occupy, from a consideration that improvements on short leases hurt the tenant and tempt Protestant farmers to take leases in reversion. Is it a wild supposition that many converts to our religion, and many more on whom religion operates but little, or not at all, may in some future time prove the greatest enemies to our government, and that our chief domestic danger must flow from that quarter or from none? Is it not well known that the Court of France drew up an Act for naturalizing all Irish Papists, and this Act has been lately registered in the Parliament of Paris? May not the increase of subjects in that country be in many respects more dangerous to the world than an increase of its dominions? Let us then, in God's name, take this world on the terms it is granted to us, with all its faults and all its follies. Let us attempt to reform the one, and remove the other, but ever consistently with the laws of nature and the Gospel."

The "Seasonable Thoughts" obtained a rapid and extensive circulation, and received the approbation of Bishop Berkeley. O'Connor, however, found it requisite not only to conceal the authorship, but to embody in the work expressions agreeable to the prejudices of his political opponents, and calculated to mislead them in their conjectures as to the writer.

The first regular results of O'Connor's study of the old historic materials, in connexion with his country, were given to the public in 1753, under the title of "Dissertations on the History of Ireland." For this work he expected support from a body styled the "Physico-Historical Society," established in Dublin, under the presidency of Robert Jocelyn, Lord Newport, Chancellor of Ireland, for the publication of local history and the examination of the natural products of the country. In his Introduction, O'Connor gave the following particulars of the design of his "Dissertations":—

"The history of the old inhabitants of this country is so important, and at the same time so edifying to a free people, that few subjects merit more their attention, and hardly any can afford more political instruction: to attain a tolerable idea of it we must necessarily enter into the genius of the people; what we will find, in all ages: invariable, with regard to their manners and policy; an inflexibility confirmed by habit, proceeding partly from their original, and partly from the remoteness of their situation: Descended from the most humane and knowing nation of all the old Celts, they imported, very early, the elements of letters and arts into Ireland; here they improved those elements into systems of government and philosophy, which their undisturbed state from foreign ambition left them at full liberty to cultivate through a long succession of ages: their theology grafted upon the religion of nature, and partly deduced from the clearest fountains of the old patriarchal worship, influenced their manners; rendering them a benevolent, whilst their researches in philosophy rendered them a wise, people: It can, therefore, be no admiration to find this lettered nation, so long studied in arts peculiar to themselves, extremely retentive of them, and paying but little deference to the learning of the Continent, introduced, comparatively, but lately among them."

"It is next to impossible that the laws and polity of this nation should hold out long after the reception of Christianity, had they not been founded in their first principles, and erected in their progress, on the plan of nature and wisdom: In a country where lettered merit obtained the highest reward: where luxury never deranged, nor conquest stunned, the intellects of men, useful discoveries must be made, and several important truths unfolded: Principles thus established can never be shaken in the times of liberty; nor exchanged for worse but in times of ignorance and servitude: And thus it was that during the sixth and seventh centuries, when Ireland was acknowledged as the prime seat of learning and liberty in Europe, we find no attempts made to alter her constitution, laws or customs, notwithstanding the introduction of all the Greek and Roman refinements."

"The novelty of this subject, hardly yet known in our language by the faintest idea, may recommend it. The author of the following essays, like the explorer of an unknown region, may claim the merit of a first discoverer, leaving the honour, as well as advantage, of cultivation to his successors: Whatever the fate of his labours may be, it is doubtless a shame, as Buchanan justly observes, that persons, who take great pains to know as much as possible of the history of every other nation, should be utter strangers to that of their own."

"Before he entered on this subject he endeavoured to make himself master of the language of the people he treats of; what he found absolutely necessary to gain any competent knowledge of their antiquities, literature, and customs. When this task was partly over, he was under the necessity of stopping short, until several friends furnished him with manuscripts, which took some time to collect. It were to be wished that this collection was more complete; although considering how the old Scottish records have been dispersed in England, France, and other parts at home and abroad, he could not but reckon himself lucky in the acquisitions he had made."

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

"The study and knowledge of this ancient people, through all the stages of their story, can hardly fail of being edifying to the present times. Truth is a mark set up for all mankind, and if we render society unhappy by missing it, we may blame ourselves. We inertly take our aim from a point, which is generally the worst we can be placed in; that of education and custom, the source of almost every moral evil: We seek no farther; and perhaps never less, than in times rendered unbenevolent by a memory of former contests about power and property. Many among us, and we gratulate the nation upon it, have quitted this point of view and emancipated themselves. Others may improve by a retrospect to times and ages as well as by the force of such examples. The contrast between liberty and faction can be found in no history better illustrated than in that of Ireland. Let us take it in review. A careful attention on so variegated a prospect may teach some of us a great deal of that wisdom whose place is taken up by mere local judgments, and political anomalies; sores, productive of national phrenzies, but absolutely perverse of national bappiness whenever they rankle in the breasts of governors and legislators.

"Whatever evils of this nature we may still labour under, it is certain that the untoward fortune of Ireland, for several ages past, hath at length happily relented. The first men of the nation have distinguished themselves throughout Europe by the encouragement of every art extensive of its happiness and reputation: They have expelled its evil genius by weeding prejudice from patriotism, hateful distinctions from the common interest, and all schemes of engrossment from liberty.

"The bounds we have prescribed to ourselves will not admit of a particular enumeration of all the beauties in this picture: But it might be deemed a great omission if we did not observe from the voice of fame and of all parties that my Lord Newport displays a principal feature in it, which history can no more overlook than envy can sully. To him, therefore, as to the proper patron of a work of this nature, and as President of our Physico-Historical Society, we dedicate the following essays; a tribute we pay with the greater pleasure, as it is unattended with any personal attachment, but what is connected with the public gratitude; or any expectations, but what are prevented in the equity of the Chancellor, and the unwearied labours of the determined patriot.

"This effort should be considered only as the rude draught of an extensive landscape; the mere outlines of which must tempt an abler hand to touch it over, and give the whole some life and colouring. It is easy to conceive the disadvantages of an author, alone in this subject, and remote from persons who could correct him, both in the matter and style: For these reasons he has confidence enough that the public will spare his failings on the score of the several truths which attend them: truths very important, and to which the right of the public is indisputable. If the author should obtain this fair quarter, it will be easy hereafter, supposing a second impression, to alter or expunge some few passages (for we hope they are but few) which may be found weak in reason, or false in fact."

In reference to this work the following letter was addressed to O'Conor by Dr. Johnson, through the medium of George Faulkner, a Dublin publisher, who had suggested that the Irish Roman Catholics should raise a fund to secure the literary services of the lexicographer in their cause:

"Sir,—I have lately, by the favour of Mr. Faulkner, seen your account of Ireland, and cannot forbear to solicit a prosecution of your design. Sir William Temple complains that Ireland is less known than any other country, as to its ancient state. The natives have had little leisure, and little encouragement for inquiry; and strangers, not knowing the language, have had no ability.

"I have long wished that the Irish literature were cultivated. Ireland is known by tradition to have been once the seat of piety and learning; and surely it would be very acceptable to all those who are curious either in the original of nations, or the affinities of languages, to be further informed of the revolution of a people so ancient, and once so illustrious.

"What relation there is between the Welsh and Irish language, or between the language of Ireland and that of Biscay, deserves inquiry. Of these provincial and unextended tongues, it seldom happens that more than one are understood by any one man, and, therefore, it seldom happens that a fair comparison can be made. I hope you will continue to cultivate this kind of learning, which has too long lain neglected, and which, if it be suffered to remain in oblivion for another century may perhaps never be retrieved. As I wish well to all useful undertakings, I would not forbear to let you know how much you deserve, in my opinion, from all lovers of study, and how much pleasure your work has given to, sir, your most obliged, and most humble servant,

"London, April 9th, 1757.

SAM. JOHNSON."

The Abbé Mac Geoghegan, in the first volume of his "Histoire d'Irlande," published at Paris in 1758, wrote as follows with reference to the "Dissertations," with the author of which he does not then appear to have been acquainted:

"Les Dissertations sur l'Histoire ancienne d'Irlande, composées en Anglois par un anonyme, et publiées in 8° à Dublin en 1753, par les soins de Mich. Reilly, font entrevoir une grande étendue de connoissances dans les antiquités de ce pays. Le style de cet ouvrage est fleuri, et les matières y sont traitées avec une délicatesse et une légèreté admirables. Je souhaite que cet auteur continue d'écrire sur ce sujet: la nation perdroit beaucoup s'il alloit se reposer à l'ombre de ses premiers lauriers," p. 58.

Malcolm Laing, who devoted much attention to the "Ossian" controversy, concluded that Macpherson derived the whole of the topography for his "Fingal" and "Temora" from this edition of O'Conor's "Dissertations."

O'Conor's next production was of a totally different class, elicited by acrimonious passages in a pamphlet entitled, "The Spirit of Party," written by Henry Brooke in 1754. In that year, under the name of "A Cottager," O'Conor wrote as follows against Brooke, whose statements he impugned:—

"The 'Spirit of Party' hath at length quitted his nightly rounds, hath burst open the enclosures of darkness, and by a new attack hath in open daylight let himself loose at the peace and prosperity of this hapless land. After all the rebuffs the Farmer hath received from the contempt or ridicule, of different sets of readers; after feeling himself sore all over from his Patriot Adventure with Mr. Lucas, he hath now, it seems (like Milton's hero) recovered from the deadly trance, and, by a new effort, attempts to disturb the public peace. A few animadversions, therefore, on the conduct, character, principles, and writings, of this gentleman may be neither improper nor unseasonable.

"At a time [1738] when the jealousy of these nations run very high against the administration of Sir Robert W[al]pole, the gentleman, here intended, published his tragedy of 'Gustavus Vasa.' In that, it must be fairly acknowledged his sentiments are truly noble, his principal characters shining and elevated, the diction just, the action warm and interesting, the whole, notwithstanding some touches of the astutia scenica, well conducted. This animated performance recommended him to the notice, the conjuncture recommended him to the attention, and the expectation of equal, or still higher flights, introduced him to the favour, of the public. The usurious motive, the crooked intention, the lurking tergiversation, kept then free of detection, and all parties appeared emulous in patronizing a genius, so apparently above the common level of Irish writers. Thus did he succeed. And what added exceedingly to the affection for this favorite, was a rumor, generally spread and credited, that in the work here referred to, he only transcribed the characters impressed on his own heart, that he was himself strongly inspired with those virtues, which he painted in such fine colours, and which he pushed home, so warmly, to the heads and hearts of others.

"A little cunning, very consistent with the low views of a venal writer, might have maintained the author of 'Gustavus' in this popular post, and an adherence to the species of writing, to which his capacity seemed best adapted, might have maintained him there, with honor; but the 'Spirit of Party,' spur-galled by the superior demon of venality, girded him with the weapon of local politics, what became him most awkwardly, and what, upon unsheathing, he had neither sufficient strength to wield, nor common skill to direct.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"Let us try him fairly by facts, and view him in that mirror, which reflects the whole soul, stripped of its gaudy plumage, exposed, by his own imprudence, to the scorn and detection of the most indifferent observer."

"— moveat cornicula risum Furtivis nudata coloribus."

"When an unnatural rebellion was spirited up in the Highlands of Scotland, headed by the pretended grandson of the late King James, the government was alarmed and all parties were very justly apprehensive that a pitiful rout of country fellows would hardly have ventured upon so desperate an enterprize alone and unsupported. This juncture so favourable to the views of the wicked, and so acceptable to the wishes of the indigent, called forth the author of 'Gustavus'—like his brother, Cincinnatus of old Rome, he quitted his plow:—unlike him, in everything else (except the dictatorial sufficiency of the writer,) he, uncalled and uncommissioned, took the field.—Far from removing the seat of war into the enemies' country, he, here at home, wrought himself up into a cold-hot fit of fanatical enthusiasm, and, more resembling the mad hero of Greece, than the great and sober Roman, a flock of harmless sheep became his prey!

"In a stile stiff but sonorous, rich in words, but barren of argument, high-seasoned for the rabble, nauseous to men of taste, brilliant rather than solid, scurrilously florid, seriously impertinent, half froth, half invective; this Ajax-patriot hath, at that time, without the least provocation given, without the least offence expected, set himself loose at the whole body of the Papists of Ireland!—the weak and fallen part of the nation!—a people long proscribed by the laws of the land, protected from heavy legal penalties by the indulgence, and saved from ruin by the interposition of the executive part of government. This, I say, was the party attacked and insulted by this generous volunteer in the service of his country. Their decent behaviour, so edifying to all loyal subjects in that and the former rebellion, could not protect them from this handsaw-orator, but in an image as improper as it is malicious, are assimilated to a crocodile, (a monster armed all over for offence, as well as defence,) waiting for his prey! And yet this hero knew very well that at this very time the Papists were so far from being in a condition to hurt, that they could not even serve any cause, except that of the government, with whose interests the Papists of any property saw their own so visibly connected. But some great service was to be done in this crisis of affairs, for some service it seems was expected from this popular writer. Unmelted by woe, far from feeling for distress, (a temper which, as a great writer informs us, makes the nearest approaches to the Divinity,) the Farmer at one stroke, broke off all measures with the one half of his readers, and baited them without mercy.—Nor, considering the principles he proceeded upon, was he much in the wrong. The Papists had no places to grant, no pensions to bestow, no great credit at court. But still they had a religion to account for, and this dictator of the pen assumed the right, wherever he stole the materials, of drawing up their catchment.

"To his description of Popery, which, for aught I know, may be extremely just, I have but one objection to make, namely, that it is an oblique abuse of every writer who appeared against that religion, since the resurrection of letters! Its first and fairest adversaries have granted, without hesitation, that it still containeth some fundamentals of our common Christianity, but in this the 'Farmer' gives them all the lie. He solemnly affirms that 'Popery suspends the whole moral law, 'that there is no virtue which it doth not condemn, no vice which it doth not sanctify,' and to sum up all, that the Devil is the object of the Papist's worship! If this be a true picture, it cannot be more horrid, than the blind ignorance of the adversaries of Popery for two hundred and fifty years past is amazing; nor can too much honour be poured on the Columbians, who so lately discovered the unhallowed precipices which border so closely on the regions of safety: but should all this, as it is suspected, prove a wanton and crude exaggeration to lessen the fears of a Popish prince; should it come forth that at this very time an avowed Papist armed a part of the people against the Prince on the throne; and should it be evident that swelling a charge beyond all bounds of probability, in order to lessen it, is but a common and stale artifice to lull the people into a political indifference with regard to persons and things; should this, I say, prove the case, (and some are not without their jealousy on the matter), the 'Farmer's' bill of merit cannot be extraordinary, nor will any wise government put itself to much expense in purchasing such a patriot. Before I quit this ungrateful subject of Popery, I cannot avoid remarking on the tragical pedantry of this writer, who from a silly affectation of the sublime and uncommon, quits the high road of nature and smothers his ideas in an idle and ostentatious jargon of ridiculous phraseology."

"While with honest concern we cannot but lament the shameful prostitution of this gentleman's parts, I do not, however, mean to detract from the merit of his capacity, when he hath the fortune of exerting it in the proper place, when his soul leagues with virtue, and when this virtue quickens that judgment which vice and the wantonness of imagination must ever confine to its embryo-state. We scorn the baseness, we detest the dishonesty of such a procedure: nor would the stroke take place, but justly recoil on myself. With the same candour I will be bold to contend, that fine talents have never yet fallen under more injudicious direction. The essential characteristic of good composition he appears a stranger to; I mean the art of keeping the reader wholly absorbed in the importance of the subject, while the author himself seems to disappear; while the light afforded and the warmth communicated, seem to inhere solely to the matter itself and not to its efficient. The Farmer's writings shew the very reverse; and perhaps no author hath ever surpassed him in laying a snare for personal admiration. A tolerable stock of ideas, affluence of words, figurative periods, great show, little force, a glut of puerility, and a storm of theatrical rant, sum up the whole of his character in the didactic stile. And, with regard to that beautiful species of composition, the apologue, his sterility is amazing.

"Whatever objections may be strictly made 'on this latter score to his former two books of 'Farmer's Letters'; it is certain, however, that, in point of wit, propriety, and invention, they greatly exceed his present efforts. In this (to use a quaint phrase of his own) he doth not seem to be his own man; what I throw out as an expression of my respect for this great projector, poet and politician; tho' I am far from allowing that this 'second man is adventitious and foreign to the first'; or 'that he is an exotic no way of the growth or nature of his fellow': he is indeed his identic self; but in skeleton and in wrinkles. Like one long wasted by a chronic disorder, he weakens and emaciates upon every new political paroxysm. He hath drawn off his 'Spirit of Party' to the fondest dregs, and the torpor of death (for what hath hitherto appeared) is seizing him. I appeal to all his readers, and more particularly to his paymasters, for the truth of what I here assert; so that they take but the trouble of attending him from his first political croakings in the genesis of Popery, to these his last ravings in the Knight's-Bridge Revelations."

In 1755, O'Connor wrote "The Case of the Roman Catholics of Ireland, wherein the principles and conduct of that body are fully explained and vindicated." This was produced in connexion with an alarm among the Roman Catholics in Ireland consequent on the fling in the Court of Chancery there of a process styled "A Bill of Discovery," which, if successful, would have practically paperised those Roman Catholics who lent money on mortgage. "As Roman Catholics could not take mortgages by law, they could not be secured in any debts but by bond or note, and therefore it was the practice of the country that where a Roman Catholic lent money on a bond, he sued out a custodiam against the borrower's estate. But at this time a question was started by a 'Discoverer' whether those custodiams at the suit of Roman Catholics were not to be considered as real securities on the same footing with mortgages, whether they were not mere evasions of the laws against Papists, and, therefore, 'discoverable' under the Popery Acts." O'Connor, in his "Case," argued that Government should be satisfied with tests of civil obedience from their subjects, and that, if their progress should be still impeded, it was nevertheless expedient to secure the Irish Roman Catholics in their existing possessions. Some of the views which he put forward on this occasion are exhibited in the following passages:—

"It is time, God knows, we should grow wise by all this dear bought experience, since so great a part of our happiness, as members of society, and of our peace, as fellow citizens, must result from it. The causes of former disturbances in Ireland are now no more. Let not the effects, when such causes are removed, remain, to prey upon our good sense, our industry, and our morals. The Protestant religion is long established by

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

law among us, with all the power and property in the kingdom on its side. The Roman Catholics revere our Constitution, and have been long obedient to this Government by principle as well as practice; or, if there be any among them in enmity to either, a legal test may be framed to distinguish the elect of Government from the reprobate. What more can the legislature require? If the Roman Catholics of this land warred originally on the Reformation, with the constitution and a safe conscience on their side, can they be supposed (without a degree of infatuation, hitherto unknown among men) to do so now, with both consciously against them? May not circumstances and conjunctures concur to justify any resistance, which in other and settled times, would be unjustifiable to all law, reason, and religion? Is there no difference between receiving and giving the attack? Between a controverted and a recognized establishment? In fact, although a different religion may render the Roman Catholics of Ireland a more favoured, yet none can render them a more obedient party of subjects than that they now profess: a consideration which alone should recommend their case to the attention of the present Parliament, on whom alone it rests to render them, by one short Bill, as useful as they are obedient to this Government. In the present temper (aided by knowledge and formed by experience) so much loyalty cannot be rewarded with a state of servitude, nor will the prosperity of this nation be suspended for the sake of any theological disputes which interfere not with it; for the sake of doctrines which chiefly regard the private not the political morals of mankind."—"But whatever pains I may take, I am conscious enough of the little attention paid to discourses on so unpopular a subject as this without the activity and concurrence of the party in whose favor they are published. I must, therefore, once again, press it on the Roman Catholics to exert themselves on the approach of the next session of Parliament, encouraged as they are by the rare felicity of the times, in the government of a monarch whose conduct, through the course of no short reign, hath been an unvaried attention to the good of these nations; encouraged by a Parliament who, following the royal example, are equally inflexible in the promotion of public happiness; encouraged also by the consciousness of their own uprightness and loyalty: a solemn declaration of which, such a government as ours can never reject in its present temper. Under such auspices they may prefer their complaints with confidence, and who can say but that the redress of them is reserved to complete the glories of George the Second's reign? Too many among this party, I am sorry to say, are grown listless and indifferent, with regard to pain or liberty; like men long confined, they soothe themselves into an unmanly stupefaction, grow regardless of all events, and think of nothing above or beyond the present condition. Let this political apathy be never so general, it ought to be shaken off. No merit can result from the silence of grievances, which ought to be known to the public as it is affected by them, and known to the legislature also, as that alone can redress them. What, then, have the Roman Catholics to fear? Their conduct for near seventy years past speaks greatly and loudly in their favour. Like good subjects, and like men, let them show, in the face of mankind, that this conduct is more the effect of a religious principle, than the consequence of their inability to betray it, an active not a negative and doubtful virtue. By declaring in this manner their affection to our political constitution (however excluded from the rights to which such a declaration and such a constitution must intitle them) the most obstinate prejudice cannot but be in a great degree disarmed; and the many evils this kingdom labours under at present on their account may be in part or in the whole removed." "Let us look back a little and consider the rule which King William the Third laid down for himself in the improvement and government of this extensive island. The conduct of so wise a Prince is well worthy of notice, perhaps of imitation. No Prince or minister knew better than he the precarious situation of affairs on the Continent, nor the danger of the balance of power in Europe, when he, with so much glory, undertook for both, and succeeded also. He saw the late King James, although in exile, yet supported by the most powerful monarch in Christendom. It did not escape him how any fatal stroke, in the uncertain events of war, might enable France to send King James once again back into Ireland to raise those troops who before embarked in his cause, how those troops by the junction of thirty thousand disciplined veterans who followed that Prince's fortune might go a great way towards wresting this island from the Protestant interest, and its dependence on England. All this, I say, did not escape him. The prospect was surely alarming, the like of which never threatened this kingdom at any one period of time, since the English Government. And what was the conduct of King William on that occasion? In that conjuncture, which hardly varied during his whole reign, he barely contented himself with disarming the Irish Roman Catholics; with cutting off as much as possible all communication between them and their friends on the Continent. He did no more. The Papists he reduced by his arms, he preserved and secured in their properties; nor did he consent to any law for abridging their natural rights, to the day of his death. Thus much for the conduct of King William, and glad I am of this opportunity of doing justice to his memory, in an instance so much to his glory, and so wilfully or awkwardly omitted by his hitherto still-born historians.

"The spirit which King William kept under, during his whole reign, was let loose in that of his immediate successor. It was not full twelve years since a period was put to the civil war which the Roman Catholics raised here in favor of the late King James. The memory of this, added to the rooted detestation of Popery itself, at all times rendered Penal Laws, on the score of religion, in a manner necessary; when that spirit was no longer under restraint; and when a Princess ascended the throne, endowed with great virtues, no doubt, but tainted at the same time deeply and fatally with the ductility and irresolution of the Stuart race. In seventeen hundred and three, the penal and excluding laws against the Roman Catholics were assented to by Queen Anne. In the year following our lands fell under ten per cent. Every branch of industry fell in consequence and in proportion; and although it would be unfair to charge to the abjection and incapacities of the Papists all the evils we then laboured under; yet it is beyond all doubt owing to the numberless restraints laid upon them that the kingdom showed few or no symptoms of recovery, for many years. The cessation of real, and the prospect of perpetual bondage, produce woeful contractions in the human mind; exchanging every landable and generous principle, for an indifference to all events, to our own and to public happiness. Where any considerable body of the people are thrown into this political apathy, arts and manufactures must languish, of course, and inward decays must come in aid of the exterior wounds of the State. Minds, thus reversed, will hardly change, because they can hardly form any opinions; or if they change, it must be for the sake of that lucre and those rewards which Government cannot bestow but on the few who are qualified, by their estates or their capacity, for employments. This number is so extremely small, at present, that their junction or desertion is of little consequence to any party, and their true principles of none at all, or of a bad one. As Popery, therefore, in this genuine state of it, is likely to remain (until expulsive laws will effect what the exclusive cannot) can we balance a minute on the choice of the alternative; that of making it, in a parliamentary manner, useful, or detrimental to the public?"

"The calamities of the year seventeen hundred and four were not owing to the war then raging in Europe; on the contrary, that war was a most desirable event to this island. At home, a profound peace for the cultivation of useful arts; abroad, our arms triumphant in every quarter of the globe: the French, by the battle of Hochstet, driven to the brink of destruction. All this brought us but little comfort, and our affairs went on from bad to worse. By the immoderate drain of our species, the broken spirit of the Roman Catholics, and the universal damp on trade from certain laws passed in Britain; lands fell still lower than ever, and many parts of the kingdom became a perfect desert; which contributed only to afford shelter to our beggared vagrants in every season of the year, living, like the wild Tartars, on spontaneous vegetables and the milk of the kine in summer; and in the severer seasons pouring down upon us in shoals of Tories, to plunder the inhabited and warmer parts of the country. Thus, Papists became a prey to Papists, and the Protestant interest suffered cruelly in consequence, by depopulation and the bankruptcy of tenants. Every person, who remembers those times, knows this to be almost universally the deplorable state of our affairs for many years, and that whatever converts the Established Church gained by a sacrifice of principle, the State gained nothing but want, weakness, and occasional conformists.

"The accession of the present Royal family, it must he confessed, revived us from many of our fainting fits. The German spirit of toleration, a spirit hereditary in

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'Conor,
Esq.

the Saxon race, and to which a Whiggish administration is never averse, raised great hopes, and, in fact, several penal laws against the Papists were relaxed in the execution. Our mistaken, yielded, in some measure, to our real interests." "Our manufacturers have for some time been in a prosperous train—Without agriculture, they come to nothing. In a country circumstanced like ours the one must be the support of the other reciprocally, and both united by employing all our hands, would doubtless keep us from sinking. Our liens alone, the chief spring of our wealth, are not sufficient. That manufacture, by giving a florid countenance to our affairs, and putting a temporary stop to the national hectic, seemed only to flatter a decaying body, and feed instead of curing our disorder. For, in fact, it only furnished us with species to purchase the luxuries, and even the corn of other countries, and the fund begins to fail already, holding, indeed, alone no proportion with our consumptions, or those wants which we, not nature, have created. Agriculture would put an effectual stop to one part of this evil, if properly encouraged; and how can such encouragement take place without letting the Papists into it? Or how, in the nature of things can this people be ever brought to turn their industry this way, unless they are allowed some durable property in land? If it be deemed dangerous to trust them with large tracts (but upon unprofitable and temporary terms, as at present) what hath this to do; what can prepossession itself object to their admission into smaller holdings of one or two hundred acres, upon the same footing with all other his Majesty's loyal subjects? Is their inactivity (where so much is to be done) of greater consequence than the general good of this kingdom? Could not our waste lands (as another writer on this subject hath proposed) be intrusted to this people in perpetuity, on the score of the vast profit which must arise to the nation by their reclamation, by a new creation (so to speak) of several hundred thousand acres, in addition to the island? How much the air of our climate is infected by the evaporation of our stagnated waters, and how much the health of the inhabitants is endangered and life shortened, by leaving those wastes in a state of nature, need not be insisted upon. 'What equivalent, therefore (to use the words of that writer), can we ever have for the continuance of an evil so destructive, and yet so remediable, as that before us? Or is it wise to lose such extensive tracts to yourselves and to your posterity, rather than try an experiment, by which you must gain a great deal, and risk nothing?' Would not such a scheme adorn, improve, and enrich this island, while, in fact, it put less power into the hands which appear so hurtful at present, and which, beyond all doubt, can never be so, except in their present disengaged state? This is far from being a problem; and the force of the truth is irresistible, that the Roman Catholics having only a temporary property in land, at improved and high rents, must naturally fall into the lazy industry of grazing, in which they are quick-sighted enough to find that sort of interest which bears a proper analogy with the nature of their tenures. A sagacity which must teach them to avoid, as much as possible, the culture of land; as requiring time, expense, and a number of hands in the management. It is evident to demonstration that such an occupation as the improvement of land is no way suited to a transient and insecure interest, but that the wasteful method of pasturage is so.

"Into such sort of industry are our Papists necessarily forced by our incapacitating laws; what enables them (like our merchants) to convert their flux and transferable landed interest into solid species; and what tempts them, above all other people, to quit a country with which they have but little connexion, and retire into some other with the prospect of a more benign climate and a more ascertained property? This point cannot be exaggerated. Numbers of our inhabitants of any spirit have already taken flight; and more are daily following, in consequence of the encouragement they get from those their precursors, to strengthen our rivals and natural enemies with our seamen, our manufacturers, and our specie. The complaints on this head, for 30 years past, have been loud enough to warn us of this waste and this danger; and the consequences are too sensible not to remind us of some wholesome expedient for attaching these fugitives to their native country, etc., etc.

"The culture of land includes that sort of expense, wherein none but persons qualified to reap the fruits can find their account. The work of inclosing, planting, reclaiming, and building (the benefits of which are distant, cannot be the proper employment of people who by law have but a transitory interest. For agriculture must be called forth by encouragement adequate to the undertaking; not by restrictions and the bare permission of such kind of tenures, as must be held at screwed rents, or at none; which tenures likewise must be of short duration, subject to leases in reversion in favour of Protestants, and which also (to mend the matter) are subject to controversies in this country more than in any other from the flux nature of the value of things in Ireland, and from the strange variations in our internal commerce. A great and a crying evil this, what encourages that honest set of men, called Informers and Discoverers, to bring almost every tenure of this kind into our courts of law to the great vexation, and sometimes to the ruin, of many innocent families? In truth, the culture of land must (in the nature of the thing) be the employment of men who have some durable property in land; not of persons thus restricted and almost forbid the use of it, but upon terms pernicious to their country. It is in vain to derive the indolence and sloth of our Popish inhabitants from any other source than this, of our incapacitating and privative laws. The nature of our climate and soil obliges to industry and hard labour when no superior impediment stands in the way of so necessary an impulse. The impressions of art and industry are still legible on our wilds and deserts, in those wastes from which Papists are excluded, although their admission would soon change the face of the country, increase the number of our inhabitants, and render our climate more salutary to natives as well as foreigners. Those traces of agriculture, I say, which are still evident, to our reproach, show demonstrably the encouragement given formerly in Ireland to this most useful employment, and let us see, better than any written records, that our predecessors (the Milesian Irish) were not that lazy people we conceit them to be. On the contrary, those legible characters of their industry and numbers constitute nobler monuments of their wisdom and glory than if they had reared, in the wantonness of power or vanity, works as stupendous as the Egyptian Pyramids.

"The cure of this evil is not only before us, it is pressing itself upon us. Give your Papists a power over moderate parcels of land, such as is common to all our ecclesiastical conformists, or even to all other dissenters, and the cure is effected. Let them create, as it were, a new country, in addition to the old, by the like power over our pestiferous wastes; and your island from the most sickly gets the most florid face in our western world. Is that too much? Or is this land to be thinned, impoverished, and unpeopled, because all its inhabitants do not profess the same creed?"

The "Case of the Roman Catholics of Ireland" obtained a wide circulation, and received favorable consideration from the Lord Lieutenant and the Primate, to whom it was presented, and hopes were for a time entertained that steps would be taken in Parliament to enact measures of the nature of those advocated in its pages.

The connexion between O'Connor and Dr. John Curry, an eminent and wealthy Dublin physician, commenced about 1755. Curry descended from the ancient Irish sept of O'Corra, which in former times had owned considerable landed property in the county of Cavan. Much of this was confiscated under Cromwell, and the remainder was lost through the connexion of the head of the O'Corra family with James II., in whose service he commanded a troop of horse, at the head of which he fell at the battle of Aughrim. His son, the father of Dr. John Curry, was left almost destitute, but by devoting himself to mercantile pursuits he was enabled to send his son to France. There John Curry studied in the University of Paris and received at Reims a doctor's diploma to practise medicine, a qualification which, as a Roman Catholic, he could not have obtained in Ireland.

Dr. Curry, having returned to Dublin, acquired much eminence in his profession, accumulated a considerable fortune, and was noted as well for his skill as for his beneficence to the indigent.

Soon after the commencement of Curry's intimacy with O'Connor, the latter, in 1756, wrote "The Principles of Roman Catholics Exhibited" in reply to a pamphlet by Robert Clayton, Bishop of Clogher. Clayton, in the same year, had, in the House of Lords at Dublin, proposed the omission of the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds from the liturgy of the Church of Ireland. In reference to the Penal Laws and their results, O'Connor made the following observations in his answer to the bishop:—

C. O'Conor,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"The laws against the Papists of Ireland, since the days of King William alone, would fill a large code; and a stranger, on the perusal, would naturally inquire—What rebellions they have fomented? What private conspiracies they have been detected in? What real mischiefs they have from time to time brought on their native country? How much more violent than their predecessors? And what unheard of perverseness in their nature, kept the public in such a perpetual attention to this evil alone, and to such a measure as to find it expedient to prohibit these people a security even for a flux monied interest in the land of their birth? Would not such a foreigner be struck with amazement when he was told, that, ever since King William's days, these men have behaved themselves as peaceably as any subjects in Europe, and that what evil they did their country, was under the sanction of the very laws which lay before him.

"The free circulation of money, through the medium of securities and loans, hath been so much the interest and practice of all civilized nations, that one cannot be too much astonished at the difficulties and insecurity of the Irish Papist alone in this sort of transitory traffic. The Protestant interest may not, for aught I know, suffer much by this domestic evil: But the interest of the nation may receive such a deep wound by it, as may never admit of a cure; and especially from the apprehensions people have been thrown into by the ill success of a late motion in the [House] of C[ommons] made by a worthy member, with a view of restoring public credit. Busy men, I am informed, have taken advantage of the general panic spread on this occasion, and have proposed to these people to lay out their money in the funds of England, under the direction of negotiating companies in both kingdoms. How far their treaty is matured to such a scheme I cannot take upon me to say; this, however, I will venture to assert, that, if such a scheme should ever take place—but I say no more.

"If the Papists of Ireland be not an abandoned race, not to be trusted on any terms whatsoever in a Protestant land; we humbly conceive they should be allowed to find their own in the public interest, and not lye a dead weight upon it, where there are so many morasses to drain, so much mountain land to reclaim, and agriculture almost suspended.

"Many worthy men (not to mention the writer before me) seem to feel the force of all this; and they are happy, whose fortune hath placed them in a situation of not feeling the consequences!

"Schemes, I am told, are formed for rendering the Papists useful subjects; and that heads of a bill for this purpose will be prepared on the approach of the next session of Parliament. One person (it is said) has proposed a liberty to the Roman Catholics of purchasing lands under the operation of a law, penal on the heir by primogeniture, in case of continuing a Papist. But what Papist would ever purchase on such terms? The theory is, indeed so impracticable, that I believe the gentleman who proposed it, will find himself alone and unsupported in it. He should consider, surely, that it is in the nature of man to reject every qualification for himself that might endanger the religion or conscience of his posterity; and that such a qualification is, in terms, equal to turning Protestant. What Protestant (assured of his own bare impunity) would purchase under the conviction of his son's becoming an occasional Papist, and consequently an hypocrite? Nothing but the operation of the Gavel Act could induce any person to reason in this vague manner. But the cases are widely different: in the former, a man hath no strong connexions, he hath, in Milton's phrase, the wide world before him, and money in his hands to cultivate that part of it where his present and future hopes are equally flattered: but in the latter, he hath an almost insuperable impediment, 'the desire (saith an ingenious Protestant writer) of retaining that property which hath been handed down by our ancestors; the pride of supporting a name and family in the same possessions, and the attachment so natural to the place of birth and education, mingle with the love of wealth and power in this particular passion; to which may be added the pique and animosity against those who would be entitled to an equal share: or even were these additional incitements not to take place, yet the grief of beholding that wrested from us, which we are always taught to look upon as our own, makes a deeper impression than the hope of acquiring something new to which we had no previous title.' All this is undoubtedly well remarked, as it is clearly expressed: and we may venture to pronounce that the Gavel Act, which hath now repealed itself, will never again produce the same effects until the same causes recur.

"The continuation of punishment, after the offence is removed or the offender reformed, is the highest solecism in politics. It defeats the end, because it frustrates the purposes, of good government; which never meant to make the condition of man worse when he gave up several liberties in a state of nature, for the regulations in a state of civil society. Man, therefore, naturally expects the fulfilling of the compact made with him on the exchange; and he will exact it very strictly when the terms were punctually fulfilled on his part. We have many examples to confirm this theory; and to edify by both the theory and practice, we need only open our eyes and work with the materials before us. If some Papists of Ireland be indifferent with regard to all future events relative to their native country; a little fixed property, a little confidence, and a mitigation of the legal penalties they lie under, will certainly convert indifference into affection, and affection is the magazine from whence all the arms of good government are drawn. We live in an island, and depend on a great people, the inhabitants of another. We can open no commerce with any nation under the sun, but what is subject to such restraints as they impose; and the smallest distance from our own sea coast sets us all on a level! They who put us in this situation, and who make no distinction between Irish Protestant and Papist on the score of commercial interest point out the conduct we ought to hold in regard to one another. We should therefore, consider ourselves in the light wherein they place us, and never lose sight of this object. Our enemies and friends are not difficult to find out, but it is very difficult to show any interest we can acquire by indulging peevish ideas in relation to religious mysteries. It is equally difficult to demonstrate any other principles on which we differ, and he who would advance the proposition, without the demonstration, is an enemy of his country. What more? We live under the protection of Great Britain. Let us make the most of it, and let us learn from the circumstances attending it, that the Papists of Ireland can hurt their country in no manner, except by the incapacities they lye under. If we advert to all this, the imaginary terrors of Popery will vanish, and the real danger of forbidding their co-operation will immediately present itself. Their wealth, if we admit them to acquire any, we may count our own, but their poverty we must account our own also. These are alternatives imposed by nature, and it requireth but little wisdom to make a choice."

In 1757, O'Connor wrote "The Protestant Interest considered relatively to the operation of the Popery 'Acts in Ireland.' This was dedicated by the anonymous author to John, Duke of Bedford, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. It was dated from Castlebar, 8th April 1757, and was stated to have been written in the preceding April, "in the height of the great 'famine." Since that time," added the writer, "a fine season has produced the present temporary suspension of so dreadful a calamity. As the author's arguments in regard to the neglect of agriculture are still equally strong, it was not judged necessary to make any alterations." In this production O'Connor expressed his views as follows on the disastrous results likely to ensue from the restraints imposed under the Penal Laws on the majority of the people of Ireland:—

"At the late Revolution, incapacities were laid on religious dissenters in this kingdom, in regard to employments in the State and magistratical offices. No other were then imposed. Industry and property were laid under no legal interdicts: The true spirit of the Revolution prevailed, and its greatest enemies began to be reconciled to it. The Protestant interest flourished, because the interest of the nation flourished also. But in Queen Anne's reign we deviated all on a sudden from this policy. The Papists who opposed King William's government were obedient under her's. This availed nothing, he pardoned, she punished. An universal languor amidst all our successors abroad, and a profound peace at home spread over the face of our island. The memory of those calamitous days is too fresh to need any revival at present, nor can we justly lay all our sufferings during that period to the Popery Acts alone. But we may say, with great truth, that the restrictions on industry and property were, at that juncture in particular, extremely unseasonable. Our linen manufacture did not take sufficient root, England laid out trade under new limitations, our military list became mighty expensive by the exportation of our troops, all our credit was almost sunk, and the years 1709 and 1710 added a wasteful famine to all our distresses. We revived in

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

the next reign, through some favourable conjunctures; we threw a little in this; But the Popery laws prevailed over all our efforts, and kept us more or less in our hectic state, from the year seventeen hundred and four, to this season of hunger and misery in which I am writing. Did the Papists provoke to all these sufferings which this nation incurs on their account? No people in any age or country behave more dutifully or resignedly! But the prejudice of party and the Queen's hereditary zeal united against them. The resentment of former contentions about religion, about power, and about property, still ranked in the breasts of the victorious, and victory no longer chequed by the vigour which King William opposed to it knew not how to set bounds to the strength it acquired."

"To this day, France bleeds from the wounds of unprovoked persecution!"

"Thus it was that King William derived great strength from the counsels of his rival, as well as from his own. A bigot to no sect, he avoided the persecution of any; and on this salutary principle it was that he employed and armed the Roman Catholics of Holland; that he disarmed the episcopal Protestants in Scotland, and gave all power, civil and ecclesiastical, in that country, to the Presbyterians. He, no doubt, passed some coercive laws against the Roman Catholic clergy of this kingdom, and he did this to humour the warm spirit of those times; but suspended, very wisely, the execution; while Queen Anne, his more zealous successor, had, without the smallest provocation, let loose all the fury of her new Penal Laws against all the Roman Catholics indiscriminately, drove them into our deserts for the exercise of their worship, and obliged them to turn our subterraneous caves into Christian temples! Thus was Christ's cause, as well as the cause of our country, provided for, in the beginning of the present century; and thus did we promote the Protestant interest."

"The Protestant, which surely is the national interest, is far from being at present in a flourishing condition in Ireland. A Popish interest there can be none, but what relates to that, and he who should aver the contrary, under this immediate connexion with England, and under the present constitution of things, knows not what he means, or means nothing to the purpose, or means to deceive. Parties, like those of Whig and Tory, can spread no banner of rebellion or faction in a dependent country; And with regard to those who differ upon ecclesiastical principles, it is easy to see, that, were there but five hundred Protestants in this island, yet that the parent country would, in one single act of power, cast the balance, while the regency and army were of its side, and while all suspected persons were kept disarmed. Britain knows this, and in fact, knows us all alike, in regard to our manufactures and commerce. We rise, or we fall, together; and amazing it is that such a consideration should not unite us, to a man, should not supersede our unmeaning ecclesiastical scuffles, and let in one ray of light, to convince us that our misery or prosperity must roll on the same axis. The pastoral life of Papists is a great and distressing abatement from the small sum of prosperity we enjoy. It would be unfair, however, not to confess, that, their efforts, in our limited commerce, together with their late progress in our linen trade, have added considerably to our credit. As we may, therefore, reasonably presume, that no bill will be brought into Parliament to limit this progress, or forbid those manifest Popish contributions to this sum of credit, so may it be presumed likewise, that patriotism will hardly neglect offering a bill to swell such a sum, by every constitutional encouragement to the contributors. The distressed state of our country; the sudden and great decay of public credit; the silent moans of a wasteful famine, call aloud for a Parliamentary remedy, and no other can save us. May not some property in land, on the terms of other dissenters, be part of this remedy? Are those bogs and wastes which steam poison to the skies preferable to profitable lands in the hands of Roman Catholics? Can it be any support to the Protestant interest to see and feel a third part of our island hid in infectious morasses? Can any country in Europe carry on the cultivation of land with less interruption from its foreign enemies, or danger from its domestic inhabitants?"

"By fatal experience, we have discovered how vain it is to establish any law about tillage, but such as must, in the nature of the thing, execute itself. An effectual law to this purpose cannot consist in limitations on the tenant by the penalty of a short tenure, and subjecting even that to the inquisition of those worthy watchmen of the Protestant interest called spies and informers. Agriculture cannot take place on such terms; and pasturage alone must be the proper occupation of men who live by the day, and have but a flux and fugacious property to engross their attention. All this occasions an immoderate exportation of our specie (the produce of our linens); part, by those who fly from the effects of our Penal Laws, and a still greater by those who import the corn of distant regions, to feed the remains of our manufacturers and labourers. And well it would be for us, if this resource barely saved us, although at the expense of our future prosperity; But the case is fatally the reverse. In the three successive years, 1727, '28 and '29, we were visited by the severity of famine. In the years 1740 and 1741, an universal one spread over the face of the nation, and turned the counties and baronies of this kingdom into graves. A dreadful spectacle this! wherein the living, unfit for any other labor, were employed in burying the dead; the last and mournful office of fainting numbers, who expected and wanted the like tender care in a few days! The remorseless cruelty of the memorable year 1641, was more sparing of our inhabitants, and serves to let us see how much the noise of rebellion and civil war makes a deeper impression on our senses than the silent woe of a great waste of the human species! The years 1745 and 1756 exhibited such other scenes, though in a degree less raging; and this present year let the pale spectres of town and country describe. Would to God we could efface all these frightful figures! But the charity of this nation, boundless as it is, is far from sufficient. Let this, however, teach us one lesson, that famine and depopulation become the consequence of the pastoral life in all countries, and that no happiness can remain long within its reach; so far from it, that plenty itself, when it comes (plenty of vegetable food I mean) comes to spare, not to comfort, the lives of the inhabitants; they grow uneasy at superfluities, which finding no market at home or abroad, they naturally bury the memory of former wants in the quicker and less laborious profits of pasturage, until the same wants steal in, and throw us all into the calamity with which we are now visited. Such, then, is our blessed condition after a profound peace of near seventy years; and so little less do we suffer by the Roman Catholics, in their state of civil obedience, than we have suffered formerly, in the height of their contentions about power and property."

"The Roman Catholics of England exceed those of Ireland in property as they fall short of them in numbers. And certain it is, that after the deductions, by the Gavel-law, by migration, and by famine, are made, yet still, the Papists of Ireland are as numerous at this day as they were in the year seventeen hundred and three, when almost every expedient for preventing their growth was established. They and the Protestants together, indeed, hold no proportion to the numbers which this island might maintain in great affluence; and the latter, living chiefly on the rents of tenants, curled in industry, have made no progress, like what might be expected, in wealth and land improvements. The Dublin Society have made noble efforts, but from the nature of their constitution, they could make no progress adequate to our wants; and Ireland, so fairly entitled by climate, soil, and situation, to be one of the wealthiest, is at this hour, one of the poorest countries in Christendom, as we have before observed. Shall religion fasten this desirable system of things upon us, and teach us that civil orthodoxy is not sufficient for all the purposes of civil society?"

"Notwithstanding this excellence of our climate, yet a remarkable change (like some changes, equally observable, in several parts of America) hath of late produced very alarming effects in this island. For six years past, we hardly had any variations of seasons. The rains have been almost incessant, attended with blasting winds. The fruits of the earth have been unusually lessened, in quantity and maturity; and our distempered air produced the common consequences, famine among the inhabitants, and mortality to our flocks and herds. All the physical causes of this constant succession of bad weather may remain for ever inscrutable, but one is evident and demonstrable, our morasses and wastes increase the humidity of our air, and the humidity increases the morasses. Thus constant evaporation affording constant supplies, the evil must spread more and more, until this one cause of it is removed by the industry of man."

"To conclude: if some Parliamentary remedy be not administered in the present hectic state of this kingdom, the people inhabiting it will be undone.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

This distemperature is long growing upon us; it is now brought to a crisis. The cure is easy, since no symptoms remain of that ecclesiastical virulence which formerly produced dreadful convulsions, since no rage of opposition, nor the smallest disposition towards disaffection, can stand in the way of such a cure. No party at present is what it was in former time, nor are there any materials subsisting for forming new factions in the State. We are become wise by experience, wise by new lights of knowledge, and we are safe, by this length of settlement and faithful acquiescence under it. We have those advantages which alone can elevate the minds, soften the hearts, and better the condition of the public, if we can but prevail upon ourselves to draw out those advantages into use. We have renounced to superstition in religion, which never yet operated but to the debasement of our nature. Let us renounce to superstition in politics also. No more is necessary. In such a temper, we may confidently expect all the relief due from legislative wisdom to an innoxious, suffering, and famished people."

Some proposals for a Registry Bill, made in the Parliament of Ireland at this period, seriously alarmed O'Connor. On this subject, and on the differences existing amongst his co-religionists, he wrote as follows to Curry in December, 1757: "Alas! we are a people truly fallen, or we would co-operate with each other systematically in counteracting the proceedings of the parties that are united in nothing but in a league against us. They offer us as a boon, a registry bill, which is evidently calculated to extirpate our very remains. Nothing can be better known than that our spiritual economy cannot be exercised without the spiritual jurisdiction of our Bishops. Yet, the jurisdiction of Catholic Bishops is totally overturned by this blessed boon, the intent of which is therefore to destroy Popery by Popery itself. The difference between Queen Anne's registry bill and this one is, that the former was too penal to execute itself. But the latter is far from being so; it avails itself of our most despotic passions to destroy our best principles. Let us therefore draw up a solemn appeal, to be published in the foreign gazettes, which will acquit us in the face of Europe as men aggrieved merely on account of honest attachment to our principles. This will be of use to us in the day of exile, for I see now that there is no remedy but emigration. I can never think of this legal annihilation of episcopal authority, without alternate emotions of anger and dejection. I am moved to indignation when told, that after this bill passes, the penal clauses shall be as little enforced as those already existing. Vain presumption! This Penal Law is calculated to execute itself, and ourselves shall be the executioners."

Through the humanity of the Primate and some Bishops of the Established Church, the proposed Act was rejected by a small majority in the Dublin Parliament, and O'Connor was relieved from his gloomy anticipations of becoming—

"The sad historian of the pensive plain."

Prior to O'Connor's connexion with Curry, an accidental circumstance had induced the latter to turn his attention to the history of the Irish movements in 1641. These formed the theme of annual sermons in the Protestant churches throughout Ireland, on which occasions some preachers were accustomed to denounce in violent terms the principles which they ascribed to Roman Catholics. Curry embodied part of the results of his investigations in a treatise, privately printed in 1747, entitled "A Brief Account from the most authentic Protestant Writers, of the Causes, Motives, and Mischiefs of the Irish Rebellion on the 23rd day of October, 1641, delivered in a Dialogue between a Dissenter and a Member of the Church of Ireland as by Law established." To this treatise, Walter Harris, editor of Sir James Ware's works, published an elaborate answer, with the following title:—"Fiction Unmasked: or, an Answer to a Dialogue lately published by a Popish Physician, and pretended to have passed between a Dissenter, and a Member of the Church of Ireland; wherein the causes, motives, and mischiefs, of the Irish Rebellion and Massacres in 1641 are laid thick upon the Protestants." This publication of Harris was followed by a volume compiled by Curry, with a preface by O'Connor, and issued anonymously under the following title: "Historical Memoirs of the Irish Rebellion in the year 1641; extracted from Parliamentary Journals, State Acts, and the most eminent Protestant historians, (together with an Appendix, containing several authentic papers relating to this Rebellion, not referred to in these Memoirs.) In a letter to Walter Harris Esq., occasioned by his answer

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"to a late Dialogue on the Causes, Motives, and Mischiefs, of this Rebellion."

Some of the difficulties with which O'Connor and Curry were at this time surrounded, may be judged from the following particulars:—

"The 'Memoirs' were first printed with the greatest caution and secrecy, with respect to the author's name and place of residence. The proof-sheets were sent to Reilly's who carried them in the dead hour of the night to Doctor Curry's. They were published in August, 1758. A man of great consequence, an acquaintance of the Doctor's, invited him to dinner, a week after the publication, and asked him if he knew the author? Curry answered in the affirmative.—'I was told,' said the other, 'in a large and considerable company where I dined yesterday, that it was written by a Popish Priest whom you know.'—'Suppose it was,' said the Doctor, 'Surely truth is orthodox, though it should come from the Devil.'—'But it is a dangerous book, it charges all the massacres of 1641 on Protestants.' Pray Sir, have you read it?—'No.'—'Has the person who gave you this account?'—'I believe not.'—'O then I have read it, and have subscribed to the printing of it; and the author's whole accusation is taken from Protestant writers, and that accusation is against Puritans only, the very Puritans who contributed to cut off the King's head, and raise Cromwell to the throne. And were those Puritans Protestants, in your estimation?'—'No, by G—d.—'Well then, Sir, never ask any questions about that book again (for men are liars), but read the book, satisfy yourself."

In the preface to the "Memoirs," O'Connor wrote as follows:—

"Mr. Harris should know that no honest man, Protestant or Papist, of the present age, is concerned in the conduct of Protestants or Papists of any former age of a very different character; otherwise than by contrasting the causes and effects in the one, with those in the other, and thereby removing any ill impressions the public may still retain in regard to times to very different from our own. This is placing a proper mirror before the reader, and improving our minds and manners by the truth of the representation."—"To confound times and things, is making the worst use possible of history: until we can make the proper distinction between them, civil and religious prejudices must prevail, to the utter undoing of a country, so peculiarly circumstanced, as to be incapable of a moment's happiness, without the mutual co-operation and concord of its people. The wisdom of knowing and pursuing our proper interest, lies within the reach of the narrowest capacity, and within a very narrow compass. It requires, one would think, but very little information to be convinced, that the Papists of the present age are not to be paralleled with those, who kept our English ancestors in an almost continual state of warfare. That, in the beginning of the Reformation, they had the greatest stake in this world to struggle for, the religion then established in Ireland, and the power together with the possessions of their fathers; neither of which cases doth or can exist at present. Their insurrections, in the reigns before the Revolution, were, for the most part, the contentions of distress with arbitrary power. Insurrections in the present, would be efforts of impious treachery against a lawful and protecting Government; the defiance of the most awful institutes of God and man. The Roman Catholics, it is true, lie now under the lash of several Penal Laws, and are exposed to many more: but these laws have long since received a constitutional ratification; and their religion commands obedience, not resistance. They have as little the inclination, as they have the right, to seek any alleviation of their sufferings but what they can obtain from the mildest of Kings at the head of a wise Parliament."

Towards 1756, O'Connor and Curry projected the formation of an Association of the most eminent Catholic clergy and laity to represent in Dublin the entire body, and to prepare statements of grievances and petitions for redress. It was, however, some time before the project was adopted. Differences of opinion as to political expediency existed between the aristocratic or landed interest, represented by Lord Trimleston, and the mercantile or popular section, who agreed with the views of O'Connor and Curry. Lord Trimleston and his party conceived that a profound silence was the most eloquent argument of the oppressed, and that sufficient had been written by Curry and O'Connor, the sincerity of whose professions they considered were doubted by their rulers. With the co-operation of Mr. Wyse, of Waterford, father of the late Sir Thomas Wyse, a Committee of Roman Catholics was constituted towards 1758 for the purpose of endeavouring to obtain a mitigation of some of the Penal Laws which had been so long endured. On the threatened invasion by Confians, in 1759, the Catholics agreed at a meeting in Dublin to present the Duke of Bedford, then Viceroy, with an address. This document was prepared by O'Connor, and presented through the Speaker of the House of Commons. In it the Catholics declared their loyalty, and prayed that, before long, means might be devised to render so numerous a body more useful members to the community, and more strengthening friends to the State than they could possibly have hitherto been, under the restraint of the many Penal Laws against them. On the accession of George II. in 1760, an address was presented to him by the Irish Catholics, assuring him of their grateful and affectionate loyalty, and expressing a hope that they alone amongst his subjects might not be left incapable of promoting the general welfare and prosperity of their country.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

In the following year, O'Connor again brought forward the case of the Catholics, in an anonymous publication entitled "The Dangers of Popery to the present Government Examined." On some aspects of the question he wrote as follows in this tract, which he dedicated to the Earl of Halifax, Lord Lieutenant, and strengthened his arguments by extracts from the writings of Bishop Berkeley:—

"Ireland, after a profound peace of seventy years, wears still a frightful countenance. All this is evidently owing to the Tartar life led by Papists, who, instead of improving on a short tenure, keep their lands waste, to prevent as much as possible any temptation to leases in reversion; what Protestants alone are qualified to take. Pasturage, a lazy, wasting, and depopulating sort of industry, is alone adapted to their condition; and, though the linen manufacture is open to them in appearance, yet it is certain, beyond all controversy, that an expensive occupation, which requires so great a number of hands and much time and expense to train them, can never succeed to any considerable advantage without some durable property in land. If you must give land to the manufacture, you must give it also to the manufacturers.

"Ireland is excluded from some branches of commerce, to which she is entitled, by climate, soil, and situation. But our mother-country gave her an equivalent and an ample one. The linen manufacture is that equivalent; agriculture and the linen manufacture are the inseparable stamina of our public prosperity. They cannot be kept asunder one moment but to the public detriment. Labour is the principle of life to both; and as this principle is weak or strong, so will that prosperity decay or flourish. In truth, were both sufficiently encouraged in our three pasture provinces for sixty years past, the wealth of Ireland would be fourfold to what it is at present; and this, no doubt, is too low a calculation. Such a fund under proper regulation, would render Ireland the happiest, as it would render Britain the most powerful country in Europe. Shall we sacrifice all this (the experience of the past and the prospect of the future) to the vain fears of Popery; to the childish dread of Papists, disarmed by law, disarmed by conscience, and disarmed by the knowledge of their own true and invariable interests? Or can this Popery, can these Papists be ever formidable to a nation severed from the Continent; the remotest in Europe from foreign danger; the safest from domestic faction; brilled by the power of England and Scotland united; invulnerable on all sides? Can, I say, Popery be actively dangerous to such a nation? It is impossible. But senseless apprehensions, in the midst of the profoundest security, are not at all impossible, as their producing the effects of real danger are far from being impossible also.

"When, in the beginning of the present century, laws were framed here to prevent the growth of Popery, attention was drawn so much that way alone, that sufficient provision was not made against the growth of idleness, or other crops of national evil, the consequences of it. The idle pasture life of Papists is the most grievous of those consequences; to it alone, most of our natural advantages are sacrificed. Through the neglect of agriculture, for sixty years past, our people, in the course of that period, were frequently exposed to the miseries of famine; and the linen manufacture (confined to one province,) was not sufficient to preserve multitudes from perishing; but multitudes it saved also; at the expense, however, of the drain of our specie into remote kingdoms to purchase their bread corn. Thus it fares with our wise policy that what we gain in one channel runs out in another, which might be soon and easily closed up. In truth, agriculture is not, properly speaking, neglected, but virtually prohibited here, save only to those who have permanent and 'undiscoverable' interests in land, for to those who have not, an expensive undertaking, in reclaiming and cultivating land, would be ruinous; and pasturage is their proper occupation. They can have no better alternative on a land-holding, limited in profit, limited in time, and loaded with legal penalties in the course of that time, short as it is. See here, then, what a foundation is laid for agriculture, and the linen manufacture, in three fine and extensive provinces; agriculture which fills kingdoms with plenty, with industrious inhabitants, and with manufactures, at the mercy, in a great degree, of men whose interest it is to depopulate the land, and whose hard fate it is to be under the necessity of maintaining a private against the public interest!"—"To tolerate near a million of people, to pursue a mere life of pasturage, and, what is more, to license them, by law, to waste and depopulate our country, will seem strange in speculation; it will appear more so, when we consider, that nearly a third of the island is already reduced to bog and morass, through the want of industry for eight or nine centuries, since the first eruptions of the Normans and Danes in the year 812.—Might not our Papists (as was proposed some years ago) be admitted into some property in those wilds, where no man can be said to have a property at present? Would not the reduction of our unprofitable mountains and large flats remove their contagious air, people this island, and render it one of the finest countries on the globe? Would not such a stake in the hands of Papists render their affection more secure, and their connexion with the public more indissoluble? Their loyalty may be ensured by religion, and by gratitude, also, to the monarchs who have so long tolerated their worship; but connexion cannot be obtained without property; and a property in lands, which now return no advantage (but which, by culture, would adorn and enrich this country) cannot be so hurtful in even Popish hands, as in their present state.—In truth, this species of political arithmetic brings its own demonstration so glaringly, that the men who objected to it, could afford no better reason for their dislike than what Chancellor Somers gave for his opposition to a reasonable peace from France, at the end of the Succession-War. 'He hated the French nation.' Thus do the men I intend here hate the work, only because they hate the workmen! With such men it would be in vain to reason.

"We have (we bless God) men among us of a more elevated turn, who give fair play to common sense, and disdain to exchange the prosperity of their country for groundless opinion, unprofitable error, or superstitious policy."

Henry Brooke, who had, as we have seen, with much violence assailed the Catholics, now agreed to act as a literary and political advocate for them, in consideration of payment to be provided through their Committee. From Curry's "Memoirs," and from materials furnished by O'Connor, he prepared and published a work addressed to the Lord Lieutenant, entitled "The Trial of the Roman Catholics." The ensuing years failed to produce any of the expected political ameliorations for the people, whose condition led to agrarian outbreaks in Munster, which were followed by several executions.

Although not relaxing in his political vigilance, O'Connor during those years applied himself also to historic studies. He carried on a correspondence with Dr. Ferdinand Warner, who undertook a History of Ireland. Lord Lyttleton bore testimony as follows to the assistance which O'Connor rendered to him in his work on Henry II.:—

"As for what had passed in Ireland during the times that I write of, before the English adventurers in Desmond's service went thither, the best authorities for it are the Annals of Ireland, compiled by cotemporary writers, with extracts of which, translated from the original Irish, I have been favoured by a gentleman well skilled in that language, Charles O'Connor, Esq., who, with the noble blood which flows in his veins, has naturally inherited a passionate love for the honour of his country, and therefore willingly assists in any undertaking that may render the history of it more known, and more complete."

Curry, in 1765, published anonymously "An Essay 'towards a New History of the Gunpowder Treason," and this treatise was followed in 1766 by his "Candid Inquiry into the Munster Disorders."

In the same year, a second edition was published of O'Connor's "Dissertations on the History of Ireland." In this work the author entered into a critical examination of "Ossian" and other publications of Macpherson.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

The contents of the new edition of the "Dissertations" were as follows:—

- "I. General idea of the subject.
- "II. The original of the antient Scots.
- "III. Of the language and letters of the antient Scots.
- "IV. Of the political government of the antient Scots.
- "V. The same subject continued.
- "VI. Of the arts and sciences of the antient Scots.
- "VII. The same subject continued.
- "VIII. Of the manners, customs, commerce, and laws of the antient Scots.
- "IX. The same subject continued.
- "X. Of the laws of Tanistry and Eric, etc.
- "XI. Chronology of the antient Scots.
- "XII. Topographical description of Ireland, deduced from the earliest times, and compared with the accounts of foreign geographers.
- "XIII. Idea of the Scottish history, from the Tusathian Constitution to the introduction of Christianity.
- "XIV. From the reception of Christianity to the commencement of the Norman war.
- "XV. The same subject continued.
- "XVI. From the commencement of the Norman war, in the ninth century, to the death of Malachy I.
- "XVII. From the death of Malachy I. to the end of the alternate succession between the houses of Meath and Tyrone.
- "XVIII. From the dissolution of the alternate succession between the Clan-Colman and Tyrone houses, to the end of the Hy-Niall Monarchy.
- "XIX. From the dissolution of the Hy-Niall monarchy to the invasion of Henry II. King of England.
- "A Dissertation on the History of Scotland:—
- "I. On the first migrations and final settlement of the Scots in North Britain.
- "II. Observations on Mr. Mac Pherson's Dissertations and notes on the poems, Fingal and Temora.
- "III. Mr. Mac Pherson's Hereditary Monarchy of Scots, examined."

In their efforts for procuring a mitigation of the Penal Laws, O'Connor and Curry had an energetic and devoted ally in Nicholas, Count Taaffe. This nobleman, although a Roman Catholic, was attached politically to the Hanoverian interest. He belonged to an ancient Anglo-Irish family of Conacht, one of whom was Earl of Carlingford; but their property in Ireland was lost through the operation of the Penal Laws. Taaffe, educated on the Continent, distinguished himself during the war of 1738. He was conspicuous for his bravery at Belgrade, became Chancellor to Leopold, father of Francis, and obtained the "golden key" of office from Charles VI., his successor. Taaffe was in especial favour with the Empress Maria Theresa, and was employed by her in affairs with George II., who evinced much attachment to him. By marriage, Lord Taaffe became allied with some of the most ancient and illustrious families in the Austrian Empire. In the hope of obtaining for his Irish countrymen a relaxation of the Penal Laws, he continued, even when far advanced in years, to make journeys from his estate in Silesia to England and Ireland. Throughout his frequent personal intercourse with the King of England and his ministers he laboured to impress upon them the policy of establishing toleration for all sects, similar to that existing in Austria. Taaffe dissented from the policy of silence advocated by Lord Trimleston's party, and coincided with the views of O'Connor and Curry, the former of whom he visited at Belanagare in connexion with these affairs. O'Connor, at Taaffe's request, prepared for him a statement of the case of the Irish Catholics. This was adopted by him and published in 1767, with the title of "Observations on Affairs in Ireland, from the Settlement in 1691 to the present time, by Nicholas, Lord Viscount Taaffe." The following interesting autobiographical passages by Lord Taaffe occur in these "Observations":—

"Though I had been called early into Germany, I yet had more frequent occasions of being particularly acquainted with the state of affairs in my native country, than falls in the way of those who through want of employment, or through religious differences, take their flight into foreign lands, and never return. Before religion became a disqualification, my family distinguished itself early on behalf of the British Crown, and had obtained those national honours which are the rewards of national services. My ancestors distinguished themselves also, through the success of their negotiations between Britain and several German courts; they have obtained ample possessions and dignities from the house of Austria and court of Lorraine; and they compounded so well with fortune, that the principles which excluded them from serving in their native country were no obstacle to their being useful to Britain in another where their influence was considerable, and where those principles were no disqualification. By blood I was the next in remainder to the Earl of Carlingford, and had consequently the prospect of a large patrimonial succession open to me. The expectations of my youth were hereby raised, and, much as I had been employed in military services, I did not omit keeping an eye to the state of affairs in my native country, as it was there my expectations were, in a considerable degree, to be disappointed or gratified.

"Were the knowledge I acquired personal to myself only, the public should not at this nor at any time be troubled on that account. But very considerable numbers of equally well-affected subjects, being involved in the causes and consequences of what determined the fate of my own affairs in this country, I shall succinctly take a view of the state of things here, from the final settlement in sixteen hundred and ninety-one to the present time, omitting, however, every particular but what relates to the Penal Laws passed within this period; the provocations given to such laws, and the effects, both immediate and remote, which they had on the true interests of the nation.

"It is the best legacy I can leave behind me, and the only service which the established laws permit me to render my native country. Sequestered by my religion from my seat in Parliament, and stripped of most of the privileges of an Irish peer, I leave this pledge of affection to my King, to my country, and to our present free constitution; and I may still be useful if the time is come, as I trust it is, when true information can dare encounter every favourite error, and when prejudices equally worthless and unsociable are renounced in favour of maxims which experience has shown to be the lessons of nature, and which alone can render nations happy.

"My readers must not expect elegance of style in the account I am giving. Truth, in my opinion, requires no assistance from the ornament of words, but comes best recommended by its own native simplicity. The matter I have collected has been digested by a friend, under my own eye, nor did I chuse him for eloquence but for his fidelity in conveying my thoughts in the plainness I dictated them. I shall, therefore, content myself with a bare recital of facts, and such judgements as naturally flow from them. They are facts of which I have been mostly an eye-witness, and where this advantage failed me, I took care to be well informed. The Acts of Parliament, passed within the period I have prescribed to myself, shall be my principal guides, and with the reader they shall be my vouchers, leaving him to the judgement which he will doubtless exercise on the justness or weakness of my reasonings on the effects and consequences of those laws.

"When the Irish submitted to King William's government in sixteen hundred and ninety-one, they were reluctantly drawn into a measure which wisdom should make their choice, but which several incidents prevented their adopting sooner than they have done. That monarch engaged to preserve entire to the Irish Catholics all the civil rights and immunities they enjoyed under Charles II. Such an engagement, just in itself, was the more commendable, as it was founded on the spirit of the Revolution lately brought about, and grafted on the principles of toleration and civil liberty. It was an engagement which King William could never be persuaded to depart from, and it soon produced its natural consequences. The security he granted to religious dissenters of all denominations restored industry, and plenty of all things; useful arts were introduced, the land was cultivated, and a fine island, reduced to a desert by the late war, soon assumed a new face. In fact, Ireland was never happier than under that monarch. He saw, though others could not or would not see, that the Irish Catholics might, by kind treatment, be rendered as good subjects as the Catholics in Holland, who served him faithfully, and fought under him against King James.

"Neither the vicinity of King James, who still had friends in the kingdoms he abdicated, nor the power of

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq. Louis XIV., who maintained an army of Irish, who followed the fortune of that prince, could influence King William to alter his conduct towards the Catholics who submitted to his government. He trusted to their engagements with him, and to the security he gave them; and their steady adherence to those engagements, brought him daily proofs that his confidence was well placed.

"This conduct of affairs, so immediately subsequent to a great revolution, ought not to be slightly passed over without a few reflections. Numbers of those who followed the fortune of the late King James were still alive. The attainders and forfeitures, consequent of their resistance and flight, rankled in the breasts of those unhappy men. The victories of Louis XIV. in the war of that time, flattered them in the expectation of returning to their native country, and overturning the establishment. They had some retainers and friends ready to join them on any invasion, a set of people of all religions, who had nothing to lose, and something to expect, in the convulsions of government. Then, if ever, King William was in danger, from subjects he so lately reduced by his arms. The appearances of it were never stronger; but that wise prince trusted to the security he gave. He interested the people in the subjection he extorted from them by the force of his arms, and they, on their part, preferred the stability granted to their properties, to the uncertainties of a new war or the return of King James, who possibly could give no such stability: such were the principles and effects of King William's policy—but that policy died along with him.

"Anne, the daughter of the late King James, succeeded to King William. The dangers which, through his whole reign, surrounded him, were removed from her. The bulk of the people were reconciled to the late Revolution. She entered into the confederate war against France, and conducted it victoriously to the end. All the efforts of that nation to disturb the domestic repose of her subjects were defeated by the wisdom of her councils and superiority of her fleets. The partizans of the late King James, at home and abroad, were reduced in their numbers by death; and every event of the time reduced the survivors to that state of insignificance, which weakness adds to despair.

"Thus we see, that not only the reality, but the appearance of danger to the government were removed; and yet, what was the consequence? By a strange inversion of things, our apprehensions increased as every cause of apprehension vanished. The nation was alarmed anew. Old animosities were revived, fresh panics were infused. The Irish Catholics (who embarked their whole fortune on the same bottom with the Revolution, and whose only interest it was that the state bark should glide smoothly) were no longer to be trusted, and a maxim was established that the state vessel could not be safe while such men had any unperishable goods on board. It was deemed that the security of self-interest, which is the support of every government, could not be a rule to go by when applied to them. To distress their minds, damp their industry, and render their property precarious, was deemed sound policy. This was the favourite system opposed to that adopted by King William; and conformably to this system it was that Queen Anne was prevailed upon to annihilate the security he gave, and revoke the public faith pledged to those Catholics as the price of their submission at Limerick, in sixteen hundred and ninety-one.

"When Queen Anne gave her royal assent to the legal incapacities and penalties laid on the Irish Catholics, these formed more than two thirds of the nation; but in a situation, however, which rendered labor and industry absolutely necessary to their existence. Under so northern and unsteady a climate as ours, this necessity had demands on public encouragement, to lighten the burthens imposed by nature. Any additional weight laid on in such a case renders the bearer uneasy and listless, and, if it be great, he either sinks under it, or flies from it. What therefore could induce to the necessity of reducing our Catholic labourers, farmers, and manufacturers to this alternative? What advantages, what honor hath this nation acquired, by tying up the hands of a million of people, from co-operating with the public, in the public service?

"It was not pretended, at that time, that the Irish Catholics were restless, or disobedient, under the Government: On the contrary, it has been acknowledged, that their visible conduct was unexceptionable; and time hath proved also, that they merited and improved the repose King William gave them. This conduct, however, served them in no stead. New burthens were laid on them, from time to time; and we can have but one solution for such a problem in politics. The danger of the public was sounded high, at the time in question; and the legislature were induced to think that constitutional security to such numbers, supposed to be infected with the most virulent principles, would hazard the safety of the establishment."—"Let North America be the mirror to reflect the benign face of universal indulgence to conscience, that monitor within, which, when it suggests our proper duty, as members of the community, ought to remain uncontrolled from all human restraints. In that part of the world, so lately conquered by his Majesty's arms, peace and order join their hands. The Catholics there, tho' habituated to a Catholic government, have reconciled themselves to the government of a Protestant monarch, who permits them to worship God in their own way, and abridges them of no civil privileges for so doing. What have Irish Catholics, born under the present establishment, and ever obedient under it; what, I say, have such men done, or what civil guilt can be prodned against them, to distinguish their case from that of their brethren in Canada?

"Wherever the spirit of intolerance prevails, it spreads immediate evils about itself, and sows the seeds of many more. In Germany, this spirit hath been happily dispossessed. There, no subject forfeits the civil rights of the community, because he dissents from the established mode of worship. In most of the states, of which that great empire is composed, it could hardly be conceived that the alternative of liberty or slavery should be the lot of any citizen, just as he believed or rejected this or that set of religious principles: no more than civil orthodoxy is required in those countries; and the deviation from that, and that alone, is penal. By this policy, (adopted among the Catholic and Protestant states) civil rewards and punishments are directed to their proper objects; and the great mischief of exposing men to the danger of hypocrisy, or infidelity, from insincere conversions, is avoided: in a word, religious hatred is confined to private breasts, and the rights of conscience are preserved inviolate. The house of Austria in particular, hath, in my own time, derived inexhaustible strength from this measure. It is a measure that has been invariably pursued by the Emperor Charles the VI. and [Maria Theresa] her Apostolic Majesty (the heiress of his wisdom and virtues, as well as of his kingdoms) has reaped such mighty advantages from it, that further arguments in favour of toleration would be but a waste of words, after setting before our eyes the effects it had on that great Queen's affairs in the day of her distress. Her moderation, and the equable conduct she held, won the affections of her Protestant subjects, and the resentment of the wrong she sustained armed all Hungary in her cause. By reigning thus in the hearts of her subjects, she triumphed over her enemies; and this she owed, in a great degree, to her not requiring conformity to her own religion, as the only qualification for enjoying the civil rights which her Protestant subjects possess in common with the Catholics.—These facts I have collected for the information of our countrymen, and I heartily wish they may edify by them. They are facts of which I have been long an eye-witness; and I may presume upon obtaining more credit from readers of all persuasions than a legion of mercenary pamphleteers who write to please a party, and propagate, as they pick up, any falsehood for that end."—"In the present short representation, I had no other view but the good of my King and country. If I have offered any one good argument in favour of either, the trouble I have taken is amply compensated; and I thought the present task, weakly as I have executed it, the more incumbent on me, as others of better abilities have declined it. With the integrity of my intentions, and the deference I owe to every legal authority, as the appointment of God, I do not fear to give offence.—In the access I had the honour of having to his late Majesty [George II.], of glorious memory, he very graciously accepted from me the assurance I gave him of the loyalty and obedience of his Irish Catholic subjects, in the time of an open Rebellion. The same assurance I repeated to his Majesty's Viceroy, and other principal persons in authority in this kingdom, and I flatter myself that I did not thoroughly labour in vain. I endeavoured to remove some prejudices, which could never find place in the breasts of those I applied to, if they were not owing to mistakes and misinformations. To remove mistakes, which may affect the good and the peace of our country, is every man's duty, who has been so well informed as I have been.—The rest falls properly under the consideration of the legislature.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

"Let me conjure my fellow subjects, the British and Irish Catholics, to continue steady in that loyalty, that subserviency to the ruling powers, which their religion prescribes; grateful to the sovereign who protects them; patient and resigned under the laws which punish them. Let their civil conduct, like their civil principles, be such as every government must approve, and which our own legislature may (possibly) one day reward. Should it, however, be deemed expedient to continue the burthens they lie under, let them consider their sufferings as remedies, not as evils; as the pre-ventives of crimes on the one hand, and as the punishment of their sins, on the other. In a state of suffering, Christians often fill their proper post; and, of that post, self-denial is the out-guard. A state of prosperity is the state of danger; often as fatal as it is flattering. Let us not, therefore, lose the merit of the sacrifice we make, that of worldly advantages, the bitterest acquisitions on earth, should we acquire them by dissimulation, or, in other words, by the renunciation of principles, which are the best tests of human probity. Sincerity, insulted and punished sincerity, is a source of comfort in the world we inhabit: in a better state we place our hope in a higher, nay, in an eternal reward. If we act in a manner unworthy of this hope we are undone; we lose the merit of our sufferings; and thus, criminal towards our God, how can we presume on favours from the governors which He hath set over us?"

Some unfriendly strictures published against Lord Taaffe's "Observations" attracted the attention of O'Conor, and we find him writing as follows on the subject to Curry on the 4th of December, 1767: "I am enclosed in my hermitage this month past, and so undisturbed that the chamber I sit in is as silent as 'place as the grave. In this solitude I have not been idle. I undertook a vindication of Lord T[aa]ffe's civil principles, in a letter to the author who undertook to examine and confute his 'Observations,' and I should indeed take no notice of it, if I did not think it useful to prove that writer's position, 'that the principles of the Catholics are inconsistent with the safety of a Protestant Government,' to be absolutely groundless. I never had better historical materials for any work, nor more leisure to digest them to my purpose. This is too much, and yet it is odd enough, after all our resolutions, that you and I, un-called, un-commissioned, censured, should still be brought back to our first impulse to clear this question by turning every face of it to the public. I was fondly thinking that such impulses were not given in vain, because vanity can have no share in the choice of so disagreeable a subject. Be it as it will, and be the success ever so little answerable to our wishes, yet the design was honest. The rest is left to Providence."

In his vindication of Lord Taaffe, O'Conor wrote as follows, under date of the first of January, 1768:

"To enter into a rational examination of this question, wherein the case of five hundred thousand fettered subjects is concerned, instead of taking it for granted, that they are a band of conspirators within the State, may possibly some time or other engage the attention of the legislature. To excite that attention has been the sole purpose of Lord Taaffe's book: He laboured all along to shew, that communion with the See of Rome, far from inferring a latent conspiracy against our Protestant government, laid its votaries under a religious obligation of sacrificing every feeling of legal restraint, every sense of civil punishment, to the duty of obedience to the governors God has set over them. Of all this you strangely aver that his Lordship produced no proof.

"But, sir, hath he not furnished you with the most impregnable proof in the world: his own intuitive knowledge of his religious obedience here under his Britannic Majesty; and in Silesia, under the King of Prussia. Will this intuitive knowledge, this civil duty of allegiance, be in the least affected by your saying, 'that his Lordship is ignorant of his own religion, and that he is excommunicated by the Bulla Cœne'?

"Among other strong proofs, his Lordship instanced also in the loyalty of his Britannic Majesty's subjects in Lower Saxony, and in the same active obedience of the Catholics in Brandenburg. But all this you say proceeds from fear, or some other equally base principle; not from any principle of conscience. A most compendious and charitable solution surely, which extirpates a most important duty from its parent incentive, and which (as my Lord Taaffe has observed before me) strips every civil duty of its proper reward!

"It is happy, however, that the great monarchs I have mentioned, pronounce a very different sentence:

that they govern men by their affections, not by their fears; by their interests, not by their wants; by their capacity to good, not by their impotence to evil. Assuredly 'benefactions (not distrusts), are the links of all public as well as private concord.'—"When the Lord Taaffe published his thoughts on affairs in Ireland, that is, on the policy of departing from the late King William's plan relatively to the Roman Catholics of this kingdom, and on the effects of his immediate successor's different conduct relatively to them and to our public prosperity, all men of candour did justice to the integrity of his Lordship's intentions, however they might differ in opinion from him. His sole purpose was to conciliate our legislature to the civil principles of the Roman Catholics of these kingdoms, and he laboured to collect the proofs, which alone could give a conviction that there could be no danger, but that great good would result from returning to King William's plan of a test and toleration; two things the most reasonable in themselves, and the most compatible with the good of government.

"While his Lordship was digesting his thoughts on this national subject, his friends advised him to anticipate the current objections to his religious principles in general by yielding up hypothetically what the warmest adversary could require in such an argument. I say his religious principles in general, for he retained one principle, which he strenuously contends for through his whole book, and that alone, with which the public, as a political society, hath any concern. This he erected into a fort, from which no adversary could drive him, and which it must be a welcome information to the public to find him possessed of, as it would give a strong presumption that his whole party would enter that fort along with him: and the principle he contended for was this—'the religious obligation of Catholics to pay active obedience to the present Protestant government'—a religious duty uncompounded with civil obedience to any other power on earth.

"As such a position was not an opinion, but a matter of knowledge, within his Lordship's own breast; he presumed that he foreclosed all adversaries here, and that none could be found hardy enough to contest that point with him. But he was mistaken. The period of time still exists, wherein the recognition of their own real principles is forbid to certain men, and wherein the world is modestly called upon to accept as theirs the principles coined for them by others, however detestable they may be in their own nature, or however injurious to the people accused of them! For weeks, for months together, the old nobleman has been maltreated in the London and St. James's Chronicles; in Reviews, Mercuries, and Magazines. The whole torrent of commonplace abuse bore down now on the Catholics of Britain and Ireland, and their advocate hath been represented as one ignorant of his own religion. Both he and they were considered as men unskilled in the doctrines of Popery, and yet, were treated and abused as Papists at the same time. Such was the equity and such the consistency of the journalists, and you, sir, far from disdaining such a conduct, have rather improved upon it, by collecting into one book what they have retailed in piece-meal invectives and unfair representations. You have exerted all your strength to strip his Lordship of the only religious principle he thought proper to give the public: you have catechised him into a principle he abhorred, and which no good Catholic would avow: and you have imposed that, and equally pernicious principles, on your readers, as points of faith, which (you say) he and the people he pleads for ought to maintain, under pain of excommunication, damnation, &c."—"It is time to draw this long deduction to a conclusion, and little more need be added to shew, the readiness of our Catholics to discharge their civil duty, in active obedience to the government God hath set over them. Let those (if any such there be) who adopt the civil doctrines, or abet the secular pretensions of a Gregory VII., a Boniface VIII., or any other of their imposing-deposing successors, be answerable to the public for their political heterodoxy. No man can impose such doctrines on those who renounce them. Neither a Bellarmine in Italy, nor a Barlow* in England, can do it, and when you attempt it you have ninety-nine in a hundred of all the Catholics in Europe against you. Let us not confound the loyal with the recusant, but make that separation between them, which (as my Lord Taaffe observes) puts us in possession of the mighty advantage of knowing our friends and detecting our enemies—the advantage of

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

* Thomas Barlow, Bishop of Lincoln, 1675–1691.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

preventing any mistakes in the distribution of rewards and punishments, those powerful sanctions which form the strength and secure the stability of this and every free government."—"You and I, sir, have the good of our country at heart, you by alarming it against men whom you deem its perpetual enemies by principle; I by shewing, from facts, how groundless that alarm is, and how innocent the people who lie under your accusation. We differ only about the means of serving the public, and that public will decide between us. Our end is the same: and, united on that principle, we are intitled to each others good wishes: I leave you heartily in possession of mine."

Lord Taaffe died, at a very advanced age, in 1769, at his castle at Ellisehan, and was succeeded by his grandson, Rodolphus, seventh Viscount Taaffe. Of Lord Taaffe we have been left the following notice by the Rev. Charles O'Connor, who observes that it was to be regretted that his grandfather "could not be prevailed upon to give us anecdotes of this nobleman":—

"Educated in Germany, his Lordship's manners and character resembled those of a German; his candour could not allow him to conceal those feelings, which were roused in a peculiar manner when any person of a liberal education appeared to him guilty of an action unworthy of a noble and an elevated mind. Sincere, unaffected, and generous, he held in abhorrence that crooked policy which an honest man has no occasion for, and a gentleman would scorn to recur to, even if he had; and to the levity of our frivolous entertainments over which disease presides with leaden sceptre, he ever preferred the frugal board, where unlimited confidence, sentiments mutually interchanged, and true friendship, lead the soul from the busy scenes of servility and flattery to that Christian fortitude, and hardness of character which preserves the imate and primeval dignity of the human mind.

"As soon as Lord Taaffe found that his solicitations with Lord Trimleston were ineffectual, he carried the petition drawn up by the Catholic Committee to his friend Primate Stone, who was so taken with his plain, unaffected, and at the same time noble and dignified manners, that he pledged his co-operation. But this humane prelate was obliged to submit to the ministerial temper of the times."

In the collection before us the earliest letter is that addressed by Charles O'Connor to Dr. John Curry on the 2d of June, 1756. The following extracts from these papers from that date to the close of the year 1769, will, with the letters of Lord Taaffe, be found to contain much original matter throwing new lights on the affairs of Ireland, as well as on the historical, literary, and political matters of the time in that country and in England.

Charles O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

June 2, 1756.

"I read over Harris's malicious 'Dialogue,' and reprisals could be made to shame his patrons. His interpolations of Ware's works, and of the 'Annals of Donegal' are so frequent and glaring, that persons who make future researches must trust him in nothing, but lie under the necessity of consulting the originals which his voluminous works may render it difficult to come at in print or MSS. Did you not observe how he hath sacrificed common sense to his malice, even in his title-page? Were it worth the while, he ought to be gutted up and gibetted for the good of the public. I would wish, however, that you informed me whether the decisions which he charges on the Universities of Salamanca and Valladolid are genuine. I read Dr. Lesly's book* with pleasure. His theory of passive obedience I pass by. But his matters of fact opposed to the untruths of Dr. King are excellent, and may be of good use hereafter. Indeed, were this work lost, we should entirely be strangers to several material historical facts. The want of such a work in regard to the decennial war of [16]41, gave party historians great advantages; as the want of common concert or common policy among the Catholics gives but a sorry chance for any good defence of their measures or principles. But certainly in proper time something ought to be attempted in this way for the instruction of the public."

July 28, 1756.

"You do not deserve my thanks only: you merit the thanks of your country for the hint you formerly dropt to me of publishing in the papers the 'test' in the 'Principles' at this critical time. If I had not this minute my foot in the stirrup for the county of Sligo, I would sit down and endeavour at some preamble introductory of it. I am heartily sorry your citizens of Dublin did not invite all parties into their association. The Catholics, however, should not take this pretermission, or if you please, this exclusion ill. It might be (I hope it is) an oversight. I once thought that an association might be formed on our side. I was mistaken, and reasons might be assigned for the difficulty, which it would be indiscreet even to hint at in the 'Principles.' There is pride tho' no disaffection at the bottom of this affair. He who would take the lead, and who might be perhaps intitled to take it, would at the same time be objected to for presumption, for insufficiency, etc. The want of the good sense and of the honesty . . . would certainly overturn such a scheme, and it were better never undertake it, than let those who suspect us, be spectators of a species of madness and nonsense which this very suspicious spirit of the times would construe into disaffection. Let me know whether you and I concur in this thought. Some reformers think we ought be cautious in pressing officiously such a 'test' as is proposed, in our present state of bondage, because that very state will render our sincerity suspicious, and because people may be brought into such a condition as may render any revolution an object of indifference to them. I request I may have your sense on this head. They reason as if our 'test' and relief from Penal Laws should go hand in hand. Right. But should not some previous steps be taken? May not the suspension or repeal of those laws be brought to arise in some degree from a voluntary 'test' even, in our present condition. I say no more. I write in great haste, and hope to give you my thoughts with less dissipation in my next."

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

August 20, 1756.

"Were I base enough to put a severe construction on words which can bear a better, I think I could not be at a loss for objections to the cold reception your late proposal met with from certain persons. I would draw inferences without much regard to their own explicit and praiseworthy conduct in former times, and I would say their manner of rejecting the letters you shewed them was but an improveable hint to you and your party that the present time was not the most proper for the consideration of the subject proposed to them. I would discern a scuffle of contrary principles in the breasts of such persons, now dragging one way, now another, anon coming to an awkward reconciliation, while reason, which would shew that such principles can never be reconciled, is drove from the steerage. But my love and experience of those gentlemen will not admit me to explain away their intentions in a manner so injurious to them as well as to my own natural disposition. Let me suppose, let me convince myself, that they saw further into the expediency or inexpediency of the step proposed than you or I did, and yet our end is the same, tho' our means may be different. Thus I explain for them, and yet to this conviction of the goodness of their intention, I would have joined the other conviction of the reasonableness of their judgment, if they really think that a thorough silence in the present conjuncture is the most eligible step we can take. 'To think thus they will say to themselves, or properly speaking they will urge to us, 'We have written, we have preached enough already. Our professions were deemed insincere, our conduct necessary, our obedience temporary. Shall we be better believed now, when the same causes of our complaints and of their incredulity subsist as forcibly as ever, when those who persecute, and hate because they persecute, establish their disbelief of our sincerity on the principle established by nature, that we must certainly hate bondage, and consequently hate those who impose it.' I allow this reasoning all its weight, but no more, however, than it can bear. The present set of men either in the administration or in Parliament imposed no bondage on us, tho' their predecessors did. And this distinction ought to be made the more as it implies a difference which is seldom attended to. When those laws were passed, there was a recent change in the properties, as well as great rage in the minds of the people—a change which could no more be secured than obtained, without violence. Violence had its day. Time gave at last the security which force gave at first, and what was once a lawless possession, as well as government, is by prescription become both valid and legal. The prosperity of both parties are now in a different situation; and difference of situation will undoubtedly more or less beget a difference of principles and dispose consequently to a difference of conduct.—With regard to the administration, I believe you will allow that none can be more indulgent than

* See Second Report of this Commission, Appendix, p. 232.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

the present; and if those who sit in Parliament permit the operation of laws, which themselves would not pass, I think motives could be assigned for such a circumstance, distinct from those prejudices which still have a great share in it. A little experience would inform us of the difficulty of repealing laws which a party spirit dictates, and which however unconstitutional, yet pass for constitutional by becoming habitual. Let the Septennial law of Parliaments serve for an instance, to offer no other. Beside, Popery sounds ill, and many who feel at their hearts (because they suffer for it in their interests) the evil consequence of the Penal Laws, on the prosperity of the kingdom, and who are convinced that the Roman Catholics are now very improper objects of punishment, yet will choose to let those evils remain, rather than expose themselves to the odium of an unpopular motion, such as might be in the power of their adversaries to defeat, and such as those adversaries would improve to purposes and personal ends, which party policy will never leave open to them, and which therefore must yield, till such a national party is formed as may overbear all opposition.—The case would be different, if those laws were to be now brought on the carpet and fairly debated. In such a case, every member could and would be equally clamorous against the evil of Popery, nor would any give his brother the advantage over him in this instance, which he must give in the other. But the laws would never pass in the quantity or quality of the penalties now imposed. And let all this account for the continuance of party, not national laws, such as anger finds it much easier to establish, than moderation [to] repeal. This deduction is longer than I proposed, and perhaps I refined too much in the process of it. I now come to another objection, 'Our professions of legal subjection (by principle) will be deemed insincere.' Admit it for argument's sake. But will a repetition of those professions in this critical conjuncture, and that for conscience, not interest's sake, be productive of no good? Will the expression of our gratitude for the relaxation of many Penal Laws be of no weight at Court? Will it offend the monarch on the throne to find his Popish subjects at this time joining in festivity to the equity of his administration, the lenity of his government? If all this doth not acquit us to prejudice, yet is it of no consequence to acquit us to ourselves and to the sounder judgement of several men in power?—'We are hated,' not so much, I presume, as we were, nor do the motives exist; and an hatred one degree less, is an earnest for another degree still the less, in the political as well as in the moral world. But whatever this hatred be, is it the result of prudence to improve it by a sullen silence, by an unmeaning reservedness in time of danger, after some solemn professions of true subjection, when no danger but our own pressed us? Another objection is deemed strong, and very apologetic for our silence, 'That our masters know we hate our bondage, consequently must think that our allegiance is forced and unnatural. But those masters ought to be informed, and some I hope may be persuaded, that our religion requires of us in such cases to bear patiently what we hate. If they can be wrought into this persuasion (a persuasion not I hope impossible to time), they must see the injustice of their own inference, that allegiance is incompatible with persecution for conscience sake. All this may be needless because grounded on a mistaken application of it to the gentlemen mentioned above, I hope it is so. But I venture for once to open my mind fully to you on this important subject. And I must declare, since it comes in my way, that I do not like the hesitation of some in approving the doctrine established in the letter, 'that no act of the Roman Court, no spiritual power of the Roman See can dispense with legal obligations to 'legal Government.' Is this, Sir, to be resolved and frittered away into matter of opinion, into a duplicity of doctrine wherein every subject is left free in the choice of the alternative? Is this the arcana we are now to reveal to the public in our present situation? In plain truth I must own candidly to you that I am not free of very strong suspicions that personal ambition, foreign connexions, subservient maxims, and future prospects prevail over the true interests of our party, and this in the breasts of men who surely should sacrifice every ill purchased advantage of their own, to the general good of the poor people who support them, and every other burden they lie under. By this key, I fancy the whole mystery may be wound up, and I think all this will account also for the conflict of certain principles hinted at above, pulling men backwards and forwards, and leaving a back door open for opinion to enter in as a mediator to reconcile all differences.—Enough is said, perhaps more than becomes me to say on so delicate a subject, but I write to my friend, from whom I can conceal nothing; to one who will tell me whether I am right or wrong, when I observe further that it can be no breach of true Catholicity for the laity among us, who have no bias of this sort hanging on them, to look to themselves and avow principles not opinions; such principles as prevailed in the infancy of the Church, and which, I conceive, cannot now be condemned in its maturer days.'

"Sep. 7, 1756.

"I received your last favor with Doctor O[ne]l's paper enclosed. The exceptions made to the Pope's instructions warmed me, and I write freely and fully my mind on this subject this night to the two vicars. I indeed acquit them from the glaring partiality and open tergiversation made use of by your hyper-doctor. The laity, however, had they an ounce of spirit (but they have none) would not only properly and independently exert themselves in the present crisis, but also oblige others to concur with them. I shall do what I can in reference to the paper you sent, but I am cramped and vexed. Whatever I do it shall be sent directly to Dr. Clinch, and I shall get out of the affair with as good a grace as I can. I am surprised that Mr. Dugan hath not sent your 'Canbrensis,' etc. I shall immediately write to him about his neglect. Adieu, dear Sir, till my next, I am fatigued all this day with hay-making and company; all this night with writing two long letters upon irksome subjects."

O'Connor to John Clinch, D.D.

"Belanagare, Sep. 10, 1756.

"The liberty I have taken with the form of the paper sent me by Dr. Curry supposes that every person is to take the same liberty with mine. You will find the whole substance of the one transferred into the other, for the matter is so extremely well collected, that in my opinion nothing can be added or retrenched in a work contracted within so narrow a plan, at least I could find nothing to add or alter, and yet Dr. Fitzsimons and you will find several things in the style I give to be amended. No one who writes in hurry can immediately see his own blemishes. Indeed I am afraid Fanklener will refuse taking this paper in, as it is certainly conceived too much in detail for his crowded journal. Whatever is done, ye have acquitted yourselves to your party in several excellent papers heretofore, may exposed yourselves to some rubs on their account."

"May we all be sufficiently grateful."

O'Connor to [John Curry, M.D.]

"Sep. 22, 1756.

"Yours of the 17th instant lies before me. I need not inform you of the pleasure I take in the perusal of every letter I receive from you, and particularly this last, wherein you inform me that you will sit down to complete what another and I began, and what you and I had much at heart in this critical conjuncture.—I lately opened my mind to you (but 'intra penetralia Vestæ') in regard to a certain conversation wherein a reserve was made for opinion, in matters which I laid down for doctrinal. I now renounce my jealousy, no person can be more satisfied than I am of the worth and probity of our two vicars. They might deviate from the line of prudence (so unhappily are our affairs constituted) without deviating in the least from the line of conscience, but surely it would be wrong in us to press them on to the full measure of the letter, when we could not but know that malice would greedily seize on such a procedure to their disadvantage, and expose them to those censures from which their party would, I am afraid take no pains to protect them. The weight therefore of this affair lies properly on the shoulders of the R[oman] C[atholic] laity, on persons acquainted well with the state of the case before us, and who have no foreign connexions, nor any measures to keep with foreigners, and, after all, greatly applaud the courage of the worthy man you mention to me, who would set at defiance all enemies for the sake of our common cause. I could not read that period of yours, without a tenderness and emotion towards him, such as can be much easier felt than described."

"13 Jan., 1757.

"When I received yours of the 8th inst, I became a little uneasy lest Mr. Reilly should commit the paper you gave him to the press. Seriously I never liked it. I had another's thoughts to defer to, and to incorporate with my own. It fell out that he disliked my manner, without adverting that I wrote in leading strings, and,

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

besides this, the paternal fondness he had for his own production weighed very strongly with him. His judgment, however, was right in chalking out a middle between his method and mine, and you were appointed to strike the balance. You did so, and yet a little finesse frustrated your scheme also. This proceeding left us happily both at liberty, and we have no measures now to keep but just as discretion prescribes to decency. Let us forget the treatment we met with, and let us persuade ourselves that our friends were in the right. You and I know that they have published some good instructions to their people in regard to their civil conduct under this government. They did more than their predecessors ever did to soften our masters. This is their merit. If they declined the whole burthen when not one of their function would lend a shoulder, can we blame them? May they not say with Dolabella to Cicero 'Satisfactum est a nobis partibus, satisfactum est et officio an non respiciendum demum salute nostra?' And may not the hyper-doctor himself interpose with his authoritative gag and his foreign whip.

"What I send enclosed, I have extracted partly from the minutes I have been for some time drawing up. I writ it, you may conceive, in haste. You will therefore correct, add, retrench, and improve as you think proper, and when that is done, let it be immediately committed by Mr. R[icilly] to the press in a fine bold type, and let it sell for a twopenny or threepenny touch, as the booksellers phrase it. Soon after, proper extracts from it may be published in all the newspapers, and from this method we shall derive a double advantage.

"I am concerned at the one disappointment you met from Cambrensis Eversus,* but certainly (as you observe) the mistake was not wilful. He wrote in haste and never, I believe, corrected a sheet of Gothic work. When the great and little mob of Irish were let loose to reprisals, after a bondage of 40 years, no wonder if cruelty begat cruelty, or that such a mob knew as little how to prescribe bounds to their brutality, as the other armed party had to theirs. I never perused a better or more judicious account of those times, than that in the 'Dialogue' now on my table. The 'Letter' will set those affairs in a clearer light, and I beg it may not be postponed, from your desire of my previous perusal. As a manuscript is not to be trusted but to hands which you and I cannot often find, the delaying for such an opportunity, may be injurious to the public. Beside I own that I wish to see the author of the book that should properly be entitled 'Faction Unmasked,' punished before he went to the grave, which I am told is gaping for him. Have I not, my dear friend, given you a surfeit in earnest by this post? I did so, but I told you in bald Latin that I trust to your affection for me.

"P.S.—I marked the enclosed essay with sectional numbers, this manner I now think has a pedantic cast and the figures may be thrown out.

"I would again recommend to Mr. R[icilly] a large and neat type, and I think it would be proper to change to some popular bookseller.

"You must pardon the deficiencies in this essay, after I assure you that I had no longer than 24 hours to frame and end it."

[Enclosure.]

"Maxims relative to the present State of Ireland, 1757.

"1. In every country remarkable for temperature of climate and fertility of soil, general distress cannot prove perpetual, without some defect in the laws. If the constitution be free, the cure of every evil is within the reach of the legislature.

"2. The laws must be framed, and the government must be administered, in such a country, on the spirit and principles of the constitution, otherwise the whole strength of liberty will be turned against itself, and we sometimes will feel the effects, discouragements to labor and insecurity to the laborer.

"3. If, in such a country, the natural moderation of a free government admitted many parties of religious dissenters, the legislature will not take cognizance of any but such as avow principles incompatible with the safety of the civil establishment. It will, no doubt, secure the national worship by every constitutional sanction. But it will not submit to national distress, till all members of the community think alike about controverted mysteries.

"4. It will only require, identity of political principles. It will not adopt the maxims, because it will not choose the weakness, the devastations, the ignorance of those governments where men are left to the alternative of professing the national religion, or succumbing to those miseries, which governments have been established to remove.

"5. It would consider identity of religion as a great happiness, conformity to its precepts, a greater. But it would consider the want of both, as a great evil, for which religion itself must one time or other find the proper remedy.

"6. To render any party the object of popular hatred, is extremely easy. Even the most ridiculous circumstances will do the business—their relative situation in the state, the place of their birth, the sound of their names, their apparel, nay, the length of their beards. But to render such a party completely odious, it will be necessary to charge them with principles they never avowed, with doctrines which they abhor, and to annex the most obnoxious ideas to the religion they profess.

"7. When such ideas are sufficiently impressed, all the impending evils of a real conspiracy will be dreaded, and consequently almost all the punishments due to real conspirators will be established and indicted. Thus it might fall out that the public may be deprived of the proper stamina of the constitution, the labor and industry of its people.

"8. They will be cut off not only from any durable property in landed tenures, but even from the constitutional profits arising from the most transient. They will be allowed such a property, however, as may be easily converted into money, and for this the law will provide, that they shall have no real security.

"9. This taxed and transient interest in land would force such an obnoxious people on the lazy and depopulating occupation of pasturage, nor could they build, plant, nor improve, but to their own detriment. They would, in fact, be working only for the benefit of the next incumbent and for an enemy, for a person impoverished by law to take the reversionary profit.

"10. Such a people, therefore, will naturally interpose the bad plight of their tenements between them and certain ruin, and then will they endeavour to defeat the vigilance of licensed avidity. What situation must that country be in where a vast number of the inhabitants must find their private interest in wasting it?

"11. Were such a country subject by its situation to a greater degree of moisture than any other, plain it is that interdicting laws would every year run it more and more into morasses and wastes; and the climate of consequence would become less temperate from the increase of evaporation. The soil would in that proportion be losing its fertility; its harvests would be subject to unusual failure. There would be variations in the days, hardly any in the seasons of the year. And all these evils combined, and which beget each other, would render the land more unhealthy than ever, less accommodated to the uses of man and animals.

"12. The neglect of tillage would put such a nation under the necessity of draining off its specie, to purchase their bread corn from the Old and New World. Nor would even this fatal resource always preserve the people. He would find them often visited with the calamities of a general famine.

"13. If such a country were limited in its commerce, and laid under peculiar restraints from another kingdom, it would be found that the ruin of one part of the people would involve with it general distress and weakness to the whole body. All parties therefore should here be united, since the mother country unites them all without discrimination in its distribution of commercial justice. They make no distinction on one side, why should any be made on the other, but what is compatible with the interior security of the state.

"14. If a dissenting religious party groaned under various legal severities, and at the same time avowed no principles, but such as are consistent with the freedom of the constitution, nay, the security of those who imposed those severities, the legislature would do well to release them. It would otherwise treat its benefactors as enemies. It would inflict on legal obedience all the punishments due to active disaffection.

"15. But the avowed principle of a party, nay, their passive obedience may become suspicious. In such a case, the legislature will not be inattentive, yet its circumspection will not extend to punishment for problematical evil; it will find out, and by finding out it will exert constitutional means for separating the guilty from the well affected. It will not defeat the ends of

* "Cambrensis Eversus, seu potius historica fides in rebus Hibernicis et aliis Cambrensis abraegata," 1692. By John Lynch, Archdeacon of Tynan. (Reprinted, Dublin, 1848-1852.)

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

good government, by confounding the one with the other.

"16. It will interpose between popular mistakes and the public interest; without doing so, it would not prevent the dreaded evil, but it would perhaps create it.

"17. To apply these maxims to the present state of Ireland, it will be found that the neglect of agriculture, and the suspension of land improvements, is a greater evil than popery itself. The former is severely felt, the latter, however offensive, can bring us no evil at all, except thro' the restraints we lay on its votaries.

"18. We should distinguish between the evil in men themselves, and the religion which forbids it. From the inattention to this necessary distinction have proceeded some of the most exquisite miseries that mankind have ever been cursed with in this or any former age.

"19. We should distinguish between the opinions, the false and offensive opinions of some Roman teachers, and the true doctrine of the Roman Church. But this is seldom done. We stop short in the search of truth, as if we were afraid of it, and some who find it out, dare not acknowledge it, whenever it becomes odious or unpopular. This cowardice of politics hath done infinite mischief.

"20. Papists can do this country no hurt, and Dr. Swift hath long ago told us, from his own experience of the party, that they have no inclinations to [do] any. But they can do us great good by admitting them to cultivate our waste lands, by allowing them (conformable to the wisdom of all nations) some real security for their monied property, by granting them longer tenures in land, or by putting their shorter terms out of the power of spies and informers, in short, by creating no conflict between their interest and their duty.

"21. Any man who from conscience is a faithful subject to this government, ought to receive the qualifications of being an useful one. It is thus the Papists are treated in his Majesty's German dominions. Public services are relative to the private, and public happiness must be at a stand where the several relations are not coincident.

"22. An oath of fidelity to the established government would be as binding on an Irish as on an Hanoverian Papist, because both would think the violation of such an oath equally criminal, and because that they know that no ecclesiastical authority can dispense with the obligation of such a duty.

"23. The episcopal authority of the Roman See is now well understood. The Roman Catholic clergy of this kingdom know it cannot interfere with the civil obedience they owe to the present establishment, and the present Pope hath confined it to the sole idea annexed to it in the three first and purest ages of the Christian Church.

"24. Let (saith Benedict the 14) 'let the English clergy in our communion revere' the present established government, and let those who dare transgress this duty be 'punished severely.'* 'Severe illos puniant qui publico regimine cum honore sermonem non habent, etc.'

"25. Here then is an authentic recognition of the political duty of Roman Catholics, out of the mouth of the present Roman pontiff, and here have we a door shut against any temporal claims of all future Popes in these kingdoms. A spiritual authority thus exerted reconciles the civil with the religious duty of this numerous body of people, and disobedience would be as injurious to the ecclesiastical supremacy of the bishop, as to the temporal supremacy of the prince.

"26. If there be nothing in the principles or practices of the present race of papists, to justify numberless legal severities, the civil excommunication of Irish subjects must be a great weakening to the Protestant interest.

"27. His present Majesty hath relaxed in these kingdoms several penal laws against the Papists, as far as the executive power could extend the lenity of administration. And he as well as his royal father granted to Roman Catholics all the security and privileges due to good subjects in that part of their dominions where such a conduct was in their power. Ought not his Majesty's sense of this matter to have a great weight? Should not the example of so wise a monarch have great influence in this, as well as in every other case, in the determinations of our present patriots?

