dire le Roy Guillaume s'il disoit aussi le Roy Jaques. Un ministre, s'il est sage, en quelque cour qu'il soit il doit parler comme son maitre . . . On parle fort contre l'admiral Russell et contre les Cap^{tes} qui ont gagné les ports lors de la tempeste, ce qui est cause qu'on a perdu deux vaisseaux et quelques autres endommagés, au lieu qu'il falloit imiter les Hollandois qui ont tenu la haute mer, et n'ont rien perdu. Ils sont venus à Portsmouth . . . On ecrit de Paris du 14 qu'on n'envoyera point d'escadre en Irlande, et que le Roy Jaques a prié le Roy Louis de ne plus faire des dépenses inutiles pour luy de ce côté-là. Si on pouvoit se fier à cette nouvelle ce seroit quelque chose, et on prendroit icy d'autres mesures."

"A Londres le 25^{me} 7^{bre} 1691 Mardy. "La riche mad^{lle} Enguefort qui n'a pu avoir le comte de Shrewsbury pour epoux se marie avec my lord Lexington qui la mena en Espagne . . . On ecrit des Indes occidentales que le Colonel Kendal Gouverneur de Barbados a fait arreter le Capitaine Wright, ce traitre Jacobite, qui fit si mal son devoir envers une escadre de France qu'il voulut bien laisser échaper la pouvant ruiner. L'admiral Russell est arrivé cette apresdinée un peu indisposé. C'est la cause qu'il n'a pas assisté ce soir au conseil du Cabinet de la Reyne qui a duré quatre heures, où l'on a fait venir les commissaires de l'admirauté et de l'office de la Marine."

"A Londres le 28^{me} 7^{bre} 1691 Vendredy. "Vous me donnez avis que le Roy sera bientôt de Loo à la Haye, et que vous vous y rendrez en meme temps, mais qu'apres vous croyez de retourner à Bruxelles. Voila bien de voyages lors que les autres prennent du repos. Si vous veniez icy vous n'en auriez guere, et quoy que vous n'eussiez point de caractere public, vous en avez un indelebile qui vous attireroit encore les empressemens des deux partis pour vous faire entrer dans leurs differents sentimens. Vous ne pourriez pas vous empêcher d'être quelque fois Tory et quelque fois Wigg, suivant la raison et vous modereriez ceux qui en manquent par trop de passion. Ouy par trop de passion, car je vous puis assurer qu'il y en a autant que jamais de part et d'autre. On renouvelle dans les conversations tout ce que vous leur avez entendu dire si souvent, et il y a peu de personnes qui soient en état, comme vous l'etiez, de blamer leurs emportemens reciproques, et l'interest mal entendu de party. Vous sçavez que les Wiggs et les principaux vous ont accusé pendant votre dernier voyage d'être devenu Tory, ainsi que je vous l'ay écrit et les reponses que je leur faisois de meme que l'amy froid. A present ils s'imaginent que si vous etiez icy ils vous mettroient dans leurs sentimens. Ils pretendent crier bien haut dans le Parlement et porter le Roy à changer de mesures à leur égard s'il veut qu'ils concourent à imposer l'argent necessaire. Il n'y a pas longtemps que je vous ay écrit sur ce sujet. Si Limerik est prise cela fera sans doute changer de sentiment aux mal-contents, et réunira les esprits raisonnables sur l'affaire de l'argent pour la campagne prochaine. . . . M^r Warton, frere du contreroleur a fait pescher quatorze gros canon de fonte dans le Canal St George entre l'Irlande et L'Angleterre, dont il a fait present à la Reyne qui demanda au Chevalier Goudrik qui luy en parla si l'on avoit pesché dequoy payer les frais. Cette nouvelle pesche vient du debris de la flotte d'Espagne de Philippe Second, qu'il nommoit l'Invincible et qui fit naufrage il y à plus de cent ans."

"Enfin la Reyne-douairiere se prepare à partir dans un mois pour aller en Portugal par la France ayant pour cet effect obtenu des passeports. Aucun de ses domestiques Protestant ne l'accompagnera, et leurs gages leur seront toujours payez icy."

"On remarque depuis un mois qu'il meurt dans Londres une fois plus de monde qu'à l'ordinaire, c'est à dire au lieu de 300, il en meurt 700 par semaine mais de différentes maladies."

London "du 9 Octob. 91. "Tous les refugiez qui sont en Angleterre, en Holande et en Allemagne souboiteroient passionnément de sçavoir precisement le nom de l'auteur du detestable livre de L'Avis au Refugiez. Un grand nombre sont convaincus que c'est M^r

Bayle, et moy particulierem^t, ais li que j'ay pris la liberté de vous l'écrire. Mais commⁿ n'ia affrontement, et qu'il a fait plusieurs mechantes écrits pour s'en defendre en disant mille injures à M^r Jurieu, et à tous ses amis, il seroit facile de convaincre où de justifier M^r Bayle si l'Etat vouloit s'en meler, puis que le livre a été imprimé à la Haye par Moetiens, qui est un libraire revolté, et de qui l'amy froid dit qu'il le conoit pour Cochin depuis plus de dix ans. Je le conoit aussi pour un mechant Papiste, qui imprimoit pour S^t Didier du temps du Comte d'Avaux. Si ce libraire étoit pressé par quelqu'un du Gouvernement de nommer l'auteur, il n'oseroit le refuser pourveu qu'on le menasset tout de bon de luy faire fermer la boutique. L'impression d'un si mechant livre, contre l'Etat, et contre l'expédition d'Angleterre, meriteroit plus que ce chatiment. Il ne faut pas douter que M^r Bayle n'ait fait prendre des mesures pour empêcher le libraire de parler, mais puis qu'il y a preuve qu'il a imprimé ce libelle cela suffit pour le presser en Justice, ou par autorité. On ne doute pas que plusieurs personnes du party Arminien ne protegent M^r Bayle, parce qu'elles n'ayment guere le Roy ny le Gouvernement à present etably en Hollande. J'ay veu des lettres qui portent que plusieurs de ce party à Rotterdam caressent M^r Bayle, luy donnent à manger à cause qu'il a une plume propre à écrire contre sa Majesté. J'ay veu d'autres lettres de M^r Bibaud, qui est à Geneve qui marque qu'il y a long temps qu'il a remarqué que M^r Bayle étoit amy de la Cour du France, et de ses prosperitez, qu'il le faisoit luy-meme engrager lors qu'il luy racontoit quelque malheur arrivé aux affaires du Roy Louis 14 &c., de sorte que ce n'est pas d'aujourd'hui que M^r Bayle est dans un interest contraire à celui des refugiez. Je scay son ingratitude contre M^r Jurieu, qui l'a trop aymé sans le bien conoitre, et qui l'a etably à Sedan et à Rotterdam. Je scay qu'il nie d'avoir changé de religion à Tholozé dans sa jeunesse, et cependant il y a icy des ministres qui le savent d'original qui luy écrivent en ce temps-la et qui en eurent une reponce si papistique qu'il y a aparence qu'elle étoit dictée par des jesuites. M^r Saurin, quoy qu'il ne soit pas amy de M^r Jurieu depuis un an qu'il se sont un peu entrechoqués au Synode, m'a écrit qu'il a toujours regardé M^r Bayle comme un libertin, et que M^r Jurieu a tort de l'avoir fréquenté familièrement, le recevant chez luy comme un frere. A propos de M^r Saurin si vous aviez le loisir de vous appliquer aux affaires des particuliers, il vous seroit facile de faire un accommodement entre luy et M^r Jurieu. Je leur ay proposé que si vous le vouliez j'irois en Hollande pour les mettre d'accord, etant tous deux mes amis, et tous deux orthodoxes, gens de bien, et zelez pour le present Gouvernement d'Angleterre et d'Holande. Ils m'ont repondu à ce compliment qu'ils ne meritoient pas que je fisse ce voyage à leur occasion seulement, et qu'ils voudroient bien que d'autres affaires m'apelassent auprez de vous.

"Il y a quelques mois que M^r Dallonne et moy primes la liberté de vous recommander M^r de Pierrefite afin qu'il eut une pension comme tant d'autres refugiez. Nous pouvons vous assurer que c'est l'un de ceux qui le merite le plus. C'est un bon vieillard d'environ 70 ans, et un homme de fort bon sens et d'une rare pieté. Il demeure à Rotterdam. Votre absence l'a empêché de se faire conoitre à vous, Monsieur, qui es les patron general des refugiez. Il a été oublié dans la derniere distribution des pension de l'Etat. Au nom de Dieu ; protegez le.

"A Londres le 16 Octobre 1691 Mardy." "Vous aurez appris confusement, Monsieur, avant cette lettre la grande et bonne nouvelle de la capitulation de Limerik, Dieu en soit loué. Les derniers nouvelles de la pluye et de l'embarquement du gros canon avoient affligé le bon party et rehaussé l'insolence des Jacobites avec lesquels je suis journellement aux prises dans le parc car ils y sont deux fois le jour pour contre dire toutes les nouvelles de Witehall. Ils attendent les gens qui en sortent pour escarmoucher avec eux. Ce fut avant hier dimanche matin que la Reyne aprit, non par le Secretaire d'Etat, mais par un marchand nommé Farnez, grand parieur, que la ville avoit demandé à capituler, et montra la lettre qu'un exprez luy avoit portée. Cette nouvelle fut d'abord debitée dans toutes les eglises. Dans celle où j'étois l'on en rendit publiquement graces à Dieu. Je fus incontinent à Witehall, qui étoit rempli de monde. Je parlay au marchand, qui fit demander à la Reyne par my lord Godolfin qu'elle eut la bonté de l'envoyer en Hollande porter au Roy cette nouvelle. La Reyne ne le trouva pas à propos et fit bien, car elle attendoit la nouvelle par la bonne voye, outre que le but du marchand étoit d'aller parier à la sourdine à Amsterdam. Nonobstant le refus il partit le meme jour, et c'est par là que vous aurez appris la nouvelle. Il n'y a qu'en ce pais où les particuliers ayant cette liberté d'avoir des exprez plus diligens que ceux du Gouvernement, et de debiter à leur fantaisie les bonnes et les mauvaises nouvelles. . . . La nuit dernière à minuit la Reyne a envoyé un exprez au roy pour luy mander la nouvelle cy dessus quoy qu'elle n'ait pas encor receu l'exprez de M^r de Ginckel.

"Le chevalier a recommencé à composer des memoires pour Le Roy pour tacher de faire une paix ou une treve entre les Tors et les Wigs qui paroît plus difficile que celle avec les Turcs et meme avec la France. Il m'a prié de sous envoyer le memoire cy joint pour en parler à sa Majesté, mais elle sera partie aparemment. Le chevalier ne m'a donné son écrit que hier, et je l'ay fait traduire pour vous, vous jugerez par son propre sentiment que le party des Wigs est plus fort qu'il n'avoit creu. Je vous supplie de me repondre un mot pour luy. Il a communiqué son écrit à my Lord President, comme les precedens."

"A Londres le Lundy 22 Octob. 91.

"Je vous écris, Monsieur, extraordinairement ce soir Lundy à minuit parce qu'il à environ trois heures que M^r de Medac, fils du General Ginckel, est arrivé à Witehall avec la Capitulation de Limerik et la Reyne luy a commandé de partir demain Mardy pour aller porter cette bonne nouvelle au Roy en Hollande. J'ay été le premier qui ay conduit cet exprez à la Reyne lors qu'elle jouoit à la bassette. Elle l'a fort bien receu. Je l'ay mené en suite à my Lord Nottingham, et à dix heures chez Mad^e de Scravemour pour manger. La capitulation fut signée le 13 et on donna une porte, et le lendemain dimanche les Irlandois liverent une des deux villes de Limerik qui commande l'autre où ils doivent demeurer jusques à ce qu'on les disperse dans les provinces, et que quiconque voudra aller en France y puisse aller avec environ 800 chevaux. Vous verrez bien tot la Capitulation qui sera imprimée en Hollande. Dieu soit loué que cette grande affaire est faite et que l'armée du Roy est en tres bon etat n'ayant perdu que tres-peu de monde en achevant la conquete d'un Royaume commencé par le duc de Schonberg, continuée par le Roy en personne, et finie par un de ses Lieutenans generaux Holandois. Toute l'Angleterre en va faire de grandes rejoissances, et les allies n'en feront guere moins. . . . Les Irlandois qui iront en France perdront tout leur bien en Irlande."

"A Londres le 30 Octobre 1691 Mardy." "J'ay receu, Monsieur, la lettre que vous m'avez fait l'honneur de m'écrire le 12 de la Haye, qui contient de solides reflexions sur les affaires d'Angleterre où les partis sont animex autant qu'il est possible excepté de se battre. Vous en aurez veu de nouveau quelque marque dans l'écrit d'un Tory que je vous envoyay il y a quatre jours. Le chevalier qui l'a composé desesperé d'un accommodement si le Roy n'employe toute son autorité envers les chefs des deux partis et par les moyens qu'il propose qu'il m'a dit avoir été trouvé bons par l'archevêque de Cantorbery de meme que par my Lord President qui sont tous deux si eclairez, si moderez et si bons serviteurs de leur Majesté. Tant qu'il sera protégé par elles au point qu'il l'est, il n'a garde de sacrifier ses charges au repos du Parlement où il a dailleurs de bons amis, et où il y aura une forte division sur son sujet: s'il s'y maintient à ce coup comme il fit l'année passée, cela le mettra au dessus du vent et aparemment on ne le poussera plus. Pourveu qu'on renvoye ce debat aprez l'affaire des subsides, les affaires du Roy n'en souffriront point, mais le party Wig si sa Majesté ne le change, voudra commencer par l'attaque de ce marquis. Elle a tout pouvoir sur les principaux de ce party comme le duc de Bolton, le Comte d'Oxford, le Comte de Shrewsbury, le Comte de Bedford qui est guery, le Comte de Dorset, le comte de Denchen, le Comte de Stanford, le Comte de Macclesfield, le Comte de Monmouth, le Comte de Montaign, my lord Carbery, my lord de la Mer, Comte de Wintington, my lord Godolfin et autres Seigneurs sans parler des membres de la chambre basse. C'est de ce dernier dont je vous ay écrit en le nommant l'Impenetrable parce qu'en effect il l'est, ayant toujours été si bien dans les trois regnes opozé. Parmy tout de Seigneurs cy dessus il y en a quatre ou cinq qui m'ont dit souvent qu'il voudroient bien que 23 * fut icy et qu'il seroit encor fort utile pour temperer les animositez et pour le service de Roy, par exemple my lord d'Oxford, my lord Stanford, my Lord Monmouth, my Lord Montaign, et M^r Moray m'a dit cent fois que c'étoit le desir du duc de Bolton, quoy que presque tous ces seigneurs ayant creu que 23 à trop panché du côté de l'autre party. Ils ne parlent plus, que je sache, ny meme l'Eveque de Salisbury des marques publiques de reconnaissance en plein Parlement envers 23 pour les grands services qu'il a rendus à la nation dans la revolution. Vous savez que ces choses s'oublient avec le temps sur tout à l'égard d'un étranger absent. Mais si la paix generale étoit faite, et qu'on fut icy en repos, il semble qu'il seroit facile de reveiller les esprits sur cela."

"A Londres le 30 October 1691 Vendredy.

"Tout se prepare icy à l'ouverture du Parlement jedy prochain 22. Si le Roy n'arrive pas plutot il faudra faire une courte prorogation de huit jours. Mais il semble qu'on ne feroit pas mal si la Reyne commençoit la seance. Cette nouveauté contribuerait à porter les deux partis à travailler aux subsides avant toute autre affaire.

"Il n'y a pas moyen de faire sortir d'icy, tant on est indulgent, M^r Menardeau Champré. Depuis qu'il en a l'ordre il fait le malade, et je sçay qu'il se porte bien. J'ay toujours assuré qu'il ne s'en iroit pas jusques à ce qu'il eut reponce de Paris; et comme son patron le duc de la Feuillade est mort cela retard l'ordre qu'il attendoit, ou s'il l'a reçu il le cache. A present que la reduction d'Irlande est finie les espions de France ne seront plus si necessaires.

"Lors que les Jacobites fait reflexion qu'il avoit encor dans Limerik douze a treize milles hommes et de provisions pour trois mois, ils disent que la place s'est rendue par corruption et que Roy a donné 150^m piece pour l'avoir, s'imaginans qu'il imite le roy Louis 14.

"J'eus hyer une conversation avec M^r Filpatrick qui est fort bien avec my lord Pres[ident] et dans ses interets. En raisonnant sur le dessein de ses ennemis, qui pretendent de le faire oter de la principale direction des affaires sous leurs Majestez, je luy insinuai, comme de moy-meme, s'il ne seroit pas à propos pour la bien public en ce temps de quitter volontairement des charges. Il me repliqua d'abord qu'il feroit fort mal et que le Roy le maintiendra malgré ses ennemis qui dailleurs sont divisez entr'eux, n'étant pas tous echauffez comme quelques-uns à le pousser à bout dans le Parlement. Surquoy il m'a aussi dit qu'il y aura encor pendant cette seance autant d'amis que l'année dernière. Je luy ay repondu que si cela arrive, et que les affaires des subsides ne recoivent aucun prejudice de la division, tout ira bien. Il est persuadé que l'entiere reduction d'Irlande aura deja changé partie des plus echauffez. C'est aussi le sentiment du Chevalier Lauder, du Chevalier Goudrik, du Chevalier Richard Temple, et de plusieurs autres amis de my lord Pres... Lequel assurément merite bien qu'on ayt de la moderation à son egard, et qu'on reconnoisse ses grands services. C'est ce que je dis souvent à ses principaux ennemis nonobstant la persuasion ou ils sont que les affaires du Roy iroient beaucoup mieux si les deux principaux ministres ne s'en meloient pas, quoy qu'il ny ayt rien de plus injuste que de faire de la peine à cause d'eux à leurs Majestez."

"A Londres le 30 October 1691 Mardy. Le Roy à eu un fort heureux passage. Il arriva hyer au soir Lundy à onze heures à Witehall et il étoit party d'Holande avant hyer dimanche. Il mit pied à terre dans un mechant village nommé Marquet à l'embouchure de la Tamise à soixante huit milles d'icy d'où il vint dans de mechans carrosses jusque à Gravezinde dont l'un renversa d'assez haut mais par bonheur sa majesté qui étoit sous my lord Portland n'eut qu'un peu de mal au bras. Elle rencontra de ses carrosses qu'on avoit envoyé de tous cotez et traversa la ville de Londres replié de feux de joye, et d'illuminations jusques aux toits des maisons, tout le monde étant aux fenestres, la plupart en des-babille, et criant de toute leur force. Le petit peuple étant dans les rues embarassoit fort son carrosse qu'on conduisit jusques à Witehall avec des cris de joye extraordinaires. C'est là où je l'attendois, je mis ma main à la portiere de son carrosse. Il me demanda si la Reyne étoit à Witehall. Je luy dis qu'elle l'attendoit il y avoit long temps, et j'eus l'honneur de luy ayder à descendre du carrosse. En traversant les apartemens on uzoit les mains à force de les baiser. Lors qu'il fut dans la chambre de la Reyne il la baiza deux fois et en suite les dames. Il partit à minuit pour Kinsington où son souper l'attendoit."

"A Londres le 29 Novembre 1691 Vendredy. Le

Roy eut hyer une journée plus fatigante qu'à la guerre. Il vint le matin de Kinsington à Witehall où il assista au Conseil Privé. De là il fut faire l'ouverture du Parlement où il prononça une belle harangue que je vous envoie, et qu roule sur trois points de subsides pour une armée de 65^m hommes par terre; pour une flotte non moindre que la dernière; et pour les armerages deus à l'armée d'Irlande. La Chambre bass fit une acclamation de bonne augure, et comm'elle n'étoit qu'à demy pleine elle s'adjourna pour cinq jours. Le chevalier Clargé marqua en passant un peu de mauvaise volonte en parlant sur ce que la flotte n'avoit rien fait. Au retour du Parlement le roy receut les compliments de my Lord Mayre des Aldermans et du Commun Conseil de la ville qui temoignerent une extraord^{re} affection soit en parlant soit en baizant la main. Ensuite le Roy donna plusieurs audiences, celle de my lord Feversham dura un quart d'heure en particulier. Sa Majeste fut diner chez my lord Nieuport dans son apartement de Witehall où il y avoit plus de seigneurs Wigs que de Torys. Aprez diné l'Eveque de Londres luy amena une centaine de ministres qui temoignerent beaucoup de joye d'être admis à l'audience et à baizer la main. Aprez quoy le Roy donna encor quelques audiences particulieres et fut rendre visite à Madame la Princesse de Dannemark où il fut trois quarts d'heure debout. En s'en retournant à Kinsington il rencontra M^r Hop à la galerie à qui il parla. Ce ministre envoya avant hyer un exprez en Hollande pour donner avis que six vaisseaux des Indes Orientales et un des Occidentales étoient arrivez à Portsmouth. S'il n'avoit pas été icy l'amy froid et moy aurions envoyé un expres pour vous donner cette bonne nouvelle.

"Le docteur Tennisson à enfin accepté l'episcopat. Il baiza hyer la main du Roy pour l'evêché de Lincoln. Il avoit trop de fatigue pour le service des deux Eglises de la parroisse S^t Martin, parceque c'est presque le seul Anglois qui preche par cœur. . . . Les Seigneurs ont aujourdhy harangué le Roy sur son heureux retour et sur la reduction d'Irlande. Les Ministres Presbyteriens ont aussi harangué en particulier leurs Majestez cette apres dinée à Kinsington. Il n'y avoit que deux Refugiez et moy presents. C'étoit à l'heure que tous les domestiques dinoient."

"A Londres le 6 Novembre 1691 Mardy. La chambre basse s'est assemblée aujourdhy et apre avoir resolu de faire des compliments au Roy sur son heureux retour et sur l'entiere reduction d'Irlande, on a resolu en suite d'assister sa Majesté generalement pour toute sorte de moyens pour continuer la guerre contre la France. C'est tout ce qu'on trouvoit souhaiter dans un commencement. Dieu en soit loué.

"My Lord Dartmouth mourut avant hyer matin d'une apoplexie dans la Tour, d'où il devoit sortir cette semaine. Il avoit supé le soir auparavant largement avec ses amis. On mande de Limerik qu'il n'y a qu'environ 3000 hommes qui veuillent aller servir en France, que les autres vont chacun chez soy, et que douze ou quinze cens ont pris party dans l'armée du Roy. Tout cela fache fort M^r Dussion et M^r Sarsfield. On ma dit que vous avez donné un aussi bon diné au Roy qu'il pouvoit desirer et que toutes choses étoient parfaitement bien réglées. Je n'ay nulle peine à le croire. Le Duc de Bolton m'a chargé de milles amitez pour vous. Il voudroit bien que vous fussiez icy."

"A Londres le 9 Novembre 1691 Vendredy. Ce fut hyer jour de la grande ceremonie du Lord Mayre que la Chambre basse en corps donna au Roy des assurances precises de l'assister de toutes ses forces pour continuer la guerre contre la France conjointement avec ses allies. Sa Majesté fit une reponce qui contenta fort une centaine de membres qui l'entendirent. L'Orateur envoya deux heures apre M^r Charles Bertue au Roy pour le supplier de donner cette meme reponce par ecrit afin qu'aujourdhy on la pût lire en pleine Chambre. Les Torys et les Wigs furent tous d'accord de promettre toute sorte d'assistances pour la guerre. Ce fut le Chevalier Richard Temple qui en fit la premiere proposition. M^r Seymour n'est pas encore arrivé: on ne sçait s'il sera le meme. Il trouvera en ce cas, de meme que M^r Clargez, une opposition qui les fera taire. Les deux partis furent aussi d'accord pour la nomination d'un President des Elections dans les comitez, et l'on choisit M^r Trenchard que vous connoissez si bien et qui est fort votre serviteur. Il m'a prie de vous en assurer.

"Le Roy ne fut pas hyer au festin de my lord mayre, mais comme le temps étoit fort beau, sa Majesté se mit pendant une heure sur un balcon de Witehall, afin qu'une infinité de gens le pussent voir. La riviere étoit si couverte de bateaux que les grandes berges des Corporations qui suivoient le Lord Mayre eurent mille peines pour aborder sous le balcon où elles firent leurs decharges de canons et leurs acclamations. Le Roy salua le Mayre et tint longtemps son chapeau à la main. Chaque corps de metiers avoit quelque invention nouvelle pour parer sa berge. Celle qui parut la plus plaizante fut une grande quantité d'orangers avec quantité de figures de Raperies d'Irlande pendus aux branches.

La chambre basse a résolu ce matin d'examiner dans quatre jours l'état de la nation pour voir de quelle maniere on fera les taxes; et dans huit jours on examinera quelles taxes sont necessaire pour contenter le Roy sur les trois demandes qu'il a fait dans sa harangue, armée, flotte, arrerages d'Irlande.

La chambre basse est fort agitée sur une nouvelle affaire des marchands. C'est qu'il y en a beaucoup qui ont souscrit pour environ douze cens mille pieces, afin de faire une nouvelle compagnie pour les Indes orientales ce qui interesse la Hollande. D'autres veulent maintenir l'ancienne compagnie comm'ell'est. D'autres veulent y ajouter un fonds, et d'autres ne voudroient du tout point de telles compagnies ny vieille ny nouvelle. C'est un debat, non entre Torys et Wigs, mais un melange de chaque party suivant les differents interets de chaque membre. On ne peut sçavoir encore a quoy tout cela aboutira.

M^r Seymour est arrivé ce matin et des qu'il a été dans la Chambre, il a parlé contre la harangue du Roy comme si elle donnoit atteinte à leur privileges, et n'a rien oublié pour en éloigner l'examen et pour embarrasser les affaires. On l'a écouté attentivement mais personne n'a seconde son discours. Le Chevalier Temple luy auroit repliqué s'il avoit été dans la chambre. Il étoit à la doilane. J'ay été avec luy ce soir chez Roy qui l'a fait apeler et la conversation a duré trois quarts d'heure et en suite une heure avec 38 sur les matieres du Parlement. Roy luy a dit qu'il n'avoit pas ven l'ecrit envoyé à 23. J'ay excuzé cela le mieux que j'ay pu.

M^r Guillaume Harbort sollicite l'ambassade de Constantinople non obstant sa goutte. Vous sçavez qu'il ayme à gagner."

