1642, Sept. 9. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.—I received the letter you sent me from your father; I had one other the old man brought me you sent to him; it was a very sad one, and his word was this of you: Madam, he hath ever lain near my heart and truly he is there still; that he had many afflictions upon him, and that you had used him unkindly. This was the effect of it. He is passionate and much troubled. I believe that you declared yourself for the Parliament maybe he would have the King think he was a little displeased with you for going that way; if you can be absent from the Parliament I think it would be very well. I am sure I should think it a very great happiness to me your coming and your sweet lady's. Now let me entreat you, as a friend that loves you most heartily, not to write passionately to your father, but overcome him with kindness. Good man, I see he is infinitely melancholy for many other things, I believe, besides the difference betwixt you. For God's sake give nothing to the Parliament directly nor indirectly. I hope there will be peace. The Parliament will show their great strength which certainly will cause the King to yield to most of their demands. I will set up your stuff carefully, I hope it will be safe, tho' we be threatened because we gave nothing to the Parliament. We have great store of soldiers now at St. Alban's, came to night, and they say threescore carts of amunition and things for that use, and ten great pieces drawn upon wheels, and the Inns of Court Gentlemen to guard my Lord's person is come too, they say, very fine and very well horsed. If these soldiers be passed I hope we shall have no more to frighten us. I thank you for your news. My Lord Willmot hath been a soldier, an experienced man he is, therefore it is well to make him

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

safe. Mr. Goring, I hope, must be punished roundly. God hath blessed your proceedings in Parliament wonderfully. I hope we may live to see this a happy kingdom yet. I believe the Queen will be here shortly. Dr. Myerne told me he heard so much. . . .

1642, Sept. 10. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney. I sent you a scribbled paper yesterday, but that I desired, I see, is not to be had, for my Lord of Essex is gone by. Two load of your stuff is come, which I have set up in the safest place of my house; I hope it will be so, and all mine here, tho' we have been much threatened. Your declaration is so high that I have hopes of peace. . . . I had a letter this morning from your father, dated the 7th of this month. I see he finds some more of his friends go off from what he expected . . . he saith they are stronger than is believed.

1642, Sept. 11, Matton. Marg. Eure to Sir R. Verney.

1642, Sept. 12. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney . . . Now for the papers. Since my Lord of Essex is gone, and his soldiers, I presume, all will think there will be no great advantage to be had by those papers, so be pleased to let them alone. I am sorry to hear the Marquis' castle is so impregnable. I pray God send them of the Parliament side good succours there. I am sorry to hear their soldiers in Northampton are so unruly.

1642, Sept. 14, Dublyne.—Edmund Verney to Sir R. Verney. What I feared is proved too true, which is your being against the King: give me leave to tell you in my opinion 'tis most unhandisomely done, and it grieves my heart to think that my father already, and I, who so dearly love and esteem you, should be bound in consequence (because in duty to our King) to be your enemy. I hear it is a great grief to my father. I beseech you to consider that Majesty is sacred . . . I believe ye will all say ye intend not to hurt the King, but can any of ye warrant any one shot to say it shall not endanger his very person. I am so much troubled to think of your being of the side you are, that I can write no more, only I shall pray for peace . . . P.S. There is news come this day that the Irish have many armies on foot; your distractions in England are sport for them, and ye keep us so beggarly that we are all weary of the service. Robin Turville was about a month or five weeks since shot dead, and is much lamented. Frank Rogers, as gallant a man as lives, was two days since most dangerously hurt with a sword, in a most gallant charge against the enemy. I am now almost recovered of a fever that I was given over by the physician for a dead man for almost a week; it hath cost me near 50*l*. but God that laid me down had provided it for me in pillage from the enemy whilst I had the command of a castle some 12 miles from Dublin, now I am in Dublin again where I am likely to continue this whole winter; for want of money we are not able to stir into the field any more this year.

1642, Sept. 14. (Received). Cary (Lady) Gardiner to Sir R. Verney. . . . I am in a great deal of vexation for poor Oxford, for this day there is 1,200 soldiers come thither, and I am afraid that they will make a great massacre of all the books; they do threaten them extremely. What cannot be billeted in the town of Oxford is sent to all the towns about; we look for them suddenly. I hope they will be better than their promises, for if they are not, the gentlemen of the country will have little left; truly I speak this with sorrow, for we are like to taste it if threats prove true. I am in a mighty fright. . . . P.S. I have sent you some things of mine which I desire house room for . . .

1642, Sept. 19, Cuddesden.—Thomas Gardiner to Sir Ralph Verney. . . . Thanks him for taking care of a trunk. Other counties are ignorant of the miseries of ours; one extravagant word spoken but by one man is enough to confiscate the goods of a whole family to the Parliament soldiers; what their cause is I judge not, but methinks 'tis a strange kind of justice to do that by force which cannot be done by reason, and I am persuaded that conscience hath much to do on both sides which, tho' it may chance to be erroneous, yet ought to be respected. But these considerations enter not into vulgar hearts. The gentry (say they) have been our masters a long time, and now we chance to master them; and now they know their strength, it shall go hard but they will use it . . .

1642, Sept. 29. (Received).—The Countess of Sussex to Sir Ralph Verney. . . . And now let me tell you I am as sad as may be to think of these miserable times. . . . Your father sends me word in his last letter that he hath now more hopes of peace than he had, because they had a considerable army, which makes me fear there will be much blood spilt; many brave gentlemen they say [] failed which is grievous thing to think on. I fear your father has given no answer to your letter.

1642, Sept. the last, S. N., Breda. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney.—I thank you most kindly for your letter and news of my coronell, tho' truly his coming here, I think, will advantage me nothing at all, for I doubt he will bring so many of his cavaliers over that dare not shew their faces in England for this action, that did there fall at the companys of his regiment he could not content them half . . . The 7th of the next month the report is our Queen goes from hence to England; there is 14 states men-of-war making ready to conduct her Majesty over; there were 250 soldiers going to the King from hence, with 9 other officers, but are stopped by the Council of State; the Captain that should have conducted these men over is clapped into prison for not acquainting first his masters of it, yet he had his Highness' leave for to do it . . . Great store of amunition and arms going from hence to the King have been by order from the States stopped of late; the messenger the House sent to them came in good time, or else there had been arms in England afore this to have armed 10,000 men more than now there is.

1642, Oct. 9, N. S., Breda.—The same to the same. . . . Within these 4 days my Colonel was stricken in his left side with the dead palsey and lieth now speechless and knows nobody; in case he doth die the lieutenant is now in election of getting the company. As soon of I heard the news of it, I sent my man with a letter to Lord Goring to know, if I did stand for it, whether he would countenance me in my suit to his Highness or not; with all I desired him in case his son were come over that he would be pleased to speak in my behalf to him for it . . . I durst not offer him money, but, by-the-bye, I gave him to understand that my father or I would be willing to consent to what in his judgment he thought most fit for me to do in it, and in case he doth fall, and that he did affect it, my father would acknowledge it as a particular engagement.

1642, Oct. 13, Sir R. Verney to his brother Gardiner. (Copy). For your trunk it is not in my power to give it a protection, but if you will venture it here it shall run the same fortune that my own must do. How full of hazard that may be I leave to your better judgment, for they say the King is coming hither with all his forces; I believe he is on the march already. You say 'tis strange justice that the Parliament soldiers should do that by force which could be done by reason; 'tis true 'tis very unfit for them to make themselves judges of what is reasonable; but on the other side, you know when reason will not prevail, force must be used; the law were nothing without a coercive power; but enough of this.

1642, Oct. 16, S. N., Breda.—Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Has received his of the 15th of Sept. I confess the employment with you I hold to be much better, were the continuance of it certain as this here, and the cause so just as that of Ireland; as earnest as I am in pressing to attain to a better fortune, yet my prayers are daily for peace in that kingdom; to speak the truth, I must needs say of late I have been much crossed in my advancement; when I am alone and think of the maliciousness of that man which did prevent me of it, it makes me mad, and in a manner weary of my profession, for if I possess my collonel once against me, as long as he lives I shall not get a company . . .

1642, Oct. 19. (Received). Cary Gardiner to Sir Ralph Verney. . . . P.S. I hear the King is coming up to London, and am very glad at it, for I shall hope to see my father then, for I hope to be in London some part of this winter.

1642, Oct. 25. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney . . . My brother Ned is a woful man to have to do with, so furious, and everything must be as he list; I move not to send for my coach horses, for they will be taken away, I fear. My Lady Monmouth sent her horses to Moor yesterday to fetch up her children, and she was taken way from her servant.

1642, Oct. 27,* Ano-on-the-Hill.—Sir Edward Sidenham to Sir Ralph Verney.—For all our great victory I have had the greatest loss by the death of your noble father that ever any friend did, which, next to my wife and master, was the greatest misfortune that by death could have fallen to me; he himself killed two with his own hands, whereof one of them had killed poor Jason and broke the point of his standard at push of pike

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

* Sir Ralph Verney has endorsed this "And just after Edgehill battle."

SIR
H. VERNEY.
BART.

before he fell, which was the last account I could receive of any of our own syde of him: the next day the King sent a herald to offer mercy to all that would lay down arms, and to enquire for my Lord of Lynsee, my Lord Wyllowby, and him; he brought word that my Lord Lynsee was hurt, your father dead, and my Lord Wyllowby only prisoner; he would neither put on armes or buff cote the day of battle, the reason I know not. The battle was bloody on your side, for your horse ran away at the first charge, and our men had the execution of them for 3 miles; it began at 3 o'clock and ended at six. The King is a man of the least fear and the greatest nerve and resolution that ever I saw, and had he not been in the field we might have suffered. My Lord of Essex is retired in great disorder to Warwick; for the next morning he suffered his cannon to be taken away within musket shot of his army, and never offered to hinder them; it is said there was killed and run away since 8,000 of his army; this day the King took in Banberie; our army daily increases . . . P.S. There is delivered to me 52 cornets and colors which was taken. I believe there be many more.

1642, Oct. 27, Covent Garden. (Copy). Sir R. Verney to —. I never loved to be the messenger of ill news, therefore I forbore to send you this, which is the saddest and deepest affliction that ever befell any poor distressed man . . . There is no absolute certainty of his death that I can yet learn, but sure 'tis too true. I have sent 3 messengers to both armies to be informed; on Saturday I expect one of them back, in the meantime I am forced to make diligent enquiries after that which (if it prove true) will make me most unhappy.

1642, Oct. 27. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.—Saying that she has received news of Sir Edmund Verney's death.

1642, Oct. 31. (Copy). Sir R. Verney to the Countess of Sussex.—Last night I had a servant from my Lord of Essex's army that tells me there is no possibility of finding my dear father's body, for my Lord General, my Lord Brooke, my Lord Grey, Sir Sam. Luke, and 20 others of my acquaintance assured him he was never taken prisoner, neither were any of them ever possessed of his body, but that he was slain by an ordinary trooper. Upon this my man went to all the ministers of several parishes, that buried the dead that were slain in the battle, and none of them can give him any information of the body. One of them told him my Lord Aubigny was like to have been buried in the fields but that one came by chance that knew him and took him into a church, and there laid in the ground, without so much as a sheet about him; and so divers others of good quality were buried. The ministers keep tallies of all that were buried and they amount to near 4,000.

1642, Nov. 4. To all colonells, &c. and other officers and soldiers under my command, and to all others whom it may concern. Signed by Essex. Protection for the Earl of Sussex; to prevent the plundering of his house, &c., at Gorhambury.

1642, Nov. 4. Hauge.—Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.—About his failing to get his company . . . I wrote this day to my father by Sir Thomas Dorrell.

1642, Nov. 5. Thomas Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.— . . . My full resolution is to go down to the King's army about Wednesday next, and there to proffer my service to His Majesty . . . I am in noways able to go unless you will be pleased either to lend or give me a horse . . .

1642, Nov. 7. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.— . . . Terrell was returned from my Lord of Essex to us with his protection. My Lord Mandefill said he would see us as he passed by on Saturday, but he came not; the soldiers were civil as they passed by; my Lord with all his company marched from St. Arbons (Albans) on Sunday morning. I hope we shall not be plundered on that side; my fear is most of Prince Robberte, for they say he hath little mercy where he comes . . . I was with my Lady Devensher, who heartily laments your good father's death . . . truly as I passed through London methought it looked like a most desolate place, and so many soldiers at every gate with a cannon that it frightened me to pass by as I came from Fisher's Folly. I could not see my Lord Willmote, it was so late, but I hope I shall be safe without his favour here.

1642, Nov. 8. Thos. Verney to Sir R. Verney.—This night I am gone towards the King's army but how I shall proceed in my voyage I know not; but I go as privately as may be . . .

1642, Nov. 8. Castellyones. Mag. Bruce to Sir R. Verney.— . . . The rebels come every day to our town; they took away from my Lady four nights ago four and 24 fat oxen, threescore and ten milch cows, besides our working oxen; they vow to fire our town and house, and we have little resistance for them; God help us out of this misery for we are in great distress, for in the loss of my Lord we lost the prop and stay of our country.

1642, Nov. 9. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney. If there be so little hopes of peace we are like all to be in a most miserable condition. . . . I sent a chest to Coleharbort to Goldsmith; if you remove your things from Coven Garden to a safer place in your thoughts than that, I wish my chest was with your goods. I am making up all my doors, or as many as I can, to keep my house safe; my servants give me hopes they were able to keep out one hundred if they should come upon us. . . . I came down Watfart way and met with no soldiers after I was past Tiborne, there was many there; but I fear now most ways will be dangerous. I hear my Lady Loveles was plundered almost to her smock, and her house the same night.

1642, Nov. 11, Colebrook. Sir Edward Sidenham to Sir R. Verney.—It hath pleased God to lay a heavy punishment upon this land by a civil war, and a sore affliction upon yours and our family by the loss of your noble father.— . . . I shall desire the favour from you that you will be pleased in respect the King has bestowed on me the Marchall's place that I may have your estate, both of the prison and goods there, upon such terms as you will part with them to another.

1642, Nov. 13, N. S., Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.—I have by favour of my friends procured leave of his Highness to hold up my place for 4 months, so that I shall assuredly attend our Queen over. I go from hence within this hour to my garrison to fetch my things there, but make no stay, for her Majesty, as I do hear, is fully resolved to depart from hence within this 2 days, if the King be so near London as I hear reported.

1642, Nov. 14. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney. . . . I have made up some of the doors and piled them up so with wood that I believe my house is able to keep out a good many now; if we escape plundering I shall account it a great mercy. They are all about us here in such grievous fears that if they see but a gentleman riding, they think it is to rob them. London, I hear, is a most fearful place to be in, but I hope the King will be glad to hearken to a treaty for peace, and then I imagine it will soon flourish again.

1642, Nov. 17, Woking. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney. Being now at Woking, in Hampshire, at one Capt. Souch his house, I thought good to acquaint you with my proceedings in the King's army. . . . I have found a faithful friend of Sir E. Sidenham and of my Cousin Leak. . . . I am proffered a coronett's place under a troop of horse, or a lieutenant's place under a foot company; or if I am able to maintain myself Sir E. Sidenham is promised a foot company; but you know the uttermost of my estate, therefore I have refused it. . . . I am a trooper under Capt. Souch his command, and I intend never to be preferred higher. . . . The King is very strong. . . . The King is now at Oatlands, but how long he will stay I know not.

1642, Nov. 19, Hartford Bridge. The same to the same.

1642, Nov. 19. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney. . . . I heard from my daughter Lee to-night; she and her children are well, but I find some that she thought good neighbours have done ill offices, but she hath escaped as having a protection. . . . This country is raising 200 dragoners; they say they must be to ride up and down for the safety of the country, and to give notice if any forces come in, that they may prepare to defend themselves. . . . I should return you as many letters as I have from you, but that truly I know not into what hands they may come, for I think those that go to London are opened oftener than them that come from London. P.S. I will not write my name hereafter.

1642, Nov. 21. (Received).—The same to the same. (Unsigned).— . . . If the army go towards Oxford it will make us easier here I hope, but our rents will be paid ill, we shall suffer that way I am sure; I do already, both from Essex and there.

Two Drafts of letters by Sir Ralph Verney to Sir Ed. Sidenham. . . The first is dated 14th, the second Nov. 24th; also some memoranda.

1642, Nov. 14. . . . All letters are intercepted, therefore at this present I shall only tell you that I think my goods in the prison cost within this 10 months about 100*l*; if you please to appoint any friend to view

SIR
H. VERNEY.
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

them, I will shew him the inventories. . . . The bearer, Mr. Denington, is a man that understands many things concerning the place better than any other, and my father ever made great good use of him. . . .

1642, Nov. 24.—I hear you have been so favourable to me as to procure a protection for Middle Claydon. . . . I doubt not but it will be sent time enough to do me good, tho' divers of my poor neighbours are most miserably plundered. . . . I wish I had as much power to preserve the revenue of your place from a present failing as you have to preserve my goods from an utter ruin. This night I acquainted my Lady Cooke and Mrs. Daniell with those things I thought most material and fittest to be done for the present. . . . P.S. I writ to you about the prison and goods, but the letter was often intercepted, and at last it was sent by W. Murray. . . .

From the memoranda it appears that Sir Ralph had a lease of the house used as a prison at 50*l.* per annum. That he had paid a fine for it, and that he considered it worth, at least, 100*l.* per annum, and that the goods there were his.

1642, Nov. 28. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney. . . . I am thinking to put my hangings and best stuff in one of the round turrets over my chamber, and wall it up. Send me word what you think of it, and whether I shall put any of your things there.

1642, Dec. 1. (Received). The same to the same. . . . All the trainbands and many are gone out of this country to Buckinghamshire. I hope Claydon will be safe; I wish Gorambery may be so too. The King hath sent out a good proclamation if his soldiers will obey it; I hope your Parliament will do the like, and then I believe we shall be in the more safety. I hid none of your stuff in this hole I am making up, for I dare not adventure your hangings and carpets, being out of trunks. Your hangings I smelt on the other day, and truly they must be very well aired.—. All your other things are sewed up in bundles and trunks. . . .

1642, Nov. 27, Odyham.—Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney. I sent you two letters bearing date this instant month. . . . Now since that I thought good to give you notice of my preferment I lately crept into, which is a coronett of a troop of horse under Capt. Allen Zouch, and I am this day going with my capt. to the court which is at Redding to have my commission signed by his Majesty. How long I shall stay at the court I know not, but I intend to return very speedily to my garrison, which is at Odyham, in Hampshire, within 3 miles of Hartford Bridge.—Asks his brother to send him some money through Mr. Wild, at the sign of the Swan at Hartford Bridge, and his clothes, &c.—I have not received one farthing from his Majesty since I came down, but I hope now it will come in plenty, because the King hath lately received good store of money out of Denmark and other parts. All the favour I am able to do for you at this instant is to go along with the King to Wallingford, and so to those parts where you have any land and keep it from plundering, which I am resolved to do; and being there I will take such order that you shall not receive any loss by any of the King's forces. I intend to get a protection from General Rivers in mine own name to secure your estate and your tenants.

1642, Nov. 23, Court at Redding.—“Charles R.” Order not to billet any soldiers in Sir Ralph Verney's house at Middle Claydon.

1642, Nov. 27, Redding. “Rupert.” Protection for Sir Ralph Verney of Middle Claydon.

1642, Nov. 27, Redding.—Sir Edward Sidenham to Sir Ralph Verney.—. . . The King by this messenger has sent to the Parliament. Oh! that we were so happy that peace might be restored to our earth; I fear our sins will hinder this great blessing so much desired. I am confident by the King and all honest men of both sides. . . . P.S. I sent the protection to Claydon on Thursday last, and one for Sir Alexander Denton also.

1642, Dec. 13. (Received). Cary Gardiner to Sir R. Verney.—The Parliament has frightened us from hill and since has frightened our carriage that was coming to us back again, and there it is in danger of plundering, for we hear that it was put to a vote in the House of Commons whether my brother Pallmar's house should be plundered or no. . . . I shall have the greatest loss if they plunder. We hear'tis Sir Roger Borgin (Burgoyne) that moved it; if it were, I hope you can persuade him from it. I would have sent for them but that your soldiers lie at Alsbury. My brother's man was taken at Alsbury and 52*l.* taken from him, and he imprisoned and lies by it; pray if you can say Sir Roger Borgin's fury, do.

1642, Dec. 9. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.—. . . I heard from a messenger that went into Bucingamsher that there was near 4,000 of the cavaliers within a mile of Alsbury, and told me Prince Robert was there; the fellow saw them and they staid at Etropole, and all drank there; they lay the night before at Tame as the fellow told me; the fellow saw Prince Roberde at Oxford on Sunday last, and he told me for certain the prince was amongst them.

1642, Dec. 24. (Received). The same to the same. . . . We have news at St. Alban's that my Lord Newcastle hath had a great defeat, if it be so, I hope it will be prejudice to the treaty for peace. . . .

1642, Dec. 16. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.—. . . Will. Crofts, I thought, would not have left the Queen, I had thought he would have been for France now the colonel is dead. I hear nothing of Sir Ralph Hoppton; I pray send me word what you hear of him. . . .

1642, Carry Gardiner to Sir Ralph Verney. I am very glad to hear that my trunk is come so safe to town. . . . I thought London the safest, for we are likely to have no quiet, here is nothing but soldiers going up and down; the first that came under the command of Col. Brown, a coachman, passed very quickly away and left no scores; but Col. Goodins' soldiers, and those that came to guard Lord Sise's person, has pillaged all the colleges but three already, and this day are about the rest; and says when they have done the rest, they will see what pillage the country has, so for aught as I see the country is like to be undone. . . . My Lady Lee on Thursday last came to Oxford to speak with my Lord Say concerning the arms she had sent to the King, that if she could that she would have made peace with him; but he, not like a courtier, would not listen to her, so she returned away with a great blame the country laid upon her; her being a widow made her to be a little pitied, t'was that her fearfulness. Pray God send us better times, or I shall wish myself at London.

1642, The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.—. . . My son William sent my Lady very good news yesterday, if it be true, that the King was come to Leicester.

(1642). D. L. (Dorothy Leake) to Lady Verney.—. . . I have not written a very long time, at first I knew not how to convey my letters, and since this country has been so troubled with soldiers of both sides, that passengers could not have free egress up or down. What your uncle and his family and house hath suffered you will hear from those that are nearer. . . . This kingdom continues still in a miserable condition and little or no hopes of better days. . . . I dread this summer. Both sides are very strong. Nothing but a ruin can be expected. You are seemingly happy in being absent. . . .

1642, Dec. 7. Account of monies received by Mr. Withers and Mr. Carter, on the subscriptions for the Lord Primate of Armagh, by some of the inhabitants of Coven Garden.—Among the subscribers are Lord Capel (20*l.*), Charles Dymoke, Adrian Scroope, Matthew Hales.—Sum total, 93*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* Some subscriptions are for 2 quarters, and some for one quarter; 24 subscriptions.

1642, April 3. Receipts to Sir R. Verney for 17*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* and 5*l.* for the same purpose.

1642, Dec. 26, Castelyones. Mag. Bruce to Sir R. Verney. . . . I fear we shall be forced to leave this kingdom very suddenly for want of meat, men, and ammunition, for all that is out of the enemy's hand will not serve the English 3 months. The Parliament hath made a fresh President, and he is our General of this province; he hath so many of his friends in rebellion, and so many of his friends and kindred which he gives protection and are protected by him, that they outdoe all us poor people; if you give not a remove to him, I fear you and us will have cause to repent of it. . . . Since my Lord died they fear nobody, for when he lived he kept all his own country in order, they durst not a man stir, and they be as bad as the worst; they are protected by the President within a mile of our castle. . . . The bearer of this letter, Sir Carles Worcester, I have been much obliged to him for his kind respect to me, and he tells me it is for your father's sake.

1642, Dec. 13. (Received). The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney. . . . Some report that the King's troops hath driven much cattle out of the grounds in Bucingamsher, but I can hear no certainty of it. . . .

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1642, Jan. 29. Saxham.—Sir Henry Crofts to Lady Verney. Fearing that the troubles will extend to his country, and being in extreme solicitude about his daughter Hester, he asks Lady Verney to receive her until this tyranny be overpast. Hopes God will direct him to some place of retreat, whereby he may avoid having that tendered to him which he is resolved and bound in conscience never to subscribe unto. His son is the bearer of the letter.

Many letters from Eleanor, Countess of Sussex, to Sir R. Verney in Covent Garden in the Piatso.

1642, Jan. 10. Thomas Verney from the Fleet to Sir R. Verney.—Not long since he sent a letter from Hartford Bridge. "But the losing of Farnham Castle" caused me to retreat, with a resolution to march to "Oxford. But in our march we received a warrant "from his Majesty to repair with these small forces we "then had to Chichester, there to stay till further "orders. Before we were well settled in the town it "was besieged by the enemy.—After ten days' siege "we were compelled, from want of ammunition, to yield "the town upon quarters; we were all taken prisoners "and plundered of all except the cloth on our backs." This caused him to be destitute of everything, but his brother (thanks him) has been with him twice, and supplied him with a band and a pair of cuffs and a whole shirt, a half shirt, and two handkerchers and forty shillings—he speaks strong for the King's cause.—Says his father's death made his action warrantable.

1642, Jan. 27. The same to the same.—He threatens to print and tell his own loyalty and his brother's unkindness.—Asks to be fitted out to Barbadoes.

16 . . Mag. Bruce to the Earl of Cork.—Telling of his daughter Lady Barrymore.

1643, April 10. Dublin.—Edmund Verney to ———. Times grow worse and worse in Ireland.—The very officers want money to feed themselves.—About three weeks since the enemy gave the Marquis of Ormond battle (where I also was). God gave us the victory—the rebels were more than two for one yet we lost not above ten men, but there lay slain of the enemy above 200, most of which are commanders and men of very good quality, and we took Col. Cullen, Lord-General of their army, Serjeant-Major Butler, and six captains prisoners.

1643. Margaret Pulteney to ———.

1643. The Countess of Sussex to R. Verney. (He was feoffee in trust for her.)

1643. Sir Ed. Sidenham to R. Verney.—(In 1643 he told the Countess of Sussex he should settle land for creditors notwithstanding her; she thanks him.)

1643, June 9, Clapham.—Roger Burgoyne to R. Verney.—Last night Mr. Curtine's house, upon an information of a perfidious servant, was searched for plate, which Mr. Endimion Porter had entrusted him with, but as Mr. Curtin affirms was delivered to him by Mr. Porter in consideration of a debt.

1643, June 21. R. Verney to Sir Philip Stapleton.—Wrote on behalf of Sir Thomas Gardiner, if taken a prisoner.

1643, June 22. Sir Thomas Gardiner to Lady Verney.—Says he is now released out of Windsor Castle.—Thanks for kindness.—He is ordered to Thame immediately to receive further orders from the Lord-General.

1643, June 22. Sir Thomas Gardiner to his own honoured brother Sir R. Verney.—A letter of thanks.

1643. Letters from Joyce Verney and Lady Cary Gardiner.

1643, Sept. 23. War. Wick (i.e., Sir R. Burgoyne) to R. Verney at Gorhambury.—Since last writing has nothing to send but an imperfect relation of the fight between the two armies on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last, by a young fellow who said he was there; he says divers of our men are slain and hurt; Major Barmfeild, Coll. Tucker of the City, Captain Hunt are all slain, but it was just like Kemton field in these two respects, that there were five or six thousand slain, and of those four or five for one of the enemies to ours.—Resolved yesterday in the House of Commons that the covenant shall be taken by all the members of that House, and all the ministers of the assembly in St. Margaret's Church in Westminster on Monday next, &c.

1643, Sept. Sir John Burgoyne to ———.

1643, Feb. 19.—Harry Verney says his friend Sir Ed. Siddenham has got him to be Major of the Horse to Sir Ralph Dutton; his garrison is Sisseter.

1643, Feb. 24. Edmund Verney at Dublin to (Sir R. Verney). Alludes to his being left best of the three by his father's will, altho' it is but half what he long had a promise of. We had lately a battle at Rathcounell in Westmeath, Sir Richard Greenfield commanded in chief.—I was there and received a shot upon the collar of my doublet, which only made my neck black and blue;—we routed the enemy and took prisoner General Preston's eldest son, two captains, and a lieutenant, and killed some 200 men, and lost but three men upon the place; and yet the rebels had the advantage of a straight pass. We want nothing to finish this war speedily but money, and without it, I believe, all will be lost, for the rebels have many officers come daily to them from Flanders, and ours go by dozens into England.

1643, Feb. 25. A bond from Ralph Verney to Anne Crosse, of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, in 800*l*. If Henry Verney gets a captain's place in Coll. George Goring's company under the States of the United Provinces, and in three months thence pays Anne Crosse 400*l*., it is to be void. (23rd of May 1643 I sealed a new one.)

1643, Sept. 15. Burgoyne to R. Verney.—He had not yet applied to the House of Commons for leave of absence for Verney. He (Burgoyne) hears not a word more of the sequestration.

1643, Sept. 11. Facsimile of a letter by O'Connell to Oliver St. John.—On a march against the enemy, who has intrenched himself over against Hull.—Many of Lord Manchester's troops are come to him, they are very bad and mutinous, not to be confided in. "I have "a lovely companie; they are not anabaptists, they are "honest sober Christians, they expect to be used as "men." He wants money.

1643, Sept. 5. Susan Verney to Warwick (Sir R. Burgoyne).—As you left us, so when you please to come you may find us, speaking much, doing little. It is reported that the Earl of Macclesfield has been before Lin, and if he has not taken it yet is in a fair way to do it. They offer 10,000*l*., conditionally that he will not put a garrison into the town. Other reports.—Mr. Constantine was voted out of the House for a letter he writ which was intercepted.

1643, Sept. 4. Ursula Verney to her nephew Sir R. Verney.—Tells of Henry Verney being taken to Portsmouth a prisoner.

1643, Aug. 29. Sir R. Burgoyne to R. Verney.—The General lay at Aylesbury on Sunday night; they say he is now within 10 miles of Oxford.—The House was divided upon Sir John Evelyn yesterday. They would have committed him to Lambeth amongst the soldiers and prisoners before the House would pass their judgments upon the very matter of fact, but at last with much ado it was voted that he should be further examined; in the mean time the serjeant man to attend upon him. All the Committee of London, even the Lord Mayor, being in our House were against him. An order in the morning for a committee to put in execution the former order for sequestrating the estates of those absent without license.—He prays him to think of it seriously before he (Verney) comes. He was forced to stay in the house; there had not been left 40 members. (Indorsed, 29th Aug., written, reversed, at the foot of a short note: I think brought out by heat.)

1643, Aug. 25. Copy of Ordinance of the Lords and Commons. (An indemnity to tenants against landlords.)

1643. (Indorsed, received 10th of August). Dorothy Leek to R. Verney. Urging him to declare for the King who is in good case.

1643, Aug.—. The Countess of Sussex to . . . The burial of her lord will cost 400*l*. (There are many letters from her on business.)

1643, Oct. 31. John Chichely, at Rotterdam, to R. Verney, where the latter was sending 26 packs and mules. He wrote about them on the 26th of August.

1643, Oct. 17. W. Wick (Burgoyne) to R. Verney at Gorhambury.—Next Thursday is the day appointed for taking the covenant—he urges Verney to come up.—He can not yet meet with Coleman's sermon.—He wishes he could light upon any thing to give him satisfaction. Mentions the victory of Earl of Manchester over Lord Newcastle's army.

1643, Oct. 17. The same to the same at Gorhambury.—Since I came to the House, Sir W. Lew tells me that all the Lords took the covenant last Sunday.—Not one refused only the Lord of Lincoln was absent. Sir W. L. ——— says he will take it, and wonders Verney should hold off.—Asks Verney to come to-day or to-morrow.

1643, Oct. 12. The same to the same.—Sir William Waller laid down his commission on Monday.—Some say my Lord-General has given him another. The House were upon that business concerning the Lord-General and Sir W. Waller yesterday.

SIR
H. VERNE
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1643 (Received 12 Oct.). Edmund Verney to Lady Verney.—Asks for help.—He is about to be imprisoned for rent.

1643. Joyce Verney (wife of Thomas Verney) to Sir R. Verney at Gorhambury, at the Earl of Sussex's house.—Asks help for her husband.

Copies of Ordinances on the 11th of October and 29th of June.

1643. Several letters by J. Denton on business.

1643, Oct. 10. F. Drake to Sir R. Verney.—Yesterday Sir W. Waller resigned his commission willingly, the Lord-General offering to the Lords his commission if the other, which he thought inconsistent, were not brought in; and this day seven regiments of the City march for Redding (Reading). God send Sir W. Waller forces to comply well with my Lord-General.

1643, Oct. 7. W. Wick (Burgoyne) to Sir R. Verney.—Bad news from Beds; but thank God our friend is escaped.—I can not properly say so because he was not in their hands; he absented himself that day.—Walter Montague is in the Tower.

1643, Oct. 5. Received.—Anon. to Rodes.—Mr. H. (H. Verney) had a difference with his major. An innkeeper, a friend of the major, was there, and perhaps gave ill language to H., who shot him with a pistol, when he died. Fearing he should be cashiered he was advised by his friend to go out upon a parly, and suffer himself to be taken prisoner, and belike he is now at Portsmouth. Whether he desires to be released or not, he does not know.

1643, Oct. 4, Wickham. Thomas Baker to Sir R. Verney.—H. Verney tells him that he is treated civilly. He has two chances of release, one is that he is proposed as an exchange for Doyly, Cornet to the General's own troop; the second that he was so courteous to Lady Trencher, in Dorchester; although his quarters were four or five miles off, he with only ten or twelve soldiers lay at her house to guard it; his men were not to disturb her and his interest with the other party was to be enough to save him and his from prejudice within her walls;—but at midnight the house was lost by an irresistible party, and H. Verney was taken. His soldiers were very furious, particularly threatening that lady's house which they began to plunder, but wait the result of his negotiation with the committee.

1643, Oct. 4. F. Drake to Sir R. Verney.—There is a particular order for sequestering your uncle Denton's estate, and divers other particular persons named, if they be not present at the house by the 10th instant. Verney is not in the list, but he hears there are 20 more designed for the same danger.

1643, Oct. 3. War. Wick to Sir R. Verney, at Gorhambury.—Account of some goods in a wagon, sent apparently by or for R. Verney to Oxford, being seized by the Roundheads.

1643, Oct. 2. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney at his house in Lincoln's Inn Fields.—Last week he wrote of his having been taken prisoner at Portsmouth.—Expectation of release.

1643, Oct. 1. Original and copy of the King's protection for the house of Sir R. Verney, at Middle Claydon, co. Bucks.

1643, Oct. 1. John Fountain to Sir R. Verney.—Farewell to Sir R. V. on his departure.—And draft of Sir R. Verney's reply.

1643, Sept. 28. W. Wick (Burgoyne) to Sir R. Verney. Attended the House on Tuesday; there came in but three which had not took the covenant the day before. Sir Henry Vane, Mr. Solicitor, Sir John Franklin; the two first were ready to take it, the other desires time to consider. He (Burgoyne) mentions some whom he did or did not see in the House.—Sir Walter Erle reports that some of our forces sailed out of Poole and took divers of the King's forces, amongst which Col. Verney was one. The Lord-General came to town on Monday last; our House went in a body to wait on him on Tuesday morning. Train bands appeared before him in the afternoon in Finsborough [Finsbury] fields. When he returns is yet uncertain.

1643, Sept. 29. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney. He has been taken prisoner by Poole men, and taken to Portsmouth.

1643, Sept. 29. War. Wick to Sir R. Verney.—Uncertainty in respect of news; for certain there are divers lords slain,—as Caernarvon, Falkland, Spencer.—Some say Grandison and a French Marquis are slain. Lord Carlisle, Digby, and Germin are all three hurt. My Lord-General kept the field, and had the pillage of the dead bodies; divers city commanders on the other side were slain. Last Sunday a thanksgiving for the victory, and as I hear the like at Oxford for the victory they had. News that Prince Rupert's witch is slain. Covenant taken this day at St. Margaret's; Mr. White began with prayer. Mr. Nic, with an exhortation, succeeded him. Mr. Henderson immediately after made a thing between a speech and a preach to us on his seat, after which Mr. Nic read the covenant on the pulpit before us, all which was ingrossed on parchment; then afterwards the House of Commons went up into the chancel to subscribe their names, after them the Scotch Commissioners and the Assembly.—After the covenant was read all that should like were to hold up their hands;—there was a greater appearance of the House of Commons and of the Assembly than was expected. Mr. Lord Grey (of?) Ruthin, and Mr. Bond of the other House, by the House ordered to be the notaries to observe all that come into the House that have not taken the covenant.

1643, Sept. 24, Amsterdam. Jonas Abeels to Sir R. Verney.—Announces the safe arrival of the 14 trunks and 5 cases; he lately advised his friend, Mr. Langborne.

1643, Sept. 21. War. Wick to Sir R. Verney.—Gives news contained in a letter from Lord —, written at Cicester [Cirencester] on Saturday last. Two regiments of horse which his forces on Friday last surprised at Cicester, one belonging to Sir Nic. Crisp, the other to Col. Spencer, 400 horse and many prisoners, with 30 or 40 wagons of provisions which were provided by Prince Maurice his army. . . . Scotch business.—There is voted 30,000*l.* a month for the 18,000 foot, 2,000 horse, and 1,000 dragoons; 1,000*l.* more a month for the keeping of barracks, and three months' pay beforehand as soon as we can get it. He believes Hull is besieged.—It is reported that Hull is taken, and by others that Hull has demanded 1,000 of Newcastle's forces; let me intreat you to believe both. Sir Edw. Bainton lies dying of the new disease, as they say, in the Tower. The Parliament has given him his liberty, but he is not able to take it. It is reported that Goring gave him a drench the first night he came in.—Mentions other reports.

1643, Nov. 20. Henry Verney asks Sir R. Verney to get him out of prison.

1643, Nov. 17. Elizabeth Isham to [Sir R. Verney].—There is an hundred men in our own house; it is very hard, we being almost fifty in family.—Within one week we shall leave the house if my brother can get Tuiford.

1643, Nov. 16. Penelope Verney to Sir R. Verney.

1643, Nov. 14 and 16. W. Wick (Burgoyne) to Sir R. Verney.

1643, Nov. 16. W. Wick to William Denton.

1643, Nov. 14. R. Verney to Sir Roger Burgoyne.—If I miscarry in this journey I pray tell my executors there are 24 parcels of goods in Mr. Jason Abeel's custody in Amsterdam, two belong to Sir Ed. Sydenham's lady, and two to Mrs. Ann Holand, and twenty-seven parcels of goods now in Dr. Peter Chamberlain's custody in the Hague, of which one belongs to Mrs. Ann Hobart.—He gives some directions about some deeds.

1643, Nov. 14. Memorandum by Sir R. Verney to —. If he and his wife and two eldest children miscarry, &c. before coming to France, "let all the money in your custody be delivered to Lady Sussex." He gives other directions). Lady Sussex hath my will. (The names of his children were Edmund and Margaret.)

1643, Nov. 13. Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.—He has missed being redeemed, having got a grant from the Prince and the Committee, by the latter being delayed and others being redeemed before him.—He asks Sir R. to get him favour from the House.

1643, Nov. 11. W. Wick to Sir R. Verney. The French Ambassador was robbed last night of plate between two or 3,000*l.* in value. The Lord-General came to town—he hears it is for pay for his soldiers.

1643, Nov. 9. The same to the same.—Mr. Pierpoint came to town and sent a message to the House to have leave to go beyond sea because he could not for the present take the covenant, and was unwilling to refuse it lest he should give occasion for scandal, and that he will in the mesne time resign his estate to the Parliament, they making allowance to his wife and children. (It went against him by one vote.)

1643, Oct. $\frac{1}{2}$. Peter Chamberlain (of the English church in the Hague) to Sir R. Verney.—I have your things in my custody.—He has hired a house for them.—States the charges.

1643, Nov. 7. W. Wick to Sir R. Verney.—On money matters.—Mr. Fiennes, Sir Norton Snatchpole (Knatchbull), and Sir Philip Parker refused to take the covenant yesterday, for which they are only suspended from the House during pleasure, and until a punishment be

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

agreed on to be inflicted upon refusers. The Earl of Holland is brought up. — I have sent Coleman's sermon.

1643, Nov. 2. The same to the same. — News that the Scots have beaten the rebels in Ireland.

1643, Nov. 4. The same to the same. — A Rouen letter is mentioned.

1643, Thomas Gardiner to his sister Lady Verney.

1643, Oct. the last. W. Wick to Sir R. Verney. — Mentions a letter from Rouen, where the gentleman will try to find a house.

1643, Oct. 26 and Oct. 28. The same to the same. — In the latter he says that Sir H. Vane, the younger, and Mr. Marshall are come from Scotland; the former reports the Scotch willing and ready to serve us if they have money; they have lately received two letters from the King to prohibit their raising of the Kingdom into a body to assist the Parliament; — the other Scots are to prohibit their taking the covenant, and the two letters to be records. Sir H. Vane thinks their answer will be that they could not record the letters or obey his commandments. — The Scot's orders against those that refuse to take the covenant.

1643, Oct. 24. Edmund Verney (Dublin) to Sir R. Verney. — Bad state in Ireland; — he is obliged to borrow 100l. — Thinks there will be good store of the forces shortly in England. "I shall be sure to be one though I came with as mortal a dislike to those you wish too well to as any man that shall come over, yet I pray be assured, &c."

1643, Oct. 23. W. Wick to Sir R. Verney. — Report that Prince Maurice is dead at Exeter of the new disease (this is afterwards contradicted). — Letters to the Speaker from our committee in Scotland, saying that the Scots are ready to come but cannot do so without money.

1643, Nov. 30. — Pass for Ralph Smith, his wife, man, and maid to pass by water to Lee in Essex and return; by warrant of the Lord Mayor, Jo. Bendinge. Begins. To all captains and others whom it concerns. (Seal, 3 boars' heads, erased.)

1643, Nov. — A reply by Sir R. Verney to one of Edmund's letters from Ireland.

1643. Draft of reply to a letter of the 24th of Oct. by Edmund Verney, which he says did not come till his clothes were aboard; and he had sold even the small remainder of his very chamber plate.

1643, Nov. — Draft of a letter of farewell to Lady Sussex by Sir R. Verney.

1643, Dec. — Ditto to Burgoyne. — (The finale to each of these letters is in the same words.)

1643, Dec. — A letter from Edmund Verney at Oxford.

1643, Dec. 5. Thomas Gardiner (Oxford) to his sweet sister (Lady Verney), written in Edmund Verney's hand.

1643, Dec. 3¹. R. Smith (Sir R. Verney), at Rotterdam, to Lady Sussex. — He arrived there on Sunday.

1643, Dec. — Letters from the Countess of Sussex to Lady Verney.

1643, Dec. — Thomas Verney to Lady Verney. — Speaks of the smothering of his mother's will to deprive him of a legacy. — Takes credit for having preserved Claydon from pillage, saying that after the surrender of Oxford he gave out to all commanders that brought up men from Flanders and other parts, that he marched to Claydon himself, and therefore desired them to march another way, which they did.

1643, Jan. 19. Order by "Charles R." Headed, "To our Commissioners of Inquiry, officers or soldiers of our arms, &c., particularly the tenants of Sir R. Verney." — Sir Ralph Verney went abroad not without our special license. No person is to retain his rents, but suffer his officers to receive them.

1643, Jan. 25. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney at Rotterdam. — Gainsbro', in Lincolnshire, is taken by Sir John Meldrum; Grafton House by Gossiter, taken by Major-General Skippon. Almonbury, Surrey, by Sir W. Waller, who has at this 8,000 men; he is now besieging Arundell Castle, and by this time, I believe, has taken it. Coll. Fynes this day sennight was condemned by the Council of War to be beheaded, but it is possible that he may live as long as you or I.

1643, Jan. 25. The same to the same at Rone. — The Earls of Bedford and Holland came to London, but were not entertained by the Parliament, especially by the House of Commons. The House of Commons has purged itself of divers malignant members, the last Monday; I believe 40 or 50 cast out; some have a week's time given them to come in. Report of a great victory that Sir T. Fairfax and Sir W. Brereton have had over the Lord Byron's forces. Lord Lannercreek, Duke Hamilton's brother, has got out of prison from Oxford; the Duke suffers very hard imprisonment.

1643, Feb. 1. The same to the same. — Thank God our brethren of Scotland, according to their promises, are come into England, and I believe are by this time at York. They have sent forth a brave and resolute declaration, full of wisdom and piety, and both Houses of Parliament consented to it unanimously without a negative voice. (He gives the heads). First. They come relying on God. (Some cypher.)

1643, Feb. 6. The same to the same. — Not much news from Uxbridge; the first three days they treated of religion.

1643, Feb. 8. The same to the same. — He refers to his (Burgoyne's) last letter, when he sent in part the substance of the declaration of the Scots, and voted by both Houses of Parliament, which declares mercy to those who come in before the 1st of March, and severe proceedings against those who do not. He thinks those who do not come in, and their posterity, will be ruined. (Some cypher.)

1643, Feb. 15. The same to the same. — The Scots we hear are at Newcastle, some say further. — Rumours of parliamentary proceedings. — The Parliament refused to treat with a Council of the King which had broken up, because they could not agree, as the Council did not allow the other side to be a Parliament, but the Earl of Essex was ordered to give a reply. Advises Parliament men, such as Sir W. Denton and Sir John Holland to come over. The House was called, and they never excused, and time given because they had leave to go over. He hears Lord Buckhurst is absent, but whether he had leave, as yet, he had not heard.

1643, Feb. 22. Ditto. — On business, and in cypher.

1643, Feb. the last. — Ditto. — It is expected every day when the Scots shall enter Newcastle. The Palsgrave, I am informed, sent letters to both Houses of Parliament acknowledging them a Parliament, full of respect, and hoping as soon as peace comes they will not be unmindful of their former promises in settling him in his kingdom. — And some expressions concerning the covenant which he seemed to approve.

1643, ^{Feb. 26} March 7. Sir R. Verney to Ann Hobart. — These distractions have banished all mirth out of England.

1643, March 7. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney. — Lord Westmoreland, long under restraint, has petitioned to be admitted into favour. — And promises to be a true servant to the Parliament and Commonwealth for the future. This is to be considered, but not yet granted. The King sent a letter this week to the Parliament at Westminster, desiring that it and the Parliament at Oxford might meet and consider of a way to remove the trouble. — He heard by a Parliament man that Parliament will appoint a day for the King to come to Parliament. . . . Our forces have taken Hillsden House co. Bucks, and Sir Alex. Denton and young Sir W. Smith, once of the House of Commons, but now a Coll. in it, with many arms, men, and cattel. Col. Cromwell faced Oxford last week with 1,500 men, and drove all the cattel from the very wall to his quarters. Sir W. Udall is alive, and mending at his house in Hampshire; the Parliament has given him till the 1st of April to come in. (And some cypher.)

1643, March 21. The same to the same. — Sir A. Denton's house burned down, and he is brought up to the Tower. Newcastle nor Newark taken. (Cypher.) The King writ to the Parliament, but it was to no good intent, I believe, because of the votes of the Lords and Commons of Parliament at Oxford, as they call themselves, to the effect that all the Lords and Commons at Westminster who have voted to assist the Earl of Essex, or for a new broad seal, or the coming in of the Scots are guilty of high treason. The House of Commons, notwithstanding, as he is informed, passed a vote that the Committee of both Kingdoms should prepare such propositions of peace to both Houses of Parliament as they may resolve to stand to. All the States Ambassadors of the Low Countries desire to interpose between the King and the Parliament. — He hears from a friend to-day that Hopton Castle, in Shropshire, which is Mr. Wallop's castle, of the House of Commons, being strictly besieged by the enemy, was delivered up by our soldiers on condition of quarter and marching away, but no sooner had the enemy power of them but they most miserably hacked and hewed them, and afterwards most devilishly thrust them into a pit and burned them all alive.

1643, March 28. The same to the same. — We have lost three or four thousand arms about Newark, and we are raised from the siege there, but have not lost many men, we had ten or twelve pieces of ordnance taken

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR H. VERNEY, BART.

from us, and hear for certain that the Scots have taken a hill which commands the castle.

1644, April 4. The same to the same.—Sir W. Waller and Sir W. Balfour the last Friday were both engaged in a fight with Hopton, and have routed all Hopton's army. Lord John Steward, the Duke of Richmond's brother, was there slain, and, as reported, the Earl of Forth much wounded; four or five hundred slain, and above so many more taken.—News that Sir John Gill has taken 200 of Prince Rupert's horse by Derby; that Col. Lambert, in the north, has slain and taken 200 of Mr. John Bellasis' men and horse, and that Sir Thos. Fairfax is gone with 2,000 horse towards the Scots; but all this is not come to the House as I can hear, but it is believed to be true. As for that of Sir W. Waller, 'tis very true.

1644, July 4. Ditto. So much of Lord Paulet's estate as you write of is a gift from Parliament to the town of Lime.—Money matters—He (Burgoyne) cannot get his own rents.

1644, April 4. Sir Alexander Denton to Sir R. Verney.—Prince Rupert has raised the siege of Newark, and got 4,000 foot arms and all the horse arms (commanders only excepted) upon composition; all the soldiers having prudence to march away, and to be conducted two miles beyond the Prince's head-quarters, and the rumour is that 1,500 have taken arms for the King, but that is questionable. Lincoln has also yielded and 2,000 arms taken there, and Gainsboro' quitted and slighted, and all the ordnance, ammunition, and baggage lost;—since which total defeat there has been a great battle fought on Friday, the 29th of March last, at eight a.m. until about four p.m., between Hopton and Waller, near Winchester.—They say about 400 slain on both sides, chiefly the King's. Coll. Bruce was taken prisoner and taken to London; Waller remains about Winton, but the castle holds out, and so nobody dares lie in the town. Hopton is at Reading. Willmot comes from Oxford with 2,000 horse, and is said brings as many foot to join with Hopton.—Six regiments of trainbands are going out of London, some to Waller and some to the Lord-General, but whither is not yet known.—In a postscript he hears that Verney's whole estate is presently to be sequestered to the use of the Parliament.

1644, April 11. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—Sir W. Waller has taken Christchurch, and in it 400 men and a 100 horse.—We have taken Crowland. (1 p. of army news and some cypher.)

1644, April 13. The same to the same.—He tells of another victory on the 11th. Lord Fairfax and Sir Thomas, his son, gave battle to part of the Lord of Newcastle's forces at Selby in Yorkshire—the battle was long disputed, but at last the horse found a passage into the town.—Taken, 500 horse; slain and wounded, 1,000 men; likewise taken, 1,800 men.—A great many slain—2,000 arms, 7 barrells of powder, 4 brass cannon. Two Colls., John Bellasis and Sir John Ramsden; three Lt.-Colonels, &c., &c., &c.

1644, April 19. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—About the King's order to collect the rents which Parliament had sequestered, and the probable misery from the two opposing armies coming.—Notices of Prince Rupert, Prince Maurice, and Fairfax.—Waller has retreated to Farnham Castle.

1644. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney.—He is a prisoner in St. John's College, Cambridge. Two months ago he was taken at Hilledon House, the 3rd of March last; Sir Alex. Denton and Col. Smith and Mr. Thomas Denton were taken with him, and their house and stable burned to the ground.

1644, May 16. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—We learn that the Junta is adjourned, that's certain.—Lincoln is taken by Lord Manchester.—York is besieged.—Lord Buckhurst is at Copt Hall.—Sir W. Udall is in town, not yet admitted into the House; he will take the covenant when the House please.—(Some in cipher.)

1644, May 23. The same to the same.—The Lord-General is now in Reading. Sir W. Waller and he will join together. My lord is resolved to go on.—York is besieged and Lord Newcastle in it; we believe it will be suddenly taken.

1644, May 29. Col. Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.—My Lord of Newcastle with his army of 11,000 has been in person this month in York; the Scots and my Lord Fairfax with 27,000 have laid close siege to it. Prince Rupert marched the 7th of this month from Shoburye with 10,000 to relieve it; if his design take in beating them we are made, or else in a desperate condition, for, what with false friends and causeless fear of losing the liberty of our religion, divers of late fall from us which stood at first well affected to us.

1644, May 30. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—Lord Conway is in towne; he lies at Suffolk House, as Sir W. L. told me. Sir W. Udall comes not to the House, tho' ready to conform to all the House would have him, but . . . doth very much oppose him because of his going to the North when the King was there. The Lord-General and Sir W. Waller are mated, and their army consists of above 20,000 horse and foot. My lord is at Abbington, and it is thought by this time besieging Oxford. Massy has taken Mambarrough, and two of Lord Berkshire's sons in a castle at other castle not far off, with many arms and much ammunition.

1644, June 6. The same to the same.—He thinks Verney must have received his letter of May 30th which will resolve him concerning Copt Hall and Sir W.—, and Lord Conway.—A rumour that Croton House is threatened to be burnt. (Some cypher). Tuesday morning, very early, the King left Oxford, hearing the Lord-General intended on that morning to face Oxford with his whole army. My Lord-General went, but, hearing the King was gone, pursued. He was going towards the West but W. W. blocked up the way, so it is thought he will for Worcester. Mr. Nickalls came this day from the army; he left my Lord-General at Woodstock, and the King was at Burford, I think the town is called so, about two miles from Woodstock. The King went from Oxford in great confusion with 3,000 horse and two regiments of foot. The Lord-General sends word that he will never leave pursuing of him till he hath lodged him. York is still besieged. We hear today that the Scots intend to storm it at last.

1644, June 13. The same to the same.—The Lord-General has gone towards the West and Sir W. Waller went after the King towards Worcester, but the King had cut all the bridges down so Sir W. Waller's design did not take. The King left Oxford on Tuesday evening—he has left three or four of their regiments there. There is now sent a command to the Lord-General to return to Oxford and take it if he can, but whether my Lord will take the wall or no, I much doubt. York is still besieged—he hopes it will shortly be taken. We have taken Sudly Castle, in Wiltshire, and four or five hundred prisoners in it.

1644, June 20. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—The Lord-General who had sent him several letters tells him of the raising the siege of Lime. The King is returned to Oxford with 3,000 Irish.

1644, June 27. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney. (A few words are in cypher).—The Lord-General is in the West. The King hovers up and down sometime about our country as this last week. Sir W. Palmer, of Hill by Bigglesward, visited his own house the other day, but now I hear they are gone out again without doing any great hurt, for Sir W. Waller followed them. York is still besieged and not yet taken. We lost two or three hundred men a fortnight since by venturing to storm it, but things were ordered very unadvisably: this was but a little loss in respect of the number of men that are there, which are no less than 40,000 men in all, the three armies of the Scots, Lord Manchester, and Lord Fairfax.

1644. Copy of a warrant by virtue of an Order of Parliament of the 27th June 1644, to the Constable of Borstolle, to tell the tenants of (inter alios) Sir R. Verney to bring in the rents of sequestered estates.

Letters from the Countess of Sussex.

1644, July 4. Sir Alexander Denton to Mr. Ralph Smith (Sir R. Verney) at Mr. Willett's, at Rouen.—Last week I told you of the King being in and about Bucks with his army, and as we thought resolved for the associated counties; but he staid there until Thursday last, and hearing Sir W. Waller marched after him, he faced about and got into Edgcott, Sir William Cheney's house, where he quartered on Friday night by which time Sir William was come to Hanvilt within three miles of him; the next morning they met each other about the middle way and fought all that day by partys, and very many were slain. Lord Wilmot and others of note were taken prisoners but were recovered. They fought also on Sunday and part of Monday, and yet we cannot hear that either of the body's were joyned, but we believe they were, for we hear that Sir William lost two whole regiments of the City; one other regiment was routed and put to flight, twelve troops of horse taken, seven pieces of ordnance taken and four leather ordnance, and the King is still in and about Banbury; but where Sir W. is we yet hear not, some say he is shot in the shoulder. The King is as yet master of the field, except Col. Brown with his forces lately sent to London to reinforce Sir W. Tell Sir R. Verney that I think his brother Henry was there, I am sure his cousin J. Denton was—

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

Prince Rupert is certainly in Craven with a very great army. It is generally believed that the siege is raised before York and that those two great bodies will shortly fight, 1644, July 11. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—It is under the three generals' hands, Lesly, Manchester, and Fairfax, that we have routed Prince Robert's forces by York, consisting of almost 30,000 horse and foot with those he had out of York—we took 20 pieces of ordnance, all their arms, ammunition, and carriages, 100 colours, 10,000 arms, 1,500 soldiers, 100 of which were commanders; slain upon the place 3,000; and Captain Winget told me from an honest man that overlooked the dead, that amongst them all he thought there were two gentlemen to one ordinary soldier that was slain; we lost about 300. The enemy had the better of it all the day, but in the evening we had the victory. York is not taken, but we can take it when we will; there are not many soldiers in the town. Prince Robert and Lord Newcastle, and Lord Witherington, and Col. King are fallen out. The Prince is gone, I know not where by himself, and we have sent 7,000 horse after him, and the other three went to Scarborough and some say have taken ship for God knows where. The Lord-General is about Tiverton beyond Exeter. The Queen has gone to Pendennis Castle, the King towards Leicestershire, and Sir W. Waller after him. The States Ambassadors are to have audience in both Houses to-morrow.

1644, July 18, Ditto.—He hears that all letters are to be taken to a Committee.—His account of the success at York was true, altho' there was a thanksgiving at Oxford for a victory on the other side. We hear for certain that York is taken—we entered it on Tuesday last upon treaty. This is a day of public thanksgiving for this great victory.—Newcastle, Witherington, and Col. King have gone God knows where. The King has gone to Bristol as we hear.—The Lord-General is at Tiverton.—We have taken Taunton Castle not far from Exeter.—Young Sir Robert Pie took it, and in it a great deal of ammunition and provision. (Cipher.) He cannot tell what is become of Rupert.—Lord Fairfax's younger son Charles Fairfax is dead of a wound he received in that bloody fight.—Greenland House was taken last Friday.—The States Ambassadors had audience.—Saturday is appointed to take it into consideration.—They propose a treaty to us.

Letters from Thomas Verney and the Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.

1644, Aug. 1. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—He says Wm. Eure was slain in the last disputed victory.—On the Queen's landing at P. (Pendennis) many shot were fired at her, but missed, her vessel was so good a sailor that it got a mile in three of the Parliament ships by the help of some oars purposely placed to outrun the danger. Prince Rupert is again confessed to be again in great body, for we expect again some other action from him before the winter; the adverse army has done but little since but taken in our little garrison of about 80 men about York.—After taking York the three generals sent letters of advice for a peace, and within a day the King's general sent a letter for the King offering a treaty for peace, with promise of a general pardon and care for tender consciences in point of discipline in the church.—Happy omen—but he hears contrary opinion from the pulpit.—Ordinance for raising 13 or 14,000 prest men in 19 counties.—The Lord-General is still in the West. Prince Maurice about Plymouth, which way it is said the general is marching, and the King following him with Lord Hopton.—Waller, with what forces are left (said to be not many), in or about Abington, himself in town to recruit with men and money.—Brown at Reading fortifying it against winter. Oxford, Wallingford, and Banbury stand yet firm, so doth Borewall notwithstanding the summons. Basing yet stands, and is thought will do so for a long time. The Irish are daily expected, and we believe your conquering army that got Graveling may receive some intimation from you know who for England, &c., &c.

1644, Aug. 8. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—He hears that Basing is taken, and Welbeck, Lord Newcastle's house, co. Notts;—hears of a letter from Massey to the House of a victory lately had over the enemy; he has taken 300 horse and as many prisoners;—has taken seven captains and killed the Col. Mim.

1644, Aug. 15. The same to the same.—The King has sent a letter to my Lord-General to desire him to join his forces with his, and so make a peace and the King happy.—Prince Maurice and the Earl of Forth, their general, wrote to him about a treaty. The Lord-

General shortly replied that he was servant to the Parliament, without whose command he could do nothing.

1644, Aug. 15. Eliza Isham to Mr. Ralph Smith.—On the 7th of August last her brother's son was slain within a work at Abtone as Sir W. Waller's forces had made, and is making of more to keep garrisons this winter. (Gives a short account of the storming where a drake went off and killed him).—Altho' one son is dead yet another son-in-law he has; Col. Smyth married his daughter Margaret.

1644, Aug. 16. Letter by Sir J. Bacchus, "from my "prison, your man knoweth where."

1644, Aug. 22. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—In expectation of news from the Lord-General in the West;—we are in hopes of gaining Newcastle; they are unwilling to surrender to the Scots.—Speaks of the House of Commons being about selling some of the malignants' lands to recompense those who have suffered on their side.

1644, Aug. 29. Col. Harry Verney to (Sir R. Verney).—He has not been in command since his release, but constantly, till of late, followed the army; has now for divers disobligations then and since received from the head, left it, and at present stands neuter and lives with his kind Eure; he cannot tell how long;—when he considers the loss of his father and his fortune in Scotland, and the misery he suffered in prison, and the thanks of. . . . for his service it makes him mad to think of it;—but God blesses his Majesty's proceedings accordingly—for in a word, if the tide turn not the Parliament will obtain the victory; the addressee should consider;—the writer is informed by an express sent from Will to C—that Sir Ralph's estate is sequestered by them this week.

1644, Aug. 29. Col. H. Verney to Lady Verney.—Regrets of absence, and wishes oceans of torments to the authors of the disaffections.

1644, Aug. 29. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—The Lord-General is still in the West, the King not far off him.—Col. Middleton is to go to my Lord;—he has taken almost 200 horse, loaded with provision, going to the King.—He hears that Sir W. Brereton has routed, slain, and taken 500 of Prince Rupert's forces.—Lord Wilnot we hear is imprisoned. Very good news from Ireland that Lord Inchiquin has routed Lord Castlehaven's whole army of above 20,000.—Propositions of peace not yet concluded. Sir W. Waller, who was in town, is now gone forward towards my Lord-General.

1644, Aug. 29. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—The armies are still in the west, both very big, to the extreme damage of that poor little county of Cornwall.—He gives the news of pamphlets.

1644, Aug. 30. R. Verney to [] Condoles with him on the loss of his son.—He heard the Louvre was prepared for the Queen, but it is contradicted.

1644, Sept. 3. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney at Mr. Willett's, in Rouen.—He (Burgoyne) says that he is going into the country.

1644, Sept. 5. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—The general is still in and about Foxe; the fort that commands that river to the main is still possess by the King. Sir Ja. Ashley commands it, and it is reported he has sunk two ships coming in with victual, and as we hear the army is distressed for victual. The general is intrenched in the field, and the King is intrenched round here within musket shot. The King is said to be double, if not treble, in men and daily increaseth. Sir W. Waller about Farnham. The siege lyeth still about Newcastle.—The siege of Basing yet lieth.—Much bloodshed we hear of at Banbury.—Siege bullets, we hear, fly there continually, and last night I heard that the castle broke down the steeple where the besiegers' ordnance were planted.—We are afraid we shall have the company of the French from Brittany to add to our miseries.

1644, Sept. 5. Eliza Isham to Sir R. Verney.

1644, Sept. 10. Countess of Sussex to the same.

1644, Sept. 19. Susan Verney to the same, and one from Pen Verney.

1644, Oct. 9. Eliza Isham to Sir R. Verney.—She and others had been imprisoned, but nothing could be proved against them.—His sister Susan and her (E. Isham's) niece were fellow prisoners;—persons not hurt, only purses.—Is much obliged to Thomas Verney and his wife, they did more than all the friends beside.—R. Verney's brother-in-law still a prisoner. She is at the Gate House with her niece and her husband.

(1644).—Susan Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Telling of the imprisonment and suspicion of helping her cousin out of prison.—The Judge Advocate is angry that she

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

was released, but she has promised to appear when he called for her.

1644, Oct. —. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—He has returned to London.—Col. Morly is well. The King, they say, is at Sherborn.—The Lord-General at Portsmouth.—The Lord of Manchester at Newbury. Sir W. Waller is at a place, I think, called Chanberry.—A great fire at Oxford; report of many houses and colleges burned.

1644, Oct. $\frac{28}{18}$. Draft letter by Sir R. Verney to (Sir R. Burgoyne.) Asking him to demand some money of Bachus which he agreed to give for land . . . Let Mr. Milton and any one else go and be witnesses to the demand, and that they staid so many hours till sun sett.

1644, Oct. 24. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—About Newcastle, Basing, the King, and Waller.

1644, Oct. 31. The same to the same.—He has received Verney's letter at Chants.—Our armies have resisted the King's armies about Newbury.—Report that the King is at Oxford.—Newcastle is taken, as he hears.

1644, Nov. 7. The same to the same.—Tinmouth Castle is now taken.—Sir John Gill has taken 700 horse and 400 foot by Newark.—Leverpoole is taken.—The soldiers themselves took their commanders and presented them to Sir John Meldrum, and afterwards surrendered themselves and town to him.—Massy has done no exploit.

1644, Nov. 18, London.—Sir John Leek to Sir R. Verney.—Your sister Susan is like to have a husband, a widower without child.

1644, Nov. 21. (Henry Parker) to Sir R. Verney.—In my opinion you steer a course wherein there is almost no hope of indemnities on either side, but certainly of great loss and blame on both.—If he (Verney) objects to much on either side he should decide for one.

1644, Nov. 21. Sir Alex. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—He has returned from Oxford without his exchange; bears his imprisonment patiently in Peter House; amongst other friends saw his nephew Mun (Edmund). He (Mun) went along with the King towards Newbury, who, notwithstanding the last great victory the Parliament there had against him, which they so gave directions for (I think for the loss of ten men for one) concluding the utter ruin of his army, yet within five days he returned with 1,200 gallant soldiers, (I do assure you upon my own view and tale) and relieved Donnington Castle with all necessaries, and struck not one stroke for it, notwithstanding their whole body looked upon them, which doth not a little trouble us at London; and since got into quarters at Newbury, and thence marched to the relief of Basing.—The proposition went down yesterday.—Claydon has been offered to be sequestered by the Parliament, but not yet done, but still is in danger and threatened; but it is really so at Oxford.—He believes if these times last till over Lady-day most of the fields will be greensward. If it is please God to bless the King in this expedition, we hope it may prove a way to a peace. Prince Rupert is Generalissimo; Forth, Chamberlain to the Prince; Bruncker, Vice-Chamberlain; Culpeper, Ashley, lorded. The Scots voted to advance upwards.—This is likely to prove a bloody winter.

1644, Nov. 27. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—Parliament yesterday received a letter from the Commissioners, by which they hear that they come to Oxford not till Saturday; the King not being in a settled place till that day made them four days going. On Sunday they had audience in Christ Church.—They are yet there attending for the King's answer.—The Parliament is now on church government.

1644, Nov. 28. Robert Lesly, at Paris, to Sir R. Verney.—Complimentary.

1644, Dec. 5. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—Let his direction be at Peetre House in Aldersgate Street.—He is still a prisoner, not exchanged.—Edmund denies he is married.—Cary's husband is a prisoner at Stafford, his enlargement is solicited by his father and well assured by the Prince.

1644, Dec. 5. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—There is an unhappy difference between the Earl of Manchester and Col. Cromwell about Donnington Castle; it is now under examination.—The Parliament Commissioners are returned from the King, who carried it very discreetly all the while they were at Oxford. The King returned a short answer directed to them that sent the proposition which was very much regretted by the Parliament.—The answer was to the effect that a safe conduct might be ordered to bring the Duke of Richmond and Earl of Southampton to the Parliament.

to treat with us, which will not be granted unless they be expressly sent to both Houses of Parliament at Westminster. There is a mad business between Prince Giffin, as they call him, for giving out that he hath lain with Lord Herbert's lady three times;—he is under the Black Rod, and to be heard to-morrow at a Committee of the Lords and Commons.—I am called away to Sir John Hotham's trial at Guildhall.

1644, Dec. $\frac{6}{16}$. Draft of a letter by Sir R. Verney to Henry Parker.—Complaining that as he could not conscientiously take the covenant, he thought it best to retire. The King has sequestered his estate, and the Parliament daily threatens to do that and more, which ever side wins he shall get an indemnity;—he must bear it as a scourge sent for his amendment;—he has done nothing to the prejudice of the Parliament.

1644, Dec. 12. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—Miserable condition of Bucks.—The King's forces are overspreading the vale, and the others the hill.—We hear a muttering that the Scots are fearfully beaten.

1644, Dec. 12. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—He is called away to the Hall by a Parliament man, who tells him the House of Commons do this day give audience to the French agent.—To go to Jack Hotham's trial to-day. His father, Sir John, was condemned by the Council of War last Saturday to be beheaded, and is to suffer next Monday. Sir Alex. Cary was condemned to suffer the like death, but the execution is put off for a month because he seemed distracted, but next Munday sennight he must go to it as I hear. He is informed that the House of Commons last Monday passed a vote that no member of either House shall enjoy any office, civil or martial.

1644, Dec. —. The same to the same.—Last Saturday the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Southampton came to Somerset House.—On Tuesday night they were received by a Committee of Lords and Commons in the Painted Chamber.—He hears the Queen of Sweden has sent to the Parliament some letters of our Queen that she intercepted, and desires that she and we might join against all our Popish enemies.

1644, Dec. —. Sir Robert Compton to Sir R. Verney.—He asks for the loan of 50 pistoles for a week.

1644, Dec. 20. Nathaniel Hobart to Sir R. Verney.—He thinks the passage to Oxford dangerous and will soon be quite stopt.—By the spring the sea will be so too. His intention is to get home soon, and he knows no way but by France.—He asks for 50l. when he gets there.

1644, Dec. 21. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—The King has now acknowledged the Parliament, and a treaty is voted. The Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Southampton returned last Tuesday.—Sir Alexander Cary (Carew) was executed last Monday.—Sir John Hotham was to have died this day, but is reprieved till next Tuesday. His son is to suffer the day after.

1644, Dec. 11. Dol. Leeke to Sir R. Verney.—She mentions the proposition, and the visit of the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Southampton.

1644, Dec. 28. Sir John Leeke, London, to Sir R. Verney. He must leave a dwelling a friend has lent him two years. He cannot pay rent. He asks Sir R. Verney to lead him his, which has been empty this winter; he will try to let it and have a bill on the door.—Hopes to go soon to Ireland.—Lord Broghill and Sir Harry Smith are come over as Commissioners from Lord Inchiquin and the rest, about the concerns of Munster, and are by the Parliament and Committee of both Kingdoms well understood and received, and speedy money and necessaries for the soldiers supplied, and a hope of two or three regiments to be brought out of the north of Ireland into Munster, and some from hence if the times will help to raise them.—Mentions the visit of the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Southampton, and the execution of Sir Alex. Carew four days since for betraying his charge, or rather consenting to it, a fort near Plymouth.

Two letters from Edmund Verney to Sir R. Verney. 1643, Feb. 3. He asks that R. Verney will make his sister an allowance as long as possible:—(Edmund) must trust to the sword.

1639, Dec. 8, Utrecht.—He [Edmund] says he has written to his father to move the col. to get him the captain's place.—He cares not what he says or does as it is to his profit—a fair spokesman will promise anything.—Wants his father to take the course which Sir Harry Vane doth; he tells him what courtesys or favours he shews to his son he will study to requite, but will acknowledge none but what appear real, "and by this" means has possess the col. with such a fear of him "tha the has confessed to me, himself, that Sir H. Vane

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

"is not a man to be incensed. If my father keep him at a kind of distance, and I still flatter him, it may work something on him. I'll write to him about a fortnight hence, and it may be to make his courtesy appear, he will give me an answer."

Sir R. Verney's letter book (an unbound folio written in two columns). Contains copies of letters from Sir Roger Burgoyne to him from Jan. 5th, 1643, O.S., to Feb. 17th, 1647. (18 pp.) Precise of them but not much beyond what relates to him;—the letters themselves give historical news, and some are in cipher.

Diary and notes of his doings from Dec. $\frac{1}{24}$, 1646 to April $\frac{1}{2}$, 1648. (6 pp. in two columns.)

Precis of letters, when dated and when received, from Nov. 26, 1646 to April 6th, 1648, apparently from Lady Verney, his wife.

Copies of his own letters, March $\frac{17}{7}$, 1647 to $\frac{30}{10}$ Oct. 1647, and of letters to his wife $\frac{1}{4}$ Dec. 1646 to $\frac{15}{5}$ April 1648. (32 pp.) Copies of his own letters, $\frac{1}{4}$ March 1647 to $\frac{1}{2}$ Jan. 1653. (122 pp.) All very closely written.

1644, Feb. 13. Henry Verney to Sir Ralph Verney, at Rouen.—I am sorry I cannot answer your expectation concerning the proceeding of the treaty; in a word it goes to the discomfort of us all but slowly on, for as yet by my intelligence they have not absolutely agreed on any proposition whatsoever; they are still at a stand about the three first, the government of the church and the militia, with that of Ireland; most think the King will condescend speedily to the first two but never to the third (which is the chief). If he consents not to the suppressing of those rebels, doubtless he frustrates all good intentions, and brings himself and all that side with him to ruin; when the least point is agreed of on either party, as near as I can, you shall be sure to hear the truth. Now concerning the despoiling of Cowley it stands as yet as it did in Sir Alexander's time, as my uncle John tells me, who, at the present by my Lord Saye's appointment, is intrusted with the estate and wardship. . . . P.S. The Doctor (Denton) I hear is released.

1644, Feb. 20. Thomas Verney to Sir Ralph Verney, at Mr. Humphrey Willet's, merchant in Roane.— . . . Mentions the sad state of his sisters when living at Claydon.—They are subject to the affrights of rude soldiers in rushing in at all hours both by day and night, and not a man that dare shew himself in their defence. My sisters are too sensible of their incivility, already that I heard them say that they could not eat hardly in a week one meal's meat contentedly. . . . Mentions a proposed marriage for his sister Pen.

1644, Feb. 20. Hen. Verney to Sir R. Verney.—On the subject of his sister's intended marriage.—P.S. Kirsy hath burnt all your papers. . . . Here is little or no hopes of this treaty taking effect; it is though it breaks up on Saturday next . . . there is not, as yet, one proposition of either side agreed of, which makes all honest men despair of being happy.

1644, Feb. 29. The same to the same.— . . . The treaty broke up on Saturday last so that now we must not expect peace. Great preparation in this place is making, I doubt the sword must decide it; I cannot advise no friend in these times at so great a distance, otherwise I wish from my heart you were with us. The King would not adhere to the proceedings against those rebels in Ireland, neither effectually to the settling of church government; he did declare he would have the Bishops to enjoy a negative voice, which in effect was to authorize their power. Now for the militia, he did offer to intrust it in the hands of 10 and 10, but the Parliament, as they had reason for divers respects, would not condescend to it; now since their parting at Uxbridge I can assure you that the townsmen of Shroesbury hath surrendered, by a trick, up the town with the Governor Sir Michell Arnett, besides divers other commanders and soldiers in it. It is a place of great strength and consequence to the Parliament. . . .

1645, March 10, Feb. 28. Draft of a letter by Sir Ralph to his brother Harry about his sister's marriage.—Tells him that Mrs. Cleere is married to Col. Crumwell, and that Jack Denton was soon forgotten.

1645, March $\frac{1}{10}$, Rouen. Copy of a letter by Lord Goring, and draft of the answer by Sir R. Verney. —Money matters.

1644, March 4. London. (Sir Roger Burgoyne) to Sir R. Verney, in Rouen. What with the lateness of the night and an unacceptable service that at present is put upon me, I am so extremely distracted that I have neither time to write or wit to indite anything of sense or reason To-morrow morning I am to go into the country very early. . . . Besides the taking of Shroesbury, which is now possessed by us, notwithstanding some malignant reports to the contrary, Weymouth for certain is retaken by the Parliament, and the enemy have furnished it with so much victuals and ammunition that it is supposed to be now almost impregnable, so that we have infinitely gained by our loss. (The letter is signed Warwick in cypher, and the P.S. is also in cypher). P.S. I go into the country to raise money for the Scots.

1645, March 6. Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney. Urging him to return to England. . . . P.S. My sister Crumwell is now with us and as wanton and cunning as ever.

1645, March $\frac{24}{14}$. Draft of Sir Ralph's letter in answer to the above. . . . The covenant is the thing that keeps me here, and being unsatisfied in that I must not take it, and unless I take it you know there is no hope of a reception into any place but Newgate or the Fleet. This being my condition, what can I do, I know no remedy but prayers and patience. . . . Absence is my only crime, and if for that only, I must be ruined. . . .

1645, March 20. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney. . . . P.S. My Lord Savell hath left the King and is now here; my Lord Percy is in our quarters and either going or gone for France. More of the great ones are expected here daily.

1645, April 3. The same to the same.— . . . Addington House is slighted, and it stands as it ever did. My Lord-General, Lord Manchester, and Lord Denby this morning hath of a certain laid down their commissions. One thing more, this day is agreed of by ordinance of both Houses that no member of what condition or quality soever shall continue in any command or charge belonging to a soldier, but return and attend the Houses. A little time will produce much alteration. Our new General, Sir Thomas Fayrefax, is gone this night to Reading, and great expectation there is of his having speedily a most potent army. . . . The covenant you so much stand upon, I believe, is not so much cutting to no man's conscience as that you did first take; resolve but to digest that and doubtless you may be yet admitted again, for now Sir Gilbert Garade's son is returned from France hither, that went without leave, and yet upon submission, as I am informed, certainly to be received as a member again; I wish you were here to accept of the like favour.

1645, April 11, Mag. Hall. Dr. William Denton to Lady Verney.—He addresses her as his dear landlady, and signs himself her poor, poor, poor tenant.—Mr. Killigrew his haste will scarce give me leave to put pen to paper, yet I will not neglect the least opportunity that gives me occasion to write to you. . . . Your tenant is now at liberty, tho' to procure it he passed the hard chapter of a Court of War. Your dear Sir Edm. is Lieutenant Governor of Chester. Your old friend Sir Edw. (Sydenham) is the most altered man (I cannot say for the better) that you would scarce know him or believe it.

1645, April 17. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney. . . . All the members of both Houses are called by an ordinance home, and most of their great commands disposed of already; Sir Thos. Fayrefax, Governor of Hull, Col. Norton, Governor of Portsmouth, my Lord of Lessester's second son, Governor of Southampton. It is not yet known who shall be Admiral nor Governor of York. This displacing of them and my Lord-General hath discontented all the present divers great commanders; Lieutenant-General Middleton and Major-General Craford with Col. Holborne have all three this week, upon some dislike, laid down their Commissions. It is confidently reported here that the Lord of Mount-rouse hath of late received a great defeat. On Sunday next here is to be a thanksgiving for it. Our new model army is not so forward as I and others could wish it.

1645, May 9, April 29, Rouen.—Sir R. Verney to Nath. Hobart at Exeter. (Copy). On Saturday last Sir Ralph Sidenham brought me a letter from you, which was a favour I could not now expect, having never received any either from yourself or wife since I left poor England; and it seems of all I writ you have had but one, which I am very sorry for; but the troubles of these times have made us not only in this, but many other ways, unhappy.—Says he is sorry that he cannot supply Hobart with the money he asks for (50*l.*), but he has not had above 90*l.* out of all his estates in Bucks, Berks, and Oxford-shires for himself and family—he is obliged to sell some small part things he brought with him.—The other day, desiring to sell a thing, the tradesman confessed it to be worth 10*l.* and would not match it under, yet they

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

would give but 4*l*. for it. Your goods and all (except one parcel which went with mine to the Hague) are in a merchant's hands at Amsterdam. Will. Syddenham and Dr. Chamberlaine, I believe, are at the Hague.— . . . Coll. Ballard is dead, and Mrs. Chitchley is gone into Friesland.

1645, May 1. H. Verney to Sir Ralph Verney. . . . There is some news, but times are so dangerous that I protest I dare not write it. Sir Thomas Fayrefax did begin his march last night from Reading; some say he goes Oxfordward, others say more westward, to relieve Taunton. I believe his design is for the first rather than the latter, for of late we have had some little victories of some 400 horse and some 120 foot nearest, besides Sir William Waller, Cromwell, and Browne are now with a considerable force about it. Sir Thomas's army consists of 12,000 foot and 4,000 horse; a gallant artillery he takes from hence with him. The speech goes, my Lord of Northampton is killed, and the Lord Louthborow, in another fight, likewise.

1645, May 8. The same to the same. The King's army and ours do face one the other near Oxford daily. Part of Sir T. Fairfax's forces are marched to relieve Taunton.

1645, May 15. The same to the same.— . . . We hear that the siege is raised at Taunton; the King is marched with his army towards Chester, and Cromwell from hence after him; we expect to hear of some action from those armies daily, the event hereafter you shall know.

1645, May 29. The same to the same.— . . . Sir Thomas Fayrefax is now set down before Oxford, five days will produce great news from those parts. . . . The King and his army are certainly near Newworke. . . .

1645, June 5. The same to the same. . . . On Saturday last the King's army did storm Leicester, and hath taken it, the particulars we know not, but much blood we hear was spilt there. Sir Robert Dig and the whole committee, with divers Scotch commanders were in it, so that they all are prisoners or killed; this sad accident hath caused our army to rise from before Oxford, and to follow the King and to secure the associations; this misfortune hath been very disadvantageous to us.

1645, June 19. The same to the same.— . . . On Saturday last, being the 14th of June, a great battle was fought, as my enclosed book will insight you. I need not trouble myself to relate any particulars of the fight or place, for the book expresses the truth of it, only this, a greater battle was never obtained by the Parliament forces nor a more truer relation ever made, as indeed the King hath received a greater loss than the book doth testify, for this day it is certified that Leicester is regained with much loss to the King; it is as true as the light that shines, therefore, you may report it for a confident truth. This day both Houses met at Christchurch with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, where we had a most solemn thanksgiving. Mr. Marshall and Mr. Vines both preach afore them; this meeting I was at. Greater news never came to this city. Cromwell is to this day in pursuit of the King's foot, he hath none with him; we hear daily that he takes up divers stragglers. The King is fled to Lichilde, and, doubtless, in a most desperate estate and condition; the Scots are near Nottingham, and reported to be about 8,000. My next week's letter, I believe, will produce much more news for our side, for we still hear daily of great men being taken and slain, which I will not nominate till I hear the full truth. At present I am going to meet the prisoners at Highgate; there is, at the least, of horse and foot 6,000 with 80 colours lacking on. This is so clear a victory that I need not be earnest to make any credit it.

1645, June 26. The same to the same.— . . . I doubt not but that you have heard all the particulars of our late victory, I sent you the book of it, but since that I saw the soldiers come in, 16 field officers, 34 captains, besides 40 or 50 lieutenants, ensigns and cornets, and 3,700 common soldiers; this is truth, for on my road I told them myself; 56 colours of horse and foot I saw come up, taken likewise. Now the main prize of all to the Parliament is the taking of the King's cabinet, for in it they have taken divers letters of great consequence, they declare all his designs and intentions. His headquarters are at Eusnam town, within 10 miles of Worcester; an action is expected daily here from those parts. I am sorry I shall not be in the city to send you the first news of it. It is credibly reported here that my false coronell, Coronell Going, is come in to the Parliament, and now at Torone; how true this report is I know not, for my part I do not believe it, tho' some of his good friends think it; speak not of it till you hear the full truth of it. My Lord Savell, on Saturday last, was sent to the Tower; what his crime is I shall forbear to relate, in respect I do not rightly understand it. Taunton still holds out, and here is hopes it will be relieved suddenly, for Col. Massey is marched with speed from hence with a great force to raise the siege.

1645, July 20, Misverton.—The same to the same.— . . . Here is much news stirring. What the general fame is you shall know, which is, that Goring is routed totally, and Major-General Porter taken prisoner with some 2,000 common soldiers, as the report goes; be confident we have received a great blow, with the loss of divers colours, besides cannon. Sir Thomas Fayrefax hath enclosed him up in Bridgewater, and laid, as we hear, close siege to it, and is in great hopes to take it suddenly; this fight between the coronell and him was near Taunton. The Scots are at the present with 9 or 10,000 horse and foot before Worcester, but I cannot learn what their design be, to besiege it or not, or to follow the King; his Majesty is, as we hear, about Ragland Castle, or Heyford, a-recruiting. This is all the instructions the country will afford me to send you. . . .

1645, Aug. 1. Dr. Wm. Denton to Sir Ralph Verney. —Telling him that his brother, Sir T. Gardiner, was slain near Ethroppe, and hath left a disconsolate widow not so well provided for.

1645, Aug. 4, Misverton. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney. . . . If I mistake not I sent you word of Goring's being routed by Sir Tho. Fayrefax, near Taunton; now, since that, Sir Thomas hath taken Bridgewater, a place of great strength and consequence to the King; there were near 2,000 soldiers, horse and foot, in it, with 40 pieces of cannon, besides great store of ammunition, both of powder and arms; the greatest part of the town was fired and themselves taken prisoners, for they held it out so long that the general refused to grant them any conditions other than to stand to his mercy; the fire increased so much by their own rudeness that they were glad to embrace his offer to save their lives; this is the truth of the victory. I must not forget to let you know that Pomfret Castle is taken, a place of infinite great note; likewise Scarborough lies most desperately and bleeding, if not taken; for my part, I believe confidently, it is in the Parliament's hands afore this; the report goes here for a truth it is surrendered. Now the North is as good as won, and must hope to see the South in as good a condition speedily. A word of the Scots and his Majesty and I have done; his Majesty is, as I hear, at Ragland Castle a-recruiting; the speech goes they appear but coldly for him; how true the report is I cannot say, but the Scots, I am informed, have taken Heyfoad (Hafod?), and advance towards him.

1645, Aug. 8, Orleans.—Sir R. Verney to Mr. Robert Lesley.—To-morrow morning I shall go towards Fountainbleau; on Friday I think to be at Paris; my stay there will be very short.

1645, Aug. 21, Misverton.—Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney. He is coming to town with his aunt for 14 days or three weeks.— . . . The King is marched with 2,000 horse in person for the North, he hath no foot with him, he makes haste it is thought and will join with Mountross. Hafod is still besieged by the Scots, and Sharborn by Sir Thomas Fayrefax: Scarborough and Ponferet are surrendered.

1645, Aug. 25, Paris. Brome Whorwood to Sir R. Verney, at Rouen. . . . On Sunday last I was at St. German's, where I saw Sir Ralph Sidenham, who enquired of you and gave me a letter to be sent which I hope you have received.— . . . To-morrow I go from Paris to St. German's to stay there some time. . . .

1645, Aug. 31, Misverton. H. Verney to Sir R. Verney. Was prevented by his aunt's illness from going to London, as he wrote in his last letter.—Sir Thomas Fayrefax hath this 2 days besieged Bristol, it is thought by the major part he will get it, for at the present be confident the King is in but a weak and desperate condition. Prince Rupert himself is in the town to defend it; it stands time to keep it, for lose that and farewell all the rest.

1645, Sept. 8, Rouen. Sir R. Verney to Matt. Snelling, at Blois. At my coming from Orleans I writ to Robert Lesley. . . . When I came to Paris I thought it had been Christmas, for every day was holiday, so that I could not lay out the 18 livres you gave my maid, but I delivered it to Mr. Bond (who had much more skill) and entreated him to do it for me; and at his being here he assured me it was done, and that he had

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

sent you a very handsome hat which cost 10 livres, and a very good pair of stockings which cost 8 more . . . if I should come to Blois about Michaelmas you believe I may find a small house (near the church and your palace) at a reasonable rate.

1645, Sept. 15, Amsterdam. Jonas Abeels to Sir R. Verney. . . . Ragolski hath made peace with the Emperor, the King of Denmark with the Crown of Sweden, and is agreed with this State about the toll in the Sound: there is hope of a general agreement at Munster, so I hope England will be mindful of its own interest and welfare before all be spent in an unnatural war.

1645, Michaelmas Day, Blois.—Robert Thorner to Sir R. Verney. . . . Your goods are all safely arrived at Blois, and are very safely laid up at the Ville d'Homborge. . . We had some trouble with them for want of a passport; we have paid some 45 solz for duties at towns where we passed, and were demanded 5 or 6 pistolls at several places where we passed, but informing them that the goods belonged to the Queen of England we contented them with that small sum above mentioned, which, I believe, belongs to the courier to pay, but he refusing it, and being ready to leave your trunks as a pledge, I thought good rather to pay it myself. . . .

1644, Oct. 1, Tours. The same to the same.— . . . I yesterday arrived here, but Sir John Drumman is not here, and doth not go the journey with us in regard he fears the Turks who are with their ships upon the sea which we are to pass upon; but, however, we shall go to Marseilles, and in case we shall not find it very dangerous we shall go forward for Italy. Our company is only Mr. Gore and his cousin Goare, and Mr. Wakefield. . . . Mr. Lesley is gone to Chastillon . . . and, as I can hear of, there is no English but Mr. Purpoint and his family. Mr. Twisden is returned towards Rouen.

1645, Sept. 21. Henry Verney to Sir Ralph Verney. . . . I discern in another of your letters that you desire to hear what men of late have compounded for their estates or left the King, at the present, I can give you an account but of three; first Sir Dudley Carlton, next my neighbour Sir Thomas Cave, and lastly, an acquaintance of my mine, Mr. Harris. These are all men of good estates, and have lately deserted the King's quarters; divers more, I hear, have done the like. I confess I think they do well to be wise and compound in time, for doubtless the King at the present is in a most low and despicable condition, and the Parliament never higher, for now Mountrous is beaten and Bristol lost, and Prince Rupert cashiered from all command, and his pass sent him from his Majesty, to depart the kingdom in 14 days; and Will. Legg, the bed-chamberman, committed in his government at Oxford, and Sir Thomas Ileman in possession of his government. Judge by this, what the event will prove. 'This news of the Prince and Legg is very new, and known to few, yet you may boldly report it from me, for it is as true as God's in heaven. The Prince hath lost himself for ever, and most think Legg will lose his life . . . Sir Thomas mighty triumphant daily, and takes strongholds hourly. On my conscience the King knows not whither to go, he is close pursued with so great a strength; at the present he is in Heryford with 2,000 horse, but not any foot; what he will do is beyond my judgment to imagine, for Goring is but very weak near Exeter, and the young Prince, with my Lord Hopton, are at Pendennis Castle, with little or no strength. Most of the King's castles are at the present besieged, as Basing, Winchester, and the like . . . Mr. Nathaniel Fines is admitted, by the consent of the House, to sit as a member of it again; the Prince yielding Bristol so suddenly hath brought Mr. Fines into credit again . . . P.S. Littleton is lately dead and Lane hath his place; Careys, Sir Thomas, Lord Chief Baron.

1645, Oct. 5th. Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.— . . . I wrote you word of Bristol being taken, and other news that was then on foot here; as first of being confined and suddenly to be gone, next of Legg's being committed to the castle in Oxford; this is true news. . . . Near Chester the fight was by his Majesty's own horse and Major-General Poynes; it lasted long, but, to be brief, the King was totally routed and put to flight; he lost near 1,500 horse in the battle; his general, which was Garrade, was killed; the King made him a little before his death Lord Brandon; the Lord Barnard in the same action, I hear, was also killed, and the speech goes Sir Marmaduke Langdale is also slain; Sir Thomas Ileman, Sir Philip Musgrave, both taken; this was done with the loss of ten colonels more on the King's side, besides divers gentlemen of quality on his Majesty's side.—I am not certain these men are taken or killed; but I am sure they have received a total rout, to the absolute destruction, I believe, of the King's designs. I had almost forgot to tell you of Weschester being in election of taken; most here think it cannot hold out long by reason their outworks were in a night surprised and took . . . Barkly Castle and the Prince is lately yielded to Sir Tho. Fayrefax . . . It stands current that Mountrous is absolutely defeated; for my part, I do believe it, by reason the Scots are stopped, and ordered to return to besiege Newark . . .

1645, Oct. 23, London. Col. Henry Verney to Mr. Ralph Smith (i.e., Sir R. Verney), at Rouen.—He alludes to the taking of Winchester Castle and Basing House, and says that the Marquis and the Governor were in the town; speaks of a later victory by Major-General Poynes, near York, over Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke Langdale: first, Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke going with 1,200 horse to join Montrose, routed the Parliament forces and took all their foot, near 1,000, but a fresh supply of the other side came from York and routed the King's forces, not 300 escaped. Lord Digby's coach was taken, with divers letters in it, as I think shall come in print: Sir John Price, a member of the House, was this week put forth of the House about these letters. West Chester holds out. Prince Rupert is with the King at Newark, on what terms, I know not, but, I believe, very ill. Legg and his brother are still in prison. Sir Thomas Fayrefax is near the young Prince; Grenville, Goring, and Hopton in Devonshire . . . As to the resolution of the House in choosing new members, he says that Sir Ralph is out, and one Scot* was chosen in his place.

1645, Oct. 28, Paris. Mat. Snelling to the Chevalier Verney, à la maison de M. Veneur, à la vil de Hamburg à Bloy . . . My curiosity has made me search in all places in the church of Notre Dame for that writing which you told me of, but I cannot find any such thing, but I find at the high altar the picture of the Virgin with the picture of the King and Queen of France on each side of her. Sir, I am informed of such a writing just as you told me, which is in the hands of the chanoins of that church.

1645, Oct. 30, London. Col. Henry Verney to [Sir R. V.]. Mentions the late taking of Monmouth Castle, and a little defeat which Sir Thomas Fairfax gave since that to Goring at Tiverton, near Exeter.—Lord Camdinge is lately come to compound and submit to Parliament. Dunnington Castle is now besieged by Dalbyre, and Newark continues still straightened and the King in it.—Says he saw Sir John Leake on the subject of Sir Ralph's being put out of the House. Most people say it is only because he was absent without leave.

1645, Nov. 6. (Dr.) John Craig to Sir John Leake.—Says that a gentleman is going to-morrow to meet Lord Bruce at Bloys. Thinks Sir John can take the opportunity to exhort his friend at Blois to consider his own subsistence and to prevent a ruin. Asks him to get Sir John Burgau to concur with him.

1645, Nov. 10. T. S.—to Mr. Ralph Smith. Is sorry for the compulsion of Sir Ralph . . . Money matters. . . . The North, with all the castles, reduced. The West almost recovered. Prince Rupert, Maurice, with 400 commanders, Garrett, and others, have relinquished the King's service, and are coming for a pass to be gone beyond sea.

1645, Nov. 11. Col. Hen. Verney to Mr. Ralph Smith at Mr. Adrian Raquigny's house, a merchant in Paris.—Tries to persuade Sir Ralph to return to England, fearing a sequestration and ruin to the family.

1645, Nov. 19. The same to the same . . . The House has granted to Prince Rupert his brother a pass to go beyond sea. Lord Hally, Col. Gerard now Lord Brandon, Sir Richard Willis, Sir William Vavasour, and many others, have come in to compound.

1645, $\frac{10}{20}$ December (Received). Col. H. Verney to (Sir Ralph V.). Sometimes sees Sir R. Burgoyne, who says he wrote several times to try to get Sir Ralph to return before the blow fell. Lord Camdinge, Sir John Heale, Sir John Stranguige, are all here compounded with; 40 others . . . Chester is much straitened, and if not suddenly relieved, will doubtless be lost. The Scots are certainly before Newark, and protest speedily to take it . . . the town is in great want already, besides divers of note escape daily out of it, and come hither. Bevoir Castle is near its surrender. Some 6,000 came from Sir Thomas Fairfax out of the West to block up Oxford this week. How true this news is I know not, but most

* A note to Sir Ralph's son John says that this Scot was since hanged and quartered.

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

credit it Prince Rupert and his brother stand out; the Parliament as yet are not agreed to their propositions, so, at present, they are in the condition of neuter.

1645, ²¹/₁₂ Dec. Sir R. Verney to Lord Devonshire. Has received Lord D.'s letter saying there is an absolute necessity to go; so he bids him to go at once, and "do it cheerfully, for you are now "under the lash, and that of the severest masters "that ever yet were heard or read of You "have only one thing now to take a principal care "of, which is the covenant, in which if you can receive a full and plenary satisfaction, 'tis the better; "if not, I know (what'er the hazard be), you will not "take it. However, certainly, 'twill be best and safest "to find some way to avoid it; and if to obtain this "freedom you employ your power and interest and "best and nearest friends (altho' it cost you dear), believe "me, you will not repent it."

1645, ³¹/₁₂ Dec. Notes of what Sir R. V. sent in a letter of this date to Sir R. Burgoyne.—These are statements to be urged to the House of Commons of Sir Ralph's contribution to the Parliament in 1642; his not having for 3 years received any rent from such parts of his estate as lay within the King's quarters: that his other estate was plundered by the troops of both sides: that at his father's death there was almost 900*l.* charged on the estate in jointures, &c., and the debts, legacies, &c. came to about 9,000*l.*: that he supports his 2 brothers and 4 sisters: that he was summoned to, but did not attend, the Assembly at Oxford: that he was never summoned to return by the Parliament: the loss of an office, the afflictions of his family, not being able to live in London because of his losses, he retired abroad, and that absence is his only crime.

1645, Dec. ³¹/₁₂. Sir R. Verney to Col. H. Verney. (Copy). Asks him to ascertain if those who compound are obliged to take the covenant.

1645, Christmas Day. Col. Henry Verney to Mr. Ralph Smith, at Paris News of the taking of Hereford, surprised by the Governor of Gloucester; little or no blood shed on either side No hopes of relieving Chester, nor as little of Newarke A report that most of Lord Hopton's army is disbanded, and himself in Pendennis Castle I can assure you there goes a letter to his Majesty from the House, to treat once again of peace.

1645, Dec. 29, Paris. Robert Leslie to Sir R. Verney General Goring is come to Rone (Rouen), sick. Sir William Davinent with him; The Lord of Argyle is not yet come out of Ireland with those men he went for.—Lord Digby is in Ireland The most part of those that are here with the Queen, who have anything in England, make their composition with the Parliament.

1645, Jan. 1 (Q. out of place). Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—Mentions the taking of Skipton Castle.

1645, Jan. 2 and 8. The same to the same.

1645, Jan. 9. Ditto. Parliament have resolved on four Lords and eight Commissioners, besides Scotch Commissioners, to treat with the Commissioners from the King at Uxbridge,—the time is not yet certainly appointed.

1645, Jan. ¹⁹/₁₀. E. Verney to R. Verney.

1644, Jan. 16. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney, and draft of Verney's reply.

1645, Jan. 15. The same to the same.

1645, Jan. 17, Peshoebury.—Sir Thos. Hewytt to Sir R. Verney.

Letters from Eleanor Countess of Sussex.

1645, ⁵/₁₀. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—He will send the form of ordinance in which the oath is set down for them that come in from the King's quarters, next week. It does not concern him, for he was never in the King's quarters. This day we hear we have taken Dartmouth by storm. It was taken on Monday last; Parliament had an express this morning. Yet I hear the King's party have taken 200 horse of ours as they were at supper the other night. Richard Jennings of the House of Commons was taken prisoner last week; Weston, brother to the Earl of Portland, is to go to get him exchanged.

1645, Jan. 23. The same to the same.—Last week the Parliament sent to the King to name Commissioners.—Sends names of those who treat for the King—but the King has sent some new proposition, such as the restoration of the forts, &c. List of names:—The Duke of Richmond, Earl of Kingston, Earl of Chichester, Lords Seymour, Capel, Hatton, Culpepper.—Sir E. Nicholas, Sir Edward Hide, Sir R. Lane, Sir Thomas Gardner, Sir Orlando Bridgeman. Mr. Ashburnham, Mr. Geoffrey Palmer, Dr. Steward for the church, Dr. Sheldon, Dr. Landy, chaplains.

1645, Jan. 30. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.

1645, Feb. 5. Sir R. Burgoyne to Adrian de Roe-gnying, at Paris, for R. Smith.—We kept this day, by order of both Houses, as a thanksgiving for all our late victories in the West, as Dartmouth and Hereford and the rest; and the afternoon in church the Lord Mayor had an express of Chester being surrendered. Lord Lisle of the House of Commons, son to the Earl of Leicester, is voted to go as Lord Deputy to Ireland.

1644, Feb. 13. The same to the same.—Treaty of Uxbridge.—The King not yet consents to the proposition about Ireland. The King offers to put the militia for three years into the hands of twenty, ten by him, and ten by them—it is unlikely to be agreed to.—Lord Mackquier is condemned to die; he excepted to 35 jurors; he asks a fortnight's time to prepare and to speak with Mr. Walter Montague and Sir Basil Brooke before the Lieutenant of the Tower, and to be sent to Newgate before two priests that are there.—He heard yesterday in Westminster Hall that Weymouth was taken by storm by Col. Goring, and that Coll. Sydenham was slain; the last is confirmed, but we hear the former contradicted, that the great fort is not taken which has the command of all the towns and forts.

1644, Feb. 20. Ditto.—This day Lord Mackquier was drawn, hung, and quartered.

1644, Feb. 27. Ditto. The Treaty was dissolved on Saturday, and nothing was agreed on.—Scarboro' taken, but not the castle, likewise Shrewsbury by Col. Mitton and Col. Hunt without much bloodshed, for Prince Maurice drew out all his forces of the town to relieve Chester, besieged by our forces, and in the mean time they surprised it. Fairfax is to present a list of his officers to-morrow to the Parliament.—My Lord-General as in all things else, so in this particular, carries himself very nobly, not expressing much discontent; if the service be done he cares not by what hand it is.

1645, March 12. Ditto.—More victories—this is a thanksgiving day.

1645, March 19. Ditto.—For news refers him (Verney) to the enclosed.—All Hopton's forces, consisting of above 1,000 horse, are taken by General Sir T. Fairfax; the Prince is carried by Culpeper and Hyde into the Isle of Scilly, which hath begot a feare in all honest men that he will be transported into France.—The House of Commons, he it informed, hath passed a vote that both houses send a message to the Prince to come to Parliament.

1645, March 20. Lady Sidenham to Sir R. Verney.

1645, March 27. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—He has returned to London.—Lord Savill is come from the King. Sir T. Fairfax very suddenly to go into the field.—the Parliament have finished the Directory for church worship.—Griffin is still a prisoner, but he plays most antic tricks as ever was heard of by a gentleman—he is in a private house where no woman is now suffered for to give him visits as formerly.

1644. (Received) ^{April 7}/_{Mar. h 28}. Sir A. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—Hopton's army and Waller's are very near joining to fight about Winchester—the losses is said to be 10,000.—A very great army goes towards Glos'ter, which yet can not pass because of a great strength of the King which lies near Warwick where that is. Prince Rupert has a great army near Shrewsbury or before Wemme. Prince Maurice is said to be on his way towards Oxford.—The King presses 12,000 men.

1645, April 1. Sir T. Hewytt to Sir R. Verney. (At Mr. Willett's in Rouen.)

1645, April 1. Lady Margaret Hewytt to Lady Verney.

1645, April 3. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—The Earl of Essex yesterday laid down his commission; the Earls of Denbigh and Manchester did the like. Francis Gerrard is returned, but not yet admitted into the House, but is referred to a committee of which Mr. Bond is in the chair.—He hears of some about to ask for debts owing to Verney.

1645, April ³/₁₀. R. Verney to Sir R. Burgoyne.—He says it would be dangerous for them to come over.

1645, April 10. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—Griffin has a chance of being hanged.

1645, April 17. The same to the same.—He (Burgoyne) thinks that Verney would not be imprisoned to he came over.—There was an insurrection in Kent last week by some soldiers that were prest.—Myself and countrymen have all the afternoon been putting in governors into our garrison towns, instead of their Parliament men that now by the ordinance are outed.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1645, April 24. The same to the same.—He thinks Fairfax will soon be ready for the field. Griffin is in Newgate in the Press Yard.—As for that of the Earl of Manchester and Sir Thomas Barrington's son, it is so absolutely false that all Parliament men stand amazed at the falseness of the report. Has not time to send the pamphlet.

1645, May 1. The same to the same.—Col. Cromwell has taken at two several times 500 horses of the King, besides foot. Thro' the knavery of some of his scouts Col. Massy was nearly surprised and routed.—120 musketeers in the hedges kept the enemy at bay while he retreated, but he took 30 or 40 of the commanders and officers who pursued.—Sends pamphlet.—Monday night four or five mad blades in drink resolved to do some mad prank; broke windows, killed one of the watch, wounded two more, neither of whom it is feared will live—four of them are taken. One is Captain Salkin, a captain of horse in the Lord-General's army, a proper young man of a light coloured hair; Sir Thomas Evelyn's eldest son, Thomas Evelyn; one Mr. Wild, a young gentleman, and another whose name I know not. They are in Newgate. Sir T. Fairfax sets out to-night for Taunton to relieve it, intending to leave four or five thousand with Col. Brown and Cromwell.

1645, May 8 and 15. The same to the same.

1645 June 5 The same to the same.—He was by an extraordinary occasion detained by a committee till about 10 at night. Leicester was taken by the King's forces on Saturday last. Verney has heard of Evesham having been taken by the Parliament. He (Burgoyne) sends a book of news.

1645, June 12. The same to the same.—The King's army is at Daintry, co. Northampton.

1645, June 17. Sir W. Palmer to Sir R. Verney.

1645, June 25. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—He cannot send the Moderate Intelligencer: it is fasting day.—Leicester was taken from us, and is retaken by us.—Great victory over the King's forces by Knarsby. We killed and took 5,000 men, 6,000 arms, 200 carriages, 12 pieces of ordinance, 1,500 horses, 48 captains, 3 colonels, &c.—Last Saturday we saw all the common soldiers brought into the city. Last Thursday was Thanksgiving Day. Both Houses met the Lord Mayor, who entertained both Houses at Grocer's Hall, where we had a very good dinner.

1645, July 3. The same to the same.

1645, July 31. Ditto.—Since Naseby and Leicester, Fairfax and Massy took and slew of the King's forces above 2,000, besides horse and arms about Marston Moor, not far off Taunton.—They have taken Bridgewater and Scarborough and Pomfret Castle. Some Commissioners are to set forward this day to Scotland. Sir Henry Vane, Secretary, Sir W. Armin, Mr. Hatcher, Mr. Goodwin, and he which should have been first Lord Wharton.

1645, Aug. 7. Ditto.—Jack Griffith, I believe, will be bailed. Britannicus, as I hear, is sent to Newgate prison for being too saucy and uncivil with the King in his pamphlets. The Parliament did very much resent the impudency of his stile. I wish he may smart to purpose, and others learn better manners.—The Parliament this day, as I am informed, passed a vote that there should be some proposition of peace framed and sent to the King, and a positive answer required.

1645, Aug. 14. Ditto.—He (Burgoyne) is going to Twickenham because of the sickness in London.

1645, Aug. 28 and Sept. 4. Ditto.

1645, Sept. 18. Ditto. He mentions that Bristol is taken.

1645, Sept. 24. Ditto. He (Burgoyne) says that Montrose is routed in Scotland.

1645, Sept. 27. Mary Frances, Abbess of — to Lady Verney.—Hearing they are to leave Rouen she thanks them for alms and kindness.—Asks for arms, firing, and clothes. (In English; dated "from our poor Exile.")

1645, Oct. 2. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—Col. Poyntz gave the King absolute defeat about Chester; there were slain on the ground 800, and taken above 1,200, most, if not all, horse; the King absolutely routed, and fled to Wales with five or six hundred at most. Then Prince Charles sent to Sir Thos. Fairfax from Exeter to deliver a pass for Culpeper and Hopton to go to the King, and desire him from himself to comply with the Parliament. Sir Thos. Fairfax sent it to Parliament to know their pleasure;—as yet there is no answer.—The Earl of Lichfield, otherwise Lord Bernard Steward, brother to the Duke of Richmond, is slain:—it is thought Gerrard, who is now made a lord, is slain or to be sure very dangerously wounded. He (Burgoyne) came to town last night. Mr. Solicitor St. John married yesterday one Mrs. Cockrafts, widow of a merchant.—Lord Rich on the same day married fair Mrs. Rogers, the widow, Sir Thomas Cheek's daughter.

1645, Oct. 9. The same to Sir R. Verney at Rouen. The King has gone to Newark with 2,500 men.

1645, Oct. 9. The Countess of Sussex to Sir R. Verney.

1645, Oct. 23. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney at Paris.—He sends print of news.

1645, Oct. 30. The same to the same.—He says that Verney was voted out for nothing but his long absence.—Other things were laid to his charge, as being at Oxford or having been there or in the King's quarters, but a servant of his who was there present did satisfy them to the contrary. Sir Thos. Fairfax has sat down before Exeter and has taken, as I hear some of the outward forts; he has sent some to raise the siege at Plymouth.—Goring went out and summoned the Cornwall people, whereupon 9,000 were raised and presently declared themselves for the Parliament. This is not certain.—He hears the King is at Newark.—Some report that the young Prince is gone to France, but I believe it is not true.

1645, Nov. 6. The same to the same.—The King, we hear, is got out of Newark with 700 horse, and is gone to Banbury.—Pointz has taken Shelford House, by Northampton, on Monday last, where we have slain 100, and the Earl of Chesterfield's son, who was governor, is sorely wounded.

1645, Nov. 13. The same to the same.—Sends a news pamphlet.—Drake was going to seize on something in C . . . for the benefit of himself and Verney;—if he does it not within 10 days it may turn to prejudice.

1645, Nov. 20. The same to the same.—He (Burgoyne) attended at Lincoln's Inn to receive 115*l*. from Sir Edward Ellis; as soon as it was laid down five or six sent from the Middlesex Committee seized on it before it was told over; he suspects Ellis (who says he was forced by the Committee, to tell what he owed Verney) because he would not pay it in a private room.—Ellis affected to be very much distressed.

1645, Dec. 4. The same to the same.—The Scots are about Newark.—The King about Oxford.—The Parliament are about propositions.—He thinks that a sudden return will be safest.—He has ascertained that Ellis juggled.

1645, Dec. 18. Ditto.—He refers to his letter of the 11th, and to a bill inclosed (not there).

1645, Dec. 25, Christmas Day, and Dec. 31. The same to the same.

1645. M. Testard, Pasteur de Blois to Sir R. Verney.

1645. Sir John Leeke to Sir R. Verney.—On business and family matters and a little war news.

Letters from Susanna Verney and from Richard Alport, of London, who was engaged to marry Susanna Verney.

1645, Oct. 23, Rouen. William Earl of Devonshire to Sir R. Verney.—Compliments on his (Verney's) leaving Rouen.

1645, Nov. 16 and Dec. 14. The same to the same.—About a fine on his estate by the Parliament.

Three or four letters from Hatton Rich to R. Verney. In one, dated Oct. 17th, 1646, he encloses one from his father the Earl of Warwick (which is here) calling him home.—Verney is to keep this secret. Rich wants Verney to lend him some money to get home.

Several letters from Lady Mary Verney. In one, dated 1646, Dec. 3rd, she says that in London she pays 12 shillings a week for a chamber, another for her maid, two pairs of stairs high, and all fire, candle, washing, breakfast, and diet, besides coaches, which are most infer(n)nell dear, and there is no stirring forth without one, or a chair.—The town was never so full as it is now.

Letters from the Countess of Sussex.

Directions for such as travel from Paris into Italy.

1645, Jan. 2, Rouen. The Earl of Devonshire to Sir R. V., at Blois.—His ordinance is just past with difficulty enough, so that any advantage would have served against him, but all attempts for his longer stay abroad prove vaine. And therefore his friends advertize him they have got a convoy, and that he might expect it at Dieppe as yesterday, and if he fail to return with it, it will cost him no less than absolute ruin. He would have been happy if Verney had returned.

1646, Feb. 26, London. The same to the same.—Ashby is to be delivered to the Parliament next Saturday, Lord Loughborough having agreed to put it into the Parliament's hands so that he may have his own estate unsequestered, and other gentlemen with him admitted to compound as if they had come in

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

before the 1st of December.—Lady Sussex will shortly be married to Lord Warwick.

Drafts of Verney's replies to these letters.

1646. Several letters from Dr. William Denton to Verney.—In one he says that he can't get a form of pardon, but he sends a form of an ordinance which authorizes his Majesty's Solicitor-General to draw up a pardon.

In another letter he thinks Verney will have to pay between 2 and 3,000*l.*, unless he can show conveyances for payment of debts dated before the delinquency.—In another, of the 24th of September, he says that Sir J. Wake died yesterday.

Several letters by Pen Denton, afterwards Pen Verney.

Many letters by Thomas Verney.

Letters from Anne Hobart and Nathaniel Hobart.

Letters from Sir Nic. Crispe.

1644 to 1646. Copies of proceedings regarding the sequestered estates of Sir R. Verney.—His estate was conveyed to Mary Verney his wife, Sir R. Burgoyne, Richard Winwood, John Denton, and Francis Drake, in trust for payment of debts, about 900*l.*, and annuities. The trustees had appointed a receiver.—At a committee for Bucks the receiver was ordered to continue.

(1645, Jan.—Col. H. Verney.) So indorsed.—Gives a list of the prisoners of quality taken at Hereford, sixteen in number. The Lord Brudenell, Sir Henry Benefield, and Sir Francis Howard are marked as papists.—There are several letters.—He says that Sir R. Verney's only crime (i.e. against the parliament) is absence.

1645, Feb. 5. Col. Henry Verney.—'Tis believed Chester can not stand out six days.—He hears Exeter is in great danger, and Banbury nearly blocked.

1645, Feb. 12. From the same.—Chester is now in the Parliament's hands; they had honourable conditions.

1645, Feb. 9. Lord Loughborough is endeavouring to make his peace.—Exeter for a certainty is in much distress, and Banbury blocked up.—Murray, by the speech of all, is in bad condition, most think this journey will cost him his life.—He dares not meddle to speak of the well agreeing of the Scots and the Parliament.

1645, Feb. 26. Answer about Sir R. Verney's coming home;—he thinks he may do so on easy terms.

1645, March 5. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney. The enemy got into Abingdon, but were driven out and met with a blow between Abingdon and Oxford. Prince Rupert was there.

Letters by Col. Verney.

1645, March 5.—Corfe Castle last week by a plot, was taken by the Parliament. On Monday last Abingdon was in great election to be surprised by Prince Rupert in the night;—his troops got in, and were in possession of the cannon and market place; but they began to plunder and were driven out, it would have been for his Majesty's advantage,—it was stored with provisions and ammunition, and 1,000 soldiers in it.

1646, March 19.—Lord Hopton has given all his horse to Sir Thomas Fairfax.

1646, April 2. Donnington Castle, co. Berks, and Tidbury, co. Stafford, are both this week taken by the Parliament.—This night news has come that Worcester has yielded.

1646, May 7.—Peg Elmy is married this day.—He (Verney) was going to church.—The King is in person with the Scots before Newark, but on what conditions is not yet known here. The Duke of Richmond, Lord Linsey, Sir Edward Siddenham, Sir W. Fleetwood, and Jack Cary came there all voluntary in, but notwithstanding were sent to Warwick Castle.

1646, May 14. Tells of successes of the Parliament army.—Everybody seeks to make the best conditions they can now that the King has left them. I wish for your own good and my content you did the like.—Advises him to come as they grow stricter daily. The ordinance is renewed for six months longer.

1646, Dec. 24. Plot lately discovered by the Lord of Northumberland that the Duke of York was to be stole away by Nedd Waller;—he is at present under the black rod.

1646, Nov. Elizabeth Heath to R. Verney in Paris.

1646. Robert Thorner, from Rome, to R. Verney.

1646. The same to the same, from Orleans.—Sends two books, but he cannot get Confession of Augsburg in Latin, or the book about the Jesuits either. (In August he sends the Confession of Augsburg in French.)

Letters by Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.

1646, June 4.—The King is still in Newcastle with the Scots, which breeds much jealousy among divers in these parts.

1646, June 11. The King is at Newcastle.—The Parliament is now sending a proposition to him.

1646, June 25. He (Burgoyne) is in the country, at Chiswick, but intends to return to town every day.

1646, July 16. Mentions the sale of a silver basin, ewer, and candlesticks.

1646, March 26. He has received the plate (in cipher).

1646, April 9. His wife is yet alive, and there's a little more hope.

1646, April 16. His wife is better, but has to undergo her confinement.—Thinks he would better not made a motion for further delay for R. Verney, lest it wake a sleeping lion.

1646, April 23. Susan's marriage stayed because R. Verney's signature to a deed is wanted.

1646, ^{1 July}_{20 June}. R. Verney to Sir Roger Burgoyne.—Susan would better marry Allport at once, but she cannot expect to escape the reward of her own folly; she is like to be an unfortunate woman.

1646, April 30. Sir R. Burgoyne to R. Verney.—Is glad Verney has thoughts of looking towards his friends in England.

1646, July 23. None discourage him (Burgoyne) from asking Verney's wife to come over.

1646, Aug. 6. He has consulted with many.—Sir Gilbert Gerard is not against Lady Verney coming over.

1646, Aug. ²⁶₁₆. R. Verney to Sir R. Burgoyne. About sequestration and the proposition.

1646, Aug. 13. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney. Ill success of the proposition mentioned in the last letter. What the House of Commons intends to-morrow.

1646, Aug. 27. He (Burgoyne) discusses the applicability of the articles to Verney.—Former letters have told him that his niece (Susan Verney) was married.

1646, Sept. 3. The Parliament is taken up with a proposition of the Scots which they have sent into the House in writing. They made out a bill of 3,000,000*l.* and had received 900,000*l.*—We bring them in debt 400,000*l.*

1646, Sept. 24. No pass (for Lady Verney) is to be procured from the Speaker. He is told that it is not necessary now, as there are no garrisons near.—Asks for information, so that he may prepare to meet her.

1646, Oct. 1. He is in daily expectation of hearing from the lady.

1646, Oct. 8. He has the stone, and cannot exert himself.

1646, Oct. 15. Writes to ask where Lady Verney will land.

1646, Nov. 5. He was this day fortnight at the Earl of Essex's funeral.

1646, Dec. 3. Congratulates him on the safe arrival of Lady Verney.

1646, Jan. 14—Feb. 4. The King will shortly be at Hombie.

1646, Feb. 11. The children's illness prevents him from going more than once or twice in a fortnight to Westminster. We hear not yet from the King since his setting forth from Newcastle to Holdenby.—The Scots are all gone out.

1646, Feb. 25. Last week was much prevented, but the House did not rise till about 9 at night this day sennight.—It was concerning the army, how many horse and foot should be kept and how many disbanded. (He mentions the votes.) He supposes that Verney has heard that Sir Thomas Bendish is going over as ambassador to Constantinople, or otherwise as Consul. Aleppo.

1646, March 11. Tells Verney that the committee have sent to the Committee in the country to know on what grounds Verney was sequestered. They have six weeks time to give an account.

1646, Dec. ²⁹₁₀. R. Verney to Lady Verney.

1646, ^{Dec. 10}_{Nov. 30}, Caen. The same to the same.—To-morrow he goes towards Alençon and so to Mans, which is the direct way to Blois.

A key of names that R. Verney and his lady write by. A letter by Lady Cary Gardiner.

Several letters from R. Verney to H. Verney.

Many letters from William Wakefield to R. Verney in December, dated from Rotterdam, Dieppe in November, Orleans and Paris in October.

Thomas Lister, at Tours, to R. Verney.—About getting him some sweetmeats.

Several letters from Jonas Abeels, at Amsterdam. (He had charge of R. Verney's deeds and trunks.)

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1644. (Indorsed, received July ??). Henry (Lord) Beauchamp, at Paris, to R. Verney, at Blois.—Prince Rupert arrived on Thursday last at St. Germain.

1644, May 3 and July 8. Henry Cholmeley, at Tours, to R. Verney.

1644. Reply by R. Verney, telling Cholmeley English news.

1645, June 30 and Dec. 11. Francis Drake to Sir R. Verney.—On business.

1645, Jan. 29. The same to the same. He thinks it will be well for him to come to England;—he urges it.—There is a resolution again to sequester his (Verney's) estate, and selling may follow, if not prevented; he knows his best course.

1646. Letter from Roads (the steward) to R. Verney.

1646, May 26. Robert Busby, at Pau, to Lady Verney, at Hamburg.—He gives English news and sends a present.

1646, Oct. —. Sir Thomas Darrell to R. Verney, Near the Abbé St. Germain.—The passage by Dieppe proving lately very unfortunate to your friend and mine, Sir Ralph Sidenham, Mr. Andrew Newport, Mr. Costen (?), and divers others, who as yet we have so much reason to believe were cast away in the last great storm, and four barks in the sight of a Newcastle ship, which brings the sad report.

1646, Sept. 23. The same to the same.—The ill news out of England that my land is set at sale, and other estates seized on. All men that dare are from hence making for England. I can not yet take my resolution. I believe the intendment of her Majesty for Ireland is much infirmed by the violent dissent of the Popish party to their own agreement.

1646, July 25. Thomas Verney to W. Roades.—I had called at Claydon had I not a company of unruly soldiers at my heels. Thanks him for his former favour; asks for 5*l.*, which he is sure Sir Ralph will allow if he (Thomas) dye.

1646, Oct. —. The same to the same.

1646, May 6. Robert Leslie, at Paris, to R. Verney. His wife is going to England on his business, she shall make more hast because of his (R. Verney's) necessities.—The Prince is at Jersey, 200 in his train; when he cometh we know not, but the Queen doth earnestly desire it.

1646, April 30. Matthew Snelling, London, to—Sir Robert Crompton intends to spend the summer in London; he is lodged in Long Aker, in a house called the Lord of Pembroke's Stables near Covent Garden.—There is no certainty when the King will be admitted to come in. Yesterday Parliament received a letter from the King; he desired to come in, with six of his train, but Parliament will not grant it till they have spoken with the Scots. General Fairfax has begirt Oxford.—Parliament have taken the place where the Marquis Hamilton was a prisoner, and he is daily expected at London.

Other letters by Matthew Snelling.

1646, March 15. Ralph Verney to Sir Robert Lesly.—He hopes that they may spend their next winter in England.

1647.

Several letters from Hatton Rich (son of the Earl of Warwick, at Tours).

Draft of letters from Sir R. Verney to Lady Sussex and others.

1647, Jan. 6 and 7. Lady Mary Verney to Sir R. Verney. After great worries she has finished the business before the committee.

There are many long letters from her.

1647, Jan. —. Edward Bruce at Orleans to —.

1647, Jan. —. Hatton Rich, at Tours, to Sir R. Verney.—He says that Hollis is still there, who doth aire himself twice a day to Marmotie to talk with the religieux concerning the seven dormants.

1647, Feb. 18. Lady Verney to —. She says she has sold her fine watch for 2*5*l.

Jane Tyingham to Lady Verney; and other letters to her.

1647, March —. Lady Verney to —. She says she is going to Warwick House to see my lady (Sussex, now Warwick). In another letter she mentions a dispute with her brother-in-law Harry, who complained of his letters not being answered.

1647, June 10. From the same.—She writes that the Dr. sent him word last week that she was delivered of a son—he is a fine child (christened Ralph). She is ill, only writes short letters—the child is ill, like to die, but it gets better.—(In July her letters are longer.)

An abusive letter from Thomas Verney;—he threatens a pamphlet.

1647, Aug. 12. Edmund Verney, at Blois, to his mother Lady Verney in French.

Paul Testard to Sir R. Verney.

W. Roads to Lady Verney.

Drafts of letters by Sir R. Verney to Henry Verney.

Letters from W. Wakefield (London), H. Montford, at Rotterdam, and James Abeels, Amsterdam, to Sir R. Verney, at Blois.—On business; and Sir R. Verney's replies.

1647, Nov. 14. Jo. Twysden, at Tours, to Sir R. Verney. He hears our pious Parliament are yet content to possess themselves of all men's estates, that at least tho' against their wills they may render them helpless in the great work of re. he had almost said deformation, toward which the wickedness of some would else have made not contributions.

1647, Sept. 4. The same to the same.

Letters from Thomas and Henry Verney, and replies.

1647, Dec. 8. T. Cordell, at Tours.—He hears much discourse there of the King's escape into the Isle of Wight.—Prays God for him. (There are other letters from him.)

1647, Nov. 24. T. Fanshawe, at Tours.

1647, Jan. 5. Copy order of the committee for taking off sequestration of Sir R. Verney's estate.

Letters from Dr. Denton to Sir R. Verney, and his replies.—Denton gives Verney London news.

Edmund Brown, London, to Sir R. Verney.

Edmund Verney to his mother Lady Verney.—On the birth of Ralph (in French)—He says, Mlle. ma sœur est extrêmement courroucée contre vous, in having a son and not a daughter.

Thomas Cockram, at Rouen. On business; and letters to him.

1647, Aug. 11. Col. (afterwards Sir) W. Smith, at Rouen, to Sir R. Verney. Tells London, parliamentary, and city news.—The army cry out against the last breach of privilege, when by prentices and others they were forced to unvote what they had passed the day before; the army are drawn about the city—they have taken care of the block houses at Gravesend, and have killed and taken divers of the city horse which lay at Greenwich. Some Independents were slain. In London the Speaker has gone, and Mr. Henry Pelham is chosen in his place.

Another letter from the same, dated Paris.

Letters from Robert Thorner (Paris). In October, he says that Lord Digby, O'Neale, and Mr. Digby, son to Sir Kellem, on Thursday last disarmed the Lord Wilmot, the Lord Wentford, and his second, to their great dishonour.

There are letters from Matthew Marten (Tours), S. Hartnell, and Abigail Sherard, from Rouen; from W. Roads, Du Val, Pen Denton, and many from Dr. Denton.

1647, Nov. 4. Dr. Denton to Sir R. Verney. He says the Scotch Commissioners have been three or four days with his Majesty.

1647, Oct. 20. Sir R. Verney to Dr. Denton. He announces the death of Peg Verney.

1648.

Letters from Eleanor Countess of Warwick; R. Cockram, at Rye; Paul Testard, at Blois; Mary Gardiner, at Blois; Edmund Verney; and several from Lady Mary Verney, one is dated Sept. 20th from France.—Many letters from and to Dr. W. Denton, and from Penelope Denton to her brother Sir R. Verney, and many from Thomas Verney.—Dr. John Kirton, at Paris, Thomas Cockran, Sir R. Verney to his son Edmund, Edward Denton to E. Verney, Edmund Browne (Paris), George Pierrepont (Paris), and Thomas Cordell (Angers).

1648, Feb. 29, Tours.—Thomas Cordell to —. A report that the King is assassinated, and the Prince of Wales executed in effigy.

Copy of Mr. Percies letter.—His defense to Parliament.

n. d. Thomas Hammond to —. He says that a cousin of his wife, Sir R. Verney has, he is sure by mistake, been delivered to him as a delinquent.—He was sitting in Parliament when his father fell at Edge Hill. In 1643 he went abroad, but for his wife's health, who about three or four years after died there, and then he returned not long after to England.—Asks favour for Sir R. Verney.

Sir R. Verney, at Paris, to Thomas Verney.

Letters from Samuel Brunsell, at the Hague, Jo. Twysden, at Tours, and Sir Edmund Nersey, at Walesford, John Denton to his nephew (R. Verney), E. Chalmers, at Blois, Rouen, and London; Charles Chalmers and W. White, at Blois.

There are numerous long letters by Edmund Verney from St. Germain, Rouen, and Havre.

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1648, May 24. A prescription, in French, by M. Testard for Lady Verney, to take at B—. And an account, in Latin, of the 20th of May, of Lady Verney's sudden illness and recovery.

In 1648 Lady Verney's letters do not contain much but domestic news, and her husband's business. Dr. Denton's letters give a good deal of public news. The letters from the English abroad notice people who are there.

1649.

In this year are many letters from Dr. Denton—he sent over to Sir R. Verney the ΕΙΚΩΝΟΚΛΑΣΤΗΣ. One letter from him is dated Jan 18th. He says the scaffold is preparing for the trial of the King.—Term is put off for ten days for that reason. It is almost every man's opinion that nothing will satisfy but his head, and I am already of the same opinion. Our divines preach generally against these proceedings, and not without great vehemency, and some of them begin to work against them also. Our cavaliers have offered to engage life and fortune for the King's purpose of whatever he shall grant of their demands. The Scotch have mediated and declared absolutely against it; yet nothing will do, they are resolved of their course.

1649, Nov. 18, Caen.—James Buck to Sir R. Verney. —Tells him that Sir Edmund was slain at Drogheda three days after quarter was given him; as he was walking with Cromwell by way of protection, one Ropier, brother to Lord Ropier, called him aside on pretence to speak with him, and ran him through with a tuck. The next day after one, Col. Boyle, who had quarter likewise gave him, as he was sitting with Lady More, sister to the Earl of Sunderland, in the same time one of Cromwell's came and whispered him in the ear to tell he must presently be put to death, who, rising from the table, the lady asked him whither he was going; he answered Madam, to dye; who no so sooner slipped out of the room but he was shot to death.

Letters from Humphrey Willett, at Rouen, from Mary Verney, sister to Sir R. Verney, Pen Denton, Margaret Sherard to Lady Verney. W. Wakefield, at London, Jo. Kirton, at Paris, several from Thomas and Jo. Cochrane, at Rouen (one dated 20th Feb. contains an account of the King's death). Edward Roscarrock, Rotterdam, and Sir Robert Walsh, Paris.

List of judges and officers named appointed by Parliament for the tryal of King Charles I., begun on Saturday Jan. 20th, and ended Saturday Jan. 27th, 1648. There are 125 names in all. Algernon Sidney is one of the number, and J. Bradshaw, serjeant-at-law, president, besides counsellors and officers.

Earl of Devonshire to Sir R. Verney, at Blois.

1649, Aug. 23, Sir Henry Pickering to Sir R. Verney (it is signed de Neufville), dated from Weybridge.—He notices, comically, Verney's love for Frontinack, which his godfather King James enforced into him.

1649, April 23, Rouen. H. Pickering to Sir R. Verney. —A little news from England. At Rouen are Mr. Waller and his wife, Col. T. Weston, and one Sir Osborne; Lady Portland, Lady Glamorgan, and Lady Ratcliff are going to Calais to meet her husband out of Holland. On the same paper, dated 24th April.—A letter from Dieppe two days since says it was twice put at the Council Table at Whitehall whether there should be a massacre of cavaliers and papists, and twice by two votes carried in the negative.—He does not know how it can agree with another letter he saw that there are already agents from Rouen, and shortly a nuncio is expected—whether the writers of the last mean Sir K. Digby, who lies still at Dieppe, or whether the Pope's nuncio that is in Normandy, not three weeks since come out of Ireland.

1649, April 1. From the same to the same, at Orleans. There are other letters dated from Paris, London, and Weybridge.

Several letters from Dorothy Leeke to Lady Verney.

Letters from John Barbary (Blois); many from A. Cowley, in Paris, and from Louis Auger, Paris. Henry Harrison, at Tours, borrows from Lord Allington the King's book in English—he has it in French; fears Lord Allington is in a consumption. Letters from Gyles Lord Allington, Samuel Bransell (a clergyman), and Sir Thomas Osborne, who sends the King's book to Sir R. Verney.

1649, Dec. 3, Roger Gascoyne to Sir R. Verney.

1649, Dec. $\frac{23}{13}$, Blois.—Sir R. Verney to Thomas Hatcher.—He says that on Saturday a friend will give a sermon and the sacrament after the honest old way at home;—if he will come he is welcome.

Many letters from Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney. In one of Jan. 18th, he mentions the scaffold in Westminster Hall for the trial of the King.

Many letters from—Wildgos in Paris.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

Three letters from (Father) W. Worsley, at Orleans:—seal, two swords in saltire between four fleur-de-lis.

1649, Jan. 16, Paris. Robert Pendrie to Sir R. Verney. —Mentions the marriage of Admiral Barberini's nephew, who was married to Justiniani's daughter, the Pope's nuncio. The Pope performed the ceremony.—A description of it.

Letters from Sir John Coke, who was travelling from Geneva, Thomas Fauconberg, at Saumur, Walter Vernon, at Geneva, Christopher Hallely, at Orleans, Ronen, and Paris, and replies to some of them by Sir R. Verney.

1650. Many pathetic letters concerning Lady Verney's death.

1651, March 18. (Sir Roger Burgoyne) à M.M. Caesar Gras, marchand bourgeois à Lye.—(for Mr. Ralph Smith (Verney). Indorsed, about a sum of money to be taken to clear my debts.

1652. Letters dated in July, October, November, and December, from Dupont, at London.—About a tomb to be executed for Sir R. Verney in memory of his father Sir Edmund, afterwards erected in Claydon Church. Indorsed, from Daval about the tomb.

Letters, ten or 12 in number, from Thomas Verney to W. Roads.—Applications for money; he (Verney) was in debt and in prison.

1652, Jan. 31. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney. He wants to go to his wife at Mallago.

1652, March 15. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney.—He wants to go to Barbadoes.

1652, May. —He says he has entered himself into the States service on Saturday.

1652, May 27. He speaks of the sign of the Three Periwigs and Three Crowns, in the Strand, by Suffolk House.—He is to be listed to-morrow in Col. Ingleby's regiment, and to trail a pike in his own company.—Asks for a suit of clothes, &c. and a sword.—Periwigs are not to be had in Dover, therefore tell Mr. L—— to go to the Three Periwigs (as above): the master is a Frenchman, and knows the bigness of his head, and will make one for 10s.

1652. On the 24th of June he writes that he was arrested for debt.

1652, Aug. 27. Ditto. Mentions his sudden departure to Scotland.

1652, July 28. Eliza Isham to M. Jean Shaw, English merchant at Antwerp. (For Sir R. Verney or Mr. Ralph Smyth).—She was his aunt.

Draft of Sir R. Verney's reply.

1652, Aug. 30, Hilsden. Eliza Isham to M. Guillaume Thompson, at Brussels, for Sir R. Verney. (Seal, a bar wavy sable, in chief 3-piles wavy sable). Other letters by Eliza Isham.

1652. Dr. Denton's directions to Sir Ralph Verney. —He wants Brussels Tweeces (to contain the following, I suppose,) sizars.—A large silver pen with a multiplying table upon it as can be with a hole for black lead, &c.

1652, Feb. 25, Londres.—Dupont to Sir R. Verney; and draft of reply by Sir H. Verney to Daval, dated from Venice $\frac{3 \text{ May}}{23 \text{ April}}$ 1652 About 8 or 10 days he intends to leave Venice and move towards Holland.—Hopes the Dr. and the men are in a way of agreement about the tomb.

1652, $\frac{5 \text{ July}}{25 \text{ June}}$, Amsterdam. Sir R. Verney's reply to the accompanying letter of Dupont's about the tomb.—Other letters by Dupont, and draft of answers.

1651, Feb. 19, Leghorn.—Thomas Banckes to Sir R. Verney, at Rome.—The Grand Duke with his small court is this week expected at Pisa who may happily come here in good time and see our convoy of ships under the command of Captain Bodilis (who is daily expected).—Now we are in daily expectation what effect the Holland Ambassador in London there treating will produce; if accord not, adieu to all trade and we must to the war.

1652, April 5 and 12, and May 3, Legorne. Three letters from Thomas Banckes, to Sir R. Verney, at Venice.

1652, May 11, Robert Pendrie, at Rome, to Sir R. Verney.

1652, May $\frac{18}{5}$, Sir R. Verney to R. Pendrie.—Asks for books and strings for the theorbo and gittane.

1652, March 18. The Hon. Margaret Sherard to Sir R. Verney.—She hears that he and his brother intend to remove her children towards Paris by reason as the King of France goeth toward Bordeaux.—Tells him to do as he thinks fit.

1653, March 28, London. Sir R. Verney to the Hon. Margaret Sherard.—As the Duchess of Orleans with her little daughters and much good company are now at Blois, he thinks his little cousins may

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

spend their time there with much advantage ; therefore, unless the court remove to some other place or war break out in those parts (which he does not apprehend) thinks she may well continue them there a little longer.

1652, Feb. 1. The same to the same.—Hearing by her brother Denton of his arrival in England, congratulates her.

1652, July 27.—The Honble. Margaret Sherard to Sir R. Verney.—Hears that he has returned from Italy, and intends to be at Blois.—She hears of troubles in France, and that the plague is spreading ; asks him to look after her children.—An estate has lately fallen to them by the death of my Lord Eure.

1652. Sir R. Verney, in reply, tells her that he thinks they (the children) would better stay longer for the language—if war breaks out he will remove Jack nearer to England.—He does not hear of more plague than usual.

1652, Oct. 29, Blois.—Marie Eure to M. le Chevalier Verney (in French).—She is glad he has come to France.—Sends her regards to her cousin Verney.

1652, Nov. 11. Nathaniel Hobart to (Sir R. Verney). Is glad he is in England.

1652, March 28, Lyons. Mons. Gras to Sir R. Smith (Verney) in English.—The King's army and that of the Princes, both strong, are about Chartres, and distant from each other only four French leagues. The Court is at Blois, where the Duke of Bouillon is lately gone.—Marshal Turenne, his brother, is still with the King, much esteemed and caressed. M. le Comte de Harcourt has taken the town of Naintes ; the Provençals have demanded the Duke of Angoulême to be again their governor after the voluntary submission made to him by the deputies.

1652, June 21. The same to the same.—It is reported that the Hollanders have a mind to join again with the French if the town and fortress of Dunkirk be delivered unto them.

There are other letters by Gras, and drafts of Sir R. Verney's replies.

1652. Francis Drake to Sir R. Verney, at Dr. Denton's house, in Covent Garden.

1652. Many letters from Dr. W. Denton to Mr. W. Roades.

1652, June 24, Brussels. Sir Roger Burgoyne to the Chevalier Verney, at Blois.—He arrived at Brussels this morning ; Lord Allington and his governor are there, but not his brother, Mr. Sidney.—He is told the King has left Paris hitherward, and is expected to pass this way three days hence. Lord Craven's estate is sequestered only for giving the King a horse, say some, others say that he presented two gentlemen to kiss the King's hands, and that with his good estate was crime enough.

1651-2. Richard Abell to his brother W. Abell, at East Claydon.—On business.

1652, May 28, London. W. Wakefield to Sir Ralph Verney, at Amsterdam.—Desires his letters to be addressed to Mr. Primate, leatherseller, sign of the Three Golden Buckles, next the Feather Tavern, in Fleet Street.

1652, Aug. 17, Antwerp. Sir R. Verney to W. Wakefield.—He intends next week to see Gaunt, Bruges, Newport, and Ostend, and so back to Brussels.—He has ordered his bailiff to pay Wakefield some money speedily, but he cannot say what he will do ; for in these times our old servants are become our new masters.

1652, Aug. 20, London. W. Wakefield to Sir R. Verney, at Antwerp.—Advises him as things stand here, and according to that knowledge he has of Verney's affairs, with relation to the Act about taking of the Engagement, it should be to think of home-wards now after a ten years' peregrination ; " and this " let me tell you, I have a little island at Edmonton, " where you may be as private as you will desire."

1652, Sept. 3, Antwerp.—John Shaw to Sir R. Verney, at Brussels. News of a great fight between the two States ships off Plymouth, wherein Sir George Ascue was overmann'd in the number of ships and ships of force ; so doubt not he may come to the worse, but we have no particulars of anything than that the fight lasted Monday and Tuesday was sennight.

1652, Sept. 10, Antwerp. The same to the same.—There are many other letters from Wakefield.

1652. Letters from George Gaell, of Doctor's Commons, to his brother, W. Abell at East Claydon.

1652, Jan. 24. W. Roades to Dr. Denton.—Bricks are 19s. per 1,000 at the kiln.

1652. Robert Wyteman (Doctor's Commons) to William Abell.—He means to come to Claydon by the Alsberry coach.

1652. Two letters from Richard Spencer, at Brussels, to his cousin Verney, at Antwerp.

1652, March 23, Florence. Dr. John Kirton to Sir R. Verney, at Rome.—Some merchants from London write that there will be peace with Holland—others say the reverse—and that the Marquis of Argyle still defends himself in the highlands, and will not yield to our Republic.—Angers is taken by the King of France.—Here we expect the Archduke of Insprug.

1652, Nov. 22. Thomas Banckes, at Leghorn, to Sir R. Verney—and many other letters from him.

1652, April 13. Dr. Kirton, at Marco Antonio Renzo, at Florence, to Sir R. Verney, at Bologna.—Mr. Courten writes me from Lygorne what a worthy piece the Act of Indemnity is, indeed, a trap to catch every man in whom they please, and to ruin the old nobility, and so their new laws are all for their own advantage to fetch in any man who does not run their way.—He (Courten) also writes that from England they write that there will be war, and from Holland peace. Certain it is that the negotiation is carried very secretly.

1652, Feb. 3, Florence. The same to the same.—We expect from England what the Holland and Swedish Ambassador will negotiate. Mr. Hobbes is forbidden our English Court at Paris, whence I have fresh letters, but no such news as the match with the Queen of Swedland.—Our Court, as they write, is very poor.

1652, Jan. 27. The same to Sir R. Verney, at Rome.—Our great Duke has news that our King shall marry the Queen of Swedland.—From England we hear that Ireton is dead, in Ireland, and the Parliament, to requite his great services, have ordered 2,000*l.* per annum out of the Duke of Buckingham's estate for his posterity. From France, that the Prince of Condé in all encounters has been beaten, and now endeavours to make his peace.—That Cardinal Mazarin has sent 6,000 fresh men to the King's army, and himself is retired out of France again.—That Barcelona is relieved, and that the Spaniards have quitted the siege.— . . . From England we hear of the death of the old Countess of Kent.

1652, Jan. 13, Florence. The same to the same.— . . . Mr. Curtess writes from Frankfort to Mr. Courten that our King will come next Spring into Germany to demand succour from all these princes.—Half the Council of State Cromwell hath changed, and the president is to be changed every month ; the Parliament sits three years longer.—For the news of our King being a Catholic, I have fresh letters from Paris, but they say nought of it.

There a few other letters from Dr. Kirton.

1652, Rome.—Several letters by Thomas Cordell.

1652, Antwerp.—Letters from Dr. George Morley (afterwards Bishop of Winton) to Sir R. Verney.

1652, Dec. 12, Antwerp.—He says the news from France is very bad, viz., that they are sending to the rebels of England to make a bargain with them, which he is assured will draw in the Dutch too.

1652, Nov. —. The same to Sir R. Verney, at Brussels.—He discusses Mr. Knott's book and Chillingworth's opinion.

n. d., Oxon. William Denton to his nephew Ralph Verney, Esq., at Mr. Whetton's, his lodge, Christ Church College. Begins, Ralph.—Our Solomon that could discourse from the cedar in Lebanon to the mosse that groweth on the wall can not compose an antidote against his own death, but drops, or rather runneth, every hower towards his sepulture, as well as his language will give him leave to express ; he bearing his sickness very patiently ; he hath a dead palsy, and therefore cannot speak, but understands.—Physicians as well as others are christian in death which we must all pay, &c. (There is a little Latin in the letter.)

Several letters from Pen Denton to her brother Sir R. Verney.

Letters from Humphrey Willett, at Rouen, to Sir R. Verney—they are on business and contain some news. One is dated, as below, and is to Sir R. Verney, at Brussels.

1652, Sept. 27, Rouen.—The taking of the fleet going from Dunkirk has caused some English ships to be arrested at St. Malo, four of those taken being of St. Malo, and the people are so incensed there that the English dare not at present stay abroad.—At Honfleur, those of the Admiralty have arrested three ships laden for London.

Henry Page, at Venice, to Sir R. Verney.—He intends to send him (Verney) some looking glasses.—God grant they may escape the Flemings.

Many letters from Dr. William Denton to Sir R. Verney, at some place abroad.—About money and land.

1652, July 16.—Dr. W. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—Nat. Hob(art) was yesterday sworn a Master of Chancery in Sir Ed. Leech his dead place.

1652, Sept. 9. I must confess a coach and a chaplain

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

are very great aims, but God thinks a mean garb fit for me, and therefore I hope will make me content with such things as I have. I am resolved to keep a coach when I have wherewith all, but till then I am resolved to keep none. . . . Some have pages in trunks that ride behind the coaches, but not many: but I believe they will increase next Hyde Park time. I know none of your acquaintance that have one but Sir Arthur Haselrigs, and yet I never saw him behind a coach, but he is in cloath trunks, billeted or garded with velvet, silver sword and silver buckles upon his shoes, and silk stockings. I like the bed coaches best with one end only, and they are much in use here, and so are the others.

1652, Aug. 20. Charles Sydenham goeth over with Lieutenant-General Fleetwood into Ireland, but in no command—as a companion indeed, or a child. . . . Coals are very dear, 30s. a chaldron. He (Denton) hears that the Dutch intercepted our packet boat with the post.—He has sent another packet with a letter and draught of the tombe to Verney.

Several letters from Lucy Shepherd to Ralph Smith (Verney).

1652, Aug. 6. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—There was a report in the city of a bloody fight between the fleets, which is contradicted by Admiral Blake, under his own hand.

1652, Dec. 31. Pass from the States General to Sir Ralph Verney, in Dutch, and a letter of the same date, being an extract from the resolutions of the States General.

1653. Letter from Ann Hobart (a cousin of Sir R. Verney's) to him.

1653. Edward Fust (afterwards a baronet) to Sir R. Verney.

1653. Henry Colepeper, Enford, to Sir R. Verney.

1653 (Feb. 6?). A copy of Sir R. Verney's letter to T. Cordell, at Blois.—Yesterday the Earl of Devonshire visited him and wanted a tutor for his only son: he sent him to Sir O. B . . . Cannot tell how to advise Cordell, because he must engage for six or twelve months.

1653, Feb. 28. T. Cordell to Sir R. Verney.—He acknowledges his (Verney's) of the 6th.—The Prince of Conti's marriage with the Cardinal's niece took place upon Sunday last though in Lent; he has in hand 100,000 crowns, a year after, as many more, 150,000 crowns pension yearly, besides 50,000 crowns present from the King, and he is presently to go into Catalonia. Keratry is to be Constable of France, with certain restrictions.—Other news.

1653, April 20th. Ditto.—Prince Robert has arrived in Paris; four ships he brought, but can give no account of his brother Maurice.—Sir Edward Herbert is made Lord Keeper of the Seal.

1653, May 24. The same to the same.—No news as to the court and country, but to the other court is come he whom they call here the Duke of Gloster; he arrived on Wednesday last, and with him came Thos. Killigrew and Sir Marmaduke Langdale, who, they say, is deputed this way by the presbyterians, and great intercession is made to make him a privie counsellor to uphold that interest.

1653, June 7, Paris. The same to the same. The Irish garrison at Lormont, near Bordeaux, which consisted of 575, have rendered the place and declared themselves for the King. Bellegarde is gasping, and 'tis hoped here it will be soon given up. The Prince of Condé is still at Bruxelles.—The King is at St. Germain, but his return is soon expected.

1653, June. The same to the same. Bellegarde is taken, and Mr. Win the-lawyer's son, and one Mr. Crewe with some Swedes coming from Rye to Deipe, within half a mile of the town, upon the sea, were robbed to the purpose by a little man-of-war, pretending from the Duke of York, who sheltered himself behind the rocks till he saw his opportunity.

1653, June 28, Paris.—The same to the same.—Prince Rupert had liked to have been drowned last week; he sank three times and at last was hooked up. The Cardinal, they say, loves the son better than the mother, and 'tis said she grows jealous and angry as his mother-in-law did before her.—The King and Queen are both at St. Germain.

1653, July 5. The same to the same.—The other day the Duke of York went to Marshal Turenne's camp, which, they say, consists of 20,000 men. Last night the King was at the fireworks which the Parisians made at the Greve to commemorate the Prince's design as on that day to burn the Maison Ville.—Mentions the Pope's Bull against the Jansenists. Italian and Swiss gossip.

1653, July 9. T. Cordell to Sir R. Verney, from Paris.—What a strange transmutation is here. Above 100,000 hereticks made with a word of Innocent's mouth; yet I love him for this, that by his accommodating prudence he hath confounded the Spaniards as much as the Jansenists.

1653, July $\frac{25}{15}$. The same to the same.—The King of France is upon his return this way. Bourdeaux is certainly upon his gasping, and will soon give up the ghost. Cardinal Antonio was attacked by the Turks in the Mediteranean; he escaped, but his baggage and some of his train were lost.—You know our countryman who has served here in the wars with so much vogue, and is a great commander in the French armies, and you have heard of Madame Chastillon, whose husband was killed at Charenton. He shall be the cavaliero and she shall be the donna, and under these terms I will in my next recount the accident.

Drafts of two or three letters from Sir R. Verney to T. Cordell.

R. Cotton, at Blois, to Sir R. Verney.

Drafts of letters to Robert Cotton from Sir R. Verney.

William Wildegos, at Paris, to Sir R. Verney.

Jasper Gower to Ralph Smith (Verney), at the corner of the Cloyster, in the Covent Garden.

1653, April 19, Antwerp. The same to the same.—In his last Verney told him of a poem on the late sea fight, and two sheets of paper about a bible now in hand; he has not yet received them.

There are letters to Sir R. Verney from Lady Gawdy, Margaret Elmes her sister, Thomas Elmes (Norton), Eliza Isham, John Stukeley his brother, Dame Cary (widow of Sir Thomas Gardiner), and from his brother Thomas Verney.

1653, April 4. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney. He is going to Barbadoes.—Asks for money (10l. when on board ship), and for his annuity, 15s. weekly regularly.

1653, April 7. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney. He says that 5s. 3d. is the moiety of his week's allowance.—He asks for it.

1653. Thomas Stewkely to Sir R. Verney.—He mentions the Black Spread Eagle, or Stationer's House, against St. Dunstan's Church, Fleet Street.

1653, March $\frac{1}{4}$. Several letters from Edmund Verney, at Utrecht, to his father, in French.—In one letter, dated as above, he says that there is not a single master for the theorbo, or, for singing, in the seven provinces.—Can not danse or fence.

Several letters by Dr. Robert Creighton, at Utrecht, (he seems to be the son's governor) to Sir R. Verney.—In one he sends an account checked by Edmund Verney.—In February he entered his harness; he has wrought a miracle upon Lord Gerard, and to him from all parts of Europe people flock.—In another letter Creighton tells of the trouble to fit his harness.—His studies. The father is averse about the lute.

Jasper Gower (i.e., Geo. Morley) to Ralph Smith (Verney).

Letters from Elizabeth and Mary Verney to Sir Ralph Verney, and one to W. Roads from Mary Verney.

1653, May 23. Margaret Sherard's will (1 p.). She was formerly the wife of Wm. Eure.—Letters by her to Sir Ralph Verney.

Many letters from Thos. Verney and W. Roads (the steward) to Sir R. Verney.

Henry Page, at Venice, to Sir R. Verney.

1653, Nov. Several letters from Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney, in London.—Domestic.

1653. John Verney to his father. (In French.)

Letters from Dr. Denton, in London. Humphrey Willett, Rouen, Mary Verney his sister, Ann Bontemps, and M. Papin, at Blois, about his son John, and from others at Blois, Pen Denton and Francis Drake to Sir R. Verney.

1653, Jan. 13. George Morley, at Antwerp, to Sir R. Verney.

1653, Jan. 19. The same to the same. Dr. Sheldon is not in London but in his own country, which is Staffordshire, but his nephew, Joseph Sheldon, is apprentice to a draper at the Golden . . . in Paul's Churchyard.—Asks Verney at Brussels to get "Exercitia Nicolai Eschii."

Letters from John Kirton, at Florence, Henry Page, at Venice, and Ric. Spencer, at Brussels.

1653, March $\frac{1}{2}$, Brussels. Ric. Spencer to Sir R. Verney, at London.—They say the foolish people in Holland flock from all parts to see the Sampson they took from you . . . and admire the greatness and strength of the ship—they are putting another fleet to sea.—There is flying talk that Prince Rupert is come to France.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

In other letters he gives French news, and in another he (Spencer) lauds Brussels.—There are plays every day.—Shooting at Papegeau, fighting with two-handed swords.—The Prince of Condé is feasted by many of the nobility; he is a curious dancer. In another he says the Count of Bassigni, Governor of Artois and St. Omer, and the Abbat of Mene, are committed for treason.

1653, Dec. 16. Sir R. Verney to R. Spencer.—The proverb is now verified, Long looked for come at last, tho' not so soon as was expected, for on Monday our famous Parliament, being conscious of their own weakness, dissolved themselves because they could not help it, and the major part there present went with their Speaker to Whitehall, and there, by writing, resigned their authority into the General's hands, who questionless will make far better use of it than they have done. Some of them were willing to sit longer, but the soldiers were not of their mind. What way of government shall be now prescribed is not yet known. Some talk of a Council of 10 or else of 21 and a Lord Protector, who shall have a negative voice.—We know nothing. The Council of officers sit constantly and long.

1653, Dec. 6.—W. Gee (Brussels) to Sir R. Verney. Dr. Morley is with the Queen of Bohemia, and my Lady Hyde is removing to Breda.

Several other letters from the same to the same.—M. Gras to Sir R. Verney.—Containing a little French news.

1654, April 10. Sir Roger Burgoyne at Wroxall to Sir R. Verney.—He says that Wroxall is a little spittle house; his wife has the spitting disease.

1654. The same to the same.—He has received the case of pictures; is glad to have anything like Sir R. Verney.

There are many letters from Sir R. Burgoyne.

Letters from Dr. W. Denton to Sir R. Verney; on May 18. he says O. P. has declared Tuesday 23rd inst., as the day of the thanksgiving for the peace.

July 20. He (Denton) mentions that the King of France, marching to raise the siege of Arras, the Dons gave battle and were beaten. The French took 6,000 prisoners; the Duke of York, as often before, did like himself most princely. The Portugal Ambassador took pett the same day his brother was beheaded, and went to Graves sine [Gravesend] without taking leave of the Protector, the Master of the Ceremonies, or anybody else, and here he stays.

There are many letters from Dorothy Leeke and Pen Denton and John Denton, and some drafts of replies by Sir R. Verney.

1654, March 1. Jo. Kirton (Florence) to Sir R. Verney. Lady Ruthvin, otherwise called Mrs. Pasquil, dyed here some ten days since. Sir Bernard Gascon hath got here the palto of the tobacco, for which the Jews offer him 20,000 crowns.

1654. Draft of a letter by Sir R. Verney to T. Cordell at Angers, and the reply from T. Cordell.

Letters from W. Wakefield at Edmonton, and from Lady Gaudy.

1654, Jasper Gower (i.e. Geo. Morley), at the Hague, to Sir R. Verney.—He says he will give an eye to Sir Ralph's son.

1654. Thomas Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The ship on which he was (the Hannibal) was discharged on the peace, and he is destitute.

1654. Letters by Nat. Hobart in September and October.—Remarks on the Parliament.

1654. Letters from Eliza Isham, Lady Gardiner, the Honble. Margaret Sherard and Col. Henry Verney to Sir R. Verney.

1654. Dr. R. Creighton, at Utrecht, to Sir R. Verney. Edmund was leaving there.—All the scholars wear swords and cicals.—When they are out late at night they scrape the stone with their swords as they go along and make a light. One night Edmund Verney with a company were down a street, and they—not he—broke the window of a Dutchman, whom they quarrelled with; Lord Spencer and Lord Gerard lived there and were offended, but the offence is composed.

1654, May 5, Utrecht. The same to the same.—He says that Verney bids him remove to the Hague.—He thinks Edmund will then have the advice of Dr. Morley, but the ayre is not so good or diet so cheap.—Morley is going this summer to Frankendale with his mistress.—Thirdly, he has no credit there. (There are several other long and interesting letters from Dr. Creighton, who was afterwards Bishop of Bath and Wells.)

1655. Letters from Eliza Isham, and several letters by Sir R. Verney to her, about a supposed match between his son and Mr. Bacon's daughter: also from Ann Hobart and Thomas Verney, Jasper Gower (George Morley), and Dr. Creighton, from Utrecht, Col. Henry Verney, Dr. Denton, and Mr. Willett; and draft of replies from Sir R. Verney to Mr. Willett.

1655, Feb. 26, Thraston. Col. Henry Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—He says that a company came unexpected last night to hunt the fox. My Lord Cromwell, Lord Claypole, Lord Sands, Lord Delaware, Sir W. Kingsmill, and Sir Luke Middleton, and other gentlemen.

In another letter by Col. Verney, dated from Stow, he mentions a battle of a dog and buck for half-an-hour—the dog was wounded. Lord Claypole was so pleased that he begged the dog, which Verney could not deny.

1655. Sir Roger Burgoyne, at Wroxall, to Sir R. Verney, at Mr. Gapes, apothecary, in Covent Garden.

1655. Sir Ralph Verney to Jasper Gower (George Morley), at the Hague.

1655. Edmund Verney and John Verney to their father, Sir R. Verney (in French).

1655, June 15. Sir R. Verney to Edmund Verney.—This evening he is brought to town with divers lords and other persons of quality for we know not what—he was sent to the Gate House, thence to Lambeth House, and thence to St. James' House.

1655. Jasper Gower (George Morley), at the Hague, to Sir R. Verney, and Sir R. Verney to Jasper Gower, who seems to have been tutor to Sir Ralph's son.

1655. Sir R. Verney to Dr. Denton.

1655. Letters from Luce Shephard, Dorothy Leeke, Mary Sherard, T. Cordell, from Angers and Paris, Robert Cotton, from Angers (he was a suitor for Lady Sherard's eldest daughter), William Denton, Dr. Kirton, from Florence, W. Wakefield (Edmonton), I. Isham (Lamport) to Sir R. Verney, who was at Middle Claydon in July. There are also many letters from W. Roads the steward.

1655, May 11, Utrecht. Dr. Robert Creighton to Sir R. Verney.—He says that Mr. Verney left on the 2nd of May for the Hague.

Drafts of letters by Sir R. Verney.

1656. Letters from Jasper Gower (in January Verney's son was with him), Edmund Verney, in French, John Verney to his father Sir R. Verney, while he was at school at Kinsenton, and Sir Thomas Fanshawe.

1656, March 3, Wroxall. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney.—His wife has another daughter.

1656, September the last. The same to the same.—This day, as I am informed, the Parliament will take the business of the war with Spain into consideration, and conclude it to be justly begun and necessary to be prosecuted. We have all reason to endeavour unity amongst ourselves, since we are to be so far engaged abroad against the common enemy, the King of Spain and Charles Steward.

In June Edmund Verney was in England, and in Feb. 1656 he goes courting the daughter of Sir W. Luckins, Bart.

Letters from Alexander Denton, Margaret Sherard, W. Denton, Dol. Leeke, Lady Vere Gaudy, Lady Gardiner, Eliza Isham, Col. Wm. Smith, and F. Drake, who writes about a Miss Wilson, who is worth 5,500*l.*, as a wife for Edmund Verney.

1656, July 31. Copy of George Denton's will. (1 p.)

1656, March 12. Sir R. Burgoyne to —. Proposition to have a House of Lords to check the Commons.—Letters by Thomas Verney at Lambeth Marsh, and Sir Edward Fust.

Draft petition by R. Verney to the Protector.—In 1643 he was obliged to convey his wife to France for her health, she died in 1650 of consumption, he is no delinquent, nor ever compounded, nor acted against the Parliament, &c., &c., yet he is summoned to Aylesbury to give account of his estate.—He prays a respite.

Catalogue of such as were to appear on the 6th of March 1655. There are fifty or sixty names; Sir R. Verney stands second and Lord Wilmet first.

Copy order of his Highness and Court for insuring the peace of the Commonwealth. (2½ pp.) There are several papers about it.

Copy of Anne Viscountess Wilmot's petition about her jointure.

It is found the 5th Jan. 1647, the estate of Sir R. Verney is discharged from sequestration. (He was sequestrated for not attending Parliament.)

Papers on a suit in Chancery, Denton v. Denton.

Many letters from W. Roads (the steward), Alexander Denton, Col. H. Verney, and Mary Lloyd, who was badly off, her husband being poor.

1657. Letters from James and Edmund Verney, Dr. Denton, and several from Sir Roger Burgoyne;—some

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

contain a little parliamentary news, and in one, dated Feb. 11th. he refers to the unhappy accident at Whitehall;—what will become of the Major-General he cannot tell.

1657. Dr. Thos. Hyde to Edmund Verney.—Advice as to settlement on his intended marriage.—He advises him not to see the lass until he knows what her father will settle.

1657, Sept. —Edmund Verney writes to Dr. Thomas Hyde that he has seen the lady, and that all things go well.

Copy of a letter written by Dr. Hyde for Edmund Verney to send to Margaret Sherard, he having fallen in love with her daughter.

1657, Aug. 27. Dr. Denton writes that Mr. Jephson sets forward this day as envoy extraordinary to the King of Sweden.

Letters from Col. H. Verney, W. Roads, Thomas Stafford (Tottenham), Col. (afterwards a Bart.) Wm. Smith.

1657. Sir R. Verney at Claydon to Lady Warwick.—There is great sickness at Claydon, forty or fifty sick at a time.—Pearse and eight or nine are dead.

1657, Nov. 3. Roger Burgoyne at Wroxall.—He has lost his father and his child.

1658. Dr. Hyde composed Edmund Verney's love letters and gave him canny advice about settlements while he was wooing Mary Eure, daughter of Lady Sherard. Sir R. Burgoyne loses a daughter.

Lady Sherard writes to Sir R. Verney to stop the affair, and Mary Eure writes to the same effect. In September Edmund Verney writes to Dr. Hyde about it. (Miss Eure married William Palmer, of Yorkshire.)

Letters by Thomas and Henry Verney.

Many letters about Edmund Verney and Moll Eure.

Letter from James Verney at school.

A bundle of letters in 1659 to 1664, consisting of family letters, law business, many letters from Thomas Verney in 1662, when he was in prison in the Fleet; a few letters from Sir Roger Burgoyne from Wroxall. (in 1661 he was sheriff), and from Dr. Denton.

1659, July 15. Copy of the marriage settlement between Eleanor Countess of Warwick and Sussex, and Edward Earl of Manchester.—Sir Ralph Verney and John Cary, of Ditchley, were trustees.

1659, Sept. 6. Dr. Thomas Hyde to Edmund Verney, Esq.

1659, Oct. $\frac{17}{2}$. Sir R. Burgoyne (at Vlissingen) to Sir R. Verney.

1659, Dec. 20. The same to the same.—Went to the doctor's, but the bird was flown. The wives of him and his son are resolved to be solicitors, and repaired to Lord Whitlock, who dissuaded from the usual course of going to Lord Fleetwood, and himself has undertaken for their security Lambert is reported to be at Newcastle, and his men reduced to some straits, being not supplied according to expectation with shoes and stockings; for if report be true, a frigate that was bound for Newcastle with that kind of ware and arms most unhappily mistook the port, and fell into Leith in Scotland, so that Monk's army have met with them. Monk, they say, is at Berwick, a good distance from the other, yet it's said that Major Creed had an encounter with a party of Monk's, and had not the better of it. Sir H. Vane is returned, and so also are several of the Rump, with Lawson, who for the present declare for a parliament, I suppose the Rump, tho' some doubt it. Sir Arthur Haselrigg, Morley, and Still are at Portsmouth. P.S. Some say that the Rump is like to sit again, and that there was a rising in Kent last night. . . A new Common Council to be chosen to-morrow; the city governors not well spoken of.

1659, Dec. 21. The same to the same. Mentions the result of the Common Council debates yesterday.—And for certain Lawson sent a letter to them to this purpose, that there might be endeavoured a good understanding between the Parliament army and city, which must need be the Rump, but they regarded it very little, and said they would consider of it another time, for now they were upon other business of concernment, and had but a very short time allowed for it; yesterday being the last day of their sitting: for this day a new Common Council is to be chosen, who are, as I hear, to sit on Friday. They could not conclude as to the militia, tho' their thoughts were much upon it, but have declared for a free Parliament.

1659, Dec. 21, Wednesday night. The same to the same.—P.S. The city and army are so well agreed for the present that all things are quiet . . . A Common Council was chose this day, and such an one as have not these many years been known for malignancy, but it is hoped it may not be so.

Letters from Elizabeth Verney to her brother Sir R. Verney, Dr. Denton, Lady Cary Gardiner to her brother Sir Ralph Verney, and from John Stewkeley to his brother Sir R. Verney.

1659. Endorsed, 1st Nov. and received 3rd Nov. 1659. —John Stewkeley to Sir Ralph Verney . . . He that pronounced the black sentence died yesterday with the seal under his pillow, or some say, in his close stool.

1659, Feb. 14. The same to the same.—He heard to-day that General Monk hath declared for a single person (you may imagine whom), and a free Parliament. . . . He seemed at first to court the Rump, but since I hear he hath closed with the city, which can pay his army surer and sooner.

Letters from Eliza Isham, Sir R. Verney's aunt, and from his cousin Hobart and others, about a match for Mun; and other letters.

1659, Aug. 4. W. Denton to Sir R. Verney. Says he is engaged for Ralph Verney far more than he (Denton) is worth, and times are strangely ticklish. Cheshire and Lancashire certainly up. Sir G. Booth, Mr. Brooke, a member, Mr. Lee, and others in the head of them: they talk also as if Wiltshire and Somerset were so too; their pretence is for a free Parliament . . . Asks for security.

1659, Aug. 5. The same to the same . . . I can not hear that any number are up in any county of a certain. I hear Massey was taken (not in any fight), and carrying away behind another, just against and near a wood of Sir Wm. Ducyes; the horse stumbling threw them both, by which means he escaped into the wood and is not yet found.

1659, Aug. 15. Copy of order by virtue of a warrant from the Commissioners of Militia for the county of Bucks to Sir R. Verney to send a horse to the George, Aylesbury, or else 10l.

1659, Aug. 15. Note of my family and arms delivered to Roger Deeley, the constable.—Sir Ralph Verney, his son Edmund, Robert Kibble, and John Heron, their 2 men, butler, cook, groom, two gardeners, an upholsterer at work by the day, three footboys, a female housekeeper, and two servant maids.—One birding piece of Mr. Edmund's, and four swords.

1659, Aug. 16. Thomas Hyde to Edmund Verney.—Advising him about his carriage towards two ladies about visiting Claydon.

1659, Aug. 20. W. Denton to Sir Ralph Verney.— . . As for Cheshire business you must have a lusty faith and believe lies, contradictions, nay, impossibilities, as that the castle is surrendered quietly and yet taken by storm, and every man put to the sword; that Charles Stuart is kept prisoner by France and Spain, and yet landed here; that Montague kist his hand 10 days since, and yet he and his navy will live and die with the Parliament; that Booth and Lambert are in treaty, and yet Lambert refuses to treat at all.

1659, Sept. 20, Oxford. Dr. Robert Townsend to Sir Ralph Verney.—The way of selling cochineal the apothecary tells him, is to weigh silver against it, the weight of one for the other.

1659, Dec. 13. R. B. (Burgoyne) to Sir R. Verney . . . P.S. The Lieutenant of the Tower was trepan'd out of his place, and Coll. Desborough took possession of it.

1659, Dec. 14. Wm. Denton to Sir R. Verney . . . The city doth nothing effective. Fleetwood hath got the Tower by a trick, and Southampton hath taken itself for whilst the garrison went out to train, they shut the gates and so keep them out.

1659, Dec. 21. W. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—No more news, but some say that Vane and Galloway are to treat with Lawson and Scott; others that Rump is voted to sit again by Wallingford House; others that we shall have a free Parliament, but with subscription to fundamentals. You may come safe for aught I see, however, leave your millers behind, that they may grind oats in co. Bucks.

1659, Dec. 21. The same to the same.—Here is a great noise of a plot discovered, which to us ignorant louts seems little . . . Vane and Galloway have returned from Lawson, and have obtained a treaty with him and Scott, and two others of each side.—It's said that Wallingford House voted last night that Rump should sit again.

1659, Dec. 22. The same to the same . . . All Tuesday till late at night the Council of Officers had in debate whether the Parliament as called by the King's writ or the same as it stood 1648, before it was damned to hell, or after it was garbled in Dick's Parliament, should sit, and at last, they being ready to vote, and as

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

it was thought for Rump, Fleetwood and Ludlow moved to consult their pillows first, for that by the next morning they should offer some new things to them. But what the result of yesterday's work was, Ignoramus. (Advise Verney again not to buy horses.)

1659, Dec. 26. Jo. Stewkeley to Sir R. Verney.—Speaks of the late tumults in the city.

1659, Dec. 31. Apprenticeship of John, son of Sir Ralph Verney, to Gabriel Roberts, trading to the Levant.

165⁹/₆₀, Jan. 23. Edmund Verney to Dr. Thomas Hyde He wants books, among them Bodin de Republicâ, in French.

165⁹/₆₀, Jan. 30. The same to the same.—He wants to serve in Parliament.

There are other letters to Dr. Thos. Hyde.

165⁹/₆₀, Jan. 26. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir Ralph Verney. — Barmfield is reported to be gone towards Monck with several letters from his friends and countrymen of Devon.

165⁹/₆₀, Feb. 1. The same to the same.—On Friday Monck is expected here Norfolk and Suffolk have sent up their declaration touching another kind of Parliament, but I hear not of any more clapt up (as) was Sir Robert Pye. The smile that came from Muncks* face upon that occasion, as you mention, I hope, or rather wish, that it was the result, not of his disdain, but pleasant reception of that proposition made by the lady.

165⁹/₆₀, Feb. 8. The same to the same. — Monck was at the House on Monday last, who expressed himself so obscurely that most men know not what construction to make of it P.S. The Common Council was very stiff yesterday, and will not submit to taxes, and would not own the Parliament. Soldiers are gone this morning into the city, I suppose to reduce them; they will only make addresses to Monck.

165⁹/₆₀, Feb. 16. The same to the same.—News.—I presume you know of Monck pulling down the city gates on Thursday last; his letter to the House on Saturday, and his going to the city that night out of the same mouths proceed blessing and curses, for him whom they cursed the day before for pulling down their gates, blest him this day for coming into them. On Sunday thousands resorted into St. Paul's Church to get a sight of him; he hath continued there ever since, and several of the forces at the city's charge, who entertain them with much seeming contentment. In order to his letter, the House have, as I am informed, perfected the qualification concerning the new election, and writs accordingly issued out. What Monck will do to answer the expectation of all parties I am to seek Addresses are still made to him, and people will not be quiet. Lambert is summoned to come in by this day, which, if he refuse to do, then to be sequestered. This morning I am told that he was come in, which is contrary to what I heard yesterday. Sir H. Vane sent out of town. Some sectaries, if report be true, disarmed on Tuesday night by Monck's orders, without the knowledge of the higher powers Secluded members visit Monck. Some say they are upon the North 165⁹/₆₀, Feb. 21. The same to the same.—The old secluded members, by the assistance of General Monck, were re-admitted this day to the House. (Notices of the votes about Monck and Lawson, &c.).—They are to move 31 for a Council of State to-morrow, who are fully impowered for great dispatch till the 20th April next, at which time there is a free Parliament to sit, and these not to be named in the House, but by a box, which makes me hope that there will be a fairer dealing. A sudden period will be put to this Parliament, otherwise the present members will not be in a capacity of being chosen P.S. General Monck made a speech to both parties at his lodging in Whitehall, which I have here enclosed. He returned thanks this afternoon for the honour Parliament had done him by their vote; but withal sent some names which he desired might be thought on for the Council of State, which will not be taken notice of, and it is wished it had been forborne. He is to be one, and the rest to be of the House.

1659, Feb. 24. The same to the same.—This day they voted a sudden period to be put to this Parliament, and a free Parliament to be summoned forthwith, to sit 25th April next. Sends enclosed names of Council of State. 31 chosen last night. A vote passed last night for revocation of all county militias and their powers

. The city gates and portcullises, posts and chains, to be set up by the public charge; their Common Council restored. They have lent the Parliament 60,000*l*.—Yesterday they came with a congratulation to the Parliament from the Lord Mayor, and with a petition to have their own militia in their own hands, &c.; all was granted in a lump General Monck chosen by the city to be their Major-General. (List of the Council), Mr. Pierpoint, Mr. Crew, Col. Rossiter, Mr. Knightly, Col. Popham, Lord Fairfax, Sir Gil. Gerrard, Sir Ant. Ashley Cooper, Lord Chief Justice St. John, Sir Thos. Withrington, Col. Morley, Sir J. Eveling, of Willsh., Sir Wm. Waller, Sir Richard Onslow, Sir Wm. Lewis, Admiral Montague, Col. Harlow, Col. Norton, Mr. Annesley, Mr. Hollis, Sir John Temple, Col. Thompson, Mr. Trevor, Sir John Holland, Sir John Pott, Col. Birch, Sir Harbottle Grimston, Mr. Swingson, Mr. Weaver, Serjeant Mainard, Monck.

165⁹/₆₀, last of February. The same to the same.— So many doubts arose upon a debate about the dissolution that I fear we shall sit longer than was at first intended, altho' it can not be long in regard of the writs that are to issue forth from another Parliament, and therein lies no small scruple which is as to the name in which they are to go The General Commission, the Instructions for the Council of State, and Bill for the continuance of the Excise and Custom passed on Saturday. A Bill for dissolving the Parliament was read the second time this day, which was very short; but on a sudden, by almost unanimous consent, laid aside, and thought fit to be included in that which is to pass for the next Parliament. Sir George Booth's committee sat this morning by 7 or 8 o'clock. I saw him [and] Sir Thomas Middleton there; I hope they will come off well. Massy walkt in the Hall this day tho' I saw him not. The city go on with their militia, but have voted no Major-General as yet, for they desire Brown; but the General would rather of the two have it himself, because his power is not yet sufficient. The Committee for the Militia sat all this afternoon; I left it about 8 this night. There were between 40 and 50 at it; some high qualifications were in the Bill which was read twice in the House, but was rejected by the Committee Had it gone as some would have had it, very few young persons could have been capable of any military employment, because they were tied to be such as had actually engaged in the Parliament's cause against the late King or his son; but I hope this will be exploded by the House as well as by the Committee. P.S. A rumour that the Spaniard had seized on the King of Scots, and keeps him prisoner The Council of State began to sit on Saturday last, and now sits daily. Thurloe, tho' the House divided upon it, was voted one of the Secretaries of State.

165⁹/₆₀, March 7. The same to the same.— Confession of the Faith of the Church of England is passed. That and the Covenant to be now set up and read in every church; the Militia Bill almost finished. Sir Arthur Haselrig [and] Col. Rich called to account this day in the House for something laid to their charge. Sir Arthur cleared himself, but both of them to attend the Council of State whensoever they receive orders. They sat as members, so did Scott, Martin, and some others that never agreed before since the late sitting of the secluded persons.

165⁹/₆₀, March 9. Richard Winwood to Sir R. Verney. — News I take to be very little. We are in a mist and must wait till the sun grow so high as to disperse it. We are preparing the militia, and, by one means or other, those that have been misled (?) for the most part will be left out by the House. Dr. Owen is like to give up to Dr. Renolles as to the deanery of Christchurch. Sir Arthur is summoned to the House to answer some jealousies: Lambert is in the Tower.

165⁹/₆₀, March 9. Papin to Monsr. Verney Chevalier, at Mr. Gape, Apothecary, Russel Street, Covent Garden. (In French). About the two Messrs. Cecil, grandsons of Lord Salisbury, who came accompanied by a governor and valet de chambre—they brought him letters of recommendation from Dr. Killigrew, governor of Lord Cavendish.—He saw them settled.—Money did not come, and they were much troubled. Papin paid and wrote to Lord Salisbury about it, but got no answer, so the Messrs. Cecil's governor has given him a bill for 1,500*l*. on the Earl's steward.

165⁹/₆₀, March 15. Sir R. Burgoyne to the same.—The House sat this day in order to a dissolution, but could not reach it, tho' they did not rise till 9 at night. The qualification passed yesterday that no son of any delinquent shall be capable of being chosen for the next Parliament. This morning the Bill was brought in

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

* Quere, whether this is not a mistake for Mun. (the name by which Sir Ralph's son was usually called) — Sir R. Burgoyne possibly alluding to something which Sir Ralph had written.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

to be enacted as a law, for General Monck having Hampton Court, together with its appurtenances, and it was by vote cast out; but we soon made amends by voting him 20,000*l.* to be paid out of the Exchequer. To-morrow they will dissolve so much as in them lies P.S. Bishop Wren voted out of the Tower.

165⁹/₆₀, March 17. The same to the same.—We are now at liberty tho' much against some of our wills; after many sad pangs and groans we did expire, and are now in another world. Yesterday morning the Bill for Presbitery and that for the 20,000*l.* for the General, passed; and, by vote, he is made Steward of Hampton Court and the park, and so is at liberty to take the air when he pleases. About 6 o'clock we passed the Bill of Dissolution with a perfect salvo to the rights and privileges of the Lord's House, after some opposition. There wanted not offers for a declaration of a higher nature which was to clear the House from the guilt of the King's blood; but this by prudent men being thought unnecessary, in regard of our revoking and obliterating those votes which put us out of the House, grounded upon that vote which was made by us the long night, so that that vote now stands good, and we think ourselves cleared from any thing that followed. However, some were pleased to protest and declare against it as an execrable act. These were the last passages of that so long-lived Parliament which is not dead before I question whether it live not yet . . . P.S. The General sent a letter to suspend the militia, but Hollis, Annesley, and Morris being sent to him soon satisfied him.

165³/₆₀, March 22. The same to the same.—Little news, but that Ireland would fain stand upon its own legs, yet willing to decline a separation from us; what they declare seems to be riddles to me, which, I presume, a few days will unfold. The General and Council of State were invited to bed and beard with the city by the Common Council; the first they refused, not apprehending their condition to be so full of danger as the city did; the latter they accepted, and next Wednesday the Drapers treat them, and General Monck's lady is the very single person of that sex that is courted to it.

165⁹/₆₀, March 23. The same to the same.—He cannot imagine how the House can rise that day.—“The writ sticks, it being to go in the name of the Keeper or Commissioners of the Great Seal. This morning the Bill for the dissolution is to be read, engrossed; some question whether it will not be cast out; if so, what will become of us, God only knows. Presbiter Bill is passed for your comfort.” P.S. The Bills for the militia are passed, and, as I understand it, Mr. Verney's name is among the commission.

1660, Sept. 17. Edmund Verney to Dr. Denton.—He hears that the King is to be crowned Thursday after Candlemas day.—“I beseech you to desire your mistress that she would be pleased to try whether she can procure me a red ribbon as soon as her convenience will permit, lest the whole number be filled up.”—His ambition is only to be Knight of the Bath.

1660, October 3. (Copy). The same to the same. He hears the King is to be crowned in February, he (Verney) wants to be at the ceremony.

Letters from Edmund Verney to his aunt Sherrard and her daughter Moll Eure.

1660, March 9. Thomas Hyde to Edmund Verney Dr. Zouch is dead, and I am to succeed him in the Admiralty.

1661, April 28. Sir Robert Burgoyne to Sir Ralph Verney.—Asks him to get for him two wine licences, so that there may be no opposition.

1661, July 8. William Denton to Sir Ralph Verney.—Enclosing one by Daniel Neill, saying he had shewn Sir R. Burgoyne's petition to the Chancellor, who had dined with him; he told me I should do well not to trouble the King with it, for he would stop it, tho' the King granted it; for he would not during his time let such a business pass.

1661, Aug. 20. John Verney, at Aleppo, to Edmund Verney.

1662, April 4. (Received). Pen Denton to Sir R. Verney.—On Monday last the Duke was married; upon Tuesday he went out of town and his Duchess for Blechinton. Upon Thursday the Duke and my brother Harry that went out of town with his Grace are for Northampton.—The plate is to be run for that day. The Duke puts in for the plate, but it is thought the Duke's horse will lose the match. Brother Harry has betted on the Duke's horse.—The Duke's intended movements.—The Duke invited my brother Harry to the wedding, which was carried so privately that no other person was invited, but brother Harry was ill and could not.

1662, Oct. 16. W. Denton to Sir R. Verney Dunkirk is certainly sold for the French for 4 or 500,000 pounds or pistols, and Sir H. Bennett sworn. Castlemain, I hear, carries all. Hear is a rumour as if my Lord Treasurer should have a writ of ease also, and the Bishop of London or St. Alban's is named for it. It's said Haselrig's daughter is with child by him that I dare not name. Lord Castlemaine can not get a pass to travel, because it's thought she is with child. P.S. Lord Northampton is raising a regiment of horse. Lord Craven and Sir W. Killgrew two regiments of foot.

1662, Oct. 30. The same to the same.— . . . Here hath been news of a plot and rioting about Sherborne in Dorsetshire, (raised, say some, by three or four drunken deputy lieutenants) of 60 or 80 armed men which came thro' St. Alban's on Tuesday night, very dangerous persons, for they came with my Lord Rothes out of Scotland; however they give a hot alarm to King, General, and city. And after all this it is soundly believed that a desperate plot was about this time to have been put in execution. Several have been taken, whereof three have confessed enough, viz., that the plot is carried on by a council of six, whereof two only know where Ludlow their General is, only he is about this town; his secretary is taken, but confesseth nothing, but the papers taken with him discourse very much if not all. Tis confessed the King, Duke of York and Albemarle were all to be assassinated. Some of the council went this day to the Tower to examine others; the King and Duke of York having examined three of the most considerable; one whereof would confess nothing till threatened with tortures, but then did; there is most likelihood to be most truth in this of any yet. It's said they act by virtue of a Rump ordinance. They were to have risen of Wednesday, my Lord Mayor's day, about noon, when all were busy, or at night when all were drunk, as on Alholland day.

1662, Nov. 4. The same to the same News from no ill hands that this plot will come to nothing, and yet I know the King expressed otherwise.

1662, Nov. 10. The same to the same.—Mr. Crafts is to be Duke of Balclue and of Monmouth, and they say take place of all the rest.

1662, Nov. 13. The same to the same.—I hear of nobody to be tried for the plot, and it is now forgot here. Sir R. Gore stands sheriff for Bucks. Our Monsieur is Duke of Balclue and Monmouth. The Prince of Denmark is made K.G., and five knights new made to grace that solemnity whereof Lord Mandevill was one.

1662, Nov. 21. The same to the same.— . . Sir William Compton assures me there is reality in the plot, and that the examinations are in the attorney's hands to draw indictments against the next sessions. One Captain Elton that went between the council of six and the agitators cannot yet be lighted on.

1663, June 28. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir Ralph Verney.—Asks him to get him off being made a Commissioner for the four subsidies.

1663, Jan. 3. Wroxall. The same to the same.—The parson of Sutton and the preacher of the Rolls is now at Wroxall, and can preach as well now he is a widower as he did before.

1664, April 3. Nathaniel Hobart to Sir R. Verney.—He hears Lord Bristol is sick. Tells how Lady Petres petitioned the House on her privilege of peerage from being arrested, and what the House did thereon; and on other matters.

1664, April 4. Lady Bristol's petition to the House.

1664, Jan. 13. Orlando Bridgman to Sir R. Verney.—Mr. Stillingfleet, parson of Sutton, is preferred to St. Andrew's.—Sutton will be void, and Sir Roger Burgoyne is the patron.—He (Bridgman) asks Sir Ralph Verney's interest for Sankey, who lives with him (Bridgman), and whom Stillingfleet knows.

1665, April 3. Sir Roger Burgoyne to Sir Ralph Verney.—Mr. Stillingfleet is now the King's chaplain.

1665, June 19. The same to the same.— . . . let me beg your advice as to my children at Clapham in regard to the plague, which, if it should enter Clapham, I should be afraid to have them there, or send for them thither.

1665, June 26, Wroxall. The same to the same.—I hear the sickness is not far from Lombard Street: if it should visit the Goldsmith will it not be hazardous to have too great a stock there; pray think of it. I wish you could dispose of it elsewhere, and that I had held 200*l.* of it, being at present put to some straits.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

1665, May 13, 18, 27, June 5 and 18. Five memoranda on one sheet of paper, by Sir R. Verney, of his having taken out of the iron chest on these days, for various specified purposes, seventeen hundred pound bags.

1665, Sept. 21, 1665, Brazenose College. Dr. Thomas Yate to Sir R. Verney.—He hopes to be able to keep 2 chambers for Mr. Cary according to Sir Ralph's desire. . . . "Mr. Attorney-General will be in my lodgings, and hath desired me to provide for his two sons (one or both members of parliament) some where else in our College. I have designed where to lodge Sir Nathaniel, and I hope I shall hold it. I will not easily be beaten off, though I had a ticket this morning from my Lord Chancellor's secretary to desire I would provide for 4 knights, but I hope it is but a thing he assumes, and that it is not by my Lord's commands. . . . We hear the Duke of York will be here to-morrow; his children came on Thursday last, and though some carriages of the King's are come already to Christ Church, we are not assured the King will be here on Tuesday next, but most say that day he will be here. The great trouble Sir Nathaniel Hobart will be put unto will be for his diet in a college, if his Lady come along with him; otherwise those that are members of the House have names on the booke, and dine and sup in our hall. . . . The court hath so enlarged themselves (having Christ Church, Merton College, Corpus Christi College, Pembroke College, and Oriel College assigned wholly and solely for them), that it puts many to straits."

1665, Nov. 18. Sir Nathaniel Hobart to Sir R. Verney. Going to visit Dr. Bathurst he told me the Archbishop of Canterbury had had a fit not unlike that he had once in London, a kind of apoplexy; that he thought he would not continue long. . . . Capt. Smith is come home with a squadron into the Straits, and says before he returns he will give a good account of the French and Dutch: he is a gallant fellow and we must allow him to brag.

1665, Nov. 24. The same to the same. A comical encounter between my Lord of Lincoln and Secretary Maurice at the Secretary's own table: the dispute grew about the antiquity of the two Universities. My Lord of Lincoln was for Cambridge, Mr. Secretary for Oxford. Sir Robert Houseman, who was present, thought they would have gone to cuffs.

1665, Dec. 6. The same to the same. The Irish Bill is not yet passed; the Bill for the Plague is not passed; the 1st upon ration di stato; the 2nd because it gives too great power to the Justice of Peace. The Bill for Conformity was opposed by the Lord Treasurer with much reason.

1665, Feb. 12. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir R. Verney. . . . To-morrow is expected the man of miracles, the 7th brother, who opens the eyes of those that have been blind many years, and cures cancers in the breast, which he seldom fails in.

1665, March 5. A servant writes to Sir R. Verney that Sir R. Burgoyne slept on the stairs and put out his shoulder.

1666, Sept.—Copy certificate by Jonas Moore and Ralph Gatrix, surveyors.—Upon the 2nd of Sept. 1666 the fire began in London, at one Fariner's house, a baker, in Pudding Lane, between the houses of one and two in the morning, and continued burning until the 6th of Sept. following, consuming, as by the surveyors appears in print, 373 acres within the walls of the city of London, and 63 acres 3 roods without the walls. There remains 75 acres 3 roods yet standing within the walls unburnt, 89 parish churches, besides chapels, burnt, 11 parishes within the walls yet standing; houses burnt 13,200.

1665, March 1, East Claydon. Edmund Verney to Sir R. Verney (French). I hear that Sir Edward Bate Clarencieux has summoned all gentlemen of the hundred of Buckingham to come to the sign of the Unicorn to show him the arms of their families, to be examined, and that he intends to do the same in our hundred.—There is a report that Sir Harbottle Grimston is to be made Lord Harbottle and keeper of the Privy Seal, and that Madame Harvey has killed her lacquey.—Baronet Donner with his brother-in-law Parkhurst were here after dinner and have emptied bottles enough.

(? 1650). 1670, Sept. 15. Col. Hen. Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The Duke of Buckingham came on Saturday, and had a sword of 20,000 pistoles presented him by the King of France. The Prince of Orange is expected here afore the King takes his journey to Newmarket. The Scotch Commissioners came on Sunday morning.

1670, Aug. 1. Sir R. Burgoyne to Sir Ralph Verney, at Middle Claydon . . . Dr. Stillingfleet and his wife, Dr. Paman and my cosen Dr. Burgoyne, with cos. Paule Wentworth are still with me, but I doubt they will all leave me this week, unless the little Dr. prove more kind than the rest.

1671, Sept. 4, Yeldham. The same to the same, in Covent Garden. . . . I have nothing like news to send you hence besides the most tragic story of Sir Harry North's death, who, about 7 o'clock on Tuesday the 29th August, was found dead in bed, with a double-barrelled pistol he had shot himself with; the wound was so big that a man's hand might turn itself in it; he did all things the day before in the same order and manner as usually; the coroner's inquest, notwithstanding, found him not compos mentis, and so neither his personal estate subject to forfeitures, nor his body to that scorn and contempt that attends such deaths, tho' for his estate, it was all made over to his son some time before. . . .

1671, Feb. 5. The same to the same, at Sir N. Hobarts, Chancery Lane. . . . P.S. We have the greatest snow that hath been known these 30 years.

1671, Feb. 12. The same to the same at Sir Nathaniel Hobarts, in Chancery Lane.—. . . A fortnight since my Lord Brook told me that Blood had not only his own pardon for all his villainy, but had also procured the like for Desburrrough and Kelsey, but I heard nothing before of Lambart; certainly some designs, more than ordinary, are on foot that such persons are received into favour; as for Sir ——— D. we apprehend it here that his being sent to the Tower is the result rather of state policy than the King's displeasure.

1672, Dec. 22. The same to the same.—. . . It is earnestly desired by a friend of mine, and a servant of yours, in this house, that he may know how it stands between Lord Arlington and Lord Clifford; how it is with his old Mr. D. of Bucks; and whether the gentleman of the horse to the mad Duke of Somerset be a place worth harkning after or acceptance, whether of profit or reputation.

1673, Dec. 12, Spring Gardens.—Sir Robert Southwell to Sir R. Verney.—Hearing that Sir Nath. Hobart by reason of age and infirmity, is willing to dispose of his place, he has proposed to a friend whom he thinks the Lord Keeper will approve.—He waits to talk the matter over with Sir R. Verney.

1675, April 1. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—Says that the Duke of Somerset is sick.

1675, April 8, London. The same to the same.—General Dutton, of Glostershire, is lately dead, and not having any children, his estate falls to his brother who married Sir R. Poole's daughter, who was thought to be but poorly married; but the windfall manifests the contrary.

1675, April 15. The same to the same.—Sir Geo. Stonehouse is 15 days dead, by which Abingdon being vacant of a member in the Commons, three stand for it; Sir Robert Hanson (late Lord Mayor of London), his son, and one more.—The difference between the Lord Mayor and the Commons is not yet composed, but rather increases.

1675, April 22. The same to the same.—. . . We have wars with Tripoly. . . . Sir John Norbury was at Tripoli with one ship of war, and demanded 160,000 dollars satisfaction for affronts done to some English ships, and on their refusal he took off the English Consul from the place and declared war. The King has on the news ordered 5 ships to be got ready, 4 of which may depart from England in two months hence, the other presently to join with what ships be in the Straits (which are 4 or 5).

1675, April 25. The same to the same.—At Abingdon is chosen Sir John Stonehouse in room of his father; Sir Robert Hanson petitions the House.—In the Lords yesterday the question whether the bishops sat by law or custom.—The Bishop of Lincoln died last week; he is succeeded by Dr. Barlow. The King on Saturday night sent for the keys from the Earl of Clarendon—'tis said the reason is, that last Thursday a play was acted at court, and after orders given that no more should be let in, his lordship came to the door, which the guard refused to open, tho' he told them who he was, on which he broke it open and struck a yeoman of the guard. Some say a chamberlain was never before turned out for beating a yeoman of the guard. There are three lords competitors for the office, Sunderland, Sussex, and Cornwallis. (Enclosed in the letter

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

are articles or grounds of an impeachment of the Earl of Danby.)

1675, May 6. The same to the same.—The Treasurer is cleared to Parliament, the court party running down his accusers.—Votes in the Commons.—The Duke of Somerset is dead (and hath left his Miss worth 20,000*l.*). As also the Lord Howard, of Escrick, and Lady Ingoldsby, Sir Thomas Lee's mother.

1675, Aug. 12. The same to the same.— . . . Foreign News.—City affairs have been for the last 3 days in a small disorder, occasioned by the tumultuous meeting of the weavers (in the city reckoned to be above 30,000), who some time since gave in a petition to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen to have the looms burnt which prejudiced their sustenance, for by the new looms one man can work as much as 20 after the old fashion. . . . On Monday last, or rather Sunday night, they rendezvoused in Spitalfields and in Southwark, and forcibly took two looms and burnt them.—On Tuesday Sir John Robinson promised them an answer, but that night they went to a quaker's at Newington Butts (to burn his loom), but he, imagining they would visit him, in defending his house killed one man and wounded two more, and they yesterday revenged themselves by burning his loom in St. George's Fields; but the quaker staid not for a second encounter. These tumults make us post double watches all over the town, besides some companys of the trained bands which day and night are now out. Sir Nath. Herne, the sheriff, being in Spittlefields amongst them, bid his servants beat one of those bold weavers, which Sir Thos. Robinson saw out of a tavern window, and sent to Sir Nathl., asking him what he did to beat anybody in that place where he had nothing to do. Sir Nathl. said he was sent for thither, and if the command of the place belonged to Sir John, he wondered why he kept them not in better obedience. . . . The Duke of Albemarle has bought Clarendon House for 25,000*l.*; payment thus, 3,000*l.* last Saturday sevensnight, 4,000*l.* last Thursday, 6,000*l.* in a month, and the rest in three years, 4,000*l.* each year with interest.—Lord Yarmouth, &c. was set on by highwaymen and shot thro', but he hath flesh enough to spare. 'Tis reported that Thom. Thinn shall marry Col. Villier's daughter, and be made (what he so much desires) a Baron.

1675, Aug. 23, London. The same to the same.— . . . Foreign news.—The French King says little but Jesus Maria and beats his breast, which when he observes any to take notice on it, he then laments the loss of his dear friend Turenne (Turenne?). Sir John Robinson was near being outed, but on his humble submission, and the petition of his lady, he was confirmed in his charge.

1675, Aug. 26. John Verney to Edmund Verney. . . . The King's brazier, who lived on Holborn Bridge, about 60 or 70 years of age, six weeks since married his (pretty) maid, and yesterday morning hanged himself, not known wherefore, unless 'twere to do the sheriffs a favour, who are now the true owners of his estate, which people say was large.—Mentions people riding on the elephant at Bartholomew Fair.

1675, Aug. 29. The same to the same.— . . . On Thursday last his Majesty was in town to see a ship of 56 guns launched at Woolwich, called the Woolwich; she came off very well. . . . her portholes are larger than ordinary.

1675, Aug. 30. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.— . . . Foreign news.—On Saturday last, at the Duke's playhouses, Sir Tho. Armstrong killed Mr. Scrope (second son of Lady Scrope, the courtier). Their quarrel is said to about Mrs. Uphill, the player, who came into that house maskt, and Scrope would have entertained discourse with her, which Sir T. Armstrong would not suffer, so a ring was made wherein they fought. But Sir T. Armstrong took half a dozen gentlemen to bail him to Sir Thomas Bridges, and surrendered himself a prisoner, where he gave in the account following, that Scrope owed him a grudge a long time, and happening to sit by each other in the play house, struck him over the shins with a cane twice, which, when Sir T. Armstrong desired him to forbear, he swore "Fight me 'then,'" and went out, but seeing Sir T. Armstrong did not follow him, he returned and drew upon Sir Thomas, who at the first pass killed him.—Sir Thomas Bridges advised him not to surrender, but go home and not absent himself.—Sir Thomas Bridges was blamed for this. It was not the first man that Sir T. Armstrong had killed.—Great mirth and dancing is daily kept at Stow by Sir Richard and Lady Temple, who received the visits of the gentry all last week.

1675, Sept. 2. John Verney to Edmund Verney.—Treves is taken by assault; Crequi surrendered and is carried prisoner to Vienna and shewn at 12*d.* a head.

Some say Morgan with a regiment of English found the favour of mercy, but sworn never to bear arms for France again, and are now listed into the conquering army. . . . On Tuesday night, about 7 or 8 o'clock, some Dutchmen caused a cartload of fagots with straw in them to be flung down in Cornhill just before the gates of the Royal Exchange, and having some handy fellows by, piled them up and set fire to them, whereabout the apprentices so flocked with shouts and tossing up hats that the French are so beaten.—Sir T. Armstrong has got his pardon. Some say Miss Neadham (with whom the Duke of Monmouth was catch'd abroad) is taken into favour again at court. Two days since my school-master, Dr. Fleetwood, was consecrated Bishop of Worcester, Dr. Tomlins, minister of Lambeth, is lately dead with drinking of cider and milk when he was hot.

1675, Sept. 9. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.— . . . Saturday last the two Forths and Company offered 230,000*l.* (of which 100,000*l.* in advance) for the Irish revenues, which before never yielded 190,000*l.*, but 'tis believed that Pepis (the Duke of York's friend), and his company will be the farmers of those incomes at the above offered rate. The same day, as I heard, the Swedish and French protestant ministers (or at least in their name) sent a memorial to his Majesty desiring him to assist his allies; but were first askt what the Swedes did in Germany, and after were told that the Duke of Brandenburg and the King of Denmark were his Majesty's allies as well as the Swedes. The Bishop of St. Davids is dead, and the Bishop of Bristol likely to be translated thither, and (as Mr. Hall tells me) Dr. Tillotson is thought on by the Lord Keeper to be Bishop of Bristol (with reservation of his deanery), whose temper, he thinks, will better accord with the fanatics of that city than the hot spirit of the present bishop. . . .

1675, July 29, London. Wm. Fall to Sir Ralph Verney.—Tho' I was at Hampton Court yesterday I did not hear any news more than what the Gazettes mention, only that the Prince of Condé is to command Monsr. Turenne's army, but who to succeed in his place I know not. It was discoursed yesterday that Senior Francisco de Melo, the ambassador from Portugal, is to be chamberlain to our Queen.

1675, Aug. 5, London. The same to the same.—I do not hear that Nell's son is to have any honour at all; but there are to be 3 dukes, viz., Lord Southampton, Lord Euston, and the Duchess of Portsmouth's first son by the King to be Duke of Richmond, Lenox, and Earl of March, by the name of Charles Stuart, &c.; these two last had had their patents before this time, had not my Lady Cleaveland opposed it, for she is resolved that her younger son shall not take place of the elder, nor Duke of Richmond of either. Don Francisco is chamberlain, for he wears the key; but 'tis believed that the design is only that he may have the advantage of selling it. . . . We came home last night late from Hampton Court, tho' there was nothing to do but to adjourn all public councils till the 8th of Sept. at Whitehall, about which time the King designs to go to Newmarket. After we came home my Lord went to Lincoln's Inn to sup with the Reader in his chamber, because he could not dine with him, which honour he had done all the other Inns of Court, except the Inner Temple, where we are to dine this day. I heard a discourse between two persons last night as if Duke Hamilton were coming hither from Scotland, and that there were 12 garrisons fortified and manned in Scotland, of which Duke Hamilton's house was one; but the persons were too great to be asked any questions so that I cannot give you a particular account.

1675, Aug. 11, London. The same to the same.— . . . Lord Southampton is to be Duke of Southampton and Lord Euston to be Duke of Grafton. The Duke of Richmond's patent was sealed on Monday last by the industry of his solicitor, who got a doquet signed at 12 o'clock at night by my Lord Treasurer. And my Lady Cleaveland's solicitor came next morning to have his doquet signed, but Lord Treasurer was gone to Bath, so that Richmond will now take place, to the great grief, &c. My lord was so cautious of disobliging, supposing that my Lord Southampton's patent had been ready also, that he stayed while the Duchess of Portsmouth's solicitor went to know the King's pleasure. The King being as wary as he (without saying which should be sealed first) writ a letter to my lord with his own hand, signifying only that as soon as the Duke of Richmond's patent came to him he should seal it. . . . My lord goes not to Goringbury till the latter end of next week. . . . he ventured to Whitehall yesterday in the afternoon to meet several of the Privy Councillors in order to a proclamation which I believe will come out this morning to

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNET,
BART.

suppress and quiet several ribbon weavers which have been very troublesome these 3 days; they have broken into several houses where were now invented looms for weaving ribbon, and taken them away and burn them. It seems one man with this engine can weave as much in a day as twenty could do heretofore, by which means thousands of them have no work at all. The trained bands were raised, but the officers refused to do anything tho' desired, only sought to see the French inventions (as they called them) burnt, for which I fear some of them will suddenly be checked. The sheriffs of London complain they could not be obeyed. And Sir John Robinson says he durst not use any violence, not having authority, as formerly, within the verge of the Tower, for Lord Northampton is constable and hath not yet sealed him a deputation, so that it is only good words he can give them. In the mean time 2 or 300 weavers in a company very honestly take and burn such looms as they please. The same play is acted in Southwark and towards Greenwich, where the justices have very tenderly endeavoured to execute their authority. I hear that Lord Craven and his horse, &c. went thither last night to observe their motions. The weavers have no arms nor clubs in their hands, but like a rude multitude run up and down. The council are to meet at 9 o'clock in the Council Chamber this morning about this affair.

1675, Aug. 23. The same to the same. The weavers are all quiet, several of them being committed to prison; and this week special commissions will be sealed for trying of them. The justices and other magistrates of London, Middlesex, and Surrey have been severely checkt for not using their authority in due time to suppress the rioters. The sheriffs of London were more officious; but to little purpose; for when they demanded the assistance of Sir John Robinson and the militia under his command, he denied it, tho' they were all ready for the place, for which Sir John has been in a fair way to loose his lieutenantancy, for the council left him to the mercy of the King, who proved (according to custom) a very gracious prince; but his captains were committed by the Council to the Gatehouse, and custody of messengers, who, to justify themselves, said they obeyed Sir Jo. Robinson's orders; but my lord told them they ought to have obeyed the sheriffs, for by the common law they have the power to command the militia; after 3 days they were discharged and received into Lord Northampton's favour, for he found it a hard matter to get new ones. No letters from France since Wednesday last till yesterday, and then five expresses, one after another, went to Windsor with letters. . . . We discourse in coffee houses that the Prince of Orange hath besieged Maastricht, but how true, I know not. The swelling of my lord's face is now quite gone, he drew out the tooth which was the cause of it. The King (this week) being troubled with the same distemper drew a tooth which caused the gums to bleed so violently that the surgeons were going to sear it with irons; but then it stopped as they were going to do it; and he is very well, and intends to go to Woolwich this week to see a new ship launched.

1675, Sept. 1, London. The same to the same.—My lord would not give me leave to go to Claydon; but told me I must stay to guard the Great Seal to London. . . . The King was in town on Saturday last in the Treasury Chamber with my lord and Lord Treasurer to receive proposals for the revenue of Ireland. The farms (in being) expire at Christmas next, and they are let for about 197,000*l.* per annum; but now Mr. Pitts (the Duke's Pitts), Sir Jo. Baber, &c. offer 240,000*l.* per annum, on which they will advance 60,000*l.*; but 'tis not yet resolved who shall have it. The King dined then at my Lord Treasurer's and returned afterwards to Windsor, which place he intends to leave quite on Saturday next, and come to London, from whence he intends, about the 20th of this month, to go to Newmarket; but whether his pressing occasions there will give him leave to be here again the 13th of Oct. is yet very dubious. . . . The Duchess of Portsmouth told my Lord Pembroke that if he did not make some extraordinary provisions against her sister's lying in, as became a person of her quality, and deliver her a sum of money to lay out, she would complain of him to the King and make known her sister's grievances, to which he replied that if she did so he would put her upon her head, and show his family the grievance of the nation. I hear that the Dutch will not accept of the English project for making peace between them and the French. P.S. The weavers are to be tried on Tuesday next, the doing thereof was adjourned till that day, because there were no judges in town; but my lord hath written to all of them to be here to-morrow.

1675, Oct. 5, London. The same to the same. The King dined yesterday at my Lord George Berkeley's house at Durdaines, and some talk that he will steal down to Newmarket for 3 or 4 days. Mr. Pitts is not like to be restored again, for I hear he was very scurvy and insolent both with Lord Treasurer and Secretary Coventry.

1675, Oct. 7, London. The same to the same. . . . My Lord yesterday morning introduced Mr. Serjeant Pemberton into the bed chamber, where the King was pleased to knight him. I have made some inquiry of Mr. Henshaw, and am told that he is a widower, and hath had several children: but as to his estate I cannot yet be informed.

1675, Oct. 21, London. The same to the same. I have here enclosed the copy of the paper taken up in the Mall, and brought into the House by Sir Trevor Williams, which being there complained of, the House took it to themselves and sent to Mr. Howard to know if he would own it. His answer, with the further proceedings of the House, you will find by the journal enclosed. Lord Cavendish being concerned could not forbear challenging Mr. Howard; but he being sick of the gout could not fight him, thereupon Lord Cavendish posted him at Whitehall Gate, &c., for a coward and a rascal, &c., which the House having notice of, committed Lord Cavendish to the Tower. The Lords have done nothing as yet, least they should disoblige the Commons.

1675, Oct. 28. The same to the same. Parliamentary news. The writer says, on Monday last, no one seconded the Master of the Roll's motion for an address to the King to dissolve the Parliament, but he was very severely replied to by several persons, whereupon Sir Thomas Meeres excused him, saying that the good old gentleman was of St. Paul's opinion, desirous to be dissolved, &c. At Whitehall last night my Lord John Berkeley went out of the Council Chamber towards the gallery, and immediately fell down as if were dead; but a little after he breathed again, and some advised to let him blood; but Dr. Phraser would give him a vomit, which I was told was immediately done, he had no sooner taken it but his teeth were set in his head (as they phrase it), and 'tis generally believed he will die; all his baggage and servants are gone towards France, and he was to follow to-morrow morning. . . . I do not hear by anybody that Sir Job Charlton is to be Speaker, neither do I believe it, for Mr. Seymour plays his game so well on both sides that he cannot easily be removed. . . .

1675, Nov. 11, Westminster. . . . On Monday last the Privy Councillors met at Whitehall to examine Monsr. Luzanny, formerly a priest, but lately turn'd protestant; upon his examination he related what induced him, and how he preached at the Savoy thereupon, which sermon being printed, one St. German, confessor to the Duchess, sent for him (or came to him, I know not which), but was no sooner come into his chamber but the said St. German and another priest threatened to stab him, and four more stood on the stairs to assist unless he would sign a paper by which he did abjure that sermon and the protestant religion; at which threats, he being entirely affrighted, did sign it, for doing whereof he said he was very much ashamed and the more that he should have no better soul to be afraid to die for the truth, &c. He further informed that St. German should say the Duke was a Roman catholic and had long been so, and that the King was inclined or somewhat to that purpose, for which there is a proclamation issuing out to apprehend him, and a reward of 200*l.* to any person that shall do it, and notice already sent to all ports to prevent his escape. . . . Last night Lord Cavendish and Mr. Howard came before the King and Council, where my Lord Keeper told them by the King's command, that the King was graciously pleased not to take notice of what had heretofore passed between them, and that he did expect that all quarrels between them should be reconciled, and in order thereunto a paper was prepared ready for both to sign, thereby to testify that they would so do, which was presently signed by both; that being done, he further told them that if either of them violated their promise they must expect the greatest severity of the laws to be executed upon [them]. Then the King commanded them to salute one another, which they did, and then parted. Yesterday a book, by order of the Lords, was burnt by the common hangman. It being an account of several lords' opinion, &c. concerning the test last sessions, and a committee is appointed to summon persons before them to discover, if possible, the printer and the author. It was first sold for 12*d.*, and now valued

SIR
H. VERNET
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

at 20s. . . . P.S. I had almost forgotten to tell you, that when Monsr. Luzanny was examined, and telling how he was threatened by St. German, &c. to alter his religion, Lord Halifax stood up and told the King that if his Majesty would give leave for the protestants to take that course to convert the papists, he did not question but in a very short time it would be effected, or something like that. I was not present.

[167 $\frac{5}{8}$], March 2. John Verney to Sir R. Verney, —. . . I hear that the aldermen of London met two days since, concerning the execution of the laws against the nonconformists, and that after some debate, out of consideration that such molestation would be prejudicial to the trade of the city, which is driven by many worthy persons of that opinion, 'twas agreed that no rigour should be shewed them till the inconveniency was represented to his Majesty in council, with their request for some liberty of conscience.

167 $\frac{5}{8}$, March 23. The same to the same.—He will next week send the verses (said to be by Rochester), much after the same manner of his satyr against man. Sir Robert Howard runs his son's nag against one of Crampton's horses for 1,000*l*.—Crampton hath a match at Salisbury next Saturday for 1,000*l*. with another gentleman.—Lord Montague sent to the King word that if his Majesty would give his leave he would at Newmarket run every horse in his stable (with his Majesty's), and the King sent the Duke of Monmouth to him, to command him to be there with his horses.

Faith and Reason, by the Earl of Rochester. 6 pp., folio.

The argument begins.

The grief of Astragon, and whence it springs,
And why it fear to his disciples brings. (6 lines.)

The poem, of 56 verses of 4 lines each, Begins,
Grief's a disease by thought's repletion bred,
To all but to the vain and headless known.

Ends,

Thus studious Thanour speaks and Astragon,
Of death's cold company now hasty grew,
Grieved that so little in this life is known,
And that this little is confined to few.

1676, March 30. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The Duke of York did declare he would never more come under the roof of Whitehall Chapel, which makes every one say he is a perfect papist . . . 'Tis said he publicly goes to mass. God bless him, and preserve the King. His Majesty hath settled 30,000*l*. a year for ever, out of the standing Excise for interest money, to the old bankers, and they must pay it to their creditors. But it is the opinion of divers that it must be settled by Parliament to be of validity.—Failure of Nicholas Warren and his brother-in-law, Dan Westcomb, and deputy Throgmorton, eminent merchants. The first two owing much to the King for custom on wines. On Thursday before they broke, Warren made over 1,500*l*. worth of plate and jewels to his son-in-law.—The King had an injunction.—Yesterday it was tried at Guildhall, and the King was cast. The old Countess of Pembroke and Lady of Arundel of Wardour are dead. Mr. Villiers, Lord Grandison's son, married Mrs. FitzGerard, the great Irish fortune. Mrs. Sands (sister to Lady Duras), 'tis believed will marry Sir Thos. Middleton, of Denbighshire, who will be on that marriage made an English lord, and receive 20,000*l*. in money. All Sir George Sand's estate (besides that sum of money and a baronage, or 10,000*l*. in lieu of that), going to the Lady Duras.—Of late so many citizens have failed, that now the first question every day asked is, who is broke to-day.

1676, April 6. The same to the same.—Some say the Lady Ambassador Berkeley hath declared herself a papist in France, as the Lords Mulgrave and Peterborough have done here. I heard (in Covent Garden), that Lord John Berkeley's pages and footmen all left him in one day, but people write not from Paris the occasion. The court will shortly be in town again, for neither of the foreign duchesses, Mazarine or Portsmouth (whose son Richmond is dead), are gone to Newmarket. The Spanish galleons are arrived at Calais, with 27 million, formerly they bringing but 12 or 15.

1676, April 13. The same to the same.—Col. Strangways, of Dorsetshire, died last Thursday, having buried a wife (Lord Capel's daughter), married another (Col. Penruddock's daughter), and ended his own life within the space of 3 months, leaving his brother heir to 5,000*l*. per annum . . . 'Tis said that the first week the King was at Newmarket, there was a great falling out between the Duke and the Treasurer, whose friend, Portsmouth (tho' she had but newly miscarried) went down immediately to keep the staff where 'twas. The coventicles had good luck to find so favourable a jury, but here they are not put to that shift, not being in the least disturbed or informed against.

1676, April 26. The same to the same.—Lord Pembroke and Sir Geo. Hewett lately fought a duel, the last was wounded in the thumb and arm, but little hurt. Sir Robert Howard has sold Wootton Bassett, in Wiltshire, to Mr. Lau. Hyde, for 36,000*l*., of which his lady, who consents to the sale, is to have eight. Mr. Lane is received into his Majesty's favour again. The Lord Mayor has sent four nonconformist preachers to prison. Disturbances among the East India Company, who were to bring in their votes for a new government, &c., on Monday last, which was done. But some of them procured a letter from his Majesty, forbidding the choice of Mr. Child or Mr. Papillon into that committee. So the votes were sealed up, and some of them have been at the council board.—To-morrow they meet again to argue their case amongst themselves Cousin Robert Dormer is made Attorney-General of Durham.

1676, June 29. John Verney to Edmund Verney.—To-morrow the trial of Lord Cornwallis, now in the Tower, by his peers; the Chancellor sits Lord Steward of the day. Mr. Downes, who (with Lord Rochester, Mr. William Jepson, and Geo. Etheridge), skirmisht the watch at Epsom 12 days since, died last Tuesday of his hurts received from the rustics . . . Mr. Jincks, a young draper in Cornhill, was yesterday committed by the council to the Gatehouse for his speech last Saturday at Guildhall, when the citizens met to choose sheriffs (he spoke about the decay of trade by the French alliance, and wanted the city to petition for a new Parliament). Sir Wm. Ellis is dismissed from being a judge. If Atkyns had not been less forward, 'tis believed he had had the same fate.

1676, Nov. 17. (Received). So indorsed, but it cannot be so, from the letter above). J. Verney to Sir Ralph Verney . . . Mrs. Downs (sister to him killed last year at Epsom) is to be married to the Earl of Shrewsbury . . . Judge Atkins hath been once or twice before the council for a forcible entry by him made. His Majesty hath not, nor do I believe will he, answer the citizen's address given him last Friday.

1676, Nov. 23. Edmund Verney to Sir Ralph Verney. . . . I would have sent Mr. Scrogg's ingenious speech, but none of the booksellers hereabout have any left . . . I have not heard of the Mock speech, but if I light on't you shall have it. The citizen's address is not printed. Judge Atkins is come off with flying colours as to the forcible entry. Here hay is 1*s*. 6*d*. the truss, and 56*s*. the load . . . On Tuesday the King and the jockeys met at supper at Ned Griffin's, where were made 6 hare matches for 500*l*., a match to be run at Newmarket next meeting . . . Lord Sussex is parting with his lady, and going to travel: he would have carried her into the country, but that life she liked not, so would not go.

1676, Nov. 30. John Verney to Sir R. Verney . . . Mr. John Temple, of Smirna (having lived there 25 years), is lately dead, and left his estate in confusion, having six months before begun a will, but not finished it . . . he has a brother at Constantinople, who is gone to Smyrna, to take care of his brother's concerns. On Tuesday was fought a duel between the midwife Boshier's two sons (one whereof formerly courted Mrs. Taylor) and Mr. Jones and his second. Some few wounds, but no other hurt. Sir Samuel Morland is lately married to handsome Fielding's sister, and saith he will not have a penny for portion. She is handsomer for a woman than he is for a man. Yesterday Lord Yarmouth, buried his second daughter, which was his beloved: a great attendance there was of coaches and six horses. The citizen's petition was, by the Lord Chancellor, answered to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen . . . 'twas a very severe answer, rebuking and reproaching them extremely, yet not them, tho' they signed, but the contriver of it. They stood all like shepherders, and came away without speaking anything for reply.

1676, Dec. 7. The same to the same. Yesterday came news that Mr. Bacon had taken and burnt James Town, in Virginia, and made Sir Thos. Chicheley prisoner, clapping him in chains, but keeping him alive to exchange for Mr. Bland, and that the governor, Sir Wm. Berkeley, was again fled the country. Lord Pembroke hath sold Ramsbury, in Wilts. for 32,000*l*. to Sir Richard Powell, his brother, but some think they buy it for Sir Alan Apsley. Last week the King being at Windsor did Mr. Chiffinch the favour to dine with him and after dinner conferred the honour of knighthood on him.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1675. March 9, London. William Fall to Sir R. Verney.—Last night Mr. Alex. Denton, the learned counsel, called at my lord's house to see Mr. Sharpe. . . . It is not yet declared who shall be Lord Chief Baron, but interests are making, some for Mountague, others for Atkins, and he that gives the best fine probably may be admitted tenant. The city (I hear) have suspended their Recorder, a vote being passed by the Court of Aldermen, that the speech he made at the council board was without their directions, &c. . . . My Lord Yarmonth's commission for the lieutenancy of Norfolk (in place of Lord Townshend) is sealed . . .

1675. March 16, London. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—The great discourse of the town is of Tompson and Nelthorpe, the bankers, who are failed. They entered 150 actions against such as owed them money. Hynde (and his partners), bankers, have refused further payments . . . the like is said of some others, which I am very glad of, for I would have all bankers broke, they ruining the trade of the whole kingdom The Duke of Bucks hath certainly bought Mr. Vandeput's house, by the hands of Sir Robert Clayton and Coll. Welden, and is to have possession at our Lady Day, Mr. V. being now removing to Wallbrooke, a house that's lent him there by a merchant for 3 months, till he can provide one for himself. The Earl of Shaftesbury hath been twice about buying Mr. W. Roberts his house (as his sister tells me), but he will not part with it under 10,000*l.* in money, or 500*l.* a year rent. Sir John Norbury hath burnt 2 Tripoli men-of-war, and two of their prizes in port, and is gone down toward Alexandria, where were 6 Tripoli men-of-war, who had taken sundry ships of English, French, and two or three Malta corsaires, and carried them thither to sell; but some report the same 6 Tripolies to be gotten into the Gulf of Venice, so that Sir John will miss of them. Dr. Mills is dead, and his only nephew, who was his executor, died in 6 hours after his uncle, in his clothes, sitting on a bed, being taken ill, and only time to underwrite his will, and die. Sir Wm. Peake is this day to be buried, he hath lain for some days in state. The Earl of Aylesbury's son is to be married to the late Duke of Somerset's sister, a great fortune, and their wedding clothes are now a-making. Some say the Lord Duras hath been married this week to Madam Sands.

1675. March 24. Will. Fall to Sir R. Verney.—The private burial of my lady (Finch, who died on the 16th,) is to be solemnised about 12 o'clock this Thursday night. . . . She is to be laid in the little vault in Kensington Church Mr. North's patent for warden of the Farst (P) is to be sealed this day. One other patent passed last week, which was a direction and commission to the Commissioners of the Customs to pay 255,000*l.* to Mr. Kent, who was Sir Stephen Fox's deputy. It being in satisfaction of several tallies therein mentioned, which he had struck in the Exchequer, 40,000*l.* of it (I hear) was paid the next day, and the rest to be paid as it comes in. By which it's evident Sir Stephen Fox will not be left in the Briars Sir Harry Newton has passed his patent over again and inserted a clause that his estate shall not be liable to any account which he may be called to hereafter by reason of his office.

1676. April [22.] The same to the same. . . . My Lord Mayor attended the King and council last night to receive further directions about the conventicles; but what was directed I know not I have here enclosed Muddiman's Sunday and Wednesday letter.

1676, July 27. Kensington The King being at Windsor and no council yesterday, I have not had any occasion to go to Whitehall, and so have not spoken with Mr. Houseman I have here enclosed Muddiman's letter, which is very short, it being his Tuesday letter. It seems he has altered his way and days of writing, for it's only Saturday's and Tuesday's, so that this letter is one day staler than I thought it would have been.

1676, Sept. 21, Kensington I was told yesterday at Whitehall that the Dutch ambassador had been with the King, and told him that in case the confederates did not send their plenipotentiaries within a very short time, that then the States would treat with the French king apart; and it's believed by some to be done already.

1676, Oct. [26]. John Verney to Sir R. Verney I am told by Mr. Gibbons that Sir W. Smith's business is done, and that Prince Rupert and the Duke of Monmouth have presented him their pictures, which are in his chamber at my Lady Hobart's.—The Parliament have voted all such as have gone soldiers, or such as have authorised or connived at their going into France since the King's proclamation in 1675, to be enemies to the King, and kingdom; and 'tis said in Scotland the proclamation was kept several days till soldiers were forcibly shipped off, and as soon as they were under sail the proclamation was out; but the wind proving contrary, the ships put into port again, when all people saluted the soldiers with the proclamation against serving the French, at which they would have left the ship, but were not permitted to do so, but were beaten; one had his ears cut off, and another that got on shore was taken and hanged to the yard arm of the ship. These matters the Parliament are driving into.

1677. 1675, John Verney to Edmund Verney.—The Duke of Newcastle and Sir Matthew Hale are dead 'Tis said Alderman Backwell is lately made Victualler of Tangier in the room of Sir Dennis Gaudon.—Lady Sussex is at last tho' unwillingly, gone with her lord into the country.—Nell Guin's son Charles is made Earl of Burford, and, in want of heir male, to go to his brother James and his issue.

1675, Feb. 8. The same to the same.—Foreign news.—Two days since some rogues got up to a window in the Lord Chancellor's house and stole the Mace, Purse, and some other things, but by good luck the Great Seal was not there Mr. Henry Killigrew's servant was t'other night stabbd in the next room to his Majesty, 'tis said he killed himself, but others suspect the master who was in the room with him drunk, some say alone, others say there was a third person; however, Mr. Killigrew is confined to his chamber.

1675, Feb. 19. The same to the same. The Parliament began to sit last Thursday. They had some discourse whether they were a Parliament or not On Friday last the House of Lords committed to the Tower the Earl of Salisbury, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and Lord Wharton. The Duke of Bucks had the same sentence.—He stept out and went away for the night, but returned to the House next day, whence he was sent to the Tower attended by the Black Rod, in two of his own coaches and a great retinue of his footmen, all in gallant new liveries, and six hackney coaches following them. On Friday night some gentlemen being at the Bear tavern, in Cornhill, sent out a gallon of sack and a dozen or two of faggots for a bonfire before the Old Exchange for joy that the Lords were sent to the Tower. The Ostenders have lately taken 500 Scotchmen and Irishmen, with 19 horses, going into France to serve that king There are 16 English captains returning out of France, their company's being either dwindled away or joined to others, so that they are disbanded. . . . Court news—Gives an account of Frank Newport getting drunk and misbehaving himself—he is confined for a few days.

1677. March 26. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—On Saturday last the Lord Treasurer was made K. G. . . . The King in recompence for former loyalty hath granted privileges to the town of Newark to send members to Parliament.

1677, March 29. The same to the same Parliament yesterday prohibited the importation of fish, and bringing in of Irish cattle for ever. Sir Thos. Littleton and Sir Geo. Downing are of the committee about the pedlars; and are tooth and nail for them, tho' most of the corporation have writ to put them down.

1677, April 15. The same to the same.—The House was never so divided as about the Irish Act, for friend was against friend, brother against brother, son against father, courtier against courtier; but in the end 'twas confirmed for ever by 17 votes.

1677, May 17. The same to the same.—News at court that the Venetian resident at Constantinople was then cut off but the Venetian ambassador here says he has fresher letters than the King's, which say—use any such thing Sir Thos. Bludworth's eldest son, at Aleppo, had lately a miraculous escape, he being about 20 miles from Aleppo; a Gourdeen amongst the rocks, tho' several servants were with him, shot a bullet at him and cut the hair off the hinder part of his head.

1677, May 24. The same to the same Sir Francis Roles having intrusted his son to the tuition of a nonconformist parson, the phanatique hath married the young gentleman to one of his gang, not worth a great, besides that she is 30 and he but 18 I have not heard anything of the lords in the Tower petitioning.

1677, May 28. The same to the same.—Parliamentary doings.—The Duchess of Richmond hath lately sold her interest in Cobham to Lord O'Brien, so 'tis believed she will suddenly own her marriage to Lord Mulgrave . . . Sir John Shaw hath recovered, at the King's Bench, 500*l.* of the town of Colchester for illegally turning him out of his place, and intends to recover his wages of them as their burgess.

SIR
H. VERNE
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1677, May 31. John Verney to Edmund Verney.— . . . On Wednesday his Majesty's birth night was some gallantry at Whitehall, where was acted a French opera, but most pitifully done, so ill that the King was awary on't, and some say it was not well contrived to entertain the English gentry, who came that night in honour to their King, with a lamentable ill-acted French play, when our English actors so much surpass; however the dances and voices was pretty well performed.

1677, May 31. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—On Monday morning the King made an angry speech to the Commons, and adjourned them to the 16th July. All people have copies of the speech but they are so false copied I would not send one. The House went from Whitehall to their sitting place where Mr. Powell and one or two more would have spoke, but the Speaker ran out of his chair, and would not near them, crying they were adjourned, &c. As to livery, all people do now lace the clothes; only one rich livery (and whose I know not) is loopt . . . All country people about Portsmouth will have it that the French king was there incognito.

1677, June 7. The same to the same.—On Monday Lord Gerard of . . . about 14 years old, was leading his mother to see New Bedlam, but was struck at by a porter's wife, at which, being somewhat concerned, her husband who was a little in drink came up and seconded her insolence with more blows, till my lord drew his sword and ran the porter into the groin, after which his lordship had like to have been pulled in pieces by the rabble, who hurried him to prison, and then broke the windows to come at him again.—The Lord Mayor came and took him to his house all night.—The Countess of Bath had her coach broke to bits and her footmen knocked down, and she glad to get away. She was taken for Lord Gerard's mother.—On Tuesday night Sir John Norborough's servant killed, in Cheapside, a sober man, about the wall, for which the servant is now in Newgate . . . The King has settled 30,000*l.* per annum for interest at the bankers, by patent, which is in print. Several Parliament men are resolved to drink no more French wine.

1677, June 14. The same to the same. . . . The Queen set out on Monday last, the King attending her the first night; there were some disputes between the maids of honour and the dressers about precedence; they dined at Mr. Progers, and supped at Will. Chiffin's (Chiffinch).

1677, Dec. 6. The same to the same.—On Tuesday last a duel was fought between the Earl of Ossory and his second Col. Mackarly against Mr. Buckley and Mr. Gerard (son to the lord of that name). The colonel had the fortune to wound Mr. Gerard in the belly, but drawing back his sword, 'twas twirled out of his hand by his adversary, who took it up and then went to the Earl, who finding himself set on by two, was fain on demand to give up his sword. On Monday night a hackney coach and horses, and a gentleman in it, went back into Fleet ditch (there were no rails, and was either drowned or smothered with mud).

1677, Dec. 12. The same to the same.—Yesterday night died the Duke of Cambridge, and was embalmed by Mr. St. Amand. Lord Peterborough sent a challenge to Sir George Hewett for breaking of his mistress Johnson's windows, but the King hearing of it made up the business. The Duchess of Portsmouth being ill, Mrs. Frazer (the doctor's daughter) and Mrs. Elliott, and one or two more, strive for the preferment.

1677, March 19, London. The same to the same. . . . Sadler, that robbed the Chancellor, offered 600 guineas for his life, but it not being accepted, he suffered at Tyburn on Friday last with his comrade Johnson; this last was in mourning and died penitently. The Duke of Bucks hath his laboratory in the Tower, in which he spends his time in chemistry. There are in the Tower one Harrington, and one Murray, the former hath been before the King and Board, but spoke so boldly that he was taken for a crackbrained fellow; but they are of Shaftesbury's crew. The people about town call this the Pump Parliament, alluding, as a little water put into a pump fetches up a great deal, so &c.

1677, March 22, London. The same to the same.—News only that the Earl of Bristol is dead, and old Mr. Heath, Comptroller to the Archbishop of Canterbury, is knighted. The Parliament are upon prohibiting Venetian looking glasses. The weavers' petition the house to prohibit all mohairs and chamblets. Sundry other trades petition against the importation of other commodities; if all take effect, hereafter nothing must be brought from foreign countries.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1677, March 23, London. Will. Fall to Sir R. Verney.— . . . On Tuesday last my Lord De La Mere, seconded with Lord Clarendon and my Lord Halifax, moved that four of the members of that House were confined upon a punctilio only; and that if the House would be pleased to release them, it would be acknowledged as a favour, or words to this effect, which motion caused a long debate in the House, insomuch that Lord De La Mere had like to have been sent to them, but it fell, upon another business being moved, about the Duke of Norfolk's being sent for home as another worthy member; but the Lords, it seems, have no need of his assistance, therefore, they appointed a committee of the Howards and those that are nearest related to the family (I mean only of those that sit in the Lord's House), to reconcile my Lord Marshal and his brothers, and to take away all diffidences, but the duke to remain where it is most convenient for his health, &c. . . . This day the Lord Treasurer is to wear the blue ribbon.

1677, April 26, London. The same to the same.—The court continuing still at Newmarket, we are so barren of news that I can only tell you the great monsieurs are returned from thence, and had their audience of the Queen and Duchess last night; 'tis reported that one of them stays here in quality of ambassador, and Monsr. Courtin returns with the rest. My Lord Sunderland and the Earl of Feversham were kindly received by the French king, who to make their equipage the more splendid, were pleased to be accompanied by Stephen the corn cutter, who being in his livery coat, the French king was pleased at supper to inquire who he was, and some of the officers taking him to the side board drank the King of France's health to him; he replied he would pledge it with all his heart, for it was his Majesty's health; and when he had done that, he would drink the French king's health, and such kind of stuff; but all passed well enough.

1677, May 5, Woburne. P. [Lord] Wharton to (Sir R. Verney).—Upon my petition to the House of Peers at the close of their last sitting, they submitted the matter of my liberty to the King, and when he was at Newmarket he gave me leave to be here or at St. Giles (as my business required) till the 21st inst. You will easily suppose I desire a total release. . . . You know how great an import it would be to me to have a good word from my Lord Keeper therein, and I cannot bethink myself of any who, I believe, would be so ready to do me that kindness as yourself.—Has sent this bearer to ask Sir Ralph to go up to London next week and favour him in this affair.

1677, May 5, Claydon. Draft of Sir R. Verney's reply to Lord Wharton.— . . . Since I cannot possibly go up myself, yet (if a friend of mine is in town) I shall endeavour to get him to discourse it with my lord at a distance, and try whether his lordship will meddle in this affair, so far as to speak favourably to the King for your further liberty; but to deal freely with you, if I understand things right, it must be a greater interest than mine that must persuade him to it.

1677, May 5, Woburn. Ann. Lady Wharton, to Sir R. Verney.—Asks him to use his interest with the Chancellor on her husband's behalf.

1677, May 7, Claydon. Draft of Sir R. Verney's reply to Lady Wharton.

1677, Aug. 2, London. J. Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.— . . . Gentlemen are daily going over as their inclinations lead 'em, as 2 days ago went the Duke of Monmouth and the Earl of Feversham for the French army. Others go to the Dutch, and I (tho' their inferior) to be making idle visits think it not so honourable. . . . An Argeen took a small English ship in our channel who had no pass, so he left 5 Englishmen on board, and put 10 Turks, but at sea the 5 English fell on the 10 Turks, massacred them, and brought the vessel into the Downes.

1677, Aug. 2, London. W. Fall to Sir R. Verney.—The great discourse of the town is that the Duke of Bucks shall be restored to favour, and be Lord Steward of the Household in place of Duke of Ormond, but of this they are very silent at court, only his sacred Majesty and his Grace (I hear) were very merry one night at Lord Rochester's lodgings, which, I conceive, created this discourse.

1677, Aug. [9.] John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The King went on Saturday away for Portsmouth, but when at sea, the wind being contrary, he returned into the Downs, where yesterday he was with the wind in his teeth, as the seamen say.

1677, Oct. 8, London. The same to the same.— . . . About a month ago Geo. Jeffryes, the city common

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

serjeant, was knighted, and Sir Fra. Wingfield, the lawyer, is dead. Mr. Henry Noell is dead, and now Cha. Bertie, the Treasurer's secretary, stands for his vacancy at Stamford The coachmakers have gotten a patent to be a company, and Mr. Baile is the Master; they gave the herald's 50*l.* to have for their arms 3 chariots, and for supporters a horse in harness. The Sheriffs of London are Mr. Wm. Royston, a Turkey merchant, and Major Beckford the King's slop-seller, and the Lord Mayor elect is Sir Francis Chaplain. The fire at the Temple consumed Philips his buildings, ending at Sir Geo. Jefferyes' chambers, without doing them any damage, which good fortune he had once before. In Whitefriars were burnt 4 or 5 houses also to the ground, and as many more defaced. Mr. Carpenter, in whose chamber the fire began, was burnt in his bed; Alderman Backwell's son's chamber was burnt, and he thought to be in it, but by good luck he went that evening to Fulham. A wall fell down which killed 10 or 12 persons, and had done much more execution but that 'twas met by an old tree who bore a great share of the brunt. My Lord Mohun is buried in St. Martin's church, and the jury found it murder.

1677, Oct. 11. The same to the same.— . . . This day Mr. Fielding is to be tried for killing the link boy last year. The King hath granted him his pardon in case it be found only manslaughter, to avoid his being burnt in the hand; but if the jury find it murder, his Majesty's pardon doth not reach him. This pardon Sir Saml. Morland got of the King a fortnight ago, and 'twas last night sealed by the Chancellor. 'Tis said Mr. Fielding hath bought a perrywig of 20*l.* price to be tried in On Saturday the King will be in town. The Chancellor came to town yesterday from Kensington, the seals beginning to-day. The Lady Keeper Bridgman's daughter is already (or very suddenly to be) married to Sir Thos. Middleton, of Chirk Castle; she hath 6,000*l.* left her by her father, and 2,000*l.* which her mother adds to it.

1677, Dec. 10. The same to the same.—Last Monday one Mr. Harrington had a trial at Guildhall, where 'twas proved that he said the government of England consisted of three estates, and that (any one) making war against the other was no rebellion; you may guess at his opinion; but what fine or punishment he is to have is not yet determined. A bailey was last week killed about an arrest within the privilege of St. James' Park, I think 'twas in Old Spring Garden. Last week was also killed one Mr. Blackwell, near the Bull Head Tavern, at Charing Cross; there were 4 drinking in an alehouse where they quarrelled, went out of the house and fought to the loss of Mr. Blackwell's life. The Lord Sunderland had a quarrel, whereon followed a challenge, in which Mr. Temple (son to Sir Wm.) was concerned, but it being known, they were secured and the difference made up. Capt. Fountaine lately come from France, crossing Lincoln's Inn Fields, was set on by two men; he asked them if 'twas his money or his life they sought after, to which they answered, they'd have his heart blood, but they were mistaken, for he ran one of them through, and the other ran away. In the fight his pocket was cut, out of which he lost about 30 guineas; both the rogues escaped, tho' one was run through.

1678, April 10. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—Foreign news.—Some say that there will be a camp on Banstead Downs, and that the Dukes of York and Monmouth have been there to set out the ground. The town's discourse is that H.R.H. goeth over into Flanders, and that he is at 80,000*l.* charge to set out for tents, kitchen, &c. On Tuesday last the city, in a common council, lent his Majesty 100,000*l.*

1678, April 25. The same to the same.—Lord Rochester has been very ill and very penitent, but is now bettering.—Here enclosed are his verses on Sir Car. Scroope at large.—The coffee houses discourse that the Chancellor shall be removed, and that Lord Chief Justice North hath refused that great honour which some think will be conferred on Judge Scroggs. Those that pretend to know the secret causes of disfavour say this happens, because the Chancellor would not seal something concerning martial law. And being appointed with the Treasurer and two Secretaries of State to examine the Scotch complainants, he was of opinion that so much severity should not be used.

1678, May 2. The same to the same.—Mr. Gerard Aungier (brother to Lord Aungier), President of the Indies, is dead; he lived in the Indies 16 or 17 years.

1678, May 16. The same to the same.—Yesterday Mr. Robert Boyle, the virtuoso, came to a Turkey Court, where he desired to be made free of our company, which was granted him, presuming his adventures into that country will be nothing but quares.—The Treasurer came to borrow of the city 50,000*l.* or more, on the Pole Act, but Sir Thos. Player told him he did not believe they'd lend any more; the Treasurer told him if they did not 'twas his fault, for they would have lent more, but he would not receive it, to which Sir Thos. said 'twas true, for the first sum demanded was 100,000*l.*, which sum being completed he stopt, and had no reason to receive more than was asked of (and lent by) the common council, and that now affairs were altered, men were of another mind than they were then; however, half a dozen common councilmen said they'd use their endeavour, but I fear 'twill be to small purpose.

1678, May 28, Vienna. Copy of a letter by the Emperor to the States General of the United Provinces. Asking them not to desert, now England had joined against the French.

1678, July 18. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Foreign news.—Capt. Herbert and Sir Roger Strickland have lately been before Algiers, but have done nothing, tho' some think they would gladly have peace with us, the plague being hot amongst them.

1678, July 25. The same to the same.— . . . Secretary Coventry is upon resigning of his place, and 'tis believed either Law, Hyde, or Sir W. Temple will be preferred to it. Mr. Hyde hath sold his place, his bed chamber place, to Capt. Bridge for 4,500*l.* On Friday last the Council ordered that 18 troops of horse and 8 of dragoons shall be shipt off for Flanders, to which place foot soldiers are daily going from hence. Last Sunday Cornet Wroth dined with Sir Robert Viner at his country house, and after dinner, going an airing with him, drew a pistol upon Sir Robert, and having six or eight troopers to assist him, took away Miss Hyde and put her in a coach;—the wheel came off, he laid her across a horse, and rode to a ferry (he thinks Putney), where he had a coach and six, but the country was roused, and the lady was recovered speechless; he fled. The King is very angry, and says if he is taken and the law will hang him, he will not meddle. The Convention in Scotland is broke up, and every thing therein proposed went as Lauderdale would have it. Sir Patrick Holmes is clapt up in the Tolbooth, but the cause is yet not known. On Friday last Mr. Claypoole (one of Oliver's lords) was sent to the Tower for speaking seditiously, some say, others, for being concerned in a plot. (Inclosed is a copy of the King's letter, dated 28 June 1678, to the States of Holland, sent by Sir W. Temple, who was sent to Nimeguen, because of the French practices about restitution of towns.)

1678, Aug. 1. William Fail to Sir R. Verney. Lady Essex goes this day to Dunstable, and Mr. Finch comes thither to meet her, when they will return to London, or by what way I know not, but I heard her say she would dine at Goramby on her return home. . . . There was commission signed yesterday by the King, directed to the Duke of York, Prince Rupert, Lord Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, and others, with power to prorogue the Parliament till the 24th of this August, which I will believe will be presently done; for I am just now going to meet my lord at the House.

1678, Aug. 8. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.— . . . Last week the King sent to borrow 200,000*l.* of the city on the Act, which I think they will endeavour to lend him, but I believe they will hardly reach above half on't. If you think fit of that security, upon your order I'll carry in your money to Guild Hall, and take the usual acknowledgement which the city give; and let me know whether I shall put it in in two of your names or in my name. If it be in a citizen's name, the aldermen of the ward whence the money was sent in will have the greater regard to see it reimbursed. I hear the city took it amiss of the Treasurer that he came not himself to them to borrow this money, but sent a letter by his secretary that he was indisposed.

1678, Aug. 8. (A letter, unsigned, in a different hand, but indorsed as from J. Verney).—On the 4th instant 12 barges were arrived to carry the Duke of York's regiment of horse, which were gone down towards the sea side. The Duke of Monmouth's regiment of foot were just ready to be shipped off the 6th instant, but are now remanded and ordered to repair to their former quarters. Last week a gentleman in Drury Lane (much addicted to painting), boyling his oil himself in order to the making of his colours in oyl, took fire, and is since dead; his father, coming to his help, is hurt. The city have agreed to lend the King 100,000*l.* on the first part of the last Act, at 7 per cent., and 100,000*l.* more in the last part of the said Act, at 8*l.* per

SIR
H. VERNE
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

cent. 'Tis said the Earl of Burford was made Duke of Burford, and the Treasurer Duke of Pomfret, and the Earl of Plymouth the Duke of Plymouth, on the 4th instant, at Windsor.—Foreign news.

1678, Aug. 11. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Says he is going to Tunbridge.

1678, Aug. 22. The same to the same.—Has returned from Tunbridge. Sends Evelyn's Calendarium Hortense, the last edition.—The Duke of Lauderdale came to town last Saturday in pomp. The Duke of Monmouth and Lord Morpeth are returned out of Flanders, whither soldiers are every day going. Yesterday Feversham's regiment of dragoons and Sir John Talbot's regiment of the same went thro' the city to be shipt off, they being part of the 4,100 horse and dragoons lately ordered over.—Dr. Denton is going to Ditton to run a horse match for a plate.

1678, Aug. 29. John Verney to Edm. Verney. The town is sickly, and so is, we understand, the country, especially Kent: at Portsmouth at least 200 soldiers lie sick, but many more in Flanders, whither Surgeon Knight is sent to look after them.

1678, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—News from France.—The forces that were ordered for Flanders, being 27 troops of horse and 12 troops of dragoons, and 9 companies of foot, have been stopped by contrary winds, but are now a shipping off. . . . On Sunday, 1st Sept., died Lord O'Brien, a member for Northampton.—Sir Wm. Swan, Dr. Margetson, Archbishop of Armagh, and the Bishop of St. Asaph are also dead, as our handsome Mr. Sidney, in Flanders, and Sir Sam. Clarke.—On Thursday last his Majesty dined in Buckinghamshire, at Sir George Jefferies' house, who, some say, is to be Chancellor of Ireland, others Recorder of London, and that Sir—Dolben shall be a judge in the room of Sir T. Twysden, who shall have a bill of ease. The King caused Sir George to sit down at table with him and drank to him seven times.—A boy at Smithfield, peeping through the crevices of a booth to see the Elephant, was wounded with a dagger by a soldier employed to look to the door; consequent riot by the prentices. Sir Peter Wych is chosen Resident at Hamburgh in the room of Sir Wm. Swan, lately deceased.—Yesterday ten malefactors were to have been executed at Tyburn; there was a great concourse to see them, but they did not appear.

1678, Sept. 16. The same to the same.—Lord Sunderland is returning from France, some say out of favour; Lord O'Brien's son will stand to be a Burgess for Northampton, and 'tis said will not have any opposition except it be by Mr. Ralph Montagu. Sir Charles Littleton is sick in Flanders. Mr. Pope Danvers, son of Sir Samuel, hath killed one Jackson, of Northamptonshire, for which the Earl of Peterborow has begged his estate.

1678, Sept. 18. The same to the same.—Mr. Tillotson (that lives hard by me), brother to the dean, was well at cards on Saturday till 10 at night and dead on Monday morning early.—The peace is this day to be proclaimed at the Hague. This morning a fire at Limehouse consumed 30 houses.

1678, Oct. 10. The same to the same.—A long letter about Oates' Plot.—Notwithstanding Coleman had timely warning to withdraw the most of his writings, yet sufficient was found to commit him to Newgate.—Mr. Langhorne, one of the councillors of the Inner Temple, a recusant, is committed to Newgate. One White, notorious among those who should have been Archbishop of Canterbury, is dead, not without suspicion of poisoning himself. Friday last a warrant to the Lieutenant of the City to disarm Papists, which was effected, and the arms brought to Guildhall. On Monday Mr. Smith, Mr. Lowers, and another merchant carried their letters from abroad to the Council, reported that his Majesty was dead long before advice could come from hence. On Saturday, the 12th, Sir E. B. Godfrey went out in the morning and said he would in a little time be home; but he hath never been heard of, so 'tis believed some Papists have made away with him. His relations have been with the Council, and some talk of a proclamation coming out.

1678, Nov. 11. The same to the same.—Foreign news.—Coleman's confession.—The murderers of Sir E. B. Godfrey are not yet found. The barber and farrier that first found his cane and gloves are committed to Newgate, being found in contrariety when examined. A child is committed also, being impeached by a young gentleman for offering him 100*l.* to kill an old gentleman, &c. Sir Ellis Leighton was examined on the 6th of Nov., but 'tis kept secret. The French king has made him an abbot, but that monastery may go without their head. The Duke of Monmouth is very circum-spect; he has turned out all Papists he can discover in the army, as well officers as soldiers, and has visited the Tower. Lord Arundel of Wardour will be impeached. The evidence against him will validate Mr. Oates's evidence.—Sir E. B. Godfrey's murder is found out.—Gives an account of Benlow, whose father was a shoemaker at Chepstow, and the story of the murder at Somerset House—Benlow got a good part of the reward for the discovery; his mother persuaded him to return to town and reveal it.—In Somerset House a 100,000 fire balls and grenades were found by Lord Ossory, who searched. He has sealed up the Queen's papers.

1678, Nov. 11. John Verney to Sir Edm. Verney.—The Lord Chancellor looseth in the people's affections by his mealy carriage.—'Tis said he and the Treasurer did one day divert the storm which began to break out through the lips of Shaftesbury, Bucks, Halifax, and London against the Duke; and that lately when Bedlowes came into the Lords' House to tell what he knew of Godfrey's murder, he was awed by the Chancellor.—People talk meanly of him. I hear Lady Danby talks as ill of him as anybody, and saith there's none but her husband stands up for the Protestant religion. But all others think the Treasurer very remiss and suspect his opinion. The Bishop of London has procured that the chapel at St. James' shall be a chapel-of-ease for the people of St. Martin's church, till their new church be finished.

1678, Nov. 28. The same to the same.—Sends three sermons, viz., Bishop of Exeter's, Dr. Tillotson's, and Dr. Stillingfleet's, the last came out yesterday, and before night the whole impression of 4,000 was sold; this day will be the second impression of 3,000. . . . 'Tis said the King has given Monmouth place above all dukes next to the blood royal, and his Duchess next to her Royal Highness. The Commons are somewhat concerned that his Majesty will not give Bedlow a pardon to the present time, his being but to the 1st Nov. Last . . . day Oates' preached the great little lady, whereat the King was not well pleased.

1678, Nov. 28 and 29. Extracts from the Common Council and Copy Articles against Edward Coleman.

1678, Dec. 2 and 3. Ditto.

1678, Dec. 15. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Tillotson's sermon did not sell as well as the others. Three impressions of Exeter's have gone off, and I believe as many of Stillingfleet's. . . . Tuesday Coleman was executed at Tyburn. He denied he knew of any plot, or of Godfrey's death. . . . At Stale's the goldsmiths' funeral were about 300, and some masses said over his grave, for which vanity Justice Scroggs ordered him to be taken up and his quarters set over the city gates. . . . Lord Wharton refused to take the oath because he said it was idolatry to kiss the book. Shaftesbury said he hoped kissing was no idolatry, for if 'twere then they must forbear kissing their wives.

Copy of the King's speech.—Thanks for their care of his person.

The translator of the gazette into French will have his ears cut off in the Pillory for misrendering his Majesty's proclamation for Popish recusants to leave the town. . . . Capt. Stroud is sent for up, and Atkins (a clerk to Secretary Pepys) is sent to Newgate. Some say there were no fire balls found in Somerset House. Yesterday, being Sunday, in the afternoon the Parliament sat about Benlowe's examination.

1678, Feb. 10. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.— . . . Sir J. Williamson is turned out, but is to be repaid what his secretaryship has cost him. Lord Sunderland succeeds him.

1678, Feb. 13. The same to the same.—Some report that Secretary Coventry's place will be shortly engaged by Sir Lionel Jenkins. The Pope's Nuncio would not admit that our ambassador should sign the peace at Nimeguen, unless "Defender of the Faith" were left out.

1678, Feb. 24, East Claydon. Edmund Verney to Sir R. Verney.—I hear the Bedfordshire election cost 6,000*l.* They were 3 days a-polling. But Lord Bruce and his partner lost it by 500 votes, whereat the Earl of Ailesbury, his father, was extremely angry.

1679, May 12, London. John Verney to Sir R. Verney. . . . On Friday night there was a fire at [the] new prison in Clerkenwell, which burnt it down; it began about 12 at night, and was out about 3. The prisoners all escaped but two; the turnkey is fled, so he is believed to have done it on purpose; there were some priests prisoners, who 'tis supposed gained him to it.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

Yesterday being the first Sunday in the term, the judges and serjeants are come to dine with the Lord Mayor, but 3 only of the former, that is, Atkins, Jones, and . . . and 5 serjeants.

1679, May 15. The same to the same . . . 'Tis said Sir Thos. Armstrong spoke to the Earl of Oxford, to endeavour to get the succession to be on Monmouth, but the Earl called him . . . , and said, do you think that I, who have ever been loyal, will now be false, and acquainted the King with it, who chid Monmouth, saying that Armstrong would not say such a thing without his knowledge, but if he were not quiet, he would send him to a place where he should be nothing. This story I believe to be a made story . . . Some say Danby will be tried on Saturday, and the other Lords on Tuesday. The Recorder is to marry my Lady Jones, daughter of Sir Thomas Bludworth.

1679, May 19, London.—The same to the same— . . . Yesterday (between the sermons) the gold fringe and tassels was cut off from the pulpit cloth in Covent Garden church, and lost, so that Bishop of Rochester who preached there in the afternoon, was fain to be content with an old pulpit cloth. The Duke of Bucks hath appeared again this four days. The Duke of York is upon going to live at Breda, because the usage he hath at Brussels is not extraordinary civil. This day my Lady Wentworth goeth over to her mistress the Duchess. Some think the 5 lords will not be tried so soon as Thursday, because the Commons fear if they should be tried before Danby that they may be prorogued, and he escape, which makes them resolve to try him first . . . Secretary Pepys on Saturday lay down his office, and some say Mr. Wm. Harbord succeeds him in it.

1679, May 22. The same to the same. . . My Lord Grey of Rathin died of the spotted fever, and not of the small-pox. Here's a discourse in town of several matches towards, as my Lord Wiltshire to Mrs. Coventry, who is to have 30,000*l.*; Mr. Buckley to the Duke of Newcastle's daughter; Sir Stephen Fox's son to the Lady Margaret Russell; and some talk of my Lady Hen. Wentworth and my Lord Shrewsbury. Dr. Lake, chaplain to the Duke of York, at Brussels, was threatened to be killed: 'tis believed the Bill to disinherit him will be thrown out of the House by his enemies; some of 'em not thinking it reasonable to disinherit a man before he's tried, so 'tis thought they'll impeach him, and hereafter pass this Bill. The army is daily disbanding at Guildhall.

1679, May 26. The same to the same. . . Here-with I send you Mr. Sharpe's sermon; the Bishop of London's was never printed, as I can yet hear of, and for the sheet of blazon, coloured, I have offered 3*s.* for one, but I could not get it under 4*s.*, and so I did not buy it; but in another place I hope to get one for 3*s.*, or thereabouts. Same talk of a courier, come over in a Spanish habit, that has had some hours' discourse with his Majesty, and that 'tis the Duke of York incognito, but I believe 'tis like the other town rumours, false.

1679, June 5. The same to the same.—I cannot tell you the true reasons of the prorogation, but the King went to Windsor, and returned with an altered mind, and then urged the Lords to adhere, which occasioned it, and possibly there may be something in every occasion you write of. But I'm of opinion the heats between both Houses were fomented by our adversaries . . . My Lord Fitz Waters is lately dead in the country. There is likewise dead my Lady (Sands) Holland, by whom uncle Stewkeley gets something per annum. Here hath been much discourse of some letters intercepted from Mr. James Porter (a priest), to his niece's husband, my Lord Straungford, but their contents I know not. Everard hath put out two books, but I have not yet had either of them, but I design to buy them, because I have all of that nature already come abroad, and when the rest of the trials are over, I design to have them all bound up together in one folio. Prance hath also put out a book, in folio as the rest, price 18*d.*, with his picture to it. Everard's books are 6*d.* and 12*d.* 'Tis said an order is passed in Council for the execution of the condemned priests, and that Wakeman, Langhorne, &c. will now come to trial, and that in Council 'twas agreed the Duke of York should not come over. Much talk there is of a new Miss at Windsor, daughter to my Lord Ranalegh.

1679, June 12, London. The same to the same.—'Tis true the Guinea Company were in hazard, and will be so again when the Parliament return to Westminster, for they like a flood break down all, but they might do it on better terms if they please, for the Dutch would give 100 thousand, it may be 200,000*l.*, to vote down that company, which they were going to do for nothing. Alderman Love is a great enemy to us, because some of his fellow secretaries have deservedly suffered for their underhand trading. Mr. Edward Seymour is also very violent, because in the former stock he lost near 400*l.*, and is unconcerned in this. He was a subscriber, but never paid his money, so he envies us, and I believe we fare never the better at this time by having the Duke of York for our governor . . . You will, ere this arrives, have heard of the Scotch rebellion. They are about 8,000 strong, whose declaration is here enclosed; but I fancy this is made for 'em not by them, for I cannot believe them so very sordid as this wicked declaration makes 'em to be. We are raising men again, whereof the Duke of Monmouth goes general; he is to have a regiment of horse, Albemarle another of horse, and Gerrard another, and Feversham a regiment of dragoons. The foot regiments will be under Munmouth, Cavendish, and Gray, and Dunbarton's that is in Ireland, and some say Lord Roberts is also a coll. of foot. The rebels have set up Hamilton's standard, and are commanded by one of that name, and followed by half a score of that family, tho' the Duke and his son be in England. The Militia in Scotland dare not be raised for fear they should join with the rebels: this business hath hindered his Majesty from going to Windsor. On Tuesday the Lady Jones, daughter to Sir Thos. Bludworth, was married to Sir Geo. Jeffereys, the Recorder of London. The same day a French fencing master killed one of the Duke of Monmouth's gentlemen . . . Last week papers were flung about the streets to invite the prentices to meet such a day, and go know of his Majesty the reason why the Popish lords were not executed, and to desire him to call for his Parliament, but these papers were doubtless writ by some discontented masters, not their servants. However, here hath been strong watches kept these holidays, by way of prevention . . . Some of the Papists will be tried this week, but not all, for the evidence is so intermingled with the lords, that should they be tried, all would be known that the secret committee have found out, so 'tis thought the lords will be tried before them.