"28. About the middle of the ninth century, Ireland was a fine country; since that time it hath been running into mossy bogs and barren heaths. What have been the causes of such a change?*

"29. After a profound uninterrupted peace of near seventy years, our wastes and wilds are still increasing. Agriculture is neglected, and our inhabitants are on the wing. During the last half century, we had many returns of a general famine, corn which might grow under our feet hath been imported from England, Holland, Denmark, Egypt, and America. Our country hath been drained of wealth and inhabitants, and we suffered all this in a country protected by the power of Great Britain, the remotest in Europe from foreign danger, favored by the climate, happy in its soil! Is there no remedy for such a complication of evils?

"30. Mankind are generally governed by their worldly interests, and the greatest of all consists certainly 'in the power of doing what we ought to will, and in the 'being not constrained to do what we ought not to will' (Spirit of Laws, Vol. I., Book II., p. 183). This is the great privilege, as it is the peculiar happiness of all British subjects, the Roman Catholics alone excepted.

"31. But this body of people do not merit this exclusion. If the legislature can be brought to relent towards them; if they are allowed the liberty of enlarging their industry; and if they are permitted to realize its produce, the property acquired in such a case will be a good hostage to the Protestant interest, and their affection to the present established constitution, will be still a better.

"32. It should be considered that security under a Protestant government is preferable to servitude under a Popish one, and that our present constitution gains strength by comparison with any other.

"33. Let it be considered that the Protestant interest can never be advanced by taxing innoxious religious tenets, with the privation of property and civil liberty. So terrible a punishment is not derived from any necessity, it hath no adequate object, and perpetuity in servitude is contrary to the nature of things in all moderate governments.†

"34. It is left to the wisdom of the great men who have the happiness of this country at heart, and who are entrusted with all the powers of legislation, to weigh the strength or fallacy of such maxims as are here humbly offered to their consideration. By their judgment we shall all be determined.

"35. Gospel obedience to the government which punishes us was the principle of the earliest ages of the Church. It is at present (as it ever ought to be) the principle and practice of British Roman Catholics.

O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

"April 27, 1757.

"I sent you my last, and I think it will be my last performance on the subject of the Roman Catholics.

"You will dislike, perhaps, to see so much said of King William, but truth warrants most of it, and our little astutia politica warrants the rest. We must take our adversaries in their own way and ply them as you must some of your weak patients, with such remedies as will lessen the evil, when the constitution will not bear such as are more effectual, or when obstinacy will not yield to them. I know you will be surprised to find a compliment paid to the hyper Doctor, but it is ad causam not ad hominem. If this be not a good justification, strike out not only his name but any other paragraph or page you dislike. As the Roman Catholics of England are mentioned oftener than once, the piece is not merely local, and it may perhaps with a better grace come out in London, with some sort of address to the Lord Lieutenant there. What think you? This method, indeed, would absolutely require a laborious transcript from the fair hand of my cousin Reilly, and yet that I would not willingly impose upon him, as I know how his time is taken up in providing for a long family of young children. I declare it to you my dear friend, that I am in great pain for him. It is to be in pain for virtue struggling with several wants, and therefore to be in pain for ourselves when we cannot run to the succour of so much distress. The supplemental 'Queries' from Bishop Berkeley are extremely apposite, and the work I send you may well be considered as a comment on them, tho' in truth I did not consult the 'Queries' till I finished what I undertook. Such an agreement between our thoughts gave me great pleasure, and the insertion of so many arguments from so popular a writer must surely give some weight to mine. If you

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

* Re observand. in Mission. Aug. Per Benedict. Pap. A.D. 1758.

* "Countries are not cultivated in proportion to their fertility, but to their liberty," etc. Spirit of Laws, Vol. I., Book XVIII., p. 336. Dub. edit.

† Spirit of Laws. Vol. I., Book I., pp. 233, 301, 304, 370.

O'CONNOR,
Esq.

should think of a London edition, I would perhaps offer something more to be incorporated while the work is transcribing, but to do this I should have some hints from you, as my own little stock is exhausted. I have said too much on this subject, and shall say no more till I have your thoughts on the whole. One thing I absolutely insist on is, that you will treat everything you dislike without mercy. I write to you as thoughts come uppermost, all from the heart, which you possess with all the warmth and affection of a real friend. God preserve you and yours, and comfort you under all the trials of the loss of dead or treachery of living associates.

"P.S.—Mr. Reilly in his last promised me a sight of the 'Letter' before it went to the press. Great as this gratification would be, I would decline it for ever if I were not sure of the safety of the hand which would bring it down. There is no trusting a manuscript slightly, and I beg you will put him on his keeping in regard to an affair of this importance. I should tremble for myself if I had that work now in my hands, lest any misfortune of this nature should happen on my part.

'to Ocober 5. 1757.

"You complain that I have not wrote for six posts past. Would you know the reason? I had nothing worth a farthing to entertain you with, and I wanted franks to make trifles as cheap to you as possible. I have been lately at our 'comitia publica' in Roscommon, and met there with a Dublin friend, Mr. Pat. Keighran. I was highly pleased with this interview. Probably you know him. I think you cannot know a man of a warmer heart, nor is he deficient in other good qualities which should endear him to you and to me. I met a bookseller also whose chief business it was to hawk about your friend Harris's 'Life of King William, his 'Bishops,' Down,' 'Hibernia,' and the Answer to the Dialogue.—What success, friend, had you in the sale of those works on the circuit? None at all, said he, and may G—d d—n Harris and all his works. I bought them dog cheap from Flynn, and yet what I sold would hardly answer the expense of my horse and drams. How have you sold this book ('Fiction Utmasked')? You are welcome to one, Sir, for ninnepence. What! Surely you must have had profit on it at so high a price; Yes, sir, I bought two dozen at 6s. 6d., but having sold but a few, I am likely to be a loser if Flynn does not take them back. Well, sir, to encourage you, here is ninnepence. Thus, sir, you have my adventure with this hawker literally. One Mr. Irwin had the curiosity to dip into the book I bought. Next day he came to me highly vexed at the author's malice and scurrility. Is it not a shame, said he, that the gentleman concerned did not reply? I told him it did not become a gentleman of a public profession to enter deeply into a party controversy. True, said he, but then the burthen falls naturally on shoulders under no such engagements, and therefore 'you ought (directing to me) to undertake it, when nobody else will. After so many years (said I) had I the zeal never so highly, yet I want the proper materials, and even leisure at this time. A mere pretence (said he), you could by your friends in town get authentic extracts from writers, and do justice to the nation, without incurring the censure of men in power. I thanked him for his good opinion, but I declared to him that I had not sufficient courage for such an undertaking. A fig for your cowardice (said he), put my name to the work, while you like I shall own the work, and let censure, if any should fall, fall upon me, etc. I laughed at this adventure with this zealot, and repeat it to make you laugh. I highly applaud the intention of our clerical friends in the scheme they are concerting; I wish I may with equal warmth applaud the scheme itself. I am glad you fished it out without angling for it. But I must here rate you for not giving me the contents. What have you done, who are on the spot and who have suffered in their cause; what, I say, have you done to be kept so long in the dark of this secret? for my part I know nothing of it. As I entered a mere volunteer into this service, I desire no higher part. If I am wanted, I am ready at a call; if not, I shall rejoice in seeing my place supplied by a better and abler hand. May God give a blessing to their endeavours, and give them wisdom equal to their zeal.—I am, my dear Sir, etc.

"P.S.—You give me no account of your resolutions about the 'Letter.' It clears one important part of our darkened history, and I think them weak politicians who should think that such a work published in any crisis, at the end of 120 years, can any way hurt us with our governors. May God direct in this as well as in all your other undertakings for the public.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

Nov. 5, 1757.

"This letter, as it will not be doubly expensive, I shall venture sending; nay, it is my duty to send it, as I know the honest thoughts of a friend, however indigested, will be acceptable to you. Mine at this minute are in the feeling strain, and judge how strong this sensibility must be from the loss of a friend to the public and to myself. I know not which took place most in my heart, affection or esteem for him. You know him better than I did. I think he deserved the character given of him in our public papers, 'A man of true piety, sound judgement, and consummate prudence,' etc. Poor Clinch! I remember with a pleasing melancholy the night I have been instrumental in bringing him and you together. In the friendly ecclaiircissement between you I was almost moved to tears. It happened that in the hurry of walking you have not noticed him one day in Fishamble-Street, at a time when that kind of coolness which separated Paul from Timothy kept you both asunder. He apprehended that your not returning the civility was owing to that coolness. Can you forget his expression on the occasion to you, in my presence? You felt it, so did I; but he felt more than either of us. The language of the heart is the first oratory. 'I was' (said he) struck instantly. The man I loved turned away from me, the person in whose disesteem I counted myself a great loser made me a great sufferer, and I could not resist the tears which fell from 'me at that instant.' Art is not equal to this panegyric which Nature gave, while she added infinitely to the beauty by the unconsciousness of giving it. Were it graven in capitals on his tombstone, Europe could not furnish a finer. Let us on your fine and feeling principle 'entomb such friends in our breasts,' and open as often as we have an opportunity our sepulchral treasures to such living friends as may be edified by them! 'Decet hæc dare dona.' Those are gifts indeed, and may we exhibit as good when nothing but the bare memory of us remains to do any service to those we leave behind! I now return to thoughts less useful; to mere temporary things, in which, however, we must take a share, because the condition of our nature requires it. The disease of the public on our account is brought to a crisis. Experience has shown not the intility alone, but the great evil of penal laws without their proper object. If this experience is lost upon our Legislature we cannot suffer more than we have done already, but take my word, others who are not so well inured to pain will. Our numbers, in the natural course of generation, are increasing, and from our disability to do any good the national weakness must grow in proportion to our growth. Thus it is.—In fact there are only two methods for rendering Popery of any advantage to this country, either tolerate it or banish it.—In the first case you convert its votaries into useful subjects; in the second you get rid of the useless. But the objections of the latter method are too strong to put us ever on the attempt of trying it, and the objections to the former are refuted at once in this temporary suspension of those penalties which regard the exercise of religious worship. If the religion itself be tolerated, why should the votaries be treated as intolerable? Is it not the interest of our enemies on the continent that we should ever maintain such a policy? Consideration alone opens our eyes. I am sorry the writer of the 'Protestant Interest Considered' did not give this argument a place in his reasonings on this subject. But I am tiring you on this threadbare argument. I read over with attention the 'Serious Thoughts,' and thank the author for the strong and honest light in which he put our affair. I like him also as a free and bold writer, tho' I think as affairs now stand, many of his methods of reformation are better calculated for the Polyteia of Plato than the dregs of Romulus. I request, as you are on the spot, you will inform me what is doing at this time in your busy metropolis. I know you cannot and ought not to be as prolix as I am. But you can despatch a great deal in a narrow compass, especially to one who has leisure enough here to comment on hints, and take information from the chewing of a finger, as is reported in Irish history of the celebrated hero and philosopher Finn MacCumhail. I purpose to see you in the holidays and be happy with you in conversations, wherein the dull compliments of the new year will have no share. A brother physician of yours reproached me

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

formerly with publishing a few extracts from the Leabhar Gabhala,* and Newton, without owning that it was he made those extracts first. If such a quarrel became warm, with regard to works in which neither of us could pretend a share, what reproach will you not make to me now when I am already passing for the father of the genuine work of a friend of yours for whom you ought in this case to interpose much more warmly than he in the others. I had a letter last post on this subject which made me laugh. My friend tells me that your friend is ready to give the credit of his issue to the next that offers himself with another father, and that I will turn sponsor for his right to it. Is this ending of my letter of a piece with the beginning? The query puts me in mind of my ill-timed puerility."

"Dec. 23, 1757.

"— I yesterday received by post a small pamphlet, entitled 'An Appeal, etc.' You'll be kind enough (I hope) to give the author my hearty thanks. He has indeed prescribed very properly for an ecclesiastical lunatic, as well as for his lay brother. It has been a long time my thought, that in foiling such shameless writers, no weapon is equal to ridicule, and you may be assured that I took very sensible pleasure in fusing the author of the pamphlet so expert at it. It is excellent throughout, for the argumentative part is equally strong, and it is a pity that the narrow compass which the author prescribed to himself could not admit of his being more diffuse. I could indeed wish that the compliment of thanks in the second page for the opposition to the first Registry Bill was omitted, nothing is more certain than that the P[ri]ma[te] opposed that Bill on the principle of persecution, that he represented it not as an indulgence only but as a toleration of Popery by law, what he thought should never be admitted; and it is equally certain that the noblemen on the other side resented the thanks you mention, and wondered (as they were known to repeat) how blindly we conducted ourselves in not having sense enough to distinguish better between our friends and enemies. I must confess that enemies on the first principle are preferable to friends on the tolerating principles of that Registry Bill. But still time and experience may correct the mistakes of the latter. The former can never be reformed, and therefore, in my opinion, are the last in the world to merit the thanks of any party."

"Jan. 4, 1758.

"I am provoked and indeed concerned at the account you give me, that our party are divided into two factions, and united it seems only in condemning and criticising the well meant efforts of the few who hazard a line in their favor. Those gentlemen have not good nature enough to allow, nor good sense enough to know that few first editions even of the ablest writers are free from inadvertencies and inaccuracies. The hurry of the mind, corrente calamo, cannot possibly attend to all, and this so true that I have not been displeased to find in a late celebrated critique on the writings of Mr. Pope, that Mr. Addison was known not seldom to stop the publication of a 'Spectator' after its being printed off, that another might be impressed and published more to his taste. Our critics put me in mind of a pragmatist person who found fault with the cut of his coat. Since I can't please you, said his workman, here are the shears for yourself. Now what makes this poor joke the more opposite to our purpose is, that the fault finder was himself once the worst tailor in his country. It were to be wished that those gentlemen handled our shears for a while were it for no better use than barely complying with their duty, and showing that their case is far from being that of the above fault finder. Till this is done their criticisms come but with a very bad grace, thro' the channels of private whispers. I had a letter yesterday from one friend wherein he makes a handsome and well-grounded apology for his not giving you some meetings of late. Most of his time is at the disposal of another; when he was at liberty, the boy at the bar of your coffee-house can aver that he made frequent enquiries for you, as he unluckily missed of meeting you. Your good nature will easily see the congruity of those reasons, and therefore pardon what could not proceed from any negligence. He tells me that the title-page to the 'Letter,' rendered his present undertaking suspicious to one party, and he therefore thinks that a more popular turn given to it might draw in more subscribers. In this I think he is not mistaken. He would have it, 'Historical Memoirs of the Irish Rebellion in 1641, extracted from Parliamentary Journals, State Acts, and the most eminent 'Protestant Historians, in a Letter, etc.' For my part I have nothing to object, except the oddness of drawing out and printing new proposals on this plan. But where is the great harm? If a new and consistent title like this can forward the work, what have we but the same end brought about by seemingly different means; I ask pardon for delivering my opinion so freely. I hope to see you soon, to be your associate in pain, as formerly in sensible gratifications, when our minds were not so much disturbed by the loss of the dead, and the perverseness of the living. You and I are too philosophical to correspond about any politics, but such as regard the advantage of our own poor country. What think you of the present dance among princes? Will it be like that described by Sir William Temple, in his time, where, after a hundred twists and evolutions each performer finished by filling the place from whence he set out? Or may it not be compared to that, wherein you see most of them in the wrong corner, striking their heads against posts and making sport for us who are indifferent spectators? Whatever it be, they will in time sit down of themselves and put an end to our mirth, whatever end they may put to their own. See what efforts I am making to fill a blank which surely for your sake ought to be much larger than what I grant you from this to the bottom."

"Good Friday, 1758.

"— I should have seen you on the eve before my departure, but I dined that day with the hyper-Doctor and (what I wondered not a little) with one of the subscribers of the Pastoral, and I was detained too long. The scheme of Association was produced in our company, and was in part rejected by Dr. Crea[gh],* and (I think) judiciously. Doubtless that instrument should be so worded as to draw approbation rather than censure from our masters. Is it not an extraordinary circumstance that Clanbrassil† should so soon follow Clogher‡? Two links of the triple chain broke! The third almost eaten through by its own rust. Is not this a good omen? And to lay aside all figure, is it not better we should never have any relaxation of our sufferings than be served in the manner those late friends of ours intended. I had a letter yesterday from Mr. R. It grieves me that I had not leisure in town to ease him of much labour in adapting the proper marginal authorities to the written text. But the town is not the place of writing, reading, or digesting, especially in the case of a sojourner. Our friend notwithstanding his avocations and other superincumbent embarrassments will, I am confident, execute the task with credit. The proposals (I know not how) came into the hands of a considerable personage of our county, and he complained to Dr. Duigenan of the unreasonableness of the time for the revival of such a subject by men in our circumstances. The Dr. replied he knew not from what quarter such proposals came, but that probably they came from the persons who perpetually keep this subject alive in their anniversary sermons, to the subversion of all charity and civil concord. This surely was retorted cum grano salis. Where we offend no law in telling a truth of one hundred years standing, and where the relation of it is calculated for the good of society, we may make ourselves easy about the censures of illiberal and malevolent individuals. I long for my box (now I hear on the road) to collect a few flowers out of Harris's thistles."

"23rd June 1758.

"In 46 hours after I left you, I dismounted here at my own door, in concern for the company I left, which loved me, in grief for joining a neighbourhood which did not and never will. We are persons of different manners and principles, tho' not of a different religious profession. Their creed recommends justice; they do not practice it, but I hope I do. They pique themselves for fair dealing as I do; but what is their fairness? That fairness only which philosophers call iustitia inter latrones; a self-interested honesty which is merely necessary, and practised only because it is so. On reading the above periods I now find them very stiff, no matter. They are the pourings of the mind, like the first squeezing of those fruits which, tho' they carry along the greatest sediment give the least produce, and the produce I give is that of a mind warmed to good sentiments by awe and affection: awe of a good man who detests the smallest share of tergiversation,

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

* The Book of Conquests—a collection of poems in the Irish language on the Kings of Ireland, etc.

* Dr. Peter Crea[gh], Roman Catholic Archbishop of Waterford and Lismore, 1750-1774.

† James Hamilton, first Earl of Clanbrassil, died in March, 1758.

‡ Robert Clayton, Bishop of Clogher, died in February, 1768.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

and affection to a man who poured friendship upon me before he knew me, in any other shape than that of essayist. May you never be deceived in me, you will not, if I continue what I am. To stand with you in the light of an honest man is what I choose above all things on earth; to appear, in the next, and in an inferior degree, as a person, who ambitions to do our nation or our party justice is what I wish. To do this justice may never be in my power, and yet with health and books on my side, I may before I die attempt something. Those are conditional things, and hard it is surely when after seventy years silence none among our brethren and fellow-sufferers could be found to attempt this justice except a man of public and laborious profession on one side, and a farmer on the other. Poor Rooth (the author of the 'Analecta Sacra,' now in my hands) said truly, that a silence in regard to the calumnies of our enemies, was in some degree criminal and amounted to an acquiescence to the charge made. You and I, to the shame of our party, broke this silence and we both know what thanks we got for our officiousness (for so they call it). Let us forgive this nonsense and do our duty, for I hope we have call to it, fettered as one of us is, and weak as the other is."

"Aug. 4, 1758.

"You were kind in not putting me in mind, in yours of the 29th past, that I was in arrear for a letter to you. The truth is I hate the double expense of getting a bearing, and putting my friend to the expense of paying for it. I have, besides, been for ten days past in the county of Sligo, attending to other business and neglecting my own. But I recall the expression, for surely my friend's business is always mine. I am really in concern for one of them, on the score of this long disappointment to the public. I wrote to him this day, but did not entirely agree with you in your humane advice, that I should not press him too warmly. I did expostulate with him strongly, and as I know him to be an honest man, I trust he will soon acquit himself to your and my satisfaction. Duris in rebus urgens egestas, is certainly his embarrassment, but the loss of his friends would make it still greater, and I would advise you not to think of calling in your copy till I receive his answer to mine by the next post. I suppose he will wait on you before he writes to me (for I desired him to give you a meeting). I have given him strong encouragement that subscriptions will come in as soon as the work is advertised anew, and get forward in earnest. Nay, I have sent him seven subscriptions by this post, and thus, I doubt not but he will immediately work off the 50 correct pages in his hands, and qualify you to digest the rest for a fair copy in the meantime. You may now and then have a leisure hour, and by the means of new materials which providentially (I think) fall into your hands. You will find your account in this delay, and give us in one small volume such a collection as I ever despaired of seeing. We must lay our shoulders to this business, and not let it drop after bringing it to this maturity. Our party (and, what is more, our religion) is concerned in bringing it to light. This tribute must therefore be paid at all events, whatever happens the present undertaker. I say no more at present."

"Aug. 19, 1758.

"I received your letters punctually, and yet, I know not how it happens, mine slip between the fingers of the petty postmen here. This is my third within a few days, and I should not trouble you so often if the subject had not been interesting to our religion in general and to our party in particular. Our adversaries in historical warfare have been in possession of the field of battle for a hundred and forty years past, and they have been so to their own great misfortune as well as ours. They have not been strong, but we from a hundred causes (needless to mention) have been weak. No wonder they should think their fort tenable, and hardened in this thought, no wonder if they should be hardened in error, the misfortune I alluded to above in regard to them and us. Since the commencement of the present century our party have imposed a dead silence on themselves till they broke it into your 'Dialogue.' You know, but I think you are too good a man to feel much, how you have been treated by friends and enemies. One must do justice to the former tho' in their own despite, because the justice is meritorious, and one cannot suffer from the latter when he has truth on his side, particularly in an age when the press is free, and the secular arm tho' not secular enmity is removed. But enmity with calumny the consequence of it has its day, and one is prepared for it. We must bear it, let those who carry it about them bear the weight of truth in turn, or if they do not, they must give the rest of disinterested mankind leave to steer by it. To effect this has been your aim, and the best aim you have taken must not miss of its execution from some untoward disappointments, which a prudent delivery on your side has occasioned. I told you in my last that the mystery of [16]41 and of the 40 antecedent years wants to be developed, and that the development is a point view, wherein the prospect and retrospect furnish a key (so to speak) for winding up a very complicated series of events, from (what we call) the Reformation to this day. Till our history is taken from its source, and handled more in detail, we must be content with this and other points of view enough to strip false facts of all their credit, tho' not enough to give the true all the lustre they want. 'Est quoddam prodire tenus,' and this 'quoddam' in your hands will amount to a considerable sum at the bottom of the account. This makes me the less uneasy at the delay which the public are complaining of, as you are peculiarly happy in picking up so many fragments of smothered history in illustration of the many you have rescued already. May God bless you, and proceed, with all the sedulity that your other avocations can permit, to finish the herculean task you set yourself. But let the first pages in the meantime be committed to the press. Within these ten days, I wrote two letters to our friend and screen. I had no answer, and suppose mine to him had the same fate with mine to you. I have pressed him strenuously either to proceed immediately or give you up the copy. If the unfortunate situation of his affairs should force him on the latter alternative, there's no help for it. The work must go on at all events, tho' the want of a discreet editor will be the greatest obstacle that can, I think, come in our way. I shall wish six guineas. After all, I am in some hope tho' our friend will fulfil his engagement. If he can compass this, the affair will come with less expense to you and to me, and your name will be less suspected. When you can, let me hear from you on these several heads. My son, I thank God is not worse, as I told you in my last, but when there is any change for the worse or better, depend upon it I will no more spare you in your medicinal than in your historical art. Will you believe me? I intend to steal from you in the last art as much as I can, while I aver very candidly that you are the only man of the faculty I wish or desire to be indebted to. One of your profession has already made a charge, that I have taken from him 7 or 8 extracts from the works of others. I denied, and this surely was a hopeful controversy in a reading and learned age. But whether he or I, or whether we both might hit on the same facts in the course of our reading has it seems been no important affair to the public, tho' it was greatly so to him, and in some degree so to me, as his charge leaned on my moral character, and as an acquiescence under it for a moment would seem a confession of the basest treachery and ingratitude that any ruffian alive could be guilty of. If this were not my case, I should overlook in my former friend the poor and crazy conduct he held towards me on that occasion. But this is abundantly too much on a subject, and I should never trouble you about, tho' I have too often, 'Stealing' forced it upon me. Let me therefore have some pilfering worth my while. Whether this comes to your hand or not, I have written too much.

"Aug. 22, 1758.

"I yesterday received a short scrip from our friend, wherein he informs me that he received my two last to him, and that he designs to remit a proper reply which he began ten days ago. I thought this a little odd, and on first reflection I judged he was angry at the liberty I took with him, and that he purposed to resent it. I know how easily men are rendered jealous by the adversity of their affairs, how local circumstances, good or bad, influence their judgements, and how in particular when they are almost run down by fortune, they imagine that their friends join in the cry. I know that the best men are not seldom the most querulous upon such occasions, but upon second reflection I reproached myself with any application of all this to my friend, and judged that my interpretation of a few equivocal lines from him, was as unjust as it is arbitrary. He certainly waited only to make such a reply as would satisfy me of the probity of his conduct, and to draw from my conviction what he had much at heart. I mean an apologetic for him, from me to you. But he needed not so much apparatus of time and words, and he should have done more justice to that peacabily of temper which he could not but discern in you and me in all trials. I purpose to conceal from him (for sometime) that I

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

will advance six guineas to forward the work, and I shall request of him to propose it to you (that your jealousy may be thoroughly removed) to take in the assistance of my friend, Mr. John Comerford, that the work may not stand still any longer, thro' his several other avocations and engagements. This coming from me can no way shock him, and I hope this manner of negotiating the affair will not displease you. It is the discreetest expedient I can hit upon, and the better too as you are to be a stranger to it, till it comes from him. Let me press it strongly on you, to turn the disappointment you met with on this occasion to account, such as will render it pleasing to you hereafter, as it will be happy for the public. You are of all men the happiest in dragging useful anecdotes out of heaps of rubbish, and I know not, if you be not in duty and conscience obliged to dig on, and the more as you are almost on every trial so well rewarded, even beyond your hopes. But I have mentioned this so often to you, that I am afraid you will pronounce it impertinent to remind you of it now. We have here a broken harvest, and when I cannot stand abroad, I sit down and read. I write nothing, and am the most averse in the world to the task I have the impudence to impose on you, slaving in old fragments of history. The wild conduct of our old natives renders me splenetic, I close, I reject the page; and read Lord Bolingbroke, Rollin, Pluche,* and our modern reviews. Pluche in defence of Moses is an antidote to Lord B., and I take great pleasure in the truths I occasionally pick up in the contrast between those two philosophers; the one a most learned and rational believer, the other an enthusiast in theism, and that to various degrees of self-contradiction."

"Sep. 1758.

"I write this over Dr. Willis' book,† 'De anima brutorum.' With all his learning, he has left a great deal unsaid on the subject, at least if the brutes of his age had any relation to those of ours. There is an ecclesiastic (and would you believe it) in my neighbourhood, who was highly offended the other day with your correspondent Dr. D. for having the insolence to advance that a little rhyming poet in England, (one Pope) would be as much admired by posterity, as a certain tall Bishop, or Tillotson himself. You may take it for fact that this is no invention, and that his prelate majesty resented the degradation as highly as if he were a Cardinal.—'A man of my consequence to society levelled with a little bard!' 'Did Addison or Lord Halifax, with all their poetry, ever attempt to speak in 'public?' In this fret did his lordship speak, and therein I leave him. On the very day I wrote my last to you, I wrote to Mr. R. I touched the circumstances of his situation tenderly. Upon them I threw all the disappointments he had with regard to the work put into his hands. To acquit himself to you with any good grace after so many delays, I told him it would be necessary he should take an assistant to whose character and secrecy you could (I trusted) have no exception, and I named Mr. John Comerford to him as a young gentleman qualified every way for the trust of transcribing, digesting, &c., and the more as he must have the benefit of those instructions from you which you would communicate to none else, as Mr. R. himself could not from his several other avocations pay the attendance on you that Mr. C. could. Thus did I put this affair so home to him that there can be no evasion from the alternative of dealing as he promised by you, or of fairly giving you up your originals. I had a letter from him, the post before I wrote to him in this manner, wherein he informs me that his troubles are now mostly over, and that he would soon satisfy you as to all points, that he would set himself in earnest about the task he undertook, and that he would have the benefit of your own instructions and amendments, the more as he lives now just near you in Phrappier Lane. I wrote to him last post and pressed him to give you a meeting, and that I hoped all obstacles would be removed by pursuing the plan I laid down for him. I believe that your jealousy in regard to his aliening any or all the 'Memoirs' in his hands is groundless. I think no necessity could force him to act such a part. I think I shall hear from him next post, and I hope I shall have some satisfactory account from him and you soon on this head."

"Sep. 23, 1758.

"Yours of the 18th inst. I received yesterday and I should testify my satisfaction at the forwarding a work so long delayed as that of the 'Memoirs,' ten days ago, if

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

I was not hurried into the county of Sligo where I have sojourned for a week. What happened our friend is an untoward accident, and I am greatly affected by it, on your account as well as his own. Tho' no fever and (I conceive) no danger attends this accident, yet his poor, long, and helpless family will suffer, and this gives me very uneasy sensations. Why he has not mentioned Mr. Comerford to you can be easily accounted for. His affairs required that he should not share any part of the profit of his undertaking, and his spirit would not admit that he should share the trouble, when he would share nothing else. This is my way (at least) of accounting for his conduct, in regard to a proposal wherein I have been very explicit with him. This late accident renders the necessity of taking such a coadjutor as I recommended to him stronger than ever. I shall urge it to him this night, for I should be sorry to find it bruited about that you have appeared an active person in this affair. I would let malice, if possible, have nothing to rely on for information except its own suspicions, since in that circumstance we should be better enabled to deal with it than when it had certainty on its side, as happened in the affair of the 'Dialogue.' Your long and marginal notes will not only defend but recommend the 'Memoirs.' In short, nothing equal to your work has ever yet appeared on a point of Irish History much more important to the present time, than any that I and others have formerly dabbled in.

"I have seen the advertisement against our two prelates. I am acquainted with one of them, and think him a good man, tho' Mr. Wyse and he are unfortunately divided. I know nothing of the merits of the affair at Mitchelstown, but I can see (what no doubt you have seen) that the advertisement is extremely unfair, as it sets forth that all the inhabitants of that district were put under ecclesiastical censure. They had nothing to do but with persons of their own communion, and if our own people, tho' ever so delinquent, must not be subject to any spiritual punishment, there is at once an end of our religion. I thank God we have not many Mitchelstown subjects among us! And if our prelates have but barely done their duty (I mean with that discretion which the times require), I am in no great concern for the consequences. If you are not acquainted with the personal character of the person who issued the advertisement, I am, I will only say here that I am better pleased that such an advertisement should come from his hands, than any other person of his rank in the kingdom. Bonfires and an embargo on beef is all the news we have here in the west. In this philosophical way do we receive an event which it is computed will cost us in this province alone 30,000*l*. I have made my letter as long, and I believe longer than you require. When your hands are so full, the shortest scrip from you is better than a sheet from my other correspondents. The billet-doux of friendship, like every other billet-doux, has charms peculiar to itself."

"Octob. 6, 1758.

"Monday next being the last day of epistolary freedom, I must trouble you with a letter in the cheapest manner in my power. I have yours of the 30th ultimo before me, and am concerned at all the fatigues you undergo for the public in a double capacity. I wish warmly you may have reprisals made you by liberal payments in cash, as well as in fame; indeed I have no fear about the latter (stingy as this age is), so that your name be concealed. An author is no sooner known than abused, and as no truth is better known than this malignity in human nature, I wonder Mr. R. did not contrive to save you the trouble of supervising the 'Memoirs,' so as that your hand would not be seen in them. You may depend upon it that I pressed this upon him in two several letters. But now I find that the die is cast, and we have one comfort that the work will come out the more enriched. As this work is now attended with immediate expense, I shall, God willing, at the latter end of the month remit the little I promised for forwarding it unto light. I hope that both the type and paper are fashionable. Such ornaments can not at present be dispensed with, and with good reason, for who would abide to see a hero dressed in beggar's weeds? Many I know will be offended at the truth which at long run now find their proper place by being properly established. No matter. They are the truths of an age different from the present, the truths of another stage and other actors, and there is no injuring the Public any longer by a detention or concealment of truths to which it has so strong a right."

"Octob. 23, 1758.

"After reading the date of my letter I am put in mind of old Horace's sentiment—'Hic dies, anno re-

* Noël Antoine Pluche, author of "Histoire du Ciel," 1739, &c.

† Thomas Willis, M.D., Physician to Charles II.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq., 'denique, festus.' I rejoice with you on the return of this day,* as I think you must be edified by the sermons preached on it, conditionally that you had zeal and religion enough to listen to any; if you had not, I hope you are making it up at the tavern by this hour among all honest loyalists, quaffing glorious memories, confusions, etc. I am in love with these anniversaries wherein the ecclesiastical order and the laity by their example exert themselves in an extraordinary manner to promote the peace, increase the benevolence, and rouse the charity of all parties. I am informed that one Mr. R. has kept the printing press sweating for some time to give our anniversaryists, our preachers, and historians thanks for the pains they have taken to exhibit to us those truths which are the foundation of all this harmony in our little world. I request you will give the aforesaid Mr. R. my thanks, if he be known to you, and you may assure him that I have an interest in being thus beforehand with him, lest my name should be lost in the crowd of thanksgivers on the publication of his book. I hope you are no stranger to the work he is employed about, and on that supposal I request you will give me a full account of all his proceedings in your next."

"Jan. 27, 1759.

"Your letter of the 20th instant found me in the desert, upon a spot of four acres of land covered with stones and coppice, and neglected by my family at all times. It cost me 200 men for 6 day past to subdue this spot by stubbing and removing such a quantity of stones as enclosed it with a strong ditch. I am thus forty shillings a year richer now than when you saw me, and I have one of the qualifications necessary for voting at our next parliamentary election, all acquired by my own industry. 'O beatus nimum sua si bona norint agricolas!' Without rallery, I have for 9 years past reclaimed as much useless land as comes now to at least thirty pounds a year. I have ornamented and improved 60 acres of the creation, and I trust not only my friends but everybody, with my vanity in mentioning it. I am thinking Virgil was in earnest when he wrote the verse above quoted, but I must assure you that when I boast, I do it with discretion. I dreaded that a work of great and public use might be lost to the public; nor am I still free from apprehensions unless we put ourselves to some little expense in forwarding it. This should be done in so private a manner that no third person should ever be the wiser. I therefore request that you will not, out of any tenderness for me, spare a farthing for forwarding the work if our friend cannot proceed, but on the terms of advancing a small sum. It would be the worst economy in the world, and it would be depriving the public of what it has the fairest right to for at least sixty years past."

"Feb. 17, 1759.

"On the next post day after I received yours of the 29th ultimo, I made a precise reply as you required. I am now mixing labour with study. I succeed in the first, in the second I am highly pleased, entertained, and instructed. From the hands of Mr. Cusack I received 176 pages of a new work, intitled 'Historical Memoirs Concerning the Rebellion of 1641.' It is an admirable performance, and the author (whoever he is) has thrown on that darkened and important period of our history such a light as with good reason I despaired of ever seeing. The author has done more. From this point of view he makes most judiciously a retrospect to the times preceding the rebellion. He explains motives, develops incidents, opposes true facts to false, and, by detecting the latter, strips them of all the advantages they received from the declamations and dishonest pathos of those popular writers who in their day carried all before them by the pen as well as sword. We happily live in times wherein historical truths have a freer circulation, and it is hoped the public will be the better for them, notwithstanding the difficulty which many still have to resist the force of their earlier impressions. For this latter reason I would have our author's name concealed, and the more if it be true (as I have heard said) that the gentleman is a man of profession. Men of some consequence, but of little minds, may take advantages in such a person's case, which they would not take in mine. You, who live on the spot, and who might have heard of this performance, may inform me about the true author. I request you will procure a copy of what I have seen, and give me your opinion. I have ever been out of humour with the conduct of our clergy in Jamestown (a place within 7 miles of my home, and Galway. The writer before me has explained that affair admirably to my satisfaction, as he does every other fact relative to those miserable times, and Mr. Harris has my hearty thanks for being the instrument of all these truths. I long greatly to see the whole work finished, and I am really angry at the editor for his delay, unless he has prudently (as is probable) waited to make it more complete by his notes and appendix. I am charmed with the honesty of Carte, and highly pleased to find such frequent use made of his authority, as he is an enemy to the very people he has justified. I beg your pardon for taking up so much of your time on this subject. Read and peruse the work. You will in that case be obliged to me, as in your way you might have overlooked such a performance as little worthy your attention or curiosity."

"Feb. 27, 1759.

"—I had lately a letter from my brother in the Netherlands. He there perused the first volume of Mr. Geoghegan's 'History of Ireland' (just published) wherein the author gives very high commendations of Mr. Reilly's 'Dissertations.' Surely he must be in raptures at seeing the 'Memoirs,' wherein things much more interesting to the present times are put into the clearest light. I wish you found some means for conveying all that has been printed to Mr. Hume in Scotland, that he may avail himself of the contents in his next edition of the 'History of Great Britain.' This is not a thought which rushed in by chance, I have had it long resting upon my mind."

"Mar. 31, '59.

"—You have known one Mr. Geoghegan in Paris. My brother (in Ostend) tells me he published his first volume of the 'Irish History,' wherein the 'Dissertations' you have seen are mentioned with credit. My correspondent presses it on me to new model that essay, and offered me a plan of method, wherein he says our British compositions are generally deficient. I could wish he provided the materials as well as the method, and yet with both, what prospect have we of ever seeing here such a task executed, from the very small number of readers and encouragers? I have compared Harris's 'Bishops and Antiquities' with the annals in my hands. Thro' the ignorance of our language, he has more mistakes than pages, many of which I marked in the margin from the original works I had before me. This ignorance of our language, and virulence of faction apart, he certainly had good talents for a compiler, and I often wonder how well he has succeeded. Poor man! he was under the necessity (thro' poverty) of joining the hussar to the Swiss, of giving up his conscience to satiate the party list of patrons who could not be gained but by such a sacrifice. When shall we see the 'Memoirs.' The subscribers are ill-treated, nay the public is so, and I interrogated our friend this day on the subject."

"Aug. 10, '59.

"—I am glad to find that our friend's historical task is at an end for the present. It is the most useful book that hath hitherto appeared on the subject by vast odds, and as such must receive the stamp of public approbation (I mean the impartial public of all these western countries) as soon as it is sufficiently circulated. You did well not to trouble the gentleman you mention nor any of his subalterns with copies. They are as little able to defend as they are indifferent about knowing any part of their predecessors. Let them account to themselves and to the public for their ignorance as well as they can, and I wish them that safety from censure, which old Erasmus granted to some of his maligning enemies 'tanti sunt suis tenebris.' My cousin Reilly sent me down a pamphlet just published, entitled 'Admonition to the Papists of Ireland.' I threw it aside after one reading and shall never take it up a second time; 'non tui auxilio nec defensoribus istis tempus egit.' I think the writer too low for any animadversion."

"Aug. 22, 1759.

"—I am just come in, having left my army of reapers under the direction of a subaltern. I was well employed, but now better, in a conversation with you, 'O fortunatos nimum (sua si bona norint) agricolas!' We, agricolas, at least, who can enjoy this mixed life, tempering its useful labors with the enjoyment of a true friend, tho' at 80 miles distance. It is to this sort of life, no doubt, that Cicero refers when he declared it to

* The anniversary of the Rising of the Irish in 1611.

* Histoire de l'Irlande, Ancienne et Moderne, tirée des monuments les plus authentiques. Par M. Fabrice Ma Geoghegan. Paris 1758.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

his judgment that my occupation was next to that of a philosopher. 'Agricultura (says he) mihi videtur ad sapientis vitam proxime accedere.' I have this summer subdued nine acres of a very unprofitable heath, and for nine years past I have been purchasing of land in the same manner very clandestinely. I have acquired thirty pounds a year which I do not think the cess of that it was not left me by my family, for by a new creation I have converted a disagreeable waste of thorns into good arable land of my own. I commit this secret to you (my dear friend) but to no other, lest any acquisition should be liable to a discovery from the privation clauses in the Popery Acts. The Government cannot be too watchful, in regard to persons of my dangerous principles, especially when we thus audaciously clude the laws of the land, by making that land the more useful by our labour and industry! The first line of my letter dragged so many others after it to this place. I now go into something else. What do the public say of our friend Reilly's undertaking since its publication? Who are vexed most? Those who envy the writer, or those who want to suppress the truths he established? Of the two I would trust most to the latter as the more generous enemies, and very probably the more equitable. You see your brother F—s pretty often; what's his judgment? I hope that he can separate the work from the editor, and that he has no relation to a certain Spanish Inquisitor who forbid the reading of the most authentic edition of St. Cyprian, because it came through a Protestant press. To be serious, I am uneasy and shall be so, till I have some particulars from you relative to this new performance. I have lately met with the first volume of the 'History of Poland,' wrote in a series of letters (by my namesake Doctor Connor*) to the most eminent persons in England, in King William's reign. As he was physician to King John Sobieski, and the first who gave a writer (I think) to our name, I would be thankful to you, if you purchased the two volumes for me. It would be difficult to the search of any other person; but I never could find your industry in the pursuit of scarce books yet disappointed. I therefore presume to give you the trouble."

"Sep. 17, 1759.

"Yours of the last post I received yesterday, and I write this on the wing. I received this week 18 copies of the 'Memoirs' for subscribers here. The work is not only a credit to the author, but to our country. It produces to light truths which have long lain in the dark. Sorry I am, however, that certain circumstances would not allow of its first appearing in London. Had that been the case the malice of little minds at home (whether of the great or small vulgar) would be effectually baffled, and produce the more sport by being baffled. However, I cannot bring myself to think so badly of the times as to imagine that men of learning and knowledge should countenance any ungenerous reflections upon a work so well intended. If any pitiful pamphleteer should come out to draw evil consequences from such intentions, or controvert facts so well established, he shall be spoke to, so that his matter or manners deserve any reply. I may transmit a copy to the great man at my door, if I can find a proper hand. He and the doctor you mention are cut to pieces. I got, along with yours, a letter from our friend. I am angry at initial letters at the end of the dedication to the 'Memoirs' sent to me. The words 'the Editor' would do vastly better. I received 15 lottery tickets from him, and will I think dispose of all as I disposed of seven this day. I should write to him by this post but that I want a frank. I therefore make him this much of a reply thro' your means. I shall do what I can to see justice done to you in regard to your demand to Mr. F., etc. Was it not silly in him to name me as an arbitrator in an affair of that nature? What would he think of me if I had made so free with him? But enough for the present from a room where I am surrounded with company who visit me but seldom."

"25 Sept. 1759.

"I must write this letter and read it over afterwards before I can form a judgment whether it will be worth the while to forward it, without a parliamentary privilege to pass gratis. Thro' the instrumentality of Mr. Stafford (my friend, an honest Papist, and my Elphin apothecary,) I have yesterday slipt the 'Memoirs' into the hands of my neighbouring 'Cardinal.' He promised to read the work over with impartiality, and yet I have no great faith in those promises tho' 'in verbo sacerdotis.' I cautioned my friend to make no mention of my name, and inform his Eminence that he had the book from a Dublin correspondent. Notwithstanding this caution the 'Cardinal' spoke of me, and said he would be obliged to me, could I procure him poor Bishop French's 'Bleeding Iphigenia.*' You are no stranger to that work. The author was a partizan to our wretched Nuncio, Rinuccini,† and undertook the defence of our unhappy civil war in Charles the First's reign from principles no way popular in the present times, and I am afraid no way well grounded in any. Be that as it will, the thoughts of a single person on that subject cannot affect those of many wiser men of his own religion in that ill-fated age, and I see no great hurt in gratifying the 'Cardinal.' I therefore request of you to fall upon the search immediately, as of all men you have the happiest luck in detecting these literary fugitives. Dugan, of Bride's Alley, is a very good angler also; and I would wish that you employed him to labor along with you. It is a pleasure to me to find that the author of the 'Memoirs' has not one quotation from him, or the author of the 'Cambrensis Eversus.'"

"In festo Nativitatis D. N. J. C. 1759.

"You are in arrears to me (in turn) on the epistolary account, and you ought to be so, till you discharge accounts of more importance. I can communicate nothing to you but my impertinent sensibility (if it be impertinent) with regard to the nonsense or perverseness of your own party. Can it be less than perverseness in some, to refuse acknowledging in a public manner the real benefits we receive from a suspension of many penal laws? In the course of our long sufferings, prejudice (we see) begins to relent and the power hitherto ready in every conjuncture of peril to crush us, stretches out a hand to impotence, and invites us to that active obedience which they imagined our religion forbids. They always took our passive obedience to be only temporary and occasional, and your anti-addressers, it should seem, make it a point, to confirm them in that opinion, as if disarming power and prejudice by a religious and open profession of our true duty were an evil by all means to be avoided. Who then have acted most for the peace of Jerusalem, they who labor to undeceive our masters in regard to our true principles, or they who labored to their utmost to dissuade us from that duty? We have shaken off with decent contempt the shackles they intended we should wear, and the extraordinary notice which the Government took of our recognizances will be delivered down in history to our credit as well as to the credit of those whom God has commanded us to obey. This event has struck oppositor dumb, as it covered it with shame, and I am really angry at you for the pain you were in for some time on account of reproaches made to you as a subscriber by some friends who ought in earnest to reproach themselves for not following your example. After all, I must confess to you very candidly that I am still less in pain for the perverseness of those men than the nonsense of others who drew up the addresses of other cities. What right had those men, chained and fettered by law as they are, to use the style of freemen? This is the rock which you of Dublin avoided with much good sense, you on the contrary touched on the bondage you are under with great delicacy of sentiment, and to that very paragraph you owe your addresses being so far distinguished from others, as to merit being laid before the House of Commons; our Viceroy recommending us by that procedure as objects of real political pity. I am not indeed (from a long experience of popular assemblies) sanguine enough to expect much from all this. But surely it is great merit in us to put our affairs in such a train. I return to the addresses from the remote cities. Some of these gentlemen scold those unfortunate ancestors whom you have so well defended. Others again scold the French nation (who from them at least deserve better quarter)—France, the asylum of our poor fugitives (lay and clerical) for 70 years past! I would not general words such as you of Dublin used be more decent? Should that nation for the future stop up those fountains from which our exiles derived their existence or should they open their charity to more deserving objects, would they

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

* "The History of Poland, in several letters to persons of quality, giving an account of the ancient and present state of that kingdom, historical, geographical, physical, political, and ecclesiastical. By Bernard Connor, M.D. Fellow of the Royal Society, and Member of the College of Physicians, who, in his travels in that country, collected these memoirs from the best authors, and his own observations." Two vols., 8vo. London: 1698.

* "The Bleeding Iphigenia," by Nicholas French, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ferns, was published on the Continent, in 1674, in repudiation of the charges brought against the Irish Catholics, in connexion with their acts in the reign of Charles I.

† A different view of Rinuccini and his relations with the Irish will be found in the 'Contemporary History of Affairs in Ireland,' 1641-1652. London, B. Quaritch, 1850.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

be much to blame? But the nonsense of these gentlemen did not stop here. They declare themselves so happy as to require a revolution in their private oppressed state, as little as they do a revolution in government.—Thus hath common sense deserted us, as well as fortune, the consequence of the loss of liberty!—I say no more, for this is doubtless too much in the whining strain, where the evil is without remedy. I told you that the 'Memoirs' are extolled, here in the west, to the skies by the few good judges we have. I forgot to remind you of the necessity of putting this work into the hands of Messrs. Hume and Smollet, the best modern historians we ever had in England. It is a loss (but not I hope an irreparable one) that the book was not published earlier for their inspection before the second edition of their histories came out. Mr. McDermott, of Usher's Quay, sent me the thanksgiving sermon of the Primate before the House of Lords. The strain in which the head of the Irish Protestant Church speaks of our difficulties, and his recommending encouragement to us, before such an assembly ought never to be forgot, and I doubt not but his Grace hath been spirited to all this in a particular manner by the applications and remonstrances to him in some former public papers, which you have seen. My paper and your patience are both out, but I recall the expression, for you are never impatient at the effusions of a friendship like mine, which ever sought to avoid prolixity and impertinence, however I might fail in the execution."

" May 13, 1760.

" I have omitted the 'repetita crame' for some time. I now renew my complaints and despondencies. I had yesterday a letter from poor Lord, our patriot bibliopolist, distinguishable by being at present the greatest sufferer by Popery of any man in the kingdom, for he not only suffers in common with us all as a Papist, but he suffers by our party also. He expended more than eight guineas on the Farmer's scheme, and received less than three pounds! Shame to us all that he should be such a sufferer! For my own part I would contribute to repair his expediture on our account. You are a member of our representative committee, and I trust you have influence enough with your brethren to induce them to contrive ways and means for satisfying minute demands on our party. How shall we bring our great scheme to bear if we fail or even hesitate in little things. We Protestants and Papists are united on the principle of indolence, however one may be separated on every other. The 'Farmer's' fourth letter is an excellent piece, and neither party gives it attention. This slight on the writer will, I believe, stop the mouth of the patriot and yet (to give you my thoughts candidly) I think we ought to keep him to the work he undertook, till he completed it, for he is a man of genius, and what is better, he is a Protestant of genius, the fittest wedge we can have to cleave a block of the same timber."

" Aug. 20, 1760.

— " I am grieved to hear of the apathy of our Roman Catholic friends in the city. On them we had our chief dependance. You alone have acted the part of a patriot, and from experience I am not so much surprised at the small acquisition you have made among our people as at your making any at all. I am however obliged to my friend Mr. Reynolds and to the few others who adhere to you. I had last week a letter from Mr. Lord complaining still of his sufferings by the 'Farmer's Letters.' As he suffered on our account, it is surely our cause. I could wish his loss was repaired to him, and I would myself contribute. You and I (you particularly) have acquitted ourselves singularly to our party. We should not be tired still, were it of any use. I am thankful to my worthy friend Dr. Reddy, who would bring me back from the consideration of our present unfortunate times to the past from which I first started, to the study of more ancient and better times within the limits of our own island. Any assistance I can afford in giving a clearer notion of those times than we have had hitherto is at his disposal, Alas! My assistance is next to nothing, not only because my studies relative to our ancient history have been long interrupted, but because materials at this distance from libraries are extremely few. The 'Farmer' has already solicited me on this head and offered his own elegant pen to set off the matter. I answered with truth that my avocations and want of materials rendered me too feeble a crutch to be leant upon, especially without those materials which lie at such a distance from me. But I repeat again what I said above, that the Doctor and Abbé shall want no assistance in my power."

" Sept. 16, 1760.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

— " I request you will tender my best services to Dr. Reddy, and assure him that every little historical anecdote in my power is at his disposal. Remote as I am from libraries, my contributions (I am afraid) are not worth acknowledgment from him or the Abbé. I have given my mind largely on this subject in my two last letters to you, and would enlarge still on my gratitude to the Doctor for his friendship if this manner of conveyance had not met with so many obstructions. The work you have in hand is one of the desiderata of our ill fated country, and I often thought that it was not more a shame than a loss to it that so few medical works have yet appeared among us, when our climate, our soil, our manner of living, &c. have pointed to some new and local methods of practice: your long experience qualifies you for making a considerable present to your country on a subject inexhaustible in its nature, and tho' you profess to write only 'ad populum,' yet foreign physicians will be much obliged to you for the new lights in your power, and the more as our island is so much in arrear to medical learning. Now that your hand is in I shall make but very little allowance for ill-grounded modesty; and none at all for laziness or a subject wherein your own fame, and (what is more), the good of your country is deeply concerned. I would not however staid you in time, but would have you enlarge your view, and take in more matter than (perhaps) you have proposed to yourself. A delay of five or six months will be nothing when balanced with the good it must certainly produce. Let me know how far you approve of these hints, which I take the liberty to throw out on this very important subject, such a liberty is very pardonable in me, and much as I regard the public good, private friendship warms still more in taking up so much of your time in answer to a postscript of two short lines. I have seen the 'Memoirs' you mention and the notice taken now of them so long after their publication puts me in mind of Tiberius's condoleance with the citizens of Troy for the loss of old Hector. The design of those 'Memoirs' was to refute the contumners of the republicans in Charles the First's reign, those republicans whose words were invectives against the Church of England, and whose actions were an edged sword to cut off the monarchy and the monarch. If any man alive is offended at giving such men their due, let him in God's name stand forth and avow his principles. We will dare reply to him with the constitution and the laws of the land on our side."

" Octob. 3, 1760.

— " I have written my last to you carelessly enough, and I believe that I told you so, being in dread that my letter would miscarry; and, if I mistake not, I informed you that I must seek some other channel of correspondence with you rather than a post office wherein I thought myself betrayed. No man alive has given me stronger testimonials of true friendship than you have done, and I feel the effects of it every day. You have enriched me with much historical knowledge; you have cultivated my mind, and you have re-established my son, who, I think, God has wonderfully thrown under your care. My moral and physical essence disposes me to sensibility and tender affections nuder ties vastly less obligatory. I never forget the unmerited services I receive, and in regard to injury I recall it with so much pain to myself that I almost forget it. I once lost a brother of yours in this commerce of friendship, but in truth he never lost me. I would gladly improve an opportunity to serve him, for nothing can cancel the good done, while time and accidents may open a door for cancelling the evil. If all this be the true state of my mind, I must repeat what I said above, that I cannot on any account lose the friendship you conferred on me so gratuitously, and I must insist on your explaining in my favor for the future those ambiguities which, perhaps, the strictest care cannot always guard against, particularly in the case of two friends, who never ought to be laced and corded by the preciseness and forms which are exacted by a more reserved correspondence. Have I not minutely too much on this subject? I think you will blame me for it; I should have said in one word that I never harboured one thought of you but what obligation dictates to gratitude, and that I cannot part with any acquisition where self-interest in some degree strips gratitude itself of its merit. There I should leave the matter."

" If Dr. Reddy be in town, I request you will present him with my affection. Any contribution I can make towards Abbé Geoghegan's work is always at command. It is but small at this distance from archives and libraries. With relation to his designed history from the Conquest of Ireland (as it is called), there is a chasm of 54 years in my Irish Annals, that is from 1170 to 1224, and this void (no doubt) is tolerably filled in Harris's collections, yet in Mss. These ought to be referred to, if any access can be had to them. On the whole, I know no history can worse reward the labors of an able writer than our own for the 4 or 5 ages succeeding the Invasion of Henry II.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"On the day after his dining with the Bishop of Elphin I met here the famous oculist Taylor. He is drunk with vanity, and of all men was the unfittest to sooth the vanity of another. In relation to the present state of Europe, he contradicted the Cardinal in almost every particular. This incident gave me no pain. Taylor, whose manual dexterity brought him into the most conspicuous circles of mankind, has contracted from long habits an indifference to the smaller subordinations, and to the value which the most limited set on themselves. He is called a forward and impudent man, when, in fact, he estimates things by their real value not as a philosopher but as a traveller. You have a medical present to make to your country. Let it be worthy of you, for it is worthy of all your care and knowledge. Those who quarrel with truth in an historical process will, however, embrace it in a physical one. Tho' we have different interests (real or supposed) in civil affairs, we have none at all in what is common to all as material beings. Let it animate you that you will have none to oppose you, but perhaps brethren, who find writing difficult, and censure easy. I wish I may hear more from you relatively to the gentleman who told you so much offence was taken at the 'Historical Memoirs.' That some are offended I do not doubt, and what is true in the Irish proverb is true in their case, — 'It is easy to draw blood from a scabby head' — so much the better, they may receive their cure the sooner from a little phlebotomy."

"Octob. 15, 1760.

"Your letter from Norris's Coffee House brought me the sunshine I wanted, and I enjoy it too much to think of the shade I lay under; or, if I should think at all of it, it would be only to laugh with you at those blunders in writing which an Irishman and a Connaughtman (to mend the matter) will sometimes commit, not indeed to pull down, but to shake the fabric of friendship he has been happy enough to rear. It puts me in mind of a gentleman of our country, the great MacDermott in Charles the First's reign. He possessed an admirable turn of mind, but he blundered enough to make all the world laugh (excepting his friends). A gentlewoman who esteemed him much, hearing his whims ridiculed, and unable to make any sort of defence, cried out, 'Know, varlet, (said she) that MacDermott disdains discretion!' Let me have the same Milesian right with you, lest the little stock of discretion in my possession should have any deductions when I write on the pivot of reservedness to those for whom alone reservedness should be kept. I am sorry, but not at all surprised to find that the Farmer is not encouraged to finish the useful work for which he so good a foundation. Habits of pain have produced a thorough insensibility among our people, a deadly lethargy for which the whole 'matéria politica' can never find a remedy while the legislative shop is kept shut against such patients. Were I a wealthy man I would at worst see the Farmer's key for opening this shop finished, but since I am not thus able I submit with resignation to our common fate! In the state of apathy we are in, apathy is our best cure. Thus kind Providence balances the evils of life, and counteracts all the mighty efforts of our masters to render a perpetual corrosive. 'Uno premente Deo, fert Deus alter opem.' I would wish, however, that the Farmer's 5th letter was published, but where is the good of wishing. Let me go back to the past from which I started, from the consideration of present times to those that are long since past. 'Iterare cursus eorum relictos,' as Horace phrases it. Several years since I have written an historical account of our Irish Kings from the reception of Christianity to the dissolution of our monarchy; that book I burned. I am now sitting down to a second draught, and this, if finished, I may burn also. No matter. It will find employment for an idle hour, which I by no means will dedicate to cards while an old annal lies before me. Could I do anything to my own liking in such a work, vanity (which at my time of life no wise man would entertain) will have the smallest share in it. I propose something better, the bringing home to the heart by historical examples that wisdom which all our speculations have attempted to infuse in vain. This has been the well-judged plan of the three letters to the Lord Primate [Stone], and we have certainly felt some good effects from them, operating privately, and in some degree (as you know) operating publicly also. Go on with your 'medical precepts,' excepting some among the medical brotherhood you will have all parties, Whigs, Tories, Papists on your side. You will fare better than the author of the 'Historical Memoirs,' for I find by a late account that the rust of his historical sword will not easily cure the wounds he gave to party prepossessions, and lucrative falsehoods. But I dare be prophetic enough to predict that those who are so unreasonably sore will let the memoir writer rest in full security. If they do not, their objections will only throw light on the subject they want to keep in the shade."

"Nov. 24, 1760.

"Are you labouring at our medical work? Our Irish climate and Irish habits require instructions which are not yet given, and which no foreign physician (however able) can give. You have laid the foundation and you should not be lazy on rearing an edifice, which your fame and (much more) your duty calls upon you to finish. Lazy as I am, I have been delineating something this winter, but my Annals are no better than a file of newspapers, and I apprehend that such materials are to an historian what a barren invention is to a poet. The historical like the poetical harvest will be poor indeed, and who will be found who will come to share in the repast we can afford? But I am free from the poet's vanity. I shall endanger no table with my fist, nor knock down a poor writer who takes my extatic raps for a call. I shall desist in time and demolish my castle of cards with a whiff. Tired and chagrined as I have been in an unsuccessful attempt to which [you] are no stranger, I thought it some relief to turn my eyes from modern to ancient times, and a relief it is. Write to your friend, for no man wants the advice and consolation of a friend more."—"Since I have written the within, I replied to yours by the last post, and sent you an indigested heap of words, out of which, perhaps, some paragraph might stand in the address which some of our people think a proper measure at this time. I hope all our people will be unanimous in this affair. You should have this letter earlier, but the bearer was delayed by his own affairs."

"Culavin, Decr. 29, 1760.

"This event (I say) has put a temporary stop to any activity in the affair of the subscriptions. I got some and I here send you their names, as the address is now at Belanagare, and cannot be sent up till I go home. May God, my dear friend, grant you a happy new year. May your family be a comfort to you, and may no disturbance arrive to interrupt it, particularly by mortality till you, in a distant period, precede them by your own dissolution.

"Subscribers who signed the address before the 20th inst. :—

| | |
|--|--|
| "Edmond French, of Bela, Esq. | "James MacDermott, gent. |
| "John French, of do., Esq. | "John Croughan, of Roscommon, mercht. |
| "Robert Plunket, Esq. | "John Purcell, of Roscommon, mercht. |
| "Charles Plunket, Esq. | "Hugh Stafford, of Elphin, apothecary. |
| "Michael Plunket, of Oxhill, gent. | "Andrew Cumyn of do., gent. |
| "Michael Plunket, of Ardkeena, Esq. | "Andrew Martin, of do., gent. |
| "Edmund Ternan, of Tulse, merchant. | "O'Connor Don, of Ballintobber. |
| "James Ternan, of Strokestown, mercht. | "Dominick O'Connor, of do. |
| "Patrick Mahon, of do., mercht. | "Charles O'Connor, of do. |
| "Dominick Mahon, of do., mercht. | "Owen O'Connor, of do. |
| "Charles Mahon, of do. | "Roger O'Connor, of do. |
| "Martin Brown, of Cloonfad, gent. | "Denis O'Connor, of do. |
| "Roger Flynn, gent. | "Dennis O'Connor, of Belaghnamarn. |
| "Michael Flynn, gent. | "T. O'Connor, of do. |
| "Edmond Corr, of Roscommon, gent. | "Hugh O'Connor, of Ballintobber. |
| "Michael MacDermott, of do., gent. | |

Four times this number could be got if the address could be sent into the several quarters of the country."

"Jamestown, Jan. 19, 1761.

"I am concerned but not surprised at your unmeaning differences, difficulties, hyper-criticisms, etc., relative to an address. Thus it must be people so pecu-

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq. liarily circumstanced as we are; we do not well know how to word what the constitution seems to forbid us to speak. Self-sufficiency, timidity, and pride (contradictory as those passions are), throw in their weight, and from this combination of things I expect nothing, or what is next to it. I could wish strongly that you kept the Farmer a-going let his price be what it will. Till our enemies turn advocates for us nothing can be done for us. For my part I have done with these affairs. My efforts have only gained me ill will from many of our own people. If ever I attempt anything for public instruction it will for the future be in your way by historical lessons. I write composedly here in a public-house with the eyes of the company upon me. We have here the ruins of old fortifications and the noblest river in the three kingdoms before us. You cannot forget that the place is famous (like Trent) for the Council held here in the days of Cromwell.* I shall soon, God willing, be able to write to you something more consistently put together than what I now send. I would rather remit any scrowle than leave you any longer in suspense about the cause of my silence, where public and private duty require my breaking it."

"Feb. 6. 1761.

"Your very welcome letter of the 31st of last month I received by the last post. It arrived at a time when I looked on the affair undertaken by our people as utterly desperate, and I hinted as much in a scrole I writ to you from Jamestown. I receive great pleasure from the share my worthy friend, Lord Taafe, took in this affair, nor could we expect much effect from it, if men of rank and others of the party known to the public (by their fortunes or professions) had not put their hands to it. Several such I am afraid have neglected to subscribe. Despair, or pride, or indifference, or unmeaning motives have arrested their hands, and with these we must bear as with the other moral evils of life. Will it be overlooked that our ecclesiastics to a man have been entirely passive in the prosecution of this measure? The only man among us against whom the Popery laws are not put in execution! The only licensed Roman Catholic in the kingdom! We the laity indeed may see no end of our sorrows, but our address to the throne will certainly have a good effect with regard to them, and it must be one of those contradictions in life (of which life is full) to find them very little obliged to their benefactors. They may no doubt think themselves affronted that they have not on this occasion been called upon to prescribe in our civil as well as religious duties, and had they sufficient knowledge in the former as well as in the latter case, we should be much to blame if we did not give them the weight they ought to have in deliberations which so much concern us both. But the leading men seem to want political knowledge much more than their predecessors in former reigns, or they are foreclosed by some private reasons of their own, which if wisdom cannot avow, religion can never approve. Be this as it will, I have some hope that the Government will consider them as associates in our address, and the more as they think we can do nothing without the advice or consent of this order of men. 'Aliquis malo' usus in illo,' unless they deprive us of this use by declarations that they had no hand in our address, but it is to be presumed that they have more discretion. My concern on this head made me unawares enlarge too much on it.

"I now return to the immediate object of your letter. The Primate, as you observe, is doubtless a most worthy person, and were men of his temper at the head of the Protestant cause for 200 years past, we should not have the history of Christendom disgraced by dissensions, and those concomitant evils, which can have no place where the spirit of Christianity prevails. Worthy as this prelate is from so happy a natural disposition, yet the public appeals to him which I have seen and some other papers on our affairs, have, I am convinced, had a good effect on a man who wishes so well for the public, and confesses how really it suffers; by elapping bolts and manacles on two-thirds of the industrious and labouring part of our people. I am rejoiced to find that among so many essays the putting the last hand to the address fell upon you, unwilling as you were to have either the envy or the honor of it. The pevish and self-sufficient will envy you; the good men who live now and the good men who are not alive yet will honor you, for you will be known to posterity when those selfish gentlemen I hint at will not. I could wish ardently that our

C. O'CONNOR, Esq. 'Farmer' was kept in good humour; you told me he would, for your hopes are always stronger than mine. Let me be assured that they are better grounded than my despondency. The retaining such a man in our service ought by no means to be neglected. I request you will as soon as possible give me the history you promise of the dictatorial peer who put himself at the head of two counties, when he failed in putting himself at the head of the whole party. As our ends are the same, his secession can do no hurt. I request you will pay Mr. George Faulkner, my particular friend, one guinea for me in discharge of what I owe him for his 'Journal' during this last year. The post officer in Roscommon does not do me justice in the transmittal of that paper, and I think I ought to drop it. I shall by the next safe hand send you what you will pay him, and I have great occasion for your indulgence relative to the sums I take up so freely, and the many other troubles I give you from time to time. You have no alternative left but to discharge the friend you gave yourself, or bear with the expense of him. I am growing old and would gladly have a license from a vigorous fast at one meal, where fish is scarce. I suffered in the last Lent, and I fear for my constitution in this."

"13 March 1761.

"I return you my warmest thanks for what I liked first, and what you have written last in your letter of the tenth instant. I mean the very witty and very poignant verses on the archi-presbyter and his zealous co-operators with the Grand Jury of Dublin. Whoever the author is, I dare promise you that he has a better ingredient in the composition of verses than indignation, laudable as indignation must be on such an occasion given to it, where the ravens are spared and the pigeons punished. The ridicule is indeed powerful, and wrought up to the highest pitch that humour could raise it. I like this little piece too well, and I know its value too well not to preserve it from the mortality of a circulating modern manuscript, and I see no reason why it may not appear without offence in some of the public papers. By the way, I hope I think too favourably of our own clergy to suspect that any among them acted an underpart in the plot of Stephen's Street. One of the chaplains is my particular friend and countryman, Mr. Fitzgerald, who has been my constant inmate in Mrs. Birmingham's house. Before the Oratory was opened in Stephen-Street he communicated his design to me. I requested of him by all means to have the hyper-doctor's consent, and whether he followed my advice or not I know not, tho' I know what I suspect, and what you will readily guess. God help us! What may we not apprehend from enemies, to whom we are literally captives, when enmity and contention among ourselves league with those enemies to our undoing? Or is it any alleviation of the evil that the contempt of such enemies may help to blunt the edge of their hatred? We want good sense and common sense among us. I am afraid we want true zeal also. You who are endowed with these blessings, what have you not suffered by the want of them in others, nay what have you not suffered by the exertion of them? But I must recall the last line. The consciousness of doing your duty, and of putting some life into our expiring cause will render what you suffered a mere feather counterpoised with that consciousness. Yet a feather which may be light may be sharp-pointed also. Its irritation will give some pain to so sensible a mind as yours; and I know that it had this effect with me to a degree which induced a strong resolution to leave party advocacy, for the future, in the hands of more able and more resolute advocates than myself. Must I not be reduced to despondency by the account you give me of the nonsense of so many among ourselves, who thought it more prudent to let the dirt thrown upon us in the 'London Chronicle' stick, rather than throw it back on the head of him who raked it? Doth not this incident offer us a decent and (may I say?) a desirable opportunity of publishing to the world our true principles relative to civil government. What but the declaration of such principles, and the frequent repetition of them (so as to make at last, some impression on our masters) can entitle us to the repeal of any one penal law? When industry, the culture of our island, the public happiness, are all kept at a stand on our account, will not legislative wisdom one day or other apply some cure to the wound given to the public interest thro' our sides, when this wisdom gets a conviction of its being safe in administering such a cure? But this is too much to you. I am glad that the refutation you mention hath been sent off to appear in the very paper wherein the charge was made against us. It has been drawn up by a certain gentleman of

* A detailed account of this Council, held in August, 1650, is given in the "Contemporary History of Affairs in Ireland, 1641-52," vol. II, pp. 109-7. London: B. Quaritch, 1880.

C. O' CONOR,
Esq.

my acquaintance. I have no doubt of its being effectual, as far as prejudice (which is not over fiery in the heads of our present ministry) will admit it to be efficacious. Could we since the first invasion of our island boast of such a Secretary, I mean Mr. P[itt,] such a Viceroy, such a Primate, as the present? Never had we surely a better security from prejudice, religious or national! In the refutation sent off, I would warmly wish that the motto from Lord Clarendon, in the 'Historical Memoirs,' was advantageously thrown in. The authority of such an able, or rather such a popular adversary must have great weight with minds too much preoccupied against error and better authority. Now that I mention the 'Memoirs,' how came it that Mr. Hume, of Edinburgh, was not served with a copy as I often requested? Surely this ought not to be omitted, as that gentleman will probably give another edition of his 'History,' and be obliged for any lights which may render it still more valuable to the public.

You have been ill-treated with respect to the 'Farmer,' and indeed in every other respect, but I request you will sacrifice your resentment on this fairest prospect we ever had. Write to Mr. Wyse that he may prompt and spur Dublin indolence. Do you prompt shame and spur also. Had the Farmer's undertaking been complete and brought into one pamphlet on the approach of next session, it would doubtless operate in our favor. The smallest alleviation of our misery would be a great point gained, and prove the earnest of a still greater future alleviation. 'Tu ne cede malis, sed contra audentior ito.' I believe my last long letter to you has miscarried. It rolled chiefly on a just resentment of Lord Trimleston's treatment of our people in their representative committee. When will your medical work be finished? Is it not a shame and a reproach that no able man of your profession has yet given those instructions relatively to our climate, and its physical causes and effects, which the ablest foreigner cannot possibly give? You, who in the long course of experience must know our constitutions what most affect them, and what best can help them by preventatives and by remedies, should take the honor of this task while we have the profit. 'Tis a great honor surely to be useful, after your surrender of life, what every man must surrender. May yours be long and happy in friends and in fortune."

"To Pæan! Tho' I have written to you by last post, yet I cannot contain myself. After all your windings and doubles to escape fame, she has fairly overtaken you at last. You have now no resource left but to compound with her not to lift you up and expose you to the public, a composition which I think you will not be able to make, unless you are able to impose silence upon me, which I think you will hardly do. Living, dying, or dead, you are my hero. You, who have wiped off the stains upon our ancestors! You, who have in the labor of a hundred days made waste paper of the anniversary sermons of a hundred years! You who done all this with the applause of your very adversaries! What do I, what doth not your country owe to you? I dined yesterday at a worthy man's table, Sir Edward King's, in a circle of the chiefest men of this country. It being post day a number of Irish and English papers came in. I hit upon the 'Chronicle' of the 31st of March, there I found a 'Vindication' of our 'Address,' I ran out of the circle to the window in raptures, and there perused as composedly as I could the whole. Words sink now, as they cannot express my pleasure. I came back to the table and expressed my satisfaction at the justice done us by the English writer in the 'Chronicle.' How so? Why, Sir Edward, our address from the Roman Catholics of Ireland was misrepresented and even tortured to our prejudice by some gentlemen in England. Others, said I, were generous enough to reluke the person who, upon his own authority, fastened vile principles upon the addressers, and condemned what the court approved and received very graciously. 'Let me see the Vindication.' He took it and read a part. He closed up the 'Chronicle.' 'I do not,' (said he) 'dislike a controversy where both parties agree in the main point of obedience to the civil government. If it be an obedience from principles (as this writer contends) rather than from necessity, the Roman Catholics, I am thinking, will find the benefit if they give the legislature the proper conviction.' The parson, on my left hand (a dignitary, too), interrupted the baronet by another subject, and I thought it discreet not to renew the argument. I would have a three-penny pamphlet published containing our Address and the 'Chronicle' controversy, and all this introduced by a reasonable advertisement. It is enough to hint this to you, but probably the publication ought to be delayed till the new Viceroy [Earl of Halifax] comes over. You who started this subject for the service of your country ought not to drop it lightly, as you have now the joy of baffling the malice of friends and foes in a run of applause from England. The severest scourge that envy or malice can feel!—When I arrived here this day from Boyle, I found Mr. R.'s letter before me, giving me an account of the reception which the 'Literary Reviewers' gave to the 'Memoirs' in 7 pages. He sent me some extracts, and one concludes that the 'Memoirs' are written 'with the accuracy of a scholar, the candour of a gentleman, and the moderation of a Christian.' To Pæan! No picture can be more just, or, indeed, more highly finished! What a pleasure must it not be to the 'Advertiser' to find himself inseparably joined to such a 'memoir-writer' as is here described. When they are no more, their friendships and, I hope, their services will be remembered. 'The Memoirs' are an everlasting monument, and since it must stand, the 'Advertiser' can not be forgot. This is vanity, but it is honest vanity, and while it impels me to honest efforts why should it be discarded? Our friend [scilicet] ought to advertise the 'Memoirs' immediately, and stick the last closing paragraph of the review to his advertisement, beginning at the words, 'Those who are desirous of surmounting illiberal prejudices, etc.' I am really pleased greatly that this incident is likely to be of considerable service to our friend. His obstetric hand has been of use to us, but to me particularly, who would not be known to you but for him. It was owing to his solicitations that I ever ventured upon appearing before the severe tribunal of the public."

C. O' CONOR,
Esq.

"[May 12, 1761.]

"Could I come at a frank, the last post, you should be troubled with as good a letter or a worse letter than this I am now writing. In letters to a friend, I would indeed pay a proper regard to the matter (did it lie in the way) but very little to the style. I would only guard against illiberal improprieties, the surest indications either of a want of respect or of a want of common abilities; and yet you who seek only a friend's heart can overlook everything else. How else could you bear with my idle complaints and idler bagatelles for five years past? I call my complaints idle, when I see no remedy for the shameful conduct of our own people, in whom you and a few others have been long endeavouring to infuse some spirit. You have labored surely in vain, when in your representative capacity as a committee you bear with the dictatorial taunts of a single person who has usurped the property of the public, and who refuses to be accountable for it except in his own way, not in theirs. Do you not, gentlemen, deserve his treating you in this manner? They who can tamely bear such treatment deserve it most certainly. What service hath that gentleman ever done you, except by a certain address penned by himself wherein the turgid style and puerile sentiments helped to set off that drawn up in your committee; that address, whose natural graces could not be better seen or recognized than by setting up the foil to it which we have seen. Were I one of your committee (what pity it is that I am not), I would humbly move that this gentleman should be exempted from all future trouble in regard to the application, the detention, or the non-application of our little public fund. I would with great deference also urge, that, in regard to the uses it should be applied to, there is nothing so difficult or embarrassing as may not come within the extent of our own common penetration, without the dictatorship of any one person who might presume to exert a power over it. He lodged the money in an honest man's hands, but surely he did so under the control of the proprietors, and whether expressed or tacit is all alike. The committee as representatives of those proprietors have a right to ease him of the burthen, and fulfil to the best of their power the intention of their constituents, so little hitherto regarded. If the dictator should refuse to comply, another course should be taken with him, under the limitation, however, of that discretion, which I hope may prove effectual in punishing him, without letting our adversaries into the secret.—It is a shame, and a flaming one, that you cannot or do not supply the 'Farmer,'* and enable him to complete his argument. Were his papers all published here, and republished in London in one pamphlet, they must be effectual in opening the eyes of candour and good sense. To attempt any other is not in the nature of possible things; but

* Henry Brooke, author of "The Farmer's Letters to the People of Ireland," 1746.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

every acquisition is gain to the poor, and acquisition in the light I mention must surely be great gain. I expect to hear soon from you on the Farmer's account, but not with the desirable circumstances of your last letter. If Smollet should deign to correspond with me on points of history relating to this island, I shall point you out to him, after telling him who wrote the 'Historical Memoirs.' I need not say much to him. In that case he will no longer be indebted to me for a correspondence with you. He is a man of very considerable historical abilities, and should be attempting writing our history, we should exert ourselves from all quarters to supply him with proper materials. His accounts and reflections would be of great use in curing old prejudices; and who would not drop a little of his domestic business to contribute to so desirable an event? I know not whether I informed you before, but the Farmer proposed it to me to assist him in writing a history of Ireland. I answered as politely as I could, and told him truly I could not (from avocations interesting to my family) go thro' the painful task of reading, selecting, transcribing, etc.; that all my own materials together were not sufficient, without visiting libraries to make up such a collection as would be necessary for him. This shall be my answer to the other gentleman, tho' what I have at present I would refuse to neither. Nay, I would drop a part of my domestic affairs to be useful in some shape to my country. I expect a medical work from you, but yet under the control of your leisure and other businesses. I do not consult your fame alone, in such an undertaking, I am actuated from a higher principle, the good of my country."

" June 24, 1761.

"I am really vexed at the perverseness of our people, and if you find the case desperate (incurable I should say), I request you will give them up, like your patients in another capacity. What patient can be preserved against himself, against one who rejects the most salutary remedies? Desponding as I am, I, however, hope you will be made amends in the spirit and fidelity of some for the falling away of others in whom you vainly reposed a confidence. Write to me soon and let me know whether I am only vainly flattering myself.

"I last post received a letter from Mr. Warner, in London, who is writing the general history of Ireland. You have seen his letter to the nobility and gentry on this subject in 'Faulkner's Journal.' He solicits my assistance or rather contributions. He writes politely, and puts some queries relative to several things advanced in the 'Dissertations.' I shall write, and in my answer plainly confess my own mistakes in one or two places to which he points. Those 'Dissertations' lie under all the disadvantages of a first endeavour on a very difficult subject. They lay two years out of my hands before publication, and are destitute of many corrections, additions, and chastisements which I could give them. After all, I will find it much easier to answer Mr. Warner's queries than his expectations. To serve him to any good purpose I should go thro' much painful drudgery, which my present avocations cannot permit. I hear of other able undertakers. Dr. Smollet, Mr. Nugent (the translator of Montesquieu); etc. I promise you they will be far from finding the road so smooth as imagination may conceive it, and I am afraid most of 'em will faint before they go half their journey, 'Periculose plenum opus alee.

"I ask your pardon for not acknowledging the letter of yours you mention. I shall make no apology for the judgement I formed of the 'Remonstrance.' I have kept a copy of it, and am able to vindicate all that I have advanced, tho' you, my learned Trebatius, should dissent, and yet I do not remember that I ever differed with you on any other point. Do not let our medical work lie over, by sacrificing to laziness. Of all physicians in Europe, ours are most in debt to the public. When you appear 'unus instar omnium,' your interest will be advanced, while your credit will be undivided. Agriculture is my daily occupation. I am adorning 'campum rudem et incultum,' as Lord Chesterfield did his in the Phoenix Park, and my undertaking is vastly more extensive and profitable than his. You see that in one instance, I am, without boasting, his superior. 'Agricula mihi videtur ad sapientis vitam proxime accedere.' I quote that sentiment of Cicero in my own favor, to give the citizen an idea of the importance of my present labors. What do I not owe to the inventor of these marks (made by a quill), and to one who brings me thus into conversation with my friend at the distance of 80 miles? Who brought me a visit from Warner in seven days from London? Who, by a miracle, brings sound from the organs of light with more precision than thro' those of the ear? Whoever he was, I shall owe more to him when he brings me glad tidings in the next visit from you.—Why do you not send the 'Memoirs' to Mr. Hume of Edinburgh. You really deserve a rating, and I thank Dr. Smollet more than you for the information he gave Hume about that work in his review. I am glad that my paper is out, lest I should run into more accusations. I believe this to be the only letter of mine which began and ended with them."

" Octob. 3, 1761.

"To-morrow or next day I send up to Mr. R[eilly] by the conveyance of a country fellow, 'The Danger of Popery Examined.' You are to get it from our friend and to pass sentence upon it. There may be some circumstances of time which may render the publication at present unseasonable, besides we must have a consideration for booksellers who lose by tracts on our subjects, for neither friends or foes will read them. I have addressed this little pamphlet to our new Viceroy; I had an honest artifice in this to gain attention. Could I gain one able convert to truth among our masters, it would be a conquest, and a conquest of triumph superior to any ever obtained by Roman arms! I had neither time nor patience to transcribe the essay I send you, you must therefore put on a pair of new spectacles to decipher interlineations, and get over the sharp palisades thrown in your way by blots and counterblots, if you are in the temper of allowing the expression. If you find that putting the old argument in a new livery may be of any use, I believe you will agree with me, that to obtain this end it would be necessary that an old acquaintance should not be suspected for the author. That suspicion would ruin all. You know of me (what I know of you,) that I would prefer the smallest public advantage to my own credit, and yet on the whole, what credit can be gained at present by a fugitive pamphlet on our subject which dies like other creatures immediately after coming into the world? Yet I know that our creatures of the brain may revive hereafter, when present dissipations, present views, and the present reigning caprice are over. I know that you have preserved pamphlets that had no good luck in their day, and others will no doubt hereafter imitate your example. 'Tis thus that many historical and important anecdotes are preserved. But this is no comfort of present consideration. I say no more. My bolt is shot, and I shall think, I assure you, no more about it, hit or not hit. To-morrow I lie again for the county of Sligo."

" Camagh, Octob. 29, 1761.

"I had a letter this week from Mr. R[eilly] informing me that you thought it proper I should enlarge on that part of the Lord Lieutenant's speech, wherein he proposes the encouragement of agriculture and the linen manufacture to our Parliament. I was so struck with your thought, that I sat down immediately, tho' my foot was in the stirrup for this place, and sent up yesterday the crude and indigested page which have (probably) seen before you can see this, having the substance of it in my memory, I sat down here in the happy recess of a whole day to put that matter into some better form, and what I have done I send you enclosed in this letter. 'Forsan et haec olim meminisse juvabit.' I confess to you that I am intensely warmed with my Lord Lieutenant's speech, and in this warmth I flatter myself that the 'Danger of Popery Examined,' is a seasonable piece, however deficient in matter and argument, both which might be extended. I will see you in December, meantime I request you will write to me by the return of the post, and inform me of what our people are doing, etc. Tho' I live now in the neighbourhood of the county of Fermanagh, I shall be at home before your letter returns. The sheet I now send, on agriculture and the linen trade, is as full as it need be, and will I hope please you, after you correct it. I have wrought into it a little on the precariousness of our judgement debts, but 'oculo retorto.'"

" Nov. 25, 1761.

"I am angry at you for apologizing that you did not write to me since you received my last. You have a far better and more interesting employment, that of doing public as well as private good, and any minute you detach from that, is a great loss even to me. Go on and rouse your own people, rouse their adversaries, and reconcile, if you can, these to those. By no other means will you come at the 'mollia tempora fandi,' the halcyon days you mention. I never keep copies of any of my letters, and what I transmitted to you from my letter to Dr. Warner, was barely from memory. The substance, not the identic words.—Peace to the political manes of the Pretender, our masters are silent about him, and to them let us leave his political resurrection. It would be indiscreet as well as officious in us to revive his memory. The writer of 'The Danger' (I think) anticipated the objection relative to him in the form of oath given in the appendix. This security is equal to the importance of the thing, without going into abjurations, which were intended as they were made for legislators and placemen in Church and State. We need not expose ourselves to fastening any such knot on ourselves, by reviving any popular topics at present about the person to be abjured, at least I think so. When the Pretender is publicly objected to us, it will then be time enough to speak to that subject. Sure I am that King William, required no such abjuration of a much more formidable pretender, the late King James. I like what you sent to me as a present from Mr. Henry. That little prattling pulpit orator. His father, a Presbyterian parson, lived here, within eight miles of me, under the patronage of Sir Henry King. The son was made a convert to established forms, because he lived at the distance of 60 miles from a conventicle. You and I are not men of the Helvetic turn, we work honestly, and we work gratis for the public, and should we flatter ourselves that a future historian might mention us as men that did some public service, we will fill a better niche than a Henry or a Brooke, who fight in the cause of their country because they are paid. Enough on this subject till you and I quaff together, and con over the caprices, the inconsistencies, and the immoralities of the poor drama in which we are acting a part. A wretched drama it is God knows. It puts me in mind of the complaint of poor Erasmus, in his preface to his edition of St Ambrose, the last of his works—pœna nostra non meritis data sed furori.—Quoties enim, oppido capto, sævitur 'propemodum atrocius in immerentes quam in nocentes', etc. Things are not mended much since his time, not even in this country where they should mend most, but our dullness and folly have the effects here, that faction and hatred have in other countries. If we cannot laugh, let us not be sad at those things."

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"May 14, 1762.

"I know you will be surprised that I did not write to you since the morning we parted on the third instant. Your surprise will cease when I tell you that I have not been at home any of the post days since my arrival at Belanagare. By my long absence business ran so much in arrear that I have been hurried from place to place, 'like an apple on the sea surge,' (as one of our Irish poets phrases it in a somewhat parallel case). On the morning I left you I slept three hours, then entered a stage coach, arrived that evening in Mullingar, and the next here at home, after crossing five counties. I am this day at rest, at least for some hours, vacant for my friends, the sweetest of all vocations. I left you all in a gloomy state, 'Iliacos intra muros.' The enemies of their country triumphing in the disappointment they gave you, and insulting you with the treacherous victory they gained over public credit, and private confidence. Shall this story never be told? Hath history no rod in one hand, or balance in the other, to punish iniquity which 'escapes the law, or make amends to those who suffer by the law? You may say, and perhaps justly, that she hath no punishment for men who glory in their infamy, (for how can people smart who do not feel?) and that as to historical justice, our people will, in some instances, gain but little from it. They are indeed divided, and the few kept together thro' your and Mr. Wyse's labor have (while I was among you) done shamefully too little. Thro' the whole winter, meetings upon meetings, and not one resolution entered on your journals. Our last meeting constituted what we may call a fall house, and the resolution entered into that night, was the most important that could be framed, could it be but brought into execution. I moved that the preamble to it should be printed, as not liable to the blemishes of a transcriber, and that our several prelates and dignitaries should be served with copies, that a sum might, (thro' their solicitation) be collected, for the public utility. You never will do anything to purpose without such a sum. Its intention is to conciliate government to an innoxious people, and by the reconciliation to render those people useful. But advocates cannot be hearty to a cause wherein the plaintiff snees 'in forma pauperis,' and in such an age as the present no cause ever wanted retainers more than ours. I request you will present my affections to your family, and the other friends of our acquaintance, as particularly as if I filled this paper with their names. If the affair of the legion goes on, Colonel Brown is your and my friend, and could we hope that others prized your labors and mine in the common cause, as much as he, our two sons would not be overlooked in promotions, where justice should go hand in hand with favor. You may have gained some intelligence since we parted. If you have, I need [not] solicit for your communication of it. I long to hear from you, but on no account more than on the score of your health, in which the public as well as your friends are so greatly interested."

"June 4, 1762.

"I know not whether I acquainted you in my last that I had a long letter from Doctor Warner on Irish history, ancient and modern. He expressed great curiosity about your book, and was led astray thro' want of precision in one of my letters, wherein I referred him to an account of the work in the 'Review.' He examined the 'Monthly Review' only. I set him now right by naming the 'Critical Review' for February, 1760. He still has credulity enough to think the epic poem of 'Fingal' a translation. I endeavored to cure him of his prejudice by arguments that I think are unanswerable, till the original is produced, what I am very sure cannot be produced. He purposes to give a critical and general account of the ancient and modern state of this island in his introduction, and what he has yet done in this method is now before the Earl of Halifax. He required of me to be particular with regard to what was intended for our people in the last session. I gratified him relatively to the Elegit Bill, and the despondency into which the loss of that Bill had thrown so many thousands of good and industrious subjects. In relation to the disorders of the poor in Munster, I assured him (Dr. Warner) that they proceeded from the throwing of that province, like Connaught and Leinster, into pasture enclosures, what excluded those poor [people] and reduced them to a state of desperation, and into that rage which despair on such occasions will dictate. I told him that the whole proceeded from laws which leave the better sort of our people no occupation in the inland counties but pasturage alone; agriculture being virtually forbid on account of the shortness of the tenures; that in such a State Papists worry Papists, the rich excluding the poorer sort to make room for flocks and herds, which are easily converted into ready money and find a ready market. I told him that the exaggerated account in English newspapers were groundless upon any political principle but that which I have assigned, and that the persons who called this a Popish insurrection, and who meant to parallel it with the affair of 1641, were not true friends to Ireland, etc."

"I have given you all this account that I might have something to say in the present sterility of epistolary matter. I am again a rusticated individual, wholly regardless of what passes out of the narrow sphere I am confined to. 'The war in Europe affects me no more at present than that formerly between the Guelphs and Ghibellines. Safe on shore, I am sheltered in my grot, and listen to a storm which I can neither control or remedy. I am only anxious for my friends, among whom you are the chiefest, and should be so, as it was you gave most of them to me. Do what you can to keep them together, notwithstanding the temptations you are under to abandon them to their own irresolutions. I expect to hear soon from you about them and our negotiations in London."

"June 12, 1762."

"I wrote a long letter to you lately relatively to one I received from Dr. Warner. I could wish he had a copy of your 'Memoirs,' as he intends to usher in his great work with an introduction setting forth the ancient and modern state of this island. He is anxious about your work, and has a good right, if he means to be impartial. I told him he would get a good general account of the work in the 'Critical Review,' and I labored to demonstrate to him the injury done to our nation by Mr. David Hume; and this I did by descending to facts, such as you could not but omit, as they did not enter into your subject. Mr. Hume's general character of the old Irish before [1641] is this, 'That they' were a degree below barbarians, they were savages.' I showed this not to be the fact, by opposing to it the most stubborn evidence in the world, the manners and literary compositions of that people, even in the worst stage of their history, from the conquest to that fatal year he describes so pathetically and so unfairly. Of these literary poetical compositions (from the conquest to the year 1631). I have a quarto volume of 1,000 pages. Many, as to sentiment and force, equal to the best of our own times. I confessed that during those

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

ages of bad government the Irish were barbarians, but not in a greater degree than the other nations of Europe during those periods. Savages they were not. I have perused Mr. Hume's history since I came home. On the whole it is an excellent and useful work. He leaves blanks in it here and there, which are only filled in his MS. copy. He was, I supposed, advised to leave those parts unfilled in the printed copy, lest some ears should tingle. This leaves me room to think that he resolves to serve the world with a more complete edition of his history, and, if so, we are the better qualified to urge him about some corrections and retractions relatively to Ireland. Had I known where to direct to him, I should trouble him with an expostulatory but civil letter on this subject. Jack Comerford was remiss if he made no inquiries about his place of residence. Is Jack come back? How has he negotiated the publication of our medical work?

"What news about our Roman legion? In what manner will it be defeated, by the Spaniards or by ourselves?—I have the good and honor of my country at heart, but am I not anxious in vain? Should I not rather be resigned? You and I by an impulse have done some good because we have explained and developed some truths. You and I alone have broke that silence which our people have kept so uninterruptedly for near 70 years. Have we not acquainted ourselves, and shall we not now stop? I have no objection to a relapse into our former silence, yet that rogue Hume is goading and indeed galling me. I would turn on him like another ass, and ask Balaam what he meant by striking. But Balaam lies hid behind a bush, and I request you will discover him for me. Adieu, my dear friend. I write as I think, on the wing, friendly not accurately."

"July 21, 1762.

"I do not love you more for the goodness of your heart and the talents of your mind, than I esteem you for your political inflexibility. Your laboring to fan the spirit you infused into our people (and some part of the flame you must keep alive), will make a part of the history you want from me, if ever it should be undertaken by me or some abler person. The truth is, our people, broken by long habits of general distress, give up all hope of relief. Fair weather once in 60 years was made for them, they came within cable's length of good anchoring, but a new storm arose, they put to sea again without rudder, without oars, without a compass. No wonder if, in a state of desperation, they should give themselves up for lost. This condition must increase the difficulty of rousing any spirit in the majority, when you see it dying away in the least desponding men among us; for my part I am a desponder by nature, and but for you would throw up my game long ago. I, however, play still, because you would have one. Let the consequence be what it will, I would by all means have you make one committee soon; Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Egan, or some two or three of the number will join you. In such a meeting, you, no doubt, will be local chairman, and whatever your resolutions be let them be entered in your journal. I had a letter of a sheet and a half last week from Dr Warner. He plied me with queries, objections, etc. I answered as well as I could. I had a political end in doing so, for he is great now with the Earl of Halifax. 'E re nata,' I threw in (artfully) some things relatively to our late disappointments, our present dispositions, etc. He wants your 'Memoirs' greatly, since he perused the 'Review.' I directed him to Mr. Purcell's, in Ship-Street. My son Charles is now in Dublin, and will wait on you with my affections to your family. Grieved I was I could not remit by him my long letter to Mr. Hume. I have been for fourteen days kept in the counties of Sligo and Mayo upon business which came to nothing; this prevented me finishing what I had in hand, and I was loth to send you anything in a ragged, mutilated condition. God willing, you shall have it next week. I got a letter along with yours yesterday from Mr. R. He is now at his country house, and tells me he will, thro' the hands of Mr. Cunningham of London, easily remit any letter to Mr. Hume. By the way, Dr. Warner tells me that Hume, like Voltaire, writes on dogmatically against positive evidence. 'They are both (says he) 'men of a diabolical turn.' I confess to you that I laughed heartily at this description from the pen of a priest. More news! Mr. R. tells me (from Cunningham's information) that Dr. Smollet is coming over to Dublin to collect materials and encouragement for a history of Ireland (Warner having failed of any encouragement among us). If there be truth in this we cannot be long strangers to it. Mr. Brooke is struggling with want, but he is the worst computer I know. The pen is the worst tool for getting bread in Ireland, except it falls into the hands of lawyers and physicians, and but a few even of them. He to my knowledge flattered himself most sanguinely with removing distress by his tragedy of 'Antony.' He had but one representation before a thin house.* I thank you for not accepting of his fee. Our regimental dream (I find) is all over. Now that we are awake, I am thinking that we are happily disappointed. I could urge my reasons, but most of them will occur to yourself. I am not surprised at Lord Trimleston's conduct towards you. He thinks and acts by others. He is in leading strings."

"Aug. 6, '62.

"I have your kind letter of the 3d instant before me. Plain it is from the intelligence you have received that Lord Trimleston is meditating some mighty matter for his constituents. I expect no good from him, but if he does any, I do not grudge him the sum left in Mr. D'ermot's hands. As for you, gentlemen, who take up some of that money for the Farmer, etc., I am in no pain about the matter, as you can file a bill obtaining an injunction against all the proceedings till the merits of the cause are tried. He will not, I am sure, join issue on such a scrutiny. He is a disgrace to our people, and I am confident they will never again subject any part of their property to his most arbitrary management. I have received by my son the third edition of 'The Trial,' and I thank the writer but little for the cold complacent tacked to the conscious untruth that the author is not known. He shall, God willing, be soon known in capital letters. My letter to Hume is finished. It is stained here and there with inaccuracies, and the transcribing will kill me; but there is no help for it. I think that such a work well executed is much wanted. I saw your 'Third Appeal' impudently advertised in my name by Chamberlaine. He should be gazetted for such boldness, and I will write to him to tell him so. The letter to Hume will make a bulky six-penny pamphlet. If he acknowledges the receipt, to show my error or to confess his own, I think it ought not to be printed. But this must be submitted to your judgement."

"Aug. 21, 1762.

"I have put what I must call the last hand to a letter for Mr. David Hume. After many amputations and prunings, more I know is wanted, and omissions should be supplied, but I have not patience for all this. You I know will make some corrections, because you will see your friend exposed to ridicule or censure as little as possible. You shall see it, God willing, next week, for I am promised a messenger who goes to town soon upon his master's affairs. . . . If you can see Mr. Reilly I request you will prepare him for drawing a fair copy of the letter to Mr. Hume to be forthwith remitted by packets to Mr. Cunningham in London, as it contains 32 pages in large and close-filled quarto. What would you think of corresponding with Mr. Hume from the printing press? Let it be as you like. In his declamation against the Tanistry laws, I have contrasted them (e re nata) with the Popery laws since King William's demise, and should think that the latter are much more ruinous to the public interest than the former. This I hope will do no hurt. Grandison and Faulkland get their own share, but an opportunity is taken to felicitate with the public in our own bitter days under a Chesterfield and a Halifax. The Whiteboys are mentioned, and that affair is set in a proper light. Dr. Curry is mentioned, also, and a parallel drawn between his candor and the unfair 'astutia historica' of Dr. Robertson, Mr. Hume's countryman. A letter which is susceptible of digressions may profitably be interspersed with such matters, and indeed on their account a long letter may be well written, tho' other matter may be the ground of the whole. I long to hear of the reception of your few from the hands of men who have treated you so long in an indecent manner."

"Sep. 4, 1762.

"I have done with the letter to Mr. Hume, but you have not as it will stand in need of your chastisements. Mr. Reilly engaged to draw a fair copy which he will forthwith remit to his friend Mr. Cunningham in London who will forward it to Mr. Hume in print or manuscript. It is now in the hands of Mr. Dominic Mahon of Strokes-town, who will lodge at Mr. Kitt Weldon's in your neighbourhood, and who as he soon as he arrives there engages to leave the packet at your house. He will set off for Dublin on Tuesday or Wednesday next. I need no more on this subject till I have your thoughts of my

* According to some historians of the drama, Brooke's tragedy of "Antony and Cleopatra" was never acted.

C. O'Connor,
Esq.C. O'Connor,
Esq.

manner of treating it. I long to hear of my Lord Dictator's [Lord Trimbleston's] negotiations in London. If he procures any good for our people we shall forgive the past. You cannot conceive what good a madman may bring about in a maddening age. You live in the centre of intelligence, and I expect a communication of your acquisitions in that way. As to what is past, something ought to be digested for the next sessions, here I mean. A review of what this nation suffered by penal laws since the revolution, and this cannot be executed better, than by a deduction of matters of fact. I want materials for the work. I think it should be a clubbed performance, between two or three friends, who have the good of their country at heart. We are in time for such a work, and you can improve this hint into a regular plan, if you should not think the game a desperate one, and drop your cards out of despair, rather than out of lassitude from former disappointments. You were the first (after the Revolution trance) who raised or rather roused a spirit among us, which set friends and enemies a thinking. You will not now, I think, throw water instead of fuel on the fire you kindled, tho' it is what I would be very much inclined to do after what I know, what I feel, and above all what I foresee.

The public disappointments you met with proceeded from no fault of your own. I cannot say the same in regard to your private disappointments. In this particular you are too remiss. I should send off this letter by the last post, but I wanted a superscriptive license. Write to me as soon as you give a reading to Mr. Hume's letter. Amend, improve, and curtail it where you think proper, and reserve the original in your own hands. I have delayed it too long, and could not help it. Mr. Reilly you should send for immediately to take a copy that we may lose no more time. I would have it forwarded on the score of what is said relatively to the popery Acts and the late Munster insurrection. This is the invidious, but yet the most useful part of the letter, and for that reason, I omitted subscribing my name."

"Sep. 23, 1762."

"This day se'n-night I wrote you a short scrip, in which I enclosed another to a friend in Ostend. ^e For the sake of the last, I would wish you had received both, for it concerns a friend whose interest I have as much at heart as my own. He is indeed a brother who served in France, but who lately quitted that service, and wants, thro' the favor of the Government to reside in his native country. How this favor can be obtained is the great difficulty. I have written on the subject to Dr. Warner, but received no answer. I request your friendly assiduity on this occasion, you may open a good channel for me, and I apply with the greater confidence, as I never find you disappointed in any of your undertakings excepting that wherein we all fail as well as you; I mean our attacks on the indomitable spirit of party prejudice. But that I may not drop this subject too abruptly since it opened itself to me I congratulate you on making a considerable progress even in this attempt, desperate as it was. 'Est quoddam prodire tennis.' You opened the trenches and took the outworks, tho' your pioneers were not many on setting out, yet of late many have joined you, and (what promises a great deal), some of the first rank among our adversaries have deserted over to common sense, and the common interest. The last extract of a letter from London, which you remitted to me, is an instance among many more which might be produced, of this. What is Lord Trimbleston doing? I expect some good from him, if he has sufficient skill in guiding his strokes; for the pitching axe may pull down a tree where the razor would fail. I have been three hours this day, looking and searching for the magazine you want, but did not succeed. It is one of the 'Universal Magazines,' published by Hinton in (I think) 1752. By looking into the index of the vol. in a bookseller's shop you will find what you want relatively to the Powder Plot, unless you are spared the trouble by my good luck in finding here at home the pamphlet you want. You are so happy in making discoveries that I expect to find from your hands the lights which could not be yet thrown on that dark period. You will, I hope, make it clear that the English ministry fomented that plot, by practising on the rage and enthusiasm of the most desperate among the English Catholics, and that they could have stifled it in the cradle, had they not purposes to serve in throwing a stain on the whole party at the time. The guilt of men who permitted themselves to be seduced into so infernal an attempt cannot be extenuated but by their madness. On every other principle we must give them up. You speak so favorably in general terms of the letter to Hume, that I suspect you of prejudice. When you give me your judgement more in detail, you will, no doubt, detect some mistakes, and, I think, some indiscretions. You can correct the former and expunge the latter. I had the matter of that letter too much in my head to attend to proper accuracy. Here also I crave your friendly corrections. I wrote to Mr. R., who I hope will soon transcribe the letter, and send it to Mr. Cunningham. As it is of a public nature, I was thinking it might be conveyed to Mr. H[ume] thro' the printing press. Of this thought I leave you to judge, better than I have done. Mr. Reilly[†] is the proper person for making the transcript, as he certainly has more skill in giving the letter entire, without bulls and interpolations, than any other of our acquaintance. Your last words to me were 'scribe cito,' as if I had anything worthy of your attention from this obscure country. I have been traversing it thro' 4 counties for three weeks past, very little to my advantage. I say to you (who live in the centre of all the intelligence we can glean up) 'scribe cito.' I have really formed no plan of the work I would have prepared for the next session."

"Oct. 5, 1762."

"Why were you not more explicit with me in yours of the 28th past, where you make mention of our friend Thadeus [Curry]? You should be more particular that I might exert all the interest my brother has abroad in his service. My brother is now in London waiting for the royal remission, and while he is there he can write to his friends in favor of ours; but to do this you must by the return of the post furnish me with the proper instructions. I wrote to Lord Taaffe by this post, soliciting his interest with the Primate for my brother, and I request it of you, my dear friend, to favor my suit by waiting on his lordship, and putting him in mind of this one merit in addition to every other he has with his countrymen."

"Since you put me in mind of Lord Trimbleston's interest, I would gladly obtain it, thro' Mr. Anthony Dermott, by a letter from him to his lordship, as you know I have neither acquaintance nor influence with his lordship. I request you will let me know by next post, what I am to expect from Lord Taaffe's friendship, for living in London will be too expensive to my brother, and, what is more, a state of uncertainty will be extremely grievous to him. He is absolutely resolved never to return without the royal grace. You see, therefore, how much I stand in need of friends on the present occasion. My utter separation from such a brother would embitter my future life, for he is one of the most virtuous and learned men that this country produced in these latter times. His future plan of life is 'vacare literis.' Mr. R. lives at Prospect Point, in Fingall (I think near Swords). Had you wrote a line to him, he would come up to you to transcribe the letter of which you speak so partially. What I said of you in it is a compliment indeed to myself, for what I have written would avail nothing without your authority. How can such a letter as mine find attention in the present warfare of politics? I, however, would have it sent to Mr. Cunningham to dispose of as he thinks proper."

"Octob. 23, 1762."

"This day, which cost so much trouble to statesmen, to historical^{*} divines, to you in particular, must be still troublesome to you, for it brings you a letter from me, and I wish it may bring you no greater trouble from the pulpit oratory of the day. I hope that time and you have quieted them, if a sense of the anniversary iniquity of the thing itself hath still no influence. I request you will tender my warmest gratitude to Lord Taaffe, for his interposition in favor of my brother. I trust that his suit with Lord Dillon in his case will succeed as it did already in the case of Major Taaffe. Of all this I gave my brother an account, and hope that Lord Taaffe's letter arrived in London time enough, so that my brother's personal attendance on Lord Dillon may correspond with Lord Taaffe's letter in his favor. I shall be in a state of anxiety till I hear of the effect of this negotiation, for I am not free from fears (I confess to you) on the score of Lord Dillon's coldness. But this 'tibi solo,' You will see by this the state of my mind, how necessary your friendship will be to me on this occasion. When you wait on Lord Taaffe, you will probably hear of Lord Dillon's answer to his letter. If it should be favourable my trouble will (I hope) be at an end. If otherwise we must try other means, thro' Dr. Warner (who communicates with the Lord Lieutenant), and thro' the Duchess of Wharton,[†] whose father was cousin-

* See ante, letter of 23rd October 1758.

† The second wife of Philip, Duke of Wharton, was Maria Theresa O'Neill O'Beirne, Maid of Honor to the Queen of Spain, and daughter of Henry O'Beirne, Colonel in the Spanish service.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq., gorman to mine. By all this you see how much I must be in pain till I hear from you.