A Londres le 13 Novembre 1691 Mardy. Il y a quatre jours, Monsieur, que je vous envoyay le discours que la chambre basse en corps fit au Roy mais la reponce que le traducteur y ajouta n'est pas tout à fait conforme à celle que sa majesté fit. Les personnes qui croyoient l'avoir bien entendue prononcer se trompoient. La voicy mot à mot telle que l'Orateur la repartie dans la chambre. 'Messieurs. Tout ce qui me vient de la part de la Chambre des Communes m'est fort agreeable, sur tout quand il s'y trouve une telle affection que celle que l'on void dans cette adresse ce qui merite bien ma reconnoissance. Je vous assure que je tacheray d'amener les choses a un tel point que la France soit obligee d'en venir à une paix honorable et pour nous et pour nos allies. J'espere que vous n'assisterez pour cet effect par les moyens que sont necessaires de votre coté, vous protestant que du mien il ne manquera rien pour en venir à cette fin.'

L'affaire du Commerce des Indes Orientales est fort agitée au Parlement. Un Comité a fait plusieurs resolutions sur cela. La premiere que ce commerce le necessaire et utile à l'Angleterre. La seconde que est moyen de le rendre bon est de joindre un fonds à celuy de la Compagnie exclusivement à tout autre. La troisieme que cette compagnie sera augmentée de nouveaux interessez, et d'un nouveau fonds part acte de Parlement. Et la quatrieme que la Compagnie produira ses livres dans quinze jours pour voir le veritable etat de ses affaires.

La chambre basse a commencé aujourdhuy d'examiner l'état de la nation, et a duré jusqu'au soir. Je n'ay encor pu parler à des membres mes amis pour sçavoir les particularitez. J'ay seulement appris qu'il n'y a pas eu tant de bruit qu'on croyoit et qu'on n'a pas attaqué les Ministres d'Etat. On a fait de grandes plaintes contre les fausses montres et on a resolu de payer les troupes suivant les rolles et non suivant l'establisement. L'on a remarqué quantité d'abus, mais cela regarde l'avenir. On a parlé contre l'admiral Russell de n'avoir rien fait cette campagne avec une si belle flotte, mais cela a abouty à ordonner qu'il fera une relation de sa conduite pour la mieux examiner. Plusieurs membres ont proposé de faire une adresse au Roy pour le prier de changer quelques Capitaines de la flotte. Mais on a veu d'abord une forte opposition à ce dessein parce que cela interesse le privilege de sa Majesté de choisir qui bon luy semble; de sorte que cette affaire est tombee et cela est bon. Voila ce que j'ay pu apprendre ce soir de la seconde main, et qu'en general les membres sont bien disposez à plaire au Roy et à accorder l'argent necessaire quoy qu'ils souhaitent qu'il passe par d'autres main."

EARL OF DENBIGH.

A Londres le 16 Novembre 1691 Vendredy. Hyer, et avant hyer, toute la ville à été dans de grandes rejoissances. Avant hyer étoit le jour de la naissance du Roy. Presque toutes les personnes qui parurent a Witchall en grand nombre avoient des habits neufs, fort beaux. Les marchands disent que depuis trente ans ils n'ont point vendu de plus belles estoifes ny en telle quantité pour aucune naissance Royale. Il y eut le soir un bal où la moitié des dames qui se presenterent ne purent entrer faute de place. Il n'y eut que neuf couples de danseurs et danseuses, sçavoir le Duc de Northumbelland, le duc de St Albans, le Comte d'Essex, le Comte de Manchester, my Lord Cavendish, M^r de Montaigne Sanduich, M^r Boyle, M^r Grenville et le Comte Marlboro, la fille du Comte d'Oxford, la fille du Comte de Portland qui étoit la plus belle, Madame Cavendish, Mad^{me} Pierrepont, Mad^{me} Engerton, la fille de M^r Charles Bertue, Mad^{me} Bond (qui dansa le mieux) et deux filles d'honneur, Mad^{me} Grenville et Mad^{me} Villars. Le Roy, qui avoit tenu deux Conseils ce jour la one or two words torn away patience d'etre trois heures au Bal. Je fus contrainct d'y aller malgré moy, parce qu'une dame de la cour me prit pour son ecuyer et je n'en pûs sortir. Je n'ay jamais veu tant de belles dames ensemble, ny si parées. C'étoit dans le lieu où l'on joue la comedie, qui est fort vaste. Hyer étoit le jour anniversaire non seulement de La Conspiration des Poudres, mais aussi de la descente du Roy en Angleterre il y a trois ans. Il vint a Witchall a l'église comme le jour precedent et avec la meme foule de monde.

Je vous ecrivis, Monsieur, il y a trois jours ce que j'avois appris touchant ce qui se passa ce jour la dans la chambre basse. On m'a confirme a peu prez les memes choses, et j'en ma dit que M^r Seymour, M^r Clargez, M^r Musgrave, M^r Foley et quelques autres qui savent parler en public, n'eurent pas assez de credit pour réussir dans leur a word or two torn away changer plusieurs officiers de la flotte parce que le Chevalier Jean Guize votre amy leur repliqua si fortement que c'étoit donner atteinte au privilege du Roy, qu'incontinent il fut apuyé de la plupart des membres qui firent tomber cette question sur quoy on remarqua que le but de ceux qui vouloient donner des informations étoit de donner en suite des directions a sa Majesté. En suite on renvoya à demain la continuation de l'examen de la conduite de l'admiral Russell, lequel aprez un long debat en sa presence sans dire mot, dit enfin qu'il apportera les originaux des ordres qu'il a recus, et des ordres qu'il a donnez, afin qu'on juge s'il pouvoit mieux faire. On n'en veut pas tant a sa personne qu'à l'admirauté, et encor plus aux ministres du Cabinet, sur quoy il y a plusieurs membres, notamment My lord Brandon, qui parlent fortement contre ce qu'on appelle Conseil de Cabinet, disant que two or three words torn away ne faut point de tel Conseil et que ceax qui l'ont composé pendant la Regence sont responsables de tout. M^r Hope et moy avons fort contesté contre ce Lord qui est fort entêté &c. . . .

M^r Hau, Vice Chambelan de la Reyne, par lafortement contre certains membres du Conseil Privé qu'il croit indignes de cet employ. Son but étoit de dezigner particulièrement le chevalier Goudrik. Il dit aussi qu'il n'entend parler par tout que de guerre au lieu de parler de paix qui seroit necessaire two or three words torn away convert des taxes de tant d'argent mais on laissent[ent] tomber ce discours. Vous sçavez qu'il faut laisser parler chacun avec liberté, et qu'aprez que les mouvemens impetueux sont passez on examine les affaires de sang froid.

Aujourdhuy le Chevalier Estamp, nouveau Mayre assisté du Common Conseil de Londres est allé faire ses complimens à leur majestez à Kinsington. M^r Treby a fait une belle harangue. Il a dit extr'autes choses qu'il accompagnoit les gens qui representent toute la ville de Londres, comme le Parlement represente la nation, et que ce sont eux qui ont pendant ce Regne qui ont avancé l'argent necessaire pour les affaires du Gouvernement; qu'ils sont encore prêts d'en faire de meme pour abaisser la puissance de France &c.

[Le] Comte d'Essex a ete faite ce matin premier gentilhomme de la chambre, à la place du Comte de Clare qui a quitté parce qu'il a trop d'occupation à cultiver ses terres et qu'il pretendoit d'etre Duc, comme ayant epousé l'heritiere du feu Duc de Nieucastel. Mais le Roy n'est pas d'humeur à donner de telles dignitez, sur tout quand on n'a rien fait pour les meriter. Le Comte d'Essex a fait la campagne et personne ne trouve à redire a ce choix. Quelques seigneurs pretendoient à cette charge, comme my Lord Winchester, my Lord Lansdon, my Lord Stamford votre amy qui me demande journellement de vos nouvelles. . . .

EARL OF DENBIGH.

Aujourd'hui la chambre basse a examiné la grande affaire des subsides. On a d'abord et tout d'une voix résolu un subsidé. Apres quoy un membre nommé Mr. Neill, grand portier, qui a joué tous two or three words ten away plus de cent mille piéces a dit qu'il étoit d'avis de de marier quatre millions de livres sterlins et non d'avantage. Il eut été bon qu'un autre membre eut dit la même chose. Apres un petit silence Mr. Clarges a fait une autre proposition qui est de sçavoir précisément quel nombre de vaisseaux est nécessaire pour la flotte et qu'en suite on examinera quelle somme il faut pour cela. Le Chevalier Guise, qui fait fort bien, a ajouté qu'il faut faire la même demande au Roy à l'égard de l'armée par terre pour sçavoir s'il faut plus ou moins de 65,000 hommes. C'étoit pour répondre a plusieurs membres qui se pleignoient que le Roy dans sa dernière harangue eut demandé ce nombre de soldats. Mr. Seymour soutenant que c'est contre l'usage des parlemens qu'un Roy fixe le nombre et la somme, de sorte que la chambre pour finir la contestation et pour aller dîner a renvoyé a Lundy pour faire une députation a sa majesté. Cela n'est pas mauvais, et l'on ne doute point qu'on ne donne l'argent nécessaire."

The following extract is from a letter dated "1691," the first part of which is wanting. "Le Capitaine Jaquau est arrivé de la flotte. L'admiral Russell est content de luy et aussi les quatre capitaines qui l'ont eu tour a tour sur leur bord. My Lord Barklay m'a dit que c'étoit un fort bon matelot et qu'il entend bien le gouvernement d'un vaisseau. Ce Capitaine réfugié a fait plusieurs observations pour le service. La principale qu'il m'a dite est que la plus-part des officiers boivent si excessivement que la moitié du temps ils sont yvres et ne se lèvent qu'à midi; qu'en France on les casse pour ce seul défaut. Je l'ay dit a my Lord Barkley sans nommer Jaquau. Il m'a répondu que si on cassaït pour cela les officiers de marine en Angleterre on n'en trouveroit plus. . . . L'admiral Killegreu arriva hier icy. Je luy fis dire sans faire semblant de rien par son cousin que les Jacobites ont dit beaucoup de bien de luy parce que l'année passée il l'aida à échapper à sa barbe au detroit six vaisseaux François conduits par Chateau Regnaut. Il s'en rapporte sur cette affaire a M. Almonde même pour sa justification, a quoy je n'ay rien à répondre en mon particulier."

"A Londres le 23 Novembre 1691 Mardy. Les amis de my lord Halifax et de my Lord Rochester dans la chambre basse s'y sont joints avec ceux de my Lord Gisbolfin et avec Mr. Seymour, Mr. Clarges et autres contre my lord Carmarthen pour tacher de l'exclure des affaires. Il faut qu'il ayt beaucoup d'amis pour se maintenir contre un si grand nombre d'ennemis. M. Hau, vice-Chambellan de la Reyne, qui est du nombre, a fait une harangue la plus ridicule qui se puisse imaginer dans une auguste assemblée. Il prit un grand détour pour tomber sur les ministres d'état. Il mit en fait positif (mais non véritable) qu'autrefois les Roys d'Angleterre n'avoient que le Parlement pour conseil, qu'en suite ils eurent un conseil privé qui est l'abrégé du Parlement. En suite par un mauvais principe ils eurent un conseil de Cabinet qui est l'abrégé du conseil privé, mais qu'en ce dernier temps on ne s'en est pas tenu là, et l'on a fait un abrégé du conseil de Cabinet pour mettre le gouvernement entre les mains de deux hommes qui sont tels qu'ils ne valent pas mieux que ses laquais qui ont droit d'y prétendre aussi bien qu'eux &c. Ce discours pleût presque a tous les membres même aux ennemis du ministère, et on le laissa sans réplique car on connoît bien la tête du personnage. Luy-même en a eu honte depuis et il a fait une espèce d'excuse en pleine chambre dont a été fait un grand bruit. C'est qu'il a dit que par les conseillers du Cabinet contre lesquels il a declamé il entendait ceux du Roy Jacques et du feu Roy Charles. Cependant il y a apparence qu'on luy otera sa charge de Vice-Chambellan, car outre cela il l'exerce d'une manière que chacun voit qu'il n'y est pas propre, et on s'étonne que la Reyne puisse avoir tant de bonté de l'avoir supporté si longtemps. Le Chevalier Guise son beau frere a une conduite toute contraire et il s'en trouvera bien. Il a fort parlé en faveur des allies du Roy notamment des Hollandais les ayant représentés comme ceux qui ont si bien agy pour sauver la nation Angloise, et qu'on est obligé de leur rendre la pareille en toutes sortes de décisions &c. My Lord Brandon luy alla parler en particulier à la fin de son beau discours pour l'en gronder, et pour luy faire quelque raillerie. S'il avoit parlé en public il luy auroit répondu. C'est ce Lord qui montre à plusieurs membres une liste des troupes qu'il juge nécessaires pour l'Angleterre, pource Es l'oc pour l'Irlande pour la Flandres et pour embarquer sur la flotte, lesquelles in ne fait monter qu'aux deux tiers de celles que le Roy a demandé s'imaginant qu'environ 45,000 hommes effectifs suffisent. Mais chacun qui a un peu de bon sens lui fait voir le contraire.

"Mr. Hampden, le fils, qu'on n'est dans aucune affaire parle de nouveau non contre 23 mais contre 38, et contre les deux ministres. Il fait du bruit principalement touchant les grandes sommes qu'il dit qu'on trouve manquer en examinant les comptes de l'année passé. Cela va si loin qu'il ma dit et redit en présence de la comtesse qu'on trouve a dix douze ou quinze cens mille piéces. Surquoy il insinue qu'une partie a passé au pais de 23. J'ay eu de fortes contestations sur cela contre luy car le moyen d'avoir plus de moderation qu'il n'en a sur cette matiere delicate. Je dis par tout, comme a luy même que puisque son propre pere qui n'a d'autre fils est contre luy et qu'il l'a fait exclure du Parlement, il faut nécessairement que sa conduite ne soit pas bonne. Comm'il est fort amy du Comte d'Essex il m'a protesté qu'il luy conseille plus que personne de tacher d'épouser my lady Marie Bentink puis qu'elle est si aymable, riche et fille d'un Seigneur qui pourra faire augmenter sa fortune. En cela il a raison et il en auroit d'avantages s'il vouloit s'accorder avec luy. Mais il ne veut pas. Il ne veut pas même aller voir le Roi. Il voyoit journellement la Reyne et il ne continue plus tant il est bizarre. C'est sur cela que j'ay occasion de l'abysmer. Il parle d'aller chercher de la joye en Italie. J'ay exhorté s'il ne veut achever de perdre sa reputation."

"A Londres le 23 Novembre 1691 Vendredy. Il y a justement aujourd'hui deux ans, Monsieur, que je n'ay pas eu l'honneur de vous voir parce que vous avez quitté l'Angleterre le 23 9^{bre} 1689. Vous y seriez assurément revenu depuis si le Roy n'avoit été deux fois en Hollande. Cela a empêché vos amis qui sont en grand nombre à Londres d'avoir la satisfaction de vous y avoir.

"Je vous écris amplement il y a trois jours. La même nuit du Mardy au Mercredi sur les trois heures et demy aprez minuit à Kinsington le Roy entendit tirer quelques coups de mousquet qui l'éveillèrent et aussi la Reyne. D'abord il jugea que le feu étoit a quelque cheminée. La Reyne entendant encor tirer sa leva et apella une femme de chambre. Un moment aprez le Comte d'Essex premier gentilhomme de la chambre en semaine vint avetir le Roy que la feu étoit à la galerie en entrant à main droite. Le Roy se leva et vid que ce n'étoit que peu de chose pourveu qu'on y remediât dans une heure. Mais il n'y avoit dans la maison ny poudre ny échelle ny aucune machine à eau. Il falut que my lord Portland envoyât à Westminster et à Witehall reveiller les gens pour venir au secours. Il étoit six heures avant qu'on eut la machine et l'eau. Cependant le Roy et la Reyne voyant que le feu gaignoit vers leurs appartemens quoy que foiblement et avec un vent favorable, firent demenager sans confusion généralement tous leurs meubles qu'on mit dans le jardin. J'arrivay sur les sept heures au point du jour a Kinsington où je vis le feu qui avoit brûlé seulement l'appartement de my lord Devencher, de my lord Dorset ou il n'y avoit personne, et l'appartement du premier gentilhomme avec le joly appartement du concierge Mr. de Brienne qui sauva ses affaires ayant sceu des premiers le commencement du feu dans une chambre d'une servante voisine. Je fus dans le jardin où je vis leurs Majestez en deshabelle avec une douzaine de personnes. Un petit brouillard les incommodoit. Sur les huit heures le feu fut éteint. On avoit fait venir à six heures les carrosses pour aller a Witehall mais on les renvoya. Leurs majestez aymerent mieux retourner dans leurs appartemens qui furent remoublés avant midi. Une infinité de personnes étoient venues à Kinsington. Le Roy et la Reyne n'ont jamais plus ry en racontant tout ce qui s'étoit passé la nuit parmy les dames en chemise qui fuyoient par peur sans danger. On n'a rien perdu, pas même la porcelaine qui étoit rangée dans le jardin avec les tableaux et les meubles. Je vis le Roy se promener pour voir les balots que chacun avoit empaquetés. Il en rencontra un de provisions de fromage d'Holande, de bouteilles et du pain comme si l'on avoit été une place assiégée. Cela le divertit bien. . . .

"Une petite affaire occupa hier la chambre basse. On imprime icy tous les quinze jours une feuille volante intitulée L'Observateur, remplies de reflexions sur les affaires generales. L'auteur est un honnête homme, fort zélé pour le gouvernement. Il se nomme le Docteur Wolwoud, amy intime de l'Eveque de Salisbury qui luy dyde quelquefois a composer ses reflexions politiques. Mais il en a fait mal à propos sur le chambre basse en l'exhortant à donner de l'argent au Roy et d'avoir egard à l'état present des affaires de L'Europe &c. Cela est bon à dire en conversation, mais non à imprimer. Quelque membre s'en est plaint, et M^r Clargez a fort apuyé cette affaire qu'on a meme envisagée comme un attentat aux privileges de la chambre. Aprez qu'on eut voté sur cela, la Resolution fut d'ordonner que l'auteur sera envoyé en prison nonobstant qu'on ayt pu alleguer en sa faveur qu'on imprime icy journelement plusieurs libelles contre le gouvernement sans qu'on y prenne garde. Cela est bien vray.

"Hyér la Chambre basse lors qu'on y pensoit le moins et avant l'examen de la depense pour la flotte et pour l'armée donna au Roy l'augmentation de l'exciise sur la biere pour un an. Le terme de l'année dernière alloit finir dans quatre jours. Cela vaud environ six cens mille pieces et c'est un bon fond. On examinera demain le subside necessaire pour la flotte et pour l'armée. Plusieurs membres penchent a augmenter la flotte et à diminuer les troupes par terre, mais il y a aparence qu'on se conformera au projet du Roy.

"My lord Carmarthen est effectivement malade quoy qu'on croye que c'est une maladie de commande. Le Roy dina hyer chez my lord Montaign dans son petit appartement de Withehall où j'eus l'honneur de le conduire par l'escalier derobé parce que les lords qui l'accompagnoient ne sçavoient pas ce chemin. Il n'y avoit a table que my lord Portland, my lord d'Essex, my lord Marleboroug, my lord Sydney, et my lord Godolphin. L'Admiral Russell au plus fort de ses affaires se maria hyer avec sa cousine, fille du Comte de Betford, qui a vingt mille pieces. Je voy quelquefois my lord Torington roder comme moy aux antichambres du Parlement. Mais je ne le salue point. . . . L'admiral Russell a remis entre les mains de l'Orateur les instructions qui luy furent données par les Commissaires de l'Admirauté et les lettres et ordres qu'il a receus [a word torn away] mer touchant la conduite de la flotte avec relation des mouvemens qu'elle a fait. Lors que tout cela eut été leu, la chambre ordonna que les Commissaires de l'admirauté donnerent demain par escrit ce qu'ils ont a dire avec une liste des vaisseaux qui ont été perdus où endommagés depuis trois ans et les noms des capitaines. Aprez cet examen on continuera celui de l'état de la nation. . . . La chambre des Seigneurs travaille a un acte pour regler la maniere qu'on fera le proces aux pairs du Royaume accusez de haute trahison. Le Roy fut hyer pendant quatre heures dans le conseil privé où l'on playdoit publiquement une affaire du Comte Derby touchant un navire marchand echoué chargé de vin. Le Comte de Clarendon a été decharge en donnant caution. On ma dit que my lord Lovelace est mort.

"A Londres le 3^e Novembre 1691 Mardy. Samedy dernier et hyer Lundy la chambre basse s'appliqua à l'examen du subside pour la flotte et elle a creu que 1560^m pieces suffisoient pour 30^m matelots et pour tout puis qu'on a beaucoup de provisions et qu'on a fait un retranchement considerable sur la depense ordinaire de l'artillerie. Le subside de la campagne dernière étoit plus fort d'environ 209^m pieces.

"On commencera demain l'examen du subside pour l'armée par terre. Aprez quoy on cherchera sur quels fonds on fera les taxes. Lors qu'on demande à quelques membres d'ou procedent certaines longueurs dans ces sortes d'affaires dans un temps si precieux, ils repondent qu'il faut necessairement observer les methodes uzitées dans les parlemens.

"La chambre basse a fait lire la liste des vaisseaux de guerre perdus depuis trois ans et il y en a une trentaine. ce qui chagrine beaucoup, dautant plus qu'on croit que ce n'est pas par ignorance qu'on a fait de si grandes pertes presque sans combatre.

"Plusieurs seigneurs brigoient pour avoir la charge de my lord Lovelace, le croyant mort à une journée d'icy mais il ne l'est pas encore. Il boit avec un tel excez que son corps est gâté.

"On est si enclin icy a faire de la depense les jours de naissances Royales qu'avant hyer, jour de celle de la Reyne-douairiere en 1638, je vis à Sommerset une extraordin^{re} quantité de monde bien paré. Le Roy et la Reyne y furent quoy que le jour de la naissance du Roy on n'ayt veu à sa cour aucun domestique de la Reyne douairiere qui, dit on, leur avoit temoigné de ne pas souhaiter qu'ils fissent cette depense.

"La chambre basse travaille à une affaire qui incommodera quantité de gens si elle reussit, c'est de reduire l'interest des particuliers du denier six au denier quatre.

"La chambre basse étant informé que M^r Bridges un de ses membres avoit appris par un capitaine de la flotte du Roy que le chevalier de Laval avoit depuis peu pris un petit batiment de France qui alloit en Irlande y porter des papiers d'une consequence dangereuse au gouvernement, elle commanda à ce membre de nommer le capitaine qui luy avoit donné cet avis. Surquoy il nomma my lord Danby fils de my Lord Carmarthen. En suite la chambre ordonna que le chevalier Laval viendroir de Portsmouth pour apporter tous les papiers qu'il a pris et qu'on demanderoit une Conference à la chambre des seigneurs à laquelle on envoya my lord Colchester. La Conference s'est faite aujourd'huy. Ce commencement d'affaire de trahison ou d'infidelité roule sur ce que my lord Danby a veu parmy les papiers pris la copie de l'instructions et des ordres donnez au chevalier de Laval avant qu'il l'esset receussent de l'admiral. Ce qui fait beaucoup de bruit et cela regarde les maitres où les commis si le fait est bien certain. Les deputes de la Chambre basse ont demandé dans la Conference qu'il leur fut permis de faire quelques questions à my lord Danby sur les lettres et papiers qu'il a veus et leus. Les deputes des seigneurs on repondu qu'ils se chargeoient de faire cela eux-memes qu'ils satisferoient les communes la dessus et qu'ils parleroient à my Lord Danby afin qu'il donne par escrit les circonstances de cette affaire.

"La Chambre basse a supplié Le Roy de donner ordre que l'on luy communique les examinations et depositions de my lord Preston et de M^r Crone quoy qu'ils ayent leur grace afin de tacher de mieux conoitre les traitres et les mal affectionnez au present Gouvernement.

"La Chambre des Seigneurs a supplié Le Roy de leur faire communiquer tous les articles de la capitulation de Limerik car on pretend qu'il y en a de contraires aux loix d'Angleterre touchant les papistes que le General Ginckel ne pouvoit pas accorder.

"L'agitation continue fort dans la chambre basse touchant l'affaire de la Compagnie des Indes Orientelles. Les debats ont été longs aujourd'huy et l'on a renvoyé la matiere a trois jours. La plus-part des membres penchent a casser l'ancienne compagnie. . . .

"L'Eveque de Durham assiste au Parlement comme les autres Eveques. Il fut meme l'autre jour dans la Chambre de la Reyne dans la foule d'une deputation. Sa Majesté fut surprise de le voir. Cet Eveque qui s'accommode a tout voudroit bien qu'on luy fit parler du coté de la Cour à ce que ma dit l'Eveque de Salisbery, mais on le laisse la pour ce qu'il vaud.

"A Londres le 30 Novemb. 1691 Vendredy. Hyer la Chambre basse resolut la grand affaire du Roy et de ses alliez en luy accordant les troupes qu'il a demandées, sçavoir 64920 hommes. Voila une bonne nouvelle. Voicy quelques circonstances de ce qui s'est passé sur ce sujet. Avant hyer plusieurs membres étoient d'avis entr'eux de n'accorder que 40^m hommes, puis que L'Irlande étoit reduite, où tout au plus 50^m, à condition que la plus-part seroient employez à une descente en France car c'est cela qui tient au cœur bien plus que d'avoir une grosse armée en Flandres. Surquoy on peut dire qu'un grand nombre de membres n'en comprennent pas la consequence. Ils parlent de la pris de Charleroy, de Namur et de Liege comme d'affaires peu importantes, meme de Bruxelles et de Gand. Il n'y a qu'Ostende qui les frappe par raport à la Tamise. Ils ne connoissent pas non plus la necessité qu'il y a d'être alliez avec les princes d'Allemagne. Un membre fut assez inconsideré de parler d'eux comme des alliez à charge qui étant pauvres avoient besoin d'assistance. Il dit cela en paroles aigres, surquoy il y eut une emotion de plusieurs membres contre luy pour le chatier, mais on l'excuse sur ce qu'il est bien connu pour un tete sans cervelle et qui parle journelement à tort et à travers. Un membre replica que leurs libertez leur permettent de parler du dedans du Royaume mais non de dire des injures aux estrangers &c.

"Hyers les esprits parurent plus tranquiles et apreuz un debats de quatre heures on resolut de donner autant de troupes que le Roy en a demandé. M^r Seymour ne parla guere contre, mais M^r Clargez, M^r Musgrave, M^r Foley, M^r Harley, et autres firent leur possible pour diminuer le nombre et pour faire rezoudre que le Roy en auroit tant en Flandres, tant en Ecosse, tant en Irlande, a quoy le Chevalier Temple reliaqua que cela étoit sujet a de grands inconveniens de fixer le nombre des gens de guerre en tel endroit par acte de Parlement, parce qu'en cas de besoin on n'ozeroit les faire servir ailleurs. Cette reflexion fut goûtée par la Chambre et on convint qu'on ne sçaurait mieux faire que de se rapporter au Roy d'employer les troupes de la maniere qu'il jugeroit à propos. On continua pourtant a discourir que l'aplication par mer étoit plus necessaire que par terre et qu'une descente considerable étoit absolument necessaire pour entamer la France par un endroit sensible où pour donner une bataille navale si elle vouloir empêcher la descente. Les membres les plus clairvoyant en dehors conviennent que sa majesté de son chef, ou de concert avec ses alliez fera ce qui sera le plus à propos.