1679, June 16, London. The same to the same.— . . . On Friday at the Old Bailey were tried 5 priests, viz., Whitebread, Fenwick, Harcourt, Gawn, and Turner, who were convicted, notwithstanding that 16 young students, came from St. Omers (with leave), to invalidate Mr. Oates his evidence; but he brought in such good proof against 'em, of which one of his witnesses is a known Papist, that he was undoubtedly credited at this trial. Some words happened between Judge Scroggs and the Lord Mayor, about people's writing the trial, which the judge forbade anyone to do, by what authority soever set, nay tho' by my Lord Mayor himself, upon which the Lord Mayor bid one write, and the judge disputing it, the Lord Mayor told him he was judge of that court, and they were only his assistants, so Scroggs yielded to him. On Saturday Langhorne was tried and convicted, so the whole six that day received sentence to be drawn, hanged, and quartered. As to the Scotch rebellion, we have heard but little since my last; some saying they increase (and are headed by Scotch, lately French officers), others that they are quelled; but yesterday morning the Duke of Monmouth set out for that kingdom. Our people are so jealous of the Government, that they won't believe but this is a trick to get an army together, and then have no more need of Parliaments; but this the opinion only of some that are out of play. Wakeman was indicted only knight, and he being a baronet (tho' I think his patent was never sealed) a new indictment was made, but he was not tried, 'tis thought because his trial cannot be without the naming of some great lady.

1679, June 19. The same to the same.— . . . 'Tis said the Scotch rebellion is quieted, and that the forces that were going thither are stopped, as are commissions; however, the Duke of Monmouth will call the Parliament together, and settle the affairs of that kingdom ere his return. Langhorne is reprieved, because of the writings that are in his hands of several men's estates. 'Tis reported also that one of the condemned priests is reprieved, and some say Sir George Wakeman will confess.

1679, June 23, London.—The same to the same.— On Saturday last the Speaker Gregory was sworn a Baron of the Exchequer, in the room of Leake, who resigned, so that people begin to talk of a new Speaker, and some think Treby is as likely to be the man as any. From Steins (Staines), we are advised that the country people, being offended at the great number of deer that are in an adjacent park, and that they have very much damaged them in their corn, were got in a body above 200, and for several days together have been destroying all that game. On Saturday, 14th instant, they killed 30 brace of deer, and are resolved to destroy them all. The Scots are not yet quieted, but offer to give the King's forces battle. 'Tis said they are commanded by an old officer of Oliver's, Lieutenant-Colonel Lesley, so that soldiers are shipping off for Barwick or Newcastle, for I suppose they'll not be carried directly into Scotland; but when they come on the borders, if there shall be occasion, they must march on. 'Tis thought as soon as these commotions are quieted, that Duke Lauderdale will be removed from being commissioner of that kingdom, and for the present the Lord Ossory and another lord will be joined in commission with Monmouth to settle the affairs of that kingdom, and to call a Parliament there. Sir Geo. Wakeman will be tried at the King's Bench bar on Wednesday next. Peppys will also be tried at that bar, and Sir Anthony Deane at Southampton, as I hear. Churchill, for beating an orange wench in the Duke's playhouse, was challenged by Capt. Otway (the poet), and were both wounded, but Churchill most. The relation being told the King, by Sir John Holmes, as Churchill thought to his prejudice, he challenged Holmes, who fighting, disarmed him, Churchill. On Saturday, at the Duke's Theatre, happened a quarrel between young Bedlow and one of the novices of St. Omer's, and many swords were drawn, but as yet I have not heard whether any blood was shed in this religious quarrel.

SIR
VENEY,
BART.

1679, June 26, London.—The same to the same.—Some say the Princess of Orange is going to the Spa, others that her Majesty will do the same, while some believe she will return to Portugal. She was last night in the park, very merry. A day or two ago the judges were called to the Privy Council concerning her, but the result of that meeting I know not, tho' I have heard divers reports. Some do question whether Wakeman will be brought to trial whilst she is here, or before Michaelmas. Others say he will plead guilty (and then no evidence will be further examined at his trial), and produce a pardon, but this I do not believe. The Somersetshire Lord Pawlet is lately dead. The wedding between the Earl of Wiltshire and Mrs. Coventry will, in 15 or 20 days, be consummated. On Tuesday night they had a ball at the Lord Coventry's, for the kindred, whereat were Mr. Grimston and Lady Ann, Lord and Lady Brackley, &c. I heard last night that the Scotch troubles were quieted, that 2,000 of the rebels were killed, 1,000 taken prisoners, and the rest scattered, and this with the loss of very few on the King's side; and that the Duke of Monmouth's returning to England. The country people in Surrey are very stubborn in killing the forest deer, and one being taken by the Order of Council, was rescued, and they refused to be assistant to the sheriff, which, if they continue, then the soldiers about Guildford, &c., are to assist the sheriff in his office. One of the country fellows sent word by the messenger that if his Majesty would, he'd stand a trial with him.

1679, June 30, Monday. The same to the same.—. . . I do not hear the reason why Baron Leake resigned, but it is thought Treby will not be Speaker, because being so short-sighted, he cannot see to distinguish members in the House . . . This day his Majesty goes for Windsor, and to-morrow the Queen follows him thither. On Thursday the Council meet him at Hampton Court, when 'tis thought 'twill be determined whether the Parliament shall sit the 14th of Aug. or not. The Duchess of Cleaveland is returning to England whither Sir John Worden came last week. For sheriffs this city on Tuesday chose Sir Wm. Langhorne, Bart. (lately come from India), and Mr. Jonathan Rayman, a brewer. This last holds, the other, I believe, will fine off. Here's a child of 3½ years that is said to speak several languages, and is, by inspiration, to speak something to the King. It lodgeth at an inn in Smithfield, and I believe is nothing but a gull to draw people to the house. I went last night to see it, but 'twas put to sleep some hours before I came, yet there were such numbers of people about the door, that I was fain to press hard ere I could get in, where I found most places taken up with company a-drinking. I have not yet heard anything further from Scotland, but some doubt the truth of the last report, because the letter was not from the general, but from one in the camp. To conform to the late Act of Parliament, that soldiers should not be billeted on victuallers, &c., sheds were built up in the Savoy for the new raised men, and the two regiments that were sent northward had 5,000*l.* along with them to defray their daily expense . . . Father Blundell was last week taken writing, but he tore the paper to pieces as they came in; however, they found 100 guineas upon the table, and another letter about him (some say to the Pope), wherein he saith of the last condemned five Jesuits, had the jury been of Jews or Turks they had been saved, but he confessed them all before execution, and they died very stoutly, without revealing anything.

SIR
H. VENEY
BART.

1679, July 3, London. The same to the same.—The Scotch nation having the symptoms of a fever, marked with rebellion, the Duke of Monmouth hath applied a most fit remedy for such a distracted distemper, which was to let them blood, as more particularly you'll see in the Gazette. One of their sedition—trumpeting preachers was taken (up to the neck in water) with his Bible under his arm with many leaves turned down to the texts that were proper to egg his auditors on in their rebellious humours. Capt. Crofts, who came express from the general, is returned with a letter from his Majesty granting them a conventicle in every town in Scotland, excepting Edinburgh, Glasgow, Sterling, and St. Andrews, but then they must not meet any more in the fields. In the Isles of Orcany a vessel is put in, wherein were 12,000 arms and some French officers, and 'tis believed they were designed (had the rebellion succeeded) for the Whigs of Scotland, or for the Papists of Ireland. From the north of Scotland here's advise that the Marquis of Argile is stabbed by one of his own vassals, who, endeavouring to escape, was taken at Port St. Patrick. The child that I wrote to you of in my last that speaks several languages is carried by my Lord Berkeley to Windsor after the King. I hear now 'tis but a cheat. On Monday was sent to Portsmouth 25,000*l.* to pay off some of the seamen that came lately home with Sir John Norborough. Langhorne desires a longer reprieve ere he confesseth, because he has two sons in Spain which he is afraid will be sufferers if he doth not first get them thence. Danby complained of Cheeke to the King, and he of Danby to the Council, that he kept such ill hours that he could not secure him safe; since which his lordship keeps better supping hours, and bed time. The King is putting down all noblemen's tables, or their allowances for them, and is reducing the number of the grooms of his bedchamber to two or three.

1679, July 10, London.—The same to the same.—. . . This day my Lord Wiltshire is married to Mrs. Margaret Coventry, who brings him 30,000*l.*; great doings is to be at the wedding, and some say the King will be there, and 'tis hoped there will be a cross match, that is between Mr. Coventry and one of the Marquis' daughters. Some say Langhorne hath discovered 68,000*l.* per annum, that the Jesuits have in England, besides a bank in money, and that the King hath sent for his two sons out of Spain, lest they should be mischieved for their father's confessing; but hitherto he saith not anything as to the plot. One Clement, a servant to a Yorkshire kt., is come to town, and before Sir Robert Clayton hath made a further discovery how he (at his master's persuasion and promise of 1,000*l.* reward) was to kill his sacred Majesty, and that 16 or 17 more were employed on the same design. P.S. Saturday Lord Ashton, Sir John Page, Sir Wm. Goring, and Col. Spalding were at the King's Bench bar by habeas corpus; the last was bailed, but the three first sent to prison.

1679, July 11, Friday, London. The same to the same.—Yesterday in council (at Hampton Court) 'twas resolved the Parliament is dissolved, and a new one to convene the 17th of Oct. (I think), and I hope the next will prove neither Popish or phanatical, but the true medium betwixt both, an honest Church of England Parliament . . . Urges his father to stand as kt. of the shire or burgess for some town. . . . My Lord Wiltshire and Mrs. Coventry were, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon yesterday, married at St. Giles' church by my Lord Coventry's chaplain; they dined about 5 or 6, and had as much company as filled all the rooms in their house. I was there till past 11 o'clock to see them dance, which was in the court yard with lights at all the windows and out upon the balcony; they were to go to supper about 1 o'clock . . . Some say the French king will shortly be at Dunkirk to meet there with his forces that are on this side the Rhine, and that the Bishop of Strasburgh makes all the votes he can for the Dauphin to be chosen king of the Romans.

1679, July 14, London. The same to the same.—The proclamation to dissolve the Parliament is not yet come forth, and some believe there's a stop given to it here in London, but at Windsor I could hear of no such thing, for there they are making strong parties, and at Southampton I already declare to stand there, whereof Mr. Ralph Montague is one. . . . Yesterday Sir Gabriel Roberts and I went to Windsor about the Royal African Company's business, about which we had some discourse with Secretary Sunderland, and afterwards with his Majesty. My Lord Chancellor's servants were most there expecting his lordship, for there was to have been some trial between Lauderdale and Hamilton, but the Chancellor not coming 'twas deferred. I there saw after morning chapel the Portugal ambassadors public audience before the King and Queen together. I then saw them both at dinner in public, and afterwards returned for London the same night, and left Sir Gabriel at Wandsworth with his family. . . . I shall buy for you 3 gross of corks and a Whole Duty of Man. I have now got an Oxford blazon for you, in colours, on cloth but its in a frame, so I cannot tell how to send it to you but shall keep it for you. P.S. Here's a talk of one Fitz Gerrard that's come in to discover more of the Popish plot.

SIR
H. VERNY
BART.

1679, July 17, London.—The same to the same.—. . . . I perceive people stand thick for Buckingham; I believe if you would put in with Sir R. Temple you'd carry it, but I will not press you. Sir Richard was on Tuesday at Hampton Court (a council day) and there he desired of my Lord Chancellor that he might carry the writ for that town, and that the county election, which writ he also desired to have, might be at Buckingham. My lord promised he would give him the county writ if nobody else desired it, but if any did, then he would send down a messenger with it to the sheriff, and so the election should be where they could persuade him to have it. The King hath promised my Lord Lattimer that the assizes should be this summer at Buckingham, but Sir Tho. Lee they say got the Duke of Monmouth to beg of the King that they might be at Alesbury, which was accordingly granted; and that story about not dissolving is a very idle report, and I never heard on't before. . . . 'Tis reported that the Marquis of Winchester will be made a Duke, my Lord Halifax, Earl of Halifax, my Lord Roberts, Earl of Truro, and my Lord Brandon Gerrard, Earl of Newbery and Lieutenant-General of the forces in England by patent. The Duke of Monmouth is talked of to be Secretary of Scotland. On Monday Laughtorne was executed, denying all as the rest have done: his friends buried him in the Temple; his back was found to be full of stripes, which 'tis thought was a penance for discovering some of the Jesuits' estates. Wakeman is to be tried to-morrow. Fitz Gerrard that's lately come in is not the right man, so its only a trick to make out some counter plot. 'Tis said the Duchess of York hath a mind to lye in at St. James', and that the Duke may possibly accompany her during this vacation of Parliament. Danl. Arthur, the Popish merchant that was out upon bail, is said to be gone beyond sea, and some say he had a pass which clears his bail. A linen draper and a scrivener are lately broke for much money. I don't hear anything of the costumes being farmed by Sir Nath. Heron.

1679, July 18, London. Will. Fall to Sir R. Verney.—. . . . This day Sir George Wakeman, with three Jesuits, were tried at the Old Bailey, and tho' Dr. Oates and Mr. Bedlow swore heartily against them, the ungodly jury would not find them, or either of them, guilty, which I hear was not disliked by the Court, tho' it was contrary to the expectation of the brethren.

1679, July 21, London.—John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—. . . . On Friday Sir Geo. Wakeman, Corker, Marshal, &c., were tried at the Old Bailey, and acquitted by the jury. All people now rail extremely at Scroggs, at whose house 'tis said the Portugal ambassador hath been seen twice lately, and 'tis reported that great store of money hath been scattered about, where, I know not, but more hath been given to save this man's life than he would have taken to have destroyed the best of Kings. All people judge Wakeman guilty, tho' as the case was managed and turned the evidence could not so positively make it appear so. Sir Robert Sawyer was counsellor for the King at this trial, but his breviate was very defective when sent to him: he stands to be a Burgess for Cambridge.

1679, July 24, London.—The same to the same.—Last Friday, after Sir Geo. Wakeman had paid his fees, he entertained several of his friends at supper; the next day he went to Windsor to see her Majesty, and they say kissed the King's hand; he is now gone beyond sea to avoid being brought again into trouble, tho' not for the same crimes, yet on the same account of the plot. The foreman of the jury designed to stand for knight for Middlesex in this next Parliament, but he hath now so far done his own business that 'tis believed he'd be hissed out of the field should he appear. . . . Yesterday happened a fire in Kent Street, Southwark, which consumed about 10 or 12 mean houses.

1679, July 25, London.—The same to the same.—Last Thursday the Council put off the meeting of the Parliament 10 days longer, that is, to the 17th of Oct., because of his Majesty going to Newmarket. They also put down the project of having 160 or 200 musqueteers to be attending as a garde de corps to his Majesty; and they were all to be disbanded officers, their pay 6s. 8d. per diem, to be paid out of the retrenchments.

1679, Aug. 7, London. The same to the same.—. . . I'm glad there's such feasting at Buckingham; these sudden dissolutions will possibly fill their pockets as well as their heads; both will make 'em very proud. . . . Mrs. Young, a great confidant of Cleveland's, is lately dead. The town is as empty of news as 'tis of people. P.S. Some say the Bishop of Chichester hath excommunicated a great phanatique because that town should not choose him Parliament-man.

1679, Aug. 10, London.—I hear Algernon Sidney (brother to Lord Leicester) an old Parliament Colonel, and Sir Roger Hill are chose at Amersham; Hambden and Blackwell at Andover; Dumblaine and Herbert at Queenborow. . . . P.S. Sir Thos. Armstrong is turned out from being Lieut.-Col. to the Oxford regiment, and forbid the Court for speaking against the Duke.

1679, Aug. 23, Tunbridge Wells.—The same to the same.—. . . I am sorry your high sheriff hath adjourned the election from Aylesbury to Bucks, thereby disobliging the gentry. . . . I perceive Hambden and Wharton are like to be the men again; may they answer the confidence your country puts in 'em. Goodwyn Wharton is chosen at Grinstead in Sussex by the interest of one Mr. Gooding. We hear that Sir Edward Turner at the election pulled Mildmay by the nose, and otherwise affronted him, for which he said he would complain in Parliament; and he farther said that since he was hated by all the gentlemen in that country, he would make them fear him. One of his friends hath since fought Sir Ed. Turner and hath run him through as 'tis reported here. Thursday (Friday) was the election for Sussex, for which stood the two Pelhams and Sir John Fagg. On Monday come fortnight is the choice for Kent; the same three stand as did in the last Parliament, Fane, Deering, and Twisden, and 'tis believed that Twisden will this time out Deering tho' he be joined with Sir Vere Fane, who is sure on't.

1679, Sept. 1. The same to the same. Now people do not cry news books about the streets as formerly, my Lord Mayor having put out a precept to the contrary.

1679, Sept. 4, London.—Wm. Fall to Sir R. Verney.—. . . The Sheriff of Kent being dead, I was sent to Windsor on Sunday last for the King to prick a new one, which was presently done because of the county court on Monday next and the election of the knights of the shire, and for the better performance of so great a work his Majesty is pleased to appoint Thomas Fitch, Esq., bricklayer, to be sheriff; he came from Tunbridge yesterday, and I believe will accept of the office, for I am one of the commissioners to swear him, and have orders to attend him this afternoon. The gazette gives you a true account of the Duke's speech on Tuesday morning, when he surprised the whole court; for Mr. Thin writ the same words from Windsor; where my lord cannot possibly (to his great grief) go to compliment his Highness, having been confined to his chamber with the gout above a week.

1679, Sept. 4, London.—John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The Duke of York came to town on Monday night and lay at St. James', or at my Lady Apsley's, and on Tuesday at 4 o'clock in the morning he went to Windsor to see his Majesty; 'tis said the King wept for joy at the sight of him. . . . I'll see if I can get any more Buckingham ballads, but they are scarce, as is the letter from the freeholders.

1679, Sept. 8, London. The same to the same.—Sir Wm. Smith, after 3 had polled for him, gave it over, being convinced of the disproportion. Sir Wm. Roberts had most voices, near 800, Sir Robert Peyton near 700; Sir Francis Gerrard, 194. My Lord Gray went out of town at the head of Sir R. P.'s party, and at Brandford town end the Duke of Buckingham met him at the head of 1,000 horse for Roberts. For Westminster stands Waller, Poultney, Matthews, Cutler, and Esq.—, a Templar, that keeps the Westminster Courts. . . . Most of the nobility about town have been at Windsor to congratulate his Royal Highness' return and kiss his hand; and amongst the gentlemen Sir T. Armstrong

SIR
H. VERNY
BART.

SIR
H. VERNNEY,
BART.

coming to do it was refused, and the Duke turned off from him. The Duke of Ormond, 'tis said, will be here at the sitting of the Parliament, and the Earl of Halifax succeed him in Ireland . . . His Majesty will go to Newmarket with the Queen, and some believe the Duke of York will continue in England.

1679, Sept. 11, London.—The same to the same. . . . On Tuesday Sir Thos. Player (followed by 100 citizens) went to the mayor and aldermen and made a long speech against the Duke; so the Lord Mayor appointed the Lieutenant to sit as yesterday to order the guards of the city to be doubled; they also (by their speaker) asked the mayor if he had said, that if the King were dead he would immediately proclaim the Duke King; but my lord told them he never said any such thing. Sir T. P. is not commended by his own party for this action, and 'tis believed to be done only to get fame among the people . . . There's a satyr against several named ladies of the town, which J. Ste: [wkesley] hath promised me to send you, else I would have done it, but here enclosed is an idle ballad on Monmouth, &c. The election for Kentish knights was on Monday, and 'twas yielded by all that Sir Vere Fane was one without polling; but the other two candidates, Twisden and Deering, are polling for it, and 'tis believed Deering will carry it. P.S. My Lady Cawley (widow to Willis) is married to Thomas Mompesson, a companion of the Lord Pembroke.

1679, Sept. 18, London.—The same to the same.—Herewith are two books, the Government of the Tongue, and Valentine's Devotions, the 20th edition, they cost half-a-crown. Taylor's Living and Dying is now reprinting, and may be out in 20 days . . . I heard yesterday that there's an order out for the Duke of Bucks, but that's frequent. There were last night bonfires and ringing of bells about the Duke of Monmouth, I believe, for at one I was stopped and desired to drink the King's and the Duke's health, and at another I was asked for money to do it; but because I would not give them any they cried out a Papist, a Papist. The Lord Mayor and Aldermen went to congratulate his Majesty's recovery, the Duke of York was by with others; but they took no more notice of him than of the rest of the Lords, which he resented; 'tis said the King took my Lord Mayor by the hand and welcomed him, at which my Lord Mayor took him by the other hand and shaking both said I thank you, I thank you, several times more; but I can't believe this joy did make him so far forget his distance. Two days since a couple of highwaymen having robbed a countryman, and leaving him his horse, he pursued 'em with hue and cry which overtook them, but they being very stout fought their way through Islington, and all the road along to this town's end, where after both their swords were broke in their hands, and they unhorsed, they were seized and carried to Newgate; 'tis great pity such men should be hanged. Some believe the Papists do, and will supply his Majesty with monies.

1679, Sept. 22. The same to the same.— . . . On Wednesday his Majesty goes to Newmarket, and the Duke of Monmouth for Hamborough, where he will abide this winter, and next spring he means to be in the Poles army against the Turk; his Duchess (at first resolved to go with him) now stays behind, she hath put off 40 servants, being now retrenching. Some say his Royal Highness goes the same day for Flanders. I hear that Sir W. Poulney and Mr. Withings have carried it from Sir W. Waller at Westminster by 150 voices. The election for London is the 7th of Oct.

1679, Sept. 25, London.—The same to the same.—A blacksmith in this street who made casements, &c. for Stow House hath arrested the Quaker that employed him for the money, about 60*l*. . . . The Duke of Monmouth went away yesterday in the afternoon for Utrecht, and His Royal Highness goes with the King to Newmarket and thence to Harwich and Flanders. I know not of any libel on Sir Wm. Sm[ith] but only in the Stoe Monster, and other libels on Sir R. T[emple], wherein Sir Wm. is a little carped at, neither have I seen any of Mr. Wainman; but its the custom now of most elected members to be libelled. Yesterday came out one against Sir John Stonehouse and the Abingdon choice . . . 'Tis said Sir Robert Peyton being drunk at the Royal Coffee House spoke against the Duke, for which a gentleman by cudgelled him. Some endeavours are making to put by Sir Thos. Player from being a member in the approaching Parliament for the city; but I doubt they begin too late to prevent it; 'tis thought Mr. Pilkington will not be chose again. There's no order to apprehend Player, nor any of the others you mention, except Buckingham. Alderman Joliff's eldest son died last July in Aleppo of the plague, and one Englishman more . . . Yesterday my Lord Chandos took his freedom of the Turks Company; he hopes to go ambassador to Constantinople, and so doth Tom Neale. To-morrow comes seven night we have another Turkey Court, when 'twill be considered whether they'll send out a new ambassador or not.

1679, Sept. 29, London.—The same to the same. . . . I am told 'tis Aron Smith informs of Sr. R. T. having been at mass, for which Sr. R. designs to trounce him before the meeting of Parliament. Sr. R. saith this aspersion comes on his visiting Mr. John Digby eleven years past, and Sir R. T.'s friends believe Sr. Wm. S. sets this fellow on work. The city is now strangely divided between the mad separatists, and the Church of England men, but thanks be to God as the latter carried it at the election of sheriffs, so again on Friday, there was another trial for a bridge master's place, the fanatics combined for one of their gang, and when 'twas judged against them by majority of hands, Alderman Hayes and Jenks (two Precious—) demanded a pole, which was granted, but the moderate party carried it by 250, the whole number that appeared was about 1,500.

But next week will be the great banding for Parliament men, many being minded to pass by Sir T. Player and Mr. Pilkington, who stick like glove and hand together; Jenks also aims to be chosen, so does Mr. Box Drugster, who is an honest man; I wish this city would chose no other; if the choice be not so well as it might be, you'll find the reason to be the industry of the non-cons and the negligence of the true Protestants who will miss coming to the election, which the others will be sure not to be tardy in. My Lord Viscount Downe died at his house near Greenwich; his friends have obtained leave that his corpse may to-morrow night be brought into the African House, and the next morning they accompany him thence into Gloucestershire to burial. The Duke of Monmouth on Wednesday night lay at Gravesend, and departed on Thursday morning, when his R. H. left White Hall, and sailed that night from Gravesend. The Duke of Monmouth took leave of his Majesty in Arlington Garden, where the King told him his stay should not be long abroad, and there writ an order for his departure with such pen, ink, and paper as the carpenter there at work could furnish him with.

. . . . This day is the election for Lord Mayor, 'tis Sir Robert Clayton's turn. I hear that about 3 Sundays past, Mrs. Betty Beversham was like to be stole away from her father's house at Holbrooke; the youngster came in his coach and lay on the Saturday at Ipswich, and on the Sunday attempted it, but was prevented by Sir Wm., who caused him to be beaten away. Sir . . . Rich hath stabbed himself, but on what occasion I know not . . . Sir William Drake is retrenching his family, and will live very privately. Montague, a freeman, furnish him with money to pay his debts, and he assigns over a part of his estate to reimburse them, but the settlement making that security good but for his life, therefore he offers 4 per cent. per annum to insure his life, valuing it at 3,000 or 4,000, as much as he borrows, which is for their further security; this to your self.

1679, Oct. 2, London.—The same to the same.— . . . Yesterday was held a Council at Whitehall, whereat was the Lord President; Justice Warcup appeared before 'em and gave an account of some further discoveries. Dr. Oates also further against a person of quality. An instrument is drawing out to pass the Great Seal to disable James Duke of Monmouth from acting as General, and another instrument to pass the Broad Seal, also to disable Charles Earl of Mackelsfield from acting as his deputy general. Sir Peter Wyche, resident at Hamborow, hath writ to his Majesty the danger a great number of his subjects both there and at home are in, relating to their estates in that city, which now is in daily expectance of a blockade, and to intreat him to use some means for their preservation; to second which letter the Hamborow traders have nominated some merchants to go to Newmarket to represent their condition to his Majesty. Here's a story about town of an intercepted letter from France to Ireland, on which people say the King was sent for to town, where a full Council is to be about; but I can make neither head nor feet of this relation. Yesterday, as soon as the steward (or bailiff) had read the writ on Michael's Mount for election in Southwark, a poll was demanded before the candidates were nominated, so they were instantly adjourned to — churchyard . . . The French King is making great sea preparations.

1679, Oct. 6, London.—The same to the same.—The Viscount Downe that I wrote you of was Sir Wm. Ducy,

SIR
H. VERNNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNNEY,
BART.

Bart., and Kt. of the Bath, who bought the Viscounty for his life with which it ends, and his Baronetship with a good part of his estate falls to a gentleman that hath lain this 8 or 10 years in the Fleet for debt. I know no other reasons for the Duke of Monmouth's exile than what were at first talked of . . . Sir Philip Lloyd is suspended by the Council, for what I know not. On Friday last the market-house at Tame fell down and crushed a boy to pieces, so that the coroner was sent for from Oxford, where Brome Whorewood, and Clarke are severe against Papists. Two ships are cast away, the one coming in from, the other going out for, Holland; that coming in was laden with linens, which makes the loss the greater.

1679, Oct. 9, London.—The same to the same.— . . . Monsr. D'Estré was at Jamaica with a considerable fleet, and Schombergh expected with an addition; he desired to wood and water, but the Governor sent him word there were too many of 'em, so he desired to have some pilots sent him on board to steer his ships to some other part of the island where he might do it, which was granted; he pretends to be going to the Havana for prisoners; however, the people in Jamaica are upon duty till he be off their coast. There are lately dead, the Earl of Rutland, the old Lady Cambden, Sir Francis Leake, Governor of the Blockhouse by Gravesend . . . His Royal Highness is going to live at Edinburgh in Scotland. Some say Mr. Serjeant, that was coming over to discover more of the Plot, was cast away in the ship lately lost from Rotterdam, with several other passengers; but I don't believe he was in that ship. On Tuesday night here were some few bonfires made for the election that day made, which are the same 4 members that served in the last Parliament. The States can't yet agree as to a new alliance; some are for defensive but not offensive, Rotterdam for none at all; a few with France, and more with England . . .

1679, Oct. 16, London.—The same to the same.— . . . Shaftesbury is suspended the Council board; some say he made a bold speech on Saturday last at it against the Duke and the Plot, which was carried immediately to the King by Sunderland; some believe Monmouth will be called back, because those goods of his that were laden are taken ashore again, and 50*l.* given to the master of the ship for a satisfaction to him for not proceeding that voyage. 'Tis also said that the Parliament are prorogued (or adjourned) till the 26th of January next, which I conceive to be very bad news if true, for we have not any stores, so that if the French attack us next spring he will find us as the Romans found our ancestors heretofore, naked men, and I fear we may then follow the same fate they did, that is, to be conquered. Two days ago one of the witnesses that appears against Sir Thos. Gascoine, being in Leicester fields had been stabbed; but that he's a crooked man, and having a pair of steel bodies they kept him from the harm. I hear the Duke of Buckingham is beyond sea. The Duchess of York saith she hath not had a happy hour since she went out of England, and therefore she is very unwilling to leave it again; but they say the Duke of York prepares for Scotland, tho' others don't believe he will go.

1679, Oct. 20, London.—The same to the same. The Parliament met on Friday last, and some Lords were commissioned to swear the members; then they went into their house, but were presently called out by the Black Rod to the Lord's House, where their prorogation was read till the 26th of January. 'Tis believed this prorogation was occasioned to hinder the Dutch taking their measures from hence, for they had put off their grand business of the alliance till some few days after the Parliament meeting, to see how the King and they would agree; they also desire the Parliament may sign the Treaty; for this our King was very angry with them. Last week Sir Hen. Capel stood up in Council and desired to know who advised the prorogation; but the King bid him sit down; then he said his family had ever been loyal, and he thought it his duty to speak and advise to the best of his understanding, &c. But the King told him he was not acquainted with the affairs of state abroad, so bade him sit down, which Sir Harry then did. The President was turn'd out (some say) because in the King's absence he frequently called Councils, and was sharp on the Duke, and would have had a petition drawn up to secure him now he was returned hither. Sir Wm. Jones hath lost his eldest son by an accident, thus; he being in a small house, one of the servants laid his hands on the young gentleman's shoulders to vault over the horse, but with his weight squeezed him to death, at which the attorney is so much grieved that he would lay down his place; but I hardly believe that to be the reason, for notwithstanding his grief he is so charitable yet as to afford men his opinion for money. 'Tis also said (that more likely that there are some pardons about passing, which he is loath to have any hand in, as for Lauderdale, Scroggs, Portsmouth, and others. 'Twas reported (but I believe very idly) that Cheek would give up his Lieutenantancy of the Tower, and that Legg is to succeed him. At Hamilton, in Scotland, where the rebels fought, there's now an ill disease like the plague, whereof people die apace, and its imagined to be occasioned by the stench of the dead carcasses who were not buried deep enough; and, besides, many more were killed than was at first talked of, there having been counted 1,745, besides several that were wounded ran to hide themselves in the corn, where they died, and not being presently seen were offensive to the air. My Lady Corbett is made Viscountess of Lechmere in comitatu Bucks.

1679, Oct. 23, London.—The same to the same.—On Tuesday the Duke of York dined with the artillery men at Merchant Taylors' Hall, where were several of the nobility; the Lord Ossory and Feversham walked before the artillery men, who were led up by Sir Jos. Sheldon; the Lord Mayor with his sword, mace, collar of SS., and several of the Aldermen and Recorder walked all in scarlet gowns from Bow Church, where they heard a sermon; the Duke came a little before in his coach, accompanied with Mulgrave, Roxborow, Plymouth, and several others in their coaches and six horses. There was about 200 artillery men, and there are in all near 400 . . . Two men-of-war with several merchant men are arrived (in the West) from Cadiz, richly laden with silver, cochineal, &c. On Monday night the King knighted Sir—Rayman, and Sir Simon Lewes and the sheriffs, and Sir Wm. Russell, a mercer of Lombard Street. 'Tis said the Chancellor will lie down his office, and that there shall be a Lord Keeper, for which office are named either North, Scroggs, or Jenkins, or Augier. The Solicitor General hath refused to be Attorney, so 'tis said now that the Recorder will be in Jones' place, formerly Temple of Ireland. The Earl of Newport is dead, leaving that title to his brother, such another tool as himself. On Monday or Tuesday next His Royal Highness sets out for Scotland, unless his resolutions alter. As to the Tynn business, I have not heard anything this 6 months, for its many months since I have been at Stepney . . . Two ships wherein I was concerned lately went out of England, and being 140 leagues off met with so violent a storm that one is believed lost, for the other saw him in great distress within half a mile of him, and of a sudden could not see her any more, every sea raking her fore and aft, so she is judged lost; the other cutting all her masts by the board, being a very strong ship, at last got into Plymouth much damaged. The captain writes, he saw a French shallop with 50 or 60 men making great signs of distress to him; but he having but 19 men in his ship, and some of them wounded in the storm by the breaking of a gun, he durst not relieve them for fear he should be overpowered by them, so they perished in the storm. P.S. I hear the King hath this day sent for the Governor and Deputy of the East India Company. If so, I suppose 'tis for to borrow money.

1679, Oct. 27, London.—The same to the same.—This day his Royal Highness sets out for Scotland, several of his guards went last week; he was not feasted in the city only by the artillery company on Tuesday last, and there were then papers stuck over the doors of the hall, and in several places on the stairs, that all that came in there that day were Papists, &c., and that Sir Jos. Sheldon had a brother beyond sea in orders, and he was a Papist, &c. Some boys also as the Duke returned cried out, no Y. [York?] no Papist, &c. 'Tis reported that Judge Pemmerton will lay down his commission, also that Ellis and Atkins go out, but how true this discourse is I know not; 'tis also still talked that my Lord Chancellor will make room for another; some say Anglesey, Jenkins, Scroggs, &c. The lawyers took it ill that Sir J. Temple was talked of for Attorney General, as if none in England were fit for it, there were many candidates for it, viz., Soll. Finch, Sir F. Winnington, Sir Robert Sawyer, Sir Geo. Jefferyes, Serjt. Holt, Serjt. Weston, and others, but Levins of Gray's Inn hath carried it.

1679, Oct. 30, London.—The same to the same.—If the King should want money I'm sure he cannot borrow any of the R. African Company, for that's as poor as a courtier, the last Parliament having done their business for 'em, so that we cannot have a penny dividend this year; but we go on paying off our debts,

SIR
H. VERNNEY
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

that if the company be broke nobody may be sufferers but those that are of it. The discourse of the Chancellor's laying down his commission is given over, yet some say he delivered up his right to a pension of 4,000*l.* per annum, which was granted him in case he should be discarded . . . Mr. Tasborow (servant to the Duke) and Mrs. Anne Price endeavoured to buy off Mr. Dugdale, who was to have 1,000*l.* for his charge for half a year, during which time he was to go into Spain, and then return and appear against some Protestants, that the Papists designed to cast the Plot upon, and so to have them hanged, drawn, and quartered. The Spanish ambassador refused to be concerned in this design, saying he might loose his head by it, as one did in Oliver's usurpation; but he would write letters commendatory into Spain for Mr. Dugdale, who, putting off the signing his recantation whilst the Duke was here, he began to be mistrusted; so they went and complained of him to the council, and brought one Mrs. Sheldon for a witness, but he brought such good evidence, having discovered the design all along to some persons of known integrity, that Mrs. Sheldon confessed all, and they impeached Lady Tuke, Mrs. Perkins, and Mr. Tempest, which two last were secured.

1669, Nov. 3, London.—The same to the same.— . . . As to the ship wherein I'm concerned, which was left in such visible danger in the storm, I cannot in many months hear whether she be in safety or not, for she is gone out on a long voyage. The shalop which the other ship durst not relieve was afterwards met by a Jersey ship, who took them in, and they say they (70) were the remainder of 400 Frenchmen cast away (in the same storm) in a French man-of-war of 73 brass guns. I'm sorry for the lives of the men, but wish the French king had 78 such ships in the same condition . . . On Saturday came out a proclamation to have discoverers of the plot come in before the last day of February; after which time no pardon will be granted to any that shall be found guilty of treason or misprision of it. 'Tis said that Willoughby hath made a large confession to the Lord Mayor, who sat up all Friday night with him, and took 19 sides of paper of depositions, which on Saturday his Lordship carried to his Majesty to peruse. There were yesterday in Kingstreet almost as many people as on my Lord Mayor's day to see the rich clothes and jewels worn by the Lady Mayoress, who, amongst others, had a collar of pearl of very great bigness, as I'm told, each as big as the top of one's finger.

1679, Nov. 6, London.—The same to the same.— . . . Sir Robert Payton is shrewdly suspected to be in this late plot against the presbyterians; some say he and Bloud were to be tried and condemned, but then out of remorse of conscience to accuse Shaftesbury, Roberts, Hallifax, &c., a most devilish design, if true, but I can't believe it; however, he was last Saturday turned out of his club, and hath been twice examined before the Council, but is dismissed; he frequented Mrs. Cellier's house much, in whose house lay the St. Omer's witnesses, Willoughby and others.

1679, Nov. 7, London. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney . . . I am just now going to meet Mr. Churchill at the Rainbow Coffee House, he being to meet his kindred this afternoon in Fleet Street . . . Sir Robert Peyton was burnt with the Pope on the 5 of this month. Mr. St. Johns (son to Sir Walter) is to marry Lady Lucy, widow to Sir Kingsmill. Last night Yery Man (the bowler) killed Isaac Bainham, another gamester; they had some words at the Groom Porters, and coming out of Scotland Yard, Bainham drew upon Man, but Man ran him through the heart; he never fled for it.

1679, Nov. 13, London. The same to the same.— . . . 'Tis said the Mayor and Aldermen of York writ up to the Lord Frescheville to know how they should receive his Royal Highness, and that my Lord went to the King to know his pleasure, who said they should receive him as his brother, so my Lord Frecheville dispatched letters by the post, but 'tis thought the Duke entered ere they arrived, for he had no kind reception, neither being met or complimented by the Mayor or Aldermen. A great ship was launched this week which the King named the Burford, that Lord being there with his Majesty. I hear that Sir Dennis Hampson, Witteroug, and Knowles are the three men in nomination for sheriff of your county. . . . Yesterday was a cartload of Popish vestments, beads, &c. found in Holborne.

1679, Dec. 8, London.—The same to the same.— . . . 'Tis generally talked about town that the Prince of Orange will suddenly be here to insinuate himself into the affections of the English, in opposition to Monmouth, who some day will prove his mother's marriage, but I believe this only talk. 'Tis now by most believed the Parliament will sit at their time appointed.

1679, Nov. 20. The same to the same . . . I hear say that Sunday the Duke was at York, was sung in the church (tho' he was not there) the 7th Psalm, beginning at the 15th verse. 'Tis thought that to-morrow the Lord of Essex and Sir Henry Capell will lay down their commissions, who are to be succeeded by Lawr. Hyde, that is to be a viscount, and Sir Stephen Fox, that is to be a baron; 'tis discoursed also that several other Privy Counsellors are going out, some say 6, others 14, and that the two last above-mentioned, with Feversham and Col. Legg, are to be new ones, being recommended by the Duke to be able statesmen. . . . Monday, being Queen Elizabeth's coronation day, there were vast quantities of bonfires about town, but the chief of all was at Temple Bar, over which gate Queen Elizabeth was deck't up with a Magna Charta and the Protestant religion; there was a devil in a pageant and 4 boys in surplices under him, 6 Jesuits, 4 bishops, 4 archbishops, 2 patriarchs of Jerusalem and Constantinople, several cardinals, besides Franciscans, black and grey friars in all habits; there was also a great crucifix, wax candles, and a bell, and 200 porters hired at 2*s.* a man to carry lights along with the show, which came from the Green Yard in great order thro' Moor (or Cripple) Gate, and so along London Wall, then up Hoandsditch, and so on again at Aldgate, from whence to Temple Bar, where they were disrobed and burnt. Sir Edm. Godfrey, on horseback, murdered, in a black wig and pale-faced, and behind him rode one of the murderers. 'Tis believed there were above 100,000 spectators, and most say the King was at Townes' the goldsmiths; 10*l.* was an ordinary price for a room at Temple Bar, where was store of several sorts of fireworks. I think the Templars were at this expense; the Pope's face was of wax and cost 45*s.*; he is put up till next year.

1679, Nov. 24. The same to the same. His Majesty went last week to Windsor (with some workmen) to see the fine new buildings that are lately sunk. Payton was examined again, the 21st, by the Council, and 'tis believed he is very faulty. The King sent for the judges and put some question to them, but they desired 2 days time to consider on't. On Saturday night young Porter, Wharton, and Jack Howe came and broke down Mrs. Willis' balls and called her all to nought, upon which she sent for the constable, but he was so civil as not to secure them; but the next day he went to Lady Diana Porter's, and desired that he might not be a sufferer for his kindness, but if need were, that her son would appear before the justices . . .

1679, Nov. 27. The same to the same . . . There is a satyr come out against the men of the town, wherein two of your friends, Rochester and the Chancellor, are paid off, but 'tis very long and thought to be by Driden . . . Some say a check is sent to the Mayor of York for entertaining the Duke no better; 'twas once talked that the Scotch would not let his guards come into their kingdom, but now I hear no more of it. On Saturday night or Sunday morning died Judge Wild. 'Tis said the Earl of Essex went out on this score; the King had given Cleveland 25,000*l.*, and she sending to him for it, he denied the payment, and told the King he had often promised them not to pay money on those accounts while he was so much indebted to such as daily clamoured at their table for money; but if his Majesty would have it paid, he wish't somebody else to do it, for he would not, but willingly surrender his place; at which the King replied, I take you at your word; and 'tis thought that L. Hyde made no scruple of doing on't, for that Duchess was ever his friend and kept him in. She is arrived at Paris . . . Most say this last meal-tub plot was contrived by the Earl of Danby the time that he absconded before he delivered himself to the Black Rod; this Dangerfield swears. Mr. Dugdale is gone post into Staffordshire, with power to bring up some that tampered to fetch off his evidence.

1679, Dec. 1. The same to the same . . . I know not which Wharton it was that serenaded Mrs. Willis' balls, &c., but I am told 'twas one of those that is a parliament man, so it must lie between the two eldest. . . . The King has taken all the D. of Monmouth's places from him, and bestowed them thus: the Earl of Mulgrave, Governor of Hull and Lieutenant of Yorkshire, East Riding; Albemarle, Captain of the Guards; the Master of the Horse is not yet bestowed, but lies between the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of Plymouth. On Saturday morning, or the night before, a Privy Counsellor met with a message from the King to

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

bid Monmouth immediately begone from the Cockpit and leave England, but the Duke returning his answer in a letter, the King would not see it. 'Tis said he will not go out of England; but if his Majesty will command him to the Tower or any other prison in England he'll willingly go to it, else his thoughts are to go and live at More Park privately. Abundance of people visit him. Nell Guin begg'd hard of his Majesty to see him, telling him he was grown pale, wan, lean, and long visaged, merely because he was in disfavour; but the King bid her be quiet, for he would not see him. The Duke of York, 'tis reported, will be here in a few days; some say he was sent for 3 or 4 days before Monmouth came back, which was on Thursday in the night when some bonfires were made for joy, but on Friday night bonfires were all over the town for joy of his return, which tokens of kindness from the people 'tis supposed doth him no good at court . . . Monmouth was called beyond sea, general of the rebels, and 'tis said there were attempts made on his life. Lady Hobart told me the Commissioners of the Treasury were weary of their places, and named Fox, who she thought would not hold it long. Sir Thomas Lee was on Saturday to visit Monmouth, but Nell Gwyn and Sir Stephen Fox being there before him, Sir Thomas could not see his Grace. On Friday night the Lord Chancellor's coach was stopped at the bonfires for money to drink the D. of Monmouth's health; he spoke roughly to them, but they answered him in the same language; so he pulled out a shilling and gave them, with which they said, tho' 'twas so little, they'd have it out in ale. By his liberality the people take notice of his good will to that Duke. Certainly he had better have given half a piece or more.

1679, Dec. 4. The same to the same.

1679, Dec. 15, London. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—Yesterday sen'night the Duke of Monmouth was at St. Martin's Church; when he came in all people shewed him much civility by rising up, and some cried God bless the Duke of Monmouth. I heard say that he then and there received the Holy Sacrament. 'Tis said the Duchess of Portsmouth sent to the Attorney-General to draw up a patent for the Duke of Richmond to be Master of the Horse; but the Attorney-General sent her word that the Duke of Monmouth having given a valuable consideration for his place, it could not be taken away from him upon his disfavour only, unless something were laid to his charge whereby to forfeit it; so the patent is not yet made.

1679, Dec. 12, London. John Verney to Sir Ralph Verney.—All the town talk is of the prorogation of the Parliament till Nov. next, and 'tis now believed this Parliament will never sit. 'Tis said that my Lord Stafford a fortnight since asked the Lieutenant of the Tower what the King meant to do with them (meaning the prisoners) by proroguing the Parliament till Nov., by which it seems tho' they be prisoners they had better intelligence than others abroad, nay than most of the Privy Council. I suppose now we shan't need fear a French war, for doubtless the two crowns have a good undertaking between each other whatever the people have. The St. Lucar merchant, a ship laden with Zante currants, belonging to the Houblons, was cast away at the mouth of the Channel on Silly; the Houblons loose at least 7,000*l.* by it, but they are a company of rich brothers. Mr. Churchill goes to-night out of town, and I am going to find him out in the market at Smithfield.

1679, Feb. 5, East Claydon. Edm. Verney to Sir R. Verney . . . Election news.—At Buckingham I hear Lord Latimer lay all night with Mr. Rogers, and danced all night with the bargesses' wives, and coaxed with them nightly, telling them how welcome his wife would make them when she came down. Sir Richard Temple did the like and Sir Peter Tyrrell did no less.

1679, Feb. 6. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Dean and Peps are chosen at Harwich.—News from Aleppo; a fire burnt 3 or 400 shops.—The same letters tell that Sir Thos. Bludworth's eldest son died by the inward breaking of a vein, and that Alderman Burdett's second son died by accident. He was coursing; the hare went into a hole; he hearing the hare squeak, thought a dog was there, and the hare within reach, and put in his hand, which was bit; he went home and had doctors, but died at six in the afternoon.

1679, Jan. 12. John Verney to Edm. Verney.— . . . Lord Pembroke being in a balcony in the Haymarket with other gentlemen some blades passed by and fired at him, but missed him and killed another. The truth of this I will not vouch, but was told so.

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.

1680, April 23. John Verney to his father Sir R. Verney.—'Tis said that Mr. Jenks is committed for speaking too largely; 'tis sworn that when Sir W. W. was turned out of the commission of the peace, he said His Majesty had put out one that would do justice, and put in one in his room that would do none, or words to that effect. Sir Job Charleton is come to town and desired to know of his Majesty what crime he had committed to be turned out of his justiceship of Chester. The King told him not any, but he had a mind to make him a judge. Sir Job refused, saying he was too old, and desired to remain in the place he was in, which his Majesty said he should, but 'tis believed Sir G. Jefferyes at court is so prevalent that he will be invested in that office; some say the King is angry with Charleton for refusing to be a judge . . . 'Tis said all the intelligences will be put down, and Harry has already left off publishing his at the judge's desire, for which some say his imprisonment shall be remitted . . . Yesterday we (Levant Company) chose an ambassador for Constantinople; there was a ballot, six were put up,—Lord Chandos, Sir Thos. Thinn, Mr. Neale, Major Knatchbull, Sir Phi. Matthewes, Sir Richard Deereham.—Lord Chandos had 72 voices, Sir T. Thinn 55, so that his Lordship was chosen. We hope his Majesty will confirm him, tho' he was one of the petitioning lords.

1680, April, 26. The same to the same.—Several members of the Turkey Company went to Windsor, and the King approved of Lord Chandos to be Ambassador to the Grand Signor.

1680, April 29. John Stewkeley to Sir R. Verney.—I dined at the Rolls on Tuesday, and the Master coming in from the Lord Chancellor told Mr. Keek and me (who only were with him) that the vulgar sham is, out of doors, that the Parliament will not be dissolved but prorogued till October, when they shall sit a continuous sitting. In the meantime endeavours will be used to enter into foreign alliances, viz., with Holland, Brandenburg, &c., with this, that he desired the Master to declare it publicly, for it will be found so. Sir Gilbert Gerrard was sent for and appeared at the board on Monday night, and declared that he never knew of any such inclosed writing in a box that was not to be opened until —, and being further asked whether he would take his oath, he stood upon his honour, and seemed to be unwilling to do that. He was told the King expected and required it, which he did accordingly.—Last night Lord Mograve's page quarrelled with the gentleman of his horse; they went out and fought, and the page was killed. On Tuesday the King went to Newmarket; he dined at Audley Inn [], treated at night by the Duke of Albemarle.

1680, May 6. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Our general ships are arrived at Plymouth from Scanderoon —twas my ill fortune to make insurance the day before their arrival, but it cost me but 12*l.*; they come to a miserable market. I think young Mr. Cheyney is this day married to Mrs. Pierrepont.

Copy of bond of John Verney of London, merchant, to Ralph Palmer, of Little Chelsea, Esq., in 4,000*l.*, on a marriage between John Verney and Elizabeth Palmer, eldest daughter of Ralph Palmer.

1680, May 17. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—I have not heard to-day how his Majesty does, but I think hitherto he has had his fit every day; 'tis said he takes the Jesuits' powder. Yesterday Sir Robert Viner and Sir Joseph Sheldon (with whom was my cousin J. Cotton) went to Windsor to see his Majesty.—Some say he will be in town to-day.

1680, May 20. The same to the same.—About his wedding.—Mr. Palmer will have it at Chelsea Church. He (J. Verney) was to have a store of trimming on one suit to furnish the company with favour, which he thinks are 90 odd knots in his wedding suit.—On Tuesday there was a great hailstorm; I took up several hailstones that measured 6 inches about, and weighed 2 oz.

1680, May 27. The same to the same.—I am this morning to Westminster Abbey to meet Mrs. Elizabeth Palmer, to be married in Henry VII. Chapel, by Dr. Adam Littleton, very privately in our old clothes—none at it but my father, mother, brothers and J. White.—Thence we go to the Rummer, in Soper Lane, whither we invite them to dinner.

n.d. The same to the same.—Nell Gwynne's second son is dead in France. There is a report that H.R.H. will go to settle the affair at Tangier, but I believe it is only a jest. But Lord Mulgrave goes general of the forces thither. 'Tis said Sir Thos. Isham is this day or yesterday married to Mrs. Bab. Chiffinch.

1680, June 21. The same to the same.—On Saturday or Friday last Reading made a motion against Dolben

SIR
H. VERNET,
BART.

and Jones, for pronouncing sentence against him against Magna Charta, &c., for which impudence he had his gown pulled over his head and hung over the bar: fined 500*l.*, 3 years' imprisonment, and to find security for good behaviour for 7 years. —Some say the lords in the Tower put him on to this.

1680, June 30. The same to the same.—On Saturday ten lords (Huntingdon, Gray, North, &c.) and 10 commoners (Thos. Wharton, Thos. Thinn, Sir Scrope How, Lord Candish, Lord Russell, &c.) met at the Court of Requests, and designed at the King's Bench bar to give in an information to the grand jury of Middlesex, that the Duke of York was a Papist (and some say they designed to accuse him as a traitor, for being reconciled to the church of Rome, under an old statute), and they went to Jones about this or some other point, who told them that 'twas not law). But the judges having some private notice of their design called the grand jury, and dismissed them for this term. They told the judges that many weighty matters lay before them; but the judges would not believe them, but discharged them. On Monday several of the persons above mentioned went to Windsor with a petition for the sitting of the Parliament. Seeing Lord Cavendish His Majesty asked him how he that was banished his sight dare come there. My Lord told his Majesty that he had been pleased to dismiss him from his Majesty's service, but he could never dismiss his loyalty and from being a good subject, and then spoke about the sitting of the Parliament; but his Majesty in great anger turned away and went from him. The next day (Tuesday) his Majesty came to town and then sent for the two Lord Chief Justices and the Lord Chancellor, but I know not for what. . . . His Majesty returns not to Windsor till to-morrow.

1680, July 1. The same to the same.—Yesterday Shaftesbury and the rest, to whom were added Sir John Cope and Sir Rowland Win and others, to the number of 26 or 27, went again to Westminster with their information, but the grand jury were dismissed ere they came by an hour, which makes some people think there's a false brother amongst them. 'Tis said Shaftesbury told the judges they did not according to law to dismiss the grand jury as they did; and that Raymond stood up and answered, he thought he understood law as well as his Lordship. Here has been great discourse of a coadjutor to the King; others say the Duke of York will be made Lord High Constable of the Realm. . . . As I came along the river I see the King's barges are fitting to carry him this day to Windsor. . . . Miss Hide's business will go against [her?], Emmerton the parson swearing he did not hear one word that she said (when married).

1680, July 5. The same to the same.—I hear that this day the Duke will be presented at the sessions (at Hix's Hall or the Old Bailey) by the associated noblemen and gentry. . . . There is a terrible answer to the King's late declaration about the succession come forth of about 3 sheets of paper; they are thrown into coaches, and one of them dropt at the King's feet at Windsor as he was walking in the court; supposed to be flung by somebody out of Prince Rupert's tower, which is higher than the rest.

1680, July 5. The same to the same.—There is some talk of the Duke going for Ireland, and that the Lord Chancellor will resign and Scroggs succeed; I believe neither. On Friday, Carr, that writes the Popish Packets, was tried for writing about a year ago in one of them against the Lord Chief Justice, under the name of Killmadoxe. Sir F. Winnington made a learned speech in Carr's defence, and when he had done the people hum'd. Scroggs told Carr that hum would do him no good. When the jury returned Jefferies said unless they found the prisoner guilty they had humming consciences. Sir F. Winnington said if they found him guilty they had popish consciences.—They found him guilty.

1680, July 8. The same to the same.—Thinks the associated lords and gentlemen did not on Monday present the Duke to the grand jury, because they had no confidence in that inquest, there being several of them officers, three or four of the Chancery, and the rest of their opinion.

1680, July 15. The same to the same.—There is a great striving for sheriffs, and they are now polling at Guildhall for Bethell and Cornish, the two fanatics that were lately chosen, but had not then received the sacrament. Now they have, so that party stick to them in opposition, Sir Wm. Russell, a mercer, Mr. Nichol, a draper, and Mr. Box, a drugster. . . . I hear that yesterday the King and Council sent for Mr. Jenkins,

Dr. Jacob, and other non-conforming ministers, when they were told they were connived at contrary to law, yet they had been busy promoting petitions, &c.

1680, Aug. 1. The same to the same.—. . . Sir George Jeffreys behaved very ill at Kingston Assizes, where passed some words between him and Judge Weston on the bench. Jeffreys is extremely cried out on about Justice Doughty's being found guilty of murder. Some say he and Mrs. Wall, the Duchess of Portsmouth's woman, lay their heads together to have it so. Others say he and Stroud, the bailiff of Westminster, agreed it. Either was very bad, if true.

1680, Nov. 1. The same to the same.—Friday being Lord Mayor's day, the King was invited to the feast, but excused himself, the Queen being ill. The Duke of Monmouth (accompanied with prayers and shouts of the people for long life), Lord Grey of Wark, Mr. Thinn, and others came. . . . Signor Francisco being called into the house told them that the Portugal ambassador offered him 50,000 pieces of eight to kill Oates, Bedloe, and the Earl of Shaftesbury, and on his refusal he ran the risk of his own life. Another great person (nameless) he was desired to kill, but guesses it to be Justice Arnold.

1680, Nov. 18. The same to the same.—After speaking of the debates in the House of Commons, he says Halifax was much too hard for Shaftesbury, who was never so outdone before. There's talk of a divorce.

1680, Nov. 20. The same to the same.—Lord Hunsdon is like to be in some trouble for drinking (at the Devil Tavern) confusion to all that were for passing the Bill against the Duke of York.

1681, May 2. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Lord Lumley is made an Earl, I suppose 'tis an Irish one, and some say Prince Rupert in his last sickness owned his marriage.—(On the same paper Edmund Verney says he wonders that Lord Lumley hath more honour heaped on him, as that brave Prince Rupert has owned his marriage (I guess with P.H.), if so, his son is next heir after him to the Palsgrave, for he has no child nor is like to have any by his wife.)

1681, May 16. The same to the same.—'Tis said Halifax is to be Marquis of Dorchester, Temple, a lord, Cheney, a Scotch viscount, and Sir — Grimes the same.

1681, May 26. The same to the same.—As for iron there is Swedish, Spanish, and English iron; 'tis of the first sort we sent to Guiney.

1681, Nov. 26. The same to the same.—Some say Lady Ogle is returning to live with Mr. Thin, her husband, and all that is adjusted after the proctors gave it against her.

1682, April 10. John Verney to Edm. Verney.—All the court is now in town, and on Saturday night Whitehall was so thronged with visitants that there was no room for mean people. . . . The same evening bells rung and great store of bonfires, in some of which were burnt the covenant on a cross—there was good drink, squibs, and other fireworks. Whether the like was in the city he knows not; he thinks it was for the King's return.

1682, April 24. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—. . . He was at Sir Peter Lelys on Saturday last.

1682, May 1. John Verney to Edm. Verney. . . . Every one that hears of Dr. Rat. admires that coz. Denton would send a second time to so careless a physician, for certainly if no other Dr. in Oxford could please him, he had better send to London than to be valued under a bottle of wine, or the seeing of a horse run.

1682. Edm. Verney to John Verney.—Dr. Ratcliff, I hear, intends to set up in London after he has taken his degree, which will be next Oct. at Oxford.

1682, June 5. John Verney to Edm. Verney.—Last Wednesday were fought two duels, viz., the Duke of Albemarle and Sir Walter Clarges against Lord Gray and Col. Godfrey. This last disarmed Sir Walter and ran to join with his principal, swearing to the Duke that unless he delivered his sword he'd run him into the guts. There being no remedy (being two to one) the Duke delivered; here the Wh. . . . [Whigg] had the better on't. The occasion was this, Gray being in a gunsmith's shop took up a gun which had much work on it, and said, "What fool owns this?" or to that purpose. The gun was Albemarle's, one of whose footmen being by told the Duke, on which a challenge was sent. Two days after three blades came into the Wh.'s coffee-house, and sat down by Lord Colchester, Sir Thos. Armstrong, and several others, and talked much of Albemarle's gallantry; but this discourse not being regarded, they rose, and going out one of the three turned and said, if any there spoke reflectingly of the Duke.

SIR
H. VERNET,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.
—

of his carriage in the late duel, he gave them the lie, and swore they three would fight with any three of them, but the Wh. . . . let them go away without answering them.—The other duel was between Sir Justinian Isham and Mr. Vincent (son to Sir Francis); the latter I hear was wounded . . . and they say will be called to account for fighting within the King's park.

1682, June 12. The same to the same.—Last week a duel was fought between Mr. Babor and Mr. Kirke, both were wounded. A Court of Verge sat at Windsor, when two of the Queen's cooks were tried for poisoning a turn broche, who is in a lingering condition; he expected against a jury of the family servants, so the cooks were tried by another whereof the King's plumber was foreman, and found them guilty.—No judgment yet. At the same court Sir Justinian Isham and Mr. Vincent were tried; it did not appear but that they fought without the park, in the fields.

1682, July 20. The same to the same.—To-day the Morocco ambassador departs for his own country. Yesterday he came from New Hall and was at the play, where there was a very full house to take their leave of him.

1682, Aug. 10. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Sir Leo. Jenkins is talked of for Chancellor.

1682, Oct. 9. The same to the same.—I hear Lord Castletown has killed a gentleman in his own garden. The gentleman died next day acknowledging he provoked his lordship highly to it.

1682, Oct. 23. The same to the same.— . . . If Radnor would have left his place for 7,000*l.* 'tis believed Halifax would have been Lord President, and that Seymour might have been Privy Seal, but unless the first had been, the second would not be suffered because of place. So Seymour is retired into the country. We shall now shortly see whether the Privy Seal will be in one man or in commissioners hands. Phil. Temple, the maid of honour, spoke to the Lady Conway reflectingly of Portsmouth, who, being by Lady Conway made acquainted with it, went crying to the King, who complained of it to the Queen, and said he would stop Temple's salary for it.

1682, Oct. 26. The same to the same.—Sir W. Prichard was yesterday declared Lord Mayor elect, and Sir R. Clayton took off his gold chain and put it about Sir William; it being usual for those that have past the chair always to do so to the new elected Lord Mayor. Sir William then made a short speech admonishing him to union, and that his actions should conform to the established laws.

1682, Oct. 27. The same to the same.—The Privy Seal was yesterday given back to the Marquis of Halifax.

1682, Oct. 30. The same to the same.—The Duke of Ormond is made Duke of Ormond in England, and it is believed Worcester will be the next made duke. Several of the companies of London will not this day accompany the new Lord Mayor to add to the show. There is a discourse that the King would dine in the city, but since he considers how poor the chamber is, he will not feast on orphans charge.

1682, Nov. 2. The same to the same.—'Tis reported that Sir Thos. Player is gone after Shaftesbury.

1682, Nov. 6. The same to the same.—Sir Thos. Player was last week at the Council Board, about 16,000*l.* in his hand for the redemption of slaves at Algiers, which 'twas supposed he had put to other uses; but I am told he assured their lordships that all was in cash (excepting some paid out according to his account). . . . Some believe they have a mind to have the money into the Exchequer . . . Some Papists talk that Sir Wm. Coventry (formerly the Duke's secretary) shall have the Great Seal, and say he being uncle to Halifax, the Great and Privy Seal being in the hands of two so nearly allied, his Majesty's affairs will go smoothly on.

1682, Nov. 9. The same to the same. . . . Yesterday Dr. Denton and Frank Drake dined at Sir R. Temple's, where they discoursed of Barton's being pilloried, but Sir Richard said not a word of his three servants. . . . Lord Mulgrave for writing to Lady Anne is discharged the Court; his regiment is like to be bestowed on Chesterfield; his government of Hull on Lord Windsor; his bedchamber place on Ossory or Faversham. Some believe his proceedings so far as to spoil her marrying to anybody else, and therefore the town have given him the nickname of King John. . . . Capt. Godolphin, the governor of Scilly, was this week killed at the Cockpit ordinary, in Drury Lane, by Mr. Duncombe, who also received three wounds. Godolphin was a very wild young gentleman, and tho' he received the Holy Communion lately of Dr. Tenison and usually came to church, yet 'tis said as he lay dying none but papists were in his room, and all were turned out excepting two priests.

1682, Nov. 16. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—'Tis said Lord Mulgrave has written to the King to know the reason of his displeasure. Some report Lord Hyde got him in disgrace because he was too great an admirer of his viscountess, and Mulgrave obtained his ends by her friendship with Lady Anne's governess; but I believe this is but to salve the repute of the Lady Anne, to whom some say Lord Arran (son to Hamilton) makes his addresses; neither do I believe that another subject will so soon attempt on that which has cast down a wiser man.

1682, Nov. 16. The same to the same.—The Mandamus is sent into the city. . . . I hear that Williams said at the King's Bench (on the Quo Warranto business) that 'twas in vain to ask for longer time to give in their answer because he expected no favour from them, therefore, he would return his Put in to-morrow (I think that was the word), and bade them do what they would at law.

1682, Nov. 20. The same to the same.—There was a great fire at Wapping this night.

1682, Nov. 23. The same to the same.—'Tis believed the fire has consumed above 1,000 houses at Wapping, a mile in compass being burnt down. Sir W. Warren is the greatest sufferer both for houses and stores of wood, as masts, deals, pitch, tar, &c. . . . I think the penny post was yesterday worsted at Westminster Hall by the Duke of York, whose case against Alderman Pilkington is to be heard to-morrow. . . . On Tuesday the widow Sinderfield [Siderfin] pleaded her case singularly well against Capt. Gifford [Clifford], who also made a speech like an Irishman, as he is.

1682, Nov. 27. The same to the same.—On Friday, the jury gave 100,000*l.* damages to the Duke of York against Alderman Pilkington for scandalum magnatum. . . . On Friday afternoon Mr. Henry Glover (lately a merchant's man, but since a great gamester, and a very handsome genteel young man), was killed in a duel in the middle of Covent Garden square, by Capt. Lesley. Both pretended to a gentlewoman (for a wife) of 5,000*l.* or 6,000*l.* fortune. Lesley was the first that courted her, but she preferred Glover; this occasioned their fighting. The night before Glover had won 300*l.* at the Groom Porters, and when he was killed there was found about him 100 guineas and a gold watch, &c. His father lives in Worcestershire, and has 3 or 400*l.* per annum, and no other son. Some talk as if an indictment would be brought against the Earl of Shaftesbury, but term is now so near spent, I don't believe it. By an order of the Court of Aldermen, all hawkers are forbid to haunt the streets and coffee-houses with their pamphlets.

1682, Nov. 30. The same to the same.—Nov. 28, H. R. H. has entered an action of scand. magn. against Mr. Arrowsmith, an apothecary in the city, for words spoken at his own table at dinner, when the Duke's health was begun; there were but two dined with him, one of whom was a country customer who brought the other as his friend, which last is the witness, as I hear it. . . . Abundance of new lords: Worcester made Duke of Beaufort, Burlington to be Duke of Cumberland after Prince Robert's death, who is now ill; Camden an Earl; Hide to be Earl of Rochester or Falmouth; Noris, Earl of Abingdon; Townsend, Earl of —; Legg, a viscount; and Col. Churchill, a baron; Sir Thos. Thim, a lord. I wonder neither Stowe nor Ratcliffe. Nov. 29th. The Prince died this morning at 6 o'clock; some say he sent his garter a day or two ago to the King, desiring Lord Burford might have it with his daughter by Pegg Hughes, to which last two he has left all his jewels and personal estate, and arrears due from his Majesty. The Earl of Craven is his executor. . . . His estate in Germany, which is but small, he has given to his son by Lady Francis Bellemont, an Irish lady. . . . Nov. 30th. A fire this morning near us.

1682, Dec. 4. The same to the same.—Sir Thos. Fitch hath taken of the city Little Moor Fields to build on, and he obligeth to pave the way and put broad stones and stumps before the houses, which houses shall be come to by an ascent of 5 steps, and the first floor 13 feet high, with coach houses and stables to each house, so that there will be fine and airy living for merchants and the better sort of citizens. He takes it by the foot as I am told. I think the Prince was buried on Friday night; but if he was, 'twas no hindrance of the Court going to see a play.

1682, Dec. 11. The same to the same.—On Saturday, six prentices, &c. stood two in Cheapside, one in Cornhill, &c.; before, not in, the pillories for the riot on the

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.
—

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

5th of Nov. night. Not a pin's head was flung at them. . . . I am told somebody in a tavern sent a bottle of wine to the two in Cheapside to drink the Duke of Monmouth's and Lord Shaftesbury's health.

1682, Dec. 14. The same to the same.—Last night Mr. Cockain told my wife that there were six doctors with the Lord Chancellor, and they did not believe he would live till this morning. I am sorry if his lordship should die, for that he is your very good friend.

1683, March 31. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The East India Company have, I hear, been with the King about the loss of Bantam; they desire that his Majesty will send 12 ships-of-war thither, or else they desire to have letters of reprisal, which, I believe, he will not grant neither.—Lord Lansdowne has obtained leave of his Majesty to go into Hungary as a volunteer. . . . Robin Nelson, nephew to Sir George Roberts, on Thursday married Lady Theophila Lacy, daughter to the Earl of Berkeley . . .

1683, April 12. The same to the same.—The Spittle Show was this Easter kept at Bow Church, and was very mean to what it used to be.

1683, April 21. The same to the same.—Emerson's business is at last ended with his consent that Lord Dunblane shall be Mrs. Hide's husband, paying him about 20,000*l.*; she hath brought his lordship a son.

1683, April 26. The same to the same.—On Tuesday as the Lord Mayor was hearing causes, the coroner, by virtue of the King's writ, took him into custody, together with Sheriff North, Sir W. Turner, Sir Simon Lewes, Sir Henry Tulse, &c., at the suit of Papilion, Dubois, and other citizens . . . In the meantime an officer laid hold of the coroner in an action on a bond, and took him to the compter; it was compounded, but forgot to be took off the file. The Lord Mayor commanded a proclamation to be made to know whose prisoner he was; no one answered; they all departed. Next morning the coroner returned, but the marshal would not admit him.

1683, May 14. The same to the same.—There is a report of 50 muskets being found in Lord Gray's house.

1683, May 17. The same to the same.—Lord Salisbury is relapsed by eating of buttermilk. . . . The Earl of Danby appeared at the King's Bench on a habeas corpus, but was remanded to the Tower. . . . Dick Garth, a great crony in Sir John Cotton's family, is made one of the 6 clerks.

1683, May 31. The same to the same.—Albemarle House is begun to be pulled down.

1683, June 4. The same to the same.—There is making (about Westminster, in the Artillery Ground, I think,) a place to fight with the bull; 'tis a Spanish exercise, much used among the gentry of that kingdom.

1683, June 4. John Verney to Edm. Verney.— . . . The Duke of Monmouth is very well, but his coachman was two or three days since beaten severely by some guardsmen; the coachman was in a shop buying a hat, in came Lane, a life guardsman, and asked him why he wore a Whig's livery, a son of a wh— livery, a tra— livery. Welch, the coachman, gave Lane a box of the ear, who drew his sword. Welch disarmed him, and made him on his knees ask forgiveness. Then Lane returned with others; some kept the door, the others went in and beat Welch, striking the latter's shears into his head and face. The Duke has complained to the King.

1683, Aug. 27. The same to the same.—Lord Dartmouth's design is still a secret; but 'tis said his rendezvous will be at Tangier, where he will have 25 sail of ships in his fleet. Mr. Pepys is gone as his lordship's secretary, Dr. Ken as his chaplain, and Dr. Turnbull, the civilian, is also gone with him.

1683, Sept. 3.—About a week since the Duke of Somerset's little boy died.

1683, Feb. 25, Oxford. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—He is at Oxford, and is fitting up a chamber for his brother Palmer.—Mentions the Gravel Pits, Kensington.

1684, March 30. The same to the same.—Lord Mordaunt, Lord Brandon, Lord Gerrard, Mr. Fitzgerrard, Sir Rowland Guin, and others, mean to be at the opening of the Spanish campaign in Flanders. The Duke of Monmouth has ordered several saddle horses to be sent into Flanders to him. . . . Of the seven that were killed last week, a squeezing for tickets at Mr. Pearce the surgeon's, a man, his wife, and three children were five. . . . Some say 500 horse will go out to meet Lord Chief Justice Jeffreys as he returns from his circuit, so well is he beloved.

1684, April 18. The same to the same.—The Ham-burgh Company are setting his Majesty's effigies in the middle of the Old Exchange, with an iron rail about it.

1684, April 19. The same to the same.—Lord Halifax is Chancellor to the Queen, and Sir James Butler is Governor of St. Katharine's Hospital; both places belonging to the late Lord Brouncker.

1684, April 24. The same to the same.—Half-a-dozen English have fought a duel in Flanders, of which, I hear, Lord Purbeck is killed; George Roberts and some others are wounded.—Another duel was lately fought near St. James between two Tangier officers; neither were killed but both were wounded.

1684, May 8. The Duchess of Modena asked the Pope, and on his refusal the Duke of Tuscany, for a galley to carry her from Marseilles to Civita Vecchia: they refused, because of the expedition against the Turks. She then asked the States of Genoa, who, out of respect to the Duke of York, whose mother-in-law she is, granted her desire. . . . Two days since the Duchess of York miscarried.

1684, May 12. The same to the same.—Saturday evening Dr. Oates was arrested on an action of 100,000*l.* for scandal. magn. against H.R.H.

1684, May 15. The same to the same.—H.R.H. is now Lord Admiral. His daughter, the Princess, is delivered of a dead child.

1684, June 5. The same to the same.—Dormer Sheppard tells me he is going to bind out Dick Busby (second son to Sir John) to some sea captain, being a very idle youth. Dr. Busby is his godfather and was his master, but he was aweary of slashing him. . . . At the auction of pictures in the Banqueting House, Mr. St. Amand bought the first picture, Adam and Eve beaten out of Paradise by an Angel, for 45*l.*; a brave apothecary. Sir James Oxenden, of Kent, has given 310*l.* for the picture of a battle, and 250*l.* for another picture of our Saviour confuting the Doctors; and for three other little pictures about 400*l.* Lord Newport has given 180*l.* for one picture, and great prices for several others.

1684, June 9. The same to the same.—Some foundations of houses are laid in Red Lion Fields, at which Grays Inn took offence; and one day last week after dinner went up to the benchers to make their complaint, who appointed certain of them to go in their names to forbid the workmen upon peril, and with them went 50 or 60 gentlemen in their gowns: when the workmen saw them coming they were going to run away, but on second thoughts, stayed. When the deputies came they forbade all the workmen, who very willingly obeyed, saying they would rather want work than offend them. 5,000*l.* is already paid for the ground, so he hath a fine bargain of it. Dr. Barebone has made a proposition to the House to pull down that cloister building opposite to the chapel, and build 'em a chapel there of 8,000*l.* price at his charge for their waste land against Gray's Inn Lane, and liberty to build in Red Lion Fields; but I do not hear the proposition is accepted of; and he will build up fine houses on their land in Gray's Inn Lane. . . . There are great wagers about a law case (about 1,000*l.*) A. meets B., claps a pistol to him, bids him stand and deliver his money. B. fights, and disables A. from robbing him. Whether it be felony, there being not a pin lost. It has been argued in the halls of the Inns of Court. But Maynard and Pemerton were to decide it as to the wagers on Saturday last, I think.

1684, June 12. John Verney to Edm. Verney.—Yesterday morning Sir Thos. Armstrong (who was taken at Leyden) was landed at the Tower, where his irons were locked off, and he was put into the hands of Capt. Richardson, who carried him in a coach to Newgate, where he remains a close prisoner.

1684, June 16. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—The Grays Inn gentlemen and Dr. Barebone's soldiers, in workmen's habits, did fight it out last week, wherein several were shrewdly hurt. 'Tis said the Lord Chief Justice hath rattled away at the benchers about it, saying, if they can not govern their house he will send somebody that shall do it for them, &c. Sir Thos. Armstrong being outlawed, a trial was denied him, so he is to be hanged next Friday. . . . On— and his son of Surrey are bound to their good behaviour for a year, for some words spoke by the last four years since reflecting on the government, and the father's fault was for giving a plate to Guilford with the King's arms on one side and his own on the other, which the town have orders to return him, or else put out his arms.

1684, June 23. The same to the same.—Sir Thos. Armstrong on Friday was executed at Tyburn. He died very bravely. Dr. Tenison was his divine.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1684, June 25. The same to the same.—One of Sir Thos. Armstrong's quarters is set up on Temple Bar.

1684, July 6, Tunbridge Wells.—The same to the same.—The Duchess, Prince, and Princess be all here, with attendance of the Court soldiery and others. The Duchess drinks the waters; the Princess not. They were yesterday morning all walking on the walks at the Wells, and this morning the Princess was at the chapel by the Wells, where Dr. Cradock preached. . . . Here is daily all sorts of gaming, dice, cards, bowls, &c., and dancing at night.

1684, July 12, Tunbridge Wells.—The same to the same.—Last night the Duchess, Prince, and Princess were on the Green to see the company dance; they staid not above half an hour. This morning she was at the Wells and raffled for several things. A couple of coachmen have killed themselves drinking of brandy with their waters.

1684, Aug. 11, London.—The same to the same.—He returned the previous Saturday.—On Saturday the Duchess, Princess, &c., returned from Tunbridge to St. James.

[Temp. Car. II.] The same to the same.—The Lord Mayor is very inquisitive about lodgers, in St. Martin's parish 32,224 lodgers were found. On the 20th the Duke of Norfolk went to Flanders, and his Royal Highness for Scotland. The Duke of Monmouth has taken Sir Elias Harvey's new built house in Bishopgate Street to live in. . . . On Wednesday above 100 Parliament men dined in the Sun Tavern behind the Old Exchange, among whom were the Duke of Monmouth, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and Dr. Oates, &c.

1684, March 21, London. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Mrs. Eleanor Guin lyes a-dying.

1687, April 13. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—A fire at Bridgewater House.—The Earl's two eldest sons were consumed in it. . . Sir W. Trumbull, our ambassador for Turkey, began his voyage last week, the Turkey Company giving him a dinner at the Ship at Greenwich, where they presented his lady with a gold cup.

1687, April 20. The same to the same.—On Monday night was buried at Westminster the only son of Major-General Egerton, of Cheshire.

1687, May 4. The same to the same.—His Majesty went on Monday to Chatham to see a ship launched called the Sedgmoor, which is to carry Mr. H. Fitzjames into the Straits.

1687, May 11. The same to the same.—Some report that a serjeant-at-arms goes from Scotland to Dr. Burnet beyond sea, to cite him to appear in Scotland by such a day, he being accused of high treason.

1687, May 18. The same to the same.—A lad of the Trainbands, standing sentry at the Old Exchange, shot one of the same company that was returning to the guard from an alehouse. . . . Says he bad him stand, and the other did not speak. The Lord Mayor sent him to Newgate.

1687, June 15. The same to the same.—The other ship is now come in from the Spanish wreck in the West Indies, but I do not hear that she hath any store of silver on board. The adventurers in this design were the Duke of Albemarle $\frac{1}{4}$ parts, Sir James Hay $\frac{1}{4}$, Lord Falkland $\frac{1}{4}$, Sir John Norborough $\frac{1}{4}$, Mr. Nicholson $\frac{1}{4}$, Mr. Foxcroft $\frac{1}{4}$, Mr. South $\frac{1}{4}$, the Captain $\frac{1}{4}$, and each 16th that cost 200*l.* will yield (besides the 10 per cent to the King) 12,000*l.* at least, and some say the King gave his part to the Duke of Albemarle, in lieu of a debt in the exchequer of 18,000*l.*, which it cost the Duke in fitting out at the time of the rebellion in the West.

1687, June 16. The same to the same.—The Lord Chancellor went into the Lord Mayor's court and told them the King dismissed 3 aldermen at their entreaty, and he excused them from being sheriffs. On Sunday they went to Windsor, and the King knighted Sir Peter Paravicini. Then the Chancellor told them the King restored them the privilege of drinking to, and choosing their own sheriffs, and that they may choose any free or unfree, and that the fines shall go to pay off the orphans' debts. . . . Last Thursday Sir Edward Wyndham, Bart., was married to the daughter of Mr. Leveson Gower, granddaughter to the Earl of Bath; they were publicly married at St. Peter's, Cornhill, with every door open for all comers and goers, and the wedding is still kept public at Mr. Gore's house in the Piazza, over against St. Amands; her fortune is 6,000*l.* down and 10,000*l.* the more. Sir E. Wyndham is worth for 5,000*l.* per annum.

1687, July 13. The same to the same.—A cock keeper near Pinner's took away the clothes of two boys bathing in a pond, tied one neck and heels in his house, and set his dogs on the other in the water, who tore out his entrails.—A riot ensued, and soldiers and the trainbands were called.—An innocent person was shot by the soldiers.

n. d. [1688.] The same to the same.—On Sunday morning the Queen was delivered of a Prince; the Tower guns were fired. Last week the Earl of Lichfield's regiment and the Scotch battalion mustered before his Majesty in Hyde Park, as he was pleased to examine the latter himself, being much pleased with their readiness.

1688, June 21. (Received.) John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Kneller, the painter, has drawn the Prince, and I am told 20 copies are already bespoken of him.

1688, July.—The same to the same.—He says three of the jury were for finding the 7 bishops guilty; their disagreement made the others sit up all night.

1688, July 26. (Received.) 'Tis said the Duchess of Monmouth is often at Court, and the King is kind to her children.

1688, Aug. 9. (Received.) The Prince being last week indisposed, 'twas thought fit he should suck, and a plasterer or tyler's wife was made choice of.—A pension is settled on her and her husband for life. The husband is sent to a command in the fleet; some say he was knighted.

1688, Aug. 16. (Received.) The same to the same.—Henry Care is lately dead, but 'tis said that Public Intelligence shall be carried on by Mr. Vernon, Secretary to the late Duke of Monmouth.—Abbot Barberini is to bring the consecrated clouts to England; they are three suits richly embroidered with gold.

1689, April 30, East Claydon. Sir R. Verney to John Verney.—Last night Mr. Graves, the picture drawer, came down to East Claydon from London.

1689, Feb. 18. The same to the same.—Lord Danby stands for Hertfordshire; and for the town of Hertford Sir Thos. Hide and Sir Wm. Leman are drinking in opposition to each other; and on Saturday last the former had given it over but for Sir Wm. Cowper who persuaded him to continue the sport. Sir Wm. Cowper is not opposed there.—Other election news.

1689, Feb. 26. The same to the same.—I admire how Major Beak should carry it for a Parliament man at Wendover against young Hamlden; but I suppose old Mr. Hampden was against his son's being chosen. Many people about town say young Hamlden is mad.

1689, Oct. 17. John Verney to Sir R. Verney.—Last night the King lay at Holland House to be near Whitehall, until his late bought house in that town be fitted for his reception; and some say he likes Holland House better than that he bought of Lord Nottingham.

1689, Oct. 19. The same to the same.—This day Parliament met.

1690, April 3. The same to the same.—He believes there are near 100 petitions about elections.

1690, July 3. The same to the same.—Engagement between the Dutch and English fleet against the French. The Dutch could not keep so near the wind in the east, so the ships lay upon them; 7 of their ships were disabled, and one they sank themselves; but they took out 3 boat loads of men. The Duke of Grafton gave them great assistance. The Duke of Grafton and one Capt. Dorrell fought most bravely. 'Tis thought we fought at too great distance; the enemy's brass guns carry further than our iron ones, &c., &c. . . . Our Plymouth fleet on Monday passed by Weymouth; I hope they are by this time joined with Torrington. . . . Clarendon is a close prisoner.

1690, July 16. The same to the same.—The Irish Protestants flock very much to their own homes from thence.

1690, July 24. The same to the same.—The East India Company raise a troop of horse for their Majestic's service against the French. The hamlets have done the same. They must then clothe them, arm them, and give them one month's pay, and then the Government is to pay them. The Hackney troop is about 80 men, and the Queen names the officers. The city will do the like, but they are long about it.

Copy Petition to Oliver Cromwell by William Denton, of Paul's, Covent Garden, Doctor of Physic. Says he never was in arms, but only attended the King as a menial servant. Prays that he may not be obliged to give a recognizance to Oliver.

Letters by Dr. Wm. Denton to Sir R. Verney.

1659, Aug. 10. . . . No considerable force, if any at all, up any where but with Sir G. Booth, who with others, are now proclaimed traitors, and against whom

SIR
H. VERNEY
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

there is gone a strong force. Desborough gone into the west to keep all quiet there, with power to arm all Fifth Monarchy men, and the like new militia raisers in every county. The only thing that looks like countenancing Sir George is the intended petition of the city for a free Parliament, as they say; this finds so great opposition that for my part I think it can come to nothing . . . I do not hear of any one cavalier in all this affair, but that it lies wholly on the presbiteries and those that fought and engaged for that they call the good old cause . . .

1659, Dec. 16. This evening the cavaliers were banished, by proclamation, to depart by 12 o'clock to-morrow morning. How far I or any one else is concerned, I neither know nor can learn, for it is not yet in print . . . By all I can learn here is nobody even fled; no, not householders, and if so, I resolve not to stay. There is daily talk and expectation of a rising every night in the city.

1659, Feb. 2. (Received Feb. 10.) W. Denton to Sir Ralph Verney.—I hope you will read Monk's letter to Roll, and the answer to it; the best pen'd things I have seen many a day.—No man yet knows what to make of Monk, but most think for Rump, and yet not to go along with them quatuor pedibus. There is great expectation of qualification for members; those that are started are no cavalier, no secluded member, no addressor; my Prince was for waving of them all, or only to stick to the oath of admiration.—P.S. Feb. 9th. News come that Monk and all his army are marched into the city on the occasion of the Common Council being mighty high last night in giving the Warwickshire gentlemen great thanks (volens volens the Lord Mayor), promising to live and die with them. It works a pace now. Bristoll for certain stands on their guard, and will admit no soldier; those that desired to pass thro' the other day were dismounted at the gate, and marched between each 10 of them, and when quite out of the city had then delivered to them their horses and arms again. I received yours of the 5th and 6th. On Tuesday my Prince told me he would move the Council for 20 boace (?) I bid him use any of his name or any of his servants or whose he would if he thought mine would distaste. Mr. Say promised me faithfully to mind him yesterday of it at council, and to give me an account as yesterday, but hath not done it. Here it now sticks.—Divers addressors are ordered to be brought in safe custody. Sir R. S. is at this time incognito. Lord Frankland, James Fines, Sir An. Cope, Sir T. Spensar, are here ready with their address, but to whom yet not yesterday resolved. They say Lord Say's name is in the front. T. Temple, of Frankton, and Marriott came with Warwickshire address. Sir Wm. Courteney, Sir Copleston Bamfield, Sir Jo. Norcott, Sir R. Temple, Mr. Nevill, Mr. Font, Mr. Chester, Sir Jo. Norwich, cum multis aliis, sent for in safe custody. Speaker yesterday refused to sign the warrant to remand Sir Robert Pye to the Tower. He will be at the Upper Bench again to-day on his habeas corpus, which will be here argued.

1659, Feb. 7. The same to the same.

1659, Feb. 13.— . . . As soon as Monk had sent the enclosed letter to the House he presently drew his army into the city, being Saturday, and complied with the citizens, which was quickly spread, upon which there were bonfires circum circa, and from one end of the city to the other, Westminster, &c. . . . The Speaker (who sat late) in his march homewards affronted, his men beaten, his windows broken. A rump in a chair rosted at his gate and bonfires made there; nere so many rumps rosted as were that night. What this will produce nemo scit; about 12 o'clock this day at noon it was generally believed it would prove but ignis fatuus; for Genl. Monk was strongly looked for to dine with some grandees at Whitehall, but did not. This evening there is some more life than in the morning; the Common Council is now sitting which will produce something, but whether mons or ridiculus mus, I can not divine. They endeavour all possible compliance with Monk, but yet undermine. We shall scarce know anything of certainty till Friday. Sir G. Gerrard this day indicted Okey and Alured at the Upper Bench for secluding him. Do not believe all that in the different character in the postscript. (There is no postscript to the letter).

1659, Feb. 15. . . . Monk goes on his slow, but he thinks, his sure pace; he is not to be driven out of his road, which is to do nothing irregularly that he can do regularly. All parties court him, and he is still reserved, and in the interim every party hopes well of him. T.

is thought he will go such a moderating way as will not answer expectations; till Tuesday be past no positive declaring of himself, and then he will, or will not, comply; they were hot on their qualifications yesterday, and came an undecided plan for a Commonwealth previous to their sitting. The indictment against Okey and Alured is fixed to be hilla vera, but it is not in Sir G. Gerrard's name, tho' Pryn said it. No Common Council yesterday but only a meeting of many of them, tho' not in the way of a Commonwealth. I hear St. John, Sir A. Cooper, and others, antagonists of the engagement, and some secluded members have been with Monk . . . Sir R. Pye's business is a business of Parliament, and the judges can take no cognizance of it. I hear Monk's lady and my Prince had a round bout, and foul words passed on both sides . . . The news this morning is that Monk last night disarmed the sectaries.

1659, Feb. 16.—Monk inclines too much to favour an engagement for a Republic without King, single person, or House of Lords. It's suspected writs should issue to-morrow.

1659, Feb. 18.— . . . All sides ply Monk with warm clothes, and he, like a prudent person, would fain reconcile. I know that he offered the secluded if they would only promise not to bring in the King; that he did not doubt to p—their sitting. Dick Norton told him that freedom of Parliament was the just right and interest of the nation, and if they thought it fit to bring in the Turk they ought not to be imposed on the contrary. Last night 10 and 10 of rumpers and secludeders met before the General, the result of which I cannot yet learn, but I doubt nothing but wrangling. I am very inclinable to believe the Rump have too much assurance, for that they are too high in their qualifications, &c. I hear there are 30 already, and this day they were to fall upon the addressors. I did not think Dick Winwood had been returned.

1659, Feb. 22. Yesterday morning Monk brought in the secluded members who act and vote as formally as before, and take no notice of anything; voted many things, as Monke, Captain-General by land; Montague, Admiral; Lawson, Vice-Admiral. The Council of State vote another to be up. All addressors discharged and Sir G. Booth also, and all the aldermen, &c., cum multis aliis. Our cousin Grenville has lost himself wonderfully amongst his countrymen in refusing to do as other neighbours did; no man disputing but himself. Sir R. Pigott has done little less. Sir R. T. carries it plum on all sides. He writ to Dick Winwood by coach yesterday, he having notice overnight that it would be; we knew nothing about it till 9 o'clock. I have sent to hasten Dick Winwood to his duty. They are all earnestly desired. I wish my Lord Wenman were in a condition to come up. So much for public; only I guess they will not sit 20 days, but will have a new Parliament before May, and that a free one, cavaliers only excepted.

1659, Feb. 23.— . . . No public news, but they go on without any animosity or reflexion. Sir Arthur went in the first day but staid not, and as I think hath not been there since.

1659, March 1. I have not yet seen Dick Winwood. Rump major begins to smell as rank as Rump minor. I know no man pleased with their proceedings. Here are great fears and jealousies that they have a mind to establish themselves or to re-establish Richard only to make easy for Monke . . . At the Committee last night they banded hard for one qualification to be, that none should elect or be elected but such as had eminently acted against the King; but it could not be carried. One moved upon the Covenant the clear contrary, that none might but those that had acted for King and Parliament, and I hear no man spoke against it.

1659, March 8.— . . . Since Sir Ri. T. left the town the face of things begins to look askint; the officers all day yesterday in great consultation, and it is said they will declare high against the militias, a single person, and House of Lords, &c. . . . The militia of Bucks is passed, and I think neither you nor Mun. were not put in. The case was thus, Col. Ingoldesby put in one list, and the knights another, that was full of pitiful fellows and therefore committed, but which has passed I know not. In the knights' list you should not be in, in the other you could not, for the Ingoldesby being absent and his hand to it, none could be added; so that fear is over.

1659, March 15. A dissolution this day expected. I hear that one qualification is, that no cavalier but who hath been an addressor (I know not) or their sons.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

shall be members. If so, we shall be both mumped. I am confined to arms only, I'll venture to be chosen.

1662, March 16. The long look'd for dissolution of the Parliament has come at last, even this Friday night about six o'clock. About noon there were many great fears that all would have been spoiled, occasioned by a letter from Monk to make stop of the militia, but they would not read it till they had sent a committee to him, who it seems gave him satisfaction. Upon their return they went on cleverly, and dissolved it is . . . Sir Ed. Partherick upon reading Monk's letter spoke high that if the King had sent such a letter, it would have been deemed such a high breach of privilege, &c. Monk is Major-General of the city militia. The Parliament gave him to-day 20,000*l.*, made him Constable and Keeper of the High Court. They gave Sir W. Waller 16,000*l.*; Major-General Brown, 10,000*l.* The same Sir Edward told them that he doubted they were dying, because they made such haste to make their wills, and gave away so much.

1662, March 21. . . . Here is a rumour as if the city desired that Lambert should be proceeded against as a traitor, for offering to violate the Parliament; and that that they desire that the Council of State should sit in London for their better security . . . I hear just now out of the city that the Common Council did send to the Council of State to desire them to sit at Greecers' Hall; that they seized last night 300 arms; and Lambert and two other colonels are stricter prisoners than formerly, but that of his impeachment I do not hear seconded.

1660, March 29. Election news.

1660, April 4. . . . Dr. Morley has been before the Council, and, as I hear, on his engagement to act nothing prejudicial, is at liberty . . . Here are many doubts and fears in the main. The violence and rashness of the King's party disorders and distempers all.

1660, April 5. They are now choosing for Middlesex.

1660, April 6. The Gallican ministers have written to ours, assuring them the King is a very good Protestant, and much on his behalf; and our tryers have written to the keepers that in their letters to them they would superscribe them right reverend.—The next bout is Domine Deus noster Pater.

1660, April 12. . . . Your friend and Lambert made his escape on Tuesday night . . . Morley was out of town yesterday. Yesterday they put in four companies to the Tower to secure it. There is a little suspicion of Morley, but I hear no grounds for it. Some say he is gone to make a head, and others to save one.

1660, April 17th. There is great noise of Lambert being as the head of 20 troops, 3,000 foot; taken Warwick Castle; the country coming again to him; but not a word true. The worst news is the King interest cools beyond expectation, thro' the indiscretion of his ranting party, as 'tis said; but I believe 'tis thro' the design of some others, tho' they have been foolish enough.

1660, April 19. Yesterday I went to Gray's Inn to find out the Crown Office; it was removed to Fleet St. I went and found only nine returns made . . . Your friend and Lambert was like to have been taken last night in Petty France. Whaley and Goffe were taken at Hayne's, at Holdenby, by the county militia, but, acting nothing for ought I can know. It is reported that the Council of State are privy to most part of the design.

1660, June 17. We are now very quiet, and our disturbers 'tis thought will be all hanged this session. Some say the Covenant is asserted in the Parliament of Scotland, others not. Monk's regiment, after it was disbanded, was the same moment entertained again at the King's pay. His Majesty, the Dukes of York and Albemarle, will have 3 life guards . . . Wm. Denton, Dr. Bale, and Dr. Manton have refused their deaneries.

1660, Aug. 9. . . . Sir Thos. Danby died on Saturday last.

1661, March 27. . . . Harry, I believe, will attend the Duke, who, I guess, will marry Monday or Tuesday next.—The Bishop of London, I think, will marry them. He hath command to attend the King to Portsmouth to marry him. A priest in Lisbon stabbed an Englishman several times bravely, and killed him (and then took sanctuary), on no other provocation than that being drunk, he reeled on him.

1662, March 13. It is most certain that Sir Geo. Downing seized Corbett, O'Key, and Barkstead at Delph, and hath shipped them for Tyburn.

1662, April 3. Harry is at Blenheimton, Northampton, &c., with the Duke . . . They were married on Monday, the 1st of May, by London. His said Worcester will to Winchester.

1662, Aug. 21. On Monday Tom Howard, brother to the Earl of Carlisle, and Mr. Dillon, brother to Lord

Dillon, accosted H. Germaine and Giles Rawlins, drew upon them before—door, coming from the tennis court, and Tom slew Giles dead in the place, and after that fell on Harry, and wounded him in 3 or 4 places, which prove but slight hurts; which done, Tom said, "Now we have done justice, let's be gone," and having their horses hard by, with pistols at the saddle-bow, they presently fled, and its thought that Howard had some hurt, for he was seen to bear himself up on his pummell. The quarrel, its said, was between Howard and German, about Lady Shrewsbury. It is also said that Howard was in buff, and that he cut off the heels of his boots, and so came fully prepared, and took the other unawares, who, because they had only the usual bodkins, desired but their footmen's swords, but had them not; and yet Rawlins thrust so home that he bent his sword at the hilt, but buff or other armour would not suffer entrance. Dillon fought carelessly, as if willing neither to hurt nor be hurt, it being none of his quarrel . . . If you still have the making of a baron, and take such reason as I may get 1,000*l.* by it, perhaps I may fit you. Its but a small sum among friends.

1662, Aug. 28. The presbyters have been humble suitors to the King for an indulgence. The King refused them to his Council; they went to the judges, who have declared that the King cannot dispense with an Act of Parliament. So their cake is dough at present. But they are to be heard at the Council Board to-day.

1662, Feb. 9. In mentioning a sum to be paid as a balance of account, he says, "be sure that you so order " it that I have the best and easiest money to tell, all " half-crowns if you can."

1663, March 26. Here is news that Lord Ossory is landed here, and that Lord Anieer is slain by Talbot in a duel here, but neither true. The Lord Chancellor made a speech the other day against desiring the King to put out a proclamation against the priests, yet would have the King have a list of them all, &c., but this takes not at all.

1663, March 29. The Lords have concurred with the Commons as to the proclamation, and there were but three dissenters.

1663, April 2. When the Duke of Bucks came from Newmarket, when he staid at the Sun in Aldgate till his coach came, a fellow told him his fortune was to die as unfortunately as his father, or at least it would be attempted; he said by the 1st April. On Tuesday last the usher of his hall went to bed about 9 at night, and did rise again about one o'clock in the morning; came up the back and private way to the Duke's chamber, where only he, his lady, and a maid were talking; he, knocking at a door and the maid opening of it, he rushed in with a naked sword, at which the maid squeaking, gave my lord an alarm, who, turning back, snatched up a knife, and by his boldness daunted the fellow, so that he got within him, became master of his sword, and by that time company came in. The Duke sent after the fortune teller, but I do not know whether he has heard of him.

1663, Oct. 15. The Queen has been feverish; she was four times blooded, and is now mending.

1663, Oct. 16. The Queen, I hear, hath been better this day, but is yet in great jeopardy.

1663, Oct. 22. The solicitor is fallen ill, and the Queen is not yet come off her fever; the event is yet doubtful, and is variously spoken of.

1663, Nov. 10. Bristol, I hear, is in town, and bottoms himself mostly in the presbyterian interest, being now turned Protestant again.

1664, March 25. The debate on Tuesday was about the Triennial Bill, for the damning of which Prynne spake most desperately, and Sir R. T. as desperately to preserve it, and if all be true, made a very coxcombing of Prynne, confounding him demonstratively, causing several Acts to be read, showing his palpable mistakes in wilful perverting the text, and that the Bill was not an act of grace, but the people's right, and ought not to be denied them; nay, that it was a condescension in the Parliament and a waiving of part of their right, by taking a triennial when an annual Parliament was their due by former Acts of Parliament, which he caused to be read, for which you may be sure he is farther become a Whitehall favourite, the clean contrary way.—An impeachment of high treason was expected yesterday against Bristol, but what was done, I know not. I was resolved to take away the Triennial Bill, and to have some more exact as is pretended.

1664, March 31. Mr. Vaughan came to town on Saturday, and on Monday he pealed it away, about triennials, an hour and a half by the clock, spake so des-

SIR
H. VERNE
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEX,
BART.

perately home, that he outshot Sir R. T. ten bows length, but all in vain. The Bill is engrossed, marched up to the Lords, and so farewell Magna Charta.

1665, July 27. Since mine to you by Will., his Majesty hath thought fit to give him, and his Queen, Salisbury, and the Duke and Duchess to York, and they set forward this day. Will. and his wife go with the Duke.

1665, Nov. 12. I hear the Dutch have taken all the King's provisions for Tangier within 7 leagues thereof, and as many other merchant ships as accompanied that convoy, as make up 16 in all. That there lie 5 ships at Land's End that none can get in or out; that they never fished quieter than now; that they have taken some colliers.

1665, Nov. 17. The French ambassadors, or at least two of them, are suddenly to be gone. The Spanish agent who has lived all this while in Kent, but now here, is posting to Spain in order to settle the peace between us.

1665, Nov. 21. The French have audience on Thursday next, and its thought for all their huffing Monsieur, they will not go as yet. Its believed that Spain and Portugal and we are all agreed, and if the president did not go yesterday he will to-day.

1665, Dec. 3. Albemarle is here, and his brother Holmes, to kiss the King's and Duke's hand again. St. Albans arrived here on Friday night, but not one jot of news by him is yet divulged. The French have taken three merchant ships of ours, and we one of his frigates that was new built in Holland, as she was sailing to him. Its now said we shall send 5,000 Scots, 5,000 Irish, and 2,000 English, under the respective national commanders, all under Monmouth, to the Bishop of Munster. . . . P.S. France intends to declare against us, and to baste us next summer.

1665, January 29. Stow.—I have resolved to haste to London and take my fortune there against the French, who lie 15,000 strong at Dunkirk, with divers vessels for their waftage, and so in several other places on the French coast, with great numbers, having proclaimed war on the 10th at Paris. My wife has packed up all here, and given orders to send them to your house for safe quarter. The King and Duke are gone to Hampton Court.

1665, April 25. The Admirals went to sea on the 23rd inst., St. George's Day. Sir Jeremy Smith is returned, but our Smyrna merchants not with bona causa cur. He vapoured while he could, but when the Dutch and French fleet were ready to put to sea, 'twas then time to make an honourable retreat. They were 30 sail and 10 fire ships, and he very much shattered by his ill voyages of storms and tempests. Munster has made his peace. Lord Morley is to be tried on Monday per pares.—The Chancellor is to be High Steward.

1666, May 3. Lord Morley is acquitted.—The King, Queen, and Duke and Duchess were there.

1666, June 20. The French at St. Christopher have massacred 5,000 of our English there.

1666, June 28. The Dutch with 80, some say 85 sail, have been at sea since Friday last. This day we are appointed to weigh anchor with 87 sail, well equipped. The French nor Dane are not yet joined with them. Lord Lindsey's, Northampton's, and Cleveland's regiments are raising. A troop of horse is sent to the Isle of Wight. . . . Our agent at Brussels made bonfires with great joy and countenance. The next day the Dutch would have done so, but the people would not let him, saying they were cheats, and did abuse them; so away he went the next day.

1666, July 5. Last night a young Duke of Kendal was born to the Duchess. Not one scrap of news of the French fleet; we are preparing apace against an invasion. 9 troops raising by Monmouth, Peterborough German, and others, besides the three regiments of Lindsey, Cleveland, and Northampton. More will be raised. Mulgrave intends to get a troop.

1666, July 12. We are now pretty secure. The French will not attack us by land, except the Dutch beat us. . . . they are but 85, and we certainly 90, and 25 fire ships, and shall weigh anchor about Tuesday next.

1666, Aug. 2. A short account of the sea-fight with the Dutch.

1666, Sept. 6. Leadenhall St., Fenchurch St., Bishopgate St., Broad St., Smithfield, St. John's, Clerkenwell, Hatton Buildings, Southampton Buildings, and all Chancery Lane, and all on this side, are yet standing, and also Southwark. Clothworkers' Hall is now on fire, but in a fair way of being stopped. Justice Godfrey behaved himself so well at the Temple, that the King would have knighted him, but he refused it, so the

King has ordered a piece of plate of 50^l to him, with his arms upon it, and with Ex. dene, &c.

and I know not where the cannon doth hurt, the fire being now come so far as Hatton Buildings near it. The short account of the fire is that more than the whole city is in ashes. . . . The depopulation is so vast that it can not afford us a livelihood, so that I want the advice of all my best friends to advise what I had best do. . . . I paid for my load of good Kensington. . . . Behind the Rolls the fire got a great check. . . . It came so far as to burn the King's Bench Office and the Alienation Office, but not so far as Nelly's Chambers. . . . Since I writ this the fire broke out at the Temple again next to Nelly's Chambers, and his chamber the Duke caused to be blown up, and it hath burnt now the Inner Temple Hall, and I have not heard how much further. . . . The papists were suspected. . . . The fire broke out vehemently again last night about Shoe Lane, and as we guessed about Cripplegate, but we guess by the smoke that it is well laid again.

1666, Sept. 13. Albemarle came home on Friday last, and our fleet is got to sea again. . . . Van Tromp was at Newport (when one Wilkins came thence) intending to come for England the next packet boat. . . . Since I wrote this I dined at my Lord Treasurer's, and they tell me that our fleet understanding that the Dutch were gone home, kept the harbour in sanctuary from the storms. Lords St. Albans, Essex, &c., with my Lord Hollis' lady (some say married in France, and others say not married but come to be married) are arrived here. The Queen Mother is entered into a monastery.

1666, Sept. 27. The taking of Le Roch, one of their best captains, and one of their best ships of 1,000 tons, with 44 brass guns and 10 others and 500 men.—He fought it stoutly two hours with two of our smaller frigates, and afterwards with Sir Thos. Allen (who could make no use of his lower tier), till at one broadside he killed him, 6 men, and wounded 31. . . . De Ruyter is disabled by his wounds, if not dead, and another supplies his room.

1666, Oct. 25. H. Killigrew is banished the Court for raw words spoken against a lady of pleasure, but it's thought will return again. Sir Robert Holmes and others arrived. Sir Jer. Smyth accused of cowardice in the last fight. It was heard before the Council Table and they are reconciled, but in the general esteem there lies a blurr on Sir Jeremy. Holmes goes into the streights, and Sir Thos. Allen hath the home guard.

1666, Nov. 13. There is a general belief that the French will land next summer.

1667, March 28. The Queen of Portugal is dead. Lord St. Albans goes away to-morrow for the Queen; and she'll first to Burbon. Lord Bridgman is very ill at Tuddington, and I am to go to him to-morrow. The Swedish ambassadors are expected here; their errand is thought to be mediation; and its thought we shall send another to them. The King has bought Audly Inn and the Park for 50,000^l, and made Lord Suffolk the keeper thereof; salary, 500^l. per annum. They say young Griffin shall marry his daughter. Monmouth Carey endeavoured to cut his own throat, but he yet lives. Hatfield House was half burned Monday was sennight.

1667, April 4. Mrs. Steward was married to Richmond on Saturday last, and in so doing they have given the King some disgust. . . . Many say we shall have peace, many fear we are juggled withal. The Queen Mother charging 3,000^l. upon her receiver, Sir Henry Wood has suffered her bills to be protested, for which she hath turned him out of that office, for which the Court laments deeply. We talk of four squadrons of ships to go out under the command of Allen, Holmes, Smyth, Sprag, for Plymouth, Portsmouth, Teinsmouth, Yarmouth; but when they will be ready is not yet known.

1667, April 11. We are like to have a furious St. George's feast; that Madam Richmond continues in her exile, and that De Witt is wild to have his fleet in the mouth of the Thames.

1667, June 27. News this morning that the Dutch are at Gravesend.

1667, July 11. . . . One of Sir Jeremy Smyth's ships having been missing a good while is at last returned with 4 prizes and two convoy men. Some say Sir Jeremy is at Guttenberg, others at Hull. Here are 150 colliers crept into Yarmouth, from whence they say they can safely get to Lynn, which may store Cambridge with coals. . . . As much as you vilify us jockeys, yet they are brave fellows; they lately brought in

SIR
H. VERNEX,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY
BART.

7 prizes and 4 convoys. They now march out by 20 and above in company. After yesterday's consult about the peace with H. Coventry (who returns to-day or to-morrow) at the Council Table, we all do generally believe we shall have peace, and yet we hope we may catch their East India fleet before it be concluded.

1667, July 25. The butter-boxes are retreated from Plymouth and Dartmouth re infecta, tho' they attacked Dartmouth. They lie before the Isle of Wight. Those at the mouth of the Thames came on Tuesday with the spring tide as far as the Hope, where they met with their match. We fired and sank 11 of their fire ships and took one; besides we fired one man-of-war, and another blown up with the loss of 5 ships only. Sir Jer. Smith is safe at Kinsale with all his prizes . . . H. Killigrew being in the next box to the Duke of Buckingham at a play drolled with him and made fun at him, and spake scurvy language at him, insomuch that the Duke told him he might govern his tongue and his face better. Killigrew went out of the box and would have had one Vaughan to have carried him a challenge; but he refusing to do it in that place, he returned and stroke the Duke twice on the head with his sword in the scabbard, and then run away most nobly over the boxes and forms, and the Duke after him, and cut him well favouredly, he crying, "Good, your Grace, spare my 'life,' and fell down, some say to beg for his life, but certainly the Duke kicked him. The Duke lost his wig in the pursuit for a while.

1667, July 30. Parliament is prorogued till the 10th Oct. The bold vote they made on Thursday was not acceptable to all persons. It was thought by some they would have had the 2nd part to the tune by this time yesterday, had they time . . . it was so ordered as it so fell out that the Speaker came not into the House till after the King, and so they had no time . . . Lord Bridgman's children coming from Tuddington to Tunbridge were robbed by 6 troopers (and so was my Lady Portland Dowager between Twicknam and Hampton town) . . . Sir John Coventry is going, if not gone, with the ratification of peace from hence. The Dutch left the Buoy de Nore yesterday morning. They were so overjoyed at the peace that 5,000 of them accompanied Sir John to Flushing with acclamations of joy.

1667, July 31. The best news I can tell you is that the army is to be disbanded on the 10th of August, with 14*l.* pay over and above. The Spaniards have drowned, some letters say 2,000, others 9,000, French before Deremond. Six vessels, full freight with men, are gone hence for Flanders.

1667, Aug. 8. Indeed Danby was basely murdered; and there is great suspicion that an affront at least, if not his death, was contrived. It was Berage that killed him; the other companions were Ogle and Jenny. Its thought that Ogle was in the conspiracy . . . Cop-pinger struck G. Raleigh a box on the ear and over his head with his kane at the Treasury door at Whitehall; the King then sitting in Council. George (who formerly wanted no courage) took all patiently; it made him sick for the present, but is recovered, and intends to prosecute as far it will go; he hath sent to George to compound, but he will not hearken to it as yet . . . De Ruyter lies before Plymouth sick of an ague. My Lord Bath sent Sir John Trelawny aboard him. He had sent to buy victuals for his navy; that my Lord would not do, but he sent him a present from himself, $\frac{1}{2}$ a beef, 16 sheep, a buck, fowl, and fruit. He himself very civil, but boatmen much in the huff. We have lost 4 ships, two Barbadoes and two streightmen.

1667, Sept. 5. Lady Hobart tells me that Ashburnham, Seymour, and Legge are all put out of the bed-chamber . . . The Keeper was sworn yesterday and sat in council . . . The Dutch will not release Sir George Askew until he has paid 11,000 gilders for his diet and lodgings; they refused the ambassadors security for the money; they will have merchantmen . . . I hear Lord Gerard is to be purchased out, and Monmouth to succeed him.

1667, Sept. 19. The Dukes of Bucks is restored to all. Tom Howard cum multis aliis turned out of the guards as Papists; his lady made groom of the stoole in Guildford's place who is dead. Sir Robert Holmes and Sir John Kempthorne returned re infecta; they touched at the all places usual of the Dutch East Indians, and could hear no news of them.

1667, Jan. 23. The Duke of Bucks and his two seconds, Sir Robert Holmes and Jenkins, fought Lord Shrewsbury and his two seconds, Barnard Howard and Sir Gil. Talbot. Shrewsbury is run quite thro' the breast, but hope he will do well. B. Howard behaved himself bravely. The Duke coming to relieve Jenkins, who had then no hurt, and making a pass at Howard, with one hand he put by the Duke's sword, and with the other ran furiously upon Jenkins and killed him. Talbot hath two wounds in one arm. Bucks, Holmes, and Howard (who is fled into France) only three scratches. The gentlewoman who had her nose cut off is dead. It is found by accident that Molin's wife did it, who by a mistake took away her muff instead of her own.

1667, Feb. 13. Yesterday a fellow brought a bag of about 400 letters for the Parliament to the door, and slunk away; they were printed books of verses, a downright libel, quite like Wythers' Abuses whipt and stript. They were yesterday upon Sir Jo. Winter for the forest of Deane. Ch. Goods imprisonment and fine of 100*l.* is all reduced to 20 nobles. The Primate solicits hard to bring it to the Lords, but he finds no encouragement, and he thinks to beg the House of Commons.

1667, Feb. 26. Mun Temple was knocked on the head with a bottle in a tavern, of which he is dead . . . The Duke and Duchess of Richmond returned to Court. The House this day, after a hard tug till candletime, and how long after I ca'n't tell, voted a supply with clogs.

1667, March 12. Yesterday a long debate about liberty till 4 o'clock p.m., and then upon Morice's motion, it was deferred till that day month.

1667, March 19. The pleasant story of H. Killigrew is, that he opiated the mother and daughter, and then ravished the daughter, for which he was condemned to the gallows, but by the great mediation of the Queen Mother and Madame he is only banished.—Shrewsbury is dead.

1668, March 26. They say Killigrew is come over again with the Duke of Monmouth, and that his peace is made. The King finding, tho' late, first, that Creighton was left out of the list, commanded him a turn and to be sent for, which short coming made him not ready, and so was out, but had no notes that I hear of to look into, as not being his use, and so could not look into them. But I hear the King has commanded him to preach again . . . Two last days great tumults, riots, and pulling down . . . houses, &c.

1668, April 9. There is a Bill come or coming into the House to reduce interest to 4*l.* per cent.

1668, June 17. Sir Thos. Clifford is advanced to be Treasurer, and Lord Newport to be Controller.

1668, July 25 . . . There was something of that of my Lord Ormond's true, but not all; but it makes little noise here. Orrery works covertly, not openly. My Lord Meath and others prevent it, but the Duke of Bucks is his great enemy. The 5,000*l.* unpaid is in dispute, and I believe the Chancery must end it. I do not know who is the Duke's heir, neither do I know that the dukedom goes to his heir general.

1668, Aug. 12.— . . . Ralph Montague is to march Envoyé Extraordinary into France, and there to stay. . . . The night before the adjournment of the Parliament, Sir Bernardiston was set at liberty by the Black Rod, no man owning how or why . . . Monsr. Colbert is come, and councils differ, some for the French and others for the Dutch; but it is hoped that the Dutch will carry it.

1668, Aug. 26. . . . Yesterday was the first day the Commission for Ireland sat, and now they will go on apace. Sir Thos. Osborne is one of them, tho' the King at first left him out at Ormond's request, as being a great confidant of the Duke of Bucks, and yet after the Commission was seated the King put him in with his own hands. Garraway is another, but makes excuse and will not act. Sir Samuel Morland is Secretary of the Commission.

1668, Aug. 29 . . . I find the Irish Commission will be troublesome to more than the Duke . . . Here is news come fresh to town that the wife of Bishop Thornburies' son, lying on her death bed, and since dead, at Nottingham, confessed herself to be the Lady Elizabeth, sister of Prince Rupert . . . If Ormond do chance to come to you, a byled leg of mutton is his beloved dish for dinner.

1668, Sept. 3 . . . The story of Lady Elizabeth is a romance . . . Harry Verney thinks he can beg something of the King. He thinks of nothing but an Irish viscount, and if he thought you or your son would accept it, he would press for it. The usual price it seems, is 2,500*l.*, but if it suit with either of your genius, if you will not give him 250*l.* per annum for his life, he will take 20*l.* I pray you communicate with your son.

SIR
H. VERNY
BART.

SIR
I. VERNY,
BART.SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

1668, Sept. 24. Lord Allington, Sir Lionel Toller-mache, and Sir R. Temple all mend at Burbon.

1668, Sept. 30. Dr. Wilkins is Bishop of Chester. The King is gone this day to Newmarket, and takes Audly Inn in the way. News upon the Exchange as if Candia had relieved itself by a mine, suffering them to come to handy blows upon the walls, and when thousands were there, by blowing them up. This comes several ways, but no express. There is a small pet taken by the Spanish ambassador against the Venetian for want of a little ceremony, not meeting of him when he gave him a visit.

1668, Oct. 15. The Duke came to town on Tuesday to keep his birthday. The Queen being somewhat ill-disposed will be here this day, and the King on Thursday.

1668, Oct. 22. Montague was designed for ambassador, but if former resolutions hold he goes but envoyé. If he stays he may be, as Temple or Godolphin are to be hereafter, ambassadors.

1668, Nov. 4. Anglesey is suspended his service as to the victualling of the Navy; and the town hath made Sir Thos. Osborne and Sir Thos. Littleton commissioners for the same. It is generally believed that Ireland will be governed by commissioners.

1668, Nov. 12. Montague on new resolutions goes now ambassador. . . . Anglesey is variously reported. Some say he acquiesces, others that he will try it; some say he is only suspended and his pay reserved, but get it when he can. . . . My Lord B. is no more major domo, he has been out ever since summer. Some say he owes the Duke some thousands, four or five, which he would have the Duke forgive him, but he will not.

1668, Nov. 19. . . . It seems Mr. Cornewell testified something against Lord Gerard at a Committee of Parliament, for which my Lord hath threatened him ever since what he would do for him, and seeing him in the Queen's privy chamber, came across the room to him and swore desperately at him, threatening him that his footman or porter should slit his nose, &c. . . . He has complained of him in the King's Bench.

1668, Nov. 25. Re Cornewell, the King's Bench will do him right, and hath sent to the sheriff to bring him before them, with some intimation only not to go into Whitehall to find him. The judges much commended your cousin. . . . and even soldiers and my Lord's own kindred very much blame my Lord, and so hath his Majesty, if my intelligence be true.

1668, Dec. 10. Sir Charles Cottrell's elder daughter was married yesterday or to-day to Robert Dormer.

1668, March 10.—P.S. Sir Wm. Drake talks now of knighting Franke, if Parrat do not dissuade, and is very fond of him, if it will hold.

1668, March 22. Sir Wm. Coventry came out of the Tower yesterday morning. Five of the proscribed highwaymen were taken. Yesterday a cozen Paschall (Mrs. Parsons, famous in her generation,) was shot in the head by one Atkins with small shot; it is hoped that it did only graze and that she will live. The Duke of York's closet was broken open on Thursday night and 700*l.* stolen away, but they left things of very good value behind them, as his George, silver candlesticks, medals, watches. Its believed that the King of Spain is dead. The Keeper fell ill at Tuddington, and sent for me out of my bed with coach and six, where I did him some service; that I must either stay with him or he would go along with me; now, I think, we stand as olim. We had much private discourse altogether friendly, where I set you out to some tune, so that I hope the next time he sees you he will lay you neck and heels together.—P.S. There's talk of some removes to be, but I believe none. The General mends.

1668, March 24. The King of Spain is dead, and Don Juan proclaimed king. The Duke of York's papers were certainly opened and searched, but mum for that.

1669, March 31. Your cozen of Spain is not dead. Our cozen of France provides for Candia, and asks nothing less than Cypress for his recompense, which the Venetians have no occasion to part with, their pretence thereto, because it hath been Caput Coronatum. Lord Keeper is better now than he hath been these 3 months. The Duke of Tuscany is here settled in my Lord St. Alban's house by the Pal-Mall. Queen Mother hath been ill, but mends. The King and Duke sent Godolphin and Vaughan to see her.

1669, April 7. (The birthday and day of my Lord Mulgrave being of age.)—My Lord Keeper, tho' not sick, is still lame; he talks now of going to the bath. Sir Ralph Sydenham continues ill, and I spake to the Keeper of my desires therein; his answer was twice or thrice that he wished me in with all his heart, and bid me make my friends, and directed me how as to the King's letter, which gives me encouragement to cast about. My marriage I doubt will be some prejudice to me. Sir H. de Ryche intends to stand for it.

1669, April 14. I have never spoken to the Keeper since I only wait the Duke's answer whether he will mediate or no with his brother for a letter; this I shall know within a day or two. I am likewise trying to get a resignation from Sir Ralph (Sydenham), but he asks so much, and I am resolved to give so little that we are not like to meet, 1,800*l.* and 300*l.* His pulse hath been felt only at large, and at a distance, without my being named. The Bishop of Hereford made a voluntary resignation, concerning which there are various comments. Some say willing to resign out of great grief for loss of his only daughter, together with a willingness to gratify Bishop Crew, who should have married her; others say for that his last sermon was evil spoken of; others, to give over the world and to betake himself to preces et lachrymæ. It was very lately and very solemnly resolved that our old Parliament should sit again, and that Bucks began to court the old members, and now its said that he labours again to dissolve them. I want Sir John Payne here both to inform me of the value of the place, and to direct me how to proceed the best way.

1669, April 21. I do not yet know that Sir R. S[ydenham] doth know that I am the man; but he and his son have been spoken with all in order for me; but I do not know that I am yet named; he is now pretty well.

1669, April 28. If I cannot get a resignation, I shall have but small hopes thereof. Payne is not yet come home, which makes some stop for want of information. . . . Mr. Pierpoint's eldest son died Sunday night.

1669, May 5. Sir R. Sydenham is abroad again and hearty, so we may take breath. Sir Ed. Syd[enham] goes on with his suit and hopes to prosper. The French make great proffers for our amity, 300,000*l.* in pence, Dunkirke presently, Ostend when we can catch it. The Court favour this, but I hope nobody else will. The French now begin to pick quarrels with his holiness, and refuses to send any aid to Candia; but the most considerable news is that Tom Elliott won his match at Newmarket; but that that likes me better is that Sir Th. Fanshaw being on the road from Ware to London in the company of my Lord Fanshaw, Sir Jo. Morton, and others, upon a sudden crack of Sir John's to ride to London with any horse there to London, being about 16 or 17 miles, for 1,000*l.*, Sir Tho. undertook him for 100*l.*, and beat him and his horse all to dirt, for he was so bedasht that neither horse nor man could be known, for which the King and Duke did not laugh a little at him.—P.S. Your cozen of France hath 100 sail in readiness with above 3,000 men aboard them.

1669, June 15.—P.S. My Lord Fitzwilliams is married to Creamer, of Northfolk, worth 1,200*l.* per annum. land of inheritance, and a good personal estate besides.

1669, July 28. Sir Wm. Drakes Mrs. Bidolph ran away on Friday last was sennight, and they say is married to a parson; and her side give out that she did it because she would not marry a Tony. . . . Jack Temple was married on Saturday last (if I mistake not the day) to one Strange, a widow, daughter of a brewer; this is now, as I hear, his 8th wife. . . . Sir Jo. Cutlee yesterday married to Mrs. Tippinge, 4,000*l.* portion. Bucks and Arling[ton] seem to be a little eclipsed, and not so gracious as formerly.

1669, July 29. . . . Last night I was informed that Sir Wm. Dr[ake] was treating afresh with Mr. Geo. Mountague for one of his daughters or relations for young Sir William, and I intend to go presently to speak with Mountague about it, and if I can, to put a stop therein.

1669, Aug. 3. Received yours, being ready to put foot in the coach to go to old Sir J. Monson, at Broxbourne, being not well. On better information Drake is wooing W. Mountague's daughter, wherein Mr. Attorney is more particularly concerned.

1669, Aug. 10. . . . Sir Wm. Gaudy died on Sunday night last. . . . My Lord Faulconbridge is designed for France, and Dodington is half promised to go secretary unto the embassy.

1669, Aug. 17. Sir R. Temple intended to set forward for Paris, from Blois, with Mr. Bridgman, 17th instant, s.n., and is not worse. I believe he will be here the next month. . . . Wife and I are going to dine with my Lady Scarborough; the Dr. was knighted Saturday last at Durdans by my Lord Berkeley's motion.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1669, Aug. 25. . . . Nancy Gape's match goes on apace, and the bonds drawing; and I find Will G. will make a very profitable wedding; for he gives 1,000*l.* and her father 500*l.*; there will be about 600*l.* per annum. All the younger of them provided for, and as usual a family as is in Surrey. 600 years in that very place. This man's grandfather, old Sir John Gainsford, had 26 children, 25 daughters, all but one married to the nobility and gentry, and yet gave but 20 marks a piece portion. The King rides post towards Plymouth on Monday next, where he stays 2 days, and then returns by New Forest, and intends home the Saturday sennight afterwards. I pray remember coz. Risley, and one touch how Sir Wm. Drake and Sir Rd. Bonie's trial went. I prayed yesterday to the Bishop of Winchester (who kissed the King's hand on Sunday morning) to speak a good word for Frank, who saith he hath and will do it; he goes to Farnly on Saturday, some say to dine the King on Monday.

1669, Aug. 28. J. Temple holds up his head to-morrow for bigamy, for which clergy is due; they say he hath 8 or 9. His being burnt will be pardoned. Sir Wm. Drake died this morning between 3 and 4 o'clock.

1669, Sept. 1.—. . . Sir Ed. Filmore, Lady Lexington, Mrs. Chifins, all dead in France. Sir Wm. Bacchus dead at Swallowfield.

1669, Sept. 7. . . . I guess my Lord (Bedford) will be here this week to see his new daughter, to have her to Woburn as soon as Northumberland is gone to France, which I think will be Monday week. Roberts went for Ireland yesterday. Sir Edw. Heath died in his coach going to a neighbour to dinner. Bro. Sherard is quartered at Hounslow. The night the Queen Mother died she called for her will, said she did not like it, tore off the seals, said she would alter it to-morrow; she complained much of want of sleep, so an opiate was ordained her, and her physician who watched with her to give or not give it to her, he did not like to give it her, but her impatience extorted it from him, but she died that night. The French King, understanding these circumstances, by his officers hath secured all for our King, which he hath signified to him with hoganmogian compliments. Mr. Bridgman is returned; he kissed her hand the Tuesday before, and she was very well and at play; she died the next Tuesday. J. Temple confessed 8 wives; he had the King's letter to pardon the burning. My Lord Chief Justice will not let him out of prison, except he will be contented to be transported for 7 years. . . . Lord Craven is Custos Rotulorum in Sir Edw. Nicholas' place; and Shelton, the old clerk of the peace, keeps his place, at which somebody's servants do not a little storm.

1669, Sept. 20. Bucks and Harlington cannot set their horses together. Arlington, as is muttered, sits very uneasy, and its thought should out, but is kept in because Orery should not succeed. . . . The business of Candia is very uncertain. Noualles is on his way homeward with a terze only of what he carried, and is accused of ill conduct, and yet Bellefonds continues to levy not only 1,500 men as before, but 4,000. Wagers laid in France that Beaufort is slain and is a prisoner. At Rome they complain heavily of the French. The Turk hath seized on all the French consuls, merchants, &c.

1669, Sept. 22. . . . Arlington sits fast still. Bucks hath an ague. Sir Ra. Bony would fain be burgess for Amersham. Sir Ri. Temple is coming out.

1669, Oct. 8.—I do not know that the King hath healed since summer but privately. . . . The last news of Candia which came on Sunday was good, giving hopes that it would hold out till Bellefonds's auxiliaries do arrive. Northumberland is gone for France with three times the equipage of an ambassador.

1669, Oct. 13. The King hath not healed as yet, and its believed that he will not till he returns from Newmarket, if he do go. Sir Ri. T. is not landed that I hear of. . . . Bucks and Arlington are still pecking one at the other.

1669, Oct. 19. . . . My Lord Hollis' book is not to be come at; the keeper had one, but I never saw other; those that are are at 10*s.* a piece, but I could never get one at the rate. Sir R. T. landed at Dover Saturday night. The Parliament met this day, and did not adjourn as was expected for 8 days. Not certain yet whether the King go to Newmarket or not; its believed not. The King recommended to them the effectual payment of his debts, union with Scotland, and an amicable understanding between the two houses. I hear the Commons house hath sent for the print, and discoursed of Hollis' book as a libellous pamphlet; they adjourned till Thursday. I believe Danby lies snug here, for we hear not of her.

1669, Oct. 27. . . . Sir Ri. hath brought over a French scholar with him, which I believe Mons. Papin's letter tells you of. . . . Mr. Pryn is dead. Here's old canvassing at Amersham inter Sir R. Bony and Sir Wm. Drake; 40*l.* a day treatments. Sir William stands of the election to weary Sir R. out; he came, I hear, for the Speaker's letter to the sheriff to hasten the election. I hear Sir W. hath the better by 6 voices. . . . I doubt Mr. Oglethorpe lies close, having, I fear, been in a quarrel and wounded another; this is but conjecture, yet not without probable grounds.

1669, Nov. 10. No sheriffs prickt until this afternoon. The King hath not healed yet, and I do not know when he will. I have had several relations from Holbeck and others, but all uncertain and imperfect. I do hear as if the Act of Parliament would receive some obstruction from Sir Sa. Danvers and Geo. Raleigh in behalf of their wives. . . . Bucks and Arlington were made friends on Saturday last, and long it will last.

1669, Nov. 16. The verdict went yesterday for Sir R. Temple, but not without some smart reflections upon him. The King hath healed but twice since his return, and its believed that he will again next Friday, and is doubted whether he'll heal any more till after Christmas. . . . Bucks and Arlington are broke out again.

1669, Nov. 24. Mulgrave and Rochester went away on Monday in order to fight, and no news of either of them since.

1670, May 6.—Orlando Bridgman is to be married on Sunday next.

1670, Sept. 1. Sir W. Salkild is dead, and one Sands, that has been Lord Oxford's page and cornet, is in his room.

1670, Oct. 13. Cavell the great banquer is dead. The Queen in a disguise rid behind one to Newport (I think Faire), near Audley Inn, to buy a pair of stockings for her sweet heart, the Duchess of Monmouth. Sir Bernard Gascoigne and others were her comrades. Kate Tate is married to a man of 3,000*l.* per annum. The Queen sent me word that she did that to justify the Sultan.

1670, Oct. 18.—Moulin, the Spanish ambassador, is her again as extraordinary ambassador. Sir Wm. Temple knows not yet why or wherefore he is sent for.

1670, Oct. 18.—The Prince of Orange is hourly expected with the first wind. He is to lodge at the Cock Pit. Sir James Thyn is dead, and they say 15 Parliament men more.

1670, Oct. 20.—Your neighbour Digby did upon a wager of 50*l.* undertake to walk (not to run a step) 5 miles on Newmarket Common in an hour, but he lost it by half a minute, but he had the honour of good company, the King and all his nobles to attend to see him do it stark naked and barefoot.

1670, Oct. 27. The Parliament met on Monday and adjourned till this day. A sad house here was, and a very pitiful appearance. . . . Mr. Hampden was not here, and but very few of the gang. 800,000*l.* were demanded, and the payment of his debts on interest, which are believed to be 130,000*l.* or 140,000*l.* more, and the Excise is the thing aimed at. . . . Sir C. Cottrell's other daughter is to be married to Dr. Trumbull. No Prince of Orange yet come, but expected with the first wind.

1670, Nov. 17.—I hear Scotland have withdrawn their pensions from their Commissioners; a shrewd sign that they like not the union; and the Commission have adjourned till the 1st of March. Sir Robert's grand design I never could perfectly learn, but as near as I can guess, the money was to be raised by imposition on several commodities: tobacco for one, for the farming of which he offered 80,000*l.* per annum, and so accordingly for divers others; and so he desired to be farmer of them all on such and such terms, and if anybody would give more let them have it; if not, then that he might. This goes on day by day on particulars and yet some are of opinion that it will come to a Land Tax at last; and what is worst of all it is doubted we shall all turn Turk and leave the Dutch in the lurch.

1670, Nov. 24. Dr. Trumble marries this day Betty Cotterell at her aunt Barker's house in Berkshire, who gives her 500*l.*—On Saturday last the King, the Prince of Orange, with other Dukes and Duchesses, were incog. at the revels at Lincoln's Inn, and its thought the Queen and some of the Duchesses will be there next Saturday.

1670, Dec. 8.—The proposition for the Land Tax in the House of Commons was defeated by 152 to 109.—Gives an account of an attack on the Duke of Ormond in St. James St. on the Thursday previous. My

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

Lord having recollected himself by that he had gone about 30 paces, as he guessed, (and as he told me himself, for I went yesterday morning to see him,) and finding he was hindmost, his foreman having his sword and bridle in one hand and his pistol in the other, wrested the pistol out of his hand and threw the fellow down, fell with him and upon him, and got his sword and got loose of them, not without some other hazards, one pistol being shot at him and two more fired; he is bruised over the eye, and a knock over the pole, with a pistol as he guessed, and a small cut on his head. . . . Some think they were going to hang him at Tiburn.—Describes the horses.—The French ambassador last night acquainted the King that he intended to be in April at Dunkirk with 40,000 men, but assured him (believe him that will) that nothing was intended against him.

1671, March 23.—Her Highness' falling sickness increases upon her. There is a rumour as if France had proclaimed war against the Dutch, and that Munster was joined with France. The Bill of Conventicles had many grievous rubs yesterday and was re-committed.

1671, March 30.—A strange damp in the city as to trade and upon men's spirits.

1671, April 6. The Duchess of York died on Friday; she was opened on Saturday, embalmed on Sunday, and buried last night.—By the best and truest intelligence she did not die as a Papalina, but she made no profession or confession either way. Her last acts were here:—She dined out heartily at Burlington House on Thursday before, and that night, according to custom, she was about $\frac{1}{2}$ of an hour at her own accustomed devotions, and at her return from Burlington House she called for her chaplain, Dr. Turner, to pray by her. The Queen and Duke were private with her an hour and more on Friday morning, and no priest; but Father Howard and Father Patrick were attending according to their duty on the Queen in the next room. The Duke sent for the Bishop of Oxford out of the chapel, who came, but her senses were first gone. In the meantime the Duke called "Dame, do you know me," twice or thrice; then with much stirring she said I. After a little respite she took a little courage, and with what vehemency and tenderness she could she said "Duke, duke, death is terrible, death is very terrible," which were her last words. I am well assured she was never without three or four of her women, so that it was impossible a priest could come to her.

1671, April 20. There is a great talk of the French, but I find no cause for fear. If rightly informed, he can not man out 20 ships. The greatest fear is that the King of France understands the King of England better than the King of England understands the King of France; and that if the Dutch be put to it, that is to save themselves, they will put some day tricks upon us by tricking of it with the French. There is all this time a great feud between the Lords and Commons, the Lords having altered some of the rates in the money Bill and brought them lower, and not raised any. The Commons take pet and will not endure that the Lords should alter anything in money matters. The Lords are as stiff to maintain their right.—Denton thinks the Commons will cry Craven.

1671, April 27. Mentions the preacher at the French church in the Savoy, a convert from Rome, being made Prebendary of Rochester.

1671, May 4. Frenchmen come over every day from Dunkirk, Essex, Suffolk, and these maritime places have a fine time of it for the victualling the army at Dunkirk, where the King has 27,000 at work every day upon the harbour to make it fit for big ships, relieved thrice a day by 9,000 at a time, and they have all 2*d*. a day above their soldier's pay. And we are doing as great things here. Lady Castlemaine drives in the parks with 8 horses, and the town says 12 are intended very shortly.

1671, May 11. The Crown jewels were stolen from the Tower on Tuesday morning between 6 or 7 o'clock.—He gives an account of it. . . . Blood said he set Ormond behind his son Hunt when he was assaulted.

1671, Aug. 1. Ambassador Montague is returning to his embassy with the advantage of being Master of the Wardrobe, which Lord Sandwich had; but how compassed I cannot tell.

1671, Aug. 17. Sir John Evelyn, famous for pulling down a new house built by his father in spite to his brother, is dead, and has given away all he could from him.

1671, Aug. 21. Henry Verney is very ill and going to die. Sir John Evelyn has given all he could to Mary Gittings.

1671, Aug. 27. Sunday evening.—H. Verney is very ill and will die in 24 or 48 hours.

1671, Aug. 28. H. Verney died this morning between 3 and 4 o'clock p.m. . . .

1671, Aug. 29. The King is returned from the Buoy and Nore, and the common speech is that we must to sea again, tho' our ships are in no excellent condition. Our land forces march also nobody knows whither.—No letter from Sir Roger this week.

1671, Sept. 14. I hear Thin is laid siege to Lady Cleveland's daughter.—Bucks, Ashley, Lauderdale, &c. against Cleveland, Arlington, &c. But I hear nothing at all of Ormond. Sir Thomas Clarges is out at all, but upon what account, except that of Coventry's nose, I wot not.

1671, Sept. 21. Parliament is prorogued till 4th of Oct. 1671. Sir Thos. Littleton is out of his place, and Sir Thos. Osborne is sole treasurer of the Navy.—Lord Sunderland goes Ambassador Extraordinary into Spain.

1671, Sept. 22. Proclamation for Parliament to be the 30th of October 1672. Wise and not wise wonder at it.

1671, Sept. 28. Sir Geo. Downham goes ambassador into Holland, and Lord Sunderland into Spain. Our merchants are much troubled, fearing we shall fall out with Holland, which, with the great fort or citadel that is building on the river about Graves Inne (Gravesend?), which will hold 10 or 15,000 men, makes them mumur to some tune. The King went the 25th, the Queen the next day. There is something doing about Windsor that will secure the river westward.

1671, Oct. 2. Sir Geo. Downing is made Commissioner with Garraway and the rest. I hear the Dean of Winton desires to be excused from accepting Bristol. His deanery or parsonage at Stepney, or another that he hath, the least of which is better than that bishoprick. The reason of proroguing the Parliament is guessed to be that there being at this time very great intrigues between the crowns of England and France against Holland, which the French believe would not please the Parliament, which, if sitting, might occasion the breach of the intrigues. Others say that [the Duke of] Bucks has no desire this Parliament should ever meet again.

1671, Oct. 4. Sir John Chichely, who married the widow Norton, is going to the stregths, and Sir Edward Sprague is to be called home. This day Madam Carwell and Nell went for Newmarket. It is thought that the French work by the first. The Holland ambassador is gone thither also. It is said that we are preparing 80 sail against spring, and 30,000 men. It is observable in the proclamation that it is said that the said Parliament shall be again prorogued from the said 16th April until the 30th of Oct. next, that it is until the 30th day of Oct. 1672. These ambiguities occasion various conjectures.

1671, Oct. 19. Mentions a new set of coiners, whereof a Frenchman and a Dutchman were the chief operators, and Sir Lewis Dives' eldest son the chief actor (the tests and coins being found in his house), and a younger brother did vent them. Madam Carwell went to Newmarket with the French ambassador, and was received there in great state; she came in his Majesty's coach, with two other coaches attending her, and my Lord Arlington and another Lord Lieutenant accompanying her, and so returned again to her lodgings.

1671, Oct. 24. Sir Geo. Downing has gone to Holland, Lord Sunderland to Spain, Sir Robert Southwell to Germany. The Dutch have a declaration printed but kept close; we, I hear, are framing the like. The treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle will be insisted on, if it shall be against us, so; if against us so we hope to be paid for sitting still, yet so as with weapons in our hands, that is ready with 80 sail of ships, ready for what may happen.

1671, Nov. 9. Charles Sydenham is near his end, and the Lady Dowager Peterboro' is dead . . . H. Germain is going to the Duke of Insperge.

1671, Nov. 16. The Duke of Bucks is not so fierce for the French as formerly, and I hear the King has given the Dutch ambassador a more gracious answer than formerly.

1672, March 14. Moutteer Meer-man has been with the King and delivered him a paper without hand or seal, and desired an audience next morning; the King expostulating, both the ambassadors told him that if he would accept of the contents it should be authorised, and they would send to their masters that post. So the King asked them if their masters sent them only to send to them again, and turned about and went away, whereby he gave them a Rowland for their Oliver, and received them as they did Sir G. Downing. The

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNET,
BART.

subject matter of this paper was that they would be content to strike, but without acknowledging his right or sovereignty. The King asked them if they had any more to offer, but they would confess nothing else. Sir E. Sprague not knowing our difficulties came home in company with their straight's fleet, which is gone round about by Scotland. I hear we have sent some after them to pick up what they can. It is reported the Spanish ambassador told the King, that let him begin when he would, that they had 1,800,000*l.* worth of his subject's goods in their ports, and that he had not 100,000 of his Majesty's subjects. I hear the Dutch have agreed with the Swedes to carry their goods in their vessels.

1671, March 21. Sir Robert Holmes was beholden to the Dutch for that they did not swallow him up as a bit; and they to him, for that when Sir Ed. Spragg came by him and gave him notice of the coming of the Dutch fleet he would not speak to him to stay and aid him, who had seven or eight good ships well equipped. This is but an ill-beginning . . . The King and Duke went to Sheerness on Tuesday, and yesterday Sir John Treavor and Sir John Hobart went to Wendover. You may guess their rewards.

1671, March 28. At Cambridge assizes the declaration being pleaded by one for his liberty and discharge out of prison, the judge asked him if he had it under the Great Seal: he saying No, told him he could not judge by a law out of his pocket, and so was remanded back to prison . . . Col. Fitz Garrett (a papist and soldier of fortune) that was Governor of Tangier, hath a regiment of foot, and they say is made Governor of Yarmouth. Sir Geo. Downing is out of the Customs, and Sir R. T. succeeds him in the Customs; his warrant is now with the Attorney to alter the commission by, so I guess you will see him little this summer at Stow. The King was this week at Lambeth with the Archbishop, and it is said he will put out a farther explanation of his Declaration . . . Its said the Dutch will be very strong at sea. Its believed the French have taken Santo Domingo by the help of three or four of our privateers alias pirates, which would not return to Jamaica when we concluded peace with Spain beyond the line. The ship that came away left 4 or 5,000 men on their march and within 15 miles of Domingo.

1672, April 4.—The Duke went yesterday to view the navy. The Duke of Monmouth goes for France.

1672, April 10.—The Duke goes to sea on Monday next, and the King and Queen go to Rochester with him to see the fleet. Parliament is prorogued till the 30th of Oct. The Spanish ambassador made his entrance on Monday.

1672, July 4. De Ruyter lies snug in strongholds with shrouds and canvasses down, not knowing his Majesty or whom to fight for; and I think we are before the Texel.

1672, July 11. Nimeguen is taken, and the French army is gone towards Breda, and we are sending both horse and foot and artillery, but what to do plebs nescit.

1672, July 17. There is news that the Duke of Bucks put the French king in mind of something relating to the treaty, which he had no occasion to remember; whereupon the Duke boldly and smartly replied that if so, then they had nothing to do but to begone, and accordingly took their leaves and went for Antwerp; which the French king perceiving sent after them to let them know that he called to mind what the Duke before had put him in mind of, and so desired their return, and there they are . . . We say very confidently that the Duchess of Inspruge shall have our Duke, and that Lord Peterborough only waits here for his Majesty's command to go and fetch her. The Dutch fleet is out agam, 50, others say 70 sail, besides 20 fire ships.—There are reports of peace, and the Prince of Orange to be Stat-holder in tail male, &c., &c.

1672, July 24.—Monday morning came certain news that De Witt and his brother Van Putten were secured as guilty of a conspiracy to assassinate the Prince of Orange; that Dessot was in the same confederacy but had made his escape, tho' some letters speak as if he was taken in pursuit, &c. . . . There are reports that the King of France is fortifying Nancy; he is gone for Versailles, and they say attacks no more towns; and that the Duke of Monmouth and his army is coming into Dunkirk.

1672, July 29.—The French king has broke up his company and is gone to Paris. The English of that is, as we say, that he being under a promissory act not to conclude peace without us, he will leave the Dutch no enemy but ourselves. that they may the better hold us in play . . . The Duke of Monmouth is coming home, and his regiment (which I hear is much decreased) is to go into Dunkirk; others say he mustered 2,000 at his departure . . . Pensioner De Witt has laid down his place, and its thought one Vlack shall succeed him. Van Putten is to be tried for his life . . . De Rutier lies about the Goree, and our fleet off the Texell . . . Mombar is escaped out of prison. The Prince of Orange is forming an army.

1672, July 31 and Aug. 1. This day (Aug. 1st) Henry Fitzroy is to be married at Whitehall by the Archbishop to Lord Arlington's daughter.

1672, Aug. 22. Mentions the murder of De Witt and his elder brother Renwart van Putten. There is a report that the Genoese have routed the Duke of Savoy . . . The preparations of sending land forces and artillery continue.

1672, Sept. 19. The Duke is expected this day at home for this winter.

1672, Sept. 26. We talk much of paying off our seamen, but its thought very many of them will be paid by putting them on board the winter guard. Sir Edward Sprague commands it, and he is going among the herring busses. The French and we have lost 5 ships apiece in the straits. There is great talk of farming out the Customs and stating them by loan to raise present money; and yet we say the King has 2 or 300,000*l.* in ready cash, and is paying off the great ships . . . The King has given Sir E. Sprague 1,000*l.* per annum.

1672, Oct. 3. The farming of the Customs is but discourse, which now begins to turn out a loan only . . . Lord Londonderry died the 16th Sept. . . . The King and Duke are gone this day to Newmarket. The Duke of Ormond has taken the Speaker's house at Burford. Ossory has the garter on Monday last.

1672, Oct. 17. The Prince of Orange received a scurvy rebuke before Howarden, and lost 1,200 men confest, and his design besides; the French loss was thought to be great, betrayed by Boors. Lord Peterborough hastes away to Inspruge.

1673, March 20. The Lords have done with the Commons Bill, yet with such alterations that they will certainly breed altercations, and to which the Commons will never submit, as generally believed. They have at the Duke's instance excepted 12 papists by name, and the King's, Queen's, Duke's, and Prince's servants in general, if fame say true; and I can't hear that either the King or Prince desire it. They on Tuesday brought in a wonderful modest paper of grievances which [they] submitted to his Majesty's pleasure; one was about Lockyer's regiment whom Sir Thos. Clearges paid home; also another about Ireland, wherein Lord Arran, being desired by the Committee, gave a very good and a very modest account. Dick Talbot they have branded; and whereas Ormond would never let any papist to be in any commission of the peace, there were now some in all counties but in Tipperary, which is Ormond's chief county, and he would let none of them be in.

1673, April 3. On Easter day when the King left his closet to receive the Sacrament, his brother left him and went to his own lodgings; so only Prince Rupert received with him besides the bishops, the Lord Marshal standing by.

1673, April 17. . . . Sir J. Coventry hath kissed the King's hand, and Anglesey is Lord Privy Seal. Here was a noise that the Speaker should have been Privy Seal, Sir Thos. Meers Speaker, Sir. Thos. Lee Master of the Buckhounds.

1673, April 24. All people take the oath here lest they be snapt and lose 500*l.* Prince Rupert, the Duke of Ormond, the Chancellor cum multis aliis have taken it at St. Martins, and you (and I believe a thousand more) that little dream of taking it, must take it, or they'll be snapt . . . It is bruited abroad the Duke will take it at St. Martins, but it is much doubted. The King, Duke, and Prince are all gone to Chatbam. If you take it in the country, the very two that witness the parson's and churchwarden's signing must also swear they saw you take it, and that they were, or believe that they were, the churchwardens.

1673, May 1. The French fleet is expected every day at Portsmouth.—Our ships are fallen down to Buoy d'Nore.

1673, July 5. Landerdale and his Duchess are gone to the Bath. The Prince is now under sail again. God bless him and his navy.

1673, July —. Some say here that the papists are as high here as ever; others that the Duke is tacking about to undeceive the people, which two can hardly stand together. As his match with Insprug, so the other of

SIR
H. VERNET
BART.

SIR VERNET,
BART.

Wittenburg and another of Delbeuf is off, and he is now upon the Duke of Modena's daughter; Iain the papists would have him marry before the Parliament sits. A captain of ours of a small vessel of 4 iron guns and 12 men was about Lisbon attacked by a Dutch ship of 12 guns and 50 men, which came side to side, boarded our ship, fought it for 3 hours. We killed 14 of their men, took 11 prisoners with their master, three others of their's got into our boat, and what became of them I wot not. For this the King has ordered him a medal, better than half a crown in moneys, and 1s. 6d. in ale.

1673, July 17. Blackheath marched seawards at 4 o'clock on Monday morning, and the King went hence to see them, and returned that night. He went to sea on Tuesday, and returned to-day. We have 116 men-of-war, the least 40 guns, and 40 fire ships. Monsr. Shomberg (half English, half Palatinate, a stout protestant) is Capt. General under Prince Rupert as to these forces. Some say he has bought Lauderdale's bedchamber place; others say the pension only, and that Lauderdale keeps the place till he see whether he may have occasion to march to the other side of the great pond. Bucks is said to part with his mastership and that Monmouth shall have it, tho' Bucks would fain have Don Carlo have it, to whom the King is not so favourable as formerly. 'Tis said Shomberg is worth 60,000*l.*, that he shall be naturalised, and that he shall buy and settle here, and be an English Earl. The King of France would have made him a Marshal of France if he would have turned his religion. They talk that Osborn shall be removed again, and Sir Wm. Coventry is named to succeed, some say Ormond. Here is Don Bernardo . . . the Spanish resident at Holland, come privately; his errand is said to mediate for peace.

1673, July 26. The Dutch came out in a line as if they would have fought us, but they, perceiving us to tack to meet them, made an humble retreat into their stronghold.

1673, July 28. Mademoiselle Carwell is made Duchess of Portsmouth.

1673, July 30. Tuesday night the Duke of Monmouth gave the Duchess of Portsmouth, a very sumptuous treat at the house at Chelsea, where the King was.

1673, Aug. 2. We fear we shall have the daughter of Modena for our Duchess.

1673, Aug. 11. My coz., J. Peterborough, is gone from Paris about his amours. It is confidently asserted here that the Emperor has, in most solemn manner on a Sunday after the Communion taking up the Cross in his hand, declared he would denounce war against France, and that he has since declared war.

1673, Aug. 14. Her Grace of Portsmouth remembers her duty to you, and begs the favour of you to be her friend to the Chancellor that he would seal her patent, which they say he refuses to do because she is not naturalised, and that she cannot be without she receive the Sacrament and subscribe.

1673, Aug. 25. News of our retaking St. Helens, and also the taking of three more East India Dutch ships, which, with five of our East India ships, are come safe into Kinsale under the conduct of Capt. Munday, with four frigates and a fire ship. The Duchess of Portsmouth is sworn of the bedchamber to the Queen by my Lord St. Albans, Cornbury refusing. We talk of four more Lords. Bab. May, Laurenz Hide, Arran, and Paston. I see Paston, Viscount Yarmouth, sat yesterday among the Lords at chapel. Osborne is made Lord Latimer . . . Prince Rupert is expected here to-day.

1673, Aug. 28. The Prince is come to the Buoy d'Nore, the French would fain have him out. When D'Estrees came to him he would not speak to him.

1673, Sept. 4. Account of a naval engagement. Van Trump gave Sprai a gun of challenge, and so they fell to it. Trump beat him out of two ships, and going in his shallop to a third, a shot came and sunk it, and he was found dead with his head above water, and his hand fast to a piece of the boat. Ossory had 25 men with him on the quarter deck, and all were killed by him but himself and his page. We don't brag at all. The French came not near, tho' they had the weather gage, and might, and if they had done as the English, we in all probability had mastered the whole fleet. The Dutch much avoided Prince Rupert, whether out of fear or love, we cannot tell. Sprai's ship, the Prince, was so shattered, having all his masts cut off by the board, that the Prince anchored by him and five more, to preserve her, and so brought her off. We are gone northward, and they homeward, both soundly torn. No Duchess of Modena.—Peterborough is recalled.

1673, Sept. 18. Coals are 38s. in the Pool, but its believed will be cheaper . . . Duke Lauderdale desires you to get ready, and he'll call on you on his way to Scotland to winter with him there; and Peter Talbot, the bishop, desires you to follow him to France. It is thought his brother Dick and Father Patrick will not be long after him.

1673, Sept. 22. News has just come that the Duke of York is married to Modena unexpectedly, both to the King and Duke. Everton has destroyed 50 French ships fishing about Newfoundland, and fired, tooke and destroyed 12 Virginia ships in the very harbour there. We say here that Arundel hath fought Wharton and disarmed him, the truth whereof I expect to hear from you.

1673, Sept. 25. Peter Talbot, the bishop, is going for France, and his brother Dick with Father Patrick are marching after him. Lauderdale is marching for Scotland.

1673, Oct. 2. I hear nothing here of Lord Peterborough being turned Papist. I hear the Council have declared that the Duchess shall have no chapel allowed her, and that the King will gratify the Parliament in anything for securing of religion . . . Here is a great buz of this French prisoner, but I can not tell what to make of it. The new Duchess will be at Lyons on Sunday next, and here within three weeks, if nothing disappoint. The King of France has proclaimed 1,000 pistoles for this French Madame Printeleire, and they say our King offers 500*l.* to anyone to seize her. She went first into Italy, whither the French King pursued her so fast that she is stolen hither, of which our King hath notice from his brother of France.

1673, Oct. 9. The King is at Hampton Court.—All preparations are making to meet the Duchess.—I sent to Sir R. T. for news, and he sends for certain that the Dutch refuse to treat any longer except Spain, Lorraine, and the Emperor be admitted into the treaty.

1673, Oct. 23. I went to Westminster and met with this vote, that an address be made to his Majesty by the members of their House that are of his Privy Council, that he would not permit the marriage with Modena to be consummated, nor suffer him to marry with any of the Popish religion. By the time this was done, Black Rod came and prorogued Parliament till Friday next.

1673, Oct. 27. Some think Parliament will be further prorogued this day. We talk of a new Speaker, and Sir Thos. Meeres to be he.

1673, Oct. 28. Nothing done yesterday but his Majesty's speech, which relished so little that they have not returned thanks. He fell upon the Speaker to have dismounted him, but he sits yet very ticklishly, which took up all the time. One merry story by the way. A sabot was found on or under the Speaker's chair, with the arms of England on the one side and of France on the other, with beads, &c. on one side, and laws, liberty, and religion on the other, with this motto. Utrum horum mavis accipe. P.S. It was one Ayliffe that did it, and as soon released as apprehended.

1673, Oct. 30. Great expectation what will be done to-day in the House. They have not sat since Monday. Never poor Speaker was so curried as he was that day.

1673, March 20. Lord Lindsay is in the Duke of Buck's place of the bedchamber for 6,000*l.*

1674, April 2. The King went this day to Newmarket, and returns Saturday sennight next.

1674, April 16. The French king in person is fallen into Burgundy, and is at or near Besance.

1674, April 27. The Duchess of Somerset is dead. She left a will with a codicil at the tail (to which I hear Lord Bridgeman was not privy), not at all to Mr. Thynn's disadvantage.

1674, April 29.—Your friend the keeper was very near being put out, but I can not yet learn why. It is said that Coventry kept him in.—Sir O. B[ridgman] is very well again.

1674, [May 14]. The Earl of Sussex or Danby is to be married on Saturday next. The King hath two tables, with whom 30 are to sit, the Queen, &c., and so on.

1674, Aug. 13. A stag in the great park at Windsor fell on a man and killed him, and another coming to his relief, he killed him also.—The general belief is that the French were soundly beaten.

1674, Aug. 20. We will believe that the French have no more to brag. The Prince of Condé hath feasted his lords and high captains, and was served with the Prince of Orange's plate taken in the last late battle of Pondicherry.

SIR
VERNET,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNEX,
BART.

is run twice thro' the breast by Bernard Howard, in a duel.

1674, Sept. 3. This day Cambridge do their homage to their new Chancellor at Worcester House, and they march from Derby House by Whitehall, that his Duchess may see them, either from her lodgings or Whitehall.

1674, Sept. 10. I was last night by the Duke at supper, who told of a conspiracy that had been in France, for which some were broken on the wheel.—Some of Roan was chief.

1674, Sept. 21. News that Condé came to relieve Oudenarde, which done, he retired with very little opposition. The Parliament will be put off till March, as generally believed.

1674, Sept. 24. No proclamation yet, tho' expected, to prorogue the Parliament. Lord Arlington's house was burnt down on Tuesday at midnight; nothing saved but the things in the closet. The loss guessed to be about 40 or 50,000*l*. He and she were both at the Bath. The non-action of Germans and Spaniards at the affair of Oudenard is imputed to the treachery of Souches. The Prince of Orange is at the Hague, in discontent.

1674, Oct. 8. Account of Bournville's proceedings against Turenne.—They fought from 9 o'clock till night parted them . . . For certain, Nando Littleton, his whole regiment (which was the Duke of Monmouth's), of horse, is cut off, himself killed, and scarce 40 left of the whole. Churchill lost 11 officers of his regiment. Sir Geo. Hamilton, that married our cousin Jenins, had three wounds, his horse shot, and his regiment shattered cruelly. Douglas's regiment not there. Duras had three horses shot under him, and Turin (Turenne ?) one. They confess 4,000 of their own men killed. This is their own story. From Holland they write, &c.

1675, March 26. The Swedish ambassadors are daily expected here, in order to join with our King to be mediators for a general peace. Our Councils dissolving this Parliament, or calling them or a new one again, are variously reported. The lawyers avouch Lord Cook (Coke), for being dissolved, on course for that they have sat three several times, and done nothing. I do not hear that Lord Lauderdale is coming hitherward.

1675, April 7. I had wonderful good luck this Healing, not one of my tickets failed. One returned and gave me most wonderful thanks, and would have given me a quart of sack.

1675, April 15. There were bitter words spoke yesterday, and disputed till 3 or 4 o'clock, whether thanks or no thanks, but 'twas carried in the affirmative. Sir J. C. intimated as if there were none but rogues, &c. about. Sir N. C. asked for what they should give thanks, for laws, liberty, property, religion? Why? He had sworn, and was bound already by oath to God and man to keep them inviolably. As to the shipping, Mallet or Mariott said, sure there could be no want of money for his Majesty had granted 3,500*l*. a year out of this very money designed for shipping to Lautherday, concerning whom they have this day voted to make an address to remove him, and have appointed a committee to draw up reasons.

1675, April 22. These two days the Lords have spent about a test to be enacted; the main distigutive clause being not to alter the government of Church or State, which hath been very tedious, and with strong opposition even until 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon, so that the King dined at the House; and yesterday, it being put to the vote, the Bill was retained by the help of the bishops, who have contrived it. It makes a great noise, and causes great trouble.

1675, April 24. Yesterday the Test Bill was retained in the Lords' house by one voice only, and if some had not been at dinner it had been cast out with indignation, tho' somebody solicited it hard. However, Lord Anglesey has left this sting in the tail of it, by a memorial openly in the house to the bishops of the reasons why they were cast out of the Lords' house before, and how this Parliament brought them in again, so that they now sit not on any old foundation, but by an Act of Parliament, and therefore advised them to be cautious lest they tricked themselves out of it again.

1675, April 29. Your friend Clarendon has lost his leg. The pretence was that he struck one of the grand at the setting in unto the opera, but other reasons are guessed. The Lord Mayor was bitterly stigmatised at the King's Bench, because the Chancellor keeps his place maugre all change. Clarendon's key is not yet disposed of, it is said that it is between Sunderland and Sussex.—The House of Commons business about Lauderdale and the Treasurer.—The main thing as to the latter is his new patent, which turns all grist from Sir R. Howard's and the other officers' mill to a treasure of his own making.

1675, May 3. Sir W. Coventry, on debating the Bill of Offices, said in conclusion, that at the beginning of this Parliament there were but about 40 pensioners to the Court by offices, places, &c., and that now there were about 200, and he feared that, except this or a like Bill did pass, or this Parliament dissolved and the triennial revived, we should shortly be at the French lock, that an edict from the King would pass here for an Act of Parliament.

1675, May 6. They are drawing up reasons of their address to his Majesty about Lauderdale, and to recall by proclamation all his subjects in foreign service.

1675, July 15. There is a report that Turenne has had a loss. The Bishop of Worcester is dead, and Fleetwood succeeds him, and Oxford is Dean of the Chapel. Portsmouth's son is made Duke of Lenox and Richmond, and Lady Marshall is his governess.

1675, July 29. The Bishop of Winchester is sworn of the Privy Council. Turenne is certainly killed by a cannon shot from an ambuscade, as he was going to discover the posture of the enemy.—The Prince of Condé is going to succeed him.

1675, Aug. 12.—Crequi is routed for certain, horse and foot.—It was a brave retreat, but both sides soundly basted. I saw a letter from Trelawny, of Howard's regiment, and was in the action, and stood 24 hours to the middle in water, when their baggage was marching over the Rhine. Strasburg by 3 guns gave Cuculi notice. Trelawny writes that cannon never played faster from broadsides of ships than they did that day.

. . . The King was here last night in Council about the weavers, who in numbers go into their fellow weavers' houses, French or English, and break an instrument to weave, which breaks the prorer sort. One in Southwark defended his own house, and killed two of them. The Court returns hither on Saturday next come fortnight.

1675, Sept. 9. Wimbledon is bought for the Duchess of Portsmouth, and I hear there is 12,000*l*. given her besides.

1675, Sept. 23. A sad fire at Northampton, not 40 houses left unburnt.—Lord Cornbury, riding t'other day in the highway, fell distracted. The Duke of Richmond's patent is passed (and so is neither Southampton nor Grafton), an establishment of 4,000*l*. per annum is settled upon him, with a great attendance, and his train help up.—His coach is to be with the King's arms, without a bend, and, I think, no other distinction.

1675, Sept. 30.—Here is a great bustle about the farm of Ireland, granted to Sir John Baber and Pitts, wherein Pitts before the King and Council behaved himself so rudely that the Duke hath put him out of his place; but some day he will be received again. But Sir John came off with flying colours, tho' a charge was brought in against him; he was fined, and his adversary sent to the Gate House . . . The farm is raised 50,000*l*., and they advanced 40,000*l*.

1675, Oct. 14. The Houses met yesterday and adjourned till Monday, but they were in a great heat about a letter or paper (they know not what to call it themselves), which more particularly reflected on my Lord Candish and Sir Thos. Meeres, but the House took it to themselves. It was signed Thos. Howard Carlile and Richmond, that there may be no mistake. The Speaker was ordered to take them both to his custody till Monday. The King desired money to pay his debts and to build ships.

1675, Oct. 21. About Candish and Howard.—Know that a letter was written (superscribed to nobody), and several of them scattered in Pall Mall, &c., dated in Aug. last (but never come to light till now), aspersing Lord Candish and Sir Thos. Meeres, and indeed the whole Commons House, and subscribed Th. Howard Richmond Carlile, which were not three distinct persons, but only Th. Howard, to distinguish him from two or three others T. H. The ground of the letter was that when the news of Col. John Howard's death, being in Turenne's army, came over, Candish and Meere's asked What made he there; if he had obeyed the King's proclamation he might have been alive. The letter reflected very much on them in Parliament, and on Parliament in general . . . In the House Candish behaved himself excellently well, and came off with great honour, and the House espoused the quarrel, and ordered some to take Howard's answer, whether he would or would not own it, which he has not yet declared, being ill of the gout, but is ordered to come to the bar next week. Candish the other day posted a paper at Whitehall and

SIR
H. VERNEX,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

at the Parliament door, that whoever subscribed the paper was a rogue, rascal, and coward. This mad carriage has so incensed the House, that they sent him yesterday to the Tower, they having espoused his quarrel.—Mentions Tuesday's proceedings in the House about money matters.

1675, Oct. 28. On Tuesday Mr. T. H. (Howard) was sent for to the House, and not answering whether it was his hand to the paper, was sent to the Tower.—On the money debate the mayor spoke as stoutly as old Sir Charles Harbord; he said these were his grievances above all that were named, viz., a standing army and a standing Parliament.

1675, Nov. 4. Lord John Berkeley has been apoplectic, and yet, if you please to say it, has incapacitated him from being a plenipotentiary. You may perhaps hear of a scandalum magnatum. I am sure, downright. Scarborough was discarded there for a like peccadillo.

1675, Nov. 11. It is impossible to know a set time of healing; they must take their fortune; here came two above 110 miles to be touched, recommended to me and Mr. Wiseman, yet they staid here so long that I was fain to lend them 20s. to carry them home, and yet I spoke and writ and did all I could.—There is a desperate letter, alias libel, extant about the Test voted seditious, and to be burnt by the hangman by the Lord's House. Some of their own members are suspected for it. It is like to make a great disturbance; likewise that of the priest St. Germain, who, with 4 or 5 associates, came to a newly converted priest from them to us to sign a paper of recantation, and if not—poignard, stiletto, pistol, what not—with accounts of the King and Duke being Papists (treason without doubt), so the King has offered 200*l.* to any who shall bring him in.

1675, Nov. 13. A pistol was shot at Lord Shaftesbury, and the bullet went between the coach and the coachman. Sir John Baber sold his Drs. place to Dr. Wetherley.

1675, Nov. 18. The Gazette tells us the King will touch no more after this month till April A Bill was brought into the Commons that a man might have as many wives as he pleased, not exceeding 12, by Mr. Mallet Sir John Finch stands sheriff for Gloucester which will not cost much, the gentry being in combination to find liversies, to have a 5*s.* ordinary, and every one to pay for himself and his man, and no present to the judges, which is the design of several counties.

1675, Nov. 25. Lord Shaftesbury was certainly shot at. Mallet's Bill was certainly offered, but would not be received.

1675, Nov. 29. Since the prorogation the Court hath made great retrenchments in tables, board wages, pensions, salaries, gifts, and what not.

1675, March 16. Messina was like to be betrayed to the Spaniards, but it was discovered in the nick.—Sir John Norborow broke into Tripoli, took or fired two men-of-war and two prizes which they had taken The King is gone to Windsor and returns to-morrow, which I doubt will retard the King's evil woman.

1676, March 30. I saw Rainsford and Montague kiss the King's hand to be Chief Justice and Chief Baron. The Duke has now declared himself a professed Papist.—Talbot, the priest, is come over again.

1676, March 31. The Prince of Orange is so sick that he was suspected to be poisoned, and 40 of his servants are put away on suspicion; which has at last ended in the small pox Bordeaux, in a flame, dragged with a halter the gatherer of the gabelles thro' the city and then burnt him; therefore, the King has sent them their pardon without punishment, so all is well again.

1676, April 6. Lord Essex is gone to Newmarket and from thence to Ireland, if he meet with no rub there. The Treasury sits very loose.

1676, April 12.—There is a report of Norbury having given the Tripolies another defeat The Duke of Somerset visiting Ambassador Berkeley, he received him with great state, keeping his chair of state with his hat on; the Duke on his return meets with the Earl of Shrewsbury going to Berkeley, to whom my Lord relating his reception said he would be even with him, who approaching, was received after the same manner (viz., without calling for a seat and being spoken to put off his hat), but he reached his own seat, put on his hat, and sat close to him. When he took his leave, Berkeley told him he had affronted him, Shrewsbury murmured that he knew how to treat him in his public and private station, and that he might know that at home he was a better man than himself, &c. If these be lies, you have them as I had them.

1676, April 13. The plot at Denmark sounds ill; the King to have been poisoned, his brother to have succeeded and to have married a natural daughter of France; the Duke of Savoy to have been so served, and the minor to have been commanded to—I have forgot whom, &c.; the mother drawn into the confederacy; 170 odd thousand pounds were found in the Chancellor's house of French money; he is degraded and brought back to his old name, Shoemaker. The whole narrative is expected in print. . . . We expect his Majesty here on Saturday. . . . They say the Duke and Tr[easurer] had a smart combat at Newmarket, so that Portsmouth was sent for. He sits uneasy.

1676, April 20. Lord Purbeck and Sir Geo. Howyll have been in the field, where, thro' a wound Sir George had in his hand, he lost his sword, and no greater hurt done James Herbert lost his cause. Pembroke treated the jury, where every one was afraid to sit next to him, but at last Sir Fr. Vincent did; at last my Lord began a small health of two bottles, which Sir Francis refusing to pledge, dash went a bottle at his head, and as it is said, broke it. They being parted, Sir Francis was getting into a coach, and alarm arising that my Lord was coming with his sword drawn, Sir Francis refused to enter saying he was never afraid of a naked sword in his life; and come he did, and at a pass my Lord brake his sword; at which Sir Francis cried he scorned to take the advantage, and then threw away his own sword and flew at him fiercely, beat him, and daubed him daintily, and so were parted; a footman of my Lord's followed mischievously Sir Francis into a boat, and him Sir Francis threw into the Thames. Two more were coming with like intention, but some red coats knowing Sir Francis drew in his defence, and I hear no more of it There is a bruit of a proclamation to make it punishable to say the Duke is a Papist.

1676, Aug. 3. The Bishop of Norwich is dead. The town says that Sparrow is to succeed. Cary, Dean of Exeter, is to be Bishop of Exeter, and North or Lampough to be Dean of Exeter, which is better than the bishoprick with a commendam.

1676, Aug. 22. Capt. Wood has returned from Nova Zembla, and is at court.

1676, Sept. 14. News here that the French king has put forth an edict that all ships that intend to be free from his privateers, i.e., from his piracy, shall take passes of him, but shall pay 5*s.* duty for every tun; so we are to be tributaries to the French king. The merchants have been with the King, who gave them a gracious answer. Lord Cambden has furiously treated the town of Stamford, and not only that town but 400 foreigners came into the treat, and my Lord Lindsey with 80 of his company. Its thought it cost him 1,000*l.*, and he treats on still. Lord Lindsey invited the town to his house and treated them nobly. Lord Exeter, I hear, was not well pleased at this; it seems he intended the burghess place for another. Whissendine was invited, but did not go. The Queen is gone to Ensam and returns to-morrow sennight. The King goes to Newmarket the 2nd of October.

1676, Oct. 2. The English in Virginia are very unruly, insomuch, that Sir Wm. Berkeley is forced to lie at sea. Sir H. Chicheley they had taken prisoner, but he escaped We talk of sending 20 or 25 ships to Algiers; Sir J. Norbury, Admiral; Arthur Herbert, Vice-Admiral; Sir Roger Strickland, Rear-Admiral. The Duke of Monmouth, captain of the Plymouth.

1676, Oct. 5. News that the East India Company has lent his Majesty 40,000*l.* Two exchange women (to whom Lady Mohun owed a bill, and to whom payment was promised with Michaelmas rents as soon as they came in, and with which promise they at present seemed satisfied), after drinking brandy came with four braves on Tuesday morning to my lord's lodgings; the women went up, spit in my lady's face, &c., the men staid below and cried where is my lord the son of a, and swore they would do his business for him. My lord at this alarm went upstairs, took his sword and pistol, and one of his men the like, and after some passes, not being able to make his way, shot, missed the man, but shot thro' his hat; that not doing, shot again, but the pistol would not go off; the hubbub increasing they retreated, my lord having received a slight wound in his hand; they were three Irish and one life guardsman.—Justice Wild sent to the guard, but the captain would not deliver him.—The life guardsman meeting yesterday with my lord's footman beat him.

1676, Oct. 12. The life guardsman's name is Sutton of Laxinton's family.—His Majesty is sending 1,000 men to Virginia with a pardon to all but Bacon.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

1676, Oct. 19. The drums beat for volunteers for Virginia. Here is much talk of a remonstrance from the city. His Majesty is expected here to-day.

1676, Oct. 23. Sir Ellis Layton [Leighton] behaved himself most impudently at the Council Board; he was committed to a messenger, but he has shewed them a fair pair of heels. I do not hear his crimes were criminal, but of high misdemeanour; it is most about our ships taken by the French.

1676, Oct. 24. Scrogs is now a judge, and sergeant Bramston has kissed the King's hand to succeed in the next vacancy. On the gates of Westminster Hall, Whitehall, and Wallingford House, were posted papers that there were two or three judges' places to be sold; if any young lawyers had a mind to purchase, my Lord Treasurer had appointed such a day to receive offers. The like for a little kingdom beyond sea called Ireland . . . Morrison, Berry, and Jefferies, go all Commissioners to Virginia, and Jefferies commands all the forces.

1676, Nov. 9. The Duke with a fall broke his collar bone, but he is very well with it.

1676, Nov. 13. Lord Ossory is chamberlain to the Queen.

1676, Nov. 16. Mr. Montague has had some affront put on him, having had one or two of his men killed.

1676, Nov. 20. Lord Mohun, being second to Lord Candish, is wounded in the belly; but first both the lords fought with the adversaries (Pore and Brummigham, Irish both) with great disadvantage, their swords being much the larger; and yet Lord Mohun disarmed his man, and then relieved Lord Candish who had the advantage of his foe, having got upon him and hold of his sword. After this Lord Candish gave them their swords again, and he walked with him whom Lord Mohun fought, and Lord Mohun with him that fought Lord Candish, and on their return home Lord Mohun and his man upon some words both drew; and in this encounter my lord received his wound which is dangerous, and this was done before the other two could turn about, it being darkish.*

1677, April 12. The Prince of Orange has got immortal fame in the defeat of the French. Lady Arlington's brother was killed, if not two. Count Waldeck's chin was shot off.

1677, April 19. The King has gone to Newmarket.—Parliament sits again on the 21st of May, and his Majesty expects another supply of 600,000*l.* more.

1677, May 3. The Archbishop of Rhemes was as much at the King's Chapel on May day as the King himself. I hear he has been at our conventicles. A million and a half of gold and silver has been coined within these six months.

1677, May 17. I intend to petition the King to have the benefit of my place. I have made the Dukes of York and Ormond and Lord Mulgrave my friends.

1677, May 31. There has been a brave robbery hereabouts.—One of the two taken on Friday last at Hailes, within 4 miles of Uxbridge, that robbed two parsons;—three more came to see him next day while Justice Jennings was in the house, and yet they had not the wit to take them.

1677, Aug. 6. The King and Duke intend for Plymouth this day (if not gone already) by long sea for 14 days. Monmouth, Feversham, Mulgrave, Lumley, and Middleton, with some gentlemen, have gone to the French camp.—Albemarle, Ossory, Plymouth, and others are gone to the Prince of Orange.

1677, Aug. 22. His Majesty has had a sad passage, yet is come safe to us this morning. He was fain to shift into the Mountague.

1677, Sept. 16. Dr. Denton to Mrs. Gape.—Sir Roger Burgoyne died this day, about noon, of a violent fever.

1677, Oct. 11.—W. Denton to Sir R. Verney.—The Prince of Orange is at Newmarket.—News that Barnard Howard has killed Lord Sherard; but a letter from Newmarket wrote yesterday to James St. Arnaud by his man says nothing of it.

1677, Oct. 25. The match with Lady Mary and the Prince was concluded last Sunday night. On Monday the Council, Lord Mayor, &c., went to congratulate her, and that night bells and bonfires good store.

1677, Nov. 8. News that the Lady Mary was married Sunday night late, and bedded: that the Duchess was at the Duke's play house on Tuesday, and that last night by the help of three incomparable midwives, the King, the Duke, and the Prince, was brought to bed of a boy.—'Tis thought the Prince goes for Holland this next week.

1677, Nov. 15. Sir R. H. came not off clearly, but was certainly guilty, but on what points I cannot certainly tell; his present punishment was only a smart reprimand, but its thought some worse things lie in the dock. But Sir W. D. came off with flying colours from F. and K. I. cannot get a list of those that go to Holland. Ned Villiers goes master of the horse, Lady Francis, groom of the stoole, but she is at present sick and cannot go . . . A Greek church has been long a building in St. Giles' Fields; it goes on slowly. Dr. Lloyd of St. Martins, goes with Lady Mary for some few months to settle her chapel . . . Lady Ann has the small-pox.

1677, Nov. 21. The King healed privately this day about six, whereof Lady Stewkely and Palmes were two. His healings are very uncertain, and everybody must take their fortune . . . Three of Lord Oxford's troops march towards the Borders, but why we cannot guess, for its generally believed that no cause arises from Scotland. The Prince and Princess of Orange went away on Monday last, but the wind is against them, so they are wind bound.

1678, Aug. 1. We have a Council of War created, 15 in number: the Duke, Monmouth, Oxon, the two Secretaries, Craven, Russell, Chicheley, Gerard, Dunbarton, and others. Monmouth is gone; some say the Duke will follow, and that he is to be Generalissimo of the confederate forces. And yet for all this its believed we shall have a peace.

1678, Aug. 12. Account of a fight between Luxembourg and the Prince of Orange.—It fell hardest on the English, Scotch, and Irish, and on the King's corps de garde. Monmouth was in the fight, and behaved himself very bravely (but his army was not cut up); he offered to lead up 2,000 Spaniards that only looked on; they followed him a little way but would not go on, and so left him and two of his camarades to shift for themselves. The Germans played the poltroons. The English left them in possession of the church and churchyard, and the French beat them out, and the English regained it. The Prince of Orange had a bullet grazed on his thigh, but no hurt; Sir Thos. Armstrong, three wounds, Ossory had two shots on his armour which defended him; he was taken prisoner, but his wife's brother with 30 men rescued him, &c. &c.—All this is from Whitehall yesterday noon.

1678, Aug. 14. The King is gone to Windsor and intends for Portsmouth; the Queen follows on Friday.

1678, Aug. 22. The Duke of Monmouth is come safe home, and so is Lauderdale, in as great pomp as could be; 4,000 horse this day marched thro' the city in order to be transported to Flanders.

1678, Aug. 29. Our men die apace in Flanders, and we are sending more out.

1678, Sept. 12 . . . I hear Sir Ch. Gaudy stands to be Burgess in Sir Geo. Reeve's place; I hope it will cost him nothing. There was brave doings at Abingdon for a knight of the shire.—Mr. Barker's bills came to 1,800*l.* for a double return . . . I hear Lord Norrice and Lord Rochester or Lord Lovelace had a quarrel, but it was taken up by my Lord Treasurer.

1678, Oct. 17. Sir Edmund Barry Godfrey went out about 9 on Saturday morning, told his servant that if any came to speak with him he would dine at home; he has not been since heard of . . . On Tuesday one pressed very hard to speak with the Lord Treasurer in private, which was admitted, no man being by, on pretence of some affairs of great concern, and when he came he was in such consternation that he shook and trembled and had nothing to say. They neither searched him nor secured him.—The King came home yesterday, and the Duchess will be here to day.

1678, Oct. 24. The Parliament voted the first day all Papists to be banished the town 20 miles off, and desired a fast. I hear that Shaftesbury moved yesterday to have Dunbarton's (i.e., Douglas) regiment sent 100 miles off. The Commons will have the examination of Oates.

1678, Oct. 25. Oates was four hours before the Commons. Sir Jo. Worden took his narrative in short hand, which filled a sheet of paper; it was of that nature that it is impossible to be feigned without eminent contradiction.—There are warrants issued to apprehend several Lords who are suspected. Yesterday Billingsby, with Lord Purbeck, fought Watts or Watson with Roberts in the piazza within the rails. All four wounded.

1678, Oct. 30. —News is the securing of several Lords. It falls heavy on the Duke of York; so high, that an impeachment is dreaded. I understand that Oates has

SIR
H. VERNY
BART.

* Lord M. himself did not long survive. His case does not seem to have warranted any threat. For, though he had applied, Gordon Harvey was the second factor. The ground of the King's indignation he published an account of the same portion of the case. (S. Lord, 1678.) The case is mentioned in the manuscript.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

much cleared the Duke from aspersions that the villain Coleman has laid upon him.

1678, Nov. 3.* Coleman was this day executed. His Majesty has refused the Bill of Militia, at which the commissioners are so disgusted that they have given instructions to draw up a representation (a remonstrance savours too much of 1641) of the dangers the King and kingdom are in, &c. . . . Philip, whom they call Lord Wharton, has read and taken the oath, but refused to kiss the book.

1678, Nov. 4. On Thursday the Commons voted a plot . . . The Speaker had order yesterday to ask leave of his Majesty to offer Coleman his life on conditions, and to examine him. On Saturday the Lords were very smart on the Duke of York.

1678, Nov. 7. 'Tis thought the Duke will withdraw himself. Yesterday the Commons having had intimation that some of their members had fingered some French pence, they ordered a committee to go to Coleman to have him name them . . . Last night Carey gave us a smart alarm from the fields, and Lord Hobart and several of the neighbours went to lie in London for fear; but all as quiet as lambs.

1678, Nov. 8. This morning Benlowe's confession of Sir E. B. Godfrey's murder in Somerset House.

1678, Nov. 13. The plot.—One Powell is missing on the like occasion, and is thought is gone after Godfrey. —Reports of risings.—It is said that Coleman and Pope's man shall suddenly come to trial.

1678, Nov. 18. The Popish Bill in the Lord's House goes backwards and forwards . . . This morning the Commons send unto H. Coventry with a smart memoire to the Lords to quicken them. They are dogged, and will do nothing till it is passed. Monmouth voted for the Test.—Intended evidence about Godfrey.

1678, Nov. 18. The Commons have this day sent Secretary Williamson to the Tower, for subsigning commissions for officers and money for Papists. One commission was to our trusty and well-beloved son James, &c., at which Lord Candish took pet:—which son?—Have we a Prince of Wales, &c.?—whom Sir Thos. Littleton seconded, but it died.—Bedloe's examination;—he accused Lord Carrington, Sir H. Tichborne, Sir Fr. Mannoeh, Ralph Sheldon, and many others; who were to manage the forces about London, who in the west, who in the north, &c. &c.

1678, Nov. 21. About the plot.

1678, Nov. 23. Debate in the House about the Bill; it passed but by two voices, with the proviso for the Duke's person to sit in the House, &c. They grew so hot that Sir Jonathan Trelawny struck A. M. in the House, for which he is in Tower, and there to remain all this session.—Hears that Lord Bellasis tried to escape.—Sir Joseph Williamson tho' out of the Tower forbears coming to the House.

1678, Nov. 28. Coleman tried and found guilty.—Goodrick goes ambassador to Spain.

1678, Nov. 28, past 11 p.m. Bedloe's accusation against the Queen.—Search of Lord Arundel of Wardour's papers.

1678, Nov. 29. About the plot.

1678, Dec. 5.—Plot.—The Earl of Pembroke killed a man at Ailesbury.

1679, July 17 . . . Roberts Earl of Radnor, Gerard Earl of Macclesfield, and Savile Earl of Halifax were Tuesday last so declared in Council. I hear Worcester men have been with Sir Francis Winnington, and have offered to send him his indentures without fetching of them, and that Surrey gentlemen have agreed to choose without charges. Bring up that custom in co. Bucks, and then you shall be brave blades. Would all the courtiers take up the trick it would cross an ill design . . . Here is a talk of raising 2 troops of 100 in a troop, all old and disbanded commanders to have 5s. army pay. Monmouth to command one and Albemarle the other.

1679, July 24 . . . I hear Sir William Smyth (to whom I am going this day to dinner) stands for Middlesex, and joins with Sir Francis Gerrard and that the election shall be on Ely Green without expenses . . . Scroggs suffers wonderfully. The Portugal ambassador was twice or thrice with Scroggs before and after the trial. I hear that Wakeman hath kissed the Queen's hand, but the King would not see him.

1679, Aug. 14.— . . No certainty when the election will be at Windsor; brave doings at Marlow, breaking arms and legs and heads with stones; where a stout bargeman duckt Sir Hen. Wynch so under water that all cried to save him. Sir Ro. Hill and Algernon Sydney carried it at Amersham.

1679, Aug. 23 . . . Sir W. Temple and Sir Tho. Exton are burgesses for the university, and I left them polling for the county. It's like to be a very hard dispute. Russell and Partherick join against Sir Rob. Cotton and Sir Levinus Benett. I hear there will be a great contest in London.

1679, Sept. 1 . . . Dick Winwood had foul play at Windsor, and Carey and Powney are returned; it will be questioned in the House. I hear Sir Ch. Gaudey and Reeves had major voices, but the younger bailiff had the common seal, and will not put it to their indentures.

1679, Sept. 18 . . . The country declared in the field that if Sir Fr. joined with Sir William G. he would certainly lose it. Our poll at Westminster goes on still; it went well at first on Sir William Waller's side, but not so well now as they say . . . Most conclude that the Duke will return. The riddle of the Duke of Monmouth not yet unriddled; he is not yet gone. The King came to town last night.

1679, Sept. 29 . . . The poll at York goes very hardly on; not above 100 in 2 days, and at last by consent adjourned to 8 several places. The phanaticks here have been twice out-voted in the choice of a bridge-master and of a sheriff.

1679, Oct. 13. The Duke and Duchess and others came to town last night.

1679, Oct. 16 . . . The Lord President of the Council [was] removed just the day before. Dr. Oates and Sir Ph. Lloyd should have been heard before the Council. The Attorney put out. Finch succeeds, and Jefferies succeeds him . . . Monmouth expected to be re-called very suddenly. Some doubt the Duke going to Holland. It is whispered as if the Parliament would be prorogued till January or March. I hear the Dutch refuse to enter into a league offensive and defensive with us . . . Sir Thomas Gascoyne, Sir Miles Stapleton, and Lady Tempest being to be brought to their trial, one of the witnesses was stabb'd, but will not die.

1679, Oct. 20.—The news of the Attorney's remove I hear is not true . . . It is thought that the Duke will to Scotland.

1679, Oct. 23. The King has reduced his house from above 135,000*l.* per ann. to 36,000*l.* per ann. . . . Rumours of ministerial changes.—The Duke begins his journey Monday or Tuesday next.

1679, Oct. 27. Lord Radnor is Lord President of the Council, and Sir Christopher Levens (Levinz) Attorney General.

1679, Nov. 3 . . . Mr. Finch declined the Attorneyship, and would not interpose. I do not hear that Winnington stirred at all. Sir Ch. Gaudy is in town still, soliciting at the Council table as before. One Dangerfield, with 5 other names, a Newgate bird, being committed to Newgate, sent to my Lord Chancellor to say that he would make great discoveries of what we call the sham (his examination occupied 29 sides; but he was committed as a rogue). Sir William Waller took papers in the bottom of a meal-tub, &c. &c.

1679, Nov. 17 . . . I heard as well as you that Shaftesbury was returning into play, but I believe it not . . . I know not his Majesty's faith concerning the plot, or the danger of his person. I hear Lory Hide is to be a lord; that Aylesbury and Cornebury are to be privy councillors, and that Sir Stephen Fox is to come into the Treasury.

1679, Nov. 19. Essex is now out of the Treasury; all say he laid it down; but they say also that else it would have been taken from him. Sir Stephen Fox is to succeed, and Sir James . . . that married a Killigrew succeeds Fox. The Duke had no great entertainment at York, but had of the Bishop of Durham.

1679, Nov. 27, Tuesday. Oates in his trial came off with flying colours. Nox and his fellows found so clear guilty of conspiracy that the jury never went from the bar. There were present Shaftesbury, Escrick, Howard, Chandois, Candish, North, Grey, Kent, and others. Tasburgh and others are said will come to be tried this term, or presently after; but it is said that the original paper by which his indictment was drawn is out of the way, and so can come to nothing. I hear as you hear that Levinz sits uneasy. I do not hear that he makes any great noise in the courts.

1679, Dec. 1 . . . Monmouth's unexpected return (at which they made bonfires) surprizeth us all. The King will not see nor receive a letter from him; commanded him within 2 months to quit the Cock-pit and very suddenly the kingdom; but he stirs not. It is confidently said that he has given his places to others,

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

* The contents of this letter show that the date should be December 3.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

—captain of the guards to Albemarle, master of the horse to Richmond; what is designed I know not, but I believe it is not yet done.

1679, Dec. 4. His Majesty continues his displeasure against Monmouth, who refuses to return, and therefore hath given his command of his guards to Albemarle, and made Mulgrave, Governor of Hull, and Lord Lieut. of the East Riding of Yorkshire.

1679, Dec. 8. I present you with this inclosed, with this black mark (the red ones being the persons that presented it) on Philip, whom you call Lord Wharton, that his heart was with them, but neither hand nor foot . . . The Frenchmen that was taken with several odd letters with odd superscriptions and nothing in them were committed to Prince Rupert and Sir Samuel Morland to discover and decypher; something is found, but very much still in the dark; but in one is found, strike, strike, strike. He hath been in the House of Correction, but will confess nothing.

1679, Dec. 8. Yesterday, when his Majesty came from chapel, there stood ready in the Faïre Chamber several Lords to speak with him, viz., Huntingdon, Clare, Grey, North, Howard, and Radnor; so his Majesty went into his bed-chamber, and they followed, where Huntingdon produced a paper and read it to his Majesty, who then demanded it and they gave it to him, who told them he would consider of it, and wished that every one took as great care of the welfare of the nation as he did, and so turned from them and went to dinner. I had Shaftesbury by the hand, and a compliment passed between us.

1679, Dec. 11. A general report that the Parliament shall be prorogued 'till March. Some evil-minded have printed a blank petition, which is guessed to be a precedent for all counties to imitate, taking notice of his Majesty's coronation oath, his promises on the 20th of April last to be advised by Parliament, of the danger his person is in, of the horrid plots, &c., and pray that the present Parliament may sit at the day and continue to sit 'till they have accomplished, &c.

1679, Dec. 15. Parliament is prorogued 'till 11 November next. A proclamation against petitioning. Some Papists letters being intercepted, they intimate that their trade goes on, but they wanted factors; and his Majesty gave orders that those letters should go, and he gave the reason, because he would hang them as fast as they came, and he could catch them . . . No news but that the Moors attacked Tangiers and make approaches as regularly as the French could do, and had made us quit 5 out-sconces, but were beaten out again, and are retreated.

1680, May 20.—Storm of thunder, lightning, and hail-stones 6 and 7 inches about. So much rain that the ways between here (London) and Windsor are scarce passable with any content . . . Tangier is in a fair way to be lost ere Michaelmas. Mrs. Fraser is marched off from Court; how honourably time will try. Ned Villier's daughter succeeds her. The King is rid of his ague by help of the Jesuit's powder. Buckingham's trial was put off yesterday sine die.

1680, May 27. . . . Your friend Clarendon is once more a privy councillor . . . Here is 1,000 foot and 200 horse designed to recruit Tangier. I doubt Sir R. T. will not be wise enough to let Bucks Ballad fall. Sir Ch. Gawdey's man was fined 500 marks, and his Majesty gave it to Sir Charles without asking for it.

1680, June 3. Lord Mulgrave commands in chief, at his own request; goes out in great grandeur. It will cost him 3,000*l.* before he leaves England. Intends to keep a table of 18 dishes of meat, carries 100*l.* in wine, besides other liquors; 100*l.* in fowl in pens . . . I doubt Sir R. T. will not let the Ballad sleep . . . Lords Lumley, Mordaunt, and Plymouth go with Lord Mulgrave.

1680, June 10. . . . Tangier is in a very fair way of being taken, both the forts blown up, many men lost in the retreat; Capt. Trelawny cut to pieces, &c. This news came yesterday. Select men out of several companies, not my Lord Mulgrave's regiment, do go; he is not yet gone.

1680, June 24. . . . The grand jury of Middlesex have petitioned for a Parliament, and delivered it to the judges and laid it at their doors . . . There are most abominable libels that walk in the dark, but no getting sight of them . . . The worst sort of them they say are answers to his Majesty's declaration concerning his marriage with the D. of M.'s mother. Castlemaine is this day quitted. It's said that Ossory shall be Governor of Tangier, and 1,000 men shall be sent.

1680, July 29. . . . Lord Mulgrave is returned; some say with others without his Majesty's command, but I think he had his command which came to him 2 days after his arrival at Tangier, at which his honour takes pett. Ossory lies sick of a malignant fever, in danger.—Mentions Kellok, the famous French lithotomist, being in England.

1680, Oct. [12] . . . It is thought the D. will march at last, but he will have the King's command. Sunderland, Essex, Lord Chancellor, &c. told him his danger, and withal that they must secure the Protestant religion without respect of persons.

1680, Oct. 14. I am informed that Sir John Pointz is dead without issue, and consequently that Ormond is heir-at-law; if so, haply you may come in for a share. I know not the pedigree, but I hope that you married 2 sisters . . . The Council sate very long and marvelous closely this afternoon, put every person out but those that have votes; all kept very close, but conjecture is that it is about the Duke. The Marchioness of Winchester dead in France, and the Marquis recovered.

1680, Oct. 21. The Duke and his Duchess went yesterday morning by sea for Scotland.

1680, Oct. 28. . . . Dangerfield has accused the Duke and Lord Peterborough and Privy Seal about the Presbyterian plot. Lord Russell, Sir H. Capell, Sir F. Winnington, and others made very home speeches on Tuesday. . . . They have voted it to be the right of the subject to petition for the sitting of Parliament, and that it was ever their right; and voted against those that discountenanced them; whereupon Sir Francis quitted the house as a guilty person, and 'tis thought will come there no more, and that Sir William Waller shall succeed him. I hear Chief Justice North is like to come in question for something of that nature, and that Sir G. Jefferies is petitioned against.

1680, Nov. 4. There is nothing yet against Lord C. J. North, but there is a committee to inspect the affair of abhorring . . . The Commons have voted that they will stand by his Majesty, &c.

1680, Nov. 11. . . . His Majesty sent the Commons word to go on with the plot, but not to meddle with the succession. Lord Stafford is like to come to his trial. One Turberville (not our cousin) is newly come in, and certifies that he said the King was an heretic, was excommunicated, and ought to be taken off, &c.

1680, Nov. 17. . . . The Duchess of Southampton is dead . . . The House, being in a great flame about the Duke's bill being cast out, to cool themselves, adjourned till to-day.

1680, Nov. 25. . . . 'Tis the House of Commons that fall upon Lord Halifax, who I hear defies them. The House has started many hares, but caught very few. Ld. Stafford's trial will give a great essay.

1680, Dec. 2. . . . I know of no other crime of Lord Halifax's openly owned, but that he advised the King to dissolve the other Parliament. Sir G. Gerard, I hear, said that he hath 4 of the House of Commons to prove his impeachment, which is in print. Oates has proved that Stafford was to be paymaster to the army that was to be raised, &c. &c. P.S. Sir Peter Lilly (Lely?), Sir Phil. Mathewes, Sir George Downing's lady all died suddenly this week . . . A letter came to Secretary Jenkins that Pickering (brother to him that was executed), now a prisoner in Oxford, said that if the King went on to try the Lords he should not live half a year, of which there is 3 witnesses; and the King sent the letter to the H. of Commons.

1680, Dec. 9. Lord Stafford is found guilty and condemned. A fair and just trial, and hath the commendations of all the foreign ministers.

1681, April 28. . . . The court is this day gone to Windsor, cum pannis; this day was sennight Grafton bedded his lady; and Mar. Bennett attempted to kill himself; but mum for that, he yet lives; it's kept very close.

1681, May 26. The King and Queen are gone to Sheerness, and the King says he will make the Queen sea sick before he returns.

1681, June 23. . . . On Monday or Tuesday, the grand jury, being possessed of the indictment against Lord Howard, and the clerk perceiving that they would find ignoramus upon it, it was lost; a sham pretence by some private instructions for a withdrawing, that they might have time to draw another; they complaining yesterday to the court the officer is to be punished.

1681, Aug. 24. . . . His Majesty has joined Radnor, Halifax, Hyde, and Seymour to Canterbury and London, to dispose of all ecclesiastical preferments.

1681, Sept. 15. . . . Sir Arthur Ingram is dead. I hear the Duke is much troubled that the King will not let him come, tho' but to give him an account of his con-

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

dition. Seymour is fierce for his coming, and Halifax as fierce against it.

1681, Oct. 6. . . . My Monsieur is making a mole or haven between Calais and Boulogne, wherein 100 brave ships may ride securely; he put the spade into the ground about 8 or 10 d. again; and where are we without striking a blow? Van Be = is come again out of Holland and is gone to Newmarket Whether Shaftesbury will be called corum nobis is confidently said pro and con.

1681, Oct. . . . News that her Majesty has news that one of the French Admirals past with 7 ships in despite of the castles to Constantinople, and fired it. If a lie, you have it as cheap.

1681, Oct. 17. . . . Lady Mary Palmer, alias Countess of Exeter, is dead It's believed that Shaftesbury will be brought to his trial; and some say that he hath plaid a bird called A. G. in desiring of the King to give him 3,000*l.*, and he will go to Carolina; whose answer was that he presumed he could not want money for his travels, and that as he hath always stood up for the law and therefore should live or die thereby. The Lord Mayor elect sending the sheriff to invite his Majesty to their feast, little regarding them, applied himself to them that came with them, told him that he always well accepted anything that came from his city, and would dine with him those two gentlemen brought; which ding'd the sheriffs so out of countenance that his Majesty pitied them Saturday last, Sir William Smith, with the session bench, brought to the King an order which they had done for the suppression of conventicles, for which they all kissed his Majesty's hands; and I was by.

1681, Oct. 31. . . . I can understand no probable conjecture what will become of Shaftesbury I was informed last night by a lawyer that on Saturday night the Irish witnesses being at the Rose Tavern, without Temple Bar, fell out among themselves and rogued one another, one for taking money to swear against Shaftesbury; the other retorted the like against him for taking money against Howard, a justice was sent for and he committed them to the round-house The King went gloriously to the Lord Mayor's feast, but did not knight the sheriffs.

1681, Nov. 7. . . . There is no indictment brought against Shaftesbury, and the town talks confidently that he must out without bail. Sir John Cope is foreman of the grand jury, and Tom of 10,000 is his companion cum multis aliis. The business of the Rose Tavern about the witnesses is true.

1681, Dec. 5. . . . I hear that the ignoramus trial will be out to-day, and that Shaftesbury will sue Graham for a conspiracy against his life. Portsmouth is going into France. Some say there was a conspiracy against the P. of Orange's life, others only against one St. Paul, that there is an association abroad and that Denmark is the head and our King left out.

1681, Dec. 12. . . . Portsmouth is certainly going, and Richmond with her, and Villiers, Buckhurst (Dennie's tutor) is entertained to go his tutor; he has 300*l.* per ann., and she keeps him 2 footmen. My squinting satire is suing all the witnesses that were examined against him. some say Graham (Principal of Clifford's Inn) also. The feat in Holland is owned to be against Count St. Paul (a Huguenot that writ the Empire a slave), but not against the Prince. The French ambassador has demanded the prisoners, owning that which they did was by his master's allowance.

1682, May 5. . . . The Duke of Somerset is married to Lady Ogle, Tuesday last. Mrs. Synderfin was forcibly taken out of a coach on the road by 11 or 12 men, adjutant to Irish Captain Hind, and carried into France, intending to force her to marry him; but they are seized at Calais, and 3 of the men taken here. Seven or eight of the Peers of France, as Duke of Vendome and others, for playing a lewd frolick, are banished the court. It is whispered that we have sent to the King of Spain to call home De Grana, for that we are endeavouring to mediate an universal peace, and De Grana hinders it. The D. of Albemarle, with his second, Sir Walter Clarges, fought with my Lord Grey, and Godfrey his second, who married Churchill. Godfrey soon disarmed Clarges, and then parted the Lords, and so no hurt done. P.S. Sir Justinian Isham fought young Vincent, and hurt him; but like to do well.

1682, May 8. . . . I hear the D. of Manchester married 3 daughters in one day last week; one to the Lord Suffolk, one to Capt. Brett, one to one Bright.—Great floods at Brainford; the water 4 feet deep in the church.

1682, May 10. . . . A very good friend of yours told me that addresses should be to — to take — into the government, and be crowned. Not a word of this on your life; you shall know suddenly who told me, and then I am sure you'll be silent. . . . You have his petition to the Protector. I wish to see it. The Duke has been in great hazard; his ship lost thro' a man-of-war, but all the men saved; the news came from Hull; some believe one, not the other. This day Cradock (I think his name is) whom Shaftesbury sued on Scandalum magnatum, moved to have it tried in another county and not in Middlesex, where it was laid; but my Lord would not consent, tho' offered to choose any other county; my Lord Chief Justice was as stout as he, and would not let it be tried in Middlesex; Lord Londonderry is arrived here; he came over with Ormond. This day Albemarle treats the University of Cambridge; 11 May.

1682, May 29. . . . It was whispered at a Middlesex meeting that an address should march to Windsor to desire his Majesty to take his brother into the government, &c.; but it was done in publick and penned by your neighbours and put to the vote to make an address to congratulate the Duke on his happy return, to desire him to stay and continue here, to desire his Majesty to take him in to assist in the government, and put to the vote, and but one cried No, and he a great courtier; at which all wondered, and he told them that if they would consider he believed they would be of his mind. To the first he willingly condescended; the second he thought was saucy, for that he would go or stay as affairs suggested for his interest; and that he feared the third was treasonable; which quite suppressed it.

1682, July 3. . . . The Duchess of Portsmouth and his Majesty safely arrived here yesterday.

1682, July 8. . . . On Saturday young Pulteney and one Mr. Howard (of what family I know not) met and had an encounter, and Howard is killed. I hear two of Lord Wharton's sons played a grievous prank in Burford church; how true I know not.

1682, July 17. . . . Serjeant Bromne's oldest son has surreptitiously got Mrs. Turner, a very considerable heiress; and young Legg is married to Synderfin's widow. When the news was brought to the King that North and Boxe were declared sheriffs, he said that the other might go to law if they pleased; though then very late yet the Queen went presently to Windsor, and the King about 2 on Sunday morning.

1682, July 24. . . . Your cousin Ossory is married to Lord Hyde's daughter.

1682, July 31. . . . Anglesey is marching off; for on Thursday last, at the Council at Hampton Court, his crime against your coz. was voted to be a libel against the former government, and what will follow you may guess. His Majesty, the D. and D. of P. and Sunderland sapt altogether last week. It's thought he shall succeed Lord Anglesey; others say Seymour; others that Conway shall, and Sunderland be Secretary, that my Lord Mayor shall be a baron, Lord Hyde lord treasurer, Halifax to be a duke and have the garter. There's a Quo Warranto going against Oxford. Mrs. Synderfin (now said not to be married to Legg) hath seized, by my Lord Chief Justices warrant, him that took her violently away.

1682, Oct. 9. . . . Shaftesbury has stept aside, but not before a warrant was signed for his apprehension.

1682, Oct. 30. Your cousin of Ormond is now Duke of Ormond of England. It is said that Worcester is also Duke, but that is not so certain I hear that the King invited himself to my Lord Mayor's feast, which is put off because Sir Thomas says there is no money in the chamber; so the King intends to dine privately with him in a few days.

1682, Nov. 4. . . . More Lords made; Windsor Earl of Plymouth, Northumberland Duke thereof, Lord Arundell, constable of Windsor and Lord Lieut. of Surrey, Grafton, vice-admiral, and Prince Rupert, dead; left all to Hughes and her daughter, and how Nottingham lost 300*l.* per ann. I cannot tell; but Palmer told me he knew it for certain. Here's great expectation of a great rout to be among the judges. They are excommunicating 3,000, in order to turn many out of the court of aldermen and common council, and so to get others in better qualified for the turn, so there's hope we may maul the roguy whigs ere long, and bring them to due obedience. Common Pleas to be Lord Chancellor; Attorney to be Chief Baron, and Sollicie to be Attorney.

1682, Nov. 6. I take Ormond to be as much in England as Albemarle or the Earl of Flanders. An English Duke he is, and keeps the title of Ormond.

SIR
H. VERNER
BART.

1682, Nov. 13. . . . Mulgrave hath not been told his crime: the town lays on Lady A.'s account, which he knows; and it's said that he writ letters to her, and that his Majesty hath them; with which I taxed him, who assured me that he never writ one to her; and I believe him; some will have his crime only ogling. Chesterfield hath his regiment; Windsor [has] Hull; Halifax his lieutenancy; and Petersham his bedchamber's place.

1682, Nov. 20. Our friend Sir W. Smith is of this grand jury, where you know his pregnancy of parts will justly entitle him to be Dominus fac totum; and I hear they are finding the King of Poland (Earl of Shaftesbury), guilty of high treason, for having the paper of association found in his closet, and that they are stigmatising several books, some as libellous, some as treasonable, some, &c. I long to see it in print. Lord Mulgrave knows no crime, but from the speech of people.

1682, Nov. 27. . . . I would not have you come near London a good while for fear you should be made a Lord; Sir Jo. Bennet, Lord Oswalston, if I hit it right; Hide, Earl of Falmouth; Legg and Churchill also lords; Legg, of Dartmouth, and Churchill, a Scotch title; Lord Townshend, Earl, and Worcester, Duke of Beaufort; this was yesterday's news. Bennet is certain, and I believe the rest. One Mr. Glover, a young gentleman, was killed yesterday in our diall-plat by one Lesly. Lord Shaftesbury is landed at Brill. Sir William Waller like to be assassinated in Holland by 2 Papists that had been prisoners here: the States endeavoured to apprehend them, and have offered safety to all Protestants that shall come thither for protection. Pilkington is fined 100,000*l*. The city Quo Warranto is put off till Easter term. By the surrender of Nottingham Charter they have lost 400*l*. per annum, never to be retrieved. The recorder of Norwich, who was very solicitous in demand of that charter is left out in the new one, and another in his room.

1682, Dec. I received yours of the 7th. . . . The Lord Chancellor's chaplain, Mr. Duffe, makes a great noise; he made his escape; some say he is taken again, his head broken, and confesses there are 300 more in his condition; others say he is not taken, but that he and his keeper are both gone together.

1683, May 21. . . . I hear Feversham shall have Wentworth, and that she shall be groom of the stool to the Queen. Duke George is suddenly expected here. I hope you have had the manner to wait on the Duke and Duchess at Cornebury, and at my Lord Abingtons, and invited them to Claydon, that I may kiss their hands there.

1683, May 31. The weather hath been so very rainy, and Ditton so full of company, with my Lady Northumberland and all her children, Sir Thos. Millington and his lady and child, and others that I thought best to stay at home. . . . Clarendon House is pulling down.

1683, June 1. . . . Albemarle House is now pulling down, and hath been so these 10 days or more. . . . Some say the Turks are treating for a peace, others not; some say Brandenburg is come in to the Emperor again, others to the French.

1683, June 7. . . . My Lord of Salisbury is said to be dead, and Danby is ill in the Tower. Westminster Hall is cleared of the scaffolds. Fountaine's younger brother died yesterday. I hear Geo. Raleigh's dead.

1683, June 14. . . . Young Danby having been at a race some few miles from home, in his return within 2 miles of home, riding but the grand pace, an apoplectic fit seized him, and he fell flat on his face from his horse, and, tho' presently blooded, yet died in 48 hours, which is not only the loss of a child to the mother, but I doubt most of her happiness besides; for I doubt the next heirs will have very little mercy on her, lege Talionis; she had none on them. . . . It is reported the next brother (a sad fowl) sold his reversion and interest for a song to another pitifull fellow, which some say she purchased again of him; if so, here may be some comfort. . . . On Tuesday last, contrary to expectation, the city charter had its mortal wound, tho' the Chief Justice was not there, but only his opinion owned and adjusted by the other there, yet prayed by the attorney that the judgment might not be entered, &c. It went on two substantial, and one circumstantial ground, viz.: the tolls, and the petition, and the inconveniences that would ensue. Judgment was given without giving reasons or refuting arguments that I hear of.

1683, Aug. 12. . . . Sir Charles Gaudy I have not seen, but he hath been with his address at Windsor. Charlton is come in and brought in both, for Mr. Herbert seized on him as he was going to surrender himself to the Bishop of Oxford; he was examined at Windsor; but hear nothing thereof. He is now in the Tower. I do not hear that our fleet is yet gone from Portsmouth. We cannot explain the riddle of Dr. Trumbull's going along therewith.

1683, Aug. 20. . . . I have not yet seen Sir C. Gaudy, neither do I know if in town or not. . . . Dr. Trumbull hath been abroad before, and I guess he may have some language besides English and Latin; he was promised he should be at home again in 6 weeks.

1683, Oct. 18. . . . The Emperor hath [made] the Prince of Aurang Prince of the Empire by the title of Duke of. . . . The Poles have once more (being first repulsed by the Turks), by a fresh supply of Dragoons defeated 10,000 Turks, and taken two Basshaws, and is set down before new Hawsell.

1683, Nov. 14. The D. of Sax., after he had been in aid of the Empire, spoke to the Emperor that he would be kind to the Protestants, and perform their former articles, &c.; to which the Emperor gave him no satisfaction; so he told him, tho' he did not think the Protestants good subjects, yet they did, and therefore if he pleased to excell or exchange Silesia and Wallachia or Moldavia (I know not which) they would either give him other lands or money for them; but the Emperor giving him not the least satisfaction, the Duke of Sax Brandenburg, and the Dukes of Zell have entered into a defensive league of the Protestant religion, and agreed on their quota. Brandenburg, 20,000, Saxony, 150,000, Luninberg and the rest, 15,000, and have sent to the King of Sweden and Denmark to come into the league and raise between them 50,000 men more. The Gran Signor hath discarded the Gran Vizier, chiefly for cutting of two Basshaws without his leave, and hath made Grand Vizier the nephew of him that got Candia. All the States General but Amsterdam agreed to raise 16,000 men, so they ordered a committee of 8, whereof the Prince of Aurang to be the chief, to go to Amsterdam to desire their concurrence, and if they refused it to let them know that they would raise them without them; but they have consented, so that is over, and the Prince gave the 36 a treat; but one of them slunk away, being better instructed by the French. Its said that Gibraltar is offered to our King on good terms. Lady Hobart sits up again about her chamber. . . . Sir Wm. Smyth was foreman. Sydney was indicted at the bar, who had a plea to the indictment ready and offered it, and which by the judgment of 5 of his councill, as good as was in England, would have held good; for it seems to make a second witness; the indictment brought in his answer to Sir Ro. Filmer's book by an innuendo; he argued it long with the judges, but the judges persuaded him by arguments to wave it; the chief was that if he did plead to it, and the Attorney demur to it, all matter of fact was of course confessed, and if then overruled, judgment would of course be given, and he must die. His trial is appointed next Wednesday; I hear the indictment against Lord Howard is withdrawn.

1683, Nov. 22. . . . Dr. Burnet is silenced. Johnson, that writ Julian, I hear is silenced, fined, and imprisoned, and some say to be pilloried. 10,000*l*. given to Duke Beaufort for a Scandalum magnatum against Sir Trevor Williams; the like is expected against Arnault. . . . P.S. The Hollanders have had a great loss in the Texel, 9 men-of-war, as many merchants, whereof one Jennings was bound for England laden with 60,000 Lyon dollars, besides much gold and abundance of spice. I have no certainty yet what became yesterday of Coll. Sydney; at the coffee house they say he is found guilty.

1683, Dec. 6. . . . Sir W. Portman that was dead at Whitehall and London is alive in the country, and not so much as sick there. Sydney is to die to-morrow. . . . Lady Mary Gaudy and Fram are in town.

1684, April 3. News is that Godolphin is secretary in Jenkins' room. News that the Prince of Orange is in some straits; and that the Spanish ambassador gave his Majesty a memorial with a map of the barrier of the territories to be settled in the peace; to which answer has been returned that his Majesty of France's propositions are reasonable. . . . This answer has caused the foreign confederates here to signify to their masters that this is an answer of a party and not of an empire. Lory (Lawrence Hyde) is thought will be suddenly Lord Treasurer.

1684, April 5. . . . Lord Bronker being dead, his places are thus disposed of, his Chancellorship to Lord Marquis Hallifax; his Commissioner to the Admiralty to Rear Admiral Herbert, Master of St. Katherine's, to Sir James Butler. . . . Dartmouth is in the channel, and

SIR
H. VERNER
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

I hear under displeasure. Sir Thomas Samuel and his Lady are gone for France, intending to stay two or three years; he kissed the King's hand before he went.

1684, April 17. . . . Brome Whorwood came hither in order to prepare for his trial, and I hear died suddenly of an apoplexy; but cannot hear how he hath settled his estate. I hear Lord Norrice prevailed with Oxford to surrender their charter on great promises of getting a better, which not being obtained, but a much worse instead thereof, he resented it so ill, that he told his Majesty that he had thereby put him out of all capacity to serve him any farther in that country . . . P.S. There hath been a fire in Dublin Castle, which hath burnt the best rooms, but the castle and magazine all safe. Your coz, the Duke hath had the greatest loss, 10,000*l.* at least.

1684, April 24. . . . The foreign peace is confidently averred at court, but not believed done. Lord Berkeley hath killed a man. . . .

1684, May 4. . . . Dutton Colt was fined yesterday 120,000*l.* Sacheverell and all his complices are found guilty; what will follow not hard to guess. In a private cause between Nosworthy (Maynard's son-in-law) and another for 1,000*l.* per annum, Maynard was very sharp on my Lord Chief Justice Jefferies; the manner is variously reported. The Dutch are plainly hectoring into peace; whether peace or war yet is variously reported, but most probable peace.

1684, May 8. . . . Foreign news.—Grana received the Duke of Monmouth most magnificently; he writ to his Majesty for his plate, and it is sent him.

1684, May 17. There is another plot newly printing, newly coming forth, not yet publicly known, but orders taken to take up about four or five others yet unknown whom. Foreign news.—They have given the Duke of Monmouth the title of Royal Altesse, and settled 6,000*l.* sterling per annum upon him, and advanced him a good sum for the present, and given him a command. Some say the Prince of Aurange and he are very great; others say there's no communication between them.

1684, June 12. Foreign news.—Sir Thos. Armstrong taken in Holland expected here last night. Lord Grey and Ferguson escaped narrowly. P.S. Sir Thos. Armstrong is now certainly in Newgate. Oates refused to plead to the action of Scandalum magnatum, and so judgment passeth a court; two of his men are in prison, and it is said that he will be suddenly indicted of high treason.

1684, June 19. . . . Oates is fined a small sum of 100,000*l.* Sir [T.] Armstrong pleads hard for a trial, if not to be shot; prayed a Habeas corpus from the keeper, which was civilly denied him, by intimating an application to be made to Attorney-General: if he declines it, it should be granted; so the wife loudly bid the standers by take notice that she was denied it; and one of his daughters at the King's Bench when he was denied to plead, gave them all a very savoury curse, for which the Lord Chief Justice committed her to prison, but very honourably released her presently.

1684, July 22. . . . The Duchess of Ormond died yesterday morning. Sir . . . North that was sheriff and lately made a publican, and Mr. Hen. Thyn, a secretary to the Keeper, are now made Lords Commissioners of the Treasury; who shall succeed them is guessed will be W. Legge and Rich, the late sheriff.

1684, July 31. My old Lady Say is dead . . . P.S. Sir Jo. Buckworth and . . . Dickinson are the new Commissioners in the Custom House.

1684, Aug. 7. Sir W. Smyth has offered the oath ex-officio to some officers (whether constables, side men, or others, I know not,) who refusing to take it, he sent them to prison, who now coming for a Habeas corpus came to Judge Jones, who being sick, would meddle with no business; the next week there being to be a private seal they intend to try the Keeper.

1684, March 10. There's mad work in many elections. L'Estrange and his comrades I hear is chosen at Winchester. I know not yet how our pole goes here as yet. Sir Wm. Smyth is going this moment to Brainfor for Middlesex. I hear my Lord Chief Justice behaves himself bravely in all his circuit as to matters of elections.

1685, April 1. . . . The Duke of Ormonde came yesterday; left Lord Ossory sick of the small-pox at my Lord Derby's . . . I hear Sir Thos. Lee will stand for our county, I doubt it too good news to be true. I hear Sir Watkin Payler and Palmes are chosen at Malton, but am not sure.

1685, April 22. . . . As ill an opinion as you have of Ely, its the best air you and I can live in. Inhabitants thereof do not know what a cough is; if coughing be heard in their churches, they look about for strangers, and old nasty Butler sent his coughing, consumptive patients to the Isle of Ely for recovery.

1685, May 13. . . . Lady Cutler is dead of the small-pox. The town says Sir Roger L'Estrange shall be a Lord.

1685, July 21. Lady Gaudy died Monday 13th inst. . . . Goodenough is taken, and its thought will make great discoveries. The King is disbanding 20 troops, and models the army otherwise; like a prudent Prince will keep no more than he can pay. He hath made two major-general's of the army, whereof Sackvil is one, and two Brigandees of the army, whereof Billingsly is one. Lord Delamere absconds, and is summoned by proclamation to come in within 10 days. Sir Geo. Sheeres married Dr. Dickenson's daughter, and is since dead of the small-pox.

1685, Aug. 4. . . . One of the sought for persons (Wade, I think) was taken in Mrs. Lisle's house, Jack Lisle's widow; but I hear of no proceedings against her as yet; some say her house was plundered. The Duke of Albemarle hath given up all his commissions.

1685, Aug. 19. . . . P.S. I hear Polyxpheme [Pollexfen] is knighted, and that he goes to Salisbury as the King's council. Sir Thos. Samuel and his 50 other stigmatised companions were to make their address to his Majesty on Sunday last, of which I have yet no farther account.

1685, Sept. 2. I have made enquiry but cannot learn for what Sir G. G. is put in Newgate; most say for words. My Lord Makenfield (Macclesfield) was sent for by Atterbury, but his younger son made answer that he was gone into the country to his estate; some think his return will be very uncertain. Lord Clarendon declared Lieutenant of Ireland. Denbigh died of a diabetes as I hear, and his son succeeds. This day is appointed for the execution of Mrs. Lisle, and I do not hear that she hath got her reprieve or pardon. Burlington made Recorder of York. Sir Leoline Jenkins died yesterday morning. Sir Wm. Trumbull goes ambassador to France, and my Lord Preston returns some say to be Secretary of State, and Sunderland to be Privy Seal.

1685, Sept. 8. . . . I am sure my Lord Keeper is dead, and Mrs. Lisle beheaded.

1685, Sept. 10. . . . Some say my Lord Chief Justice by some named to succeed the Keeper, others that Winchester and Ely are competitors for the same.

1685, Sept. 16. . . . No Lord Keeper is yet known here; some think it will be in commission till my Lord Weme can be spared out of the King's Bench. I hear 300 condemned in the west. P.S. Judge Walcot died at York, and I hear Judge Levens is sick in the circuit. Master of the Rolls its thought is not long lived.

1685, Sept. 22. The Master of the Rolls hath passed over this brunt, and I hear is gone to Bristol as Recorder thereof. No doubt but Lord Weme will be Chancellor. There are 5 regiments going into Holland; Shrewsbury, Huntington, Lumly, Hale, and Sir Wm. Clifton; and my Lord Pembroke General of them, and to be Lieutenant General to the Prince of Aurange.

1685, Sept. 29. Bishop Short died yesterday, and my old acquaintance Mr. Carey is dead, and I hear hath left his estate to his niece, which was designed for to marry Lord Guildford's eldest son. To-morrow his Majesty is expected here.

1685, Oct. 7. Jack Carey is yet alive and somewhat better . . . so much for one of my lies; another is, that my Lord Chancellor is not Earl of Flint, neither am I certain if an Earl yet or no. We take it for granted that Herbert is Lord Chief Justice, and that the Speaker succeeds him at Chester. Perhaps another week may contradict this. Some say Herbert waived it very much, and the Speaker waits for Master of the Rolls.

1685, Oct. 13. I hear Sir Ed. Herbert is Chief Justice full sore against his will, that Lutwisch succeeds him in Chester, and that the Speaker is Master of the Rolls. It is reported that Brandon Gerard will be tried this sessions, and some others; that Speak (Speke?) and Grey shall have their pardons. Lord Wharton hath been reported to be dead, but no certainty.

1685, Oct. 20. Cornish was this day found guilty. The bill against Sir Robert Cotton not found, but 'twas intimated that they had better evidence against the next time. Mr. Hampden is in the Tower. Some say Sir Bernardiston was put in the Tower to-day. Scaffolds are preparing in Westminster Hall. Lord Grey is pardoned his utlary. Mr. Carey is now dead in earnest.

1685, Oct. 25. Here is a common report that Lady

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

Lindsey is turned Papist, and that my Lord hath been bitten with a mad dog. I hope neither of them true. J. Car y hath ordered his niece to marry North within three years, or else to lose the estate. If she die without heir males the remainder is settled on Lord Faulkland and Capt. Carey . . . Lord Mulgrave is Lord Chamberlain.

1685, Nov. 10. We wish you and all thinking men here, there's ne'er enough of such; his Majesty's speech hints the same. The Common's House being adjourned till Thursday, nothing can be transacted therein till then. Lord Abington lies next door to us.

1685^{1/2}, March 10. Lord Chamberlain is like to carry the widow Conway, and Sir Ri. Middleton the widow Whitmore.

1685^{1/2}, March 24. . . My Lord Chamberlain brought his wife home in great triumph on Monday. The Duke of Northumberland hath shipt his wife away to a nunnery.

1686, April 28. Notwithstanding all degradations, Pemerton, Finch, and Levins were all at the Chancery Bar yesterday morning, and observed that Finch was in every cause, but not favoured in any.

1686, June 22. Julian Johnson was found guilty of spreading those papers that related to the army and seamen and consequently of high misdemeanours; his doom is not yet set.

1686, June 29. I hear my Lady Lindsey is returned to our church again.

1686, July 7. My Countess lies desperately ill . . .

1686, July 14. My dear Countess died Saturday morning to my very great grief—(she left him a legacy of 10 guineas.)—Intends to attend her corpse to Chevening.

1686, July 28. My Lord Nottingham some years since presented one Mr. Smith (a relation of his) to a parsonage of a convicted incumbent; the same man sued this Smyth for it again, which was tried this last assizes in Essex, and recovered it again.

1686, Aug. 3. The Vicars General Commission was opened this day in the Council Chamber; the Archbishop had no occasion to be there.

1686, Aug. 11. The Commissioners met at Whitehall on Monday; all appeared but the Archbishop. London having been cited appeared, and a chair set for him. He was refused a sight of the Commission or a copy of the accusation against him, and has only till next Monday to answer.

1686, Aug. 17. On the same subject.

1686, Aug. 25. It is generally believed that Dr. Cartwright shall be Bishop of Chester, famous for his sermon preaching up arbitrary power to that height that he hath thereby purchased a name, &c., but it is hoped that Sir J. B. hath otherwise disposed of the rectory of Wigan to any other good Church of England man . . . The Bishop of London's affair stands as it did . . . Its thought that if the Bishop should protest against the jurisdiction that it would be interpreted a denying the King's supremacy.

1686, Aug. 31. Cartwright is now declared Bishop of Chester and Parker of Oxford; never a barrel better herring. I hear Sir Jo. Bridgman's kindness was for one Jessop, which will be accommodated by conferring on him some good preferment that Cartwright was possessed of; whether the deanery of Ripon or another I know not.—This day the Bishop of London did plead to the jurisdiction of the court, &c.

1686, Sept. 8. I do not believe that either Oxford or Chester can well be liked of anywhere, or by any honest intelligent men . . . I hear nothing of my Lord Wharton's landing.

1686, Sept. 14. . . . Atterby brought a warrant to the Dean of Paul's to fix the sentence against the Bishop at the west end of St. Paul's Church and at the south door, which was done yesterday. I have the grand Commission and his Plea, and hope to get the minutes which I intend to lay up in lavender in perpetuum rei memoriam . . . The Parliament of Scotland will not Gee, and therefore it is dissolved, which makes some think ours will not sit. How kind soever Parker and Patrick have been they are not so now. He was Sheldon's chaplain. I hope Sir Jo. Bridgman hath got the Deanery of Wigan for Jessop . . . Sir Wm. Wentworth marries a daughter to my Lord Bedlo an Irish Papist . . . Gives 3,000*l*. and his Majesty 3,000*l*. more. Mrs. Crew, the younger daughter, is in a fair way to marry Mr. Peto.

1686, Sept. 21. . . . The Bishop is gone into the country to my Lord Northampton.

1686, Stubble goose day . . . I hear Lord Wharton is come over, and some will have it to do a job towards toleration, but cannot believe it . . . I hear that his Majesty intends not to make any Irish man deputy; that Sir Charles Porter will be recalled. Some say the Parliament will, others that it will not, sit.

1686, Oct. 6. . . . The Lord Chancellor visited yesterday the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, but no account as yet what was done . . . Its thought that Chester or Oxford or both will be put into the commission. Some question the Parliament sitting at the time appointed.

1686, Oct. 13. There's a proclamation out that prorogues the Parliament till Feb. next, with this sting at the end, that they are not to fail meeting then at their peril. I hear nothing of removals to York or Rochester; but I do hear that Chester got the King to move my Lord Chancellor to give Barking to his son; but having given it to Dr. Balne, his own chaplain, desires to be excused; and then Chester got his Majesty's good will to hold it in commendam; and when the patents of Oxford and Chester came for the Great Seal he passed Oxford, and the other being read and finding in commendam there, What! does he play tricks with me! threw it away and would not pass it. It was afterward sent after him to Bulstrode; he stormed there also, and would not pass it; what is done since in it I know not. The Chancellor visited Windsor, but no great business done that I hear of. There was something trumped up about Simony, but that was desired might run in its proper channel. Mr. W. Harbord being served with a privy seal in Holland came over, but not finding reception to his mind, in very few days hasted over again . . . P.S. I was this day to visit Lord Wharton, but could scarce have a word with him, he was so taken up with 10 or 12 of the Merchant Taylors' Company about building there.

1686, Oct. 19. . . . We do not believe our street news that the Archbishop is either out of the Commission or out of the Council, but both are expected. I hear nothing of my Lord Anglesey's estate being seized. I do not know what Lord Wharton hath done about his buildings; but I am sure he is built up too his walls by Mr. Fortrey, who hath an estate of inheritance there, and is building two rows there, with a good fair street there. My Lord and he met about some differences about a little patch that was got into my Lord's garden; how ended, I know not. My Lord you know loves building no more than you. I am glad Lord Litchfield escaped so well considering the course he took . . . If common street news will stop your longing, then the Duchess of Richmond* is coming over, and Fitz James is to be Duke of Dublin and Viceroy of Ireland; a brave gentleman in general esteem.

1686, Oct. 27. . . . As soon as the proclamation was out, the town rang again that the Parliament was accidentally dissolved by proroguing it to the 15th of Feb., without naming from what time; but now is hushed (hushed) again, and people are of another mind. This day it is reported that the new High Commission [is] to be opened with my Lord Mulgrave only in the room of the Archbishop; but I do not hear that he is yet out of the Council. Last night it was confidently reported that Lord Bellasis goes into Ireland and not Tircconnell. Your good friend and the kingdom's is on his last legs, Lord Bridgwater. P.S. If I writ Richmond I meant Portsmouth, who is safely arrived here.

1686, Nov. 3. . . . I hear that there hath been a very great meeting in Holland, and then resolved to acquaint the Prince with their condition, and to know what he would do; they told him that France was arming against him, and feared that our King was so to, and desired to know what he would do; he told them that as his predecessors had had the honour to serve in their extremities, so was [he] of the same mind, and [would] take the same fortune with them; that he did believe as they did for France, and as for England he had so little correspondence with things of that nature there, that he could say nothing; but to show his willingness, he told them that he had 300,000*l*. in such and such places which was all at their service at 3*l*. per cent.

1686, Nov. 10. The news of a new commission is asleep; the old one sat last week, at which Sir J. Borlase came off with flying colours, and Sir Ri. Nudigate only with having his man put in again which he put out. Londonderry's lady is northern not western, Mrs. Lucy Jobson Never more care taken for shipping than now; all docks and wharves new dressed, rigged, and trigged, and all stocks full of ships, and some of the merchants' docks besides, a new brave store

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

* The letter of the 27th corrects this to Portsmouth.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

house built of 120 fathom long, and provisions and stores laying in for 18,000 men.—Foreign news.

1686, Nov. 24. Julian Johnson's behaviour was very bold and stout; he told my Lord that as he sate there in that eminent place of judicature, so he hoped he would distribute his justice impartially and indifferently, and therefore he did present unto him these and these parsons; he was told that they could take no notice of what was not before them; he told them that it was now before them, and he did now inform that Slaughter (the Putney minister) had preached and published high treason by the law of the land, and that there was his sermon printed by his Majesty, and offered him the sermon, and so another of another body, and some say, they said it must come to them by the Attorney; so he gave them to him, who sat down and would not take them; when he was going out of the court, my Lord called to him and bid him remember that he was to go to Tyburn; he turning him about, asked if he had any errand thither to command him, and many more stout answers he made. When he came before the commissioners to be degraded, he told them that he was before the three reverend prelates, Protestants he did hope, but there was wanting the archbishop; they told him he could not be there, then he wanted his own diocesan, they were his proper judges, but that did not prevail neither. They asked him for his Bible, he had none, they asked him for his orders, he had not them neither; they asked him where they were, he told them very safe; they must have them; he told them they should have his life rather, and many more sweet repartees he made . . . The French King, his fistula is cut; but not out of danger. I pray burn all such letters.

1686, Nov. 18 . . . Julian Johnson is sentenced to the pillory, fined, and to be whipped from Newgate to Tyburn . . . Some declare that the sheriffs have power to enter into all burroughs, and to return whom they please. The discourse of a citadel at the Mews that was in the summer is now brought forward again, and it is hoped that this will keep the seditious Whigs in pure obedience as they ought.

1686, Nov. [17] . . I hear that many of the discarded officers in Ireland went into Holland, and they are entertained there. I hear that they of Amsterdam have desired that the Princess of Anrange may have a guard for their security. It is hoped at our court that we shall not join in any offensive war with France against Holland. We hear no news yet of sheriffs. P.S. I hear Lord Bridgewater died much in debt.

1686, Nov. 31. . . I hear you are out of this commission, but do not know it. Our commanders here are made justices of the peace. Our cozen of France is in good condition considering what has been done. John[son] has had his wooden ruff on three times, and no affront offered him. The next bout will be sad.

1686, Dec. 8. . . I hear no more of your being left out of the commission, which tho' you care not for, yet I believe your neighbours will. The court owns that our cozen of France is very ill. It holds that Tirconnell goes into Ireland.

1686, Dec. 15 . . . Its generally reported that the French king mends, that he intends to be at Mass on Christmas Day. An herb woman bought lately a pillow here, and a few days using of it, she felt something hard in it, and opened and found as many jewels in it as she hath been offered two, others say 3,000l.; this goes current for a great truth.

1687, July 3. . . There was brave work Friday last before the Commissioners, where Magdalen College behave themselves so well that in the opinion of the commissioners Farmer deserved so ill that he was unworthy to govern anything but brutes; there was forgery, knavery, debauchery, what not, proved against him; they are to appear again on Friday, but on what account I cannot tell. Merton College had preferred one of their society to a living, and had his year of grace to keep his fellowship a year; and now he got his Majesty's letter to continue it one year longer, which was denied. There were 6 aldermen turned out last week, 8 new, 3 more.

1687, July 27. . . I hear Merton College has denied either the King's letter or Mandamus. I hear there is making for Parliament men in many places, but they meet with rubs. Pen hath put out a notable book to give up test and penal laws.

1685, Aug. 4. . . There have been many fined for sheriffs, but now Firebrace holds and is knighted, and I think the other is one Morgan or Manton, a Papist. The camp is breaking up. The Queen goes to the Bath Tuesday sennight . . . On Friday there's expectation of Magdalen College doom.

1687, Aug. 10. . . Sir Charles Gaudey coming to town on Friday overtook a coach and 8 horses with glasses up, and well blunderbussed on both sides; asked if he might ask without offence who was in; they told him they could not tell, only it was a traitor from beyond sea, and that they came from Harwich, but I hear no more of it. Magdalen College came off very well Friday last; but its thought [that] 3rd or 4th of Sept. something will be done . . .

1687, Aug. 17. . . Who it was in the coach with 8 horses I can not learn; only the person who was in the company was bolder than Sir Charles, and rode often up to the coach side, whose glasses were sometimes down to let in the air, and he confidently said it was Ferguson; if he, I guess he'll peach, to save his own life. Burnet's letters to Lord Middleton they say are in print, which are his own justification. There are other very significant letters, papers of his about the Test and Declaration . . . They say Lord Middleton must out, and Castlemaine is to succeed him.

1687, Aug. 24. . . There are notable papers abroad . . . There are 10 reasons that go under the name of [Burnet] against giving up of the Test, about 2 sheets of paper; there are other papers that descant about absolute power, and without reserve, mentioned in his Majesty's Scotch declaration for liberty of conscience very pithily they say; the Declaration is in the Gazette, No. 2221, from Feb. 20 to March 3, 1686. There are also in one sheet of paper B. Burnet's citation with his answer thereto, and 3 letters to Lord Middleton; but above all there is more lately come out some papers against giving up the Test and concerning the Declaration, very home things and much desired by all people . . . The Lord Chamberlain is suspended his place for an indiscretion, but its thought will be restored.

1687, Aug. 31. . . I hear his Majesty is but slenderly met in his progress by the nobility and gentry of the countries as he passes. Brandon Gerard hath his pardon, and I hear that Pen is getting Ferguson and Matthew's pardons, which its said will be granted, I hear as you hear that Dover is in Mulgrave's place, but he is every day at bowls at Maribone with his key, which I believe he would not be if outed, or if he had got the palsey. I went to see him at Whitehall on Saturday morning, but he was gone to Marrybone. The London ministers by particular invitation dined yesterday with Sheriff Fowles.

1687, Oct. 18 . . . There are 3 commissioners going to Oxford with large powers of suspending, expelling, &c.; the men are Bishop of Chester, Lord C. J. Wright, and Sir Thomas Jennar . . . It is thought that the Chancery shall be executed by commission. Jacobus de Sancto Amando is chosen alderman. I hear the Lord Chancellor is to have 8,000l. per ann.

1687, Oct. 25. . . I do not hear anything of the suspension of the Dean of Chester. The Chancery is not in commission . . . There are general rumours about Magdalen College; they have struck Dr. Hufte's [Hough's] name out of the book, whereupon he protested against all their proceedings, appealing to the King and his courts of justice, which done, the company burst into a great humming, which the court looked upon as a misdemeanour, and threatened to send the doctor to prison unless he would immediately be bound in a recognizance of 1,000l., and find 2 sureties to be bound in 500l. each, to answer it next term; . . . Some say 16 more, others all but two, are suspended or exiled. Mr. Fairfax behaved himself as stoutly; they sent for him twice before he would come; . . . he desired to be heard openly and have a public notary; he also appealed to the courts; he was told he would find no favour there; he returned, that he looked for none, neither did he ask for any, but justice he did require and expected without favour.

1687, Nov. 9. . . Titus hath kissed his Majesty's hand, introduced by Penn. The town speaks very suspiciously of Sir Thomas Lee. I hear Baron Wem [Jefferies, L.C.] is to be your Lord Lieutenant, and that Sir Nicholas Butler shall be Baron Edmonton and Viscount Boon. Major Wildman has kissed or is to kiss his Majesty's hand. Father Peters is clerk of the closet.

1687, Nov. 16. . . Lord Langdale hath Plymouth's regiment, and I hear that Nell is dead. Col. Russell is taken with a fit of the palsey, and is speechless. [He died on the following Sunday according to Denton's letter of Nov. 22.]

1688, June 13. . . The Duke of Cornwall was born on Sunday, 10th instant, about 6 minutes before 10 in the morning . . . Our worthy bishops appeared on Friday last before King and Council; they

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

were demanded to own their hands; they answered that that court had no authority to ask them questions to accuse themselves. The King asked them if they would not tell him; they answered if he would command them as King upon their allegiance and no advantage taken to their prejudice they would. Then they were bid to withdraw, and when called in, my Lord Chancellor asked them the same question by the King's command; and the King presently said that he did command him so to do, and then they all owned their hands; so a warrant was presently drawn up to send them to the Tower, to which all the Privy Council, being 19 or 20, subscribed their hands and seals; and there they are most mightily visited, courted highly by the multitude there: at Whitehall, craving their benediction, as they took water, and so again as they landed at the Tower, so that they could scarce get into the Tower. They refused to give bail or recognisance for their appearance, because it was a breach of privilege of peerage We hear that an information is drawing up against the bishops for making and publishing a scandalous and seditious libel against the King and Government.

1688, July 11. Its no news that Mr. Rotulorum Vane, and Titus are sworn Privy Counsellors, but its news that my Lord Cornberry is married to my Lady K. O'Brian, by slight of hand It is feared that the bishop's will be troubled again, but how or which way nondum constat. It is said that Dover will be in Mulgrave's place; that Sunderland will be Lord Treasurer, and that Castlemaine will be Secretary. P.S. The noise of Wharton, Oosley, Norton, and Leigh being Privy Counsellors is a little allayed.

1688, July 12. Its talked as if there should be 16 commissioners for ecclesiastical affairs, viz., 4 earls, 4 bishops, 4 judges, 4 civil lawyers. I hear Sir T. L., of Hartwell, is very inclinable to come in.

1688, Aug. 21. . . . The most concern now is the Dutch, who its reported have sent to his Majesty to declare whether he will help the French or Dutch, or stand neuter. It makes a great consternation here among the wise.

1688, Aug. 29. You'll have Rochester's letter from Jack. Its said that he hath also written a peccavi letter also to the Archbishop and to the Bishop of Hereford also, but I have not seen them. We say nothing here of a war between Dutch and French; all the noise here is that the Dutch are coming to visit us, which is the talk of the court also; and that they [are] expected the next easterly winds. Its said that Peters and Aberville are both gone into France for certain. The King expects a squadron of French ships to be at his command. All our horse are commanded to the sea side with strict command that the officers stir not without special leave under his sign manual.

1688, Sept. 11. Here were some considerable officers in Portsmouth who refused to take in some Irish into their regiments were sent for up as prisoners, and were tried yesterday at Windsor by a council of war, and were cashiered; Beaumont, Pack, Parsons were some of them.

1688, Nov. 27. The greatest news and surprise here is that Princess Anne of Denmark stole away in the dead of the night on Sunday with my Lady Churchill and Mr. Berkeley, and I do not yet know that is known where she is or whither she went, whether gone to Holland, or hid in the city, or to—. Prince George, with the Duke of Ormond, went to the Prince of Orange, and presently on notice thereof she played this prank. Several noblemen, gentlemen, and commonalty up in great numbers in several counties, we hear are like the men of Lachish, very secure, only we fear so may be distressed for horse meat and man's meat; if that should come I should wish myself with you.—Its printed to night that his Majesty will command his nobility about this town to attend him.

1688, Dec. 4. It is in vain to send news, it is but telling a tale of a tub, for we cannot know which is true which false. The commissioners are gone with hopes of returning with an olive branch of peace. Where the Prince of Orange is not certainly known here. The Princess of Denmark was certainly at Nottingham last Saturday, and the Bishop of London preached last Sunday there before her. She hath sent for her clothes. Provisions rise here very little Since I writ this I have seen a letter from Chester that said that upon this day sennight Lord Molinox came into Chester with his regiment of Papists, which made a stranger confusion than was in all the last wars; some few were wounded, but I heard of none that were killed, but he possessed himself of both the town and castle.

1688, Dec. 12. . . . Now we are abandoned by King, Queen, and Prince of Wales, all gone cum pannis. Confounded be all they that worship graven images and boast themselves of idols. Now new councils must be taken; in the midst of all distractions I hope [God] will provide well for this nation. P.S. 'Tis said that my [Lord] Chancellor is gone along with him, and consequently the seals, and a world more gone or going.

1689, May-day. . . . The diet in Poland very quarrelsome, insomuch that the King laid his hand upon his sword, whereupon one of the great men drew his sword and stroke off the King's hat and feather. It is not yet certain whether Londonderry be yet taken or not; there's a ship ready fraught with victuals, &c. going to her relief.

1689, May 15. . . . Sir H. Monson and Lord Van [] are outed the house, because they refused to take oaths. There are various reports of affairs; for what concern the ships, its certain they basted one another very soundly Contradictory reports about Londonderry and Scotland.

1689, Sept. 11. Bishop Patrick has kissed the King's hand to be Bishop of Chichester.

1689 [Sept. 17]. Bishop Patrick is Bishop of Chichester, and Stillingfleet Bishop of Worcester, and Tillotson Dean of Pauls.

1689, Sept. 24. . . . News from Ireland that Shombrooke [Schomberg] is within 6 miles of the Irish army encamped, but its thought that he will avoid fighting, and will give them the slip and march to Dublin.

1689, Oct. 2 The King is at Newmarket, and returns next week.

1689, Oct. 8. . . . The feats of Inniskillen men are so prodigious that it is scarce credible; the King having detached 5,000 horse and foot to surprise Sligo wherein they were, who having notice thereof kept the lame and blind and sickly to defend the place, and the rest being 500 or 600 horse and foot, and met there 15 or 20 miles, and took all their shot, and then fell boldly on them, routed them all, killed hundreds, and brought a hundred prisoners away, of which Schomberg having notice caused all his guns both in the camp and in the river to go off three times that night, and they brought away besides 8,000 (sic) or 1,000 head of cattle There were not 20 Inniskillen men lost or wounded I gave Lord Lichfield a visit on Monday, who would not believe this of Inniskillen, but believed in earnest that the King had routed Schomberg, killed 4,000 of his men and penn'd the rest; such then was the Papist news. It seems some hundreds of the French had designed to deliver their post and let the King's army in upon him; but it being discoursed by a deserter, it was prevented, and he has hanged up 60 of them, and is sending the rest over hither to be ordered accordingly. I hear we have spent more by 1,300,000*l.* than the Parliament has given Schomberg daily expects 6,000 Danes.

1689, Oct. 16.— . . . Some coming from Ireland say that the business of Inniskillen men was much bigger than related here; for they pursued the slaughter 20 miles, so that it was guessed they killed near 1,500 men. Sir John Lanier's regiment, with two others, are now got to Shorgorgh.

1689, Oct. 23. . . . Last Tuesday the Commissioners of the Great Seal signed a commission to Sir Robert Atkyns to be speaker in Lord Halifax's room. We hear that the French are masters of St. Christophers. Lundy and his fellow are coming to be tried here; troops are going from hence to fetch them.

1689, Nov. 12. . . . His Majesty's new buildings at Kensington fell down this day and killed some say two, some say more. A report that the French King has sent 50 or 60 sail of ships with soldier, &c. to Ireland, whereof we took one; and they intend to have 30 men of war to ride in the mouth of the river.

1689, March 19. The election in Essex went clearly for Sir Fr. Massham and Mildmay. It is thought that if the fast had not been the next day, which prevented the clergy from attending, that they would have lost it. It was observed that Sir Anthony Abdy had more voices than Sir Elias Harvey. It is said that a scurvy paper was thrown into Maynard's coach We have had another rubber and have got the better, killed some and taken prisoners; and its said that the King hath more very good news, but needs confirmation, and so will not divulge till better assured, which if true there will be no need of his going into Ireland.

1690, March 25. There is a noise that the French have landed their supplies at Limerick, but not believed. P.S. This Wednesday, the 26th, its confidently said that

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY
BART.

the French have landed their succours and have gone to fetch more, about 8,000 soldiers, 400 officers, 60 field pieces, &c. Its believed that the Inniskillen men have taken Cavan by storm, and put all to the sword.

1690, April 2. On Friday night last an express came that the French landed about 6,000, and about 80 officers and 400 volunteers; since news is come that they are put into three cantionary towns, and that their men-of-war will visit our channel and pick up stragglers. One night last week several declarations of King James were posted up at Plymouth, but have not yet discovered the actor. The house is much puzzled how to raise money.

Letters by Dr. H. PAMAN to Sir R. VERNEY.

1685, Aug. Sir R. Verney to Dr. Paman, after his return from Wroxall, co. Warwick.—Complimentary. Sends his duty to my Lord of Canterbury.

1685, Aug. 25. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney.—Complimentary.—(After being successively at Claydon and at Wroxall).

1686, July 20, Lambeth.—The same to the same.—Perhaps you have not seen so much of the new Commission as I send you. Some will needs think it will lay hold of my Lord of London first; but others say it will not look back, but to such only as offend after the date. The King told them at the council he had given this Commission because he found the ordinary jurisdiction was not sufficient to keep preachers within their bounds. At the same time he told them he had added four new Privy Councillors, his old friends and fellow sufferers with him. Dr. Smith is like to succeed the Bishop of Oxford, and Mr. Aldrich to be Dean of Christ Church. The Bishop of Chester died on Friday last. I have heard Dr. Jolliffe named for it, but without any grounds that I know. Lady Burgoyne is in Yorkshire with her sister.

Heads of the commission to the seven Lords to exercise ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The commissioners were the Archbishop Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treasurer, President of the Council, the Bishops of Durham and Rochester, and Lord Chief Justice Herbert.

1686, July 25. Sir R. Verney to Dr. Paman.— . . . He is going to send a buck. His (Verney's) eldest son was to be at Capt. Paulden's house, against the Cross Walk in Holborn Row, in Lincoln's Inn Fields.

1686, Aug. 11. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney. On Monday the Bishop of London appeared before the commissioners, and behaved himself with great modesty, temper, and submission, and yet with courage enough too. His charge was for not obeying the King in suspending Dr. Sharpe. He answered that he thought he could not do it without first calling him to an account for his sermon, and so proceeding against him judicially, but if he were mistaken he humbly craved pardon, and did profess it was out of ignorance, and not contempt of the King's commands. He asked for a copy of the Commission and of the articles against him in writing. The Lord Chancellor denied both, and as to the commission said it was made public enough by the broad seal; and said if he had been so desirous of a copy for a penny it might have been had at a coffee house. Some say my Lord said he did not use to go thither. As to the articles he said it was not the fashion of proceeding in this Commission, which was to serve the King presently; the answer was to be raptim expedite et ore tenuis, therefore he required my Lord of London to answer directly to a plain question, why he did not obey the King's command. The Bishop desired he might have time till toward next term to advise and consult with those that were better able to direct him in his defence, as thinking it a matter of law.—They gave him a week.—He asked if there were an appeal.—My lord said what they should do they would not be ashamed to own in any other court, Canterbury has not appeared, which is taken ill.

1686, Aug. 15. Sir R. Verney to H. Paman.—As to the Commission the eyes of the nation are fixed. Canterbury has got immortal fame by not appearing.

1686, Aug. 17, Lambeth. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney.—Received yours of the 12th. My Lord of London is still on his legs. On Monday he appeared and said he had used all diligence to find out where to have a copy of the Commission, which he had not till Sunday, and to find council; but so many being out of town he could not. The Lord Chancellor was very gentle and easy to him, but said if he went about to get the Commission only to take exceptions to the jurisdiction of the court, neither he nor anyone else should have time granted on that account; but if on any other account he should be as willing to serve him as anybody, and asked what time he would require. He said a fortnight. The Lord Chancellor and the rest granted it, namely, Tuesday fortnight at 11.—Some spread reports as if there were other matters against him, as incontinency The Prince and Princess came this night from the Waters. The bishopricks are not yet disposed of. Dr. Cartwright presses hard. Lady Stanhope is dead last week. (On a slip.) The King goes on Monday to Marlborough to the Duke of Somerset's, on Tuesday to Badminton the Duke of Beaufort's, on Wednesday to Bristol, Friday Bridgewater, Saturday Wilton, Sunday evening he goes aboard his yacht at Southampton, and so to Portsmouth. On Tuesday he dines at the Bishop of Winton's, and comes to Windsor that night.

1686, Aug. 22. Sir R. Verney to H. Paman.—About the buck, and thanks for letter.

1686, Aug. 25. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney.—The Bishop of London's cause is not yet ripe The Archbishop of Glasgow has been with the King and given good satisfaction. Sir G. Mackenzie, the advocate, was there, but could not, they say, come to kiss the King's hand. On Sunday two new bishops were declared, Dr. Parker of Oxford, and Cartwright of Chester. And they say how the King has sent to Dr. John Bridgeman to present him to the living. P.S. The Earl of Kingston went into Essex to buy horses, and thence went to France, and afterwards sent his lady notice. Some think it is better at home, because he leaves his lady for so long time, and others the worse.

1686, Sept. 1, Lambeth. The same to the same P.S. The great lady from Ireland is proclaimed to be here by drums, trumpets, and hautboys at her door.

1686, Sept. 2. (A paper.) Account of the appearance of the Bishop of London before the Commissioners.—He excepted to the jurisdiction, and was overruled. He pleaded that he ought to have been judged by his Metropolitan, which was overruled. The King's letter was read, and the bishop's answer to Lord Sunderland.—His counsel were Dr. Hodges, Oldish, Newton, and Brice.—They said he had showed Sharp the King's letter, and had forbid him to preach.—He could not suspend Sharpe, except on process. Sedition being charged against Sharpe, he (the bishop) could not meddle with it He was ordered to attend next Monday at 10 o'clock.

1686, Sept. 5. Sir R. Verney to H. Paman.—The coming over of the Countess of Dorchester affords a theme for much discourse, but I am not sorry she is come, for I believe she will do better than some others whom I shall not name.

1686, Sept. 6. Copy of the Chancellor's speech on the sentence against the bishop.—Suspension from episcopal jurisdiction until the King's further order.

Copy of the sentence from the register.

1686, Sept. 8, Lambeth. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney.—Sends copy of the sentence, &c. Mr. Franklin, the King's proctor, after the sentence for to tell them how the sentence was to be published making any answer, he pulled out a parchment, and he was an old man of 75 years, and had besides a and dimness of sight, therefore he desired the favour then that he might give up his patent, which he offered. They said he must give it up to the King. But the Lord Chancellor said he observed at Tunbridge he could follow his bowl and jack as well as one of 22. But Sir T. Penfold told them being there was no cathedral, it was to be affixed on the chapter house door. The Queen Dowager went yesterday towards the Bath. The [bishop] of London dined here yesterday; I see no alteration in him from what he was.

1686, Nov. 25. The same to the same. Johnson was degraded on Saturday. The three representative bishops were there, but he said he did not see his diocesan there. They told him the reason; he said he thought that he was to come before the Metropolitan. He behaved quietly and decently in being disrobed, tho' he said he would rather have been hanged at Westminster Hall than to be so cut off from the service of God, to which he had dedicated himself. They asked for his orders; he said he had them not about him. They asked him where they were; he said in a safe place, for he would be hanged rather than part with them. There are many P. [popish] justices of the peace, but it is not thought fit to make such sheriffs, who, if they be not qualified by law, may come afterwards into many inconveniences, if they shall impanel juries to take away men's lives. The Commission is altered and the King has seen it. The Lord Chamberlain is to be in my Lord of Canterbury's place. Against they sit again, that will, I believe, take place. My Lord of Salisbury has been very ill, but is much better. Sir C. Scarborough has kept him to outlive Dr. Horton, Prebendary of Salisbury, and Sir Charles' son hath the prebend. Great noise of the Bishop of London being restored; but I believe he knows nothing of it. I am told there is in the Press at Oxford A review of the Reformation, begun by a lustful King, continued by a child, and pursued by an ignorant woman. . . . Mr. Johnson, at the King's Bench, put into the Attorney-General's hand the minister of Putney's book. He said he deserved justly to be prosecuted, and if they would give him . . . would do it.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

1687, May 4. The same to the same.—The university business is put off until Saturday. They have put in their plea. Among other Acts, they mentioned 16 Car. I., by which the high commission was taken away, &c.—But they said, besides, this was a temporal thing, and they could not have cognizance of it, who had only power in causes ecclesiastical. The great thing now on foot is the address from the Church of England for the King's kindness to them. Four of the bishops have subscribed to it: Durham, Oxford, Rochester, and Chester.—Winchester and Peterborough refused.—But the Bishop of Lincoln has subscribed it, and sent it up and down to get hands to it. The address runs thus:—"Whereas, "in your Majesty's royal declaration, lately published, "you have been graciously pleased to declare that your "Majesty will protect and maintain the archbishops, "bishops, and clergy, and all other your subjects of the "Church of England in the free exercise of their "religion, as by law established, and in the quiet and "full enjoyment of all their possessions, without any "molestation or disturbance whatever; we cannot but "think ourselves obliged in duty and gratitude to "return your Majesty our hearty thanks for these the "gracious expression of your kindness, and for all the "former assurances of your royal favours to the Church "of England, and humbly to express our loyalty, as "becomes the true sons of the Church of England, and "your Majesty's most obedient subjects and servants." My Lady Northampton hath a son.

1687, May 10. The same to the same.—University business.—On Saturday the Vice-Chancellor was put out of his office by the Commissioners, without being capable again to have that, or any other employment in the university, and to be suspended from his mastership, &c. The Commission was sealed anew on Thursday last, with the addition of 60 lines, which contain new powers, but none yet know what they are, it being not yet made public nor registered till this business is over; for on Thursday next the rest of those that came along with the Vice-Chancellor from the university are to appear again and expect their sentence. The Bishop of Lincoln has sent his letter to his several archdeacons. He tells them he had received the address, and subscribed it, and understood the rest of the bishops were busy about the same thing, and therefore urged the speeding it away to get what hands they could. . . . The Bishop of Lichfield sent word he will use all diligence to promote it. The Bishop of Worcester has had two priests offered him from Roman Catholic lords, to be instituted to livings in his gift; he has refused them both. Lord — said the address was like two syringes, one larger filled with assafoetida, flung in our teeth, which we cannot but abominate; the other, a smaller one, with a little orange flower in it, to wash our mouths, and for this we must give thanks. It was wondered why J. Williams was turned out, it was answered he deserved to be hanged, because he flew from his colours. The Marquis of Worcester is out of his regiment. Lord Spencer is wounded in a duel at Bury, but I think not mortally. He hath a proverb secures him, "Naught is never in danger."

Draft of a reply by Sir R. Verney.

1687, May 31. H. Paman to Sir Ralph Verney.—. . . I heard yesterday that on Saturday at Hampton Court the militia is put down, and that the licensing of ale-houses will be in other hands than the justices of the peace. The Prince goes into his own country on Friday come sennight. He stays, they say, but six weeks.

1687, June 1. Draft of Sir Ralph's reply.

1687, June 7. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney.—Magdalen College business.—The Lord Chancellor asked them only a plain question, Why they did not obey the King's mandate.—They asked time to answer by council.—He said they should have asked council before they did it, but it was like those of their coat, first to disobey the King, and then to ask counsel how to justify it. They have time given them to Monday next.—The report about the militia and ale-houses not true.

1687, June 14. The same to the same.—Yesterday the Magdalen College delegates put in their answer, which was, that they proceeded according to the method their statutes ordered, &c., &c. Dr. Fairfax was one of the delegates who did not sign this.—He asked what they had against him; if anything, he demanded it in writing, for so the law requires in all ecclesiastical courts.—The Chancellor said he might be a divine, but was no lawyer.—Fairfax went on arguing with heat, and the Chancellor called for an officer to take him away. The King has had the gout, as they tell him, but he says he was hurt with the stirrup. The Duchess of Monmouth, they say, is to marry the Lord Cornwallis. The King has suspended Lord Devonshire's fine, and will have him in his power and mercy.