"I had a letter last post from Mr. R. and confess my obligations to him for the trouble he took in transcribing my letter to Mr. H. and forwarding it to Mr. Cunningham, who will dispose of its fate. Mr. R.—'s condition gives me sensible pain. His wife has lately added a tenth child to his family, and in all likelihood will contribute several more. He left some papers in my hands, when in town. In the hurry I was in I forgot enclosing them to him, but left them in one of the drawers of Mr. Lord's desk, where by mistake I left some of my own. Mine are returned, but not Mr. R.'s; assure him that they are still with Mr. Lord, tho' he says the contrary, because, doubtless, he did not make the proper search, having, I suppose, mislaid them in the hurry of removing his things when he quitted the house in Bridge-Street. I would write by this post to Mr. R., to assure him of this, but that I grudged putting him to expense till I write by hand, which will be soon.

"I expect little from Lord T[rimleston]'s negotiations in London, but wish most heartily I may be mistaken. His journey cost our poor people 250*l.*, with a good deal of abuse into the bargain, on their representatives. The breach between him and those representatives is irreparable from the pride and selfishness of his temper. There is a fatality surely in this, and the more as this nobleman has access to our masters! But after all may not the Committee find access also in a way of their own? By exerting their good sense, by a proper spirit, by unanimity may they not draw advantage to their constituents, by acting on their own bottom as the representatives of the whole body? May not their 'remonstrances' have infinitely more weight than the engagement of any single person, who uncalled & uncommissioned undertakes for the whole party? You who did so much by keeping the Committee alive may invigorate it also. You have a long time before, you till the commencement of the next session. I do not suspect that you will throw your oar away, as other desponders dropt theirs, but ply the stronger, especially as the coast is in view. You will make more generous efforts for your credit with posterity, but much more for conscience sake, which requires the exertion of all your talents and zeal combined. I may make a 'pars minima' among you, for I design 'an Address to the Committee, setting forth our obligation to you as our representative, how well you expressed our sense to the present Government, the hopes we entertain from your unwearied endeavours to reconcile us to our superiors, what further good we expect from your counsils, instruction for your conduct, etc.' I have but a distant view of this design, having not written a line yet on the subject. The whole is an embryo thought, and must continue so, unless you should bring it to life by approving of such a scheme. In truth the whole committee should approve of it before any private person presumed to address them in such a public manner. I have tired you and put you to a double expense by so long a letter, yet my brother's situation is such that I cannot avoid importuning you now and then till I know his fate."

"My scheme of preparing a letter to your Committee I like the better, as you like it. I will set about it, and tho' it should never come out, yet I will not think the time thrown away. Circumstances no doubt may intervene which would render the publication of such a letter extremely improper. I have been furnished this week with some anecdotes which would shock you. They came to me from a gentleman in England whose intelligence can be depended upon, a Protestant man of letters, who has access to men of the first consequence.—What has been exhibited last winter to revive desponding spirits was mere moonshine, a reflected light without the smallest degree of warmth! These things will unfold themselves every day more and more, and perhaps what I hint is no mystery to you at present. If it be I shall be more particular in my next.—After all, it is well done to continue your meetings now and then, and that for many reasons. You will have the better opportunity of acquiring intelligence, and consequently will, by acting in concert, be better qualified to pursue such measures as will be most expedient for yourself and your constituents. I should have written to our friend R. but that I really grudge putting him to any expense. The papers he wants from me are certainly mislaid among Mr. Lord's goods, which suffered some confusion (no doubt) in the hurry of the removal. I know not yet whether my letter to Mr. Hume is forwarded. You wronged me indeed by putting the name I wrote in full length into a sort of blank. It was the best support I had for my own avowments in contradiction to his; and I beg you will let the name you struck out be replaced, if you have not good reasons against it, for surely Hume will laugh at me for quoting any authority by an initial letter."

"Nov. 13, 1762.

"This will be a rambling, perhaps a long letter. You must take your chance with it. I lately had a letter from my brother, wherein he enclosed another from Counsellor Murphy, who desires of you to accept of his affectionate memory. He at large opened to me the difficulties which stand in my brother's way, and our Attorney-General's explanation of the Act of Parliament which affects him. An unfavorable one it is, since Mr. Tisdall* is positive that nothing can remove the operation of the penalty but going thro' a suit of forms, expensive as they are difficult. These difficulties are not a little augmented by the present Court revolution, as those who make resignations may be the persons willing to serve us, without any reward but that of doing good for its own sake.—The person on whom we depended and of whom you speak (with great prejudices in his favor) has deserted us, if we ever had him. I cannot speak more fully to this point, as letters are subject to a thousand casualties, too many for discretion to trust to. My brother's affair is but a trifle, which at worst may be brought to hear by giving a sop to Cerberus. It is for our own poor public I am in pain. They have been amused in March last with the prospect of fine weather; another is open to them now, that of continuing in their former hectic. I cannot unriddle this mystery upon any principle, but upon a very crooked and very low one, such as no statesman will openly avow, but such, however, as sets the springs of the political machine more to work than any other. To men acting on such a principle all application is vain. They act on an idea of their own, and ever consider public utility as a matter which by no means must clash with other interests which regard themselves. This is not refinement. The stubborn evidence of facts will warrant what is here advanced. I defy the ablest man in both kingdoms to produce one good reason why the majority of our people should be restrained from serving the public in the way of useful industry, what must be obtained by giving them security in landed and monied property, as it cannot be possibly obtained in any other manner. A plausible, nay a reasonable argument might be urged in King William's days, when minds were exasperated, when recent losses rankled in the breasts of thousands, when King James was still alive at the head of 30,000 exiles, willing and in a great degree able to renew the war, and yet William overlooked all this, and lost nothing by the security he gave to those Papists who remained peaceably at home. Since his time Penal Laws have been multiplied to the size of one of Justinian's Codes, and the danger from the Papists was guarded against very wisely, in proportion as the object of the danger was removed. The truth here advanced cannot be contradicted. But those who bellowed most against the growth and danger of Popery, found the topic useful, only because they wanted a better, for gaining certain ends. On this topic they fasten still 'tanquam ad scopulum,' and had not this conduct involved a million of people in serious sorrow it would administer matter for mirth, to see men of great capacity and power playing this ridiculous game at the distance of nearly 80 years from the Revolution in [16]88. For my own part, I cannot help declaring my belief that they may play it with success for 80 years more.—I beg your pardon for this deduction. The matter pushed on by my feelings crowded fast upon me. The thoughts may be pushed farther in some future essay, not so much with a view of doing any service, as to expose those who can do so and will not—'Decet hæc dare dona.' We purpose in such a manner to take our last leave of those gentlemen. It will be enough for them and their politics.

"I am in arrear to cousin Reilly, and will pay it in a letter by the hand that brings you this, that it may be attended with no expense to him. He has now the care of many children, of which the tenth is in the cradle. I am truly in much pain for him. I suppose he sent off the letter to Mr. Hume. If he has done so, I request you will take the original into custody, and lodge it with all other captives, which I trust will one day see the light. I suppose you are improving our 'medical work,' for I know not upon what other principle you can excuse keeping from the public, a property to which it hath the fairest right. You are the best historical

C. O'CONNOR, Esq.

* Philip Tisdall, Attorney-General in Ireland, 1760-1767.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

angler I've ever heard of, and I hope you have not lost your zeal in the detection of 'plots,' particularly the Powder one. It has been suspected rather than proved, that the powder plot was a game, and that the sharpers burned their cards, lest it should be known by what tricks they obtained their booty. If this was the case, yet the conspirators (the cards they played with) are by no means to be excused. There have been doubtless some enthusiastic Catholics, who in those days might think the most desperate measures meritorious for the re-establishing of their religion, nor can it be denied but many doctors and casuists have too much countenanced such measures in their writings, 'ad extirpandum laborem hærescos. Next to refuting such doctrines, the best method we can take is to confess fairly that such doctors appeared among us, and such a confession must but the more effectually disarm prejudice. Much is said on this subject in Walsh's most prolix, tiring 'History of the Irish Reformation,' but the fratriculus does it in such exaggerating terms and with so much acrimony, that in my thought he uncatholizes himself, if you will allow me use of that expression. To expose effectually the unsoundness of the casuistry and doctrines here referred to is not difficult, but in doing it no one point of true doctrine is to be given up, as Walsh more than seems to do in the article of the Pope's spiritual supremacy. Some of our clergy ought to undertake so desirable a task. But our clergy, learned or unlearned, have reasons of their own for declining it, and we must confess to our sorrow that even in this age it is an invidious task.

"What will you say to all this stuff, impertinent to you who know, and have long lamented what I advance? The best answer I can make is, that I have in this day of leisure poured out my heart before you, I now willingly relieve both you and myself.

"This last week I had a letter from Dr. Warner; my brother and he dined together, and the latter tells me he was pleased much with the part of Irish history which the Dr. read for him. Your great man expressed a desire to peruse the introduction to that work. The Dr. sent it to him, and after two months the aforesaid great man most gratefully returned the MS., expressing a concern equal to the former desire, that he had not time to peruse it. The politicians of this age laugh at men of letters, and, if this were all, it might pass, but they punish them also with the most severe weapon, that of contempt. They probably foresee that men of letters will one day punish them, and think it but just to be revenged beforehand. They are not so generous as one of my old uncle, Major O'Connor's troopers, who was very severely handled in a scuffle with some Englishmen in the town of Coventry. 'No matter,' said poor Teige, 'When I arrive in Ireland, by G—d, John Thomson 'near Castlereagh shall pay for all this.'

"To be serious, I thought to make use of Dr. Warner's interest to serve my brother, on the score of his access to great men about the court. I little considered that this was a nail that would not drive."

"Decr. 8, 1762.

"The manner in which I send you this letter (by my son) will save you a groat, the only groat I ever saved you, in lieu of the many you lost by your friendship to me. You are in pain that I have not been more explicit with you relatively to certain anecdotes lately imparted to me I now relieve. I had it from an historian of no ordinary connexions in England, that the heads of your Captain and his Lieutenant are turned giddy by their elevation. Whether they are so or not, they have exhibited the signals of it, marked very strongly. Let Lord Trimleston pretend what he will, I have it from Major T[raffalgar] that the Captain looked on Lord Trimleston and Lord Kenmare at such a distance, that were it not for the goodness, I should say sharpness of his sight, he could not know them. You cannot forget that those two noblemen got a deputation from our people in April last, signed by the chiefs of the party, and that in consequence of such deputation, they followed the Captain in great confidence, as his invitations, nay his good offices here, were a sort of engagement for future favors on the other side of the water. He received them distantly and coldly. All this is very natural. A friend of mine once informed me that in his suit to a certain young lady he succeeded happily to his own mind, till a gentleman of better fortune and figure came in the way, that from that moment, he was so far from obtaining a smile, he could hardly obtain a look from the fair one. Plain it is, that the young lady never intended any favor to her suitor. He found it, and he was a suitor no longer. In driving any point, it is good to know how far it can be carried, for in such a case, you have the advantage of knowing the proper time of desisting from a vain pursuit, as well as of falling into some other path, where you may meet with better guides, and perhaps better quarters. The womb of time is the repository of unexpected and surprising things; sooner or later it may be delivered of some to our advantage. For such an event we ought, nay we must, wait with patience, but it is our duty in our several stations to sow the seeds of it, let the evil be ever so unpromising. You will do so, even I will make an effort. 'Est quoddam prodire tenus. You will (I think) see my brother this week, he has done his utmost by letters for our friend Thadens. I shall be in pain till you hear of his success in his present undertaking, when you do, I shall be in less pain for the expense you will be at on his account. My brother will give you some good cautions that you may not be cheated of your money. I rejoice with you, and most heartily congratulate with you on the extension of your plan relatively to our medical work, for ours I call it, as I have urged you opportunely and impudently to its completion. It is a debt you owe the present, the future public. You owe it to your fame, and to your interest, and therefore should appear as soon as possible. But it must be in London, with your name prefixed in capitals. On this I insist.—The letter to Hume is still on this side. If it should appear abroad, I insist on your leaving one period as I left it, because it is the only period most advantageous to me. 'Tis strange you should alter the best in the whole work, and overlook in the warmth of friendship so many exceptionable lines. How shall I fill the remaining blank? You are more sanguine in your expectations than I, and it is the most generous, as well as most agreeable turn of mind. If your Captain was ever in earnest, he has now the power of showing it, what he never had before. In his case we are not certainly to drop him (like the suitor mentioned above) but stick still to our solicitation as far as discretion and his own conduct will allow. I am glad to hear that you keep some life in our expiring Committee. I am preparing something for them. Meantime, you and they should consult together on our future, register your resolves, and were there but three of you, make an entry."

"March 16, 1763.

"I thank you greatly for the information you gave me in your last, that our superior clergy have agreed to a collection. My experience, however, of mankind gives me great diffidence, and I wish I may not be mistaken in my thought, that those gentlemen should give such a test of their sincerity as would render suspicion ill-natured as well as uncharitable. My meaning is this: I would propose that on the approaching visitation thro' every diocese of the kingdom they should carry a printed paper along with them, setting forth the expediency and necessity of the collection to be made. Their warm recommendation of it to their clergy and laity would doubtless produce a considerable sum; and each subscriber's contribution should be placed after his name at the bottom, or on the opposite page of the paper produced, to prevent fraud or embezzlement. I have not time to find matter or words for such a printed instrument. Stinted, however, as I am, I venture to throw out a hint to be rejected or improved:

"The Penal Laws now in force, having thrown the principal Roman Catholics of this kingdom into the wasteful occupation of grazing, on account of the discoverable interests and shortness of tenure, the poorer sort are thereby deprived of employment, and driven into desperate courses. To remedy so great an evil, it is expected that these R[oman] C[atholics] who occupy great tracts of pasture lands, and occasion great depopulation in this kingdom, will charitably agree to a voluntary contribution, so as that some fund may be established for the relief, etc."

"I leave the rest to be supplied, if our betters think that such a hint is worth improving. I much approve of the scheme of putting together in apt words the resolutions in the Committee book. I never liked the preamble, tho' some of the matter is very proper and by no means to be omitted. Our future resolutions will I hope be more for our credit, as to the expression, etc."

"I lament for the sake of all our people, the new insurrection in Munster. I think, however, that it must be soon over. It fatally prevents the necessity of an advertisement to the letter written last summer to Mr. Hume, as you will observe.

"Mr. R[ailly] proposes a weekly paper, and I like the plan of it. I think it, however impracticable, as the persons who would assist in the undertaking are taken up with domestic concerns too much to carry on such a work with the proper spirit. Our Committee cannot

C. O'CONNOR, Esq., possibly choose a better Secretary, he and his friends cannot be sufficiently grateful for your kind interposition for them. He has been unrewarded for the pains he took formerly, tho' you may remember that 10l. were adjudged for him in one of our sessions."

Mar. 25, 1763.

"Your last letter gave me pleasure, and I wish it may give me more, in the execution of the plan you have mentioned, as consented to by the most impracticable of our own people, the ecclesiastical society. If they be sincere, and active the collection will undoubtedly succeed. A fund will be created for great & important purposes, under the direction of our committee. I say under their direction, as they have much more knowledge, more prudence, and equal zeal at least, with former private undertakers. Volunteer, but at the same time unaccountable representatives, of whom no better can be said at present than that they effected nothing positively for us, nor could give us any hope that aught ever would be effected, notwithstanding all that they have expended to give some satisfaction to their constituents. In my last I threw out some hasty thoughts before you relatively to a plan for making the collection consented to the more effectual. The Committee will think of a better, and printed copies of it should be put into the hands of the chief ecclesiastics before they begin their visitation. Copies should be given also to some of the principal lay Catholics in each county as co-operators with the prelates, and as trustees accountable to the committee. I say no more on this head, as a hint is sufficient.

"I had yesterday a letter from Dr. Warner, in 8 days from his house in Surrey. His first volume is printed all to the introduction, and indeed I took the liberty to tell him that you were his friend (as a subscriber) and that you informed me that Dr. Hughes was active in his service. He took this the kinder, as he was not known to either of you, and he wrote to Hughes to give him thanks. He complains of disappointments from every quarter. 'The general fate of men of letters after a surfeit of literature during a whole century! By the way who is Dr. Hughes?'"

"P.S.—Some time ago, our friend sent me down the copy of a paper under the title of 'Reconciler,' which he purposes should be continued weekly, to prepare the public by knowledge and real facts for that moderation which is so necessary to open eyes, prejudiced, not only against the public interest, but even the private utility of every individual. The plan is good, yet I could not but inform him that I thought the execution would not be equal, as the gentlemen he depended upon could not from their several engagements of another nature give sufficient attention to such a work, that it were better not engage in such undertaking, than carry it on languidly without the spirit which is necessary to recommend detached pieces. Has he consulted you on this head? Could he indeed engage others of ability to assist him. The plan would be an excellent one. In that case you and I might throw in an occasional essay."

"Roscommon, March 31, 1763.

"—I like the paper you sent me enclosed extremely. It has been drawn up and conceived with great judgment. I am convinced of the propriety and utility of printing it. You should have the session of a night at the Elephant, and press it on the President of your Committee."

"Belanagare, April 19, 1763.

"Mr. R[icelly] has laid the plan of a weekly paper for next winter. It is a good and proper one. To execute it with spirit, 10 or 12 able stock numbers should be prepared, that the authors might not disappoint the public by unfinished or in other words hurried essays. It is doubtless easier to plan well than to execute. My brother is more vacant than any of us, yet his speculations being employed on other subjects, I doubt he would make no good figure on ours. Your hands are full of a profession, mine full of rural occupation, I therefore despond of Mr. R's scheme, not indeed for want of materials, but of scaffolding and workmen. I declare to you on the word of a man of good heart to his party, and to all parties, that I would labor to my utmost in Mr. R's plan, were I not so sunk in rural business which must be attended to chiefly with the view of being more vacant hereafter for matters relative to our own people (as far as a poor capacity can extend). This I propose, however God may dispose of the proposer. I ought to rate you about the great delay of our medical work, unless you are extending it more and more for the benefit of the human race. In that case (and no other) we and posterity positively owe you great obligations while you are enlarging your stock of medical reputation, and deriving at the same time advantages to your family. Be full with me on this head in your next. But previously take this advice, let the publication by all means be in London, and let not the copy be absolutely a present to a stranger, and the most ungrateful of all strangers, a London bookseller. This paper is cut, and if I scribble more, it must be on the franked cover. 'Vale et me ama.'

"Mr. R[icelly] informs me that MS. copies of the papers you enclosed to me are to be sent down to us in all the dioceses of the kingdom. If our clerical principals have our cause more than their own at heart, I doubt not of a good issue. If a fund can be established, good will be done—without it, nothing in this age. I request you will keep our sickly Committee alive and administer the medicine in person. Whether I outlive you or not, the world shall know how much we owe to your prescriptions in your civil as well as your medical capacity. You began in 1747, you warned me when I did not know the man to whom I owed the warmth. Do not now stop short in your own work. You engrafted me on your own stock, and if you do not water the roots of what I am inserted upon, we shall die together."

"Roscommon, May 7, 1763.

"States grow delirious like individuals. The scene exhibited and exhibiting still in the capital of these islands is the strongest instance I ever knew, in my own time, of State phrenzy. To us neutrals it shows itself in the fullest light. Let it end as it will, we are far distant from the bolt and the thunder. It is your duty to go on with the work you began, and keep some life in our own people by keeping life (if possible) in our Committee. Who is 'Northumberland'? In this remote western corner we are strangers to most of those men who put this world in motion, and who by their private characters make it what it is, more or less miserable. I long to hear from you, for I love you heartily, and I fear for you too, as you are as much exposed to the bitters of life as myself.

You are (no doubt) revising and extending your medical work, but you are delaying it perhaps too much."

"June 12, 1763.

"I am glad that you keep some life in our Committee. When the President is not among you you should have a local chairman, and enter the business of the night in your journal, be it what it will. I pity our friend R. for his peevish, unwitty witticisms. I shall not trouble him with any reproof on that head, as I know it is now needless. It does not appear by your last that you have made up any travelling charges for the 'Farmer.' To part with him with a good grace, I think it was right to give him some succour, if it was given. I had a letter some time since from Dr. Warner. His first volume* is out and got a ready vent in London. Here, he complains of bad treatment from the whole nation. Your friend Dr. Hughes did not answer his letter, and Mr. Faulkner, in whom he reposed a particular confidence, neglected him. I have obtained nine subscriptions for him, and he confesses that, next to the speakers of the House of Commons, I have done him more service than any lord or bishop of our island. He testifies sensible dissatisfaction thro' the whole. The few copies he sent hither are in the hands of Dr. Bowden of Stafford-Street. I could wish you gave me your judgement of the work, for my book is not come down, nor can I say when it will from the neglect of those who send carriages to Connaught. By the way I had a friendly letter this last week from Mr. Faulkner with a handsome present enclosed. A dissertation of Dr. Brown's on 'The Rise, Union, and Power, etc. of Poetry and Music.' The subject is admirably handled. George [Faulkner] is very urgent with me to prepare a new edition of the 'Dissertations' on our Irish History. Could I sit down to castrate and amend the work, I would indulge him. I would be better pleased to see those 'Dissertations' dead and buried, than to see them come out in a second edition under all the disadvantages of the first. Several things should be omitted and many supplied. If I can sit down to read old trash a second time, I will, and you may expect something in this way next winter, if God spares me life to see you. I say you may expect this, for I am not certain that my other avocations will allow me sufficient leisure. I had lately a letter and a very polite one (in French) from Lady Lismore in Paris, complaining of the injury done to the Milesian families of Ireland, her own in particular, by the late Lord Marshal

* "History of Ireland." 4to. London, 1763.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq., Thomond, representing all who had not patents of nobility before the late Revolution as plebeians and impostors. She requires of me to set this affair right, from a presumption that the writer of the 'Dissertations' would have weight in determining it. I made answer that as soon as her ladyship furnished me with the proper materials relative to her own family, I should willingly undertake the task, and execute it to the best of my power in vindication of the surviving families of old inhabitants. I despair of the letter to Mr. Humé. I am certain it suffered shipwreck in its first voyage. Were it, as you think, worthy of a second voyage, I would wish you could get it transcribed and amended by your own hand. In that case, the delay would be no great matter, and the work would appear to more advantage."

" July 4, 1763.

" Your letter of the day before yesterday came to my in hands 36 hours from its setting off from College-Green. As the author was well, no present could to me be more acceptable. That he should remain well, is the interest of his native country. Your determined obstinacy in its service, notwithstanding all the obstacles which quite dispirited others, nay, all our people, points out a vocation and an impulse, which I often thought, are never given in vain. You have already done more good than I was sanguine enough to expect. You have most certainly kept our association from breaking, and our clinging together will bring us reputation, and strength consequently. You are reconciled to Lord Trimleston. I am glad of it, tho' of all men alive, he, from his dictatorial temper, is the most unfit to take the lead among any party. What pains has he not taken by ridicule, and even by scurrility to dissolve our association? With what kind of grace did he assume a power over our small fund in Mr. Dermott's hand? What was his purpose, what the measure of his good sense in thwarting, controlling, and bullying us, in the affair of the 'Address'? Were he condescending enough to co-operate with us, prudent enough to practise the popular arts, and wise enough to make the most of the materials our poor people could furnish, we would all go more than half way to meet him. A man of his rank would bring us credit, and we would be prudent enough on our side to keep him in good humour. He now sees his [injudicious] conduct; his humiliation is to me evident, and he would now gladly avail himself of the little associated strength which we collected, and which he wants to scatter. Here, then, is a key to the whole mystery, or rather the sum total of his art in fastening himself upon you at present. It is to you indeed he ought to make the first application, and you were entirely right in not going into any disagreeable retrospect with him. Could he abate a little of his dictatorial temper, his concurrence would be very useful, and thro' your mediation I make no doubt but Lord T. and the Committee would be reconciled to him. This week I have been agreeably surprised with a very friendly and polite letter from Mr. Gorges Howard. He doubtless intends us good. I wrote to him by his post, and perhaps with prolixity, not only to keep up his spirit but to stimulate it. I wish you had a copy of what I have written, for tho' it would not inform you, it would not displease you. He is labouring in the city for Dr. Warner, and will, I hope, succeed in disposing of several copies of his late performance, what by the way I am not now very impatient of seeing, from the description you give of it.

" You are the first who informed me of Dr. Fitzsimons's being made vicar-capitular. I thank you warmly for an information so very agreeable to me. I wish and hope that this step may bring him into a chair which he is so worthy of filling. A man of his good sense would be extremely useful to us. He is already known, and known to his advantage at the Castle. Every possible effort should be made by postulations, lay and clerical, to have him nominated for (now) the first see in the kingdom. The two bishops, Fallon and Kirwan, will he (I hear) at my house to-morrow. I shall do what lies in me to procure all their interest. A stranger introduced to that see would not only be extremely disagreeable to all parties in Dublin, but even to all the Catholics in the kingdom. I need not press it on you to be active in an affair of so much importance to us. Every Catholic nobleman in the kingdom ought to be retained in our friend's cause, or rather indeed our own. Bad luck has attended the two MSS. you mention; it is greatly owing to the neglect or indolence of our friend, tho', on recollection, I can hardly persuade myself that he would be indifferent in any commission from you or me to him. I am afraid that I shall not be able to write by this post to Dr. Warner; when I do, I shall recommend (if I do not change my mind) the care of those papers to him. He lives at a good distance from London and I am afraid, he would disappoint you and me. Let me have your thoughts on this and the above heads of this paper by the next post, if you can disengage yourself. Whether you can or not, let me purloin 14 or 15 minutes from your vespereal or matutinal rest. You see how prolifically I have added two words to the English language in one line."

" July 23, 1763.

" Some time since I sent you a letter. On this rainy, spleen-giving Friday I wrote several: one to Lady Lismore in Paris, another to Mr. G. Faulkner, one to Dr. Sullivan, one to Mr. Antony Dermot (on private business), and one which you have before you, but which is not yet written. I had a letter from Lady Lismore requiring my assistance in refuting a calumny propagated against her family, nay against all our unenobled Irish families, by the late Maréchal Thomond.* That great man made it his business to represent our gentry abroad as impostors, and that all the certificates they received from Ireland of the antiquity, etc. of their ancestors were obtained by fraud and corruption. Such was his charge. I promised her ladyship that I would, to the best of my power, do her justice as soon as the memoirs she promised to remit me came to my hands. I owe these troubles to the publication of the 'Dissertations.'

" I have the subject still at heart, tho' indeed but faintly on the [account] of the prejudices our people have against it. The publication of Warner's 'History,' and the quick sale of it in England shows, however, that our old history is gaining attention abroad, and it was from this rising taste that I presume to write to Dr. Sullivan,† proposing to him the publication of the Annals of the Four Masters, together with other old valuable fragments in his hands and mine. Hereby the old classical language of Ireland would be preserved, and many important facts relative to government and manners would be preserved also. Without the execution of such a scheme, it is plain that those old pieces have but a very bad chance to outlive the present generation.

" As an idea that such a work might be encouraged by the subscriptions of our nobility and gentry would be a very visionary one, I hinted to the doctor, that probably thro' his influence and solicitation, the Dublin Society might be brought to set aside a part of their fund, promoting so valuable an acquisition to modern literature. Whether he will dislike or improve such a hint we shall soon know. To prevent miscarriage I enclosed the letter to him in another to Mr. Faulkner. It would be strange (at first view) if the Dublin Society should put a slight on such a scheme, and yet I confess that my hopes carry me but a short way. I gave you my thoughts fully in my last, relatively to Lord T[rimleston]'s humiliation in closing (at last) with your Committee. His former hostilities were as unprovoked, as they were ill timed. Our business being union and peace, his co-operation ought to be received, so that he can be brought to relax from his dictatorial spirit. His junction, under his former temper, would be a disease curable only by amputation.

" What news from Rome? If we do not get Dr. Fitzsimons who has formerly acquitted himself so well to the Government, and gave such impressions at Court of his ability and conduct; if, I say, we have not such a man in the first post of ecclesiastical dignity, we shall (I am afraid) have one misfortune more to struggle with in addition to the rest. I shall be in pain about this matter while it remains in suspense.

" In spite of all my arguments Dr. Warner has revived the old exploded Usserian chimera, that the religion established here by the Roman missionaries in the fifth century was that now established here by law. Such a groundless hypothesis hardly deserves a serious refutation. Ussher did not dare aver that the Roman missionaries did not preach the Roman doctrines, but he avers, by the strongest implication, that Rome herself in those days was truly orthodox to a scheme of worship established by Act of Parliament in thirteen hundred years after. The more learned Protestants from his days to ours rejected such a wretched ecclesiastical nostrum. Notwithstanding this and some other failings, Dr. Warner has the merit of casting our antiquities into a good historical mould, and we owe him thanks for his expostulations with men in power, who load our

* Charles O'Brien, Earl of Thomond, Viscount Clare and Marshal of France, died in September 1761.

† Francis Stonorhill Sullivan, LL.D., Royal Professor of the Common Law in Trinity College, Dublin, author of "An Historical Treatise on the Feudal Law, and the Constitution and Laws of England," 1772.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

people with so many Penal Laws, and who thereby turn our industry against the public interest.—Indeed nothing on earth can be more nugatory or ridiculous than his scheme for banishing our bishops, and endowing our priests by public salaries, provided they kept looms. A Tirconnell* weaver, starving in the mountains of Barnmore, could never hit on such a piece of sound policy tho' it is of such a wretch such a scheme would be worthy.

“Belanagare, Aug. 9, 1763.

—“I am amazed that Lord T[aa]l[e] should put the thread of our affairs into the hands of a young man, who cannot have consequence enough with the public, even tho' he should have the knowledge and experience necessary for such an undertaking, what doubtless he has not. Nothing could portend worse for our business because it will give disgust, in a degree sufficient to withdraw some of our ablest, and most zealous men from the common service, and because it will be a means of furnishing others (not so zealous) with a pretext for not contributing to a fund as difficult to be obtained, as it was wisely proposed, and without which all other schemes for softening certain characters, can come to nothing.—Of the whole party for 75 years past no man has exerted, no man has ventured himself as much as you have done. I have lighted my farthing candle out of your lamp, before you and I knew each other, and I think we may fairly say that we have acquitted ourselves to our cause, and to our people. If we are called upon again, we will not decline acting the same part, but still upon terms proper for us to accept, and for our fellow-sufferers to offer to us. Our years, our services, and experience too, entitle us to a better post, that a subordination to green men and striplings, I mean always such young men, as can have no influence from their rank and fortune. Were the president of your committee and men like him active (as they are not) nothing could forward the common cause more. Their inactivity will prove the destruction of the best laid plan we could form in the present circumstances. I have, I confess, no great hopes either from the temper of our masters, or that of our own people. Not from our masters, for they have a game of their own to play, and will not think of us, till it is played, even were they well disposed (what they are not) towards us. Not from our people, for a grain of spirit never informed the general mass, however individuals might have exerted themselves. We must (I think) take things as they are, and bear ourselves out, as contentedly on the wings of philosophy as others sink with the dead weight of insensibility. The length of my paper makes me rant in this splenetic fit. I have done with it. We are here almost every day tormented with the march of troops into the neighbouring province. They seize upon our horses for carrying their baggage from town to town, and we have all the apparatus of war without war. On the whole, the Partisans of the north will disperse their mobs, and we shall hear no more of them after a few days, for they are not friendless, a circumstance sufficient to render their enemies moderate, nay circumspect, in the exertion of power. Of all the disagreeable accounts in your letter none has affected or alarmed me near so much as your complaint of sickness. I have strong hope that it is not in any degree so bad with you as you seem to apprehend, since your handwriting is as good as ever. I have been from home for ten days past, and should undoubtedly hear from you all this time by your own, or some other hand, if I was not. I therefore request to be made easy on this head by the return of the post.

“I am afraid that the papers you and I sent to London are badly disposed of. They were too bulky to be disposed of in any monthly collection. They have been lost through the want of a zealous friend, such as we omitted very unwisely to fix in that capital.”

Aug. 19, 1765.

“The knowledge that you are well, and the other information you give are subjects too important for me to remain silent till the next post. The expression of my joy in the one case could not be postponed, and your demanding my thoughts in the other should not be delayed, because you require them, and because I am so much interested in retaining your partiality towards them, tho' perhaps I may hazard your good opinion either by prolixity or pretension to refinement. No matter, your good opinion of the man will be preserved, whatever you may think of the writer, and in that case I am safe. In truth, were I informed from any other hand, of the plan laid down in the ‘London Chronicle,’

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

I would instantly give you my thoughts upon it, as it to be conducted relatively to the present state of affairs in our own country. I do not dislike the association therein proposed, so that the associates conduct themselves with ability, zeal, and impartiality. And this may not be too much under the control of the hypercritical gentleman you mention, for as I take it, his forte lies in florid poetical diction, not in the strength of judgment requisite to a writer on public affairs, who must be studied in details and minuteness, things disgusting to those who resign themselves too much to work of fancy. I fear that you quitted ‘the Farmer’ too abruptly on Essex Bridge, tho' I confess that his subject of conversation was senseless and impertinent. What did he mean? He was pushed for authorities to support what he advanced in the ‘Trial, etc.’ What had he to do, but to consult the vouchers and appendix referred to in the margin of the book to draw his ‘trial’ from? Were not those vouchers open to him and all mankind from the day of their being collected by you? Such impertinence must be the issue of the preceding night's claret. After all, I would have you maintain an irreprehensible dissimulation with this man, that we may turn his weekly labors as much to the advancement of our cause as possible. We could not come up to his demands for our money, for he was insatiable. That gave him disgust no doubt. Let us at least retain him by complaisance as far as it is becoming, it being but prudence to edge not too blunt every instrument which may offer itself for our service. The task is indeed disagreeable where we have to do with men of his turn, but you and I, who are accustomed to rubs of all kinds, will the easier dispense with this. The worthy persons who are publishing a new edition of the ‘Memoirs’ in London, have indeed forgot pre-acquainting the author with their design, as they could not but foresee by reflecting ever so little that he might make some useful amendments which fell in his way since the first publication. There is, I trust, a remedy, still, as those amendments or rather additions may be very usefully thrown into the appendix, and I am very much obliged to you for thinking yourself of this expedient before it occurred to me. When the ‘Farmer’ first informed me how much he was obliged to me for the matter of his ‘Trial, etc. in those ‘Memoirs,’ what could I do but to point out to him the man to whom he owed the whole obligation. I confess to you that I took great satisfaction in setting him right, and it is some pleasure to me now to find him pressed by Dr. Lucas* and others, to produce to them the very book from whence he took the whole of his performance. It can portend no hurt to you or your cause, you may assure yourself. That anonymous work has been too well received by critics and men of sense not to operate to good, and should any man or men stand up now to censure it, they shall be spoken to, without putting you to trouble, either as the author or the vindicator. And let me tell you that your delicacy relatively to a book to which you did not set your name, and which does honor to your country, is by no means to be supported. Upon what grounds can such a delicacy be supported? You have no call upon you to proclaim or disown that work to be yours. Not the former, as discretion interposes; not the latter, as your honor cannot permit it, and as you are under no obligation to be explicit in the resolution of a question which impertinence proposes. A question merely personal and no way relative to the public, on which principle alone such a question might be explicitly answered. Let the book answer for itself, nor need the father be uneasy, while the impartial and learned are sponsors for the child, and took the fostering of it into their own hands. Mr. [W.G.] [Hamilton]’s declining or losing the place he filled with so much honor and dignity during the last session, does not portend good. We are alarmed, perhaps, on no sure grounds with a great political revolution in the next convention of the states here. Hence the disgust and heartburnings which work so strongly at present. Should they have stronger operating causes than I suspect, our leaders here will in such a case, no doubt employ their thoughts wholly about themselves. Our affairs will not enter into any consideration with them, till at least their own apprehensions are removed. Even so, as we know much of their temper, and little or nothing of our new Viceroy†, it would be vain in us to take much repose in expectation, since the less we take, the less weighty will the anxiety of disappointment fall. The strange virulence of contention in England, the em-

* Charles Lucas, M.D., Member of Parliament for the city of Dublin.

† Hugh, Earl of Northumberland.

* Now the county of Donegal.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

barrassments of the ministry, and the jealousies here, promise no good to these nations. The tall oaks may be forced from their roots; the humble shrubs underneath will remain untouched during the storm. Should no storm commence, we may then wait for the planter's care, and we might well expect it, too, were he but wise enough to see his true interest. But to quit this figurative style, which I inadvertently fell into, I am obliged to Dr. Warner for the hints he gives of the inexpediency of those many laws in Ireland which turn the industry of the majority of the people against the public interest. It makes amends in some degree for other misrepresentations in his book. The more I examine his work, the more I detest his mistakes in matter of fact. He was not affected with his subject, and he carries himself off by a sort of 'astutia historica,' which can be easily seen thro'. He complains to me bitterly of the little notice taken of him by our nobility and gentry, and of the treatment given him by Dr. Smollett in the 'Literary Review' for May last. Nay, farther, our late Viceroy* did nothing for him at Court, and the usual royal gratification for a 'dedication,' has been hitherto withheld. I leave you to make your own reflections on all this. To me it is astonishing that a man of letters should be so treated by a great minister, of whom so much is said to his advantage in the doctor's preface. It is surely an anecdote which discovers 'the man within.'

"I am glad we have so active an agent now in London as Jack Comerford. I am sorry however that he had not a commission from Mr. R. to get the two little tracts you mention out of Mr. Cunningham's hands. Otherwise how can he come at them? The letter to Hume is not as well drawn up as I would wish, yet with all its faults I trust that it has merit enough to be useful, and truth abundant enough to show that Mr. Hume merited the rebuke he gets, as a careless historian. Why have you not communicated to me the subject of the other tract in Cunningham's hands? It cannot be the affair of the 5th of November, as you promised it in three months hence, and therefore not yet wholly completed. Is it the medical work, so long detained from the true proprietors, the public? I long greatly for the affair of the 5th of November, because the author is the best angler I ever knew in such mysterious matters. It will be pleasing enough to detect an artful minister prying by his spies into every corner of a discontented nation, avoiding the sensible and moderate, singling out credulous audacity, party rage, and fiery tempers as fit instruments to be practised upon, and easily seduced out of their duty, with a view to throw odium upon a whole people. This detection, I say, of an artful minister must be pleasing, while it throws full light upon perhaps the darkest scene in modern history. But the detection must be extremely useful. What is still better, I give up this house to my son, and follow your example in building a retreat. Do you follow mine in being at no expense in such an improvement, but such as will at least pay 10 per cent. in case you were to let over to another tenant, any expense exceeding this, will be money out of pocket to your own vocation, as well as to the detriment of your family. In those cases it is better repent of a small than large improvement, as the one is remediable, the other never. I think my retreat will cost me 120l. It is built or almost built on a hundred acres of land, which were I next year to set would return twelve pounds a year at least more than in May last. I would write to Mr. R[iley] but that I want his direction in town. We have for three months relaxed from a correspondence, which was carried on without interruption for seventeen years. But it is I who am inculpably in arrear. I am much in pain for him on the score of his great charge and (inter nos) personal expenses, tho' upon the whole, it is hard to arraign him much for his ingratitude. I am still in hope that our friend Fitzsimons will succeed,† tho' I know that misrepresentation from his own brethren is very busy to frustrate the activity of his friends. His succession to the late gentleman is not so much his own cause as it is ours. The Abbé Butler has, I am told, refused accepting the place, and if this be true, I look upon it to be a good omen. When have you seen Mr. [Gorges Edmund] Howard? He is our friend, and I hope that we will keep him so. I utterly despair of your collections, as the proper persons are not the collectors. You may depend upon it that it will come to nothing."

* George, Earl of Halifax.

† To the See of Dublin. See next page.

"Sep. 30, 1763.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"Your last by some accident has lain in the office till yesterday. I am in pain to see the 'London Chronicle' of the day you mention, but pleased to find that Exshaw took it in. It will occasion a controversy, wherein I hope that much moderation will be opposed to much acrimony. This I confess to you, is all I expect. The ministry of England is at present in such a tottering, such a reeling condition, that spirited efforts cannot be expected. Their thoughts must be entirely taken up with preserving themselves in a state of defensive hostility. New revolutions are besides expected in Hibernian affairs, and if so, our affairs will be forgot, just as we farmers, in collecting the harvest, never mind what becomes of our stubble, except the weather be fair. I wish I may not hear of your having wrote the political piece inserted in the 'Chronicle,' and yet I am not without my fears that the indiscretion of your confidants will blab it out. I had more than a hint already on this subject. I am really concerned for Fergus. I found him a very civil and polite young man. I am not a little surprised, that you have not been immediately called to his assistance. I told you that Dr. Sullivan and I were upon a scheme for printing a collection of our more valuable Irish MSS. It is, upon recollection, a chimerical idea, and our correspondence, I foresee, will be soon at an end. I will see you as soon as I can, and it is you alone I want to see. I utterly despair of the co-operation of our people with you, and what is worse, I despair of our now timid masters. The times do not favor them or us, and yet the superstition of prejudice is almost in as hot a fit as ever. You who are at the fountain head of politics should sprinkle your friend here with part of the stream. You see I have nothing to communicate but my fears, and yet I must write soon again to you. I therefore request a letter from you, tho' it should be only one of three lines. What account of the fate of the Archiepiscopal See? I am really much in pain about the succession to it."

"November 1, 1763.

"You should hear from me ere now, but that I have been for a fortnight past rambling through the county of Sligo; taking my leave till next spring of friends, the nearest connected to me by consanguinity. I should even from those parts scribble a line as I do now, were I not distant from my post town and unpossessed of a parliamentary license which, indeed, is the case at present, and which, I think, will deprive you of what I am now writing. How can I forward it when I have nothing worth a farthing to communicate? All the news are on your side though all the folly is not, for here people flatter themselves that the law which forbid secnecy for personal property to Papists will, in this session, be repealed, I say that those Papists are mistaken though a clause may be tacked to some bill or other (as in the last session) to indemnify them. Every security to a Papist pedlar or Popish rack-rent farmer (for a Papist can be nothing else), is so much deduction from the Protestant interest, and thus Protestant Independents will have it, notwithstanding the warning given of their intentions in a late 'London Chronicle,' which, perhaps, you have seen.

"I am neither splenetic nor angry when I write all this; at least I ought not to be so, who am a philosopher, and take all evils physical and political, as they pass over my head, with the same apathy that I do the humming of the flies which pass around it.

"Take you this recipe from me as a doctor of philosophical medicine, and you will certainly find the benefit; and yet, though I am at ease about the public, no man can be more interested as to the welfare of particular people. No news for several years pleased me so much as the elevation of our dear friend Dr. Fitzsimons.* I confess that it was as little expected by me, as any such event could be. But merit does wonders, even where it offends; I mean that unmixt merit which will very often gain esteem while it loses affection. The Doctor has added to merit by knowledge and good sense. Such a man was extremely wanted at the head of our clergy (for the primatial authority lies now virtually with the archbishop of Dublin). Besides this, the government or chief men here know him, and know him so much to his advantage that the Catholics may expect indulgence even, through him.

"I am only echoing back to you your own intelligence, for no man can be more barren than I as to modern facts. The 'Freeman's Journal' I do not see, and those who do, perhaps, attend to it as little; and yet, if such a paper was executed in the true spirit of patriotism it would do some good. No such paper was ever yet published in Ireland. I study or pick up some ancient facts and some scraps of ancient literature. It is better than playing of cards. I have sent some old MS. lately to Dr. Sullivan, and I think he will like them; but neither he nor I will ever be able to prevail with our modern gentry to preserve those works from the universal destruction to which Irish literature is doomed."

* Patrick Fitzsimons, appointed Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin in 1763.

C. O'CONNOR.
Esq.

"December 6, 1763.

"The bringing on of the Elegit Bill, the acquiescence of the House to the first motion for introducing it, and the negotiation of this affair without the privacy of the people concerned, promises well. We are not, however, strangers to the difficulties which it must encounter before it passes into a law; and we now know by what weapons some of the thrusts against it may be parried. I think our people will not neglect this affair as they have done before. To people who can enjoy no landed property (not even in wastes and mountains), it is a great consolation to enjoy any, even the very produce of their industry. No more, it seems, are we to expect. There are still too many splinters in the broken bone, and I am really concerned very sensibly that the paper lately published in the 'London Chronicle' should give offence to men in power, against whom most certainly no offence was meant by the author of that piece. He had to do with the most peevish patients in the world who scream even at emollients. To me they seem incurable, and I form my judgment upon long experience.

"Our very Protestant advocates have deserted us, if ever they were our advocates, as you will observe. Be it so, and let our own wayward people improve on the experience they have gained by so many repeated trials of the superiority of prejudice to all considerations, nay, to all sound reason.

"Uno premente Deo, fert Deus alter opem. They have the world open to them, and they will not part an Eden. The letter in the 'Chronicle' produced reams of invective. It was well considered not to take up the argument, but let calumny enjoy its short triumph, though had the letter to Hume any chance of appearing, its appearance in that period of animosity might not be unseasonable. I am too long on this subject, so disagreeable to you and to me. I am told that Mr. [Edmund] Burke got 300*l.* a year on our establishment, and I am extremely glad of it. He is a gentleman of excellent and cultivated parts, and it is happy that the writer is not superior to the man. I am pleased to hear that our friend Lord Taafe is well received by our new V[ice]r[oy]. The last had his coach wheels so smoothly shod that his approach gave a glimpse of new millennium. The dream ended, as all dreams do, instead of an elysium we no sooner opened our eyes than we found ourselves lying on the same hard bed. You are a physician, and I could wish you gave us a recipe for dreaming no more. . . . Who is the great man who took so much offence at the letter in the 'Chronicle'? Whoever he be, could he not suppose it the work of a zealous Protestant alarmed by the insurrections of the dissenters in the north? Must the poor Papists of Ireland be accountable for any such essay appearing in a London newspaper? This is truly a great hardship, but there are instances enough of it in history. My brother will be soon up with you, and will in person give you and your family my affections. I will follow, as soon as I can, to act the same part and finish a little personal business. What other business can I employ myself in? Services to any man or body of men I can do none, and many among you would wish I had spared myself the trouble of former vain and fruitless attempts. I see and feel the weight of all this, and I should profit but little of all my experience if it were not a good lesson to me. I am passed the meridian of life, and ought to prepare (were I wise) for a setting sun. I have known mankind too well not to drop into a Stoic indifference, which was heathen, or into resignation, which is Christian philosophy. This is our case, and, surely, this is our duty."

Lord Taafe to John Curry, M.D.

"Lord Taafe's best compliments Dr. Curry. He has been yesterday to see Mr. Pery* who could not possibly be more in our interest than he is. He is of Dr. Curry's sentiment concerning the wording of the projected bill, and thinks not only that being thus penned it would be of no great service to the party for whose relief it's intended, but even very subject not to pass: he promises to do his endeavours with Mr. Lucius O'Brien to bring him to his own way of thinking. Lord Taafe would have been to see Mr. O'Brien this morning but is prevented by a necessary attendance on a meeting of trustees in private business. Sir Patrick Bellew is not as yet in town.

"Dr. Curry is desired to inform Mr. Anthony McDermot of the contents hereof. Tuesday, the 13 of December, 1763."

O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

"December 25, 1763.

"I should have acknowledged your last letter sooner but that I had not a frank, and that my acknowledgement was not worth a groat, and yet I well know that you never grudge paying for a letter out of this desert when you find it in my hand-writing. I almost give up your people when a bill should be brought into the House of Commons, wherein a punishment is intended instead of a favour. Some of the Commons I think do not intend it, because I think that there are not only men of good intentions among them, but men of good sense who feel for the common good, and men of an elevated turn who abhor any prejudice contrary to it. Thus I think, and I only wish that those men of good sense may prove the majority in an assembly where ignorance, allied to prejudice, promises so conspicuously a turn of the scale on the other side. You and I have dipped a little into the history of our own country, and probably, very probably, you have discovered what I have to my sorrow discovered, that the O'Briens for near 200 years past have proved a galling spur in the side of their Milesian countrymen. They were the first among us who renounced to the old religion of their ancestors, and with the spirit of all such converts they have proved of all enemies the most inflexible and rankled. See the prevalence of it in our modern Lucius. He has a bad Protestant name (very undeservedly indeed) he knows it, and he wants to give a conviction of his being a good Protestant at the expense of common sense, common probity, and real patriotism. A fig for such Irish Protestants, say the Whigs. A fig for such patriots, say all good men, (whatever their number be). A fig for all such enemies, saith the poor Papist. So say I, who am a Papist, and will die one. I do hardly think that this amphibious O'Brien will gain his point, not only because he is one, but because the men of sense at court and in Parliament, not only scorn to receive him as an instructor, but mean to proceed to no more punishment, wherein themselves would be equally and immediately sufferers with those on whom the first stroke would fall. In those cases, prejudice, even the strongest, must have some bounds. Nature is too prevalent, and will keep some measures even in politics of the east I intend here. I have known a strong man decline a stroke when he foresaw his hand would receive more detriment than the ear he aimed at. This is indeed our best security, and whatever you do I for my part expect no better after long experience. You and I must drop our curtain and open it on some other scene when we raise it again, but not till we vindicate ourselves against the late charge brought against your 'Memoirs' but that doth not relate much to present times. As to former times I am now revising what I wrote formerly on the subject. Faulkner wants a republication of the 'Dissertations.' Whether he continues or not in the intention, I shall not repent of the time I devote to the corrections I am making, or to the new matter I am preparing. But I think that he is wrong, and that the work (should it appear) will have no sale equal to the expense."

"July 13, 1764.

"In two days after I parted you in Cow Lane I arrived here in Connaught in good health. The hurry and embarrassments one encounters on departing for distant places hindered my waiting on you at the coffee house on the eve before I set off. Where I now am, I am over crowded with business, and visits to relations, who live remotely from me and from each other, will engross more time than I can well spare from my several occupations. As to literary business, I must not think of it for a month to come, at least. I have built a new house and am finishing its servant, another house."

"August 20, 1764.

"I write this from my new house, and have nothing to communicate, though a good deal to request. My first petition is that you will present my most grateful affections to worthy Lord and Lady Taafe. I had a letter of great affection this week from his lordship, and a short bill of complaint against Dr. Curry for

* Edmund Sexton Pery, M.P., an account of whose correspondence and papers is given in the present Report.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

his neglect, or seeming neglect. You are acquainted with most of those who care for me, and I beg you will inform them that no man can have a deeper sense of their friendship than your correspondent of this day. I am revising some sheets of 'Dissertations' in this choice retirement, and yet I am so busy with personal affairs that my literary progress is but poor. You are mining to good purpose when you can steal a minute from business; and you cannot conceive the pleasure I am even now taking in the thought that I will be present on your blowing up shortly all the ramparts of historical slander which party malice has been throwing up for 150 years past. When have you heard from our friend Burke. He expects intelligence from you, and whatever you remit to him will be returned to good account. I am glad that you put the 'Memoir' on the 5th November affair in Mr. Reilly's hands. It will wipe off much scandal, or lay the odium of it on the proper persons. You will show by this and your other collections that the history of those kingdoms for 250 years past is not yet written, and that the florid writers who have lately appeared on the subject have done nothing beside displaying their eloquence and copying from one another. I rejoice very heartily with you on the good news from your sons abroad. So good a father (indeed the best I ever knew) must not be disappointed. May God bless you and them, and may your life be prolonged on their account, and on account of the public which you serve in so many capacities. I wrote to you last week by an honest man, Jordan, the tailor, in your beloved School-house Lane. I could write to you without expense, as dear Lord Taffee sent me three covers, all directed to John Curry, Esq., M.D. But in truth I have nothing to communicate but such common things as you have now before you—'vox et præterea nihil.' Even this vox I will repeat now and then, for no other reason but you like a line from me, be it what it will. Here is a whole blank before me, and I am rummaging in vain for matter. You informed me of Dr. Brady lately come into the kingdom. Have you improved an acquaintance with him?"

"September 15, 1764.

"I thank you warmly for the letter before me of the 12th instant. The invective in the last 'London Chronicle' against an innoxious set of men, has given you pain, and so much the better. It will quicken your zeal and consequently will oblige you to exert all your powers to complete happily what was happily begun, from an impulse which it would be sinful in you to resist. May God preserve you for the great, the meritorious works of dispensing knowledge in countries where the people are kept ignorant because some men are interested in their ignorance. Take the work you mention out of Mr. R.'s hands, and find a method of publishing without loss of time. You are the happiest man in the kingdom at blowing up entrenchments which seemed to gather strength from age. The florid English historians of this century we live in have only copied from their predecessors without farther inquiry. They wanted no more than making out a good story, whatever became of the truth. You have already and will hereafter provide matter for new historians, who will derive profit as well as pleasure from turning the florid historians of our own time into waste paper. I would have an advertisement prefixed to the work in Mr. Reilly's hands, setting forth the necessity of examining, at this distant period, an affair which occasioned so much slander, propagated so much prejudice, and inflicted so much unmerited punishment for 160 years past. To hint this is enough to you, and yet if anything occurs to me, which, in my own opinion, may be proper for such a preface, I will communicate it. Is it not a most melancholy reflection that our people thro' three kingdoms should remain silent under the present load of repeated calumny? Is it not a strong symptom (my dear friend) of religious indifference? Oh, that they had the smallest spark of your and my Jack Begg's spirit and fire. If they had, you would not stand alone in the double task of repelling injury on the one hand, and conciliating the Government on the other.

"By the way, the Government is in a good degree conciliated already, and let it be known in such a manner (in your preface) as will light up a little confusion in the faces of our base adversaries. They should know that they are not equal to the task of blindfolding an administration who have joined experience to good sense, and know the interest of the public too well to sacrifice it to torturers and inquisitors who have happily (at last) no power left but that of throwing about the dirt in which they are wallowing. I request you will tender my warmest affections to our dear friend, Mr. Beggs. I could not but mention him first, as I have never known a man of more true zeal in the cause of a set of men, who seem like those fatigued sailors who threw away their oars in a fit of despondency. I need not remind you of my affections to Lord and Lady Taffee, your whole family, and our other common friends. I am involved as much in country business as if I never intended to quit it. No matter; my family will be the better for these labors. God willing, I shall join you in November, and take up my residence at our house on Summer Hill, when the days grow a little longer after the vernal equinox." — "I long to hear from Mr. Bullet,* and whether he affords any curious knowledge relatively to my inquiries into our ancient Scottish history. But as you have your hands full of much better business than an examination of a Celtic dictionary, I think it would not be amiss if you lent it a few days to Dr. Sullivan for the gratification of his curiosity, and perhaps the enlargement of his knowledge. This you may do with a compliment from me."

"September 28, 1764.

"I am just returned from a skirting journey through the counties of Mayo, Sligo, and Leitrim, where I for some days enjoyed the wonders of nature, and the affection of a few connected with me by ties of consanguinity. I found your letter here at Belanagare, and indeed the apprehension of not seeing it in due time hastened me home the sooner. You have a call for serving your country, and your great merit appears in not being deaf to it. I, a disciple of your own planting, have not half your zeal, and fear that I shall be procrastinating from day to day till I again come more under your shelter. I requested of you in my last to take your MS. out [of] Mr. Reilly's hands. Since he cannot execute what you confided to his care, you will find another to copy the work, and Jemmy Bernie will print it faithfully under your own eye. As to your apprehension that Mr. Reilly exposed your work to some third person, I believe it groundless. I think I could safely answer for his fidelity and honor in a trust of that nature. You press me to write by this post. I have nothing to say worthy your attention, but to press you in turn to proceed with what you have in hand, and to draw up a preliminary discourse on the necessity of publishing at this time a defence of the dead and of the living; of the dead, who ought not to bear a greater load of reproach than comes to their share; and of the living, who have no political crime whatever to answer for, those few only excepted who propagate infamous, conscious, and wanton slander, to the great prejudice of all public good and of all private morality. I had, last post, a very kind and friendly letter from Mr. G. Faulkner, just returned from a journey through the province of Ulster. He described the places he passed through in a very pleasing, and indeed in a very satisfactory manner. He offers to print and publish the 'Dissertations,' under the late corrections. He shall have them, though I am afraid to his detriment; for indeed the work will not appear as complete as even I could make it, from the want of the leisure, and, what is worse, the want of the materials which were not at any time in my power. I had another letter from Mr. Peter Wilson, calling for a description of the county of Roscommon, to be published in his magazine [for he is going on with a description of all the counties]. I think I should gratify him as far as I am able in such a short account as is consistent with the plan of a monthly collection, and I propose to sit down to-morrow for this task."

"5 Oct., 1765.

"I return my hearty thanks for your last kind letter, and agree with you that Mr. Phillips's† confidence is a little too bold in thinking nothing corrigible except typographical mistakes in his late performance. My zeal in his case proceeded from that which you long since have possessed me, the common good and common cause of our people. We should, if possible, act in concert with those who, like Mr. Phillips, labor for it. I knew not whether I told you that he is at too great a distance from the place where his recommendation of the 5th of November book might do some service. He promised to send me a tract, intended for showing the hurt done in England by the disqualifying laws against the Roman

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

* "Mémoires sur la langue Celtique. Par M. Bullet, premier professeur royal et doyen de la faculté de théologie de l'université de Besançon, 1754-55.

† Thomas Phillips, author of the History of the Life of Cardinal Reginald Pole; "Reasons for the Repeal of the Laws against the Papists," &c.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

Catholics. On that principle alone, would it not be proper to correspond with him? For this I refer to your instructions.

"You have too much sensibility in your nature; but a little reflexion will take off its edge. Though Thady is remiss in not sending you more frequent acknowledgements, yet he has the spirit of a gentleman and nothing unbecoming the character. Must that go for nothing in such degenerate times? Would not others' parents compound gratefully to the Almighty for such a character? Besides, you have other children who make amends for the reserve or seeming reserve of the oldest of them. I think I never knew a man happier in this respect than you.

"I had a letter this last post from Mr. R[eilly]. He tells me that he is now correcting the tenth sheet of 'Dissertations' he received from Mr. George Faulkner. My great distance from those editors will be very hurtful to the whole work. I should have the proofs enclosed to me, and I should tell him so, but that I had no frank in his name."

"October 18th, 1765.

"The 'Dissertations,' I am told, are printing fast, under the corrections of Mr. R. I could not attend, and yet that will be no apology (though it ought) with the critical executioner. I did not reply to Mr. Phillips because you deemed it unnecessary. I have finished a detached Dissertation* on the Scottish monarchy in North Britain, and this in a reply to the new scheme set up by the translator of 'Fingal' and 'Temora.' He pretends to shew that we have had no knowledge of letters in Ireland before the sixth century. It was proper (I think) to remove all his objections out of the way of the 'Dissertations,' which assert the contrary. MacPherson resembles the cuttle-fish, which endeavours to escape by involving itself in a flood of muddy liquor, not unlike ink. It cost me some labour to bring him into open light; I then found it easy to master him.

"What news in your town? Are the panics about a land tax over? Or does it give place to the terror of the late tremendous insurrections of the White Boys? Are there any bills preparing against the farther growth of Popery? But enough of queries. I am pleased with the poverty of the nation, because, if it thrive, the Papists would thrive along with it. 'Vive la bagatelle!' I have ten pioneers at work—from attention to the affairs of the public, I run out to attend them. Is it not the proper employment of a philosophical agriculturist (a word of my own), who is in this year securing the bread of the next, who takes care, in a word, that if the public should fall, he shall not fall along with it."

"Belanagare, May 28, 1766.

—"I might, indeed, repeat what I urged to you before, relatively to your feelings for what our people suffer in Munster, nay for what we all suffer through the wilderness of a most inconsiderate mob, and through the inferences made by some powerful but inconsiderate men from the behaviour of such a mob. I pressed it upon you to abate of your sensibility. Time, which will prove the innocence of our people, ought and must be waited for; and if time cannot make prejudice relent, that prejudice ought to be borne. It may and it ought to be turned to a good account by converting suffering into a merit and persisting in a conduct which will demonstrate that a change of religion could not make us better subjects than we profess, and if the restraints we labour under make us less useful subjects, the blame will not lie at our own doors. In truth, as affairs stand now in Europe, persecution must baffle its own intentions by its inability to abridge one species of freedom, that of shaking off the chains of the persecuted when those who are persecuted are pleased to change the land of their birth, for more benign regions. This has been done already by many of our people, and such numbers will no doubt draw more after them. Those are consolations. I do not mention them to inform you, but to remind you of the little necessity of our complaints. I heard nothing of the sale of the 'Dissertations,' nor of the reception of such as curiosity has purchased. I had indeed a friendly letter from Lord Moira† on the subject, and another from Dr. Delany‡ (for I sent a book to each). I owe a great deal to Doctor Delany's friendship, and that worthy man's zeal went so far as to recommend it to me to shake off the chains of Rome. I know it to be owing to a particular friendship for me, and therefore I take it in good part. He little thought that had I thrown aside the authority of the Catholic Church, I should not so readily put on the chains of any other Church, such particularly as an Act of Parliament may establish or repeal according to occasion and circumstance. Such a synod shall never have the least weight with me in ecclesiastical affairs.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"Since I returned home I had, I thank God, tolerable health till this day se'night. The gout is gone off, but a more alarming disorder has begun its attack in my left cheek and chin, a numbness which is rather increasing, and to a degree which is approaching to an insensibility in the parts.

"It really terrifies me lest a stoppage of the usual circulation should spread the disorder and end in a mortification. I therefore request you will send me your thoughts and instructions by the return of the post, that I may know my fate, and prepare for it. I would (God help me) wish to live some time longer, but this is in the hands of an all-wise Providence to whose discretion we ought to be resigned. May we be properly prepared for the tremendous hour."

"This minute I received a letter from Mr. R. which gives me an opportunity of remitting this without paying for it. He enclosed to me Buxton's, Farrel's, and Sheehy's* dying declarations, which please me greatly. Would to God we had a good history of the transactions in Munster for four years past. It would be more useful than a thousand dissertations on ancient times. By the way, did you write to Dr. Warner? Or has he to you?"

"We should by all means labour to keep him out of the resolution of dropping his plan."

"June 1, 1766.

—"I wrote to you this week in an enclosure franked to Mr. Reilly. The numbness in my left cheek continues and alarms me much. I should be happy had I been near you when I first felt this strange attack. I trust that I shall hear from you by to-morrow's post.

"The Tipperary affair has, I find, become a very important one, not only to our people in general, but to some patriots in particular. Would to God that we had foresight to see the necessity of treasuring up all the facts relative to it from the source: we should in that case be enabled to let out the whole in so clear a light as to do ample justice to the innocent and the criminal. It would surely be rendering effectual service to our country. It may be said, and with truth, that those facts are recent, and that the materials may be easily collected. But who would expose himself to popular prejudice or perhaps to what is worse, by officiously collecting those materials. The collector could never act so secretly as not to run the risk of being detected by enemies or betrayed by friends. As affairs stand, there is something more than a probability, nay, a certainty that some persons will suffer, and be more unhappy in their sufferings than any that have yet appeared on the stage. Their shame and sorrow will be perhaps a greater punishment than human laws can inflict.

"I hear nothing of the reception which the 'Dissertations' got from the public. I am only in pain for the generous publisher of that work. The author, who expects no favour, can the more easily put up with public censure."—"Do you hear from Dr. Warner? I read that he will receive no encouragement from Ireland, and that he will be disgusted enough to drop his scheme."

O'Connor to Lord Taaffe.

"My Lord,

"At long run, that is, as soon as health permitted, I have drawn up heads of a memorial such as your Lordship recommended. I sent it this day by post to be revised first by Doctor Curry, and to be amended afterwards by your Lordship.

"Such a memorial, properly drawn up and presented in the proper place, under the sanction of your Lordship's name, will have a better effect than a thousand pamphlets, drawn up ever so well, by private hands; for private adventurers on such a subject, and in such times, have not the smallest influence.

"When such a memorial, as I wish may be a proper one, is published, with Lord Taaffe's name at the bottom of it, it will be noticed by numbers, who have power but who never before considered the subject. It may have effects that could not be expected even from our most sanguine expectations.

"You were born, my Lord, to be useful in every country wherein Providence has placed you. In serving

* The manuscript is extant in the present collection, with the following title:—"Observations on Mr. MacPherson's two Dissertations on the Scottish Antiquities, Sept. 2, 1765."

† Sir John Rawdon, first Earl of Moira. See Appendix to Third Report of this Commission, p. 430.

‡ Dr. Patrick Delany, Dean of Down, who died in 1768.

C. O'CONOR, Esq., our poor people you only execute a trust, and what your Lordship considers as a religious duty. No satisfaction on earth will be more warm than the consciousness of fulfilling such a trust.

" My Lord, I prevailed on James O'Rourke to execute a letter of attorney to your Lordship for putting yourself in possession of the late Count O'Rourke's papers and memoirs. If your Lordship can procure such papers, your consigning them to Doctor Dillon, of Francis-Street will bring them safe to my hands, and I will dispose of them according to your Lordship's orders.

" Poor Luke Wallis, my Lord, will be absolutely undone, if some speedy succour be not remitted to him by his brothers. I have indeed advanced him a little to keep his family in these bad times from starving. But the rent now calls upon him, and his landlord cannot bear any longer with him.

" May God preserve Lady Taaffe, your Lordship, and your whole family; it is a prayer preferred for you by thousands, and by none with more warmth than, my Lord.

" By your most affectionate, most obliged, and most obedient servant,

" Belanagare, June 14, 1766." Charles O'Connor.

O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

" Belanagare, July 17, 1766.

" After my return from Caluvaine, in the county of Sligo, I found here your letter dated July 4, and postmarked July 10. It gives me pleasure that your semper eadem includes your family. In every other respect I am pained, and the more as I expect no reformation in men's minds. The empire of error and self-delusion may one day or other be overthrown; we cannot expect to see the day, and yet any man well informed is accountable for the smallest neglect in communicating his knowledge of what passes under his eye, it being fit that posterity (as Grotius says) should be informed, and the perpetrators of mischief among their ancestors known. About the disorders in the South I wrote to you some time since, and lamented that the several public accounts (good and bad) were not registered by some careful hand; and particularly it is much to be lamented that accurate notes were not taken at the trials of the late criminals. Their dying confessions,* however, may in some degree supply the place of such notes, and materials enough can still be picked up to show that the Irish Catholics are no way accountable for the phrenzy of a desperate rabble who had nothing to lose (but the lives of which they were tired), by any inconvenience they brought on the innocent public and themselves. That such wretches should suffer condign punishment is surely a good man's wish.

" This week I paid poor Wallis or rather to his order the sum Lord Taaffe was so charitable to advance for him, by that act his lordship preserved a whole family from immediate ruin. You will be pleased to inform him of this and to present him and his lady with my affections.

" I thank God that I have been rescued by your prescription from my late disorder. I would have told you so, and thanked you most heartily, but that I could get no frank in this neighbourhood. Even this note I remit to you under the cover of Mr. Thomas Le Hunte to Mr. Reilly. Am I not therefore under an obligation to the squire? Is it not a great favor to an Irish Papist, and that under the self-conviction that every such person is an enemy to the peace and prosperity of this happy country?"

Lord Taaffe to John Curry, M.D.

" London, 7th October, 1766.

" My dear Doctor,—I wrote to you lately and still am of the same opinion that we must take all imaginable care not to make enemies. This is the opinion of the Imperial and Spanish minister. They both assure me that the Earl of Bristol† will be a friend of ours. They tell me also that he's a man of sense, who will not let himself be governed by factious. Pray show my first letter, and this, to Doctor Fitzsimons, to whom I pray assure my respects. I have seen the Portuguese minister, where I remained above an hour, and our discourse was chiefly about St. Patrick College and about the five thousand men that was formerly to be raised in Ireland. I shall say nothing more of that scheme of my Lord Trimleston, although he has more sense than all the rest in Ireland. I pity him.

* See preceding letter of June 1, 1766.

† George William, Earl of Bristol, nominated Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in October, 1765.

No more of this. I come back again to the College of St. Patrick. The minister of Portugal here agrees to my own plan, which is, that when I am in Vienna, to get the affair strongly recommended by the Portuguese minister there. Take my word, I shall not be easy till it is settled. Now let me come back to our own affair last Saturday in the 'Gazetteer' and 'New Daily Advertiser,' the following advertisement was printed:—'In a few days will be published, price one shilling and sixpence, 'Observations on Affairs in Ireland from the Settlement in 1691 to the present Time. By Nicholas, Lord Viscount Taaffe; London, printed for William Griffin in Catherine-Street, in the Strand.' This advertisement yet you see here surprised me, as I had not disposed many of these 'Observations.' I had not either linen nor clothes till last Saturday night, as I was obliged to stay at home, and all yesterday I was making visits to the foreign ministers. I will be presented tomorrow by the Imperial minister to the King, according to the fashion of all the foreign courts. I ought not to show myself much till I have been presented to his Majesty. My dear doctor, although I do not know how to write well, you shall hear from me often. Give me leave to write to you my opinion. I think that what is preparing to be put into print would do better if it was printed here under the care of Mr. Molloy, who, twenty and thirty years ago published the paper called 'Common Sense,' which I am sure you remember. I have not seen Mr. Molloy as yet, but you shall soon know if he would take this affair in hand.

" My dear doctor, I have the case of my poor country to heart. I shall say no more, but pray to believe that I am with regard,

" My dear doctor,

" Your true, fond, and humble servant,

" TAAFFE.

" Just as I was going to seal my letter, Mr. Molloy came to see me, who is very sickly, and especially griddiness in his head, that I am sure he would not be able to do what I mentioned before. I shall say no more, but pray the great God to direct us for the best. He and everybody that reads my 'Observations' likes it very well. If you favour me with a line, Mr. Cantwell will send it."

" London, the 21st of October, 1766.

" My dear Doctor,

" I am just come from Richmond, where I remained but one night to see some of my friends. I am very sorry that I wrote to you not to publish so soon what I said in my pamphlet that will come after. I have received yours of the 14th at my return, and I assure you that I am very glad to hear that this pamphlet is finished, as you write to me, that what can be offensive you blotted out, as if any such thing as offence should be in it I am the person to be blamed, for the printer may declare that I am the person that ordered it to be printed, for I told to several great people here that such a thing of the White Boys would come out. I pray Mr. Hoey to send one of them to those I named in my last letter, for I do believe there are more sold of the first pamphlet here in London than in Dublin, as Mr. Thomas Meighan tells me, I go nowhere but find one of them there. They put in these that are printed here the Articles of Limerick. I hope to receive some of them before I leave this, but if I should not the Imperial ambassador here will send them to me to Vienna and one to Bruxelles, so that I hope to have three or four of them. I cannot remain here to have an answer to this, so I expect no answer. I am sure your son and Captain J. Maguire's son will wait for me longer than I expected in Cologne.

" I pray assure my respects, and from my Secretary, to Doctor Fitzsimons; our compliments to your lady and all friends. I am with great regard, my dear doctor,

" Your most affectionate humble servant,
" TAAFFE."

O'Connor to Curry.

" October 26th, 1766.

" Soon after I parted you I set off for the county of Kildare, where I lived at home with your and my dear friend, Mr. O'More, of Ballina. After quitting him I was in two days set down in good health here at my own house; and, beside one excursion to visit my daughter, here I remained since my arrival. I divide my time between husbandry and books, nor does the absence of such neighbours as this country affords give me pain. Our thoughts, the instruments of action, are cast in different moulds. They very justly consider me

C. O'CONNOR, Esq., as a useless member in their society, and I thank them for hitting on the only method left for gratifying me. There is no pride in this declaration; it is no fault in those men not to have the same desires and affections that I have for some time indulged. They have different occupations, and, I hope, directed to laudable ends. It is with you, and such as are like you, that I would wish to spend an hour, for we have not only the same desires but the same aversions also, 'idem velle ac idem nolle,' 'demum amicitia est.' Such are the strongest bonds of friendship; and to men of our turn the conjunction is not directed to personal gratification entirely; it grasps at a greater object; it aims at public good and the information of the ignorant in points where the want of knowledge is fatal to the community. By the way, when will the 'Candid Inquiry' come out; or is it not already published? If it be, the bearer will bring me down a copy if you get Watt to leave it for him in Anderson's Court. Our people, I well know, have been in dreadful panics about the publication of any truths which might, on account of their recency, throw an odium upon particular men: nor can I say that such apprehensions are entirely groundless in those ulcerated times. There is, however, a manner of opening the wounds of even peevish patients, which cannot do hurt, but much good when their friends see that no injury is intended, and that the remedy is necessary, or, at worst, well meant. This method I am confident was the purpose of the author of the 'Inquiries.' Have you seen Mr. [Edmund] Burke, or is he yet returned from the country? I trust that you and he will meet before he sets off for England; it would give me pain on several accounts if you had not."

"October 31st, 1766.

"I am much pleased to find that Lord Taaffe's 'Observations' have engaged the attention of the London public; but as they are so ill calculated for the digestion of numbers who are habituated to other food, I doubt not but his lordship's prescriptions will be thrown in his own face, and bitterly decried as dangerous political medicines. If I be right in this conjecture, it will be shameful if some English gentleman does not take up the argument in defence of the Irish nobleman. Truth in common attire may be overlooked or not heeded. Coming forth out of the torture of debate, she puts on all her charms; she is owned by ingenious minds and welcomed as a stranger. I have mentioned ingenious minds, which surely every man should endeavour to have on his side; no other I know will own or welcome truth. If such minds be on the throne, and about the throne, (what we cannot doubt) is it not gaining a great point to gain them? If they cannot repeal Penal Laws, they may relax them in the execution; and as to the Penal Laws which execute themselves, I take it that the line which fastened many of them on our people is now between the shears. Land is come up to such an exorbitant price that it has (as to tenures) put us all on the level. If a Protestant tenant does not give twenty shillings an acre for land, the Protestant landlord will not deal with him. The love of money will prefer the Papist who gives more; and whether it be farms in the country, or houses in large towns, one and thirty years' lease is virtually as good as* . . . the times, and Bills of Discovery are consequently . . . from the course of events Papists are debarred of nothing but the sole power of realizing a mortgaged property by . . . (there being so little now to gavel) is come to the . . . great grievance of being incapacitated to realize is so . . . Protestant purchasers so interested a point, that it is vain to expect any reform or alteration in that article.

"You see how already I have broke my word with you, and strayed from my subject, into the bargain. I request earnestly that you will be on the watch, and learn if ought has been published for or against Lord Taaffe's 'Observations.' As to the tract, of which his lordship has forbid the publication, I trust that he is mistaken as to his delicacy in entering into any minuteness relatively to the Munster insurgents. I am told that that tract is the work of a gentleman who to great judgment has added an equal degree of caution and candor. From the publication of such an inquiry, no danger whatever can be apprehended to the author or to the public whose cause he espouses. If you have read that work, I request you will transmit me your thoughts of it, and send me a copy of it if you like it. I am not yet determined whether I shall go up to town before or after the holy days. There or here I am fastened to you by such cords as will not only unite ourselves for ever, but take others in also with whom it will be a great part of our happiness to communicate. I, at least, flatter myself in this idea."

"November 17, 1766.

"Your letter of Tuesday last came into my hands on yesterday, and I cannot resist the pleasure of acknowledging in the most grateful manner the pleasure you gave me even by this night's post. Lord Taaffe's account to you of the circulation of his pamphlet, and of the good reception it got, is not more pleasing than amazing. Who knows but this reasoning may do some good, for to us the smallest is surely an acquisition! As our storms of late were so high, I am sensible he could not put to sea as he intended. You did well, therefore, to write to him though he forbid it. You will have the chance to hear more from him and particularly if he waited at court as he intended. I trust that Martin will not quit Louvain as soon as we intended he should for a premature excursion to Cologne would be hurtful to him and expensive to you.

"Your account of Mr. Faulkner's conduct surprised me. I had a letter from him yesterday full of compliments, etc., and he assured me that Judge Robinson* passed a panegyric sentence on the 'Candid Inquiry' into the Munster Disorders.' The work, he says, gave him much satisfaction, and on the credit of such a judgment, Mr. Faulkner was kind enough to promise me a copy by the first safe conveyance. You have, no doubt, seen it before this time. I request you will give me your thoughts of it in your next.

"Mr. Faulkner concealed from me the account your friend (Mr. Dermot, I suppose,) gave you. My letter to him was a mere common place on his being so beneficent a member of society, and mixing together under his roof many persons of different persuasions whom he sent off pleased with one another, and who never would meet if his hospitality did not bring them together.

"Now as such familiar letters are never intended but for private communication, it is surely out of the way to expose them to public inspection. I am indeed ready to think that all this was done, out of an ill-judged partiality in my favour, and on that account I omitted taking any notice of the matter to him in my letter of this night. I do not know that I have for some years been so much in pain on a domestic account as on that of your patient in Anderson's Court. The account you sent me of your re-establishing her made me happy. Her husband omitted sending me any account, and I cannot pardon his carelessness in that particular.

"When you see Mr. Carpenter,† assure him of my affection. Had I the power as others have, he should have proofs instead of professions from me. I should have the double satisfaction of providing for the good of others, while I did justice to his patient, unintruding merit.

"Mr. Faulkner tells me, that Mr. [Edmund] Burke was hurried away, and that his friends in England expect him with impatience, I confess that it gives me sensible pleasure to find that the campaign in the field of Westminster is likely to cover our countryman with laurels. Whatever side he engages on, whether victorious or defeated, his abilities will be conspicuous and consequently useful hereafter."

"December 2, 1766.

"I have been (my dear friend) many days on the ramble, and I write now from Elphin in answer to your letter of the 18th ultimo. I trust that by this time you have an account of Lord Taaffe's safe landing on the Continent. His correspondence with you of late has been important, and I request you will religiously preserve his last five letters in your cabinet. The circulation and favorable reception of his pamphlet in England surprised me, as it must you, and every one like you who made our public prejudices any part of our private researches. I yet expect no great good from this present attention to his Lordship's speculations, and experience would be lost upon us if we had not foreseen that, however some truths may make a transient impression on the minds of men, yet, in their aggregate body as legislators, they will think and act as they used to do. The fortitude in renouncing an old and favorite error, is the happy but rare lot of individuals: public assemblies never possess that virtue, so many causes conspiring to foreclose any access to it. If this be the case, it will be objected to his Lordship and all his partizans, to what

* Christopher Robinson, Justice of the King's Bench in Ireland 1758-87.

† Dr. John Carpenter appointed Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin in 1770, as successor to Dr. Patrick Fitzsimons.

* Defects in MS. denoted thus . . .

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

purpose, then, is it to reason and expostulate with such assemblies? I answer, to a good one. It is some service to make even a transient impression on the human mind, to give it some conviction that the danger it apprehends is groundless. 'This is gaining a great point. It blunts the edge of the laws in being, it prevents the framing of still greater penalties, it gives some peace in the midst of legal warfare. 'Est quoddam 'prodire tenus.' Thus far you and I have proceeded, alone, uncommissioned, and unthanked. Let us, for the future, like Veiauius (the old combatant in Horace), hang up our arms on the post of Hercules :

— armis

Herculis ad postem fixis, latet abditus agro.'

"Now that we have finished our course, it gives me sensible pleasure that our two last endeavours have had more attention from all parties than we expected. I read over the 'Inquiries.' It is excellent and judicious beyond anything of the kind published since the revolution, and I applaud Lord Taaffe's judgment in requiring that by all means it should be put into the hands of foreign ministers (now in London), and our own men in power. They will be convinced beyond testimony of conjecture or opinion (for no other can be produced) that the risings in Munster had no other foundation than those lately in four counties of England, where the capital insurgents are now on their trial, trying by a special commission from the government. Have not those insurgents very opportunely made an apology (and yet such insurrections are abominable) for ours?"

"I am this month past reading Ecclesiastical History, the work of a partial but honest man [Mosheim?]. In truth it is in this retreat that I can read most to my advantage. Last week I had a letter from Dr. Warner. You may remember that last spring I engaged you to write to him; you forgot it, and he tells me so. Half his work is printed, and by what he says of his book, I conclude that it is not for him that it was reserved to write the 'History of Ireland during the reign of Charles I.'

"What Mr. Faulkner wrote to me about the matter you mention is, 'yesterday I had the pleasure to dine with Judge Robinson, and he told me that the Candid Inquiry, etc. was very true.' If you have not seen the Inquiry, I shall be glad to send it to you, etc."

"Belanagare, December 29, 1766."

"In Sligo I met with the 'Freeman's Journal' against Lord Taaffe's 'Observations,' and I hear that more has appeared against them in the 'London Chronicle.' If the latter be no better than what I have seen, the writers hardly deserve any chastisement. They fly away from the argument and supply its place with railing, and yet (unfortunately) this does the business as well, with the great as well as with the little vulgar. I said that Irish writers hardly deserve any rebuke, but by what I advanced in the last paragraph, perhaps a little would be necessary, not from you and me who are tired, but from some gentlemen in England, who ought not to leave the whole weight of this affair on Ireland and (to our sorrow) on two only, who dared to break silence amidst a million of distressed mutes, and mutes for 70 years past.

"I also saw in Faulkner's and other papers a contradiction to the last page in the 'Candid Inquiry.' The contradiction (for ought I know) might be well grounded. The 'Inquiry' did not want that last page which (if false) is a hurt to a most excellent work. I request you will inform me on this head. The author of the work, whoever he be, appears to me to be a man of the greatest candor, nor would, I think, insert an extract of letter in that last page unless he was certain that the writer of the letter was a man of cautious probity, and wrote nothing but matter of fact.

"I shall see you (God willing) in the month of February, for I want to see you. You alone are the possessor of my heart and mind. May God preserve you to our public many a year."

"January 17, 1767."

"You have been ill-treated of late, and ought to bear it the better from the long habit of being so. The author of the 'Candid Inquiry' has been treated as ill, but he is to blame for giving up his own good sense to the folly of others. If he did not make such a sacrifice he would never permit an excellent work to be disgraced by an entirely useless page from an anonymous scoundrel, who kept closely in his cover when called upon to make good his charge. Should not some candid apology be made, if it be not too late, for that page in the public papers? Should not the author's adversaries know that he is as ready too give up a real falsehood as he is averse from supporting a conscious one? That those who decline following his example in the first case are the most likely to have none of the aversion included in the second? I rejoice in hearing of Lord and Lady Taaffe's firmness under the trials of a much more severe climate than our own. Why have you not mentioned something particular relatively to Martin [Curry]? I confess to you that I am not fully free from apprehensions on his account, as old men flatter themselves too often with influence which they have lost, and which in the course of things cannot hold suit to the end of a long life. Let me, I beseech you, be undeceived on this head, as soon as you can put pen to paper.

"From a long acquaintance with English journalists, I am not surprised at the illiberal abuse thrown out against Lord Taaffe's pamphlet; but I am surprised that no English or Irish Catholic undertook a single line to vindicate or explain his Lordship's principles. I would be thankful to you if you kept by you some of the abusive 'Chronicles' you mention. I would be diverted with their perusal, as I was with the invective in our 'Freeman's Journal.' Our friend Dr. Reddy's son was lately married in my neighbourhood, and indeed it gives me great pain (in such weather) that I cannot mount a horse to pay the Doctor my personal compliments, and show him the way to Belanagare. If the weather changes in the least for the better, I shall run to him and drag him to my hermitage if possible. Hermitage I may properly call it, for three months past I am here, generally alone. I read till eleven o'clock, then sleep and digest well. In the morning, I attend to some land improvement and see my cattle fed. I dine at four o'clock, and fall to books at six; and there ends the whole history. Mixed life is the best. I can break my enclosure at fixed periods and join in Dublin with those I love and who are not displeased with me . . ."

January 28, 1767.

"I got here from a friend (lately arrived from Paris) 'Essai sur l'Histoire d'Irlande.' The last 60 pages are important as they contain some curious anecdotes relative to the time from the Reformation to the present time, particularly a memorial presented by a French agent for the Irish Catholics to the Duke of Orleans, late Regent of France. It was calculated to procure his Royal Highness's interposition with King George I. relatively to the Castration Bill against our clergy. I shall say no more of this work, as (God willing) you will soon have it before your eyes."

Lord Taaffe to John Curry, M.D.

"Vienna, the 22nd of April, 1767."

"I am now very near a month in a severe fever of the goutte. God be praised it is going up very slowly, for as I am growing older, I was advised to urish myself better than I was used to do. Great pains I suffered in both my feet and hands, in my left ankle I had it mostly, but not fever or alteration, so that I have hopes it will do me a great deal of good. I hear but seldom from Ireland. Man proposes and God disposes. I do intend to be with you next September, to see if I can do any good to my poor country before I die. When I consider our situation, it grieves me to the hearth, for I do not find one of those that have good estates do act sincerely. I could not do much since I am here, as I had a great deal to do for myself or to say better for my son, so that I neglected every thing, and I have not yet great hopes to succeed. All this will be a reed to you, although I believe you heard something of it, wiche is that my son and thoughter in law do like one another. She expects a very great fortune and will be mistress to have it to whom she pleases. She is young and does not want people enough to court her. We must all conform to the will of God. Pray assure of my respects to Doctor Fizzimons; my wife prays the same since she lefed Ireland. She is as healthy as she can wishe, and has abandoned quite any clear the trubelsome companion she had, that ugly cough. She and I do recomend our freind Ittel Carpenter to Doctor Fizzimons, although we know that his on merit and good qwallitys ear sufficient recomendations. I can assure you upon my honor, that my son told me in Ireland that he ded not know a clargyman that he liked better than him, he told me the same thing hire, that he was in this countrys he would be infallibly promoted. I shall say no more of these affairs.

The raison I trouble you with these lines is that Captain Magweyr wrott to me, that you gave him twelve

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

C. O'CONNOR, Esq.,
 greenys and one halfe. I shall writte to the Captaine soone and pray him to give you bake the mony you gave him, for I wille not mixe you accounts together. As soone as I have placed your son, wiche I hope will be soon, I shall let you know what all the expences I have be'en att in this college. Thy doe all thy can not to have any more students of phisick, as it is a greatt expence to the college to pay all the degrees. Please God I ame seur to gett your son in. I can assure you upon my word your son does not loose his time here, for he atendes all the laissions wiche ear tow in the morning and one in the afternoon. Doctor Keogh, who studied in Paris and alsoe tooke his degrees here, examined your son of what hi studyd in Louvin and gives me a very satisfactory account of him. I doe really tink you ear happy to have souche a son. He is a greatt favourit of my clarke. Hi wrotte to you by hand. I do believe you will receive this present letter sooner. Captaine Magwire writtes to me that Miss Copinger has stille very greatt hopes to be Duchess of Norfolk. Pray let me know how my freind Charles O'Connor does. I hope I shall have the pleasure to see him in Dublin next winter, I pray that you may belive me sincerely my dear doctor.

Your trew freind and most humble servant,

TAAFFE."

O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

"Belanagare, June 13, 1767.

"I spent my time in attending workmen, and relaxing my cares by the perusal of better books than Irish Annals, and yet I confess I should be better gratified by reading and translating the latter, but that they are not at hand. If God spares life till I meet you again, I shall (I think) spend much of my time in collecting the flowers of those works, those especially which regard the times from the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's reign to the year 1602 when those Annals end. It is one of the most active and important periods of our history, and my chief view in marking the collection I intend is to be servicable to you in your opus magnum, from the Reformation downwards to the end of the treaty signed at Limerick in 1691. You have materials enough or may easily come at such as you want. Your zeal calls upon you, nay it impels you to discharge this duty on this national trust to your unhappy country, wherein ignorance of numberless facts, or rather the propagation of numberless untruths, has made wild havoc by souring the minds of men against men, and rendering what should be [the] property of all our people a monopoly to one party only. Unfolding useful truths and showing what was wrong in our political conduct for 100 years past is perhaps the best expedient for putting our monopolists in the right, and showing them that their own interest is impaired not improved by excluding their fellow countrymen from the common benefits due to every man who can approve himself a good subject under the present Government. The old scope of all our historical labors tends to this end, and I doubt not of your success any more than of your zeal, if God spares you life and your present vigour. A considerable part of your task is over already, and the other part you will find light enough by the application of your leisure hours from time to time. I say no more to you on this head, but I expect speedily an account of the progress you are making. . . . How is our worthy friend Mr. Carpenter? I could wish I had him here with me in the few weeks of good weather before us. His health would be improved by such an excursion, and I would be happy in contributing to his ease and quiet in this rural and tranquil place. I put into his hands (to be remitted to his friend in London) a 'Vindication' of Lord Taaffe's Political Principles. What was the fate of that short tract."

"Belanagare, July 17, 1767.

"I like nothing in Lord Taaffe's letter to you but the account of his being well and his not succeeding in his suit at Rome. I confess to you (though I only hinted my conjecture to you) that I thought his Lordship in this sunset of life, counted too much on his court interest, and went into very indiscreet engagements on that presumption. Indiscreet as they were, they [were] the effusions of his good nature, and therefore more pardonable in him to give than in others to risque much upon. After all I do not despair, but Martin will still obtain the place so warmly solicited for him, and a few days will (no doubt) determine. If fortune should dispose of things otherwise, we cannot know but it may be a providential turn in his favor. 'Non videtis Dominus justum derelictum.' You and he may live to see and confess that a disappointment at Vienna was but a door opened to the happy time I have mentioned. I need not therefore recommend to you to prepare for such an event, not only with fortitude, but even with thanksgiving. Whatever the event be, I request you will let me know by the first opportunity, and in your information I expect an account of Frank's destination as well as of Thadens's present situation. Thadens is a man of honor and probity, and that character (which I know is his due) must in your mind and mine obliterate those little defects from which no character can be free. I am really concerned much for the infirm state of our friend Carpenter, and I dread that his too feeling mind is preying upon his body. When you write (and as soon as possible), I request you will not forget sending me an account of him. Since I received your last, I got 'Exshaw's Magazine' for the month of May. Therein is a severe (and possibly not a groundless) attack upon Lord Taaffe's 'Observations.' The writer charges his amanuensis with misrepresentation, relatively to the Imperial Queen's toleration of her Protestant subjects and he refers to public acts, edicts, and rescripts, published by her and her father against his Protestant subjects in Hungary, Carinthia, etc. If what he says on this head be true, his lordship has forgot or imposed upon the amanuensis, and, in either case, sacred truth is wounded. That his lordship should impose on the world I do not believe, I rather believe that the objector did by concealing some adjunct matters, which, if produced, might turn those very rescripts in favor of his lordship's cause. Would it not be worth the while as his lordship is now on the spot (in Vienna), to acquaint him with the heads of the accusations brought against him? How else but by an explanation from Vienna can we parry this thrust, and indeed the only one made hitherto with any show of fairness? For my own part I confess that I should be greatly concerned at any proofs of unfairness on one side in debating a question of such importance as that which forms the foundation of his lordship's tract on our affairs. It might stand alone well enough, supported barely by arguments drawn from true policy and true philosophy. But it would be hurt by arguments drawn from Catholic moderation if the facts were found to be false, that is, if Catholic states observe no such moderation, what I am inclined to believe, and to their shame as well as to the hurt of the Catholic religion. If the 'Vindication' of his lordship's 'Observations' comes out in London it will come very lamely without an explanation of the part objected to in the magazine, such an explanation I mean as can be made favorably to the house of Austria. If this cannot be done, that part of his lordship's tract should be given up fairly as a lapse of his memory. I am too prolix on this head, and you will excuse it from the ferment it put me in. You will also be affected and enough I hope to write immediately to his lordship that we [propose to] make an apology if not a vindication."

John Curry, M.D., to O'Connor.

"Aug. 11, 1767.

"—Lord and Lady Taaffe enjoy very good health, but neither from him nor from any other hand have I heard anything since of the affair of the dispensation for the marriage. I begin to suspect that his Lordship is not pleased at my passing over that matter in silence in my last to him. But how could I have touched upon it? It would have answered no good purpose to condemn it, and I would not approve it, for his estate. Nothing but tenderness and respect for him made me silent on that head, and diffuse on others, which I thought might have taken his mind off it, but I fear has not. I have been since assured that his Lordship intends to be in England next winter, if so he will certainly take a trip hither.

"I have just now received the honor of a visit from Dr. Fitzsimons, with a letter from Lord Taaffe, wherein his Lordship tells him that next month he is resolved to set out from Vienna for London, where he intends to do all the service he can for his poor countrymen, and for that purpose to remain there for six weeks, after which he proposes to come for Ireland. He says he takes this journey at his own expense, but that as he shall want a discreet person from hence to write letters and do other business for him, he mentions our friend Mr. Carpenter as the properest person in his opinion to be sent on that errand, and whom he praises for many merits, but mentions not the least hint of preferment (though there is now in this town another vacancy by the death of Mr. C——). The doctor requires my thoughts of the business; that I shall let him know to-morrow.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

"Dr. O'Brien*, of Cloyne, was in town, but is gone to London. He sent for me and showed me some curious manuscript pieces of his own writing relative to the history of the province of Munster. I am much obliged to him for his good opinion of me. I find he is hunted out of that part of Ireland by bad men."

O'Conor to John Curry, M.D.

"Belanagare, Aug. 17, 1767.

"—The charge against Lord Taaffe, as disguising or falsifying a matter of fact (which, in truth, his Lordship has staked his credit upon) gives me sensible pain, as I cannot refute it. I have pointed out the magazine wherein the charge is made, and as the whole matter is collected there, I was not particular in reciting any of the facts in my letter to you. Now, his Lordship being (very probably) in London the materials for refuting the charge against him are not certainly in his possession, and there is no trusting to his memory. I see no remedy but specifying the several facts to his Lordship and pressing him to write to Vienna, to learn if the objected facts are rightly or falsely stated. If the latter it must be an advantage to any future writer (who undertakes a vindication of his Lordship to show what shifts are used by his adversaries to prevent any impression which his arguments might make on our governing powers. Lord Taaffe might, perhaps, be concerned that you did not, as he expected, give your thoughts on a subject he had greatly at heart; but you certainly did well to let him know, from your silence, your disapprobation of the shameful (to say no worse) measure he reconciled to his conscience and honor."

"No man in the kingdom has the good of our unfortunate people more at heart than you, and yet you seem to lay aside the great work you proposed for their use and that of their posterity—I mean historical collections of transactions in this island from the Reformation to the present time. You have assuredly a diffidence in your constitution as not sufficient to hold out against this labor. May God grant that you are mistaken. 'Est quoddam prodire tenus.' I, too, am in my decline, and yet, if God spares life and grants a tolerable share of health, I purpose (by the assistance of the 'Four Masters' and other writers) to make some collections next winter and spring. I think I am accountable for my spare hours, and the more as any fellow-sufferers through the island (you, Dr. O'Brien, and Burke excepted) are deadly silent. Poor infatuated people! I am at the end of my paper and must take up the little blank remaining to request you will write soon to me, and let me know if Lord Taaffe be come to London, and whether the remarks on his 'Observations' be thought worthy of publication."

O'Conor to Chevalier O'Gorman.

"Belanagare, Sep. 1, 1767.

"Your letters of the first and 29th of this last month lie before me; assuredly the former gave me most sensible pleasure, as it informed me that you were well, and safely arrived in your native country, and both gave me the satisfaction of being convinced that [you] persist in collecting materials for rendering this land of your birth better known at home and abroad. Poor O'Sullivan! You and I cannot but lament the loss we both, nay the public, had in him; let us repair such a loss as well as we can by augmenting the labor which he would have spared us. I could have lent a shoulder to your present undertaking had I been in Dublin, where by the care of Dr. Leland we have undoubtedly the best collection of old annals now in those islands. That learned and worthy gentleman made me free of the [Dublin] College Library, and my dogmatic avocations have so unhappily superseded my passion to profit of the treasure there collected, that hitherto I could do nothing for your advantage or my own. Your plan is the history of the county of Clare (on Smith's plan, and a good one). Till the third century that country belonged to Conaught and was possessed by the Fir Bolgs. In that period of time Leth-Mogha and Leth-Quint (and not sooner) undertook the conquest of this western province, and succeeded. The Heberians seized upon the county now called Clare, and added it to Tuamond, the Heremonians seized upon the remainder of Conaught. Tuamond included in county of Limerick, Clare, and some parts of the county of Tipperary; and that province (called North Munster) fell to the race of Cormac Cas, the great ancestor of the race of Dal-Cas, who, after the tenth century, was headed by the posterity of Brian Borovy, under the surname of

C. O'CONOR
Esq.

O'Brian. But all [this] you know better than I can inform you, and I wonder why I said so much to you. What I should have told you is, that relatively to the historical part of your work there are abundant materials in the annals of the 'Four Masters,' from the tenth to the seventeenth century; and in my old 'Connaught Annals' there is a good account during the 200 years before the Reformation. Those with your own collection will afford a vastly better historical narrative than any we ever yet had of any [part of] our country of Ireland, and I reckon it a misfortune to myself that I cannot be near you, as a pioneer to throw up the materials which lay so long buried and which till very lately could not be discovered. In that way I could give you some assistance, tho' I could not pretend to give it in any other. Your living near me would give me some alacrity in the labor, for I would, as I am in the decline of life, want so good a prompter. But you are running away from me to London, to Paris, and God knows whither. I trust that it is to enable yourself the better to proceed in your undertaking, and to return back to us speedily. Sorry I am indeed that you and Dr. O'Brien, of Cloyne, are so long asunder. In your way he is a man of great knowledge, and I have it from a good hand (who perused a part of the work) that he made a good progress in the ancient history of Munster. He is now in London, and it would be happy if some third person could be found to bring you and him together, and lay the foundation of historical friendship between you. I have not the honor of being known to him. If I had, the poor 'Dissertations' of which you speak so partially, would come under fewer disadvantages. By your education in the school of Hippocrates and . . . you are happily qualified for the natural history of the country you describe, and I rejoice with you in my prediction that your work will be the completest we ever had relatively to Ireland. You have great strength and youth, and this first work I shall look upon only as a preliminary to many more on the same subject.

"The political history of Ireland from Henry II. to the late Revolution in [16]88, is to us the most important of any. Dr. Leland has abilities and philosophy equal to the task. I moved it to him indirectly by a letter to our worthy friend Mr. Faulkner; and it is a pity that a man who distinguished himself thro' Europe by writing the life of a monarch* of a remote country and age, should not bestow part of his abilities to adorn (and what is better) instruct and reform his own country. This, I think, is his duty as God enabled him to perform it; but it is a duty recommended by a person of little significance, and, therefore (I conceive), not attended to.

"By the prolixity of my letter, you see what a desire I have to hold a conversation with you, and how unwilling I am to part you, or take the hint given by this paper that I should leave some part of it in the fair condition it was in a while ago. While you remain among us, I request I may have a letter from you duly every post. You will inform and improve me. You will gratify, in the most sensible manner (my dear O'Gorman),

"Your most obliged and obedient servant,
"Ch. O'Conor."

O'Conor to John Curry, M.D.

"Sep. 11, 1767.

"Lord Taaffe, it is evident, intends to proceed on the affair of the dispensation, notwithstanding all the repulses he received. I loved the man from his former worthy dispositions, and from the less engaging esteem he derived from an old and worthy family. No good is likely to come from his present measure, and much evil is to be feared, for his posterity at least. Sure I am that though he cannot lose relatively to our good wishes for him, he must suffer greatly in our esteem. So at least, I think, in my present temper, and I can assure you (my dear friend) that your last letter on the subject is the only one from your hand that ever pained me. It pained myself, but we must submit, on such occasions as on others, to events which we can neither prevent nor even control. Dr. Fitz-Simons (no doubt) did well to sign a characteristic memorial for his Lordship. It was his testimony to a truth for the bad use of which he is not accountable. There are two bishops in this country who will sign also, but I should have a copy of the form of such a memorial for them, as they might be strangers to the necessary form, and as they would decline framing one of their own. When such a form is remitted to me, I will negotiate the affair though with a reluctant heart."

* Dr. John O'Brien, Roman Catholic Bishop of Cloyne, compiler of an Irish-English Dictionary, published at Paris in 1768.
† Leth-Mhogha and Leth Cuinn, ancient Gaelic names for the southern and northern portions of Ireland.

* The History of the Life and Reign of Philip of Macedon, published in 1758.

C. O'CONOR,
Esq.

"This fortnight past I am reading Lord Littleton's 'History of Henry II.,' sent to me in packets (franked by T. Le Hunte) from my friend Mr. Sheriff Faulkner. I have yet received 270 pages. It is the work of an able, judicious, and critical writer; and yet, relatively to the ecclesiastical part of the history, he fills the character rather of a good Protestant than of a disengaged philosopher. How few even of the greatest men have elevation of mind enough to assert their natural freedom on such occasions! They talk much of liberty, and are themselves the slaves of opinion!"—

"From my Retreat, Oct. 7, 1767.

"On every fine day I fill my proper post, that which was laid out for our first parent, tilling the earth. It contributes to my health and independence—those two enjoyments which baffle the physical and even political evils of life. In worse weather, of which we had a run for a week past, I sit down in this place, and before this fire, in the company of very sensible men, who speak to me on paper, and instruct me how to fence against those moral evils which health and independence rather entertain as friends than encounter as enemies."—"What further intelligence from Lord Taaffe? I love him as a worthy and zealous nobleman, and wish him success in every negotiation but one. What good his pamphlet did, or whether it did any, I know not. I wish it may do no hurt from the evil constructions put upon it, or rather from the malevolence which it revived, and that in 'amaritudine animarum.' His Lordship has been pelted with abuse, and, what is worse, charged with evil intentions and falsifications of facts for six or seven months successively, and yet, as if the cause he undertook was utterly indefensible, not a single line appeared in his vindication from any person in the three kingdoms. Perhaps it was prudent to drop the subject, and, if so, it was surely very improper to revive it. I may be wrong, but I am wrong with my betters (in every light) in thinking that an honest explanation of our principles relative to civil government can never be offensive to our civil governors, unless it be an offence to deceive, a circumstance which it would be really offensive to suppose, and which infers that an acquiescence under the foulest civil charge that can be made, must be acceptable to our rulers! This is what I cannot suppose. Let those who do show what negative good such acquiescence under a criminal accusation can do. A recommendation to favor it never can be, but certainly a motive to positive evil. Here I drop the subject, and leave these acquiescers (if you will allow the word) to their own rational refinements."

"You wrote to me some time ago that Lord Taaffe wanted and obtained a certificate, &c. from the prelates on your side. I told you in answer that I would obtain the like from the prelates in my vicinity as soon as the form of the instrument to be subscribed was remitted to me. I suppose from your silence and further reflexions that the numbers who have already signed their names will be sufficient for his Lordship's purpose."

"From the Hermitage, Oct. 30, 1767.

"Your going through the drudgery of reading over 'Strafford's Letters' was labor indeed, but had its reward, as you separated so much ore from the dross. In spite of all you have said in one of your letters, it is not given to you to resist the impulse to such researches. It is 'direction which thou canst not see,' as Mr. Pope phrases it. The public has already felt and acknowledged the effects, and I predict will feel (and benefit by) more though not so much immediately as we could wish. For 'there are yet too many splinters in the 'broken bone,' and the patient is too peevish. 'The passive slaves of prejudice (says the present Earl of Egmont) prefer the implicitness of credulity to the active researches of their own reason, and would rather continue ruinously mistaken than unpleasingly 'undecided. To understandings of this stamp truth would in vain and even dangerously hold out her torch, sure for her reward to have it dashed in her face.' All this is, I think, finely expressed, and may be considered as a good lesson to our people during the ensuing session."

Lord Taaffe to John Curry, M.D.

"London, 21 Nov., 1767.

"I am here now these ten days, and I am sorry to see that we do take nothing in hand seriously. I can see the minister of Portugal any time I please, but I am not able to speak to him about St. Patrick's College in Lisbon; and, for my other affair, it is a great disappointment to me that Mr. Carpenter is not here with some instructions, as I wrote a long time ago, and I had wrote myself from Rotterdam, if I had not met Mr. Field, who wrote to Dr. Fitzsimons about the latter end of last month. If we would take our affairs in earnest in hands, I do hope for certain we would succeed. I hope in God Mr. Carpenter will be here before this will come to your hands, for I would be glad to be in Ireland before the Parliament will sit after Christmas. I will have letters for the Lord Lieutenant, for if I can do nothing [during] this Parliament, I can't expect to be able next Parliament winter to make such a long journey. I get no letters from Ireland, which grieves me also. I pray assure Doctor Fitzsimons of my respects, and I am infinitely obliged to him for the letter you sent to me from him."

O'Conor to John Curry, M.D.

"Belanagare, Dec. 9, 1767.

"I am pleased that you changed your mind relatively to a 'Vindication of Lord Taaffe's Civil Principles.' I sent it off to you this day, and 'sine me liber ibit in urbem:' but it will not be long in the city before me, for I shall set off, God willing, on Monday next. In case you like the plan and the execution on the whole, I shall take the trouble of transcribing it in Dublin for the press, and make such additions and corrections as you require. The work is half reasoning, half history, the facts casting a light and giving strength to the argument. For the historical part I had all the materials I wanted, and, for the other, I am conscious it must suffer by falling into my hands. But 'est quoddam 'prodre tennus. Let those who could execute this task better be answerable to the public and their own conscience for not undertaking it. You, my dear friend, 'unus instar omnium,' will set right what is amiss and supply what is wanted. I am most heartily rejoiced that our worthy old nobleman had but a short fit of his gout. He will do what lies in his power, and I only wish that his zeal may not strain that power too much in a cause which I shall still look upon as desperate. As I observed to you before, there are still too many splinters in the broken bone, and few I think have been extracted, notwithstanding all our political surgery. Were our masters in earnest, a test oath would not be difficult. King William required of our people no more than a simple oath of allegiance; and did the wisest men now in the kingdom club hands to frame a test against perjury, duplicity, &c., they could not produce one more full to every point than Dr. Nary's, which is annexed to the 'Vindication,' &c., Appendix No. ii.*

"With submission to the gentlemen of our Committee, Robbins's or Bolingbroke's 'Abridgements' are not sufficient to give a full idea of our Popery Acts. Besides, they omit the Acts clandestinely passed in Queen Elizabeth's time. The whole should be drawn out under distinct heads in one successive view, that the reader may feel all the force of what he reads, and comprehend in a few efforts of the mind what he wants to know. Councillor Rice told us such a work was in great forwardness. If it was not completed some able hand, not an attorney, should now set about it. F[aulkner] told me no more than that the greatest man among us wanted to have such a compilation before him for his own perusal."