EARL OF DENBIGH.

Ce me fut qu'avant hier que la Chambre basse calcula exactement la dépense de la flotte pour l'année 1692 qui se monte à 1575890 sterlins où dix neuf ou vingt millions de florins, y compris les frais de l'artillerie et les frais qui seront nécessaires à construire trois chantiers à Portsmouth.

Le Prince de Hesse-Darmstat et M^r de Ruvigny sont arrivés d'Irlande. J'ay eu occasion de les entretenir. Ils m'ont dit entr'autres choses, que les troupes Irlandoises qui se sont embarquées pour France sont en plus grand nombre qu'on n'avoit creu icy. Il y a environ six mille soldats ou Cavaliers et quatre mille femmes ou enfans. Il est vray que parmi les soldats il n'y en a pas la moitié de troupes réglées, le reste sont des Raparies qui étant retournés chez eux leurs voisins les ont traités de coquins et par deit ils sont allés s'embarquer. On leur a donné à tous beaucoup de brande vin qu'ils ayment extrêmement et on leur a fait accroire qu'en France cette boisson y est aussi abondante que l'eau de fontaine. M^r Lutteral a dit icy la meme chose et que l'escadre de France portoit à Limerik trois mille hommes d'infanterie et 250 officiers avec des provisions. Que si ce secours étoit arrivé plutôt on n'auroit pas pris la place d'un an. . . .

Les interressez dans l'ancienne Compagnie Angloise des Indes Orientales insinuent aux membres de la Chambre basse que si on casse cette compagnie pour en faire une nouvelle, les Holandois seuls profiteront de tout ce commerce.

Le Comte de Stratman envoyé de L'Empereur a reçu un exprez pour une affaire particuliere. C'est pour avoir un regiment de Papiste Irlandois sur ce que le Prince de Darmstat avoit écrit à la cour Imperiale lors du siege de Limerik qu'il seroit facile apres la prise, d'engager deux ou trois mille soldats à passer en Allemagne. La Cour Imperiale a negligé cette proposition pendant un mois et à present son ordre est venu trop tard puis que les troupes Irlandoises sont dispersées.

La repartition des Troupes du Roy est à peu prez comme cecy. Environ 38000 hommes en Flandres, où contre la France. Environ 13000 en Angleterre, environ 11000 en Irlande et environ 2500 en Ecosse outre celles qui y sont deja. Lors que M^r Clargez demanda d'où on tireroit tant d'argent pour tant de troupes, on luy repondit qu'il n'y avoit point de veritable Anglois protestant et non Jacobite qui ne donnât la moitié de son revenue, un autre ajouta les trois quarts, pour conserver le Gouvernement. On remarqua principalement les membres du ouest comme Cornouaille et les provinces voisines comme les plus zelez. Ils interrompoient M^r Clargez et M^r Musgrave, et criaient une centaine à la fois qu'au lieu de tant de raisonnemens qu'il falloit venir à la question pour la decider à la pluralité cela dementoit les harangueurs mal intentionnez d'autant plus que quelques uns ajoutoient que si 65000 hommes ne suffisoient pas il falloit voter pour cent mille."

A Londres le 24 Novembre 1691 Mardy. Je vous ecrivis, Monsieur, il y a quatre jours que la Chambre basse avoit accordé au Roy le nombres des troupes qu'il à demandé. On devoit hier regler la somme à quoy cette depense montera qui sera d'environ deux millions de livres sterlins, mais une autre affaire, c'est l'examen du Chevalier de Laval, dura si longtemps qu'on renvoya à demain le calcul des frais pour les troupes.

Je vous ecrivis que l'exprez que l'empereur à envoyé icy pour un corps de troupes Irlandoises étoit venu trop tard puis qu'elles sont dispersées ou embarquées. Mais non obstant cela le Prince de Hesse Darmstat dit qu'il espere d'avoir un regiment de 3000 hommes parce qu'à son depart d'Irlande il avoit pris des mesures avec des officiers Irlandois qui n'ont pas voulu aller en France lesquels on paye depuis le commencement de Novembre. M^r Tetau lieutenant General des hommes Danois m'a dit sur cela que ce Prince aura à present de la peine à réussir et il ny a nulle apparence.

M^r Foley, un des plus riches membres de la Chambre basse qui est contraires aux interets de la cour comme le viellard M^r Clargez, a harangué contre les trop grosses taxes, et a dit qu'il entend raisonner partout comme si le Roy vouloir en personne faire une descente en France, mais qu'il ne juge pas qu'il soit à propos de plus grosses taxes pour payer sa rançon. Il a creu de dire un bon mot en plaizantant et faisant allusion au Roy Jean que les Anglois prirent prisonnier. Son discours tomba de mesme que celui de son amy M^r Clargez qui ajouta qu'on parle mal à propos lors qu'on dit qu'il y a une nécessité absolue d'avoir de grosses armées et de conserver le reste de la Flandres Espagnolle, mais que c'est sans fondement puis que si elle étoit conquétée et meme la Hollande cela ne feroit que peu ou point de prejudice à L'Angleterre qui a en elle-meme assez de forces pour se mettre à couvert de la puissance de France &c. On le refutta sur ce discours peu judicieux comme en toute autre chose.

M^r Hau, Vice-Chambellan de la Reyne qui dit ce qu'il veut sans reflexion ny jugement saif à se retractor, a fait une plaizantante harangue en me designant tout haut et en me nommant tous bas sur ce qu'autrefois je payois les pensions icy de la part de la Cour de France, insinuant qu'il faut m'interoger afin que je nomme les anciens pensionnaires pour sçavoir s'il y en a encore quelqu'un dans le Parlement. Il ajouta que l'auteur de l'Observateur qui est arreté à imprimé la maniere dont je me servois la nuit au parc pour payer les pensions en cachette. Mais l'Orateur qui vid qu'il amuzoit la chambre dit qu'il y avoit des affaires plus pressantes à examiner et fit tomber celle-cy que personne ne releva. Je n'aurois pas été embarrassé à repandre en allegant mon honneur et la mort de tous les anciens pensionnaires et en ajoutant de s'apliquer aux nouveaux qui ne sont inconnus.

Hier la Chambre Haute étoit remplie de tous les seigneurs Anglois qui sont icy pour entendre playder une affaire contre my lord Monmouth que jouit de la confiscation d'un bien de douze ou quinze cens pieces de rente que le Roy luy donna à son avènement à la couronne comme vous sçavez et que cela provient d'un des juges du Roy Charles Premier. Les enfans de ce juge pretendent qu'au retablissement du Roy Charles Second on ne pouvoit pas confisquer la partie des biens qui étoit substituée puis qu'on n'a pas flety le sang des descendans. C'est la le procez qui interesse la couronne, si elle perdoit ou perdrait plus de cinquante mille pieces parce qu'il faudroit restituer les fruits depuis trente ans. On ne peut hier achever l'affaire qui fut adjournée à demain. My lord Monmouth, qui n'est pas riche, seroit presque ruiné. . . .

La Chambre basse examina hier le Chevalier de Laval et les lettres qu'il a prises dans une barque Françoise partie d'Irlande pour Brest. Ces lettres sont du General Ginckel à M^r Dusson general François ou de M^r Dusson à M^r de Chateaurenault chef d'escadre Françoise touchant la Capitulation de Limerik et la treve pour les flottes. Mais il n'y a point de lettre de my lord Nottingham à M^r de Laval ainsi que my lord Damby l'a dit, quoy que M^r de Ginckel parle de my lord Nottingham dans ses lettres. En un mot il ne paroît rien de criminal contre luy. On void que my lord Damby s'est meconté s'il n'a pas eu de dessein. M^r de Laval a eu occasion de contenter la chambre par ses reponces à plusieurs questions, mais elle n'a pas été contente des derniers ordres que l'admirauté luy a donnez de croizer à la hanteur de Scilly et de n'envoyer que deux vaisseaux à Kinsale chercher les navires marchands de Virginie. Sans de tels ordres il auroit pu rencontrer l'escadre de France et la petite escadre de M^r de Calembourg surquoy je vous ay écrit.

On parle par tout de certaines brouilleries qui sont par[mi] les ministres d'etat. C'est leur interest d'etre d'accord de meme que l'interest du Roy qui a assez d'autres occupations sans avoir encore celle de les ajuster. My Lord Carmarthen paroît de n'etre plus si amy qu'autrefois de my lord Nottingham non seulement à cause de l'affaire que my lord Damby son fils a commencée qui rejallit aucunement sur ce secretaire d'etat ou sur son bureau, mais aussi parce qu'il se plaint que my lord Nottingham et fort amy de ses ennemis, comme my lord Rochester, M^r Seymour et autres. My lord Nottingham se plaint à son tour que my lord Carmarthen est aussi fort amy de ses ennemis comme M^r Robert Howard, M^r Musgrave, M^r Wilman. Les autres ministres du Conseil prennent party ou pour l'un ou pour l'autre, suivant leurs inclinations ou leur liaisons. My lord Godolphin, dit on, joue son jeu en tout cela car il n'est amy ny de l'un ny de l'autre de ces deux premiers Ministres d'Etat. Il est [tous] jours lié d'amitié étroite avec my lord Shrewsbury, my lord Montaigu, et my lord Marlboroug.

Le Colonel Filpatrik a une grande affaire dont il n'est pas en peine car il est sçavant en intrigues comme vous sçavez. Il est toujours bien avec le Roy et avec SS. avec l'archeveque de Cantorbery et l'evêque de Londres, de meme qu'avec les principaux ministres. Mais tout cela n'a pas empêché que l'archevêque de Tuam d'Irlande qui est icy réfugié depuis trois ans et qui a dix enfans n'ayt signé et fait signer a trente Irlandois une requête contre luy pour supplier le Roy de le chasser de la Cour comme auteur de mechans conseils contre l'intérêt des Irlandois protestans parce qu'il a été papiste. Cet archevêque a fort sollicité cette affaire. Il dit même que c'est du consentement de my lord Carmarthen qui n'est plus son amy comm'il l'a été. Cette intrigue archiepiscopale n'aboutira à rien suivant les apparences qu'a la confusion des ennemis de M^r Filpatrick qui a déjà pris de bonnes mesures contr'eux. Il a persuadé bien de gens que cet archevêque Irlandois est un paillard et s'il faut croire les circonstances qu'on allegue ce n'est pas [sans] sujet qu'on l'accuze."

"Londres le 1^{er} Decembre 1691 Mardy. Voicy un nouvel exemple des changemens qui arrivent journellement au Parlement. Je vous ecrivis, Monsieur, il y a quatre jours que la Chambre basse avoit rejeté la proposition d'ajouter aux 65000 hommes environ dix mille officiers, compris les serjens, les trompettes, les tambours, les hautbois: cela étoit vray. Mais le lendemain on remit la proposition sur le tapis et on allegua que sans les officiers le Roy n'auroit pas assez de troupes pour executer ses projets. Plusieurs membres se facherent de la proposition parce qu'elle n'étoit pas conforme à la methode qu'il falloit observer, et M^r Clargez harangua fortement, à son ordinaire, pour empêcher une telle augmentation, M^r Musgrave, M^r Folley et un grand nombre d'autres le seconderent, non M^r Seymour. Mais l'autre party sans tant de discours demanda d'en venir à la question en comptant les voix et l'emporta de 25 sur environ 350, non pour l'Irlande parceque l'affaire étoit déjà réglée à 12960 hommes y compris les officiers. De sorte qu'on accorda au Roy environ 8000 hommes de plus, et par ce moyen il aura 73000 hommes quoy que la campagne dernière il n'en eut que 69000. Vous pouvez juger encore par là combien il est facile au meilleur party de gagner les questions. Cette affaire des officiers est fort importante.

"J'ay appris que M^r de la Bastide (qui est toujours suspect aux réfugiés parce qu'il jouit de son bien en France et qu'il est en commerce avec son amy M^r Pellission) a donné à souper à my lord Halifax, à l'Eveque de Salisbury, à M^r de Ruigny et à M^r Clargez, et que le bout de cette entrevue étoit de gagner ce dernier par de bonnes raisons. On n'oublia rien à dire sur cela mais inutilement tant il est entêté. Il y a de gens qui doutent fort que la premier et l'hôte ayent essayé tout de bon de gagner leur amy.

"Le Roy a donné de nouveau un exemple de moderation envers la personne du Roy Louis 14 à l'occasion d'un sermon que l'Eveque de Salisbury prononça devant leurs Majestez il y a quelques jours, l'ayant nommé le Grand Turk d'Occident &c. Le lendemain cet Eveque étant auzreux du Roy en presence de plusieurs personnes sa majesté luy dit de faire imprimer son sermon mais qu'il en falloit retrancher ces mots de Turk d'Occident injurieux au Roy tres-chrestien. L'on n'en uze pas ainsi à la Cour de France.

"Enfin le procez de my Lord Monmouth touchant la confiscation fut hyer jugé par 78 Seigneurs, et par une re[n]contre assez extraordinaire ils furent partager tant la brigue étoit égale. Il y en eut 39 de chaque coté et cela fit le gain du procez en faveur de my Lord Monmouth sans qu'il le sçeut tout d'un coup, car il proposa de donner luy-même sa voix puis qu'il s'agissoit de l'intérêt du Roy: on devoit opiner si cela étoit dans l'ordre. Mais les vieux Seigneurs et les juges dirent d'abord que l'affaire étoit finie parce que my Lord Monmouth est en possession en vertu d'un tiltre Royal et que pour l'en depousser il eut falu une voix de plus contre luy. Sur cela les seigneurs se leverent auzreux six heures de debat pour la troisieme fois. Comme la perte de cette confiscation étoit considerable pour la Couronne en d'autres biens provenant du même juge du Roy Charles P^r nommé Danvers, les bons courtisans contrécarrèrent la forte brigue de my lord Carmarthen, de my Lord Halifax, de my lord Lindzey, de my Lord Abindon et autres. Les deux Secretaires d'Etat, my Lord Portland, my lord Rochester, my lord Shrewsbury, my lord Montaigu, my Lord Marleborough, my Lord Godlfin et autres, se rangerent du coté de my lord Monmouth et attirerent bien de leurs amis outre dix juges car les deux autres firent leurs derniers efforts pour persuader par les loix, de sorte que my lord Monmouth ayant frizé la corde comme vous voyez, eut la victoire par un partage. J'étois toujours à la porte pour sçavoir les progres du procez afin d'en avertir la comtesse. Je luy avois dit il y a quatre jours que la

Lord à qui vous ecrivez quelque fois, m'avoit assuré, lors que je le sollicitois qu'il étoit trop amy des belles dames pour donner sa voix contr'elle et qu'il se retireroit s'il ne la pouvoit donner en sa faveur, a quoy il ne manqua pas car auzreux que les juges eurent dit leur avis il sortit de la chambre. My Lord Scarboroug fit quelque chose d'aprouchant. Il est des amis de my lord Carmarthen et de my Lord Monmouth. Il alla dès le matin auzreux du Roy faire la fonction de Capitaine des gardes à la place du duc d'Ormont qui opina pour my lord Monmouth de même que Durselay qui vous a écrit depuis peu. Quatre Seigneurs manquerent d'être à la chambre qui étoient contre le party de my Lord Carmarthen, sçavoir my lord D'Oxford my Lord Dorset, et my Lord Ossulton qui sont malades et le duc de St Albans qui étoit à la chasse. My lord Monmouth fit une action genereuse auzreux le gain de son procez. Il dit qu'il donneroit trois cens pieces tous les ans à M^r Danvers pendant sa vie, c'est environ la cinq ou sixieme partie de la rente. Votre amy le Comte de Stamford opina contre luy quoy que nullement amy des Tors. On reproche à my lord Carmarthen d'avoir voulu oter à my lord Monmouth cette confiscation où pour mieux dire au Roy, quoy qu'il l'eut demandée luy-même en don a sa majesté lors de son avenement à la Couronne. J'ay peur de vous ennuyer en vous écrivant tant de circonstances de cette affaire dont je suis remply. . . .

"Les Commissaires établis par la Chambre basse pour examiner la depense des revenus publics depuis l'année 1688 ont présenté un état du revenu pendant ces trois années qu'on dit monter à dix huit millions de livres sterlins. On a leu cet état et on dit que my lord Renala et quelques autres n'ont pas bien satisfait les commissaires touchant leurs comptes. On les examine à present dans la Chambre et on continuera dans trois jours."

"A Londres le 7^{er} [Dec.] Le Comte de Bath gagna avant hyer au banc du Roy un grand procez contre la Duchesse d'Albermale qui luy produira à present plus de quatre mille pieces de rente et autant auzreux la mort de cette duchesse, et peut être aussi le tiltre de Duc. Elle obligea my Lord Carmarthen de venir temoigner contre le comte de Bath qu'il n'ayme plus. Comm'il se porte mieux il vint devant les juges et de la maniere qu'il parla il ne contenta ny la duchesse ny le comte. Le Chevalier Higuins qui temoigna aussi mourut sur le champ.

"La decision du procez de my lord Monmouth dont je vous ay écrit a été renvoyée a quatre jours. Avant hyer les Seigneurs furent assemblez jusques à sept heures du soir sans pouvoir finir tant l'affaire est delicate et bien briguée. My lord Carmarthen alla a demy malade au Parlement et se declara contre my lord Monmouth parce que my lord Lindzey son beau frere, et my lord Abindon prennent interest au bien confisqué. My lord Halifax se declara aussi contre luy mais my lord Rochester et my lord Godlfin, autres grosses cloches, se declarerent pour luy et les douze juges ayant donné leurs avis en sa faveur c'est un bon signe. Cinq ou six my lords que vous pouvez deviner m'ont dit que lors qu'ils opinerent ils opineront pour luy. J'ay dit cecy à la comtesse qui en a été bien-aise.

"L'affaire de la compagnie des Indes orientales à été debatue ce matin pour la sixieme fois sans pouvoir la finir. M^r Seymour veut qu'on la casse et M^r Clargez qu'on en reforme seulement les abus. Apparemment ce dernier sentiment l'emportera. C'est, dit on, l'avantage de la Compagnie Holandoise. M^r Chardin se remue plus qu'aucun autre interesse pour la conservation de l'ancienne compagnie.

"M^r de Ruigny sera neutralisé dans trois jours. Il aura un tiltre en Irlande où il etablira autant de reffugiez qu'il pourra."

"A Londres le 14^{er} Decembre 1691 Vendredy. Je vous ay entreteuu, Monsieur, par les precedens ordinaire sur les affaires du Parlement. On y examine les comptes des revenus publics avec assez d'exactitude pour tirer en longueur par la mauvaise intention de quelques membres qui se recrient sur certaines depenses necessaires et sur quelques pensions que le Roy donna au commencement de son regne à des membres-mêmes. Mais tout cela est peu de chose.

"La Comité pour le calcul de l'argent des troupes à réglé sur le même pied que l'année dernière. On dit que la depense des 73000 hommes montera à deux millions trois cens cinquante mille livres sterlins ou environ.

"La Chambre basse dit qu'elle ne peut aprouver généralement tous les articles de la capitulation de Limerik ainsi que la Chambre haute, nommement l'article qui regarde les professions des avocats papistes qui seroient capables de faire mille chicanes pour alterer le repos d'Irlande. On demande aux membres contraires si le General Ginckel a mal fait d'avoir tant accordé de privileges pour avoir la place. Ils repondent qu'il a tres-bien fait mais qu'il y a certaines choses contraires au gouvernement qu'on ne peut ratifier. On leur replique qu'on feroit un grand plaisir au Roy Louis 14 et au Roy Jaques si on vouloit remettre les affaires d'Irlande au point où elles estoient avant la capitulation de Limerik et qu'on y renverroient de bon cour les troupes qu'on a transportées en France &c.

"La Chambre haute en reglant la forme des procez qu'on pourra faire aux Seigneurs pour crime de haute trahison (ou ils seront tous appelez à l'avenir au lieu de 24 que le Roy choissoit) n'a pas trouvé à propos d'y comprendre les eveques de sorte qu'on ne les y appellera pas. Et s'ils sont accusez eux-mêmes ils seront jugez à l'ordinaire. On dit que ce reglement qui n'est pas encore achevé ne leur plait pas.

"Le chevalier Guillaume Temple qui a été pendant tant d'années ambassadeur en Hollande a fait imprimer depuis peu les memoires de ses negociations. Il dezabuze le public de la croyance qu'on a que c'est my lord Carmarthen qui fut le principal instrument sous le Roy Charles pour le mariage du Roy et de la Reyne. Cet auteur vient d'assurer que c'est luy qui fut employé à cela, et qu'il communiqua ce secret à my lord Carmarthen &c. L'auteur n'eparne pas la memoire de my lord Arlington, ce qui fache fort la belle duchesse de Grafton sa fille. On mettra en Hollande le livre en Francois. . . .

"Cette apres dinée la Chambre basse a fait une taxe sur les terres d'environ seize cens mille livres sterlins pour le subside de la flotte."

Part of date torn off, leaving, "8 x. 91." "Mes affaires vont mal touchant ma charge. Je voy à present la raison pourquoy le marchand ma caution ne me paye pas depuis six mois c'est que l'on a fait une caballe à la Jamaïque pour m'obliger à vendre ma charge à un petit prix en ne me donnant que la moitié du revenu ordinaire dont tous mes predecesseurs ont jouy. Quoy que j'ay passé un bail pour trois ans a raison de 300 pieces par an on ne la pas voulu ratifier à la Jamaïque et mes deputez ne m'offrent que 150 pieces pour m'y faire consentir où a vendre. My lord Inchiquin le Gouverneur m'a escrit en reponce que pendant la guerre ma charge ne pouvoit produire que peu de chose et qu'il me conseille de la vendre pour sept cens pieces. Je n'aurois jamais creu qu'il m'eut fait une proposition si deraisonnable apres la lettre obligeante que 38 luy ecrit en ma faveur. Il y a plus qu'un an et la reponce n'en vint que hyer. Je n'oze point parler qu'en passant et en deux mots sur mon interest à 38, et j'ay peur d'importuner le Roy si je luy dis ou fais dire l'état où je suis qui est pire qu'avant la charge parce que j'avois pension et que j'ay dépensé plus de cent pieces pour mes patentes. Avant que d'avoir une seconde reponce de my lord Inchiquin il faut plus d'un an et mon bail expirera et par consequent plus de deputez si je ne fais tout ce qu'on veut, une rente de 150 pieces où une rente de 700 pieces. L'un et l'autre me ruinent. Je ne puis me faire payer au duc d'Ormont mon debiteur. Voila mon etat, Dieu en soit loüe. Je sçay la part que vous y prenez par la bonte que vous avez pour moy."

"A Londres le 15 Decembre 1691. On n'a pas encor fait d'autre Taxes que celle dont Je vous ecrivis il y a quatre jours sur les terres d'environ seize cens cinquante mille pieces par un an et par mois. La Chambre basse s'est apliquée depuis à d'autres affaires commencées, notamment à pourvoir suffisamment de matelots la flotte et a passé le bill dour la biere pour un an, M^r Clargez a demandé l'exemption de l'excise en faveur des universitez d'Oxford et de Cambridge mais la Chambre a rejetté cette demande.

"My Lord Damby a fait une espee de retractation dans la Chambre des Seigneurs sur ce qu'il croyoit avoir ven une lettre de my Lord Nottingham parmy les papiers pris dans une barque Francoise, et a déclaré qu'il n'avoit rien à reprocher à ce Secretaire d'Etat de qui il a dit beaucoup de bien. De sorte que voila une affaire finie a l'avantage de l'un et à la confusion de l'autre . . .

"Quelques entrepreneurs ont proposé au Roy d'aller pescher les deux gallions d'Espagne qui ont fait naufrage en partant de l'Amerique.

"On attend chaque jour le General Ginckel qui sera bien receu.

"My Lord Durselay m'a avoué qu'il n'avoit pas donné sa voix a my Lord Monmouth comme je l'avois creu mais il opina que puis my lord Abingdon, sa partie indirecte, donnoit sa voix au procez que my lord Monmouth devoit donner la sienne, s'agissant de l'interest du Roy. Par ce moyen my lord Durselay se partagea entre ses deux amis.

"38 m'a dit que c'est my lord Nottingham a qui my lord Monmouth a le plus d'obligation pour le gain de son procez parce qu'il playda sa cause contre l'avis de deux habilles juges leur faisant voir par les loix bien expliquées que le bien dont est question estoit legitiment confisqué. Cela fit un tel effect que my lord Cornoualis qui estoit du coté contraire dit tout haut qu'il changeoit de sentiment apres une telle explication."

"A Londres le 21 Decembre 1691 Vendredy. Depuis deux jours on s'entretient fort ice sur une nouvelle decouverte d'une vieille conspiration. Un jeune homme nommé Fuller, prisonnier pour debtes demanda à parler à l'archeveque de Cantorbery de qui il est connu. Cet archeveque luy envoya son gendre qui est membre de la Chambre basse, a qui le prisonnier dit qu'il avoit de grands secrets à decouvrir touchant plusieurs traitres au Gouvernement. Sur le raport qui en fut fait à la Chambre elle fit amener Fuller qui delivra à l'Orateur quelques papiers et en suite il nomma quantité de Lords et de gentilhommes bien connus qui ont agy pour le retablissement du Roy Jaques, comme my Lord Halifax, my lord Middleton, my lord Ailesbury, my lord Feversham, le duc de Southampton, le duc de Northumbelland, my lord Scardel, my lord D'Arar, my lord Drummer, my lord Nieubourg, M^r Ogletorpe M^r Fenwick et autres. Et à l'égard d'un Lord qui est à present dans les grands emplois de l'etat et dans la confidence du Roy, c'est my lord Godolfin. Il assura que la regne Marie de Modene avoit fait avertir ses amis de s'adresser à luy pour tout ce qui regarde ses interets, etc. En suite il dit que si le Roy vouloit accorder la grace de deux hommes il offroit de les faire venir dans six semaines au Parlement pour temoigner ce qu'il avance et pour decouvrir les particularitez de la conspirations. L'Orateur demanda au membre qui avoit parlé en prison à Fuller s'il luy avoit confié les noms des deux hommes qui demandent grace. Il dit qu'ouy, et qu'il les nommeroit si la Chambre l'ordonnoit, mais qu'il croyoit à propos de differer encore. Ce qui fut trouvé bon, afin que les accusez n'eussent pas si tot connoissance de ces deux temoins. J'ay parlé à quelques-uns des accusez qui se moquent de cette vieille accusation, et qui comparent ce Fuller au faux temoign Oatz de qui il est amy et avec qui, disent ils, il a trouvé cette affaire pour tacher d'avoir une pension comme luy. On sçaura dans quelque temps de quelle maniere on agita en cette occasion qui ne paroît guere considerable. Cependant cela retarde des affaires plus pressantes . . .