1687, July 5. The same to the same.—. . . Mr. Atterbury was sent to the — fellow to see the sentence put in execution, but none of them would act, the President himself being in the college. . . . On Friday the Commissioners met again, and Mr. Farmer was before them to vindicate himself from what he said had been so maliciously cast upon him, and said he had witnesses. . . . they have a month to bring their witnesses face to face. Some, by way of jest, said it was strange they should lay such things to Mr. Farmer's charge, when he so lately came from confession and absolution. It is like prosecuting one after an Act of Indemnity. Lord Devonshire is offered to have his restraint taken off, if he will give a bond for the 30,000*l.*, which he will not do, because it would argue guilt and consent to the fine. Lord Brandon and Sir Gilbert Gerrard have kissed the King's hand. One Cruso, a nonconformist minister, had a bastard laid to himself, and was therefore forbid preaching till he could clear himself; this much is true, I believe, but they had added to the story that he says he had been married a year; but, not liking the ceremony of the ring, had married himself. The Bishop of Lincoln and the Bishop of Chester with him, were at Windsor last week to present his address. On Thursday the Nuncio entered at Windsor. The King spoke to the Duke of Somerset to receive him, but he refused, for that by the law yet in force, it was treason. . . . About 16 coaches attended the Nuncio; when he appeared he made three obeisances, and the King and Queen as often rose up. The Duke of Grafton introduced him.

1687, July 27. The same to the same.—I came last week from Cambridge. . . . An instrument was sent to Syon College, under the seal of the Commissioners, to put out particular passages in their statutes that were against popery. They are to be made void, and the Master hath power given him to admit whom he will into the College, with or without the consent of the fellows. The Lord Chancellor has had another son, who is dead. He is going next week to see his purchase in Leicestershire. The Duchess of Modena is dead.

1687, July 31. Draft of reply by Sir R. Verney.

1687, Aug. 2. H. Paman to Sir R. Verney.—The Commissioners sat on Friday.—They have put off the fellows of Magdalen College, who were removed for contempt till Friday next. What was charged against Farmer, was proved against him by near 20 witnesses. . . . Lord Hunsdon said he was a rogue and a dog to take up their religion to act such things as these under. The Lord Chancellor was against him, too. . . . I suppose he is laid aside. There is talk of Dryden, but I believe without ground. The Lord Mayor and 12 aldermen went last Saturday with an address to Hampton Court, as I am told. Several aldermen are turned out for not complying with it; Sir Wm. Turner, Prichard, Thoroughgood, Chapman Lewis, Dashwood, Sir James Smith, Sir John Moore, and Sir Jonathan Raymond. I hear since there are five more. The Lord Chancellor sent them a form, but they thought that was too much not to give them the liberty of their own expression. But I am told they were in that form to thank the King for the toleration to nonconformists. I begin now to doubt whether they did deliver an address on Saturday, as was generally said; but they were at Hampton Court.

1687, Aug. 3. The same to the same.—On Monday the Lord Chancellor came to dine with the Bishop of Rochester; but it was after he had dined, he was not well last sitting of the Commissioners. I fancy the Lord Chancellor was afraid he had a mind to slip out of the Commission, and therefore went to strengthen him against next sitting, which is on Friday next. Yesterday the Lord Chancellor was with the Lord Mayor and aldermen in the city.

1687, Aug. 10. The same to the same.—Lord Castle-maine is come home. Mr. Baxter, they say, is to be Lord

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

Mayor, Shorters chaplain. — Yesterday was the Stationers' feast.

1687, Aug. 17. The same to the same.—Many Lord Lieutenants are turned out, and many Papists put in.—A great scuffle at Oxford between the scholars and soldiers.—Sir John Shorter would not be content to take the oath proper to an alderman, but required to take those of allegiance and supremacy too, so they doubt whether he will be Lord Mayor. But there is talk of Sir Peter Daniel. Mede, the quaker, refused to be alderman, and says he will be property and test for no man. The Prince returned safe; he went to Windsor on Monday night. The Bishop of Oxford hath a broad seal for president of Magdalen College; how they will put him is expected; for Huffle thinks he stands upon surer grounds now that Farmer is withdrawn. The Bishop of Lincoln hath lately a living fallen, the presentation to which he long since gave to one Hutton one of his archdeacons; but on Hutton offending him he revoked and gave it to a son of the Bishop of Chester, saying to the bishop, "I design to give a living to my brother, your son, for you have been a father to us both."

1687, Aug. 24. The same to the same.—The news is new in the progress, we meet it by chance. At Marlborough the Lord Chancellor took down the Queen's bed and set up his own in its place; she dissembled her resentment till she came at the Bath, and then shewed it so openly and fully, that the King sent Lord Dover to discharge him from his office and the court. (Jokes upon him.) . . . Some think Lord Castlemain, others Lord Dover will succeed him. Tirconnell, they say, meets the King at Chester. It is believed the King will see the Bishop of Oxford put into possession of Magdalen College. Huffle, I hear, is gone out of town, and will be absent at that time. There are six companies going hence to be at Oxford when the King is there the 3rd of Sept. There are 17 or 18 aldermen out.—P.S. There is a great talk still of a vicar-general, my Lord Chancellor.—The Lord Chamberlain was one of the seven blue garters that received with the Princess on Sunday fortnight at Windsor; he saw there a priest as a spy and gave notice of it. Lord Grandison went to him, and asked him what he did, if he did not design to receive; he said at last he would be there, and had the King's commission; notwithstanding that he turned him out, and the Princess with four of the noblemen that were with her complained to the King. He said it should not be so again.

1687, Sept. 1. The same to the same.—The Lord Chamberlain is but suspended; he appeared last week at the bowling green at Maribone with his key and staff, which they say would serve still to determine controversies about casts. . . . There was lately at Witham, in Essex, a great confluence of people more than once at a conventicle there, the preacher a very [] and well spoken man; he brought many bibles to put off among them at 18d. a piece, and spread catechisms among them; at last he was found out to be a priest. Last Saturday one Webster that is turned papist, one of the Bishop of Norwich's diocese, was dealing with an attorney of Norwich to convert him, and said he would go to the bishop and prove the Church of England not to be a true member. The bishop told the priest and attorney that he would reply to any writing; a day was appointed; the bishop was ready with the Dean of Norwich and Dr. Prideaux. Webster refused to write, and went away saying the bishop refused to argue.

1687, Oct. 19. The same to the same.—This day the Commissioners are gone to Oxford to visit Magdalen College, viz., Lord Chief Justice Wight, the Bishop of Chester, and Sir Thos. Jenner; they did design Dr. Hedges, and pressed him hard, but he refused.—There is a report of a visitation of the University of Cambridge. . . . The Bishop of Ch[ester] was very civil to La. Laborn, entertained him at his house, was present at the confirmation he had there, asked his blessing, and would have as many of the clergy as he could ask his blessing, and particularly the deacons and priests he had ordained. He spoke to the Recorder to have the mayor and aldermen appear to the King's Bench in their formalities, and make him a present, but they refused wholly. The Dean of Chester is suspended by the bishop; he will have an ill game to play when this bishop is of the commission for ecclesiastical affairs.

1687, Oct. 25. The same to the same.—He sends news from Oxford.—Meeting of the Commissioners at Oxford.—Speech of the Bishop of Chester.—Huffle protested, and there was a general noise and humming.—The Lord Chief Justice called it a riot, and made D. Huffle put in bail of 1,000l. for his appearance at the King's Bench bar, with two sureties of 500l. each. They called Dr. Fairfax, and asked him if he would justify Dr. Huffle's election. He asked if they acknowledged him to be a fellow. The head of Balliol College is dead; there is a report that Bernard would be put in.—A report yesterday that several officers of the soldiers at Maidstone are made free to have voices.

1687, Nov. 16. Copy of the sentence of deprivation of Dr. Charles Aldworth and the fellows of the College, preceded by copy of petition of (the master and fellows) to the King, for forgiveness, and promise to submit to the Bishop of Oxford as their president.

1687, Nov. 21. The same to the same.—Fresh talk every day of the Lord Chancellor going out. Mentioning the Oxford business, he says, three only keep in, Dr. Smith, Charnock, and Thompson. They offered some of the Demy's fellowships, only two accepted.—The fellows are not allowed a copy of the petition, but were required to sign it on the spot. Eleanor James, they say, placed herself so full in the King's sight in the park, that he must needs take notice of her, which he did, and asked her if she were still made (mad?) She said no, but humbly begged she might ask one question without offence. Why his Majesty was so unkind to the Duke of York's friends.—One in the coffee house, they say, looked so earnestly and almost rudely upon Sir R. Le Strange, that he must take notice of it, and asked what he meant; he said he took him for the observator, by his picture which he had. "Well, what then," said Sir R.? Saith the other, "I find you play very well upon the trump marine, who can vary so many several strings upon one single string; and besides they say you writ the Letter to the Dissenter."—"You are mistaken," saith he, "I answered it."—"Nay," then saith the other, "You are mistaken, you published it, but you did not answer it." There is lately come out a sheet of paper in answer to the answers of that letter, Sir R. Le Strange and H. Care, which hath wit in it.

1687, Dec. 24. The same to the same.—The Bishop of Oxford has sent his book to the Dean of St. Paul's. I told the Dean it was his glove and defiance, but it was a gold fringed glove, it was guilt. . . . It is gone, I believe, presently to Dr. Burnet; he hath always ready money about him to pay what is anywhere due. He sent my Lord of Canterbury a book also.—Some say the Papists will answer part of it, for he has not handled after their fashion transubstantiation, and therefore they will needs think him still of the Church of England, tho' she rejects him.

1688, Aug. 7. The same to the same.— . . . On Wednesday last Mrs. Lloyd was married to Mr. Russell, and Mr. Neale has lost all his guinees. He was at St. Giles' Church, where he did expect they should have been married, and did intend to forbid the match. Some of the company were come to that church, but seeing Mr. Neale there they and he [gave] out prayers, but they sent presently to her to go to be married at another place. She went therefore to St. Ann's, and was married by Mr. Wake, who is to marry a very considerable fortune, Mrs. Horell.

1688, Aug. 21. The same to the same.—The Bishop of Rochester last Saturday sent a letter taking his leave of the board, and went to Tunbridge to drink the waters.

Letters by RALPH PALMER.

n.d. R. Palmer to R. Verney at Mid. Claydon.— . . . Besides what news I have sent my lord, I can only add this to you, that the Ld. Halifax in the House of Lords the other day produced a printed sermon of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and submitted a passage of it to the censure of the House as he thought highly deserving it; the bishop desiring the perusal of it owned the sermon, but withall desired 'em to take the whole paragraph as it was together, and then they would see it bore another construction than what was urged; which he himself read and gave it such a turn as my Lord Halifax could not answer. The Archbishop of Cant., standing at the fire, Lord Ferrers asked him what he thought of it; truly (he said) he thought plain sermons best, for he did not like wit in 'em; Lord Ferrers answered he could not be of his Grace's opinion, for sermons were generally so very dull, he was glad to meet with any wit in them.

1685, July 11, Oxford. Ral. Palmer to Elizabeth Verney at her house over against the coffee house in Hatton Street, Hatton Garden.—We have the good news of the ruin of Scot and Gray, who, I suppose, will be executed speedily; and if you hear what punishment is to be inflicted, pray let me know.

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

1689, March 7, Little Chelsey. R. Palmer to John Verney.—I have gotten a very good Cremona violin, so that I would desire you not to put yourself to any trouble about sending for one.

1688, Jan. 10, Little Chelsey. The same to the same. . . . I can tell you somewhat rather good news than bad, that the soldiers allotted these three weeks to our share marched on Tuesday, but others came in who quarter not upon gentlemen but innkeepers and shopkeepers. I hope we shall have no more, though I wish them well, for they are an affliction even to an afflicted people, which makes it proverbial that a bad peace is better than a just war.

1689, March 10, Middle Temple.—The same to the same.—There is nothing of news extant of colourable authority, and therefore you must take the coffee house talk, which was very positive the other night, that the French have put out to sea 25 sail of ships, with tenders, for Ireland, men, money, and ammunition. They say there are 30,000 pds. worth of copper farthings coined or coining for the sole use of Ireland. As to others news, I must give you an account of the proceedings of our Parliament which sat in the Temple Hall on Thursday last, concerning the tax upon chambers, consisting of barristers and students, where it was thought we were not in reach of the Act of Parliament, because it is not mentioned in the Act that we shall be taxed, but only commissioners nominated for the two Temples, which, I fear, is equivalent, though a committee was appointed to go to the commissioners, Sir Will. Whitlock, Sir George Treby, &c., to signify our opinion, which yet is depending unresolved.

1689, Oct. 9, Middle Temple.—The same to the same.—As to foreign news, I suppose you'll see the victory of the Inniskilling men over a great number of rebels in the Gazette. But 'tis reported and believed that there has been treachery in D. Schomberg's army among the French in it, and that forty or fifty of them are bringing over hither; two engineers were hung upon the spot for nailing the touch holes of forty pieces of cannon, and discovered by a Jacobite deserter. On Sunday there was a great talk of the taking of Dublin, intimated (as 'tis thought) in an express which the King had at Newmarket on Saturday night; but there being nothing in the Gazette, we know not what to think of it, yet wagers are laid of it. They talk here that several French merchants are taken up, their names and crimes I am ignorant of. The synod of divines did nothing towards the alteration of the book of Common Prayer, and I do not hear when they are to meet; better not at all. Last night there was fresh news printed that Prince Louis of Baden had taken Nissa, and slain 6,000 men, took all their cannon, bag and baggage, the fight beginning after 5 o'clock and night putting a stop to it; and news since from him (by the way of Vienna) is that they have had another engagement and victory. In the same paper is news that Bonne made some propositions to surrender; the chief was, that twenty persons might walk out of the town masked, which the elector would not consent to, but told them if they did not surrender by such a time, within a day, he would storm them, so that one Major Wildman had a letter last night that the town surrendered upon reasonable terms.

1690, March 25th.—The same to the same.— . . There is a great pressing for seamen, and several false press masters; one I saw pumped last night in the Temple, and others have gone near London into a carpenter's yard, and by scaring the workmen with colour of authority, have robbed the house. There is intelligence that the French fleet has landed men in Ireland, 'tis said 8,000, though that is but imaginary. Yesterday the Parliament addressed the King by way of answer to his speech, that they would support him with their best advice and assistance.

1703, Oct. 11, Little Chelsea. R. Palmer to Ralph Verney.— . . . The Queen intended to have lain at Mr. Ernles house at Whetham, for he was sent for out of Herefordshire for that purpose, it being within 12 miles of the Bath, but this day's Gazette not mentioning it, I suppose her health permitted her to take greater stages, for she was on Sunday at Windsor.

1705, Dec. 3, Little Chelsey. R. Palmer to Lord Fermanagh My Lord Wharton's great stable (in Church Lane at Chelsea), is converted into a play house, where we have all been to see great things, a fine Scaramouch, &c. performed by the Duke of Southampton's

1705, Dec. 18.—The same to the same.—I am very glad of the success at Buckingham, and that your Lordship (at this low tide of Ch— interest) was so instrumental in the promotion of an honest churchman, who, I am only sorry to hear is very subject to the falling sickness, or something like it. The protesting lords against the late resolution were 30, their reasons are handed about but not come to me yet, only this, that there is a particular collect in the Liturgy, for the preservation of the church in this time of danger, or something tantamount; but I heard my neighbour (Sir J. Cope) say (who you know is a w[hig]) that he thought they were strong reasons. Only four bishops were against it, York, Lichfield, Rochester, St. David's; when it was in the House of Commons, a member desired the word state might be put into, for they were so interwoven, one could not be safe without the other, but that would not be suffered. There has been a quarrel between Lords Halifax and Carmarthen; the latter began about his place, upon which H— told him he supposed he meant a quarrel, and therefore would give him satisfaction in the park; next day at such an hour, at which Halifax came, and was met by a gentleman from the Prince to let him know he might return, for his adversary was secured. I leave you to judge of the management. There has been another between Lord W. Pawlet and Duckman (Docminique ?) the merchant, concerning words in the House spoken by the latter, which only came to blows, the rest prevented. It is confidently said Lord Rivers is to supply Lord Peterborough's place in Catalonia.

1706, April 7. R. Palmer to Ralph Verney When yours came yesterday, I was a-hunting buck on Putney Heath with the Queen's buck hounds, there was a great appearance of gentlemen, tho' a bad day, they did not thin out before 1 o'clock, so we had fair riding and good, tho' short sport.

1706, April 13, Chelsea. R. Palmer to Lord Fermanagh.—Lord Marlborough, I am told, went yesterday morning for Holland. There have been 2 Lisbon mails, there is little likely to be done there, but they are very easy as to Catalonia.

1706, June 23, Chelsea.—R. Palmer to R. Verney, Esq^{re}, at Middle Claydon.—Sir John Cope's third son was killed by a kettle drummer, about a woman; he is in Newgate; it was the first time he mounted guard at the Tower, and his commission of lieutenant in the guards (which is styled captain) cost his father, but 2 months ago, 800*l*. altogether.

1706, Oct. 22, Little Chelsea. R. Palmer to Lord Fermanagh, at Mid. Claydon.— . . Here is a great house breaking all about London, and at Great Chelsea, two watchmen last week were almost killed by 4 rogues who had taken off a casement of Dr. King's. Here is little new besides the arrival of Sir John Leak (on whom you will find some lines on the other side), and the preparation of a gold sword of 100*l*. value for a present for him. I hear the Duke of Somerset won the most money by horse racing at Newmarket, near 1,000*l*. I heard that Lord Peterborough is continued in statu quo prius in Spain, and that if his advice had been taken, secured, &c., but Count Lichstentein (King Charles his favourite) and he were at enmity, who they give a wretched character of, as a very silly fellow, always undervaluing the English and spending the King's money on relics, but is now they say removed. Lord Peterborough, they say, lost all his baggage in the retreat to Valentia, which his lady is recruiting. He is at Turin, 'tis thought for horses.

1706, Nov. 19. The same to the same.— . . The peace between Sweden and Poland surprises everybody; D. Marlborough knew nothing of the particulars the last post, neither any of the confederate envoys, tho' our prints have liberally touched over many particulars. The Scotch union is now despaired of at court, since a general assembly are against it, as I hear from good hands; how our Parliament will take these things, time must shew, but 'tis not the first time courts have been deceived. It is easy to be guessed whose b— makes buttons. My Lord of London and Dr. Godolphin are the chiefest candidates for the bishopric of Winchester. I do believe the first may have it if he will, and I hope he will, but I fear he may be dissuaded by false friends. The late Bishop of Winchester's death was foretold by a lad in the school, of 18 or 19 years. He declared before any ill happened that such a one (a chaplain and hale man) should die very soon, and he himself the 12th of Sept. last, and the Bishop before Christmas. The story is true, and the fact proved so, and even the day of the boy's death. There is little to do at Westminster Hall besides litigating the privileges of corporations, mandamus's, and returns, with their executions and debates which we may thank the county elections for, because they keep the bench and bar in countenance. Your old

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

acquaintance, Aaron Goodyear, is in a lamentable condition at Richmond . . . Last night Lord Marlborough came to St. James's. I hear the States have presented him 50,000*l.*, and that there will be a general peace very speedily, from what has been transacted and offered since the letters from the late Elector of Bavaria. I have had no letter from Jerry Bird, but his Captⁿ's lady has heard that they got well all and in good health to Lisbon, tho' they go to Valentia, where I hear our forces have had a miserable time of it, such heats upon their marches that the barrels of their guns burnt their fingers, they were so hot by the sun, most of which have been laid up in hospitals ever since, miserably sick. Lord Peterborow is out of all there, as the officers write from thence.—Poetry—P.S. The Parliament will be prorogued for a fortnight longer I hear.

1706, Nov. 19. R. Palmer to R. Verney.—. . . We heartily wished you amongst us the other night at my chamber, where your sister Cave, Sir Thom., Mrs. Cave, and Mrs. Adams, and my she friends &c., to the number of a score assembled to hear some of the opera of Arsinoe and Camilla songs performed, where likewise Mr. Hadley, his son, lady and daughters, and serjeant Cheshire were too. I hear there are come hither 4 prophets from the Sevenses who have foretold most of the successes of the Camisars, and the two victories at Bleinheim and Ramellies. I hear my Lord Keeper is going to be married to Mrs. Clavering, a northern lady, a fine woman of about 2,000*l.* fortune, no more. Here is a very high speech of the Lord Bellhaven's sold in London against the Union, where he does not only argue against, but banter and ridicule our nation.

1707, March 29. Ralph Palmer to Ralph Verney, Esq^{re}, at No. 3 up the steps, and one pair of stairs in Barbon's building, by the Water Gate in the Middle Temple.

1707, Aug. 9. The same to the same.—Young Sir J. Cope, &c., are arrived with the equivalent at Edinburgh, they are lodged 4 pair upstairs high in the castle, and were conveyed thither by a coach and 3 horses, with a postilion for the honour of Scotland.

1707, Aug. 26. The same to the same.—D. Devonshire, I hear, gave Dr. Garth a ring off his finger, and they say has forbid the monument's erection, but if it be as you say, I suppose it may be to be pulled down. He is extolled by our writers for his bright example. I do hear his debts are not nigh so great as were expected. He always kept 10,000*l.* in a particular chest by him, and if ever he borrowed out of it he was certainly true to it again, tho' he sent his silver cistern to fetch the money, which I hear was under pawn at a goldsmith's when he died . . . I think he owed my brother Dunk 300*l.*, which he has got paid since he died.

1708, June 15, Chelsea. The same to the same.—Mr. Talbot (Bishop of Oxford's son) is stolen by the Lady Matthew's daughter, she being under 16, and worth 9 or 10,000*l.*

s. d. Ralph Palmer to Viscount Fermanagh.—News that Vendosme, Prince Eugene, and D. Marlborough are to have an interview. In Westminster Hall schemes have been to make Holt a peer; Jekyl, Chief Justice; and Sir J. Montague, Chief Justice of Chester; and Sir J. Parker, Attorney-General, but the first likes not a super sedes, and how they will now order it I know not. 'Tis much doubted whether Lord G. will die; his forfeitures being but for life, some grantees of it (they talk) for that reason will save him; on the other hand 'tis violently pushed by now interested people . . . Duke and Duchess of Beaufort are come to reside at Chelsea.

1708, March 21. The same to the same.—Lord Marlborough went last night, and matters look towards peace.

1709, Aug. 17. R. Palmer to his nephew Ralph Verney.—The town is very empty and news scarce, or the siege of the citadel of Tournay is slow. . . . The case of the Palatine is all our domestic talk. I find there will be circular letters to all the parishes and all vestrys in order to receive some families at 5*l.* per head, but what to do with them is hard to imagine, and 'tis thought Parliament will enquire into the invitation they had hither.

1709, Sept. 20. R. Palmer to Ralph Verney, at Baddow Hall, near Chelmsford. . . . I hear Lord Marlborough wrote lately to Lord Townsend, in Holland, that he was sorry his lordship should have so little employment, but assured him in a short time he would have as much business as he could turn his hands to, inuendo—Peace. . . . The Marshal Buffers the night before the battle sent to the Duke that he had such proposals to make as he was confident would be acceptable. The Duke announced that the next day he should be very busy, but the next day after he should be at his service to confer. This was a finesse of the French to get themselves more strongly entrenched yet if they could, and as handsomely parried. Dr. Hare, the Duke's chaplain, writes there could not be less than 40,000 men slain on both sides.

1710, June 20.—The same to the same.—The Bank have got a promise of the Queen not to make any further alteration in the ministry for fear of sinking the national credit, but were very imprudent in not applying to the city magistrates.

1710, Oct. 10. R. Palmer to Lord Fermanagh.—I congratulate your lordship's election, and wish that your associate candidate, Sir Harry Seymour, had been your partner, tho' I hear he will certainly be in for some boro' in the west by the interest of the Bishop of Winchester, who, being bound by a very considerable debt to him, must serve him, tho' against his inclination, as his endeavours in that county, if I am rightly informed, sufficiently testify. No public intelligence at present. The Bank held a special court to-day, being so overloaded with the quick circulation and influx of exchange bills that they are making another call on the Adventurers, which makes much grumbling among those who are concerned.

1711, Nov. 3. Ralph Palmer to Ralph Verney.—'Tis said the Parliament will be put off for 10 days or a fortnight longer, in order to have the whole scheme of the peace settled to be open to them. Monsr. Mesnager came from France on Wednesday night again, and 'tis most likely things will be settled to all satisfaction but the Whigs, who spare nobody in their slander. One Dr. Pellet said in a coffee house that Lord Fermanagh moved at the sessions for an address to the Queen against making a peace. This I dare say is a lye upon him, but he said the county would not agree to it.

1711, Dec. 11. R. Palmer to R. Verney. You hear the Lords address to make no peace without all Spain. The Commons agree with the Queen's most excellent speech. Lord Somers neither spoke nor voted in the House. Lord Nottingham moved it first against his usual principle. I think Lord Cooper said nothing, nor voted neither. Lord Guernsey, I hear, concurred with the ministry against Lord Nottingham, but to-day I hear, upon the report of the address by the committee, he changed and voted with the address, but this I am not certain of. The Commons upon a division carried theirs by a majority of 124; the Lords the previous question by only one, and the question itself by six; and upon the report, as I hear on Saturday, by 11, some say 17. I know 'twas thought it would have been thrown out upon the report by the committee, for many Lords were not there. I hear Lord Wha. (Wharton), coming out of the House after the vote of the address, clapped his hand upon the Lord Treasurer's shoulder, and said, by God, my lord, if you can bear this you are the strongest man in England. But I must not omit another piece of news. The French King, when first he made his proposals, sent the Queen an original paper offered him by Holland for a separate peace soon after the commencement of this war, as a mark of his sincerity, with another from the then Emperor. That the Lord Str——d (Strafford) carried with him into Holland, and in the General Assembly there, some reflections being made as if our Queen would make a separate peace, that Lord rose in great indignation and justified her honour in all particulars as well as her present inclinations; but he said they had dealt basely by her, pulled out that original paper, signed by some then present, and some since dead, which confounded them so that they had nothing more to say but to come into the measures.

1711, Dec. 29. R. Palmer to R. Verney.—They talk of new lords to be made. Mr. St. John to be Earl of Bolingbroke, Mr. Granvil Earl of Bath, Mr. Bathurst, Sir Rich. Child, Sir Thomas Willoughby, William Pitt, of Hampshire, and some others. Col. Nicholson is arrived here, and they say has brought back his 4,000 men from the expedition to Quebec, which were thought to have been lost, safe to his country again. . . . Lord Dartmouth, they say, will be made Lord Treasurer of the Household, and Sir Thomas Hanmer secretary in his place.

1711, Jan. 2. R. Palmer to Viscount Fermanagh. . . 'Tis said a remonstrance is coming up from Scotland on the judgment of the Lords in the case of Duke Hambleton (Hamilton), and 'tis likewise discoursed that an Act of Parliament will be brought in by way of explanation of that Union clause which has been defective in that particular, and be carried by the new promotion among the great ones.

1712, Aug. 19. The Duke of Leeds has vested his

SIR
H. VERNEY,
BART.

SIR
H. VERNY,
BART.

estate in trustees, one of whom is Mr. Freeman, kt. of the shire for Hertfordshire, who are to pay 2,200*l.* per ann. to the present Duke, conditionally, that he makes no opposition to the execution of his will; but that I think he has broken already, for he went down to Yorkshire first, got possession of the cellar from the butler, and then tore and burnt some of the richest hangings and other goods, &c.

1713, New Year's Day. R. Palmer to Visct. Fermanagh. Dr. Sloan is likely to be a purchaser for Lord Cheney's whole estate and living of Chelsea; he has been some time about it, he was at first but about a part of it.

1713, Jan. 27. Ralph Palmer to Visct. Fermanagh. . . . Lord Carbery lies in state at his house, and is to be deposited in the Abbey on Wednesday night. His daughter, who enjoys all he has, except some few legacies (the Lady Ann Vaughan), has bought in 6 horses already, her father never keeping above a pair. He had been with his banker, and returning home sickened and died presently. He had redeemed his estate and amassed wealth by the government of Jamaica, where he carried many shauntelmen of Wales with him, and sold 'em there for slaves, as he did his chaplain, to a blacksmith; and tho' he has left her 4,000*l.* per annum besides a great personal estate, was contented rather to keep all he had gotten to himself than to dispose of her well in marriage with any part of it, or the settlement of his estate on or after his death, tho' 84 years old, so that you will not wonder at his servant's answer upon an "How do you" sent to him, that his master, he believed, was by that time got half way to hell, whom thro' excessive penury he almost starved living. They talk of a very speedy instalment of the gartered knights at Windsor. The Duchess of Marlborough, I hear to night, is gone, having presented many jewels to her friends and acquaintances, and Dr. Garth . . . a diamond ring of 200*l.* value. 'Tis exit instead of obit. The Queen . . . has presented Stanhope with her picture, embellished with gold and diamonds, with the castle of Alcantara on the reverse. The Parliament, 'tis said, will be put off longer. Cadogan offered to surrender his regiment, which his lieutenant, Col. Kellum, has given him by direction 3,000*l.* for, which offer (having been very kindly used) was taken so ill that they displaced him from the Tower. The directors of the Bank have been with Lord Treasurer about the loan of money, some of 'em staunch Whigs. I suppose good interest will supersede their pretended fears of the Pretender.

1713, March 24. R. Palmer to Visct. Fermanagh.—I hear that Lord Halifax had a great dinner, where the late ministry were all invited. Lord Treasurer had notice of it, and having (ex officio) often affairs with him picked out that time to go and dine with him. Lord Sunderland was just getting out of the coach, but seeing him alighting step'd into it again and rub'd off; most of the rest that were there went away at the appearance of his enchanted wand, and, in short, the Junto could not sit, for he stayed and dined there.

1713, June 2. R. Palmer to the same. . . . You may remember at the last conference we had it was resolved that an Act of Parliament should be obtained for the sale of Col. Lovet's increase; and why this has not been pushed on this session is matter of wonder to us. Now the sale of the lighthouse is proposed by decree in Chancery only. . . .

1716, Nov. 28. . . . The same to the same. . . . I have sold my chambers in the Temple to one Mr. Samuel Hill, an M.P. for Lichfield, for 300 guineas, after having enjoyed them 28 years. One motive was, I was pretty near being called to the Bench, which if I had fined would have been 50*l.*, and if I had accepted would have cost me 200*l.* down.

1740, Sept. 21. The same to his nephew Viscount Fermanagh.

19 Car. II., Oxford. "Charles R." and signet (wafer) countersigned by Windebank.—License for Sir R. Verney and his lady to travel and take 50*l.* (Certified to be your Majesty's pleasure by Mr. Secry. Nicholas.) Tho. Windebank.

1663. (Vellum). April 15, Jerusalem. Latin certificate under the hand and seal of Bernardus Beluel, a vicar, custodiæ terræ sanctæ, that John Verney, son of Sir Ralph, had visited the sepulchre, Calvary, &c. &c.

Poetry. A certain poem as it was presented in Latin by divines and others before his Majesty in Cambridge by way of interlude, stiled Liber Novus de adventu Regis ad Cantabrigiam, faithfully done into English with some liberal advantages, made rather to be sung than read, to the tune of Bonny Nell, 1615. (26 verses.)

Begin—

It is not yet a fortnight since Lutetia entertained our Prince,
And vented hath a studied toy
As long as was the siege of Troy,
And spent themselves for full five days
In speeches, exercises, and plays.

26th verse.—Nor is this all which we do singe,
For of their peace the world must ringe,
And Oxford to their tackling look,
For there is coming out a booke
Will spoyle Joseph Barnesius
I' the saile of Rex Platonius.

Bishop Corbett to the ladies of the new dress that weare gorgets and railes downe to their wasts.—Begins.
Ladies that weare black cypresse vailles. (14 lines.)

The Lady's reply (18 lines). Begins,

Black cypress vailles are cloudes of night,
While linen railes are rays of light.

Pims Junto. (2½ close pp.) Begins,

Truth I could chide you friends, why how so late,
My watch speaks eight and not one Pin o' th' State
This day undone, can such remissness fitt
Your active spirits my more hellish witt.

Ends, "Twill bee chiefe crown and glory unto him
To say he play'd his part like you and Pim.

Verses to Lady Mary Gaudy, wife of Sir Charles Gaudy, upon the admirable harmony of her voice. (41 lines.)

Begins, "Madam, the task you pleasingly enjoyed."

Verses to Lady Mary Watson on her incomparable skill in poesy. (23 lines, signed W. G.)

Temp. Eliz. Come ye graces of the night
That it is silente sportes delight,
See the wanton moonbeam playes
Lightening all the doubtfull wayes,
Come, come, the night decays,
Lamentinge our delayes.

Had I the power to charme their cares,
Pleasure then should conquer feares,
Youth should walke and age should rest,
Love speakes each thing for the best;
Come, come, sweete ladies come,
Blind night is deaf and dumb.
Let the drowsie porter slepe,
But let love his watches kepe;
Counte it finely, daunce and playe,
And singe heavy care away;
Come, come, the night belongs
To love and lovers' songes.

Not in the Corte nor citie dwells my love,
But in obscuritie as in a grove,
And where young primroses growes unsene, un-knowne,

Untouched of any and not breathed uppon,
And when I saw her first me thought she shon
As in the dark dorth a rich diamon,
And then all suddenly a fry dart
And flash of joy did lighten in my hart.

As when some pore waie-fairing man doth finde
Much treasure hid or lost, his stupide minde
Joy and good fortune doth so much amase,
And so sur charged that he doth stand at gase
Doubting at first whether he sees or no,
Or only thinkes or dreams that it is soe,
Doe what I can, I can but tell in parte
How love the first conceived in my harte,
And since how faithfully it hath forth brought
To me abounddante griffes but all for naught:
Ay me, most wofull wretch, to what a state
Am I now com, and how unfortunate.

When the fairest beauties which Cortes and cities where they moste
Not subvert my native libertie
Or tempestes, my mindes tranquillitie.

That now at length lik some great waightly pearle
The only form of a fair countrie gearle
Should hang so heavi at my headles hearte,
And cruciate thus my deare immortal parte
With such distraction both of hope and feare
As my pore wretched hart in peses teare,
But how could ever I, why should I strive,
The joyes or paines of love heare to contrive,
For they are like toe thos of heaven and hell
Which never anie mortall tong can tell.

SIR
H. VERNY
BART.

SIR
VERNEY,
BART.

Landless Will on Lambeth Strand and black Tom, tyrant of Ireland (13 verses of 6 lines.) Ends,

And will they triple crown as lost
The triple tree more fit. (Printed.)

The reasons and grounds for the establishment of the 3 lighthouses at the North and South Forelands for the prevention of shipwreck upon the Goodwin Sands. (2 brief sheets.)

Folio. Copies of Messrs. Jenkinson, Bingley, and Barker's letters and other letters and papers relating to the honour of Pontefract, co. York, belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster. 1765-9. Letters, 110 pp. and several pages of lists of towns and villages within the Honour, and of cottagers; and Index of names of places, &c.

Folio of 22 leaves (Temp. Car. I.) 15 characters.

1. The accomplished Woman. Begins, The noblest design that we can propose to ourselves in conversation.

2. Of Reputation. Begins, Reputation is a great treasurer.

15. Of Jealousy. Begins, One cannot lose that without sorrow that is possessed with love and preserved with carefulness.

Quarto, 2½ pp. Begins,

When Serjeant Tomson (Sir W. Tomson) breath'd his last

The coif was never better grac'd,
But when upon the bench 'twas plac'd
His brethren strove who should inherit.

(A squib upon Salathiel Lowell, who succeeded.)

Four verses of 9 lines, except the second verse, which has 8 lines Begins,

Noe dreame it was
When you, fond fool, supposed
Your liberty to be inclosed
Within the walls of Venus bower,
Which you each hour
Thought some fair flower;
Some other jayler would have better fit
Thee than myself, which did commit
So great a folly for want of wit.

The danger, wherein the kingdom now standeth and the remedy by Sir R. C.

A letter written by Inioza to King James, touching the Duke of Buckingham, his actions and miscarriage in Spain.

Considerations for the repressing of the increase of priests and Jesuits and recusants without drawing of blood, by Sir R. C.

Three printed play bills, each about 6 inches by 3 inches.

At the Theatre Royal in Drury
Lane, this present Wednesday, being the last day of Nov., will be presented

A Play called

The Indian Emperor, or

The Conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards.

No money to be return'd after the curtain is drawn.
By their Majesties servants. Vivant Rex et Regina.

The 2nd is for Henry 2nd of England.

The 3rd is for All for Love or the World well lost, and Theodosius or the force of Love.

My best thanks are given to Sir Harry Verney for his very kind hospitality at Claydon House during my visits there.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF AYSCOUGH FAWKES, ESQ., OF FARNLEY HALL, CO. YORK.

Four large folio volumes, contain reports by Ayscough Fawkes, Esq., of cases in the King's Bench, 3-12
George II.

1616. Nov. 4. Chancery Lane. Thomas Coghill to Mr. William Dalston, Esq., His Majesty's attorney before the council in the north, at his house in York
. . . The Lord Chief Justice continues his place still as yet, and lies at his chamber in the Temple, but hath not romed to Westminster all this term. It is thought that he shall be received again into grace and favour before the King's going away, but there are so many rumours that I must have the certainty thereof to the event, for which we pray and hope well for the honour of the law. This day the Prince was created, when the judges were all present (but he) by special commandment from my Lord Chancellor, who chid some of them for their late coming it is said. There are three in the light for one sheriff, Sir Thomas Hobbie, Mr. A. FAWKES, Michell Wharton, and Mr. Wallis Hawkesworth. Esq.

Among the early deeds is a release by the Templars which names as witnesses several of the order.

Of a series of charters formerly belonging to Fountains
Abbey I have given notes below.

Court Rolls of Mensington (Menston), the earliest is in the reign of Ed. III. One of 5 Hen. VII. (a short one) is called Curia Militaris of Thos. Hawkesworth, but the entries are only of the usual kind.

c. 1300. Brother Imbert de Peraut, humble servant of the Chivalry of the Temple, makes known to all that they, by the common counsel and assent of the Chapter at Easter, at London, released and quit claimed from them and their successors to the abbat and convent of Bellaland for ever all their claim in that pasture which the abbat and convent lately enclosed near their b . . .
of Wythstanklyf; but so that if the beasts of the releasers, or the beasts of their men of Kereby enter that close for want of fencing they shall not be impounded, but shall be driven out without detention, this release notwithstanding. Witnesses, Brother Radulf, chaplain, Brother Richard son of John, Brother Wm. le Englys, Brother Roger of Akeny, Brother Robert Scroppe, Brother Ranulf de Breemesgrave, Brother Wm.
de Merden, then precentor of York.—A large mass of green wax, oval, 2½ inches by 2 inches, is impressed with the circular seal of about 1½ inch of the Lamb, with nimbus and flag. Sigillum Mil. Templi.

1315. Monday after the Feast of St. Agatha, Virgin.
In the market place of Thresk—William de Buscy, son of Oliver de Buscy, has inspected the charters of feoffment of his ancestors. He confirms to God and St. Mary and the Abbat and Convent of Bellaland and their successors, all the said feoffments, and releases to them in frankalmoine, all his right and claim in the demesne of the vill of Angotby, and in all secular services, actions, and demands, as well foreign as others, touching the said demesne, and in all other lands and tenements which the said abbat and convent have by any person's donation throughout his whole feo.;
Witnesses, Sir John de Bartone of Fritone, Thomas de Coleville, John Malebys, Robert de Colville, Kts.; John de Harnby, steward of the said abbat and convent, Robert de Foxholes, William Wisbarne, and others.—Red seal, the same size as the last mentioned; in it is a small round seal, a heater-shaped shield bearing some animal rampant, with a legend. A counterpart of the above of the same date and seal, but with a few variations, as Augotby by many called Osgotby.

10 Ed. III., Monday in Easter month (or mense Pascha)
Kerby.—William Malebys and Alexander de Berghes, Kts., release and quit claim to the prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, all claim in all lands, &c., advowsons, &c., in the territory of Kereby by Scatton, which they have had hitherto by grant of Alexander Cruel, viz., which formerly were of the Master and Chivalry of the Temple in England in that vill. Witnesses, John Mauleverer, John Colville, John de Bluygton?, John de Essaura.—Round red seal of about 2 inches, in it is a round seal, a shield with helmet and legend. The second seal is gone.

24 Hen. VIII. Oct. 20th. Indenture between John, Abbat of Bellaland and the Convent, and Richard Ask-with of Osgodeby.—They lease to Richard Askwith and to Bryan his son one third part of their grange called Osgodeby Grange, with the appurtenances, in the occupation of the said Richard Askwith, from St. Martin's day in winter next for 99 years.—Rent, 6 marks and 8s. 10½d. half yearly. The lessees to have housebote, firebote, hedgebote, ploughbote, and cart-bote.—Fragment of the Common Seal.—Bishop with staff under a canopy, on his right are two small figures of monks in profile.

3rd and 4th of Philip and Mary, last of June.—Indenture between Nicholas, Archbishop of York, Primate of England, and Legate of the See Apostolic of the one part, and James Bryne, Great Steward of the Household to the Archbishop of the other part.—The archbishop grants to James Bryne all that his parsonage or chapel of Kilborne, in the county of York, with all manner of houses, &c., now or late in the occupation of the curate there, and 1 oxgangs of glebe land in Kilborne, parcel of the said chapel, and now or late in the tenure of Nicholas Newton; another tenement or messuage, with four oxgangs in Kilborne, now or late in the occupation of Mawde Ecclefield, widow, and his tithes of corn and grain, hay, lambs, wool, hemp lyne, offerings, oblations, and a sheep pasture or sheep rayne, with the appurtenances now or late in the occupation

FAWKES,
Esq.

A. FAWKES,
Esq.

of Bryan Ecclesfield, Maud Ecclesfield, Thomas Ecclesfield, or their assigns, except the great woods and under woods, from the Feast of Mark the Evangelist last for 21 years, Rent 8*l.*, with hedgebote, &c. Large seal of the Archbishop. Seal of the Dean and Chapter annexed, with common seal in white wax of one figure.

1402, Dec. 21st. This is a transcript of letters patent under the seal of Richard, Archbishop of York, of precesses and acts in the time of John de Thoresby, late predecessor of the said Richard, made at the instance of Thomas Tennipe, layman of York diocese.

FOUNTAINS' ABBEY.

n.d. William Alabaster, gives to God and the monks of St. Mary of Fountains, half an acre of meadow in Stainburne, namely, that which pertains to his gresmanland lying between his Essart and Salveroda, in frankalmoign.—Witnesses, Nicolas de Catt, Matthew Forester, Robert his brother, Thomas de Fozton.—Seal green, oval, (broken).

(31.) William, son of William de Stainburne, gives to God and the monks of St. Mary of Fountains, in frankalmoign, one messuage in the vill of Stainburne with the croft called Hesecroft, to wit, from the vill to Stainburne bec, within these bounds; namely, between the croft which Alan, son of Alan, gave them and the donor's land which is in the other part next towards the Su (South?)—And that messuage with the croft which the said Alan gave them; and quit claims all the service which Alan does therefore to him yearly, namely 12*d.*; and all the donor's meadow between Stainburne bec and the heads of the said two crofts. Witnesses, Wale, chaplain of Stainburne, Helyas son of Cnut, Thomas de Fostune, Adam Ruffus, Robert, son of Udard of Lindeleia, Henry de Castellai, Nigel Harmeric of the same vill, Henry son of Holdewine of Rithona, Adam, son of William.—Large round seal about 2 inches. (This deed is marked Vacat.)

(68.) Adam, son of Thomas, son of Hugh the chaplain, gives to God and St. Mary of Fountains, one bovat of land, with its appurtenances, in the territory of Stainburne, with his body there to be buried; namely, that bovat which Agnes, his mother, formerly demised to him to farm for 16 years; doing foreign service appurtenant. Witnesses, Simon Mauleverer, Thomas de Burtone, Thomas Hurtesky, Robert le Bewr, Robert, son of Thomas of Burtone, and others. Seal of grantor, oval, fleur-de-lis.

The three next deeds are tied together.

(14.) Robert de Leleia gives to God and St. Mary of Fountains 30 acres of land with appurtenances, and pasturage for 200 sheep in the territory of Stainburne; namely, those which he bought of William the clerk of Mastone, in frankalmoign.—If warranty fail, he will give to the value of his land in Haggendeby, or elsewhere, at their pleasure. Witnesses, Walter de Bouintone, Alan de Saktone, Roger Malleverer, Robert de Wivelstorp, Nicholas de Catone, William de Salleia, Matthew Foraster, Robert, his brother, W. de Clatherom.—Oval seal—bird, well cut.

(23.) William Clerk, of Stainburne, gives to God and St. Mary of Fountains three acres in the territory of Stainburne; namely, those which are most to the east in the culture of Eadolfriding, in frankalmoign.—He also confirms to them 30 acres of land in the vill of Stainburne with the common of pasture of the said vill out side, corn and meadow for 200 sheep which they have of Robert Lelai; and they may have the 30 acres next the 3 acres which he gave them in Eadolfriding, to wit, furrow to furrow. Witnesses, Richard de Rippela, Nicholas de Catton, Matthew Forester, Henry de Scipt., Helias son of Knut, Adam, son of William, William Alebastre, Adam Ruffus.—Seal gone. (This deed is marked Vacat.)

(58.) Elyas, son of Knut of Stainburne, gives to Agnes, daughter of Yngerode, his sister, and her children by Hugh the chaplain, for homage and service, and 28*s.* of silver, one toft in Stainburne of half an acre of land; namely, that toft lying between his toft and garden, and the house of W. le Franceis, and 4½ acres of arable lands in the fields of the said vill, namely, &c. (defining them). Witnesses, Nigel de Pluppton, Peter his son, John his son, William de Marton, Matthew de Bram, Walter de Stokkeld, Robert son of Uckem of Plumpton, Walan, chaplain of Stainburne, Robert, son of Henry of Sikkelinghale, Robert Bongaut, Gilbert Lardiner, Henry de Screvin, Adam, son of Gregory of Stainburne, and many others. Round seal of the grantor (broken) about 2 inches; a geometrical device.

30. Alan, son of Alan of Westone, gives to God and St. Mary of Fountains one messuage with croft in Stainburne, with common of the vill in wood and plain, and free exit and ingress; namely, that messuage and croft which he held of W., son of W., son of Thore, by the same bounds as Henry, son of Dunning, held the land of him; rent 12*d.* Witnesses—William, son of William, Helyas, son of Cnut, Adam Ruffus, Adam, son of William, Henry Haimeric, Nigel de Castellai, Serlo de Pouele, Robert, son of Udard of Lindelai.—Seal gone.

67. Alice, daughter of Henry de Castellai, in her widowhood gives to God &c., in frankalmoign, all the land, with meadow and appurtenances, in the territory of Stainburne which Henry, her father, gave her in marriage.—Witnesses, Hugh de Lelai, Hugh de Tausan, Robert de Muncketone, Serlo, the clerk, Femia of Stainburne, Malger de Pouele, W. de Castellia. Round red seal of the grantor.

(47.) William Clerk, of Stainburne, gives to God &c., those 5 acres and one rood in Stainburne which they have of the gift of Nigel de Plumpton. Witnesses—Alexander de Dorset, Walter, son of Ralph, Richard of Brertone, Helias of Stainburne, Robert, son of Uckeman of Pluntone, Henry of Scherewin, and many others.—Seal gone.

(24.) Large deed. William Clerk, of Stainburne, gives to God, &c., in the territory of Stainburne, all land between the way which goes between the middle of the vill and the way which leads to Lindelei, and goes down to Stainburn bec, and so by Stainburn bec towards le sic as far as the land which Alan, son of Thorphin, held of him, and so up to the aforesaid way thro' the middle of the vill—to enclose and do what they will with it.—Also 12 acres of cultivated land in the territory of the said vill; namely, 3 acres in Birkelandes and 3 acres in Forelandes, and 3 acres in Edolfridinges, et est terre quam habent de Roberto de Lelai: and 2 acres and one rood, which abut on the cemetery of the chapel of Stainburne and three roods which abut on the land of the church.—And so much meadow in le saucei de mea parte quantum pertinet to 2 bovates of land in the said vill and pasture &c., to 2 bovates within and without the vill.—And pasture for 6 score of sheep, and for 20 cows and their calves until two years old, and pasture for 10 oxen, and if no oxen then for so many other beasts instead.—And sufficient estovers to burn and build in the said land of Stainburne out of the woods of the said vill.—They may have the 30 acres next the three sulco ad sulcum which he gave them in Edolfriding. Witnesses, R. de Rippelai, Radulf de Bramhop, Nicolas de Catton, Matthew Forestar, Henry de Sciptone, Walter Aleman, William, his brother, Gilbert, son of Ralph de Aldefeld.

Thomas, son of Helias, son of Cnuth, of Stainburne confirms to God, &c., in frankalmoign, 3 acres of land in the territory of Stainburne; namely, those which his father gave them in Bogerode. Witnesses, Ware, the chaplain, Serlo, his son, Adam, son of William, Richard, son of Thore, Thomas de Foztone, and others. Oval red seal of the grantor.

(74.) Hugh son of Fromund, of Stainburne, gives to God, &c., in frankalmoign, one and a half acre in Stainburne; namely, one acre which abuts on Stainburn bek, and the other half acre to Spitelwath. Witnesses Hugh de Lelay, W. de Lyndeley, Henry de Westscon, Adam, son of William of Stainburne, and others. Oval red seal, a bird.

Three deeds tied together.

Hugh de Lelai, by the concession of Cristiana his mother, gives to Roger le Partenm with Isond his daughter in marriage, all his land which he had in Stainburne in demesne and in service, to be held of the donor and his heirs, to Roger and his heirs by the said Isond, as a cirograph between them testifies. Witnesses, W. de Lelai, Bertram de Stinet, Robert de Michaut, Serlo de Pouel, W. de Stinet, and many others.—Seal gone.

William, son of William, has sold and quitclaimed to Roger of Poitou and his heirs, all the tenement which Richard, son of Thor, held of him in Stainburne, and all his service, and all the ferm of the said tenement, in consideration of two marks of silver given by Roger in the Court of Hugh of Baildone. Witnesses, William de Leley, Hugh, his son, Serlo of Povell, Geoffrey Mansel, Hugh de Wretone, Hugh de Cattele, Henry fil Holdesura, Alexander his brother, Helias of Stainburn, Hameric de Cattelo, Nigel, his brother, Norman, the clerk, and others. Seal gone.

Roger of Poitou the younger, gave and quitclaimed to God, &c., all right of himself and his ancestors in the Manor of Stainburne, &c., as the charter of Isoude, his grandmother, which they have shows.—Witnesses, Dom William, abbat of Meaux, W. de la Launde, W. de Legherton, Robert the Constable, W. de

A. FAWKES,
Esq.

FAWKES, Esq. Thoresby, Robert de Nunnewyc, and others.—Seal gone.

(22.) William, son of Ralph, gives to God, &c., 3 bovates of land in Stainburne, which tofts and crofts and appurtenances, which Eva de Lelai gave them with 3 roods of land in alms as their charter shows. Witnesses, Brian de Insula, Richard his brother, Alixander de Dorset, Nigel de Plunton, Robert, son of Uckeman, Henry de Screvin, Nicholas de Caitone, Helias, son of Cnut, Thomas de Fozton.—Seal gone.

Indenture.—A dispute arose between Ralph de Skrevyne plaintiff and the brother R. Abbat of Fountains and the Convent, and Dom. Robert de Furneaus, defendants, about reasonable estovers in the woods of Ryggeton and Stayneburn, which the said Ralph, against the said Abbat and Convent and Robert demanded as appertaining to his freehold tenement in Wytheton and Houby, by writ of Novel Disseisin at York before John de Metingham and his fellow justices of the King's Bench, at Easter, in the 3rd week, 29 Ed. I.—It is agreed that Ralph for himself and his heirs, releases his claim in the said wood by reason of the said estovers to the said tenement, saving to Ralph and his heirs or other holders of the said tenements in Wytheton and Houby one oak for all estovers of oak in the wood of Ryggeton every year for ever. Witnesses, John de Kirkeby, Henry de Boys, Kts., Henry de Skrevine, William Faukes of Newalle, William of Castelay, W. de Farnelaye, and others.—One seal in a green bag remains, the second is gone.

Eva, daughter of William Palmarius, of Suinlington, gives to God, &c., together with her body there to be buried, all the toft and croft which she had in Stainburn, with all buildings and six acres which she had in the territory of the said vill, and all lands in the vill, and easements in and out. Witnesses, Nigel de Plumpton, Hugo de Suinlington, William of Lelai, Henry of Castellai, Nicolas de Caiton, Matthew the Forester, Helias, son of Cnut, Thomas of Fozton, Simon of Pouele. Over seal. (There is a duplicate of this deed.)

1319, April 8, Fountains.—Thomas de Skrevyn, son of William de Skrevyn, gives to God, &c., all lands and possessions in the vill and territory of Staynburn, in Overnedale, which they had by grant from any of his ancestors. Witnesses, William de Aldefeld, William de Bordesdene, William Russel of Azerlaw, Falcasius de Lyndeley, William de Castelay, senior, W. de Castelay, junior, and others.—Oval seal of the grantor, a bugle strung.

1321. Morrow of the Invention of the Holy Cross.—Fountains.—Robert, son of John of Hastholf, gives to God, &c., the land which he held of William of Castelay, in Stainburn. Witnesses, William of Castely, senior, W. Castely, junior, W. de Farnelay, Falcasius de Lydelay, John of Hastholf, &c. A round seal with device.

18 Ric. II., Sunday.—Staynburn.—John de Esshe and Agnes his wife give to Thomas Trump and John Sotherun a toft with a croft in length and breadth between the land of the Abbat of Fountains on the east, and the land of St. Leonard on the west, to hold to them in fee, on condition to pay yearly to the propositus of the chapel of Stainburne, at Christmas, 18*d.* for two torches for the elevation of the body of Christ in each mass there celebrated, and to do other things necessary in the chapel.

18 Ric. II., Sunday after the close of Easter.—Staynburn.—John of Esshe of Righton and Agnes his wife, give to Thomas Trumpe the propositus of the chapel of Stainburne, and the propositus for the time being, a toft with a croft in length and breadth between the land of the Abbat of Fountains on the east and the land of St. Leonard on the west; rent 1*d.* to the Abbat of Fountains. Witnesses, Robert Swelyng, John Welster, Roger de Craven, Robert Lester, John Thomson of Craven, Stephen Trump, William of Owellions, and others.

1432. Saturday before the Feast of the Annunciation of the Virgin.—Agnes Esshe, late wife of John of Esshe, relates and quit claims to Robert Sothern and his heirs all right in the toft and croft, &c., which Thomas Trump and Thomas Sothern had by gift from John de Esshe, her husband. Witnesses, Thomas Lyndelay, W. Wode, chaplain of Stainburn, John . . . , Robert Hessay, John Sothern, &c.

(56.) Roger of Wyverhunthorp releases to God, &c., all his claim in 28 acres of land, with appurtenances, in the field called the Hake, in the territory of Lynlay, of which 28 acres he impeaded the monks of Fountains in the Court of Wakefield by writ of right.—Rent 1*d.*—Witnesses, Dom. Richard de Thornhil, John of Horbyry, Kts., Richard of Heydun, Steward of Wakefield, William Flemyng, John of Eland, Thomas de Hoper-tune, William de Byrtune, and others. Round seal of the grantor. Bird among stars, an arrow reaches him from below.

14. Ed. III., Friday in the Nativity of the Virgin.—Staynburn.—Lawrence, son of William de Castelay gives to Adam, son of Robert del Cote of Stainburne and Margery his wife, and the heirs of Adam, a toft in Stainburn between the land of the Rector of the Church of Kyrkeby on the one part, and the land of the Abbat of Fountains on the other part. Witnesses, William de Mohaud, Walter de Kereby, W. de Londelay, Patrick de Martine, John de Vavasour of Castelay, William, son of William of Castelay, William de Skrevyn of Staynburn, &c.

(78.) William, son of Hugh de Castelay, gives to God, &c., two messuages with two bovates of land in the vill and territory of Stainburn; namely, whatever he had by gift and sale from Alice, daughter and heir of William Faybarne of Stainburne in her widowhood. Witnesses, Richard de Furneux, Laurence de Ardyngton, Falcasius de Lyndelay, William, his son, W. de Castelay, senior, William de Fayrneley, Richard Gafayr of Leytley, Thomas de Skrevyn, &c.—Oval white seal; the seal is 1 inch by $\frac{3}{4}$, a full length figure within a shield on each side, with legend.

1326. Translation of St. Thomas the Martyr.—Otley.—Thomas de Craven of Staynburne gives to John, son of Robert of Staynburne, one toft with the buildings and half a rood of land which he had by gift from Agnes, formerly daughter of Robert the Miller, in exchange. Witnesses, William de Castelay, senior, William de Castelay, junior, William Mohaut of Lithe-lay, Falcasius de Lindelay, Walter de le Brotes, and others.

30 Hen. VIII., Aug. 1st. Marmaduke, Abbat of Fountains and the Convent of one part, and John Lyndley of Staynburn of the other part. The Abbat leases for 40 years to John Lyndley one tenement builded, with the appurtenances, in Stainburne, now in the holding of the said J. Lyndley, and the little closes called the Forlands, now in his occupation, and one tenement in Staynburne in the occupation of Richard Dicson, and a little close in Staynburn, called the New Close or Intake, in the occupation of Richard Dicson. Mentions the several rents.—Seal gone.

(69.) William Alebartarius gives to God, &c., one bovat of land in the territory of Stainburne, with the appurtenances and easements within and without the vill; namely, that bovat which he held of Helyas, the son of Cnut, in frankalmoign, but doing foreign service as much as pertains to one bovat where () 14 carucates of land make one knight's fee. Witnesses, Helays, the son of Cnut, William, Clerk of Stainburne, W. le Franceys, Adam, the nephew of William Alebaster, Hameric de Catell's and others.—Seal gone.

Walter, son of Walter of Haneswood, for the health of his soul and the soul of his wife Beatrix, and all, &c. gives to God and St. Mary and St. Leonard of Essold, and the nuns there serving God, one toft with a croft and seven acres of land and half an acre of meadow in a place called Rodes, in Mensington; also 4*s.* 4*d.* of yearly rent to be taken of Thomas, the son of Simon of Rodes, for the tenement he holds freely of the donor; and 2*s.* 6*d.* from Robert Rufus and his heirs for the tenement he holds of the donor. Half the rents are to go to the utility and promotion of the house scilicet in manu priorisse, and the other part to the pittance of the convent on the anniversary of the said Walter, and this according to the ordinance of the sub-prioress.—Rent to Walter, one rose. Witnesses, Dom. William Lassell, Symon Ward, Alexander de Ledes, Kts., Robert Wylayn, John de Marelay, Mathew de Bramce, William de Mideltun, Symon, son of Thomas de Gyselay, &c.—Seal gone.

I beg to be allowed to acknowledge Mr. Fawkes's kind hospitality at Farnley Hall.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF G. H. FINCH, ESQ., M.P., AT BURLEY-ON-THE-HILL, CO. RUTLAND.

The manuscripts here comprise many volumes of law, compiled by and copied for Sir John Finch, Lord Keeper, and Heneage Finch, Lord Chancellor. There are some good letters, particularly one by Heneage Finch in 1667, giving an account of the negotiation of King Charles II. with the Dutch; in 1666 he refers to the Dutch bravados for their supposed victory in June. In 1671 is a notice of an escapade by Henry Savil; and in 1681 Daniel Finch writes from Newmarket that the

A. FAWKES, Esq.

G. H. FINCH, Esq.

G. H.
FINCH.
ESQ.

King there supped at Lord Albemarle's with all the jockies. A letter of 1723 notices unfavourably Burnet's History of his own times. There are a good many letters by the Countess of Pomfret, which give court news; one of them refers to the celebrated Misses Gunning; letters between the Countess and her daughter Charlotte, afterwards Lady Charlotte Finch. In 1759 the Countess mentions a scheme for abolishing vails to servants; and a cure by drinking tar-water. Sir John Finch's note book, temp. Car. 2., contains interesting remarks made during his travels abroad. There are accounts of tours abroad by Lord and Lady Pomfret in 1736 and 1738, and numerous volumes of diaries by Lady Pomfret from 1738 to 1761. A volume dated in 1644 gives an account of a half-crazed woman's interview with King Charles I. At the beginning of entries of cases argued before and adjudged by Lord Chancellor Nottingham is a note by his Lordship regarding the pardon obtained by Lord Shaftesbury, whom Lord Nottingham succeeded as Chancellor. There are copies of several of Raleigh's works; a treatise on the Fleet Prison; a volume of Scotch history from the accession of Queen Anne to 1707; copies of letters and papers seemingly by and to Sir Henry Wotton; copies of letters from Ireland in the early and latter parts of the reign of Queen Elizabeth; and a diary of the siege of Buda. A treatise of the Chancery treats of the privilege of peers in proceedings in Chancery. In 1670-73 are a few papers touching licenses for printing books, and a curious deposition by Mr. L'Estrange, regarding the Rehearsal Transposed.*

1666-7, Feb. 22/March 4. Heneage Finch to his brother. . . . The negotiation of the Swedish ambassadors was so far useful to Holland as to propose a peace; and his Majesty showing no aversion to it, the next step was the States writ to the Swedish ambassador, and enclosed a letter to the King desiring a treaty of peace at some neutral place, and this was sent sigillo volante with direction to deliver or not to deliver it according as they should find the contents thereof more or less acceptable to his Majesty. The ambassadors dealt plainly with the King, and told him their instructions; and the King as plainly answered they should send the letter back again, for he expected they should send to him to London as they had formerly done to Cromwell. This produced a second and more humble address wherein they acknowledged it to be their duty to wait upon his Majesty by their ambassadors at London, but besought him to consider how they were straitened by their allies whom they could by no means bring to make a condescension, and that they saw plainly they must despair of peace unless his Majesty in his princely wisdom could find out some expedient. The King, that he might not seem to throw off all considerations of peace upon punctilios which were not in the Hollanders' power to comply with, frankly offered to send his ambassadors to the Hague, which he looked on as the next best. In this offer his Majesty proposed to himself two ends, one that the King of France might not seem to govern this whole affair, but that if he would be included in the treaty as an ally, he should likewise send his ambassador to the Hague where their authority and influence would be far less than in any other place. Another and the chief end of all was that his Majesty treating at the Hague and in the presence of the States General should have opportunity by his own agents and by the agents and ministers of Spain and Germany which would be sure to attend as standers by, to negotiate his own interests and the interests of the Prince of Orange and his party to the full, and many unsuspected visits might be made by the ministers of foreign princes to the chief ones in that republic. And, which imported more than all the rest, De Wyt would have but one voice at the Hague, whereas if the treaty were anywhere else De Wyt would be sure to have a hand in naming most of the plenipotentiaries, and the place might be so strait as not to be capable of many foreign ministers, from whom we promise our selves great advantages. The event shows this counsel was well weighed; for nothing ever brought greater joy to the people of Holland nor greater amazement to De Wyt than this message from the King. 'Tis most certain that in the debate of it among themselves many of their chief men said openly that it was a most Christian offer, and they should never escape the fury of the people if they did any way decline it. The only expedient De Wyt had left was to like the proposition, but withal to desire them to acquaint their allies; and this was agreed and was the effect of the first answer. A second answer came last night, which without making any objection to the Hague desires his Majesty to make choice of the Brest (?) Bergen op zoom or Breda, which coming after consultation with the French King (for their ally the King of Denmark was content to come to the Hague) shows the Hollander plainly that all their hopes of peace must depend upon the pleasure of France, and we expect great effects of this discovery; for now the Dutch begin to see that the King of England seeks not their ruin nor is averse to any kind of peace as de De Wyt had made them believe; but on the contrary, 'tis De Wyt and his party that are ready to sacrifice their country to the pride and ambition of the French for their own private ends. In the meantime I am of opinion that the King will reject this last offer. For the first proposal of the Hague was a condescension, and though it had been indifferent to the King to have taken any of the three places at the first, yet having once made his choice, to depart from it again and to be led to another place at the pleasure of the King of France is never to be stooped to. And I have had private discourse with several of the Lords of the Council (from whom I now come) who are all of the same mind. There are some who think the Dutch never intended a peace, but only to amuse us, and prevent our preparations for war. But for that, be assured, we are more active and diligent than ever, and shall have the best fleet that can make abroad at sea before May next. On Monday the King goes to Chatham to see three of the new built frigates launched. They are all of the first rate, and are longer and carry more guns than any ships we have. The Victualler of the Navy is in more forwardness than he was last year at this time. The office of Ordnance has 350,000*l.* assigned to it upon an old founds without touching one penny of the 1,800,000*l.* given this last session. The new tax of poll money is well and cheerfully paid in every where and rises very high, so that we are in a good condition to make war, and if the Dutch persevere in this impertinent answer we shall have a much more glorious cause. They say that at Madrid there is some demur as to the signing of the peace, which was most advantageously concluded for us as to all points of trade; and the occasion is taken from an incredible success which the Spanish planters at Jamaica gained by a late invasion. . . . Portugal inclines wholly to the French, whose wealth and greatness either compels or awes most of the courts in Christendom. But Sir Robert Southwell hath instructions so to order the matter at Lisbon that no peace may be concluded with the French without leaving some latitude for the Portuguese to be included in the peace with Spain too, in case his Majesty shall be so happy in his mediation to obtain it for them. If this point be gained the French lose their design in Portugal. . . . Lord Conway is still in town.

1666-7, Feb. 22/March 4. Heneage Finch to his son Daniel. 'Tis possible, and but possible, we may have a treaty of peace with the Dutch, concerning which I have written at large to your uncle; but I forgot to tell him who they are the King had appointed for Ambassadors, Lord Hollis and Mr. Henry Coventry. If the treaty proceeds I propose to send your brother Heneage in Mr. Coventry's train.

1667, Sept. 13/23. The same to the same. I find that you take it unkindly of your brother that he writ no oftener to you from Breda. He writ very seldom to me and was never master of much intelligence, the whole negotiation of the treaty being kept very private from him, and all that followed it. . . . This night our Ambassadors are returned from Holland.

1666, Aug. 17/27. . . . I have been three or four times to Mr. Lilley to sit for my picture by my Lord Chancellor's command. I play at bowles, and ride abroad, and read ballads, of which I send you one written by Mr. Lacy the comedian and commented upon by Sir Jo. Berkenhead.

1666, Dec. 7/17. A frigate is immediately sent to the Barbados to settle affairs there and to supply the magazines since the disaster which befel Lord Willoughby. I am going to build myself new lodgings in the Temple which will cost me near 1,000*l.* when they are finished. I shall then know my losses by the City fire.

1665, Nov. 30, Oxford. Elizabeth Finch to her son. Hopes to be at Kensington next week, for the sickness abates much: there died last week but 652 of the plague, and this week but 300.

1666, Aug. 13^s. Heneage Finch to his son. The Dutch triumphs were with great insolence and bold inscriptions for their supposed victory in June, (some

G. H.
FINCH.
ESQ.

* Query whether The Rehearsal Transposed by Andrew Marvel is not meant.

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

Latin verses); but now they have come to change their note, altho' their foreign gazette in French speaks of this last engagement not as of a doubtful fight but as of a total rout and chase of the English. Our small poets go to work against the Dutch, of which you will find a copy on the other side. (Latin verses headed Batavorum Querimonia.)

1671, Sept. 12. Henry Savil, who with Lord and Lady Clanbrail went to Althorp, Lord Sunderland's place, had long been continued by Lady Northumberland, whether as her dead lord's friend or as envoyé and ambasciatore d'amore from a great person no body knows, got from Lord Sunderland a master key; at night went into Lady Northumberland's bed room in shirt and night gown, knelt at her bed and declared his love. She rang a bell, ran out by another door and got into bed with Lady Ashley. Henry Savil tried to ridicule it, writing a letter to Lady Northumberland, saying the house was haunted. She told her story. Henry Savil, finding the house growing too hot for him, fled. Mr. Russel and others pursued him to London, but could not find him; some say he is gone into France.

1681, Sept. 25. Newmarket. Daniel Finch to his wife . . . The King goes to Cambridge on Friday, and probably I may wait on him, and take the opportunity of seeing my brother. He does not design to leave this place till Thursday fortnight. He supped last night at the Duke of Albemarle's, and all the jockies with him, in order to make some horse matches.

1682, Four letters: three by Ralph Cudworth, and one signed by the Master and Fellows (13) of Christ's College, Cambridge, about a benefaction by Sir Jo. Finch.

1691, Aug. 27. Certificate signed by the Earl of Winchester, that Anne Countess of Nottingham was appointed one of Her Majesty's Ladies of the Bed-chamber.

1723, Nov. 26. London. E. Southwell to Lord . . . Short notices of his recent travels abroad. Surprised at last nights express of the Duke of Orleans dying last Thursday of an apoplexy; a great loss to us, for he was certainly for keeping peace. . . . He was the best head piece in France, and could make himself be obeyed. How it will go on now is yet uncertain. The King is so very boyish that it will give great opportunity of cabals; and I fear the Duke of Bourbon has not wit enough or credit sufficient to keep things quiet. To be sure France is naturally strongly Jacobite, and all those people will now be exceedingly upish and be frequently alarming us.—He mentions Burnet's long expected History: "Tis the present run of reading, " but I have not heard one speak well of it."

1724, Feb. 12, o.s., Stockholm. Wm. Finch to his father. His Majesty's pleasure is that I should make a longer stay at this Court. Lord Townshend and Lord Carteret proposed my going to Florence, but his Majesty did not approve it, and adds to my present allowance, that of plenipentiary.

1725, Nov. 13. John Finch to his father Daniel. The gentlemen of the Temple and the Judges and Serjeants are very unwilling to quit Serjeants Inn, and therefore some of them have spoken to me to use my interest with the Dean of York about their lease, and that they would be glad to refer it to you, and what fine they should pay.

1725, Oct. 17. Daniel Finch to his father. I hear Sir T. Pengelly will be Chief Baron, so there is a vacancy at Cockermouth, which I am told by those who know will be filled up by Mr. William Finch at the Hague.

Several letters by Charles, 6th Duke of Somerset, to his father-in-law, Daniel Finch, 2nd Earl of Nottingham.

1738, March 30. Lady Pomfret to Lord Pomfret. I believed you will be as much surprised as every body about town seems to be at the Duke of Marlborough kissing the King's hand for Mr. Murray's regiment.

1736, June 22. Lady Pomfret to her daughter Lady C. Finch. Lady Archibald Hamilton is made Privy Purse and Mistress of the Robes to the Princess of Wales, but has not yet kissed hands, though I saw her follow the Princess out of her dressing room when I was to wait on her yesterday.

1737, Sept. 10. The same to the same. From Mrs. Brathwaight I learned the cause of Mrs. Clavering's elevation, that I endeavoured to describe in your papa's letter, which was occasioned by her being in waiting at the time of the flight, when the Prince, Princess, Lady Archibald Hamilton, Mrs. Clavering, and Mrs. Pain, all five came in a coach secretly from Hampton Court, for which exploit she had a gold watch from the Prince with an agate or some such stone set in the middle of the outward case and set round with diamonds. Mrs. Pain had also the present of a watch, and Lady A. Hamilton had one much finer than the others and set with diamonds; but I hear the Queen did not quite so much approve her conduct, and let her know it by her own mouth when she came to St. James'.

1746, March 24. Lord Pomfret to his wife. There has been a great bustle about the last meeting of the independent freeholders of Westminster, where a man has been almost killed for being suspected of being a spy. The House of Commons has this day taken it up, and without a division have voted a Committee to inquire into it.

1752, Feb. 20. Lady Pomfret to Lord Pomfret. All our letters from town resound the praises of Duke Hamilton. Not Tom Thumb's chariot wheels were more crowded with giants than he was pursued by wishes and sighs from all the girls in London that fancy themselves beauties and know themselves beggars. My Lord Coventry, unfortunately for him, appeared at Court the morning the new married couple set out for the Arcadian fields and was bated as he deserved, some say till he cried out he immediately intended to follow so right an example and make the eldest Miss Gunning a peeress, as well as her sister.

Some letters by CHARLOTTE FERMOR to her MOTHER the COUNTESS OF POMFRET.

1743, Oct. 13. Copt Hall. Yesterday dined at Wanstead; the inside of the house is immensely rich in carving, gilding, and tapestry. The new apartment is now furnishing with crimson velvet doubly bordered with a broad gold lace, and set in carved and gilt frames, with great quantities of fine old china advantageously placed. . . . After supper Lord Castlemaine borrowed the Assembly Room of my Lord Tilney, he said, to give me a ball next Wednesday. . . . After supper we all danced to our own singing, in order to teach Signor Cassali (an Italian they have in the house) English country dances. . . . he is a painter, and I fancy as low born as they generally are, though by means of an order he wears, set in diamonds (which he tells them was given him by the King of Prussia and which very few people can have) and some fine suits of cloaths, he passes for the most complete fine gentleman in the world, and is treated upon an equal footing with the rest of their company. He is painting pictures for the salon, and I believe well done. . . . They tell me he paints more in two hours time than any of his profession can do in a day.

1745, April 13. . . . The King goes abroad the 4th of May. . . . Mr. Pitt is ill of the small pox (a very bad sort) at his house in Hampshire, I fear he'll hardly recover.

1745, Aug. 17. . . . I hear Ostend has surrendered. The Pretender's eldest son with 300 men is landed in the island of Mell.

(1748, May 3. Her letter of this date is signed Charlotte Finch, she having married Mr. Finch.)

1755, April 6. I have finished "Le Siège de Calais" in two evenings. I liked it above all things. . . . I have finished "The Centaur," a book one may always dip into with use and pleasure.

1760, Dec. 23. . . . The King is gone to the play, which is King John; he has hardly ever bespoke any other than Shakespeare's historical plays, all which they say he has ordered to be revived, and takes great pleasure in. The Speaker is certainly to be made a Peer, but not 'till he has been chosen Speaker of the new Parliament, which he is to resign, and will be succeeded 'tis thought by Mr. Bacon. Sir B. Grosvenor and Sir William Irby are also certainly to be Peers.

1761, July 29. . . . Lord Harcourt sets out on Saturday and brings our Princess by the long sea from Hamburg instead of coming through Hanover and Holland as was at first intended. The Princess of Wales has given each of her Maids of Honour 100*l.* to adorn themselves on this occasion. The King is quite well again, and rode out this morning.

Some letters by J., Countess of Pomfret, to her daughter Charlotte Finch.

1755, June 10. Daventry . . . Lord Nottingham (for he has no other title here) has rebuilt a very handsome church, just finished, and we passed through an avenue of his enclosures to this place of some miles. . . . There are 10 loads of the statutes already lodged at Oxford, and 'tis computed they have 30 more to carry.

1755, Dec. 5. Windsor Castle . . . P.S.—I forgot to tell you when I was in town of the glass mug which Daly will bring you; 'tis the same Queen Mary gave to Sir Geo. Farmor's (Fermor's) lady with the writings

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

of the Bedfordshire estate. Pray lock it up very carefully for me till I ask you for it.

1759, Oct. 26. of other day Mr. Goddard came here with a nonsensical scheme of getting as great a number as he can to promise and agree amongst themselves never to give anything to other people's servants, nor to suffer their own servants to take any money offered to them by strangers, and for his trouble and expense is going about with these proposals; each person in the agreement is to subscribe two guineas to a book he offers to translate and publish, called "The Annals of Italy," 12 volumes, and half-a-guinea more to be paid on the delivery of each volume.

1759, Nov. 2. The Countess mentions a Mrs. Walsingham who was cured of a disorder like Lady Charlotte Finch's by drinking tar-water only.

Note book of Sir John Finch:—

Latin remarks on various physical matters.

1662, Oct. 25. Sir John took leave of his relatives and went to France; he landed at Calais, Oct. 30. On 1 Nov. he met Alderman Backwell, who came to receive the money Dunkirk was sold for, which came in 46 carts and amounted to 350,000*l.*, all in silver, 25,000*l.* being abated to have present pay.

1665 and 1667, Florence, and also 1669, 1670, and 1671. All in Latin, on various subjects. 1672/3. 1673, at Montreuil.

1677, Pera. Dudley North told him how a ball falling from a cannon's breech and one fired from the mouth reached the earth at the same time.

1673, Sept. 21, Genoa. 1673/4, January, Smyrna.—1673, Nov. 20, Leghorn. I embarked for Malta, and arrived on the 14th of December. He makes remarks on religion to the King.

June 24, Adrianople (Latin).—1673/4, Smyrna (Italian).—1675, Constantinople.

1675, July 27. I had an audience of the Grand Signior. July 21/31. Mr. Brown averred to Sir Thomas [Baines] and me that Mr. Chillingworth did in his sermon on the resurrection speak words in this purpose, "that what advantage the resurrection of Christ brought to his living well, he could not resolve."

1675, Dec. 8/18, Pera.

1670/1, March 19/20. Easter Day, Florence. Robert Clifford, eldest son of the Rt. Honourable Sir Thomas Clifford, died on the 29th of fever, which began immediately after the dinner he was invited to by Signor Ferranti Capponi with Sir Bernard Giascon; he had three or four glasses of wine and beer in ice. There is a long account of the death-bed scene. He died a Catholic. There is a written account of the post mortem examination of the body by Tilmann Trewijn, anatomist, of Ruremond. The dying man's confession is in cipher.

The volume contains discussions and arguments on various subjects.

Folio, 1687. 1706/7, January 13. Book of the accounts of Thomas Armstrong with the Earl of Nottingham. A note at the end signed by the Earl allows the accounts and admits a balance of 1,000*l.* owing to Armstrong. It appears from these accounts that Armstrong received secret service money. The first payment in 1687 is "Dr. Atterbury 30*l.*" Under the date of 1689/90, March 20 is "Mr. Kneller 25*l.* for my Lady's picture."

Quarto, 125 pp. Account of a tour in the Low Countries by Lord and Lady Pomfret in 1736.

Quarto, 72 pp. Account of a tour in France by Lord and Lady Pomfret in 1738.

Quarto, 1738, Aug. 16/27 to 1739, May 11. Diary of Lady Pomfret. Short notes of visits, people seen, &c. She was in France and in Italy.

Quarto, 1744, July 14 to 1746, April 8. A diary on the same plan.

Quarto, 1744, Sept. 1 to 1747, Feb. . . . A diary. One, two, or three leaves for each day (some leaves are blank) showing where she was and what company she saw; on the opposite pages are notes of incidents and occurrences.

Quarto, 1749, Oct. 8 to 1750, Aug. 10. Notes of visits, persons, &c.

Quarto, 1750, Aug. 12 to 1751, May 26. Notes of books read, visits, persons, &c.

Large quarto, 233 pp. (the two pages opposite each other being counted as one page). Containing the quitting of the house in Hanover Square, embarking at Dover, landing in France, stay there, voyage to Italy, residence there, return through Germany and Flanders home, taking a house in Upper Brook Street, continuance at it until Mr. Fermor is made lieutenant of a man-of-war, and then going to Easton.—1738, July 8 to 1742, Dec. 24. Each double page is divided into columns headed,—situation, incidents, and occurrences, month, week, day, year, where and in what company.

Quarto, 1738, Aug. 16/27 to 1739, May 11. Diary in France and Italy.

Quarto, 1744, July 14 to 1746, Apr. 8. Diary. Short notes of visits, persons seen, &c.

Quarto, 1744, April 1 to 1747, Feb. . . . Similar in frame to the first volume.

Quarto, 1747, Dec. 25 to 1747, May 15. Similar, but not much in the volume.

Quarto, 1749, Oct. 8 to 1750, Aug. 10. Similar, but fuller.

Quarto, 1750, Aug. 12 to 1751, May 26. Similar.

Quarto, 1751, May 25 to 1751, Nov. 29. Similar.

Quarto, 1751, Nov. 30 to 1756, March 26. Similar.

Quarto, 1756, March 27 to 1760, July 4. Similar.

Quarto, pp. 1198–1421. 1760, July 26 (Windsor Castle) to 1764, Oct. 22. The last entry at Windsor Castle is dated 1761, Sept. 23.

A large sized quarto volume containing a few poems by Anne, Countess of Winchelsea, and Henrietta Louisa, Countess of Pomfret.

A 12mo. volume of 28 pp. England's forewarnings, or A relation of true, strange, and wonderful visions and prophetic revelations concerning these tragical, sinful, and dismal times, showed four or five years since to Mrs. Grace Carie of Bristol, who having while the designs of Canterbury and Stafford were plotting and hatching humbly and zealously solicited his [Majesty] with great travell and expense to give audience, which could not be obtained, is now reduced by divers persons of eminent quality and piety to relate and represent the truth herein to select zealous religious Christians. Dated June 1644.

Begins, To all God's chosen saints and faithful servants. (Texts from the Bible).

To the right godly reader. Concerning the reason why the truth was put in a corner

Grace Carie, sometime wife to Mr. Water Carie of Bristol, residing in her widowhood at Uske in Monmouthshire, had a trance, she saw the 3 persons of the Trinity. She formerly used to pray to Saints and say Ave Maria: in 1639 she had further favour and was made sensible of the disasters to befall: she heard shrieks and sounds of waters (signifying war in Scotland); a voice called to her night and day Treason, Death; at church and public prayer in summer time appeared plainly to her the shape of a King's head and face without a body, pale and wan, the head had a crown, and the crown all bloody. At another time a noise as of much gold and treasure, and a voice whispering Earl, Bishop, and Cruel Queen, at which time she knew not of any Earl or Bishop. She went to London to Whitehall and pressed in a petitioning way to present his Majesty the effect of what she had heard and seen, but was neglected: not long after she was admitted at Richmond to his Majesty's presence who received and read her petition, namely, that he would hear her at large. The Marquis of Hamilton took her to the King, who took her by the one hand and the Marquis by the other. The King said he thought she meant well and was a good woman. The Prince's tutor came in and asked if she wanted means, she said No, but the Spirit pressed her to follow the King; and she followed him to York (where a dark cloud shadowed the place where his Majesty stood); she asked for audience and fell on her knees before him in the presence chamber, and asked him to hear her, but he refused: and it pleased God to discharge her from all further attendance on his Majesty: she returned to London.

Square folio, Alcune considerationi appartenenti alla Pittura come di dilecto d'un gentiluomo nobile, e come introduttione a quelle ci deve dire. 90 leaves, 17th century.

Small 4to., by Heneage Finch. Reports of cases which I have heard and remarked. 21 Car. 1, 1650.

Commonplace book of Law, by Sir Heneage Finch. 3 vols., folio.

Folio, 17th century. A collection of all the Statutes that prescribe to every man his duetie. (Penal Statutes), upwards of 360 leaves.

Folio, by Sir Heneage Finch. Statutes and cases on them, from Magna Charta to 13 Eliz.

Two volumes, folio, containing 703 pp. Entries of cases argued before and adjudged by Lord Chancellor Nottingham,—p. 1. Sunday, 9 Nov. 1673. At 6 at night I received the Great Seal from his Majesty at Whitehall, and was made Custos Sigilli. I entered into the Council of Foreign Affairs. I recepi'd Lord Shaftesbury's Patent which came to me from the Privy Seal. It was reported his Lordship kept the Bill signed by him above a year and a half, for it was signed before he was Chancellor, as is said, and never meant to send it to the Seals till there was great necessity, and

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

so hath now covered all his misdemeanours as Chancellor. In the margin: But this was a malicious report to his prejudice and mine, as if he had been false and I too easy in this matter. For a truth the pardon did extend to the 6th of November, which could not possibly be by virtue of any old warrant. But the Chancellor foreseeing his fall obtained a warrant for a new pardon signed by Mr. Secretary Coventry, and Mr. Solicitor North passed it upon Saturday, 8th November, and his Lordship intended to have it sealed as Chancellor, for the Privy Seal was directed to him by that name, but it was ray'd in the King's presence and directed to me by name with a supper cancellarius interlined where it mentioned him.

On taking his seat Nottingham made no speech.

The first case begins, "In the cause between Mason and Cheyne I decreed, &c. The last case is in Nov. 1684.

Folio, 17th century. Reports 7 Eliz. to 37 Eliz., and by J. W., 210a to 328a—328a. The following are resolutions in the Court of Wards reported by Anderson that ought to have been inserted after 206. These are evidently copied from another MS. whose pages are followed.

Folio, 17 century, 172 leaves. Reports (in French) Hil., 4 Car. I., B.R., to Mich., 9 Car. I. The first case is Stoner v. Stoner. The last is Sir W. Armyn v. Joise. On a flyleaf "Liber, H. H. H. They were lent to me by Jeffrey Palmer. 21 Nov. 1649."

Folio, 17th century. Marked "Hobart's Reports." All the cases are in the Common Pleas except where otherwise said. The first case is Mich., 11 Jac. Formedon in the Reverter by Richard, Earl of Clanricard v. Robert Sidney Viscount Lisle. The last is Easter, 19 Jac. Ambhurst v. Palmer. Then comes the case (in English) of the Earl of Ormond and Lord Dingwall, and the lady his wife.

Folio, 17th century. Liber selectus, sive casuum quorundam selectorum fasciculus. (By two hands) foll. 216. 1,284 cases. A good Index.

Large 4to. Les reports de H. F. Ovesque les Reports de J. A. in fine. 1. Oct. 11. 1644. The Archb. of Canterbury's case. 2. Dord Macgwyre's case. The last is Moore and Earl Rivers, fo. 208. Then a new paging, 1-39. Cases reported by Jo. Allen and selected by Serjt. Simpson. 1. Taylor v. Isherwood, 18 Car. 1. —Then about 20 leaves of notes (by H. Finch).

Folio, 17th century. Liber A. Reports, temp. Jac. 1, Mich. 2 Jac. 1, Mich. 6 Jac., and afterwards of Easter and Trinity terms, 14 Jac. "These reports were lent to me by Mr. Wyld of the Inner Temple, 1646, Oct. 23." 208 leaves. The first case is Wilding v. Copping, action on the case.

Folio, 17th century. Epitomes of 932 cases.

Folio, 17th century. A treatise of Law.

Book 1, cap. 1. of the Law of Nature. Law is an Arte of well ordering a Civil Society. Cap. 2 of the Law of Reason. Book 2, cap. 1 of Common Law, Customs, and Statutes. Book 3, cap. 1, of torcious offences. Book 4, of Actions.

Large folio, 17th century. Liber, J. I. I., J. J. i., 351 leaves and Index. Copied out of certain MSS. formerly in the study of Baron Henden, and by Sir John Henden lent to Mr. Twysdden from whom I borrowed them and placed them together.

Large folio, Common-place book of Law (by Sir Jo. Finch).

Common-place book of Law in 5 large volumes.

Several volumes of Reports of Cases, temp. Elizabeth. James 1 and Charles 1, by Yelverton, Wyld, Thomas Powys, of Lincolns Inn, and Keeling.

A thick volume of Abstracts of the Rolls of Parliament, once belonging to Sir E. Coke, and given to him by Francis Tate in 1614.

A volume of Star Chamber Cases, 38-9 Eliz. to 5 Car. 1. This contains a treatise on the Star Chamber.

Folio, 17th century. An answer made by command of Prince Henry to certain propositions of wars and peace delivered to his Highness by some of his military servants. Begins, Frames of policie as well as works of nature. Ends, fo. 78, but endless expense, trouble, and danger.

Another Copy, said to be collected out of records in the Tower by Sir H. S., Kt. and Bart.

Folio, Journals of the Houses of Peeres and Commons of all the Parliaments and Sessions of Parliament during the reign of Queen Elizabeth in two tomes or volumes, gathered for the most part out of the original journal books of both the said houses, being records or in the nature of records. 1 Eliz. to 28-9 Eliz.

Folio. The white Ethiopian. A play. Persons: Hidaspes, King of Ethiopia; Persina, his Queen, &c. Act 1, sc. 1, enter Cariclea and Theagenes.

Quarto, 17th century. A brief experimental account of the production of some colours by mixtures of several liquors either having little or no colour, or being of different colours from those produced to leave. The Art of Refining Silver. Relation concerning the Manacles, by Sir Robert Merrey (3 leaves).—Strange tides (3 leaves).—The manner of making green copper, by M. Colwall.—Several propositions of experiments to be made.—To sound the Bay of Biscay. Experiments made of the sympathetic powder by Sir Gilbert Talbot (5 leaves). Cases. An exact relation of the Pico taken from Mr. Clappham. Begins, at the 20 Aug. 1646, Mr. Clappham together with Mr. Philip Ward, &c. (12 leaves).—A brief account of the supposed rain of wheat, by Col. Take, 1661 (1).—Account of glass drops, by Sir Robert Moray (5 pp.).—Experiments concerning the force of blowing with a man's breath, by Dr. Wilkins (1½ pp.).—History of making saltpetre by Dr. Henshaw.—Three other treatises on saltpetre, and one on the history of making gunpowder.

Folio, 17th century. An argument upon the question of Imposition divided into sundrie chapters by Sir John Davies, kt, one of his Majesty's learned Counsel in Ireland. Begins, The question, Sir, concerning your Majesty's prerogative. Ends (cap. 32). Blessed is the people that hath the Lord for their God above in heaven, and King James for their king upon earth.—A remonstrance delivered to his Majesty in writing after the inhibition given by him to the Lords House of Parliament, as well by word of mouth as by letter, not to proceed in the examining his right to impose without the assent of Parliament.

Folio, 17th century. A book of Prohibitions. A large Treatise of Prohibitions, with the arguments pro et contra, between the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury and Sir E. Cook, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the rest of the Judges Ecclesiastical and Temporal concerning prohibitions, modus decimandi, &c.—A conference held by the King's appointment, 24 May 1611. The Lord Treasurer sheweth, &c. Then Dr. Martin came to the table. Ends, give satisfaction to the Lord Archbishop himself. (158 leaves).

Folio, 17th century. A brief discourse of the Navy by Mr. Holland, (137 pp.). Begins, Among the many and manifold books extant upon all subjects both serious and trivial, the Navy hath not been beholding to the pennes invencion, or paines of any. Ends, It becomes not me to present what is fit to authority; what I have said on the whole discourse has proceeded from &c., without &c., or evil will to any now acting in the Navy.

Folio, 1675. De le Fleete, or a Treatise of the Fleete, the office of the Warden of the said prison and his authority. Composed and writ by Wm. Meakins, gent., clerk of the aforesaid prison, A.D. 1674. Cap. 1. Of the prison of the Fleet, the antiquity and situation thereof. Cap. 2 (in seven sections), the different officers. Cap. 3 (17 sections) the powers of the officers. Cap. 4. The duties of the officers. Cap. 5. Habeas Corpus et corpus cum causâ. Cap. 6 (12 sections). Prisoners, their demeanour and capabilities, punishments. Cap. 7. Of the Wardens, remedies, and advantages. Cap. 8. The dangers, forfeitures, and fines for things not done or misdome by the Warden or his officers. Cap. 9. The Debtee or Creditor has remedy against the Warden by action of Debt. Cap. 10. Of escape. The text (175 pp.), begins, My purpose in this Treatise is not to write a long description. Ends, and the Gaoler may retake him. A full Index follows.

Folio. A treatise of the Star Chamber by Hudson. Another copy, wants the passage from Bracton at the end.

Folio, 18th century. Memoirs concerning the affairs of Scotland, from Queen Ann's accession to the throne to the commencement of the union of the two Kingdoms of Scotland and England in May 1707. With an account of the origin and progress of the designed invasion from France in March 1708, and some short reflections on the ancient state of Scotland. After a Preface the text begins, After King James had retired out of England, and the Prince of Orange was declared King, a convention of Estates was called in Scotland and met in Edinburgh on 14 March 1689. Ends, p. 139 and what a resemblance there is in their punishments, let such who have had any share in promoting the first or executing the last seriously consider.

Folio, Liber B.B.B. Les reports de Baron Savill ut constat fol. 2. a., mcs. fol. 1 Bar. Sh. The first case is in Easter term, 22 Eliz., and the last is Duke of Lenox v. Sir Thomas Brooke, Hil. 3 James 1.

Large folio, c. 1677. Account of the Colony and Fishes of Newfoundland and the present state thereof. Begins, Newfoundland is an island of America situate

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

betwixt 46 and 53 degrees of N. latitude, distant from England westward about 700 leagues. One chapter is of the French colony and trade of Newfoundland.

Large folio. Account of the coronation of Charles II. in Latin: the claims are in French.

Large folio, 23 leaves. Copy, temp. Car. II., of the presentation of John Shuckburgh and 16 other chosen and sworn by the Rt. Honble. Sir Thomas Egerton, kt., Lord Keeper, to enquire and present upon these articles following for the better reformation of sundry exactions and abuses supposed to be committed by officers, clerks, and ministers in Her Majesty's High Ct. of Chancery &c., made and given up, 8 March. 40 Eliz.

Folio, 17 Century. Copies of some tracts by Sir W. Raleigh. The Prince. Of Government. Of Policy. Observations touching the Royal Navy. Life and death of Mahommed. The Sceptick. Certain observations, concerning the causes of the magnificence and opulence of cities. (10 leaves). A discourse concerning the present consultation about the peace with Spain, &c., presented by Sir W. Raleigh to King James 1603. An apologie written by Sir W. Raleigh touching his voyage to Guiana, immediately upon his landing at Plymouth, 1618. An apologie written by Sir W. R. for his last unlucky voyage to Guiana. A relation of the arraignment and conviction of Sir W. R. at Winchester, 18 Nov. 1603. The arraignment of Sir W. R. at the castle of Winchester 17 Nov. 1605. Letter to the King after his condemnation.

Folio. Title and 506 pp. Ducatus Comitatusque Palatini Lancastrie necnon possessionum privilegiorumque ab antiquo illustratio: ex archivis regis in Turri Lond. repositis petita et de prompta. Addite sunt etiam Tabule Genealogiæ ducum comitumque preditorum aliarumque familiarum magis illustrium unde ipsi non solum genus duxerunt suum sed etiam patrimonialia latitundia sua varie auxerunt et locupletarunt. Postremo Index alphabeticus castrorum prediorum locorumque in isto volumine sparsim memoratorum. Henneage.—1 to 430; Charters and Acts of Parliament Hen. 3. to Ed. 4. 1474. A few leaves more of Ed. 4. Then a full Index. P. 448. Post mortem Inquisitions on Edmund the King's brother 25 Edw. 1.; H. de Lacy, 4 Edw. 2.; Thomas Earl of Lancaster, 1 Edw. 3; Henry Duke of Lancaster, 35 Edw. 3; Knights fees of Robert de Lisle, 42 Edw. 3.

Folio. Character of Robert late Earl of Salisbury. Begins, He came of a parent that counselled unto pietie (4 pp.).—Note in latin concerning Henry Wotton youngest son of Thomas Wotton and his offices.—Copy of a latin letter by Anne, Queen of James 1st, to Martin Grimani, Doge of Venice.—Copies of Italian letters, one is to the King by the Doge.—The King to Wotton? in English.—11 pp. Marino Grimani Duke of Venice weakened with a double tertian and more with age itself on the 23rd of December toward morning went out of the world.—An account of him and of the election of Donato. p. 7. The last week, we had executed here a certain fellow named Bartholomeo Barghera. p. 8 the sentence in Italian. p. 11 ends, Soveriano the inventor and cause of the building of Palma, desired to be buried in the bulwarks, that at least his bones might be a defence hereafter.—4 pp. The Lord of Arundel that commandeth a regiment of English which serveth here, passed over lately hither in company with the Count of Villa Mediana that is returned from Spain. p. 2. The Spaniard will not deliver Owen. p. 3. Solemn professing of five Englishwomen to be nuns. p. 4. Macquire the vauncourier of Tyrone's company.—6 pp. Want of rain: Our Lady of Atocha brought out. Entertainment given to Irish Earls in Milan. Copy of the Secretary of State (Andres de Prada) letter to him and copy of his to the Secretary; both in Spanish. The discourse made upon the four great marriages that are in speech. The Prince of Wales with the Princess of Savoy, the Prince of Modena and the Second of Savoy; the Prince of Tuscany with the Archduke Ferdinand's sister, and the Prince of Savoy with the Princess of Tuscany.—The Papal Nuncio complained in the College last week of speeches made by Fulgentius (Latin).—Copy of long English letter to "My Lord" about Don Francisco de Castro.—Italian letter sent with Sir James Lindsay (1 p.).—Note in English about Francisco de Castro (2 pp.).—Some 3 weeks before the arrival of His Majesty's book in Venice the Pope had expressly commanded this State not to accept it (8 pp.).—Memorial of papists to the Prince; thanks for forbearance for recusancy, and to pray him to present their gratitude to the King, &c.—Summarium articulorum a Cardinalibus juratorum priusquam ingrediuntur in conclavi (24 in 3 pp.).—To the King. General view of the hopes and difficulties of their state. 1. That the Turk who should containe the Pope and the King of Spain in feare, hath himself at present insuperable diversions at home (3½ pp.).—Address to the King concerning the treaty of peace in the Low Country (3½ pp.).—Leagues and contracts of princes last no longer than the causes for which they were made, 10 pp., seemingly extracts. Sir Gervase Helwys's protestation concerning the death of Sir Thomas Overbury (5½ pp.).—Begins, I hear myself diversely censured.—The Lord Chancellor (Bacon's) confession.—Sir W. Raleigh's apologoe for his last action at Guiana.—When it shall please God to bring thee to man's estate use great providence and circumspection in the choice of thy wife (2 pp.).—1607, May 23, Venice. Letter of complaint to the Grand Duke about an English priest named Sherwood.—Copy of Guy Faux's letter to Lord Monteagle.—Copies of several Italian letters, temp. James 1st, about the interests of England in Italy.—Spanish account of the death of Ravallac (1½ pp.).—1608. Jan. 2. Whitehall. Letter (4½ pp.) by Ro. Salisbury. Spanish matters.—The state of the preceding treaty in the United Provinces (2½ pp.).—Latin letter to the Archduke (6 pp.).—Copy of the oath of allegiance to King James.—1604, Jan. 23. Whitehall. The King's instructions to his Ambassador Ligier at Venice (1½ pp.).—Letter to Lord . . . about Sir H. Wotton, in Venice.—1608, Oct. 6, Dresden. Lettre du Duc de Saxe au roy Mathias.—1607, Jan. 13, n.s. Proposition made by M. de Horsi in the Assembly of the States General. It was signed Walrane de Willenhurst.—The answer of the States General to the former proposal.—8 leaves. The question is whether it were behooful for Her Majesty to put the Scottish Queen to death or to keep her in prison. To dissuade. Her qualities and sex, &c. Answers. First, for the qualitie and sex.—Proceedings in Council. Copy of Elizabeth's letter to Sir A. Paulet.—A relation of what passed at Derry concerning the burial of the widow Adams, 1696, Feb. 10, addressed to the Bishops (4 pp.).—Articles of the League between James I. and Philip III. of Spain, and the Archduke Albert and Isabella Clara Eugenia, 18 Aug. 1604, o.s. (12 pp. English). Translated by Mr. Knowell for me, Oct. 1604, Pe. Manwood.—1596, Feb. 27, Dublin. To the two Chief Justices in England, Sir J. Popham and Sir Edm. Anderson, on behalf of Robert Pyne, to whom Dillon had granted the office of Exigenter.—1596, May 6. Answer to the above.—Notes sent out of England touching the office of Philacer. (These 3 last items are copies certified by Rob. Rushworth.)—1565, March 1, Dublin. The Lord Deputy to the Earl of Leicester; about the state of Ireland (6 leaves).—1566, Nov. 2, Drogheda. The Deputy and Council to the Queen (7 leaves).—1567, April 2, Killmayneham. The Deputy to the Queen (12½ leaves).—De studiis jesuitarum obstructoribus. Begins, Quod M. Cato olim dixit. Six leaves in Latin, dated 21 March 1608.—Exercitii spiritualis ratio progressus et finis. Cap. 3. Abierant jam novem dies ex quo Romam adveneram. Four leaves of conversation between the writer and a Jesuit.—Observanda quedam circa superiorum subordinatione et studiorum institutione. Begins, Sunt in hoc collegio quod prius erat Anglorum hospitale (2 pp.).—1606, April 17. Copy of Latin letter by Paul V. to the Patriarch, Archbishops, Bishops, &c. &c. Romæ, ex typographia Vaticana, 1606. Concordat cum originali (10 pp.).—1610, atic. 26, Venice. Latin letter by Michael Lohes Germanus about European politics.—Discorso breve, by an Italian gentleman (4 pp.).—1614, Nov. 12. Copy in French of Articles signed by the English and French Ambassadors, States General, Brandenburg, Nieuburg, but neither the Archduke nor his Excellency nor Spinola. It was between George William, Marquis of Brandenburg, on the one part, and Wolfgang William, Count Palatini, Duke of Nieuburg, on the other part; touching the government and administration provisional of the County of Juliers, Cleves, and other departments of the succession of the Duke of Cleves.—6 James I. Nov. 16, Westminster. James I. to Sir John Herbert, second Secretary, and Sir Julius Cæsar, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Thomas Parry, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Sir Hen. Hobart, A. G., Sir T. Bacon, S. G., Sir Henry Montague, Recorder of London, and to the Chamberlain of the Exchequer, Clerk of the Council and Clerk of the Signet; referring to them divers suits.—1605, July 26, Oatlands.—to the Trinity House? On complaint by Venice through Sir H. Wotton of English pirates, it is ordered that English ships shall strike flag to the Venetian galleys in their seas, and send boats to declare their condition. This is to be published to Masters in the Port of London and others in the limits of their House.—Robert Cecil and J. Herbert to the King. 1597, March 23, Angiers, 16 pp.—1598, March 27, Angiers, 13 pp.—Speeches on the question about Antenati and Postnati.—Memorial of the

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

King's resolution on the Grievances of the Commons (7½ pp.)—1607, May 2. The King's speech to the Commons.—Letter by a clergyman to the King about his sermon.—Sir P. Sidney to the Queen about Monsieur.—The Earl of Essex to the Earl of Southampton.—Lady Riche to the Queen.—Henry Cuttle, on his death.—An advertisement to Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, sent by his squire the 27 Nov., 39 Eliz. By the Lord Cecil. Squire, my advice to thy master shall be as a token wrapped up in words (2½ pp.)—Instruction which Sir F. Walsingham gave to his nephew when he sent him into foreign parts to travel (2½ pp.)—Sir W. Raleigh to Sir R. Carr. After many great losses, &c. (1 p.)—1609, Cal. April. Amandus Polang or Polansdorf to Sir J. Harrington, K.B. (3 pp. Latin.) Italian sonnet "sopra una bella mendicante." Then follow copies of many poems, English, Latin, and Italian.

Quarto, 44 leaves. Diary of the siege of Buda, 15 June 1686. Begins, Field Marshal Count Stanburgh with the Emperor's foot and a party of horse. Ends, 9 Sept., when he parted from Buda and arrived at Vienna on the 17th. Your most obedient servant Jacob Richards.

Quarto, about 160 pp. 17th century. Italian poetry; canzone and sonnets.

Calvindi Leti Callipædia. Copy of the quarto edition Leyden, sold at Paris, 1655.

8vo., 132 leaves, 17th Century. Treatise of Equity in 29 chapters. 1. Antiquity of Chancery quoad proceedings in Equity.

Quarto, 331 leaves, Greek. Meletii Syrigi Hiero-Monachi responsio ad apologiam fidei Christianæ editam per Cyrillum Constantinopolitanum scripta in nomine Christianorum omnium ecclesiæ orientalis.—In calce libri hæc inscribuntur: Perfectum anno salutis 1640, Constantinopoli; scriptum propria manu mei Meletii Syrigi Hiero-monachi Cretensis.

Folio. Ex dono Johannis Evelyn militis, 15 May 1640. The several notes, precedents, and other things in this book were collected by Mr. Evelyn, that had been one of the six clerks in Chancery, and father of Sir John. Jo. Finch, C.S.

fo. 1. The Court of Chancery as the King's prerogative royal.

fo. 3. English suits in Chancery.

fo. 14. References and reports.

fo. 19. Cases denied help in Chancery.

fo. 20. Latin pleas in Chancery.

fo. 21. Particular cases of divers years.

fo. 32. The jurisdiction of the Chancery preferred before that of the King's Bench.

fo. 40. The jurisdiction of the Chancery in matters of the Exchequer.

fo. 51. The Court of Wards hath not jurisdiction to stay proceedings in Chancery.

fo. 53. Jurisdiction of Chancery over the Common Pleas.

fo. 55. Jurisdiction of Chancery over the Court of Requests.

fo. 58. The Cinque Ports have no privilege against the authority of the Chancery.

fo. 60. The President and Council of the North, and the President and Council of the Marchers of Wales, and all other inferior Courts are and ought to be subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court of Chancery.

fo. 64. Touching the peers of the realm answering in Chancery upon oath. (44 instances of it.)

fo. 67. A note by the hand of and signed by Jo. Finch, 29 Nov. 1629, on the subject of peers answering on oath.

fo. 68. Arguments exhibited by Lord Keeper Sir Nicholas Bacon in parliament proving that noblemen's persons are attachable for contempt committed in the Court of Chancery, &c.

fo. 69a. Collection of the proceedings and resolutions concerning the attachment of the persons of Barons of Parliament.

fo. 83. Touching appeals from the Admiralty of the Cinque Ports. 5 Car. Thomas Stone v. John Jacob. Franklyn v. White, 42 Eliz. Finch answered for the authority of the Chancery. Thus the disputes ended for that time between the Duke of Lenox, Lord Warden, and me, neither was anything one way or the other done during my having the Great Seale.

8vo. Office of the Chancery. 39 chapters. The same as one above but longer: the 2d chapter being of the Master of the Rolls.

Quarto, 17th century. That a supersedeas for the good behaviour under the Great Seal ought to be obeyed by the Justices of the King's Bench.—First it is plain by 21 Edw. IV. 40.—Some notes and observations upon the statute of Magna Carta, cap. 9., and other statutes concerning the proceedings in the Chancery in cases of Equity and conscience.—Notes and observations on the Statutes of Provisors and Premunire concerning the proceedings of the Chancery and other Courts of Equity.—A collection of Cases in Chancery from Richard II. to end of Elizabeth. At the end are Placita, temp. Edw. III.

Quarto. Reports Mich. 1650—Hil. 1651. (146 leaves.)

1. Maynard mova de quasher return de rescous.

Folio, 16th century. Spanish poetry. Religious and romance. (147 leaves.)

Several volumes of Spanish prose; religious and medical, 16th century.

Many volumes of law reports, note books, and commonplace books of Sir John Finch and W. Finch.

Square folio, parchment, 13th or 14th century. The Gospels in Greek. Introduction to the Eusebian Canon; and the Canon under 10 arches in 5 pages, in red. The heading to Matthew's Gospel is in gold in a beautiful broad border; and the first page is in gold letters: the capital letters and marginal notes half through Matthew are in gold. There is a coloured picture of each Evangelist; that of Matthew is damaged. Over each of the 4 pictures is a miniature from the life of Christ.

12 Car. 25 Aug. A letter beautifully gilt and ornamented from Charles II. to Sultan Mahomet Han announcing the recall of Sir Thomas Bendysh, Kt. and Bart., as Ambassador, and appointing Sir Heneage Finch Earl of Winchelsea, Viscount Maidstone, &c. &c. to be Ambassador.

1671, Bill in 10 brief sheets of paper for a general Pardon. Signed by the King at the top, and by Arlington at the foot. 22 April. 23 Car. II.

1670, Petition of George Lord Berkeley of Berkeley to the King. He conceives he is not in such place of precedence as a baron and peer in Parliament and other assemblies of his peers as of ancient times did belong to his ancestors. Prays that he may be admitted to make proof of his claim. Signed, "Berkeley."

At the Court, 16 Dec. 1670, the King refers it to the Committee of the Lords in Parliament. "Arlington." Indorsed "Read, 19 Dec. 1670."

Draft of Lord Berkeley's petition to the King for his place in this present Parliament above and before the Lord Lawarr. He states the grant of the honour of Berkeley by Henry II., the entail on Henry VII. by William Marquis of Berkeley, whereof the honour was in the Crown until the death of Edward VI. That Sir Maurice, summoned to Parliament in 14 Henry VIII. sat as puny baron, and on the death of Edward VI. Henry Berkeley, nephew and heir of Maurice was under age. That since he came of age there have been minorities of the Lords Berkeley and Delawarr, and partly that 2 of the Lords Lawarr were living in Virginia, there has been no proper opportunity for any of the Lords Berkeley to exhibit their claim until now. Prays to be allowed to make proof of his claim, and have the place of his ancestors before the entail.

1671, April 14. Order that the House will hear the counsel of Lord Delawarr against Ld. Berkeley's claim on the 2d Monday of the next meeting of Parliament after the recess now at hand. The House agreed that nothing should prejudice Lord Audley's claim to precedence, he being shortly to go beyond sea.

1670, Sept. 16. Council Order with Seal, signed Edw. Walker. Whereas Francis Smith of the parish of St. Clement Danes has sold scandalous pamphlets, and this day appears at the Board, he is ordered to enter into a recognizance of 100*l.* to appear at the next Quarter Sessions for Middlesex to answer the Attorney-General.

1670, Sept. 23. Whereas by Order of the 19th of August last the Attorney-General was required to issue a quo warranto against the Stationers' Charter, and the Company representing to the King certain Orders made by them in Hall upon propositions offered them by the Surveyor of the Press in order to better suppressing of unlicensed books and pamphlets. Ordered that Mr. L'Strange meet some persons appointed by the Company, who together are to consider and settle a method for suppressing seditious and unlicensed books and pamphlets, and report the issue thereof to the Board. In the meantime the Attorney-General is not to proceed.

Mr. LeStrange's examination concerning "The Rehearsal Transposed," [Transposed?] taken by Secretary Coventry, Jan. 23, 1672. (2 pp.) Signed "Roger L'Strange." He did not know or hear of the book until the first impression was distributed, and that inquiring of one Brome, a bookseller, about it, he told LeStrange that it was printed for Pinder, who owned the thing, and said, if the book were questioned there were those would

G. H.
FINCH,
Esq.

justify it and bring him off." Before he could meet with Pinder there were 2 sheets of a second impression seized at the press by Mr. Meern, one of the Company of Stationers, and Pinder came to Lestrangle and told him of it, and that the Earl of Anglesy desired to speak with him. Lestrangle went to Lord Anglesy at his house in Drury Lane, when the Earl spoke to him in the presence, and as he believes in the hearing of Pinder to this effect: "Look you, Mr. Lestrangle, there is a book come out (the Rehearsal Transposed), I presume you have seen it. I have spoken to his Majesty about it, and the King says he will not have it suppressed; for Parker has done him wrong, and this man has done him right, and I desired to speak with you to tell you this; and since the King will have the book to pass, pray give Mr. Pinder your license to it that it may not be printed from him. Lestrangle replied, Since it was his Majesty's pleasure he would not meddle to interrupt it, but there were some things not fit to be licensed, viz., the Roman Emperor receiving a dagger, p. 244; the Wisdom of the King and Parliament Exposed, p. 310. The Earl took the book, and agreed with Lestrangle, and advised him to alter them, letting the body of the work remain. Lestrangle said he did not like to tamper with other men's copies without the privacy and allowance of the author. The Earl said he could not say anything of the author, but those alterations might be made without him. So Lestrangle took leave of the Earl and departed with Pinder, who asked Lestrangle to give him a note of signification to the printers what direction the Earl had given him from his Majesty concerning the book; which he (Lestrangle) did. The next work was to read over the book, which was done, all but 2 or 3 sheets in the presence of Pinder, to whom Lestrangle declared it was intended only to save his propriety and not to authorise the publication of it. Lestrangle's first exception was to the bottom of the title page, "Printed by the assigns of John Calvin, &c." and he changed and struck out several sharp reflexions upon Bishop Land and Dr. Parker, and others also of a more general prospect: then he gave his license to the book, which being signed by a Warden of the Company and delivered to the Clerk to enter it according to custom for the benefit of the proprietor, and he refusing, Lestrangle wrote to him at the instance of Pinder to know why, saying he disliked the thing as much as anybody, but being overruled he expected the Company's officer should likewise conform. Then Pinder told him the Earl had sent for one of the Wardens and the Stationers' clerk about it, and if he did not receive satisfaction the Earl would bring the matter before the King and Council, and got Lestrangle to go with him (Pinder) to the Earl who was ill of the gout. The Earl talked of the methods of the Company in the matter of licenses and entries and directed a more particular enquiry. Lestrangle asked the Earl to give him a note to that effect. The Earl wrote. The letter is annexed:

Lestrangle says the book was not printed according to the corrections and emendations of the copy licensed by him, and so in equity not imputable to the licenser. And whas the first licence being withdrawn a second was desired by Pinder upon another title page, the license was granted expressly under the limitations of the former, and with condition of applying that second title page to the former corrected copy, which Pinder promised should be done.

1672, Jan. 25. Deposition of Pinder about it.

1673, June 18. Order in Council signed "Robert Southwell" The King orders that Sir Heneage Finch, Kt. and Bart., A. G., prepare a Proclamation forbidding any to print any book without a license first had according to Act of Parliament in that behalf; and that the license be printed and placed before the book. And that the Attorney-General do next Term exhibit an Information in the King's Bench against Dr. Lewis de Moulin for writing a treasonable and seditious book, Petrus hunc filii, and against Thomas Milbon who printed it, and cause them to be prosecuted therein.

1691, Oct. 21. Copy Instructions to Sir Ralph Delaval, Vice-Admiral of the Blue Squadron.

A packet of letters addressed to the Honourable Dr. Finch in 1720 and 1721 from Mr. Stanhope at Whitehall, V. A. Balagnier at Helsingborg and London, John Balagnier, and Mr. Whitworth, and copies of letters by M. de Launay and Mr. Stanhope.

I must be permitted to return thanks to Mr. Finch for his kind hospitality at Burley-on-the-Hill.

FERD. J. HOLWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPT OF GEORGE EDWARD FRERE, Esq., OF ROYDON HALL, CO. NORFOLK.

G. E.
FRERE,
Esq.

Mr. Frere possesses the originals of the 3rd and 4th volumes of the Paston Letters, and 95 others unpublished, but of small interest. Mr. Gairdner has given slight notes of them in his recent edition of the Paston Letters. I have noted two or three below. There are many letters of Philip Gawdy, temp. Elizabeth and James I.; he writes from London to his father and mother, and sister, and tells Court and foreign news: notices Sir Francis Drake, Lord Leicester, and the Queen's visits to various noblemen. He tells his sister the fashions of dress. Afterwards he writes to his brother, from sea, on board the "Defiance" and the "Revenge." In 1594, he mentions Dr. Lopez being racked and executed. It seems that he was once a prisoner at Lisbon, but got release on undertaking to ransom one Matheo de Frias, a prisoner to Sir Walter Raleigh, who valued him at 500*l.* or else pay a sum of money. He mentions the execution of Pendry for writing of Martin Marprelate, and the Queen's anger at Sir Anthony Shirley and Sir Nicholas Clifford having accepted the Order of St. Michael; he alludes to Lord Montague being imprisoned for baptizing his own child; and mentions Antonio Perez being with the Earl of Essex at Essex House, the Spaniards in Ireland, and Essex's disgrace. At the accession of James he alludes to the money spent to obtain knighthood, and the lavish creation of knights; and in 1605 the King's regulations as to taking the oath of supremacy. He tells how the King refused to notice Lady Raleigh and her son, who were petitioners. There are frequent notices of tiltings.

In the 16th century are a few letters to the Pastons. There are many letters to and from Robert, Earl of Yarmouth; they supplement the information given by a like class in Sir Henry Ingilby's collection.

A letter in 1682 shows the strong feeling in Chester in favour of the Duke of Monmouth. In January 1683, there was a fair on the Thames, and a great call of serjeants, whose costumes and doings are described. A letter by Roger L'Estrange says that the press of Otes's business lay wholly upon his hands. In the early part of 1685 a letter by Chudleigh, our minister at the Hague, suggests that the person to whom he writes should seize the Duke of Monmouth and convey him to England.

Philip Gawdy, of Clifford's Inn, to his father, Bassingborne Gawdy, Esq., at West Harling, and to his mother.

1579, Oct. 19. To his father.

1579, Nov. f. To his father.

[1581], April 7. To his mother, Anne Gawdy The only newes which shaddoweth, and as it wer darkneth all the rest, is of the Frenchmen's commyng over, which althowghe it be as common with you as with us, yet it is not so certeyne there as it is heere, which as it is somewhat uncertayne when they shall come first to the court, by reason of so many sondry fals report, yet the last that I hear was that they wold be heare as upon Monday or Tuesday next. Sir Robert Jermin, with both the Ladyes, willed me to remember their commendacions both to my father and you. Sir Dru Drury . . . in like manner. I had thought to have entreated you to have desired my father to remember his promyse which he made, concernyng playing of the lute I have been mervelously trubled with the common dysease of payne of the eyes for which, indeed, I durst not much look on a booke, but only tend playing of the lute [1581], April 12. To his father He mentions his cousin Woolmer The Frenchmen landed at Dover this last night, and so comming on as tyme will gyve the leave. And every gentleman now laboreth to goe beind one another. But I am like to ruffle still in myne old apparrell, and make the frenchmen beleewe that it is all new, bycause I am sure none of them have sene it before.

1581, May 30. To his father.

[1581], June 26. To his father Because I thought yow wold looke to heare somewhat of the state of our chamber and our playng in yt, thus muche bothe my brother and I can certeynly say, that we wer admnytted thorunto by Mr. Sergeant Flowerdew his meanes before our commyng upp. But our confirmacion for the same we wrought with the payment of our purses, and yet not like to have possession hereof before the next terme, until such tyme as Mr. Seargeant Hutton goeth to his chamber at Seargeant's Inne, in whose

G. E.
FREERE,
ESQ.

chamber Mr. Pigcott is likely to succede. Then the loosyng that hys olde chamber I hoope shall leave us to gayne it.—(So he says they as yet keep their old lodging, where, tho' they cannot study much, they save expense.)

May 8, Clifford's Inn. To Robt. Rowllton. This is a letter of explanation and slight remonstrance to Rowllton, who had mistakenly told certain things to the writer's father and mother.

[158-], Feb. 8. Philip Gawdy to his mother . . . I do every morning use the bricke and wormwood as a remedy agaynst all pestilence and infection that may happen to the body . . . The news touching my Lord of Burgene was direct a mere fiction and a devyse by lewde persons almost in all places in England; for beside his truthe in the cause he is at home at his own house very sicke, and as it is thought very lately deceased. There was a great brute all northwarde that London was burnt, and many suche other rumors raysed; but there is ordre taken that there shall be punishment for any that shall happen the lyke hereafter. Muche uncerteyne newes touching the Queen of Skottes, in that she should have hidd herself on the topp of a chymney, and so by that means not being found, that they should have made presently great search for her, and then she myght have escaped. It is muche bothe thought and expected that she is executed. But the truth is not directly known. There was 2 or 3 traytors taken very laityly, but it is so lately that I cannot tell you what there names wer, but as it was said they did bear the names of gentlemen. There were two taken that wold have burnt my Lord of Leycestre his house at London, and his house at Waynsted. I was with my oncle Seargeant at this present daye . . . I do meane to wryte to my brother the next weeke.

[1587], June 13, London. P. Gawdy to his father . . . Your seale is done . . . with the creste and the coots [coats]. I have sent you a letter from L. Willoughby. I pray, sir, wrong me not uppon the cause of the writing of the letter, for I protest to you it is the least parte of my desier desert, but I assure you, sir, she hath shewed me wonderful great friendship and kyndnes, and what a wonderfull care she hathe bothe of me and my men that they shall not be any charge to me. And she maketh such great rekonynge of my [company] here, as besides she desireth not the company [of any] other gentlemen. I talked with my oncle about [it and he] doth not mislike it in respect of some . . . a man might gayne; for without both his p . . . allowance I wold not willingly undertake. I cold not in modesty deny my Lady upon it to be allways at your direction.—He asks his father to decide.—You may well gesse at the cause that keapes me here in England, otherwyse I shud have had greate desier to have sene forayne places . . . I must toward the end of the terme answer my lawe cause by the othe of the witnesses, and I doubt not but to dyspatch it frankly enough . . .

1587, Oct. 27, London. To his father.— . . . There is certyne generall speach of the King of Spaine's preparation of a great navy, but whether no man knoweth; it is supposed to us. Sir William F[itz] Williams hath his patent sealed to go out Lord Deputy into Irelande, with the return of the other. There is a general mustering and a preparation for powder throughout all England. The Quene lay at my Lord Admyrall his howse by Whithall, uppon Wedensday last, and she meaneth to be at White Hall very shortly . . . Let me be remembered to my good brother and his good wyfe, to Captayne Anthony and his servaunt Leeftenant, to whom I have sent a letter from his brother sent from his sister-in-law heare in London.

1587, Nov. 3. To his father.— . . . Touching mine owne and my brother's business at the Temple, I have compounded for us both with very great frendshipp of Mr. Treasurer his parte. The whole of the debt came to about 5*l*, and odd, and I have compounded for him for 4 nobles, and yet 1*l*. of it was for commission for my brothers . . . News of the death of an old frend of all yours, my Lady Frogmorton. Edward Cordell is a very heavy man for his wife, and durst not go to church for fear of laughing.

1587, Nov. 11. To his brother Bassingborne . . . Some speache there is bothe at the Courte and at London, that certeyne commissions shold go over into Flanders about a peace: these that be nomyated be my Lord of Derby, my Lord Colham, Sir James Crafte, and Doctor Dale. But whether any suche newes will hold or no it is very uncerteine. I have sent you downe by these carryars 2 proclamacions in the very pryme. Byside which the Lord Chauncellor uppon Wednesday last used a speache at the Starr Chamber to all such gentlemen as either dwell neare uppon the sea, or else have some other charge for what end that proclamation was set forth. It hath made a great alteration with divers gentlemen that determyned to make their abode heare this Christmas, and have there howses heare ready hyred aforehand . . . Tell my father that my cosin Cook and another of the ushers told me at the Courte that they have assessed him at the Courte according to his request made in his letter . . .

1587, Nov. 16. To his father . . . Being at the Court uppon Sunday last, I saw the making of 2 newe knights, Sir Henry Graye and Sir Horatio Paliveseno. Her Majesty uppon Monday was wonderful mery, to the greate contentment of all good and true harts. She was looked for as this night heare at London, but her coming is now deferred until the morning: there is bothe great preparation for running, and also greate expectation of the same, but how it will fall out you shall heare of hereafter . . . The speache of the going of the Ambassadors doth hold likely to prove very certayne; and uppon Sunday laste there was a newe Commyssioner apoynted by the Counsell to go with the rest, Sir Amys Powlet. There is in the Bill for the Shreves of Norfolk Sir Robert Southwell, Mr. Clement Paston, and Mr. Gresham. It is thought the last nomyated will carry it away. For Suffolk there is Sir William Walgrave, Mr. Jermy, and Mr. Phillipp Tydney. It is said Mr. John Jermin hath taken 2 fearmes of Clement Paston. Mr. Jermy taketh great paynes at the Courte, for surleye lodging may fall out to be badd, and Richmond grene is not very fayre; but it is thought that neither the scaresety of the one nor the foulness of the other will suffer any man to outbydd him. Well, let him have it, he that wynnes gold, let him eate gold, and yet a man may buy gold to deare . . . In this town . . . my Lord Admyrall's men and players, having a devyse in the playe to tye one of their fellowes to a poste, and so to shoote him to deathe, having borrowed their callyvers, one of the player's hands swerved, his piece being charged with bullett missed the fellow he aymed at, and killed a child, and a woman great with child forthwith, and hurt an other man in the head very sore. How they will answer it I do not study . . . I find by this an old proverb verified that newe comes never hurte . . . of fooling . . . Muche uncerteyne newes touching some troubles out of Spayne and out of Scotland, and of some hurtes done by some Skottes uppon the borders of England. The Scottish Ambassadors being at the Court uppon Sunday last seemed not to be acquaynted with any such thing. But it is thought that the going of our Commissioners will make some good end touching some good honourable peace. My Lord of Leycester, by a common report, is expected daily. Sir Thomas Gorge is very lately gone over into Flanders, but unknowne upon what cause.

1587, Dec. 1, London. To his father . . . The shreifs be not yet known, and some saeth that there shold be alteration throughout England, to have more sufficient men. And Sir Drue Drury was nominated for Norfolk. Some news of landing of certyne Spanyards in Ireland, and of ruining of a castle, where they shold have taken Mr. Denny prisoner; but it is very unlike to be true, and yet expected in most places and in the best places. There is great preparation for going to the sea, and many lords and gentlemen meane to take ther parte thereof. The Quene will remove as it is thought this daye, but yet no certeyne ground therof.

1547, Dec. 14. [To his father] . . . I shold bring eggs after apples to tell you of my Lord of Leyster his being at the Court. And yet peradventure yow know not the certeyne tyme of his first arrivall there. He came uppon Fryday last to Margette. And the Sunday following came to the courte that night, before his landing any wher els. Ther came with him to the courte my Lord Audley and Sir Tho. Shyrley, besides one grand prysoner which they make account of; he is a Burgonian, and his ransome is not meanelly prysed. My Lord Willoughby is left cheyfe governor in the Lowe Contreys. My Lord of Leycester before his coming over made 6 knights, by name, Sir Tho. West, Sir Tho. Morgan, Sir Charles Blunt, Sir Hugh Chomeley, Sir Edward Winkfeild, and Sir Frances Knolles. . . . It is thought the Quene's Majestie will remove towards Richmond uppon Thursday next.

[1587], Feb. 9. To his father . . . The Commissioners are gone, and uppon going into Flaunders, where they shall meete with other Commissioners at Ostend. I lay 2 nights at the courte, where I heard a little news. Uppon Sunday last my Lord Mayor made his wyfe a lady, where I heard a very excellent good

G. E.
FREERE,
ESQ.

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

oration from my Lord Chauncer to the Mayor and his brethren . . .

Feb. 2. To his brother Bassingborn Gawdy.

March 13. To his father . . . The Parliament is lyke to continue very long, and the end thereof is not lyke shortly to fall out. It is thought it shall be but proroged . . . I sent last weeke a frayle of fygges, reysous, and allmons.

April 6. To his father . . . My Lord of Comberland, Sir Henry Lee, and Sir Thomas Gorge, did runne at the courte as yesterday the course of the feild. A yonge gentleman toward my Lord of Leycester called Mr. Goldingam was holden in the streate of Mr. Pinchin and an other untill on Fox did very sore hurte him, but being at liberty, he made them all to traverse ther grounds with great expedition.

April 11, London. To his sister . . . I have sent you half an ell of blacke velvett, half a quarter of white satten, and a payre of truncke sleeves . . . For the manner of wearing of their hoods at the courte, some weare cripins, some weare none, some weare sattin of all collors with their upper border, and some weare none. Some one of them weares this day with all theise fashions, and the next day without. So that I fynd nothing more ceirteyne than their uncertaynty . . .

May 9. To his father . . . Some speake of warr, some of pease, but most of the fyrst. My Lord Admyrall and Sir Francis Drake are commanded presently to sea with great preparation, and ther is nine skore sayle made ready to go with them . . . Some uncertayne speeches touching the poysoning of 3 or 4 great kings and princes of late.

[1587], May 19, London. To his mother.

May 21. To his father . . . Sir William Wallgrave and my Lord Windsor had a quarrell, and ended it in the field together; but no blood drawne. Certeyne Jesuits be taken and committed to the Tower. Two lawiers committed to the Fleet the last day of the terme for somewhat to lyberall speeches. Mr. Wyat of the Inner Temple, and Phillipps of the Middle Temple. Captayne Skinke takethe great payne at many feasts which he is bidden. I have bene at some of them.

May 26, London. To his mother . . . Capt. Crosse is come from Sir Francis Drake, and hath brought certein newes that he hath sunke and burned 33 shippes of the King of Spayne, and hath fower more laden with muche wealthe.

June 18, London. To his father . . . Sir Thomas Leyton hath bene of late in Fraunce, and soddynly returned. I talked with him myself and understood the manner of his being there, and the tyme of his tarryance. The King cam to Rone at that very instant with 1,400 horse and 5,000 shott. No lyklyhod but that we are like to have warre as well with Fraunce as Spayne, and joyntly together. It is expected that there should be open warres proclaimed upon the comming home of the Comysioners, which is now somewhat fresh in speache, and ther returne very shortly expected.

Nov. 10. To his brother . . . Davy Gwyn, that did so good service in the Galyas, is sent out of Ireland, and he has remayneth prysoner suspected to be our adversary on the behalf of the Duke of Modena . . . The Quene commeth to Somersett House upon Fryday, and upon Tuesday next she is apoynted to hear a sermon at Powles upon Tuesday come sennight. There is preparation made by Lord Chamberlin for her.

Nov. 16. To his sister Anne.

Nov. 24, London. To his father . . . I now send you doune a cocke, 2 payre of gloves, 2 doz. of payntes, 2 small books for a token; the one of them was gyven me that day that they rann at tilt; divers of them being gyven to most of the lords and gentlemen about the court, and one especially to the Quene. I was commanded with some 2 or 3 more to wayte underneathe the Quene to be employed in messages, where it pleased her Majestie to use me more graciously than I deserved . . . It was Friday at night before the Quene came to my Lord Admyralls: upon Saturday was the running at tilt very well performed, though not so full of devises and so riche as I have sene. My Lord of Essex and my Lord of Cumberland were the cheife that ranne. Mr. Gresham was well commended for the credit of Norfolk. Upon Saturday at night her Majestie lay at my Lord Admyralls, and all Sunday at his charge. Upon Mondaye she went to Mr. Seacreatoryes, wher in the gallery before her going she knighted Mr. John Pagington. That night she cam to my Lord Admyralls agayne and dynded ther upon Tuesday; on Tuesday at night she cam to my Lord Chauncelers, wher she hath bene ever since. Her entertayment hath bene very great ther, bothe for herself and all the trayne, which a number of us hathe very well tasted of. It is thought her Majestie will tarry there yet this sevenight, and . . . at Whitehall . . . My uncle Anthony Gawdy fayled of a letter. Neither have I as yet found any messenger but the hedgehog; and yet I have heard that the hedgehog overcame the hare; and so, the carryar may overrun the post . . . Mr. Jenny is travelled into a damaske goun, and followeth the courte daye and nyght . . . My Lord of Leycester is expected for, and some newes cam out of Flaunders very latly yesternight, but unknowne to any but the best. Some letters hathe bene intercepted of late. The Prince of Parma is come to Dunkerke, but unknown for what com, so suspected for no good to us. As yesterday the Quene going into the gallery made an old knight, Sir Lewes Dyves.

Dec. 8. To his sister Anne . . . You shall receyve all your things, though not at this tyme, but only the stuff for the gowne. Fox can not tell in what manner to patterne it, neither needs it; for I can assure you that both the Quene and all the gentlewomen at the courte weare the very fashion of your cuff taffata goun with an open wind sleve, and suche a cutt, and it is now the newest fashion. For cappes and French hoods I fynde no thing in the world, all what serves (P) els you shall undoubtedly be provided of.

Dec. 8. To his father . . . They (the sheriffs) were prickt at my Lord Chauncelers upon Sunday about 5 of the clocke. Untill which tyme Mr. Jermy and to the very howre was a courtier. And immediately upon it he vanyshed awaie, that I never sawe him since. And yet he went awaye lyke one that had a blew cote without a consyance. For he fayled of a certeyne knyghthood that he expected, and they saye was promysed. I have not known a greater man shreif of Norfolk then now is. The Quene was determyned to have gone to Richmond upon Tuesday last in the afternone. All things wer prepared, and at dinner tyme she altered her mynd to go to Somersett House, whether she went the next morning, and wher she meaneth to remayne some reasonable tyme, at least all this Christmas. The household commeth to Somersett Howse as this very night. Ther is still great preparation touching the going to sea . . . My Lord Admyrall, my Lord Henry Seymor, my Lord Thomas Howard, my Lord Sheifeild, Sir Fraunces Drake, and Sir Robert Southwell, with divers others captaynes and gentlemen. Ther be certayne rumors touching the comming of the Spanyards, but nothing of credit.—He mentions the Bell (inn) in Smithfield . . .

n. d. To his sister Anne . . . Commend me to my loving brother, and if you be at the mariage commend me to Bess Bacon and the husband. I wold have bene glad to have worne the garter. I pray send me word when she shall be married certeynly by writing. Commend me to Mr. Bacon and William Calthorp.

Tuesday, in the morning, London. To his father.—He is going to send some plum trees to his father . . . The L. (Lord Admiral?) and captaynes take there leave upon Sunday at night at prayers tyme. And some at this daye and some to-morrow, and some with as much speed as they may well take ther voyage towards the sea. Ther were divers had many men in a livery very well apoynted upon Sunday at the court to be sene of the Quene at ther going to the Savoy to churche.

n. d. To his sister Anne.—Sends a piece of damask.—The dyer will warrant there shall be no better out of the shopp. I have sent you down 2,000 pipes, 300 of the sort you writt for, and 6,000 of the sort you wrott for in the first bill; the peece of satten; gold thread. I have sent your husband 2 payre of gloves, and you one payre.

June 13, London. To his brother. . . I have sent you doun socks and bands, and have sent my sister her rolle, and sylver buttons. I have sent my father 2 payre of stockings . . . My L[ady] Framlingam saythe she is with chylde. (The writer think it to be an imposture.)—On the back of the letter below the address he writes, "I forgott to mynde you of the deathe of a " great Lady; upon Tuesday last in the forenone my " L[ady] of Oxforde dyed at the Court, and is interred " at Westminster. There is a great funerall a pre- " paring."

June 20, London. To his brother.—He again alludes to Lady Framlingham, and the general opinion that she is not with child. Says that many women in the town had had the like idea concerning themselves; and that Lady Wyndor had been with child these 50 weeks and now they say she is not.—He is pleased to hear that it is proposed that he should make a journey to Flanders.

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

Her journey was sodenly determyned of and she made a sotheyne request to me to enjoye my company.

[1589], Nov. 19. To his brother Upon Son-day last the Quene was at Powles, very honorably wayted uppon; you may imagine there wanted no company . . . The Quene removeth as this day to Grenewich. Serjent Gawdy was yesterday made a Judg of the King's Bench, a thing not much plesing to himselfe. I can not ascertayne you of any other newes.

1590, Oct. 8, Neavington. To his brother.—I have not been in London this month, but 3 miles from London.

Monday. (To his brother.) Writes briefly till he can write from Plymouth.—How Sir Richard Greinfeild and Lord Thomas have sought for me I will not tell you . . . The Quene hath commanded all possible speade to be made. Sir Richard and other Captaynes will presently go to the . . . with whom I will go; and so away as fast as the shippes will fall downe. I have already bought my armor and targett, the very fellowes to my Lord Thomas's and Sir Richard's. My apparrell will be made to night; what els is necessary I do provide April 3. From H.M. ship the Revenge. (To his brother.) On the other side of the page is a letter dated 4 April from the Revenge, signed by William Langham:—telling Bassingborne Gawdy that he (Langham) and P. Gawdy are companions, and that the weather has been very bad, and that he is sure that P. Gawdy will answer or surpass the expectations of his friends.

April 24. Aboard H.M. ship the Defiance. (To his brother.)—Has been at sea ever since leaving Plymouth.—All our adventures and journales it were to tedious to sett downe particularly. Besides I keepe a note of every daye's action . . . From Plimmouth we sayled the whole fleete together 2 dayes, when our ship the Revenge lost my Lord and the whole fleete. They all put in at Famouth, being dryven thether by the extremty of the weather. We tackt about to the northward and lay uppon the coast of France, between Sylla and Ushin, where we did endure very sore weather as might be abiden at the sea. We spent both our mastes, but by God's grace they were espyed in good tyme and strengthened with fishes, wolding and calking, and now they be in very good plight. When we came uppon the Northern Cape we descryed 5 sayle, whereof 4 were of Hamborough, and one Frenchman was of Newhaven, whom Sir Richard Greinfeild toke into his shipp, and placed a master and of his own men in her, because we were alone and had lost all our company. Of the rest of the Flemmings we borrowed some vytayle of them, for other good thing had they not any, but only salte, and gave them the passe home. Afterward we sayled along the coste of Spayne in the bay of Portingale. When abouts the Burlings uppon the 18th April we descryed in our topmast 7 or 8 sayle, we were alone, and our small frenche flybote; we supposed one of them by the hugenes to be either a Suenke or an Armado; we prepared ourselves to fight, and made all things ready. When we tackte about and came round of them all, we founde that some of them were of our own fleete, and might easily perceyve that they had this great shipp in chase. There were two pinisses, the lion's whelps, and the Delight shott some 5 or 6 shot, and she never budged; but presently uppon our coming in she shoke her topsayle and all other sayles, and yelded herself to Sir Richard Greinfeild, who placed a master and some of his owne men in her, and we toke out some men out of the rest of the shippes and exchanged Flemmings for them. But she fell out to be a hulke of Lubecke, a marvelous huge one, of 1,000 tons laden all with great mastes and deale, which falleth out to be a very good pryse; for it is the King of Spaynes; and we fownde a Portingale pylate which had the King's letter to pass them from Lysbone to the Groyne for preparation for his shippes. She is valued to be worth 10,000*l*. We ther mett with 7 of our shippes which cam from my Lord that morning in this chase. When we were in the height of the Southern Cape, called Cape St. Vyncent, we descryed 5 sayle, whom we did beare withall, and found them to be my Lord and fower other sayle with him. We hayled my Lord and made great joy to meete him, and that day we rann a westward course of the Cape, and have lyen ever since at the Hull tarring for some of our shippes that be lost. My Lord and Sir Richard presently determined to send home the pryse, and hath sent home one John Badder, that was Sir Robert Southwell's man, who promysed one faythfull delivry of this letter at your house in Norfolk My Lord sent for me this day to be with him I honor him much and have great cause to love him . . . There is not a good alle-house within 20 leagues of us. We are going presently to the Islands, and whether further as we shall have intelligence. There is already 4 sail come home to St. Lucas in Andalusia laden with ten thousand millions six weeks before our coming. I thanke God we have founde some knaks but yet no money, but some pieces of eight, and very few of them . . . I have already gotten a fyne card and other tooles belonging to navigation. (Asks his brother to look at a map and see how the first point after they past the coast of France that they touches was Cape Finisterre the Northern Cape, then they came in height of the burlinges, next in height of the rocke Castecales and the Groyne, then they bore uppon Cape Pitther, and lastly came to Cape St. Vincent). And just by Cape St. Vincent is Cape Saere, betwixt which two there standeth a fryery and a castle of the King's called the Blockhowse. We were within some three leagues of the shore, and since we have runne a westward corse some 30 leagues towards the Iland It is thought and all but known that 2 of our shippes ar caste away. The Mone and the Disdayne in the fowle weather. These seas that we be now in ar allmoste as sweet as a ryver in the contrye. . . . Recommend me to Sir Nicholas Bacon and his good Lady; to Munn because I love his sweete nature and condition. Nann Bacon hath cause to love me, for I have ever wished her as hy fortune as any woman ever deserves . . . My Lord doth now promyse me that the hulke shall stay all night; if it doth I will come uppon my oncle Anthony with some lines.—P.S. It was our fortune to meet with this hulke agayne uppon May day, being an unweildy vessell, abought midway betwixt St. Michele's and the Cape; there hath not anything since happened worthy the writing, but only this; we sunke a carvell wher we only saved 60 jars of oyle, the men, and a bushel of letters which they called of intelligence to the Ilands to meete with the fleete, coming home whether we are now going. The most of us lyke lyons that have beene almost famyshed for want of praye or rather lyke a beare robbed of her whelppes.

July 6. H.M. shipp the Revenge. (To his brother.) . . . Since my last wryting we have had some adventures. We watred at Floures, and I saw the dolphin corse the flying fish, whereof I saw one flye as far as your yong partriches will do at the first flight. We have good shippes with us both of her Majesties and otherwyse.—Speaks of his good usage from Sir Richard and Capt. Lahorne, and asks to be remembered to Sir Charles Framlingam and to the good lady his wife, to Sir Nicholas Bacon and his lady. To his cousin Munn he will write 6 lines if he has leysure. He expresses himself as pleased with sea life.

Feb. 9, Castle of Lyshborne. (To his brother.) It seems from this letter that he was a prisoner in Lisbon Castle, and that others from the same ship, of better condition than he, had been sent back to England. But it had been reported that he was son of the chief judge of London, or else of the Lord Mayor of London, or else of some other noble house, and they demanded in exchange a Captain called Drogis Daller. He asks his brother to apply to Lord Thomas on his behalf. (Probably he thought that the letter would be read by the governor, and in order to make him believe that he was prisoner of little consequence and of a poor family, he writes, "I know not if you can safely travell out of your howse or no, or whether you have compounded with your creditors, but if you cannot, ride yourself to London," &c. He alludes to his father having died two years since.)

[1593], May 3. To his brother. Bassingborne Gawdy, Esq., Hye Shreif of the countye of Norfolke I was yesterdaye with my oncle at the serjants feaste, and before then he knew not that my sister was deade. . . . There was at the feaste my Lord Keeper and my Lord of Bukhurst, and Sir Jhon Foscue, and first I should have said my Lord of Canterbury of the Counsayle, my Lord of Rutland, my Lord of Bedford, my Lord Stafford, my Lord Shandowes, my Lord North, with such a multitude of knights and gentlemen, ladies, and gentlewomen innumerable; Serjent Danyell was ancient of the call; there were 9 besydes, a very great feast The Quene's Majesty is going a progress; first she commethe to Lambethe, from thence she gothe to Wimbleton, from thence to Sir Jhon Foscues by Hampsted, from thence to Highgate wallis his house, from thence to Tebolds, and so some say forthe towards Cambridge. There be no knights of the Garter new chosen as yet, but ther wer fowre nominated, my Lord of Southampton, my Lord Keeper, my Lord

G. E.
FERRE,
ESQ.

G. E.
FEEBE,
ESQ.

Thomas, and my Lord Willoubye of Ersby, but it took no effect.

[1593, n. d., Hengrave. My Lady Drury have leare this last night . . . No newes, but that my Lady Clifton is well recovered, and in token of thanksgiving danced all this last night as long as she was able to go. My Lord of Essex is at Royston.

[1593.] From my Lord of Shrewsbury's house. (To his brother.) . . . Palgrave cam to me the very next morning after my coming from the Court, where I remained some 4 or 5 dayes upon some speciall busines . . . There is a Parliament called in Fraunce where ambassadors from all Christendome will be. Sir Robert Sydney is for England. There is newes newly come to the Courte that ther are 5,000 Spanyards embarked at Fardle for Britayne. The Quene's Majestie herself satt in counsaile upon Tuesday last in my Lord Chamberlins chamber about theise and some other specyall affayres. The rest that sat was my Lord of Essex, my Lord Admyrall, my Lord of Buchurst, Sir Robert Cyclic, Sir Jhon Foscue, and Dr. Thomas Wolley. Ther wer non other, for my Lord Tresorer is still at Tebolds. My Lord Keeper went home upon Monday. My Lord Chamberline hath gott the gowte in one of his toes. He useth me well and you very kindly. Sir Arthur Hinniges gave him a very hy flying tassell, and was the most unfortunate asse to be shreife that ever was, and my Lord told me as much, and every page of the Courte can tell therof . . . You are beholding to my Lord Admyrall and my Lord Chamberline, and you shall hold them, for they be worthy therof. Kelly is delyvered out of pryson and restored to his former estate, and maketh gold as fast as a henn will cracke nuttes. Jhon Darcy, with the moll in his face, is dead of the plage, and a brother of his had a plage sore. Sir Rowland Seyward is newly dead, and hath left a very sweet wydowe, but yet somewhat grene. My brother Darcy at Tolson is deade, and hath left his wyfe 400*l*. a year and much weathe besydes; the land to descend to his 3 daughters. I will not tell you how I speede in my concealed business till I come myself . . . P.S. I have sent you the bill of the plage.

[1594], Dec. 7. (To his brother.) . . . I have boughte the (three?) a saddle with the furniture correspondent, no other than my Lord of Essex, Sir Charles Blunt, Sir Roger Williams, and such other cavilleers at this howse do use. The footclothe bought of a clothe dyed out of a blew blankett which never will change collar for any weather, girded not after the old fashion but the newest in request, and most profitable; for lace therewith is Aldermanlyke, and such it will have upon every taynter. Thy hose I have bought of the mallard collar. It will hold well a perfecte wynter collar pained and rouled just according to the fashion. I have sent you a hatt, only ther wanteth a hattband. . . . it shall come with myself. I have sent my well beloved syster all suche thinges as she requested, her fann with the handle, not stale any kynde of waye; a payre of knyves; a vardingale of the best fashion; her gold thread her heare call (hair-caul?); her pumpes; and in short there wanteth nothing she spake for, but only a thing I should have had of Mr. Munjoye, but he fayled me very wrongfully according to his promyse; but it is coming. . . . I have sent my heyre and Charles two daggers, and yet he forbidded me to kysse his Cate I was one day at the cort, where I cold not staye longe, by reason of my busines. I was talked withal by some ladyes of the Pryvy Chamber and by many others how thyne owne credit made the (thee) shreife, and my Lord Keeper's ayde and her Majesties specyall owne lyking and commendacion. Beleve not the undershreife so much in all thinges . . . his speaches did the rather a penworthe of hurte than a hallpenworthe of good. My Lord of Essex told me of you and how you wer shreife, but not a worde of his letter. Sir Arthur Henningham made great suit to prefer himself, afterwards Phillip Woodhouse and Mr. Knyvett before the I am going this night to the corte with Tom Forman, who is now a buing (buying) in Southwarke a caste of tassels; he wanteth nothing but a good cyterne to his voyce. I spake not yet with the Quene, but by God's grace I meane to do. My Lord Tresorer is perfectly recovered; he hath bene at his cort at Tebolds this sennight. Great speaches of chosing the King of Fraunce of the Order of the Garter. My Lord of Essex was this day in London. . . . I only want a velvet cloke of the best fashion. . . . Send me that by these carryars that thou canst procure me that cloke. . . . I have not yet spoken with my Lord Chief Justice or Judge Fenner; they be neither in towne. . . . I have sent to Mr.

Lownde a letter hereinlosed that came from Mr. Riptons; his wyfe hath had a great fall and broke her rumpe.

[1594], Friday morning. (To his brother.) . . . Your jerkin shall be very fayre and good as any man weareth. All the rest shall not myslyke, I hope, but yf anythinge be amysse, blame not me but Judas that beareth the bagg, for in many thinges he controlleth my judgment and claymeth a later direction then I had. . . . When your man came I was at the Court. Those thinges I gave to my Lord Chamberline and my Lord Admyrall wer very hyly well taken, and they wer the first they had yet to heare. I had many thankes and many kynde promyses. . . . I was with my Lord Chief Justice upon my first coming to towne, and then he knew not the just tyme of the assyses, which now is apoynted upon Monday come three weekes, and he gyes you wonderful good woordes, and only for your sake, he saythe agaynst his will, the assyses be at Thetforde, but never hereafter shall. Sir Fraunces W. is going over, and shall have a regiment of 3,000, half the Quene's pay, and half the States'. Dr. Lopes hath bene often examyned, and dyvers tymes upon the racke; he confesseth all thinges very franckly; besides there be two or three Irishmen committed to the Tower about very great and capital treasons. Sir Nicholas Bacon is still in towne. Sir William Woodhouse, Sir Robert Drury, and he and I supped together the last night. Sir William Woodhouse promysed to deliver my commandaceons to you.

[1593], Feb. 22, London. (To his brother.) Thanks for his brother's letter and advice, and he promises to amend; says he will be with his brother two or three days before the time.—I must go to the Courte tomorrow without fayle. I attend upon a mourning saynte. I wolde gladly clothe her all in grene. Your sturgen of the best kynde I colde not send downe by theis carryars. It shall be at Thetforde next Sunday without fayle, the daye you meete the judges. . . . Benitt the Genenes footeman is committed to the Tower. He hath confessed upon his examination that that he hath bene acquainted with many treasons this seven year. I do not forget you to my Lord of Sussex.

[159, May 1.] (To his brother.) After writing of last letter by Valyant, immediatly within one houre ther comes a pursivaunte to me with a letter from the whole bodye of the counsaile, I being ready to wayte of my Lord Tresorer aboute the prysoner heare in England; so that presently I made my replie before them syting at my Lord Treasurers. When I came before them, ther I understood that one Mr. Harbroun (who was ambassador in Turkeye) in the behalf of Lucas Phelix Henricos Master, the marchant that remayned bounde for me at Lyshborne, by reason of some late letters he receyved from him, putes up to the Counsaile one supplication in the behalf of Lewcas Phelix, how that he cam bownde for me, either to returne such a prysoner, named Mathias de Fries, or els so much money, neither of which was as yet by me performed, in which respect the tyme of 9 monthes being expired, he was imprysoned and enforced to answer the monye. Besides Mr. Harbroun puts up an other supplication in the behalfe of the men that remayne in the Portugall gallyes, with all ther names to the number of 38, that by reason I had not returned this man, or the monye, they all remayned prysoners still in the gallyes, and that upon my sending over I shold have sent to this Dutche merchant Lewcas Phelix my Lord Admyrall his passe for his and ther safe arryvall here in England; which passe I procured and have gotten two monthes synce, and shall be sent on my dispatche of Henrico. I was demanded by the whole body of the Counsaile why I neither had dispatched the one or the other. I answered that I undertoke to ransom one Mathias de Fries, being in Sir Walter Rawley's custodye, who valeded his prysoner at 500*l*., and my estate was farr unable to redeeme him; then they answered me that upon the payment of 200*l*. I was dyscharged, and told me that I had fownde extraordinary frendship and good use that none els had fownde, and yet all others had discharged ther ransom that wer prysoners besyde. I answered that I was a younger brother, my estate but meane, and neverthesse I wold performe in this case to the uttermoste of my power; wherupon the whole Counsaile used me very honorably and in all good manner, and sayd that they wold all do me as much pleasure as they might; and sent one with me to Sir Walter Rawley to know how he wold deal with his prysoner, and what charges he had bene at with him. There he sent a note, how he had bene prysoner ever since the Spanishe Armado had bene upon our seas,

G. I.
FREE
ESQ.

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

which is fyve yeares past; he sett down for his dyett 20*l.* a yeare, for his apparrell, 10*l.* a yeare, which amounteth to 150*l.* besides the ransome and valewe of his bodye and his keeper's fees. On returne herof my Lord Treasurer told me that it was farr the better course to paye the monye and afterward to make some suite to her Majestie for recompence, which he of his honor told me that he wold do all that in him lay to further; and beside he told me that neither her Majestie or els the whole body of the Counsaile cold pleasure me any whitt at all in this. Wher upon good consideracion I promysed to them that within 7 dayes I wold discharge it; although it wer to the utter undoing of my whole estate, hoping thereafter of ther honorable ayde when I shold have occasion to use them, which they all faythfully promysed, and in especyall my Lord Treasurer, upon whom my cheif hope dependeth. So I was upon very good termes dysmysed. I went presently to David le Mer, Lewcas Phelix's father, heare in England, who only in respect that he desireth to pleasure me is contente to take your bonde for the mony to be payde a yeare hence, which shall be in all 200*l.* (The interest was to be 20*l.*, i. e., 10*l.* per cent., but Philip says that he will pay that and not have it in the bond, and he hopes also to pay the 200*l.*)—This Dutchman, David le Mer, presently upon my discharge of this matter will gyve me a suite to prefferr which shall seame very light and yet be of reasonable good valewe, and, assure yourselve, it shall not be idely followed. . . . David le Mer hath heare sent a Dutchman, a skryvener, whom I spake withall last night; this man is but only a messenger, and sent in the behalfe of David le Mer, and you never had dealings with an honest man than this David le Mer, for at the yeares ende you maye commaunde him in any reasonable manner. (Asks his brother to use despatch because he has to give his own discharge to the Council). . . . Upon the returne of this messenger I meane not to sturr from the courte till I heare of some good for myself, and forthwith to repayre into the contrye to lyve with you. News: Mr. Pendry is executed for writing of Martin Marprelate. I do not muche rejoyce therein.

[1594], May 2. (To his brother.)—His uncle Anthony told him that the Lord Chief Justice had much commended Bassingbourne Gawdy. . . . "Upon St. George's day I was at court, wher ther was a great presse of people. Very fewe knyghts of the Garter. The Quene's Majestie went processyon, and my Lord Treasurer and Mr. Treasurer went not by reason ther legges served not them very well. I dined that day and supped at Mr. Treasurer's, who had his dyett upp into his chamber. My Lord of Essex was very well manned, and a great multitude of them. The Quene is very angry with Sir Anthony Shirley and Sir Nicholas Clyfford for taking the Order of St. Michill, and hath commaunded that they shall send the order backe again; First, bycause they tooke it without her pryvyty; next bycause they toke the whole othe, and one part therof is to defende the masse while they lyve, which my Lord of Lester and the Duke were dyspensd withall when they toke it. Mr. Comesby that kepeth that office touching the Commyssion of the subsidy telleth me that no shreife can be in that Commyssion, for ther is one clause in the statute that the shreif must be ready ever to ayde the Commyssioners. . . . Much lamentation for the death of my Lord of Darby, and some speaches that he shold be poysoned. My Lady synce hath bene delyvered of a sonne, but it was untymely and put her in great daunger. The yonge erl, his brother, is now at London, with whom I have bene, an old acquaintance of myne. Ther is very freshe newes from my Lord of Essex, his mouthe that ther shold presently go 10,000 for Brytaine. This day is the great feast of the Serjants; I am apoynted to go thither with my oncle." . . . Assuer yourself, Dr. Atslo hath done a great care of her (i. e., his sister), and is newly deade himselfe.

1593, June 7. (To his brother.) I am extremly sorrye I have not deberved that tittle you wold have gyven me; but it was uppou an extraordinary event, for the man that ransomed me in Lisbone is now in England, and by my meanes hath receyved very especyall favors, and I had reason to feast him that fetched me out of so many myseryes or els all the world wold have condemned me. . . . The Quene is now in her progresse: she hath bene at Lambeth, at Wimbleton, and at Osterley; she dynes this daye at Mr. Peynes, and comes to night to Hygate, from thence to Mr. Warrens, and so to Tebolds, to stay without any wemyne. This day Lopus was executed and two Portugalls more at Tyborne. My Lord Mountague is prysoner at my Lord Keeper his howse for chrisning his own chyld himself; he told his father, my Lord of Buchurst, when it was done that there needed send for no preist, for it was done by himself; he durst not keepe it from the Quene, and so is under command in that howse.

[1593, indorsed], Aug. 29, Grenewich. (To his brother.) . . . Ther be two committed to the Tower, Yorke and one Williams; the first being the sonne of Sir Edward Yorke, that dwelt in Ireland; they have confessed very foul matters of treason, and that dyvers others have sworne to do that which I hope to se them all hanged before one heare of her Majestie shall fall; they were sent over by Gurdon, captayne of Callys. On Sondaie last ther was a great myschaunce of the burning of the storehouse at Chatham; the losse is great, and hevyly taken. . . . My Lady Bridget Manners is sent for back to the courte, and it is thought will lye by the heeles uppou the dyspleasure of her marriage without leave. The court removeth not now at all. Ther was a very fowle murder lately donne in London by an alehouse keeper; the tapster, his syster, his mayde, and a waterman consenting all unto it; ther was a chandler and his boye mured; they are all apprehended, and have confessed; the waterman shold have had 4*s.* for carying the dead body over the water, and left the half behynd. Sir William F[itz] Williams is newly come over and expected at court on Sondaie. I heard Mun Bacon and his brother were at London, going towards the bathe. Uppon Wedensday last a very specyall strait commandement from the Quene gyven by my Lord Chamberlyne that no man shall come into [her] presence or attend uppou her Majestie wearing any long cloke beneath the knee or thereabouts. . . . it commeth in a good hower for taylers, mercers and drapers, for all men are settled into longe clokes.

[1593, indorsed], Sept. 16. . . . I am resident either at court or els contynually with Don Antonio Peres, at Essex House, whom my Lord useth with hye favors, and favors me mightily in regard of accompanying him. I hope he shall be a meanes of some good for me. I pray tell Sir Edward Wotton that Antonio Peres beza la mains de su Segnoria; and myself in the like sorte. I thinke he will shortly be in those contries. I will tell you what Sir Nicholas Clyfford sayd the other night being at supper together with my Lord, that his lady told him that yf she had bene a mayde agayne she wold clayme interest in her old husband, and an old mistress of yours, Mrs. Fraunces Savage lyveth unmarried to this hower.

[1594], June 14, Friday. Philip Gawdy to his brother Bassingbourne Gawdy. . . . There shall be expedition every way made and I will take my leave of this damned towne. . . . Your hattes shall be of a good fashion; cypres is to dear and out of fashion; your hangers are made, we stood sumwhat uppou the fashion and the very lyke will I have myself sutable for your moorning in other poyntes.

[1594], Aug. 25, Grenewiche. The same to the same. . . . I will only impart to you the present newes of the court. This day there was one of the Prince of Annault his brothers at court, entertayned very honorably by my L. of Essex; a man no way languaged, not so much as in Latin, and therefore not very hye esteemed; he cam from the seige of Gronning only to see England. Sir John Norris lyeth still at Portsmouth for want of a fitt w[ind]. Sir Martin Forboshier is at sea with some four-score sayle. My Lady Manners is maryed to Mr. Furser, of Lyncolnshire, and departed the []. My Lady Elizabeth Summerset is in her place and one of her []. My Lady Katherine Summerset is one of the maydes of honor. . . . Touching the matter you spake of about being master of the game at Attleborough, I cold have had it, and you shall have it graunted when you will. . . . My Lord of Sussex himself esteemes very hyly of you, and told me of a very especial favor you did him now in your shrievalty about an execution. Touching the commission of the subsidy, . . . all the Lords of England cold not prevayle in that suyte, for it is a thinge agreed of now quite agaynste the lawe. I understand Sir Edward Wotton is at your howse. . . . Recommend me often to that worthy and noble gentleman, Mr. Edmund Bacon, and to his good wyfe my cosin. . . . P.S. Sir John Wotton commends him to you. Sir Will. Woodhouse is at court, and is noted by all ther that he carryeth a dagger in his sleve to kyll any shold be prouder then him self. I speake it not from my selfe or to his disgrace, for he loveth and usethe me ever very kyndlye.

[1594], Saturday, Mendham. The same to the same. Tells how while on his journey various friends sent

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

G. E.
FREERE,
ESQ.

G. E.
FREERE,
ESQ.

quarts of wine and sugar to his chamber.—At Ay he was sworn free of the town. The loyal Mr. Hummings and the bailiff presented him there with much wine. "Sir Thomas Cornwallis was there, and her honor of . . . Sir Thomas told me of a letter you sent to him about tenyes; he desireth you to hold him excuse, for his owne ground is so downe as he is enforced to restore it. Sir Jhon Hihu sent peddes thether: the lyke but cold have none, he wold wishe you to store the grounde with tame conyes. . . . Mr. Hummings had letters from London wherein was this newes, that one that was my L. Chancellor's man is in the Tower for treason. Tom Webb, and some others, are in the Tower for coynynge. I meane Mr. Northes Webb; and they had sent 2,000*l.* of that monye into Scotland. Sir Arthur's brother Gilbert is dead upon Monday last."

[1594]. The same to the same The Quene is now at Hygate; many a drye eye for the Byshopp of London, who is deade and buried, and I feare me not ascended into heaven (saving my charity): he hath left 1,500*l.* a yere to his chyldren. My Lord Amner [Almoner] D. Fletcher hopeth to succeed him. Sir John Norris is dayly and hourelly expected in England. Gray maketh hast.

[1594]. The same to the same This afternoone we are going to my L. of Sussex, for he cam home but last night; his daughter is chrystened this afternoon; the Quene's Majestie is the godmother.

July 22. The same to the same. The Quene's Majestie this day removeth to Otlands. By reason one of my L. Lumley's maides dyed of the plague, falling syke there, but removed before her deathe Getrenbargen is yelded up to Count Morris uppon Frydaye last. Some speaches that my Lo. Willoughby sholde go into Fraunce. The plague encreaseeth; this last weeke dyed fourescore and eleven; syx more then before.

Michaelmas day. The same to the same. Says he has now past his troubles and returned into his own country. "I much wonder I never hear of you, but in all cartes ther is one thiller. I am now with all speede going to the courte. I have bene with my Lord of Canterbury, and with my L. Keeper, who have used me wonderfully kyndly and wrytten in my behalf to her Majestie . . . I thanke God I brought over both good clothes and money in my purse, though never any lyving hath been so ill used as my selfe. I have learned a language will do me noe little good in Norfolk . . . I cam late yesternight to London."

n. d. Philip Gawdy to his father, Bassingborne Gawdy.—He gave an account of a conversation at court between him and Mr. Lovell, the latter accusing his father of slanderous speeches. . . . "Sir Francis Drake and his company went yesterday, being Wednesday to their shippes. My L. of Worster departed out of this life last weeke. My L. of Worster is deade, and yet my L. of Worcester lyveth. Sir William Winter hath taken his leave of all his frendes in this present world; and amongst all these greates men an old acquaintance of my brother and mine hath taken the same course, and I hope sayled to heaven, Tom Carrew."

n. d. Philip Gawdy to his brother, Bassingborne Gawdy.—He tells of a visit to Lady Framlingham, and their conversation on family matters.—"The Quene dyed yesterday at my L. Chamberlains. No newes of the flete.—No newes of my L. of Essex. My L. of Buckhurst goeth into Flaunders out of hand, and he is a Knight of the Garter for certyne, and the King of Skotts."

June 24, West Halling. The same to Richard Ashley, Esq. . . . Asks for a loan of 5*l.* or 6*l.*, to be sent by the bearer. It appears that the money was for the purpose of either making himself fine before or giving a treat to a lady of 500 marks per ann., whom he hoped to marry.

Dec. 8. Philip Gawdy to his brother, Bassingborne Gawdy Touching all such newes as is at the court, I will wryte superficially. The Duke of Parma for certeynty, is dead, confirmed to be true, poisoned and dyed as he satt at dinner. The Counte de Foyntes is governor in his place, he that was governor in Lyshbone when I was there Uppon the coronation ther came two knights armed upp into the Privy Chamber, viz., my L. of Essex and my L. of Cumberland, and ther made a challenge that uppon the 26th of February next that they will run with all commers to mayntayne that ther M. (Mistress) is most wortiest and most fayrest. 9th Amadis de Gaule. Her Majestie hath not come much abroade neither to chapple nor els wher by reason of a raunce she hath gotten in one of her cheekes; in an other body no great matter, but much in a great princes. There is a very fine gentlewoman, very fayre and a very riche mariage of the Privy Chamber lately within this fortnight. My Lord Chandowe's daughter; she is much eyed and poynted at in the place she lyveth in. Munn Bacon was at the court, and extollet my Lady Mary Ver above all the rest; but he is towards maryage and in great good lyking with a kinswoman of yours and mine, Sir Edward Wotton's daughter. The plage is very little or nothing in London, and all Londoners have leave to come agayne to the courte. Ther is much stirr and contention about the carike goods, whilst some sweare that they be loosers therby. And my Lo. Treasurer will take order that all will come into her Majestie's hand, and Sir Walter Rawley's, who still continueth in disgrace. Sir Francis Drake is at the courte, and all the speache ther that he goethe very shortly to the sea. My Lo. Thomas is now ther, but he stayed but two dayes, and Sir Martin Furbisher; but Sir Francis Drake caryethe it away from them all. My Lord is somewhat out of countenance, and Sir Martin is in reasonable good favor.

Shroven Monday. The same to the same There is great preparation for the triumphe. There hath been 2 playes this Shroftyde before the King, and there shall be another to-morrowe. 'Twas false newes that my Lady of Essex was dead My Lady of Warwick is dead.—Turkish news.—There wer 6 gentlemen hanged this day for robbing Sir William Cornwallis.—The knight whose name is Sir Hue Losse is fledd, and one Mr. Taverner is reprieved uppon her Majesties letters. Serient Heale hath brought himself in some danger, and I do think he must make his peace with his purse. That day Sir Walter Raully was tryed, the King demanded from some one that cam from theare what newes, and he answered that ther was but one arrayned and two condemned, the one for a traitor, the other for a foole, meaning the serientate.

[1601.] The same to the same 'Tis sayde my Lady of Leoven hath married one of the playing boyes of the chappell I have often writt and sent to you, yet never had answer, and take it very unkyndly that you writ it not to me on your man's marriage behalfe, bycause the wrenn sayde, all helpte when she pyste in the sea.

[1601], May 12, London. The same to the same Ther hath bene great pressing of late, and straunge, as ever was known in England, only in London. And my L. Mayor and the rest of the Londiners have done so contrary to their instructions from the Lords of the Councell, as this last Sondaye your good friend Mr. Mare told me, that their wer letters that day directed from the L. of the Councell to Sir Jhon Payton and Sir Jon. Bowes, with others to examine the Londiners indiscreat proceedings, and all such as had cause to complayne shold be hard, and their causes redressed. So that uppon the Tuesday following ther was a proclamation in London that no gentleman or serving man shold any more be impressed; for the weeke before they did not only presse gentlemen and sarving men, but lawyers, clarkes, countrymen that had lawe causes, aye Quens men, knights, and as it was credibly reported one Earle, quight contrary to that the counters and especially my L. Chief Justice sakoned. For their meaning was that they shold take out of all ordinaries all theting companions, as suche as had no abylyty to lyve in such places, all suche as they cold fynd in baudy howses, and bowling allyes, which they never went to but only to the bowling allyes. All the playhowses were beset in one day, and very many pressed from thence; so that in all ther are pressed foure thowsand, besydes 500 voluntaries, and all for Flaunders. There was a Chesheire gentleman, called Mr. Mannering, that hath this 3 weekes expected to be a knight, but both he and all others besydes have myssed as yet their expectation. The Dunkerkes have made two excellent new shippes both for fight and sayling, and have lately taken 2 very good shippes of ours that cam out of the East countryes.—Ther be great pryyses come to Plimmouth, and great contention and stryfe for the goods; for Mr. Secretary and Sir Walter Rawly are on the one part, and Sir Robert Bassett and Mr. Cole on the other; and the matter is to be decyded in the Admyralls Courte; the first two hold with Sir John Gilbert as partners together. I think you have hard how Mr. Bowton was kylled with a knyfe by a little boy, my Lord of Canturbury's page, being Sir Thomas Wylford's sonne, and the same weeke Bowton being Mr. Fowler's brother. Capt. Hayes that was in the Flete about here, and his most horrible bawdy and beastly villanyes, he kylled an

G. E.
FREERE,
ESQ.

other prysoner with a knyfe, for which he was hanged in Smythfield; and two or thre more wer kyll'd that weeke with knyfes. It was thought my L. of Hartford and Mr. Vice Chamberlaine should have ben of the garter, but ther was not any chos'n. I was at the court when the French Duke was ther, and on day he ware the value of 50,000*l.*; a young man, very unhansome, maryed to the Duke de Mayne's daughter; heild though to be a gallant worthy gentleman, and of great rewe-nes; ther was besydes Count Gramaliell a very exceeding handsome man, and a marquess, who is brother to the King's old mystris and his now new mystris; the rest, ordinary French with a company of lowsy pages. The old French Imbassador hathe latly taken his leave and gone. This last weeke there was an Irishman called (I have forgo'tt his name) condemned of high treason, about most vilde and undutifull speaches he spake agaynst her Majestie in France, being here taken and accused P.S. Ther is an Italian at courte that dothe wonderfull strange trickes upon the cardes, as telling of any card that is thought, or changing of one card from another, though it be heild of any man never so hard under his hand; the Quene gave him some 200 crownes for showing his trickes, and divers gentlemen make divers meetings for him, where he getteth sometymes 20, sometymes 40 crownes, and yet they say he spends it so straungly as he can not keep a penny in his purse. And yet with all his cunning he is heild to be but a crafty knave.

[1601], Thursday night. The same to the same But now according to the olde song: Blame not my lute nor me but your selfe I know litle news but that the Parlament endes to-morrow, and I will gett you a book withe the fyrst; ther are 1,500 Spanyards newly landed in Ireland. Teron (Tyrone) and his rebellious raskalls are com towards my Lord, being 10,000 men strong. Teron's bastard brother, serving of our syde, is newly committed for his vilde trechery. Upon the last landing of theis Spanyards ther wer four score of the fyrst that cam thether made a bravado upon our men, but they wer all put to the sworde, being all full of chaines, bracelettes, crucifixes, and good store of ducates in their purses. Our shippes have fought with the Spanish shippes, and they have bene bothe shredly beaten; yet our men have taken two of theirs and sunke one. The newes of Ostend is very uncertayne; some say it is lost, others say it can not holde out long . . . the wants are great on both sides.

June 13. The same to the same The newes of my Lo. of Essex cause hearing were to no purpose to tell you, by cause every body knows it so well, but now resteth as he did, and in the same place as before without any further speeche, but indeade every body thinkes he sholde be forthwith sett at libertye, with theis conditions, to forbear going into Wales and comming to the courte till her Majesties pleasure be so known. My Lo. Keeper the last Starr Chamber daye made mention of my Lo., and greatly commended his confession of his fautes and his humylation, which had turned her Majesties' displeasure into mercye. There was a most notable cause handled that daye, which heilde from 8 of the clocke till 5; I thinke it better to be put in Hollinshed's cronycle then any conduyte or Lo. Mayors Hynchemen. The case was between Mr. Foulter and his wyfe, which maryed Mr. Boughten's daughter, of Warwickshire, who maryed Sir Jhon Brockette's syster, your kynswoman and myne. (He gives particulars of Mrs. Foulter's loose mode of life, and says that the judgment was that she should be carried to Bridewell, and then to be often well whipped, and afterwards to have perpetual imprisonments. He states also the punishments of her accomplices, William Haynes and one Gascoigne, and Henry Boughten, the lady's brother) . . . Sir Edward Baynam, Tom Dulton, Tom Badger, and some others being somewhat merrye sett one night upon the watche; they were brought in upon a ryot into the Star Chamber, he fyned at 500*l.* marks, the rest at 200*l.* a peece, and their oversyght much noted. My Lo. Deputy stayed somewhat longer than he sholde, being intercepted with 300 foote, he being but 10 horse in all, was constrained to charge them, and gott himselfe well throughe them, two of his company slayne righte out, and Mr. Pinchbackes Chute one of them so sore hurte as it is thought he is deade.

Dec. 19. The same to the same My L. of Essex is very weak and ill at ease, and 8 phisicians have sett it doune under their hands that unless he wer removed he colde not escape.

[1602.] The same to the same My Lo. Keeper hath bestowed the advowson upon me to be dysposed by me; and . . . I am willing that Mr. Rogers shall have it. Therefore send him up to me with all possyble speede, and let him come in handsome and conveyent clothes fitt for his calling, and by God's grace I will take order he shall be presently presented into the benefice. His ordinary charges of institution and induction will come to 6*l.* or 7*l.* Besydes my Lo. officer in that office will looke for some reward.

[1602], June 27. The same to Lady Dorothy Gawdy I will not dyscontent you with sending you two songes for the viall that were gyven me by a very nouthy musician at courte, not doubting but shortly to bring you some better store. Sir Thomas Lovell and his sonne with muche ado, by my Lo. Admirall's meanes, wer brought to kisse the Quene's hand. The olde [] blushed most extreame, and not without cause, for it is thought he strayed so harde for the favor as it brought all the blood up into his face Your oncle Bacon's daughter (Mrs. Knyvitt) was sworne the Quen's woman upon Sondag last, and kyst her Majesties hande, with great commendacion from her Majesties mouth, that she was a very handsome, modest, and a goodly woman . . . The Marshal Beron and Count Avere are both in holde. The King is up in armes; ther wer great treasons a bruig, and all not yet extinct. The King of Spayne, a cheife instrument in all; and his finger was deeply in a great conspyracie latly intended against the Kyng of Scottes, to have been performed by a fellowe that was Hix his man of Cheapsyde, and an Italian, who cam not according to apoyntement. They two sholde have murdered the King; but the other is taken, and is growen madd since his imprisonment. The Caricke that Sir Ri. Luson brought home out of Lysborne Haven, lying before St. Jylian's Castle, is valued to be worthe 500,000*l.*, and is cum up to Porchemouth. Atkynson and his companions sped very hardly this day at Star Chamber, and thoughte he (by reason of his confession and submission) sped somewhat better than the rest, yet the other three had their judgment to ryde into Chepsyde with their face to the horse tayle, then to be whipped, their eares to be cut off, 10,000 markes fyne, and to row in the gallyes as slaves all their lyves. There is a great mortality at Ostend, and Count Maurice doth greatly annoy the Archduke's cuntrye. Sir Thomas Farry is immediately going into Fraunce. The Quene is going a progresse into the west cuntry.

[1602], Dec. 14. The same to his brother Bassingborne Gawdy The newes of Irelande is not muche of late; there is a speeche that there sholde be a great army sent over, and they say that they make great preparation in Spayne to send succour into Irelande. Sir Oliver St. John is newly come this morning out of Irelande, but the newes not yet knowen I colde not by any means holde you in the subsidy; my Lo. with his owne hande stroke all in England out.

Friday. The Parlament is most certainly thought to be at Michilmas next. Mr. Littleton that was condemned about my Lo. of Essex cause is nearly dead in pryson. Ther is a gentlewoman called Mrs. Anne Vavisour is newly of the bedchamber; she was my Lady of Bedford's woman.

Nov. 16. The same to the same.—Velvet, tawney, the best in London, 2*l.* the yard. If I have any faythe in God, Stone and Hix did ask me 26*s.* for not so good. For it is not full of gum but clere silke.—Lace of silk and gold 4*s.* 2*d.* the ounce. I have caste by my cloke that everyone must have 4½ yards to do it fayre. I have sent downe 82 yards of the tacer which you shall fynde by measure which wayethe just 19 oz.; there must 34 yards more for all the clokes besydes myne. I have sent you 39 doz. buttons of tawny gold and silver at 9½*d.* the dozen. All the clokes will take just six score dozen. I have sent 4 oz. of stitching sylke and one of sowing sylke, it cost 2*s.* 2*d.* the oz. . . . besydes a box with 4 lb. of orange comfettes at 20*d.* the pound Much talke of peace with Spayne, and that the Commissioners shoulde meete at Rouen; some thinke it will hardly be accorded. My L. of Essex still wher he was and little hope of his enlargement. My L. Monjoy is thought sholde go over into Irelande, but he is very unwilling therwith and laboreth the contrarye. My Lo. of Dunkelly fought in the feilde with Sir Calistines Brooke upon Wedensdaye last, and only had one thrust at him, and so the fraye ended; for my Lo. thrust him quite throughe the hande up into the arme; the cause briefly was, Sir Cal had promysed his syster mariage and got her with childe, and then refusing her, my Lo. her brother undertook her just quarrell which God justly revenged. Newes also of the tragycall deathe of Mrs. Ratcliffe, the mayde of honor, who ever since the deathe of Sir Alexander her brother hath pined in such

G. E.
F. FREE,
Esq.

strange manner as voluntarily she hath gone about to starve herself. She fasted 2 days and died at Richmond. The Quene had the body opened, and found it all same as the other, being striped all over the body. All the while it was black. The Quene's Majesty makes very long with my Lo. Henry Howard and your uncle Fra. Bacon. Great running at tilt, wherof my Lo. Gray a great man at courte is thought to be the best.

Nov. 23. The same to the same The sheriffs be not yet prickt. Mr. Nath. Bacon is newly com in for Norfolk, and Sir Thomas Barenton for Suffolk. The tilting is p[er]f[ect], and many runners, and the Quene thanked them after olde fashion as she was wont to do Mr. B. (to Rome?). The newes out of Irelande is that Teren waves great and more rebell every daye then other. Ther is speache that my L. of Shrewsberry and Sir Fraunces Vergo thether in commission together. My L. of Essex is at lyberty, but remayneth still in the same place. My Lady Waldegrave, your sister, was at the tilting but I saw her not.

Nov. 21, London The sherifes be not yet prickt till next Sunday Very great and brave sheues at running at tilt. All the Ambassadors there of all countreys. Sir Robert Drury was wonderful gallant, and was not helde to be enfeour to the best runner that daye.

[1603.] The same to the same I doubt not you have heard of the multitude of knyghts made in many places wherof our country hath tasted pretely well. In truth it is sayde that many payd well for their honor (only our countrymen excepted who wer p[re]sent out for their vertues). Since the King being at the tower he hath not made any, but upon Friday last he made six, which were Mr. Doctor Ceasar, Mr. Wilbrame, Master of the Requests, Mr. Edmonds, Mr. Wade, Mr. Smithe, clarke of the Councell, and Lake, clarke of the Signet. Upon Sunday last he knighted my Lo. Maior and Mr. Recorder, who made an oration to the King. My Lo. Keeper answered him; and lastly the King himself did utter a most worthy and choyse speache to the Mayor and his brethren. Upon his cumming back from the chappell he knighted Mr. Attorney, gracing him with much favor. This last week ther was sworne at one tyme of the pryvy chamber, six: my L. Du'r's sonne, Sir Robert Carne, Sir John Graye, Mr. Philip Herbert, Sir Herry Bromley, and Mr. Oliver Crumwell. Upon Sunday morning Mr. Wharton, my Lo. sonne, and Sir Jarvis Clifton were sworne. Upon Sunday night Sir Tho. Jermin, Sir Edwin Riche, Sir Edward Grevell, Sir Thomas Farfax, Sir W. Woodhouse, Sir William Cornewallis, and Sir Charles Persey, with others to the number of foure and twenty English in all, and so many Scoche are sworne with two gentlemen ushers whereof Sir Drue Drury is one and the tother a Skott. It is thought many payde deare The King hath placed in all offices some Skottes and put out many Englishe, meaning to make us all one under the name of ancient Britons This day is the Searjent's feast; ther are three men chosen, Mr. Skyrley and Mr. Sing of the Middle Temple; and Mr. Hutton of Gray's Inn The King is gone to Nonesuche and to Otelande to take the ayre for 3 or 4 dayes; he dynd in the presence upon Sunday last, and was served with great state.

[1603], June 18.—The same to the same The beaver Capt. Crompton hathe the Councell's letters for the levying of voluntary soldiers in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, as dyvers other captaynes have in other countyes Ther is speache of a mariage betwixt my Lo. of Denshire and my La. Urbella (Arabella), and about my Lo. of Arundell and another lady in the courte Stone was knyghted last weeke. I meane not Stone the foole, but Stone of Cheapsyde. The King was at his house at Layton. Sir Henry Bromly hath gotten a great marriage lately in London.

[1604], Good Frydaye. The same to the same. The proceedings in the Parliament have bene little since your comming awaye; only the matter about Sir Frauncis Goddin. Upon the Thursday the Parliament was adjourned till Wednesday next in Easter weeke, upon whiche day the Speaker was with the King from eyght till ten with that Bill whiche you have a copy of; and then cam to the house and tolde us how the King's mynde stode, and that in the afternoon we sholde be withe him agayne at the courte where he wolde have the matter debated before him-elfe, having all the judges ther. Sir Fraunces Bacon was apoynted to sprake, and so he did wonderful well; the Kyng afterwarde spake more than he excellently well; he was somewhat angry at first, but afterwarde the matter was pacified, and the King and the House agreed bothe together to put them out bothe, and hath gyven our House autoryty to sende downe a newe writt for a newe choyse of neyther of them bothe.

[1604], Tuesday.—The same to the same. He sends downe a trunk with two rapiers and two daggers and two pair of hangers for his cousins.—There is the booke of the Turkishe history; I have sent downe a glasse to my Lady, I thinke as good as good may be; all the woodworke is ebeney every parte, and a dimonde cutt glasse. I have sent you besydes thre feathers The newes that happened since Sir W. Barwicke's comming is that upon Sunday last Doctor Sharpe was sent to the Tower close prysoner, the cause not dyrectly knowne, but for treason, and supposed that he hath done very ill offices betwene the King and his Lordes. The King is gone to Chattam to see his shippes, and upon Thursday commeth to London; the Parliament making an end as upon Fryday or Saturday for this session. This night an hundred of the best of us of the Parliament House make a great supper at Marchant Tayler's hall, gyving every one tenn shillings a peace, and the King hearing of it hathe gyven us a brace of buckes to the supper to make merrye withall, and sent besydes a hogshed of wyne. My Lorde of Pembroke is marryed to my Lorde of Shrewsberry's eldest daughter, and she shall have 3,000l. lande. My Lady North is marryed to a Skoche knight.

[1605], May 11, London. The same to the same. I was at courte upon Saterdag last, wher in the Hall wer created their Lordes, whiche I sawe withe myne owne eyes; my Lo. of Cramburn, Earle of Salusbury; my Lo. Burleigh, Earle of Exeter; Sir Phillip Herbert, fyrst made Lo. Herbert and instantly Earle of Munghomery; my Lorde Sydney, Vicount Lyle; Sir Thomas Stannop, Barron; Sir George Carew, Count Arundell, and Mr. William Cavendishe the last barron. My Lo. of Salusbury did make a most excellent speache at the creatione. The Sunday following a stately and royall christning as was sene in many yeares before, whiche I sawe all performed. My Lorde of Canterbury in his cope did christen the chylde with great solemnity. The Duke of Holst, the Lady Urbella, and my Lady of Northumberland were gossypes; the name Mary The King hath bene all this weeke at Nonesuche; dyvers knights looked to have bene made this christning, but it fell out otherwyse; ther was not one made. Ther hathe bene a mighty great cause hearde about Sir Robert Dudley's legytimation in the Stare Chamber, and ther dysmyssed and referred to the lawe. Sir Robert had the worst there. Ther is reporte that somme sholde dy of the plague in my Lo. Admyrall's shippes.

[1605], June 29, London.—The same to the same Ther was a speeyall restraynt that afore this Assyses ther sholde be no more put in all over England, for otherwyse my Lo. would most willingly have put him (the writer's cousin Colby) in; but he hathe promysed me after the assyses he shall be put into the commission My Lo. Chancellor hath taken order that none shall come in but by meanes of the justices of assyses, and they to receyve commendacion from two justices of the peace out of the country One Mr. Douglas, a Scotheman, was hanged, drawn, and quartered by reason he hathe abused his Majesty, with the Emperour and divers other German States; he dyde a Papist. My Lo. Admyrall is comme home, and to-morrowe dothe meete the Kinge at Otelandes; he was feasted all the while at the King of Spayne's charge, but he never dyed or supped in his presence, whiche is somewhat ill taken. The King is now at Richmond, the Quene at Whitehall. Within this tenn dayes the progresse doth beginn.

[1605], Nov. 26. The same to the same Since my last letters upon Fryday last my Lo. Sturton and my cosin Hurlston were commytted to the Tower (two silly men, God knows). Upon Thursday last ther was a commission graunted from the King to both the Lo. Chamberlins and Lo. Vice-Chamberlins, to sweare all the Kinge's and Queene's servauntes to the supremacye, whosoever, whiche was that day performed, and none to serve in courte whiche shall refuse; besydes, they are all to receyve the communion, or els to loose their places; which order the King will have observed in all noblemen's, knight's, and gentlemen's houses in Englande. Moreover, there is an order taken that whosoever shall hereafter travell beyond the seas, he shall before his going be sworne to the supremacye, and receyve the communion, or els to be stayed and imprysoned, and the lyke to be used to all such as shall hereafter come from beyond the seas, of what degree soever. Sir Fraunces Vere is going to his charge in Hollande, and where he shall be employed in

G. E.
FREE,
Esq.

G. F.
FRERE,
Esq.

greater credit than ever he was. The Hollanders have taken a Spanishe carike, valued to be worthe 500,000*l*. Ther was a late peece of servyce betwixte the Archduke and the Hollanders, when the English were put to servyce on both sydes; the Hollanders' part had made the better, whereas the Holland Englishe, having a great advantage of the other Englishe, did for ear, and told the cheife governer that they colde not fynde in their hartes to massure their countrymen and frendes in that dystresse; wheruppon the cheife commander swore and sent them away, and sent certeyne Wallens and Toneths, which cutt all their throates, wher Capt. Anderton and two or three captains and lyftenantes more wer slayne. Sir Edward Michilbourne had borded a carike in the Indyes, and whilst he was rifling of her other shippes came in and took him and his shippe, hanged all his men, and sawed him in peeces with a wodden sawe. Southwarke sholde have been sett on fyre by dyvers lewde persons, whiche are in pryson, to the number of seven or eyghte . . . My Lo. Riche and my Lady were dyvorsd uppon Fryday was senighted before the hye Commyssioners, wher my Lo. Archbishop chydd my Lo. Riche very muche, and gave my Lady great commendacion . . . and bad my Lord Riche go amongst his Puritans . . . My Lord of Northumberland hath bene examyned this 3 days together, and is in great danger in the opinion of the worlde; not yet committed to the Tower.

[1608], Nov. 20. The same to the same.—He sends a tamariske cup, the dearest wood he ever bought. "It must stand full of cold water an hour, and ever after you may drinke wine or beare in it, and always it must be washed with cold water, and no hot liquor at any time."

Oct 24. The same to the same . . . The news breifly is that Serjt. Heale is fyned at a 1,000*l*., committed to the Fleete, and sequestered from being the K. Sergeaunte. The Queen's brother is shortly expected, and great provision made for him. The yonge Duke I have sene, the weakest and sparest chylde of his yeares that I ever sawe one of them. I kyssed his hands. Sir George Snelling committed a foul murder uppon one Mr. Haslerig; the originall of the quarrell was bycause he married one to whom he was a tutor. He fled; but it is said he is taken. My Lord of Canterbury is not yet invested in his place, but his conge de l'yr [délire] is gone down now to Canterbury. Doctor Fahonnde shall have his place. Neither Earles, Dukes, nor Barrons yet made, though a speche that ther shold be of all three, whiche I shall more certeynly bring you down worde of. Sir Phillip Herbert shall marry my Lady Susan Veare, and Sir Richard Gargrave my cosin Elizabeth Southwell, and it is thought my Lord Willoughby doth favour well my cousin Gargrave, the mayde of honor. There be 31 Commyssioners of Scotland, wherof the Lo. Chancellor, the Lo. Constable, and the Lo. Marshall are three, and one Lerde that is two fingers higher than Sir Jerome Bowes. My uncle Judge hath bene nomynated to the Lo. Cheife Baron's place, though I thinke it will fall out now otherwyse, for Sir Jhon Cooke and Mr. Solycyter offer fayre, and they say that Serjeant Heale, for all his disgraces, hath offered his spoke to the carte, and that a good fayre one. The proclamation will tell you the newes of it in the selfe in the country. All the costimers places in Englande shall be called in to the King's hands; and my Lord of Cranburne sholde hyre them of the King, which will bring him a wonderfull revenue more than ever he had or any King before him.

June 7. The same to the same . . . I forgot to aske you whether you wolde be in the comysion for Suffolke this assizes or no. Sir N. Bacon hath writt for nobody, and his letters were gone before by Mr. Mawe.

Thursday morning, Chylsea. The same to the same. . . . I am newly come into countrey, and such newes as was at my last coming from courte I will acquaint you with. My Lord of Rutland cam to the courte last weeke, and some knightes and other gentlemen of the King's servautes, to the number of 16, had cheynes given them by the King, with his picture hanging by, to the value of some 30*l*. or 40*l*. All the rest had his picture only. The entertainment was very greate they had in Denmarke. The King before he began his progress dyspatched divers ambassadors home, as the Denmarke, the Duke of Brunswicke, the Duke of Lorrayne, the Duke of Wittenberges, and lastly the Archdukes, Ambassadors, besydes the Ambassador of Venyce; there is now newly a kynde of a petty ambassador come from Geneva, and the Spanish Ambassador is dayly looked for. My Lady of Bedford was carryed from the courte sicke, vehemently suspected of plage, the best they can make of it is a pestilent hott fever. My Lo. Duke had a servant dyed of that sycknes as it was thought . . . There were a number of worthy and very choyse knightes made uppon that great day; but with them dyke cockie amongst good cornes a skumme of such as it wolde make a man sicke to thynke of them. I have heard your countryes of Norfolk and Suffolk taxed that ther wer sheapreaves and yomans sonnes knighted. I can assure you ther ar other countryes are not behynde them in that, and dyvers peller sonnes of London have received the same order, amongst the rest, Thimblethorp the attorney, that was called numblechappes . . . was knighted for 7*l*. 10*s*. Captayn Birmeld and Gains, my Lo. of Sussex his man, had but bad fortune, for they wer bothe thrust out of the rone by the heade and shoulders, and so lost their earnest penny. Little Cobb escaped very narrowly; ther was such exception taken for the place of somme of the meaner sorte complained of to the King, as he hathe gyven my Lo. of Worster authority by commission to marshal every knight according to the place they wer in before. Ther was a question about the knightes' ladies of the Bathe, but it is overruled they shall have place of all other ladies. I know one knight in Suffolk that followed the court so long for a knighthood, as whether it wer for want of good lodging or shifte of rayment, he and his men wer so lousye as it was most wonderfull; and yet in the end (paying well for it) he was made a lowcey kt.; of those kind of knightes ther be so many jestes bredd: as one that a knight comming to the dore being straitly kept by the usher, he earnestly requested to come in; the usher asked him who he was; he tolde him a knight; the usher answered him he must say without, for ther wer so many new knightes wolde come in as they sholde have no rone for esquires. Another was this: two walking espyed one a farr off; the one demandd what he scholde be, the other answered he seemed to be a gentleman. No, I warrant you, says the other, I thinke he is but a knight . . . I saw Watson the prest when he was sent to the Tower. He hath discovered much, and especyally about matters in Ireland; he shall very shortly be arrayned. Sir Patrick Barnard and Sir Garret Elmer, with two other Irish lauers, are committed about the petition they presented to the Council about tolleracion of religion and other matters. Ther wer to the number of fourscore attending uppon them at that instant. Sir Richard Fines is newly Lord Saye. The King hathe bene lately in great daunger by the meanes of a treacherous Skott. Sir Thomas Reresby hath married fayre Mrs. Bridges, and they say Sir James Hayes, a Skott, sholde marry my Lady of Pembroke. It is thought Sir Walter Raully will cleare him selfe touching the hanging worke; for my Lo. Cyclic, sayde at fyrst that he was bedashed but not bemudded, and yet the stabbing of himself with a knyfe sholde not well agree with the other.

5 June, London. The same to the same. . . I was at courte on Sunday last, wher your olde acquaintance, Mr. Richard Lee, was knighted, and had ther 30 men as a lyverie very well apoynted, going ambassador into Muscovia. Ther was knighted with him Sir Thomas Ridgeway, a western man, that married Sir Jhon Stanoppes wytes syster. Ther is no great newes out of Ireland but that my Lord is going a jorneye for the northe of Irelande. Sir Henry Doccerye hathe done some servyes uppon the landing of his men in the nor[the] of Irelande. The rumors and newes touching my Lo. of Essex are uncertayne . . . My Lady Riche was sent for to ansuer some matters touching her writing.

24 Nov., London. The same to the same . . . Sir Jhon Townshend, Sir Christopher Heydon, and Sir Theo. Finch wer before the Conncell, and none of all the rest were sent for or come in, but they are commanded uppon ther allegiance neither to serve or accept any challenge, and they are bounde to the peace for themselves, their frendes and followers.

n. d. [1603.] The same to the same . . . Ther wer two new Bishopes made lately at Courte, Dr. Giggons (Jegon) Bishop of Norwich, and Dr. Bennet, Bishop of Hereforde. No speache of Irelande but peace and tranquillity, for Teron sholde come in uppon his pardon, which I take it is sent him. Divers Captayns and Lyftenantes come out of the Lowe Countryes for newe supplies of men, in regarde their companies are weake. Ostend still be-seiged without anything done on eyther syde, yet the enemy hathe latly wonne a place called Wattingam castle, but it is thought that yf Ostend be not relieved this sommer it will be in great daunger to be lost. Divers ladyes lately dead; my lady of Notingame,

G. F.
FRERE,
Esq.

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

whose deathe her Majestic tooke muche more heavily then my Lorde ; my Lady Payton, of the Tower, dyed the same day. My Lady Skott, which was sometyme my Lady Heyward, lately deade.

Wednesday. The same to the same . . . He says that his uncle, Justice Gawdy, disdained to be made a knight. —I was at Court with my cousin Henry Galdy upon Sunday sennight, where Sir W. Wodehouse closed with him, and offered him that for 50*l*. he sholde be knighted . . . which my cousin utterly refused.—Says that another offered to get him knighted without paying anything except the fees, but his cousin declined and came to London.—I find by him that he could be one of the Knights of the Bathe, and I think he would be content to pay somewhat roundly for it.

28th Oct. The same to the same. . . . My uncle, Justice Gawdy, was sent for this day to the Courte, and by my Lo. Treasurer's means he was brought to the King. I saw him mysele. The King wished him not to be dyscontented in regard of the place of Lo. Cheife Baron, whiche was partly promysed him, for he ment to resarve him for a better place when it sholde happen.

Friday, London. The same to the same . . . The Courte sholde have removed as yesterday, and now it is apoynted upon Tuesday to Richmond if it holde. They do prepare the Rolles for my Lo. Keeper to ly in by reason the small pox is in his howse. There was a great christening of the French Ambassador's child as yesterday, wher the Quene was godmother and my Lady Marquesse was her deputye. The bankett was so great as it was reported that was 1,000 banketting dishes . . . The childe being a girl was carryed and heilde by a man according to ther owne fashion. Ther is a notable trayterous Jesuit preist in Newgate that shall be shortly arraigned.

n. d., London. The same to the same . . . I have sent you a hatt and a feather . . . it is pinked of the newest fasion . . . I have sent you a doublet of fustian taffata, lace, silk, and buttons fitting to the same . . . It is not napte, because that is sarvingman lyke, and you shall find that it will weare as softe and well as velvet or sattin . . . My Lord Admirall and four others suche have had suits of the same, and trymmed in the same kynde . . . I have made choyse of all theise things as warily and well as a theife at the gallows wold keepe himself from hanging . . . Little news. Ther was a pryse playd at the Swann at the Banke Syde, wher Turner and one Dunne playing the pryyses, Turner thrust Dunn in the eye, and so into the braynes, that he fell down dead without speaking any one word. The Duke of Savoye, meaning to betray Geneva, was defeated and a greatte repulse. Sir Robert Gardiner is going to Ireland.

n. d. The same to the same . . . Touching this present news; the funerall was uppon Thursday performed with great solemnyty and reasonable store of moorners. My Lady Marquesse was the cheyfe, and the trayne was carryed by Mr. Vice Chamberline and three Countesses. I saw all the ceremonies performed, which held some six howres with the sermon, and I saw all the whit staves broken uppon ther heads. The King hath made very many knights, though of late he hath heild his hand, for he repents him of very many he hathe made, and is very angry with some Skots, for he hath heard that they tooke money for making of them. Councillor Swyft and his son, Mr. Gargrave, Mr. Thexton, Sir John Foskews man, Mr. Turrett, and many others are knighted of much lesse worthe. The King lyes to-night at Sir Henry Cocks, and to-morrow comes to Tebolde, whether the Councill and Lordes go this night to meete with him to-morrow: he comes to London some 4 or 5 days hence.—Ther goes to-day towards the Quene to wayte of the 6 ladyes my Lady of Worster, my Lady Kyldare, my Lady Ann Herbert, my Lady Rich, my Lady Scroope, and my Lady Walsingham. My Lord of Sussex, my Lord Norris, and my Lord Compton, with divers knights and gentlemen. I am going with all this great troupe, meaning by God's grace to see his Majestic to-morrow . . . Sir Henry Cocks' son, Mr. Lucy, Jhon Parker Warberton, Leukener, Brett, Mompaston, with dyvers others are knighted. Eppes, the drinking fellowe, with some dozen more, are in Newgate, for that they pretended to fyre London in some places and rifle it in others. My Lord of Southampton is in great favour with the King. Teron doth offer uppon his othe to cleere my Lo. of Essex touching all matters ever objected agaynst him concerning him selfe.

London [1604]. Good Friday. The same to Sir Nicholas Bacon . . . A great controversy in the House betwixt Sir Jhon Foskeue and Sir Fraunces Goddin which is now determined, for uppon Thursday last the matter being hande before the King, and the judges being by, they are bothe put out of the house, and a writ sent down to elect a new. The Parliament that day was adjourned till Wednesday in Easter weeke. Ostend is greatly dystressed, 30 or 40 slain in the town every daye, they have had 3 governors slayne within this monthe, and yet there is newes newly come that they have slayne 1,200 of the enemyes . . . A Skocheman comming from Grenwiche to London kyllled the waterman that brought him very beastly, running his rapier into him. Mr. Churchyarde the poett is lately deade, and not paste a fortnight before his deathe being in a payre of loose gascongnes being harde by the maydes of honor he shott of his peece, and all the powder rann downe uppon his stockings, dryve away the maydes and all the company and was faynt to be carryed out. There is a very gallant ambassador expected out of Spayne.

[1604], 15 Nov. The same to his brother Sir B. Gawdy . . . Upon Simon and Jude's day Sir Edward Denny was made baron of Waltham. The day following Sir Thomas Flemming was made Lo. Cheife Baron, Serjeant Dodderidge, Solicyter, and Serjeant Fo(s)ter in his place the Princes Serjeant . . . I stooode this last Sunday harde by an olde Mrs. of yours, my Lady Rawly, who with her sonne were petitioners to his Majesty, but he wolde no way respecte them nor so much as looke towards them.

Feb. 9, London. The same to the same . . . The King lay last night at Whitehall, and is gone this day to Royston; he returns next week back by Thebolde's to Whytehall. The Quene commes to Whitehall uppon Monday, and the yonge Prince goethe to Oklandes. The Parliament beginnes the winterday, and the triumphes the 25th. There is not like to be any peace betwixt Spayne and us. The King of France hath sent the King, the Quene, the yong Prince, the lordes and ladyes presents of great valewe, and it is thought we shall have peace with the French shortly concluded. Mr. Raynsford, a grome of the King's chamber, was drowned this week in a horse ferry boate, and all the rest of the company saved, in going down to take possession of a thing the King bestowed uppon him.

Friday. The same to the same . . . There was a great and a generall speache of my Lo. of Essex that he sholde have gone to the Tower uppon [] daye, and Tuesday last, and assure yoursele he is very sicke and ill at ease. All the lordes of the Councill . . . the daye after the terme to have all gentlemen go . . . and to enquire out for such libelles as have . . . agaynst some of her Majesties Councill, and wherin h(er Majesty) was partly touched, and that all men sholde forbear to speake of Princes causes, and that some sholde reporte how her Majesty had no care of Irelande, wherein the Councill at the Starr Chamber showed what a greate and royall armye her Majestic sent, and that herselfe often before my Lo. going over sat in Councill, and yeilded more then he asked bothe for foote and horse, and how that he had done nothing at all, and that he had gone quighte agaynst his commysion, and of her private talke with Terone, and other matters which were nowe to longe to relate . . . My Lord of Dunkelly was committed to the Fleete uppon Wedensdaye laste about the quarrell betwixt Sir Calistines Brooke and himsele, bycause they wer forbidden bothe to meddle in the matter by her Majesties Councill. Sir Tho. Jermyn was marryed uppon Monday last to Mr. Killigru's daughter of the Pryvy Chamber. . . . Ther is heavy newes out of Brydewel, for Mall Newberry and Mall Digby have been carted three dayes together, when one of them had lyke to have bene killed with a blowe of a stone uppon her foreheade, . . . Mall Newberry hathe removed her lodgings to Newgate. My Lo. Cheife Justice and she cannot agree by any meanes, but for ought that I perceyve Mall Newberry goes by of the worst. Luce Morgan lyves in reasonable dyscreditt still, but yet she keepest herselfe from coching or canting.

11 July, London. The same to the same.—The Parliament ended for this session uppon Saturday last, and is proroged until the 7th of February; the King cam to Whitehall uppon Thursday last; uppon Sunday night he went to Otelandes and returneth uppon Tuesday, and very shortly beginneth his progress towards Northamptonshire. I writt to you that my Lo. of Pembroke had marryed my Lady Mary, and now my Lo. Davers shall marry her syster my Lady Alathia; for my Lo. of Arundell his marriage it hanges betwene the cyledes, for some say he is and somme say he is not marryed . . . Mr. Speaker made a speache to the King savoring of flattery no more than good porridge doth

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

G. E.
FERRE,
Esq.

of hearbes and otmeale. The Kinge spake most admirably wysly (as I never hearde him speak otherwise). Lastly, my Lo. Keeper concluded all, whose speeches lasted (tasted?) somewhat of Mr. Speaker's porredge. But lastly he spake in generall to all justices of the peace, &c. &c. . . . My Lord Mayor was at Courte upon Sunday last, when two of his brethren wer knighted. The King made very near 30 knights at Chatham.

20 Nov. The same to the same.—There is a new proclamacion about coyne come out which I send. The King's going to Royston is no newes. The Duke Vanholt is feasted every day in a severall place, and what meate soever they have they do not forgett to drinke harde. The commissioners for the union sytt not part to-day and to-morrowe, and so they make an ende . . . My Lady of Huntingdon is yet at Islington, but this weeke she comes to Drury Lane. There is a new Lotery at Somerset House, where there be 6 more fooles bayted every day then there be hearings taken at Yarmouth.

5 March. The same to the same It is certeyne my Lo. of Canterbury was taken dumm at the Councill table, and never spake word after, and yet the King was with him after he was speachelesse.

28 Oct. The same to the same. We (i.e., the writer and Sir Bassingbourne Gawdy's son) have gott a very good lodging in Fullwood Lane by Graye's Inn, and the clearest place for the infection. Of Sir B. G.'s son he says he hath seen the Lyons and the tombes at Westm^r; playes he was never at any, for they are all put downe Serjeant Halton and Serjeant Coventree sholde be the newe judges, yet it is thought the King will have but fouer in each place. The losse that was in Flanders was not so great as was first spoken of . . . but it was most shamefull, for their wer 1,200 Hollanders and English menne ran from 400 Italians, and only four did charge those 400, which were Sir Henry Carie, Mr. Ratcliffe, and Capt. Pigott, which thus were taken prisoner; the 4th, which was Sir Jhon Roo being taken as they three wer; two fell out whiche of ther prysoner he sholde be, and they two went together by the eares, and in the meane tyme he rann his way and escaped; dyvers gentlemen slayne, as Mr. Eppes, Joyles Whydden, one of Pinchbacke's brothers, Capt. Manners, Capt. Morgan, and a French Colonel. There be two great marriages shall be shortly celebrated at Court, my Lord of Suffolk's daughters with my Lorde of Essex and Vicont Cranborne. Ther is a speache that all the tables in the Courte shall be put downe, and all the attendants shall be put to grasse. The King commeth not to London until Wednesday. The Quene's pryvy chamber is so straitly kept shutt all day, no body may come ther but lordes.

n. d. The same to his cousin Framlingham Gawdy. . . . Ther are four barons to be newly created. Sir Nicholas Bacon, Sir Hervey Wallop, Sir Thomas Thynne, and Sir Jhon Hollyes, who they say sholde be raysted to hyer honor to be one of his Majesties pryvy Councell . . . It is certeynly reported that my Lo. Cooke sholde be of the same kynd created The Prince's inauguration shall be upon the 9th of next month. The great cristing was performed on Saturday last of my Lo. of Salisbury's chylde, wher the King, my Lo. Treasurer, and my Lady of Walden were gossypes, my Lady of Hertforde was lothe to comme up who sholde have bene the other gossip.

26 March, London. The same to his nephew. . . . I cam to towne some 2 or 3 days before the tyting, which I sawe, and it was as poorly worthe the seing as any that ever I sawe in my lyfe, and very fewe runners, which were theise the Duke of Lynnexx, my Lords Arundell, Pembroke, Montgomery, Hayes, Dingwell, North, Walden, Sir Tho. Howarth, Sir Rob. Dowglas, both the Alexanders; none made any shew at all; Lord Dingwall's was worth all the rest. There hath been much speache about the abuse was offered to my Lo. of Montgomery, his name was Patrick [] the youngest brother Master of the Duke of York; he is commytted to the Tower, which some holde for honor rather than for disgrace. Lord Willoughby is going very shortly; Sir Jhon Poley with the long nose is his lieutenant generall, Sir Henry Peyton, serjeant major, Sir Thomas Meutis, Sir Jhon Selby, and dyvers other captaynes go with great commande; amongst the rest, Knightly, my Lo. Treasurer's man, is a preyvate captayn, and yet never saw the warres. Ther are 2,000 men going for Virginia, and some others are going for the Newfoundland. Captayne Sir Henry T. . . . go for Persia, and many gentlemen go with him The Heretique was burned lately in Smythefielde . . . Sir Thomas Som-mersett was hurte with a fall, and so rann not at tylt.

10. July. The same to his cosin Framlingham Gawdy . . . The instalment of the three Knights of the Garter, my Lo. of Rutland, Sir Geo. Villiers, and Lord Lyle was on Sunday last wher the Kyng was, and cam to Whythall on Tuesday, when I saw him that day create 2 barons in their robes, Sir Jhon Hollys and Sir Jhon Roper. This last week a yong gentleman, Mr. Malby, was drowned in the Teames, who within [a] weeke shuld bothe have bene knighted and marryed to Sir Oliver Lamberte's daughter. Sir Oliver Senjohn is going over Lo. Deputy to Ireland, and Sir Henry Dockerey, Treasurer. Lo. Hayes this day beginneth his jorney to Rochester, and so for Fraunce he and all his company, with exceeding great bravery. Lady Wrothe's sonne and heir dyed on Saterdag last, by which meanes there is an oncle come to a great estate. The King beginneth his progress next weeke. The Quene goeth to Otelandes, where she remayneth till his Majesties returne out of his progresse. My Lo. Cooke is in great disgrace with his Majestie, Sir Robert Rich hathe put him to great trouble; he is suspended from the Counsayle, put by his circuite, and all the dysgraces layde uppon him that his adversaries can devyse; many are very sorry for him. The Quene's Majestie is his great frende.

n. d. The same to Parliament dothe begynn the 5th of Aprill, being Tuesday. Have a care concerning yourselfe in that businesse, bycause ther ar many labor for places in the House. We saye heare that directly Sir Herry Benningfeild shall be knight of the sheire. To tell you of my Lo. of Sommersette's marriage, the great gyftes of plate, and the great bravery was ther with maskes wer very stale; the lyke was at my Lo. of Rosborue marriage, only with a pastorall. I will not trouble you with any other particulars, only at the last marriage, Mr. Haydon did very much overshoot himselfe, and as it is thought will never recover his former favor; he is commytted to the Fleete, wher he is likely to continewe, for every man condemnes him, and no man takethe his parte; that very day his father was put out of possession of Bakensthorpe The sonne did carry himself in this businesse towards my Lo. of Essex so idly and unadvisedly as his very best frendes do alltogether dyslike therof. My Lo. of Sussex and Sir Mihill Stanhop have agreede of a marriage to be presently solemnysed. My Lo. assureth all his land but 200l. a year [to] my Lo. Fitzwalter, and Sir Mihill Stanhop gyveth his daughter 700l. a yeare in present, and 800l. a yeare more in reversion. Ther is another marriage agreed on betwixt Mr. Radney (that went over with Mr. Seymor) and Francke Southwell, it sholde have been presently performed, but uppon some occasion it is deferred. The matter for the duelles that was censured in the Starre Chamber I imagine you have heard of; only this I have observed, that the carryer of the challenge was fyned at 500l., whereas he that sent the challenge was fyned but at 200l. The order shall be brought downe at the assyses, and there published, and the lyke shall be done in all circuitues of Englande . . . Mr. Talbot, a prisoner in the Tower, was fyned at 10,000l., imprysoned during the King's pleasure, and acknowledgment of his fault at the next Parlamentes both in England and Irelande: he is an Irishe man worthyly punished for his vylde and eronious speeches in saying that the Pope had power to depose Kynges This sommer the Frenche Kyng shall receive his wyfe out of Spayne, and delyveres his owne syster to them I can not forget the faire Lady Gardiner, who is lately come over, the most complete and accomplished lady that lyves in this lande.

[1616], 10 June. The same to Report that my Lo. of Somersett and his Lady are bothe condemned to be hanged; and it was reported my Lo. sholde have bene executed; but everybody is of opinion they shall bothe lyve . . . My Lo. is kepte closer prisoner thin she is, and weareth his George and Garter dayly, thoughte at the day of his arraignment he very idly put it of himselfe: there are but 3 causes can make these knightes be dysgraced, the one is flying from the Kyng's standard, the other treason, and the last heresy. Yesterday, being Monday ther wer dyvers released out of pryson concerning that businesse, being all bayled at the King's Bench barre for their apparances when they shall be called for, Mr. Coppinger and one Andrewe, out of the Tower, Mr. Whitakers, out of the Flete, for carrying a letter and mony to Mrs. Turner from my Lady of So[mersett], one George and Mrs. Horne, out of the Marshalsea, and Megg, Mrs. Turner's mayde out of Brydwell, who, amongst many other good deedes had

G. E.
FERRE,
Esq.

G. E.
FREER,
Esq.

poysoned a catt. Ther is a newe Chaunceler of the Duchy, Sir Thomas Deekam, by the deathe of Sir Thomas Parry Upon Sunday last he was sworne of the Pryvy Councell, and with him Sir Fraunces Bacon, Mr. Attorney, the same day, whose favor is exceeding great with the King, for he is very shortly to be made Lo. Keeper of the Great Seale. Sir Henry Yelverton to succede him in his place, and Sir Randolph Crue to come into his. My Lo. Chaunceler resigneth up his place, and shall be created Earle of Cambridge and Lo. President of the Councell; Sir George Villiers shalbe made Vicount Beaumont and Earle of Leicester. My Lo. Coke is in some dysfavour with his Majesty, and by reason of envy hath got many enemyes. I thinke Sir Thomas Mounson is buried in oblyvion, for ther is not any speache now concerning him or his arraignment. It is thought his brother will be shortly delyvered. Mr. Attorney never went to Westmyenster Hall this terme, neyther can he plead any causes any more, since he had that honor bestowed upon him Some thinke he shall not be sworne in the place till the next terme, but it is most certeyne he shall have the place My Lady of Salisbury is brought to bed of a boy, and they say the King will be godfather.

PASTON LETTERS.

1564, Sept. 12. Fywye. Robert Stele, clerk to William Paston, Esq., offered 2s. 8d. yearly for every acre of arable land, and for the bruerie as hath been theretofore going with the same, if Paston will give him a lease thereof for 21 years.

1564, Oct. 14, Tuesday. William Gurney to William Paston. "For 20 combes of mawlte, 16 hoggesheades of beare for your owne table, and for every combe of mawlte one hoggeshead of yeoman's beare for your howsolde, and if you will deliver him two tonnes of hoggesheades he will fynde the rest of vessels to be delivered in barrells or have barrells at your worships plesure. The bande of the barrell is 4 ferkynes and every ferkin howldeth 9 gallowes; so the hog's head being a barrell and a half howldeth 54 gallowes."

May 3. Jo Brampton to William Paston, Esq. . . . News; two ambassadors are come out of Scottlande, as some thinke, to crave the Quene's goodwill and assent that the Earle of Lynnes his sonne, may marre with the Quene of Scotts, who as it is credable spoken is very farre in love with the said yonge lorde. Some againd do report that he is married unto her already; and his father is chiefe and protector of the realme of Scottlande: his wife is here and charged to kepe her chamber verie straitly. Thearle of Leicester hurte his legge with a fall of his fotecloth nagg . . . Mr. Nowell Deane of Powles, hath made an anwere to Mr. Dorman his booke, the whiche is now in printinge, but Mr. Juel his anwere will not come out as [we] here before Michelmas . . . P.S.—Yesterday, my Lord of Norfolk, his grace, with a great number of the nobilitie have passed their tyme in the cocke pitt, where, as I here, my Lord's grace have speedd verie well, and wone 200l. by report; but suer I think very littell lesse. My Lo. of Sussex, my Lord of Northumberland, my Lo. of Shrewsbury, my Lord of Darby, my Lord of Strange, with others, were there.

1566, Aug. 23, London. Robert Turner to Mr. Leeds, Master of Clare Hall, Cambridge. P.S. You shall receyve by Hobson, the caryer, an C. oranges and xx. lemands from your cosyn Mr. Dormer.

[1570], April 28. John Brampton to Clement Paston, Esq., at Oxned It is said that newes cam to the courte this present day that my Lord Scrope hath gyven a great overthrowe in the west borders of Scotland, and burnt 10 or 12 of the Lord Hume's and other lords towards in Scotland taken 500 horsemen, but what the Earle of Sussex hath done as yet we heare nothing.

n. d. [Bertrand Themylthorpe] to Sir W. Paston . . . Sir Miles Partridge upon Friday last was condemned and adjudged to dye for felonye; and a proclamacyon was published upon Saturday concerning the pryces of wyne; the Gascoyne wyne at 106s. 8d. the tonne, and French wyne, 5 marks the tonne.

1622, Oct. 30, Kettringham. John Heveningham to his sister Lady Paston.—The gentleman who oweth the chest of viols will not sell them under 10l.

1623, Sept. 11. Edward Paston to his cousin Lady Katherine Paston.—He says that one offers a rent of 8s. a year for pasture land at Middleton on a lease for 7 or 8 years.

Jan. 26, Cambridge. William Paston to his mother.*

* See also Paston's letter to Sir W. Paston, and daughter of Sir T. Rabyatt.

—The King is expected here on Candlemas day or the day after.

Feb. 22, [1624], C.C.C. Cambridge. The same to the same . . . My tutor and I were at the court at Newmarket yesterday, where we saw the Prince, the Duke and many other noblemen, but not the Kinge, by reson he was not well.

1626, last of March. Katherine Paston to her son William . . . This day being Friday we had comfortable news, from Yarmouthe, that the Kinge have bine pleased to send 8 brave ships to gward the seamen; ther ar gon bye this day a very great fleet of Island men; and two ships of the King's gone to them; the North Sea men are shortly to sett oute, and 4 of the King's ships shall goe to them, and other 2 great ships well appoynted to seckoor the seas; our men begins to be cheerly agayne and packe to Yarmouth dayly.

n. d. The same to the same . . . Tom Harbston will tell the of the fayer shipe which is rune on grownd within Mr. John Smith's liberty, sayd to be as great as the Dans ship which cam up longe sine; ther is not on livinge thinge in her of man or beast; sum thinke it is a riffled ship of the Kinge of Denmarke, because it have a witt Lion badge as the other Danish ship had; sum thinke she is a Dunkerk; but God know what she is.

n. d. The same to the same . . . I doe send the a new sute of sattine to weare this comencment, as allso a payer of silke stockins, poynts, garters, and shoe strings, and a silver girdell sutable to weare with those things that are silvered.

n. d. The same to the same . . . I am sure you have longe ago heard of the rute the Dunkerks made at Bacton, to Mr. Tomson's great losse, and of the both musket and canon shot they sent among the people what time Koke and his sone came down to the seae side and made the company rune faster away than the Dunkerk's bullets.

1627, May 3. The same to the same . . . The news here is a good Ceall better for the fleet, then was that which was stiringe at thy goinge away; ther are near 200 sayll of Northe Sea and Castle men com safte to Yarmouth: ther was a little lose, 3 or 4 ships by on Dunkirke . . . sine which time ther have not bene a Dunkirke seen in our coastes, but heer ar 2 Hollande men of ware have ships excent well provided of great ordinance, and as it said 300 men a pece in them; these score our seae and were a good whill taken for Dunkirks, but they are true frendes to our coastes.

1635, Aug. , Oxned. The writer having received an order from Lord Matravers, one of the Lord Lieuts. for the county requiring to view and exercise the cuirassiers under his command, he directs the addressees to summon the persons under named [the names are not there] to meet and exercise. Owners of horses are to put on armour and dress their horses in it, and when the horse is eating the groom is to discharge his pistol first by powder in the pan and then by charging the pistol with powder, the better to inure the horses to the sight of armour and the noise of powder, &c. (Draft.)

1636, Feb. 7. Copy of opinion of twelve judges of the right of the King to levy ship money.

1642, Oct. 19. Sub nocte. to Sir Wm. Paston, K^t, at Norwich . . . On Tuesday letters came from my Lord Wharton that he had made a soldierlike retreat from Kidderminster, excusing his not fighting with Prince Rupert in regard of the inequality of numbers; but it is commonly and confidently reported by others that for haste or fear he left some waggons and 3 or 4 pieces of ordnance behind him.—There came last night from Worcester and that county 3,200 weight of plate. The Earl of Warwick is come and is made General of Essex and Middlesex. Northumberland hath accepted of the Admiralty, and is made Generall of Kent, Sussex, and Surrey. Pembroke is made Generall of six Western Counties, and goes down to-morrow to suppress Sir Ralph Hopton, who by report hath between 6,000 or 7,000 foot, 500 horse, and 12 pieces of ordinance. There came a post this day at noon that the 100,000l. sent his excellence was come safe to Worcester; it was a booty which P. Rupert aym'd at, but his intelligencer or his tribe was not good. There is an order made that whosoever will not give to the Parliament shall be imprisoned, which yett must not safe his goods from being distrayn'd. Seven commissions are gone into Cumberland and Westmerland to rayse or Papists or Protestants alike. I defend nothing, but there are some think the King may as well use Papists as the Parliament use Brownists and Anabaptists. Cumberland and Westmerland are entring or have entered into a like

G. E.
FREER,
Esq.

G. H.
FREEM,
Esq.

condition of agreement as Yorkshire hath done. The Scotts are sending commissioners hither, and desire to know of the House what convoy they shall send along with them for their safety, and the House hath left it to them to send what they please. The D. of Angolesme is come to the Haughe with kind letters from the King of France to his sister of England to winter with him at Paris. There was a committee to be appointed this day upon a special business, and Harry Martyn moved that it might rather he was (be by way?) of commission, for in that every man alike, but in a committee there was difference of Lords and Commons, which he did hope would not be long. Sans ceremony, I am ever your fidelissimo. P.S. 20 Oct. 1642, hora 9^{ma} in aurora. It is generally reported that the King is at Meryden, within 4 myles of Coventry, and that P. Rupert follows the King with the horse 4 miles behind him; that the King sett downe it is thought his excellence will rise, and the Marquis Hertford is to follow him with those forces which he hath.

1654, Aug. 8, Lucca. R. Santrill to Sir Wm. Paston. —He had ordered his brother Hewytt to buy 4 geldings from England; but found that two persons had kept 2 bandits at Pavia 25 days to murder him (Santrill). Asks Paston to help choose the 4 horses and also 2 nags for ladies, and to get a license from his Highness our Protector.

1658, Sept. 24. Wm. Persall to Sir Wm. Paston, Bt.—Only the news of the French besieging Dunkirk, the Spaniards slighted the outworks of Mardyke, and 2,000 are put into the inner fort, Blockhouse, and 3,000 into Dunkirke. Donne John lyeth a distance of, but is not so numerous as to sight, but lyeth wayting advantage. I hear his Highness intends the meeting of the Parliament in November, and the judges now returned from their circuits are consulted with about calling the other House. Our Queen Street news is ill; my Lady Rivers is in a very ill condition of health My Lady Ann Brudenell hath had 18 of her domestick servants sick in the country of this new disease, and Sir Charles Sidley hath lost two footmen of it.

1662, Oct. 30, Paris. J. Clayton to Sir Wm. Paston, Bt.—Account of Wm. Paston (son of Sir William) dying of the small pox at Paris.

[166], Oct. 3. Wm. Persall to Sir Wm. Paston, Bt. . . . Give me leave to render you the history of our Queen Street family, and the reason of the bill on the door which found at my coming up. They had intelligence that the constables were to come and present the names of all church absentees popishly affected; so they consulted in my absence and resolved to set the bill on the door, and give it out my Lady Rivers was in the country, Sir Francis Petre in common garden out of the parish, Sir Will. Persall gone to live at his house in the country, none but servants left; when every day half a dozen coaches came to visit us, and the baskets of meat as full as ever, and two or three brewers still carrying in ale and beer; and all for Tom Browne who, poor man, is already half damn'd with telling of lyes to all that come to inquire of us as well friends as others. But they have given us in as Tom Brown reported that we are all gone except my Lady Mary, who is but 15, and so incapable to take the oath; and yet I hear they have taken our names again.

Letters to and from Robert Earl of Yarmouth.

1669—1683.

n. d. Ro. Paston (2nd son of Lord Yarmouth) to Lord Yarmouth. Congratulations on Lord Yarmouth being chosen steward of Yarmouth. "I am every day more in love with France than other; we are very merry here; we meet at some gentlewoman's house or other every night, and dance a masquerade till 12 or 1 of the clock; the women here are much better humoured than ours are in England."

1669, March 25 [T. Henshaw] to Sir Robert Paston.—Chemistry or Alchemy.—The Earl of Rochester, upon more sober advice is gone into France, but first 'tis reported did most solemnly ask pardon of Harry Killigrew for the affront he offered his father. Sir J. Denham is gone to see the great secret of the infernal shades, and was buried last night. Le Febre is suddenly dead of an apoplexy; into the office of the King's surveyor Dr. Wren is already admitted, and 'tis believed Dr. Williams will be successor unto the other. We have given a fresh alarm of the King of Spain's death by a letter from Jack Vowell, grounded on a report brought into Dartmouth by a ship from Bilbao, who brought news Don John was crowned King; but 'tis thought we had fresher news from Madrid than they, and think the King is not dead yet, but not likely to live many months. The King of France gave order to his Ambassador, the Marquis de Villars, to see the Spanish King, but he could not be admitted; then his instructions were to get the best intelligence he could of his health, and to send his advertisement by several expresses that they might not be intercepted by the Spanish ministers. His most Christian Majesty has also commanded all officers and governors in South France to repair to their several posts that they may be in readiness to receive his orders, and 'tis believed that as soon as the King of Spain is dead, his army will be ready to march into that country, not on his pretence who has both solemnly abjured and under his hand and seal renounced that intention, but the Dauphin, his son, is to claim his right who was not then born, and the King will only serve as a volunteer under him. The Duke's closet at Whitehall was broke open last week, and because a rich George which lay on the table, two gold watches, a pair of silver candlesticks were untouched, it was thought it was only a design to rifle his papers, which gave a great alarm here; but upon the Duke's return he found no papers missing, but 700 guineas, besides many gold medals of great value taken out of an iron chest they had wrenched open; the actors not yet discovered. Sir William Coventry and his nephew, on their submission, are released out of the Tower, but discharged of being Privy Counsellors and Commissioners of the Treasury. The Lord Keeper grows so infirm that he desires to resign his office; 'tis said Bishop Wilkins shall succeed him, but I think on no other ground than that he is a great favourite. This day John Crook, the bookseller, after 4 months sickness of the dropsy, was buried Hodge Vaughan and Godolphin, the page, are gone from the King and Duke to see how the Queen Mother does, who they say is very ill, and has been let blood three times.

1669, July 31. T. Henshaw to Sir R. Paston. . . . The King went down two days since to Sheerness, and returns to-day; a good part of the new work there is fallen down, by reason the foundation was so rotten. . . . Last week Mr. John Lovelasse, Lord Lovelasse's son, riding home from Oxford, after a good large dose of the University Helicon, fell off his horse and broke his neck; he was taken up dead to every one's thinking, but a lucky handed fellow in the company laying him down again on the ground, and setting both his feet against his shoulders pulled his head so strongly that his neck-bone came in again, and he returned to motion and sense, being now in a hopeful way of recovery. The King they say now goes no progress this year, but only hunts for a week at Bagshot; if that prove true it will spoil my journey for Worcestershire this year. There goes a report that Candy was taken after the arrival of the French fleet and before the landing of their army; . . . if it prove true it gives a shrewd crisis of the King of France's fortune, and will reflect with dishonour on the conductors of that fleet and army. On the other side if the siege should be raised it would go near to cost the life of the Grand Signor himself, as well as the Viziers; the soldiers, as well as the burghers of Constantinople and Adrianople, being so incensed that so many lives have been lost without taking the town, that the Grand Signor is retired to Larissa (the town in Macedonia where Achilles was born) for these 7 or 8 months, as much for his own safety as to take care of their army in Candy.

1669, Aug. 28. The same to the same. . . . The truth is in 7 years and a half I have seen the King I have never seen his face in anything but flesh and blood, as Capt. Bessus said. Last year there was an assignment on hearth money for one year's wages, and because the farmer's told me they had so much in arrear to them that it would hardly be paid in their time, I was so slack in my solicitation that I did not call upon Downing's clerk above 20 times concerning it, which made so little impression that I had no warrants passed nor will not be these 12 months . . . Will. Russell was married to the great heir, the Lord Vaughan's widow, who it is generally computed will be worth him 8,000*l*. Lord Anglesey and Lord Ashley's son were plying their business at your cousin of Rutlands, and 'tis thought that each of them has by this time got a Tartar. Sir Will Backhouse died on Monday last Our good friend Sir Ed. Filmer has gone to see what mushrooms the Elysian fields will yield; he took his flight thither from France, and therefore out of respect and civility to the place would die in the religion of the country, Catholick Romain Pargetor, the goldsmith, has been detected to have bought clippings of coined silver, and to have held correspondence with those kind of rogues; he has put in bail of 30,000*l*. to answer at the sessions, and his

G. H.
FREEM,
Esq.

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

estate is already begged at adventure. The King begins his progress on Monday, but goes no further than Winchester and Southampton, the chief design being to hunt in the New forest. He will defeat the Earl of Pembroke, Lord St. John, Lord Ashley, to whose house he invited himself when he intended to go as far as Plymouth, which dispensation he has quitted for this year, being told by the Earl of Lauderdale that he need not ride post after a town that will not run away from him, and that it is neither safe nor decorous for so great a Prince to appear in so remote a part of the kingdom with only half a score of dusty followers. The Queen and Duchess in the meantime will go to Hampton Court to give opportunity to the housekeeper to cleanse and sweeten Whitehall. Here is lately come a French minister to court, a great calculator, and, if his own testimony may be credited, the most accurate chronologer that ever was, one that by strength of Cabala can tell of what colour and fashion the Queen of Sheba's stockings and roses were of.

n. d. [Sir R. Paston to T. Henshaw]. Copy by Henshaw. Says that the King professes an intention not only to make a considerable addition to his (Paston's) fortune, but likewise to place a mark of honour on him; and that the King has performed the first far beyond his (Paston's) deserts. Says that it has been rumoured that the King intends to make him a Lord. Hopes the title will be "Paston, the ancient seat and estate of our family."

1669, May 5. [T. Henshaw] to Sir R. Paston Notices the hopes of the Queen being with child.—It is begun to be believed that the Chancellor may have leave to return next Parliament: The Lady Mordant doth much interest herself in his concerns, and doth hold cabals with no small ones about it.

1675, July 25. Beck Hall. Margaret Bedingfield to [Lady Paston]. Speaks of the pleasure she had in her visit to Oxnead.—The price Sir Robert Kemp paid for his honour was above 1,500*l*. Sir Nicol, who went without it, six or seven . . . Mrs. Michell is in the height of her progress at the two Sir John's houses. Some say, but 'tis not to be believed, that Seamer, the Speaker, sueth Sir J. in the behalf of a grandchild of my Lady Craffs.

1673, March 1. Ow. Hughes to Mary, Viscountess Yarmouth.—He greatly lauds Lord Yarmouth (who had just succeeded Lord Townshend as Lord Lieutenant).—Some of the other party say that Popery is to be introduced, and that Lord Townshend upon that account was laid aside.—Names some persons as fit to hold commissions.

1673, March 1. Edm. Wharton to Lord Yarmouth, at the Golden Ball, in Suffolk Street. Congratulations on Lord Y. being made Lord Lieutenant.

1676, July 19, Norwich. Jo. Jasburgh to Lady Yarmouth.—Tells of Lord Yarmouth's entry yesterday into Norwich.

1676, July 19. Lord Yarmouth to Lady Yarmouth. Gives an account of his going to receive the Lord Chief Baron. At the Castle the Judge read his commission, in which he, Visc. Yarmouth, was by mistake called Earl of Yarmouth.—He is on the bench with the judge while writing the letter.

1676, July 29. The same to the same.—Account of the Lord Chief Baron's visit to Oxnead . . . Bowers, the coffee-house man, shall rest 'till I come up. I have more of the town of Yarmouth that watch him, and will ferret him, for they have put down his coffee-house, and now, understanding he sells ale and mum, they send this week to levy the 20*s*. for the first offence, and the next offence is the house of correction . . . I will write to the Lord Treasurer when the assizes are done, and give him a full account of all things.

1676, July 21. The same to the same.—Account of two trials before the Chief Baron. In one, 4,000*l*. damages were given to Lord Townshend against Dr. Hewse. Lord Townshend offers to remit all if Hewse and his wife will promise to hold their tongues for the future. Then came on Dr. Hyleard's, which would not bear water, which the Chief Baron finding it makes a proposal, which he took an answer to before he gave instructions to the jury, that if great damages were given, and Hyrne purged of forgery, they should be remitted. So 300*l*. given Hyrne, which at the bar he frankly remitted, as well as all causes depending for the riot. The Doctor and he made mutual promises to live in amity . . . Yesterday night, at Lord Howard's garden, was above 50 coaches; the walks as full as Spring Garden, and in I went, and saw dancing on the bowling green by torchlight.

1676, Jan. 6. Lord Yarmouth to Edward Le'Strange,

Esq., at Alderman Briggs's, Norwich.—Says he cannot attend the meeting of the Deputy Lieutenants, but he desires they will take Sir William Mason's pension into consideration, who was a follower of the late King from Nottingham to the delivery of Pontefract Castle, besides his being near fourscore years old.

[1676], August 23. Henry Bedingfield, junior, to Lord [Yarmouth]. Congratulations on Lord Yarmouth's escape from the rogues.

[1676]. Elizabeth Paston to the same. Similar congratulations. (She was wife to Wm. Paston, eldest son of Lord Yarmouth.)

1678, Oct. 28. Earshum. William Parker to Lord Yarmouth. Tells of having searched houses of Roman Catholics for arms.

1678. Copy of warrant by Lord Yarmouth to impress seamen for the Royal Navy, and copy of instructions for the pressmasters; and of a ticket to be left at the houses of such as withdrew to avoid being impressed.

1678, Jan. 31. Copy of a letter, stating that the King has issued writs for new elections, and the writ for that county will be executed the 10th of February, and recommending Sir Christopher Calthorpe and Sir Nevill Catlyne.

[1678]. Copy of Lord Yarmouth's letter to Dr. Hildyard, recommending the same persons as above.

[1678]. Copy of Lord Yarmouth's letter to the H. of Lords, expressing his concern that the H. of Commons is offended with his letter (recommending persons to be knights of the shire), but explaining that it was written after Sir J. Hobart had declined to stand.

1679, March 7. Copy by Lord Yarmouth of his letter to Lord Mayor of London, to persuade him not to have the Duke of York left behind, when the King goes into the City.

1676, March 26, Oxmead. Edw. L'estrange to Lady Yarmouth.—Yesterday the high sheriff, with 7 or 8 other gentlemen, dined with Lord Yarmouth, and resolved to use their endeavours to prevent of Sir J. Hobart to make void the late election for the county. The original of the letter to Dr. Hildyard [Hildyard] is safe, and Mr. Scarborough declares he will not show his, and I hope Mr. Britiff has not parted with the original of his.

1679, April 6, Oxnead. The same to the same. On the same subject.

1679, May 29. Memorandum by J. Hildyard of his expenses about his being in custody of the messenger of the H. of Commons (in the matter, I suppose, of the two preceding letters).

1679, June 19, Brussels. E. Lake to Lady [Yarmouth] . . . Upon the receipt of your letter I did address myself immediately to his Highness, and presented him with my Lord and your Ladyship's duty, and that my Lord was resolved to adhere to his oath of allegiance, which his Highness did seem very kindly to resent, and commanded me to present his service to my Lord and your Ladyship, and to assure my Lord that he was ever confident of his sincerity and loyalty, and wished that all England was so well principled and enclined as my Lord is. I am sorry that the present face of things in England give us no encouragement to hope their Highnesses speedy return; . . . yet their being here is rendered more grateful by the accession and expectance of some persons at their Court. Lady Betty Felton the Duchess received with great joy. My Lord and Lady Peterborough are expected next week, and about a fortnight hence the Duchess of Modena from Rome.

1679, July 14, Gressenhall. Edward L'estrange to Lord Yarmouth. About the intended new election, Parliament being dissolved, and a new one to meet the 7th October.

1679, July 16, Norwich. The same to the same.—Election matters . . . This day the town of East Dereham delivered in an account of their loss by the late fire upon oath, which amounted to 19,000*l*.

1679, Aug. 8, Norwich. The same to the Countess of Yarmouth.—Account of the Earl's splendid reception on his return to the county.

1679, Aug. 27, Oxnead. The same to the Countess of Yarmouth.—Details of the election for the county, when Sir J. Hobart and Sir P. Glean were returned. The writer attributes the defeat of Sir C. Calthorpe and Sir Nevill Catlyne to the fact of the latter not appearing.—The election for the city of Norwich will be on Monday, and he thinks Lord Paston is secure to get in.

1679, Sept. 3. The same to the same.—Details of the election for the city of Norwich. Lord Paston had 1,415 votes, Capt. Briggs, 1,217, Mr. Paine, 958, and Mr. Bacon, 838.

G. E.
FREERE,
Esq.

G. E.
FRANK,
Esq.

1679, Sept. 26, Beckhall. Earl of Yarmouth to his wife. Account of the dinner at Lynn, where he had King John's cup to his nose. He and his son Robin were made freemen.

1680, March 23, Norwich. To the Earl of Yarmouth, Treasurer of his Majesty's Household. Original address of congratulation, signed by upwards of 20 persons, and under the seal of the town, on the occasion of the Earl's promotion, together with his fortunate nuptials.

1680, Copy of address by the freemen and citizens of Norwich to Wm. Lord Paston and Augustine Briggs, Esq., citizens elect for the Parliament to be held at Oxford, 21 May 1680.

1680, April 8. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange, Esq., at Gressen Hall. Recommends that the county of Norfolk should send a loyal address to the King.

1680, March 21. Copy of speech make at Oxford by the King. A satirical composition.

1681, May 12. The Earl of Yarmouth to . . . The Norwich address pleased the King most infinitely. How if we had such an one from the gentry and county. A thorough reformation of D. Lieutenants and justices and constables and militia men is intended throughout England; therefore send me up a list of the justices and mark some with a dash: send me the names of such as are fit to be put in. I intend to put in execution such instructions as I shall have to the height when I come down. The King's affairs go well, and he saith he'll stick to his friends and fear no enemies. The Duke will shortly be here; the Lady Anne, his daughter, is to marry the Prince of Hanover.

1681, July 5. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange, Esq. Suggest that the county of Norfolk should give a present of money to the King . . . things begun in despair often succeed, and his Majesty begins to show Lobb's pound to his enemies, and more will follow the great Lord,* who was brought from the heart of the city to his examination by two single messengers, and sent to the Tower with as slight a guard, no man taking notice of him.

1681, July 8. . . . to Earl of Yarmouth. The jury brought in ignoramus upon College, in the teeth of 4 point blank evidences, and a fifth strong presumption of Sir Wm. Jennings.

1681, July 9, Bungay. John Doughty to the Earl of Yarmouth, at his lodgings in Pall Mall.—Upon reading the confession of Fitz-Harris, and the account of the indictment of College, he tells of a letter sent to Mr. Cattlowe of Beccles, draper, which contained passages of a similar tendency to the confession and indictment, and suggests that the King should be informed.

1681, July 23. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange.—About the coming musters.—Pray spirit up all my friends. The King will be King yet, and the Duke will shortly be here again.

1681, Oct. 3. Ant[hony Sparrow, bishop of] Norw[ich] to Countess of Yarmouth . . . Our city is triumphant in the King's . . . , who was pleased to own it last week at Newmarket for his loyal city, to the envy of some others . . . His Majesty sent a command to Lord Chamberlain to put out of commission that busy Sir Gervas Elvis, and accordingly it was done.

1681, Dec. 12, Oxnead Hall. John Fisher to Earl of Yarmouth.—Account of the reception of Lord Paston in Norfolk and Norwich.

1681, March 15. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange . . . You will receive a black box directed to you at the Bell in Thetford with all the commissions signed that you sent me up. I am surprised to hear the Duke landed at Yarmouth, lay at Norwich, and not to have a single letter by the last post from any soul, but from a letter I saw to a stranger, I to my comfort hear the reception was well, for I know he has an opinion that the most part of the gentry of our county have the same value and reverence for him that I have. I desire you would recommend Musters this spring to the Deputy Lieutenants, and if we could be so fortunate as to lead the dance of England in a present to the King 'twould be seasonable.

1681, March 17. Copy of the address to the King of the dep. lieutenant's justices of the peace, and grand jury of Norfolk at the assizes for the county held at Thetford.—Against republicanism, plots, &c., and approving the Ld. Lieutenant.

1682, March 28. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange.

[1682, March 28]. Thanks to the gentlemen of Norfolk for their allusion to him in the address to the King.

1682, April 22. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange . . . I know that several counties are now at work as well as corporations for a present for his Majesty . . . I could wish Norwich would find 1,000 guineas to lead the dance of other corporations.

1682, June 18. Earl of Yarmouth to the King (Copy by the Earl). He says that Mr. Guibon (whom his son will present) is a fit subject for knighthood; is of an ancient family, his ancestors having always been knights, and he has 1,200*l.* a year.

1682, June 28. Matt Peckover to Earl of Yarmouth. Account of the meetings of the militia of the county.

1682, Aug. 11, Norwich. Edw. L'Estrange to Countess of Yarmouth.—Account of the Earl and Lord Paston being met 3 miles from Norwich by the sheriff and his whole retinue, the dep. lieutenants, justices of the peace, grand jury, militia officers, mayor, and aldermen of Norwich, and crowds of people.—There were 30 coaches, 1,200 horses, and thousands of foot. The Earl dined at the King's Head with the Earl of Arundel and 100 gentlemen.

1682, Aug. 10. Jo. Hildeyard to Countess of Yarmouth.—Account of the same reception.

1682, Aug. 11. James Fraser to the same. Account of the same reception.

1682, Aug. 11, Norwich, Friday, 7 p.m. Earl of Yarmouth to his wife.—His own account of the reception.

1682, Aug. 29. J. Taylor to Countess of Yarmouth . . . We are informed here of the Duke of Monmouth's coming to a race, and private meetings two a week by my Lord Macclesfield, Lord Delamere, Sir John Bollen, Col. Whitley, and the Earl of Derby, where there is provision made at Mr. Major's house of Chester, thence to the Earl of Macclesfield, to Col. Whitley's, and so amongst the rest of the phanatick party . . . It is high time now for the King to look about him and be sure to gratify his old friends that lost their lands for the service of him and his father.

1682, Sept. 25. Jo. Hildeyard to Countess of Yarmouth.—Account of the reception at Lynn of Lord Paston.

1682, Sept. 11, Chester. J. Taylor to Countess of Yarmouth. Account of the Duke of Monmouth's reception at Chester, viz., about 6 o'clock Saturday, he came accompanied with the Earl of Macclesfield, his son, Lord Colchester, Lord Delamere's son, Sir John Manwaring, Col. Whitley, Mr. Booty and a great company of citizens where his entertainment was at the Plume of Feathers, at 5*s.* a piece where the Duke sat, and 2*s.* 6*d.* at the other table. He was godfather to Mr. Manwaring's daughter, now Mayor of Chester, where he had his breakfast, and had a great deal of rabble always shouting and throwing up their hats. The Recorder, Mr. Williams, always accompanying him to church, where, in the morning service, the minister, one of the prebends, telling him his duty, of Disobedience and Achitophell, Henry the 1st of France, and that God would blast all the wicked and mischievous devices against the King, and make the memory of their wicked names stink in the grave . . . The fanatics, as declared by themselves, have gathered 1,000 guineas for the distressed prince, as they call the Duke of Monmouth; have weekly private meetings, no royal person is admitted; they have great banks of money, powder, and all sorts of ammunition; those that are for the King and his royal highness are afraid to speak, and all this while the King's commission for two great counties is in the Earl of Derby's hands, who daily take their parts and openly drink the Duke of Monmouth's health, and pray in private conventicles for his prosperity . . . To-night came the news to Chester that the Duke of Monmouth (by contrivance of the gentlemen that rid against him the horserace) gave him leave to win the plate of 60*l.*, which he presented to his goddaughter, the mayor's child whom he christened Heneretta, at which news the people here grew so mad that all the streets were full of bonfire, the church doors were broken open to ring the bells, contrary to the Dean and the minister's orders, and nothing was heard in the streets but a Munmouth, a Munmouth . . .

1682, Sept. 17, London. Jasper Paston to his father the Earl of Yarmouth. He took boat at Whitehall and went to Tilbury, where he saw the King and Queen, and was presented to the King by Sir Thomas Meeres, and sometime afterwards was presented to the Duke of York.

1682, Feb. 1. Earl of Yarmouth to Edw. L'Estrange. Asks him to thank the dep. lieutenants who subscribed the letter to him.

G. H.
FRANK,
Esq.

* Lord Shaftesbury.

G. E.
FREER,
Esq.

1683, Feb. 12, Horslead. Edw. L'Estrange to Earl of Yarmouth.—Last Tuesday thunder and lightning at Yarmouth in the night, which fired the spire of the great church and burned down the cross upon it, and endangered the church; but at last a desperate fellow ventured up (tho' the wind was very high), and, being supplied with water, quenched the fire. At the same time there happened a prodigious flood which flowing over the banks has done much damage to the levels about Yarmouth.

1682, March 2, Hague. Thomas Paston to Earl of Yarmouth. Yesterday he got to the Hague, and went immediately to court to deliver his letters.—The prince and princess were very kind and affable to him. He hopes to get a captain's commission in 8 days. Is just going to dine with the Prince.

1682, March 17, Newmarket. Edward Lake to Countess of Yarmouth.—His grief at the Earl's death.

1683, March 23, Horslead. John Fisher to the Countess of Yarmouth.—Account of the Earl's funeral.

1683, July 26. to the Earl of Yarmouth. It is thought the Queen of France died of the plague . . . Three Ambassadors are come from France to congratulate the King's delivery, one from the King, one from Monsieur, and one from the Dauphin. The marriage of Lady Anne that was intended to-day is put off till Sunday, because to-day was Childermas day. To-day the Duke of York presented an address to the King upon his knees, but it was read by Mr. Common-Sergeant; it came from the Artillery Company, of whom the Duke is colonel. I hear that Lady Russell has declared that the speech was penned by Dr. Barnett; if so, no answer need be made, though there be two already. (Signature cut off, arms a saltire gu. bet. 3 spread eagles.)

n. d. M. Albertz to her mother [Countess of Yarmouth]. At the back is a list of the Venetian fleet.

1683, July 28, Venice. The same to the same. Had twins at a birth, one is dead. In your letter I find the sad story of my poor father's broken heart, which was a thing I never dreamt nor would ever have imagined; the King's ingratitude amazes me.—Her brother Jasper has written to her husband to get him the command of a Venetian ship.—Much alarm with the approach of the Turks to the walls of Vienna.

1683, Jan. 31. News letter. Great frost. Fair on the Thames. The 16 sergeants mentioned in the Gazette went from the Inner Temple Hall this morning about 10, preceded by about 150 whose upper garments were all purple; then followed the sergeants, one by one, having nothing on their heads but a linen coif, having each a servant by his side who carried the Tyre belonging to that dignity. After them followed about 200 gentlemen of the long robe; in that order they walked to Westminster to the Court of Common Pleas, where the judges of the King's Bench and the Barons of the Exchequer were set in chairs to receive them. Sir Thomas Jenner was first called, and conducted from the rest by the two eldest sergeants, ushered by the Warden of the Fleet. After having made three congeés, he ascended to the bar and performed some office of a serjeant in French; then all the judges and the old sergeants were presented with a ring with this motto, "A Deo Rex, a Rege Lex." The rest, after Sir Thomas Jenner, performed the same formality. The ceremony being over they went all back to Serjeant's Inn in Fleet Street, where they dined.—A motion was made against the under-sheriff of Norwich, that the Earl of Yarmouth having brought an action of Scandalum magnatum against one Stebb, the said sheriff had made for return to the writ a Sepe (Cepi?) corpus et languetτος in persona (languescit in prisiona?) whereas affidavit is made that he is not in prison; upon which a rule was made for the sheriff to show a case to-morrow.

1683, March 12, Hague. James Fraser to the Countess of Yarmouth . . . We arrived Thursday about 7 at night at the Hague; where, after Mr. Paston had dressed himself in his best, I carried him to wait on Mr. Chudleigh the envoyé here.—Mr. Chudleigh took them in his coach to court.—The prince and princess received him very courteously, and asked him several questions about England . . . It was very good luck that both were in town, for the Princess came but 3 hours before and the Prince the night before from Deering, above 100 miles from this place. This morning he was at the Prince's levée, and waited on Mons. Bentham . . . Alderman Backwell is here in town, and is very kind to him . . . He has received the compliments of more persons of quality here at the Hague upon his new employment which I hope to get expedited.

1684, Aug. 1. Yarmouth. Luke Milbourne to the Countess Dowager of Yarmouth.—Grief at the death of Lady Yarmouth, which was industriously concealed from Lord Paston, who went to Adscot to meet the coach and charter, and with his own hands delivered it to the nominated mayor . . . The charter was carried by the chamberlain quite round the town, and saluted with 150 great guns;—shouts—bonfires—ringing of bells.

1684, Oct. 3. C. P. to the Earl of Yarmouth. I had the luck to be upon the place when your mother made both her addresses to Windsor; know nothing could be more contemptuous. She being held an indiscreet and mischievous woman, civility nor manhood will let me recount all I heard, but only so much as related to your lordship, to wit, that if you suffered yourself to be governed by her you would be held a weak person and ruin your interest at court . . . &c. &c. I thought it right you should know thus much as a welwiller to your family.

1684, Jan. 2, St. James.—Isabella Waldegrave to the Countess of Yarmouth.—The Duke says that it was not from any cause or ground of disgust towards my Lord that the Duke took not any particular notice of him, but merely from inadvertency, there being at the time when my Lord was with him a great concourse of people, and I do believe his R. H. has a most particular care of my Lord.

1685, Jan. 30. Roger L'Estrange to [the Countess of Yarmouth]. The presse of Otes's business lying wholly upon my hand, takes up every moment of my time in some respect or other, what with attendances and informations; and this will certainly hold out for 10 days.—Professes his readiness to serve her.

1685, Feb. 9, Yarmouth. Letter to Lord [Yarmouth] announcing the proclamation at Yarmouth) that day of James II., and the order for a congratulatory address to the King; and asking Lord (Yarmouth) as high steward to give advice in the matter.—Signed by Thomas Medowe, Mitchell Mew, Mayor, and 18 others.

1685, March 26. From on board the Henrietta Yacht in the River of the Meuse.—T. Chudleigh to Mr. ——. Acknowledges the addressee's letters of the 26th March, and a second letter of the 1st April, which . . . is sealed with an antique head, having on a helmet whereon is represented another head.—Says it was so bunglingly sealed that he suspects it had been opened . . . As to what you write of Monm[outh] I dare answer for it that if you can seize and convey him safe to England it will be a piece of service that you shall be well thanked for; and therefore pray go about if you find any hopes or opportunity for it, but do it discreetly without letting anything of your design appear to any but such as will be assisting to you in it, and let it not be known that I have given you any such direction as this . . . pray let me know from time to time what progress you make in this matter . . . and whether Monm[outh] be indeed, or have been so lately as you write at Liege, for I have some reason to make a little doubt of it. I am now going for England as soon as the wind will permit, where I shall be sure to give his Majesty that character of your loyalty and zeal for his service which you deserve.

1685, April 1, Whitehall. M. ——. ng to the Countess of Yarmouth, at her house in St. James's Square. This day in my hearing the King was acquainted that you did not designe to attend him at the coronation, which he doth take very ill, and that you do pretend your self sick and cannot cum. Pray madam let not that be your excuse, for 'tis your interest at this time to weight upon him and the queene at that time.

1685, Aug. 28, Hague. B. Skelton to Capt. Paston at London.—About regimental money, and army matters . . . As for the Duke of Monmouth's horses I yet have them; but I am this day bid 100*l.* sterling for Tanckard by the Duke of Lunenburg, who formerly bid the Duke of Monmouth 500 dollars for him, and if Lord Yarmouth has a mind to him for 600, he is at his service.

1685, Jan. 4. Remarks of what Miss Langford tells me of affairs in Holand.—Ferguson, Sir Pacent Wards, and all those conventeetels people due now pray for the marter's wife, and her children; and say the Duke of Munmouth was a marter for his religion, and that his sons are the rit ayrs to the Crowne, and that Munmouth party is very great and many in Amsterdam. The Prince is a ridged Presbeterian, and hath bine very kind to Munmouth party, and now the Bishop of London hath sent over to be one of the Prince's chaplins, on that was a chapline to my Lord of Essex. She tells me word Sir Edward Velors is Master of the Horse to the Princess, and he hath three sisters in Holand, and Bentyng and these Velores do govern all things. The

G. E.
FREER,
Esq.

G. E.
FREER,
Esq.

Prince is lead by them; and Mr. Shaw's wife, who was a servant of Lady Frances Velors; she doth uphold all things on the Velors's side, with the Lord Rochester and his wife, so all runs that way; and see Benting and Rochester is great with on a nother. The Princes spirits were to much broken by her Lady Governes; and I supos all the Velors com in to cary the asendant over hur, origonaly by seing what their mother did. The Princes and Prince did turne away Porter Conell, Mrs. Langford, hur son, and Mis Trelany, and another of the chaplins att an hours warning, and did not se them nor hear them speak for themselves, and without giving them any thing; and Mis Langford says she can not imagine any reason for it, but that all those 5 persons were violently set against the Duke of Munmouth, and spook against his dancings, and all those honors and favours the Prince and Princess did shew him at the Hague. I due lament all these mistaks in our Royal Family, for they have not a good tast of their freinds, nor due much discountenance, nor tak any gard or warnings as thay ought of their enemy's snairs and traps; but are taken by them. o God, what must this be in the end. o God preserve thy church and people, and lett no devices of Rome tak place; for all this quarrells, desensions, and unquiates are origonaly from them to fill the world with discord to establish them selfs, them selfs, and their religion, and to bring in the Queen of Spaine. (The above is on six pages of gilt-edged letter paper; the handwriting is large and bold and bad, but has been partly disguised by some of the letters being flourished, and small letters turned into capitals.)

1685, Jan. 9, London. A news letter.—The proclamation for proroguing the Parliament was signed yesterday . . . The Venetian Ambassadors have desired audience of Congé, which his Majesty will give them publicly with as much ceremony as is given to crowned heads. The Heer van Buningham, lately Ambassador here from the States of Holland, hath put himself not of all employments that belong to the city of Amsterdam, save that of the Governor of the East India Company. Mr. Skelton, Envoy Extraordinary at the Hague, hath desired leave to go to England for a few days . . . From Deale of the 7th, we have accounts that there was about 150 sail of ships in the Downs outward bound, and that the night before there was so great a storm that several were driven out of the Downs and not since heard of, amongst whom was a Dutch East India ship of about 600 tuns.—News from Vienna.

1686, Nov. 24, Eaton. La Croze to Lady Yarmouth. —Long letter about Lord Paston's health and progress at school.

1687, Nov. 19, London. A news letter.—Parliamentary proceedings. Seemingly from the journals.

1687, Jan. 23. Jo. Hilyard to Lady Yarmouth. (He was her chaplain.)

1688, Nov. 5. Mem. My son Yarmouth told me as follows: That the myne he did desire might be caryed on, &c. &c.—To take care of his printing Patent, for it would be of considerable value, &c.—That he would leave a letter with me for the King, if he should not return, to give the King to mind him for his promises for his children and family.

1688, Sept. 1, Windsor. Isabella Waldegrave to [the Dowager Countess of Yarmouth?] I think it well for your ladyship to come and show yourself at Windsor to her Majesty, and I am as glad as your ladyship that her Majesty was pleased to receive you so graciously . . .

1689, May 11. Robert Brand to the Earl of Yarmouth. —Letters from Scotland say that Lord Dundee's party are all dispersed, and some say he is taken. The Duke of Gordon keeps the castle still. This day the King and Queen in the afternoon in the Banqueting House received from the commissioners sent from Scotland the offers of the Crown of that kingdom, where her Majesty's took the oaths that are to be at that coronation, till that their Majesties convenience will serve them to go and receive the Crown. There is an express come this night from Ireland . . . It is concluded that Londonderry holds out. Some gentlemen that had letters from Scotland yesterday confirm it that they had killed a great many before it, and that the Duke of Berwick had two horses killed under him. There is a declaration of war against France come out this day.

1690, Nov. 7. — to Lord —. The King lies this night at Windsor. The Prince George of Denmark is come to town. Our army is in a miserable starving condition; no provisions to be had as long as the wind is westernly. The siege is raised and no blockade; we fear the enemy will fall on the army.

1689, July 22. Lord Paston to his grandmother.—Dr. Hillyard has taken a chamber for him at Trinity College, Cambridge.