"In passing a test for our people (if any such should be in agitation), I apprehend that the practice in Holland and Germany will not influence much: pride mixes here as in other things, men choosing rather in such cases to make than follow precedents. Assuredly they will throw in an abjuration of the exiled family."

Lord Taaffe to John Curry, M.D.

"Dear Curry, "London, Dec. 10, 1767.

"I send you the copy of a letter I wrote the 8th inst. to Dr. Andrews, the Provost of the [Dublin] College; and I desire that you will neither speak of it or show it to any one, excepting Dr. Fitzsimons, Mr. Ant. Dermott, and my friend Mr. Charles O'Conor, upon whose discretion I have the utmost reliance. This caution is absolutely necessary as the publication of a correspondence with him would prevent him from doing anything in our favor. I contracted a particular intimacy with him in Vienna, and took no small pains to do him all the honor in my power: having introduced him to the Empress, the principal nobility, particularly the Cardinal Archbishop, the chief minister, Prince Lichenstein, and others who treated him with as much respect as if he had been the Viceroy of Ireland. The doctor was son-

* "A test of fidelity offered by the Roman Catholics of Ireland when heads of a bill relative to their case were brought into the House of Lords."

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

sible of his attention I paid him, and often expressed his acknowledgments in the politest manner, which he as often accompanied with the warmest professions of friendship. He read my pamphlet, and declared to several of the nobility there that he would not hesitate to assert every fact and to enforce every argument it contained in the Parliament of Ireland. Indeed, I have great hopes he will do something for us.

"Let me now ask you, dear Curry, what are you doing there? Why don't you send me instructions? You remember I wrote for them before I left Vienna, and you know I want them: for, in truth, my head is weak, though my heart is strong and good. Mr. Carpenter has been much fatigued since his arrival with some ecclesiastical commission from his prelate, and is besides almost every day obliged to write (as he now does) just as I dictate to him. If they are not grateful to him at home, they must at least confess that he has labored for them, and still labors to some purpose. But he writes himself to the doctor who may inform you of his negotiation. I am now able to go abroad, and only want proper instructions. Every day I have still greater encouragement here.

"I am, dear Curry,

"Your true friend and humble servant,

"TAAFFE."

[Enclosure.]

Lord Taaffe to the Right Hon. F. Andrews, Provost of Trinity College, Dublin.

"Dear Sir,

"London, December 8, 1767.

"I expected by this time to have the pleasure of seeing you in Dublin, but was prevented from proceeding on my journey by a fit of the gout with which I was attacked soon after my arrival here. I undertook this journey from no other motive but the good of my poor country, and I am confident that the trouble I take will not be altogether fruitless, while my country has so able an advocate and so warm a friend as you. You have already seen the 'Observations' I published on the affairs of Ireland, and you were pleased to approve of them. Several of the arguments had been before urged in Parliament by yourself and some other worthy members, who were convinced that a mitigation of the rigour of some penal laws against Roman Catholics would be of the utmost utility to the nation; and, in particular, that a Bill for granting some stable security to those of that persuasion for money lent out at legal interest should at least be passed in our favor. It would be a great consolation to me to see such a bill passed before my death, and it would be a great pleasure to me that the success of it should be owing to you. I have some reasons to believe that the Government here would not be against it, and it is also my belief that the Government would not willingly enforce the execution of some penal laws, which (at least in the eyes of foreigners) seem shocking to humanity.

"I shall, please God, have the honour of seeing you before the end of next month, when I am to remind you of your promise to take another tour to Vienna. Had you continued there until the court recovered from the sickness which prevailed in it, you would find it much more agreeable. I assure you the Countess of Inestenberg and her brother, Prince Cannitz, expressed a good deal of concern at the suddenness of your departure; but rejoiced when I told them you intended to take another tour that way. The Empress herself spoke to me of you in a most gracious manner. In sort, you have many friends there, whose names I need not mention; and you will have many more if it please God to prolong my days. Let me again take the liberty of repeating my earnest request in favour of my poor country, for whose sake I have undertaken in my old days this long and painful journey. Your compliance with it to the utmost of your power will draw down upon you the blessings of heaven, and will besides give unmistakable comfort to an old man, who is always with sincere esteem and respect,

"Dear Sir,

"Your most humble and obedient servant,

"TAAFFE."

Dr. Carpenter to John Curry, M.D.

"Dear Sir,

"London, Dec. 15, 1767.

"I have it in express command from his lordship to communicate the steps he has taken since the 12th. The next day he waited on your new Chancellor,* with which whom he conversed for a considerable time on the affairs of Ireland. He assured him with his usual plainness and sincerity that he had quitted his family and friends, and undertaken, at this advanced time of his life, a long and toilsome journey, with no other view but to obtain some relief for his poor distressed countrymen. He spoke very freely as well as feelingly of the rigor of the Penal Laws, and of the refusal given to the Elegit Bill; and dwelt a good deal upon some facts of which he happened to be a witness, particularly the late troubles in the south, the fatal effects of these troubles, and the violent party rage which had been the cause of them. He concluded with an earnest request that he (the Chancellor) would use every possible means of informing himself from Judge Aston,* and others, of the true state of the country before he quitted this kingdom. The substance of what the Chancellor said during this long conversation was, that he was fully determined to open his ears to every information necessary for the impartial administration of justice; that the refusal of granting any other security to Catholics for money lent, but a personal and precarious one, was both unreasonable and cruel; and that the mitigation of some penal laws already seemed to be intended from the late determination of the Chancellor here in the case of Hobson and Meade. [Lord] Taaffe was extremely well pleased with his visit, and went directly to court. Here the Queen (who had that day made her first appearance after lying-in) took particular notice of him. She congratulated him on his recovery from the gout, told him the King had spoken to her of him, and continued for some time conversing with him in German. At this levée he again met with the Chancellor, by whom he was accosted in a very friendly manner. From this acquaintance with the Chancellor, which he will endeavour to improve, my Lord has great expectations. He is now every day abroad from morning until night, and is determined to omit no opportunity of engaging the interest of the great, while he remains here. Besides the visits he makes, he regularly attends at the levées of the court, and at the assemblies of the several ambassadors, so that I shall hereafter enjoy very little of his company. This account of his progress here, he still positively insists must not be communicated by you to any one, excepting three persons he mentioned in a former letter. But he has (to my very great satisfaction) altered his sentiments with regard to the answer preparing in Bal[ana]gar, which, he tells me, he discouraged in his letter to you of the 12th inst. He now believes that such an answer, from such a hand, will be of infinite service, and only desires that the name of Sir James may not be mentioned, as he does not suppose him the author of the despicable pamphlet."

"A work appeared here lately entitled an 'Apology for the Roman Catholics.' It is not worth sending you. An answer also is just now published to the 'Free Examiner,' in a series of letters, in which the author not only attacks the 'Examiner,' but also the 'Historical Memoirs,' the 'Trial of the Catholics,' and the writer of Cardinal Pole's Life. I had not yet time to read it; but I purpose to send it to you by your neighbour Mr. Sweetman."

"My Lord requests Dr. Fitzsimons to write to him; and to let him know if he thinks it advisable to forward to Count Mahony (the Spanish Ambassador in Vienna) a copy of the Memorial I lately presented to Prince Massarano, after the answer which was given to me. His lordship's zeal is so active that he thinks he can never do enough for his country, and indeed, on the other hand he thinks that you are all quite indolent. One reason for his consulting your doctor on the above-mentioned affair, is to communicate to his friends, Mahony and Wall, any particular request which the Irish prelates may have relative to the government of the Spanish seminaries or to the union of them."

O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

"From my Hermitage, June 10, 1768.

"—I live here in a sweet and acceptable retreat, listening to some of the best men of ancient and modern times speaking to me on paper, on the medium on which they recorded their best thoughts. Irish history (for which I have collected some materials) I have not once dipped into since I left you; and yet I have not put it out of my thoughts to resume that study. You, my dear zealous friend, have collected most valuable materials for that period, which of all others is the most important; you have now nothing to do but to build. I will not tell you that no man is more equal

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

* James Hewitt, Lord Lifford, appointed in January, 1767, Chancellor for Ireland, on the decease of Lord Bowes.

* Richard Aston, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

to the task; but I must frankly tell you that your country has a demand on you, and that religion puts in an equal claim which you cannot in conscience decline answering any more than any other debt you have ever contracted. Fame is not your passion, but you have a stronger, and let it be a predominant one, that of opening the eyes of a deluded people, which however reluctant to receive the light, yet ought to be opened. You are but too sensible how long those eyes have been closed from the power of men who had an interest in error, and from the indolence and indifference of men who seem to have but little interest in truth. You must not follow the example, but have the merit of being the first to set a better. I know how you are stinted in time by family avocations and calls of profession; and how reasonable your objections as well as my own are when we interpose the encroachments made by years on our physical constitutions. But we have intervals of strength and even leisure, nor are our mental constitutions yet impaired. We are therefore bound to give the best account we can of the little time we have to wade through, and have some merit with posterity who doubtless will be grateful for the services we shall render to them, however thankless their present fathers may be. You see how impudently I have dragged in myself here as your fellow labourer; but I think you know me too well to imagine I put any value on what I have done, or can do, otherwise than that I made some efforts when others declined making any, and that if I have not done much good, I might be instrumental to excite others to do it, from showing that my subject was not so desperate and barren as it was universally imagined. But enough, too much of this. I would have you distinguish and mark out your history by particular periods, and begin with the first year of Henry VIII.'s Reformation. Each reign has its peculiar characteristics, and even the same reign may have variations (political and moral) which ought to be treated under distinct heads; for instance, that of [Queen] Elizabeth, which, before 1588, was tolerably moderate towards Catholics, but which, after that period, may (relatively to them) be considered in the light of a tyrannical Inquisition."

"From the Hermitage, June 28, 1768.

"I wrote to you some time since, by post. It was nothing except a warm expression of my desire that you might review, and marshal in good order, your historical materials for Irish affairs since the great change in religion to the late Treaty of Limerick. You are equal to the task and no other will undertake it, because no other person has your spirit or zeal for the undertaking, and few, very few, have the abilities, should they even be impelled by duty and conscience as you are. You have, I know, other duties to fulfil; but you will find the moments when the secondary engagements will not interfere with the first; nay, when the one will become (so to speak) part of the other; I mean to say that the vacant moments you have should be improved for the public, and that your acquitting yourself in this particular is but an appendix to the primary duty you owe your family. These are two members of a complete character, which as few can ever attain, so few are bound to it; and the primary engagements only suit the generality of men, who can do no more than to till the earth and consume the fruits of it. You have been born to a higher destination, and after giving the world proofs of it you cannot in conscience stop till you come to the goal which is not now so remote from you as you may imagine. I am so much affected by this subject that you must pardon this prolixity, and, I hope impertinence. Indeed, I have little else to say (profitably) on any other subject.

"Since I left you I have run over Voltaire's ten vols. of 'General History,' from Charlemagne's time to the present. This is the work which Bishop Warburton calls the 'great fable,' and even I have discovered several shameful mistakes of this great philosophic writer, in matters of fact. 'Tis a great pity to find so many truths, nobly told, brought into discredit by keeping bad company.

"I had not a single word of our worthy friend, Lord Taaffe, since we parted. He has done us some good, so far as it can be produced by leaving good impressions on the minds of some great men, who, though bound by law to support prejudices, are yet freed from being bound by inclination. Religious differences have ruined the political interests of Europe for several ages past, and they had even worse consequences by ruining our private morals. This is known and confessed, yet no prince or legislator has dared to break the chain which galls not only the oppressed but the oppressors themselves. God has permitted all this, and we should be resigned under such a state, because we must be convinced it was for purposes equally wise and inscrutable. We are sure that no evil can frustrate the ends of His providence, and that, relatively to many, a state of suffering is the best state.

"I am in pain about your family on the Continent; I request you will free me from it, that is, let me know that they are in health, for I have no fear about their morals. They are expensive to you in the country they now inhabit; but they would perhaps be more so at home. May God bless your cares at home and abroad; while you have health I do not fear for them, and whether you enjoy it or not, 'non vident Dominus justum derelictum, neque semen ejus querens panem.' These are the words of Eternal Truth, and cannot fail.

"Let me descend to trifles. Have you read Dr. Traill's funeral sermon on your cousin Archbold? I confess that I long to have your judgment on that performance.

"I am in this place making a campaign and a commander-in-chief. This day I have my little army up to their teeth in trenches, doing some good, indeed, but not the millionth part as much as greater armies do evil; much of it is doing now in Poland, and it will appear a very singular epocha in the state of Europe, if a foreign army succeeds to force the chiefs of a great nation to do what they should do of themselves, to grant universal toleration to all religionists who can approve themselves good subjects to the civil constitution. If extrinsical violence were justifiable in any case it would, I think, be in such a case as this before us. In Poland it may possibly be productive of a new and legitimate form of government, instead of their destructive aristocracy; and if so, the world will laugh at Russian policy in fortifying a mighty kingdom at its door against itself, and setting bounds for ever to its own ambition and power.

"We have a different campaign at present on this island, occasioned by a general election of representatives for our next Parliament. It is a less bloody campaign, but very far from being free from animosities. I am on shore, and amuse myself with the tempest in which some must be cast away, and some perhaps drowned in the great ocean of expense and dissipation."

"Aug. 8, 1768.

"I now return to your own letter, and thank you for the good account you remit of Lord Taaffe. He has done good by softening the minds of some men in power. It is all we can reasonably expect, for theory is over with you and me, since we have experience enough that the legislature will not be softened. The sins of our masters and our own merit this state of things; for, in a political light nothing but an universal toleration is wanting to complete the power as well as glory of the British empire, but this good fortune is denied it for wise but to us inscrutable purposes."—"Counsellor Ridge,† on his circuit, called upon me here to-day, and eat a mutton chop with me; a worthy young gentleman, and most heartily your friend. He is well acquainted with Dr. Smollet, one of the 'Critical Reviewers.' It was in a sitting with him that he and Mr. Burke put the 'Memoirs' into his hands, and from that event proceeded the judgment published in the 'Critical Review.'"

"From the Hermitage, Aug. 12, 1768.

"—We are here free to think, to converse, to read, out of the reach of power, and even of its worst effects, penal laws. It is a spot of ground created (so to speak) by myself; a sort of plantation cleared of stones and underwood, and now producing milk, animal food, and plenty of esculent vegetables. Penal laws shall not pursue me into this retreat, and I lament only that numbers who as little merit their stripes should be exposed to their severity. I wrote to you by hand this week, and the packet which I told you I kept for Mr. Carpenter was made up of letters from Lord Taaffe and Mr. Shaw. That nobleman is incessantly labouring for our poor people (opportune, importune), and he says humorously that he is listened to and well received, 'as people are fond to converse with children and old men.'"

* James Traill, Bishop of Down and Connor, 1755-1788.

† John Ridge, called to the Bar in Ireland in 1782. Oliver Goldsmith associated Ridge with Sir Joshua Reynolds and other friends in his poem "Retaliation."

"Four landlords supplies us with beef and with fish,
Let each guest bring himself and he brings the best dish.—
To make out the dinner, full certain I am,
That Ridge is anchovy, and Reynolds is lamb."

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"News, indeed, deserted your capital, and can be collected only from our four provinces, wherein our masters are in a state of animosity and civil warfare against each other. We are on shore and can view the tempest with safety: 'aliquis malo usus in illo.'"

"From the Hermitage, Sept. 9, 1768.

"—'I had an account in this paper of poor Dugan's death, before I received your letter. I was, in truth, heartily concerned. I was the first, and he confessed it, who put him in the way of searching for pieces of history relative to our country, and I never knew a better angler; but he was, poor man, too selfish, and, on that principle, has shut the door of intelligence in my face, of which I could give you several instances. His collection is, I know, very valuable, and if the sale catalogue be published soon (which I do not think will be the case till I go up) I shall trust to Mr. Carpenter and to you, who will mark out those books which we want. Mr. Carpenter will attend at the sale for us both, and I will previously send up nine or ten guineas as a stock for him. Some Irish MSS. I know, Dugan had, and possibly I will have but few to contend with me, as the College is now sufficiently supplied with books in our native language.'—"

O'Connor to [John Carpenter, D.D.]

"Sept. 22, 1768.

"—'Poor Dugan is no more! As Dr. Curry observes, he is a loss to the public, and we now forget the spirit of selfishness which, in a good degree, drove from him persons whose friendship he should cultivate. If his scarce books should be put up to auction, I request you will send me the catalogue, under cover, that I may mark out such books as I want; and I must entreat it of you to attend the sale, so that my absence may not prevent my possession of those tracts. You will be supplied with money by my son, if God spare him life. I hear of a pamphlet printed in Dublin, containing animadversions on the Bishop of Down's (my acquaintance's) panegyric sermon on the late Archbishop, once a Jesuit. If such a book be really out of the press, I request you will put it into Mr. Henigan's hands (Charles's clerk), to be forthwith forwarded to me.'—"

O'Connor to John Curry, M.D.

"From the Hermitage, Sept. 23, 1768.

"—'Last post I wrote to our worthy friend Mr. Carpenter, and I hope before this time that he communicated to you the contents of a letter from Mr. Charles Kelly, of Rome, wherein he speaks of you and me in the kindest terms. That gentleman's activity is equal to his zeal in the service of every deserving countryman, and both ought to be improved by all the means on our side here at home for the advancement of good men, who alone, in a land of frequent apostacies, can preserve the Catholic religion, or what remains of it, in our island. When once the place of merit is given up to intrigue, to favoritism, and a scramble for loaves and fishes, that religion, which stood out every storm from power for 200 years past among us, will fall in the dead calm of a religious tepidity, allied to ignorance, its forerunner. I wrote to Mr. Carpenter also to attend at the sale of Dugan's collections, little dreaming of the silly disposition he made, or sillier motive he had in making it. There was, no doubt, as you observe, a low astutia in the bequest he made, and when it became necessary to make a true discovery of his mind, his sincerity came too late. Thus do we impose on the world to our last moments! I wrote also to Mr. Carpenter for the remarks on the Bishop of Down's sermon.'—"

"Sept. 27, 1768.

"—'I thank you most heartily for the pamphlet you sent me enclosed in your last. I gave it three readings, and liked the last the best. It came most opportunely to suspend the anguish of my mind.'—"The writer of the pamphlet you sent me has acquitted himself admirably, and has done so the better as he was happily in the possession of the materials for doing it. From the quotations he remarks upon, he has given woful proofs of the infatuated weakness of the prelate he replies to, a prelate pointed out to the ridicule of those of his own order by approving the religion of a man who deemed it meritorious to withhold his charity from the indigent because they were mistaken in some religious tenets. The remarks relative to Gregory VII., and Fleury's History, heighten the ridicule also, and the whole puts me in mind of a common Irish proverb:—'that any man may pass for an author till he writes'; and it is pleasant to find what pains the poor bishop took to prove that he is not one. He wanted, it seems, to remove all suspicion about the matter.'"

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

O'Connor to John Carpenter, D.D.

"From the Hermitage, Oct. 25, 1768.

"—'My dear friend, if the nursing and maturing of our best principle be not put into the care of men of knowledge, and a zeal equal to that knowledge, we are undone. The Catholic religion has stood its ground in our island for 250 years past. The tempests of persecution have indeed torn off many of its branches, but the root remained firm hitherto, notwithstanding all the efforts of the adversary, with the axe in one hand to cut it through, and rewards in the other to seduce those who tended it from their duty. If it ever should happen that this duty should be intrusted to men of religious indifference, the storms I have mentioned may well cease, as having no better effect than what we read of the traveller in the fable, who, the more the high wind laid claim to his cloak, the faster he held it. The calm of tepidity will effluetuate what those storms could not, and the frequent apostacies, of which we have daily accounts in the public papers, give us the melancholy prospect. May God, who has been so long gracious to us, avert such a punishment. I am not intimate enough with Mr. Dowdall to know him [as] well as I do Mr. Fitzgerald. The latter is certainly worthy of your confidence, and I need not tell you that the fewer you intrust with it, in these times, the better. I would not take on me so daring a task as to draw up a memoir of my friend's services, but I think I may without boldness lay the plan of it, and will send you a copy by the next post to be reviewed and amended by our dear friend in Cow Lane [Dr. Curry]. It should be translated into good Latin, and I apprehend that our gentlemen here are not equal to the task. I suspect their ability in even grammatical language.'—"

"Mr. Petit has sent me two vols. of the 'Jew's Apology,' and I like it much. His uncouth prose-verse has the advantage of drawing his arguments within a narrower compass than the looser prose [would] admit, while, at the same time, they receive the greater strength from the metrical turn of the periods. The manner, though new, is in the first reading disgusting, but the disgust wears away upon a nearer view. I am sure I found it so. Indeed I am much concerned that you missed so good an opportunity of enjoying the conversation of the 'Free Examiner.' He is in possession of much useful information, which we want, and which men do not choose to communicate in an epistolary correspondence.'—"

"Write soon to me, and let me know of the fate of Dugan's historical collections, after you mention something that I must like better.'—"

O'Connor to —.

"From the Hermitage, Nov. 14, 1768.

"—'I told him [Mr. Fitzgerald] that the outlines I gave of my friend's character required a proper form, which, when it received, and that the whole was converted into reputable Latin, it should be remitted to me to negotiate its acceptance with men, whose subscriptions would give it weight and complete speedily what Lord Taaffe begun and what his lordship (to my certain knowledge) has greatly at heart. Our world is far from being reformed to the simplicity of the apostolic times. Things wherein virtue alone should take the lead, are conducted by many through the medium of intrigue, craft, and tergiversation. We never will be admitted into their secrets; prudence requires that they should be strangers to our affairs, as by their principles (and to be consistent with themselves) they would strain every nerve of bringing art to frustrate purposes wherein personal considerations have but the second place in our intentions. Mr. Fitzgerald is sincere. He proposed an amendment to the outlines I gave: 'that our friend was never of a party or faction, never solicited for preferment, and instead of seeking was sought' for to execute the commissions he had from time to time in the service of our distressed church.' Indeed, I thought this a very proper amendment, and nothing but conscious insincerity could construe it as inserted 'ad invidiam.' I request you will speak to Mr. Fitzgerald, an industrious and honest friend, to forward this affair in the proper form and language to me as soon as possible.'—"

"I wrote this day to our friend the doctor. He will inform you of a strange commission I had the other day from a great man in England, indeed no less a man than Lord Lyttleton, to furnish him with some light relative

C. O'Conor, Esq. to the Conquest of Ireland by Henry II. I will do what I can, though little to my own satisfaction at this distance from the documents now in the Library of Trinity College.

What is to be done with Dugan's collections? He was possessed of some good documents relating to the period Lord Lyttleton is so curious about. Let me hear immediately from you."

"From the Hermitage, Nov. 15, 1768.

"I have Mr. Carpenter's affair much at heart. I drew up the outlines of a 'Testimonium de vita et moribus' for him. I remitted it to Mr. Fitzgerald, and required that it should be thrown into form, and sent down to me in elegant Latin, that I might negotiate the acceptance of it in this country, and get it signed by the proper persons.

"This last week, I had a letter from Mr. Vesey, of Lucan, requesting I should send him some historical accounts from our native annals, relative to the Conquest under Henry II., King of England. He was moved to this by Lord Lyttleton, who is writing the history of that monarch (a part of which, ending with the death of Beckett, has been published by his lordship already). I answered that, as I was at a great distance from the 'Annals' in Trinity College, I could not satisfy Lord Lyttleton to my wish; that, however, I would soon remit him (Mr. Vesey) such short notes as I took from those 'Annals' formerly. This promise I will make good this evening if I can; if not, the affair must be in arrear till next post."

"I request you will present Mr. Slingsby with my hearty thanks for his memory of me. You will answer for me that I am too much in the decline of life (had I even abilities) for the historical task he cut out for me. I will do what I can, by collecting a few notes from time to time to be of use to some future inquirer of more strength of body and mind, or probably to rot in a corner after my poor eyes are closed."

O'Conor to John Curry, M.D.

"Jan. 10, 1769.

"You will be vexed when I tell you that I have to negotiate with our prelates here for our friend Mr. Carpenter, who deserved from them and all our people agood testimony 'de vita et moribus'. . . . It is now that our spiritual guides should exert the spirit and exhibit the example of the apostolic times, and without both we are likely enough to be undone more from the dangers arising from our own superiors than from all the dangers arising from our incapacitating laws. What a chain of grievous reflexions, in a country where the majority stood out all the strokes of power for 200 years past, and remained hitherto singular amidst all the northern nations of Europe! But I desist, to draw a ray of hope from the eye of the Almighty, ever watchful over His Church.

I believe I told you that Mr. Vesey, of Lucan, was lately my correspondent, requiring some historical anecdotes relating to the conduct of Henry the Second towards the Irish, in their submission to him. I sent him the short notes I took from the Irish 'Annals' in the college. He remitted them to Lord Lyttleton, who is writing the history of that monarch, and, to my great surprise I had a polite letter from his lordship (which you will soon see), requiring some further explanations relative to persons and places. I replied to his lordship on that dry subject, and have not been perhaps as full as he would wish. I did not, indeed, conceive that a minute detail of such things could be of any use to his undertaking. Could I, indeed, have foreseen that I should have had any demand upon me for facts (on that subject) my extracts from the old 'Annals' would be more full than those I drew out hastily in April last for my own sole use. Dr. Leland is now Librarian, and promises me a warm room and all the liberty I can require relatively to the College MSS., which are now a noble collection indeed, so that you will soon, God willing, see me inclosed. I purpose to set off from this Hermitage before the 20th inst."

[Jan. 14.] "Since I wrote the above I had a kind letter from Dr. Leland. He, too, seems to make Irish affairs a part of his study, or rather amusement. I replied this evening to his letter. His queries relate to the revolution here in 1170, under Henry II. As he may transmit his thoughts to Lord Lyttleton, I was as full in answering as a half-sheet would permit, and I was the more so as his queries are really important, and that the explanation of the difficulties he starts are but in the power of very few. The great leisure I have here may render me of some use to these gentlemen, and I may as well bestow a part of my leisure in this way as in any other."

"From the Hermitage, June 4th, 1769.

"You have in great forwardness a work which the public wants, and to which, therefore, the public has a right. Its appearance will make converts to truth greatly wanted, because the ignorance of those truths fosters prejudices ruinous to our masters as well as to millions who are the immediate sufferers. As this will be a work of labor, London is the place where its impression must be negotiated, for in London alone will the author's pains be rewarded by a sale of copy, and it should come out in a handsome quarto volume at a guinea price. I am still positive it should come out with the author's name, without the timid information—'By the author of the Historical Memoirs of the Irish Rebellion in 1641.' You had an impulse to the services you have rendered the public by your writings, without your considering it, and this is not the time to resist the impulse, when your opus 'magnum' (to which the other writings were only preliminaries) is almost completed. Your finishing your undertaking is a part of your duty, and a most considerable part certainly. You took your materials from our enemies, and you enjoy the confusion of those who on that very account will be precluded from answering, because they have an interest, or think they have an interest, in hating it. The more sore we make them the better. The books I promised to send you will be in your possession, I hope, very soon; though, if you be lazy, you will not want them as soon as I would wish. I only require that you should scold me for the delay. I say no more at present on this subject, though I must be urgent again with [you] on it, unless you prevent me by telling me I am impertinent, and that I myself am the only obstacle to your business."

"From the Hermitage, July 16th, 1769.

"I wrote you lately (perhaps you have not received it) an impertinent letter, pressing upon you to complete the noble work you have begun. It is almost completed already, and requires only a last hand to fit it for publication next winter in London, where the copy will be profitably disposed of by inserting in the title-page that it came from the hand which already gave the public a specimen of his candour and abilities in the 'Historical Memoirs.' I yesterday sent you three vols. in folio, which may be of some use to your design, namely Morrison's 'History of the Tirone War,' the 'Pacata Hibernia,' by the Earl of Tomness, and Walsh's 'Irish Remonstrance.' You will have those books before you have this letter in your possession."

"From the Hermitage, Aug. 15, 1769.

"Quidquid in buccam' is your and my manner of corresponding, for we do not write for the public, but for ourselves. Our hearts are full, and the heads have hardly any share in their overflowings."—"I should be sorry that Brett had not every material for his pamphlet that you and I could supply him with. I say you and I, for we are the only persons of our party who, in the course of seventy years dared to break silence; and yet you cannot easily forget the reward we had from friends and enemies. By giving the question we have started every face and turn it can bear, from Brooke, Brett, Howard, etc., etc., the leaden hatchets of the Presbyterians may be blunted. It is gaining something. It will not only soften, it will disarm men in power, on receiving conviction that it would be the worst policy for them, and indeed for the public, to extirpate or even molest us, because we profess a religion which requires obedience to the civil power, whatever the civil constitution may be. In spite of virulence, I mean party virulence, a philosophical sense of things must take place, though there are too many splinters in the broken bone for you and me to see the day. I suppose Mr. O'More wrote to you, on the receipt of your second letter to him. I request you will inform me of what he has done or will do, relatively to his correspondence with Brett. I expected to see my dear friend Carpenter this year at the Hermitage, but I am disappointed, though I hope to his own advantage, and then it will be my gratification. I lately had a letter from my friend Mr. Charles Kelly at Rome. No man can have mine or Mr. Carpenter's interest more at heart than he has, and no man of our country has more attention from men in power than he in the great capital of Europe where he resides. Have you received the three folios I sent you? You will pick some flowers out of their dung-hills, and I hope the 'opus magnum' is going on, and that you will grant me the old privilege of informing the public of the specific which the physician has prescribed for them. Be it as it will, London should be the scene of its appearance, and indeed the only place wherein the author can expect the reward of his labors."—"You and I know that Lord Taaffe's jealousy is only the feeling of friendship, and the uneasiness of a good man who thinks his own importance wounded because he was not taken absolutely in his own way."—"I had this post, Mr. N. of Granby Row's attack on Mr. Wagstaffe, and the latter's spirited reply of the 12th instant. I have a ridicule on Mr. N. of Granby Row in contemplation. What it will be I know not. I will send it by next post (whatever it be) to Mr. Hoey, and Mr. Wagstaffe may print or burn it as he chooses. You recommend Irish history from Henry the Second's time to me. I have done nothing yet in that matter though I have it in view. It will, I think, be of use to see what Lord Lyttleton and Leland will say on the subject. If God grants me health and life, I purpose to be one of their humble followers."—

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

"From the Hermitage, Sep. 8, 1769.

"In the course of the last month I wrote you two letters by the post, one, a long one, on the business of 'opus magnum,' the 'Memoirs,' and the correspondence with Mr. O'More,* of Ballina; I trust that all these things are now in the proper train, and that the 'Memoirs' are out of the printer's loom. The circumstances of the present times and the unmerited popularity of a certain faction render the publication of such works necessary. The publication will be useful and consequently acceptable to a government attacked with fury and treated with equal indignity. It cannot but be acceptable that the Roman Catholics (ground as they are under penal laws) should appear now and do justice to the equity and lenity of His Majesty's administration. On this principle, I think, it would be proper to usher in the 'Memoirs' with a short preface setting forth (by way of contrast) the equity of the present Government compared with the arbitrary proceedings of the administration in the times described by the author of the 'Memoirs,' and that the present publication is not only a tribute of gratitude on the part of the Papists, but a fair admonition to subjects who enjoy all the advantages of our frail constitution, to put a proper estimate on their present happiness."—"I have sent you the Earl of Totnes's account of the Kinsale war,† Moryson's 'History'‡ and Walsh's 'Irish Remonstrance'.§ Have you received them, or have you found them of any considerable use? The account of those times by the 'Four Masters' would be useful, and I trust I will be able to furnish you with some anecdotes from those compilers."—"In the place I am in I read a good deal, but write little, and yet I now and then common-place some things, and, if God grants me life, I propose to digest them for use hereafter."

[September, 1769.]

"Lord Taaffe's displeasure proceeds from the slight he thinks Martin put on his negotiation for him, relatively to the Austrian academy. His delicacy was wounded in such a procedure. But assuredly nothing is to be feared from the resentment of a good man: and no provocation (well or ill founded) can ever preponderate the affection he bears you, or the officiousness with which he would give proofs of that affection. Your son's miscarriage, and only miscarriage in the Palatine service, has been exaggerated to him, and it gives me great pleasure that the worst is over."—"Prejudice, as I observed formerly to you, may be compared to the elm tree. It is best eleft asunder by a wedge from its own side; and certainly if any good be intended our people, it must be produced more by the feelings of our adversaries than by our own best reasonings."

"Octob. 27 or 28th, 1769.

"I write now only to account for my silence, and to assure you that I would omit no opportunity of breaking if could I do so with the smallest satisfaction to you. By satisfaction I mean furnishing you with any information useful to our common cause. God has blessed you with talents, knowledge, and zeal to serve your country. You have rendered it important services already, and if nature continues the health which seconded your zeal, you will still render it more important services. I am pleased much to hear that you picked some flowers out of the vast collection of thistles which I sent you. You are greatly a more patient reader of such collections than I am, and it is happy for the public that you are so. I am laying, not executing, schemes, and drawing upon time, which probably will not accept the draft. Mr. Carpenter has scolded me for my small advances, and however just his reproof might be, he does not well consider how many of the materials for such a fabric as he and you desert expect lie absolutely out of my power in this desert from which I am writing. I find the decline of life for some time past coming on very sensibly. The gout has this last week seized upon my left hip, and my feet begin to have gouty sensations, yet I live temperately and breathe good air. If I can shake off the upper pains and lower feelings I purpose to be with you about the middle of next month. My little harvest is well made up, and by some improvements which I made lately in agriculture, I am forty shillings a year richer than when I left you last summer. In another year I shall advance ten pounds more a year, and I mention all this to you because you will be pleased to hear that I am spreading the base of my independence, and drawing from honest industry those advantages which the laws of my country have denied or rather absolutely have forbid me. This acquisition, which I make from year to year, gives me infinitely more pleasure than a pension from the Government, and I am at my ease, and free too, in spite of the laws. I have read the [Lord] Lieutenant's* speech. It is in the usual common-place ministerial style. His E[xc]ell[en]cy observes, very justly, 'that the strength and riches of a country are in proportion to the number of its industrious inhabitants,' and I would add (though not ministerially), 'that the depopulation and miseries of a country are in proportion to the numbers virtually forbid by law to be industrious.' The last proposition is equally just with the first, and both spring from the same principle. The force of the principle is felt and recognised by all men, and it will be improved in this island so far as party prejudice will permit and no further. But party is that monster which (as I have read in Irish fable) feeds upon its children without fattening them for the food, and therefore party can never make a good meal."—"What do you hear from or about Lord Taaffe? His delicacy was wounded by the seeming slight put upon his officiousness to serve you; but he is an honest man, and his resentment can never be turned to the detriment of any deriving from you. Of this I believe you are well satisfied. I am glad to find that the 'Memoirs' are almost ready for publication. I am really sorry for the misfortunes of the first publisher. When have you corresponded last with Mr. O'More, of Ballina? What is Brett doing? I would be glad to see his book published, whatever it be. Truth will come out best from those who are reluctantly struck with the force of it. The value of a victory is enhanced by the obstacles thrown in its way, and this is true of the victories we gain over ourselves in many instances."—"What news from England? The next campaign at Westminster will be the warmest that was fought since the Revolution in '88. The contest will be between the representatives and their constituents, and in this as in most cases the artificial will get the better of the real power of the public. But what are State storms to us that have no goods on board? Be the event what it will, we are on shore, to put to sea in fair weather or remain where we are while we are permitted. I just perused Hoey's paper, and it informs [me] of another anniversary sermon by the Bishop of Down and Connor, on the Insurrection of Octob. 23, 1641. I long to see that performance, and I long as much for your thoughts on it. I request you will write soon to me. You are on the stage of information—I, in an obscure corner, where I am (foolishly) tired with quiet and its whole train of peaceful concomitants."

The limits of this report do not admit of entering here upon the correspondence and papers of O'Connor subsequent to 1769. On those important and interesting documents I hope before long to submit a report to the Commission.

JOHN T. GILBERT.

Villa Nova, Blackrock, Dublin,
30th October 1880.

* George, Viscount Townshend, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

* Ancestor of the Right Hon. Richard More O'Ferrall, Privy Councillor, sometime Lord of the Treasury and Governor of Malta.

† "Pacata Hibernia: Ireland appeased and reduced." London, 1633.

‡ "History of the Rebellion of Hugh, Earl of Tyrone." By Fynes Morrison. London, 1617.

§ Published at London in 1674.

C. O'CONNOR,
Esq.

LORD TALBOT DE MALAHIDE.

MANUSCRIPTS OF THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD TALBOT DE MALAHIDE, MALAHIDE CASTLE, CO. DUBLIN.

In the present portion of this collection* are comprised an exemplification of an Act of a Parliament held at Trim, A.D. 1447; letters of the Duke of Tyrconnell and of Lord Melfort, 1689-90; and an Account of the private estate of James II. in Ireland.

The exemplification, which is in Latin and French, but somewhat obliterated, will be found in our appendix. It is interesting as a relic of the Viceroyalty in Ireland of the famous John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, during whose tenure of office there the Act was passed which it records.†

The letters of Richard Talbot, Duke of Tyrconnell, Viceroy of James II., are fifteen in number, and were written, during the residence of that King in Ireland, to Lieutenant-General Richard Hamilton, chiefly in reference to his military operations against the Williamites in Ulster. Tyrconnell, from these letters, appears to have been much attached to the Hamiltons. He was connected with them through his marriage with the beautiful Sarah Jennings, after the death of her first husband, George, brother of Richard Hamilton. The latter, before the King's arrival in Ireland, was advanced to the rank of Lieutenant-General by Tyrconnell, who in these letters addresses him as "Dear Richard."

In the first letter, dated Dublin, 14th March, 1689, Tyrconnell apprises Hamilton that he had received intelligence, by express, of the landing of King James at Kinsale on the preceding Tuesday, the 12th of that month. On the 3rd of April, Tyrconnell tells Hamilton of the interest with which the King reads his letters, and of his determination to send him adequate supplies. Tyrconnell's letters are dated from Dublin, Kilkenny, and Clonmel. They are chiefly in his own hand, occasionally in English and French intermixed.

Lord Melfort's letters, sixteen in number, were also addressed to Richard Hamilton, and frequently by direction of the King. The first was written from Dublin on the 6th of April 1689, and the last one which bears a date is from Clonmel, 17th March 1689-90. They contain particulars relative to the affairs of James II. in Scotland as well as in Ireland. The letters are of high interest in an historical point of view, as well as from being addressed to the brother of Anthony Hamilton, writer of the famous Memoirs of Count Gramont. It is said that Gramont was about to leave England for France without carrying out his promise of marrying Elizabeth Hamilton, but he encountered at Dover her two brothers, Anthony and Richard, and the following dialogue is represented to have taken place, on the occasion:—"Chevalier de Gramont, n'avez vous rien oublié à Londres? Par—domez moi, messieurs, j'ai oublié d'épouser votre sœur." "Il retourna," says the narrative, "et le mariage se fit." In one of the letters now before us Tyrconnell writes as follows to Richard Hamilton,‡ in reference to his brothers Anthony and John, the latter of whom subsequently lost his life in the service of King James at the battle of Aughrim in 1691.

"As for your brothers, Anthony and Jack, you [may rely that], for their own sakes as well as [for yours, I will] do by them as if they were my own. Anthony has a regiment and is Brigadier, and will very soon be a Major-General. Jack has Mountjoy's regiment, and I hope [will be] a Brigadier as soon as Anthony is [advanced to a higher post]."

These papers are unfortunately in a decayed condition. The portions of them which survive, are, in order of date, as follows:—

TYRCONNELL TO RICHARD HAMILTON.

"March 14th. [1688-9.

"... now I have an express from Macartie [with the] news of the King landing upon Tuesday last at Kinsale with 30 sayle of ships. I am going to wayte ... [to]morrow morning. I wonder I have ... a word from you since you went. I ... to have heard every day from you after ... had got as farr as Ncurye. I hear [the] rebels have quitted

* For report on other manuscripts in the collection of Lord Talbot, see First Report of this Commission, Appendix, p. 128.

† An account of Talbot's connection with Ireland, as Viceroy and landowner there, will be found in the History of the Viceroys of Ireland. By J. T. Gilbert, F.S.A. London: B. Quaritch, 1885.

‡ In a secret history of the war of the Revolution in Ireland, entitled the "Destruction of Cyprus," the pseudonym of "Monraues" is used for Richard Hamilton, and that of "Corden" for Tyrconnell—"Macarie Excidium," edited by J. C. O'Callaghan, Esq., Dublin, 1850.

Loughbricklan ... ed the furradge thear. I hear ... great spoyles committed by Captain Mag ... men, of the Newry, upon one Tounly's ... near that place ... must see to take all care possible to ... the cuntry from being ruined either [by the] rabble or the soldiers. I beleene you ... got as farr as Hilsborrow. I have ... instructions to giue, your self being upon ... ate, is best able to iudge what is most ... King's service, and that I am sure yow ... [al]ways doe. Let me hear every day of your motions; direct them to [the Bishop of] Clogher, who will send them after [me], for I shalbe impatient to kn[ow] if [the] Scotch doe make head any whe ... they pretend to make good ... Antrim, or Lisborn, or Belfast. I sh[all] goe] by sea to Carigfergus to aduertise the ... Antrim of your march, to encourage ... ordred them to bring in what prouisions they could into that garrison. I am ... Lord Galmoy† and Will Nugent ... som foot, hors, and dragoons to fa ... Blany, Hamilton, and Sanderson in the ... of Caun, who rauage all that cunt[re]. As soone as I can find a good officer, among those that are com ouer I w ... a party to reduce Sygo, for I ha[ue] ... enow in Connaught and onely wan[t] h ... I hope to feind. Adieu. I wish you good ...

LORD TALBOT DE MALAHIDE.

"April 3d [1689.

"I THIS morneing had yours of the 23th [which the King read as he does all yours ... and is mightily well satisfied with [what you] doe, but to make all sure he has [sent] Monsieur de Pusiniant,‡ with as many ... as he could to march by the way ... out towards Colraine. You [are to take you]r measures with him; so as to render [yourself] master, I hope, of Colraine [and Lond]onderry, if noe suplys be com [out of Eng-] land of men to suporte them ... whear thear is. The remain[ing] ... regiments goes along with Monsieur ... [as] well as Galmoy's detachment ... more of his regiment, and two ... regiments of foot with that of Newcoms, Kananaghs, and ... so as you will not want for men tho ... officers, for those are not yet com ... expect them and then yow will have them sent donne, f ... officers coming out of France, ... wee have noe more hear. Marcartie's ... regiments are in Corck and ... for the new troopes, I know ... usefull they are, but wee have no ... You must do aswell as you can wi[th] ... I am glad you do not apprehend a ... to meete you in the field, for ... to make are I beleene in D[ublin] ... I wish to God you could with ... and his troopes redu[ce] ... places before any suplys co ... for assure your self they are ... to supply them, and if those ... wear takne, I beleene wee sho ... quiet untill they wear able to ... a force hither as could apar ... which they are not able to doe at p[re]sent.] [I am] glad you have rendred your self ...

LORD MELFORT TO RICHARD HAMILTON.

"SIR, Dublin, April 6th, 1689. "I AM ordered by His Majesty to lett you know that he resolves to sett out from this place on Monday next, and lye that night at Drogheda, and from thence goe streight to joyne his army. I hope the businessse will be over before wee reach you, and in the meane time, with great truth, I am,

"SIR,
"Your most humble servant,
"MELFORT.

"There is news come that Colraine has yielded; but we beleiv it not, as not having it from you. Pray let vs hear from you frequently. Adieu."

TYRCONNELL TO RICHARD HAMILTON.

"Dublin Castle, 11 April, [1689.

"[I rec]eived yours of the 7th just as I ... on horseback in order to forme the ... [regiments] in this province and in Con[naught]. ... I have not time to write myself, [I have ap]pointed some of the forces to render ... [whi]ch expect me, and I would not ... disappoint them. I am extremely ... [wi]ll you doe, and beleive no ... doe more for his Majesties service. ... rebels have quitted Coleraine. ... [Yo]u will soon make an end whi ... great advantage to his Majesties service; ... French officer has his commissi ... [c]ompany of grenadiers lett him ... or

* John O'Molony, Roman Catholic Bishop of Clogher, 1689-1702.

† Piers Butler, third Viscount Galmoy.

‡ M. de Pusignan, chief engineer to army of King James, at Derry.

LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

Watson. Let Pluncket keepe his owne . . . and I will make Pluncket a . . . some other regiment.
. . . See you very soon, and I am euer

"Yours,
"TYRCONNELL.

"[Lieutenant-Generall Ham]lton.

"I will place the French officer in an . . . at the head of a company of granadyers."*

"Dublin Castle, April 27th, 1689.

"There are two French officers with you now in the north called . . . [whilch] his Majestie would haue presently provided for [one is] a captain and the other a lieutenant of foot, and I desire you . . . them accordingly in some of the companies there. (. . . not well enow to wryet to you, but [I cannot] forbear telling you that I . . . pleased when the King . . . to me of you said you wear . . . re and repeated it twyce . . . not forget Sheldon,† and said . . . ood in the world of him. Pray . . . ill health excuse my not wryeting to him. Let me constantly hear from . . . him and you.

"Adien,
"RICHARD."‡)

". . . Hamilton."

"SIR, . . . April [16]89.
"I RETURN you many thanks for the several papers sent me since my arrival here, relating to the army. You gave me others in England which are mislayd. Pray do me the favor to send me copies of them, and the book of the last new exercise, that since the army may coule, and some part of this be commanded into England, I may take order to have them as neer as possible upon one foot with his Majesties forces there.

"I am, Sir,

"Your verry affectionat and humble servant,
"TYRCONNELL."

"[1st May 1689.]

". . . send you at present. Now . . . [t]ell you what will surprise you, that . . . [notwith]standing the ill condition you are in . . . [i]t is the succors I can send or bring . . . little appearance there is of . . . place, that after all this, I . . . [t]o you is something extraordinary . . . but it is thought his Majesty's . . . ballance nothing whear . . . contend.

"Richar[d], I will [not] onely share . . . [f]attig[u]e and hazard with you, but . . . [your]self all the honor I do assure you . . . ly your thoughts upon this whole . . . conure you, and how your men are . . . ar, and what many I must bring . . . [t]hat use, for wee haue not . . . on will discourse at large with . . . Dear Richar[d]."

Addressed: "Lieutenant-Generall . . . Hamilton."
Endorsed: "1 May 1689. Lord Tyrconnell."

LORD MELFORT TO RICHARD HAMILTON.

"SIR, Dublin, 28 May 1689.
"THE King has commanded me to informe you that by a spy wee had in Inshkilling he is informed that the true nombre of armed men consists in 1,500 foot and betwixt nyne [an]dred and a thousand horse, that the [r]able domineres ther, and that provisions and ammunition is scarce with them, that they are much puffed vp with ther success against Sarsceville,§ and that they have built a fort on the top of the hill, which commands the town, which will be finished vs this night; and so soon as that is done they hav so[m]e considerable designe in hand which he could not learne, but you hav reason to be watchfull on your side.

"We are hasting to you all that in our power to send, and I hope you shal' not want. Befor it be long . . . will do your business. The King [ap]proves of the choice of thes two Captains, Watsone and Bezauntine. They shal hav their comissions sent to them. Send officers of all the weak battalions to make recruits of men to fill the regiments. I am,

"SIR,
"Your most obedient servant,
"MELFORT."

"SIR, Dublin, 4 June [16]89.
"A CONSIDERABLE number of officers are sent you, a liste whereof you shall have with the first occasion. There was seives lykeways sent you long agoe, and salpêtre, and all other things requisit for the bombs in abundance, which by this time should have been with you. Wherefor let inquiry be made, that you may get account thereof. In the mean time, that you may not want searvs, I send you three more with this post.

"The Ingenier Generall, Massé, parted from this to day. He could not be sooner dispatcht. He is ane understanding man, and will be very usefull to you. Generall Rose[n]* is gone toward Eniskilling two days agoe with two regiments of foot and five troops of horse. Now that the posts are more regularly established, I hope you'll let us hear mor frequently from you, forwee ar very [im]patient to have some good news of the effects of the bombs and new recents, which with your good conduct can not miss to have a good success. No man wishes it mor both for the King's interest and for your sake than,

"SIR,
"Your most humble servant,
"MELFORT."

"SIR, Dublin Castle, 5 June 1689.

"YOURS I had this morning, but the date was mistaken, being . . . of May, and in answer to it I am commanded by the K[ing] to tell] you that he is resolved to punish the guilt of any who shal . . . so malicious as to send down wrong stores to Derry, especially . . . cannon bullets and fuses for the bombs. All that we could . . . should be sent to you, but the King thinks all will be over before this comes to your hands, seing the ships had appeared befor the wryeting of the last, I hope it is so and well of our . . . Before the letter cam, his Majeste had on Saturday last sent Rosen with two regiments of foot, Sir John FitzGerald's and the Lord Mayor's,† to Trim; with one troop of Gal[moy's] and four of Lutterell, and as many of Abercorne's as [could] march; Oxrough's‡ ten companies lay at Mulengare . . . wait his orders, and Purcell's dragoons are marching with all speed. This is to block up Ineshkilling . . . trabling you or the countrie. Some of thes . . . not able to march, and others hav not armes. So his Maj[estie] has sent the regiment of Clancarty to joyne him tomo[r]row. He is to command Sarsceville's [Sarsfield's] body in case he find it . . . But at present they are marched towards the enemy . . . are come out of Eneshkilling, and we expect dayly . . . Dublin. Pray send us as often news as you can and haste . . . the bearer.

"I am, Sir,
"Your most humble servant,
"MELFORT."

Endorsed: ". . . from Lord Melfort."

"SIR, Dublin, June 7th, 1689.

"I AM heartiely sorry of the misfortunat news your express has brought vs to day. The King does mightiely regrett the loss of so many brave men, but he hopes that will not discourage you. You shall have reliefe and supplies so abundantly that I doubt not for all this but you shall ere long be master of that rebellious toune in spite of its obstinacy, and in case the landing of the English put you in need of any considerable helps, you have only, according to the danger or necessity you see thereof, to advertize Generall Rose[n], who is ordered for this effect to march towards the north with Glancarty's [Glancarty's], Creagh's, and FitzGerald's regiments of foot, Lutterell's regiment of horse, one troop of Galmy's, one troope of Dungan's dragoons, and Purcell's that is to follow him. With these forces, which will be neer you at a call, and the other supplies, we resolve to make heer our chief application to send you with all diligence possible. I hope you shal shortly send vs some better news then those wee received to day. In expectation whereof I only ad that I am your most humble servant,

"MELFORT."

"Dublin, June 28, 1689.

". . . post I had no letter from you, and this is only to . . . actuall account of what is passing where you . . . Wee hope the affaire of Derry is over by this. . . the rebels of Iniskilling are grown so bold upon . . . arrivall of Collonel Sutherland, that they resolved to . . . [mar]ched streight to Derry with their foot by the . . . way, and that their horse should goe by

* This postscript is in Tyrconnell's writing.

† Major-General Sheldon, one of the council of officers of the Duke of Berwick.

‡ The passages within parenthesis are in Tyrconnell's writing.

§ Patrick Sarsfield, created Earl of Lucan by James II.

* M. de Rosen, Lieutenant-General, and subsequently Maréchal de France.

† Sir Michael Creagh, Lord Mayor of Dublin.

‡ Colonel Hewar Oxrough.

LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

LORD TAL-BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

Clounish . . . [whi]ch is the only pass they have on this side of the . . . in their way to Derry; but being advertised that Collonel Sutherland had marched all night to gain that passe . . . for them, they returned streight back again to . . . [Belur]bet, and fell upon a party of the King's . . . horse and 70 dragoons, whom, as we are [info]rmed they forced into the towne. What is become . . . [t]hem since wee cannot tell. The King has sent . . . of Bofin, three troops of horse, and 2 troops . . . [drago]ons, to marche on that side, to endeavour to . . . home. I hope if once Derry be over the . . . of these rebels shall soon be pnt to an end. [I will] add no more only that I am,

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT.

"[Lieutenant Generall Hamilton."

"Sir,

Dublin Cas[tle], ij. july 1689.

"THERS some thing in this matter of Derry we [can]not at this distance understand, but the [tak]ing of it is of such importance to the King [that] nothing can be mor, and therfor I doubt [not] that you will press it all you can, and be[] most assured that thers no relief coming . . . England. They are mor concerned to keep [wha]t they hav ther. The disorders are great and . . . encreasing. Pray send us some good news, [at] least that the folks are working. As for the . . . it was strange that you sent not for . . . to Charlemont, wher ther is fourteen hundred . . . now the King is concerned at it, and that . . . should be alarmed of suckors from . . . and as not to hav gon on so as some . . . you think you might. I shall not [ad] any mor to this, but to assure you that I doubt nothing of your doing all you can . . . my that the King's whole depends vpon it. [At] present I most tell you as a friend not to . . . the French complaine that you doe not . . . ther opinions for it will doe ill . . . I [hope] we shal hav good news of you before the . . . come. Ther are some brogues to be sent d[own] immediately, and mor are constantly [made], and are to be sent by 800 paires at a ti[me]. I am,

"Sir,

"Your most humble [servant],

"MELFORT.

"Lientenant-Generall Hamilton."

"Sir,

Dublin, July 4, 1689.

"THE messenger just now arrived from Dery [bring]s me no letter from you, nor have I gott [tha]t letter he says you wrott to me the day befor . . . parted. Pray, as far as your leasure can permitt, . . . let me heare from you, particularly with . . . occasions. The King is very well satisfi[ed] with all your proceedings, and wee doubt not [but] you shall after all have yet the honour to [fin]ish the business of Dery with succes, and [wi]thout employing any of these extraordinary [m]eans the King has expressly commanded to forbear. [As] for your wants, I assure you all arts shall be employed to supply them as far as the cuntry [under] the circumstances of affaires (which are not [unkn]owen to you) will permitt. I am,

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT."

"Dublin, 17 July 1689.

"[I]Hav received two of yours of the 13 and . . . of the 14th of this instant. I am . . . you are begun to press the town again . . . will be taken by famin; and in . . . seiges ther are mor men lost by . . . than by a vigorous carieng on . . . attaques. I hope you shal see the effect . . . how all the King's affaires depends . . . [thi]s one place, and if you hav the good [fortune] to take it befor the threatned succ[ours] come you will hav an honor that . . . men wold be fond of. However, it will be a satisfacti[on]e to your self to know we] hav left nothing undone that [migh]t hav facilitat[ed] the mater. I doubt [not] of your success, and if the rebels . . . too come to . . . they will mis . . . ther armie. This I hope will be [your] destiny; at least I am perswaded [it] will not be your fault if it . . . we hav sent another great convoy [of] tools and ammunition with . . . bullets of the sizes you wanted. Send orders to hav them brought from [Char]lemont safely for they part from . . ."

"Dublin Castle, 22 July 1689.

"[THE] King's letter is so full that I shal not pretend to . . . If you find it of importance that the seige be . . . the next thing to be considered is to attaque . . . so that one part of the rebels may come . . . er, if another could not.

"Recrutes are of importance least the regiments . . . not be in a conditione to serve, when it comes to [the] p[oi]nt, with one measure, which we are now [threaten]ed with, tho I hope it shal not be of the nature [it is] sayde to be of.

"[I] confess its hard to leav a town so near starved and [of] so much consequence for the King to hav, but if it be so, that mortificatione must be swallowed. [I am] confident you will not leav any thing undone [that] may be for the best to the King's service, and I shal add no mor, but that I am,

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT.

" . . . Spy come from Inshkelling . . . [K]illbeggs, . . . [th]at all the rebels horse wer gon, and that they had . . . in hand."

TYRCONNELL TO RICHARD HAMILTON.

"Kilkenny, April 17th.

"[If you] knew how ill I have been of late, . . . I am woorryed and hurried about [you] wold easily excuse my not haucing of . . . [w]r it so ofttne with my oune hand, . . . assure your self, Richard, that I loue . . . much as ener, and that I will euer do so. . . letters which I send from hence to my Lord . . . you will see what the English squadron . . . [sh]ips doe upon our coast. I am just now go[ing] to W[ate]rford and Duncannon to secure them as we'll as I can, and will goe from thence to . . . Cork and Waterford. Would to God you . . . [r]educe that same Derry which gines us so [much] trouble. Sir William Ellys will tell you the rest. [If] th[is]ear is any thing considerable, I will wreyt . . . wreyt to me constantly under the Bishop [of] Clogher's couer.

"I am yours."

"May 1st, 10 o'clock at night.

"[I received yours] of the 27th last this night, which the King . . . read every word. Hee has ordered all . . . [pos]sible of all things hear to be in . . . [se]nt you two peeces of the great . . . 2 great mortars with bombs . . . all things else necessary for 50 barrells more of powder. . . . cariadges is so hard to com by . . . the stores are so ill provided . . . necessary for you, that I am . . . to see our selues see . . . But I am surprized to . . . [wa]nt men. I thought you had enow . . . [g]arrisones. Tho ill officered, they are . . . any better hear to send you . . . butt such, Macarty's and . . . being both at Cork; but you will hane 20 comp[an]ies of Sir Maurice Eustee's . . . and new armed, but all . . . as well as soldiers. They . . . upon Fryday towards you . . . hane Collonel Richard Butler's . . . tho I fear unclad, and Wee expect the [Fren]ch . . . all things euery moment to . . . you will hane. Henry Dil[lon] . . . and Lord Gallaway's from . . . suppose they can com to you . . . of Bellaghanan from Sly[go] . . . that road is cleere. I pray let me] hear from you as to all those ma[tters] . . . four regiments such as they . . ."

LORD MELFORT TO RICHARD HAMILTON.

"Sir,

"Dublin, 5 J.

"THE King has sent you the comission you d[es]ired to treat with thos in Derry. You are to giv the [m]as little time as you can think best for the King's service, and by all means strive to bring that town [into] the King's hands, for the importance of it is co[n]siderable at this time. I cannot questione you in these matters, and I am sure I never bla[m]ed you for anything that's past. I wish to [God] all others did so by me.

"The accompts from Sarsfeild tell vs [tha]t some] ships hav bein sein at Kilbeg. I am of the . . . more, that it may be some mor English . . . Therfor his Majesty has sent his opinione [to] the Duke of Berwick, to see if he can get . . . Ballishanon to hinder ther uniting with . . . rebels at Inshkelling; but if ther be any . . . that the rebels can get by to reliev De[r]ry, it is not to be hazarded. Sarsfeild is . . . other side of that river, and so could com . . . them with his troops, and then ther wold be a force enough to stop the designs of the rogues, especially if your brother from Kells or Beltrub should go the nearest way to joyne them at ther coming befor Inshkelling. I went no mor to Mr. De Rosen, for it does no good to the King's

LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

LORD TAL-BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

service, and he is constantly in ill humor as to me, and I am not always in humor to bear it.

"If you can get this town, as it is the thing of the greatest importance to have this town from the rebels. I mean Derry, so nothing must be refused them; but if you can get them to deliver upon ill terms for them, you know the worse the terms be, it will be the better for the King. I shall add no more, this being in hast from, Sir,

"Your most humble servant,
"MELFORT."

Endorsed: "About treating with Derry, etc."

TYRCONNELL to RICHARD HAMILTON.

"March 12th.

"... [ha]ue occasion to send Will Nugent ... [C]avan and those places thearabouts ... Sander- son, and the rest of ... ellows his Major a good officer ... his battalion to you I intend to [send Ga]- moy thither to command that [regi]ment which wilbe near you, in case ... any use of him. He will haue ... troops of hors and 3 of drag[oons]. I long to hear from you. Adieu."

Addressed: "For Lieutenant Generall Hamilton."

"Clonmell, Sunday, 17th March.

"... I am com in my way to meete the [King] ... still at Corck, and whear I intend to ... Hear I had two of yours of the ... the other from Hills- [borough] ... I see in the first how you haue got ... Drummore and gaue chase to Blaney's ... you tell me how Hillsborow has beene yeilded ... that Lisbourne has sent to you for a protection ... inten- tion to march thither, etc.: all ... and I doubt not but you wilbe ... Belfast and Antrim before ... Pray forget not Antrim. I haue ... instructions for you but to doe in all ... best to you for the King's seruice ... the place and can better judge ... The great question will be ... of Lisborne, Antrim, and Belfast ... not put all your troops into those ... and proceed no further until the King coms ... and that more forces be sent you to march to ... for I fear when you put in sufficient ... into all those places you will [not] haue sufficient force to attempt anything else [untill] ... [sup]plied, which you shall soone be af[ter] I re[turne] back to Dublin whear I ... 23th of this instant, after all ... [pro]ceed always as you see ca[use] ... you may assure your self I shall ... King, upon this occasion, as well as ... and to my other freinds with you ... Richard. The King has brought ... and all things else wee wanted ... of all that passes."

"... and carriages. The French [have landed] at Bantrey in Kerry, and all ... put theare on shoare already ... are com after them, and are ... [with them, the French are 27 ... fyer ships. The English ... small are 29 ships ... Dongan I will wreyt ... when I am a little better. I ... Quene, the Duke of Berwick ... an ... his ... great deale from me to ... nes. Do not let him be ... [a]t the head, for he will do all ...

"So, Adieu Richar[d]."

"... [de]liverd your letter and Monsieur de ... Pray assure him that I am his ..."

"... no more care of his little person and ... it wilbe impossible to feind horses ... to be euery day shot.

"... this letter againe, to tell you that I had shewed ... the King, who allows you to be much in the ... say, and will do all he can to pay ... [tr]oops in mony; but, beleuee you me, bear is ... mony, and if the King of France will let ... ha[ue] what wilbe necessary, it would be well ... I see little appearance of it for, ... you and me, theare can but fine hun[dred thous[and] livres yet, and thats all gone, ... with all haste sent you the bombs ... are making incessantly ... [or]ders to be sent. You are sure my care ... wanting in euery thing I can, but my ... [gro]ws daylye worse, for nothing but the ill cen ... in, when the King went to you, could haue ... ed him. Adieu."

"... of consequence you should repaire ... your self master of, by which you may ... the[m] a communication betweene your self ... Pusinient, Lord Gal- moy's detachment ... under the conduct of Pusinient, with ... and if any occasion you care for ... regiment you may send for them. [The Duke] of Ber- wick is gon to you and will ... with you as Major-Generall. He ... [m]an in the world. I need not tell you ... how you are to treat him. ... [the] sooner you can reduce those roges ... Lundunderry the better. At the ... always the precautions ne- [cessary in] such cases. I am seneible you want ... [nece]ssaries fitting to take in such places [and what] is yet worse, all sortes of officers, but ... [u]lloe remedy, you must do as well as you can. ... diffi- culties, for you understand you ... you are upon the place and can best ... best to be done. As for your brothers, Anthony and Jack, you ... for their owne sakes as wellas ... [I will] doe by them as if they wear my owne ... Anthony has a regiment and is Brig[adier] and will yery soone be a Major-Generall. Jack has Montjoy's regiment, and I hope ... briga- dyer as soone as Anthony is ... Adieu, Richard. You know how [I love] you and them, and that I will [doe all] in my power for them.

"... Gormonston's, Lord Bellew's, Lord Louth's, Collo[j]nell William Nugent's, and Colonnell Charles Moor's ... should be sent to you, as well for the re- [cruit]ing of that party under your command, [as] for the putting them on a better foot by ... I desire therefore to know as soon as ... [whet]her you think you can sub sist them, and how you doe to sub sist the men you [have a]ready.

"The army being very suddenly to be modelled [I do not] doubt but the disorders committed by the ... [which you] complaine of, will be prevented for the future ... doe what you think most for my ...

"If you know of any one there ... made a Provost Marshall, he shall be ... authorised, as you can desire, in order to ... those disorders in the country. If y[ou] know of] such a man send up his name, and he sha[ll] have a] commission and a sufficient number ... [to at]tend him. Adieu, Richard. Remember [me to] Lord Dongan and Sheldon. I will au[sw]er ... letters as soone as I can, for you ... little time I haue when I make use of ... hand. I doe not forget my freinds the'."

Addressed: "For Lieutenant-Generall Hamilton."

"... que nous prenens en ce qui me regarde, d'une maniere bien sensible dans nostre derniere lettre. Je nay jamais douté de vostre tendresse, mon cher frere, et rien ne me fait tant de peine que le peu d'apparence qu'il y a que nous nous uoyons bien tost.

"Monsieur Le Duc uient de recevoir des ordres du Roy de pourvoir autant qu'il seroit possible aux fourages et uiures necessaires pour la subsistance de nos troupes. Il enuoye pour cet effet ordre aux lieux ... que [si] cela ne f[ut] p[ar]a[is]sant, il ordonnera d'en embarquer icy sur les vaisseaux qui se trouueront pour se rendre par mer dans l'un des endroits les plus proches de [Cole]rayne, a scauoir, par [Port]rush, qui n'en est que deux ou trois mils, ou Ballyntaye qui en est a quatre ou cinq. C'est pourquoi il nous mande d'enuoyer saisir ces deux petits ports pour la securité du debarquement de ces provisions, et de luy donner auis, en toute diligence, de nostre ... pas praticable a cause des ... entrés, il ne tentera pas cette noye la. Il fant donc mander vos sentimens sur cecy en toute [d]il[ig]ence, d'autant qu'il n'ordonnera rien pour le depart des uaisseaux, ... jusqu'a ce qu'il ast de nos nouvelles. Mr. ... partira ... de Waterfort selon les ordres qu'on luy ... enuoye ce soir, avec les bombardiers et munitions, pour se rendre au nord comme Mr. L' ... eresse ... tanne et Lundy, et les tanter par les termes les plus raisonnables que l'on pourra leur accorder, d'autant que le Roy a dessein d'en user a ses ... Adieu, dear Richard. Tell [Don]gan and Sheldon that I haue not writ to you all this while, and then they will not wonder I haue not writ to them. Au reste, I haue noe more to say, but that I would faine haue those two darnde places, Derry and Colrainne, as soone con- founded as you could. Wee haue nothing out of Eng- land a great while. They are in confusion thear, yet [not so] ... as to com to any rupture for ... out the common enemye."

MELFORT to RICHARD HAMILTON.

"Sir, "I HAV so well obeyed your commands that the greatest part of what Mr. De Pointis ordered in his memoriall is sent down to you this night. I could not get the particulars, they wer so busie sending the rest of the powder, ball, and match, which wanted to make up the total of what was desired. Two great guns of 18 or 24 are sent to you, with one morterpiece of 12 or 14 inches diameter, and 100 bom ... 20 mor sent too. need d ... shall haue enough. But it was

LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

LORD TAL-BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

not practicable to send mor morterpeices at one time. If you require them after this comes to your hand, they shall be sent. One thing I most put you in mynd of which is imploying the smal morterpeices in throwing stones into the toune. The ingenier will explaine this at lenith. As for regiments, besides Gordon Oneil, and Cavanagh, you hav what was with Bohune to witt, Tool and Cormock Oneil. You hav 20 companys of Sir Morrice Eustace, clothed and armed at 43 musquets and 22 pikes in a companie. You hav the rest of Slane neu armed, Richard Butler neu armed and clothed, the rest of Ed. Butler armed and clothed, and the regiment of Dillon well armed coming from Sleigo. And thus we hav done all that was possible for us in this conjuncture. If you neid any thing mor, send us word. In the mean time, we hav sent you 1,000 musquets to be given amongst the men you hav ther, and as soon as mor of them comes to this place they shal be sent. I must tell you that ther are 9 men-of-war in the Irish Channell bound for the coast of Scotland, and from thence to Derry. It wer good to spoil this designe. Be [this] as it will, I am convinced you doe all that possible for you, and I hope you will . . . that I am,

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT."

"Lieutenant-Generall Hamilton."

"Sir,

"THE King haueing written to you himselfe by poste, gives me the occasion of saying the less. I would to God there were anything to be don here for the better carrying on your affaires there. I am extremely sorry for the loss of the officers. Pray lett vs know if phycicians or chirurgeons or any other thing be wanting to them, in the condition they are in, that wee may endeavour all wee can to helpe them out of this with the forces that are to march to-morrow, wee intend to send you more powder, ball, match, and bombs of all the seizes you hav morters for. Wee are here in much anxiety to know what will become of those English succors. If they may be kept off 'till more of our forces doe retch you, wee doe not feare the success. Since there is noboddy can wish you better, I doe not doubt but you belive I am most sincerely,

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT."

"Lieutenant-Generall Hamilton."

"I am somewhat surprised at a neus just come by one Bussabat, a French officer, returned indisposed this night from Trim from Lieutenant-General Rosen. He says that 12 miles from Trim be heard above 30 volies of cannon and musquet, which, if true, must have been Rosen against the rebells of Ineshkeling, since he had canon with him 4 peices. We are impatient for the truth of this actione."

"Sir,

"I AM commanded by the King to informe you that this night there is an express come from Scotland by which his Majesty is informed that ther was a general randenous of his frends in Loughabre the 18 instant, by order of the Lord Dundee, and that hee was supposed to be 8,000 strong, all foot except 200 horse; that McKay was gon against them, and that it was thought ther wold be a batle, the Highlanders being most resolute, that McKay had but feu men with him, and that the countrie was most inclined to the King; that the seige of the castle was reased, and the castle againe provided of all things by the toune, who are most affectionate to the King. Some English horse are entered Scotland, especially Lord Colchester's regiment was at Stirling, and we hope al on that side shal go well.

"His Majesty has lykeways commanded me to put you in mynd of what he wrott yesternight. In case the English come to land at Derry, and that you find it is not possible to hinder it from being releived, you are to retire behind Fin water, and to drive all the catle and destroy all things which can be helpfull to the rebells within the wate[rs] of Fin, which encompasseth that cou[ntry] wher Derry stands, and that you be sure to stop the passages betwixt Eneshkeling and Derry, that so the King may hav the opportunity to take Eneshkeling behind you. As the King has said to you in his letter, His Majesty has taken care that you shal be provided of at . . . at the campe, and if you remoue after ha[ving] done all that for his service possible at Derry to the posts of Straban and Fin-water, etc., he has ordered ther shal be provisions ready for you everywher, his Majesty having made the bargains for that end with men come from France, who understande it. After to-morrow parts the French officers, and Engenier, and all that Mr. Pointis has desired. I shal not give you mor trouble.

I 120.

LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT."

"My most humble service to D[uke] of Berwick and Mr. Fitz James."

"Sir,

"THIS night we hav neus from Eneshkeling [that the] rebells hav come this way and hav taken some . . . possessed by the Raparies, or, which is worse, thes troops the [Duke] of Tyreconnel had ordered to disband. They hav come . . . Cavan after they had bein at Beltrubart, and [if the] messenger's fear has not blinded him, he thinks [he] saw them entering the toune of Cavan. The . . . is draining some troops that way, and [will hence] forward keip them mor in then heartofore. Ther has come some swords and mansquets hither [to]night, which we intend to send forwards to you to-morrow, namely, 800 swords and 1,000 musquets, together with some powder and ball mor, and shal not leav sending to you till you be suff[iciently] provided of all you want. We hear from y[ou so] seldome that we are often in paine. Pray wre[ite] oftner, since the King has ordered the posts [to be] supplied with horses or foot posts. I wr[ite] in so good companie that you are . . . for this letter than for any other I hav [writt]en this long time, which is my Lady Rosse [and] hir sister, who are in good health. Present [my] most humble service to the Duke of Ber[wick] and his brother, and to your self beleiv I am most sincerely,

"Sir,

"Your most humble servant,

"MELFORT."

Addressed: "For His Majesties special service. To Lieutenant Generall Hamilton, commanding His Majesties forces before Derry."

"MELFORT."

THE account of the private estate of James II. in Ireland is in octavo form. It was compiled, apparently, for official purposes in 1693, and is as follows:

"Private Estate.

"An abstract of the rents of the private estate, as the same were sett (by lease or contract) by the Commissioners appointed by his then Highness, James, Duke of York.

"Grosse Annual Rent.

| | £ | s. | d. |
|------------------------------|---|--------|------|
| "County of Dublin, per annum | - | 1,376 | 3 6½ |
| "County of Meath | - | 1,166 | 11 1 |
| "Westmeath | - | 693 | 2 3 |
| "Kildare | - | 853 | 9 2 |
| "Catherlogh | - | 58 | 0 0 |
| "King's County | - | 35 | 12 0 |
| "Kilkenny | - | 497 | 2 6 |
| "Wexford | - | 20 | 0 0 |
| "Tipperary | - | 772 | 19 8 |
| "Limerick | - | 1,514 | 8 0 |
| "Cork | - | 1,006 | 19 0 |
| "Galway | - | 385 | 19 4 |
| "Roscomon | - | 196 | 3 5½ |
| "Downe | - | 81 | 14 6 |
| "Antrim | - | 60 | 0 0 |
| "Londonderry | - | 8 | 15 0 |
| Total | - | £8,726 | 19 6 |

"Whereout deduct for allowances made the tenants for deficiency of acres and other deductions made in the rent roll, and also abatements given to Sir Edward Tyrrell, Colonel Blunt, and others . . . 1,050 15 4½

Remains - £7,676 4 1½

"For of this estate the Duke of York gave absolutely away to the Earle of Carlingford, the Earle of Anglesey, Earle of Tyreconell, Lord Dartmouth, Sir Allen Broderick, and Sir Luke Bath, what was in value, per annum . . . 4,500 0 0

3 R

LORD TAL-BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

"And it was a necessary query at the forfeiture of Tyrcconnell, whether that part ought not to have returned to that estate againe, but now it is most of it granted away to the Lord Sidney.

"Of the 7,676*l.* 4*s.* 1½*d.* now remaining in charge by the rent roll before mentioned there is given away to the Lady Bellasys* by the security of the lands in the counties of Dublin, Meath, and Roscommon, per annum

£ s. d.
2,000 0 0

"There is also granted to Mrs. Godfrey, secured on Munster rents, per annum, about

£ s. d.
1,200 0 0

"These grants were not entred in Ireland, but kept private in England, so that there may be other grants unknowne to us here, for they were paid in England out of the rents returned over.

"So that, then, there would remaine to be collected only

£ s. d.
4,476 4 1½

"But, with regard to the following considerations, it will be some years before this estate come to any settlement, or answer the reserved rents upon their leases, for all the improvements are destroyed, and some lands are quite wast, the tenants not returning to their former holdings, some part also are since given away.

"County Dublin.

"Land in Ballymore Eustace, wast, the tennants all dead, per annum

£ s. d.
21 0 0

Corstowne, lost by the death of old Eustace of Conif, for the Duke had it only dureing his life

£ s. d.
25 16 0

Damastowne and Macetowne, lost by the same meanes

£ s. d.
75 0 0

"County Meath.

"Lands in barony of Slane, in one lease

£ s. d.
61 8 0

In the same

£ s. d.
36 8 6

In the same

£ s. d.
18 6 8

In the same

£ s. d.
45 0 0

In the same

£ s. d.
3 0 0£ s. d.
285 19 2

"All this past to the Earle of Athlone by grant.
Oristowne never enjoy'd

£ s. d.
10 0 0

"County Westmeath.

"Lands sett to the forfeiting persons, which are now wast, as to Sir
Edward Tyrrell, Edmund Nugent,
Colonel Tuit, Garrett Dooner, Sir
John Fleming, and Lieutenant-Colonel Nangle, per annum

£ s. d.
277 15 0

"County Tipperary.

"Drumansallagh and other lands,
sett to one White and Minchin, not in possession, per annum

£ s. d.
70 0 0

John Brayes' holding, not in possession

£ s. d.
50 0 0£ s. d.
£693 14 2

"County of Limbrick, wast. County of Golway, most of these lands wast. And the greatest part of the county of Corke.

"And in these three counties these following tennants are either such as are now in France, or such as are not restorable to their leases, being chattels, or such as are dead and no one claims under them, and by this meanes the lands lye wast.

"Brought over

£ s. d.
693 14 2

County Limbrick.

"Richard Southwell, per annum

£ s. d.
60 0 0

Colonel Blunt

£ s. d.
230 0 0

Fran. Sarsfield

£ s. d.
80 0 0

Lord Castleconnell

£ s. d.
83 0 0

Jo. Dixon

£ s. d.
90 0 0

Edward Warr

£ s. d.
120 0 0

William Bourk

£ s. d.
12 7 6

"County Corke.

"Edmund Barry, per annum

£ s. d.
112 0 0

"County Galway.

"Lord Athenree

£ s. d.
50 0 0

Lady Ann Bourk

£ s. d.
10 0 0

James Browne

£ s. d.
7 10 0

And Lord Massareen's pretencion in county of Antrim, detains, per annum

£ s. d.
60 0 0£ s. d.
1,608 11 8

"So that, besides the generall wast, this summe cannot be reckoned upon.

"And then there will remaine of the 4,476*l.* 4*s.* 1½*d.* only the summe
of

£ s. d.
2,867 12 5½

"As to the arreares due out of this estate, the case stands as followeth:—

£ s. d.

"When the Receiver-Generall, Mr.
Price, was call'd to account by the Lord Tyrcconnell before the troubles to make way for the French Receivors Generall to come in, there appeared to be in his hands of the rents of the private estate, the summe of

£ s. d.
4,984 8 1

"For this summe he accounted before the Lords of their Majesties' Treasury in England.

"There was received by the said
French Receivors Generall before the disposition of this estate to the old proprietors, which was disposed of by the Lord Tyrcconnell to carry on his then designs

£ s. d.
3,000 0 0

"But when the whole estate was restored to the old proprietors he caus'd the whole arrears to be computed to May Day, 1689, inclusive, which did amount unto the summe of

£ s. d.
-15,313 8 9

"This arrear he divided into the severall countys where the same was due, and sent the severall abstracts thereof to their then collectors abroad, with directions to take it up in wooll, tallow, tann'd leather, raw hides, corne, butter, cheese, hay, or any commodity fitt to send to France, to pay for armes and ammunition sent from thence for the supply of their army.

"So that there can be no part of that arrear reckoned upon, for in the accounting with the tenants of those lands assigned to the Lady Bellasys, it is found to have been received by the collectors.

"From May Day, 1689, to the Breach at the Boyue in July 1690, the old proprietors enjoy'd all these lands, being restored to the possession thereof by the Parliament held here [Dublin] by the late King James.

"So that those lands (of this estate) which can yeild anything of arrears of rent, are for the three yeares ended May Day, 1693, last.

"And out of them are to be deducted the rents of the counties of Limbrick, Galway, Tipperary, King's County, Westmeath, and a good parte of the county of Corke, unto the 1st of November 1691, the time of the Rendition of Limbrick, and for a yeare after untill All Saints, 1692, nothing can be expected from those counties except one half yeare's rent where the lands are made use of.

"The counties of Kildare and Kilkenny, and those other small rents in some other counties, will have one year and a half allow'd them of those three yeares, and some more, according to their sufferings; besides, they do expect to be allowed out of the rest for what credit they have given the army in their respective quarters, which cannot be deny'd them.

"And untill all these matters can be ascertained, no estimate can be made what the arrear will be.

* This item may be explained by the following extract from Bishop Burnet:—"The Duke of York" was now [1675] looking for another wife. He made addresses to the Lady Bellasys, the widow of the Lord Bellasys's son. . . . The King sent for the Duke, and told him it was too much that he had played the fool once; that was not to be done a second time, and at such an age. The lady was also so throat-ened, that she gave up the promise, but kept an attested copy of it, as she herself told me."—"History of his own time," Oxford, 1833, ii. 15.

LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

"For the Lady Bellasys will not recover a fourth part of what is in arrear of her annuity of 2,000*l.* per annum from the lands assigned to her; and if the counties of Dublin and Meath fall so far short, what will remoter counties do, where the lands are not posses't.

| | |
|---|--------------------|
| "There will by mannagement be some addition made to this revenue, for the deficiency of the grants past to the Duke, besides, upon the Lady Brittas, her death, and by some other means, there may by further prosecution be recovered about, per annum - | £ s. d. 200 0 0 |
|---|--------------------|

"But I am of opinion that if this whole estate were out of lease now, it could not be sett to that height it was at first, nor would be so for some years to come.

"The severall grants made by his then Highness, the Duke of York, were worth as followeth:—

| | |
|----------------------------------|--------------------|
| "Lord Carlingford's, per annum | £ s. d. 800 0 0 |
| Lord Anglesey's, per annum | 1,000 0 0 |
| Lord Tircconnell's, per annum | 1,000 0 0 |
| Lord Dartmouth's, per annum | 700 0 0 |
| Sir Allen Broderick's, per annum | 600 0 0 |
| Sir Luke Bath | 400 0 0 |

"The Lord Tircconnell's grants were:—

"County of Dublin.

| | |
|--------------|-------------|
| "Balgriffin. | Ratheredan. |
| Calestowne. | Athgoe. |

"County of Meath.

| | |
|---------------|----------------------|
| "Newhaggard. | Taragh. |
| Bellewstowne. | Treuet. |
| Adamstowne. | Brick. |
| Cabragh. | Both Cannons Townes. |

"Observations made upon Sir William Talbot's accounts, who for many years managed the private estate.

| | |
|---|--------------------------------------|
| "In his accounts past, to All Saints, 1684, he brought in charge for expenses at law, which made the recovery of any deficiency of land dearer than if they had been wholly purchased - | £ s. d. 5,522 17 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ |
|---|--------------------------------------|

| | |
|---|------------|
| "Hee also brought in charge for that which he called poundage - | 4,043 16 3 |
|---|------------|

"This he reckon'd att 12*d.* per pound for receiving all rents in remoter countys, and 9*d.* per pound for nearer counties, which was an extravagant charge, considering he had a salary paid him quarterly of 500*l.* per annum.

| | |
|--|----------------------|
| "He also brought in charge for contingencies - | £ s. d. 1,439 6 8 |
|--|----------------------|

"Whereof above 900*l.* was for journeys. For he ridd not 20 miles but reckoned 30*s.* per diem.

"Yet all these demands by the interest of his uncle, the Lord Tyrconnell, were admitted into the discharge part of his account.

| | |
|---|-------------------------------------|
| "And he found in arrear due to the late King James which he had spent - | £ s. d. 8,676 12 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ |
|---|-------------------------------------|

"Of which he never paid any part, but by the favour of the said King James to his said uncle, Tyrconnell, he was continued to receive his pension of 500*l.* out of that estate.

"It is true Sir William Talbot had not any considerable estate, but something he had, and his Lady does now enjoy such part as was settled upon her. Why should not his estate, now forfeited to their Majesties, be made lyeable to this debt, and why may not the persons concern'd begg that estate from their Majesties, as lyeable to that debt. The Lor Tyrconnell himselfe was concern'd as counter-security for Sir William in this employment."

The estates of James II. in Ireland had, it may be observed, been granted to him under the Act of Settlement in 1663, when he was Duke of York. They consisted of lands held by the adherents of Cromwell, under whose government they had been confiscated from the Irish proprietors.

Villa Nova, Blackrock,
Dublin, 8 November, 1880.

JOHN T. GILBERT.

APPENDIX.

EXEMPLIFICATION OF ACT OF PARLIAMENT AT TRIM,
A.D. 1447.LORD TAL-
BOT DE
MALAHIDE.

"Henricus, Dei gracia, Rex Anglie et Francie et Dominus Hibernie. Omnibus ad quos presentes littere pervenerint, salutem.

Inspeximus quoddam actum in quodam Parlamento nostro apud Trym, coram dilecto et fideli consanguineo nostro, Iohanne Comite Salopie, locum nostrum tenente terre Hibernie, die Veneris, proximo post festum Epiphanie Domini, ultimo preterito, tento et ibidem finito et terminato, inter alia in eodem Parlamento nostro, ad requisicionem communium terre nostre Hibernie in predicto Parlamento existencium. et in cancellariam nostram Hibernie missum et ibidem de recordo remanens [sic] in hec verba.

"Item al requisicion des communes, pur ceo que diners offensez ouert [oblit.] accuscmentes de dyuers [oblit.] et disobeyssances enners les leyz roials . . . commandemens et peas faitz par Michell Gryffyn, a tres-grande lesion et hindrance du Roy et son liege peple [oblit.], ensample donnant a tountz [oblit.] en apres Ordeine est et accorde, par auctorite dicest present Parlement, que proclamation [oblit.] fait en plein Parlement, que le dit Michell viegne et appiere en sa propre persone devant le Roy, en son chief lien dirland, deuant ses justices du dit place, en la fest de seint Valentyn [oblit.] proscheyne ensuant, en quelconque lieu qil soit al dit temps. Et si le dit Michell ne appiere al dit ioure, ne dedein, en le fourne auantdit, que adonques touts ses biens, chatels, teres, rentes, tenementes, possessions, serucces, fees et annuites, ouesque les appartenantz a luy pertenauntz et expectauntz, ou que aucun autre home ad a son use, soient seiseiz en les mayns du Roy, illesques a demorer iesques al temps qil viegne et appiere devant le Roy et ses dits juges en le dit lieu.

"Nos autem actum predictum, ad requisicionem Johannis Cornewalshe, Capitalis Baronis Scaccarii nostri Hibernie, tenore presentium duximus exemplificandum.

In cuius rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste, prefato locum nostrum tenente. Apud Dublin, decimo nono die Maii, anno regni nostri vicesimo quinto.

WOGAN.

"Ex: Per Hgonem Wogan et Thomam Veldon, clericos."

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF ORMONDE, KILKENNY CASTLE.MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

Among the important documents of the 17th century, preserved in these archives, there are few of higher general historical value than the Petitions presented to the Duke of Ormonde, as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the years immediately succeeding the Restoration of Charles II. These Petitions were from persons of all classes, and they referred to diverse and multifarious matters.

While abounding in details which illustrate the social condition as well as the governmental arrangements of the country, they also supply authentic historical, biographical, and genealogical information, generally in a concise form, unincumbered with the obscure technicalities and tedious verbiage of old legal documents. The character of these Petitions is exhibited in the following Calendar, which I have prepared from a contemporary and hitherto unpublished Register of them, extending from 1662 to 1664. Some portions of this Register have unfortunately perished from decay,* but the greater part of it is in good condition. From an entry in it under date of 26th June 1663, we learn that there was an earlier Register of these documents which, however, does not appear to be now extant in this collection. The Petitions in general are undated, and the day here appended to each is that on which the Vice-regal order was made in relation to it.

A considerable number of the Petitions refer to the arrangements concerning landed estates, in progress at the time under the Act of Parliament then recently passed "for the better execution of his Majesty's gracious Declaration for the Settling of his Kingdom of Ireland." Many of the applications are for "custodiams," or temporary grants from the Crown; and various

* These portions are in this Calendar indicated thus—

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

entries are to be found in the Register which illustrate the modes of dealing with the claims of individuals under the Act of Settlement, as well as with those of the agents of the "Adventurers," and the Trustees of the officers who had served in the King's army in Ireland before the 5th of June, 1649.

In the Register there is no classification of the petitioners; but they may be regarded as coming generally under the three following heads:—

I. Petitioners claiming consideration for the sufferings and losses of themselves or their relatives, in the cause of Charles I. and his son. Amongst these were many surviving Royalists, as well as representatives of others who had fallen in battle, or who had served the King on the Continent. Others had been deprived of their estates and transplanted to Connacht, under the Commonwealth.

II. Petitioners for military and other appointments; for redress against individuals, for patent rights, and for licenses to carry on trade.

III. Petitioners for release from prison and for pardon from sentence of death. In this class are some unique and hitherto unknown documents relative to persons connected with the Republican Plot against the Duke of Ormonde and the Government of Charles II. in Ireland, in 1663.

In the first class the following may be noticed:—

Sir Edward FitzGerald, Knight and Baronet, commanded a regiment of foot under Ormonde and raised a second regiment for the King, in the advancement of whose service he impaired his property in the county of Limerick. After the King's Restoration, he was, nevertheless, kept out of his estates there, and reduced to so sad a condition, that he petitioned to be allowed to enjoy even one plough-land of them for his livelihood and support, till his claim should be tried in court.

Thomas Wright, reduced to a very low and necessitous condition, petitioned for remuneration for his services in having built, manned, and maintained a frigate under warrant from the President of Munster, but without any supply or assistance from the State. Wright represented that he and his men had damnedified, annoyed, and destroyed the Rebels, and aided and preserved the English.

Colonel James Walsb, Lieutenant of the Ordnance from 1646 to 1652, and Governor of the last Royalist garrison which surrendered in Ireland, implored to be recommended for a farm at an easy rent, having no other way for a livelihood. He alleged that he had not received any remuneration for his services; that his money and stock had been exhausted in the King's cause, and that he and his wife and children were reduced to a famishing condition.

Captain Terence Molloy, of the Guard of the Duke of York, and Captain Arthur Molloy, prayed for permission to enter their claims to their estates before the Commissioners for executing the Act of Settlement, which they had been previously unable to do, owing to their absence from Ireland. Terence Molloy had served Charles II. abroad, and Arthur Molloy had been a Captain for eight or nine years under his Majesty, who, in his Declaration, specially named him for restoration to his estate.

James FitzSimons served the King in foreign countries, and suffered five years' slavery in Barbadoes, having been sold and sent thither by the Cromwellians, who took him in one of his Majesty's frigates. On being released from slavery, with many other Cavaliers, his fellow-sufferers, FitzSimons was enlisted in the royal regiment. His father, Christopher, claimant to a considerable estate, died before the trial of his claim, and the petitioner, reduced to poverty, had no means to prosecute his suit but in forma pauperis.

Ulick Wall, whose ancestors had been, time out of mind, fee-farmers to the House of Ormonde for lands in the county of Carlow, offered to submit his claims on an estate to the decision of the Duke of Ormonde. His father, Edward Wall, for adhering to Ormonde, had, it was alleged, been excommunicated and imprisoned by the party of the Nuncio and Owen O'Neill, and was subsequently kept in durance by the Cromwellians, "to the utter destruction of his orphans." Sir Thomas Blake also represented the eminent sufferings entailed upon his father, Sir Valentine Blake, Knight and Baronet, by his adherence to the authority of the King against the Nuncio and his party.

Thomas Harley petitioned for an order to enable him to bring from Wexford timber which he had purchased for the King's use, but was prevented by persons who frightened his workmen and carriers. He had faithfully served Charles I. in England and Ireland, with the loss of blood, limbs, liberty, and estate; and several considerable sums were due to him for materials of war which he had provided for the King's use at the beginning of the wars in Ireland.

Elizabeth Brough petitioned for payment of the arrears due to her late husband, Lieutenant Martin Brough, who had been sergeant to the Earl of Strafford's guard of Hallerdiere, and had afterwards served the King in England as Lieutenant till the royal army was destroyed, after which he entered in the troop commanded by Major Meredith and Lord Berkeley. The petitioner prayed for commiseration for the sad and wanting condition of herself and her three very small children, who were undoubtedly like to perish, as they had no support but the small arrears due to her late husband.

Walter Staplehill petitioned that his relative, John Kellan, might be admitted to serve in the troop of the Lord President of Connacht. This he applied for in consideration of the losses which he had sustained in the year 1646, when his ship, ready laden in the port of Dublin and bound for the Canaries, was commanded to transport Government Commissioners to England, and was subsequently lost; for which he had never received compensation.

Edward Braxton, who had been wounded while serving in Ormonde's Life Guard in the engagement at Rathmines in 1649, petitioned for employment in the Customs or admission to the army.

Colonel Teige Bryan petitioned for a custodiam of lands "concealed" from the Crown. Since he was capable of bearing arms, he served the King both in Ireland and Flanders; went as a volunteer in the first expedition to Tangier, and remained there during the Earl of Peterborough's government. Having returned to his native country, he patiently awaited his Majesty's favour for his restoration to his ancestor's estate, but was reduced to a low condition and extremity for want of subsistence.

Thomas Finglas, burthened with a family and reduced to extreme poverty, petitioned for a temporary subsistence, pending adjudication on his claim to the estate of his brother, Lieutenant-Colonel John Finglas, who was killed at the siege of Drogheda in 1649, and to whom petitioner was heir and next in blood. The loss and behaviour of Lieutenant-Colonel Finglas in his Majesty's service needed, according to the petitioner, no other testimony than the knowledge of them possessed by the Duke of Ormonde.*

Sir Maurice Hurly, who had been transplanted into Connacht, obtained from Ormonde respite from payment of rent of a manor there belonging to the Duke, in consideration of the petitioner's disability, and the delay in the hearing of his claim in court.

Luke Dowdall, of Athlumney, in the county of Meath, whose father had been transplanted into Connacht, prayed for an order to stop an injunction to put Sir John Deviller into possession of his estate under an erroneous grant from the Crown.

John Comerford, dispossessed of his estate by "the late usurped power," and forced to live in Connacht, where he received no lands but lived in a distressed condition with his wife and family till, on the King's restoration, he came to Leinster to be relieved among his friends. His ancient inheritance in Kilkenny had been distributed among soldiers, who recently had the lands measured to ascertain the particulars of their lots. It then appeared that there were about 200 acres of coarse mountain land over and above the lots. Some of the soldiers pitying the petitioner's distressed condition sent for him, and "with their good liking and consent," he entered on these parcels of mountain land, built cabins, and lived there without interruption. He petitioned for a grant of a custodiam of the lands at a small rent, as for want of means he was unable to prosecute his claim, and if he should be driven from his then abode he could have no place of residence.

Anne Sherlock, mother of the late Sir John Sherlock, was expelled by "the late usurped power" from her lands in Kildare; forced to transplant into Connacht, and to accept of a decree for an inconsiderable parcel of Viscount Dillon's estate, from which she was evicted by the Commissioners for the Act of Settlement. Her own original lands having come into the King's hands, she petitioned for their restoration or for competent maintenance, as she was destitute of all livelihood for herself and her distressed charge, and should inevitably perish unless his Grace in mercy commiserated her.

* John Finglas was one of the Royalist officers in the garrison under Sir Arthur Aston, at Drogheda, in 1649. Notices of Colonel Finglas and his services in the Irish wars will be found in the first and second volumes of "A Contemporary History of Affairs of Ireland 1641-62." London: B. Quaritch, 1879-80.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

Dame Eleanor O'Neill, wife of Sir Henry O'Neill, petitioned for a warrant for payment of the pension due to her husband, whom the King had ordered to be restored to part of his estate. They were reduced to a sad condition by the great expense of their suit and the loss of much land in Connacht.

Katherine Wogan petitioned that a custodiam of portion of her late husband's estate in the county of Kildare, at a rent of 40*l.* a year, might be continued to her. This custodiam, she stated, was the only support she had for herself and children. To take it from them, would tend to their utter ruin, as she had not bread to feed them, nor other earthly subsistence, nor wherewith to pay for their lodging or schooling, so that unless his Grace in mercy speedily relieved her and them they should utterly perish.

Martha Hartpoole, widow, petitioned as follows:—

"That yppon the petitioner's application to his sacred Majestie, in anno 1660, setting forth the fidelity and loyalty of Robert Hartpoole of Shrule, in the Queen's county, Esquire, (father vnto the petitioner's last husband, Captain William Hartpoole,) who was killed at the storming of the town of Drogheda by the forces commanded by the late usurper Oliver Cromwell. And also your Grace's petitioner's late husband was barbarously murdered by the late tyrant and regicide, Colonel Axtell,* besides the great sufferings of your petitioner and her son, Robert Hartpoole, the younger, in the Usurped Government. Yppon all which his Majestie was graciously pleased by his several letters and orders to the late Lords Justices directed, that they should putt your petitioner and her said son into the possession of their estates. Which said letters and orders are remaineing in the custody of your Grace's Secretary; the benefit of which said letters and orders your petitioner hath not as yett obtained, soe that thereby both shee and her children are reduced to a very low condition, not haneing wherewithall to relieve them. But soe it is, may it please your Grace, that forasmuch as the annexed parcells of lands are not disposed of either to Souldiers or Adventurers, and are concealed, not paying or yielding any benefit to his Majestie, and being formerly part of the inheritance of your petitioner's said late husband. Your petitioner, therefore, most humbly prays that your Grace willbe pleased to grant your warrant to the Lord Chiefe Baron of His Majestie's Court of Exchequer to grant a custodiam vnto Collonell Thomas Piggott for your petitioner's vse of the lands in the annexed schedule att an easy rent, whereby she may be the better inabled to maintaine herselfe and poore fatherless children. And she and they shall pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 5 May 1663.

"If it shall appeare vnto our very good Lord the Lord Chiefe Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands within mencioned are in his Majestie's dispose, wee pray and require them to issue a custodiam thereof to the petitioner, during his Majestie's pleasure, att such rent as they shall thinke fit.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas, Lord Viscount Dillon of Costello, petitioned for delay of process for payment of the quit-rent fixed on his estate, to which he had been recently restored, as the whole value of the lands would ar'dly defray the charge.

A petition of 1663 refers to Thomas Wyc, of Waterford, who claimed one hundred and one houses in that city. In opposition to his claim, he is stated to have been an eminent and active adherent of the Nuncio, Rinuccini, and "a violent prosecutor of the war, and "opposer of the peace, as was very well known to "many persons of quality."

The petitions connected with lands include applications from the following: Arthur, Earl of Anglesey; Rose, Marchioness of Antrim; Theobald, Earl of Carlingford; Anne, Marchioness of Clanricarde; Lord Grandison; Wentworth Fitzgerald, Earl of Kildare; Wentworth Dillon, Earl of Roscommon; Viscount Massareene; Lord Netterville; James Margetson, Archbishop of Dublin; William Bailly, Bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh; Michael Boyle, Bishop of Cork; Edward Worth, Bishop of Killaloe; Robert Maxwell, Bishop of Kilmore and Ardagh; Thomas Seale, Provost of Trinity College, Dublin; Sir Christopher Aylmer and Gerald Aylmer, of Balrath; Sir Richard Barnewall, Sir Thomas Blake and Sir Valentine Blake, Baronets; Sir Arthur Forbes; Colonel John Fitzpatrick, Erasmus Smyth, John Talbot, of Malahide, Major Owen O'Connor, Colonel Daniel O'Neill, and the officers and soldiers of the Earl of Orrery's troop. The latter complained that the lands assigned to them for their arrears were in the most remote and barren part of Kerry, and that the quit-rent on them was heavy and insupportable, to the utter ruin of themselves and their families. They should therefore, unless relieved, give up those lands, as not being worth his Majesty's full quit-rent.

Among the miscellaneous class may be mentioned petitions from and relative to James Fountaine, Surgeon-General in Ireland; Patrick Sarsfield of Tully, in the county of Kildare; Colonel Henry Pritty; Lady Derenzie; William Bladen, King's Printer; the orphans of Owen O'Connolly, and the nieces of Sir James Ware. Dame Margaret Bolton, widow of Sir Richard Bolton, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, petitioned for the arrears due to her late husband, "to disburden the very heavy "weight of necessities want," under which she suffered. Sir George Lane petitioned for remuneration for his services as Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and Secretary for the affairs of the army. Lane states "that he had taken great pains and had been at charges "concerning the public affairs of the kingdom and of "the army, and other things for his Majesty's service, "about which he has been and daily is at continual "labour, by writing letters and warrants, and hath also "been at charges in providing and fitting rooms and "other necessities for his office, for all which he has "not yet received any satisfaction or allowance."

The miscellaneous petitions also comprise applications in reference to Dublin Castle; "the new Deer Park;" the castle of Templeogue; the cutting down of woods; permission to bear fire-arms; to go abroad, to take remedies at law; for release from illegal arrest; encroachments on the rights of farmers of the licences for wines and strong or "hot" waters; and fines for using "short ploughs." Sir Thomas Stanley, sheriff of Waterford and Tipperary, petitioned for forty pounds as payment for killing four Irish outlaws, styled "Tories," which sum the judges disallowed, because these men were slain in the field and not legally convicted. The petitioner alleged that these "Tories" could not have been taken alive, and that the allowance fell within the equity of the law.

Many of the petitions in connexion with the army are for appointments, for payment of arrears; and for permission for civilians to proceed against some of the military who presumed on their privileges, under which they could not be impeached in any court without leave from the Viceroy.

The petitions for licenses comprise some from merchants, soliciting permission to trade and traffic in Galway, Kilkenny, Ross, and Waterford, as freely as any of the inhabitants of those towns, which would not admit Roman Catholics, although born within their walls, to engage in commerce there without special Viceroyal mandate.

Amongst these petitions is one from Captain Gregory Martin, "imploing" an order for admission to live and trade as a merchant in Galway, his native town. He stated that on the termination of his apprenticeship, as the war broke out and trade decayed, he went to France and thence to England and served the King till after "Naseby fight." Taken prisoner there, he escaped from "miserable sufferance" in London, served as a Captain in the regiment of the Duke of Gloucester in Flanders, and had been a great sufferer for his loyalty.

The petitions for licenses of another class include those from Patrick Roberts, eldest son of William Roberts, Ulster King of Arms; Captain Roch, Adjutant to the King's Guards in England; and William Cullowe. Roberts petitioned for a license for an establishment similar to that in London called "the Office of Address," for the advantage and convenience of many persons who daily transported themselves and families from England to Ireland. Captain Roch, on his petition, obtained permission to practise and exercise a lottery called "the Royal Oak," on paying five shillings weekly to the churchwardens for the use of the poor of the parishes in which he exercised the lottery.

William Cullowe petitioned for free ingress and egress in all places, and payment for each wolf which he might destroy. He stated, that through God's assistance and his own industry, he had found a way never known in this kingdom for the destruction of ravenous wolves and other vermin, which much annoyed his Majesty's subjects, the poor inhabitants of Ireland.

We find that prisoners, in their petitions, usually complained of the strictness of their custody, and the insupportable charges and fees by which they were "ruinated and destroyed." James Nangle represented

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

* Daniel Axtell, Governor of Kilkenny, under the Parliament of England. He was hanged at London in 1660 as a regicide.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

the sadness of his condition, being constantly in a dark dungeon for above a year. William Talbot complained that by his long imprisonment he had contracted several diseases, and was like to perish and starve for want of means.

William Parker, a prisoner in the castle of Carlow, was, by Viceroyal order, permitted, on giving sufficient securities for one thousand pounds, to have the liberty of that castle and to go abroad with a keeper daily between the rising and the setting of the sun, as his business might require.

William Hewlett stated that, without any cause assigned, he had been kept languishing in irons, in a strait room, and without trial, for a quarter of a year. His wife, on her petition, was admitted to speak with him, but only on giving notice to the Governor of the Castle of Dublin, who was to send an officer to be present at all times when she conversed with her husband, and to hear what discourse passed between them.

John Barber, in consideration of having given information against his confederates in England in counterfeiting coin, was, on petition, pardoned from the sentence under which he was to be perpetually imprisoned, to forfeit all his goods and chattels, and the profit of his lands during life.

Thomas Butler, a Quaker, petitioned to be released after a long imprisonment, through which he had been deprived of his father's estate, and had been detained for no other cause than "exercising his conscience in what the Lord had made manifest to him." James Tully, "taken for a priest" and committed to the Marshalsea, petitioned for enlargement on bail or a provision for his subsistence that he might not perish. Two priests, "close prisoners in Kilkenny" prayed to be liberated, as they were very infirm, so poor as to be unable to pay fines, and had always been faithful to the King.

In relation to the Plot of 1663, in which the noted Thomas Blood and his brother-in-law, the Rev. William Lackie, or Lecky, Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, were engaged, we find petitions from or in connexion with the following:—Philip Alden, Henry Burton, Captain John Chambers, Robert Shapcote, Martha Scott, wife of Colonel Scott, Gilbert Jones, Henry Jones and Elizabeth his wife, Richard Robury, Andrew Sturgeon, Richard Delarocke, Joshua Hobart, and Barbara, widow of Major Richard Thompson. Cornelius Horan represented that his master, Robert Shapcote, barrister and member of Parliament for the town of Wicklow, was kept in such close confinement that none of his servants were admitted to approach, or even to furnish him with necessities, without special license from the Lord Lieutenant. Shapcote subsequently obtained pardon from the King, and a royal letter requiring that all proceedings against him should be superseded. A contemporary statement in connexion with Colonel Alexander Jephson's engagement in this Plot is given in my report in the present volume on the manuscripts of Trinity College, Dublin. From petitions in the collection before us, it appears that after Jephson's execution, his effects were applied for by Frizweed Leigh, widow. She obtained a grant of them in commiseration of her great sufferings, as she had lost her husband in the King's service, and had been deprived of her estate by the Cromwellians. Hobart, who was imprisoned for the Plot, declared his innocence; represented that he had sold and spent all that he had saleable in the world, that he had a family of small children destitute of relief, and was himself utterly reduced to a perishing and starving condition in prison, although not guilty of any crime. He was subsequently liberated on giving a bond for 500*l.* to leave Ireland within one month. Henry Jones, of Stillorgan, near Dublin, stated in a petition that he had been ruined by his imprisonment for supposed complicity in the Plot, and prayed for licence to betake himself to merchant trade by sea.