"Le Roy a de longues conferences avec les commissaires de l'admirante et aussi avec ceux de la Tresorerie sous souvent qu'a l'ordinaire.

"On a chassé quelques eclesiastiques de l'université d'Oxford parce qu'ils ont refuse les nouveaux sermens.

"J'ay appris ce soir que my lord Dunferlin est arivée de Paris en Ecosse avec des armes, quelque argent et quelques officiers pour tacher de reveiller le reste du party abatu.

"A Londres les 25 Decembre 1691 Mardy. Je vay vous faire part d'une affaire qui vous surprend . . . comme je l'ay été lors que l'evêque de Salisbury me la racontée. Vous sçavez qu'il y a environs un mois que la Maison du Roy à Kinsington fut en partie brulée. Trois jours auparavant l'archeveque de Cantorbery avoit été averty par M^r Fuller (c'est le meme prisonnier qui a decouvert depuis peu une conspiration de plusieurs lords Jacobites) de donner avis à leurs Majestez de prendre garde à elles et que dans quelques jours on devoit former une entreprise contre leurs personnes. Il n'en dit pas davantage. L'archeveque sans.

chambre apres qu'on eut scu ce que c'estoit le Roy resolut d'aller en Carosse à Witchal à quatre ou cinq heures du matin, mais la Reyne l'en detourna sans luy dire ce qu'elle apprehendoit. Elle craignoit que si le feu avoit été mis à Kinsington c'estoit pour en faire sortir le Roy la nuit, et si quelque scelerat avoit été aposté pour hazarder un coup de mousquet à travers les hayes il auroit pû n'être pas decouvert. On peut tirer de ce fait de l'avis de M^r Fuller, que comme ses amis les Jacobites ne se defioient point de luy on avoit laché quelque mot en sa presence qui tendoit à une resolution de faire bientot une entreprise contre leurs majestez. Dieu veuille veiller toujours pour elles fut le premier qui offrit de quitter ses gros gages, M^r Lauder dit la meme chose mais les autres au nombre de plus de trente auroit bien voulu rejeter cette question qui passa pourtant. Cela incommodera quantité de gens qui ne sont guere riches que par leurs employs. Ce menage regarde les grands officiers de la couronne et de la maison Royale, les memes gentilhommes de la Chambre, les Commissaires de la Tresorerie, de l'admirauté, de la douane, de l'excise et quantité d'autres personnes meme de chez la Reyne.

"General Ginckel arriva hier au soir. Il fut deux heures avec le Roy, et demye heure avec la Reyne. On ne peut pas etre mieux receu qu'il l'a été. Il me semble que cela a du rapport à ce que le Roy dit à 23 lors qu'il partit d'icy. Ce matin au levé les seigneurs Anglois qui s'y sont rencontrés l'ont aussi fort caressé.

"My lord Nottingham est dans une grande affliction pour la mort de my lord Finch son fils aîné agé de dix ans et fort joly. Le fils de la seconde femme ny perdra rien."

"A Londres 2 Janvier 1693
23 Decembre 1692 Vendredy. Je con-

inue à vous entretenir sur les affaires du Parlement nommement sur celle du Comte de Nottingham qui a sujet d'être surpris, et ses amis aussi, de ce que la Chambre basse n'a pas plus favorablement examiné son gros different avec l'admiral Russell, et de ce qu'elle l'a pleinement justifié sans alleguer aucune raison d'une si prompte resolution qu'on a mis en quatre lignes au bas de l'écrit des seigneurs en le leur rendant dans une seconde conference. Lors que my lord Carnarthen qui y presidoit en fit le rapport succint, le duc de Somerset, qui ne parle guere, remarqua qu'il avoit oublié une circonstance qui est que la justification de l'admiral s'est faite unanimement dans toute la Chambre basse parce que fort peu de membres comme M^r Finch s'y sont opposés, ne s'y agissant pas de condamner la conduite de my lord Nottingham mais seulement de justifier celle de l'admiral à qui pourtant on ne demanda pas pourquoy apres la bataille il estoit revenu à L'Isle de Wit au lieu de changer de vaisseau et d'aller avec ceux qui n'estoient pas endommagés vers St Malo ou Brest comm'il avoit été resolu dans un conseil de guerre. On assure que ce manœuvre à L'Isle de Witt est le commencement du malheur apres le bonheur de la bataille qui n'a eu aucune suite. Cependant on n'a rien dit sur cela dans la Chambre basse, ny sur plusieurs autres faits. Le party des Wigs parmy les seigneurs se remue pour y faire rezoudre la meme conclusion en faveur de l'admiral, c'est qu'il a fait la dernière campagne avec fidelité, courage et bonne conduite. Le party des Torsy repliche qu'avant que d'en venir à une telle conclusion il faut avoir une conference libre entre les deux Chambres afin que chacun dise tout ce que bon luy semblera. Mais en attendant qu'on demande cette conference les membres de la Chambre disoient hier qu'elle n'est point obligée ny d'humeur de donner aucune raison de la resolution qu'elle a prise de justifier entierement l'admiral son membre, et que si les seigneurs ne veulent pas faire la meme chose qu'elle ne s'en met point en peine, et que cela n'empêchera pas qu'il ne commande encore la flotte s'il veut et que le Roy l'agréé sans plus recevoir des ordres contresignes par my lord Nottingham. Il semble qu'on pourroit les faire signer par un seconde secretaire d'etat. On a été plus avant M^r le Contrerolleur Warton a dit hautement en pleine Chambre en nommant expressement my lord Nottingham qu'il est à propos de faire incessamment une adresse au Roy pour le supplier de l'éloigner de sa personne et des affaires d'Etat. Les autres Wigs l'ont blâmé comm'ils avoient blâmé son frere d'avoir si tôt dit leur dessein parce que suivant les formes du Parlement il n'est pas encore temps de presenter cette adresse. On dit que M^r le Contrerolleur Warton pretend depuis longtemps à être secretaire d'etat quoy qu'on assure qu'il n'y seroit pas propre. Il est toujours amy intime de my lord Shrewsbury. Ils ne prennent pas le veritable chemin pour le ministere d'Etat. Le Chevalier Lauder Vice-chambellan ayant voulu faire l'eloge de my Lord Nottingham qui sert avec tant de fidelité et d'application d'abord l'admiral repliqua apres qu'il fut justifié qu'il le prioit d'alleguer l'exemple de quelque bon service qu'il eut rendu au Roy et à la nation. Quantité de petits services rendus avec zele et assiduité en valent un grand. M^r Trever, Soliciteur General, qui avoit opiné il y a quinze jours en faveur de my lord Nottingham avant qu'on l'eut nommé, a dit hautement qu'il en estoit fâché, qu'il changeoit de sentiment à present et se servit d'un mot outrageant comme si ce secretaire d'Etat uzoit d'artifice pour rendre l'admiral odieux. De sorte que vous verrez par ce petit detail qu'on attaque my lord Nottingham plus qu'auparavant dans la Chambre basse sans qu'on ayt encor allegué contre luy aucun crime punissable par les loix. Aussi n'en veut on pas à sa vie mais à sa charge. On voudroit bien qu'il la quitât volontairement. Le Roy le traite aussi bien que jamais.

"La chambre basse a resolu enfin qu'aucun membre ne pourra exercer aucune charge de la Cour apres le 2 Janvier prochain. Ceux en ont les garderont, mais si quelque membre en accepte apres ce petit delay il sera mis hors la Chambre et on donnera order de faire une autre election. M^r Lauder entr'autres s'est opposé à cela, disant que les seigneurs en seront bien aise et qu'ils accepteront les charges que le Roy a coutumé de donner aux communes.

"On leut hier et aujourd'hui deux bills pour partie du subside accordé, l'un de deux millions sterlins sur les terres, l'autre d'un million sterlin à fond perdu afin qu'apres avoir passé par les formes ordinaires ils soient prêts vers le commencement de l'année d'être passés en actes. On a commencé à examiner le reste du subside et l'on fait des taxes sur les Marchandises etrangeres par ordre alphabetique. On a mis une grosse taxe sur l'eau de vie.

"Aujourd'hui la Chambre basse s'est adjournée pour cinq jours à cause des fetes de Noel. On s'est divisé sur cela, car les jeunes membres demandoient sept jours pour avoir plus de temps à se divertir et ils ont perdu de 40 voix.

"La Chambre des Seigneurs n'a pas encor demandé la conference libre sur l'affaire de my lord Nottingham. Ils ont ordonné de chercher dans leurs registres des exemples de ce qui s'est pratiqué en semblables occasions. On n'y trouvera point."

9 Janvier 1693

"A Londres le 30 Decembre 92 Vendredy. Depuis trois jours que le Parlement à recommencé à travailler il ne s'y est rien passé de curieux pour le dehors. On a continué l'examen des affaires commencées comme celle de my lord Nottingham et de l'admiral Russell. Les personnes moderées voudroient bien à faire tomber mais l'animosité des autres l'empêche. Les Seigneurs ont enfin resolu apres un long debat qu'on demandera aujourd'hui une conference libre à la chambre basse si elle veut l'accorder, car un party s'y oppose.

"Le Duc de Norfolk recommença hier son affaire contre sa femme et son galand M^r Germain à la chambre des Seigneurs pour y faire recevoir un bill de separation et permission de se remarier. Un gros party se declare pour faire rejeter ce Bill et poue renvoyer ce procez à la Cour Ecclesiastique. Mais on n'eut pas hier le temps de vider cette question; l'on a renvoyé la decision à demain. L'on a remarqué que les Seigneurs qu'on soupçonne de coquage furent pour luy. S'il gagne ce ne sera que de peu de voix et par le nombre des eveques qui se font un point de conscience en parlant contre une femme adultere publique.

"La Chambre basse continue l'examen des circonstances du bill de deux millions de livres sterlins de taxe sur les terres. Le point difficile qui regarde la nomination des Commissaires pour la levée de l'argent n'est pas encore réglé. Si le Roy les vouloit choisir il gagneroit plus de trois cens milles livres sterlins mais il y auroit un grand nombre de mal contents. Comm'il ne peut pas bien conoitre toutes les personnes propres à cet employ il y a aparence qu'il les laissera choisir à la Chambre basse qui n'aura pas peu de peine à en convenir et à exclure partie des anciens Commissaires qui ont trompé, dit on.

"My lord Coninsby a receu des lettres d'Irlande qui portent que quatre armateurs François y ont fait naufrage et qu'on a fait 600 matelots prisonniers. Par le calcul qu'on a fait icy de ces sortes de prisonniers l'on trouve qu'on en a pris plus de douze cens plus que les François n'en ont pris sur les Anglois et Holandois, mais aussi l'on trouve que les François ont pris deux ou trois fois plus de navires marchands Anglois et Holandois.

"Je sçay qu'on s'applique si fort à mettre la flotte en état de sortir qu'en cas de besoin elle sera prete au commencement de Fevrier meme les plus gros vaisseaux.

"On a receu ce matin la bonne nouvelle de la levée du siege de Huy et de la bonne deffense de Rhinfelds. On a appris aussi qu'on a assiégé Furnes. Mais on assure que les François y echoüeront amoins qu'il ne gele. Ces nouvelles ont fort rejouï aujourd'hui les parlementaires, la plus-part de ceux qui parlent François les ont apprises par moy qui suis journelement a leurs anti-chambres.

"Une place de secretaire du Conseil etant vacante le Roy s'est souvenu de M^r Brichtman qui l'aura. My lord Portland en a parlé à sa Majesté auprez de qui vous avez commencé à le bien mettre. Il me l'a souvent dit avec des expressions de reconnaissance."

"A Londres le 13 Janvier 1693 Mardy. Les Seigneurs ayant demandé une conference libre a la Chambre basse sur l'affaire de my lord Nottingham et de l'admiral Russell, et ayant marque le jour et l'heure suivant leur privilege, la Chambre basse au lieu de l'accorder incontinent a fait reponce qu'elle enverroit des deputes aux Seigneurs pour leur faire sçavoir son intention. Mais depuis quatre jours elle ne les a pas envoyez et cela paroît extraordinaire, aussi, dit on, que le party de l'admiral ne veut point de conference libre, où chacun dit ce qu'il veut et où l'on pourroit examiner de nouveau et remettre en question contre luy ce qui a déjà été vuïd si vite puis qu'on l'a remercié de toute sa campagne derniere et qu'on a déclaré qu'il a agy avec fideleitè courage et bonne conduite. Il se peut faire que la chambre basse demandera aux seigneurs qu'ils marquent precisement sur quelle matiere nouvelle ils souhaitent une conference libre quoy que quantité de membres disent qu'il n'en faut point. Cela etant, my lord Nottingham ne pourra pas convaincre l'admiral par des preuves qu'il n'a pas fait aprez la bataille navale tout ce qu'il pouvoit. Ses amis continuent à dire qu'il ne veut plus commander la Flotte. Nota. Il y aura conference. . . .

"Il y a quatre jours que la Chambre des Seigneurs examina pendant six heures le bill de la Chambre basse pour empêcher qu'à l'avenir ses membres aprez leur election ne puissent accepter des charges à la cour. Les Seigneurs se divisèrent en deux partis. L'un au nombre de 33 opina pour rejeter ce bill et l'autre au nombre de 48 opina pour le renvoyer à un comité afin de le mieux examiner. Ce party quoy que le moins bon l'emporta à la pluralité sur l'autre qui avoit les principales têtes comme my lord Carmarthen, my lord Rochester, my lord Portland, my lord Nottingham, my lord Devencher qui souhaiteroient que l'usage des precedens regnes continuât et qu'on mit dans les charges tant d'honnêtes membres des Communes qui servent bien la patrie.

"Le Duc de Norfolk est si malheureux que nonobstant ses preuves d'adultere la Chamber des Seigneurs a rejeté son bill, et par consequent sa femme et son amant L'Holandois ont encor gagné le procez, sauf à faire des poursuites à la Cour Ecclesiastique ce qui est d'une longue discussion.

"Hyer au matin l'ambassadeur d'Espagne receut un exprez de Neuport qui porta quatre nouvelles. Le Siege de Rhinfelds levé; l'Electrice de Baviere morte; Furnes et Dixmunde entre les mains des François. La premiere nouvelle est capitale et donne icy une grande joye, quoy que l'on soit sensible aux trois pertes.

"Apres que j'ay eu écrit ce que dessus touchant la conference libre j'ay appris qu'aujourd'hui la Chambre basse a envoyé le Colonel Grenville aux Seigneurs pour leur dire qu'on leur accorderoit la conference, et on est convenu que ce sera demain. On m'a dit que les membres de la Chambre basse ne feront qu'écouter s'il y a quelque chose nouveau contre l'admiral et qu'avant que d'y répondre ils feront leur rapport en pleine chambre.

"L'affaire de la taxe de deux millions sterlins sur les terres est examinée chaque jour à cause de tant de formalitez necessaires et des exceptions. Par exemple hyer on exempta de cette taxe les Universitez d'Oxford et de Cambridge, et on regla une clauze pour emprunter. Cette principale affaire finira au premier jour à la Chambre basse et ne se journera guere à la haute."

"Ce soir les Seigneurs avant que d'avoir diné ont été assemblez jusques à neuf heures sur le bill cy dessus touchant les charges, et aprez mille contestations on l'a rejeté par deux voix seulement. Je viens de voir sortir de Westminster environ 80 Seigneurs, la moitié chagrins nommement mj lord Mulgrave, mj lord Monmouth et autres qui vouloient que la Cour ne donnât plus de charges aux membres de la chambre basse. L'autre moitié étoient bien joyeux, nommement mj lord Nottingham, mj lord Devencher, mj lord Portland, mj lord Durselaj et tant d'autres qui sont bien-aise qu'un tel bill soit rejeté. Il est si tard que je n'ai pas le temps de vous dire d'autres particularitez."

"A Londres le 16 Janvier 1693 Vendredy. Je vous ecrivis, Monsieur, il y a trois jours que la Chambre basse et plus de quarante seigneurs de la haute avoient perdu par deux voix seulement le bill tres important par lequel on vouloit empêcher qu'à l'avenir les membres des Communes n'eussent ny charges ny emplois de la Cour. Cette grande affaire nouvelle avoit partagé toute sorte de gens et quoy qu'il y ait eu du melange des partis l'on peut dire en general que les Wigs étoient pour le bill et les Torys contre. Ceux-cy qui ont gagné, la question par deux voix et encor par les procurations des absens, disoient, entr'autres choses, que ce bill sapoit le fondement de la monarchie et tendoit à une republique. Mais les Wigs le nient fortement disant que c'est l'interest du Roy de ne pas donner des charges à des membres qui n'agissent dans la chambre que par ce principe et que suivant cela ils sont pour où Contre la Cour comme M^r Seymour &c. Pendant cette seance de Parlement on ne parlera plus de cette affaire mais les Wigs disent déjà qu'ils la recommenceront à une autre seance puis qu'ils sont plus nombreux à la Chambre basse et egaux à la haute; que s'ils ont perdu par deux voix sur une centaine de seigneurs presens où qui avoient donné leurs procurations (sçachant la question) ils sont persuadez d'augmenter leur party une autre fois; que my Lord Shrewsbury n'a pas opiné, etant à la campagne, ny quelques autres; que la Cour a gagné trois Wigs du Conseil du Cabinet my lord Devencher, my lord Dorset et my lord Godolin, et a empêché que quelques autres n'ayent point opiné comme my lord Makesfields et l'Eveque de Salisbery, lequel aprez avoir harangué fortement il y a huit jours pour le bill ne s'est pas voulu rencontrer il y a trois jours à l'assemblée. J'ay eu occasion de l'en remercier en mon particulier et aussi my lord Makesfields. Leurs amis Wigs les grondent fortement. Vous voyez par là que c'est par hazard que l'on a rejeté ce fameux bill de party par deux voix seulement, et que sans huit procurations ou proxis comme on les nomme on perdoit. Le Comte d'Essex qui est malade avoit donné la sienne au Comte de Portland, son beaupere, et my lord Hatton la sienne à my lord Nottingham son gendre. Les principaux Wigs ont bien remarqué cela et m'en ont parlé avec chagrin. My lord Monmouth me jura la jour du debat que pour un million il ne changerait pas d'opinion. Quoy que my lord Halifax (qui continue à dire que vous avez renversé le gouvernement) et my lord Mulgrave, votre deffunt amy n'ayent jamais passé pour Wigs, ils se sont fortement joints avec eux en cette affaire de meme que les seigneurs Jacobites croyant de porter un coup contre la Cour. On remarque facilement que my lord Mulgrave quite ses plaisirs qu'il aime tant pour être journellement attaché aux affaires qu'il s'imagine pouvoir déplaire à la Cour, s'imaginant aussi par là d'obtenir quelque belle charge. Je luy ay dit qu'il se trompera assurément et je luy ay encor parlé de la Commission Ecclesiastique de mon chef car il a oublié cette grace. Si le bill avoit passé aux deux chambres on croit que le Roy auroit été porté à le rejeter suivant sa prerogative d'autant plus que le party pour ce bill n'en seroit pas demeuré là et auroit travaillé à faire sortir de la Chambre basse quatre vingts ou cent membres qui ont des charges ou des emplois, et cela auroit embarrassé toute sorte d'affaires du Gouvernement et changé un usage qui est depuis et avant la Reyne Elizabeth, J'ajoute à cet article du bill rejeté qu'environ 24 Seigneurs ont déjà protesté contre et memes le Prince George de Dannemark. C'est assez l'usage de ceux qui ont perdu leur cause de protester par écrit. Quatre Eveques seulement furent pour le Bill, sçavoir Rochester, Oxford, Exceter et S^t David. Ce dernier est fort Jacobite et peut être papiste dans l'ame.

“La Chambre des seigneurs et la Chambre basse eurent hier une conference sur l'affaire de my lord Nottingham et de l'Admiral Russell mais elle ne fut pas libre, c'est à dire qu'on ne parla presque point à cause que les deputes de la Chambre basse dirent qu'ils n'avoient point d'instructions ny ordre de parler mais seulement d'écouter et de faire rapport. Surquoy my lord Rochester qui avoit dit un mot pour l'union des deux maisons donna un écrit à M^r Grenville et on se separa incontinent. On ne sçait pas encore quelle sera la suite de cela.

“La nouvelle de my lord Coningsby que je vous ay écrit touchant quatre armateurs François echoïez en Irlande commence à paroître fort incertaine. Non seulement il n'y a point de confirmation mais de plus on n'en mande rien de l'endroit où l'on disoit que le naufrage est arrivé. Aussi la gazette de Londres de hyer n'a oûé en faire mention non plus que de ce qu'on a écrit de Portsmouth qu'on avoit arrêté deux vaisseaux de guerre Danois qui escortoient des navires marchands allant en France. L'on est sujet à recevoir souvent de fausses nouvelles des ports de mer où par des navires passagers.

“Aujourd'hui, jour des Roys, il y a de grandes rejouissances à Kinsington. On y passera la nuit à danser et à manger, non leur Majesté.

“La chambre basse nomma hier les Commissaires pour la levée des deux millions de livres sterlins sur les terres. Il y eut une division touchant l'un d'entr'eux. Les Wigs gagerent par 40 voix.

“On a donné avis à la Chambre basse que quelques-uns de ses comitez composez de quinze, vingt ou trente membres suffroient que les personnes interessées en certaines affaires qu'ils examinoient les regalassent en leur faisant bonne chere au cabaret, ce qui pouvoit les porter à leur être favorables. Surquoy elle a défendu à tous ses membres d'accepter aucuns repas dans des maison publiques pour obtenir leur appuy en des affaires que la Chambre examine.

“Il nous manque trois postes d'Holande qu'on attend avec beaucoup d'impatience car on apprehende pour Nieuport, où pour quelqu'autre place. Les Anglois crient fort contre le Comte d'Horne de n'avoir pas un peu défendu Fulnes.

“Il y a quatre jours que trois postes d'Holande arriverent en meme temps. Il en est arrivé aujourd'hui une autre. J'ay recen Monsieur la lettre que vous eutes la bonté de m'écrire le 13 que j'ay lue à l'amy froid qui vous assure de ses respects. Il a parlé et moy aussi à 38 pour le pouvoir gouverneur à qui il promet toujours de parler à le Roy de sorte qu'on n'ozeroit luy donner un memoire de six lignes puis que 38 fait esperer fort aimablement de parler, mais il a le don d'oublier.

“Il n'y a point de nouvelles au Parlement. L'on a achevé aujourd'hui la Chambre basse le bill de la Taxe de deux millions sterlins sur les terres, et on a approprié sept cens mille livres sterlins à la flotte. On avoit auparavant trouvé à propos pour conserver le credit de faire une clauze à ce bill pour changer la somme de sept cens cinquante mille livres sterlins empruntée l'année dernière sur l'acte du Poll par quartier et la mettre sur le bill de la taxe sur les terres. Cette affaire a duré jusques à ce soir à cause de plusieurs clauzes qu'on a mises au bill qui sera porté dans deux jours aux Seigneurs pour avoir leur concurrence. Ils le liront trois fois et en suite le Roy le passera bientôt en acte, apres quoy on trouvera de l'argent à emprunter. La Chambre basse va travailler à trouver les autres fonds pour le surplus des subsides accordez. On presse nonobstant les traverses de quelques membres accreditez de ne perdre point de temps pour finir les affaires puis que celles du dehors requierent que le Roy parte dans le mois prochain. J'ay dit à plusieurs de vos amis ce que vos m'écrivez sur cela.

“M^r le Pensionnaire a envoyé à 38 une lettre de Paris pour Lambert . . . à qui on envoie cent pistoles. Je n'espere plus que ces deux ministres d'état tirent aucun uzage de cette affaire si 23 ne le tire luy meme. Il y a trois ans que cela dure. Les ennemis n'y perdent rien puis qu'avec peu d'argent ils ont la connoissance des faits publics et nous n'avons pas la connoissance des leurs que long temps apres et d'une maniere peu exacte le plus souvent.”

“A Londres le 10 Avril 1693 Vendredy. Depuis cinq jours que le Roy est de retour de Harwich il a expédié beaucoup d'affaires et il est party ce matin pour Gravezinde avec un petit vent de nord dans le dessein d'aller par les marées. Comm'il n'a pris sa resolution qu'en se levant la plus-part des courtisans n'ont pas été avertis. Je n'ay vu que peu de monde à Kinsington et beaucoup en chemin.

“Le Duc d'Ormont a fait une petite escapade à l'égard du Roy et par un mauvais conseil, s'imaginant de réussir par une telle methode. Il est du nombres des pretendans au gouvernement de L'Isle de Wight. A son retour de Harwich il a prié sa Majesté de luy dire si elle avoit disposé de ce gouvernement. Elle repondit qu'oüy et non pour luy. Le Duc luy temoigna que puis qu'il n'avoit pu obtenir cette faveur il avoit dessein de quitter ses charges. Le Roy dit d'un air sérieux et de maitre qu'il avoit été amy de feu son pere et que par cette raison il ne le prenoit pas au mot, qu'il luy donnoit tout le jour pour mieux penser à ce qu'il avoit à faire et qu'il attendroit sa resolution. Le Duc sortit du Cabinet et je l'en vis sortir fort interdit. Il alla voir ses amis et il revint le meme jour demander pardon du Roy en presence de la Reyne à l'issüe de leur dîné et il est party aujourd'hui avec le Roy. Toute la ville estoit déjà remplie qu'il quitoit ses charges parce qu'il estoit mal traité. J'allay chez luy (où je vay fort souvent pour luy demander mon argent) et je luy parlay du bruit public. Il m'avoüa qu'il avoit fait quelque chose qui avoit depleu à sa majesté mais que cela estoit racommodé qu'il estoit fort content et qu'il avoit contenté leurs majestez &c. Je pris occasion de luy parler des mechans gens qui le conseillent. On assure que le principal est le Chevalier Harau Lieutenant Colonel au premier Regiment des gardes qui est Jacobite et hay des autres officiers. Il pilloit sur lux et sur les habits des soldats tout ce qu'il pouvoit. Le Duc de Schonberg y a remedié en luy otant plus de quinze cens pieces de vilains profits. Cet homme est perpetuellement aux oreilles du duc d'Ormont de meme que le Colonel Hales qui est cassé et qui est l'agent de my lord Marleboroug. Personne ne doute que ce ne soient la les auteurs de cette escapade. Il ne cognoissent pas encore le Roy s'ils croient de luy arracher des graces par une telle conduite.