1691, May 30, London. Robert Brand to the Dowager Countess of Yarmouth. I have been in the Downs with my brother in the Fleet since Monday last . . . There lie in the Downs of our fleet 56 capital ships, viz.: 5 first rates, 11 second, 32 third, 8 fourth rates, 31 fire ships; there is of the Dutch 35 besides fire ships; there is 10 more of the Dutch expected daily, all waiting for a fair wind to sail to the westward. We hear nothing of the French fleet being out yet, but there is 9 great ships come from Thouloum, to join their fleet at Brest, and there is 14 of our ships to be left to block up Dunkirk . . . I am informed by Lord Melvil's secretary that the Marquis of Athol, the Earl of Breadalban the Lord Tarbett hath undertaken to bring in all the Highland clans, for which they are to have 12,000*l.* for their charges.

1692, May 5, London. [T. Chudleigh ?] to the Earl of Yarmouth.—Yesterday several warrants were issued for the apprehension of several persons suspected of disaffection to the Government; my Lord Lichfield, Lord Scarsdale, and others went out of the way and could not be found. The Earls of Huntingdon and Marlborough are in custody of serjeant-at-arms at their several lodgings. Mr. Hastings, that was last year in the Tower, is now taken up again, and one Mr. Ridley. Mr. Ferguson is also taken and in a messenger's hands. This day there came an express from Sir Ralph Delaval to the Admiralty, giving an account of his being within 5 miles of the French coast, near St. Malo, and had met or seen no one French man-of-war, but some fisher boats that told him of several transport ships that were on the coast of Normandy; that he had sent out several scout ships to discover the motions of the French fleet, and doubted not to give a good account of the business he was sent upon.

1694, July 11. The Earl of Yarmouth to the Countess Dowager of Yarmouth.—The news here is of the peace to be declared betwixt Savoyards and France the middle of this month . . . Queen Mary is removed to Kensington for 6 weeks. Lord Sydney is come over from Ireland, and the Lords Justices are gone. Yesterday there was a report that we lost 20 ships coming home richly laden from Hamborough . . . Anselm, the secretary to the Sea Admiralty, had a hearing in Council.—Our fleet will go out to sea again in a few days; many seamen that were set sick ashore have absconded.

1693, Nov. 16, London. (A news letter.) The Lords of the Privy Council have met at Edinburgh, and have ordered some persons to be released who had lain in prison for not taking the oaths, they giving security to live peaceably under the Government and to pay one year's revenue of their estates; but the petitions of the Lords Maskerton, Osbiston, Gradon, and others, who were in prison on the same account, were refused, unless they would comply as the Act of Parliament directed. They add that Viscount Kilseath is removed from the Castle to the Tolbooth. . . . News from Paris, Rome, Hailbron.—Proceedings in the House of Commons.

1694, June 12, London. P. (or T.) H. to Mr. Watts, at the Earl of Yarmouth's, Oxnead. He gives an account of the battle between the French and the Spanish in Catalonia, translated from the French Gazette; and asks that it may be communicated to the Earl of Yarmouth . . . "For other news I refer you to Howett."

1694, June 14. John (?) Goddard to the Earl of Yarmouth.—Deplores the defeat of the Spaniards, who it is said lost little less than 10,000 men at land besides 4 of their best men-of-war, and some English merchants.—Tells of our unfortunate attack on Brest (from a letter on that subject to the Lords of the Admiralty), where, on the third landing, Tollemache, Cutts, and Danby were wounded.

1695, April 13, London. (A news letter.) Another convoy for Cales is getting ready with all expedition . . . The mob had certainly committed provost Pooley into the flames, as they did his two fine rich damask beds and their Majesties pictures, as also the Cole yard provost's sign, being King William's head, had he not escaped a back way. Thursday night the rabble finished the destruction of Finsbury prison, notwithstanding the horse and foot guards were posted in divers places to prevent them. The same day at night an extraordinary Council was held at Kensington, where the Lord Mayor and sheriffs attended and received orders to raise part of the militia, which is accordingly done, and 'tis hoped this will allay the fury of the rabble who menace the French refugees.—House of Commons pro-

G. E.
FREER,
Esq.

G. E.
FRERE,
Esq.

ceedings.—Yesterday Dover, the printer, stood in the Pillory for printing the Cheve Chase ballad, without receiving the least affront from the rabble . . . The execution of the criminals was yesterday put off, though the mob take that opportunity to reassemble. A printed paper is handed about among the Parliament men, representing the excessive grievances of the seamen since the Revolution; praying relief . . . The Danish envoy, after condoling the recent death of the Queen, had his audience of Congé. Two small French privateers, under Danish colours, coming up the river to Woolwich with some design are taken. The King went yesterday to Richmond and returned this day.

169⁸, March 19, London. C. C. Am. Theos. et Med. Dr. to the Earl of Yarmouth. Asks to be allowed to speak a few and very true words privately of a great matter; first, as a true Christian, and, secondly, as a true, experienced, &c.

n. d. The same to the same.—A letter of 3 pages professing great skill in chemistry and alchemy.*

1698, Jan. 21, Amsterdam. John de Heyden to the Earl of Yarmouth.—About some silver ore that Lord Yarmouth had given to him to get refined. He reports on it. He has a difficulty in getting saltpetre. He must have 15*l.* more at least for expenses.

A few letters and papers not exactly dated.

Printed "copy (1 p. folio) of a speech of Sir Robert Paston's, now Earl of Yarmouth, made in Parliament "in 1665." He recommended a vote of 2,500,000*l.* for the war. On the back is the following note in the handwriting of the Countess; "Upon this speech the Howse "voted 2 millions and a half for the King's servis; "and they further pased a vote for Sir Robert Paston "to cary up this bill and present it to the King at "the bar of the Lords howse, were I hope your Maty "may call to mind, That my Lord did present it "there."

n. y. Dec. 8. Sir Robert Paston to his Lady. This day from the Howse I went to Whitehall to my Lord of Bathe's to dinner, who with his Ladie and manie civill inquiries after you received me most kindlie. I stayd there till the King came from Sommersett howse, and then went up into the presence where the King was in a verie great croud, as soon as he saw me he came to me into a corner of the roome and told me, Sir Robert Paston your kindnesses to me, and more especiallie att this time ile never forgett, and if my favor and respect may ever manifest ittself to you you are sure of a friend of me. I humbly thanked his Majestie for his grace and out of modestie retired into the croud; from thence my Lord Bathe went with me to the Queene, from whome, after having kissed her hand, I had a complement, the Treasurer having told her I was the man. Saturday I am preparing for night and maine, and that night you may expect something of nouells from me, though I hope to tell you itt myself . . . The Court ladies are verie indifferent as to beautie me thinkes.

n. y. March 10. The same to the same. I hope my last gave you some satisfaction concerning my affaire: this must acquaint you with the second part of the historie. As soon as I had received my warrant my business was to gett the monie for my L. C., which Mr. Porter brought me in a bag the next day, and I being belowe in Mrs. Bettie Frayser's chamber, Sir Alexander carried them up when she was in bed, and licke Jupiter presented Danne with a golden shower; my Lady received them with all complements of my well breeding and severall other good words of mee; Sir Alexander told her that I had a request, that since I could not see her soe often as I would, that I begged she would give me her picture for my wife and I to contemplate at home . . . Pore Betty Frayser is under a sad mortification, for the King having promised her a bedchamber place, her mother-in-lawe soe misrepresented her to the Queene, that the Queene told the King that unless he imposed itt she had rather receive a poysoned dagger. This made the King say he would have nothing further to doe with her servants, has put the Doctor and his wife at variance, and Bettie is forbid her mother's howse . . . The King offered to pay her wages, which is 500*l.* a year, but at present all's lost. (At the foot is a letter added by Ch. Porter to Lady Paston, congratulating her on the grant, and saying that he will make all possible haste to pass the Great Seal.)

n. y., Sunday. M. Knight to Lord Yarmouth. When I was with the King yesterday there was a discourse of your Lordship . . . The King said that you were a man whom he vauled and esteemed infynetly, that he never doubted of your true love to him, and that you had done great things for him in your country, and that you should find him ever kind to you.

n. y., Sept. 26. Frances Burwell to the Viscountess Yarmouth.—Nothing new, except the death of Sir Kingsmill Lucy, whose loss has done more towards the expected and fearful distemper of Lord Berkeley then any or all the upps and downs of his life. The Lady now under present condemnation is the widow O'Brien, who has given Mrs. Churchill 8,000*l.* for her fine howse in St. James's Square, and has gone thither several times in the splendor of new mourning and six horses before her Lord had been dead three weeks.

n. d. S. Howard to Lady Yarmouth. The favour of your Ladyship dead me when I com out of ingland to say you wold geve me leve to wright, I was not willing to slepe so good a noportunaty as sending by won of the princess chaplens; your Ladyship knows they tolke in ingland as if the prince was not kind to the princess, but I thank them that say so ar very baes pepall, for in my days I never say a man so kind as he is, as if you ples to aske this gantelman he woll confirm whot I say, and for the princess I cant say what she desarves. I thank my selfe extramly hapy in sarving of her. holond with out her is not to be induerd. I woll trobly your Ladyship no mor et this tim, but that I am madum your humbl sarvant.

n. y., April 30. Earl of Sunderland to the Countess of Yarmouth. I have acquainted the King with all that your Ladyship was pleased to say to me; his Majesty is very sorry that what he engaged himselfe in only out of kindnesse to the city should be the occasion any dissatisfaction, but he can not now put of his supping there to-night, but has sent to my Lord Mayor to meet him there, and commands me to desire your Ladyship to take a little pains to set things right, and that you will goe there once more; all I said to you yesterday will be made good, and I know my Lord Mayor will be well pleased.

Part (4 pp. of letter paper) of a letter by A*. R. Paston to [Sir Robert Paston]. She says that the Lord Keeper is a good man and a just, although he will not meddle with their business:—"that the King would have given him [the Lord Keeper] some crown lands and an honour, but he refused both.—"The Duke of Buckingham will be your frind . . . My Lady Castlemaine "had 10,000*l.* the other day; . . . she is with child "again; Sir William Coventry is in the Tower, and "Hary Savill with him. How should have gone to the "Gate House by Order from the counsell, and many "frinds were made to prevail with the King to send "him to the Tower. My Lord and Lady Mordaunt are "coming over; my Lord of Peterburgh hath cut of "the intail of his estait, and intends to mary his "daughter to my Lord Tolington, the general's son. "My Lord Mordaunt, a great many oring tres [many "orange trees], and the King heard of it, and asked if "my Lord Mordaunt would mak a cake hous of "Milk lasey."—She urges him to give security to her mother and her brother George and some other persons, as it would be more for his honour; but she tells him to do what he wills, she only hints those things to him. Then she tells him how a gentleman had called on her to say that for a sum of money he would get a wealthy husband for her daughter.

FIFTEENTH CENTURY LETTERS.

1015. As for Robert, I would pray and require your maistership that he may for his lernyng be abydyng wyth your cousyn of Lyncoln Inne as yt was promysed, and to be occupied under a drede of dysplesure undre subjeccion wyth erly rysyng accustomed, for slouth ys the moder and noryscher of all vices, he hath cost me moche gode and labour. And now he ys upon hymaking by vertues governance or undoying to the contrarye. And yn especialle to be not conversant ne neere amonge women as I was kept from her company xxx. yeres or any such were of my councele.

1020. July 5. Bromholm. Nicholas, prior of Bromholm, to William Paston. Dere syre and weel be loved, I grete yow weel and do yow to wetyn pat dawn Johan Pastone was atte Norwiche on munday last passed, and dede settyn on cryste chyrche yates divers litteres, a lytyl tyme, and two copis whyche standyn peer, yet for somounyn me to be curt of Rome, and we supposyn to

G. E.
FRERE,
Esq.

* The writer was evidently a foreigner. The second Earl of Yarmouth as well as the first seems to have had a tendency to alchemy.

* The signature is close at the foot of the page; the writing is small, what is like A may be a cross; and the writing may be that of Rebecca, the wife of the first Earl of Yarmouth.

G. E.
FRERE,
Esq.

have hym at Bromholm or sum man in hys name wyth inne a lytyl tyme, for dawn Robert of Yorke was atte Norwiche be sendyng of my lady of Murlee and spak wythe hym in hyre hous on munday afernseyd, and per he told þe forseyd dawn Robert þat he wolde nedys ben Prior of Bromholm to lewyne and deyn þer upon, also he seyde as for þe composissoun of Bromholm he hadde go sherechyd atte Clunye and þer inne he standyth clere as he seythe, and as for provisoun he seyde he hadde spoken wyth þe Chaunceler and þe chef Justyse and astem (asked them) and þei demptyne hym clere as þer inne as he seyth, and other dowte is þer none inne be hys tale, and after þis þe forseyd dawn Johan askyd obediens of þe forseyd dawne Robert in my ladys presens, and dawn Robert sayde agayne he xulde noghte done þat atte þat tyme, but he hadde hym proun owth hys purpos as for þe composissoun and provisoun to an hende, and þan he wolde do hys dev[oir] to hym and þus he departyd, where for, yif ony ying may be don whyl ye arn now atte Londone for owre helpe and hys lettyng gode syre holpythe atte þis tyme yif it may be godely, we be seche yow, dawn Thomas of Cane was atte my lord of Norwiche for helpe in þis matier, and he seyde he was inhibytd and alle hys clerkes be þe curt of Rome in þis matter, and he seyde be youre advys yif it lyke yow Wryttes may ben taken ayens hym and þat is best remedye þer inne, Wrytte is ne ingrediatur manu forti, þe holy Trinite have yow in governaunce. Wretyn atte Bromholm þe V. day of July—per Nich., priorem de Bromholme.

1041. 6 Edw. IV. Jan. 22. Stuff which Sir John Howard delivered to his wife.

2 rynges of goold set with good dyamownts, the wyche the quene gaff my master.

A ring of gold with a fine ruby.

A nowche of gold set with a fine sapphire, a great balyse, and five pearls.

A fine piece of Holland cloth as good as Reynes, 11 yards, the yard well worth 4s.

Another do., coarser, more than 11 yards, the yard worth 2s. 4d.

A long gown of fine crimson velvet furred with miniver and purpled with ermines.

A long gown of fine green velvet furred with miniver and purpled with ermines.

Seven score skins of fine ermines.

Seven yards and a half of fine green velvet.

Seven yards of crimson velvet.

A device of gold with 14 links, half of the links enamelled, set with 4 rubies, 3 diamonds, and 7 pearls.

Another do. of the same fashion, with other 14 links, and thereon 7 rubies and 7 pearls.

A girdle of cloth of gold and the harness of gold.

A girdle of green damask and the harness of silver and gilt.

Three edges of black velvet set with 58 pearls.

A large gown of black velvet furred with martys and purselud with martres.

A long gown of murrey fringed with minever and purselud with ermines.

A collar of gold with 34 roses and suns set on a corse of black silk with a hanger of gold garnished with a sapphire.

Three owches of gold garnished with three rubies, a sapphire, an amytes, an emerald, and 15 pearls.

A pair of beads for a gentlewoman's neck gawdeild with 8 gawden of gold and 8 pearls.

A ring with a great sapphire, and another with an amytes.

Three agnus dei of gold.

A great signet of gold with the vernicle.

Five other gold rings without stones.

A chain of gold with a lock of gold garnished with a ruby.

A little girdle of silk and gold, called a demysent, and the harness of gold.

A louye of violet engreyned, furred with martres and purselud with martres.

A bed of crimson damask embroidered with Cyle counterpoynte and tester all after one.

A bed, a cyle, a counterpoynt, and a tester of aras without gold.

A piece of aras for hanging, 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ yards.

A piece of aras, 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ yards.

Another piece, 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ yards.

Another, 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ yards.

Four pieces of new aras which came late from Calais; 1 is a covertore for a bed, the other 3 are tapettes containing all 4 pieces in Flemish ells square 192.

My master left at London at his departure to Bray in his place in Bath Row the 20 Feb. 2 broad cloths of blue.

O 84062.

Item, 7 Edw. 4, March 16. he sent to my lady to Bray a long cushion of crimson velvet and 2 short cushions of crimson velvet, and a long cushion of green velvet, and 2 short cushions of green velvet.

And delivered to her a chain of gold of the old fashion, value 4 marks.

On the 16 of April 5 silver spoons.

"In 7 Edw. 4, Jany. I delivered my wife a pot of silver to put in green ginger that the King gave me."

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

G. E.
FRERE,
Esq.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF GEO. ALAN LOWNDES, ESQ., OF BARRINGTON HALL, CO. ESSEX.

This collection is large and important. The largest and most important sections are the charters of the priory of Hatfield Regis, and the correspondence relating to the military affairs of Essex and the other associated counties at the commencement of the Great Rebellion. Sir Thomas Barrington, Bart., was a member of the Committee, and was the chief man in Essex on the Parliamentary side.

Besides the Hatfield Priory deeds there are many very early ones of interest not relating to the priory. Those of the 12th century include charters by Henry I., Stephen, and Henry II., William de Bolonia, and Faramus his son, and Conan, Duke of Brittany. A deed by the celebrated Henry of Huntingdon bears the date of 1110. There are some early grants by the De Veres and Bruces. From the entire collection I have selected the oldest and most important, and have given notes of them below.

Some very early court rolls and rolls relating to the Forest of Hatfield will be noticed.

The Barringtons were seated at Hatfield Regis early in the 12th century, and perhaps before, and in many of the documents the name will be found. In the 8th Edw. II., the King licensed Nicholas de Barrington to release Robert de Brus from a debt of 94l., which sum on those terms Robert de Brus wished to contribute towards the ransom of Thomas de Mandeville, then a prisoner to the Scots.

The letters in this collection are upwards of 1,400 in number, and are arranged chronologically. In 1563 Queen Elizabeth and her Council ordered 200 soldiers to be levied out of Essex and to be sent to Portsmouth; and in 1567 and 1569 she sent letters into Essex on the subject of musters. In 1570 Thomas Barrington was thanked by the Council for his services in apprehending one Harvie, steward to Lord Morley. In 1572 the troubles in the Low Countries and in France caused diligence in the matter of musters. On the 16th of August 1588 Capt. Barrington had leave to retire with his men from the camp so that the harvest might not suffer. In 1591 John Feltwell, otherwise Jon at Wenden, was troublesome to the inhabitants at Great Wenden in Essex about tithes:—and the Queen forbade bowls, dicing, and cards, which prevailed to the decay of archery. In the next year the Queen and Council rebuke abuses in purveyance, and direct means to be taken to repress vagrants who pretended to be soldiers. In 1593 is a notice of the barbarous user of Reynolde Metcalf, a preacher, by the inhabitants of Elmsteede; and in that year the subsidy seems to have pressed hardly on some in the county. In January and July 1594 John Norden (the topographer) had letters from the Council directing assistance to be given to him in his travelling and searching for muniments for the purpose of making maps. In 1594 the exportation of grain was forbidden. In 1595 the collector of a subsidy was accused of levying it with partiality. In 1597 there are notices of Robert Buck of Thacksted having forged the Great Seal, and the hands and seals of noblemen and others; and there is a copy of Buck's confession. On the 28th of March 1603 King James was proclaimed King at Chelmsford, and on the 15th of the same month Mr. Barrington got advice from London as to the dress proper to be worn on meeting the King. In 1604 are several papers relating to Sir F. Barrington standing for election as knight of the shire. In 1628 a letter from London gives reports from Rochelle then besieged by the English, and in a letter to the wife of a baronet the title of baronetess is appended to her name. The execution of Felton is noticed; also the Lord Keeper's speech to the Parliament, and the Lady Carlisle's

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

quitting the Court because the Lord Chamberlain was not made Lord Admiral. Parliamentary complaints and other proceedings against popery, and a statement that the King declared in the banquetting house that tonnage and poundage were the free gifts of his subjects; the general grief at the probability of the King dissolving the Parliament. About this time, and long afterwards, there are letters by and about John Barrington who was always about to do something or doing something, and not succeeding in his projects. He wanted to be Captain-Governor of the Isle of Man under the Earl of Derby, and then he wanted to get a command of troops in Sweden; and he tells how some English and Scotch levies had been cut up by reason of the King of Sweden having placed them, young soldiers, in the front. In 1629 the gentry complain of being called on to pay for their knighthood; and the King orders that the foreign ambassadors' houses shall be attended by a pousuivant to attend all that attend at mass; and even the Queen's chapel was only privileged for her own household. In Ireland the Lords Justices seem to have been successful in repressing popery. About 1630 John Pym proposed to take Barrington House, as tenant. It appears from a bundle of papers that he as well as Sir Thomas Barrington were members of the company of adventurers for the Island of Providence (Pym being treasurer of the company), and that after Pym's death the company was found to have been unsuccessful. There is a statement that the King of France said that he himself would trade at sea as a merchant, so as thereby to take away his nobles' contempt for traders. In 1630 a letter dated from Watertown, River Charles, New England, gives a very favourable account of that country. In 1631 the Marquis of Hamilton had his tents in Islington Fields for the purpose of recruiting for Sweden: and the Polish Ambassador lost himself whilst hunting in Hatfield Forest; and the Earl of Middlesex is reported to have used words disgraceful to the Duke of Buckingham's memory, and, in consequence, to have been called on to pay the remainder of his heavy fine. There is an allusion to Sir Edward Coke's papers being seized because he was thought to be making a book about Magna Charta. In 1632, Robert, son to Sir Philip Cromwell, is charged with attempting to poison his master, an attorney (he was condemned and reprimed); and a woman was burnt in Smithfield for poisoning her husband. There is an extraordinary story of a porter who lived magnificently in England confessing himself to be the Pope's brother. In 1633 Sir Thomas Barrington gets letters from a minister at the Isle of Providence complaining of the small means of defence there, and of insults to him by the governor. In 1639 Serjeant Maynard writes a strong characteristic letter to Sir Thomas, denouncing the treatment which he had personally experienced from the mob at an election meeting. Sir Thomas was the chief person in his part of Essex, and a member of the Committee of the Associated Counties, and much of the military affairs of the county was under his supervision. In 1642 and 1643 are numerous letters and papers on the subject. Among the writers of letters during that period are the Earls of Essex and Manchester, Oliver Cromwell, John Hampden, Lord Holland, Sir Harbottle Grimston, Sir William Masham, Lord Grey and Wark, Sir John Temple, Toby Tirrell, Sir Thomas Honnywood, Sir Richard Everard, Sir Henry Mildmay, William Lenthall (the Speaker of the House of Commons), and many others, who took an active part against their King. Cromwell's letter of 6th August 1643 is very characteristic; and I am not aware that this or the others by him have been previously printed. Sir Thomas Barrington's letters are free from cant, but it seems that he condescended to the humour of those in power by recommending "purging" in a letter which he had written to the House of Commons.

The letters tell a good deal of news: the movement of troops and hostile engagements, and the defences provided for Cambridge, Hull, and Lynn. The Essex people seem to have suffered much from the rapacity of the Parliamentarians, and not to have been very earnest in the cause. The Earl of Manchester advanced money out of his own purse and could not get it back. In 1644 Sir Thomas Barrington died, and his son Sir John did not occupy the like commanding position in the county; in fact Sir Thomas's expenditure for the Parliament and his Providence adventures had much incumbered his estates. During Cromwell's usurpation Sir John was an adventurer for lands in Ireland, and there are several papers on that matter. In 1653, 1654, and 1657 are some long and very interesting letters by Francis Barrington from Jamaica, where the natives gave much trouble.

In the portfolio, labelled "Public Affairs," are a few papers on Irish affairs of the time of Queen Elizabeth, copies of King's speeches temp. Jas. I., and papers about the Palatinate temp. Car. I., speeches by Sir Thomas Barrington, and various papers connected with the military administration of the county of Essex at the beginning of the Rebellion.

There are many bundles of papers from which I have not made extracts. These comprise papers in 1632 about collections for the repair of St. Paul's Cathedral; papers about church matters; returns by constables (16th and 17th centuries); warrants to levy assessments; papers about the Irish Adventurers for the barony of Slane; lists of persons invited to Barrington House in 1636-1639, and of the presents brought. A petition by Thomas Staughton, citizen of London, to the House of Commons about the seizure of 250 English Bibles in 12°, and twenty-eight in 4to, out of the ship of John Bartlett.

There is a long paper on Freemasonry, written in 1665.

One of the deeds, dated in 1519, is not only sealed but signed by Sir John Bourchier, Lord Berners the translator into English of Froissart's Chronicle.

Three small quarto volumes and two volumes in 12° contain Sir Thomas Barrington's autograph notes of debates and proceedings in the Parliament of 1621, of which he was a member.

No. 1. (No. 69.) n. y. (Probably 1485 or 1486,) Feb. 20th, London.—Copy order by the Duke of Bedford to Thomas Bo[the] of Halyngbury Bowser.—Whereas he lately had granted unto him the office of Forster and Wodeward of oure Forest of Hatfeld; the Duke now finds by evidence that Nicholas Barrington ought to have the said office, he therefore desires Thomas to surcesse of any further medelyng with the same office, and to allow Nicholas to peaceably occupy and enjoy the same, &c.

(No. 2.) n. y. August 25th, Ippynghure.—Richard Harpur to Mr. Baryntone.—He asks him to send a buck, and promises to help him at the Sessions of the Forest as he is like for lack of his claim to lose his liberty of the Forest.

(No. 3.) 1563, July 19, Barrington Hall. Copy of a letter without signature or address.—He sends enclosed a copy of her Majesty's letter of the 18th of July, and a copy from the Council of the same date for the setting forth of 300 able men furnished with weapons and arms as of late hath been directed unto him. He refers him to the letter, and asks him diligently to effect the same, requiring him to send the number now to be appointed by the 24th at the furthest or sooner. And what number he now appoints out of this division with arms and weapons as shall appear by the enclosed orders.

(No. 3.) 1563, July 19th, Barrington Hall.—Thomas Barrington to [the Justices of the Peace for the county]. Encloses a copy of the Queen's letter of the 16th of July with the Councils letter of the same date, by which they will perceive that 200 soldiers are to be levied and furnished out of this shire, and also a hundred pounds is to be levied and sent with the soldiers to Portsmouth by the 30th of July or sooner, with coats, and the conduct of the whole number be prepared according to the terms of her Majesty's letter; and as lately the like number of soldiers were levied by an equal rate made for the whole shire to which H. M. Council were privy, and to which they (the justices) agreed, he thinks to save time, there is no necessity for a meeting, and desires them to make choice of the soldiers, the rather, because they are to be led by a gentleman of this country and a neighbour. They are to cause their townships to prepare coats of blue guarded in yellow, which was the colour last put out from hence, and for the 100l. they must follow the rate within their divisions as they did for the rate of the soldiers. They must have conduct money for the piece of their musters to Portsmouth, allowing to every soldier and pioneer after 5d. every mile. The men are not to come by London for fear of infection, but to Hovenden-upon-the-Hill. They (the justices) must either pay for the coats themselves or procure the money from the collectors' hands of the subsidy of the hundred, if so much remain in his hands. Lest they should mistake the number of soldiers with arms, &c., and pioneers he encloses a billet, and requires the men to be at Hovenden by the 25th of July.

A rough draft of the above.

(No. 4.) 1567, June 20th, Greenwich. Copy of a Council letter to Mr. Barentyne directing his attention to the articles which follow, and asking him to confer with the principal gentlemen of the shire, and with the officers

G. A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

of the towns corporate or liberties for the advancement of the intent mentioned in the said articles. He is to give his opinion by writing plainly, as thereupon this cause may take some good effect wherein we find her Majesty very earnestly bent to have some good orders to be established, &c. Then follow copies of Certain articles to be considered and answered by the Comysioners for the musters, for the increase of Harquebuserye, and the good order thereof within that countie of Essex. There are 17 articles in all. They are signed by N. Bacon, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earls of Northampton, Bedford, Leicester, Lords Clinton and Howard, E. Knollys, W. Cecil, R. Sadler, and W. Mildmaye.

1569, April 13th, Westminster.—Copy of a Council letter signed by the Earls of Northampton, Pembroke, and Leicester, Lords Clinton and Howard, F. Knollys, and W. Cecil to ———. About musters.

(No. 6.) 1569, May 15th, Greenwich.—Copy. Council letter signed by the same with the addition of the Duke of Norfolk.—On the same subject.

(No. 5.) 1569, May 29th, Bishopsgate Street at London.—Copy letter signed by Thomas Rowe, mayor, Thomas Henege, and William Pyckeringe to—

We have been informed by John Ayloff, gentleman citizen, resiaunt, that although he hath already certified your Lordship by a note taken out of our books within the same city, of the 27th of April last, under my hand, that he is well furnished and has in readiness a horse, armour, and other munitions fit for service, such as by the laws and statutes of this realm he is bound to have and find, yet your Lordship and others appointed by like commission in the county of Essex, notwithstanding his abode and appointment of service with us, doth call upon him eft soones to be charged with you.—And for that like as they have taken order that will not impeach any gentleman or others having their chief abode in the country, altho' they have houses and dwelling-places in the city with any service here, they hope that neither his lordship or other of the Queen's Commissioners will desire to draw any of their citizens from them to serve these contrary to their customs and liberties here, but take this their certificate sufficient for the discharge of the Queen's commission in that behalf.

(No. 7.) 1570, July 4th, Otelands.—Original Council letter to Thomas Barrington Esq., signed by the Earl of Leicester, Lords Clynton and Howard, F. Knollys, and James Croft. They have heard from Sir Ralph Sadlier, of his (Barrington's) honest travayle and diligence used in apprehending Harvie, steward to Lord Morley, and offer him their hearty thanks for the same, not doubting the continuance of his faithful service, &c.

(No. 8.) 1572, Sept. 8th, Woodstock.—Copy. Council letter to ———. Seeing the continuance of the troubles in the Low Countries, and of far greater in France, the same being so near, her Majesty cannot but have care to her own estate, and the preservation of her good subjects; therefore presently her Majesty's pleasure and commandment is, that you the sheriff shall with as convenient speed as you may call the justices of the peace together to one place to shew them her Majesty's pleasure, and you the justices of Essex, with as convenient speed as you may, divide yourselves according to the accustomed divisions, and take musters of all the able subjects within those divisions, &c. Signed by the Earls of Sussex and Leicester, W. Burghley, F. Knollys, and To. Smythe.

(No. 9.) 1573, August 3rd, Eridge.—Original Council letter to Mr. Barrington, directing him to send the general certificate of the whole shire may be duly taken. Signed by Lord Burghley, the Earls of Lyncoln, Sussex, and Leicester, F. Knollys, and T. Smith.

(No. 10.) 1582, May 1st, The Court.—H. (Earl of) Huntynghdon to his aunt, Lady Winifrede Hastings. Sir Henry Gate tells him that he has under her ladyship's hand a grant of the advowson of the parsonage of Rowley in Yorkshire.—Asks her to remember it, so that when it is void Sir H. Gate may not be prevented therein by any others. He is sure that Gate will present only a man who will be honest and learned.

(No. 11.) 1588, Aug. 16th, At Camp.—J. Norreys to Captain Francis Barrington.—Order to retire himself and company for a time from the camp, so that her Majesty's subjects may sustain no damage in their harvest by their absence, &c.

(No. 13.) 1588, March 5th, Barrington Hall.—Copy warrant to the High Constables of Harlowe in Essex, for a general watch to be holden for the apprehending of rogues and vagabonds. Signed by Francis Barrington and Richard Francks.

(No. 14.) 1591, Feb. 13th, Whitehall. Copy. Council letter to ———. John Banks, Richard Tanner, and other inhabitants of Great Wenden, co. Essex, have complained that John Feltwell, a very contentious person, hath cited several of the inhabitants into the Ecclesiastical Courts in London for tithes they have answered; but, being poor, cannot take copies of his libels, which amount to eighty sheets of paper. To avoid arrest and process at the suit of other persons, Feltwell has fled. Call the said Feltwell and as many of the complainants as you think fit, examine the matter, and certify to us the result.—Signed by John Cant, W. Bourghlie, Lords Howard, Hunsden, Buckhurst, Cecil, John Wolleye, and J. Fortescue.

There are on one sheet copies of a summons to John Feltwell, alias Jon at Wenden, to appear before the Justices of the Peace at Hatfield on the 15th of March, and to the inhabitants of Wenden also to appear there and lay their complaints, and of a letter to some of the justices, asking them to come.

(No. 15.) 1591, June 16th, Greenwich.—Copy. Council letter to the Deputy Lieutenant and Justices of the Peace of that county.—Her Majesty is informed that dyvers unlawful games are daily used in most places of this realm, and that thereby archery is greatly decayed, notwithstanding the great charge her subjects are at in furnishing themselves with weapons, still her Majesty, for very good consideration, thinketh mete, and accordingly hath called us to require you in her name forthwith to take especial care that games and pastimes prohibited by law, as bowles, diceing, carding be forbidden and not in any way used or practised in any place under your jurisdiction, but that instead archery be revived and practised, &c. Signed by John Cant, Christopher Hatton, Canc, Wm. Burghlie, Lords Darbie, Howard, Hunsden, Cobham, and Buckhurst, J. Wollie, and J. Fortescue.

(No. 16.) 1592, Aug. 4th. Copy. Council letter to the Sheriff and all the Justices of the Peace within the county of Essex.—Upon the receipt and examination of their certificates for provisions for her Majesty's house and stables, taken by sundry purveyors, and of their past intolerable abuses which are not to be suffered in any good governed State, Her Majesty being informed was much offended, and imputes some fault to the justices for their slack returning of their certificates after they had received letters expressing the Queen's commands therein.—In order to remedy these abuses the Queen orders that they and all the justices of the peace in the shire do assemble at a convenient day and place, and choose four, three, or two of the said justices out of their number, as they shall agree upon, and having received the authority of the rest, they are to make such order and composition to be taken for that shire with such commissioners as shall be authorised at the Court for the yearly providing for the Queen's house and stable, and the justices so chosen are to repair on the 13th of October next to wherever her Majesty may be to hear the Queen's commission read, and all the high constables, and four of the honestest and substantial yeomen and farmers of every parish in the county, are also to attend and to hear read all these letters that the Queen's care for the general good and quiet of her subjects and the course intended to be taken may be generally known.—As by divers certificates much money is owing to the county for provisions for her Majesty in sundry years before the 33rd year of her reign, the Queen's cofferer being paid his full demand to the day for the full satisfaction of all her subjects, and on asking of the cofferer the cause why the county was unpaid, his answer was that money remained in his coffer for sundry creditors, and that none have repaired or sent for the same. The high constables and the four of every parish are to ask of every person within their parish and inquire what money is due to them for provisions for her Majesty, and they are to set down what prices they have for the same, either by ticket, debenture, or otherwise, and the high constables are to make certificate in writing to the justices, who will take them to the commissioners, and they will receive payment thereof.

(No. 17.) 1592, Aug. 10th, London.—Copy. Council letter to (the Justices of the Peace for the county of Essex).—Whereas many enormities and disorders are committed by vagrant persons pretending to be soldiers, and that lately they swarm in such numbers as is likely to breed much inconvenience unless they are prevented.

—The Lords of the Privy Council require them (the justices) to have general watches and privy searches made and continued from time to time for taking off such idle vagabonds. Upon their apprehension, after examination as to the cause of their vagrancy, and how they excuse themselves, order is to be taken for the punishment of those who deserve it, and for the sending back

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

of those who have been employed as soldiers to the places from whence they came, where they are to be provided for, &c. Signed by Jo. Puckering, C.S., Thos. Cobham, T. Buckhurst, and Jo. Fortescue.

In consequence of the last letter, a meeting was held on the 25th of August, when it was agreed that there should be a privity search through the whole county on the following Wednesday, the 30th; that every person apprehended should be taken before the nearest justice of the peace for examination; that directions should be given to the high and petty constables in every division to stay all vagrant persons, bring them before a justice, and have careful watches kept every night.—On the same sheet is a copy of a warrant to the high constables of Ongar, Harlow, and Waltham Hundreds, to carry the above resolutions into effect.—It is dated from Barrington Hall, 27th Aug. 1592.

(No. 18.) 1592, Oct. 20th, Hampton Court. Copy. Council letter to the Earl of Sussex and the Lord Rich and other loving friends, Sir Tho. Mildmay, and Sir Tho. Lucas, Knights, and the High Sheriff of the county of Essex.—It is signed by John Puckering, C.S., W. Burgley, Lords Howard, Hunsdon, and Buckhurst, Ro. Cecyll, J. Wolley, and Jo. Fortescue. Orders for the justices of the peace and others to take the oath of supremacy.

(No. 19.) 1593, June 21st, Russell House.—Jo. Puckering to Mr. Frauncys Barrington, and Mr. Wm. Towse.—He has been informed by the enclosed petition that Reynolde Metcalf, a preacher, hath been barbarously used by some of the inhabitants of Elmestede, which seems to be true, for sentence was passed against the malefactors before the high commissioners for their punishment.—The poor man fears another attack may be made upon him, so he (Puckering) writes that if such should be the case they are to call such malefactors and procurors as Metcalf shall name before them and bind them over to keep the peace.

(No. 20.) 1593, July 8th, Otelands.—Copy. Council letter to —.—About the payment of the subsidies and six fifteenths and tenths, within the term of 4 years, owing to the daily charge her Majesty is at in maintaining the several forces in the Low Counties, Normandy and Brittany.—As the collection of the first and second subsidies are double in comparison to former times, they are to choose as collectors men of sufficient living and behaviour, and good security. Such as are justices of the peace (it is hoped that none have been admitted as such who have not in land 20*l.* per annum) are not to be assessed under that rate at least, in danger of the disgrace to be removed out of the commission. And they (the addressees) are to set a good example to others in their own assessment, and have a meeting together and agree upon it, and set it down in writing and subscribe it with their hands.—Signed by Jo. Cant, Jo. Puckering, C.S., Wm. Burleigh, Lords Howard and Buckhurst, Ro. Cecill, Jo. Wolley, and Jo. Fortescue.

(No. 21.) 1593, Sept. 30th. Ja. Morice to the Rt. Honble. my deare good lorde the lord (the rest of the address is torn off).—Asking him to abate two of his neighbours, John and Nicholas Collins, in their assessment to the subsidy, to which they inform him they are now raised; John Collins has been for a long time high constable of Ongar Hundred, and has done good service. They are both willing to be increased; one formerly paid 8*l.* in goods and the other 40*l.*, now each one is raised to 40*l.* in land.

(No. 22.) 1593, Oct. 19th, Chelmsford.—Copy of the reply to the Council letter of July 8th.—They have caused, in obedience to orders received, the sheriff of the county to summon all the commissioners to assemble themselves at Chelmsford on the 19th of this present.—They have assembled and subscribed their names with their several taxations.—Some were prevented by divers impediments from appearing.

(No. 23.) 1593, Dec. 4th.—Copy.—Indorsed: A warrant by the Justices of the Peace for the relief of maymed souldiers, Decemb. 1593.—In accordance with an Act of Parliament, made in the 35th year of her Majesty's reign, intituled an Act for the necessary relief of souldiers and mariners, it was ordained that there should be a tax of a weekly sum of money raised in every parish for the relief of maimed and hurt soldiers, the same to be assessed by the agreement of the parishioners within themselves, or in default by churchwardens and constables, &c. At the quarter sessions held at Chelmsford the 1st of July last, it was ordered by the justices there that every parish in this county should pay weekly the sum of one penny towards the said relief. And then also did elect George Harvey, of Markes, and Thomas Mildmay, of Barnes, esquires, treasurers for the same.—These are, therefore, in her Majesty's name to will and command you the churchwardens of every parish to forthwith make a taxation of one penny within your parish to commence from the Feast of St. John the Baptist, and to be continued from year to year.—To all and every churchwarden and churchwardens, and to the high constable, &c. of the half hundred of Harlowe.—Signed by Robert Wrothe, Ja. Morice, Fran. Barrington, and Richard Franck.

(No. 24.) 1593, January 27th, Hampton Court.—Copy. Council order. To all Lieutenants of Counties, Mayors, Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, and to all other her Majesty's officers and loving subjects, &c. The bearer, John Norden, gent., is authorised and appointed by her Majesty to travel through England and Wales to make perfect descriptions, charts, and maps. These are to charge and command you to permit and suffer the said J. Norden quietly, and without any manner of let or hindrance, to travel and pass from place to place about the same business, and to view, search, visit, and enquire all and every thing as shall be necessary for the procuring and perfecting of the same descriptions, charts, and maps. But also if there shall be any ancient muniments, books, rolls, or records, that may further or help his work, to aid, assist, and help him with the sight and view thereof, with all good favour, &c., and also with the help and assistance of such as shall be best acquainted with the counties for the furnishing of this so good a work. Signed by Jo. Puckering, Will. Burghley, the Earl of Essex, Lords Howard, Hunsdon, and Buckhurst, Tho. Heneage, Ro. Cecill, Jo. Wolley, and Jo. Fortescue.

(No. 25.) 1593, Feb. 16th, Hampton Court.—Copy. Council letter.—To the compounders for provisions for the Queen's Majesty's house and the rest of the Justices of the Peace in the county of Essex.—As many in the county refuse to contribute and pay the reasonable rate and proportion imposed upon them, and many towns, villages, manors, and other places claim to be privileged and exempted from purveyors, this we cannot understand, the only exception now in force being the liberty of Havering. They are required in respect of the service for the year to come to levy such rates indifferently to be imposed as they shall agree on, &c. &c.—Signed by Jo. Puckering, W. Burghley, the Earl of Essex, the Lords Howard, Hunsdon, and Buckhurst.

(No. 26.) 1594, May 20th, From the Court. W. (Lord) Burghley to Mr. Francis Barrington and Mr. Franke.—He has been informed of some bad demeanour used by Worsleie and Newill, two messengers of her Majesties chamber, in the search of Mr. Wiseman's house of Broadoake, which complaint is made unto him by the wife of Mr. Wiseman. As he understands that they (Barrington and Franke) were acquainted with the proceedings, asks them to advertise him of their own knowledge, or by any other means, wherein the messengers misdemeaned themselves beyond their warrant and commission; also to examine their like abuse towards John Newman in the search of his house, having no warrant so to do, and as he hears they would not be deterred. If the information be true, the messengers shall be punished.

(No. 27.) 1594, — of July, Greenwich. — Copy. — Order from Lord Burghley. The bearer is John Norden, who has already imprinted certain shires to his great commendation, and who intends to proceed in the rest as time and ability permit. These are to pray and require you and every of you to aid and assist him as he shall have cause to use the same in his travels in any of the counties where you are in the commission of the peace, to the better and more speedy perfecting of his good work.—Also to use your best means for some voluntary benevolence or contribution to be given by gentlemen or others well affected to his service, who, as all other of her Majesty's subjects shall reap the fruit and benefit of his labours, &c.

(No. 28.) 1594, July 20th, The Court at Greenwich. — Copy. Council letter to (). Concerning the assessment of the subsidy and collectors, as ante.—Signed, Jo. Puckering, Will. Burleigh, Lords Hunsdon and Buckhurst, Thomas Heneage, Robert Cissell, and Jo. Wolleie.

(No. 29.) 1594, Sept. 14th. From the Court at Greenwich.—(Copy.) T. Heneage to Francis Barrington, Robert Wroth, Richard Warren, and Barnarde Whetston, Esqrs., and the rest of her Majesty's commissioners for the subsidy there.—Asks them to make his servant, Robert Raynsforde, gentleman, collector of the next subsidy, for which he understands they are commissioners. He will be security for him.

G. A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

(Nos. 30 and 31.) 1594, Nov. 8th, Court at Richmond. Copy. Council letter. Owing to the dearth they give order for the renewal of the Act passed in the 29th of her Majesty's reign, for relieving the price of grain, and furnishing of the market, and the sheriff and justices of the peace, upon the receipt of the letter, are to assemble themselves according to their several divisions, and read the aforesaid order, and then proceed to the execution of the same. It is thought necessary to reform the abuse in superfluous expence of bread and drink in common alehouses, &c., and therefore are added to the former orders certain articles for reformation of the abuses.—Also forbids the exportation of grain without due warrant. Signed by Jo. Cant, Jo. Puckering, C.S., Lords Burghley, Howard, Cobham, and Buckhurst, Ro. Cecyll, and Jo. Fortescue.—In a postscript.—Orders for the discharge of the beacon watches near the sea coast to the ease of the county this winter season.

On the same page is a copy of a letter by Hum. Mildmay to Richard Waren, Esq., and the rest of the justices in the division.—Sending a copy of the above, and giving notice of meeting at Chelmsford on Friday, the 22nd of November, for conference about the same.

(No. 32.) 1595, June 15th, From the Tower. Edmond Latymer to Lord Riche at Essex House.

(No. 33.) 1595, Feb. 2nd. From the Court. Lord Burghley to Mr. Barrington, Mr. Towse, and Mr. Franke, Justices of the Peace for the co. of Essex. He has received a petition from the inhabitants of Thaxsted against John Wake, one of the high constables of the hundred of Dunmow, who, if the information be true, doth demean himself very badly in his office, and is not meet to be continued therein.—That they may better understand the cause of complaint he encloses the petition, and if, upon their examination, they find it true, they are to remove him, and appoint some meet and honest man in his room.

(No. 34.) The petition referred to, which accompanies the letter, states that John Wake is a very contentious man, refuses to pay his proportion of the assessment in regard to his high constableness, but shows great partiality in levying the same, favouring his friends by letting them go free, and oppressing those neighbours with whom he is in displeasure. They pray redress.

(No. 35.) 1596, July 1st, Hatfield.—Copies of a letter from the justices of the peace above-named appointing Thursday, the 8th of July, by 8 o'clock in the morning at Hatfield Brodoke, for an enquiry into the subject.

(No. 36.) Copy of the articles against John Wake, one of the high constables. (1½ p.)

(No. 37.) The answer of John Wake, high constable of Dunmow hundred, to the articles of the town of Thaxsted. (2½ pp.)

(No. 38.) 1596, Aug. 3rd. Copy. Council letter to the High Sheriff and the Justices of the Peace for the co. of Essex. Giving orders for the abatement of the prices of grain. Signed by Jo. Cant, Tho. Egerton, Lords Burghley, Cobham, and Buckhurst, Robert Cicell, and Fortescue.

(No. 39.) Essex. Copy. An order taken the 22nd day of September 1596, and in the 37th year of her Majesty's reign, made by the justice of the peace within the division of Dunmow, Uttesford, Freshwel, and Cluvering half hundred, in the said county, to be performed in the said division by virtue of her Majesty's proclamation and letters therein upon lately sent from her Highness most Ho. Privy Council to the sheriff and justices of peace of the said county for the stay of the dearth of corn, to be presently put into execution as followeth, &c.

(No. 40.) 1597, April 16th, York House.—Tho. Egerton, C.S., to George Nicholls, Francis Barington, and William Ailoff, Esqrs., or any two of them. This enclosed petition being exhibited unto me by William Prentice concerning some matter in variance between one Samuel Cook and him I thought fit (according to the poor man's request) to recommend it unto you

(No. 41.) The humble petition of William Prentice, husbandman.

(No. 42.) 1597, March 30th. J to Francis Barington.—I am informed that you have caused two gray geldings to be stayed, the one of them being Richard Smythes Gould dwelling at Holborn Bridge and the other sheriffs of And for that the said Richard Smyth standeth bounden to prosecute the law against Thomas Figgens, now prisoner in Newgate, who stole the said gelding, these are to pray you to deliver unto the bearer hereof, William Asbeppole, servant unto Richard Smyth, the gelding of his said master, so that he knows him, paying such charge as shall be meet for his keeping, and charge for the time he hath remained.

(No. 43.) 1597, last of May, Hatfield. Copy of Francis Barington's answer to the Lord Chief Justice's letter, as above.—Says I do neither know of any such gelding stayed by me or any officer for me, neither was there any such person brought before me, but not long sithence two of the sheriffs men of Cambridge were with me, at which time I had the sight of the warrant from your lordship directed for the apprehending of certain notorious thieves broken out of Cambridge gaol, who desired hue and cry from me presently; after the sending out whereof there was one of the said thieves and one other young man in his company apprehended within this town (at Q) and brought before me, whose horses were stayed by the bailiff of the there, but what manner of horses, or whose they were, or what are become of them I know not, for I sent the said parties presently to the sheriff of Cambridge

(No. 44.) 1597, July 16th, Court.—G. Hunsdon (Chamberlain) to Francis Barendyne (Barington). Robert Buck of Thacksted, in the co. of Essex, standeth accused by the confession of Mary Burrowe, of very notable forgery and common counterfeiting the great seal, the hands and seals of noblemen, justices of the peace, and other her Majesty's officers, by colour whereof he doth licence and authorise vagrant and ill-disposed persons to range up and down the country abegging, to the great offence of her Majesty and extreme danger of the commonwealth. And being confessed by Mary Burrowe that she saw in his house so many counterfeit seals as would fill a hut, and particularly the Lord Admiral's seal delivered to a beggar for xxs., asks him to assist the messenger in Buck's apprehension, and the search of his house, and to send him to the Court with all such counterfeit stamps as they shall find in his possession.—P.S. In Lord Hunsdon's writing.—Yow shall exceedingly please her Majesty in discoveringe this forgnge companion that maketh so good cheape vagabonds.

(No. 45.) 1597, July 23rd, the Court.—The same to the same.—Commends him for his diligence in the apprehension and sending up of R. Buck. It appears by Buck's confession that one Lyllie and Seyer, inhabitants of Thacksted, are his confederates; asks Barington to take means for their speedy apprehension.

(No. 46.) 1597, July 29th, Court.—The same to the same.—Sends the particulars by a messenger of such things as William Lallie, by Buck's confession, is to be charged with, and thinks the best course is to send him and Seyer, when he is found, to the common gaol, there to remain until the next assizes, upon whose further trial the justices of that circuit may inflict such punishment as the quality of their offense doth deserve.

(No. 47.) (Indorsed.) 1597, Aug.—A brief of such things as are contained in the examination and confession of Robert Buck, of Thacksted, concerning William Lillie;—

That he travelled with the seal of Dover counterfeited to his passport saying he was a lame soldier.

That Salomon Barker did cut the Lo. Morley's seal for the said Lyllie, which he had in wax from a licence that one Sawyer carried.

That he received divers hands and seals from the said Sawyer, which he intended to counterfeit, and to have writ by some that dwelt in London in Crowne Alley in Whitcross Street.

That he had the counsell's seal in wax, which he also purposed to carry to the said cutter, and said that for xxs. he would have either the Queen's seal or the Lord Admiral's cut at his pleasure.

That there be in the Lo. Chamberlain's keeping a great company of counterfeit seals which Buck hath confessed did belong to the said Lyllie and one Sawyer.

That when he last parted from Robert Bucke at Malden he said he would go to London to some cutter to have Mr. Mylmaies (Mildmay's), Sir John Smyths, Mr. Huberde, Mr. Nitingall's seals cut to serve this town withall.

(No. 48.) 1597, Aug. 25th. From the Court. Copy. Council letter signed by Tho. Egerton, C.S., Wm. Burghley, C. Howarde, Geo. Hunsdon, R. Northe, Ro. Cecill, and Jo. Fortescue, to the High Sheriff of the co. of Essex and the rest of the justices of the peace of the said county, and to every of them in their several divisions. Concerning the dearth of corn.

(No. 49.) 1597, Oct. 6th. A consideration had and agreed upon the general quarter sessions for the peace, holden at Westminster the said day, and year by the justices of the peace then assembled, whose names ensue,

G. A.
LOWNDES
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

&c., Sir Thomas Mildmay, Kt., Francis Barrington, John Henry Mildmay, Willm. Ayloff, Willm. Towse, Wm. Wynstay, Thomas Mildmay of Barnes, Roger Harackendey, Andrew Passall, Rich. Francke, Christopher Chilborne, John Sammes, and Thomas Waldegrave, Esqrs., touching the execution of the contents of the letters sent from the lords of her Majesty's most honble. Privy Council, dated at Havering, for the prices of corn, grain, and other victual, and the ordering of engrossers and such other malefactors as are therein mentioned.—First, it is agreed that there shall be forthwith in every division of the shire several juries charged at the discretion of the justices within the same county, of honest, discreet, and charitable persons, such as be no fermor nor buyers of corn, grain, or other victual other than for their ordinary service of their private houses, &c. Then follow the articles.

1597, Nov. 25th. Articles following that shall be given in writing to the several juries for their better understanding how to proceed—9 articles in all. About corn and grain.

(No. 50.) 1597, Oct. 25th. At the Great Wardrop.—J. Fortescue to —Appointing Philip Baker, of Bromeley, co. Middlesex, to buy two quarters of wheat weekly in the market, in the co. of Essex, and to grind the same at the mills in the same county, where he may best be served, and to deliver the same weekly at Fortescue's house at the Great Wardrop.—Pray suffer him to buy, &c. At the foot is a note authorising the bearer, Philip Baker, to buy the wheat as above dated, from Chipping Ongar, 12th Nov. 1597, and signed by Fran. Barrington, W. Smith, Gama. Capell, and Richard Franck.

(No. 51.) 1597, Dec. 5th. Edw. Derawge to Mr. Barrington, Thom. Wyseman, Mr. Towse, and Mr. Josselin, Esqrs.

(No. 52.) 1597, Feb. 23rd, Whitehall.—W. Burghley to the Sheriff and the Commissioners for the Recusants in the co. of Essex.—Concerning the allowance to be made to the commissioners for the execution of the Statute xxviii Eliz., and for the better carrying out of the same.

(No. 53.) A copy of the same.

(No. 54.) 1598, June 21st. Council letter signed by J. Fortescue and Wyllm. Peryam to Francis Barrington, Rich. Franke, Edward Turner, Thomas Parres, Edward Althame, and William Ailoff, Esqrs., or any two of them.—Whereas there is a commission out of the Court of Exchequer unto them, or any two of them, to inquire of the true yearly value of the manor of Pishow, else Pishowberry, in the co. of Hertford, and to seize the same into Her Majesty's hands for a debt of £ due unto the late King Edward VI. by Sir Wymond Carew, Kt., late treasurer of the first fruits, and now become due, these are to require you in regard of the greatness of the debt and the long time it hath remained unpaid, and for that also the said manor was sold to pay the said debt, as we are informed and think to be true.—They are to have special care in the execution of the said commission.

(No. 55.) 1598, July 23rd. Court at Greenwich. Copy. Council letter by Tho. Egerton, C.S., G. Hunsdon, W. Knowlys, R. North, Ro. Cecyll, J. Fortescue, Nottingham, and T. Buckhurst, to the Commissioners of the assessment of the first subsidy granted in the last Parliament in the co. of Essex. For the advancing the collection of the subsidy.

(No. 56.) n. d. Jerome Weston (Sheriff) to the Justices of the Peace allotted to the division of Onger, Harlow, and Waltham, in the co. of Essex. About musters being deferred until after the assizes.

(No. 59.) 1600, June 1st. Court at Greenwich.—Copy Council letter signed by Tho. Egerton, T. Buckhurst, Nottingham, W. Knowles, Ro. Cecille, J. Fortescue, and Jo. Popham. For the redress of the great prices of corn.

(No. 62.) 1602, April 4th, Calborne.—Christopher Hampton to (Francis Barrington).—I received your letter and the exemplification of the decree made in the Admiralty upon your letters patents for wrecks, there will henceforth be no doubt when these shall be shewed upon any occasion. Concerning that which is past, speeches be made by Somers, deputy to Mr. Cotton: he thought it were no wreck, because all the men were saved; but to-morrow Mr. Worslie and I shall meet to confer about your affairs, and if any right may be fastened on you we will not lose it for lack of pleading. He is your officer, I have been of long time devoted to your house, therefore no endeavour shall be omitted, and at Jevis coming up you shall receive full advertisement of our success. P.S. Since the beginning of this letter I have been with Mr. Worslie, and when we could not obtain the goods by way of wreck, I made challenge unto them, as of goods of felons; our goods of the Queen's enemies, for it was apparent that they came from Spain; hereunto answer is made that they be goods of a merchant in London, and for proof thereof a letter is brought forth, subscribed by eight of the lords of her Majesty's Council. At Jeves coming you shall be advertised of the merchant's name and his dwelling, that you may sift out the full truth of the matter. There will yet come to you a boat, a hog-head of brackish white wine, and a mast.

(No. 63.) 1602, Oct. 28th, Great St. Barth. Ro. Riche to Mr. Francis Barrington. . . . The cause betwene my Lord Morley and Garrett I hope shall receive a tryall upon Tuesdaie being the 9th of November next, which I desire might be then ended for the avoydinge of further charge and trouble, which I hope will be if the jurors doe performe there apperances, of whom theis under-named are a parcell and fittlye by yourselves to be required and labored thereunto, which I praye to accomlishe, and to returne me there answers whereby I maie knowe there severall intencions in this behalf . . .

The names of 9 jurors are given at the foot.

(No. 64.) 1602, Feb. 21st, Court at Richmond. Copy Council letter to Mr. Justice Gandie and Serjeant Heale, Justices of Assize for the counties of Surrey, Sussex, Kent, Essex, and Hertford.

(No. 65.) 1602, March 16th. Court at Richmond. Copy Council letter signed by Jo. Cant, Tho. Egerton, C.S., T. Buckhurst, Nottingham, Gilb. Shrewsbury, E. Worcester, W. Knollys, Ed. Wotton, Jo. Stanhope, Ro. Cecyll, Jo. Fortescue, to the High Sheriff and Commissioners for the musters in the co. of Essex, &c.

(No. 66.) 1603, March 28th, Essex. (Copy.) The names of the sherife and justices of the peace assembled the same day at the town of Chelmsford for the proclaiming of the King's Majesty.

(No. 67.) 1603, April 15th, London, Edward Shaw to Mr. Barrington. This is to certify that I received of my Lord Rich the sum of 20*l*, for the which I gave an acquittance. Also according to your worship's direction I have enquired concerning the manner of meeting the King, which is generally thought of all to be in black without . . . cuttunge plain, which divers worthy men of good calling have prepared for, some in black satin and some in velvet, and others some in black stuff; furthermore for the coronation, for those which are in their robes have foote clothes, and many other of good account with foot clothes also, and some in rich saddles. Also much white satin and ash colour and such like colours with much imbrotheringe is prepared against the coronation. Also imbrotheringe is now very dear. Also much gold lace worn, which in my opinion is cheaper and better. There is of divers sorts some trimmed with small gold lace, and with some broad, in my opinion broad lace, of either the panes with a cut in the middle is best, nevertheless I would desire you send me word how you would have it. Also I have enquired concerning cloaks, and can hear but of one di . . . cloak, which is worn, but the most part be b. . . velvet or grogran or cloth, some with lace, some with borders, and most of them lined with rich as cloth of gold and silver, and others with taffitiie. If your worship would have your black satin suit plain, I can cut it when your worship have worn it till it be a week or two . . .

(No. 68.) 1603, Feb. 15th, Ro. Riche to Sir Francis Barrington.—Telling what he had done with a view (seemingly) to secure Sir Francis Barrington's election as kt. of the shire.

(No. 69.) 1603, Feb. 12th, Barrington Hall. Copy of a letter by Francis Barrington to Sir Thomas Mildmay, to know his resolution whether he would hold firm or not to Sir Francis in the coming election.

(No. 70.) 1603, Feb., Sir Tho. Mildmay (at Moulsham) to Sir Francis Barrington in reply to the above.—He does not say which side he takes: alludes to discontent in the country; the necessity of patriotic action.

(No. 71.) 1603, Feb. 23rd, Whitehall, the Earl of Suffolk to the Treasurer and Chamberlains of Walton, and to all my servants, tenants, and townsmen.—A letter in angry terms, because some of them have promised their votes to Sir Francis Barrington at the election of knights of the shire. Says that he is lord of the town, most of the addressees are his tenants, and if they do not vote for Sir Edward Denny they will repent it.

(No. 72.) 1603, Feb. 23. Whitehall. Copy of Council letter to the Sheriff of Essex, signed by T. Ellesmere,

G. A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

Canc., Suffolk, E. Worcester, Cumberland, H. Howard, Ro. Cecyll, W. Knollis, E. Wotton, Jo. Stanhope, Tho. Bruce, and Jo. Harberte.—Forbidding the soliciting votes for the election of knights and burgesses for the King's first Parliament. The county of Essex is mentioned as being particularly disregarding of the King's proclamation on that subject.

(No. 72a.) 1603, Feb. 24. Thaxted. William Westby (Mayor of Thaxted), John Moore, Nicholas Humfrey, and Thomas Dockley to [Lord Rich?]. They will be at Chelmsford on the 5th or early on the 6th of March to give their voices for Sir Francis Barrington; and they have procured the concurrence of other freeholders named in the schedule inclosed (not with the letter).

(73.) 1603, last of February, Chelmsford. The justices (Tho. Mildmay, Edm. Huddelstone, Antho. Cooke, William Ayloffe, Tho. Mildmay, jr., Henry Maxey, Thomas Gardyner, Thomas Bekingham, Thomas Waldegrave, Ro. Riche and Tho. Rawlins) to Sir Francis Barrington, Kt.—For the appeasing of controversy for the knights of the shire, and for Sir Francis's submission to their order.

(No. 74.) 1603, Feb. 29, Chelmsford. Copy of another letter by the justices on the same subject.

(No. 75.) 1603, Feb. 29, Sir Gamaliel Capell to Sir Francis Barrington.—At the request of Lord Rich and Sir H. Maynard he will desist to stand to be one of the knights of the shire.

(No. 76.) 1603, Feb. 29, Eston Lodge. Sir H. Maynard (Sheriff of Essex) to Sir Francis Barrington.—For meeting at Chelmsford on Saturday, 3d of March, or the next day at Brentwood, for appeasing all differences between Sir Ed. Denny and Sir F. B.

(No. 77.) 1603, March 1. Draft answer by Sir F. B. to No. 76.

(No. 78.) 1603. Ro. (Lord) Riche to Sir F. Barrington, or in his absence to Mr. Hildersham.—A letter of 2 pp. expressing displeasure with the Council letter, and saying, "I have sent word to many my friends, knights, and others since I received a copy of the letter from Mr. Sheriff, for the Lords do not bar no man's voyce from them they shall affect by these letters." He advocates the cause of Sir F. Barrington and Sir Ed. Denny. "I am and will be firm unto him (Sir Francis) as the skin of his back, and will never while I breath fail my friend of my promise."

(No. 79.) 1603, March 2. Draft letter by Sir F. Barrington to the justices, on the subject of the election.

(No. 80.) 1603, March 1. Ro. (Lord) Riche to Sir F. Barrington. A hearty letter (of 2 pp.) declaring his intention of attending the election at Chelmsford on Monday next, "and not to depart thence until I have given my voyce to the aunciente name of Barrington to be first knight of our shire, whose auncestors I canne averre to be knights before English was in England, or anie name of knights that I know were in the countie." . . . I heard before the receipt of your letter of my Lord Archbishop being taken sick.

(No. 83.) 1605, Nov. 23, Calborne. Chr. Hampton (seemingly a steward or bailiff) to (Sir F. Barrington). A letter of 4 pp. about tenants, &c. At the end is an expression of thankfulness for the King's and country's escape from the Powder Plot.

(No. 84.) 1606, May 29, (indorsed as May 31). Hatfield. (Copy.) Sir Francis Barrington to Dr. Neville (of Trinity College). About renewing a lease of portion of the parsonage of Hatfield Broad Oak, and offering to bear part, and if need be, all of the expense of repairing the chancel of the church.

(Nos. 85 & 86.) 1606, June, and 1606, Aug. 27. Trinity College, Cambridge. Two letters signed by Tho. Nevile and some of the Fellows in reply to No. 84. The other signatures are, in the first letter, Thomas Harrison, William Hall, Fran. Savage, Pau. Thompson, Samuel Heron, Richard Wryte, Thomas Furtho, and William Barton; and in the second, the 1st, 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th of the above, and Jer. Radcliffe, John Furthe and Sa. Hill.

(No. 87.) 1606, Aug. 28, Hackney. Sir F. Barrington to Trinity College. (Copy.) He will attend at the time appointed with the 200 marks. (This was a loan to the college in earnest of a fine for the intended renewal.)

(No. 90.) 1606, March 6. From my lodging in Fleeete Strete. (L.S.) Francis Hastings to (his cousin) Sir F. Barrington.—He is come here to prepare for death, and desires a reconciliation with their cousin Hildersonn.

(No. 92.) 1608, last of June, Whitehall. R. Salisbury to Sir Gamaliel Capell and Sir Francis Barrington, kts. of the shire for the co. of Essex.—He imputes the falling short of the Fifteenth in their county to their not having appointed the collectors before the 15th of February as they might to have done. Directs them to appoint collectors before the time above-mentioned, or else certify the Lord Chancellor before the 1st of March, so that further order may be taken.

(No. 93.) 1608, Feb. 9, Whitehall. Copy. Council letter urging the collection of the first payment of the 3d subsidy, and sending the subsidy book of 5 Eliz., that it might be seen what the addressees predecessors in Essex had done. Appended are the names (41) of the Commissioners for the first payment of the 3d subsidy, granted anno 3 R. Jacobi.

(1613, July 5.) Copy. The writer says he intends to hold his fair at Hatfield town according to a former order made in the Star Chamber.

(No. 101.) 1614, April 16. Jo. Luke to Lady Smith, widow, at Sir Harry Wallop's house in Lyttle St. Bartholomew. (Land business.)

(No. 104.) 1617, March 5. Copy of examination before Sir W. Maynard, Bt., of Robert Smith, a recusant, and Winifred, his wife, about a box in his possession containing a chalice, a missal, a vestment, and divers other reliques of popery.—It seems that they were delivered to Winifred by her mother, the widow Dennis, lately deceased. Winifred, going into Wiltshire, left the box with her daughter Alice, who put the box among some straw in a barn, where they were found by one Young who bought the straw.

(No. 105.) 1619, May 21. Several depositions about poachers in Rochwood Haie Park.

(No. 106.) 1620, Jan. 4. Will. Ch. to Sir F. Barrington. . . . In my last travell to Yorke, I met with a gentleman that told me a secret, viz., that the only question of forren affaires at the sessions of Parliament would be whether the Kinge should breake of with the Spaniarde.

(No. 109.) 1621, Nov. 6, Rowley.—Ez. Rogers to Lady Joan Barrington. He fancies she is offended; asks an explanation. (He seems to be a clergyman and to have resided with Sir F. and Lady B.)

(No. 128.) 1625, March 6, Flamsteed.—Jo. Luke to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Glad to hear of your good proceedings in Parliament; it much glads the hearts of us here in the countie, and we humblie pray you may see goe on as you may have no rabb.

(No. 132.) n.d. Eliza Hampden to Lady Johanna Barrington.

(No. 133.) 1626, Jan. 30. George Lamplugh to his father, Sir Francis Barrington.—Hearing that Sir Francis is resolved to ask the Archbishop of Armagh to confer some office or other fitting employment on him, he returns thanks. . . . Understanding the love and respect his wife received from Mrs. Usher, hopes that she may go with Mrs. Usher into Ireland.

(On the back is a draft of reply by Sir Francis. He will do what he can with the Archbishop; but as to asking the granting of a lease gratis, (Lamplugh had suggested this if no place could be obtained) he will not ask it.)

(No. 135.) 1626, July 29. Edmund Ferrand to Sir Francis Barrington.—Requests him to be personally present at Clavering at the Court to be kept for him on the 1st of Aug. for divers services to be performed, which can not be performed in his absence, as for the taking of Mr. Whitegift's homage and of divers other tenants, and for redress of some disorders.

(No. 139.) 1626, Sept. 28, Rowley.—The writer says that he broke a vein in the lungs, but is better, and has begun to preach again. Speaks of the new spa there; the taste is inkish as the spa in Germany; good for obstructions in the liver and kidneyes, &c.

(No. 154.) 1628, June 28. Oliver St. John to Lady Barrington. We have I hope with those of this town, put an end to all sutes for your ladyship's joynture.

(No. 155.) 1628, July 11, London.—John Barrington to his mother.—Rochell we heare is in great extremity, and I feare thease delays will be theare overthrowe. Some report that the shippes do not goe away untill November, hoping by that time the stormes of winter will overthrow the pallisado they have made to keepe the shippes back from releaving the towne. Others report they will suddenlie set sayle; but of a certaine I can heare nothing. The Lords of the Privie Counsell have hitherto put us of with faire promises but no dedes: yesterday they did promise us that to-morrow without faile they would give an answer unto us which should give us content, which answer we stay to heare. P.S. My Lord Duke wee heare goeth not this voyadg but staies at Winsor Castle until the Kinge retorne from Scotland; he departs from thence toward Scotland the 3d Aug.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNES
Esq.

(No. 156.) 1628, July 22, Screaveton.—Rye, Whalley to Lady Joane Barrington, baroness, at her house Hattisid in Essex.—On a report of the death of her husband, Sir Francis, he condoles with her. Asks that his daughter (her niece) may still remain with her. Sends the 31 and last volume of Mr. Parkins's works.

(No. 158.) n.d. Thomas Eliot and Mary Eliot to Lady Barrington. Condolence on the death of Sir Francis.

(No. 159.) n.d. Mary Eliot to the same.—The like. (She signs herself "your loving daughter.")

(No. 168.) 1628, Nov. 30, London. Thomas Barrington to his mother, Lady Johanna Barrington . . . We have a Committee of Privy Councillors, four of the Upper House and as many of the House of Commons, to whom the King hath committed the debate and settling of some good course for matters of religion; thus doe wee heere that are at a distance, yet the newes is not very vulgar. What other grievances are in agitation I heare not. Divers of the Counsell have spoken well in the cause of religion . . . The Barons of the Exchequer on Friday last has resolved that what goods soever be ceazed by the King's officers for any pretended debt to the King, the cause must only be tryed in the Exchequer, the proper place for the King's revenue, and this must be don by petition. This was the judgment concerning this part of tunnage and poundage, which was argued then on the merchants behalfe. Felton was executed yesterday at Tiborne, where and when he condemned and bewayled his fact, dyed penitently, and disavoured all justification of the deed; desired all the people to pray for him, and soe ended his dayes, which closes this last scene of a strange tragedye. I pray God our next innovation be more successfully happye. The Lord Keeper did yesterday express the King's pleasser to the judges and bishops and all justices. The first thing he spake unto was that the lawes should be exactly executed, &c., &c. . . . Then the bishops had a charge to maintain the true religion of our church, &c. . . . Then my lord spake to the cyvil government, &c. . . . Then gave he a charge to all gentlemen to repair into the country to keepe up hospitalitie, &c.

(No. 169.) 1628, Dec. 6. The same to the same.—Reports have converted Bp. Montague (but fame outruns the fact I beleive). The University of Cambridge, as it hath ever been active in complying with the present state, so now hath that old grandson of mine the more pallable[sic] meanness of spirit and gross flatterye than ever, having written a congratulatory letter to Sir Francis Cottington for his counsellship. Such a business for the bodye of the whole Universitie to glorye in the honor of one man, no more than singly related to them . . . The Plate fleet is now in Holland; all fought with by the way and all escaped, thanks be to God. The King sends now a shipp with victuall to the Zluz, whither General Morgaine went lately with men to relieve the towne, to whom the towne refused entree, being unprovided of victuall for themselves; a brave business; for in all probability those cold seas have frozen them all fast by this time, and the way is impassable for Capt. Minss, the man that goes now and is gone indeed with the victuall shipp.

(No. 170.)—1628, Dec. 13, London. The same to the same.—Has been lately into Sussex . . . at this present is constrained to stay about his money due to him from the King, which they are promised to have next week soon as their accounts are all brought in. And so every man is to be cashier'd; howbeit it is reported that there are two reigements to go for Venice, among whom I doe (God willing) intend to go and doe to that effect seeke for a companie. I am very much bound to my Lord General; byc my Lord of Warwick's meanes he hath offred me large courtesies for to incuradg my going in the very next imploiment, which (as wee heare) wilbe about the middle of Februarie at the farthest.

No. 182. [1628 Dec. 30. William Masham to his mother [in law], Lady Barrington . . . It is hoped my Lord of Holland will be the Lord Admiral. I could wish rather his brother, whom I hold fitter, and yet I hope he will be advised by him and other his good friends whom you know well. My Lord Carlile and his lady hath laboured much for it to be bestowed upon my Lord Chamberlayne, that so he might succede him, but could not prevayle; whereupon and other discontents my Lady Carlile hath left the Courte. There are other occurrences of the French, great preparations by sea and by land against Italy, and some proposition of the Hollanders for the recovery of the Palatinate, which I presume you heare of, being the well heade of newes.

(No. 186.)—n.d. Robert Barrington to his mother, Lady Johau Barrington. Little newes is sterring since I came to towne. Wee are still in the prosecution of the business of religion, the establishing whereof is the generall resolution of our House before they undertake any other business. This day there was a petition preferred wherein is expressed the great encrease of Papists in the farther northern parte; also in the same petition articles preferred against Dr. Cosins (who I thinke is the Dean of Durham) for the introducing Popish ceremonies into that place. It was also said that Cosins should say the King had no more to do in matters ecclesiastical than his horse keeper, and yet both his man and also Manning and Sybthorp and Bishop Montague have pardons, but I hope it wilbe found out who have ben the procurers of the same . . .

(No. 188.) 16 , Jan. 9, London. The same to the same.—There is yett little down in Parlement. Bishop Ncale is still in question; the last complaint and greatest against him was that upon occasion meeting with Dr. Moore, a divine in Hampshier, he said, I have heard you often preach before the Kinge, and you were wonte to be earnest against Poperie, and your discourse was pleasing to your King; but now you must not, for the tymes are altered. The Doctor is sent for to justifye the words, which he will certainly do . . . Sheriff Acton was this day committed to the Tower for not giving satisfaction in his answers to a committee about the merchant business. Mr. Attorney who was committed to his chamber, is againe restored to his place as yesterday. The fast I make no question, but you heare when it is appointed; for the Parliament and the cittie the day is Ashweddensday; for the county the Friday before Good Friday. The preachers, Mr. Harris, lecturer at the church by Westminster, Mr. Harris of Hanwell, and one Mr. Fitch Jefferies of the Westgarts. The Lord fitt us for that great worke.

(No. 189.) 1628, Jan. 26. Thomas Bouchier to his aunt, Lady Barrington . . . All I heare is thus much in briefe, that the King upon last Saturdaye in the Banquetinge House made knowne unto his people that the tundish and pundish is the free guifte of his subjects, and the maine reason of his demaunding it is his necessitye. He also hath given faire hopes of a successful proceedinge.

(No. 192.) n.d. Robert Barrington to his mother, Lady B. Little newes is heere stirring; only we have brought the business of religion into the House, and with one consent ordered that it should be the maine business and first in agitation . . . To-morrow the House is to be resolved into a committee, and then to begin this greate worke. I cannot now have tyme to relate how many excellent speeches were made both yesterday and this day in the cause of religion, and against both Popery and Arminianism. We are to go to the King to-morrow to receive his gracious answer upon the petition of both houses for a general fast, which we make no doubt of being granted.—There is a speech that the Hollanders have taken more ships of late and surprised a convoy of ours coming with money to pay the souldiers in the Archduchess' cuntry.

(No. 193.) n.d. Thomas Barrington to his mother, Lady B. . . . The news you hear from my brother.—There is a face of general sadness for this probaballytic of dissolving us; all men that wish well for Church or Commonwealth mourning for this threatening evill; joy only now appears in those aspects that while religion had so faire a way to advance in, were then no way pleased. The King now pretends at least to be immovable in that resolution which the House at our late debate made a dew claime to alter; it is farr more easye to avoyde a rock while we are at a distance then to escape splitting when the shipp is throwen upon it. My judgment cannot propose what it fitt in particuler, but generall wisdom I am sner justifies the rather saving the best goods than by an untimely striving for all, to lett fall that which [is] most precious: this is necessarye, and truly it ought not to be omitted; but (if my opinion deceive me not) might have been awhile deferred. Princes should in policie have somme time and way left to evade, when point of honor is in competition; if they acknowledge their acts past illegall, and their ministers confess it, and pleede ignorance, I know not why it were not better to take reasonable satisfaction for the rest, and declare our right to posteritye by a law, and the errors past, than of laboring to punish more, to lett fall the end of our desyes in that and all.

(No. 196.) 1628, Feb. 20, London . . Robert Barrington to his mother, Lady B.—Has not the least time to be from the business of the House.

G. A.
LOWNES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

(No. 199.) 1628, March 2. Thomas Barrington to the same. This daye in Parliament was like the generall of the times, such as hardly ever, no man almost knowing what to do: the distraction was so sodaine and so greate, and the case so highly concerning the House

(No. 200.) 16, Feb. 13. W. M[asham] to Lady Johana Barrington We have little foreign news but ill. The Protestants still goe by the worst. The King of France hath taken Oringe, a towne of great succore to them. It was obtayned by the treacherye of the governor, who since is slayne. I hear also that Geneva is beseiged [by] both the King of France and the Duke of Savoye; they strive both who should get it, which is theyre best security, for they hinder one another.

(No. 205.) 1627, Feb. 2. O. Cromwell to his sister Lady Barrington. I am glad to hear of your health; now our number is very small; for my brother Phillipe departed this life the 24th of Januarie. I geve God thanks my brother Henry is well recovered of his large sickness. As for the writings which concerne the portions of my nieces by my sister Wales, I have non, neyther was acquaynted what they were. I will send your letter unto my brother Henry, who it may bee can geve you better light. These with my ever true affectionate love I rest your most loving brother.

(No. 206.) 1629, Jan. 28. J. Cromwell to Lady Barrington. I received your letter at Ramsy church dore as I was coming from performing my last dutie to my brother Phillip, who we buried this present day at Ramsy. He departed this life on Sunday last, about one of the clocke in the afternoone. He led a religious life He hath left behind him many children with small meanes; 100*l.* a peice will be the uttermost can be wrought for them out of his estate.

(No. 217.) Nov. 28, London. W. M[asham] to his mother-[in-law] Lady Barrington Sir John Stowell is censured 500*l.* in the Star Chamber for some wrongs to Sir Robert Phillips, and Jeff is fined 1,000*l.* in the King's Bench, and to acknowledge his fault at all the barrs for some wronges to Sir Edward Cooke. There is nothing done against the gentlemen: they pleaded against the jurisdiction of the King's Bench, and Mr. Attorney hath demurred upon their plea. They are to argue the second day of the next terme. The judges have delivered their opinion in general, and that it is the opinion of all the judges of England, that some Parliament men have been punished out of Parliament for crymes don in Parliament. This may be granted, and yet nothing to the point in question. Those presidents that are in that kind will fall out to be done by direction, or are onely of Parliament P.S. I pray burn this.

(No. 218.) Nov. 30. The same to the same P.S. We have little newes: only that you write I feare is to true. The manner as I heare was this: he fell into a rage, and so thrust her through with his rapier [which] honged naked by her bed sid.

(No. 220.) 16 . . . Wed. before Christmas.—From Mr. Oynions at the Hand and Penne in St. Giles towards Holborne.—Fran. Herris to his aunt Lady Barrington at Sir Gilberte Garretts.—I lately propounded to your son, Sir Thomas Barrington, a place of creadit and command, with sufficient profytt to live plentifully for my cosin John Barrington, which is to be Captain-Governor under my Lord of Derby in the Ile of Manne, some 4 owers sayle from the north of England, a place I well knowe; and trewly considering there is like to bee no foreign employment (for within these fewe days certain newes is come that the States have caured 15,000 men 10 commanders.) I knowe noe course better then to obtain such a thing, and I knowe for the love all men bore my deere uncle, as I perceive likewise they due on the Ileland, my cosin will be well liked; therefore I wish Sir Gilbert Garret (whoe Sir Thomas Barrington conceiveth to be inward with my Lord Strange or that noble family), to inform himself how things stand, and to lay for it for my cosin John, and I will doe my best indavors, which is not so powerfull as I wisht, yet something it is with the officers there, and not forgott I think by my Lord Strange, first begunne in his travelles.

(No. 232.) 1629, Aug. 13, London.—John Barrington to Lady Johanna Barrington My bone which was to scale of, is quite of, and the wound almost dried up, so that I hope now I shall be quickly able to goe abroad. I do hope to go for Swede, and to have a company for that service, but as yet we have not absolute answere if those conditions are sent to the King, which is carried thither by a Dutchman, who is to be our Collonell (if we are agreed upon our conditions). I was demanded by a special friend if I would be one of the regiments, to which I have willingly agreed The chief points wee stand upon are, for morie to be paid us heare to rayse our men; and for the time, how long they will entertain us. We desire to make in our conditions that the King shall be bound to keepe us in pay three years at least. They would pay us (as to some before) half our monie heare, and the rest a moneth after our arrival theare, for raysing our men; but wee hope to have all our money heare to rayse and transport our men, which is 300*l.* to each captain. A captain's meanes is good theare, which is 25*l.* a month, 10*l.* to a lieutenant, as much to an ensyne.

(No. 236.) 1629, Aug. 21. The same to the same. . . . News of the taking by the States from the Spaniards of the towns of Wesell and Bosleduc, which they had beseighed above 6 months, and is rendered by composition.)

(No. 246.) 1629, Oct. 13, Westminster. John Barrington to his mother Lady B—. As yet wee have received no newes of our business in Swede, but wee do dayly expect the coming of Collonell Knephusen from thence, or else his sending hither.

Harleugham, in Frizeland, Oct. 5, 1629. Knyphusen to He says that the King of Sweden withheld his resolution by reason of the treaties of peace then in hand between Great Britain and France; and that the King having received the regiment raised this year by Lord Spence, and expecting likewise the regiments my Lord Monquay and Colonel Kenyngham had promised to raise, and seeing likewise that the regiments of Allman's were greatly diminished, he had for the present remitted the levy of the English and Scottish nation If towards the spring there should be any levy of the English nation, he will communicate. (This enclosed in the next letter.)

(No. 252.) 1629, Nov. 12, London. John Barrington to his mother Lady B. Encloses copy of the above letter from the Serjeant-Major-General of the King of Sweden. Hopes before the spring to have his desire that way. Most part of the English which went out last summer into Sweden being placed in the front of the King's army, were cut off by the Polanders. However, that cannot daunt us, although the King is very much blamed for placing such young souldiers in the front.

(No. 251.) 1629, Feb. 12, London. The same to the same.—We now find that Swedes have no purpose to entertain any company.—He will dispose of himself according to her pleasure, and if she pleases will resolve upon a journey into the Low Countries, which is (he is sure) a certainty.

(No. 256.) 1629, Dec. 18, London. The same to the same.—Will repay what she has advanced in February, when he receives his money due from the King. Sir Francis Herris has certified him of a command in the Isle of Man of a castle in the gift of Lord Strange.

(No. 272.) [1629], Jan. 18, Oates.—The same to the same.—The business for Sweden is revived again. Hopes he shall have employment there this spring.

(No. 274.) 1629, Feb. 10, London.—The same to the same.—The French fleet and army in them are at sea, and have been these six daies, and are bound for Mantua. They are 120 sayle of great and small shippes; but 25 or 30 great shippes, the rest but small boats.

(No. 275.) [1629], Feb. 12. W. M[asham] to Lady Barrington Our news is little. Only they call up the gentle of several counties to paie for knight-hode. This morning the gentle were to put in their plea, which I heare wilbe speciall, expressing the manner the fact. Young Dr. Burge was questioned yesterday with high commission for [] to reade [] of his indisposition of bodye before the [] at St. Mary Overeyes, whereupon the congregation was dismissed with a great [], and called again to hear the King's instruction reade, and what was done against 'em as yet I knowe not.

(No. 282.) 1629, March 18, Hatfield. Thomas Barrington to his mother, Lady B. Has this very day received letters from divers parts. From Court the newes is that the King by his Councill has made a strict order that the foreigne ambassadors' houses be attended by pursuivants to attach all that goe thither to mass, and that the Queen's Chapel is not privileged now for any but her household. From Ireland the newes is of like nature; the two justices have so suppressed the preists, jesuits, and fryars, that neither public mass is said nor any of this rabble presume to walke abroad with their former confidence The Lord Prymate hath bledd lately with such violence in his tongue, as that he was compelled to have it seared twice; for the first

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNTES,
ESQ.

brake out in new veines, but he is perfectly well, and hath begott a wondrous reformation in his northerne parts of Ireland, where the light of trewth is broken forth in great luster. From Hampshire we heare Mr. Dorrington condemned, and (suerly 'tis thought) by this time, executed; he shewed little remorse at the assizes; for though he at last desyred time to repent, yet he was very violent in his goeing back to prison. Two others there being condemned tould the judg they hoped within a few howers to be devills in hell, to torment him. Another swaering a greate oath or two that the judg had delt ill with him, called to Sir Henry Wallop, saying, Mr. Sheriff, pray send for some drinke for me; sorrow is drye . . . The Spanish treatye goes on slowly. The Dunkerks have lately taken three of the best shippes of Newcastle, and have blockt in their whole fleet, and made them repair to the counsell boord for a convoie. The new French Ambassador, intertayned with great respect, had his audience upon Friday last.

(No. 283.) 1629, March 24, Hatfield.—John Barrington to the same.—I understand by Mr. Brewster he sent Sir Philip Pagnom's letter unto my brother Gerrard; which doth mention a meeting of the States at the Hague about a treatie of peace; but I understand from some that came latelie from thence that it is not likelie a peace wilbe concluded, but is quite rejected by the greater parte of them. I do assure mysele if Sir Philip and my Lord Veare come not over this weeke, or the next, they cannot come this summer, it being generallie beleaved the army wilbe on foote at the beginning of May.

(No. 289.) n. d. Roger Williams to the same. A proposal to marry her niece.

(No. 293.) 1630, April 28, London.—John Barrington to the same.—Has, according to her command, been with his brother, Barrington, and did confer with Sir Edward Horwood, "who promiseth to do me what courtesie he may . . . Sir Edward Horwood departeth the next weeke; for my part I shalbe willing (if you please) to goe with him, but I must confess I had rather to serve in my Lord Veare's company."

(No. 294.) 1629, May 2. Roger Williams to Lady Barrington. Another letter full of pious quotations (Lady B. had seemingly refused his offer.)

(No. 295.) 1630, May 7.—John Barrington to the same.—He could not see Lord Vere by reason of his early departure from his lodging. At night or on the morrow he will deliver her letter. Sir Edward Horwood departed on Wednesday night to Gravesend, and the fair wind yesterday most likely carried them away. He (J. B.) purposes to go with the next ship.

(No. 296.) n. d. Thomas Barrington to Lady Barrington. This morning I have tendered to my Lord Veare, my brother in prison, whom he very curteously intreated, and promised me that he would not only look upon his merits in future, but also that he would have a particular respect unto him for his friend's sake, and hath promised my brother to write over by him to recomende him into his companye (meanewhile) 'till he goe over himselfe, which will not be sudainely, I believe . . . There remains only now a faire disengagement towards Sir Edward Horwood, which I will no wayes neglect. . . . I have a motion made unto me for Mr. Pinn to have Barrington Hall 'till winter. Now my wife, out of her provident care of yourself and us, thinks that the feare of the sicknes dispersing is cause enough to desire to keepe that house free for a refuge . . . The French yet prepare in Italye, and the Hollanders in the West Indyes; so that the Spaniard is cuffed on both checkes, and is not patient in suffering, but groes poore by it.

(No. 297.) n. d. The same to the same.—After referring to his letter written in the morning, he says that he did not apply to Ld. Vere sooner because he was not in town; since then he heard it reported that he had resolved to make his abode in England, which hearing contradicted since, he spoke with Sir Edward Horwood; "I am resolved to claim my Lord Veare his making good of his tender to my father at his being at Hatfield."

(No. 299.) 1630, May 7, Bedford House.—Francis Earl of Bedford, to Lady Barrington at Harrow.—Madam, my cosen Sr. John telleth me that he hath received favors from you by heapes, which I shall desier your ladyship toe beleve, that I vallew them at noe less than if you had bestowed so many kiendneses and so much plate upon me, which I am confident his love and service to you and yours shall in some mesuer aunseuer his debt toe you, and the obligation of your ladyship's affectionate servant and frend, Fra. Bedford.

(No. 301.) 1630, May 15. John Barrington to the same . . . Is going to start for the Low Countries by a ship which leaves in about 4 days.

(No. 303.) 1630, May 21. Aboard ship at Gravesend. The same to the same.—He is bound for the Low Countries; and is engaged by Lord Dorchester to deliver the King's packet at the Hague.

(No. 306.) 1630, May 26, Oates. Oli. St. John to Lady Johan Barrington, at Harrow.—Apology for not calling on her when he was in London. Thanks for favours.

(No. 313.) 1630, June 12, Ramsey. O. Cromwell to his nephew Sir Thomas Barrington. The writer's brother Henry is recovering from a pain in his ear. He himself had an ague this spring; he is recovered, but contents himself at home now he has grown old.—Speaks of himself as a poor man without a wife.

(No. 316.) 1630, June 13. H. Cromwell to Lady Johan Barrington. Thanks for her kindness in sending to visit him.

(No. 315.) 1630, June 16, Hatfield. Tho. Barrington to the same.— . . My uncle Sir Oliver Cromwell hath bin sick this spring of an ague, but is now well.

(No. 323.) n. d. [1630]. Eliza Hampden to her sister Lady Johanna Barrington.

(No. 324.) n. d. 16 . . . Oli. St. John to Lady Barrington the elder, at Hatfield, Broad Oke . . . Sir Edward Altham hath put in his answer to my bill, with all those false imputacions uppon Sir Francis Barrington, which, when time comes, I hope to cleare and to vindicate his unspotted sinceritie . . . To news your ladyship hath heard of Tilly's defeat and death is true; some popish newsmungers would have him yet alive, which falls out to be his nephew, but he is dead. Mr. Noy, of our howse, is King's Attorney; the last Attorney Cheefe Justice of the Common Pleas, and the Cheef Justice of the Common Pleas is removed to the King's Bench.

(No. 325.) n. d. Thomas Barrington to his mother Lady B.— . . The great affair of the King's B. is to-morrow to be tryed between the King and our Parliament men.

(No. 328.) n. d. Jo. St. John to her grandmother Lady Johan Barrington.

(No. 333.) n. d. Thomas Barrington to his mother Lady B.— . . . The French King has advanced his foot forces to Piamont, and the Cardinall demands high conditions in his behalf there; his navall power is in dayly preparation, he having designed 30,000 crownes by the yeeare to fortifye himselfe at sea, and towards that effect hath procured 20 or 30 families of the best shipwrights that he can obtain into this country. Besides this, he, finding that the only way to improve his strength for seas is to take off the contempt which the Noblesse of France held formerly all merchandise in, (that so the public of the better condition applying themselves to traffic might necessarily add increase to his kingdom in shipping), he hath himself immediately professed that he will trade at sea as a merchant, and hath ennobled thereof that quality, and will, no question in probability be much more powerful at sea; which the French Ambassador knows, for he already professes against our King's sole regalytye on the narrow seas, or his master his vailing sail to our King's ships; but his endeavours have not yet raised his ambition high enough (as all men think) to attempt us with the body of a navy.

(No. 339.) [1630], Oct. 30, London.—W. Masham to Lady B.— . . This day Mr. Hollice (Holles) is bailed, having put in sureties for his good behaviour, himself 1,000*l.* bond, and his 2 sureties; Mr. St. Ashley and Mr. Noye, 500*l.* apiece. I fear now the rest will hardly get out but upon the same terms. The consequence of this may prove ill, yet this is our hope, that bad effects will produce good laws. The Lord Chief Baron is displeased; and yet it is thought he will not stand upon his patent which is during his life and good behaviour.

(No. 343.) n. d. (Sir) Thomas Eliot to Lady Joane Barrington . . . P.S.—There is some talk of 2 or 3 lords and ladies that they say are lately dead, as the Countess of Berkshire and the Lord St. John, that I think was also an earl; and the Earl of Castlehaven, that was the Ld. Audly, remains, as I have heard, committed to the Tower . . . Instead, therefore, of news I have sent your ladyship a merry tale that I once took from the mouth of a reverend divine, Dr. Gibson, that is now with God, and for his sake I have ever since kept it by me. [Not with the letter]. He also incloses a printed bill of mortality, &c. for the year ending Dec. 16, 1630 (this is with the letter).

(No. 346.) 1630, Jan. 23, Oates.—Oli. St. John to Lady Johan Barrington.—About the suit with Sir Edward Altham.

G. A.
LOWNTES,
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

(No. 347.) 1630, March 14.—Watertowne, near Charles River, New England.—John Masters to Lady Barrington. . . . The country is very good and fit to receive lords and ladies if there were more good houses, both for good land and good water, and for good creatures to hunt and to hawk, and for fowling and fishing, and more also our natures to refresh in . . . But because Sir Richard Saltonstall hath put me in place to oversee his great family with his worthy son, and that his business being so great as it is, I cannot write so large as I would, for besides his great family he hath many cattle and kine, and horse and swine, and some goats and poultry; he hath also much building at his own house, and fencing, ploughing, and planting, also to help build the new city, and, first, for a house for God to dwell in; these things will require my best diligence, because Sir Richard will be long absent; and therefore seeing he is now come over to advise with the wise to advance the glory of God in planting the Gospel here, and to help forward those that intend the good of this country, therefore I pray you to confer with him of the same . . . and then Sir Richard will inform you of all the particulars that can be said of this country.

(No. 350.) [1631], Feb. 5, London. Sir W. Masham to Lady Barrington. . . . This day Mr. Attorney argued in the Exchequer for the King against the gentlemen in point of knighthood, and on Tuesday the judges will give judgment.

(No. 352.) 1630, Feb. 6, Lincoln's Inn.—Oli. St. John to Lady Barrington.—Sir John Bouchier, Sir William Masham, and myself, had last night some speech of a husband for my cousin Meux. It was occasioned by Sir John's nomination of one Sir William Strickland, heretofore my fellow puple, though long since; his age is about 33 or 34 years; he's a widower and hath 4 children, but all daughters, &c.

(No. 360.) 1631, May 16, London. Thomas Barrington to his mother Lady B.—. . . This day the Lord Falkland's business was heard in the Star Chamber, where a deep censure is to pass on one accusing him of the unjust condemnation of one in Ireland for the gain of his personal estate, wherein the Chief Justice of Ireland is brought on the stage also. The marriage of Sir G. Allington is pronounced void in the High Commission, and he fined 10,000*l.* for his incestuous match, and bound in 20,000*l.* never hereafter to accompany with her again; an excellent example.

(No. 363.) n. d. (The Earl of) Warwick to his loving cosin the Lady Barrington.—I received a letter from your ladyship concerning Mr. Bedell's remove, which there is noe such thing; if there had, I had sooner taken your recommendation then all the bishops in his kingdom.

(No. 365.) n. d. Sir William Barrington to his mother Lady B. . . . Alludes to the intended execution of Lord Castlehaven on Sunday next.—The peace in Italy is thought to be concluded. In France things rest in a suspended balance still. In Germany, Sweden prospers; his taking of Frankfort is assured by a stratagem, for the town had 6,000 in garrison; Sweden finding it strong, retires; the town all fall upon the rear of the army; Sweden's horse fell instantly between them and the town, cutt the garrison off, and took all the passages, and so back into the town, and took it. Now for knights: Sir Edward Allen has paid 160*l.*, the Lord Kingston, 3,000*l.* The lords sitt four days every week, and take 2,000*l.* every day.

(No. 368.) 1631, June 14, Aldersgate St., London.—Thomas Barrington to the same. . . . This present month hath disposed three of the hierarchy to their last home, and called for some new actors to the stage. Our prayers are and ought to be that the next scene may be better performed, especially by those that shall be destined to so large a part as the Northern See. We hear of Morton and wish him; the other 2 bishops whose course is run are Ely and Worcester (as I take it). I hear the King's ships are all to be viewed to-morrow.

(No. 369.) 1631, June 20, Middle Temple. The same to the same. . . . The court news is that the Duke of Sax[ony] hath declared himself against the Emperor and the rest of the princes of the union, confidently pretending not to lay down their joint sword until the Catholic force renounce their confident endeavours against the adverse party, so that now the drum beats in London daily, and forces increase. The peace in Italy depends upon some towns surrendering which are not yet yielding. The intelligence from Holland is, &c. . . . The see of York stands yet all cold for want of an ecclesiastical haunch to fill the chair. We look on Lincoln and Coventry being both in the way northward, but London in rowing hath watermen that look contrary to their pretences.

(No. 371.) 1631, June 24, Aldersgate St.—The same to the same. . . . The news here is that the King of Sweden hath now 20,000 men in the field, and the Marquis Hambleton gathers his forces daily, the King having written new letters to the lords lieutenants in all counties to assist to their uttermost; and 14*d.* by the day is here paid to every volunteer, and the Marquis's tents are up in Islington fields. The Scottish are still in prison, none knows why as yet. They King of Sweden hath taken another town, where his own sword had the honour of brave heroic, and the trophy of his enemies' blood on the point. The Duke of Saxony and the Princes have drawn their swords on the Protestant part.

(No. 374.) 1631, July 9, Harrow. Jo[an] St. John to her grandmother, Lady Barrington. . . . My husband hath not yet returned from my Lord of Bedford, where he hath been above a week.

(No. 378.) 1631, S[ept.] 14, Harrow. Thomas Barrington to his mother Lady B. . . . No news, but that the Polish Ambassador being horsed by the King to hunt in the forest of Waltham lost himself, but was not easily found, but that he was as great as a kingdom.

(No. 385.) 1631, Oct. 12, London. The same to the same. Lord Warwick has the immediate want of a surety for payment of some money. Asks her to allow him to be surety (he had promised never to do such a thing unknown to her). There will be no danger. Lord W. "does not intend to be indebted to any one after "Midsummer next, when my young Lord will be of age." . . . My Lord makes over his personal estate unto me for security.

(No. 386.) n. d. [The Earl of Warwick to Lady B.] . . . Asking her permission for her son to be surety.

(No. 390.) 1631, Oct. 28, London. Wm. Masham to Lady B. . . . Foreign news. . . . We have no domestic news, only some whispe s [of] a Parliament. When the book of news comes forth I will send it, as yet I can not hear of any this week.

(No. 392.) 1631, Nov. 4. The same to the same. Foreign news. . . . The Duke Vendôme, the Queen's brother, is come over to visit her, and this Friday morning she was delivered of a daughter a fortnight, as some say, before her time. The child being weak was christened Mary presently.

(No. 393.) 1631, Saturday. Ju. Barrington to her mother Lady B. . . . Your son is gone to be a clerk this morning to the Court to some Lords, being the first of the three in the bill for sheriff. We were secure that our intended parley with my lord treasurer would have for this time delayed it, but I hear he is not our friend in it. Sir Henry Appleton and my brother Masham the others. We had great bonfires and ringing last night for the Queen's deliverance of a daughter, the night before about 2 o'clock, being at a play, and yesterday morning it was christened, being weak. The Queen's base brother, the Duke of Vendome, is come. Brave gentleman! he hath brought the remainder of the Queen's portion, being 150,000*l.* It's doubted Tilly is not dead, but the victory is great. The Earl of Middlesex is called upon him now for his fine laid on him at his fall, which he had promised at that time to be forgiven, it's 80,000*l.*; it seems it's long of some disgraceful words he lately cast out upon the Duke's memory.

(No. 394.) n. d. Robert Barrington to his mother Lady Johan Barrington. . . . The Queen's delivery yesterday morning . . . a nurse was not provided . . . Arrival of the Duke of Vendome . . . The certainty of the news concerning the King of Sweden came to Court but this day sennight by a gentleman who was sent by that King to our King with letters . . . —The fight between the King of Sweden and Tilly.—The gentleman who brought the news was knighted. P.S. Winchester removes to York certainly; Merton to Durham; Durham to Winchester; Bangor is dead, and the doctor at Hackney hath his place; London removes not.

(No. 395.) W. Masham to Lady B.—Similar news about the King of Sweden's victory. It was a gentleman named Casnell who brought the letter to our King.

(No. 396.) n. d. Thomas Barrington to the same.—The King of Sweden's victory.—The booty at Augsburg was very great, though the Fulcers (Fuggers?) who are the bankers, conveyed away a great treasure to anticipate the King, yet he found enough in the gleanings after his threshing to pay his army for three months . . . At London a woman poisoned her husband, and a man has poisoned his wife, which he did sure to "keep the women's sex from so extreme former shame,

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

.. and to set marriage in credit gain, when the terms were made a little alike. And to make this the better on the women's side, or fouler on the men's Sir Robert Howard hath converted his extremity of loving lust into so foul a disguise of humanity as he hath put up in his long kept mistress the Lady Purbeck her fair face, which (upon a jar between them) he hath made as many crosses upon, with his unkind knife, as he could find attractive beauties in her several features, an unheard of ferity, which though to her is justice from God, yet from him, the cause of all her shame and sufferings, most unmanly and savage. She is come to London from Wales for air."

—P.S. The Duke of Anjoulin has a very great army at Calais, and the Duke of Chevereux is come to him with another army, which are pretended both for Artoys, but England is not fearless if they see with their best and most provident eyes. But I hope we shall be blessed by God. Sir Edw. Coke hath his papers seized by reason of a report that he is about a book concerning Magna Charta, and is likely to incur some trouble.

(No. 389.) Saturday, London. The same to the same.—More about the King of Sweden's victory and the reported death of Tilly.—The papists now interpret the prophecies of the revelation concerning Antichrist upon the King of Sweden; and say he shall continue three years, &c. . . . Sir Robert Howard saith he never did cut my Lady Purbeck's nose.

(No. 410.) n. d. The same to the same . . . The news of the town is of a Parliament, but not believed yet. Swede prospers, God be praised. The Lord Craven is going over with 300 of his own charge and 1,000 for the King of Sweden.—French and other foreign news.

(No. 444.) [1631, Feb. 7, London.—Sir William Masham to his mother (in-law) Lady Barrington. Good news lately come from Sweden by letters to Sir Thomas Roe, which were presented to the King on Saturday last. The particulars are not yet known, only in general that the King of Sweden hath given a great blow to Tilly's army, &c. &c. . . . I cannot omit a strange examples of God's judgment upon a gentleman of Gray's Inn, Mr. Pennington, who in his health using much that execration of the divell takes him, now in his sickness was much troubled with the representation of a black dog suitable to his master, and at last found dead, much torn and distorted, his eyes clawed out, as some think by the divell. This Dr. Gibbs told me.

(No. 417.) 1631, Feb. 28, Holborne. Oli. St. John to Lady Johan Barrington.—About the suit with Sir Edward Altham.

(No. 420.) 1632, April, Holborne, London. Thomas Barrington to his mother Lady Barrington . . . My cousin Robert Cromwell, on to Sir Philip, bound with an attorney, i. upon his master's death imprisoned and questioned for poisoning of him, which we hope he will be clear from in the close . . . Foreign news . . . Women are cruel this year, Saturn reigns with strong influence; another wife has given her husband a poison of melted lead, but it was because he came home drunk; if a bad act, no very bad example to our Hatfield birds, (now the plumber is at work there they may the rather fear the alchouse.)

(No. 421.) n. d. The same to the same . . . This day was the poor woman burnt in Smithfield that poisoned her husband, which is wondered at the cruelty, since there was so much excuse of mercy to her.

(No. 424.) n. d. Ju. Barrington to the same. My Lady Sey, the widow is now dangerously ill of the small pox. The Earl of Bedford in Lent last married one of his daughters to the Lord of Doncaster against his father the Earl of Carlisle's liking; but the grandfather, the Earl of Norwich hath settled on the young Lord upon his marriage all his own lands, being 4,000*l.* a year. The other of the Earl of Bedford's daughters it seems is to marry the Earl of Bristol's son at his return from travel, there being settled a private affection between the young couple. The Lady North lyeth dangerously sick, and Sir Dudley is to marry one of Sir Charles Montague's daughters that hath 10,000*l.*; her sister married Sir Christopher Hatton.

(No. 428.) Tuesday, Whitsun week. The same to the same . . . Yesterday your cousin Cromwell's trial was heard; the probabilities are foul, but he is likely to find great friends. This week Mr. Attorney fined the city 1,500 marks for not prosecuting the law against those that were Dr. Lamb's death. There were last week some 40 honest people sent to prison by the Bishop pretending they were at a conventicle in Blackfriars; they found them at prayers, not exercise. There is much speech of the bravery of a porter that hath taken a brave house and hath his coach and four horses; the Lord Mayor examined him how he got that wealth, he answered nothing; then the lords of the Council got out of him that he being the Pope's brother born in Essex, Goodman Long's sons was maintained by him, and tempted much to have come over to him, these two brothers being ship boys to a French pirate, the porter got means to come again into England, but the other being a witty boy was sold to a courtier in Paris, who, travelling to Florence, there bestowed his boy of a great man, who, when he died, took such affection to this boy that, changing his name to his own, left his estate to him, and so in time grew a Florentine, a cardinal, and now Pope, and the greatest linguist for the Latin that ever was. P.S. A neighbour of mine in Hertfordshire, one Mrs. Kimpton, of some 800*l.* a year, her husband's estate suffered a great disgrace,* some fortnight ago in Hide Park, where the Queen as she thought espied one of her gowns that she had lately lost on Mrs. Kimpton's back, and so sent to her to know where she had it. She, being out of countenance at a such a speech, would not answer, which made it the more suspicious, so that at last she was sent to justice of peace, where she answered also crossly; but at last the truth was known. The King cried her pardon, would have her brought to kiss the Queen's hands, but she would not, and he offered to knight her husband, but she refused also, but parted fairly; a poor recompence for so public a disgrace; but the King did nobly in it.

(No. 430.) 1632, May 21, Holborn.—The same to the same.—News about the King of Sweden and military affairs in Germany.—The French King is retired from Calais with his army into Loraine, and it is thought he only came to settle a Governor in Calais, and to secure it against Monsieur. There is a great ambassador newly come to the Court out of France, and some (I believe not) say assistance is craved for Dunkirk against the French and Dutch, and that for reason of State we have cause to fear Dunkirk more in so near a neighbour's hand as the French or Dutch; but this is but air, I hope I see no reality nor probability in it. The Dunkirkers I am assured have taken three of our ships; I spake myself with a merchant, one of the owners. The fees for buying in of impropriations are questioned, and how they will speed is yet unknown.

(No. 432.) 1632, May 25. The same to the same . . . At my Lord of Holland's, the overthrow (which all the best reporters in London were possessed withal) is suppress; and the settled report only to these particular truths, the burning of some 80 villages in Bavaria, and the King's march to Passau in hope to take this passage &c. &c. . . . The Ambassador to our King from France, Monsieur St. Choumont (a great man), hath now delivered his message, consisting of 3 particulars. The one is to give satisfaction to our King for the late beheading the Marshal of France, (in which danger is the Governor of Calais now committed for offering the town by intelligence to Monsieur, the King's brother). The second is to satisfy the reason of his bringing an army into Picardy and near Calais. The third to desire the assistance of some of our King's shipping for some design by sea. Our King hath given way to the raising of 12 (sic) men for the assistance of the Emperor of Russia, who raises a great army for to side with the King of Sweden, which my Lord Goring told me this day he had much ado to procure by reason of the strong opposition of the Spanish party; Colonel Fleetwood being also raising a regiment for the King of Sweden, heard that there was one who had raised some forces for the Archduchess, who were on shipboard; whereupon fearing that his company would fall short, he procured warrant from the Lords of the Council, and so got all the Archduchess's men away to his regiment, which wondrously pleases in the town. My cousin Cromwell condemned is reprieved and generally reputed a guiltless poor youth, and this evening my Lord of Holland endeavours his farther reprieve and pardon.

(No. 432.) n. d. The same to the same . . . The gentlemen prisoners appeared this morning at Westminster. Sir Peto Hay hath a freedom, Mr. Correton hath his liberty, and Sir Miles Hobart. (Upon petition 'tis voted for Mr. Correton.) The Buss is said (and hoped) will be taken.

(No. 434.) 1632, Aug. (so indorsed). Thomas Saunders to Lady Judith Barrington, (about the tithes of Beechwood.)

(No. 439.) n. d. Audley End. Edw. Stohend to Sir Thomas Barrington. My Lord of Suffolk hearing of

* MS. estate disgrace.

G. A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

your coming this day to Walden hath commanded me in his name to intreat you to take a lodging at Audley End the time of your stay in these parts.

(No. 445.) 1633, January 6, Providence. Hope Sherrard, minister, to Sir Thomas Barrington . . . We have need of prayers and faith now if ever, considering our imminent danger, having not shot for above a day's fight in case an enemy should assault us, and besides, 50 of our ablest and skilfullest men are gone from us of late, some to the Main and some for England, so that we have not able men half enough to man our forts nor any power of men to speak of to repel an enemy from landing . . . St. Martin's is taken by the Spaniards . . . and the rest of the Islands that are inhabited in these parts by the English are threatened . . . Be pleased to take notice of my intent and purpose to return for England by the next ship, as I have also written to Mr. Pim.

(No. 446.) 1633, January 20, New Westminster. Philip Bell to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Promises to send a red wood tree by the next ship.

(No. 449.) 1634, April 12, Warwick House. [The Earl of] Warwick to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Directions to Sir Thomas and the other deputy-lieutenants to write to the captains to send warrants to the constable to warn the companies to appear about the 10th of May for their first musters.

(No. 451.) 1634, August 28, Association. Samuel Wilbe to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Says that all his servants are dead, but one who is like to die . . . he has sent to the company near 1,000 lb. of tobacco; is in debt to the company; asks Sir Thomas to speak for him.*

(No. 455.) 1634, February 25, Providence. Hope Sherrard to the same.—Complains of being publicly affronted by Captain Hooke and some others that joined together to foment a faction against him in the church, having been publicly opposed and disgraced by the governor in the open congregation . . . who has imprisoned him for above a quarter of a year . . . He has written at large to the Right Honourable Company.

(No. 456.) 1634, March 7, London. Norwich to Sir Thomas Barrington . . . Asking him to use interest with the justices for Essex to have the undertaker of the King's cart carriages for Essex removed (being dilatory in paying his employés), and the undertaker for Hertfordshire appointed.

(No. 457.) 1635, June 1, Hollingsbury. [Lord] Morley and Monteagle to his cousin Sir Thomas Barrington.—In favour of Richard Garter (Lady Morley's servant), who will be brought before Sir Thomas that day, and gives a bad character of Parson.

(No. 496.) 1639, March 19, Eaton. W. Maynard to [Sir Thomas Barrington].—He expected the result of the election of knights of the shire. He acknowledges the respectful carriage of persons of quality; but denounces the mob and defends his own conduct, "not thinking it fitting that my master's honor and the place wherein I serve him should suffer from disrespect to my person; . . . though I shall never make scruple even publicly to manifest my dislike and opposition (if I see cause) of what I approve not in my judgment, yet I shall not easily suffer myself hereafter upon the persuasions of others to appear in any popular assemblies where fellows without shirts challenge as good a voice as myself, neither will I for any respect absent myself from any assembly, how great soever, whither my duty to the service of my King and country doth call me; where they shall know and (if they desire) shall feel my authority."

(No. 501.) 1640, July 29, Dublin. Edm. Smyth to (Lady Barrington). . . Touching the exchange of money from hence to London, I could never find any other way but by the merchants here, wherein there is a hazard; besides, I pay commonly 50s. every 100l. for exchange, seldom less often more, besides payment to be 3 weeks or a month after sight of the bill.

(No. 508.) 1640, January 3, Hague. J. F. to Lord . . . It is not the loss of my place, and with it of my fortunes, nor my being exiled from my dear country and friends that affects me, but that which I most suffer under is the displeasure of the House of Commons conceived against me. (He says he arrived at the Hague on Thursday the last of the month.)

(No. 510.) n. d. Draft of letter to John Hall.—"I have received a letter from Major Bull, Deputy-Governor of the Isle of Wight (brought by his brother a minister), concerning my consent for his being elected Burgess of Newtown, in the place of Mr. Serjeant Maynard." He says that he leaves them to their free choice.

(No. 513.) 1641, Feb. 17, Hatfield. Tobias Bridge to Mr. Kendall.—By Mr. Barrington's direction he has drawn 4 letters for New England, v. z., to Mr. Ezechiel Rogers, Mr. Norton, Mr. Keyne, and George Minott.

(No. 514.) Memorandum of Roger Barrington having a little before his death made two adventures to New England, one of 500l. the other of 300l. The first was driven back to England.

(No. 517.) 1641, July 12, Trin. Coll., Camb. James Duport to Mr. Kendall.—Young Barrington seems to have been his pupil.

(No. 521.) 1641, Sept. 16, Rowley (New England). Ez. Rogers to Sir T. Barrington.—Asking in complaining terms for money alleged to be owing to him.

(No. 535.) 1642, March 2, Hatfield. Tobias Bridge to his son-(in-law), John Kendall.—Captain Fitch received a letter from Sir Richard Everard and Mr. Middleton with all speed to repair with his soldiers to Cambridge, or as near as might be, and so accordingly he went. But before he would stir or his lieutenants, they wanting money, desired some pay; whereupon I was forced to go to Gilbert and get 10l. of him for them, that they must make account of when they return home. . . . Captain Fitch says he is to have 15s. a day, and his lieutenants 4s. a day.

(No. 536.) 1643, March 7. Alexander Bonnymon, incumbent of the parish church of Pleskie, in Essex, was proved before the Committee of the House of Commons in Parliament concerning plundered ministers to be scandalous in his life and to have expressed malignancy against the Parliament. Therefore his church is sequestered to the use of John Binfield. Signed, "J. White." (Indorsed, "The draught of the sequestration of Plesky to Mr. Binfield.")

(No. 538.) 1643, March 21. Order of the House of Commons (signed by Hen. Elsing) for stay of rents due to the University or any of the colleges of Oxford for any lands or leases held of them; . . . and particularly that Sir Thomas Barrington is to stay what he or his lady have in their hands due to University College [for Hamstead].

(No. 541.) 1643, April 13, Bradfield.—Harbottell Grimeston to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Says that Capt. Cammock and the Mayor of Harwich have assured him that they have certified Barrington of the state of the fortifications at Harwich.—Hears that an attempt will be made there by foreign forces, and entreats that guns, muskets, and men be provided to guard the place.

Thinks that when the works were first made in 1568 they had no less than 46 great guns upon them, and old Mr. Picton lay at Harwich with his band of trained soldiers; that they had likewise one of the Queen's ships called the Arke Royal; and that he was then in that ship which was manned and furnished for service, and he believes she would have done more good service than all the land forces.

(No. 543.) 1643, April 19. (Lord) Holland to Sir Thomas Barrington.—With reference to the rating of land, he puts before Sir Thos. the sufferings of Lady Rivers, who hath by the violence of the people lost the value of 50,000l.—"And tho' her religion do differ from ours yet is it governed with more modesty & temper than I ever saw it in any person."

(No. 545.) 1643, May 3, Hatfield. Hen. Skipwith to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Is going that day to Ilford to look after the dragoons there.—Difficulty in paying them. He gets no pay for his mayor's place or any other. . . . A report that Capt. More says that if he (Skipwith) goes not on his command, he (More) will pistol him.

(No. 546.) 1643, May 6. (Sir) William Masham to Sir Thomas Barrington. . . Little news—only the King is preparing (as is reported) to give battle to my Lord General about Oxford. He hath drawn some of his forces to Abbingdon for that purpose (as is conceived); my Lord General is advancing towards Oxford; he hath deferred the same for want of money, which is preparing for him with all expedition. There is great store of victuals sent to the soldiers both from the city and from Westminster. I hope our Essex men shall partake in the same. . . . I hear that Ld. Fairfax hath lately beaten the Earl of Newcastle back to York with some loss. . . . In great haste, being to attend the House.

(No. 547.) Same date, London. Will. Hale to [the same].—Report that the soldiers mutiny at Oxford, and that Col. Fielding and four other officers are impris-

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

* In No. 437, which consists of Memoranda for Michaelmas Term, 1632, is this note, "There is 100l. to be paid in December to one Mr. James Soverlane. It was borrowed this summer for the Isle of Providence."

soned for the delivery of Reading. The King is as yet at Oxford, but has sent 5,000 men to Abington, where it is thought he will set up his standard and give battle, because he cannot remove suddenly with all his carriages. . . . My Lord General is still at Reading; . . . his army is very compleat for the number, and his soldiers full of resolution.

(No. 548.) 1643, May 10, Castle Hedingham. John Webbe to Sir Thomas B. The parishioners of Halsted used him badly when he first came to the living, and said he should have no peace. He consented to let them have a lecturer of their own choice and to pay him 30*l.* yearly. He is imprisoned as surety for his brother; his titles and dues not paid; asks assistance.

(No. 549.) May 12 1643. Martin Bayldon to Sir Thomas B.—Tells of his care to keep the trained band together; and of the want of money to pay the men who have none and say they must pawn their arms.

(No. 552.) 1643, May 13, from my quarters at Sunning.—(Lord) Grey and Wark to Sir Thomas B.—The bearer can best inform you of the state of your regiment; the men are so mutinous that unless they can have after the rate of 12*d.* a day they will stay no longer. The payers have prevailed on them to take 8*d.* a day until Wednesday. . . . Your presence one day would persuade and carry some authority with it. Now Major Harper is gone back they have no officer amongst them that they respect. Skipwith is not worth your owning, and of no reputation amongst soldiers here. I have prevailed with mine own regiment in the same condition. If this be not dealt with all effectually it will infect others. . . . There is the wayne of artillery unpaid, a matter of that consequence as may mar all the rest. A small thing would content for the present. 30*l.* I have been glad to furnish out of my own purse. I expect some money for myself; one troop of Cambridgeshire is a month behind. I acquaint you with this as one of the association.

(No. 553.) 1643, May 15, Cambridge. Tho. Cooke, Ri. Harlakenden, Rob. Castell, Mathew Linsey, John King, W. Cooke, Torrelle Joceylyn, John Brewster, Ad. Washington, James Hobart, Thom. Bendish, and Jo. Ellistone to Sir T. Barrington, Sir Timothy Middleton, and the deputy lieutenants and fellow commissioners for the county of Essex.—On last Sabbath they sent a troop of the Lord General's horse and 2 foot companies of their own volunteers, with 4 of their own commissioners, to Ely, whither they put down some disturbances. This troop and their 2 companies they were forced to leave at Ely, so that Cambridge garrison is much weakened.—They ask for one or two companies of foot compleat, either of volunteers or trained bands, to strengthen the garrison at Cambridge or to fortify the Isle of Ely, with a month's pay for them and their officers. Complain of Essex being remiss in sending members of the Association to attend the Board.* Alarums given at Huntingdon yesterday being the Sabbath.

(No. 554.) 1643, May 15. Sir W. Masham, Matt. Lumley, and Har. Grimston to Sir Thomas B. and Timothy Middleton, Esq. (Indorsed, "Some of the "Deputy Lieutenants to the rest.")—They have imparted the addressees letter to the committee for the safety of the kingdom, who think that the sudden distemper will with a small force be suppressed, and that if 100 men be sent out of Essex to remain at Cambridge or in the isle of Ely till the peace thereof be settled, it will be sufficient.

(No. 555.) 1643, May 16, Dublin. (Sir) J. Temple to Sir Tho. B.—Private business.—Our condition is very miserable, our wants pressing, and we are now reduced to those high extremities as I cannot imagine how we can possibly subsist longer here. . . .

(No. 556.) Same date.—(Sir) William Masham, Matt. Lumley, He. Holcroft, Henry Mildmay, and Wm. Martin to . . . Notifying their appointment as a committee to carry out an Ordinance of Parliament to tax such as have not contributed or lent, or not according to their estate. They will meet on the instant at the Cock in Chelmsford.

(No. 557.) Same date, Cambridge. Thomas Cooke, Thom. Bendish, Ric. Harlakenden, John Scrogges, and 9 others to Sir Thomas Barrington and Timothy Middleton, Esq., and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—A present alarm that 9 troops of horse of the King's army are at W. Huntingdon and the parts adjacent, plundering everywhere, and three of their scouts came last night to Titchmans; and the town of Huntingdon sends to us at Cambridge for present aid, and 2 or 3 of our companies are already forth at the isle of Ely to keep down the rogues there.—The writers say they are weak at Cambridge and ask for aid.

(No. 559.) n. d. (Capt.) William Walden to Sir Thomas Barrington and the rest of the committee.—He marched to Cambridge with the few men he could get; but the commissioners there will not supply arms and necessities. He asks advice and supplies.

(No. 560.) 1643, May 18, Chelmsford. (Sir) Richard Everard to Sir Thomas Barrington.—Asking advice with regard to two captains who came to Prittlewell and plundered, and whom he had arrested. Fisher, one of them, has a son with the King, while he himself has a commission a year old from the Earl of Essex.

(No. 561.) Draft of reply by Sir Thomas B., advising Walden to keep the 2 captains in custody until he has written to and got reply from the House of Commons.

(No. 562.) 1643, May 19. Sackville Moore to Sir Thomas C.—Says that he showed Sir Henry Holcroft my Lord's warrant with Sir Thomas's and Mr. Middleton's hands for payment of the quarter-master and the corporal, but Sir Henry said he had no money. . . . Asks Sir Thomas to write to "my Lord" that Moore may have the major's place, which is his right.

(No. 563.) 1643, May 19, London.—Toby Tirrell to his father-[in-law], Sir Thomas Barrington. . . . Hears that the town of Swanburne is burned by the King's forces, and that they killed a woman at a little village within two miles of Thornton, her crime being loath to part with one of her husband's horses. . . . Sir William Waker, they say, goeth on very prosperously still. Some two or three of his troops scaped Prince Maurice very gallantly, for the Prince, having compassed three troops of Sir William's troops, they seeing no help but their resolutions, broke through them without any loss. . . . P.S. News this morning at the Hall that Ireland is in a miserable condition; they desire that since the Parliament is not able to furnish them with men and money, that they would send them what victual they could to keep them alive; 400 of the King's horse are about Buckingham.

(No. 564.) 1643, May 19. (Sir) William Masham, Hen. Mildmay, (Sir) William Martin, and H. Holcroft to Sir Thomas Barrington and Timothy Middleton, Esq. —Can not get much news of the Cambridge committee. Hear that the forces that were seen at Pollingborough, in Northampton, are retired, and that those that were at Winslow, in Buckinghamshire, are not advanced. Now that the Lord General goes to Reading, and will advance, as is hoped, all former fears will fall off, so that the addressees must act according to information from Cambridge. The writers refer to the ordinance passed both Houses, for the 20th part, as a means to pay forces if they should be raised.—They enclose a warrant to the high constables.

(No. 565.) Warrant (referred to in the last letter) signed by the 4, addressed to the high constables of the hundred of Harlowe—telling them to demand and receive from the associators within the hundred one month's more pay for the associated forces under Lord Grey of Warke.

(No. 567.) 1643, May 19, Hatfield Brodoke. Draft of reply by Sir Thomas B. to the deputy lieutenants letter. He complains of the hardship of having to act in the absence of advice from Cambridge, and protests against the hardship of having to raise another (the third) month's pay.

(No. 568.) 1643, May 20, Dom. Com. Sir Wm. Masham and Har. Grimston to Sir Thomas B.—They defer to his opinion as to raising the month's pay.—P.S. As Cambridge is not in danger they agree with Sir Thomas that it will be fit to send Major Skipwith to Lord Grey of Warke.

(No. 569.) 1643, May 20, Westminster.—Jo. Pym to his brother-(in-law), Sir Thomas B.—I was not in the House at the making of the order for Collonell Longe, but by that which I hear it is no other than that he should receive those sums which were allotted by himself for the accomplishing of the regiment which he had orders to raise. If the burden be over-great for the country, no doubt but the House will take care to ease them, but I wish things may be represented by you and the country in such manner as may give them most encouragement, and submit to the House. And give me leave to tell you that I saw a letter yesterday from one of the eminentest ministers of that county, that Colonel Longe gave very good satisfaction to all honest men, and was only terrible to malignants. We now hear

* Deputations of the several Commissioners for Essex are sent to Sir Thomas Barrington, Timothy Middleton, John Scrogges, John King, W. Cooke, Torrelle Joceylyn, John Brewster, Ad. Washington, James Hobart, Thom. Bendish, and Jo. Ellistone.

G. A.
OWNDES,
Esq.

of a great victory in Yorkshire, where Sir Thomas Fairfax, with 1,500 men fell upon Wakeford, where there were 2,000 soldiers, a general, six colonels, divers other field officers; they forced an entrance into the town . . . took 11 prisoners. Goring, who commanded in chief, and 4 other colonels, 24 collars (colours), 1 cornet, 14 wagons of munition, 4 pieces of ordnance. This is a wonderful work of God. Let us make this use of it, unite ourselves as close as we may, and to serve his providence. I do rather write this to you whom I know to have an honest heart, because I hear some subtle practices are set afoot in your county to disaffect the people to the Parliament and to my Lord General, both which, of what dangerous consequence they are, is not unknown to you. I am in great haste. You shall ever rest assured of the hearty affections and faithful service of, &c.

(No. 570.) n. d. Henry Barrington (at Romford) to Sir Thomas B. Asks him to write to the mayor of Colchester that he should pay the writer 60*l.*, spent for the county and town of Colchester, if so much proposition be in the mayor's hands.

(No. 571.) 1643, May 26, Reading. Arthur Dakins to Mr. Cheively at Sir Thomas B.'s.—Requests him to send for the 2 volunteer companies that marched first to Cambridge from Brantry (Braintree?), 2 partisans, 4 halberts, and 4 drums.—Tells him to complain to Sir Thomas that they have no provision for wagons on the march, being forced to hire carts from town to town, and that they have no surgeon. "These have been" great motives to draw our men from the service."

(No. 572.) n. y., Saturday morning. (The Earl of) Warwick to Sir Thomas B. . . . There is a troop of our Essex light horse which was put under Capt. Bosswell and lies in Gray's Inn Lane. I pray you be this morning at the committee, and know their pleasure for the continuance or dismissal of them. If they dismiss them I pray cause one of your servants to see them out of town, or the least to see them safe over Bow bridge, that so their arms or horses be not taken from them, but that they may return to their masters; for if the rascality of the country should rise in any tumultuous way, it is fit our horse were there to suppress them.

(No. 573.) 1643, May 3, Tower. Benj. Ayloff to Sir Thomas B.—In the beginning of last December the King sent him a commission to be sheriff of Essex; the House of Commons bad him fetch the commission from the country; he did so; they took it from him; he asked that he might go to the King to endeavour to be freed from that employment, which was denied, with an intimation (as he conceived) that some declaration should be made concerning the illegality of the King's choice. He has been informed that on the motion of Sir Harbottle Grimston an order was made that he (Ayloff) should not intermeddle with the office by virtue of any other commission; but he never had any copy or notice of such an order. Six weeks afterwards a new commission came to him from the King with strict orders for him to take the oath, and no declaration being published (that he heard of) he thought he might obey the King's command. The House was displeased. He has now been 16 weeks a prisoner in the Tower, where he has suffered in health, and it has cost him more than 200*l.* in fees and expenses, besides horses taken from him at one time, value 100*l.*, and 2 or 3 other horses since. He expected to have received his rents, but is informed that the deputy lieutenants have forbidden his tenants to pay; so he cannot pay his creditors, and he, his wife, and 6 children are in distress. Asks Sir Thomas to move the committee in his favour.

(No. 574.) 1643, March 28.—Examination of Peter Joslyn, of Reyne, co. Essex, yeoman, taken at Maldon.—He states that as the deputy of Joseph Mann, of Braintree (who had a commission for that purpose from the Earl of Warwick and Lord Gray of Warke), he took the several horses specified from the several persons named, and received certain sums of money, all for the use of the Parliament.

(No. 576.) n. d. Gabriell Holmes, serjeant-major, Edward Fyson, captain, and Robert Johnstone, captain, to the Right Worshipful the Committee at Chelmsford.—They have been these 3 days going up and down; they have been at Romford, and thence were directed to Harrow, and thence received order by the committee to come this day to Dunmow, the one part of their company, and the rest to come to Chelmsford. They ask for directions by the bearer what they are to do.

(No. 574.) 1643, May 28. (Lady) Eliz. Capell to Sir Thomas B.—Asks his protection against a threatened spoil of her park.

(No. 577.) [1643]. Friday, June 2, Hatfield. J. B. (Judith Barrington) to . . . Lady Capel has paid Sir W. Masham 40*l.*, but he says that 100*l.* must be paid. Lady Capel pleads the poverty of their estate, and asks that Sir Thomas will try to get less than 100*l.* accepted.

(No. 578.) 1643, June 3. Richard Everarde to Sir Thomas B. At the receipt of the order for stopping Col. Longe in his proceedings we were at Chelmsford taking in the assessments for the twentieth part, by which we had advantage presently to divulge it to the country, who rejoiced at it, being far more willing to pay it to the country's use than to be carried away by a stranger. We have sent you up 500*l.* to stop our associated forces from coming home, which we hope we shall suddenly reimburse, this being, for the present necessity, lent . . . The writer says that after Long had received the order to quit he sent away his troop that night, the alarm being given the enemy was at hand. After he had brought them out of town he returned again with some of his chief officers, and spent that night (as is reported) in skirmishing with quart pots, the fiddlers of the town supplying his trumpeter's place. He has not discharged all scores. . . .

(No. 579.) 1643, June 7, Nettlebed. (Copy.) The Earl of Essex to (the Committee for the co. of Essex?). Thanks for their ready rising in arms for the public service. Desires them to mount as many horse and dragoons as they can, and if they think fit, send them up to the army.

(No. 580.) 1643, June 3, from my quarters at Neatlebed. (Lord) Grey of Warke to Sir Thomas B. Alludes to his having made a major at Sir Thomas's request, and got a reproof from the Council of War, as tho' he had appointed a papist.—For this Essex regiment that goes under your name and Sir Thomas Honeywood's, I have taken Fenwicke, lt.-colonel, and serjeant-major Gray, two able and experienced soldiers . . . The Essex regiment conducted by Dawkyns hath much discredited their country.

(No. 582.) 1643, June 9, Stokenchurch.—Essex to the freeholders and other well-affected of the co. of Essex.

(No. 583.) Same date and place. Essex to the Deputy Lieutenants of the co. of Essex.

(The above are two earnest letters for the county to get under arms and choose worthy leaders.)

(No. 584.) Same date and place. J. Hampden to his cousin, Sir Thomas B.—After referring to Essex's two letters above, he says, The work is so necessary and so hopeful that I cannot but improve the interest I have in yourself for the promoting of it. The power of Essex is great, a place of most life of religion in the land, and your power in the countie is greate too. The difficulties of this warre needs the utmost of both. Our army wants both men and money, and therefore their help in this way proposed would bee very seasonable. I know you neede not be moved to a thing that you apprehend for the good of this cause. Such I conceive this businesse for the good of the kingdome in generall, and so of Essex in particular. Consider of it, and you will find it deserve your serious and hearty indeavours. It will be a service acceptable to my Lo. Generall, and you shall further ingage your affectionate cousin and servant.

(No. 585.) n. d. (Col.) James Mauleverer to Sir Thomas B.—The House of Commons having on the 12th of June 1643 ordered that a committee should take all informations that should be presented concerning Col. Mauleverer and his officers taking of horses, the writer, hearing that Sir Thomas is to be in the chair, entreats him that he and his officers may meet his accusers face to face, or otherwise that Sir Thomas will certify that no man has accused them. He is indignant at being ranked amongst horse stealers.

(No. 586.) n. d. Ju[dith] Bar[rington] to her much honoured friend Sir Thomas B.—Sends a letter which came that evening from Col. Cooke, from his own house (about the necessity of sending troops to Cambridge).

(No. 587.) 1643, June 15, Cambridge. Tho. Cooke, Thomas Baker, Bramphardon, Edm. Borman, John Sorell, Robert Harney, John King, Fran. Jermy, John Eden, Wm. Umfrevile, John Brewster, Henry Meautys, and William Dury (the Committee at Cambridge) to Sir Thomas Barrington, Bt., Sir Richard Everard, Bart., Sir Thomas Hunniwood, and the rest of the deputy-lieutenants for the co. of Essex. Having received a letter to second former desires from Col. Cromwell for the speedy advance of Sir John Pagrowe's regiment out of Wisbeach, and of other three companies sent out of our garrison, according to the Lord General's commands for the increase of the Parliament forces under the Lord

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

Grey of Groby, for the giving check to the enemy in his insolency, and seeing the Queen is on her march with 1,200 horse and 3,000 foot, as credibly informed by Col. Cromwell's letter, and that their forces are beneath that number, we cannot but again and again represent unto you the great necessity of replenishing our garrison with those 3,000 companies which we have earnestly desired of you by our last, seeing we have but one volunteer company in Cambridgeshire, and that you would not fail to send us the 1,000^l. desired of the associated counties according to the rule of proportion, seeing we are out of treasury and owe about 100^l. . . . We pray you fail us not with supply of moneys, for else our garrison forces may mutiny and disband; and ten brave pieces of ordnance all almost mounted for service, besides a good fort and all well furnished, be a prey to the enemy and a rendezvous to the enemy among the counties in association

(No. 588.) n. d. Will. Ho[] to Sir Thomas B. at Hatfield. Last night I went to Westminster for news, but could learn little; the best I heard was of Mr. Pimm, his good recovery. Sir William Waller has laid down his commission he had from the Parliament. My Lord General offers him the commission he had formerly for being major-general in the West . . . On Friday next 6 of the city regiments go out for Reading. What the French Ambassador comes for I know not, he has much desired that Walter Mountagu should be free, which is not granted.

(No. 589.) 1643, June 16. Bledlow, within 5 miles of Tame.—Jo. Taylor to Sir Thomas B.—Sends enclosed the Lord General's warrant to the deputy-lieutenants . . . The forces are still at Tame, but when they shall advance he knows not.—Asks for money to pay troops.—Speaks of the necessity of recruiting some companies of foot.—Asks Sir Thomas to write to Lord Grey to cashier Capt. Cobbie.—Hears that Lord Warwick's regiment is coming again within two days, which will eat up money apace.—Sir Philip Stapleton desires to be remembered.

(No. 590.) 1643, June 16, Bledlow, near Tame. [Captain] Edward Roseingrave to Sir Thomas B.—Asking payt. of arrears for himself and troop.

(No. 591.) [1643, June] 18th. Hatfield. Judith Barrington to [Sir Thomas B. at Chelmsford].—A strongly-worded letter, expressing surprise at the neglect of the Chelmsford Committee to send troops to Cambridge.—Her messenger just returned from Cambridge says that a scout brought word that the enemy were near. The messenger says, "the well-affected in Cambridge are exceeding sad, and say if the cavaliers once get into the town, the counties about are so ill-affected as well as the town or they would be strong enough to keep [it] against all the association."

(No. 593.) 1643, June 22, Finchfield.—John Meade to Sir Thomas B.—The meeting of the hundred is fixed for Saturday next at Wotherfeild, and Sir Thomas's presence is much desired.—Hears that the yeomen were offended by Sir Martin Lumley's carriage towards them, and thinks Sir Thomas's presence will be of service. P.S.—I pray you burn this when you have read it.

(No. 595.) 1643, June 23, Conisb. Castle. Thomas Carne to Sir Thomas B. . . . I have sent up Sir John Oglander and sufficient matter to keep him awhile by the leg, if you do him but justice; without it peradventure the place will be the better for his absence, and some of the clergy (God willing) shall follow him. I desire you to fasten my cousin Lisle to the country with the ordinance for the 300 men, and instructions for the raising of moneys. I desire you to be pleased to send to your servants to preserve the deer which lie within your grounds, now that the park is settled on the Earl of Pembroke . . . P.S.—I have seized on horses and mares which were sent to the island to be secured by malignants, and I understand that more of good value are to come over. As they come I will seize on them, tho' I have no warrant for it, but I desire to have one with all speed, that I may do it by authority upon known malignants.

(No. 596.) 1643, June 22, Markeshall Hall.—Tho. Honeywood, Jo. Sawyer, Ri. Harlakenden, and J. Sparrow to Sir Thomas B.—As Sir Thomas, when last he met them at Chelmsford, could not stay to give directions on what he propounded, they, to accomplish the Parliaments and the Lord General's desire, enclose a paper which they ask Sir Thomas to read, and communicate to Parliament all or such part as he thinks fit, and then send them directions on which they will act.

(No. 597.) 1643, June 22. Anth. Nicoll to Lady Judith Barrington . . . Expresses his regret at leaving Hatfield . . . At my return to this town I met with a sad story, sad in respect that my dear friend Hampden received a shot through his souldier (shoulder) in a late skirmish that was betwixt some horse of the enemy's and ours; otherwise the loss of both sides was near even; only we had the advantage of taking some prisoners of quality, as a son of the Earl of Berkshire, the Recorder's son of London that commanded a troop of horse, with some other commanders. My Lord General moves this day from Tame towards Oxford. The Queen is certainly come to Newark with 4,000 horse and foot; she left behind her 1,500 to face my Lord Fairfax at Leeds, which party, I since hear, has been cut off by Sir Thomas Fairfax, so that Yorkshire is now clear. Sir Thomas Bellasis and Sir Thomas Ingram have left down their commissions upon the Queen leaving the county. Sir William Waller and Sir Arthur Haselrigg have met, and are on their march from Bath towards Wells, where the Marquis now is. Mr. Waller and the rest of those conspirators come to a speedy trial. The Parliament . . . are preparing a petition to be sent to the King by the Earl of Essex to desire his Majesty to return to his Parliament, to disbandon the armies forthwith, and that the ships, castles, and magazines may be settled in such hands as the Parliament may confide in.

(No. 598.) n. d. Will. Hales to Sir Thomas B.—There is little news, but great expectations. Sir William Waller gives in his letters hopes of doing good service.—The Lord General intends to march to-day from Tame; the King is yet at Oxford, the Queen at Newark. Sir John Meldrum is put in Capt. Hotham's place, and Capt. Hotham is prisoner at Nottingham Castle, and it is supposed that Sir John Hotham is secured. Sir William Fairfax writes they hope every soldier to be able to go into the field. The Lords sent to the House of Commons about another treaty with the King, but it was laid by for the present. The House this day was about the Excise, and an ordinance for the giving those the wardships whose fathers die in this service. Next week Mr. Waller and the rest will come to trial. The worst news I know is that Col. Hampden is in great danger; three physicians are gone this day to him. P.S.—I delivered your letter to Mr. Pim, and that to Mr. Goodwin who intends to write by the next.

(No. 599.) 1643, June 23, Langleys. Richard Everarde to Sir Thomas B.—Says that part of the associated forces are gone again to Windsor, where they expect the arrears of their pay at the end of that week, which the writer was forced to promise before they would move.—Asks Sir Thomas to appoint a paymaster to be at London on Monday. Everard will procure of a friend 200^l. or 250^l. for the present, so that he may have it back out of the 20th of the first moneys that come in.—The remainder of the forces are to go to-morrow. Begs Sir Thomas not to omit sending, "for they are upon the least distaste ready to retreat." P.S.—Has received a letter from Jo. Sorel, expressing great want of money for the Committee of the Board, and the not receiving yet any Essex forces, which are desired to be sent with all speed, the Queen being for certain advanced to Newark with 5 or 6,000.

(No. 600.) 1643, June 24, Thame. (Earl of) Essex to the Deputy-Lieutenants of the co. of Essex . . . Desires them to raise 60 able horses in their county, according to the tenor of a late ordinance of Parliament, and send them to him to recruit his own regiment.

(No. 601.) 1643, June 24, Blydlow. Sackvill More to Sir Thomas B. . . . yesterday some of our men came to the army that made an escape from Oxford, which did give report that the King with all his force, as yesterday, was intended to march from Oxford towards the North; also yesterday 80 of their horse brake out and plundered Newport, in Buckinghamshire, in a most miserable manner.—Says that his quarters are near the enemy, and that they expect an attack every night; but his regiment is the bravest in the army, and all confiding men, except Capt. Rosingrave's company; that Capt. having a dispute with the cornet, and the men taking different sides, tho' few with the captain.

(No. 602.) 1643, June 26. Rob. Goodwin to Sir Thomas B. The present Monday, being the 26 of June, we received the sad tidings of Col. Ham[p]den's death; he died on Saturday night last; it being to all honest men a cause of much reluctance and sorrow. This day likewise was read in the House a proclamation which came from Oxford, granting pardon to all members of either House that would come on to Oxford within 10 days, except 5 lords and 13 commoners (named).—The House of Lords voted that they would maintain the Parliament with their lives . . . and desired a declaration might be set forth concerning the Proclamation; House of Commons concurred; the Lord General yet at Tame; but this day Mr. Pim intimated that he would go forward upon some design to-morrow; some commanders in the army refuse the covenant; our forces at Leicester have taken some of their commanders; Lord Fairfax is in great want of horse; the Queen advanceth; last night the cavaliers plundered Wickham, and took a troop of the Lord General's horse, and this city took an alarm upon it, and were up in arms all night; Col. Martin's regiment is to go down to the army with all convenient speed . . .

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

(No. 603.) 1643, June 27, London. Will. Hales to Sir Thomas B. . . . Mr. Hampden is dead, and Capt. Walton at Oxford; Herry is knighted, and has taken a troop of horse which were quartered at Wickam in Buckinghamshire; he plundered the town last night and carried some away prisoners. We hear Sir Samuel Luke went out with 1,000 horse to meet with him as he returns. This day a minister which came from Oxford affirmed in the House of Commons that Nellerfield, and divers others accused of treason in Ireland, were set free by the King's letters, and have now command in King's army: some were colonels, some majors, some captains. P.S. No news from the north nor west. I hear my Lord General is upon his march.

(No. 604.) 1643, June 27, Anth. Nicoll to Sir Thomas B. . . . The enclosed will let you see the resolution of the Lord General about dispatching your forces. The Queen is on her march from Newark, so is the Marquis from the west. Sir W. Waller follows him close in the rear, and will give a good account of that service. Poor Hampden is dead, and I profess to you I have scarce strength to pronounce that word. Never kingdom received a greater loss in one subject. Never man a truer and faithfuller friend . . .

(No. 605.) 1649, June 27. Ed. Covill to Sir Thomas B.—Noticing the absence from a meeting (at Chelmsford?) to hear Essex's letter read of some of the principal inhabitants, and suggesting a mode of making them support the cause.

(No. 606.) 1643, June 28, Aythrop Rothing.—Tho. Griffiths to Sir Thomas B.—Complains that though he has lent money to the Parliament, and was in the Association, and found a volunteer (who was then in service under his excellency), and found a man for the train band, and had paid all manner of demands which any neighbour had paid,—yet he had had his valuable horses taken from him.—He does not know how his benefice is to be assessed.—Asks that the horses, at 12*l.*, and what he lent, some 3*l.*, may be taken in discharge of his 20*th*.

(No. 607.) 1643, Last of June. Thunderley.—H. Mordaunt to Sir Thomas B.—Pleading poverty and asking favour in the matter of the assessment.

(No. 608.) 1643, June 29, Ruckholts. Will. Hickes to Sir Thos. B.—Does not come himself because he wants to be at Mr. Waller's trial to-morrow morning. The bearer, Mr. Humberston, tells him that the woods of Mr. Hen. Petres, seized by ordinance of Parliament, are being plundered by the country people.

(No. 608*a*.) 1643, Last of June, London. James Chaloner to Sir Thomas B.—The bearer is Mr. Cleyburne, a citizen of London, but a gentleman of the north country, and of an ancient family, and my wife's near kinsman, who has married the daughter of Mr. Stane of Stapleford, now assessed at 1,500*l.* per ann. for lands and goods; he contends it is not more than 1,000*l.*; and he has been a voluntary contributor in plate and horses, and will do so again if occasion requires. Asks that Stane may be assessed according to his estate, and then he will be able to pay Cleyburne some money towards his wife's portion.

(No. 609.) 1643, July 1, London.—(Lord) Conway and Kilulta to (Sir Thomas B.) . . . Asks for respite for the twentieth assessed on Hill Hall until he can hear from Lord Say what he intends to do to make Smith pay some money which he has taken up for the writer.

(No. 610.) 1643, July 2, Newport.—Tho. Blechyn-den to Sir Thomas B.—He explains the state of circumstances of John Coxon married to his daughter, with reference to the assessment.

(No. 611.) 1643, July 2, London.—Toby Tyrrell to (Sir Thomas B.) . . . The Lord General upon Saturday in the afternoon sent to both Houses to send him presently a committee both of Lords and Commons, to have their advice upon some special occasion; they accordingly sent. They were Lord Holland, Lord Howard, Sir W. Lewis, Sir John Eveling, Sir Wi. Ermin, and another. They went on Sunday about 11 o'clock away to St. Tabornes, and there stayed to hear word from my Lord General. My lord sent them further that Prince Rupert was come to Buckingham with 5,000 horse, and so it might be unsafe for them to come to him, and so they returned upon Sunday morning. They say Sir Philip Stapelton has got between Prince Rupert and Oxford, and so hath engaged him, and it is thought that both the armies will be suddenly engaged. Sir William Waller hath beaten a party of my Lord Marquis, and hath taken about 100 horse and as many prisoners, and some magazine, and he writes that he was in such hast then to meet the Marquis that he could not write them any further particulars. Sir John Hotham and his son are both taken, and a bringing to the Parliament. The old man would have fain escaped, but he was taken in the act, and they report that they have seized a very great sum of money of his. A report that the Queen has lately received another overthrow. This is certain; Lord Fairfax is in the field with 1,000 horse and 6,000 foot, and intends to give my Lord of Newcastle battle when he dares. The synod is put off till Thursday next.

(No. 613.) 1643, July 3, Coxhall.—Thomas Honywood to Sir Thomas B.—Says there are some soldiers willing to go their colours if they had money to bear their charges. If Sir Thomas will let Mr. Crane of Coxhall lay out some money for them they will march, otherwise they will not move.

(No. 614.) 1643, July 3, Cambridge. Thomas Lake and Ro. Calthorp to Sir Thomas B., Sir Martin Lumley or any other of the deputy-lieutenants or committees at Wotherfield.—They send a copy of Sir William Alanson's letter, which he intended to send, but then to take himself to the House of Commons, and which copy Sir William gave yesterday to the writers.—Sir William Alanson says that on Friday last he and his wife and children were at the south end of Hull ready for their journey to London. Sir John Hotham called him and said he should not go that tide; but that only his own pinnace should go, wherein was Mr. Saltmarsh and another. Sir John's conduct in this and other Yorkshire matters gave offence to the town; and that day about 5, the mayor, assisted by the gentry of the town, seized the blockhouses and then Capt. Hotham. In the interim Sir John took horse and got to Beverley, where young Col. Bointon apprehended him; he resisting received some little hurt. He and Sir Edward Rhodes, Governor of Beverley (to whom it is thought he fled), are both secured in the ship Hercules, his son in the town, and intended speedily to be sent by ship to London. A fight (conceived to be plotted by Sir John) was at Beverley on Friday last for 10 hours by Sir Hugh Cholmeley's forces, but relief was procured by the ammunition sent by Sir John to his house near Beverley; he having commanded the works at his house at Scarborough to be slighted, and all of consequence there to be carried to Beverley and secured. All trunks, boxes, and treasure (which will be found no little) in both their houses brought to the mayor and sealed up, and their studies and papers sealed up. Sir M. Bointon hath done good service. Most of the horse that came with Capt. Hotham, about 50 which followed towards Hull, are taken, and 140 elsewhere.

(No. 615.) 1643, July 4, London. (Sir) Henry Mildmay to Sir Thomas B.—Hopes that Sir Thomas will accommodate the Lord General, and so give the House and him much satisfaction; and that the forces which he sends will "go speedily and at the pay of the army, otherwise they will do more hurt than good . . . " The House gave great respect to your letter concerning pirgin (purging?) P.S. It is thought "Tompkins and Challinor shall be executed to-morrow. I pray satisfy my Lord General."

(No. 616.) 1643, July 4. Jo. Wylde to Sir Thomas B.—Mentions Mr. Hatt (a solicitor) being made collector for the Isle of Wight.—Promises furtherance in the House of an ordinance which Sir Thomas left in preparation.

(No. 617.) 1643, July 4, Aylesbury.—Richard Smith to Sir Thomas B.—Says they came to Aylesbury on Sunday afternoon; at which time it was certainly informed they had lost some dragoons and most of their forlorn hope by a party of the King's forces, which sallied out of Buckingham and came within 3 miles of Aylesbury. At the same time Sir Philip Stapelton would have gladly charged them, but the ground was so boggy that he could not go over the bridge. The cavaliers were 4,000 horse, ours 3,000 horse.—The cavaliers laid an ambush in some standing corn and damaged the forlorn hope, killing two, and taking three prisoners.—My Lord General removes his quarters from Tame to Ethropp House, some 5 miles from Tame towards Aylesbury this day . . .

(No. 618.) 1643, July 5, Tower. [Sir] Thomas Bendyshe to Sir Thomas B., Sir Martin Lumley and the

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

rest of the commissioners for the co. of Essex. The assessors have rated the estate at 1,100*l.* per ann., but it does not give them satisfaction. He has at times made 1,500*l.* from it; but now by reason of sales of part, his indebtedness, loss for want of his own management, and delay in payment of rents, he would be glad to take 1,000*l.* and let the assessors have the surplus. He had hoped that the imprisonment, and the extraordinary fees thereof, the charges in prison, and the dispersal of his wife and family in different place, and the losses which must follow, would have somewhat abated the strict inquisition into his estate.

(No. 619.) 1643, July 5. Edw. Bond to Sir Thomas B. Asking him to take order for the discharge of a horse of Richard Tailor, seized for Parliament service.

(No. 620.) 1643, July 6, Westm. Harbottell Grimeston to Sir Thomas B. Asking him to get Tailor's horse returned.

(No. 621.) July 11. Wm. M. to Mr. Cheevely at Hatfield Priory. Sends some assessment books, with Mr. Luther's notes, &c.

(No. 622.) 1643, July 13, St. Albans. Theod. Heringe and Tho. Wincall to Sir Thomas B.—They waited Friday, Saturday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday on Mr. Treasurer Tailor, to convey moneys to the army. He told them on Friday that the money was ready.—This day we advanced towards the army, being tired of waiting upon an inconstant man to no purpose. He appointed to meet us at Ongar, but we could not find him there.

(No. 623.) 1643, July 24, Tilbury Fort. James Temple to Sir Thomas B., or any other Deputy Lieutenant.—The huge alarm coming to me on Sunday morning out of Kent from Chatham, the consequence of that place made me think upon Essex, and especially this Fort of Tilbury . . . On Sunday by 3 o'clock p.m. I commanded one, Capt. Peacocke, who was bound for the Holy Island, and had besides sea-men 200 armed men for land service, and 40 pieces of ordnance, to fall down for Chatham and secure the dock and the Sovereign with the rest of the ships, which accordingly was done, and took out of other ships honest masters that were known to be able men, and sent them to possess the King's ships, that no treachery might be in them to betray the ships or their provision. The committee for Scotland approved of what I did, who now are gone for Scotland, and by their advice I went by land to Rochester and Chatham to encourage them who through watching and fear were almost at their wits end, as also to give the Maior Capt. Le[e], and Capt. Pett notice what force was coming, that no alarm might ensue that night . . . I went towards Sitting-born, where the forces in rebellion lie, and they by Capt. Lee's forces, and Childer's, and others coming in made a halt, and thought it the safest way to intrench, and that night came no further. This morning the city sent down 500 soldiers more with their arms, and the relation of what I had done gave the colonel much encouragement, who is gone, and at Chatham he is by this time . . . They say the forces at Sennocks (Sevenoaks) in Kent are dispersed, but not suppress altogether; some say they stand on their guard at Tonbridge, a dangerous passage. Some skirmishes have been at Yawlding in Kent, and, so they say, 30 men slain on the rising party, which a countryman writ of and calls it the rogues party.—For my Fort, which of all places concerns the city and kingdom, and Essex and Kent especially, I have been 10 months attending on committee; fair promises, but little done. Men have attended many months, some 10 or 11 months, and not a penny. Some gunners are gone to the King; extremity forceth them. Sometimes 40 men I have had and no arms; sometimes less, and no victuals nor money; and in all these troubles, writing and send night and day, I can get no supply. I would have made the case more public, but such weakness is dangerous to discover. The only way to secure my fort is a ship to ride before it, and then its impregnable and safe, and I have told the committee it will be no charge to the State; such a ship as is not for service will do. Yet seeing some have 60, some 30, some 20, or more or less men in pay, and do nothing but drink and lie idle at a blind river by Rochester, these men would secure my fort, watch the river, prevent any new erecting for sconce or fort 40 miles by Essex or Kent side, secure any magazine for both counties, convey it to them 500 or 1,500 men down the river when passages may be stopt by land; yet could I not see this done, but approved of the motion by all; if not done I know that inconveniency will follow. For 30*l.* or 40*l.* I can cast a trench about my fort, musket shot distance will secure it by land better than 500 men . . .

(No. 624.) 1643, July 4, Riwley. T. W[white] to Sir Thomas B. at his house in Queen Street . . . Says that notwithstanding Sir Thomas's recommendations Sir Samuel Ofeild has not been of any service to the writer and other ministers who have suffered hardships at Hull at Sir John Hotham's hands.

(No. 625.) [1643] July 15. Our quarters at Hackley in the Hole.—(Major) Sackville Moore, (Major) Nicholas Malford, and (Capt.) Isaack Ewers to []. The mutual complaints of Capt. Rosengrave and Sir Cornet are true. The troop will come to nothing if they remain.—Ask that they may be cashiered and that Mr. Waylett, living near Chelmsford, may be made Capt.

(No. 626.) 1643, July 16, Middle Temple. John Welles to Sir Thomas B.—As his tenant, Mr. Marner says that Sir Thomas demands further satisfaction about the proposition money, he (Welles) affirms that at the first proposition in Beds (where he dwells) he offered 50*l.* (none of his estate or condition offered more), which was accepted by the committee, Sir Oliver Luke and Sir Beauchamp St. John; that he sent out two dragoons listed, 2 geldings, and 2 stone horses; that he has paid besides all dues to the Parliament, and is one of the committee for the county for proposition, and he conceives that it is now to be laid on those who have not contributed at all, or not after their estates . . . The King's army is now at Buckingham, the greatest part of the army; only a garrison remains at Oxford, "and if my Lord General does not protect us we are like to be plundered." Says he will attend Sir Thomas and make good what he writes.

(No. 627.) 1643, July 17. (Sir) W. M(asham) to Sir Thomas B. . . . We had lately some agitation at the Committee of Association touching the Isle of Ely, where some would have referred the security of that place to the Lord Lieutenant of that county, but at last it was thought fit to acquaint the House, which hath resolved that Mr. Terrell Josseline, the governor there, should continue still governor (notwithstanding my Lord General advised him to lay down his commission upon some misinformation from the Island which in great part is very malignant), and that he should take what forces he could get presently for the security of that place, and the committee of Cambridge was required to be assisting to him therein . . . Since my last there is a letter come to Mr. Taylor of our House that Sir William Waller is defeated by those fresh forces that came from the King to relieve Sir R. Hopton on Thursday last. My Lady Waller and the House have as yet no letters to that purpose . . . My Lord General is now at Stony Stratford, and we hope now that Col. Cromwell with his forces is joined with him, and my Lord Gray with Northamptonshire forces he will advance presently . . . This day the Lords and we have agreed upon the instructions for Scotland, and the Commissioners are appointed to set forth from hence on Thursday next. We have also agreed upon the Ordinance for Excise, and it is to begin the 25th of this instant July. We hear that the enemy is come to Oxford with some small forces . . .

(No. 628.) 1643, July 19. Har. Grimston to Sir Thomas B. (Endorsed, a letter for the regulation of proportions for the associate counties.) He prays that money may be sent. Some of the Committee are now in his parlour very pressing.—Yesternight we received at the committee for Safety letters from the deputy lieutenants of Kent advertising us that the people are risen in Kent against the Parliament.

(No. 630.) 1643, July 20, Stanton.—W. Spring, Nath. Barnardiston, Tho. Barnardiston, Maurice Barrowe, and Edm. Harvey to Sir Thomas Barrington, Sir Richard Everard, Sir Marten Lumley, John Sayer, and Timothy Middleton, and the rest of the Deputy Lieutenants for the co. of Essex.—Have heard from the commissioners at Cambridge that the enemy approaches near.—Think it requisite that the chief gentlemen of the associated counties should meet at Cambridge the 2d and 3d of August to debate and resolve, and that in the mesme time the addressees should send down some forces to keep off the danger.

(No. 632.) n.d. Philip Allen and John Weylles (?) to Sir Thomas B.—They have this day delivered the full of powder and muskets to Sir Thomas Honeywood; they ask for payment, 90*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

(No. 631.) [1643], July 20 (or 26), Aythrope Roothinge.—Tho. Griffith to Sir Thomas B.—Asks Sir Thomas to interfere about his two geldings taken notwithstanding he has performed all demands, found a

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

volunteer and a train man, and lent 3*l*. upon the propositions.

(No. 633.) n.d. (Sir) Tho. Barrington, (Sir) Wm. Masham, (Sir) Ric. Everarde, (Sir) Tho. Honeywood, Har. Grimston, and Ol. Raymond to His Excellency . . . They ask for a warrant to Col. Ven to deliver the arms deposited at Windsor, some sent by the captains of Essex from Maidenhead, and some that were taken from soldiers of Essex that fled from their colours.

(No. 634.) 1643, July 21. John Clotworthy to (Sir) Thomas B.—Requests him to give instructions to the bearer so that he may be more successful in finding out the corn which is to be supplied for Essex, and to give instruction to the constables to bring in money to Sir Thomas.—“Our necessities in Ireland are beyond measure pressing . . . Sir William Waller is gotten again into the field, but the enemy (is) very strong in these parts.” Sir Arthur Haselrig in no danger, though both shot and wounded. The resolutions for 600 horse in London and the parts adjacent is all remarkable of late . . .

(No. 625.) 1643, July 22. (Sir) W. Masham and (Sir) Henry Mildmay to Sir Thomas Barrington, Sir Martin Lumley, and the rest of the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex . . . They send inclosed an order of the House made “to prevent alarms.” There is no mention of horse, because they have resolved to raise a large body, and a great part thereof to be rendezvoused at Cambridge. The trained horse would better be got in readiness. Capt. Turner may continue his company at Cambridge. They will subscribe an order for Capt. Mildmay’s salary if the addressees think fit to prepare an order for it. P.S.—You shall do well to raise part of these forces (whereof 480 are to be sent to Cambridge) out of the remainder of associated forces of our county, subscribed, but not set forth, or that returned without license: and essential to consider of Becontree which have sent no associated forces. The 500 horse to be raised for Essex are ordered for the time thus, &c. &c.

(No. 629.) 1643, July 19, Huntingdon. (Copy.) E. Mountague, Abraham Burrell, John Cassell, Thomas Templer, Robert Vintner, and Jo. Bonner to []—This night at 2 o’clock received intelligence from Peterboro’ that the King’s forces, 400 in number, appeared before that town; the colonel marched out with his ordnance and repulsed them. They hear that Lord Camden intends to set before it that day, and hath a far greater force come into Stamford, and are fortifying there. At the foot “This came to us after the letter was sealed.” (It seems to have been inclosed in No. 625.)

(No. 636.) 1643, July 22, John Fenwick to Sir Thomas B.—Says that Mr. Grimeston wrote by command of the Committee to his Excellency about reducing the Essex men.—Your paymasters peremptorily [refuse] to pay either field officers or yet the 250*l*. I borrowed to pay your men . . . They paid the men and other officers a fortnight’s pay, intimating they had done their commission and so an end of their employment; and if it had never begun it had been better for your regiment, which now, through neglect of them, or I know not whom, is almost brought to nothing. There went away above 150 men in my absence, and not full 200 left, and indeed if I had not borrowed these moneys and spent my pains and purse to keep them together you had had no regiment a month ago.—After more about his great trouble and expense he says, Sir, I never was a reformado or took reformado pay; I had full conformado pay, 42*l*. per mensem, without a company too before I came to the regiment, and refused a regiment under Sir W. Waller to come to yours under my noble kinsman the Lord Gray of Wark. . . . I must expect my 2 months’ pay now finished and the moneys to my Lord General I borrowed . . . P.S.—The Major expects his 2 months’ pay also.

(No. 637.) 1643, July 22. Robert King to Sir Thomas B.—Says that unless a speedy remedy be applied their troop will come to little: at its first coming it was not above 47 strong; and through sickness and failing of horses it is now much weaker: and the captain absents himself, which is a great discouragement. Asks that the captain be enjoined to attend, and suggests that a new captain should be appointed, or that the troop should be cast into another troop, and then the county be freed from the unnecessary charge of officers.

(No. 638.) 1643, July 22. (Capt.) Robert Cobbett to Sir Thomas B., at his house in Queen Street, Covent Garden.—Complains that the treasurer said he had no order from Sir Thomas to pay the writer and his officers, tho’ he had orders to pay the rest of the captains and officers in Sir Thomas’ regiment.—Begs that he may be paid: says he is 10 weeks’ pay behind for himself and officers.

(No. 639.) 1643, July 23, Cambridge. Edward Clenche, Tho. Cooke, R. Foxton, James Thompson, and Saml. Spaldyng to Sir Thomas B. and Sir Thomas Honeywood and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—They inclose copy of a letter received that morning from Col. Cromwell showing what danger they are in, and how the enemy approaches . . . Lord Fairfax and Lord Willoughby joining together (blessed be God) have taken Gainsborough (the most considerable passage over the river Trent except Newark), and therein the Earl of Kingston with some treasure, and yet hold the same though with much difficulty, which is the cause of the requiring this speedy supply.—They beg the addressees to send men and money.—They are sending away the 2 troops required by Col. Cromwell, and are raising what other strength they can to send to him, leaving themselves very destitute to maintain their garrison.

(No. 640.) 1643, July 23, London. Lionell Copley to Sir Thomas B.—Lord Gray is not gone into Scotland, but is in the Tower because he refused to go.—His Excellency will do what Sir Thomas asks, but he desires that men might be sent up to recruit the regiments rather than put one of them into another . . .

(No. 641.) 1643, July 24, Chelmsford. Sir Thomas Honeywood and Jo. Sayer to Sir Thomas B.—Say that they have collected many dragoons and foot who are willing to return to the army if they may have their pay due: some would be content only with advance and assurance of their pay when they come there.—They send some officers for instructions, as the treasurer will pay nothing without Sir Thomas’ order. They are going to London, and ask for a reply there.

(No. 642.) [1643]. July 24, Westminster. (Sir) W. Masham to Sir Thomas B.—Hopes he received the letter about the 480 foot that they were to send immediately, otherwise he fears Col. Cromwell will be in some danger, and also the associated counties.—Hopes these 2,000 foot will put them in security especially when the horse intended for the rendezvous at Cambridge be sent there.—Hopes that day or to-morrow to send the ordnance for the horse.—Sends inclosed under Sir Henry Mildmay’s hand (who sat in Sir Thomas’ chair) a list of the proportions concluded on last Saturday at the Committee of Association.—For the 2,000 foot which are to be sent to Cambridge, I hear you are upon listing all, which will be another special means of our safety. The like is intended now in London; and have petitioned the House for a Committee of our House to effect the business which is granted.—News that Exeter is relieved by the Earl of Warwick, who has taken 3 forts of the enemy, with 12 pieces of ordnance and 40 men and 2 captains: and that Lord Willoughby has taken Gainsborough.—Hears that Sir W. Waller has come to the Lord General with about 1,200 horse, so that now he hopes the Lord General will be active, having a supply of horse which was his main defect. “The commanders of the army petitioned our House on Saturday to have some defects amended, and we have appointed a committee to consider of the same, and of remedies. The Kentish men that are risen (about 2,000, 500 armed) have petitioned the committee of the safety. They stand upon 2 main things amongst some others: 1st, that they may not be forced to take the new Covenant; 2d, that they may enjoy the Common Prayer Book according to law. We have sent a good force, some 2,000, to join with those of that county for suppressing of them . . . It is good for our county to have an eye upon the waterside joining upon Kent; that there be no intercourse between our malignants and theirs . . . P.S.—If you send trained men for this present supply to Cambridge (as I conceive you must), I pray spare Ongar, who you know sent their trained men to my Lord General when others did not, and “2 months’ pay.—When you have read this, burn it.”

(No. 643.) 1643, July 25, Colne Priory.—Ri. Harlakenden to Sir Thomas B., Sir Martin Lumley and the rest of the commissioners for the Hinkford Hundred.—A statement of what he knows as to what his sister Earle contributed to the Parliament in money and plate.

(No. 644.) 1643, July 25, Cambridge. Thomas Cooke, Edw. Clenche, Wi. Symonds, and James Thompson to Sir Thomas B. and the rest of the deputy lieutenants and committee in the co. of Essex.

(No. 645.) 1643, July 24, Huntingdon (copy). Abraham Burrell, John Castell, Thomas Templer, and T. Fullwood.—Our scout, now returned from Stamford, tells us that this morning early noble Col. Cromwell, Col. Hobert, with Col. Palgrave sat down before Burleigh

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

House by Stamford (wherein was 2 colonels, six captains, with about 200 horse and 300 foot). At the first sitting down Cromwell sent a trumpet to summon the cavaliers, with offer of free quarter to leave only the place and their arms; thereto the cavaliers returned they would neither give nor take quarter, but fight it out to the last man. Whereupon the col. caused the ordnance to play upon the house, but after a few hours proved no good would be done that way. Whereupon our colonels caused their musketeers in 3 squadrons to draw up to the house; that in a little time the cavaliers sounded a parley. Whereupon the colonel sent to the not to kill a man more upon pain of death (notwithstanding their first peremptory refusal). In this manner the house, all the commanders and soldiers were taken, with all arms and whatever else, and not above 6 men slain on both sides. And while this was doing the colonel sent out Captain Dodson, Wanton, and Disborow to meet with 400 of the enemy and had notice were coming to assist the cavaliers. Capt. Dodson being first in with them was wounded and beaten from his horse, but rescued by Capt. Wanton, and then together falling upon that rabble slew about 50 of them and wholly dispersed and routed the rest. Our scout tells us Col. Cromwell gave great commendation of Col. Palgrave's men. Col. Cromwell took it extremely ill that Capt. Paces was not sent unto him, seeing he so earnestly desired it.

(No. 646.) 1643, July 25, Cambridge.—Edw. Clenche, Tho. Cooke, Tho. Symons, James Thompson, and John Cutts to Sir Thomas B. and the rest of the deputy lieutenants for the co. of Essex:—requesting them to continue Capt. Richard Turner, his officers and soldiers, at Cambridge, because there are few soldiers there, and to supply him with pay for himself, and officers and soldiers during the time that the addressees please he shall remain there.—Col. Cromwell has taken Burleigh House and Stamford, and near 500 cavaliers, with divers commanders and 200 horse, and all their arms.

(No. 647.) 1643, July 25. William Lenthall, speaker, to Sir Thomas B., Sir Rich. Everard, Sir Martin Lumley and the rest of the deputy lieutenants and committees in the co. of Essex:—"You may perceive the attempts the enemy hath lately made; their design was to break into the 6 associated counties and to make you groan under the same miseries other counties do. But for the present it hath pleased God to prevent their designs by means of Lord Wiltoughby of Parham, and Col. Cromwell, which will enrage the enemy the more to make a second attempt to invade your fresh counties. For the prevention whereof the House hath ordered that 200 soldiers with a month's pay should be forthwith sent out of the 6 associated counties to Cambridge to be employed there, and upon the confines of the 6 associated counties, out of which confines the co. of Cambridge are required to send the forces that may be spared for the defence of Gainsborough and the parts adjacent; and also that 6,000*l.* should be speedily sent out of the 6 associated counties for payment of the forces that are now sent forth from Cambridge to Gainsborough, and those other forces that are now with Col. Cromwell belonging to the 6 associate counties, of which number of 2,000 soldiers your proportion cometh unto 480, and your proportion of the money cometh unto 720*l.*, which men you are forthwith to send to Cambridge with a month's pay, and also your proportion of money to be paid to Mr. Robert Castle, the chairman of the Committee of Association at Cambridge, upon account; for the repayment whereof (being an extraordinary disbursement) the House will take special care."

(No. 648.) 1643, July 25. (Sir) Richard Everarde to his brother [in law] Sir Thomas B.—"Yesternight, about 12 o'clock, I received these inclosed. This morning very early I had an intimation that many in our parts refuse the Covenant, suspected upon this ground, that they have formerly taken an oath to the contrary.—He desires advice therein.—It's reported by our carrier that came from London last night that the insurrection in Kent increases, many of our countrymen crossing the water and joining with them . . . I conceive necessary to guard well the waterside. I have despatched the letters to the captain this morning."

(No. 649.) [1643], July 27, Stowmarket. Will. Playfers, W. Spring, Nath. Barnardiston, Phil. Parker, Isaac Appleston, Fra. Bacon, Maurice Burrowe, Tho. Barnardiston, Brampton Guidon, and Wi. Bloyse to Sir Thomas B., Sir Richard Everard, Sir Martin Lumley, Sir Thomas Honnywood, John Sayce, Timothy Middleton, Esqres, and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—"We have received a letter from Col. Cromwell earnestly pressing the assembling of the committee out of all the associated counties at Cambridge; also an ordinance of Parliament for raising 2,000 men within the associated counties to march with all speed to Cambridge . . . We have sent out warrants for raising our proportion of soldiers, which we intend shall be ready to march to Cambridge on Wednesday the 9th of August." They ask the addressees to send their proportion of men, and some of them, the commissioners, to meet the writers at Cambridge. P.S. The Hertfordshire gentlemen are to be acquainted with the contents of this letter.

(No. 650.) 1643, July 28, Northumberland, W. At the Committee of the Lords and Commons for the safety of the kingdom. Say and Sele, Ed. Howard, Jo. Pym, and Sam. Vassall to Sir Thomas B. and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—Whereas there is necessity to raise a considerable force of horse and foot under Sir W. Waller to relieve some parts of the kingdom in distress, and suppress the forces raised by the King without consent of both Houses of Parliament, which plunder and spoil the well affected.—They require the addressees to raise in Essex 4 troops of horse (whereof Captain Rich's troop to be one), well furnished with saddles, pistols, and riders, and 1,000 musketeers on horseback into Romford on Tuesday next, to be joined with the forces of the city of London, for the safety of London and the parts adjacent, and other parts of the kingdom.—They are to make up the number out of the light horse of the county, which shall be returned back when the service is ended. In the mesne time that Committee will take care of the safety of Essex.—The addressees are to send 6 weeks' pay for the 4 troops of horse and 1,000 dragoons out of the money received in Essex by virtue of the ordinance of both Houses for assessing the 20th part. All well affected in the county are to assist in the matter.

(No. 653.) [1643], Monday, 11^a hora., Romford. (Sir) Henry Holcroft and (Major) J. Sparrowe to Sir Thomas B.—They send inclosed letters which came to them, by which Sir Thomas will perceive the northern storm grows near them; and they doubt not Sir Thomas will, by uniting all the neighbour counties, stop the enemy before he enters their quarters. They beseech him not to send out their men in small parties, but to march on with all their united forces.

(No. 656.) 1643, July 28, Cambridge. Edw. Clenche, W. Symonds, Tho. Cooke, and Robert Slamey to Sir Thomas Honnywood and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—They inclose copy of a letter dated 27 July 1643 from Capt. Bryant. They conceive the dep. lieutenants of Essex will take care for the payment of such forces as were raised in Essex; as they have not sent money, the writers have let the men have money hitherto, hoping to be repaid; but finding that county backward, they are forced to hold their hands. Hope they will pay Capt. Bryant, his officers and soldiers.

(No. 657.) 1643, July 28. From our quarters in Bockumsfield.—Symon Gray to Sir T. B.—"I did understand from my Lord Gray of Warke when the army was at Thame, that some order might be taken for my monthly means to be paid to me. Since that I did understand by Mr. Heringe, our minister, and by our lieutenant-colonel, that order was by you that I should be paid."—He presses for payment.

(No. 657.) 1643, July 31, London. (Major) J. Sparrow to Sir Thomas B.—Says he has taken order to furnish the 40 horses, and is confident that by Saturday next the other 100 might also be provided. . . . Finds he shall get little abated of 10*l.* the horse. The disbursements being great the undertakers desire 100*l.* on account, which, for the present, he cannot procure. Asks further directions. The bearer will undertake to furnish the horses, and desires 100*l.*; he (Sparrow) will answer for him. In a P.S. he says he has forborne to speak to Capt. Tucker "on that business," because he is informed of a gentleman that is very fit for the service:—will wait on Sir Thomas at Romford on Thursday about it.

(No. 658.) [1643], July 31. (Earl of) Manchester to Sir Thomas B., Sir Thomas Checke and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—As the Parliament has given to him the command of such horse as shall be raised in Essex, he urges them to raise the horse with all possible speed, and let him know where they are to be summoned, and he will come down if they think it of advantage to the service. He will be glad that the gentlemen of the county that will engage themselves in that service may command, as captains of the horse their county raises.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

(No. 659.) 1643, Aug. 1, Quarters, near Windsor.—Edward Wolfe to Sir Thomas B.—About differences between the officers in his regiment.—“Yesterday the major would have delivered a pair of new colours, which had three spots in them, to Capt. Eaurs, and Major Hallford was to have his, which he hath marched withall since Col. Skipwith went off; but he (Eaurs) would not receive them, but would have mine or hold them he had still, and said he scorned to march below me, and did upbraid me . . . concerning my profession, being a tradesman . . . I told him, tho’ I were a tradesman, I were a gentleman, and I can shew my coat.” The major said it should be disputed before a commander of note, but Eaurs would not, and resolved to appeal to Sir Thomas. The writer appeals to Sir Thomas, who gave him his colours; says that he had yielded precedence to Major Fallford (who was under Lord Norwich) and so lost one degree, but hopes he shall not lose two.

(No. 660.) 1643, Aug. 1. (Sir) Thomas Honeywood and (Major) Jo. Sayer to Sir Thomas B., Sir Richard Everard, Harbottle Grimston, Esq., and the rest of the deputy lieutenants, at Chelmsford . . . They are informed that many of Captain Petheroe’s soldiers refuse to march with him to Cambridge, some because it is near harvest, and some desiring more pay, and some will not stir without their present pay here. This day they are all appointed to meet at a rendezvous at Kelvedon, and they intend to help him away there with his company; but nevertheless they will come to Chelmsford if the addressees send word by the bearer. They enclose a letter from a captain who conveyed a company out of Tendring Hundred, and ask the addressees to return an answer to the committee. They enclose certain questions which they have drawn up, and desire answers. They enclose an account of what they have paid to several captains, and certain other accounts.

(No. 661.) 1643, Aug. 1. (The deputy lieutenants?) to the Earl of Essex. (Draft, corrected by Sir Thomas B.) They plead the vast charges on the well-affected in Essex as an excuse for asking that the broken companies of the Essex forces may be completed by putting many into one, so as to make up full numbers, to be commanded by such of their country captains as the earl shall find fitted. This will save the expense of officers in command of a small number of men. They wish to have one regiment formed of all the foot that were sent out of their 3 regiments there, and who marched up so distinguished, all of which are only equal to one regiment. They ask also that the earl will order that the dragoons may all be contracted into such companies only as may be completed.

(No. 662.) Copy of a letter to the Speaker (by the deputy lieutenants?) They are engaged in endeavouring to satisfy his Excellency’s commands to send soldiers to strengthen the army under him . . . They ask him to move the House again to consider of the necessity of a power to compel fit men to serve at the pay of the army, and to punish such as fly from their colours.

(No. 663.) 1643, Aug. 1, Cambridge. Thomas Cooke, Tho. Martyn, Tho. Symons, Wi. Symonde, Tho. Russell, William Harlakenden, and James Thompson to Sir Thomas B. and the rest of the deputy lieutenants.—Hearing that the Earl of Newcastle with a great force has regained Gainsborough and is marching towards the associated counties, and being informed that unless their own forces remaining in the co. of Lincoln be at once relieved by the associated counties they will be in danger of destruction, and the whole association be exposed “to the fury and cruelty of the popish armie,” the writers, pursuant to parliamentary orders, desire the addressees to send to Cambridge forthwith all the horse, foot, arms, and money they can raise within the co. of Essex, to be employed for the security of the associated counties and the frontiers, as they shall receive orders from the committee or their commanders . . . A P.S. is added, signed by Anho. Irby and Miles Corbett, and R. Foxton (?) joining in the desire of the writers of the letter.

(No. 664.) 1643, Aug. 1, Huntingdon. Oliver Cromwell to the Deputy-Lieutenants of the co. of Essex. “The time I was absent from Nottingham this bearer was forced to borrow of the Maor of Nottingham 100l. for the payment of the three companies belonging to your counties, besides shoues, stockings, shirts, and billett money, which I promised should be repaid. I receivinge no money out of your countyes where withall to doe itt, I can but refer it to your considerations; for I thinke it is not expected that I should pay your soulders out of my owne purse. This is the summe of his desire whoe rests yours truly lovinge “frind Oliver Cromwell.” A.P.S. desires them to recruit their two companies and send them up with haste. (No. 665.) 1643, Aug. 1, London. (Maioir) J. Sparrow to Sir Thomas B.—Has endeavoured to satisfy all commands, and hopes by Thursday next all things will be ready. Finds difficulty in furnishing the full number of muskets and backs and breasts by reason so many are taken up for Ireland . . . He moved Mr. Pim that Captain Hacker’s troop might be part of the number of 500 horse imposed on the co. of Essex, and Pim promised to move the House in it.

(No. 666.) 1643, Aug. 1, past 12 at night. Anth. Nicoll to Sir Thomas B. . . , Our army is not in so good a condition as is wished, yet not so ill as ’tis made neither; the train of artillery is somewhat too big, but it will soon be amended . . . The Parliament has this [day] declared that my Lord General’s army shall be forthwith recruited, a constant supply of money provided, the arrears paid, those persons that have scandalised his Excellency, or any of the officers of the army, severely punished. The City of London at a Common Council have done the like, and to-morrow send 2 of their aldermen and 4 of their common council men with an assurance from the city that they will live and die with him . . . My Lord General has sent 14 troops of horse under the command of Monsieur Dalbier, to the relief of Gainsborough. God graut they come timely enough.

(No. 667.) 1643, Aug. 2. Sir Thomas Barrington and the rest of the Committee?] to John Pym (draft). The county having parted with all the horses they had fit for present use, they think that in order to prevent and repress risings and attacks, and accordingly their suit is, that Capt. Rich’s troop may be left with them.

(No. 668.) 1643, Aug. 2, Waltham. John Alcock to Sir Thomas Barrington. Asks that 2 mares, which have been taken from Mrs. Wills, during her husband’s absence, may be restored. Mr. Wills has no others left; and he has paid all impositions laid upon him.—The writer has collected near 200l., which he desires to pay to Sir T. B.

(No. 669.) 1643, Aug. 2, Febmersh. Thomas Lake to Sir Henry Holcroft, or any other of the Deputy-Lieutenants at Rumford.—Last night he was sent unto by Capt. Harlakenden to send a light horse furnished to go on this service with Sir William Waller. He has not a horse on which he can ride. Before he left London he listed a horse which cost 5l. . . . He is altogether unfurnished of horse and furniture; for when he listed his horses (living in London as he still does) he sent away all he had.

(No. 670.) 1643, Aug. 2, Colchester. G. Gilbert to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Deputy-Lieutenants. Has received a letter from Harlakenden to send a light horse to Rumford to-morrow. He formerly had a similar order from the Earl of Warwick, but upon his petition was discharged. He is an old lame man, and also a freeman of Colchester, which town and the burgesses inhabiting it were not many years since at the Council Board freed from finding light horse by adding to their trained band 50 soldiers, which they did. He at this time sends a corslet and a musket, and two men to serve in them. Asks to be discharged from finding a light horse. Says he is brother to Mrs. Smith, Sir George Smith’s and Lady Barrington’s intimate friend. Asks that his mare may be returned home.

(No. 671.) 1643, Aug. 2, Westminster. Jo. Pym to his brother Sir T. B. I am sorry that rumours should so disturb your county, and discourage those preparations that are most necessary to the common liberty. I know of no such speech of Sir Samuel Luke’s that should give any cause of amazement. It is true that Bristow is a great loss, and may endanger all the west if not quickly prevented, and therefore we use all the means we can to raise a considerable army to send into those parts. My Lord General’s army is much weakened by sickness, but the least proportion that is spoken of is 3,000 men able to march, 2,000 horse, and 3,000 sick men. The infection and want of money, and of intertainment in the new leases in London, are the cause of this determination. The 1st is in the immediate hand of God, to which we must submit, the other two we labour to remedy, and hope to prevayle. The common people of the city seem to [be] very hartly and earnest to in a body, and to shut up all theire shoppes. The committee of militia and common counsell have resolved to prevent my Lo. Generall’s army, and to send 2 aldermen, and 4 common counsellmen to [] order. We have resolved to pass an ordinance for pressinge, as soon as it is passed you shall receive it.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G.A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

I thank you for your forwardness in raising the horse and dragoons. I pray send as many musketeers to have horses as you can. In the north, God be thanked, matters goe reasonable prosperously. Col. Cromwell, in the taking of Burlye House took five troops of horse, three of dragoons, three companies of foot. Sure that they have beaten General forces before Gainsborough, and if my Lord of Newcastle's work had not come upon them in the very instant, they had had a more compleat victory. We are studying all the ways we can to save Gloucester, Exeter, and the other western townes now in danger upon the loss of Bristol. I cannot find my nephew Nichols; since I received your letter, he went from me but a little before. I call'd since at his lodging where he was not. I mean to send your man thither again. My Lord Manchester will not be here till this morning, and then I will deliver that which is directed to him.

(No. 672.) Wed. morning. T. Pellware to Sir T. B.—Thanks for favours shown to his officers and soldiers. News yesterday by "a friend from the army that the King's and our forces faced each other, but there was a river betwixt them. Presently after a commanded party was taken out, consisting of about 100 horse, which advanced towards the enemies who were presently met and encountered with a greater number, eight of their part were slain, and five of ours; we lost two captains which were taken prisoners, one of them was Dundacy, a gallant Scotchman."

(No. 673.) [1643], Aug. 3. R. G. to Sir T. B.—Alludes to the loss of Bristol and Gainsborough, thinks Exeter in danger, mentions the deputation of aldermen and common councilmen to the Lord General. The vote of the Houses that we shall have press for 4,000 men, and shall have a vindication . . . "A council of war is chosen by the committee of the safety, I am sorry you were not here at that time. Of our House there is Mr. Pim, Sir Gil. Gerrat, Sir Jo. Clotworthie, Mr. Jepson, Mr. Crew; divers others are chosen out of the House."

(No. 674.) n. d. Sir William Masham, Sir Mart. Lumley, and Har. Grimston to Sir Richard Everard, Bt., Sir Henry Holcroft, Timothy Middleton, and John Sayer, Esqrs.—You know that Sir T. Barrington was entrusted by both Houses of Parliament with 4,000*l.* for fortifying our county and the buying of so many arms as were taken from us by the King upon his first expedition into the north, out of which money we have borrowed . . . pounds, for payment of our adiute officers, and buying of drums, colours, halberds, and other necessities for the use of the associated forces. This money must be raised out of the 4,500*l.* which is to be raised in our county according to the order of the association, whereof you are appointed treasurers.—The writers then state what Sir T. B. and they have engaged to pay, and ask that money may be sent.

(No. 676.) 1643, Aug. 3, Cambridge. Tho. Cooke, Edw. Clenche, Miles Sandys, Miles Corbet, Wi. Symonde, Tho. Symonde, James Thompson, William Harlakenden to Sir Thomas Honeywood and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants. They are alarmed by the approaches of the Earl of Newcastle's army, now at Gainsborough, executing the Commission of Array, and having with him 4,000 foot besides horse. Lord Willoughby and those at Lincoln have sent for Col. Cromwell to relieve them there, without whose help they cannot subsist there long. The foot that is with the colonel is very inconsiderable at present . . . We again crave your help. Here are four companies of your county now in this town, and we desire six companies more at least . . . We have writ for a greater proportion out of the other associated counties; if you now desert us we fear we shall not sit here or in these parts any longer, to trouble you with letters any more. . . . We purpose to-morrow to send away 3 companies of foot to Stamford.

(No. 677.) 1643, Aug. 3. Dorothy Fytche to Sir T. B. Asks to be released from the lance he was charged with.

(No. 678.) 1643, Aug. 4. Perce. Essex Cheek to Sir T. B. Hears that Sir Thomas gave the country such satisfaction at Rumford yesterday that he hopes the business of raising the horse will be soon perfected speedily . . . It is certain that Lord Carlisle is gone with 40 horse to the cavaliers.

(No. 679.) 1643, Aug. 4, Rumford. . . . to Lord . . . Fair copy of a letter asking that Capt. Nathaniel Rich may be made colonel of the 500 horse, which with all speed they will endeavour to raise and complete.

(No. 680.) 1643, Aug. 4. Oliver Cromwell to the Dep. Lieutenants for the co. for Essex. Gentlemen, I being at Cambridge and meeting there with some monies which came from you, some doubt was made whether that monie was intended to be your proportion of the 3,000*l.* assigned mee by the House of Commons towards the payment of my troops. If it bee in persuance of their order I beseech you send word; your letters make it cleere to mee; but yet, because doubt is made thereof, none beinge able to resolve it better than you, I should be very glad to have it from yourselves, and rest your humble servant.

William Harlakenden to the same. Asking for money lest his forces be obliged to return.

Miles Corbet to the same. He is desired by the committee to tell them to take care that the companies there may be recruited, and such as have not appeared, or have run away, may be sent to that place, so that the companies may be full.

(No. 681.) 1643, Aug. 5. Richard Smith to Sir T. B.—The dragoons are to be paid this day, and on Monday next a fortnight's pay. The foot soldiers are to have 3 weeks' pay next week. We have paid all the captains of dragoons 2 months' pay, except Capt. Rosingrave, who, as I am informed, hath not above 8 or 10 dragoons there . . . I conceive your worship need not send 1,000*l.* down at present (unless all the captains and officers should be paid their demands), for there are not above 20 or 40 in any one captain's company of soldiers, as Capt. Aylett did certify me this day, who came now from the army.

(No. 682.) [1643], Aug. 5, Boston. F. Willoughby to Col. Cromwell. Since the business at Gainsborough, the hearts of our menn have been so deaded, as we have lost most of them by running away, so as we were forced to leave Lincoln on a sudden . . . I am now at Boston, where we are but very poor in strength, so as without some speedy supply I fear we shall not hold this long neither: my Lord General I perceive hath writ to you to draw all your forces together . . . If you will stop my Lord of Newcastle, you must presently draw them to him and fight um, for without we be master of the field we shall all be pulled out by the ears one after another. The foot, if they come up, may march very securely to Boston, which, to me, will be very considerable to your association, for if they get that town, which is now very weak for defence for want of men, I believe they will not be long out of Norfolk and Suffolk.

(No. 684.) 1643, Aug. 6, 11 of the clock. Oliver Cromwell to the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex, theise, hast, hast, posthast.—Gentlemen, you see by this inclosed the necessitye of goeing out of our ould pace. You sent indeed your part of the 2,000 foote; but when they came they as soon returned. Is this the way to save a kingdom? Where is the doctereine of some of your countye concerninge the trayned hands and other forces not goeing out [of] the association. I wish your forces may bee ready to meete with the enimie when hee is in the association. Hast what you can; not your part only of 2,000 foote, but I hope 2,000 foote att least. Lord Newcastle will advance into your bowells. Better joyne when others will joyne, and can joyne with you, then stay till all be lost; hasten to our helpe. The enimie in all probability wil be in our bowells else in ten dayes; his armie is powerfull. See your men come and some of your gentlemen and ministers come along with them, that so they may be delivered over to those shall command them, otherwise they will returne at pleasure. If we have them att our armie wee can keepe them. From your faithfull servant.

(No. 685.) 1643, Aug. 7, Alghamston. Will. Peyton to Sir T. B., or other the gentlemen sitting at the White Hart at Romford. Having received from the constable a warrant to appear with a lance horse completely furnished, he desires to be excused, having only 80*l.* per annum, and having neither horse, furniture, nor money to buy them.

(No. 686.) 1643, Aug. 7, Chelmsford. John Dernwall to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants at the White Hart, Romford.—In obedience to their warrant he has warned those charged with lances in his division, and so has his partner Cooke those in his division, and he has sent a return by Mr. Pascall of Much Baddow. Has received a letter from Sir Henry Mildmay, of Moulsham, saying he is willing to find a horse, and had furnisht himself with one, which horse with many others were taken away from him by Col. Lang, and all the furniture which belonged to that horse; and now he is altogether unfurnisht and does not know how to furnish himself so suddenly. (In a

G.A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

P.S. he names some in his and his partner Cook's divisions who have been warned.)

(No. 687.) 1643, Aug. 8, Markshall. Sir Thomas Honywood to Sir T. B. Almost all of the company which I sent to Cambridge are come, ran away, and will not by no means be persuaded to return.—Asks for advice.—I have assigned Capt. Rosengrave's moneys, which he saith is due to him for pay, and have given him the warrant to carry up all the dragoons to the army, which were come away and have stuck here too long.

(No. 688.) [1643], Aug. 9, Lord's Day. Sir T. B. to Sir W. Masham.—I directed the guards to be at Bow Bridge (or near) and at the washes. I beseech you take some care of it, as I have done of a world of particulars incident to that work, and put me not upon Harloe and Waltham as if we confined each other to a speare (sphere?); but let the work be done near Waltham, the place is that I wrote of. . . . I cannot be in all parts. I was very remote when the business came to me. I wrote to you and to Mr. Write. Where was the difficulty of 16 dragoons or 287 that I must now be left to Harloe and Waltham, when the work was to be done and I to go forth to serve the county in great business to-morrow (God willing). But the like is for the horses. I am confined to Harloe and Waltham, when some part of Ongar is far nearer to me, and Waltham five good miles more remote. 'Tis no day no time to dilate. I have informed the bearer.

(No. 689.) 1643, Aug. 9, Mones. Ed. Birkhead to Sir T. B.—Recommends the bearer, John Ramsey, who has been in service abroad, and an officer in service here under the Lord General and Sir William Waller ever since the war began, and is desirous to continue in service to the Parliament under Lord Manchester, and asks an employment for him.

(No. 690.) 1643, Aug. 10, St. Martin's Lane. Tho. Alcocke to Sir T. B.—Please to give to this bearer a letter unto Mr. Eldrid that those that shall be nominated by me may have those goods of Sir Nic. Byrons at the rate they are appraised, and if it were without your prejudice that they might be redeemed without any appraising, in regard he thinks it a disgrace to have them appraised.

(No. 691.) 1643, Aug. 11. J. Hobarte, John Polls, John Palgrave, Sen. Astley, Miles Hobarte, Valentine Pell, Fran. Ferney, Phill. Calthorpe, Gre. Gawsset, W. Smythe, John Coke, Tho. Sotherton, and two others (the committee at Cambridge) to Sir T. B., Sir W. Marsham, Sir Tho. Honywood, and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants for Essex.—The approach of the northern force so near threatening to all that ought to be dear unto us. . . . we desire a speedy and full meeting of 7 or 8 of the dep. lieutenants of each of the 6 engaged counties, and as many other gentlemen as please, to resolve of means to stop, if not repel, so formidable yet Popish enemy. We have thought fit to raise all the force we can and cause them to advance to our frontiers. . . . The place we desire may be Bury, the time on Thursday next.

(No. 692.) 1643, Aug. 2, Wonsted. Sir Henry Mildmay to Sir T. B. . . . I stay this day to view the passages and fords of our river of Hackney. By virtue of the same intelligence I spake with my lord mayor, Sir John Melldrom and Sir Will. Waller, touching the design upon Waltham Abbey; but that place must be secured before it be talked on, lest it be prevented. I pray you confer with those parties I have here mentioned. . . . Move the House if it be possible this very day to direct an ordinance to be drawn speedily that good ministers may be paid their just tithes, or else we shall endanger the losing of a great part; for Mr. Wharton, Mr. Collins, of Brantree, with divers other godly ministers, do grievously bemoan themselves that they cannot get bread for their families, and abundance of them intend to come up with a petition to the House. It will, therefore, be great wisdom for the House to prevent them. . . .

(No. 693.) 1643, Aug. 12, Ipswich. Jo. Brandlinge (bailiff of Ipswich) to the townsmen of Harwich. (Copy.)—Gives the news sending of three ships laden with Danes upon that coast intending to land upon the Norfolk or Suffolk coast.

(No. 694.) 1643, Aug. 12. Ric. Hanken and Roger Coleman to [Harbottle Grimston]. (Copy.) Sending the bailiff of Ipswich's letter, and asking him to raise the trained band of Tendring Hundred.

(No. 695.) 1643, Aug. 13. H. Grimeston to his son. Encloses Nos. 693 and 694, and says he has been at Harwich where they want 10 great guns to furnish the new works, and those things mentioned in a piece of paper enclosed (not there). They can not use the great guns they have or the muskets lately sent from Colchester. Capt. Leslye, with part of his trained band there, are not sufficient to secure the two forts. Asks that some one may be sent to command, and he (the writer) will willingly obey.

(No. 682.) [1643, Aug.] Harbottle Grimeston (and Sir Tho. Honywood, Jo. Sayer, and Jo. Eldred, dep. lieutenants) to Sir T. B.—Mentions the alarms of Danish ships and other rovers and pirates. . . . Fifty men will take the town.—Asks for the things mentioned in the note he sent in the last letter, and money for making bullets and swords at Ipswich; and that Capt. Richard Hawkin's commission may be sent, for no one will obey him, being without authority, and the town is not watched, and the works are not guarded. . . . If officers be not ready to receive the men which he sends to Cambridge he fears they will all soon be back. . . . If the dragoniers which are come from the Earl of Essex are not wanted for the intended purpose, Sir T. B. may dispose of them for the use of Lord Fairfax.

(No. 696.) 1643, Aug. 16. Copy. Order of the House of Parliament that 20,000 soldiers with so many guns, trumpets, and chirurgeons, as the Committee of the House of Commons for the six associated counties shall think fit, shall be raised and impressed, &c., &c.

(No. 697.) [1643, Aug. 18.] Manchester to Sir T. B.—He has desired Sir Thomas Cheeke and Mr. Wright to endeavour to get arms and other things ready for Capt. Mildmay's troop.—Wishes to have Capt. Mildmay with him.—Expresses his obligations to Sir T. B.

(No. 698.) 1643, Aug. 19. Capt. William Poe to the Deputy Lieutenants and Committee for the co. of Essex.—Six days having passed since Lynn declared against the Parliament, he is surprised that the association has not raised more forces, particularly as the Earl of Newcastle is said to have promised to relieve it if besieged. They have chosen Sir Hamond le Strange to be their governor, and he has promised out of his own estate to advance them some thousand pounds, and that 20 others shall raise as much more, with 4 or 5 troops of horse.—He advises that the town should be played on with cannon. He vouches that if relief from the sea can be prevented they can not hold out more than 5 days, altho' they have 40 pieces of ordnance, and can get more from their ships.—On Thursday last he left Bury for Norwich, and on Friday at sunset went, by his major-general's directions, to Lynn, to stop the passages.—He gives an account of how he repulsed an attack by troops who came out of Lynn on Sunday; and another attack on the night of the 18th, when his lieutenant and three of his soldiers were taken prisoners, and he took some of their's.—He is informed that the enemy in Lynn have 1,200 muskets, 500 barrels of gunpowder, with bullets answerable, and 3 or 4 troops of horse.

(No. 699.) n. d. Tho. Nightingale to Sir T. B., or others of the committee at Stansted. I have sent my dragoon with his furniture and able rider, and a month's pay in his purse. I entreat that he may have the keeping of his pay himself. . . . I entreat you let me have something to show what I do to prevent plundering.

(No. 700.) 1643, Aug. 21, Hull. Jo. Bouchier to Sir T. B.—This afternoon Mr. Wright tells me you are made lieutenant-general for Essex. . . . We are surrounded by the enemy by water and by land. Lord Fairfax begins to be strong in horse. We want money, and have had very little money from the Parliament. I pray be a means that Lord Fairfax may have money presently sent.

(No. 701.) [1643], Aug. 21, Pergo. Essex Check? to her cousin, Sir T. E. . . . Lord Manchester relies upon you and my husband, and Mr. Wright, for the forwarding of that business in this county that concerns him. If the money do not come in faster the design will fail, and the troops disperse. . . . He (my husband) desires to know if there be anything for him to do, or to join with you in sending away the forces left behind; for if you have no service for him to do he purposes to go to the Parliament upon Friday. . . . I hear the General is to march to-morrow.

(No. 702.) 1643, Aug. 21, Maskerhall. Sir Thomas Honywood to Sir T. B.—Asks explanation about the meaning of some instructions given in a letter to him by Sir T. B. regarding captain's pay and arms.

(No. 703.) n. d. (Lady) Judith Clarke to Sir T. B.—Asks his assistance, so that she may receive her rents (the committee had given her an order so to do), as she wants them to discharge the payments which she shall be called on for.

(No. 704.) 1643, Aug. 22, Hatfield Broadoak. Sir T. B. to Lady Clarke.—A courtly letter, saying that he

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

C. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

willing (with the rest of the commissioners) to consider what can be objected, and dare not do anything that he conceives unjust and erring from the rules prescribed by the Parliament: . . . he dares not promise anything beyond his letter.

(No. 705.) 1643, Aug. 22, London. Jo. Pickering to Sir T. B.—I had a letter some 4 days since from the Earl of Manchester, commanding me to repair into Essex unto you on this day, with those officers of his that are in this town, with an intimation that his major should receive his regiment at Romford to-morrow . . . I propose to be at Romford to-morrow.

(No. 706.) 1643, Aug. 23. Manchester to Sir T. B. Sends the bearer with commissions to such as have none . . . "I beseech you hasten away the foot and horse out of your county, and let your paymaster bring money with him. I am now going to Bury, and thence into Norfolk, and will return with what speed I can."

(No. 708.) 1643, Aug. 23, Romford. Sir Tho. Cheek, Sir Henry Holcroft, Jo. Wright, and Robert Smith to Sir T. B. "We apprehend a present necessity of supplying our men that are gone out with money; their pay is out this night, and it will be hard for them to make a shift in strange quarters."—The writers ask for a supply of money, which they promise to reimburse when money comes in, for their treasurer has not now 100*l.* by him.

(No. 709.) 1643, Aug. 23. Sir Thomas Cheek and Mr. Wright to Sir T. B.—The captain's list of men to be disbanded for not appearing at musters includes the names of the 6 below, who are well affected to the service of the King and Parliament. The writers desire that there may be no proceedings against those men.

(No. 710.) 1643, [Aug.] 23, Cambridge. Sir William Rowe to Sir T. B. Asks him to remember that some course may be resolved on how they may maintain, by a constant supply of treasure, their hopeful beginnings.

(No. 711.) 1643, Aug. 23, Harwich. Sir Harbottle Grimston to Sir T. B. Encloses a letter from the Harwich men to himself. Asks for the commission to be sent to Capt. Richard Hawkin, and that Sir T. B. will fill up and send the other commission which had sent to him.—Presses him to send the 50*l.* which the Harwich men ask to complete their gates and walls.

(No. 712.) 1643, Aug. 24, London. Sir Alexander Popham to Sir T. B. Since Lord Conway his leaving of the Parliament, my sister Conway fears that the house where she lives at Hill Hall (belonging to a ward) will be plundered: her own house being already plundered by the cavaliers. I beseech you to give her your protection.

(No. 713.) 1643, Aug. 24. (Copy.) Pembroke, W. Say and Sele, Salisbury, Howard, Jo. Pym, and Densill Hollies (the Committee for Safety) to . . . They reveal the warrant which they lately issued for calling away Captain Hacher and his troop (Captain Rich's troop not remaining as they had supposed, but having marched with the Earl of Manchester), and consent that it shall remain to levy moneys and obey the addressees directions. They are to gather the assessments for the 20th and 5th parts, and other arrears, particularly the 1*st* of which h., Richard Evenard, was appointed to collect. They are to arm that troop and employ it to collect all arrears.

(No. 714.) 1643, Aug. 24. Jo. Wright and Wm. Atwood to Sir T. B. Ask him to release the bearer's servant, pressed for a soldier by the malice of a constable.

(No. 715.) n. d. Sir W. Masham to Sir T. B.—Puts him in mind of a present muster of the 3 regiments at 3 several days. "Fears we will find defects in several, especially in Lord Warwick's."—Will do well to send powder for outlet and match proportionable to the magazine of powder.

(No. 716.) [1643], Aug. 24, Romford. Ed. Birkhead to Sir T. B. Instead of £300 or £400, which Sir Thomas thought would be enough to dispatch the forces with a week's advance, he (Birkhead) disbursed at £700. Gives particulars of what captains he had paid, and what companies he had completed and furnished. Asks for colours and other trophies fit for the lieutenants.

(No. 717.) 1643, Aug. 24, Romford. L. C. Mazereves to Sir T. B. (French.) Asks for the saddles and pistols for his company, so that he may join the Earl of Manchester, who impatiently expects him.

(No. 718.) 1643, Aug. 24, Romford. John Fening to Sir T. B.—He had been shown Sir Thomas's directions to send the money received of the 20th & 5th part to Harlowe, but the dep. lieutenants have directed him to pay Col. Birkhead £400, and said they would get him a discharge from Sir T. B.; and he now asks it.

(No. 719.) 1643, Aug. 25, Thaxted. Robert Spilmay to Sir T. B. . . . Our constables yesterday were with William Caton, my next neighbour, to press him for a soldier. Caton being shoeing horse with his hammer in his hand, came to my house; whereupon I wished the constables to make an end of shoeing, and I did verily think he would not start aside; whereupon the constables being very busy pressed another. In the meantime Caton went his way, which doth much trouble me, but I did not pass my word for his forthcoming. If I may have some short time I hope to have him taken and sent to what place you may appoint.

(No. 720.) 1643, Aug. 25, Harlow. J. Pickering to Sir T. B. at Dunmow.—Intended to have come to Dunmow this morning, but the officers being backward, thinks it best to go back to London and being them on Mouday to Romford. "I have appointed my lordes major to come this night to you at Dunmow, or if that fail, to Hatfield. Such officers as are with him at Romford shall come along with him and receive such men as [are] ready to be delivered over to them."

(No. 722.) 1643, Aug. 26, Colchester. Sir William Constable to Sir T. B. at Chelmsford.—This morning he acquainted nine of the dep. lieutenants with the House of Commons request to that county and some others for a contribution for the supply of Lord Fairfax, and they recommend the speedy execution of the order to some ministers lately come there from the assembly, and some other persons. Asks for some dragoons to be sent. Hopes by some friendly help from those counties to make his way through Lincolnshire with a party of horse and dragoons, though he sends some foot by sea.

(No. 723.) 1643, Aug. 26, Colchester. Sir Thomas Honeywood, Sir H. Grimston, Jo. Sayer, Ri. Harlakenden, J. Sparrowe, and Jo. Eldred (dep. lieutenants) to Sir T. B.—Sir W. Constable has been with them, and told them of the order of the House of Commons for the supply of Lord Fairfax. They wish it had come sooner, for they fear the business they are now engaged in may for the present hinder the freeness of men's contributions. If Sir Thomas approves, they think that the dragoons which lately came from the army may be well employed this way (i.e., in these parts), and they desire it.

(No. 724.) 1643, Aug. 26, Cambridge. Sir William Rowe to Sir T. B.—Gives thanks for the last supply of money to the army sent by Sir Thomas. It seems to have been very necessary, for the captains tell him the army will not stand 3 days without pay. The money is, as desired, paid to Mr. Harlakenden, and shall be frugally and fitly disbursed. Mr. Middleton is so useful that the board cannot spare him, but for the present he has leave to see Sir Thomas. "For the dragoons under Major Moore, my Lord General having sent for some of Col. Crumwell's company to go march with him to Gloucester, 'tis conceived fit that they, as likewise all other so returned, should rather be remitted for that service, as concurring with the same and safety of the whole association."

(No. 725.) [1643], Aug. 27. Sir W. Masham to Sir T. B.—Doubts not Sir Jo. Barrington has given Sir Thomas an account of Friday's proceedings at Harlow.—"We sent away with my lord's capt. lieut. but 67 men, and gave him conduct money to convey them to Cambridge."—P.S. The soldiers be this Sabbath night at Walden.

(No. 726.) 1643, Aug. 27, Harwich. Capt. Richard Hanken to . . . Has received the addressee's letter with Sir T. B.'s letter. He dilates on the unprotected condition of the town and the want of watchers.

(No. 726A.) An unsigned note to Sir T. B., giving the meaning of some figures which he may hereafter find in letters, as follow: 1. King; 2. Queen; 3. Foot; 4. Horse; 5. Dragoners; 6. Prince Rupert; 7. Artillery; 8. London; 9. Surrey; 10. Kent; 11. Battaile; 12. Thousand; 13. Money; 14. Magazine; 15. Arms; 16. Commands; 17. March; 18. Pence; 19. Resolution; 12 (20?) Carriages.

(No. 728.) 1643, Aug. 27, Cambridge. William Harlakenden to Sir T. B.—By direction of Sir W. Rowe he sends the Earl of Manchester's letter, and to-morrow he will go to Bury to furnish them with money they so much want . . . From Gloster here is great news from a Parliament man that sent a letter that thousands are slain at Gloster, and 4 Lords, Lord Grandison, Lord Herbert, and 2 not named; this was written to Sir William Waller. About 10 last night came a post from Huntingdon with a letter from the Lord General to Col.

G. A.
LOWNDES
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES.
Esq.

Cromwell speedily to come with all his troops of horse and dragoons to Brackley in Northamptonshire on Tuesday next, being the 29th instant. We had a letter from Huntingdon Committee to the Earl of Manchester to have a care of many thousands of souls that, if the forces be gone, are like to perish by the 30 troops of horse that the Earl of Newcastle hath in Lincolnshire . . . P.S. There is a letter from Lynn that Lynn offers to let in the Earl of Manchester with 10 or 12 men.

(No. 727.) 1643, Aug. 28. Anth. Nicoll to Sir T. B.—This gallant city, considering the distress that Gloster is in, hath enabled his Excellency with 5 new regiments of foot, at least 1,000 horse, clothes for all his old army, and 30,000*l.* in money to pay them. My Lord has likewise called to him the Association of Kent, Surrey, and Hampshire . . . His Excellency is now on his march, and lay last night at Wickham, and intends not to stay until such time as he has relieved that city . . . The Scots have with one consent declared their resolution of coming to our assistance, and have sent us a covenant to unite us the firmer together, which I hope we shall in our House take with a unanimous consent . . . The commission is now come for Sir W. Waller, so that his levies will go speedily on to second my Lord General if there be an occasion.

(No. 729.) 1643, Aug. 28, Walden. Edw. Eltonhead, to Sir T. B. I have observed your commands, and have passed away Capt. Walden's men after their coming to Walden. They behaved themselves with much civility . . . and yesterday before church-time I despatched them to their rendezvous at Cambridge . . . I had part of Capt. Miller's company to watch all night for fear of any tumult by them in the town or by Capt. Holcroft's dragoons who lay there at the same time, who would not march away yesterday, but stayed until this morning . . . I thank God they are gone without the least disturbance that I could hear of.

(No. 729A.) 1643, Aug. 28, Star Chamber. James Temple to Sir T. B. I have been at London to attend on you for an ordinance of Parliament to enable me to perform my place in discharge of that trust reposed in me.—The writer complains of the trouble he has in his Fort by reason of men being put in who will not obey commands for want of pay, &c.; he has not now above 20 men, and when he had 1,000 horse and foot he never had any discontent. Asks for assistance, and that he may have the whole command in his Fort.

(No. 730.) 1643, Aug. 29, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe, Oliver Cromwell, Tho. Martyn, Ralph Freman, William Harlakenden, T. Winche, Tho. Duckett, Henry Meautys, and Edm. Harvey (the Committee at Cambridge) to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants of Essex.—Divers of your companies arriving here at Cambridge make demand to us of arms, and as they inform us by your directions, which wee believe to be a mistake . . . We beseech you therefore to give some speedy and certain order for the supply of this want, that so they may be fit for action.

(No. 730A.) 1643, Aug. 29, London. Ben Wallinger to Sir T. B. Asks Sir Thomas's interference to get restitution to the bearer, John Cawke, of his horse and other things taken from him at Stanes by Cornet Asheton.

(No. 731.) 1643, Aug. 29, Oliver Cromwell to the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex.—Gentlemen, I thought it my duty to send unto you this order from my Lord of Manchester; you will see what it purports, and I beseech you to cause all your horse and dragoones immediately to repaire to mee to Huntingdon; this order of his Lord^{sh} beares date since any hee sent you, and therefore superseades them. Not doubtinge of your favor heerein I take leave and rest your most humble servant, Oliver Cromwell.

Indorsed, To my noble freinds the Depntie Leinets of the countye of Essex present theise.

(No. 732.) 1643, Aug. 30th. The Earl of Essex to Sir Thomas Barrington and the rest of the Committee for the county of Essex.—Gentlemen, When the army quartered at Thame I desired some officers there to send to Lienten^t Collonel Fennicke three hundred pounds for the use of S^r Thomas Barrington's regiment upon promise of repayment thereof suddainely; but it being not done, the monie is expected from mee, wherefore I desire you will be pleased to send the same to mee forthwith that they may be satisfied. Your assured frend, Essex.

(No. 734.) n. d. Sir Thomas Barrington to —. Complains that while they have already sent up near 500 horse and dragoons to Cambridge, and the rest are upon the point of marching and the foot are raising, yet officers and troops of the Lord General's army repair to the great market in Hertfordshire and there take away horses, wherein divers dep. lieutenants have suffered. If this be not prevented the markets will be deserted and no means left for the Parliament or these counties to be supplied out of themselves: for the harvest must perish.—Protests and prays remedy.

(No. 735.) 1643, Aug. 31, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe, T. Middleton, Tho. Cooke, Henry Meautys, Tho. Sother-ton, T. Winche, Tho. Martyn, Edm. Harvey, and Tho. Duckett (the Committee at Cambridge) to Sir T. B., Sir R. Everard, Sir T. Honywood, and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants of Essex.—Some companies of foot are sent hither from you, but in so naked a posture, that to employ them were to murder them. Their demands are arms, coats, clothes, and shoes, wherein how far you are engaged to them by promise, or how far by the common use and custom, we do not certainly know; but things of necessity, as weapons and arms, drums and colours, must be had, and that at the charge of your county.—If not sent at once there will be a mutiny. The magazine at Cambridge affords them not. Ask that they may be sent at once, and to stay other companies till they can come completely furnished to serve. The future rendezvous of all Essex foot is to be at Cherterton (a small mile wide of Cambridge) with direction to send to the writers for further order to march.

(No. 736.) n. d. William Lenthall, Speaker, to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants of Essex.—The House of Commons has received a letter from Col. Browne telling of his proceedings in Kent, and encounter with the rebels at Tunbridge yesterday, taking 200 prisoners, and releasing Sir Thomas Walsingham and others well affected to the Parliament; and he is in pursuit of the rest. The deputy lieutenants of Kent want more forces sent to be in garrison at Tunbridge and other parts while Col. Browne is in pursuit. The addressees are to send one regiment of foot and one troop of horse into Kent to be at the disposal of Col. Browne.

(No. 737.) 1643, Sept. 1, Walden. Fraunces Williamson to Timothy Midelton, Dep. Lieutenant.—Asks him to tell the constable to make return of all defaulters concerning the rates.

(No. 738.) 1643, Sept. 2, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe, Winche, Tho. Duckett, Edm. Harvey, Henry Meautys, James Thompson, Tho. Cooke, and John Bendish? (the Committee) to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieuts.—Henceforth convey your soldiers, army, and ammunition the right way to Lynn; there will be much saved in time and expense. Send your proportion of money for the board, which is 250*l.*, for we are at much want for much; we have provided red coats for such as we have sent away of yours, we shall trust to you to furnish the rest, and to send with them arms, drums, colours, and other accoutrements.

(No. 739.) 1643, Sept. 2, Colchester.—Sir William Constable to Sir T. B.—Sends thanks to him and others for declaring their readiness to assist Lord Fairfax. He sends Capt. Smith, one of his officers, to receive about 160 dragoons, the balance of a troop not sent by Sir T. B. to the Earl of Manchester.

(No. 741.) 1643, Sept. 4, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe, Edm. Harvey, and 5 others of the Committee, to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieuts.—They have given Capt. Welden leave to go and seek the stray sheep of his company, and the rather that he might acquaint the addressees with the committees' difficulties, "for the demands of "your prest men are no less than shirts; coats, breeches, "hose, and shoes, and that upon your promise . . . "We have intreated him to bring your purposes herein "from your own hands, and what course you have taken "for arms and other things of necessity, without which "they are altogether unserviceable, and will eat us up "in their quarters before they can see their enemy."

(No. 742.) 1643, Sept. 4, Cambridge. Sir William Rowe, and seven others of the Committee, to Sir T. Honywood and the rest of the Dep. Lieuts.—King's Lynn stands out, and the Earl of Manchester has laid siege to it, who by a letter (received this morning) desires a present supply of 1,250*l.*, out of the associated counties. Be pleased to raise your proportion, being 300*l.*, and send it to the Earl with all speed . . . We desire also you will speedily send money to Cambridge for the treasurer of Essex for captains and soldiers.—P.S. and arms for your men.

(No. 743.) 1643, Sept. 5, Colchester. Sir Thomas Honywood, Ri. Harlakenden, Jo. Eldred, William Umfraville, Jo. Sayer, and Har. Grimston to Sir T. B.—Referring to No. 742, the writers say, that for the 20th and 5th part, the sums they have caused to be assessed in a gleaning way (for Col. Linge was master of the harvest), amount to about 1,000*l.*, of which about 600*l.* have been spent by Mr. Sherman towards payment of three companies of pressed soldiers sent to Cambridge,

G. A.
LOWNDES.
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

and furnishing the garrison at Harwich; some money has been paid into the addressees treasury in London, the remainder lies assessed as by indorsed schedule, (not there) which can not be gathered, unless the work be imposed on some troopers, for the collectors dare not distraint men of that quality . . . Please assign the bearer, Capt. Robert Sanders, 40*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, being a fortnight's pay for our 100 men, which we hope to furnish him with before to-morrow night, and see them upon the march towards Lynn armed with musquets . . . Please likewise pay the captain for himself and officers a fortnight's pay.

(No. 744.) n.d. Colchester. John Rolfe, mayor, Richard Hawkin, Edmund Seaman, Archer Hauks, John Peeke, Thomas Twitt to Sir T. B.—They enclose a copy of a letter which they sent to the Speaker a fortnight since, but not replied to. They have sent many letters to Sir Thomas Cheeke but cannot get answers. They had hoped it would have more fell by him that serves for the town. Were it not for Sir Robert Grimston, who can not be at Colchester and at Parham both together, they could not but sink under their fears and distractions. The works of the town, now repaired, are not guarded, so that it is in the power of an enemy abroad, or the malignant party there, to be masters of them at pleasure. They send a note of the things required; they are informed that he is one of the treasurers appointed by Parliament.

(No. 745.) [1643], Sept. 5, Castle Hedingham. Capt. Deane Tyndall, Tho. Cooke, and Samuel Plumme to Sir T. B.—Serjeant-Major Bayldon leaving the 200 men at Baintree, when he came to Dunmow, occasioned all the soldiers to return home, so that at our first meeting we could only furnish Capt. Parys with 100 men, and appointed Capt. Oglesby to meet us at Castle Hedingham to take his company there, which we have sent to Conductors to Cambridge to recruit Capt. Paris's company (or to be disposed of as the committee shall think fit), which it seems came not full to Cambridge by 40 men . . .

(No. 746.) 1643, Sept. 5, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe to Timothy Middleton, Esq.—You know we sent to Mr. Atwood, the lawyer, to be here as yesterday, who as yet appears not: a full committee is required . . . Call upon him once more and speed him hither with some good proportion of money, or else we shall be at a loss never to be recovered.

(No. 747.) 1643, Sept. 5, Cambridge. William Harlakenden to Sir T. B.—There is such want of arms we know not what to do. Be pleased to give your corps (?) express order to go where arms are and speed them away. There is great stir among soldiers for coats and shoes and money. Sir W. Rowe has persuaded me to let them have coats and some shoes, and he has bespoken 200 coats, which will cost 12*s.* each . . . I never saw worse tattered soldiers for the general . . . Many foot captains are so poor, they are forced to have money. The treasure is very low, be pleased to send a supply, and so every week . . . I was yesterday with Col. Cromwell at Ely at dinner to let him know Lord Manchester's pleasure by word of mouth that Essex forces shall come up, horse and dragoons, towards Lincolnshire; but my lord told me 'till that foot are come up he could not spare them. Col. Cromwell told me yesterday he sent away all his forces toward Lincoln, and his self would march this day, for his scouts brought word of 8,000 of the Earl of Newcastle's forces appeared. I pray God it be not true.

(No. 748.) [1643], Sept. 6. From the Dragoon's Den at Romford.—Edw. Birkhead to Sir T. B.—I could not answer your commands in yielding obedience concerning Capt. Southcoate; for those men which were imprest in these parts, I completed Capt. Holcroft and Capt. Miller's companies with them . . . I am glad to hear of the good supply you have sent to our forces in money, and commend your design of keeping some forces on foot here that money may be compelled in, or else the coffers will be soon empty (mine is), for I have been forced to borrow 400*l.* out of your inexhaustible treasure . . . which will be reimbursed so soon as money comes in by Capt. Hatcher's force or any other means; for if fair play will not force the malignants, foul will; some must, or else our game can not be played. I have crowded thro' all difficulties and sent away all our forces, [except] only Col. Mazaries, whom I hope before 2 . . . past will also be advanced.

(No. 749.) [1643], Sept. 7, Gretry.—Manchester to Sir T. B.—I have here divers men sent out of Essex, and as many of them, I believe, are run away as are come; and those whom you have sent have no arms, nor clothes, nor colours, nor drums.—He complains.—I earnestly entreat you to send arms and other provisions with these men you send, or else I pray send no more.

I also gave commissions to divers both to be captains in my own and likewise in the two regiments; none of these are yet come; but you have sent strangers and such as abuse the country and make mutinies amongst their men . . . I shall desire you that Maziers may be sent away with his troop to Gretry.—I am gotten within musket shot of the town of Lynn.

(No. 750.) 1643, Sept. 8, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe, Tho. Cooke, Tho. Martyn, Henry Meautys, Edm. Harvey, John Grennwood, Tho. Symons, Rob. Castell, Thos. Bendish, Tho. Wright, and Tho. Duckett (the Committee) to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep.-Lieuts. and Committee of Essex.—The necessities are such that unless the proportions of the counties of the association are sent the commission must discontinue and the army must disband . . . They say they are in such a condition that they can scarce borrow 50*l.* without the security of them all. "We have sent you the copy" of a letter from Col. Cromwell (not there) whereby "you may see what he desires."

(No. 751.) 1643, Sept. 8. F. Rous to Sir T. B.—I recommend to your consideration the condition of Mr. Hansley, minister, of Paglesham, of whom 20*l.* are required for the 20th part of his estate . . . I think the 5th part of 20*l.* is more than he is truly owner of beyond his debts . . . Please make this known to the committee that he may have a just relaxation (having a wife and child).

(No. 752.) 1643, Sept. 8, Westminster. Pembroke, W. Say and Seale, Jo. Pym, Gilbert Gerard, and Anth. Nicoll (Committee of Safety) to the Dep.-Lieuts. and Committees of Parliament for the co. of Essex.—Directions to hasten the sending of the forces ordered to be raised in Essex to join the Earl of Manchester.

(No. 753.) n. d. Indorsed as from Colchester, but seems to be from Harwich. (Copy.) John Rolfe, Richard Hawkin, Edmund Seaman, Arthur Hauks, John Peeke, and Tho. Twitt to the Honble. William Lenthall, Esq., Speaker of the House of Commons.—Thanks for sending Sir Harbottel Grimeston among them . . . his care of this town of Harwich has been abundantly manifested . . . no part of England lies more exposed to invasion than this. The works are now upon the matter finished; we have 12 great guns, and those mounted; Sir Harbottel hath likewise furnished us with 60 musquets and powder sufficient for the present. We must now become further suitors to the House of Commons for these particulars following, viz., 4 sakers [a line is left blank], without these all that hath been done is in vain; it had better the works had not been made than not guarded and defended as they ought to be. As they are now they do but invite a foreign enemy or the malignant party.

(No. 754.) n. d. Sir William Constable to Sir T. B.—Looks to him for "the assistance which Lord Fairfax" hopes to receive from this county. There is not one "penny come in by any other way assigned for his" supply since his coming to Ha. This way of voluntary subscription is the only present means which "the House of Commons hath recommended. I hope" you will look upon it not as a remote cause but "current with other ways which you are about for the" public purpose . . .

(No. 767.) 1643, Sept. 9. Anth. Nicoll to Sir T. B., at his palace in Essex.—Congratulations on the birth of a grandson to Sir Thomas.—Last night came one from my Lord General that assured me that the King has removed his siege from before Gloucester and is gone to Bristow. My Lord General's army is much increased, and so strong that I have very great confidence he will give you a good account of that service; in a day or two we shall set Sir William Waller out, which will make them at Oxford to be on their guard. The Queen is still there, but not without fears, some say jealousies. Exeter holds out resolutely; the Scotch commissioners came to town last night; we will dispatch them as soon as we may; that nation is very sensible of our condition.

(No. 758.) 1643, Sept. 9, Romford. Edw. Birkhead to Sir T. B.—Sends by bearer 6 of the best horses he could choose out of the remains of dragoons, but saddles and bridles he could not send; it took a saddler 10 days to mend the old saddles. The country brought in such trash that 2 thirds were unfit for service . . . "With" much industry I have completed Col. Mazaries troop, "but I never saw such an indisposition in men to the" service in my life, for . . . they have lain here a "month, yet were not provided of trumpets or colours" for their troop. I think we must have another troop "to force these out, but I hope this day to send them" packing. This part of the county doth much strange

G. A.
OWNDES,
Esq.

"that Capt. Gowers, a man of known fidelity, should be put by his company and others admitted whose zeal to the cause hath not so much appeared."—Asks for colours and trophies for the company wherein "your servant hath the honour to be your lieutenant-colonel," and for money.

(No. 759.) 1643, Sept. 9, Gestrey. Manchester to the Dep. Lieutenants for Essex.—I long expected the impressed soldiers were promised me from the county of Essex. At last I received by Capt. Sheriffe, the bearer hereof, 38 men, by Captain Risbrooke 52, by Capt. Boyes about 40, by Capt. Gooday about 60, by my own lieutenant 103, and 39 by a conductor who was sent by you; for the arming of these men I received 200 arms; and this in short is all the force I have had from Essex towards reducing the town of Lynn . . . My horse and dragoons are most of them sent away to Col. Cromwell for the stopping of the Earl of Newcastle's march this way and drawing the Yorkshire and Lincolnshire horse into a body with them . . . Hasten hither all the force you can with money and arms, for otherwise they are by far more dreadful to me than any enemy . . . I have for the present completed my own company with the men that Capt. Sherife and Capt. Risbrooke brought to me; and do resolve to run the same course for my lieutenant-colonel, my major, and such other officers of my own regiment as have already received commissions from me . . . P.S. You must of necessity send drums, colours, halberts, partisans, drummers, and clothes for the soldiers of both regiments, and that with all speed.

(No. 760.) 1643, Sept. 9, London. Henry Hichford to Sir T. B.—I received your letters. I did go in Tower Street to Mr. Watsons; his men told me that the match and the bullets were sent to you, and that their master would be with you. Also I was in Philip Lane with Mr. Edwards; he hath not any pikes ready, but by next Friday he will have 50 or 60 at the most . . . Let me hear to whom I shall deliver them.

(No. 761.) n. d. Edward Freshwater to Sir T. B.—Asks him to recommend the bearer (formerly employed in the service of Lord Brooke, deceased, as one of his life-guard and otherwise) to Lord Denbigh for one of his life-guard.

(No. 762.) 1643, Sept. 11, Wittingamchall.—Thomas Baker to Sir T. B. Since seeing you at Epping I have ever since been in this county employed in the public service . . . not having been in any way settled since coming from beyond seas. Besides the total loss of all the profits of my lands in Lincolnshire and Gloucestershire, where the best part of my estate lies, I lent 100*l.* at first upon the Propositions, and not 10 days since sent in 2 horses completely armed, worth 50*l.* at least, and have paid all rates and assessments . . . Notwithstanding, the Committee of Haberdashers' Hall have assessed me at 500*l.* for my 5th and 20th part, which, indeed, should have been only assessed where I am resident.—If they proceed to execute their purpose I shall not only repent what I have done but resolve never to do any thing more.—He asks Sir T. B. to write a letter to the committee.

(No. 763.) 1643, Sept. 12, Canfield Hall. Lady Eliz. Wiseman to Sir T. B.—I had last night at my house a troop of horse which added a great affrightment to my late griefs . . . by reason of my late loss (of her husband) . . . altho' I must needs commend the civility of the captain. Their demand was for the 20th part . . . almost the whole of the orphans portions . . . I do hope you will be my friend in this business, &c. On Thursday next I hear they will give me another visit.

(No. 764.) 1643, Sept. 12, Romford. Ed. Birkhead to Sir T. B. According to your directions I have sent the dragoons' horses . . . This gentleman being furnisht I shall be well purged of them; he desires horses for draught; I know they must be had, but without warrant I can not deliver them; they are ready for your warrant, but the main thing is money, which he desires, without which we cannot move . . . P.S. There is 40 horse, but the proportion is left to your direction what shall be needful, as also to answer the rest of the associated counties; I conceiving we are to find but our proportion with others of the association in this charge.

(No. 766.) n. d. Sir Tho. Nightingale to Mr. Middleton at his house in Stansted.—I have received 2 warrants, one to the assessors of this parish, the other to myself; the first is that this small town shall find 3 nags with muskets and able riders, and myself to join with them in the charge for a land rate. I am also to send my lance to Romford upon Monday next completely furnished with great saddle, back, breast, and pot, which word I do not understand, with a case of pistols and a sword; there are many other things belonging to a lance which I entreat you let me know whether I shall need to send all or not; I think they are more troublesome than useful. Besides, we are to find men well affected to the Parliament; but where we shall find them God in Heaven knows, for we do not. As for myself, my man which did serve upon my lance is in service already; and if my life lay on it I know not where to get one, much less the Town three. So this piece of a town must find four, and Clavering, which is 3 times as great a parish, finds but 4. These partial courses do so alien the minds of the countrymen that I find them not to be what they were. And besides, such an extreme charge to be put upon us as the 5th part of men's estates in lands, and also the 20th part of their goods; and this is to be delivered in upon oath, with a promise that we should be heard and abatement made if there were cause. For my part I did alledge one cause why I should be abated, but I was taken up so short by Sir T. Barrington and Mr. Eltonhed, the greatest delinquent in these parts, and has so many delinquents depending upon him, and hath passed over their estate with little or no charge upon them, and the well affected set so upon the tainters (venters?) that they desire rather to suffer the worst than that they do. I did alledge that I did and do owe to Mr. Wynne 1836*l.*; says Mr. Eltonhed, I am of my Lady Mainard's counsel, she doth owe you as much. It is true she doth owe me some money, and Sir Robert Banister doth owe her 10,000*l.*, but he will pay her none, neither can she pay me; so that I pay the use of it to save my land. Besides of the 500*l.* which I have, 2 sons of mine have 100*l.* of it, which never comes in my hands; the one of them is with the Earl of Warwick at sea, or else at his employment, and I am confident never young man in England hath done the Parliament better service than he hath done; the other is at the endes (Inns?) of Court, which must be maintained; besides I do owe of a daughter's portion 1,000*l.* . . . The bearer hereof, William Collins, is certified to have 10*l.* per ann., and so is to pay 40*s.*: I did certify for him that he doth owe 150*l.* These things I entreat you and the rest of the committee to take into consideration.

(No. 768.) 1643, Sept. 15, Newport. John Cockett to Sir T. B. Gives account of payment made to a few soldiers, 18*d.* each per day.

(No. 769.) 1643, Sept. 15. Lieut. John Pew to Sir T. B.—I thought that I should not have the happiness to be here before the town was taken; but I believe I shall see it if I live; many [a] bullet [will] fly before we have the town . . . Your Essex soldiers did put me to very much trouble before I brought them here, and also I did not bring one-half of them to the army. I spoke to Mr. Lackington for my pay and my major's. Please send a letter by him to my Lord.

(No. 770.) 1643, Sept. 16, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe to Sir T. B.—The arms sent by Bury (out of the charge or care of any) were by a discreet messenger from hence conveyed to Linn, and there by the Earl of Manchester's directions disposed of to our soldiers. The money sent by Mr. Smith is safe, and put upon the charge of your treasurer, my cousin Harlakenden, who is so active and careful for the disbursements, that he makes us pay but upon view and in the army, which the gentlemen of other counties observing have committed the like trust to him, so that now we are thinking to settle his fees by order of this board . . . We conceive it fit to charge all captains with the arms and horse they shall receive by indenture.

(No. 771.) 1643, Sept. 16, London. John Watson to Sir T. B.—Sends by Henry Hutchins' waggon 300 swords had of Capt. Bromfield, 300 sword-belts by Mr. Wildinge, 700 pr. of bandeliers bought by himself, 42 pikes received from Mr. Hickford, 20 halberts, 10 partisans, and 10 ensign stands left in Porter the carrier's warehouse. I conceive left by Capt. Cane. There is 100 pair of bandeliers left behind; the Dunmow carrier shall bring them and then there will be 100 pikes done if you appoint me money to pay for them, for the pike-makers will not deliver them unless the money be paid in hand, and I find money slow in coming in to your treasurer Mr. Borked, where I am out near 900*l.* behind unpaid, the 300 pikes will come to 90*l.* . . . I have got a warrant for the 800 pair of bandeliers, but not yet received the monies; they cost 22*l.* per piece.

(No. 773.) 1643, Sept. 18, London. Robert Barrington to his father Sir T. B. . . . In Westminster Hall this morning Sir Henry Holcroft and divers of your friends, did assure me that the house had certain information of the taking of Cysesters by my Lord General.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

which was done in this manner. It seems intelligence was given to our army that there was 2 regiments of horse newly come into that town, intending speedily to Kent, and there to renew their quarters. Upon that some of our horse drew near Cysstow and took the town upon an onslaught, and took both the regiments, whereof Sir Nicholas Crisp was colonel of one, and Spencer of the other; and they have taken 40 cart loads of victuals which were going to supply the King's army, who I hear is making towards Oxford, and my Lord General after him.

(No. 774.) 1643, Sept. 19. William Harlakenden to [Sir T. B.] The Earl of Manchester has had King's Lynn delivered up to him without shedding blood.—Sends copy of his lordship's letter (not there).

(No. 777.) 1643, Sept. 20, London. Henry Hickford to Sir T. B. Has got from Mr. Edwards in Philip Lane 42 pikes; he could not supply more, and could only promise as many a week hence. So Hickford has procured good pikes and sends an account: 58 pikes at 6s., 250 pikes at 5s. 10d., 42 pikes at 5s. 9d.; total 102l. 7s. 10d.

(No. 775.) 1643, Sept. 20. Robert Leigh to Sir T. B. He was assessed in London, where he has resided for 2 years, and paid his 20th and 5th, and got certificate of payment, but understands from the collector in Essex that the certificate under the clerk's hand seems not to be authentical enough . . . Besides the 20th and 5th, the other taxes and voluntary contributions there and in Essex have cost him 50l. more, besides 3 horses taken from him, which tho' not valued in Essex, yet in Hertfordshire are set off by the commissioners as part of the 20th part . . . By his birth and education he is forced to live as a gentleman, having daughters marriageable and a son at man's age, and has only 400l. per annum . . . Hopes that the truth of his allegations may prevail for his discharge.

(No. 776.) 1643, Sept. 20, London. John Watson to Sir T. B. Sends by Thomas Porter, the carrier of Dunmow, 300 pikes and 100 pair of bandeliers . . .

(No. 778.) 1643, Sept. 21, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe to Sir T. B. Upon your reference made to me to contract for two troops of dragoons with Suffolk gentlemen, I endeavoured towards it presently by a despatch to them, but instead of assigning some to treat with me, I received this inclosed (not there), which will satisfy you how far they are from it. I heard this day that the dragoons are with Lord Manchester at Linn, and that the offer of these will be made to Norfolk gentlemen by my cousin Harlakenden, or upon his motion by my lord; but I shall not be here to serve you in it, being to depart here on Monday; my supply may do it, and I wish he may be a deputy lieutenant de meliore luto . . . Our monthly payments we estimate at 5,000l. at least . . . Coats for 200 lie here ready, and both my lord and the soldiers call for them, but they stick for money.

(No. 779.) 1643, Sept. 21, London. Thomas Corbett (for his father Laurence Bromfeild) to Sir T. B.—Yesterday at Romford he got his warrant signed for the last parcel of swords delivered. Sends it by bearer, and asks Sir Thomas to pay it or else to sign it and say where it shall be paid.

(No. 780.) 1643, Sept. 22, Waltham in Essex. William Malyn, Tho. Baron, Timothie Colc, Anthony Flacke, and Henry Leader (parishioners of Walden) to the Right Worshipful the Commissioners.—They have been commanded by warrant to collect the last 3 months weekly assessment and bring it in that day.—They have not been able to do it, and they ask a letter to the committees and sequestrators for Waltham and the liberties thereof, to be ready to be aiding and assisting.

(No. 781.) 1643, Sept. 23, London. Sir Francis Harris to his cousin Sir T. B. Encloses a petition from Sir Benjamin Ayloff to Sir T. B., and Sir Richard Everard, and Mr. Mydleton, and 2 certificates (not there), and asks their lawful favours regarding it.

(No. 782.) 1643, Sept. 25, Colchester. Sir Thomas Honeywood and Jo. Sayer to Sir T. B.—They had already a copy of the letter sent by Sir Thomas written by Lord Manchester, complaining of defects in unposting men; they will endeavour to make up the number. "Twenty more we should have out of the town of Colchester: we have often writ to the mayor about it, who we find very remiss, neither can we have 30 of our musquets which you were pleased to leud Mr. Barrington notwithstanding we have often written to him for them . . . We hoped you had been before this fully furnished with money out of the 20th part; though our barren corner can yet send you none, our pains shall not be wanting in speedy sending our mite."

(No. 783.) 1643, Sept. 26, Markeshall. Sir Thos. Honeywood, Har. Grimston, and Jo. Sayer to Sir T. B. . . . We have made out our warrants to all our collectors to bring in what money they have received upon the general ordinances . . . and to return the names of such as refuse to pay; we only want Capt. Hatcher to bring in the harvest. We have made out warrants for raising more men, wherein we doubt not we shall give you a good account of our service, having already much exceeded the proportion laid on this division . . . The Earl of Manchester writes for drums, colours, and other necessities, which we hope Major Sparrow by your direction has already supplied. . . .

(No. 784.) 1643, Sept. 28, Cambridge. William Harlakenden to Sir T. B.—Asking that the bearer, Capt. Risborow (recommended by Mr. Wright of Norfolk), may be appointed to a captaincy if possible.—"I beseech you send moneys speedily, for here is one or two come from Col. Cromwell's troops sent from Essex to make known their great want of money . . . I am forced to stay here at Cambridge till money comes by your command hither, lest the Earl of Manchester should be displeased at my return empty, knowing the great want. It's reported for certain that Col. Cromwell hath had a battle; . . . here is one Capt. Hall come from Lynn that saith the Earl of Manchester hath sent some foot companies away toward Col. Cromwell. Here is 4 troops of horse come from London under the command of Captain Olford and Capt. Player. They have brought from London 25 carriages of ordnance and ammunition, which are going down to the Earl of Manchester . . . Send some money to-morrow if you can . . . I shall acquaint my Lord of your unwearied endeavours to do your country and the kingdom service. Your labours I doubt not shall be rewarded from heaven, your name clothed with honour on earth, and your posterity receive eternal mercy . . . Major Moor went yesterday towards King's Lynn. There are 200 coats ready for the soldiers. I know yourself are not unmindful of those sent about towards London by Major Cane; the poor soldiers long for them, and the time of year calls for them. Sir William Rowe now calls to me to intreat you to be mindful of the great want of 100l. at least for many particular occasions."

(No. 786.) n. d. Saturday morn. J. B. (Judith Barrington) to Sir T. B. . . . Yesternight I received a letter from our child Nicolls for a farewell from the Lord General's camp, being now going his journey for his employment westward. All the news he writ me was that the King was drawing all his forces towards Reading. At Abingdon the greatest number both of horse and foot are already quartered . . . He says that our general's army at Reading is as gallant and well resolved for number as any is in the Christian world.

(No. 765.) 1643, Sept. 29. Essex to the Dep. Lieutenant of Essex. I wrote a letter to you above a month ago desiring 300l., which I had disbursed for the necessity of Sir Thomas Barrington's regiment expecting repayment according to Col. Fennick's promise . . . It remains unpaid . . . Send it with all convenient speed.

(No. 787.) 1643, Sept. 30. William Harlakenden to Sir T. B.—Great want of money for the horse and foot of Essex. Last night a captain come from Col. Cromwell to make known their great want. This 600l. I have now received (for which I thank you) will be a little supply . . . Col. Cromwell writes to us that he is very safely returned to Boston, for which he desireth us to give God the praise of such a mercy; for divers troops of Lord Willowby of Parham had an alarm from the enemy, Lord Newcastle's forces, that were and are returned into Lincolnshire. And all those troops did run away, and gave no alarm to any of the rest of Col. Cromwell's forces, and it was God's infinite mercy their throats were not cut in their beds. A Council of War, I hear by this captain, have this action now in question, and it's much feared that treachery is among them that seem for us . . . This captain that comes from Col. Cromwell was very lately in Hull and stayed there 3 days. Lord Fairfax and his lady are very well, and Lady Fairfax gave him this motto in a favour, rather dy, than truth deny. They in Hull that are honest fear the Earl of Newcastle's forces no more than a fly, as this captain says, but Hull men many in the town are rotten at the heart . . . Sir Thomas Fairfax and Sir William Fairfax are both with Col. Cromwell in Boston, and have brought by water 22 troops of horse from Hull, and they and our force of horse are between 40 and 45 troops, and Col. Cromwell sends an earnest

G. A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

letter for more aid from Cambridgeshire, which shall be speedily sent to him. The Earl of Manchester intends to march speedily. I am now going to wait on his honour with these moneys I have, and hope you will send more speedily.

(No. 788.) 1643, Sept. 30, London. Lieut.-Col. John Fenwick to Sir T. B.—They have been obliged to engage Mr. Hearing's lands in order to raise money, and send the bearer, Lieut. Franklin, to receive that 100*l.* to discharge Mr. Hearing's extraordinary engagement.—“The Lord General is in London, and takes it very ill that he wants the 250*l.* lent to me for the use of your soldiers, and I perceive thinks the more of it because the regiment was withdrawn out of his army when it was weakest.”

(No. 789.) 1643, Sept. 30, Cambridge. Sir William Rowe, William Harlakenden, Edw. Clenche, Tho. Coke, Matthew Linsey, Tho. Martyn, Tho. Duckett, Tho. Bendish (the Committee) to Sir T. B.—Thanking him for the many expresses of money and messages from him—comparing him to Joshua—and assuring him that there was no ground for him to suppose that they thought otherwise than well of him.

(No. 790.) 1643, Sept. 30, London. Sir Henry Mildmay to Sir T. B. I am commanded by the Committee for His Majesty's revenue to send to you these ordinances (not there), to be with all speed published in all market-towns, that the tenants of the King, Queen, and Prince may have timely notice to pay their rents according to the ordinance. The Lord General spake to me last night about 300*l.* and odd of his purse for our Essex forces and your regiment. His Excellency hath written to you about it, and I pray you dispatch it. Great notice is taken that the dep. lieutenants and Committees of the Parliament in many counties do not vigorously raise the arrears of the subsidies, weekly assessments, and other payments and sequestrations, and rents of papists and malignants are not diligently levied as they ought to be, but such partiality and slowness used that the Parliament is much troubled . . . these particulars being industriously executed without partiality would be sufficient to set out my [Lord] General and Sir William Waller; and they are in a course to have these arrears brought in . . . Prevent the Parliament in these particulars. I mean to wait upon you shortly with my hawk for a little refreshment. We must remember the Earl of Manchester's allowance. Mr. Pime (Pym) recovers prettily.

(No. 793.) 1643, Oct. 2, King's Lynn. William Harlakenden to Sir T. B.—He came to the Earl of Manchester this day, who in reply to an answer to his question what money H. had, said 600*l.* was as good as nothing, and that H. owed him more than 600*l.* which he had laid out for Essex forces since H. left him last Tuesday sennight. H. says he now owes 900*l.* and upwards; and Capt. Rich says that H. owes him 500*l.* or very near . . . “The captains here are in great want of money. I shall do what I can with the little. Col. Cromwell tells me he wept when he came to Boston and found no moneys for him from Essex and other counties; he says he regards money as little as any man, but for his troops, if they have not moneys speedily, they are in an undone condition: he says he wonders how I will be able to see the troops of horse and dragoons and have little or no money for them. To-morrow the Earl of Manchester and Col. Cromwell and Col. Russell and all these forces are for Boston, whither my Lord tells me I must go with him and sett up my being with his lordship to rid his hands of much trouble that daily lies upon him when I am absent, which must be constant with the army. In his lordship's letter to me that I received even now from Major Moore, he writes that I would speedily send to Sir Thomas Barrington for coats for his regiment, being 2,100 and odd men, and that the coats be of green cloth lined with red. There is 200 and odd coats made already at Cambridge that Sir William Rowe bespake of Mr. Buckley. If you have not bespoke the coats, Mr. Buckley would provide them at 3 days warning if yourself will write. Cambridgeshire troop is now sent for by Lord Manchester presently, and there will be no convoy when you shall be pleased to send moneys to Boston; therefore I thought it my duty to give you notice thereof.” . . .

(No. 795.) 1643, Oct. 4. Ant. Nicoll to Sir T. B. . . That which you hear of Bristow is nothing, but that the delivery up of the town is to be heard at a Council of War. on the request of Col. Fynes. The King last night sent some 2,000 foot and 8 troops of horse to Reading, but I make no doubt we shall quickly dislodge them. The differences betwixt my Lord General and Sir William Waller are very well reconciled. The Scottish covenant taken by above 8,000 at our house and almost by all of the city . . . Sir W. Brereton is before Shrewsbury and has taken the outworks.”

(No. 796.) 1643, Oct. 5. Fran. Harris to Sir T. B. (No. 798.) 1643, Oct. 11, Cambridge. William Harlakenden to Sir T. B.—About the coats for the Essex soldiers.

(No. 799.) 1643, Oct. 11, []ightsbridge. Jo. Wright to Sir T. B.—Cannot come; has been under physick for 14 days.

(No. 800.) 1643, Oct. 11, Brenthall. Capt. Benlowes to Sir T. B. . . . “I am informed by my Bardfield tenants that they were last Monday forbidden at Dunmow to pay me their due rents, because it is conceived (tho' unproved) that my mother is a papist, who never being legally convicted, and living in London, paying all Parliamentary rates and taxes, and contributing nothing to the other side, I hope she comes not within the compass of the ordinance.” He says that she subsists by his liberality. The sequestering his rents prevents him paying the remainder of the 20th part. He thinks the proceeding may arise from some personal difference between himself and Sir Martin Lumley.

(No. 801.) 1643, Oct. 11. Sir Will. Hikes, Sir Hen. Holcroft, Robert Smyth, and Jo. Wright to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants.—Asks whether it be fit at this time to send out Capt. Tooley with any more men, in regard they have already sent as great a proportion of men as any other division, money coming in so slowly.

(No. 802.) 1643, Oct. 11. John Francklyn to Sir T. B.—Asks him to hear the case and shew favour to the bearer, Mr. Powell, an honest man resident at Willingall in Essex.

(No. 803.) 1643, Oct. 12. Anth. Nicoll to Sir T. B. . . . Sir William Waller has given up his last commission, and his forces that were raised by that, but retains two others, and may have a third for Major-General of the West (if he pleases) . . . My Lord General within a day or two marches towards Reading. The city, the gallant city of London, sends 7 regiments with him; by that I doubt not that God will enable him to do that work and to send a very considerable strength to the West to help our friends there. We send money to the army this day. Pray hasten your monthly contributions and your supplies to Lord Manchester.—Sir W. Brereton has a very considerable army near Shrewsbury, and is hopeful to carry that place. The Scots have taken the covenant, and are in a forwardness on their march; they only want money, which we are getting for them as fast as we can. My good uncle Pym is reasonably well recovered; he does the better for your prayers.

(No. 807.) 1643, October 13, Horncastle. (Copy.) Manchester to [the Dep. Lieutenants or the Committee for Hertfordshire?] I, being employed in your service, hold it a respect due unto you to give you an account of my proceedings in these parts against the enemy. God hath been pleased to give us a great advantage over the enemy upon Wednesday last in Winsby fields . . . the particulars I shall suddenly send you. In the meantime I can assure you that there were about 300 slain, whereof divers persons of quality; 800 taken prisoners, and divers which ran away were sore wounded. I am now in pursuit of the rest of their forces . . . I desire you to give me your best assistance in speeding the levies of your proportions of men and money to me; and if the service be retarded by affairs on your parts, I hope I shall stand acquitted before God and man . . .

(No. 805.) 1643, Oct. 13, Cambridge. Dudley Pope, Tho. Duckett, Jo. Reade, Ro. Winter, E. Mountagu, Edw. Clench to Miles Corbett, Esq., Chairman for the Committee of the House of Commons for Examinations.—It is about a horse seized by them which the Committee for Examinations had ordered them to redeliver, or show cause. They end by saying, “our desire and the desire of Abraham Felstead is that he may have his ticket allowed upon his 5th and 20th part, which hath been our practice hitherto where the ordinances permit it, and the rather because the said [Captain Patteson] is now in the service under Col. Cromwell's command, and hath the said horse of Mr. Thompson's.”

(No. 806.) 1643, Oct. 13, Cubbington in Warwickshire. Thomas Parsons to Sir T. B. . . . “I am your poor neighbour at Birch-hanger, and I conceive myself to be much overtaxed there by our assessors. Besides, I have paid moneys at Coventry, and the

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

"town where I live is deep rated for the weekly assessment, and we send provision often to Warwick and Kenilworth, horse-meat and man's-meat, and do very often entertain soldiers; for all these I have my share, though I have not a foot of land nor any goods more than a little household stuff in the county where I live, and now thus taxed. And Mrs. Rowe of Stamford paid 12*l.* to an old servant of mine at London for my use, and the 12*l.* was taken away by some Parliament soldiers and I can not get it again . . . Sir, take into consideration my poor fortunes."

(No. 809.) 1643, Oct. 13, Murkeshall.—Sir Thomas Honeywood to Sir T. B.—Sends enclosed [not there] a letter just received from cousin Grimston. Is sorry they mistook the day, but hopes Sir Thomas will not fail to meet them on Tuesday next, when he hopes to furnish Sir Thomas with more money than they could have done if they had met on Thursday last.

(No. 807.) 1643, Oct. 13, Romford. John Fleming to Sir T. B.—I have sent by this messenger what money I have received, and not formerly disposed of, which is 300*l.* I was in hopes that 400*l.* would have been reimbursed before this, that that might have come also, but there is yet none to be had. I paid also to Capt. Towers, by order of dep. lieutenants here, 75*l.* I entreat a receipt for this, as also for the 1,000*l.* sent you by Mr. Fuller, the treasurer.

(No. 808.) 1643, Oct. 14, London. William Gray to Sir T. B. "I presented the lieutenant-colonel with your letter, in answer to which I received 150*l.*, and when I shall have the other 100*l.* I am not certain . . . I have bought 400 or 500 coats, which I hope will be ready by Saturday next . . . that sort of cloth is not to be had for money for the present, but I hope in a little time to perfect the 1,000 coats."—He presses for the 100*l.*, and also for the other 250*l.*, without which he will not be able to perfect the great work in that difficult time.

(No. 812.) 1643, Oct. 16, night. Tobias Bridges to Sir T. B. Encloses a letter [not there] which Mr. Hales brought that morning from Hertford . . . "The 300 horse that were kept at Hertford are sent already to Bedford, and they are providing to send some foot. Give me leave to put you in mind to hasten the money for my Lord of Manchester for the encouragement of the soldiers."

(No. 813.) 1643, Oct. 17. (The Earl of) Warwick to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants of Essex.—Asks that Lieut.-Colonel Dakins may have as many serjeants and other officers allowed him as the rest of the Essex regiments, and that he may have the arrears of pay due to him as major, adjutant, and lieutenant-colonel of his regiment. "I hold him to be an honest, able, and experienced soldier."

(No. 814.) 1643, Oct. 17, Chelmsford. (The Committee or the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex to the Committee of the House of Commons for Safety?). Draft of a letter telling of news from the Committee at Cambridge that the King's forces had taken Huntingdon and part of 4 troops of Essex horse; that they are a strong party, and are believed to intend for Essex and the other associated counties, the outworks to London. The writers say they have divested themselves of all forces except trained bands, "which of how little use they have proved in other counties, and how to depart from their colours that have been sent out of this most men know." They pray assistance, especially as on a late occasion of their sending horses, they were assured that the militia of London and other power would relieve them in case of need.

(No. 816.) 1643, Oct. 17, Cambridge. Sir William Rowe, Edw. Clenche, Torrell Jocelyn, Gre. Gawsett, and Robert Winter (the Committee at Cambridge) to Sir T. B., Sir Martin Lumley, Timothy Middleton, Esq., and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants of Essex.—"Our alarms come thick upon us, telling us the near approach of the enemy, which, if it should succeed by the surprise of Huntingdon or this place, it would infest, if not endanger, the greatest part of the association. This enclosed [not there] will tell you the device against us."—They ask that what help the addressees can give may be speedily sent to Cambridge.

(No. 817.) 1643, Oct. 18, Bardfield.—Sir Martin Lumley to Sir T. B.—This afternoon was brought this enclosed letter (No. 816) from the committee at Cambridge . . . The party that brought the letter signifies that by scouts sent 3 miles out of Cambridge was discovered the approach of 7 colours coming from Oxford. I have thought fit to send Capt. Perry to be in readiness to march away to-morrow.

(No. 818.) 1643, Oct. 18, Cambridge. Sir William

Rowe to [Sir T. B.]. This morning we hear from Sir John Norwedge by our scout that the enemy entered Bedford betwixt 3 and 4 yesterday afternoon, and by other scouts that some party of them were seen last night at Potton, within 12 miles of this place, so that your forces must march night and day to get into the town to relieve it, as you love religion, the laws, your country, the church of God, and your true friend W. Rowe. P.S. We have certain intelligence that the design is for this place, and that there is no probability of their intent for Huntingdon, tho' the gentlemen and committee there have given them a fair invitation thither by leaving it and quitting their guards, so that I think 'tis altogether needless to send this messenger thither.

(No. 819.) 1643, Oct. 18, Cambridge. Sir W. Rowe to Sir T. B. If you would do a seasonable service to the State (not to speak of your friend, who is a lone and naked man here), let what help you can be instantly sent in hither. Alarms come thick and very near us, and a show would now do that which will not be redeemed but at an infinite charge. And how much the loss of this place may shake the county we love so well, and the whole association, I appeal to you, and so throw myself and all into the arms of my Lord and Saviour, intending to live and die his servant. P.S. . . . Sending to the officer of the Castle for some drakes to flanker our works along the river, I received this answer, that he would send none, that I had fooled him long enough, and bid the gentlemen take heed I did not fool them at the last. Judge you upon these disobedient terms how I should serve you or add any security to this place; yet to leave it I am loath; hoping you will not forget me.

(No. 820.) (1643), Oct. 18, Wednesday noon. J. B. (Judith Barrington) to Sir T. B.—Capt. Manester thinks that we lose time too much, that there are no warrants yet sent out to warn in the train bands and volunteers to get into bodies in proper places, and so to exercise until they hear the truth and your directions, and that the constables may have warning and charge to get horses in readiness if need be, he thinking the host will require all the soldiers to go on horseback. I have sent this enclosed [not there] by the importunity of Stamford [Stortford?] men . . . which will show you which way the enemy inclines . . . P.S. Remember to give warning to our nephew Masham to have his troop of horse in readiness instantly. Think to secure Ware river from passage that way as well as by Royston.

(No. 821.) 1643, Oct. 18, London. Sir Henry Mildmay to Sir William Mason, Sir T. Barrington, and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants with speed; hast, hast, post hast, from the Parliament. Let the 2 bearers pass.—We have received two letters from you, both of one date. The alarm of the enemies approach towards our associated counties was very hot with us before yours came. My Lord General and the Council of War took your advertisements very kindly, especially your last, which mentions the assistance of your foot. They have resolved to send 36 troops of horse and 5 of dragoniers, and desire you to give what assistance of men you can according to your offer, but speed must be the life of this action. I know you will consider it. The troops go away within these 6 hours. Be careful of your officers. My Lord General looks for his 300*l.*, which he laid out of his purse, and he takes it ill he is not paid . . . My Lord Fairfax hath seconded my Lord Manchester's overthrow with another, and hath beaten the enemy from Hull. P.S. (in a different hand) the Parliament expects that you should levy all arrears due in the country rigorously and with expedition, and the estates of papists not to be neglected. I hope my brother Humphry will not be liable to have estate sequestered for his son's delinquency.