Barbara, wife of Major Richard Thompson, who was executed "for having a hand in the late unhappy Plot," petitioned for speedy relief out of her husband's estate. She stated that all his estate, both real and personal, had been seized and made away from her and her child by the sheriffs and others; that she was an "innocent, poor Protestant, altogether guiltless"; and that she hoped that neither his Majesty nor the Lord Lieutenant intended that the perishing petitioner and her child should famish through the offence of her husband.

In connexion with Richard Thompson, we also find here a petition from Cassandra Hill, whose mother he had married. Cassandra claimed the sum of fifteen hundred pounds due to her from Thompson's property, which, as forfeited, had been seized by the sheriffs on his condemnation.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

William Perkins, who represented that he had faithfully served the King and his father during the wars in England, petitioned for payment of twenty-five pounds awarded to him for having discovered and apprehended in Munster "one Chessers," who had a design upon the life of the Duke of Ormonde. Perkins mentioned that Chessers, whom he describes as "a dangerous traitor" and an enemy to his Grace," had been connected with the late Plot and had fled to England.

Priscilla Ruxton petitioned for the release of her son, John Ruxton, member of Parliament for Ardee, who had been arrested on a charge of being concerned in the Plot. She represented that she had nine small children, and that a seizure had been issued against the estate of her husband, Lieutenant John Ruxton, for not having completed his account with the Exchequer as Sheriff of the county of Louth.

Lecky, the Presbyterian clergyman, one of the principal conspirators, was said to have become insane from the severity of his imprisonment in irons at Dublin. Among the present petitions is a hitherto unknown one from Lecky's wife, Isabel, in which she mentioned his sad condition in not being restored to his former understanding, and prayed that his life might be spared on security given for his removal out of his Majesty's dominions, or that the severity of the sentence might be mitigated, and his body bestowed upon her for Christian burial. On her petition order was given that the sentence should not be further put in execution than as to Lecky's life, that all the other parts should be forborne, and that his body should be delivered, whole and entire, to the petitioner, or any other of his relatives, to be interred. The order bears the date of 12th December 1663, on which day, as we learn from unpublished sources, Lecky was hanged at Dublin. According to Presbyterian writers, Trinity College, Dublin, petitioned to have Lecky's life spared. This, they state, was granted on condition of his conforming to the Established Church, but they add that he refused and chose rather to die. No such petition, however, in relation to Lecky, nor any reference to it is to be found in the present Register.

CALENDAR of PETITIONS addressed to James, Duke of Ormonde, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, A.D. 1662-1664.

John Sayer.—Liberty to sue Lieutenant Humphry Barrow for amount of bond.—8 August 1662.

Edmond FitzGerald, of Ballynalo, Esquire;—Restoration of lands in co. Cork.—Petition presented to the King, and referred to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, by order dated Whitehall, 6 June 1662.

1662-3.

Katherine Corbett alias Bagenall.—Custodian of lands in co. Catherlagh [Carlow].—24 March 1662-3.

James Fountaine, Chirurgeon.*—"That your petitioner stands charged with an areare of rents for severall howses in the city of Corke, amounting in all to twentye pounds, as by the annexed order appears; which howses were wholly employed for the vse of sick and maimed people, and your petitioner being then chirurgeou to the hospital at Corke had no quarters allowed him as others in his capacity had without paying any rent for the same; and forasmuch as your petitioner made noe benefit of the said howses but were taken by him for the vse aforesaid: May it therefore please your Grace to require the Lord Cheife Baron, and the rest of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, to give order that the said twenty pounds be putt out of charge; and your petitioner shall ever pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 18 November 1662.

"Wee pray our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron, and the rest of the Barons of His Majesties Court of Exchequer, to take consideration of this petition and to certify vs their opinion what they shall conceive fitt to be done therevppon. And untill his Lordship and the rest shall soe certify vs, and that we shall therevppon give our further order, the charginge the petitioner with the above mencioned rent is to be forborne.

"ORMONDE."

"Dublin Castle, 14 March 1662[-3].

"Lett this petition, with the annexed reporte of our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Barron, and the rest of the Barons of His Majesties Court of Exchequer, made

* See, at page 751 of Appendix to the Seventh Report of this Commission, Recit des services que le Docteur Desfontaines a rendu a Charles Premier et a Charles Second.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

in pursuance of our within order of the 18th of November last, and what else doth relate to this matter, be presented unto vs, at our next sitting at the Council Board where the same shalbe taken into consideracion and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fit; and in the meane tyme, and untill further order shalbe given, the charging the petitioner with the rent within mencioned is to be forborne, as by our said order of the 18th of November aforesaid was directed; whereof all His Majesties officers whom it may concerne, are to take notice.

“ORMONDE.”

“Ja[m]es Fountaine. May it please your Grace: in pursuance of your Graces [order] of reference of 18th day of November 1662, we have examined the suggestions in the annexed petition of James Fountaine and wee doe finde that in Hillarie terme, 1658, the petitioner James Fountaine moved the Court then called the Exchequer to bee discharged of the severall summs of money in the annexed petition mencioned; wherevpon by order of the said Court in the terme aforesaid, reciting an order of the then pretended Lieutenant and Councill whereby the said Court of Exchequer was required to examine whether the petitioner had any allowance for a house as chirurgeon to the hospitall of Corke, and if they should find that the petitioner had noe howse allowed him rent free that he should be discharged of the said severall summs of money, and that forasmuch as it did appeare by the report of the Auditor General that the petitioner had noe allowance at all for a howse as chirurgeon to the hospitall at Corke nor any other way, it was order[ed] that noe further processe should issue against the petitioner for the said moneys untill further order from the said Court vpon mecon to be made in open Court, which is the true state of the petitioners case soe farr as appeares to vs.

“JO. BISSÉ.

“RICH. KENNEDY.

“THO. DOWGAN.”

Alexander Aitkins, Esquire.—Satisfaction for forcible removal of cattle from farm in co. Roscommon by Thomas Pepper and William Barker, of Sir Oliver St. George's troop.—5 March 1662-3.

Edmond FitzGerald, of Ballymoloe, Esquire.—Restoration of lands claimed by the '49 Trustees.—23 March 1662-3.

1663.

Robert Maud, Colonel.—Custodiam of lands in co. Cork in reprisal for lands in Co. Meath.—14 April 1663.

Arthur Dillon, Major.—Arrears as Lieutenant in Earl of Donegal's troop.—13 April 1663.

William Floud, Quartermaster.—Arrears as Quartermaster to Sir Theophilus Jones's troop.—13 April 1663.

Henry Moreton, Captain.—Arrears as Lieutenant in Sir Theophilus Jones's troop.—13 April 1663.

Matthew Pennyfather, Cornet.—Arrears as Quartermaster to Lord Falkland's troop.—13 April 1663.

Mary Graham, widow.—Arrears due to her late husband as Ensign in Captain Nicholas Baylye's company.—3 April 1663.

Henry Lawrence.—Recovery of debt from Corporal Robert Perne of Ormonde's troop.—15 April 1663.

Mary Whiteing, widow.—Recovery of money lent to Nicholas Awnsham of Ormonde's Guard of Horse.—3 April 1663.

Theobald, Earl of Carlingford.—Custodiam of lands in pursuance of His Majesty letter dated 9 April 1661, pending arrangement under Act of Settlement.—16 April 1663.

John Middleton.—Release from custody of the Marshal.—16 April 1663.

Rose, Marchioness of Antrim, in behalf of her husband, the Marquis.—Custodiam of lands in Counties of Kerry, Meath, and Wexford.—16 April 1663.

Cormack O'Neill.—Faint, in pursuance of His Majesty's letters dated 8 July, 1662, for grant of the forfeited remainder-right, claimed, to the late Sir Henry O'Neill's lands, co. Antrim.—16 April 1663.

Thomas Lea.—“To His Grace James, Duke of Ormonde, Lord Lieutenant General of Ireland.

“The humble petition of Thomas Lea, Keeper of the Council Chamber.

“Humbly sheweth that your petitioner being knowne to the Maiors of this City to bee of very great age, and that hee hath been blinde for seven yeares past, the said Maiors respectively haue vpon that account (looking on the petitioner as an object of pity) kept him from payments of taxes and other publique charges untill within theise two monethes some persons, not sec sensible of your petitioners said condition, hath put his name into [the]

Cess booke, and charged him for his old rotten house in thirty shillings as his proportion [of] your Graces 30,000l. which hee hath paid, but feares thereby hee may become lyable to pay all other cesses that shall hereafter followe, vnless your Grace in mercy bee a means to releve him. The petitioner therefore most humbly beseecheth your Grace that you will be pleased to grant an order whereby hee may bee absolutely freed from paying any more taxes for the future, haueing noe other maintenance to support his wife and family, but the small benefit of his office, which hee is not like long to enjoy, having by the course of nature but a very short time to spend, and hee shall ever pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 15th April, 1663.

“Recommended to the Maior of the City of Dublin and other Councillors whome it may concerne to take consideration of this petition and to see that the petitioner haue such ease concerning the taxes above mentioned as may stand with his condition and ability to beare the same.

“ORMONDE.”

John Blenerhassett, Captain.—State of his case concerning custodiam of lands in co. Kerry, in reprisal for lands in co. Cork restored to Earl Clancarty; with reasons of objection appended.—16 April 1663.

Robert Bodkin, of Galway, Merchant.—Permission to reside and trade in Galway town, security being given for his good behaviour.—16 April 1663.

Sir Francis Hamilton, Knight and Baronet.—Custodiam of lands in Connaught let in the Usurper's time to Sir Valentine Brown.—22 April 1663.

William, Bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh.—Custodiam of lands in co. Galway.—22 April 1663.

William Thwaites, of Clonmel, Merchant.—Recovery of goods detained for freightage by Captain Patrick Lynam, of the ship called “the Trinity,” of Dublin; with schedule of particulars appended.—22 April 1663.

Margaret McDaniel.—Custodiam of two ploughlands.—14 April 1663.

Alexander McDaniel, Colonel.—Custodiam of lands in Clare and Roscommon counties, in reprisal for lands restored to former owners.—22 April 1663.

Richard [Boyle], Earl of Cork.—Custodiam of lands near Lismore, co. Waterford.—20 April 1663.

John Kelly, Colonel.—Permission to receive from the tenant of lands in Connaught, formerly held by Lady Dungan, a certain amount reserved to petitioner by an order for custodiam, in case Sir James Cuffe's and Colonel Treswell's claim for custodiam were granted.—16 April 1663.

Daniel Treswell, Colonel.—Custodiam of lands in co. Roscommon (formerly held by Sir Walter and Lady Dungan), notwithstanding claim advanced by Sir James Cuffe.—14 April 1663.

Ralph Wallis.—Custodiam of lands and premises, formerly the property of Hugh O'Connor, co. Roscommon.—22 April 1663.

Sir George Lane, Knight.—Payment of moneys expended by him as Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.—27 April 1663.

John Roth.—“The petition of John Roth, Merchant of Kilkenny.

“That your petitioner was a constant sufferer for the Royal cause, and once employed by Her Majesty the Queene mother as messenger to your Grace with papres of special trust, which the annexed letter, by Her Majesties recommendation address to your Grace, doth witness. Now so it is that your petitioner who alwayes resided in France, during the Usurpers power, is ever since His Majesties happy restauration endeavouring to settle himselfe, in Rosse or Waterford to drine an adventuring trade for foraine partes, which your petitioner cannot well prosecute without an order from your Grace for his free aboad in the said corporaciones. May it therefore please your Grace for the increase of his Majesties revenue by encouraging traders, and your petitioners settlement after his long sufferiages (his ancestors having faithfully served your noble family) to grant your special order for his free aboad in Rosse or Waterford, hee paying the King's duties for such goods as hee will import or export, and hee will pray.”

“Dublin Castle, 27th April 1663.

“Wee are pleased and doe order that the petitioner giueing sufficient security to the Maior of the cittie of Waterford and the chief Magistrate of the towne of Rosse, that hee shall carry himselfe quietly and peaceably according to the lawes of the land and not to act anything to the prejudice of his Majesty or his service, hee shall bee permitted to inhabit in either of the said places and trade there by wholesale but not by retails,

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

whereof the said Mayor and Chief Magistrate, and all others whom it may concerne, are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

John Talbot.—Custodiam of lands in co. Louth, part of his old inheritance.—28 April 1663.

Edmond Hoyle, Captain.—Arrears due for service in Earl of Anglesey's troop.—4 April 1663.

James Reynolds.—Custodiam of lands in co. Dublin, formerly the property of Mathew Beg.—28 April 1663.

Morris Canvan.—Arrears for service as Carriage-Master-General and Commissary to Ormonde.—13 April 1663.

John Morgan, Esquire.—Issue of Commissions of Inquiry, and caveats, relative to lands hitherto "concealed" in the counties of Galway and Fermanagh, which were "discovered" by petitioner.—7 April 1663.

Nicholas Buck, Warder [Dublin Castle].—Recovery of salary due, and other moneys from the Constable, Dudley Maynwaring.—9 May 1663.

Arthur, Earl of Anglesey.—Custodiam of lands in the counties of Cork, Meath and Kildare.—30 April 1663.

William Bladen, Printer to the King.—Arrears due to him for printing proclamations and other public papers; and restoration to former office of King's Printer, for which Letters Patent had lately been granted to John Croke.—29 April 1663.

Margaret Williams, widow.—Recovery of money due to her late husband for work done in his Majesty's service.—29 April 1663.

William Cullowe.—"That your Graces petitioner, through God's assistance and his owne industry, hath founde a way for the destroying the rauensons wolfe and other vermin, which much annoy his Majesties subjets the poor inhabitants of this Kingdome; and being desirous to improve his talent he is now lately arived in this Kingdome and purposeth with God's assistance and your Graces commission to goe on vpon the worke with all expedicion. May it therefore please your Grace to grant your order to your petitioner and his assistants to vse all meanes and haue free egress and regresse in all places in this Kingdome for the doeing of the worke abone mencioned, and alsoe that all Justices of the peace, maiors, sherrieffes, and other officers may be required to punish and restraine all persons or any person that shall vse the same way with your Graces suppliant vntill he hath perfected his worke in killing the wolues of this Kingdome (his way being more than ordinary and never knowne in this Kingdome, although it may be without much difficultie attained and stollen from your petitioner, he haueing once layd the ground worke) except as shalbe deputed by him; and alsoe that justices within this Kingdome shall order such satisfaction to be given your Graces petitioner for each wolfe destroyed by him and his as in your Graces wisdomed shall thinke fitt. All which hee submitts to your Grace and desists. Your Grace's dayly orator,

"WILLIAM CULLOWE."

"Dublin Castle, 29 April 1663.

"Lett this peticion be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board where the [same] shalbe taken into consideration and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

ORMONDE."

Richard [Boyle], Earl of Cork.—Payment of allowance for service as Governor of Halbowling fort.—30 April 1663.

Eusebius Marbury, Tho. Cattrell, and Richard Caple, disbanded soldiers of Lord Conway's troop.—Arrears.—29 April 1663.

James Nollane.—Renting of lauds in co. Catherlogh [Carlow], belonging to Duke of Ormonde.—16 April 1663.

John Benson.—Recovery of debt from Phineas Blanchard, of Earl of Drogheda's troop.—28 April 1663.

Sir Ed[mund] FitzGerald, Knight and Baronet.—"The peticion of Sir Ed. FitzGerald, Knight and Baronet. That your petitioner did cheerfully embrace and submit to the peace concluded by your Grace by his Majesties authority with his Majesties Roman Catholiques or [sic] subjets of this Kingdome in the year 1648, and perswaded many others on whom hee had any influence to doe the like; that your petitioner by commission from your Grace commanded a regiment of foote in his Majesties service and manifested his integritie with apparant loyalty vpon severall occasions towards the furtherance of his Majesties service, haueing secured his castle of Clenglish in the countie of Limricke for his Majesties service being by the enemy in the year 1649 closely besieged, and your petitioner haueing then worsted the said enemy, but the said enemy growing prevalent your petitioner of his own free accord in order to his Majesties service demolished his said castle, and quited as well the said castle as all his howses and lands and appeared neere your Grace and offered to be disposed of in his Majesties service as your Grace should thinke fitt; that your petitioner lent moneys to supply his Majesties army; that your petitioner for the better carrying and advancing his Majesties service raised another regiment of foote and a troope of horse att his own cost and charges after your Grace [de]parted this Kingdome; that all your petitioners goods and chattles to a great and considerable value haue been seised and disposed of by the said enemy, his whole estate burned and wasted and hundreds of his tenants and dependents putt to the sword, yett continued still faithfull and loyall to his Majesties service, vntill his power and service was altogether suppressed in this Kingdome, as by the certificates of the Lords of Essequin [Inchiquin] and Clancarty shall appeare; that your petitioner since his Majesties happy restauration is reduced to a sad condition, being kept out of all his estate upon what ground or reason (vnlesse for being faithfull and serviceable to his Majesties) he knoweth not. His humble request is that your Grace may be pleased to consider his present condition, and since there is one plow land of his estate called Athavoike in the said county of Limerick in his Majesties disposall and not sett forth or given to souldiers or adventurers, that your petitioner may enjoy the same for his present liuehood and support of himselfe and his charge vntill his qualificacon be tried, or att least to prefer him in the tenancy of the said parcell of land as your Grace shall thinke fitt, and your petitioner will pray."

"Dublin Castle, 28 April 1663.

"If it shall appeare vnto our very [good] Lord, the Lord Chiefe Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands within mencioned are in his Majesties dispose and not already granted in custodiam to any other, they are to cause a custodiam thereof to issue vnto the petitioner, to continue durning his Majesties pleasure att such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Edward Sutton, Knight and Baronet.—Confirmation of order granting lands in co. Kildare.—4 May 1663.

John, Viscount Massereene.—Custodiam of lands in Louth and Kildare.—4 May 1663.

John Bradocke.—Recovery of debt from Lieutenant William Pountney.—4 May 1663.

Mary Mullican, widow.—Restitution of goods distrained for rent of house in High Street, Dublin, by Captain Brent Moore, one of the '49 officers.—4 May 1663.

Thomas Cheeke, Cornet.—To be discharged of tithes in Carlow and Kildare counties. Petition presented to the King, and referred to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland by order dated Whitehall, 20 December 1662.—Date of Ormonde's order thereon, 13 April 1663.

Sir St. John Brodricke, Knight.—Continued tenancy of lands in co. Cork.—15 April 1663.

Eusebius Marbury, Richard Cottrell, and Richard Caple, disbanded soldiers of Viscount Conway's troop.—Certificate of arrears.—4 May 1663.

James Synott and William Lewis, disbanded soldiers of Sir Henry Tichborne's troop.—Arrears.—7 May 1663.

Alexander Howston and John Graham.—Release from imprisonment in Dublin Castle.—6 May 1663.

Francis Meeke, Captain.—Recovery from Lieutenant Col. Moyes Hill of arrears due to petitioner's son for service in Duke of Albemarle's troop.—5 May 1663. Replication.

Francis Peasly, Captain.—Answer to petition of Sir Henry Bennet concerning Captain Peasly's claim, as mortgagee, to possession of lands in King's County.—6 May 1663.

Teige Kelly, Esquire.—"That your petitioner hath a great charge of children and is reduced to a low and sad condition, and wilbe brought lower vnlesse relieved by your Grace, on whose favour and reliefe your petitioner depends. Soe it is, may it please your Grace, that noe considerable revenue doth accrue to your Grace out of the lordship of Aghrin, that your Grace may be pleased to prefer your petitioner to the whole lordship. And if your Grace be not pleased to sett the whole to your suppliant att the present [time], that you will grant him a lease of your Graces lands herevnder specified which wilbe a present reliefe [to] your petitioner, vntill att your Graces better leasure hee may be dealt with as [in] your great goodness your Grace shall thinke fitt, which granted, your petitioner will pray."

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Reachill, one quarter. Kalldrogh, one quarter. Kelureny, half a quarter. Gavisnahan, three cartouns. Kappagh, one quarter. Derryleath, two quarters. Annagh, one quarter. Skarue, one third of a quarter. Calennemervan and Gortnepoury, two quarters. Gortiaribane, one cartoun.

"Dublin Castle, 5 May 1663.

"The commissioners appointed by vs, for management of our estate and other our particular affaires, are to inform themselves concerning this matter and to consider thereof, and to certify vs what they shall conceive fitt to be done therein.

"ORMONDE."

Katherine Wogan.—"That the late Lords Justices of this kingdome taking the distressed condicon of your petitioner and great charge of children in consideration were favourably pleased ever since his Majesties happy Restauration to grant Maurice Keating, Esquire, in trust for your petitioner, a custodiam of severall small parcell[s] of your petitioners late husbands estate scituate in the county of Kildare, namely, the villages and lands of Clonagh, Rahin, Porte, Belgard, Castlekeely, Daniellstowne, Wogans proportion of lands and customs in Killcocke, with a few acres of land in Clane; that vpon your petitioners late humble application to your Grace, your Grace was honorably pleased by your order dated the 8th of April last past to grant your order requiring the Lord Cheife Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties [court] of Exchequer to renewe the said custodiam to your petitioner for the ensuing yeare att the rent of forty pounds, being the rent formerly reserved on your petitioner therout; that in regard the said order was directed to all the Barons of the Exchequer, the Lord Cheife [Baron] did forbear passeing of the custodiam untill the rest of the Barons who were then in the circuit should come to towne; that before the said Barons came to towne the said lands soe formerly granted by your Grace to your petitioner were (as your petitioner is informed) granted by your Grace, by order dated the 8th of April aforesaid, in custodiam to Sir Allen Brodricke, Surveyor Generall, as alsoe to the Right Honorable the Lord Kingstowne, by another later order from your Grace dated the thirteenth of April last past; which your petitioner humbly conceives was not your Graces intention, haneing formerly granted the same to your petitioner; and for as much (may it please your Grace) as the benefit of the said custodiam was the one reliefe your petitioner had for her selfe and children, which if now taken from them will tend to their utter ruin, haneing not so much as bread to feed them, nor other earthly subsistence, nor to pay for the lodging and schooling of her children, soe that without your Grace in mercy doe speedily relieve her and them, they will vterly perish. Your petitioner therefore most humbly beseecheth your Grace for the tender marye of God to take pity of her and her childrens present sad condicon and to grant your order to the Lord Cheife Baron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, requiring [him] forthwith, notwithstanding any order granted to the said Sir Allen Brodrick, the Lord Kingston, or any other, to passe the said custodiam for the lands aforesaid to the said Maurice Keating, in trust for your petitioner, for the ensuing yeare, comencing on the first of May 1663, as by your Graces said former order was directed.

"Dublin Castle, 4 May 1663.

"Vpon consideration of this petition wee doe hereby order that the custodiam of the lands within mencioned be granted to the petitioner according to our order of the eight of April last given on her behalfe, notwithstanding any other order by vs given for a custodiam to be thereof granted to any other person or persons whatsoever; whereof the Lord Cheife Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, and all his Majesties officers and miuisters whome it may concerne, are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Martha Hartpoole, widow of Captain William Hartpoole, killed at the storming of Drogheda, 1649.—Custodiam of lands in Queen's County to Col. Thomas Piggott, for petitioner's use.—5 May 1663.

Owen Vaughan and George Bushell, Farmers of wine and strong-water licences, Galway.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—2 May 1663.

John Granford, Rob. Moxon, Robert Willson, Robert Hodges, and Robert Gibbs, late of the Earl of Monmt Alexander's troop.—Arrears.—5 May 1663.

The Lord Chancellor [Sir Maurice Eustace].—Custodiam of lands in co. Kildare, as compensation for his removal from Chappell Iazard.—7 May 1663.

I 120.

Thomas Seele, Doctor in Divinity, Provost of Trinity College, "neere" Dublin.—

"That whereas by an Act of Parliament intituled an Act for the better execution of his Majesties gracious Declaration for the settlement of his kingdome of Ireland and satisfaccion of the severall interests of Adventurers, souldiers, and other his subjects, that amongst other things it is enacted that out of the forfeited lands in the Archbishoppricke of Dublin 300l. per annum shall bee allotted and sett out vnto the Provost of Trinity Colledge and to his successors for ever for the better support and maintenance of the said office; that your petitioner vpon his humble suite made vnto the late Lords Justices for setting forth of the said lands, were pleased (that in [re]gard the said lands could not soe conveniently then be sett forth vnto your petitioner) by their order of the 14th of May 1662, to order that the custodes for the vse of the '49 Officers, out of certaine forfeited lands lying and being in the county of Dublin, within the said Arch-Bishoppricke granted vnto them in custodiam, should satisfy and pay vnto your petitioner the summ of 200l. for the last yeare; that your petitioner is informed that all the said lands soe granted in custodiam, and all other forfeited lands in the county of Dublin in the said Arch-Bishopricke, are now to be granted vnto the Lord of Kingston; by reason whereof the good intended by the said Act wil become fruitlesse vnto your petitioner and his successors (vntlesse prevented by your Grace). Now your petitioners humble suite to your Grace is, that you would be pleased to require his Majesties Auditor and Surveyor Generall to draw particulars of soe much forfeited lands in the county of Dublin as shall amount vnto three hundred pounds per annum, to grant a custodiam thereof vnto your petitioner untill such time as the same shalbe confirmed (by letters patent) vnto your petitioner and his successors, according to the true intent and meaning of the said Act; or that your Grace wilbe pleased to take such further course for your petitioners reliefe herein, before the passinge of the said lands vnto the said Lord of Kingstowne, as shall seeme most expedient to your Grace. And your petitioner shall pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 8 May 1663.

"Vpon consideration of this petition and the annexed certificate of the Lord Viscount Ranelagh, and others of the Trustees of the Commissioned Officers of the army before the 5th of June 1649, whereby it appeareth that by custodiam granted to the said Trustees of certain lands in the county of Dublin in the said custodiam mencioned, there was to be paid to the petitioner one hundred pounds for the year for which the said custodiam was granted, and that by an order of the late Lords Justices and councill, dated the 14th of May 1662, the said custodes were to pay the petitioner one hundred pounds more, part of the rents reserved on the lands granted vnto them in custodiam as aforesaid, and that alsoe by the said order of the said Lords Justices his Majesties Receiver Generall, the Auditor Generall, and all other his Majesties Officers whom it might concerne, were to cause allowance to be given of the said one hundred pounds, and that alsoe the said custodes assigned certaine townes and lands granted to them in custodiam for the payment of the said two hundred pounds: Wee are pleased and do order that in the custodiam by vs the 18th day of April last ordered to be granted to the said Lord Kingston, there be inserted a clause whereby there may be reserved and paid to the petitioner one hundred pounds of the rent which is to be reserved on the said Lord Kingston, and that the said Lord Kingston, for the yeare now coming on, shall assigne one hundred pound more to be paid to the petitioner out of the severall lands which was assigned for the payment of the whole two hundred pounds aforesaid, for the last yeare which his Lordship is now to hane in custodiam; whereof the Barons and Officers aforesaid are to cause allowance to be given out of his rent to the said Lord Kingston.

"ORMONDE."

"Dr. Seele. Att the request of the Reverend Dr. Thomas Seele, Provost of the Colledge of Dublin, wee the undernamed persons, being amongst other trustees for the commissioned officers who secured in Ireland before the fifth of June 1649, doe certify that in the custodiam granted to them of certaine lands in the county of Dublin therein mencioned, there was reserved to the Provost 100l. vpon the said trustees for that yeare, and that by an order of the late Lords Justices and Councill, dated the 14th day of May 1662, the said custodes were required to pay 100l. more, parte of their

3 S

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

said rent reserved on the premises, to the said Provost, whereof the Barons of the Exchequer were required to give allowance. In pursuance whereof the said custodians assigned the towns and lands of Damastowne, Napstowne, Brownstowne, Malahew, Great Holliwood, Little Holliwood, Newtowne, Kinsaly, Balnaduna, Ballymadroght, Terynne, Cunnage, Loghinanstowne, severall parcels neere the church of Santry, Robucke, the mannor of Drynagh neere Crumline, which premises are to discharge the £200 before mentioned. Dated the 7 day of May, 1663.

"A. RANELAGH.

"RAN. CLAYTON.

"ROBT. WARDE. AL. PIGOTT."

William Caldor and John Tasbrow, disbanded soldiers of Sir Henry Tichborne's troop.—Arrears.—7 May 1663.

Sir Richard Clifton, Knight.—Custodiam of lands in co. Wexford.—9 May 1663.

Charles Corbett, a disbanded souldior of Earl Mount-alexander's troop.—Arrears.—8 May, 1663.

Sir Henry Percivall, Baronet.—"That your petitioner's father, Sir Phillip Percivale, knight, deceased, was before and att the begining of the late rebellion in the kingdome seized to him and his heires of a corrody of horsemeate and manmeate issuing out of the towne and lands of Kinsaly in the county of Dublin, formerly the propriety of Richard Goulding of Kinsaly and Walter Plunkett of the Grange in the aforesaid county, whose are outlawed of high treason; which corrody was worth vnto your petitioners father twelve pounds per annum and twenty barells of oates; that the late vsurpers did sett and lett the said lands without making any provision for your petitioner for his said corrody; that the said lands are not disposed of to adventurers or souldiers in satisfiacion of adventures or arrears, but are in his Majesties hands and sett from yeare to yeare to his Majesties vse, whereby the said corrody is not paid to your petitioner; that his Majestic, takinge the premises into his princely consideration, and judging that the arrears of the said corrody due out of the said [lands] ought in equity to be satisfiied to your petitioner, has been graciously pleased, by his letters dated the tenth day of June, in the 14th yeare of his roigne, to authorize your Grace to grant a lease to your petitioner of the said towne and lands of Kinsaly for such terme of yeares att such a moderate rent as your Grace shall thinke fitt in case your petitioners said allegations be true; your petitioner therefore most humbly beseecheth your Grace, in order to the passinge of the said grant to the petitioner, to refer the examinacion of the aforesaid allegations to such persons as your Grace shall thinke fitt, and that they may be impowred to examine what other rents, charges, duties, or other incumbrances, are payable or issuing out of the said lands or chargeable therevpon to any other person or persons, bodies politticke or corporate, and to make report thereof vnto your Grace, together with their opinions vpon the whole matter for what terme and att what rent the said lands may be sett to the petitioner after consideration had of the said corrody and the arrears thereof justly due to him and of the said charges and incumbrances chargeable on the said lands. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castie, 8 May 1663.

"Wee pray and require his Majesties Attorney General to consider of his Majesties letters within mentioned, and of the petitioners title to the corrody claimed by him; and to examine what other rents, charges, duties, or incumbrances are payable or issuing out of the lands lyable to the said corrody or chargeable therevpon to any other person or persons, bodies politticke or corporate, and to certify vnto vs what shall appeare [to] him, together with his opinion for what terme and att what rent the lands by the petitioner desired may be sett vnto him, consideration being had of the petitioners right of the said corrody and the arrears thereof and other incumbrances on the said land, if any shall appeare vnto him.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Newburgh.—Leave to sue Lieutenant William Pountney of Col. Thomas Coote's company.—7 May 1663.

James Rochfort, of Larraghs [in the co. Kildare].—Removal of sequestration from lands of Larraghs, or quiet possession of same, pending legal proceedings.—9 May, 1663.

Thomas Digby, Peirce Smith, Walter Powell, Richard Corbitt, and Richard Griffith, disbanded soldiers of Sir Francis Hamilton's troop.—Arrears.—8 May, 1663.

Christopher Mosly.—"That your petitioners father,

Henry Mosly, before the rebellion in this Kingdome for many yeares and vntill the yeare 1641, served as clarke of the peace of the counties of Dublin and Lowth; but att the breaking out of the said horrid rebellion his said father was forced out of his dwelling house att Newtowne, in the county of Dublin, and by the rebells robbed and dispoyled of goods, chatties, and meanes, besides his said office, to the value of one thousand four score pounds and vppwards; that his said father tooke vpp armes in his Majesties service against the said rebells, and was by commission beare[ing] date the 29th of January 1641, appointed Provost Marshall to your Graces regiment, and being afterwards surprised by the rebells was by them barbarously murdered. The truth of all may fully appeare to your Grace vpon view of the annexed certificate; that your petitioner by reason of his said father's great losses and vntime death, whereby he was disabled to make any provision for your petitioners suport who was then of small age, hath been forced ever since to live in a very meane and necessitous condicion, and is like soe to continue vlesse by your Graces favour his present sadd condicon be bettered. To which end he most humbly prays that your Grace wilbe pleased to grant your order on his behalfe to Maior Harmon to admitt your petitioner into your Graces troope as appearing well mounted and armed for that service; that soe your petitioner may serve his Majestic vnder your Grace as did his said father in his live time and through that your Graces favour be better by a comfortable subsistiance. And your petitioner shall pray, &c.

"Dublin Castle, 7 May 1663.

"Major Thomas Harmon commanding in cheife of our owne troope of Guards is to admitt the petitioner to ride in the said troope, if therelie a vacancy he appeareing well mounted and armed.

"ORMONDE."

The Trustees of the 1649 Officers.—"That your petitioners, pursuant to your Graces order of the 21th day of March last, did impower Thomas Sandford, Esquire, to receive from the Sherriffe of the City of Dublin for the vse of the [16]49 Officers the possession of one howse in Bridge street, formerly the propriety of Plunkett of Rathmore, who is adjudged by the Commissioners of the Court of Claymes nocent; that, notwithstanding the said howse was certified by his Majesties Auditor General to be seized, sequestred, and survieid as forfeited and in charge the 30th of November 1660, as by your Graces order is directed, yett the said Sherriffe did positively refuse to give obedience to your Graces order, by reason whereof your petitioners are yett kept out of the possession of the said howse, as by the annexed deposition may appeare. Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Grace wilbe pleased to cause the said Sherriffe and Subsherriffe to be brought before you to answer the contempt. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 8 May 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the petition and the annexed affidavit, wee require the Sherriffes of the city of Dublin forthwith to appeare before vs and to shew cause in writing why they did [not] give possession of the howse abone mentioned, according to our order of the 21th of March last.

"ORMONDE."

"6 May 1663.

"[16]49 Trustees.—Whereas his Grace the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, by order bearing date the 21th of March 1662[-3], required (among other things) all Sherriffes of cities in this Kingdome of Ireland to putt the Lord [Lieutenant] and others and the trustees for the security of the Commissioned officers who served in the army of Ireland before the 5th of June 1649, or such person or persons as they or any five or more of them should appoint in behalfe of the commissioned officers, in the quiet possession of all such lands, tenements, and hereditaments within there several liberties as by Certificats vnder the hands of his Majesties Auditor General or Surveyor General or the deputies of either of them shall appeare to haue hie [on] the 30th of November 1660 sequestred or survieid as forfeited lands, tenements, or hereditaments by reason of the late Rebellion in this Kingdome, and not given to adventurers or souldiers in satisfiacion of their adventures and arrears; Thomas Sandford, of Dublin, Esquire, made faith that about the 27th of Aprill last past he repaired to Mr. Best and Mr. Bennett, the now sherriffes of the city of Dublin, and did then produce and deliver to sherriffe Best the order aforesaid, with an instrument in writing vnder the

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

hands of seven of the trustees aforesaid, bearing date the 24th of April last, empowering this deponent to recave of the sherriffs of the city of Dublin the possession of one howse in Bridgstreete in the Cittie of Dublin, now in the tenencie of Sir George Gilbert, and formerly the propriety of Plunkett of Rathmore, together with a certificate attested by Sir James Ware, knight, his Majesties Auditor General, setting [forth] that the said howse sett vnto this deponent, situate in Bridgstreete aforesaid, was seized, sequestered, and surveyed and in charge the 30th of November 1660. And further saith that sherriffe Best with Adam Darling, subsherriffe of Dublin, did goe with this deponent on the 27th of Aprill aforesaid to the said howse and demanded possession for this deponent, but the said Sir George Gilbert would not deliuer it, well knowing, as this deponent verily beleuees, that the sherriffe would not force him out, whereupon this deponent told the sherriffe that the Lord Lieutenant's order was directed to him and did require the said sherriffe to put this deponent into the possession of the said howse for the trustees aforesaid, but hee refused soe to doe.

Copia vera.

"MATHEW BARRY."

William Perkins.—"That your petitioner actually and faithfully serued his late Majestic, and his Majestic that now is, during all the time of the wars in England; that almost a yeere since your petitioner did discover one Chessers who had a designe against your Graces life, and was at 40*l*. charge in apprehending him in Munster and attending vpon his tryall here according to order of the late Lords Justices; wherefore they gaue your petitioner a concordatum for twenty-five pounds, which is hereunto annexed, and which the Vice Treasurer's Deputy hath ever since delayed to satisfy, to your petitioners prejudice, and is still unwilling to pay it without your Graces direction. And forasmuch as the said Chessers was a dangerous traitor to his Majestic and enemie to your Grace, as may appeare by the depositions then taken against him, and since by his beeing of the late Plott and flying thereupon; and for that your petitioner is going for England and is in present want of the said money, haueing stayed all this while by the occasion of that businesse to the expense and wast of all his estate. May it therefore please your Grace to order that the Vice Treasurer or his Deputy doe forthwith pay the said 25*l*. according to the said concordatum. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 9th May 1663.

"Wee pray and require our very good Lord, the Earle of Anglesey, his Majesties Vice Treasurer and Treasurer at Warrs, forthwith to pay unto the petitioner the summe of twenty-five pounds mentioned in the annexed concordatum, and for soe doing this, together with the petitioners acquittance vpon the back of the said concordatum shall be, as well unto the said Vice Treasurer as the Commissioners of his accompts, a sufficient warrant and discharge in that behalfe.

"ORMONDE."

Robert Sandys, Colonel.—Removal of check placed on his pay during absence.—8 May 1663.

Henry Sheridan.—"That the Right Renorent Father in God, William, Lord Bishopp of Clonfert and Killmac[d]ough, haueing conferred the free schole of that diocese vppon your petitioner, who hath carefully served in that capacity, and the salary thereof being thirty pounds per annum and payable by the impropiators and clergy of that diocese, noe payment is made thereof, notwithstanding his Lordships order already made therein, as by the annexed may appeare. May it therefore please your Grace to confirme and ratifi such his Lordships order, to the end all objections may be taken away. And your petitioner shall pray.

"Dublin Castle, 7 May 1663.

"Let this petition bee presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board where the same shall be taken into consideration and such further order given therevpon as shalbee thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Edmond Fitz-Gerald, of Ballymaloe, Esquire, one of the thirty-six persons named in Charles II.'s Declaration for the Settlement of Ireland.—Surrender of bonds extorted from petitioner's tenants—on foot of impropriate rents arising out of lands in Cork—by Lieutenant-Colonel Peate, Richard Aldworth and Arthur Freaque.—26 March 1663.

William Constable, Captain, executor of William Bent, late of Lord Grandison's troop, deceased.—Arrears.—11 May 1663.

Nicholas D'Etres, Gunsmith.—Leave to proceed at law for recovery of money, tools, locks, etc., carried off by Pole Leqnar, his "covenant servant."—9 May 1663.

John Blackett, Merchant.—"That your petitioner haueing nothing done in his businesse att the Councell Board, where your Grace ordered his petition to be presented, was constrained the assizes coming on to repaire to Derry to saue his Recognizance or come to his tryall, where nothing could be proued to his prejudice, yett some of the freinds of the Lord Hamilton, desiring that the fact might not goe unpunished, did request that your petitioner might to that end be bound over to the next assizes to be holden att Londonderry, where it was granted by the Lord Judge Alexander; which wilbe your petitioners viter vndoeing, if he be detained soe longe from his businesse in Sweden and Denmarke, where it is supposed your petitioner must answere for the death of the Lord Hamilton, being he dyed and was buried within their territories. May it therefore please your Grace, in tender consideration of the premisses, seeing that by noe law in force he is here tryable, to appoint either the Lord Chiefe Justice of his Majesties Chiefe place, or Doctor Pett, or whom your Grace may thinke fitt, to inquire into the matter, and if they find your petitioner either worthy of death or punishment it may be inflicted vpon him speedily, otherways that he may haue his discharge to goe about his affaires; but humbly prayeth he may not be kept bound ouer from teame to terme to his ruin, nor be made a sufferer both here and in other countries, where his occasions may call him, for one and the same fact. And your petitioner shall ever pray.

"Dublin Castle, 7 May 1663.

"Let this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shall be thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Woode, Brewer.—Release from bonds obliging him to pay the Commissioners of Customs and Excise ten shillings per month for liberty to brew beer and ale.—8 May 1663.

John Huntington, Innholder.—Recovery of debt for quartering Lord Shannon's, Sir Thomas Armstrong's, and the Earl of Donegal's troopers.—25 April 1663.

Rich[ard] McManus, prisoner condemned att Sligo for horse-sealing.—Pardon from death and branding in the band.—11 May 1663.

John Browne, Merchant.—Payment, in accordance with letters from Charles I., for vessel, seized off Dublin in 1646, laden with Spanish iron, wool, etc., from Billao.—4 April 1663.

John Harding, who came from England, "intending" to sitt downe and plant, with his wife and children.—Recovery of fowling pieces seized by Customs officials.—9 May 1663.

William Sommer.—Issuing of caveats to prevent passing to others of lands already held in custodiam by the petitioner.—9 May 1663.

Dame Margaret Bolton, widow of Sir Richard Bolton, formerly Lord Chancellor of Ireland.—Arrears of pension and salary due to her late husband.—4 May 1663.

Maurice Keating, Esquire.—Custodiam of lands in co. Kildare.—11 May 1663.

Richard Finch, a disbanded member of Lord Shannon's troop.—Re-admission to said troop or payment of arrears.—9 May 1663.

Wentworth, Earl of Kildare.—"That your petitioner being tenant to his Majestic for the lands in the annexed schedule, in the county of Kildare, by way of custodiam for one whole yeare deter[m]ining the first of May 1663, humbly prayeth your Graces order to the Lord Chiefe Barron of the Exchequer to renew his said custodiam of the said lands for this insuing yeare att the same rent hee paid for the said lands last yeare, and hee shall pray.

"Dublin Castle, 12 May 1663.

"If it shall appeare unto our very good Lord, the Lord Chiefe Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands aboue mentioned are in his Majesties disposall they are to issue a custodiam thereof to the petitioner during the yeare now to come att such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"A list of the lands held in custodiam by the Right Honorable the Earle of Kildare for the yeare ending May 1663:

| MARQUIS OF ORMONDE. | Denominations of Land. | Number of Acres. | Years Rent. |
|---------------------------|---|---------------------|---------------|
| | Newtowne McCabe | 9136 : 03 : 32 | 005 : 02 : 06 |
| | Kellistowne and Newtowne | 0180 : 00 : 00 | 006 : 15 : 00 |
| | Bothe the moieties of Ballynebarney | 0208 : 03 : 24 | 007 : 10 : 00 |
| | A third part of Ardscall | 0112 : 02 : 00 | 005 : 16 : 10 |
| | Little Burton | 0256 : 00 : 00 | 009 : 12 : 00 |
| | The moiety of Moone | 0853 : 00 : 00 | 026 : 15 : 00 |
| | Symonstowne | 0270 : 00 : 00 | |
| | Mullaghamast | 0064 : 00 : 00 | 036 : 3 : 00 |
| | Ballycullan | 0546 : 33 : 00 | 029 : 09 : 06 |
| | Norrancheegg, Ballyneacary, and Tal- | 0600 : 00 : 00 | |
| | lenstowne. | | |
| | Ballyvasse | 0105 : 00 : 00 | 070 : 00 : 00 |
| | Hubbardstowne | 0355 : 00 : 00 | |
| | Bathsqubline | 0091 : 00 : 00 | |
| | Grant and Little Bellan with the Pill | 0730 : 00 : 00 | 039 : 03 : 00 |
| | Andree | 0457 : 00 : 00 | 050 : 00 : 00 |
| | St. Johns, with SkonghneMoone | 0101 : 00 : 00 | 015 : 00 : 11 |
| | Ballyhead alias Headstowne | 0310 : 00 : 00 | 011 : 14 : 00 |
| | Ballybarney | 0028 : 00 : 00 | 001 : 01 : 00 |
| | Bellaune and a wood called Killeenbooly | 0060 : 00 : 00 | 007 : 10 : 00 |
| | Killeenoe | 0235 : 1 : 12 | 008 : 16 : 05 |
| | Gartinvaccon | 0194 : 00 : 00 | 007 : 05 : 06 |

John Annesley, Captain.—Arrears on resignation of Lientenancy.—13 May.

Lawrence Esmond, Esquire.—“That whereas, by several orders from the late Lords Justices, Adventurers and soldiers in possession of lands in this kingdom were prohibited and strictly commanded to desist from destroying of woods, falling of timber, and committing of wast, which might very much redound to the prejudice of the publique and the great damage of proprietor restorable, yett contrary and in contempt of the said orders Bartholomew Hussey, Captain Sheares, and others have felled many hundred timber trees fitt for building shippis and other publique vses, in and neere Dromederry, Ballyconlogher, in the county of Wexford, part of your supliants estate, which they partly transported into forraigne partes, and sold and converted the same for their owne private vses, and daily persist in cutting downe and destroying the said woods, and knowing that your supliant now proceeds in the prosecution of his clayme to his estate and humbly hopes to participate his Majesties gracious fauor extended to Innocents, the said Bartholomew, Captain Sheares, and their confederates, endeavour with all possible expedition to oppose the same or to remove the said not yett disposed of out of the limits of your supliants lands, to the end that your supliant being restored thereto he should not asise vpon the said timber; to his great and inevitable damage, if not by your Graces order immediately prevented. May it therefore please your Grace to prescribe some effectuall course for restraining the said Bartholomew, Captain Sheares, and all others from further destroying the said woods, and to inhibit the disposing or taking away of such timber as is cutt downe and yett remaines on the premises; as also to inflict such condigne punishment on the said Hussey, Sheares, and others, for transgressing and contemning the above said orders and inhibition as to justice appertaineth; and for the better effecting thereof that your Grace may be pleased to require the High Sherriffe of the County of Wexford for the tyme being, and such others as your Grace shall thinke fitt, to cause your Graces order herein to be duely observed and to be putt in execution. And your supliant will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 9 May 1663.

“Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Conncell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shall be thought fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Edward Butler, of Moynihora, in the co. Wexford, Esquire.—Permission to purchase, on Sir John Boyse's valuation, the timber on Moynihora lands, security being given for payment should petitioner not be restored to said lands.—7 May 1663.

Robert Mapother, formerly in the army.—Payment of arrears and admission to Sir Arthur Forbes's troop.—13 May 1663.

John Harding.—Restoration of fire-arms by the Commissioners of Customs.—13 May 1663.

Richard Finch.—Arrears due for service in Lord Shannon's troop.—15 May 1663.

Thomas Carr.—“That your Grace, on consideracion of the annexed petition of John Talbott, of Mallahyde, was pleased to direct the Lord Chiefe Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer to graunt vnto the said John Talbott a custodiam, under the seal of that courte, of the mannor of Castle Ring and Lowth, in the county of Lowth, parcell of the late possessions of the said John Talbott as by the annexed order appeares. Now forasmuch as your petitioner is informed it may be of some prejudice to the said John Talbott to take a custodiam of the premisses in his owne name, the petitioner humbly prayeth your grace to give order to the said Barons to grant vnto your petitioner a custodiam vnder the seal of the said courte of the premisses for the vse of and in trust for the said John Talbott, and etc.

“Dub[lin] Castle, 13 Maj 1663.

“If it shall appeare vnto our very good Lord the Lord Chief Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, that the lands aboue mencioned are in his Majesties dispose, wee pray and require them to issue a custodiam thereof vnto the petitioner, as hee desires, vnder the seal of that courte, to continue dureing his Majesties pleasure att such rent as thej shall thinke fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

John and Mathew Slodan.—Permission to deliver to a merchant at Wexford, to whom they had been prevented from delivering it by an order of the Lords Justices, timber felled on lands purchased by petitioners from the soldiery.—14 May 1663.

Robert Thornhill.—“That your petitioner is in restraint, and hath made severall humble aplicacions to his Grace for his inlarginge and relieue toward his great charges and fees; that his Grace hath been pleased to referre your petitioner to this Honourable Board; that by a Committee thereof he hath been examined; that a report thereof hath been made by Sir Paul Davis, Knight; that nothing is found worthy of the least just cause of his restraint or imprisonment; yett canot your petitioner procure his inlargement. Now see it is, may it please your Lordship, that the 26th of March last your petitioner was by his Graces speciall orders comitted close prisoner to the Marshallsay of the City of Dublin; there for the space of fifty dayes past he hath remained; that nothing is laid to your petitioner's charge further then that he was in [the] Barrony of Burin with the Lord Cooto and Sir Hard: Waller when some criminal [act] was comitted by the army; that it is well known your petitioner was not with that party of the army at that time, nor ever in all his life in the said Barrony, and as your petitioner is informed his Grace hath received accompt of the same and that your petitioner is ready to make it further appeare to your Lordships if desired that the time of his imprisonment great charge and fees and neglecting prosecution of his claymes before the commissioners, and other his private occasion in the terme, hath and is like to be your petitioner and his families vtter ruin if not by your Lordships relieue. The premisses tenderly considered, with the inoffensive livinge of your petitioner as a private farmer for twelve years and five monthes past, and the reall sence your petitioner hath of your Lordships justice, clemency, and goodnesse towards any person or family that without any just cause may be ruined and destroyed by imprisonment and the vnreportable charges and fees he is dayly putt vnto; therefore may it please your Lordships to call your petitioner before your honours, and, finding nothing worthy of death, bonds, or imprisonment, to give order for his inlargement with what of your clemency and goodnesse shall seem meete towards his very great [sic] and fees. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 11 May 1663.

“The petitioner givinge bond to the Clerke of the Councell, to his Majesties vse, with sufficient securites of the penalties of one thousand pounds, condicioned that he shall personally appeare before vs and the Councell with[in] ten dayes after notice of such appearance shalbe left att the howse of Joseph Burd, Sward Cutler in Castle Street, Dublin, that he shall not depart with[out] our speciall lycence to be in writing first obtained; vpon certificate of the said Clerke of the Councell of givinge such bond, the Marshall in whose custody the petitioner remaines is to sett him att libertie, [he] paying his fees.

“ORMONDE.”

Katherine Wogan, widow.—“That your petitioner with her poore children being in a most miserable and distressed condicon it pleased the Lords Justices that last were, for their reliefe and maintenance (being like to perish), to grant her a custodiam of some few parcells of her late husbands estate, and soe continued the same and from time to time respited the payment of the said rent, being flortio pounds yearly, the said allowance being scarce able in any wise to maintaine; and whereas it pleased your Grace, by your order dated the 17th of November last, to respite the said rent and arrears till

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

the last of Easter terme, and further, by your order of this May 1663, did grant your petitioner a custodiam of the premises, directed to the Lord Cheife Baron and Barons of His Majesties Exchequer to passe the said custodiam vnder the seale of the said court; yett may it please your Grace the Lord Cheife Baron, notwithstanding his direction to the Clerke of the Pipe, to passe it, according to your gracious order, vnder the seale of his Lordship, afterwards sent him an order not to passe the said custodiam, vntill the said rent and arreares were satisfied and payd. Your petitioner most humbly prayeth that your Grace wilbe favourable pleased to take the distressed condicon of his selfe and her poore children to consideration, and to grant your gracios order for respiting the said rent and arreares vntill November next, and to give your further order to the said Lord Cheife Barron for the passing of the custodiam according to your former order to that effect, that your supliante and children may not perish. And she will ever pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 14 May 1663.

"Lett this peticion be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion and such further order given thereuppon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Gilbert Dane, Edward Wisman, James Wall, Robert Knight, and Peiter Wall, seamen: "That your petitioners are lately arrived in the city [of] Dublin from Burniff [Bourgneuf] in France, in the good shipp called the Constant, of Waynemouth in England; and your petitioners haueing had a long and tedious voyage before their arrivall in Burniffe aforesaid, and their [Captain] here was constrained to take the most part of their wages in French mony, which being brought into this Kingdome or any other of his Majestie's dominions of England would abean a great prejudice and hurt to your petitioners, their wives, children, and family; soe it is may it please your Grace that your petitioners layd forth their wages in France in four small caskes, each one containinge twenty gallance of French wine and a hoggett of the same sort, being all their substance they have to maintaine their families, your petitioners humbly conceiving that a small parcell of wine might be allowed them here for their portage and ancient custome due vnto seamen, whereas, they vnderstand now, noe allowance [is] granted of such a comodity but by your Graces [favor], and therefore are become humble petitioners to your Grace that you wilbe graciously pleased to grant an order to his Majesties Commissioners for Excise and Custome that your petitioners may have the benefit of a bill of store for the landing of the said small parcells of wine here in Dublin, wherby to make sale of the same for the reliefe of them selves and poore families. And they shall pray.

"Dublin Castle, 14 May 1663.

"The Commissioners for the management of His Majesties Custome and Excise are to consider of this peticion and to certify what they shall conceive fitt to be don therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

George Russell:—Custodiam of lands in co. Dublin and of portions of Stradbally.—13 May 1663.

Thomas Wright: "That your petitioner at the beginning of the late warr in Ireland built, sett forth, and maintained a frigott and company with meat, drinke, wages, munition, and all other expences, by vertue of a warrant from the then Lord President of Munster and Councell, and continued in the service of His late Majestie of blessed memory severall monethes without any other supply or assistance; during which time hee damniyed, annoyed, and destroyed the rebells and assisted and preserved the English, all which may particularly appeare by the said warrant and severall certeficates of the Earle of Luchiquine, and many other noblemen and other persons of honour and worth, which your petitioner sett forth in a petition to his sacred Majestie that is, who graciously referred to the late Lords Justices to doe therein for your petitioners satisfaccion as they should thinke fitt; and for that his said service was vpon land as well as sea, hee divers times landing with his said men to kill and pursue the rebells; and now your petitioner being reduced to a very lowe and necessitous condition, your petitioner most humbly requests your Grace to extend your favour to him, by ordering that the accept of his said service with his frigott may bee stated by the Trustees for the [16]49 Security, and satisfied with the officers who served before the said yeare. And hee shall pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, 14 May 1663.
"The Trustees of the Commissioned Officers of the army before the 5th of June 1649 are to consider of this peticion, and to certify vs what they haue to say to the matters therein mentioned.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Richard Barnwall, Knight and Baronet, one of the 36 persons mentioned in Charles II.'s Declaration for the Settlement of Ireland:—Praying that Sir Hans Hamilton and others of the [16]49 Officers may be restrained from disturbing peticione: in possession of property restored to him, and ordered to refund rents received from the tenantry.—14 May 1663.

Thomas Littlejohn, a disbanded soldier of Captain Henry Baker's company.—Arreares.—14 May 1663.

Thomas Willis, of Earle of Anglesey's troop.—Payment of arreares, to enable him "to sitt downe to plant."—14 May 1663.

Abraham Burrowes, a disbanded private of Earle of Meath's troop.—Arreares.—9 May 1663.

James Wailsh, Colonel: "Most humbly sheweth that your petitioner, haueing preferred severall peticions to your Grace, thereby setting forth his sufferings att large for your Grace only, besides the laying out of his owne mony and selling his owne stocke to forward his Majesties service, in obedience to your Graces commands in all respects; that your petitioner was always employed Lientenant of the Ordinance in his Majesties army, by vertue of your Graces commission, and with all faithfulness and loyalty executed the same from the yeare 1646 vnto the yeare 1652, vntill the very last garrison in Ireland was surrendered, your petitioner being governor thereof; all which is very well knowne to the Earles of Castlehauch, Clancarty, Carlingford, and Doctor Fennell; that dureing the said time your petitioner never received one monethes meanes, in relacicon to the said employment, as evidently appeareth by the testimonie of the then Deputie Receiver to Sir George Hamilton, Barronet, Receiver Generall of Ireland, notwithstanding the annexed order of your Grace for the payment thereof; that your poore petitioner from time to tyme lined att home and in the field, in his Majesties service, vnder your Graces command, vpon the smale stocke of mony the petitioner and his poore wife brought into the kingdome to maintaine themselves and their children; all which, together with other his sufferings for his loyalty, reduced your supliant to a famishing condicon if not relifed by your Grace. The premisses most tenderly considered, and for that your petitioners religion (as he is informed; makes him vncapable of receauing any satisfaction for his former services; he therefore most humbly implores your Grace will be pleased effectually to recommend him [to] the '49 Securitie, that he may haue a farme from them att an easy rent, haueing noe other way to propose himselfe for a liuelyhood. And hee will ever pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 14 May 1663.

"Vpon consideracion of the within peticion, wee are pleased for the reasons therein expressed hereby to recommend to the Trustees of the Commissioned Officers that served his Majestie before the fifth of June 1649 to prefer the petitioner to some lands in their dispose, att such moderate rent as he may receive something thereout for his present reliefe, and as they, vpon consideration of his services and present condicon, shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Seward: "May it please your Grace, in obedience to your Graces order, I have informed my selfe touching the truth of the allegations mentioned in the peticion of Thomas Seward, and I find by a certificate herevnto annexed vnder the hand of Edward Roberts, one of the late pretended auditors, that the said Seward was employed in the time of the late vsurped powers to prepare and examine the accompts of all monyes att any [time] impressed or paid to any regiment, troop, or company, or other person vpon accompt vpon which considerable summs were due and payable to his Majestie; and that he continued in that employment about a yeare, for which service he was promised a salary of 60*l*.; but by reason that it appeared by the said certificate that he hath not as yett received any satisfaction for his said employment, I am humbly of opinion that your Grace may be pleased, to give order to the Court of Exchequer to respite the summ of 22*l*. 0*9s*. 6*d*., mentioned in his peticion to be charged vpon him, vntill farther order from your grace and the Councell; which is humbly submitted to your consideration, etc.

"JA[MES] WARE."

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Dublin, Castle, 14 May 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the foregoing certificat of of Sir James Ware, Knight, his Majesties Auditor General, made in pursuants of our order [of] reference of the 28th of Aprill last, wee thinke fit and doe order that the Barrons and officers of his Majestie's Court of Exchequer whom it may any way concerne shall respite the twenty-two pounds nine shillings sixpence, mentioned in the said certificate, untill wee and the Councell shall give further order concerning the same.

"ORMONDE."

Geoffrey Lynch, Merchant.—Permission to trade in Galway, and release from custody of the Mayor, etc., of that city.—14 May 1663.

Michael Jones.—Recovery of debt from Ralph Barber, of Sir Theophilus Jones's troop.—15 May 1663.

Patrick Roberts, "eldest sonn of Doctor William Roberts, late King at Armes in Ireland."

"That whereas many persons of good accompt, and families; haue and doe dayly transport themselves and families from England and other places this kingdome of Ireland, intending to settle themselves here; but being strangers, and want[ing] acquaintance, they not only spend time but also exhaust their substance, whereby some are enforced to returne to the place from whence they came. That many gent[lemen] and others haue often an occasion for severall sorts of servants, and many there are who desire to be entertained as servants, as also many desire to buy, sell, take, and sett lands, houses, goods, etc. within this kingdome, but the one not knowing where to repaire to the other, both parties remaine vnprovided still inquiring at severall places, to noe purpose but to their great disadvantage. For prevention of the like inconveniences, and severall others of that nature, there is an office erected in London, called the Office of Adresse, to which all persons there doe repaire and enter their names with the place of their aboad, and soe receive notice at their respective lodgings without further inquiry or trouble, which renders the petitioner humbly bold to conceiue the like advantage might accrue to all concerned here if your Grace would be pleased to countenance the petitioner therein. The petitioner therefore humbly prayeth your Grace to consider the premises, and for that the said office may be very beneficiall to all persons concerned, to bee pleased to give licence to the petitioner to publish the said office through out this kingdome, and the petitioner shall pray, etc.

"PATR. ROBERTS."

"Dublin Castle, 18 May 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented to vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given thereupon as shall be thought fit.

"ORMONDE."

John Beauchamp.—Custodiam of lands in county of Carlow.—18 May 1663.

Colonell Thomas Scott, Collonell Richard Lehunt, Collonell John Brett, Collonell John Warren, Collonell Robert Sanders, Captain William Ivory, Captain Richard Nun, Captain Felix Long, Major John Dennison, Francis Harry, Esquire, Richard Roe, Theodore Murphy, and others:—Humbly sheweth that there hath a commission lately issued out of his Majesties High Courte of Chancery and since returned for the enquiry into, and finding his Majesties title, to severall lands in the county of Wexford, in order, as your petitioners are informed to the settling of five hundred pounds per annum vpon Daniell O'Neile, Esquire, one of the Groomes of his Majesties Bedchamber; that the lands thereby returned to bee forfeited are in your petitioner's possession, and were sett out vnto them in satisfaccion of their arreares, and possessed by them the 7th day of May 1659, and confirmed to them as they humble conceane by the Act of Settlement. May it therefore please your Grace not to grant any order for the passing of any letters patents or custodiam of any of the said lands to any person whatsoever untill your petitioners right bee first heard. And your petitioners will pray, etc.

"RICHARD LEHUNT, J. BRETT, JOHN WARREN, THOMAS SCOTT, FELIX LONGE, WM. IVORY."

"Dublin Castle, 19 May 1663.

"Lett this petition bee shewed vnto the within named Mr. O'Neile his agent, who is required to shew cause (if any he can) why the petitioners request should not bee granted.

"ORMONDE."

Michael Bodkin, of Galloway, Merchant.—Release of petitioner's brother from imprisonment, and permission to pursue his calling unmolested.—18 May 1663.

George, Viscount Grandison.—Arrears of pay as Captain in Lord Lieutenant's troop.—19 May 1663.

Nicholas Mitchell.—"In most humble manner sheweth and complaineth vnto your Grace that whereas by some false pretended order your poore petitioner hath been to goale comitted by one Captain William Taylor, haneing noe ground for the same onely the imitating of high treasonable words which the said Taylor spoke against his Majestie, and although your petitioner is able to justify the words soe spoken by the said Taylor; yett, notwithstanding, may it please your Grace, your petitioner hath been kept close prisoner in the aforesaid goale for the space of five weekes and three dayes, to his damage of ten pounds sterling, and likewise to his vtter ruine and destruction if not by your Grace immediately releived. May it therefore please your Grace to grant an order whereby the said Taylor may be compelled to appeare before any magistrate whom your Grace shall thinke fit, to shew reason, if any he can, for his treasonable words soe spoken, and alsoe to satisfy your poore petitioner for his losses sustained during the tyme of his imprisonment, otherwise to shew cause to the contrary; and this granted to your poore petitioner, as in duty bound will praye.

"Dublin Castle, 18 May 1663.

"Wee pray our very good Lord, the Lord Baron of Santry, Lord Cheife Justice of his Majesties Court of Cheife place to informe himself concerning the matter above mentioned, and to certify vs what his Lordship shall conceive fit to be don therein.

"ORMONDE."

William Dodson.—"That Arthur Dillon being by lycence from your Grace prosecuted att law by the petitioner, vpon a judgment, given by [against] him the said Dillon for payment of arrears of rent due for certaine lands by him held in the county of Monahan, which is still vnatisfisied, and being therefore much incensed with your petitioner did not long since meeting him in the streete abuse your petitioner both in words and with violent blowes; for which cause your petitioner most humbly prayes that the said Major [Dillon] being a member of the army your Grace wilbe pleased to give lycence that your petitioner may take his remedy against the said Major, for such his abuse according to due course of law, and your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 18 May 1663.

"Major Arthur Dillon above-named is hereby required, within fiftene dayes after sight or notice hereof, to shew cause (if any he can) why the petitioners request should not be granted.

"ORMONDE."

Nicholas Osborn, Esquire.—Payment, under order of Lords Justices, of expences incurred in collecting Polemoney and bringing same to Dublin.—28 Aprill 1663.

William Quarry, a disbanded soldier of Lord Shannon's troop.—Arrears.—19 May 1663.

Garrett Newgent, William Arllon, Richard Hoy, Richard Mottly, and Katherine Crolly of Athy.

"That your petitioners being invited to signe vnto and embrace a Remonstrance of their loyalty and fidelity vnto his sacred Majestie vpon the 8th day of March 1662, and being together the said day vnto the occasion aforesaid, one William Weldon of Athy, Esquire, with severall others seized vpon the bodies of your petitioners and bound them over to the last assizes att Naas in the county of Kildare, where, for their said meeting, your petitioners were fined in five pounds sterling a peece, besides thirty-six shillings fees paid by each of them to the vtter ruin of them and their children, clearly disabling them to pay either subsidy or country charges, if [not] relieved. The extreme poverty and loyal intention of your petitioners tenderly considered, may it please your Grace in charity to remit the said fines by your order to Mr. Justice Booth, by whome the same were imposed, and before the same be estreated into his Majesties Exchequer. And your petitioners shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 18 May 1663.

"Wee pray and require Mr. Justice Booth, who imposed ffynes above mentioned vpon the petitioners to certify vs the reasons of their being soe fined, together with his opinion what he conceaues fit to be don touching their request.

"ORMONDE."

Philip Alden.—"Sheweth unto your Grace that in November last the petitioner was by your Graces order committed to the Castle of Dublin, and before hee was released ordered by your Grace to give bonds of 500*l.* sterling to appeare before your Grace when required, with severall other particulars in the said bond specified

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

which much hinder the petitioner in the course of his calling. Now in regard your petitioner is a loyal and peaceable subject, and noe waies guilty of any thing that may render him suspicious to your Grace, and in regard your Grace hath been pleased to discharge the bonds of Dr. Carteret, Colonel Daniel Abbott, and Major John Desborough, who were in the like condicion with your petitioner; may it therefore please your Grace to extend the same favour to your petitioner, that so hee may with freedom, as other his Majesties subjects, attend his calling and hee shall, &c.

"Dublin Castle, 20th May 1663.

"Vpon consideration of this petition, wee are pleased and doe order, that the clerke of the Councell to whom the bond of 500l. within mentioned to bee entered into by the petitioner, pursuant to our order, was given, shall forthwith deliver vp the same to the petitioner to bee cancelled, and for so doing this shall be to the said Clerke of the Councell a sufficient warrant.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Christopher Aylmer, Baronet.—To stay passing of custodiam of lands in co. Louth to Lord Massereene and remove his agent from possession of same, said lands being held by petitioner under grant.—20 May 1663.

Daniel O'Kieffe, Captain.—"That pursuant to his Majesties letter to the late Lord Justices of Ireland hereunto annexed, the said Lord Justices have granted the annexed order that the petitioner should bee forthwith restored to and established in the quiett and peaceable possession of all his lands, tenements, hereditaments, etc., whereof hee was dispossessed by the late vsurped power; praying and requiring the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, to putt the premisses out of charge. Now so it is that the said Court would not putt the said lands out of charge without your Graces privy seale to warrant them. The premisses considered, and for that a seizure is like suddenly to issue out of the said Court if not timely prevented, it may please your Grace to grant unto your petitioner the said order vnder your Graces hand and privy signett, and hee will pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 14 Martij 1663[-4].

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shall bee taken into consideration, and such further order given thereupon as shall bee thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Richard Barnewall, Knight and Baronett.—"Sheweth to your Grace that by his Majesties gracious Declaration and Act it is provided, amongst other things, that the thirty-six persons therein particularly named, or any of them, fynding any part of his or their estate in his Majesties hands and not in the possession of any of the adventurers or souldiers, that the said person or persons soe named should be put in possession of such lands; and whereas parcells of your petitioners estate in the county of Meath and Kildare are not in the possession of any adventurer or souldier: May it therefore please your Grace, in pursuance of his Majesties said Declaration and Act, to order that your petitioner be putt in possession of the said lands, and hee shall ever pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 5 June 1663.

"His Majesties Councell learned, or any two of them, are to informe themselves concerning the allegations within mencioned, and to certify vs what they shall find, with their opinion what they shall conceive fitt to bee done in this matter.

"ORMONDE."

Henry Sibbald.—Leave to dispose of timber, etc., on lands in Queen's county under covenant in lease from John Vaghane, an Adventurer.—1 May 1663.

Owen Vaughane and George Cushell, Farmers of wine and Strong-water licences, Galway.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—22 May 1663.

Same Petitioners.—Like petition.—22 May 1663.

Katherine Teig alias Naughten and James Teig, her son. Re-possession of lands in co. Galway, formerly held by her "from Usurped Powers," and now restored to Ormonde.—20 May 1663.

Thomas Reynolds.—Recovery of debts from Arthur Bowen, of the Guard of Horse, and Nicholas Harman, of the Battelaves.—21 May 1663.

Henry Morgan, late of Sir Henry Tichborne's troop.—Arrears.—9 May 1663.

Francis Spence, Captain.—Annulling of custodiam of Sir Pierce Crosby's lands, granted to Col. FitzPatrick, and placing of said lands out of charge till after recovery of petitioner's debt, for which an elegit had been issued.—20 May 1663.

Thomas Doleing and Roger Pemberton, Farmers of wine and Strong-water licences in the counties of Louth and Kildare and King's and Queen's counties.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—23 May 1663.

Edward Owens, a disbanded private of Earl of Meath's troop.—Arrears.—22 May 1663.

Thomas Martin, Merchant.—"That the petitioner being at present not above thirty yeares old, whereof he spent twentie yeares in service and trafficke vpon his owne accompt constantly beyond the seas; now, vpon returne, intending to settle himselfe in a course of trading in his owne native towne of Galloway, finds himself obstructed in that behalfe, vnlesse lycensed by your Graces speciall orders; wherefore, and for that your petitioner hath not been in the country to be turned out of the said towne for security, nor was he guilty of any crime which might now draw suspicion vpon his loyalty; he humbly prayeth your Grace to grant him lycence to dwell and live there with his servants and family to trade and trafficke by and sell, as freely as any of the now present inhabitants thereof. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 20 May 1663.

"Wee are pleased and doe order that the petitioner giving sufficient security to the Maioir of the towne of Galloway that he shall carry himselfe quietly and peaceably according [to the laws] of the land, and not act any thing to the prejudice of his Majestie or his service, he shall be permitted to inhabe in that towne and trade there by the whole sale but not by retails; whereof the said Maioir and all others whom it may any waye concerne are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Ralph Rochford.—Recovery of debt from Lieutenant Thomas Evelyn.—14 May 1663.

Patrick Gibbons and Joann his wife.—Recovery of debt due to James Luttrell by Hugh Danyes, of the army.—21 May 1663.

Francis King, Captain.—Reimbursement of moneys expended in payment of his company's arrears, on disbanding, an assignment on the Galway Pole-money, made to meet their demands, having proved insolvent.—22 May 1663.

Margaret Elis, widow of Thomas Elis, late of the army in Ireland.—Payment of her husband's arrears.—21 May 1663.

Martin Blake, a native of Galloway.—Leave to reside and trade in Galloway.—20 May 1663.

Rowland McQuillan.—Recovery of debt from Edmond Eddison, one of the soldiers at Carrickefergus Castle.—25 May 1663.

Maurice Birckly.—To be placed on master-rol of men enlisted in lieu of those discharged from Sir Robert Biron's company.—26 May 1663.

Arthur, Earl of Anglesey.—Custodiam of lands in co. Meath.—20 May 1663.

Same Petitioner.—A Report by John Byssie, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and Richard Kennedy, Baron of the Exchequer, on order of 30 April 1663, relative to custodiam of lands in co. Cork.—13 May 1663.

Report by [Arthur,] Earl of Anglesey, Vice-Treasurer and Treasurer at War, on a petition for removal of check from pay (petitioner not named).—26 May 1663.

Thomas Harley.—To be re-instated as "Purveyor "Carriage maker and wheelwright to his Majesties Ordinance in Ireland," in which capacity, during the Earl of Strafford's viceroynalty, he had expended 3,000l. still unpaid, on war material.—26 May 1663.

John, Viscount Massereene.—Petition and answer to Sir Christopher Aylmer's petition concerning custodiam of lands in co. Louth.—22 May 1663.

Same Petitioner.—Petition and answer to complaint of Ignatius Plunkett, Philip Bane Callan, Phelemy McGwinn, Denis Birne, Thomas Magniss, Ferdora McKenna, Patrick Carrill, Patrick Roe Carrill, Patrick Callan, and William Mcittegart, "who call themselves "tenants of Mathew Plunkett, Esqre., of the mannor "of Lowth and Heynestowne, in the county of Lowth." Prays leave to proceed at law with respect to above-named persons' tenancies and the disputes arising from Lord Massereene's custodiam.—22 May 1663.

Symon Young.—"That in April 1655 your petitioner did contract with the then pretended Commissioners of Revenue for a lease of a house on the Wood-Key, Dublin, for the terme of three yeares at the yearly rent of eight pounds, which said house was then in the possession of the Lady Derenzie, who refusing to give your petitioner the possession thereof, your petitioner applyed himselfe to the then pretended Deputy and Councell, and desired that they would give order that your petitioner might bee put into the possession of the said house, and that

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

the said Lady might bee otherwise provided for, who thereupon ordered that the said Commissioners of Revenue should putt your petitioner in possession of the said house, but the said Commissioners refused and did make retaine to the said pretended Deputy and Council, that they had not power to putt your petitioner in the possession thereof. By which meanes your petitioner could not nor ever did enjoy the said house, nor did hee ever raise any manner of profit or benefit by the said contract as by the annexed affidavit may appeare; your petitioner further sheweth that afterwards the said Commissioners of Revenue did sett the same house to Samuell Bathurst, Esquire, for the terme of thirty-one yeares, under the yearly rent of six pounds and did cancell the lease or contract made to your petitioner and did intend to discharge him of the rent of the said house. Notwithstanding all which, your petitioner being returned into the Auditors Office stands charged with the said rent of eight pounds, and processe hath issued out of his Majesties Court of Exchequer for the same. Now forasmuch as it appeares by the Report of his Majesties Auditor Generall that your petitioner could not gett the possession of the said house, though hee used all lawfull endeavours to have gotte the same, and that hee never received any rent or other profit of the said house; may it therefore please your Grace to take the premisses into consideration, and to grant an order under your privy seale requiring the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, to discharge your petitioner of the arrears of the said rent now remaining in charge in the said Court, and hee will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 20 May 1663.

"Wee pray Sir James Ware, Knight, his Majesties Auditor Generall, to informe himselfe concerning the matter mentioned in this petition, and to certify to vs what hee shall finde, together with his opinion what hee shall conceave fitt to be done therein.

"ORMONDE."

Robert Sill, Farmer of Wine and strong-water licences in Longford and Westmeath counties.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—27 May 1663.

Same Petitioner.—Like petition.—27 May 1663.

Same Petitioner.—Like petition.—27 May 1663.

Joseph Bowsfeild.—Release from custody, having been "commanded from his horse by Corporall Butler, Corporall of your Graces Lieve Guard of horse, vpon your Graces order, . . . to his Majesties Castle of "Dublin and thence to Newgate."—2 June 1662.

Elizabeth, wife of Henry Jones, of Stillorgan.—"That your petitioners husband did, on the 25th of this instant May, in pursuance of your Graces late proclamation, render himselfe, although hee never did in truth absent himselfe from the place of his residence, not being conscious to himselfe of anything by him done contrary to his Majesties Government or the peace of his kingdomes; wherevpon he was committed to the custody of the Sarjaunt at Armes, and there remaines a close prisoner, your petitioner nor any other, save the servants of the said Sarjaunt at Armes, not being permitted to come to him or bring any manner of provision to him. That for as much as your petitioner beleaves and hopes it will appeare to your Graces satisfaction that your petitioner's said husband is wholly innocent, and never since his Majesties happy restoracon was party to any conspiracie or contrivance against his Majesties person, his Crowne, or Dignity, or the peace of his kingdomes. For as much also as your petitioners said husband is again, in the motion of Mr. Wolverston, summoned to appeare before the Commissioners for executing the Act of Settlement, and is like too have advantage taken against him by reason of his present restraint, and your oratrix with seven small children at this season of the yeare when shee cannot provide herselfe with a habitation and farme convenient for her stock disposed of their present being; for as much also as your petitioners said husband is, in the place where now hee is in restraint, exposed to a charge exceeding about the ability of his estate to beare, shee most humbly implores your Graces favourable commiseracion of her distressed condition in ordering her said husbands remoucall to some other place of lesse charge, or if it may seem meet to your Grace his enlargement vpon security for his appeareance when required. And shee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 2 June 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioner and the solicitor which her husband appoints to follow his law businesse bee admitted to speake with him in the presence of the Sarjaunt at Armes in whose custody hee is; whereof the said Sarjaunt is to take notice, and to admitt them to speake with the petitioner accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Butler, Esquire, "late Receiver of his Majesties Revenue in the Kings County, Catherlogh, "Queenes county, and Kilkenny."—Allowance of amount of insolvent assignment on Lieutenant-Colonel John Nellson, and leave to see Nellson.—1st June 1663. Gilbert Mabbott, "his Majesties Agent for granting "wine and strongwaters licences."—Recovery of contract amounts from licence farmers in Leinster and Connaght, who, having compounded with retailers, refuse payment of same.—1 June 1663.

John Enstace, of Ross, co. Wexford.—Lease of a house in Ross, or compensation, before ejection, for improvement on same.—26 May 1663.

Sir Theophilus Jones, Knight.—To be continued as yearly tenant of lands, held from the Crown, in co. Kildare.—18 May 1663.

Jeremy Russell.—Praying to be released from the custody of the Pursuivant, and to be continued in the tenancy of lands in the county of Dublin, the former tenant's interest in which had been purchased by petitioner.—1 June 1663.

William Hewlett:—"Sheweth vnto your Grace that about a quarter of a year agoe your petitioner was taken out of his bedd and comitted a close prisoner in his Majesties Castle of Dublin, and hath beene see kept languishing in irons ever since his said comittal, the cause whereof is vtterly unknowne to your petitioner, neither is hee conscious of himselfe of any thought, word, or act that may render him suspicious of the least crime towards his Sacred Majestie or the publike peace. May it therefore please your Grace to bring your petitioner to a speedy trial, or else to enlarge your petitioner, or att least enlarge the limits of your petitioners confinement, in regard the straytnesse of the roomes where your petitioner now is, with the heate of the weather, are very prejudicial to his health, and he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 2 Juny. 1663.

"The Constable of the Castle, in whose custody the petitioner doth remaine, is to see that he be placed in a convenient room as he may be kept in safe custody.

"ORMONDE."

Mary, wife of William Hewlett.—"That your petitioner having bin near twelue months in England, at her returne hither (now a month sithence) found her said husband a close prisoner in irons in his Majesties Castle of Dublin, for what cause your petitioner knoweth not, but is most confident of his innocency of any crime whatsoever whereof he may possibly be accused or suspected, and yett, to the greater agravation of his and your petitioners misery and sorrow, she hath bin hitherto denyed any accesse to him, which shee hopeth is not by your Graces order, your said poore prisoners litle meanes of livelyhood being altogether a loosing whiles hee can neither looke after it himselfe nor your petitioner be admitted to receive his direction what to doe therein. The premisses tenderly considered, your petitioners humble suite is that your Grace will give speedy order to the Constable of the Castle for the disburthening of her said poore husband of his irons and to admitt your petitioner to have free accesse to him as often as their occasions will necessarily require. And she shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 27 April 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioner have liberty to speake with her husband, the above named William Hewlett, as often as shee shall thinke necessary, about her affaires; provided that whensoever shee shall desire to speake with him, shee give notice thereof to Sir John Stephens, Knight, Governour of his Majesties Castle, who is to send an officer to be present at all times when the petitioner shall speake with her said husband, and to heare what discourse shall passe between them.

"ORMONDE."

Benjamin Crofts.—Praying that an assignment on the Quit Rents of Cork, passed to petitioner, for money due by Corporall John Melsame may be accepted in satisfaction of balance due by petitioner on foot of an account between him and the Crown, he being a great Accountant to his Majestie.—15 May 1663.

Inhabitants of the town of Catherlagh [Carlow].—"That where[as] the troope of Horse, late under the comand of Major Tho. Harmon by your Grace appointed, have been quartered in the towne of Catherlagh aforesaid vpon your suppliants, who for the tyme the said troope therein continued have been aforded accomodation for man and horse vpon Major Harmons engagement to the petitioners for satisfiacon, and that during the said troope[s] continuance therein vpon the said

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

petitioners they have become ingaged vnto your supliants respectively in the severall summs to their [names] respectively in a list herenvto annexed, whereby your petitioners in generall are reduced to a very low and deplorable condicion. In tender consideracion of the premisses, and for as much as your petitioners relyed altogether vpon Major Harmons said ingagment, and the rather that the same troope belonged vnto your Grace, your petitioners humble request is, you wilbe graciously piously pleased to order present satisfaccion for your oratours, otherwise way [sic] whereby your petitioners may [be] at liberty to take their legall course against the said Major Harmon for their redresse. And they shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 26 May 1663.

"Wee pray the Committee of the Councill for the affaires of the Army to take this petition into their present consideracion, to examine the allegations thereof, and to certify vs what they find, together with their opinion how and in what manner the petitioners may be most speedily relieved and satisfied what shall appeare to be due vnto them.

"ORMONDE."

John Sam, James Brookes. Robert Griffen, Richard Barton, Henry Carr, Walter White, Samuel Brookes, Robert Valentine, Edward Willson, John Mooney, Richard Mooney, Samuell Dixon, Hugh Johnson, Robert Fanning, Margery Barker, relict of Richard Barker, who had served Charles I., "in the late warre in Ireland."—Arrears.—1 June, 1663.

Cornelius Horan, servant to Robert Shapcote, Esquire.—"That whereas your petitioners said master is lately confuted to his chamber at Captain Carpenters, and beeing desirous to have some cleane linnen and other small necessities, viz., his morning gowne, slippers, capps, and such like, ordered your petitioner to bring him the same. Now, forasmuch as the said Captain Carpenter is so strict that he will not admitt your petitioner or any other of his servants to come within sight or speech of his said master to furnish him with the necessities aforesaid, without your Graces special order, and that your petitioner desires no more but that hee may deliuer his said Master such necessities from time to time in the presence of the said Captain Carpenter, or of whom hee shall appoint, your petitioner therefore most humbly prays that your Grace would be pleased to order the said Captain Carpenter to admitt your petitioner from time to time to the presence of his said Master, with such necessities as hee the said Capitaine Carpenter shall thinke fit. And hee will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, the 3 June 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioner bee admitted to carry to his Master, the aboue named Robert Shapcote, such necessities as are mentioned in the petition, and deliuer the same in the presence of the Sarjant at Armes in whose custody hee is.

"ORMONDE."

Alexander Atkins, Esquire.—Praying that report on former petition concerning matter in dispute with Lieutenant William St. George may be expedited.—4 June 1663.

Edmond Skerrett, Dominick Skerrett, and Edmond Skerrett, the younger.—Permission to Edmond the younger to enter claim in Court of Claims, and to Edmond the elder, and Dominick, permission to amend theirs.—3 June 1663.

Thomas Harley.—"That your petitioner bought of Thomas Partman and John Cully severall parcellis of timber in the county of Wexford, which tymer your petitioner hath wrought and prepared for his Majesties vse, which now lyeth in the woods there, and, if not remoued, will suffer much prejudice and great loss to your petitioner and the service for which it is fited for; wherefore your petitioner most humbly prayeth your Grace may be pleased to give license vnto your petitioner for to bring the said tymer vnto Dublin to be employed for his Majesties vse as aforesaid. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 26 Maj 1663.

"If the tymer aboue-mentioned have been cutt and prepared for his Majesties vse, and the parties of whome it was bought bee satisfied for the same, the petitioner is to bee at liberty to bring the said tymer to Dublin, without lett or hindrance, to bee employed for his Majesties service; whereof all persons whome it may concerne are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Robert Nettervill, in behalf of himself, his brother and sisters:

"That the petitioners, the younger children of John, Lord Viscount Nettervill, being ignorant of the settlement made by their deceased grandfather for their porcion and maintenaunce, omitted to putt in their claime within the time limited, which being taken by his Majesty into consideracion, hee hath been graciously pleased to signify his Royall pleasure to your Grace, as by the annexed copy of his Majesties letter may appeare; they therefore most humbly beseech your Grace, pursuant to his Majesties said pleasure signified in their behalfe, to give order to the Commissioners of the Court of Clayms to receive their claime concerning the portions and yearly maintenaunce settled on them, and to afford them a speedy hearing therevpon within the time prefixed for innocencie. And they will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 June 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe fitt.

"ORMONDE."

James Archdekin, and John Archdekin and Mary his wife.—Permission to enter claim in Court of Claims.—3 June 1663.

Terence Molloy, Captain.—"That your petitioner hath followed his Majesties fortunes abroad, and now is employed as one of the guard of his Royall Highnes the Duke of Yorke; that during the time of your petitioners continuance beyond the seas his clayme was not entred pursuant to his Majesties Commissioners instructions for putting in execution the Act of Settlement for Ireland; and that your petitioner hath not bene in this kingdome vntill it was within these six or seven dayes last past, which occasioned that your petitioner entered not his clayme to his litle patrimony. Vpon consideracion whereof your petitioner humbly prayeth your Grace to afford vnto your petitioner the benefit of his Majesties letter of 21th of February last, and to order that your petitioner bee admitted to enter his claime before the honorable Commissioners for executing the Act of Settlement. And your petitioner will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 June 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Arthur Molloy, Captain.—"That your petitioner followed his Majesties fortunes abroad, being a Captain vnder his Majesties Royall command these eight or nyne yeare past, till lately he came to this Kingdome; that he was out of the said Kingdome when the claymes were entered; that he cannot recover his title birth right before his clayme be entered, though particularly named in his Majesties gracious declaration to be restored. Vpon consideracion whereof your petitioner humbly prayeth your Grace to order that he may be admitted to enter his clayme before the honorable the Commissioners for executing the Act of Settlement pursuant to his Majesties letter of 21th of February last. And your petitioner will pray.

"Dublin, 3rd June 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Peter Phiberd.—Arrears due to him as gunner's mate at Rincoran and Kinsale.—26 May 1663.

Dame Margaret Bolton.—"That your Grace haueing been pleased to give orders for debentures of the arrears of sallary and pension of the petitioners deceased husband, the late Lord Chancellor of Ireland, your supliant humbly desires that vntill the payment of the severall summs appeareing to be due by the said debenture[s] be established and settled, your Grace would be pleased to give order for her present reliefe, that she may receive such a proportion thereof from time to tyme as may in some measure disburden the very heavy weight of necessitous want vnder which shee suffers. And she will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 20 May 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Tigh, Alderman.—"That the Sherriffe of the county of Roscomon hath lately seised on ninety steeres and fifteen hundred sheepe or thereabouts being on certaine lands in the county of Roscomon and possessed by the petitioners son in law, Theophilous Sandford, as conceiving his Majesty to be intitled to the same now vppon the said Sandfords comittall; that the said sheepe

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

are the petitioners and not belonging to the said Sandford. Now for as much as the petitioner is ready to acknowledge a recognizance before the Lord Chief Baron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer to have the said steeres and sheepe forthcoming whensoever it shalbe required, and for that otherwise they may be in great danger to be lost or spoiled; may it therefore please your Grace to order such recognizance to be taken of the petitioner, and thereupon the said steeres and sheepe to be delivered to the petitioner or to whom he shall appoint. And he shall pray.

"Dublin Castle, 3 Junij 1663.

"The Lord Chief Baron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer is to take sufficient recognizance of the petitioner, with conditions that he shalbe answerable for the sheepe and cattle above mencioned, and vpon certificate of his Lordship of the petitioners giving such recognizance, the Sherriffe of the county of Roscomon is to restore the said sheepe and cattle to the petitioner, or to any other whom he shall appoint to receive them.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Nicholas Armorer, Knight.—Particulars to facilitate completion of patent for lands, of which the valuation, ordered by his Majesty, had been returned.—4 May 1663.

James Haylls, Merchant.—Permission to enter claim in Court of Claims.—3 June 1663.

Robert Dillon.—Permission to enter claim for remainder interest under conveyance executed by his grandfather for settling his estates.—4 June 1663.

Robert Browne.—Recovery of debt from Thomas Grumley, of the Earl of Drogheda's troop.—3 June 1663.

Robert Lesly, Bishop of Raphoe.—Sealed order for placing arrears out of charge.—4 June 1663.

Sir Allen Brodericke, Knight.—Praying that his brother Sir John may have the custodiam of lands previously granted to petitioner.—2 June 1663.

James Dillon and Ann his wife.—"That your petitioners have a clayme to be tryed suddainly in his Majesties Court of Claimes, erected for the Settlement of Ireland, for Pierstowne Marshall, and other lands in the counties of Meath and Dublin, conveyed on the said Ann by Mathias Barnwall, of Brymore, in the county of Dublin, Esquire, deceased, for her jointure, for that Lieutenant Colonel George Smith, a member of his Majesties army garisoned at the Naun in the county of Meath, who is a materiall witness in the behalfe of the petitioners; therefore your petitioners most humbly pray that your Grace may be pleased to give order that the said Captain Smith may be admitted to repaire to Dublin before the 11th day of this instant June to give his testimony according to his knowledge on the behalfe of the petitioners. And they shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 Junij 1663.

"When the petitioners clayme shall come to be heard, wee are pleased that Leivtenant-Colonel George Smith be present to give his testimony in the matter, soe as he shall not thereby be absent above ten [days] from his quarters.

"ORMONDE."

John Tasburgh.—Custodiam of lands in county Carlow, the property of Garald McEdmond Kavanagh, of Ballyknocke, Dermott McEdmond Kavanagh, Garald McMurtagh Kavanagh, Dermott Lorygarig, and Edmond McDavid Byrne, "all Irish Papists".—4, June 1663.

Bartholomew Wickam, formerly under Sir Walter Dungan's command.—Permission to renew claim for his property.—4 June 1663.

Edward Howlett, in behalf of himself and seven other soldiers of Sir William Merediths troop.—Arrears.—9 May 1663.

Alice Duncome, widow.—Restoration of lands, etc., at Navan, secured to her by court of claims, but which had been seized for the [16]49 interest as forfeited.—3 June 1663.

Richard Roper.—"That by order of the late Lords Justices he was mustered a supernumerary in the Lord Coloneys troope, and allwaies constantly attended his duty therein (which few or none of the supernumeraries did) to his very great expense, besides the death of two able geldings which he bought for that service, and receiving noe pay because the army was paid on musters taken before the date of your petitioners order, hee was forced to putt himselfe very much in debt beyond his abilities to satisfy without his arreares, on which hee depended to discharge himselfe; that vpon your Graces returne to this Kingdome hee was with the rest of the supernumeraries disbanded and received one moyety of his arreares which did very little towards the discharge of those great debts hee contracted in serving his Majesty though wholly applied to that vse; that hee lately obtained your Graces order to the Muster Master to state the other moyety of his arreares and prepare a warrant, which hee refuses to doe, pretending your Grace hath yett given noe rule for the last moyety of the supernumeraries arreares. Butt in regard the petitioner did constant duty and is noe way able to discharge the said debts, and is threatened and in danger dayly to bee cast into prison to his utter ruine, and being now a servant in your Graces family, hee most humbly beseecheth your Grace to give a positive order to the Muster-Master to prepare a warrant for payment of the other moyety of his arreares, notwithstanding there is yett noe generall rule for the same, and that hee may bee paid the same, it being due since his Majesties happy restoration. And he shall pray, etc,

"Dublin Castle, 1 June 1663.

"Wee pray our very good Lord the Earle of Anglesey, his Majesties Vice Treasurer and Treasurer at Warre to consider of this petition, and to certify vs what his Lordship shall conceine fitt to bee done thereupon.

"ORMONDE."

"James Fitzsymons.—That your petitioners father Christopher Fitzsymons, being a claymant unto a considerable estate, died in February last before the tryall of his claime; that your petitioner is eldest sonne and heire apparent to the said Christopher, and forasmuch as the petitioner did serve his Majesty abroad in forreigne countries with a most reall demonstration of a most constant affection and loyaltye these ten yeares past, of which time hee did suffer fve yeares slavery in the Barbadoes, hee heeing sold and sent thither by Cromwells partie who tooke him in one of his Majesties frigotts; that heeing enlarged and released from that slavery with many other cavaliers, his fellow sufferers, by special order from his Majesty, immediately after his arrival in London was inlisted in this his regiment royall where hee continueth ever since; that your petitioner is reduced unto that poverty as hee hath noe meanes to prosecute his clayme but in forma paperis; and understanding that there is a most gracious letter come from his Majesty for those of his subjects as were abroad, and other distressed persons, for to enter their claimes; it may therefore please your Grace tenderly to consider the premisses, and to grant unto your petitioner an order to enter his claime, pursuant to his Majesties said gracious letter. And hee, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 June 1663.

"Lett this petition bee presented unto us at our next sitting at the Connell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given as shall bee thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Marcus Belling, "heir and executor of his father, Walter".—Leave to enter claim respecting lands in Meath as trustee for the daughters of Andrew Dillon, of Riverstown, in that county.—4 June 1663.

Thomas Eustace, of Confey.—Permission to enter claim in Court of Claims for remainder-right to his grandfather's estate.—5 June 1663.

Mary Sturgys, wife of Andrew Sturgys, prisoner in custody of Captain Carpenter, Sergeant at Arms.—Access to her husband.—5 June 1663.

Walter Lawles.—Permission to renew in his own name claim putt in by his late father for his estate, of which he had been dispossessed by "the late usurped power".—3 June 1663.

John Walsh and Margaret his wife.—Leave to amend claim to Margaret Walsh's jointure as relic of Peter Strange, of Dunkitt, in the county of Kilkenny.—5 June 1663.

Barnaby Fitz-Patrick, Captain.—Permission to enter claim in Court of Claims to remainder in tail of the estate of his father, Barnaby Fitz-Patrick, Baron of Upper Ossory.—5 June 1663.

Peter Archer.—"In most humble manner complaining sheweth unto your Grace that your supliants brother, by name James Archer, late of Kilkenny, deceased, in obedience to his Majesties gracions declaration for the settlement of his kingdome of Ireland, in his lifetime did putt in a claime to severall tenements and lands belonging to him in the citie and county of Kilkenny. So it is, may it please your Grace, that the aforesaid James Archer vpon his death bedd left the charge of six small tender orphans vpon your supliant as guardian to them, and to follow their claime, which your petitioner doth to the best of his endeanours; and viewing some of his writings findes that the claime putt in by your petitioners brother doth

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

not agree with his writings; and inasmuch as by legal course of law when the father dyes the claim may be renewed in the heirs name, your petitioner gott the aforesaid claim renewed according to his writings in the orphans name, not altering any thing of the substance mentioned in the former claim. May it therefore please your Grace, out of your charitable commiseration towards poore distressed widowes and orphans, to grant your order to the Commissioners of the Court of Claimes to accept of the said orphans claim to such lands and tenements claimed by their father before his death as aforesaid. And they, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 4th June 1663.

"Lett this petition bee presented unto vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shall bee taken into consideration, and such further order given therein as shall bee fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Margaret Williams, widow and executrix of Lewis Williams, deceased, "late Gunsmith and Blacksmith to the Traine."

"That vpon a former petition for money due for worke done by her late husband, your Grace referred it to the Master of the Ordnance, who has examined the matter and made the annexed report. The petitioner therefore prays that your Grace will grant a warrant for payment of the summe of 67*l*. 6*s*. 6*d*. due according to the said report.

"Dublin Castle, 5 June 1663.

"Lett this petition, together with the annexed certificate, bee presented unto vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shall bee taken into consideration, and such further order given thereupon as shall bee thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"18 Martij, Anno Domini 1662[-3].

"In obedience to your Graces order of reference bearing date the 22th of January 1662, vpon the petition of widow Williams, I doe finde the particulars of the debts mentioned in the said petition to bee attested under the Comptrollers and Clarke of the Stores hands that were formerly, who doe likewise avert that the rates of the worke done are according to the vsual rates for such worke, and that the whole [sum] due to the petitioner vpon the accompt being 67*l*. 6*s*. 6*d*., was for worke done in the Castle, as repairing some muskettes, ironworke for the carriages of the brasse gunns mounted vpon the Castle wall, and other things in relation to the traine, from the 8th of June 1660, which was after his Majesties most happy restoration, to your Graces arrivall into this kingdom. The rest of the debt expressed in her petition shée alleadgeth don in the repairing the Castle of Dublin before and since your Graces arrivall here, which shée can make appeare under Captaine Paine and the Comptrollers hands. All which is humbly submitted to your Grace and proposed that the 67*l*. 6*s*. 6*d*. for her present reliefe, being a distressed widow, may bee ordered to her.

"MOUNT ALEXANDER."

Dame Jane Sterling, widow of Captain Robert Sterling.—Arrears.—23 May 1663.

John Pym, Lieutenant.—"That your petitioner in regard of his longe and great sufferings for his constant adhering to his Majestie (appearing by the annexed certificate) was recommended by his Majestie and his Grace the Duke of Albemarle for a commission to bee ensigned in his Majesties army here, and also for the office of Clarke of the Crowne and Peace in the county of Clare; but your petitioner did obtaine nether of them, but was ordered by the said Lords Justices to ride with his sonne as supernumeraries in your Graces troop according to your petitioners desire and choice, in which they continued performing constantly duty till hee was disbanded with all others in his condition by your Graces order. Since which time the Lord President of Connaght was pleased to give your petitioner an order dated the 17th of October 1662, to ride in his Lordships troop, which is hereunto annexed. Since which time your petitioner hath attended his duty very constantly and hath been at great expences in performance thereof. May it therefore please your Grace to order your petitioner the full benefit of the said order, so that hee may bee in his Majesties pay from the date thereof, notwithstanding any order to the contrary, your petitioner hancing a wife and seven children to mainteine, who at present are in a distressed and necessitous condition. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, the 28th March 1663.

"The officer commanding the troop above mentioned in chief is to certify vs what hee knoweth of this matter, and thereupon wee shall signify our further pleasure.

"ORMONDE."

"I doe hereby certify that John Pym did repaire to his colours immediately after the date of his order from my Lord President of Connaght, which order was dated the 7th day of October 1662, and hee hath attended his duty ever sithence. All which I doe at his request make bold humbly to certify this 12th day of May 1663.

"ROBERT MEREDYTH."

"Dublin Castle, the 5th June 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the annexed certificate of Cornett Robert Meredyth, cornett of the troope of horse under the command of our very good lord the Lord Berkeley, Lord President of the Province of Connaght, dated the 12th day of May, whereby it appeareth that the petitioner, John Pym, did repaire to his colours immediately after the date of the order of the said Lord President, also annexed, daret the 17th of October last, and attended his duty ever since; wee are pleased that the petitioner bee allowed the full benefit of the Lord Presidents order aforesaid, and hee paid as the rest of the said troop have been paid, whereof the Muster Master Generall and all other his Majesties officers whom it may concern are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Ullicke Wall.—"That your petitioners ancestors time out of minde hath been fee farmers to your Grace and most noble ancestors for certaine lands in the Barrony of Forth and county of Catherlogh [Carlow], for which lands your petitioner hath his claime depending; and all though your petitioner was not capable of any guilt that might occasion the forfeiture of his estate, yet your petitioner hancing the confidence in your Graces most accustomed clemency, that your petitioner is willing to retract his claime in the estate aforesaid and to submit to such further increase of rent as shall be thought fitt to your Graces goodness in fee as your petitioners ancestors did, and the rather that your petitioners flather, Edward Wall, late of Ballinikill in the county aforesaid, for his loyalty and constant adhering to your Grace as in duty bound, was for the same plundered, excommunicated, and imprisoned by the Nuntius and Owen O'Neale's party, and likewise by the late vsurped power, pretending your petitioners flather being in favour and commission by your Grace consequently must bee a dangerous and disaffected person to that power, and kept him in durance untill so hee dyed, to the utter destruction of his orphans, as may appeare by the testimony of persons of honour. May it therefore please your Grace, tenderly considering the premisses, to direct your favourable and gracious reference to Sir William Ffower, Major Thomas Harman, or any more of your Graces commissioners to doe therein as your Grace thinkes fitt. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 June 1663.

"The Commissioners appointed by vs for the management of our estate and other our particular affaires are to informe themselves concerning the matter mentioned in this petition, and to certify vs what they shall conceive fitt to bee done therein.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Sheppard, Captain, formerly Marshal General in Ireland.—Arrears as Lientenant of Horse, and admission to Ormonde's troop of Guards.—20 May 1663.

Thomas Sheppard.—"That your petitioner making his late humble applications to your Grace for satisfaction of his arrears, your Grace was pleased to question whether your petitioner were within the rule for satisfaction. Now, may it please your Grace, your petitioner being a person esteemed not only loyal but active in promoting his sacred Majesties interest and restoration, was then for his preferment remoued from Lieutenant of Horse to the employment of Marshall Generall of his Majesties army in Ireland, which being by him faithfully discharged, your petitioner was by the late Lords Justices sent into England with the subscriptions of the army to the Oathes of Allegiance and Supremacie, and that by that reason your petitioner was in England when the army was modelled and the officers who were reduced had their arrears; so that in case in your petitioner bee out of the strict rule of satisfaction, it hath been occasioned by his attendance on his Majesties service, which your petitioner humbly hopeth your Grace will not suffer to proue his ruine. May it therefore please your Grace to give order for satisfaction to bee made to the petitioner of his said arrears. And hee shall pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, the 4th June 1663.

"Wee pray our very good Lord, Arthur, Earle of Anglesey, his Majesties Vice Treasurer, to consider of this petition and the annexed papers, and to certify vs what his Lordshipp conceives fitt to bee done for the petitioners reliefe.

"ORMONDE."

Robert Walsh.—Permission to enter claim in Court of Claims for restoration of his estate.—3 June 1663.

Mary Banes, wife of Edward Banes, a prisoner in custody of Mr. Carpenter, Sergeant at Arms.—Access to her husband.—9 June 1663.

Elizabeth Ball, wife of John Ball, of the city of Kilkenny.—Praying that her husband, who with others had been arrested while reading the Bible, may be discharged on bail.—9 June 1663.

Roger Pemberton and Thomas Doling, farmers of wine and strongwater licences in Kildare and other counties. Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—10 June 1663.

Same petitioners.—Like petition.—10 June 1663.

Hugh O'Neill, a disbanded soldier of Earl of Meath's troop.—Arrears.—9 June 1663.

John Jackson and Nicholas Harman, assignees of Cornet Michael Stanley.—Withdrawal of insolvent assignments and payment of amount due.—5 June 1663.

John Osborne, Esquire, Counsellor-at-law.—Recovery of debt from Edward Fitch, of Ormonde's Life Guard.—15 May 1663.

Dame Jane Blaney.—Permission to consult with John Fowke, a prisoner, concerning debt due by him to her son.—4 June 1663.

Ruth Gaitch, wife of John Gaitch, a prisoner.—Certificate recommending her husband's release on bail.—12 June 1663.

Henry French, Captain in Ormonde's Life Guard.—Restoration of English "bone" lace seized by Commissioners of Customs, or permission to pay duty on same.—11 June 1663.

Neptan [Neptune] Blood, Dean of Kilfenora.—

10th June 1663.

"May it please our Grace,

"All things continue in the same condition they were as when I made my former report; and therefore I cannot varie from it, untill there bee a variation in the things themselves; and therefore I am still of the same opinion that I ever was, and give the same advice that I ever did; that you sequester the Rectory of Castletowne Kendalena into the hands of the petitioner, Neptune Blood, vicar of that parish, untill it shall appear whether the impropiator, Alexander Hope, bee nocent or innocent; and vpon this expresse condition, that if the said Alexander Hope shall be found innocent by the Commissioners of Claimes, then the said Neptune Blood shall bee obliged to pay unto the said Alexander Hope all the profits of the said Rectory above the king's rent, for the time past and to come untill the tryall. But, on the other side, in case the said Alexander Hope shall bee found nocent by the Commissioners, then the said Rectory of Castletowne Kendalena is to bee settled upon the said Neptune Blood in title and united to the vicarage of the said Parish church of Castletowne Kendalena for ever, all which I humbly submitt.

"JOHN [BRAMHALL] ARMACHANUS."

"Dublin Castle, the 12th of June 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the foregoing certificate of his Grace the Lord Primate, dated the tenth day of this month and made in pursuance of our order of reference of the 27th of May last, wee are pleased and doe hereby order that the Rectory of Castletown Kendalena in the said certificate mentioned bee sequestered into the hands of the petitioner Neptune Blood, vicar of that parish, untill it shall appear whether the impropiator Alexander Hope bee nocent or innocent, vpon expresse condition that if the said Hope shall be judged innocent by the Commissioners of Claimes, then the said Neptune Blood shall pay unto the said Alexander Hope all the profits of the said Rectory above the Kings rent for the time past and to come untill the tryall. But if bee shall bee found nocent by the said Commissioners, then further order may be given that the said Rectory bee settled vpon the said Neptune Blood in title and vnited to the vicarage of the said Parish Church of Castletowne Kendalena for ever, according to the advise and opinion of the said Lord Primate, by his said certificate expressed.

"ORMONDE."

John Cheslyn, formerly Ensign to Sir John Cole.—Arrears.—12 June 1663.

Patrick Roch and Margaret Archer Fitz Michael, his wife.—Custodiam of lands in Kilkenny, from which petitioners were expelled under the Usurped Government.—12 June 1663.

John Annesley, Esquire.—Custodiam of lands in county of Kildare, formerly the property of Peirce Fitz Gerald.—4 June 1663.

John Betty.—Re-admission to Earl of Meath's troop.—13 June 1663.