“M^r Johnson secretaire d'état d'Ecosse y va dans trois jours avec les ordres du Roy pour assembler le Parlement et pour établir le duc d'Hamilton grand Commissaire. On croit qu'on y rezoudra d'avoir toujours sur pied un gros corps de troupes ou de milices pret à faire tout ce que le Roy voudra.

“My lord Bellemont, Tresorier de la Reyne a été oté de sa place mais il aura une pension.

“Il y a eu des raisons pour ne pas donner la charge de Procureur General à M^r Trever, Soliciteur General qui a quité et un fameux avocat Wig, nommé Ward, gendre de M^r Papillon a été nommé pour Procureur General.

“A Londres le 17 Novembre 1693 Mardy. Il y eut hier deux grands changemens dans la direction des principales affaires. Le matin my lord Nottingham rendit les sceaux au Roy pour sa charge de Secretaire d'état que sa majesté a trouvé à propos de luy oter, on parle diversement de la maniere. Quoy qu'il en soit le voila dechargé des affaires publiques au grand contentement du party des Wigs. Il n'entrera plus a conseil privé et il commença hier a soir à s'en abstenir.

“Dans le meme Conseil Le Roy, apres avoir entendu le rapport de l'affaire des trois Admiraux, declara M^r Russell pour seul admiral au grand contentement du meme party Whig.

“On croit que my lord Shrewsbury r'entrera dans la meme charge de secretaire d'état s'il le veut, qu'il vult bien quitter si mal à propos comme vous sçavez, la veille du depart du Roy pour L'Irlande il y a trois ans et demy. On a parle d'un Chevalier Jean Lander, Vice-Chambellan pour Secretaire d'Etat et Tory. Je le priay hier de me le dire. Il me repondit qu'il ne le seroit jamais, et qu'il aymeroit mieux être compagnon de son amy que son successeur. Il a toujours eu une liaison particuliere avec my lord Nottingham, et il pourroit bien quitter sa charge et le Conseil du Cabinet ainsi qu'autrefois il vult bien quitter la Tresorerie pour avoir moins d'affaires. Il est extraordinairement riche et a bien servy dans la Chambre basse. Les deux partis ont creance en luy. On parle de quelqu'autre changement parmy les Commissaires de l'admirauté et meme parmy ceux de la Tresorerie.

“La riche flotte marchande de Bilbao est arrivée à Plymouth au nombre de 33 navires valant plus d'un million sterlin, mais un des vaisseaux Holandois de convoi, nommé Alkmaer, de 50 pieces de canon a pery en arrivant. On a sauvé l'équipage.

"Le Roy a fait aujourd'hui l'ouverture du Parlement avec les ceremonies ordinaires, et immédiatement avant il a fait le garde-seaux baron du Royaume. La harangue de sa Majesté est courte et bonne. Je vous l'envoie traduite. La Chambre basse n'étant pas pleine s'est adjournée pour cinq jours après quelque débat sur ce terme trop long de deux jours.

"Le Duc de Leinster, qu'on ne nomme plus que duc de Schonberg a pris son rang à la Chambre des Seigneurs. J'ay assuré my lord Mulgrave que s'il attaque les étrangers, sur tout luy, comm'il attaqua son frere l'année dernière sur ce qu'il ne sçavoit pas l'Anglois qu'il trouvera à qui parler, et que celui-cy sçait la langue. Il m'a dit qu'il vouloit bien vivre avec luy, et qu'il fut fâché d'avoir rien dit contre son frere qui étoit un si honnête homme.

"On dit que le Chevalier Wheler qui est revenu de l'Amerique commandera l'escadre qui doit servir de convoi à la flotte marchande de Turquie. On travaille à la faire partir bien tôt.

"On conjecture que le Roy a dessein d'envoyer my lord Gallway en Piedmont succéder au feu duc de Schonberg au commandement de ses troupes. Il arriva icy avant hier."

"A Londres le 20 Novembre 1693 Vendredy. Je vous écris Monsieur il y a trois jours sur l'ouverture du Parlement et sur les changemens des Admiraux et d'un secretaire d'Etat. My Lord Shrewsbury n'a pas encor accepté de succéder à my lord Notingham, et on croit même que cela est rompu. Les memes raisons quoy que foibles qui luy firent quitter cette charge il y a trois ans et demy subsistent encore dans son esprit. Je l'entens blamer par de ses bons amis et l'on dit que le party des Wigs dont il est l'un des principaux en est bien fâché. On sçait bien certainement que my lord Notingham n'a pas quitté de son mouvement. Il en a reçu l'ordre mais d'une maniere douce. Il a dit nettement à ses amis que s'il avoit quitté volontairement il se fut par la déclaré coupable et eut témoigné d'aprehender l'examen de ses actions et de sa conduite à la veille d'un Parlement; qu'il a obéi à son maître qui a jugé nécessaire de luy ôter sa charge; qu'il souhaite que son successeur le serve aussi fidelement que luy et réussisse mieux; qu'il sera toujours prest de luy continuer ses services. En un mot il parle comm'il faut. Madame sa femme me parla hier par occasion en ce même sens. Elle reste dame d'honneur de la Reyne.

"M^r le Chevalier Trenchard pourra pendant quelque temps être seul secretaire d'Etat ainsi que my lord Notingham l'a été. Il a déjà changé d'appartement à Witehall ayant pris le premier suivant son droit de sorte que quiconque sera secretaire d'Etat il aura le second.

"Il y a des esprits speculatifs qui croient que le refus de my lord Shrewsbury est une finesse pour introduire my lord Sunderland (qui passe pour bon Wig) dans la charge de secretaire d'Etat, mais il n'y a point d'apparence. Il a trop d'ennemis au Parlement et parmi la nation pour re'entrer si tôt dans le ministere.

"La Chambre basse ayant réglé les Comitez pour les affaires de religion, pour le commerce, pour les griefs de la nation et autres à l'ordinaire, et s'étant adjournée pour quatre jours je n'ay rien à vous mander du Parlement. Ce sera Lundy prochain qu'on commencera l'examen de la harangue du Roy qui passe pour la meilleure qu'il ait fait depuis son regne, et qu'on ne peut pas bien traduire en François sans paraphrase. Les Wigs croient de faire bien tôt prendre une resolution conforme à la harangue quand même les Torys s'y opposeroient ouvertement. S'ils le faisoient ce seroit se déclarer amis des jacobites ainsi que leurs ennemis les en acuzent.

"On parle d'envoyer en Flandres cinq ou six regimens d'Infanterie Anglois et les trois regimens de François réfugiés qu'il faudra payer auparavant. On ne paye pas ni la subsistence depuis six semaines.

"Ce que je vous ay écrit touchant my lord Gallway est véritable quoy que cela ne soit encore connu qu'à tres-peu de personnes. Il se prepare en secret pour aller en Piedmont. Il sera fait Lieutenant general."

"A Londres le 21 Novembre 1693 Mardy. La Chambre basse commença hier l'examen de la matiere de la harangue du Roy quoy que plusieurs membres, nommement le Chevalier Christoffre Musgrave, qui est habillé Tory et qui passe pour Jacobite, témoignassent qu'avant toutes choses il falloit examiner l'état present de la nation et la mauvaise conduite par mer. On fit trois bonnes resolutions. On rezolut premierement et bien vite d'employer biens et vies pour soutenir le Gouvernement du Roy et de la Reyne tel qu'il est establi. Aucun membre n'osa s'y opposer crainte d'être puny. On rezolut en suite qu'après demain on examineroit quel subsi-il faut donner promptement pour mettre la flotte en état, l'admiral Russell ayant fait voir qu'elle manque de credit et qu'il y a une nécessité absolue de luy en donner en diligence. On rezolut en même temps que demain en grand comité on examinera les trois admiraux cassez, l'admirauté et les marchands interessez au commerce du Levant qui apporteraient leurs registres, leurs ordres, les resultats de leurs conseils et generalement toute sorte de preuves qui pourroient éclaircir ce qui s'est passé sur mer pendant la dernière campagne et les moyens de maintenir le commerce. En un mot la journée de hier contenta le bon party et déplait fort aux Jacobites et à leurs amis qui croyoient que d'entrée il y auroit de grands embarras aux affaires du Roy et qu'on perdroit beaucoup de temps à contester, mais tout cela ne dura pas deux heures. Je vis une vingtaine de Jacobites aux antichambres parlant aux membres de leur connoissance à mesure qu'ils entroient et à ceux qui sortent de moment à autre et qui nous disent ce qui s'y passe. Je les vis, dis-je, fort consterner lors qu'ils aprirent ces trois resolutions et la promptitude. J'écris cecy par avance avant qu'on imprime les vots et avant que de sçavoir ce qu'on aura fait aujourd'hui. Si je n'observois pas cette methode les jours de poste je n'aurois pas le temps d'écrire, ayant à faire plusieurs lettres, et je passe la journée au Parlement afin d'apprendre mieux ce qui s'y passe.

"Le bon homme opiniatre, le docteur Sandcrof, ancien archeveque de Cantorbéry depoussé par le Parlement est mort de vieillesse. . . .

"Aujourd'hui les Seigneurs se sont assemblez et se sont adjournés pour trois jours faute de matiere. Ils attendront d'apprendre ce qui se passera demain et après demain à la Chambre basse afin de mieux prendre leurs mesures dans leurs deliberations.

"Aujourd'hui dans la chambre basse on a renouvelé et luy quelques bills qui avoient été rejettés où refusés à la dernière seance comme le bill pour les parlemens triennaux et le bill pour empêcher à l'avenir que les membres n'acceptent point de charges. Lors qu'on en fera une seconde lecture on verra quel party sera le plus nombreux. Il n'a pas été nécessaire aujourd'hui d'en venir à la question sur ces deux bills ny sur quelques autres que chaque membre a droit de proposer.

"Le Duc de Richemont a pris aujourd'hui seance au parlement ayant atteint l'âge nécessaire de 21 an. Le Duc de Norfolk l'a introduit.

"A l'invitation de la lotterie de cent mille ecus qui vient d'être tirée à deux ecus par billet, on propose à la Chambre basse d'en faire faire une d'un million sterlin pour partie des subsides. Chaque billet sera de 50 pieces et celui qui perdra recevra l'interest de son argent à cinq pour cent pendant sa vie. Celui qui gagnera un bon billet sera riche puis qu'il aura un gros revenu de mille jusqu'à dix mille ecus. On travaille à mettre cette nouvelle proposition en état d'être examinée au parlement. Personne n'y sçauroit perdre."

"A Londres le 27 Novembre 1693 Vendredy. La Chambre basse rezolut hier de donner le subside nécessaire pour la flotte sans nommer la somme parce qu'on veut examiner auparavant la compte de l'argent qui fut donné pour la flotte la campagne dernière, et ce sera demain qu'on fixera la somme et en même temps on cherchera sur quel fonds il est à propos de la lever. Ce subside étoit l'année dernière d'environ dix neuf cens mille pieces. Il ne sera pas moindre pour l'année prochaine. Au contraire on croit qu'on l'augmentera sur tout si l'on augmente le nombre des vaisseaux comm' il y a apparence.

"Le Chevalier Thomas Clargé qui a toujours été contraire n'a pas encor eu occasion de rien faire sinon qu'il a en tête de faire rapeler une clause de l'acte qui défend tout commerce avec la France. C'est touchant l'eau de vie. Il souhaite qu'on laisse la liberté d'en faire venir.

"La Chambre basse a employé deux longues seances à examiner la mauvaise conduite par mer principalement on ce qui regarde la flotte marchande de Turquie et l'Escadre du Vice Admiral Roak qui luy servoit de convoi. On n'a pas encore achevé d'entendre les marchands ny la lecture des Registres et de tant d'ordres donnez soit par le Conseil, soit par les Commissaires de l'admirauté, soit par les admiraux cassez. Ces trois admiraux ont déjà passé deux fois quatres ou cinq heures à la porte de la chambre attendant qu'on les fasses entrer. Ils sont entrez ce soir. Ils paroissent fort mortifiés. Le public les va voir dans un petit cabinet pas plus grand qu'une chaloupe. Le Vice-Admiral Roak a fait le malade, dit on, pour mieux prendre ses mesures contre les fortes accezations des marchands, mais ce soir on la fait porter dans la chambre en cheze et on l'a entendu. J'en reviens a sept heures. On n'a pas encore diné.

"Le voyage de my lord Gallway en Piedmont est déclaré. Il sera Lieutenant General et envoyé extraordinaire afin de mieux négotier. Il prend M^r Bobereau pour son secrétaire qui conoit bien la Suisse depuis qu'il y a été avec M^r Cox. Il mene avec luy une douzaine d'officiers réfugiés. Il n'y va qu'a regret et par pure obéissance au Roy. Tous les réfugiés qui sont icy et dont il fait les affaires sont bien chagrins de son départ. Il partira bientôt et passera d'Holande en Flandres où est son equipage."

"Duplicata d'une lettre perdue. A Londres le 1 Decemb. 1693 Mardy. Sur ce qu'on prevenut que 27 Novemb.

Samedi dernier (jour ordonné pour fixer le subside pour la flotte) il y pourroit avoir des difficultez et des formalités qui retarderoient les premiers preparatifs maritimes si on s'exemptoit d'en faire jusques a ce que le gros subside fût entierement réglé. Sur cela l'admiral Russell trouva plus à propos, et d'autres aussi, de demander des a present un credit de deux ou trois cens mille pieces pour faire les premiers preparatifs avant que de fixer le subside et d'en établir le fonds. Sur cette proposition la Chambre basse tout d'une voix donnoit credit pour emprunter incessamment quatre cens mille pieces afin qu'on ne puisse pas s'excuser que faut d'argent on n'a rien fait, ce qui est une excuse assez ordinaire en ce pais, et on renvoya a quelques jours l'examen du subside entier. Cette maniere a agree a la cour, a la ville et a l'admiralte, cependant les Jacobites la tournent en mal.

"La Chambre basse ne se separa Vendredy au soir, jour de poste, que sur les neuf ou dix heures pour diner. Un gros party voulut finir la lecture des papiers touchant la mauvaise conduite de la flotte afin de former une conclusion generale si ou non il y avoit eu trahison. Ce mot parut choquant aux principaux Torys qui disoient qu'il falloit nommer et convaincre les traitres et les punir pour pouvoir estre bien assuré qu'il y a eu trahison et cela paroissoit assez a propos aux Torys bien intentionnez pour le gouvernement comme a my Lord Cornubery, M^r Goudrik, M^r Lauder, M^r Temple, et autres. Mais les Whigs ayant persisté à dire qu'il falloit avant toutes choses declarer en general qu'il y avoit eu trahison dans la conduite ainsi que le peuple le croit, on se divisa pour conter les voix quoy que plut de soixante membres fussent sortis ne pouvant plus soutenir la fatigue. Les Whigs gagnerent la question par 37 suffrages, 140 contre 103, au grand deplaisir des autres en egard a la consequence de la force des partis. Ils raillerent un peu sur cette nouveauté de declarer une trahison a la pluralité des voix sans nommer les traitres. Quelques membres Torys apprehendoient qu'après cette conclusion on ne tombât sur mi Lord Nottingham non obstant qu'il soit sans employ, parce qu'on dit que c'est luy qui a gouverné dans le temps qu'on a commencé la mauvaise conduite par mer et qui a choisi les Admiraux Kilgrew et de Laval. On a de grands soupçons contre eux et contre M^r Rook. Il y a meme un temoin contre ce dernier.

"Le Chevalier Thomas Clarges fameux Tory ayant voulu parler irregulierement contre un membre Whig de l'admirauté il fut attaqué par M^r Smith fameux Whig qui dit a la chambre en sa presence qu'il meritoit qu'on le mit a la barre et de la a la Tour si on n'avoit egard a sa grande vieillesse, et que s'il continuoient on avoit le moyen de le punir. Cette attaque le mortifia et aussi M^r Finch et M^r Musgrave deux autres fameux Torys qui sont ordinairement contraires a la Cour.

"Un membre modere prit son temps pour dire que si les deux partis de la chambre faisoient bien ils s'appliqueroient unanimement aux affaires du Roy et de la nation plutôt qu'aux intérêts particuliers des partis qui font perdre le temps en contestations et qu'on augmente les animosités au lieu de les finir. Cela fut asses bien recue, du moins on ne dit rien sur le champ qui y fût contraire.

"Hyer Lundy la chambre basse continua l'examen de la mauvaise conduite de la flotte et ne pouvant achever on renvoya a ce jourdhuy. My lord Falkeland premier Commissaire de l'admirauté qui de Tory est devenu Whig et ennemy des admiraux cassez fit une forte harangue contre leur conduite et meme contre les ministres d'etat Torys sans les nommer qui ont eu la direction des affaires pendant trois ou quatre ans et dont la negligence est cause qu'on n'a rien fait d'utile pour leurs Majestez et pour la nation; qui si l'on ne faisoit pas mieux a l'avenir ce seroit encore un argent perdu que celui des subsides qu'on va donner, mais qu'il y a tout sujet d'esperer que la conduite sera dorénavant meillure puis qu'on a changé de mains et que les nouveaux directeurs ne negligeront pas le bien de l'etat et ne favoriseront pas l'interet des Jacobites, prenant à temoin les membres des provinces éloignées si les Jacobites n'y sont pas devenus insolens depuis que quelques Seigneurs du gouvernement les favorisent &c. Un membre m'a assuré qu'il sçait qu'un ministre episcopal prechant depuis peu a comparé les Presbyteriens aux Jesuites et les a traités de brouillons d'Etat, et qu'on ne les punit point ainsi que les Eveques le devoient faire. Je n'ay pas de la peine a croire ce raport car chacun sçait que chaque party renferme des gens emportez et payez sans doute pour brouiller.

"Le bill pour les parlemens triennaux est poursuivy avec beaucoup d'assiduité comme necessaire pour contenter le peuple, et je voy de membres torys qui croient a present qu'on l'a un peu changé, qu'il n'est pas contraire a la prerogative Royale, ainsi qu'on l'a crû auparavant, non le chevalier dont vous avez veu l'ecrit qui a dessein demain de si opposer dans le grand Comité. Mi lord Mulgrave m'a protesté qu'il ne croit nullement ce bill contraire a la prerogative du Roy, mais que si sa Majesté a encore de la repugnance a le passer en acte qu'il est d'avis de ne pas l'achever. C'est luy et milord Halifax qui secondèrent le plus l'année dernière milord Shrewsbury lors qu'il commença ce bill a la maison des seigneurs. On l'a commencé cette année a la maison de Communes. . . .

"Le Chambre basse a ordonné que les Commissaires qui examinent depuis long temps les comptes des revenus publics luy porteront un etat de l'argent qui a été payé a des membres du Parlement pour de service secrets. Vous voyez par la qu'on souhaite que tout soit public. My lord Falkeland par ordre du Roy a donné à la Chambre un etat de la depense de la flotte pour l'année 1694 avec une liste des vaisseaux destinez pour la manche, pour la Mediterranée et pour les Indes Occidentales, l'examen en a été renvoyé au grand Comité qui doit s'appliquer a l'examen du subside pour la flotte qui sera dit on de deux millions trois cens quarante six mille livres sterlins suivant l'etat de la depense cy dessus. Vous jugerez par la que le nombre des vaisseaux sera augmenté considerablement.

"J'ay appris une autre circonstance de la harangue de my Lord Falkeland, c'est qu'il a loüé la conduite de milord Torington lors qu'il se laissa battre par les Francois, ou pour mieux dire lors qu'il laissa battre les Hollandois sans les secourir. Il dit qu'ayant sauvé la flotte il fut au hazard de perdre sa vie parce qu'un Secrétaire d'Etat estoit son ennemy. Il loüa ensuite la conduite de l'Admiral Russell a la bataille de l'année dernière mais que cela n'avoit point empêché le meme secrétaire de luy estre contraire afin qu'il ne commandât pas la flotte cette année. En un mot il dit tout de choses et si différentes qu'on a de la peine a comprendre quel a été son but si ce n'est de se faire des amis nouveaux pour se mieux soutenir dans son employ."

"Duplicata d'une lettre perdue. A Londres le 4 Decemb.

1693 Vendredy. Je vous ecrivis ample-ment par le precedent ordinaire sur les affaires du parlement. Voicy un nouvel exemple que les plus habiles gens se trompent quelque fois. Le vot de la Chambre basse pour donner credit de 400^m pieces pour les preparatifs de la flotte ayant été mieux examiné on a trouvé qu'il n'est pas bon comme on l'avoit crû d'abord parce qu'on n'a pas demandé le consentement de la maison des Seigneurs, et que c'est une nouvelle methode pour donner de l'argent qui est contre l'usage des parlemens. My lord Mulgrave m'a dit que s'il estoit d'humeur de brouiller comme l'année dernière ce seroit une matiere de division entre les deux chambres qui ne finiroit de long temps, et que les Jacobites l'y ont exhorté, mais il n'a pas voulu, et m'a prié de la dire a 38 ce que J'ay fait. La Chambre basse ayant donc appris qu'on ne vouloit avancer aucune somme sur ce credit travaillera demain a l'examen du subside entier pour la flotte, et c'est une affaire sans difficulté.

"Le Roy a donné a my lord Sydney la charge de Colonel du premier regiment des gardes qu'il a eu autrefois.

"Le Roy a donné au Comte Abingdon la charge de grand maitre des Eaux et Forets qui est bonne et belle. C'est un seigneur fort riche qui a du credit parmy les grands torys et les Ecclesiastiques. Il fût des premiers qui alla audevant du Roy il y a cinq ans lors de la revolution, mais en suite dans le Parlement il paroissoit un peu mal content.

"Les trois regimens de réfugiés et un Anglois de Tiffin ont commencé ce matin a s'embarquer a Greenwich pour passer en Flandres.

“ Le Roy a dessein d'adjourner pour quatre mois l'assemblée des ministres presbyteriens en Ecosse qui devoit commencer dans douze jours. On dit qu'ils pretendent d'avoir droit de s'assembler une fois l'année par acte de Parlement et on ne sçait pas encore ce qu'ils feront. Les Episcopaux apprehendent cette assemblée qui a déjà été adjournée.

“ La Chambre basse continue journellement d'examiner avec grand soin tout ce qui concerne la mauvaise conduite de la flotte l'été dernier pour tacher de découvrir les traitres puis qu'on a décidé qu'il y a eu trahison. On n'oublie rien pour y envelopper my lord Nottingham mais on sçait qu'il ne craint rien de côté là.

“ Aujourd'hui la Chambre basse a examiné le bill pour les Parlemens triennaux. L'on a retranché les clauzes facheuses qui le firent refuser la seance derniere et l'on a rezolu qu'il y auroit tous les trois ans un nouveau parlement par une nouvelle election de membres, et que le present Parlement ne pourroit continuer passé le mois de Septembre prochain, mais pour ce qui est d'une seance tous les ans et de la prorogation cela deppendra de la seule volonté du Roy. L'on a emporté cette derniere question d'une assemblée annuelle par une cinquantaine de voix. Je ne puis vous mander par cet ordinaire les reflexions qu'on fera sur cette affaire puis qu'on ne la rezolue que cette apres dinée. J'ay veu de bons courisans qui croyent que le Roy sera content de ce Bill en l'état qu'on la mis. Ce terme du mois de Septembre paroît un peu sensible. Mais le Roy peut casser le Parlement plutôt. Les partis ont été fort entremelez sur cette affaire.

“ Les Commissaires de l'admirauté ont fait voir aujourd'hui à la Chambre qu'il est deu à la flotte plus d'un million de livres sterlins pour les navires de transport.

“ L'on a rezolu que dans quatre jours on examinera la harangue du Roy touchant le subside des troupes par terre et leur augmentation.”

8 Decembre 1693 Mardy. La Chambre basse rezolut il y a quatre jours et tous d'une voix de donner deux millions et demy sterlin pour la flotte et pour partie des arrerages deus aux matelots. Les deux millions seront pour mettre la flotte en bon état l'année prochaine, et les cinq cens mille pieces sont pour les arrerages. Cette deliberation de plus de trente millions de florins fut faite dans moins d'une heure tant l'on a à cœur ce qui regarde la flotte. On n'a pas accordé 346 mille livres sterlin de plus suivant l'état d'augmentation donné par l'admirauté parce qu'on pretend qu'on a mis la depense sur un pied trop haut, et que deux millions sterlin sont suffisants. Mais si dans la suite on remarquoit que cela n'est pas il n'y a pas lieu de douter que la Chambre basse ne supleat au deffaut.

“ Il y a trois jours que les 12 fregattes et les quatre galiottes sont de retour de l'expédition de St^e Malo ainsi que vous en verrez la relation dans la gazette cy jointe aqoy l'on ajoute que le principal est qu'on a appris le chemin pour y retourner et que l'attaque n'en est pas impossible comme on le disoit l'année derniere lors qu'on ne voulut pas y aller suivre les 22 vaisseaux de guerre qui s'y refugierent apres la bataille que les François perdirent. On dit aussi que si l'on avoit eu davantage de bombes on auroit achevé de bruler la ville qui est des plus combustibles, n'étant batie que de bois.

“ Aujourd'hui la Chambre basse a defeat ce qu'elle avoit fait il y a huit jours, ayant rejeté par dix voix sur environ 300 le fameux bill des parlemens triennaux, non obstant qu'il fut si changé que la prerogative Royale n'étoit pas intéressé. On a voulu y ajouter une clauze que j'ay veu rejeter à la pluralité des voix. En suite le meme party, composé des deux, a mis en question s'il falloit rejeter le bill ou l'envoyer aux Seigneurs, sur quoy la chambre s'étant divisée j'ay aussi veu que le party de la rejection la emporté par dix ou douze voix. Cela a surpris un chacun. J'ay ouï dire a Mr Grenville que luy meme a opiné pour rejeter le Bill parce qu'il n'étoit pas bon pour le public puis qu'il n'étoit pas conforme à celui de l'année derniere. On croit qu'on tachera de faire recommencer ce meme bill dans la maison des Seigneurs, mais en ce cas l'onp eut dire par avance que lors qu'on l'envoyera à la Chambre basse on le fera rejeter de nouveau pour cette seance s'il est contraire à la prerogative Royale.

“ La Chambre basse a commencé aujourd'hui la grande affaire du subside pour les troupes, l'on a renvoyé à quatre jours la decision suivant l'usage ordinaire. On ne doute pas que le tout n'aille bien quoyque Mr Le Chevalier Thomas Clargez ayt harangué l'envoy de tant de troupes en Flandres. On luy a repondu qu'il n'étoit pas encore temps d'haranguer sur cette matiere, et qu'il faut attendre à Samedi dans le Grand Comité. Il a aussi dit que c'est aux Holandois seuls a defendre la Flandres Espagnolle, at qu'ils le peuvent s'ils le veulent.