(No. 815.) 1643, Oct. 18. (The Earl of) Essex to the Dep.-Lieutenants and Committee for Essex.—Upon sight they are to raise as many able men in Essex as they can, and send them furnished with arms, ammunition, and money to Hertford, and those to Cambridge that live most conveniently, where they are to receive further orders, for the security of their own and the associated counties . . . P.S. "I desire you to provide and send what horse you can also for recruiting of my troop."

(No. 822.) 1643, Oct. 18, Waltons.—Anne Maynard to Sir T. B.—She says she has been assessed at 200*l.* for the 20th part, whereas it is more than she has received that year of her whole revenue. Her tenants do not pay and she has to pay Lady Everard 300*l.* per ann. Asks his assistance to lower the assessment.

(No. 823.) 1643, Oct. 26, Hartford. Gabriel Barber, Jo. Garrard, Wm. Prestley, Wm. Leman, and Tho. Meade to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

Our last night's intelligence was from Col. Norwich, who informed us that a servant of his escaped out of the hands of the enemy at Newport, and then the enemy were about 2,000 foot in that town. They have some store of ordnance, and are there fortifying apace; he gathered from them that that night about 200 foot were to March to Bedford where they intend likewise to fortify. This night we hear their horse are plundering in the villages, and Col. Norwich is this evening drawn out of Hitchin with a resolution, as he informs us, for Bedford and the places adjacent, that so he may interrupt them in their plundering. We are now casting our county into a complete body, and hope within a few days to finish that work, and then thro' God's blessing we doubt not but by the assistance of those London regiments come down to our succour, or remove them farther from the skirts of the association, promising to ourselves that we shall not want your concurrence, &c.

(No. 824.) 1643, Oct. 23, Romford. Edw. Birkhead to [Sir T. B.] On the receipt of [Sir T. B.'s] letter he summoned his company to be at Romford by 8 o'clock of that day; but some sent excuses for want of arms, and men are scarce in those parts. Unless [Sir T. B.] sends word to the contrary he will wait to bring up a larger body.

(No. 825.) 1643, Oct. 23, Stanstead Mountfichet.—Sir W. Rowe to Sir T. B. . . . This inclosed taken this last with a messenger going to Prince Rupert together with his examination (these are not with the letter) I send you that you may know the condition of both your friends and enemies in those parts it mentions. I have advised to send it by a faithful messenger of ours as 'tis directed, that so with his return to us we may make use as well of them as the desires of the others for the public benefit; but what will now become of that or anything else at Cambridge I am afraid to conjecture, since you have been deaf to so many letters of advertisement for so much as conduceth to the preservation of it from you by forbearing so long to send men, money, or commissioners. I was never such a trifler as to write or speak at wast; the issue will soon show you that I informed you truly.

(No. 826.) 1643, Oct. 23, Colchester. Thomas Laurence (Mayor of Colchester), Hen. Barrington, Ralph Harison, and John Frulie to Sir T. B. and the rest of the Dep. Lieutenants.—They sent their trained band according to order; their town is much exposed; the men's families are poor; if any train band can be spared, they pray that their's may be sent back, so that the families of the men may be supported.

(No. 827.) 1643, Oct. 24, Flyford. (Capt.) Nath. Rich to Sir T. B. . . . "We are now this morning advancing towards Newark, conceiving it the most considerable garrison the enemy hath of the two, viz., it and Gainsborough. The winter is already come, and our lying in the field hath lost us more men than have been taken away either by sword or bullet; notwithstanding which (and many of our men lying scattered up and down the country), we are ready to persist, and unwilling to wait any opportunity of doing God honour and our country service; yet if God pleases to bring us safe to our winter quarters you must think of speedy recruiting our troops, which are not a little battered and lessened with what service we have done."—He says the soldiers complain of want of pay, and that he and his troops are 9 weeks behind hand.—"All the money that I had, but 30 odd pounds, I gave them while I had it (which I saved for my own necessities in case of being wounded or sick or the like distress), and that was stolen off from my horse when we lay in the field before Lincoln, and at that time I had but 2s. left me, and my troop without money, and have rested so ever since and long before, and if speedy relief is not sent, with which our sick soldiers lying here and there without subsistence, and those that are well-being continued upon actual service without encouragement, I am afraid ere long you will be as willing to raise new troops as recruit the old; if we had free quarter wherever we come, yet a soldier being without any money his horse cannot be shod, or his arms or saddle kept fix; what I speak is in behalf of the common soldiers, not officers. . . . therefore I beseech you let the common soldiers be constantly paid tho' the officers go without any at all."

(No. 828.) 1643, Oct. 26, Bygotts. Andrew Gerrard to Sir T. B.—He complains of the burdens put on him. The house taken from him by the Parliament would have sold for 100*l.*, certainly cost him more; part of his estate near London has been taken for the use of the fortifications; he has been forced to abate his rents or his lands would lie waste. He pays 300*l.* a year in annuities and interest. He was assessed at 80*l.* which was more than his estate would bear; but the bill would not be accepted unless the assessors set him down 50*l.* more, which it seems, for satisfaction, they did. He prays relief from Sir Thomas.

(No. 829.) [1643], Oct. 26, Haydonberry. (Lady) Elizabeth Soame to Sir T. B.—Understanding that those are fined who send not horses, she says that since her husband's death she never found any except in Hertfordshire where her jointure lies, and that she had sent one fully furnished. In order to pay her 20th she has not yet got 5*l.* from her tenants, as soon as she can get 20*l.* together she will send it in part of the remaining sum.

n. d. Francis Cooke to Sir T. B.—He has been imprisoned half a year. Asks Sir T. B. and Sir Martin Lumley to try and get his release.

(No. 830.) 1643, Sept. 27, the Mermaid in Thames Street, near Billingsgate.—Edward Worger to Sir T. B.—Sir Thomas, when he parted from him in Queen Street, promised to pay the money due to Capt. Langley for fortifying Colchester, and he (Worger) was to receive a like sum for a debt owing to him in Colchester. He prays Sir Thomas to order his clerk or steward to pay it him in Queen Street, where he will repair.

(No. 831.) 1643, Oct. 29th, Hull.—Robert Burton to Sir Thomas Barrington, at Hatfield. I am sorry to relate unto you the misery that is fallen upon us in Cottingham Lordship. By reason of the Earl of Newcastle's forces coming together all men's estates with us are so weakened and decayed that I fear few men will be able to pay any rents; for all our horses, beasts, and sheep are driven away, the most of our houses plundered, our corn lost in the fields, our hay devoured, spoiled, and wasted; two thousand loads at the least within our lordship (which hath been spent), some of it devoured with the great number of their troop horses and other horses and oxen, which they brought with them to bring their guns and other provision along with them, another great part cast into ditches for making their highways, another great part of it used about their works, tents, and huts. We escaped them such a long time, but now we have tasted as deep of their malice as any other part of the kingdom. Their coming against Hull at this time was not suspected of us countrymen, otherwise we might have provided better for ourselves, for we had as we supposed a good strength at Hull and Beverley, which we thought would something have hindered the enemy for approaching so near, but it proved they were not able to resist them, but were forced to retreat to the walls of Hull for succour, and with them also all the true hearted and well wishers to God's cause, rather enduring the loss of their goods than to have themselves brought into slavery and bondage, and to be made partners with them in their wicked designs. But to give you a true relation as near as I can in brief thus:—After my Lord Fairfax came to Hull and brought with him all the horse and foot which escaped out of the west, there were raised in the country about us as many horses as made up in all about xx or xxii troops, our lordship set forth fifty horse, and other adjacent towns did set forth likewise, according to their proportion. Those troops lay some in Beverley and some with us, and some in other towns about us, and paid little or nothing for their quarters for about 6 or 8 weeks together to our great loss, but if that had been the worst we had been in pretty good case, but the enemy coming in amongst us we are now brought almost into utter ruin. After it was known that the Earl of Newcastle bended his forces towards Hull, all our horse advanced towards the Wolds to give them a meeting. Beverley was pretty well fortified with works, and they had either 5 or 6 guns, and, as I conceive, about 16 or 18 hundred footsoldiers; but when our troops perceived that they were not able to encounter with them, they all retreated to Hull, both horse and foot, and left Beverley and all the towns about us to the mercy of the enemy (whose mercies were cruel). It was upon the 28th of August when they retreated. It was sudden and unexpected of us and very fearful, for the enemy pursued them within musket shot of Newland, where we had some musketeers that stopped them and killed a horse and a man, and so they went back to Beverley. The next day, being the 29th of August, they came to Cottingham, and a great many of us left the town, not daring to abide their cruelty; but went to Hull for refuge, and my Lord Fairfax had given order to the troopers to drive to Hull as many beasts and sheep about our common and pastures thereabouts, that they might be for maintenance for us and the soldiers. Then

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
ESQ.

the next day, being Wednesday, some of our troops and foot ventured as far as Cottingham, killed some and took others prisoners, and drove them quite through Cottingham, and we returned that day with credit. Then the next day, being Thursday, we ventured forth again, and they suffered us to march to the west end of our Ings, within a little of Cottingham town end, and then they sallied forth of Cottingham in such a great body that our men all retreated suddenly. Our foot in the Ings not able to make their retreat good, were forced over the ditches, and divers were taken and some killed that day. After which day we were forced to keep about the town, only our horse rode out scout continually towards Newland and Anlaby about a mile distant from the walls; then the enemy kept Newland and fortified it about the way from Beverley, and presently came to Stonferry Clow, and there made works and brought guns thither, and every day after wrought nearer and nearer Hull, and made several forts both betwixt Newland and Hull, and also betwixt Sculscotte and Hull, so that we were forced to make out works both at Darringham bank end and also at the Charterhouse, otherwise they would have come over near the town. They were come so near that I have been an ear witness of musket bullets coming over the walls. Before all this, at their first coming they cut out from us our fresh water, so that in the end both water and grass grew very scarce, by reason of the multitude of horses and other cattle about the town; so my lord took a very good course in sending over into Lincolnshire 16 or 18 of our troops to join with Collonel Crumwell, and likewise he caused to be killed a great many fat oxen and sheep for our provision; nevertheless, we were so strait holden up both on the west side and north side of the town that our cattle were sore pinched, and many of them were shipping away, the enemy watching for them as a ravenous kite of a silly bird; they could no sooner straggle twice twelve score from the town but they were snatched from us. They had made great and large works likewise betwixt Hessel and Hull. They began to work at a place on Humber side called Gallow Clowe, and so came slanting along with earthworks, slanting nearer and nearer towards the town, till they had gotten a strong fort made, hard by the gallows (which they well deserved), which was very near the west side of the town, to which west side of the town they had brought vi of their guns; but we spared them a great deal of pains in carrying them back again, for we took them from them and caused them to retreat with shame enough. They had two very great guns, which were called the Queen's pocket pistols. One of them lay betwixt Sculscotte and Hull, and the other towards Hull, out of which they shot many fiery hot bullets into the town above 80 at the least, and yet did very little execution, which was God's great mercy, the town and streets being so populous; there was but one man, one woman, and a child killed that I heard of; but many were miraculously delivered through God's mercy. These bullets weighed 35 pounds a piece and more. They shot one Sunday morning in prayer time three bullets at the high church, thinking to spoil us there, but God prevented them. Two were wide, and one flew over the leads. We being thus straitened as you have heard, it pleased God to put into the heart of our governor and others of the town that about 5 hundred of the townsmen and soldiers should sally out and venture upon their nearest works, which was very willingly condescended unto, and that with such courage (being upon the 4th of October) that we made them run like cowardly hares, and took three of their works, demolished them, took 6 or 8 prisoners, but cannot tell how many we killed, only we heard one Coronell Vavesor was slain and buried at Cottingham. They repaired two of the works again, but the nearest works we never after suffered them to repair. These works were all towards Newland. Then it pleased God that upon Saturday following Sir John Meldrum came to aid us, and brought with him about a thousand soldiers, which did much encourage us, and we should have sallied out on Monday following in the morn, and our men at our outworks at a place on Humber bank called the west jetty, where we had three guns, did expect our coming to them to fall upon the enemy; but in the morning, before the break of the day, a chosen company of the enemies' came privily and secretly from their own works, and got betwixt the town and our works. Our men supposing them to be their friends, suffered them to come to our works, which they took; but our men, perceiving them to be enemies, fled to our other fort, which was hard by, the enemies pursuing them (to enter by force). Our men knocked down 14 or 15 of them, and so the rest fled to their own works, which were not above twelve score distant. Then upon Wednesday following we were resolved to sally forth again, which was the xith of October, which we did very courageously, my Lord and Sir John Meldrum being very active, shewing their undaunted courage. We were to fall upon the works on the west side of the town, but we made a show by the playing of our cannons as though we intended towards the north side. Sir John Meldrum let us forth of the town, where we divided ourselves into two bodies; the one company went to the very end of their works, and so to beat them on the back side all along; the other company went against the face of their works, against the cannon mouths, to force their passage over, which they did with courage and resolution. All our horse, being about 4 troops going out with them, were to face the enemies troops in the Miton caie (quay?), whilst our foot men were taking the works; but how it came to pass I cannot tell, after that our men had entered and taken some of their works, we made a retreat both horse and foot towards the town into Myton caie (quay?) lane, and the other part towards the Mount, to the great grief of my Lord and Sir John Meldrum, who were there entreating them to face about again. Some of the enemies being so bold as to venture out of their works, charging our men in the rear, it pleased God to put courage into the hearts of our men. They faced about, the troopers riding amongst those, pursued them; the enemies fled. Then our foot men flanked up the back side of their works, and our part forced over the works and drove them away, took all their guns that were in those works, one being one of their great guns, and we got them into Hull that night, and brought them away by force. Although they had great supplies of soldiers that were called from all the towns thereabouts, and sore enraged against us, yet we held them in play and had a very sore fight; some of us fighting and others using means to get away the guns. Then we all returned into Hull with great joy and rejoicing that the Lord had given our enemies such an overthrow. We took 60 prisoners or thereabouts, besides those that were killed. They took a captain of ours that day, called Captain Rainsborrow. He was captain of one of the King's ships, called the Lyon; he took a hundred of his men out of the said ship and went on with us that day to help to raise the siege, and by misfortune he was taken. I know no man of note that was either taken or killed that day on our side, saving that captain, and they have taken him along with them to York. Then in the night following the enemies took their guns from the north side of the town and left us, only they kept a guard at Stonferry and Newland till Friday at night, in which time they wrought their wicked designs to our great loss and hindrance, for they plundered our houses over again, leaving us nothing they could carry away, and much of that they could not carry they brake in pieces, knocked down our walls and windows, drove all the cattle away they could find, cut down Stonferry Clow, all the breast works and the doors from the top to the bottom, so that water cometh in and goeth out every tide to the great hurt of all our grounds about Newland, and westwards in our lordship, took away the plate from Cottingham Church, carrying themselves more like Turks and pagans than like Christians, which will be to their everlasting shame and reproach for all ages to come. The reason why we suffered them those two days, Thursday and Friday, the weather was so wet, misty, and thick that we could not see about us, otherwise we should have sent them away in such a confused retreat that one of them would have been so afraid of another that half of them would not have found the right way to York, the place unto which they are fled for refuge. Besides all this, they cut up five of our bridges, two over the setting dike, and two over Newland Haven, and one towards Beverley, all belonging to the manor of . By all this which I have said you may conceive what a world of mischief they have wrought amongst us, neither sparing the rich nor pitying the poor, but threatening to make all alike, so that I am persuaded many a man who formerly lived in good rank and fashion will now be brought into such want and misery so that the still unborn will have cause to curse them. The siege lasted six weeks, in which time two things have happened which I must acquaint your worship withal. Mr. Chantrell and Mr. White are both dead and buried: Mr. Chantrell died at Hull, but Master White left Hull at the beginning of the siege, and, as I heard, had a protection from the Earl of Newcastle. He was buried at Rowley on Sunday before the siege was raised, otherwise if he had died after the

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

raising of the siege it would have been supposed he had taken some grief of heart that he should so far doubt of God's providence as to shelter himself under the protection of the wicked for the saving of his temporal estate.

(No. 832.) n. d. Draft letter by Sir T. B. to asking consideration of the case of Sir Thomas Hewytt who had been assessed at 1,000*l*.

(No. 833.) 1643, Oct. 30, London. A. Baynard to Sir T. B. In Sir Henry Mildmay's absence I delivered your letter to Mr. Wallop The herald painter desires a direction how to send unto you, and tells me that what he leaves at your house in Queen's Street is very negligently conveyed. I have desired a friend of mine (in my absence) to wait upon you at Dunmow on Tuesday sennight, not doubting to receive from you and the rest of the committee so much favour and respect as shall be agreeable unto equity.

(No. 834.) n. d. Isob. La Warr* to Sir T. B. By the equity of your judgement I foresee my reliefe, these must remaine your humanities creature. When in your vertues I read what's faire, 'tis charity to the decaying world to make your practis a miracle; what of honor may bee added to illustrate your name shall be the wish of Sir your respective freind to serve you, Isob. La Warr.

(No. 835.) 1643, Oct. 30, London. John Babington, treasurer, to Sir T. B.—On Sir T. B.'s writing to the president, treasurer, and governors of Christ's Hospital that Mr. Watts was about to resign Claveringe and Langley, and recommending Mr. Moore to succeed, and the parishioners and Mr. Kendall promising that if the governors had any one to present to Langley they should receive the profits, the writer so worked that he obtained the presentation for Moore, and handing it to him said he hoped he, Moore, would be as his word concerning Langley. Moore said he knew no such promise. The writer asks Sir T. B. to speak with Moore, Kendall, and the parishioners who moved for him, to know whether there was such a promise. If Moore will not perform his promise, then Sir Thomas and the writer are deceived in the man. The writer desires that his kinsman, Abraham Jackson, should be presented to Langley, and asks Sir Thomas to further his suit.

(No. 836.) 1643. A letter to Sir T. B., signed by eleven tenants of his lands in the lordship of Cottingham, praying him to respite their rents, which his bailiff, Robert Burton, had demanded. The King's forces had long been there and consumed and taken their stock and goods, and carried some of them prisoners to York, whence they were obliged to redeem themselves with great fines.

(No. 837.) 1643, May 13. William Spofford to Mr. Kendal, attendant on Sir T. B.—About a law suit.

(No. 838.) 1643, May 24. Geo. Fenwick to Sir T. B., Sir Gilbert Gerratt and Sir William Marsham.

(No. 840.) (1643.) Jeffry Watts to Sir T. B.—Will meet Sir T. B. when and where he pleases to discuss the business of the resignation (by Watts).

(No. 841.) (1643.) Chelmsford. Jeffry Watts to Mr. Kendall.—Now that he has resigned Claveringe the people are backward in paying him the arrears of dues and tithes.

(No. 842.) (1643.) The same to the same. On the same matter.

(No. 843.) 1643, Nov. 23. Car. Her. Mildmay to Sir T. B. . . . I have taken the subscriptions of many in our hundred of Becontry to the number of 30, and many more willing to do the like, if they may be sure to be only for the safety of the county (as you were pleased to promise them). I beseech you express as much by some good example from the dep. lieutenant's subscription in every hundred, for I assure you 'tis expected from them. My cousin Mary Mildmay is to receive 500*l*. from you in Feb. next. She asks that you would let her have it paid at London in some place near the Old Exchange.

(No. 844.) 1643, Dec. 16, Newport. H. J.† to his brother. Money matters.

(No. 845.) 1643, Dec. 14. Jeffry Watts to Mr. Kendall. Asks him to endeavour to get in the writers' debts at Clavering, and to get a copy of the articles which have been exhibited against him and the names of the petitioners. Thinks it strange that he who has done so much for the Parliament should by the malice of a few be brought to that trouble.

* Isobel, wife of Henry, Lord La Warr. She was daughter of Sir Thomas Edmonds.

† Endorsed "Mr. Hall's letter."

(No. 846.) Ri. Harlakenden to Mr. Kendall. About the money to be paid to his sister Mrs. Mildmay.

(No. 847.) 1643, Dec. 29, Graces. Thomas Cobbett to Mr. Kendall. About the same matter.

(No. 851.) 1643, Feb. 11. Jo. Bourchier to his cousin Sir T. B. . . Sir William Constable with part of my Lord General's forces has given the enemy a great blow in taking many commanders and troops. If you would hasten money to the army I am persuaded we should beat them; they begin to be afraid.—(A slip of paper inclosed gives the following.)—Taken by Sir William Constable's forces at Kirkborne and Wettsoen on the Wolds, Feb. 10, 1643. Captains Vavasor, Newstead, Horsfield Winell, Tiffin.—Lieutenants Lowther, Kirke, Ward.—Cornets Wharton, Blockley, Wastead, Robinson, Browne.—3 quartermasters, 3 surgeons, 3 corporals, 3 trumpeters, 1 minister, a clarke to Sir Key, 173 troopers and their horses.

(No. 854.) 1644, April 20, Newport. J. H[all] to Mr. Kendall. From this letter it appears that Hall held the office of Receiver of the King's rents in the Isle of Wight by patent from the Earl of Pembroke, who had lately forbid him to intermeddle with the receiver's place until further notice, giving as a reason his especial care for the safety of the island; but Hall suspected another reason, and says he shall give up the patent.

(No. 855.) 1644, May 24, Cottingham. Robert Burton to Mr. Kendall.—The Cottingham tenants will not pay and will not sow the land, intending to leave unless the rents are abated. He fears to re-enter the lands (without orders), as the delinquents' lands are let cheap York is strongly beleaguered, and since yesterday we have taken Cawood Castle and another strong fort called Ayremouth, so that we have free passage by water from Hull to the army. The cavaliers expect the coming of Prince Rupert to raise the siege of York, which we do not much fear.

1644, May 31. At the Committee of Lords and Commons for Sequestration of Delinquents' and Papists' Estates.—The Committee for Sequestrations for Essex having ordered that Sir Thomas Barrington should have the custody and charge of Hatfield Chase or Hatfield Forest, sequestered by reason of the Lord Morley and the Lady Morley, her recusancy, &c. They confirm that order and direct that the fair which had for divers years been kept in the forest shall be kept in the town of Hatfield. Lord and Lady Morley are to receive the 3rd of the usual rent of the fair and of the other profits raised by Sir Thomas out of the forest and fair, and the rest is to be paid to the Parliament upon an account by Sir Thomas.

(No. 797.) 1643, Oct. 8, Thornton. Toby Tyrrell to his father-in-law.—Says that the addressee's daughter is pretty well, tho' weak after her confinement.

(No. 810.) [1643], Oct. 15, Thornton. Toby Tyrrell to Mr. John Kendall at Sir T. B.'s house.—Money matters.

(No. 798.) n. d. Will. Chantrell to Sir T. B.—Our relation concerning Hull would afford volumes, and had I not met with such an epitome as this good knight I should have enlarged my lines. He can tell you all things from a to ω P.S. Only, sir, be the means to haste a faithful governor to Hull, a place of singular importance to the north parts and kingdom.

(No. 791.) [1643, Oct. 3?] Tho. Barrington, Martin Lumley, and Hen. Wyseman to the High Constables of Harlow.—The Earl of Manchester having reduced Lynn, and being resolved to march on against the Popish army, has written letters asking for foot forces. They tell the addressees to order the petty constables to impress men and have them at the sign of the George, in Harlowen, Saturday the 7th of October. (Draft.)

[1643, Sept. 2.] Petition of Francis Withers, wife of Stephen Withers, late rector of Sleering, co. Essex, addressed to Sir T. B.—Her husband has been in prison for 12 months because he could not conscientiously obey some Parliamentary commands. Neither she nor her husband can procure the money required, and their corn (all they had to support them) has been seized in the barns.—Prays relief.

(No. 756.) 1643, Sept. 8, Blackwell Hall, London.—George Dunn to Sir W. Masham, or Sir T. B., or Sir Thomas Middleton.—He has not received the chest of Mr. Echell, which they tell him to retain; but will enquire after him.

(No. 765.) 1643, Sept. Sir T. B. and others to . . . requesting the addressees, and the rest of the deputy lieutenants and committees, to meet the writers at Chelmsford on Tuesday next at the Cock, to settle "a present way for a bank of money, which the Earl of Manchester is needing, that the work may not fail

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDRES,
Esq.

"nor he be unsupplied, nor the writers be dishonoured
"by necessity of catching at every small sum to supply
"the present." (Draft, indorsed. Copy of a letter for the deputy lieutenants' meeting upon the 13 Sept. at Chelmsford.)

(No. 767.) 1645, Sept. 14. William (Cage) to .
He requests that if Sir Thomas Barrington has not yet paid certain moneys to certain gunners he will retain the money until he (Cage) may be privy to it.

(No. 654.) n. d. Joseph Dallon, Gabriel Barbor, Francis Peck, minister, and another (the Committee for Hertfordshire) to the Dept. Lieutenants of Essex.— These are to acquaint you that Hitschen is assailed by the enemy; we desire an alarm may be given to all the associated counties with all speed.

(No. 592.) Petition by George Gilbert to the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex to be discharged from finding a light horse. He has paid all taxes, subsidies, and poll-money; has already sent a horse to the Parliament and a corslet, pike, and all things fitting to it, and likewise an associate musket-man and money, and likewise finds two full arms and men, viz., a corslet and musket in the trained bands, has lent above 40*l.* to the Parliament, and given above 5*l.* to Ireland, and paid 20*l.* at least to the subsidies of 400,000*l.* and 100,000*l.*, and paid above 20*s.* a week to the weekly collection for the association out of all his lands, his estate not being above 180*l.* per ann., and he both old and lame, and not able to get in the little rent due to him.

(No. 593.) Draft petition to the House of Commons by Robert Thompson and Elizabeth Dent, widow, and silk woman in Pater Noster Row, for a pass to go to Oxford (and return) to apply to Sir John Byron for a debt to them of 1,240*l.*

(No. 781.) Deposition signed by Benjamin Plumme.
He was in the Parliament's service the week before Reading was taken, was taken prisoner in Windsor Forest from under the command of Captain Goulmare while riding as scout with 3 of Sir Saml. Luke's company, and was taken to Oxford. There he heard that they had the King's commission to come into Essex with 8,000 foot, 10 troops of horse, 1,200 dragoons, &c., with Sir John Lucas and Sir Charles generals over the horse.
He was told by Lord Somerset's son and Sir Henry Milnes's son that they had a list of 12,000 hands in Essex that would stand for them when they marched for Essex, and that they had 2 men every week come out of every town in Essex to bring news how every man stood affected; and one of these came in habit of a pedlar, and brought horsehair and tobacco on his back, &c. &c. Hears that Kent had sent a petition to the King that if he would send some small forces they would raise 5 men for every one he sent.

(No. 858.) (1641?) J. Barker to his wife Mrs.
Barker at Belhouse.—About the assessment to the 20th.
—He cannot meet with any of the committee where he is, but Sir Thomas Cheeke has promised that as soon as Sir Thomas Barrington and Sir William Masham come to town he will go with him [Barker] to them and move them on his behalf.

(No. 859.) 1644, Aug. 6. Bri. Turner to Sir T. B.
—About his accounts as steward of one or some of Sir Thomas's manors. He alludes to the difficulty of getting rents and the losses which the tenants have sustained.

(No. 872.) 1645, June 14. John Raspin to Sir Jno.
Barrington. (Copy.) About rent due from him. He says he never enjoyed anything, but was plundered and undone by the Earl of Newcastle's forces coming against Hull of his whole estate, and being at Hull himself was given in as a delinquent to the Earl of Newcastle by Sir John's steward and others of the neighbourhood, "who,
"to save themselves, gave in our names, and informed
"them of our estates."

(No. 876.) 1645, July 14. Eight parishioners (perhaps more, as a portion of the paper where the signatures are is torn away) of Rowley parish to Sir Jno.
Barrington. They thank him for sending "that young "Timothy McWarren" as minister to their congregation. (Warren seems to have succeeded Mr. Rogers.)

(No. 879.) 1644, Dec. 8, Rowley (New England). Ez.
Rogers to Mr. Kendall at Sir John Barrington. A long letter about what the late Sir Thomas Barrington had promised him in the way of preferment. He alludes to his diligent attendance on and comfort to Sir Thomas "on "his sad and deep distemper of melancholy; not only "in the day but in the night watchings and midnight
"risings he (Rogers) did much impair his health." (On the back is a copy of an answer by Kendall dated 1 May 1645, in which he says that Sir Thomas had left his son burdened with 19,000*l.*)

(No. 880.) 1645, Nov. 9, Rowley.—Ez. Rogers to (Mr. Jno. Kendall).

(No. 881.) 1646, Dec. 9, Rowley. The same to the same.
He mentions that old Lady B. promised him 100*l.*, and that Mr. Bridge said that he himself paid it to Robert Barrington, to be sent to New England for Rogers.

(No. 882.) 1646, April 25. John Barrington to Ezekiel Rogers in England.—Copy of a letter on the subject of Rogers's claims.

(No. 883.) 1647, July. Daniel Rogers to Mr.
Kendall. Asking Kendall to put Sir John B. in mind of Sir Thomas B.'s promise to pay the 16*l.* due to Roger for "the 2 last of the 7 years granted me by way of "exhibition for my son, then of Trinity College, Richard
"Rogers by name."

(No. 884.) 1647, July 7, Wethersf. Daniel Rogers to Sir John B. He says, "Old Mr. Gobert, your grand"father, at his death left certain exhibitions to be "disposed of upon scholars in Trinity College in Cam"bridge.—The first of these he was pleased to dispose "upon my brother, Mr. Ezekiel Rogers. Sir Thomas,
"your father, desired the gift of the exhibition for the "first time upon a scholar of his. My brother yielded
"it upon condition that himself might enjoy the 2d
"alter the expenditure of the former. Sir Thomas "enjoyed his scholar's exhibition." When that was expired Sir Thomas gave the 2d to Ezekiel to bestow at his pleasure, who gave it to Daniel, who enjoyed it for his son 4 or 5 years. He (Daniel) now asks for 16*l.* due so that he may pay his son's expenses at College. (On the back is a copy of a reply by Sir John B., saying that certain lands were settled for payment of the exhibition, that payments of the rents are obstructed, and that he is not liable.)

IRELAND.

Petition to the House of Commons by Sir Francis Williby, Governor of Dublin Castle.—He has been 17 years in the King's service, in which time he has been several times colonel and serjeant-major or general of H.M. army, in which service he has lost 2 sons, and has 3 more now captains in the King's service in Ireland, one of whom is governor of the fort of Galway, now besieged by the rebels of Galway. By the rebellion in Ireland he has lost above 6,000*l.*, which he had acquired during 42 years' service. A year's pay is due to him.
He asks that they will accept his arrears, and if they fall short of 1,200*l.* he will make up the deficiency if they will grant him a proportion of land in Leinster.

1655 and 1656. The case concerning the claim of Edward Dendy, Esq., serjeant-at-arms, to lands in the barony of Slane in Ireland. (It seems that on 27 Aug. 1652, the Parliament passed a resolution to settle lands in Ireland of the value of 200*l.* per ann. on Dendy, in consideration of his eminent service.)

The sub-division of the barony of Slane . . . taking in the lands supposed to be Serjeant Dendy's. "Per "me, Thomas Emerson, June 29, 1658." (In a tabular form, on a brief sheet.) There are 20 lots, giving the names of places and their acreages. The allottees were:
Sir Thomas Wharton, Sir William Waller, Sir Gilbert
Garrald (Gerard), Mr. Richard Ashurst, Mr. Bridge-stock, Ald. Thomas Vincent, Mr. Thomas Field, Alderman Texteth, Sir John Barrington, (2,000 acres); Sir William Massam (Masham), Mr. Will. and John Arnold,
John Gould, Thomas Field, Mrs. Mary Child, Mr.
Balle, Mr. Cullmer, Mr. Goodman, Mr. Geo. Weale,
Mr. Edward Turner, and Alexander Pim, Esq.

1655, April 13, Grocers' Hall, London. Copy of the resolution of the committee of adventurers for lands in Ireland that a copy of the declaration following be sent to Joseph Avery, Esq., public agent for the adventurers.
(The declaration is with regard to drawing the bounds between two baronies.)

1656, Jan. 1. Power of attorney by Sir John Barrington to Wm. Parkinson to take possession, &c. of his lands in the barony of Slane in the co. of East Meath.
1655, May 5. The case of Sir John Barrington, Sir
Gilbert Gerrard, Sir William Masham, and Sir Richard Everard, baronets; Alexander Pym, Esq., Edward Turner, Esq., and other adventurers for lands in Ireland, whose lots are fallen in the barony of Slane. (And also an examined copy of it.)

1656, May 5. Reasons for the claim of the adventurers in the barony of Slane. (1 p.)

1656, Dec. 23. Resolution at the Committee for Irish Affairs (signed by John Byssie) that Sir Gilbert Gerrard be desired to attend the committee on the 27th instant, in answer to a petition to the House by Edward Dendy, Esq., serjeant-at-arms.

G. A.
LOWNDRES,
Esq.

G. A.
WYNDES,
Esq.

Inducements to the preference of satisfaction of the adventurers before Serjeant Dendy. (Both sides of a brief sheet.)

Copy of the petition of Serjeant Dendy. (2½ pp.)

Copy of the proviso and provisions for supply of Serjeant Dendy or the adventurers.

1656, June 6. Copy of the Council's letter to the Lord Deputy and Council of Ireland (signed by He. Laurence, President) of the vote of Parliament for Serjeant Dendy, 27 Aug. 1652, and of Council order to the Lord Deputy, 27 Nov. 1656. (All about Serjeant Dendy's business.)

(No. 931.) 1651, June 9, Youghal. F. Barrington to Sir John Barrington In my last, dated the 5th instant, I did speake of a defeat that my Lord of Broghill had given the enemy as it was reported amongst us here. I can now confirm the truth of it, that he hath routed a great party of the enemy near a river called the Blackwater, but the particulars I cannot mention, but in my next I shall This afternoon came a letter to the Governor of this town that saith my Lord Deputy hath gotten a pass of the enemy over the river Shannon. It is here likewise spoken that Sir Charles Coot and Commissary General Reynolds since their going into Connaught from the North have given the enemy some defeat.

(No. 939.) 1654, Sept. 2. Fran. Barrington to Sir Jno. Barrington. Great things are expected from the Parliament, they do come apace to town, and on Monday they sit. Our expedition will be the first thing they meddle withal, as I believe . . . my commission will be for a lieutenant-colonel, but to what regiment I know not yet; I hope one Col. Bullard.

(No. 942.) 1654, Dec. 11, Chichester. Francis Barrington to Sir John Barrington. Asks him to authorize Mr. Hawkins to receive his pay, which will be 63l. per ann. Has spoken to General Disborowe about it. Will write no more until he is on shipboard, for he has been with General Disborowe that day and expects every hour to receive orders to ship his colonel's regiment. (On the outside he requests that the letter may be sent to the Pewter Pot in Leadenhall Street or else the Crown without Aldgate.)

(No. 943.) 1654, Dec. 18, from aboard the Katherine. The same to the same It is here said by the great ones that we shall make a halt at the Barbadoes and these western islands to take in recruits, for we ship very thin at present.

(No. 946.) 1655, May 26. Jamaica in America. Francis Barrington to Mr. Jno. Hawkins at Sir J. Barrington's.

(No. 947.) 1655, June 6, Jamaica. Francis Barrington to Sir John Barrington. By the same ship that this goeth in I have sent you one dated 26 May, in which I have given you a full and particular account of our then present condition, since which time (blessed be God) we have gotten some beeves, but no bread as from the store, but some particular men do get Cassader [Casava] roots of which they make very good bread and reasonable hearty. I did in mine, the 26th, of May speak of my Coll. being out of a party, and that without he was unto us a messenger of good news we could not expect anything but starving; he hath been come in some days; he could not have that advantage as to fall into the enemies quarters, they marching from him into the mountains where our men could not follow them without great disadvantages to ourselves, the party wanting bread, but he brought us very good news that the country affordeth great store of beeves, and that there is little fear amongst us of wanting flesh if we are not our own enemies. I do believe bread will be very scarce amongst us without the Almighty be pleased to stir up the hearts of our governors at home in time to supply our wants; our provision ships are come unto us, which will be of great use unto us at present, and we might (if we acted like wise men) disperse ourselves into several parts of the country and plant those roots which would be in time very good food in the stead of English biscuit, but to speak plain English we act not at the helm like men indued with common reason, for we all lie at one place, not endeavouring to provide for the future, yet now our head telleth us we shall suddenly disperse into several plantations; we are very backward in other things which much concerneth us, the army (both officers and soldiers) is in a very sad condition by our daily falling sick and many dying, occasioned by a former want of victuals and those comfortable drinks which would support the spirits of our men; the fleet affordeth strong liquor good store, which would do our men great good, but no care is

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

taken for giving us any, so that our men daily perish, and I can judge our condition to be no better than what my following words speaketh, which is that if the Lord in mercy maketh not our chief to be more careful for us for the future I cannot think that one of three amongst us will live. Sir, the enemy is to the westward of the island, they do not yet come in. My Coll. took two English men when that he was out; they were demanded why they would not come in, they replied we killed all as the priests told them, and the priests do terrify the negroes and the Spanish amongst them by saying that we do deny God, and that when any cometh to us we do put out their eyes and . . . them going, and further say we are come but for two or three months to victual and then away

(No. 949.) 1655, July 14th. St. Iago in Jamaica. Francis Barrington to— I have in former letters (sent by several messengers) given you a brief and rude account (as time would then permit) of our transactions since our first invading the Spanish plantations, but supposing this might come as soon to your hands as the former, and being confident of the messenger (which is Coll. Buller) I have presumed again to trouble you with this letter, in which you have a full relation of all passages from the beginning, even from the time of our shipping in England. Sir, the 15th of Dec. 1654, we marched from our settled quarters (which was Chichester) towards Portsmouth, but lay still that night, and the next day, being the Sabbath, the 17th of the same, we marched again for Portsmouth, where we were immediately embarked and very willingly, but some of the regiments so unwilling that Major General Disborowe his horse forced them aboard; the soldiers being shipped the officers employed themselves in getting their things aboard likewise, but General Disborowe was so strict (not giving us eighteen hours) that many officers and the goods of others were left behind, not seeing servants nor goods until we came unto the Barbados; for my own part I saw not Dick nor any of my things until we arrived in the forementioned port, but was forced to borrow shifts of the Capt. of the ship. This sudden unexpectedness of time put the officers into great disorder by constraining them to go in other vessels after their men, which very probably might have been of dangerous consequence, for the private men were much discontented at their officers' absence; seeing neither money nor officers they concluded they were thither brought to be sold to some foreign prince. My own company with two more (aboard the vessel I came hither) were resolved to force themselves ashore on the Isle of Wight if I had not come to them as I did, but being with them all was very well and quiet the whole voyage. The 18th we set sail and came to an anchor off of the Isle of Wight, where we continued that night, the next morning we weighed anchor again and stood off to sea with the fleet, consisting of the rear Admirals' squadron only; in this our fleet was transported Major General Heanes' regiment, my Coll. and Coll. Carters'. From the time of our embarking until the time of our arrival in Barbados was six weeks I think to a day, in which we had a most happy passage, not having 12 hours contrary wind, nor in the least a storm one eminent mercy was I an eye witness unto in our passage in the preservation of the vessel that I was in, no other being in danger; it was a wind that arose in a particular place of the sea making the water fly more about than ever I saw a whirlwind to scatter the dust in England; I think it was of the same nature; it followed our vessel some small time at a distance, but coming very nigh unto us (the seamen being most of them affrighted) it made us expect nothing less than to be immediately swallowed up; indeed the danger was exceeding great and very near us, it being not a cable's length from us, and as we every moment expected death, the Lord in mercy looked upon us and relieved us in our sad distress by diverting its course from us without the least of damage to us, indeed I am not able with my pen to express the true manner of our deliverance not a ship in the whole voyage received any damage but one through carelessness losing part of her masts. Such a passage former ages cannot parallel, it being so safe, so healthy, and so quick, the number of ships being considered, and the slowness of their sailing, it being often known that more men hath died out of one vessel bound for Barbados than died in our whole squadron. This mercy little wrought upon us, as you will hereafter discover by the irregular actings of our great ones, and the loose living of others under them, to the grief of every Christian-like spirit Sir, the 29th of January 1654 we made the island of Barbados about 8 in the morning, the same night we put into the best road (called

G. A.
LOWNDES.
Esq.

(Carlisle Bay), and there came to an anchor with some other vessels: the other not being able to fetch it, they shortened sail and came to an anchor in Austines Bay, two leagues short, but the next morning the whole squadron weighed again and came to an anchor by us, there riding until we re-embarked for the Spanish Islands. The 30th the sea general (with our general) brought in the whole fleet, excepting the provision ships (which we conceived were weather-bound in the Downs), and the Great and Little Charity, which, by foul weather, were put into Ireland, the Little Charity having part of our horse in her; the 31st we landed, and having quarters assigned us in the country, we marched the same day to them. Sir, being well settled in our respective quarters, we had command given us to entertain all men that were willing to engage in the present expedition; accordingly we obeyed, but the inhabitants finding themselves much grieved (and not without a cause), they complained that they should be utterly ruined in case their servants were taken from them, they being their livelihood. Upon this complaint our grandees (I mean the commissioners) ordered that no officer whatsoever, upon pain of loss of place, should detain any man's servant that had above nine months to serve, and for the future to entertain none other but freemen, and such servants as came within the afore-mentioned limitation, all which was done intentionally to complete every regiment up to a thousand before we marched from the island; the doing of this hath much injured the poor people, even to their undoing, and prejudiced many of the rich, some losing ten servants, some fifteen, some more, some less, none escaping us; therefore most men will conjecture, hearing of it, that we dealt very severely with our countrymen; their whole estates lay in the good stock of servants, therefore to take them away, I must confess, was a great piece of cruelty. Sir, the gentlemen of the island did desire several times to know how many men we wanted, with all making it their further request that they might have liberty to raise them for us, and we should have no trouble in it, and every inhabitant satisfied, no one bearing a greater burthen than another; but this was not accepted of, but left to the discretion of our officers, who endeavoured to get as many men as they could, not valuing who was undone. Such was the irregularity of this carriage that many lost all their servants, and others but few (if any), who far exceeded the former in estates ten times over, and I may say, without lying, ten times more. The loss of this 9 months' service was more considerable to most masters than twenty pounds sterling to some far exceeding that rate. Sir, perhaps my discourse of servants may seem a riddle unto you, but I shall in a few words explain it. The custom of all merchants trading thither is to bring as many men and women as they can. No sooner doth a ship come to an anchor but presently the Islanders go aboard her, enquiring what servants they can buy, if they are above seventeen years of age they serve but four years, according to the law of the Island, but if under 17, then left to the discretion of the merchant, as he can agree with the planter; these servants planteth, weedeth, and manureth their ground all by hand, in which lieth their estates. Having now done with the servants, I shall briefly satisfy you concerning the freemen we likewise entertained, which were a greater loss to some than their servants; they are such who served in the country for their freedom, or paid their passage when transported from England, such as these might freely be entertained without control, yet the going off of these was very prejudicial to most, they owing much and not giving any satisfaction, neither was there any care taken that they should satisfy their creditors; the only order made in this case was, that all freemen who had estates should make satisfaction as far as it would go; not one of twenty had anything, therefore paid nothing, we taking them with us; but had we left these men behind us themselves would have made good payment of their debts with great advantage to the creditor, they being (many of them) artificers, the loss of such was great to the country. I am confident this our unjust dealing caused the wrath of God to fall so heavy upon us. Now having raised a considerable number of men, we wanted arms for them (both pikes and muskets), our stores not being come into us. The course they took for arming of them was this: all the carpenters in the country were ordered to make pikes, and the smiths to head them; they were promised payment for their labour, and I think they were accordingly satisfied honestly; but for fire-arms we took them where we could find them, without giving any satisfaction to the owners; the loss of their arms was not so much to be valued as their being left naked, and almost wholly laid open to the mercy of their negroes and other servants, the doing of all which, with our loose and idle course of life in our stay there (after so great a mercy in having an unparalleled passage), did highly provoke his divine majesty against us; and said it is to think that a people who pretend to be employed in a holy work should use such irregular means to form up an army as we did; it signifieth little else than putting our whole confidence in the arm of flesh. In the time of our fleet lying at the Barbados they took many Dutch ships and made them prize. How the States of Holland will take it I know not, but we have made no breach of faith, for by the articles they were not to trade with any of the English plantations in America. Some was likewise taken at St. Christopher's, where was a regiment raised for the army, I fear upon the same terms that those of Barbados were. We took in the Dutch bottoms much brandy wine (a strong liquor much useful in these hot climates), and good store of sugar, and some horses; of the last the officers had some share, but of the other we have seen but little, altho' when it was taken they said it should be for the use of the army, but never was an army so conducted and dealt with all as we have been ever since our coming out of England, the which I am confident will much trouble my Lord Protector when he shall be thoroughly informed of all passages since our first arrival in America. Having done our work in raising men, and armed them, we received orders again to embark for the intended design. We put our men aboard the 29th of March 1655, lay at an anchor that night, the 30th set sail, standing off to sea; the 6th of April we came before St. Christopher's, there shortened sail, staying for the regiment raised in that island; they immediately weighed anchor and stood out to sea with the rest of the fleet; the 12th of the same we made Hispaniola, the 13th we made their chief city St. t'Domingo, in which the fleet parted, some sailing to the westward of the city, and the rest plying up and down before the city to amuse the enemy; the 14th of the same our general invaded the land with six regiments (one being seamen) about ten leagues to the westward of St. t'Domingo, my coll. with Coll. Holdepp were left behind to land, a league or two on the east thereof, but the surf of the sea run so exceeding high that it was somewhat impossible to accomplish our desires in the intended place, but was forced to seek another for our landing. The 16th we landed about 3 leagues to the westward, the same day marched, but the night overtaking us my coll. encamped a league and a half short, where we wanted water much; the 17th he sent out a party in hopes to discover where our men might refresh themselves with water, but finding none it was resolved we should advance towards the said city (altho' the army was not come to us) supposing it better to fight than dishonourably to march back, which shamefully we did afterwards. In our march we discovered a fort of the enemies which might have killed us some men in passing by it, which made us make a halt before we came at it with the body of the two regiments, but a forlorn we had for some time within less than shot of the same. In the interim, whilst my coll. was consulting with his officers what to do, the general came unto us; he took our ground and advanced towards the city, which gave us hopes to think that the same night we should be before it, and our men refreshed with water, who sadly wanted it; but very nigh the fort before mentioned, the general being in the head of the army, met with some opposition from an ambuscado, but immediately (through mercy) repulsed them, and put them to the run; the army marched on and a considerable part past the fort without any loss received from it; the rear might have advanced with the same security the van did, and with more, the ambuscade being beaten; notwithstanding all this (the enemies disorder, the officers' desires, the cheerfulness of the soldiers' spirits to march) the general commanded his army to retreat; himself going with the brigade, he landed to a river about 7 miles back; my coll. with his party to the river where we first went ashore. In this business we lost the capt. of the Reformadoes, and an adjutant-general, with some other men. We took a small scone, but staid not in it. The 18th the general marched with his brigade to my coll.'s quarters, it being the place of his landing, and the bay where the whole fleet did ride that supplied us with provisions, in which said bay the army lay eight days. The enemy the 21st fell upon our head-quarters with a very small party, killed us about ten men; they were repulsed by the guard with the loss of their leader and some few more. In this time of our lying by the seaside our army fell sick apace, occasioned through the want of provisions, and the reflection of the scorching

G. A.
LOWNDES.
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

sun from the sands; we likewise lost many men by straggling; whilst we lay in this quarters it was the desire of our renowned late Major-General Heane, with most of the colls., that our general divide his army into two bodies, the one to march the direct way to the city, and the other to fetch a compass and fall upon it on the east side, which would have been of great advantage to the army and disadvantageous to the enemy; but this would not be hearkened unto, but resolved to march the army in one entire body to the city, in order to which a mortar piece was brought ashore with two small drakes; these being mounted upon carriages, provisions was delivered us from the fleet for three days. The 25th we marched, but in our march towards the city our forlorn met with an ambuscado lying in the same place they did before (by their fort): they beat us to a retreat, and in such disorder that they run down the next reserve, and that reserve their reserve, inasmuch that I believe nigh 3,000 were put to the rout, and all the time of their running the enemy in their — killing and slaying our people in a very sad manner, few or none escaping that they stuck with their lances that being their chief weapon used in these parts; they have very few fire-arms. Sir, this enemy was so inconsiderable (as to the arm of flesh) that I verily believe they killed and made unserviceable above ten times their own number, that at last they were made weary by killing of us, as appears by their retreat; for no sooner did an officer stand to receive this enemy but immediately they retreated to their fort, and a soldier of ours to whom they gave quarter (since escaping from them) saith that they marched very heavily through weariness. I narrowly enquired into the manner of this rout from those that were in it, who affirmed unto me that their number was not above fifty, which gave us this sad blow, and I am confident they killed above 500 of our men; in it we lost our Major-General Heane, of honoured memory, who died with his sword sheathed in his enemies bowels, not six men standing by him, for he cried out as he was fighting, “Stand but 10 men and we shall beat them.” We likewise lost one Major Forgison, a gallant officer; we lost many captains and other good officers. After this great slaughter, and the enemy retreated to his fort, it was thought requisite to make good the former lost ground and to storm the fort the next morning, in order to which the mortar piece with the small drakes in the night were planted, the officers of the army being very free and willing to require satisfaction from the enemy for the blood of our dear friends so lately spilt; we lay that whole night within shot of their fort; our guard lost many men by their great shot, some killed upon the place, some their limbs taken from them. The next morning (being the 26th) instead of receiving orders to fall on (according to former expectation) the whole army was commanded back to the bay where the fleet lay: the loss of so many gallant men, and this second retreat, put such a deadness into our men’s spirit that if at any time a party had been commanded forth they would run at the sight of an enemy, tho’ far more inconsiderable than themselves. One thing that happened the last day of our retreat I think cannot be paralleled; some of our men, to the value of a regiment, were at the fore-mentioned river’s side refreshing themselves; one in the company might see one neger (negro), upon which he gave out the word, “the enemy, the enemy,” and immediately above 500 run away and threw down their arms; no sooner came they running to us but we sent out a party to see the truth of so hot an alarm; the party not finding a man to fight withal were employed in bringing back the thrown away arms; our men’s spirits were so cowed that in our after stay in that island we had not the common spirit of children, so metamorphosed we were. But in all this I look upon it as the heavy judgment of God fallen upon us justly for our miscarriages, . . . for the general himself said (being in the head of the army the first skirmish) that Jack Spanyard would not stand, and it was the common saying amongst the best of us (when ashboard) that if we landed well we should run them over and immediately march into their metropolitan city, they being not able to give us any opposition, and if they could make a considerable body to meet us in the field, yet we foolishly persuaded ourselves they would not stand to charge us, such was the sinful trust we put in our own strength; nay, that which I think was worst of all, we did the day before the general landed, wrangle about sharing the plunder that was in the city . . . Sir, we had our desires, the general and my coll. landed without the least of opposition . . . After this great loss we lay at the fore-mentioned bay six days, in which time we endured much hardship, wanting bread and other provision to support nature, they having thrown it away in the rout, were constrained to eat horse and dog’s flesh, without bread or salt, the which brought them into sad weaknesses, many dying and many straggling were devoured by the enemy, so that from the time of our landing to the 28th of the same we lost seamen 116 men, as appeared by a rough muster then taken, but in the time of our after stay, and in the whole before, I am confident we lost a 1,000 men at least in that island. After all this and many consultations (held by our council) it was thought requisite not to engage this army against the Hispaniolian any more, fearing it might prove of dangerous consequence (the hearts of our people being so much deadened through fear and sickness); the general resolved to trust Providence in the attempting of some other Spanish island; accordingly we fitted ourselves for a re-embarking; the officers were very desirous of action, for indeed sad was our condition in lying on those hot sands. I can assure you that we had not one man of twenty (both officers and soldiers) that stood in health. The 2nd of May 1655 a good part of the army went aboard; the 3rd, the whole army shipped all but the horse, and they were killed on the shore, not being able (as was pretended) to ship them; there was an hundred brave English horses destroyed, some of them worth thirty pound sterling in England, they were enough to have marched from one side of any Spanish island in America to the other; the killing of these horses was much wondered at by many. Indeed the Lord hath made us all along to be scourges to whip our own backs; we have in many things acted against common reason, nay, our grandes have been slow to action that (altho’ stirred up by the coll.) they would not command such business to be done which apparently would have been of great advantage to the army; one thing worse we used, the council ordering anything to be done (which amongst us stands for a law) yet the general, contrary to that council, hath acted as his own will led him; we that are soldiers account this the height of arbitrary power; surely somebody must be accountable for these miscarriages, the honour of my Lord Protector, and our whole nation is much concerned in this business. The same day the body of the army was put aboard, we set sail and stood off to sea, where we continued seven days, having a very prosperous gale of wind; the 9th instant we made the island where we now are; the 10th we came into one of their best harbours and anchored our ships, after the whole fleet was in and well settled, every man of us fitted himself to invade his enemy that night; that it might the better be done, the rear-admiral (by order from General Penn) rowed from ship to ship commanding the several sea captains to make ready their boats to put us ashore, and appointed them what regiments they should carry; all which was done in reasonable good order; the army coming within shot of the shore we discovered the enemy standing there ready (as it was supposed) to receive us, for they let fly their great shot at us; upon which, not knowing what opposition we might receive, it was ordered that a small friggott should run as close as possible to the shore; accordingly it did, and made some very good shots at the enemy, which did dishearten them; then our men rowed on towards the shore (the enemy not further opposing), and when they came within call (our men not firing) one of the enemy spoke and asked of us what we came thither for; it was answered him for fresh meat and pieces of eight; the Spaniard replied we were welcome, but one amongst them, speaking very good English (an Englishman, I conceive), bid us land if we durst, making some show and standing in defiance. The army immediately landed without the loss of a man, for indeed the enemy made no further opposition than the fore-mentioned great shots (which did no execution upon us) but run clearly away in great disorder, leaving their great guns behind them; this was a wonderful mercy to us that the enemy had such a terror in their spirits, being exceedingly more considerable than those of Hispaniola which made such a slaughter upon us, and the advantage this enemy had was of much more value than theirs, these having a fort to shelter them with great guns, and we in boats to fight for our landing, whereas the others were but an ambuscade, we having an advantage equivalent had we been careful in the ordering of our forlorns; if this enemy had opposed us I question much where we had now been . . . Our general and army being landed, a council was called to consider what should be done. It was resolved we should march the same night, in order to which every officer went to his charge, expecting particular orders from our major-general for our present march, but we marched not

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

until the next day, being the 11th instant, notwithstanding the joint consent of the council over night; the lying still that night was above ten thousand pounds damage to the army, and the consequence thereof may prove more dangerous than I can at present express, as you may clearly see by my succeeding lines. Our not advancing the first night in the rear of the enemy to their only town being but 5 miles from our landing gave them the advantage of running away and carrying their goods and treasure with them; whereas if we had marched the first night very probably we had taken them and their goods, if not their persons, their goods; for it is upon good grounds believed they knew not of our coming before they saw the fleet so nigh their coast. In our march, being the 11th instant, we met with some forts and great guns, but not a man in them to make opposition; beginning this march between 8 and 9 of the clock in the morning we made it two in the afternoon before we recovered the said town. The forlorn then entered the same, receiving no opposition, they being all fled away, for it was not fortified; our men found nothing in it more than rotten chairs, chests, and such kind of wooden ware. At our first appearing before the town some of the enemy (being horsemen) came towards our men with handkerchiefs in their hands signifying truce, upon which command was given that they should not be fired at; they came up to us desiring to speak with an officer, which discourse was to this effect, whether or no we came to victual our navy only or to inhabit the island. Answer was returned them that we came to inhabit the island, and with resolution to bring this island under the power of his Highness the Lord Protector of England; they then desired to return this answer to their governor (who was but 3 miles from this town), and he would send some from his camp to treat with us; accordingly he did the same evening. After some discourse had with these commissioners, our general demanded of them whether or no they had power under their governor's hand and seal to treat with us. They replied no. Then it was resolved on both sides that they should return and bring with them the next day full power to treat and confirm what was agreed on by both parties. They came again the 12th, but so late in the day that little was done. The 13th was the Sabbath; but note in this time of the treaty the coll. of the army desired our general that a party might be sent out to stop the enemy his running away into the mountains, the enemy then lying within 3 miles of us, but it was not hearkened unto; our coll. likewise desired that the enemy might be enjoined to bring the army in a week's provision beforehand, neither was done. The 14th they were again hot on the treaty, and much was done that day, their governor then being one of the commissioners. The 15th it was wholly concluded, but nothing performed by this treacherous enemy, which was much prejudicial to the army, beside the loss of many men occasioned by their breach of faith. The terms the commissioners agreed on were these: that they should march away out of their country with two suits of wearing apparel, leaving all other goods and slaves behind them, and be transported into some place in Nova Spania, wind and weather permitting, which last clause the Popish priests made use of to dissuade the common people from coming in upon these articles, for they told them that our seamen would say the wind served not to set them on the right shore, but would turn them ashore amongst the Indians, who are now in opposition to the Spaniards in those parts, by which means they should all be devoured. This wrought so much upon the rude sort that they sent us word that they would not confirm any such agreement their commissioners had signed on their behalf, but chose rather to die than leave their country upon such slight conditions. Our general then sent them word (but too late) that he would hang their governor with the rest of the hostages in case they did not come in according to agreement; they valued not his high words, having, in the former days of treaty, carried away their principal treasure into the mountains. This treachery of the enemy's put us to great straits for some days, for when they had sent their goods away they themselves lay lurking in the woods not far from this town, and our general, not sending a party out to clear the country of them, they killed our men that straggled (thinking to get bread) by tens, and more sometimes in a company, and our poor creatures were so much straightened through the want of provision that they would venture out without order to kill themselves some meat, by which means I am confident that a day scarcely passed over our heads without having intelligence of the loss of more or less from the army at the first of our coming hither. All this might have been prevented had we (as it was earnestly desired by some eminent persons amongst us) but sent a party out in time of the treaty to have hindered them from carrying away their goods, wives and children from us; they conveyed away not only those but likewise their slaves, nigh 3,000 in number, who would have been of great advantage to the army in planting provisions for our future subsistence. Much more might have been written by enlarging myself in circumstances, but I durst not be plainer, for I fear if my letter should come to our great one's hands they would account this too plain I have already writ: if it should miscarry I shall not be troubled at it, for it is nothing but truth, and a great deal less than the truth, but in these lines you have a particular relation of the substance of our transactings, and shall now proceed to give you a more particular account of our present condition here, and what hath happened since our coming hither. Sir, at the lower end of the 6th page you may see mentioned the desires of some coll. that in the time of the treaty the enemy should be engaged to bring us in a week's provision beforehand, and likewise some poultry and other light provisions for the sick men, neither of which done, the army was in great want, insomuch that the men straggled out from their colours, endeavouring to kill some beeves by shooting, which did so affrighten the beasts that they would run (after a day or two) before any one came nigh them by a hundred poles; this greatly damnified us, being forced to eat horse and dog and asses' flesh, and all this without bread; the last flesh I conceived the best, and did eat heartily of it. Our general, considering the inconvenience that would arise by this disorderly firing amongst the cattle, he commanded that no man, upon pain of death, should go out of his quarters without having leave from the major-general; this order being observed, the cattle would be driven by our horsemen, so that we had supply of meat, but in such a sort that sometimes we had none for 3 or 4 days together; then did our men betake themselves to horse flesh again; this our shortness of good flesh, and eating others not suitable to our natures, brought a violent sickness into our army, that with our men being killed straggling, and the heavy hand of the Lord afflicting us with sickness, hath given us a greater blow than the sword did in Hispaniola, and indeed, sir, we are in a sad condition, our people dying very thick, both officers and soldiers, men going daily to the grave, and few considering it, or laying to heart the heavy judgment of the Lord we at present lie under. Notwithstanding these sad afflictions few or none are affected with it, living at the same rate we did in the looseness of our lives and conversations; it is very evident to every Christian soul here (that without unfeigned repentance) the Lord will whip us with his third rod, the sword we gently tasted of in Hispaniola, and in some measure the famine there and here the plague is very much feared here, and doubtless (without God's preventing mercy) will come in sore amongst us, for the scents are here so noisome that in some parts of this town a man is not able to walk, and all occasioned by ourselves in letting our men (some of them) lie above ground, and others buried so shallow underground that they already scent through; besides this, we offend our quarters very much by our own nastiness, and throwing the garbage of the cattle in inconvenient places, all which doth at present very much annoy us, being little course taken for preventing the like future inconvenience. Sir, I profess unto you that if an impartial man had been here to view all transactions he would have found nothing in them but irregularities from the first of our landing in Hispaniola; the common course of our general and now major-general is to do business (of what concerneth soever) without the advice of their cols., seldom or never calling them together, so that here is a great fraction amongst us; and since our arrival here it is sad to relate how heavy we have been in spirit, as if we were not Englishmen. I think we had been here about a fortnight before we sent out a party to clear the country (about this town) of the enemy, in all which time the enemy had liberty to feed on that which might [have] supplied our wants, but being pressed that some might go out, Coll. Buller was sent but could not meet the enemy; after 14 days he returned; then one Lt. Coll. Bland was commanded out with another party to the plantations allotted for my coll.'s plantations and future quarters; the said Lt. coll. returned, but left a major there to secure them from the enemy. He was not to draw off without relief or further orders, but he (unsoldier like) left the place having neither relief nor order; upon his quitting the enemy came down from the hills and burned most, if not all, the houses, yet the

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

relief going for him was within two days' march of the place, so nigh that the houses were not devoured quite by the fire before our men came at them. At the return of this major (and intelligence of our party) information was given in against him, but he remaineth unquestioned. It is such as this and many other cases (as by my former lines you see) that maketh the difference between our great ones; one thing is here kept from some coll. that I think never was in any army in the world. They know no more what is in our store than private captains, and as for field officers (under the collonels) they are not so much valued here as captains were in England, for never since we came into this island that we have been summoned to any Council of War more than for punishing some criminal persons, the which capt. might execute in the absence of their coll.; indeed here is one Coll. Holdepp that is of the Cabinet Council, and none other. I believe it will be ill resented by his Highness. Sir, in former letters I was speaking of our provision ships that were left behind us; they are come since our taking this island, and the little Charitie likewise with the rest of the horses; notwithstanding these ships being come to us we have no bread delivered us, clothes we have. The sick men have bread given them but not the well, neither can I satisfy myself that any we shall have until it shall please to God to send it out of the earth, or some merchant ship arrive here that will sell it to particular men. For goods, I had wherewithall to buy some, so that I am provided for these six months, but from the store I did not receive for myself and family six pound of bread from the time of my landing until this very day, neither know I when any will be delivered unto me; but I had a little more money than the poor soldier had, by which means I have in a very good measure provided for myself and family, allowing each a biscuit a day, which allowance I hope will last six months (being but six in my house) if I have any bread from the store to help. Sir, the army is at present in a very sad condition; we have no bread allowed us, and flesh we have not received any these four days, our horse are now out getting some for us; meat here is enough in the island, but the disorder of the army at the first of our coming hath brought us to these wants, and I can assure you that in all probability it will go very hard with us the first year, but if it pleaseth the Lord to enable us the first year we shall do well enough the next, for by that time we shall acquaint ourselves with the cattle, and get the knowledge of killing them in order for the better advantage to ourselves, and with industry we may get good stocks of hogs and other* rall plantations and live upon the wild abroad from us, this thing are not enemies to ourselves. Sir, the army is now disposed of to their my Lord Protector's further pleasure is known concerning us Sir, my proportion of land (his Highness confirmeth it) I hope in a few years to make it worth unto me a 1,000*l.* sterling per annum. The island is a gallant island, and I am confident very healthy, great store of good fruit it beareth, and many other good commodities naturally; it will produce as good a trade as any island in America. I can assure you if it shall please Providence to settle us, it will be the most convenientest island the Spaniards have for my lord's design, and here will be great encouragement for the bringing over families to plant the land

(No. 974.) 1656. Oct. 8, Jamaica. Francis Barrington to Mr. Hawkins . . . I confess I have a command, and that honourable, but not sufficient to buy clothes and other necessities . . . This island is very promising, and great estates may be raised by such as have good stocks to begin with.—He says that if he do not get his arrears from Ireland, and some other moneys, he must seek employment in some other part of the world, and trail a pike with some other Christian Prince.

(No. 981.) 1657, Jan. 30, Newport (Isle of Wight). John Hall to his brother-(in-law) John Kendall. (To be left at the Black Swan in Cannon Street, near London Stone.)—"Yesterday there came upon Sir John's shore, "near Brixton, about 4 o'clock in the morning, the John "Baptist of London, laden with Canary Sackes, whose "owners are, as the master, Corde Helderman (a Dutch- "man) informed me, Alderman Miesse and Mr. Richard "Baker, of Lyme Street, merchant."—Hall offered and gave help. The men having begun to land some of the wine, Major Bull, Captain of Cowes Castle, and deputy vice-admiral to the governor, came and obstructed the proceedings He says he has spoken to Mr. Oglander not to proceed to trial at the next assizes about the copperas stones found at Thorne until he (Hall) knows Sir John's resolution concerning the business with Major Bull.

(No. 983.) 1657, March 9, Jamaica. Francis Barrington to Sir John Barrington . . . Such is the enemy amongst us that they will not stand a shot, but so unknown are their abiding places that we cannot find them out; and their custom is such that when any of our armed men meet them accidentally they fly for it . . . Send me a couple of whelps of the blood-hound strain to make draught-dogs of them, or if possible one ready made . . . for I can deem no way like unto this to clear the black rogues from this place.

(No. 986.) 1657, July 1, Jamaica.—The same to the same. . . . When Capt. Godfrey left this island I was in an unsettled condition, having been several times removed, but since seated in a pleasant and I hope fruitful place. I have in this little time brought a plantation into handsome condition, ready to receive what servants shall be sent me from England, which my cousin, John Barrington, adviseth me that his Highness hath given me some. I have a good stock of cattle and sheep sufficient to undertake a sugar work, were my purse as able; my stock of horses hath done me good service of late in bringing me meat from my hunters, and were they in Barbadoes would yield the best part of 1,000*l.* sterling, yet here did not cost me 30*l.* sterling.

(No. 989.) 1658, Jan. 18, Little Almonry, Westminster. Sir Gilbert Gerrard to Sir John Barrington. I received a letter out of Ireland last week from Sir Robert Byron (a kinsman of mine) wherein he desired me to move yourself and my father that if you had not already let your lands in the barony of Slany, he might be admitted to the tenancy of them. . . .

(No. 1,036.) n. d. [16 , Oct. 12.] Jo. Bouchier to Sir Thomas Barrington. This night I hear Mr. White is dead and buried, so as that advowson is at your disposal also. I have made means to you for Wallington for one Mr. Thomas Calvert, M.A., who is a very able and worthy man for that place. That request I presume you will not deny me If Mr. Hayles be provided, I beseech you have a care to place a conscionable soul-saving minister at Rowley Upon the 9th of October we had a skirmidge with the enemy and gave them a great blow; many of their commanders were slain; there were some 11 or 12 slain near one of the forts, whereof 4 or 5 were commanders, and other commanders were slain in other places, which were carried in a cart covered by the cavaliers to Cottingham. Upon the 11th of this we had some horse and foot sallied out upon the enemy, took 3 of their forts or works where they had advanced some of their ordnance. We took one of their mighty great cannons which shot fiery great bullets upon our ships, and some 5 other drakes and demi-culverins. We took commanders that some 60 or more. This 9th of October the enemy took their demigod that shot so many fiery bullets into the town and performed very little execution; to my remembrance there was only a man, a woman, and a little child slain by it. Upon the 10th of October the enemy in the night took away all their cannon, and that great one broke the carriage, and has left at Newland where there is a great guard over it. This 12th the soldiers sallied out and took some prisoners, and some took a good hawk and a good nag of the Lord of Dumlans (Dumb-lane?) and others went forth into Holderness.

(No. 1,105.) 1661, March 29. John Hawkins to John Kendall. Last Saturday a great tumult in the city, occasioned by 2 apprentices put into the pillory in Cheapside, which the apprentices so ill resented that they rose in a great body and rescued their fellow apprentices out of the pillory, and brake it all to pieces; but a new one was erected presently, and the mayor came well guarded and saw the sentence of the sessions at Guildhall executed upon them, and afterwards they were whipped. Whereupon the apprentices appeared again in great parties, deforced Ireland's house (the master of the two men punished). Great watches on Saturday night by the city train bands. On Sabbath they meet in Moorfields and in several places in the city some say 4,000 or 5,000. The sheriffs and the train bands disperse them again, which, with the guards from Whitehall, watched the city at night. There was no appearance of them on Monday, but strong watches all night. On Saturday the House sat in a grand committee about the Bill for repealing the Act for a triennial Parliament, and on Monday it passed the House. Yesterday the House was called over, and ordered to be called over again this day month. The absent knights then must pay 10*l.*, and burgesses 5*l.* There was a Bill sent down yesterday from the Lords' House to prevent some inconveniences in writs of error, and

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

* The letter is torn here.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES
Esq.

another is preparing to take off the penalty of death upon felonies not exceeding 10*l.*, transportation instead thereof.

(No. 1,265.) 1672, Oct. 21. Knob. (Knobworth. Row. Lytton to Sir John Barrington.—He mentions "my aunt Barrington," and "my aunt Crofts."

(No. 1,290.) 1675, April 21, Holme. Hen. Lewis to Mr. Tobias Hewitt at London. . . . Here is much striving at Lynn about the choosing of a Burgess; some think that great Cooke will lose it, and there is as great a coile in the county about the choosing of a knight for the shire. I think no county in England is so much divided as this. This Lord Townesend makes all this bussle; if all crouch not to him he makes some opposition to them.

(No. 1,385.) 164. . Chr. Erle to . . . These are to acquaint you, by order from our committee, of the late assault the enemy hath made against Hitchin, who have been in fight with them most part of this afternoon. These are, therefore, to give you notice thereof, that you may provide for the mutual safety of the association, as you tender the welfare thereof.

(No. 1,388.) [1643]. Tuesday, at Dunmow. Charles Rich to . . . Major Pakinges has by letter requested that the bearer, Capt. Willkins, may recruit his company out of Brantrie and Bocking. Rich asks that he may be aided.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

22 Eliz., 17 Oct. Copy of letters patent to several persons, including Sir Francis Barrington, directing them to make enquiries about persons who engrossed grain and who transported it to foreign parts, thus causing scarcity and dearness in England.

A short petition or request to Chief Justice Popham for his opinion whether the petitioners (the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Mallendyne, co. Essex.) were right in rating people not according to their supposed wealth but according to the lands they occupied. Four persons so rated dissented; and the adjoining justices of the peace were of sundry opinions.—Popham gives a short opinion that the rating was good.

1599. A brief narration of the several speeches that were delivered by the Lords of the Council in the Star Chamber, the last sitting in the end of Michaelmas Term, 1599. (7 folio pp.)—The speeches are about Irish affairs. A copy is in the Record Office. Cal. State Papers, sub. anno 1599 (Nov. 28 p.).

1601, Jan. 1, Kinsale. Copy of the articles between the Lord Deputy and Don Juan del Aquila for the surrender of the castle and town of Kinsale, &c. (2½ pp.) A copy is among the Carew MSS. (see Cal. St. Papers, Carew), but the date there given is Jan. 2.

41 Eliz., Dec. 20. Copy of the Commission for Taxation of the subsidy. (Latin).—This is for the county of Essex, and the names of the commissioners for the several districts are below.

44 Eliz., Feb. 19. Copy of the Commission of the first payment of the second subsidy. (Latin.)

1 James I., Aug. 26. Copy (signed by Ro. Sussex) of the King's letters patent appointing Robert Earl of Sussex, K.G., to be Lord Lieutenant of Essex.

1607, Aug. 19. Copy of bond to the King by William Milford, of Rosswell, co. Essex, a collector of the subsidy.

1619, Sept. 7, Castle of Prague.—Copy of a letter by the directors and counsellors ordained by all the 3 Protestant estates of the kingdom of Boheimia, assembled in the city of Prague, to the Queen of Boheimia.—Congratulations on her husband being elected King.

(1621, Nov. 2.) Copy of the Lord Keeper's (Williams) speech in the Court of Chancery. (Printed in Hacket's Life of Williams, part i., p. 71.)

(1621, April 22.) Lord Bacon's letter to the Lords. Begins, It may please your lordships, I shall humbly crave.

Copy of a declaration to King James I. by the House of Commons. Begins, Your loyal and obedient subjects, the Commons now assembled in Parliament, by several messages from your Majesty. Ends And for a gracious and just King to grant.—And the King's reply by Begins, His Majesty hath commanded me to tell you that he expected answer by your actions.

1621, Dec. 18.—Copy of the King's letter to the Speaker of the House of Commons. Begins, Whereas at the humble suit of our House of Commons we condescended to make this meeting a session before Christmas.—And copy of reply by the House.

The Petition Declaratory which the King stiles Apologetick (so endorsed). Begins, Most dread. &c., we, &c. assembled in the Commons' House of Parliament full of grief and unspeakable sorrow. (About the Palatinate.)

Rough draft of the last in Sir T. Barrington's writing.

1621, Dec. 16, Royston. (Copy of) the King's letter to Sir Geo. Calvert. Begins, We are sorry to hear that notwithstanding our reiterated message. (Complaining of the Commons claiming their liberties by inheritance.)

A large brief sheet. Arguments pro. and con. about the support of the Palatinate.

1621, May 3. Copy of the Speaker's speech to the King. Begins, May it please, &c. your faithful, &c. acknowledging the continual confluence.—And the King's answer. Begins, The last time that I spoke to this House.

The question is whether the Commons may by a composition be secured from the purveyors. (1½ brief sheets.)

Draft or memoranda in Sir Thomas Barrington's writing of an address to the King regretting his absence from ill-health.

1621. Three copies (one by Sir Thos. Barrington's hand) of the questions to and the answers by Lord Southampton.

1621. Memoranda of the effect of Sir Robert Philipps speeches for liberty of speech, &c. in the House of Commons.

1621, Oct. 15, Vienna. (Copy in English of) letter by the Emperor Ferdinand to Philip IV. of Spain;—and copies of his letters to Don Balthazar de Zuñiga. (About the translation of the electorship of the Palatinate to the Duke of Bavaria.)

(1621.) Imperfect copy by Sir Thos. Barrington of a petition to the King by the House of Commons, regarding Lepton and Golds, who were interested in certain patents, having conspired to ruin Sir E. Cope, who had been employed by the House to examine the patents.

1624, May 28. Copy of the King's speech in answer to the petition of the Commons concerning grievances. Begins, I will begin at your conclusion.

(1621.) Copy of a bill for discharging of fines set upon Sir John Cage, Kt., sheriff of the co. of Cambridge, 7 Jac. by the Commissioners of Sewers.

Certain reasons why the Clothworker's Bill should not pass objected by the clothiers in Essex. (Three allegations by the clothworkers and three answers by the clothiers.)

CHARLES I.

Copy petition of divers merchants and tradesmen in London, and of the clerks of the Custom House there.—Against a patent granted about 8 years by his late Majesty to Alexander Foster and Richard Grimes, Esqrs. (trained at Court and not about the Custom House), for erecting an office for the sole making and delivering of all bills and notes of entries of goods, to all merchants, and shopkeepers, in all ports in England.

1629. Copy of the King's speech on the Dissolution of Parliament. Begins, There can be no occasion of my coming.

163. Copy petition of the Rev. Jno. Kennedy and others to the House of Commons.—Against the oppressions of Lord Strafford and others in depriving the petitioners of the place of the King's chief remembrancer in the Exchequer in Ireland, to which they were appointed, 1 Car. 1.—And 14 items of particular grievances of Kennedy.

1640. Copy of Mr. Grimston's speech in Parliament.

1640. Petition to the Lords Committees and others in Parliament assembled by Henry Wingfield, prisoner in the Fleet.—He was committed there for having sung two staves of the song that was sung at Newmarket at the last assizes. He apologizes, and prays discharge. (Original signed by Wingfield.)

1640, Sept. 24. Copy of the King's speech. (1 p., torn.)

1641. Mr. Pym's speech after he had ended his charge against the Earl Strafford. Begins, These articles have expressed the character. (2 pp.)

1640. Petition to the House of Commons by the inhabitants of Clavering, co. Essex. They complain that Geoffrey Wats, the vicar of Clavering, and John Golding, his curate, have refused to administer the sacrament to divers parishioners because they could not come up to the rails to receive in the year 1639, altho' they offered themselves in the usual place in the chancel, and had prosecuted them in the spiritual

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

courts for not coming to the rails, and had prosecuted divers for going to hear preaching in other places. Wats not providing a sufficient curate, tho' the vicarage is worth 120*l.* per ann. (signed by 6 persons).—It seems to have been sent to some one for approval, and he has within drawn a fresh and fuller petition, in which Ezechiel Jocelyn and Robert Upsheere, the then churchwardens, are also complained of; and it is said that the curate in his sermons much inveighed against those who did not stand up at the reading of the Gospel, and at the reading of the Creed, with their faces to the east, and not bowing at the name of Jesus. (The framer of the amended petition signs himself J. Th.)

1641, Aug. 1. The impeachment of the Commons against the bishops delivered by Serjeant Wild by order of the House at the bar in the Lords' House verbally.—And extract from the Journals of 5 & 6 Aug. 1641.

1641, June 11. Speech of Sir Thomas Barrington in the House of Commons on the passing of the Bill against Bishops. (1 p.)

1641, June 21. Speech of Sir Thomas Barrington on the last report of the Committee (in the matter of the charge against the Earl of Bristol). He moved to adjourn the matter for a day or two until they could hear the Earl speak, or until they could make a positive charge.

(1641.) Petition of the Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The founder appointed a certain number of the most ancient fellows under the title of college preachers to preach at the commemoration of the founder and benefactors, &c., and allowed them to hold with the fellowship one ecclesiastical benefice, which statute was approved by Queen Elizabeth's Commissioners.—They pray the honourable Court to continue the privilege.

1642, June 6. Petition to Parliament by the inhabitants of the hundreds of Uttestford and Olavering, co. Essex.—In 1639 about 60 muskets and corslets were commanded from them by the lord lieutenant and deputies, and sent into the north parts, and (they believe) were laid up at Harwich. They pray that those may be returned, as they want arms for the defence of the King and Parliament.—Signed by about 25 persons.

1642. Petition to the House of Commons by Edward Symmons, minister of Jesus Christ at Rayne in Essex.—He has been 17 days in custody of the serjeant, and his accusers have not appeared. He can approve himself and his doctrine (for which he is accused) to be such as becomes the Gospel. Prays that he may go out on bail, to comfort his afflicted wife and aged parent.

1642, June 30. Petition to the King by Thomas Brewster, Esq., that the King's warrants might issue to all proper officers, directing them to enfranchise copyhold and held of manors belonging to the King or Queen, or Prince of Wales, where the tenants desired enfranchisement, and that he, Brewster, might manage the business, and have 1-6th of the net proceeds.—At the foot is the certificate, signed by Ralph Freeman, of the King's reference of the matter to the Commissioners of the Treasury.

1642, Essex. Commission signed by Ro. Earl of Warwick, to Richard Bacon, whom he had appointed captain of a foot company, to muster and train the said company. Wafer seal of the Earl.

Another similar for Tobias Hewitt.

Another similar but not sealed, and the name of the captain not inserted.

1642, April 25. Petition to the House of Commons by the High Constables and Grand Jury for the liberty of Bury St. Edmunds, made at the sessions.—Their magazine of gunpowder is unfit for use; they ask that it may be renewed, and be committed to the custody of fit persons.—Signed by the high constables (12) and grand jury (13).

(1642.) Petition to the Committee for the safeguard of the Kingdom by John Windebank, scholar of the University of Oxford and prisoner in the Gate House.—The House of Commons having referred the examination to the committee, he prays that he may be speedily examined.—At the foot is an order signed by the Earls of Northumberland and Holland, referring the consideration of the matter to Sir Thomas Barrington, Mr. Glyn, and Mr. Nicoll, who are to report to the committee whether Windebank is fit to be bailed or not.

1642, March 4. (Copy.) Lord Gray of Wark authorizes Joseph Mann, William Mann, and Ezekiel Hall, or any of them to enter the houses of papists, malignants, and others, refusing to appear at musters, &c., and to seize their horses, arms, and ammunition.

1643, Feb. 20. Order by the House of Commons, signed by H. Elsyng, for repayment to Sir Thomas Barrington of 350*l.*, which he had lent to the governor of Portsmouth towards payment of the garrison there.

1642, July 1. Copy of the Remonstrance and Declaration of the Sheriff, the Justices of the Peace, and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of Essex, whose names are subscribed, assembled at the assizes at Chelmsford.—Relying on the King's declarations, and also on his letter to Sir Thomas Mallett, judge of assize for the county, declaring his intention to maintain the Protestant religion against papists and sectaries, and to uphold the liberties of the subjects,—they pledge their loyalty. Signed by 31 persons.—On the other half of the sheet is a copy of an address to the King by the county of Essex, referring to the other declaration, and imploring his presence in Parliament.

1642, August and September. Six receipts to six persons of Much Totham, co. Essex, for small sums of money and horses lent for the service of the King and Parliament. (1 p.)

[1642.] Directions signed by Lords Warwick and Maynard to William Andrewes, gent., one of the muster-masters for the co. of Essex, to visit Captains Wentworth, Tindall, Cook, Mordant, Wiseman, Hunniwood, Langley, Lyun, and Maxey, at the 9 places mentioned and on the days specified and there attend to the duties of his office, and to report neglects.

[1643.] Copy of instructions to be exactly and effectually observed and followed by H.M. commissioners for the loan of money unto his Majesty in the county of (17 heads, 5½ pp.)

1643, March 27. Certificate and declaration by Joseph Mann, taken before (and signed by) Walter Long, John Stevens, and Hen. Barrington, of his having taken the horses (33) above mentioned from the several persons named, and of certain circumstances.

1642, April 1 and 3. Depositions by Rich. Cooper, Edward Pallmer, and Fr. Swift, as to their horses being taken. (These are drawn up by Sir Thomas Barrington, but signed by the deponents.)

1642 and 1643. Three certificates of the taking at 3 several times from Ambrose Andrewes, of Newport, co. Essex, of 4 horses and a saddle and furniture, for the service of the King and Parliament.

1643, May 30. A set of 6 resolutions (by the hand of Sir Thomas Barrington) about the cannon, ammunition, and gunners to be sent to Harwich.

1643, June 7. Robert Smith, of Upton, Sir Thomas Barrington, Sir Wm. Hicks, Harbottle Grimston, and Timothy Middleton, borrowed 1,006*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* of Ursula Garrett, of London, widow, in order to pay officers and soldiers of the associated forces raised in the co. of Essex, and they gave her a bond in the penal sum of 2,000*l.* to secure the repayment. Sir William Masham, Sir Martin Lumley, Sir Thomas Checke, Sir William Martin, Sir William Roe, Sir Henry Holcroft, and Sir Thomas Honeywood covenant with the 4 bond debtors to bear their proportion of the debt. (The seals have been torn off, but the signatures of the covenantors are nearly perfect.)

1643. April 15, 16, 20. Printed orders by the committee for the association sitting at Cambridge. (2 folio pp.) Joshua Sedgwick was their clerk.

1643. Draft petition to the House of Commons by the inhabitants of Elmden, co. Essex, complaining of the evil life of Thomas Gardner, vicar of their parish.

1643, June 26. William Johnstone and Thomas Reynoldes being appointed to go northwards to take the subscription of those that would go in their own persons at their own charge or otherwise, and what arms, &c., &c., they put down the names of 27 persons, with particulars.

[1643.] Three constables complain that tho' they have impressed men the men will not obey the warrants, the constables being poor men; they ask for authority to charge persons better than themselves to assist them, &c.—At the foot, "The constables fined at 10*l.* a piece."

1643, July 26. Colchester. The well affected in the south ward towards the relief and supply of his Excellency's army have underwritten as followeth.—About 100 names, with what they would furnish.

1643, Aug. 15. Resolution at the committee for the association that the Earl of Manchester shall have as great an entertainment as major-general of this brigade of the associated counties as any major-general hath that is at this present in the service of the Parliament.

[1643.] Draft or copy of a petition or resolution of the trained bands and other inhabitants of the co. of Essex, to both Houses of Parliament, protesting devotion to the cause of liberty, and asking for a return of arms taken out of the county, either out of the stores lately arrived from Hull or otherwise.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

1643, Aug. 24, Westminster. Lords Pembroke, Say and Seie, Salisbury and Howard, and John Pim, and Denzil Holles (the committee for the safety of the kingdom) to the Deputy Lieutenants of Essex. (Copy.) Inasmuch as Capt. Rich's troop has marched with the Earl of Manchester, they recall their former order for calling away Capt. Hatcher, and direct him and his troop to remain in the county and assist in raising money.

[1643.] Considerations touching provisions necessary for the regiments which are to march to his Excellency.—Ten in number. (1 p.)

1643, Aug. 26. Copy of commission to Capt. Benjamin Keayne to be serjeant-major adjutant to Sir Thomas Barrington (to instruct and direct the company and officers).

[1643?] Number of foot and dragoons in the associated counties. Total 8,545 foot and 1,445 dragoons. Essex is down for 2,112 foot and 360 dragoons.—On the other 3 pages of the sheet are other particulars of these forces, and the rates of pay per diem for the several officers.

[1643, Sept. 2.] Indorsed, "Copy of an ordinance for Essex."—It is a draft of an ordinance for the assessment of a month's pay on every person in Essex charged with one foot arms, and so proportionately more or less; and for fining such persons as being summoned do not appear at musters; and giving power to the standing committee, or some dep. lieutenants, on pressing emergency, to levy in the county not exceeding 1,125*l.* per week; and authorizing the dep. lieutenants to compel men to serve, and to raise the forces of the county on disturbers of the peace, &c., &c. Referring to the late ordinance establishing the standing committee, it is now ordained that only 2 dep. lieutenants and 3 other committees need be present at the standing committee in the co. of Essex. (5 pp.)

[1643.] Warrant to impress men towards the 2,500 assigned for the co. of Essex, in consequence of the Parliamentary order for 10,000 foot and dragoons to be raised out of the 6 associated counties to be commanded by the Earl of Manchester. (Draft by Sir T. B., and a fair copy of the same, rather expanded.)

1643. A return made and signed by 2 constables of the warrants for the pressed soldiers laid upon the parish of Lindsell, and volunteers that were not listed, to appear according to the warrants.—They name 3 pressed men listed under Capt. Jonson, and who (they think) are gone to the army. "Christopher Jellson returned home yet listed; his father did resist us and command him away, and said he should not com exsept the "deputy leaftennants came and fetcht him themselves."

1643, Oct. 7, Lamborne. Copy return by 2 collectors and 2 constables to a warrant.—They report that Edward Lake, gent., says there is no popish army abroad but what the Parliament doth maintain, and other scandalous words. They present several persons as defaulters for their assessments to the 4th of the 40,000*l.*

1643, Oct. 23, Dunmow. Minutes of orders at a committee signed by Sir T. B. and Sir T. Middleton. That 100*l.* be sent to the committee at Cambridge, to be received as from Essex on account.—That those who do not appear in person, or send such arms as are charged in them, shall be fined; &c. (2 pp.)

1643, Oct. 26. Heads of divers particulars for an ordinance for the co. of Essex.

Particulars agreed upon by the dep. lieutenants of Essex. (For the listing and pay of at least 240 men, furnishing of arms and ammunition, &c.)

Petition of Edward Heron, Esq., to the House of Commons.

By order of the House the horses of Mrs. Nevill of Holt were to be seized; 13 were taken; among them were the horses of the petitioner and his man, who were in company of Mrs. Nevill. He prays restoration.

1655, Jan. 12, Whitehall. Hen. Scobell to the Sheriff of Essex. In July the Protector and the Council ordered that a return of the names of all the parishes in Essex, so that a collection might be made for the poor Protestants of the valleys of Lucerna, Angrona, and ; the return has not been made; Scobell again requires it. (On the other side is the draft of a reply of Sir John Barrington, stating that he had distributed many copies of the order, and has sent a return in a letter to his Highness, which perhaps was made. He will send more.)

1665, Feb. 24, Whitehall. Copy of the King's letter, counter signed by Ed. Arlington, to the Earl of Oxford, lord lieutenant of Essex, and in his absence to the deputies.—Asking a loan from the co. of Essex on the credit of the vote in the last session of Parliament of 1,250,000*l.*

n. d. Copy letter by — to the Lords of the Council. They have received on the 25th Sept. two letters, both dated the 16th Sept. They have according to the King's Proclamation and the Earl Marshal's letters required the captains of horse and foot to hold themselves in readiness at 24 hours' notice. They are deficient of arms, because in the last year 1,100 were employed in the Northern Expedition, &c. &c. They will have the beacons watched.

1678. Copy of impeachment of Thomas Earl of Danby.

The Earl of Danby's speech in his defense.

[1687.] Copy of a letter sent to Dr. Bayly, Fellow of Magdalen College, from Windsor, Sept. 26, 1687, upon the receipt of which several of the Fellows immediately repaired to Mr. Penn at Windsor.—Begins, Sir, upon enquiry after the Fellows of Magdalen College.—After an exordium, 6 questions are put, with a view to persuade the Fellows that it would be politic to accept the Bishop of Oxford as their head.—At the end is this note, "There is no name to this letter: 'tis generally supposed writ by order, but they have no ground for that opinion as I can learn, but only the letter itself. Whether there be in it any such intrinsic notes that give assurance of its authority you may best judge. If there be not, the Fellows of "Magdalen College lay too great stress on it."

1678. Copy of Lord Shaftesbury's speech. Begins, My Lords, you are appointing the consideration of the state of England to be taken upon a Committee of the whole House sometime next week.

1678, March 22. Copy of King's speech.

Sir Francis Winnington's speech. Begins, the King cannot pardon treason.

Second thoughts of caution to my countrymen against their fears and jealousies and fears. Begins, Among all the artifices which designing men are wont to use. (4 pp., ridiculing the fears of French assistance to restore King James, but arguing that there was as much reason for calling in his aid to bring back the King as Dutch aid to drive him out. It is in favour of King James.)

[1689.] Copy of the Bishop of Salisbury's speech in the House of Lords. Begins, It is a common maxim, followed even by persecutors, to keep things quiet at home when nations are engaged in war. (2 pp.)

Address to the King by the Marquis de Burgo Mayno, Prince of the family D'Est, &c., &c., sent by the Duke of Villa Hermosa, Governor and Captain-General of the Spanish Netherlands.—To solicit the King's support against the King of France by reason of desperate condition of the Spanish Netherlands. (1 pp.)

A SELECTION FROM THE EARLY DEEDS.

Omnibus ad quos presentes littere perneverint Robertus de Quency et Helena comitissa Cestre salutem: noveritis nos pro salute anime nostre dedisse concessisse et hoc presenti scripto confirmasse deo et Ecclesie Marie de Heffeld regis et monachis ibidem deo servientibus et servitibus in liberam puram et perpetuum elemosinam homagium et servicium Nicholai Huis et heredum suorum et quicquid jure habuimus in dicto Nicholao in serviciis consuetudinibus redditibus seclis et omnibus aliqua ratione nos contingentibus. In cujus rei testimonium huic scripto sigilla nostra apposimus. Hiis testibus Domino Warino de Thanderle, Domino Willhelmo de Callido Monte, militibus; Willhelmo Cappellano, Sewallo tunc senescallo, Ricardo clerico, et aliis. (Temp. H. 3, No. 19.)

(12th century.) A concession by William de Bolonia to Hugh, son of Ulger, of the dower of his sister, which Rumoldus and Paganus his son gave to her, and Bernard, brother of the said Paganus, assured to the said Hugh in the place of his sister, so that he might get the concession of his Lord William; to wit, the half of Alhedawic, and in addition a mill and the land pertaining thereto, and all the land which Lefwin holds, &c. Witnesses, Solomon the priest, Hugh de Boseville, Hugh de Merch, Bernard de Boswamel, Geoffrey de Erleham, Adam, son of Aufrid, Simon de Suttune, Welfard de Antona, Ralph the Englishman, William de Boseville, Bernard, Baldwin Hastwel, Gervase son of Roger, Fulk son of Ralph, John son of Ralph son of Everard, Hugh Cordel, William Gernunc, Gilbert of St. Victor, Ralph of Oxford, Richard Bucherel, Stephen

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

Bucherel, Roger, son of Anscetil. Round seal. 1j. A man looking back on horse.

William de Yspania grants to his wife, Lucy, for her dower, the vill of Willgehail, with the appurtenances, and one knight's fee, viz., of Rodbert, son of Mengui, and one sicheman, viz., of Eustache de Willgehale, before the door of the church of St. Mary of Sculdeford, where the donor married her. Witnesses, Richard, the donor's brother, William, son of Joichel, Fulk the dapifer, Rodbert de Vallis, Gilbert son of Ralph, Rodbert son of Mengui, Ernald, dean of Finchengefeld, William son of Fulk, Thomas de Ardena, and Ralph his son, Ralph de Cauri, Elias de St. George, Humphry de Brnell, Alan de St. George, Hugh, dean of Macinga, Lucian the physician, Richard pincerna, Eudo son of Gervase, Robert Marcalo, Nicholas Cook, Thomas Chamberlain, Arnald Cook, "Valeant presentes et futuri et mei donationis manuteneant." (The last line is nearly all in capital letters.) Large seal of white wax, a man on horse.

(13th century.) Guido de Posenera grants to Humphry de Barintone all tenements which Humphry had in Hatfield as freely as he had them in the time of Payn de Rochfort at 12s. rent. Witnesses, H. Prior of Hatfield, Geoffry de Neville, Hugh de Neville, and others. Round green seal 2½ inches: on a shield, a cross pattee.

(No. 14.) Guido de Ponconera to all his friends, French and English.—For the salvation of the souls of himself and of his uncle, Paganus de Rochefort, and of all, &c., he grants in frankalmoyne to God and St. Mary of Hatfield Regis, and the monks there, 3 acres of his demesne land in Hatfield Regis, lying prime et proxime in turnaria nostra behind the bakehouse of the said monks, and extending in length from that which lies over above Hauckwelle towards the east, as by bounds there placed they are divided. Witnesses, Peter Ermenard de Chimilli, Matthew le Beur, William the chamberlain, Guy of Hatfield, William son of Michael, Geoffry son of Michael, Peter of Haselengefeld, Roger the clerk, Elyas and William de Pirar, then bailiffs, Michael the clerk, and others. (Large round white seal, nearly perfect; a shield barry of many pieces charged with a cross; legend, . . . illum Guid . . . Ponsonciral).

(No. 44.) Richard Prior of Hatfield, to all, &c. Says that by common consent they have granted to William, nephew (nepoti) of Brian Brito of Netlested, xii acres of land which they have in N. in the field called Sorlonde, which Peter Boterel gave to their church. William and his heirs are to hold, as mentioned in the charter between them and him, paying half a mark of silver quarterly. William has done homage to the prior and church of Hatfield and the chaplain of the same place, and has sworn fealty that neither by himself nor by any other will he devise means that the land may be alienated from the church. Witnesses, Geoffry their chaplain, Humphrey the deacon, John son of Ralph the clerk, Stephen the baker, John his brother, Reginald Porter, John the clerk of Tondreley, Richard the cook, William de Bromford, Hubert his brother, Robert White, Geoffry son of Gerard, Richard of Ri, William his son, Hubert son of William, William his son, Robert of Siglemere, and others. (Seal gone. This deed is indented, and has had a counterpart.)

(No. 129.) n. d. Brother Roger, prior of Hatfield Regis and the convent thereof, grant to Henry Pikeman of Sabritesworre, for his homage and service, the messuage with its appurtenances which formerly belonged to Cristiana Grim, in the vill of H. R., near the way called Brodestrate, one head abutting on the Brodestrate towards the west; another on the croft which belonged to the said Cristiana Grim towards the east; to be holden of the grantors and their successors, at the yearly rent of 4s. sterling, payable quarterly. Witnesses, Nicholas de Barentune, Peter son of William, Peter of Haselengefeld, Matthew of Branketre, Richard son of Peter, John, baker, and Ralph, baker, and others. Fragment of the grantor's common seal in white wax.

(No. 50.) Richard, son and heir of John del Ho, of Manegedene, grants surrenders and quit claims to the prior and convent of St. Mary of H. R. in fee, all the claim which he or his heirs has or can have in lands and tenements, homages, rents, wards, reliefs, and escheats, in the vill of Manegedene. The consideration was 20s. sterling paid to him by the prior and convent. Witnesses, Stephen de Bassingburne, Henry of Norstone, John de Pinchepol, Richard Bataille, Richard of Rependone, Ralph of Portemere, John Gurel, Robert Blachors, William of Hatfield, clerk, and others. Round white seal.

Richard the prior and the convent of H. R. give to William, nepos of Brian Brito, of Netleste, 12 acres of land in Netleste. Witnesses, Geoffry, then chaplain, Humphrey the deacon, John son of Ralph the clerk, Stephen, baker, John, his brother, Reginald Paler, John clerk of Tondeley, Richard, cook, William de Bronford, Hubert his brother, Robert White, Geoffry son of Gerard, Richard de Ri, William his son, Hubert son of William, William his son, Robert de Siglemere.

Richard, prior of H. R., with the assent of us all and the counsel of prudent men, gives to Gilbert de Helium, in fee, four acres that we held de hospitali in the vill of Bunsted (Gilbert was son of Robert de Helium). Witnesses, Geoffry our chaplain, Ralf the priest of Bunsted, Albric de Capeles, and Thomas his brother, Humphrey, clerk, Gilbert Gurel, Stephen baker, Alan, our servant of Bunsted.

(No. 21.) Hugh de Veer, Earl of Oxford, to all, &c. Know that I have granted to Henry the prior, and to my monks of Haffeld Regis, in frankalmoyne, a place containing 3 roods of land, which came to my hands by escheat in Abytone Magna, to make there a close and build a grange to house their tithes great and small, viz., two parts which they receive from my manor in the vill of Abytone. (He then states the situation of the land.) Witnesses, Hauise my wife, William de Montchenesy, Adam son of William, Vill. del Acre, Walter de Capell., Garin de Thunderle, Roger de Abytone, Stephen (Sthno) de Abytone, and others. (Portion of the Earl's secretum.)

(No. 15.) Robert de Boregate to all sons of Mother Church. He confirms to Hervey the prior of the convent of the church of St. Mary of Haffeld Regis two parts of the tithes of his demesne of Boregate, to wit, garbs and small tithes, assarts excepted, to hold to them for ever, as his ancestors gave to them, for the salvation of the souls of him, his ancestors, and successors. And he releases to them one pelliciam and one pair of crepitatum, which he yearly claimed of them. Witnesses, Alberic Earl of Oxford, William son of Folco, seneschal of the Earl, Robert de Cantelau, Walter de Capeles, William Thalemache, William Maldiet, Alexander de Vaux, William Brito, and others. (Round white seal a little broken; 2½ inches; shield paly of six, in a canton a lion passant guardant. S . . . ober . . . de . . . gate.)

(No. 17.) Robert de Veer, Earl of Oxford, quit claims to Roger, prior of Hatfield, and the convent of the same place a messuage and three acres of land with the appurtenances in Nosterfeld, which he had of the gift of Semane of Berlawe, and his son William. Witnesses, John de Beauchamp and Henry de Lacy, Kts., Symon de Kensington, John de Buzy, John le Botyller, William de Laneham, William de Thirstlinge, and others. (Small round seal, arms of de Vere; legend, sigillum secreti.)

(No. 41.) Robert de Cokefeld to G., Bishop of London, and Richard, archdeacon of Colchester, and all sons of Holy Church. Gives to the monks of St. Melanious of Hatfield Regis, the church of Bealmont in frankalmoyne, with the lands and tithes free from all secular service. He does this with the assent of his sons, Hugh and Adam, who were present and made the gift with him. Witnesses, William de Criketot, Gilbert son of Robert, Fulk de Bradefeld, Helis de Welvetham, Walter de Stantune, Nicholas the chamberlain, Bartholomew, Richard son of Michael, Nicholas, Robert the hunter, Richard, priest of Hatfield, Ralph the clerk, Michael, Wedo, Symon Bardulf, and Godfrey the baker, servants of the monks and many others. (Seal gone.)

(No. 24.) 1128–1134. G[ilbert], bishop of London, to all persons of churches in the archdeaconry of Colchester. Notifies that he, on the presentation of William prior of Hethfeld, and with the assent of his convent, has granted the church of Bealmont, with the appurtenances, to Richard, archdeacon of Colchester, and instituted him perpetual vicar therein, saving to the prior and monks of Hethfeld an annual payment of three marks. He grants that after the death of the archdeacon the monks may freely dispose of it. Witnesses, Gilbert Foliot, Master Ralph de Altaripa, Roger, son of Maurice, Ralph of Chilton, Hugh, chaplain of Neddeham, Geoffry, chaplain of Hethfeld, William Foliot, seneschal, Reginald the chamberlain, Walter Foliot, Robert de Bant, William Meain, and many others. (Seal gone.)

(No. 47.) R., archdeacon of Colchester, to all prelates of churches throughout the archdeaconry. Says that he has received from W., prior of Hatfield, with the assent of the convent, the church of Beaumont, under the annual payment of three marks; he is not to lease or otherwise part with it without their assent, and after

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDEN,
Esq.

his death the church is to return to them; he has sworn on the Gospels to observe these conditions, and also that he will not appoint a vicar without previously making him take an oath that if he, the archdeacon, shall die, he, the vicar, will deliver the key of the church to the prior and one of the brethren.—And because it is the custom that they to whom churches are leased by monks ought to answer for them as well to the bishop as to the archdeacon, I have bound myself that I will answer for them as well in those things which touch the bishop as those which touch the archdeacon.—All improvements and increments shall go with the church. Witnesses, Nicholas, prior of Stokes, and Adam his monk, Geoffrey the chaplain, Ralph, Humphrey, and Michael, clerks, Michael the dapifer, Walter, Master Eustace of Disce, William de Blauinio, William de Hledes, and many others. (Seal gone.)

I, Roger de Cruce, give and confirm to William Dipres in fee half an acre of my land which I hold of the prior of Haffeld, and lies in the monks field where the windmill is, next the field called Olde Pickles, and extends from the field called Nihacres towards the meadow of Nicholas de Brunesho, at the yearly rent of 6d. For this grant William Dipres pays 3s. 6d. of sterlings. Witnesses, Harvey, then prior of Haffeld, x, Richard of Longbridge, Godfrey the merchant, Roger Sireve (Vicecomite), Sired de Mulsebroc, Ralph Gurel, Ailwin de Fifhide, John the merchant, Michael the clerk, and many others.

We, Robert de Brus, Earl of Carrick, have granted, and by this charter have confirmed, to John de Bledelawe, for his homage and service, the tenement formerly of Richard de Cumbes, in the vill of H. R., to be holden of us and our heirs to him and his heirs, and to whomsoever he choose to give, sell, or assign it;—yearly rent of 10s.; warranty.—Witnesses, Roger de Cristeshale, prior of Hatfeld Regis, Nicholas de Barentone, William de Rothing, Geoffrey Morel, Kts.; . . . Thomas de Chaucre, Stephen Bedel, and others. (Seal gone.)

(No. 13.) Hervey, prior of St. Mary of H. R. and the convent, to all.—They have granted to Walter, son of Edward de la Huse, in fee, for his homage and service, 1 acre of their land in Hatfeld, lying in Lemneslond, between the land of Aldiche, in pe Ho and the land which was of Geffry, of Longbridge. 1d. at Easter and 1d. at Michaelmas. Witnesses, Wido de Hatfeld, William son of Michael, Geoffrey son of Michael, Roger the clerk, Peter de Hisingfeld, Richard of Longbridge, Michael de Brunesho, Roger de la Huse, Philip de Masteing, Walter the monk, Roger Vic., Robert Gurel, Warin Cook, Gilbert Petitpas Elias janitor, &c. Seal gone.

(No. 15.) John de Feville, son of Hugh de Neville, grants to Robert the son of Henry, a messuage in Hale Hoo, and a piece of land in the knytelonde in the vill of Hallyberi Nevile. Witnesses, Sir Ralph de Enefeud, Hugh de Aurny, and others. Round black seal, 2½, a man on foot with sword and shield fighting with a lion rampant. Legend, . . . de Nevilla fili . . .

Robert de Brus, Earl of Carrik and Lord of Annandale, son of Lord Robert de Brus, confirms to Robert Taper and Milicent his wife, a messuage formerly of Walter, perpetual vicar of H. R., and some land, of the fee formerly of Adam of Longbridge, in H. R., and half a virgate, &c. of the fee formerly of Roger Riche. Witnesses, Roger de Christeshale, prior of Hatfeld, Sir Nicholas de Barintone, &c. Large fine seal; a saltire, and a lion on a chief, with legend.

(No. 113.) Peter Gurel, of Hatfeld Regis, for his soul, &c. gives in frankalmoine to God and the conventual church of St. Mary, of Hatfeld aforesaid, and the holy altar of the said church dedicated in honour of St. Nicholas, two shillings worth of yearly rent arising out of two messuages, to maintain and keep for ever burning before the said altar one wax candle (unum cereum) at the daily celebration of the mass of St. Mary. One of the messuages lies between his own messuage and the messuage of William Nobbe, and extends one way towards Margericroft, and the other way toward the King's highway, and is held by Peter son of the late Ralph Bloc, he paying for it the yearly rent of 12d.; and the other messuage lies between the messuage of William Wodehom and the messuage of the said Peter Bloc, and extends towards Margericroft and the said King's highway, and is held by William Nobbe at the yearly rent of 12d. All who disturb the gift, so that the light may not be for ever supported before the said altar, are to suffer the greater excommunication in the chapel. Witnesses, Peter de Heselungelond, James de Wende, William de Bolitune, Clement de la Huse, Michael son of Ralph, Warin de Ypre, and others. (Oval seal of green wax, 1½; a bird like a peacock; legend . . . Stefani Gur[el].)

(No. 153.) Ysabella de Brus, daughter of Earl David, for her soul, &c. grant to God and the church of St. Mary of Haffelde Regis and the monks there, in frankalmoine, all the services of Nicholas Bus and his heirs, to wit, in homages, reliefs, escheats, rents, suits, tallages, and all customs named and not named pertaining to her in which the said Nicholas to the King or to her is bound: to wit, for half a virgate of land with the appurtenances which Alan Bus, father of the said Nicholas, formerly held; and for certain land not hid (quidam terrā non hidatū), viz., that which is called terra filsegot; and for an acre of new purpresture with the appurtenances; and for the fourth part of a virgate of land with the appurtenances formerly of Stephen le Fraunceis. And also all services and customs which she or her heirs can claim out of the said lands. Witnesses, Dom. John de Gatedene, Dom. Peter de Tani, Dom. Robert de Beaumis, Dom. Nicolas de Barentone, Knights, Peter Marescall, Hugh clerk, then bailiff of Haffelde, Peter son of William, Michael son of Ralph, John de Westone, William son of Walter, and others. (Oval seal of green wax, 1½, a full length draped female figure standing on a carved bracket, all in high relief; legend, Sigillum Ysabel RUS.)

Lady Ysabella de Brus grants and confirms to Walter, son of Geoffrey de Manwedene, vicar of Haffelde Regis, in fee, a messuage held of Adam de Lungpunt in the said vill, as it is inclosed by hedges and ditches, lying between the messuage of the said Adam and the messuage of Roger Sirreve; to be holden of the said Adam and his heirs according to the charter thereof, which Walter has of Adam, without any exaction by her, saving to her and her heirs half a pound of cummin or 1d. at Christmas. No alienation is to be made to men in religion or to Jews. (Oval green seal; a bird; legend rubbed away.)

(No. 221.) Hervey, prior of Haffeld Regis and the convent, grant to their co-brother Roger Sereue, and his heirs and assigns or legatees, except a house of religion, certain parcels of their land in Haffeld: 1, that which Roger Parvus resigned to us, lying in the field below Dalenheia, between the demense of the King and the land of Roger the bedel: 2, that acre which Arnold, son of Lefwin of Rokheia, while in extremis, gave to us in frankalmoine, and lying in the field called Leuardine, one head abutting on the meadow called Alice-mad, and the other on the land which was of the said Arnold. We also give to him the homage of Walter, son of Nigel, and the homage of Goddard the plumber, and their rents and services, as William, son of Richard the bailiff our man, surrendered them to us for ever before setting out for Jerusalem at that Easter when we received the manor of Hatfeld from the King.—The reservation is only homage and service, and the yearly rent of 16d.—Witnesses, Roger de Hatfelde, and Constantine de Caneueles, chaplains, William son of Michael, Wido of Hatfelde, Geoffrey son of Michael, William Picot, Ralph Gurel, Ralph de Caneuele, William Lieuething, Robert Gurel, Michael de Hatfelde the clerk, Hillary de Hallingebure clerk, and many others.—(Seal gone.)

(No. 233.) A.D. 1313, 6 Edw. II., May 20, Hengnam (Hedingham) Castle.—Robert de Veer, Earl of Oxford, to all. There being a dispute between the prior and convent of H. R. and the rector of Great Caumpes, of his patronage on the one part, and the rector of the church of Horsethe of his patronage on the other, concerning certain tithes arising from lands of the fee of Westho, in the parish of Great Caumpes, which lands were of his lordship of Great Caumpes, and the parties submitted to his award by bonds to him in 20l. penalty:—He, on the information of men knowing the lands, whom he caused to perambulate them, finds that the tithes of the said lands have from time immemorial belonged to the said religious of Hatfeld and the rector of the church of Great Caumpes, according to the series of the said perambulation, which was made in form following:—The lord of the hall of Horsethe holds of the fee of Westho 3 pieces of land next the King's highway leading towards Berklawe, and a piece called the Bowaker, and a piece called the Hundaker, and a piece lying in the Dene, and a piece called Pykaker. (There are upwards of 20 other names some holding more than one piece, with their holdings. Among the names are William of the Hel and William of Harpaur. Among the names of the fields or pieces of land or ways are, Ydesfourakres, Stonfeld, the Boweaker, Ryneaker weye, Chalkfeld, le Redenfeld,

G. A.
LOWNDEN,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

Petit Halfaker, Tobeshrokfeld, Stakkedelonde.—Hubert the rector of Great Caumpes held by purchase a piece of land lying at Longediche.)—Of the aforesaid lands the said prior and the rector of Caumpes ought to have the tithes, but the rector of Horsethe nothing, because the said lands are of the fee of Westhe, which is of the lordship of Caumpes.—Therefore the Earl awards that the convent and the rector of Caumpes for the time being shall thenceforth have the tithes of the said lands, and forbids the rector of Horsethe to disturb them. The document was quadrupartite. This part has small seals: 1, the arms of the earl; 2, the seal of the prior; 3, a minute fragment; 4, lamb and flag; legend, Ecce Agnus dei. (18 inches by 9.)

Edward par la grace de dieu roi Dengleterre Seigneur Dirlande, et Duc Daquitaine a touz ceux qui cestes lettres verront saluz. Sachiez, qe come nous eoms entendu; qe Robert de Brus soit tenu; a Nichol de Barintone en quatre vint; et qatorse livres pur draps et autres choses dount le dit Nichol fit chevissance pur lui tanques il estoit pieca son seneschal de ses terres en Essex, des queux deniers le dit Nichol voudra aider nostre cher et foial Monsieur Thomas de Maundeville qui est pris et detenu; en prison par no; enemis descoco, en aide de sa raun;on, et les queux le dit Robert serra prest a paier a celui qui ensi tient en prison le dit Monsieur Thomas a quele heure que le dit Nichol lui envoit lettre daquittance de la dite somme, la quele aquittance il ne ose faire ne y envoyer saun; especial conge de nous. Nous a la requeste nostre chere soer la Contesse de Hereford avom; done conge au dit Nichol quil puisse la dite aquittance faire e envoyer au dit Robert saun; estre chalange de ce par nous ou par no; heirs ou par no; ministres quecumques, issint que meismes les deniers soient turnez en eide de la raun;on le dit Monsieur Thomas sicome dessus est dit. En tesmoignance de quen chose nous avoms fait faire cestes no; lettres patentes. Done sou; nostre prive seal a Euerwyke la quart jour de Septembre lan de nostre regne oytisme. (Red wax, circular seal, about 1½ inches in diameter, broken. The 3 lions passant remain, and of the legend, 5. Edw.)

8 Edw. II. Sept. 4, York. Edward, by the grace of God King of, &c., to all. Whereas we have understood that Robert de Brus is bound to Nicholas de Barintone in 9*l.* for cloths and other things which the said Nicholas supplied for him while he was his steward for his lands in Essex, with which money the said Nicholas wishes to help our dear and loyal Monsr. Thomas de Maundeville, who is taken and kept in prison by our enemies of Scotland, in aid of his ransom, and which money the said Robert will be ready to pay to his prisoner the said Thomas whenever Nicholas sends a letter of acquittance for the said sum, which acquittance he dares not give or send without our special leave.—We at the request of our dear sister, the Countess of Hereford, have given leave to the said Nicholas that he may make and send the said acquittance to the said Robert without being challenged therefor by us or our heirs, or any of our servants, so that the moneys be applied in aid of the ransom of the said Monsr. Thomas as aforesaid. In witness whereof we have made these our letters patent. Given under our privy seal. Round privy seal, in red wax, broken, a shield charged with 3 lions, passant guardant. Of the legend only the word Edward remains.

16. Edw. [II.], May 12, Cowyk.—Edward King of England, Lord of Ireland, and duke of Aquitaine, gives license to Robert Taper, of Hatfield, to grant 4 messuages, 90 acres of land, 10 meadows, 3 pastures, and 10*s.* of rent in H. R., and 3 acres of land and 5 of meadow in Caumpes Comititis, and Shodecaumpes, co. Cambridge, to the prior and convent of H. R.;—for the souls of Robert and all faithful, &c. Great seal.

Eight folio-sized leaves of a cartulary, written about the time of Edw. IV., beginning imperfectly with a charter granted in 27 Edw. I. by Robert de Brus to John . . . The other documents entered are,—Carta domini Humphridi de Bohun com. Hereford, et Essexic et domini de H. R., et Elizabeth comitisse sue de terra Bernardi prescripti. It is a license from the earl to John de Bledelawe to give a messuage and half a virgate of land and 3 acres of meadow in H. R. to Hatfield Priory, and to the prior and monks, that they may take them;—

Carta Johannis Bledelaw de eodem tenemento. John gives the messuage, &c. to the prior, &c.;—

A quit claim by Philip Busshe of H. R. to Roger, the prior and the convent of H. R. of all lands in Hatfield, and a penny rent, paid to him by Robert Taper, for a field called Les Stane, and a field called the Tandemad, with a conco Terofia? in Tunnemennema l. Witnesses Nicholas de Barentone, &c.;—

Edward, King of England, Lord of Ireland, and Duke of Aquitaine licenses the prior, &c., to take lands to the value of 10*l.* per ann. Tested at Macchynghalle 6 Aug., 9th year of his reign. —

16. Edw. II., May 12. The royal charter, of which the original is abstracted above.

17. Edw. II., May 26, Hatfield.—Robert Taper grants 2 messuages, 86 acres of land, 10 acres, and a rood of meadow in Hatfield . . . the messuage lies between the lands of John Scherreve and the way to Long Bridge, &c. (long boundaries). Witnesses, Nicholas de Baryngton, Thomas Gabroun, and John de la Lee, Kts.; Nicholas de Storteford, &c.;—

(John de Bohun's charter, an abstract of which is given below);—

Quit claim by Robert Taper of H. R. to the prior, &c. of the chaplain which the convent were to provide according to his grant to them; they granting him a special prayer, Quis Domine, for his wife Milicent, during his life, every day while singing mass, and after his death they are to omit it, and to sing Inclina Domine for him and Milicent for ever. The prior and convent grant him participation of the benefits of the order. Witnesses, Nicholas de Barentone, &c.

Then follows a paper terrier, 15th century, of Ryes and Lee. (5 leaves), pp. 10 and 10*b.* containing a rental and a custumal of Hatfield.

1324, 13 kal., June, Hatfield. The prior and convent of Hatfield Regis to Robert Taper, of Hatfield Regis.—Whereas Robert Taper has given lands and tenements, formerly of Philip Bushe, and many other goods for the repairs of their church, on account of which they thought him and Milicent, formerly his wife, worthy to be partakers of their benefits; and because Robert had with the King's license given to them all his tenement with the appurtenances in Hatfield, and in Nostreffend 7 acres of land and 7 acres of meadow, and a windmill; therefore, by the assent of the chapter, they grant that every day in St. Mary's mass, while Robert lives, there shall be said for the soul of the said Milicent this prayer, viz., Oremus Domine; and after Robert's death the prayer Inclina Domine for them jointly. Moreover, that for ever, in that order, the anniversary of each of them shall be celebrated as is used to be done for our patrons, together with a memoriation for them specially in masses of every co-brother; and for better remembrance, at the beginning of every Lent, this constitution shall in full chapter be specially recited and affectionately recommended; moreover, on each anniversary every co-brother of their house shall have 12*d.* from the prior's chamber. The greater excommunication is to be ipso facto incurred by any one breaking this agreement . . . (Green seal of the abbey, parts of legend broken off.)

19. Edw. 2., Sept. 20, Hatfield.—Robert Taper of Hatfield Regis to the Priory.—Whereas in the King's charter, licensing the priory to appropriate a certain tenement which he had in Hatfield, mention is made of their finding a chaplain to celebrate service every day in their conventual church for the souls of him and other faithful; and in his charter to them mention is made of the like; now he releases them from finding the chaplain. And the said religious men have by their writing granted a special prayer, viz., Quesumus Domine, during his life for the soul of Milicent his late wife, to be sung in the mass of St. Mary, and after his death that is to be omitted, and the prayer Inclina Domine is to be sung for the souls of him and his late wife jointly every day in the said mass for ever, together with participation of the spiritual benefits of their monastery for ever, and the anniversaries of Milicent and himself to be celebrated for ever, ut in agendis mortuorum. And Robert confesses himself satisfied with those things, and neither he nor his heirs will claim the finding of the chaplain aforesaid. Witnesses, Sir Nicholas de Barentone, Nicholas de Storteforde, Adam de Branketre, Robert de Branketre, William Alfred, Peter Coleman, Warin de Dunmawe, and others. (Small round seal, legend, S. Roberti Taper.)

4. Edw. [II.], 16 July, Westminster. The King has heard by request of Hugh le Despenser, justice of the forests this side of Trent, that it is not to the damage of him (the King) or his forest of Essex, or any other person if he license Guy Ferre to impark his wood of Eythrop Rothing; so he gives license.

11. Edw. II., Friday after Michaelmas, Westminster. W. Prior of Borden, and the canons say that they are bound to find for Sir Walram de Rocheford a canon to celebrate divine services at the altar of St. Mary in the

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDERS,
Esq.

church of Berdenc, for the souls of W. and Elizabeth his wife, and his ancestors for ever: in case of default Walram or his heirs, or the prior of Hatfield or his monks may denounce the default to the bishop of the diocese, and the bishop may compel the performance by ecclesiastical censures. Walram gives 5 marks and 10 solidates, and 1 lb. of cummin, of annual rent in the vill of Schobery Magna, Slanbregge, and Brenton. (Seal of the prior gone. Seal of Waleran, quarterly, sa and or a bend charged with three . . .)

1. Edw. III., Oct. 26, Plescy. John de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex and Constable of England. Whereas the prior and convent of H. R. have by license from the present King purchased from Robert Taper 4 houses, 90 acres of land, 10 acres of meadow and 3 acres of pasture, and 10s. of rent in H. R., of our fee, and without our license; we confirm it, and release our claim by virtue of the statute. Witnesses, Sir John de Bohun, clerk, Master Edward de Bohun, Master William de Bohun, Master Humphrey de Waledone, Master Nicholas de Barentone, Kts.; Nicholas de Storteford, and Adam de Branketre, and others. (Seal of arms of John de Bohun.)

(No. 238.) A.D. 1394, day of SS. Cosmas and Damian, Chapter House of Hatfield.—John the prior and the convent of H. R. appoint dom. William Dowale perpetual vicar of the parish church of Sylverlee, Master Henry de Irby notary public,* and Geoffrey Maryothe their parishioner, to be their attorneys jointly and severally in all causes and matters moved and to be moved concerning them or their affairs or their church of St. Sybil, Norwich diocese, before any judges, ordinaries, or their delegates or commissaries. (Long wordy powers.) Under the common seal. (Seal gone. On the right of the place where was the label for the common seal is written Henricus de Irby notarius publicus, and below is a small slit as though another seal was or was intended to be appended.)

(No. 274.) A.D. 1324. (So indorsed about 200 years ago.) A long narrow slip of parchment containing the following:—Pleas of the forest at Stratforde atte Bowe in the co. of Essex [defaced] a^o. r.r. [defaced] Adomar de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, William la Zouche of Asseby, and William de Cleydone, justices, to hear and terminate the said pleas [defaced] and of their claims and of the metes and bounds of the forest;—

The Hundred of } Nicholas de Baryngtone claims to Thelm and Dans } be woodward in fee in the forest of Hatfeld Regis, for which woodwardship he claims to take for his manor in H.R. housebote and heybote in the said forest, the second best mullet in the king's marsh in the said vill of Hatfeld; and this by antient tenure.
(The words are "quandam mulionem pissem in marisco
"domini Regis secundo meliorem in predicta villa de "Hatfeld.")

1338, Saturday in the feast of the assumption of the Virgin. H.R. in chapter.—Reciting that the monastery of H.R. was originally poorly endowed and had been for long time past, and still was heavily burdened, so that its property was not sufficient for the clothes and other necessities of the monks, who were driven by penury to leave the house and go begging among their friends, and so the religious services could not properly be performed,—Prior John of Colchester and the convent of the said monastery, considering that gifts to them and this monastery had lately increased so that the said defects could be remedied, decree for themselves and their successors, That the number of the monks of the monastery shall be increased by two, to be newly created and admitted to the monastery, so that in the said monastery there be always at least 14 monks with the prior, in the absence of sterility or other adverse fortune. Any increase of the number, according to the abilities of monastery is left to the discretion of succeeding monks. The church of Selverleye, Norwich diocese, lately appropriated to them and the monastery, is henceforth assigned for providing clothes and other necessities for the convent, and the administration of it is to be committed to the chamberlain of the monastery by the prior and convent, or the majority of the convent; and the chamberlain is out of the profits of the said church to supply yearly to each of the monks tacitly professed and in the priesthood, to the value of 20s. in clothing, shoes, and other personal necessities, to wit at the feasts of the Nativity and St. John the Baptist, or within the octaves thereof; and to the other monks tacitly professed, but not in the priesthood, he is to supply raiment and bodily adornment to the value of 10s. yearly by equal portions at the same time as above; and all other portions specified below chargeable on the chamberlain (except those for which other days are appointed, are to be paid on St. Michael's feast or within the octaves thereof. Moreover, the chamberlain shall furnish the sub-prior for his solace with spices to the value of 40d. yearly; and to the precentor for spices to be distributed in the convent and for other works touching his office, to the value of 40d. yearly. Also to the almoner for spices to be distributed in the convent, and for other petty things touching his office, to the value of 40d. yearly. Item, to the refecturer for spices to be distributed, and for wax candles, clothes, towels, and other necessities in his office, to the value of 5s. yearly. Item, to the firmerer of the monastery for the amusement and solace of sick monks to the value of half a mark of silver yearly out of the issues of the said church; but if there be no such monks he is to put by the said half mark and give an account of it, except it be applied to the improvement of his office under the direction of the sub-prior, chamberlain, and 2 of the elder brethren of the convent; proviso, that if by chance the sick monks should be numerous then the prior and convent may provide for their recreation and comfort. The firmerer shall take the tithe of forests and herbage grown in the curtilages and gardens of the parishioners of Hatfeld, and whether it be in silver, or in apples, pears, nuts, grapes, or other fruits tithable after their kind, we adjudge it henceforth to the firmerer and his office. The firmerer shall receive yearly from the products of gardens 40d. and half the oblations made in the chapel of the firmery on the day of St. Edmund the King, according to ancient custom, for the service of his office, and for labour and for spices to be distributed. Of the residue of the produce of the said gardens (one to be taken with the others) he shall account yearly at a fit time before the prior and two of the brethren, and shall deliver the residue to the prior for the common use of the house. Item, the celerer shall receive half a mark of silver yearly for labour and spices to be distributed in the convent, and he shall receive the oblations made in the conventual church on the days of Easter and the Nativity by the guests and servitors of the priory, and out of the said half mark he shall give the usual offerings to the familiars and servants of the altar of the said priory. And the said celerer shall be ready to make his account of all receipts and expenditures touching his office, to the prior and convent twice, or once at least in the year, at a suitable time, and any balance he shall at once hand over to the prior for the burdens and various expenses of the house. Item, we order that the sacrist do collect the small tithes of the parish of Hatfeld Regis, and the minute tithes of foreigners and customary tenants depasturing sheep in the forest, as to wit, in silver or told money, of sucking animals, goslings, wax, colts, and other things coming from newly cultivated land, according to the custom hitherto used, which tithes henceforth to him and his office, for all things in his office, we adjudge, except only the tithes above assigned to the firmerer. But the lesser tithes from the manor of Hatfeld, Bromsho, Coringhale, and Machyngge, which are called parcels of the said manor, we adjudge wholly to the prior and celerer as before. But from tithes of this kind assigned to the sacrist and his office, the sacrist shall take yearly to the value of 40d. yearly for spices to be distributed in the convent. Moreover, he shall take 4s. of the said tithes yearly to find and sustain two great wax candles burning at the elevation of Christ's body at the high altar on Sundays, solemn days, and feast days; and the said sacrist shall receive for the livery of the said chamberlain 6s. sterling yearly of the issues of the church of Selverleye, for finding and sustaining 2 wax candles in the chapel of St. Mary at the tomb therein of the said prior, which 2 wax candles shall burn in pairs in the mass of St. Mary to the honour of the said virgin, and for the health and the soul of the said prior after his decease. Moreover, the said sacrist shall deliver to the said prior yearly 4 lbs. of wax within the octaves of St. Michael, for the guests and chamber of the said prior. After all these and all other works incumbent on his office, he is to make account of the residue of what comes from the said church and tithes of the vill yearly at a suitable time before the prior and two of the brethren of the convent, and to deliver the said residue to the prior for the defence and preservation of the common goods of the said house and church. So the said chamberlain shall bear all things ordinary and extraordinary incumbent on the said church out of the issues of the said church, and of the residue of the said

G. A.
LOWNDERS,
Esq.

* The words in italics have been substituted for Dicane de Eordham.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

issues he is to give an account yearly to the prior and convent, and deliver the residue to the prior for the reparation and construction of the manse and chancel of the said church of Selverleye, which burden the said prior assumes gratis to himself and his successors. But the prior shall bear the burden of first-fruits to be paid to the Bishop of Norwich in his time out of the other common goods of the monastery, if the residue of the issues of the said church over the payments below assigned to satisfy the first-fruits to the said bishop shall not suffice. But the sub-prior and chamberlain of the monastery with the consent of the prior and convent already obtained may henceforth have their seal to use for committing the ward and administration of the said church, and for making indentures and acquittances regarding the same in the names of themselves and the whole convent, as they shall think fit. And not to neglect spiritual benefits for the benefactors; hence we the said prior and convent decree that henceforth daily for ever there be celebrated one peculiar mass in the monastery by one of our monks for the soul of dom. John de Hothum, late Bishop of Ely, who appropriated to our monastery the church of Great Abitone, Ely diocese; and for the health of dom. John de Colchester, our prior, who with curious and laborious care has in his time got much goods for us and our monastery; also for his soul when he shall die; so that the said monk in the said mass for the said bishop say the collect proper for him Deus qui inter apostolicos sacerdotes, and, for the said prior, say another collect appropriate to his life and death, viz., that collect Deus qui iustificas impium dum vivit, and, when he shall die, this prayer, Concede quæsumus omnipotens Deus anime famuli tui sacerdotis N. felicitatis eterne consortium shall be perpetually made for him. And that the junior monk of the monastery last admitted and created, tacitly professed, and in the priesthood, be deputed to the celebration of the said mass; provided that if the said monk be hindered by illness or other lawful cause, admitted as good by the prior and convent, another monk of the said house next senior to him shall be immediately deputed by the prior and convent to the celebration of the said mass, so that the said benefactors may in nowise be defrauded of the said benefit or obsequy, it shall be lawful for the said monk on Sundays and feast days, the order of celebration being observed, to celebrate the said mass “de festo vel istoria,” but on other ferial days he shall celebrate from the office for the dead for the souls of the said John and John. And in the mean time it shall be lawful for the monks of the convent to take the burden of the brother so ordered and change it, and at the same time in turns change the masses for one day or one week, if he request it; but his office enjoined him, when he is disposed to celebrate at the peril of his soul he shall faithfully solicit to fulfil. Moreover, the said prior and convent shall solemnly celebrate in the choir yearly for ever on the day of the anniversary of the said bishop solemn mass and exequies of the dead, viz., Placebo and Dirige with note and with bell tolling, and by the almoner shall find 13 poor for the sake of his soul, giving to each one white loaf and half a gallon of ale, and pottage to be taken from the cellarer, and one silver penny to be received from the chamberlain, and distributed by the almoner to the said poor. Likewise, and in the same way, they shall celebrate, and feed as many poor, and observe and do all other obsequies in form aforesaid for the soul of the said prior on the day of his anniversary when it shall happen after his death. We assign one quarter of wheat to be distributed by the almoner on the said anniversary in bread to the poor for the souls of the said prior, and of the deceased monks of the monastery, and to be received from the chamberlain from the issues of the said church of Selverleye, which said chamberlain shall on the said day of anniversary of the prior, distribute spices and other pittance to the value of half a mark of silver among the monks of the monastery for the recreation of labour, out of the issues of the said church; but lest in time to come the spiritual benefits to the priors of the monastery dead and to die may be forgotten, we think fit here to set them down:—Every prior of our monastery after his death, from the day of his death until that day in the next year, shall have daily one peculiar mass, to be celebrated by one of the monks in our monastery, and the recommendation of one prayer in common with the benefit of absolution, and procession to the tomb of the said prior, then deceased, for 30 days. Moreover, he shall have his full corrody in meat and drink as if alive for one year, which corrody the said almoner on peril of his soul shall give to miserable, weak, and most indigent (persons). And he shall have yearly his obit solemnly held in the convent as if he were one of our founders, with bells ringing and exequies for the dead for ever. Moreover, we decree that henceforth every monk in our monastery, besides the livery which our dead monks after their death for 30 days next are wont to have, shall have, from the end of those 30 days to the end of one year from his death, every day one white loaf and half a gallon of best ale, to be received from the cellarer, to be distributed to the poor by the hands of the almoner, for his soul, so, to wit, that the said almoner under threat of divine judgment, and at the peril of his soul, be bound faithfully to dispense the said alms to the poor and most indigent without fraud and sinister favour, and that besides the 30 masses which the said dead have been used to have celebrated by our monks, each monk of our convent shall be bound to celebrate 30 masses newly granted for the soul of his dead brother within the said year our younger monk only excepted, who by our constitution aforesaid is bound to the celebration of another peculiar mass. Then the almoner shall receive henceforth by assignment from the prior and convent, in augmentation of alms, on every Thursday, from the annunciation of the virgin to the gule of August, one basket of mistelin corn from the windmills, which corn with the other alms heretofore imposed on his office he shall distribute in bread to the poor for the souls of the founders, monks, and benefactors of the monastery, and of all faithful dead. And all and each of the convent have faithfully promised to the said prior, and for themselves and their successors have granted that in all exequies of the dead, which, by the hitherto approved custom of the monastery, shall be celebrated for their deceased founders in the choir, they will express the name of the said prior in this prayer, Miserere quæsumus domine anime famuli tui Johannis, &c. after his death. And we, the prior and convent, will and command that these constitutions and ordinances always remain in the custody of the sub-prior, chamberlain, and two of the seniors of the convent, and that once a year in the octaves of St. John the Baptist they be read in chapter before the whole convent, so that our successors may not thro’ ignorance excuse their nonobservance of them. And on the day of reading, the chamberlain shall give 12d. to the refectorer for pittance of wine for the said monks and brethren. Lastly, the chamberlain shall take out of the issues of the said church, as well in spices as in other small necessities to the value of 2s. yearly, for his labour in his said office.—The prior and convent bind themselves and their successors to the faithful observance of this constitution and request the bishop of London that he will strengthen and confirm it with some ecclesiastical censures binding them jointly and severally, and all their successors; they submitting themselves and their successors in this respect to the jurisdiction of him and his successors and all other their superiors as well secular as regular prelates. By these constitutions and ordinances they do not intend to derogate in any way their customs lawfully used in the monastery. The prior puts his seal, the convent put their common seal, together with the seal of the sub-prior and chamberlain deputed to the affairs of the church of Selverleye. And for greater and perpetual security, Dom. John de Veer, Earl of Oxford, patron of the monastery at their request puts his seal. One part is to remain with the prior, and the other part with the sub-prior, chamberlain, and others as aforesaid.—There are four labels. The first seal is gone, fragments of the 2d (the common seal) remains, fragments of the 3d and 4th remain.

15 Edw. IV., April 3. Indenture tripartite between William Brondone, prior of the priory of St. Mary of H. R., and the convent and John Susane, vicar of the parish church of H. R. of the one part, and Master William Pykenham, clerk, Walter Writell, esq., John Cornishe, esq., Andrew Priour, gent., John House, William Tanffeld, John Wode, Thomas Salvyfford, Richard Havom, John Londenyshe the elder, John Water, and Richard Clerke of the other part. After reciting that Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury, Henry Bouchier, Earl of Essex, and Clement Spice, esq., at the request of Walter Percyvale, esq., and Blanche, his wife had enfeoffed the said William Pykenham, &c., and Thomas Baryngton, Robert Hamburg, Robert Bigwoode, and Roger Payne, deceased, of all their lands and tenements called Luncastres in H. R., the said feoffees declare to the said prior and vicar that they hold the said lands, &c. for the perpetual remembrance and special recommendation of the souls of the said Walter Percyvale, and Blanche his wife, and of all the brothers and sisters, surviving and dead, of the gild of

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

the most glorious name of Jesus in H. R., in the pious prayers of the parishioners in the parish church of H. R., viz., that they and their heirs and assigns, or 6 or 4 of them yearly, for ever, once in the year for the purpose aforesaid, meet in the said parish church on the morrow after the feast (convivium) of the gild of Jesus, and then and there elect from themselves one collector or two at their discretion, who shall let at the best rents and collect the rents of the said lands, &c., and in the presence of the other feoffees or 6 or 4 of them and the chaplain of the gild yearly on the said morrow in the said church shall make an account of the receipts. The collector to have the yearly sum of 12*d*. The feoffees, their heirs and assigns, will elect a chaplain to celebrate every day for ever cum dispositus fuerit, Parasceve excepted, one mass in the said parish church at the altar of St. John the Baptist between or before 7 and 8 in the morning for the souls of the said Walter and Blanche, and of the brothers and sisters of the gild with these prayers, viz., Inclina domine aurem tuam, &c., and Deum qui caritatis dona per gratiam dieti spiritus, &c. Proviso, that if the rents be not enough to pay the chaplain the deficiency is to be made up out of the gild, so that the chaplain may have yearly for ever ten marks clear, and he is to pray solemnly and publicly every Friday before for the souls of the said Walter and Blanche. In every week in the year in which the chaplain is not bound by his ordinal to say exequies, in the same week and in every week in which he is not bound to say exequies, octaves excepted, he may say exequies once in whatever day of the week he pleases, and the mass of requiem in the morrow for the souls of Walter and Blanche, and of the said brothers and sisters, and so from year to year and week to week for ever. And the chaplain is to attend in the choir of the said parish church every feast day for ever. The chaplain may have a holiday of 3 weeks in succession or at different times to be with his friends and acquaintance, but nevertheless providing a sufficient deputy to say the said mass in every absence. The chaplain is not to be dismissed without reasonable cause. When 8 of the feoffees are dead the other 4 are within a month to choose 9 honest parishioners of Hatfield, and the 2 youngest of the 4 is to release to the remaining 4th all their estate in the lands, and he is immediately to enfeof the 9 and the 3 for the purposes aforesaid. New elected feoffees are to make engagements to perform their duties. Wm. Pykenham, &c. promise for themselves, their heirs and assigns, that on any default in election of new feoffees, or in performance of any duty here laid down for half a year, and non-amendment for one month, they will pay to the prior and convent 20*s*. by way of penalty, and the latter may distrein on the land for it. Oval seal of the priory, top and bottom broken away, and a small round seal probably of the vicar.

15. Edw. IV., April 3. Another part of the same indenture with the seal of the priory and the 13 seals of the other parties still pendent.

1434, 18 Hen. VI. Sunday next, after feast of the Purification of the B. V. M. Hatfield Regis.—Brother Edmund, Prior of the church of St. Mary of Hatfield Regis, and the convent thereof, considering the devotion of brother John Derham, late prior of the same church, and desiring the grace and glory of his body and soul, they concede to him as well in life as in death, and to the souls of his relations (parentum), Richard Derham, and Isabel his wife, late of Wyrmegey, a special participation for ever of all the benefits of their church, as in masses, matins, hours and prayers, fastings, vigils, and corporal disciplines, together with hospitalities and alms-givings, and all other good things done by them, for the indulgence and remission of their sins and the relief of the souls of them, and the souls of those from whom they have received any good things without merit and unjustly to the augmentation of eternal welfare. And because the said John gave 20*l*. to the honour of God and relief of their house and convent, besides other goods to the use of the prior and convent, to be kept in a box (pixide) on the special terms that the prior for the time being can borrow and take 10*l*. if need be for the relief of his house, for one year or less, but not more than one year, and always once in every year to be replaced, and so on totiens quotiens; and that the convent for the time being may out of the other 10*l*. borrow as much as each of them shall need, until the money assigned for their clothing shall be raised and paid to them, and for one year if need be; provided that always once in the year the same sum, 10*l*. be replaced, and so on yearly for ever. For this cause, it is by the whole chapter ordained that the anniversaries of the said Richard and Isabel shall be celebrated in the same manner as those of patrons and former priors, together with a memorial for them and their son John in the masses of all the said brethren, and 12 whole loaves and 6 gallons of the best ale shall be distributed yearly in alms to six of the most needy poor, viz., 6 loaves and 3 gallons of ale on each of the said anniversaries for ever. They further grant that every day as well in the greater conventual masses as in the masses of St. Mary and of the Holy Cross, the prayer of the Holy Ghost, viz. Deus qui corda fidelium, &c., with a certain addition at the end of the said prayer with the principal prayer of masses sub uno Per Dominum for the good estate of the said brother John while alive, and for her soul when she dies, and for the souls of the said Richard and Isabel, &c. every day at the said masses for ever, and the anniversary of the said John shall be celebrated on the anniversaries of the said Richard and Isabel jointly with their anniversaries for ever. They thereby bind themselves that if they fail in celebrating the anniversaries, or omit the collect of the Holy Ghost with the addition aforesaid at the end thereof, or divert the 20*l*. to uses other than as aforesaid, then it shall be lawful for the said Richard and John and their assigns to recover the 20*l*. from the prior and convent, &c., and to that they bind themselves by that deed. Sealed with the common seal of prior and convent, and the seals of the said brother John Derham, Richard Togood, and John Drake of Wyrmegey, executors of the Testament of the said Richard Derham. (On one label is a seal of an eagle's head erased, holding in its beak (a trefoil?) On the other label are 2 seals, viz., 1, a cross moline charged with a pheon, 2, a well-cut seal of an unwinged dragon with very long neck, its open mouth transfixing by a sword behind what seems like a two-branched candlestick, but what may perhaps be intended for a J., the whole, perhaps, meaning J. Drake. The deed is indented, and the counterpart had the priory seal.)

10 Henry 8. Counterpart of articles of agreement between Edward Duke of Buckingham, and Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, for a marriage between Lord Henry Stafford, the Duke's son, and Lady Ursula, the Countess's daughter, before Septuagesima next. The Countess is to pay for all apparel of her daughter, and Lord Stafford is to pay all other expenses of the marriage. The Duke is, within one year after the marriage to convey lands of the yearly value of 500 marks to the use of the Duke for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to Ursula, but if Henry die, living the Duke and Ursula, then after Henry's death, to the use of Ursula for life. Within the same time the Duke is to convey other lands of yearly value of 250 marks to the use of the Duke for life, with remainder to Ursula for life; which lands, of the value of 500*l*. yearly, are to be in bar of jointure and dower. The Countess is to pay to the Duke, his executors or assigns 3,000 marks, by instalments of 200 on the marriage, &c. &c. &c., and the last 250 on the Nativity 1524. If the Countess get back certain lands from the King she will pay an additional 1,000 marks, if she get back part only, then she will apportion of the 1,000 marks, and she will give security for the payment.

2 Edw. VI., Aug. 17. Copy (17th century) of letters patent granting the Chantry of Hatfield Regis to Walter Farre, and Ralph Standishe (6 brief sheets).

1 Eliz., June 12. Commission to the justices of peace to enquire if certain lands (described), part of the possessions of Hatfield priory had been since the suppression subtracted and concealed by Thomas Noke of Hatfield, gentleman, and his assigns or not—by a jury, and to make their return.

ROLLS.

15 Hen. III. Three small membranes sewn together, each on the average about a foot long, but unfortunately nearly half of each (longitudinally) has been cut off. One of them is endorsed "Vetera attachamenta venatoris de ultimis placitis." The entries relate to unlawful takings of deer in Waltham forest and the attachments thereon.

Temp., Hen. III. A small roll about 2 feet long, headed "Balliva Juliane Hurel in Havering de purpresturis." One side contains presentments of purpresturis in Havering Wood.—The other side contains "Balliva Ricardi de Totham; de bosco arso, qui habent canes currentes," and "Balliva Henrici de Nutelege, de canibus currentibus." The first contains 17 names (among them are the Bishop of London, the Earl of Oxford, and the Abbot of Battle), but 12 are struck thro' with the pen. The second contains 5 names, two of which are likewise so deleted.—"Balliva Gaufridi de Cumtone in Herlane de purpresturis." (4en-

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

tries).—"Balliva Gaufridi de Cumtone in Dumaawe et de Herlaue de viridi." There are a few entries of proceedings for offences against forest laws.

Temp., Hen. III. One membrane about 1 foot long. "In Balliva Hamonis Peverel; attachiamenta de viridi post ultima placita." There are 19 entries, of which two are deleted by the pen.

22 & 24 Hen. III. A roll about 10 inches long containing presentments by the bailiff of Kingswood and others of poachers, and the proceedings thereon.

25 & 26 Hen. III. Indorsed "Attachiamenta venationis post ultimata placita." Presentments of forest matters and offences. The first is how Clement Godcop going to Hatfield Regis saw a doe lying dead in a certain woman's field, and immediately informed Geoffrey de Barentone, the forester, who sent to make inquisition in 4 vills, viz., Hatfield Regis, Hallingbury of John de Burgh, Hallingbury of Neville, and Kanuoles of the Countess. Then come the names of the manucaptors for the 4 vills; then the names of the 4 next neighbours, and the names of the persons who were pledges for them, to appear before the justices at the next pleas of the forest; and the names of the pledges for Godcop the finder; and the pledges for the woman in whose field the doe was found.

Temp., Hen. III. A roll about 15 inches long, containing numerous presentments of offences in the forest.

A parchment nearly 2 feet long and about 5 inches wide. It is clearly the 2nd membrane of a roll of 3 or more membranes. At the head is the letter B, and at the bottom edge is the letter C.—It contains 24 entries (Temp. Edw. I.) of deer taken on various days in the forest of Hyneholt, the wood of Waltham, the wood of Nastoke St. Paul, the wood of Theydon of William de Bosco (Theydon Bois), the wood of Typedene, and the wood of Luketone, the King's wood of Havering, and the forest of Caysham. The takers were Alan de Nevill (with the King's dogs), William de Raleigh, H. Earl of Oxford, William May the King's huntsman, Stephen Lungspée, William de Raleigh, John le Gyu, Adam Grimbaud, for the use of Peter Grimbaud, the Earl of Lincoln, the Bishop of Carlisle, Reginald Ruffus, Richard de Mucegros, Walter de Raleigh, Richard le Gros, Alan de Nevill, for the Queen's use.—The 17th entry is for St. Stephen's day in the 23rd year.

26 Edw. I. Custumal of the manor of Wykes (in French), a roll about 3 feet long. This has been printed in the Journal of the Essex Archaeological Association.

COURT ROLLS.

33, 34, and 35 Hen. III. Manors of Rammsdanes, Hatfeud, Chigwelle, Writele, and Trippelawe.—N. de Barentone was the lord. There are two membranes sewed together about 2½ feet long. The writing is small and the entries many, but I do not find any transfer of land. As court rolls of this early date are rare, a few notes are made from them.

A woman came to the court and "aculpavit" a man who took from her two sickles and one cordam de cilice which she had bought of the lord's reeve, to her damage of half a mark and "in pudore" 5s., and she produces witnesses who were not named. The man denied word for word against the woman and her witnesses. So the court adjudged that he should wage law to the said woman; the woman appealed against the judgment and said there ought to be no law because the pledges were present. Robert answered that he took the pledges not for the cilex but nuts bought in the lord's wood.—In the following year the man sued the woman, for that 3 years previously her daughter and others of her family gathered the nuts which he had bought from the lord. Matilda defended sufficiently. Law was waged and pledges for the law were given. It seems from the "quieta" in the margin that her defense succeeded.

Reginald, a new man, is in mercy because he killed his pigs before he gave pannage.

An inquest was had to find out where Roger le Blund was residing, and it was found that he had land and a wife at Virlyd.

A man is to pay a fine of 20s. for leave for his daughter to marry. He is to pay it by three instalments, and his pledges for the payments are the whole homage of Clusewelle.

A man was amerced because he sold all before it had been tried by the tryers (temptata de temptatoribus). The usual word is "tasted."

35 Edw. I. Court with leet of the manor of Trippelowe, a membrane about 1 foot long.—The jurors present that one man had sold part of his land to two other men, who were thereupon ordered to be distrained to come to the next court to shew how.

All the jurors were amerced because they chose John le Marchal, who "intaglatu fuit" in the previous court. Each was pledged for the others.

In this roll the ale-tasters are mentioned.

A man was amerced because he put his son to school (ad studium) without the lord's license.

8 & 9 Edw. II. Court rolls of the manor of Hatfield Regis. Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex. 5 membranes, each nearly a yard long, mostly written on both sides. Four of them are occupied by the 8th year. The 4th skin has the View of Frankpledge. Parts of the right hand margins are rat-caten.

9 Hen. VI. Estreats of Hatfield Court. A roll about 2½ long. The entries are numerous of precepts to distrain persons for not answering the suits of plaintiffs.

6 Hen. VII. Four small membranes containing estreats of Hatfield Court.

6 Hen. VII. Two membranes of estreats of the General Court of Jasper, Duke of Bedford and Earl of Pembroke in right of his wife, Katherine, Duchess of Buckingham.

3 Hen. VIII. One membrane of estreats of the same Court (the top cut off).

COMPOTI.

23 Ed. [I.] The account of Hugh Ruddog and Richard atte Ponde . . . the son of Roger for the manor of Claveringe to the use of Lord . . . E. 23 and Wednesday next after the feast of St. Ed. . . . (A membrane about 15 inches long; nearly half longitudinally has been cut off.) The back of this membrane, and also two small membranes sewn to it, containing portions of a (perhaps the same) compotus have been used for astronomical notes and computations of the 14th century. One of them computes the winter solstice for the year 1324. Another is "Anno Domini 1324, sicli solaris 17, sicli lunaris 14. Et sciendum quod sunt inter quamlibet conjunctionem solis et lune 29 dies, 12 hore, 44 minuti, 3 minuti, 21 minuti. Et sciendum quod 23 die Aprilis hora 23 minuti, 43 minuti, 26 minuti, 20 completis fuit conjunctio solis et lune. Quibus 29 diebus 12 horis cum 44 minutis, 3 minutis, 20 minutis additis Et tot diebus quot sunt in mense subtractis residuum ostendit conjunctionem subsequenter. Et sic usque infinitum ut patet inferius. Et si contingat quid post subtractionem dier, mens ut predictum est nullus dies remaneat tunc adduntur 29 dies. Et fiat conjunctio vera."

Menses.	dies.	hore.	1 minuti.	2 minuti.	3 minuti.
Maïus . . .	23	12	52	24	41
Junius . . .	22	1	16	33
Julius . . .	21	14		56	26
Augustus . . .	20	2	14	39	40
Septembre . . .	18	15	28	43
Octobr. . .	18	4	12	46	20
Novemb. . .	16	16	56	49	49
Decemb. . .	16	5	18	53
Januar. . .	14	18	22	56	29
Februar. . .	13	7	16	39	49
Martius . . .	14	29	1	3

On another membrane. "Notandum quod sunt inter quamlibet conjunctionem solis et lune, 29 dies, 12 hore 44 minuti, 3 minuti, 21 minuti. Et sic deficient in qualibet conjunctione 30 diebus 11 hore 15 minuti,

56 minuti, 49 minuti. Et sic est tricesima pars

22 minuti, 31 minuti, 53 minuti, 29 minuti. Et sic est medium tricesime partis 11 minuti, 15 minuti,

56 minuti, 49 minuti. Et sic deficient in qualibet signo de duobus diebus et dimidio 56 minuti, 19 minuti, 43 minuti, et 20 minuti. —Sunt inter quamlibet conjunctionem solis et lune 708 hore, 44

minuti, 3 minuti, 20 minuti. Defic in qualibet die in anno 21 hore 15 minuti, 56 minuti, 40 minuti."

* The words in italics have been struck through with the pen.

On another membrane.

Signa.	Grades. Hore	Primi Minuti.	Secundi Minuti.	Terti Minuti.	Quarti Minuti.
Aries	—	—	—	—	—
Taurus	—	—	56	19	43
Gemini	—	1	52	39	26
Cancer	—	2	48	59	10
Leo	—	3	45	18	53
Virgo	—	4	41	38	36
Libra	—	5	37	58	20
Scorpio	—	6	34	18	3
Sagittarius	—	7	30	37	46
Capricornus	—	8	26	57	30
Aquarius	—	9	23	17	13
Pisces	—	10	19	36	56
	—	11	15	56	40

On the back of the same membrane.

Deficiunt in qualibet conjunctione de 3 diebus 11 hore,

15 minuti. 56 minuti. 40 minuti. Et sic est tricesima pars 22 minuti, 31 minuti, 40 minuti, 10 minuti.

Notandum quod annus solaris continet 365 dies et 6 horas. Cursus vero solaris continet spacium quam octo momentis que constituunt quintam partem unius hore et in quinquennio constituunt unam horam et in 120 annis constituunt unum diem. Ita moventur a loco suo solstitia equinoctia et omnes festivitates in 120 annis per unum diem. Verbi gratia, in die in qua natus est dominus erat solstitium yemale. Fluxis igitur 120 annis ab illa die erit solstitium yemale in vigilia pasche domini. Effluxis igitur 324 annis modo 14^o die mensis Decembris hora 23 momento 8 completo anno domini 1324, erit solstitium yemale. Et sciendum quod 12 signa sunt in Zodiaco per que transit sol. In quolibet autem illorum sol moratur per 30 dies 10 horas et dimidium horam. Duodecies 10 hore construunt 5 dies et duodecies dimidie hore construunt sex horas. Et ita ex totali multiplicatione habentur 365 dies et 6 hore.

1 Edw. III. Computus of W. de M., serjeant of the priory of Hatfield Regis, Buschus, and La Donn, from Michaelmas, 20 Ed. II. to Michaelmas 1 Edw. III. (a beautifully written roll about 4½ feet long and 6½ inches wide).

His receipts were 200*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* His expenses were 33*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.*

The issues of the Grange are entered on the dorse of the roll; also an account of the store.

The priory had 8 churches of the following yearly values: Hatfield, 172*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.*; C. 30*l.*; Manewode, 22*l.*; Thundersle, 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; Branstede Helyon, 26*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.*; Nostrefeld; Habytone, 22*l.*; Selverleye, 22*l.*—Total 317*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.*

4 Edw. IV., Jan 15. Pleas at Brendewode, in the iter of Henry Bourghier, Earl of Essex, &c., justice itinerant of all the forests, parks, chases, and warrens of the King this side of Trent and Mactre in his iter, held there on Tuesday the 15 of Jan. 4 Edw. IV. A roll 5 feet long, containing a copy of the record of the proceedings in a quo warranto against the Earl of Oxford, to show by what right he claimed to be keeper of the whole forest of Essex, and to have a deputy or a mounted forester and 3 foot foresters, called yeomen-foresters, and to have in the said forest waifs and strays, and wood called deer-falled wood or browsing wood within the said forest, and the amercements of the swaynmotes and other courts called wood courts, held in the forest according to the assize of the forest; to hold to him for his own use, except for hunting and the timber of oaks, and to have of every cover and hedgerow sold 1*d.* in the shilling, at the sale of every great wood within the forest sold the second best oak, and also from the buyer and seller one bow catapult, and one penny from every shilling arising from the sale of any such wood. The Earl appeared by Henry Robson, his attorney, and said that the forest of Essex was an ancient forest from time immemorial, and he claimed all the above things, and that Thomas de Clare, late keeper of the said forest, died seised in fee of the keepership, and that keepership of the manor of Havering atte Boure, and of its appurtenances, and of the meadow of the said manor always belonged to the keeper of the said forest, and that Thomas de Clare was seised in fee of the said keepership of the said manor and meadow, as pertaining to the office of keeper of the said forest; after whose death the said keepership descended to the present Earl, as cousin and heir of the said Thomas, viz., as son of John, son of Richard, son of Alberic, son of Matilda, daughter of Margaret, sister of Richard, son of Gilbert, son of the said Thomas; and that he and his predecessors had enjoyed the offices and rights from time immemorial without disturbance. Robert Plummer, the King's attorney, denied it all, and said that the appointment of the keeper and deputy and other servants had always belonged to the now King and his progenitors, absque hoc, that the said Thomas died seised in fee thereof, &c. &c.—They both went to the country: and the jurors, viz., William Hauelok, John Brownchynne, John Hauelok, Roger Burgeys, Thomas Stucfold, Thomas Prynne, William Shonk, Richard Waryn, Thomas Mannyng the elder, Thomas Mannyng the younger, Robert Tryng, and Peter Fulham, regards of the said forest, and John Boyce, Richard Sewale, William Dalton, and John Vertu, verderers there, found for the Earl. So the Court adjudged that he should enjoy in peace.

14th century. A roll of the latter part of the 14th century, about 2½ feet long, containing the names of persons in Brunsho, Wodleyshende wood, Bussishende, Brodestrate, and Nedham Green, who for their tenements paid tithes of eggs at Lent, and the numbers of the eggs. The number of eggs paid by the several persons varied from 1 to 42.

21 Hen. VI. Roll of the rents of the priory of Hatfield Regis, A.D. 1442. A roll 5 feet long, containing the names of the tenants and the amounts of their rents in Bykemere Strete, Brodestrete, Mesebrook, another part of Mesebrook, the market-place, another part of it, Langbregstrete,, Bussishende, Stanstrete, Hatfield Hethe, Brundehende, Nedeham grene, Manewode hende. The total was a little more than 16*l.* Also there are rents of capons, rents of cummin, day's works in autumn. (There are a few other rents entered on the dorse.)

28 Hen. VI. Roll of renewed rents in Keres in Rothyng Aythrop; about 16 inches long. The abbat of Tilley and 23 other persons were tenants. Total rent, 88*s.* 7*d.*

c. Hen. VIII. Extent of the manor of Barrenton's in Hatfeld (the property of John Barrenton, son and heir of Sir Nicholas Barrenton), and of all the works and customs of the tenants (about 2 feet long and 14 inches wide). There were 18 tenants.

21 Hen. VIII. Rental of Barwarden Hall made from old rentals and Court rolls by George Waldegrave, steward to Sir Henry Perker, Kt. (A roll about 20 inches long.)

4 Edw. VI. A roll of rents of the tenants (free, customary, by indenture and at will) of the Manor of King's Hatfield, renewed at the Court with the leet there holden before Raynold Hollingworth, gent., surveyor thereof, by the oath of the tenants there present. (A roll of parchment 9 feet long by 6 inches wide.) There were 118 holdings at small rents.

1625. Inventory of the goods and chattels of John Whitegyfte, late of Clavering, gent., deceased, appraised by 4 persons named. (A roll of parchment about 30 inches long and 6 inches wide.) Ordinary furniture and household utensils and bedding, 2 horses, calves, pigs, &c. Armour in the Hall, 5*l.* Apparel, 30*l.* Plate, 30*l.* Ready money, 20*l.*—The total was 377*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

Temp. Hen. III. or Edw. I. Roll of the customs of the vill of Hatfield Regis, (about seven feet long and 8 inches wide). Each entry contains the amount of rent and the particular agricultural services and suits of Court. In most cases the name of the tenant is given, but in some instances the name of the then owner was not ascertained, and the name of the late owner is given. The phrase generally is that the tenant defendit terram suam pro 1 virgata terre (or ½ or ¼ virgate.)

The entries cover the front and 4/5ths of the back of the roll. One of the tenants was Dominus Nicholas de Barrentone.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

Those who did petty services (minute services) are in one group. After these come declarations of customs. Among them are the following:—

The lord of the vill, whoever he may be, ought to have a horse from every one who holds in chief of the lord of the free virgates of land, if they die in seisin, viz., from the land of Wido de Hatfeld, &c. (eleven others named). And it is to be known that he shall have with the horse all its harness as the tenant rode it (sicut equitat) and sword.—All tenants of the lord ought to give vedfee when they marry their daughters; if within the vill 16*d.*; if out of it 32*d.*—All men of the vill, except Nicholas de Barentone and his men, tenant and tenants of the prior, who hold by dowry of the church, who have pigs within the vill for one hour between Michaelmas day and St. Martin's day, ought to give pannage, to wit, &c. &c.—All tenants of the lord ought to give tallage in common (communiter) as they were wont to give in the times of Kings (tempore regum), to wit, by precept of the King, when the King commonly receives tallage from his demesnes through England.—All widows if they want to have their freebench ought to give 10*s.*

After these are lists of 12 persons who paid "Wode-selver," and 24 persons who paid "rents of Essart."

The tenancies, besides those held by petty services, are about 100.

Temp. Edw. II. or Edw. III. Extent of the manors of Hatfeld and Bronesho. (A roll about 10 inches wide.) The general description of Hatfeld occupies 15 lines, and that of Bronesho 10 lines. A piece of the right-hand side of the head of the roll containing the date (which from John de Bohun being named as then Earl of Hereford, must be 1321–1335) is torn away. After the general descriptions are lists of the tenancies under the following heads: Libere tenentes, Cotmanni, Dimid-Cotmanni, Akermannum, Porcarii, Formannum, tenentes in Mercato, 32 in number, and stall-holders 19 in number. The last entry on the roll is of the reliefs paid by the different kinds of tenants.

A.D. 1665. A paper roll 6 feet long and nearly 1 foot wide. (The left-hand side of the top of the roll is torn away; consequently the first 8 lines are imperfect.) The contents purport to be a history of Freemasonry. Begins, (imperfectly), and framer of heaven and earth, and of all things in them is that he would . . .

The author notices the 7 liberal sciences, of which geometry is the chief: says that "of all the manual crafts masonry hath the most notability, and the most part of this science geometrie, as it is noted" and said as well in the histories and in the Bible, in "the matter of stories and in Plicorinond, that is, a story proved and allowed in doctors of stories, Beda" and others it may well be said." . . . Then he tells of Jubal and Thubal, and how, doubtful whether God would avenge himself by fire or by water, Jubal got two stones, one that would not burn called marble, and the other that would not sink called laterins, and thereon wrote all sciences; these were afterwards found, one by Pythagoras, and the other by Itermes, who taught forth the sciences they found there. Euclid also taught masonry, so did David and Solomon, and Charles the 2nd, King of France, and King Edwin of England; the chronicles of St. Albans are cited as an authority; and certain charges (rules) made by King Edwin are mentioned and partly given. These charges the author says "have been seene and perused by our late soveraigne lord King Henry the 6th, and the lords of his honourable counsell, and they have allowed them well." The last 37 lines are headed, More other charges singular for masters and fellows, beginning first, that noe master take upon him noe lordes work . . . Ending, and teach him honestly, soe that your lord's worke bee not spilt.—At the foot, "Anno Domini 1665, Ralph Poole."

A SELECTION FROM THE EARLY DEEDS.

H. Rex Angl. Episcopo Londonensi et Alberico de Ver vicecomiti et omnibus baronibus de Essexia salutem. He gives to Eustace de Barentone his servant, the land which was of Geoffrey the forester in Hatfeld, free and quit for all the custody of his (the King's) forest. And he grants to him the land of Adam, "qui se forisfecit de foresta mea," for 12*s.* yearly as Adam had it on the day of his forfeiture. Witnesses, Robert de Sigillo, and W. de Montfichet, and Alberic de Ver, and Robert de Ver, and Robert de Essex. At London. (Seal gone.)

Henry, King of the English, Lord of Ireland, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, and Count of Anjou to the foresters of the fee and his foresters of the county of Essex. Know that Gilbert Marshal and his brothers Gilbert Basset, Philip Basset, Richard Suward and all other prisoners (impristii) of R. Earl Marshal in England and Wales came to our peace, and we have received them into our favour, and restored to them their lands and tenements; so the said Marshal, Gilbert, and others have called back all their men who were dispersed in various places in our kingdom and disturbed our peace. And the said Marshal, Gilbert, and others have given sufficient security that neither they nor their heirs will hereafter do damage to our kingdom. And whereas we have heard that many in their name have gone through our lands breaking our peace and still do it, as it is said, we have ordered the sheriff of Essex diligently to seek and arrest the disturbers in their bailiwick. Witness myself at Tewkesbury, 6 January, in the 18th year of our reign.

Five Charters granted by King Stephen.

S. rex Angl. Justic. et Vic. et omnibus dominis de quibus Eustac. de Barentona terram tenet salutem: precipio quod Eustac. de Barentona ita bene et quiete teneat terras suas et omnes res suas quas tenet de me in capite in Edfelda et alibi et de quocumque tenet sicut tenuit die qua Rex Henricus fuit vivus et mortuus. Et super hoc non ponatur in plac. Teste Episcopo Sarum et R. fil. Ric. apud Westm. (Seal gone.)

S. rex Angl. Episcopo Londonensi et Justiciariis et vic. et omnibus Baronibus et ministris suis de Essexia Salutem. Sciatis me reddidisse et concessisse in feodo et hereditate Umfrido fil. Eustachii forestarii totam terram patris sui de Hatfeld et de Vritela et nominatim terram de Hatfeld quietam et solutam pro custodia foreste mee. Et preter hoc terram illam que fuit Ade qui se forisfecit de foresta mea pro xii*s.* reddendis mihi per annum sicut predictus Adam eam habebat die qua se forisfecit de foresta mea. Et preterea reddidi et concessi ministerium patris sui de forestaria mea ad tenendum illud de W. . . de Montfichet in Essexia sicut pater suus Eustachius de ipso Willelmo tenuit. Et omnis forestarius et minister predictae foreste intendat ipsi Umfrido sicut solebant facere patri suo. Et volo et precipio quod idem Umfridus totam terram predictam cum ministerio patris sui teneat bene et in pace et quiete et libere in bosco et plano et pratis et pasturis et aquis et stagnis cum omnibus libertatibus et quietanciis cum quibus pater suus vel aliquis antecessorum suorum melius et honorificentius tenuit. Testibus A. de Ver. R. de B^s et Gaufr. de Magnavilla et Gisl. fil. Gisl. apud Marleburga. (Seal gone.)

S. rex Angl. H. de Essexia et A. de Beluac. et omnibus ministris suis de Essexes. Clamo quietam Willelmo de Rob. forisfactum unde implacitatus fuit de Essartis terre sue de Bersiestocia, ita quod amodo inde quietus sit nec inde amplius sit implacitatus si amplius nec lucratus fuerit predicti essarte terre sue de Bericslaria. Teste Rob. de Tosci apud Westm. (Seal gone.)

S. rex Angl. Justiciariis et Gaufrido de Magnavilla et vic. et ministris suis de Essexia salutem, precipio quod Eustacius de Barentone omnes terras suas de Hadfelda et Wrtela de feodo meo et alias terras suas de feodo Willelmi de Luvetot et com. de Turroc et de quo cumque teneat ita bene et in pace et honorifice et juste et libere sicut melius tenuit tempore regis Henrici et die qua fuit vivus et mortuus. Teste R. fil. Ric. apud Lond. (Seal gone.)

S. Rex Angl. Justiciariis Baronibus et ministris suis de Essexia salutem. Suscipio quod Umfridus de Barentona teneat totam terram suam de Hadfeld de Wrtela et de Hatfeld et de Havering et de Wiltrefelde bene et in pace et juste et libere: insuper hoc nulla fiat ei inde injuria vel contumelia neque clamorem inde audiam. Teste Com. Gisl. apud Plaisiez. (Seal gone.)

[Stephen] King of the English to his barons, justices, and all his faithful men of Essex, and foremen and servants of Hatfeld. He confirms all the possession (by whomsoever given) of the abbot and monks of St. Melanie of Redon in Hatfeld. And he grants to them pasture for their plough and pigs in his demesne pasture and in his fields with his own pigs.

Henry, King of the English, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, Count of Anjou, to Thomas de Montfichet. I command that Humphry de Barentone, my forester, hold his land of Ramesden and of Stanestede and Chigewelle, as well and in peace justly and freely, as his father held in the time of King my grandfather, as his charter witnesses, and as the said Humphry held by it and as my charter witnesses, &c. Witness, Joc. de Baillol at Feleham.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDE,
Esq.

The same to Gilbert de Montfichet and all his men of Essex, of whom Humphry de Barentone held land. I order that Walter de Hatfield have the wardship of Humphry, son of Humphry de Barentone, and of all his land, and the ordering of my forest as long as I please, and that you take his homage by his just relief. Witness, Richard de Lacy at Cirecestre. (The last 3 documents are copies of the 14th century, on one piece of parchment.)

(c. Stephen) Filippus de Wirholo to all his men, as well English as French. Know that I have granted and given to Humfry the land of Stiford, and to his heirs (credibus), it is to be holden of me and my heirs (credibus), paying 10s. yearly, 5s. at the feast of St. Michael, and 5s. at Easter, for all service, which I am bound to by Earl Warenne, on account of which Humfry de Barentine gave, &c. Witnesses, Fulk, son of Eustace, Robert de Mustelgrus, Filip de Bonilla, Robert, son of Solomon, Richard . . . William, son of Filip.

(Temp. Hen. 2.) Agreement between Humfry de Barentun and Alan de Seperee. Humfry had become Alan's surety for payment to Benjamin and his sister Cipora, Jews of Cambridge, of 10l. sterling every year from Michaelmas next, after Earl William married the daughter of the Earl of Albemarle.* Alan as an indemnity pledges to Humphry all the fee which he held of Humphry. Witnesses, Ernulf Lenseisie Warin de Barentun, . . . Robert Huscarle, Richard de Barentun . . . (Seals gone.)

(c. Stephen.) Agreement between Faramus, son of William de Bolonia, and Hugh, son of Vlger, concerning the land of Alfadewiche, and all things thereto pertaining, to wit, that Faramus has granted to Hugh and his heirs to hold it of him and his heirs, as the charter and chirograph of his father witness; and so that Hugo for that fee has done homage to Faramus at Waneberg. And for the homage and for the fee and for the agreements entered into between Hugh, son of Vlger and Bernard, son of Rumold, as shown by the chirograph between them. And for that Faramus maintain Hugh from the agreements between Hugh and Bernard, so that Hugh lose nothing thro' the penury of the maintainer, Hugh has given to Faramus 2 marks of silver. Witnesses, Hugh de Waneberg, and William de Boseville, and Hugh de Chastreche, and Symon de Herdingmul, and Baldwin Richtale, and Herbert de Waneberg, and Baldwin de Liuenbruna, and Ralf de Hesdingmul, and Baldwin de Chastreche, and Boizo de Tingri, and Reginald de Hesdingmul, and Roger, clerk of Lund; and Hugh Brito, and Robert de Hormade, and William, son of Vlgar, and many others. (Seal gone.)

Fulk vic. nepos of Gislebert, of Surrey, confirms to Hugo, son of Vlgar and his heirs, the conventions concerning the land of Alfadewiche and Hischentune as the convention is between Bernard, son of Rumold, and Hugh, son of Vlgar, and as the chirograph between them witnesses—for 4 marks of silver which the said Hugo has given. This is at the request of Milo, of Gloucester, and of Fulcred, Chamberlain of London, and of Osbert viii. d. , and of Andrew Buccuinter, and of Anschetil. And that grant was made before William, Abbot of Chertsey, and Richard Basset, and Alberic de Ver, and Memfenin Brito, and Rodbert de Talewourd, and Rodbert, the dapifer of the Abbat of Chertsey, and Walter, clerk, and Ralph Blore, and to this agreement all the above-named are witnesses.

Henry, King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, and Count of Anjou, to the Bishop of London and the sheriff and all barons of Essex. He has conceded to Humphrey, son of Eustace de Barenton, in fee, the land which was of Geoffrey the forrester in Hatfield free and clear for the custody of his forest. Grants the land of Adam (as in the charter above) at the rent of 12s. Humphrey is to hold as freely as his father held in the time of his (the King's) grandfather all lands which Eustace held of King Henry, the grantor's grandfather in chief or of any other, as the charter of King Henry testifies. Witnesses, Ric. de Hum. Const., Mau. Bui Dapifer, Warin El. Ger. Cam., Joe. de Baillole, M. Haveringe.

Conan, Duke of Brittany, Earl of Richmond, to all sons of mother church, and to his dapifer and chamberlain, and all his servants, and all men, French and English, and all his Bretons, and all well-wishers.—Gives to God and the church of St. John the Baptist and the brethren there serving God, to wit, to Anschetil and to

William, and to Laheman, and others their successors the hermitage (heremitorium) of Wogobiliche in his wood of Cestreham, for the salvation of his soul. Tells the addressees to support the grantees and to let them use the wood without waste. Witnesses, Rodbert de Galole, Peter Boteler, Rodbert, son of Abelard, William, son of Sired, Wigon son of Cadi. This charter was made in the time of Hamelin, Chancellor of Cestreham. (Seal, originally nearly 4 inches in diameter, about one third remains; man on horse with shield and surcoat of mail; on the other side, a man on horse galloping; well cut.)

(No. 13.) (A.D. 1110.) Henry, Archdeacon of Huntingdon, to all clerks of Huntingdonshire, present and future. Know that Ansered the priest has acknowledged in chapter before me that the church of St. Melanious ought to have 2 parts of the small tithes, viz., of sheep, and wool, and cheese, and all thing accustomed to be tithed of the demesne of Paganus, sheriff of Hemingebord, as they have of corn; and the monks have demised to him the said tithes, viz., the corn and other things for 7 years, at the yearly rent of 7s. After the 7 years the monks are to do their pleasure therewith. Witnesses, Martin Roger, Osmund de Brant, Roger the dean, Ralph of Godmet, John de Brant, William the dean, Cunan, Jocelin de Stinetl (?). Done in the year of grace M^o.c^o.x^o. (Fragment of large white seal, seemingly heraldic, but the capital letters HAM, part of a word, are in the centre.)

(No. 9.) Earl Alberic to all faithful, &c. Know that William, son of Bernard, and Serlo his son, have given, in frankalmoign, to the church of St. Mary of Hatfeld Regis, and the monks of St. Melanious serving God there, the moiety of their two lands (duobus terris), which they had in Manegadene, viz., of the land which was Gudmund's, and of the land which was Alfschild's, the two lands to be partitioned by the oaths of 4 lawful men who know the said lands, and one moiety with the mansura, which was Alfschild's, is allotted and granted to Saint Mary, &c. as aforesaid, and the other moiety with the mansura, which was Gudmund's, is to remain to Serlo. And William, son of Bernard, his father, is become a monk there, viz., at Hatfeld. The gift is made at the request of William and his son Serlo.—Witnesses, Robert the Earl's constable, Ralph Carbonell, Ingelram the dapifer, Ralph de Gises, Fulk and Ralph, clerks. Part of large white seal; man on horse (looking to the left) with sword and shield.

(No. 1.) Geoffrey called Boterel to Baldwin his prefect of Netlested. He and his wife and sons direct that Baldwin while proctor pay to the monks of St. Melanious abiding in Hatfeld the king's vill, that mark of silver which he gave for the souls of himself and wife and sons and ancestors. And he and his wife Vigolent, his sons William and Peter, direct that all who shall succeed Baldwin in his office shall pay the said mark to the said monks at Michaelmas in each year. They will, also, that this charter be read in the church before all the parish, so that the parishioners may be witnesses to the gift. Of the barons of Earl Alan these have heard this our order, Alanus Aimerici, Gaufridus Aldroini. Anno Incarnatione Domini. M. c. xxxviii. (Seal gone.)

(No. 2.) (1143.) Richard de Camville and Alice his wife, with his sons, give the church of Manegadene to God and St. Melanious and his monks abiding in the church of Hatfeld Regis for ever free from all secular service. Witnesses, Gilbert Galter of Cruili, and David, servants of the monks; Ralph the priest. Done in the year of the Incarnation M^o. c^o. xl^o. iii^o. (Seal gone.)

(No. 3.) Richard de Camville to Richard Bishop of London, and Nicholas the archdeacon.—Wonders that they obstruct the gift which he made to God and the monks of Hatfeld. Commands and requires, for the love of God and himself, that they concede to them (the monks), the church which he gave, and in respect of which he presented them to the addressees, and by his letters again presents; and because he is going with the king, he puts Earl Alberic in his place to deroign the gift against the false claimants of Maneden, and forbids them to accept the presentation of any other person.—Fragment of large white seal, a bird looking backwards to the left.

(No. 4.) (A.D. 1143.)—Alexander, son of Rivallon of Tondrelcia, to all sons of holy church. For the remission of the sins of himself and his wife Hawise, and his lord and friends and his father and mother and ancestors, he gives his moiety of the church of Tondrelcia with all appurtenances to God and St. Mary always virgin, and St. Melanious and his monks in the church of Hatfeld (sec. Regis), free from all secular service. He does this with the assent of his Lord Earl Alberic. Witnesses, Helias

G. A.
LOWNDE,
Esq.

G. A.
LOWNDES,
Esq.

the priest, Adhelis his mother. William the prior, and the whole convent of the said church of Helfeld Regis. Done in the year of the Incarnation M^o. c^o. xl^o. iii^o. (Seal gone, the plaited silk which suspended it remains.) (No. 5.) (1194.) R^o. Prior of Bermundsey and P^o. Archdeacon of London, to all, &c. After a long dispute between the monks of Hadfeld Regis and the canons of St. Botulf of Colchester, about the "decimæ novarium" of the king's demesne in Hadfeld, at length by commission from the pope and by consent of the parties it is agreed—that the Monks of Hadfeld shall take the small tithes in that vill known to belong to the said canons, paying therefor to the said canons for ever the yearly sum of 6s. except the tithes of geese which the canons are to retain. The prior and canons of Colchester by consent of the said monks are to have all tithes of garbs coming from the lands which the canons of Tremhale possessed in the parish of Hadfeld, viz. (certain lands), all tithes of corn and vegetables (leguminum) shall belong to the canons of St. Botulf, and of all lands hereafter brought into cultivation in Hadfeld in the King's demesne the said canons shall take the tithes of corn and vegetables. Done in the year of the Incarnation M^o. c^o. xc^o. iii^o. the first year of the return of King Richard from Germany into England. Lunar cycle xvii. Dominical letter B. Witnesses, Master Richard of Storteford, and Master Alard, canons of St. Paul; Adam, monk of St. Waleric, Master Robert de Quent, Master Gossele of London; Richard, chaplain of the Bishop of London; Geoffrey, clerk of Roinges; Matthew, clerk of Master Robert de Quent, and many others. A fragment of the prior's seal remains (half of a horse); the other seal is gone. This deed was in duplicate.

(No. 8.) Reginald Arsic to all his men, present and future. Gives to the monks of Hatfeld Regis all tithes of his wind-mill in Selverley in the field called Breche, in frankalmoign. Witnesses, Ralf Arsic his brother, William Francis, Alexander Campion, Geoffrey the dean, Ralf the clerk, Reginald the baker, William Cementarius, Ralf Musca, and many others. Large white seal, man on horse (looking to the right), with sword and shield (a cross on it); circumference gone.

12th Century Peter Boterel to William, Bishop of Norwich, Walter the archdeacon, his lord Conan the earl, and all sons of holy church. Grants (for the souls of his father, mother, predecessors, and self,) to the church of St. Melanius of Redon, Godwin the bailiff (prepositum) of Nettlestede, and his heirs and all his holding held of the grantor, in frankalmoign, free from all service, &c. except the king's and the earl's. Grants that Godwin and his heirs may have in his vill of Nettlestede the same common in wood and plain, &c. which he hitherto had. Grants to the said church 12 acres of his demesne in Sorlund free from all service, as well the king's and earl's as his own. If Godwin or his heirs be impleaded for any forfeiture pertaining to the grantor, he shall be justified by the monks in the court of the monks of the said church. Godwin or his heirs shall not be compelled by the grantor or his officers to go to hundreds and shires, but, giving his accustomed scot, may remain at home in peace. Witnesses, Matilda, the grantor's wife, who was present at the gift and allowed it, Adam, priest of the said vill, Arnald the physician, Richard the priest, William, priest of Pileberge, Ranulf parmer, Godric his son, Godric de fonte, William, son of Lifrum, Roger the bailiff, (prepositus), Peter de Chalgrafe, Andrew, son of Arnald, Geoffrey, priest of Blackeham, Robert of Wilasham, and the whole hamlet of Nettlestede. (Seals gone.) No. 7.

AMERICA.

A small Bundle of Papers.

1630, Jan. 21. Copy (examined by Wm. Jessop, secretary) of order at a Court held for the Island of Providence at Mr. Dyke's house in Billiter Lane. Present, Mr. Dyke, deputy, the Lord Brooke, Sir Benjamin Rudyard, Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Sir Nathaniel Riche, Mr. Pym, Mr. Graunt.—Sir Thomas Barrington, Bart., was admitted into the Society subject to the confirmation of the admission at the Quarter Court; his subscription money was 200*l*. ("which sum will make his "adventure equal to the adventures of the rest of the "Company"), to be returned to him if his admission was not confirmed.

1631, May 19 and June 21. Two receipts, signed by John Pym, for two sums of 25*l*. paid by Sir Thomas Barrington in full for additions of Adventures to the Island of Providence.

1632, July 1 (about). Extracts of letters relating to the Company, viz. :—

Capt. Philip Bell, Governor, his general letter to the Company.

Mr. John Hunt to Lord Brooke.

Capt. Axe to the Earl of Norwich.

The same to Sir Nat. Riche.

Mr. John Hunt to the same.

Lieut. Price to the same.

Mr. Morgan, the minister to Sir Nat. Riche and Mr. Pym.

Ensign Fitch to Wm. Jessop, the secretary.

The Minister to John Reeve, an apothecary.

All the writers state that provisions were abundant. Fruits in plenty; hogs and house fowl thrived; three crops of corn in a year; the tobacco not much, if at all, behind the Spanish. Brickmakers were set to work for a church and the Governor's house.

1631, July 20. John Pym's receipt for 70*l*. supplied by Sir T. B.

1631, Oct. 6. The like, for 50*l*.

1631, Jan. 17. Short agreement by four persons with Sir T. B. to go under his name and as of his family to the Island of Providence, with the next ship from the Company.

1631, Jan. 25. A similar agreement by four other persons.

1631, Feb. 21. John Pym's receipt for 100*l*. supplied by Sir T. B. for the use of the Isle.

1632, April 13. John Pym's receipt for 50*l*. (paid by Sir T. B.) in full of 150*l*., payable by each member of the Society under an order made last Hilary term. "And so Sir T. B. hath in all paid into the common "stock of the said Company since his admission there—"into for the advancement of the plantations in the "islands of Providence and Association the sum of "520*l*."

1632, July 13, Oct. 6, March 23; 1633, June 6. Four receipts, signed by John Pym for 40*l*., 25*l*., 70*l*., and 70*l*., paid by Sir T. B.

Memorandum by Sir T. B. of the various sums paid by him in respect of the Society, amounting to (including 200*l*. paid after the 13th July 1633) 1,025*l*.

1633, Nov. 23. John Pym's receipt for 200*l*. in full of the 1,025*l*.

1634, June 28, Nov. 8; 1635, April 13. John Pym's receipts for 64*l*., 64*l*. 2*s*. 6*d*., and 20*l*. paid by Sir T. B.

1637, March 20, Brook House. Copy of orders at a General Court. 2½ pp. folio (for raising an additional 20,000*l*. stock).

c. 1642. A statement that Visct. Say and Sele, Sir Thomas Barrington, and John Pym were bound to Sir Henry Reeve, of London, Kt., in 1,600*l*. for payment of 800*l*. with six months' interest on Nov. 1628, which was the debt of the whole Company, towards payment of which these noblemen and gentlemen are indebted to the stock of the Company. Then follow the names of 24 persons, with a sum of money set opposite each name, amounting in all to 9,450*l*. 9*s*. 9½*d*.—Among them are Sir Thomas Barrington, 76*l*. 1*s*. 0½*d*.; Mr. Pym's executors, 1,739*l*. 1*s*. 3½*d*. The Earl of Warwick, Lord Say and Sele, the Earl of Manchester are down for several sums.

1639, June 1. Wm. Jessop's receipt to Sir T. B. for 300*l*. in part of what remained due from him.

1644, May 15. Affidavit of William Jessop, the secretary, with regard to the assets and debts of the Company. (2½ pp.)

A sheet of accounts.

Petition of Sir John Barrington to the House of Commons.—His late father Sir Thomas, and other members of the Company were largely indebted in respect thereof. Most of the other debtors are, as Members of Parliament, protected from personal molestation. He prays protection.

Draft order of the Lords protecting Sir John Barrington and his property from molestation by creditors of the Company until the debts of John Pym were paid out of certain lands.

1675. Four papers relating to Bermuda. These are about some lands in the island, late belonging to the Earl of Warwick, claimed by Daniel Finch, Henry St. John, and Thomas Barrington, his heirs by marriage.

My best thanks are given to Mr. Lowndes for his kind hospitality at Barrington Hall.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

CAPT. H. G. ST. JOHN MILD MAY, R.N., OF HAZELGROVE HOUSE, SOMERSET.

THE MSS. referred to in the following report have been selected from a number of family papers belonging to Capt. Harvey G. St. John Mildmay, R.N., who has kindly placed them in my hands for examination. The papers are in a good state of preservation, but have not been arranged and catalogued: this will now be done. It appears from my examination of these papers that the earlier portion of them belonged to Sir George Harvey, knt., of Marks in Essex, Lieutenant of the Tower in 1693; and that the Jewel House and other 17th century papers, later than 1620, were preserved by Col. Carew Harvey Mildmay of Marks, who was one of the officers of the Jewel House from 1625 to 1667 or a few years later, and was also one of the verderers of the Forest of Waltham. Many of the Jewel House papers are in Col. Mildmay's own handwriting. Besides the eight or 10 letters addressed to Carew Harvey Mildmay, Esq., between the years 1726-1762, noticed in this report, there is also in the collection a large number of letters written by him to his steward at Hazelgrove about the year 1750, but these, although they give an interesting picture of the life of an active-minded country gentleman, I have not noticed in the report as not being of sufficient public interest.

Anno 7. Hen. IV., 1406. Permission from the king to the tenants of Havering "abiding on the side of our village of Rumford" . . . for "ease of the old and weak"—"because the chapel of St. Andrew is seicuate half a mile without our fore-saide village, in which respect it is often robbed and spoyled," to remove the chapel to a more convenient place upon the east side of the village.

About 1600. A discourse written by Sir George Harvy of Sir Walter Smith's "Mysfortunes and deathe." "In searching things of Queen Mary's time I founde a strange recorde of a knyghte murdered, and a ladye burned (for murdering the knight her husband), a horsekeeper hanged, and a cagging companion (who was the cause of all) arraigned."—Favorite dishes noted in the story—"Boyled cream with rosewater, sugar and eggs, a plas buttered with rosewater and sugar, artichoke boyled with marrow, creame and caponette, partridges at great price of eight grotes and . . . apiece."

1572. Sept. 11. "Talke had between the bishop of . . . Chichester chaplain a Mr. Pearson and Mr. Thomas Wilcock—and my brother Field" in Newgate "God's prisoners," because "we wrote a boke in the parliament tyme (which should be a free tyme of speaking or wrtyng) craving redresse of abuses."

A proportion for supply of munition for her highness (Queen Elizabeth's) castell cornet of Guernsey.

Sir George Harvy's good counsell to his son in his travells.

1580. "Accounts of George Harvie the younger to the use of my brother George Harvie the elder."

	£	s.	d.
Paid to M ^{rs} Craiford for nursing Dudley	11	0	0
Paid to M ^{rs} Craiford for 12 wickes borde and scole for Dudley your sonne	1	0	0
Paid to the carrier of Chester for carrying your stuffe thither	0	1	8
Paid for 3 ells of canvas to trusse your stuffe to send to Ireland	0	11	0

Commission to William Marques of Winchester, Lord Treasurer, and others—"to survey walls, streams, ditches, sewers, bridges, and other defences by the coasts of the sea and marshe grounds . . . from Stratford Bridge to Muckinge Mill." Endorsed "Book for my Lord Buckeherst."

1582. Letter from Nicholas Mosley (Alderman) to Mr. George Herye.

1583. Inventory of all the goodes, &c. of Dame Elizabeth Beckwith, late of the citie of York.

1616. Letter from Earl of Oxford from Florence to Sir Gawen Harvey . . . intends to stay a year or two longer abroad, and to be next spring in France.

1617. Copy of grants by King James to John Digby of Sherborne Castle and Estates.

1677. Contracts made upon the renewal and Exchange of Estates in the Manor of Sherborne when John Earle of Bristol succeeded to him. Heriots received 1715-1718.

A.D. 1586. A MS. book of 69 pages, endorsed "The Booke of Offices."

p. 1. "The names of the Lordes and others of Her Mat^{ie} pryvie counsell."

p. 2. "The number of churches wthin everye sheire as they are in y^e Booke of the firste fruits. An^o Dom. 1586. Total 9,210."

p. 3-5. "The valuation of the severall livings of ail the Bishops in England wth the tenths that everye one of them paie the. An^o Dom. 1586."

	£	s.	d.
e.g. Archiepatus Cantur Vale clar per annum -	3,303	18	8
Decima inde -	309	7	10 (sic)

p. 6. "The valuation of the severall Deanries in England wth the tenths that everye one of them paie the."

p. 7. "A note of the Bishops and how they are to take place eche before or after other. An. Dom. 1586."

p. 9. "The names of the pryviledged Townes in England. A.D. 1586."

p. 10-12. "Musters taken An. Dom. 1586," e.g.

Counties and Citties.	Able men.	Armed men.	Selected men.	Artificers & Pioners.	Demi launces.	Light horse.
Cambridge and Cantabr	1,000 80	—	300 20	—	19	22
Cornwall	6,600	—	400	—	—	—
Sussex	6,099	799	600	900	11	150
Totals	161,230	56,115	12,732	12,419	457	2,167

p. 13, 14. The names of her Mat^{ie}s shippes wth the number of men and furniture requisite for the setting forth of the same. A.D. 1586, e.g.

Shippes.	Men.	Furniture.	Burthen.
Tryumph	780	Harques - 250	1,000
Maryners - 150		Bowes - 50
Commers - 50		Arrowes She - 100	Estimated otherwise
Soldiers - 200		Picks - 200	1,000 tonnes.
		Bills - 200
		Corseletts - 100
		Marioners - 200

23 ships described as above, then is added—

"Some of all other as well merchaunts shippes as others in all parts of Ingland of 100 tonnes and upwards - 135"

Some of all barkes and shippes of 40 tonnes and upwards to an 100 tonnes - 656

There are besides by estimation 100 sale of Hoys alsoe of small barkes and fishermen an infinite number.

So as the number of M^{ss} through the Realme cannot be less than 600, besides London.

p. 15-17. "The names of the fforts and castilles alongest the sea coste wth the names alsoe of the captaynes that have the charge of them.

	Kent.
George Bison	The Bulwarke of Gravesend.
Thomas Randall	Quinborrowe.
The Lord Cobham	Sherenasse.
	The Queenes place at Canterbury.
	The Rodes of Marguret.
	The Towne of Sandwich.

"fees to the captaynes and other officers for keeping the saide castells throughout Englande commeth to xviiij^l £11 viij^s 0^d."

p. 18, 19. The number of men appointed to be trayned in everie sheire throughout the Realme. An^o Dom. 1586.

p. 20. "The chardges of Barwicke and other holds in the Easte Marches forcamps Scotland. An^o 1586."

Chief Officers	£	s.	d.
The Lord Governor	666	13	4
The Marshall	260	0	0
The Trer ^e	260	0	0
The Gent. Horker	180	13	4
The Chamberlaine	94	13	4
The M ^r of Thordinance	146	0	0
The Comptroller of the checke	64	0	0

1,676

T. H. G.
JOHN MILDMAN,
R.N.

p. 21, 22. "An estimate of the remaines in the saide office [The office of the Ordinance] wth the value in "redye monye of the severall Tytles ensuing as well "wthin the Tower of London as aborde the shippes."

p. 23. "The sundry natures and kinde of ordinaunce, "shott, powder, municons, habilliments of warre, and "other furnitures for ordinaunce incidente and belong- "ing to the service thereof."

The Table.

p. 25, 26. "Officers of the courtes of renewen.
"Officers and ministers of justice.
"Keepers of houses, parkes, fforests, and chases, &c. &c. &c.

"With the total somes of all theire fees and allowances."

p. 27-34. "The officers of the Exchequier, with their severall fees, &c."

p. 35-38. Officers in the Duchie of Lancaster, and their fees, &c.

p. 39, 40. The courte of Wards and Liveryes, and their fees, &c.

p. 41, 42. The courte of firste fruits and tenthes, and their fees, &c.

p. 43. Countie Palatyne of Chester and Lancaster, and their fees, &c.

p. 44. "Justice of Oyer and Determinacon, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 45-48. Officers in the Courte, and the fees to each,
and allowances."

p. 49. "The Armorie, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 50. "The Mynte, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 51. "The Works, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 52. "The Wardrobe, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 53-54. "The Tentess, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 55-56. "Musitions and Players, and the fees to each and allowances."

p. 57. "Surgions, Phisicons, Apothecaries, and Astronomers, Bargmen, and Watermen, and the fees to each and allowances."

p. 58-59. "Artificers, and the fees to each, and allowances."

p. 60-64. Officers and servants in household. L^rgreate
Mr. Threr. Comptroller. Coferer. Masters of ye Household. Clerk Comptroller. Clerke to the Cofferer.
Yoman. Grome. L. Chamblain. Vice-Chamblain.
The 4 knights. Gentlemen of the pryvye chamber.
Gentleman ushers of the pryvye chamber. Gentlemen ushers. Gromes of the pryvye chamber. Carvers 4.
Cupbearers 3. Sewers to the King 4. Sewers 7.
Esquiers for the boddie 3. Gromes of the chamber 12.
Yoman ushers 4. Pages 4, with fees and allowances to each.

p. 64-69. Largesses,

	£
Apparrell for those of the halle kytchin	20
" " privie kytchin	30
and so on for 5 pages ending with "Yoman of the close carte." Gromes 68, fee to everye of them per diem 6d. Footmen 16. Singers 3.	} £50.

Sm^a to^{ls} of the officers and servants of household,
16.868l. 10s. 1d.^{ob}

1594. A warrant for all bakers, scriveners, victuallers, badgers, loders, millers, corne huckers and maltsters, in the hundred of Becontrie, to appear before us (the justices) at Barkinge, and that the victuallers and badgers bring with them their licences. Names and residences of these summoned.

1595. "A copie of the order in the Chancery for "kepinge of the courte rolles and other matters," upon the settlement of a suit between Peter Houghton, aldermen, and George Hurvy, Aruiger, respecting lands at Estham burnelle, Westham burnelles.

Another copy of the same endorsed, "The copie of "the M^r of the Rolles, his order betwixt Mr. Houghton "and me, 20 Nov. 1595.

1595. 11 July. "The order for my possession of "Estham burnells."

1595. 13 Oct. "The order to M^r Creswell in the same case.

1597. The number of acres and names of tenants in "the parish of Hornchurch."

1597. A report to the Queen upon the state of the Tower of London.

"The duties of the Lieutenant."

"Differences necessary to be decided. Inprimis.
"The Citye of London did and doth pretend Tythe unto "your Ma^{ty} soil: of Tower hill, and Est Smythie side even "unto the ditch of the Tower." &c. &c.

"Defectes needful to be supplied. That there are "allowed for this guard of this y^e Ma^{ty} royall castell
"but xxx warders. &c. &c."

"Disorders meet to be reformed viz., too much liberty
"to prisoners of receiving friends, and that they "have "been allowed to keepe their wyves and whole familyes
"resydent." &c. &c.

"Touching the Mynte, a complaint that it is much "decayed, that for some yeares there hath not been
"coyned much above £2,000 in a whole yeare."

"That your Hignes dominions did some yeares past "abound in plenty of gold it is manifest, ffor that more
"then the third part of yo^r Ma^{ty} Revenewes, and all "other paymentes weare ordynarylye paid in gold.
"Whereas at this present, amongst thowsands there is "not ten poundes of gold offered in payment. Whereby "it appeares that the great masse of gold is trans"ported."

"It is in common practyse amongst the goldsmithes
"at this presente that every speciel of y^r Ma^{ty} coyne of "gold is bought and sold at 10, 11, & 12^d the pound
" . . . The ryches of y^r Ma^{ty} coynes exceeding the "proportyon of theyr corraunte values."

1599. "Argumentes and Recordes to proove that the "Towre of London and the libertyes thereunto belong"ing doth not lye within the cownty of the cittie of
"London."

6 E 2. The case of W^m Ffinishingfeild who was found guilty of an assault upon Nicholas Turgers "without the "forraine gate of the Towre and within the liberties
"of the same" in the court of Hoistinge London "as "though the place where the transgression was made
"had been within the lybertyes of the city. At this "presumption the king took displeasure" and granted a commission "to Reforme the Recordres." Other cases 38 E. 3 & 12th H. 4.

1601. A commission to George Harvey Esquier to take charge of the Tower during the 30 days' leave of absence of the lieutenant. "Given under our signet at
"the Mannor of Richmond, 3 Oct. 43^d Eliz.

1601. An order to the Lieut^t of o^r Ordonaunce within o^r Tower of London, and in his absence to George Harvey Esq. his deputie, "to levy and impress the number of two canonyers of good practise, and from tyme to tyme so manie other canonyers, and also smythes, carpenters, and all artifcyers of anie other kynde requysite for the use of ordonaunce to be sent into Ireland. 6th Oct. 43 Eliz.

1601. 29 July. An order made at the court at Grenw^{ch} to Captⁿ. Skipwith to sail from Bristol for Corke with 100 men, 50 from Worcester, and 50 from Hereford.

1601. 15 Aug. A receipt for armes, &c. signed by several officers.

1601. 31 July. A certified copy with signature of "Jn^o Horkens, Mayor," of a letter from the Council to the Mayor and Corporation of Bristol praying them to give all necessary assistance for the dispatch of troops to Ireland.

1599-1601. 14 acquittances for sums given to Sir
George Carew, Kn^t, Lieutenant genrall of her Mat^{ies} Ordonaunce (or to his deputy) for the supply of municons to be sent to Dublin, Cork, Munster, Plymouth, Guar-nsey, Portsmouth.

1602. £340 the price of 20 tonnes of matches sent to the Tower.

1603. Letter from Sir W. Raleigh to the king.
(Printed in Prince's Worthies of Devon.)

1603. Oct. 2. A letter from the Council to our very lovinge friend Sir George Harvey, kn^t, Lieutenant of the Tower, ordering him to allow M^r George Brooke's wife to visit him during the time of his extremity through sickness: and to allow Sir W^m Waude to have access to the prisoners at any time, "either with yourself or alone,
"as he shall think fytt, because many men will speak
"that to one alone w^{ch} they will not doe to two." From at the Court at Winchester. (Signed) Suffolke.
Howard. Ro. Cecyll. Mar.

1603. June. "A discourse whether it be fitt for "Englande to make peace with Spaine." Comes to the conclusion that it were good to follow the steps of the late wyse, provident, Prince and Queene of high memorie Elizabeth. . . "So shall the kings Mat^{ty}
"laudable be intituled the Protector and Defender
"of the belgions libertye. Amen."

1605. Letter from Lord Carew to Sir Gawen Harvie.
(No interest.)

No date. A MS. of eight pages giving the names of the household servants of James I.

CAPT. H. G.
ST. JOHN MILDMAN,
R.N.

FT. H. G.
T. JOHN MILDMAY,
R.N.

"some mark of favour upon Sir Thomas Edwardes. Kn^t, Tre^r of the Household."

1637. May 2. The humble petition of Will. Prynne, prisoner in the Tower, for liberty to answer for himself before the Lords of the Star Chamber.

No date. Ship money charges upon the cities, townes, places, charged with furnishing shipping, with the burthens, &c. of the shippes to be furnished by each.

A ship of 400 tunnes, 200 men, the charge 2,204*l*.

1640. April 26. Order to the Constables of Harding, Essex, to summon all "trayned soldiers to appeare compleately armed at Romford, and also all persons who are of ability to bear arms, to confer with them about sending away 40 men to Scotland."

1643. Feb. 17. A certificate of the manors (with rents) belonging to the King's Matie, Queene and Prince in the counties of Suffolk, Cambridge, Essex, Hertford, Norfolk, and Hauts.

A certificate of the King and Queen's parks and woods in the six associate countrys.

LETTERS.

1756. Nov. 14. Letter from Lord Ilchester to Carew Mildmay.—"My brother is resolved to have no employment, which is contrary to his first intentions. His Majesty has again pressed him to be first commissioner of the treasury. . . . He has refused, and in my opinion prudently; there will be great confusion this session Mr Pit having insisted on 15 or 16 of his friends coming into good places. A good deal has turned on the D. of Devonshire; things have a very black aspect for the publi^k. Sir Richard Lyttleton, all the Grenvilles, Townsend, Doctor Hay, Potter, Elliott, Sir Henry Erskine, in Pit's first list for places. The D. of Bedford much courted to take Lieutenantancy of Ireland, but he refused to have anything to do with what he calls this factious administration."

1756. June 13. Sir Wm. Mildmay at Moulsham to C. H. Mildmay at Marks.—"On the Church Tower at Burnham are placed two Dragoons every day to watch and give notice of the French fleet's arrival," &c.

1756. Extracts of a letter from an officer in the Prussian army, containing copy of an intercepted dispatch from General Brown (after his defeat) to the King of Poland.

And extracts from a letter from Minden, says that in the King of Poland's closet at Dresden had been found an agreement between him and the Queen of Hungary to extirpate the Protestant religion, &c. &c. &c.

1758. July 28. Letter from Lord North to Carew Mildmay. An invitation.

1760. Aug. 11. Letter from Lord Bristol thanking Mr. Mildmay for a copy of the Pedigree of the Herveys. (From Segovia.)

1762. Aug. 29. Copy of a letter to the Lord Mayor from the E.^d of Egremont to inform the city that the Duke of Bedford has been nominated to go to Paris to treat of a peace.

Several letters between Mr. Mildmay and Mr. Phelps concerning the proposed Poor Bill.

1726. Feb. 26. Letter from E. Blomberg from Kirby Overcar to Carew Mildmay.—"Sulphur a sovereign remedy for gout. Am just returned from our election which were it described by Cardinal Rhetz would appear full as considerable as the commotions he mentions at Paris. The gentleman we chose is no courtier but of true country spirit, and values the name of squire and an honest man more than any title. . . . great many people hurt, none killed but a parson."

1749. Nov. 18. Letter from P.R., London.—"The speech and address objected to by the E. of Eg. and Sir J. Col. said the treaty Aix was precipitately made, and not communicated to the house until it was published. They say, Sir, that I speak incomparably well. Mentions the scheme for reducing the 4 per cents. gradually to 3 per cents.; "it is generally believed in Paris that the peace will not long continue, war will break out on the death of the King of Sweden or King of Poland. There will also be war in Italy," &c.

1751. Feb. 10. Letter from W. Mildmay to Carew H. Mildmay from Paris.—"As to public affairs my station will not permit me to speak of those I am engaged in. As times go I hope it may be some merit to have done no harm if we can do no good. As this is sent by a courier I may venture to tell you of what they dare talk at this place. . . . the hard usage of Mon^s de la Bourdonnais, acquitted by his judges after 3 years in the Bastile. Has published an account of his life."

No date. Letter from Lord Ilchester to ——"I heartily condole with you on the bad news from Germany, and am afraid very good is not expected from America; a letter from my brother is quite melancholy."

MISCELLANEOUS PAPERS.

1540. An order "By the king" to Sir Roger Cholmley to pay certain sums due into the Court of Augmentations.

1591. A valuation of all metals:—

	Money.	100 poun ^d s.	Money.	Tonnes.	Money.
Gold le pound	36 l	100	3,600 l	le Ton	72,000 l
Silver "	3 l	"	300 l	"	6,000 l
Copper "	6 d .	"	50 s .	"	50 l
Tynne "	5 d .	"	4 l 5 s 4 d .	"	£11 6 s 8 d .
Steele "	4 d .	"	38 s 4 d .	"	£33 6 s 8 d .
Iron "	"	"	10 s .	"	£10 0 s 0 d .
Lead "	1 d .	"	8 s 4 d .	"	4 s 6 s 8 d .

1598. Anthony Watson, Bishop of Chichester, Almoner to the Queen, grants as alms to E. Hext, Esq^r, of Netherham, for the use of the widow and children, the goods of G. Baker, forfeited on his killing himself.

Copy of a letter from the king (James) to the judges, to be read at the Assizes, concerning irregularities allowed by Justices of the Peace in accepting insufficient securities from accused persons, and in allowing fines to be paid back by Clerks of the Peace of their own authority.

1625. Copy of the Statutes of Lady Dioness Hext's Almshouse at Somerton.

1625. Endorsed upon a lease. "Mem. The within named T. Wood consents to bring or send to Dame Francis Harveye or her assign^s two fat capons yearlye against Christmas; and fower times a year, every quarter day to bring or send to Marks one Dysshe of Fyssh."

A number of orders to C. H. Mildmay one of the Verderers of the forest of Waltham to view lands, houses, and timber. From 1631-1640, and from 1660-1680.

1664. Some papers in a suit between Mr. Mildmay and the Vicar of Barking whether certain lands formerly belonging to the Abbey are liable to tithe. Among these, one called "A Copy of the Antiquity of the Abbey," which gives copies of several charters, beginning with one from Sebbi, king of the East Saxons.

A Book of Accounts for several years for the monies laid out upon the Levells in Essex.

1561-1567. The Levell from Minking Mill to Grayes Bridge.

1561-1564. The Levell from Grayes Bridge to Raynham Bridge.

1557-1566. The Levell of Dagenham Marshes to Highm Wall.

1566-1567. The Levell of Dagenham Marshes to Highm's Wall.

1561-1564. The Levell of Ryple Marsh.

1564-1567. " of Ryple Marsh.

1561-1567. " of Esthm Marshes.

1561-1564. " of Westham Marshes.

1564-1567. " of Westham Marshes.

1567-1574. " of Ryple Marshes.

1567-1574. " of Westham Marshes.

1567-1574. " of Estham Marshes.

The whole very carefully kept with full particulars.

1600-1612. A MS. book: records of the Manor of Queen Camel, Somerset.

1614. Grant to G. Hervie for life to run 12 horses in Havering Park.

1660. Lady Burleigh's gift to the tradesmen of Romford, and names of the recipients for several years.

1670. Several papers about the decayed state of the stocks and cage and whipping post at Havering; and the destruction of them when renewed by a mob because they were placed in too narrow a part of the road and obstructed the road. A presentment of the Grand Jury.

1651-1700, but chiefly in 1665. Assessment lists of Romford, Ilford, Walthamstoe, Ripple, and other places in Essex.

1672. Complaint from Hornchurch of pressing men under the pretence of their being seamen.

JEWEL OFFICE PAPERS.

1588-1603. A list of the presents given by Queen Elizabeth, from the 20th until the last year of her reign, to ambassadors, agents, and gentlemen sent from foreign Princes; and at christenings. 3 pages MS.

1606. Order to the Master of the Jewels to furnish the E. of Salisbury and Vycount Byndon with plate to

Capt H. G.
St. John
Mildmay,
R.N.

order from the Committee of Revenue for the service of his Ma^{ty} at Hampton Court.

APT. H. G.
ST. JOHN MILDMAY,
R.N.

1649. June 22. Plate delivered to the Duke of Northumberland for the service of the King's children, and lost in the said service.

1649. Certificate from Col. Mannering that Carew Harvy, alias Mildmay, Esq., of Marks, did upon several ordinances of Parliament lend the following sums in money, plate, and horse and arms, "190*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.*, which was doubled upon the ordinance of Parl. "Nov. 16th 1646 for appointing the sale of Bipp' lands," &c.

1649. Feb. 18. A Warrant from the Trustees for the sale of the King's, Queen's, and Prince's Personal Estates, to Col. Carew Mildmay to deliver up the books of the office.

1649. July 19. An order from the Trustees to Sir H. Mildmay to deliver up all Books and Records of the Jewel-house. Endorsed: "Not obeyed."

1649. Sept. 7. Sir H. Mildmay's letter of command to Mr Carew Mildmay to deliver up to the Trustees the Plate in my office or my keyes. Endorsed: "Not obeyed."

1649. Sept. 20. Order from the Trustees to Col. C. Mildmay to deliver over the Plate in his custody. Endorsed: "Sir H. Mildmay himself went and opened 'the deares to weigh the Plate, but not delivered up.'"

1649. Sept. 25. Warrant from the Trustees to deliver up my keys of the Tower. On my refusing they committed me (i.e., Col. Carew H. Mildmay).

1649. Oct. 13th. Warrant from the Trustees to Col. Carew H. Mildmay to deliver the Plate remaining in the Jewel-house at Whithall. Endorsed: "Which was 'done by Sir Hen. Mildmay himself upon 13th of Oct.'" 1649. Feb. 18. Order by the Trustees for delivery of all the clocks remaining at Whithall belonging to the late King.

1649. Nov. 28. A list of plate belonging to the late King remaining in the hands of several persons heereafter mentioned, delivered to the Trustees.

1649. Dec. 30. Another copy.

No date. 9 more papers, apparently rough drafts for a complete list of the plate missing.

No date, probably 1649. Another paper about missing plate.—"There hath been 4 meltings since I came to 'y^e office, and once a laying to pawn beyond all y^e rest. Only such parcells of plate left that might be 'for use, and the working of it is more worth than y^e silver. Noa workmen living being able to make y^e like. Last yeare y^e Parl. melted 13,000^o of y^e office plate to pay y^e cyty, and sold at Abbingdon."

1649. Sept. 2. The Trustees of Parl. broake into y^e Jewel-house and took away these three crowns, 2 Sept. bracelets, globe, &c., and secured all other things.

The King's Crowne valedwed.

	£	s.	d.
20 Saphires valedwed at	-	-	204
37 Rubies	-	-	176
28 Dyamonds	-	-	168
2 Emeralds	-	-	5
232 Pearles at 1 s. a peece	-	-	174
21 Rubies	-	-	16
The gold po ^r 7 ^{lb} 6 ^{oz} valued at 40 l. a lb.	-	-	280
	£1,023

King Edward's Crowne.

	£	s.	d.
1 Sapphire	-	-	60 0 0
1 Dyamond	-	-	200 0 0
1 Emerald	-	-	12 0 0
10 Rubies	-	-	43 0 0
13 Dyamonds	-	-	32 0 0
70 Pearles at 2 s. a peece	-	-	7 0 0
In gold	-	-	73 16 0
	£427	16	0

The Queen's Crowne.

	£	s.	d.
20 Saphires valedwed at	-	120	0 0
22 Rubies	-	40	0 0
83 Pearles at 10 ⁰ a peece	-	41	10 0
In gold	-	137	6 8
	£338	16	8

	£	s.	d.
The Globe po ^r 17 ^{lb} 10	-	57	13 0
2 Septers 18 ^{lb}	-	60	0 0
2 Bracelets	-	36	0 0
2 Bawles	-

CAPT. H. G.
ST. JOHN MILDMAY,
R.N.

Col. Carew Mildmay's claim for his service to the late King and Parliament.

1649. Two copies of the Parliamentary Trustees certificate of the good services of Col. C. Mildmay. They had found in the Jewel-house under his care plate to the value of 16,496*l.* which he had saved for the public when others left their posts.

1651. Jan. 3^d & Jan. 30. A letter and a command from the Trustees to Sir H. Mildmay to deliver the Indentures of the Jewel-house.

1651. Oct. 10. An order from the Trustees to Carew Mildmay to bring in all books and papers of the Jewel-house. Endorsed "not obeyed."

A list of plate to be accounted for by Sir H. Mildmay. An account of certain parcels of plate which have been given away or sold by king or Parliament.

More papers of Sir H. M's accounts concerning the plate in his charge.

Another account ending "many office books and papers are missing, for in these tymes y^e office was comon to all sorts, it being made a sucklin house for 'y^e souldery at the first coming to London, and had they 'known of any plate of y^e K. within y^e office, noe question but it would have been judged good plunder."

Copy of the certificate of the good services of Sir H. Mildmay to the Parliament.

1649-1652. Aug. 13. Inventory of the plate in the Jewel-house at Whithall, and in the lower and upper houses in the Tower, and that part of the Regalia removed from Westminster to the Tower and the Regalia in Westminster in an iron chest, value 21,566*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

All, except that part which was kept in the iron chest, was delivered to the Trustees in 1649.

1652. Nov. 23^d. An order from the Trustees at Somerset House to Carew Mildmay to bring in all y^e office books, &c. Endorsed: "not obeyed."

1652. Nov. 30. The order repeated. Endorsed: "The 'chambers and office taken from me, only the plate they 'reserved for their owne use, they allowed me in 1653 'in satisfaction of 1,047*l.* 4*s.* 0*d.*

Plate left in the Jewel-house in 1649 for the use of the Counsel of State 1,023^o, was in 1653 were allowed unto me (Carew Mildmay) in lieue of a debt of 1,047*l.* 4*s.* due unto me from the late King.

The great Bible covered with silver gilt was delivered to the Counsel of State. On the back of this paper is a diary from 1641-1649 of several matters connected with the Jewel-house (already mentioned) of importance to Col. Carew Mildmay personally.

1642-1652. A diary of the chief matters concerning the Jewel-house from 1642-1652.

In 1652. They took away all the books, &c., whereby they were able to charge many of the lords and others, who had plate in their hands. The writer prays that the Trustees may be called upon to account for the use they have made of these books.

1654. July 31. The Committee appointed by the Counsell order Carew Mildmay, Esq^r, to send in a written account of all plate, &c. reserved from sale, Sept. 27, 1651, and that which is now employed in the service of his highness the Lord Protector.

1660. June 20. Carew Mildmay, Esq^r, certificate of his being sworn in an officer of the Jewel-house.

1660. June 1. Carew Harvy Mildmay before Sir Harbottle Grymston, Speaker of y^e Parl., layeth hold upon his Mat^{ty} most free and generall pardon.

1660. Col. Will. Hawley, and Col. Hercules Low, authorized to seize concealed goods belonging to the King, procure a warrant to seize the 1,023^o of plate in the possession of Col. C. Mildmay, which had been allowed to him by the Parl. Commissioners in satisfaction of his claim for wages unpaid. Many papers on this subject. Col. Mildmay's petition, and statements of his services; the case referred to the Duke of Ormond. Mr. Solicitor's report; and the D. of O's report, with the order of Council in favour of Col. Mildmay. The case does not seem to have been finally decided until 1667.

1669. Jun. 27. Order of the Lord and Counsell annulling the Commission given to Col. Hawley and Col. Lowe, upon the petition of Th^o Garrett of Norwich, from whom they had taken 700*l.* It is also ordered that they send in an inventory "of all such goods, 'hangings, pictures, books, plate and jewells as they 'have seized."

CAPT. H. G.
ST. JOHN MILDMAY,
R.N.

Col. Mildmay states among the mems. of his services, that in 1642, all the other officers in the Jewel-house left, but that he remained, executed several warrants issued from the Court from York and Nottingham to deliver presents to the Assessors, &c. and remained in charge until in 1649 he was turned out by the Parl. Council. That he was accused of assisting the Duke of York to come from St. James's; that he always refused to take any part in the thing; that he never bought any of the king's goods notwithstanding the opportunities he had to "buy good pennyworths as others did;" that when "the devilish petition requiring justice of Parl. against the king was brought into Essex," from whence it might be "handed thorow y^e whole nation" with "the horrid design of making the whole nation guilty of his Mat^e's blood, I spake my harte, which gave it such a checke that the whole company cryed out, away with it, burn it, so that it was never attempted after." That he with some of the tenants bought up their shares from the soldiers amongst whom the royal manor of Havering had been divided, in order to preserve the wood, &c. for the king. And that on account of his opposition to the Parl., &c. he was assaulted and pistolled on the highway.

SPEECHES, &c.

1601. Copy of the speech of Queen Elizabeth to Parliament, promising reform of the abuses in monopolies, &c.

1603. May 12. Sir Edward Hobbie in Parliament. (5 pages.) "Arcana imperii be not only for knowledge and speculation butt also for practice, &c."

1621. June 4. A declaration of the Commons House of Parliament.

"The Comons assembled in Parliament taking into their most serious consideration the present estate of the king's children abroad, and the genrall afflicted estate of the true professors of the same Christian religion, professed by the Church of England . . . beseech his Mat^e not to suffer any longer delay . . . that they will, if negotiations fail, assist him with their lives and fortunes."

1628. Jan. 26. Mr Rowse his speech.

Begins. "We have of late entered into consideration of the petition of right and the violations of it" . . . Ends. "And to this covenant let every one say Amen."

King Charles's speech in Parliament.

Begins. "My Lords and gentlemen, these times are for action, wherefore for example sake I mean not to spend much time in words." . . .

Ends. "I assure you I shall very easily and gladly forget and forgive what is past so you at this time leave the former ways, &c. &c."

Saturday. King Charles's speech to the Parliament in the Banqueting House at Whitehall.

Begins. "It will become us thankfully to acknowledge the prudent and painfull endeavours of my Lords the Peeres, &c."

Ends. "Wherein I presume all our desires and prayers do meet."

The resolution of the Lower House when the king's speech was read in both Houses on the Monday following.

"That this House thinkes fitt that a friendly assistance and releef shall be given towards supply of the losses and necessities of the Scotts, &c." With the following comment:—

"This was their order. And marke what Mat^e the sense of their stile carries, as though their intentions to the Scotts were procured by their compassion and noble charitie to the Scotts, and not constrained by our necessities to do otherwise."

1640. Wednesday, April 15th. His Mat^e being seated in the throne, Mr Sciriant Glanville was called to the Barr, being presented by the House of Comons as their Speaker, who . . . spence as followeth. "May it please Mat^e, your knights, citizens of your Comons House of Parl. in conformity to an antient and most constant usage . . .

Ends. A speaker "worthy of your Mat^e Royall attestation."

The Lord Keeper after direction received from his Mat^e answered . . .

And then Mr Speaker addressing himself to his Mat^e said,

"My profession hath taught me that from the . . . a . . . I shall not writt of error . . .

Ends. The best conclusion of their words and . . . and of mine . . . particularly . . .

1640. May 5. The king's speech at the breaking of y^e Parliament. "My Lords. There can noe occasion of my cominge to the House be soe displeasinge to me as this at this tyme" . . .

Ends. "And now my Lord Keeper doe as I have commanded you."—"The Lord Keeper then added,

"My Lords and you gentlemen of y^e House of Comons, the king's Mat^e doth dissolve this Parliament."

1640. April 16. Mr Grymston's speech in Parliament:

"We are called by his Mat^e to consult of great and weighty affairs, there hath been a great business presented to y^e house by a noble gent. y^e spake last"

Ends. "I must leave it to the judgment of this House wheather our danger heer at home be not as great . . . as that which was presented by the noble gent. that spake last."

1640. April. Mr Rowse speech in Parliament.

"I find in y^e report y^e hath pleased his Mat^e y^e our greivances should be shewed and remedy given."

Ends . . . "there hath not been such a thing done since Israel came from Egipt of Rome. Consider of it, take advise, and speake your minds."

1640. May 5. "The Earle of Stratford's counsell given to the king at the counsel table.—It was given in evidence against him at his tryal by Sir Hen. Vaine, secretly."

Sir Benjamin Rudyard's speech in Parliament.

"There is nowe a great doore nowe oppned unto us of doeing good" . . .

Ends. "For when Parliaments are gone then wee are lost."

Mr Pymm's speech at the conference with the Lords.

"My Lords, I am comanded by the knights and burgesses assembled for the Comons in Parliament, and represent to y^e Lordships" . . .

Ends. "the safety and prosperity of the kingdom, and the comfort and contentment of both Houses."

Sir francis Seamour's speech in Parliament.

"His Mat^e I believe hath as great affection to Parliaments as ever, and none especially to subsidies"

Ends. "in all these things I doubt not but of his Mat^e's justice and protection."

Another speech of Sir francis Semer.

"This is the great counsell of the kingdom, and here, if not here alone, his Mat^e may see, as in a true glasse, the state of his kingdom."

Ends. "What I now say or shall say I submit to better judgments."

Mr Pyme's speech in the House of Comons.

"He that takes away waights from the motion doth as good service as he that adds winges to it" . . .

Ends. "which was hindered by the interruption of the darknesse."

An abridgment of Mr Bagshawe's reading.

"1st. Whether an Act of Parliament may pass . . . the spiritnall dissenting or not being there."

"2nd. Whether a beneficed clarke may be a Justice of the Peace."

1641. May 1. The heads of the king's speech in the Lords house.

"I had no intention to speak of this busines this day, w^{ch} is the great buines concerninge the Earle of Stratford."

Ends. "I shall not be wanting on my part for restoring a happy peace and tranquillity."

A pamphlet containing 3 speeches of Sir Benjamin Rudyer.

J. A. BENNETT.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF WILLIAM MORE MOLYNEUX, ESQ., OF LOSELEY PARK, GUILDFORD, CO. SURREY.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
ESQ.

For the noble collection of writings, which has afforded entertainment and instruction to successive generations of historical inquirers, and made Loseley House a place of especial interest to antiquaries, Mr. More Molyneux is indebted chiefly to three official personages, who followed one another in the century that opened in Henry the Eighth's brightest term, and closed in the last year of James the First. A few words about the careers of these three worthies will aid the reader in forming a general conception of the literary material they transmitted to their posterity.

A London citizen, who acquired from a commercial training some of the knowledge and endowments which qualified him for courtly service and places, Sir Thomas

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

Cawarden, a gentleman of Henry the Eighth's Privy Chamber, was Keeper of the Tents, Master of the Revels, and Keeper of the palace and parks of Nonesuch to Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth. The ensuing catalogue affords numerous particulars respecting his action in these offices, as well as in other employments, and furnishes conclusive evidence of the favour extended to him by successive sovereigns. Henry's license permitting him to have a company of forty armed and liveried retainers, in addition to his domestic servants and official subordinates, is at the same time an illustration of the sovereign's confidence in the subject's loyalty, and also of the feudal state which Sir Thomas maintained at Blechingley Castle. At the present date, however, the student's chief interest in the doings of this adroit and fortunate placeman has reference to his tenure of the office that rendered him a patron of dramatic genius, and invested him with the influence of a supreme theatrical manager, in times prior to the establishment of permanent public theatres. It will be a matter for congratulation to Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical Manuscripts that their careful examination of the documents at Loseley House has been fruitful of some interesting discoveries respecting Sir Thomas Cawarden's administration of the office of the Revels, and its effect on the English stage. Master Wylam Baldwyn's letter (A.D. 1556) to Sir Thomas Cawarden is a remarkable exemplification of the relations that existed between the Master of the Revels and writers for the stage in times closely anterior to the Shakespearian epoch. The influence of the same officer and of his department on dramatic art is yet more fully exhibited in the documents which indicate that the Blackfriars Theatre, with which William Shakespeare's name is imperishably associated, was the direct offspring of the school of actors and acting which arose under Sir Thomas Cawarden's fostering care in the premises, where he stored his scenic properties, and prepared players and their parts for presentation at court, or in the houses of the principal nobility.

On Sir Thomas Cawarden's death in the second year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, the writings, which had accumulated on his hands during his long occupancy of various offices, passed to his friend and executor Mr. (afterwards Sir) William More, of Loseley House, the second of the three chief contributors to the multifarious treasures of the Loseley muniment room. Together with these memorials of Sir Thomas Cawarden's official labours, Mr. More (on the death of Lady Cawarden, who was the other executor of her husband's testament) acquired possession of the Blackfriars' estate, i.e., the house and precinct of the suppressed black friars in London,—which had been granted to the Master of the Revels and the Tents in the time of Edward the Sixth. It was thus that the knight of Loseley was enabled to convey to James Burbadge (4 February 1595) the premises which had been Sir Thomas Cawarden's office of the Revels 35 years before their conversion into the Blackfriars Theatre of the public entertainer. Thus also it was that Sir George More (Sir William's son, and the third of the three principal depositors of the Loseley manuscripts) was enabled to convey to James Burbadge's sons, Cuthbert and Richard, a messuage adjoining the same theatre, by an indenture dated 26 June 1601.

In material affluence, mental activity, and a natural aptitude for official work, Sir William More bore a considerable resemblance to Sir Thomas Cawarden. The son of Sir Christopher More (the Remembrancer of the Court of Exchequer, who acquired Loseley by purchase in Henry the Seventh's time, and lived to attend Anne of Cleves, on her arrival in this country, to Henry the Eighth's presence), Sir William More was a man of affairs from his early manhood to his late decay. A justice of the peace for the county of Surrey, in an age when the labours of the magistracy were far more onerous and perplexing than they are at present, Sir William was remarkable throughout Elizabeth's reign for the zeal and pleasure he exhibited in transacting the public business of his division of the shire. He was also a deputy-lieutenant for the county, at a time when Lord Howard of Effingham thought four deputies an adequate staff for the performance of the duties of his lieutenancy throughout the county; and a vice-admiral for the county of Sussex, in years when the safety of the country required especial vigilance in officers entrusted with the custody of coasts and ports. He was twice sheriff of Surrey and Sussex in Elizabeth's reign. Nor did zealous concern for the affairs of a district preclude him from ambition to figure in the council of the nation. Having represented the borough of Guildford in several parliaments, he was elected a knight for his native shire. Like his father he was also the ulnager for the counties of Surrey and Sussex, and a verderer of Windsor Forest. A cursory survey of the catalogue of the Loseley papers will satisfy readers that mention is here made of only a few of the employments of this busy man, who was placed on numerous commissions touching the affairs of his county, and who during a great part of Elizabeth's reign was regarded as her agent for matters of state in every hundred of Surrey.

Himself a man of official powers and pride, Sir William was fortunate in having children who inherited his taste for business and strengthened his position. Having equalled or even surpassed his father's activity, as a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant of Surrey, Sir George More represented Surrey and Guildford in successive parliaments, frequented the courts of Elizabeth and James, was receiver-general and treasurer to Henry Prince of Wales, became Chancellor of the order of the Garter, and was lieutenant of the Tower at the time of the imprisonment of the Earl and Countess of Somerset. Having at an early date of her story survived her first husband Mr. Polstede, Sir William's daughter Elizabeth married for her second husband Sir John Wolley, Queen Elizabeth's Latin Secretary, and for her third husband lord-keeper Egerton, afterwards lord-chancellor Ellesmere. The letters addressed by the lord-chancellor to his father-in-law, Sir William, and his brother-in-law Sir George More, are a notable part of the domestic correspondence which renders the Loseley MSS. especially interesting to biographers.

So much has been said and written about the contents of the Loseley muniment room, that many readers will learn with surprise how much was left for the present reporter to accomplish for the adequate exhibition of its multifarious records. Familiar with the papers which successive explorers in those archives have communicated to the Society of Antiquaries, and with the comprehensive volume of "Loseley Manuscripts," edited by Mr. Alfred John Kempe, F.S.A., and published by Mr. John Murray in 1835, I made my first visit to Loseley House, under the impression that my report on its literary treasures would be little more than a note of reference to the contents of Mr. Kempe's volume and certain papers published in the "Archæologia," with a list of some hundred or two hundred matters which the searchers for documents of higher moment had either overlooked or disdained to notice. A single morning spent in a preliminary survey of the Loseley muniment room, satisfied me that the task assigned to me by Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical Manuscripts would be much more laborious than I had anticipated. I found in that chamber the nine folio volumes into which Mr. William Bray of Shere, the honourably remembered editor of Evelyn's "Diary and Memoirs," gathered half a century since a considerable proportion of the documents. At the same time I found on the closely packed shelves and in full drawers of the strong closet of the same apartment a large quantity of old account books, journals, patents, deeds, official records, private letters, and miscellaneous memoranda of which the world had never been informed, though the orderliness of their arrangement indicated a purpose to render them serviceable to students. In other recesses of the closet I came upon bags and parcels of writings that had been put away without any attempt to classify them, or even to reduce them to chronological order. Lastly, I was invited by Mr. More Molyneux to examine the contents of a large antique chest and certain boxes which were believed to have escaped the curious observation of all previous searchers of the chamber. At the bottom of this chest (containing documents of every age from the twelfth to the seventeenth century), I came upon "The Boke of ordinary charges of the trayne of Sir Anthonie Broune, knight, the Kinges Ambassadors going into Fraunce in Maii A° 1532," the charter of Robert the son of Odo's grant, in the twelfth century, to the church and canons of Chilworth, and the other charters of later dates of the same century that are printed at the opening of my catalogue.

How little Mr. Kempe's "Loseley Manuscripts" (1835) deserves to be regarded as an adequate exhibition of the literary treasures, with which his name has been associated for 43 years, may be seen from the fact that whereas my list of the writings sets forth the contents of 2,240 manuscripts, the entire number of the records noticed in his volume (including a few printed documents) does not exceed 214. That is to say, when papers noticed incidentally have been taken into the account, the book does not mention so many as a tenth part of the manuscripts deserving of notice. Nor can it be urged that, whilst rejecting records of inferior quality, he calls attention to most of the writings of high

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

moment. The case is far otherwise. Of the important group of writings that relate to the first establishment of the Blackfriars theatre, Mr. Kempe mentions only the letter written by Lord Hunsdon to Sir William More on 9 Jan. 1595; dismissing it with a brief note of four lines. Of the pile of warrants and letters from the Queen or her council, that enable readers to realize with stirring vividness the military activity of the southern counties and the martial fervour of the entire nation on the approach of the Spanish armada, he gives only three examples. He barely indicates the extraordinary richness of the collection in respect to official documents that exhibit the main principles and minutest details of Elizabeth's system of government. His specimens of the private correspondence of Elizabethan worthies are more numerous, but they afford no sufficient view of the copiousness and variety of the biographical illustrations of the collection. About the old charters he is quite silent. Though he intimates that his researches in the Loseley MSS. have not been confined to the documents which Mr. Bray arranged and put in covers, his volume contains little which was not taken from the folios of selected manuscripts. On the other hand, it may be remarked of the useful though insufficient volume, that the fullness and general accuracy of its transcriptions entitle it to a permanent place in libraries of reference. Of the 214 writings which he noticed, Mr. Kempe printed 173 in extenso. In the ensuing list every reference to "Kempe's Loseley MSS." implies that the document under consideration is given at large, or at considerable length, in that volume.

Of the 2,240 manuscripts displayed in the catalogue it may be remarked that only 26 were written in pre-Tudor periods, and no more than 420 in days subsequent to Elizabeth's death. Of the Stuart documents, 240 belong to James the First's reign, and 94 to Charles the First's time. Of the 1,816 Tudor writings, 101 were penned in Henry the Eighth's time, 163 in Edward the Sixth's reign, 94 in the days of Mary, and 1,417 in the "spacious times of great Elizabeth."

The largeness and defective arrangement of the collection rendering it impossible for me to produce a catalogue which, in the present state of the miscellaneous accumulation, would greatly diminish the searcher's difficulty in finding the particular records in which he may be interested, I determined, in the preparation of my list, to aim less at conciseness than at an explanatory amplitude that should satisfy, whilst provoking, the peruser's curiosity. With Mr. Kempe's book and the volumes of the "Archæologia" at his side, the student will not come, in the following catalogue, on many matters respecting which he will find it necessary to seek further information at Loseley.

12th Century.—Charter of Robert, son of Odo, of Lochesleia (Loseley), granting for ever, a virgate of land with appurtenances and villeins in Loseley aforesaid, to the church and canons of St. Mary of Kinildew' (Chilworth, co. Surrey):—

Omnibus sancte ecclesie Robertus filius Odonis de Lochesleia, salutem. Sciant omnes tam presentes quam posteri, quod ego, pro salute anime mee, et gratuito assensu heredum meorum, concessi et in perpetuam elemosinam donavi ecclesie sancte Marie de Kinildew' et canonicis ibidem Deo servientibus unam virgatam terre in Lochesleia, illam scilicet quam Gilebertus niger et Herding del hulle tenent, et ipsos cum tota progenie eorum que sub ipsorum potestate fuit tempore quo hec donatio facta. Ipsi vero canonici quietum clamauerunt unum bordagium cum tofta et crofta, et duas solidatas terre quas eis uendideram in eadem uilla, que continentur in carta mea quam habent de centum et xx acris terre, et quatuor marcas argenti quas mihi commodauerint. Quare uolo et firmiter statuo, ut predicti canonici habeant et teneant supra nominatam virgatam terre cum omnibus que ad eam pertinent, quietam et liberam ab omni seruitio et exactione seculari ad me et ad heredes meos pertinente; salvo tuncleco seruitio, et ad nullus heredum uel hominum meorum huic mee donationi contra-ire, uel eam perturbare presumat. Hii sunt testes. Willelm presbyter de Lochesleia, Robertus capellanus de Mort', Fredericus de Bispes, Johannes de Clifford, Hugo de Torond', Johannes de Walet, Radulphus de Braal, Thomas de Mort', Ricardus de Mort', Rogerus frater ejus, Rogerus Hast', Ricardus filius Rogeri, Walterus Massey, Odo Durnasal, Ricardus filius Twein, cum multis aliis.

12th Century.—Charter of manumission, executed by Thurstan the dispensary, for his villein Andrew of Tereswerch and his progeny, &c., in the form of a deed of sale and quit-claim, whereby the said Thurstan conveyed all his right in the said Andrew and his issue to the Lord Hugh de Dol, and his heirs, on condition that neither the said Hugh nor his heirs should ever demand more than an annual rent of one penny from the said Andrew and his heirs, in lieu of all services:—

Sciatis presentes et futuri, quod Ego Thurstanus dispensarius vendidi et concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui, pro me et pro heredibus meis, Domino Hugoni de Dol, pro viginti solidis quos mihi dedit, Andream de Tereswerch', filium Aldesini Balemund de Tereswerch', natiuum meum cum omni sequela sua, et omne jus et clamum quod habui uel habere potui in ipso Andrea, uel in sequela sua, ratione alicujus natiuitatis, dicto Hugoni et heredibus suis, pro me et pro heredibus meis solum et quietum clamaui, in perpetuum. Et ne ego predictus Thurstanus uel heredes mei in dicto Andrea uel in sequela sua aliquid juris exigere uel vendicare decetero possimus, eidem Andree et omni sequele sue pro me et pro heredibus meis perpetuam dedi et concessi libertatem. Et sciendum quod predictus Hugo de Dol, nec aliquis heredum suorum potest nec debet aliquid exigere uel vendicare ratione huius predictæ emptionis a dicto Andrea, uel ab heredibus suis, nisi tantum redditum vnius denarii quolibet anno soluendum ad Festum Sancti Michaelis. Et ut hec mea donatio et concessio, et presentis carte mee warrantizatio et confirmatio firme et stabiles permaneant in perpetuum, presentem cartam sigilli mei impressione roborauimus. Hiis testibus, Domino Gileberto de Baseuile, Domino Thoma de Hurtine, Rogero le Gras, Gregory de Dona, Johanne de Parco, Johanne de Albury, Johanne de Stoctune, Hugone fratre suo, Johanne Hereman, Ricardo constabulario de Guldeford, Henric de Dona, Godefrido de Polstede, Ricardo capellano de Waneburg', et multis aliis.

12th Century.—Grant and quit-claim executed by Udelina de Fellech, in favour of the lord Hugh of Dol' and his heirs, in respect of her right of dower in the lands and possessions of William de Santefande and Robert Holewei:—

Notum sit omnibus hominibus presens scriptum visuris uel auditoris, quod ego Udelina de Fellech' concessi et quietum clamaui Domino Hugoni de Dol et heredibus suis omne jus et clamum quod habui uel habere potui nomine dotis, in terris, redditibus, et tenementis, Willelmi de Santefande, et Roberti Holewei. Ita quod ego predicta Udelina de cetero nullum jus uel clamum ratione dotis, exigere uel uendicare potero. In hujus rei testimonium, presenti scripto sigillum meum apposui. Hiis testibus, Rogero le Gras, Ricardo de Frollebury, Jordano de Monte, Henrico de Dona, Roberto de Parco, Godefrido de Polstede, et multis aliis.

12th Century.—Charter of Udelina de Broc, widow, conveying all her right in Osbert of Chertsand and his issue to the lord Richard de Dol, in order that the same Richard may confer perpetual liberty on the said Osbert and his offspring:—

Sciatis presentes et futuri quod ego Udelina de Broc in viduitate et libera proprietate mea dedi et concessi et quietum clamaui Domino Ricardo de Dol' Osbertum de Chertsand cum tota sequela sua et omnem natiuitatem quam in eo uel in suis habui uel in posterum habere potui absque contradicione uel reclamatione mei uel heredum meorum. Ita scilicet quod predictus Ricardus de dol predicto Osberto et omni sue sequele perpetuam conferat libertatem. Hiis testibus, Domino Michael de Polstede, Toma de hercina(?), Ricardo de Hameld', Waltero de Monsted, Willelmo de la dona, Ricardo de Sanct Fand, Petro de Cheddingefold, Ricardo del oc', et aliis multis.

12th Century.—Charter of grant by the abbot and convent of Waverley to Richard de Dol and his heirs for ever, of a certain piece of land near Pisaniers, at an annual rent of two shillings and three pence. Witnesses, Gilbert de Baseuill', William de Wyke, William de la Dune, William le Gras, William Toln', Gilbert de Denhurst, Nicholas de Monte, John de Parco, Thomas de Dol, and many others.

13th Century (temp. John).—Charter of grant, whereby Ralph the fugler and Iselya his wife gave and conveyed a virgate of land with appurtenances in the manor of Odiham (co. Hants) to Geoffrey of Bath, the cook of the lord King:—

Sciatis presentes et futuri quod ego Radulfus le Fugelere, et ego Iselya vxor eius vnacum assensu consilio et bona uoluntate dedimus et concessimus, et presenti carta nostra confirmauimus Galfrido de Bathon' coco domini Regis pro homagio et seruitio suo vniam virgatam terre cum omnibus pertinentiis suis in manerio de Odiham, illam scilicet virgatam terre cum pertinentiis, quam Hugo de la Gureche pater dicte Iselle quondam tenuit, Habendum et tenendum eidem Galfrido et heredibus suis, et cui dare, legare, vendere, uel assignare

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

noluerit, de nobis et heredibus nostris, bene libere, quiete, integre, plenarie jure hereditatis in perpetuum cum omnibus libertatibus, et liberis consuetudinibus infra villam et extra in viis, semitis, sepibus, pratis, pasturis, aquis, et omnibus aliis pertinentiis, et eschaetis, quae nobis inde et heredibus nostris aliquo tempore in posterum contingere possint, Reddendo inde annuatim nobis et heredibus nostris in festo sancti Michaelis Unum Denarium, pro omni seruicio, consuetudine, et exactione, salvo seruicio domini Regis. Nos uero et heredes nostri dictam virgatam cum pertinentiis dicto Galfrido et heredibus suis et assignatis contra omnes homines et feminas in perpetuum warantizabimus per memoratum seruicium. Pro hac autem donatione, concessione, warantizatione, et presentis carte nostre confirmatione dedit nobis memoratis Galfridus viginti marcas argenti in Gersumma. Ut igitur horum donatio et concessio perpetua stabilitate futuris temporibus firmitatis robur optineat, presentem cartam sigillorum nostrorum impressione roborauimus. Hiis testibus, Godefrido de * et Johanne filio Philippi senescalli domini Rogeri, Radulpho filio Ricardi tunc senescalli comitis Pembroke, Waltero Bluet, Bartholomeo Pechie, Willelmo Gernum, Johanne de Plassetis, Galfrido Aurum, Stephano de Bendeng', Vincentio tunc constabulario, Roberto Nigro tunc seruiente de hundredo, Roberti filio Rogeri, Adam de la Hale, et multis aliis.

Petition (drawn in Norman French. A tres excellent et tres gracionse seignieure notre seigneur le Roy) of the humble and impoverished tenants of the royal manor of Wyttelle, co. Surrey; praying, in consideration of their poverty, for a remission of their obligation to pay the King an annual talliage of iiii l. The date of this petition does not appear.

Copy of the charter whereby William de Wyntreshull gave and conveyed his lands, tenements, &c. &c., in Polstede in the parish of Compton, co. Surrey, to his son Walter and his heirs for ever. No date.

18 February. Letter addressed by H. Warrewyk, from his lodge at Tenkesbury to Sir William Beauchamp. For the protection of Sir William of Chiviel, who has been beaten, vexed and troubled by one John Smith, a tenant of the writer's lordship of Chyvyell. Sir William Beauchamp is further enjoined to "tendre and favour al" the writer's "tenauntes there." No date of year.

St. Mark's Day, 1303. Indenture of agreement between William, son and heir of John Langere de Bregg' near Wandsworth, co. Surrey, of the one part, and Elyas "de camerâ Prioris de Mertona" of the other part, whereby in consideration of a certain sum of money paid to him, the said William grants and lets to farm all his place in the parish of Baterichesseie, together with 27 acres of arable land in the town of Bregges, and all other land in the "villa de Bregges and Baterichesseie" accruing to him by inheritance after his father's death, to the said Elyas for the term of 40 years, beginning at the feast of John in the aforesaid year. Sealed by the parties aforesaid in the presence of Thomas de Lodolowe, Richard de la Golhorde, John de Crippe, Geoffrey de Heyford, Richard Roofe, John de Wyppesnad'. Dated at Bregges in the parish of Baterichesseie.

6 Henry III. Particulars of an inquisition, touching the vill of Ertington, at one time of the manor of Godalmyng, taken in the abovesaid year before Thomas Atwyn, escheator. Also, on the same paper, a collection of data respecting the manor of Ertington, alias Ertington, alias Artington, co. Surrey, from 2 Edw. III. to 39 Eliz.

6 March, 3 Edward III. Grant for life by Edmund de Cheyne, William de Forde clerk, John de Evesham, Thomas de Baa, John Thedemarerssh, William de Stoke of the manor of Nethercan with the hamlet of Hakeleston, to the lord Almaric de St. Amand, with remainder in tail male to the said lord's son Almaric and Ida his wife, and their issue.

17 Edward III. Records of views of frank-pledge on the manors of Godalmyng, Cattishull and Lowsley. Vellum roll.

15 August, 43 Edward III. Patent of grant, during pleasure, to Almaric de St. Amand, of the office of captain and keeper of the town of Southampton.

3 November, 18 Richard II. Copy of the rent-roll of William Weston in Ertington made 3 November, 18 Richard II.:—the total of the rents being iiii l. xlii s. i d. ob q. At the foot of the roll, a memorandum that the original document is "in custodia nostri Ricardi Ludlowe armigeri."

1 to 21 Ric. II. Court Rolls of the manor of Todyngton, 1 to 21 Ric. II.

1 January 1417. Last will and testament (drawn in Latin) of Thomas Sutton, of the parish of St. Bartholomew in London.

21 March, 14 Hen. VI. The return of an inquisition held at Kingston, co. Surrey, on 21 May, 14 Hen. VI., before the Abbot of Chertsey, John Eryby, John Gaynesford, Richard Dalyngrygge sheriff of co. Surrey, commissioners to discover what persons dwelling within the said co. have manors, lands, rents or offices, &c. to the annual value of one hundred shillings. The return gives the entire list of persons ascertained to possess at least that annual income, and also a list of those persons who, in obedience to summons, appeared before the commissioners, and stated the exact amounts of their revenues to the best of their ability.

14 September, 1440. Last will and testament of Valentine Baret, esq., of the parish of Perston, near Farnham.

26 and 27 Henry VI. Records of views of frank-pledge and courts baron on the manor of Godalmyng in the aforesaid years. Vellum roll.

14 February, 36 Henry VI. A confirmation of a grant, executed by William Havelok in favour of William Witteryng and others, in respect to a tenement in Stratford Langthorn, co. Essex.

24 January, 8 Edward IV. Indenture of an agreement whereby, in consideration of cxv li. paid and acknowledged, Sir William Parre, knight, conveys to John Bedhamd citizen and fishmonger of London, "the godes ann Jewelles folowyng that is to say, First a rounde Basyb. of siluer knopped weying by the weight of Troy v lb weght and iii ounces. Item two playn basyns of siluer weying by the said weght xii lb. weght save an ounce. Item a laver of siluer weying by the weght of Troy iii lb. weght iii ounces. Item another lavert of siluer weying by the said weght iii lb. weght iiii ounces and di. Item xii bolle peces of siluer with round Bolyons weying by the weght aforesaid xvi lb. weght. Item two quart pottes of siluer chased weying by the weght aforesaid vi lb. weght and vi ounces. Item vi peces with a coueryng of siluer chased weying by the weght abovesaid vii lb. weght and iii ounces. Item two standyng cuppes of siluer and gilt couered weying by the said weght of Troy v lb. iiii ounces. Item a litell salt saler of cristallyn garnysshed with gold, To have and hold, &c. &c. &c." on the condition that should "the said Sir William wele and trewly pay or doo pay vnto the said John Bedham or to his attourne or executors in the parisshe chirche of Saynt Mary atte Hill besyde Bilyngesgate of London cxv li. sterlinges in the fest of the Nativitie of Saynt John the Baptist next comyng after the date of this indenture that then the said bargayn and sale of the said godes and Jewelles shall be voyd. . . . and the same godes and Jewelles shall be relyuered vnto the said Sir William or to his attourne so paying the said cxv li."

13 December, 1469. Last will and testament of Johanne Crompe of London, widow. Notable for the fulness and preciseness of the descriptions of the articles of plate and other chattels bequeathed by the testator to her son Edward.

6 October, 12 Edward IV. List of the sums of money assessed on and levied in the several counties and principal cities of the kingdom, in respect of a tenth granted by parliament at the afore-given date to Edward the Fourth.

6 October, 12 Edward IV. A schedule of the proportions assessed in the several counties of a tenth granted by parliament to Edward the Fourth in the twelfth year of his reign.

— Richard III. The account (on parchment) of William Compworth and his associates, collectors of two whole fifteenths and tenths (granted to Edward IV. lately de facto king of England by the parliament held at Westminster in the eighth year of his reign) in the county of Surrey, as well within as without the liberties thereof, the borough of Suthwerk excepted. The account exhibits the sums raised in the several hundreds and parishes of the county, as well as the total.—cccc lxiii li. ix s. With a duplicate of the same account on paper. No date.

15th cent. Liber Astrologus. A treatise on astrology, covering 80 paper pages small 4^o, in vellum wrapper.

31 July, 1 Henry VII. This bill witnesseth that I Thomas Garth on of the executors of my lord Cardinale haue deliuered vnto John More on of my lordes prayours a standing cup siluer and gilt with a couer weying xx iiii xvi vnces price th vnce iiii s., Summa, xix li. iiii s., wherof I haue resceded in redy money towards the payment of my said lordes dettes at Bassettes Place xiii li. viii d., and I haue deliuered to him in party of payment of his duety and reward cxviii. iiii d., and . . . shall content him the remanet which draweth

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

iiii^l. lii. viii^l. written with my owne hande the laste day of July the first yere of the regne of king Harry the VIIth.

Michaelmas, 2 Henry VII. A rentale of the lordship of Godalmyng.

1 Henry VII. Balance sheet of accounts between John Symond, gentleman, and John Swerder of London, goldsmith.

12 Henry VII. Assessment in the county of Surrey of a subsidy granted in the aforegiven year.

20 February, 20 Henry VII. Receipt of Richard Chesilhurst, gentleman, for xiiii^l. vii. viii^l. paid him by Cristofer More in respect of the office of ulnager of cos. Surrey and Sussex. Also, numerous receipts for payments made by the same ulnager, and copies of enrolled acquittances in respect to his accounts, temp. Hen. VIII., Edward, and Mary.

31 December, 23 Henry VII. Deed of conveyance, by Agnes Carden, widow and late wife of Thomas Carden late of Euerton, co. Huntingdon, and John Fitz., gentleman, to William Carden of London, fuller, and Robert Bendowe and William Massy, of certain messuages with lands and pastures, &c., lying in Euerton aforesaid, formerly pertaining to the said Agnes and John in conjunction with Henry Rutter of Potton, co. Beds, yeoman and Thomas Clerke of the same place.

10 January, 24 Henry VII., Manor of Loseley. Volume, in vellum wrapper, of records of views of frankpledge and proceedings in courts baron of the manor of Loseley. Beginning with proceedings of 10 Jan., 24 Hen. VII., and closing with years in the time of James I.

10 January, 24 Henry VII. to St. Matthew's day, 32 Hen. VIII. Records of views of frankpledge on the manor of Lowsle from 24 Hen. VII. to 32 Hen. VIII. Vellum roll.

10 January, 24 Henry VII. Record of the proceedings of the first court held by Christopher More in the manor of Lowsle on 11 January, 24 Henry VII. :—described at the head of the parchment,—“Lowsle, Curia Prima Cristopheri More undecimo die Januarii Regis Henrici Septimi vicesimo quarto.

12 April, 35 Henry VII. Loose sheet from an account-book; exhibiting acknowledgments of two sums of money, 200*li*. and 300*li*. The first of these entries is, “xii. April, A^o xxxv Re. of the Kynges Maiestie by the “handes of Anthony Denye as by a byll subscribed by “the handes of Thomas Cawarden, esq., Jo. Bernard, “John Bredge, John Colyer and Thomas Hale more “playnlie appereth—et c.”

31 August, 2 Henry VIII. Receipt of Mistress Elyzabeth Dudley for money and cloth, amounting to iii^l. lii. viii^l. vid., delivered to her by William Karden.

8 Henry VIII. A Terror of the landes of Sir William Ulvedale, knyght, and Christopher More lying in Coparsionary in the parisshe of Shalford, co. Surrey. Also a Terrer of landes in Warnham, co. Surrey, belonging to Christopher More, esquier.

10 April 1513. The last will and testament of Richard Turnour “dwellyng within the precyncte of the Freers “Prechars by Ludgate in the cite of London.”

1513. Certaine statutes and ordinances of Warre made ordeyned enacted and established by the most noble victorious and most Crysten Prynce, our most dreade Souverayne lorde kynge Henry the VIII. Printed Pamphlet. (Vide Kempe’s “Loseley MSS.”)

5 May, 5 Henry VIII. Charter whereby William Fytzwyllim, esq., steward of the lordships and manors of Warpesdon and Wytley, co. Sarrey, appointed Christopher More to be sub-steward of the same lordships and manors during the grantor’s life.

26 November 1514. Six papers relating to the descent of lands in the family of Michell: including a copy of the will of Rycharde Michell of the parish of Warnham alias Whanham (co. Sussex?).

7 & 8 Henry VIII. Farnham. A ledger (roughly kept) of records of proceedings in the courts of the manors pertaining to the bishopric of Winchester. In a paper wrapper inscribed “Farnham.”

10 April, 8 Henry VIII. Record of the view of frankpledge with the court held at the manor of Hampsted Marchall, 16 April, 8 Hen. VIII.

11 February 9 Henry VIII. Patent, under the great seal, of a grant for life, to John Askewe, (yeoman for the mouth of the king’s very dear consort Catherine queen of England) of the office janitor of the castle of Sandale co York, and of the office of keeper of the royal park there; on the surrender by Robert Ryssheton of a patent, dated 5 May 1484, in the first year of the king’s reign, granting the same offices to the said Robert, in succession to John Savell, knight, who had previously held the same.

9 and 10 Henry VIII. Records of views of frankpledge on the manor of Godalmyng in aforesaid years. Vellum roll.

10 November, 1518. Paper containing copies of six letters in French,—touching the embassy of the earl of Worcester, the bishop of Ely and others to the court of France, to obtain redress and satisfaction for injuries done to English merchants and shipping by French pirates. The correspondence includes a letter from the queen of England to the queen of France, for the preservation of friendship between the kings their husbands, and four letters from Cardinal Wolsey, archbishop of York. (1.) Wolsey’s letter commending the ambassadors to the French king’s favour: (2.) The cardinal’s letter of special introduction for the bishop of Ely, to whose words the king is entreated to give particular attention: (3.) The cardinal’s letter of complaint that twenty-four English ships with their cargoes, valued at ten or twelve thousand escus d’or, have been seized by certain of the French king’s subjects, who have sold and distributed the same at Rochelle, Bordeaux, Bretagne, and other places. (4.) The same cardinal’s cordial acknowledgement of the prompt and complete satisfaction rendered by the same king’s minister in respect to the matter of grievance; this last-mentioned epistle being a reply to a letter (signed—Francas and the secretary Robert) addressed “a Mons. le Cardinal Dyorck.”

10 and 11 Henry VIII. Bishopric of Bath and Wells. The account (on a paper roll) of Master John Moyne, clerk, receiver-general of the bishoprics of Bath and Wells, of all his receipts and disbursements in the same office for an entire year, ended Michaelmas 11 Henry VIII.

1 August, 11 Henry VIII. Mandate and warrant by Sir Thomas Lovell, knt., justice itinerant of all the kings forests, &c. this side the Trent, and chief keeper of the game and the wild animals of the same, to the keeper of Windsor forest within the bailiwick of Surrey or his deputy there, to deliver to Christopher More and William Westbroke, verderers of the said forest, yearly a fee stag in summer and a fee hind in winter.

4 November, 12 Henry VIII. Copy on paper of a charter of exemplification, with confirmation, issued under the great seal at the aforegiven date, of the charter of Edward II., empowering and licensing the parson of the church of St. Nicholas of Guildford, co. Surrey, (and his successors) to hold a yearly fair at his “chapelle of Seynt Katheryn the virgen in the hill “cauled Drakhui, otherwise cauled Katharyn hill “next Guyldford in the parishe of the said churche . . . “to enduer by the space of v days, that is to saye in “the even and in the daye of Saynt Mathew tha- “postell and evangelist and by three dayes then next “folowyng.”

8 February 1521. Charter, under the seal of the abbot and convent of Dureford, in the diocese of Chichester, (being patrons of the parish church of Compton near Gylford co. Surrey, in the diocese of Winchester), of a grant to John Hurston co. Hants, Stephen Pytt and William Wynter co. Sussex, yeomen, of the advowson, for a single and the next turn, of the said church.

22 September, 13 Henry VIII. Order of Margret countess of Salysbery to Christofer More, authorizing him to receive, in payment of fees due to him last Michaelmas in regard to his office of surveyor to the said countess, fifteen pounds of moneys paid to her at the exchequer by the sheriffs of Wilts.

6 January, 1523. The last will and testament of Thomas Asshby of the parish of “Seynt Swithune at “London Stone.” With letters of probate attached.

14 June, 15 Henry VIII. Receipt, with promise of repayment, for cxx*li*. advanced by persons dwelling within the hundred of Godalmyng, co. Surrey, “by way “of loone for the maintenance of” the king’s “warres.” Together with a schedule of all the contributors to the said loan.