Thomas Fitz Stephen Lynch.—"That your petitioner in the Court of Claymes hath of late made out his innocency and [made] cleere his title by descent from his father, Stephen Lynch, to six hundred pounds mortgago to the towne and fower quarters of land of Oherry, in the barony of Mackullin in the county of Gallway, consisting of six hundred sixty and six acres profitable land he side wast; that one Robert Martin Fitz Jasper of Gallway aforesaid in the petitioners minority by wrong vnjustly in Athlone and Loghrea obtained a decree and satisfiacon according to two partes thereof. Forasmuch as the petitioners said title was made out in the said Court of Claymes as aforesaid, in the presenco of the said Robert Martin who was made partie thereto, and of his counsell, that the petitioner was ordered to be restored to his said intrest in the said land of Oherry after a reprice had for the transplanted persons thereon settled; and for that in all justice and equitie the petitioner ought in the meane tyme till repriall had for the said transplanted persons to be preferred to a custodiam of the lands by the said Robert had for and in consideration of the said lands of Oherry, being fower hundred forty and four acres of profitable lands beside wast in the said Roberts plott; and for that his Majestie being therein interested as concealment ought to haue the said acres of the best part of the said Roberts plott, it may please your Grace to order a custodiam of the said land soe concealed as aforesaid to be granted to the petitioner till the said repriall be had for the said transplanted [persons], and till the petitioners restitution to the said lands of Oherry, according to the decree past for him in the said Court of Claymes as aforesaid. And he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 12th June 1663.

"If it shall appear vnto our very good lord the Lord Chiefe Baronn, and the rest of [the] Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands in the within petition mencioned are in his Majesties dispose, and not formerly granted to any other person, wee pray and require them to issue a custodiam thereof vnto the petitioner, during his Majesties pleasure, att such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Henry Barton.—Recovery of debt from Lieutenant-Colonel William Fitz Gerald, of Earl of Drogheda's troop.—11 June 1663.

Ensign Allen.—Arrears.—5 June 1663.

Elizabeth Ball, wife of John Ball, a prisoner at Kilkenny.—Certificate recommending her husband's release 13 June 1663.

William Wheeler.—Re-admission to Earl of Shannon's troop and consideration for previous service.—12 June.

Thomas Povey, farmer of wine and strong water licences, co. Sligo.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—16 June 1663.

Thady Malley.—Permission to renew claim to his estate in Court of Claims.—11 June 1663.

William Shee, an orphan.—Permission to renew claim to ancestral estates.—11 June 1663.

Nicholas Weston, of Dublin, joiner.—Permission to enter supplemental claim or claim de novo to ancestral lands.—13 June 1663.

Robert Elliott.—Recovery of debt from Oliver Barclay of Sir Francis Hamilton's troop.—14 June 1663.

John Powell and Thomas Blettso, farmers of wine and strong water licences in the counties of Kilkenny, Wicklow, Wexford, and Carlow.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—15 June 1663.

Richard Bourke, of Tarlagh.—Custodiam of lands in Mayo, formerly possessed by petitioner and granted to Lady Dnagan, under Usurped Government, in satisfaction of her estate in Leinster.—12 June 1663.

Geffry Browne, Esquire.—Custodiam of rectories and tithes in Galway and Mayo counties.—1663.

Doctor James Vaughan, Dean of Achonry.—Quiet possession of the church of Achonry, as enjoyed by his predecessor in 1640-41, recovery of arrears withheld by Sir Edward Crofton [Crofton], of the Mote, etc.—17 June 1663.

Geffry Browne, Richard Dillon, and John Browne, Esquires.—Custodiam of lands in Mayo.—12 June 1663.

Mathew Carie, farmer of wine and strongwater licences, co. Meath.—Satisfaction from unlicensed re-

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

Edward Knight, farmer of wine and strongwater licences in Westmeath and Longford counties.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—17 June 1663.

Peirce Comyne.—Custodiam of lands in co. Catherlogh [Carlow].—17 June 1663.

Duke Crofton and Richard Carington, disbanded soldiers of Sir Oliver St. George's troop.—Arrears.—17 June 1663.

Charles Whitton, of Lord Callan's troop.—Benefit of muster for overstayed leave.—12 June 1663.

Patrick Fahey, farmer of wine and strongwater licences in Sligo and Leitrim counties.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—17 June 1663.

William Hillman, formerly of Lord Faulklyn's, now Lord Callen's, troop.—Removal of check from pay.—15 June 1663.

Patrick Garnon.—Custodiam of lands in co. Lowth, the inheritance of Roger Garnon, of Garnonstown in that county.—17 June 1663.

Katherine Ferrall and Margery Ferrall.—Permission to enter claims in Court of Claims.—17 June 1663.

Francis King, Captain.—Report on petition respecting satisfaction of assignment.—17 June 1663.

George St. Leger, in behalf of Symon Fitzgerald, an infant.—Permission to enter claim in Court of Claims, notwithstanding that Symon Fitzgerald's father had participated in the rebellion.—16 June 1663.

Dame Jane Sterling, widow.—Respite of rent for Priory of St. John's, Ardee, co. Lowth.—17 June 1663.

Sir George Gilbert, Knight.—Leave to export twenty packs of yarn.—18 June 1663.

Gregory Constable, Captain, of Duke of Albemarle's troop.—Advance of pay before going on leave.—18 June 1663.

Edward Davyes, formerly of Col. Vere Cromwell's troop, and "Magistrate in the Corporation of Rosse." Employment in the Customs, or as Ensign to Colonel Brett, in lieu of amount of arrears.—17 June 1663.

John Jeener.—Ratification of warrant for arrears.—1 April 1663.

Thomas Dillon.—"That on Thursday the 11th of this instant June your petitioner was travelling toward his home in the county of Westmeath, having only a sword for his security and defence against robbers and the like; and upon his travel hee mett and was talking with the constable of a little town neer by when as there came forth Esquire Goodwin, Cornett Robert Meredith, of my Lord President of Connaght's troop, an Ensigne, and a Quarter Master not known to your petitioner, who demanded to whom your petitioner did belong, who answered to his Majestie. And they required his sword from him, but hee refused, not knowing them, and delivered it to the said Constable from whome they forced the sword, and therewith did beat and wound your petitioner very desperately, and constrained him to goe to Athlone with them, being seven miles distant from that place, and then caused him to bee kept vpon the Guard one whole night, and when examined by the Governor your petitioner was dismissed; and when some of the people complained against them for so abusing and wounding your petitioner, and said that hee had the Duke of Yorkes passe at home, Esquire Goodwin then said, as some of the people have deposed, hee and his passe bee hanged, for which words hee was immediately secured and remains a prisoner in Athlone; and those that came to preserve your petitioner from being murdered were also beaten and abused by those men. The depositions have been taken at Athlone before Captain Bertles, a Justice of Peace there, as well as by the Governor. Now for that your petitioner did not misbehave himselfe, and wore his sword for his owne safety, having served in his Highnesse the Duke of Gloucester's regiment in Flanders, which hee delivoured to the said constable and did in all things else deporte himselfe as becometh a loyall subject. The premisses considered, your petitioner most humbly beseecheth your Grace will be pleased to cause the depositions taken at Athlone to bee certified to your Grace, and that some speedy redresse may bee ordered your petitioner for the great hurt and injurie hee hath sustained by the abusinesse of the above said parties. And your petitioner will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, the 19th June 1663.

"The above named Goodwyn and Cornett Meredith are required vpon sight or notice hereof to appeare before vs and make answer to this petition, and the Governor of Athlone or Justice of Peace, who took the examinations or depositions mentioned in the said petition are forthwith to send the same unto vs close sealed vp.

"ORMONDE."

Sir John Devellier, Knight.—"That by the annexed report of Mr. Attorney Generall, made in pursuance of your Graces reference dated the 20th of March last, it is humbly certified that the lands in Connaght and Clare, formerly sett out to such persons as are adjudged Innocent, are reserued by the Act of Settlement to his Majestie to reprice others; and that all forfeited in the province of Connaght which are not particularly sett out to Adventurers and souldiers as transplanted persons are declared to bee parte of the security of the [16]49 officers. That the lands mentioned in the annexed list signed by the Deputy Surveyor Generall doe containe 2,490 aeres, and are lying in the barony of Athlone and county of Roscommon, were sett out to the transplanted persons therein named who by the Court of Claimes are adjudged Innocent, except Lawrence Dowdall, who is long since dead, and the said lands after his death enjoyed by the Lady Jane Dowdall, his relict, who is adjudged an Innocent, so that all the lands in the said annexed list are in his Majesties dispose. Now forasmuch as his Sacred Majesties royall intentions to your suppliant cannot bee at present effected, hee most humbly implores your Grace to order a custodiam of the said lands (paying the Quitt Rent) to your petitioner untill his Majesties Gracious intentions towards your suppliant concerning the same bee further signified. And your petitioner, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 4 June 1663.

"If it shall appeare unto our very good Lord the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands in this petition mentioned are concealed and not already granted to any other person in custodiam, they are to grant the petitioner a custodiam thereof, during his Majesties pleasure, at such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"Queries to be resolved by his Majesties Councill.

"1. Whether any person that compounded for land in Connaght was transplanted to it, and enjoyed the issues and profits of the said lands so sett to him, and since proncing himself an innocent Papist before the Commissioners for adjudication of Claimes, whether such person, restored to his former estate, shall enjoy that land sett out to him in Connaght likewise.

"2. Whether any person receiuing lands in Connaght and claiming his former estate, and thereupon bee adjudged nocent, so not restorable to his former estate, whether hee shall enjoy the estate giuen him in Connaght.

"3. Whether, an Innocent inhabiting within the province of Connaght, and restored to his estate within the said province, the rest of the forfeited lands there, excepting such lands as are giuen to adventurers and souldiers, are not in the King's disposal.

"May it please your Grace,

"In obedience to your Grace's order of the 20th of March last, I have taken into consideration the particulars herein formerly mentioned and I humbly certify your Grace.

"1. I am humbly of opinion that where any person transplanted into Connaght shall proue himselfe innocent before the Commissioners for adjudication of Claimes, such person shall bee restored to his former estate, but shall not retain the lands sett out to him in Connaght, they being reserued in the Act to his Majestie to reprice others.

"2. That where any person transplanted into Connaght shall bee adjudged nocent, such person notwithstanding shall enjoy the lands sett out unto him in Connaght upon his transplantation.

"3. That where any innocent person inhabitant within the province of Connaght hath been transplanted and shall bee adjudged innocent, such person so adjudged shall bee restored to his owne property, and his transplanted lands shall be reserued to the King to reprice others, as is answered in the first particular. And all forfeited lands in the province of Connaght, which are not particularly sett out to Adventurers and souldiers, or transplanted persons, are declared to bee parte of the security of the [16]49 officers. Which is my humble opinion in the particulars referred unto mee, and is humbly submitted to your Graces consideration, 5th May 1663.

"WILLIAM DOMVILLE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"COUNTY OF ROSCOMMON, BARRONY OF ATHLONE.

| Proprietors' Names, Anno 1641. | Denominations of Lands. | Number of Acres. | To whom disposed. |
|--------------------------------|--|------------------|--|
| William Reagh O'Kelly. | Parish of Killinvey. Knockroghery, half a quarter. | 100 | To Mary Fin- gasse. |
| Phillipp Dowell | Camra parish. Tobberbreedy, one quarter - | 161 | To Lawrence Dowdall. |
| Edmond O'Fallon. | Milltowne, two quarters, with a castle, gatehouse, bawn, and two mills, viz. Coole-drach, one quarter; Bredagh, one quarter; Bally-class, one quarter. | 468 | To Lawrence Dowdall. |
| Edmond O'Fallon. | Feaghbezz, one quarter - | 179 | |
| Edmond O'Fallon aforesaid. | Camra parish. Sevenane, 1 cartron called Shanbhallimeddagh. | 638 | Lawrence Dowdall. |
| Edmond O'Fallon aforesaid. | Lysroekedy, one quarter; Cornelce, half a quarter. | 214 | To Lawrence Dowdall. |
| Edmond Fallon | Loushaubragh, $\frac{1}{2}$ a quarter - | 674 | |
| Edmond Fallon aforesaid. | One cartron and $\frac{1}{2}$ of a cartron called Cooleshell. | 687 | To James Tal- bott. |
| Edmond Fallon aforesaid. | Parish of Raherrow. Barneulline half a quarter, in Gowlan four quarters. | 661 | Lady Jane Dil- lon, Ja. Ryan, and Hugh Kelly Mc William. |
| | Carrowearne, one cartron - | 620 | John Farrell and Rose his wife. |
| | Carrowmoney, three car- trons in Tiremany. | 678 | To the Lady Dillon and Walter Sher- lock. |
| Edmond Fallon aforesaid. | Parish of Taghboy. Carrowkeele, one quarter - | 694 | Lawrence Dowdall. |
| | Lysnameucklach, $\frac{1}{2}$ a quarter Carrowerow, one quarter, in Moch four quarters. | 675 607 | Katherine Yelverton. |
| Connor Kelly McEdmond. | Three cartrons $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{1}{2}$, and $\frac{1}{2}$ part of a cartron in the two quarters of Killeare. | 300 | To Lawrence Dowdall. |
| Edmond Mc Connor Fallon. | Two other cartrons, $\frac{1}{2}$ a cartron, and $\frac{1}{2}$ of a cartron in Killeare called Killin, Killgarve, Derrydarragh, Derriney, and Gortzearue containing. | 684 | The same. |
| Donnoch Mc Teige Fallon. | One cartron thereof - | 670 | Lawrence Dowdall. |
| Hugh Kelly McTeige. | $\frac{1}{2}$ part of a cartron, and $\frac{1}{2}$ part of a cartron of the aforesaid 2 quarters of Killeare. | 620 | The same. |
| Donnoch O'Kelly McConnor. | Three cartrons of the 2 quarters of Syivan, called Lysmafrin. | 100 | The same. |
| Lozhlin Mc Edmond Kelly. | One other cartron and a half called Syivan and Logh-suhogha containing. | 660 | The same. |
| Hugh Mc Teige Kelly. | Three cartrons and $\frac{1}{2}$ of the said 2 quarters of Syivan called Loughboy and Corry. | 140 | The same. |

"THOMAS ELLIOT, Deputy Surveyor Generall."

Rosina Delarocke.—Access to her husband, a prisoner in custody of Serjeant at Arms, and restoration of his property.—17 June 1663.

Sir Morris Hurly, Barronet.—"That your petitioner being transplanted into Connaght, had 748 acres there assigned by the Commissioners at Loghbrea, in pursuance of a decree of the pretended Commissioners in Athlone, in the towne and lands of Clonbiggin, part of the mannor or Lordship of Aghrim, in the county of Gallway, which was then pretended to be forfeited vpon the account of one Teige Kelly, who in the bookes was returned proprietor thereof; yett soe it is that the said Lordship of Aghrim hath been by your Grace's Commissioners, or one of them, seised vpon in the yeare 1661, as belonging to your Grace in demesne or service, and your petitioner therevpon turned tenant to your Grace in the said lands of Clonbiggin at a certaine yearely rent, if your Grace should thinke fitt to demand the same; yett is not able to pay the said rent, being out of his ancient estate and that of Clonbiggin and foure other quarters of the estate of the Marchioness of Clarickard, whereof he is dispossessed, being the substance of his lott in Connaght. Hee humbly therefore prayeth your grace in consideration of his disability, and that he cannot yett come to hearing of his owne claime, nor to obtaine reprises for what he hath been soe dispossessed of, to give order that the arrears be respited and your petitioner continued in the possession vntill the determination of his claime, he submitting to pay then what your Grace shalbe thought fitt. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 19 Junij 1663.

"The Commissioners appointed by vs for the management of our estate and other our particular affairs re to consider of this petition, and certify vs what they shall conceive fitt to bee donn therevpon."

"ORMONDE."

MARQUIS OF ORMONDE.

Disbanded soldiers, lately under Sir Robert Hanny's command.—Arrears.—17 June 1663.

John Smulane, a released prisoner.—Restoration of horse.—17 June 1663.

Thomas Walding, Quartermaster.—Protection against misconduct of Squire Goodwin, Cornet Robert Merdith, and others in the co. Westmeath.—19 June 1663.

Sarah King, "the relief of Deane King."—Arrears of pension.—18 June 1663.

Robert Chamberlin.—Quiet possession of ancestral estate in co. Dublin, being admitted to composition as a Protestant of "reputed delinquency."—18 June 1663.

Richard Floyd.—Praying that Richard Philipps, of Castle of Dublin, may be compelled to complete the lease of lands in Finglas promised to petitioner.—17 June 1663.

Nicholas Comerford.—Praying that his sister may be permitted the quiet enjoyment of her estate in co. Carlow, under decree of Court of Claims.—11 June 1663.

Joseph Bowsfield.—Certificate recommending his release.—20 June 1663.

Nicholas Comerford, Esquire.—Praying for a copy of the counterpart of a lease under which he enjoyed a reversionary interest, and for the tenancy of the lands of Cloghruske.—22 May 1663.

Daniel O'Neill, Esquire, one of the Grooms of his Majesty's Bedchamber.—Answer to petition of Colonels Thomas Scott, Richard Lehunt, Brett, John Warren, and others, in reference to their claims to lands in the county of Wexford.—Undated.

Mary Dix alias Lindsay.—Recovery of debts from Richard Moncke, Quarter Master to Lord Mount Alexander's troop, and Thomas Ayres, of Ormonde's troop.—16 June 1663.

John Carpenter, Mullingar.—Recovery of debt for quartering Sir Arthur Forbes's troop.—16 June 1663.

Elizabeth Skynner, widow.—Payment of arrears due to her late husband for service in Sir Theophilus Jones's troop, in order that she may be enabled to return to Devonshire.—17 June 1663.

Nicholas Ennis.—"That your petitioner held by lease from one Thomas Boyd, of the cittie of Dublin, Merchant, 26 acres of land in the lands of Newtowne, lying neare the Gallowes hill of Dublin for 4 yeares yett to come at 26*l.* per annum; that your petition hath disbursed in imrounce the premises 30*l.* sterling (besides 10*l.* fine) in dunging, ditching, stubbing, and takeing away stones to make the said lands pastureable and fitt for meadow. The reason why your petitioner paid so great a rent and fine for such poore land was because it was fitt for stone, brick, and lyme: that after all your petitioners disbursments and imrouvements wherein hee hath exhausted all his little substance, depending vpon what little benefitt hee could make out of the said lands to releiue himselfe and his family; the workemen employed for making a Deere Parke therevpon the sixth of October last beat downe the said fence and gate to fetch stones to make vp the said Parke, whereby the cattell did dayly stry for want of inclosures, whereby your petitioners graziers have deserted him, by reason whereof hee can make noe manner of benefit of the said ffarme, to his utter ruine and impoverishment, haueing left for his su[b]stance for releife of himselfe and great family but eight coves, two whereof were utterly lost by the continuall pounding of the said coves. Your petitioner, not knowing how to dispose of the rest, was forced to send two of them into the country, which soone after their goinge were stolne, wherevpon your petitioner and family is likely to perish: that your poore petitioner made his humble addresse unto your Grace, in the beginning of October last, setting forth his greivance, wherevpon your Grace was pleased to refer the same to Mathew Harrison, Esquire, Comptroller of your Graces Household, who by reason of his multiplicity of businesse in your Graces affaires hath not made report to your Grace of your petitioners great sufferings and damage at least to the value of 70*l.* sterling, whereby your petitioner, his wife and ten small children, and his family, are likely to bee utterly ruined, your poore petitioner being now imprisoned by the said Boyd for the rent of the said land, which your petitioner could not enjoy, being disturbed as aforesaid. Now, forasmuch as the truth of the said allegations doe fully appeare by the annexed certificats of knowne honest men, may it therefore please your Grace, the premisses tenderly considered, and for that your petitioner cannot enjoy the said farne, in your wanted clemencie and mercy to the poore and helpelesse, graciously to order your petitioner satisfaction for his said damage, improuements, and fine, for the reliefe of himselfe and family, and also that your Grace would be pleased to free your petitioner from the said Boyd, from the time your Graces workmen entered vpon the said lands to the end of your petitioners lease, and your Grace would be pleased to release your poore petitioner from his imprisonment to prevent the utter ruine of himselfe and family. And your distressed petitioner, etc., shall ever pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, the 14 March 1662[-3].

"The Comptroller of our Household, to whome wee formerly referred this matter, being now absent in the country, the Steward of our said Household and Captaine John Paine, Surveyor and Director Generall of his Majesties buildings, etc., are speedily to informe themselves how it stands, and to certify vs what damage the petitioner susteineth by reason of the vse which for his Majesties service is made of the land within mentioned, and thereupon wee shall giue such further order for the petitioners releife as shall appeare fitt.

"ORMONDE."
"4 May 1663.

"May it please your Grace

"In due obedience to the aboue order, wee haue viewed that parte of the lands of Newtowne held by the petitioner, and doe obserue that, through the breaking of a quarrie on that land, for his Majesties vse, a great parte of the fienes of the petitioners said land haue been broken downe, whereby the cattell that grazed there on the petitioners account did vsually stray out into the neighbouring ground, which occasioned much trouble, charge, and losse (as wee are credibly informed) to the petitioner and the owners of such cattell, by reason whereof the owners withdrew their beasts from of the said lands, and so left the same wast on the petitioners hands, without yeilding him any profit for the last halfe yeare, though charged with a considerable rent thereout. So that wee humbly conceiue that the petitioner is damnified, the said halfe yeares rent being £14, and will for the halfe yeare to come suffer in the like nature, if not permitted to make his best advantage of the said lands. All which wee humbly certify and submit to your Grace.

"THO: HUME. JOHN PAINE.
"Dublin Castle, 17 June 1663.

"The Clerke of the Councell is to prepare a concordatum for the fourteen pounds mentioned in the foregoing certificate of the Steward of our Household, and Captaine John Paine, and present the same unto vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board.

"ORMONDE."

Richard, Lord Coote, Baron of Colooney.—Custodiam of lands in Meath, until such time as John Cusack, who was in possession, should prove his innocence.—15 June 1663.

Richard Lehunt, Robert Saunders, and John Warren, Colonels.—Replication to Daniel O'Neill's answer to their petition relative to lands in the county of Wexford.—Undated.

Elizabeth Burton, wife of Henry Burton, Esquire.—"That your petitioners husband [being] now a prisoner with the Sargeant at Armes, and in great want of necessaries for his reliefe, she most humbly prayeth that she may by your Graces goodnes and compassion be permitted to [have] access to her husband from tyme to tyme as she shall haue occasion, and that your Grace wilbe pleased to give directions to the said Sargeant at Armes accordingly to admit of her access to him for his reliefe. And she shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 22 Junij 1663.

"Vpon consideration of this petition, we are pleased that the Sargeant at Armes, in whose custody the petitioners husband is restrained, doe permit the petitioner to see and speake with him in his presente [restraint] from time to time as she shall haue occasion, and for soe doing this shall be his warrant.

"ORMONDE."

Mary Cunningshame.—Restoration of cattle seized by the Sub-Sheriff of the Queen's county, during her husband's imprisonment.—23 June 1663.

Alexander Pigott, Esquire.—"That severall rents being by order of his Majesties High Courte of Chancery sequestered at the suite of your petitioner vpon certain lands in the county of Lowth, to which one James Smalwood is tenant. Now forasmuch as the said James Smalwood doth refuse to conforme himselfe to the tenor of his Majesties said writt of sequestration and to pay in his rent in obedience thereof, in regard hee is a member of his Majesties army vnder your Graces command; may it please your Grace to issue your orders that your petitioner may haue the benefit of his Majesties said writt and of other the process of his high Courte of Chancery against the said Smalwood, in as full and beneficiall manner as if the said Smalwood were noe member of his Majesties army. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 18 Junij 1663.

"The within named James Smalwood is required to give the petitioner satisfaction concerning the matter in this petition mentioned, or within six dayes after notice thereof to shew cause (if any hee can) why the petitioner should not bee at liberty to haue his legall remedy against him.

"ORMONDE."

Blanche Weekes, widow:—Arrears due to her late husband, for service under Sir Richard Kyrle and Lord Falkland.—22 June 1663.

Martha Scott, wife to Collonel Scott, prisoner.—"Sheweth that your petitioners husband hath been lately seduced and inveigled by some of the late wicked conspirators, to his and your petitioners great greife, and to your petitioners admiration; shee well knowing it to haue been contrary to his former principles, and after his reall actings accordingly for his Majesties happy restoration, even against the commands then laid by his very father; that hee, your petitioner's said husband, now layes himselfe at your Graces feete for his Majesties Grace and pardon, and both hee and your suppliant humbly prays your Graces consideration of their, and their many childrens sad and perishing condicon, not hauing wherewithall to put bread into their mouthes but by your Graces favor and compassion, which they humbly pray, in protecting them in the quiet possession of their goods by which they subsist, and in ordering and strictly requiring all persons whatsoever to restore forthwith vnto such as your petitioner shall appointe, what of theirs hath been in any kind seized vnder cullor of present delinquency. And your disconsolate petitioner and her vnfortunate husband and their poore children shall ever pray for your Graces happines here and hereafter, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 20 Junij 1663.

"The petitioner giueing good security to the severall Sheriffs of the counties wherein her husband's goods are, that they shalbee forthwith [ascertained] and deliuered into the hands of the sheriffs of those counties for the tyme being, when shee shall bee by vs required so to deliuer them; vpon certificate of the said sheriffs of her giueing such security, the person or persons in whose custody the said remayne, are to deliuer the same to the petitioner or to any other to bee by her said husband appointed to receaue them.

"ORMONDE."

"James Halpeny and Thomas Emerson.—"That your petitioners hath taken to farme the fines accruing on short plowes in the county of Meath, which was granted by his Majestie to George Hamilton, Esquire; and whereas the Constables, Bailiffs, and many other out of enuy and malice doe privately present the grand jury at the size and sessions in the said county such people who vse the said plowes, in soemuch that the poore people is presented many tyme over by severall persons for that one offence, to the utter ruining and undoing of them and great damage of your petitioners, except relieved by your Grace. May it therefore please your Grace to order that the Clerke of the Crowne of the said county may not issue out the capiasse against any persons in the said county for that offence, but such which is or shalbe presented by your petitioners, and that fines imposed thereon may be paid to your petitioners, the farmers of the same. And they shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 May 1663.

"Lett this peticion be presented vnto vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

John Smith, farmer of Inland Excise for the Queen's County:—Release from contract, or abatement of rent in consideration of the area available for taxing purposes having been reduced by the withdrawal of the barony of Galmoy.—16 June 1663.

Mary Jane and Ann Ware, orphans of John Ware, late of Castletown, Esquire, deceased.—"That your petitioner's father, John Ware, being most barbarously and inhumanly murdered in his owne howse at Castletowne in the county of Meath, in the very beginning of the Rebellion, by Christopher Hollywood, of Artaine, in the county of Dublin, and his retinue, and after his owne slaughter the said Hollywood pilladged the howse of the said Mr. Ware, as is publickly knowne to all the nobility and gentry both of that county and other places, which slaughter and pillage of the petitioners father hath reduced and brought them ever since to a miserable and sad condicon for want of meanes and livelihood. The premises considered, and forasmuch as the said Christopher Hollywood was a person of a considerable estate in the county of Dublin and elsewhere, who[se] son and heire is uncapable of the said estate, vpon the account of that inurther, soe as that whole estate fall now to his Majestic. May it therefore please your Grace to grant unto the said orphans a competent livelihood yearly out of the said estate to sustaine them with, they haueing nothing all this tyme past but the charity of Sir James Ware, their vncl, and this granted they will pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, 3rd Junij 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shall be thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Rose, Marchioness of Antrim:—"That his Majestic hath been graciously pleased to signify to your Grace his willingnes to facilitate to the Marquess her husband's restoracion, and being also graciously sincible of the great straites he wilbe in till that he don, hath recommended the said Marquess humble petition to your Grace, and the admitting him to a custodiam. May it therefore please your Grace to grant the said Marquess a custodiam of the lands in the annexed schedule (which are all in his Majesties dispose) vntill hee bee restored, and att such rents as your Grace shall seeme fitt in respect of his great want. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 17 June 1663.

"Lett this petition, with what relates to the matter therein mentioned, be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

| "Custodes. | Denominacions. | Termes. | Full Vallew. |
|-----------------------|--|----------------------------------|-----------------------|
| COUNTY OF CORKE. | | | |
| "Thomas Daunt. | Tullaghlinckely Inche-raghty, etc., Ballynecrossy, etc. | A yeere ending 1663. May | £ s. d. 111 18 02½ |
| Thomas Blackston. | Carrihanaueck, etc. - - | A yeere ending May 1663. | 97 00 00 |
| "WESTMEATH AND COBRE. | | | |
| "James Shirley | Stonertowne, etc., Symenstowne, etc., Curryheene, etc. | 12 May [16]62. Dureing pleasure. | 012 00 00 |
| Owen Macarthy | Closhrea, etc. - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 168 12 05½ |
| Earle of Orrery | Clickoilla, etc., Ballynekeene, etc. | Dureing pleasure. | 082 12 00 |
| Sir William Penn. | Shawmarty, etc., Aghannally, etc. | A yeere ending May 1663. | 440 00 00 |
| Peter Ward - | Garrenkiniefeky - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 068 18 00 |
| "COUNTY OF LOUTH. | | | |
| "John Ceshill, gent. | Newtowne, Termonecken, Poldtowne, Termonecken, etc. | A yeere ending May 1663. | 033 00 00 |
| Sir Henry Titchburne. | Mariestowne - - - | A yeere ending May [16]63. | 60 00 00 |
| Mathew Langdale. | Mardevillst, etc. - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 53 18 00 |
| Sir William Ashton. | Duniler Etchler, etc., Baurne. | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 101 10 00 |
| Francis Sing - | Ballyboy more - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 145 05 04 |
| Lord Masse-reene. | Dunkin, Little Mill, Thounstowne, parte of Ratbrest, Munnevalid, Lower Gamstowne, Shannoneck, Cledredan, and Druncowell, Hainstowne, Reynolds-towne, Conchegreat, parte of Gilstowne, Ferraghs, Corderie, Lenrathe, Tully, Cree-taine, Rathoe, Frys-laud, Enloeh, Balloran, Ard Patrick. | A yeere ending May [16]63. | 216 11 06 |
| Lord Masse-reene. | Cortell, Carrigollan, and Cressberg, Big Ashoe, Little Ashoe, Crick-mellan, Newtowne, Palmerston. | A yeere ending May [16]63. | 050 00 00 |

| "Custodes. | Denominacions. | Termes. | Full Vallew. |
|---|--|----------------------------|--------------|
| "COUNTY OF DUBLIN. | | | |
| "Sir Walter Plunkett. | Killmore, etc. - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 023 08 00 |
| Sir William Titchburne, Richard Bulkeley, John Exham and Thomas Batt. | Wall - - - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 100 00 00 |
| Richard Forster. | Ballyken, etc., Jobstowne. | Dureing pleasure. | 080 02 05 |
| | Brownestowne, etc., Little Ratcall. | Dureing pleasure. | 061 00 00 |
| | Loghshimny, Inche-lstowne, etc., Lawrence-towne. | Dureing pleasure. | 070 00 00 |
| Com. Mount-trath. | Brownstowne - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 100 14 01 |
| "COM. KILKENNY. | | | |
| "Earle of Orrery. | Gowran, part of, etc., Mucknully. | Dureing pleasure. | 361 08 07 |
| "COM. GALWAY. | | | |
| "Richard Blakeuill. | Decim. legnl. parochiarum | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 041 07 09 |
| "COUNTY OF TIPPERARY. | | | |
| "Sir Francis Pouike and William Warden. | Heathstowne - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 224 03 06 |
| Samuel Bull - | Shanballyduffe - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 079 00 00 |
| Edmond Walsh | Decim. - - - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 066 00 00 |
| Sir Francis Pouike and William Warden. | Heathstowne - - - | A yeere ending May [16]63. | 145 00 00 |
| Sir Mathew Appleyard. | Ballygurtene - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 030 8 10 |
| "WESTMEATH, LONGFORD, AND CORK. | | | |
| "Adrian Pate | Decim. - - - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 070 00 00 |
| Dominus Co-loony. | Streete, etc. - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 126 02 03 |
| Lord Colony | Streete, etc. - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 126 02 03 |
| "COM. LONDONDERRY. | | | |
| "Episcopus Dunensis. | Loghanraugh - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 016 07 03 |
| "COM. REGIS. | | | |
| "Thomas Bourke. | Telehaskeach, Bally-duffe. | Dureing pleasure. | 060 07 10 |
| "COM. WEXFORD. | | | |
| "Sir Richard Clifton. | Ballygreet, Kilgarvan, Kiltbright. | A yeere ending May [16]63. | 060 18 11 |
| James Doyne and Henry Wilson. | Rathduffe, etc. - - - | Dureing pleasure. | 082 08 02½ |
| Peter Bate - | Ballybeny, Mallingrott, Ballyrush, Ballynush, Camross. | Dureing pleasure. | 051 02 07 |
| "COM. CATHERLAGH. | | | |
| "Henry Browerton, Jerome Doweran. | Barres, Pahlmonty, and St. Mullins. | Dureing pleasure. | 001 04 00 |
| "COM. KILDARE. | | | |
| "Thomas Stockton. | Geydonstowne - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 060 00 00 |
| Com. Mount-trath. | Killhill - - - - - | A yeere ending May [16]62. | 130 00 00 |

Nicholas Locke.—"That your petitioner is a poore gardiner, haueing the charge of wife and small children, who hath nothing to live vpon but what your petitioner dayly earneth most laboriously and is driven to extreame poverty; and further sheweth vnto your Grace that your petitioner being maliciously charged objected against by certain people who prosecuted your petitioner, and was tryed before the Lord Cheife Baron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer for speaking of sedicious words which were not in the least spoken or thought of by your poore petitioner; he further humbly sheweth that my Lord Cheife Baron hath passed the sentence on the petitioner to pay as a fyne the summ of one hundred pounds and to remaine in the prison of Killmainham for the space of six months. Your Graces poore suppliant being a great sufferer by laying in the said prison three monthes already for the same, and if not now releified by your Grace, he is vterly ruined for ener, and your petitioners wife and smale charge of children will vndoubtedly perish. The premises tenderly considered, may it therefore please your Grace mercifully to take pity and compassion on your poore deplorable petitioners condition, and likewise to shew mercy vnto his wife and smale children, by granting your petitioners enlargement to maintaine his wife and the said fower smale children. Your poore petitioner most humbly craunch your Grace through pity and clemency to grant an order that your petitioners said fyne of one hundred pounds may be forgiven, and his body forthwith enlarged to relieve his said charge of children. And he will pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

“Dublin Castle, 18 May 1663.

“Wee pray our very good Lord the Lord Cheife Baron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer to certify vs what appeared against the petitioner on his tryall, together with his Lordships opinion of the petitioners request.

“ORMONDE.”

Walter Bird, farmer of wine and strongwater licences co. Galway.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—22 June 1663.

Same petitioner.—Like petition.—22 June 1663.

Robert Moore, Bartholomew Turner, and William Foster, of Naas, Innkeepers.—Release from imprisonment, etc. for retailing wine and strongwater without licence, satisfaction being made.—23 June 1663.

John, Viscount Massareene.—Petition in relation to lands set apart under Act of Settlement for the orphans of Colonel Owen O'Connolly, and proceedings of Sir Nicholas Armorer in connexion therewith; with reference.—17 June 1663.

Robert Maxwell, Bishop of Kilmore and Ardagh.—To be quieted in possession of Castle of Glin, in county Longford, and lands of the see for a portion of which Patrick Cary, son of Sir Thomas Cary, had exhibited his claim in Court of Claims.—25 June 1663.

William Burges and William Wilsby.—“May it please your Grace, I have inquired for what cause or offence the petitioners, William Burges and William Wilsby, have been committed, and as I am informed they were first brought before a Justice of Peace at Kilkenny for meeting in some conventicle, and unlawfull assembly, and by the said Justice bound over to appear and answer at the next assizes and afterwards sent vp hither; which is the only crime I heare is to be laid to their charge. And in regard they stand bound already to appear at the next assizes to be held for the citie of Kilkenny and answer their misdemeanor there, I humbly conceive your Grace may give order for their discharge here, which is humbly submitted to your Grace's consideration.—24th June 1663.

“WILLIAM DOMICILE.

“Dublin, 25 June 1663.

“Vpon consideration of the above certificate wee are pleased that the petitioners be sett at liberty, paying their fees, whereof the Marshall, in whose custody they remaine, is to take notice, and to discharge them accordingly.

“ORMONDE.”

Thomas Butler, Esquire.—Report from Earl of Anglesey, Vice-Treasurer and Treasurer of War, on petition for allowance of amount of insolvent assignment on Lieutenant-Colonel John Nelson.—27 June 1663.

Michael Jones.—Answer to petition of Sir Luke Bath, Knight and Baronet, concerning custodiam of lands.—No date.

James Aylmer, Esquire.—Recovery of debt from Ensign John Warren.—26 June 1663.

Sir Arthur Forbes, Baronet.—“Humbly sheweth: that towards the last three months pay of your petitioners troope there was a bill of £153 2s. 7d. charged vpon Captaine George Maghee, Collector in the County of Westmeath for the proportion of £30,000 granted to your Grace; that the said Captaine Maghee hath received all the money from the said county and late absented himselfe, soe that the said [petitioner] know not where to finde him or how to gett the money. That Sir Daniell Bellingham refuseth to change the said bill, vnlesse your Grace give speciall order for the same. The premisses considered, may it please your Grace to order the said Sir Daniell Bellingham to change the said bill and give your petitioner other solvent assignement or money for the same. And he shall pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 26 June 1663.

“Wee pray and authorize our very good Lord the Earle of Anglesey, his Majesties Vice-Treasurer and Treasurer att Warrs to take this petition into his consideration and to certify vs what he conceives fitt to be don therevpon.

“ORMONDE.”

Randall Clayton, Colonel.—Recovery of debts from Lieutenant Thomas Caffie and Quartermaster Gilbert Carter.—27 June 1663.

James Hamilton, of Lord Clanbrassill's regiment.—Arrears.—26 June 1663.

Thomas Waterhouse, Alderman.—“That one Edward Smith, one of your Graces guard of Battel-axes, stand; justly indebted into your suppliant in severall summes of money amounting to one hundred pounds sterling; and likewise one Henry Barton, trooper vnder the command of the Right Honourable the Lord Moore, alsoe stands indebted vnto your suppliant in the sum of four score pounds sterling. Now soe it is, may it please your Grace, that they, presuming on their priviledges as soldiers, deny to make your petitioner any satisfaction, to pour petitioners great damages. May it therefore please your Grace to require the said Edward Smith and Henry Barton to satisfy vnto your petitioner his said severall just debts forthwith, or otherwise to grant your Graces lycence to take his remedy att [law] for recovery of his said just demands against the said persons. And he shall pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 20 Junij, 1663.

“The above-named Edward Smith and Henry Barton are required to give the petitioner satisfaction for what they particularly owe him, or within tenn daies after sight or notice hereof to shew cause why the petitioners should not [have] libertie to take his remedy against [them] by due course of lawe.

“ORMONDE.”

William Baily, Bishop of Cloufert and Killmacduagh.—Recovery of tithe-rents, let during his absence in England, by order of Sir Charles Coote, late Earl of Mountrath, and Sir William Barry.—20 June 1663.

Francis Knight and William Taylor.—Compensation for improvements on lands in the Lordship of Borisewyle, held under lease from Henry Martin, and from which petitioner was about to be evicted.—27 June 1663.

John McCawley, John Williamson, Henry Street, Thomas Little, Christopher Nickson, Robert Gnlby, Vincent Eggles, and John Norbery.—Recovery of debt from Major Joseph Stroud, due to petitioners for service in his company.—26 June 1663.

Thomas Lee.—Suspension of execution of order obtained by Edward Nicholls for amount of petitioner's bond passed to him for excise in Queen's co.; and praying for new trial, the excise having been collected and withheld by others who allege prior right.—27 June 1663.

Arthur Gunell, a disbanded soldier of Earl of Mount Alexander's troop.—Reference and report relative to arrears.—27 June 1663.

Thomas Finglas.—“That your petitioner is the right heire and next of blood [to] Lieutenant-Colonel John Finglas, whoe was lost in Drogheda in His Majesties service, and alsoe is the heire vnto [his] brother Roger Finglas of Ballromston, both which estates of right ought to descend on your petitioner. Forasmuch as your petitioners clayme goes on innocency, for his brother's estate, and on articles, for the estate of Lieutenant Colonel Finglas; and by means thereof cannot bring his whole interests together to a tryall but must expect the tyme of articles; and for that your petitioner is informed that, in relation to some orders or grant from his Majesty, the estate of Lieutenant Colonel Finglas is now on setting or disposing; and being that your petitioner is burthened with a family and are reduced to extreme poverty and not able to subsist vnles in charitie looked vpon and relieved by your Grace: Your petitioner humbly prayeth that your Grace wilbe please[d] to prescribe a substance out of the estate for his reliefe, and that you will recomend him to the Commissioners of the Court of Claymes for his speedy tryalls and dispatch in both his said intrests, as they are claymed and doe now stand before them; and that there may be a stopp putt vnto the disposing of the said Lieutenant Colonel Finglas his estate untill your petitioners clayme therevnto be first heard and determined. And your petitioner will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 12 Junij, 1663.

“Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Joseph Bowsfield.—Satisfaction from John Gaffney, of Longwood, John Clinch, of Newcastle, Thomas McKwire, of Blackeford, “and one more they call Sherrillo,” for breaking into and robbing petitioners house.—27 June 1663.

Thomas Harly.—That your petitioner hath faithfully served his late Majesty, of ever blessed memory, in England and Ireland to his losse of much blood, lymbs, liberty, and estate, and that saecrall summes of money

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

very considerable are due vnto him from his Majestie for materials of warr by him prouided by order from the Lords Justices and Councell at the beginning of the warre in Ireland. Moreover, your petitioner was robbed and despoyled of his goods and chattles to the value of £100 att the first beginning of the troubles, all which will appeare by certificates and accompts att large; and hath alsoe most vnjustly been kept out of an estate of £60 per annum in howses and lands in Ireland by one Mr. Blackwell, who was Receivor for the late vsurper Cromwell, for which by reason of your petitioners poverty he can gett noe satisfaccion. But now see it is that your petitioner haueing engaged his freinds to help him to buy some timber to the value of £70 in the county of Wexford, whereby he may be the better enabled to serve his Majestie; that haueing gayned your Graces order for the bringing it to Dublin for his Majesties vse, yett he is prevented by pretended orders from severall men, and yett none shewen, which doth much frighten and discourage his workemen and carriers, to his great prejudice, and especially by Edward Byrn and Edmond Byrne, who threaten to smocke his workmen in the heads. Your petitioner most humbly prays your Grace wilbe pleased to grant your further order that he may peaceably and quietly bring the said timber vnto Dublin for the vse aforesaid, being ready to put in security that in case the pretenders shall hereafter prove to haue more title to the timber then those of whom your petitioner bought it your petitioner will give them satisfaccion. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 29 June 1663.

"The above named Edward Birne and Edmond Birne are required to suffer the petitioner to bring away the timber above mentioned, according to our order of the 26th of May last, or to appeare before vs within tenn dayes after sight or notice hereof and shew good cause to the contrary.

"ORMONDE."

Mary Morgan alias Hill.—Re-admission of her husband, Richard Morgan, to Sir Oliver St. George's troop, or payment of arrears.—27 June 1663.

James Gallagher, afflicted with dead palsy, formerly Lieutenant to Sir Toby Poyntes.—Relief. Petitioner states that his former petition, after having been referred to the Earl of Anglesey, was lost at the Council table.—27 June 1663.

Edward Butler, of Lord Callan's troop.—Benefit of muster during illness.—26 June 1663.

Edward Wright, Esquire.—"That your petitioner imployed Edward Wright, his son, into this Kingdome to followe his occasions and intrusted him with chattle and goods to a very considerable value, which cattle and goods are disposed of by him but not as appointed and intended by your petitioners; that the said Edward Wright is one of the Earle of Kildare's troupe quartered att Catherlogh and hath a horse of your petitioners. Your petitioner humbly prayeth that your Grace wilbe pleased to give your order that the said horse may be secured by the officers commanding the said troupe there and sent to your petitioner, least your petitioners said son should carry the same some other way; and alsoe that the said Edward may be required to give your petitioner a just accompt of the said cattle and goods, and the rather for that your petitioner came lately into this Kingdome to looke after the same, and is a stranger and now fallen very sicke and weake. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 1 Junij 1663.

"Wee pray our very good Lord, the Lord Baron of Kingston, Commissary General of the Horse of his Majesties army in this Kingdome, to examine the matter in this petition mencioned, and to certify vs what his Lordshipp shall thinke fitt to be done therein.

"ORMONDE."

Patrick Archer, Mercbant. — "Humbly beseecheth your Grace to be pleased to prefer your petitioner to the tennacie of a wast peece of ground on the key of Rosse which hath bene sometime a warehowse and sellar, but wholie ruined and decayed, and which your petitioner hath feared this yeare att tenn shillings rent; and alsoe the tennacie of a ruined howse called Brittons howse, which is rented this yeare att £40, being both parcells of your Graces estate, for the terme of 61 yeares; and your petitioner wilbe att the charges to repaire them and make them vpp with lime and stone and cover them with slate fitt for his own conveniences, being now resolved to put vpp his trade of merchandizing and deale in the severall cities and corporations as heretofore. Which being granted, will pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 26 Junij 1663.

"The Commissioners appointed by vs for the management of our estate and other our particular affaires are to consider of this petition and to certify vs what they shall conceive fitt to be done in the matter therein mencioned.

"ORMONDE."

Edward Worth, Bishop of Killalloe.—"That Dame Mary FitzGerald, the relict of Sir Luke FitzGerald, of Tyeroghan, deceased, or their son, George FitzGerald, or his or her assignes, are att present actually possessed of the severall townes and lands hereafter expressed by final settlemēt in Connaght, as in part satisfaccion for the estates formerly belonging to the said Sir Luke. But see it is, may it please your Grace, that on the 22th of this instant June, George FitzGerald, the son and heire of the said Sir Luke FitzGerald, obtained a sentence for his restitution as an innocent Papist to the estate formerly belonging to his said father, by means whereof your petitioner is deprived of an estate of a farr greater value, worth, and purchase, [than] the lands aforesaid in the possession aforesaid by fine settlemēt. May it therefore please your Grace to grant your petitioner a custodiam of the said lands directed to Sir Luke by final settlemēt. And the petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 1 July 1663.

"If the lands whereof the petitioner desires a custodiam be in his disposall, and not granted to any other, the Lord Chiefe Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer are to issue a custodiam thereof to the petitioner, during his Majesties pleasure, att such moderate rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"The names and quantities of land sett out to Sir Luke FitzGerald of Tyeroghan by final settlemēt.—23 May 1656.

"GALWAY COUNTY.

| | | |
|--|---|--------------|
| "The Castle Towne and lands of Benmore | | |
| and Benbegg, 3 quarter[s] | - | - 468 acres. |
| Bracke Cloonbegg, halfe [a] quarter | - | - 067 " |
| Killostragh, half a quarter | - | - 112 " |
| Lissnegappell, one quarter | - | - 168 " |
| Lisguile, one quarter | - | - 154 " |
| Lismacnaden, one quarter | - | - 256 " |
| Barneboy, one quarter | - | - 279 " |

William Kelly, carman.—"That your poore petitioner hath been with his three horses daily drawing stones vnto the Deere Parke from the first beginning vntill the tenth of this instant, in which space he spared noe paines himselfe, his servants, or horses, but continually used his best endeavours in soe much as noe man could find fault in his forwardnes. Now, see it is, may it please your Grace, that the overseeres of the said worke, have bought horses and carss of their owne, and imploye them to draw stones to the said worke, whereas, intruth, that 20 carldoes of your poore petitioners did fetch more in a day then 30 carss of theirs that are now imployed by them, for if they putt but two stones vpon their carss there is no fault found by the overseeres in regard they are their owne and turned out the best carmen. The premisses tenderly considered, and for as much as your petitioner hath faithfully served your [Grace] as carman for the space of five yeares formerly, in the Controwler Allferies time, and still vntill your Grace went for England, and now is turned out of the worke for noe other cause, but for finding fault that they brought noe lodes worth wages; and your petitioner will undertake to bring with 20 carss [more] then they doe with 30, yett the same wages runs on, his humbly request is that your Grace wilbe pleased to certify the same. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 26 Junij 1663.

"Lett the Comptroller of our Howsehold and Captaine John Paine informe themselves concerning this matter and certify vs what they find and conceave fitt to be done therein.

"ORMONDE."

Terence Mc Firr.—"That whereas your Grace was charitable pleased, by your order of 23th August 1662, whereof a coppie is herevnto annexed, to direct Mr. Edward Butler to pay your petitioner £10 a yeare motively att every Easter and Michaelmas towards your petitioners maintenance, pursuant thereto your petitioner was paid five pounds last Michaelmas 1662. Now, see it is, that the said Edward denyeth to pay your petitioner any more by vertue of your Graces said order, though £5 more was due last Easter; that your petitioner coming with his complaint thereof to your Grace fell sicke in Catherlogh, where hee [was] see sicke

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

there for a week, and haueing noe charges was driven to pawne his nagg for some money there, vpon paine of forfeiture of it vnles redeemed by a certaine day neer att hand, and that your petitioner not able to waite longe in Dublin alsoe for want of charges, and for that he is now falling to be decreet with old age and must be neere his bed att home, he humbly prayeth your Grace to be honorabile and most piously pleased to direct your Receiver from tyme to tyme by your expresse order herevppon to pay your petitioner that charitable pencion formerly granted by your Grace, and that last Easters proportion thereof might be now paid him to discharge his present care. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 Junij 1663.

"Wee require our servant Edward Butler not onely to pay vnto the petitioner what was due vnto him att Easter last, but alsoe to continue his payment of the within pencion, untill wee shall give our further [order], whereof hee is not to faile.

"ORMONDE."

Arthur, Earl of Anglesey, Vice-Treasurer.—Permission to hold lands in co. Cork, granted him in custodiam, at the rent for which they were let in previous year.—30 June 1663.

Arthur, Viscount Ranelagh.—Custodiam of lands in co. Dublin.—30 June 1663.

John Arthur.—Permission for Lieutenant Colonel George Smith, Navan, and Major Edward Evett, Trim, to attend at Dublin as witnesses on trial of petitioner's claim under Act of Settlement.—17 July 1663.

Thomas Butler, Quaker.—"I am constrained through necessity once more to make known vnto thee my present sufferings, with the rest of the innocent and harmlesse people of God who are sufferers ever since the Lord called vs out of the worlds wayes, customes and traditions to worshipping Him in spirit and in truth, in which the Lord is to be worshipped, this my suffering and imprisonment these three quarters of a yeare and a month in a strange place, being for noe other] cause then exercising my conscience in what the Lord made manifest to me, which is not a criminal cause. I am by my imprisonment deprived of my flathers estate, because I cannot stay in this city to lay claim to it by reason of my ingagement to the Sheriffe of the County of Cavan, being bound to returne to his custody againe, except I obtaine the order for my releasement. I therefore desire that thou wouldest consider my innocent suffering and grant thy order for my releasement. From him who desires that Equity and Justice may beare rule and abound in the harts of them who haue power put into their hands to rule the nacion.—January the 23th 1663.

"THO[MAS] BUTLER."

"Dublin Castle, 28th Marcij 1663.

"The petitioner giueing bond to the Clerke of the Councell for his Majesties vse with sufficient security of the penalty of one hundred pounds, with condiction that he shall appeare before vs and the Councell within tenn dayes after notice for such appearance shall be left in writting att the new dwelling house of Richard Cows, gent., scituate on the Colledge Green neere Dublin, vppon certificate of his giueing of such bonds he is to be att liberty to follow his lawfull occasions; whereof as well the Sheriffe of the County of Cavan as all others whom it may concerne are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Dolman, of Dublin, butcher.—"That about a yeare and a halfe since your petitioner sold vnto Thomas Blood an outlandish bull; that halfe a yeare after your petitioner sent his cow (the dame of the said bull) to grasse with the said bull, and haueing an intent to kill the said cow sent his servant for her, who by the way met with one Laeky, brother in law vnto the said Blood, who asked him whether he was going; told him for his master's cow. The said Laeky willed a servant of Bloods then with him to goe backe againe and bring the bull with the cow, which was don and brought to Dublin to petitioners house; both which in a short tyme after was seized on, your petitioner forbearing to kill the cow being great with calfe. That the said cow was your petitioners doth appeare by the certificate annexed. The premises considered, may it please your Grace to order that the said cow may be restored vnto your petitioner, he being a very poore man. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 Junij 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioners cow aboue mentioned be restored vnto him, whereof the party in whose hands the said cow doth remaine is to take notice and to restore her accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Ray.—"That your petitioner was employed by Mathew Harrison, Esquire, your Graces Comptroller of your Howsehold for overseeing and keeping the castle of Templeoge, and that the summe of £3 11s. 6d. is due vnto your petitioner for his wages; that in regard your petitioner hath often applied himselfe to your Graces comptroller and can receive noe satisfaccion therefore. May it therefore please your Grace to grant your petitioner an order for receiving of the said summe of £3 11s. 6d., he being a very poore man and in great want thereof.

"Dublin Castle, 1 July 1663.

"Lett the Comptroller of our Howsehold certify vs how this matter stands, and therevpon we shall give our further order.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Jessen.—Recovery of debt from Mr. Chamberlin, Ormonde's saddler.—30 June 1663.

George Sheppard, Master of the ship "Sampson," of London.—Recovery of powder seized by Colonel Spencer at Galway.—27 June 1663.

Elizabeth Cooper, relict of George Cooper, deceased. "That your poor petitioner's said husband faithfully served his late Majestie in England, vnder the command of Sir Thomas Austen, as eldest Corporall, and afterwards being taken prison[er] and not long after released, and was then Quarter Master vnder Sir Charles Lucas, and then afterwards removed to the command of Colonel Errington, till the unhappy battle of Worcester. That since his Majesties happy restauration your petitioners said husband faithfully served his Majestie in Ireland, as privat trooper in Sir Morris Fentons troope, but was afterwards reduced with the rest of the said company into the Earle of Mountraths troope, in which he died about twelue monthes since; that there are seuerall arreares due to your petitioners said husband for his said service in Ireland, but hath receaued any satisfaccion for the same. That he hath left your petitioner in most sad and deplorable condicon with six small infants haueing not anything to subsist, without your Grace be pleased to commiserate her poore condicon. She therefore humbly prayeth that your Grace would be pleased to commiserate her and her poore families sadd condicon and graciously to cause her said husbands arreares to be stated and satisfied, whereby your Grace will doe an act of charity to your poore petitioner and her said distressed infants. And she will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 Junij. 1663.

"If the arreares demanded by the petitioner he within the rule prescribed for satisfaccion, the Muster Master Generall or his Deputy is to state the same and prepare a warrant for payment thereof, and present it vnto vs for our signature.

"ORMONDE."

Henry Nicolls, Esquire.—Recovery of debt from Richard Phillips, Deputy Commissary of the Muster.—27 Junij 1663.

William Hillman, formerly of Lord Falkland's troop.—Certificate recommending him for re-enlistment in Lord Callan's troop.—3 July 1663.

Thomas Bell, Hugh Brumley, William Fender, William Lewis, Robert Rastall, Christopher Toplife, John Wellmotts, and James Garstin, disbanded soldiers of Sir Henry Tichborne's troop.—Arrears.—26 June 1663.

John Marshall, Corporall, of Sir Henry Tichborne's troop.—Benefit of muster for overstayed leave.—28 June 1663.

John Howston, gent.—"That his late Majestie of blessed memory, King Charles the First, was graciously pleased, by his letters of the 9th September 1641, for the reasons therein expressed, to grant vnto your petitioners late father, John Howston deceased, and his heires, all the lands, tenements, goods and chatties of one John Knox of the county of Longford, whereof he stood seized or was possessed att the time of the comitting of the fact for which hee was attainted, together with the profits of the said lands and tenements from the attainer of the said Knox, att and vnder such rents, tenures, and services as were heretofore accustomed to be paid vnto his said Majestie or his predecessors, as by a coppie of the said letter herevnto annexed may appeare; that since the death of your petitioners said father, his now sacred Majestie, vppon peticion vnto him for reviewing and confirming of the aforesaid intend[ed] grant of his said late Majesties Royall father vnto and vpon your petitioner, was gra-

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

ciously pleased to refer the same to your Grace, who therevpon referred the consideration thereof to his Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall and what they should conceive fitt to be don therein, as by the said petition and referreces herevnto likewise annexed may appeare; that by order of his Majesties said Council, they conceiving it fitt a Commission issued vnder the seale of the Exchequer to enquire of the Estate of the said Knox forfeited by attainer; that the said Commission hath bene duly executed and an inquisition therevpon taken; wherein it is found that the said Knox, at the tyme of his attainer and outlawry for murder, was seized and possessed of the three halfe cartrons of lands of Ballyduffe, with the appurtenances, in the said county, as by the said Inquisition and Commission returned, and now remaining of record in his Majesties said Courte of Exchequer, may likewise appeare. May it therefore please your Grace, in pursuance of his late Majesties intencion by his said letters vnto your petitioners said flather and his heires as of his now Majesties pleasure of reviving the same, or your petitioner his sonn, that letters pattents may be passed vnto your said petitioner his heires and assignes for ever of the aforesaid three halfe cartrons of Ballyduffe, with the appurtenances, vnder such rents, tenures, and services as were heretofore accustomed to be paid vnto his Majestie or his predecessors for the same, which by a constat of the Patent of the said lands granted vnto the said Knox doth and may appeare; and to that end that a warrant may be directed to his Majesties Attorney Generall for drawing vpp a flant. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 6 March 1662.

"Wee pray his Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall, or either of them, to take view and consideration of his late Majesties letters, his now Majesties reference, and the inquisition mencioned in the within petition, and of what else shalbe offered on the petitioners behalfe, and therevpon to certify vs what may be fitt and warrantable for vs to doe in that matter."

"ORMONDE."

"May it please your Grace,

"I have perused his late Majesties letters on the behalfe of Mr. John Howston, and his now Majesties reference vnto your Grace therevpon, and I have likewise considered of the inquisition lately taken concerning the estate and attainer of John Knox, of Ballyduffe, in the county of Longford, deceased, and your Graces reference to me therevpon; and I humbly certify your Grace that I find the said Knox was in the year 11 Caroli primi outlawed and attainted of murder, which by the statute of 10 Henry the 7th is high treason, and by the said inquisition lately returned it appeares hee was seized att the tyme of his attainer of severall lands in the inquisition mencioned; I doe likewise humbly certify your Grace that by his late Majesties letters it appeares that his said late Majestie intended that all and singuller the estate of the said John Knox should be granted vnto the said Mr. John Howston and his heires, by letters Pattents vnder the Great Seale of this Kingdome; and I am humbly of opinionn that the said lands may be yett granted vnto the said John Howston and his heires, without impeachment to the interestes of adventurers, sculdiers, or other reprisall persons in regard his Majestie is intituled to the said lauds and premisses by attainer of the said John Knox, which happened before the 23th of October 1641, and not by reason or occasion of the late Rebellion. But in regard that, in his now Majesties reference to your Grace, it is directed that your Grace should examine the aforesaid particulars and therevpon doe or certify his Majestie what should seeme reasonable in this matter, I humbly conceive your Grace cannot safely grant letters pattents of his Majesties said lands, vpon any such generall signification of his Majesties pleasure onely by the Master of Requests, haucing neither his Majesties signett nor signe manull for your Graces warrant; and therefore I humbly offer that your Grace may more properly returne the true state of the matter vnto his Majestie, who therevpon may give such further order therein as to his sacred Majestie shall seeme meete. All which is humbly submitted to your Graces consideracion.—27 May 1663.

"WILL. DOMVILLE."

"SIR,

"His Majestie haucing been pleased, on the inclosed petition of John Howston, by his gracious order of reference of the 8th of July 1662, passed by the hand of Sir Richard Fanshaw, the Master of Requests then attending, to refer the same vnto me, to examine the particulars in the petition alledged, and to doe or certify what to me should seeme meete and reasonable in the matter: I did (in pursuance of his Majesties comands) putt the busines into such a way as by the order inclosed given by mee appeareth; wherevpon his Majesties Attorney Generall here made the report written vnder my said order which I have thought fitt, att the petitioners request, to certify vnto you,* Sir Richard Fanshaw, by whom his Majesties reference passed, being (as I am informed) now beyond the seas. And soe I remaine,

"Your affectionate servaunt,

"Dublin Castle, 1 July 1663.

"ORMONDE."

"The Humble Petition of John Howston, Gentleman.

"To the King's most excellent Majestie, sheweth: That whereas your most Royall father, of glorious memory, by his letters dated in September 1641, directed to the Earle of Leicester and others of the Justices of the Kingdome of Ireland, was graciously pleased to grant vnto the petitioners late father, and his heires, all the lands, tenements, goods, and chatties of one John Knox, of the countie of Longford within the same kingdome, whereof he stood seized att the time of his committing the flact for which he was attainted, as by his Majesties said letters and writt of Privy Seale herevnto annexed may appeare; that the petitioners said father, by reason of his dayly attendance on your said Royall father till the time of his said Majesties most execrable murder, and after that himselfe and family being forced to fly beyond the seas, totally ruined by the rebellious partie, never had opportunity to goe thither to gaine any settlement thereof, that the lands, tenements, goods, and chatties of the said Knox doe hitherte remaine in the same forfeited condicion in the hands of his the said Knox his heires as they were att the tyme of his late Majesties said grant, without any alteration whatsoever: May it therefore please your most sacred Majestie by your Royall Letters to revive and confirme the aforesaid grant vnto your petitioner, thereby appointing such Commissioners for settling the same (according to the intent of his said late Majesties Royall donation) as in your Majesties Princely wisdoms shall be thought meete. And your petitioners shall pray, etc.

"Att the Court at Hampton Court, the 8th of July 1662.

"His Majestie is graciously pleased to refer this petitioner to the Most Honorable Duke of Ormond, to examine the particulars therein alledged, and to doe or certify what to his Grace shall seeme meete and reasonable in this matter.

"RIC. FANSHAWE."

"Dublin Castle, 7 October 1662.

"His Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall are to consider of this petition and what else shall be offered vnto him concerning the matter mencioned, and to certify vs what they shall conceive fitt for vs to doe therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

Gregory Martin, Captain.—"That your petitioner served in the city of Dublin seven yeares as an apprentice to Mr. John Stanley, merchant, being just out of his time when the warr broke out; vpon which, trade being quite decayed, he went for France and from thence for England, where hee served his late Majestie (of ever blessed memory) vntill after Naasie fight, where he was taken prisoner, led to London, and there was in a miserable sufferance vntill such time that by the Providence of God he made his escape and went for France. Also served faithfullie his now Majestie, in Flanders, in his Highnes the Duke of Glosters Regiment, in nature of a reformed Captain, as appeares by certificats herevnto annexed. Inasmuch as your petitioner being allways a loyall and faithfull subject to his Majestie that now is, and his Royall father, and hath bene a greate sufferer for his loyaltie and services aforesaid, and never lived in this Kingdome in the tyme of the late Rebellion, he humbly implores your Graces favourable order to admitt him freely to live and trade as a merchant, both by wholesale and retaile, in his Majesties porte and towne of Galloway, of which your petitioner is a native. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 June 1663.

"Referred to the Vice President of the province of Connaght to take this petition, with what else relates therevnto, into his consideration, and therevpon to doe what hee shall conceive fitt touching the petitioners request.

"ORMONDE."

* In margin: "The Master of Requests, now attending his Majesty, concerning Mr. John Howston."

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

Thomas Doleing and Roger Pemberton, farmers of wine and strongwater licences, co. Kildare.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—2 July 1663.

Thomas Beard, John Bolger, George Clapham, Edward Howlett, Edward Hayes, Thomas Johnson, Anthony Teltor, and Alexander Platevort, disbanded privates of Sir William Mercedith's troop.—Arrears.—3 July 1663.

Mathew Russell.—Permission for Lieutenant-Colonel George Smyth, of the garrison at Navan, to attend as witness at Dublin on trial of petitioner's claim under Act of Settlement.—2 July 1663.

Henry Alland, "in the custody of George Piggott, Esquire, Sericant att Armes."

"That your petitioner being the tenth of November last committed by the Right Honorable the Lords Howse of Parliament vnto the custody of the aboue said George Piggott, was by the said Mr. Piggott secured in the house of Phillipp Carpenter, Esquire, Sericant att Armes, where by the said Carpenter he was kept in close restraint, not haneing freind or solicitor admitted to him vntill your Graces order for that freedome [sic], and he had given vnto the said Sericant Piggott and Carpenter a bond of 1,000*l.* with sureties for his true imprisonment within the howse, yard and garden of the said Carpenter; that the said Sericant Carpenter, notwithstanding the aforesaid bond, contrary to your Graces said order, hath againe shutt vpp your petitioner, not onely into close restraint, but into a very litle close room, not permitting him the benefit either of freind or agent or his wife to come to him or of the common ayre, whereby your petitioner is very impaired in his health and suffereth much in his affaires. In tender consideration whereof, your petitioner humbly beseecheth your Grace that he may be removed into some other howse or place where he may haue the advantage of ayre for his health and access of his wife, freinds and agents for the management of his affaires, he resoluing at the next session of Parliament to throw himselfe at the feete of the Howse of Peers and submitt himselfe to what they shall judge fitt on his applicacion, and your petitioner will give any further security for his true imprisonment in the meane tyme, if what hee hath given already shall not be thought sufficient. And he shall pray.

"Dublin Castle, 4 July 1663.

"The petitioner haneing been committed to the custody of the Sericant att Armes, by order of the Howse of Peers in Parliament, wee thinke not fitt to give any order for his removal: but we are pleased that the Sericant, in whose custody he is, provide him wholesome and convenient lodginge and permitt his wife, agents, and solicitors to haue access vnto him, as there may be occasion, notwithstanding any order of ours to the contrary.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Thomas Blake, Baronet.—

"That, for eminent sufferings of the said Sir Valentine Blake, Knight and Baronet, deceased, father of the petitioner, for his adhering to the authority of his Majesty against the Nuncio and his party, it was amongst other things enacted in the Act for Settlement of Ireland that the petitioner should be forthwith restored to his former estate and be settled and quieted in the possession thereof; that in his Majesties gracious declaration it is provided that persons appointed to be restored to such parts of their estates as is not disposed of; that his Majesty by his letters of the 20th of Aprill and the 27th of June 1661, ready to be produced, ordered that the petitioner should be immediately restored to all the estate in the possession of the said Sir Valentine and in his Majesties hands; that the said Sir Valentine died seized of the impropriate rectories and tythes in the annexed schedull expressed, by whose death the same descend to your petitioner, and of right ought to be enjoyed by him, but was therout expelled by the late usurped power, and are now in his Majesties disposall. Wherefore the petitioner humbly prayeth your Grace to order a custodiam to be granted vnto him of the said rectories and tythes during his Majesties pleasure att the old rent, and he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 Junij 1663.

"Let this petition bee presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Conncell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"A schedull of the rectories and tythes."

"The rectories of Knockmoy and Moylagh in the diocesse of Tuam; the moitie of all the tythes both great and small growing due in or vpon the lands of

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

Trossuagh, Anaghmore, Colowe, Mullaghmore, Annaghleque, Corrigan, Corballis, Clonowen, Caltragh and Gilcagh; as also the impropriat tythes both great and small growing due in or vpon the villadge or land [of] Coolereagh, Togher, and Grange; as alsoe the fourth parte of all the tythes both great and small growing due in or vpon the lands of Tunnagh Corballis, Agghrim and Grange; and alsoe the moitie of all the tythes both great and small growing due in or vpon the villadg or lands of Oranbegg, with the appurtenances; as alsoe one fourth parte of all the tythes both great and small growing due in or vpon the lands Ardnefadden, with the appurtenances lying and being in the county of Galloway."

George Sheppard.—"May it please your Grace. In obedience to your Lordships aboue order of reference, I haue considered the within petition and annexed certificate and doe humbly conceiue that noe proclamation of the Councell doth direct the seisure of any powder which is not brought to bee sold in this Kingdome; and am further of opinion that the shipp being to goe a voyage of six monethes, and carrying foure guns, the proportion of powder seised vpon is noe more than what is convenient for such a ship and such a voyage; and therefore am humbly of opinion that the powder should bee restored to the petitioner, hee giueing security that hee shall not sell the said powder or any parte thereof in any parte of this kingdome, unless it bee to some of his Majesties stores. All which is most humbly submitted to your Grace by your Graces most faithful servant

"MOUNT ALEXANDER."

"Dublin, July 4, 1663.

"Dublin Castle, the 6 of July 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the forgoeing certificate of our very good Lord, the Earl of Mountalexander, Master of his Majesties Ordnance, made in pursuance of our order of reference of the 27th of the last moneth given on the within petition of George Sheppard, wee are pleased that the powder in the said petition mentioned be restored to the petitioner, hee giueing security to the Governor of the towne of Galloway that hee shall not sell the said powder or any parte thereof in this kingdome, unless it be to some of his Majesties stores; whereof the said Governor is to take notice, and on the security aforesaid to deliuer the said powder to the petitioner without delay.

"ORMONDE."

Several persons concerned in the late work and repairs of his Majesty's Castle of Dublin.—

"That your petitioners, vpon a late adresse to your Grace (praying satisfaction for severall summ due vnto them for worke done as aforesaid) obtained an order to his Majesties Auditor of Imprests Accounts [to certify] and make reporte thereof to your Grace for such further order as should be thought fitt; that the annexed is a report from the said Auditor of their just dues respectively. They humbly pray your Grace would please to give such further order for their satisfaction as shall in your wisdom thinke fitt. And they shall pray, etc. John Miles, John Harison's, Rich. Wilsons, Thos. Crow, Wm. Cross.

"Dublin Castle, 4 July 1663.

"Let this petition, with what doth relate therunto, be presented vnto vs by the Clerke of the Conncell att our next sitting att the Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"May it please your Grace. In obedience to your Graces order of the 15th March last, made vpon the petition of the severall persons concerned in the late worke and repaires of his Majesties Castle of Dublin, requiring me to state the accounts of the petitioners and to certify what shall bee due to every of them particularly; I haue examined the accounts of Captaine John Paine, Surveyor Generall of his Majesties workes, for receipts and issues for the work aforesaid, and doe find he hath received, betwixt 14th December 1661 and the 19th March last, the summ of 2,493*l.* 06*s.* 10*d.*, and that he hath paid within the said tyme, for severall materials used there, and workmen employed in the said repaires the summ of 2,567*l.* 02*s.* 1*d.*, as by a state of the said account remaining in my office and the receipts of the particular persons may appeare; see that there remains due vnto him (as soe much paid more then received) the summ of 73*l.* 15*s.* 03*d.*. To the truth of which account and vouchers aforementioned I humbly offer that the said Captaine Paine may make oath before the Lord the Chiefe Baron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, or the Clerke of the Conncell. I haue alsoe examined the bills and demands of the petitioners and doe find there is duo and in arreare to them as followeth, etc.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

| | li | s. | d. |
|--|----|-----|-------|
| " To Carpenters, Joyners, and Sawyers | - | 106 | 18 11 |
| To Bricklayers and Massons | - | 036 | 01 00 |
| To Plasterers | - | 163 | 00 03 |
| To the Smith | - | 107 | 15 23 |
| To the Nailor | - | 098 | 06 07 |
| To Mr. Cross, for timber | - | 188 | 18 09 |
| To the Slater | - | 063 | 11 02 |
| To Captain James Brown for lime | - | 048 | 16 10 |
| To the Glasier | - | 097 | 15 00 |
| To Mr. Westoura, for deales | - | 067 | 04 08 |
| To Mr. Grafton, for timber, etc. | - | 025 | 11 00 |
| To Mr. Crow, for bricks | - | 029 | 04 11 |
| To Mr. Garland, for tiles | - | 013 | 19 00 |
| To Alderman Daniell Wilband, for deales | - | 027 | 00 00 |
| To Mr. Pooley, for deales | - | 003 | 14 00 |
| To Mr. Nicholas, for bricks | - | 001 | 17 00 |
| To Mr. Boyd, for timber | - | 001 | 00 00 |
| To the Turner | - | 009 | 09 01 |
| To the Carver | - | 004 | 10 00 |
| For 110 foots of flagstone | - | 002 | 15 00 |
| To Fitzwalter, a carman | - | 004 | 06 08 |
| To Tho. Power, carman | - | 002 | 11 08 |
| To John Holt, carman | - | 000 | 11 02 |
| To Mr. Harvice, the Scavenger | - | 057 | 00 05 |
| To Woodstocke, the Carver | - | 002 | 07 00 |
| To the Paviers | - | 005 | 05 08 |
| To Mr. Digby, for disbursements | - | 013 | 05 04 |
| To Mr. Mills, the Master Carpenter, he not being included amongst the other Carpenters | - | 043 | 16 06 |
| To Mr. Sande[r]ton, the Plumber | - | 078 | 01 10 |
| " The totall amounting to fourteene hundred and seven pounds fourteen shillings and one peny, as by the respective bills of the said persons may and doth appeare. | | | |

" I doe further humbly offer that Mr. Sanderton, the Plumber, may make oath to his particular account before the Lord Cheife Baron or the Clerke of the Council. All which is humbly submitted to your Graces consideracion.

" June 26th 1663.

" BRY. JONES."

Lawrence Esmond.—" That your petitioners claime in the Court of Claymes (for the estate of the late Lord Esmond) came to hearing, and your petitioner was judged an Innocent and referred to the law for the tryall of his title, which your petitioner is not able to prosecute for want of means to relieve him, having not wherewithall to maintaine him in his most distressed condition although he hath an undoubted right thereunto by the conveyances and settlement of the said Lord Esmond, if not relieved by your Grace. Wherefore and in as much as the lands in the annexed schedull mentioned are in his Majesties disposall, and not given to Adventurers or souldiers, he humbly prayeth your Grace to order that a custodiam be granted to him of the said lands, during his Majesties pleasure. And he will pray, etc.

" Dublin Castle, 4 Junij 1663.

" If the lands in this petition mentioned be in his Majesties disposall, and not granted in custodiam to any other, the Lord Cheife Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer are to issue a custodiam thereof to the petitioner, to continue during his Majesties pleasure, att such moderate rent as they shall thinke fitt.

ORMONDE."

" COUNTY OF WEXFORD.

| | |
|--------------------|--|
| " Ballyshanocke. | Tomovoile. |
| Ballinamana. | Tomstone. |
| Killmichell. | Acheulin. |
| Dromery. | Palice. |
| Knockdowne. | Timhepocke. |
| Loginch. | Parkbane. |
| Garyhastene. | Ballyshethin. |
| Balinestrah. | Killoane. |
| Achlahan. | Killpatrickke. |
| Corkanau. | Colenoge. |
| Bolbane. | Ballylacy. |
| Kilbegnet. | Ballynestrahamore. |
| Tineshunach. | Monicopog and Bally-clantickie and the |
| Kilkevan. | Grange, all in one |
| Clonsilach. | parcell. |
| Tincarig. | Lyrane. |
| Ballinestrahahegg. | Askekeele. |
| Ballwilliam. | Balliofarrell. |
| Tinehana. | |
| Ballicormlocher. | |

" COUNTY OF CARLOE.
" Clonegale. Ballypyires.
Killduan.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

" COUNTY OF TIPPERARY.

" Grangemochler towne Killmolashy, Temple-lands and tythes. tyny, [and] Colevande.
Prieststowne.
Clonoulty towne lands The improprications of and tythes. The Killolean and Ned-tythes of Temple- dans."
heny, Shaurahan,

George Butler, " Ensigne to His Grace's Company of foote att Duncannon."—Arrears.—6 July, 1663.

Dominick French FitzDominicke, and William Jordane.—" That the petitioners humble request to your Grace, in order to their continuacion on the lands sett out unto them respectively, within the mile line in Connaght, vpon the accept of transplantacion, was by your Grace referred to the Lord Baron of Santry, Lord Cheife Justice of his Majestie's Court of Cheife Place, whoe, having heard what could be said by the Trustees of the Commissioned Officers before the 5th of June 1649, made the annexed Certificate, which by the annexed order of your Grace was shewed to the said Trustes the 7th day of May last, appearing by the said annexed affidavit. Forasmuch as hitherto nothing is offered on the said Trustes behalfe why the petitioners should not be continued on the said lands and be restored to their distresses, according to their said certificate; and for that the said petitioners have and doe suffer much by the interruption and trouble hitherto put vpon them by the said Commissioned Officers, your Grace may be therefore pleased to confirme the said certificate, and that accordingly the petitioners be by your Grace ordered to be restored to the said possession, and that the rent and distresses taken from them and their tenants on the said lands be restored. And your petitioners shall pray, &c.

" Dublin Castle, 22 Junij 1663.

" Vpon consideracion of the annexed certificate made by our very good Lord, the Lord Baron of Santry, Lord Cheife Justice of his Majesties Courte of Cheife place, the tenth day of Aprill last, in pursuance of our order of reference of the second of Aprill aforesaid, and vpon consideracion alsoe of the annexed affidavit, whereby it appeareth that Dominick French, one of the petitioners, hath deposed that, on the seventh day of May last or thereabouts, he shewed our order of the second of that month (herevnto alsoe annexed) vnto Colonel Clayton and foure others of the Trustees of the Commissioned Officers of the army before the fifth of June 1649, whereby they were required to shew cause (if any they could) why the petitioners should not be putt into possession of the lands in question; viz. the petitioner, Dominick French, of the quarter of land of Garromore, the quarter of Callacan, the halfe quarter of Leiter, the halfe Cartton of Bundoragh, the halfe quarter of Callanlogh, the halfe quarter of Coyledowne, and the three halfe quarters of Kinedowy; and the petitioner, William Jordan, into the possession of the quarter of Bonyne, alias Bonabin, mountaine, to Banowan quarter, the halfe quarter of Monyn, part of Carrowleguane quarter, all lying in the parish of Killyger in the Barrozy of Moruske and County of Mayo, mentioned in the final settlement given out for the petitioners by the Commissioners therevnto appointed; and why the distresses taken from the petitioners and their tenants in the said certificate mencioned should not be restored unto them; and noe such cause being yett shewed, as by our said order of the second of May aforesaid was required, we doe now hereby order that the petitioners, giv in bonds with good security to the Clerke of the Council to the vse of the said Commissioned Officers, to answer and satisfy vnto them the meane rates of the said lands, if by the Commissioners of the Court of Claymes they shalbe adjudged to be removed from the same. The petitioners, vpon producing certifiact of the Clerke of the Council of their giving such bonds, shalbe forthwith severally and respectively restored to the possession of the severall lands aforesaid by the final settlements sett out to each of them particularly; and we require the severall possessors of the said lands and of every part thereof to deliver the possession of the same to the petitioners accordingly; which if they or any of them refuse to doe, the Sherriffe of the said county of Mayo for the time being is hereby required to putt the petitioners into the quiet possession of the said lands severally and respectively and to continue them therein vntill the difference concerning the same shall be determined in the said Courte of Claymes, or that the petitioners be otherwise legally evicted thereof; and wee alsoe order that the rents and distresses, taken from the petitioners or their tenants out of the said lands for the said Commissioned Officers, be restored to the petitioners; whereof the said Sherriffe and all others whom it may concerne are to take notice and duely to observe this our order.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"ORMONDE."

John Ormsby, Esquire, farmer of wine and strong water licences, Borreshowie and Murske Baronies, co. Mayo.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—20 June 1663.

Thomas Willis, trooper.—Certificate as to arrears due to petitioner and James Wogan.—29 June 1663.

Ralph Harrison: "that Richard Phillips, of Castle St., in Dublin, glover, hath ought severall summes of money to your petitioner above these ten years, and is now a deputy Master Master in his Majesties Army in this Kingdome of Ireland, soe as though the said Richard doth refuse to pay your petitioner his said just debts, yett your petitioner cannot without your Graces permission compell him thereto by course of law. May it therefore please your Grace to grant your petitioner a licence to implead the said Richard Phillips att law, and to order the said Richard to answer your petitioners suite. And he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 26 Junij 1663.

"The above named Richard Phillips is required to give petitioner satisfaction concerning his demands above mentioned, or within ten dayes after sight or notice hereof to shew cause (if any he can) why the petitioner should not be at libertie to seeke his remedy against him by due course of law.

"ORMONDE."

Arthur Hendy.—Affidavit of service of order on William Little and William Cogan, members of the army, relative to recovery of debts.—26 June 1663.

Mary Conyngham, wife of William Conyngham.—"Sheweth that your petitioner's husband hath bene for this foure weekes kept a close prisoner in the custody of the Serjeant at Armes at very great expences; that severall takinge advantage of his imprisonment (hee beinge debarred of the libertie to follow his lawfull and pressing occasions) haue and still doe very much prejudice him in his estate and goods; that lyinge under great rents and debts and altogether unable to satisfy them if longer imprisoned will prove the ruine of him and his family. May it therefore please your Grace that the persons employed for the examining of him may give an account to your Grace of what they find laid to his charge; that his innocence appeareinge bee may (according to your Graces wonted justice) be released. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7th July 1663.

"Wee pray his Majesties Attorney Generall to informe himselfe concerning the matter laid to the charge of the petitioner's husband, and to certify vs what shall appeare unto him, together with his opinion, what hee shall conceive fitt to bee done therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

Elizabeth Burton, wife of Henry Burton, Esquire.—"That whereas your petitioners husband hath bene now almost a month vnder restraint with the Serjeant att Armes, vpon a false informacion, as if privy to some plott or designe against his Majestie or the State, and not vpon a finall hearinge and Examination whereby he may make appeare his innocency, which noe doubt he will amply to your Grace, when in your Graces wissdome and justice he may be admitted therevnto; and forasmuch as hee lyes att excessive charges vnder the said restraint and is noe wayes able to beare the same, which said charges were the maine end of his accusers to exhaust his substance and impoverish his estate, as may appeare by the annexed; the petitioner humbly prayeth your Grace to give a warrant for his enlargement, he putting in sufficient bayle for his appeareance when he shall be called vpon, and further to answer any matter that may be charged against him. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 October 1663.

"His Majesties Attorney Generall is to informe himselfe concerning the matter for which the petitioner's husband is restrained, and to certify vs what shall appeare vnto him, together with his opinion, what hee shall conceive fitt to be done in his request.

"ORMONDE."

William Vincent.—"That the petitioner hath bene about two yeares imprisoned in the King's county, being convicted on the single testimony of one person [who] testified that the petitioner had spoake words against his Majestie before his happie Restauration, an accompt whereof was given to the late Lord Justices by the Judges of assize before whom the petitioner was tryed, and the said justices of assize, finding the evidence slender, and that the words were charged to haue been spoaken before his Majesties happy Restauration, were pleased to reprove the petitioner, and did certify him an object of his Majesties mercy, and your Grace hath bene pleased to grant order for his pardon; but the petitioner not being able att the present to gett the said pardon passed, hee humbly prayeth that your Grace, haueinge beene mercifull to him in the principall parte, you will now vouchsafe to give order that, vpon good security to be given to the Sherriff of the King's county that the petitioner shall plead his pardon in his Majesties Court of Chiefe Place the first of Michaelmas terme next, he may be sett at libertie in the meane tyme, and thereby be able to labour for the subsistence of himselfe and his charge. And he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 26 Junij 1663.

"Having already granted our warrant for the petitioners pardon, as is above sett forth, wee are pleased and doe now order that the petitioner, giving security to the Sherriffe of the Kings county that he shall sue forth his pardon and plead the same in his Majesties Court of Chiefe Place the first day of the next Michaelmas terme, he shall bee sett att libertie; whereof as well the said Sherriffe as the Marshall or gaoler vnder whose charge he doth remaine are to take notice, and to see that he be enlarged accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

John FitzPatrick, Colonel.—"That where[as] the late Commissioners appointed to execute the Declaration, haueing omitted to insert in your petitioners Decree the putting of soe much of his lands out of charge for quit rent as they had restored vnto him, he petitioned vnto the Commissioners for executing the Act to haue those words inserted; vpon which they haue ordered his Majesties Attorney Generall to appeare before them by a certain day to shew cause why the said clause should not be inserted. Now forasmuch as the multiplicity of Mr. Attorney Generalls impleyments this terme doth not permitt of his attendance on the Court of Claymes, your petitioner humbly prayeth your Graces directions to the Barons of the Exchequer to suspend his rent vntill the next terme. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the quit rent for soe much of the petitioners lands as by the Commissioners for executing the declaration above mentioned haue been restored vnto him be respited vntill the first day of the next Michaelmas terme; whereof as well the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer as all his Majesties Officers whome it may concerne are to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Erasmus Smyth, Esquire.—"That Captain John Chambers came to this towne about the 14th of May last, and brought with him £80 in order to discharge the £50 sterling due to your petitioner for rent out of certaine lands in the Barrony of Slane and County of Meath, which the said John Chambers held of your petitioner the last yeare att a certaine yearely rent, as by his lease more att large appeareth. Now, soe it is that before the said Captain Chambers could repaire vnto your petitioner to make him payment of his rent, he was apprehended vpon the late plott, and the said mony soe intended to be paid your petitioner for his said rent was attached by Colloanel Lessells, and all his cattle and goods that were on your petitioners said lands were seized vpon by the Sherriffe of the county for his Majesties use; soe that [there] is noe distress left for your petitioner, and to the end your petitioner may not suffer for others' crimes, humbly prayeth your Grace to order £50 of the said money to be paid vnto your petitioner, or the rent that is due by the said Chambers vnto your petitioner by his said lease made vnto your petitioner as aforesaid, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

"Referred to our very good Lord the Chiefe Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer to consider of this petition, and to certify vs what they shall conceive fitt to be done in the matter therein mentioned.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Stephens and Robert Williams, disbanded soldiers under Sir Robert Coulthrop, Governor of Cork.—Arrears.—6 July 1663.

Richard Delarocke, prisoner in custody of the Serjeant att arms.—Examination of charges against him, and release on bail.—7 July 1663.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

Rebecca Manwaring.—Compensation for amount expended on the house out of which her husband was ejected by the Governor of Dublin Castle.—7 June 1663.

John Skelton, Innkeeper, Dublin.—“That your petitioner is engaged vnto Mr. Nathaniell Leah (who is bound to the King), being suerty for Thomas Bagnall and Richard Skelton, for the collecting of the Excise of Ale and Beare for the county of Dublin, who haue not discharged the contracted part with the said Leache your petitioner is imprisoned by the said [Leache], vpon an execution for the mony in arcare, being £120, your petitioner being aged sixty-five yeares and being in a very poore distressed condicion, haneing nothing else to satisfy his engagement but onely debts due to your petitioner, since his Majesties coming to his Crowne, by severall troopes which haue bine quartered vpon the petitioner, who are indebted to your poore petitioner for diet and horsemeate £48, as appeares by their bills vnder their hands and acknowledged them before their officers; may it therefore please your Grace, out of the bowells of pitty and compassion, to take this your petitioners sad and deplorable condicion into your Graces pions and pittious consideration and doe [sic] order that what bills appeares to be justly due as aforesaid may be accepted in part of the Kings debt; otherwise your petitioner, haneing noe other way to make any satisfaccion, must inevitably perish in prison, which your petitioner most humbly submits to your Grace, and will pray, etc.

“JOHN SKELTON.”

“Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

“Lett the petitioner produce vnto Sir Danniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Vice Treasurer, a list of the debts within mentioned to be due vnto him, and by whome they are due, whereby the said Sir Danniell is to take consideration and to certify vs what he shall conceive fitt to be donn for the petitioners reliefe.

“ORMONDE.”

“May it please your Grace,

“I find that there is due and in arcare vnto Ensigne George Butler, as Ensigne to your Graces owne foote company, from the 21th of October 1661 to the 27th of July 1662, according to the Kallender account and present establishment, the sum of £38 footeen shillings, a moiety thereof doth amount vnto £19 seaven shillings; which I humbly certify this 8th day of July 1663.

“RICHARD BARRY.”

“Dublin Castle, 8 July 1663.

“Wee require the Master Master Generall or his Deputy to prepare a warrant for payment of the £19 7s. above mencioned vnto the petitioner and present the same vnto vs for our signature, hee being willing to accept of the same in satisfaccion of the ten monthes arreares above mencioned.

“ORMONDE.”

Philip Carpenter, Serjeant at arms.—Recovery of lands belonging of right to petitioner, but let in error as forfeited lands.—7 July 1663.

Martha Hall alias Arundell.—“That vpon application by her made to the Right Honorable the late Lords Justices, setting forth her severall grievances [they] were pleased to refer her petition vnto his Majesties Serjeants at Law to his Attorney and Solicitor, to consider thereof and to certify the state of the case, with their opinions therevpon, as by the said petition and reference annexed may appeare. But (may it please your Grace), in regard of your Graces accesse to the Government of this Kingdome, the said referees cannot proceed to make report of the case, vnlesse by your Grace impowered therevnto. May it therefore please your Grace to order the said referees to returne a certificate by [sic] your petitioners case, and their opinions therevpon, to the end some such order may by your Grace be granted therevpon as may extend some comfortable reliefe vnto your petitioner. And shee shall pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

“Wee are pleased hereby to renew the reference of the late Lords Justices given on the petition to them exhibited by the petitioner, the 7th of December 1662, and doe order that the referees therein named proceed as by that reference they were directed.

“ORMONDE.”

James Peirce.—“That your petitioner (as by divers letters be can produce) was invited over from London to this city by one Thomas Paine, now one of your Graces Guard of Halberdiers, with promise to beare all your petitioners charges from London to this city, and likewise promised to furnish your petitioner with considerable worke in his trade; in all which the said Thomas Payne hath bin wanting, to the damage of your petitioner; that your petitioner is by trade a trunkmaker and hath very [often] endeavoured to reap the benefit of his Majesties gracious act for the making of such free who willingly would [take] the oathes of allegiance and supremacy, paying 20s. att the tyme of their making free; all which your petitioner hath most willingly offered but hath [been] still putt off; that your petitioner petitioned to the Lords Justices of his Majesties Court of Comon Pleas for his freedom, according to the intent and meaning of the said Act; the said Lords Justices caused Mr. Tallant to be sent for before them and to shew cause why the petitioner was not made free according to the Act; the which Mr. Tallant promised, in the behalfe of Mr. Mayor, before their Lordships, that your petitioner should be made free. But see it is, your petitioner is not yet free, and is now in great [dread] of being arrested and putt into prison by the rest of the bretheren of the said trade of trunkmaking; whereof the said Thomas Paine is one of them, who seekes to prosecute your petitioner for working on his trade, being not a freeman. Your petitioner therefore most humbly prayeth your Grace would bee graciously [pleased] to grant your order vnto your petitioner, accordingly to the Act for the making him free, and that the said Thomas Paine may be ordered to give satisfaccion for the wrong he hath done to your petitioner. And he will pray.

“Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

“The Maior of the City of Dublin is to shew cause why the petitioner is not made free of the said city, according to the Act of Parliament aboue mencioned.

“ORMONDE.”

Thomas Ball and Robert Davis.—“That whereas your petitioners were at Dublin, on the 21 day of May, about particular concernments of their owne, were notwithstanding taken to his Majesties Castle in Dublin and committed to the hands of a pursuivant, and hane there continued ever since, to their great expence and charge, and beeing poore are not able any longer to subsist, but are likely to bee ruined if your Grace compassionate them not. May it therefore please your Grace to take the premises into consideration, and so far to shew your commiseracion towards them that they may bee forthwith brought to their examination to know the cause of their imprisonment and to answer what shall bee objected against them, and either fully released or otherwise vpon bonds as [to] your Grace shall bee most convenient. And your petitioners shall for ever pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

“His Majesties Attorney Generall is to informe himselfe concerning the matters laid to the charge of the petitioners, and to certify vs what shall appeare vnto him, together with his opinion what hee shall conceive fitt to be done thereupon.

“ORMONDE.”

Christopher Archbold, of Tymolyn, co. Kildare.—Custodiam of lands in Kildare.—7 June 1663. The Ministers, Churchwardens, and Parishioners of the Parish of St. John's, Dublin.—

“That Nicholas Amshame, late Churchwarden of the Parish of St. John's Dublin, hath the monys of the said Parish in his hands and will give noe account thereof, but stands vpon his priviledges of being one of your Graces Life Guard; by reason whereof the poore of the Parish are in a staruening condicion. In consideration thereof, your petitioners humbly pray your Grace wilbe pleased to cause the said Amshame to cleare his accounts or to give your petitioners liberty to take their course against him according to law. And your petitioners will pray.

Thomas Bladen, Rector of St. John's; John Quelch, Churchwarden; Christopher Lovett, William Smyth, James Potts, James Boy, John Beaton, William Martan, Robert Shipley, James Rea, James Handcocke, Ge. Hewlett, George Kennelly.

“Dublin Castle, 4 July 1663.

“The within named Nicholas Amshame is required to give the petitioners satisfaccion concerning the matter within mencioned, or within ten dayes after sight or notice hereof to shew cause (if any hee can) why the petitioners should not be at libertie to take their remedy against him by due course of law.

“ORMONDE.”

Thomas Shepherd, sometime Marshall-General.—Arrears as Lieutenant of Horse.—8 July 1663.

Joshua Hobart, of Ross.—“That your petitioner, on the nyenth day of June last, as he passed alonge the street by the Maine Guard was by them apprehended

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

att the instigation of one Edward Davis, of Rosse aforesaid (who prompted by prejudice hath thus brought the petitioners fidelity into question); and from the Guard by your Graces command your petitioner was committed to George Piggott, Esquire, Sergeant at Armes, where he is detained a close prisoner ever since, and nothing of occasion or charge is laid against him or any examination of him as yett had; and your petitioner, being destitute of succour and releife, is in noe wise able to maintaine himselfe in prison and his wife and small children at home. In consideration whereof, he addressed himselfe to your Grace, humbly begging that your Grace would issue an order to the Kings attorney to examine the petitioner and make report to your Grace of the state of your petitioners case; that thereby he might be made capable to be soe great a sharer in your Graces justice and compassion as to be by your Grace restored to his former liberty. And he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

"Wee pray his Majesties Attorney Generall to informe himselfe concerning the matter in this petition mentioned, and to certify how it stands, with his opinion what he shall conceive fitt to be don therein.

"ORMONDE."

Edward Nicholls and John Partridge, farmers of wine and strongwater licences in the King's and Queen's counties.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—9 July 1663.

Same Petitioners.—Like petition.—9 July 1663.

Edward Gofort, a disbanded trumpeter of the troop commanded by Major Warren and Sir Thomas Armstrong.—Arrears.—6 July 1663.

E. Lloyd, prisoner in custody of the Marshall of the Guards.—Release on bail.—8 July 1663.

Priscilla Ruxton, wife of Lieutenant John Ruxton.—"That your petitioner hath the charge of nyne small children now very young, as allsoe all her husbands affaires of husbandry, vpon her hands; all which lye vnder many headships and difficulties, as alsoe a seisure hath issued against her husbands estates out of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, for that hee, being late Sherrieff of the county of Lowth, hath not finished his accompt to his Majestie; she further sheweth that John Ruxton, her son, is apprehended for haueing a hand in the late Rebellion, which the petitioner is partly hopefull and confidente that by reason of his yeares and incapacity he is noe way guilty; of which shee hopeth your Grace will finde, if inquiry be made. In order therevnto, and for that his libertie would be of exceeding vse to manage the occasions aforesaid, may it therefore please your Grace to release the said John Ruxton vpon security for his appearance when your Grace shall require it. And she will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

"His Majesties Attorny Generall is to informe himselfe concerning the matter for which the petitioners husband is restrained, and to certify vs what shall appeare vnto him, together with his opinion of the petitioners request.

"ORMONDE."

Mary Roberts.—"That Richard Thompson (who now standeth indicted of high treason) hath severall times promised to pay vnto your petitioner a certaine summe of money long since due for two horses; and your said petitioner now haueing noe remedy att Comon Law, humbly prays, if it may be thought convenient, that your Grace would be pleased to order your petitioner satisfaction out of such forfeited goods and chattles as shall be found in his possession att the time of his conviction; which otherwise your petitioner must necessarily loose that, that is her just due. And she will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 4 July 1663.

"His Majesties Attorney Generall is to consider of this petition, and to certify what he shall conceive fitt to be done for the petitioners releife.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Wakeham, disbanded Ensigne of Colonel Wheeler's company.—Arrears.—18 June 1663.

John Annesley, Captain.—Arrears for service as Lieutenant in Lord Aungier's troop.—10 July 1663.

Edmond Nangle, Farmer of wine and strongwater licences for Longford and Westmeath counties.—Recovery from Captain Edward Knight of contract-money for sub-farming said licenses.—11 July 1663.

William Antrobus and John Slater, Farmers of wine and "hotwater" licences, county Roscommon.—Satisfaction from unlicensed retailers.—10 July 1663.

Edward Smith.—Answer to petition of Thomas Waterhouse respecting settlement of account.—10 July 1663.

John Smith, a disbanded soldier of the Duke of Albarmar's regiment garrisoned in Wexford.—Arrears.—July 1663.

Sir Henry Bennett, Knight.—Replication to answer of Richard Hodden, agent for Major Richard Hoden, relative to lands in King's co. assigned to Major Hoden on account of English arrears.—11 July 1663.

John Maurice, of Lord Callan's troop.—Arrears for service under Lieutenant Colonel Moses Hill in the Duke of Albemarle's troop, and recovery of horse, etc., detained for debt by John Barton, Innkeeper, Belfast.—15 July 1663.

Sir Edward Sutton, Knight and Baronet.—Permission to recover by distress amount due by Lieutenant Richard Thompson.—4 July 1663.

Hugh Farr, plaintiff; Richard Nevell, John Mitchell, William Falconer, William Vincent, William Burker, Robert Browne, Richard Palmer, John Husband, and John Boyce, defendants.—Affidavit of service of order relative to recovery of debts.—11 July 1663.

Ann Bradson, wife of Thomas Bradson, of Meath, who was imprisoned for debt in the City Marshalsea, Dublin.—Release of her husband on payment of amount due.—13 July 1663.

Thomas Kent, a disbanded Serjeant in Sir Thomas Geford's company.—Arrears for himself and other disbanded officers and soldiers of that company.—13 July 1663.

Edward Tayler, a disbanded soldier.—Arrears; and praying to "be put in the hospital to be cured."—14 July 1663.

William Pledall.—Recovery of amount of bond from Captain Richard Power.—14 July 1663.

John Bray, a disbanded soldier of Colonel Daniell Redman's troop.—Arrears.—13 July 1663.

Patrick Kerrivan, Esquire.—"That by late orders of the Deputie Governor of the towne of Galloway all persons of Papist religion, hitherto residing within the said town of Galloway, vpon great penalties are strictly required to [de]part the said towne; whereby your petitioners wife, children, and family wilbe subject to the inconvenience of removal thence, if it be not prevented by your Graces special orders for dispensing with him and his familie in that behalfe. It may therefore please your Grace to order that the petitioners wife and family be permitted to reside and dwell in the said [town], and that your Grace be further pleased to order that his son, Nicholas Bodkin, and servant, John Bodkin, who are of his family, be permitted alsoe to live without any mollestation and freely to trade in grosse in the said towne. And the petitioner will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 14 July 1663.

"Wee refer this petition to Sir Maurice Berkeley, Knight, Vice-President of the Province of Connaught, who is to take consideration thereof, and to doe in the matter therein mentioned as he shall conceive fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Ambrose Bodkin.—"That the petitioner hitherto lived in the towne of Galloway, drining therein a trade in grosse to the advance of his Majesties Customes; that by late orders of the Deputie Governors all Papists are commanded out of the said towne. Foras[much] as the petitioner is but two and twenty yeares of age, and that hee is newly come from his printishipp to putt up for himselfe, that, in order to the increase of his Majesties Customes, for his innocencie and youths sake, for his guiltlesse behaviour during the rebellion, and for that he hath noe intrest nor lands abroad, your Grace may be pleased to grant him a permittance to lue in the said towne and trade by the great therein. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 14 July 1663.

"Wee refer this petition to Sir Maurice Berkeley, Knight, Vice-President of the Province of Connaught, who is to take consideration thereof, and to doe in the matter therein mentioned as he shall conceive fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Richard Lane, Knight and Baronet.—Custodiam of lands in co. Roscommon.—13 July 1663.

John Molloy.—"That your petitioner, being in the Lord Folliott's company, was lycensed to goe to see his brother into England, being one of his Royall [Highness] the Duke of Yorke's guards of horse; who was soe desperately sicke that the petitioner was constrained to stay longer than his furlo did warrant; by which meanes, he not being present the last muster, was left out of the muster roubles of the army. The premisses tenderlie considered, and for that the petitioner was not put out for any misdeameanor, nor for anie willfull fault or neglect, but vpon mere necessitie forced to waite his said brothers sickness. It may therefore please your Grace to admitt your petitioner to be one of the said company formerly, or that he may be admitted either to that company, Collonel Gorge's company, or the Lord Massercene's company, in case of vacancie that he may have a preference as aforesaid. And he shall pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, 13 July 1663.

"The petitioner is to apply himself to the Officer in chiefe of Collonel Gorges foote company, who is to admitt him into that company if he shall so thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Patrick Blake, of Galloway.—"That the petitioner is an inhabitant of the towne of Galloway, where hee lived alwayes inoffensively following his trade of merchandize, for which he paid considerable Customes and Excise; that he hath perishable goods of considerable value of his owne and of other intrusted vnto him from beyond seas; inasmuch as the petitioner was alwayes of a peaceable carriage and deportment and was declared an innocent Papist, vpon tryall of his title and qualification by his Majesties Commissioners to execut the Act for the settlement of Ireland, appearing by the annexed certificate of the Register of the said Courte and also by his Decree. That your Grace may be pleased to lycence the petitioner to live in the said towne for to follow his said trade without disturbance, otherwise the petitioner wilbe irreparably ruined in his credit and fortunes. Which granted, the petitioner will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

"Referred to the Vice-president of the Province of Connaught, who is to doe and give such order in this matter as he shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

William Parker, "now prisoner in the Castle of Carlow."

"That your petitioner, hoping before this time to have procured his libertie, hath taken a litle farme neer this place, thereby to make some provision for the subsistence of himselfe, wife, and many children; but by reason of your petitioners close imprisonment he is not in a condition to manage it, neither can he put it off but greatly to his prejudice. Your petitioner does therefore most humbly pray that hee may haue the libertie of the Castle as alsoe (att convenient tymes as his businesse shall require) to goe abroad with a keeper, hee geiving good security for his true imprisonment and to do nothing to the prejudice of his Majesties peace or government. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 11 July 1663.

"The petitioner is to haue the libertie of the Castle of Catherlogh [Carlow], and to goe abroad with a keeper dayly betwene the rising and setting of the sunn, as his businesse may require: the officer vnder whose charge he remanes first taking bond of him with sufficient surties of the penalty of 1,000l. sterling in the name of Sir Paul Davis, Knight, Clerke of his Majesties Priuy Councill in this Kingdome, for his Majesties vse, with condition that the petitioner shall from tyme to tyme returne into the custodie of the said officer, and continue true prisoner vntill he shall be discharged and not act any thing to the prejudice of his Majesties Government or service; whereof the said officer is to take notice on the petitioners geiving such bonds to allow him the liberty aforesaid and returne the said bond to the said Clerke of Councill.

"ORMONDE."

Ulick Fitz Morrice, Captain.—Arrears as Lieutenant in Sir Nicholas Purdon's company.—13 July 1663.

Maurice Enstace.—Recovery from William Harlow and William Parkman of timber unlawfully felled on petitioners' estates in Wexford and Carlow.—13 July 1663.

John Gargrafe, a discharged soldier.—Arrears as drummer and soldier in Major Scafole Gibson's company.—7 July 1663.

Sebastion Clinton, of Sir Oliver St. George's troop.—Arrears for actual service and for time on leave.—13 April 1663.

George Stoughton, of Dublin, merchant.—"That your petitioner accommodated severall officers and souldiers of the late Lord Falkland's troupe with clothes and other necessaries, to the value of 71l. 17s. 3d. sterling, for satisfaccion whereof he had (as part of a months pay issued to the said troop) assignement from Sir Daniell Bellingham (hereunto annexed) vpon the Quit rents of the county of Donnegall, for the halfe year ending att Michaelmas 1661, directed to George Cary, Esquire, as Collector; which being produced to him, he therevpon did make returne, that he was not Collector, that the Collector was sicke, that a whole yeares Quit rent of the said county came not to much above sixty pounds, and that what was due thereof could not be knowne without a copie of the rental out of the auditors office, as by the letter of the said George Cary (alsoe herevnto annexed) may appeare; soe that your petitioner could haue noe benefit of the said assignement. That your petitioner hath since made his application to the said Sir Daniell Bellingham to take back the said assignement and assigne the said 71l. 17s. 3d. to be paid elsewhere, which the said Sir Daniell alledgeth he cannot doe without a particular order to that purpose from your Grace; and forasmuch as your petitioner hath been long without his said mony, and hath great occasion for it; may it therefore please your Grace to grant an order that the said Sir Daniell Bellingham doe take back the said insolvent assignement, and give your petitioner another, vpon the Customer of the Port of Dublin, whereby your petitioner may haue the said summe allowed vnto him in the Custome of the next goods he shall have occasion to enter there. And hee shall pray etc.

"Dublin Castle, 14 July 1663.

"Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Vice-Treasurer and Receiver General, is required to take in the nonsolvent assignement aboue mencioned, and to give the petitioner such other assignments as he may thereby receive the monyes mencioned in his petition. or to certify vs what reason he hath to the contrary, and how he shall conceive the petitioner may be satisfi'd.