“ Trois postes d'Holande sont arrivées ce matin et l'on a appris la bonne nouvelle de Piedmont que les François n'y prendront pas leurs quartiers d'hyver &c. J'ay été à Westminster faire part le premier de cette bonne nouvelle à plus de vingt Seigneurs et a plus de trente Membres des Communes qui prenent beaucoup de part aux interets du duc de Savoye. Je l'ay meme dite à quelques membres contraires, comme Mr Clargez.

“ Hyer dans la continuation de l'examen de l'affaire de la mauvaise conduite de la grande flotte, on mit en question si elle avoit assez de vivres pour mettre la flotte marchande de Turquie et l'escadre de Mr Rook hors de danger des François en la convoyant jusques en Portugal au lieu de la separer assez proche de la manche. Un party disoit ouï, l'autre non, les uns voulant par là condamner les amiraux et les autres les excuser. Surquoy la Chambre s'étant divisée on decida à la pluralité des voix et par 25 sur environ 350, qu'il y avoit assez de vivres, nommement de la biere, car c'étoit ce que les amiraux nioient le plus. Il y en avoit pour 40 jours, et dans un besoin on la pent menager pour autant. Avec cela on pouvoit aller bien loin vers l'Espagne si l'on avoit des ordres. C'est ce qu'on examinera demain.

“ Le Roy a donné au Duc de St. Albans la charge de Cap^{te} des gentilhommes Pensionnaires.

“ L'on parle fort que my lord Brigwater sera Secrétaire d'Etat.”

“ A Londres le 11 Decembre 1693 Vendredy. Avant hyer la Chambre basse ne se separa pour dîner qu'à dix heures du soir tant les deux partis avoient envie de faire quelque decision importante sur une circonstance de la mauvaise conduite de la flotte. Apres avoir examiné un témoin nommé Rutten on le confronta aux trois Amiraux cassez. Il affirma de nouveau par serment que revenant de France pour des échanges de prisonniers il les avertit qu'il avoit veu partie de la flotte de France sortant de Brest le 16 May dernier, surquoy on tiroit une consequence judicieuse c'est que les Amiraux ne devoient pas separer Mr Rook et la flotte marchande de Turquie jusques à ce qu'on scent bien certainement l'endroit ou la flotte de France étoit si ce n'est qu'on eut dessein de l'exposer au danger qu'elle rencontrera peu de jours apres cette separation. . . . Apres donc qu'on eut continué l'examen de cet avis du témoin Rutten et que d'autres temoins eurent témoigné contre luy, on mit en question si son témoignage étoit suffisant pour condamner les amiraux. Surquoy la Chambre s'étant divisée les Torys (melez avec quelques Wigs) qui étoient pour les Amiraux gagnerent en leur faveur par 9 voix sur 331. S'ils avoient perdu cette question ils courroient risque d'aller sur le champ à la Tour et les commissaires de l'admirauté triomphoient. Vous jugerez de plus en plus par là de l'égalité des partis comme l'année derniere, Tantot l'un gagne tantot l'autre. C'est la principale raison pourquoy les Wigs souhaitent un nouveau Parlement croyant d'être plus forts dans les elections qui se feront dans les provinces.

“ Hyer la Chambre basse considera sur quels fonds on leveroit le subside pour la flotte de deux millions et demy livres. Les membres contraires et qui ne pensent qu'aux affaires de la guerre par mer vouloient qu'on mit le subside entier sur les terres qui est la meilleure fonds pour avoir promptement de l'argent et qu'on l'appropriât à la flotte, leur but étant d'empêcher par ce moyen qu'on n'en trouvât pas facilement pour les troupes par terre. Mais le bon party qui pense a tout s'opposa à ce qu'on ne mit pas plus d'un million sterlin sur les terres pour la flotte, et l'emporta de plus de cent voix. On fit voir que si les deux millions sterlins qu'on levera sur les terres n'étoient destinez que pour la flotte, les marchands et les bourgeois n'avanceroient leur argent que sur ce fonds ou d'ailleurs qu'on n'en avanceroient point sur d'autres fonds qu'apres que celui-là seroit remply, de sorte qu'on seroit long temps avant que de trouver de l'argent pour les troupes par terre qui se ruineroient en attendant. Le party contraire ne sceut faire aucune reponce solide à ce raisonnement, et l'on ferma la bouche aux harangueurs comme Mr Clargez et Musgrave.

“ Aujourd'hui la Chambre des seigneurs a commencé à travailler à des affaires publiques et on a recommencé le fameux bill pour les parlemens triennaux. C'est meme my lord Montmouth qui l'a porté et sur le pied de l'année dernière lors que my lord Shrewsbury s'en mêla. C'est par concert avec plusieurs membres de la Chambre basse. On s'étonne qu'un premier gentilhomme de la Chambre se soit chargé d'un bill rejeté par deux fois. Il m'a dit que ce bill sera corrigé et qu'on se débatera bien tôt sur ce sujet.

"A Londres le 13 Decembre Mardy. My lord Gallway partira après demain pour Hollande et de là en Piedmont. Il croit de passer à Bruxelles. Il se seroit volontiers chargé de votre perruque si elle étoit achevée. Ce ne sera que dans huit ou dix jours à ce que ma dit M^r Ireton. Pour lors le Comte Marton partira pour Flandres et je l'en chargeray. My lord Gallway a trois emplois Lieutenant General, Colonel du Regiment d'infanterie que le feu duc de Schomberg avoit en Piedmont et envoyé extraordinaire du Roy auprès du duc de Savoye. Le pauvre M^r Agliomby qui étoit destinée à ce dernier employ sera bien surpris lors qu'il apprendra sa revocation avant que d'avoir commencé sa fonction. Le Roy luy en destine une semblable quelque part en Allemagne. Il a été obligé de Minorque d'aller à Barcelonne pour chercher l'occasion de passer à Genes où apparemment il arrivera bientôt et à Turin. Il m'a écrit de Barcelonne les malheurs qu'il a essayez depuis son depart de Madrid.

"Samedy dernier la chambre basse rezolut tout d'une voix de donner un subside pour les troupes par terre et chargea my lord Renala de demander au Roy un état de la depense et de l'augmentation qu'il juge necessaire. On le doit donner aujourd'hui. J'en feray mention à la fin de cette lettre que je commence avant que d'aller passer la journée à Parlement. J'ay eu depuis peu de frequentes conversations avec quelques membres sur les affaires d'Holande, nommement avec M^r Wliamson qui a été Secrétaire d'état et qui n'est pas trop bien intentionné. Il est fort contraire de meme que M^{rs} Clargez, Finch et Musgrave, à l'envoye de tant de troupes angloises en Flandres. Il ma dit que L'Ang^{re} est la dupe des Holandois que ne font pas assez ny par mer ny par terre et qui pourroient seuls, s'ils vouloient, defendre le reste des pais bas Espagnols; que l'on demandera au Roy qu'il communique à la chambre le traité qu'il a fait avec eux pour voir quel nombre de troupes il est obligé de fournir; qu'il faut fournir ce nombre et non davantage; que le Roy ne concerta avec aucun Ministre Anglois ses projets pour Flandres, mais seulement avec les Holandois; que jamais aucun Roy d'ang^{re} n'en a uzé ainsi &c. Il me semble que je luy ay répondu assez précisément à toutes ces choses et à d'autres membres semblables qui raisonnent de meme quoy que non si methodiquement que luy. S'il avoit une charge il changeroit de sentiment. Il n'y en a pas assez pour tous.

"Le bill touchant les charges qui fut rejetée l'année dernière a été renouvelé à la Chambre basse. Elle ne veut pas par pluralité qu'aucun de ses membres après son election puisse posséder aucune charge donnée par la Cour. Ceux qui en ont les garderont. On a gagné ce point. Il sera meme permis aux villes et bourgs d'élire pour membre un homme qui a une charge, mais il ne luy sera pas permis d'en accepter après son election. Vous voyez par là que le bill est corrigé. Il a passé à la Chambre basse, et on le porta hier à la maison des seigneurs.

"Les Seigneurs en grande nombre et en grande Comité eurent hier un long debat de cinq heures sur le fameux bill des Parlemens triennaux renouvelé par my lord Montmouth à la place de my lord Shrewsbury qui a pris le party d'aller à la campagne. On mit premierement en question s'il y auroit une seance tous les ans. My lord Nottingham harangua contre de meme que l'Eveque de Worcester, c'est le fameux Stelfleet, et aussi my lord Mulgrave (qui n'agit pas comme l'année dernière), mais non obstant tout cela il fut rezolu à la pluralité 58 contre 34 que le Parlement sera assemblée tous les ans declarant que c'est suivant les anciennes loix. Dans une autre circonstance sur le mot tenir un Parlement ou assembler un Parlement le bon party perdit par une voix. On pretend que tenir signifie passer un a cet. On achevera demain l'examen de tout ce bill. L'archeveque de Cantorbery fut pour la premiere question du bill, tant luy et d'autres bien intentionnez sont d'opinion qu'il n'est pas contraire à la prerogative Royale et qu'ils et conforme aux anciennes loix. L'Eveque de St. David, qui est Jacobite, fut aussi pour le bill, mais tous les autres Eveques furent contre. Il y a lieu de croire que le Chambre basse le rejettera encore. Quoy qu'on sçache qu'en ce pais les choses changent d'un jour à l'autre comme le vent, il ne faut pas s'en étonner de la maniere qu'on opine parmy quatre ou cinq cens tetes.

"Le Bill de la Chambre basse pour retablir le commerce deffendu d'eau de vie étrangere et du lard a été porté à la Chambre des Seigneurs pour y consentir. On a changé dans ce Bill quelques termes de M^r Clargez qui faisoient croire qu'on vouloit renouer ce commerce avec la France, et on l'expliqua d'une maniere qu'il n'y a qu'elle d'exceptée.

"Il y a un grand procez commencé entre la belle Duchesse de Grafton et my lord Chef de Justice dont les mal intentionnez se servent pour tacher de former une brouillerie entre des deux chambres touchant leurs privileges. Il s'agit d'une patente du Roy Charles Second qui donna sous le nom de M^r Brichman une charge de Greffier au feu duc de Grafton son fils qui vaud trois ou quatre mille pieces de rent. Le Chef de Justice pretend que cette charge a toujours depuis un siecle été dependante de sa charge. Il a gagné son procez parmy des jurez et trois juges ses collegues. Il y a appel à la chambre des Seigneurs, mais il est survenu un incident qui donne occasion au chef de Justice de dire que c'est une affaire originelle et que les Seigneurs ne peuvent ny ne doivent en conoitre sans faire prejudice au droit du peuple representé dans la chambre des Communes. On doit bien tot examiner cette affaire plus à fonds. Sur le premier examen il y a eu une division parmy les seigneurs 43 contre 28 qui n'a pas été favorable aux trois juges car on a été sur le point de les envoyer à la Tour en discutant cet incident dont ils se sont retractez. My lord Nottingham s'est déclaré pour eux et my lord Rochester contre. Après que l'on aura entendu les avocats l'on en sçaura davantage."

"Deux auteurs, l'un Anglois et l'autre François ont fait deux livrets en Anglois pour prouver par de forts arguments que la presente guerre est avantageuse à l'Angleterre et qu'a present il y a plus d'argent dans le royaume qu'il n'y en avoit avant la guerre. On traduira sans doute ces livres en Holande.

"L'on a porté aujourd'hui à la chambre basse de la part du Roy l'état d'augmentation des troupes par terre qui est de 25000 hommes, sçavoir 19000 fantassins, 4000 chevaux et 2000 dragons. Le Duc de Schomberg ma dit qu'il avoit proposé au Roy de demander jusques a 28000 hommes d'augmentation pour pouvoir esperer d'être egaux à la France en nombre de troupes. M^r Clargez et M^r Musgrave voyant aujourd'hui l'état d'augmentation de 36 regimens ont dit qu'il étoit necessaire avant que de rien rezoudre de demander au Roy quelles sont les augmentations des forces de ses allies afin de n'en faire qu'a proportion. Ils ont fort exagéré la depense de cette augmentation qui étant jointe avec l'ancienne depense pour les soixante dix mille hommes montent ensemble à plus de deux millions huit cens mille livres sterlins par terre, outre la depense de deux millions pour la flotte sans les arrerages des matelots et le gouvernement civil, le tout ensemble montant à plus de six millions sterlins qu'il faudra lever l'année prochaine sans compter les debtes. On dit qu'on aura assez de peine à trouver assez de bons fonds si l'on n'établit pour un temps une excise generale, mais l'on paroît y être si opozé qu'encore aujourd'hui le Chevalier Musgrave a dit par avance que si on établisoit une excise generale, adieu la liberté de la nation et la necessité des Parlemens &c."

"A Londres le 15 Decembre 1693 Vendredy. Avant hier les trois Admiraux cassez furent de nouveau examinez dans la Chambre basse qui ne se separa pour diner qu'à dix heures du soir. On les accusoit d'une espece de trahison de n'avoir pas envoyé à Brest pour sçavoir où étoit la flotte de France avant que de separer M^r Rook avec l'escadre et la flotte Marchande du detroit, surquoy on harangua pour et contre. On agita en suite la question s'ils étoient coupables d'avoir manqué en cela à la confiance qui avoit été mise en eux. Ils gagnerent par 12 voix seulement sur 36 au grand déplaisir des Wigs qui ont déjà perdu deux batailles contre les Torys sur l'affaire des admiraux. Il est vray qu'il y a quelque melange de membres par des raisons et des inclinations particulieres. Les Torys offrent une troisieme bataille aux Wigs s'ils ont encore quelque accusation de trahison contre les Admiraux. Si on ne les avoit accusez que d'ignorance et de negligence en des choses importantes qui dependoient d'eux chaque membre des Communes en seroit convenu et qu'ils meritoient d'être punis autrement que par la mort. Mais comme la trahison merite la mort et qu'il n'y a point de preuves de trahison, la pluralité de quelques voix a été pour les en absoudre. On dit à present en plusieurs endroits que n'y ayant point de trahison prouvée du coté des trois admiraux ny du Vice-admiral Rook, il faut rechercher s'il y en a du coté des Cinq Commissaires de l'Admirauté où du côté des Ministres du Cabinet qui ont donné les principaux ordres à la flotte. My lord Renala entendait souvent parler my lord Faulkland en pleine chambre contre les admiraux par terre, car on appelle ainsi les cinq commissaires de l'Admirauté dont my lord Faulkland est le premier et a qui l'on a reproché de n'avoir jamais été sur mer. L'Admiral Russell ayant demandé en particulier sur le champ à son amy my lord Renala pourquoi il travaille à justifier les trois admiraux cassez il luy a répondu plaisamment que dans un an il fera la même chose pour luy, ajoutant qu'un des partis ne manquera pas de l'attaquer à son tour à la fin de la Campagne prochaine.

"My lord Faulkland qui a si souvent harangué contre les admiraux cassez afin qu'on les envoyât à la Tour fut hyer sur le point d'y être envoyé par ordre de la Chambre basse sur une affaire particuliere. Je le vis à la porte pendant deux heures dans une grande inquietude. Plusieurs des membres qui sortoient me disoient qu'il y seroit envoyé, mais l'admiral Russell s'étant déclaré pour luy on le sauva dans la division par 30 voix sur 300. Le party qui sortoit dans une antichambre étoit contre luy et il me demandoit s'il y en avoit beaucoup, car il n'osoit pas se montrer. Je luy disois que non pour le consoler. En effet une demy quart d'heure apres on scut qu'il avoit gagné sa liberté. Ils'agissoit au fonds d'avoir reçu quatre mille pieces à l'Admirauté dont les commissaires des comptes des revenus publics demandoient raison à un commis nommé Rainford à qui il avoit donné ordre d'en payer deux mille à M^r Ken, luy marquant que c'étoit pour le service du Roy et pour une affaire secrette dont il ne faisoit point parler. Ce commis ayant été obligé de rendre compte parla de cet article. Sur cela my lord Faulkland luy alla redemander la lettre qu'il luy avoit écrit. Voilà la faute. Car le commis ayant peur de la Chambre basse luy déclara la vérité et que my lord Faulkland avoit retiré sa lettre. C'est sur cela qu'on le vouloit envoyer à la Tour et on l'a seulement réprimandé. Vous connoissez M^r Ken qui est l'huissier du Cabinet du Roy. La chambre basse fut d'avis de le faire venir pour sçavoir à quoy étoient destinées ces deux mille pieces reçues par une voye extraordinaire. My lord Colchester representa que M^r Ken est un Holandois qui n'entend pas l'Anglois et que sa presence ne pourroit pas éclaircir cette petite affaire. On en demeura là. Un autre membre ayant dit mal à propos qu'il étoit malade il se peut faire qu'on luy enverra un des Commissaires des Comptes publics pour avoir quelque éclaircissement parce que les membres disent que si c'est pour des affaires secrettes du Roy c'est à my lord Portland qui a la bourse privée à payer, qu'il est autorisé par acte de Parlement et non d'autres. J'aprehende que ce trop long détail vous ennuye. C'étoit la matiere de hyer qui empecha la Chambre de travailler à des affaires plus importantes.

"Il y a trois jours que la Chambre basse fit presenter une adresse du Roy pour luy demander la Communication des nouveaux traités avec ses allies pour voir quelle augmentation de Troupes ils feront la Campagne prochaine. On sçait que les Etats Generaux font tout ce qui leurs est possible car il ne s'agit plus de la proposition des troupes par traitez. Il s'agit de faire une vigoureuse guerre et d'employer toutes les siennes qui ont toujours été en plus grand nombre que celles des allies. C'est à eux tous d'en avoir davantage lors qu'ils le peuvent. L'Angleterre le peut facilement, et elle est bien heureuse de ne pas payer les taxes à proportion des autres allies qui payent beaucoup de leur capital et qui engagent leurs domaines au lieu qu'icy on ne paye pas le quart du revenu. Pour peut qu'on se voulut retrancher des dépenses inutiles en temps de guerre on la soutiendrait sans s'en apercevoir. On a occasion de dire souvent ces choses.

"Un des fonds qu'on propose pour lever partie de l'argent necessaire est une lotterie d'un million sterlin ou il y aura cent mille billets à dix pieces le billet. Il n'y en aura que deux mille cinq cens de bons. Tous les mauvais produiroient une rente de dix pour cent pendant quinze ans, de sorte que personne ne perdra rien à cette Lotterie et on peut s'y enrichir puis qu'il y aura des billets depuis dix pieces jusques à mille de revenu.

"La Chambre basse a rezolu un bill pour faire venir par terre jusques en Holande des soyes fines travaillées d'Italie, de Sicile et de Naples.

"La Chambre des Seigneurs examina encor avant hyer le bill des Parlemens triennaux qui passa apres quatre heures de contestations, et on renvoya à aujourd'hui pour le lire pour la troisième fois avant que de l'envoyer à la chambre basse. On la donc lu et on s'est divizé sur une clauze qui y a été ajoutée par le bon party pour expliquer le mot equivoque tenir un parlement afin de conserver la prerogative Royale. Ce bon party a emporté la question de 20 voix sur 100 au grand deplaisir de my lord Monmouth et autres, et du Lord Riche qui ma dit avec chagrin en sortant qu'il croit que la Chambre basse rejettera cette clauze qui rend le bill inutile au but qu'on se propose. Je luy ay dit tant mieux de ce qu'il est mal satisfait de ce qui s'est passé aujourd'hui et je l'ay assuré que la chambre basse ne sera pas de l'avis qu'il s' imagine.

"Elle a rezolu aujourd'hui de remplacer 412 mille pieces qui ont manqué sur le million sterlin a fond perdu et sur la remission de l'impost par tete et de mettre cette somme sur le même acte à fond perdu en prolongeant le terme expiré et en ajoutant encor quelque clauze plus favorable pour inciter les gens à y porter cette somme destinée pour la flotte."

"A Londres le 2² Decembre 1693 Mardy. L'on a eu avis icy qu'un paquebot party d'Harwich il y a douze jours et qui portoit les lettres de deux ordinaires a été pris par le François. C'est la cause que je vous envoie un duplicata des deux lettres que je vous écris le p^r et le 4 de ce mois nouveau stil.* Vous pouvez les lire à votre loisir.

"Les François ont aussi pris deux fregattes Angloises qui servoient de convoi à plusieurs navires marchands revenant de la mer Baltique et de Gottembourg dont quelques-uns ont aussi été pris. Tout cela donne lieu à crier et c'est avec fondement, les Anglois et les Holandois ne sont pas maitres de la mer sur leurs propres cotes. Les seuls armateurs de Dunquerque traversent leur commerce.

"My lord Gallway a demuré plusieurs jours dans la Tamise par la faute, dit on, du commandant du convoi de Rotterdam qui pour quelque petit profit attend les navires marchands au dela du terme qu'il doit. C'est aussi l'interest du maitre du paquebot qui est cause que les ennemis l'ont pris parce qu'il se charge de marchandises. Ils en sont avertis et ils l'attendent au passage, dailleurs en attendant les marchandises il ne part pas regulierement de Harwich lors que les lettres de Londres y arrivent.

"Il y a cinq jours que le vent étant à l'est le Vice-admiral Wheler fit voile de Portsmouth avec la flotte de vaisseaux de guerre et de navires marchands pour la Mediterranée mais le vent ayant changé le soir il revint mouiller à la pointe S^te Helene à L'Isle de Wight. Cela veut dire qu'il ne tient plus qu'un vent qu'enfin cette flotte ne parte.

"On remarque que le party des Wigs souhaiteroit que le Roy se declarât encor plus en leur faveur qu'il n'a fait et qu'il fit trois choses. La premiere de changer la plus part des juges de paix dans tout le Royaume parce qu'ils sont Jacobites. La second qu'il reforme par la même raison la l'utenance de la ville de Londres, et la troisieme qu'il nomme un second Secretaire d'Etat du même party. On a fort parlé de my lord Brigwater qui est Wig moderé et honnete homme mais il n'entend point la langue Francoise si necessaire à un secretaire d'etat et il n'a jamais été occupé aux affaires etrangeres. Il y peut avoir encor d'autres raisons qu'on ne dit pas.

"La Chambre des Seigneurs a rezolu d'examiner à son tour la mauvaise conduite de la flotte et les trois admiraux cassez. Le Comte d'Oxford en fit hyer la proposition, et il se peut faire qu'en prenant une autre voye que celle de trahison qu'on pourra avoir des preuves d'ignorance et de negligence qui meritent punition.

"Le Roy leur a oté leurs Commissions de l'Admirauté et de la marine, et le regiment que M^r Kilgrew avoit, ceci est une preuve assurée que sa majesté est bien convaincue de leur mauvaise conduite.

"J'ay fort raisonné avec my lord Montmouth sur sa maniere d'agir depuis quelque temps. Il pretend d'avoir sujet d'être mal content, mais il n'en a aucun qui puisse être raisonnable. Il est fâché de ce que son frere le capitaine n'est pas encore Colonel et ce n'est pas son tour. Il parle du bien public touchant le bill des parlemens triennaux. Il est en colere de ce qu'il n'a pas passé à la maison des Seigneurs qu'avec la clauze dont je vous ay écrit qui conserve la prerogative d'assembler, de proroger et de casser. Il est fâché contre ceux d'entre les Seigneurs qui ont changé de sentiment depuis l'année dernière comme my lord Mulgrave. On croit que la cour l'a gagné par argent et on fait courir faussement le bruit que c'est par mes mains parce que je suis souvent dans son carrosse au retour du Parlement. My lord Montmouth ne sçait raisonner long temps sur ces matieres sans faire voir qu'il a pris un mauvais party. Je l'exhorte comme son serviteur de ne jeter pas le manche apres la coignée en quittant ses charges et de considérer l'état de sa famille et ce que le Roy a fait pour elle. Je sçay que des esprits mal intentionnez le poussent contre son propre interest sous pretexte d'amitié dont la bonne est assez rare icy.

"Lors qu'on passa le Bill Triennal parmy cent Seigneurs il y en eut trois des principaux qui opinerent pour le rejeter entierement, et pour ne plus parler d'une affaire que le Roy a refusée avec tant de raison l'année dernière, sçavoir le Duc de Sommerset, cet Comte D'Abingdon et le Comte de Nottingham, tous trois Torys.

"La Chambre basse luy hyer ce bill pour la premiere fois. On sçaura son sentiment à la seconde ou à la troisieme.

"Il y a trois jours qu'elle a examiné les pensions que le Roy donne à plusieurs membres pour des services rendus comme à my lord Renala, le Chevalier Robert Howard, le Chevalier Jean Guize et autres. Cela donna beaucoup de chagrin à M^r Musgrave, Clargez, Finch et à d'autres. Chacun allegua des raisons pour justifier qu'on n'est point coupable de recevoir quelque recompense en bien servant le Roy et le Royaume. On n'a encor rien resolu sur ce sujet.

"Aujourd'hui la chambre basse a examiné l'état d'augmentation de troupes que le Roy a demandées. Apres six heures de debat il a été resolu qu'on feroit une augmentation sans dire le nombre. Le bon party a gagné cette question de plus de 170 voix sur 340. Le party contraire vouloit par finesse qu'on mit en question s'il falloit accorder les 93500 hommes que le Roy demande afin de la faire rejeter comme contraire à la methode de la Chambre qui agit par degrez. Et lors que le bon party a eu gagné ce point qu'on ne feroit point encore mention du nombre de troupes le party contraire a disputé l'augmentation et a perdu la question, de sorte que la journée d'aujourd'hui est fort bonne pour le Roy et pour ses allies.