1 April, 18 Henry VIII. Receipt given by “Jamys “Askue yeoman to the kynges grace of hys pantre for “hys mowthe” to the executors of John Aworthay, for “clxxii bowys and a m^{ce} and v skoyre sheefe of arrowe “well hedyd” being parcel of “the Artyllare in the “Castylle of Pomfret.”

15 May, 1527. Inventory of alle the goodes, catalles, and household stuff of John Twisilton, citezen and goldsmith.

27 May 1527. Extraordinary paymentes and necessary charges paid by me Robert Hall at sundrye tymes from the xxv of Maii 1527 vnto the xxi of November, as followeth. Covering 20½ closely written foolscap pages this account (opening and closing with payments at

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

"bulloigne") exhibits the disbursements of Robert Hall during an attendance on his "master" (whose name does not appear in the record) on a mission to Paris. That Robert Hall had the control of the petty-cash expenses of the embassy may be seen from the following specimens of his payments:—May 1527. In reward to the guide of bouloigne, xs.; to the mynstrelles at Amyens vis.; to a broche for my master, iiii.;—Oct. 1527. Item to a prest for singing masse before my master, monday xxviii. Oct., iiii.; for wasching of shaving clothes and rubbars for my master xviii.; pd. to Osborn Wyat & Browne for money paid by them to prestes singing masse before my M. thursday, friday, and saturday, ix.—November, for amending the lakays hoses iiii.; for the lodging of vi. men at parys by vii. dayes xxxvs.; for vi glasses, iiii. Robert Hall was not the great man's secretary, for one of his disbursements in September is "iis. for ii queres of paper for the secretarie." He seems to have been the ambassador's chamberlain.

20 Henry VIII. to 2 Edward VI. Ledger of records of proceedings at Courts Baron on the manors of Godalming, Artington, Compton and Cattysull, from 20 Hen. VIII. to 2 Edward VI.

9 July 1528. Last will and testament of Thomas Brampton, gentleman.

21 November 1528. Indenture (witnessed by the mayor and sheriffs of London) whereby Thomas Carden, son of William Carden, citizen and cloth-fuller of London, binds himself an apprentice for seven years to Owen Hawkins, citizen and mercer of London, to learn the art, &c. of a mercer.

22 Henry VIII. Bishopric of Winchester. The account of Ralph Pexsall, esq., treasurer of Wolnes' and receiver-general of the moneys of all the castles, lordships, lands and tenements, &c. &c., pertaining to the said bishopric and in the King's hands by reason of the forfeiture of Thomas Cardinal, late bishop of Winchester. Covering 46 sheets of large foolscap, this account (kept in Latin) exhibits a sum total of receipts of m m m m iiii xlvii. xvis. vd. ob. q^a. di.

l l l l xx

24 December, 22 Henry VIII. Patent, with the great seal attached thereto, of a grant to the king's servant Christopher More, a clerk of the exchequer, whereby the said grantee, his heirs and assigns are empowered to impark 200 acres of land, pasture and wood at his manor of Loseley, in the parish of St. Nicholas, near Guldeforde, co. Surrey; with further grant of free warren in the said lands, pastures, and woods, and of several fishery in all waters within the same. Dated at Chelsetithe.

May, 1532. The Boke of ordinary charges of the trayne of Sir Anthonie Broune, knight, the Kinges Ambassadeure going into Fraunce in Maii A^o. 1532. Covering 108 closely written pages of foolscap, this account exhibits the ordinary expenses of Sir Anthony Broune during his mission for diet for himself and followers, and for ceremonious dinners to persons of state. The appearance of Sir Anthony Broune's signature on several pages shows that he himself checked his weekly bills and "passed them." The minutest items of the expenditure being given, this record affords much precise information to collectors of data relating to prices. On 27 May, the steward of the kitchen paid a Boulloigne for "wyne, vii stopis, xvs. ixd.; xii small plaices "vis.; c egges vis.; sallade oyle, and herbes is." On 29 May, he spent at Monstreul, "bred v dousen di, xis., "bere ix stopis di, iiii. ixd.; wyne v stopis, xis. iiii." Every place at which the ambassador tarried on his way to and from Paris appears; and the careful student of the ledger may learn from the occasional marginal notes who were the principal persons feasted at the ambassador's table. For instance, against the bill for kitchen stuff, under date "xxvii day of Julii," appears this marginal memorandum, "Capitaine Gabriel and "other Frenche gentlemen, welche dynner was or- "deyned for the Ambassadour of Venys and cam not." Against the bill for 2 August appears the note, "Capitaine Gabriel and Monseigneur de la roche guyon." Another note shows that the dinner of 3 August was given especially "To the Speres of Cales." Against the bill for 4 August, appears the following list of principal guests. "Mr. Brian, Mr. Dudley, Mr. Seymour, Mr. "Hevnegan, Mr. Palmer, Mr. Wyndham, Mr. Roche- "common, Mr. Peter." The total sum of moneys received by the accountant was ii m^s xxxviii. viis. vid., which fell short of the amount of his disbursements by vii. ix.

May, 1532. Charge of Mr. George Browne, beyng w^t Sir Antony Browne, knyght, ambassadour in Fraunce.

The disbursements of this account (amounting altogether to "viii crownes xxxis.") were chiefly made in respect to Sir Antony's stud and lacqueys.

24 Henry VIII. Bishopric of Sarum. Account of Richard Blake one of the receivers of the bishop for an entire year ended Michaelmas, 24 Henry VIII. Chiefly noteworthy for the certificate that the accountant has paid the balance of his account to Polidore Vergil the lord bishop's proctor:—"Quos liberauit Polidoro Vergilio Procuratori domini episcopi ibidem xiiii die "Februarii anno xxiiii^o Regis Henrici VIII. prout "patet per 2 billam dicti Polidori assignatam ac penes "dictum computantem remanentem."

5 November, 24 Henry VIII. A memorandum, under the seal of Roger Lewknor late high sheriff of cos. Sussex and Surrey, and under the signature of John Bowyer. Certifying that the said Roger, on relinquishing his said office to Christopher More, esquire, the present sheriff of the said counties, left in the gaols of Lewes and Guilford certain prisoners, specially named in the indenture, still awaiting delivery from the same.

19 November, 24 Henry VIII. Indenture made betweene Thomas Cranmer, archdeacon of Tawnton and Chapleyne of king Henry VIII. of that oon partye, and Nicholas Hawkyns, Archdeacon of Ely and chapleyne also vnto the seide souerayne, ambassador to the Emperor's majesty, of that other part. Whereby the said Nicholas Hawkyns acknowledges that he has received 508 $\frac{3}{4}$ oz. of plate, white or silver gilt, towards his suitable equipment for the said embassy, and binds himself, &c. "to redeliuer at his retorne from the Emperor's ma- "gestye the said plate afore named vnto the seide "Thomas or his assigns to the vse of oure souerayne "lord." Thomas Cranmer's signature at the foot of this interesting document shows the indenture to have been written throughout by his hand. It is also noteworthy that having described the weight of the lent plate as 508 $\frac{3}{4}$ ounces in his bill of particulars, the writer by a slip (forgetting to write D instead of C) misstates the weight as "cviii onces iii quarters."

15 February, 1533. Letter of instructions, addressed by Henry the Eighth, under his sign-manual and signet from "oure maner of Westminster," to his ambassador resident with the emperor, Master Nicolas Hawkyns; who is enjoined to do his best for the achievement of his sovereign's purpose in a matter to be done with the pope, respecting which the same king has written with sufficient fullness by the hand of Master Bonner,—("to "you and other our orators with the pope ioyntly, by "Mr. Bonner, touching suche thing as is now to be "doon with the pope.") Sundry princes of Almain having petitioned the emperor, at his now being in Italy, for compensation for the injuries done their subjects by his troops on their return through Jermany, Master Nicolas Hawkyns is instructed to ascertain the particulars and truth of the petition, and also to learn what was the emperor's reply to the petitioners.

9 January, 26 Henry VIII. Patent, under the conventual seal of the Abbot of the convent of Dureford, co. Sussex, of a grant by the said abbot and convent to Christopher More of Losely, esquire, and his heirs for ever, of one half of the manor of Compton alias Westbury in Compton, co. Surrey, together with the advowson of the church of Compton, at a yearly rent for ever to the said abbot and convent and their successors of 5*l.* per annum, with a fine of xs. after the death of each abbot.

17 October to 15 December 1536. Account Book of Sir Anthony Browne's daily expenses on a journey from Amphill, co. Beds, to Doncaster, co. York, and back.

10 December, 28 Henry VIII. Accompts of the disbursements, amounting to Dcccxlvi. xviii. viii. d., made by the right worshipful Sir Anthony Browne, knt., for wages and allowances to soldiers and other charges incident on a muster and training for thirty-two days of the forces of the county of Surrey. Affording precise information as to the remuneration of certain kinds of military service in Henry the Eighth's time.

7 February, 28 Henry VIII. The receipt of John Carleton, receiver-general of Thomas earl of Rutland, for the sum of xlii. xvs. iiii. d. paid him by Christofer More, the said earls attorney in the king's Exchequer, in part payment of the arrears of money accruing to the same earl for four years, viz. from Michaelmas 20 Hen. VIII. to Michaelmas 24 Hen. VIII.

6 August, 1537. Last will and testament of James Askew of the parysh of Cluar, co. Barks.

24 November, 29 Henry VIII. The receipt of Oliuer Franklyn, receiver general of the "right honourable "lady Margaret countes of Surrey," to Thomas Yorke, esq., for xxli. for the . . . money of the said "countes oute of Wiltshire dew vnto the seid countes

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

" in the fest of sent Myghell thargaungelle in the " xxvi yere of the reign of oure soveraigne lord.
" with ten pounds allowed unto Christofer More " esquire."

29 March, 35 Henry VIII. Six accounts of money paid to indes and other workmen for work done in the Kinges Newe Chamber at Hampton Court, in the aforementioned years.

6 December, 35 Henry VIII. Receipt of Thomas earl of Rutland for all arrears due to him from the sheriffs of the Countie of Cambridge and Hunts; the same arrears having been paid by Christofer More, esq.

1 April, 35 Henry. Indenture whereby, in consideration of one hundred and sixty pounds, Christopher More of Loseley, co. Surrey, esquire, conveyed for ever to the king and his heirs, &c., the reversion of a certain " moytie and halffe dele of the parke of Kyver with his " appurtenaunces in the countie of Surrey."

24 November 1539. Writ under the sign-manual and signet of Henry VIII., addressed to Christofer Moore, esq., of Loseley, co. Surrey, who is thereby appointed to be one of the guard of honour to meet the princess Anne of Cleves on her entrance into this country, and to attend on her before she shall come to the king's presence. Mr.
Moore is required to be in London with six " honestly
" furnished servauntes " on the tenth day of next month, and there to place himself at the sovereign's pleasure.
Like the other gentlemen appointed to the same service,
Mr. Moore is ordered to ride in a coat of black velvet with a gold chain about his neck, and to have a gown of velvet or some other good silk for his change. (Vide Kemp's " Loseley MSS.")

10 May. 2 Henry VIII. Warrant, under the king's sign manual, to Christofer Moore, esq., sheriff of the co. of Sussex, to deliver to " Katheryn Howarde, one of
" oure quenes maidens all the goodes catall movable
" and ymovable fermes leases for terme of lyff and " yeres debtes, &c. &c. . . . forfeited and dew to" the said king " by William Lidbeter thelder and William " Lidbeter the younger or onye of them for the killing " and wilful murdering of Richard Bolockherde," the said goods, &c. having been granted to the said
Katheryn by letters patent.

7 June, 32 Henry VIII. Warrant, signed by Thomas West, knt., lord Leware, to the keeper of the park of Ewhurst, co. Sussex, to deliver to Christopher More, esq., a buck in summer and a doe in winter, yearly out of the said park, in accordance with the terms of a grant from the said lord to the said Christopher.

33 Henry VIII. Particulars of the account of Thomas Doughty, collector of four-fifteenths and tenths granted by the laity to the said king in the aforesaid year, collected in the several under-written wards of the city of London.

25 March, 33 Henry VIII. Patent of a grant in tail male to Sir Thomas Cawarden and Elizabeth his wife of the manors of Utlicote and Loxley, with all their members and appurtenances, co. Warwick, formerly pertaining to the now dissolved monastery of Kenelworth in the said county; to hold the same of the king and his heirs, by the service of a twentieth part of a knight's fee, and at an annual rent of sixty-two shillings.

1 April, 33 Henry VIII. Draft of a bill prepared for the king—his manual acknowledging the sovereign's receipt from the hands of Richard Ryther of all implements, household stuff, &c. remaining in the house of Thomas late Earl of Essex in the city of London, at the time of his apprehension on a charge of high treason, and then entrusted to the care of the said Richard Ryther by the king's trusty counsellors Sir Thomas Cheyney, Sir Anthony Wyndesheide, and Sir Richard Riche, knights.

3 November, 33 Henry VIII. Patent of the grant, for life, of an annuity of xli to Bartholomew Stoke, late a monk of the lately dissolved monastery of the cathedral of Worcester, co. Worcester.

20 June, 34 Henry VIII. Privy seal receipt of Thomas Elcott for xvi advanced " by way of preste " to the sovereign by Sir Christopher More, knight.

30 September, 34 Henry VIII. Bill of charges by carriers and gilders for work done at Nonesuche.

1 March, 34 Henry VIII. The Accompt and Decla-racioun of John Skynpner concernyng suche Revennys and profytes as he hath received and takyn to thuse of Sir Raffe Sadler, knyght, of the manors of Nonesuche, Bansted and Walton, and also of a tenement and certen landes in Maldon togedir with certen fees of the same Raffe Sadleyr for a hole yere ended at the fest of Sent Myghell tharchaungell in the xxxiii yere of kyng Henry the cyght.

23 June, 35 Henry VIII. An account, pertaining to the office of Tents, headed, " The Kynges newe Tent of " Tymbre:—A payment made for the same for iiiij^{or}
" wekes, that ys to say from the xxiii day of June
" A^o xxxv, Henry VIII., vnto the xxi daye of July the
" next folowyng."

16 July, 35 Henry VIII. An Account, on a folded and torn sheet of large foolscap, headed thus, " The Kynges
" Newe Tent of Tymbre. Payment made by Nycholas
" Brystowe esquier for the same for the space of
" ix weekes, that ys from the xvi daye of July in " A^o xxxv^{to} Hen. R. VIII. untill the xxii daye of " Septembre next folowyng."

17 February 35 Henry VIII. to 22 Nov. 37 Henry VIII.
The Declaracioun of the Accompte made by Sir Raffe Sadler, knyght, (appointed 12 Feb. 35. Hen. VIII. to be Highe Treasurer of his Maiesties Warres agaynst Scotland) of his disbursements in respect to the said wars against Scotland from 17 Feb. 35 Hen. VIII. to 22 Nov.
37 Hen. VIII. The sum total of receipts accounted for being 123,709*l.* 11*s.* 0*d.*

10 March, 35 Henry VIII. Patent of grant for life to Sir George Sadler, knight, and a gentleman of the privy chamber, of the office of steward of the king's manors of Nonesuche, Ewell, Estchaym, Westchaym, Nutton, Bansted, and Walton-on-the-Hill, co. Surrey; and of the office of bailiff of the same manors; and of the office of keeper of the king's chief messuage of None suche manor, together with the keepership of the king's wardrobe and gardens there.

35 Henry VIII. Account of particulars of Costes and Charges of the Maskes and Revelles holden at Hampton Court A^o Regis H. VIII. xxxvi.

16 May, 36 Henry VIII. Indented bill, whereby Thomas Cawarden, esq., gentleman of the king's privy chamber, and master of his majesty's tents, and other officers of the office of Tents, acknowledge that they have received of Sir John Gresham, knt., for the requirements of the said office certain large stores of canvas and bokeram.

15 July, 36 Henry VIII. The kinges Tentess and Pavilions. A payment for fyve wekes and three daies,
That ys to saye from viii June vnto xv of July, . . .
Declaring aswell wages payd vnto all maner of artyffcers, as also all maner of provisions and empciouns bought and provided for the sayd vse and cariage for the same bothe by lande and by water. The artificers, to whom payments have been made, are taylors, cord-wainers, wynders of threde, carpenters, joyners, sawyers. Forty large 4to pages.

20 July, 1544. Eight letters from Lords of the Council to Sir Christopher More, respecting the lewd and naughty curate of Witley, who for some offence not precisely stated in the letters is sent to the Tower for examination, and is thence remitted to Sir Christopher More for further examination; the dates of the letters being 20, 25, and 30 July, 6 August, 14, 17, 19, and 29 of Sept. 1544. From the fourth letter of the series, it appears that the faulty curate, whose name does not appear in any of the epistles, had " confessed himself " to have grevously offended, whereby appered his " malicious and naughty stomacke."

26 July, 1544. Letters from Lords of the Council to Sirs Mathew Brown, John Gresham, and Christopher More, knts., and to the sheriff of Surrey. For the speedy taking of general musters in co. Surrey, and the making of a true and perfect certificate of the same.

22 November, 36 Henry VIII. Twelve large folio sheets in a paper wrapper, inscribed "H.R. Charterhouse"; Being an account of payments made in the office of Tents in " Wages vnto all maner of artyfficers laborers
" and others, as also for provisions and empciouns, and
" carriages of the same bothe by lande and water."

28 November, 36 Henry VIII. Letter, addressed under the signature and signet of king Henry VIII., to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey, enjoining the said magistrates to take a view of " the " store of corne both whete, rye, maulte, otes and
" barley, and all other kyndes of grayne in all menues
" barnes, houses, and garnardes within our said countie," and after making due allowance for the households and needful seed-corn of the owners thereof, to compel the said owners to bring weekly to market a reasonable proportion of the remainder, so that it may be sold at reasonable rates to the people. The magistrates are further enjoined to put in force the laws against fore-stallers and regrators.

11 March, 36 Henry VIII. Patent of grant, for life, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., one of the gentlemen of the king's Privy Chamber, of the office of Master of the Revels (" officium magistri jocorum reuelorum et masco-

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

"rum omnium et singulorum nostrorum vulgariter nuncupatorium Renelles and Maskes"), with the mansion, fees, and advails pertaining to the said office, and wages of xli. per annum.

19 April, 36 Henry VIII. Receipt of Edward Culpepyr, D.C.L., for viii. xiiis. iiid. paid by Sir Thomas Carden, knt., in respect of the annuity due to the said Dr. Culpepyr out of the lands of the College of Lingfelde. Also, similar receipts given in four subsequent years.

36 Henry VIII. A Boke of the nombres of the Howsis, Layde up at the Charterhouse anno Regis Henrici VIII. xxxvi^{to} after his gracious coming from Bulloyn. In what parts of the Charter House the moveable houses were stored appears from the headings of the two chief lists of the inventory. "Housis Layde in the South Syde of the church in a chapel," and "Housis layde ouer y^e North syde of the church comyng in." Particulars are given of the king's fyrst lodging and his "Laste lodging."

36 Henry VIII. An Accompt of "Charges as well of stufes and Workmanship of patrons for Cootes and Gierkins made for the Kinges Highnes before his grace went on see last: as also of his Majesties Revelles in Xtmas laste, being in the xxxvith yere of his prosperous reign."

26 and 27 April, 1545. Inventory of goods, chattels, plate, jewels, &c., &c., remayning at the College of Lyngfeld, co. Surrey, at the tyme of its dissolucioun. Also, another copy of the same inventory. Also, papers being rough lists made in the preparation of the same inventory.

15 May, 37 Henry VIII. Inventory of all the goodes, catalles and dettes of John Twisilton citezen and goldsmith of London.

17 July, 37 Henry VIII. Receipt of Richard Browne carpenter and John Pery brycklayer for the sum of 8*l*. paid them by Hughe Losse, gentleman, "for and to wards the reparaciouns of the kinges store howsis at the late Black Fryers in London." Witnessed by Jo. Bernard.

20 July, 1545. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the noblemen and gentlemen and commanders of the men of Surrey. Dismissing the men of Surrey to their homes, whilst bidding them keep in readiness to come forward again in arms at a moment's notice.

16 September, 37 Henry VIII. Commission, under Henry the Eighth's signet and sign manual, for the execution of his majesty's resolutions and purposes for the defence of his town of Bulloyn, to Sir Christopher Moore, knt., and James Skynner, esq. Appointing them to collect in the county of Surrey at reasonable prices and rates one hundred and fifty draft oxen with their yokes and other things requisite, and with a strong and able cart to every eight oxen, taking the animals so that only one ox be taken from any one man; and directing them to have the said animals and carriages punctually to the appointed time at Dover, for transport across the sea.

23 September, 37 Henry VIII. Writ, under Henry the Eighth's signet and sign manual, to Sir Christopher More, knt., and James Skynner, esq., directing the said Christopher and James to allow the oxen and carts, which they were ordered to impress by virtue of the warrant of the 16th inst., to remain in their owners' hands till further notice.

2 October, 37 Henry VIII. Receipt of John Bernard "controller of the kynges maiesties tentes and revelles" for 20*l*. paid to him by Houghe Losse, esq., by the hands of Thomas Butcher, "to be ymployd and dystributed vpon the repayrynge and amendinge of the blacke Fryers in London store howse for the seyde tentes and revelles."

1 December, 1545.—The chargis of a good schype callyd the Jamys of Syr Thomas Darssys, knyght, for a viage be the grace of God to be mayd yn Ysland begonne the fyrst day of Desember anno 1545, mayster vnder god for thes present viage Long Sander of Dunwhyche and Marchant Jeffrey Smythe. Covering eight pages of foolscap, this bill of lading gives the particulars, with the cost of each item, of the victuals and provision of the ship, under the heading "Hier after followethe al manner of chargis for the provicion of the schep," to the sum of viii*l*. xviiis. iiid.; the articles of merchandise that made the ship's cargo, under the heading "Hier followethe marchandise of thys present viage, Marchant Geoffrey Smythe," amounting to xxxviii*l*. iiis. id. ob.; a list of the wages, for which the crew had agreed to serve; and a list of the payments on account made to the several individuals of the crew. The wages of "Sander of Dunwhyche Maester vnder god and for his servant" were xli*l*.; and those of the "Maister Maet and Stuard" amounted to vii*l*. xiiis. iiid. The carpenter received vi*l*. and John Coo the "bootswan" had iii*l*. vis. viii*d*. The ordinary seamen had from xlv*s*. to 1*s*. The names of the crew indicate that they were Suffolk men from Dunwich, the port of their vessel the Jamys. The entire amount of the charges was cxxxiii*l*. xix*s*. viii*d*. This interesting record should be published.

1545. A Rentalle of alle suche landes and tenementes whyche appertaynythe to Sir Cristofer More, knt., in the countye of Surrey. In the xxxvith yere of the reyn of our souereygn Lorde Kyng Henry the eight. The annual value of the manor of Loselye, and the lands, &c. pertaining thereto being at least lxxvi*l*. viiiis. iiid.

22 December, 37 Henry VIII. Receipt of John Bernard for the sum of 40*l*. paid to him by Hughe Losse, esquier, "to be imployd for and vpon the translating repayring and newe flowring the kinges store howsis for his Tentes and Revelles within the late dissolued howse of Black Fryers in London."

Christmas, 37 Henry VIII. Accompt of the charges of the Kinges Highnes Revelles and Maskes in Christemas in the xxxviith yere of the reigne of the soueraigne lorde Henry theight.

21 February 1546. Letter from Lords of the Council to commissioners for a subsidy in the county of Surrey. Directing the speedy and perfect collection of the same subsidy.

37 Henry VIII. An accompt of the charges of the Kinges Highnes Maskes and Revelles in Xtemas in the xxxviiith yere of the Reigne of oure Soueraine Lorde Henry theight by the grace of God, king of Englande.

Michaelmas, 1546. to Michaelmas, 1552. Bleachinglighe. The Accompte of John Dawber and Christopher Chapman church-wardens of the parishe Church of Bleachinglighe from the Feast of St. Mighell tharchangell in the yere of our Lord m^vxlvi vnto the Feeste of Saint Mighell tharchaungell in the yere of oure Lorde m^vlii. Covering nine foolscap pages.

18 October, 38 Henry VIII. Tents. A paymente made by Nycholas Brystowe, esquier, aswell for caryage of the Kynges Hyghnes Tentes, Hales, Pavylyons, Joyned Howses of Tymber, Jottes, Blokes, Tymber Howses from Otlandes to Cobham, repaying the same, &c. &c. &c. As also for Eyring and Drieyng the said Tentes at the Blake Fryers in London which had taken weate vpon the Thames with a soden Tempeste in the night:—from the iiiiith daye of September in the 38 Hen. VIII. vnto the xviiith daye of October next following. Covering 32 large quarto pages.

38 Henry VIII. A collection of bills relating to business of the Office of Tents. Most of these accounts are notes of charges for the carriage of timber and other material, for timber-houses and tents, and for work done by carpenters "vpon the Tymber Howses at Chobham." In a paper-wrapper, inscribed by a recent penman, "Chobham Bills, A^o 38 Hen. VIII., 1546-7. Tents."

3 December, 1546. Copy of the last will and testament of Henry the Eighth. A contemporary writing.

38 Henry VIII. Accompt of John Skynner of revenues takyn to thuse of Raffe Sadler of the Manors of Nonesuch, Bansted and Walton, &c. &c., for a year ended at Michaelmas, 38 Hen. VIII.

38 Henry VIII. A paper, endorsed "Lorde Cobams Howses," being the acknowledgment of William Morgan that he has received for Sir Thomas Caverden xxxviii*l*. iiis. iiid., rent for rooms in the Blackfriars' quarter.—"Nuper domus Fratrum Predicatorum, London. De Domino Cobbehame pro firma cujusdam aule proximo adjacentis dicte magne aule, necnon vnius coquine vocate the Covent Kitchen duorum domorum vocat. ii Larders cum una vacua placea ajacente ad occidentalem partem dicte coquine, necnon unius le Gallery continentis in longitudine xli^{ti} ped^{es} et in latitudine xⁱⁱⁱⁱ pedes jacentis ad orientale finem dicte coquine, Accetum vnius paris graduum ducentium a dicta coquina vsque ad magnum Claustrum in tenura dicti domini Cobbehame pretio existente et insoluto pro septem annis integris finitis ad Festum Sci. Mchis. Archi. Anno xxxviii Regis predicti, quolibet anno ciis. iiid., in toto — xxxviii*l*. iiis. iiid." The rent of the said lodgings is also belynde vnpaid for all the tyme of the reigne of Kyng Edward the Sixte. . . . R. per Willelmum Morgan. Also another receipt for the rent of the same lodgings.

— Henry VIII. Things made and paymentes for the Kinges Maiestie by Antony Totto Serjeaunt Paynter deluyered to Maister Bernard, John Bridgis, John Collyer, Thomas Hale, under Sir Thomas Carden, knyght. The first particular of this bill, for work done

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

by Henry the Eighth's serjeant-painter is, "Firste
XX
" delyuered xxix. s. after v. to the c. every of them
" beynge x. ynches longe for lodgynges and stables
" paynted white and grene, price a pece viiij. — lxxviii.
" viiij. Another item of the heraldic painter's bill

XX
(which amounts to ciiiij. vis.) is, "Item delyuered xxxiiii
" lat. hermites of a. alle square of the Kinges armes
" wth the beastes rowned the garter and Kinges worde
" in fyne golde and other colours, price a pece xxxv.
" . . . lili." No date.

— Henry VIII. The charges of Mr. Cawerden for the furnyre of cxliiij. persones at Newbury. The furniture being military equipment. No date.

— Henry VIII. Bill, prepared for the King's sign manual, for a grant of the rectory, church and advowson of Great Bokeham, co. Surrey, with all lands, buildings, &c. pertaining to the same rectory, lately belonging to the now dissolved monastery of Chertsey, to Sir Christofer More, knt., and his heirs for ever, by the service of the twentieth part of a knight's fee for all rent and demands, &c., whatsoever. No date. This document never received the sovereign's signature.

— Henry VIII. Inventory headed, "Thys be the " goodyes that I Reynold Cobham founder of y^e
" college of Seynt Peter of Lyngfeld gafe vn to y^e seyd
" college for dewyne seruyce of alle myghty gode."
Together with other undated lists of goods, &c. pertaining to the same college. No date.

— Henry VIII. Fragment of a letter by the archbishop of Canterbury to a right worshipful person, whose name does not appear, touching the writer's jurisdiction in the diocese of Winchester. No date.

— Henry VIII. The petition (not dated) to his sovereign lord, the king, of John Cheyne, late of Westwodhayne, co. Berks. esquire, for the pardon of his manslaughter of Robert Parrys, gentleman, in an affray at a place called Wasshe Lane in the parish of Newberye, co. Berks; together with a bill prepared for the sign-manual of the sovereign, drawn in accordance with the petition. Also, a duplicate of the same document. No dates.

— Henry VIII. The surveye of alle the Leades belonging to (the hospital of) Seynt John's, in Clerkenwell. No date.

— Henry VIII. Bill headed "Here after followeth
" costes and charges of all the payntynge and gylidynge
" off dyuerse thynges made for y^e kynges Reuelles
" at Hamptoncourt." Endorsed, "Nicolas Lysard, " paynter." No date.

— Henry VIII. (?) "A Dokett made owt of the " Commyssioners boke in the Countie of Surrey of cer" teyn Instructiouns comprehended in a Speecyall Com-" myssion to the same Commyssioners dyrected, as " hereafter more particularly is declared." The roll so headed (made apparently in the time of Henry VIII. or Edward VI.) exhibits the annual value of the spiritual and temporal lands, tenements, goods and chattels, &c.
&c., together with the numbers of "ablemen to serve the " kyng in his werres" and the numbers of "the " herneys redy for souldyours," of the several hundreds in the county of Surrey. No date.

— Henry VIII. List of the "towneshippes and " manners belonging to the Honor of Hampton Courte,
" and being within the rule and governaunce of Sir
" Thomas Hennage, knt., high steward of the same " Honor"; together with a list of the "Fees and other
" Commodityes within the said honor given by the " kynges maiestie to Sir Thomas Hennage, knt., for the " exercising of certen offices there." No date.

— Henry VIII. Piece of a bill, on which appears the following entry, "Item. For a paynted boke of Mr.
" Hansse Holby making. viij." No date.

— Henry VIII. A Paye Boke For the Banket House at Hampton Court. No date.

— Henry VIII. A Pay Booke For the Banket Howse at Hampton Court. One of the records of the office of the Tents and Revels. No date.

— Henry VIII. An Invitori (sic), on a paper roll, of all the kynges tentes halles and pavilions wythe alle necessaris therunto belonging, not able to doe no servys nor p. sure. No date.

— Henry VIII. Inventory on paper roll, torn in places of the materials, pieces and stuff pertaining to the halls and tents of the king and his personal attendants.
Containing particulars of, (1) The Kynges Newe Lodgynges, (2) Tymbre Worke and Iron Worke with Ropes for the seyd lodgynges, (3) Paynted Clothes of dyvers workes and colours paynted at York for the kynges seyd newe lodgynges, (4) The kynges lodgynges mad of tymbre and paynted in maner of brych-work, (5)

Lodgynges had from the olde duches of Northefolke,
(6) Twoo newe doble hales made for horsis in August
A^o H. VIII., xxxiiii^o, (7) Hales and Rounde house metly good, (8) The kynges olde lodgynges of bocram canvas and lynyn clothe which were made at Torney, not able to serue. No date.

— Henry VIII. Bill of an outfit in clothes, &c. headed, "money leyd out for Mast. Fynes and his wyff."
At the foot, this acknowledgement, "Memorandum that " thys percels be bowte and receaved be me Thomas
" Fenys a kordynge to my request be my letar sent to " Master More. Thomas Fenys." Also, another bill for wedding-clothes headed, "A Remembrance for " stuffe to be bowgt att London for M^{rs} Fynes." No date.

— Henry VIII. Letters of licence, under the king's sign-manual, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, to retain 40 persons, gentlemen or yeomen, and to distinguish them with his livery, badge, or cognizance, "over and
" besides alle suche persons as dailie attende vpon
" him in his householde or otherwise to whom he " geveth mete drynke liverie or wages," and also over and above all persons serving him in respect of any of his offices under the crown. Only a portion of this document remains; the part of it that exhibited the date having been torn away.

1 December to 12 December.—Henry VIII. Account of George Browne esquier for money by him receyved of the Ryght Worshipfull Sir Anthonye Browne knyght to and for the wages of one capteyne at iiij. the daye,
iii. petycapteynes at iij. the daye, viii. gentyllmen beyng the kynges seruauntes, at xviii. the daye, fyve other gentyllmen at xiij. the day, one pureviaunte at armes

XX
at iij. the day, one Trumpeter at xvij. the daye, and ciii. i horsemen at viij. the daye, frome frydaye the firste daye of December and endynge the Tuesdaye the xiith daye of the same moneth, both the dayes accounted by the space of xii. dayes. No date of year.

10 July.—Henry VIII. Letter from Thomas
Philippe, yeoman of the Tents, to Sir Thomas Cawerden knt., one of the Gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber. About business in the office of the Tents. No date of year.

10 June.—Henry VIII. Letter from Thomas Phil-lyppes, at the office of the Tents, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; accompanying despatches. Giving a notable touch of description, the writer says, "Pleasith yt youre wor-" shipe to aduertysyde that yestesnyght there came a " post from the courte with two letters, the one the " post with a horne aboutes hys neke, blowing as he " came through olde Fyshe Strete to Mr. Hale: the " other was brought vnto vs to the Blake Fryers with " sylence. I wolde not haue scyked to haue geven the " post a crowne to haue hade one blaste blownen with " his horne at my dore for honor sake." No date of year. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

9 June.—Henry VIII. Copy of letter addressed by Henry VIII. to the justices of the peace co. Surrey; enjoining them to take heed that the bishop and clergy preach the pure word of God, and denounce the abuses of the bishop of Rome. No date of year.

31 January, 1 Edward VI. An Invitory takyn (at the afore-named date) of all his highnes Tenttes, Hales, Pavilions, Tymber Howses with their appurtenances and store.—Opening with particulars of the furniture of
"The Kinges oune lodgynges garnished with blew
" bokeram, small braunched," and of "The Kinges
" lesser lodgynges garnished with blew buckeram,
" greate braunched."

10 February, 1 Edward VI. Copy of a charter of inspe-ximus of an indenture, enrolled in Chancery, whereby on 9 January, 26 Hen. VIII., the abbot and convent of the monastery of Dureford, co. Sussex, granted for ever to Christopher More, esq., of Loseley, co. Surrey, the half of the manor of Compton, alias the manor of Westbrege in Compton, co. Surrey, together with the advowson of the church of the same parish of Compton.

1 April, 1 Edward VI. Inventory Takyn (at the afore-mentioned date) by Syr Thomas Cawerden, knyght, Master of the Kinges Revelles, and John Bernard, clarke-comptroller of the same, of all suche the kynges masking, Garmentes with thappurtenaunces, riche basses and couering of hardes, as were delyueryd owte of the custody of John Briges, late yoman of the same into the tucyoun and saff keypyng of John Holte, now yoman of the same Revelles.—This vellum roll exhibits a list of "maskyng garmentes for women," as well as one of disguises for men.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

10 February, 1 Edward VI. Bill of the garments and divers clothes provided by the office of Revels "for thuse of the Cytie of London agaynste the coronacion."

8 March, 1547. Copy of a letter from lords of the council to the magistrates of a county, on the occasion of recent disorders "in many places of the kinges realme." Urging the local authorities to be more vigilant against disorders.

18 June, 1 Edward VI. Letter, under the king's sign-manual, countersigned by the duke of Somerset, to Sir Thomas Carden. Requiring Sir Thomas to keep in readiness for the king's service four horses meet to serve in the field for a demylance, and to cause apt men to exercise themselves on the same animals.

18 August, 1 Edward VI. Copy (made and certified by Walter Mildmay) of the letters patent, whereby Edward the Sixth granted in perpetuity to Sir Thomas Cawerden and his heirs, "the manoirs of Pishoe, Stoughton-Barrye, and Greate Plumsteede, with all and euery their rightes, members and appurtenances."

3 September, 1 Edward VI. Warrant from the duke of Somerset to Sir Thomas Cawarden, Master of the Tents, to deliver a tent to his grace's "cosyn Sir Frauncis Bryan, knt."

28 September, 1 Edward VI. Bill of "Stuff deliuered in charge to the forsaide Sir Thomas Cawerden knight" the xxviii of September 1 Edward VI. by Edmund de Pigton owte of such stuff as the said received of Sir John Gate, knt., parcell of the late Duke of Norfolk's "stuff, attainted." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

29 September, 1 Edward VI. Inventory (in 5 indented folio sheets, styled on the covering sheet "Inventori of Nonesuche") of goods and articles received by Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, keeper of the manor of Nonesuche, from Sir Anthony Denny, knight, "keeper" of the kinges maiesties pallaice at Westminster, for the furniture of the king's banquetting house at Nonesuch. The list includes nine "Turquey carpettes" besides "one carpette of fyne tapestry imagery," "one carpett of grene satten embrowdered vpon with sondery of the kinges beastes anticke heads grapes and birdes &c.," and "thirteen carpettes of verders of brode blomes and sondery other sortes lyned throughout with canvas."

28 October, 1547. Letter from the duke of Somerset to his loving frende Sir Thomas Cawerden, knight; begging Sir Thomas to allow the Lord Cobham to have "during his abode here at this instant parlement" the use of "the hall of his lodging at the blacke Freares." Endorsements in writing of the same period on the letter. 1. For the lorde Cobam at the blackfryars. 2. L. Somerset for the hall for the Lorde Cobam. 3. Somerset for the lord Cobam.

11 November, 1 Edward VI. Warrant (signed, Arundell) to Sir Thomas Cawerden, the keeper of the king's wardrobe at Nonesuche, to deliver carpets and other goods to John Hornewolde, auditor of the Lord Protector.

4 December, 1547. A collection of thirteen bills (stitched together) of particulars, relating to matters of expense in the Office of Tents, &c.; the earliest of the series of bills being of the afore-given date, and the latest of 9 Aug. 2 Edw. VI. Also a receipt for "one duble hale conteynynge fyve bredethes," delivered by Rychard Leys to Aluse Bassano, John Anthony Baliani, John Gasper Basiani, and John Etionani Bassano, musycians vnto the qwenes maiestie, out of the stores of Sir Thomas Cardyn, knight, Master of the queen's tents; the date of the acknowledgement being 27 June, 1 Mary.

1 Edward VI. Rentalle of all landes and tenementes appertaynyng to Sir Cristofer More of Loselye, co. Surrey.

1, 2, and 3, Edward VI. Survey and Rental of the manor of Godalmyng: By William Goodwyn, surveyor-general of the royal honors, lordships, manors, &c. &c. in the aforesaid years of Edward VI.

4 February, 2 Edward VI. Copy of a letter from the duke of Somerset in the king's name to Sir Thomas Pope and Sir Mathewe Browne, knyghts, and other commissioners for taking musters in the county of Surrey. Giving directions concerning the musters, &c., ordered in consequence of the threatening aspect of affairs in Scotland. Also, a duplicate of the same letter.

2 April, 2 Edward VI. Copy of a letter under the king's sign-manual and signet, countersigned by the duke of Somerset, to the magistrates of inland shires. For the erection of beacons and the giving timely alarm to fighting men "to repare sewarde for defence as occasion may serve."

4 April, 2 Edward VI. Lease to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., for twenty-one years, of certain vacant ground, with "le Gallereye" built on the same, abutting on Bridewell dicke on the west; also of an adjacent piece of ground called "a kychynyarde," with an old house or kitchen, &c., &c., at a yearly rent of lxviii. viiiid.

6 May, 2 Edward VI. Letter of requisition, under the signet and sign-manual of Edward the sixth, countersigned by the protector Somerset, and addressed to Sir Christopher More, knt., appointing him to provide, by the 10th day of next month, "twoo good and hable" horses or geldinges mete to serve in the feedle for "lighthorsmen, with two apte and mete men to be employed vpon the same," &c. &c. for service against the Scots and their allies.

22 July, 2 Edward VI. Writ under the sign-manual and signet of Edward the Sixth, countersigned by the protector Somerset and addressed to Sir Christopher More, knt. Ordering that Sir Christopher cause the two light horses and the properly equipt horsemen, demanded of him by a previous letter of requisition, to be at Newcastle on the 12th day of next month at farthest, thence to proceed to the reinforcement of the king's "power of" horsemen against the Skottes, and suche others as be "come thither from the bisshop of Rome and others to their aid." Given at Hampton Court.

— September, 1548. The last will and testament of Thomas Elyott of Bramley, gentleman.

10 January, 2 Edward VI. Particulars of the certificate of all the dettes aswel by specialties as othewise remaynyng in thoffice of the Kinges Majesties remembrance of his graces Eschequier at Westminster made the xth of Januarie A^o Sedo. Regis E. VI.

— 2 Edward VI. A note of the yerlie expences of the howshold at Blechyngle of Sir Thomas Carwerden, knyght, A^o sed^o E. Sixth. Covering a charge of 45*l*. for the yearly liveries of clothing of a hundred servants, the sum total of the annual expenditure is 49*l*. 2*s*.

10 March, 3 Edward VI. Inventory of all the goodes, jewelles, and ornaments pertaynyng to the churche of Sutton, co. Surrey.

12 March, 3 Edward VI. An Inventorye of all the plate, jewells, ornaments and bellis within the parissch of Clappham, made by Sirs Thomas Pope and Robert Curson, knyghtes, John Sholte and John Eston esquyers commissioners of the appointed within the hundred of Bryxston in the countie of , Henry Robinson parson of the said parisshe, and William Ansell and Thomas Sewell churchwardens &c. &c. This inventory includes, "Item, ii Syrplusses for the pryste; Item one "Rochette for the clark; Item Dyners and Sondrye "olde clothes stayned and paynted to and for the "doyns of the ceremonies lately vsed in the churche; "Item Dyuers preatye ornamentes somtym vsed for the "dekkinge of ymages."

21 March, 3 Edward VI. Inventory of goodes, plate, &c. &c. in the parish church of Chelsham, co. Surrey.

21 March, 3 Edward VI. Inventory of the plate, jewelles, ornamentes, &c. &c. in the parish church of Katerham, co. Surrey.

21 March, 3 Edward VI. Inventore of the goods, &c. in the parish church of Farlay.

21 March, 3 Edward VI. Inventories of the goodes and ornamentes in the parish churches of Godstone and Horne.

29 May, 3 Edward VI. Warrant (signed by lords of the council) to Sir Thomas Cawarden to prepare and deliver to Thomas Hale, groom, and Thomas Philip clarke, certain "rounde howses, and hales," and ninety-two "romes for soldyours to lye in."

30 June, 3 Edward VI. Writ, under Edward the Sixth's signet and sign-manual, countersigned by the protector Somerset, addressed to Sir Christopher More, knt. Requiring him forthwith to assemble and equip as many men as possible, both horse and foot, his friends, favourers, servants, tenants and others, and to hold them in readiness for service at a moment's notice.

30 July, 1549. Warrant (signed, E. Somerset) to Sir Thomas Carwarden, knight, to deliver to Sir Michell Stanhope "oon long tent with a rounde house."

31 July, 3 Edward VI. Writ (under the sign manual of Edward the Sixth and countersigned by the Duke of Somerset) to Sir Christopher More, knt., ulnager of the counties of Surrey and Sussex. Touching the collection in the said counties of the grant to the king of "viid. "of the pound of the value of euery clothe."

24 August, 3 Edward VI. Warrant (signed, E. Somerset) to the keeper of the king's wardrobe at Nonesuche,

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

to deliver by way of loan to the earl of Arundell, the king's chamberlain, hangings and carpets. Dated at Westminster. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

6 September, 1449. Rental of lands the wiche remaineth Sir Chrys. More's landes. The number of the lands is lxx and the rental amounting to xviii. xis. viiij.

12 September 1449. Terrier and Rental of the lands remaining in the hands of Sir Christofer More, vened and prayed by Thomas Gravesende, John Paroisse, Robert Mellysshe and another person, whose name is illegible.

12 November 1449. Warrant of Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Cawarden, to make a "rownde howse of" xxiiij. gores, fiiiij. yardes depeth, and of the precisely given dimensions, of canvas and other material at the office of Tents.

4 January, 3 Edward VI. A survey of the king's possessions in and near the Blackfriars, taken by Hugh Lose, esquier.

20 January, 3 Edward VI. The Accompte and Declaracion of Alen Hord made (at the afore-given dates concernynge suche revenues and profytes as he hath receyuid and byn due vnto Syr Thomas Cawarden knyght by reason of the maners of Nonesuche, Bansted and Skelton in the countye of Surrey from the feast of the Annunciation of oure Lady last past vnto the seid xxth day of January, 3 Edward VI.

1549. Tenants and complaints in Newbery. Two papers (so inscribed) laying the grievances of the tenants of Newbury before Mr. (afterwards Sir Thomas) Cawarden.

1549. An Invoice headed "This ys the content of the "Canvas for thusen of the Kinges Maiestes Tenttes."

3 Edward VI. Inventories of goods, chattels, ornaments of the parish churches of Cheyham, Chesendon, Ebbesham, Asheted, Lethered, Fetcham, Wandsworth, Toting-Graueney, Cobham, Stretham, Blechinglye with Horne-Chapel, Chelsham, West Molsey, Kingston-vpon Thames, Farnham, Godston, Temysditton, Walton-on-the-hyll, Camberwell, Essher, Maldon, Long Dytton, Rychemond, Lambeth, Reigate, Tyttesey, co. Surrey.

3 Edward VI. to 39 Elizabeth. Ledger of Leases. A quarto volume (of 230 pages) in a vellum wrapper, into which were copied the more important leases to farms on the Loseley estate, together with grants of offices and bonds, between 3 Edward VI. and 39 Elizabeth. The chronological arrangements of the documents is not free from irregularities, which concur with the state of the writing to indicate that the deeds were not entered at the time of their execution. The main portion of the book seems to have been "posted up" at two separate times. The record contains also rentals of the Loseley estate for the years 1573, 1579, and 1584, and a terrier of all the lands on the property for 1574.

12 March, 4 Edward VI. Patent of grant for life to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., and a gentleman of the Privy Chamber, of the office of keeper of the king's manor-house of Stockwell, co. Surrey; and of the office of keeper of the king's chief messuage of his honor of Hampton Court, co. Middlesex; and of the office of keeper of the king's house of "Nonesuche called the "Banketyng House within the park there" co. Surrey; and of the office of steward of the manors of Stokewell, Levchurste and Lambeth Deane, co. Surrey; and of the office of chief-steward of the honor of Hampton Court, aforesaid, together with the place of feodary of the same honor; and of the office of steward of all the king's manors in Newbery, co. Berks; and of the office of bailiff and keeper of the woods of Stokewell manor aforesaid; and of the office of bailiff and collector of the lordship of Hampton Court; and of the office of collector of the manor of Imber co. Surrey; with other minor offices of a similar character.

— April 4, Edward VI. to 23 Sept. 9 Elizabeth. Records of Views of Frank-pledge on the manor of Lowsley from 4 Edward VI. to 9 Eliz. Vellum roll.

26 April, 1550. The last will and testament of Walter Hendle, knight, of Cranbroke.

16 May, 4 Edward VI. Charter, under the great seal, of licence of entry, for William More, esq., son and heir of Sir Christopher More deceased, to enter on lands held by knight's service without proof of age.

4 Edward VI. to 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. The certyficate of Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, Master of the king and quene their Maiesties' Tents and Revelles. A paper roll of unusual length, setting forth the receipts and disbursements of the two departments throughout 4 Edward VI. and 1 Philip and Mary and 2 Philip and Mary. Containing some curious details relating to the diversions of the court.

4 Edward VI. to 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. The Ledger (containing 200 quarto pages) of the disbursements in the Offices of the Tents and Revels from 4 Edward VI. to 1 & 2 Philip and Mary, inclusive. A carefully kept record.

6 June, 4 Edward VI. to 15 June 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. The account (parchment roll) of Sir Thomas Cawarden's receipts and disbursements in connection with the offices of the Tents and Revels, "all which "saide paymentes and defraying oute of the said treasure "about the said purposes the same Sir Thomas Cawarden "appoynted ouer vnto the charge of Thomas Blagrove, "clerke of the said offices." The sum total of the receipts accounted for being 1,304l. 6s., and the sum of the disbursements being 1,746l. 10s. 3d., there is a balance against the exchequer of 442l. 4s. 3d. "And," the roll ends, "the said accomptante is in surplussage ccccxlvi. iiii. iiiij. Wherevnto is to be added ciii. li. paid by the said accomptante for the rentes as well of two storehousses hyred for thoffice of the Maskes and tentes and of thoffice of the Revelles, and for the dwelling-houses of the said accomptante Mr. of the said office every of them at viij. xiii. iiiij. by the yere. As also for the dwelling-housses hyred by the comptroller the yoman and for the Clerke of the said offices every of them at lxvi. viiiij. by the yere. * * * and also allowed vnto this accomptante for so moche money by him paid vnto John Horwyold auditor aswell for his paynes in casting, trying and ingrossing of this accompte as for the paper, &c. &c. xli. "And the accomptante remaineth in surplussage dcccxlvi. iiii. iiiij."

4, 5, and 6 Edward VI. Account of Sir Thomas Cawarden's disbursements in the office of Tents during the afore-given years. Imperfect.

4, 5, 6, and 7 Edward, and 1 & 2 Mary. The certyficate (paper roll) of Sir Thomas Cawarden knight Master of the Tentes and Revelles, of the charges of certain affaires accomplysshed within those offices, done from the viijth of June in iiiijth yere of the late kinge Edward vntill the xvth daye of June in the fyrste and seconde yere of oure drad soueraigne lord and lady Philipp and Marye. Containing a charge of cccli. for the "Banketyng howses and other charges at Hyde "and Marybone Parkes prepared againste the Marshall "Seynte Androes comynge thether, vpon a warraunte "date the viijth of December 1552 and before that tyme "dewe, ouer and besides cxxxiij. vis. viiiij. which "Lawrence Bradshawe surveyor of the kynges workes "receyued of him vpon a lyke warraunte to defraye in "and towards the same charges amountinge in the hole "to ccccxxxiii. vis. viiiij." Also a charge of clxiiij. xvij. iij. for five masques, set before the court "from "the viijth of January y^e anno vi^e Regis Predicti vntill "the xiiijth of Februarye dicto anno septimo ejusdem "Regis and then seased by occasion of the kinges "sycknes and y^e shewe dyfferred." The last masks of the king's reign are described in the bill as "Fyve "Maskes vidz., a Maske of Greek Woorthyes, a Maske "of Medyxes beinge halfe deathe half man, a Maske of "Bagpypes, a Maske of Cattes, a Maske of Tumblers "goinge vpon theyre handes with theyre feet vpward, "with tooe maskes of torcheberers to them of the playe "of the state of Irelande sett owte by William Baldwyn, "and another playe of children made by Mr. Hawood "apareled garnished and wrought vpon." Also a charge of xli. xvi. iiiij. for "A Playe by the gentillmen of y^e "chappell prepared ageanste the Queenes maiesties "coronacion and played at the Xxistmas folowinge with "the officers and other ministers attendaunte thereon "and that shold els be called vpon in holidays." The particulars of the four masks exhibited between 17th October and 26th March, 1 and 2 Philip and Mary, are especially noteworthy.—Also, another copy of this roll.

3 January 1551. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Carden, Master of the Revels; for the speedy equipment of the eight counsellors of the appointed lord of Misrule for the king's house, in accordance with a previous warrant which Sir Thomas has not perfectly executed. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Twelfth Even., 1551. Warrant (signed, T. Darcy), notifying the king's pleasure that Sir Thomas Cawden, knt. should "vpon the sight hereof deliuer vnto John "Birche and John Browne the kinges entrelude players, "bringers herof, such garmentes" as may be "mete and "necessarye for them and their thre fellowes to play an "entrelude in before his highnes to-morowe at night." Dated from Greenwich. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 January, 1551. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., one of the gentlemen of the king's Privy Chamber, to provide suitable costumes for "two personages which to morow at night shalle

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

"play a dialogue before the kinges majestie," in accordance with the requirements of Sir Thomas Chaloner, who will declare how the dresses "are to be trymmed." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 February.—Letter from Mychaelle Stanhope to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., written at the Lord Protector's order, and notifying the "lorde protector's pleasure" that "Sir Thomas should "cause garmentes to be made for vi maskes whereof the kinges majestie shalbe oon and the residue of his stature, and vi other garmentes of like bignes for torchebearers, with convenient diligence, so as the same be in arraydynes "against Sondaye next at the vttermost." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

22 February, 1551. Copy of a letter from the earl of Northampton to William More, esq. For the discovery and correction of evil persons who hunt without licence in Guldeforde Park.

15 March 1551. Copy of warrant from Lords of the Council Sir Thomas Carden, knt., master of the Tents. To furnish canvas and tents for the accommodation of the workmen engaged on the works for the conveyance of water to Windsor Castle.

28 June to 29 July 1551. Account of the particulars of charges for building "The Banketing Howse in Hyde Park."

8 July 1551. A Boke of chargis for floyars, pake-threde, twyne, hoppes, garlandes and alle other maner of necessarys for the bankytt howse in Hyde Parke, beginning this viii day of July.

8 July, 5 Edward VI. Account-Book of Mennes Wagis by the day occupied in providing and carrying of alle maner of floures and other necessarys for the banket house at Hyde Park, from London and else where begynnyn on the viiith day of July anno Regis Edwardi Sexti quinto.

16 October 1551. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Magistrates of Surrey, for the maintenance of order under the imminent perils of the moment. Endorsed "Letter for good ordre at the apreheynson of "Somerset." Imperfect.

2 November 1551. Lists of the names of the Privy Councillors in the last year of Henry VIII. and in the time of Edward VI. till 2 November 1551.

24 November 1551. Warrant under king Edward the Sixth's sign-manual, to Sir Thomas Carden, knt., Master of the Revels; to provide furniture for their bases and horses to the earl of Warwick, Sir Henry Sydney, Sir Henry Nevill and Sir Henry Gate, knights. Given at Westminster. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Christmas Day, 1551. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Carden, knt., to provide out of the stores in his office a suitable equipment for the recently "appointed lord of mysrule to be in his highnes "houshold for the twelve dayes." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Christmas day, 1551. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Caverden, knt.; To deliver requisite apparel for the king's players, to one of them who is the bearer of the warrant. Dated from Grenewiche. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

30 December 1551. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Caurden, knt., one of the gentlemen of the Privy Chamber; to provide apparel for George Ferrers, the appointed lord of mysrule in his majesty's house, and for his three pages, eight counselors, one tumbler, and twenty-four servants. Dated from Greenwich. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

30 December 1551. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Caurden, knt.; to furnish with all speed "and delyner to George Ferrers the lorde of "Mysrule of his majesties howse such apparell and "furniture for himself and his men for his seconde "lyvery in like sort and number as" the first livery already provided by Sir Thomas for the said lord of mysrule. Dated from Greenwich. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1551. Latin speech delivered by the Bishop of Ely to the French king Henry II., on the occasion of the presentation of the order of the Garter to the said sovereign.—Also on the same paper, (1) List of the Electors of Germany, (2) Latin prophecy of the fortunes of Charles the Fifth.

Edward VI. A Tract (covering six foolscap pages) "Agaynst Edward duke of Somerset falsely usurpinge "the name of Protectour." Declaring the duke worthy of shameful death for his robberies, briberies, extortions, and divers treasons against the king's honor and interest, as well as for his hateful endeavours to secure to himself and his heirs the succession to the crown, by inducing the princesses Mary and Elizabeth to relinquish their titles to the throne. The opening paragraph of the paper makes reference to the pernicious influence of the protector's wife, "that imperious "and insolent woman his wif, whose ambytyous wytt "and mychevous perswasions ledd hym and dyrectyd "hym even also in the weighty affaires and gouernement of the realme to the grete harme and dishonour "of the same and to the more grete perill of the kinge "oure soueraign lordes estate as is apparant by the "sequele thereof." Speaking of the parasites and greedy adventurers, who were glad to act as the protector's instruments, the writer says, "and suche kinde of "vile men hou dere they were vnto hym John Bougham "his oon hand in Willshire, Sir Miles Partriche his "other hand in Gloucestershire, his customer of "Southampton in Hamshire, and Piers Cowrtney his "mynyster in Devonshire, and suche other his "mynysters, what kinde of men they are!"

5 Edward VI. An estymate of the charges &c. abowte the kinges his Maiesties Revelles and Tentess.

5 Edward VI. An Estymate (on a paper roll) of the charges of diuers and sondry accomplyshed done and fynyshed aboute the kinge his majesties Revelles and Tentess in this aforesaid yeare.

5 Edward VI. Att the Triumphe of Horsemen. The charges of the makyng and garniture of twelfe barbes for greate horses and eighte caparisons for lyght horses with theyr trappours and complete furnytur prepared and made in y^e kynge his Majesties revele &c. &c. at Christmas of the said yeare. A single bill on a small paper roll.

— Edward VI. Letter from the duke of Somerset to Sir Christopher More, knt., vlnager of Surrey and Sussex. Directing him to reside within the limits of his said office, for the more effective and speedy collection of the relief on woollen cloths granted to the king in the last parliament. No date.

5 Edward VI. to 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. Part of a roll of charges and expenses in the office of The Revels, from 5 Edward VI. to 1 & 2 Philip and Mary.

— Edward VI. An Inventory of lands and possessions in Dorsetshire, formerly pertaining to Edward late duke of Somerset, attainted and convicted of felony.

10 May, 6 Edward VI. Grant for life, by Richard Sackville, knt., chancellor of the Court of Augmentations and Revenues, of the office of steward of his manor of Whitleye, co. Surrey, to William More, esq. Also, the same Sir Richard Sackville's warrant to the keeper, or his deputies of Whitleye Park, to allow the same William or his assigns yearly to kill and take with dogs or bows in the same park a buck in summer and a doe in winter.

30 June, 1552. Copy of a letter from the earl of Northampton to William More, gentleman. Appointing Mr. More to be the writer's provost-marshal for the county of Surrey.

15 September, 6 Edward VI. Inventorie of alle the Juelles, Ornamentes and Belles of the parishe church of Wannesworth co. Surrey.

25 September, 6 Edward VI. Inventorye of all the platte, juelles, ornamentes, belles within the peryshe church of Camerwell in the countie of Surrey made between Sir Thomas Carden knight, John Scotte, Nicholas Lec, comysioners by the kynges maiesty aponted within the hundrethe of Bryxtone, co. Surrye, of the one pertye, and Robert Olyffe, William Godderde of the same peryshe one the other pertys.

26 September. Edward VI. Inventories of the goodes, plate, juelles, &c. &c. in the parish churches of Bedington and Clapham, co. Surrey.

9 October, 6 Edward VI. Inventory of the goods, ornaments, &c. in the parish church of Warlingham.

12 October, 6 Edward VI. A survey of certen landes tenements and other hereditamentes and possessions of the righte worshipful Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, &c. &c. within the precincts of the late Blacke Fryers by London, taken by Thomas Blagrove and — Bocher.

17 October, 6 Edward VI. Return of a jurye (William Cansten and George Ridlei, foremen), respecting the ornaments, &c. &c. in the church at Oxsted in the hundred of Tanridge, co. Surrey.

17 October, 6 Edward VI. The return of the jury (William Bisske and John Woodman, foremen), charged by Sir Thomas Caurden and Sir Thomas Saunders, knights, John Scott and Nicholas Leighe esquyers, commissioners from ourre soueraigne lorde the kyng; respecting the state of the parish church of Chepsted, in the hundred of Reigate, co. Surrey, together with an inventory of the goods, ornaments, &c. in the said church. Similar returns by the same jury, charged by the same commissioners, respecting other churches of

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

other parishes in the same hundred, viz. the parishes of Leighe, Backland, Beechworth, Chawlewoodde, Horle, Notende. Also, a similar return (dated 30 September) of another jury, whose names have been cut from the paper, respecting the parish church of Burstowe alias Brystow. Also the return of a jury, presided over by the "dame Elizabeth Coppley wydowe the laite wyf" of Syr Roger Coppley knyghte late departyd," respecting the church of Gatton in the hundred of Reigate, dated 17 October, 6 Edw. VI.

18 October, 6 Edward VI. Inventories of all the ornamentes, bells, plate, jewels, &c. &c. of the parish churches of Barmoudsey, Barns, Battrychsey, (Battersea), Marten, Mortlake, Stretham and Wymbledon, co. Surrey.

19 November 1652. Letter from Sir William More of Loseley, knight, to Sir Harrie Jernynham, knight; touching a matter in dispute between them, in respect to which it had been arranged that they would abide by the arbitrament of Mr. Serjeant Sowthcote (arbitrator for Sir Harrie), and Mr. Onesloo (arbitrator for Sir William).

12 December, 6 Edward VI. Inventory taken by a jury of the goods, ornaments, &c. &c. in the parish-churche of Tanridge.

27 December.—Edward VI. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Carden, knt., Master of the Revels; requiring Sir Thomas, in the king's name, to provide a fool's coat with a hood for Smyth, whose present apparel is unsuitable, and "sixteen liveries more," with all possible speed. Dated from Greenwich. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

31 December, 1552-3. Warrant from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Carden, knt., Master of the king's Revels; to provide out of his office all requisite furniture for "a certeyn Tryumphe of Cypide to be showed to hys hyghnes upon xiith nyght accordyng to a propozicion to be sent yow subscribed with the hande of Syr George Howard." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

31 December. 1552. Warrant from Lords of Council to Sir Thomas Carden, knt., Master of the kinges Revels, to provide clothing and necessities to George Ferrers, gentleman, and his band; the said George Ferrers having been appointed "to the shewing of "certaine pastimes before his highnesse this Christmas." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

6 Edward VI. The Inventory Indentyd and made the — day of — in the syxe yere of Kyng Edward the syxt Betwene Sir Thomas Carden knyght John Scott esquier and — Lee, esquier, commyssioners by comyssion apoyntyd within the hundred of Bryxton in the countie of Surrey on the one partie, and Thomas Hamond and Rychard Hylton paryshioners of the parysshe of Putney in the Forseid Countie on the othyr partie, of all the jewelles plate belles and othyr ornamentes whiche dyd belonge to the seide chyrche of Putney, sythen the fyrst yere of y^e reigne of seid soueraigne lord the kyng.

6 Edward VI. Another inventory of all the goodes, juelles, plate and ornaments in the parish church of Putney, co. Surrey.

1552? Letter from George Ferrers, lord of Misrule in the king's household, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, Master of the Revels: conveying suitable requests in humorously extravagant language. The epistle is not dated, but the following passage shows that it was not penned in his first period of official lawlessness: "Againe how I shall cum into the courte, whether "vnder a canopie as the last yeaere, or in a chare "trivmphall, or vpon some straunge beast, that I "reserve to yow." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

6 Edward VI. An account of money disbursed in the Office of Tents, in wages.

1552-1554. Portion of a Letter-Book kept in the office of the Tents and Revels, entitled "The Copie of "the Councelles letters for the receipt of money for "Tentes and Revelles."

1552. Inventory of the goods and ornaments in the church of Redderyth in the year 1552; with the wardens accounts for the same year.

6 Edward VI. A Bole Abstract (on a paper roll) declarynge the charges of thapparrell and furnytur of George Ferrys apoynted Lorde of Mysrule in the courte duringe the tyme of Crystemas and his retynewe with the garnyshinge and dressyng of certen properties and vtensiles then occupied to that purpose, prepared and delyvered oute of the kinges majesties revelles by Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., master of the same . . . between the xxiiith of December Aⁿ v^{to} Regis Edward sexti and the vith of January next ensuing.

6 Edward VI. Inventorie of goods, chattels, ornaments, &c. of the parish churches of Chelsham, Farlay, Lingfeld, Woldingham, Tattesfeld, Blechingley, Godstone, Tanridge, Crowherst, Warlyngham, Chipsted, Leighe, Bukland, Burstow, Nottfeld, Gatton, and Beechworth, co. Surrey.

6 Edward VI. An estimate (on a paper roll) of the contentes and valewe of soche parcelles and stuffe as was delyvered owte of the storehouses of the kinge his Maties Revelles and Tentes to be employed to the furnytur of the lorde of Misrule and his retynewe apoynted in the Courte to that purpose duringe the tyme of Cristmas anno predicto. Also, another estimate of the same kind for another year on a roll from which the date has been torn. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

27 January, 1553. Inventory of "certaine munitions and barneis of Sir Thomas Caurden knt. taken by the lorde William Howard, lorde Admiralle."

28 January, 1553. Inventory of harness and military munitions despatched from Blechingley by Sir Thomas Saunders, sheriff, co. Surrey, and William Saunders, of Ewell, esq., for delivery to lord William Howard.

28 January, 1553. Memorandum of armour and military munitions despatched from Blechyngly by Mr. Saunders, sheriff, and Mr. Saunders of Ewell, for delivery to Lord Wyllyam Howarde, Lorde Admirall.

29 January, 1553. Memorandum of artillery and military munitions taken at Blechingley, and delivered to Sir Thomas Saunder, sheriff, and Mr. Saunder of Ewell.

29 January, 1553. Inventory of "Parcelles of artyllery "and munysyons deliuerede to Sir Thomas Saunders "and Wyllyam Saunders of Ewell, esquere, owte of "tharmory of Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, at "Blechynglye."

29 January, 1553. Memorandum of parcels of artillery and warlike munitions, taken from Sir Thomas Cardyne, and delivered at the Tower. Endorsed, "Oute of the "towards boocerkes."

30 January, 1553. Bill of particulars of harness, pertaining to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., delivered at the Tower by his servant William Saunders.

20 May, 1553. Letter from the earl of Northumberland to Sir Thomas Cawarden. Begging Sir Thomas "to "apoynt out a couple of fayre maskes, oon of men and "another of women," to perform before the noble company who will assemble on Thursday next to celebrate the marriage of one of the writer's children with one of the lord of Suffolk's children, and also to celebrate the simultaneous marriage of "another of my "said lordes" (i.e. Suffolk's) "daughters with the erle "of Pembroke's son," as well as the marriage of lord Hastings with another of the writer's daughters.

15 June, 7 Edward VI. Receipt of Arthur Stourton-esq., collector, for copes, vestments, and tyssues, &c. &c. delivered to him by the commissioners appointed "to collect church goods and ornaments, &c. in the hundreds of Farneham, Godalmyng, Woking, Godleygh, Blakehethe, and Wotton, co. Surrey. Also, the acknowledgment of Sir Edmond Peckham, knt., for seventy-five pounds six shillings paid him by the same commissioners for church goods sold in the same hundreds.

15 June, 7 Edward VI. Receipt of Laurens Stoughton for goods, ornament, vestments, &c. delivered to him by the commissioners appointed to collect such articles in the churches of the parishes of the hundreds of Farneham, Godlemyng, Woking, Godley, Blackethe and Wotton, co. Surrey. Also, the receipt of John Ward for lxxxvi. xiii. and xid. levied by the same commissioners by the sale of church goods in the same hundreds.

18 June, 7 Edward VI., Surrey. The certyfyate yndented of suche redye moneye Plate and Copes of cloth of Golde and Tyssue as Laurence Stawghton William More and Rychard Byden, commyssioners emongeste others devydyde in to the hundredes of Farneham, Godalmyng, Okyng, Godleye, Blakeheth and Wotton within the seyd covute of Surrey for the collectinge of churche goodes have by vertu of a comyssyon to them and others in that behalfe by the Kinges Maiestye, Berynge date the xxth day of April last past, levied to his Highnes use and by them payed and delyverede accordyng to the forme and effecte of the seyd comyssyon. Besides "iiii vli. xiii. xid. in "redye money, ccccvii oz. vndefacyde plate, and "cccci oz. defacyde plate," the certificate covered "twenty copes and other pecys of clothe of golde of "dyvers sortes."

17 December. Copy of a letter from lords of the council to the commissioners for the assessing and levying of

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

the next and last payment of the relief granted to the king by act of parliament. Date of year not given.

15 February.—Edward VI. Copy of a letter of Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Magistrates of co. Surrey. Ordering inventories to be made of all the goods, chattels and ornaments, &c. of all the parish churches in the county.

—Edward VI. Petition of some 22 inhabitants of the parish of St. Nycholas in Guldeforde, co. Surrey, "To the right Worshipful the Kynges Majesties Comysioners assigned within the county of Surrey for the collection and sale of Churche Goodes in the same county." Praying that the petitioners may not be required to restore, but may be discharged of their responsibility touching, a certain portion of the money raised by the sale of church goods, which portion has been expended in repairs of the parish church. "Where," says the petition, "youre orators hadd within ther parishe church serteine plate as crosses and censers which were not to be vsed by reason of the godly alteracioun of oure relygyoun and also percevyng the coman robberyng of churches that of late was vsed within the saide shere and nere vnto youre orators, (as your good masterships doth well kno), and ther parish churche the beyng not only in greate ruyn and decay, but also framed and faycouned . . . lyke a papysticall cell of Rome; and your orators not knowynge or conceyving any restraynt or commandement not to sell the same plate (althoughe an Inventory was before taken therof), whiche Inventory your orators thought to be done only as a restraynt that Churche wardens and others the parishioners shold not imbesell the same to ther private vses. They your orators of ther coman assent, beinge specially moved therunto for the causes abovesaide, dyd sell ther saide churche plate, partly to repaire reforme and alter ther sayde churche, and partly to put the overplus therof in the saf custody . . . of the same churche. This done sodenly came forth the severall proclamaciouns for the . . . of the kynges Majesties coyne, whereby the money taken for the saide plate (other then that whiche was leyde out vpon the saide churche) was dymynished and abated to the half, which abatement and losse, yf you orators sholde restore and make goode to the kynges Majistie, it wolde be to ther vtter vndoyngne."

—Edward VI. Letter from the Lady (afterwards Queen) Elizabeth, signed "Your louinge frende Elizabeth," to Sir Thomas Cawerden, knt., and one of the gentlemen of the Privy Chamber. Thanking Sir Thomas for his gentle treatment of one of the writer's servants, and his readiness to do her good service; and assuring him that she will credit no evil thing said of him by one Mansill, whom she would not have received, had she known his evil inclination and worse life. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

—Edward VI. Letter, signed George Howard and addressed to Sir Thomas Cawerden, knt., notifying the council's pleasure respecting an interlude to be set before the court on the ensuing Twelfth Night. Endorsed "Sir George Howard's devyes for a playe of Cupid." No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

—Edward VI. Letter from the earl of Northumberland to Sir Thomas Cawerden. Requiring Sir Thomas to give instructions and provide requisite materials for the proper equipment of a Lord of Misrule to Mr. Ferrys, who has been appointed by the king to be his lord of Misrule in these present holydays. Written in haste on "Sunday at vth in the evening." No other date. (Vide Kempe's Loseley MSS.')

8 July, 1553. Notable letter from Lords of the Council to the deputy lieutenants, the sheriff and justices of the county of Surrey.

After our ryght hartie commendacions: Thies shalbe to signify vnto you that the Lady Mary being at Honsdon is sodenly departed with her trayne and famly toward the sea coast of Norfolk vpon what occasion we knowe not; but as yt ys thought eyther to flye the realme or to abide there sume foreyne power, intending by syche vngodly meanes and wayes to disturbe the commune quyet of this realme, and to resist syche ordinaunces and decrees as the kynges majestie hath sett forth and established for the succession of thimperial crowne of this realme after his deceasse, if God shall call him owt of this lief without issue of his owne body. Wherefore to avoide the danger that may ensewe to the state, and to preserve the realme from the tyranny of foreyne warres which by the said Lady Maries vngodly pretenses maye be brought into this realme to the vtter ruine and distruction of the same. We have thought good to require and charge you, not only to putt yourselves in a readynes after your best power and manner for the defense of our naturall cuntree against all syche attemptes, but likewise exhort you to be ready vpon an howers warning with your said power to repayre vnto vs and to stand fast to sicke ordinaunces as be prescribed vnto vs by his majestie signed with his owne hande and sealed with the Great Seale of England, the which we shall cause to be imparted vnto you with as convenient speede as we maye. And in the meane tyme we require and pray you to take syche goode ordres for the maintenaunce of the contynuall watches in every place withine that shyre, as no styrrer nor vprorer be attempted, but that the doers thereof be by your industries and pollicyes stayed and the styrrers apprehended, and aduertisementes sent vnto vs by you from tyme to tyme as occasion shall serve. And thus we byd you right hartely well to fare. From Grenewich the viiith of July 1553. Your louing frendes.—T. Cant', T. Ely, can', Winchester, Northumberland, J. Bedford, W. North', Arundell, F. Huntynghdon, Pembroke, Richard Cotton, T. Darcy, G. Cobham.—A note under the superscription indicating that the bearer of the letter was instructed to deliver it to "Mr. Carden and Mr. Saunders."

9 July, 1553. Warrant of Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., to deliver goods out of the office of the tents.

11 July, 1 Jane. Writ under the sign manual and signet of Lady Jane Grey, dated from the Tower of London and addressed to the marquis of Northampton, lieutenant of Surrey, and to the deputy-lieutenants and magistrates of the same county. Announcing that she this day makes her entry into her "Towre of London" as rightfull Quene of this realme, and expressing confidence that her cousin the said marquis will do all in his power to maintaine her in her "rightfull possession of this kingdome and to disturbe repell and resist the fayned and vntrue clayme of the lady Mary" "basterd daughter to our grete vnclie Henry the eight" "of famous memory." Her highness confirms the commission of lieutenantancy addressed to the Marquis by the late king Edward the Sixth, and promises soon to renew the same by letters issued under our own great seal.—(Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

16 July, 1 Jane. Letter addressed from the Tower of London, under the signet and sign-manual of "Jane the Quene," to the sheriff, magistrates, and other gentlemen, of the county of Surrey; whereby the said gentry and other folk of Surrey are admonished to remain true and steadfast in their allegiance to her highness, the justice and soundness of whose title to the crown of England, as set forth in her recent proclamation, are obvious to all who consider the same with reason and wisdom.—(Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

16 July, 1553. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace for the county of Surrey.

After our most hartie commendacions, Albeit it hath been heretofore openly published in all partes of this realme by open proclamacions letters and many other wayes, vpon what groundes of nature, justice, and common ordre, our most gracious Sovereign Lady Queen Jane is presently invested, and in just possession of thimperial crowne of this realme of England, France, and Ireland with all authorities, rights, and pre-eminences thereunto belonging, Yet forasmuche as the Lady Mary, bastard daughter of the noble Prince King Henry theight, seeking dayly more and more by all wayes and means she cane to stirre and move sundry of the nobles, gentlemen and others the Quenes Majesties subjectes to rebellion, ceassith not to spread and sett furthe most traytorously sundry vntrue reportes of our Sovereign Lady Quene Jane, and falsely also of some of vs of her Majesties Privey Counsell, We haue thought good by thies our letters to open and declare vnto you in few woordes the very trueth and originall ground of this matter. Which is that our late Master and Sovereign Lord King Edward the Sixt considering that, if the Crowne Imperiall of this Realme shuld haue descended to his bastard sister the Lady Mary, it should haue been prejudicialle to alle those that be of the whole blood descended of thimperial Crowne of this Realme: And been occasion of thutter dishereson of all personages descended of the blood royalle, and a mean to the bringing in of straung-ers. Whereof was like to haue folloed the bondage of this Realme to the old servitude of the Antichriste of Rome, The subversion of the true preaching of Goddes worde, and of thauncient lawes, vsages, and liberties of this realme; did first in his lief tyme will declare and limette the said Imperiall Crowne to remayne in suche sorte and ordre as we and

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

our posterities by the grace of God might be well assured to live many yeres under Princes naturally borne in this Realme, and loonly legation, and descending of the blood royall of the same. Vnto which his pleasure being by him said in his royal person openly declare vnto vs long before his death, not only We and every of Vs being of his Majesties Privie Counselle did consent and subscribe, but the most parte of all the nobilitie of this Realme, Judges, the Mayor and Aldermen of London, and many other grave personages of good reputation did also subscribe and agree, According to which limitation and agreement of the states aforesaid, our said Sovereign Lady is presently in actual and reall possession of the said imperial Crowne, not by any speciall procurement of particuler men, but by the full consent and agreement of the hole state as is aforesaid, Wherevnto as we did at the beginning with good deliberacion assent and agree vpon many just and good groundes; so doo we still holly remayne and God Willing minde alwayes to remayne of that same concord to mainteyne and defend to the death our said Sovereign Lady Quene Janes just title during our lives. Sorry we be that thies vnnatural seditions and tumultes stirred by the said bastard daughter to the great danger of this Realme shuld in this sorte disquiett you or any others of the Quenes Majesties subjectes: for the stay whereof, if it might haue liked her to haue been contented with the honorable state she was by the noble Prince Henry the Eight left in, and by our late Sovereign lord and master King Edward the Sixt confirmed and increased, nothing hath byn on our behalf omitted. But considering that through the counsell of a nombre of obstinate papistes she forsaketh as by her seditious proclamacions may appere the just title of supremacie annexed to thimperialle Crowne of this Realme, and consequently to bring in again the miserable servitude of the Bussshop of Rome, to the great offence of Almighty God and vtter subversion of the whole state of the realme, The Quenes Majestie hath appointed our very good lord the Duke of Northumberland and with him the lord Marques Northampton, the Erle of Huntingdon, the Lord Admirall, and other noble men to goo forward for the stay of the said seditions and tumults. Whereof, as we haue at good length made you Privey by thies our letters; so we doubt nothing, but considering your dueties to Almighty God, your natural sovereign lady Quene Jane  you will conforme yourselve to the common  peace and concorde of the nobilitie and state of  Travailing by all wayes and meanes that  rebellious and tumultes vpon any pretence of  daughters vnlawfull clayme or otherwise  and the authors or procurers of any suche  punished. Whereby you shall not only  punishment of the lawes ordeyned for suche as shall attempt anything against their Sovereign lord or lady being in possession of the Imperial Crowne; but also be well assured to finde our saide sovereign lady Quene Jane your good and gracious lady, and vs most willing to further any your reasonable suites when occasion shall serve. And so fare you moste heartely well.—From the Toure of London, the xvith of July 1553.

Your assured Louing freendes,

P. Cant^r, T. Ely, can^c, Winchester, J. Bedford, H. Suffolk, Arundell, F. Shrewsbury, Pembroke, T. Darcy, G. Cobham, and R. Ryche.—The letter is greatly worn and defaced; and at the points indicated by asterisks in the above copy the writing has been torn away.

16 July, 1553. Warrant, dated at the Tower, from the duke of Suffolk to Sir Thomas Carden, master of the tents; for a supply of tents "mete to be occupied heare in the Tower for lodgyng of thoes men whiche are appoynted to remayn here for the better garde of the same."

19 July, 1 Jane the Queen. Warrant under the Lady Jane Grey's signature to Sir Thomas Cawarden, master of her tents, to deliver four tents to her "beloved father" and counsellor the Duke of Suffolke."

19 July, 1 Mary. Letter to Sir Thomas Carden, knt. signed by Henry Burgavennye, Charles Lord Nevill, son and heir apparent of the earl of Westmoreland, T. Wyat, Thomas Moyle, Thomas Kemp, Thomas Fynche, Hughe Cartwright, R. Southwell, George Darell of Calehill, George Vane, Hugh Catlyn and Thomas Witton. Announcing the signers' proclamation of Mary Tudor to be queen, and their denunciation of the lady Jane Grey as a traitor.

21 July, 1 Mary. Warrant, issued by the earl of Arundell (by virtue of special authority accorded to him as steward of the royal household) to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of the Nonesuche parks, to furnish two buck of the season for the said household. Also six other warrants of the same nature and purpose, dated by the earl of Arundell, 27 August and 24 December, 1 Mary; 17 September, 30 September, 2 Mary; 1 December, 3 Mary; and 25 November, 5 Mary.

27 August, 1 Mary. Warrant (signed, Arundell and Robert Rochester) to the keeper of the "elder parke of "Nonesuche," to slay two bucks of the season within his "said office," and to bring the same on Wednesday, 24 August, to her majesty's honour of Hampton Court, or wherever else her highness may be on the night of that day. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 Septemb. 20, 1553. Warrant, dated from the manor of St. James's, under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, Master of the Revels; to deliver to two gentlemen of the chapel royal necessary garments and furniture for a play to be performed, in accordance with the precedents of past times, by the gentlemen of the queen's chapel on the feast of her highness's coronation. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Saint John's day, 1553. Letter from George Ferrers to Sir Thomas Cardyne, knt. Begging Sir Thomas to furnish the writer with xii hobby-horses, hunters' apparel for seven persons, vi coats of livery, a costume for a juggler, and other dresses for sportive use. Given at Greenwich. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

27 December, 1 Mary. Warrant under the Queen's sign-manual to Sir Thomas Cawarden, to deliver to Sir Francis Freston, cofferer of the queen's household, "certain paus of yron with grates which wer employed for "keping of fyer yn the tentes of oure most dear father "king Henry theight."

30 December, 1 Mary. Accompt of Alen Hord made to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., as well for alle suche fees as is graunted to the seyd Sir Thomas for kepyng of the Qwenes place parkes gardeyn and warderobe atte Nonesuche in the countie of Surrey and for the stuardshype of the maners of Bansted, Walton, Estchayam and Westchayam in the seyd countie for one whole yere.

25 January, 1 Mary. Warrant, under the queen's signet and sign-manual, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knyght, to muster and arm as many horsemen and footmen, his servants, as possible, and hold them in readiness to march for the suppression of Wyat's rebellion; with further orders to exercise vigilance in maintaining order, and apprehending spreaders of false news in his own especial neighbourhood. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 January, 1 Mary. Paper exhibiting copies of the three following documents, (1.) Queen Mary's warrant, under her signet, dated, on above-stated day, from St. James's manor, to the sheriff of Surrey and Sussex, and all her lieges of the same cos., to aid and obey in all things the lord William Howard, lord Admiral of England, commissioned for the execution of certain affairs in cos. Surrey, and Kent. (2.) Warrant, dated on Sunday, from his house at Reigate, and addressed by the said Lord William Howard to Sir Thomas Saunder, sheriff of Surrey, and W. Saunder, to seize and remove from Mr. Caurden's house all his ordnance and military stuff. (3.) Another warrant (dated from Reigate on 29 Jan. 1 Mary) addressed by lord William Howard to Sir Thomas Saunder, William Saunder, and all the queen's lieges in Surrey, for the seizure and removal from Blechingley of all Sir Thomas Caurden's "harneis "weapons pounes and munitions of warre and horses." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

29 January, 1 Mary. Receipt of Sir Thomas Saunder, knt., and William Saunder of Ewell, esq., for certain parcels of armour, taken by virtue of her majesty's warrant, of the lady Elizabeth Cawarden. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

29 January, 1 Mary. Inventory of "suche harnes "wepons and artyllarye as Sir Thomas Saunders, knt. and William Saunders esquire received by bill the "xxixth day of Januarye in the fyrst yere of Quene "Mary."

29 January, 1 Mary. Inventory of "harneys lefte in "the Armory of Blechingly, y^e xxixth of Januarii A^o I. "Reginae Mariae."

29 January, 1 Mary. Copy of the receipt, signed by Sir Thomas Saunders, sheriff, co. Surrey, and William Saunders, esq. for the artillery, weapons, and harness, &c. taken by them from the lady Elizabeth Caurden, wife of Sir Thomas Caurden, knt., by virtue of the said queen's warrant directed to them and the commandment of the lord William Howard, lord admiral. Also, another copy of the same bill.

29 January, 1 Mary. Warrant (signed by W. Howarde, T. Saunder, and W. Saunder) to the sheriff and magistrates, &c. co. Surrey. To seize all arms and munitions

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

of war in the house of Sir Thomas Cawarden, and remove the same to a place of security.

11 February, 1554. Letter (signed, William Paget) "to Sir Thomas Carden, knt., and in his absence to "Mr. Holt at the Blackfreers." Begging for a loan of "masking geer" to the ambassador of Venice who "desireth to haue certaine masking apparail to occupy "for his pleasure."

11 February, 1554. Letter from Sir Thomas Saunders, knt. sheriff of co. Surrey, to lady Cardyn at Blechynglee. Thanking lady Cardyn for her gentle entertainment of the writer, and patience of his and his followers' rudeness. For a postscript the writer adds, "Here in cloyd "I haue sent you a tokyn of your owne."

3 March, 1 Mary. Memorandum of the delivery by John Lloyd, servant to the Lord Admiral, to Thomas Bowth, and of the receipt by Thomas Bowth, servant of Sir Thomas Caurden, knt., of certain horses, with clothing and harness for the same.

5 March, 1 Mary. Receipt of Nicholas Whele, servant of Sir Thomas Caurden knt., for certain parcels of harness and weapons delivered to him by Nicholas Bray, servant to Sir Thomas Saunder, knt., sheriff of co. Surrey.

9 March, 1554. Warrant (signed, John Gage, Robert Rochester, and William Petries) to Sir Thomas Carden; to bring his accounts pertaining to the offices of the tents and revels to the court on the eleventh inst., in order that the same may be examined by the subscribers of the warrant, who have been appointed for that purpose. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

9 April, 1 Mary. Memorandum in the handwriting of Wylliam Saunders of Ewell, esq., of certain parcels of harness delivered by him on the aforegiven day "to "the lady Elizabeth wyff vnto Sir Thomas Cawarden, "knyght."

21 April, 1 Mary. Warrant, signed by Henry earl of Sussex, "chief justice and justice in oyer of the quenes "maiesties forrestes," to the keeper of the parks of Noenshycke co. Surrey; to deliver out of the said park a buck of season to the earl's sister, Anne lady Wharton. Also, a similar warrant, dated 24 June 1556, for the delivery out of either of the same parks of a buck to the lady Kemp. Also, a warrant of the same earl, dated 26 August, 1 & 2 Phil. and Mary, to the keeper of Hampton courte Parke, for the delivery of a buck to the earl's son, lord Fitzwauter.

15 June, 1554. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Norwich, to Sir Thomas Cardewen, knt.; asking for a grant on fair terms of "the litle peace of grounde" running into the writer's garden.

16 June, 1554. Warrant, under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, to deliver a tent with furniture to John Sulyard, George Jernegan, Edmond Henseley, and Robert Green, esquires.

17 June, 1554. Precept from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Caurden, To send forthwith (if he continue to be too sick to come himself) to their lordships some "meate and handsome" person, who may execute orders for "certaine banqueting houses of bowes and "other devises of pleasure to be gon with in hand "withalle very shortly."—(Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

—21 June, 1 Mary. Indenture, drawn in Latin, whereby Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., in consideration of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* paid to him by Thomas Thirlebye, bishop of Norwich, conveyed to the said bishop, his heirs and assigns for ever, a piece of land in the said Sir Thomas Cawarden's Blackfriars estate.

—Mary. Copy of Queen Mary's proclamation of pardon to all participators in the rebellious gatherings provoked by "Thomas Wiate confederate with other lewde "and evell disposed persons," who on hearing of the same proclamation "shall within xxliii howers after "returne to theire houses and lyve there quyetley and "obedientlie."—(Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1 Mary. Rough draft of the petition of Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt. to the "Queenes Majesties moste "honorable Pryvye Counsell," for the restoration of the arms, warlike munitions and other commoditie, wrongfully taken from his house at Blechingly, co. Surrey, at the time of Wyat's rebellion, and also for compensation for his losses attending the several and unreasonable arrests and imprisonments of his person at the said time. The petition recites,—how on 25 Jan., 1 Mary, between 8 and 10 a.m. the petitioner was arrested by lord William Hawarde and James Skynner and John Skynner, and by them taken before the lords of the council in the star-chamber, where he was questioned by the lord chancellor Stephan Gardener, bishop of Winchester, and then was honorably discharged by the said lords; how on the 27th of the same month he was again arrested by the said lord, in company with Sir Thomas Saunders, sheriff of Surrey, James Skynner and John Skynner; how he was by the said lord imprisoned successively in his own house at Blechingly, and in James Skynner's house at Reigate, whence he was carried first to Lambeth and then to "the seide lord "Chancellor's house at the Clynce"; and how he was then required by certain lords of the council to reside till further notice at his house in the Blackfriars, which he did till his final and complete discharge, a month later.

6 July, 2 Mary. Warrant, dated at Hampton Court, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to the keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver two bucks of the season to the earl of Arundell, lord steward of the royal household.

16 July, 2 Mary. Warrant, dated at Bisshoppes Waltham, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver out of the same parks a buck of the season to Jane Russell, a gentlewoman of the Privy chamber.

16 July, 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. Warrant, under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Mary, to the keeper or his deputy-keeper of Nonsuch park; to deliver out of the same park a buck of season to her majesty's "right "entirelie beloved cosin the L. cardinall Poole, legate "a latere."—Signed, at the foot of the paper,—"Winchester." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

15 August 1554. Warrant, under Queen Mary's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver out two bucks of the season to the lord Fitzwauter.

16 August, 2 Mary. Warrant, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver to the bishop of London, "in consideracioun he hath "the entertaynment of diuers nobell menne of Spayne" a buck of the season, out of Nonesuche park.

24 August 1554. Warrant, dated at Hampton Court, under Queen Mary's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver out of Nonesuche park a buck of the season to Jeffrey Perryn, a yeoman of the queen's cellar.

11 September, 2 Mary. Warrant, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver to Stephen Hadmole, one of the groomes of the privy chamber, a buck of this season to be taken in the great park of Nonesuche.

17 October, 2 Mary. Warrant, dated at White Halle, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver out of the same parks, two does of the season to Edward lord Dudley.

24 October 1554. Warrant, under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, to deliver "two dowes of this season" out of Nonesuche park to the mayor elect of London.

8 December, 1554. Warrant, under Queen Mary's signet and sign-manual, to the Master and Yeoman of the Revells; to supply Nicholas Udall, on demand whensoever he may make or repeat the same, with such garments and furniture from the office of the Revells as may be requisite, according to his judgment, for the proper exhibition and setting forth of the sportive devices of the same Nicholas Udall who "hathe, at "soondrie seasons convenient heretofore shewed and "myndethe hereafter to shewe of his diligence in setting "forth of Dialogues and Enterludes before" her highness for her disport and recreation. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

23 December, 2 Mary. Warrant, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuche park; to deliver a doe of the season to the Queen's dear nurse, the Lady Brooke.

31 December, 2 Mary. Warrant, dated at Westminster, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver out of the same parks, a buck of the season to Edmund bishop of London.

31 December, 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. Receipt given by Anna the dowghter of Cleves (i.e. Anne of Cleves) to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt. for the sum of viii*l.* xiii*s.* ix*d.* ob. paid to her by the said Sir Thomas in full satisfaction of her rents at Blechynle and her lands there, up to the date of the receipt. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

16—1554. Warrant, dated at Bishop's Waltham, under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Mary to Sir Thomas Cawarden or his deputy-keeper, at Nonesuche; to deliver a buck of the season, taken in Nonesuche park, to Robert Trappes.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

1554. List of remnantes of odd stuff remaynyng in a cheste in y^e Howse to be cutt and made in garments from tyme. Also a list of Remaynynges in the Black Cheste within the said store-howe to serve the king, being childrens garments to play in.

1 February, 1555. Warrant, under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Mary, to the keeper or deputy keeper of the Great Park of Nonesuche; to take two does of the season in the said park and deliver them to "Mouns^r Noailles ambassador resident with vs for oure good brother the Frenche king." Also, on the same side of the same sheet of paper, the receipt, dated 15 Feb. 1555, of the same ambassador, under his seal and signature, for the same does. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

6 February, 1555. Warrant, from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., or his deputy-keeper of the house and gardens of Nonesuche; to show the said house and gardens, &c., to the French ambassador and his wife, for whose entertainment with hunting in the same park a warrant has been previously issued. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 March, 1555. Inventory of the remaynes of store and stuffe in the office of the Quenes Tentes and Pavilyons. Taken by Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight.

1 April, 1 and 2 Philip and Mary. Warrant, under the signs-manual, and signet of their highnesses, to Sir Thomas Cawarden. For the delivery of canvas out of the office of Tents to Sir John Lyndley.

5 April 1555. Warrant, under the sign-manual of Queen Mary, dated at Hampton Court, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver a sufficient tent and furniture to Thomas Percy.

8 May, 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. Warrant dated at Hampton Court, under the signs-manual and signet of their majesties, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, master of their tents and pavilions; to transport to Calais fifty bales of canvas and "as moche sere clothe as you have of ours, to be employed in the making of newe houses" there, for the accommodation of the Cardinal Poole, the lord Chancellor, the lord steward of the royal household, and the lord Paget, who are about to cross the sea to arrange a treaty of peace with the commissioners of "our derest father Thempour and our loving brother the French king." Also, bills of charges for wages and disbursements in the execution of this warrant.

8 May 1555. Letter from William Petres to Sir Thomas Cawarden, master of the Tents, touching the Queen's warrant to Sir Thomas, to send canvas and sere cloth to Callayes "to be employed about the making of certayne tentes and howses for the meting of thambassadors appointed to assemble for the treating of a peace."

30 June 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. Warrant, under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Mary, to the keeper or his deputies of the two parks of Nonesuche; to deliver out of the said parks two bucks of the season to the lord mayor and aldermen of London.

2 Mary. Copy of the warrant, issued under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., Master of the Revels; to furnish Nicholas Udall with apparell and all things requisite, according to his judgment, for the proper setting forth of his devices for her majesty's entertainment, the said Nicholas having in past time distinguished himself by his diligence "in setting forth the dialloges and enterludes before vs for oure regall dysporte and recreacyon." Also, on the other side of the same single sheet, a copy of her majesty's warrant to the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer to comply with all requisitions for money from the Master of the Revels, for the execution of the above warrant, issued in behalf of Nicholas Udall. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

12 July, 1555. Letter from Frances lady Fyztwater to Sir Thomas Cowden, knt. Asking for Sir Thomas's warrant to the writer "for a bucke in Nonsuche."

24 July, 1555. Percept, from lords of the council to Sir Thomas Carden knt., for the immediate payment of 1000*l.* due from him to her Majesty the Queen. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

2 August 1555. Warrant, dated at Hampton Court, under Queen Mary's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver out of Nonesuche park a buck of the season to Don Lewis de Arowe.

19 November, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at St. James's, under the queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver out of the same a doe of the season to Lord Paget.

7 January, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at Greenwich, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver out of Nonesuche park a buck of the season to Anthonic Kempe, a gentleman of the privy chamber.

14 January, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at Greenwich, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; keeper of Nonesuche parks; to deliver a doe of the season to "the busschoppe of London."

15 December, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at the manor of St. James, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver a doe of the season, out of Nonesuche park, to "the Ladie Margaret Countes of Lincoln."

24 January, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at Greenwich, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver out of Nonsuche park a doe of the season to Edward Wele, yeoman of the privy chamber.

January and February 1556. Account of moneys expended at her Majesty's order in wines, sugar, spices, and other provisions, amounting to 96*l.* 10*s.* 1*d.* for the furniture of her house at Dartforth and for the officers thereof.

7 February, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at Greenwich, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver a doe of the season out of Nonesuche park to Barbara Rice, a woman of the Queen's chamber.

28 February, 1556. Copie of an ordre prescrybed by the kyng and quenys maiesties vnto the Justices of Peace of the counti of Surrey for the good gouernaunce of their majesties loving subjectes within the same shire.

March and February, 1556. Account of disbursements, headed "Money Dewe and Owinge to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, as well for sondry prouisions as diuers other fresshe acates and necessities by hym provided and bought at the request of the lady Anne of Cleves grace, and laide into the Blacke Friers before her graces comynge thether. And the remayne taken by Michaell Apeslye, clerke of her gracie kytchene, the xiith daye of January, 1556. As maye appere in the Recordes of the householde and creditor made at the Black Friers for the monethe abouesaid." The payments were made for bread, wine, spices, fuel, and other requisites. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

8 April, 2 & 3 Philip and Mary. Warrant, dated at Greenwich, under the sign-manual and signet of queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, master of the tents, to deliver two tents and two haies to Lord Fitzwater "deputie of our realme of Ireland."

18 April, 2 & 3 Philip and Mary. Receipt, signed by "Anne the dowghter of Cleues," for viii li. xiii*s.* ix. d. ob., paid to her by Sir Thomas Cawarden, "in fulle contentacion and payment of one quarter of a yere's rentes" from Blechyngly and her lands there.

June, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at the manor of Saint Jamys, under the sign-manual and signet of the Queen, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, keeper of Nonesuch parks; to deliver out of the same parks a buck of the season to the queen's "welbelouede woman Elizabeth Babbynton."

21 June, 3 Mary. Warrant, dated at St. James's manor, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver out of Nonesuche park a buck of the season to "Margaret countes of Lennox."

4 July, 1556. Warrant (signed, Winchester) to the keeper or his deputy of the great park of Nonesuch; to deliver to the wardens of the Grocer's Company the fee buck pertaining to lord Winchester, by virtue of his office of High Treasurer of England. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

2 & 3 Philip and Mary to 1 Elizabeth. The ledger (containing 200 carefully penned quarto pages) of the disbursements in the Offices of the Tents and Revels from 2 & 3 Philip and Mary to 1 Elizabeth.

9 July, 4 Mary. Warrant, dated at St. James's manor, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to deliver a buck of the season out of Nonesuch park to lord Paget, the Queen's counsellor and keeper of her privy seal.

16 July, 1556. Warrant, dated at St. James's, under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, to deliver a buck of the season out of Nonesuche park to the duchess of Somerset.

18 August, 4 Mary. Warrant, under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Mary, to the keeper or his deputy of her Great P. of Nonesuch; to deliver out of the said park two bucks of season to the Mayor and Brethren of the city of London. Dated at the manor of Eltham. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

25 August, 4 Mary. Warrant, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Sir Thomas Cawarden; to

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

deliver out of Nonesuche park, a buck of the season to Marye Basset, a gentlewoman of the privy chamber.

10 September, 1556. Letter from the earl of Pembroke to Sir Thomas Carden, knight. Congratulating Sir Thomas on his "good husbandry" in procuring a supply of water for his house in the Blackfriars, and begging him to "confer with the plommer for the charge" to bring the watter from your house to myne," i.e., at Baynardes-Castell.

16 September, 4 & 5 Philip and Mary. Privy seal writ addressed to Wylyam More. Requiring him to deliver xxli. by way of loan for their majesties' use to John Skynner, esq.; the said money to be repaid between the present date and the feast of the Nativity 1558. At the foot John Lkynner's receipt for the sum demanded.

— 1556. Letter from Wylyam Baldwyn, player and dramatic author, to The Ryght Worshipfull Syr Thomas Caverden, &c.

"Love and Lyve.—You shall vnderstande syr that I have made a Comedie concernyng the way to lyfe, mete as it is supposed to be played before the Quene, and there be of the Innes of Court that desyer to have the setting furth thereof, but because your worship now thre yerres passed offered in a sort to set furth some of my rude devises, I thought it good to know your mynde herein, before I gave answer to any other. The setting furth wil be chargeable, because the matter is stately, comprehending a discourse of the worlde. There be in it of sundry personages lxii, and the play is iii heures long; it is now in learnyng and well be ready within these x dayes. The matter is this, I bring in a yong man whome I name Lamuel who hath a servant called Lob, these two will attempte the worlde to seke theyr fortune, they mete with Lust Lucke and Love; Lust promises them lecherie, Lucke lordship, Love lyfe; they follow lust and through lecherie be lost, then through Lucke they recover, Lucke bringeth them to lordship from which through Larges and Lawacine (?) they cum to Lacke. Than through Love, they go to Light and therby attayne Lyfe. All the players names begin with L. And such as ensue.

Naturall {
Lamech and husbondman.
Lamuel his sonne.
Lob his servant.
Lust
Lucke } ladies.
Love
Layies Lechery, a sumtuous hore.
Laughing } her maydens.
Lokying
Lotheyng } her men.
Lowting
Lantidu' Sterves an hore.
Lymping Cure a vlmoinhedge.
Lusty Lilberne a lowtlysh ruffian.
Landardy Lashar, a roysting ruffian.
Lightfeete his lacky.
Leonard Lustyguts an epicure.
Sir Lewes Lewdlyfe a chaplain.
Lubberdy Lazy } Lustiguts men.
Liberal! Laucher
Lame Lazar a spittleman.
Laurans Little skyl a surgeon.
Lither Wyll his boy.

Lordship borne in a chare { Linage.
by these fower } Landes.
Leadall coynt.
Lawe.

Naturall {
Liegerdemayne and olde courtier.
Lammarkin a Lance knight.
Lodovico de S. Lukerresco, an Italian herseman.
Lamphaderezumph a drowerslate.
Linage Linker an harolde.

Lawe } Ladies.
Lewducs
Lothly Lucre a huswyfe.
Lucres Lockfast her mayd.

Naturall {
Large Conscience } men sernautes.
Lying Lyeuefinger
Lieger de pied } frenchmen.
Lyverwhite
Landgrave van Luxenburgh Lieutenant of an army.

Light accompanied { Line & Levell—Justice. in a throne with } Lenitie—Mercy.
these iiiij. } Learnyng.
Labor.

Naturall {
Larracine, an extortioner.
Lawash, a stuarde.

Lot
Lyvelode } vertues.
Leannes
Lyking
Let a vice.
Lamentyng } States.
Longyng
Naturall {
Littleleft a pore sutor.
Libertie a ladye.
Last Yeres an aged man.
Little Loktfor death.
Lyfe a tabernacle.

This is the proporcion wherein I pray you as shortly as you can to let me know your mynde. I pray God kepe you and youres. Amen.

At London thies tuisday Yours to do you pleasure Christmas Eve. Wylm. Baldwyne."

The letter has two endorsements.—1. (probably by the hand that wrote the letter) "The note of a play, and the "nayemes of players An^o 1556. Revylles." 2 (in a contemporary handwriting, probably that of Sir Thomas Cawarden, or of some clerk in his office) "A letter of a "player."

8 January 1557. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir Edward Braye, knt., William More, Richard Bedon and others, of the county of Surrey. Accompanying a letter of commission the purport of which does not appear.

3 May, 1557. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Begging Mr. More to join with the writer's servant Richard Bedon in mustering and arraying the forces of the "cowuntrye within" the same viscount's "rules," in compliance with their majesties' warrant.

4 May, 3 & 4 Philip and Mary. Warrant, dated at Westminster under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Mary, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, master of the tents; to deliver a sufficient supply of "canvas and other tente "stuffe" to the earl of Pembroke, who has been appointed lieutenant-general of Calais, and "hathe not tentes and "hales sufficient to serve with."

4 May, 3 & 4 Philip and Mary. Warrant addressed by Anthony viscount Mountague to William More and John Skynner, esqs., and to the writer's servant Richard Bydon; to muster and array, in accordance with a certain warrant from their majesties, all the force, horse and foot, of the country within his lordship's rules and offices, so that they may be ready on an hour's warning to march for the defence of Callice. From his lordship's house at St. Maryoveries.

20 August, 1557. Letter from the duke of Norfolk to Richard Bedon, Lawrence Stoughton and William More, esqs. Requesting that the writer's tenants and servants (whereof Edmund Hill, the letter's bearer, holding of the writer's manor of Bramley, is one) may be exempted from the "comon mostrewes," as they are required to follow the writer in his attendance on the queen.

17 September, 4 & 5 Phillip and Mary. Privy seal writ, addressed to Sir Thomas Cawarden of Blechingley knt. Requiring him to deliver to John Skynner, esq., the sum of xl li. by way of loan for their majesties' use: the said money to be repaid at farthest by the feast of the Nativity, 1558. At the foot, John Skynner's receipt for the sum demanded 1557. Paper (20 pages) described at the head of the first page, The maner and order from the begynning of the doing and an communicacioun betwene the right honourable therle of Arrundell Lorde Steward and Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, of for and concerninge, the said Sir Thomas Cawarden his interest and offices at Nonesuche.

1557. A complete schedule of all Sir Thomas Caverden's tenants on his Blackfriars estate, and of the rents paid to him by them.

2 March, 1558. The last will and testament of Alice Mellershe of Womershe, co. Surrey, widow and late wife of Phillip Mellershe deceased; which was proved in the prerogative court of Canterbury 10 December 1559. Interesting for its minute enumeration of the testator's household chattels, and for her careful attention to details. She bequeaths iiij. s. apiece to 30 of the "poorest "howsholders inhabitantes within the parishe of Womer- "she;" xxs. apiece "to the marriage of iiii. the "poorest maydens within the same parishe comynge to "marriage with good name and fame;" iiii. s. to each of her gode-children asking for the same within a year of her decease; and xxs. to the building of the school-house at Guildford. To her son Philipp Mellershe she bequeaths her "best sylver salte, vi. oxen," all her sheep and implements of husbandrye and her "tables in "the parlour and kytchin," provided he pay his late father's debt to the children of John Mellershe.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

12 May, 1558. Letter from the earl of Arundell, dated at Nonsuch, to William More, esq. Authorizing him to view, muster and train certain men named in an accompanying schedule.

18 July, 1558. Letter from Thomas Copley to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt. Entreating Sir Thomas of his courtesy to "lend the use of" his "maskes," for the solemn celebration of the writer's marriage "which in an houre to the writer is 'looked to be' solemnized on Sunday next at Nonsuch." The writer hopes to see Sir Thomas and Lady Cawarden to his wedding, respecting which he says gloomily, "my hope is ther shall come no harme of hit." If Lady Carden cannot come to the wedding, it is hoped that she will be at Gatton on the following Wednesday, "at which daie I thynke, we shalle come home." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

4 October, 1558. Copy (contemporary) of the last will and testament of Cardinal Pole, made at the above-given date.

— Mary. A mourner's bill for annuall supplied to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt.: the sum total of the account being cclxxiiiili, xixs. iiili. Also two other (erroneous) copies of the same account.

— Mary. List of "Fees and other Comodities within the Honor of Hampton Court, appoynted by Sir Thomas Cawarden knyght, hygh steward of the same honor, to diuerse persons to serue ther vnder hym."

— Mary. Names of the Shyrefes of Surie and Sussex that dyd borne the Inosentes with the namis of suche whom they brent. Imprimis the second yere of the raygne of Quene Marye, Mr. John Coveart (being shyref) dyd bornd Dyreke Harman, John Lander, Thomas Everson, and Rychard Hooke. Item (the thyrd yere) Mr. Wylliam Suderes (being shyref) dyd borne Thomas Harland, John Oward, Thomas a Rede, Thomas Harrington, Thomas Hoode, mynyster, John a Myll, Thomas Douget, John Foxe, man, Mother Trec, John Hart, Thomas Ravendalle, Nycoles Holden, with a show maker and a coryar. Item (the fowarthe yere) Sir Edward Gage (being shyref) dyd borne Stevens Grotwyke, William Morant, Thomas King, Richard Wodman, Georg Stevenes, Margret Mores, James Mores, Dyones Burges, Wylam Maynard, Alexandre Hosmans servant, Thomas Ashedownes wyf, and Groves wyf.

1558. Letter from Edward Tyle to William More, esq. Announcing that Sir William FitzWilliam has not yet returned from court to his "bedfellow" lady FitzWilliam, who would be glad to see Mr. More and his "bedfellow here this holydayes." Dated "from the manner of the Great Parke of Wyndsor this present St. Steoven's daye." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1558. Letter from Sir Wylliam Fytzwylliam, at court, to Mr. More, esq., sheriff cos. Surrey and Sussex. Touching certain candidatures for the next election of knights for the shire of Surrey. "And for newes," the writer continues, "you shalle vnderstande that yestyrdaye, beyng Cristemas daye, the quenes maiestie repayryd to hyr greate closet, with hyr nobles and ladyes, as hath ben accustomed yn suche hygh feastes. And she parseyng a bysshope preparyng hym selfe to masse, alle in the olde fowme, she taryyd there on tille the gospelle was done, and when alle the people lokyd for hyr to offryde, accordyng the olde facyon, she with hyr nobles reaturnyd agayn from the closet and the masse on to hyr preveye chamber, which was strange on to dyvers." Dated on "Steeven's nyght." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1558. Letter from the earl of Arundell to William More, esq. Appointing Mr. Moore, at the desire of the lord Clynton lord admyrall of Ingland, to take into his charge a "beddingall" he said lord Clynton's tenants on his manors or lordships of Sene, Rypeley, Westhorsesley, Shallford, Cl. Ford, and Nysewate.

— November, 1 Elizabeth. Letters of Commission, under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Elizabeth, addressed from the manor of Hatfelde to Sir Thomas Cawarden and Sir Edward Warner, knights. Directing them to act on the behalf of the said lord, who had been instructed to accompany to the Tower of London, where they are required to deliver the said letters to Sir Robert Osborne, knight, and appointing the said Sir Thomas Cawarden and Sir Edward Warner, knights, with the said Robert, to take charge and custody of the Tower; the earl of Bedford being commissioned to see that the said tower is duly delivered to the said knights. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

25 March, 1558. Letter from the earl of Arundell to the justices of the county of Surrey. Announcing his commission to be the lieutenant of the shire.

21 November, 1 Elizabeth. Warrant, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to raise a hundred able men and equip them. It does not appear to whom this writ was addressed.

7 December 1558. Letter from Sir Thomas Copley to William Moore, esq. Soliciting Mr. Moore's assistance in the writer's candidature for the office of knight of the shire for co. Surrey. Dated from Gatton.

10 December, 1 Elizabeth. Letter, dated from Strond Place under the signet and sign-manual of Queen Elizabeth, and addressed to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt. Relieving him of his office of lieutenant of the Tower, the "charge and keeping" of which were at her majesty's "cummyng vnto the crowne committed" to him, together "with a certaine number of men to attend vpon you for that purpose."

14 December, 1558. Letter from Thomas Browne, esq. to William More, esq., sheriff of Surrey. In consideration of inexperience and ill-health the writer declines to be nominated for the office of a knight of the shire, but solicits Mr. More's influence for the election of "my cousin Copley" who is a warm friend to "Mr. Cawarden."

16 December, 1558. Letter from Sir Wylliam Fytzwylliam, knt., to William More, sheriff of cos. Surrey and Sussex. Begging Mr. More to defer till next Sunday his reply to Mr. Browne's letter touching the election of a knight for the co. of Surrey.

18 December, 1558. Letter from Thomas Browne, esq., to William More, esq. Having received a strongly persuasive letter from his father, the writer recalls his refusal to stand for the shire, and wishes to represent it in parliament.

20 December, 1558. Letter from Lord William Howard to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. Moore to support with his voice, and his influence with the freeholders of the shire, the candidature of the writer's eldest son Charles, who will offer himself for election as one of the knights for co. Surrey in the parliament appointed to meet on 25 January next.

Seynt Johnes Day, 1558. Letter from Rychard Bydon, esq., to William More, esq. Touching a pending election of knights for the shire of Surrey, in which the voices of the writer and his friends will be given for Sir Thomas Copley and Mr. Thomas Brown. The writer begs that he may not be entered on Sir William's "retorn for" suche gentylman that ar mete to make fyne for ther "knyghthod," as he is of no sufficient lands or ability.

31 December, 1558. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir Thomas Cawarden, and Sir Peter Carewe, knights, and George Throckmerton, esq. Touching the recent order for "a generall muster both of the people meete thereto and also of the armour." It is observed "it is not a thing vsuall to haue the bisshoppes and clergie come to eny musters, and yet we well vnderstand that they have of late tyme procured to their possession a grate quantitie of armor and weapons." The lords of the council are to be certified respecting all armour, of the clergy as well as of the laity.

1 January, 1559. Copy of Herry Bocher's bill to Sir Thomas Cawarden, for cloth of gold and silver, and other costly draperies, amounting to cecil. iiili. iiili.

3 January, 1 Elizabeth. Warrant, to Sir Thomas Cawarden, knt., master of the revells, under the queen's sign-manual and signet. "Whereas you have in your custodie and charge certen apparrell as officer for oure maskes and revelles. Thies shalbe to will and commaunde you immediately vpon the sight hereof that you deliuer or cause to be delivered vnto John Gresham and John Elyot citizens of oure cite of London suche and so muche of the said apparrell as they shall require for the setting forth of those pageantes which be appointed to stande for the shewe of oure cytie at the tyme we are to passe thorough the same towards oure coronation, wherein you shall vse your discretion to deliuer suche percelles as may most convenientlie serve their torne and therewithall take lest hurte by vse, receaving also of the said Gresham and Elyot a byll subscribed by their handes whereby to charge them with the sauf delivery and restitution of the said apparrell." On the same file with this warrant are several bills of charges and orders for the execution of the warrant, and for the due celebration of the royal passage through the city and the coronation.

24 January, 1559. Last will and testament of Elizabeth Cawarden, widow of the late Sir Thomas Cawarden; with letters of probate attached thereto.

3 May, 1559. Rough draft of the petition of Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, to the queen's most honorable council. Representing how in the time of the late Queen Mary, Sir Thomas Saunders knt., and William

W. M.
MOLYN
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

Saunders of Ewell, co. Surrey, seized and carried away from the petitioner's house at Blechingley in seventeen great waynes, certain armour, artillery, munitions and horse furniture, valued at 2000*l.*, belonging to the said petitioner and also eight great horses, his property, and how the said Sir Thomas Saunders and William Saunders, though they have been ordered to reinstate the petitioner in his said possessions, have redelivered to him only four loads of the said military munitions and only three of his said eight great horses and those in a wretched condition; and Praying that the petitioner may be either recompensed for his said loss in some manner ordered by the council, or may be allowed "to take this "ordinarie remedie by the comen lawes of this "realme against the sayd Sir Thomas and William." An endorsement certifies that, at the above-given date, the Privy Council resolved that Sir Thomas Cawarden might seek his remedy at common law. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 June 1559. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Mr. Beadon and Mr. Moore, justices of the peace, co. Surrey. Requiring the presence of George Lusscher, Richarde Covert, William Prestowe and others, at the court or at Nonsuche.

16 June, 1 Elizabeth. Letter addressed, under her Majesty's sign-manual and signet, to the sheriff of cos. Surrey and Sussex. Requesting him to make provision for justices of assize in the old manner, as from the number of matters calling for her attention at the beginning of her reign, her majesty has not yet had time to consider fully, and devise a remedy for the grievances of sheriffs, in being compelled to provide for the charges of justices of assize on their circuits. The letter opens with reference to a petition made in last Parliament, that sheriffs might be relieved of this burdensome obligation.

24 June, 1559. The Presynght of the late blacke-Fryars-next-Ludgate for Mydsomer A°. 1559. Rentts belonging to Sir Thomas Cawarden knyght for a Quarter endyd at Mydsomer the xxiii. daye of June A°. 1559. This rental shows that the quarter's receipts amounted to cxxli. xiii. viii. d.; and that the property consisted of ten tenements in Church lane next Carter Lane, six tenements in the "street next Ludgate," five tenements in the "stret next bryedwelles," twelve tenements in the "stret next the Wattorgate," and five tenements in the "street next Mr. Jernyngham," besides two "tenys-playes" and ten other tenements. No mention is made in the rental of the office for the Tents and Revels.

August, 1559. Poem of 56 verses, in eulogy of Sir Thomas Cawarden (who died in that month), by William Browne.

Day of St. Bartholomew the Apostle, 1559. The Will of Thomas Cawarden, knight, with probate of the same. Some of the special legacies are noteworthy. The testator leaves to "John Browne gentleman my seruante" and Alice now his wife the manor of Wyllie co. Surrey: and bequeaths "vnto suche gentilmenn of the same "countie of Surrey whose names appere in a dockett "herevnto annexed that is to saie to euerie of them fower "Alman Ryvettes, one corselett or brigandine or sherte "of maile furnished accordyng to the discretion of "my executours." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 October, 1559. Inventorye of the goodes and catalles whiche late weare of Sir Thomas Cawarden knight, deceased. Taken by Dame Elizabeth Cawarden, wydowe late wyf of the said Sir Thomas and by William Moore, esquire, executors of the will of the said Sir Thomas. Exhibited (6 July 1561) by William More, the surviving executor.

Michaelmas, 1 Elizabeth. The Roll of an account on six membranes of vellum, inscribed on the parchment cover,—“Offices of The Rents and Revels: The Duplicamente of Thacompte of William Moore Executour to “Sir Thomas Cawarden knight deceased, late Master of “the sayde Offices from the xvth day of June, Anno Phi “et Marie nuper Regis et Regine primo et secundo, vntill “the feaste of St. Michael tharchaungell, Anno Regni “Domine Elizabeth Regine primo.”—From the introductory heading on the first membrane of the account it appears that Sir Thomas Cawarden was first appointed in the 36th year of Henry the Eighth to be “Master of the “Offices of his Highnes Tentes, Pavillions, and Hales, and “of the Revelles, Maskes and Playes:” and that he had duly accounted for the expenditure of his said department up to 15 May, 1 & 2 Philip and Mary. The account contains charges for the rent of “the woorke and store “howses of the revelles and mansyon howses of the “officers” and also for the rent “of fyve greate romes “within the Blackfryers occupied for the storehowses of “the revelles.” This account (which should be published by one of our archæological societies) is signed and passed by—Winchester, Ri. Sackevyle and Walter Mildmay.

1559. Accompte of such charges as grewe at and aboute the funerall of Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight. Covering charges of lxxli. xix. iij. d. for “the blackes,” xvs. ixd. “for xxvii yarges blacke cotton sent from “Gylforde to hang about the corps and wagon, whan “the same was brought to Blechyngly from Horsley,” where Sir Thomas died, and xxxiii. xvs. iij. d. for provisions of drink and food for the funeral feast. The sum total of the account is cxxix. xis. ixd. ob. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

20 December, 2 Elizabeth. Indented deed whereby dame Elizabeth Cawarden, widow of the late Sir Thomas Cawarden, and Wyllyam More, esq., exors. of the said Sir Thomas, sold and conveyed the Blackfriars estate to John Byrche, gentleman, John Austen and Rycharde Chapman. Also, duplicates of the same document.

22 December, 2 Elizabeth. Indenture whereby John Birche, John Austen and Richard Chapman, bargain and convey to the dame Elizabeth Cawarden and William More, esquire, to have and hold to them for ever, the Blackfriars estate, formerly belonging to the late Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight.

1558, or 1559. Letter from Henri Weston to William More, esq., sheriff of co. Surrey. Asking Mr. More to support the writer at the imminent election of knights for the shire. Also, a similar letter, with the same object, from the same writer to Mr. Beadon.

1559–1560. Rough draft of the account of moneys disbursed by William More, esq., as executor of the late Sir Thomas Cawarden. Covering 22 foolscap pages.

11 February, 1560. Letter from Rychard Bydon, esq., to William Moore, esq. The first part of this long letter is written in behalf of the writer's son Parker who has incurred the displeasure of Mr. Moore who is his master. The second part of the letter sets forth the purport and particulars of the trust-deed by which the writer has made his lord viscount Mountague, Mr. John Skynner of Reigate, Mr. William Moore, and Mr. Harrye Hooke trustees of his manor-house and lands in Shakelford, &c. &c. for the uses stated in the epistle. Only the postscript of this letter is in Richard Bydon's own hand-writing.

20 February, 1560. Letters dispensatory from the archbishop of Canterbury to William Moore of Loseley, co. Surrey, esquire. Giving Mr. Moore and his wife Margaret licence to eat flesh on fish days.

28 February, 1560. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Magistrates of Surrey. Requiring them to enforce the queen's proclamation forbidding persons “to ryde with daygers and handgounes” on their journeys.

10 June, 1560. Thenventory of certeyne Stuff Remaynyng in the Black Fryers in London.

24 June, 1560. Acknowledgment of a debt by Margaret lady Howard, due from her to Mr. (afterwards Sir) William More.

16 July 1560. Letter from the earl of Southampton to William More, esq. Avowing that since the Privy Council have determined to place him at Loseley, the writer is well pleased to be put “with so honest a gentleman” as Mr. More, to whom the earl says graciously “I assure “you youre geste cometh with a very good will.” A document quoted in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the “earl of Southampton.’’ (Vide Archaeologia, vol. xix.)

8 August, 1560. Letter from Lords of the Council to William Moore, esq. Enjoining Mr. Moore, as executor of the late Lady Caurden, to refrain from troubling any further at the common law, Sir Thomas Saunders, knt., and William Saunders, esq., in respect to their action in ceizing, in the time and name of the late queen Mary, certain armour and munitions belonging to Sir Thomas Caurden, deceased. Also requiring Mr. Moore to appear at Windsor before the council respecting the same matter.

19 August, 1560. Letter from the earl of Pembroke to William More, esquire, of Loseley. Replying to Mr. More's expressions of reluctance to oblige the writer with water for his “howse at Baynard castelle” with a reference to his former services to the late Sir Thomas Cawarden who had promised at divers times to accommodate him (the earl) with water. “The trothe is, I “was the chefe means to helpe Mr. Cawarden to his “howse in the blacke fryers in King Edwards tyme, “who not only promysed me then, but also at divers “other tymes sythen before good record that I should “have whenever I would a quyll of his water.

19 September, 1560. Warrant of Lords of the Council to William More, esq., justice of the peace for co. Surrey;

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

to seize the persons of David Orch and other ringleaders of the divers sectaries who purpose to meet together, and have their conventicles at "Katern hills faire now" at hand."

20 September, 1560. Letter from J. Dymocke to Mr. More. Begging that Mr. More will let a house in the Blackfriars to the "embassador of Sweaden," who is described as a "good gentleman," and as being ready to pay a yearly rent of fifty pounds for the house.

30 September, 1560, and 25 June, 1562. Copies of letters from Sir William More to the earl of Pembroke, respecting the earl's desire for water at Baynards castle from the Blackfriars conduit.

11 December, 1560. Letter from Edmund Saunder to Thomas Browne and William Moore, esqs. Entreating Messrs. Browne and Moore to pardon the bearer of the letter for his "devysed lye." Dated from Charlewood.

1560-1561. Account Book of moneys received from and spent on the Blackfriars estate.

3 April, 1561. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. More, "as my very frende and also one principall officer as vnder of the forest," to join with the writer's servant Bydon and Edward Tyler, to view the state of Windsor forest, and the number of the deer there, in the writer's keeping.

18 May, 1561. The Inventorie of the gooddes, cattelles, plate, juelles and redy money of the Ladye Elizabeth Cawarden, widow, deceased. Exhibited by her executor Master William Moore. The sum of the appraisement being clxxxiii. vis. iiid.

27 May, 1561. Letter from Lords of the Council to William More, esq. For an inquiry into the complaint of Robert Chete of Godalming, co. Surrey, clothier, respecting the vexatious and grievous action of Richard Bydon, esq., and his son Gregory Parker. Imperfect.

28 May, 1561. The Deposicions of Thomas Chaundeler of Womersse, clothier, and Roberto Sterte of Dunfold, clarke, made vnto me, William More, esquire, y^e 28 May 1561, tochyng theyre knowledge of certain sectaries and of thayer doctrines, proctices, and Divylsh Deuyces.

31 July, 1561. Letter from Lawrence Assheburnham to Mr. Wylam More. In compliance with the Privy Council's letter and inquiries for the better instruction of the vice-admiral in Sussex. "Withyne my surquyt ther is nether havyn nor cryke thatt hath any vessell that shalbe nedefull to be surtyfyd but thatt thaye are alle withyne the lybertye of the porttys wyche you haue nothyng to do withe, butt the lorde wardyne only, butt ther is some maryners thatt dwellewithowt the lybertties wyche wylle send you thayre namys." Dated from Gestlyng.

2 September, 1561. Letter from William More, esquire, to Lord Cobham. Concerning the water-conduit on the Blackfriars estate, and the earl of Pembroke's request for water-service from it.

12 September, 1561. Letter from Lords of the Council to the sheriff and magistrates of the county of Surrey. Respecting measures "as well for the moderation of excessive wages as for the putting in execution of certain speciall statutes sent in a sommery" to the said magistrates.

8 October, 1561. The Accompte of William Moore, esquire, executor of the testament and last will of Dame Elizabeth Cawarden, widow, deceased. The account opens with a charge of iiiixli. vs. vid. "for blacke" clothe for mourners withe the charges of the buriall "and intermente of the bodie of the saide Dame Elizabeth Cawarden, and for the charges of the burialle dinner."

8 October, 1561. The Accompte of William Moore, esquier, executor-survivor, of the testament and last will of Sir Thomas Cawarden, knight, deceased, from 19 December 1559, on which day the said accountant took upon him the execution of the said testament, to 8 October 1561.

17 January, 4 Elizabeth. Charter of exemplification at the request of William More, esquire, of a certain writ of diem clausit extremum directed to the escheator of Surrey on the death of John Jenyns, knight, and of the return made by the jury, on the inquisition had in accordance with the said writ before William Sakeville, esquire, escheator of the said county, at Sowthewarke on 7 Nov., 37 Hen. VIII., to the effect that the said John Jenyns held no lands in chief on the day of his death, but that he was seized of and in the manor of Brayvisse with its appurtenances in the said county, and two hundred acres of arable land, and sixty acres of meadow, and a hundred acres of pasture, and ten acres of wood, and forty solidates of rent with appurtenances in the parish of St. Nicholas of Guldeforde, and in Ertington and Shalforde, co. Surrey, pertaining to the said manor; and also was seized of and in the manor of Polsted, co. Surrey, with lands, &c. in Worplesdon, co. Surrey.

5 February, 1562. The petition, under their seals and signatures, of nine inhabitants of Kingston-vpon-Thamys, co. Surrey, to the Rt. Worshipful Mr. Charles Howard and Mr. William More, esqs. Setting forth the effect of certain iron-mills in raising the prices of tallwood, billets, and charcoal; and praying that the present Parliament may be moved to enact that the "seid mylles may be putt doune and no more to be occupied, to thentent that woodes may be maynteynde" and "encrease herafter to the greate comforte and re-lyvvyng of the inhabitants of the seid shire of Surrey." The preamble of the petition says, "Wheare as the tymes passid as within these foure or fyve yeares last passid yourseid suppliantes were wount customably to bye in the towne afforesaid of tallwood and billottes brought from Dorkyng and there aboute in the seid countie a lode of tallwood for iis. viiid. (p) or iiii. and likewise a lode of billottes at the vttermost and a lode of charecoles for xs. brought also from the seid placies to the seid towne of Kyngston. And now by occasion of the yron mylles, the which ar sett vpp among youre seid oratores in the said countie a lode of tallwoode and a lode of billottes be amountid and be worth iiii. and iiii. apiece, and a lode of charecoles worth xxs. and scantt to be gotten for that money for that the seid milles consumeth so moch wood and coles, so that if spedie remedie be nott hadd nowe at this tyme youre seid suppliantes shall haue nether wood nor coles."

9 February, 1562. Letter from John Agmondesham to William More, esq. at the Blackfryers in London. About a "great talke tochyng the Iron Mille" which the writer has recently had with Mr. William Saundres and Mr. Ardeley and other "good fellowes;" and about the bill which it is proposed to introduce into the "parliament-howse" on the subject of iron-mills.

2 March, 1562. Letter from John Bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching certain timber felled by lord Mountague's servants in one of the bishop's woods, called the Waterscombe.

19 March, 1562. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Asking Mr. More for a certificate respecting the cost of certain repairs in Guldeforde Parke, which the writer and his lordship of Sussex are commissioned to execute. The writer adds, "I have long desyred youre boke of youre neyghbors opinions, for to present to my lord busschopp, who moste desireth the same."

5 April, 1562. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Accompanying other letters from the earl of Sussex and Robert Dudley, together with a keeper's confession, and other documents needful for the full information of his lordship of Sussex.

6 April, 1562. Letter from Wyllyam More, esq., to Anthony viscount Mountague. Explaining that Anthony Stoughton of Stoke has (in accordance with his promise to his lordship) appeared before the writer, but could not offer sureties for "his good behavior to the game of the forest," as neither his eldest brother nor any other of his friends would be surety for him. The offender, it is represented, is profoundly sorry for his misconduct, submits himself altogether to lord Mountague, and will do whatever is required of him, to the utmost of his power.

10 April, 1562. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Directing that Anthony Stoughton be dealt with rigorously, and that George Stoughton be also apprehended. "My lord of Sussex," says the writer, "maketh this matter lighter than his honor were to doo. My lord Robert very earnest herin."

13 April, 1562. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Speaking indignantly of some affront put upon him by the marquis of Winchester, the writer threatens to complain to her majesty, throw up his office and commission, and charge his enemies before all the council. The writer continues, in reference to a defiant letter which he has sent the marquis, "I praye yow hertelye good Mr. Moore tell my l. W^{ch}. I forgate to wryte that I write to yow that no man of any degre in Surrey or iiii. shyres next itt wold have so used me butt that currisse rase which from the father to ali the sonnes have one after an other so sowght to contemne and deface me."

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
LYNEUX,
Esq.

13 April, 1562. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Touching the impudent carriage of one Hennege, who is charged with some offence, the nature of which does not appear; and ordering Stoughton to be "bounden or committed."

2 May, 4 Elizabeth. Certificate of Wylliam More, esquire, to Thomas erle of Sussex, vycount Fytzwaters, lord Egremont and Sir Burnelle, knyghte of the garter and justice in overe of alle the quenes maiesties, forestes, &c. this side the Trent; in respect to the dilapidated condition of the parke pale and rayles of Wookinge parke co. Surrey. With an estimate for their repair.

12 May, 1562. Letter from Richarde Pexsall to William More, esq. Setting forth the outrageous misbehaviour of one Bedon and his son Fynes Bedon towards the writer and his tenants.

7 June, 1562. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Touching the case of Mr. Hennege to whom, now that he is bearing himself more reasonably and modestly, the writer would extend all possible favour, though he cannot discharge him without Lord Robert's consent. "I trust within very few dayes " clerly to discharge him, for I have sentt to my l. " Robert therin without whome yow knowe I could nott " doo itt, as my lord, I thanke him, without me dothe " nott any thinge. . . . I trust in good (att the " least I wishe hertely) that this smalle troble, whiche " beinge butt by lawe inforced wolde have ben moche " more bitter, shalbe to Mr. Hennege profitable sondry " wayes, and hurtfull no wayes."

28 June, 1562. Letter from Rychard Bydon, esq., to William More, esq. Expressing regret that the writer cannot be at Dorkinge, on the morrow, as he is bound in honour to keep an appointment with Edward Sawyer, for the completion of a purchase of land in Shackleford.

1 October, 1562. The Will (proved 25 April, 1563) of John Hull of Hameldon, co. Surrey, gentleman. Some of the bequests are interesting. "I giue," says the testator, "to my eldest sonne my donne amblinge mare, " my best salt parcell-gilte with a couer, by best " standinge cuppe parcell-gilte with a cover, a dozen " sylver spones, a siluer goblett, and my gold ringe " with my armes."

7 October, 4 Elizabeth. The return of an inquisition taken at Lethered, 14 Sept. last past, by the oathe of sworn men (named in the return) before Nicholas Leyghe and William More, esquires, "by virtue of the quenes " maiestes comysion vnder her great seale vnto" lord Howard of Effyngham, her graces lord chamberlain, and John lord Lumbley, &c., &c. "touchyng apparelle " of mens wyffes." The return is that though they have made diligent search the inquisitors "can fynde no " defalt . . . and that no man's wyff within the " lymytes of theyre charge hathe weare syns the xv. " day of August last any gown of sylke or french " whode or bonnet of velvet with any abylyment with " the lynyng or other parte of hyr gowne other then " in the cufes or purfiles of suche gowne, or hathe " worne any velvet, or edge of golde perilles or stone or " eny cheyne of golde about theyr neckes or in theyr " partlettes or in eny other apparrell of theyr bodyes, " or hathe worne eny velvet in hyr kyrtelles or eny " petycote of sylke, but suche whose husbandes may " disperd one hundred markes by the yere and hathe " an able geldyng mete for a lyght horseman with " sufficiente harness and wepon for the same."

4 November, 1562. Letter from John Moryses to Mr. More, Justice of the Peace in co. Surrey. Touching the frauds and impostures of John Vawhon, who has obtained large sums of money from divers parishes of the said county for his alleged service in providing soldiers with corslets and pykes, though he has never furnished a soldier with anything or had authority to do so; and who has moreover taken money from soldiers, to the amount of 2*li.* and 3*li.* each on an undertaking to exempt them from service and provide substitutes in their places, though he had no authority to do so. The writer marvels at the knave's success.

8 November, 1562. Letter from Sir Walter Mildmaye to William More, esquire. Touching a debt claimed by the letter's bearer from the late Sir Thomas Cawarden's estate.

8 November, 1562. Letter (dated at Hampton Court, and signed R. Dudley) to Mr. Moore, executour to Lady Carden. Asking for a field-bed and furniture promised by the late lady Carden to "Chapman's wyf."

4 Elizabeth. Rentall of the landes and hereditamentes of John Hall of Hambledon, gentleman, made at Michaelmas, 4 Elizabeth.

19 November, 1562. Letter from the earl of Arundel to William More, esq. Begging Mr. More to send the writer a certain letter in which one Morryce, "having " charge of certeine Surrey men at Newhaven," has set forth "the falte and misdemenor of one John Vaughan, " of whose evil vsage of the said contrye" the earl has "already hearde greate complainte."

20 November, 1562. Letter from Thomas Stoughton to William More, esq. About Vaughan's frauds, and the earl of Arundel's request (penned at Mr. Copeley's suggestion) to see Moryce's letter respecting the said impostures.

25 November, 1562. Letter from Thomas Coppley of Rochester House, St. Mary Onereys to William More, esq. Touching the frauds of Vaughan, as set forth in the letter of John Morryce, himself guilty of irregularities in respect to moneys entrusted to him: and expostulating at great length with Mr. More on his refusal to show Morryce's letters about Vaughan's flagrant frauds and rogues to the writer's "especiall " good lord the lord steward."

— 1562. List of New Year's Presents from the tenants on the Loseley estate.—Also, a large number of similar lists for other years; most of them being without dates.

8 January, 1563. Letter from lord Assheburneham to Mr. William More. About a commission, respecting which further inquiries will be made.

1 February, 1563. Letter from the earl of Arundell to the magistrates of Surrey. Touching payments said to be due in the said shire to diverse persons for things taken by the queen's purveyors for the royal house-hold.

26 February, 1563. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir Henry Weston, knt., and others, magistrates, Touching a commission of goal-delivery and "the " arraignment of the three persons who lately comyttyd " the robbery and murder vpon the man of Walton- " vppon-Themys." Dated at Wyndesore.

13 March, 1563. Letter from John Caryll to William More, esq. Touching a cause to be tried at the Surrey assizes.

10 May, 1563. Letter from Edward lord Clynton to William More, esq., vice-admiral of co. Sussex. For an immediate return of the ships, within the said vice-admiral's circuit, fit for her majesty's service on the seas, and of the gentlemen and other persons most fit to take charge of the same.

29 June, 1563. Letter from Rychard Bydon to Wylliam More, esq. In which confession is made that the writer has irregularly and unlawfully issued licences to buy corn to several corn-brogers, inserting without authority into these spurious licences the names of divers magistrates, viz. Mr. More, and Mr. Agmondesham. The licenses so forged and issued have been recalled from the brogers at Farnham, Onershe, and Warplesdon: but the writer fears he may suffer heavily for his misconduct, unless Mr. More protect him from exposure.

12 September, 1563. Petition of inhabitants of Guildeford to the Mayor of the same town, that in consideration of the prevailing pestilence an order be issued to restrain people from having recourse to the hill of St. Catherine for the annual fair.

24 September, 1563. Copy of the agreement (printed in Ridpath's "Border History") between Lord Skrope, warden and keeper of the West Marches of England for anenst Skotlande, Sir John Forster, knt., warden of the Middle Marches of Englande for anenst Skotlande, Sir Thomas Gargrave knight, vice-president of the quenes council in the North Parts, and John Rockbe D.C.L. privy councillor and commissioner of the queen of England on the one part, with Sir John Maxwell, knt., warden of the West Marches of Scotland, and Sir John Bellindir, knt., and justice clarke, of the realm, of Scotland, commissioners, &c. of Marye quene of Scotland, on the other part;—for the government of the border.

6 November, 1563. Note from Sir William Cecyll, knt., to William More, esq. Accompanying her majesty's letters "for the staye of the next fayre at Guildeforde."

29 November, 1563. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to William Moore, esq. Directing search to be made for vagabonds and other loiterers about the verge of her majesty's house, and the suburbs of London, who have occasioned recent disorders. Given at Windsor. Also a note, written by William Moore, esq., to Sir Harry Weston on the subject of the letter.

15 December, 1563. Letter from Lords of the Council to Mr. More, vice-admiral of co. Sussex. For a return of all complaints made to the said vice-admiral since 1 July last by subjects of the king of Spain respecting injuries done them by any of her majesty's subjects, whilst passing along the coasts of England.

W. M.
MOLYNBUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX.
Esq.

1563. Three letters addressed to William More, esq., respecting candidatures for the election of knights of the shire for co. Surrey. Imperfect.

25 January, 1564. Deposition of Wylliam More, esq., in a matter touching Sir Henry Weston's discharge of the duties of a Justice of the Peace.

22 March, 1564 or 1574. Letter from Rycharde Wendesley to William More, esq. Written at the order of the archbishop of Canterbury, and praying Mr. Moore to use his influence with Mr. Lyfeld so that his Grace may present for this one turn to the vacant parsonage of Lytham by Letherede, co. Surrey, of which living Mr. Lyfeld is patron by right of his wife. Mr. Moore is thus entreated to influence Mr. Lyfeld because the primate "is not so great acquaintance with the gentleman nor his bedfellowe, to make his owne letter his solicitor."

28 March, 1564. Letter from Lawrence Assheburnham to Mr. Wylliam More. Touching a ship lately wrecked against the land of Mr. Car, who has protested to the Lord Admiral that his farmers and tenants should be not further troubled respecting the same.

24 June, 1564. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Asking for information respecting a man charged with sheep-stealing at Guildford, who "is the vnfortunatest man livinge or the worst." With respect to matters touching himself more closely, the writer says, "Hering daylye worsse and worsse reporttes off the matters I last talked with yow off, whiche must be as well dishonor to me as dyscreditt and shame to the parties, I am determyned (God wil-linge) to rydd my self eyther of the occasions, or the parties, and then leave everye man att lardge to ansuere to his owne damages."

20 July, 1564. Letter from Edmund bishop of London to William More, esq. About Symon Pembroke "whose practises seem to tend to conjuration by casting of figures, telling of thinges lost hidde or stolen and such lyke."

4 August, 1564. Letter from Anthony, viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Setting forth the extravagant misdemeanors which determined the writer to discharge from his service a gentleman named George Elyotte, one of Mr. Moore's kinsmen, and the son of a lady whose good opinion his lordship values. The long statement is made so that the gentle serving man's kindred may not imagine him to have been used harshly by his late master. From Coudrey.

15 August, 1564. Letter from Lawrence Assheburnham to Mr. Wylliam More. Promising that the writer will do his best to ascertain "what ynglysche pressyners of these partys or takyne into France" may be within the writer's circuit.

— August, 1564. Letter from Wylliam More, esq., vice-admiral of co. Sussex, to Mr. Lawrence Ashburnham, esquier, near Hastynge. Requesting immediate answers to divers questions contained in an enclosed letter from Lords of the Council, a copy of which is enclosed.

8 October, 1564. Letter from the marquis of Winchester to William More, esq. Begging Mr. More to come to the writer immediately in London.

17 December, 1564. Letter from lord Clynton to William More, esq. About a ship, laden with sugar and other stuff taken "out of a Portingale," and now resting in Chichester Haven.

6 Elizabeth. Bill of the disbursement and charges of Hughe Braderton, "keaper of the quenes maiesties garden at Hampton Court," in respect of the said garden, for an entire year.

1564. Rate made for the releefe of the poore of the parish of Cherteseye, co. Surrey.

9 January, 1565. Letter from William Saunder to William More, esq. Giving intelligence respecting several matters of business, and referring to the great dearth of corn through the county of Surrey. Dated from London.

16 January, 1565. Letter from Rychard Bydon to William Moore, esq. Answering with flat counter-assertions several charges preferred against the writer to Mr. More. The writer never owed Carpenter's wife so much as a single groat; he never knew a man named Mahanke, who was executed for felony; he never meddled or dealt, to her majesty's hurt, in the forfeited goods of one Hamande, executed for felony; as for the matter of the Marches land, he had answer which he would at any time gladly make to his lord and master.

5 February, 7 Elizabeth. Lease for life, at an annual rent of iiii l., granted by William More of Loseley, esquire, to Henry Knoles, esquire, of a certain tenement in the precinct of the Blackfriars, called Lygons Lodgings and long since in the occupation of Roger Lygon esquire.

16 April, 1565. Letter from Thomas Parvis to Mr. William Moore, knight of the shire, at his manor of Loseleye. About the unfinished school at Guildford, which the writer desires to see completed. "I marvell and am verie sorie that there come no moe good scholars thence to Oxford. If there be no school-master, there be manie well learned in latten, greke and hebrue, with whome wolde to God I might travell for Guilforde. But were the schole once finisshed with honest stypende and reasonable condicions appointed for master and vssher, yone sholde haue shortlye, I warrant yowe, suche sueters, as for all learninge never came there yeat." From Christ's Church, Oxforde.

26 July, 1565. Latin memorandum of the news, of the aforesaid date from Brussels, that at the sixth assault the Turkish fleet had taken the castle of St. Elm of Malta, and slaughtered all the christians of the said fort; when surprising the Turks, whilst they were still intent on despoiling the place, Don Gazia de Toletto with a part of his fleet recovered the castle, routed the Turkish fleet, and achieved a complete victory both by land and sea for his catholic majesty;—the king of Tripoli being slain by a bomb, and the commanders of the army and fleet of the Turks being also killed.

29 July, 1565. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Touching certain disorders in Windsor Forest, and also certain strange demands for a restitution of the same forest by the crown; and giving particulars of the capture and recapture of St. Elmo. "Of the Turkishe news I dowte nott butt yow have herd diversely. I have sentt from tyme to tyme the true newes in pryntt, which I dowte nott butt yow have herde, and seene, and in thatt the fyve cruell assautes sustained by the Christians, and att the fythen the of the losse of the pece of St. Elmoo, if God had nott givin the victorye to the comfort of his, and the contrary to his enemies. The particulartyes wherof beinge in pryntt and longe sythen passed, I will nott repete. Sithense itt is constantly broughtt from Naples and Mesena that the Turkes with all theyre gentillmen and left-capitayms assaulted itt the sixth tyme, and so violently that with great slaughter they toke itt. In the verey instantt the king of Spayne his armye landid and without intermission of tymes assaulted itt agayne and recovered itt, nott leaving a Turk within itt alive." From Bruges.

5 August, 1565. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Mr. Moore. Requesting that enquiry may be made respecting the conduct of one Shorter, whom the "wycount Montague" has appointed his deputy-keeper of her majesty's game in the chace and out-borders of the forest, of which the said viscount has charge: the said Shorter appearing to be a despoiler and destroyer rather than a preserver of the said game.

22 August, 1565. Letter from Sir William Cecyll, kn't, to William Moore, esq. Directing Mr. Moore to warn his neighbour Mr. Henadge, a tardy collector of the subsidy co. Surrey, that he "will take some harme" unless he makes ready payment of the moneys due from him in respect of his charge.

4 September, 1565. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for a private service, and stating the conditions under which the writer can return to England for a brief visit. From Bruges.

15 September, 1565. Letter from Mrs. Ursula Worsley to her "father" and friend Mr. Milles. Making stipulations for the writer's domestic entertainment, now that she has become a widow. Dated from Appledrambe. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Michaelmas, 7 Eliz. Receipt of William Fuller for iiii l. xviii s. iiii d. paid by William lord Cobham for nineteen years rent, at iiii l. iiii d. per ann., for a certain great hall, kitchen, two larders, gallery and garden in the Blackfriars.

23 October, 1565. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Mr. Moore.

5 November, 7 Elizabeth. Charter of licence of John Wyntershull, esquire, and Mary his wife, to alienate the manor of Cateshille with lands, rents, &c. in Cateshille, Goddalmynge, and Shalford.

19 November, 1565. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Announcing the confession of a person named Bounde who "hathe vnbounde his buggett and confessed as well the hawke of the last yere and these of this yere. all whiche Richarde

W. M.
MOLYNEUX.
Esq.

W. M.
LYNEUX,
Esq.

"Palmer had. And Poke that honest man this yere
"clim the nest, Palmer standinge bye."

26 November, 1565. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. On private and insignificant matters. From Gilforde Manor.

27 November, 1565. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Announcing how on his examination Poke "denyed all stoutely till I "brought him face to face with Bownde. Butt now
"the gentilman bathe confessed all before me and
"Mr. Agmondesham."

24 December, 1565. Patent, under the seal of the bishop of Winchester and the seal of the dean and chapter of Winchester, of a grant by Robert the said bishop to William More, esquire, and George More, his son and heir, for life, in survivorship, of the office of constable of the castle of Farneham, co. Surrey, and of the office of chief keeper and surveyor of the chases and parks of Farneham aforesaid.

1566. List of New Year's gifts made by the tenants on the Loseley estate and others to Sir William More, on the opening of the year 1565. Similar lists of customary presents for the years 1569, 1570, 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, 1575, 1576, 1577, 1578, 1586, and 1589.

5 March, 1566. Letter from Anthonie Garnett to William Moore, esq. A plumber having discovered sundry decayed places in the timber work of certain parts of lord Mountague's house at Cowdrey, and there being no skillful carpenter at hand to say what should be done for the repair of the same places, the writer begs Mr. Moore to "permytt Byrle his lordship's man to come to Coudrey upon Sunday next, there to veu the faltes and to informe what shall be done to redress the same."

11 March, 8. Elizabeth. Curious indenture made between William Moore, esquire, and Thomas Cordrey of West Horley co. Surrey, cook, of the one part, and Ryce Apdavia of the other part, Whereby Ryce Apdavia (who is said to have wandered masterless and for want of friends to have travelled disorderly, and so to have been "taken up" by the said William More, esq.) binds himself to serve for eight years the said William More, esquire, and Thomas Cordrey as an apprentice of the art of cookery. The said Thomas undertakes to teach "the saide Rye Apdavia alle his said scyence, "mysterye or occupacioun of a ccke and in all poyntes "thervnto belonging so far as the capacitee of the "saide Ryce shalbe able to accept and take yt within "such tyme of the said terme." By this arrangement the magistrate obtained for his kitchen for eight years the service of a Welshe cook who as his apprentice could be submitted to a more cogent and effective discipline than a free servant.

25 March, 8 Elizabeth. Receipt signed by Anthony viscount Mountague for 100*l.*, paid to him by Sir John Whyt, knight, alderman of London.

6 April 1566. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Messrs. More, Lyfield and Agmondesham and all the others of her majesty's commissioners co., Sarrey, "vpon the water of Weye." Asking "reasonable and "yndifferent favoure" for one of the writer's servants in respect to his controversy with his neighbours touching "a certen locke which he hath erected "betwene Woodham Lande and Brooke Lande vpon "the water of Weye to the intent that he may the "better with his barge convey and cary woode and "tymber from hys wharf ther to the cetie of London," and also touching the "towynge and shovinge vp of his "said barge with mennis strengthe, vnto his said "wharf." From Canterbury.

21 April, 1566. Letter from John Bowyer to the Right Worshipful —. Recommending that Richard Ingeham, high constable of the hundred of Brixton, co. Surrey, be discharged of his said office, as he entered the said place on the understanding that after two or three years' service he should be relieved of it, by the election of another person. It appears that it had been heretofore the custom to compel high constables of the said hundred to retain office for life, a custom so odious as to cause some person to "avoyde the country."

20 May, 8 Elizabeth. Inventory of the goods in the house of the late Richard Worsley, esquire, at the time of his death: "made to be exhibited in the prerogative "court of the arches, with the prices of them conteyned "in the said inventorye."

22 June, 1566. Letter from Madalen lady Mountague to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. Moore to "take "knowledge of Snythe of Godalminge for the enrolment "of an indenture for my lorde in the Chauncerie, accord- "inge to the authoryte graunted to you by a wryt of "Dedimus potestatem," which I send you berewith."

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

23 June, 1566. Letter from Roger Byngborne, one of the viscount Mountague's servants, to William Moore, esq. Touching certain business which Mr. Moore has, at lady Mountague's instance, undertaken to execute for lord Mountague, who, having ended his business with the ambassadors has departed "to the Spawe, wher he myndeth "to tary xxviii. dayes so as he thinkethe yt will be bar- "thilnew tyde before his retorne." The writer observes that the ambassadors separated "comyttinge the finale "resolucioun to the princes, who muste the one adverteise "the other of ther myndes (havinge reseruyd fortie dayes "after notyce geven, yf the sayde prynces ryte not, for the "merchauntes to departe." In conclusion he says "My "lordes of Leyceter and Sussex are made frendes, and "comme yesterday ryding throughe the cytte together "and so dynd at my lorde of Beddford's house."

2 October, 1566. Letter from the earl of Arundell to William Moore, esq. Thanking Mr. More for his zeal in hunting out certain offenders.

7 October, 1566. Letter from Robert Worsley, at Guldeford, to Mr. Austen at the Blackfryers in London. Containing "a copie of the Goodman Martens bylle of "presentments against shoemakers, cordwainers and "tanners:" the burden of Mr. Martin's complaints against the dealers and workers in leather being that they avoid the statutes, regulating their trades, to the enhancement of prices and the production of inferior wares. Fifteen "backes" have not been sealed these last five years in Guldeford market. Every "dyckar of leather," that comes into Guldeford market, is promised before-hand to monopolists who resell it at scandalous profit, so that in a single year the price of a dyckar has risen from x*ls.* to iiii*l.* vis. viii*d.* Leather-dealers sell their commodity at home instead of in open market, before it has been examined and sealed. The village shoemakers have engrossed to themselves so many boys, that the shoemakers in the town no longer have apprentices and workers "to serve the prynce." Tanners "cut their "womes of their backes themselves at home at their owne "houses whereas they sholde bringe them to the markett "and serchers and sekers sholde cutt them as they se "good." Yet further. "Item, that shoemakers cory of "ther lether in the contrye and do make shoes not serched "and sell them at Churche Dores on the Sondayes and "carry them whome to ther houses and make them in "ther houses which I think alle the worlde doth knowe."

1566. Letter from Lords of the Council to certain magistrates, co. Surrey. Requiring the complete and thorough collection of tenths and fifteenths granted to her majesty.

22 October, 1566. Letter respecting the religious disturbances in Germany and Flanders. From Louvain.

1567. Letter from W. Howard to the Mayor of Guylford. Begging him to hire in or near Guildford a close of good meadow-ground, containing enough grass for ten or twelve geldings, for the writer's use during the queen's stay at Guildford, where she intends to arrive on the 18th inst. for a stay of some five days.

1567. Articles and conditions (on a large printed broadside) of the lottery opened at her majesty's order for "the reparation of the Hauens, and strength of the "Realme, and towards such further publike good "workes." Also, two smaller broadsides, exhibiting orders and proclamations touching the same lottery. Also, MS. note, in Mr. (afterward Sir) William More's handwriting, recording how the Lord Mayor, the aldermen, the companies, and the chief citizens of London adventured in the lottery. "In the sueralle "parishes and villages nye London," the writer continues, "and specyally in Mydlessex some of the paryshes "have adventured in companyes puttyng into the "lottery enery man accordyng to their abillitye, some "one lott, some half a lot, some i*is.* viii*d.*, some xii*d.* "some i*vd.* some iiii*d.*, and the same is put into the "lottery vnder one posye in the name of the hole "parishe." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

3 January, 1567. Letter from Robert Moys of Bergh, to Mr. Austen of Guldeford. Announcing the failure of the writer's endeavours to collect money in accordance with Mr. More's instructions.

6 January, 1567. Letter from William Garrard and Thomas Offley to William More, esq. Containing instructions for the furtherance of the new lottery, and accompanying "certayne numbers of the proclamation "lately set forth by her highnes for suche purpose and "benefit of thadventurers as in the same is at good "length conteyned."

11 February, 1567. Letter from the marquis of Winchester to William More, esq. Begging that the trial of a young man, accused of stealing forty shillings of his master's money, and bound to appear to answer the

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

charge, may be deterred without forfeiture of recognizances till next assizes, so that he may have time through his friends to get her majesty's pardon of an offence, of which he is unquestionably guilty.

14 February and 20 December, 1567. Letters from William Hammond of Guilford to William More, esq. Touching unsuccessful endeavours to collect money for adventure in the lottery.

14 March, 1567. Letter from G. Parvis to William More, esq. Asking for pecuniary help, and begging Mr. More to accept "a dayes carriage of" the writer's "team." Dated from Stoke.

6 May, 1567. Letter from Lord W. Howard to William Moore, John Agmondesham, and Edmond Shiefield, esqs. Begging them as arbitrators under a commission from the archbishop of Canterbury in a matter of dispute betwixt Thomas Purdam and one John Grove and Margery his wife, mother of the said Purdam, to show no especial favour to the said Thomas Purdam, (the writer's tenant and bearer of the present letter); the writer having reason to believe that the said bearer of this introductory note is a lewd liver who has grossly maltreated his wife by beating her and sending her to prison.

23 May, 1567. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Mr. More, one of the verderers of the forest of Windsor. Summoning Mr. More to a conference with the writer at the court.

4 June, 1567. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Touching a commission respecting the queen's Woods and Forests, and a complaint exhibited by sundry inhabitants of "the forest" against Milton, one of his lordship's keepers.

4 June, 1567. Commission from Lords of the Council to William More, Thomas Browne, and others, esquires, co. Surrey; to enquire into the truth of the information exhibited by one Richard Dunsse, of Godalming against John Tanner alias Bell, sub-baylif of Godalming, charged with subtle, crafty and vexatious dealings.

14 June, 1567. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. About some matter, which Mr. Baptist has made the occasion of a complaint to the Privy Council, and in respect to which the writer thinks it possible that his bailiff has behaved ill. From Coudrey.

2 July, 1567. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Mr. More. Mr. Tamworth being prevented by her majesty's affairs from attending at the Swainmote Court on Thursday next, the writer begs Mr. More to be there, to look after "the olde matter" and arrange a good order for the keeping of dogs.

18 July, 1567. Letter from Mr. John Worsley to William More, esq. Accompanying a sum of 100*l.* in payment of a bill which is to be returned. The writer speaks of his sister Walsingham as being near her confinement. Dated from the isle of Wight.

14 August, 1567. Letter from lord Lumley to Mr. Moore. Introducing the writer's servant, James Savaryer, to Mr. Moore's favourable regard; the said James having now become the tenant of one of Mr. Moore's houses in the Blackfriars.

30 August, 1567. Letter from Lords of the Council to William Moore, esq., of Loseley. Enjoining him to ascertain the truth of "the fraye that was betwene one Jenner and John Baptiste."

8 October, 1567. Letter from Lords of the Council to Dr. Lewes, Judge of the Admiralty. For the restraint of certain vessels from resorting to the enemies of the king of Spayne, whose ambassador has advertised the Council that divers ships and being armed and prepared in warlike sort in the Thames, and also at Shorham and Portesmouth.

10 October, 1567. Letter from Dr. Lewes, judge of the Admiralty, to William More, esq., vice-admiral of Sussex. Respecting the orders of the Privy Council as to certain ships now bound for the seas.

12 December, 1567. Letter from Henry Gorynge to William More and John Agmondesham, esqs., magistrates of co. Surrey. Touching the suspicious bringing of apparel to the wedding of Edward Cobby of Howghton. Dated from Burton.

10 January, 1568. Letter from lord Clynton to William More, esq., vice-admiral of co. Sussex. For a return of all ships, of the burden of xl. tons and upwards, with their owners' and masters' names, and also of all mariners fit for her majesty's service, in all the ports and havens in the said vice-admiral's district.

26 Feb. 1568. Letter from G. Parvis to William More, esq. For Mr. More's consolation under a recent trouble, the precise character of which does not appear.

1 March, 1568. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to William More, esq. For the suppression of rogues, vagabonds, and Egyptians, who are to be corrected sharply and restrained firmly in accordance with the laws of the realm.

19 March, 1568. Letter, (signed,—Thomas Coppley, John Skinner, senior, and J. Skynner, junior) to Thomas Browne, William Moore, John Stidolfe, and John Agmondesham, esqs. Concerning arrangements for executing in the county of Surrey the orders of the council for the suppression of rogues and vagabonds.

27 March, 1568. Letter from Alexander Nowell, dean of St. Paul's, to William More, esq. Recommending Henry Adams, clerk, as a fit candidate for the parsonage of Hambledon, in the gift of Mr. More.

14 April, 1568. Letter from William Garrard to William Moore, esq. About collections for the lottery.

2 May, 1568. Letter from Matthew archbishop of Canterbury to William More, John Agmondesham, and Emond Shiefield, esqs. Praying the said justice of the peace of co. Surrey, notwithstanding the failure of their previous efforts to the same end, to make another attempt to determine in a friendly manner the controversy, on some question of property, between their neighbours John Grove, and Thomas Purdam. Dated from Lamhithe.

26 May, 1568. Letter from Lords of the Council to William Moore, esq. Requiring him, with the aid of another justice of the peace or other gentleman, to visit the house of one Henry Owen, and search there for proofs "of this suspicious matter of multiplication" or of coynage or any other lyke unlawfull acte; and also to set at liberty the said Henry Owen's wife, if, as is alleged, he keep her there in restraint.

21 June, 1568. Letter from the earl of Leycester to Thomas Browne, William Moore and Thomas Lyfilde, esquires. Appointing them to take a view of Oking park, and to report thereon, for the information of the Lord Admiral to whom the charge of the said park has been committed.

4 July, 1568. Letter from John Johnson, surveyor for the Lottery, to William More, esq. Containing instructions for increasing the number and sum of the subscriptions to the Lottery. From Gildesford. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

22 July, 1568. Copy of circular letter from lords of the council to all justices of the peace, treasurers and collectors of the lottery, and to the sheriffs, mayors, constables, &c. &c. of cos. Kent, Sussex, Southampton, and the Isle of Wight. Requiring them to aid in every way John Johnson, gentleman, who has been appointed by her majesty to urge well affected people to renew their endeavours to procure an adequate subscription to the "very riche and generall lottery" which her highness has caused to be erected and set forth; and also to ascertain and remedy the causes of the past and present failure of the said endeavours, as it appears that "eyther" of the negligens of sondry officers or by some sinister "disswasions of some not well disposed persons, ther" doth want a great nombre of the said lottes not yet "present to perform the same, contrary to her highnes" expectation. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

17 August 1568. Letter from Mattheue archbishop of Canterbury to Mr. Moore and Mr. Agmondesham, esqs. Touching "a troublous bodye" who is raising some dispute about the extent of a piece of land. Dated from Lamhithe.

21 August, 1568. Letter from John Johnson, surveyor of the lottery, to William Moore, esq., treasurer of the same in co. Surrey. For more vigorous efforts to get subscriptions to her majesty's lottery. "Ther is neade" that some meanes be founde to ster them better bothe "in Mr. Moyes division and Mr. Ewelms also, For" (besides Kingston) all that countrey have not laied in "past lii lottes, and in Mr. Moyes partes moche lesse, "all the towne of Croydon hathe laied but iii lottes and "Reigate ii. Sewerly it is yll hiendred and some ther" must nedes be that be defrauders or elles that refewse "to matche with neighbours and to give good In- "sample."

8 September, 1568. Letter from John Johnson, surveyor of the R. M. Lottery, to William Moore, esq., treasurer of the same, co. Surrey. For obtaining new subscribers to the lottery. Mr. Moys being so sick that he cannot discharge the duties of his office of collector, it is recommended that Mr. Evelyn of Kingston be appointed in place of Mr. Moys to collect subscriptions for the lottery.

15 September, 1568. Letter from John Johnson, surveyor of the R. M. Lottery, to William Moore, esq.,

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
ESQ.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

treasurer of the same, co. Surrey. For getting fresh subscribers to the lottery.

15 September, 1568. Letter from Thomas Browne, esq., to William More, esq. Accompanying a copy of a letter from the Lord Treasurer directed to Mr. Skynner and the other Justices of the Peace for co. Surrey. "Also," the writer says, "I send youe out of Dorkinge vii lottes besides one whiche youe haue already. Wherefore nowe I trust youe will thinke wee deale lyberally." From Bechworth Castle.

9 October, 1568. Letter (signed, William Garrard, Thomas Offley and John Tamworth, her majesty's commissioners for the R. M. Lottery) addressed to William Moore, esq., treasurer for the same lottery in co. Surrey. Expressing in strong terms the writers' displeasure with the reluctance exhibited in the said shire to invest in her majesty's project, and peremptorily ordering Mr. Moore to make his "indelaide discharge of the trust comytted vnto" him, and forthwith to "delyver or cause to be delyvered at the Lotterie House in Cheape-side in London (out of hand) alle souche bookes, billes, wrytinges as" he has in his custody, that relate to his treasurership.

13 October, 1568. Copy, in Mr. William More's handwriting of a letter sent by him to Mr. Moyes and Mr. Evelyn, collectors for the R. M. Lottery. Announcing that the commissioners of the same lottery require the immediate delivery to them of all books, bills, and moneys he may hold in his hands, in respect to the same project.

25 October, 1568. Letter (holograph) from Lord Keeper Nicolas Bacon to William Moore, esq. Respecting the behaviour of "one David proctor of an hospitall in Endfield, whose protection should beare date the xxth of January last, and gyveth libertie to begge in Kent and Surrey."

15th November, 1568. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Clynton to Mistress More at Loseley. Announcing the design of one Porter to steal a girl (spelt 'gearle') now staying in Mrs. More's house. Also a holograph letter by lady Clynton about her "lytell meyd's" danger from Wylyam Porter.

28 November, 1568. Declaracioun of the Accompte of Richard Whitton, steward of the householde with the reverend father in God Robert busshop of Winchester. For one whole yere beginning the xxxth of November in the xth yere of the raigne of oure soueraigne ladie Quene Elizabeth, A^o 1567, and ended the xxviiith day of November following, A^o 1568, vt sequitur. From this interesting document it appears that "the cleer annual value of the whole bishoprick of Winton, as it arises com-munibus annis in all maner of reveneues, spirituall, temporall, &c., &c." was 2,380*l.* 2*s.* 4³/₄*d.*, and that the expenses of the bishop's household for an ordinary year amounted to 1,488*l.* 1*s.* 1¹/₂*d.* The entire sum for which the steward accounts is 1,521*l.* 0*s.* 2¹/₂*d.*

1568. Draft of a circular letter (signed by William More, esq., Treasurer, and John Johnson, Surveyor, of the R. M. Lottery) addressed to the High Constables of the several hundreds co. Surrey. For a new subscription in all the parishes of the same hundreds to the lottery, and more urgent endeavours to induce people of all degrees to adventure their money in the same lottery, it having come to the knowledge of the writers of the letter "that their is no soche number of loites brought vnto the Collectours out of every paryshe as was looked for, and as their wold have bene yf the principall men had done their indeouours aswell by theire owne insamples as by perswading their neighbours."

1568(?). Paper containing ten orders or articles of agreement headed, "Towching wandringe rooges masterles men and bastardes and settinge the poore to worke." 3rd article, "That everie Roge that shalbe found gyltie of adulterie shalbe punished as a felon, and that no mynister take vpon him to marrye any roge without the speciall allowance of the mariage first had vnder the handes of two of the next justices vpon payne of imprisonment by the space of one moneth for the first offence and for every other like offence two monethes." 4th article, "That no person or persons gyve lodginge in any his barne or other hows to any Tynker, mynstrell, proctor, or wandring roge, that shall have in his companye any woman, nor to any mor then one soche person at any tyme, vpon payne to forfeit for everie one so lodged tenne poundes, to the vse of the poor of the parishe, nor to give lodging to any other vnkowne begger vpon payne to forfeit twentye shillings to the same vse." No date.

1568(?) Paper of ten orders to High and Petty Constables for making discoveries of rogues and vagabonds, and bringing them to punishment. No date.

7 Jan., 11 Elizabeth. Copy of her majesty's proclamation of the terms and powers of her commission to the earl of Warricke and William Pelham, esq., master and lieutenant-master of the queen's ordnance, for the better supply of salt-petre for the same ordnance.

31 March, 1569. Letter from Lord W. Howard to William Moore, esq., justice of the peace for co. Surrey. Summoning Mr. Moore to the writer's chambers at the court on Tuesday morning next, there and then to receive instructions respecting a royal commission for the execution of matters within the said shire, to which commission Mr. Moore has been appointed, and also to meet his companions in the same commission.

2 April, 1569. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Clynton to Mr. Moore at Loseley. Introducing "thys gentle-man, Mr. Tyrrell and his wyf to yow for that they be bothe gretelie desirouse to see theyr dowghter who they haue not sene of longe tyme."

4 April, 1569. Letter from the earl of Arundell to William More, esq. Begging Mr. More to use his influence with the bishop of Winchester, for the furtherance of the writer's business in Hampshire, respecting which Thomas Stoughton will give full particulars.

12 April, 1569. Letter from J. Skynner, jun., to William More, esq. Begging that Mr. More with his co-referees (Messrs. Agmondesham, Copley and Stoughton) will put an end to the controversy between the writer and Mr. Harrys, or leave them at liberty to settle it by process of law.

24 April, 1569. Letter from the earl of Arundell to William More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for his zeal in the writer's interest, especially for his exercise of influence with his lordship of Wynchester.

1 May, 1569. Copy of letter from lords of the Council to the Commissioners for musters co. Surrey. Touching the forces of the county.

1 May, 1569. Letter from Lords of the Council to Lord William Hawarde, the lord chamberlain, and the other commissioners for taking musters in co. Surrey. Containing instructions with respect to the said musters. Imperfect.

7 June, 1569. Letter from lord Lumley to Mr. More. Touching the writer's "matter to be tryed against Foskewe," and his hope that Mr. More will cause his son and others of his "friends of the jury once agayne to take paynes to apeare" at the trial of the cause.

29 June, 1569. Letter from Edmund lord Chandos to William Moore, esq. In behalf of a poor man who has offended by "speaking of words."

24 July, 1569. Letter from Sir Thomas Copley to William More, esq. Touching a matter of dispute in respect to which Mr. More is arbitrating between Sir Thomas and his "adversary."

7 August, 1569. Letters from Richard Onslow to William More, esq. Arranging for the writer to meet Mr. More at Ripley. The writer's wife is going up to London shortly for her confinement.

11 August, 1569. Letters of lords of the Council to Richard Onslow, esq., her majesty's attorney in the court of Wards and Liveries, and William Moore, esq., who are thereby appointed to ascertain the facts of a dispute "between Anthony Breckn and John Carre" "straungers vnto whom it has pleased the Queenes Maiestie to graunte privilege to pratice the making of glasse for glazing by reason of which controversie certain disorders haue happened at their glass house in Sussex amongst the workmen and others in such a sort (as we are enformed) that if it be not forgone, her majesties intentions to haue the science of the making of that kynde of glas to remayn heer within her realme is like to be frustrated."

12 August, 1569. Letter from William Garrard, commissioner, to William More, esq., treasurer in co. Surrey, of the Quenes Majesties Lotterie. Announcing that the commissioners of the lottery are prepared to pay all moneys due to any adventurer in the same project.

18 August, 1569. Rough copy of an answer to lords of the Council by Messrs. Onslow and More, esqs., appointed by the said lords to ascertain the facts of a quarrel, attended with personal violence, between Anthony Breckn, John Carre, Peter Boughan, John Bougan, and others, glassmakers in the county of Sussex. Also portions of the evidence of witnesses to the altercation and affray.

20 October, 1569. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of co. Surrey. For

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

the apprehension and punishment of rogues and vagabonds.

5 November, 1569. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the justices of the peace co. Surrey. Giving instruction for bringing about religious uniformity and compliance with her majesty's laws and ordinance touching public worship: accompanied by a form of letter, touching such matters, to be subscribed by all the queen's lieges in the said county. Every knight refusing to subscribe is to be bound for his good behaviour, &c. in a sum of 200*l*., and every esquire, so refusing, is to be bound in like manner in the sum of two hundred marks.

17 November, 1569. Letter from Thomas Copley to Sir Henry Weston, sheriff of co. Surrey, and the Justices of the Peace of the said shire, assembled at Lethered. Begging for reasonable time in which the writer can consult his conscience and satisfy himself whether he can honestly subscribe in matters of religion.

23 November, 1569. Letter from Thomas Copley to Sir Henry Weston, knt., sheriff of co. Surrey, and the justices of peace of the said shire, assembled at Dorkinge. About the authority of the reformed church and the scruples which hinder the writer, a Catholic recusant, from conforming in matters of religion. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

23 November, 12 Elizabeth. Copy of the patent of the commission of the lieutenancy of co. Surrey and William, lord Howard of Effingham, her majesty's lord chamberlain. Also, copy of the same lieutenant's commission to William More and Thomas Browne, esqs., appointing them to be his deputy-lieutenants in the same shire.

24 November, 1569. Letter, under the sign-manual and signet of Queen Elizabeth, addressed to her Lieutenant of Surrey William lord Howard of Effingham. Ordering him to call out the whole force, horse and foot, of the said shire, and array it for service at an hour's notice, rebellion having broken out amongst some of her majesty's unnatural subjects in the Northern parts of her realm.

27 November, 12 Elizabeth. Warrant, under the seals of Thomas Browne and William More, esqs., deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey, to the bailiff and constables of Guldeford in the said county; to give the customary notices for a muster in Guildford of the soldiers, horse and foot, of the said town.

1 December, 1569. Letter from lord William Howard to Thomas Browne and William Moore, esqs. Announcing that William Poyntz of Reigate, gentleman, will not be appointed to be captain of a certain company of soldiers, now being raised in Surrey, as he has no estate in the county, and is the servant of Mr. Thomas Hennage, who would be sorry to lose his services.

3 December, 1569. Letter from lord William Howard to William Moore and Thomas Browne, esqs. Touching a question of liability to find horsemen for her majesty's service; and ordering that noblemen's servants, in consideration of their masters' convenience, should not be required to attend musters.

10 December, 1569. Letter from Edmund bishop of London to Mr. More and Mr. Browne, deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Begging that Harry Fynden, of Mortlake, co. Surrey, one of the writer's ordinary servants, may be excused from military service to the said county.

1569. Surrey:—The Booke of Encrease of Armour Within the countie aforesayd made in the eleventh yere of the Quenes Maiesties raigne that nowe is.

2 February, 1670. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Clynton to Mrs. Moore. Thanking Mrs. More for kindness shown to the writer's "younge mayde Mary Tyrrelle."

20 February, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. Moore to redress certain disorders that endanger the clerk of the writer's "Iron Work," who "hath bin disorderly" and dangerously abusyd in "the writer's" "servise by" "certeyne women sett a worke by ther husbandes," and "resist" him in the use of his "owne wodes;" and, if need be, to bind the husbands of the same riotous women to their good behaviour. From Southwerke.

30 May, 12 Eliz. Charter of exemplification of the writing dated 12 Nov. 30 Henry VIII., whereby John bishop of Rochester and prior of the house of friars preachers commonly called the Black Friars in London, and the convent thereof, granted freely and for ever to the aforementioned king and his heirs the said house or priory of the Black Friars, with its precinct, and all lands, &c. pertaining to the same.

14 June, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Touching Mr. Moore's examination of certain offenders, who are found to deserve no more favour than the writer has himself shown them. From Cowdrey.

16 June, 1570. Copy of the warrant of the Privy Council (signed, W. Haward, K. Knowlles, Will. Cecille), addressed to Mr. Becher sheriff of London. Requiring the said sheriff to receive into his house the earl of Southampton, (towards whom her majesty has on just cause conceived some displeasure), and these to hold him a prisoner during her majesty's pleasure. Also requiring the said sheriff to set at liberty one Cantrell, for some time his prisoner; taking bonds however for the said Cantrell's appearance on demand to answer all charges preferred against him. Dated from Hampton Court. Together with copy of the articles of instruction to Mr. Becher for his treatment of the earl, whilst in his house; which articles were added to the warrant by Mr. Reace, the queen's servant. This document is mentioned in Mr. Bray's 'Account' of the confinement of the Earl of Southampton in '1570,' communicated to the Society of Antiquaries, and published in the Archæologia, vol. xix.

17 June, 1570. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to enquire whether any injury has been done to one Johan Knight, widow, of Farnham.

25 June, 1570. Letter from William Cole of Corpus Christi Colledge in Oxon, to Mr. More at Loseley. Declaring the pleasure with which the writer has received Mr. More's son at Oxford. "He shal lye nere vnto me every night, and shal not be farre from me in the day time, being in one chamber with me. I have already made his studie somewhat more handsome, then it was. And within these two daies I think it wil be finished. I wil take vpon me to be his corrector alone, and you shal know, that I wil be no harde maister to him. And surely he being so gentle and diligent, as I dout not, but he wil be, I can not deale strictly with him, but I shal doe him wrong. If you wil haue him to doe anie thing on the virginalls, you must provide that he haue a payre sent him. We haue one that can teach him well. As for his singing and other exercises, thogh others shal sometimes haue to do with him in those things, yet I mind myself to prove him now and then as far as my skyl wil serve me. I have according to your letters received from you six poundes in olde angels, delivered to me for the necessarie vses of youre sonne. I wil se it bestowed vpon him. . . . I ryde abroade often times about the affaires of our colledge, els sholde he be my scholar, and no mansels. But thogh I have appointed him a teacher, yet doe I meane to be half a teacher to him myself." From Oxford.

26 June, 1570. Letter from H. Westfaling to William Moore, esq. at Loseley. Touching the arrival of Mr. Moore's son at Oxford, and arrangements for his comfort and welfare there. From Oxford.

30 June, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. About a case of deer-stealing, respecting which one Creswell is under orders to repair to Mr. More, "bothe as a justice and an officer of the forest."

2 July, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Ordering that certain venial offenders against the forest-laws may be dismissed with a warning, but that "Rumsey in the forest and Chertt in Gilford be duly punished," either by indictment at the next assizes or by being "sent to the cole-house." From Cowdrey.

5 July, 1570. Letter from Roger Goade to William Moore, esq. Acknowledging Mr. More's past services to the writer, who is now in a state of prosperity. Dated from Cambridge.

5 July, 1570. Letter from Lord W. Howard to Messrs. Browne and Moore, esqs., magistrates for co. Surrey. Begging them to liberate from his bond one Edward Adyson, one of the queen's watermen, and under the writer's rule, who is bound with sureties to keep the queen's peace, and to appear each session at the Guildford quarter sessions.

12 July, 1570. Warrant from Lords of the Council to William Moore, esq., vice-admiral of Sussex. To arrest, for the queen's service, all ships of 30 tons' burthen or upwards being at present, or arriving hereafter in the ports within the said vice-admiral's jurisdiction.

14 July, 1570. Letter from Robert, bishop of Winchester to Mr. Moore, esq. at Loseley. Announcing that certain letters have been sent to Hampton.

15 July, 1570. Warrant of Lords of the Council, addressed to William Moore, esq., of Loseley. Requiring him to repair to the house of alderman Becher in London,

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

and having there taken the earl of Southampton into his custody, to convey the said earl to Loseley House, and there during her majesty's pleasure to detain him a prisoner, having "one or two servauntes to attend vpon him in his chambre." A document noticed in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix.)

16 July, 1570. Copy of the warrant of Lords of the Council, addressed to Mr. Becher, Alderman and sheriff of London, for the removal of the earl of Southampton from the alderman's house to the charge of Mr. More near Guldforde, to whom the said alderman is ordered to deliver the said earl. A document referred to in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix.)

15 July, 1570. Letter from Harry Becher, alderman and sheriff of London, to William More, esq., near Gylford. Expressing the writer's readiness to comply with the order of the Privy Council, and to transfer the earl of Southampton to the care of Mr. More, who on coming to town will probably wish to set his horses at Lambeth, "where my lord of South-hamtons horss are redy." A document described in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix.)

21 July, 1570. Letter from Robert, bishop of Winchester, to Mr. Moore, esq., at Loseley. Assuring Mr. Moore that the recent denial of his "fee-buck" is consequent on no order from the writer or lord Leycester.

24 July, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Expressing the writer's concern for the health, and his desire to comply with the wishes of Mr. More's prisoner, the earl of Southampton, who is the writer's son-in-law. A document used in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix., and Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 August, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Beginning "Sir, I received a letter by youre sufferance from my lord of Southampton, so send I one other to his lordship open and by yow to be eyther delyvered or stayed." Dated from Cowdrey.

9 August, 1570. Letter from Lord W. Howard, her majesty's Lord Chamberlain, to William Moore, esq. Avowing that the writer supported (though in vain), Mr. Moore's prayer to be relieved of the irksome duty of guarding the earl of Southampton; a duty which confines Mr. Moore to his house, and prevents him for executing her majesty's business. A document mentioned in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix.)

14 August, 1570. Letter from Harry Becher, alderman and sheriff of London, to William More, esq. Maintaining the substantial truth and honesty of the writer's statements to the Privy Council and Mr. More, respecting the health of London, at the time of Lord Southampton's removal from London to Loseley. The writer encloses a letter of civility to Mr. More's prisoner the earl of Southampton. A document used in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix.)

5 September 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for his endeavours to bring about the enlargement of the writer's son-in-law, the earl of Southampton. A document mentioned in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix.)

18 September, 1570. Letter from lord Clynton to Mr. Moore at Loseley. Begging that the young maid Mary Tyrrell, who has been for some time at Loseley House, may be returned to Horseley, as her father and mother wish to see her.

22 September, 1570. Letter from William Pelham to William More, esq. Praying for restoration to an honest man, named Robert Browne, of the horse, saddle, bridle, boots and spurs, which the said Browne "let owte to hyer" to a knave who has been arrested at Godalming and sent for trial.

28 September, 1570. Letter from Elyzabeth, Lady Clynton to Mr. More, at Loseley. About the sickness of a female servant.

7 October, 1570. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to William More, esq. at Loseley. "Grace and Peace. Where John Slifelde of Bifflete haue heretofore binn admitted to kepe an Ale Howse, and for the well vsing therof, as I thinke, is bounde be recognisance to our soueraigne Lady the Quene's majestie, so it is that he hath in this my last visitacion binn orderly detected to have mayntained dauncyng at his howse the Saboth day, and that in tyme of divine service. Richard Snosemer was the minstrell; and divers other persons were there present. Wherefore you shall do well for example sake, to take some streight order with him in this behalf. Farther I pray you at your convenient leisure, to call before you, in my name, William Elles, Robert Jower, the wiif of one Mellish, and also Tristrame Griffith, inhabitants of Witley, and vpon their seuerall others to examine them seuerally, whether that they harde Nicholas Woodies of Witley say and affirme, That women had no Sowles, or the like wordes, contrarie to the creation of man. I pray you betwixt this and Friday come sevenight certifie me what you finde in this matter. Let the vicar of Witly be present, the better to put the witness in mind of the wordes." Dated from Winchester.

14 October 1570. Letter from Lord Cobham to Mr. Wylliam Moore at the Blackfriars. Asking whether the writer may be farmer of a tenement, lately in the tenure of his cousin Sir Henry Newelle, belonging to Mr. Moore.

23 October, 1570. Letter from Lords of the Council to William More, esq. Requiring Mr. More to inform the writers whether the earl of Southampton attends "common prayer" at Loseley; and in case the said earl does not, requiring Mr. More to press him to do so, and then to certify the Council what the earl says and does under such pressure. Dated from Windsor. A document noticed in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix., and Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

31 October, 1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Asking whether there are grounds for hoping for the earl of Southampton's speedy enlargement. Dated from Coudrey. A document noticed in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix., and Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

11 November, 1570. Warrant of the Privy Council (signed, R. Leycester, W. Cecille), addressed to William More, esq. For the earl of Southampton's removal to Kingston by the morrow night at farthest, so that he may be brought before her majesty's council on Monday morning. Dated from Hampton Courte.

1570. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Walter Creswell, ranger of Wyndors Forest. Ordering the discharge of certain despoilers of game on the petition of their fathers who are honest men.

1570. A Dyscourse touchynge the pretendyd matche betwene the Duke of Northefolke and the Queen of Scottes. Twenty-eight 129 pages. Demonstrating the reasons for believing in and fearing the project.

6 January, 1571. Letter from the earl of Sussex to Sir Thomas Browne and William More, esq. and others, magistrates of Surrey. Reproving the magistrates' too harsh treatment, in a purely civil matter, of Mr. Owen, who has married the writer's cousin-germain, and is therefore no person for inconsiderate treatment.

12 January 1571. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to William More, esq. Inviting Mr. More to an interview with "my lord of Leystar" on a certain matter, not set forth in the note.

April, 1571. Copy of a Latin letter written by Lord Burghley in behalf of Francis Sampaulinus, to the excellence of whose life and conduct during his residence in England it bears strong testimony.

25 June, 14 Elizabeth. Copy of the commission to Sir Henry Weston, knt., and Thomas Browne, William Moore, Thomas Lyfeld, and Edmund —, esqs.; to enquire and certify what loads of timber, wood, corn, and grain have been carried in the co. of Surrey in the queen's name, since the first year of queen Mary till the present time.

25 June, 1571. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Receiver General of her majesties revenue and the collector of the loan. co. Surrey, and others. For the payment of the needful charges for a number of soldiers, to be levied in Surrey and transported to France.

1 July, 14 Elizabeth. Licence, from present date to the next sessions after the next feast of St. John, under the signatures and seals of Wylliam More, J. Skynner, and Edmond Slyfeld, justices of the peace of co. Surrey, to John Russell of Pyrbryt, in the said county, "to be a comon badger, lader, kydder, caryer, byer, and transporter of alle maner of corne or grayne in any county out of this shere, and the same so bought in other sheres to sell ageyne within this shere and not elles where, so that he vse and occupy the same according to the tenure and trewe meaninge of the statute latly made in the reign of Edward the Sixte agaynst regrators."

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

1 July, 14 Elizabeth. Licence, till the next general sessions after the next Feast of St. John the Baptist, under the seals and signatures of Wylliam More, J. Skynner, and Thomas Stoughton, to Henry Yonge of Capell, co. Surrey, "to be a comen droner, byer, and "dryner of all manner of catalle," so that he use the same with due regard to Edward the Sixth's statute against regrators, forestallers, and ingrossers.

31 July, 1571. Copy of letter of Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for the Subsidy, co. Surrey. Containing instructions for its collection.

25 August, 1571. Warrant, addressed by Robert bishop of Winchester, John Ebdon, W. Ouerton, and Fr. Kingesmill, to William Moore, esq., and others, magistrates, &c., &c., co. Surrey; to arrest "Peter "Reuellard, beyng a Frenche priest nowe or late "serving the cure of Peperharrow within the countie "of Surrie," and to hold him in Guildford gaol till he shall have been examined about certain matters.

27 August, 1571. Letter from Lord Burghley to William Moore, esq. Opening with an announcement that, when at Guildford the other day, the writer after viewing the Frierie there "made a rude trick "thereof in manner of a platt with "his "owne hand," which sketch was entrusted to one of Mr. Moore's or Mr. Wollesys' servants, a mason, who "offered to make "the same more pe-fittin." This person having neglected to return the drawing, Mr. Moore is required to see that he accomplishes his promise to the writer in respect to the same.

September, 1571. Rough and unsigned draft of a letter, praying that a commission may be granted for the immediate trial of certain notorious robbers recently apprehended in the county of Surrey.

11 October, 1571. Letter from Antoine Garnett to William Moore, esq. Enquiring whether Loseley House be free from "mesles or small pockes," and whether Mr. More will be at home on the 18th inst., as lord Mountague purposes to visit him on that day, on the road to London. From Coudrey.

21 October, 1571. Receipt of Richard Polstede for one hundred pounds delivered to him by William More, esq., in part payment of a marriage portion assured to the said Richard on his marriage three years earlier with Elizabeth the eldest daughter of the same William.

26 November, 1571. Letter from John Parker (son of archbishop Parker) to William Moore, esq. In support of the bailiff of Croydon's candidature for the bailiwick of Brickston and Wallington, which candidature is supported by Judge Sothecte and — Glascock.

3 January, 1572. Letter from lord Burghley. Touching a wreck off Chichester.

5 January, 1572. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Master Moore at Loseley. Touching Mr. Amarsam's project to enclose a great piece of the common of East Horsley; and urging Mr. Moore so to bestir himself amongst the magistrates of co. Surrey, that they may not consent to the said project which could not be carried out without injury to the writer, to lord Mountygewe and divers tenants.

5 January, 1572. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. About Mr. Amer-sham's project to enclose a part of Horsley common, which the writer regards with disapproval.

19 January, 1572. Letter from Mr. Anthony Browne to William More, esq. Repeating the writer's thanks for Mr. Moore's lenient manner of reporting Mr. Cortneys's riot to the lord Mountague; and also entreating Mr. More to use his influence with the principal inhabitants of Guildford so as to induce them to retire from their resolution to prosecute with extreme vindictiveness the "younge gentlemen" who occasioned the disorder. Compensation for all substantial wrongs having been made to every sufferer, it is urged that the originators and promoters of the disturbance should not be punished in a way that would cover them with lasting discredit.

January, 1572. Letter from lord Burghley to Mr. More and Mr. Thomas Stoughton, esqs. Appointing Messrs. More and Stoughton to enquire and certify the writer whether the heir of John Wyntershull, lately deceased, is a ward to her majesty the queen, in respect of certain lands, tenements, and rents in Guildford and Bromley.

12 February, 1572. Letter from Robert earl of Leicester to Mr. William Moore, justice of the peace co. Surrey. Ordering that the letter's bearer, John Thetcher, be troubled no further in respect to his misdemeanor towards her majesty's game in Windsor forest, as he has purged the offence by due submission.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

11 March, 1572. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Respecting certain despoilers of game, who are under the consideration of the justices of the peace.

26 March, 1572. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Mr. Moore. Requesting Mr. Moore to assist the letter's bearer, one Christopher Baker, the queen's servant, and an assistant of the admiralty, in moving timber felled in Surrey by the said Christopher for the building of ships.

7 April, 1572. Letter from lord William Howard to Mr. Browne. Announcing the writer's receipt of a commission under the Great Seal touching fugitives, in which Mr. Browne, Mr. Weston, Mr. Baron Birche, Mr. More and Agmondesham are joined with the writer, who desires that his fellow-commissioners may assemble at his house on the following Monday, to confer with him.

10 May, 1572. Letter from Bryan Aungier to William Moore, esq. Entreating Mr. Moore to come from Loseley to town, and give evidence on a point in the suit brought by lady Stafford against the writer and his cousin Wolley in the Court of Wards.

11 June, 1572. Letter from William Prossar, one of the viscount Mountague's servants, to William More, esq., at Lothesley. Giving an account of his lordship's reception and entertainment in France, on his way from Bullein to Paris, viâ Montreuil, Abeuille and St. Denys. Whilst the writer plies his pen, his lordship is lying in Paris, "in the kinges howse called the Castel of Loure," whence he "goethe tomorrowe to the courte to salute "the Kinge at a place of sport called Madrill wher "the Kinge lyethe nowe, beinge two myles out of this "towne of Parys." From Parys.

17 June, 1572. Letter from William Prosser to William Moore, esq. Describing the reception given to the lord Mountague at Paris, and the superb hospitalities lavished upon him by the French king. His lordship was conducted from "the kinges owne howse called Lover" to the royal pleasure-house two miles out of Paris, called Madrill by "the prince Dauphin, the lorde mareschall of Cosse, Mons^r. of Lanseck, the king's "governour duringe his minoritie, and dyvers other "noble menne and gentillmenne where his lordship "was receaved of the kyng and his two brothers "the Duke of Anjou and the duke of Alenson beinge "accompanied with the Cardinal of Bourbon, Mous^r. "d'Angoulesme the kynges basse brother, the duke of "Nevers, the duke of Guise, the duke of Bouillon, the "duke of Aumalle, the lord admiral of France, the "mareschall d'Anville, Conte of Rochefoucault "and on Sonday the Kyng and his brothers with the "rest of the nobilytye brought my lorde from thense "to Parys to dyner. My lorde dide ryde with the "kinge in his owne cotche and came to dyner to the "said castell of Louver. There the Kyng did bankett "my lorde and dynd together. And after dyner "the Kyng accompanied with all the nobilitie afore-said with his garde of Scotismene, Frenchemen and "Suyzers with sowndinge of trompettes fifes and "drommes, every noble man going in his degree, "brought my lord to a church called Saint Germain "of Auxerrois where the kinge harde evensong, . . . "and there the league was sworne and confirmed "betwix England and Fraunce." From Parys.

29 July, 1572. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. and Thomas Stoughton, esq. Requesting Messrs. Moore and Stoughton to enquire into the case of the writer's servant Philipp Mellershe, who is charge with speaking lewd and insufferable words touching the earl of Arundell and lord Lumley. From Coudrey.

2 August, 1572. Letter from Edmond bishop of London to Mr. More at his house near Guilforde. For the recovery of "a faire brynded dogge" given to the bishop by lady Riche, and stolen from his house at Fulham. The animal is now known to be kept in or near Guilforde. The writer's cousin, Sir Henry Weston, kn^t, has also been entreated to look out for the dog.

19 August, 1572. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to Mr. Moore at Loseley. Touching an appointment with Mr. Hardock. The writer adds, "I doe "remember that you tolde me of one whome you knewe "being skillful in trimming and stopping of tethe, if "you can cawse the same fellowe to come vnto me "aboute that purpose you shalle greatlie pleasure me."

9 September 1572. Letter from Mistress Elizabeth Balam, widow, to Wylliam More, esq., dated from Walsoken. Acknowledging a letter of condolence from Mr. More and his wife on the recent death of the writer's husband, and concluding thus, "I haue sent you a lyttle cuppe

W. M.
LYNEUX,
Esq.

"of syluer gylte named a Spyder pott the nature
"whereof ys that yf anye payson enter therein yt wyl
"burst and to my syster a tosyng Instrument of
"syluer and gylte."

16 December, 1572. Two rough drafts of a letter from William More, esq., to Anthony viscount Mountague. About a riotous disorder lately caused in the town of Guildford by one Mr. Cortneye, who entered the town in company with his lordship's son Mr. Anthony Browne. Instead of taking any heinous part in the riot occasioned by his friend, Mr. Browne exerted himself to allay and end it, when the disturbance became serious.

18 December, 1572. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for his information respecting Mr. Antony Brown's association with Mr. Cortneye when the latter caused a riot in Guildford; and also for his action in the matter.

18 December, 1572. Letter from Mr. Anthony Browne to William More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for the considerateness and kindness which distinguished his way of reporting to lord Mountague the writer's share in Mr. Cortney's riot in Guildford. "It shalbe a first warning," writes the young man, "vnto me to be ware howe I take other mens quarrells vpon my owne shoulders to vnbothen them, and allso to beware to come in such companie wher as I maye beare the blame withoute deserte."

20 December, 1572. Letter from the earl of Arundell to William Moore, esq. Touching the controversy between Rychard Lumley's wife and Mrs. Onsley, as to the rights of their young children. From Nonsuche.

13 January, 15 Elizabeth. Licence, till the next general sessions after the next Feast of the Nativity, under the seals and signatures of Thomas Smythe and Gregory Lovell, to Edward Leche of Marten, co. Surrey, "mealeman," "to be a common badger lader kiddier carrier bier or transporter of all maner of corne or grayne in any market or faier within the realme of England, and the same so bought to conuerte to meile, and the same to carrie to the cittie of London or to the suburbes of the same, or vnto any other markett or faier," so that he do nothing in disregard of the statute of Edward VI. against regrators, forestallers and ingrossers.

3 February, 1573. Letter (Latin) of friendliness and pedantic flattery from John Osborn, of the university of Cambridge, to his friend Mr. George More, at Corpus Christi College, in the university of Oxford. Also (dated 8 March, 1573, and 14 July, 1574) two other Latin letters of the same kind from the writer to the same Oxonian student.

20 February, 1573. Letter from Lord Burghley and Sir Francis Mildmaye to William More and John Skynner, esqs., and others, commissioners to enquire whether subsidies, granted by parliament and clergy to the Queen, have been duly paid. Directing the said commissioners to execute their commission in that respect.

21 February, 1573. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff of co. Surrey. Ordering, in consideration of the prayers to that effect of the gentlemen of divers counties and also of the complaints in parliament, that "the Sheriffes shalle not after this lent Assizes have the charges of the Justices of the Assizes diettes, but that the said Justices shall have of her majestie out of her cofers seuerall somes of money for their daiely dyettes duringe the tymes that heretofore the sheriffes have byn chargable withal within theire counties."

14 March, 1573. Commission to Edward earl of Lincoln, high admiral, Henry earl of Arundell, and twenty-seven others, to take musters and command the soldiers, horse and foot, of the county of Surrey. Imperfect.

20 April, 15 Elizabeth. Patent, under the seal of the bishop and the seal of the dean and chapter of Winchester, of a grant by Robert bishop of the said diocese to Nicholas Burlace, for life, of the office of keeper of the little park of Farnham.

24 April, 1573. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William More, esq. Wherein the writer, who has succeeded lord Mountague in the office of bailiff of the Surrey "ballywyck" in the walks of Windsor Forest, appoints Mr. More his deputy in the said office.

24 April, 1573. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore and Edward Docwra, esquires. Appointing them to view the deer in the walks of the Surrey bailiwick of Windsor forest, and to certify the earl respecting the same.

3 May, 1573. Letter from Lord Burghley to William More, esq. Announcing her majesty's pleasure that Mr. More's prisoner, the earl of Southampton, should be allowed to repair to her ladyship his mother in Mr. More's company, as often as the earl and his said mother may desire, during her sickness.

5 May, 1573. Letter from Lords of the Council to William More, esq. Announcing that, having on his humble submission decided that the earl of Southampton should be set at more liberty, the queen has specially selected Mr. More as a person in whose custody the earl should be placed in an honourable and easy restraint. The earl is to be allowed to enjoy the society of his wife, friends and servants, and be suffered sometimes to accompany them abroad. He is to compensate Mr. More in a proper manner for his diet and entertainment at Loseley, and may, in company with Mr. More, visit the house now being built by the earl in Hampshire. (Vide Kempe's "Loseley MSS.") With respect to this document, used by Mr. Bray in his 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton,' it is noteworthy that it is a distinct recommitment of the earl to imprisonment at Loseley. So far as the Loseley MSS. show, the imprisoned earl does not appear to have been at Loseley between 11 Nov. 1570 and 5 May 1573.

7 May, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Expressing with great fervour the writer's gratitude for a service done at his request to his dear friend by Mr. Moore.

26 May, 1573. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore, esq. Directing strict order to be kept in the walks of the Surrey bailiwick in Windsor Forest, that no unauthorized person be suffered to use gun or cross-bow therein; great decay of the game in the said forest having resulted from the inordinate use therein "of crossebowes and gonnes by such as haue no auctoritie to beare them." The writer touches also on the recent despoilment of "the game of Feysant and partridges" by "the comon trade of hawking and taking."

28 May, 1573. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore, esq. Expressing approval of Mr. Moore's arrangements in respect to the Surrey bailiwick of Windsor Forest, and begging him to meet the writer at Windsor next Wednesday.

7 June, 1573. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council, touching the conduct of certain persons, to whom her majesty had granted certain forfeitures under penal laws, in appointing unworthy deputies for the execution of the said grants. Also, a copy of Six Articles to be observed by alle suche pers as haue any "grauntes of forfaytures vpon penalle lawes."

7 June, 1573. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the reduction of the useless multitude of corn badgers and corn brokers in the said county; and for other measures to lower the prices of corn, which, though they have fallen somewhat in parts near the seas, in consequence of her Majesty's order forbidding the exportation of any kind of grain from her ports, are still inordinately high in the inland parts of the kingdom.

10 June, 1573. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Mr. Moore. Consenting to Thomas Howard's liberation from the marshalseye, to which prison he was committed for hunting unlawfully in the Queen's park of Oking.

13 June, 1573. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, custos rotulorum, co. Surrey. For a return of the names of the several hundreds, "and also of thordinarie and accustomed deuisions" and limittes of that shire, and of the justices of the peace, coroners and clerks of the peace in the same hundreds and ordinary deuisions.

15 June, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. About the recent despoilment of game and other disorders in Witley Park. From Coudrey.

26 June, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. A note of hearty gratitude for kindness which places the writer under heavy obligations to Mr. Moore and his "good wiff."

7 July, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Requesting Mr. More to ascertain from his neighbour Mr. Hamond of Gilford whether he has in any way changed that part of his will by which he designed to provide a schoolmaster and an usher for the said town; it having come to the knowledge of the writer that attempts have been made to withdraw Mr. Hamond from his beneficent purpose towards the town.

14 July, 1573. Copy of a letter from Lords of the council to the earl of Southampton. Permitting the

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

said earl to stay "at Cowdraie with oure verie good lord "the vicount Mountague" instead of remaining with Mr. More at Loseley, and also giving the said earl licence to visit his house, now being built, in Hampshire, so that he only passes one night there on each occasion of visiting it. Dated from Greenwich. At the foot the earl's certificate to the truth of the copy. A document used in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide Archæologia, vol. xix., and Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 July, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Thanking Mr. Moore for a service, and expressing satisfaction that a poor gentleman and his wife, in whom his lordship of Winchester is interested, are in a fair way to be relieved from their extreme distress. From Coudrey.

25 July, 1573. Letter from John Apsley to Mr. Moore, esq. About "certaine thinges which is supposed pyrates "gooddes at Woode in Sussex."

26 July, 1573. Letter from the ladies M. Southampton and Magdalen Mountague to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. Moore to move his lordship of Winchester to set at liberty an aged woman, named Parkyns, whom his lordship "commytte longe sithens to the Whyte "Lyon." Dated from Cowdery.

July 1573. (?). Letter from the countess of Southampton to Mrs. More at Loseley. Expressing the writer's hearty thanks for Mrs. More's great courtesy and kindness to her. No date. A document used in Mr. Bray's 'Confinement of the earl of Southampton.' (Vide, Archæologia, vol. xix.)

6 August, 15 Elizabeth. Form of bond, sent by Robert bishop of Winchester to William More, esq.; for binding Edward Banister, co. Southampton, gentleman, and Henry Goring, co. Sussex, esq., that the said Edward Banister shall betake himself to the White Lion prison or show himself conformable to the laws touching religion, on or before 1 November next ensuing.

18 August, 1573. Letter from Thomas Howard to William Moore, esq. Certifying that William Phyllyppes is the writer's household servant.

31 August, 1573. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Touching Sir William's proposals for remedying certain abuses in Windsor Forest. From Coudrey.

30 September, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Asking Mr. More to interest himself with the Lord Admiral to obtain an immediate enlargement from prison and instant pardon for a poor man sent to prison for misreporting the same lord's words in a matter concerning the writer.

29 October, 1573. Letter (holograph) from lord Burghley to Mr. William Moore, esq., and another, magistrates for Surrey. About a strong speech said to have been made by Sir Edward Bray to one Mellersh.

1 November, 1573. Letter from the earl of Southampton to William More, esq. Announcing that the writer and his wife will visit Loseley on Tuesday week on their way to London. The earl is ready for Mr. More's glasier at Dymersfeld. Dated from Cowdrey.

6 November, 1573. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for inviting the writer to come to Loseley with lord and lady Southampton, on their way to London:—an invitation which the writer cannot accept in his present "weakness of body." He speaks of himself as having "kept his chamber these xiii dayes in extreme paynes."

Tuesday, — 1573. Letter from the earl of Southampton to William More, esq. Announcing that the countess of Southampton has just given birth to a fine boy, and that she, as well as the writer, will gladly receive a visit from Mrs. More. Dated from Cowdrey. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Friday, — 1573. Letter from the earl of Southampton to William More, esq., at Loseley. Announcing that the writer has imparted Mr. More's kindly request to the lord Montagu, who can however only acknowledge the invitation thankfully, "beynge not able by "reson of siknes to traveyle with us," or "to apoynt "any certen time of his repayre to London." The lord Montague has not been out of his chamber these fourteen days. Dated from Cowdry.

1573–1574. Twenty-five accounpts rendered by collectors of money raised for, and spent in relief of, the poor of divers parishes of Surrey.

12 January, 1574. Latin letter from Toby Matthew (dated at Christ Church Oxford, to his friend in the same university, Mr. George More. Also (dated from St. John's College, Oxon, 5 May 1574), an English letter from the same writer to William More, esq., eulogizing

Mr. George More in highly artificial phrases. Also two other Latin letters (one undated and the other dated 12 October 1574) from the same writer to Mr. George More. Chosen President of St. John's College in 1572, and Dean of Christ's Church in 1576, Dr. Tobie Matthew became bishop of Durham in 1572, and archbishop of York in 1606.

17 January 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore, esq. Directing Mr. Moore to enquire concerning "verie evell and reprochfull wordes" said to have been spoken against the writer by one Rowden to one Hannington. The enquiry, it is suggested, had better be made in the presence of one Mr. Lidcot who, on due notice being given him, will bring with him divers witnesses to the matter. Attached to this letter are the depositions of Thomas Hanyngton and Richard Cotterelle against the said John Rowden, one of the yeomen of her majesty's guard, and also the replication of the same John Rowden, who seems to have informed the two newly appointed keepers of walks in Windsor Forest that, before taking the earl's livery, they had better make sufficiently good terms with him for their livelihood, as they might not hope to improve their positions after entering his service, the earl being a hard man, and one more ready to make promises than to keep them.

1 March, 1574. Copy of a letter from the earl of Lyncolne to William More, esq., vice-admiral of co. Sussex. On information from Luke Gryffyn, of Merchenhaven, that Thomas Alredge and Richard Alredge, of Brighthemston, and one Woode, of Shoreham, have been dealers with pirates for their goods, the writer directs Mr. More to send a letter to Lusher, his deputy in those parts of Sussex, ordering him forthwith to arrest the said Thomas and Richard Alredge and Woode of Shoreham, and bind them over to appear before the writer.

6 March, 1574. Letter from the earl of Lyncolne to Mr. Moore at Loseley. Begging Mr. Moore's assistance in getting from "one Henry Chitty . . . a certen dede "of conveyance of divers landes made by him to the "use of" the writer's "servaunt his sonne and this "bearer John Chitty," which deed the said Henry Chitty persists in holding and detaining. Dated from Pirford.

8 March, 1574. Letter from Lord Cobham to Mr. Wyllyam Moore, at the Blackfriars. Regretting that, as the plague increases in the Blackfriars, the writer must decline to come to town on Mr. Moore's business, but offering to sign any letter, written by Mr. Moore, to the Chief Justice. Dated at Cobham.

10 March, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir Henry Nevile, knt., and William More, esq. Directing Sir Henry and Mr. More to see that one Bembyrke is "properly placed in a keeper's roame," as he has by his fearless honesty incurred the enmity of the despoilers of her majesty's game, and should be protected from their malice.

26 March, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir Henry Nevill, knt., lieutenant of the castle and forest of Windsor, and William Moore, esq. Directing the law to be rigidly enforced against all those detected despoilers of game in Windsor Park, who were keepers of the same park; and ordering suitable provision in a keeper's place to be made for Bembricke, the informer against them.

23 April, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir Henry Weston, knt., and William Moore, esq., magistrates for co. Surrey. Begging the two magistrates to act as arbitrators to the controversy between Stodole and Standen, of the one part, and George Whyte of Chertsey, of the other part.

6 May, 1574. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to Mr. Moore at Loseley. Touching the behaviour of a curate, whom the writer would fain see more wary and circumspect; and also touching the case of the vicar of Godalming, who is likely to be deprived of his vicarage. Dated from Bishshoppes Waltham.

31 May, 1574. Warrant to the commissioners of musters for co. Surrey, to levy in the said shire one hundred and fifty able men, and train them as soldiers, and have them ready for service upon an hour's warning.

—Elizabeth. The Temptation of Mr. Briggs, a gentleman of the Temples. Covering forty-five closely written foolscap pages, this MS. recounts the circumstances of the marvellous sickness and trances of Mr. Briggs, a gentleman of the Temple, ætat 30, with "a comlyc "gentlewoman to his wyff and a goodlie," who, after hearing Mr. Lassilurus Villers lecture shortly before Christmas 1573, on the nature of sin against the Holy Ghost, was troubled with a belief that he had committed

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

that sin, and was therefore destined to everlasting punishment. So after he was possessed by this terrifying imagination Mr. Briggs was tempted to commit suicide, and tried with satanic visitations, during which he sometimes lost two or more of his senses, and sometimes all consciousness. His most usual state, however, during these demoniacal seizures, was one in which he was imperfectly sensible of surrounding objects, and retained the power of uttering disconnected sentences, that caused the witnesses of his trouble to be of opinion that his speeches were directed at the ghostly adversaries, with whom he wrestled throughout the long periods of bodily derangement and prostration. Interested in the peculiar distress of a man, whom they regarded with sincere affection, the friends of Mr. Briggs appointed amongst themselves a scribe "to penne verbatim oute of his mouthe whatsoever he spake duringe the tyme of his rasytations. Wherein, although the sicke man used manie pauses, lystening as it seemed to the voyce that spake vnto him, yet when he replied he delyuered his speech with such swyftenes as manie places of scriptures and other things notable by himself spoken, not able with lyke swyftnes to be wrytten were omittid." The usual time for the beginning of one of his seizures was about 8 or 9 a.m., and they varied in duration from about an hour to the whole of the day. The narrative preserves the sick man's mysterious utterances during fourteen several trances, that occurred between the 12 April and 1 May, inclusive, 1574, asterisks being used in the reports to indicate the places, at which the speaker paused in the delivery of his ejaculations, thus, "I did neuer purpose it nor I will neuer agree to have it.* Thou liest I did neuer make the acquittance of the receipte of anye.* Thou wilt neuer leaue this lyinge and forginge.* I tell the that my name there wrytten was not wrytten by me.* Thou shalt neuer haue it.* I ded neuer sell it, neither was it myne to sell, for as I cannot sell any other man's lands or goods, no more can I sell my soule, for the spyrit is his, who gave it." Describing the sick man's attacks and the interest taken in them by Society of the Inns of Court, the anonymous producer of this record, for the edification of a lady of rank, says, "The devill's part of the dialogue was vnheard of us, but his obiections do euidentlie appeare by Briggs his answer. His tymes of his fyfts were so well knowne to the houses of courte, as there neuer fayled both counselors at lawe and students, somtymes a dozen sometymes xx^{ie}, and most tymes the chamber so full as one could scarslie stand one by another, manie of which for the better confirmation of the truth, I haue procured to subcribe there names to this booke."

20 June, 1574. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Mr. More, of Loseley. Interceding with the magistrates for certain persons of the township of Kingeston, who have been summoned to appear at the quarter sessions of Guildford to answer for a neglect of the high-way, which has been duly amended.

26 June, 1574. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. Announcing that, moved by the culprit's piteous entreaties, the writer has reluctantly pardoned an offender whose guilt was aggravated by the obstinacy of his avowals of his innocence.

5 July, 1574. Letter from Elizabeth lady Lyncoln to Mr. Moore. Touching certain covenants from lord to lady Lyncoln concerning Pyrforde, in which Mr. Moore and his son-in-law, Mr. Powlstede, are feoffees-in trust.

6 July, 16 Elizabeth. Award of William More, of Loseley, co. Surrey, esq., and Edmond Saunders, of Charlwode, in the same co., esq., arbitrators, in a controversy between Thomas Stoughton, co. Surrey, esq., and Francis Stoughton, of the Inner Temple, gentleman, sons of the late Lawrence Stoughton, esq., touching the payment of a certain annuity of xx*li*. bequeathed by the said Lawrence to the said Francis. Also, in the same packet of papers, letters (that passed between the same Messrs. Stoughton) on private and personal matters of no historic interest, of the following dates, 1 September 1563; 22 July, 2 November, 1564; 21 January, 8, 16, 22, 26 July, 1565; 1 April 1567; 4 May, 11 September 1577. Also, in same packet, two undated and un-historic letters from the said Francis Stoughton to William More, esq., and an undated letter, touching private accounts, from Edward Stoughton to William More, esq.

17 September, 1574. Letter from Thomas lord Buckehurst to the writer's loving cousin William Moore, esq. About a lease of Stoneham which the writer wishes to buy of Mr. Moore's "soon Mr. Polstede."

22 September, 1574. Warrant from Robert earl of Leycester. For the committal to the Tower of one Richard Rumsey, a notorious deer-stealer, who has been examined and refuses "to vtter his companions."

28 September, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore and Richard Polstede, esqs. Conciliating their favour towards the letter's bearer, John Milton, servant of the Serjeant of her majesty's buckhounds, who by attending his master in Warwickshire when he should have appeared before the magistrates at Guildford, has hazarded the forfeiture of his bond.

Michaelmas, 1574. Bill of the ulnager and sealer of cloths in cos. Surrey and Sussex, for the district of Farnham, co. Surrey, thus inscribed at the head of the single sheet, "Farnham: Concernynge the sealinge of cloth from the feastyvall of the Virgin Mary to the feast of St. Michael y^e Archangell, In y^e yere of grace, 1574." Beneath appear the names of fifteen clothiers of the district who submitted clothes to the ulnager's inspection during the term aforesaid, with the number of pieces exhibited by each. At the foot of the bill the sum (4*l*. 1*9s*. 7½*d*.) of the payments to the sealer for sealing 797 pieces of cloth at the rate of 1½*d*. a piece. Twenty-one other and similar bills (dated) for the same district, the latest of them being for the period from Michaelmas, 1587, to Lady-day, 1588. Also fourteen undated bills, or portions of bills, respecting the sealing of cloth and the ulnage in the same district in the later half of the 16th century. Also, a copy of a letter from Loseley (dated 14 March 1578) by the ulnager of the cos. Surrey and Sussex to some person appointed to act as deputy-ulnager:—"Forasmuch as I have good occasion to thinck that dyuerse do convey their clothes out of Sussex and Surrey to London not havinge the seale of the vinage fixed therevnto, bycause of the evill makinge of the same contrarie to the lawes and statutes in y^e case provided. I haue thought good, beinge Alnagere of bothe the said sheres, to require you not onelie to search but to sease suche as shalbe conveyed out of both the saide sheres throw Southworke not havinge the saide seale as aforesaid. I do vnderstand also that diners broodeclothes ar brought out of other countries and mylled at a myll nere Wynbleton by Wandesworth. I haue therefore thought good to send you the seale of my office to thend yee may exercise the same for me not onelye concernynge the said clothes, but also of others made or broughten into Southworke. Wherevnto the saide seale ought lawfullie to be fixed. And as I will have suche due consideracioun of you for your travyle therein accordinge to my last speche had with yow, and further to youre contentment. So I trust and do also require you to have good regarde that her majestie be well servede that I be saved harmeles and no person to have just cause of complaynt. And thus Fare you well. Loseley, this xxiiith of March, 1578."

7 November, 1574. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Ordering that bonds of sufficient security be required of tanners for their honest and thorough observance of the laws for the trewe and sufficient tannynge of lether.

8 November, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore, esq. Announcing the appointment of Thomas Hannington, the letter's bearer, to be keeper of Mylton's Walk in the Forest of Windsor.

15 November, 1574. Letters from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Ordering "that there be no plays shewes nor any such unnecessarie assemblies used in that countie within ten myles of the cytie vntill Easter next vpon payne of imprisonment to such as shall in any wies offend to the contrarie:" it having been "found by experience that very great perill and inconveniences hath fallen vpon sondry of the queenes maiesties subjects by the sufferance of great assemblies of the people to come together at plaies and shewes neare London in this tyme of contagion and infection of the plague."

24 November, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir Henry Nevell, knt., and the rest of the commissioners for inclosures about the forest of Wynd-sor. Urging a speedy execution of the commission which has been too long in hand; and requiring information respecting the commission to lay before her majesty, who is interested in the matter.

14 December, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to William Moore, esq. Ordering the strict examination of one Rumsey, who, in fear and penitence occasioned by a threat to send him to the Tower, has

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNE
Esq.

promised to discover and give evidence against his contempts. Also ordering the apprehension and stringent examination of all persons whom Rumsey may accuse of being his contempts.

16 December, 1574. Letter from Robert earl of Leicester to William Moore, esq. Requesting Mr. Moore to introduce George Pott to the office of keeper of the walk, to which he has been appointed vice John Lowes.

17 Elizabeth. Answer of William Moore, esq., and Charles Bradshawe, yeoman, defendants, to the bill of William Raye and Margaret his wife, plaintiffs in a suit in Chancery, respecting houses in Blackfriars. With depositions of witnesses in the suit.

3 January, 1575. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Requesting Mr. Moore to exercise his influence with his son Mr. Polstede, the sheriff of Sussex and Surrey, to return a fairly chosen jury to hear the cause between Mr. Fynch and the writer's cousin Mr. Thetcher, in stead of a proposed jury consisting of Londoners and men of cost. Hertford, Bucks, and Middlesex, being personal friends of Mr. Fynch. From the writer's "howse att St. Mary Overrys."

15 January, 1575. Letter from T. Heneage to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. Moore "to wryte most earnestly to" his "soone-in-lawe the Sheryfe of Sussex" to returne a jurye accordinge to the Lord Keepers "letters for the triall of the matter in controversy betwixt" the writer's "soone Fynche and Mr Thatcher." Dated from Cophthalle.

18 January, 1575. Letter from Vincent Skinner to William Moore, esq. Begging Mr. Moore to accept, as his tenant of a small dwelling in the Blackfriars, "a very learned man one Citelino an Italian."

14 March, 1575. Letter from Elyzabeth Poulet (widow of William Poulet, lord St. John of Basing and Marquis of Winchester) to William Moore, esq. Touching the writer's interview with her cousin Lusher about his father's pecuniary embarrassments, and a proposal for dealing with the same person's debts, with a view to his liberation from prison.

30 March, 1575. Letter from Tobie Matthew, (afterwards bishop of Durham and archbishop of York) to William Moore, esq. In which the writer advocates the cause of his brother, and commends him to Mr. Moore's favour. "Wherin," says the writer, "I am no more earnest with you to be good father vnto him, than instant with him to be an obedient sonne vnto you." From Thorpe.

1 April, 1575. Letter from Thomas Stoughton to Wylliam Moore, esq. Accompanying certain articles sent to Mr. Moore by the writer, who would have brought them himself had he not heard from William Hooke that his correspondence had gone to Doctors Common.

2 April, 1575. Letter from Peter Osborne to William Moore, esq. Condoling with Mr. Moore on the death of his son-in-law Mr. Polsted.

13 April, 1575. Letter from Sir Christopher Hatton, knight, to William Moore, esq. Entreating Mr. Moore to intercede with the bishop of Winchester for the letter's bearer, who has incurred the prelate's displeasure more by misreport than misconduct.

25 April, 1575. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Mr. William Moore at Loseley. Urging Mr. Moore to rouse himself against the sorrow of a recent misfortune. Also, touching negotiations for a marriage settlement in Mr. Moore's family.

April 1575 to April 1589. Letters (35 in number) from Sir Henry Nevill to Mr. Moore, respecting the business of their offices as verderors of Windsor Forest.

22 June, 1575. Copy of the last will and testament of William Swerder of Hauloc (i.e., Harlow), co. Essex.

30 June, 1575. Letters patent, signed at Antwerp and drawn by A. van Horne, notary, whereby Thomas Copley, a noble Englishman, lord of Maze, Gatton, Mersham, Colleye, Rowghye Warnham, &c., appoints John Blinkesope of London, gentleman, one of his substitutes and deputies, to act against a fleet of pirates, on the authority of letters of marque granted to the same Thomas Copley by Don Lues de Requesens, Spanish governor of the Low Countries; which letters of marque, recited in the patent, set forth the injuries done by a fleet of pirates, infesting the shores of the Low Countries, to the shipping of Spanish, French and English adventurers, and also set forth the terms and conditions on which Thomas Copley is invested with authority to act as a belligerent against the depredators, and to depute others to act under him as belligerents. The letters of marque reserve to his Catholic Majesty a tenth part of the prizes made unto their authority: and in the patent it is stipulated that one fifth part of the prizes made by John Blinkesope, gentleman, is to be paid to Thomas Brook of Gatton, gentleman, lately dwelling with the magnificent Humphrey White, of Watling-Street, London, citizen and merchant taylor.

3 August, 1575. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. In behalf of a poor man, one of the writer's servants, who has been bound by Mr. Moore to keep the peace, at the suit of a disorderly person, also one of the writer's servants.

16 August, 1575. Letter from Antoine Garnett to William Moore, esq. Lord Mountague's works of building at River Parke being very backward and stayed for want of masons, the writer begs Mr. Moore to accommodate his lordship with the service of certain masons, now entertained and employed at Loseley, if the demand for their labour there is not urgent.

25 August, 1575. Inventory of the goods and household stuff of William Swerder, of Harlow, co. Essex, gentleman, who died in the year aforesaid.

12 September, 1575. Letter from Lord Burghley to Mr. Moore and Mr. Apesley, esqs. Touching the grievance of the letter's bearer "Anthony Beckewe, who" "was the first that practised the makinge of glasse" "within this her majesties realme," and "hath bin" "trobled and molested in the lawe by one Perot and" "Jhon Bowyard workemen vnder him in the same" "trade, and by reason that he is ignorant how to" "aunsuer them in lawe have condemned him in thirtie" "pounde beeing a greater summe than he is able to" "satisfie." Messrs. Moore and Apesley are requested to arrange the matter, so that Anthony Beckewe be no further molested. Also, an unsigned and undated copy of the reply to this letter.

27 September, 1575. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Touching the recent outbreaks of fire at Gifford Manor house, and the reasons for attributing them to the malice of one Fuller and his wife, who have charge of the house, and are the only persons living in it. From Cowdrey.

26 October, 1575. Warrant, signed by Robert earl of Leicester and addressed to William Moore, esq., for the immediate apprehension of Henry Rogers, John Rogers, John Hayward and Nicholas Pole, and for their speedy conveyance to the Court, where the letter is dat ed.

9 November, 1575. Letter from the Earl of Lyncoln to William Moore, esq., at Loseley. About a person who, without the earl's licence and appointment to do so, "haithetaken partreges nighe youre hous att Lowseley." Dated from Pirford.

5 December, 1575. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Master Moore, vice-admiral of co. Sussex. For an enquiry into the circumstances under which one Andrews of Goring in the said county is said to have acquired unlawful possession of "one chest which had dyvers" "bagges of money in yt" and other things from a vessel wrecked last month off the Sussex coast; a considerable proportion of which money is also alleged to have passed corruptly into the hands of vice-admiral Lusher and one Aspley of Poonynges, who had the examination of the matter committed to them.

19 January, 1576. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Touching some matter which "fallith owte worse and worse," and respecting which one Anthony George went to Loseley House by appointment yesterday, when he missed Mr. Moore who had been called away on urgent business in the queen's name.

21 March, 1576. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral and others, commissioners for musters, co. Surrey. Requiring better order in the returns of the muster, of the said shire, and directing that one hundred and fifty men of the entire muster of the county should be trained.

21 March, 1576. Letter of instruction and warrant, under Queen Elizabeth's signet and sign-manual, to the lord-admiral of England the earl of Lincoln, the earl of Arundell, the earl of Leicester, viscount Montague, lord Howard of Effingham and the other commissioners, appointed in the 15th year of the Queen's reign, for, taking musters in the county of Surrey. To levy one hundred and fifty able men, selected from the last year's muster, and to train them as soldiers.

27 March, 1576. Letter from Elyzabeth countess of Lyncoln to Mrs. Moore at Loseley. Expressing the writer's concern at Mr. Powlstede's sickness, and recommending a medicine for the patient. Dated from Purford.

30 March, 1576. Letter from J. Wolley to William Moore, esq. Touching Mr. Augustine's (Austen's) candidature for "the clearkship of the peace in which

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

"matter" the writer promises, "I will deale with alle the persons I may vntill I have obteyned yt of her maiestye." From Thorpe.

3 April, 1576. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William More, esq. In which the writer concedes in affectionate terms with Mr. More on the death of his son-in-law, whose death is rightly deplored on account of "his owne honer and good nature."

8 April, 1576. Letter from Edmund archbishop of Canterbury to William More, esq. Enclosing, for the information of the commissioners for the subsidy in co. Surrey, a letter from the Privy Council, "for staie of taxinge or leivyenge the firste payment of the subsidie graunted in this last session of the parliament, vpon any citizen of London havinge place of aboade in Surrey," who has not chiefly and continually lived there with his family since Michaelmas last.

11 April, 1576. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to William Moore, esq. Touching the commission of the subsidy and other letters sent to the writer by the lord admiral; and an affair of controversy between one More, a gentleman of Hedley, and a man of Haselmere named Gase; and other matters of small moment.

19 April, 18 Elizabeth. Receipt of Henry Weston, of Albury, co. Surrey, gentleman, for lxxiii. iiis. ixd., paid him by Elizabeth Polsted, widow of Rychard Polsted, esq., deceased.

23 April, 18 Elizabeth. Copy of "the Commyssyon for causes ecclesiasticalle," dated at Gorhamburie.

22 May, 1576. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Requesting information concerning a vessel wrecked off Arundell in the previous year, when "a coffer conteyninge dyuerse bagges of monyes," a part of the wreck, was taken by wreckers, one of whom is suspected of having retained some of the money.

10 July, 1576. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to redress the grievance of one Walter Dide, of Chetlingfold, the bearer of the letter, whose stepson was unlawfully taken from his house last Sunday by William Ede, the boy's uncle, to the great grief of the complainant and of his wife, the abducted boy's mother.

2 August, 1576. Curious letter from Sir H. Wallop of Farley, (a commissioner for restraining the transport of grain out of the co. of Surrey, &c.) to Sir William More, knt. Stating with excellent clearness the writer's reasons for holding that there should be no such restraint on transportation of grain as hinders the corn-growers of one county from selling their grain to corn-buyers in another shire. "At alle tymes for my owne part," says the writer, "I haue byn and am of mynde that markets shoulde be free for alle men to bye, that badgers not forestaulinge or regratinge ar necessarye, and that yt ys most resonable, that one contrye shoulde helpe an other with soche comodities as they are able to spare, . . . I haue also said that we haue grete want of butter and chese, whiche yf shoulde be withhoulden from us by other contreys from wheare we haue them we should think ourselues hardly delt by with." The writer says that these views are unacceptable to his fellow-commissioners, who insist that they should regard their county as their family and send from it nothing that it wants, and that the writer would dismiss his notions about free markets were he not a "grete corn man." Dated from Farley.

6 August, 1576. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Sir William More, knt. Accompanying a commission for the peace in the county of Surrey, with the dedimus potestatem directed to the writer and Sir William who, Lawrence Stowghton being his near neighbour, is desired to execute the writ.

11 August, 1576. Letter (holograph) from Lord Burghley to Sir William More, knt. Recommending Mr. Horsman as a suitor for the hand of Sir William's daughter, Mrs. Polsted. In connection with this letter, it may be here observed that Mr. Horsman's suit was unsuccessful. Mrs. Polsted married Mr. (afterwards Sir) John Wolley for her second, and lord keeper Egerton for her third husband.

11 August, 1576. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Respecting the terms on which the writer will have relations of business with Sir William's kinsman Mr. Hill who has had a satisfactory interview with his lordship.

22 August, 1576. Letter (holograph) from Lord Burghley to Sir William Moore, knt. Recommending Mr. Horsman as a suitor for the hand of one of Sir William's daughters, and wishing success to his suit. From Hertford Castle.

24 August, 1576. Letter from Thomas Horsman to Sir William More, knt. "Yt is thought the quenes majestie will not come to your howse this somer; shee removethe to-morrowe to Hatfelde from Hartforde, and there remayneth, yt is not well known howe longe, and see to St Albons, and then to Chenyes, or toe M^r Sandes his howse, and to Readinge, and there remayneth dueringe her pleasure, for my L. Treasurer fould me that he harde the plage was about Otelandes." From Tybboldes beesyde Walt-ham.

28 August, 1576. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More and Thomas Browne, knts. Enjoining the said Sir William and Sir Thomas to enquire what pieces of ordnance have been cast in co. Sussex since last Michaelmas at any iron mills or forges therein, to ascertain the purchasers of the ordnance so cast, to take note of the supplies of ordnance still held on hand by the owners of such works, and to inhibit the said owners of iron mills and forges in Surrey from casting any more till further notice of her majesty's pleasure on the matter. The letter opens thus, "The quenes majestie being sundrie waies given to vnderstand of diuerse inconveniences which doe daily followe through the making of great quantities of yron ordnance within this realme more then is needfull for the same, but rather for gaine to sell the quantitie thereof to the vse of strangers, whereby ensueth not only a consumption of the store of woodes and timber in the making thereof: and by the sale and bestowing of the said ordnance into forraigne partes after that it is made a strengthening of pirates haunting the seas; hath therefore commanded vs to give straight order that from henceforth it maie be inhibited, that there be no more yron ordnance or shotts caste or made in anie parte of her Majestie's dominions, vntil her Majesties pleasure in that behalf shalbe further declared." Masters of iron mills and forges in Surrey are, also, prohibited strictly from burning any timber, or wood likely to become timber, especially such as grows near the sea-coast or any navigable river.

28 August, 1576. Copy of the above-mentioned letter of Lords of the Council. Prohibiting the casting of shot and ordnance and the burning of timber, or wood likely to become timber, at the iron-mills and iron-forges of the co. of Surrey.

1 September, 1576. Letter from Thomas Leuknor to Sir William Moore, knt. Accompanying a buck sent by lord Arundell to lady More; another buck being appointed to Sir William, whenever it shall please Mr. George More "to fetch and vse pastime in kyllyng the same."

5 September, 1576. Letter from Edward Randill to Sir William More, knt. Touching certain chancery suits which the writer is prosecuting for his cousin Frances Powlsted, and in which he desires Sir William's approval and assistance.

7 September, 1576. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt., at Loseley. Announcing "that the quenes Maiestie doothe remove vpon mondaye nexte to Byflett and will tarrye tuesdaye all daye, and on wensdaye to youre house at Loseley, but howe long her hyghnes will tarrye there I can not yet learne."

2 October, 1576. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Touching the grievance of one James Snelling who has been surcharged in an assessment or some valuation.

10 October, 1576. Letter from Sir Wylliam Cordall to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William More to send certain writings, touching the jointure of his daughter Mrs. Polstead, to Mr. Recorder, or to the writer himself.

24 October, 1576. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace, of co. Surrey. Enjoining them to stay the exportation of corn to foreign parts under any licence, save the Privy Council's "special letters;" to compel holders of grain beyond their domestic and agricultural necessities, to sell their said superfluous corn at easy rates in the open markets; to restrain the number of licensed badgers; and to take other measures to reduce the exorbitant prices of corn.

3 November, 1576. Letter from Richard bishop of Chichester to William More, esq. For the recovery, by search and if need be by hue and cry, of the person of one Mary Engyshe, who has been violently carried away to one Rychardson clk. and one John Gawen, yeoman to the power and keeping of one Thomas Adams. Also for the apprehension and committal to safe custody of the same Thomas Adams, John Gawen, and Rychardson.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

4 November, 1576. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Recommending the writer's friend, William Dawtrey, for the office of under-sheriff to Sir William who "is one in the election" for Sheriff of Surrey and Sussex this year. "From the writer's house in Southwark."

— Elizabeth. Rough draft of a letter addressed by Sir William More, and certain other Commissioners for Causes Ecclesiastical in co. Surrey, to the Lords of the Council. Certifying that Sir Thomas Brown, knt., Thomas Lyfeld, Thomas Vyncent, George More, John Saunder, Rychard Lestok, Lawrence Stowghton, John Agmondesham, Robert Leuesye and John Parkers, joined with the writers in the said commission, are sound and well-affected in religion; and further representing that certain other persons should be added to the commission.

19 Elizabeth. List of the taverners and keepers of ale-houses who appeared at the General Sessions held at Reigate, co. Surrey, on the first day of March next after Easter, and were bound by the Justices of the Peace to obey the orders of the Privy Council against the eating of flesh on Fish-days. Also a list of the "Searchers" (i.e. searchers after offences and offenders against the said orders) "appointed by Sir William More, knt. and "Laurence Stoughton within enerye parishes of their "division."

7 March, 19 Elizabeth. An order takyn by Thomas Yale, doctor of Lawes, and Peter Osborne, esquier, (royal commissioners in respect to the matter), touchinge a lease or terme of yeares claymed by William Ray of London, carpenter, of certayn houses belonging to Sir William More, knight, within the precincts of the late suppressed blacke freers in London.

9 December, 1576. Letter from Tobie Mathew (afterwards bishop of Durham and Archbishop of York) to Sir William More, knt. Excusing himself for failing to come as soon as was appointed; marriage matters, which are proverbially cumbersome, and Mrs. Polstede's wishes compelling him to withdraw from his original purpose. From Stoughton. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1576. Eight papers touching the alehouse-keeper's trade in the parish of Bisley. Comprising petitions for or against a new alehouse, complaints of the mismanagement of a victualling house, and resolutions affecting the business of victuallers in the said parish. Also six other papers of the same kind, relating to the same trade in the following parishes:—Blackheath, East Clandon, West Clandon, Egham, Farnham, East Horseley, Merrow, Ockham, Repley, Send.

3 January, 1577. Eight letters (dated, 3 Jan., 1 Aug., 31 Aug., 16 Sept., 8 Oct., 15 Oct., 20 Dec., 22 of Dec.) from R. Creswell, a tenant on the Blackfriars estate, to Sir William More of Loseley; respecting the affairs of that property, and matters of business.

6 January, 1577. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. About the affair of James Snellinge.

4 February, 1577. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the execution of the laws "for the due obsequioun" of Lent and Fische daies."

24 March, 1577. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Enjoining the said magistrates to execute the accompanying orders issued by the Privy Council, for the restraint of engrossers of grain, and for the reduction of the prices of corn. Order has been given that the precise quantity of grain, required of sundry counties for the use of the Privy Bakehouse, shall be notified every month to the Justices of those counties (of which Surrey is one) by the "Officers of the Greene Clothe."

26 March, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Stating how the writer came to open certain letters now forwarded to Sir William by the pursuivant, who brought them to his lordship. From the writer's house at River Park.

2 April, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. About the case of some persons charged with unlawful hunting of game on Mr. Jones's ground, which in the writer's opinion "is "not worth the name of a parke." From the writer's house at River Parke.

— April 1577. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the execution of the orders of her majesty's proclamation, published not long since, "for the repression of the excessiveness of apparel used within the "realme."

22 April, 1577. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore, knt., and the other commissioners for taking musters in co. Surrey. In reply to a letter of expostulation from the same commissioners touching the expenses of "training of 150 shotte appointed within "the saide countye."

30 April, 1577. Letter from lady Margrett Howard to Sir William Mowre, knt. Begging Sir William to lend her the late Sir Thomas Carden's commission of 7 Edward VI. for taking church goods in the hundreds of Tanredge and Reigate, co. Surrey, and the accounts relating thereto, if the same can be found: a controversy having arisen between her and her neighbours as to some of the stuff then pertaining to the parish church of Reigate.

9 May, 1577. Letter from Sir William Cordell, knt. to Sir William More and Sir Thomas Browne, knts. Requesting the two last-named knights to be arbitrators in a matter of dispute between Richard Mower, plaintiff, and Knight and wife, defendants.

16 June, 1577. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to the magistrates of Surrey. Respecting an ill-advised choice of the writer's servant, Johnson a gentleman, to be high constable of the hundred of Tanridge.

3 July, 1577. Letter from Mr. J. Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Announcing that Mr. Secretary has recommended Sir William to her majesty "for the vice-presidenshep of Wales, which whither "you shall like to accept of hereafter or no, yf yt be "offred vnto you, you have good cause for his good "will to geave hym thanks for yt."

8 July, 1577. Patent, with the seal of the bishop and the seal of the dean and chapter of Winchester attached to it, of a grant by Robert bishop of the said diocese to Nicholas Burlace, gentleman, Sir William More, knight, and George More, esquire for life, with survivorship, of the office of keeper of the bishop's little park of Farnham, and of the wild animals therein.

10 July, 1577. Letter from Henry Gorynge to Sir William More, knt. Hearing that her majesty, who has lately visited Loseley, intends to visit Sussex, and pass two nights at his house in that county, the writer begs "to be aduertysed what order was taken by her "majesties officers at that tyme that her grace was with "youe, and whether youre howse were furnyshed with "her hignes stuffs, wyne, beer and other provycion, or "that you dyd provide for the same or any parte thereof." From Burton. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

20 July, 1577. Letter from W. Lewin to Sir William Moore, knt. Announcing that, as a high commissioner in causes ecclesiastical, the writer will be ready at all times to attend on his lordship of Winton, whenever "his lordship's pleasure is to sit in these parts." Dated from Lambeth.

29 July, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Announcing that Sir William Moore and Sir Richard Norton (on the writer's behalf) and Sir Henry Wallop and Sir William Kyngesmylle (on Mr. White's part) have been appointed commissioners to determine by arbitration the controversy between the writer and Mr. White of Southwanborowe "touchinge thineritaunce of certenlandes within "his lordship's "mannor of Netham nere Alton."

28 July, 1577. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt., vice-admiral of co. Sussex. Ordering (in consequence of outrages on the high seas committed by seamen proceeding in ships from English ports, and more especially of outrages perpetrated by such seamen against the persons and property of subjects of the king of Scotland) that no ship be henceforth allowed to leave a port within the said vice-admiral's jurisdiction, "vntes the owner, lader, and master "thereof, or such of them as shalbe for the tyme there "presente, doe firste put in bandes and sufficient suertye "in the some of the vallewe of the shippe and furni- "ture, to her majesty's vse, not to endommage any of "the subjectes of the realme of Scotlande."

26 August, 1577. Letter from Sir Christopher Hatton, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Respecting Sir William's favourable regard to the letter's bearer, Mr. Standen, in a matter not set forth.

16 September, 1577. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Sir William More, knt. Expressing approval of Sir William's action against the enormities of unlawful hunters.

18 Sept. 1577. Letter (holograph) from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. "After alle "hartie commendacions: Whereas the quarter Ses- "sions is to be kepte at the Towne of Rygat for the "Countie of Surrey. This shall be to desyre yow to ap-

W. J.
MOLYN
Esq.

W. M.
MOYNEUX,
Esq.

"poynte the same to be holden and kepte eyther at Croydon or ells at the towne of Guldeford for that the infeccion of the plague is so dispersed in dyvers places so that I wolde have no suche resorte of people to the town of Rygat, for thadvoyding of thinfeccon for that I do purpose to have my wief to lye at Rygat. Thus desyring yow not to faile, I bid yow farewell. From the Courte this xviiith of September, 1577. Your assured friend C. Howard.

"Though the tyme be shorte yet I pray you doe what you may in it; for my wyfe is ferfull and she menethe god wyllinge to ly in ther and to kype crystmas."

20 September, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Touching the offence of certain noblemen and gentlemen of co. Surrey, guilty of hunting lawlessly in Gilforde Parke. From Coudrey.

21 September, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. About the examination of a despoiler of game. From Cowdrey.

23 September, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. About Bygnoll and Parvisse, two offenders against the game.

26 September, 1577. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Touching complaints against the royal purveyors, and giving directions for the correction of misbehaviour in "these inferior ministers" of her majesty's household.

29 September, 1577. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. For the discovery and punishment of the "diuerse persones" who "disorderlye haunting the groundes of noblemen gentlemen and others doe secretly with nettes and other vnlawfull gynnes take partridges and phesauntes in soe greate numbers that thereby the game vniuersally is almost vtterly spoyled which in tyme past by good order have ben carefullie preserved."

3 October, 1577. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Showing that "Mr. Walloppes great sycknes" caused a delay in the arbitration at Acton on the dispute between the writer and Mr. Whightt. From Coudrey.

23 October, 1577. Copy of a letter addressed by Don John to the deputies of the States General of the Low Countries, assembled at Brussells.

28 October, 1577. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moore, knt., and John Cowper, esq. Ordering "the regarde of the forest" to be more heedful of their oath and order in assembling at Courts of Swainmote, which have of late been too generally neglected.

11 November, 1577. Letter from Thomas lord Buckehurst to Sir William Moore, knt. Recommending one Mr. Daubrey as a fit person to be Sir William's under-sheriff for cos. Sussex and Surrey.

1577. Papers (eleven leaves) exhibiting lists of the lands, and of the stock and crops on them, pertaining to the manors of Loseleye and Polsted; also a list of rents paid by tenants on the Blackfriars estate; with particulars of lady More's jointure, and other data of the private revenues of Sir William More.

22 November, 1577. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. About the writer's wishes and plans for the marriage of his daughter, whom he thinks of matching with a gentleman of Cambridge and of "Grayes in in Houlborn." The writer observes, "I doe not mislike that he sholde have moneye that sholde matche my daughter, yett wolde i have her so joine in mariage with soche an one, as hathe some staye of living, for money lightlye gotten may so lyghtlye vanish awaye." From Waltham.

December, 1577. Letter from the earl of Arundell. Beginning with "remembrance of dowtyes vnto your Lordship," and calling attention to the hindrance offered by Mr. Henry Owen and his brother to the constables of Abinger and Wootton in their execution of the Privy Council's orders for the apprehension and punishment of vagabonds and masterless men. Not dated; but shown by its contents to have been written in the above-stated month.

6 December, 1577. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Sir William More, knt. Acknowledging the receipt of letters from Sir William More.

7 December, 1577. Letter from the bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching some business the nature of which does not appear; and containing the following reference to a comet. "Touching the tayled starre when you here of the opinion of oure astrologieres, I wold learne what they finde in the "Lower heavens, for they will never ascend into the higher heaven." From Waltham.

11 December, 1577. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Sirs William More and Thomas Brown, knts., and John Cowper and Lawrence Stoughton, esqs. Requesting the said Justices of the Peace to proceed, according to their judgment, towards Henry Owen of Wooten and his brother.

3 January, 1578. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For reducing the number of badgers and laders of corn and victuals in the said county; the said magistrates being enjoined for the future to avoid licensing any excessive number of such dealers.

5 January, 1578. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William More. Touching "certaine wines and other goodes wrecked" off the coast of Sussex.

31 January, 1578. Letter from John Brodfolde the warden and his assistants of the town of Godalming to Sir William More, knt. Asking that more time may be allowed the writers, in which they may bring before Sir William certain aged witnesses in behalf of the vicar of Godalming, in the controversy between the writers and Mr. Baptist Castilion touching certain rights of the said vicar.

28 February, 1578. Letter from lord T. Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Introducing the writer's cousin, Gilbert Sackvil, to Sir William's friendly regard.

7 March, 1578. Letter from Robert Livesey to Sir William More, knt. About a woman who has beaten her own daughter almost to death.

22 March, 1578. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moore, knt. Urging that Covert, an old offender against the game laws to whom mercy has been exhibited already and in vain, may be prosecuted at the next assizes.

24 March, 1578. Letter from W. Aubrey to Sir William Moore, knt. About the grievances of a poor man who is denied his rightful money by certain brothers, name Hinde, being wealthy men and brothers-in-law to Mr. Bellingham.

26 March, 1578. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moore, knt. Directing strenuous measures to be taken against certain "hawkers and takers of phesauntes."

27 March, 1578. Draft of a letter, prepared by Sir William More for the signatures of certain Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey, and to be addressed to the Privy Council. For the information of their lordships of the said council that Thomas Moryson and John Nycholles, corn-dealers, have gone from Surrey into Berkshire, where "vpon Saterdaye laste they were at Readyng delynge with suche as were sellers of corne there."

30 March, 1578. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. With respect to Asher, the writer would rather "resigne the whole bishopricke than geve any part therof from the church." By taking a certain course the Lord Howard may have his wish, and the writer retain a good conscience.

3 April, 1578. Letter from Elizabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Respecting the dissatisfaction of her neighbours of Woking with the High Constable there.

17 April, 1578. Letter from Richard Norton to Sir William More, knt. Denying that the writer ever uttered certain calumnious speeches against Sir William.

19 April, 1578. Letter from F. Newdegate to Sir William More. Respecting a matter to be tried in the Queen's Bench on the 24th inst.

27 April, 1578. Copy of Letter from Lords of the Council to her majesty's justices of assise, cos. Essex, Herts, Kent, and Sussex. Requiring the said justices of assise to enjoin the justices of the peace of said cos. to require better sureties and pledges than heretofore in the cases of persons accused of felony, and to inflict punishment on any justice of the peace whose remissness in that respect shall occasion default.

20 May, 1578. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and divers of the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the removal "out of Shillinglye parke, Sparewood and the groundes neare adjoyning to the same the number of viiith loades of planck borde and tymbre, to the parytchis called Palmer's Crosse and Cranley Common, the same to be done and ended at or before the xvth of June next comyng, whiche stuffe is provided by Christopher Baker, gent., one of the assistants of the Quenes majesties officers of the admiralty, towards the buylding, repaying, and amending of her highnes shippes."

W. M.
MOYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

1 July 1578. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Announcing the writer's willingness to bind himself and heirs to pay xxli. per annum to the bishop of Winchester and his successors for ever, for the attainment of his purpose touching Esher, but declining to accede to the bishop's exorbitant demand for an annual rent of xxiii li. The writer intimates that if this offer be not accepted he will try to compass his object in some other way, without any regard for the bishop's feelings.

1 July, 1578. Letter from Richard Drake to Sir William More, knt. About the same business, affecting Esher, in regard to which lord Howard of Effingham makes on the same day a final offer to the bishop of Winchester.

8 July, 1578. Letter from Richard Drake to Sir William More, knt. Expressing gratitude for the satisfactory ending of the negotiations with the bishop of Winchester; and touching the bishop's need for "a licence for erection of a skelle in Farnam," which licence Lord Howard of Effingham will interest himself to obtain from her majesty.

10 July, 1578. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William More, knt. For precise information as to the accusations against and the accusers of Anne Pashe, daughter of Nycholas Pashe, who was summoned to appear before Sir William and the bishop of Wynchester on the 20th inst., to answer certain charges.

12 July, 1578. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Sir William More, knt. In behalf of the writer's servant Thomas Cobden who, together with his daughter-in-law Anne Passhe, is summoned before the High Commission at Gilforde, in respect to certain charges preferred against her out of malice to him.

16 July, 1578. Letter from the earl of Arundell to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his treatment of the writer's man with regard to his suit to Sir William and his lordship of Wynchestre.

20 July, 1578. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Magistrates of co. Surrey. Ordering a return to be made of all inns and ale-houses in the county, so that money may be raised for the repair of havens by licensing the said houses.

28 July, 1578. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Accompanying the articles against Grafton and Evans, which are to be sent to Dr. Griffith, in order that he may peruse and give his opinion on them. From Farnham Castle.

5 August, 1578. Letter from Richard Lewknor to Sir William Moore, knt. Accompanying a parcel of black cloth for mourning in honour of a lady of rank. "I haue receyved your letters dated this daye and haue accordingly sent you blackes, viz., vi yardes for your selfe, iiii yardes for my lady your wyffe, iiii yardes for my ladyes gentlewoman, and ix yardes for vi yeomen, all London measure. My laydes funeralles are appointed to be at St. Clementes without Temple barre the xixth of this moneth. I will not fayle to signifie vnto my Lord Lumley youre willingness and reddynes to satisfie his lordship's desire herein." Dated from the Myddell Temple.

13 August, 1578. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to her friend lady Moore at Loseley. Inviting lady Moore to the writer's house at Purford, where the Lord Keeper and his gentlemen are staying.

5 September, 1578. Letter from Lords of the Council to Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. For the discovery and arrest of "popishe and massyng preestes" who go about the country disguised as serving men and artificers; and for the seizure of "masse bookes, superaltaries, or anie other suche thing belonging to the masse." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 September, 1578. Letter from John Southcot to Sir William More, knt. For the enlargement from prison of one Edmond Granger now lying in the White Lyon, at the order of her majesty's commissioners for causes ecclesiastical. The writer knows no evil of the said prisoner, save that "he is coupled in matrimony with a very onchast and noughtye woman, who hath consumed and spent the most part of his goodes on some of her advowterers."

11 September, 1578. Letter from Mr. Baptiste Castilion to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Announcing that the writer has, at Sir Wylliam's motion, presented Mr. Taylor to the vicarage of Godalming, without prejudice to his (the writer's) title to the house in which the vicar lives, and his other claims.

11 and 22 August, and 27 September, 1578. Four letters from Thomas Browne, esq., of Beechworth Castle, to certain Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. Respecting matters arising out of the disputes between Sir Edward Braye of Shere and his mother-in-law, aunt to the writer. From Beechworth Castle.

22 October, 1578. Letter from Mr. Baptiste Castilion to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Touching the presentation of Mr. Taylor to the vicarage of Godalming, though the dean of Sarum was urgent that he might for this time present to the same living. From the court.

24 October, 1578. Letter from Mr. Baptist Castilion. Touching his claim to the rectory-house of Godalming, to the vicarage of which parish he has appointed Mr. Taylor. "Now for that I vnderstand Mr. Taylor is not 'resident,'" says Mr. Castilion, "at Godalmyng for lak 'of a howse. I wilbe contented to lend hym so much of 'that I have of Mr. Smyth as shall serve his turn for 'the time. . . . As my mynd is not to offer Mr. 'Taylor or to any man els any wrong, so I hope that 'my lord of Wynchester nor the Deane of Sarum nor 'the towne of Godalmyng wyll offer me none also, but 'if they do I must defend myself as well as I can." From the court.

1 November, 1578. Letter from Robert bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Domestic gossip. The writer sends his commendations to Lady More and Mrs. Wolley, if the last-named lady be still at Loseley, and adds, "God blesse youre yong married folkes."

14 November, 1578. A copy of the complaint of Edward Stoball and Hugh Haythorne of Tylford and Thomas Walker of Olsted, tenants of the manor of Farnham, and their petition to Robert bishop of Winchester for relief from the exactions of Robert Aston, gentleman. With a copy of Mr. Robert Aston's reply to the charges preferred against him.

1578. Curious Tract (of 18 closely written pages) on the rules of exchange of moneys, beginning "For the understanding of the exchange one must first learn the difference betweene the pownd tale and the pownd weight of sylver," and signed on the first page "John Dec, 1578."

1578. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Respecting Bennett Joye's scandalous cruelty to his poor son, whose sufferings at the hands of his "horrible and vnnatural" parent are mentioned with much feeling and fervour by the writer, who calls the elder Joye "a monster rather than a man."

18 November, 1578. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the grievance of one Thomas Felder, a poor man, who according to his statement is "withholden from certeyne lands." Dated from Horsley.

21 November, 1578. Letter from Mr. Baptiste Castilion to Sir William More, knt. Announcing the writer's deliberate resolution to defend his right to present to the vicarage of Godalming against the dean of Sarum.

24 November, 1578. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir William Moore, knt. Directing Sir William to ascertain whether the lord Mountague intends to fell certain timber in a wood called Inwood near Asshe-under-Gill-down; and whether in that case the writer may purchase some of the said timber for her majesty's and some for his own use.

26 November, 1578. Letter from Mr. Baptiste Castilion to Sir William More, knt. Touching the dispute as to the vicar's right to the parsonage-house of Godalming, which the writer claims as his own property.

12 December, 1578. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. "Good Sir William, I am informed that itt hathe pleased God to take the poore olde man and late Busshope of Yorke to his mercy, who in his liff tyme and lastly evin before his deathe requirid me as his old frend to give yow thanks for youre good will and like respectt had towards him. And truly besides that knowledge yow have of me, towchinging youreself, I wold yff I could as gladly requite for him any frendlines shewed by yow vnto him. Itt may bee thatt vpon his death some hard dealinge may be offered there by this fond nephew or otherwyse to the poore men his servautes in his causis. I most hertely and earnestly request yow to geve to them ayde and assistaunce only in justice and none otherwyse. I have also thoughtt good to signifie vnto yow thatt att his death he hathe willid and givin his bookes to me, which I greatlye esteame and there is cause. I pray yow therfor iff any staye should be made of them, by any order, to procure thatt they may be sene and vewid. And iff the bookes be lafull to be hadd, and he hadd power to give them me, I dowbt not butt vpon my clayme none other persoune will seeke to take my rightt from me. There is some cause besides oure beinge aquayntid that itt were nott vnlike he wold will them

W. M.
MOLYNE
Esq.

W. M. LYNEUX, Esq.
 "to me, both for that he knowith I love them, and also
 "he hathe had a proper howse of myne in London rentt
 "free these xvii yerres and moo, of goode valewe." . .
 The bishop of the foregoing letter was Nicholas Heath who, after his deprivation for adherence to the Catholic faith, lived at Chobham, where he was visited by Queen Elizabeth.

29 December, 1578. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Announcing, in reply to an enquiry, that the writer knows nothing whatever of "the nowe owner of Chobham Parke, Mr.
 "Heth"; but for the gentleman's "good vnkelles sake" the writer would respond to any entreaty from him for aid, as though he were his brother. The writer states also that Lady Latimer has written to him, even as Sir William has done, about a place which her
 "freendes thinke not meete for her in sondry re-"specttes" and which the writer long since wished to obtain for his second son.

27 January, 1579. Paper (of eight sheets) entitled "The "Notes and Articles for the Maynetaunce of the "Trewe Liberties of the Late Blacke Fryers dessolved "neere Ludgate in London." With 16 other papers of unimportant data respecting the history and privileges of the same district.

31 January, 1579. Letter from Lords of the Council to the commissioners for musters in co. Surrey. Ordering the forces of the county to be in instant readiness
 "in case any attempte of landing should be made" on the part of the enemy.

18 February, 1579. Letter from Morgan Colman to Sir William More, knt. Avowing the writer's fidelity and gratitude to Sir William.

8 March, 1579. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William More and Mr. John Cowper. Testifying to the good character of the writer's servant Anthony Vawce, who has been too severely handled by Mr.
 Justice Sothecote.

18 March, 1579. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners of Musters, co. Surrey. Touching instructions for musters in the said county, and requiring the said instructions to be zealously carried out.

24 March, 1579. Letter from Robert Moore to Lady Margrette More at Losleye. Announcing that the writer has sent her ladyship, amongst other things 16 ells of canvas and a barrel of "ollyffes." After sending his remembrances to Sir Wylliam More, his cousin George More and others, the writer adds, "It may please you
 "serteffye Sir Wylliam that my man wrytt me that "the kynges of Spayne his Armada lythe at Jeberaltera "which is beyonde the straytes a lytell and that thy
 "be in alle 30 greatte shippes and 40 gallys verye welle
 "apoynted wythe greatte provysyon of soldyours and "that the voyse goeth it is alle for Portyngall, but he "concludethe wythe these wares God grante vs quyette-
 "nes. I received this letter from Fallmothe butte
 "yesterdaye." In connection with this piece of intelligence the date of this letter (24 March, 1579) is noteworthy.

12 April, 1579. Letter from John Southcot to Sir
 William More, knt., a joint commissioner with Sir Thomas Browne and Messrs. Lyfelde and Skinner, to determine a dispute between Henry Owen, esq., and his tenants, respecting the ownership of the woods growing on the waste grounds of his manor of Wootton, co.
 Surrey. Asking for intelligence with respect to the dispute and the value of the manor of Wootton, as the writer is in treaty with Mr. Owen for a purchase of the estate.

4 May, 1579. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William More, knt. Begging "some troutes for the "stocinge of a water."

3 June, 1579. Letter from Lord Burghley, on the occasion of death of the late bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Appointing Sir William to take charge of the temporalities of the said see, during the vacation caused by the said death, and enjoining him to be vigilant for the interests of her majesty to whom the revenues and profits of the said temporalities pertain during the vacancy. Sir Henry Nevell, knt., has been enjoined to render Sir William his best assistance for the execution of this commission. In a postscript the writer directs Sir William to let William Killigrew, esq., a groom of the Privy Chamber, to have at a reasonable rent as much of the grass and meadows of the bishopric, as he may wish to occupy.

10 June, 1579. Letter from Sir Walter Mildmaye to William More, esquire. Entreating Mr. More's good offices with Mistress Polsted, on the behalf of the writer's cousin Campion, a poor widow, "for a lease of hers nere
 "Seint Mary Spittel."

30 June, 1579. Letter from William Kylygrewe to Sir William More, knt. Asking for favourable terms in respect of the forty acres of the bishop's meadow at Farnham which the Lord Treasurer has been pleased to direct should be let to the writer. Dated from the Court.

13 September, 1579. Letter from Sir Edward Horsey to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that the writer has arrested Syggins and Christopher, and required sureties of them to answer any matters laid to their charge at the next gaol delivery in Hampshire. Dated from the Isle of Wight.

14 September, 1579. Letter from Lord Burghley to Sir William More, knt. Respecting the case of Robert Richardson, keeper of Farnham Castle in the late bishop's time, who complains that he has been wrongfully deprived by Sir William of the keys and custody of the said castle. A postscript states that Lord Burghley, having seen the patent of the late bishop's grant to the complainant, is disposed to think that the said Robert Richardson "owght to enioy the sayd office of "Keper of the castell."

23 September, 1579. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that Lord Mount-ague having pardoned Thomas Stevenson for his offence, on condition that he is bound for his better behaviour towards his lordship's game, Sir William may dismiss the offender with a seasonable admonition.