"ORMONDE."

Isaac Davis.—Settlement of account for repairs to defective drums in "his Majesties store house of Dublin."—13 July 1663.

Gilbert Jones.—"That your poore petitioner hath remained a close prisoner with Mr. Ghest, the Marshall, at great expence and charges this finc weeks and vppard, for suspition of haueing a hand in the late Plott, your petitioner being altogether innocent thereof; that your petitioner is charged with wife and seven children, haueing little to mainteine them but what hee gets by his hands labour, which now by reason of his chargeable confinement they are wholly deprived of and like to perish if not charitably considered. May it therefore please your Grace, out of your pious and christian disposition, to giue order that your petitioner may bee enlarged, vpon baile for his appearance the next terme to answer what shall hee laid to his charge. Which granted, your petitioner shall dayly pray, etc.

"GILBERT JONES."

"Dublin Castle, 16 July 1663.

"His Majesties Attorney General is to informe himselfe concerning the cause of the petitioners restraint, and to certify vs thereof with his opinion of the petitioners request.

"ORMONDE."

Daniel Abbott, Colonel.—Removal of sequestrations.—20 July 1663.

Conly Coghlan.—"That hee served in your Graces lifeguard of foote vntill your goinge for England and afterwards in Captaine Walls company till your Graces departure, and now, being old, prayes hee may bee admitted a souldier in his Majesties regiment heere or in the company att Athlone, duty free. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 16 July 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioner bee entred and mustred in the foote company vnder the command of Captaine John Brampton in Garrison att Athlone, whereof the officers of that company and the Muster Master are to take notice and to admitt the petitioner accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

Edmond Nangle, commissioned for a Cornetcy in Sir Arthur Forbes's troop.—Arrears as Lieutenant in Colonel Sandy's Company.—17 July 1663.

Edmond Nangle.—Custodiam of lands in Westmeath, and survey of lands in same county already granted to him.—16 July 1663.

Richard Robury.—"That your supliant, about the 4th of June, being summoned to appeare att the Courte of Claimes to giue testimony in a certaine cause then there depending, was on his way to this citie apprehended by Cornet Jeanes as a person suspected in the late horrid Plott, and by his order conveyed to the Honorable Sir William Flower, who thereupon committed your poore supliant to the Marshall of the Royal regiment, where hee hath ever since continued prisoner. That your supliant faithfully served your Grace in the time of the late Rebellion, as well before your Graces remoneing from the government as at the time of your returne in 1649, though after remaining in this kingdome hee was utterly destroyed thereby; that hee is not onely innocent of what is now pretended against him, but wholly ignorant of any thing or matter that may occasion the least suspition of him, 'saueing that hee is, by marriage, of some relation to Captain Cham-

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

bers who stands indicted of the said treason. May it therefore please your Grace if there be any matter objected against your suppliant entrencing vpon his loyalty that hee may be brought to examination and a speedy tryall, or otherwise that hee may be released vpon good security to appeare at such further time as to your Grace shall seem meet, in regard your suppliant hath not only a poore wife and many children and hath been at great charge since his committal, but is like to bee undone in his poore harvest if continued a prisoner. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 16 July 1663.

"His Majesties Attorney Generall is to informe himself concerning the cause of the petitioners restraint, and to certify us thereof with his opinion of the petitioners request."

Allen Dowell.—Custodiam of lands in co. Roscommon.—16 July 1663.

Owen O'Connor, Major.—"That severall denominations and parcells of land of Ballingare, Rathenalga, Castleareagh, Knockroe, Ballindromby, Rathlugg, Gortgabbane, Knockwarreh, Rallibarnagh, Meouloughbegg, Meouloughmore, Gangeroad, are concealed from his Majesty, whereby his Majesty has noe benefit as yett thereout. May it therefore please your Grace to give order to the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of the Exchequer, that your petitioner may have a custodiam of the said lands at a reasonable rent, some of the said lands being part of your petitioners inheritance; and the rather that your petitioner is not in possession of his own estate, nor any parte thereof, and that the said lands nor any of them hath been given out as a custodiam to any other, as may appeare by the annexed certificate. Wherefore your petitioner humbly prayeth your Grace to consider his condition and to give order as aforesaid; and hee will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 16 July 1663.

"If the lands above mentioned bee in his Majesties dispose, and not already granted to any other person, wee pray and require our very good Lord the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, to issue a custodiam thereof unto the petitioner, during his Majesties pleasure, at such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Patrick Long, Lieutenant.—Custodiam of lands in county Roscommon held in 1641 by Edmond Kelly.—16 July 1663.

Richard Delarocke.—"That your petitioner did not only very much wish for and desire, but that likewise to the vtmost of his power hee was active in endeavouring the happy restitution of his Majesty, and allthough he is not of [the] number of those that have an adversion to the established Government, either in Church or State, yett hee hath bene misrepresented to your Grace as a person guilty of the late wicked Plot, and was not only imprisoned, but likewise his horses and his other cattle and goods to the value of 100*l.* are taken away and detained from him; he therefore humbly prayeth your Grace to give order that his said horses and other chattles and goods may be restored. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 22 July 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the horses and the other cattle taken from the petitioner be restored vnto him, hee first given bond of the penalty of one hundred pounds with security to the Clerke of the Councell for his Majesties vse that the said horses and cattle shall be forthcoming and delivered vpp to the Sherriffe for the tyme being of the county wherein they were taken, if it shall after appeare that the same doe or shall belong to his Majesty; whereof the officer who tooke the said horses and cattle and goods are to take notice, and vpon certificate of the Clerke of the Councell of the petitioners giving such bond, to restore the said horses and cattle and goods to the petitioner, or to any other to be by him appointed to receive them.

"ORMONDE."

Patrick Archer.—"That for the petitioners subsistance a pecun of two hundred and five pounds yearly, granted by pattent vnder the Great Seale to your petitioner and his heirs by his Majesty for the forbearance of 6,294*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*, was in arreare for seven years ending this Jnly, whereof the accounte being cast vpp the arrears amounted to 1,435*l.*, whereof your petitioner had a warrant to the Treasurer for 600*l.*, which your petitioner assigned for payment of part of his debts and yett is not able to cleere himselfe from hence or make provision for remoneing his wife and family out of London. Hee therefore most humbly prayeth your Grace that you will be pleased to give order for the payment of the said 835*l.* to your petitioner, and hee will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 16 July 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioner shall receive 300*l.* of the mony above mencioned out of his Majesties Treasury, and wee pray and require his Majesties Vice Treasurer and Treasurer att Warre, or his Deputy, to pay that sum to the petitioner, for doinge whereof this shalbe a sufficient warrant.

"ORMONDE."

Ralph Ligh[t]foote, a disbanded soldier.—Arrears for service in Colonel Brett's, Major Heard's, and Captain Thomas Meare's companies.—4 July 1663.

Daniel O'Neill, Esquire, one of the Grooms of his Majesty's Bedchamber.—Praying that the lands in the county of Wexford claimed by Colonel Lehnut and others may be granted to petitioner, pursuant to the finding of the Commission of Inquiry; with order.—16 July 1663.

Elizabeth Boothman.—Her husband's arrears for service in Lord Falkland's troop.—13 July 1663.

Arthur Hendy, a disbanded private of Major George Rawdon's troop.—Arrears.—14 July 1663.

John Annesley, Captain.—Certificate relative to arrears due to him as Lieutenant in Lord Aungier's troop.—13 July 1663.

John Beadle, Thomas Ball, Robert Danis, Richard Pilkington, and William Bradford.—

"That it was your petitioners' chance to bee seized on and imprisoned vpon suspicion for beeing confederates with Lieutenant Thompson in that late horrid conspiracie, and then their bridles, horses, and saddles taken from them by Captain Harrington, and are now in the custody of Captain Vernon, of Clontarf [Clontarf], neare Dublin; and forasmuch as your suppliants never acted or had any hand in that wicked designe, and are now enlarged vpon bayle, and being poore men haueing spent that litle they had in time of their durance; the premisses considered, may it therefore please your Grace to order that your petitioners may bee forthwith restored to their horses, bridles, and saddles, whereby they may be enabled to satisfy such debts by them contracted in time of their durance to keep them from perishing. And they shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 20th July 1663.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioners horses, bridles, and saddles above mentioned bee deliuered unto them, they first giueing severall and particular bonds with sufficient sureties each of the penalty of fifty pounds to the Clerke of the Councell for his Majesties vse that the same shall be forthcoming and deliuered to the Sherriff of the County of Dublin, if hereafter it shall appeare that they doe or shall belong to his Majesty; whereof the person or persons in whose custody the said horses, bridles, and saddles, or any of them are, are to take notice, and on certificate of the said Clerke of the Councell of the petitioners giueing security as aforesaid, to deliuer to the petitioners such of the said horses, bridles, and saddles as every or any of them haue.

"ORMONDE."

Mary Mullican, of the City of Dublin, widow.—Satisfaction from Captain Brent Moore for illegal distress.—20 July 1663.

Mary, wife of Edward Baines, prisoner in custody of Phillip Carpenter, Serjeant at armes.—Release of her husband and permission for him to go to England.—20 July 1663.

Henry Aland.—Discharge of petitioner from "a bond of 1000*l.* str. to his Majesties vse conditioned that your petitioner should not depart above four miles without licence," etc.—20 July 1663.

Sir Christopher Aylmer versus Lord Viscount Massereene.—

"In pursuance of your Graces order of reference vnto vs directed, on the replication of Sir Christopher Aylmer, Barronett, to the Petition and Answer of the Right Honorable John Lord Viscount Massereene, bearing date the 5th of June last past, wee have called both parties before vs, and would haue composed the difference by consent, according to your Graces said order, but could not; soe as vpon the whole matter wee find that his Majesty, by his Royall letters of the 11th of October 1660, did require and command the respective Sherriffes of the severall counties in this kingdom to restore Gerald Aylmer of Balrath to the quiet and peaceable possession of his estate; that by a letter bearing date the 11th of February 1660, directed to the late Lords Justices or other Chief Governor or Governours of this Kingdom (vpon information that some of the said Sherriffes did refuse or delay to putt the said former letter or order execution), his Majesty did require that the said former order should bee speedily and duly observed, to all intents and purposes. Wee further find by certificate vnder the hand of John Ruxton, late Sherriffe of the county of Lowth, that hee

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

delivered vnto the said Gerald Aylmer the quiett and peaceable possession of the town and lands of Heyns towne, Reigoldstowne, Gibstownepalmer, Shannon-rocke, and other lands in the county of Lowth, in pursuance of the said first mentioned order of his Majestie. Wee further find, by a report made the 27th of August 1662, by Sir William Domvile, Knight, that the said Gerald Aylmer, vpon his plea obtained the confession of the said Mr. Attorney and the judgment of this Court, in Easter terme 1661, for putting the said lands of Heynstowne, Reigoldstowne, Gibstownepalmer, Carnanbrey, Preistland, Shannonrocke, Coolcredan and Dromcawell, out of charge, and that the said confession was grounded on the aforesaid two severall letters of his Majestie. Wee further find, by an order of the late Lords Justices bearing date the 26th day of June 1662, relatinge two former orders from them of the 15th of July 1661, and the 12 May 1662, that they require all his Majesties officers whom it may concerne to take care that noe custodiam should be granted of the said lands without their particular and speciall order, mentioning the said former orders. Wee further find that by the instructions sent vnto William Forth, Henry Bellingham, and Francis Sing, Esquires, Commissioners appointed for setting of lands in the said county of Lowth for the year beginning the first day of May 1662, direction is given in the fourth instruction that they were not to sett any lands in the said county whereof the former proprietors were then in possession, and which were putt out of charge by the Court of Exchequer since his Majesties happie restoration. Notwithstanding which, wee find another instruction added therovnto, in the end of the said instructions after the signinge by the Councill (vizt.), that the said Commissioners were to sett vnto the Lord Masserene 3,700 acres of lands in his Majesties hands named in the schedule therewith sent vnto them, in which schedull wee find the lands now in controversy to be contained. Wee further find, by indenture made the 5th day of August 1662, betwene the said Commissioners and the Lord Masserene, among other things which is certified by his Majesties Auditor Generall to be returned into his office att the intire yearly rent of two hundred and sixteen pounds eleven shillings and sixpence sterling. Wee further find, by a copy of an order of the said late Lords Justices attested by Sir George Carr, Knight, that the Lord Viscount Masserene was to have 3,826 [acres] of lands in said county of Lowth to answere and satisfie his deficiency of 2,295l. 16s. 8d., with this proviso, that the said order should not extend to the dispossessing of any person who by any late letter or order from his Majestie hath been restored to the possession of any of the said lands, untill the matter were further examined and otherwise determined. Wee further finde that by reporte made by the Right Honorable the Lord Conway, Sir John Temple, and Sir Paul Davis, Knight, vnto the late Lords Justices, bearing date the 28th of June 1662, they certify that it was made appeare vnto them by certificate from John Petty, Deputy Surveyor Generall, that there were severall deficiencies due vnto severall persons, which the said Lord Masserene alledges to have purchased from them being in all 2,216l. 0s. 4d., which, att 600l. for each 1,000 acres, amounted vnto 3,700 acres; (and that they were of opinion) to the end his Majesties comand, both by his gracious letters of the 18th of December in the 12th year of his reigne and the Act of Settlement confirminge the same, and their Lordships order pursuant to the said letters, might receive due observacion, that, if it might stand with their Lordships pleasure, the Lord Masserene might have the benefit of their Lordships order for such proportion of land in custodiam in the county of Lowth, according to their Lordships order of the 16th of March 1660, as may answere the said deficiencies, att such rent as any other would giue untill his right should be determined by the Commissioners. Wee further finde that vpon a petition of the said Sir Christopher Aylmer's answere, replication, and rejoinder therovnto, concerning the premisses before your Grace and the Councill, the said cause was adjudged to be proper to be determined by the Commissioners appointed for executing his Majesties gracious Declaration and instruction, and was by your Graces and the Councill's Order of the first of October 1662 dismissed, and the said Sir Christopher left to make his application to the Commissioners, if he should thinke fitt; all which wee humbly certifie and submit to your Graces further consideration. Dated July 16 1663.

"JO. BYSSHE.

"RICH. KENNEDY."

"Dublin Castle, 18 July 1663.

"Let this certificate, with all things relatinge to the matter therein mentioned, be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"Severall Lords and gentlemen and others who obtained decrees in the Honorable his Majesties Courte of Claymes, vpon the accompt and ground of their innocency.—To his Grace James, Duke of Ormonde, Lord Lieutenant Generall and Generall Governour of Ireland.

"That your petitioners haneing already (by the hands and mediacion of the Honorable his Majesties Commissioners of the said Courte) presented a petition to your Grace to be freed from the heavy costs and charges of strikinge the respective lands out of charge in his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, and fearinge the severall Quit rents payable out of their estates may be leavyed whilst your Grace is considering of these great affaires; your petitioners humbly desire that your Grace wilbe fauourably pleased to issue order as may respitte the said rents till the next terme, dureing which intervale of time your petitioners humbly hope that the reasonableness of their request will find a remedy from your Graces justice and fauour herein. And they will ever pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, the 20 July 1663.

"Let this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shalbe taken in consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

John Spencer, Colonel.—"That the lands in the annexed certificate of his Majesties Surveyor Generall were sett forth to Donnogh Dwyer and Mary, his wife, for part of Colonel FitzPatrickkes estate claimed by the said Donnogh in the late Courte of Claymes att Athlone; that Colonel FitzPatrickke is since his Majesties happie restoration restored to his estate, with that part claymed by the foresaid Dwyer, who could make out noe title to it; that the said lands are thereby come to his Majesties hands and dispose. May it therefore please your Grace to grant your petitioner a custodiam of the premisses, during his Majesties pleasure, att a rent not exceeding the Quit rent. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 7 July 1663.

"If it shall appeare vnto our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, that the lands mentioned in the annexed certificate are in his Majesties dispose, and not already granted to any other, they are to cause a custodiam thereof to issue vnto the petitioners, to continue during his Majesties pleasure, att such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

"ORMONDE.

"COUNTY OF GALLWAY.

| Date of the assignment. | The name of the person to whom lands are assigned, with the date of the decree. | Lands assigned. | Acres in each parcel. | — | — |
|-------------------------|---|--|-----------------------|---|---|
| | | Monte, 2 quarters. | 352 | Killconell Barony, Killian parish. | Edmond Mc Fardraugh O'Kelly, the same Edmond Mc Connor O'Kelly and Edmond Mc Fardraugh O'Kelly. |
| 21th of May 1656. | Donnogh Dwyer and Mary Dwyer, alias Butler, his wife; and of Ellice, Margaret, and Elin Butler, daughters and coheyrss of Thomas Butler of Poulartowne, county of Limrick, by decree the 2d of March, 1655. | Castloblin, one cartoun. | 116 | | Clanrickard, 4 parts; Richard Martin, 3 part; Edmond Mc Connor O'Kelly 1 part inheritance. |
| | | In Gorthulman and Gortnere, two cartouns next to the rest of his plot. | 667 | | Edmond Mc Fardraugh O'Kelly. |
| 8 Qualifications | Abby land of Killconuell. | | 112 | Killconell parish. | John Donnellan Esquire. |
| | In Captaugh and Dondocan alias Dondocan, one quarter and 1. | | 347 | Cloin me Nownen 1 Barrony, Kilderrill parish. | Lorzhin Kelly; John and Lorzhin Doney, Esquires; and |
| | | | | Parish of Tinquin, county Gallway. | John Doney, rent; Richard Martin, Lawyer. |

Brodrick, Surveyor.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

Elizabeth Warren, widow.—Restoration of estate in co. Meath forfeited on execution of her husband.—20 July 1663.

Walter Staplehill, "Clerke of his Majesties store in Athlone."

"That in the yeare 1646 your petitioner being then with his shipp, burthen 150 tunns, in the port of Dublin ready loaden and bound for the Canaries, was by your Grace and the then Parliament of Ireland comanded to transport Captain Theodorus Schowte and others, Commissioners for the great concerns of this Kingdome in England, to the losse of his intended voyage, and was at length remanded to Dublin with Collonel Chidley Cote and other officers and moneys, after which by storme he lost his shipp and whole cargo vpon the barr of Dublin, to his vtter vndoing, haueing neuer receaued any satisfaction from the Parliament for losses (but what your Grace did bestow one him as by the certificate vnder the Maior of Dublin's hand may appeare herevnto annexed); now for as much as your petitioner, haueing a wife and great charge of children and relations to maintaine, hath ever since by reason of his losse lived verie hardlie and is still in a meane condicon, haueing not else but his imployment to provide for his charge; and whereas one John Kellen, being related to your petitioner by reason of his loyalty and former service in his Majesties army in Collonel Willoughbies regiment, was deprived of all manner of subsistants and wholly depends on your petitioners reliefe; your petitioner therefore most humbly beseecheth your Grace wilbe pleased to grant an order for the said John Kellen to be mustered in the Right Honorable the Lord President of Connaughts troope, there being a vacancy for five men to be added to that troope, for the better support and the lessening of your petitioners burthen, and he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 20 July 1663.

"Wee refer this petition to Lieutenant Gerge Hopkins to admitt John Kellen therein named into our very good Lord President of Connaught's troope, if there [be] a vacencie, or in the next that shall happen, if he shall find him fit to serve his Majestie, the said John Kellen appearing well mounted and armed; whereof the Muster Master is to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Halse.—

"May it please your Grace,

In obedience to your order of the 16th of this instant June within written, I humbly certify that att the last assizes and generall gaole delivery held for the county of Killkeny, the petitioner was convicted of a burglary comitted by him in the said county and received sentence of death accordingly; but your Grace, haueing pleased to grant a generall order for his revivall, expressing your intencions of pardon to him; did in due observance thereof reprove him untill I might understand your Graces further pleasure concerning him, the said fact appeareing vpon the evidence to be comitted immediately after his escape from the gaole of Wexford, and, as was conceived, to enable him the better to compleat his said escape, and the petitioner being represented to me as a sincere penitent, according to the annexed certificate of my Lord Baron, before whom he received his former tryall, and giving some further evidence thereof by the discovery of his confederates, which I hope may be servicable to the country, I humbly submit it to your Graces consideracion, the 25th June 1663.

"Ro. Booth."

"Dublin Castle, 20 July 1663.

"Lett this petition and the papers annexed be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Elizabeth Brough, widow of Lieutenant Martin Brough.—

"That your petitioners said husband served as Serjeant to the Earl of Strafford's guard of halberters, and after the rebellion served in his Majesties army in England, as Lieutenant vnder the command of Sir Francis Butler, untill his Majesties army was destroyed in England; that after he came over he[re] againe to his family, where since he hath served as a horseman in the troope comand[ed] by Major Meredith, and now by the Honorable the Lord Barkly, where about five weekes since [he] died and had left behind your petitioner and three very small children and noe support in the least measure to support them, but the small arrears lately due to your petitioners said husband as a horseman in the said troope, without satisfaction of which your petitioner and her children are vndoubtedly like to perish. The premisses tenderly considered, may it therefore please your Grace, out of your wonted Graces favor and mercie to widdowes or orphans and distressed soules, to comiserate the sad and wanting condicon of the widdow and fatherlesse, now objects of pity and compassion before your Grace, and to order her satisfaccion for her said husbands areares justly due to her as may appeare by the certificates herevnto annexed, and the speedy satisfaccion of which will yett releive and refresh the wearied and wanting bowells of a poore helpless widdow and her three small orphans. Granted, she shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 25 Junij 1663.

"If the areares which the petitioner doth mention to haue been due to her husband, the aboue named Martin Brough, as one of the horse troope aboue mencioned, be within the rule prescribed for satisfaccion, the Muster Master Generall is to state the same and prepare a warrant for payment thereof and present it vnto vs for our signature.

"ORMONDE."

The officers and soldiers of the Earl of Ortery's troop. —"That your petitioners, being cast into the most remote and barren part of the county of Kerry, in the barrony of Glanorought, and assigned therein satisfaccion for their areares, found the burthen of his Majesties Quit rent soe heavy and vnsupportable that it necessitated them to make their humble address to his sacred Majestic for reliefe; who therevpon was graciously pleased to direct his comand to the (then) Lords Justices, requiring them to reduce the said Quit rent, which their Lordships were pleased accordingly to doe, as appeare by the annexed order; but before your petitioners could reape any benefit of the said order and strike out of charge (in his Majesties Court of Exchequer) the former rent, your Grace did happily arrive in this Kingdome; soe that your petitioners doe still continue in charge for their former rent, to the vtter ruin of them and their families, who must necessarily give vpp those lands as not being worth his Majesties full Quit rent as is mencioned in the said order, if not releived by your Grace. May it therefore please your Grace to take into your consideracion the equity and justice of the said annexed order, and to confirme soe much of it as concerns the reducemēt of your petitioners Quit rent of the lands first assigned vnto them, and in regard your petitioners are informed that your Grace doth lay a clayme to the land in the barrony of Dunkeron mencioned in the said order, which were given to your petitioners to suply and make vpp your said petitioners number of profitable acres, they most humbly submit their pretencions in those lands to your Grace, and shall readily comply with your Graces pleasure therein. And they shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 21 July 1663.

"Lett this petition and the annexed order be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shall be thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Oliver South, of Drogheda.—Recovery of debt from Francis Ownsworth of Lieutenant-Colonel Hill's troop. 21 July 1663.

Ulick FitzMorres, Captain.—Certificate on petition for arrears.—21 July 1663.

William Burley, Esquire.—Recovery of debt from Cornet Pawlett Phillips.—22 July 1663.

James Nangle, prisoner in the gaol of Longford.—

"That your petitioner hath formerly petitioned your Grace, setting forth that hee stood comitted vnder sentence of death for a certaine felony by him supposed to be comitted; that your Grace was then pleased to order that your petitioner should be reprived untill this last assizes; and that the judge of the assizes who pronounced the sentence should make a reporte whether your petitioner was an object of his Majesties mercy. Pursuant to which order, the said Judge of assize made his reporte vnto your Grace that he could not conceive him an object of his Majesties mercy by the reason he had not a certificate from the gentlemen of the country for his demeanor or good service. Your petitioner further sheweth that this last assizes held for the county of Longford before Robert Griffith, Esquire, one of his Majesties serijants at law, vppon a report of the Justices of the Peace of the said county of your petitioners suffering land in innocency, and that he is an object of his Majesties mercy, he the said Robert Griffith, then Judge of assize, did further reprove your petitioners untill the next assizes then to be executed according the former sentence pronounced against him except that your petitioner doe then produce his Majesties pardon. May it therefore please your Grace, out of your wonted clemency towards the poore distressed, to commiserate your petitioners condicon, and to give order that the said Sergeant Griffith doe make a report vnto your Grace of the desire of the Justices of the Peace of the said county, and that your Grace doe likewise grant vnto your petitioner his Majesties gracious pardon. And he shall pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, 4 Junij 1663.

"Wee pray Mr. Sergeant Griffith to certify vs what he knoweth of this matter, together with his opinion of the petitioners request concerneing the pardon by him desired.

"ORMONDE."

"In obedience to your Graces order of the fourth instant, whereby I am prayed to certify your Grace what I doe know touching the matter of the annexed petition, together with my opinion touch[ing] the petitioners request concerneing the pardon by him desired: I doe finde that the petitioner, James Nangle, the last Summer Assizes and general gaole delivery held for the county of Longford, was convicted before Mr. Justice Booth, then Judge of Assizes, for horse stealing, and had judgement of death then pronounced against him. But execution therevpon was by the said judges order deferred for ten dayes only. Att the last Assizes vpon delivery of the gaole there, I found the petitioner in the calendar amongst the rest of the prisoners, and noe other order for the respiting the execution then for ten dayes as aforesaid; wherevpon I asked the Sherriffe wherefore hee had delayed the prisoners execution, who then produced vnto me an order with Mr. Robert Booth's hand subscribed thereto, bearing date the 18th day of October 1663, directed to the Sherriffe, signifying that by your Graces directions the prisoner was to be reprieved untill further order, and therevpon hee still continues reprieved. And as touching the cryme for which he stands convicted, and how the evidence appeared against him vpon his tryall, I cannot certify your Grace, in regard he received his tryall before another judge; and touching the petitioners merit and how farr he is an object of mercy, I have received noe other knowledge or information therein then what is contained in the annexed certificate. All which is humbly submit[t]ed to your Graces consideration.

"Ro. GRIFFITH."

"Dated 13 Junij 1663."

"Dublin Castle, 21 July 1663.

"Let this petition and the severall annexed papers be presented vnto vs att our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shall be thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"Dublin Castle, 29 July 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the within certificate and the annexed papers (which were this day read att the Councell Board) wee are pleased to extend his Majesties mercy to the within named James Nangle, and doe require his Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall, or either of them, to draw vp a fiant containing his Majesties pardon vnto the said James Nangle for the offence in the said certificate and annexed petition mencioned, with such clauses as in like cases are usual, and the same fairly engrossed in parchment vnder their or one of their hands, to send vs to be further passed as appertaineth. For soe doing this shall be a sufficient warrant.

"ORMONDE."

Elizabeth Gale, relict of Alexander Gale.—Arrears due to her late husband as soldier in Captain Richard Pover's company.—20 July 1663.

John Ball, of Kilkenny, Merchant.—"Moste humble sheweth unto your Grace that your poore petitioner from time to time trusted the severall persons in the schedule hereunto annexed, being then all souldiers under command, with clothes and other wearing apparel which they and euery of them respectively and faithfully promised to pay unto your petitioner out of his or their respective pay received after buying such cloth from your petitioner. Now so it is, may it please your Grace, that severall of the said persons since their being indebted vnto your petitioner received severall monthes pay at severall times, and also others removed themselves farr remote from your petitioner where hee cannot heare of them, and likewise many of them were discharged of the army and otherwise employed, whereby your petitioners can haue noe manner of remedy against them, which is to your petitioners utter ruine if not relived by your Grace. May it therefore please your Grace to grant an order to the chief officer commanding them or any of them to pay unto your petitioner out of their pay what is due unto your petitioner from them or any of them, and not to bee paid unto the said persons before your petitioner bee paid. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 24 July 1663.

"The petitioner producing the bills of the severall souldiers indebted to him, and certificates from the officers under whose command the said souldiers did or doe now serue of what is owing by them respectuely, the Deputy Muster Master is thereupon to state the arrears of such souldiers since February, 1660, and certify unto Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Receiver Generall, how much will remaine due to each of them after the price of their clothes is deducted, who is vpon such certificate to stopp so much as shall appear due to the petitioner out of the souldiers arrears that are disbanded, and for those that are now in the army hee is to stopp a proportion of their growing pay not exceeding a third parte of euery monthes pay for the petitioners satisfaccion, and pay the same to him or such as hee shall appoint to receive it accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

"The names of such persons as are indebted to John Ball; Richard Palmer, Richard Gibbs, Miles Jackman, Andrew Over, Robert Ifcey, Richard Gibbs, John Hill, William Price, William Allen, Miles Adkinson, Miles Jackman, John Husband, Theo. Pacey, William Barker, John Knight, Faustin Collins, Richard Palmer, George Grimes, John Husbards."

John Chaffin, prisoner in the Castle of Catherlogh.—"Most humbly sheweth unto your Grace that your petitioner being about sixty yeares of age and his wife about sixty two, haucing many infirmities attending him incident to that age, your petitioner therefore most humbly prayeth your Grace that his wife and daughter and a servant may haue liberty to come to him and abide with him to supply him in his necessity and declining age, and also grant unto your poore sickly petitioner licence to goe at convenient times with a guard or keeper abroad. And he will pray.

"Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663.

"Wee are pleased to grant the petitioners request, that his wife, daughter, and a servant may haue liberty to come to him and abide with him to supply him with necessaries; and also that the petitioner shall haue liberty to goe abroad at convenient times with a guard or keepers, whereof the officer in whose custody hee remains is to take notice and conforne accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

Denis Dunn.—"That your petitioner faithfully serued in your Graces own troope of horse in this Kingdome for severall yeares, and continued therein with all fidelity untill you Graces last departure from the Government here, which appears by the annexed certificates of Major Harman and Captain Brenn then and now officers under your Grace, that hee suffered very much for severall yeares since for his loyalty to his Majestie and duty to your Grace, and therefore humbly prays your Grace to grant order that the petitioner may bee mustered in the Right Honorable the Earle of Kildares troop of horse. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 23th July 1663.

"If the petitioner bee a Protestant, we recommend him to our very good Lord, the Earle of Kildare, to hee enlisted in his lordships troop vpon the first vacancie therein, hee appearing well mounted and armed, whereof the Munster Master Generall or his Deputy is to take notice.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Richard Lane, Knight and Baronet.—Custodian of lands in Galway, Roscommon, and Longford counties.—24 July 1663.

John Calway, Robert Upfield, and William Evans, disbanded souldiers of Lord Donegall's troop.—Arrears.—23 July 1663.

Richard Littell.—Recall of outstanding warrant obtained by Captain George Cressy, under which petitioner was to receive amount due by Hugh Cressy, and issue of a separate warrant for payment of the amount.—23 July 1663.

John Barbor, "whose petition is entred in the first booke of petitions, page 496 :—

"May it please your Grace,

"In obedience to your order within written, I humbly certify that at last assizes and general gaole delivery held at Wicklow, the petitioner together [with] one Miles Smith and others were indited before

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

mee for the trayterous coynynge of false and conterfeitt mony, and vpon the evidence the said Smith was found guilty of the treason, and the petitioner guilty of onely misprison of treason in uttering the said mony knowing it to be false; wherevpon he had judgement to forfeit all his goods and chattels and the profit of his hands during his life, and perpetuall imprisonment, but the said petitioner haueing since made some discoveries of one Lam and other his confederates in England, as I am informed, which haue been presented to your Grace by the vnder Sherriffe of the said county, I humbly submitt it to your Graces consideration if he hath thereby rendered himselfe worthy of his Majesties mercy and your Graces fauour. This 26th day of June 1663.

"Ro. Booth."

"Dublin Castle, 20 July 1663.

"Let this petition and the certificate be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

"Dublin Castle, 29 July 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the annexed certificate of Mr. Justice Booth, dated the 26th of June last, before whom John Barbour, therein named received his tryall, made in pursuance of our order of reference of the 18th of May last, wee are pleased to extend his Majesties mercy vnto the said John Barbour for the offence in the said certificate mentioned, and wee require his Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall or either of them to draw vp a fiant in dne forme of law, conteyning his Majesties gracious pardon vnto the said John Barbour for the offence aforesaid, inserting therein all such clauses as in cases of like nature are vsuall, and the same fairly engrossed in parchment vnder their or either of their hands to send vnto vs to bee further passed as apperteyneth. For doing whereof this shalbe a sufficient warrant.

"ORMONDE."

"Jeoffery Malbone, Yeoman of the Wardrobe and his Majestie's Howse Keeper in the Castle of Dublin.—

"That whereas the said employment hath been since his Majesties happie restauration conferred vpon your petitioner, and ever since he hath faithfully and honestly discharged his trust and duty therein. But soe it is (may it please your Grace) that your petitioner is by his Majesties said letters patentes to enjoy such benefitts, perquisites, and advantages as any other your petitioners predecessors ever heretofore he[d]d or enjoyed, and of right belonging to the said employment ought to enjoye, and for as much as your petitioner is debarred of many of the said perquisites and advantages belonging to him as the annexed certificates may att large manifest to be due, which wilbe averred vpon oath if therevnto required. May it therefore please your Grace to grant your order to Sir Paul Davis, Knight, his Majesties principall Secretary of State, to take the petitioners allegations into consideration, and to state to your Grace the just case of your petitioner. And he shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663.

"Wee [pray] Sir Paul Davis, Knight, his Majesties principall Secretary of State, to consider of the petition and certify vnto vs what he shall finde concerning the matters therein mencioned, with his opinion therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

Cassandra Hill.—"That your petitioner was the child of one Thomas Hill, Baker-Generall to his late Majesties army in Ireland, who in his lifetime disbursed and laid out severall summes of money and provisions towards maintenance of that army, which summes, amounting to aboue five hundred pounds, are not yet paid, and that the said Hill did leaue and bequeath by his last will a considerable estate in goods and chattels to the value of one thousand pounds and upwards to your petitioner. But so it is, may it please your Grace, that about fourteen yeares last past, your petitioners mother married with one Richard Thompson, vpon which intermarriage it was agreed that the said Richard Thompson should secure unto the petitioner the sume of one thousand and five hundred pounds sterling, and for satisfaction thereof made over all his goods and chattells unto your petitioner, in satisfaction of the portion left by her father. But so it is, may it please your Grace, the said Richard Thompson haueing a hand in the late unhappy plot for which hee lately suffered, by reason thereof the estate of the said Thompson being onely forfeited, notwithstanding the Sheriffs of Dublin, Killdare, Wicklowe, Meath, and Longford haue seized vpon the goods and chattells made over unto the petitioner in satisfacion of her said portion, heeing all the estate and maintenance your petitioner bath, so that the petitioner is likely to perish if not relieved by your Grace. Forasmuch therefore as the said goods and chattells being made over unto your petitioner for valuable consideration before conviction, doe therefore of right belong to your petitioner; and for that your petitioner is noe way able to contend with the said sherriffs on any other that haue good [sic] the said estate in possession. The petitioner therefore most humbly prayeth your Grace will be pleased to order that the said goods and chattells may bee restored unto your petitioner towards her releife. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 23th July 1663.

"We refer this matter unto our very good Lord the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, to examine the truth of the petitioners allegations, and therevpon to give such order therein as shall be just and according to lawe.

"ORMONDE."

"The Trustees appointed to manage the securities of the Commissioned Officers who serued his Majestie before the 5th of June 1649:—

"That in the list of causes now posted vp to bee heard before his Majesties Commissioners of the Court of Claimes there are vpwards of fourescore from all parts of the Kingdome, in whose claimes the petitioners are much concerned. Your petitioners therefore humbly pray your Grace's letter to the said Commissioners, directing that the persons named in the annexed list may be struck out, and some other persons more deservuing his Majesties fauour put vpon the list in stead of them. And your petitioners shall pray, etc.

"A List of such persons as the Trustees of the Commissioned Officers who serued his Majestie before the 5th of June 1649 desire may bee struck out of the list of causes now posted vp to bee heard before the Commissioners of the Court of Claimes: William Dobbin, of Waterford; John Ferrall, of Eskar, county Longford; Francis Ferrall of Mormyn [county of Longford]; James Haley, of Limerick; Sir Oliuer French his Lady; Patrick, her sonne; Francis Browne; Mrs. Ann Darcy; Anthony her son.

"A list of persons desired to bee putt vpon the list of causes now posted vp to be heard before the Commissioners of the Court of Claimes in stead of those who are to be struck out of the said list vpon the desire of the trustees of the '49 Officers: Philip O'Reyley, grandson to Philip McMulmore O'Reyley; Sir George Preston; James Mortimer, and Ellinor his wife; Hercules Langford; Rosse Geoghegan, sonne to Conly Geoghegan, of Donore, in the county of Westmeath; Elizabeth Kelly alias Osbalston; James Buttlar, of Killokehan; William Buttlar, of Castletowne, and Ellis Buttlar, of the same; Charles McCarty, Carrickeverry; Maurice Dillon, of Lisdossan; Alice Hovenden alias Bowen, with her husband.

"After our very hearty commendations: Haueing receiued the inclosed petition, with the list thereunto annexed from the Trustees of the Commissioned Officers of the Army that serued his Majestie in this Kingdome before the fifth of June 1649, wee send the same unto you, and lett you know that wee thinke fitt and desire that the claimes of the persons named in that list bee left out of your list of causes for hearing, and that the claimes of the persons in the other list herein closed, who are more deservuing of his Majesties Grace and fauour, bee inlisted in their steads: and so wee bid you very heartily farewell. From his Majesties Castle of Dublin, the 25th day of July 1663. Your very loueing freind,

"ORMONDE."

"To our trusty and welbeloued the Commissioners appointed by his Majestie for executing the Act for the Settlement of this Kingdome of Ireland."

Edmond Butler, Captain.—

"May it please your Grace,

"In pursuance of your Graces order of reference vnto vs directed on the within petition of Captain Edmond Butler, wee haue considered of the severall matters therein contained, and finde that by an order of the late Lords Justices of this Kingdome, bearing date the 28th day of June 1661, two partes of the tythes of the parish of Rossera being impropriate, two partes of Lateragh being impropriate, Killenasc entirely impropriate, in the county of Tipperary, being formerly sett att the intire rent of 30*l*. sterling; the tythes of

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

Castle Dermott, in the county of Kildare, being formerly sett att the rent of 11*l.* sterling, were granted (among other tythes) in custodiam to Major Thomas Harman, to and for the vse of the said Captain Butler, for one yeare from the first day of May 1661, att the rent of 30*l.* sterling, besides 104*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* allowed to the petitioner of the rent formerly reserved on the said tythes, as by the annexed certificate of the Deputy Auditor Generall may appeare. Wee further find by certifi[ca]te from the Right Reverend Father in God, Edward [Worth], Lord Bishop of Killalow, that the first mentioned tythes in the county of Tipperary and diocese of Killalow are the right of incumbents and accordingly lyable to pay their first fruites and twenty partes, and that the same haue been and are accordingly enjoyed; wee likewise finde by certificate from the Right Reverend Father in God, Thomas [Price], Lord Bishop of Kildare, that two partes of the last mentioned tythes in the county of Kildare did belong to the Bishopricke of Kildare and the other parte to the sequestrator thereof; that his Lordship paid the subsidy and first fruite for the same, being sett the said yeare for 60*l.* sterling, and that the said Captain Butler [sic] any parte thereof. Soe as if your Grace shall see thinke fitt to order the said Captain Butler may haue your Graces and the Counsells Order [sic] the privity seale for discharging the said rent of 30*l.* reserved on the said custodiam, in lieu of the losse he had by not enjoying the said tythes. All which wee humbly certify and submitt to your Graces further consideration. Dated June 29th, 1663.

"ANGLESEY. JO. BISSE."

"Dublin Castle, 29 Junij 1663."

"Lett the within petition and the certificate bee read att our next sitting att the Counsell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt."

"ORMONDE."

Henry Pritty, Colonel.—"In most humble manner sheweth unto your Grace that your petitioner, haneing some debts for the payment of which hee feared hee might bee pressed vpon sooner than hee could out of his small estate raise the same, did, for the gaining some little respite of time, as hee hoped hee might, embarke himselfe in a small vessell intending for a time to transport himselfe out of this Kingdome; the innocencie and harmlesnesse of which undertaking hee hopes your Grace (nothing to the contrary appearing against him) will be fully satisfied of; that the said vessell beeing put into Gallway, to refresh the passengers and take in some new supplies of provision, your petitioner was secured by the Governour, where hee still remains in restraint. The premisses considered, and for as much as your petitioner hath diuers claymants for the lands hee holds coming on this instant moneth of July to a tryall, which if your petitioners restraint should be continued might proue exceedingly to his detriment. Hee humbly prays your Grace, in tender commiseration of his long imprisonment and his urgent occasions that require his personall attendance, to giue order for his enlargement. And hee shall pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 25 July 1663."

"Vpon consideration of this petition wee thinke fitt that the petitioner, Colonel Henry Pritty, bee enlarged from his present restraint in the towne of Gallway, hee first giueing boude with sufficient sureties to Colonel John Spencer, for his Majesties vse, of the penalty of one thousand pounds sterling, with condition that the said Henry Pritty shall forthwith after his enlargement repaire to this citie and not departe from hence without our lycence in writing first had and obtained in that behalfe; whereof the said Governour is to take notice and proceed herein accordingly."

"ORMONDE."

Richard Delarocke.—"That hee being imprisoned vpon suspicion of haneing a hand in the late horrid Plott, though noe wayes guilty thereof, but on the contrary was active in his Majesties happy restitution, and haneing noe aversion to the established government in Church or State, that thereupon the petitioners goods to the valew [of] one hundred pounds were seized vpon by the persons following; to witt, one white horse, price foure pounds, by Corporall Butler of his Graces troope; three horses, price eleven pounds, with a sword and belt taken by one Hayes and Rowden, Corporalls of the regiment of Guards; fifty bullocks, twelue cowes, one mare, and one garron, valew eighty and five pound, [taken] by the Sheriffe of the county of Meath. Hee therefore humbly prayeth your Grace to giue order that the said horse and other cattle and goods may be restored vnto him. And he shall pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 25 July 1663."

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

"Wee are pleased that the petitioners [sic] and cattle aboue mentioned, not exceeding the valew of 100*l.* sterling, be delivered vnto him, hee first giueing bond with sufficient security of the penaltie of 200*l.* sterling to the Clarke of the Councell, for his Majesties vse, that the said goods and cattle shall be forthcoming and delivered to the Sheriffe of the county of Meath and the other persons mentioned in the said petition to haue seized on the same, if hereafter it shall appeare that they doe or shall belong to his Majesty; whereof all his Majesties Officers and others who haue any of the said goods or cattle are to take notice, and on certificate of the said Clarke of the Councell of the petitioners giueing such security as aforesaid, to deliver the petitioner such of the said goods and cattle as every or any of them haue."

ORMONDE."

Edmond Byrne.—"That your petitioner, to manifest him as a dependant to you, and your ancestors, as of right ought to be, found, in the beginning of the Rebellion, one letters pattents of your Grace's which hee preserved vntill delivered to Sir William Flower; and alsoe did straine himselfe in preserving your Grace's woods in the tyme of the vsurped power, and did for your Commissioners discover parte of your estate, relying allwayes vpon the restoration of his Majesty and your Grace's to be by Godes blessing restored to your owne right and interest; and to that intent consented that the litle estate of his owne in the barrony of Foart called Killecole and Iragh, both containing onely 224 acres of profitable and vnprofitable [land], by survey might be in custodie of your Grace's Commissioners. And further sheweth that your petitioner never claymed for any compensation in Connaght, Clare, or elsewhere, but prostrated himselfe att your Grace's feete, not doubting but that you wilbe pleased to restore your petitioner to the premisses, and that your Commissioners and agents can informe your Grace of your petitioners integrities, cure, and constancie. The petitioner therefore humble prayeth that your Grace may be pleased, of your wonted clemencie, takinge into consideration the petitioners sadd condicon, to restore him to the premisses by paying the chifery thereout reserved; and the rather that the petitioner is destitute of any place by reason of his last farme held formerly from your Commissioners is now taken within the Deere Parke. And your petitioner shall pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663."

"The Commissioners for management of our particular affaires are to take this petition into their consideration, and to certify vs what they shall conceive fitt to be don therevpon."

"ORMONDE."

Leonard Chambers, Philip Highgate, and Thomas Wesnam, disbanded soldiers of Lord Mount Alexander's troope.—Arrears.—23 July 1663.

Sir Morris Hurly:—"May it please your Grace,

"In obedience to your Graces commands, wee haue considered of the matters in the within petition contained, and doe find that by a final settlement by the pretended Commissioners att Loughreagh, dated the 12th of June 1657, the lands of Clonbigin in the petition mentioned, being parte of the mannor of Aglirim in the county of Gallway, belonging to your Grace, was (among other lands) sett out to petitioner as parte satisfaccion of his estate formerly enjoyed; and that the said mannor being seized vpon by vs for your Graces vse, the said lands of Clonbigin, parcell of the said mannor, was sett vnto the petitioner att the yeare[ly] rent of fourteen pounds sterling, which rent is now in arreare for two yeares ending att Easter last, amounting to the summe of 28*l.* sterling and for the present yeare att 28*l.* Bnt whether your Grace will be pleased to thinke fitt the leauing of the said rent and arreare to be suspended vntill the determination of the petitioners clayme (as is desired), wee humbly submit to your Grace."

"WILLIAM FLOWER."

"THOMAS HARMAN."

"Dated 21th July 1663."

"Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663."

"Vpon consideration of the aboue certificate, wee are pleased and doe hereby order that the leauing of the rent and arreare of rent aboue mentioned hee suspended vntill further order, whereof the Commissioners for management of our estate and all others whome it may concerne are to take notice and to forbear leauing of the same during the tyme aforesaid."

"ORMONDE."

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

John Lyndon, Esquire.—Custodiam of lands in Galway and Tipperary.—24 July 1663.

Nicholas Lynch (FitzJohn), late of Galway, merchant.—“That your petitioner, during the late warres of Ireland, liued inoffensiuely, never acted against his Majestie that now is or his Royall father of blessed memory, but alwaies liued inoffensiuely following his occasions vntill his Majesties Kingdome of Ireland was overpowered by the late vsurped power; by which means your petitioner, his wife and children and family, were necessitated to withdraw to the realme of France, where he kept his residence since 1651, untill understanding of his Majesties severall letters and declarations whereby all his Majesties banished subjects were invited to returne to their severall former places of aboad, there to trade as formerly, to the increase of his Majesties revenue, yet, notwithstanding, the petitioner is debarred from the enjoyment of his freedome and liberty formerly enjoyed by him in the towne of Galloway, and is not admitted to reside or trade in the said towne, to his great losse and utter ruine, if not relieved by your Grace, your petitioner being not in condition to returne with his family to France. Wherefore your petitioner humbly prayeth your Grace to giue order that hee may be admitted, with his wife, servants, and family, to trade and traffyck with the same advantages as formerly by selling in grosse and by retaile as others of the now inhabitants of the said towne. And hee will ever pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663.

“Wee referre the matter contained in this petition to the Vice President of the Province of Connaght to admitt the petitioner to liue and trade in Galloway by wholesale, if hee shall so thinke fitt, but not by retaile.

“ORMONDE.”

Paul Weys.—“That your petitioner being of his Majesties army when hee submitted and laid down armes with the Irish party to the vsurped power, by articles then concluded on were to be indemnified for all offences by them committed vpon any person before their said submission. Now so it is, may it please your Grace, that your petitioner is accused of some actions of his during his being in armes against the said vsurped powers, and is bound over to appeare the next Assises at Maryborough in the Queens County, where your petitioner expects noe favour unless relieved by your Grace. May it therefore please your Grace to giue orders that the proceedings against the petitioner may not be heard by the Judges for the next circuit untill such time as an Act of Indempnity doe passe for his Majesties subjects of this Kingdome. And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 27 July 1663.

“Wee pray the next going Judge of Assise for the Queens County before whom the petitioner is to come to a tryall to consider as well what articles the petitioner can produce as what shall bee laid to his charge, and thereupon to certify vnto vs the whole matter on both sides as it shall appeare unto him, with his opinion what is fitt to bee done thereupon.

“ORMONDE.”

John Tailleur and Mary Tailleur, widow.—Leave for Captain George Smith to attend at Court of Claims on trial of petitioner's claim.—27 July 1668.

John Johnson, of St. Thomas Street, Dublin, Innkeeper.—“That there is due and owing vnto your petitioner from severall of the souldiers belonging to the Right Honorable the Earle of Meath his troop for their quarter the summe of thirty one pounds three shillings nine pence, as by the particular thereof hereunto annexed and bills of acknowledgment under their hands and ready to be produced may appeare. That your petitioner is informed that one Edward Buttler, Clerke unto the said troop, hath gotten and stopped out of the pay of the said souldiers the aforesaid soverall summes, albeit hee denieth to make payment thereof vnto your petitioner, to his great damage. Wherefore may it please your Grace to command the said Edward Buttler to make present payment thereof vnto your petitioner, or else to shew cause (if hee can) to the contrary. And your petitioner, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 8 July 1663.

“The aboue named Edward Buttler is required to giue the petitioner satisfaction concerning the matter aboue mentioned, or to make present answere to this petition.

“ORMONDE.”

Sir Richard Lane, Knight and Baronet.—“That in the barony of Rathconrath and county of West Meath there is concealed from his Majestie 7,000 acres of land; that there is also concealed from his Majestie 8,000 acres of land in the barony of Kilkenny West and county aforesaid; that the petitioner doth not know the particular denominations of the said lands so concealed from his Majestie, by reason noe distinct sub-division hath been made of the lands sett forth to adventurers in the said baronies. The petitioner therefore humbly prayeth your Grace to giue order for a survey of the said baronies, and that hee may haue satisfaction for the charge hee shall bee at in the discovery of the said concealed lands by way of survey out of the rents of such lands as hee shall so discover, as also a custodiam of such lands when discovered, to continue during his Majesties pleasure. And hee shall pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 27 July 1663.

“Wee pray our very good Lord the Lord Chief Barron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer and Sir Richard Kennedy, Knight, second Barron of that Court, to consider of this petition and certify vs what they shall conceiue fitt to be done in the petitioners request.

“ORMONDE.”

John Smith, farmer of Inland Excise, Queen's County.—Report on petition for compensation for loss occasioned by portion of that county having been joined to Kilkenny for Excise purposes.—27 July 1663.

William FitzWilliam, servant to Earl of Howth.—Recovery of balance of price of a mare from Cornet Hawley, of the Earl of Shannons troop.—14 July 1663.

Gerald Leynes, late of Knocke, Esquire.—“That your petitioner (being reduced to extreame poverty) hath noe other meanes in the world whereby to subsist, but to make his appeale vnto your Grace for releife. And to the end your Grace might look vpon your petitioners badd condicon, be made bound of late to present a former petition to your Grace humbly imploring the tythes of the rectorie or parish of Laraghcor, in the county of Meath, which he held by lease granted by his late Majestie by Patent vnto those vnder whom the petitioner held, the same being ended the next harvest, but received no answere therevpon. In comiseracion whereof and for that your petitioner hath a clayme depending in the Court of Claymes for his estate and hath noe meanes to prosecute the same: it may please your Grace to giue order that petitioner may haue the benefit of the said rectorie (lying in your Graces deuotion) for the next haruest, paying therevpon [sic] reserved to his Majestie, or to afford him some other livelihood such as to your Grace (in your wonted charity) shall [be] thought fitt vntill he try his qualification in the said Court. And the petitioner will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 27 July 1663.

“If it shall appeare to our very good Lord the Lord Cheife Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer that the tythes aboue mencioned are in his Majesties dispose and not already granted to any other, they are to cause a custodiam thereof to issue vnto the petitioner, to continue during his Majesties pleasure att such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Wentworth, Earl of Roscommon.—“That your petitioner hath a small parcell of land called Cloonekeene, lying in the barony of Kilkenny West and county of Westmeath, which was procured in the late vsurpers time by one Captain John Edmonds to be returned into the Exchequer as lands belonging to the county of Longford, that soe thereby he might gett it sett out as part of his lott as a souldier, what lands lay in the barony of Kilkenny being assigned for adventurers. That, for this reason, your petitioners (namt, Theobald Dillon is (and hath been ever since his Majesties happy restauration) forced to pay subsidies and other country charges for the said lands in both the said counties of Westmeath and Longford, though in the Surveyor Generall's Office the same is returned to be in the county of Westmeath, as indeed it doth. That, notwithstanding this, your petitioners said tenant Theobald Dillon was in the four last subsidies charged for one and the same land in both counties and forced to pay both (if not relieved by your Grace) will be vtter ruin of all tennants your petitioner shall putt vpon the premisses. Your petitioner therefore humbly prayes your Graces order to one Nicholas White, Collector of the subsidies for Longford, to restore vnto the said Theobald Dillon 2*l*. 17*s*. 6*d*. forced from him for the four last subsidies (though he had before that paid as much for the same land in the County Westmeath), as alsoe requiring the Commissioners for the County of Longford to cease charging the said lands of Cloonekeene as part of that county. And he shall pray, etc.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663.

"Lett this petition be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Counsell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

William Moore, of Saulestowne.—To be released from the custody of Oliver Welsh, Marshal of the city of Dublin.—27 July 1663.

William Addy, James German, and Richard Hoy, of Athy, innkeepers.—Release from imprisonment for retailing wine and strongwater without licence.—27 July 1663.

James Nangle, prisoner.—"To the Lord Justice of Assize. May it please your Lordship,

"James Nangle, prisoner, convicted of felony before Robertt Booth, Esquire, the last foregoing Judge of Assizes, before your honour att the Assizes held att Longford in July 1662, haueing made his application to vs for our request to your honour in his behalfe and wee haueing likewise considered that the said James, by reason of his youth and ignorance might haue been induced by those persons whom he accused (and cannott he yett found) for selling vnto him the goods for which he was arraigned and found guilty; and being farther sensible of the saddnes of his condicon by lying constantly in a darke dungeon aboue a yeare; and for that wee humbly conceive him to be an object of his Majesties mercy, wee therefore humbly request your honour to report vnto his Grace that the said prisoner is an object of pity and of his Majesties mercy. This att the earnest request of your honours most humble servants,

"ARTHUR FORBES, THOMAS NEWCOMEN,
H. SANKEY, ARTHUR AGHMOOTY, ANDREW ADAIRK."

". . . May 1663."

Thomas Kent, Serjeant, "of the late Sir Thomas Gifford's company."—Certificate of arrears previously ordered.—28 July 1663.

William Cooper, inhabitant of Waterford.—"That your petitioner, since his Majesties happy restauration, hath intrusted severall of the Right Honorable the Earle of Killdares troop for mans meat and horsemeat to the value of 17l. 8s. 11d.; that vpon your Graces proclamation for bringing in the souldiers tickets and delinering them to the Earle of Anglesey, your petitioner gaue in his notes unto the said Earle's Secretary, in whose hands they now are, to be inserted in the generall account. But your petitioner being a poore man, and in great want of the said money, cannot without great prejudice waite the issue of that businesse as ordered to bee managed. Therefore hee most humbly prays your Grace would bee pleased to grant your order to the Deputy Receiver Generall to deduct the severall summes due unto your petitioner vpon issuing out the next pay to the said troop, and to pay over the same unto your petitioner or whom hee shall appoint. And hee shall pray, etc.

| | £ | s. | d. |
|----------------------|---|----|----|
| "James Glubb . . . | 4 | 13 | 4 |
| William Dimond . . | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| William Woodfield . | 3 | 9 | 3 |
| Aquila Houghton . . | 3 | 13 | 6 |
| Michael Lamott . . . | 4 | 4 | 10 |

£17 0 11"

"Dublin Castle, 29 July 1663.

"The petitioner producing the bills of the severall souldiers indebted to him, and certificate from the officer under whose command they did or doe now serve, of what is owing to them respectively, the Deputy Muster Master is therevpon to state the arrears of such souldiers since February 1660, and certify unto Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Receiver Generall, how much will remaine due to each of them after the price of their clothes is deducted, who is vpon such certificate to stopp so much as shall appeare due to the petitioner out of the arrears of those that are disbanded; and for them that are now in the army hee is to stopp a proportion of their growing pay, not exceeding a third parte of every monthes pay, till the petitioner shall be satisfied and pay the same to him or such as hee shall appoint to receive it accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Holt, of Drumcarr, county Louth.—Release on bail from imprisonment on charge of participation in the conspiracy.—27 July 1663.

Ellinor Doyle.—Stoppage of felling of timber on lands in Wexford, and retention by the Sherriff of what was already felled, pending trial of petitioner's claim.—7 July 1663.

Joan Ferrall alias Buttler, widow.—Custodiam of lands in co. Longford.—16 April 1663.

Charles Agar.—"May it please your Grace,

"In obedience to your Graces order of the 24th November last, whereby I am required to certify your Grace whether the words for which Charles Eggar stands now convicted and attainted in the gaole of Killkenney are treason or not, as alsoe the condicon and quality of the said Charles Eggar, I doe humbly conceive that in regard the indictment against the said Charles was framed vpon the statute of the 28 Henry 8, cap. 7th, and that the words (viz. the King is a basterd and the Queene is a w—) being laide to be spoken maliciously and slanderously to deprive the King and Queene of the dignity, title, and name, of their Royall Estate and by that special law (now in force in this Kingdome) treason; I doe humbly further certify your Grace that, touching the quality and condicon of the said Charles Eggar, I haue received informacion from severall persons of good quality in the county of Killkeny that the said Charles Eggar in the tyme of the late government in this Kingdome did often declare that hee was much vnsatisfied with that government and that he was a person that shewed himselfe very active (according to his power) in his Majesties Restauration, but in regard the proffe against the prisoner was full and pregnant, the jury haueing found him guilty, it was [my] duty to giue judgement according to law. . . . Your [Grace] in regard that my observa[n]ce vpon the whole circumstance of the evidence the[re] appeared to be much of malice in the preservacion, I did conceive it fitt to reprove [him] for some tyme and doe represent him vnto your Grace as a fitt object of his Majesties pardon.

"Dublin Castle, 20 July 1663.

"Lett this petition and the severall papers therevnto annexed be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideracion and such further order given therevpon as shal be thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Cornelius Donevan, Serjeant in Captain Garrett Moore's foot company at Drogheda, and now prisoner "in the Marsbalsy of the Royall Regiment."—Inquiry and release.—28 July 1663.

John O'Maddin.—Order to Judge of Assize at Galway to try matter between Richard Holcroft and petitioner, relative to possession of lands.—30 June 1663.

Andrew Sturgion.—"That your petitioner hath been vnder restraint these two months in the custody of Captain Phillip Carpenter, Serieant of Armes, for being suspected to haue a hand in the late Plott; and for as much as severall persons on the same account were by your Graces order before Mr. Attorney Generall examined were sett att libertie vpon haile: Now, in regard, may it please your Grace, your petitioner is a very poore man and hath a great charg of five children and his wife being blind, most humbly prays your Graces tender commiseracion of him and them. The premisses most humbly tendered to your Grace, your petitioner being already vndon by the very great charge of being att Captain Carpenter[s] aforesaid, most humbly prays your Grace to grant your order to the Attorney Generall that your petitioner may be examined, and that vpon his report to your Grace your petitioner may be disposed of accordingly either vpon baile or otherwise as to your Grace shall seeme most meete, your petitioner being very confident of his innocency of his haueing anything to do in that horrid act, which if not granted your poore petitioner his wife and children must vnavoidably perish. And he will pray, etc."

"Dublin Castle, 30 July 1663.

"Vpon consideracion of this petition wee pray and require our very good Lord the Lord Baron of Santry, Lord Cheife Justice of his Majesties Courte of Cheife Place, to take recognizance of the petitioner, Andrew Sturgion, with sufficient security of the penalty of 500l. sterling, with condicon that he shall personally appeare in the said court, the first day of the next Michaelmas-terme, to answer what shall be objected against him and not to depart without lycence of the said court. And vpon certificate from his Lordship of the petitioners entering into such recognizance as aforesaid, the Serjeant att Armes in whose custody he remains is to sett him att liberty, paying his fees.

"ORMONDE."

Doctor Thomas Bladen.—"That your petitioner hath been minister of St. Johns, Dublin, these two yeares and vpwads, and in regard there is noe certain and legall maintenance belonging to the said parish, your petitioner was presented to the rectorie of Kilsuire, in the county of Meath, by his Majesties letters patents. Not-

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

withstanding which presentacion, your petitioner is kept out of the said rectory by a pretended right from Mr. Thomas Loftus, the pretended patron, who hath presented Doctor Fuller to the said rectory after your petitioner was presented to it by his Majesty, the said rectorie being in lapse to his Majesty. And whereas the said Doctor Fuller is to be promoted to a bishopricke (as your petitioner is informed) vpon which account alone hee must part with the said rectorie, if had any just title thereto. In consideration hereof your petitioner humbly prays that your petitioner may enjoy the benefit of his Majesties letters pattents as to the said rectory, and that none other by any new letters pattents may be suffered to intervene to the disturbance of your petitioner. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"THOMAS BLADEN."

"Dublin Castle, 30 July 1663.

"Wee pray his Grace the Lord Archbishop of Dublin to inquire into the [al]legacions of the petition, and certify vs what he shall find, with his Lordships opinion of the petitioners request.

"ORMONDE."

Michael Jones.—"That your Grace by your order, dated the 30th June 1663, ordered that Sir Luke Bath, Barronett, shall have a custodiam of severall lands in your petitioners possession; vpon which order the Lord Chiefe Baron hath granted custodiam to the [said] Sir Luke, by which your petitioner is like to be outed of the said possession of the said lands, contrary (as he conceiveth) to the course of the Comon Law in these cases, for that your petitioner ought to be served with a scire facias, and admitted to plead thereunto; which the Lord Chiefe Baron denyeth to admit, he conceiving your Grace hath already adjudged the title. Now, for as much as your Grace would not heare or determine anything of title, but said that the proper place for tryall was att the Comon Law where your petitioner hopeth your Grace will give order he may be heard before he be dispossessed of the lands (as other his Majesties subjects have been in like cases), he being possessed thereof for divers yeares past; and that if he should be dispossessed at this vnrasonable tyme of the yeare it would tend to his vtter ruine, haneing not a place where to remove himselfe, wife (who is ready to be layd), or family. May it therefore please your Grace to give order to the Lord Chiefe Baron to suspend giving of any order for possession of the premisses vntill your petitioner be served with a scire facias and admitted to plead thereunto, which is the constant course in such cases; and the rather for that your [petitioner] will give security to pay the rents of the lands payable by the said Sir Lukes custodiam, or what other rents your Grace shall thinke [fit] to his Majesty or whomsoever your Grace shall conceive or the law adudge to same to belonge vnto. And your petitioner shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 July 1663.

"Wee pray your very good Lord, the Lord Chiefe Baron of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, to take this petition into his consideration, and to certify vs the course observed in cases of this nature.

"ORMONDE."

Laurence Masterson.—"Most lamentably showing that your suppliant is a very poore labouring man, burthened with a wife and six small children, and was lately by the false and malicious information of one Mary Browne committed into the gaole of Killmainham for the snipstons stealing of some pewter from her at severall times about seven or eight yeares since; for which fact hee was found guilty vpon her single oath onely without any further prooff. Whereas your poore petitioner is as innocent of the fact as hee that is yet unborne, but onely meere malice, your poore petitioner being a dweller in one towne with her about two yeares, in all which time shee never spoke nor way made the least challenge for the same or for any other misdemeanor. Yet nevertheless your poore petitioner is to be executed next Saturday by meanes of the foresaid malicious and false information, if your Grace bee not speedily and mercifully pleased to relieue him for the future maintenance of his wife and small children, who are ready to famish since his false imprisonment, they haneing noe liuelyhood but what your poore petitioner earned with his daily labour a[n]d sweat. And likewise to bee mercifully pleased for the reasons above said to grant your Graces order for prolonging of the petitioners life, whereby hee may by his daily labour relieue his said distressed charge. And hee and they will euer pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 July 1663.

"The Justices before whom the petitioner received his tryall are to certify vnto vs how the matter appeared before them, with their opinion of the request of this petition; and in the meane time the execution of the petitioner is to bee suspended, whereof the Sherriff of the county of Dublin and all others whom it may concerne are required to take notice. And this shall be a warrant.

"ORMONDE."

Dr. Thomas Potter, Dean of Waterford.—Permission to hold in commendam forfeited impropriations near Waterford city.—27 July 1663.

Edward Nicholls and John Partridge, farmers of wine and strong-water licences in the King's and Queen's counties.—Satisfaction from retailers without licence.—30 July 1663.

Francis Pimm, son of John Pimm, formerly of Ormonde's and Lord Berkeley's troop.—Re-admission to troop.—30 July 1663.

Denis Bardy, Thomas Dnplack, and John Lewis, of Lord Conway's troop.—Removal "of respite" placed on pay for absence on leave.—24 July 1663.

Richard Tigh and Daniel Hutchinson, Aldermen.—

"That your suppliants with others are very much concerned in certaine proportions of land that was sett out in the time of the late vsurpation for payments of the debts due for provisions deliuered to the vse of his Majestie's army in the time that your Grace had the command and Government of this kingdome, before the sixteenth of September 1643, or in reprints for the said lands. Now, forasmuch as your suppliants are informed that your Grace doth intend that some further provision shall be for settling and securing the estates of the Adventurers and souldiers; and forasmuch as the provisions for which your suppliants are concerned were all brought from beyond the seas and were more vsfull to his Majesties army than money, beeing delivered at moderate rates, and the Adventurers all or many of them had their lands at cheaper rates, and many persons that possesse them have bought them at lesse then halfe the value that your suppliants lands were sett out at: May it therefore please your Grace to take into consideration the annexed paper and to take order that the same, with such corrections and amendments as your Grace shall thinke fit, may bee inserted in or added unto some such bill as your Grace shall be pleased to transmit to his Majesty to bee past into a law. And your suppliants will ever pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 30 July 1663.

"Lett this petition and the paper annexed be presented vnto vs at our next sitting at the Conncell Boord, where the same shall bee taken into consideration, and such further order given thereupon as shall be thought fit.

"ORMONDE."

Report by Richard Barry and the Earl of Anglesey on claim of Susanna Jones for arrears due to her late husband, Thomas Jones, private in the Lord Augher's troop.—10-29 July 1663.

Sir John Bourke, of Derimac Laghny, Knight.—Custodiam of petitioner's estate now in possession of Lord Kingstowne, Major Robert Ormsby, and others.—1 August 1663.

Henry, Earl of Drogheda.—Particulars of lands in possession of Sir Robert Reynolds, for grant to petitioner.—1 August 1663.

Captain Robt, Adjutant to his Majestys Guards in England.—"That whereas, in pursuance of his Majesties letters, the coppie whereof is hereunto annexed, your Grace was pleased to refer vnto his Majesties learned Conncell the consideration of granting your petitioner the practise and exercise of a lottery called the Royall Oake within this Kingdome, and forasmuch as Mr. Attorney and Mr. Solicitor Generall, by their report to your Grace, the copy whereof is hereunto annexed, certified their opinion that the granting vnto your petitioner the practise and exercise of the said Lottery was warranted by his Majesties said letters, vpon which your Grace was pleased to grant your petitioner onely a licence for the practice of the same. Hee therefore humbly prays that your Grace would be pleased to direct your warrant to his Majesties learned Conncell, to the intent that your petitioner and his assignes may have a patent, under the Great Seale of this Kingdome, of the said lottery called the Royall Oake for some certaine yeares as your Grace shall thinke fit and bee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 1 August 1663.

"His Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall, on our order of reference to them of the 14th of Aprill last, haneing, the second of May last, certified vs their opinion that the granting to the petitioner the practise and exercise of the lottery within mentioned is warranted by his Majesties letters vnto vs of the 19th of

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

September last, and that the petitioner and his assigns in pursuance of the said letters might by our order be authorized and empowered to use and exercise the said lottery in any place within this Kingdom, with a prohibition therein to all others from exercising thereof, he paying five shillings sterling weekly to the church wardens of every parish wherein he should exercise the lottery, for the use of the poor of such parish, during the time hee should exercise the same therein; and wee haueing given our order according to the certificate of the said Attorney and Solicitor, wee now pray them to take further consideration of his Majesties said letters (a copy whereof is hereunto annexed), and to certify vs whether they conceive that wee are thereby sufficiently authorized and warranted to give order for passing such a patent to the petitioner and his assigns as by the within petition is desired.

"ORMONDE."

"May it please your Grace.

"We haue considered of this your Graces order and of his Majesties letters of the 19th of September last, and humbly certify your Grace that wee conceaue your Grace is by his Majesties said letters sufficiently authorized to give order for passing such a patent to the petitioner and his assigns as is desired, and wee humbly conceive your Grace may cause to be inserted in the said letters patents such clauses and provisoes as your Grace shall thinke fitt and reasonable. All which we humbly submit to your Graces consideration, 10th August 1663.

"WILLIAM DOMVILLE.
JO. TEMPLE."

"Dublin Castle, 25 August 1663.

"His Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall are to certify vs what clauses and provisoes they shall conceive fitt to be inserted in the letters patents in their forgoing certificate mentioned, and therevpon wee shall give our further order.

"ORMONDE."

Gerald FitzGerald—"That your petitioner and his ancestors were borne att Dunmore, in the county of Kildare, and that hee served his apprenticeship with a goldsmith in the city of Dublin and continued here vnto the Cessation tyme; and trading at that tyme failing very much in this city, your petitioner wanted employment, and therefore removed from hence to Gallway, [in] which hee hath peaceably remained ever since, constantly labouring in his vocation for the support of him selfe, his wife, and family. But soe it is that your petitioners wife dyed lately and left to your petitioner the care of eight small children, all of them daily depending upon the labour and industry of your petitioner. But the inhabitants of the said towne of Gallway, envyeing your petitioners because he is a stranger, doo very much molest and trouble your petitioner, and will not permit him to live in the said towne without an especiall order from your Grace; and forasmuch as your petitioner was ever a peaceable person and likewise att all tymes loyall and faithfull to his Majesties interest in this nation, for which he hath many tymes sadly suffered since he came to the said towne of Gallway, notwithstanding that vpon all occasions he hath paid to the vtmost of his ability all such taxes as were imposed vpon him. Wherefore hee humbly supplicateth your Grace, the premisses tenderly considered, that you would vouchsafe to grant him an order to abide and remaine in the said towne of Gallway (hee behauncing as becometh) that hee may peaceably and without molestacon follow his calling for the support of himselfe and eight small children. And hee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 13th July 1663.

"Referred to Sir Maurice Berkeley, Knight, Vice President of the Province of Connaught, to doe in this matter what [he] shall conceive fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Richard Lane, Knight and Baronet—"That Francis Farrell, of Mornyn, in the county of Longford, being transplanted into Connaught had assigned unto him the lands undernamed, and being now restored to his former estate as an innocent Papist, the said vndernamed lands are in his Majesties disposall; whereof the petitioner humbly desires your Grace will be pleased to give order he may haue a custodiam during his Majesties [pleasure] at a moderate rent. And, etc.

"In the parish of Killglasse, barrony of Ballintobber and county of Roscomon, Roan, one quarter; Muckenagh, one quarter; Killwillin, 2 quarters; Tully, halfe a quarter.

"Dublin Castle, 3rd August 1663.

"If it shall appeare vnto our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron and the [rest] of the Barons of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, that the lands above mentioned are in his Majesties dispose wee pray and require them to cause a custodiam thereof to issue to the petitioner vnder the seal of that court, during his Majesties pleasure, att such rent as they shall thinke fitt, haueing consideration of the petitioners' discovery.

"ORMONDE."

John Jackman, soldier in Colonel Mark Trevor's troop.—Arrears.—7 July 1663.

Luke Dowdall, son and heir of Lawrence Dowdall, late of Athlunmy, in the county of Meath, Esquire, deceased.—"That your petitioners said father, being transplanted into Connaught amongst others, had assigned him by the Commissioners there the towne and lands of Milton-fallon and other lands thereabouts, which lands were soone after extended vpon a statute staple att the suite of one Burr, of Dublin, merchant, for a debt of £600 owed him by your petitioners said father before the warr and possession thereof given him accordingly, which lands are yet vnder the extent. But now soe it is (may it please your Grace) that your petitioner is informed that one Sir John Devillee hath lately gott a grant thereof from his Majestie, and that an injunction is issued or to issue out of the Exchequer for to put him in possession thereof, wherein your petitioner doth conceaue that he is much wronged, and that the same was granted by misinformation and contrary to the rules and government att present in this country. And forasmuch as your petitioners clayme is not yett heard or adjudged in the courte of claymes, he humbly prayes your Grace to grant your order vnto the Lord Cheife Baron to stop and recall the said injunction. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 1st August 1663.

"Wee pray our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, to consider of this petition, and certify vs what his Lordshipp shall conceive fitt to be don therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Odbier, of the Earl of Drogheda's troop.—Restoration of horse withheld by William Whitedale, one of the Sheriffs of Dublin city.—1 August 1663.

James Tully—"That your petitioner on the 26th of December last was taken for a priest in this city and comitted to the Marshallee, where he still continues prisoner to his great damage, haueing [no] manner of subsistance nor way to relevee himselfe. That your Grace may be pleased to give order for the petitioners enlargement vpon baile or prescribe a way for his present subsistants, whereby hee may not perish in the Marshallsie. And will pray, etc.

"Dublin, 3 August 1663.

"Lett this petition bee presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Hopkins and Thomas Cooper, under sentence of death for burglary.—Report recommending their pardon.—4th August 1663.

William Jones, a disbanded soldier of Sir Arthur Gore's company.—Arrears.—29 July 1663.

John Hallam, Captain, in behalf of himself and the inhabitants of the barony of Ballyboy.—That the Commissioners of Subsidies may not charge the barony for more than a moiety of the land, formerly a common, but recently returned as profitable, the remainder being included in Ballyrowen barony.—3 August 1663.

Alexander Fargusson.—Re-admission to Earl of Meath's troop.—1 August 1663.

Thomas Finglas—"That your petitioner is the right heire and next of blood vnto Lieutenant Colonel John Finglas, whose losse and behavior in his Majesties service needs noe other testimony then your Grace his knowledge of him, in relation to whose deserts your petitioner humbly prayeth that hee may be provided for in the Act intended to passe in fauour of such of his Majesties subjects as deserved well in his Majesties service both for the said estate [of] Lieutenant Colonel Finglas as alsoe for the lands fallen vpon your petitioner by the death of his elder brother Roger Finglas. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 August 1663.

"Lett this petition bee presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Henry Warren, Esquire.—"That Peter Sarsfield, late of Tully, in the county of Kildare, Esquire, being outlawed by reason of the late Rebellion in Ireland, his late Majesty by letters patents vnder the Great Seale of the Court of Exchequer of Ireland vnder a certaine rent did

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

grant vnto your petitioner the custody of the said Peters estate for soe longe tyme as the same should remaine in his Majesties hands, the benefit of which grant your petitioner never enioyed nor durst clayme during the Usurpers tyme. That immediately vpon his Majesties happy restauration that now is, vpon your Grace his report of your petitioners demeanour and sufferings, hee was pleased by his letters of the 19th July 1660 to require the Lord Lieutenant or other Cheife Gouvernour of Ireland to cause an effectuall grant for 21 yeares to be made vnto your petitioner of the same lands and vnder the same rent vnder the Great Seale of Ireland; in pursuance whereof your supliant was at the charge of passinge the same vnto the fiant, but understanding that Patrickke Sarsfield, the son and heire of the said Peter, was like to recover the said lands vpon a settlement made vpon his marriage before the said Rebellion, your petitioner would proceed noe further untill he saw the successe of the said Patrickkes clayme. Now, so it is that the Court of Claymes hath decreed the lands aforesaid to be forfeited and the same to be in his Majesties disposall. May it therefore please your Grace to afford vnto your petitioner the benefit of his Majestie his said letters in his behalfe ready to be produced and to give order to his Majesties learned Councill for drawing vpp a fiant to that effect. And he will pray, etc.

"HENRY WARREN."

"Dublin Castle, 4 August 1663.

"The aboue named Patrickke Sarsfield is required, within ten daies after sight or notice hereof, to shew cause (if any he can) why the petitioners request should not be granted.

"ORMONDE."

William Skelton.—"That your petitioner is confined vpon suspicion of being concerned in the late Plot, of which he is altogether innocent. Hee therefore humbly beseecheth your Grace that he may be released vpon baile as others in the like case. And he will pray.

"WILLIAM SKELTON."

"Dublin Castle, 5 August 1663.

"Vpon consideration of this petition wee pray and require our very good Lord, the Lord Baron of Santry, Lord Cheife Justice of his Majesties Court of Cheife Place, to take recognizance of the petitioner, William Skelton, with sufficient security of the penalty of 500l. sterling, with condition that he shall personally appear in the said Court, the first day of the next Michaelmas terme, to answer what shall be objected against him, and not to depart without lincense of the said Court. And vpon certificate from his Lordship of the petitioners entering into such recognizance as aforesaid, the petitioner is to bee att liberty to follow his occasions.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Theophilus Jones, Knight.—"That Patrickke Sarsfield, Esquire, late of Tully, in the county of Killdare, did, by vertue of his Majesties letters bearing date the 29th of March 1661, (granted vpon misinformation as now appeares,) obtaine the possession of the towne and lands of Rosberry and severall other lands in the county of Killdare which were formerly in his Majesties hands; and by vertue alsoe of the said letters there was reserved to his Majestie on the said lands [sic] were strucke out of charge in his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, to the lessening of his Majesties revenew; that the said Patrickke Sarsfield on the first of August 1663, vpon a full hearing before his Majesties Commissioners appointed for the execucion of the Act of Settlement, was adjudged a nocent person; that the said Patrickke Sarsfield being soe adjudged a nocent person the said Roseberry and other the lands strucke out of charge as aforesaid doe stand vested in his Majestie from the 23th of October, 1641. Your petitioner therefore humbly prayes, for the better improvement and increase of his Majesties revenew, to be admitted and preferred tenant from May last to the said towne and lands of Roseberry, and other the lands soe strucke out of charge as aforesaid, at such rents as to your Grace shall seeme meete, and that your Grace would be pleased to give order to the Lord Cheife Barrou of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer to cause a custodian to that effect to be passed to the petitioner vnder the seale of his Majesties Court of Exchequer to haue and to hold to the petitioner att the said rent during his Majesties pleasure. And hee shall pray, etc.

"THEOPHILUS JONES."

"Dublin Castle, 4th August 1663.

"The within named Patrickke Sarsfield is required, within ten dayes after sight or notice hereof, to shew cause (if any hee can) why the petitioners request by this petition should not be granted.

Francis Knight and William Taylor.—Tenancy of

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

lands of Burrisbewle in recompense for improvements there, under lease from Henry Marton, who had only a mortgagee's interest.—4 August 1663.

William Taylor, farmer of wine and aquavite licences, co. Sligo.—Satisfaction from distillers and retailers without lincense.—4 August 1663.

Richard Halse, under sentence of death for burglary in Kilkenny county.—Report recommending him for pardon, on condition of giving evidence against his confederates.—20 July 1663.

Garret Werren, a disbanded private of Colonel Howard's troop.—Arrears.—1st August 1663.

Edmond Douchan.—Custodian of lands in Galway.—5 August 1663.

Ulick Blake.—Custodian of lands in Connaght, pending proceedings for restoration of his own lands.—4 August 1663.

Richard Floyd, Plaintiff; Richard Philipp, Defendant.—Affidavit of Service of Order.—4 August 1663.

Francis Rynard, formerly Corporal in Captain Rudocke's company and Serjeant in Captain Maye's.—Pension and arrears.—6 August 1663.

William Grantham, formerly of Sir Francis Hamilton's troop.—To compel John Charlton, clerk of the troop, to transmit petitioners arrears as ordered.—28 July 1663.

Thomas Walcott, prisoner in custody of Philip Carpenter.—Permission to attend in court during trial of matter between James Hally and petitioner.—6 August 1663.

Richard Hopkins and Thomas Cooper, imprisoned at Kiltmainham for burglary.—Grant of pardon "in forma pauperis".—5 August 1663.

Henry Jones.—"That your petitioner being by the Decree of the Court of Claymes dispossessed of his farme neere this city during the tyme of his late restraint, he was forced to become a sojourner in this city with his family, and sell of almost all of his stocke att suche disadvantageous rates as the markett would afford; by reason of which your petitioner is at present destitute of any way of livelyhood or subsistence for himselfe or family. The premises considered, and for as much as your petitioner is desirous to betake himselfe to a merchant trade by sea and to goe himselfe in person, if your Grace shall thiuke [fit] to lincense him therevnto, hee humbly prayes your Grace will, in tender consideration of his great charge and present destitute condicon, grant him your lycence to travel to any parte of his Majesties dominions or elsewhere beyond the seas about his lawfull occasions, and will order for the cancelling the bonds and recognizances in which he stands obliged, with security to appeare within ten dayes when therevnto required. And he, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 6 August 1663.

"Lett this petition bee presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councill Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Thomas Bourke.—Custodian of lands in Mayo and Galway counties.—1st August 1663.

John Michell, corporal in Sir Henry Tichborn's troop.—Certificate of arrears.—6 August 1663.

Thomas Waterhouse, Alderman.—Replication to answer of Edward Smith, of the Battle-Axe Guard, concerning recovery of debt.—1 August 1663.

John Smith, formerly "master gunsmith to his Majesties trayne of Artillery here in Ireland."—Payment for work done.—14 May 1663.

Jasper Farmer.—Recovery of debt from Lieutenant Richard Smith of Sir Francis Foulke's company.—5 August 1663.

John Duckenfeld.—Delivery of bond, and passport to England.—4 August 1663.

John Callaway, Robert Upfeild, and William Evans, of the Earl of Donegal's troop.—Certificate on arrears.—6 August 1663.

Richard Berty, Captain.—Arrears, and attachment of Captain Salt, on whom assignment for same had been made, for embezzling his Majesty's revenue.—6 August 1663.

Ralph Harrison.—Replication to answer of Richard Philipps, relative to recovery of debts.—8 August 1663.

Robert Kennedy, and others, feoffees in trust for Mathew Foord, an infant.—Leave to execute decrees against Major Muschamp.—11 August 1663.

Trustees for managing the security of the Commissioners Officers who served in Ireland before 1649.

"That your petitioners find vpon the list of causes now vp for a hearing the name of Thomas Wyse, of

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

Waterford, who by his clayme layes challenge to one hundred and one houses in that city. That Francis Wyse, vnder whom the claymant doth challenge, was an eminent and active Nuntio-man and a violent prosecutor of the warre and oposer of the Peace, as is very well knowne to many persons of quality. That the said Thomas Wyse haueing obtained his Majesties letter to alter his clayme hath vpon vntre suggestions prevailed to haue a new clayme admitted by which hee claymes a remainder not mencioned in his two former claymes. They therefore humbly beseech your Grace to interpose with his Majesties Commissioners for execution of the Act of Settlement to expunge the said Wyse out of list, your petitioners haueing [e]very reason to suspect that the ffeoffement vpon which the said Wyse layes his last clayme is fraudulent ; which cannot possibly be detected in soe short a tyme as is allowed your petitioners to prepare for a hearing of that cause. And your petitioners shall pray, etc.

" Commissioners of claymes concerning the [16]49 trustees :

" After our very hearty comendacions. The inclosed petition haueing beene presented vnto vs by the Trustees for managing of the security of the commissioned officers before 1649, wee send the same vnto you and desire you will take consideration thereof and doe there vpon as you shall conceive just. And soe wee bid you heartily farewell from his Majesties [Castle] of Dublin, the 10th of August 1663.

" Your very loving freind,

" ORMONDE."

Francis Willoughby, Collonel.—" That about 200 acres of land lying and being in the parish of Clandalkin in the county of Dublin, are forfeited to and vested in the Kings Majestie, but are concealed, and by reason thereof yield his Majestie noe rent or profit and are not in charge in his Majesties Court of Exchequer, as your petitioner is ready to make appeare vpon record. Your petitioner therefore humbly prays your Grace to grant him a custodiam of the said lands during his Majesties pleasure, reserving to his Majestie the vsual Quit rent soe that the same may be an encouragement to your petitioner for the said discovery. And, etc.

" Dublin Castle, 11 August 1663.

" If it shall appeare to our very good [Lord], the Lord Chiefe Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands above mentioned are not in charge, but in his Majesties disposall and not granted to any other, they are to issue a custodiam thereof to the petitioner during his Majesties pleasure at such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

" ORMONDE."

Patrick Longe, Lieutenant to Captain Nicholas Bayley in behalf of himself, James Bryant his servant, Corporal Dover, Thomas English, Robert Williams, and Edward Porter, of the same company, garrisoned in Galloway.—Removal of "respites" placed on pay.—10 August 1663.

Charles Wheeler, Colonel. — Arrears. — 8 August 1663.

John Viscount Massereene.—Continuance of possession of lands forming portion of his custodiam in the counties of Louth and Kildare.—10 August 1663.

Richard Hopkins and Thomas Cooper, prisoners convicted of burglary. — Report recommending them to mercy.—11 August 1660.

Adam Peate, Lieutenant-Colonel, and Richard Delves, Esquire. — Custodiam of lands in Galway.—6 August 1663.

Thomas Kent, Serjeant in the late Sir Thomas Gifford's company. — Certificate on debts and arrears.—10 August 1663.

Barbara Thompson alias Hill, widow :—" That your petitioners late husband, by reason of his haueing a hand in the late unhappy Plott for which hee hath suffered, hath left your petitioner in a very lowe and sadd condicon, all his estate both reall and personall being seised vpon and made away from your petitioner and her child by Sherrills and others. And for as much as your petitioner is an innocent poore Protestant and altogether guiltlesse of any thing relating to her said late husbands offence for which hee suffered as aforesaid, shee is inforced to make her humble address unto your Grace that your Grace will be pleased to take her most sadd and perishing condicon into your pious commiseracion, your petitioner humbly hoping that neither his Majestie nor your Grace doth intend your poore perishing petitioner and her child should famish through the offence of her said husband. And therefore shee most humbly prayeth your Grace will be pleased to pity the widdow and fatherlesse, and to grant such order for your petitioners speedy reliefe out of her said husbands esute by which shee may be supported and preserved as may be most suitable to your great wisdom and Christian charity. And your petitioner shall, etc.

" Dublin Castle, 11th August 1663.

" Lett this petition bee presented to vs at our next sitting at the Councell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideracion, and such further order giuen thereupon as shall [be thought] fitt.

" ORMONDE."

Sir John Boys, Knight, Lieutenant Governor of the Fort of Duncannon. — Direction to the Constable of Passage to haue the collection made which was ordered for support of the soldiers in Duncannon.—11 August 1663.

Cassandra Hill.—That her case be again referred to the Lord Chiefe Baron or Attorney General, etc.—11 August 1663.

Daniel Redman, Colonel. — Arrears. — 12 August 1663.

Thomas Blackiston.—Issue of caveats relative to disposition of lands held by petitioner under custodiam and lease.—28 April 1663.

Frances, Viscountess Dillon of Costello.—" That the lands in the annexed schedule mentioned, part of Thomas Lord Viscount Dillon of Costello his estate, were by the late usurper giuen to the Lord Viscount Gallmoy, Collonel FitzPatrick, and others, vpon the transplatation into Connaght, and are now giuen vp by judgement of the Court of Claines, whereby the said Lord Viscount and the rest are adjudged innocents and to bee restored to their estates. Wherefore, in pursuance of his Majesties gracious intentions and his severall orders and of the proviso in the Act of Settlement in the said Lord Dillon's behalfe, shee humbly prayeth your Grace to giue order that noe custodiam of the said lands or of any parte of the said Lord Dillons Estate bee granted to any person, and that the said Lord Dillon or his agent may haue a custodiam of the said lands so giuen vp or left by the judgment of innocence until his Lordship be restored to the rest of his estate. And shee, etc.

" Dublin Castle, 11th August 1663.

" If it shall appeare unto our very good Lord, the Lord Chief Barron, and the rest of the Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands in the annexed list mentioned are in his Majesties dispose, and not already granted to any other, they are to grant a custodiam thereof, as by the petitioner is desired, during his Majesties pleasure, at such rent [as they] shall thinke fitt.

" ORMONDE."

" A list of as much of my Lord Dillon's estate as was in the possession of the Lord Gallmoy, Collonel Fitz Patrick, and others that were restored to their estates. Cloghyre, Bracklagh and Drummagowen, 1 quarter; In Annagh, 1 quarter; Lishnemanyagh, 1 quarter; Fartagh, 1 quarter; Rathroume, 1 quarter; Carroward, 1 quarter and $\frac{1}{2}$; Lishgormine, 1 quarter; Carrowmore, 1 quarter; Carrowbaredagh, 2 quarters and $\frac{1}{2}$; Twocanany and Boagh, 1 quarter; Altabana, 1 quarter; Tuorhamine, 1 quarter; Trinefonanagh and the two mills belonging to it, 1 quarter; Lishmirane, 2 quarters; Shyan, 2 quarters; Caldargh, 1 cartron.

" Collonel FitzPatrick's.

" Urlare and Ruinenany, 1 quarter; Shraghgrane, and Cnockany, 2 quarters; Backfada, $\frac{1}{2}$ quarter; Keallaghane, $\frac{1}{2}$ quarter; Cregagh, 1 quarter; Glandagoe, 1 quarter; Drumsobbagh, 1 quarter; Brosnlagh, 1 quarter; Cregally, $\frac{1}{2}$ quarter; Ruskie, 1 quarter; Carrick, 1 quarter; Carrow Cadhly, 1 quarter; Bollacunga, 1 quarter; Mulayhawny, 1 quarter; Ballymore, 1 quarter; Carrowcroome and Carrowcastell, 2 quarters; Ardriish, 1 quarter."

John Fitz Patrick, Colonel.—That his Majestie haueing taken to consideracion the great sufferings and services of your petitioner and your Graces report therevpon, he was graciously pleased, by His Royall [man]dat beareing [da]te the first of March 1661, to require the Earle of Anglesey his Treasurer of . . . of the rents issues and profits, of the lands, tenements, and here[ditaments] . . . for repprizals and custodiam lands to pay your petitioner . . . restored vnto, and possessed . . . thereof as may appeare . . . his Deputy alleadgeth . . . sett apart for pensions . . . the benefit of the said letter of his Maiestie). His humble request is that your Grace will be pleased to require the said Earle of Anglesey or his Deputy to accompt with your petitioner and to give him assignements for what is and shall be due vnto him

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

vntill Michaelmas next, before which tyme he can receive noe rent out of his owne estate nor haue it out of charge. And hee will pray.

"Dublin Castle, 11 August 1663.

"Vpon consideration of this petition we pray and require Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy vice Treasurer and Receiver General, to accompt with the petitioner for what he hath received of the allowance within mentioned and for what thereof doth remaine vnpaid vntill this tyme, and to make certificate thereof vnto vs, and therevpon we shall give such further order as shall be fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Thomas Stanley, Knight.—"That pursuant to a pretended Act of Parliament made at Westminster the 17th day of September 1656, intituled an Act for the better preventing of theft and robbery, your petitioner did, in the year 1658, heeing then Sherriff of the countyes of Waterford and Tipperary, pay for the bringing in and discovery of five Tories and fellows, who were convicted and putt to death, the summe of 50*l*. out of the publique moneys then in his hands, which according to the tenor of the said Act was to be allowed unto him in his accompt vpon the certificate of a judge . . . two Jus[ti]ces of Peace that they were . . . Tories or fellows . . . it is . . . your petitioners . . . the Barons . . . the discovery of one of the said Tories, because it doth appeare unto them that hee was brought in and convicted before a judge, but doe make some scruple in allowing the remaining 40*l*. for the other foure without a special order from your Grace, although it bee certified by justices of the peace that they were convicted as Tories, because they were slaine in the field and not legally convicted in strictnesse of lawe. Now forasmuch as the accounts of your petitioner doe stick in the Exchequer only vpon this point, to his great prejudice, and that hee hath the said Act, certificates, and receipts, ready to bee produced to prone his allegations, and that his disbursements were warranted and had been allowed but for the distractions of that time, and that there was noe other way for the conviction of those Tories who were guilty of murders and robberyes and could not bee taken alive, and that the allowance of your petitioners said disbursements doth fall within the equity of the lawe. Hee therefore humbly prayeth for your Graces order to the said Barrons of the Exchequer to give allowance in his Accompts for the said 40*l*., or that you would refer the same to their consideration to report what in their opinion your Grace in equity may doe therein. And hee shall, etc.

"THOMAS STANLEY,

" . . . 1663.

" . . . Barron of his Majesties . . . in this petition
" . . . finde . . .

"ORMONDE."

John Thomas, dismissed (during absence) from Earl of Meath's troop.—Re-admission to the troop.—11 August 1663.

Patrick Kirvan, Esq.—Recovery of tenement in Galway from John Bancroft, of Sir Oliver St. George's troop.—10 August 1663.

John Skelton, of Dublin, inn-keeper.—Recovery of debts from troopers.—23 July 1663.

Thomas Flower and John Maddison, disbanded soldiers of Colonel Robert Sand's command.—Arrears.—11 August 1663.

Sir Thomas Wharton, Knight of the Bath.—"That there is in arreare due to your petitioner, as Captain of a company of foote, for ten months comencing February 1660, which your petitioner is contented for lessening his Majesties charge to take halfe pay. And therefore prays your Graces order to the Muster Master General to state his said arreares and to draw vp a warrant for payment of the moyety accordingly. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 23 July 1663.

"The Muster Master General or his Deputy is to stato the 10 months arreare aboue mencioned, and certify vnto vs to how much one moyetie thereof doth amount.

"ORMONDE."

"May it please your Grace,

"I find that there is due and in arreare vnto Sir Thomas Wharton, Knight of the Bath, as Captain of a foot company of his Majesties army in this Kingdome from the 21th of October 1661 to the 27th of July 1662. [ac]cording to the Kallender account and present establishment, the sum of 103*l*. 4*s*., a moyety whereof amounts to 51*l*. 12*s*., which I humbly certify. . . 1663.

"RICHARD BARRY."

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

"Dublin Castle, 12 August 1663.
"The Muster Master General is to prepare a warrant for the payment of the sum of 51*l*. 12*s*. to the petitioner, in full satisfaction of the aboue mencioned sum of 103*l*. four shillings, according to the petitioners offer, and to present the same vnto vs for our signature.

"ORMONDE."

Charles Wheeler, Colonel.—Certificate on arrears.—12 August 1663.

Richard Phillips.—Recovery of debt from Captain Garret Moore.—6 August 1663.

John Herne.—Custodiam of lands in co. Galway.—11 August 1663.

Edward Gofort, formerly trumpeter to Sir Thomas Armstrong, late Quarter-Master General of the Horse.—Arrears.—1 August 1663.

Hoyle Walsh, Colonel.—Restoration of fusee detained in the storehouse.—13 August 1663.

Sir Richard Lane, Knight and Baronet.—Custodiam of lands in county Roscommon, in lieu of lands restored to former owners, for which he had obtained an order of custodiam.—14 August 1663.

Ralph Tillman, City of Limerick, Tailor.—Recovery of debts from Lord Augier's and Lord Grandison's troops.—14 August 1663.

William Bourke, Colonel.—Custodiam of lands formerly held by John FitzGerald.—13 August 1663.

Geffry Browne, John Browne, and Richard Dillon.—Completion of order for custodiam of lands in Mayo, Galway, and Roscommon counties.—12 August 1663.

Mary Coningham, wife of William Coningham, a prisoner.—Release of her husband on bail, on condition of his not going further than a mile from Dublin.—15 August 1663.

Robert Thompson, a disbanded soldier in Sir Arthur Demy's company.—Arrears.—11 August 1663.

Henry Nicholl.—Replication to answer of Richard Phillips, as to recovery of debt.—6 August 1663.

Philip Gelagh, Brien Farrell, and William McGilchristy, prisoners charged with illicit distilling.—Discharge from custody, the desired satisfaction being given.—6 August 1663.

Abraham Hoar, prisoner in the city Marshalsea, Dublin.—Discharge from custody.—15 July 1663.

Daniel Hutchinson.—Exclusion of lands of Tully, co. Kildare, held by petitioner as assignee of Michael Casteele, from any grant to Henry Warren or others claiming same.—17 August 1663.

Garrett Forstall and Thomas Herford, "poore Priests."

"That your poore petitioners are close prisoners att Killkenney this halfe a yeare past, being fyned the last assizes past for a supposed vnlawfull assembly att Callen on the 17th of March last; and for that distressed petitioners are very infirme in their health and soe poore as they are noe way able to pay the said fynes imposed on them: May it therefore please your Grace to commiserate your supliants sadd condicon and to order that they may be sett att libertie, they haueing allwayes demeaned themselves faithfull and loyal to his Majestic, and that the sooner for that the assizes is to be kept att Killkeny the 17th of this instant August. Which granted, and etc.

"Dublin Castle, 14 August 1663.

"Lett this Peticion be presented vnto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shalbe taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shall bee thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Henry Bell.—Admission to Earl of Meath's troop, stationed at Birr.—16 August 1663.

William Dunbarvien, Corporal in Lord Shannon's troop.—Dismissal and arrears.—7 August 1663.

Mathev Cary, farmer of wine and strongwater licences, co. Meath.—Satisfaction from retailers without licence.—13 August 1663.

Daniel Treswell, Colonel.—Custodiam of lands in co. Kildare, formerly the property of John and Stephen Laffen.—19 August 1663.

Mabel Blakny alias Bagnall, widow.—Custodiam of lands in co. Dublin, which formed her marriage portion.—7 July 1663.

John Fitz Patrick, Collonel.—

"May it please your Grace,
"In obedience to your Graces order of the 11th of this instant to mee directed, I have accompted with Collonel John Fitz Patrickke from the first of August 1661 (att which tyme his allowance of 150*l*. per mensem did begin) to the first of August instant, amounting to 3,600*l*., whereof hee hath received 2,000*l*. sterling; and soe there remaines vnpaid to him of the said allowance for the tyme aforesaid the summ of 1,600*l.*; which I humbly certify and submit to your Grace. August 14th 1663.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE

"DANIEL BELLINGHAM,
"Deputy Receiver Generall."
"Dublin Castle, 18 August 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the above certificate of Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Vice Treasurer and Receiver Generall, made in the pursuance of our order of reference given on the petition of Collonel John Fitz Patricke, the 11th of this month, herevnto annexed, whereby it doth appeare that there is due to the said Collonel, of his allowance of 150*l.* per mensem above mentioned vnto the first day of this said month, the summ of 1,600*l.*, wee pray and require our very good Lord Arthur, Earle of Anglessey, his Majesty's Vice Treasurer and Receiver Generall, or his said Deputy, out of such his Majesty's Treasure as now is or first shall come under his charge of the rents mentioned in his Majesties letters of the first of March 1661, to pay the said Collonel Fitz Patricke the said summ of 1,600*l.*, or to give him solvent assignements for the same vpon the branches of his Majesties revenue mencioned in the said letters. And for [so] doing, this, with the acceptance of the said Collonel, shalbe to the said Vice Treasurer and the Commissioners of his accompts a sufficient warrant and discharge.

"ORMONDE."

Sir Arthur Forbes, on behalfe of himself and his troop,—

"That your petitioner formerly petitioning to your Grace to have an assignement of 158*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.* charged vpon Captain George McGee, collector of your Graces mony in the county of Westmeath, to be changed in regard the said George had received the whole mony from the country and absented himselfe, your Grace was pleased to refer the same to the Earle of Anglessey, his Majesties Vice-Treasurer, to examine the petitioners allegations and to report what was fitt to be done therein. That before the said Earle made the said reporte he went for England, see that nothing was done thereupon; by meanes thereof the troope are reduced to very great necessities. The premisses considered, may it please your Grace to referre the consideration of the said petition to Sir Daniell Bellingham, and to order him forthwith to give your petitioner cther solvent assignements for the same, or else to report to your Grace what he thinke fitt. And etc.

"Dublin Castle, 11 August 1663.

"Wee pray Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Vice-Treasurer and Receiver Generall, to consider of this petition, and to certify vs what he shall conceive fitt to be don in the matter therein mencioned.

"ORMONDE."

John Pyne.—Recovery of debt from Captain R. Smith, of Sir [Francis] Foulke's company.—17 Aug. 1663.

Richard Jones, Esquire.—"That vpon a petition preferred to his sacred Majestie by your petitioner, concerning satisfaccion for the great charge and travell in his late Majesties service undergon by Roger, late Lord Viscount Ranelagh, Lord President of Conmaght, the petitioners grandfather deceased, particularly mentioned in his said petition, his Majestie, by his gracious letters of the 24th of July last, directed and delivered to your Grace with the said petition inclosed therein, hath signified his royall will and pleasure that your Grace examine the allegations of the said petition, and that if the same appeare true that your Grace make certificate thereof unto his Majestie and propose some way unto his Majestie for the speedy satisfaccion of the petitioner, as by his said petition is desired. The petitioner therefore humbly prayeth that your Grace will be pleased to put the matter in such a way as your Grace shall thinke fitt, whereby the petitioners allegations may be examined, and that thereupon your Grace wilbe pleased to certify and propose his Majestie according to his Majesties letters. And hee shall, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 17 August 1663.

"Let the Clerke of the Conncell present this petition, together with his Majesties letters therein mentioned and hereunto annexed, unto us at our next sitting at the Conncell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given thereupon as shall be thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

John Comerford.—"That whereas the petitioner hath been about nyne years past dispossesse[d] of his estate by the late vsurped power and forced to live in Conmaght, where he got noe lands nor decree for lands but lived there in a distressed condicion with his wife and poore family, till, upon his Majesties restauracion, he came from thence with his family to Leinster for to be relieved among his freinds; and whereas the towne and lands of Ballymacaghny, in the county of Kilkenny, being of his ancient inheritance and allotted and distributed among divers souldiers, the said souldiers about two years past got the lands newly admeasured and divided for to know the particulars of each ones lott; and vpon that new admeasurement it appeared that [there] were about 200 acres of the lands of the said towne that was over and above the said lotts and not disposed off, being severall parcells of mountaine lands known by severall denominacions, namely, Bollyrran, Monemearne, Knockederon, Cahellgoll, Bauchahy, and Curleigh; and therevpon some of the said souldiers pitying the petitioners distressed condicion sent for him, and with their good liking and consent he the said petitioner intred to the said parcells of mountaine lands and built cabins thereon and lived there without interruption. The premisses considered, and for that the petitioner for want of meanes is not able to prosecute his clayme, and if he should be driven from thence he hath noe place of residence, and for that the said parcells of land are concealed and above all the letts, it may therefore please your Grace and the said Conncell, in the comiseracion of the petitioners distressed condicion, to give order that for his present reliefe a custodiam may be granted to him of these lands at a smal rent to his Majestie in regard they are but coarse mountaine lands. And he will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 17th August 1663.

"If it shall appeare vnto our very [good] Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, that the lands within mencioned are in his Majesties dispose and not already granted to any other, wee pray and require them to cause a custodiam thereof to issue vnto the petitioner to continue during his Majesties pleasure att such rent as they shall [thinke fitt].

"[ORM]ONDE."

Abraham Strange.—Restoration of interest in a "Burgess Plott" in Arklow.—15 August 1663.

Florence Sullivan.—Permission to remain in the Life-Guard, and benefit of muster.—3 August 1663.

John Dillon, of co. Meath.—Discharge from custody, the desired satisfaccion being made for retailing wine, etc. without licence.—19 August 1663.

George Russell, farmer of wine and strongwater licences, co. Westmeath.—Satisfaccion from retailers without licence.—20 August 1663.

Richard Nolan, farmer of wine and strongwater licences, barony of Killmaine, co. Mayo.—Satisfaccion from retailers without licence.—22 August 1663.

Frizwead Leigh.—"That in pursuance of your Graces former orders, the Sherriffes of the countyes of Meath and Westmeath have returned inventories of all the personall estate lately belonging to Alexander Jepson, attainted and executed for treason, and now in his Majesties dispose; and for as much as your Grace hath been pleased, in comiseracion of the petitioners great sufferings in loosening her husband in his Majesties service and all her estate therevpon seized by the vsurping powers then in being, to condiscend that the petitioner should partake of his Majesties gracious favour as to obtaine a grant of the said personall estate in such measure as your Grace shall thinke fitt. Her most humble suite vnto your Grace is that you would be pleased to referre this matter vnto his Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall, or either of them, to certify your Grace what legal way the said personall estate conteyned in the annexed inventories may be conveyed to the petitioner that shee may enjoy the fruites thereof in such measure and proportion as to [your] Grace in your wisdoms shalbe thought fitt. And shee will pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 19 August 1663.

"Wee pray and require his Majesties Attorney and Solicitor Generall, or either of them, to informe themselves [and] certify vnto vs their opinion in what manner we may [extend] our gr[acious] favour as to the granting the goods and chatties . . . Alexander Jepson's and now in his [Majesty's] hands" as wee shall fitt. Vpon returne . . . order therein.

"ORMONDE."