"L'ambassadeur d'Espagne dont vous connoissez l'esprit et la conduite s'attire encor deux affaires qui pouront avoir des suites desagrees pour luy s'il ne change de sentiment, l'une avec my lord Mulgrave, et l'autre, qui en est une suite avec le Roy où avec le Parlement. Il a loué la maison de my lord Mulgrave pour tout le temps qu'il demeurera icy en qualité d'ambassadeur. J'en ay vu le contract en bonne forme et meme son nom n'y est mis et il na signé qu'aprez celui de ce Seigneur. Mais apres quelques mois d'habitation la femme de l'ambassadeur étant morte il a quitté cette maison et s'est logé dans la parçe de Witehall à Spring-garden où il a commencé de faire batir une Chapelle pour les papistes qui a la veüé dans le jardin de la Reyne. C'est une lieu privilegié dans l'enclos de Witehall. Les principaux officiers de Witehall voyant cette nouveauté luy ont fait dire sous-main inutilement que c'est contre les loix et qu'il n'y peut avoir de messe publique dans l'enceinte de Witehall. Ils en ont voulu porter la plainte au Parlement afin qu'il prie le Roy d'en parler à l'ambassadeur. Sa majesté a répondu à un des seigneurs qu'il accommoderoit cette affaire sans bruit et qu'il n'étoit pas necessaire de la faire eclater. My lord Portland a été chargé de parler à l'ambassadeur, et pour éviter encor plus l'eclat il luy a fait parler par M^r Hofman, Resident de l'Empereur (J'ay eu part à tout cecy). Des que M^r Hofman luy parla il se mit en colere et ne voulut écouter aucune raison (non plus qu'autrefois en l'affaire de sa femme et du chapeau). My lord Portland luy doit parler aujourd'hui ou demain sur cette chapelle publique et meme sur l'affaire du payment de my lord Mulgrave qui propose de mettre sa pretention et son contract en arbitrage, mais que si l'ambassadeur continue à refuser de le payer il se pourvoira au Parlement, disant que par les loix il peut faire saisir ses effets et son carrosse lors qu'il ne sera pas dedans si mieux le Roy n'ayme payer pour luy, et de se faire en suite rembourser par le Roy d'Espagne. My lord Mulgrave qui a toujours été espagnol d'inclination et qui étoit intime amy de feu M^r de Ronquillo (c'étoit un autre homme) en a écrit à Madrid afin qu'on y connoisse le procédé irregulier de l'ambassadeur. La seule faute qu'a fait my lord Mulgrave est qu'en passant le contract il n'a point pris de caution bourgeoise. Il vouloit agir honnetement et lier amitié avec l'ambassadeur qui n'a pas encor fait icy aucun amj ny guere de connoissances que celles que je luy fis faire à Witehall au commencement de son ambassade. Comme allié je voulois m'attacher à luy faire plaisir, mais je reconus bien tot son esprit et qu'il ne se soucioit pas d'avoir des amis. On dit qu'il n'en a que d'un Allemand qui ramasse dans les caffez tout ce qu'il entend dire. Lors que M^r Hofman ou moy nous entretenons avec luy nous le trouvons fort mal informé de ce qui se passe à la Cour et au Parlement, et il ne sçait ordinairement les choses qu'un long temps apres les autres. En un mot il a des manieres qui font tort à son caractere car si ce n'étoit qu'à sa personne on ne s'en mettroit pas tant en peine.

"L'ambassadeur a pris ce semble, un plaisant party. Il vient de dire à M^r Hofman que sa chapelle commence luy servir de cuisine."

"Duplicata. A Londres le 22 Decembre 1693. Vendredi. Je vous écris il y a trois jours l'importante resolution de la chambre basse d'augmenter les troupes sans dire le nombre. Jusques à present le party contraire et les Jacobites avoient creu qu'on empêcheroit cette augmentation et qu'on parleroit meme de quelque diminution de celles de l'année passé afin de diminuer les taxes. Mais le bon party ayant fait voir la necessité absolüe d'imiter les principaux allies qui augmentent leurs forces afin d'en avoir d'egales à celles des deux ennemis communs, on résolut ce grand coup par la plus grande pluralité qu'on eut encore veu en fait de division de membres puis qu'il y en eut 248 contre 78 qui s'opposoient à cette augmentation apres avoir par finesse comme je vous l'ay intimé proposé de voter pour les 93500 hommes que le Roy a demandé. C'étoit le plus seur moyen selon eux de faire rejeter le bill pour cette année ou pour faire proroger le Parlement pour quelques jours afin de recommencer le bill, ce qui eut été un tres facheux remede. Cette finesse n'étoit d'abord comprise que par fort peu de gens. Les autres étoient bien aise de voir les directeurs du party contraire comme Mess^r Clargez, Musgrave et Greenville parler pour les interests du Roy et du Royaume. Mais c'étoit par finesse et contre la methode de la Chambre de nommer le nombre des troupes et un si grand nombre avant que de rezoudre s'il étoit à propos de confirmer l'état de guerre de l'année dernière et de l'augmenter. Le Chevalier Jean Lauder Vice-Chambellan, M^r Trenchard Secretaire d'Etat, le contrerolleur M^r Warton my lord Cornubery, le Lieutenant General Talmash qui entend aussi bien à haranguer qu'à se battre l'admiral Russell et autres clairs-voyans s'apercevant de la finesse dirent qu'il ne falloit pas surprendre la chambre qu'il falloit aller par degrez et qu'il étoit à propos d'examiner s'il étoit necessaire d'augmenter les troupes. Les membres cy dessus et autres s'y opposerent persistans à voter pour les 93500 hommes. Ils perdirent cette question par le cry ordinaire sans division. En suite on fit venir de la chandele pour continuer le debat sur l'augmentation et ces memes membres se declarerent fortement contre ce qui paroissoit contradictoire et decouvriront de plus en plus la ruzé. Ils perdirent donc cette question d'augmentation par 170 voix au grand déplaisir des Jacobites dont leurs agens sont à la porte de la chambre comme moy pour apprendre d'original ce qui se passe. Ils ont une entiere liberté de parler aux membres leurs amis meme les papistes. Ils avoient concerté adroitement de faire rejeter le bill sous la couverture de le faire passer tout d'un coup. Leur mortification ne se peut exprimer et depuis les Jacobites ne rode plus tant aux antichambres du Parlement.

"Les deux partis pour et contre la Cour ou il y a quelque melange essayerent encor hyer leurs forces sur une autre affaire importante puis qu'il s'agissoit d'un commencement d'excise generale contre laquelle on declame en plusieurs endroits nommément deux membres qui ont des charges à la Cour, M^r Seymour et M^r Temple. Le premier a dit qu'il eseroit de mourir avant que de voir une excise generale. La question qu'on debatit avant hyer pendant quatre heures étoit si l'on mettroit un impot sur le sel sans dire combien ny pour quelle somme. Le party contraire n'osa faire une division apres celle du jour precedent et consentit enfin à un impot sur le sel qu'on comparoit à la gabelle de France et qu'on a fixé aujourd'hui à peu de chose. M^r Hambden fils apprenant cette nouveauté m'a dit en colere que l'Europe va être esclave comme l'Asie puis que l'Angleterre donne cent mille hommes et une excise generale. La reponce que je luy fit ne luy agreea pas. Il est encor le meme.

"On a résolu le nombres de troupes d'augmentation le party contraire ayant fait des offres assez raisonnables quoy que moindres que la demande du Roy. On eut la complaisance de les accepter pour ne pas vaincre de nouveau sur cette matiere par une division afin de temoigner de plus en plus qu'on est moderé. On regla l'augmentation à quinze regimens d'infanterie, à quatre de dragons et à six de Cavalerie de neuf compagnies et de 59 Cavaliers sans les officiers. On compte que cela ira a dix huit ou vingt mille hommes qu'on levera icy excepté quelque regimens de Cavalerie. Cela veut dire apparemment que les nouvelles levées demeurent en Angleterre et qu'on en fera sortir les vieilles troupes. Le party contraire a dit que ce nombre sera a peu pres egal a l'augmentation des Hollandais.

La Chambre basse apres avoir fait brûler depuis trois jours par la main du bourreau un petit livret socinien contre la divinité de notre Seigneur en fait rechercher les auteurs pour être punis et l'imprimeur aussi. Ils ont en l'audace d'avoir envoyé dans les maisons par le peny-poste cet écrit impie.

Les marchands de Virginie et des isles de l'Amerique ont demandé au Roy un bon convoi pour aller croiser vers l'Irlande audevant d'une riche flotte marchande qu'ils attendent bien tot. Ils m'ont dit qu'elle vaudra a la douane plus de cent mille pieces.

Le regiment de la marine que l'Admiral Kilgrew avoit a été donné a my lord Barklây, vice Admiral, et son regiment qui est en Flandres a été donné au lieutenant Colonel du regiment de Windam.

L'on a remarqué aujourd'hui au levé du Roy une extraordinaire quantité d'officiers a cause des nouvelles levées qu'on va faire.

A Londres, le 22 Decembre 1693 Mardy. Trois postes d'Holande arriveront hyer a la fois qui ont porté un projet de paix que la Cour de France offre par l'entremise du Roy de Suede et du Roy de Danne-marke. Ce que j'en ay vu touchant les restitutions n'est pas assez, mais cela marque que les ennemis sont bien pressez lors qu'ils font de telles offres. Que ne feroient ils pas s'il y avoit des mediateurs acceptez et un congrez où les allies pussent former leurs demandes ? Il semble qu'on obtiendrait dumoins la paix de Nimegue mais cela ne seroit pas assez. Il faudroit la paix de Pyrenées et que la marine de France fut mise sur le pied où elle étoit pour lors, car sans cela il n'y auroit point de sureté. On dit que par ce projet on abandonne les prétentions du Roy Jaques à la decision de L'Empereur, du Roy de Suede et du Roy de Danne-marke. Si cela est il n'aura pas grand chose a pretendre si ce n'est une pension, car ils ne scauroient manquer de s'en rapporter au parlement d'Angleterre qui a déjà prononcé.

La Chambre basse en grand comité a consenty au bill pour les Parlemens Triennaux de la meme maniere que la Chambre des Seigneurs l'a passe, non obstant que le party contraire à la Cour voulut rejeter la bonne clauze qui met à couvert le prerogative Royale. On se divisa sur cela, et ce party perdit par plus de soixante voix sans compter qu'un nombre considerable de membres étoit absent. Cette affaire qui fait tout de bruit depuis l'année dernière paroît apaisée.

Il y a une nouvelle affaire dans la Chambre basse entre trois membres qui aura des suites. My lord Bellemont a accusé de trahison my lord Coninsby et Mr Porter, Chancelier d'Irlande, et qui ont tous deux gouverné ce Royaume la. Il a présenté contre eux en leur presence neuf articles, quatre de trahison et cinq de malversation. Mr Seymour a déjà pris leur defense.

On a publié icy un livre sans privilege et sans nom d'auteur, touchant la cour et la gouvernement du Roy de Danne-marke. On luy reproche de n'être pas propre aux affaires et d'avoir usurpé un pouvoir absolu comme le Roy de France, et dans la preface on insinue au peuple Anglois de prendre garde qu'on ne suive jamais un tel exemple. On dit qu'il y a beaucoup d'esprit dans ce livre et que Mr Molzuort qui a été envoyé du Roy en Danne-marke l'a composé. Mais lors qu'on luy en parle il assure que non. Mr Chels envoyé de Danne-marke fait beaucoup de bruit contre ce livre et il rezolut hyer d'en faire aujourd'hui des plaintes en forme au Roy.

Dans le paquebot qui a été pris il y avoit huit lettres de la main du Roy, et les lettres de change pour le subside du duc de Savoye. Chacun void de plus en plus qu'il faudroit assurer les paquebots.

Aujourd'hui la Chambre basse a réglé le subside des troupes par terre à dix neuf cens mille pieces pour 83 mille hommes. Elle a accordé tout le detail des demandes du Roy, excepté l'article des subsides pour les allies qui se monte a 150 mille pieces. Surcuy elle a dit que c'est à sa Majesté à le payer, la question ayant été emportée par deux voix sur 245 apres que plus de cent membres étoient sortis pour diner. On pretend remettre la meme question sur le tapis à ce que m'a dit le lieutenant General Talmach.

Le party contraire dans la Chambre basse vouloit qu'on laissât en Angleterre une armée de 25 mille hommes, l'on a rezolu de s'en rapporter au Roy qui ny laissera apparemment que les nouvelles levées.

L'affaire de la Duchesse de Grafton dont je vous ay écrit le commencement occupé depuis trois jours la chambre des Seigneurs jusques a huit heures du soir et on ne l'a pas encor finie. Les mal intentionnez tachent de prendre l'occasion de faire naître une brouillerie entre les deux Chambres du parlement sur leurs privileges mais on n'y reussira pas. My lord Portland par ordre du Roy a taché d'accommoder le different, mais le Chef de Justice n'y a pas encore voulu consentir."

5 Fevrier

A Londres le 26 Janvier 1693 Mardy. Je vous

ecrivis, monsieur, il y a quatre jours la nouvelle de la disgrâce du Comte de Marleboroug. On sçait a present les principales choses dont il est coupable, et en mon particulier j'en suis informé de tres bonne part. Premièrement luy et sa femme ont travaillé souvent et assez à decouvert auprez de Madame la Princesse pour la brouiller avec La Reyne, se servant pour cet effect de plusieurs inventions et faussez. Secondement cet ingrat a caballé parmy les principaux officiers des troupes Angloises pour les porter à se plaindre hautement du Roy sur ce qu'il employe, depuis meme la reduction d'Irlande tout d'officiers Holandois, Allemands, Danois et François, et qu'il leur donne les principaux employes au prejudice des Anglois, supozant qu'il ne les ayme ny ne les estime. Il a sur cela parlé injurieusement de la propre personne sacrée de sa Majesté en des termes qui meritoient entre gentilhommes qu'on en tirât, humainement parlant, les dernieres vengeance. Il gardoit si peu de mesures qu'il en parloit à plusieurs qu'il croyoit ses amis qui en avertissoient le Roy journelement. Sa Majesté prenoit patience croyant qu'hormis d'être insensé il ne perserveroit pas dans une telle conduite dont on luy lachoit de temps en temps quelque mot afin qu'il vit qu'on étoit informé des caballes et des discours. Mais comme il avoit pris son party croyant qu'en se faisant craindre avec adresse et credit c'étoit le chemin infallible d'être duc et grand maitre de l'artillerie il continuoît toujours le meme langage et a engagé les officiers Anglois dans son dessein. C'est ce qui a obligé le Roy, non a le contenter par de nouvelles charges mais a luy oter les six qu'il luy avoit données et de la maniere dont je vous l'ay écrit. Il n'y a presque personne qui n'en soit bien aise et qui ne deteste son ingratitude et son extreme avarice. L'une et l'autre passent l'Imagination. Les Jacobites ont à present un champ encor plus large pour parler contre luy car ils ne croyent pas qu'il fut capable d'agir sous-main en faveur du Roy Jaques mais plutot en faveur de sa cadette. Ils ne croyent pas non plus ce qu'on dit qu'il avoit dessein etant en Flandres d'enlever le Roy lors qu'il s'avance trop avec peu de monde vers les ennemis, ny beaucoup d'autres choses qu'on debite contre luy. Ils disent pourtant assez malicieusement qu'il dit luy-meme qu'il n'avoit quitte le Roy Jaques que parce qu'il ne gouvernoit pas selon les loix, et qu'il n'a quitte à present le Roy que parce qu'il imite son exemple. Il laisse pourtant faire au Parlement tout ce que les deux chambres trouvent à propos et cela comprend tout &c.

Parmy les Seigneurs c'étoit my lord Marlebourg qui agissoit le plus pour faire passer le bill touchant la methode de juger les affaires de trahison afin qu'on ne peut juger un pair d'Angleterre que tous les pairs generalement ny fussent apelez lors meme qu'il n'y a point de Parlement. C'étoit le veritable moyen de sauver la vie et les biens aux plus coupables. Aussi la chambre basse prevoyant la consequence de cette pretention n'a jamais voulu s'y accorder quoy qu'on ait eu plusieurs consequences, et l'affaire en demeure là.

On remarque une petite chose sur son avarice qui fait rire. C'est que depuis trois ans il n'a fait que trois habites modestes dont l'un luy servoit pour quatre jours de naissance, deux pour cell du Roy, un pour la Reyne et un pour la Princesse. Il ne donnoit jamais à manger (ce qui n'étoit pas le moyen de gagner les officiers Anglois) et il ne faisoit pas plus de depense qu'un simple gentilhomme de mille pieces de rente, quoy que ses charges luy en valussent plus de huit mille par an sans compter son gros revenu ordinaire et la vente des moindres employes par luy et par sa femme. Sa disgrâce donc, comme chacun void, ne le fait plaindre de personne, et peu le frequentent excepté my lord Godolfin. Le Roy a déjà donné sa charge de capitaine des gardes du corps à my lord Colchester qui a fait demission de son regiment à my lord Barkley. Mr Talmuch a été fait lieutenant general à sa place pour servir en Flandres, my lord George, troisieme fils du duc d'Hamilton à le regiment des Fuzilliers. La charge de premier gentilhomme de la chambre n'est pas encore donnée. Six ou sept Seigneures le demandent. La deponille de l'insolent ingrat accomode bien de gens.

"L'affaire du poll, ou taxe par tete, est achevée. La chambre basse a réglé la petite part d'un chacun, et cela montera à douze cens mille pieces pour les troupes ainsi que je vous l'ay escrit.

"L'affaire du duc de Norfolk a été encor examinée aujourd'hui dans la chambre des Seigneurs out le Roy est venu et y a demeuré incognito jusques a trois heurs aprez medy pour avoir le plaisir d'entendre les temoins sur une procedure extraord^e de cassation de mariage. Il y en avoit environ trente, tant hommes que femmes qui deposoient qu'il y a adultere entre la duchesse de Norfolk et M^r Germain. On n'a eu le temps que d'examiner cinq temoins dont deux femmes domestiques ont dit des circonstances si plaizantes et si sales que peine ce papier en peut suffir le recit."

"M^r Talmuch a été élu membre de la Chambre basse, surquoy il y a eu une dispute qui a donné lieu à M^r Seymour de faire un apel à M^r Warton le contrerolleur qui prit pour second le Colonel Godfrey lequel les accorda sur le champ de bataille avant qu'on tirât l'épée. M^r Henry Boyle étoit le second de M^r Seymour.

"On ma dit ce soir que le General Ginckle sera fait Comte d'Athlone en Irlande. Je n'ay pas le temps de m'aller informer des circonstance de cette dignité."

They doe like exceedingly his M^tyes brave resolution to vindicate his right of the narrowe seas from those that could have usurped it. Especially the K. of Spaines Min^{ty} doe particularly delight themselves heerewith since they cheifly and first of all will finde the benefit hereof. As for what concernes the House of Burgundy there are ancient treatyes from Henry the 7th time w^{ch} have since beene renewed in div^{rs} treatyes and lastly by the treatye my L^d Cottingham concluded in Spaine which are still in their vigor. So betweene us and that house the navigation is well enough ordered and settled, but the Holland^{rs} will not bee able to prove their rights to these privileges though they have some few years ago attempted to doe it."

"Sir William Boswell to Lord Feilding. "The Hage 13 July 1637. In the audience I had of the States G^rall upon Tuesday 15th curr^t having taken occasion to speak of his High^{nes} arrivall, that after noone six of their deputies were wth him to visitt him and the next day he prented himself in their full Assembly to thank their LL^{ps} for their good affections & dispose them further in favour of his owne & the Publ. aff^{rs} whereunto their answer was in g^rall and very civill termes satisfactory for that tyme unto all parties. But three or fowre days before his High^{nes} returne, the Prince of Aur^g was gone from the Haghe, so that he hath not yet seen him, the winds & weather having ever since been so contrary and tempestuouse as that alone might have seemed sufficient to hinder the Princes entreview . . . Upon Monday last, very early His High^{nes} [the Prince of Orange] parted from Rammekins, that night landed his whole army, the Cavall^{ry} at Bergen op Zoom and the foot at the Dientel, Swallwe and Gertruydenbergh; And now (as certainly reported) is beleagring of Breda haveing the very next day after his landing advanced thitherwards and taken up 3000 boores to breake ground whereunto concureth the parting hence of one of the States Generall the Heer Teerestejn wth monyes and order to raise up 6000 boores more for speedier finishing their entrenchem^{ts}."

is conjectured there is scarcity of powdre in the towne. no supplies being brought in since a great quantity of their store did casually some of weekes since) take fire and blow upon one of their mills. But certainly they were cut short of a good part of the victuals this last week when Co. Henry Gouvern^r of Friseland (come from above wth 36 troupe of horse and 1000 muskettiers unlooked for before the towne) intercepted 2 or 3000 head of cattle as they were driving in cutting of and taking many prisoners of those who were sent forth to save them. How the Spaniard will work to relieve the place is yet doubtfull hee^r.

Same to Same. "Haghe 18 Aug 1637. The Prince of Aurange having had, as indeed hee hath had ever since this armyes sitinge downe before Breda, a faire time without molestation hath so firmelie entrenched himselfe as to relieve the towne or hurt his armie in anie considerable measure seemeth a pointe beyond skill and mans activitie. So I thinke having few dayes since seene all. Their workes are so insuperable, their victuals and Amunition so good and plentifull, and the way for their further supplie in everie kind so open shorte and assured from Geertrudenberch and Ter-Heyde. By the damminge up of the rivers both the trenches and the lower groundes are allreadie or will presentlie be filled with water (a mans depthe at least) in manie partes without the outward line upon w^{ch} the whole armie have their severall stations everie night duellie, marching away after the warninge piece is gone of. More inwardlie they draw up a new line betweene their quarters and towne the better to girt it in and hinder the salliege forth. Other workes goe on accordingelie, more remarkeable a Redoubt within Musquett shutt of the towne. Upon Sunday eveninge 16th present His Highnesse began to breake ground for the approaches [illegible] foure from severall Quarters fortified with like number of Batteryes each mounted with 9 or 10 halfe canon. That night 300 English and French did cast up two other Redoubts within lesse than musquett shotte of the towne duringe w^{ch} worke the besieged made but two or three shottes onelie, beinge still very sparinge off their powder as if their store were small and to bee managed against more neede. The Cardinal Infant havinge lyen enquartered 12 or 14 dayes together at Rhysbergen within one league of the Hage la Village (where Counte William hath his Quarter) with an Armie said here of 12 or 13^m foote and 5000 horse, dislodged thence the 13th pre^{nt} with his Vantgarde and the 14th his battaile and Reare followed towards the Hooghstraten havinge attempted no other Exploit all that time but the viewinge of the Prince of Auranges his workes. Onelie 17 of his Troupes came once somewhat neere the trenches, but were entertained with a light skirmish and so retired with losse. His Highnesse hath sent after him 22 companies of foote (whereof 4 English commanded by S^r Simon Hairecourt) and a good part of this Cavalerie under Stakenbroeck to attend his motions."

Same to Same. "Haghe 3 Sept. 1637 st. no. The siege of Breda proceedeth forward. The English and French havinge brought their severall lines about the towne hornworke towards Guinckens have cast two rise-bridges over the moat of the same, and are come to mine in the pointes of it. That service is growne hott, the besieged disputing their ground manfully."

Same to Same. "Haghe 8 Sep. 1637 st. no. Concerning the siege of Breda as the Prince of Aurange approacheth it neerer so growes it every day better. On Sunday night last (6th September st. no.) Coronell Goring was to command in the English approaches, but not being well recovered of his late hurt (for as then his wound did not begin to come well and he to take rest) his Lieuten^t Coronell (M^r Hollis) had the gard; and that night between 10 and 11 o'clock the besieged (about 150) sallied out upon the left hand sap off their hornworke. But the Lieuten^t Coronell havinge drawne up to the nearest Corps de Garde at the point of the workes a competent number of Muskettiers (10 or 12 of every comp^{ny}) entretained the sally and beat the enemy back wth losse of divers of their men and some prisoners, two onely of the English being hurt, none killed. Three or foure howres after the enemy fell out againe from the top of the corner of their hornworke with a great noise crying in severall languages ca, ca, fall on, fall on, avancez, &c. But Cap^t Marche and Ensigne Willis repulsed them into their worke againe. The next morning (Munday morning 7th of Septemb about 7 of the clocke) the English and French mines were both sprung in the bowells of the hornworke wth good effect. So that the breach on the English part being somewhat fair Lieuten^t Coronell Hollis wth a resolute company of English Cavalliers officers & souldiours first entred the worke & fell pesh upon the ennemy (who were about 400 strong most Burgundians and Spaniards) whom they forced at last those that could to retire and yeild their hornworke wth losse of about 200 men slayne their besydes many w^{ch} were drowned falling of the bridge over the fosse and seeking to swimme over the moat to the towne the drawbridge wherof (at Ginneken poort) was drawne up assoone as the grosse of their men beaten thether from the hornworke were entred and at the same tyme they tooke in likewise all such new workes as were in it to the fosse and have turned up the earth ags^t it. . . . The French following the breach on their side came into the action some tyme after the English but performing their part likewise very well yet wth less losse. Since taking in of this hornworke the Prince had resolved to proceede wth all possible speede and rigour on that side upon the Towne havinge contracted already wth undertakers to have two batteryes & two Galleries from the s^d hornworke over the fosse under cover of those batteryes all to be finished in 15 dayes and 38^m franckes agreed for the same."

Same to Same. "Haghe 4th Sep^r 1637 st. no. At the taking of the hornworke (neare to Ginneken Poort) in the Prince of Auranges Quarter of the 9 companies of English who fell on besides a Volontier, one Lieuten^t, an Ensigne, & two sergeants, 12 or 14 common Souldiours were slayne and 20 or 30 hurt. Above 200 of the ennemy (Spanish and Burgundians) were drowned . . . The said worke being thus forced, the halfe moone and counterscharpe were taken in the same day and are now turned up ags^t the towne whereupon the Prince caused two Corps de Garde to be raised on the edge of the tonnes moatt for the safegarde of his souldiours. Two dayes after he lett out two batteryes each of eight halfe canon to be erected then and two galleries in the two severall approaches, the one for the English, to be cast over the moatt on the left syde of the enemies bullwarke; the other for the French on the right syde of the same all for 38^m gilders (not wthstanding the moat be reckoned a 180 foot broad in that place) and that on condition the undertakers shall afterward abate six hundred gilders per diem if the worke be not perfected wth in 14 dayes of their undertaking. The batteryes by this tyme are sett up and by the 12th curr^t the galleries were advanced 3 or 4 bands about 28 foote in that part of the moat. From Co^l William's Quarter a mine was likewise sprung upon Thursday 10th pre^{nt} wth in another hornworke but not so effectively as the former for the Scotch resolutely entreing the breach were twice repulsed thence. About a hundred of them were slayne wth M^r Hinderson (some tyme Lieuten^t Coronell in the Sweedes service in Germany), Cap^t Williamson, Ensigne Hamelton & 2 or 3 other officers. But upon Saturday (12th pre^{nt}) in the morning Co^l William resolving to give a new onsett on that hornworke havinge sent to discover in w^t posture the enemy lay then found it abandoned and so came pre^{ntly} to lodge his men in the same where they remaine and fortifie."

Same to Same. "Haghe 8th Octob 1637 st. no. Upon Munday last 5th Octob pre^{nt}, the French continuing their mine in the bulwarke neare to Ginneken Poort miners were sett on worke from the English galleries whilst Co. Williams was perfecting, but after much shooting all that night on both sides the enemy sent early the next day a drumme to the top of the said bullwarke w^{ch} comming first to the English (where S^r Henry Harbert was in garde) was not so soone perceived by them but that a French Sargeant had time and opportunity to bring him to theyr point then commanded by Monsieur Hauterive to whose presence the Drumme being conducted and desiring hee might speake with the Prince of Aurange from the Gouvernour (who entreated in the meantime a cessation of hostility), a messenger was immediately dispatched from the approaches to his High^{ness} to give him notice of the Gouvernours desire after which two Captaines (a Burgundian and a Dutchman) came out of the towne and in theyrstead two went in from this side. Not long after a munke, a priest and some of the magistrates repaired also to y^e Prince of Aurange imploring favourable conditions for themselves and colleagues. All tuesday night 6th pre^{nt} the said persons havinge remaind with Major Generall Wit went in againe the next morning into y^e towne but soone after returned to digest the Articles of Capitulation now in hand if not already signed and ratified. In the meanwhile people repayres from all these parts to the Leager to see the issue, and we are in daily expectation of bontires for the Victory: it being presumed that to morrow or the next day the Garrison will march out of the Towne."