25 September, 1579. Letter from lord-chancellor Bromley to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that he has detained the licence of one Harrison, "a lewde fellowe
 "and a compaignyon of roges and harlottes," and would have the fellow bound for his appearance before the writer at the beginning of next term; albeit the writer is disposed to believe the licence a genuine one.

25 September, 1579. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Requesting Sir William to enquire into the case of a simple old man who appears to have been "depely abusid by trust by "these felowes Knightt and Reade," and to afford him such protection and counsel as he may deserve and need.

3 October, 1579. Letter from Lord Cobham to Sir William More, knight. Asking for permission to use for a few days three or four of Sir William's rooms in the Blackfriars, adjoining the writer's lodgings, in order that the said writer may suitably entertain his guests on the occasion of the marriage of one of his "daughters
 "in Alloutyde."

6 October, 1579. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Giving the news of the council chamber and court. The council is occupied with the French Marriage, on which subject the writer had long speech with her majesty yesterday, when she took occasion to speak of Sir William More in terms of warm commendation. The Irish rebels have abandoned their fort and retired to the woods. Dated from the Court. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

Michaelmas, 21 Eliz. to Michaelmas, 22 Eliz. Roll of the account of William Moore, sheriff of Surrey and Sussex, of the issues of his said office between Michaelmas 21, and Michaelmas 22, of Elizabeth.

15 Oct., 22 Elizabeth to 29th Sept., 41 Elizabeth. Records of Views of Frank-pledge held on the manor of Godallmynge from 22 Eliz. to 41 Eliz. Vellum roll.

9 November, 1579. Letter from Sir Rychard Rogers, knt., to John Wolley, esq. Promising that the writer will be in London on the 24th inst. for the performance of the assurance of his daughter's jointure. From Mount-Poninges.

9 November, 1579. Letter from Sir Rychard Rogers, knt., to Sir William Moore, knt. Promising that the writer will be in London on the 24th inst. to execute the deed of jointure to his daughter, who is Sir William's daughter-in-law.

9 November, 1579. Letter from Sir Rychard Rogers, knt., to his son-in-law George More, esq. Promising that the writer will be in town on the 24th inst., for the execution of the deed of jointure on his daughter, who is the said Mr. More's wife.

29 November, 22 Elizabeth. Indenture between George Goringe of Lewis, co. Sussex, esq., late high-sheriff of co. Surrey on the one part, and William Moore of Lowesley, co. Surrey, knt., now high-sheriff: whereby the said George delivers into the custody of the said Sir William, the bodies of the prisoners whose names are under-written

19 December, 1579. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Touching "certyn "good speaches" the writer has had with her majesty about Sir William. Dated from the Court.

W. M.
 MOLYNEUX,
 Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

28 December, 1579. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Sir William More, knight. Referring to a false alarm, attended with the firing of the beacons by an error conceived through a fyre made about Portesmouth towne by hunters that had earthen a badger and thought to haue smothered him: so that it is thought that the forces sent towards the sea-syde are by this time dispersed and sent everie man to his home."

1579. Memorandum, in Sir William More's handwriting, of the engagements he made in respect to a marriage settlement on the lady, whom his son George designed to marry, when on the Friday before Whitsunday in 1579, John Wolley and the said George More declared "that they wolde take theyre jorneye into Dorsetshire to conclude a marriage betwene the said George and Ann Poyninges daughter of the ladye Rogers."

— Elizabeth. Rough draft of a letter written by Sir William More, knt., to lady Rogers, touching a proposed marriage between his son and her daughter; the said "matche having been first moved by the good L. of Lincolne." No date.

6 February, 1580. Letter from Sir Edward Horsey to Sir William More, knt. Noticing the outcry at Guilford against her majesty's licence to the writer to retail wines; and praying that the mayor of the said town may be admonished to desist from threatening Symonde Towly, who is acting under warrant of the queen's letters patent.

28 March, 1580. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Acknowledging the receipt of a letter.

4 April, 1580. Letter from Robert Erle, vicar of Ebsame, to Sir William More, knt., sheriff of Sussex and Surrey. Complaining of the vexations persecutions endured by the writer at the hands and through the evil will of Mr. Nicolas Saunder, who (since he was excommunicated on his non-appearance before Mr. Dr. Lewen to answer a charge of neglect to receive the holy communion) has declared and shown a steady purpose to ruin the complainant who insisted that the churchwardens should present the said Nicolas Saunder for his misdemeanor. Describing himself as a peaceful man, known throughout his twenty years residence at Ebsame for mildness and amiability, the writer says, "nether man nor woman caan justlye saye that I at any time caulled or reviled, sithens I came to that parishe, any man or woman, no not suche like worde as to saye knave or drabe, neither haue I smitten any maner of person, exceptinge children the whiche I haue taught in learninge, and those of my owne household, but haue bin glad alwaies to make peace and agreement betwene any of my neighbours which haue bin at any discorde." (File Kempe's Loseley MSS.)

10 April, 1580. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Thomas Lyfeld, esq. Begging Mr. Lyfeld's favourable regard to one James Hurste who is in troubles that appear to be underserved.

13 April, 1580. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Expressing sorrow for Sir William's sickness and protesting that, in reference to a matter respecting which Sir William imagined himself aggrieved, the writer has ever valued Sir William, and treated him in all matters, as his dearest friend.

14 April, 1580. Letter from Antonie Garnett to his "very loveinge frend Mr. Wolley secretary for the latyn tongue to the Quenes Majestie." Reporting what steps the writer has taken towards his master the viscount Mountague, in order to put an end to the misunderstanding which has arisen between his lordship and Sir William More from the said lord's dealing "anenst the matter of that layt murder supposed by Mellershe to haue ben committed."

27 April, 1580. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham, knt., to Sir William Moore, knt. "After my bartie commendacione, Hir Majestie having grawnted not long since to Mr. Edward Stafford the forfeitures of certayne penall statutes touchyng the makyng of Karseys the benefitt wherof hee is lyke to loose by reason of the late proclamation for the revocation of such grawntes except (as he informeth) the clothiers bee willing for avoyding the danger of promoters to compound with him and such as bee interested in his patent: my Lo. Treasurer and Sir Walter Myldmay haue here-vpon directed their letters to you to call the clothiers of your contrie before yow, and to knowe of them whether the sayd information bee true or noe: wherein for that Mr. Stafford is a gentleman whome I "would bee glad by anie good meanes to pleasure, I hartely pray you when the clothiers come before you so to deale with them as Mr. Stafford may se good effecte of your travayle and advice to be sent to my Lord Treasurer vnderstand that for my sake bee hath been pleased by you."

30 April, 1580. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Enjoining the said magistrates to cause the markets of the said shire to be sufficiently supplied with corn, offered at reasonable rates to the needier folk. The justices must insist that farmers buy and sell in open market, that they send weekly to market a proper proportion of their corn, and that the same corn, when sent to market, be vended at equitable rates.

12 May, 1580. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More and other, commissioners for taking musters, co. Surrey. Touching the execution of their commission.

2 June, 1580. Letter from the earl of Northumberland to Sir William More, knt. About the coming of Mr. Comptroller. Dated from Petworth.

7 June, 1580. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore and two others, deputy-lieutenants of the county of Surrey. Touching the grant to Edward Stafford, esq., to execute and qualify the statutes for making and ordering of karsies. Dated from Nonsuch.

12 June, 1580. Letter from John Apsley to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the requirements of a warrant for the apprehension of four persons in the co. of Sussex.

22 June, 1580. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir William More, having charge and oversight of the castle of Farnham and other temporalities of the bishoprick there. Directing that hay and other commodities, (being of the profits of the said episcopal possessions, and needful for the convenience of Mr. Wattson, dean of Winchester, the newly nominated bishop) be not sold this year, as they were in the previous year for her majesty's advantage. Dated from the writer's house near the Savoy.

27 June, 1580. Letter from Wylliam Smythe to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Announcing that the writer's lord and master, the lord Lumley, and lady Lumley, intend to be with Sir Wylliam at supper to-morrow night.

23 June, 1580. Letter from Ed. Stafford to Sir William Moore, knt. Thanking Sir William for his great goodwill and courtesy in preferring the writer's business.

30 June, 1580. Letter from John Southcot to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William (who bestows yearly a buck on the writer or any person whom he may name) to give a buck in the writer's name to the Lord Mayor of London, at his house in the same city.

7 July, 1580. Letter from Christofer Laker to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching some eighteen loads of timber which Sir William is understood to be desirous of having "for the directing (sic) of ii. barnes," and which the writer offers to sell for xv li., though he adds, "if it may stand you in stede it shall not be xl s. or iii li. that I will stick with you for."

12 July, 1580. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriffs for co. Surrey. Requiring them to take bonds of certain under-written persons for their appearance before the council at Nonesuche. Dated from Nonesuche.

28 July, 1580. Letter from Thomas lord Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Asking for the keepership of Lewes gaol for an old servant.

9 August, 22 Elizabeth. Warrant (signed by Sir William More, knt., sheriff of co. Surrey, and by Sir Thomas Browne and John Skynner, esq., two justices of the peace of the said co.) to Rycharde Gurney, one of the said sheriff's bailiffs; to summon Francis Browne of Ashe, Nicholas Saunder of Ebbeshame and John Myne of Ebbesham, gentlemen, to appear before the said sheriff and justices at Sheare on Thursday, 11th inst., at 8 o'clock a.m.

30 August, 1580. Letter from Lord Cobham to Sir William More, knight. Asking Sir William's permission that the writer's workmen, in order to prop up the same writer's decayed and tottering house in the Blackfriars, may enter the garden of Sir William's adjoining house.

31 August, 1580. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt., high sheriff of Sussex. Regretting Sir William's inability to keep an appointment.

1 September, 1580. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Speaking of a strange letter which the writer has received from the Lords of the Council, and in connection with the same

W. M.
MOLYN
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

epistle complaining of an inordinate assessment towards a subsidy. "I fynd itt," he says, "so straunge that truly I knowe nott whatt more to doo than hath bin, savinge thatt which every man directly refuseth to doo, and I yett here nott that others have done, to be ratid for horssis according to the just valewe of theyr landes as in dede and nott according to the subsidye bokes. This matter is greate, and I wold gladly walke warelye, with duty and consideration as becometh every waye."

16 September 1580. Letter from Nicholas Saunderto Sir William More, knt. Reflecting warmly on the insolence and misdemeanor of Robert Cole, vicar of Epsom, whom Sir William and Mr. Wolley are supposed to protect and encourage.

16 September, 1580. Letter addressed by John Hawkinges and William Holstocke to the Justices of the Peace of cos. Sussex, Surrey and Kent. Requesting the same justices to cause a certain "proclamation, to be mayde on the markett daye at Gylforde, Pettworth, Turnebredge and Maydstone, that those which haue any depthe to demaunde for thoffice of shyppes," for work done and service in "the takinge of timber, boarde, planke, &c., and for workmanyshyp and for caringe of the same," should apply for payment of their claims at the offices of ships in the said places. Also, on the same paper, the proclamation signed "Jamys Humfrey, apointed for the saide service." Also, on the same paper, a memorandum of directions to be observed by the said Jamys Humfrey in the execution of the said service.

26 September, 1580. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William More, knt. Directing that certain deer (the lord High Admiral having first taken as many of them as he may desire) be turned into "the forest;" and promising that the writer will pass a certain lease to Sir William at the beginning of next term.

11 October, 1580. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. A note of gossip. The writer regrets that Sir Henry Nevell could not dine with him at Thorpe, but hopes that his wife and lady Nevell may soon become better acquainted. Lord and lady Lincoln send their hearty commendations of themselves to Sir William. Dated from the court.

11 October, 1580. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to Justices of the Peace, cos. Surrey and Southampton. For the arrest and imprisonment of persons in the said counties "which terme themselves to be of y^e Familie of Love."

20 October, 1580. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William More, knt., vice-admiral of co. Sussex. For a return of all the ships and mariners fit for her majesty's service, in all the ports and havens of the said vice-admiral's jurisdiction.

5 November, 1580. Letter from Thomas Vincent to Sir William More, knt. In which the writer apologizes for not having on that day visited Sir William, on the ground of extreme weariness caused by his labour in examining rogues and suspected persons.

10 November, 1580. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for taking musters in co. Surrey. With instructions respecting the said musters.

10 November, 1580. Letter from Lords of the Council to lord Howard of Effingham, Sirs William Moore, Thomas Browne and Francis Carewe, knts., and Thomas Leyfelde, esq., commissioners for taking musters of horsemen in co. Surrey. Accompanying a new rate-book for levying horsemen in the said shire.

16 December, 1580. Letter from the marquis of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching arrangements for supplying corn to the county of Surrey in the present dearth of grain.

30 Dec. 1580. Letter from John bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Appointing Sir William More and Mr. Browne, with the assistance of godly and learned preachers, to make enquiries and take action, in compliance with enclosed letters from the Privy Council, touching the examination of "those that are fallen into the hereasye termed the famelie of love."

23 Feb. 1581. Letter from Alexander Nowell, dean of St. Paul's, to Sir William More. Thanking Sir William for the successful exertions to recover a nag stolen from the writer, whose servant will give evidence against the thief at the next session at Croydon.

25 February, 1581. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt., and other Justices of the Peace for co. Surrey. Requiring the said justices to notify to the recusants of the said county her majesty's gracious purpose to relieve them, for an adequate pecuniary consideration in the way of a yearly tribute to her exchequer, of the vexatious operation of the laws again recusants and further requiring the said magistrates to certify the council what yearly sum each of the said recusants may, in accordance with his means, be willing to pay for exemption from the "daunger of lawe, the daylie vexacioun of informours" and other ordinary circumstances and inconveniences "growing thereby vnto them." This display of royal mercy is made on the report to her highness by the Privy Council, "of the readye and willing disposition of the Principalle Recusantes of that countye" in yealding to the charge latlie layed on them for "the providing and furnishing of certayne light horsse appoynted to be leavyed for her highnes present service in the Lowe Counterys."

Last day of February, 1581. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. Requiring the said sheriff and magistrates to carry out the law against all recusants and prisoners for religion, "remaynyng in the Clincke, White Lyon and other prisons within that part of the countie."

2 March, 1581. Letter from Edmond Slyfeld, sheriff of co. Surrey, to Sir William More, knt., and other Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Announcing the writer's receipt of letters from the Privy Council.

12 March, 1581. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William More, knt. Asking a present of a greyhound from Sir William and his son, so that the writer may complete a promised gift of greyhounds.

12 March, 1581. Paper headed "The names of thos which be prisoners yn the Clynke for Religione the xiith daye of Marche, 1581." The prisoners being (1) John Brodstocke of Queene Hill, co. Worcester, yeoman, committed by the commissioners for causes ecclesiastical, 2 May, 1581; (2) Edward Shelleye, of Warminster, co. Sussex, gentleman, committed by the same commissioners, 5 July, 1581; (3) Jane Goldwyere, late of Whateley, co. Oxon, widow, committed by the same commissioners, 5 December, 1580.

18 March, 1581. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Setting forth the circumstances of the steady decay of the game in a certain park in the keeping of a man named Luff, who is incompetent for his office by reason of his age, and who but for his oldness and long service would have been discharged four years since, when at a view only five hundred deer were found in the park. At length Luff has received order to leave the place, to which the writer means to appoint the best man for it that he can find.

March, 1581. Letter from Thomas Brown, esq., to Sir William More, knt. About a county meeting at Lethered, and business (vaguely referred to) connected with the prisons and prisoners of co. Surrey.

16 April, 1581. Letter from Sir Thomas Browne to Sir William More, knt. Touching a commission forwarded by the writer to Sir William, from Mr. Howard and by the hands of Sir William's son. Dated from the Blackfriars.

1 May, 1581. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William Moore, knt. About the loss of a portion of a certain xx li. delivered by the writer's servant, William Prosser, to Thomas Edwards, and the reasons for questioning Edwards's honesty in the matter.

4 May, 1581. Letter from John, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that, in consequence of his grievous ill health, the writer trusts to his chancellor "for y^e visitation."

6 May, 1581. Letter from Antoine Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Giving particulars of the writer's means to Sir William, who is asked thereupon to assess him fairly to the subsidy.

26 May, 1581. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir Henry Nevile, knt., and Sir William Moore, knt. About a recent despoiling and unlawful hunting of deer in Windsor forest.

28 May, 1581. Letter from Anne countess of Warwick to lady More. Begging lady More to act as the writer's proxy at the christening of Sir William and the same lady More's grandson; the writer having consented to join with the lord-admiral and the earl of Leicester in the christening of the infant. The countess adds, "Ther shalle a servant of my owne attend yow with my guifte, which I praie yow yow present on my behalf vnto the mother, beinge sory that it is no better."

14 June, 1581. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt. Directing him to make further enquiries respecting the recent "kyllyng of certain deare" in the forest of Windsor.

16 June, 1581. Letter from R. Goade to Sir William More, knt. Introducing to Sir William "an honest

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

"sober yonge man and for his time a good towardlie
"scholler in diuinitie," who seems to be about to enter
Sir William's family, either as chaplain or tutor.

5 July, 1581. Letter from Henry Browne the younger to Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knts. Stating how the writer has been wrongfully presented in counties to which he does not belong, and made to appear before the High Commissioners: and praying the two magistrates to protect him to the fullness of their power from such vexation. From Saynte Marye Overes.

8 July, 1581. Papers relating to a female recusant in the parish of Egham, co. Surrey "one Jane Hornyall "alias Hornifall alias Furnyfall, gentlewoman, who "sojourneth with Barbara Grene widow, gentlewoman,
"and who refuseth to come to diuineservice to the parishe
"churche of Eggham or elleswhere, and hath continued
"so thies iiiii yerres or thereabouts." 1. Answers by John "Standon, vicar of Egham, and James Stelhouse and Roger Crosse, churchwardens of the same parish, to certain articles exhibited to them in writing. (2) Depositions of the same vicar and churchwardens, and Anthony Cowper, high constable of the hundred of Godley, before Sir William More, knt. and other magistrates, respecting the said Jane Furnyfall.

12 July, 1581. Letter from Sir John (Mr. Justice) South-cot to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for the present of a buck, which the writer wishes to be sent to his house in Carter Lane; and expressing surprise that Sir William has been left out of the commission of the peace, since his shrievalty. The writer was made a Judge of the King's Bench in 1562.

25 July, 1581. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Begging for a remission of the taxation assessed on John Verges, an old servant of the earl of Lyncoln; the said John Verges being rated above his means to the subsidy.

12 August, 1581. Letter from Richard Lewknor to Sir William More, knt. Asking Sir William (in accordance with a promise) to send the writer "a peece of redd
"deare against" his "reading."

26 August, 1581. Letter from Sir Christopher Hatton
knt. to Mr. Wolley. Announcing her majesty's concern for the cause Mr. Wolley's absence from court, and enjoining him, in her name, to take every possible precaution against the contagion of the small-pox, to which he has, with his wife, been exposed. The writer adds, "Cambrey is taken and victualed by Monst., who
"hathe likewise put his person with other good forces
"into the towne. I leue the circumstances for they are "too longe too wright. I pray God they be good, or "at least voyde of euill."

10 September, 1581. Letter from Wyllyam lord Lawarre to Sir William Moore, knt. Respecting the case of John Dartenolle of Tarring, a clothier, some of whose goods (being remnants of pieces of cloth bought in London) have been seized, for their want of the ulnager's seal, by Sir William More's servant, Robert Bridger. The writer certifies that John Dartenolle is an honest man, and in this matter only the victim of the London draper of whom he bought the goods. From Offington.

18 September, 1581. Letter from Symon Trippe, physician, to Mr. George More. "I am hartely sorry for "the suspected mischance happened at Losley, but I "hope there is more feare than hurt, and yet in these "cawses it is good to mistrust the worst. As for my "comming to yow vpon Wensday next, Verely my "promise being past to anold Patient of mine, a very "good gentlewoman and M^r. Clerk which now lieth
"in great extremity, I cannot possibly be with youe
"till Thursday, on Fryday and Saterday the signe wilbe
"in the heart, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in the "stomake, during which tyme it wilbe no safe dealing "with Physicke Preseruatiue. So that there wilbeno
"good dealing with your ordinary Phisicke, vntill
"wensday come seuenight at the nearest, and from "that tyme forwards for 15 or 16 dayes passing good.
"In which time yf it will please yow to let me vnder-"stand of yowr convenient opportunity and leasure, I "will not faile to come along presently with your "messenger. Howbeit yf this turn be not supplied by "some other in the meane space, I had rather it should "be 2 or 3 dayes after Michelmas, because nowe I am "vnterly vnfurnished of horses, and cannot hire any for "money, but such jades as will not cary a man 10 miles
"oute of the towne without tiring; and I meane now at "Way Hill faire, whiche shalbe be at Michaelmas, to
"store myself againe for my owne saddell at the leaste."
From Winchester. (Vide Kempe's "Loseley MSS.")

19 September, 1581. Letter from the earl of Leycester to Sir William More of Loseley. Introducing to Sir

William's favourable regard "this bearer," who has bought the widow Farrant's lease of a house in the Blackfriars, in which house "he means to practise the "queens children of the chappel, being now in his "chardge, in like sort as his predecessor did for the "better trayning them to do her Maiestie service."

7 October, 1581. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Touching Edward Beswicke's petition for a lease of a piece of crown land "whiche Sir "William hathe the dealing of." Dated from the writer's house at Pirford. Together with Edward Beswicke's petition for her ladyship's mediation in the matter.

15 October, 1581. Letter from Walter Covert to Sir William More, knt. Giving a good character for honesty to a servant now charged with some crime. Dated from Slangham.

22 October, 1581. Letter from the lords of the council to Sir William More, knight, vice-admiral of Sussex, with orders for the restraint of disaffected persons and others who leave the realm and cross the sea without licence.

October, 1581. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Announcing that Mr.
Secretary has promised to do his best in Sir William's business with the queen, who is, however, "for this tyme
"owte of taste as he termeth yt for sutes." The lord admiral desires to have Sir William's great white greyhound, but is "verey loth to begge y^t." Dated from the Court.

3 November, 1581. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the misconduct of certain persons who have hunted unlawfully in the queen's park of Beflett. Date from the Courte.

10 November, 1581. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knight. Announcing that on his way to London the bishop "wilbe bould" to visit Loseley, and rest there on Thursday night next.

16 November, 1581. Letter from Lord Cobham to Sir William Moore, knight. Entreating Sir William not to build a stable against his common conduit in the Black-friars, to the annoyance of his neighbour, the writer.
Dated from the Blackfriars.

1 December, 1581. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. For Sir William's better information respecting the wood in Watercombe, which the writer bought of the queen's majesty; and also for the meet punishment of certain lawless hunters in Guildforde Parke.

19 December, 1581. Letter from Sir Thomas Palmer, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Begging that the letter's bearer, Jeremie Legate, may be freed from all further trouble respecting a buck killed in Estdeune park.

21 December, 1581. Letter from Henrie Sledd to Sir William More, knt. Offering to buy Sir William's carps of him at from xii d. to xvi d. a fish. (Vide Kempe's "Loseley MSS.")

24, 26, 27, 28, 29 Elizabeth. Lists of Recusants, presented and indicted at General Sessions of the Peace held in co. Surrey. Comprising one hundred and twenty names.

27 January, 1582. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir William More, knt. Summoning Sir William to a conference with the writer concerning the Court of Wards.

30 January, 1582. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Touching a cause in the Court of Wards; and announcing that, as soon as she can get a letter, the writer's wife will go to Thorpe, and after tarrying there a few days move on to Loseley.

9 February, 1582. Letter from J., bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to examine any persons who may be charged before him with writing or aiding in the composition of "a slan"derous byll wrytten and directed to M^r Germaine," the newly appointed preacher at Farnham.

7 March, 1582. Letter from Anthony viscount Mount-ague to Sir William Moore, knt. Making reference, amongst other matters, to "the continuance of this "counterfeytt cawse in that inconstantt vayne body
"Heathe, a matter moche feared by his late vnckel in "his liff, and a meane to bringe him to bee a spoile to "others by whome he is nowe vnder-hand guided. He "is ouer like his folishe vngratefull father who, as he "wanted all thankfulness to him he was most bownd
"vnto, so did he in his liff spoile all, and, if he had "liuid, wold have bin litell the better for this. And so "I beleue itt will fall owtt with his sonne."

22 March, 1582. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Begging that the son of Robert

W. M.
MOLYN
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

Harmes may be excused from serving at the next musters.

29 March, 1582. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Thomas Leyfeld, esq. Begging Mr. Leyfeld to award proper punishment to the persons who have unlawfully hunted in Beeflet park.

10 April, 1582. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for the subsidie, co. Surrey. Giving instruction for levying the tax.

13 April, 1582. Letter from Simon Tripp to Sir William More, knt. Intimating that, though Sir William have 6 or 8 or 10 loads of hay yearly from the Farnham Castle meadows, the bishop will not grant him the request, in spite of the writer's mediation in Sir William's behalf.

17 April, 1582. Letter from Edmond Slyfeld, sheriff co. Surrey, to Sir William More, knt., and others, magistrates co. Surrey. Touching the letter of the same Justices of the Peace, for carrying out the law, at the next Quarter Sessions at Reigate, against recusants awaiting trial.

11 May, 1582. Letter from John, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. About certain disorderly and unlawful hunting in Farnham park.

8 July, 1582. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioner for the subsidie, co. Surrey. Giving directions for assessing and levying the same.

16 July, 1582. Letter (signed Elizabeth Poulet and George Poulet) to Sir William More, knt. In behalf of a poor man named Hampton, at the intercession of Elizabeth Poulet's mother, who is greatly interested in him. The said Elizabeth Poulet was daughter of Sir William Cassel, knt., and widow of William Poulet created lord St. John of Basing (35 Hen. VIII.) and Marquis of Winchester (5 Edw. VI.).

21 July, 1582. A note of all suche as are at this presente remayninge prisoners in the Marshalsey, being committed for their disobedience in Religion. The list gives the names of thirty-eight prisoners.

23 July, 1582. List of "Prisoners in the Clink for Religion," comprising five names, the first of them being "Edward Shellye of Worminghurst yn the countye of Sussex gent."

23 July, 1582. A list of the prisoners for religion in the custody of Anthony Thorpe, keeper of the Whyte Lyon in Southwarke. The list gives the names of thirteen persons, two of whom are Peter Tychborne of Porchester, co. Southampton, gent., and Henry Shelley of Maple Derham.

22 August, 1582. Letter (holograph) from J., bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Touching a widow woman, an inhabitant of Shakelford, brought before the bishop "for an abvsr of people in these parts "as well as in the practize of phisyk and surgery as "also in other practizes tending to the discovery of "witche."

3 September, 1582. Letter from Robert earl of Leicester to Sir William Moore, knt. Announcing that a quarrel, of a threatening character, has been begun between Mr. Henry Worthe and the writer's servant Henry Knevett of the one part, and Sir Edward Sackville of the other part: and instructing Sir William to call the said gentlemen before him and do his best to arrange their dispute. If necessary, the magistrate must bind the disputants to keep the peace.

6 September, 1582. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir William Moore, knt. Directing Sir William to proceed to a sale of the goods, leases, and other effects, of Mr. Abingdon the late cofferer, so that "the poore creditors "may be answered." Dated from the writer's house at Theobalds.

8 September, 1582. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Making an appointment for sport "on tuesday nextt att nyne of "the clocke in the forest of Wolmer, where," says the writer, "I have and will further apoynt (with those "thatt moche desyer itt) suche sportt as maye bee to "your dogges and those in your companye." From Coudrey.

13 September, 1582. Letter from Lord Burghley to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the needful repairs of Chertsey bridge, and the cost thereof: the writer holding that, though the abbot in former time maintained the bridge, the whole of the said cost should not fall on the queen's majesty, as she has only "a small "part of y^e possessions."

30 September, 1582. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for musters, co. Surrey. Touching the inefficient state of the demilaunces and lighthorsemen of the county.

8 October, 1582. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Expressing the writer's concern at a reported outbreak of sickness at Loseley House, and offering Sir William the use of Gifford manor-house till the distemper shall be abated. From Coudrey.

17 October, 1582. Letter from Sir Thomas Browne, knt., to Sir William More, knt., at Chobham. Touching a controversy between the writer and Messrs. Richard and Edward Abbington, in respect to which Sir William More and Mr. Skinner are invited to be arbitrators. Dated from Bechworth Castle.

18 November, 1582. Letters from Mr. John Skynner to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the negotiations for a marriage between Mr. Mathewe Browne, son of Sir Thomas Browne, with a daughter of the late Mr. Abbington, the late cofferer.

18 Nov. 1582. Letter from John, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. About timber felled in the bishop's wood called Watercombe, at Churte in the parish of Fremsham, by the lord Mountaigne's servants. Dated from the bishop's house at Wolvesey.

23 December, 1582. Letter from John, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his pains touching a matter in controversy between the bishop and lord Mountaigne.

1582. Paper headed "Matters to bee considered of "touchinge the communicacion of marriage between "Sir Thomas Brownes sonn and my sister:" the marriage in question being a proposed match between Mr. Mathewe Browne, son and heir of Sir Thomas, and the daughter of the late Mr. Abbington.

1582. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Proposing that Sir William should postpone an appointment and take it on his homeward journey, the writer "esteeminge itt over "shortt warninge to give to the forest agaynst to- "morrow morning."

11 January, 1583. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham, knt., to Sir William More, knt., and others, magistrates, co. Surrey. Directing the magistrates to bind one Hardy over to answer at the next assizes for his undutiful speeches in maintenance of the cause, for which Bodd and Slade were lately executed at Winchester.

11 January 1583. Letter from the earl of Lincoln to Sir William More, Sir Henry Weston, and others, &c. Touching the supplication of the inhabitants of Sende against "Mr. Slyfelde for stoppage vp the highe-waye "throughe Papeworth."

22 January 1583. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore, knt., and others. For the apprehension of "the person of one Egwar . . . who ys "vehemently suspected and charged with matter of "piracye, and ys thought to be lurking either in Surrey "or Sussex."

24 January, 1583. Muster Rolls of men serving in the trained bands of co. Surrey, belonging to the following parishes in the hundred of Woking in the said shire:—West Horsleye, East Horsleye, East Clandon, West Clandon, Merowe, Ockham and Wisleye, Rypley and Sende, Wokinge and Sutton, Stoke, Guildforde, Wanburrowe, Ashe, Purbrighte, Worpleston, Windlesham, and Bagshot. In perfect condition.

25 January, 1583. Muster Rolls of men serving in the trained bands of co. Surrey, belonging to the following parishes of the hundred of Farnham in the said shire:—Seale and Tongham, Tylforde, Wrekelsam, Batshotte, Frensham, Charte, Longe Bryde (Farnham Downe), Runweeke, Runvale, Elstede. In perfect condition.

27 January, 1583. Muster Rolls of men serving in the trained bands of co. Surrey, belonging to the following parishes of hundred of Godley in the said shire:—Chobham, Horsell, Bysley, Byflett, Egham, Thorpe, Frimley, Chartesy. In perfect condition.

28 January, 1583. Muster Rolls of men serving in the trained bands of co. Surrey, belonging to the following parishes in the hundred of Godalminge in the said shire:—Hambleton, Thursley, Chidingefolde, Hasylmere, Witleye, Putnam, Artington, Compton, Pepperharowe, Godalminge, Tewersley, Catteshull, Farncombe, Bynscombe, Hurtmere, Shackleforde, Eshinge, Laborne. In perfect condition.

29 January, 1583. Muster Rolls of men serving in the trained bands of co. Surrey, belonging to the following parishes of the Hundreds of Blackheathe and Wootton in the said shire:—Shalforde, Bramlye, Womershe, Dunsfovlde, Alfovlde, Cranlye, Ewhurste, Capel, Dorkinge, Wootton, Abingworthe, Ockleye, Aldburye, Shere, and St. Martha upon the Hill. In good condition.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

14 February, 1583. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Enjoining Sir William to put on their oaths certain persons, whose suspiciously procured information caused him to require bonds for good behaviour from "Symon Boies of God-
" almaynge seruant to Mr. Baptiste one of the grones
" of the Quenes Maesties Privy Chamber," and to re-examine them as to the truth of their said testimony;
when, should they refuse to be sworn or fail to sustain their evidence, Sir William is further instructed to discharge the said Symon of his bonds.

2 March, 1583. Letter from Sir William More, knt., to Lord Howard of Effingham. Touching the lewd behaviour of Symon Boyes, Mr. Baptiste's man, towards Mr. Tayler, the vicar of Goadming; the said offender having been examined by the writer, at Lord Howard's direction, in the presence of the warden and other chief inhabitants of the town of Godalming.

25 March, 1583. Letter from John bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. For the execution (in the county of Surrey, and more especially in the deanery of Stoke, wherein Sir William resides), of the wishes of the Privy Council "for the furtheraunce of a " contribution to be levied for the relief of the decayed
" cittie of Geneva," which undertaking is described as "a christian and charitable relief." From Winchester.

2 April, 1583. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. About Sir William's trouble in correcting abuses of her majesty's ground at Gilford; and about the incompetence of Luff, the aged and discharged keeper of Gilford park, who has been succeeded in the keepership by Scarlett.

5 April, 1583. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Congratulating Sir William on his "litell juell's" recovery from a severe sickness. From Coudrey.

9 April, 1583. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for taking musters in co. Surrey. Acknowledging the pains taken by the said commissioners in the execution of their trust, and urging the necessity for further travail in a perilous time to raise the number and efficiency of the trained bands.

3 May, 1583. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William More, at Loseley, who is entreated to give information as to the proceedings on the score of religion against Mistress Cornwallis, whose husband has been to the writer, and threatens to complain to the queen about the lady's wrongful prosecution.

15 May, 1583. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to his good servant Christopher Gowgh at Pirford. Touching "the disorders committed by Braie and others in hunt" ing in Horsley parke."

21 May, 1583. Letter from the countess of Lyncoln to her servant Christopher Gowghe. Directing, on the writer's second thoughts, that all persons concerned in the recent lawless hunting in Horsley park be committed for trial, Sir William More taking bonds with sureties for their appearance in court to answer respecting the matter.

21 May, 1583. Letter from the countess of Lyncoln to her servant Christopher Gowghe at Pirforde. Approving all Sir William More's recent proceedings against certain disorderly and lawless hunters in Horsley park; but insisting that, with the exception of Chyttie, who has a wife and poor children, and of Mellishe, who disclosed the matter, the ringleaders in the business should be sent to prison for their proper punishment, for example's sake.

22 May, 1583. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moore, knt., and — Cooper, esq., verderers of Windsor Forest. For the regular holding of "the xl daye courtes," to the recent neglect of which the late disorders of Windsor Forest are largely attributable.

23 May, 1583. Letter from Sir Christopher Hatton, knt., to Sir William More, knt., dated from the court at Greenwich. Announcing the Queen's purpose to make her progress shortly into Sussex, and also her Majesty's intention to visit Sir William's house in her way on the 18th of July. This notice is given to Sir William More so that he may have his "house well ordered and "made fitt to receave her."

4 June, 1583. Letter from J. bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. About the queen's intended visit to Farnham, on which occasion the writer hopes he may have, through Sir William's mediation, the use of Mrs. Morgan's house.

5 June, 1583. Letter from Tobie Matthew (afterwards bishop of Durham and archbishop of York) to Sir William More, knt. In defence of the letter's bearer
"S^r Hooke my neighbour in Corpus Christi College,

"one whom I haue known a good while and haue had
"of his learning good experience," who has been unjustly reported to his father and to Sir William as being "a gamster, a keeper of companye, and vnscholar-
"like in apparell." From Christchurch, Oxon.

13 June, 1583. Letter from J., bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Expressing the writer's satisfaction at arrangements touching Mr. Morgan's and Mr. Joye's houses.

15 June, 1583. Letter from John, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Touching Sir William's negotiations for a house which the writer will gladly have, on the occasion of her majesty's visit to Farnham. Dated from the writer's house at Wolverley.

1 July, 1583. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt., and others, magistrates at Guylford. Requesting that a newly elected high-constable for the hundred of Embley Bridge may be sworn in. Dated from the writer's house at Pirford.

5 July, 1583. Letter from J., bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knt. Acknowledging Sir William's letter of information "that a stay is made of all "Progresses, especially of that into Sussex;" and expressing the opinion, "There hath ben some bad
"dealing at Dunkerk, otherwyse yt cowlde not have ben
"lost so soun after Mons^r departure."

4 August, 1583. Letter from Sir Christopher Hatton, knt., to Sir William Moore, knt. Announcing that her majesty "hath an intention, about ten or twelve dayes
"hence to visite youre house by Guylforde, and to "remayne there some foure or fyue dayes;" of which intention Sir William is advertised in order that he may see his house "well ordered and kept sweete and cleane,
"to receave her Hyghnes whensoever she shalbe pleased "to see it." From Otlandes. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 August, 1583. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Expressing concern for the danger and discomforts of Sir William's "very painful and wett journey."

9 August, 1583. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham, knt., to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging that one Henry Holloway may be licensed by the magistrates of co. Surrey, to buy a certain number of quarters of wheat and barley weekly at Farnham market, so that his purchases do not exceed the limits of his licence. Dated from Otlandes.

11 August, 1583. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for some timely information.

24 August, 1583. Letter from Sir Christopher Hatton, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that (the quick advent of the cold season having caused an abridgement of the Queen's journey) her Majesty has decided to dine at Okynge on the 27th inst., "and that "nyght to goo to bedd to youre house." A postscript adds, "Her majesty meaneth not in this journey that "the sheriffe of the Sheere shall attende on her, neuer-"theles, for that I take it she wylle passe through
"Guylford, it shall not be amisse that yourself,
"accompanied with M^r Lyfield and some other gentil-
"men there aboutes doo prepare, at that tyme, to geue
"yours attendance there vpon her majesty." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 August, 1583. Letter from Lords of the Council to the commissioners for taking musters of horsemen, co. Surrey. Containing instructions for taking the musters and maintaining the horses of the shire.

26 August, 1583. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Respecting an appointment for viewing and hunting the game in Gilford parke.

31 August, 1583. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William More, knt. Touching arrangements for musters, and inviting Sir William to visit the writer with the other commissioners, so that they may see their "best
"doges out runne by slothfull deare." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

20 September, 1583. Letter from Ursula lady Walsingham to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to move the mayor and his brethren of Guldeford to do justice to her servant Sampford, who has been wrongfully reported of and discourteously treated in that town.

23 September, 1583. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Expressing satisfaction that Sir Wylliam has afforded requisite information to the lord-admiral; and declaring the writer's readiness to meet Sir Wylliam and Mr. Lyfeld wherever they may appoint.

W. M.
MOLYN
Esq.

W. M.
LYNBUX,
Esq.

24 September, 1583. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Touching the writer's promise that any person, being his friend, should on Sir Wylliam's nomination have Estdene park.

10 October, 1583. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Enclosing a letter which his lordship received yesternight from the Privy Council, and begging Sir Wylliam to communicate the contents of the same letter to "the rest of his company."

16 Nov. 1583. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Sir William Moore, knight, vice-admiral of Sussex. Touching the recent wreck on the coast of Kent of a French vessel laden with wines, and directing that such of the said wines as have been taken on the Sussex coast be restored to the owner of the vessel.

25 Elizabeth. Receipt of William Engler for xxi li. paid by Sir William Moore, knt., in respect of the farm of subsidies and the ulnage of marketable cloth, co. Surrey and Sussex.

24 November, 1583. Letter from lords of the council to Sir William More, knight, vice-admiral of Sussex. Ordering "bondes to be taken in good summes of money" to her maiesties use of all the owners and masters of "shippes and vesselles dwelling within or neer anie of the hauens and creekes" in Sir William's jurisdiction, "that they shalle take no passengers into their shippes or vesselles to be conveyed ouer the seas out of this realme, but such as shalbe licensed by her maiestie or by the lords of the counsell &c. &c." to leave the realm.

18 November, 1583. Letter from Sir Wylliam More, knt., to Gregory Lovell, esq., cofferer of her majesty's household. Touching certain warrants, issued by one Rowdon, the yeoman-purveyor of her majesty's household, for levying in the writer's division of co. Surrey, twenty great hogs for provision of the said household; which demand the writer thinks extraordinary and irregular. Also, the reply of Mr. Gregory Lovell, insisting on compliance with the requisition of the yeoman-purveyor.

10 December, 1583. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging Sir William to send to the writer a "perfect certidicatt of the mustars" of the horsemen in Surrey.

16 December, 1583. Copy of a letter from Sir Wylliam More, knt. Setting forth (for the instruction of some person whose name does not appear) all the circumstances, connected with the late Mr. Richard Polsted's death and his disposal of his estate, still resting in the writer's memory; the communication being made in explanation and completion of certain evidence on the same matters, lately given by the writer before certain commissioners in Southwarke.

8 December, 1583. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William More, knt. Touching the negotiation with Mr. Johnes, for his retirement from Whitley park in favour of the writer's servant, Robert Tudder.

19 December, 1583. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to make enquiries respecting some recent spoyles said to have been done by Mr. Johnes men in Whitley park; and giving particulars of the arrangements which the writer, at the request of his friends the countesses of Warwyke and Lyncoln, and in behalf of his servant Robert Tudder, has made with Mr. Johnes.

30 December 1583. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Lincoln, Lord Montague, and others, commissioners of musters, co. Surrey.

30 December, 1583. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for taking musters in co. Surrey. For raising the number and effectiveness of the forces of the said shire, so that they may competent defend the same in case of invasion.

1583. Letter from John Rowe to Sir William More, knt. Touching the matters of difference between Sir Thomas Browne and the Messrs. Abbingdon.

3 February, 1584. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir W. Moore, knt. In which the writer, on receiving the office of Lord Admiral, appoints Sir William to act as his deputy, as Custos Rotulorum of co. Surrey; Sir William having held the same office as deputy to the writer's "very good lord the late lord" admiral.

1 March, 26 Elizabeth. Inscrucious and orders given by the Lordes of the Councelle and others having speciall commission from her majesty &c. &c. . . . for the execucioun of the Lawes and Statues of the Realme, made for kepinge of horses and geldinges for service, and for horses and mares for encrease and breed. To suche persons as are by virtue of the forsaid commission deputed in the countie of Surrey to execute the said statutes.

30 March, 1584. Letter from Richard Burton to Sir William More, knt. Accompanying a letter from the Privy Council upon business that requires the writer to confer with Sir William.

12 April, 1584. Letter from Lords of the Council to the commissioners of musters of the co. of Surrey. Requiring intelligence respecting the forces of the shire.

23 April, 1584. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Touching a letter from the Privy Council, which the writer returns to Sir William with thanks.

24 April, 1584. Letter from Nycholas St. John to Sir William More, knt. Touching the affray between George Best and the writer's son Oliver St. John, in which the said George was slain, the said Oliver being in consequence found guilty of manslaughter by a coroner's jury. The writer informs Sir William that the enemies of Oliver St. John design to exhibit new bills at this sessions in order that they may get a verdict of murder against him.

27 April, 1584. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. and Mr. Cowper, esq. Begging Sir William and Mr. Cowper to dispatch as privately as possible a certain business, nearly touching the writer's brother and his wife, respecting which his lordship at Leycester has been duly informed.

5 May, 1584. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the commissioners for taking musters, co. Surrey. Introducing to the said commissioners John Shute, gentleman, appointed to be muster-master to the force of soldiers lately levied in the said shire; and suggesting that the considerable charges of powder, lead, and match, requisite for the training of the same men, should be defrayed by a general contribution of the county.

21 May, 1584. Letter from lords of the Council to the sheriff and commissioners for musters, co. Surrey. Containing instructions for holding musters and raising the efficiency of the forces of the county.

22 May 1584. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Commending to Sir William's favour one of the writer's old servants, who is about to take service from Sir William. From Cowdry.

24 May, 1584. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Mayor and Magistrates of London. Requiring them to aid Sir Edward Stafford and his deputies in the execution of a grant made to him, by letters patent, of authority to moderate the statutes respecting "the dressinge and orderinge of karseys."

16 June, 1584. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging the dismissal from muster-service of two of the writer's servants, Robert Mathewe and Humphrey Bird, whom he always employs "aboute his carryes at every remove to the courte." Dated from the Courte.

26 June, 1584. Letter from Lord Burghley to Sir William Moore, knt., ulnager of Surrey and Sussex. Requiring Sir William to notify all his times and places for sealing "karsies" to Sir Edward Stafford, knt. who has received authority under letters patent to execute and qualify the statutes for the dressing and ordering of "karsies."

28 June, 1584. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. About a cause in law affecting the interests of Lord Southampton and the writer's son, for which the writer would fain "procure" an "equall trial," free from "indirect practises."

18 August, 1584. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Lumley and the rest of the commissioners for musters of horsemen in co. Surrey. For raising the number and efficiency of the horse of the said shire.

1 September, 1584. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging Sir William, as one who has often served as a sheriff, to send the writer a good form of a strict bond, to be given by a bailiff of a hundred to a sheriff of a county. The letter is written and the information sought in the interest of "Sir Thomas Lucas, presentlie Sheriff" of co. Essex.

11 September, 1584. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln (described in the endorsement as "my lord admyrall") to Sir William More, knt., and others, commissioners of musters of footmen. Begging that the writer's friend George Parvyshy may be acquitted by the commissioners of "all such armour as he is nowe charged with." Dated from Pirford.

28 September, 1584. Letter from John archbishop of Canterbury to the Lord Chamberlayne. Begging that the letter's bearer, Mr. Marshe, one of the writer's servants, may be excused from furnishing a light horse

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

and armor, as he hath not xxv li. a year from land, and the fee of his office fall far short of that sum.

2 October, 1584. Letter from T. lord Buckehurst to Sir William Moore and others, magistrates co. Surrey. In behalf of the writer's old servant who seeks protection from them.

23 October, 1584. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague of Lady Moore at Loseley. Acknowledging the receipt of a letter, and expressing the writer's willingness to respect the lady's wishes, and concede to her some right that is the occasion of the correspondence.

26 Oct. 1584. Letter from the earl of Lincoln and lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More and others, gentlemen of Surrey. Recommending Mr. Secretary Walsingham and Mr. William Howard as fit persons to represent the county of Surrey in the next parliament. Dated from Barbican.

20 December, 1584. Letter from Jamys Croft to the Warden and principal inhabitants of Goddalmynge. Avowing that he has no wish to protect one John Edwardes against just claims.

1584. Paper of Latin verses headed "Carmina quædam puerorum Coll: Wint: excerpta ex iis quæ ad 'D: Episcopum Wint: scripta sunt. A.D. 1584.'"

1584. Account of moneys received and disbursed by the bailiff for Sir William More, constable of Farnham Castle, "from the festiuall day of St. Michael the chanelle to the festiuall day of thannunciation of the Virgin Mary."

27 January, 1585. Letter from John Northe, a tenant on the Blackfriars estate, to Sir William More of Loseley, knight, on matters of business relating to the said estate. Three later letters of a similar character from the same person, dated 10 October, 6 November, and 2 December, 1585.

19 February, 1585. Orders of the Privy Council, dated from Greenwich, "To be put in execution by the Justices of Peace in the seuerall counties of this realme for the restraynte of eatinge and killinge of fleshe in the tyme of Lent and dayes prohibited."

2 March, 1584-5. Particulars of the last speech of William Parry, uttered on the occasion of his execution at Westminster.

5 March, 1585. Certificate of Richard Edde alias Ede, porter of the marshalsey, as to his discoveries or suspicions respecting the wealth of Mr. Humfrey Kempe, a Cornish man, Mr. More and Mr. John Grey, recusant. The writer thinks "they had rather give xx li. a yeare to the maintenance of Seminarie Priestes than one penie to her majestie."

7 March, 1585. Return made by William Gardynere of all the Recusantes now prisoners in the Kinges Benche the viiith daie of Marche, 1585. The number of such prisoners being 40, of whom 16 are priests.

9 March, 1585. (1) A Note of the seuerall livings of such recusantes nowe remayninge in the countie of Surrey as are of habilitie, and of such sommes of money as they offer to paie yearlie into her maiesties receipt to her Highnes vse sett downe vnder their handes the ixth of March, 1585. (2.) Also, on the same paper, A Note of suche recusantes nowe remayninge in the seuerall gaoles of the Whyte Lyon, the Marshalsey, the Bench and the Clincke in the countye of Surrey, as by their owne declaracioun have neither livinges nor goodes. (3.) Also, on the same paper, A Note of the names of such recusants conteyned in the schedule inclosed in their Honorable Lordships' letter, as are either dead or not nowe remayninge in the countie. From the first of these notes it appears that some of the recusants of considerable property were willing to buy immunity from prosecution with annual payments varying between a fourth and fifth of their yearly incomes:—thus, Robert Beckett of Menhennett, co. Cornwall, with 40*l.* per ann. offered a tribute of 10*l.*; Thomas More of Lowleighon, co. Essex, with 20*l.* per ann. offered a yearly tribute of 5*l.*; John Sowthcott of Westham, co. Surrey, with 160*l.* yearly, offered an annual payment of 40*l.*; Sir William Catesbye of Lambeth, co. Surrey, with an annual income of 500*l.* offered a tribute of 100*l.*

10 March, 1585. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore. Announcing that on his way to London the writer will rest at Sir William's house at Loseley.

10 March, 1585. Letter (holograph) from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore of Loseley. Apologizing for not coming to Loseley, on the writer's journey through Surrey, according to engagement, as he is "forced to travaile in his horslitter and fears the

"fowlness of the waie and hardness of the passage for said litter."

9 April, 1586. Letter, under Queen Elizabeth's signet and sign-manual, to the Sheriff and other Commissioners of Musters, co. Surrey. Acknowledging with hearty praise the pains taken by the said commissioners, and by the officers of trained bands, and all people serving in the same, for the safety of her highness's person and realm. The commissioners are instructed to let the people "vnderstand that for a further testimony of our good acceptance of the dutifull mindes they haue there shewed to carry toward vs: We meane that the sayd bandes shalbe imployde onlie for the gard of oure parson and the withstanding of forrayne invasion, if any should happen, not doubtinge but that the regard of oure contentment and satisfaccioun and the care of their owne defence and saftie, will in courage as well theis oure souldiers as their captaynes and leaders." Dated at Greenwich.

10 April, 1585. Letter from the lords of the Council to the Sheriff of co. Surrey, Sir William More, knight, and other gentlemen of the shire, appointed to make enquiries respecting the culture of "oade" within the county, in accordance with special instructions to be given them by the letter's bearer, Mr. Alexander King; her majesty having been informed that the growth of "oade" is prejudicial to her customs and the commonwealth. Also, a paper of "Articles to be enquired by the high constables vpon charge gyven them by y^e Sheriffes and commissioners of the several counties," as to the growth and culture of "oade."

27 April, 1585. Letter from Lords of the Council to Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. Ordering that recusants in the said county may be "unfurnished of armour, vntill such time as they shalbe content to become conformable to her highnes lawes in resorting to churche." Also, a schedule, signed W. Waade, containing the names of persons to be forthwith disarmed, if not conformable in matters pertaining to religion. Also, copy of the same letter, with two copies (slightly varying) of the schedule.

8 May, 1585. Certificate of the arms and weapons found in the houses of recusants in co. Surrey, and seized on the authority of letters from the Privy Council. Also, the return, made at the same time, by Francis Browne, esq., one of the said recusants, as to the annual value of his estate.

13 May, 1585. Letter (circular) from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to the Ministers, constables, churchwardens, and others of the several parishes of his diocese: against the impious and profligate maintenance of "Church-ales, May-games, Morrish-daunces and other vaine pastimes on the Saboth dayes."

20 June, 1585. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the seizure and suppression of certain seditious and traitorous books and libels, containing much slanderous and hateful matter against the earl of Leicester and other lords of her majesty's council, which false books have been covertly spread and scattered abroad in sundry parts of her majesty's realm; and for the discovery and punishment of the authors of the same libels.

St. Peter's Day, 1585. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Announcing that the writer and his daughter will visit Loseley on the morrow. "This daye," continues the writer, "these States (aswee terme them) have hadd accesse to her majestie, and now thesequell restith in providence of God, her majesties pleasure, and the advice of her counsell."

3 July, 27 Elizabeth. Copy of the patent appointing Charles Lord Howard, her majesty's chamberlain, to be lieutenant of cos. Sussex and Surrey, of the city and county of Chichester, and of all corporate places within the same cos. Also, on the same paper, a copy of the said lieutenant's letters of deputation, appointing William Howard, esq., Sir William More, knt., and Sir Thomas Browne, knt., to be his deputies in the same lieutenancy.

18 July, 27 Elizabeth. Copy of a letter, under the queen's sign-manual and signet, to the Lord Howard of Effingham, High-admiral and lieutenant of cos. Sussex and Surrey. For an immediate levy of two hundred and fifty men in the said counties. Dated from Greenwich.

25 July, 1585. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants, co. Surrey. Accompanying a copy of her majesty's grant of the lieutenancy of co. Surrey to the writer; together with orders for the guidance of his deputy-lieutenants, and her Majesty's warrant for levying a hundred soldiers in the said shire.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

2 August, 1585. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants, co. Surrey. Touching a levy of soldiers, who must be choice men or they will be returned. Dated from Nonesuch. Imperfect.

27 August, 1585. Letter from Ryehard Farrant, a tenant on the Blackfriars estate, to Sir William More of Loseley, knight. On a matter affecting his holding on the said property. Another (undated) letter from the same person to the same person, on the same subject.

30 August, 1585. Letter of courtesy from Elizabeth, Countess of Lincoln, to Sir William More, of Loseley.

8 September 1585. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the lord-lieutenant of Surrey. Ordering a levy of "pyoneers for her majesties service in the Low Countries" out of the "great stoare of stoute vagabordes and maysterless men" to be found in Surrey where they "doe great hurt in the contrie by their idle and naughty life."

8 September, 1585. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. For impressing, as soldiers to serve in the Low Countries, as large a number as possible of the "stout vacabondes and masterlesse men able enough (yf they were sett to worke) for anie labourer, which doe greate hurte in the contrie by their idle and naughty life," and who are said to be especially numerous in the county of Surrey. Dated from Nonesuch.

8 September, 1585. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching the preferment to an office at Farnham of the writer's "servant" who is also his "kinsman." Dated at Waltham.

3 September, 1585. Letter from Robert, earl of Leicester, to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging Sir William to confer with the writer at Otelaundes on Saturday or Sunday next, as to the price which should be paid to Mr. Jones for retiring from Whitley park next Christmas.

20 September, 27 Elizabeth. The Booke of musters of horsemen within the countie of Surrey, taken at Croydon . . . by Charles Lord Howard, baron of Effingham. &c. &c.

28 September, 1585. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William Moore, knt. Respecting the controversy between Mr. Austen and the writer's servant Mr. Maylard as to their respective titles to an office, which Mr. Austen appears to have hitherto occupied. Pending the dispute, the lieutenant of co. Surrey sequesters the office, and requires that a person be appointed to it, pro tem., who shall account for the profits of the place during the tenure thereof to whichever of the two disputants may demonstrate the stronger title to the office.

29 September 1585. Letter from Mr. R. Maylard to Sir William Moore, knt. In which the writer declares his readiness to submit all matters of dispute between him and Mr. Austen to the arbitration of Mr. Moore, and at the same time his purpose to persist in his own course if Mr. Austen "stand so stiffly vpon the goodnes of his letters patentes as he will assent to nothing."

30 September, 1585. Letter from Lords of the Council to Lord Lumley and Lord Howard of Effingham, and the other commissioners for viewing musters of horsemen, co. Surrey. Permitting the said commissioners to take another view of the demi-lances and horsemen of the shire, in order to raise their number and efficiency.

3 November, 1585. Letter from Sir Julius Cæsar to Sir William More, vice-admiral co. Sussex. Representing that Sir William's patent for the vice-admiralty of Sussex, during pleasure, is as full and ample as any such patent usually is. "Th'erle of Leicester, Th'erle of Derby, Sir George Carey and the rest have no more in their patentes than you have in yours."

24 and 26 November, 1585. Two letters from Robert Sothebie, a tenant on the Blackfriars estate, to Sir William More, knight, of Loseley; about the writer's holding in the Blackfriars.

1585. List of "The number of the men appoynted for euerye shaye bounde in the vyage with Sir Francis Drake."

1585. Two papers of memoranda in Sir William More's writing as to the course which he pursued towards the lord lieutenant of co. Surrey, when nothing less than Mr. Austen's discharge from his office would satisfy the said lord.

1585. Paper setting forth the several amounts paid, on the examination and sealing of their cloths, by clothiers and clothworkers to the ulnager co. Surrey at Godallminge, in the same shire.

7 February, 1586. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace in co. Surrey. Enjoining them to relax the recent orders against unlicensed corn-dealers, so as to allow an adequate supply of food to come into London, by means of the bakers of that city, who have recently been stayed from buying corn in the said shire and carrying it into town, and also by means of the ordinary corn-merchants who have of late been inhibited from buying corn in one county and selling it in another. "We are perswaded," the Lords of the Council say, "that such stay made by you hath not proceeded from any meaning in you to the prejudice or hurt of the citie, but by occasion of the orders lately gyven. Yet the experience hereof, falling out as it doth, that by the continuance of such stay, there may growe great scarcetie in the said citie, considering the great numbers and confluence of people that, at this tyme, are inhabiting and conversing therein, which cannot be susteyned without a like quantitie and proporsion of corne and other victuell to serue them."

8 February 1586. Copy of R. Wynkfeilde's account of "The Examynacioun and Death of Mary the Queen of Skottes A°. 1586, the 8 of February." Also in the same paper a copy of "A Brevyty of Ballard and Babington's Conspiracie discovered the 4th of Auguste A°. 1586." Comprising, amongst other matters (1) The Scottish Queen's letter to Anthony Babington; together with Anthony Babington's answer thereto written by him, July 1586. (2) Anthony Babington's letter to Mr. Mawe, secretary to the Quene of Scottes, (3) The Quene of Scottes letter to Babington conteyninge the conning directions for the fitter proceedings in ther dangerous devices.

24 February, 1586. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the execution of orders from lords of the council.

24 February, 1586. Copy of a letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Accompanying orders of the Privy Council, which the said deputies are enjoined to execute.

24 February, 1586. Orders of the Privy Council (signed, Fra. Walsingham) for putting in strength the power of the Realme in the Inland Counties.

31 March, 1586. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral. Requiring the borough towns of Surrey to procure adequate supplies of gun-powder from Henry Cale of London, merchant, who has been commissioned by her majesty to furnish the boroughs of the maritime counties with powder at reasonable rates.

1 April, 1586. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knits, and William Morgan, esq., justices of the peace of co. Surrey. Requiring from the said magistrates such information as may enable the Privy Council to come to a just conclusion respecting the prayer of one William Barlowe of Onsted co. Surrey, "for a license to sowe certeine acres of woad."

7 April, 1586. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to the deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey. Touching the complaint of the Privy Council against the writer's slackness in providing gun-powder for the county.

10 April, 1586. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral and others, commissioners for the subsidie, co. Surrey. Forbidding the said commissioners to levy taxes on any citizens of London, who have not been habitual residents in Surrey since last Michaelmas: as wealthy Londoners, having "houses in the countrey wherevnto they vse sometymes to resorte for pleasure, or to avoide sicknes in London, or for some other cause," are found to escape their due proportion of taxes by causing themselves to be lightly assessed in the country, and then certifying in town that they have satisfied the just claims of the tax-collectors in the country.

14 April, 1586. Letter from Charles lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Apologising for the trouble which the writer has occasioned Sir William in asking him to return a document which was not in his custody.

22 April, 1586. Letter from lord Hunsdon to Sir William Moore, knt. Setting forth the writer's reasons for forbearing to pay rent for a house in Blackfriars to Sir William, who is charged with bad faith in failing to give, according to his written word, a lease of the house to the writer. From Grenewich.

27 April, 1586. Letter from Sir J. Wolley to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that the Lord Admiral declines to decide whether Southcotte, a recusant, should be indicted for his recusancy.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

5 May, 1586. Letter from John archbishop of Canterbury and other High Commissioners for causes ecclesiastical, to Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knts., commissioned to enquire into the charges of John Reve, M.A., vicar of Great Rowkhams, co. Surrey, against Mr. Edmund Slifeld of the same parish, and also into the counter-charges made by the said Mr. Slifeld against the said vicar. Begging Sir William and Sir Thomas to join with them in that commission Mr. Thomas Cornewallis and Mr. John Parker.

9 May, 1586. Copy of a letter from Sir William More, knt. Respecting recusants' offers for the composition of their recusancy, and the means whereby to get from them a proper proportion of their incomes.

17 May, 1586. Certificate (signed, at the order of the Master of the Rolls, by Henry Clerke, clerk to the Justices of the Peace co. Middlesex, and addressed to Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knts., and George More, Robert Lyvesey and Edward Bellingham, esqs.) that Thomas Fryer, doctor of physic, dwelling in the city of London, has compounded with the Master of the Rolls and Sir Owen Hopton, knt., lieutenant of the Tower, and agreed "to paye vnto her majestie a certen yearely somme of money for his nott cominge to church." (Vide Kempe's Loseley MSS.)

24 May, 1586. Letter from John archbishop of Canterbury to Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knts. Touching the charges made by Mr. Slifeld, esq., against Mr. Reve, preacher, and also those made by Mr. Reve against Mr. Slifeld, into both which articles Sir William and Sir Thomas, in conjunction with Mr. Thomas Cornewallis and Mr. John Parker, esqs., have been commissioned to enquire. Dated from Lambeth.

24 June, 1586. Letter from Lords of the Council to William Howard, esq., and Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knts. For the arrangement by amicable interference of a matter of variance between Elizabeth Jaye of Farnham, widow, and Doctor Steward.

28 May, 1586. Letter from Thomas Fryer to Sir William More, knt, and others, justices of the peace for co. Surrey. Representing that the writer has compounded for his recusancy, to the satisfaction of the Master of the Rolls and Sir Owen Hopton, and is not a resident in the county, where he has a house at Stretham; but that, notwithstanding, he would have obeyed the magistrates' summons, and would have come to Dorking, had the sickness of his eyes permitted him to take the journey.

27 June, 1586. Letter from J. Wolley to Sir William More, knt. "I must lett yow vnderstand her majesty hath commandyd me to make readye to go to Scottland with moche spede for the satisfaction of that king touching his mothers case, in apointing me to which voyage, (whereas I intended to haue moved her Highness for my brotner More to go with me) in very truth she prevented me before I spake any one word of hym to tell me yt weare good I should take him with me." The letter goes on to ask Sir William's consent to the writer's wish and her majesty's suggestion.

5 July, 1586. Letter from the earl of Sussex to Sir William More, knt. Ordering measures to be taken at Guildford, Farnham, and elsewhere, for the arrest of "one William Mitchell of Hartley Mawditt, co. Southt." taylor, who hath been a principal doer in the late pretended conspiracie and rebellion in Hampshire."

7 July, 28 Elizabeth. Warrant, (under the seals and signatures of Sir William More, knt., George More, and Lawrence Stoughton) to Anthony Cowper, high constable of the hundred of Godby, and the petty constable of the parish of Egham: to arrest Jane Furnifall, gentlewoman, and bring her before the justices of the peace at Guldeford on next Saturday.

16 July, 1586. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt., at Lousley. Asking for intelligence of what Sir William may have heard respecting the movements of the Queen, who is believed by the bishop to be about to set out on a progress through Surrey, via Loseley, to Hampshire, with a purpose of staying at the bishop's houses of Walton, Winchester, and Farnham.

24 July, 1586. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Inviting Sir William to be present at the marriage of the writer's daughter "on the tewsday after Bartelmew day." From Cowdrey.

4 August, 1586. Paper (two sheets) entitled "A Breviat of Ballard and Babington's Conspiracy discovered the iiith of Auguste, A^o. 1586."

5 August, 1586. Letter from Elyzabeth Countess of Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt., at Loseley. Begging him not to make a release of a certain lease of trust, as he will be pressed to do by the writer's husband and son.

9 August, 1586. Letter from Rychard Young to Sir William More and Mr. Lawrence Stoughton. Conveying Mr. Secretary's thanks to Sir William and Mr. Stoughton for their aid in searching Mr. Francis Brown's house at Henley Park.

16 August, 1586. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Requiring a careful execution of certain orders, contained in accompanying letters, from Lords of the Council.

30 August, 1586. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham, lord high admiral, to Sir William More, knt. Begging that the forces of co. Surrey may be held in readiness, notwithstanding certain news which may prove false, and that the same forces, in case the report prove false, come on to Reigate. Dated from Windsor.

12 September, 1586. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Declining to appoint to the church of Compton the person presented thereto by Sir William, on the ground that he is not a man of sufficient learning; but allowing Sir William further time in which to select a suitable clerk.

19 September, 1586. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to Rychard Bostock, esq., high sheriff of co. Surrey. Instructing the said sheriff to associate with himself some three or four of the well affected gentlemen of the county, and, having called the chief men of the boroughs in the said shire before him and his associates, to inform the same principal men of the said boroughs that the same towns, in their "free elections" of representatives for the parliament, appointed to meet on the 15th of next October, would do well to re-elect, if possible, the same persons who represented them in the last parliament, as the said representatives proved themselves in parliament to be "wise and well affected gentlemen."

20 September, 1586. Letter from Mr. Secretary (Thomas) Wylson to Sir William More, high sheriff of Surrey. Desiring the speedy execution of a process of execution on behalf of one widow Pigott.

27 September, 1586. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Sirs William Moore and Thomas Browne, knts., and Richard Bawstocke, esq. Announcing that the Lords of the Council think that Mrs. Coplyffe (who has, as part of her jointure, the nomination of the two burgesses for the town of Gatton), should not be allowed to influence the next election, as she is known to be ill-affected; and that the same lords recommend as fit persons to represent the burgh in parliament William Wood, a clerk of her majesty's council, and Nycholas Fuller, a counsellor of the law.

27 September, 1586. Letter (signed, T. Bromley, canc., and W. Burghley) to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the trial, on charges of horse-stealing, at the next Quarter Sessions to be holden at Kingstone vpon Thamise, of "one Reynolde Underwoode now a prysoner in the White Lion in Southwark vpon vehement suspition of stealinge of Two Geldinges worthe xvli. from one Thomas Wynstone, and of one geldinge and two mares worthe xx markes from one Harrisoun and one Ede."

6 October, 1586. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the intelligence of his enclosed letter, respecting the election of a knight for some shire. From Coudrey.

12 October 1586. A sommarie of the examination of Marie Stuard, commonly called the Queene of Scotts, before ten Earles and fiftene lordes, and moste of the chief Judges, and best Lawiers of England at Fotheringhaie Castle in Northamptonshire, the 12 of October 1586. Preceded by an imperfect and greatly defaced account of the circumstances attending the same Queen's judgment and condemnation.—Also, a paper entitled "Reasones to proue the Quenes Maiestyes conscience to proccede with severitie in this case of the Late Queene of Skottes."—Also, a short paper headed, "That it is not good but dangerous for the Quen's Maiestie to proccede accordinge to the seconde bill by disablenent and not accordinge to the first for attainer and execution."

26 October, 1586. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt., and William Morgan, Lawrence Stoughton and John Couper, esqs. Requiring the said magistrates of co. Surrey to send before the council an "Italian" who has recently erected a glass-house near Guildford, and to inhibit him from completing the said house or carrying on his works there for the present; a complaint having been made to the council that the woods in the neighbourhood of Guildford and

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

Godalminge are "lyke to be consumed to the hurt of " those towns and the whole contry therabouts."

23 December, 1586. Letter from Elizabeth countess of Lyncoln to Sir William More, at Loseley. Begging
Sir William to view the deer in Woking park.

4 January, 1587. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Admiral, lieutenant of co. Surrey, and his deputy-lieutenants of the same shire. For the arrest of recusants of substance and quality in the said county, and their imprisonment (at this moment of imminent invasion and urgent perils) at their own charges, either in the common prisons or in the houses of some of the Queen's well-affected and competent subjects.—Also, a copy of the same letter.

19 January, 1587. Letter from Sir Henri Nevell to Sir William Moore, knt. Explaining that the writer's recent letter to Roughdon was not to restrain persons licensed to fell their woods from doing so, but to restrain those who would fell timber without a licence.

23 January, 1587. Letter, signed by Lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenant of Surrey, appointing William Howard, esq., Sir William More, Sir Thomas Brown and Sir Francis Carewe, knts., to be deputy lieutenants of the same county. Reciting her majesty's commission of 14 Nov. in the 29th year of her reign, appointing the said lord to be the lieutenant of the county.

31 January, 1587. Letter for the earl of Leycester, lord steward of her majesty's household, to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey, Touching complaints against her majesty's purveyors, and suggesting that the shire should get quit of the purveyors by making a reasonable composition in lieu of purveyance. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

7 February, 1587. Letter from J. Wolley to Sir
William More, knt. On parish affairs.

13 February, 1587. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co.
Surrey. For the strict observance of the Privy Council's orders against the eating of flesh on Fish-days; the said observance being especially needful in the present season of scarcity and dearth of all kinds of victuals, occasioned in no small measure by "the late great mortalitye
" of shepe and other kynd of great cattell generally
" almoste through out the realme."

19 February, 1587. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William More, knt. Ordering that Anthony Standen (already bound to appear before the writer) be commanded to repair immediately to the earl, in accordance with his recognizances.

5 March, 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Touching a dispute, attended with violence, between the writer's cousin Jhones and Mr. Stoughton. Dated from the court.

7 March, 1587. Letter on a matter of private business from Elyzabeth countess of Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt., at Loseley.

11 March, 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Touching the controversy between the writer's cousin and Mr. Stoughton about a title to property.

18 March, 1587. Precept of Lords of the Council to the sheriff of co. Surrey and Sir William More, knt., justice of the peace for the same shire; to take order for the maintenance of the queen's peace between William Stoughton, gent., and Anne Jones widow of Thomas Jones late of Witley, co. Surrey, gent., and their respective tenants, until trial by law shall have determined the controversy of the said William and Anne, touching certain lands in Witley and Sottenham. Dated at Greenwich.

23 March, 1587. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Postponing certain appointed musters till 22 May, in regard to "her
" majesties comeinge into those parts."

2 April, 1587. Letter from Lord Cobham to Sir William More, knight. Touching a failure of the supply of water in the Blackfriars.

8 April, 1587. Letter from Gregory lord Dacre to Sir William More, knt. For the apprehension of William Yonge and William Mabote, on a charge of stealing certain of the writer's geldings, which are believed to be now lying at "the signe of the checker in " Godalminge." From Chelvey.

9 April, 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Entreating Sir William to visit the writer at her house at Horsley, where she is resting.

17 April, 1587. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More and Thomas Browne, knts.
Touching the need for an appointment "of some cap-
" taines for the horsemen before the Generall Viewe."

24 April, 1587. Letter from Gregory lord Dacre to Sir William More, knt. Begging that Sir William's servant may be instructed to deliver the writer's gelding to the letter's bearer. From Chellsey.

26 April, 1587. Letter from the earl of Sussex to Sir William More, knt. Requesting Sir William to urge Mr. Austyn of Guilforde to make a speedy division of the goods of one Nicholas Yeomans, deceased, late of Portsmouth, in which division the writer's servant, William Browne, is interested. From Portismouth.

27 April, 1587. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moore, knt. Ordering that William Harding and John Russell, who have built certain "howsing" in Windsor Forest, without licence to do so, be commanded to appear without delay before the writer.

4 May, 1587. Letter from Anthony viscount Mount-ague to Sir William Moore, knt. Requesting Sir William to look into the complaint of one Grene, the writer's man, and to do him strict justice, whether he be faulty or no.

6 May, 1587. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging Sir William to appoint an impartial person to enquire respecting the wrong said to be done by one Coven to the tenants on the bishop's manor of Farnham.

14 May, 1587. "A cople of the Councelles letter to " the lord marques of Winchester." Giving a general approval to the marqu's measures to lower the prices of provision to the means of the poorer sort of men; but intimating that his lordship has in particular instances acted too severely against the badgers of the co. of Surrey. "Touchinge the badger," their Lordships of the Council remark, "whose corne was intercepted and
" sold for lesse price than he bought it, we thinke it
" agreable to justice and equitie, that either full restitu-
" cion be made unto him of what remaneth vnpaid of " his principall, or elles some such other recompence
" and satysfaccion be yeilded vnto him . . . as he may " have no more cause to complain."

15 May, 1587. Letter from Anthony viscount Mount-ague to Sir William More, knt. Touching a right of fishing, and the character of the writer's "men at " Waverley" whom he "holdes sufficientt sober and " honest."

24 May, 1587. Letter from Anthony viscount Mount-ague to Sir William Moore, knt. Congratulating Sir William on his daughter's escape from "her wonderful
" daunger," for which the writer sees reason "to lawde
" and magnifie the mercy and power of God." From Coudrey.

30 May, 1587. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Acknowledging Sir William's courteous dealing in an affair of business.

8 June, 1587. Copy of a letter of warrant, addressed from Greenwich under her Majesty's signet and sign-manual to the Lieutenant of the cos. Surrey and Sussex.
Enjoining him to aid in the impressment of one hundred and fifty men in each of the said counties, for military service in the Low Countries, "under the conduct of " such captaines as shall specialle be named therunto
" bic our right trustie . . . the earle of Lecerster " lieutenant-generall of our forces in the saide Lowe
" Countries."

8 June, 1587. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the lord Admiral, lieutenant of the cos.
Sussex and Surrey. Touching a levy of soldiers for the queen's service in the Low Countries, under the command of the earl of Leycester.

8 June, 1587. Letter from the earl of Leycester to the deputy-lieutenants of Surrey. Announcing that the writer has appointed his nephew, Sir Robert Sydney, knt., to take charge of the soldiers now being levied in the said county.

11 June, 1587. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching the execution of her majesty's warrant, dated 8 June 1587, and the directions of an accompanying letter from the Privy Council.

8 July, 1587. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for the subsidy, co. Surrey. With directions for levying the same.

10 July, 1587. Letter from John archbishop of Canterbury to Sir William Moore, knt., and others, justices of the peace of co. Surrey. In behalf of Mr. Pape, a minister whom the primate is astonished to hear the said magistrates think of "binding to his good be" haviour." Dated from Lambeth.

10 July, 1587. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for musters in co. Surrey. For the observance of her Majesty's instructions (dated in the

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

15th year of her reign) and certain recent letters of the Council, touching musters.

17 July, 1587. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham, to Sir William More, knt. asking for Sir William's aid towards the removal of certain timber, lying near Harthel Rowe co. Hampshire, to the water side.

26 July, 29 Elizabeth. Patent of commission to the archbishop of Canterbury, lord Howard of Effingham great admiral of England, John lord Lumley, John Wolley, esq., the Queen's secretary in Latin, and one of her privy council, Thomas Cecyll, knight, and William Howard, esq., William Moore, knight, and others, to be commissioners for assessing and collecting in the county of Surrey (the borough of Southwark excepted), the proportion due from the same county of "one entire subsidy and two fifteenes and tenthes, graunted by the "Temporaltie." A printed copy of the Act 29 Eliz., conferring the grant, is attached to the patent.

10 August, 1587. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, and others, deputy-lieutenants co. Surrey. For the immediate array of the co. Surrey: intelligence having been received that a Spanish fleet of 120 sail has been sighted off the West Coast.

13 August, 1587. Letter from Lords of the Council to Commissioners for the subsidy co. Surrey. Touching the collection of the subsidy, and reflecting severely on the conduct of the commissioners and assessors who are charged with "favouring their friendes, tenants, allies "and retainers" and with flagrant partiality to themselves in the assessment of taxes. Dated from Theobaldes.

25 August, 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Inviting Sir William to the writer's house at Horseley.

28 August, 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his pains taken "at Godalminge betwene my cozen "Jones and Mr. Staughton."

4 October, 1587. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Condoling with Sir William on a sharp and terrible misfortune, by which God is making trial of his constancy in dutifulness and his obedience to the divine will.

9 October, 1587. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the correction of evils occasioned by the large number of rogues and vagabonds of the said shire, who are to be dealt with straitly and sharply.

17 October, 1587. Letter from Robert Livesey to Sir William More, knt. About a letter from the Privy Council, ordering the writer and Sir William to confer on some matter with the magistrates of Middlesex and Essex.

3 November, 1587. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Alluding to Sir William's recent affliction, and begging him to "put his "hand to the commission and concord" of an enclosed "fine passed by" the writer and his wife. From Cowdrey.

9 November, 1587. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to her Majesty's lieutenant of the county of Surrey. Directing him and his deputies to observe the orders of a previous letter, which appointed 3,000 men to be levied in the said county and arredied for the safety of the isle of Weight, the town of Portesmouth and other maritime places; and to certify forthwith the marquis of Winchester and the earl of Sussex, her majesty's lieutenants of the county of Southampton, as to the proportion of the said three thousand now in readiness for service, and as to their armour.

27 November 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth countess of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Thanking Sir William for his trouble in examining the persons whose dogs killed the deer in Okinge park.

27 November, 1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Inviting Sir William to Horseley, where the writer is resting. She hears "no certayne tyme for the queenes retorne from "Holborne to Richmonde," where her majesty is to keep Christmas.

10 December, 1587. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Conveying the opinion of the lords of the council that Sir William should commit one East to prison, and then proceed against him at law. Dated from the court.

18 December, 1587. Copy of Letter from Lords of the Council to the lord high admiral of England and his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Ordering that the Justices of the Peace of the said shire may be instructed to arrest and send before the council by passports all persons in their jurisdiction professing to be discharged soldiers who, after serving in the Low Countries, have been disbanded without due payment of their wages and allowances; the same persons to be so sent before the council with an assurance that they shall receive all moneys which they can prove to be due to them, as well as their charges. The council's letter states that money was provided for the payment of all the disbanded soldiërs, and that several captains, examined by the council, affirm that their men have been duly paid.

19 December, 1587. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Communicating his lordship's conditional assent to Sir William's project for surrounding "the freers with a wall conteyninge about vii or "viii acres."

20 December, 1587. Copy of "Instructions given bie "her Maiesties commandment to Captain John Shute "for certain services to be don in cos. of Surrey and "Sussex." For the inspection and training of the bands of those shires. Signed by lords of the Council.

1587. Paper headed "Mr. Wilks to her Majestie." Touching the queen's policy and action in the Low Countries.

1587. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his attention to "yong Neves matter." Dated from Horseley.

1587. List of the "Names of all such persons as stand "indited before the Justices of Peace of this county of "Surrey, for not comynge to church, and are therof "convicted of vtлары remayninge of Record before the "saide Justices." Comprising the names of Jane Furry-fall of Egham, Jane Saunder of Ewell, lady Mary Vauze of Southwark, John Mollinax of Nutfelde, and 14 others. Also, on the same paper, a List of "the names of such "as stand indited for the same cause and not yett convicted," comprising 33 names. Also, on the same paper, Lists of the "names of such as stande indited "as beforesaid, and discharged by virtue of letters from "Lords of the Privy Council," and of "those which are "indited and have conformed themselves accordinge "to the Statute," and of "such as are in prison in the "Marshalsey, kynges bench, Whyte Lyon and Clink "in Southwark;" comprising 54 names. No date.

January 1588. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral. Accompanying privy seals for raising money in the county of Surrey by way of loans and containing directions for levying the same money.

10 Jan. 1588. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to the lord High Admiral. Ordering a levy of the forces, appointed to the counties under the said lords lieutenantancy, to be at the port of London on the 25th, instead of the 20th inst.

20 March, 1588. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Admiral of England, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Accompanying letters under the Privy Seal for raising loans to the Queen.

30 March, 1588. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey. Touching levies of horsemen in the said county. Imperfect.

12 April, 1588. Letter from Sir Julius Caesar, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Praying Sir William not to remove his "deputation of the viceadmiraltie of Sussex "from Mr. John Young," till the writer has conferred with Sir William on the matter.

12 April, 1588. Letter from the earl of Huntynndon to Sir William More, knt. Begging that the writer's servant may be excused from "serving as trayned "shot" in co. Surrey, as the writer has need of him.

14 April, 1588. Letter from Lord Chancellor Hatton to Sir William More and others, commissioners for musters, co. Surrey. Exempting the Dean of the Arches from military service, &c. in the county of Surrey (in which shire he resides), as he is a judge of king's Commission Ecclesiastical, as well as of the Court of Arches.

16 April, 1588. Letter from Pexal Brocas to Sir William Moore, knt. Explaining the writer's action in certain legal proceedings, in respect of which he has been misjudged and at the same time sharply treated.

29 April, 1588. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Touching Mr. Wolley's representations to the writer of the displeasure which John Yonge has occasioned Sir William, and also of Sir William's consequent desire for John Yonge's removal from the vice-admiralty of Sussex. Sir William is entreated to be content that John Yonge be continued in his place for a brief while, and meantime to rest assured that the said John will be instructed to render amends for his discourtesy to Sir William. Dated from the court at Greenwich.

2 May, 1588. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Touching young Neve's affairs

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

M.
NEUX, sq.

on business which the writer desires to see settled. Dated from the Whytefryers.

13 May, 1588. Warrant from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moore, knt. For the apprehension of one Ned Keene, and his speedy conveyance to Windsor Castle, whence he lately escaped.

17 May, 1588. Letter from Robert earl of Leycester to Sir William Moor, knt., and George Moor, esq. Appointing Sir William and his son to view the park, with the woods and game thereof, of Whitley co. Surrey, and to certify the writer respecting the same.

17 May, 1588. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More of Loseley. Announcing that the writer's "sonne Coldwell" has with due authority granted leave to John Wates, Robert Phillip, and John Figg of Farnham, to raise and take marl in the Little Park of Farnham.

26 May, 1588. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching a controversy between the writer and Mr. Saunder of Ewell, which is to be settled by commissioners to arbitrate. Sir William is entreated to act with Mr. Levesey in the writer's interest, Sir Francis Carrow and Mr. Sanders of Charlewod having been appointed arbitrators on the side of Mr. Saunder of Ewell.

7 June, 1588. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore and Henry Weston, knts., and the other Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the immediate carriage of 50 loads of timber from Morram and Winchfelde, co. Hants, to Reading, co. Berks, by horses, oxen, and carts levied for that purpose in co. Surrey; the sum of vd. a mile to allowed for such service in accordance with the existing regulations.

19 June, 1588. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knt. Asking for instructions as to provision of military munitions, and expressing the writer's regret that he cannot raise horsemen.

27 June, 1588. Copy of Warrant from Lords of the Council to the Lieutenant and deputy-lieutenants co. Surrey. To call out 1,800 men, of the force of the said shire, for immediate service.

30 July, 1588. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Inviting Sir William to Horseley and giving the latest news from court. "Upon sunday night late my L. of Essex and Sir Tho. Gorges came to the court from Dover and brought advertisement that they discerned the Spanish fleete lying over agaynst Callis and our fleet sending out boates to land to refresh there men with vittayll and other necessarys. Whereat there is much grief conveyed in the court that my Ld. Admirall hath suffered them to passe on so farre without fight, and that he prevented not the opportunity they have now gotten of refreshing their men."

4 August, 1588. Letter from Lords of the Council to the captains of the horsemen sent out of the co. of Surrey. Directing the said Captains to return with their men to their county; London being greatly embarrassed with troops, sent to it from divers parts of the country, for whom no fit entertainment in lodging and food can be made. (Vide Kempe's "Loseley MSS.")

7 August, 1588. Copy of a letter headed, "Occurrences sent from Sir Jo: Conwaie to the Archbishoppe of Canterbury from Ostende the 7th of August, 1588."

10 August, 1588. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for inviting of the writer to Loseley; and expressing the writer's hope to see her "cozen dame More" at Mr. Austene's house at Guyldford on the morrow. Dated from Westminster.

12 August, 1588. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Asking for intelligence respecting the dismal and depressing rumour amongst the folk of Hampshire, "that my Lord Admaralle is come from the seas with the Navie."

24 August, 1588. Letter (circular) from the earl of Leicester to the Lord Lieutenant of co. Surrey; for keeping the forces of the county in instant readiness for her majesty's service.

8 September, 1588. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. For a "new settling of order for the game in Surrey Baywyke" in the writer's charge, such a rearrangement being needful in consequence of the death of the earl of Leycester, whom "itt hathe pleased God to call awaye," and to whom the writer, his lordship's "kinsman," had been "content to yeld the order of her majesties game" in the same bailiwick.

26 September, 1588. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt., and others, deputy-lieutenants, co. Surrey. Requiring a return of the names of persons of the said county, competent to advance money for the queen's use on privy seals.

29 September, 1588. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Inviting Sir Wylliam to supper and bed at Nonsuch, so that he may observe with his own eyes "some materyalle poyntes wherin," the writer says, "I have long tyme sustayned wrong" on the part of Mr. Sanders.

31 October, 1588. Letter from Lords of the Council to Lord Howard of Effingham, Lieutenant, co. Surrey. For the appointment of a discreet gentleman, to visit the furnaces and iron-forges of the said shire, to ascertain the numbers and kinds of pieces of cast-iron ordnance now ready made in the same works, and to enjoin the owners and foremen thereof "to forbear to cast any more such peeces of iron-ordnance, untill they shall receive expresse direccion" from the council on the matter. Also an enclosed schedule of "The names of the Iron Workes and Furnaces with the places where they are planted in Surrey: viz., "The L. Braie one forge in Cranley; Mr Elderton one forge in Sheire; Mr Christopher Darrell one forge, one furnace in Endware, alias a forge in Frant; the L. Montague a furnace called Pophall; John Lambert a forge in Cranley; Richard Marsh, a forge in Douf-feild; Mr^s Blackwell, a furnace, a forge in Northaple; Ninian Chaloner, a furnace at Blackford, and a forge at Glastonbury; John Erffield, a furnace, a forge in Crookfould; John Blackett, a furnace at Hodley; John Thorpe, a furnace, a forge at Heldcourt; George Bullaine, a forge called Parforge; John Stacie, a furnace, a forge at Ashehurst; Nicholas Poopie, a furnace in Hindale; John Paller, a forge called Holburn forge; Robert Hodesheu, a furnace called Poolie; John Fauconer, a furnace and a forge in Mayfield; John French, a forge in Chidingley; Thomas Stollan, a furnace called Walden forge; Priory forge, Brilling forge and Marbleton forge; William Rolf, a furnace called Hedfeild; Thomas Ellice, a forge called Bibletham forge; George May, a forge called Brodgell in Burrush parishe; Thomas Glide, a furnace called Darfold and Ichingham forge; Simon Collman, a furnace called Battersford forge; Thomas Collines, a furnace called Stockines furnace; Richard Wilkes, a furnace called Netherfield furnace and a forge in Minfield; John Baker, a forge in Withelane; John Porter, a forge in Baytham; Thomas Haie, a furnace called Netherfield furnace; Bartilmew Jeffraie, a furnace and a forge called Buckfold; John Rolfe, a forge called Crockhurst; Richard Greene, a forge in Mayfield; Robert Woodheie, a forge called Benhal forge in Cranley; John Ashpenham, gentleman, a furnace called Pauing Rock Ashpenham furnace, a forge in Ashpenham, and a forge in Penhurst; Michell Weston, a furnace in Cowden; Mr Ellington, a forge in Sheire in Surrie; and Mr Weston, a forge in Caustern."

4 November, 1588. Copy of the order of the Privy Council, signed by William Waad, permitting Fraunces Browne of Henly Parke, co. Surrey, esq., a prisoner in the house of Sir William More, knt., to be enlarged on sufficient bonds, in order that he may have liberty to prosecute important matters at law.

10 November, 1588. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William Moore, knt. Inviting Sir William to Nonsuch on the 9th of December, to meet Mr. Edmond Saunders there, instead of at London, to talk over the matter of controversy between the writer and Mr. Saunders of Ewell.

30 Elizabeth. A Note of certayne Hewes and Cryes, raysed for Robberies, within the half hundred of Wallington, co. Surrey. The copy of a paper in which the inhabitants of "the hundred of Brixton and Wallington" insist on the injustice of holding a hundred chargeable with the loss occasioned by a robbery, when the only evidence of the alleged amount of the robbery is the bare oath of the person who has been robbed. The paper gives the case of Mr. Shelley, who was compensated for loss from robbery by a payment of one hundred marks, though the robber, subsequently confessing at the place of his execution that he took Mr. Shelley's money in Cowlesden Lane, insisted that the stolen sum amounted only to xx li. instead of the lx li. for which Mr. Shelley claimed to be requited by the county. Another case noticed in the protest is that of Thomas Fennar, a buttermen of Surrey, who was robbed by a mounted highwayman in Smythden Bottom on 10 July, 29 Elizabeth, and declared himself to have been so deprived of c li.; whereas only v s. vii d. was found on the person of the robber, when he chanced to be taken

W. M.
McLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

within three miles of the scene of his crime, immediately after its perpetration

26 November, 1588. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. Inviting Sir William to Horseley "to keepe my lo: Cobhame companie." The queen "went in greate estate vnto Paules vpon sunday."

7 January, 1589. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching the provision of gunpowder for the county, and expressing an opinion that Kingston and Guildford should be depôts for that munition.

7 January, 1589. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Giving an opinion that Kingston and Guildford are fit places to be made depôts for the gunpowder of the county.

27 January, 1589. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Promising repayment to Sir William of 20*l.* lent to the writer's wife, and announcing the writer's belief that "Don Antonio be arrived heare in England." Dated from the court.

February, 1589. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to the deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Claiming exemption from military service, in respect of the said county, for the writer's auditor and menial servant, William Pratt.

1 February, 1589. Letter from Lords of the Council to the deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Summoning the same deputy-lieutenants to appear before the council in the Star Chamber on Friday next in the afternoon, to answer the allegations of the Lord Mayor and aldermen as to the excessive and unjust rating of the borough of Southwarke towards the military burdens of the said county.

2 February, 1589. Letter from the marquis of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Requesting that John Burlace, gentleman, of Farnham, may be excused from the imposition charging him "with the moitie of a calliver furnished," as he is the writer's servant, attending on him chiefly in his house.

7 February, 1589. Letter from lord-chancellor Hatton to Sir William Moore, knt., and others, magistrates of Surrey. Touching a suit in the court of Chancery between Edward Gatewarde and others, complainants, and Richard Bostocke, defendants.

7 February, 1589. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Sir William Moore, knt., collector of the loan for her majesty's use, co. Surrey. Ordering Sir William to demand instant payment of their portions of the said loan from all persons who would fain avoid lending, and to return to the council the names of all persons who presume to refuse to advance the moneys demanded of them.

14 February, 1589. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to the deputy-lieutenants co. Surrey. Touching the complaint of the inhabitants of Southwarke that they are overcharged in finding men for musters.

24 February, 1589. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his letter of intelligence respecting Lady Lyncolne's will.

4 March, 1589. Letter from lord Hunsdon to Sir William Moore, knt., and Thomas Slifeld, esq. For a view of the game in Oakinge Park, which has been committed by her majesty to the keeping of Mr. Richard Drake, one of the "equiers" of her highness's stable.

24 March, 1589. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to William Howard, esq., and Sir William More, Sir Thomas Browne, and Sir Francis Carew, knights, the writer's deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey. Announcing that George More, esq., has, on his urgent petition, been relieved of the office of provost-marshal of the said county: and instructing the said deputy-lieutenants to make choice of a fit person, dwelling within ten or twelve miles of London, for the same "service which is moste to be imployed on the high wayes nere Southwarke, Lambeth, Croydon, and Kyngeston, where vagarant persons and masterles men do moste resorte."

1 May, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt. Inviting Sir William to the writer's house at Horsley, which "is well freed from the supposed sickness, the smale pockes."

-- May, 1589. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir Henry Weston and Sir William Moore, knts., and Lawrence Staughton, esq., appointed to arbitrate on a matter in controversy between William Spencer, the writer's servant, and one William Lambold. Begging the said arbitrators to exhibit all possible friendship, i.e. to be as partial as they can without incurring suspicion of partiality, to the writer's said servant Spencer.

25 May, 1589. Letter from Lords of the Council to the magistrates of co. Surrey. Bidding them to enquire into the case of James Jence of Oxted, who has been adjudged by magistrates of the said county to pay money to Elizabeth Dorrante and to maintain her bastard child, though he has in due course of law purged himself of the charge of being the father of the said child.

27 May, 1589. Letter from Anthony Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his protection of and care for the writer in his "decayinge" dayes.

29 May, 1589. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham, Lieutenant of Surrey, to Sir William More, a deputy-lieutenant of the same county. Announcing that the lords of the council have sent letters to the sheriff and magistrates of the county for the immediate raising of "the residue of the loane monie," which is to be sent forthwith to "yo^r house at Loseley."

29 May, 1589. Letter from Thomas lord Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Begging that George Hare may be excused from serving in the light horse of co. Surrey, as he is appointed to be ready with a light horse to attend upon the writer in Sussex, and cannot serve her majesty in two places at the same time.

31 May, 1589. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriffs and Magistrates of co. Surrey. Directing that all persons, in arrear in respect to their contributions to the loan now being raised by Sir William Moore for her majesty's service, shall be required to send the same dues without delay to Sir William's house. Dated at Westminster.

2 June, 1589. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt., and Lawrence Staughton, esq. Appointing the said justices of the peace to enquire into, and take needful measures respecting the petition of one John Gunner in behalf of Robert Worsham a minor, who is said to be wronged by one Harrauld of Farnham. From the court at Whitehall.

18 June, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth countess of Lyncoln to Sir William More. Setting forth the misdeeds of her ladyship's former keeper of Horsely park, who is herewith sent to the magistrate.

20 June, 1589. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knight. About the vicar of Farnham's insufficiency and touching certain malicious rumours there.

22 June, 1589. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt., and the other justices of the peace for co. Surrey. Begging the same magistrates not to assent to Mr. Amersham's purpose to enclose part of the common of East Horsley, in so far as the same intention is contrary to law and equity.

25 June, 1589. Letter from Elizabeth countess of Lyncoln to William Howard esq., and Sir Thomas Browne and William Moore, knts., and the other Justices of the Peace, for co. Surrey. Begging the said justices to resist Mr. Agmondesham's purpose to enclose a fourth part of the common of East Horsley in so far as the same is against law and right; the writer, a freeholder of the said parish, claiming common of wood in the land which Mr. Agmonde-ham wishes to enclose.

28 June, 1589. Thexamynacioun of Anthony Standen, gentleman, touching a complaint exhibited agaynst hym to the Right Honorable Mr. Wolley one of her maiesties most honorable Privy Councell. Signed by Thomas Lyfeld, the justice of the peace who examined the deponent. -- Also, on another paper, the depositions of John Stidolph, gentleman, and Margaret Stidolph of Ham, co. Surrey, Edward Wallis of Ashforde, co. Midds., and others, touching the same matter, arising out of a dispute between Messrs. Standen and Stidolph as to a right to cut grass and make hay in Ham meadow; in which controversy the said Mr. Standen sought to maintain his right by the force and arms of himself and some ten associates, who came to his assistance, armed with staves, swords and fowling-pieces.

7 July, 1589. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching an abuse of the game in Windsor Forest, which Sir William is correcting. From Cowdrey.

7 July, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More. Begging Sir William to be mindful of Spencer's interest in the treaty for an agreement between Hambold and Spencer.

16 July, 1589. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral the lieutenant of co. Surrey. Pressing for the prompt payment of 500*l.* still due on a loan of 2,000*l.* appointed to be levied in the county by privy seals: and suggesting that the richer persons of the shire shall make additional contributions to the loan.

M.
EX, 12.

as some of the persons, to whom privy seals were directed, cannot furnish their full proportions by reason of "the great losses of sheepe and other cattell and the dearth of corne the laste twoe years by which that countie is greatly impoverished." Dated from Nonesuch.

28 July, 1585. The certificate of alle the sommes of monie which I, William More, knight, collectour of the loane for the countye of Surrey have receaved before the date hereof, of the persons hereunder named and of my seuerall payments thereof into her Majesties receipte as particulaire hereafter is mentioned.

18 August, 1589. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More. Begging Sir William to observe and restrain the proceedings of one Sombers in Farnham Castle, who is exceeding his licence to "breaken vp two of the neither roomes of the castle."

5 September, 1589. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William More, knt. "Good Mr More, Let me entreate yow, (yf it be not to your dyspleasure) to send me by this berer the pycetur of the french quene, only for me to take the lyke onte. And I wyll assure yow without all fayll (god wylleng) that the same shall with speed be retorned vnto yow."

8 September, 1589. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. A note of friendly enquiries.

16 September, 1589. Letter from the marquis of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. For the apprehension of Thomas Cawte, who, having received "prest money for thelate service into Portingall, did notwithstanding withdrawe himselfe from the said service."

20 September, 1589. Letter from Jamys Croft, Alexander Horden and Barth^m. Fouke to Sirs William More, and Henry Weston, knts. Requiring the said magistrates of co. Surrey to summon one Henry Veron of Compton before them for refusing to render her majesty certain services; it being the custom of the shire for constables, rithing men and other officers of towns and boroughs to be "contributory with the rest of theire neighbours" towards her majesty's service.

24 September, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More. Inviting Sir William to the writer's house at Horsley.

28 September, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Sir William More. Touching Mr. Agmondisham's attempt to appropriate a fourth part of the common of East Horsleye. Dated from Horsley.

29 September, 1589. Letter from J. Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt. Entreating (at the instance of the letter's bearer, Signor Pietro one of her majesty's musicians) Sir William to use his influence for the postponement of Mr. James Gence's case at the next Surrey Sessions, the said Mr. Gence being not ready as yet to reply to his assailants. Dated from the court at Richmond.

29 September, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Mr. William Howard, Sir William More, and others, magistrates at Kingston. Begging them to resist Mr. Agmondisham's attempt to get and enclose to his own use one fourth part of the common of East Horsley. Dated from Horsleye.

29 September, 1589. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for the subsidy co. Surrey, Touching the complaint of Theophilus Adams of Alburye, gentleman, that he is surcharged towards the said subsidy.

29 September, 1589. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham and his son William Howard to Sirs William More and Thomas Browne, knts., and the rest of the justices, co. Surrey. Instructing them to postpone to the next quarter sessions all enquiry into the controversy between James Gence of Oxted, co. Surrey, gent., and one Mr. Foster, instead of dealing with the matter to-morrow; it being impossible for Mr. Gence to procure his requisite evidence without the postponement.

13 November, 31 Elizabeth. Four instructions for the Provost Marshal of some county in dealing with soldiers, mariners, vagrant persons, and masterless men, in accordance with her majesty's proclamation of the foregoing date; followed by two articles of enquiry as to the provost marshal's powers under the same proclamation. One of the instructions speaks of "great offences nowe dailie committed which are comonlie done by horsemen" and not by those conteyned in the commission to the "lord lieutenant."

1589. A bill of disbursements for Sir William More's household, headed "Charges laide out for youre Worship for Mighellmas quarter in the 31 yeare of her maiestes raigne."

1589. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to some gentleman of co. Surrey. Directing a band of soldiers levied in the said county to be committed to the leading of Thomas Cornewallis the younger, or some other competent person.

25 November 1589. Letter from Lords of the Council to the sheriff and magistrates of co. Surrey. For the restraint and punishment of persons, wandering about the said county and occasioning disorders, under pretence of having been soldiers or mariners in the wars.

5 December, 1589. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William More, knt. Expressing the writer's gratitude for information touching the course to be taken against vagrants. From Nonesuche.

8 December, 1589. Letter from Elyzabeth countess of Lyncoln to Sir William Moore, knt. For the discovery of persons guilty of unlawful hunting in her majesty's park of Okinge.

8 December, 1589. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Directing Sir William to make enquiries respecting the recent lawless hunting in Okinge park.

9 December, 1589. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham and lord Hunsdon, to Sirs Henry Weston and William More, knts., and Lawrence Staughton, esq. For the apprehension and due punishment of persons guilty of hunting the deer, and assaulting the keepers, of Okinge Park, in the keeping of the countess of Lyncolne.

5 January, 1590. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Having spent about iii^l. in law-suits during the last two years, the writer would fain engage in as little litigation as possible; as, in these quarrelsome times when persons abound who wish ill to the church, he would have little to live on if he defended himself in law against every assailant of his privileges.

2 February, 1590. Letter from the earl of Hertford to Sir William More, knt. Begging that the writer's servant Ewstace Tomson may be excused from military service in the musters and trained bands of co. Surrey.

5 March, 1590. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Expressing concern for the illness of Sir William's little nephew, for whose restoration to health lady Mountague sends some medical counsel. From Cowdrey.

9 March, 1590. Eight letters from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More of Loseley, (dated 9 March, 7 July, 10 October, 8 and 21 December, 1590; and 30 March, 10 April, 22 October, 1591): about the writer's claims to the fishery of the river Tyfild. Also an undated letter on the same subject from the same writer to the same writer.

24 March, 1590. Warrant of the lords of the council (signed by Lord Chancellor Hatton, Lord Burghley, and others) to the Collectors of the Loan in the county of Surrey; to pay to the servants (appointed for that purpose) of the Lieutenant of the said county, sufficient moneys for the coat and conduct allowance of 100 soldiers, to be forthwith levied in that county for the queen's service in foreign parts.

5 April, 1590. Letter from Mr. William Howard to Sir William More, knt. Touching Lord Howard's mediation with the queen in behalf of two poor men.

6 April, 33 Elizabeth. Acknowledgment of W. Howard, esq., deputy-lieutenant of Surrey, that he has authorized Sir William More, knt., collector of the loan in the said county, to pay xiii^l. iiis. to Poyninges Heion, captain of a hundred men levied in the same shire.

10 April, 1590. Letter from lords of the Council to Sir William More and Sir Francis Carewe, knts., deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey. Deferring a levy of 550 men in Surrey, as they cannot be brought out in time for the immediate purpose, for which they were required.

14 April, 1590. Letter from lord Hunsdon to Sir William More, knt. Asking for a fresh lease of two houses held by the writer of Sir William in the Black-friars: and also for a lease of the "leades" above them; the present tenant of which leads, says the writer, "either by negligence or otherwise suffered the boyes to cutt vpp the lead with knives or to boore yt throwghe with bodkyns, wherby notwithstanding the cost I haue alreddie bistowed, and that I mynd to doe, the raynne cometh throwghe, and the howse therby much anoyed." From Somerset Howse. Also, on the back of this letter, the rough draft in Sir William's own writing, of the answer he at first designed to make to his lordship's application, but on second thoughts withheld.

18 April, 1590. Copy of a letter from Sir William More, knt., to lord Hunsdon. Declining to grant his lordship a new lease of the two houses occupied by him in the Blackfriars: the writer stating that he some time

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
ESQ.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
ESQ.

since promised the next lease of them to his "dawghter" Welley," and also that he needs a lodging in one of them for himself.

30 April, 1590. Letter from Robert earl of Leicester to Sir William Moore, knt. Introducing the bearer of a petition to the favour of Sir William, who is asked to interest himself with Mr. Beale in behalf of the suitor. —Also, the petition (afore-mentioned) of John Lanwaye of Farnham, co. Surrey, an overseer of his lordship's pheasantes and partridges, who cannot obtain a surrender of copyhold estate from his father-in-law John Warner, because Mr. Beale, the lord of the manor, insists on having xx*li* instead of the customary fee of x*ls*. for his fine on the surrender. The petitioner prays that Sir William Moore may be desired to enquire into and arrange the matter.

3 July, 1590. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for his action against certain petty offenders.

7 July, 1590. Letter from Antonio Garnett to Sir William More, knt. "My Lord and the two ladies" determine (as I think) to morrow at night to be with "you in their way towards Condrey, so well do they lyke youre good lodgynges and interteanment, before they sett hence they will dyne ther, and then you know ther wonted dyett vpon a Fryday night."

7 August, 1590. Letter from John archbishop of Canterbury to Sir William More, knt. Accompanying the commission for levying the second payment of the subsidy, which commission the primate (being ignorant how to proceed with it) sends on to Sir William.

2 September 1590. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to William Howard, esq., and others, magistrates of co. Surrey. Touching the musters of the county.

29 September, 1590. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More and others, magistrates of Surrey. Directing them to enquire into, and inform the writers respecting the conduct of "one John Roberts a vagrant" person who by sinister practices has seduced "Elizabeth More a gentlewoman of good reputacioun" to marry with him," and respecting his action in wasting her and his substance scandalously.

1 October, 1590. Paper entitled "Composicion Hay" delivered in to Mr. Wolde for the parishioners of Egham to the queenes majesties stable of Chertsey "betwene the first day of October 1589 and the first day of October, 1590."

3 October 1590. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Admiral, co. Surrey. To restrain the making and transporting of Cast Ordinance of Iron in and from the said county.

8 October, 1590. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Accompanying letters that are returned to Sir William.

21 November, 1590. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Condoling with Sir William on the sudden and unexpected death of his daughter.

24 November, 1590. Letter from Thomas Cornwaleys to Sir William Moore, knt. About some recent proceedings in Chancery. Dated from the writer's "lodginge at Dr. Turner's house in Fetter Lane."

18 December, 1590. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching recent disorders in Windsor forest. From Cowdrey.

1590. Letter from Thomas Churchar to Sir William More, knt. About the fishery of "the Tylfor Ryver." Dated on "the last day of Trynetye terme."

4 January, 1591. Letter of William Howard, Sir William More, and Francis Carew, commissioners touching Jesuits, co. Surrey, to Lords of the Council. Certifying that the persons appointed to the commission are well-affected in religious matters and fit persons to act on such a commission; and recommending certain persons to be added to the commission, some of the present commissioners not being resident in the county.

6 January, 1591. Certificate of John Sanforde and others (commissioners in the town of Farnham, co. Surrey, for the discovery of Jesuits) that Mrs. Elizabeth Ireton has absented herself from church for a year or more past: and that John Hadie, though sometimes present at church, does not come there "orderlie to the beginning of service." Another certificate of the same kind, dated at Farnham, 10 April 1592.

8 January, 1591. Information (signed by Thomas Key, parson of St. Nicholas in Guilford, and Peter German, minister of Trinitie . . . in the same place, and two laymen) that one Redall alias Ridall, lately inhabiting the manor house of Guldeford Park and still having recourse thereto, is a recusant. The informants further certify that they know of no other recusant in Guildford.

11 January, 1591. Certificate of the provisions taken for her majesties household and stable in the parishe of Send and Ripley, in the hundred of Woking, co. Surrey, since 1 October, 1590.—Also, a similar certificate of provisions taken in the same parish between 1 October 1589 and 1 October 1590.

12 January, 1591. Certificate of John Vyncent, constable of Pirforde, William Rydon thelder and John Dydelesdon, touchinge the purway for the queenes highnes householde and stable. Similar certificate for the year 1590, touchinge the parish of Horzell, signed by the constables and certain inhabitants thereof. Also, certificates of the same kind (made in years 1589, 1590, and 1591) touchinge purveyance in parish of Thorp towards her majesty's stables.

12 January, 1591. Warrant, from Commissioners touching Jesuits, &c. co. Surrey, to the High Constables of the hundred of Blackheath, to bring Richard Lumleighe of Wynteshall in the parish of Shalford, gentleman, before the same commissioners at Guildford on the 15th inst., there to answer questions respecting the recusancy with which he stands charged. The constables are further ordered to search Mr. Lumleighe's house "for popishe bookes, agnus dei, bulls or other "popishe instrumentes or reliques," and also for suspected or unknown persons.—Also, a warrant of the same date from the same commissioners to the High Constables of the hundred of Woking, for the arrest of one Redalle alias Ridalle, late an inhabitant of the manor-house in Guildford park and now a sojourner at Send in the said hundred.—Also, another warrant (dated 7 March 1591) from the same commissioners to the same high constables, for the arrest of the same William Ridall alias Rider, and also for the arrest of his wife.—Also, a certificate (from which the signatures have been cut,) dated 1 April 1592, "that William Rydall of Sende" aforesaide yoman didd come to dyvnye service to the "parishe churche of Sende, the nyne and twenteith "daye of Marche."

12 January 1591. Warrant of Commissioners touching Jesuits, &c., co. Surrey, to the High Constables of the hundred of Woking. For the arrest of Roger Borrowe, Thomas Thorpe, George Mabauke and Rose Foster, recusants, dwelling in the lodge at Henlie Park.

15 January, 1591. Return, made on oath by John Smyth, Thomas Harward and Christofer Harward to Sir William More, knt., and the justices of the peace of co. Surrey, of the quantities of all kinds of provision "served for her majesties householde within the "parish of Marrowe," in the two years ending last Michaelmas.

27 January 1591. A Breefe Rehersall of a speech that past the Lord Montague before diuerse of his friendes, after a dinner to which he had invited them at West Horsley, co. Surrey.

20 February, 1591. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Requiring the said deputies to send to the waterside in London on the 28th inst., 100 of the tallest and most sufficient and best equipt of their trained men in the said shire, for her majesty's service in a matter of "greate importance, and noe lesse touchinge the state "and saftie of this realme then that of France."

3 March, 1591. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Accompanying letters from the Privy Council for filling up the vacancies in the companies sent at sundry times by the county into foreign service.

7 March, 1591. Paper of representations headed "The "Presentment for the towne and parishe of Farnam in "the county of Surrey." Signed by the curate (John Sandford) and four other inhabitants (Peter Hampden, John More, John Fygge, and William Wealch) of the said parish, this document certifies that the parish harbours no Jesuits, Seminaries or open Recusants, but that "one William Pyke, gentleman, dwelleth in the abbey "of Wauerley, who baptizeth and burieth his people at "Farnham churche aforesaid," whose wife and family have not attended divine service at the said church during the last three years.

11 March, 1591. Certificate of John Catisbye, deputy-marshal of the prison of her majesty's Bench, that his only prisoners, now in the said prison for matters pertaining to religion, are Thomas Clyston, priest, committed "by the Judges of the court of her majesties "benche from the highe barre the xiith daie of Aprill "laste paste in case of premunire," and Edward Risheton, a priest, committed by the same judges on 14 Nov. ult., being "one of the compagne that were "condemned with Campion at the highe barre in "Michaelmas terme laste for treason."

W.
MOLYNEUX
E

M.
NEUX, sq.

27 March, 1591. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. About a levy of soldiers in the said shire.

5 April, 1591. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William's good offices to obtain the election of the writer's cousin, Sir Henry Weston, to the vacant place of a verderer of Windsor Forest.

23 April, 1591. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knight, and George More, esq., appointed by order of Mr. Vice-Chamberlain to determine a matter in controversy between the writer's servant Richard Hill, and Mr. Evelyn. Begging the said arbitrators to hear Mr. Hill's counsel and witnesses.

24 April, 1591. Letter from Sir Owyn Hopton, formerly lieutenant of the Tower of London, to Sir William More, knt., George More, esq., and Messrs. Vincent and Letchfield. Asking that some arrangement may be made to compensate the writer for twelve weeks' diet to William Mawgine, whilst a prisoner in the Tower of London. The writer assigns his retirement from the lieutenancy to a state of things, consequent on his too liberal treatment of prisoners and their slackness in paying for generous entertainment.

17 May, 1591. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Mr. William Howard and others, deputy-lieutenants for Surrey. Requesting that the beacons of the county may be watched as they were wont to be heretofore.

17 May, 1591. Private letter from lord-chancellor Hatton to the bishop of Winchester. Courteously informing the bishop of Lord Montague's bill against him in the court of Chancery, in respect to the fishing of the river Tyflood.

28 May, 1591. Letter from John archbishop of Canterbury to Sir William More, knt. Touching the unproved and probably malicious charges by one Bowell against one John Fenn, accusing the said Fenn of keeping lewd books and speaking lewd words. Though there are strong grounds for thinking the charges groundless, the primate holds that John Fenn should be bound to appear before the magistrates, whenever called upon to do so.

30 May, 1591. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. About a letter which the writer has received from the lord chancellor.

30 May, 1591. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching Lord Mountague's bill in chancery respecting the fishery of the river Tyflood.

14 June, 1591. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt. For the immediate discovery and arrest of "one Morgan sometymes of her maiesties" chappell, an obstinate and seditious papist," who "hathe wandred in lurking sorte vp and down this" great whyle from place to place and is nowe thought to be in Sutton, either in or about Sir Henry Weston's "howse, or at least yf he be not nowe there it is knownen, that at tymes by startes he vseth to come thither in" secret sorte, and perhaps not called by his right name."

23 June, 1591. Letter from the earl of Northumberland to Sir William More, knt., and George More, esq. In behalf of James Jenkinson (servant of Thomas Stanley) who is charged with some offence by one Champion, who in past time accused the writer's servant Lyne of the same offence. From the writer's house near Ilye-bridge, in London.

29 June, 1591. Letter from W. Howard, deputy-lieutenant of co. Surrey to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to come to Lethered, and there confer with the writer and their comrades in the deputy-lieutenancy of the said shire, Sir Francis Carew and Sir Thomas Browne, concerning a levy of men to be raised in Surrey, and "sent ouer with my lord of Essex into" Brytanye." The writer continues, "I receyved a" letter latelye from you wherebye I do vnderstande" that you haue receyved a letter from my lords of the" Counsell to send for alle suche as haue had pryvye" seales, and haue not answered ether the monye or the" discharge, and to bynd them ouer to appeare before" the Lords of the Counsell. I praye you forbear to" send for suche as haue receyved there pryvye seales" vntille you and I do mete; then you shall knowe" more. For it wolde touche me verye greatlye in" credyte to haue them trobled for that I haue dis"charged, and I haue verye latelye mayde bothe my "lord my brother and Mr. Forskewe acquaynted there"with, and I knowe no cause why I may not as well
"discharge those I haue discharged as the greate number "that ar discharged by others; and you shall vnder-
"stand more at oure next meeting."

E 84062.

4 July, 1591. Letter from W. Howard to the justices of the peace for co. Surrey. Desiring a large remission of fine appointed to be levied on William Turner, servant to the writer's cousin Tymelave, and the letter's bearer, for keeping an uncertificated ale-house: as the writer licensed the man to keep an ale-house, but forgot to "certeifye the recognisance."

10 July, 1591. Letter from Lord Hunsdon to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that her majesty intends to make a progress to Portsmouth, visiting Loseley, Cowdrey and Petworth on her way; and asking whether her highness had better go from Loseley to Cowdrey and then to Petworth, or visit Petworth before she goes to Cowdrey. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

10 July, 1591. Letter from W. Fleetwoode to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the concealment of one Clypsham who is said (by Mr. Marburye, the prisoner in the King's Bench) to be lurking in a parsonage house in Surrey, known to Sir William.

28 July, 1591. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Requiring the said Justices of the Peace to ascertain by examination on oath of high constables, petty constables and other persons, what provisions have been delivered, and at what rates they have been delivered, out of the said county into her majesty's household, for the use thereof, between 1 Oct. 1589 and 1 Oct. 1590, and between 1 Oct. 1590 and the day on which the inquisition of the said justices may be brought to an end.

30 July, 1591. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord Admiral, lieutenant of Surrey. Touching a levy of soldiers in the said shire.

23 August, 1591. Letter from Sir Thomas Browne to Sir William More, knt., and the rest of the commissioners for the subsidy, co. Surrey. Calling the commissioners' attention to the greatness of his debts, and the further reduction of his means by his assignments of revenue to his two sons the writer begs that he may be assessed to the subsidy with proper consideration of these facts.

1 November, 1591. Letter from Robert earl of Leicester to Sir William Moore, knt., and Thomas Lyefeld, esq. Requiring the examination of one Nycholas Wodde of Cobham, co. Surrey, as to his disorderly hunting and killing of conies and deer in Byfleet park.

23 November, 34 Elizabeth. Letters of commission, under the Great Seal, appointing Thomas bishop of Winchester, Charles lord Howarde high admiral of England, John lord Lumley, Thomas lord Burghe, William Howard, esquire, Sir William Moore, knight, Sir Frauncis Carewe, knight, Sir Thomas Browne, knight, Marten Heton dean of Wynchester, Michael Reyniger archdeacon of Wynchester, William Saye chancellor of the bishop aforesaid, Thomas Lyfield, Richard Bostock, George Moore, Laurence Stoughton, John Agmondesham, Robert Levesey, and John Parker, esquires, to be commissioners in the county of Surrey "to enquire" "diligently of the secrett repaire into our realme of a" "number of seminaries, priestes and Jesuittes, of mali"cious purpose to seduce diuers of our people from "their duties to God and to vs, and to renounce their "allegiance, and to adhere to the Kinge of Spaine and
"the Pope, whensoever they should offer to attempt
"any invasion against our realme." With the printed Articles of Instruction attached to the patent.

33 Elizabeth. Bishoprick of Winchester. The Account of John Goldwell, esq., the deputy of Thomas Fleming, esq., Treasurer of Wolsey, for one whole year ended at Michaelmas, 33 Elizabeth. A debt and credit account for a sum amounting to m^l m^l m^l cxxli. xviij. ob.

18 December, 1591. Letter from Dr. William Say, chancellor of the bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knt. and Gerge Moore, esq. Acknowledging a written application from justices of the peace for co. Surrey, dated on the 7th instant at Lethered, for the names of all recusants presented before him; and referring them for the requisite information to Mr. Blackwell, registrar of the archdeacon of Surrey.

12 December, 1591. Presentment of James Hobson of Wokinge, gentleman, for absenting himself from the divine service of his parish church for an entire year, to the Commissioners for the inquisition of Jesuits, &c. &c., by the parson and certain of the inhabitants of the said parish.

21 December, 1591. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William Moore, knt. About a royal commission, from which the archbishop is strangely omitted, and on which the dean and archdeacon of Winchester are as strangely placed, regard being had to their offices and places of residence. The writer encloses a letter from lord Mountecut about "the contrauersy of fishinge."

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
ESQ.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
ESQ.

26 December, 1591. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Reterring the orders for previous letters, of which the said Justices of the Peace have been strangely negligent, for a return of the provisions, &c. for her majesty's household, taken by the purveyors of the said household, during the two past years, from any persons resident in the said county: the return being required for the reformation of abuses committed by the same purveyors.

27 December, 1591. Trew certificate made by Thomas Rydley, D.C.L. Official to Cottingham, D.D., archdeacon of Surrey, unto the righte Worshipfull the Commissioners co. Surrey for the inquiring forth of suche persons as refuse to come to Church to heare devyne service, according to the tenor of a certain letter to the said Doctor Rydley directed by the sayd commissioners. 8 Dec. 1591.

28 December, 1591. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More and others, deputy lieutenants of Surrey. Accompanying a writ of Lords of the Council, "touching the discharge of watchinge of beakens in Surrey."

December, 1591. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to the bishop of Winchester. Respecting the writer's claims to "fishing at Waverley."

1591. Copy of a letter endorsed in contemporary writing. "My L. Chamberlain consernynge her Majesties progresse 1591," and apparently addressed by Sir William More to the said Lord Chamberlain, informing him what houses there are fit or rather not altogether unfit, to receive her Majesty between Loseley, where she purposes to lodge for one night, and Petworth or Cowdrey whither she will journey on leaving Guildford. The writer mentions "a little howse of M^r Lawrence Eliottes distant three myles from myne the direct waie towards either of the said places and within tenne myles of Petworth and eleven of Cowdrey," and "another the like howse in Shillinglie of one Bouners distant fyve myles the direct way to Petworth and about a myle out of the waie to Cowdrey" where kinge Edward dyed in his waye from Guildford parke to Cowdrey. Those two houses notwithstanding "ther is not anie convenient howse for that purpose standing neer the way from my howse towards Petworth and Cowdrey."

7 January, 1592. Certificate, signed by certain inhabitants of West Horsley and addressed to the Commissioners touching Jesuits, &c. &c., co. Surrey, that Elizabeth Richelais has on reconsideration so far departed from her previous recusancy as to appear at divine service in the church of the said parish.

26 of January, 1592. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Begging that Sir William and his son-in-law Mr. Wolley will offer themselves to be elected as knights of the shire for co. Surrey in this next parliament. From Hampton Courte.

21 May, 1592. Letter from Sir Henry Weston, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Touching the writer's "shepe-course by Tytinge," in respect to which the writer and Sir William are at variance.

26 June, 1592. Letter from Henry Graye to Sir William Moore, knt. Touching the lord-keeper's order for an inquisition "concerning the vsage of the common of pasture, estovers and bushes in controuersy betwene Mr. Cornwaleys and Mr. Amersham."

9 July, 1592. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore, knt., George Moore, esq., and five others, Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For further enquiry into all the circumstances of the recent riot of apprentices and others in Southwark, with a view to "discover the bottom of that insolent fact" and discover "the whole plot and conspiracie with the authors, abettors and partakers of the same."

23 July, 1592. Letter from Lords of the Council to Lord Charles Howard, Lord High Admiral of England, and Lieutenant of co. Surrey. Respecting measures against recusants.—Also returns from the church-wardens or other officers (appointed to search for Catholic recusants) from every parish.

3 August, 1592. Letter from Henry Graye to Sir William More, knt. Touching the matters in controversy between Master Cornwalthe and Master Amersham.

1592. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Announcing "that a high charge is laid upon the shire of Surrey, for the use of the queen's majesty's household, in which estates of the shire are interested, and it is urgent that the shire should contribute to the same, as it is a stranger to the queen's majesty's household."

5 September, 1592. Letter from Sir John Puckering, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for a present of venison to the writer. Endorsed "Lord Keepers."

13 September, 1592. Letter from lords of the council to the commissioners for Recusants and Seminaries, &c. co. Surrey. For the committal of the principal recusants of the shire to prison and safe-keeping in private houses, or in the common gaols if no private houses can be found to receive them.

23 October, 1592. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. The Queen having appointed the writer's cousin, Sir Thomas Gorge, knt., to be keeper of Guildford park, Sir William is asked to view the deer there, and introduce Sir Thomas to his office.

27 October, 1592. Letter from Sir Thomas Cecil. Consenting to an appointment for the despatch of business at Lethered. Dated from Wymbledon.

28 October, 1592. Receipt of Sir Rychard Rogers and dame Mary Rogers, his wife, for viii li. vi s. viii d. paid to them by George More of Loseley, co. Surrey, esq., "for the half yeares anytie due to be paide at the Feaste of St. Michael the Archaungell nowe laste paste, oute of the Manor and Farme of Holworth in the countie of Dorset, by vertue of a decree made in her Majesties Highe Corte of Chancerye betwene Edward More, esq. and Marie his wief complainants against vs Richard Rogers knt. and dame Marie his wief, deffts."—Also, similar receipt for the half-year ending Lady-day, 1594.

29 November, 1592. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching a commission under the Great Seal, respecting which the writer will find it difficult to meet his fellow commissioners. Dated from the bishop's house in Southwarke.

28 December, 1592. Letter from George Ansten to Sir William More, knt. Rendering thanks for the office in the receipt of the Exchequer to which Sir William has appointed the writer, who adds, "I humbly crave that it may please you to take in goode parte this smale gyft which I send your worship by this berer my servant, not as a thinge in any sort countervaylinge youre manifold curtesyes and favors done unto me, but as a token of my thankfull mynde for the same."

14 January, 1593. Letter from Mr. Edward Bowyer to Sir William More, knt. Touching the refusal of the borough of Southwark to contribute towards the relief of the maimed soldiers of the county of Surrey, though the majority of the maimed soldiers, to whom pensions were assigned last Sessions at Croydon, belong to and reside in the said borough.

18 January, 1593. Letter from Sir John Puckering to the lord Admiral, the Custos rotulorum, co. Surrey. For a return of the several hundreds in the said shire, and of the Justices of the Peace for co. Surrey residing in each of the same hundreds. Endorsed "Lord Keeper."

24 January, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching a levy of fifty able and sufficient men of the said shire for some speedy and especial service in the Low Countries to be led thither by persons appointed by Sir Frances Vere, knt.

27 January, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Directing Sir William for the remedy of disorders in Windsor forest, to see that "the three weeks courts" are duly held as in former time: and also directing Sir William to forward to the writer certain warrants, directed to the writer as lieutenant of Surrey but not yet received by him, of which warrants his deputy-lieutenants in the said shire are empowered to take copies.

2 February, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sirs William More and Francis Carewe, knts., deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Directing the said deputy-lieutenants to take the masters, &c. of the said county, in the absence of the writer's brother, William Howard, who is detained by service to the queen's majesty "beinge nowe vppon a remove hence to Ritchmont." Dated from Hampton Court.

7 February, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sirs William More and Francis Carewe, knts. Touching a high charge of 100*l*. for the coats, hose, stockings, shirts, shoes and swords of the fifty men levied in the shire of Surrey, for service in the Low Countries, under the leading of "Sir Francis Vere, whom her majesty worthy esteemeth."

2 April, 35 Elizabeth. Articles of agreement and composition had and made betweene the Right Honorable the Lordes of her Majesties most honorable Priuie

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

Councelle, being authorized by commission for that purpose, on the behalf of her Majestie on the one parte and the Worshipful George More and Ed. — Bowyer, esqs., on the other partie, being authorized to compound and conclude for the deliuerie of certain provisions towards the expenses of her Majesties howsehold oute of the countie of Surreye.

4 April, 35 Elizabeth. Articles (drawn on vellum) of agreement and composition had and made, &c. &c. Between the right honorable the Lordes of her Majesties Privie Councell, being authorized by commission for that purpose on the behalf of her Majestie, on the one partye, and the Worshipfulle George Moore, Robarte Livesey and Edmund Bowyer on the other partye, being authorised to compounde and conclude for the deliuerie of certain provisions towards the expences of her Maiesties moste honourable howse owte of the countie of Surreye. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1 May, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt., and George More, esq., magistrates for co. Surrey. Instructing the said justices of the peace (in regard to her majesty's determination to spend a considerable part of the summer in Surrey, and for the preservation of her majesty from the danger of pestilence "in this time of contagion") to make known throughout their division of the shire to all mayors, constables, &c. &c., her highness's pleasure that no inhabitant of the said division shall receive to nurse it in his house, &c. any child born in London or the suburbs thereof, or entertain any lodger coming from the same places, "upon payne of imprisonment and hir majesties ties grevous displeasure." It is further ordered that persons, "suspected of infection" in the same district, may be provided with necessaries in their own places so they need not wander abroad, spreading their disease. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

2 May, 1593. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. Objecting to the appointment Sir William has made of an unfit person to be his deputy-constable of Farnham Castle.

7 June, 1593. Letter from Lord Burghley to Sir William More, knt., and Mr. Stoughton, esq. Requesting the two magistrates for Surrey to enquire what trees have lately been felled in and near Guildeford park under the name of "dottards," and what timber may be felled there, in lieu of such "dottards," for the repair of the park-pale.

8 June, 1593. Letter from Lords of the Council to the sheriff and justices of the peace, co. Surrey. Touching the orders and requirements of the statute, passed in the last session of Parliament, for the relief of maimed soldiers and mariners.

11 June, 1593. Letter from Sir John Fortescue to Sir William More, knt. Directing Sir William to enquire into the state of her majesty's house at Stalton, and also into the state of the park-paling, and to make suggestions for the repair of the same.

23 June, 1593. Letter from the earl of Sussex to Sir William More, knt. Entreating Sir William to represent the writer (who is too sick to travel) at the christening of Lord Mountague's son, at which her Majesty the Queen and her lord-treasurer will be present.

30 June, 1593. Letter from Lord Buckhurst to Sir William More, knt. Announcing the time for the christening of Lord Mountague's son, on which occasion Sir William is to represent the earl of Sussex.

8 July, 1593. Letter from lords of the council to the Commissioners of the subsidy, co. Surrey. Giving directions for the prompt and complete collection of the "three subsidies and six fiftenths and Tenths to be payed" into her majesties Exchequer. Reference is made to the need of money for the support of the queen's forces in the Lowe Realmes, Normandie and Britayn.

19 July 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy lieutenants of co. Surrey. Directing forty-five soldiers in the said shire for service in France, to be commanded by one Captain Marshall, the writer's kinsman.

22 July, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sirs William More and Francis Carewe, knts., his deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey. Touching provision of money wherewith to pay for soldiers' coats and corslets; and announcing that Sir Thomas Browne, knt., will be urged to give more time and pains to the duties devolving on him as a deputy-lieutenant.

28 July, 1593. Letter from lord Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Granting to Sir William the office of Master of the Swans in co. Surrey, with the exception of swans in the main course of the Thames. "The bodie of the Teme running through the shire is to be excepted, but all the branches ar to pas within your circuit. But this order must be kept that the vpping of all the swans which ar within the said branches of the Teme may be vpped all in one day with the vpping of the Teme which is ordered to M. Maynard of Hampton Court who h. to the ordering of the Teme." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

29 July, 1593. Letter from lord Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Touching the privileges and powers of the Master of Swans in co. Surrey, the holder of which office has from ancient time paid a rent of xls. "The profet of that office," says the writer, "growes diversly as by divers bookes and orders as wel printed as written may appere, which, if you take the office vpon you, I wil send you, for al strai swans, all swans unmarked, all wild swans, all tame swans that fly, all swans of felons, owlaved parsons or traiters, and many other cases ar the master of the swans right. He is also to hane xiid. for every ground burd, and al amercyamentes and penalties that shalbe inflicted for any offenses, which at any cession of swans shal be set vpon them." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

30 July, 1593. Letter from Mr. R. Maylard, the Master of the Swans on the Thames, to Sir William More, knt. Touching appointments for "driving the river of Weybridge and Molsey" and upping the swans on the Thames. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1 August, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Mr. William Howard, Sir William More, and others, deputy-lieutenants of Surrey. Dismissing a force recently levied in Surrey, her majesty having received certain intelligence from France.

19 August, 1593. Letter from lords of the council to William Howard, esq., Sir William More, knt., and the other Commissioners for the subsidy, co. Surrey. Acknowledging the Commissioners' letter of information as to their own assessments to the subsidy, and observing that, though some of them are fairly assessed, others of them exhibit a reprehensible disposition to avoid their obligations in respect to the tax. Given at Windsor.

20 August, 1593. Letter from J. Wolley to Sir William More, knt. Ordering the speedy seizure of the goods of one Chapman alias Gatton, forfeited to the crown by reason of his murder of one Lucocke: the said goods having been granted by her majesty to the writer's friend Mr. Kyllisett.

29 September, 1593. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. Touching the orders and requirements of the statute, passed in the last parliament for the relief of disabled soldiers and mariners.

4 October, 1593. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching a royal commission for the co. of Surrey on which the writer has been placed.

5 October, 1593. Letter from the archbishop of Canterbury to the sheriff for co. Surrey. About the commission for visiting colleges, hospitals, alms-houses and other charitable places in co. Surrey.

17 October, 1593. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More and others, magistrates for co. Surrey. Directing that a poor maimed soldier, named Thomas Tayler, a native of Cobham, should be relieved.

21 October, 1593. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of the Peace for co. Surrey. For the repayment to the several parishes of certain moneys raised therein to defray the equipment of soldiers appointed to service in France, but not disbursed, as the order for the said soldiers was countermanded.

11 November, 1593. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt., and George More, William Morgan, and Lawrence Stoughton, esqs. Announcing that a commission of Oyer and Determiner has been issued to the said justices of peace, co. Surrey, and others, for the immediate trial and punishment of the notorious thief Edmund Strudwick and other flagrant thieves recently apprehended in the said shire.

25 November, 1593. Letter from Sir Thomas Cecill, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William, who has had much experience in the making of pools, to send a skilful workman to the writer, for the repair of the embankments of his great pool, broken in consequence of unskilful construction.

26 November, 1593. Letter from Edward Moore to his friend and kinsman Sir William Moore, knt., at his house co. Surrey. Begging Sir William to take into his service the son of one Mr. Pye, an honest man and curate of Colchester. The writer speaks of himself as "a stranger in this countie." Dated from Stanwaye.

13 January, 1594. Letter from Thomas lord Buckehurst to the Lieutenant and the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For a certificate as to the quantity of woad

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

which should be permitted to be sown yearly in the same shire.

21 February, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Announcing that the peace of Yvelly has been appointed to the command of the hundred in it, now being levied in the said county, and that the writer's brother Sir "Roberte Carie" is ready to restore twenty of the armours which the same county provided "with the company that he led into France."

24 April, 1594. Letter from Sir Julius Caesar to Sir William More, knt. Touching "a court kept at Arundell, which seemeth to be done by some of Lord of Buckhurst's deputies, on whom my Lord Admiral hath bestowed the viceadmirallshippe of Sussex," since the death of Mr. Ryman.

8 March, 1594. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Explaining the circumstances under which the writer bestowed the vice-admiralty of co. Sussex on Lord Buckhurst, vice Captain Ryman, who is believed to be lost without "hope lefte of his returne," on condition that should the captain reappear he should be reinstated in the said office, in accordance with his patent relating thereto. How lord Howard came to appoint captain Ryman to that office in the place of Sir William is thus set forth,—"I was enformed by capitaine Ryman that for a peece of wine or som such trifle you deputed him in your place, and afterwards were contented to suffer him to procure a patent thereof in his owne name, whiche nevertheles I wold not credite before I had see much by your owne letter certified vnto me, vpon receate whereof I made him a patent of that viceadmyralty for terme of his life."

11 March, 1594. Letter from George Goringe to George More, esq. Accompanying three legal instruments, i.e. a release, a grant of an office, and a lease for a thousand years of a part of Burtton.

12 March, 1594. Letter from Elizabeth (lady) Wolley to her father Sir William More, knt. Touching her delivery of Sir William's letters to the Lord Admiral and Mr. Howard about the appointment of Lord Buckhurst to the vice-admiralty of Sussex, and her speech to them on the same subject. The writer would have ere this reported to her father the result of the Lord Admiral's speech about the matter to the judge of the admiralty, "but yt fell owte that the queene dyned with him" (i.e. the Lord Admiral) "as this daye whom he had no sooner brought to the courte, but he presently departed back agayne to his owne howse at Chelsye."

19 March, 1594. Letter from Elizabeth (lady) Wolley to her father Sir William Moore, knt. About the writer's speech to the Lord Admiral and his answers concerning his appointment of Lord Buckhurst to the vice-admiralty of co. Sussex vice captain Ryman. From the court.

7 April, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey: together with a note by his lordship's son, W. Howard. Touching a levy of soldiers in the said shire.

— April, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Reflecting on the insolence which the mayor of Guildford has shown to the writer.

13 May, 1594. Letter from Elizabeth (Lady) Wolley to her father Sir William Moore, knt. About her latest speech with the Lord Admiral and lord Buckhurst respecting the last-named lord's appointment to the vice-admiralty of co. Sussex vice captain Ryman. "I told," says the writer, "my lord that you told my Lord of Buckhurst you had agreed with Ryman to give you xx li. a yeare for yt and that my lord of Buckhurstes answer was to you againe that he thought yt was not worth half the money, whiche my Lord Admyrall muche marvell at his speeche, for there is now so much ordynance and wync as cometh to co. li., and would have you send to enter vpon yt, he protesteth that he had rather you should have yt then my Lord."

31 May, 1594. Letter from Lords of the Council to commissioners for musters co. Surrey. Touching a levy of a thousand soldiers in the shire for the queen's service, to be trained in bands of 200 men each, under the command of Sir Francis Weston, Francis Carewe, and Thomas Browne, esqs., and George Moore, esq.

20 July, 1594. Letter from lords of the council to the Commissioners for the subsidy in co. Surrey. Complaining of commissioners' neglect of previous instructions, which should be carried out strenuously. Dated 15 July 1594.

26 July, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to George More, esq. Thanking Mr. More for his good will to accompany the writer "this intended voiage if it had held," and announcing that, her Majesty having "altered her determynacion and stayed my Lord of Essex and my selfe," the voyage will not be made.

27 July, 1594. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching a levy of one hundred able men, to be raised in the said shire, and shipped from Portsmouth to Britaine: fifty of them being men who have served in the trained bands.

27 July, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to ascertain by examination of witnesses whether Robert Gavell is under obligation to build a new and maintain a bridge over the river near Cobham Church.

28 July, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to William Howard, esq., and others, magistrates of co. Surrey. Announcing that the county is excused from levying all the soldiers recently required of it, and is now asked for only fifty men.

1 August, 36 Elizabeth. Patent appointing John archbishop of Canterbury, lord-keeper Puckeridge, Charles lord admiral Howard, John lord Lumley, Thomas lord Buckhurst, Sir John Woolley, knt., her majesty's Latin secretary, Sir Thomas Cecil, knt., William Howard, esq., Sir William Moore, knt., Sir Francis Carewe, knt., Sir Thomas Browne, knt., Edmund Tylney, master of the Revels, Robert Forth and Mathew Carewe, two of the masters of the chancery, Gregory Lovell, Thomas Lyfyld, William Myll, Richard Drake, Edmund Saunder, John Reade, Thomas Vincent, George Moore, John Evelyn, Nicholas Saunder, Laurence Stoughton, Richard Bestock, Edmund Bowyer, Robert Lyvesaye, Richard Lashford, Francis Anger, Henry Slyfeld and William Gardynier, esquires, to be commissioners for assessing, levying and collecting the second of the three entire subsidies granted to her majesty by parliament in the 35th year of her reign.

11 August, 1594. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir William More, knt., Mr. Sergeaunte Kingsmill, Mr. William Neale and others, commissioners to "enquire of the spoiles and wastes made within the woodes of the bishopricke of Winchester." Together with a list of the "articles to be answered vnto by the othe of the officers and such other persone as shall be produced on the behalf of the executrix of Thomas Cowper late Bisshoppe of Winchester."

19 August, 1594. Letter from Sir Julius Caesar to Sir William Moore, knt. "Whereas in tymes past the bearer hereof hath had out of the Parke of Farneham belonging to the Busshoppricke of Winchester certaine White Cley for the making of grene pottes usually drunke in by the gentlemen of the Temple. And nowe vnderstanding of some restraint thereof, and that you (amongst others) are authorized there in divers repectes during the vacancye of the said Busshoppricke. My request therefore vnto you is, and the rather for that I am a member of the said house, that you would in favour of vs all, permytt the bearer hereof, to digge and carye awaie so muche of the said claye as by him shalbe thought sufficient for the furnishing of the saide howse with grene pottes as aforesaid, paying as he hath heretofore for the same. In accomlishement whereof my self with the whole societie shall acknowledge ourselves much beholden vnto you" &c. &c. From the Inner Temple. (Vide Kempe's Loseley MSS.)

11 September, 1594. Certificate of marriage:—"On the day and yeare above wrytten were joyned together in holye matrimonie Francis Wolleye and Marie Hawtrie according to the forme prescribed in the booke of Common Prayer by vertue of a license graunted by the Lord Archebyschopp of Canterbury dated 7^o die mensis Septembris a. 1594, and with the consente of all the parentes of the sayd married persons and in the presence of vs, whose names are vnder subscribed and of divers other credible persons.— Wynifrede Pigott, John Pigott, George Maynwaringe, Rafe Latham, Jhon Foxley, Jhon Allen, Austen Freeman."

20 October, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that the writer, as custos rotulorum (having in former time appointed to the office of clerk of the peace co. Surrey his servant Maylard whom God has called), now appoints his servant Francis Joy to the same office vice the said Maylard, deceased.

6 November, 1594. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore, knt., and George Moore, Lawrence Stoughton and William Morgan, esqs. Enjoining the said magistrates of co. Surrey to visit their neighbour John Lusser at his house, where his father George

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

Lussher gentleman recently died; and enjoining the same John to deliver certain writings, formerly the property of his said deceased father, to William Lussher eldest son and heir of the said George, or to show sufficient reason for detaining the same writings from his said elder brother.

8 November, 1594. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Requiring the said sheriff and magistrates to take order for mitigating the scarcity of corn, and the distresses consequent thereon in the said shire: and "to reforme the greate abyses in superfluous expence of "bred and drinke in common alehouses and victuallinge howses, with disorders also thereby commytted."

23 November, 1594. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. In which the writer again announces that he has appointed his servant Francis Joye, gent., to the office of clerk of the peace, co. Surrey, vice Rowland Maylard, deceased, whom the writer in like manner appointed to the same office by virtue of stat. 37 Hen. VIII. Sir William is desired to aid and assist the new Clerk of the Peace.

4 December, 1594. Letter from John Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt., Lawrence Stoughton, esq., and Nicholas Saunders, esq. Appointing the said three gentlemen to enquire into and arrange the controversy between Thomas Bennet and Anthonye Cowper touching an annuity.

14 December, 1594. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Requiring Sir William, as the writer's deputy-custos rotulorum, to deliver to Frances Joye, the newly appointed Clerk of the Peace for co. Surrey, all rolls and writings needful to him for the performance of the duties of the said office.

17 December, 1594. Letter (signed, W. Howard) to Sir William More, knt., and the other Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. Touching the recent appointment to "the clerkshipp of the peace." Mention is made of the Lord Keeper's opinion "that the guyfte of this "office did whollie and absolutelie belonge vnto my "brother, and that her Majesties patent vnto the other "cannot be good, which the Lord Keeper offered to "make manifest vnto the counsaile on either side."

19 December, 1594. Letter from Sir John Puckeringe, knt., Lord Keeper, to Sir William More, knt. Acknowledging the receipt of a present and remembrances from Sir William, whose daughter also and her husband have gratified the writer with a similar compliment.

21 December, 1594. Letter from J. Wolley to Sir William More. Touching the Lord Admiral's action in the matter of Mr. Austen and the clerkship of the peace, and the way in which the writer debated the matter with his lordship.

21 December, 1594. Letter from lady Southampton to Sir William More, knt. In behalf of Christopher Buckle (appointed by the writer, at her cousin Hauile's nomination, to be the underkeeper of Dogmanfield Parke) who would fain retain the good opinion of his former master, Sir William More.

1594. Letter from Thomas Edwardes, at the court, to Lady Wolley, at Loseley, in attendance on her father in a sudden and severe illness. "I recommended youre "dewtey and service to the Right Hon. the Countesse "of Warwycke, who at that instante wyllde me to "certefye you, what a carefull respect her majestie helde "for the recovery of that good knyghte your father." The queen wishes Lady Wolley to remain with her father till he is perfectly recovered, and to inform her from time to time of his progress. Had not Lady Wolley anticipated the royal concern by going so quickly to her father, the queen would have sent Mr. Wyllyame Howarde to visit the invalid. "Your honorable frendes "the lady Warwick, the lady Comberlande, and lady "Veare have them recommended to your ladyship."

1594. Rough draft (not dated), in Sir William More's handwriting, of a letter written by him to the Lord Admiral respecting lord Buckhurst's appointment to vice-admiralty of co. Sussex. "I made," says the writer, "Mr. George Ryman my deputy in that place, as may "apere by an instrument of deputacioun remaynyng in "the hands of his brother, whom I also assygnd to "suply in his absence the place; I neuer geuyng my "consent that he should take your lordship's patent in "his owne name, neither did I euer here before this "present that he so did."

4 January 1595. Letter from Lords of the Council to Justices of the Peace for co. Surrey. Acknowledging the said justices' diligence in making provisions for her majesty's navy; and ordering the delivery of money to Bartholomey Skott and Dupper.

9 January, 1595. Letter from lord Hunsdon to Sir William More, knt. After my hartie commendacions. Whereas I have had by her Majesties sufferance Arrundell Howse to put in my armour and other stuffe that I have: It is now so fallen out, as by the death of the Earle of Arrundell, to be part of my ladyes joynture, whose means presentlie to come to yt her selfe, and therbie I am forced to seek for somme other place to laye my taffe in. And understanding that you have allredie parted with part of your howse to somme that means to make a playe howse of yt: And also hearing that you meane to lett or sell youre other howse, whiche once I had also; Theis are hartelie to pray and desyer you, that I may have yt at your hand, giving for yt either as much rent, or otherwise as anie other shall doe, and rather more; And if yt be for Rent, you shall have sufficient Bondes and shurties, as yourselfe shalbe satisfied withall, both for rent, and keeping of yt in sufficient reparacions. Wherein as you shall doe me a verie singular pleasure at this tyme, so shall you find me allwayes readie to requite yt both to both you or anie of you to the uttarmost of my power. So praing you of answere by this berer, I commyt you to the Almightye. Somerset Howse this ixth of Januarii 1595.

Your verie louing Frynde

J. HUNSDON.

11 January 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knight, and George More, esq. Begging them to ascertain the truth of the case between the writer's servant Henry Rawson and one—Mustione who appears from Henry Rawson's statement to have defrauded the said Henry by taking 20*l*. of him in full payment of a sum raised on mortgage of a lease, and then withholding the lease which the said Mustione was bound to surrender on the said payment.

12 January, 1596. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir William More, knt. Touching the lord "Montecuts" claim to "the fishinge of the river "of Frensham."

4 February 1595. Indenture between Sir William More of Loseley, co. Surrey, knight, and James Burbage (or Burbadge) of Hollowell, co. Middlesex, gentlemen; whereby the former conveys to the said James Burbage and his heirs &c. for ever, and the latter acquires possession of—

(1) "All those seaven greate upper Romes as they are "nowe devided being all vpon one flower, and sometyme "being one greate and entire rome with the roufe over "the same covered with lead, . . . and also all "that great paire of wyndinge staires with the staire- "case therevnto belonging, which leadeth upp vnto "the same seaven greate upper romes oute of the greate "yarde there, which doth lye next vnto the Pipe Office, "which seaven greate upper romes were late in the "tenure or occupacioun of William De Lawne, doctour "of phisicke or of his assigns, and are scituate lyenge "and beinge within the precincte of the late Blacke- "fryers Preachers nere Ludgate in London."—(2) "Also "all those romes and lodgings with the kitchen there- "vnto adioynning called the Middle Romes or Middle "stories late being in the tenure or occupacioun of "Rocco Bonnetto and now being in the tenure or occu- "pacioun of Thomas Buskett gentleman . . . which "said middle romes or middle stories do extend in "length Southwarde to a parte of the house of Sir "George Cary knight . . . together also with the "dore and entry which do lye nexte vnto the gate "entering into the house of the said Sir George Cary, "and vsed to and from the said Middle romes or middle "stories oute of a lane or way leading vnto the house "of Sir George Cary."—(3) "And also all those two "upper romes or chambers with a little buttry at the "north ende of the said seaven great upper romes and "our the west side thereof nowe being in the occupa- "cioun of Charles Bradshaw," together with other "rooms and chambers adjoining, and "also all that litle "yarde or peice of voide ground with the bricke wall "therevnto belonging, lyenge and being next the "Queene's high-way leadinge vnto the ryver of Thames, "wherein an olde pryvie now standeth as the same is "nowe enclosed with the same bricke wall and with a "pale, next adjoining to the house of the said Sir "William More nowe in thoccupacioun of the Right "Honourable the lord Cobham on este parte, and "the street leadinge to the Thames there on the west "parte, and the said yarde next the said Pipe office on "the South part, and the house of the said Lorde Cob- "ham on the north parte." Further, Sir William More conveys to "James Burbage and his heires and

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

" assigns forever free and quiet ingress egress and regres to and from the strete or waye leadinge from Ludgate unto the Thames over vppon and thirugh the saide great yarde next the said Pipe Office." The consideration for this conveyance is the sum of 60*l*. (six hundred pounds) paid by James Burbage to Sir William More. Signed by the purchaser " James Burbadge."

15 February 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Accompanying a writ from the lord keeper to the writer.

20 February 1596. Commission signed by Lords of the Council to George Moore, esq., to be collector of the loan, co. Surrey, for her majesty's use.

11 March, 1595. Letter from lord Burghley to Sir George More, knt. With instructions that notice must be given to certain lenders of a loan to her majesty's use, in co. Surrey, of the postponement of repayment of the said loan for six months in addition to the six months of an already notified postponement.

23 March, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Announcing that the writer has appointed Mr. George More to act as an especial assistant to the said deputies of the lieutenancy co. Surrey; in consideration of the official duties which so often withdraw the writer's brother William Howard from the shire, and of the growing infirmity of Sir William More, who is less capable of official labour than formerly, and of the " private occasions" which too often lure Sir Thomas Browne from the duties which have no strong attractions for him.

23 March, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to George More, esq. Declining with cordial courtesy Mr. More's offer to accompany the writer to sea; his lordship's decision in this matter having the approval of her majesty, who, knowing Mr. More's merits as a " justicer," and bearing in mind his father's growing infirmities, is unwilling that Surrey should lose so efficient a magistrate at a critical moment. Mr. More is further urged to take office as " an espetiall asistant" of " the former deputy-lieutenants" of the same shire.

24 March, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. For the prompt delivery to Messrs. Quarles and Darell of the " baken," required of the county of Surrey for the victualling of her majesty's navy; it being found impossible to buy the same in other counties, as they have likewise been ordered to provide " baken" for the same purpose.

31 March, 1595. Letter from J. Wolley to his father-in-law Sir William More, knt., and Lawrence Stoughton and Nicholas Saunders, esqs. Touching the dispute between Thomas Bennet and Anthony Cowper about an annuity out of Bray's Lands in Chobham.

31 March, 1595. Letter from Sir John Wolley, knt., to Sir William More, knt. Reporting what has passed between the writer and the Lord Admiral with respect to his lordship's appointment of a vice-admiral of co. Sussex, vice captain Ryman deceased, over the head of Sir William who, it seems, never conceived of himself as relinquishing all title to the same vice-admiralty, when arranging that captain Ryman should have the office for his life. The writer thinks the Lord Admiral (who is well affected to Sir William) will speak on the matter to lord Buckhurst, the recently appointed vice-admiral.

1 April, 1595. Receipt of " Capten Jefferie Dutton " muster-master of 1600 selected men deduced into " bandes in the county of Surrey," in part payment of a larger sum to be levied within the said shire to compensate the said Captain Dutton and his lieutenant, Edward Hide, for their pains in mustering and training the said soldiers between the present date and 17 October next.

4 April, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the recovery of certain deserters from the company of men recently levied to go to the Low Countries with Sir Francis Vere, who, instead of prosecuting them by law to death for their said offence, would rather " reclayne them " and instructe them in the discipline of war." On being captured the deserters, named in an accompanying list, are to be delivered to Captain Bagnoll, who will forthwith conduct them to Sir Francis Veare.

7 April, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Mr. George More, Mr. Robert Levesey, Mr. Serjeant Owinstead, and Mr. William Gaynsford, esquires. Appointing the four said gentlemen to act as arbitrators for a final settlement of the controversies betwixt Richard Bostocke and William Foster, esquires.

7 May, 37 Elizabeth. Patent of the grant, during pleasure, to Elizabeth viscount Mountague of the office of Steward of the manor and hundred of Godaiming.

26 May, 1595. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Custos Rotulorum co. Surrey. Directing in consideration of the dearth and high price of corn, and the distress of the poor in the shire) that contributions be levied from the richer folk, wherewith to buy corn that may be sold at reasonably low rates to the indigent.

8 June, 1595. Copy of a letter, addressed under Queen Elizabeth's sign-manual and signet to the lieutenant of Surrey. For a levy of horsemen for service in Ireland.

10 June, 1595. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to use his influence with his kinswoman Mrs. Hull, widow of the late Gyles Hull, so that she may cease from hindering the executors of the writer's grandfather from " avoiding " a certaine myne lyinge at Hambleden," which the writer's said ancestor bought of the said Gyles Hull.

14 June, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt., one of the writer's deputy-lieutenants for co. Surrey. Instructing Sir William to forward to the writer all letters and commissions of her majesty and her council (for levies of man and other matters to be done in the said lieutenancy) not yet delivered to his hand; keeping copies of the same for his own use and the information of the other deputy-lieutenants.

14 June, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. About a levy of horsemen.

22 July, 1595. Collection of scriptural sentiments against the king of Spain, the Duke of Alva, the Jesuits, and the leaders of the Spanish party. Addressed by George Bohn to Mr. George Moore at Loseley.

July, 1595. Letter from Lord Keeper Puckering to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to send a promised buck to the writer at the house of one Mr. Puckering of Crutchet Fryers by 14th of August.

3 August, 1595. Letter from Sir John Fortescue to Sir William More, knt. Respecting the opposition and hindrance offered by one Robert Connell of Chittingfold, co. Surrey, yeoman, to Hughe Ridley, woodman, who has her majesty's warrant to fell certain timber in the hundred of Godleyman in the said county.

17 August, 1595. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the lord high admiral, the Lieutenant of co. Surrey. Ordering " a viewe to be taken as well of the " foote-bandes as of the horse in that countie." Dated from Greenwich.

28 August, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching the musters to be taken in the shire.

6 September, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Announcing that the Privy Council has recommended Captain Dutton to be appointed, with reasonable payment for his services from the shire, to train and lead the horse and foot thereof.

6 September, 1595. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lieutenant of the county of Surrey. Ordering a muster and view of the horse and foot of the county; and recommending that " Capten Jeffrey " Dutton, being a man that hath bene exercised in the " warres and well hable to direct all sortes of soldiours " and officers of bandes how to serve and vse their " armour and weapons," be appointed on proper terms to drill the soldiers of the shire. Dated from Nonsuch.

15 September, 1595. Letter from Lord Keeper Puckering to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for " the good veneson " which arrived in London opportunely.

16 September, 1595. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. Postponing to 20th October the time for the return of the certificate respecting the musters of the said shire; and insisting that Londoners, resident in same county, contribute to the military service thereof, in accordance with previous orders. Dated from Nonsuch.

16 September, 1595. Letter from Elizabeth (lady) Wolley to her father Sir William More at Loseley. After reporting the Queen's regret at Sir William's speedy return from the court to Loseley, the writer adds, " Yesternyght in the eveninge her majestie went " abroade a-hawkyng, and Sir Robert Cycill's hawke " killed three partryches, whiche he presented the " queene with, and my self being in place her majestie " gaue them me, withe expresse charge, that I should " send them to you this daye againe dyner, desyringe " you to eate them for her sake. Since Sir Robert " Cycill begged them of me, which I could not deny

W. M.
MOLYNE
Esq.

W. M.
LYNEUX,
Esq.

"him of. I haue sent this messenger of purpose to you. prayinge you to take knowledge of the receypte of the partryches, and to certifie you of this her Majesties greate care of you . . . She hath commanded me to send for my sonne, notwithstanding if yt shall please her to forgett yt, I meane to forgett also to send for him. In the mean tyme I praie you to gyve charge that he maye practise his frenche, for feare her Majestie shall call to me for him againe." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

16 September, 1595. Letter from Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. A requisition of "c quarters of wheate, c of porkes, and c fletches of bacon," to be provided by the said county for the victualling of her majesty's navy, and delivered to her "majesties housholde servauntes and officers James Quarles and Marmaduke Darrell, esq., surveighors generall for the victuals of the said navie."

21 September, 1595. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, lieutenant of co. Surrey. A repetition of the letter from the council to the same lord, dated 16th instant.

24 September, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to enquire into the "abuses offered by one Thomas Berryman" to "Rowden keeper of Burchatt walke," and to meet out proper punishment to the offender.

28 September, 1595. Letter from Lords of the council to Sir William More, and other magistrates of Surrey Ordering the said justices to enforce the laws against the forestallers, engrossers and regrators of the markets of the county.

29 September, 1595. Letter from Lords of the Council to the magistrates of the county of Surrey. Ordering the said magistrates to refrain from licensing persons to buy and sell poultry, butter, and eggs, in the said co.; as the excessive number of such persons occasions exorbitant prices and hinders the queen's purveyors.

6 October, 1595. Letter from Mr. Hampden Poulet to his brother-in-law George More, esq. About payment for a sale of timber.

22 October, 1595. Letter from the Lieutenant of the co. of Surrey to Sir William More, knight, and Lawrence Stoughton, esq. Appointing them to enquire respecting recent disorderly hunting in Guildford Park.

23 October, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Containing the following commissions to companies, viz., "David Wodroff esquier to be capitaine of the pistoleers, William Marche gent. to be capitaine of a foote company, . . . Brend of Moulsey, gent., capitaine of petronelles, . . . Allet of Sandersted, gent., capitaine of a foote company, and — Haines of Chisington, gent., capitaine of a foote company."

26 October, 1595. Letter from lords of the council to the magistrates for the co. of Surrey. For the restraint and correction of the forestallers and regrators who maintain the exorbitant prices of corn in the said county.

27 October, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Appointing Robert Assheton of Farnham to be a captain of a foot-company vice Wylliam March, for whom the writer has other employment.

30 October, 1595. Letter from Charles Mountague to Sir William More, knt. For a settlement by arbitration of a controversy touching the estate of Nicholas Yeoman of Portesmouth who, at his death some ten years since, left two sons, Nathaniel and Henry, and a daughter.

30 October, 1595. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Appointing Mr. Compton of Goddalmyn to be captain of a company of horse, in the place of Mr. David Woodruff who cannot command the same without serious hindrance to his private affairs.

5 November, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the discharging, till further notice, "of the watches of all beacons" in the shire, which service of "watchinge beacons is verie chargeable vnto the inhabitantes of that countie."

5 November, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Ordering that the two decayed bands of soldiers furnished by the borough of Southwark, and part of Brixton, be drawn into one band, and the command thereof be given to the writer's servant Thomas Gardiner; it being impossible for the said places to supply the vacancies of the two bands, as most of their wealthiest inhabitants are dead or gone.

9 November, 1595. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. For discharging, till further notice, the Beacon Watches of the said shire; and for a choice of men to wear the armour and weapons, pertaining to the clergy of the county, it having been ordered that "diners of the clergy that are of liability are to furnish horse and footmen according to the dignities and livings they holde in the severall counties of the realm, as they did in 1588."

12 November, 1595. Letter from lord Windesor to Sir William More, knt. In behalf of one Lusser, who is surcharged to furnish part of a musket, which was delivered to the custody of one Peto, who has lost the same.—Also, another letter (dated 18 February —) on the same subject, by the same writer to the same person.

17 November, 1595. Letter from the marquis of Winchester to the Lord Admiral, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. Begging that the writer's servant, Thomas Compton, gent., may be excused from taking charge of a trained band in the said shire.

21 November, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Ordering that Mr. Compton be excused from taking charge of a trained band, the marquis of Winchester having certified that the said gentleman is his servant, dwells out of the said shire, and is employed in her majesty's service under his (the marquis's) lieutenancy.

22 November, 1595. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt., one of the writer's deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Ordering indignantly that Mr. Compton be charged upon his duty and allegiance to her majesty to take command of a trained company in the said shire; the writer having ascertained the frivolous nature of the grounds on which he has asked to be excused from the service.

4 February, 1596. Summons to Sir William More, of Loseley, from the Lords of the Council, to appear before them in person or by attorney as soon as possible, to reply to the petition of the inhabitants of the Blackfriars concerning his obligation to "reedifie their ruyned church and decayed bridge."

12 March, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt., and William Morgan, esq., magistrates for co. Surrey. Asking for information respecting a robbery which Richard Cowper and William Holte, two of the writer's servants, are suspected to have committed. Dated from the writer's house at Chelsey.

18 March, 1596. Letter (imperfect) from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Touching a robbery, which Sir William is requested to inquire into.

9 April, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenant of Surrey, to Sir Francis Carewe and Sir William More, knts., deputy-lieutenants of the same co. Touching the selection of the five hundred men appointed to be levied in the county, and sent to Dover. Dated at Greenewich.

11 April, 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore and Sir Frances Carewe, deputy-lieutenants of the co. of Surrey. Urging promptitude in levying five hundred men in the said county for the relief of Calais. The men are to be "sent to Gravesend and so to Dover, under the chardge and conduct of Sir Richard Wingfield knt. to be there on Monday night next."

26 July, 1596. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the deputy-lieutenants co. Surrey. Touching the equipment, &c. of fifty able men to be levied in the said shire and to be embarked at the port of London on 15 August next, for "the cautionary towne of Flushing in Zelland to fill vp the bands there." For conduct money the men are to be allowed viii d. a-day each for seven days.

26 July, 1596. Letter from lords of the council to Mr. William Howard, Sir William Moore and other deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. About the levying and equipment of fifty "able and serviceable men within the county of Surrey to be sent to the cautionary Towne of Flushing in Zelande to fill vpp the bands there."

3 August, 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of co. Surrey. Enjoining the said magistrates to enforce the laws against forestallers and regrators, to prevent greedy buyers from buying large stores of corn at farmers' houses instead of in open market, and to compel holders of corn to vend weekly in the markets nearest to them a due proportion of their corn at fair rates. The justices are further instructed to be present at the markets near their dwellings, so that they may assist the poor to buy food at moderate rates, by ordering sellers to lower their prices to the capacities

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

of indigent purchasers. The Lords of the Council, in case a merchant should refuse to sell at the required prices, evened out the stag skins to "cause the said skins to be distributed equally to the poorer sort." And thus sold them for an "expyne against your order, you shall . . . cause it that shall refuse to obey your order to pay in this to manaye without any delay, for they shall content themselves to your said orders."

10 August, 1596. Letter from Thomas lord Lawarr to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William, in consideration of the scarcity of game, to forbear to demand the stag for which his "warrant is out." From the Holt.

20 August, 1596. Letter from Thomas lord Lawarr to Sir William More, knt. Entreating Sir William to forbear to demand a buck as he has already forborne to demand a stagge, out of regard to the scarcity of game. From the Holte.

30 August, 1596. Letter from Sir John Fortescue, knt., appointing Sir William More, knt., and others, to enquire respecting the matter of variance between John Jefferson, Richard Perier, Thomas Chrismas and others.

15 September, 1596. Warrant, under the Queen's sign-manual and signet, to Lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, to levy one hundred men in the said shire to serve as foot soldiers for the defence of Boulogne and her highness's interests in France, "forasmuch as yt appeareth that vpon the wyunninge of the Towne of Calais by the forces of the kinge of Spaine, ther is a further intencion in the said kinge to enterprize the takinge alsoe of the towne of Bullen and other maritime places in Fraunce adjoyninge vpon the narrowe seas opposite to our countries." Dated from Greenwich.

20 September, 1596. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral of England, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Touching the equipment of and allowances to the hundred foot-soldiers, now being levied in the said shire for the defence of Boulogne, who are to be delivered at farthest on 1 Oct. next "vnto Sir Tho. Baskerville, being a gentleman of good experience and approved service in the warres and a colonell in this service, who is to have the charge and conduct of them, or to his lieutenant coming to your lordship in his captains behalfe; to be ledd by either of them to the Poort of Rye, there to be imbarqued for their passage over the seas."

20 September, 1596. Letter from lords of the council to the lord-lieutenant of the co. of Surrey. Directing him to furnish soldiers for her majesty's service.

22 September, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the execution of the orders of her majesty's letter, of 15th inst., for a levy of a hundred soldiers for service in France.

23 September, 1596. Letter from Sir Robert Cecyll to the Lord High Admiral, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. Directing that the hundred men, now being levied in the said shire for service in France, be embarked at London on the 6th Oct. at London (instead of at Rye on 1st Oct.), together with the soldiers levied in the city of London, and the cos. Middlesex, Hartfordshire and Kent.

10 October, 1596. Letter from Fr. Burgh to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to enquire into the dishonest action of one Thomas Bowbroke, of the parish of Frynsom, who was hired by one Robert Steward to make into coal certain wood, provided and paid for with the writer's money by the said Robert, in Henley Wood in the parish of Frynsom.

21 October, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching musters of, and the appointment of captains to, the trained forces of the county.

31 October 1596. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admirall of England, her majesties lieutenant of the countie of Surrey. Giving orders for preparations to resist and defeat the king of Spain. Dated at Richmond.

31 October 1596. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admirall, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. For the execution of the orders contained in a letter of November last for calling out the strength of the shire, and for sending three thousand of its men to the lieutenants of cos. Kent and Southampton: and for the continuance or renewal of the watchinge of beacons in the said shire, "the queen's majesty being credibly informed that the kinge of Spaigne, moved with the shame and disgrace done him in his owne kingdome by her majesty's late army in the enterprize at Cales " hath resolved to take some speedie revenge by attemptinge to doe the like vpon this realme."

1 November, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the execution of the orders contained in the letter, dated 31 October 1596, of the Privy Council, for the defence of the country against the Spaniards.

6 November, 1696. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admirall, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. For mustering and arreyding the force of the shire, to resist the Spaniards' intended invasion of the country.

7 November, 1596. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching orders of the council for mustering and calling out the strength so the shire, and for seizing the horses and armour of the recusants of the county; the armour to be stored in a convenient place of security, and the horses kept at their owners' charges.

3 December, 1596. Letter from Thomas lord Lawarr to Sir William More, knt. So imperfect that its purport is no longer discernible.

12 December, 1596. Letter, dated at Whitehall, from Lords of the Council to the magistrates of co. Surrey, with orders to restrain the common wasteful use of malt in brewing "beer of greater strength in this tyme of scarcety than was vsed in other tymes, when mault was good cheape."

17 January, 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, lord high admiral and lieutenant of co. Surrey. Touching the arrangements made for the restoration to the said shire of the arms it provided for the soldiers sent out of Surrey last year "vnder the commandment of the Earle of Essex then her Majesties Generall in the voyadge to Spayne."

23 February, 1597. Writ, under the sign-manual of Queen Elizabeth, addressed to Sir George Moore, knt., collector of the loan, co. Surrey. Deferring for six months the promised payment of the loan. Dated at Westminster.

29 April, 39 Elizabeth. Two copies of a letter addressed, under the Queen's signet and sign-manual, to lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, for raising and equipping one hundred and fifty soldiers in the said shire for the defence of the realm.

9 May, 1597. Copy of a letter of Lords of the Council to the Lieutenant of co. Surrey. For a levy of one hundred and fifty choice men in the said shire, to serve as soldiers under the command of Mr. Oliver St. Johns. —Also, on the same paper, a copy of the same lord lieutenant's letter to his deputy-lieutenants of the said co.; for the prompt execution of the requirements of the Privy Council in that matter.

9 May, 1597. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admirall, the lieutenant of co. Surrey. For raising and training one hundred and fifty soldiers for the queen's service in the said shire.—Also, copy of the said lord-lieutenant's letter to his deputy-lieutenants of the said shire, touching the requirements of the same letter from the Privy Council.

11 May, 1597. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, to his deputy-lieutenants of the same shire. For the execution of the orders of two enclosed letters from the Privy Council.

15 May, 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to the magistrates of Surrey. Touching the excessive prices of grain, and measures for reducing the same.

27 May, 1597. Letter of Ol. St. John to Sir William More, knt., at Loseley. Begging that the writer may be forthwith furnished with all things requisite for the equipment of his company of soldiers, who are appointed to embark at the latest on the 12th of next month. Sir William is advertised "that xiiid. aday is agreed vpon for each of the soldiers duringe the tyme of their trayninge."

30 May, 1597. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord-Lieutenant of co. Surrey. Touching the levying and equipment of one hundred and fifty soldiers in the said shire for her majesty's service, wheresoever she may require them, under the command of Mr. Oliver St. Johns a gentleman of a very good experience in marciall afayres."

2 June, 1597. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sirs William More and Francis Carewe, knts., two of his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching the levy of men now being raised in the shire to serve under the writer's "cosen St. John."

3 June, 1597. Letter from Sir Robert Cecyll to Sir William More, knt. Announcing the committal of a prisoner, and the writer's approval of Sir Robert's action.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

16 July, 37 Elizabeth. Rough draft of the indenture, of the aforegiven date, whereby Sir William Brouncker of Stook, co. Wiltes, and Symon Noble of Church-hill, co. Surrey, sold and conveyed all their right in the office of keeper of the park of Whitley, co. Surrey, and in the herbage and pannage of the said park, to the Rt. Hon. Sir John Wolley of Pyrdford co. Surrey, knt., chancellor of the most noble order of the Garter, and one of her highness's most honorable Privy Council.

18 July, 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt., and the other deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the suitable clothing and equipment of the fifty masterless men ordered to be sent from Surrey to Brydewell, thence to be shipped from the port of London for service in Pyccardy.

8 August, 1597. Letter from Tobie, bishop of Durham, to Sir William More, knt. Expressing the writer's satisfaction with Sir William's godly zeal for religion, and his conscientious care for justice, "which doth argue," the writer continues, "that he that beganne the good work in you, doth and will continue it to the daie of Christ, as it becometh me to judge of you, because I have you, as the apostle saith, in my heart, being companions together of grace through the Gospell." Dated "at Stockton the house of my pilgrimage," amidst the scourges of penurie and pestilence, god's "great judgements for oure synnes."

25 August, 1597. Letter from Lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Announcing the writer's design that his son, Sir William Howard, shall "stand to be the knyght of the shire for Surrey against this next parliament."

27 August, 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to the magistrates of co. Surrey. For the restraint and punishment of the forestallers, engrossers, and regrators of the markets of the county.

27 October, 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to the lieutenant and deputy-lieutenants co. Surrey. Calling out the forces of the county, an hostile navy and army having been discovered on their way for this country.

30 December, 1597. Letter from the Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, lieutenant of Surrey. Touching a levy in co. Surrey of one hundred and fifty soldiers for the queen's service; with respect to which levy there had been sent by the Council to the Lord Admiral "Mr Oliver Saint John a gentleman of very good experience in martial affairs."

— October, 1597. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir William More, knt. Recommending the writer's second son Charles to be knight of the shire, instead of his elder brother who can no longer serve the county of Surrey in that capacity, "through the title of honour which by my late creation is fallen on him."

29 November, 40 Elizabeth. Warrant, under the Queen's signet and sign-manual to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, to raise and arm a hundred choice men for service in the Low Countries, whence her majesty has been constrained to move 2,000 veterans to Ireland, to restore order in that island.

22 December, 1597. Letter from Lords of the Council to George Moore, esq., collector of the loan for her majesty's use, co. Surrey. "Whereas wee doe vnderstand that there are divers persons inhabiting within that countye that doe refuse to paye the severalle sommes required of them by waye of loane by her majesties privie seale, We doe mervaile to fynde suche backwardnes in any consideringe euery of those whose names were certified are knowne to be men of good sufficiency. These shalbe therefore to require you to call all the saide parties before you that shall refuse to pay those sommes, and to require them without further delaye to paye those severall sommes required of them. Wherein if they or any of them shall persist in this vndutifull sorte to delaye the payment of the same, then you shall take good bondes of them to her Majesties vse to answere that their obstinate refusall before vs." Dated from Whitehall.

1597-8. A tract entitled "An Apologie of the Earle of Essex against thoes which falsely and maliciously takes him to be the only hinderance of the peace and quiet of this country." By Roger Williams.

1597. The Pedigree of Molineux, a family descended from William le Molineux, a Norman knight who entered England in the personal service of William the Conqueror. Drawn and Exemplified by Sir William Dethick, Garter King of Arms, whose signature appears at the foot of the record.

1 September, 1597. Inventory of the goods, chattels, and household stuff of Thomas Key, clerk, deceased, late parson of the parish church of St. Nicholas in Guldeford, co. Surrey.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

10 September, 39 Elizabeth. Rough draft of the indenture, made between "the Ladye Elizabeth Woolley, widowe one of the ladies of her Majesties privie chamber on thone part, and George More of Loseley" co. Surrey, esq., on the other part: whereby the said Elizabeth conveyed to the said George, his heirs and assigns, her manors of Burgham and Wissheley, co. Surrey, together with all her manors, lands, &c. &c. in Pirforde, co. Surrey, in trust to her use during her life, and after her death to the use of her son and heir apparent Francis Wolley and his lawful heirs.

20 September, 1597. Letter from lady Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. In behalf of a gentlewoman who is in trouble with the magistrate and his son.

6 January, 1598. Letter from William earl of Derby to Sir William More, knt. Begging that Henry Woodes of Chobham may be excused from serving as a soldier in co. Surrey, as he is the personal servant of the writer, who is about to journey to Ireland.

28 January, 1598. Letter (signed, Ro. Northampton, W. Knollys, Hen. Cocke, Barth^m Fouke, Richard Brown) to the Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. For the delivery of the county's "whole composition pultrey for the one and forteth yere of her majesties raigne" to the hands of "Robert Warden her majesties yeoman-purveyor for composition pultrey at her Highnes storehouse within Byshopsgate London."

21 March, 1598. Warrant, addressed under her Majesty's signet and sign-manual to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, to raise a rate of money in the said county for the queen's use in lieu of a levy of thirty equipt soldiers for service in Ireland, the sum so raised to amount to 90*l*., at the rate of 3*l*. for each soldier not required of the county. "Wherefore," the warrant runs, "we are pleased to spare them of the charge and trouble of levy and setting out of men, and only to requyre a rate in money, lesse then the charge would be to them in furnyishing men, that is to say three pounds for each man." Dated from Richmond.

22 March, 1598. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, and his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Remitting the obligation to raise the thirty men appointed by letters, dated 21st inst., to be levied in the said shire for service in Ireland, but requiring a sum of money at the rate of three pounds on each of the thirty men, i.e. a contribution of 90*l*.

23 March, 1598. Letter from the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, to his deputy-lieutenants and to the Justices of the Peace of the said shire. Announcing the remission of the order for thirty soldiers to be levied in the said county, and the substitution of a requirement of money, to the sum of 90*l*.

29 March, 1598. Letter from Lords of the Council to the sheriff and magistrates of co. Surrey. For the due execution of the laws for the relief of the poor and of maimed soldiers, and for the punishment of vagabonds and rogues.

— April, 1598. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir William and Sir George More, knts. Thanking the said knights for their action in respect to the commission of sewers in co. Surrey.

20 May, 1598. Letter from Sir Walter Raleigh to Sir W. More and others, magistrates of Surrey. Begging that the writer may be certified as to the justice of the grounds on which one Edward Owens vexes with litigation Robert Sharpe "one of her highnes servauntes of my band."

26 May, 1598. Letter from G. lord Hunsdon to Sir William More, knt., and others, magistrates of Surrey. Begging the magistrates to stay the vexatious litigation by which Edward Owen and one Skeers molest the letter's bearer, Robert Sharpe.

3 July, 1598. Letter from W. Howard esq. to Sir William More, knt., and others, magistrates of Surrey. Begging the said magistrates to give a licence to keep an inn in Croydon to the writer's servant, Richard Wood of Croydon.

3 July, 1598. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. About a highway robbery, committed on the bearer of the letter, a gentleman.

6 July, 1598. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging for information respecting a vagrant and mendicant person, named John Slater or Thomas Edmondes, who represents himself to have received holy orders from the bishop's predecessor, bishop Cooper, and to have filled the parsonage of East Compton, at Sir William's presentation.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

8 July, 1598. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir William More, knt., at Lowsley. About the late killing of "red deane in Windsor Forreste."

16 July, 1598. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir William More, knt. About the enquiry after certain unlawful hunters.

16 July, 1598. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Requiring two horsemen from the said shire for service against the rebels in Ireland.

22 October, 1598. Warrant, dated at Whitehall, from Sir Robert Cecyll, for the arrest and speedy conveyance to Whitehall of Raphe Browne, clerk, minister of Hambleton, co. Surrey.

26 October, 1598. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Announcing that the writer has appointed William Washeborne to be muster-master of the trained bands of the shire, in the place of Captain Dutten who is serving in Ireland.

15 November, 1598. Letter from lord keeper Egerton to Sir William and Sir George More, knights. Touching the petition of Isabell Bewtrel who complains that she is vexed with groundless litigation by Edward Owen.

22 December, 1598. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. For a levy of 100 able and choice men in the said shire, not vagrants of the baser sort, to serve as soldiers in the Low Countries, whence her majesty is compelled by the general defection of Ireland to draw 2,000 veterans, to serve and restore order in that country.

23 December, 1598. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the execution of the orders contained in the letter, dated 22 December 1598, of the Privy Council.

26 December, 1598. Letter from Sirs William Howard and Frances Carew, knts, deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey, to Sirs William More and George More knts., Announcing arrangements for raising the hundred men in Surrey for service in the Low Countries, and for delivering them on 10 January next in St. Georges Eydeles.

December, 1598. List of moneys received by a collector "towardses the settinge forth of e soldiers."

14 January 1599. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral of England and Lieutenant of Surrey: About the selection and equipment of 50 soldiers in the county of Surrey for service in Ireland. Respecting the furniture of these men it is observed that the new levies should be so equipt, "that in every hundreth there may be 20 pykes armed with corselets, pouldrons and good murrions, 10 halberts armed as the pikes, 12 muskettes with good murrions, 12 bastard muskettes with good murrions, and 40 callivers armed likewyse with good murrions; And that there may be very presize regard used to see them all furnished with good swords and daggers, which for the most parte haue bin very badd and be no vse in service."

26 January, 1599. Inventory of the Platte and Silver vessels in the House of Pyrston, taken and removed to Loseley.

1 February, 41 Elizabeth. Letter of proclamation, by Lord Lieutenant of the co. of Surrey. Appointing Sir William More, knt., of Loseley, to be receiver of the moneys to be levied on privy seals within the said shire for her majesty's use

8 March, 1599. Letter from Lord-Keeper Egerton to his beloved brother-in-law Sir George More. Wishing happiness and comfort to Sir George and the writer's "good father." In reference to a recent domestic affliction the writer says, "God hath the pledge of my loue to you bothe, and to all those that loued her. My comfort in this world is seasoned with teares and syghes, whereof I haue plentye."

6 May, 1599. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. For a general muster and view of the whole forces of the said county.

7 May, 1599. Instructions for the Muster-Master of the Countie of Surreye. Dated at Greenwich.

7 May, 1599. Receipt of Richard Bury for xlii. svs. paid by Sir William Moore, knt., one of the chamberlains of the exchequer, in respect of the farm of subsidies and ulage of markable clothes, co. Surrey and Sussex.

17 May, 1599. Letter from lords of the council to the Earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. For the equal rating of all residents in the said county, so that one part thereof may not avoid their burthens to the injury of another.

8 June, 1599. Letter from Anthony Stoughton in Ireland to Sir William More, knt., at Loseley. Giving Irish news, and particular descriptions of certain operations against the rebels. As the writer's "my lord" was on his way to Queenes County, to victual a fort there, "one James Fitzfriers a Geraldyn being in "accion and held a castle vppon a brydge caled Athye "brydge, wheare over his Lordshup was to pass, did not "only submit himself but delynered vpp the castle. My "lord past from thence to the forte with some small skyrmisshe. In his way from the forte towards Kilkenney there was another skyrmisshe, wheare by the "folly of them selues Capten Raufe Boswell and Capten "Gardner were slayne and some iiii or v souldyers, "and that daye there were slayne of thenemy some xii; "betwene the forte and Kilkenny the vycount Mountgarrett and the lord Cahir came and submytted themselves, both Butlers. At Kilkenny the lord Roch and the whyte knightes sonne submytted themselves. "The Lord of Cahir's brother after he had submytted "hime self entred his castle and kept yt agaynst my "lord, which forced him to send to Waterford for canon "and culverynges, and the castle being of so great "strength that there were at least e shott geven to yt." The garrison, being surprised in an attempt to escape by night, "most of them were presently put to the "sweard and the rest hanged." The writer gives a graphic account of a singular and unaccountable defeat inflicted "in the Byrnes cuntry" by the rebels on the garrison of 500 men under the command of Sir Harry Harryngton, whose force was only saved aft'r great loss by the gallant action of Captain Mountague with 50 horse. The enemy numbered 700, "and every man "naked save a shirt."

6 August, 1599. Copy of a requisition signed by Lords of the Council to Sir William More, knt. for "1 lance and two light horse to be sent to Southwarke by the 12th inst." to remain there for the space of one month at his own charge, for the queen's service.

10 August, 1599. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to deputy-lieutenants of Surrey. Ordering all the forces, horse as well as foot, to march with all expedition to Southwarke as the "enemies approche nere vnto this "coast."

30 August, 1599. Letter from lord-keeper Egerton to his loving wyffe, the lady Egerton. Informing her of Dr. Smyth's opinion of her father's ailments, and reporting the doctor's advice for the invalid's treatment. Dated from York House.

26 August, 1599. Letter, signed by the earl of Nottingham, Sir Robert Cecyll, and others, to the commanders of the queen's forces of horses and foot for the county of Surrey. Dismissing the said forces to their homes, provided they keep in readiness to re-assemble on a day's warning

12 November, 1599. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, knt. Expressing the writer's gratitude for Sir George's "kinde and bowntifull presents especiaillie att suche tymes as her Majestie is "pleased to visitt me."

10 December, 1599. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir George More, knt. Inviting Sir George More to stand god-father to the writer's newly born son.

1599. Synopsis Oxonia. A vellum broadside setting forth the several colleges, &c. of Oxford, with the names of some of the chief officers of the same.

16 July, 1600. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, knt. Touching the petition of the inhabitants of the west division of the co. of Surrey, who, as inhabitants within the limits of Windsor Forest, claim exemption from the burdensome service of carrying certain timber, brick, tiles and other necessities for her majesty's service.

20 July, 1600. Letter from Lord-Keeper Egerton to his brother-in-law Sir George More. Condoling with Sir George on the death of his father who was the writer's father-in-law. Dated from Yorke House.

18 July, 1600. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir George More, knt. Touching arrangements for paying 50l. from the said bishop to the Lord Admiral.

4 August, 1600. Letter from Anne lady Warwyck to Sir George More, knt. Reporting that she named to her Majesty his suit for the office formerly held by his father, and that the Queen thinks so well of him, that he has reason to be hopeful.

9 August, 1600. Letter of affectionate assurances from Lord-Keeper Egerton to his beloved friend and brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

3 November, 1600. Letter from lord Buckhurst to George Moore, esq. Promising, at the lord-keeper's suggestion, to favour and support Mr. Moore's suit for the office of one of the chamberlains of the exchequer.

6 December, 1600. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, lord high Admiral of England and Lieutenant of Surrey. Announcing the Queen's need of a levy of "a thowsande men to besent into the "Northe of Ireland to fill vp the bandes there," of whom Surrey is required to provide and equip only fifteen men; and giving particular instructions as to the equipment of this small contingent.

8 December, 1600. Letter from the lord Nottingham to Sir Francis Carewe, Sir George Moore, and Sir Mathewe Browne. Touching certain urgent business of the Queen which they are commissioned to dispatch with expedition.

1600. Letter from Mr. N. Throckmorton to his father-in-law Sir George More, knt. Acknowledging the receipt of 30/. Dated from Addington. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1600. Latin Treatise in Sir George More's handwriting, described in the heading, "Explicatio particulī "Orationis Dominicæ 'Dimitte nobis debita nostra, "sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris."

1600. Carmen funebre Guil. Outhredi, quod in obitum honoratissimi equitis Guilielmi Mori maestissimus cecinit. A fragment, containing forty lines, less than a third of the entire poem.

1600. Letter from Lord-Keeper Egerton to his brother-in-law Sir George More, knt. Bidding Sir George, on the occasion of some misfortune, to rely on "the mercifull goodness of the Almighty," and to understand that writer will tell him to-morrow what his "honest true friende can do for" him. No date.

7 January, 1601. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Requiring a levy of fifteen soldiers in the county of Surrey for service in Ireland; her majesty having resolved to raise her army there by four thousand men, as Spain is intent on supporting and moving the traitorous rebels of that country.

2 February, 1601. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to his father-in-law Sir George More, knt. Announcing the writer's secret marriage to Sir George's daughter, and deprecating the anger of the deceived father. Dated from the writer's "lodging." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

11 February, 1601. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to his father-in-law Sir George More, knt. Beseeching humbly that the writer's offence in the matter of his clandestine marriage will not be magnified to Sir George's mind by reports of unkind speakers, but will be regarded by him apart from the mere whisperings of malice. Dated from the Fleete. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

13 February, 1601. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to his father-in-law Sir George More, knt. Expressing the writer's humble thanks for certain mitigations of the discipline of imprisonment, effected through the interference of Sir George, who appears to be already softening towards his son-in-law and inclining to forgive him. Sir George is even entreated to mediate between the penitent writer and the sorely offended Lord Keeper Egerton. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

13 February, 1601. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to Lord-Keeper Egerton. Entreating pardon for the writer's "bold and presumptuous offence" in marrying Sir George More's daughter without her father's permission. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 February, 1601. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Magistrates of co. Surrey. Requiring an accurate return of all the freeholders of the county.

25 February, 1601. Letter from Chr. Bruke to Lord Keeper Egerton. Implying his lordship's forgiveness of the writer's most culpable part in the clandestine marriage of Mr. Donne and Miss Moore; for which the writer has been put in the Marshalsea, and is still detained there. Dated from the Marshalsea. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1 March, 1601. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to Lord-Keeper Egerton. Implying the Lord Keeper to dismiss somewhat of his just displeasure with the writer, who says quaintly, "I was 4 years your Lordship's secretary, not "dishonest nor gredy. The sicknes of which I dyed ys "that I begonne in your Lordship's house this loue. "Wher I shalbe buried I know not."—Also a note (undated) from the same person to the same person; thanking the Lord Keeper for allowing the writer the liberty of his "own chamber," and begging for "liberty "to take the ayre about this towne." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1 March, 1601. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to his father-in-law Sir George More, knt. Meekly entreating Sir George's permission that the penitent writer may address a letter to his wife, which he will not presume to do without Sir George More's express leave. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 June, 43 Elizabeth. Indenture made between Sir George More of Loseley, co. Surrey, knight, son and heir of Sir William More, knight, deceased, of the one part, and Cuthbert Burbage of London, gentleman, and Richard Burbage also of London, gentleman, of the other part; whereby the said Sir George More, in consideration of four score and fyftee pounds duly paid to and acknowledged by him, aliened and conveyed to the said Richard and Cuthbert, to hold to them for ever (after the expiration of the life interest in the same of Margaret Poole widow) "all that messuage sellers romes wayes "casimentes and commodities thereunto belonginge "nowe in the tenure and occupacionn of Thomas Brisket "or of his assign or assignes scituat lyeinge and beinge "within the precynct of the late Blackfriars in London "that is to say betwene the messuage romes and "buyldinges of the saide Cuthbert and Richard Burbage "on the east part, and the messuage romes and buyld- "inges of the saide Cuthbert and Richard Burbage and "George More whiche leadeth towards the "glassehouse nowe in the tenure of Sir Jerom Bowes "knight on the North parte and the messuages and "yardes of Fenton widowe now in the seuerall "tenures . . . Clarke on the west parte and the "high-way that leadeth towards the messuage or man- "cion house of the right honourable George Lord "Hunsdon Lord Chamberleyn of the Queen's Maiesties "most honourable househ . . . of which saide mes- "suage or tenement yardes sellers and other premisses "with ther appurtenaunces from and ymediately after "the death of the said Margaret Poole to the saide "George More and his heirs of right doth . . .," and also "a little porch leding into the said messuage." A considerable piece has been torn from the middle of this indenture, which was found in two pieces, the one piece in a packet of deeds, and the other piece pushed into another parcel of writings. Cuthbert and Richard Burbage, like their father in the earlier indenture, write their surname "Burbadge."

2 July, 1601. Letter from Lords of the Council to Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Enjoining the said magistrates to call in higglers' licences, and henceforth to licence no person to be a higgler who has any other calling, and to insist that no higgler of the said shire buys or sells, except in open market, or buys anywhere or at any time rabbits, pigeons, partridges, pheasants or any other kind of fowl: Complaint having been made to her majesty by her purveyors, that the common higglers and victuallers, by forestalling the markets, cause such fowl to be sold at none but exorbitant prices.

13 August, 1601. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, knight, deputy-lieutenant co. Surrey, and to the other magistrates of the same shire. Calling their attention to the lewd carriage of George Dunstone, whose cruelty to his wife and other social misdemeanours appear to be tolerated in some degree through the general impression that the man enjoys the protection of the writer, whose "follower" he professeth himself to be. That so "lewd a liver" may not be "shrowed" by the writer's "clothe," the magistrates are entreated to call the said George Dunstone before them, "and let him know" the earl continues, "that I "doe not onlye mislike his lewde caryage, but doe hens- "forth vterly discharge him from wearing my cloth, "which yf att that tyme he shall weare, I prairie you "take it from him."

14 August, 1601. Letter from lord Buckhurst to Sir George More, knt. Begging Sir George to enquire after the truth of certain strange and incredible charges of immorality against the writer's cousin, Moris Sacvill, parson of Okeley, who appears to have been hardly, if not most unjustly, handled by Sir Matthew Browne, on the strength of the assertions of two openly profligate women.

14 August, 1601. Letter from lord Buckhurst to Sir George Moore, knt., and others, magistrates of Surrey. Ordering enquiry to be made into the rumours to the discredit of Moris Sacvill, parson of Okeley, whom the

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

writer has known for forty years, and always held in respect.

26 August, 1601. Letter from Thomas, bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, knt. About an ecclesiastical benefice to which the Lord Keeper has preferred the writer's client and friend.

6 October, 1601. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his deputy lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the execution of her Majesty's order for thirty footmen, in lieu of the fifteen required by a previous letter, to be levied in the said shire for the queen's service.

6 October, 1601. Letter addressed, under Queen Elizabeth's signet and sign-manual, to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, for the immediate levy and equipment of thirty foot-soldiers, in lieu of the fifteen men ordered by letters, dated 29 Sept. last, to be raised in the said county for service in Ireland. The reason for thus increasing the force designed for Ireland is thus given, "Forasmuch as since those oure" "said letters, the effect and intencion of such preparations is now evidently seene by the arriuall and" "descent at Kinsale in our Province of Mounster of an" "army of Spanyards, whereof we haue receaued assured" "aduertisements from oure deputie in Ireland and the" "President of Mounster."

21 December, 1601. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to commissioners for a subsidy co. Surrey. For the perfect collection and payment of the same subsidy.

21 December, 1601. Letter from lords of the Council to the commissioners for the assessment of the first subsidy and fifteenths, granted by last parliament, in co. Surrey. For the due assessment and collection of the same taxes in the said shire.

18 March, 1602. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to the deputy-lieutenants and magistrates of Surrey. Urging them to carry out the privy council's latest orders, contained in an accompanying letter, "for the" "supplyinge the decayed bandes of the States whose" "fortune verie nerely concerneth the welfare of oure" "realme."

27 March, 1602. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lieutenant and magistrates of Surrey. Requiring them to send all idle and dissolute persons, found in the shire, to the Port of London, thence to be shipped for military service in the Low Countries.

27 April, 1602. Official and attested copy of the recorded decree of the ecclesiastical court of the archbishop of Canterbury, that John Donne and Anne Moore contracted valid matrimony in February 1601.

2 May, 1602. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to the deputy-lieutenants and magistrates of Surrey. Directing them to assist Captain Thomas Panton in raising "voluntary men" in the said co. for the service of the States of the United Provinces in the Lowe Countryes.

22 April, 44 Elizabeth. Letter addressed, under her Majesty's sign-manual and signet, to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Touching a levy of soldiers, whom her Majesty undertakes to arm and apparel, at her own "burthen." Imperfect.

24 June, 1602. Copy of a Letter from Lords of the Council to Mr. Justice Gawdye and Mr. Serjeant Hele, her Majesty's Serjeant-Justices for the co. of Kent and the rest of that circuit. Instructing them to cause all felons, convicted before them of crimes punishable with death, (save felons guilty of murder, rape or burglary), to be consigned to servitude in the galleys, rowed by many rowers, which her majesty has provided for the safety and defence of the maritime parts of her realm; the said felons to serve for seven years at least in the same galleys, before they are set at liberty; and the friends of the said felons or the counties to which they belong contributing three pounds per annum towards their maintenance whilst they work in the galleys.

29 July, 1602. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, lieutenant of Surrey. Touching a levy within the county of Surrey of soldiers for the queen's service, to proceed forthwith to the port of Bristol.

17 August, 1602. Letter from Edward Herbert (afterwards lord Herbert of Cherbury) to Sir George More, knt. Accompanying a present of a round loaf of Shrewsbury sweet bread. "It is a kind of cake which our" "countrey people vse, and made in no place but Shrewsbury: . . . measure not my love by substance" "of it which is brittle, but by the forme of it which is" "circular." Dated from Eyton. (Vide Kempe's "Loseley MSS.")

12 September, 1602. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, knt. Touching a difference

George More and Mr. Stoughton on the other part as to a right to a fee; and announcing that Sir Richard Weston has been instructed to kill a stag for Sir George in "Stonegam's walke" and to deliver it to Sir George.

3 November, 43 Elizabeth. Charter of a grant, in perpetuity, of the lordship and hundred of Godalming co. Surrey, with all its members, appurtenances, &c. &c. to Sir George More, knight, in consideration of 1,341l. 8s 2½d. paid into the queen's exchequer.

22 December, 1602. Warrant, by Charles Howard earl of Nottingham, Justice-Itinerant of the queen's parks and forests this side the Trent, to the keeper and sub-keepers and foresters of the forest of Windsor within the bailiwick of Surrey, to deliver to Sir George Moore, knight, and Laurence Stoughton, esq., her majesty's verderers of the said forest yearly "vnum staggun vocatum a Stagge in astate et vnam Bissam vocatam a hynd in hieme pro feodo suo."

3 January, 1603. Letter from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law Sir George More, knt. Touching a property, held by Sir W. H. for the residue of Mr. Nicholas More's lease that expires at Michaelmas in 1607, of which the lord chancellor would fain get immediate possession at a reasonable price.

15 February, 1603. Letter from John Gordon, dean of Salisbury, to Sir George Moore. Begging that the trial of the dispute between Sir George and Mr. Castillions, touching certain fishing that pertains to the manor and parsonage of Godalming, may be deferred "tyll the next terme att y^e barre or y^e next sommer" "assyses;" the deanery, to which the writer has but lately come, being concerned in the matter.

22 February, 1603. Warrant from the earl of Nottingham to the verderers of the forest of Windsor, and the ranger of Surrey Bayliwick:—"To view the wood or copse called "Remnantes copice in the forest of Windesore" "conteyninge by estimacioun fiftene acres or thereabouts;" and to certify the earl "whether it maye" "be convenientlye felled and cutt downe this yeare." Mr. Edward Morley having applied for the earl's licence to fell and cutt the same.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Robert Losle to his "syn- gewler good frynde Syr Wyllyam More knyght." Begging Sir William to send the writer and Master Puckeringe a hind and a doe on Thursday or Friday; and also inviting Sir William to be Master Puckerings guests on Monday "come senete, whych yf yt shalle" "please yowr worshyppe so to do yowe shalbe moste" "hertelye welcome; and he desyer yow to be there" "bycause he wylle bestowe a rynge of yowe for a tokyn" "of good wylle." No date.

2 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from Edward More (signing himself "Youre sonne to vse as youre owne sonne") to Sir William More, knt. Touching the business which the writer and Sir William have with lady Rogers, and other private and domestic matters. No year given.

4 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from Robert earl of Leicester to Sir Henry Nevell and William More, knts. Acknowledging the letter dated 3 Jan. from Brookwoode, in which the knights gave their reason for suspecting Sauage of maintaining and harbouring lewd persons; and ordering that the said Sauage be punished according to his deserts, the earl having no wish to shield such an offender. No year given.

10 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from Mr. Anthony Browne, son of viscount Mountague, to Sir William More, knt. Requesting that William Harding, one of Lord Mountague's tenants, may not be permitted to continue his cutting of certain woods (said to have been sold to him by the said lord), pending the enquiry into William Hardinge's alleged right to fell the same. From River Parke. No year given.

10 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from W. Howard to Sir William More, knt. Expressing the writer's regret that the midwife, who is on the point of concluding her attendance on his wife, must hold herself in readiness to go on a moment's notice to lady Sydney's daughter, and therefore cannot wait on lady More in her approaching confinement. No year given.

13 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from the duke of Norfolk to William More, esq., high sheriff of cos. Sussex and Surrey. Urging Mr. More not to dismiss from the office of his "baylye for the rape of Bramber" one Thomas Lyntott, who is the writer's under-bailiff for the barony of Bramber. No year given.

15 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from Thomas Cornwayleys to Sir William More, knt. Begging for the refusal of certain wood and land pertaining to Mrs. Polsted. No year given.

17 January, — Elizabeth. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William More, knt. Con-

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

doling with Sir William on the extreme illness, if not the death, of one of his "sweete juelles," whose sickness has only come to the writer's hearing "this instantt dinner time." No year given.

20 January. — Elizabeth. Letter from the earl of Pembroke to Sir George More, knt. Requesting Sir George to come immediately, at any inconvenient time to himself, and confer with the writer on a matter touching one of his friends. No year given.

20 January. — Elizabeth. Copy of a letter from Lord Treasurer Burghley and Sir W. Mildmaye to the Commissioners for reforming the abuses and extortions of informers in co. Surrey. Enjoining the said commissioners to assure jurors and others of the utter falseness of the suggestion "that the same commission shalbe a means" "to entrapp suche as shall detect corrupt compositions," "and thereby bring themselves in perill to be charged" "of such offences." Date of the year, torn away.

24 January. — Elizabeth. Letter from Robert Maylard to Sir William Moore. Announcing that at the request of the Master Cofferer and other officers of her majesty's household, Emery Lewer and his son have been liberated from the Marshalsey, after having remained there for ten days, for taking partridges. No year given.

25 January. — Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Edmund Tyllney, master of the revels, to Sir William More, knt. Touching the imperious and discourteous behaviour of the writer's neighbour Mr. Vincent. Dated from the Office of the Revels.

25 January. — Elizabeth. Letter (photograph) from Robert bishop of Winchester to Mr. More at Loseley. A note of friendly courtesies, and directions for stocking a new pond with carp. Date of year not given.

22 January. — Elizabeth. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir William More, knt., and Mr. Laurence Stoughton. Requiring them to send their clerk, named Waren, to Mr. Secretary for examination, as he "can" "disceles many thinges." No year given.

11 February. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Southcot to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William's favourable consideration of the unfortunate case of a young man named Byden, a servant in a house on Sir William More's Blackfriars estate. No year given.

14 February. — Elizabeth. Letter from the earl of Northumberland to Sir William More, knt. Requesting that the writer's servant, named Lien, who has been summoned to appear before Sir William, may be excused from obeying the summons, as the writer needs his services. No year given.

23 February. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord W. Howard to Master Moore. Thanking Master Moore for a present of two oxen and for the moderation of his charge for oxen bought by the writer's steward; and begging Mr. Moore to supply the same steward with all requisite stuff at a reasonable price. No year given.

12 March. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William Moore, knt. Begging Sir William to use his influence in the writer's behalf with the bishop of Winchester, touching a matter which the letter's bearer, Mr. Drake, will fully set forth. No year given.

15 March. — Elizabeth. Letter from Gualter Alen to Sir William Moore, knt., at his place in the Blacke Fryers in London. Commending and thanking Sir William for his successful exertions to place "Mr. Watson in the ministry of the woord with liberty of" "preaching thorow out London"; and also referring to kindly treatment accorded to the writer at Loseley, "where," he observes, "not only my office and ministrye" "but evene my self also had so good intertainment," "as I cannot with sufficient thankfulness remember." From Arwerton in Suffolke. No year given.

24 March. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey, and George More, esq., their especial assistant. For perfecting and completing a certificate of musters, in accordance with the wishes of the Privy Council. No year given.

26 March. — Elizabeth. Letter from Wylliam lord Lawarre to Sir William Moore, knt. Suggesting that John Norton, Knight Feilders, Robert Forden and Nicholas Pescodd should be examined as to their reasons for buying a fishing-net, which cost them five marks. "These personnes," says the writer, "haue" "no waters of there owne, yet neuer want they fish to" "eat in alehouses, to sell in markettes, or otherwise to" "bestowe on some of there vsuall and accustomed" "freindes. Your waters and mine are the neerest vnto" "them besides Mr. Backhouses. I find that my frends" "are roobed, and I assure myself that you must needes

"be robbed also." From the Hoult. No date of year.

28 March. — Elizabeth. Letter from George Carey to Sir William More, knt. Concerning the intrusion of the civic authorities within the liberties of the Fiars. The letter begins thus: "Occasions have faulen out" "this day Sir William Moore whereby a repul hath" "byn geuen to the Shriffe that gaue a fresh assault to" "the friars for thare liberties. I haue w'stood theyr" "force that wolde have had a felons goods in the white" "fries, beinge trusteazed by me for the quene, and an" "arrest also made in the blacke fries hath also bin" "w'stoode. They bringe of a liberty geuen them by" "the counsell to enter vppon the libertis, but the" "counsell do not remember any such licens geuen and" "therfor haue appoynted the mayor to sende his" "officers on friday next to' counsell table that then" "they may order and ende the matter." No year given.

3 April. — Elizabeth. Copy of the articles (in Latin) of the Treaty of Peace of Cambraye, headed "Articuli tractatus pacis inter serenissimam Reginam" "Angliæ et christianissimum Francorum regem Cambracen" 3 April. — No year given.

6 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from Elizabeth Lady Wolley to her brother Sir George More, knt. "Her" "majesty bad me welcome to the corte, and said I was" "absent a fortnight, she had kepte a reconinge of the" "dayes: she verie carefullie enquired how my father" "did and his twee wydowes, and was verie glad of his" "healthe." No year given.

8 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from George Evelyn to William More, esq. About the subscriptions to the R.M. Lottery which come in very slowly in the district for which the writer is the collector. No year given.

17 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Wyntershull to William More, esq. Announcing that the writer cannot come to Mr. More in consequence of an accident in falling from his horse. No year given.

17 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from Matthue, archbishop of Canterbury, to William More, esq. at Loseley. Begging that the primate, on the occasion of his visit to the Deanery of Stoke, may rest at Loseley on the nights of Wednesday 5 and Thursday 6 of May. His grace does not mean "to put Mr. More to any charges," and will cause the greater part of his following to eat and lodge at Guildford, taking only seven or eight persons with him to Loseley. Dated from Lamhithe. No year given.

21 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Acknowledging gratefully the receipt of certain information. No year given.

23 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from Matthue, archbishop of Canterbury, to William Moore, esq., at Loseley. Acknowledging Mr. Moore's courtesy in bidding the writer welcome to Loseley for two nights, but regretting that circumstances forbid him to accept the invitation. The primate sends "hartie commendacions" to Mr. Moore's "good bedfellowe." Given from Lamhithe. No year given.

30 April. — Elizabeth. Letter from Matthue archbishop of Canterbury at Lamhithe, to William More, esq. Touching the complaint of William Newman, vicar of Chartesey, who alleges that, being unjustly and excessively rated to the Poor Man's Box of his church, and neglecting to obey the summons of Mr. Cooper, a justice of the peace, who summoned him in respect of his omission to pay the inordinate assessment, he was "by a warrant arrested and by vertue therof putt into" "the stockes openlie." The primate writes, "I am" "perswaded that the gentlemen, Justices of the Peace," "will doe noe ecclesiasticall person wronge nor ex-
"tremitie, although it was heard" ("hard") "that he" "was putt openlie in the stockes, but because I doe not" "knowe his demerites I can saie little in yt, but promise" "that I would write to you in this matter." No year given. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

8 May. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Howard of Effingham to Sir William More, knt. Touching the writer's exercise of influence in the election of a verderer on Sir Henry Weston's behalf, which influence should have been used to Mr. Stowghton's advantage, had the writer known of Sir William's desire for Mr. Stowghton's success. No year given.—Also, on the same day (8 May), another letter on the same subject, in which he speaks of "Sir He. Weston as my good frend and kinsman," and repeats that he would have supported Mr. Stowghton's candidature for the office, had he known that Sir William and his son wished for that gentleman's success. No year given.

8 May. — Elizabeth. Letter from the earl of Pembroke to Sir William More, knt. "My father had

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNE
Esq.

"graunted him by you water, to be conveyed by leades
"at his owne costes from the blacke Friers to Barnardes
"castle, but as it appereth not from the cheefe heade
"in your garden, but from a cesterne. This water "runninge vnder diuers howses hath bin by some in "makeinge cockes in to my leades taken from me by
"the waye; and other enuevoringe the like findinge
"now water forther had prevented botne me and them)
"have quite cutt vpp my pipes by the whiche the water
"should passe, soe that the graunte which to my father
"was made by you standeth me in now stood at alle.
"I am desirous to enjoye the commoditie which you "meant to my father, but, because I can not for the "inconueniencies rehersed, I wishe the place from "whence the water is nowe fette might be chaunged."
No year given.

9 May. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Giving thanks for a present of a "fayre byrde."

29 May. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Shelley to Wylliam More, esq. Reporting that "within the rape
"of Brambro and Lewes" there are found no French prisoners, and that no one in the same district knows aught of any persons belonging thereto who, as English prisoners, are detained in France. No year given.

2 June. — Elizabeth. Letter from W. Howard, deputy-lieutenant co. Surrey, to Sir William More, knt., deputy-lieutenant of the same shire. About a muster of the horsemen of the county. Date of year no longer apparent.

5 June. — Elizabeth. Letter from Arthur Maynwaring to his brother-in-law Sir William More, knt. A note of friendly and courteous assurances. No year given.

3 June. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Scarlett to his brother-in-law William More, esq. Asking Mr. More to accept a horse in part payment of the impoverished writer's debt to him. No year given.

16 June. — Elizabeth. Letter from Francys Carew to Sir William More, knt. The writer has spoken to Mr. Secretary Walsingham respecting a commission upon which more commissioners will be put. No year given.

21 June. — Elizabeth. Letter from Ambrose earl of Warwick to Sir William Moore, knt. Requesting that Thomas Betts may be excused from the military service, to which he had been "prest," as he is the servant of the writer's servant Covertt. No year given.

16 July. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mattheue, archbishop of Canterbury, at his house at Croidon, to William More, John Agmondesham, and Edmund Slyfield, esqs. The said justices of the peace (having determined the controversy between Grove and Purdam by assigning to Purdam the close of land called Stanstede, computed by him at nine acres but understood by his grace to contain forty acres) are now requested to appoint impartial persons to measure out nine acres of the same close to the said Purdam, "wherein," adds the writer, "ye shall further do a good deed to the behoof of your "poore neighboures." No year given.

17 July. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mr. Antony Browne, son of viscount Mountague, to Sir William More, knt. About the death of the writer's servant Arnolt Martyn, killed in a quarrel by one of Mr. Weston's servants; an affair which Sir William is entreated to enquire into. From River Parke. No year given.

27 July. — Elizabeth. Letter from Thomas Shelley to William More, vice-admiral of the "shoare of Sussex." Acknowledging the writer's receipt of the Privy Council's order to stay all vessels of thirty tons and upwards entering "these liberties;" and referring to a recent impressment of mariners within the same liberties for her majesty's service. No year given.

2 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Anthony Wyngfelde to Mr. More. Touching the effect at court of Mr. More's representations as to the unfitness of his house to receive her majesty, by reason of the fewness and smallness of its rooms; and adding "I haue
"spoukene with my ladie Clyntone in youar cause and
"she douthe thynke ytt good that you should come and "declare on to my lord off Lystare youre estate that "her magystye myte not come onto youar hous." No year given. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

9 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Elizabeth lady Russell, in the Blackfriars, to Sir William Moore, knt. Asking for permission to make certain foundations, needful for the new building of a certain gallery, over certain ways and tenements pertaining to Sir William, to "an owld howse redy to fall," which she would fain repair in the Blackfriars for her own use. By consenting to her request the writer says, "yow wold pleasure my "lord and me much." No year given.

12 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mistress Anner Paston to Master Moore. About a commission now being held on some matter at "Geleford." The writer, when staying at the Lord Admiral's house at Horsley, would have visited Loseley, if that place had not been "vyseted wyth the mayssels." No year given.

12 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Lord Cobham to Mr. Wylliam Moore. Begging for a "little quylle of "watter vnto" his house, where he means to live all next winter; which "quylle" his late father always enjoyed. No year given.

13 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Caryll to Sir William More, knt. Claiming restoration of a hawk taken up by Sir William. The bearer of the letter can give precise information as to the marks of the bird. No year given. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

16 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Norreys to Sir William More, knt. For the further and strict examination of a prisoner charged with robbery. No year given.

19 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mr. Antony Browne, son of the viscount Mountague, to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to come to the christening of the writer's newly born child, "a girrell." From Cowdreye. No year given.

21 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Onslow to Sir William More. Begging Sir William to let a particular house to the writer's brother, and to take her word that the rent will be paid. Dated from Knoll. No year given.

25 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Thomas Asteley to Mr. More at his house near Gifford. In which the writer proposes to bring himself, his wife, her two children and two servants, and his own two servants, and three horses, to Loseley House, for board, lodging, and entertainment. No year given. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

25 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir Wylliam More, knt. Expressing the writer's satisfaction at knowing that Sir Wylliam harbours no unfriendliness to him. No year given.

27 August. — Elizabeth. Letter from Henri Nevell to Sir William More, knt. Begging Sir William to take as a tenant for a house the writer's friend, Mrs. Pharrant. Dated from Byllyngber. No year given.

2 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Inviting Sir William and his lady to come to Batell to hunt bucks, &c. with lord Mountague's guests. From Battell. No year given.

6 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from Henry Weston, esq., to William More, esq. Respecting complaints of excessive assessment to a subsidy by Sir Edward Braye (who declares that he cannot spend more than xx li. a-year), George Gose keeper of Okinge park, and Mr. Owen. No year given.

9 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Arthur Maynwaringe of Ightfeld, co. Salop, to Sir William More at Loseley. About the proposed marriage between the writer's son and Sir William's daughter Ann. Sir Arthur, though averse to travel, will journey to Loseley, in order that he may "the rather entice" Sir William to visit the "rude and barbarus soyle" of Shropshire. No year given.

15 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir William Moore, knt. For the suppression of an alehouse at Frensham, co. Surrey, which is injurious to the writer's servant Blaze Briday. From Horsley. No year given.

16 September. — Elizabeth. Holograph letter from Elizabeth countess of Lincoln to Sir William More. The writer says, "The cardynall chatylyen was at rochell
"and in danger to be taken wherypon he imbarkyd
"hymselfe sodenly and landed at douer and thens is "conducted to londen and to Syr tomas gresams house." No year given.

19 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from Cicely lady Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Begging that one Elidotte a carpenter may be excused from serving for the present in Sir William's trained band, as Lord Buckehurst requires the man's service in repairing his lordship's house and stables. No year given.

23 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from Cicely lady Buckehurst to Sir William More, knt. Begging for an abatement in the assessment of the writer's neighbour Richbell, who declares himself to have bestowed a great part of his goods on his children, reserving only enough to maintain himself and his wife in their old age and sickness. No year given.

28 September. — Elizabeth. Letter from lord Lumley to Mr. More. Begging Mr. More to see that good post horses are provided at Gylford for his lordship of

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

Northfolke, who will dine there on the morrow, on a rapid journey to London. No year given.

10 October. — Elizabeth. Letter from Wylliam Tyrell of Croydon to Mr. More, esq. In which the writer, in consideration of his failing strength and sufferings from "the collycke and the strangurie," begs to be excused from filling an office to which Mr. More has appointed him. No year given.

18 October. — Elizabeth. Letter from John Cowper to Sir William More, knt. After my very hartie commendacions. Sir, the bearer hereof beyng the minister of the parishe where I dwell, beyng withoute a wifys very desyrous to marry a mayde dwelling within the same parishe, and for as muche as by her majesties Injunctions a minister cannot marry but by the examination and allowance of the Bisshopp of the dioces and two Justices of the Peace nere unto the places where the sayde minister and woman do dwell, I am for hymne to desyre youre assent ther unto. The man is of honest and good conversacioun and the woman ys of good yeres towards xxx, and a very sober mayd and honest and so reported of by the substantiallest men of this parishe, wherein she hath dwelled almoste seven yeares. She hath the good will of her mother, her father beyng dede, and of her master with whome she last dwelled and of her frendes, and of the parishe where he serveth for I sent for diuers of them to know there oppinions of the matter before I wold wright and besech you to signify youre assent to my Lord Bushop (unto whom I have also written) by a word or two from you. I am sorry that I cannot come by you as I goe to London, &c. &c. No year given. (Vide Kempe's Loseley MS.)

29 November. — Elizabeth. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William Moore, knt. Givng particulars of the fortunes and careers of the four living sons of the lady Crips. From Coudrey. No year given.

5 November. — Elizabeth. Letter from R. Sothebie to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that Sir William's sister, after resting for a day at Islington, has gone into Northfolke and Suffolke. "The terme," the writer continues, "is kepte at Harteforde accordinge to "the first appointment; but howe longe the same shall "continue it is doubtfull, by reason their hathe deade "of the plague in Ware, above the numbar of xxx" "persons, which event hath caused lodgings to be so "streight, as their is offer made of v li a weake for a "chambar, but can not be had." No year given.

2 December. — Elizabeth. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the execution in the said shire of the orders of the Privy Council for the suppression of the Plague. No date of year visible.

18 December. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mr. George Evelen to William More, esq. In which the writer, who has been "apynted collecture For the lotere," reports that he has "receuyd no monye nor as yet perceafs no "monye lycke to come." No year given.

25 December. — Elizabeth. Letter of Ann Farrant, widow of Richard Farrant, to Sir William More. Respecting her rights in a house in the Blackfriars, leased to her late husband by Sir William. — Also, a copy of her petition on Sir Francis Walsingham, knt., and the queen's chief secretary, on the same matter. No year given.

29 December. — Elizabeth. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William Moore, knt. Assuring Sir William of the writer's mindfulness of a certain matter. From Coudrey. No year given.

30 December. — Elizabeth. Letter from Mr. Anthony Browne, son of the viscount Mountague, to Sir William More, knt. Thanking Sir William for an invitation to Loseley, and also for his intelligence respecting "the "othe of thassociacioun of her Majestie's safety." The writer is staying, together with his wife, at the house of his "dere frende Mr. Cornewallis," and complains of his poor health. From Horsley. No year given.

— Elizabeth. Articles of agreement (signed, Thomas Browne, Wylliam More, Richard Burton, Thomas Lyfeld, and John Cowey,) for providing stock and store, wherewith to provide work for the poor of the towns and parishes of co. Surrey. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter (signed, Knolles) addressed to Sir William More, knt. Condoling with Sir William on his sickness and infirmities. No date.

— Elizabeth. A Genealogical Chart (on paper, and in a handwriting of the seventeenth century) of the family of Rons in Suffolke; one of whom married into the family of More of Loseley. The pedigree begins with "Peter De Rows of Dinnington night (sic) Fram- "lingham Castle in y^e com. of Suff, who married d. & h. "of Jen. Hubbard of the same towne in y^e 19 yeare of "K. Ed. y^e First." No date.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

— Elizabeth. The First foundacioun of the blacke Friars w^{ch} in the citie of London w^{ch} the Churches and liberties graunted to the same. Beginning with a grant from Edward the First which empowered "the same "Friars Preachers of London to buyde th^{em} in a churche "w^{ch} a choyse w^{ch} houses of office necessarye for them "to dwell in as the state of theire order did require," this paper exhibits several of the earlier grants to the black and white brothers, and also the extent of the powers of the City of London within the boundaries of their houses and precinct. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Peter Hampton to Sir William More, knt. "Concerning the fysshing of "Waverley House in the great River."

— Elizabeth. List of possessions in lands, tenements, and rents, &c.; covering six pages of foolscap, and written throughout by Sir William More. Endorsed "My Landes." No date.

— Elizabeth. An account described, "Sommes of "money disbursed paide and distributed by William "Mores paynre, executor of the testament of Sir Thomas "Cawarden, knyght, deceased, Upon billes and ether- "wise touchinge the examinacioun of the saide Sir "Thomas Cawarden, as here after followith." Contain- ing many matters of interest to the antiquary, this incomplete and loosely kept account, covering 24 closely written pages of foolscap, would have been more service- able to the enquirer, had the accountant been more communicative as to dates and details. No date.

— Elizabeth. Rough Draft of a paper headed "The "Testymouye of dyuers gentylmen and honest yeomen "of the countye of Surrey, declaring the enormyty that "hath growen by the late erected yron mylle in the "said countye by Thomas Elrington squier, and con- "tynewed styлле contrary to the Statute theragaynst "prouided made in the fyrst yere of the Queens majes- "ties raigne. To whiche declaracion euery partye hath "subscriybed his name and sett his signe as well of his "owne particular knowledge as by the reporte of "others." No date.

— Elizabeth. Undated Returns of inspectors (ap- pointed for the execution of the orders of the Privy Council against the casting of ordnance at the iron mills and forges of co. Surrey) respecting the work done and fuel burnt at iron-furnaces and forges in Chidingfold, Godstone, Dunsfold, Nudigate, Abingworth, Cranley, and other parishes of the said shire. No date.

— Elizabeth. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to lord Howard of Effingham and his deputy- lieutenants of co. Surrey. Ordering in fervent terms that musters should be taken of the forces, horse and foot, of the said county, and that every means be employed to maintain the efficiency of the said forces, as the king of Spain is confidently expected to invade England next year, with a mighty force of ships now being built "in "all his north coaste of Spain and in his Indys." No date.

— Elizabeth. The answers of the Deputie-lieu- tenants and Justices of Peace of the countie of Surrey to the peticioun of the Lord Maior of London, exhibited to the Lords of her majesties most honorable Privie Councell wherein are containyd vntrew surmizes with request to have the gouernment of the Burghes of South- warke within the countie of Surrey. No date.

— Elizabeth. Articles against Maurice Standar, schoolmaster of Southwarke, charging him with reli- gious disaffection and unsoundness. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from George More, prisoner, to Sir William More, knt. and Sir George More, knt. at the Lord-Keeper's house. The writer, who has been imprisoned for asserting his power to cast out devils from those who are possessed by them, begs that he may be heard before the counsel. Endorsed "George More, mynster." No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Edward Lyvesey to Sir William More, knt. Describing himself as a "wild "yonge man whoe lately hath by his owne folly pur- "chased his fathers wrath and heavy displeasure, by "leaving his study at Lincolnes Inne, and followinge his "owne lewde and foolishse honnor in goinge into Flaun- "ders being accompanied with my lord Norice his "third souner;" the writer begs to be taken into Sir William's service, so that by the exhibition of dutiful- ness and devotion to an honourable master he may put himself in the way to recover his father's good opinion. No date.

— Elizabeth. Paper entitled "Harmes and Incon- "venyences which come by sowing and makinge of "Weede in Englan d." No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Mr. William Hammond, collector for the R. M. Lottery to William More, esq.,

W. M.
MOLYNEUX.
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX.
Esq.

treasurer for the same. Announcing that the writer has received his bill for the last year, and would fain be discharged of the same. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter (quest. 3, undated, and unaddressed, from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Franking Sir William for receiving the writer's brother, Mr Francis Browne, as a guest at Loseley, and undertaking to be his keeper.—Mr. Francis Browne was one of the dangerous recusants who were appointed to be held in custody by well-affected subjects. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. For more precise information, respecting the character of Mr. Spenser, in two or three lines to be shown to the viscount Mountague. No date.

— Elizabeth. List of the parishes, and lands thereof, in the hundreds of Godley, Woking, Farnham, Godalming, Blackheath and Wotton. A paper in Sir George More's Landwriting. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Antonie Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Announcing that viscount Mountague will be absent from Cowdrey next Monday and Tuesday, so that Sir William and his lady may not select those days for carrying out their "friendly determination (after the manner of Egyptians as your self termed it, to see Cowdrey sometime this season." No date.

— Elizabeth. Copy of orders of the Privy Council for reducing the number of cottages "lately erected in the west part of co. Surrey and especially in the "Forest," and for the removal of cottages there built on inconvenient spots to places where they may be advantageously re-erected.—Also, a paper setting forth grounds for objecting to the cottages, which the said orders were designed to destroy or remove. No date.

— Elizabeth. Rough copy of a letter addressed to the Privy Council. Certifying their lordships of the said council that the Justices of co. Surrey are on the alert to execute the council's orders for reducing the excessive prices of corn.—Also, a paper showing what magistrates of the said county have undertaken to attend the markets of Reigate, Dorkyng, Croydon, Kyngston, Sowthwarke, Guldeford, Farnham and Godalmyng, to see the same markets duly furnished with corn, offered for sale at equitable rates. No date.

— Elizabeth. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the better observance of the orders for abstaining from flesh on Fish Days: the too general disregard of the said orders being largely accountable for the excessive and extreme prices of victuals. No date remaining on the worn paper.

— Elizabeth. Copy of a letter from William Garrarde, William Chester, Ambrose Nicholas, Valentine Dale, and Francis Barnam, (commissioners for the repaving of a certayne wall nere the Thames at Wappinge Marshe) to William More, esq. Touching arrangements for the carriage of six or seven score loads of timber for the execution of the said repairs, neglect to accomplish which may result at any "full see" in the "drewninge of "Wappinge Marshe." No date.

— Elizabeth. List of recusants, who had either died in or been discharged from prison, when the return was made. No date.

— Elizabeth. Return to the Lords of the Council, of the recusants imprisoned in the Marshalsey (thirteen in number), in the White Lyon (four in number), and in the Clynke (eight in number). No date.

— Elizabeth. Rough draft of a letter by Sir William More at Loseley "to Mr. Crouley and others tochyng "Allen the anabaptist," who after his committal to prison by the commissioners for ecclesiastical causes has shown himself of sound judgment in religion, and has attributed his said trouble to the writer.

— Elizabeth. A "Tewsdaye" of two articles of an association of gentlemen, officers of co. Surrey, for the defence of Queen Elizabeth against all her enemies, and all pretenders to her crown or to the succession thereto. Signed by Charles lord Howard, William More, Thomas Wyfeld, Thomas Vincent, George Mor, Laurence Stoddart, and many others, of the gentry and yeomanry of the shire. No date.

— Elizabeth. Copy of orders, signed by lord Howard of Effingham, the Lord High Admiral and lieutenant of co. Surrey. Touching measures to be taken to oppose the Spaniards in any attempt they may make to land in the county. No date. Imp. 16.

— Elizabeth. Orders for putinge in strength the power of the Realme in the Inlande Counties. Reciting orders issued by the Privy Council in 1585. Signed by Sir Francis Walsingham. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the revival of the exercises in the use of bows; archery being no obsolete and unserviceable mode of warfare. Date no longer visible.

— Elizabeth. A muster-roll of the light horse and horsemen of fourteen hundreds of co. Surrey. No date.

— Elizabeth. An order for an armye in this Realme in the case of War. A list of the commanders and forces available for the defence of the Northern and Southern divisions of the country. No date.

— Elizabeth. An Order for the readie and easie trayning of shott and the avoydens of great expence and waste of powder. Signed Fra. Walsyngham. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Nycolas Styward to Sir William More, knt., and other commissioners of musters in the co. of Surrey. Touching Mr. Styward's neglect to provide a "light horse furnished for service." No date.

— Elizabeth. List of the Collonells and Principall Officers of the Seaven Regimentes. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Francis Walsingham to Sir William More. Directing further enquiry to be made respecting the speeches, in defence of Body and Slade lately executed at Winchester, said to have been made by one Hardy of Farnham, a person ill-affected in religion; who has been committed to prison, pending the enquiry. No date.

— Elizabeth. Petition of the prisoners, for matters touching religion, lying in the White Lion in Sowthwerk to Mr. Moore, "justis of Peace at Loessley in "Surrey." The petition, to which no signatures are attached, opens "Right Worshippfull maister Moore, "this shalbe to besek your worship to take some pitty "vpon vs your poore and obedient subjackes whiche "lye heare in prysson vpon your commaundement, "whear that wee are licke to perishe for defayet of "systemuncis yf your wurshipes favourable and marcy- "full hand be not stretched fourthe to take some "mercy vpon vs." No date.

— Elizabeth. Paper headed "The Clauses of the "Grande Commyssyon Ecclesiasticale for the Whole "Realme."

— Elizabeth. Memoranda of Preparations to be made for the Buryall of the Lady Cardyn. Also, on the other side of the same single sheet, a list of "The "Charges of y^e Buryall of a Lady of a Knyght," drawn by some officer of the Heralds' College. No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

— Elizabeth. Letter from Elizabeth (Lady) Wolley to her father Sir William Moore, knt., at Loseley. "Since my coming to the corte I have had manie "gratious wordes of her Majestie and manye tymes had "mee welcome with all her hart everie since I have "waited. Yesterdye she wore the gowne you gaue "her, and toke therby occasion to speake of your saying "so long I should have a mother-in-lawe whiche was "herself, but she was affrayed of the two wydowes that "ar ther with you, that they could be angrie with her "for yt, and that she would gyue ten thousande "poundes you were twentye yeres younger, for that she "hath but few suche servauntes as you ar, with manye "gratious speeches both of yourself and my Brother "which is to long to wryte, and therfor will leane to "tell you when wee meete. My Lord Admyrall come "to me, and bad me welcom with all his hart, and "tould me he had seene you and my brother, willinge "me to commaunde him in anye friendshippe he can "show unto me. I thought good at this tyme to use "no further speeches unto him. . . . Thus "hetherto I haue had a good beginning at Cort, and I "haue no dowte but to contynue yt, yf frendes be constant, yf they faile, yt shalbe thorough no desartes of "myne, for I will lyue very warlike amongst them. "The Queene as she sayeth will dine with my Lady "Komondes' (P) on Tewsdaye next and retorne agayn "at night, which I can hardlie beleieve, if she doe "I meane to wayte vpon her. My Lord Treasurer lyes "heere verye ill of the goute, and cannot stirr hand nor "foote, nor feede himselfe, the goute is so in his hands. "I thinke he will not be habie to goe to London this "weeke. My Lord Chamberleyn adviseth me to send "nym fewe pattriches, which I knowe not where to "gett anye. . . . From the cort this Sunday morn- "inge. Your Louing and obedient daughter, Eliza- "beth Wolley." No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.') — Elizabeth. Paper setting forth the sum paid to the Provost Marshall, co. Surrey, and his ten men for three months' service (of 28 days each), at the rates of ten shillings a-day for the Provost Marshall and two shillings a-day for each of his men: and also of the proportion of the same sum paid by the magistracy of the county. Each of the thirty-two justices of the peace contributed twenty shillings, no regard being had to the different values of their several estates.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

—Elizabeth. Letter from Antonio Garnett to Sir William More, knt. Enquiring after the true character of Mr. Spenser, of Oxenford, who is desirous to wear Lord Mountague's cloth. "And," says the writer, "I am very willinge he should so doe, both because I esteeme the gentleman honest, wise and sufficiente, and able sondrye wayes to stand my lord in steade, both here, and in those parts especyally northward, wher his lyvinge doth lye, as also in that he was some tyme vnder my tutell, and at this present is tenante ther for the tyme vnder my nephewe." No date.

—Elizabeth. Volume (large 12° in paper wrapper) of Latin Poems (including one in praise of Queen Elizabeth). Followed by a translation in English Verse of the Golden Sayings of Perlander. Composed by John Phillip, scholemaister of Kingstowne, and dedicated by him to the Right Worshipfulle knight Sir William Moore. No date.

—Elizabeth. Letter from the Lords Commissioners for mustering horsemen and breeding horses in all places of the realm, to the Lord Howar of Liffingham and others, commissioners for the same purposes in the county of Surrey. With especial instructions for the breeding of horses. Signed by the earls of Lyncoln, Sussex, Leicester, Sir Christopher Hatton and others. No date remaining.

—Elizabeth. Ledger of Leases and Grants relating to the Blackfriars Estate in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, down to the 30th year of the said reign. Containing 286 closely written pages, this volume preserves copies of all the more important leases granted on the Blackfriars property during the greater part of Queen Elizabeth's time; together with rentals of the property during several years of the same period. The transcriber of this ledger seems to have intended to enter the documents in chronological order; but the intention is far from perfectly carried out. A careful examination of its pages failed to discover copies of Sir William More's conveyances to the Burbages, or any entries relating particularly to the property conveyed by those deeds. The record stops by several years short of the time when Sir William More conveyed the old office of the Tents and Revels to James Burbadge.

—Elizabeth. Two letters (undated) from "the ladye Marques of Northampton" to her frynd Master Moure: —the one asking for the lease of a house in the Blackfriars for her brother; and the other begging for an immediate loan of fifty pounds to be "repayed at Ester at the furdest." No date.

—Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Walter Raleigh to his very loveinge frende Sir William More, knight. Urging Sir William to grant out of his abundant kindness five years of grace, in addition to a term of seven years already granted, to the Signior Rocco who "hathe bestowed all his wealthe in buyldinge certayne howses vpon your grounds without youre consent, and thereby is endetted vnto dyvers and sondrye persons in the somme of two hundredthe poundes, by reason wherof he hathe byn constrayned by the space of one halfe yere heretofore as well as at this present is to kepe his howse as prysoner to his vtter vndoinge." No date.

—Elizabeth. The bill in chancery of William Ray and Margaret his wife, late the wife and executor of James Carter, citizen and "tyler" of London. Touching the lease (made 14 Eliz. by William More of Loseley, esq.), to the said James Carter of eight cotages "within the late Black Fryers gate called the Newe Gate nexte vnto the Lane called Carter Lane in London." No date.

—Elizabeth. Copy of the petition of the Mayor and Citizens of London to the Lords of the Privy Council. Praying that the queen's two chief justices may be appointed and commissioned to "examine and set downe the right of the franchises and liberties" of the sites of the lately dissolved monasteries of the Black Friars, White Friars and Christ's Church near Aldgate; respecting which sites the petitioners say that "of late certen lycensius people geven to wicked lyving and being receptors of thyfes, and comen colorers of stollen goodes besides the greate repaire of lewde and wicked weomen, fugytives, clippers, flyers and washers of the quenes highnes coyne, and over this the same places are at this present tyme the comen receiptacles of all lewde people repaying to the same citie, in which places offenders bene shrowded as in sanctuaries, affirming that no maiestrate vnder the Quenes highnes hath to doe with them."

—Elizabeth. Letter from lord Clynton to Master More. Regretting that the writer, being summoned to town "for the L. Stonton's araynement," must forego the pleasure of paying his correspondent a visit. Endorsed by Mr. More. "My L. Admyrall." No date.

—Elizabeth. A Genealogical Chart of the Molyneuxes of Sefton; beginning with William de Molyneux, first lord of Sefton, by the gift of Roger de Poytiers from the grant of William the Conqueror. No date.

—Elizabeth. A genealogical Chart of the family of Poynings, through whom the Mores of Loseley are shown to derive their descent from king Edward the Third. A Latin inscription at the foot of the chart shows that the pedigree was drawn by James Gresham for the edification of his very near nephew William More of Lotheshy. No date.

—Elizabeth. The Petition of John Trewe of Helingley, co. Sussex, to Sir Thomas Cardyn, Sir Nicholas Pelham, knights, Thomas Brown, Edmand Slyfelde, William More, Richard Elderton, John Stapley, John Hussy and John Apsley, her majesty's commissioners in cos. Sussex and Surrey. Complaining of the persecutions endured by the petitioner in past time through the malice of Sir Edward Gage, knight, "an extreme persecutor of the gospel," who unlawfully placed the petitioner in the pillory in the market towns of Lewes and Harlsham, and caused his ears to be barbarously cut; and praying that the petitioner may have for his undeserved sufferings some recompense from the man who occasioned them. No date.

—Elizabeth. A draft of a Petition to the Lords of the Queen's Council, from the grantees of the Blackfriars, London; claiming an exempt jurisdiction, and complaining that the Lord Mayor and officers of the City of London disturb and obstruct the said petitioners' alleged privileges. No date.

—Elizabeth. The Bill of Complaint of the Rt. Hon. Anthony Viscount Mountague to the Rt. Hon. Sir Christopher Hatton, Lord Chancellor, &c. &c. against the bishop of Winchester and Sir William Moore, knt., in respect to the complainant's alleged right in the fishery of Tyllforde river (from a place called Tankerforde to a place called Crickleborne) formerly pertaining to the dissolved Abbey of Waverley, co. Surrey; the said river being described in the bill as running from Farnam to Goddalming, co. Surrey. No date.

—Elizabeth. Account of moneys spent by the churchwardens of Blechingly. Extracts of which were published in Kempe's Loseley MSS. No date.

—Elizabeth. The Answer of Thomas lord bishop of Winchester and Sir William Moore, knight, defendants to the byll of complaint of the Right Hon. Anthony Viscount Mountague, complainant. No date.

—Elizabeth. Undated Paper with this heading, "Instructions for thexecuting of y^e office of the Maister of the game of Swannes as yt ys vsed in the ryver of Thames and elles where within this Realme of England." No date.

—Elizabeth. Inventory taken by the Jure aforesaid the xii daie of December in the yere abouewritten of all and eu'ry soche church goodes as doth or ought to appertaine vnto the parish of Tattesfeld in the charge of the churchwardens as therafter apperethe. The names of the jurymen and the date of the year have been torn from this schedule.

—Elizabeth. Epitaphium crassi illius as sordidi vsurarii Johannis Gresham militis stercorarii * * * in inferno sepulti. Followed, on the same sheet of paper, by an answer to the contumelious epitaph, "Responsio Ricardi Shorii ad Epitaphium falso illi adscriptum, et aduersus domum Johannis Gresham rithmico conscriptum." Both compositions in Latin verse. Also, of the same period, a Latin poem, "In laudem domini Mauri viri nobilis prestantissimi." No date.

—Elizabeth. Paper entitled "Considerations to enduce her Majestie to proceade accordinge to Law and Justice." Touching the queen's policy towards Mary queen of Scots, who is described as "beinge dreven thorow violence and force of others to take herbour in youre majesties realme." No date.

—Elizabeth. Paper entitled "Consideracons touching the peace nowe in speache." No date.

—Elizabeth. News-letter addressed to the earl of Newport, and giving intelligence from Franckfort, 23 August, beginning, "Concerning the publiques affaires all hath bin since the taking of Ratesbon very vncertaine and doubtfull;" from Norinberg, 23 August; Frankfort, 24 August; Paris, 13 September; and Leyden, 14 September; and ending "Mustricke is provided for more then a year."

—Elizabeth. Copy of a letter signed Essex, and headed, "The earl Marshall his aunswer to the Lord Keiper." No date.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

— Elizabeth. Metrical Epitaph on Sir Marmaduke Darell. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter, in defence of the Prince of Orange and his confederates against Spain. Addressed by the anonymous writer to his "verge frinde E. B. esquier affectionate frinde and devotist servant unto the faire and vertuous Ladie the countesse of Gutenbergh." No date.

— Elizabeth. Speeches delivered by the Porter, the Pilgrim, and the Wildman to the Queen Elizabeth, on the occasion of her visit to Lord Mountague at Cawdrey. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Robert Cecyll, knt., to Sir George More, knt., William Morgan, Laurence Stoughton, and John Clarke, esqs. Approving of the conduct of said justices of the peace for co. Surrey, in committing Anthony Charlewood for his "leawd speeches loosely vitered;" but averring the writer's reluctance to seek his own protection in the punishment of others. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Robert Earl of Leycester, to Sir William More, knt. Enquiring tenderly for Sir William's health, and praising Sir William's son in terms of fervid eulogy. In the same cordial terms the writer speaks of his old friend Wolley. Dated on the New Year's Night, of a year not given. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.') — Elizabeth. Letter from Robert, earl of Leycester to Mr. William More. Summoning Mr. More to Richmond where the Queen's majesty has appointed her Attorney and Sollicitor to be. No date.

— Elizabeth. Warrant (signed, W. Howard) to Mr. Thomas Browne and Mr. William Moore, justices of the peace, co. Surrey. To seize the person of a woman named Cox, the nature of whose offence is not mentioned, and to commit her to the Marshallsey, there to remain till her discharge be ordered. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from W. Howard (son of Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord Admiral), to Mr. Mowre dwelling beside Gnyllforde. Summoning Mr. Mowre to come with Mr. Browne, with all speed, and confer with writer on "diuers greate matters." No date.

— Elizabeth. Latin letter from George, son of Sir George More, knt., to his grandfather Sir William More, knt. A school, or college, exercise. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Thomas Leighton to Sir William More, knt. Asking Sir William to accept, for his tenant of a house in the Blackfriars, the letter's bearer who is the writer's servant. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Thomas Cornawaleis to Mr. Edward Moore. Announcing that the earl of Arundell will visit Loseley House on his way to Sussex. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Henry Weston, of Sutton, to William More, esq. Touching the strange and offensive manner in which the writer's "paler" has been arrested by five persons carrying out the orders of Mr. Bydon. From Sutton. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Henry Weston, of Sutton, to Wyllyam More, esq. Begging that Olyver Harte, already in bonds for his good behaviour, may be bound in like manner for another twelve months, so that the writer may be assured of the quiet of his deer and conies. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Henry Weston, of Sutton, to William More, esq. Testifying to the honesty and worth of Master Josen, for long time a servant to the writer's mother-in-law, and in former time servant to lady Arundel. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Sir Henry Weston to Sir William More, knt. Praying that the writer's servants, John Enfolde, of Worpdon, and John Wattes, of Okyng, may be excused from attending a muster. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from John Austen to Mr. More, esq. Touching the suspicions attaching to a person named King, who keeps a horse, dwells at Allen's "privileged" house, and gives no satisfactory account of himself. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from John Austen to William More, esq. Touching arrangements for the "next county" day for Surrey at Guldeford, and preparations for an election of knights for the shire. No date.

— Elizabeth. The Hamble Petition of the inhabitants and parochioners of Ewel, in the Countie of Surrey, recd. to Nonesuch, for the reliefe of the most honorable state of their par. vicaridge. Addressed to "the Right Worshipfull Sir William More, knt." at a time when the petitioners' poor vicar was named Richard Williamson. No date.

— Elizabeth. Rough draft of Mr. More's letter to the Lords of the Council, about the earl of Southampton's behaviour in respect to Common Prayer at Loseley. On being informed there was Common Prayer twice a day at Loseley House, and being at the same time asked if he would attend the said service, the earl answered, "that sins he was restrnyd of his lybertye in my howse he had no dispocycion to come out of his chamber to prayers, but privately to occupye himselfe there in prayer." No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

— Elizabeth. Rough draft of a letter from William More, esq., to Mr. Secretary Cycles. Praying that the writer may be relieved of the custody of the earl of Southampton. No date.

— Elizabeth. Rental of manors in Norfolk:—i.e., "The Hoole yeres rente of the manor of Hale," and "The Maner of Vyrleye for the hoole yeere." No date.

— Elizabeth. Holograph letter from Elyzabeth countess of Lyncoln to Sir Wyllyam More. "I pray you syr wyllyam more come to purford to my lo' my brother of kyldares causes kalles me heus at thys present beyng put in hope that my speshe wyll now do som good I am sure my lo' wyll the les myse me yf yow and other hys good frends be wyth him I comyt yow to good and end wyth my frendly comendasyon to my 'lo' more porford thys tuesday nyght your assured frend Elyzabeth lyncoln." No date.—The countess usually wrote her letters by the hand of a secretary who could spell, only signing the epistles with her own hand.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Elyzabeth lady Clynton to George Parvis. Stating that having heard of George Moore's mischance by the hurt of a knife, the writer has asked Mr. Balthrope, "being seruaut to the quene's surgianus" to see George Moore and give him his best advice. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter (holograph) from Elyzabeth, countess of Lincoln to Sir Wyllyam More. About a negociation between her ladyship and Sir Harry West in respect to some woods. The writer concludes, "I comyt you and yours to gods blysyd tuisyen." No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter (holograph) from Elyzabeth lady Lyncoln to Syr Wyllyam More. About the value of certain woods, computed at one hundred pounds. No date.

— Elizabeth. Rough draft of a letter from William More, esq., to the earl of Leycester. Touching the health of the writer's prisoner, the earl of Southampton, since he has heard of the ill success of the representations made in his behalf to her highness by the earl of Leycester and others. The prisoner "ys fallen into that hearynes and pensyvenes of mynde as that" the writer fears "yt wyll eyther brede hym some present sickenes or some great inconveniens hereafter." No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

— Elizabeth. List (on a single sheet of foolscap) of persons dwelling in the county of Surrey, who have lent money to the Queen on Privy Seal writs. All the principal persons in the county are named in the schedule, and the loans vary in amount from 20*l.* to 100*l.*, which latter sum was lent by William Mill, esquire. Signed,—Tho. Dorset, Edward Worcester, Northampton, Knollys and others. Sheet much mutilated and defaced. No date.

— Elizabeth. A single closely written sheet much worn, torn, and defaced; being a fragment of the narrative of the last days and execution of the Earl of Essex. In some places the document is so injured as to be illegible. "This daye morninge," the record runs in "one of its legible passages, "beinge Thursdays he received the * at the hands of the most reverend pasture and Busshoppe the archbusshoppe of Dublin, ther beinge present the Lord Chancellor, Mr. Frauncis Agars, Mr. Edward Waterhouse, Mr. Doctor Tawers, John Browne, preacher, Tho. Knoll, preacher, and the most part of the gentlemen of his household and chamber. Afterwards he desired to have his will read, and as yt was readinge he hard the tytles of his well deserved honour recyted, as Walter Earle of Essex and Erle Marshall of Ireland, &c., and smilinge (he said) thse be my wayne tytles, wayne tytles, farewell now all my wayne tytles."

— Elizabeth. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir William Moore, knight, collector to her Majesty for the loans in the countie of Surrey. Instructing him to give notice to all persons of the said county, who have lent money to her Majesty on letters of Privy Seal, that they may repair to the Receipt of the Exchequer at Westminster, on the expiration of twelve months from the date of their respective loans, and there have repayment of their money so lent. Signed by Chr. Hatton, cane., W. Burghley, and others.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Charles Bradshawe to Master Mor, esquier, Loseley. Right warship Fullo master I haue sentt you vp the paynter and iiii labollse and my lorde and my ladis picktures with ii frames to them and as For the Quenes picktur it is not Fyneshed, and he sayth he will Gette lisenche of you to fyneshe it hear in London For he cannot bryng it well Downe as your worship shall knowe of hime and I haue Geuen him xxs. as is my reackninge with you, To by his collers with alle and I payd For the Quene's labell xxd. and for vi labelles mor iiii. sence you had my reckning For the bordes and the Frames. This is to lett you vnderstand the chargis that you haue binne at here when you reckon with him, and as For master naller he doth braye as he was wonte but nother master cobbe nor I cann hear of no Frame not as yet nor nothinge ells but his boulling alley wich he is bisey a bout and hath putte outte all the por Fokes and when I hear any thing of him I will send you word other ues hear is non to send you but that at won house is all buried vpp and the dor shitt Fast vpp I pray to you let master gorge vnder stand I haue sent him a payr of whiette shues by the paynter. No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Charles Bradshaw, servant, to his master, Mr. More, esquier, at Loseley. "Righte Worshipec Full master, this is to sastisfy youe that my lordes and my ladies pickturse be Donne saving they lacke excorsise and I cant not tell wheere youe will haue it Done hear or at whome at your house wh ar For I pray you send word and the Quenes pickture is not Fynished For he menes to make a end at whom at your house For he sayth it lacketh A Fortaites worke yet by sides that he hath Downe and as For The iiii Labelles I will send them Downe with the paynter and hee is reddie to com when youe wille on monday or tusdaye and if you think Good and so to Finishe youre worke of you and he Are and if wee marke the excorsis To them we cannot Fyneshe them so sonn For it will be the latter end of this weeke be cause I did not knowe your myn at all be fore as con serning your quinchise you writ to me For ther is not haullde a Dusen in the garden as your man can telle. . . &c. &c." No date.

— Elizabeth. Letter from Charles Bradshaw, servant, to his master William More, esq. Right worshipfull master this is to sastisfy youe that I haue reaseaved of Master Wanslee iiii pickturs and iiii of them I haue payd and the flourth he doth geue you because it lackt excorsis round about and that I haue don beffer I send it downe exsepte you haue won that canne do it thear and also I haue bin at my lordes linkones and showed the paynter of the pikters and the picktur of the quen is a great dell bigger then my lordee or my ladis and the pickturs wich I facht From lambith ar not so bige as they, and your worship hath sent me word that I should merk the pickturs no bigger than them wich I facht From lambith, and my lordes and my laidis are bigger a great dell and I pray you ssend me worde wheather I should make theme, all on sise or no and especialley the Quense picktur is no bigger than all the Reste and hath a great Dell of labor about it in Juellse and Flaunders worke, and I wold know wheather it be your pleasur to haue it done in all poyntes as that is and I can not get the labells down this senit and mor be cause but won Joner in London a duchman that can doth them and he hath maney resortig to him and the paynter moste be Fayne to worke them in my lord of lincolne hous For he that kepes the house Dar let non of them Forth exsept he hath my lordes lisenches and also master Martin your attorney hath byn with me to haue money For his Fee and he sayth that you byd me pay him and haue payd him vis. viiij. By your servaunt Charles bradshawe. No date.

1603. Poem in honour of "Elizabeth queene of England Fraunce and Ireland and Virginia, the Constant Defendresse of the Fayth, nowe resting in the Lorde: "Nata Grenewicii Anno Christi 1533." By Jo: Vicars.

25 March, 1603. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Touching the death of queen Elizabeth and the succession of the king of the Scots. Accompanying a form of proclamation, announcing the accession of the said king to the throne of England. Twenty-one signatures remaining on the paper. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

5 May, 1603. Letter from John Knight to his "mother y^e ladie More right ouer against y^e Lord Keeper's house aboue Charing Cross." Accompanying a present of salmon and partridges.

19 July, 1603. Letter from Lords of the Council to the lord High Admiral, the lieutenant of Surrey. Requiring a levy of one hundred picked men of the said county to assist in keeping order in town on the occasion of the king's coronation.

28 August, 1603. Letter from Edward Herbert (afterwards lord Herbert of Cherbury) to Sir George More, knt. Referring to Sir George's "royal entertainment" of the king, and the "increase of the plague" in London. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

9 September, 1603. Letter from Lord Chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law Sir George More, knt. Enquiring for Sir George's health.

26 September, 1603. Letter from lord Chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt. Asking for intelligence about Sir George's health.

29 September, 1603. Letter from Sir Robert Cecyll to divers gentlemen of co. Surrey. Touching the proposal of a scheme to enable tenants in capite or by knight's service to compound for the wardship and marriage of their next heirs being under under age.

12 October, 1603. Letter from Edward Herbert (afterwards lord Herbert of Cherbury) to Sir George More, knt. A note of friendly assurance in euphuistic phraseology. Dated from Montgomery Castle. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

26 October, 1603. Letter from Dr. John Hammond to Sir George More, knt. About the sickness and deep melancholy of Lady Warwick.

23 November, 1603. Letter from John Hunton to Sir George More, at Loseley, dated from Wynchester and referring to recent tryals in that city. "Lord Copham." says the writer, "at his triall decyphered Sir W. Raleigh" to be the ugliest traitour that ever was heard of in England. . . . Lord Copham seemed to be very tymarous "and did importune y^e lords very much to be mediators" to the kyng for him. And the Lord Grey shewed spirit "and courage invincible standing whoally vppon his" justificacioun, but shewed much vanity in the course "of his defence, and wh n sentence was propounded" he only desired to haue Mr. Travers and Dr. Fyeld to "confute with him with any shew of teme depart d."

24 November, 1603. Letter signed by Robert Cecyll, explaining his majesty's gracious offer that gentlemen holding lands of the king by tenure in capite or by knight's service "should be admitted to compound for" the wardshippe of their next heirs."

26 November, 1603. Letter from Francis Aungier to Sir George More, knt. Describing the arraignment and trial on the aforegiven day of seven prisoners.—Mr. George Brooker, Sir Gryffyn Markham, Sir Edward Parham, Mr. Brookesby, Mr. Copley, and two priests, Watson and Clark,—on charges of high treason. Dated from Winchester. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

3 December, 1603. Letter from Launcelot Andrewes to Sir George Moore, knt. Announcing that the writer and his brethren of the Westminster chapter have appointed the 9th of January for the coming together again of the King's Scholars.

4 Deceember, 1603. Letter from Edward Herbert (afterwards lord Herbert of Cherbury) to Sir George More, knt., at Loseley. A note of fancifully expressed courtesies. Dated from Montgomery Castle. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

19 December, 1603. Letter from Lords of the Council to the magistrates of co. Surrey. Citing the king's recent proclamation against unlawful and disorderly hunting and killing of game, and directing that the laws against such disorders be carried out zealously.

26 January, 1 James I. General pardon, under the great seal, of all rebellions, treasons, murders, &c. &c. to Sir George Moore of Loseley, co. Surrey, knight, one of the chamberlains of his majesty's exchequer.

10 February, 1 James I. General paadon, under the great seal of all offences committed before 27 March last past to Sir George More of Loseley, co. Surrey, knight.

11 June, 1604. Letter (Latin) of gratitude from the university of Oxford to Sir George Moore, knt., for a present of books, and of money to be expended in purchasing more books, for the university library. Dated, "E Domo Congregationis."

July, 1604. Letter addressed by Sir George More to his "Dread Soueraygne" on the occasion of the writer's servant, John Rogers, keeper of the little park of Farneham, being charged with the killing of a stag or two in Windsor forest. Towards the conclusion of his humble address the writer says, "And surely he shall be neuer" myne, howe neere myne he be so euer, whom I shall "finde or maye suspect to be a destroyer of your

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

"majesties game, or anye way in other sorte then shall become him to stand affected towards your majestie." 19 July, 1601. Letter from Jo. Hammond to Sir George More, knight; dated from Non such where the prince and the lord-admiral are staying. Giving the news of the court about the movements of the king and queen, and other like matters.

31 July, 2 James. Privy Seal writ, addressed to Sir Francis Carewe, knt. Requiring him to furnish by way of loan 50*l.* for the king's use, to be repaid on 20 March, 1605, and to pay the same within twelve days to Sir George More, knt., collector of the loan, co. Surrey. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

7 August, 1604. Letter from Edward More to his loving brother —. Explaining why the writer has delayed so long to visit Loaseley, and making reference to a copy of the inscription which he put on his "first wife's tombe." The writer says, "Myne eyes have byn so satisfied and my purse tyered theis many yeeres with grate and glorious shewes, as I nowe runne faster from them then others com towards them." Dated from Odiham.

31 August, 1604. Letter from Robert Livesey to Sir William More, knt. Giving particulars of the writer's debts, embarrassments and grievances. In the 38th year of the late queen he was compelled to lend her majesty a hundred pounds that have never been repaid; and now a loan of another 100*l.* is demanded of him for the king. An unjust sentence of the Star Chamber has compelled him to borrow 1,000*l.* (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

8 December, 1604. Warrant, of the Earl Notingham, to the verderers of Windsor Forest; to ascertain and certify the said earl, whether the Spring Grove in the said forest may be conveniently "encopsed and felled this yeare."

—1604. Letter from Mr. N. Throckmorton to his father-in-law Sir George More, knt. Sueing for a loan of money, urgently needed by the writer who has pawned his plate and credit to the uttermost. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

16 April, 1605. Letter from the earl of Suffolke to Sir George More and others, magistrates co. Surrey. Touching the partial abolition of "purveyance and carriages," in respect to parishes of Surrey.

19 April, 1605. Letter (dated at Greenwich and signed, Jo. Hammond) to Sir George More, knight. Announcing that Sir George's son has been appointed to a place "about the prince," and that a gentleman-usher would have come from the Lord Chamberlain to Sir George that afternoon on the matter, had not "the cocknight hindered."

19 June, 1605. Letter from Thomas bishop of Winchester to Sir George More at Loseley. About the appointment of a new keeper for one of the bishop's parks.

10 July, 1605. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sirs George More and Nicholas Lusher, knts., and Laurence Stoughton and Frances Auger, esqs. Requiring them to make provision against certain meditated disturbances at Guldeforde on St. James's day next, and also on the same day to preserve order there and restrain one Thomas Smalpece and his associates from erecting a summer-pole in defiance of the orders of the mayor and aldermen of the said town; the writer having been informed by the said mayor and his brethren "that one Thomas Smalpece of that Towne, associatinge himself with divers others both of that towne and of the countrey nere adjoyninge, of meane and base condicionn, persons of themselves very disordered, goe about maliciously in despite and contempte of the saide Maire and his Bretheren to enter vpon breake and digge vpp theire grounde and soyle without there leve or allowance to erect a Summer Pole within that Towne, a thinge in some sorte tollerable but don in such a dispitfull and disordered manner, in noe wise sufferable, especially when to effecte their disordered practises they labour to drawe thither out of the countrey (as I am informed) multitudes of people to accompany them vpon St. James day next in the saide Towne to assiste and countenance there vnlawfull practises."

12 September, 1605. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir George More, knt., and the other justices of peace of co. Surrey. Ordering the said justices to call before them the high and petty constables of the said shire, and to ascertain the truth of certain charges of injustice and extortion preferred against the cart-takers, whilst discharging the duties of their office during his majesty's "progresse."

9 December, 1605. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Touching the excesses of the rogues and vagabonds, who swarm in and about the city of London; and giving orders for their suppression.

23 May, 1606. Consent of George Austen of Guldeford, co. Surrey (to whom Sir George More, knt., has assigned all his lease, interest and term of years in the Fryers Preachers near Guldeford aforesaid), that Sir George or his exors, may, under certain conditions and limitations, remove the timber, tiles, bricks, and stone, &c. of certain parts of the buildings on the said estate.

November, 1606. Letter, pated at York House, from Lord Chancellor Ellesmere to Sir William Oglander, knt., high-sheriff for the county of Southampton. Recommending the bearer ("one Brian Chamberlayne, a man of good yeeres, judgement and discretion, and that hath spent his time in the studye of the lawe") as a fit person to be Sir William's under-sheriff.

—1606. Letter (signed, W. Knollys, E. Wotton), addressed to Sir George Moore and Sir Thomas Vincent, knts., and the other Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Requesting the said justices to appoint three of their number to confer with the writer, about the complaints against the royal cart-takers and the grievances of the subject from the abuses of the royal prerogative to take carts, with a view to the amicable arrangement of the matters of disagreement.

28 January, 1607. Letter from lord chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law Sir George More, knt. Making reference to the late death of the writer's ward, young Salisbury.

February, 1607. Latin letter, covering twenty closely written foolscap pages, in the highest strain of academic panegyric, addressed by Charles Bell to the brightest, wisest and most virtuous Sir George More, knt. Beginning with—"Georgium Morum Loseleiensem, ortum è prosapia generosa ac clarâ ipsum præterea virum Equestris Ordinis, omnes esse illustrem et splendidum agnoscunt."

4 March, 1607. Letter from Lords of the Council to Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Acknowledging their lordships' receipt of certain returned "Articles of directions for the reformation of alehouses and Tipling howses;" and announcing that fuller orders for the same purpose are sent herewith.

18 April, 1607. The Proportion of "400 lodes of coles" for the composition for the whole county of Surrey, rated at Kingston and devided vpon the hundredes. Signed by Sir George More, knt., and ten other justices of peace of the said shire.—Also the commission, signed by Sir George More and other magistrates of co. Surrey, authorizing Sir Nicholas Saunder, knt., and three other knights to compound, for the said shire, with the officers of his majesty's Greencloth for the yearly service of carting coals.

21 April, 1607. Letter from Constance lady More to her husband Sir George More, knt. About the dismissal of a servant and other domestic matters.

26 April, 1607. Letter from Sir William Oglander to his brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt. Asking for payment of 60*l.* Also Mr. Thomas Oglander's receipt for the same money.

28 April, 1607. Letter from the earl of Dorset to Sir George Moore, knight. Announcing the writer's desire for a marriage between the writer's grandson, Richard Saevill, and "that vertuous young lady the Lady Anne Cliffard;" and soliciting Sir George's kindly offices with the Countesse of Cumberland for the arrangement of the match.

16 June, 1607. Letter from the earl of Dorset to Sir George Moore, knt. Begging Sir George to use his influence with the countess of Cumberland, to bring about a marriage between the writer's nephew and the lady Anne.

18 July, 1607. Letter from lord chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law Sir George Moore, knight. Asking Sir George to come to the writer on Monday next. Dated from York House.

31 July, 1607. Letter from the earl of Dorset to the Custos rotulorum and justices of the peace co. Surrey. For a new assessment of fines due to his majesty on admittances, &c. from copyholders of his manors in the said shire.

9 February, 1608. Letter from Lords of the Council to commissioners far the subsidie, co. Surrey. For the complete and thorough levying of the same.

30 April, 1608. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his son Sir Charles Howard, knt., lieutenant of Windsor forest and castle, and to Sir George More and Mr. Laurence Stoughton. Directing them to view the deer of Guildford park and certify the writer respecting the same; Sir Thomas Gorges having surrendered the keeper-

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX.
Esq.

ship of the said park to Mr. John Murrey, a gentleman of his Majesty's bed-chamber.

23 May, 6 James. Warrant under the King's signet and sign-manual, to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey, to levy twenty-five soldiers in the said shire, equip them, and have them in readiness for service at a moment's notice.

25 May, 1608. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Recommending the said lord-lieutenant to commission Mr. Edmond Nicholson to send to West Chester an adequate supply of arms for the soldiers now being levied in Surrey for service in Ireland: the said Edmond Nicholson having in past time provided for service in Ireland, at the direction of the Privy Council, but at his own cost and risk, a large supply of choice arms, that have not yet been taken off his hands.

27 May, 1608. Letter from the earl of Nottingham, to his son the lord Willyam Howard of Effingham, Sir George More, and others, the writer's deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Giving instructions for levying in the said county twenty-five men to be sent via West Chester to Ireland, for service there.

28 May, 1608. George Duncumbe's receipt for 50*l.* paid by Sir George More, knt. to John Carill, gent., for two and a half years' interest on 200*l.* lent by the said Mr. Carill to the said Sir George.—Also, several other receipts of divers dates signed by George Duncumbe, attorney of Albury, in matters relating to the Carills, one of whom (Henry Carill) was his uncle.

8 June, 1608. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, knt., and the other verderers of the Surrey bailiwick in Windsor Forest. Ordering them to cause the owners of certain swine, that have injured the riding-grounds of the Surrey bailiwick of Windsor forest by routing holes therein, to make good the damage done and to withhold such swine from the forest for the future, as the King's Majesty cannot ride in the said district of the forest without danger from the holes. In his reasonable displeasure his highness ordered the keepers of the said district to kill all hogs found therein; but to spare honest owners so heavy a punishment the earl would have them take their swine and fill up the holes. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

10 June, 6 James I. Patent under the great seal of a grant in survivorship to Sir George More of Loseley co. Surrey, knight, and Sir Robert More, knight, his son and heir-apparent, of an annual rent of 106*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* out of the issues of the county of Surrey:—in consideration of the relinquishment and surrender by the aforesaid knights of all their title and interest in the office of constable of the castle of Farneham co. Surrey, and in the office of chief keeper and supervisor of the chaces of wild animals and of the parks of Farneham aforesaid, and in an annuity of 8*l.* of money of the issues of the manor of Farneham for the exercise of the said office of constable, and in an annuity of 5*l.* out of the issues of the same manor for the exercise of the said office of chief keeper and supervisor, and in all advails pertaining to the same offices—such as the yearly allowances of a male deer called in English "a stag of season" in the summer, and of a female deer called in English "a hynde of season" in the winter, and of a male deer called "a buck of season" in the summer, and a female deer called a "doe of season" in the winter, to be taken in the parks of Farneham, &c. &c. &c.; which said offices, with their wages and perquisites, had been granted for life, in survivorship to the aforesaid George More and William More, knights.

12 June, 1608. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey,—i.e., Lord Howard of Effingham, and Sirs Francis Carew, George More and Thomas Vincent, knts. Recommending Mr. Edward Penton for appointment to the office of Muster-Master of the forces of the said shire, vice Captain Washeborne, deceased.

18 September, 1608. Letter from Robert earl of Salisbury to Sir George More, knt. Requesting Sir George, at the end of his "chardge geven to the Jury at "his" next "Sessions," to explain the effect of his majesty's gacious proposals to his subjects of "a course of com-posicion in certain cases touchinge Tenures of his "Highness," and then to leave the king's feodary in the said county to read the articles of the same proposal, so that the country may apprehend the benefits of accepting and the inconveniences of neglecting the royal offer.

28 September, 1608. Letter from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to Sir George More, knt., at Losely. Announcing that the plague has killed one of the writer's grooms. The writer signs himself "Your loving "brother-in-lawe and moost assured friende."

September, 1608. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to the lord Howard of Effingham and others, deputy-lieutenants co. Surrey. Postponing a muster of the forces of the county on account of the continuance and increase of the plague in divers parts of the said county.

12 October, 1608. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the postponement of musters in the said shire till the plague shall, by God's sufferance, have ceased or abated.

16 October, 1608. Letter from lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral, and lieutenant of co. Surrey. For the postponement of the musters of the county, till the plague shall have abated in the county.

16 October, 1608. Letter from Robert earl of Salisbury to Sir George More, knt., one of the chamberlains of the Exchequer, Sir Henry Fanshaw, knt., remembrancer of the same court, Richard Sutton and Francis Goston, esqs. auditors of the imposts, and Edward Forsall, esq. Appointing the said gentlemen commissioners to enquire into the state of the "office of the workes and "buildings in and about his majesties ordinarie houses
"of accesse and others," and into the modes employed there for fixing the rates and prices of labour and material which have of late years increased in a manner to provoke suspicion and necessitate enquiry.

28 December, 1608. Letter (domestic) from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law Sir George More, knt., at Loseley.

17 March, 6 James I. Charter of exemplification (with the great seal attached thereto), with confirmation, of certain letters of dispensation granted by the archbishop of Canterbury to Sir George More of St. Martins in the Fields, co. Middlesex, knight, according him license to eat flesh on fish-days, together with his wife and four guests, provided he pay annually *xiii*s.* ii*ii*d. into the poor-box of the parish in which he resides. "Permittimus et indulgemus tibi," runs the dispensation, "vt
"yna cum domina vxore tua et quatuor quibusvis aliis
"arbitrio tuo eligendis et ad mensam tuam invitandis
"carnibus cum debita gratiarum actione quibusvis die
"et tempore publice vetitis vesci possis." The letters of dispensation, dated 13 March 1608, are attached to the charter of exemplification.*

1 April, 7 James I. Charter of licence to Sir George More, knight, to alienate the manor of Catteshille and Pickardes, with messuages and lands, &c. in Catteshille, Pickardes, Godalmyng and the parish of St. Nicholas of Guildford co. Surrey, and to convey the same to Sir William Browne and Sir Francis Annger, knights.

21 April, 1609. Letter from Lord Chancellor Ellesmere to Sir George More, knight, at Loseley. Condoling with Sir George on a recent affliction. Imperfect.

20 May, 7 James I. Special pardon, under the great seal, to Sir Robert More, knight, for alienating without licence his mansion and lands in Cattishille, in the parish of Godalmyng co. Surrey, by a certain indenture dated 10 November, in the king's first year, to Sir Thomas Grimes, knt., Henry Weston, esq., and George Duncumbe, gentleman.

31 July, 1609. Letter from the earl of Salisbury and Sir Julius Caesar to Sirs Henry Browne and George Nore, knts. Touching an assignment of cxv loads of timber and *xxviii*s.* viii*d. for repairing the rails of Henley Park; which repairs Sir George More is especially requested to oversee.

22 September, 1609. Letter of affectionate enquiry from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to Sir George Moore, knight. Expressing the writer's concern at Sir George's illness. "If I had sooner heard," writes the chancellor, "of your sickness, I would have sooner sent and have "visited you."

10 October, 1609. Receipt of Elizabeth lady Lumley for 450*l.* paid to her by Sir George Moore, knt., in completion of payment of the 1800*l.*, which Sir George, by an indenture dated 20 Feb. 1607, agreed to pay to John late lord Lumley for timber in the Great Park of Stanstead.

28 November, 1609. Letter from Sir George More, knt., to the earl of Salisbury, Lord-treasurer of England. Soliciting in the writer's growing years some substantial reward for his past services to his sovereign and country.

1609. Copy of case for counsel's opinion. Whether, under the circumstances set forth, the rectory of Thorpe, co. Surrey, which descended to Sir Francis Wolley, as heir-at-law of his mother the lady Egerton, who died 19 Jan., 42 Eliz., was conveyed by a certain passage in the said Sir Francis Wolley's will, made in the year of our Lord 1609. No date to the writing.

29 March, 1610. Letter from Sir Julius Caesar to Sir George More, knight. Touching a grant of a small piece of ground in the Castle Garden of Guildford to

W. M.
MOLYNEUX.
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

Mr. John Murray's servant, Carter, and a petition for compensation from the present tenant of the same land.
10 December, 8 James I. Commission, with the seal of Henry Prince of Wales, &c. &c. attached to it. Appointing Sir George Moore to be said Prince's treasurer and receiver-general. Dated at the Prince's palace of St. James.

31 December, 1610. The Duplicament of the accompte of Henrye Lee, esq., son and heir and executor of Sir Henry Lee, knt., deceased, late master of the armory, from 1 January 1601 to 31 December 1610.

7 February, 1611. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Pauls) to some person, whose name does not appear, about the state of religion and religious parties in France. Written at the time when Mr. Donne was in attendance on Sir Robert Drury, attached to lord Hay's embassy at Paris. Dated from Amiens.

10 March, 1611. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord High Admiral, lieutenant co. Surrey. To aid Lord Willoughby in raising volunteers in the said co. for the service of the King of Denmark.

24 March, 1611. Warrant, signed by Sir Richard Connock, to Sir George More, receiver-general of Henry Prince of Wales, for the payment of xlii s., a quarter's portion of an annual salary of xlii s., to John Bull, Mus. Doc., one of the musicians of the Prince of Wales. --Also, a bundle of fifty similar orders for payments to various officers of the Prince's household, addressed to Sir George More in the years 1611 and 1612.

22 April, 9 James I. Warrant, under the King's sign-manual and the seal of the order of the Garter, to the Prince of Wales; to act as the king's lieutenant and representative at the celebration of the said order on the 22, 23, and 24 of the instant month.

24 June, 1611. List, preceded by the sign-manual of Henry Prince of Wales, of seven articles of regulations, "For the better assurance of the Princes treasure." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

31 October, 9 James I. Copy of a letter from the king to the earl of Nottingham, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Requiring from the earl a return of persons, dwelling within the said county and competent to advance his majesty money by way of loan on privy seals.

9 November, 1611. Receipt of Thomas Gwillim and Daniell Chatburne, assigns of Sir David Foulis, knt., cofferer of the Prince's house, for 490*li*. paid them by Sir George More, knt., towards defraying the expenses of the said household.

—November 1611. Copy of a letter addressed by gentlemen of Surrey (who had been invited to make out a list of inhabitants of the co. able to advance money on privy seals for the king's service) to the Lord Lieutenant of the county. Representing the barrenness and extreme impoverishment of the shire, so great a portion of which is given up to forests and chaces and parks.

1611. Paper in the hand-writing of Sir George More, knt., the Prince of Wales's receiver-general, headed "Observacions concerning the duties of the Treasurer and Receauer-Generall to the Prince his Highnes."

10 January, 1612. Letter from Lords of the Council to the High Sheriff, Deputy-lieutenants, and Justices of the Peace for co. Surrey. Directing them to disarm the recusants of the said shire, leaving them only such arms as are necessary for the protection of their houses. Dated from Whitehall.

6 May, 1612. Letter from the earl of Lyncoln to Sir George More, knt., Begging Sir George to set the writer fairly in the regard of the lord chancellor, to whom he has been misrepresented by a solicitor.

30 May, 1612. Letter from Sir George More to Sir Richard Connock. Beginning "I haue sent by this bearer William Samford three hundred poundes left by his highnes cofferer in my handes." The writer goes on to say, "I dowbt not but you cary in mynde the hundred poundes, which vpon youre letter I deuoyered to Mr. Bartlet."

5 April, 1612. Letter from Thomas Spantons to Sir George More, knt. Thanking Sir George for his civilities to the writer, who is ready to receive Mr. More at Utrecht, and reports that "Vortius that arch-heretick" continueth still at Leyden, where he is forbidden to "read or teach vpon payne of death." Dated from Utrecht.

June, 1612. Letter from Sir Thomas Chaloner to Sir George More. About the passing of the fine for Kenelworth, which Henry Prince of Wales bought of Sir Robert Dudley. Also touching the urgent pecuniary embarrassments of Wyate, Yates, and Sir R. Dudley.

5 November, 1612. Letter from Richard Connock to Sir George More, knt. Touching the money disbursed by Sir George "vpon his Highnes Comaundment for the "Northwest passage;" and announcing arrangements for the repayment of one hundred poundes of "the summe" whiche you have set downe for the Princes whole "adventure."

8 December, 1612. Letter from Sir George More, knt., to James the First. Expressing the writer's poignant mortification and sense of unworthiness in consequence of the failures of his two several suits at different times for the office of the Wardes, and hinting at his purpose to hide his shame in retirement. At the same time the writer avows his devotion to his sovereign and his profound admiration for his wisdom and virtues.

29 May, 11 James. Patent of a grant under the great seal of Sir Thomas Hendley, knight, and his heirs and assigns, for ever, of one-half of the manor of Cokefield alias, &c., co. Sussex, and of one-half of the park of Cokefield aforesaid, and of one-half of the park of Bentleigh co. Sussex, and of one-half of a water-mill in Cokefield, and of one-half of the manor of Haldeleigh alias Higheleighe co. Sussex, &c. &c.; one of the considerations for the said grant being the payment of 58*l*. 6*s*. 11*d*. into the exchequer, by the king's beloved subjects, Sirs Thomas Hendley, John Shurley, and Walter Covert, knights.

13 July, 1613. Report made by Sir George More, knt., and Sir Edmond Bowyer, knt., to his majesty the king, respecting the Lambeth glass-works, "the "Glasehowse lately erected at Lambheath."

13 July, 1613. Copy of the record of the action of the Privy Council on the case arising out of the conduct of Sir Gervase Helwisse, knt., lieutenant of the Tower, who, on the arrest some six days before the above-given date of Dr. Palmer, D.D. and minister of the Tower, forthwith took and imprisoned "by way of Withernam the "bodies of diuers cittizens of good accounte as they "passed over the Tower Hill, with a resolution to detain them vntill the said Doctor Palmer were freed "and set at bail, refusing to accept any bayl for their "enlargement."

22 February, 1614. Letter from Lords of the Council to Lord Howard of Effingham, and to Sir George More, Sir Edward Howard, Sir Edmund Bowyer and Sir Francis Vincent, knts., deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the co-operation of persons of ability within the said shire in a project of a Lottery, set forth to bring success to "the English colonie plantid in Virginia." Books for the orderly registririon of sums adventured in the lottery are sent to the said deputy-lieutenants who are enjoined to return them in due course to the Treasurer and Council of Virginia.

21 April, 12 James I. Writ, under the King's sign-manual and the seal of the Order of the Garter, proroguing the celebration of the said order to the 27th, 28th, and 29th days of April, in consideration that "the day of "Saint George happeneth this yeare to be the day "before the Feast of Easter, whiche we holde to be a "tyme not fit for the celebratinge of the sayd order."

4 July, 1614. Letter from Lords of the Council to the sheriff and magistrates of co. Surrey. Inviting them to send gifts of money or plate, for the king's use, to his majesty's jewel-house at Whitehall.

28 July, 1614. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to his brother-in-law, Sir Robert More, knt., at Lothesley. Humorous gossip. Dated from the writer's "poore hospitall."

20 August, 1614. Letter from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to his brother-in-law, Sir Robert More, knt. From London, where he is "condemned" to remain "all thys sommer;" the writers sends affectionate greeting to his wife's kindred at Loseley. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

27 August, 1614. Letter from Lord Chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt. Asking for news of Sir George's health and doings.

6 September, 1614. Letter from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt. Expressing the writer's desire for the good event of some appeal made by Sir George to the favour of his Majesty, who has been informed how highly the writer thinks of Sir George's qualities.

11 September, 1614. Letter from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to Sir George More, knt., at Loseley. Announcing the severe illness of the Master of the Rolls "who hath bene dangerously syck these 10 or 11 dayes "and now lyes at the mercy of God, past hope of "human helpe." The chancellor adds, "you know the "reuertioner and what this accident maye * ys vncertain, for one cannot holde too many places."

30 September, 1614. Letter from lord chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
ESQ.

Excusing himself from an appointment, as he is summoned to the king at Whitehall, on the morrow. Imperfect.

16 October, 1614. Letter from Sir George More, knt., to George Austen, gent. Announcing that the writer has spoken a timely word to the lord chancellor touching Mr. Austen's cause in the court of Chancery, and requesting Mr. Austen to pay certain money to the writer's servant, Edward Wybert.—Also, at the foot of the letter, Edward Wybert's receipt for 80*l.* paid to him by Mr. Austen, as a contribution to the fund then being raised in Surrey for the king's use.

3 December, 1614. Letter (written on the writer's return from Newmarket) from Mr. John Donne (afterwards Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's) to some person whose name does not appear. Touching the writer's suit for preferment at Court, and the feud between the Lord Chamberlain and the archbishop of Canterbury.

9 January, 1615. Warrant, signed by the Lord-chancellor Ellesmere, Chief Justice Coke, and Sir Ralph Winwood, to Sir George More, knt., lieutenant of the Tower; to bring "in a coatche safely" the person of "Sir William Mounstoun, knight, nowe a prisoner in the tower," by 2 p.m. on the morrow, to "the house of the chefe Justice of England in Holbourne," in order that the said prisoner may be examined.

13 January, 1615. Warrant, dated at York House and signed by lord chancellor Ellesmere and Ralph Winwood, to Sir George Moore, knt., lieutenant of the Tower; to apprehend Sir William Monson, knight, and "keep him cloase prisonnier."

24 January, 1615. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere canc., Lenox, and Edw. Coke) to Sir George More, knight, lieutenant of the Tower; to permit Sir Robert Carr to have access to the earl of Sommersett, in order that they may confer on the earl's "domesticall affayers only" and for noe other cause; "in the presence and hearing of the said lieutenant of the Tower."

24 January, 1615. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, canc., Lenox, Edw. Coke) to the Lieutenant of the Tower, to allow Dr. Montford and Dr. Campian, physicians, to have access to Sir Thomas Munson, knt., a prisoner in the Tower, to confer with the said Sir Thomas on matters relating to his health, in the presence of the said lieutenant.

24 January, 1615. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere canc., Lenox, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower of London, to allow Lady Munson to continue to have access to her husband Sir Thomas Munson, a prisoner in the said Tower, at convenient times, in the said lieutenant's absence.

—January, 1615. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, cenc., Lenox, and Edw. Coke) to the Lieutenant of the Tower. To allow the bishop of Elie to have access to Sir Thomas Munson, prisoner in the Tower, to confer with Sir Thomas on matters touching his conscience, in the said lieutenant's absence. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.') —January, 1615. Warrant, signed by lord chancellor Ellesmere, chief-justice Coke, and Sir Raphe Winwood, and addressed to the Lieutenant of the Tower. To allow Sir William Munson, knt., prisoner in the Tower, to write to his wife, for the arrangement of his affairs.

17 February, 1615. Single sheet headed "Papers taken by Mr. Lieutenant of the Tower in the presence of Sir Henry Fanshawe, Mr. Osborne, Mr. Woodward, Walter James and John Packer, out of the flatt red box, upon my Lord Chief Justice his warrant." The inventory mentions only two papers,—1, A letter (28 Nov. 1613) from Sir Henry Wotton to the earl of Somerset; 2, Copy of a letter (25 Nov. 1613) from the same earl to Sir Thomas Edmonds. On the same sheet, the chief justice's receipt (17 Feb. 1615) for the said documents, on their delivery to him.

19 March, 1615. Warrant (under the sign-manual and signet of James the First) to Sir George More, the lieutenant of the Tower of London. To permit Sir Walter Raleigh, knt., a prisoner in the Tower, to go abroad, under charge of a keeper, either in London or elsewhere, to the end that he may the better provide himself with shipping and provisions for the voyage which the king has, at his humble suit, given him permission to undertake at his own costs and charges. Dated at Whitehall. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

24 March, 1615. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, cenc., Lenox, Edw. Coke) to the Lieutenant of the Tower of London. To dismiss from custody William Darwin, the personal servant of Sir Thomas Munson, knt., a prisoner in the Tower, in order that the said William Darwin may look after some of his said master's private affairs; and to admit into the Tower Edward Brown to attend on the said Sir Thomas vice the said William Darwin.

20 July, 1615. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to his son lord Howard of Effingham, Sir George More, knight, and the other deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Requesting that due provision may be at once made for a proper allowance to Sir Jeremy Turner, as muster-master for the said county.

26 October, 1615. Memorandum (signed Antony Montague) that the viscount Montague has granted in farm the priory of Newark and all his grounds there, late in the tenure of the countess of Dorset, to Sir George More, knight.

2 November, 1615. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, cenc., Lenox, E. Zouche, Edw. Coke) to the Lieutenant of the Tower; to receive into the Tower, and there retain as a close prisoner the earl of Sommersett, admitting at the same time to attend upon the said earl his servants Francis Copinger and Andrew Fargeson, who are "to be shutt vp close with him, without other libertie then in like cases is accustomed." The warrant further directs the said lieutenant of the Tower "to appoint some person of qualitie and trust to take charge of the said earle and to attend his person, for the better execution of such directions as shalbe geuen for his safe keepinge."

13 December, 1615. Warrant, signed by lord-chancellor Ellesmere and others, to Sir George More, lieutenant of the Tower; to keep Andrew Fargus a close prisoner till further notice; it being found necessary to remove the said Andrew Fargus from the earle of Somersett.

13 December, 1615. Warrant (signed J. Ellesmere, cenc., Lenox, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower; to permit Sir James Carr, knt., to have access to his brother the earl of Somersett, a prisoner in the said Tower, for the purpose of conferring with the said earl about "his domesticall affaires and for noe other cause" in the presence of the said lieutenant.

29 November, 1615. An Inventory of the goodes and evidences of the Earle of Somersett at his lodgings at Whitehall shewed vnto vs by Mr. Walter James, servant to the said Earle, and taken in his presence by vertue of a letter directed vnto vs, Sir Henry Fanshawe, knight, and John Osborne, esq., from the Lord Treasurer of England, dated the xxixth of November 1615, and begun to be taken the same day. Covering 26 pages of closely written foolscap paper, the entries in this long inventory show conclusively that the several ensuing schedules, made in the year 1616, of gilt and white plate and jewels, used at the Blackfriars or the Tower by "my lord" and "lady," &c. are lists of goods that pertained to the earl and countess of Somersett. For instance, this inventory contains "a note of such plate as was delivered to Mr. Williams, goldsmyth, the 19th of Sept. 1615 too bee pawned for 500*l.*, to be made into plate for the earle's vse," which is identical as to its items with the bill in the Tower inventory (dated 1616) headed "A note of the plate delivered to Mr. John Williams, gold-smyth, the 12 Sept. 1613 to pawne for mony to make great plate for the Christning." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

—December, 1615. Warrant, signed by lord-chancellor Ellesmere, to Sir George Moore, the lieutenant of the Tower, to "suffer Benjamin Orwell to attend the E. of Sommerset in his chamber."

30 January, 14 James I. Writ under the privy seal addressed to Sir George More, knight, lieutenant of the Tower of London. Directing him forthwith to liberate Sir Walter Raleigh from the said Tower, and to set him at large; the sovereign out of his "princely compassion" being graciously pleased that the said Sir Walter Raleigh shalbe noo longer continued prisoner in our said Tower, but forthwith be fully enlarged and delivered out of the same, in hope he maie and will prove serviceable to us and our state." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

24 February, 1616. Copy of the humble address and petition of Sir George More, knt., in which the writer prays to be relieved of the "restles place" of lieutenant of the Tower, and begs that he may receive some less burdensome office suited to his failing powers and growing years.

19 March, 1616. Sir George More's receipts for 110*l.* in part payment of a Privy Seal order for payment of 55*l.* 10*s.*, for the diet and charges of prisoners under his custody in the Tower from 25 Dec. 1616 to 3 March following; on which day Sir George resigned the office of lieutenant of the Tower.

12 March, 1616. Memorandum of the circumstances under which a box of writings (the said box being sealed

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
ESQ.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

with the seals of the late lord-chancellor Ellesmere, who committed the same to the keeping of his brother-in-law, Sir George More, knt.) was opened on the aforesaid day in the presence of John viscount Brackley, Sir Thomas Leigh, knt., Francis More, serjeant-at-law, Sir George More, knt., and his son William.—Also, a memorandum of the circumstances under which, on the following day (20 March, 1616), another box of writings, committed by the late Lord Ellesmere to the keeping of his brother-in-law, Sir George More, was opened in the presence of witnesses.

27 March, 1616. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, canc., Lenox, E. Zouche, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower; to repair to the place of the countess of Somerset's restraint in the Blackfriars, and there receive the person of the said countess of Sir William Smyth, and to hold her a prisoner in the Tower, "admittinge such persons to attend her as are now with her at the Blackfriars, to be shut up close with her as is usual in such cases." Dated from Whitehall. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

6 April, 1616. Warrant (signed, Raphe Winwood) to Sir George More, knt., lieutenant of the Tower; to permit the lord Yester to have an interview with the earl of Somerset, a prisoner in the said tower, in the presence of the said lieutenant.

22 April, 1616. Receipt of Sir George More, knt., lieutenant of the Tower, for 80*l.* paid him by Sir Thomas Mounson, knt., bart. (by the hands of Richard Tomsonn, warder of the Tower and the said Sir Thomas's keeper; for his diet.—Also, on same sheet, dated 28 May 1616. Sir George More's receipt for 20*l.* paid by Sir Thomas Mounson, knt., bart. for five weeks' diet in the Tower.—Also, on the same sheet, Sir George More's receipt, dated 28 June, 1616, for 16*l.* paid him by Sir Thomas Mounson, knt., bart., for four weeks' diet at the said lieutenant's table in the Tower.

April, 1616. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, canc., Lenox, E. Zouche, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower; to allow the cook and bottleman of the countess of Somerset, a prisoner in the Tower, to attend on her, even as the cook and bottleman of the Earl of Somestett attend on him in the Tower. Dated from Whitehall. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

7 May, 1616. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, canc., E. Zouche, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower: "To make choice of som discreet and sufficient person . . . to reade prayers and preache vnto" the countess of Somerset in the Tower, in the presence of the lieutenant thereof; and also to allow the said countess to walk in the garden adjoining her lodging at fit and convenient times, in the said lieutenant's presence. Dated from Whitehall. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

11 May, 1616. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, canc., E. Zouche, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower; to allow Sir Thomas Mounson, knt., a prisoner in the Tower, to have writing materials wherewith to express his desires to the signers of the warrant. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

— May, 1616. Warrant (signed Raphe Winwood, Edw. Coke) to the lieutenant of the Tower; to make choice of a discreet and sufficient person to read prayers and preach to Sir William Munson, in the said lieutenant's presence and hearing.

18 June, 1616. Warrant (signed Raphe Winwood) to the Lieutenant of the Tower; to relax somewhat the restraint on Sir Thomas Monson, prisoner in the Tower, and to allow him to have conference in the said lieutenant's presence with persons who may repair to him.—Further warrant on the same sheet (dated 12 July, 1616, and signed J. Ellesmere, canc., and Fr. Bacon) to the same lieutenant; to allow Sir Thomas Monson, knt., "to wauke in any open place within the tower," the said lieutenant having on the authority of the previous warrant only allowed the said prisoner "to wauke vpon the wall and within the garden." (Vide Kemp's 'Loseley MSS.')

18 June, 1616. Warrant (signed, George Villiers) to Sir George More, lieutenant of the Tower; to allow the Lady Knollys to have interviews with her sister the countess of Somerset in the presence of his wife or his son's wife, whenever he is unable or indisposed to be himself present at the interviews of the two sisters. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

July, 1616. Letter from viscount Fenton to Sir George More, knt., lieutenant of the Tower. Intimating the King's pleasure that the lord Burley may have an interview with the earl of Somerset in the Tower, in Sir George's presence and hearing.

9 August, 1616. Memorandum of the number and rental of "the acres in the Haberdashers proportion of "the landes fallen to them by lott in the province of "Ulster in Irelande." In the handwriting of Adrian More. Endorsed by Sir George More, knt.

25 August, 1616. Letter from George Villiers to Sir George More, knt., lieutenant of the Tower. Intimating his Majesty's wish to exhibit a large measure of consideration for the earl and countess of Somerset, prisoners in the Tower, and his Highness's permission that they should occupy conveniently near lodgings in the said prison: but stating that his majesty cannot consent to their wish to occupy the same lodging, without first having Sir George's advice on the point. Nor can his majesty grant them all the freedom they desire in seeing their friends, without further explanation and counsel. Dated from Woodstock. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

6 September, 1616. Certificate (with more than forty signatures of residents in the vicinity appended to it) that the water, dividing the cos. Surrey and Sussex at a place called Carpenters Heathe, in the lordship and hundred of Godalmyng, was turned from its ancient course some ten years since by John Misselbroke, and has from that time been kept out of its proper course by Richarde Boxell of Tenchmore co. Sussex.

12 September, 1616. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, canc. and Fran. Bacon) to the Lieutenant of the Tower of London; to allow Sir Thomas Mounson, knt., prisoner in the Tower, to attend the divine services in the church there, and to repair to the said lieutenant's "table for" his dyett with such libertie as is vsuall for others in "the like case." (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

12 November, 1616. Letter from Antony viscount Mountague to Sir George Moore. Giving thanks for Sir George's assistance in certain private matters.

24 November, 1616. Letter from Mr. John Gib to Sir George More, knt. Touching the sale of certain lands, in which Mr. Gib wishes to invest at least 3,000*l.* Dated from Edinburgh.

20 November, 1616. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir George More, knt. Touching the offences and punishments of two persons, Betsworth and Greene, who have been found guilty of hunting the writer's game. Dated from Coudry.

1616. Four undated letters (holograph) from James the First to Sir George More, knt., lieutenant of the Tower. Touching the great charges against the earl of Somerset, and instructing Sir George how to deal with the prisoner. (1.) Repeating the substance of a letter, sent yester-night to Sir George by Lord Haye, the king maintains that, without exposing his honour to suspicion, he cannot hear a private message from the earl before his trial or confession. Endorsed by Sir George More, "9th May about one of the clocke in th' after-noon, 1616." (2.) Bidding Sir George (who knows how the writer has endeavoured to bring the earl to confess his guilt) to observe the strictest secrecy in respect to the mission of "an honeste gentleman" now sent to the prisoner for the same end. Endorsed by Sir George More "13th May, 1616." (3.) Urging Sir George to make another attempt to bring the prisoner to a confession. "Ye shall thairefore," the king writes, "giue him assurance in my name, that if he will yett before his tryall confesse clearlie unto the commisioners his guiltinesse of this fact, I will not onlie performe quhat I promeased by my last messenger both towardis him and his wyfe, but I will enlarge it." (4.) Touching the earl of Somerset's "strainge fitte," which Sir George has doubtless reported to the chancellor, who may "adiorne the daye till Mondaye nexte," should the prisoner appear sick or distracted, during which time of adjournment it will be seen if the sickness or madness be eal or counterfeit. If the prisoner shall say anything of moment to lord Haye (who has been, or soon will be with Sir George) the king would hear it quickly, but, should it be otherwise, the king would not be troubled about it till the trial be over.—Also, an unsigned paper, setting forth the circumstances under which James the First sent these four letters to the writer's father-in-law, Sir George More. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

1616. Inventories (made apparently in the Tower of London) of articles of plate, gilt or white, and jewels, covering eleven pages. (1.) "A Note of such of my lord's plate as is in my custody," taking account of 2,185 oz. of gilt plate, and some 7,600 oz. of white plate. (2.) "A note of White Plate received from the Blackfriars vpon my ladies remove the 27 March, 1616," (i.e. the day on which the countess of Somerset was removed from the Blackfriars to the Tower, vide Warrant of that date). (3.) Inventory, headed "A Note of the Jewells in my custody," taking account of "The earle's coronet" and "a Garter and George my lord

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

"hath at Tower," with other articles described so as to indicate that they pertained to the earl of Somerset. (4.) "A Note of the Plate delivered to Mr. John Williams goldsmith the 19 Sept. 1615 to pawne for money to make great plate for the Christening." (5.) List of White plate at the Tower for my Lord's Use. (6.) List of White Plate at Tower for my lady's vse. (7.) Note of the plate my lady had to the Blackfriars. (8.) List of Guilt Plate carried to the Blackfriars.—Also another separate Inventory headed a "Note of Plate at Pawne"; being an account of articles of gilt or white plate, which had probably fallen to the Lieutenant of the Tower, as a perquisite of his office.—Also another separate inventory, headed "A note of such plate as is wanting belonging to my lady." N.B.—The foregoing Tower Inventory is described on one of the outer sheets thus, "This list of Plate was Sir George More when he was lieutenant of the tower in James the firsts reign." That the lists relate to the plate and jewels of the earl and countess of Somerset is obvious on comparing it with the Inventory of 29 Nov. 1615.

29 December. A Memorandum (in the hand-writing of Sir George More, the lieutenant of the Tower) of the terms in which James the First, in a confidential conversation with the said officer, defended the action taken, by the sovereign and his commissioners, towards "the prisoner" in the Tower, accused of the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury. The paper begins, "on friday the 29th December the king his Ma^{ties} sent for the Lieutenant of the Tower and in his Ma^{ties} wth drawing chamber sayed vnto hym 'I wold hane you tell yo' prisoner that I am sory to see that he continues still to take the wrong course to his owne hurt in this busines, as he has don sins the beginning of it. For whereas I haue appointed commissioners to examyne hym and to deale in all matters concerning the case of St. Tho. Overbury, the Duke of Lenox being one, a noble man of myn owne blood, and alwayes a frend well affected to hym, the lord Chauncelor the second, a graue and wise man, a counsellour and great officer well deservng in the place of justice with he holdes, Tho. lord Zouch, the third, an auncient Baron, and a man void of all partialities, and the fowrth, the Lo. Chief Justice by his place, he hath refused by them to make known his desires vnto me: and pretending that by the lord Knollis, and the lord Hay, he wold communicate matter of great importans vnto me concerning my seruice, fit for me to know with speede, and that neither the criminall nor ciuill part of the cause for which he is restrained, nor of anything therevnto belonging, he wold speak vnto them, his speeche neuertheless to them was onely of that cause, and not of any other matter worth the speaking of, Wherein he did needlessly abuse me, offer wrong to those commissioners, and thereby did hurt to hym self.' This paper, which affords noteworthy evidence of the attitude assumed by the king towards the noble prisoner, was published in extenso, in the year 1866, by Mr. James Spedding, M.A., with a letter addressed by him on Sir Thomas Overbury's case to Mr. Knight Watson, M.A., Secretary of Soc. of Antiquaries. (Vide James Spedding's 'Message of James I. to the Earl of Somerset'.)

1616. An Inventory of the goodes brought into the toure by the Earle and Countesse of Somerset, and there remayning and vsed, at the time of their attainder. Comprising the earl's bed-room furniture (a bed of cloth trimmed with silke fringe and lace, hangings, chairs, carpets, stools, a bed for his one servant, &c. &c.), valued at lxxxvli.; silver plate for the earl's use (12 dishes, 1 round trencher salt, 6 slip spoons, 1 porringer and cover, 1 barrel pot, 2 saucers, a deep bason and ewer, 2 wire candlestickes, a warming-pan and handle and a cofer-boxe) weighing 598½ ounces, and valued at clviil. iiis. at vs. iiid. per oz.; the countess's bed-room furniture (bed of crimson velvet with hangings of the same, trimmed with gold fringe and lace, chairs and stools and cushions covered with crimson velvet, carpets, &c. &c.) valued at ccli.; hangings, chairs, stools and cushions of figured satin, valued at ccli.; hangings chairs and stools for other chambers, valued at xxli.; three beds with furniture for her servants, xli.; plate for the countess's use (6 dishes, 6 trencher plates, 2 bell candlestickes, 1 pair of snuffers, 2 "boates," 1 sancer, 10 spoons, 2 "triangle seltes," weighing 308½ oz., valued at lxxxli. xviiiis. The total value of plate and goods being dcliiiil. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS'.)

3 March, 1617. Warrant, under the sign-manual and signet of James the First, to Sir George More, lieutenant of the Tower of London. Discharging Sir George, at his own urgent request from the same office, for his good service in which place he is appointed to receive a sum of 2,400l. from the privy purse; and Authorizing him to deliver the said lieutenantancy of the Tower of London, with all its rights, &c. &c., to Sir Allen Apsley, who has been appointed to succeed him in the same office.

8 May, 16 James I. Writ, under the king's sign-manual and the seal of the Order of the Garter to Sir George More, knt., chancellor of the said order. Dispensing with his attendance on his sovereign's person, so as he fail not from time to time to attend at the celebrations of the feasts of the said Noble Order, and whenever else he shall receive special warning to wait on his majesty.

28 May, 1617. Letter from Sir George More to John Bingley, esq. Requesting that James Colwell, apothecary, may be paid xlii. xixs. viid., due to him for medicines delivered to sick prisoners in the Tower.—Also James Colwell's receipt (dated 4 June, 1617) for the same amount.

13 June, 1617. Letter from Antony viscount Mountague to Sir George More, knt. Declaring the writer's affection for "this poore childe of mine" who has found a letter which she remembers to be from one of the daughters of the writer's uncle Sir Henry Browne; which, together with another letter from the poor child's sisters at Lisbone, is herewith sent to the archbishop of Canterbury.

15 August, 1617. Latin epitaph on Anna the wife of Dr. John Donne, who died in her 34th year at the afore-given date.

5 September, 1617. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir George More, knt. Touching the lord Winchester's complaint of "a die-house at St. Marie-Oueries from whence great annoyance cometh to Winchester House," the said die-house being on a property, the title to which is an affair of contest between the writer and Sir Francis Englefelde.

15 March, 1618. Letter, dated at Jaccatra in Java Maior, from Sir Thomas Dale to Sir William Tockemerton. Giving an account of Sir Thomas's capture of a Portuguese galleon, and seizure of treasure from the Portuguese admiral's carricke, and other adventures of the writer's successful voyage.

22 December, 1618. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to Sir George More, knt. Asking where the writer shall send a deer to Sir George. Dated from Cowdery.

8 June, 1619. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, dated from Haling. Announcing his desire to be excused from attending the meeting of the Order of the Garter, appointed for Thursday next; because he is suffering from "a cold."

6 May, 1619. Letter from William earl of Derby to Sir George More, knt. Begging that the writer may be excused, in respect for his severe illness, from attending on the 25th inst. at the feast of the Celebration of St. George. Dated at Lathom.

July, 1619. Case for counsel's opinion:—Whether the contract between William Owtrd, clk., (to whom Sir George More, 18 Jan. 7 James I., granted the next presentation to the Church of Compton, co. Surrey) with John Tichborne, clerk, was so clearly simoniacal that the ordinary was bound to admit to the said living the king's clerk to the prejudice of the said John Tichborne who, by the same agreement, had designed to obtain the preferment for himself.—Also, counsel's opinion that the contract was simoniacal and void, because John Tichborne (albeit in the life of the previous incumbent of Compton) had paid money to William Owtrd clk., who had the right of presentation for the next term in order to procure to himself the next presentation.

2 July, 1619. Depositions of the witnesses on the behalf of John Meale, clerk, vpon the interrogatoryes by him ministred concerning the Parsonage of Compton, co. Surrey. In respect to the allegation of one Mr. Owtrd of Albury, clerk, that the next advowson of the living has been granted to him by Sir George Moore, knt., the patron thereof.

16 August, 1619. A Proposition made by the Estates of Bohemia in thire assembly at Prague vpon the election of a kinge, the 15th of August 1619, being the birth-day of y^e Prince Elector Palatine.

11 October, 1619. Letter from Anthony viscount Mountague to the writer's beloved cousin Sir George More, knt. Touching the writer's health and purpose of coming to London.

1619 to 1667. List of the names of all the reves of their landes (i.e. of the lords of Godalmynge, co. Surrey) and of the yeares each of them served Reve, from 1619 to 1667, inclusive.

W. M.
OLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

22 April, 16 James I. Licence, under the sign-manual of James the First and the seal of the Order of the Garter, to the earl of Sussex, knight and companion of the said order. Excusing the said earl, in consideration of his sickness, from attendance at the celebration of the said Order, on the 22nd, 23rd, and 24th inst.

26 April, 16 James I. Commission, under the sign-manual of James the First, to Charles earl of Nottingham, Edward earl of Worcester, Henry earl of Southampton, Thomas earl of Arondell, Philipp earl of Montgomery and Robert viscount Lisle, knights of the Noble Order of the Garter. Directing them to review the ancient statutes and articles of the said order, and requiring them to make suggestions in writing for the amendment thereof either by explanation or addition. Dated at Westminster.

8 February, 17 James I. Mandate under the sign-manual of James the First and the seal of the Order of the Garter, for the prorogation of the celebration of the said order to the 26, 27, and 28 of April; the day of St. George falling on the Sunday next after Easter day, "vpon which day the celebration of the said order by the Statutes thereof may not be performed."

28 February, 17 James I. Charter of exemplification under the sign-manual ("ad requisitionem Illustrissimi Cosini Medices moderni magni Ducis Hetruriæ ex nobilissima familia prædicti Juliani Medices oriundi nobis satis significatam") of the registration in the Liber Niger of the election, into the order of St. George, of Julian Medices formerly German brother of pope Leo the Tenth, which election was made at Greenwich, co. Kent, 23 April 1514, and also of the registration in the same book of the death of the said Julian Medices, which occurred in the eighth year of Henry the Eighth.

29 June, 1620. Case for the opinion of counsel. The furniture, plate, and household stuff, which a prisoner brings into the Tower for use in his lodgings, are forfeited to the Lieutenant of the Tower, as soon as the said prisoner is attainted of treason or felony:—Do such chattels pertain to the Lieutenant in office at the time of the attainr or to his successor in the lieutenantancy, if the former shall have neglected to seize the said goods and shall have retired from office, without seizing them?—Also, on the same paper, Humfray Davenport's opinion that the said goods pertain to the Lieutenant in office at the time of the attainr, and that his neglect to seize does not transfer his right in them to his successor in the lieutenantancy.

18 October, 1620. Receipt of Abraham Williams, ambassador extraordinary and agent of the king of Bohemia, for 1,126l. 11s. 8d., "being moneys contributed by way of loane by the knights gentlemen and others of the County of Surrey, to and for the use of the king and queen of Bohemia."—Also, on the same sheet, the same agent's receipt for a further sum of 40l., paid to him for the same service by Sir George More, knt. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

4 December, 1620. Letter from Thomas Wentworth to Mr. Lawson, dated from Wentworth Woodhus. Thanking Mr. Lawson for his support in a pending election, and inviting him to come with the writer's supporters, and dine with the writer at Tadcaster on the day after the election, which is fixed for Christmas day.

1620. Certificate of the Common Council of the town and port of Sandwich. Assuring the House of Commons of the falsehood of the allegations against Edward Keek, the town-clerk of Sandwich, who behaved himself soberly, and not as reported, at a recent election.

31 January, 1621. Letter from Sir George More, knt., to the bishop of Lyncolne, lord-keeper of the Great Seal. Expressing the writer's poignant sorrow at his obvious discredit with his sovereign; and begging the Rt. Reverend lord-keeper to intercede with the king in the writer's behalf, to procure for him at least some other employment than that of chancellor of the Order of the Garter, of which place the writer says, "I bought it of Sir John Herbert at a deere rate, hoping by occasion thereof to attend neere the sacred person of his Ma^{tie}. Having held that office more than ten yeres with less gracet than ever any before me hath don (the same, in regard of the attendances required, having vsually bin joynted to some extraordinary place of honor) I find the best of my purchase to be noe better than a testimony of my vnworthines before the eyes of the world."—Also, on the same letter (returned to the writer by the Lord Keeper, after he had read it) a kindly note from the bishop of Lincoln (signed, Jo. Lincoln C.S.) expressing deep regret at the complete failure of his strenuous appeal to the sovereign in behalf of the petitioner. "I prest then," says the bishop, "vpon the only doore which openeth (as I think) to preferment,

"with as good an expression as I could of your deserts and my affections to see them requited. I found it close and unwilling to open. I loue you soe well, as I dare not hide the truthe from you."

28 June, 1621. Certificate as to certain knights, viz. Sirs Thomas Gardiner, Thomas Grimes, William Welsh, and George Trenchard, knts., present at Hanworth on some day in the year 1602: the same evidence being taken "out of the book of the catalogue of knights remaining in the Office of Arms."

10 April, 1621. Letter (signed, Lenox, T. Edmondes, H. Falkland) to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Inviting the said magistrates to appoint some of their number to confer with the writers, respecting the obligations of the said shire to provide carts for the king's service, with a view to a composition of those obligations and an arrangement of the differences between the sovereign's subjects and his cart-takers.

24 July, 1621. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Commissioners for the subsidie, co. Surrey. Giving instructions for the collection thereof.

1 October, 1621. Letter (signed, Lenox, T. Edmondes, and H. Falkland) addressed to the Deputy-lieutenants and Justices of the Peace, co. Surrey. For returns, in writing, from the constables of the said shire, of the numbers of "cartes charged at euerie of his Ma^{ties} jesties removes in this last whole year ended at Michaelmas 1621;" in order that no miscarriage of justice may attend the legal proceedings against certain of his majesty's carters who have been guilty of abuses "in taking moneys of diuers defaulters vnder pretence of hyring of other cartes to serve in theire places, contrary to the express commaundment which they haue receaved in that behalf."

22 November, 1621. Warrant (signed, J. Ellesmere, cance., Lennox, Edw. Coke) addressed to the lieutenant of the Tower: to permit Thomas Emerson to have access to the earl of Somerset, a prisoner in the Tower, for the purpose of conferring with the said earl about the rents of his lands and other "domesticall affaires," in the presence of the said lieutenant. Dated from Whitehall.

3 December, 1621. Copy of the king's message, dated at Newmarket, to the Parliament.

1621. Sir George Chaworth's account of his Mission to Brussels to condole with Isabella, Infanta of Spain and Archduchess of Austria, on the death of her husband the arch-duke of Austria, and to solicit her Highness for a cessation of arms in the Palatinate, until a treaty of peace for those parts should be effected. Opening with the circumstances attending the writer's appointment for the embassy, this narrative (covering some 120 pages, in a leather binding) sets forth the particulars of the ambassador's expenditure on the enterprise and of his intercourse with the arch-duchess and her servants, and concludes with the circumstances of his creation to be viscount Chaworth of Armagh in the peerage of Ireland, and also the circumstances of his unsuccessful suit for an English peerage. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.' where this narrative is printed in full, occupying seventy pages of the volume.)

1 May, 1622. Letter from the Royal Commissioners for abolishing Purveyance, &c. to Sir George More, knt. Appointing him a sub-commissioner for the same purposes, and requiring his attendance at Whitehall.

15 May, 1622. Letter from Giles Gloster to Sir George Moore, knt., chancellor of the Order of the Garter. Announcing the writer's receipt of a copy of "the first scrutinie ener tooke" by Sir George, "together with a decree made in Chapter touchinge the removing of the hachmentes."

12 August, 1622. Letter from Sir Robert More, knt., to his son Ponings More at Trinitie Colledge, Oxford. Giving the young studente permission to join "the Launcing schoole" and pay for his entrance thereto with the xxs. given him for plate; and further advising him to "learne to ciphre and cast accounts readily, being a matter vsefull and of no great difficulty."

9 October, 1622. Letter from Sir Robert More, knt., to his son Ponings More of Trinitie Colledge, Oxford. Advising the young Oxonian in forming his epistolary style to "study rather to expresse" himself "with good sense clearly and plainly, then to affect and hunt after quaint wordes and phrases."

1 September, 1623. Letter from George Stoughton to Sir Robert More, knt. Announcing that the writer has fixed the 16th inst. for a swainmote court at Bagshott, rather than the 17th, because on the later day "there wil be a course run in Guldeford Parke betweene Sir Thomas Parker and Sir John Gage whiche" the writer assumes Sir Robert will wish to see. Dated from Stoughton.

W. M.
MOLYN
Esq.

W. M.
MOYNEUX,
Esq.

6 January, 1624. Letter from the Royal Commissioners (for commuting to money payments the customary tributes of provisions, &c. due from the landowners of the several counties for the maintenance of the King's household) to Sir William More, knt., and others, magistrates of Surrey. Containing instructions with respect to compositions.

23 April, 1624. Copy in contemporary handwriting of "The king's last speech to the Parliament House."

23 June, 1624. Copy of letter from Lords of the Council to the earl of Nottingham and lord Howard of Effingham, lieutenants of co. Surrey. Requiring the said lieutenants to allow the earls of Oxford, Southampton, and Essex, and the lord Willoughby, appointed colonels for the purpose in hand, to raise volunteers in the said shire, for service under the States General of the United Provinces, now threatened with destruction by the emperor and the "Romishe Catholique League," his majesty the king of England having decided to give the said States permission to raise in his dominions "six thousand voluntarye souldiers for their seruice" and assistance.

31 October, 1624. Letter from Lords of the Council to the earls of Nottingham and Holderness, and Lord Effingham. For the levy of 200 footmen in the county of Surrey.

22 October, James I. Copy of a warrant under the sign-manual of James the First to the lieutenant of Surrey. To levy two hundred soldiers in the said county to serve under "Count Manfeld for the recouery of the Palatinate."

10 November, 1624. Letter from the earl of Holderness to the deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Accompanying a letter from the king and a letter from the Privy Council, directed to the earls of Nottingham and Holderness and the lord Howard, for a levy of 200 men in the said shire.

6 December, 20 James I. Requisition, under the signet and sign-manual of James the First, addressed to Sir George More and Sir Robert More, knights, reversioners of the keepership of the Little Park and other offices about Farnham, after the death of bishop Bilson, under an obligation to resign and confirm upon any nomination made to the same offices by the king. Requiring the said reversioners to resign and confirm, in the interest of the earl of Holdernes, who has obtained in the said offices all rights once pertaining to Charles Mountague and Alexander Nayrne, the said Alexander having obtained the office of chief keeper of the said Little Park on the king's nomination, and Charles Mountague having obtained the other offices from the surviving bishop Mountague.

4 March, 1625. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir George Moore and Sir William Parkhurst, knts. Touching money to be raised in the co. Surrey, on privy seals by way of loan for his majesty's use.

17 November, 16—Copy of a certificate, of the appearance of the body of an illustrious prince after death, signed by T. Mayerne, Henry Atkins, Jo. Hammond, Richard —, John Clifford, and William Bowles, the physicians and surgeons who made the post mortem examination. No year given.

— James I. Poem "Upon y^e nameing of y^e Duke of Buckingham in the remonstrance," beginning—

Excuse me, Elyot, if I here name thee,
The times require it, since few honest bee;
And learned Selden for thy pregnant witt,
To be thus named lett it not seeme vnfit. No date.

— James I. Copy of a letter from Sir George More, knt., to James the First. Begging that the writer may resign his office of Chancellor of the Order of the Garter to some worthier person, who may be entitled by merit to a larger measure of his majesty's favour and confidence. No date.

— James I. Letter from lord-chancellor Ellesmere to his brother-in-law Sir George More, knt. Begging Sir George to send certain writings, of which he has the keeping, to the writer, who wishes to alter them. No date.

— James I. Paper, signed Thomas Alured, and described on the wrapper "Mr. Alured's letter to the Marquisse of Buckingham." Touching the Spanish marriage. No date.—Also, another copy of the same document.

— James I. Copy of a letter from the lord-keeper Egerton to the Earl Marshal. In which the Earl Marshal is strenuously urged to retire from his present course, and to submit himself altogether to the will of his sovereign. No date.

— James I. Paper headed "The case betwene my son and me is this." No date. A memorandum of the writer's disbursements for the benefit of a deceased son.

— James I. Rough copy of a curious letter from Sir George More to the earl of Nottingham, respecting the ancient fee of "a fee deere sommer and winter" pertaining to the writer's office of verderer of Windsor forest in the bailiwick of Surrey, which same office the writer's father and grandfather before him held for eighty years. After certifying how this ancient fee, always paid to his sire and grandsire, has been withheld from him, Sir George states what he conceives to be his legal position in respect to the said perquisite of his office. No date.

— James I. Letter from Mr. William More, in attendance on Henry prince of Wales, to his father Sir George More. Begging for a suitable horse on which the writer, in company with the rest of the prince's attendants, may wait upon his royal Highness to the Paper Millese. No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

30 July —, James I. Letter from Sir Robert More to his father Sir George More, knt. Announcing when the writer, on his dismissal from attendance on lady Dacre, will return home. No year given.

— James I. Curious letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George More, knt., about the Mayor of Guildford's refusal to allow a summer-pole, i.e. May-pole, to be set up. "Sir, Synce the mare of Gylford and Mr. Awsten weer with me ther is come to be Smalpeece and Ri Brikelton who douth afyrme that they never ment to have seet vp the Somer pole in souch sorte as they reported to me, but that the did desier to seet it vp in souch sorte as it hath bene doune in many other plases and is yousealy done that they did desier the mayrs good wyll in it which wold in no wyse grant it, they say that ther was on ther put vp before with the K. Majesties armes and other armes, and that it was pulled doune in contempt. Wych if it be trewe it was a very lewde parte. . . . Therefore, sir, I pray you and the rest wych I did wryt vnto to vnderstand, apon what ground this denyall is of the mayre, and why it shuld not be as well aloued ther as in all other plases. If it had the picture of any Saint I should mislyke it as much as any, but the armes of his Majestie or any other armes of noble men or gentlemen I doe not see but that it is louable." The letter, being a holograph, exhibits a larger number of orthographical irregularities than most of the earl's letters, who usually employed the hand of a secretary. No date. (Vide Kempe's 'Loseley MSS.')

— James I. Letter from the earl of Northumberland to Sir George More. On receiving a dispensation from attending on a celebration of the order of the Garter. Written at Petworth. No date.

— James I. Statement of "Some Differences in this Countie" (i.e. Surrey) "concerninge y^e raysinge of men and money, for military seruices, by reason of the unequall propercioun laid vppon the Devisions," made by those "that haue cause to be more sensible to this burden." No date.

— James I. Warrant, signed by Sir George More, to the High Constables of the Hundred of Blackheath; to give notice to persons in their hundred of an appointment for a muster of the forces of the shire. No date.

— James I. Warrant, signed by Sir George More, to the High Constables of the Hundred of Godalmyng; to give notice to persons in their hundred of an appointment for a muster. No date.—Also a similar undated warrant to the High Constables of the hundred of Godley.

— James I. A certificate from the Justices of the Peace within the countie of Surrey, of the severall hundreds allotted to serve with their cartes for the remoues from sondrie his majesties howses, and howe severally the said hundreds are rated for the service of a generall number of cartes required of that countie for the said remoues. No date.

— James I. Draft of a petition to the Lords of the Privy Council from residents in co. Surrey. Praying that (in consideration of its poverty and many burdensome obligations to the public service and the greatness of the proportion of its lands which, as part of the forest of Windsor, are exempt from many of those services) the co. of Surrey may be excused from carting 1,200 loads of timber from his majesty's forest of Alsenholt, co. Southampton, to the water-side at Ham-hawe; the said county having now and at great inconvenience carried 400 loads of timber for his majesty's use from Asenholt to Ham-hawe.

6 April, 1625. Writ, under the sign-manual and the seal of the order of the Garter, to prorogue the celebra-

W. M.
MOYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

tion of the said order, from 22, 23 and 24 of April, to 16, 17 and 18 of August in the said year, in consideration of the death of the king's "moste deere and moste intirely beloved father," James the First.

6 May, 1 Charles I. to 21 April, 21 Charles II. Borough of Hazelmere.—Ledger of records of Views of Frank-pledge, and Courts Baron in the borough of Hazelmere from May 1, Charles I. to April, 21 Charles II.

18 June, 1625. Copies of the King's speech and the Lord Keeper's speech in Parliament, at the afore-given date.

21 June, 1625. Metrical and satirical letter from Rodomontadoo to some person, whose name and address are obliterated. Dated at Nonsuch.

12 July, 1625. Letter from Dr. Donne, dean of St. Paul's, to Sir Henry Wotton, Provost of Eaton. Soliciting a place on the foundation of Eton for the writer's nephew, Sir Henry More's son.

3 August, 1625. The Lord Keeper's Speech to the parliament assembled at Oxford 3 Aug. 1625.

8 October, 1625. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Lord-lieutenant of co. Surrey. For the disarming of recusants, not only open recusants but those also who are suspected of religious disaffection.

9 November, 1625. Warrant (signed, Edw. Bowyer, Nich. Carew) to the High Constables of the hundred of Godley; to give notice to certain persons in the said hundred that the earls of Nottingham and Holdernes, lieutenants of co. Surrey, have appointed the 28th inst., for a review of the forces of the shire on Fetcham Downe near Letherhed.

1 Charles I. to 24 Charles II. Records of Views of Frank-pledge on the manor of Artington, from 1 Car. I. to 24 Car. II. Vellum roll.

1 Charles I. to 20 April, 29 Charles II. Records of Views of Frank-pledge and Courts Baron on the Manor of Hazelmere from 1 Car. I. to 29 Car. II. Paper-book in vellum wrapper.

23 March, 1626. Letter from the earl of Montgomery to Sir George More, knt. Begging that William Elisander, son of Richard Elisander of Egham, may be excused from the military service into which he "is prest," in consideration that he is the only support of an aged father and lame mother.

1626. "The Heads of the Duke of Buckingham's charge," i.e. of the charges against the Duke.—Also, on the same paper, a copy of the "Message of y^e lower howse to the Lords," urging the committal of the "person of the sayde Duke to safe custodie."

1626. Draft (in Sir George More's handwriting) of a letter addressed by lady More, widow of Sir George's son Sir Robert More, to her uncle Sir Marmaduke Darrell, knt., "cufferer" to the king. Begging Sir Marmaduke to "procure a Master of the Requestes, or some other whom" he "shall thinck more fit, to deliver" her petition to his majesty for a grant of the wardship of her son, who is at the point of his full age. No date.—Sir Robert died 2 Feb. 1625-6.

30 June, 1626. Letter from Lords of the Council to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. Directing them to levy by rate in the said shire a sufficient sum of money, to meet the charges of restoring to Portsmouth the "divers marriners and saylers" who recently "came in a disorderlie manner from Ports- mouth soe farr as Kingstone hithewardest"; and to observe the same course on future similar occasion.

12 July, 1626. Copy of the instructions given by Charles the First to his envoy to the French King respecting his differences and reasons for dissatisfaction with his queen Henrietta-Maria. The paper which takes the form of a personal memoir, begins, "Charles Rex. It is not vnkowne both to the French King and his mother what vnkindnes and distastes haue fallen between my wife and me, which hitherto I haue borne with great patience (as all the world knoweth), ever expecting and hoping an amendment, knowing her to be but young, and perceiving it to be the ill crafty counsell of her servants for advancing of their owne ends, rather than her own inclination." After reciting the fair promises she gave of wifely obedience and loyalty on her first arrival in England, and passing lightly over some of her previous exhibitions of a rebellious and undutiful spirit, the king continues,—"To be short, omitting all other passages, comming only to that which is most recent in memory; I, hauing made a commission to make my wife's joyntur &c., to assigne her those lands she is to live on, and it being brought, to such a ripenes, that it wanted but my consent to the particulars they had chosen: Shee, taking notice that it was now time to make the officers for the revenue, one night when I was a bed put a paper in my hand, telling me it was a list of those she desired to be of her revenue, I took it and said I would read it next morning but withall told her that by agreement in France I had the naming of them, she said, they were both Inglis and French in the note. I replied, that those English I thought fit to serve her, I would confirme, but for the French, it was impossible for them to serve her in that nature; —then she said, all those in that paper had brevettas from her mother and her selfe, and that she could admitt no other; Then I said it was neither in her mother's power, nor hers, to admit anie without my leave, and that if she stood vpon that, whomsoever she recommended should not come in; then she badd me plainly to take my lands to my selfe, for if she had no power to put in whom she would in those places, she would haue neither lands nor house of me, but bad me give her what I thought fit in Pension: I bad her then remember to whom she spake, and told her that she ought not to vse me so, then she fell into a passionate discourse, how she is miserable in hauing no power to place seruants, and that busineses succeeded the wors for her recommendation, which when I offred to answer, she would not so much as heare mee: Then she went on saying, she was not of that base quallety to be vsed so ill, then I made both heare me and end that discourse. That hauing had so long patience, with the disturbance of that that should be one of my greatest contentments, I can no longer suffer those that I know to be the cause and fermenters of these humours, to be about my wife any longer, which I must doe if it were but for one action they made my wife doe, which is, to make her goe to Tiburn in devotion to pray, which action can haue no greater inveciue mad against it then the relation." At the foot of this unsigned writing appear, in the handwriting of the document, these words "His Majesty's Instructions given mee at Wansteade the 12th of July; 1626: signed: 24:"

26 July, 1626. Copy of a letter, signed by Lords of the Council. About the levying of subsidies.

26 September, 1626. Copy of a letter from Lords of the Council to the Justices of the Peace of co. Surrey. For the correction of disorders occasioned by "sundry lewd and dissolute persons, wandering vp and downe that county."

22 December, 1626. The earl of Marlborough's warrant to his majesty's auditor and receiver co. Surrey, for the prompt payment of a pension of 106*l.* per ann., with arrears, to William Moore, esq.—Also, Henry Sandford's reply that should he obey the warrant he would not have a sufficient residue for other and more important obligations.—Also, dated 8 December, 1627, the earl of Marleburgh's (sic) peremptory order for the execution of his previous warrant.

16 February, 1627. Letter from Ambrose Browne to Sir George More. Touching arrangements for an election of a knight for the co. of Surrey, in respect to which the writer conceives himself to be ill-used by Sir George More.

26 February, 1627. Letter from Francis Carew to his uncle William More, esq., at Loseley. Containing assurances of affection and devotion to a relative who may have been induced to think ill of the writer.—Also, on the cover, a rough draft of a part of the uncle's reply who reflects in severe terms on his nephew's ungrateful misbehaviour.

22 March, 1627. Copy of Sir Francis Seymer's Speech in the Parliament, 22 March, 1627.

26 March, 1627. "Roule indented, conteyninge the names and surnames with the dwelling places of one hundred footmen levied within the countie of Surrey" for service beyond seas.

28 April, 1627. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir George Moore and others. Touching a levy of soldiers in Surrey.

3 December, 1627. Letter from Richard Onslow to Sir George Moore, knt. Inviting Sir George and lady More to visit the writer. Dated from Knoll.

8 December, 1627. Petition of William More, esq., son of Sir George More, knt., to the earl of Rumford, Lord High Treasurer of England. For the due payment of arrears, and all future sums as they become due, of an annuity of 106*l.*, granted to Sirs George and Robert More, knts., in consideration of a resignation.

1628. Letter from Lord Wimbledon to Sir George More, knt. Thanking Sir George for his fruitless pains to arrange a difference between Captain Austen and Mr. Parkhurst. In a postscript the writer says, "I desire you to tell Mr. Parkhurst that two witnesses are

W. M.
MOLYNEUX
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

"sufficient against a man's life; and that, if he will not give satisfaction, my lord of Nottingham and myself are bound to see our captives rited."

4 April, 1628. The Duke of Buckingham's speech of his Majesty at the Counsell table on Friday, 4 April, 1628.

4 May, 1628. Paper of sixteen sheets, containing a copy of King Charles the First's address, given under his signet at the afore-given date to the Lords spiritual and temporal of the Higher House of Parliament; together with the three following matters:—(1.) His Majesty's Speech, 26 June, 1628, to both Houses at the end of the Session. (2.) The argument of Edward Littleton at the first conference of the Lords and Commons touching Personall Libertie. (3.) The Objections of the Kings Councill against the Declaration of the Commons, and the Answers therevnto.

10 July, 1628. Letter from Lords of the Council to Sir George More, knt., deputy-lieutenant of co. Surrey. Requiring Sir George to suppress the discontents at Farnham respecting the billeting of soldiers, and to see that the soldiers are continued in their billets.

15 October, 1628. Letter from Lord Wimbledon to Sir Ambrose Browne, knt. and bart., and Sirs George More and Richard Onslow, knts., deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching the reluctance of persons to pay the salaries of the soldiers who undertake to serve for them.

19 November, 1628. Letter from Lords of the Council to deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. For the transport to Scotland of all the Scottish troops "which haue bene employed in his majesties seruice vnder the commande" of the earl of Morton.

4 March, 1629. Letter from lord Annadall to Sir George More, knt. Touching some affair of private business, in which the writer needs Sir George's counsel and assistance.

1 April, 1629. Letter from Sir George More, knt., to his grand-son Poininges More, at his lodgings in Fleet Street near Ram Alley. Touching arrangements for Mr. Poininges More's marriage with a lady, whose father requires a provision of 400*l.* per annum for the present maintenance of the young people.

27 March, 1630. Constance lady More's receipt for x*li.*, a half year's interest on c*cl.* of money lent, paid her by Lady Francis More.—Similar receipt for another payment of x*li.*, dated 30 Sept., 1631.—Also (dated 16 May, 10 Car. I.) the indenture whereby Constance lady More, widow of Sir George More, conveys her interest in one hundred pounds of the aforesaid c*cl.* to her grand-son George Hardey, gentleman.

30 November, 1630. Letter from lords of the council to the magistrates of the co. of Surrey, near Godalming. Touching the depression of the cloth trade in that county, and directing that the work-people thrown out of employment by that mischance should be relieved by collections in the several parishes of the county.

10 April, 1631. Letter from Sir George More to some person, whose name does not appear. Offering to refer to arbitrators all questions in dispute between the writer and Sir William Elyott.

28 July, 1631. Warrant (signed, R. Weston) to his majesty's Auditor and Receiver of co. Surrey. For the payment to William Moore, esq., of 10*li.* 0*s.* 10*d.* for one year's annuity due to him as constable of Farnham Castle; and for subsequent yearly payments of the same salary, as they become due.

25 February, 1632. Inventorie of the goods, and household stuff of Sir George More, late of Loseley, co. Surrey, deceased.

12 July, 1632. Letter of artificially expressed homage from Sir George More, knt., to Mrs. Judith Gresham.

30 September, 1632. Letter of "licence and passe-port," for three years, from Lords of the Council to Poynings Moore of Loseley co. Surrey, who "is desirous to travell into Forraine partes and therein to remaine for the space of three yeares after the date hereof, for the gaining of Language and bettering of his experience." All mayors, sheriffs, &c. &c. are enjoined to suffer the said Mr. More "to pass and embarque himself with one servant at anie of his majesties ports &c. &c. provided that he repaire not to the citie of Rome without licence first obtained from his majestie." Dated at Hampton Court.

1 December, 1632. Receipt of Sir John Rous of Henham co. Suffolk, knt., and Christofer Rous, his son and heir-apparent, for the sum of 2,200*l.*, paid by Sir William Fitch of Ramesden co. Essex, knt., as a marriage portion to his daughter Elizabeth, on her marriage with same Christofer.

12 December, 1635. Copy of a True Relation of the proceedings against Francis Lord Mountnorris, his Majesties Vice-Treasurer, and General Receiver and Treasurer at Warre in Ireland. Signed by Francis Mountnorris, prisoner in his majesties Castle of Dublin, this 12th December, 1634.

1637. Paper headed "Ship-money in Kent: A Note of the dayes of payment vnto mee of the Shipp Money, 1637."

6 October, 1637. Generall List of y^e Slayne and hurt men in y^e armie of his highnesse y^e Prince of Orange in y^e siege of Breda from y^e 18 of August, stilo nouo, which was y^e time when y^e approaches first began to y^e 6th of October that the enemy parted, 1637.

— April, 1639. Letter from Lords of the Council to "the late Sheriff of the countie of Kent for the yeare 1637." Reflecting severely on his neglect to levy the ship-money, 90*5*l. of which remains unpaid.

1640. Petition of the parishioners of Godalmynge, co. Surrey, to the House of Commons, for an enquiry into the evil conduct of their vicar, Nicholas Andrewes (parson of St. Nicholas in Guldeford, a prebend of Salisbury and chapelyne of the bishop of Ely, as well as vicar of Godalmynge): Together with the articles of accusation against the said vicar; the names of the witnesses to the truth of the charges being written on the margin against each article. Four sheets of foolscap: closely written on both sides.

— September, 1640. The Humble Peticion of y^e commissioners of y^e late Parliament and other his Majesties Loyall Subjects of y^e kingdome of Scotlande. Followed by a copy of "His Majesties Reply to the same petition, dated from York."—Also, in the same budget, a tract entitled "The Intentione of y^e Armie of y^e kingdome of Scotland."

2 May, 1642. Paper of twenty-four pages entitled "Diurnall Occurrences or the Heades of the proceedings in Parliament from the 25th of Aprill to the 2nd of May, 1642."

12 June, 1642. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir Poyninges Moore, bart. deputy-lieutenant for Surrey. Requesting Sir Poyninges to attend a meeting of the deputy-lieutenants of the said co. at the writer's house at Lethered on the 18th inst., to arrange measures for settin the militia in order.

20 June, 1642. Anagrams (two) on the name of Poynings More, —(1) Mooe In spring: (2) O! Ingen-Primo.—Together with a poem of fifty verses in eulogy of Sir Poynings More's ancestry. By Richard Holney of Woolmancote, Sussex. In his verses the author, who was a clergyman, commemorates Sir George More as the patron who

— "from noble Egerton

Procured me what I haue to liue vppon!

Also an undated poem (signed R. G.) of twenty-six verses in compliment of Mr. More, each verse containing the word "more."

28 July, 1642. Letter from James Gresham to his brother-in-law Sir Poynings More. About a deed and a release. Dating from Chichester the writer says, "The mayor was sent for vp to the Parliament about proclaiming the proclamation my lord mayor is questioned for, and I heare hee hath mistaken his way and is gone to Yorke."

1 August, 1642. A Note what armes euery man hath laid downe out of Captaine Queanel's band.

12 August, 1642. Letter from the earl of Nottingham to Sir Poyninges Moore, bart., and Nicholas Stoughton, esq., deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey. Inviting the said deputies to meet the other deputy-lieutenants of the said shire at the writer's house in Lethered, for a conference to "settle the country in a posture of arms."

15 October, 1642. Commission, signed by Algernon earl of Northumberland, lieutenant of co. Surrey by the appointment of the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament. Appointing Sir Poynings More, knt. and bart., one of the said earl's deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey.

22 October, 1642. Copy of a letter from the earl of Northumberland, lieutenant of co. Surrey. Touching orders of the Houses of Parliament for the military service of the said county.—Also, copies of orders (dated 24 and 25 October, 1642) addressed, by the committee of the Lords and Commons for the safety of the kingdom, to the lieutenant and deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey, for the disposal of the forces of the shire.

26 October, 1642. Copy of the warrant, issued from Southwark by the deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey, to the high constables of the several hundreds of the same shire; to give notice of an appointment for a muster of the forces of the county.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

6 January, 1644. Letter from Mr. Nicholas More to his brother Sir Poynings More, at Mr. Price's house in the Strand near Essex street, at the sign of the Blake Boy. Asking Sir Poynings for money for the immediate relief of the writer who is "this day necessitated" to leave the college, only leaving Mr Provost and "about six of our senior Fellows." Dated from Cambridge.

January, 1645. Articles of misdemeanor against Richard Luckins of Horsham, co. Surrey, shoemaker, now and for the space of almost two years, gaoler for the county aforesaid.

23 January, 1645. Certificate (signed by ten prisoners in the gaol of Horsham, co. Sussex) that the prisoners in the said gaol are fairly treated, and Richard Luckins, the keeper thereof, is not guilty of the excesses of power and malpractices charged against him.

1645. Letter from Poyninges More, esq. to his brother-in-law, James Gresham, esq. of Godalming. Touching arrangements for the baptism of Mr. Gresham's infant son.

— Letter from Poyninges More, esq. to his grandfather Sir George More, knight. No date.

31 January, 1646. Letter from Mr. Nicholas More to his brother Sir Poynings More. Touching the writer's pecuniary embarrassments and urgent need of money.

27 March, 1648. Letter from John Thynne to Sir Poyninges More, bart. Giving particulars of the fighting at Pembroke Castle, and the present aspects of the civil conflict.

15 July, 1648. Receipt of Henry Snelgrave for 2,250*l.* paid him by John Evelyn of the Middle Temple, in execution of the terms of an indenture made on the 13th inst. between Henry Snelgrave of the one part, and John Evelyn, George Evelyn and Richard Evelyn, esqs. of the other part: in the presence of Robert Abbott, Thomas Snelgrave, and Robert Cleton,—the said Robert Abbott and Robert Cleton being the Robert Abbott and his nephew Sir Robert Clayton, mentioned (under date 18 Nov., 1679) by John Evelyn in the 'Diary.'

— Charles I. Letter from Poyninges More, esq., to his grandfather Sir George More, knt. Touching the writer's proposed marriage with the daughter of Mr. Pickes; a match that fails to satisfy the writer's mother, as the money offered by Mr. Pickes will not free Sir George from his debts. No date.—Also two other undated letters from the same person to the same person (one of the epistles being in French) written when the writer was on his travels.

— Charles I. Letter from Poyninges More, esq., to his mother lady Frances More, at Loseley. Domestic. No date.

— Charles I. Draft of a letter written by Sir George More, knt., to some person whose name does not appear. Touching the promotion of Sir William Eliot to be a deputy-lieutenant co. Surrey, to the exclusion from the commission of the deputy-lieutenancy of Poyninges More; which the writer regards as a slight on himself after forty years of service to the shire. No date.

— Charles I. Draft of a letter from Sir George More, knt., to king Charles the First. Begging that the writer may be allowed to transfer his office of Chancellor of the Order of the Garter to a worthy gentleman of his own choice; and entreating his majesty to deny the suit of Sir Francis Crane who is seeking to get from the king a grant of the reversion of the said office. No date.

— Charles. Rough draft of the petition of Sir George More, knt., to king Charles the First. That his majesty would grant the petitioner a lease for thirty years in exchange for the patent for 1,200*l.*, which the king was pleased to grant him under certain conditions in consideration of his readiness to surrender his office of Chancellor of the Order of the Garter. No date.

— Charles I. Rough Draft of a petition by Dame Frances More, widow of Sir Robert More, knt., a gentleman pensioner for twenty-two years in the service of the crown, to Charles the First. For the wardship of her son, one of the king's wards in respect of lands of no great value. No date.

— Charles I. and II. Records of Courts Baron on the manor of Loseley in years of the aforesaid kings. Paper-book in vellum wrapper.

— Charles I. Copy of Dr. Eglissham's Tract (including the writer's supplication to parliament), entitled "The Forerunner of Revenge, Upon the Duke of Buckingham for the poysoninge of the most potent King James of happie memorie King of Great Brittain, and y^e Lord Marques of Hamleton and others of the Nobilitie—Discovered by mee George Eglissham one of K. James his Physicians for his Majesties person "about y^e space of 10 years. Frankford." No date.

— Charles I. Heades of the Lord Broghill's speech in Parliament against the Bill of Decimating the cavalears, styled a Bill of Extraordinary Taxes which was first moved by the Lord Claypoole to be cast out, and seconded by the saide Lord Broghill. No date.

— Charles I. (?) Articles of enquiry to be put to every fellow of the college of St. Mary of Winchester, in Oxford, at the time of visitation. No date.

— Charles I. (?) Letter from Lady More, widow of Sir Robert More, bart., to her son Master Poyninges More at Loseley;—to whom the writer gives wholesome counsel to avoid unworthy associates, and a sharp rebuke for recent misbehaviour. "I heer," says the mother, "when you fell you were scars sobber which troubles me much to think that you should live so besly a life that the countrie should take notis of it, and so soon to forgeatt thos good instructions that your blessed father which is in heaven taught, so praying god to giue you his grace to amend your life, I rest Your louing mother, Francis More." No date.

— Charles I. (?) Copies of three speeches in Parliament by Sir Francis Seymer, Sir Thomas Wentworthe, and Sir Robert Phillipps. No date.

— Charles I. Records of Views of Frank-pledge on the manor of Loseley, temp. Car. I. Vellum roll. No date.

— Charles I. Six brief letters of civility and no historic interest from the earl of Northumberland to Sir George More, knt. No date.

— Charles I. (?) Satirical Poem (of 80 lines) on the Honorary Degrees granted at Cambridge on the occasion of the king's visit to the university. Beginning—

1. When the king came of late with his peers of State
T'entertain the Mounsirs of France,
With masters degrees and without payinge fees
Many a skip-jack did leape and daunce.

2. In the cheife of the rout went the Frenchemen out,
And next the kinges owne followers

They gott to commence before they went hence,
But that would not make them good schollers,
&c. &c.

Endorsed "This is the last and best edition corrected" by Wm. Smart and as to be sold in the Cambridge "Exchange at the Signe of the Scholler's Head, to the tune of 'Hoop, doe me no harme, good man.'" No date.

— Charles I. (?) Anagrams (two) on the name of William More,—(1) O! arme my will, (2) O! my will is rare. Followed by the verses.

O! Arme My Will, that I may vertue gayne,
My Will is rare, when Grace doth it restrayne:
Heauens graunt my will such liberty; that then
I may (through Grace) to Glory mount: Amen.

Composed by Henry Skynner. No date.

— Charles I. Copy of Letter from Lords of the Council to the earls of Nottingham and Holdernesse, lieutenants of co. Surrey. Touching a levy of two hundred foot-soldiers in the said shire, for services beyond seas. Imperfect, date torn away.

— Charles I. Draft of a letter addressed by Sir George More, knt., to the earl of Suffolk, lord-warden of the Cinque Ports and Captain of the Gentlemen Pensioners, and one of his majesty's Privy Council. Praying that 150*l.*, due to Sir Robert More at the time of his death for service in his office of gentleman-pensioner, in which place he served the crown for many years, may be paid to Sir Robert's son and heir Poyninges More, and not to the late Sir Robert's successor in the said office, who is seeking to get it to the injury of the said heir. No date.

— Charles I. Instruccion of our Commissioners for the loane of money vnto vs of our county of Surrey. No date remains on this torn and greatly defaced paper.

2 October, 1649. An Elegy vpon the deplored death of the most vertuous young gentlewoman Mrs. Mary De La Barre dead of the small-poxe the 2 October 1649.

23 April, 1651. Schedule of "A Taxation for the reliefe of the Poore People of the parishe of Cuckfield" made by the Churchwardens ouerseers and others for "the poor there, the 25th of April An. Dom. 1651." The amount levied was 68*l.* 16*s.* The name and rate of each payer appear in the account.

22 September, 1654. Schedule of assessments of taxes in the parish of Cuckfield, co. Sussex.

— Car. II. Schedule of proportions for raising men to serve as soldiers in the hundred of Blackheath. No date.

8 March, 1660. Receipt of Henry Weston, for "his majesty's writt for summoning of a parliament to be held on the eight day of May next at Westminster,"

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

delivered to the said Henry Weston by James Gresham of Haselmere, co. Surrey, esq.

19 March, 1660. Letters of dispensation to the lady Elizabeth Moore, of the parish of St. Nicholas near Guildford, co. Surrey, widow; giving her licence to eat flesh on fish-days, together with her son Sir William Moore and any six other valetudinarian guests at her table.

20 July, 1660. Commission, signed by John viscount Mordaunt, lieutenant of co. Surrey, for Sir William More, bart., to be cornet of the said lord-lieutenant's own troop of horse under his command as lieutenant of Surrey.

November, 1662. Orders for the delivery of a charter, relating to the tolls of the market of Heslemere, co. Surrey, to John Bradfold, appointed to receive the same for Sir William More of Loseley, bart.

7 December, 1663. Letter from the earl of Albemarle to Sir Francis Vincent. Touching the petition for arrears of pay from two disbanded foot-companies, recently under the command of Sir Francis Vincent to whom a sum exceeding thirteen hundred pounds appears, by a certificate attached to the said petition, to have been paid for the satisfaction of the said soldiers' just claims.

2 October, 1665. A Landskip or Representation of the wilde Boare's chase from Netherne Coppice nigh Albury, two miles east from Guldeford, to Kingston Lane, as it was performed by the Cavalry and Yeomanry of the county of Surrey on Monday, October the 2, 1665. By P. Dormer. With the prefatory (circular) letter that accompanied a copy of the poem to each of the author's patrons in the county.

17 November, 1665. Copy of the last will and testament of Maurice Barrowe, of Barningham, co. Suffolk.

26 September, 1668. Licence, granted by George bishop of Winchester, to Sir William More, bart., of Losely co. Surrey, for the celebration of divine service and administration of the sacraments at his private chapel or oratory within his manor of Losely: with permission that he and his family, using the chapel after the manner of his ancestors for several generations, may attend divine services there on Sundays and feast days, &c., &c., whenever it shall be inconvenient for them to join the congregation of their parish church, St. Nicholas of Guildford.

24 February, 1670. Copy of a speech made in the House of Peeres by my Lord Lucas, Feb. y^e 24, 1670. Upon occasion of a bill, for his Majesties present supply, lately sent vp from y^e Commons, and then read in the House of Peeres y^e second time.

4 October, 24 Charles II., to 2 James II. Records of Views of Frank-pledge on the manor of Cattishull, from 24 Car. II. to 2 Jac. II. Vellum roll.

25 Charles II. to 9 William III. Records of Views of Frank-pledge on the manor of Artington, from 25 Car. II. to 9 Will. III. Vellum roll.

12 to 24 January, 1673-4. Abstract of proceedings in Parliament.

— 1674. Rentroll of the manors &c. of Godalming and Cattishull.

6 May, 1665. Last will and testament of Sir Walter Hendley, bart., of Cuckfield, co. Sussex.

2 June, 1675. Letter from T. Dalmahoy to some person, whose name does not appear. Announcing the day appointed for the election of a burgess for Haslemere.

22 July, 1675. Commission, under the seal of Prince Rupert, lieutenant of the cos. Berks and Surrey, &c. &c., for Sir William Moore, of Loseley, bart., to be one of the Prince's deputy-lieutenants of the county of Surrey.

15 February and 30 March, 1676-7. Abstract of proceedings in the House of Commons, from 15 Feb. 1676-7, to 20 March, 1677.

19 February to 1 March 1670. Account of the operations of the Dutch and French fleets off the island of Tobago.

21 February, 1676-7. Paper (single sheet) giving on one side "The True Accompt of the French Squadron under command of Mons^r De Estrea, viz^t Admirall of France, which hath made an attempt against the Munheire Binkes admirall and commander of the Dutch Fleete and the Island of Tobago the 21 day of Feb. 1676-7;" and on the other side, "The true Account of the Dutch Squadron, vnder the command of the Lord Jacob Bincks, admirall of the Dutch fleete and the island of Tobago, with which he hath beaten off the attempte of the French on 21 Feb. 1676-7."

— October, 1676. Sir William Scrugs (sic) speech when he was made judge. The following passage of the address is characteristic and significant, "This court my "lord 'tis true is properly a court of meum and tuum, where prerogative and liberty are seldome plaintiffs or defendants, but yet 'tis certaine that even in private causes, matter of gouernment many times interuenes and the publick is concerned by consequence, and therefore I think it faire and like English honesty and planeness, something to vnaile one's selfe in that particular, that men may know beforehand what they may expect, and herein do declare I would no more wrong or lessen the people's libertye than I would deliver vp my son, but that I will no more derogate from the King's prerogative, then I would betray my father. My Lord, when faction is so bold as to be bare-faced and false, and sedition nowe is openly talked and greedily embraced, when the King's reasonable demands are disputed and turned into cavills and those that oppose them talk confidently and those that should maintain them speak fearefully and tenderly, when the reverence we owe to the king is paid to the people, the Gouernment is beset, the king is in danger, and there is nothing wanting but opportunity, but when to prevent that opportunity men are afraid and hold it dangerous to avoid the danger, when we dare not call a crime by its right name, and for some find none, and a mischief must be effected before we will think it one; when dangerous attempts are minced and by some triviall differences and treason is distinguished into trespass; when men are forward and venturous enough in what thwarts the gouernment but in supporting it seem . . . cautious, nice and humorous and so filled with prudentialls till they are as wise as fear can make them, the lawe is enervated and become vseless to its greatest end which is the preservacion of the whole. Tis true in public causes the same integrity is necessary as in private, but that is but a part of a judge his duty. He must be magnanimous as well as virtuous; and I acknowledge it to be a maine and principall part of my duty, as it relates to the King and his people, with hearty resolucons to suppress all open force and private confederacys, not thinking anything little that attempts the publicke safety, for where the motives are small, the danger is greate, when discontents exceed their causes."

— November, 1776. Paper entitled "Present State of the Borough of Haselmere," and prepared "on behalf of Peter Burrell, esq., a candidate in the room of Thomas More Molyneux, esq., deceased."

23 May, 1677. His Majesties Speech to the Commons in y^e Banqueting House. Together with the address delivered by the House of Commons to the king on the 26th of the same month.

23 May, 1677. His Majesties speech in y^e Banqueting House, 23 Maye, 1677.

12 April, 1678. Full accompt of y^e rates each particular person is to pay by y^e poll-bill.

28 May, 1678. Copy of a "Letter from y^e Emperour to y^e States of Holland," dated at Vienna, 28 May, 1678.

22 March, 1678-9. Sir Francis Winnington's speech in y^e House of Commons.

23 October, 1678. Brief Note of "Oates Examination per y^e House of Commons, Octob. 23, 1678."

8 April, 1680. Letter from lord Lumley to Sir William More, knt.—A note of courtesies, inviting Sir William to take a bed with the writer at Nonesuch on his way to a conference at Lethered, if he be sufficiently recovered from the ague to travel to Lethered for the said conference.

2 June, 1680. Copy of a letter from lords of the Council to Prince Rupert, as lieutenant of cos. Berks and Surrey: together with a copy of a letter from him to his deputy-lieutenants. Touching the government of the corporations within the said lieutenancy.

21 August, 1680. Information of John Bavin of Guildford co. Surrey, husbandman, and William Standish of Stoke near Guildford aforesaid, cook. Touching a conventicle of certain persons, who meet for purposes of religious worship in a house in Artington in the parish of St. Nicholas in Guildford. Most of the many persons mentioned in the presentment are tradesmen of that town and its vicinity; but a few of the attendants at the unlawful meetings, including "the lady Stoughton wife of Sir Nicholas Stoughton, baronett," are persons of superior degree.

22 October, 1680. The Speaker's Speech of y^e House of Commons to His Majestie in y^e House of Lords, October ye 22, 1680.

Circ. 1680. List of the companie of Foote within the Hundred of Godalming. The contents of this interesting record show it to have been written before 1684. One of the notable persons, commemorated in its entries, is Samuel Speed, clerk, of Godalming, the valiant sea-

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

chaplain and sailor, grandson of John Speed. Sir John Birkenhead's lines,
His chaplain, he plyed his wonted work
He prayed like a Christian and fought like a Turk, Crying now for the King and the duke of York, have reference to Samuel Speed, vicar of Godalming, temp. Car. II.

16th 2. Complimentary Verses "To Master Edward Bushell, Major of Bathe, An. Dom. 1682," beginning, Since you are industrious to raise
The fame of Bath, you doe deserve some praise.

April, 1682. Letter from James Gresham of Haslemere to ——. About Haslemere and the commission for Charitable Uses.

10 August, 1682. Warrant (signed, William More) to the constables of Guildford, co. Surrey; to summon certain ten under-written tradesmen of the said town to appear before Sir William More at the Redd Lyon Inne in Guldeford, on Saturday 12 inst. at 3 p.m., to answer for their absence from church on Sunday 30 July last past. Similar warrants, dated 22 and 27 July, and 10 August, 1682.

31 July, 1683. Warrant for the arrest of John Martyn, husbandman of Purbright, co. Surrey, on a charge of coursing with a brace of greyhounds the deer "in the parke of Madam Celwell called Guldeford Parke in the parish of St. Nicholas in Guldeford."

21 July, 1683. Warrant (signed by deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey) to Captain Couert and other officers of the militia, and the constable of West Clandon, co. Surrey; to search for and take possession of arms in the dwelling-house of Arthur Onslow, esq., of West Clandon, co. Surrey, who is judged "dangerous to the Peace of this kingdom."

29 July, 1683. Warrant (signed, William More and White Tichborne) to the constables of the parish of Worpelston, co. Surrey; to levy fines of five shillings each imposed on certain inhabitants of the said parish for being present at a conventicle, for religious exercise, held in the mansion-house of Sir Nicholas Stoughton, bart., in Stoke next Guldeford.

4 August, 1683. Information (given on oath in the presence of four undersigned magistrates) of Walter Dicker, servant to Madam Cellwell, as keeper of Guldeford Parke; respecting unlawful hunting therein on 9 July last past.

2 January, 1683-4. Letter from James Gresham to Sir William More, bart. Long letter of gossip, chiefly about matters of interest to the justices of the peace of the writer's division of co. Sussex. Reference is made at the commencement to "the late great wedding at Henley Parke."

8 April, 36 Car. II. Warrant, made at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace held at Croydon on the aforesaid day, for binding Sir Nicholas Stoughton, Arthur Onslow, esq., and Richard Onslow, esq., to be of good behaviour, in sums of 500*l.* each for the said principals, and 250*l.* each for their sureties.

16 May, 1684. Warrant (signed by Sir William More and Owen Woodruffe) to the High Constables of the hundred of Godalming; to levy soldiers for the company of Captain Couert, so that they appear at Guildford on the 26th inst., duly provided with arms and ammunition, and furnished with red coats.

30 May, 1684. Warrant, under the seals and signatures of deputy-lieutenants of co. Surrey, to the High constables of the Hundred of Godalming; to give notice for a muster of Captain Couert's company at Godalming, on 5 June next. The names of the men serving in the said company being set forth under the warrant.

1684. Rent-roll of the manors, &c. of Godalming and Cattishull.

2 July, 1690. Letter (dated at Tidworth near Sarum) from Thomas Pierce, dean of Sarum, to Sir Theophilus Oglethorp, knight and colonel, Godalming, co. Surrey. Granting Sir Theophilus, in an insolent tone, permission to renew certain leases of the dean and chapter.

— Charles II. The Speaker's Speech to Sir Robert Peyton on his expulsion from the House. In which the official orator charges Sir Robert with having "consulted with y^e devill Gadbury and hug'd the witch Celier," whereby he has become "nautious to this house" which forthwith "spues" him "out." No date.

— Charles II. Copy of a letter addressed to the writer's "good lordship," probably the bishop of Winchester, testifying to the orderly conduct and reverential demeanour of "Mr. Wilson the minister of the parishe of which I am;" the said Mr. Wilson being summoned before his lordship to answer certain matters touching conformity. No date, signature, or address.

3 May, 1692. Letter (dated from Moor Park) from Jonathan Swift (afterwards Dean Swift) to his cousin Mr. Swift, subsequently Dr. Swift of Puttenham, co. Surrey. A long letter in which the writer speaks frankly of his literary labours, taste and ambition. "I esteem the time of studying poetry to be 2 hours in a morning and that onely when the humor fits, which I esteem to be the flower of the whole day, and truly I make bold to employ them that way and yet I seldom write about 2 stanzaes in a week, I mean such as are to any Pindarick ode, and yet I have known myself in so good a humour as to make 2 in a day, but it may be no more in a week after, and when alle done, I alter them a hundred times, and yet I do not believe myself to be a laborious writer, because if the fit comes not immediately I never heed but think of something else . . . I have a sort of vanity or foibless, I do not know what to call it, and which I would fain know if you partake of it. It is (not to be circumstantial) that I am over fond of my own writings, I would not have the world think so, and I find when I writt what pleases me, I am Cowley to myself, and can read a hundred times over. I know 'tis a desperate weakness, and has nothing to defend it but its secrecy, and I know I am wholly in the wrong, and have the same pretence the Baboon had to praise her children." The cousin, to whom Jonathan Swift addressed this letter, was Chaplain to Sir William Temple, who, 15 Jan. 1693, presented him to the living of Puttenham, co. Surrey, where he died in 1752, aged 87.

6 December, 1693. Letter from Jonathan Swift (afterwards Dean Swift) to his first cousin "Mr. Swift at Dr. Davenant's in Red-Lyon Square, near Holborn, London," whom Sir William Temple, had in the preceding January, presented to the living of Puttenham, co. Surrey. "I protest," says the writer, "I cannot much pity your present circumstances, which keep your mind and your body in motion, and my self was never very miserable while my thoughts were in a ferment, for I imagine a dead calm is the troublesomest part of our voyage through the world."

10 July, 1722, to 2 March, 1739. Seventeen letters from the duke of Chandos to Sir More Molyneux, of Loseley House, dated 10 July 1722; 20 Sept. 1724; 8 Sept., 6 Dec. 1725; 14 Feb., 30 June 1727; 23 May, 9 August 1728; 22 Jan. 1730; 26 Dec. 1733; 26 August 1735; 8 Jan., 1 May, 28 Sept., 26 Nov., 1736; 3 Feb. and 19 Feb. 1737; 2 March 1739. Letters of a private nature, touching occasionally on matters of interest to writers of social history.

21 March, 1732, to 7 February, 1740. Five letters from Speaker Onslow to Sir More Molyneux, dated 21 March 1732; 30 May 1733; 4 July 1734; 17 June 1738; and 7 Feb. 1740. Memorials of the affectionate intercourse between two neighbours, these letters afford testimony of the writer's readiness to use his influence with Sir Robert Walpole in Sir More's behalf, and contain also a few interesting references to matters of local politics. On 30 May, 1733, Speaker Onslow writes to his friend, "I have the pleasure to tell you that at last we have been able to get a Bill to pass both Houses of Parliament that will enable young Billingham to be admitted an attorney, and it now lies ready for the royal assent. My satisfaction in this is from the justice it will do the young man, of whom I have a very good opinion, and from the pleasure I'm sure it will give you, who may always command of, &c. &c." The letter of 7 Feb., 1740, refers especially to a pending election, and the electoral corruption prevailing, in the now disfranchised borough of Haslemere. "God knows," the writer concludes, "there is so much of it" (i.e. electoral corruption) "almost every where, that I dread the consequences of it with regard to the religion and morals of the nation, and to tell you the truth I am quite sick of the world. I say this to you as a man of virtue to whom I can disclose my heart, without being liable to be laughed at."

In conclusion let me say a few words to dispel a misconception that originated in the sentence with which Mr. Kempe opened the introduction to his 'Loseley Manuscripts.' The writer of the notes on Loseley House in Mr. Murray's hand-book for the county of Surrey had no sufficient authority for stating that the key of the Loseley muniment-room was lost for two hundred years, during which time no person entered the depositary of ancient records. When he remarked that the reader of his volume might "imagine himself introduced to the Muniment Room of an ancient hall in Surrey, of which

W. M.
MOLYNEUX,
Esq.

W. M. DYNEUX, Esq., "the key had been lost, and its existence disregarded during an interval of two hundred years," Mr. Kempe aimed only at putting people in a fit mood for the enjoyment of the papers, and had no expectation that his words would be taken as veritable history.

JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

MANUSCRIPTS OF SIDNEY E. E. BOUVERIE-PUSEY, ESQ., OF PUSEY HOUSE, FARINGDON, CO. BERKS.

S. E. E. BOUVERIE-PUSEY, Esq., THESE consist entirely of ancient deeds, court rolls, and rentals, valuable for local topography, but not of much general interest: of these I have noted a few. There are two grants by the celebrated Richard Whityngton, Mayor of London.

Temp. Hen. 3. John de St. Walery grants to Sir Henry de Pesey, Kt., in fee, a right of way between Pesy and Kingeston.

21 Edw. I. Agreement between Hamo Box, citizen of London, and Gilbert le Wythe, of London. Hamo grants to Gilbert his house in the parish of All Saints, of Fenchurch Street, in London, with the garden and vineyard (vinea), and all appurtenances, except the wardrobe, which is and shall be common to all the houses of the said Hamo. Witnesses: Ralph de Sandwich, the Custos of London, and Henry le Holt and Elias Russel, sheriffs of London.

1298, Friday in the vigil of St. Nicholas. Agreement between dom. Nicholas de Kingeston, Kt., of the one part, and William Maunsel, Kt., of the other part. Nicholas will supply counsel to William, and will attend him and aid him in business, when by the said William he shall be reasonably required, in time of peace and war, at William's expense. William agrees with Nicholas in like manner. One small seal remains: a shield charged with a lion rampant.

35 Edw. I. William Maunsel leases to Walter Berkar and Joan his wife a pigeon-house for their lives, at the yearly rent of 3s. 6d.; and William is to have 4 young pigeons, when there are any, for 1d.

Temp. Edw. II. A grant by Ralph Burri, of Bokhampton, of two villeins, with their sequels and houses. (There is another grant of villeins, temp. Edw. III.)

3 Edw. III. A deed between Ammauri de Feteplace and Robert de Charneye. The eldest son of Ammauri is to marry Mary, daughter of the said Robert de Charneye.

Temp. Edw. III. (French.) Sir William Mancel, Kt., has received from John de la Cumbe his homage for all the lands, tenements, and rents which the said John holds of the honour of St. Valeri, within the hundred of Gamenefeld: and therefore Sir William grants that he, and his heirs and assigns, shall be bound to acquit the said John against all people from all damages which may happen by reason of his homage received. Witnesses: Sir John de Lenham, Kt., Henry de Pusye, John de Hautford, William de Wythe, Elis of Niwentone, John Geffray, &c. Seal of arms.

20 Richard II., morrow of the Purification. Richard Whityngton, citizen and merchant of London, surrenders to James Spersholt and Richard Monemouth all his lands and tenements in Pusey, and a meadow in the county of Oxford, which he has by virtue of any execution of statute merchant, statute staple, or recognizance whatever.

21 Richard II., Nov. 29. Richard Whityngton, Mayor of the City of London, surrenders to James Spersholt and Richard Monemouth all his lands and tenements in Pusey, in the county of Berks, and all his meadow in the county of Oxford, all which he has by virtue of an execution of statute merchant, statute staple, or recognizance whatever, the reversion of which, after the end of the execution, belongs to the said James and Richard, to hold to the said James and Richard in fee. Witnesses: Thomas Chelreye, John Arches, William Bruns, John Ildesle, John Mermyle, and others.

21 Richard II. James de Spersholt demises to Walter Walyngforde his manor of Pusye, formerly called Mauncels Court, for life and six months beyond.

5 Hen. IV. Court roll of Pusye.

1 Edw. IV. Rental of John Puse, of Puse. One of the entries is that the Abbot of Abyndon pays half a pound of pepper at the Feast of St. Martin.

13 Hen. VII., Dec. 6. Alys Delamare, late wife of Bernard Delamare, conveys to John Feteplace, of Charney, gentleman, the manor of Mauncels Court in Pusey.

2 Hen. VIII., Nov. 12. Inquisition on the death of John Fetiplace the elder Esquire, of Charney.

A roll of parchment, about 7 feet in length and 6 inches in width, written in the 13th century, containing copies of old Pusey deeds, some of which are now at Pusey House.

Here too is the famous Pusey horn, said to have been given by King Canute to a grantee of the Pusey estate. The inscription on the silver plate round the horn says that it was given by Kyng Knowld to Wyllyam Pecote. This inscription seems to be of the time of Henry the 8th, and varies from the inscription given in the report (1 Vern. 273) of the case of Pusey v. Pusey, in 1684, when the heir brought a Bill in Chancery to recover the horn.

There are many 15th century deeds by the Nortons of Shalvingford and others.

I must be permitted to acknowledge with thanks Mr. Bouverie-Pusey's kind hospitality at Pusey House.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE REV. THOMAS WILLIAM WEBB, OF HARDWICK VICARAGE, CO. HEREFORD.

THE Coningsby papers occupy two volumes in folio; they are letters by and to members of that family in the time of James I. and Charles I., giving some court and foreign news, and some papers of later date, including collections for history and biography, by Earl Coningsby, in the beginning of the last century. An interesting relic is a small common-place book, written by James Earl of Derby, temp. Car. I. There are petitions by the Tuckers (fullers) of Bristol in 1555 to the mayor and aldermen against the encroachments of the shoremen, and part of a book of the ordinances of the company. A folio volume of letters by the Duke of Somerset to Serjeant Thomas Pengelly, temp. George I., shows that the Serjeant was the Duke's legal adviser, and that the Duke had personal interviews with him and paid him fees for advice. He employed his interest to get Pengelly into Parliament as member for Cockermonth, and consulted with him as to the titles of the family, and congratulated Pengelly on his being made Chief Baron of the Exchequer. Here are letters by and papers relating to Sarah Duchess of Marlborough, who also consulted Pengelly, and went to his chambers to advise with him; she submitted the inscription for the pillar at Blenheim for Pengelly's approval, and made him one of her executors, sent him warrants for venison, and a present of Burgundy. Here, too, are her long instructions to counsel in her suit with Sir J. Vanbrugh, and draft of intended alterations in her will. With a case and papers regarding Sir R. Steele's patent for stage players is a good letter of remonstrance by Steele to the Duke of Newcastle.

It is well known that Richard Cromwell, the Protector, after his return to England went to reside at Cheshunt, co. Herts, in the house of Mrs. Pengelly, mother of Serjeant Pengelly, and went by the name of Clark. Here is a volume containing papers regarding him. Among the civil war papers is a petition by Londoners to the House of Commons against episcopacy and ecclesiastical courts, and a counter petition by Londoners. Of the letters many are to Lt.-Col. Jeremie Baines, who was on the Parliamentary side, but he was afterwards charged with using force against the Parliament, and was imprisoned. A 12^o volume contains his notes while at the siege of Reading. There is a copy of a letter in 1656 by George Fox to the Protector against the Parliament's attempt to prevent the Quakers' speech, and of a petition to Parliament by Sir William Dick asking payment of his debt of upwards of 19,000*l.* many times allowed and ordered. In 1653, and following years, Jeremie Baines and others were commissioners for surveying lands, &c. formerly belonging to King Charles I., his Queen, and the Prince, and here is a volume of the surveys. There are many of the professional papers of Serjeant Pengelly; among them is the brief for John Hamilton, indicted for aiding the Duke of Hamilton in the murder of Lord Mohun, and the brief for Macartney, who assisted in the duel. Pengelly's mother was Rachel, eldest daughter of Jeremie Baines, a Captain of Dragoons in the service of the Parliament, some of whose papers are in this collection, and of whom there is a notice in "Military Memoirs of Col. Birch," Camd. Society, 1875. Among the early deeds are two leases by the Abbot and Convent of St. Peter's, Gloucester, curious for the particulars. There is the original will of John Fell, Bishop of Oxford.

S. E. E. BOUVERIE-PUSEY, Esq.

REV. T. W. WEBB.

REV.
W. W. W.

A complete set, in 31 numbers, of a Latin newspaper, called Mercurius Latinus, printed in London in 1746. One of Mrs. Pengelly's account books has a memorandum regarding the picture and coat of mail of Oliver Cromwell.

Coningsby Papers. 2 vols. folio.

Vol. I., 1618, Feb. 6, Whitborn, Fr. [Godwin, Bishop of Hereford] to Fitzwilliam Coningsby, Esq. Thanks it high time some order were taken with the ale-houses of those parts. Hopes to meet him at Bromyard.

1618, 1619, 1621, several letters by Michael Coningsby, Thomas Barrett, Leonard Benett, Francis Coningsby, John Aubrey of Grendon, Eb. Johnes.

1621, Nov. 14, Mockas. H. Vaughan to Fitzwilliam Coningsby . . . As you have for a great part of this somber taken exceeding payens for the good of your contrey, and thereby gained yourself the intire and hartly love of all honest Herefshier men . . . let not private letters or entreaties in any way alter your love for the good of your contrey. At this Parliament you know we are, as I trust, to obtayne what we have so much desired. My fear is that we shall want some powerfull man to speake in the Lower House, which by your means may be procured, I mean that worthy uncl of your bedfellow, Sir Edward Sackvill . . .

Sept. 23, Franckley. T. Littleton to his cousin Fitzw. Coningsby . . . Desires to have a conference before going into France.

1612, Feb. 5, Franckley. The same to the same. Urges him to abandon those actions which might obscure the light of his reputation. "I have been a leader to you some time to you on these unexamined courses, therefore, &c.

1613, March 10, Franckley. The same to the same. . . . I am fully resolved to come to the Inns of Court at Michaelmas. I have projects in my Epicranion . . . let me intreate you to sollicite your father that you may be there then resident.

1614, dm. post nat., Franckley. The same to the same . . . I heare newes in this country for certaine that the King, Queen, and Prince will be at Cambridge before Lent.

1616, Feb. 27. st. no., Paris. The same to the same. Says that he suffers from ague, and writes by a secretary . . . It is generally reported here that peace will be shortly concluded, and the King, who lyeth now at Towers, is expected shortly to come to this towne.

n. d. The same to the same. Very small intelligence these 5 or 6 weeks how matters go, either in Bohemia or the Palatinate, but that Spinola played well his part at his coming into these contries is too well known; that we have requited his paines we yet cannot learne. Our gallant fleet set sail not past a fortnight since; whither they intend is closely concealed. Mr. Attorney General is on Friday next to answer in the Star Chamber, where he is like to be soundly fined. My business goeth on in the Star Chamber (I thank my Lord C.) notwithstanding great means made for me; yet I hope to shew Mr. Taylor a trick for his learning. I intend to go hence toward the armies within 3 weeks at furthest, and think I shall return to England about spring.

1617, Dec. 11, Hampton Court. Fitzw. Coningsby to Mr. Bayliff and Mr. Justice of the borough of Leominster . . . My father told me that he had joined with you to take examination of some humorous words spoken by gidy Thomas Hacluute unto William Pichard, wherein it seemeth he was bold to take my name in vain. I leave Tom Hacluit and his twatles to your censure.

June 24 st. no., Paris. Tho. Littleton to F. Coningsby . . . The King lyeth now at Towers, and it is hoped will come shortly to this town. No likelyhood of peace, though the war be very temperate. 'Tis verely thought the Protestants will take the Prince's part, for that they have given much relief to their army.

1618, Nov. 13, Burford. Thomas Cornwalles to [F. Coningsby].

n. y., March 21, Paris. T. Littleton to F. Coningsby . . . So soon as I can recover strength to travel I mean to bid this country adieu (wherein is likely to be nothing shortly so common as cutting of throats), and repair to the Archduke's Court . . . I fully resolve to be in London about July.

n. y., Sept. 22, Frankley. T. Littleton to F. Coningsby . . . Has another son: asks C. to be godfather. Sir Ferdinando Dudley will do the like kind office.

n. y., Feb. 13, St. Martin's Lane. The same to the same. The greatest subject of discourse is of the mighty Spanish Armado, which will, as reported within few weeks, be ready to put to sea; whether they intend i not here certainly known. We, as our neighbours, begin to arm ourselves . . . Certain news of the Emperor's death is here newly arrived. Letters lately from Constantinople that relate a hand and sword seen there in the elements about the time of our blazing starr. The matter in the Star Chamber between my Lady of Exeter and my Lord Ross, the King hath with wonderful patience sat out the hearing of five days this term; the censure was this day, wherein Sir Thomas Lake is fined 5,000*l.*, his Lady 3,000*l.*, my Lady Ross 10,000 marks, and all committed to the Tower during the King's pleasure. My Lady Rosse also fined to my Lady of Exeter 3,000*l.*; young Sir Thomas Lake 1,000*l.*, ob falso clamore. The King goeth to Newmarket this very week. The Prince stayth here all Lent.

1635, Jan. 8, Burford, and 2 other letters by Thomas Cornwallis to F. Coningsby.—Seal, erm. a lion rampant crowned within a bordure engrailed bezanty.

n. d. Carre Coventry to F. Coningsby at Hampton Wafer. (Seal, a fess erm. between three bezants.) The untimely death of the young Lord Buckhurst which has caused much grief at Knolle, from whence I lately came.

Letters from G. Berington at Cowarne, John Wigmore, of Lucton, Frances Coningsbye, Thomas Meautys, Edward Cornewall.

1706, Sept. 21. M. Cowper to Lord [Cowper]. (Indorsed "1st letter I received from my wife, formerly Mrs. Clavering, having been privately married to her . . . W. C.")

Copy, form of consecration and dedication of the Church of the Holy Trinity at Doure (in the county of Hereford), and the cemetery. Palm Sunday, 22 March 1634, by Theophilus, Bishop of St. David's, by authority of Matthew, Bishop of Hereford. The Bishop's letter in Latin, and the service in English. 16 leaves.

A number of accounts of various estates belonging to Lord Coningsby (C. 1720), principally the manor of Marden.

Extracts for history and biography, by Earl Coningsby. Between 80 and 90 leaves.

Vol. II. Copy of letter to Queen Elizabeth (14 pp.); Begins Most Sacred Queene, aliho' it may seeme an over bould parte in a subject to undertake to give advice to a Prince of your Majesty's wisdom—the writer speaks of this present Aug. 1587—shows the expediture for the Low Countries, but recommends the Queen not to desert them: the very countenance and name of the Queen of England doth hold this state together (though the same be in itself broken and distracted); and giveth courage to the people to defend themselves with their goods and lives.—Ends, to the furtherance of your Majesty's safety and the preservation of my natural country.

1. Proceedings in Parliament in 1625 and 1626.

2. Sir Harry Coningsby. Expedient to preserve the Protestant religion against the popish successor when the bill of exclusion, which he did not approve of, was agitated.

3. Leominster address to King Charles II. upon the discovery of the Presbyterian plot, &c.

The parliamentary proceedings began with the King's speech by way of message delivered by Sir R. Weston, 13 March 1625, and the Lord Chamberlain's speech; and end with Lord Bristol's speech, 6th May 1626.

Original notes in Parliament, 2 columns. Feb. 4, 1675—19 Jan. 1678, (about 22 pp.), with some printed and manuscript King's speeches, and Lord Keeper's and Chancellor's speeches and addresses.

A 12^o volume of 295 pp. and 10 or 12 at the beginning. A common-place book of James Earl of Derby. On one of the pages is the following, "wee are not much lesse beholding to Machiavel and others that write what men doe than to those that write what men should doe. J. Derby, Castle Rushin, in the Isle of Man, 1646. Dieu et ma foy."—On the following leaf "Observations taken out of the following books:—
"1. Romulus and Tarquin; 18. Phalaris; 28. Enchyridion of Quarles; 32. Policies; Of War out of Plut.; "Machiavel Discourses; Sir W. Raleigh's History of the World; P. de Comines; Siege of Breda; Machiavel's Prince; Bacon's Advancement of Learning, &c.; Ascent of Cyrus; Lives of Plutarch; Leicester's Commonwealth; Hayward's Answer to "Doleman, (and many others)." The handwriting is good. On the last page is "Table of Proportion of English Royal Ordnance," (weight, powder, shot, &c. for different cannon).

Two brief sheets. Richard Minshall v. The Earl of Bristol.—For the Defendant.—To be tried Monday, Nov. 30.

REV
T. W. W.

REV.
W. WEBB.

Middlesex.—In 1703 Charles Archduke of Austria, then stiled King of Spain, in the parish of St Clement Danes, was about to proceed to Spain in an expedition to subject the kingdom of Spain and other countries; and Richard Minshull and the said Earl (then Lord Hervey) had a talk, and Minshull promised to pay the Earl 400*l*. if Charles Duke of Austria should succeed, and if he should not succeed the Earl should pay Minshull 500*l*. Minshull says the Archduke did not succeed, but the Earl did not pay, altho' in 1707 he was asked, and still does not. The defendant pleads non assumpsit.—If the plaintiff gets through his proof, then as to the law of betting.—It has been all along allowed at Newmarket that whoever bets the odds, may choose the side afterwards (whether at cocking or horse match) that he lays the odds upon, and has that choice still in his power to make, until called upon by the person with whom he lays the wages to declare which side he will take. There is a list of events and of witnesses to prove them. The defendant was never called upon, &c.

Another brief sheet, 13 Feb. 1719, with Serjt. Pengelly's notes in the margin.—The Court was of opinion there should be no new trial.—Reasons.

One sheet, 1555. Petition of the Tuckers (fullers), 38 in number, to the mayor and aldermen of Bristol, against the encroachments of Shoremen. They refer to the entry of their privileges in the red paper book of the Guildhall. They state that they have been a craft from Henry IV's time.

Two sheets sewn together. Petition by the Tuckers to W. Popwell the Mayor of Bristol, and the aldermen.

1551, Nov. 30., 6 Ed. 6. Copy will of John Stevens of Bristol tucker. He is to be buried in the churchyard of St. Thomas the Apostle.

1582. Part of a book of the ordinances of the company (5 leaves).

1597. Agreement between the parishioners of the Temple of the one part, and the masters and seniors of the weavers' company of the other part;—that the fair of linen cloth pack shall be henceforth holden and kept in the Tuckers' Hall, and the precinct of the same for ever, so long as the fair at Pauls tide shall have continuance in the parish of the Temple. (It was formerly seven years in the Tuckers' Hall and seven years in the Weavers' Hall.

Four other papers temp. Elizabeth and James I.

A FOLIO VOLUME of LETTERS by the DUKE of SOMERSET to SERJT. (THOMAS) PENGELLY.

There are 58 letters by the Duke and three or four by other persons.

171st, Jan. 27. . . . P.S. As I hear Mr. Stanhope is to be this session in the House of Lords. I must repeat, what I long for, to bring you into the service of your country, which never has required it more, in Parliament, and in which other station that will be most agreeable to you; for now you are my care to do something for you as I have already done for others who were my counsell before. Midhurst where Sir John Fortescue served last for is engaged, but Cockermouth is not, neither shall it until I hear from you.

171st, Feb. 8. In reply to Pengelly who consented to stand for Cockermouth.

1717, May, Newmarket. Hopes the writ is returned into the Crown Office, and that Pengelly has taken possession of his seat there.

1718, July 19. . . . I have on so many occasions had your opinion without acknowledging it with fees as I ought to have done, I do therefore now take this way, hoping it will be as agreeable to you as if you had your fees at the several times I did particularly ask your opinion.

171st, March 21, London. The Bill to settle the Peerage do meet with so much difficulty by the several double and dormant titles that it is now certain it will not be sent to the Commons until after Easter. If Mr. Serjeant Webb is with you pray ask him what title Lady Villiers hath or will have to the lights at Tine-mouth Castle, for as my son Hertford's governor I would gladly buy the rights of the Villiers family, which they enjoy by a grant of Charles II.—P.S. Lord Molesworth hath writ a very good thing in favour of the Bill to settle the Peerage.

1718, April 28. Mentions Sir Thomas Raymond as having been one of his Majesty's counsel.

1722, April 22, Newmarket. Congratulations on Pengelly being elected. Reproves Sir Wilfred Lawson's behaviour, who disputed with the bailiff to return him first before Pengelly.

1722, Aug. 29. . . . Last Monday came on the election of bailiff of Midhurst; the popish Lord Montague, lord of that manor, sent his servants and dependents to appear openly on the side of Capt. Peachy's party in opposition to mine; but yet they could not effect it without altering the custom of 27 to 31 jurymen, so that my friend lost it by 5 votes, &c. . . . I hope you will find that either law or equity may be had to punish such injustice and irregular proceedings.

172st, Jan. 8, Petworth. Speaks of "the unfortunate occasion of the death of my poor wife." (The letter is about the baronies of his wife, the proceedings in 1628 and 1640, and the non-determination of the question of precedence which the Duke says he now wishes; and he wants Pengelly's opinion.)

172st, Jan. 17. Thanks for Pengelly's answer. Cockell is to communicate with Anstis and ask him the proper way to demand the writ, for the Barony of Percy only takes the same place next Lord Audley as his grandfather did: after this Cockell is to go to Lord Hertford and acquaint him and all the other children with it.

1723, May 14. The conversation you mention to have had with my son Hertford as to the title of Northumberland will deserve a further consideration. Mr. Anstis will be a very proper person to be discoursed with upon it; for I shall hardly be brought to consent that the Duke of Somerset's eldest son shall bear the title of another family, therefore I shall propose to know what objection may be against a petition to be created Marquis of Hertford and Earl of Northumberland, but the earldom to be to him and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, and then to his sisters successively and the heirs of their bodies; or whether I can have it, having a superior title; to me and the heirs of my body lawfully begotten; either of these ways the most feasible will secure the title of Northumberland in my family.

1723, May 21, Petworth. . . . I had formerly begged the Lord Chancellor to prevent as much as lay in him the title of Northumberland going into another family. Lord Hertford has done well in getting a promise to have it.

1723, May 25. My son having already spoken to the King upon it, and his Majesty's answer has most certainly secured that title going into another family for one year or two at least . . . I will never consent that my son take a patent on any other terms than to be created Marquis of Hertford to him and the heirs male of his body, and Earl of Northumberland in the same way; in failure thereof the earldom to descend to his two sisters successively and the heirs of their bodies, and so on of course to their children. As my own paternal estate and that of their mother will descend to them, it is not an unreasonable request when all things are rightly considered with the services I have done the King before and since his accession to the Crown . . . &c. The Earl of Coningsby's earldom is to his daughters, and other precedents might be easily found.

1723, Dec. 2. Sends a paper of limitations of the titles, which he asks Pengelly to get copied out fair, so that it may be sent to the Secretary's office . . . Mentions what he should have liked.

1724, Feb. 4. Pengelly to the Duke. Says he has received the King's commands to prepare himself to succeed Lord Chief Justice Pratt.

1726, Nov. 8. Petworth. The Duke to Lord [Chief Baron Pengelly.] . . . As to Cockermouth; it is usual for representatives, on their advancement, to write a kind letter to the borough they formerly did represent in Parliament. . . . He countermands Pengelly's direction to Mr. Muncaster to give money to the poorer inhabitants of Cockermouth at Christmas next, because he (the Duke) is obliged to do that and more against the ensuing election. Hears that John Curwin, a linen-draper, near the Exchange, will offer himself to the borough on this vacancy, but hears also that the neighbouring gentlemen will be rather for than against him. Has not yet named Pengelly's successor in Parliament, but tells Pengelly that it is the Duchess's brother, Mr. Finch, the King's Envoy Extraordinary in Holland.

1727, Sept. 24. Petworth. Is glad that the King has done himself and the nation the justice to confirm and establish Pengelly in the office the late King gave him in the Exchequer. The Earl of Berkeley and Sir John Fortescue have both met with hard usage. The person who advised it is not hard to guess. Sir John Fortescue has this to comfort himself with, that his place is not supplied with a more just and honest man than himself, for he hath been far from all imputation of guilt of any corrupt or other ill act in his life and conversation before and since he has sat on the bench. His case is still harder, because he cannot at present get a seat in the Commons House for the seat he loses on the woolstack

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

REV.
T.W. WEBB

in the Lords House, which his birth and merits have procured in this Parliament in case the elections had not been over. "I did write to my Lord Chancellor, my Lord Chief Justice Eyre, and Sir Spencer Compton, but all those letters have proved ineffectual; they all answered they had not interest sufficient to prevent it, which was surprising to me, especially from the two last gentlemen."

A FOLIO VOLUME OF LETTERS by and PAPERS relating to SARAH DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH.

There are 28 letters by the Duchess to Pengelly, but many of them are in the handwriting of Mallet, and are only signed by the Duchess.

n. d. The Duchess desires Sir Thos. Pengelly's professional aid. She has told Mr. Guidot to appoint all the Duke of Marlborough's counsel to meet at Pengelly's chamber any hour to-morrow night, that Pengelly might appoint; and she will come herself with Mr. Guidot to shew Pengelly several things that are material.

1720, Nov. 30. A letter of 3 pp. to Sir Thomas Pengelly respecting the dispute connected with the building of Blenheim.

1724, May 6. A business letter. Asks Pengelly to dine with her; if she knew when he would have time she would ask the Duke of Somerset to meet him, because she believes it would be agreeable to both.

1724, June 28. (By Mallet's hand.) She abuses Mr. Guidot.

1728, July 14. She sends Pengelly a warrant for venison.

1728, Sept. 10. She asks Pengelly to read the inscription for the pillar at Blenheim, and if he can, to shew it to Lord Chief Justice Raymond. Complains of gout through the coldness of Blenheim.

1729, April 12. About a new codicil to her will. She sends a draft.

1729, June 5. Finds it will be necessary to make a new will. Gives heads of the first will and of the alterations, in two columns—4 pp. folio, and 4 pp. 4to.

Other letters about the will.

1728, Oct. 3. Blenheim. About the inscription. Is glad that Pengelly approves it.

1729, Oct. 5. Windsor Lodge. Asks Pengelly to be an executor of her will. And on the 20th of the same she thanks him for consenting.

1730, April 4. Sends him three dozen of Burgundy. "It has given me a return of the gout, therefore I beg you not to drink any of it yourself, but let it be used at your table by those who make so bold with their constitution as to drink whatever pleases their palate."

The Duchess's instructions to counsel in her suit with Sir Jno. Vanbrugh. 43 pp.

Brief in the Additional Case, Strong v. the Duke of Marlborough, &c.

Copy of the Blenheim inscription, beginning, "The Castle of Blenheim was founded by Queen Anne." Ends, "He who had begun was directed to complete 'the glorious work' (4 pp.)"

Printed case of the appellants, the Duchess of Marlborough, Francis Earl of Godolphin, Wm. Clayton, Esq., John Hanbury, Esq., the four acting executors of the Duke of Marlborough v. W. Guidott, Esq. (3½ pp. folio.)

Printed case of the respondents (7½ pp.).

Copy answer of Sir J. Vanbrugh, defendant, to Edward Strong, senr., and Edward Strong, junr., plaintiffs.

John, Duke of Marlborough, appellant, v. E. Strong, senr., and E. Strong, junr., respondents. About the works at Blenheim.

Strong and Strong v. the Duke of Marlborough, Nicholas Lechmere, A.G., and Sir J. Vanbrugh. A brief with Pengelly's notes.

A FOUR VOLUME OF MISCELLANEOUS PENGELLY PAPERS.

1718, Nov. 23. Jonathan (Bishop of) Winchester to [Pengelly]. My indisposition not letting me be got well, I have suffered a most dangerous passage in the Kipperation, for it is said there "to any one of the Kipperers who shall discover two or more of his accomplices," whereas I ought to have been expressed "to any two who should discover all their accomplices." For what can I have if, among thirty, two beggarly rogues are produced? Whereas their number will make satisfaction, and I know too there are persons of estate and quality among them. Pray rectify this.

1718, Nov. 26. The same to the same. I never will consent to part with my money; it gives up my honour to the discovery only of two beggarly rogues, and therefore if the condition is to be so narrowed, I reject the publication in the Gazette and will think of other methods, and don't doubt 'em, to come at the deer-killers and pale-breakers without touching on the house burners and those who killed my horses and cow; in those cases the King's pardon is necessary, because man's life is concerned; but in the other, it being a civil action, and the Act of Parliament having found out rewards for those who only kill deer, &c., I will try their power, and I have already been successful enough to encourage my going on in that way only. The King is more concerned than I am, the slaughter and insolence in the Holt being greater than in Farnham Park, and the cursing of the King being the usual word when they meet and begin their villany. I had a letter sent me that they were more than 300 well armed, who scorned all opposition . . . I positively forbid my publication in the Gazette, and desire back that obligation I signed through inadvertency . . . I hope you won't put me to a lawsuit by putting me to a condition because of my hand to it, on my salvation, given without advertency . . . I hoped to have had a royal protection consistent with my honour. I desire you to remit me the obligation I signed.

1718, May 18, Marlborough. Hartford to Pengelly. With regard to some charge on the estate of the late Lord Weymouth, which it seems Lord and Lady Lansdowne were bound to clear off.

Case.—1. Whether a patent granted for erecting and forming a company of comedians or stage players to act in any part of the kingdom be not against law? 2. Whether the patent to Sir R. Steele be not against law? 3. Whether the King may not by the Lord Chamberlain make orders for the government of the players under Steele, notwithstanding the patent? 4. In case of disobedience, whether the Lord Chamberlain may not silence the company?

Draft of an opinion on the above case.

n. d. R. Steele to the Duke of Newcastle. This is a dignified remonstrance on the Duke's action in the matter. Ends, Mr. Cibber is a principal actor, and many familys (as well as my own property) are concerned in his appearance on the stage. I hope your Grace, in the determination of this proceeding, will give way to your own temper, which I know must be diverted from its natural bent when you offer an injury. You have greatness, honour, and high station to act in. My part only is (what I know from long habitude I am capable of) to preserve resolution to struggle with ill usage in a glorious cause.

n. d. Holles. Newcastle to [Pengelly]. The enclosed was by Sir R. Steele's attorney, served last night upon the players. He insists upon his sole power, and has also told them he will prosecute them by law. I beg you will be so good as to consider what further steps are necessary.

17½, January 14, Cockpit. J. Pelham to Pengelly.—The Lord Chamberlain having desired Sir John Stanley and Serjeant Cheshire to meet him at your chambers to-morrow at 6 p.m., to consult about the affair of Drury Lane Playhouse, his Grace has desired me to acquaint you therewith.

n. y. Thursday night. Parker C. (Lord Chancellor) to Pengelly. It is necessary in point of form and decency that you should kiss the King's hand on this occasion. If you will go to-morrow to St. James's when I do, I will carry you into the room at the back-stairs next the King's closet, and go in and get the warrant signed, and then call you in to kiss his Majesty's hand.

1719, April 2. Parker, C., to Pengelly. Sir Thomas Powys being this day given over by his physicians, Parker says he will recommend Pengelly to be King's First Serjeant.

1719, Oct. 1. Battersea. J. Craggs to Sir T. Pengelly.

1719, Nov. 21. R. Walpole to Pengelly.—Has discoursed the Speaker, who thinks that Pengelly need not give himself any trouble, and he (Parker) agrees with the Speaker that the Act of Parliament will never be construed to extend to Pengelly's case.

1721, June 1. Theodore Jansson to Pengelly, in relation to the South Sea affair.

1722, June 8.—Lord Coningsby to Pengelly.

1722, Aug. 3. Lord Falmouth to Pengelly. The imprisonment of the Bishop of Rochester gives him great anxiety; thought him too cunning to have put himself in their power.

1722, Sept. 27. Sir R. Walpole to Pengelly.—Will wait on Pengelly at his chambers in the evening

1722, Oct. 13. H. Walpole to Pengelly. Says that his brother Walpole desire Pengelly to meet some

REV.
T.W. WEBB

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

other members of Parliament at his house to-morrow about 7.

1722, Oct. 15. Lord Coningsby to Pengelly. On account of the inveterate and most infamous treachery of Mr. Saunderson, he asks an interview that evening or the next.

1728, Dec. 28. Shortgrove. Lord Thomond to Pengelly.—Asks his opinion regarding trespassers for game.

1724. A letter of thanks to Sir Thomas Pengelly for having remitted a fee in a case on the will of Francis Pengelly, who had left 200*l.* to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

1725, Aug. 29, Dublin. Thomas Wyndham to Pengelly. I have now gone two circuits here, viz., Munster and North East, and by that means have seen nearly the whole kingdom, it being 200 long miles from Tralee, co. Kerry, to Carrickfergus, co. Antrim. . . . The north parts are very well peopled and cultivated, and, what is better, mostly with Protestants, but among them many Scotch Presbyterians. . . . Among the towns, Lisburn, which belongs to Lord Conway, is the neatest, being new built, and not unlike North Place in miniature. . . . Our new Chancellor makes a good figure behind his purse.

n.y., Monday, one o'clock. R. Walpole to Pengelly. I have just received a certain account from Bath that Lord Chief Baron Gilbert is dead. I hope to-morrow you'll give an opportunity of congratulating his successor.

n.y., Friday. William Pulteney to Pengelly. Congratulates him; hopes that he will live not die Chief Baron.

1727, Feb. 8. Lord Townshend to Pengelly.—The King tells him to send the enclosed to Pengelly, and asks if Pengelly thinks Robert Haynes, who was tried before Pengelly for murder, deserves mercy.

1727, Oct. 21. Samuel Clarke to Pengelly. Her Majesty is sorry she was confined on Saturday last. She hopes to be at leisure to see Pengelly on Saturday next, the 28th, when she will be again at Hounslow, upon a Review.

1729, Sept. 30. Samuel Buckley to Pengelly. I send Layers and Lord Macclesfield's Tryals. Within the title leaf of Layer's I have put a head of Thuanus which I have had engraved at Paris, from an original that was put into my hands when I was there last year by his grandson, the Abbot de Thou.

1729, Nov. 11, King Street, Bloomsbury. Thomas Stackhouse to Pengelly. Sends a book which has cost him some pounds, and contains most of the great arguments on divinity. . . . "I make no doubt but "that your goodness will consider the author (who "has no other means of subsistence than what arises "from his pen) as no unfit object of your known charity "and compassion."

1732, Easter Monday. E. Curll to J. Webb. Says that a person who had the honour of the Chief Baron's acquaintance for 20 years has drawn up some secret passages of his life, and dedicated them to Webb. Says that it shall not be advertised unless Webb approves.

Letters from Geo. Dodington, C. Talbot, and J. Pulteney.

Various licenses to plead, some signed by King George I., and others by the Lords Justices when the King was abroad.

Many printed petitions in the time of the usurpation.—Among them are a petition of Susanna Bastwick, widow of John Bastwick, Dr. of Physick, and her children; and a petition by Humphrey Bazeley, stating that on the 21st of May he was taken, and taken prisoner to the Tower, and cast into a prison lodging, commonly called Nunn's Bower or The Hole.

1665, April 5. Proclamation that bread is to be brought not only to market, but to be stored in churches.

CROMWELL PAPERS.

A folio volume, containing—

1686, March 23. Copy of the will of Oliver Cromwell, of Hursley, in the co. of Southampton. He gives the manor of Marden, alias Morden, and Park of Hursley, and all other lands, &c. in the co. of Southampton, to trustees for the life of his father Richard Cromwell, and afterwards to the trustees for a term of years for the purpose of paying his debts, and subject thereto to the testator's sisters Elizabeth Cromwell and Ann Cromwell as tenants in common in tail, with cross remainders in tail.

A note of all the writings of Oliver Cromwell, Esq., left in the hands of John Knapp, citizen and wax-chandler of London.

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

Mrs. Rachel Pengelly's account: Sept. 1683—April 1709. In 1691 Thomas Pengelly (afterwards the Chief Baron), was clerk with Charles Perkins of London: Mrs. P. paid 100*l.* as a fee to Perkins; in 1691 Thomas P. was still with Perkins.

1698, June 15. Copy bond from Oliver Cromwell, alias Williams, to his sister Ann Cromwell, alias Williams, in the sum of 3,400*l.* to be paid one week after the marriage then agreed on of the said Ann with Thomas Gibson, of Hatton Garden, Doctor of Physick. (It is attested by Elizabeth Cromwell. The marriage took place.)

Letters by and to Mrs. Rachel Pengelly to and by her son Thomas, and by J. Clark to Mrs. Pengelly (J. Clark was Richard Cromwell).

Letters by Elizabeth Cromwell and Dr. Thomas Gibson to Mrs. Pengelly, and by Dr. Gibson to Col. Desbroe about the estates; and by Elizabeth Cromwell to Mr. [Richard] Cromwell and to Col. Desbroe about the estates.

1705, Oct. 25. Acknowledgment by Richard Cromwell that all moneys received of Mrs. Pengelly for his use had been accounted for.

1705. Original letters by Thomas Pengelly to his mother, and to J. Clark, i.e., R. Cromwell.

A large collection of papers on the suit about the estate of Oliver Cromwell, son of Richard Cromwell, and copy of the decree dated 7 Dec. 1706, and other orders.

1710 and 1712. Two general releases under seal by Richard Cromwell to Mrs. Pengelly.

1712, July 12. Mrs. Pengelly writes to Thomas Pengelly, her son, that Richard Cromwell is ill. (He died 9 Aug. 1712, aged 88.)

Some private passages in the life of Sir Thomas Pengelly, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, written by a lady his intimate friend. London: E. Curll in Burghley Street, 8vo., 44 pp., including a copy of his will. Prefixed is a dedication to John Webb.

CIVIL WAR PAPERS.

A folio volume. A paper at the beginning is temp. Jac. I.

1618. A printed black letter proclamation in two sheets, pasted together. Many persons in possession by descent or by their own purchase have manors, &c. really belonging to the King. He has once more renewed his commission to sundry of his Privy Council, &c. authorizing them to treat and compound for confirming the titles. Persons are warned to take advantage of it, and to attend the Commissioners for compounding to confirm their estates.

A sheet about 2 feet long and 18 inches broad. Petition to the Honourable the House of Commons by many of his Majesty's subjects in and about the city of London.—The government of archbishops, bishops, deans, archdeacons, &c. with their courts, &c., in them has proved prejudicial and very dangerous to the church and commonwealth. They pray that the Government with all its dependencies, root and branch, may be abolished, and all laws made in favour thereof be made void, &c., &c.

A particular of manifold evil pressures and grievances caused, practised, or occasioned by the prelatie or their dependants (28 in number):—

1. The subjecting and enslaving of all ministers under them and their authority, and so by degrees exempting of them from the temporal power; whence follows,
2. &c., &c.

28. The exercising of ex-officio oaths, &c., &c. And from hence have followed among others these dangerous consequences:—

1. The general hope and expectation of the Romish party, &c.

2. The discouragement, &c. of all good subjects, &c., &c., whereby wool, the great staple of the kingdom, is become of small value, &c.

3. The great war and commotions happened between his Majesty and his subjects of Scotland, &c.

Counter petition of the inhabitants of London and Westminster in favour of Episcopacy. 3 pp.

Petition to the House of Commons by the parishioners of St. Olave, Southwark. By a true estimate there are about 3,500 families. The living is usually bestowed on one of his Majesty's chaplains. Dr. Thomas Turner, the now incumbent, holds other livings, does not reside, and executes the place by curates, such as are and have been scandalous and superstitious persons. Turner gets about 300*l.* per annum, yet will not permit the parishioners to choose a lecturer, though to be paid by them, and they are often without a sermon on Sunday afternoon for months together. The petitioners pray that the House will deal with Turner and give the parishioners in succession power to choose a lecturer.

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

1642, June 10. Printed broadside petition to the House of Commons. The humble petition and resolution of the captain and soldiers of the trained bands and other inhabitants of the co. of Essex.—They pray restitution of the arms taken out of the county, either out of the store lately arrived from Hull or otherwise. Within three days it was subscribed by 10,000 hands.

1642. Regulated accounts of Lt.-Col. Baynes. Money paid for boots.

List of soldiers' names and dwellings.

1644, Dec. 6. Men mustered on this day.

1643, Feb. 10. Farnham Castle. Moneys due to the soldiers, dragoons, under the command of Jeremie Baines, sergeant-major to Col. George Welve (?), upon warrants in my hand for their money.

1647, Jan. 18. Muster of the officers and soldiers of Capt. John Thornborrow's company of foot, Col. Gervase Benson's regiment.

Duplicates of debentures and assignments of Capt. Thornborrow's company, and a note of Capt. Applegarth's debenture, sold to Mr. Booth.

1641, June 17. Judgment of the Lords against William Smiter and others for pulling down the altar rails at St. Saviour's Southwark.

1641, Sept. 6. Order of the Lords for payment of the workmen employed on the ship St. John the Baptist, late of Lubeck, now of London. Signed "John Browne, Cleric. Parliamentor."

1642, Nov. 4. Wm. Bacon to Captain Being left at Reading on the 2nd of November, he retired to the captain's house at London, and coming to Hyde Park, Sergeant Smith, under Capt. Burns, living at Palace Yard, took his horse and sword and said they should be safe for the captain, and gave him (Bacon) leave to go. Not being well he is unable to do the captain's service, otherwise should be ready to wait on him.

1643, Sept. 18. Sir Richard Onslow to [. . .]. I am informed that some scattering troops of the King's are up and down this county; upon Friday there were some at Guildford, and went from thence to Napp Hill. On Saturday night there went some that had been of Mr. Lee his troop, towards Rygat, and that night the Countess of Nottingham, of Lethered, had her house broke open, and some of the company were troopers. There is one Fox, a glover, of Lethered, that as I am informed kept close a horse that was to be conveyed to Oxford; it is fit he should be examined. One of them that was at Guildford on Friday was one Mr. Christopher Gardiner. I believe there may be some news of him about Croydon at the Lady Heyden's; but I believe that his brother that lives there at Halyng knows not of him, for he has been from Oxford once before in these parts and robbed his own brother of all his horses in the night; but if you carry the enquiry handsomely you may probably find him out. He is there in a dangerous corner of malignants, and may with his company much prejudice the county.

F. Cheynell to Lieut. Col. Baynes, at Farnham. The committee of Chichester present their respects and thanks to you for your care and vigilancy in this busy time, and in particular for your dispatching a party towards Basing for the redeeming of Chichester wagon when the greatest part of our strength was attending the Winchester forces and Sir Edward Ford. It is the desire of the committee [that] the soldiers should have a faire reward for their magnanimous adventure, but the goods, horses, wagon, &c., being not in the enemy's hand for the space of 24 hours, they conceive that the soldiers by the law of arms are not to make their own markets. They therefore entreat you (the soldiers do usually sell cheap) to moderate the business, and they will acknowledge it for a favour. We shall hereafter look more towards your quarters, and if the garrison at Godalming did every Friday send out a party to Chidingfeld or Haslemere to wait there till Saturday in the afternoon I believe your county and ours would be more secure and we should serve one another in love. [Inside is the following letter.

Feb. 27. Dover Castle. Jo. Boyes to Lieut. Col. Baynes. If Clarke, my soldier, may be returned to me and his wife I shall not detain Baddely from his, it being your party that separate man and wife and not mine, being always desirous that prisoners should be exchanged. For the other, my prisoner, the time I gave him has expired, and hope you will not longer detain him.

n.d. F. Cheynell to [J. Baynes]. Upon your letter [. . .] Baldwin is detained, because Stenham had an order to secure him for money which he owes to the Parliament. It is directly proved that Baldwyn and Mathews did inveigle diverse to join with the clubmen. Sir, we keep a guard with dragoons upon Couple Crouch Hill, by Chidingfield, and we will meet your horse upon any design about Haslemere or Bramshot upon sufficient warning. Lippuck (Liphook ?) is a place much frequented by the Cavaliers.

Information, that Sunday, 22 March, some of Waller's company took a horse and put him and 20 cattle in a grass ground, and prevented with drawn swords any-one driving them forth.

1644, Oct. 21. Basingstoke. [Earl of] Manchester to Lieut.-Col. Deynes (sic). I shall desire that what provisions you can possibly spare may be sent hither with all speed, and so on forwards as we march. I pray do not fail in this. And you may [. . .] with Sir W. Waller's commissary for victuals to make supply of that store you shall afford to us. In Sir W. Waller's absence I take upon myself to answer your letter, and I doubt not he shall give you thanks for the care you shall take herein.

n.d. Richard Horton (Norton ?) to Lieut.-Col. Baines. Thanks for information about the horses, which he thinks are stragglers not yet formed into a body. Is so streightened that they cannot send any relief to his neighbours. Wishes he had Baines's two companies.

1645, April 27. Bletchingley. John Stephens to Lieut.-Col. Baynes, at Farnham Castle. Is informed that by the committee's proceeding Capt. Harrison's company doth not stand, and that he, Stephens, is likely to be dismissed. Asks B.'s assistance.

1645, July 5. Cannon Row. (Col.) Jo. Fielder to Baynes. Has solicited the committee for money, and pressed the necessities of the garrison, but can only get fair words; only for the present has got 200*l.*, which he desires may be distributed as may give best content to the soldiers. "I think it fit that the horse and foot who had none last time should have 14 days pay as the rest did, and the overplus, if any, be equally distributed." The committee have sent out warrants for four months contribution . . . I hope there will be something done in rating ere long. If our Hampshire committee could once agree on the way, I shall do the best I can to put it on. There is a report that Taunton is relieved. The clubmen in Dorset are very troublesome, and in great numbers, but now Sir Thomas Fairfax and Massey are joined, they will not be able I hope to do much mischief, though it appears now on which side they are, having in some unlucky skirmish there killed some of our men . . . The letters of the King that were sent up yesterday in Guildhall did give abundant satisfaction to all that heard them concerning the King's intention for this war, and I hope will satisfy all the world when they are published.

1645, May 6. Cannon Row. J. Fielder to Baines at Farnham. Says that he stays to see some course settled for Basing, which he hopes may be to-day or to-morrow. Ask Baines (if he thinks fit) to draw out 100 or 150 musketeers to lie with the horse in Odium (Odiham) that so they may be better able to watch Basing from pressing of men into the house. . . . The King's army is joyned together in a body near Oxford. Sir Thomas Fairfax is commanded back and only to send a party to relieve Taunton, so that it is generally thought many days will not pass without blows.

April 5. Basing Castle. Robert Peake to J. Baines at Farnham. I have promised the exchange of William Smith and John Shawe to a gentleman at this time not present here. So soon as I hear from him I shall return to you. P.S. Your drum hath delivered the money to the prisoners.

1646, Sept. 28. Certificate by Wm. Fothergill and Richard Fothergill. The value of the rectory of Ravenstondale is uncertain. Some years 50*l.*, some 60*l.*, some more, some less; the great charges in the parish of cesses and billeting will make it less than formerly.

1646, Dec. 28. Mallerstang. Rowland Shaw and Thomas Fothergill to Baines. Thanks for his efforts for the services of this church.

1646, Nov. 13. Kendal. Certificate under the hands of Allen Gilpin, Mayor, and six others (the committee for the county of Westmoreland) to the committee for plundered ministers, regarding the vicarage of Kirkby Lonsdale in reference to the petition of Nicocolas (sic) wife of Mr. George Buchanan, from whom the living was sequestered.

The answer of Wm. Cole, Clerk, to Mrs. Buchanan's order, &c. (He says that Mr. and Mrs. B. are malignants.) Mrs. Buchanan's reply to the exceptions of Mr. Cole. Cole's further declaration in answer to the reply.

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

REV.
T. W. WEBB.REV.
T. W. WEBB.

Mrs. B's. reply to the objection by Cole.

Cole's answer; 16 Oct., 1646. (Copia vera.)

Examination of Capt. W. Garnett and others before the committee for sequestrations for Westmoreland by virtue of an order from the committee for plundered ministers, 25th Aug. 1646.

(1656.) To the Parliament of the Commonwealth of England, the petition of J. Baines. At the election for two knights of the shire for Westmoreland Christopher Lister and Baines had voices, and the sheriff was about to return them, when Thomas Burton, Esq., complained that he had not been nominated; whereupon Burton was proposed, and then John Archer, and both had voices. A poll took place: Lister had 165, Baines 348, Burton 381, Archer 178. The sheriff has returned Lister and not Baines. He prays relief. (Indorsed "Copy of petition of J. Baines, delivered Sept. 29 to Mr. Chadwick, chairman of the committee for privileges, 1656.")

Memorandum. Jeremie Baines was sometime a Lieut.-Colonel. He refused a regiment in the new model in 1645, and laid down his command and left no arrears. He joined with the City in opposing the army in 1647; was a promoter of the petition for the personal treaty, &c. for which he was 40 weeks imprisoned with the Lord Mayor, aldermen, &c., whereby he lost his trade, and was almost ruined. He refused to accept any command from the Crown although often tempted. He raised and commanded Col. Thompson's regiment in 1659 against Lambert and the Wallingfordians. He was instrumental in drawing the Irish Brigades from Lambert to the then General Moncke. He was never privy to the practice of the brewers, nor would it have been of advantage to him not using the gallon trade. He was surprised and fined without trial.

1647, June 29, Saturday. Order by the House of Commons to be referred to the Committee for Impeachment, to bring articles against Sir John Geare, Alderman Adams, . . . Lieut.-Col. Baines, and Capt. Jones, &c.

Articles of the committee against Lt.-Col. J. Baines, charged with high treason in using force against the Parliament on the 26th of July. (Four articles; and order to answer.) 1½ pp.

1647, Aug. 13. At the committee to examine the matter of the violence, it was ordered that Baines was to be a prisoner in the Compter until the further pleasure of both Houses was known.

Petition of Baines to the Committee of the Parliament for compositions with delinquents, sitting at Goldsmiths' Hall, in favour of the continuance of the allowance to the parish of Kirkby Lonsdale out of the impropriations sequestered from Sir Bellingham.

1648, May 23. Order signed by Elsyng that Baines be discharged from imprisonment.

1651, May 22. Certificate by Edward Wilson, Ger' vase] Benson, and Joseph Booth, and sealed, that the above charges against the Committee of Parliament of William Atkinson (a foot soldier) are justly allowed by them.

Similar certificates in favour of nine others. The pay was 8d. per diem.

1651. Three forms of assignment of debentures for service in the late wars.

1650, Aug. 18. Edward Baines to his father, Lieut.-Col. Baines at Horsleydown. (A pious letter.)

Another of the same kind to his father and mother.

1652, May 7. Certificate that Arthur Otway of Islington, brewer, did on that day take the engagement signed and sealed by Richard Powell and R. Blomer.

1653, Aug. 11. Order of the committee for compounding, &c., to let Col. Edward Cooke, guardian of John Preston, an infant, have possession of the estates of John Preston, late of Turnies, co. Lancaster, they being satisfied that the father had only an estate for life, and died in 1648.

1654, Oct. 3. List of regiments, officers, and soldiers in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and charges for the fleet. Revenue of the three nations, 1,251,000l.; debts, owing by the Commonwealth, 930,000l.; but on a second demand, Col. Sydenham made them 700,000l.; and other calculations.

1656, first day of the ninth month. Geo. Fox to the Protector and Parliament. (Copy.) To the Protector, and to you who are chosen by these nations to be the Parliament to divide, rule, govern things, this is the word of the Lord God to you: Take heed of acting against Christ where he is manifest . . . &c., &c., 1½ pp. close writing. (It is against their attempt to prevent the Quakers speech.)

Petition to the committee for plundered ministers by Rowland Shaw and Thomas Fothergill, on behalf of the inhabitants of the chapelry of Mollerstang, in the parish of Kirkby Stephen, co. Westmoreland. The chapel is four miles from the parish church; many persons live six miles from the church; the salary to the chapel and to the schoolmaster there is but 6l. 13s. 4d.; the place is destitute of a preaching minister; some part of the impropriated tithes belong to Sir Philip Musgrave and Sir W. Dalston, both delinquents and in sequestration.—They pray allowance out of the sequestration for encouragement of an able godly minister to preach the word to them.

Copy of a letter signed by 19 persons to the Vice-Chancellor [of Oxford or Cambridge] about the living of Kirkby Lonsdale.

Petition to the House of Commons of Gervase Benson. He has been bred up in the civil and ecclesiastical laws of England, and having a right for life to the probation of wills and commission of letters of administration and other ecclesiastical jurisdiction within the deaneries of Kendal Ronsdale and Furnes, part of the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester, and always adhered to Parliament, and suffered imprisonment and losses for so doing, and ever since 12 March, 1643, been in active service for the Parliament as captain or colonel, and spent most of his estate in the Parliament's service, and not having received from the State more than 35l. 15s.; he prays that he may, by the authority of Parliament, be continued in the employment which now he doth officiate; or if not, because the said Deanery lies in the counties of York, Lancaster, and Westmoreland, then that he may have the like office in lieu thereof in the cos. of Westmoreland and Cumberland, or such other county as the House shall think fit.

Copy certificate to the House of Commons by divers of the inhabitants of the barony of Kendal.—A copy of the petition (annexed) of the gentry, ministers, and commonalty of the barony of Kendal, who have subscribed hereto; directed to the knights, citizens, and burgesses of the Commons House of Parliament, subscribed by about 80 persons, was offered to Wm. Middleton, of Middleton Hall, co. Westmoreland, on the 24th of June 1642; he kept it, and said they ought to petition the Parliament to state how they had employed the money which had been charged on and collected from the subjects, for not a penny had been disbursed for the King's use. He blotted out names, and said he would show it to the King at York, and boasted he had done so. The petitioners desire the House to take course to prevent like affronts.

Petition of Sir William Dick, a prisoner in the Upper Bench Prison, without liberty or subsistence, to the High Court of Parliament.—On the 13th of January 1646, 19,018l. 12s. 4d. was and still stands charged in Goldsmiths Hall, payable on the 3rd of February 1647, with interest, out of the fines and compositions with papists and delinquents or sale of their estates, in confirmation of which debt, and in relation thereto, there have passed above 60 ordinances and orders of Parliament, councils, and committees, besides seven reports of committees of Parliament, all approving the said debt and agreeing in one for present payment, and notwithstanding his attendance for seven years, he has received nothing.—He prays relief.

Order for payment of 2,500l. for part of 3,000l. ordered on 11 Sept. 1643 for ammunition, &c. for reducing Donnington Castle.

1644, March 16. Sackford Gouson to Col. Baynes. The committee think it fit that your guards and officers should be as they are, because they will not have your coronell to have any thincke [thing] to say till Salond be past. He hath used all the means that he can, but it will be all in vain, and he is come to think that he doth not care for the castle himself, but he would not have you to supplant him; and to bring his end about the better, he and Sir John Maynard doth produce a letter which he doth shew to as many of our committee as will read it, wherein you should commend Sir John to be a father of the countye, and we to be []; but it is sited of most, and many will not read it, which do vex him very much. The committee hath taken more provision for the soldiers for the present. Sir Richard Anslow [? Onslow] went this night from Kinson, and is to go to-morrow to my Lord General, and then you will hear more concerning the armes.

Original petition to the House of Commons by the gentry, ministers, and commonalty of the co. of Westmoreland who have subscribed hereto. Signed by 43 persons, and 32 are struck out;—to maintain their resolution for a happy and thorough reformation, to punish the authors and fomentors of evil, to maintain the power and privilege of Parliament, &c.

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

Petition of Thomas Threale, gent., to the trustees for the sale of the houses and lands of the late King, Queen, and Prince.—The petitioner being possessed of a lease granted by James I. of marsh lands in Pemsey (Pevensy), co. Sussex, conveyed them to Mr. Awbert in trust for the petitioner. The commissioners appointed for the survey of the manor of Pemsey seized 110*l.* of rents in tenants' hands, thinking it to belong to Awbert, who was a delinquent. The petitioner prays restoration of the rents.

A folio volume of surveys made for the Parliament of lands formerly belonging to King Charles I., his Queen, and the Prince.

(Jeremie Baines, Samuel Cottman, and John Haddock were the commissioners.)

Instructions for a method of drawing up and engrossing surveys. (5 brief sheets.)

THE HOMESTEADS.

1653, April 2. Survey of Braunton, Witheridge, South Molton, Winkley, North Tanton, and Shorwill, co. Devon late part of the possessions of Charles Stuart, late King of England. (3 sheets.)

Sums of divers parcels of land with the appurtenances, commonly called Whitwell in the parish of Frinsby in Dorsetshire, alias in the parish of Fordington co. Dorset, late part, &c. of the Prince of Wales and Duke of Cornwall. (4 sheets.)

Survey of certain lands, &c. in Milverton, co. Somerset. (8 sheets.)

Survey of the manor of Currye Mallet, with, &c. in parish of Currye Mallet, co. Somerset, late &c., P. of Wales and Duke of Cornwall as part of the Duchy. (27 sheets and 1 page.)

Survey of Fuglescombe Farm, parish of Fuglescombe, late part of the Duchy of Cornwall. (10 sheets.)

Survey of certain parcels of land part of the disafforested forest of Roche, alias Newark, commonly called the King's third part, in the parishes of Buckland, Dangate, and Combe St. Nicholas, co. Somerset, late &c. of the King. (3 sheets.)

The manor of Stratton-super-Fosse, co. Somerset.—Presentment by William Long and seven other persons in answer to 16 articles, and also a presentment regarding the copyholders of the manor. (3 sheets signed by Long and the others.)

Survey of the manor Stratton on the Fosse :—Prince of Wales as Duke of Cornwall. (14 sheets.)

1650. Presentment by the jurors of the manor of Widcombe, and of the customs. (4 sheets.)

Survey of the same manor, co. Somerset.—Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall. (9 sheets.)

Survey of the hundred of Portsdown, co. Southampton.—The King. (3 sheets.)

Survey of the hundred of Tichfield, co. Southampton.—The King. (3 sheets.)

1649. The imaginary Manor of Sale, co. Surrey.—The King. (21 sheets, but sheets 14 and 15 are absent.)

Portion of the survey of a manor in Sussex. Survey of a messuage and lands in Kiniston, co. Southampton.—The King. (2 sheets.)

Survey of the woods, &c., called East Princes Woods in the parish of Hermitage, co. Dorset.—Prince of Wales as Duke of Cornwall. (4 sheets.)

Survey of lands called Gascoyne Woods, otherwise Gastone Woods, in the parish of Ifield, co. Sussex.—The King. (2 sheets.)

A particular of the manor of Pevensy, the forest of Ashdown, &c., co. Sussex. (2 pp.)

Survey of Bowood Park in the parish of Calne, co. Wilts.—The King, showing how Talbot claimed part of the demesne called Abbots Wast. (9 sheets.)

Survey of certain meadows near Devizes, called the Castle Ditch.—The King. (3 sheets.)

Survey of the manor of Gwinyoneth Iskerdon alias Isloed Gwinyonedd, co. Cardigan.—The King. (3 sheets.)

Survey of the Manor of Yskocd.—The King. (1 sheet.)

Survey of the manor of Manturogg, co. Monmouth.—The King. (1 sheet.)

Survey of the manor of Redbert, co. Pembroke.—The King. (1 sheet.)

A folio volume.

1649. Oct. 1. A printed order that all stewards, &c. of lands of the King, Queen, or Prince are to continue in office, for the trustees appointed by Act of Parliament for the sale, &c. (4 copies) signed by W. Bosseville, H. Holcroft, Joh. Hunt, W. Scott, Silas Taylor, and W. Lemrush (?).

1649. Oct. 1. Worcester House.—Michael Lea, Secretary to the said trustees, to Jeremy Baines, Esq., and the rest of the surveyors for the county of Sussex and Southampton; announcing the sending of the warrants (the printed forms above).

1650. Oct. 14. M. Lea to the same. The trustees say that a manor cannot be divided into parts, but is to be returned entire, &c.

1649. Oct. 18. W. Webb to the same. Further instructions.

1649. No. 7. Order by seven of the trustees appointing J. Baines, John Libb, and Thomas Bridge. John Haddock, surveyor for the counties of Sussex and Southampton, to be receiver of the manor of Pevensy.

Many original letters to the surveyors from the trustees.

Instructions for the surveyors.

The Divisions allotted to Lieut.-Col. Baynes, John Fiske, Samuel Cottam, and John Haddock.—Estates in the counties of Wilts, Gloucester, Somerset, Monmouth, Cardigan, Brecon, Carmarthen, Pembroke, Dorset, and Southampton. (9 pp.)

Index to a book of precedent. (5 leaves.)

A breviate of the instructions last sent for ingrossing surveys. (2 pp.)

Articles given in charge to the jurors of Pevensy. (2 pp.)

The late King's lands in the manor of Pevensy, rough draft. (1 p.)

Articles to jurors.

1650. Presentment of the homage of Shipton Mallet.

Presentment of the jury of Curry Mallet. (6 leaves.)

Many leaves of rentals of small townships in Westmoreland, &c.

Presentment of the jury of Iskoyd.

Somersetshire. Many leaves of rentals.

Shipton Mallet, many leaves.—Curry Mallet, many leaves.

The Hundred Books. (On the other side of the leaf is a list of those in Hampshire.)

Hampshire (6 leaves).—Wilts (3 pp.)—Somerset (several).—Dorset.—Gloucester.

Court of Survey for the manors of Andover and Enham.

Depositions.

Hundred of Amesbury. Extracts of court leet or Law-day; 1646.

Abbreviate book, 1650, for Meere, part of the Duchy of Cornwall, enrolled 12 Feb. 1627 (several leaves).

Other papers connected with the surveys.

A folio volume.

Letters from S. Bowyer, the printer, to Thomas Penoyre, Esq., of the Moor, in the parish of Clifford, co. Hereford. (They had been educated together in College at Cambridge, and were ever friends.) 1. 1736, Sept. 23.

20 and last, no date.

The 18th is dated 22 December, 1753.

Large extracts from many of them are at vol. 8., p. 533, of Nichols's Literary Anecdotes.

A folio volume.

Original deeds and papers (17th and 18th centuries) of the Rudhale family.

A folio volume.

The letters and papers contained in this volume were bequeathed to the late Reverend John Webb, father of the present possessor, by his friend, Mrs. Mary Westfaling, of Rudhall, near Ross, the last descendant and heiress of the Westfaling family. She married Thomas Brereton, Esq., only child of the Rev. Charles Brereton, prebendary of the cathedral of Gloucester, who on the marriage took the name of Westfaling. They died without issue.

The first series contains some curious old letters of the Brereton family, chiefly written by Mr. Charles Brereton, of Gloucester, in the early part of the last century. He appears to have been an attorney and bishop's secretary there, and connected with many respectable families in the county; nearly all are to his wife.

The second series consists of 29 letters by Mrs. Westfaling, of Rudhall, nearly all addressed to her aunt Westfaling, widow of Herbert Westfaling. Her maiden name was Scudamore, she being sister of John Scudamore, of Kentchurch Court, co. Hereford. They were written on a tour through Germany and Italy with her husband, Mr. Westfaling, and a residence in several

REV.
T. W. WEBB.

REV.
T.W. WEBB.

parts of the Continent in 1793, 1794, and 1795. Their contents are interesting.

The third series is in two sets of letters, written during foreign travel by Thomas Brereton Westfaling, Esq., mostly addressed to his father, the Rev. Charles Brereton, prebendary of Gloucester. Some are cut and garbled, as the father once had thoughts of publishing them. The first set were written on a tour before his marriage (May, 1788—March, 1790); all but one are to his father. They present an able and graphic description of the condition of France during that period of the revolution, the writer having been personally acquainted with Lafayette and other eminent actors in that important change. The second set of this series was written during a journey after his marriage, and runs parallel with the letters of the second series in the volume by Mrs. Westfaling, which it elucidates and renders more complete. This set begins in August, 1793, and ends in April, 1795.

North Monmouthshire papers (loose).

1641, March 14. Nathaniel Walter to the petty constables of the township of Lantiloe Gressenny, co. Montmouth. By virtue of a warrant to him from the right worshipful Wm. Morgan and Nicholas Kemeys, Kts. and 6 others (named), he bids them in the King's name to assess and levy on the inhabitants of the township 6s. 8d., and pay it to him on the last of the month. It was for the wages of W. Harries, of Usk, master of the House of Correction for the county.

1642, Oct. 24. To the Earl of Manchester, Lord Privy Seal, and rest of the Council of the Honourable Court of Whitehall. A certificate that in a cause of Wm. Jones and Christian his wife v. Roger Evans and others, the certifiers say that there was a commission for the examination of witnesses, and that they being for the defendants, gave 14 days' notice to the plaintiff that they intended to execute the commission on the 7th of October at the house of Robert Parry, in the parish of St. Michael Crucorney, co. Monmouth; but for the 7th the army, or the part thereof that came to Hereford, was reported or feared to be about to march towards Bergavenny, and St. Michael Crucorney lying in the way between Hereford and Bergavenny, they thought they might be hindered, and they gave a new notice to the plaintiff, &c., &c.

1642, March 28. Nathaniel Walter, by virtue of a warrant from the last quarter sessions held at Usk, before Sir Nicholas Kemeys, &c., justices of the peace, directs the petty constables of Lantillio to assess and levy on the tenants and inhabitants and occupants of lands, &c. within the township, 37s. 6d., being composition money for the provision of Stirkes for his Majesty's household, 25s. towards the re-edifying and repair of the bridge of Newport, and 8s. 4d. towards the re-edifying and repair of the bridge of Kemeys Comander.

Draft of an opinion that Walter's warrant was not legal.

1644, 20 Car. I. Monmouth quarter sessions, before Richard Herbert and others, justices of the peace.—An order to remedy unfair taxation, easing of some and overcharging others. Three or four indifferent persons are to be chosen to rate.

1644, Feb. Lantillio Gressenny township. A schedule of the rates of the lands and livings in the said township, made on oath. 4 columns. Total 1,862l. 3s.

1644, March 20. Draft of the certificate of the most part of the inhabitants to affirm the parish rate made upon oath.

1653, July 22 (Copy.) W. Jones and Roger Oates to the petty constables of Penrose. On a complaint that the last six months' assessments were unfairly made, they, in the name of the keepers of the liberties of England, command that the persons undernamed be warned to indifferently rate the sum of 55l. 5s. 3d., being the proportionable part of the six months' assessment falling on that parish, according to the pound rate of 18d. ob. qu. the £, according to the sum of 714l. 4s., being the whole value per annum of the survey of the parish: and gather in and pay half before the 30th of the month, and the other half before the last of October.

1654, July 10. Charles Watkins, chief constable, to the petty constables of Penrose. Warrant for rating the contribution on Penrose for the army and navy.

Folio, paper, 18th century.—Eighty-nine pages are filled with neatly written copies of cases submitted to Serjeant Pengelly, and of his opinions thereon, in 1719 and later years. Sixteen pages and a half are occupied with a case (in 1722) whether the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury or their Curate of the Church of St. Thomas had the right to appoint the clerk of that parish, and with the opinions thereon of Serjeant Pengelly, Nathaniel Lloyd, and Hum. Henchman, who were all in favour of the dean and chapter.—Another case in regarding the office of organist to the parish church of St. Andrew, Holborn. The case (which is not dated) states that about 27 years ago an organ was erected in the church, but no organist was appointed for many years afterwards. About the year 1715, Dr. Sacheverell being then rector, and the organ being unpaid for, went about the parish and raised money sufficient to pay the debt. At that time one Mr. Purcell played the said organ without being elected or appointed organist or without having any fixed salary, and he died about 10 years since; on whose death Dr. Sacheverell summoned and procured a meeting of the parishioners, where he recommended them to do what they thought proper as to the choice of an organist and his salary; and the parishioners then agreed to allow 50l. per ann. There were seven candidates, and a day was appointed for the election; but the rector and a select vestry alone chose one Mr. Greene, who officiated for some months and resigned, when the select vestry chose Mr. Heysham, who died a month ago.

REV.
T.W. WEBB.

The volume seems to have been originally intended for another purpose: the first page having in large writing "De præcipuis Græcæ Linguae Idiotismis, sive Grammatica Græca. Authore Paulo Bainesio. Londinis."

Quarto, paper, latter part of 17th century, pp. 3-167. Pages 3-36 are occupied by a play in five acts, partly in Greek, partly in Latin, and partly in English. The first leaf of the play is absent, so the title of the play is not discoverable, and the first scene is wanting. The characters are Tolmodes, Philander, Pompianus, Philogaster, Syricus, Commodus, Eclectus, Lætus, Philocomus, and Narcissus. The 2nd scene of act 1 begins by Tolmodes lamenting (in Latin) the recent death of Marcus (the Roman Emperor); and the last scene of the 5th act begins with Eclectus bringing in Narcissus who had murdered Commodus. The copy is evidently not complete; the commencements of the acts and scenes after act 1, scene 4, are not marked until act 5, scene 3, which is the last; and all the speeches between page 13 and page 31 are left unappropriated. It is probable that the play was composed by school boys and acted before the masters: the Epilogue being as follows:—

Thanks for your patience (honoured friends)
We've bin to day too bold, wee, and must runne
The hazard of your liking, don't arraigne
Us in your censure tho' you've heard us maime
And murder Greeke to day, pray spare the Grammer
And us that can as Children yet but stammer
Parents can like such half-word Rhetorick and you
To learning are parents and patrons too.
Wee may live learned lives in time, meanwhiles
Till that be, let us live upon your smiles.

Pp. 37, 38. Greek lines on Pharoah, King of Egypt, parodying the beginning of the Iliad.

Pp. 45-76. Regulæ Juris Civilis (212).

Pp. 91-95. Extracts from Selden regarding the Knights of the Garter, and concerning St. George.

Pp. 96-167. An Epitome of Dean Prideaux's Introduction for reading Ecclesiasticall Historie.

A list, containing the names of such persons within the countie of Westmoreland as are to appeare at the Mannor of Yorke on Tuesday, 1 Nov. 1632, to make their compositions for knighthood, or give their final answere to his Majesties Comicioners in that behalf authorized. There are 25 places and 32 persons. At Mauldismeaburne Richard and Randall Washington are named. This list, in two long columns, is signed "Wentworth," and attested by Thos. Tyldesley.

Folio, 5 pp., indorsed "Britannia & Rawleigh, 1375," This is a poem beginning, Brit.—Ah! Rawleigh when thy breath thou did'st resign.

To trembling James would I had yielded mine.
Ends, And this kind secret for reward shall give

Noe poycous tyrants on the earth shall live.

1667, Feb. 2⁴/₁₃, Rotterdam. Edward Haswall to his father [in law], Justice Jeremiah Beanes, at Hausydowne, in Toulis parish near Southwark.—He and some other on board Ro. Shorten's ship were taken prisoners by a Dutch caper of 32 guns on the 20th of Jany. Mr. Henry Rankin, a merchant of Rotterdam, got him out of prison by giving a bond for safe custody until an exchange was made; and placed him at a pension for his diet and schooling to learn French.

REV.
T.W. WEBB.

1665. Aug. 4. An order signed by the Duke of Albemarle, directing the officer from time to time commanding the Guards at White-hall to permit such persons as should bring that order to land such quantity of beer as they should bring to Scotland Yard for the Duke's use, without any disturbance in their bringing it to the Cockpit.

1714. Aug. 29. Court at Plombiers.—Copy of proclamation of King James III. on the occasion of the accession of King George I. 4 pp., fol.

Guiscard's Ghost to Lord B—ke. (22 lines.)

Hail! Noble Lord, my knife had erred indeed
If it had made thy loyal side to bleed.

End, Then draw thy fatal steel for one more blow,
What thou agreedst to when in France will show.

A list of the Masters in Chancery, when admitted, and whom they succeeded. Eleven Masters, beginning with Robert Holford, who succeeded Sir Robert Lynedon, 1712, and ending with Mark Thurston, who succeeded John Borrett in 1724.

Folio, 27 pp. Copy of the Report by the Commissioners appointed by virtue of an Act of Parliament of 1 Geo. 1. "An Act for appointing Commissioners to enquire of the estates of certain traytors and of popish recusants, and of estates given to superstitious uses " in order to raise money out of them severally to the " use of the publick." In the course of the report 29 documents are referred to as being in an appendix; but the appendix is not copied. The commissioners point out the deficiencies and abuses of the sequestrations. They report that the yearly value of the real estates whereof they had already perfected the survey was 29,694*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* sterling; the value of the planting and woods thereon was 24,753*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* sterling. The value of real estates discovered to them was 214*l.* per ann. The personal estates were for the most part carry'd off and concealed before commissioners could enter upon the execution of their trust.

Regina v. John Hamilton, Brief (one sheet) for the defendant, who was indicted for aiding and assisting James, Duke of Hamilton and Brandon, in the murder of Charles, Lord Mohun, and converse, in assisting the said Lord Mohun in the murder of the sd. Duke. (The back of this sheet and part of another sheet are covered with laborious notes for the defence by Serjeant Pengelly.)

Regina v. Macartney. Macartney was indicted for assisting in the duel.—Proofs for the defence. Two brief sheets. In the margins are names of witnesses, and opposite their names are the facts to which they can depose. Following these is this note "Then it's " necessary you prove your peacefull disposition by " the many reconciliations you have made."

The back of one of these sheets and the whole of another sheet and part of a third sheet are occupied with laborious notes by Serjeant Pengelly.

1293, 5 Non.Dec. Deed between the Abbat and Convent of St. Peter of Gloucester of the one part and Master Henry of Lankarvan, clerk, of the other part. The said religious have delivered to the said Master Henry the manor of Tregref, with the tenth (decima), and other appurtenances, except the fruits, oxen, animals, instruments, and other store, then being there, viz., to farm, from the feast of St. Nicholas, 1293, for 9 years, for 12 pounds of silver of good and lawful money, to be paid within the quinzain of the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist at Gloucester yearly, without deduction: first payment to be made in quinzain of the Nativity of J. the B., 1294.—Henry agrees to support the houses, closes, mill, and all possessions of the manor in a good state during his term, and at the end restore to the said religious: and he will bear all ordinary burden of decimation and other if any, according to the quantity of the decima which now runs. He will not grant or assign the term of the manor to any other person, nor give liberty to any of the lessors' men there, nor demise freely any of the lands held of them servilely, nor make new customs, without the express consent of the said religious. He promises to pay the rent, and agrees that if it be in arrear for a month they may re-enter and Henry will pay, and make good to the religious their damages by the delay, to be assessed by the cellarer on — without local pother sine strepitu judiciali. Henry is not to will it away unless the legatee be a capable and sufficient person, and do give the same security as the said Henry has done; and if anything be done contrary thereto to be void. And Henry, according to the land he finds sown, and the value of the ploughing and winter sowing, will satisfy the said religious in this year, and in the end of the last year will give up as much as he now receives. If the lessors fail in their warranty they will restore to him what he paid them beforehand [i.e., the fine or gersuma for the lease]. Witnesses, Henry de Markeros, David de Beere, David Basset, Richard de Herbord, Clement Pistil, and others. —And the words decima et aliis were interlined before the sealing. (Seal gone.)

Endorsed Treigof—Non indiget registrum.

17 Edw. II. Saturday after the feast of St. Bartholomew, Llandaff. Indenture between the Abbot and Convent of the Monastery of St. Peter of Gloucester of the one part and Richard de Haltone, Canon of the church of Llandaff and farmer of their church of Lankarvan and manor of Treigof for the term of five years of the other part. The term began on the feast of St. Peter ad vincula, 17 Edw. II. The indenture is an agreement concerning the goods being on the said manor and delivered to the said Richard, which goods, or their value below expressed, the said Richard is to deliver to the said religious at the end of the term, viz.: —2 plaustra ad blad. ferro ligata precii, 30*s.*; 2 corpora pro carectis, pr. 8*d.*; 2 carucas cum ferramentis et 2 carucas sine ferris, pr. earundem cum ferris 4*s.*; 2 hercias cum canill. ferreis pr. 2*s.* 2*d.*, de quibus defecerunt tunc 6 canille; 6 catenas pro carucis, pr. 3*s.* 4*d.*; 9 juga, pr. 18*d.*; 3 chipp. pro carucis, pr. 1*½d.*; maeremium pro 2 axibus, pr. 4*d.*; 1 lignum pro feno tractando in pratis, pr. 2*d.*; 22 strak. pro plaustris et 8 stockbend, ad idem cum veteri ferro ad idem in precio, 10*s.*, in toto; item, 2 cordas ad plaustra, pr. 6*d.*; 5 furcas ad blude, pr. 4*d.*; 1 ollam eream, pr. 4*s.*; 1 cineram veterem cum rota, pr. 2*d.*; 1 lintheamen ad ventandum, pr. 12*d.*; 1 ventilabrum ligneum, pr. 12*d.*; 2 veteres saccos, pr. 3*d.*; item, 2 sellas ad carectas, pr. 4*d.*; 1 par tractium cum 1 colerio et 2 hamonès ad idem in precio 4*d.*; 2 furcas ad fimum, pr. 3*d.*; 2 vangas ferratas, pr. 2*d.*; 1 tribulum, pr. ob.; 1 picóis, pr. 2*d.*; 4 flagella, pr. 1*d.*; item, 2 falcas ad sarclandum pr. ob.; 2 ligna pro fimis extrahendis cum 2 bott., pr. 12*d.*; 2 bñs, pr. 4*d.*; 4 cunas unde 1 sine fundo, pr. 6*d.*; 2 cistas unde 1 sine coopertorio, pr. 2*s.* 6*d.*; 1 coffram veterem, 1*d.*; 1 alvèn, pr. 3*d.*; 2 paria hak, pr. 1*d.*; 3 scalas in precio, 17*d.*; 1 sportam straminis, pr. 2*d.*; 2 mensas cum trestallis, pr. 4*d.*; item, 2 tabulas pro themone plastr. faciendo, pr. 12*d.*; 3 formulas 1*½d.*; 1 lectum stantem, pr. 3*d.*; item, 1 mullon veteris feni de 6 plaustratis in precio, 6*s.*, et 8 plaustrat feni in pratis in precio, 4*s.*; item, in molendino 2 petras molares in precio, 3*s.*; 1 bonam cistam, pr. 3*s.*, et 1 veterem cistam sine fundo et coopertorio, pr. 2*d.*; 2 Bill, pr. 4*d.*, et 2 mensuras pro teolonio capiundo, pr. 1*½d.*; item, in campo de fratrurn seminato [blank] acras et de aven seminat. [blank] acras, et de fabis et pisis [blank] acras, et de terra warectata et rebinata [blank] acras. For the return of the goods or their value and delivery of the acres Richard binds himself and his heirs and executors and goods, moveable and immoveable, in whose hands soever they come. In witness whereof, as well the Abbot and Convent as the said Richard, to the writing indented have set their seals alternately. (Seal gone.) Indorsed, "Non indiget registrum."

9 Edw. II. Sunday after the Annunciation. Little Sumburne. Robert Talemache, of Upsumburne, and Juliana his wife, give to their son Hugh a messuage and all that arable land formerly of John Denekan, in the vill. of Little Sumburne, which they had by the feoffment of Robert Burbache; if Hugh die without heir or assigns, then it is to revert to the said Robert and Juliana or their heirs or assigns. Witnesses—Robert Burbache, Richard Fromond, Andrew Payn, John de Otreburn, Roger Godeman, Robert Wadyngham, John Russel.

15 Edw. II. day of the Cathedrization of St. Peter. Hugh Talemache gives to his son Robert a messuage and 32 acres of land in Little Sumburne, which Richard Gilibird formerly held in the sail vill., paying 1 rose in lieu of all service, except royal service, i.e., 1*d.*, when scutage runs. Witnesses—Ralph Payn, Walter de Lecford, Nicholas de Marisco, Walter de Marisco, John le Walays, Richard de Homesy, John le Franke, Roger de Wadingham, Ralph le Pustur, and others.

19 Edw. II. Friday before Annunciation. Little Sumburn. Robert Talemache gives to Juliana, his wife, and Hugh, his son, a messuage and 32 acres in the vill. of Little Sumburn. To hold of the grantor and his heirs, to them and the heirs of Hugh after the death of Juliana. Rent, a rose (&c., &c., as in the last). Witnesses, Richard Fromond, Robert Burbache, Andrew Payn, John de Otreburn, Roger Godeman, Robert Wadyngham, John Russel, and others.

REV.
T.W. WEBB.

REV.
T.W. WEBB.

19 Edw. II. Sunday after Annunciation. Robert Talemache and Juliana his wife give to Hugh, son of the said Robert Talemache, of Opsumburne, in fee, a messuage, &c. (same as in 9 Edw. II.), rendering to the chief lord what is due. Witnesses as before; part of one seal, and all of the others.

34 Edw. III. Friday after Feast of St. Bartholomew. Sombourn. Hugh Talemache, of Upsombourne, gives to Alice Pars, his servant, all his lands and tenements in Little Sombourne which he had of the gift of Robert Talemache his father, and Juliana his wife, his mother, to hold to the said Alice (Pars) for her life, with remainder to the grantor's son, William, in tail, with remainder to Matilda, Alice, and Clarice, the grantor's daughters in fee, by the service of a rose. Witnesses, John Talemache, John Fromond, John Russel, chaplain, Walter Bouklond, John Gormails, &c. Red seal, a chevron between three boars heads; the chevron is charged with some things now undefined.

1394. Indenture between John, bishop of Hereford, and John the Dean and the Chapter of Hereford of the one part, and the religious men the Abbot and Convent of the monastery of St. Peter of Gloucester, and the Prior and Convent of the Priory of St. Guthlac-without-the-Walls dependent on the said monastery of the other part. The religious give to the Bishop and Dean and Chapter 15s., viz., to the Bishop for the time being 5s.; to the Dean for the time being 6s. 8d.; to the Chapter 3s. 4d.; to be paid at every vacancy of the Abbacy of Gloucester, nomine indemnitis vacacione appropriationis sine consolidacionis vicarie ecclesie S. Petri, Hereford, by way of indemnity, for the vacancy of the appropriation or consolidation of the vicarage of the Church of St. Peter of Hereford, made by Papal authority to the said prior and convent and their said priory, as long as the said religious, the prior and convent shall peaceably obtain the said vicarage, &c., &c. Dated at London, 7 May, as to the sealing by the bishop and dean and Chapter House; Hereford, 20 May as to the sealing by the chapter of Hereford; Chapter House, Gloucester, 15 May, as to sealing by the religious, the abbot, and convent; Chapter House, Hereford, 18 May, as to the prior and convent.

13th century. Robert, son of Richard of Parva Hyda, releases to Dom. Reginald, Abbat of St. Peter of Gloucester, and the convent, all his right in the rents which Robert le Smeye de la Bathe and William, son of John of Hyda Monachorum, yearly were wont to pay him, and in all lands which the abbat and convent hold of his fee. Witnesses, Dom. Henry de Herford and Nicholas le Archer, Kts.; Philip de Stupeltone, Thomas de Wyke, William de Sholle, Reginald de Calnhulle, Roger de Pipebrook and others. Round green seal.

A 120. volume contains extracts from various books on arithmetic, war, theology, and other matters. At the beginning are the following notes: "Jeremie Baines and Katherine Otway were married at Tichburn in Hampshire by Mr. George Otway, Aug. 17, 1639.—Wife delivered of a still-born son. Nov. 1640.—Rachell Baines, our daughter, born 25 January 1642, Saturday, baptised by Mr. Hardys at Horsiedowne.—Baines he beareth, sable, a shin bone in pale surmounted upon another in cross argent.—Jeremie Baines, son, born 11 January 1643.—Paul Baines, 4 Nov. 1645, at Horsiedown.—Deborah, born 12 Feb. 1647.—Katherine, born 23 January 1649.—John, born August 17, 1651, and others."—At the end of the volume are Copy of the Solemn League and Covenant, beginning—1. That we shall sincerely, really, and constantly thro' the grace of God, &c. (6 articles).—Notes about the siege of Reading in April and May: the rendezvous, watchwords, &c. (Jeremie Baines served under Sir William Waller; was at the siege of Reading in the first winter of the war; there are some memoranda of the names of the officers on the nightly watch, with the watchword, and notes of several transactions at that time. He was at the fight of Cropredy Bridge where the King gained a victory over Sir William Waller, and there Baines was made prisoner; afterwards he was in garrison at Farnham Castle, and quarrelled with the governor. See Journal of the House of Commons for after events. His daughter married Thomas Pengelly, a merchant, who traded to the East; their son Thomas was a serjeant-at-law, and ultimately Chief Baron of the Exchequer).

A 4to volume and a 120. volume found in 1840 behind the panel of a room in Ross market-house.

The 4to. volume contains extracts from books and Latin phrases turned into English.

The 120. volume (17th century) contains copies of poems by various authors; R. Corbett, W. L., Ben. Johnson, J. Torrent, W. Stronde, R. H., T. Cary, R. Gomersal, G. M., W. S. [not W. Shakspeare]. These initials W.S. are to the well known epitaph—

She first deceas'd, he after liv'd and try'd
To live without her, lik'd it not, and dy'd.

Folio. Mercurius Latinus autore Agricola Candido generoso. Nos. 1-31. (A collection of printed newspapers in Latin) March 15, 1743, Oct. 11, 1746. Each number is in one large folio leaf in three columns. They were printed by Jo. Hart, Poppins Alley, Fleet Street.

No. 1. Also sold by G. Woodfall. King's Arms, Charing Cross.

No. 6. Also sold by J. Newbery, the Bible and Sun, St. Paul's Church Yard.

No. 14. Printed by Jo. Faden.

No. 25. States the price to be 3d.

In the 31st the editor takes leave and advertises a translation of Homer into Latin verse.

A broadside, 1665. Cure for the Plague.

A larger broadside; containing prayers, recipes, and woodcuts. Printed by F. Clifton in the Old Bailey.

Thomas Otway's letters.

Many letters of Thomas Otway from the time of the Usurpation to 1687. (The last of the collection is signed Thomas Ossory.) He was a minister, and was imprisoned in Ilchester gaol for complicity in the insurrection in the west. Here is a signed petition by him (after 13 months imprisonment) to Oliver Cromwell, praying release or else a furlough for 3 months, when he would go to Barbadoes,—and copy order by Oliver in Feb. 1655, telling Capt. Hatsell to defer transporting Otway until he (Oliver) had spoken with Desborow.

A petition by Otway is dated April 1, 1656, and there is a reference, dated May 14, 1656, by N. Bacon to Desborow. On it there is a note by Desborow (dated June 24, 1656,) that Otway was among the cavalry at the rising at Salisbury, but left them at Sherborne, and was secured, and that he was a worthy man, and if his spirit were turned right, he might be serviceable.—His Highness referreth the petition to Major-General Desborow.

One of these letters, dated April 1, says "The general went out of Torbay, near Dartmouth, with the whole fleet on Thursday last, and on Saturday our ship weighed anchor. Last Lord's day but one a French fleet of 32 sail was driven in hither by foul weather, they were bound for Newfoundland; and on Friday following 27 Dutch vessels bound for France; both went home last Lord's day. On Saturday morning the Fauleon friggot brought in a small man-of-war of Ostend, of 6 guns, and about 30 men. Two women Quakers went lately from this town, and last week shipped themselves from Dartmouth to be landed in some part of Spain, they having a message as they say, from God to be delivered to the King of Spain."

Letters to Thomas Pengelly, 1650-1674.

A large collection from various relations and other persons connected with him in business.

Thomas Pengelly (father of the Serjeant) was a merchant who adventured to the east and west, and there are letters to him from Aleppo, Smyrna, Virginia, Barbadoes, and other places. In 1660-1665 Thomas Pengelly was at Norwich, in 1666 at London and Exeter, in 1667 at Exeter, in 1671-4 at London. There are letters from Geo. Harper, his brother-in-law, at Yarmouth, from P.'s uncle at Crediton and Exeter, from Joseph Snow, many from his brother (in law), Samuel Davis (in 1666 Davis says that the sickness was bad at Norwich), from his cousin Simon Trobridge and his cousin Thomas Brooking, jr.

A 12mo. volume, containing the household accounts of Mrs. Pengelly, wife of Thomas Pengelly the merchant, from 1693 to 1708. There are entries of money paid for Mr. Clark, and of his repayments from time to time.—A loose memorandum in it states, "The picture and coat of mail of O. Cromwell were given to Mrs. Pengelly and her son by Richard Cromwell, son of Oliver, who boarded with her, and the Clerk of Chief Baron Pengelly had them with other effects of C. B. Pengelly, and his clerk left them to his niece, the present owner of them." [This clerk was Sergeant Webb, ancestor of the present possessor of the MSS.]

Sergeant Pengelly's papers.

Professional papers, printed cases, tracts (two in MS. are on the Derwentwater case).—Original will of John

REV.
T.W. WEBB.

R.
W. WELLS

Fell, Bishop of Oxford, dated 20 April 1658, with seal of arms. H. Revised by Dorothy Hutton, D.D., Provost of Queens, Hen. South, D.D., Canon of Christchurch, Ox. Ind. W. Hall, M.A. Master of University College, in the chapel of the cloister in Northmore, Stanlake Street, and elsewhere in the co. of Oxford, to be settled on the maintenance of poor canons in the cathedral church of Christ Church, Oxford, of the foundation of Henry VIII. He gives to the chancellor, master, and scholars of the University of Oxford all his punches, matrices, moulds, letters, and printing furniture, to be employed in printing. He directs that the Patent of Printing, granted by King Charles II. to Sir Leoline Jenkins, Sir J. Williamson, and himself, shall be made over to Dr. T. Halton, H. Smith, and O. Walker to carry on the affairs of printing. He gives to them all his stock of books at the theatre in order to pay his debts, &c. He gives to his nephews, Sam. Benson, Henry Jones, and John Benson, his study of books. Gives to his brother, Wm. Fell, his sisters Dorothy Washburn and Catherine Benson, his household goods, &c. To his godson Browne Willis. 20l. Other legacies. Appoints his brother Wm. Fell and his sisters Dorothy and Catherine to be executors.

A printed sheet, half a page, Jan. 20, 1728-9. Proposals by Jacob Tonson for completing the subscription to a new edition of Rymer's Fœdera, in 17 vols. folio, of which 15 are already printed, and the remaining two will be finished before the 25th of March next. He says that there were only 200 copies, of which 150 are already subscribed, and the price of each set of the other 50 was 50 guineas.

1668. Printed forms filled up of assurances of ships, by Thos. Pengelly (the father), underwritten by brokers. 7 pp. folio. The travels of the holy patriarchs, prophets, judges, kings, our Saviour Christ and his Apostles, as they were related in the Old and New Testaments, and collected out of the works of Henry Bunting and done into English by R.B.

A large page. Calendar of the names and charges of the prisoners in Dorchester gaol; the assizes, 12th March 1729.

Printed case of the Duke of Marlborough about the building of Blenheim, to be heard in H. L., 5 May, 1721.

Printed case, Duchess of Marlborough v. Wm. Guidott, Esq., to be heard 5 March 1727.

Pengelly's brief and other papers in Archdeacon Bridleak v. Bishop of Winchester, for a mandamus to the bishop to restore the archdeacon to his fellowship in St. Mary's College, Winton.

pp. 163-254, folio. Pages of a book of depositions before a justice of the peace in or near London, beginning of last century.

1655, Feb. 13. Attested copy (on parchment) of Oliver Cromwell's warrant to Charles Fleetwood, Deputy of Ireland, requiring him to depute and authorise Major W. Parker to put in execution in the counties of Hertford and Oxford, and Packer and Col. Geo. Fleetwood in the co. of Bucks, during Charles Fleetwood's absence from those places, all the powers, &c., granted by O. Cromwell's commission, dated 11 Oct. last, appointing him (C. Fleetwood) to be Major-General and Commander-in-chief of the militia, &c., in the counties of Hertford, Oxford, and Bucks, and also Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridge, and the Isle of Ely.

Barbadoes.—Copy of a will in Chancery. In Canc. Received and filed 22 July 1710, Tho. Hide, Dep. Reg.—To the honourable Geo. Lillingston, Esq., President of H. M. Council and Commander-in-chief of this and all other the Caribbee Islands to windward to Guadalupe, Chancellor of the same.—Thomas Edmunds, of the parish of St. Michael in Barbadoes v. William Johnston of the same place. The suit was about wages to seamen of the ship Frances and Elizabeth.

1714. Instructions to Robert Lowther, Esq., Captain General and Governor in Chief of Barbadoes, St. Lucia, Dominica, St. Vincent, and the rest of the Caribbee Islands lying to windward of Guadalupe in America. St. James's day of in the 1st year of our reign. Approved in Council 23 Feb. 1714. (26 pp. folio, 117 items.)

The King's commission to Robert Lowther. 25 Dec. 1 Geo. I. 13 brief sheets.

1673, Oct. 22. Deed between William Crabb of Bristol, Esq., Alderman, Richard Crabb of Bristol, Merchant, Robert Forde and two others, surviving feoffees of the lands, &c. of the Company of Weavers of Bristol, and James Shute and William Dowling, Masters of the said Company of the one part and Edward Hitchins and Jerom Chirchey, Masters of the Company of Clothworkers of Bristol, and the clerk and certain others, clothworkers, feoffees of the lands of the said clothworkers of the other part; whereby it was agreed that the linen cloth packs should thereafter, yearly, as long as the fair at St. Paul's tide had continuance within the parish of Temple, be sold during the said fair in the Clothworkers' Hall, and in the precincts thereof, &c. Signatures and seals.

Calendar of prisoners, 1728, 1729, &c.

Briefs and papers in the case of the Earl of Macclesfield.

Several MS. and printed lists of the royal navy in the early part of the reign of Charles II.

1698, Nov. 6. At a parliament of the Inner Temple Thomas Pengelly was admitted for a life to a hamber one pair of stairs on the right hand in the first taircase in Fig Tree Court.

(1726), 13 Geo. I, Oct. 20. Patent creating Pengelly Chief Baron of the Exchequer.

1719, Jan. 20. Draft of an opinion signed T. P[engelly] and J. C.—They have read the patent to Sir Richard Steele, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for the sole management of the theatre for his life, and for three years after, and also the agreement between Sir R. Steele and Robert Wilkes, Colley Cibber, and Barton Booth, for admitting them to the management, and for the subjecting the comedians there to the rules of a majority of four persons, and a license from the King, countersigned by the late Duke of Shrewsbury, Lord Chamberlain, given to Steele, Wilkes, Cibber, and Thomas Doggett (before the granting of the said Letters Patent) for intrusting them with the management of her Majesty's company of comedians under the direction of the chamberlain; and being informed of misbehaviour they think that the patents (with the extraordinary powers which they think are not legal), do not prevent the King from giving license to others to have the management of a company of comedians for his Majesty's service under the controul of the Chamberlain, and they advise a revocation of the license to Steele and the others, and the serving Wilkes, Cibber, and Booth with a copy and leaving another copy for Steele, after which the Lord Chamberlain may by order silence the several persons, and bid them forbear acting; and then his Majesty may give a new license, and if any of the present managers disobey the Lord Chamberlain may give such orders as he shall think fit.

1719, Jan. 23. Draft revocation of a license dated the 18 October 1714 to Steele, Wilkes, Cibber, Doggett and Booth, to constitute a company of comedians, with power to act and represent comedies and tragedies, subject to rules by the Lord Chamberlain.

1719, Jan. 25. (Draft.) The Lord Chamberlain discharges the managers and comedians from further acting, and orders them to forbear acting until further license and order.

12mo. (58 pp. and table). To Sir John Scudamore, Kt., one of His Majesty's Deputy Lieutenants for the shire of Hereford. An address to Sir John Scudamore in three leaves, and 14 kinds of prayers, for soldiers in various circumstances. (Temp. Car. I.)

Ten books of disbursements of the Scudamores' at Holm Lacy, 1635-1643.

Large book of accounts of the same, 1667 and 1668.

A 4to. book of accounts for St. Olave's Free Grammar School. Jer. Baines, Warden. The first entry is dated 25 March 1665. Seven leaves are occupied by receipts by Baines from various persons for their salaries. At the other end are Baines's accounts of receipts and payments for the year.

1677, May 25. Certificate by Michael Tewley, parish clerk of Shoreditch, that Thomas, the son of Thomas Pengelly was born on the 16th day of May 1675 as by the parish register doth appear.

Copy of petition of Thomas Pengelly of the Inner Temple to Lord Chancellor Cowper:—

Thomas Gibson in Med. Deor et al. Quer, Ricum Cromwell arm. et al. Def.—He (Pengelly) has been served with a copy of the writ of execution of an order thereunto annexed directed to the petitioner and others by name, although he is not party in the cause, nor acted therein except as counsel for the Defendant, nor is anywhere mentioned in the order or affidavits on which the same is founded, nor does anything by the order to be obeyed relate to the petitioner. Says it is irregular and only to give countenance to many untrue reports dispersed by the plaintiffs against the petitioner, by making use of the name and authority of the Chancellor in this instance; thinks himself obliged to vindicate the character of the profession. Prays the Chancellor to give such directions as shall be just.

REV.
T.W. WELLS

REV.
N. WEBB.

1727, March 16. Copy of will of Sir Tho. Pengelly, Chief Baron of the Exchequer. Legacies to his kinsman Thomas Aldeway and his cousin Joseph Trobridge, of Exeter. Legacy to the Duke of Somerset of 100 pieces of broad or old gold of the value of 25s. each, to buy a piece of plate or a ring. There are three codicils, dated respectively the 7th of March 1728, the 30th of October 1729 and the 17th of December 1729.

Two printed invitations to accompany the corpse of Pengelly from his chamber in Serjeants Inn to the Temple Church on the 29 of April 1730 at 8 p.m. One is to Serjeant Baynes and the other to Serjeant Chipple.

I beg leave to express my thanks to Mr. Webb for his very kind hospitalities at his vicarage.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE COUNTY OF SOMERSET,
IN THE KEEPING OF THE LORD LIEUTENANT AND CUSTOS ROTULORUM OF THE SHIRE.

COUNTY OF SOMERSET.

The Somersetshire Manuscripts consist of two separate collections of writings; the one of which is preserved in the muniment rooms of the Shire Hall at Taunton, whilst the other is kept in a muniment room attached to the offices, at Wells, of the Clerk of the Peace for the County. The Taunton collection is by far the larger. It is also by far the richer in old documents. But the collection at Wells is from one point of view the more valuable and important, as it comprises the long series of awards, made in pursuance of Acts of Parliament for Enclosures and works of Drainage, which afford the original titles of so large a proportion of the real estate of the county of Somerset.

The general characteristics and principal difference of the two collections may be indicated by remarking that, whilst most of the documents which no one is likely to require for the execution of any matter of ordinary business have been stowed away in the wire cages of the Taunton muniment rooms, the Clerk of the Peace has been instructed to keep near to his hand at Wells all such records, as he may at any moment be called upon to examine for the furtherance of public justice or the legal rights of private persons.

The general condition of both collections is satisfactory. At Wells the documents are without exception free from defacement; and though some of the writings at Taunton have suffered in past time from rough handling and damp, they are secure from further harm in their present quarters, which are effectively contrived for the preservation of literary material.

The number of the Taunton writings may be rudely computed at 200,000 or 300,000, and the difficulty of getting a general view of the body and principal ingredients of so large a quantity of manuscripts was not lessened by the presence of an index, or by any adequate attempts to classify the multifarious records and arrange them in chronological order. To ascertain the extent of the period covered by the Sessions Rolls, I was compelled to examine cursorily each parcel of writings; and to make a sufficiently comprehensive and exact catalogue of the various kinds of documents, which had accumulated slowly in the course of centuries, it was necessary to open packets and examine files of papers that were covered with the dust of years, and were found to be absolutely worthless for historical purposes. This mass of literary material and literary refuse may, however, be divided into "Records and Documents," and "Plans, Drawings, and Reference Books relating to public works," and the following catalogues may be relied upon as an adequate exhibition of the MSS. pertaining to each division.

I. MANUSCRIPTS preserved in the muniment rooms of the Shire Hall, Taunton, co. Somerset.

(a.) Records and Documents.

Files of Alehouse Returns.

Book of Amerciaments at Taunton and Ivelchester Sessions for the years 1745 to 1749.

Files of Bastardy Returns.

Rolls of the Enrolments at Sessions of the estates of Roman Catholics, in pursuance of the statute of George the First.

Papers relating to proceedings touching the distemper in Horned Cattle, for the years 1748 to 1757.

Files of Census Returns.

Three Letter Books of the Clerk of the Peace of co. Somerset, for the years 1810, 1812, 1819.

One hundred and one Commissions of the Peace for the county of Somerset:—viz., nineteen commissions that passed the great seal of James the First in one or another of the following years of his reign, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22; thirty-five commissions that passed the great seal of Charles the First in one or another of the following years of his reign, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 19; five commissions that passed the great seal during the commonwealth in the years of our Lord 1654, 1655, 1656, 1657, 1659; twenty-eight commissions that passed the great seal of Charles the Second in one or another of the following years of his reign, 13, 14, 15, 16, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36; two commissions issued in the 1st and 3rd years of James the Second; five commissions that passed the great seal of William and Mary in the 1st, 2nd, or 3rd year of their reign; and seven commissions issued in one or another of the years of our Lord 1814, 1821, 1824, 1828, 1830, 1837.

Files of Counsel's Opinions on matters touching the co. of Somerset.

Resolutions passed at a County Meeting with respect to the state of the country in the year 1793.

Rolls of Qualifications of Deputy-Lieutenants and Officers (commissioned) of the militia.

Copies of the Registers of the Electors of the Eastern Division of co. Somerset from 1846 to 1855 inclusive; in eighteen folio volumes.—Also twenty-eight packages of List of Voters for the same division, from 1850 to 1864 inclusive.

Estreat Rolls.

Orders of Justices of the Peace respecting gaoler's Fees. Lists and Tables of the Fees of Justices' clerks.

Papers (for the years 1787 to 1794) relating to Hemp and Flax Bounties for the encouragement of the growth of Hemp and Flax in England, "in pursuance of the Act of Parliament passed in the 26th year of His present Majesty's reign." Consisting chiefly of growers' claims and receipts for bounty money, these papers are very numerous.

Papers relating to Friendly Societies.

List of Game Certificates.

Packages of Rules and Regulations (printed) for the instruction of Gaolers and others of the county of Somerset; ordered to be printed by the Justices of the Peace of the said shire, assembled in General Sessions.

Collections of letters and other correspondence between Justices of the Peace and Gaolers of Somerset.

The Ilchester Gaol Diary: A record of daily occurrences in the said gaol for the years 1816 to 1821. Kept by the gaoler.

Gaol Hospital Ledger: The surgeon's Register of prisoners suffering from sickness in one of the county prisons. Covering the term from 5 July to 11 October 1821; and signed on the last sheet by the medical officer, James Bryan.

File of convictions under the Hawkers and Pedlars' Act.

Highway Books for the year 1777.

Account Book of successive treasurers of the Hospitals of the Western Division of co. Somerset.

Files of accounts, orders, and correspondence of and about Insolvent Debtors.

Three 'Insolvent Debtors' Minute Books'; for the years 1817, 1818, 1819, 1822.

Jury Lists for the years 1858, 1859, 1864.

Roll of Qualifications of Justices of the Peace for the year 1756.

Eight Minute Books of the proceedings of Justices of the Peace at General Sessions; for the years 1810, 1811, 1815-1817, 1818-1823, 1820-1821, 1821-1825, 1822, 1826-1829.

Four process books for the years 1733, 1766, 1812-1819, 1832-1840.

Judgement Book of Justices of the Peace at General Quarter Sessions, for the years 1832 to 1837.

Land Tax Assessments for parishes of Somersetshire, covering a period of more than one hundred years.

Papers and Correspondence relating to Lunatic Asylums.

Papers relating to the Constabulary of Somerset; with Police Returns for the years 1863 to 1865.

Files of contracts for the maintenance of Prisoners.

Papers relating to County Rates.

Poors' Rate Returns, from Easter 1800 to Easter 1817, by Walcot parish, Bath, and county of Somerset.

Fourteen Recognizance Books; for the years 1720, 1753-1762, 1810-1816, 1817-1818, 1818-1821, 1821-1825, 1825-1828, 1828-1830, 1832-1835, 1835-1836, 1836-1838, 1838-1840, 1840-1842, 1842-1845. Also a Register of Recognizances entered into by persons to whom licenses have been granted to keep ale-houses for the year 1832.

Files of parochial returns touching Roads.

COUNTY OF SOMERSET.

Thirty Rolls of Feudal Deeds, numbered from 1 to 30; the first roll beginning with deeds of 28 Henry VIII. and roll No. 30, closing with deeds executed in the year 1741. The series is complete, and all the thirty rolls are in perfect preservation.

Files of certificates of taking the oath of allegiance, made in the years 1673 to 1722, inclusive.

Sessions' Rolls, and Files of original documents including presentments, indictments, convictions, lists of prisoners, juries, &c., &c., of proceedings at General Sessions, held at Bath, Bruton, Ivelchester, Taunton or Wells, from the last year of Queen Elizabeth to the year 1854, beginning in the year 1602, this series of writings is by far the most numerous and bulky division of the records. The earlier files—i.e. those of the seventeenth century and the greater part of the eighteenth century—have been rolled up and tied with string, each roll being docketed; but the later files are packed flat. A few injured and fragmentary rolls excepted, these writings are in a good state of preservation. There are also some bundles and imperfect rolls of documents relating to proceedings at Sessions in the concluding years of the 16th century. The number of documents in these files may be roughly computed at a hundred thousand.

Accumulations of Reports by and Correspondence with the County Surveyor.

River Tone Accounts. Numerous, and covering a long period of time.

Files of Transportation Contracts.

Five Traverse Books; for the years 1695–1709, 1786–1789, 1791–1795, 1800–1809, 1817.

Treasurers' Accounts of receipts and disbursements.

Large accumulations of Treasurers' Vouchers.

Papers relating to Vaccination.

Lists of Voters for the years 1846–50.

Files of Magistrates' Wine-Accounts.

A large mass of miscellaneous MSS. comprising old account-books, diaries, unimportant memoranda, and unimportant letters, which it would be difficult and useless, if not impossible, to classify.

Special mention should also be made of two patents of grants by James the First (put away in the larger muniment-room with the Commissions of Peace), and a bundle of Petitions and Certificates, that afford the following matters:—

1. 27 October, 17 James I. In consideration of an immediate payment of five pounds and a yearly rent of ten shillings; Licence in survivorship to Henry Sheppard, of Dunyatt, co. Somerset, innkeeper, his wife Katherine Sheppard, and his son Thomas Sheppard, "to keepe an inne or comon hostelry in the house of the said Henry Sheppard in Dunniett aforesaid," wherein he now dwelleth, and to contynue for his "signe there the signe of the Lion;" the grantee being bound "to keepe the assizes of bread, beare, ale, and measures," and to "observe and keepe the prices" "of horsmeate by our justices of assize set downe." Portions of the great seal still adhere to this worn and much defaced patent.

(2.) 31 May, 18 James I.—Similar patent under the great seal of licence in survivorship to William Bennett, of Wiveliscombe, co. Somerset, clothier, Robert Bennett, his son, and Marie Bennett and Joane Bennett, his daughters, to keep an inne at the house of the said William Bennett, in Wiveliscombe, having "the king's armes" for their signe there.

(3.) A.D. 1638. The Petition and Certificate of twenty-four inhabitants of Glastonbury to the Justices of Peace of co. Somerset, assembled in Sessions at Ivelchester. Setting forth that "the said Christofer Cockerell (borne at Ellham, in Kent) for the skill hee "had attayned in sowing, dressing, and ordering of "flax and flax-seed was sent for by divers gentlemen "together with some parts, and there hath continued "about XIIIteen yeares, making his skille knowne in "the place to the great benefit and reliefe of the "poore sort of people of all degrees by setting them "on worke. That hee hath had too lamentable losses "in beinge brought into this partes, thome by fire, "thome by water. That by fire at . . . in the countie "of . . . happened on the XIIIth day of December "1638, betwixt the . . . by which hee lost his "seed, hemp and linnen yarne, and all his goodes "and howshold stuff whatsoever to the valew of "200 li. at the least. After which great losse the "said Christofer Cockerell, being sent for neare to " . . . by Mr W . . . of Sir Thomas " . . . which Mr . . . had drayned manie hun- "dred acres of ground there, to make proofe of his "skille in that place. And therobie incouraged in the "yeare 1632, having bestowed neer xli. in rentinge "of ground, and divers other charges therto incident, "besides x li. trulie laid out and paid to people in "Glaston for weeding and due ordering thereof, by "meanes of a fierce and longe raine, that happened on "the XVIth of August last, the floudes so increased, "that the flax and seed were soe spoiled and carried "away, that very little was saved, and that little nothing "worthie. Soe this last losse by water (though not of "so much valew as that by fire), is nevertheless very "heavie and grievous unto him and his, hee beinge "now well stricken in yeares and vndone, havinge "nothings left. — His request unto your Worship "and ours with and for him (in regard hee intendeth "to prosecute his former course of trade) is that you "wilbe pleased to graunt his letters patent to collect "and receive the charitable devotion of all well-disposed "people in some partes of this kingdome towards his "reliefe. — At the foot of this petition appears an order for the Treasurer of the Hospitals of the Eastern Division of co. Somerset to give the sum of three pounds to the petitioner; the said order being signed by W. Portman, Ralph Hopton, Tho. Windham, Rich. Cole, B. Symes, and John Harington.

(4.) 10 January 1649. The Petition of Thomas Wyldes, of Bedminster, co. Somerset, to the Justices of Peace assembled in General Sessions at Wells. Representing that the petitioner "hath faithfully to the "hazard of his life and fortunes served the Parliament "under several commaundes, and by some incendiaries "Prince Rupert employ'd, had a considerable estate "burnt downe at Baddminster aforesayd. . . . "Whereby for himselfe, wife, and families better sub- "sistence, he was inforced to make one howse of his an "howse for entertainment of travellers;" and praying that his license so to employ his house may be confirmed unto him.

(5.) April 1649. The Petition of Thomas Brooke, John Pawly, Giles Fay, and Steven King to the Justices of Peace assembled at Ivelchester Sessions. "Showing "that in the tyme of the late greate contagion in "Yevell, wherein manie hundred soules died, and the "sicknes growing so daungerous that noe living would "vndertake to bury the dead infected bodies; and "therevpon Gregory Reinoldes, being then constable "of the hundred, and Ambrose Seward, constable of "the borough of Yevell, perswaded your petitioners to "vndertake the carrying and burying of the deade "bodies, and promised to paie to eache of your peti- "tioners xliiij. for euerie daie so longe as they would "vndertake that daungerous service, which your peti- "tioners did truly and dilligently performe by the space "of eleven weekes to the greate hazard of their "lives and of losse of erning other better daily wages "abroade, which they were abridged of a long tyme "together." The said Gregory Reinoldes having died without paying the wages due from him to them in respect of their said service, the petitioners beg for relief and compensation.

(6.) 24 December 1649. Certificate and Passport for thirty days, signed by Thomas Johnson, bailiff of Great Yarmouth, co. Norfolk, for two mariners, Richard Tawson and Hugh Standlie, natives of Chidlic, co. Devon, who were on their way out of Holland, when they were seized by a man of war and stript of all their possessions, and are now begging their way back to Devonshire.

(7.) 19 October 1650. Certificate addressed to Justices of Peace of co. Somerset, assembled in General Sessions:—That Anne Martyn, of Wellington, co. Somerset, widdowe, being in the howse of the Honorable Alexander Popham with her family, at the siege thereof by the late Kinges forces, susteyned greate losses of goodes and cattile, viz., seven kine, one heifer, tenne young cattile, three calves, five colts, a mare and a horse, ready sheepe five beds with their furniture, bacon, butter, and cheese, wool, linnen, corne of all sorts, pewee, brass, and other moveable goodes valewed in all att the summe of  hundred and threescore and fiftene poundes, besides the summe of twenty-and-two poundes in ready money; and that her eldest sonne was killed in the said howse by the said late kynges forces. Signed,—Rich. Bouell, Alexander Popham, Edw. Popham, John Pyne.

(8.) 18 July 1652. The Petition of the Grand Jury at Taunton Sessions to the Justices of the Peace.—Wee the Grand Jury sworne for the service of the common wealth for the county of Somersett att Taunton Sessions, this XIIIth day of July in the yeare of oure Lord 1652, Doe humblio conceave the Castle hall near Taunton to bee the fittest place time out of mind made use of for that service.—Doetherefore humbly desire the Honourable Justices of the Bench that they would bee pleased to moue the supreme power of this common wealth, to witt the parliament and judges of assizes and others, that the assizes and sessions holden for the future may bee continued at the place aforesaid; the place and towne of Taunton adiacent being more fitt (for entertainment of all suche as shall then attend the service for the commonwealth), then anie place within the county:—and we shall pray for your Worshippes prosperity. Signed,—Sam. Whetcombe, William Hodges, William Capper, Tho. Ledgingham, Roger Howe, Xphor Hurly, Ames Bicknell, Ambross Moore, Jno. Crabb, John Varley, John Bridge, James Whetham, Marc Edwards, Josh. Chaple, John Lewes, Richard Chaplin, Jno. Cooper, Roger Gale.

COUNTY OF
SOMERSET.

(9.) 6 October 1652. Taunton Burrow. These are to certify all whom it may concerne that Richard Hillard of Taunton, a forest cordwayn, during the severall sieges thereof was a faithfull soldier vnder the command of Captain Thomas Trowbridge, in the regiment of Colonell Robert Blake; and that by his constant lyeing on the lynes thereof day and night through wett and cold he got such a swelling in his leggs, which has sithence broken forth into divers woundes incurable, as that thereby he is fallen into a very sad condition and disabled thereby to gett maintenance for himselfe, his wife, and three small children. In testimony whereof wee haue heervnto sett oure hands this sixth daye of October 1652. Signed,—Thoms Trowbridge, Capt., Phillip Lissant, George Lissant, William Gill.

(10.) 1652. Petition and certificate of Henry Fowler, of the parish of Chard, co. Somerset, seargeweaver, to the Custos Rotulorum and Justices of the Peace assembled at Taunton:—Certifying that the petitioner has served the Parliament for the ten years last past (six of the said years being spent by him in military service in Colonel Sir Hardress Waller's regiment), and that he was dangerously wounded in the thigh "at the reducing of the Ile of Jersey," which injury causes him still to be unable to maintain himself; and praying for an order for the petitioner's maintenance out of the Treasury.

(11.) 1653. To the right Worshipfull the Knights Justices of the Peace assembled at Taunton, the petition of John Tucker, minister of Chedilborough, humbly sheweth, Whereas there is an Acte made by this present Parliament, for the better keeping and observing the Lord's day, and whereas the Lord's day is greatly prophaned at Westchinocke, within the parrish aforesaide, vsually euery Lord's day, by sports and pastimes prohibited, in regard that the officers of that place, who are concerned in the said acte, do not only neglect, but altogether refuse to do their duty in that behalfe, whereby God is highly dishonoured, and the young people in licentiousness encouraged.

The premises considered, your petitioner doth humbly desier that your course may be taken with the officers abouesaid, according to the said Acte, or to referre the examining the premisses to Collonell Pyne and Maior Bonner, esquire, or to deale any other way with them as to your wisdoms shall thinke meet, that God may no longer be dishonoured in that kind, nor youth in prophanenes encouraged, so your petitioner shalbe bound to pray.

Those that neglected their duties last year, 1652, were—

Robert Patten, Churchwarden, Thomas Patten, Tythingman.

Those that neglect now—

Thomas Patten, Churchwarden, John Mudford, Overseer.

(12.) 29 July 1654. An address, signed by fifty-six inhabitants of Taunton, to the Justices of the Peace of co. Somerset, assembled at the said town in General Sessions, representing that assizes and sessions have been held in the castle of Taunton time out of mind, and that the inhabitants of Taunton "have byn at a great charge for the repayreinge of the Castle Hall for the purposes aforesaid, beinge a thinge well known to all the country, having had first lawe and liberty to doe it, being oure owne (as wee conceive) upon such an account."

(13.) 26 September 1657. Magistrate's certificate of the civil marriage of James Morris, of Camerton, co. Somerset, husbandman, and Mary Broderibe, of the same parish, widow, in accordance with the recent Act of Parliament for the performance of marriage.

COUNTY OF
SOMERSET.

(14.) 29 September 1654.—The certificate of Bartholomew Safford, minister of Bicknoller, co. Somerset (addressed to the Justices of the Peace assembled in general sessions at Bridgewater), with respect to the repentance, submission, and conformity of John Pippon, late of Bicknoller, aforesaid, who is profoundly penitent for his "misdemeanours touching the sacrament of the Lord's Supper," and is ready "to confesse his fault before the publike congregation in the church of Bicknoller, if he may be admitted therevnto."

(15.) 1654. The petition of certain inhabitants of "Taunton James," co. Somerset, to the Justices of the Peace for the said co., assembled at Bridgewater.

Sheweth.—That your petitioners had adventured theire lives and estates in the late warres in the service of the Parliament, and for the reformation of those many abuses which reigned in this nacioun, and by the blessing of God have seen some frautes of theire paines and expenses, to the joy of theire spiritts, that honest and faithfull men have beene put into office, and that offenders are something afraid to comitt sinne with that boldnesse as formerly. Notwithstanding which your petitioners, fearing a reincease of vices within the said parishe, by the remissness or vnfitnesse of some officers now chosen amongst vs, to witt, George Palmer, who is now chosen constable, being by profession a baker, and hath alsoe an inne in oure said parishe, both which, as we humbly conceive, are professions very subject to abuses, and therefore the professions not soe fitt an instrument for punishing others who in all probability wilbe guiltly himselfe.

Soe therefore most humbly desire this honourable court to take the premisses into consideration, as to referre the chusing of a fitt and able man to bee constable for this yeare in the saide parishe of Taunton James to the two next justices of the peace, that soe we may haue the comfort of our peace by seeing evill doers punished.—Signed by, John Glanvill, minister of Taunton, James Francis Lovell, and Thomas Gardner, churchwardens, and eighteen other inhabitants of the parish.

(16.) 1 February 1660. The petition of George Burrows to the Justices of the Peace of co. Somerset, assembled in general sessions. Certifying that the petitioner is unable to maintain himself and his five small children, in consequences of injuries done him by a cannon bullet, which took away his right hand in the year 1644, when, being an apprentice in Taunton, he "was enforced by his master to goe out vpon the lyne, "where he received the shott; and praying for relief." Endorsed with an order that the petitioner be allowed three pounds a-year out of the treasury of maimed soldiers; the order being signed by John Hippiisley, John Warre, Benjamin Mason, Jo. Tynte, Jo. Buckland, Robt. Hunt.

(17.) 7 March 1660. Certificate (addressed to the Justices of the Peace assembled in general sessions at Ivelchester) that George Knight, of Taunton, co. Somerset, carpenter, was for eighteen months an ensign in Captain Henry Winter's foot-company, in the regiment of Sir John Stawell, knt.; and that "att the storminge "and takinge the Wyndmill Fort of Bristoll, scythence "called the Royal Fort (for the late Kinge Charles "deceased, of ever famous memory) the said George, "Knight was very much wounded;" with a recommendation that he should be allowed his former pension. Signed,—Will. Bassett, Will. Wyndham, Hugh Wyndham, Fran. Luttrell, John Warre, Jo. Tynte, John Cox, and John Willes.—Also, the said George Knight's petition for the renewal of his pension; with an order (in consideration of the petitioner's loyalty to the late King Charles) at the foot of the prayer for payment of the allowance; the order being signed by John Turberville, Robert Hunt, William Bull, George Horner, Jo. Hippiisley, Edw. Courte.

(18.) 13 October 1727. Petition (with the common seal of the Portreeve and Burgesses of the borough of Chard, co. Somerset, attached thereto) of certain poor sufferers from a great fire in the said borough to the Justices of the Peace of the said county, assembled at General Quarter Sessions held at Taunton, 3 October 1727.—Humbly sheweth that on Fryday the Twentieth day of August last past about eleven of the clock in the forenoon there happened a great and terrable fire which broke out in the dwelling-house of your petitioner, Francis Colman, within the said borough or Chard, which by reason of the dryness of the season (there haveing been no raine for some moneths before) did in the space of foure houres burn down, consume, and utterly destroy the Grammar School, being a large pile of building belonging to the said borough, and also the dwelling houses of your petitioners . . . their household goods and furniture. The petitioners represent that their losses amount to some forty or hundred pounds, and pray that the justices will appoint some person or persons to collect money for their relief from benevolent persons.

COUNTY OF
SOMERSET.COUNTY
SOMERS

b. Plans, Drawings, and Reference Books relating to public works.

September 1794.	Plan of the Canal from Axmouth to the river Tone.	January 1819.	Plan of road from West Town to Backwell Road.
" "	" Navigation from Ilchester to Langport.	September 1820.	Plans and Reference Book of Wells Turnpike Roads.
September 1794.	Plan of the Canal from Uphill to Taunton.	September 1821.	Plan of Butleigh Road.
" "	" " from the River Tone to Uphill.	" "	Plans of Bridgewater Roads.
September 1795.	Plan and Reference Book of Canal from the river Avon to Bridgewater and Taunton.	" "	" and Reference Book of Minehead Turnpike Roads.
" "	Plan of Canal from Avon to Taunton.	September 1822.	Plan of a proposed Road in Langport.
" "	" Kennet and Avon Canal.	" "	" Road from Seavington St. Michael to Seavington St. Mary.
" "	Duplicate of the same plan.	" "	" and Reference Book of a Canal to Beer Harbour.
" "	Plan of the Dorset and Somerset Canal.	September 1823.	Plan and Reference Book of a proposed road from Durweston Bridge, Dorset, to Sherborne Turnpike Road.
" "	" Grand Western Canal, from Taunton to Topsham.	" "	" " Bridgewater Canal.
" "	List of the owners and occupiers of lands on the line of the proposed Grand Western Canal, from Topsham, in the county of Devon, to Taunton, in the county of Somerset.	" "	" " Wiveliscombe Turnpike.
January 1796.	Plan and Reference Book of the Bristol and Western Canal.	" "	Somerton Turnpike. Plan of a new Road.
September 1797.	Plan of the Kennet and Avon Canal.	November 1824.	Plans and Reference Books of the Ship Canal in divers parishes, co. Somerset and Devon.
August 1800.	Plan of the Staple Road.	" "	Plans of Misterton, Haselbury, and Merriott Roads.
September 1801.	" " river Axe.	" "	Plan of Seaton and Bridgewater Canal.
" "	" " proposed variations of the Somerset Coal Canal.	" "	" Bridgewater Floating Harbour.
September 1802.	Plan of Bristol Harbour.	" "	" Road from Wiveliscombe to Bish Mill.
" "	" and Reference Book of the same plan of harbour.	" "	" for supplying Bridgewater with water.
September 1806.	Plan of Bath Common.	November 1825.	Plans and Reference Books of a proposed Ship Canal.
" "	Duplicate of the same drawing	" "	" of a proposed Ship Canal from Buckland Farm to Taunton.
" "	Plan of the Bath River Navigation.	" "	Plan of road from Picks Hill to Puckerswell Lane Road.
September 1807.	Plan of Bristol bridge and road.	October 1826.	Plan of Road across King's Sedgemoor and other moors.
" "	" of Wilton Gaol.	November "	" and Reference Book of a proposed road from Bath to Melkham.
September 1809.	Plan of road from Pitcombe to Jack White's Gibbet.	" "	" Road from Ashcott to Rowberrow.
" "	" of Navigable Drain from Langport to Bridgewater.	November 1827.	Plans and Reference Books of proposed additions to the Chard Turnpikes.
September 1810.	Plan of Bridgewater and Seaton Canal.	" "	" of proposed variations of the Bruton Turnpikes.
" "	" of Turnpike Road from Warminster to Bath.	" "	" " Minehead Turnpikes.
" "	" and Reference Book of Bristol and Taunton Canal.	" "	" " Ilminster Turnpikes.
September 1811.	Plan of Bristol and Taunton Canal.	" "	" " Bath Turnpikes.
" "	" Common Sewers.	" "	Honiton and Ilminster Turnpikes.
" "	" Turnpike Road from Warminster to Bath.	" "	Plans of proposed Roads in cos. Devon and Dorset.
" "	" Bridgewater Floating Harbour.	" "	Plan of Roads from Allington, co. Dorset, to Clapton.
September 1812.	Duplicate of the same plan.	November 1828.	Plans of proposed deviations of Chard Turnpike Roads.
" "	Plan of road from Chard to Honiton.	" "	Plans of proposed deviations of Bath Turnpike Roads.
" "	Drawing of water-courses at Frome.	" "	Duplicates of the same plans.
September 1813.	Plan of road from Chard to Rawridge Hill, Devon.	November 1829.	Plan of Bridgewater Floating Harbour.
" "	" West Harptree Turnpike Road.	" "	Map and Plan of a proposed Railway from Bath to Bristol.
March 1814.	Plan of Rathford Bridge.	" "	" " proposed Turnpike Road from North Curry to Fivehead and Lyng.
September "	" Road from Ilminster to Tiverton.	" "	" " present and proposed lines of Turnpike Road from Crewkerne to the River Parret.
" "	Plans of Roads from Taunton.	" "	" " Buckland Dinham Turnpike.
September 1815.	Duplicate of the same plans.	" "	" proposed roads or approaches to a bridge intended to be erected over the river Avon from Clifton Down, Gloucester, to the opposite side of the river.
" "	Plan of Mudford Bridge.
" "	" Road at Compton Pouncefort.
" "	" the Assize Hall at Taunton.
September 1816.	Plans of proposed alterations of roads from Taunton.
January 1817.	Plan of Shepton Mallett House of Correction.
May "	" a proposed road from Exeter to Taunton.
September "	Plans and Reference Books of Wells Turnpike Roads.
" "	Map and Plan of Wincanton Turnpike.
September 1818.	Plans and Reference Books of Bristol Turnpike roads.
" "	Plan of Bridgewater Floating Harbour.

COUNTY OF SOMERSET.						COUNTY OF SOMERSET.
	November	1829.	Map of roads in cos. Somerset, Devon, Dorset, and also of certain new lines of road proposed to be made within the same cos., and to be added to the Chard Turnpike.	December	1836.	Duplicate of the same plan and section.
	"	"	Map of a proposed deviation of the Turnpike Road from Putson Barn to Beam Bridge.	September	1837.	Plan and Reference Book of a proposed deviation of the Great Western Railway in the parishes of Bathampton and Bathford.
	"	"	Plan of a proposed line of pipes, &c. for supplying the Hospital or Infirmary at Bath with water from the present baths in that city.	"	"	Plan, Section, and Reference of proposed deviations of the Great Western Railway.
	"	"	" and Reference Book of the Turnpike Road from Crewkerne to Haslebury Plucknett, with the proposed deviations therefrom.	"	"	Do. Do.
	November	1830.	Plan of a new line of road in the Langport, Somerton, and Castle Cary Turnpikes.	November	"	Plan of the proposed Bristol and Exeter Railway.
	"	"	Map of proposed new roads and alterations of old routes of the Bruton Turnpike Road.	November	1838.	Plan for a new line of Turnpike Road, to avoid the White Ball Hill, in the parish of Culmstock, co. Devon.
	November	1831.	Plans of proposed new ways for the Ilminster Turnpike Roads.	"	"	Plans for altering Turnpike Roads leading into Taunton.
	"	"	" " for the Black Dog Turnpike Roads.	"	"	Plans of proposed amendments and extensions of Turnpike Roads in the parishes of Up. Ottery and Yacombe, co. Devon, and the parish of Otterford, co. Somerset.
	"	"	" " " " " " Chard Turnpike Roads.	"	"	Plan of a proposed Breakwater in the parishes of Portbury and Portishead.
	November	1832.	Black Dog Turnpike Road: Plan of a proposed new route to and from Bath.	"	"	" of the Parrett Navigation.
	"	"	Map of proposed alterations of the Taunton Turnpike Roads at White Ball Hill and Rock Hill.	December	"	" and Reference Book of the Parrett Navigation.
	"	"	Plan of a proposed Canal from the Bridgewater and Taunton Canal, near Creech Saint Michael, to Chard.	"	"	Plans for altering and improving Turnpike Roads in divers parishes of Somersetshire.
	"	"	Additional Plan of Brislington House.	May	1839.	Plan and Sections of the Parrett Navigation.
	November	1833.	Section Plan and Reference Book of the Great Western Railway.	November	"	Plan and Reference Book of proposed new Turnpike Roads in co. Somerset, Dorset, and Devon.
	"	"	Great Western Railway: Plan and sections of intended railways from London to Reading, and from Bath to Bristol.	"	"	Duplicate of the Plan.
	November	1834.	Map and Reference Book of the proposed Turnpike Road from Fivehead Hill to North Petherton.	"	"	Plan and Reference Book of proposed improvements in the Port of Bristol.
	"	"	Plan and Reference Book of the proposed Basing and Bath Railway.	"	"	Duplicate of the same plan.
	November	1835.	Plans of two proposed new Roads, to form branch roads of the Honiton and Ilminster Turnpike Roads.	"	"	Plan and Reference Book of proposed Landing Pier near Portishead, Bristol Channel.
	"	"	Plans and Sections of the proposed Langport West Moor Canal.	"	"	" " " " Portishead Pier and its approaches.
	November	1836.	Plan of proposed diversions and variations of the Great West Railway.	"	"	Plan of the proposed Turnpike Road near Worle, to be called the Weston-super-Mare Road.
	"	"	Do. Do.	"	"	Plan of the Port of Bristol with proposed improvements.
	"	"	Do. Do.	"	"	Taunton Turnpike Roads. Plans of proposed alterations in the parishes of Milverton, Norton-Fitzwarren, Wellington, and Sampford Arundell.
	"	"	Do. Do.	"	"	Duplicate of the same plans.
	"	"	Plan of a proposed Railway from Glastonbury to Bruton.	"	"	Two other sets of plans for alterations and improvements in Taunton Turnpike Roads.
	"	"	Map and Reference Book of the proposed Bath and Weymouth Great Western Union Railway.	December	"	Another set of plans for improvements of the same Roads.
	"	"	Reference Sheet and additional Plans relating to the proposed Bristol and Exeter Railway.	"	"	Plan and Reference Book of a proposed Turnpike Road from Portishead to Abbot's Leigh, co. Somerset.
	"	"	Plan of the South Western Railway, commencing with a junction with the London and Southampton Railway (in the parish of Worthing), near Basingstoke, and terminating with a junction with the Bristol and Exeter Railway, in the Parish of West Monckton, near Taunton, with a branch terminating near Winchester.	"	"	Duplicate of the same plan.
	"	"	Plan of a proposed Extension from the Bridgewater and Taunton Canal, from North Petherton to Bridgewater.	November	1840.	Plan and Reference Book of the Yeo and Parrett Navigation.
	"	"	Duplicate of the same plan.	"	"	Duplicate of the same.
	"	"	London, Salisbury, Exeter, and Falmouth Railway Company. Plan and section of the proposed line of railway from Reading and Basingstoke to Taunton, with branches to Yeovil and Sherborne.	"	"	Plan of proposed alterations in the Chard Canal.
				"	"	Duplicate of the same.
				"	"	Yeovil Turnpike Trust. Plan for a new Road from Clifton Maybank, co. Dorset, to Barwick, co. Somerset.
				"	"	Duplicate of the same plan.
				"	"	Yeovil Turnpike Trust. Plan of an intended Road from Barwick to Leigh, co. Dorset.
				"	"	Duplicate of the same.
				"	"	Plan of a proposed Landing Pier at Portishead, Bristol Channel.
				"	"	Duplicate of the same.
				"	"	Four Plans of Portbury Pier and its Approaches.
				"	"	Wells Turnpike Trusts. Three sets of Plans and Sections of a proposed new Road.

November 1844	Yeovil Turnpike Trust. Plan of improvements of the Yeovil Turnpike Road, in East Chinnock, co. Somerset.
"	Duplicate of the same plan.
"	Plan of a proposed new Dock at Pill, co. Somerset.
"	Duplicate of the same plan.
"	Yeovil Turnpike Trust. Plan of an intended Road from Marston Magna to South Card, co. Somerset.
"	Duplicate of the same plan.
"	Plan (in duplicate) of a proposed new Road from East Cross Hill to Haslebury Plucknett, co. Somerset.
November 1844	Plan and Sections (in duplicate) of the proposed Bristol Water Works.
March 1845	Plans of Brislington House and adjacent cottages.
November "	Plan and Reference Book of proposed improvements and of a wet dock near Highbridge.
"	The same plans; together with plan of a railway to connect the same river and wet dock with the Bristol and Exeter Railway.
November 1844	Plans and Reference Book of the navigation of the River and Bay of Bridgwater, and of an intended railway to the Bristol and Exeter Railway, and other works connected therewith.
"	Plan (in duplicate) of the South Western Railway Extension from Salisbury to Yeovil.
"	Plan of the Wiltshire, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway.
"	Plan of the Branches of the Bristol and Exeter Railway.
"	Reference Book of the South Western Railway. No date.
"	Plan of Tone Bridge at Taunton St. James's. No date.
"	Plan of Ilchester Gaol. No date.
"	Large Map and Plans of the Brue Drainage. No date.
"	Plans of County Gaols. No date.
"	Plans of Private Lunatic Asylums. No date.

II. WELLS COLLECTION. i.e., MANUSCRIPTS preserved in the muniment room attached to the offices of the Clerk of the Peace for the county of Somerset, at Wells.

(a.) Sessions Registers and Minute Books.

Twenty Registers of Proceedings at Sessions, co. Somerset, numbered from 1 to 13, and from 15 to 21 inclusive, being twenty volumes of a series of twenty-one books, of which the fourteenth has been lost. The years covered by these carefully kept registrars are 1664 to 1665, 1665 to 1676, 1676 to 1687, 1687 to 1708, 1708 to 1729, 1729 to 1739, 1739 to 1747, 1748 to 1755, 1755 to 1768, 1768 to 1784, 1784 to 1791, 1791 to 1797, 1798 to 1802,* to *, 1810 to 1815, 1815 to 1819, 1819 to 1824, 1825 to 1832, 1832 to 1839, 1840 to 1849, 1850 to 1864; the only break in the narrative of two hundred and eighteen years being for the term 1802 to 1810, to which the missing volume pertains.

Together with these Large Registers, which afford a concise history of the proceedings of the Somerset magistrates in general sessions, with a clear exhibition of the grounds and purpose of each proceeding, there are preserved in the muniment room of the Clerk of the Peace for the county at Wells, twelve roughly kept Minute Books of proceedings at sessions, and five Civil Order Books, covering the years 1810 to 1840, and comprising the orders made by Justices of the Peace respecting the civil concerns of the shire during that time.

It is scarcely necessary to observe that the student, seeking historical data in the Somerset records should search the Large Registers of Proceedings and Sessions, rather than the Sessions Rolls and Files of the original documents, the latter being so arranged that each convenient entry and at the same time with sufficient fullness in the pages of the sample books. The great majority of the entries in those pages are, of course, uninteresting and valueless to the historical inquirer. But it may seem from the following examples of the voluminous record, that a minority of the statements reflect the political action and social interests of the times in which they were written.

(1.) Volume I. of the Register of Proceedings at Sessions.

Bridgwater. 7 and 8 October, 22 Charles I.

Bridges to be Repaired. Upon the greate complaints of several hundreds of this county of the defect in seuerall bridges (occasioned by the marching of armies to and fro, whereby the country cannot have recourse from one place to another but by and through unvsuall wayes, and that many tymes with hazard to their great aggrivance and prejudice. It is ordered that all bridges in this county bee with all convenient speed repaired, and made passable as before by such persons who by lawe ought to doe the same, vpon payne of being punished for their default on complaint made thereof to this court. And the Justices of the Peace of the seuerall diuisions within this county are desired to countenance such just complaints, as shalbe made touchinge the premises, and to make vse of such power as the lawe hath invested them withall in cases of this nature to further accomplishment of this order.

(2.) Volume II. of the Register of Proceedings at Sessions, April 16, 1667:—Instruccions for the collecting of his Majestie's duty of Hearth Money in the county of Somersett. 1. That kitchen hearthes, bake-houses, brew-houses, and wash houses ought to pay.—2. If any chimney be found stopt, defaced, taken vpp, or a chimney without a hearth laid, which may with reasonable charge be made fitt for use, the officer is directed in such cases to demand the single duty for them, and if they refuse payment to retorne them into the Exchequer for soc many, when they must pay double duty.—3. Thatt all persons that hold a house worth vppon full improvement above 20s. per annum rent, or worth 10*li*. in estate, shall and ought to be certified for.—4. That every house, except an almes house, that hath above two hearthes in it must pay, and noe person how poore soever inhabiting ought to be certified for.—5. That when there is a poore person in a house or parte of a house, and paies for his parte thereof under 20s. rent, and is not worth 10*li*., that such ought to be certified for. But the landlord that holds the same, belonging to the house or the other parte of that house, which makes in the whole about 20s. rent must be named alsoe. And the duetie is to be demanded of him, and if hee refuse payment to be returned into the Exchequer for the house.—6. If two or more persons inhabite in a house and have but one or 2 fire-hearthes in it, and each payes vnder 20s. a year rent, and each of them be not worth 10*li*. in estate, they ought alsoe to be certified for, but with the landlord's name that ownes the house, and if the whole arise to 20s., rent paid, hee must also pay for his tenantes, or be returned into the Exchequer. 7. That all that are trucly vnder 20s. a yeare rent in full improvement, and hold no other house or lands, and are not worth 10*li*., ought to be certified for. 8. The certificates made and delivered in to the said Mr. Loid and Mr. Green being for the most parte imperfect and out of forme, and they finding also that there be many vnder certificates. Therefore it is desired that the master wardens and ouersers of the poore doe call the constable and tything men in each parish to give them a strict accompt of the true rate and value of each person's house or estate, and that none be certified for, but such as the constables and tithingmen shall vpon oath att a publique meeting, which will shew after such a retourne made be appointed in each limitt, where the justices shalbe for, for, and the King's officer to heare and determine all differences according to lawe.

(3.) Volume III. of the Register of Proceedings at Sessions, Ivclchester. 1 James II., 1685.

Wages.—Rates determined by Justice of Peace.

Men servants, per annum	-	-	04	10	00
Women servants, per annum	-	-	02	10	00
Mowers, per diem, findeinge themselves	-	-	00	01	02
At meate and drinke	-	-	00	00	07
Menn makeinge hay, per diem, findeinge themselves	-	-	00	00	10
At meate and drinke	-	-	00	00	06
Women, make mee hay, per diem, findeing themselves	-	-	00	00	07
At meate and drinke	-	-	00	00	04

COUNTY OF SOMERSET.

Men, reapinge corne, per diem, finde- ing themselves -	-	00	01	02
Att meate and drinke -	-	00	00	08
Masons, carpenters, tylers and thatch- ers, from 15th March to the 15th September, finde- ing themselves, per diem	00	01	02
From the 15th of September to the 15th of March -	00	01	00
Att meate and drinke -	00	00	07
Threshers and dekers, from the 15th March to the 15th Septem- ber, findeing themselves, per diem -	00	01	00
Att meate and drinke -	00	00	05
From the 15th of September to the 15th of March -	00	00	08
Att meate and drinke -	00	00	04
Menn, moweinge an acre of grasse, findeing themselves -	00	01	02
„ makinge an acre of grasse to hay	00	01	06
„ moweing an acre of barley -	00	01	01
„ reapinge and bindeing an acre of wheate -	00	03	00
„ cutting and bindeinge an acre of beans and hookinge -	00	02	00
„ draveinge an acre of hempe -	00	04	06
Spinners { Pinions, per pound. iii d.—Spanish wooll, xd . or country wooll. iiii d.—Worsted wooll, xd .

It is ordered,—That ye rates for wages above-sett bee in force in this county till farther order: And the Sheriffe of this county is hereby required to cause the same forthewith to bee proclaymed in all citties and markett townes, and all within the said county are to take notice thereof and observe the same accordingly, vnder the paines and penalties in the statutes in such case made and provided.

(4.) From the same volume.
Wells: 1 James II., 1685.

Thomas Norton.—Upon complaint and informacion made unto this courte by the parishioners of Killmersdon in this county by Mr. Goole of counsell with the same parishioners,—That the wife and children of one Thomas Norton, late of the said parish of Killmersdon (who, beinge attainted of high treason, is transported to partes beyond the seas) are nowe become chardgeable to the same parish by reason of their poverty and impotency: and upon farther informacion nowe likewise made to this court.—That the grandfather of the said children and father of the said Thomas Norton, namely, Richard Norton of Killmersdon aforesaid, is a person of good substance and capabilitie to contribute to the mayntenance of the said woman and her children; and upon oath nowe made in open court that the said Richard had timely notice to appear att this present Generall Sessions of the Peace to defend a motion by counsell to be made against him, for the assessinge him to the purposes aforesaid, yet hath made no defense therein.—This Court doth therefore order that the said Richard Norton do on notice of this order thenceforth pay weekly, and every weeke till this Courte shall otherwise order, or the said woman and the said children shall cease to be chargeable as aforesaid the sum of two shillings and sixe-pence per weeke, to bee paide to the churchwardens and overseers of the poore of Killmersdon aforesaid for the time beinge, and by them to bee employed towards the reliefe and mayntenance of the said woman and the said children, unto which payments the said Richard Norton is assessed by this Court pursuant to the statutes in such case made and provided, and is hereby ordered to make the said payments accordingly vnder the penalties in the same statutes directed and appointed.

(5.) From the same volume.
Bridgewater:—July 1, James II., 1685.

Keynsham Bridge pulled down furor Belli.—Upon credible informacion made and given vnto this Court, that a certaine common antient bridge commonly called Keynsham Bridge, one parte whereof lyeth within this county, and the other parte whereof lyeth within the county of Gloucester, is now become vnpassable by reason of the same bridge was lately prostrated to prevent the passage of the late rebels over the same: and this Courte being very sensible of the truth of the same informacion, and being well satisfied, that that part of the same bridge lyinge within the saide county of Somerset ought to be rebuilt, and repaired by the same county doeth hereby order and desire, nominate and appoint, Sir John Smith barronett, Edward Gorges, John Pigott, John Harrington, Joseph Langton, George

COUNTY OF
SOMERSET.

Horner, Thomas Wyndham and George Clarke, esqrs., eight of his Majestie's Justices of the Peace of the said county of Somerset, or any fower or more of them, to repaire to the said bridge with all convenient expedition, and to viewe the defects, decayes, ruines, and disrepaires to the same, and by and with the aide and assistance of able and expert workmen, or otherwise without workemen, to calculate and estimate what the chardge to repaire that part of the said bridge which lyeth within the said county of Somerset will amount unto, and to cause all stones and materials belonging to the same parte of the said bridge to bee preserved from the violence of floudes and other miscarriages, and farther to call before them or any fower or more of them the constable and two able men of everie parish within the same countie of Somerset, and by their assent to make a taxe on the inhabitants of the said county, for the rebuilding and keepinge in repaire that part of the said bridge.

(6.) Volume IV. of the Register of Proceedings at Sessions. Brewton Sessions, Ao. 3, James II. 1687.

Upon the humble petition of one Joseph Winter, of Ivelchester, in this county, chyrurgeon, whereby hee not only setteth forth, that in the yeare 1685, there beinge about fower hundred of his Majestie's prisoners in the common gaole of the said county, and there charged with treason, divers of whom being much wounded in the late rebellion, became very noysome to their fellowe prisoners and others.—Hee. the said petitioner, applied sundry medicines and made severall visittes to the said wounded prisoners in order to their cure, and for the prevention of diseases in the said prison, and places adjacent, vnto which the said petitioner was requested by severall neighbouring gentlemen and others: But also setting forth that the said petitioner hath bin att great charges and expenses in procuring and preparinge the said medicines and in his endeavours to acquire some satisfaction in the premises.—This Courte, findeinge the saide petitioner hath as yet received no satisfaction therein, and haveinge fully and deliberately examined a bill of particulars nowe produced unto this Courte concerninge the said chardges and expenses, and discoveringe the same to amounte unto the sum of thirty-six pounds ten shillings in the whole, doth allowe and approve of the same bill, and doeth hereby order and require the present Treasurers of the Hospittalls of either division of the said county, vpon request and sight of this order, to pay and re-imburse vnto the said petitioner, Joseph Winter, the afore-mentioned summe by equal porcions, that is to say, each treasurer aforesaid to pay one moyety thereof, for which paymentes respectively the said treasurers are to have allowance from this court on passinge their respective accompts.

(b.) Awards made in pursuance of Acts of Parliament for Enclosure and works of Drainage.

11 January 1720.	Baltonsbury Award.
4 June 1722.	Glastonbury „
13 July 1751.	Claverton Commons „
21 October 1771.	Horsington, Wincanton, and Mapperton „
21 July 1773.	Ubley „
4 July 1776.	Douling and Stoke Lane „
2 May 1778.	Wedmore „
22 June 1779.	Compton Bishop „
23 September 1779.	Winscombe and Shipham „
17 January 1780.	Brislington Common (in Brislington) „
20 April 1780.	Crowcombe „
6 April 1782.	Huntspill „
8 January 1783.	Meare „
„ „ „	Weston „
6 October 1783.	Glaston „
28 July 1784.	Shapwick „
22 September 1784.	Mark „
23 March 1785.	Blackford (in Wedmore) „
„ „ „	Wedmore „
11 October 1785.	Shepton Mallet „
5 October 1786.	Wookey „
6 January 1787.	Blagdon „
11 January „	West Pennard „
21 August 1790.	West Harptree „
5 March 1791.	Compton Martin „
25 June „	Meare and Wedmore „
20 September 1791.	Westbury „
22 September „	Bleadon „
2 March 1792.	Road „
22 April 1793.	Dinder and Croscombe „
22 May „	Batcombe „
15 June „	Edington (in Moorlinch) „
„ „ „	Moorlinch „

- 23 September 1794. Stoke Rodney Award.
 25 March 1794. East Horrington and Chilcote (in Out-Parish, Wells) ..
 25 March 1794. Out Parish St. Cuthbert, Wells ..
 5 September 1794. Kewstoke ..
 " " Milton (in Kewstoke) ..
 19 September 1795. East Brent ..
 28 " " St. Cuthbert Out-Parish Wells ..
 22 Oct. 1795. Kings Sedgemoor (in Somerton, Compton Dundon, Weston, Othery, Chedzoy, Middlezoy, Weston Zoyland, Bawdrip, Bridgewater, Sutton Mallet, Bradley, Stawell, Catcott, Chilton, Woolavington, Butleigh, High Ham, Low Ham, Edington, Shapwick, Cossington, Grenton, Ashcott, Street, Aller, and Moorlinch) ..
 21 January 1796. North Wootton and Pilton ..
 18 June 1796. Tintinhull ..
 30 " " East Harptree ..
 29 August 1796. Weare, Chapel Allerton, and Biddesham ..
 28 September 1796. Butleigh ..
 " " Brent (East) ..
 4 January 1797. Mark (East) ..
 28 February 1797. Burnham ..
 21 September 1797. Banwell ..
 23 January 1798. Queen Camel ..
 21 March 1798. Puriton ..
 22 June 1798. Street ..
 12 July 1798. Ashcott ..
 14 " " North Petherton ..
 7 September 1798. Aller ..
 27 " " 1799. High Ham and Huish Episcopi ..
 28 " " Huish Episcopi ..
 13 November 1799. Moorlinch ..
 13 December " Holwell ..
 21 June 1800. North Curry, Stoke St. Gregory and West Hatch ..
 15 July 1800. Glastonbury ..
 29 September 1800. Moorlinch ..
 22 November " Middlezoy ..
 18 December " Chilton ..
 3 June 1801. Clevedon ..
 17 June 1801. South Brent and Lympham ..
 16 September 1801. Cheddar ..
 3 October 1801. Locking ..
 21 January 1802. Bridgewater, Chilton Trinity, Wembdon and Durligh ..
 15 April 1803. Cannington, Huntspill, Stockland-Bristol, and Stogarsey ..
 15 April 1803. Worle ..
 26 September 1803. Pickenham ..
 15 March 1804. Kingsbrompton, Upton, and Skilgate ..
 3 October 1804. North Perrott ..
 8 " " South Petherton ..
 4 March 1806. Portbury ..
 21 August 1806. Alford ..
 13 September 1806. Brue Drainage (in North Wootton, Pilton, Baltonsborough, Barton St. David, Butleigh, Street, Glaston St. John, Glaston St. Benedict, Walton, Ashcott, Shapwick, Moorlinch, Calcott, Chilton, Edington, Cossington, Woolavington, Huntspill, East Brent, South Brent, Mark, Wedmore, Meare, Burnham, Badgeworth, Biddesham, Chapel Allerton, Weare, Puriton, Pawlett, Wookey, and Out-Parish St. Cuthbert Wells) ..
 6 December 1806. Somerton ..
 10 July 1807. Pitney ..
 23 October 1807. Cossington ..
 9 August 1809. Weston in Gordano ..
 " " " Portishead ..
 " " " North Weston (in Portishead and Weston in Gordano) ..
 26 February 1810. West Bagborough ..
 14 April 1810. Kingsdon ..
 13 " " Charlton Adam and Charlton Mackrell ..
 17 April 1810. Keinton Maundefield ..
 19 June 1810. Ashington, Ilchester, Stoke under Hamdden, Tintinhull, and Lymington ..
 26 July 1810. Ave Drainage (in Woking, Westbury, Stoke Rodney, Wedmore, East Brent, South Brent, Meare, Weare, Badgeworth, Biddesham, Cheddar, Bishop Ashdown, Cossington, Weston, Blendon, Breane, Berrow, and Lympham) ..
 28 September 1810. Martock ..
 21 October 1811. Lillstock ..
 3 July 1812. Backwell ..
 30 December 1813. Kenn, Wrington, and Yatton ..
 31 September 1814. Long Sutton ..
 19 October 1814. Creech St. Michael Award.
 27 January 1815. Yatton and Kenn Award.
 27 February 1815. Weston Drainage (in North Weston, Walton, Clapton, Wick, Weston in Gordano, Portishead, and Portbury) ..
 17 June 1815. Weston-super-Mare ..
 31 August 1815. West Buckland ..
 21 September 1815. Charlton Horethorne ..
 14 June 1816. Congresbury, Week St. Lawrence, and Puxton ..
 10 July 1816. Moorlinch ..
 " " " Edington in Moorlinch ..
 18 September 1817. Milborne Port ..
 28 October 1817. Exmore ..
 26 March 1818. Berkley and Standerwick ..
 30 " " Uphill ..
 11 September 1818. Drayton ..
 3 November " Combe St. Nicholas ..
 20 April 1819. Dundry ..
 12 May " Exmoor ..
 13 October 1819. Chard ..
 25 November 1819. Nail-ea, Wraxall, and Bourton ..
 28 January 1820. Wellington ..
 10 March " Ilminster ..
 20 May " Long Ashton ..
 28 May " Isle Moor (in Isle Abbots, Fivehead, Swell, Curry Mallet, Curry Rivell, Beeracrombe, Ashill, Ilton, Whitelackington, and Isle Brewers) ..
 14 May 1821. Rodney-Stoke, Cheddar, and Priddy ..
 25 September 1821. Charlton Musgrove, Kilming-ton, Wincanton, and Penselwood ..
 6 October 1821. West Monkton ..
 29 October 1822. West Sedgemoor (in North Curry, Stoke St. Gregory, Curry Rivell, Fivehead, Drayton, Swell, Curry Mallet, Beeracrombe, Hatch Beauchamp, Broadway, and Aller) ..
 1 August 1823. Portishead ..
 17 November 1823. Crewkerne ..
 7 January 1825. West Combland (in Buckland St. Mary) ..
 4 August 1826. Congresbury Drainage (in Congresbury), Buxton Wintcombe, Banwell, Churchill, Kewstoke, Wick St. Lawrence, and Yatton) ..
 14 August 1826. Martock and Muchelme ..
 28 December 1827. West Lydford ..
 6 August 1829. Compton Dundon ..
 " " " Kingsmoor (in Somerton, Long Sutton, Kingsdon, Northover, Ilchester, and Martock) ..
 8 April 1830. Wiveliscombe ..
 30 June " Week Moor (in Curry Rivell, Drayton, Swell and Fivehead) ..
 18 February 1831. Elworthy ..
 10 May 1832. Chilthorne-Domer ..
 19 July 1833. Milverton ..
 4 September 1833. Neroche Forest (in Broadway, Bickenhall, Beerescombe, Ilton, Barrington, Ashill, Ilminster, Whitelackington, Curland, Donyatt, Isle Abbots, Hatch, Hatch Beauchamp, and Buckland St. Mary) ..
 28 April 1834. Middlezoy and Weston Zoyland ..
 23 May 1835. Kingsbury Episcopi ..
 19 May 1837. Chipstable ..
 4 May 1838. West Moor (in Curry Rivell, Kingsbury Episcopi, Barrington, Puckington, Isle Brewers, Earnshill, and Drayton) ..
 25 June 1838. East Lydford ..
 10 July 1839. Northover ..
 27 March 1841. Middlezoy, Othery, and Weston Zoyland ..
 13 June 1842. Wanstrow ..
 25 March 1843. Clapton ..
 24 June 1843. Barton St. David ..
 1 August 1844. Ditcheat ..
 13 June 1845. Brompton Ralph, Huish Champ-ower, and Clatworthy ..
 19 July 1847. South Petherton ..
 26 January 1848. Exford ..
 " " " Alinsworth ..
 12 January 1849. Sheepharn Moor (in Creech St. Michael) ..
 12 January 1849. Creech St. Michael ..
 " " " Ruishton ..
 5 February 1849. Hutton ..
 4 June 1849. Henstridge ..
 26 October 1849. Yeovil ..
 " " " Greenmoor (in Yeovil) ..
 10 May 1850. Buckland Hill (in Buckland St. Mary) Award.
 23 November 1850. Stoke Ridge ..
 14 February 1851. Winsford ..

COUNTY OF SOMERSET.

14 February 1851. Ison Hill (in Winsford) Award.
 " " " Shaddon Hill (in Winsford) "
 14 June 1851. Winsford "
 2 August 1851. Saltford "
 16 March 1852. Trent "
 22 April " Exford "
 " " " South Commons (in Exford) "
 3 July 1852. North Moor and Streamcombe Commons (in Dulverton) "
 3 July 1852. Dulverton "
 8 August 1853. Loxton "
 28 February 1855. West Moor and Common Down (in Halse) "
 28 February 1855. Halse "
 25 September 1856. Wraxhall and Kilkenny Greens (in Ditcheat) " 25 September 1856. Ditcheat "
 15 December 1856. Elborough Hill and Hutton Hill (in Hutton) "
 30 March 1857. Kewstoke "
 8 November 1858. Heniton or Hennington Hill (in Ashbrittle) "
 8 November 1858. Ashbrittle "
 27 September 1859. Hawkridge "
 12 January 1863. Oare "
 16 May 1863. Blackford (in Wedmore) "
 " " " Wedmore "
 17 March 1866. Dunster Salt Marsh (in Dunster) "
 14 February 1867. North Moor and South Moor (in Cannington and Otterhampton) "
 15 October 1867. Porlock Common (in Porlock) "

9 September 1869. Bathford Hill and Warleigh Common (in Bathford) Award.

COUNTY OF
SOMERSET.

3 October 1872. Wootton Courtney "
 3 October 1873. Chard "

11 May 1874. Chillington Down (in Chillington) "
 Though the Somerset records have been accumulating for centuries, and their mass has been increasing rapidly during these later generations, the time is still remote when the custos rotulorum and the justices of the shire will be compelled to decide, whether they should build larger store-rooms for their manuscripts, or relieve the shelves and cages of their muniment rooms by the destruction of the unhistorical and valueless ingredients of their collections of writings. Enough has been said to show that a large proportion of the collections is historically worthless. But the spacious muniment rooms at Taunton could be fitted easily for the reception of another century's growth of archives and official memoranda, even though the manuscripts of the county should during the next hundred multiply even faster than they have done during the last hundred years.

In conclusion, whilst acknowledging the facilities afforded me for the execution of my work at Taunton and Wells by the consideration of the Lord Lieutenant and magistrates of the county of Somerset, I venture to record with unusual emphasis my sense of the courtesy and frankness with which I was received by the clerk of the peace for the shire, the late Mr. Edwin Lovell, who died shortly after he gave me cordial welcome and assistance.

JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.