Lord Scudamore to Lord Feilding. "Paris April 2 N. 1637. . . . Upon Friday last there was broken and layd upon the wheele one Paillet that had bin 2 yeares since Prevost of the Regim^t of Piedmont, from which employ^t retiring discontented, & being charged with children and wanting money, he writt to the Duchesse of Lorraine a long letter, letting her know that he would restore her againe to her dignity and countrey if she would furnish him with 1500 crownes with w^{ch} he would buy a house that should give him the advantage of making a mine under a streete when the Card^l Richelieu being to passe, he would blow up with poudre. The Duchesse discovered all to the Card^l. But though he were above threescore yeares of age having nothing but his dagger, before they could apprehend him he killed the prime officer and two others, and hurt a fourth. Upon the scaffold he sayd there were six more that had conspired the Card^l's death. It is sayd there will be added to his guard 100 Halbardiers.

Same to Same. Paris, December $\frac{24}{11}$, 1638. "Pere Joseph dyed upon Saturday last in the morning betweene eleaven & twelve of the clocke extremelie lamented by Card^l Richelieu. It was an apoplexie & he lasted but 3 daies. The evening he fell sick on he told Card^l Bichi, as by inspiration they say that Brissac was taken & that it was behovefull to find some meane to make peace. And upon Wensday last the newes came (as your Lo^p will find by the inclosed printed relation) by an expresse that [Duke] Bernard made his entry into Brissac the 16th current."

A document endorsed, "Copy of my letter to Lord Northumberland," in Lord Denbigh's handwriting, and dated Holdenby, May 13, 1647:—"My Lord, Yesterday morning the King sent for the Commissioners here to waite upon him to know of us when we did expect the propositions. I told him we were in dayly hopes of them. His Ma^{tie} replied that hee was not well pleased with his present condition which gave him once a resolution to give no answeare at all when they should come, but upon better considerations hee had now altered his minde, but because they were not yet come, though the Scotch commissioners had been three weekes at London, hee could not but wonder much at the delaye still us^d in giving expedition to that busines. The propositions, hee sayd, hee was well acquainted with, having been once offered to him at Newcastle, but never given any answeare which now hee was resolved to do, and to send it by us as wee had done other of his letters to the Parliam^t. Hee desired further that wee would assigne him a fitt person to write what hee should dictate, because his custome was to write to the Howses in a third person, otherwise it would putt him to more trouble, and hee would take the paines himself. Wee took time to consider of what wee were to give him in answeare, which was to this effect that the paper which his Ma^{tie} now intended to send by us to the Parliam^t did contain matter of a different nature to what he formerly sent and was of that great concernment that wee desired further time till the morrow after to give him our fell resolution. Hee replyde hee did not expect any advice from us, but desired only to know whether hee might be allowed an assistant to helpe him to write, as for the letter hee knew wee durst not refuse the sending of it. Howsoever hee would bee ready to offer it to us the same night and would bee glad to be refused. Wee answered that his Ma^{tie} taking notice of what wee formerly offered to him, hee might, if hee pleased, make use of M^r Herbert to write for him. His Ma^{tie} expressed himselfe further, that if wee should refuse to send his letter to the Parliament the condition hee was in should not hinder him from finding out a way to make it knowne to the whole Kingdome. The afternoone was most spent in debate amongst our selves whether wee should convay his M^{ties} intentions, which were only made known to us in the generall to the Parliam^t. Great were the inconveniences that represented themselves to us on both sides, but what turned the ballance was, that wee could not make ourselves fitt judges of what was proper for the King to send to the two Howses, and the precedent already given of former addresses sent under our conveyance putt us out of a capacity of refusing this, having often solicited for instructions how to behave ourselves upon accidents of the like nature but could never yet receive any directions in that particular which we would take to be no other than at the least a tacitt consent and allowance of what wee had done and a rule for us to goe by for the future till further order. The vote being putt it was the consent of the Committee that the letter should be receaved and sent according to the directions which his Ma^{tie} that night a little before supper offering to us was receaved. Wee have taken care that this letter may arrive at London at such a time as the Howses shall not sit, to the end your Lords^{ps} and other persons of honor and quality in both Howses might bee made acquainted with the subject of that letter, as farre as his Ma^{tie} thought fitt to communicate himselfe in [it] to us, that when it should come to be read publicly there might not be a general surprisall upon the [some words here lost] of what might be so little expected from hence."

A document entitled, "Memorials formerly to be Presented to his Most Sacred Ma^{tie} in the behalfe of Basill Earle of Denbigh."

"The said Earle then Lord Ffeildinge was brought to the late King of happie memorie by his uncle the then Duke of Buckingham to kiss his Royall hands and to thank him for conferring upon him the place of Master of the Robes (for which a valuable consideration was to be given to the Lord Canplin after Earle of North^{ton}), and after his waiting in that place halfe a yeare he was likewise to bee sworne Gent of his then Ma^{ties} Bed Chamber. After the said Duke's unfortunate Death the place of Master of the Robes was conferred upon M^r George Kirke that of the Bedd Chamber not deny'd but referred to further consideration and the said Earle in the mean time commanded by the King to try his fortune in the warrs of Holland.

"The said Earle after his returne from the seige of Bois le duc had a pension of one thousand markes per annum confer'd upon him by his Ma^{tie} his pretences to the place of Gent of the Bed Chamber still held up.

"After some yeares the said Earle was sent Ambassador Extraordinary to the French King, the State of Venice and others the Princes of Italy, and after neare upon five yeares employment there, had lycence to repaire for England upon some private occasions of his owne which performed he was to returne to his former service in Italy. Dureing the said Earles attendance at Court the Queene out of her Grace and favour was pleased to obtaine from the King a promise of being sworne the first servant and Gentleman of the Bedd Chamber to his sonne the Prince now King Charles the Second in Recompence of the former engagement of being Gentlemen of the Bed Chamber to the King.

"The most unhappie warrs in England then beginning to breake forth his late Ma^{tie} at the same time when the peeres who attended his Ma^{ties} writt of summons at Westminster were invited by his particular letters to wait upon his person at Yorke, did by his Secretary S^r Edward Nicholas discharge the said Earle from all employments, Pensions, and relations to his Ma^{ties} person and service which gave him a latitude to act beyond his own thoughts and intentions which hath produced the effects of a generall and particular sadd repentance.

"William Earle of Denbigh, father of the said Earle and Master of the Great Wardrobe to King James and King Charles the First both of most Glorious memorie, did engage his estate and fortune for the Funerall of King James and other occasions of his sonne King Charles which the Commons in Parliam^t, taking upon them the Supream Government, under the title of A free state did take advantage of and charged the said Earles estate with sixteene thousand pounds Debt and after a chargable tryall at Warwick the jury then upon their verdict did free the said Earles estate as descended upon him by an intaile from his Great Grandfather S^r W^m Ffeildinge K^t and not from his father William Earle of Denbigh who was but tenant for life.

"At the time of the said Earles discharge from his late Ma^{ties} service and pension there remained an arreare of thirteen thousand pounds Debt due to the said Earle upon the accompt of his embassie and Pension.

"The Premises considered it is humbly and with all duty offered to his Ma^{tie},

"That in the disposal of the great Wardrobe (if his Ma^{tie} shall not think fit to confer that office upon the said Earle) regard may be had at least to the freeing his estate from all Debts and encumbrances relating to that office and that consideration may bee had of y^e arreare of that debt above mentioned. That the misfortunes and disorder of the times may not soe far obliterate the memorie of his past services in the prime of his yeares to cancel all former engagements made to him from the King and Queene in the way of his preferment, soe to Differenc him from others unhappily fallen under the heavy burden of his M^{ties} Displeasure upon the same ground. But rather that the beames of his Grace and favour may likewise reflect upon the said Earles endeavour to serve the King in pressing for an admittance in the house of peeres for the Earle of Southton and Dorsett sent by the King from Nottingham to compose all differences whose reception there had prevented those wars. His opposition given to the Self Denying Ordinance and the expunging out of Parliamentary Commission the clause of fighting in defence of the late Kings person, the originall Root of all Barbarities acted since. The having in Readiness four thousand Reformed officers and Gent. engaged under the said Earle to hazard their lives to Divert that Ill fate which after befell his Ma^{tie}, their zeale & duty made fruitless for want of a Commission. His desire and effort to run the same fortune with his Ma^{tie} upon his entry into England from Scotland but prevented in that Designe by the fight at Worcester which being Discovered to the late Oliver Cromwell by the infidelity of some of his Ma^{ties} party brought the said Earle into much danger. These with other truths of the same nature can testifie the Rectitude of his intention in all Criticall times of tryall to promote his Ma^{ties} service. What may have fallen out in intermediate accidents and Revolutions of affaires may beare a faire construction in the performance of a trust and engagement once undertaken. But as the late Earle his Father lost his life fighting in the late King's quarrell and Defence of the Crowne as other of his ancestors have done before him soe will his sonne now joy in nothing so much as in following the same steps of gratitude and obedience on all honorable occasions wherein his Ma^{tie} shall be pleased to employ him."

"Additional Memorials to bee presented to his Ma^{tie}."

"That the said Earle tooke the covenant with an explanation and exception to that Clause of abolishing Episcopacy Root & Branch as contrary to the word of God which hee Delivered to the Committee of Safety to be delivered to both houses then sitting in Parliament the copy whereof he is able to produce.

"The said Earle constituted Generale of the associated Counties of Warwick, Worcester, Stafford, and Salope, His late Ma^{tie} sent M^{rs} Dorothy Arden his cozen (since married to Coll. Baggott) to him then residing at Coventry to invite him to Oxford offering to raise him to the Degree of a Marquess of England for his encouragement. The said Earle returned his answer that he could not with honour desert that cause and the persons of those with whom hee stood engaged in the Defence thereof and y^e takeing that trust upon him had rendred him incapable of receiving any additionall honour at that time when such a president would cause a great emulation in the noblest and most powerfull families of this nation to his Ma^{ties} great Disservice in making the Breach wider then it was. That when an hono^{ble} occasion should call upon him to attend his Ma^{tie} he would not capitulate for other reward then the exposing his life and fortunes at all hazards, onely to set forth his duty and Allegiance to his Ma^{tie}. But finding the house of Commons then laying the Designe of extirpating Monarchy and the house of Lords, to prevent the threatening invasion of that popular tyranny he sent M^r Gibbone (Clerk of the Peace for Warwick shiere to the late Earl of Denbigh and by his sonne the now Earle continued in that place) to Oxford humbly to propose to his Ma^{tie} the speedy composure of all Differences with the most noble most moderate and Discreet persons of both Houses leaving the factious to shift for themselves that in soe justifiably (sic) a cause hee should be able to serve his Ma^{tie} with a considerable army of Horse and foot, that by name he represented those of both houses fittest to be trusted in soe great a consernum^t and these intentions being Dexterously enfused with some persons of qualitie in those associated counties by some purposely employ'd therein was the cause (when the Selfe Denying Ordinance was preparing in the then House of Commons) of a petition from those four countys signed by sixteen thousand of the Best Knights, Gentlemen and Frecholders directed to both houses to continue the said Earle in his command in that association and when the house of Commons could find no just cause of exceptions they yet voted the said Earle to have broak his trust merely for conveniencie that the said Selfe Denying Ordinances might after the more readily passe.

"It is to bee offer'd what his late Ma^{tie} was pleased to say in relation to the said Earle to Ffirebrass a Catholick convert to his Ma^{tie} being recommended to his Ma^{tie} by the said Earle. When the said Ffirebrass tooke his leave of his Ma^{tie} being discharged by order of Parliam^t upon a jealousie they had he was faithfull to the King, his Ma^{tie} thus expresst himselfe, 'Commend me to yo^r old Master and tell him I wish I had taken his advise when time was.'

this world can surprize or disorder me this must needs do it: for as few men wish more and preached oftner against all sorts off treasonable practises then my selfe, so all the discoveries that have been made of late years have been so far from aspersing mee that though there has been disposition enough to find fault with mee yett there has not been matter given so much as for an examination. It is now thirteen years since I came out of Holland and for these few last years I have nott so much as mentioned the commonest newes in any letter that I have writ to any in that Kingdom. I doe not mention acts off indemnity because I know I doe not need the benefit off them. I went out of England by his Maj^{ties} approbation. I have staied out off it because his Maj^{tie} expressed his dislike off my returning to it. I am now upon the point of marrying in this country and am naturalized by the States of Holland. But tho by this during my stay here my allegiance is translated from his Maj^{tie} to the Souverainety off this province yet I will never depart from the profoundest respect to his sacred person and my duty to his Gouvernement. Since my coming into these parts I have not seen any one person either off Schotland or England that is outlawed for treason and when the King took apprehension of the accesse I had to the Prince & Princesse of Orange there was nothing then objected to mee off this kind. So I doe protest to your Lordship I doe not so much as imagine upon what it is that these informations which it seems are brought to his Maj^{ty} are founded. My Lord as I am not ashamed of anything that I have done so I am not afraid of anything that my enemies can doe to mee. I can very easily part with a small estate and a life off which I have been long weary; and iff my Engagements in this countrey could dispenze with it I would not avoid coming to stand my triall but as this cannot bee expected in the state in which I am so I humbly throw myselfe at his Maj^{ties} feet and begg that hee may nott condemne me so much as in his thoughts til I know what is the crime that is objected to mee that so I may offer my most humble justification off my selfe to him and I shall be infinitely sorrow [sic] iff any judgement that may passe upon mee in Schotland shall oblige me to appeal in print to my owne defence, for I will nott betraye my owne innocency so far as to suffer a thing off this nature to pas upon mee without printing an apology for my selfe in which I will be forced to make knowne all the share that I have had in affaires these twenty years past, and in which I must mention a vast number of particulars that I am afraid will bee displeasing to his Maj^{ty} and as I will look upon this as one of the greatest misfortunes that can possibly befall me in this world, so with all the duty & humility in the world I begg that I may [not] bee strained to it. I will not presume to add one word to your lordship nor to claim any sort off favour or protection from you for I address my self only to you as you are the King's Minister for these provinces."

"Je trouve a Windsor que l'on est encore irresolu pour ce que regarde la dissolution du Parlement craignant ce que la dame vous a observé sur ce sujet outre que quelques uns ont représenté au Roy qu'il n'avoit rien de plus assuré qu'en cas qu'on appelloit un autre Parlem^t et que l'on y elut un assez grand nombre des Presbiteriens &c., ils ne consenteroient jamais a casser les loix puisqu'ils voiroient assez claiement que d'abord que cela fut fait ils serroit cassez et un autre Parlem^t eslu en leur place qui seroit plein de Catho^s Rom^s: qui alors detrueroient non seulement toutes autres religions mais mesme reuniroient les terres Ecclesiastiques a l'Eglise. Le nonce du Pape se plaint de la conduite du Pere Peters qui ne veut songer qu'aux extremitez. Le vooght dit a la dame Samedi passé qu'il estoit resolu de casser le Test par quelque money que ce soit, et apres avoir raisonné long temps sur l'affaire il luy donna la dernière lettre de Penn a lire et luy demanda son opinion la desous, sur quoy elle luy dit qu'elle la trouvoit pleine de [a blank here], et luy repliqua et de raison aussi 'Madame, s'il vous plait.' Il adjouta que Mons^r Dickvelt s'estoit chargé de bien représenter cette affaire a leurs A[tesse]s et il espere qu'il fera en sorte que elles y consentent comm'ils doivent, mais que le dit S^r Dickvelt ne s'estoit comporté comm'il avoit esperé de luy puisqu'il avoit entretenu correspondance avec des gens mal intentionnés les quels il voyoit jour et nuit de sorte qu'il estoit mal informé du fond de cette affaire. La dame persiste encore dans les mesme sentiments que le mieux que l'on puisse faire presentement c'est que S[on] A[tesse] gagne autant de temps qu'il pourra. C'est elle qui a empesché que l'on accordasse la grace au nommé Tiley qui faisoit de si belles offres. Le docteur Burnett escrit une lettre au Comte de Middleton le priant de supplier le Roy de ne le plus poursuivre en Escosse, et qu'en cas qu'il y persi-toit il se trouveroit obligé d'escrire des choses qui ne luy plairoient pas aucunement. L'Envoyé manda que l'on disoit en Hollande que les Roys de France et Angleterre estoit d'intelligence avec les Algeriens et qu'ils l'ont encouragé d'agir comm'ils ont fait sur les côtes d'Holande."

A paper without address or signature, 20 September '87. "La dernière lettre que je me suis donne l'honneur de vous escrire, Monsieur, fut par les mains de Monsieur de Zuglesteyn du depuis je l'ay fait au secretaire de mad^e et presentement que la cour est de retour et que j'ay esté a Windsor expres pour m'informer de l'estat des choses par le moyen de la dame et quelques autres amys qui furent du voyage. Je puis vous mander avec certitude que le Roy n'est aucunement satisfait de la face de ses affaires par la ou il est passé. Il est bien vray qu'on luy a bien presente des addresses de la part des nonconformistes, mais hela ce n'estoient que par une main de miserables quelques fois quatre quelque fois cinq en nombre, et il est bien remarquable que pas un de ce parti s'est fait voir au Roy dans tout son voyage sur ce pied la qui fut ou gentilhomme ou bien homme de supposition parmi le reste, mais au contraire quelques uns des premiers sont bienvenus luy faire reverence parmi les honnestes gens de l'Englise Anglicane a qui ils croyent estre de leur interest de s'attacher et unir. Le Milord Ferrers Lieuten^t du Roy dans la Province de Strafford l'est venu faire reverence acompagné de pour le moins quatre cents gentilshommes qui font tous qu'il y a dans la province excepte un qui estoit malade. Le milord Northampton le remontra aussi avec un grand nombre. Ces (venus cy?) n'estoient pas fort agreables au Roy car ce ne sont pas les gens qui feront aucunement son affaire mais qui bien au contraire s'y opposeront quand l'occasion se presentera. On luy avoit fait accroire bien d'autres choses mais il se trouve trompé et non obstant qu'il a dit tout haut a ceux qui luy presenterent les addresses qu'il les requeroit d'elire de tels membres pour le prochain parlement qui soient entent de casser les loix penales et le Test, cependant la dame est encore du mesme sentiment a l'égard d'un nouveau Parlement se faisant fort que la cour ne l'hazardera pas pendant que les affaires demeurent sur ce pied. Elle m'a ordonné de vous faire ces baisemains et de vous communiquer tout ce que vous priez de vous souvenir du conseil qu'il vous donna de gagner du temps tousjours et pour sa part elle est tousjours confirmée de plu en plus dans la resolution ou vous l'avez laissé."

A paper, without signature, entitled "Relation du Voyage d'Angleterre." "Après que S[on] A[tesse] le fust embarqué le 12 de Novemb. a Hellevoot Sluys il fit voile l'apres diner suivy de toute la flotte, mais comme elle estoit si nombreuse S. A. craignoit qu'elle ne pourroit point entrer toute en mer avant la nuit; c'est pour quoy il envoya une galliotte derriere pour attendre que le dernier des vaisseaux qui devoit transporter les troupes eut levé l'ancre pour l'en venir advertir, et ordonna une fregatte pour demener a l'embouchure du Gouré avec ordre de tirer trois coups de canon quand le dernier vaisseau sortiroit de l'embouchure restant luy meme avec la flotte des vaisseaux de guerre toute la nuit quasi sans voiles a 5 ou 6 lieues en mer. Le 13^e au matin a la pointe du jour la galliotte vint rapporter que les derniers vaisseaux estoient en mer, sur quoy S. A. fit faire petites voiles pour n'aller pas trop vite par un vent d'ouest qui étoit tres-fort pour donner lieu a toute la flotte de se ranger en ordre tirant vers le canal. Vers la nuit il fallut serrer de voiles parcequ'on n'osoit pas passer le canal devant le jour de peur que cette nombreuse flotte qui occupoit une grande distance dans la mer ne reçut quelque dommage sur les bancs de Flandres d'un côté ou sur les Goedwinds de l'autre. Le 14^e au matin son Alt^e fit lever les voiles et vers les 9 heures on decouvrit la terre de Douvres et de Calais. Quelques uns de nos vaisseaux qui portoient n're Infant^{rie} s'étant perdu de la flotte pendant l'obscurité de la nuit ils se trouverent le matin a une portée de canon de la flotte Angloise qui étoit a l'ancre a Gunfleet. Comme ils s'aperceurent de leurs erreurs ils s'en revinrent au plutot. Deux vaisseaux de guerre de la flotte leur donnerent la chasse en leur tirant quelques coups de canon mais ils ne furent les joindre hors un vaisseau qui portoit 4 comp^{agnons} d'Infanterie lequel ayant perdu son gouvernail sur un banc de sable fut pris et les autres revinrent a nous. Vers le midy nous passâmes le d'etroit et vers le soir nous vismes les feux d'un cap nommé Dungenes.

EARL OF DENBIGH.

Son Alt^{se} fit encore petites voiles pour ne dévancer point ces vaisseaux qui étoit les plus meschants voiliers. Le 1^{er} au matin nous decouvrim^{es} l'Isle de Wight et vers le soir le cap de Portland quand S. A. détacha 2 fregattes et 3 vaisseaux portants de l'Infant^{ie} vers Dartmouth pour se saisir des deux Châteaux qui defendent ce havre afin d'en assurer l'entrée; mais vers ce matin quand on fut à peu pres à la hauteur du dit lieu le vent changea tout d'un coup au west si bien qu'il fut impossible de s'en servir et l'on fut obligé de le repasser et de s'en aller à Torbay ou nous arrivâmes avec toute la flotte en tres-bon ordre à 3 heures apres midy. S. A. donna d'abord les signaux pour le débarquement qui se fit sans aucun resistance si promptement que toute n're Infant^{ie} étoit à terre avant minuit mais pour la Cavallerie elle nous donna un peu plus de peine étant obligé de jeter les chevaux dans la mer pour les faire nager à terre ce qui ne se pût faire qu'en moins de 2 jours de temps. Pour toute l'artillerie am'unition et bagage nous fûmes obligé de le laisser dans nos vaisseaux et de l'envoyer à Exeter par faute de charrois et par la difficulté du pays plein de montagnes et de rochers où des chariots ne scauroit passer. Le 1^{er} nous marchâmes à Paynton un village à l'autre coté de la baye où nos troupes camperent. Le lendemain nous marchâmes à Neuton Bushel ou la Cavallerie qui avoit été un jour plus long temps à débarquer que l'Infant^{ie}, nous vint rejoindre. Le 1^{er} nous marchâmes de Neuton à Chidley toute l'armée logeant dans les villages aux environs. Le 1^{er} Son Alt^{se} marcha avec ses gardes du corps, quatres bataillons d'Infanterie et deux regiments de Dragons à Exeter laissant la Cavall^{ie} dans les villages entre Neuton et Exeter. Il fut reçu dans cette ville avec de tres-grandes acclamations du peuple et une si grande foule et presse qu'à peine put-il passer à cheval dans les rues. Il ne se put rien ajouter aux innombrables du peuple, mais l'écuyer du Duc de Monmouth qui étoit arrivée dans le voisinage de cette Province et où le Roy avoit fait pendre de centaines de gens avoit tellement intimidé les gentilshom^{es} qu'ils n'osoit encore declarer leurs sentiments quoy qu'ils étoit bons. Dans les autres Provinces ny mesme dans l'armée du Roy il n'en étoit pas de même. Trois ou 4 jours apres que S. A. fut arrivé en cette ville my Lord Colchester, L^d de la Compag^{ie} des Gardes du Corps, le my L^d Dover, M^r Warton, Coll^l Godfrey et encore 10 ou 12 autres arriverent icy et 2 jours apres arriva Coll^l Bemont celui qui quitta dernièrement à Portsmouth et encore quelques autres officiers avec luy. Le 1^{er} arriverent dans nos quartiers tout le reg^t du Duc de S^t Albans de Cavall^{ie}, my L^d Cornbury Coll^l de Dragons avec tous les officiers et 100 Dragons de son Reg^t et 30 hom^{es} avec un officier du Reg^t du Roy de Cavall^{ie} qui a été autrefois au comte d'Oxford lequel regiment devoit être tout venu étant déjà à 2 lieues de nos quartiers, mais ils se crurent poursuivis et semirent en confusion la nuit si bien que l'on ne put scavoir où ils étoit allez; mais, nous avons appris du depuis qu'ils étoit retournés à leurs quartiers. Selon les informations que nous eumes ceux qui étoit venu devoit être suivi de bien d'autres. My lord Abbington nous vint trouver aussy. Cette ville est située dans un fort bon pays mais les chemins sont fort merchants. Il n'y a pas un seul chariot qui puisse aller du côté d'ou nous som^{es} venu, tout s'y portant par des chevaux ce qui étoit la cause que nous fûmes obligés d'y rester quelques jours pour assembler des chevaux de charge de ce pays et des chariots et charrettes des Provinces voisines sans quoy nous ne fûmes pas transporter avec nous ny vivres ny am'unitions de guerre. Les Gentilshom^{es} de la Province de Devonshire aussy bien que des autres Provinces voisines commencerent à venir à nous en assez bon nombre. Le 1^{er} S. A. alla voir les troupes qui étoit venues les jours passés de l'armée du Roy. Il les trouva belles et les chevaux en meilleur état que l'on n'avoit crû apres les grandes marches qu'ils venoit de faire. Il y avoit le reg^t du Duc de S^t Albans qui fait deux escadrons que Son Alt^{se} donna à Mons^r Langetone qui en étoit Lieutenant Collonel et qui les avoit emenés; un autre escadron de Dragons de my Lord Cornbury luy même present avec quasi tous les officiers de son regiment et puis entre 30 et 40 chevaux du Reg^t du Roy dont le Duc de Barwyk est Collonel et par cy devant le Comte d'Oxford avec luy ses officiers. Le 1^{er} et Le 1^{er} une grande quantité des Gentilshom^{es} des Provinces vinrent joindre S. A. et les nom^{es} Prop^{os}és à nom^{er}. Les principaux sont S^r William Portland, M^r Seymour, Collonel Luttrell, M^r Roles, &c. Le 2^o une partie des Troupes commencerent à marcher en avant pour faire place aux autres pour le lendemain. Ce même jour Son Alt^{se} recut des lettres de l'amiral Herbert de Torbay que