Richard Booker, of Newcastle, in Staffordshire.—"That your petitioner about one yeare since delivered vnto the Castle of Dublin to his Majesties use to the value of 80*l.* sterling in ironmongers ware; and haueing attended here five months, or thereabouts, hoping to receive the said money, haueing had severall promises

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

from Captain Payne to be paid out of the first money which came to his hands for his Majesties vse, and as yett nothing don for your petitioner therein, to his very great damage by his long stay from his wife and family in England, and hee being now old and weak. The premisses considered, may it therefore please your Grace to take your petitioners suffering condicion into consideration, and order that the said money may be forthwith paid him, the same being the greatest part of his estate. And he will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 17 August 1663.

“Captaine John Payne is to certify vs what he knoweth of this matter, and thereupon wee shall give our further direction.

“ORMONDE.”

Edward Nicholls and George Partridge, sub-farmers of wine and strong water licences in the King's and Queen's counties.—Satisfaction from retailers without licence.—22 August 1663.

John Archell, Esquire.—Payment of expenses incurred in collecting pole money in the King's county.—22 August 1663.

Luke Dowdall, Esquire, son of Lawrence Dowdall, of Athlumney, deceased.—Certificate on petition relative to disposal of lands in co. Roscommon, the custodiam of which had been granted in mistake to Sir John Devellier.—22 August 1663.

Joshua Hobart, of Ross.—“That your petitioner being noe way conscious to himselfe of any crime against his Majesties peace and good Government, haueing been allwayes obediently submisive therevnto by a quiet and peaceable deportment towards all his Majesties leidge people, vtterly detesting the late horrid conspiracy against his Majesties authority and your Grace his Majesties representative in this realme, your petitioner being noe wayes privy to it or soe much as acquainted with it, till after the publique discovery of it by apprehension of their bodies made it knowne; yett your petitioner, being rendered to your Grace as suspected, hath been made a close prisoner in Sergeant Pigott's custody by the space of ele[n]even weekes last past, and there still remains in a daily decay of his health, where for the preservation of his life he had sold what he had saleable, soe that now he hath nothing left to keepe himselfe from starveing in prison or to relieve his already ruined family att home. Which deplorable condicion he humbly submits to your Graces fauourable consideration for reliefe. Your poore petitioner is alsoe of late given to understand that he is represented to your Grace as soe dangerous and factions a person that he may [not] expect his libertie in this kingdome as former[ly] he hath enjoyed, in consideration whereof hee humbly begges (with submission to your Graces wisdom) that your Grace would discharge [him] of imprisonment; and if your Grace shall soe thinke fit to grant him your honourable licence to depart with his family out of this kingdome to some other part of the world where he might provide in some measure for their necessary supply, which in this land he is not able to doe. And he will give security in a monethes tyme att furthest, if weather and shipping present, accordingly to remove, before winter makes the sea vnpassable for soe long a voyage as your petitioner intends. And if your Grace shall not thinke fit to condescend to this request, yett your poore petitioner humbly begges of your Graces clemency that the rigor of his close imprisonment might be abjatted and that he might give [security] att what . . . thing that is or may be . . .

“Dublin Castle, 25 August 1663.

“His Majesties Attorney Generall is [to] informe himselfe concerning the cause of the petitioners restraint and certify vs thereof, with his opinion what he shall conceive fit to be done vpon this petition.

“ORMONDE.”

John Fighan, Teige Maden, D. Cleary, and John Laly.—Answer to petition of Edward Nicholls and John Partridge, sub-farmers of wine and strong water licences in the King's and Queen's counties, relative to retailing without licence.—24 August 1663.

James Hurst, Sergeant in Colonel Garret Moore's company.—Release from imprisonment in “the Marshallsie of the Royal regiment.”—25 August 1663.

John Barbor, a condemned prisoner.—That his pardon already granted be passed in forma pauperis.—22 August 1663.

Officers and soldiers late of Lord Roberts' company.—Arrears.—15 August 1663.

Thomas Browne, prisoner in the city of Dublin Marshalsea.—Release, and perruission to leave the country.—25 August 1660.

I 120.

William Vincent, prisoner in Birr gaole.—Pardon, passed in forma pauperis.—29 May 1663.

William Roe Lynch, Patrick Moore Lynch, Edward Shorte, William Kelly, John Kelly, Henry Stacke, and Edmond Lynch.—Answer to Owen Vaughan and George Bushell, relative to retailing wine, etc., without licence.—29 August 1663.

John Brett, Colonel, on behalfe of himself, officers and servants disbanded.—Arrears.—25 August 1663.

William Purcell, of the Graige, in the Queen's county.—Discharge from custody for retailing wine, etc. without licence, the desired satisfaction being made.—26 August 1663.

James Margetson, Archbishop of Dublin.—“That, vpon a former petition, your Grace was fauourably pleased, by your order bearing date the 13th of July last, and hereunto annexed, to grant a custodiam of certaine lands held of the See of Dublin for a year from the first day [sic] last, after the rate of three pence per acre, and alsoe to grant by and in the said order that your petitioner should pay after the same rate only for those which he enjoyed the last year, 1662, and for those lands he did not enjoy that he should not pay anything; and for that end your Grace was pleased to refer the ascertainment of the rent according to the rate aforesaid to his Majesties Auditor Generall. Now, your petitioner being contented to assigne to the Right Reverend Father in God, the Lord Bishopp of Corke, the said custodiam for the present year, may it please your Grace to confirme vnto your petitioner the intended benefit of the second clause in the said order, in ordering and requiring the Lord Cheife Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, to reduce the rent reserved vpon the custodiam granted to your petitioner for the year 1662, to the rate of three pence per acre for what lands he did enjoy, and to order that he may be exempted from payment of anything for what he did not enjoy, notwithstanding any other or greater rent reserved by the said custodiam, and to order his Majesties Auditor Generall to ascertaine the said [rent] accordingly. And, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 22 August 1663.

“Wee are pleased and doe hereby order the Lord Cheife Baron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, to reduce the rent in the custodiam mentioned (which is wholly respitted durning pleasure) vnto the [rate] of threepence per acre. For lands which he did not enjoy he is not to pay anything. We require his Majesties Auditor Generall to ascertaine the rent accordingly, and the former rent to be respitted in the meane tyme.

“ORMONDE.”

Michael Boyle, Bishop of Cork.—Custodiam of lands, in connection with the Archbishopric of Dublin.—22 August 1663.

John Burges, Henry Curreen, Miles Goodwin, William Jourdain, Christopher Bishopp, and David Williams, disbanded soldiers of Sir Robert Byron's company.—Arrears.—26 August 1663.

James Grace.—Permission to proceed against John Locke, of the Guard, in connexion with possession of land at Colmanstown, in the county of Dublin.—25 August 1663.

Charles Meredith, Cornett.—Arrears due for service in Earl of Donegal's troop.—27 August 1663.

Thomas Hooper, a disbanded soldier of Earl of Drogheda's troop.—Arrears.—18 August 1663.

Henry Rotchford, of Kilbride, Esquire.—Recovery of a fowling piece seized by some of Colonel Howard's troop.—28 August 1663.

Sir Richard Lane, Baronet.—Custodiam of lands in counties of Galway, Roscommon, and Mayo.—22 August 1663.

Thomas Coffy.—“Whereas his sacred Majestic that now is, hath, in his Princely zeale and for the advancement of religion and incouragement of the clergie in the kingdome of Ireland, been graciously pleased to grant that all improprie retories, vicarages, and tythes as are vested in the Crowne by the attainer of any person or persons convicted of Rebellion, and not to be restored to their former estates, should be conferred on the present incumbents to which the[y] belongeth as may appeare by His Majesties letter hereunto annexed. And whereas a third part of the tythes, great and small, in the territory of Fercall, in the King's countie, doe belong to the respective heires of Lucan for ever, but are now forfeited to his Majestic by the attainer of the present heire thereof, namely, Patrick Sarsfield, of late declared nacent; and that the petitioner is now resident incumbent of Fercall aforesaid and hath noe other spirituall promotion but the vicariall tythes of

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

the same. He most humbly prayeth your Grace may be pleased to confirme him the benefit of his Majesties said letter by investing the petitioner in the said forfeited tythes. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 28 August 1663.

"Lett this petition and the annexed copy of his Majesties letters bee presented unto vs att our next sitting att the Councell Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order given therevpon as shalbe thought fitt.

"ORMONDE."

William Fitzgerald, Esquire.—"That whereas your petitioner hath not long since [been] declared Innocent by his Majesties Commissioners appointed for putting in execution the Act for Settlement of Ireland, and pursuant thereunto was restored as an Innocent Papist to his estate; and whereas much of your petitioners estate was in hands and possession of Jepson and Thompson, who of late were executed for the late horrid Plott; and [the S]heriffes of the severall counties where their estates lay having seised vpon what estates they had, both in stocke . . . [fo]r the vse of his Majestie, your petitioner is like to . . . the said Act of Settlement affords to . . . the arrears of rent that are due to . . . for their enjoyment of his said est[ate] since the putting in his clayne before the Commissioners vnlesse herein relieved by your Grace. Now, forasmuch as it hath alwayes been expressed by his Majestie as his real intention, as well as [by] the word of the said Act of Settlement, that noe Innocent should be prejudiced in nor obstructed from the enjoyment of his full and just right, vpon any account whatsoever, your petitioners humble request is that your Grace would be pleased (in consideration of the great expence he hath bene att in the Courte of Claymes before the said Commissioners) to grant your order to the severall Sherriffes of the severall counties of Eastmeath and Westmeath, wherein their said stocke hath been seized on, and where your petitioners said estate lyeth which they have hitherto enjoyed, to pay unto your petitioner or his assignes what arrears [are] due unto your petitioner untill May last out of the said lands of your petitioners that were in their possession. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 25 August 1663.

"Wee pray his Majesties Attorney Generall to consider of this petition, and to certify vs what he shall conceive fitt to be done therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

John Mitchell.—Certificate respecting allowance for collection of Pole-money in King's County.—28 August 1663.

William Talbott.—"That whereas your petitioner being outlawed of High Treason did in Easter Terme last gratis render his [body] in his Majesties Court of Cheife Place and was committed to the Marshalsey of the Four Courts; and afterwards being brought to the barr of the said Court and demanded what he could say for himselfe why execution should not be awarded against him, he pleaded to the inditement whereupon the said outlawery was groundd; and his plea being accepted and entred of record and councill assigned him according to law, he became an humble suiter under the said Court to be bailed, and his Majesties Attorney generall denying to consent thereunto, was not bailed. Forasmuch as your petitioner by his long imprisonment hath contracted severall diseases and is like to perish and starve for want of meanes; hee therefore most humbly prayeth your Grace to be pleased to give order for bailing your petitioner to enable him to prosecute the said plea. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 26 August 1663.

"Wee pray your very good Lord, the Lord Baron of Santry, Lord Cheife Justice of His Majesties Court of Cheife Place, to consider of this petition, and to certify vs what his Lordship shall conceive fitt to be done therevpon.

"ORMONDE."

Christopher Arndell, Captain, formerly of Colonel Edmond Wyndham's regiment.—Office of landwaiter under the Commissioners of Customs.—23 August 1663.

Ann, Marchioness of Clauncarde.—"That the petitioner, being adjudged Innocent by the Court of Claymes, is provided for, by the Act of Settlement, to haue the rents and profitts of the land claimed by and decreed for her, since the exhibiting of her clayme to the said Court of Claymes. That, among otherlands, the castle, towne, and lands of Cloghnover, lying in the barrony of Clare, in the county of Galway, was claymed by the petitioner in October, 1662, and to her as an Innocent decreed; that the last Allhallantide and May rent of the said castle, towne, and lands of Cloghnover, amounting to one hundred pounds sterling, was had, taken, and received by William Flanigan, Daniell Morish, William Darkins, and Thomas Rellish, who, being troopers of Sir Oliver St. George's troope, cannot, without your Graces lycence, be sued by the petitioner. Shce doth therefore humbly pray your Grace to be pleased to give order that the petitioner be at libertie to sue the said William Flanigan, Daniell Morish, William Darkins, and Thomas Rellish. And, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 29 August 1663.

"The persons aboue named, against whom the petitioner doth complaine, are required to give the petitioner satisfaction concerning the matter aboue mentioned as farr as the same doth concerne every of them respectively, or within tenn dayes after sight or notice hereof to shew vs sufficient cause why the petitioner should not bee att libertie to take her remedy against them by due course of law.

"ORMONDE."

John Mandivill, of Ballybridges, co. Meath, employed by Sir Theophilus Jones to serve processes in the counties of Meath, Louth, and Kildare.—Recovery of horses from Cornet Randal Moore taken from petitioner to obstruct him in the discharge of his duty.—3 September 1663.

William Malone, of Trim, inn-keeper.—Discharge from custody of pusuivant on compounding with Mathew Cary, of Navan.—25 August 1663.

James Symkins, London, pewterer.—Recovery of debt from John Seawell of the Guard of Battelaxes.—2 September 1663.

Edward Gofort, a disbanded trumpeter of Sir Thomas Armstrong's troop.—Arrears.—26 August 1663.

Conly Kegan, in custody for contempt.—Leave to put in his answer to petition of Edward Nicolls and John Partridge, and remission of supposed contempt for delay in answering same.—2 September 1663.

Joshua Hobart, of Rosse.—"That the petitioner hath already twelue weekes been a close prisoner, in which tyme he hath sold and spent what he had saleable in the world; he hath a family of small children in the country, destitute of reliefe, and is himselfe vterly reduced to a perishing and starveing condicon in prison; yett is not guilty of any crime against his Majesties peace and good government, and hath formerly to your Grace humbly declared his ignorance and his abhorrence of the late traiterous conspiracy in this kingdome and begged your Graces reliefe from his present miserys, who, in compassion to your petitioner, did the last week refer it to his Majesties Attorny Generall to informe your Grace of the petitioner[s] case, who hath signified to your petitioners friends that he hath accordingly made it knowne to your Grace; and your petitioner hearing of your Graces intended progress into the country, and your petitioner being without all hope of helpe but only in your Graces favour and further pleasure herein signified: Wherevpon he humbly begs that your Grace would either thinke fitt to restore [him] to his former libertie, or that he might be admitted to give security to answere whatever is or may be objected against him; or otherwise, if your [Grace] shall be pleased to grant him your favourable leave, in one monthes tyme to remove himselfe and his family into so[m]e other part of the world, where he might through God's blesseinge in some measure supply the wants of his ruined family, etc.

"Dublin Castle, 3 September 1663.

"The petitioner gining bond to the Clerke of the Councell, to his Majesties vse, of the penalty of five hundred pounds with sufficient security, conditioned that he shall within one month after he shall be discharged out of the custody of the Serjeant att Armes, where he now remaines, (vynd and weather serveing,) depart [out] of this kingdome, after his departure [discharge] as aforesaid, [shall] personally appeare before vs or other Cheife Governour or Governours here for the tyme being; and after such his appearance shall not depart without speciall licence of vs or other Cheife Governour or Governours aforesaid; and vpon certificate of the said Clerke of the Councell of the petitioners . . . the said Sargeant att Armes is to sett him att [liberty, he paying the] fees.

"ORMONDE"

John Hodiern, a disbanded soldier of Lord Colconey's troop.—Arrears.—27 August 1663.

Mary Cox, widow.—Recovery of debts from soldiers of Lord Shannon and Sir Henry Tichborne's troops.—1 September 1663.

John Bambricke.—Discharge from custody, the desired satisfaction being made to Edward Nicholls and John Partridge.—1 September 1663.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

William Flood, a disbanded soldier.—Arrears due for service in Sir Nicholas Purdon and Shannon's troops.—3 September 1663.

James Brackenbury, a disbanded soldier of Lord Collooney's troop.—Arrears.—22 August 1663.

Thomas Tirrell.—Restoration of fusée seized by Quarter Master Aghamote, of Sir Arthur Forbes' troop, on search for arms in Mullingar; and licence to keep a fowling-piece.—29 August.

Margaret Waddy, widow.—Payment of her late husband's arrears for service in Earl of Kildare's troop.—26 August 1663.

James Roch, Captain.—Certificate on petition relative to clauses, etc., for insertion in Letters Patent.—4 September 1663.

Daniel Redman, Captain, for himself and two servants.—Arrears for service in command of troop, previously to his being superseded by Captain Berty.—4 September 1663.

Thomas Richardson.—Leave to implead Richard Phillips, Deputy Muster Master, for obtaining from the 1649 Commissioners a demise of lands near Finglas, thereby ignoring right of petitioner from whom he had leased same.—31 August 1663.

John Boswell.—“That your suppliant being honored in being appointed your Grace's Receiver of 360*l*. in the county of Wicklo, as part of the 30,000*l*. granted to your Grace by Act of Parliament, paid thereof the sum of 355*l*. to Sir Daniell Bellingham, or his order, by your Grace's appointment; and being demanded the remainder by the Clarke of Sir Henry Tichborn's troop, who pretended an assignment for the said [sum] offered to pay him the summe due vpon sight in Dublin, where the mony was disposed for that vse, to be paid to Sir Daniell Bellingham, desiring the deduction of 20*s*. returned by the High Constable of barrony of Newcastle as insolvent there, which was by the Act to be re-aplotted by the Commissioners, and ten shillings due by persons removed from one barrony to another since the applotment, which with small trouble would haue bene paid; which sum of thirty shillings your petitioner is not himselfe lyable to pay, haueing not received it. Notwithstanding, one John Machell and Thomas Southwicke, with two others of the said troop (whose names are yett vnkowne to your Grace's petitioner), vpon your petitioners being in Dublin, came in a forcible manner to your petitioners habitation, and refusing to shew any orders or to tell their names, but vseing opprobrious language against your petitioner, to the terror of your petitioners wife and family, forcibly distrained six bullockes and a cow of your petitioners goods, and drew them to Wickelo, where they haue detained them for the said remaineing summe of five pounds. Forasmuch therefore as such distraining of your petitioner is received to be contrary to the knowne lawes of this kingdom, whereby wee enjoy the effects of his Majesties blessed Government, your petitioner being not accomptant to the said persons, yett offering to the clerke of the said troop the whole monys received by him, as aforesaid, which would complete the said 360*l*., except the said [sum] which alsoe in a little tyme would haue bene gotten in, your Grace's petitioner most humbly implores your Grace's justice on the said John Machell and Thomas Southwicke, with their associates when knowne, as [by] your Grace for the prevention of the like illegal actions for the future shall be thought fitt, [and that you will be gracious]ly pleased to permitt your petitioner to take his remedy [at law against] the said persons. And, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 7 September 1663.

“We pray Sir Henry Tichborne, knight, Marshall of his Majesties army, to examine the matter within mentioned, and to compose the difference by consent if [he] can, or else to certify vs the state thereof, and therevpon we shall give such further order as shall be fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Sir Ullicke Bourke, Knight and Barronet.—“That your petitioner, in obedience to your Graces proclamation, makes noe vse of any fire armes. He humbly prayeth that your Grace may licence him to imploy a fowler for his owne vse.

“Dublin Castle, 8 September, 1663.

“Wee are pleased to grant the petitioner licence to imploy a fowler for his owne vse as is aboue desired, whereof all persons whom it may concerne are to take notice.

“ORMONDE.”

Christopher Arundell, formerly captain in Colonel Edmond Wyndham's regiment.—Office of landwaiter at Drogheda, under Commissioners of Customs.—8 September 1663

Thomas Jenkinson, a disbanded soldier of Sir Arthur Forbes' troop.—Arrears.—3 September 1663.

Edward Braxton, formerly of the army in Ireland, who was wounded at the seige of Rathjaines while serving in Ormonde's Life-Guard.—Employment as waiter under Commissioners of Customs, or admission into Lord Colooney's troop.—7 September 1663.

George Rawdon, Esquire.—Custodiam of lands of Lispopell, co. Dublin, and revocation of custodiam granted to Mrs. Jane Barnewell.—9 September 1663.

Thomas Brunerton, soldier.—Pay for service from date of discharge to time of being newly mustered.—8 September 1663.

Replication of Henry Warren, Esquire, plaintiff, to the answer of Patrick Sarsfield, Esquire, defendant.—“The said repliant, saueing to himselfe all benefit of exceptions that may be taken to defendants answere, by way of replication saith in all things as in and by his petition he hath sett forth; and further replying saith that the estate of Peter Sarsfield, father to the said defendant, was forfeited to his late Majesty by the said Peters outlawry, and the remainder in taile by the defendants nocoency dureing his naturall life. And this repliant saith that in case the defendant hath surreptitiously obtained any pardon or letters patents from his Majesty of the premisses in question, yett the same are declared to be voide in law by the Act of the 17 Caroli, as the repliant is advised by his conncell, and the defendant ought not to have any benefit by them; and this repliant further saith that since the said pardon and letters patents obtained (if any such there be), the defendant hath waived all benefit thereof and putt in his clayme before the Commissioners and insisted vpon his innocency onely, and is by the Court of Claymes adiudged nocent, and by the Act of Settlement all such judgments are declared to be effectual to all intents and specially against the partie soe adiudged and are confirmed by the said Act to be as final settlements; soe as this repliant doth humbly conceaue and is advised by his Conncell that the defendant is absolutely barred and concluded from pleading any matter or clause in the said Act against his Majesty, it being declared by the said Act that such judgements shalbe fynall against all persons whatsoever, anything in the said Act contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and further this repliant saith that vpon this repliant's lease a valuable rent is to be reserved to his Majesty, whereas now his Majesty is not answered any rent at all; and therefore this repliant humbly prayeth your Grace to afford him the benefit of his Majesties said letters, as in and by his petition he hath formerly prayed, whereby his Majesties revenew may be the better advanced and his first command to you performed without that, that [any] matter or thing, or matteriall in the said answere contained . . . matters, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 8 [September] 1663.

“The Clerke of the Council is to prese[n]t vnto vs att our next sitting att] the Councill Board, the petition, answere and replication . . . s annexed, concerning this matter where the sam[e] shall be taken into consideration [and such] further order given therevpon as shalbe tho[ught] fitt.”

[“ORMONDE.”]

Frizweed Leigh, widow.—“May it please your Grace, I haue considered of the matter vnto mee referred concerning the petitioner, and I humbly certify your Grace that I conceive your Grace may issue a warrant to some of his Majesties Councill for drawing a fiant to be passed vnder the Great Scale for granting all and singular the said goods and chattles in specie as is desired, and I humbly conceive it wilbe necessary that a clause be inserted in the said Patent of Exoneracion to the Sherriffe vpon his accompt in the Exchequer. All which I humbly submitt to your Graces consideration.—24 August 1663.

“WILLIAM DOMVILE.”

“Dublin Castle, 8 September 1663.

“Vpon consideration of the above certificate of his Majesties Attorney Generall, wee are pleased and doe order and require that the said Attorney or his Majesties Sollicitor Generall forthwith draw vpp a fiant in due forme of law, containinge a grant from his Majesty vnto the petitioner of all and singular the goods and chattles in specie mencioned in the within petition, which did lately belonge to Alexander Jepson attainted and executed for treason, inserting in the said grant such a clause of exoneracion as in the said certificate is mencioned, and such other clauses as in like cases are vsuall, and the same fairly ingrossed in parchment vnder their or one of their hands to send vnto vs to be further passed as appertaineth.

“ORMONDE.”

James Dillon.—“That your petitioner haueing, in pursuance of the decree of the late commissioners for adjudication of claymes and qualificacion of the Irish in Connaght, assigned vnto him a porcion of lands in the county of Mayo of the estate and inheritance of Thomas, Lord Dillon, Viscount Costello . . . after the assignement made vnto your petitioner thereof . . . vertue of severall executions issued out of the . . . behalfe of the Lord Viscount Ranellagh . . . hath noe manner of satisfaction for . . . [whe]reof he hath been dispossessed in the tyme of the late vsurped government. That the said Lord Viscount Dillon cominge to a tryall before the Right Honorable the Commissioners for executing the Act for the Settlement of Ireland, vpon his proviso in the said Act the said lands formerly assigned vnto your petitioner were by the judgement of that Court decreed vnto the said Lord Dillon without any previous reprizall vnto your petitioner, or any other transplanted person. See it is, may it please your Grace, that one Laurence Cruise, the son of Christopher Cruise, late of the Nale and Cruicestowne, in the counties of Meath and Dublin, who had a considerable porcion of your petitioners former estate assigned vnto him in Connaght, hath been lately adidged an innocent by the said Commissioners of the Court of Claymes and restored to the most part of those lands for which his father, Christopher Cruise, hath gotten the lands assigned vnto him in Connaght. The premisses considered, and inasmuch as the transplanted persons who are dispossessed of the Lord Viscount Dillons estate are to be reprized of the first lands that shall [come] into his Majesties hands, your petitioner humbly prayeth that your Grace may be pleased to order that the petitioner may have a custodiam of the lands mentioned in the schedule herevnto annexed, being formerly assigned vnto the said Christopher Cruise and the said Laurence his son, being restored as aforesaid; and the rather that your petitioners father, Lucas Dillon, hath lived under the government of the late Lord Marquesse of Clanrickard vntill he died about the beginning of the late Rebellion in Ireland, your petitioner being then an infant; which granted your [petitioner will] pray, etc. A schedule of the lands . . . the halfe Barrony of Killga . . . Cloondalee alias . . . one quarter 150 [acres] Ballyhowne one . . . Carrownganue . . .

“Dublin Castle, 9 September 1663.

“If it shall appeare vnto our very good, Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, by certificate that the within named Laurence Cruise is possesst of his former estate, and that the lands within mentioned are in his Majesties dispose and not already granted to any other, wee pray and require their Lordships to cause a custodiam of the said lands to issue vnto the petitioner to continue during his Majesties pleasure att such rent as they shall thinke fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Richard Smith, Tailor.—Recovery of money due by B. Piercy Smyth, Wm. Cocke, Thomas Wilson, Francis Bleades, Matthew Workeman, Thomas Hanlery, Miles Pollard, Wm. Cole, belonging to the army.—21 August 1663.

Edward Dinham, Doctor.—Payment of arrears as previously ordered.—9 September 1663.

Mark Browne, of Galway, merchant.—“That your suppliant haueing alwayes been well affected towards the English interest, government, and nation, hath in pursuance thereof manifest[ed] his dutifull obedience to his sacred Majesty by bringing faithfully the Customes of the towne of Galloway the pronoune thereof to your Graces disposition, notwithstanding the contrivances of all malevolent oposers, and by rendering . . . [ser]vices to the vtmost of his power to forw[ard] . . . desires, as may appeare by the . . . mnor and other sufficient evidences . . . [expe]lled out of the said towne (where hee enjoyed a competent estate) and alsoe an estate in the country, and never had yett satisfaction for either of them: being soe deprived of his livelyhood by the late vsurped powers and forced to leade a retired sad life in the country, in leiw of driving considerable trade, to the increase of his Majesties revenue and customes. May it therefore please your Grace to grant him speciall licence to live within the said towne together with his family and servants, and to exercise his trade as he did before. And, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 8 September 1663.

“Lett the petitioner apply himself to our very good Lord, the Lord President, or, in his Lordships absence, to the Vice President of the Province of Connaght, to whome wee referre it, to doe in this matter as either of them shall thinke fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

John Lyndon.—Custodiam of lands in counties of Galway and Kilkenny, in exchange for one of lands in Kerry.—9 September 1663.

Ralph Wallis, to stay Theobald Dillon, son and heir of Sir Luke Dillon, of the co. Roscommon, from entering into possession of his estate, pending consideration of petitioner's claim against him.—8 September 1663.

Piers Butler, Baron Dunboyne.—Custodiam of chief rents, etc., of lands in counties of Meath and Tipperary, restored to ancient proprietors and formerly held as of the manors of Dunboyne and Killeynane; also rents arising from lands which were petitioner's ancient inheritance, and are now at his Majesty's disposal.—9 September 1663. [MS. torn.]

Richard Elton, a reduced member of the army.—Re-admission to Earl of Anglesey's troop.—9 September 1663.

William Dodson.—“That haueing seene the copy of a scurrilous paper styled answere of Major Arthur Dillon to the unjust bill of complaint of your petitioner, which petitioner cannot esteeme worth answering; and for as much as the said Arthur Dillon, which your petitioner affirme[s] and none but the said Major could deny, is indebted a considerable summe for arrears of rent due from him for certaine lands by him held in the county of Monaghan, the moyty of the full rents, arrears of rents, and proffitt of which lands are, by his Majestie writt of sequestration out of the Chancery, seized and sequestred, and, by order of the said Courte, directed to be paid to the petitioner or his order; the shewing of which order to the said Major, although it raised his passion vnto the height of an abuse, yett your petitioner noe wayes declining your Graces justice, but vnwilling to give your Grace trouble with soe frivolous a matter, and for that the said Major intends nothing more then to delay payment of his rent due. Your petitioner therefore thinks f'it onely to renew his peticion, most humbly praying as former[ly] that your Grace wilbe favourably pleased to give licence [tha't] you[r] [petitioner may] take his remedy att law against the said Maj[or] Dillon for th[at] abuse offered. And, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 8 September 1663.

“Vpon consideration of this peticion, wee are pleased to leave the petitioner att libertie to take his remedy against the aboue named Major Arthur Dillon by due course of law.

“ORMONDE.”

George Russell.—Custodiam of lands in Mayo.—1 September 1663.

Richard Berty, Captain.—Certificate from Commissioners of Customs on petition relative to non-payment of rent for farming of excise of Wicklow, Kildare, and Kilkenny counties by Captain Salt, and recommending that he be proceeded against.—3 September 1663.

John Avery, of Dublin, gentleman.—Appointment as Warehousekeeper, Custom House, Dublin.—8 September 1663.

Peter Holmes and Bridget Holmes, alias Usher, Administrators of the last will and testament of Robert Vsher, the elder, late of Crumlin, gentleman.—“That your suppliants, as administrators vnto Robert Vsher aforesaid, are iustly intituled to an arreare of rent amounting to one hundred and sixty pounds sterling and vpwards, due out of the certaine howses and Tennis Court in St. John's Lane, Dublin, of which said howses and Tennis Court one Josias Beale and Barbara Beale alias Goulding, his wife, and Alice Goulding, Administrators of Richard Goulding, of the said city of Dublin, merchant, are now possesst by vertue of a decree obtained from the Commissioners of the Court of Claymes. Now forasmuch as the said Josias Beale is a member of his Majesties army and stands vpon that privilege, soe that your suppliants cannot implead him in any of his Majesties Courts of Justice for the said arreares without leave first obtained from your Grace in that behalfe. May it therefore please your Grace to give order that the [said] Josias Beale, etc., may be required forthwith to . . . [your suppliants the said arreares; otherwise that your suppliants may be li-cenced to take] their legal remedy against the said Beale by due course [of law for the] restoring of their said arreares.

“Dublin Castle, 12 October 1663.

“Josias Beale above mentioned is required to give the petitioners satisfaction for the arreares of rent aboue expressed, or within tenne dayes after sight or notice hereof to shew cause (if any he can) why the petitioners should not haue libertie to take their remedy by law, notwithstanding his military capacity.

“ORMONDE.”

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

John Leland and Michael Tisdall.—“That his Majesties manners in the county of Dublin (to witt) the manners of Newcastle, Esker, and Cromlin are att present and for divers yeares past have been voyd of a Seneschall, (who as often as a vacancy happened was appointed by his Majesties letters patents, and is now in his Majesties dispose) for want of whom the Kings rents and other rights and profitts due to his Majestie out of the said manners are concealed (if not altogether lost) to his Majesties prejudice. May it please your Grace to conferr the office of Seneschall of the said manners on your petitioners and the longer liver of them in such manner as it was granted to former Seneschalls, sufferers by the late Rebellion in this Kingdome. And, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 9 September 1663.
“His Majesties Attorney and Sollicitor Generall, or either of them, are hereby required forthwith to draw vp a fiant in due form of law containinge [a grant] from his Majestie, his heires and successors, of the office within mencioned unto the petitioners and the longer liver of them, in such manner as the said office hath been formerly granted to others and as by their petition is desired, inserting therein all such clauses as in like cases are vsuall, and the same fairely ingrossed in parchement to send vnto vs to be further passed as appertaineth.

“ORMONDE.”
James Cary, Clerk.—Presentation to incobyncey of Dunboynne, in lieu of Dr. John Gerner, with right to vicarial tithes.—21 Oct. 1663.

Dame Anne Develier, in behalf of her husband, Sir John Develier, Knight.—Custodiam of lands in counties of Wexford and Rosecommon.—21 October 1663.

Sir Arthur Forbes, on behalf of his troop.—“That by the assignement of Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Receiver Generall, your petitioners troop was assigned, in parte of three monthes pay determining in Aprill last, vpon Captaine George Magee, Receiver of your Graces money in the county of Westmeath, the summe of 158*l*. 2*s*. 7*d*., vpon which assignement your petitioner received only 75*l*. That since the said Magee absenting himselfe ther's noe hope for receipt of the residue. Wherefore your petitioner doth humbly pray that a solvent assignment may be given by Sir Daniell Bellingham, or his Deputy, for reliefe of your petitioners troop. And hee shall pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 21 October 1663.
“Wee referr this petition to Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, Deputy Receiver Generall, to informe himselfe concerning the petitioners, allegations, and certify unto us what hee shall finde and conceine fitt to bee done for the petitioner's reliefe.

“ORMONDE.”
Theobald, Viscount Bourke of Mayo, one of the 36 persons named in the Declaration of Charles II. for restoration to their estates.—Permission to enjoy portions of his old estates in Mayo now at his Majesty's disposal.—21 October 1663.

Dame Eleanor O'Neill, wife of Sir Henry O'Neill, Knight.—“That his Majestie, out of the sence hee had of the said Sir Henry his condition, was graciously pleased to signify his pleasure to your Grace, by his royall letters of the 26th of August, that the said Sir Henry should bee restored at least unto that parte of his estate in the hands of the Lord Massareen which shall appaere to bee overplus to his Lordships Adventure in the Barrony of Massareen; and that the pention of eight hundred pounds per annum formerly allowed to the said Sir Henry should bee continued to bee paid unto him as by his Majesties said letters herewith presented to your Grace more att large appareth. Wherefore and inasmuch as the said Sir Henry by his Counceill hath already and is still ready to make appaere that the said Lord Massareen, by the former admeasurment, hath 5,437 acres overplus of his Adventure in the said Barrony of Massareen, and that much more will appaere if the lands bee newly admeasured, which the said Sir Henry humbly offereth to bee at the charge of. Shee humbly prayeth your Grace to give order for restoring the said Sir Henry to so much of his estate in the said barrony as the said Lord Massareen hath overplus there and that your Grace will be pleased to issue warrant for payment of what is already due of the said pention pursuant to his Majesties letter, her husband and shee being reduced to a sadd condition by the great expence of this snite and the recovery of much of the lands in Connaght by the Earle of Clarickard and others, which shee humbly prayeth your Grace to consider of. And shee will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 20 October 1663.
“Lett this petition and his Majesties letters therein mentioned bee presented vnto vs att our next sitting at the Counceill Board, where the same shall bee, taken into consideration, and such further order giuen therevpon as shall be thought fitt.

“ORMONDE.”
Sir John Bourke, Knight.—Custodiam of lands of Lord Galmoy in Connaght and Clare, notwithstanding order for same granted to Sir William Aston and Sir William Davis.—22 October 1663.

Thomas, Lord Viscount Dillon of Costellow and Galeng.—“That whereas your petitioner was lately decreed to bee restored to his estate, but is made lyable to so high a quitt rent payable to his Majesties Exchequer as the whole value of the estate will hardly answere that charge; whereas hee humbly conceiveth his Majestie did intend hee should hould his estate free from any new charge, wherein hee hopeth his Majestie will declare his royall pleasure. Wherefore hee humbly prayeth your Grace to giue order to the Lord Chief Barron, and other the Barrons and Officers of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, not to issue processe for the quitt rents aforesaid till further order, that hee may haue competent time to make his humble addresse to his Majestie. And hee will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 22 October 1663.
“Vpon consideration of this petition, wee thinke fitt and doe order that they levying of the quitt rent aboue mentioned bee respited untill the end of the next Hillary terme whereof as well the Barrons as all his Majesties Officers of the Court of the Exchequer whom it may concerne are to take notice and to forbear issuing any processe for the said quitt rent during the said time.

“ORMONDE.”
Kimbroe Phiphoe, widow.—“That in March, 1662, your petitioner exhibited a petition to your Grace, setting forth that in the late rebellion severall houses and walls about St. Mary's Abby were demolished in drawing the lines and making bullworkes and her grounds opened, etc., in consideration whereof your Grace granted her three hundred pounds out of the arrears of the Poll money of the clergy. That shee hath not received any part of the said money; prays your Grace to order her some other and more certaine way of payment of the said money. And shee will pray, etc.

“Dublin Castle, 22 October 1663.
“Lett this petition bee presented unto us at our next sitting at the Counceill Board, where the same shall be taken into consideration, and such further order giuen thereupon as shall be thought fitt.

“ORMONDE.”
John Jackman.—Arrears.—21 October 1663.
Theobald, Earl of Carlingford.—To stay process for quitt-rent on his restored lands, to enable him to address his Majesty for an abatement.—26 October 1663.

Laurence Thornton, Captain.—Arrears due to himself and his son for service as supernumeraries in Sir Theophilus Jones's troop.—29 June 1663.

James Travers.—Leave for Lieutenant Nicholas Hovenden, of Colonel Buller's company stationed at Clonmel, to attend as witness for petitioner at Dublin.—2 November 1663.

Samuel Corbett, a released prisoner bound to appear at Cork in six days.—Discharge of his bonds, or that he be bound to appear in Wexford county instead of at Cork.—9 November 1663.

William Constable, Captain, Plaintiff; Lieutenant Col. John Bowmer, defendant.—Affidavit of service of order on defendant.—16 November 1663.

Mary Griffith, widow.—Recovery of rent for a house in Wicklow from Thomas Nest, of Sir Henry Tichborne's troop, or possession of same.—1 December 1663.

Erasmus Smyth, Esquire.—That your petitioner often appeared before your Grace vpon your orders for hearing and examining the matter of fact in difference betweene Sir John Stephens, Knight, and your petitioner, according to the tenor of his Majesties letters; but your Grace's judgement in the case hath hitherto been suspended by the pleadings of Sir John's counceill that your petitioner was not in his proper place, which was likewise my Lord Chancellors judgement before your Grace and vpon your Grace's order of reference where the pleadings of Sir John's counceill was the same that it was most proper to be heard and determined by his Majesties Commissioners att the Court of Claymes, which then your petitioner by his counceill declined, because the said Commissioners hath often refused to adjudge such cases before the tyme of Innocency was past; but that being efflux, that your petitioner might not further trouble your Grace, he made his application to the said Commissioners to be restored to his possessions, pursuant to the Act of Settlement, but Sir John Stephens by his counceill, contrary to their former pleadings before your Grace, insisted that it was before

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF
ORMONDE.

your Grace vpon his Majesties reference by his letters. Wherevpon the said Commissioners considering it was before your Grace, they declared that it was not fit for them to meddle with it without a reference from your Grace. Therefore may it please your Grace, the premisses considered, to heare and determine the said reference, or else to grant your Grace's order of reference to his Majesties said Commissioners to examine the matter referred to your Grace by his Majesties letter in behalfe of your petitioner; that the allegations therein being proved they may be impowered to restore your petitioner to his possessions, notwithstanding the patent, which his Majestie hath ordered to be revoked vpon the prooffe. And he shall pray, etc.

"ERASMUS SMYTH."

"Dublin Castle, 5 December 1663.

"This matter in the presence of both parties and their counsell haueing been judged proper for the determination of his Majesties Commissioners for putting in execution the Act of Settlement, wee leave the same to be determined by the said Commissioners according to the power by the Act given vnto them.

"ORMONDE."

Shane O'Shanaghane, convicted of manslaughter.—Pardon.—28 August 1663.

Ambrose Bodkin.—Permission to reside and trade in Galway, notwithstanding his being a Papist.—23 November 1663.

Isabel Lackie.—"That your supliant doth humbly render your Grace hearty thanks for your Graces great mercy extended unto her poore husband in giueing him so long a time of repentance for those his great offences which hee hath committed, that your suppliants husband by reason of the late distractions hee hath undergone is not as yet restored to his former understanding, whereby to haue a thorough feeling of his sadd condition which at present he is in. The premisses considered, your supliant humbly prayeth that your Grace would either bee pleased in commiseration to the sadd condition of your supliant's husband to spare his life vpon security giuen to remove out of his Majestie's dominions and not to returne againe without lycence, or otherwise that your Grace would bee pleased to mitigate the severity of the sentence against him, and would bee pleased to bestow the body of her poor husband when deceased whole and intire vpon your supliant, whereby hee might receive a Christian buriall. And shee shall pray, etc.

"Dublin Castle, the 12th December 1663.

"Vpon consideration of the within petition, wee are pleased so far to extend his Majesties mercie [unto] the petitioners husband, that the sentence giuen against him shall not bee further putt in execution than [as to] his life only and that all the other parts thereof bee forborne, and his body deliuered whole and intire to the petitioner or any other of his relations to bee interred; whereof wee require the Sherriffs of this cittie to take notice and obserue the same accordingly.

"ORMONDE."

1663-4.

William Cliffe and Robert Hunte.—Valuation of portions of the "lands of the church towne of Castleknock," held by petitioner, and which were included in the "New Deer Park, Dublin."—12 January 1663-4.

Nicholas Bodkin.—"That he lived in Galloway and traded by great, but was put out of the towne for being a Papist, to the prejudice of his Majesties revenue of Customs. Prays order to live in the said towne and trade by the great.

"Dublin Castle, 24 March 1663-4.

"Wee pray Sir Maurice Berkeley, Knight, Vice President of the Province of Connaught, to consider of [this] petition and to doe as he shall find cause in the matter therein mentioned.

"ORMONDE."

Sir George Lane, Knight, his Grace's Secretary, and Secretary for the affairs of the Army.—"Humbly sheweth that your petitioner hath ever since the 27th of July 1662 (the tyme of your Graces returne to the gouernment of this Kingdome) taken great paines and been at charges concerning the publike affaires of this Kingdome and of the Army, and other things for his Majesties service, about which hee hath been and daily is at continuall labour, by writinge letters and warrants, and hath also been at charges in providing and fitting roomes and other necessaries for his office, for all which hee hath not yet received any satisfaction or allowance, although Mathew Lock, Esquire, who preceded your petitioner as Secretary to the Army had twenty shillings per diem allowed him, and five shillings per diem for his clerk, dureing the tyme hee had that employment. The petitioner therefore humbly prayeth your Grace to take consideration thereof, and to bee pleased to giue order that hee may receaue such satisfaction as to your Graces wisdom shall hee thought fit.

"Dublin Castle, 11 January 1663-4.

"Referred vnto our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Baron of his Majesties Courte of Exchequer, Sir Paul Davys, Knight, his Majesties principall Secretary of State, and Sir James Ware, Knight, his Majesties Auditor Generall (all of his Majesties privy Councell) to consider of this petition, and of the petitioners paines and charges about the businesse therein mentioned, and to certify vs and the Councell what they sha[ll] conceiue reasonable to bee allowed to the petitioner for the same, that therevpon [our fur]ther order may bee given as shall appeare fitt.

"ORMONDE."

Jenkin Hopkins.—Re-appointment as landwaite by the Commissioners of Customs at Bullock or elsewhere in the port of Dublin.—9 January 1663-4.

Rice Morgan.—Arrears for service in Colonel Daniel Redman's troop.—7 January 1663-4.

Thomas Gilbert, a prisoner.—Pardon.—28 January 1663-4.

David Mullin, a condemned prisoner.—Pardon.—26 January 1663-4.

Jenkin Hopkins.—Employment of some kind, or to bee enabled to return to his native country.—15 February 1663-4.

George Russell.—Custodiam of lands in Mayo, notwithstanding controversy with Theobald, Viscount Mayo, as to possession of same.—9 March 1663-4.

Nicholas Darcy, the younger.—"That whereas your petitioner, haueing before his Majesties Commissioners appointed for executing the Act for Settlement of Ireland obtained a decree for the remainder of his Grandfathers estate in Ireland, did compound for the possession of the towne and lauds of Lynn and Rathduffe in the county of Westmeath, being a parcell of the said estate with Beatrix Browne, the relict and widow of Dennis Browne, who enjoyed the same for about ten yeares, by cullor of Adventurers interest and for her interest and possession therein soe deriued from the said Dennis did satisfy and pay unto her the sum of fifteene pounds sterling, with an engagement of indemnity for all arrears which your petitioner might pretend vnto, and accordingly possessed the same with the approbacion of Major Charles Boulton, with whom the said Beatrix did agree and give all the interest and pretencion which shee deriued from the said Dennis Browne in all the parcells claymed by Sir Jerom Alexander, Knight. Yett soe it is, that, vpon a suggestion that the said Dennis Browne, first discovered the said land (amongst other lands) to haue been cancelled and out of charge, and that the said Beatrix and her now husband, John Beavans, did give and grant the benefit of the said discovery vnto the said Sir Jerom Alexander, your Grace was pleased to give order vnto the Lord Cheife Barron of his Majesties Court of Exchequer, and the rest of the Barrons of that Court, [to] grant a custodiam of the premisses in Lynn . . . [la]nds vnto the said [Sir Jerom Alexander . . . and] compossion made by the said Beatrix . . . the same; and not knowing that the said Beatrix for all the rest of the lands in your Graces said order mencioned did agree and compound with the said Charles Boulton, and that hee accordingly possessed and received the profits of the same parcells, soe that your Graces said order was totally groundd vpon this information. In respect whereof and for that your petitioner hath gotten noe other parcell of his Grandfathers estate but the said two villages, and that he hath noe other thing for his subsistence or reliefe, and that, in case they bee in the Kings disposall, your petitioner by his Majesties gracions letters and mandates vnder his signe manall and privy signett is to be thereunto restored, as by the said letters appeareth. Your petitioner therefore humbly prayeth your Grace to bee pleased to give order for quieting your petitioners possession in the premisses vtill evicted by an Adventurer or soldier; and likewise to give order vnto the said Lord Cheife Barron, and the rest of the Barons of his Majesties said Courte of Exchequer, to forebare granting any custodiam of the said parcells vnto the said Jerom Alexander or any other vpon any such information.

"Dublin Castle, 27 February 1663.

"Lett this petition bee shewed to Sir Jerom Alexander, who is to make answer in writinge therevnto; and in the meane tyme and vtill wee shall . . . answer give our further order the custodiam . . .

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

MARQUIS
OF ORMONDE.

ordered to be granted unto the said [Sir Jerom Alexander] be stayd, whereof the Barrons [and all others hi]s Majesties officers whom it may [concerne are to take notice.

[“ORMONDE.”]

1664.

Nicholas Bayly and James Read.—To stay the granting to Theobald, Earl of Carlingford of lands in co. Louth held by petitioners under patent; and the hearing of their petition without prejudice from the Earl's demurrer.—29 March 1664.—Demurrer annexed.

Mathew Cary, gentleman, farmer of wine and strong-water licences in Meath.—Satisfaction from retailers without licence.—21 April 1664.

Sir Richard Lane, plaintiff; John Slater and William Antrobus, defendants.—Affidavit of service of order on defendants.—21 April 1664. [MS. torn.]

Nicholas Bolton.—To stay grant of lands in Meath to Sir Theophilus Jones in order to give petitioner time to prove his right of inheritance.—14 April 1664. [MS. torn.]

Edmond Galliard, Ensign.—Report recommending that Charles Belfore shall be left at liberty to proceed at law against petitioner.—10 April 1664.

Ann Sherlocke alias FitzGerald, widow.—“That the towne and lands of Darr, in the county of Kildare, were long before the Rebellion, vpon valuable consideration, settled vpon the petitioner, as a jointure during her life, vpon her intermarriage with Christopher Sherlocke, Esquire, father of Sir John Sherlocke, Knight, deceased, and [she] enjoyed the same accordingly till shee was expelled by the late vsurped power and shee inforced to transplant into Connaght and to accept of a decree of an inconsiderable parcell of the Lord Viscount Dillon of Costello his estate in the County of Roscommon, in lieu of her said jointure, which hath been since evicted by the Commissioners for putting in execution the Act of Settlement. Yett in regard such as accept decrees [f]or lands in Connaght or Clare in lieu of their former estates were postponed and not admitted to the tryall of their qualifications, your poore petitioner is att present left without remedy and destitute of all livelihood for the suportment of her selfe and distressed charge, and must inevitably perish vnlesse your Grace in mercy doe commiserate her; and for that her said jointure is now in his Majesties hands vndisposed of either to Adventurers, souldiers, or others, shee humbly prayeth that your Grace will be charitably pleased to plead the cause of the distressed widow and fatherlesse, and out of your wonted goodness either to restore her to her said jointure or to afford her competent maintenaunce as to your Grace will be thought fitt vntill her qualification be tryed, soe that shee and her languishing charge perish not for want.

“Dublin Castle, . . . [April], 1664.

“We shall not give any such order for the restoration of the] petitioner to her jointure as is desired . . . Barro]ns of his Majesties Court of Exchequer . . . the lands above mentioned be in his Majesties disposal or not already granted in custodiam to any other, and if soe then to grant her a custodiam thereof during his Majesties pleasure att such rent as they shall think fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Richard Nicholls, innkeeper, Kilcullen.—Recovery of debts due for quartering soldiers of the Life-Guards.—21 April 1664.

Thomas Wandesford.—Certificate on petition for payment of arrears, in lieu of insolvent assignment for saine on quit-rents of Cork.—1 April 1664.

Benjamin Crofts.—Recovery of debts from soldiers.—24 April 1664.

“The horsemen attending in Dublin for orders.—That there is two monthes pay due to your petitioners ending the 27 of March last, and whereas they are att great charges and expence in this city and cannot be trusted for any manner of accomodacion for man or horse without ready money, in respect their continuance here is vncertaine; that they are not able to waite till the warrants for the army be issued. They therefore most humbly beseech your Grace to grant your order to Sir Daniell Bellingham, Knight, that your petitioners may forthwith receive their pay in the futuro monthly, as others doe who quarters in this city, during their continuance vpon the said duty.

“Dublin Castle, 26 April 1664.

“Wee pray and require [our very good Lord, the Lord] Treasurer and Receiver Generall of Ireland . . . [forthw]ith to pay unto the petitioners . . . mentioned, and to continue . . . them with the rest . . . continuance v[pon] the said duty].

[“ORMONDE.”]

Teige Bryan, Colonel.—“That your petitioner served his Majesty vnder your Graces command in this kingdom since he was capable to bear armes vntill forced beyond sea into Flanders, where he had opportunity to render his service to his Majesty, wherein he faithfully served and zealously continued vntill his Majesties happy restauration, as may appeare by your Graces certificate. Since which time your petitioner, out of his constant and good affection to his Majesties service, cheerfully and voluntarily went in the first expedicion to Tangier, where he continued in his Majesties service during the Earle of Peterboroughs Government there; and being since returned into his native country, patiently attending his Majesties gracious favour in order to his restauration to his ancestors estate, is reduced to a low condicon and extremity for want of subsistence, and having discovered certaine concealements of lands hereafter mentioned (viz.) Lishineally, Arklone, Clonacrossy, Clonmiedue, Drom, and Barna, all lying in the county of Galloway in the halfe barony of Ballymoy and the parish of Boynagh being all small parcells in the hands of late transplanters restored to their estates, your petitioner therefore humbly prayeth that hee may have a custodiam of the said premisses for his present subsistence during his Majesties and your Graces pleasure.

“Dublin Castle, 26 April 1664.

[If it shall appeare] vnto our very good Lord, the Lord Cheife Barr[on] and the rest of the] Barrons of his Majesties Court of Exchequer [that the lands above mentioned are in his Majesties dispose, and [not granted to any] other, they are to cause a custodiam [thereof to be issued to the] petitioner, to continue during his [Majesties pleasure at such] rent as they shall thinke fitt.

“ORMONDE.”

Sir Robert Nugent, Baronet.—“That your petitioner liveth in remote partes in the province of Connaght, and in his travells feareth to be sett vpon by highway robbers, being without your Graces licence to carry any fire armes for his better defence. May it therefore please your Grace to grant vnto your petitioner your gracious passe for him and one servant to travell with his fire armes for his better security in according future inconvenience.

“Dublin Castle, 26 April 1664.

“Vpon consideracion of this petition wee are pleased to licence the petitioner to travell with fire armes for his defence, whereof all his Majesties officers and others whom it may concerne are to take notice.

“ORMONDE.”

Samuell Bull, agent for the Adventurers.—“That your petitioner lately obtained an order from your Grace and the Councell, bearing date the 25th of February last, requiring Colonel William Legg his agent, thereto sufficiently instructed and authorised, forthwith to appeare and answer your petitioners complaint on the behalfe of the Adventurers, which order was served on Mr. James Jones, agent for the said Collonell William Legg, the first day of this instant month of March, as may appeare by the annexed affidavit. Now, see it is, may it please your Grace that the said James Jones hath not onely hitherto omitted to appeare and answer to the complain[t] . . . [but] hath taken forth a warrant for . . . order to the passeing a Patent to the] . . . in the county of . . . security. M[ay] it therefore please your Grace] . . . effectually order to . . . all other Patents of the like nature, vntill the said Collonell Legg or his agent hath appeared and answered, in obedience to the aforesaid order, and vntill your Grace have fully heard the Adventurers by their Councell concerning the grants endeavoured to be passed by the said Collonell Legg, Charles Lord Viscount FitzHarding, and Sir Theophilus Jones, Knight.

“Dublin Castle, 26 April 1664.

“Wee pray his Majesties Attorney Generall to consider of this petition and to certify vs what he shall conceive fitt to be done therevpon.

“ORMONDE.”

Edward Simpson.—Praying for execution, within the Regalities of Tipperary, of judgment had in Dublin against Bryan Reynolds.—26 April 1664.

James Dorby, a disbanded serjeant of Captain Robert Drey's Company.—Arrears.—26 April 1664.

John Arthur.—Replication to answer of Cornet Francis Robinson, relative to recovery of debt.—26 April 1664.

Dominick Kervan, Captain.—“That hee served his Majestic as sea Captain since the year 1652, yett is kept out of some houses and tennements in Gallway; that he hath brought over his family from Nants in France (where hee was well settled) to Gallway; is desirous to live and trade in the towne; [prays] your Graces licence to live and trade in Gallway or else[where] in the Kingdome.

MARQUESS
OF
ORMONDE

"[Dublin] Castle, 26 Aprill 1664.

"[Wee are pleased to order that the petitioner may live and trade in the towne [of Gallway, as desired, without lett or hindrance; whereof [we require the Sheriffs and] the Mayor of that towne, and all others [concerned, to take notice and] to permitt him to live and trade there [he behaving himself as be]cometh a loyall subject.

"ORMONDE."

Replication of Sir Timothy Tirrell, Knight, and Dame Elizabeth his wife, to the answer of Mathew Harrison.—The repliants deny the defendant's answer, and assert that they have legal right to the lands mentioned in the petition and answer. [MS. decayed.]

On a future occasion I hope to lay before the Commission an account of other Petitions, addressed to the Duke of Ormonde, when Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, as well as to his distinguished son, Thomas, Earl of Ossory, who acted for a time as his Deputy in the Irish Government.

Villa Nova,
Blackrock, Dublin,
11 November, 1880.

JOHN T. GILBERT.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE EARL OF DENBIGH.

(Concluding Notice.)

In my last report upon the Earl of Denbigh's manuscripts I gave my reasons for believing that the interesting news letters of the reign of William III.* from which I made copious extracts were written for the information of Dykevelt, and were addressed to him under the name of M. Jean Frederick Molwat, Marchand, à la Haye. That address is on the first of the letters, and as most of them were endorsed in the same handwriting as others in Lord Denbigh's collection which are addressed to Dykevelt in his own name, I regarded that circumstance as a strong reason for believing that the merchant Molwat and the statesman Dykevelt were one and the same person. I was confirmed in that belief by a letter written by Sir William Trumbull to Dykevelt, in which, referring to a previous communication, he says that he had addressed it "à Mons^r Jean "Frederick, à la Haye, come vous m'aviez ordonné à "Londres." It was possible that Jean Frederick and Jean Frederick Molwat might be different persons, though hardly probable. Since then, however, I have come upon another letter of Sir William Trumbull's which leaves no doubt of the identity of the two Jean Fredericks. He writes in a postscript, "Je ne vous envoie pas celle, "cy par le paquet de Mons^r l'Embassad^r d'Hollande "pour des certain raisons dont je vous feray part une "autre fois; mais je me sert de l'adresse que m'aviez "donné à Londres pour Mons^r Jean Frederick Molwat, "&c." Extracts from both the letters to which I have just alluded will be found in my present report,† and I am happy to say that some additional letters of the same series have been found which Lord Denbigh has kindly permitted me to use.

Belonging to the same period are several letters addressed to Dykevelt, and later on there is a series of interesting letters addressed to Isabel Countess of Denbigh, amongst which are some from Lord Bolingbroke and the second Lady Bolingbroke. All are interesting whether they relate to political or social matters, and in the latter case they are occasionally illustrative of the manners of the time.

LETTERS TO LORD FEILDING.

A letter signed "Lurgelschem," to Viscount Feilding, Strashbourg, 27 August 1631, on his safe arrival at Genoa, and sending him news as to some military movements.

Jacob Westeley to the same, Maestricht, 15 Oct., O. S., 1632, asking Lord Feilding to use his influence with the Lord Treasurer, to obtain him "some fortune in y^e Kinges owne services."

The Marquess St Germain to the same. Turin, 4 March 1635. Complimentary.

Victor Amadeus, Vercell, 15 Feb. 1636, to the same, professing his satisfaction that his subjects should be employed in the King of England's service.

John Reeve, London, 17 June 1638, to the same, informing him of the result of his interview with secretaries Windebank and Cooke, upon despatches of Lord Feilding's relating to passages in his conduct as ambassador in Italy which had caused the King and Queen displeasure.

Part of a letter from John Reeve to Lord Feilding, dated "London, the 18 of October st. vet., 1637." "The King would needs see the picture intended for the Queen, which he did highly commend, but the Queene is the most pleased in the world, and so much overjoy'd at it (as your mother tells mee, for I was going to bring the horse to court whilst shee came in to see the picture in your mother's chamber), as she gave orders that immediately there should be a frame made and she would have it hung upp. In which interim I caus'd the horse to bee brought into the park, where my Lord Chamberlaine and your mother came first to see him, and after hee view'd him with a great deale of admiration hee swore a hundred times that hee was the best horse that ever was in England, saying that hee was a coursier of Naples, and worth 20 gennetts, and that if a merchant had brought him over and offer'd to sell him hee would willingly have given 300 pound for him. Immediately after the King came, and after hee had touch'd him in every part and sawe him walke and trot, hee did extremely admire him, and swore above 20 times y^e by God he was the finest and the bravest horse that ever hee sawe in his life, saying likewise, that hee was noe gennet, but a coursier, and better then any gennet, and going upp the parke stayes he say'd (that every body might heare him), By God there had not come so brave a horse into England in his memory, and Mr. Church telling him that he was bigger than any of those the King of Morocco had sent him, the King answered that they were not to bee compared with this; and my Lord Chamberlaine, rapping out halfe a dozen oaths, sayd that he was worth them all. The King gave order that the horse should be deliver'd to Mons^r Fontane, commanded Mr. Hamilton that an especial care should bee had of him, and for the groom he would take him into his consideration. So Mr. Church and I accompanied him to the Mewes, where immediately Mons^r Fonten^e order'd a groom and place for him, and instead of Gonzaga calls him Bay-Feilding. Mr. Church says that Mons^r Fonten^e is your great servant, and to continue him in his devotion and to advantage the reputation of your present, it were not amiss if you wrote unto him. * * * My lord Duke of Lenox is waiting at Dover for the Queen mother's arrivall there, which the contrary winds have kept her from these teine dayes. She is to bee lodg'd at St. Jameses, and great preparations making for her entertaime^t. As soone as she shall bee landed the King and Queene will meet her at Rochester to accompany her to London."

S. Scudamore to the same. Paris, Aug^t 1st, 1638. Preparations for the Queen's approaching confinement; measures taken for the raising of troops, &c.

Copies of two letters from Charles I. to the French King and Queen, 5 June 1639. Complimentary.

A letter dated 13th Feb^r '47, and endorsed in the handwriting of Basil, Earl of Denbigh. "A letter dated Feb. 1647, which gives an account of divers foreign transactions, & Cardinal Mazarin's civilities of opinion of Prince Rupert." On this point the letter says, "Prince Rupert hath gotten another commission yet to raise 100 horse for his life-guard, whom the Cardinal Mazarine esteemed very much, so that hee expressed lately these formal: C'est un des meilleurs et plus genereux Princes que j'ay cogneu."

A printed document entitled "The Petition of the officers and souldiers in the army under the command of his Excellency S^t Thomas Fairfax, with the severall votes of the Councell of War at Saïron-Walden, concerning the armies going into Ireland; with the names of every officer then present. Together with A Letter from His Excellency to the House of Commons, concerning the said petition. London, printed for Robert White, April 2, 1647."

A letter, dated November 1648, signed in cypher and not addressed, apparently written from some place in Holland. * * * There are within these 12 days past above 4 or 500 gentlemen officers [and] others gon over into England; and there are many more [going]

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

* Seventh Report of the Commission, Appendix, p. 197. † Page 18.

* For an account by the same writer of the Queen-mother's arrival see 6th Rep., Appendix 294.

EARL OF DENBIGH.EARL OF
DENBIGH.

over; and although as yet I can not learne out their designe, yet I am confident they have some thing of high concernment to act; for the greater ones have had several meetings at Delph, at Sir John Bates quarters, saying there are noe independents to tell tales there: and one Mr. Mustian, of Surry, neere Cobham, that is heere, told me that if once they could heere what newes of the Ile of Weight, off or on, that J. should heere of, a baker's dozen that would dance after C. Rainsborowe. I desire that some eminent gentlemen I formerly named may not slight my advertisement, for the Lord, whose knows how much I long after their safety, and adventure my selfe to find out what I can, knows my herte akes to heere of the desperate resolutions, backt wth damnable oathes, to be their executioners, though they perish with them. One Major Aldsworth and Capt. Turner, and Capt. Porter, that were one of them at Deale Castle, 2 under Sir William Compton at Colchester, told mee they would be hang'd if any one that were either of the Kings guard at Ile of Weight, or of the Councill of War upon Sir Charles Lucas were long lived. I therefore humbly beseech that these gentlemen would have a watchfull eye of themselves, and the Lord protect them from these bloody men."

A list of the members of the House of Commons for the Parl^t to be held at Westminster, "octavo die Maij, Anno regis Domini nostri Caroli Secundi, Angliæ, &c., decimo tertio annoque Domini 1661."

"Bordreau du Compte du Tresor Royal [of France] pour l'annee 1673, rendu par Mr Estienne Johanne^t S^r de Bartillat, commis à la charge dudit Tresor Royal. Au commencement de le estat un vray il y a une apostille ecrite de la main du Roij qu'il ne sera faite aucune autre recepte ny depense que celle conteneue audit Estat, pour justification de la recepte de ce compte led. S^r de Bartillat rapporte l'estat un vray arreste par le Roij en son conseil Royal des Finances D. 5^e jour de Decemb^r 1676." After the several items of income and expenditure are given the account ends thus:—

"Somme totale de la depence du present estat quatre vingt dix neuf millions quatre vingt dix neuf mille quatre vingtsix livres dix huit sols huit deniers. Et la recepte monte a quatre vingt dix huit millions sept cens quatre vingt douze mille cens dix huit livres deux deniers. Partant la despence excede la recepte de la somme de trois cens six mille cinq cens soixante huit livres dix huit sols un denier de la quelle somme ce comptable fera despence en son estat de l'année 1679, fait calculé et arretter en mon conseil Royal des finances tenu a St. Germain en Laye le 5^e jour de Decembre 1676, Signe Louis et plus bas d'Aligre Villeroij et plus bas Poucet et Puport et plus bas Colbert."

Sir Wm. Boswell to Lord Feilding, the Hague, 2^d July 1635. "These Indiau companies goe on prosperously, having since the taking of Parajiba (in the West Indies) reduced other forts and places of importance unto their obedience, for keeping and preservation whereof they are now sending over new forces. Sixe of the East Ind^a ships arrived lately at Amsterdam, esteemed worth 600,000 li. sterling. Three or 4 more are expected shortly from the W. Ind^a laden wth sugar."

From P. Morton to Lord Feilding, Turin, June 21 (n.s.) 1636. "My last unto your lord^{sh} brought with it the news of the Mar^k Toira, his death, which arrived heere at the closing of my letter: hee dyed of a muskett shott in the side, without speaking any word that was heard, after having overseene the planting of a batterie under a small castle called Fontanedo, some three miles from Romagnani, in which were not above fivete men; after som shott of canon they rendred themselves to the discretion of the Duke of Savoy, who exposed them not to the revenge and hott indignation of the French, but shutt them up in places where they might be secure from any such insult, as som were apt enough to have used, nor razed the castle, as was passionately desired from hence, but fortifyeth it & maketh it fitt for a good retraite. His High^{ness} is said to have wept at the news, and Madam heere expressed an extraordinarie passion. His bodie is buried at the Madonna di Monte, but the ceremonies of the funeral were performed at the Jesuites wth as much solemnitie as the condition of the tymes could permit."

From Sir Wm. Boswell to Lord Feilding, the Hague, 18 July 1636. "A gentleman of a very good family in Utrecht (named Renesse), but in service of the Spaniard, having passeport into these Provinces, and getting a riche Doctor of Physick (Van Galen) of that toune by sleight, under pretence of leading him to a patient, attempted to carry him perforce over unto the other side. But failing, and being taken, hath been condemned here (in the Haghe) to dye for it, all things being openly provided for his execution. But hee hath been reprieved and pardoned, at w^{ch} the States of Holland are much scandaliz'd, and would have severity used; whence there is yet no effect. . . . Piccolomini, an Imperiall Command^r, but in speciall service of the Spaniard, having lodged his forces a long tyme in the land of Juilliers (a neutral country), hath occasioned these States by law of retribution to demand contributions of them equall to what hee received in any kinde, and by accord wth deputies from those states (of Juilliers) came expressly hether to treat. These, are to have ^m 130 Rixd^{ers} (viz^t 225,000 florins), moitié at Michaelmas, moitié in January next. His Ma^{ties} late proclamation against fishing upon his coast without his speciall leave hath made this people to looke about, being still in a quandre how to proceed for enjoying the freedom they have used in fishing. And for present garde of their herring busses the Directo^{rs} have set forth 16 or 18 ships and fregats, but without com^{mission} (for ought appears) to use hostility or any opposition against His Ma^{ties} shippes."

Same to same, Hague, 4 August 1636, st. no. "There hath beene a shrewd report lately come from England of great misfortunes befallen the East Ind^a Comp^{ny}, as if the Portugese had sunck 5 or 6 of their ships richly laden, surprized Amboyna, and defeated most of their forces, w^{ch} the help of the natives by land, and (as some of these merchants jealousies suggest) of the English by sea; but whether in all or part tiew, the lame carrier must make cleare. The West Ind^a Comp^{ny} have been there 3 weeks, and are still in consultation for establishing their conq^t & aft^r in Brazil by some speedy supply. Few dayes since one of their shippes ready (as reported) to set sayle upon some speciall dessigne was by negligence fired and lost in the Texel."

Same to same, the Hague, 26 Nov. 1636, st. no. "Admiral Dorp contineweth in displeasure, commissaries being appointed for examination of his proceedings for justification whereof he produceth his Journalls, the charge upon him being—(1.) that he did not protect their herring busses from damage; (2.) that he encountered not the Span. Fleece, w^{ch} came into Dunkerque by his neglect; (3.) that to refresh his fleet he led it as far as Bologne, whereby Dunkerque and the coast of Flandres were left free for Admirall Collart and the Dunkerquers under him to come forth, w^{ch} hath since brought so much harme by the losse of 15 or 20 of their merchant ships from Bordeaux, and otherwise upon them yet. But the accusers w^{ch} should confront him being for the most part yet at sea, the buisenes is lay^d by. . . . Mr. Job Harby, a merch^t expresse from his Ma^{ties} to redeme his Jewells, empawned in these p^{ts}, is returned wth about half now S^r d^ays past, y^e rest for above ^m 25 st. lying still fettered wth some surcharge upon them of Phil. Calandrini's malice or mauvais menage. But so much as Cal had often given up in accom^p as all demandable for their ransom is left in hance in Am^{ster}dam, w^{ch} makes as much as may be for his Ma^{ties} honour in the buisenes. And I hope er' long all will find likewise y^e way home, no other place being prop^r for such incomparable ornam^{ts} of greatnes and honour."

From P. Morton to Lord Feilding, Turin, January 6, 1636-7, n. s. "Mr. Montague hath heere made himself the subject of a generall discourse concerning the change of his religion, by his going to masse as the rest doe, and I heare that since his coming out of England hee hath given account of his conscience to his father, and the reasons of his change."

From Sir William Boswell to Lord Feilding, the Hague, 2^d January 1636-7. "The wynter hitherto hath passed heere wth few publ. occurrences concerning foreigners, the consultation of the States having been espially about their owne domestique affairs; amongst w^{ch} one and a principal q^uest^{ion} hath been how to maintaine th^e expences of their warres, w^{ch} of late have been very exorbitant, or reduce the same unto more moderate termes. Wherein the States of Holland (as principally concerned because their quota to the generality comes unto 58 of the 100) have labour'd long, and been at point of cashiering or refusing to pay all their new comp^{ments} taken on since their last state of warre in 1627, making 22 or ^m 23 men. The Prince of Aur^{re}

(Orange) openly in their assembly hath presented reasons to the contrary, w^{ch} have been second^d by the consell of State & the French ambassad^r to the States G^{ra}ll, alledging respectively—(1.) That in case of such cassation there would be hazard of losing whatsoever they have taken in these 10 or 12 years past, being about 20 good townes and forts; (2) that the Spaniards would hold them to hard and unequal conditions of treaty and pacification; (3) that it is not in the power of one province (as Holland assumeth) to dismiss or to levie any trouppes without joinct consent of y^e rest; (4) that it would cause an open breach of their last treaty wth France, by vertue whereof that King hath declared and entred into open hostility wth Spayne; because upon occasion (if required) they were to come into the field with ^m foot & 5,000 horse effective, w^{ch} they would not be able to performe in case so great a part of their army shall be cashier'd, besides many other reasons to this end w^{ch} have hethereto had little effect, the resolution of these States as yet seeming to stand firme to cashier. The redresse of their sea affaires (w^{ch} of late are fallen into disorder and arriere) hath likewise taken them up a great p^t of their tyme, but is lately set up and ratified anew (for so much as concerns their men of warre) in a standing commission to reside heer at the Haghe wth the Prince of Aur^{re} (Orange) admirall general (as was prescribed and begun the last spring), according to w^{ch} 7 or 8 sayle not long since made towards the coast of Flandres. Upon Saturday ⁷/₇ Janⁱ some of the consell of State deputed by the States G^rall sett forward towards Frise, &c., for redressing (as pretended) disorders and defaults of that Province, as well in the govern^{mt} and cariage of affaires within themselves, as in paym^t of their quota & other respects towards the generality, to be there the 2nd curr^t. They have already written l^{res} into the provinces to furnish the moitié of their Leaguer-money by the 21st of March next, & other are said to be preparing to the officers to have their comp^{tes} compleat by the last of that month. Sr Albertus Joachimi is preparing againe ambassado^r for England, & very like within a month or five weeks will be upon his departure, their Extraordinary Beveren being to return (as their intention is . . . How the French King by l^{res}, and his ambassado^r by speech, hath moved the States G^rall to give the title of Highness (Altesse) in stead of Excell^{re} (as termino troppe volgare) unto the Prince of Orange, yor lrdship will see by the enclosed copies; for w^{ch} the States have given ordre to their greiffer, officers, and publ. ministers to style him accordingly upon all occasions. . . . My Lo. of Arundell's stay heer was not long, having had no other buisenes in this place but to see the Queen. And (1 leare) the 9th pres^t, st. no. his Lord^p came safe to court. The ship wherein his goods were fraughted (amongst w^{ch} are many thousands most excellent pieces of painting & Bookes w^{ch} his Lord^p gathered in his journey) is still at Rotterdam, kept in w^h the ice ever since his Lord^p parted, so great and fixt the frost hath hitherto been in these parts."

A letter from several of Lord Feilding's agents, February 1636-7 (Rome). "Some of the Cardinall of Savoy's gentlemen lately accompanying the Landsgrave of Hesia in masquerade in a coach were met by another filled likewise with mascheradi, the coachman whereof, being one of Card^l Antonies gentlemen, was desired by the Savoyards to retire and give them place, w^{ch} hee refusing, one of the Savoyards gave him a switch over the face. Card^l Antonie's gentleman on the other side dealt many blowes amongst the Savoyards with his whipp, whereof the Lausgrave wanted not his share, till in the end the Savoy^{ds} betooke themselves to certayne broomestaves w^{ch} they happened on neere the place, and began to bastonado the driver, whoe being founde by other of the Card^l Antonie's serv^{ts} so rudely handled, was reliev'd (relieved) by them coming with their swords drawne ag^t the Savoyards, who yielding to the disadvantage of the weapons retired, but return'd againe presently with about 100 in their company, all arm'd with pistols. Card^l Anthony had likewise gather[d] together about 2 or 3 hundred men arm'd, but before they met the Constable Colonna intercepted and took ap the business. The ground of this bandying betwixt the serv^{ts} of these twoe Card^{ls} is thought to proceede from the little correspondence w^{ch} hath pass'd betwene them since the Card^l of Savoy left the protectorshipp of Ffrance. The Emperor's ambassador hath taken an affront donc to his steward as intended purposely to his dishonor, a courtesan cloath'd in mans apparrell being taken out of the coach from him by the Sbirri, and publicly whipp[ed] about Rome, though both the Abm^t and the Card^l of Savoy did desire of the Card^l Barberin his release as a particular favour, and that amongst divers other courtesans soe habited or publicly seene that way, this only suffered that disgrace."

From Sir W. Boswell to Lord Fielding, the Hague, 11 Octr. 1638. Since my last upon Wednesday last the most remarkable thing we have had in this place is that the Queen Mother, upon Thursday morning between six & seven, departed from Hunslandcrdyck by coach to Vlaeding, thence in a yacht that privately wayted there unto Goeree, & so embarked in a States man of warre, a very slight vessell, without any provisions or accommodation, for England, the wind having been good all the night, and promising no other y^e morning. The very day before her departure herself made publick shew and professions unto many who visited her that her health being better shee begun to take pleasure in the place, and wished some companie there now and then to see her till shee come to the Haghe. Her counsellours likewise spake in the same language, one of her chiefs and nearest to her person having but the Tuesday before tould me many reasons which he bound wth an oath why shee could not stirre out of these parts within 5 or 6 weekes at least, though shee would, but vowed shee had no such intention. My conference having been with him wholly to divert her from such a voyage, as I had often done before both by him and other meanes, though in vayne, as I find by the successe. Upon Wednesday, after dinner, shee sent her coach xpresse for some of the States, and two of them being come between 9 & 10 at night, shee tould them her purpose to England, this being the first overture shee made therof, with some few civilities, which was all, wherewth they were certainly surprized, but no way troubled. Being thus gotten aboard at Goeree the wind turned upon a suddaine so contrary and tempestuous, as they were enforced to land againe & lye in a village not farre from the shore, where I pity to say what entertaynem^t shee had all that night, having neither her bed nor night clothes with her. The next day, Fryday last, shee came back to one Mons^r Heurliet's house in the Isle of the Briell, where shee is yet lodged, wind and weather are so opposite, w^{ch} disorder & trouble shee owes unto her concell^{ts} Coynent and Monsigil, who would so precipitally carry her into England to y^e prejudice of his Mat^{ie} af^{re} and her owne."

Sir William Hamilton to Lord Fielding, Rome, 15 June 1638. "Thee best Spanish gloves I can finde here are not of y^e perfection here as I have seen others in England and yet there lowest price is 3 crownes a payer. I would not buy them till I have further answere from your Ex^{ty} whether it bee y^e pleasure or noe to have at the rate mentioned, or y^e monye imployd in any other commoditye found here. I suppose Spanish gloves are cheaper at Genua."

Draft of a letter, endorsed "2 coppies of letters of his lords^{sh}." Written from Holdenby, in the handwriting of Basil earl of Denbigh, without address. ". . . The King amongst other discourses about passages at the bataille of Naseby, did very much lament 'the losse of a paper booke w^{ch} as his Ma^{ty} was inform'd 'fell into your hands. It is a jorنال of all the remarkable passages that yeere, and of the motion of his 'armys, [by a] servant much with his Ma^{ty} heer, which 'as hee tould me [he] sett the greater value upon because 'hee hee[ar'd] you had given a good character of the ingenuity and truth of all the relations contain'd in that 'booke. His Ma^{ty} did verie much desire itt might be 'restored to him, and the rather because hee conceav'd itt to be of no present concernment to the publique 'affairs. This I thought fitt to give you intimation of, 'and shall desire the favor of an answere from you to 'this particular as soon as you can with convenience, 'being only a point of honor and civility to his Ma^{ty}."

From Lord Halifax to Dykevelt, London, 15 Dec^r 1685. Complimentary.

From the same, without address, but probably to Dykevelt; London, 5 Dec^r, old style, [1685?] "Mes bons amis continuent de m'attaquer. Ils jettent sans cesse des bombes, mais avec si peu d'effet jusques à present que selon les apparences ils seront aussi peu capables de m'emporter d'assaut qu'ils seroient de me reduire à une capitulation. Leur procedé n'est pas inconnu à vostre Ex^{te} tellement qu'il n'est pas necessaire de vous en informer à l'heure qu'il est; je vous diray seulement que leur rage est si mal conduite que je croirois y pouvoir trouver ma seureté mesme quand je ne l'aurois pas par le moyen de mon innocence. Nos affaires à Westminster vont lentement comme il appartient à toutes les grandes assemblies; cependant vous songez un plan qu'il faut faire pour l'année qui vient dans lequel vous aurez si grande part que j'y fond mon esperance à l'égard d'une bonne union de toutes les parties intéressées."

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

From the same to the same, "Dimanche au matin," [1685?] "On m'a dit que V. E. faisoit estat de partir demain. Si cela est il faut que j'aye l'honneur de vous voir aujourd'hui, et puisque il est nécessaire que j'aie cette apres-disner à Hampton Court je souhaite si cela se peut que vous me permettez de venir chez vous en devant que vous allez à l'Eglise ce matin ou à midy quand vous en reviendrez. J'attends vos ordres estant dans l'impatience de vous renouveler les assurances que je suis," &c.

From Lord Ossory, without address. London, 18 Dec^r 1687. Asks for a commission as ensign or lieutenant in the Prince of Orange's army for le Sieur Folville, who had been discharged from the Irish army without fault, but for a cause common to many other honourable men.

From the Earl of Bedford to Dykevelt. Dec^r 25, 1687. Complimentary.

Postscript to a letter, without address or signature. À Paris le 2^e December 1688. "Il ne se presente rien d'y ajouter icy, si non que j'ay appris depuis qu'il doit estre arrivé depuis deux jours à Versailles plusieurs courriers d'Angleterre: qu'on ne dit pas le detail de ce qu'ils ont apporté, si non en general, que les affaires pour le Roy y vont de mal en pis; que le monde l'abandonne jusqu'à ses hommes de chambre, et au regiment Escossois sur lequel il se soit le plus et qu'il a quitte; que S. A. le Prince d'Orange doit estre allé vers le Nord; et que des Francois qui estoient abordés de ce costé là, quoy que marchands, comme on dit icy y auroient tous esté mis à mort par ordre du dit Prince. C'est tout ce que j'en ay ouy dire depuis le depart de l'ordinaire d'hier et tout ce qu'on en sait ou debite icy à Paris. Comme l'ordinaire d'Angleterre n'est point arrivé on qu'on en arrete les lettres on n'en peut rien savoir de certain jusques icy. On raisonne là dessus etragement par de ça, et ne parle que les dernières extremities où les choses iront pour le Roy d'Angleterre, quoy qu'on voye que jusques icy il n'y a eu aucune effusion de sang ni épée tirée. On veut à toutes forces que la partie de la convocation du Parlement soit le plus dangereux pour luy quil pouvoit prendre. On pretend qu'il ne luy en costera pas moins que la teste, qu'on le fera mourir infailiblement avec le Prince de Gales, et que le Prince d'Orange sans s'en mêler n'aura qu'à laisser agir le Parlement pour cela. Que le meilleur parti pour le Roy dans une telle conjuncture estoit de tacher de sortir d'Angleterre avec ce dit Prince de Galles, qu'aussi sa Majesté doit avoir dit qu'il ne voit pas d'autre ressource presente pour ce dit Roy: qu'elle souhaitoit qu'il pust se retirer en France, et qu'en cas là elle feroit son affaire et mettroit le tout pour le tout pour le rétablir. On s'emporte là dessus contre les Hollandois comme s'ils estoient l'unique cause du desastre de ce Roy, et pretend qu'on ira fondre sur eux avec les forces à quoy il ne pourroit que succomber. Aussi ajoutent comme si sa Majesté estoit déjà resoluë de s'accommoder avec l'Empeur à quelque prix que ce soit pour tourner toutes les forces sur les Hollandois et pour assister au besoin le Roy d'Angleterre, ou se precautionner contre les invasions qu'on prévoit de ce costé là. Ce sont là les raisonnemens et les reflexions qu'on entend faire et redoubler au sujet de ces derniers advis de l'estat present des affaires d'Angleterre. D'où on voit de plus en plus qu'on n'y deteste on apprehende rien tant icy que la convocation d'un Parlement libre et du contentement du Roy, et que pour ce sujet on n'oublie et n'oubliera rien pour en dé tourner l'effet si on peut; qu'il y a assez d'apparence qu'on portera plutost le dit Roy si on peut et par la crainte des extremities qu'on luy en fera apprehender à prendre tout autre parti comme celui de se retirer en France et d'y faire transporter le Prince de Galles s'il y a moyen; qu'en tout cas il vaut mieux qu'il souffre les violences qu'on luy pourra faire et qui pourront avoir du retour que de les autoriser luy même par son consentement et par la convocation d'un Parlement. Il ne faut pas doubter non plus qu'on ne se serve par deça de cette conjuncture et du zelo apparent pour la religion et pour rétablir un Roy opprimé comme on parle qu'on ne s'en serve, dis-je, pour diviser ou diminuer si on peut le nombre des ennemis qu'on a attaqués on qu'on prévoit d'avoir sur les bras. Et qu'ainsi dans cette vaine on ne fasse agir divers ressorts auprès des cours de Rome, de Vienne, de Madrid et de Munich, pour y rallentir les mesures et resolutions contre la France et faire proposer sous main des partis et des expédients pour un accommodement sur tout pour les detacher de liaisons et d'engagemens avec les Provinces

Unies et avoir ce champ libre pour ce costé-cy à les accabler si on peut. C'est là dont on peut s'apercevoir de plus en plus et tout ce qui se presente d'ajouter icy pour confirmation plus grande de ce que j'en avois déjà touché.

A letter, without address and the signature illegible, dated "à Londres le 12^e Xbre 88."

" Samedy 2^e la Reyne ne quitta son appartement et alla à cely du Roy disant qu'elle donoit le sien au Prince de Galles son fils qu'elle faisoit revenir estant convaincue que la ville de Londres estoit la plus sur endroit du Royaume, et qu'elle estoit bien fâchée de ne l'avoir pas toujours crû. La verité est que la flotte n'avoit pas voulu le passer, et qu'on avoit dit là si c'est le P. de Galles qui seroit s'en mêler: s'il ne l'eût pas qu'en avons nous affaire. Il revint le soir conduit par milord Douvres. Les gens bien informés ne doutent plus que le Roy ne se fut resolu de s'en fuir, et la Reyne estant allée le lendemain à 9 heures du soir à Somersset, on se disoit à l'oreille on est allé dire adieu. La Reyne esconcha à onze heures, et à 1 heure du matin le 10^e S.M. conduite par M^r de Lauzun et 3 gentilshommes Francois, et accompagnée seulement de 2 Italiennes de ses femmes se mit en une barge au degré privé à Uitehall, et my lord Paterborough portant le jeune enfant en ses bras se mit en une autre avec M^r Powis, M^r Strickland, M^r Labadie la nourrice, et une autre femme partirent. On en sut la nouvelle à 9 heures du matin, et à 10 heures 1 des gents franc^s apporta la nouvelle au Roy que la Reyne estoit arrivée heureusement à Margett s'est embarquée en un vaisseau de guerre Francois qui l'y attendoit.

Cependant le Roy avoit envoyé des ordres le matin à tous les officiers de l'armée de se rendre le lendemain 11^e à Oxbridge par de la Uindsor ou il se trouveroit à 10 heures, mais c'étoit une fausse marche pour deguiser le dessein, et l'on n'en doute point quand l'apres midy S. M. donna ordre de retenir les rites pour le Parlement et de revoquer ceux qui estoient donnez, et surtout en observant quelle grande desertion s'estoit faite le matin, le Nonce du Pape, 50 à 60 prestres, le Chancelier et bien des autres. Le soir depuis 7 heures la cour estant grosse l'observation paroissoit sur les visages et l'on decouvroit en toutes choses la decadence de la majesté et quelques gens se disoient Venez vous voir le Roy pour la dernière fois. Cependant estant moy dans sa chambre entre 9 et 10 pend^t que S. M. étoit allé sonper, et le comte Dumbarton m'ayant demandé Que dites vous detoutes cette consternation? Surquoy je luy repouds, My lord, il me semble que l'affaire est à son terme, mais vous savez bien mieux que moy ou le Roy va demain. Il me dit, M^r, je vous jure par le Dieu vivant, par tout ce qu'il y a de sacré que je ne ay point que le Roy s'en aille, cide plus je ne le saurois croire, car le Roy voudroit il nous abandonner nous autres Cath. Rom. sans nous rien dire. Le Roy ayant soupé M^d. Middleton luy apporta à dix heures des lettres des Seig^rs Deputés à M. le Prince, qui l'assuroient de la bonne disposition de S. A. à traiter, et donnoient plus d'esperance qu'auparavant. Le Roy luy dit Cela est fort bien, my lord, demain à 9 heures je fuyrai réponse à votre office. A 11 heures le Roy lust se coucher, le Duc de Northumberland estant de garde, et le lendemain qui estoit hier 11^e le valat de chambre estant entré à 7 heures du matin como S. M. l'avoit ordonné, alla jusqu'au lit et le trouva decouvert sans personne dedans. On snt pen apres qu'à minuit on environ le Roy sortant par chez Chiffni s'estoit mis dans une barge de louage avec le Ch^r Edw: Hales et un valat de chambre Francois, et avoit pris le meme chemin de Margett on l'aprens que d^m l'assurance l'attendoit. Ontre les gens susnommez, l'ambassadeur de France, et les prestres il ne paroit pas que personne ait esté du secret ni des papistes non plus qui sont dans le dernier abattement et surtout il est clair qu'on ne s'est fié à aucun protestant. J'oubliois à vous dire, Monsieur, qu'à 9 heures du soir, le Roy envoya querir les sceaux, qu'il a emportez. Aussitost on a convoqué les seigneurs, juges, et autres notables, chez le Mayre, on ils ont esté assembles depuis 10 heures jusqu'à 4 du soir, et les seig^rs ayant pris l'autorité en leur mains à l'exclusion des Secret^{es} d'Etat qui n'apposent plus de sceau, ils ont donné les ordres nécessaires, entr' autres d'envoyer à M. le Prince un Comte, un Vicomte, un Baron, un Evêque, pour l'inviter de venir incessamment. Ils ont esté M^r Skelton de la Tour, et l'ont donné à Milord Lucas à garder. On a fait visiter les maisons des Papistes; et divers autres ordres, en consequence de quels My lords Pembrock, Ueymouth, Culpeper, and Ely sont partis ce jour à 9 heures.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

EARL OF DENEIGH.

"Cependant les officiers de l'armée s'étant rendus à Oxbridge Mld. Fewersham alors de semaine recut une lettre du Roy dont la copie est icy incluse, surquoy luy au nom de tous les officiers écrivit par un Trompette à M. le Prince que selon les ordres du Roy il n'y avoit plus de guerre, chacun mettoit bas les armes et se retiroit chez soy, et ayant ensuite recommandé aux troupes de ne point faire de desordre chacun s'est retiré; mais des avant le depart un Trompette, Mld. Raynalagh estoit allé au Prince de la part de l'armée pour le prier de la recevoir sous son commandement[ent]. Quelques officiers ont meime leurs corps à S. A. come S^r Jean Lanier. Les autres sont revenus icy. Cependant des midy icy les troupes qui y sont ayant mis bas les armes les ont reprises au nom de M. le Prince, dont le nom retentit avec joye et transport. Cette nuit et encore à cet instant le peuple est à bruler les chapelles Papistes, celle de S^t James comprise. Ce qu'il y a de divin si j'ose dire ainsi en cette heureuse expedition c'est qu'il n'y a pas un seul et unique Anglois Protestant qui n'ait embrassé la venue de M. le Prince come son salut, et toute l'armée entiere seroit allée à S. A. des la semaine passée et Dimanche et Lundi si Mld. Fewersham ne les avoit retenu en disant M^{rs} il ne s'agit point de se battre contre le P. d'Orange, les comm^{es} sont alles traiter de paix, vous l'aurez à toute heure seulement au nom de Dieu demeurez au quartier jusqu'à ce tems là.

"Quoy que j'aye esté long ce n'est pas le cart des choses merveilleuses que je vous aurois pu écrire. Monsieur, je n'aprehend pas de vous avoir ennuyé, vous, Monsieur, qui avez si utilement, et heureusement[ent] jetté les semences de cet evenement[ent], il y a 18 mois de quoy vous devez bien estre content et la Hollande. Je le seray beaucoup, Monsieur, et bien glorieux si je vous puis temoigner le cordial respect que je vous porte, et si vous me voulez honorer de vos commandemens, que je recevray et executeray avec le plus grand devoument, qui suis, Monsieur, votre tres humble et tres obeissant serviteur." The signature has been written over and is illegible.

Lord Mulgrave to Dykevelt, London, Jan^r 28, 1689.

"J'ai recen avec beaucoup de plaisir la response que votre Excellence m'a fait; car ne doutant pas de la moindre chose que vous me dites, je ne ferois pas scrupule de vous avouer que j'attendois quelque chose solide d'un Roy si juste et si favorable et d'une amitié si considerable comme le votre vous scaurois mieux que mois les vacances qui se feront, et que tout le monde attend icy avec impatience; et si c'est quelque petite merite d'avoir toujours abstenu de me joindre aux cabales mesme de mes amies, ou de faire le moindre pas contre mes ennemis a cause qu'ils sembloient estre sous la protection de sa Majesté, que je tiendrois toujours sacré, je ne puis flatter un peu et croire que je dois attendre de sa bonté d'estre preferé aux autres qui ont fait justement le contraire. Cependant une personne qui seroit dans les mesme circonstances comme mois pourroit enraîner fort raisonnablement les artifices de la Cour. Mais j'ai telle opinion de la fermeté du Roy qui scait mieux que personne comment j'agie ou au moins ai voulu agir s'il auroit voulu se communiquer d'avantage qu'il me semble une faute d'avoir de la defiance ou de lui, ou de milord Portland, et de vous à la service de quels je suis entièrement devoués. Encore je vous assure que c'est de vous autres que j'attendois protection avec quelque sorte de justice à cause que je pretend toujours d'avoir autant de soin de maintenir la bonne correspondance entre les deux nations que les autres prennent de fomentier la jalousie. Enfin ils ont leurs mesures et j'ai les miens tout opposé, qui semblent pourtant estre plus convenable au service du Roy, et à un estat si troublé comme le nostre, car il n'y a pas une nation au monde horsmis celui ci (je le dis avec honte) qui auroit plus de peur des amies mesme necessaires que des deux Roys qui sont en train de la ruiner, et si unie pour ce dessein seulement. Pour dire la verité je suis si remplie d'estonnement et de l'indignation que j'ai de la peine à ne contenir."

From the same to the same. London, 6 Feb. 1690
"... Avec la liberté que vous est accoustumé de m'accorder, je vous supplie donc d'attirer au moins du Roy une chose qui m'a promis solennellement, c'est à dire qui me fera savoir l'obstacle en cas qu'il y en a quel'un; car autrement je suis peustêtre déchiré en secret, et je consent à ne vouloir plus pretendre en cas que je ne me justifie entièrement, et par là il peut meun juger de ces sortes de calumnies. Il est vray que si j'avois affaire à un autre que lui je ne m'étonnerois de rien, et je ne chercherois plus la raison d'un procédé si extraordinaire. Les Princes ne me sont pas si inconnues que cela. Mais j'avoue que le grand préjudice dans laquelle je suis à son esgard et la confiance qui m'a donné la permission de prendre en lui mesme aux dessus d'une dependance servile de quelque autre que ce soit me fait avec respect attendre de lui autant de grace que cela m'a fait de préjudice apres les autres.

"Apres tout, Monsieur, permettes mois de m'excuser un peu sur toute cest opportunité. Je ne laisse pas de prévoir la fatigue qui ne sera necessaire de souffrir pour tacher un peu de reparer la negligence des autres, où encore il y a fort peu à gagner excepté l'envie et la haine, et il me fasche beaucoup de pouvoir dire que le plus des services que je rendrois me mettra plus en lutte à beaucoup des dangers. Mais non obstant tout cela voicy ce qui emporte aux dessus les autres reflexions, que je puis conter au moins dix affaires dans le Parlement pour lesquelles j'ai agi selon ma petite force autant que je pouvois faire pour ma vie propre, et vous sçavez autant que personne de quelle importance ces affaires estoit, et quoy que le zele où si je l'ose dire l'inclination personnelle m'a porté à cela il y a de quoy se moquer pour les ennemis de l'estat et de mois par consequence quand ils me reprochent de tous cela, et malignement se resjouisse de faire appercevoir comme ils s'imaginent une petite tache dans le caractère du Roy. Pour rire un peu apres tant de sérieux vous m'est témoin que je fais mon possible pour oster cest tache mais quelquefois cela le rend plus grand, car plus mon zele est opinionastre en l'envie que j'ai de lui servir, ce sera encore plus estrange d'estre toujours oublié."

From the same to the same, July 6 (1691). "... Il n'y a plus moyen de garder le silence qu'il faut rompre enfin pour vous assurer des mes tres-humbles remerciements et de la resolution que j'ai pris de continuer toujours de mesme à rendre tous les petites services desquelles je suis capable non obstant qu'on en use à mon esgard tout autrement qu'avec le reste du monde, de quoy j'avoue d'estre un peu estonné à cause qu'on n'est pas accoustumé à abandonner les autres comme cela. Si de temps en temps vous voulez bien faire sentir cela un peu, j'ose dire un peu hardiment que ce ne sera pas contre ses interets puisque il y va de son autorité de ne pas negliger tous à fait les services ni de laisser prevaloir quoy que ce soit contre ses fideles creatures qui peustêtre n'aura pas tant des ennemis qu'à cause de cela mesme, ce que je pourrois mieux faire voir si vous me feriez la grace d'expliquer un peu ce que vous n'avez touché que legèrement dans votre dernière."

From the same to the same. "Queen Street, Mars S. ... Je n'ose presque exprimer ce qui appartient à mon affaire de peur que je ne paroisse blamer un procédé que je dois toujours respecter, quoy qu'il est contre le véritable interest du Roy aussi bien que le mien. Cependant, my lord Portland m'ayant fait l'honneur de me venir parler sur tout cela le soir avant son depart avec quelque sorte de proposition comme un espee de reconnaissance de la part du Roy, je me croyois obligé par raison aussi bien que par respect de ne le pas mesprizer et d'écrire une asses long à lui touchant tout cela que je lui ai prié de montrer au Roy, et de le communiquer à personne qu'à vous seulement, pour laquelle liberté je vous demande ici pardon et vous prie d'ajouter ce qui depend de vous au soin que mi lord Portland a promis de prendre de mes pretentions et lui demander à voir la lettre que je lui ai écrit sur cela afin que vous puissiez parler aussi au Roy selon qui le juge à propos. Mais asteur (à cette heure) il est necessaire pour excuser tout cela dans un temps comme celui-ci que je vous dis franchement les motifs que me paroissent asses forts. Le premier que le Roy ayant fait beaucoup des graces à des personnes fort et publiquement opposé à ses interets, si au mesme temps il fait un affront public à un autre qui a eu l'honneur de faire tout le contraire, et d'avoir renssit aussi dans cest dernière session en disputant contre les autres mesmes, je vous laisse à considerer ce qu'on pensera et mesm ce qu'on fera aussi à l'avenir. Le second est que le Roy mesm avoue tout cela, et doit estre au dessus la petite peine qui ne scauroit s'empêcher de sentir, genereux comme il est, de se croire redevable à un pauvre homme comme mois, et sachant tout le temps que je suis un objet de risée seulement pour l'amour de lui et de son service, ce qui est vray au pied de la lettre car le monde est fort comme cela, et puis qui s'est moqué de mois le premier un Roy ne manquera jamais d'estre suivie de la sorte. Il depend de lui asteur de mettre fin à cela par un seule depeche ou de me laisser demeurer en peine si long temps que ce qui fera apres n'aura point de grace ni tant d'effet."

Sir William Trumbull to Dykevelt, Paris, 14 December 1685. "... A la première visite que j'ay rendu à Mons^r de Croissy quoy qu'on n'y attendoit que

EARL OF DENEIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

des compliments, je n'avois garde pourtant de la laisser échapper sans lui ouvrir les ordres du Roy mon maitre sur cette affaire, et l'intérêt particulier qu'il y prenoit, et de lui faire savoir l'estime et le cas que mon maitre faisoit de S. A. [the Prince of Orange] et de l'alliance prochaine qui est entre eux. La dessus il disoit que le Roi son maitre avoit écrit sur cet affaire à Mons^r Barillon, et qu'il ne doutoit point que ce qu'il en communiqueroit au Roy mon maitre ne lui satisfait de la sorte qu'il n'y prist aucun intérêt dorénavant. Mais comme je lui demandois si c'estoit la réponse que j'envoyerois au Roy mon maitre il me repartit que non, et en suite reprit la parole et me dit qu'il avoit souvent parlé sur cette affaire tant à Mons^r l'Embassad^r d'Hollande qu'à Mons^r L'Envoyé de Brandebourg, et qu'il ne pouvoit pas dire autre chose que ce qu'il leur avoit déjà dit, cet à savoir que le Roy son maitre ne reconnoissoit point la souveraineté d'Orange, et qu'ayant pris la résolution d'abolir la religion P. R. dans son royaume, et Dieu ayant bien ses soins (il faut, dit-il, que je vous parle de la manière, quoy que je sache que vous ayez des sentimens tous contraires) il se croyoit obligé en conscience et justice de faire la meme chose pour convertir les habitans de la ville d'Orange qu'ailleurs en son royaume. Mais comme je l'interrompis pour raisonner, tant sur les contraventions qu'on avoit fait en cet egard à beaucoup des traittés, que particulièrement à celui de Nimègue (dont le Roy mon maitre estoit le garant), il me répondit que le dit traité de Nimègue ne laissoit à Mons^r le P. d'O. que les memes droits qu'il avoit auparavant, et que s'il n'avoit pas aucun droit auparavant (comme, dit-il, il n'en avoit point, mais que ce droit estoit incontestablement à la maison de Longueville) ce traité ne lui en donnoit point. Je ne pouvois pas m'empêcher de lui repliquer brusquement que nonobstant tout cela le dit traité de Nimègue porte formellement que le P. d'O. seroit remis dans la possession de ladite principauté au meme état et en la meme manière dont il jouissoit auparavant, et que c'estoit cette possession la qu'on lui avoit ostée à cette heure et qu'on avoit manifestement violée. Il ne me répondit autre chose la-dessus, si non qu'il en parleroit au Roy. Apres cela je n'ay pas manqué d'écrire en Angleterre, non seulement le détail de tout ce discours et une lettre en particulier au Roy, mais aussi les nouvelles de tout ce qui s'est passé en Orange depuis l'enlèvement du Sieur Drevoyn jusques à présent, dont Mons^r Langy Mont-Miral m'a fait part toutes les fois qu'il les avoit reçues. Et come j'ay pris la hardiesse de supplier tres-humblement le Roy mon maitre de me vouloir donner de temps en temps des ordres nécessaires pour cette affaire, je les attends de jour en jour avec beaucoup d'impatience. Mardi passé j'eus ma première audience, et le meme jour je fus encore chez M^r de Croissy à demander la réponse que j'eus à mander au Roy mon maitre sur cette affaire. Il me dit qu'il avoit représenté mes instances au Roy son maitre, mais qu'il me falloit répondre de la meme manière qu'auparavant, et que le Roy avoit tout fait en Orange à cette heure; que ses troupes en estoient sorties; que se croyant obligé en conscience et justice de pourvoir au salut des habitans de cette ville, tout ce qu'il y avoit fait c'estoit à l'égard du spirituel, mais à l'égard du temporel il n'y avoit point de changement, mais tout y estoit demeuré comme auparavant; qu'il croyoit que cela satisfisoit au Roy mon maitre, et qu'il n'y prist pas aucun intérêt mais qu'il laissoit le Roy son maitre en toute sorte de liberté de faire ce qu'il jugeroit à propos dans son Royaume."

In a postscript to the letter from which this extract is made Sir W. Trumbull writes: "Je ne vous envoie pas celle-ci par le paquet de Mons^r l'Embassad^r d'Hollande pour des certaines raisons dont je vous feray, par une autre fois; mais je me sert de l'address que vous m'avez donné à Londres pour Mons^r Jean Frederick Molwat, &c. Faites moi la grace de m'advertir si celle-ci n'a point été ouverte."

From the same to the same. Paris, 4 January 1686. "Je pris la liberté de vous écrire un long détail de tout ce qui s'estoit passé à l'égard des affaires de son Altesse M^r le Prince d'Orange, et j'adressay ma lettre à Mons^r Jean Frederic de la Haye, comme vous m'avez ordonné à Londres. Mais depuis n'ayant pas eu l'honneur de savoir de vos nouvelles j'ay peur que celle-la ne s'estoit égarée en chemin. Je vous supplie me faire savoir par quel voye vous souhaiterai que je vous fasse tenir les miennes à l'avenir, puisque dans la presente conjuncture on ne pourroit pas prendre trop de precautions."

From the same to the same, London, 10 December 1686, recommending a French refugee to Dykevelt's patronage,

From the same to the same. Constantinople, 22 November 1687. "... Nous ne savons pas encore comment regnera ce nouvel empereur. Il passe pour un homme sçavant dans leurs loix, mais il n'a aucune experience; tout lui paroît nouveau, ainsi je croy qu'il aura de la peine à faire changer la face des affaires de cet empire qui paroît au contraire courir à grand pas à sa ruine, ne le trouvant ni argent ni soldats, ni bon ministre pour gouverner, division parmi eux et apparence de revolte en plusieurs lieux."

From the same to the same. Constantinople, 16 August 1689. Complimentary.

From the same to the same. The Hague, 14 December 1691. Complimentary.

From the same to the same, 28 March, O.S., 1692, entreating Dykevelt to obtain from the king the ransom or exchange of Monsieur Dayrolle, who has been taken prisoner and conveyed to Dunquerque.

From the same to the same, London, 13 April 1694, recommending Dayrolle to Dykevelt's patronage. "Il, sort depuis plusieurs années et sort nouvellement d'une prison de dixhuit mois de Bastille qu'il a soferté pour le service du Roy. Sa Majesté m'a promis de faire quelque chose pour lui aussitôt qu'il en trouvera l'occasion, et comme elle pourroit s'offrir pendant la campagne je vous supplie, Monsieur, s'il en est de besoin, de vouloir être son interprète pres du Roy."

Lord Sunderland to Dykevelt. Utrecht, November 10, 1689. Complimentary.

From the same to the same. Astorp, 29 August 1690. "... J'ay tous jours esté chez moy depuis mon retour jouyssent d'un repos agreable qui m'estoit presque inconnu. Il y a quelque temps que nous estions icy fort alarmé par le mauvais succes de nostre flotte et par les desseins pernicieux des malintentionnés. Mais la nouvelle de la victoire et des grandes actions du Roy vint fort à propos pour remettre les esprits estonnés, et à cette heure le calme est si bien restablie que Dieu conservant la personne de sa Majesté il n'y a rien à craindre que pour les ennemis."

Lord Polyarth to Dykevelt. London, 5 May 1691. "... Laissez moy vous raconter les faveurs que le Roy mon souverain m'a fait à cause que je sçay bien vous souhaitez que sa Maj. me favorise. Il n'a seulement me retabli en mes biens et mon état, mais aussi m'a nommé de son conseil privé du royaume, et encore il a avancé ma maison au titre de Mi Lord et l'a rangé parmi les pairs d'Ecoss. De plus il m'a libéralement promis de supporter ma famille, et cependant m'a donné une pension annuelle. Mon fils ainé commande une compagnie de la Cavalerie. Sa Maj. la Reine fit aussi de grandes obligations à ma femme durans son séjour icy, et lui donna à coudre un anneau d'un diamant taillé en facettes de grand prix. Voila, Mons^r, comme je dois a ses maj., tout ce que je suis, tous que je possède d'honneur et de biens, et tous que j'espère. Je ne manque rien que des occasions pour signaler toujours ma gratitude comme mon devoir en leur service. ... Ses ma sont tout à fait affables et benignes à tous; neantmoins nous sommes si mêlés qu'on ne sauroit distinguer d'entre les sinceres et honnêtement affectionnées et les autres qui ne le sont pas; et cecy rend nos affaires le plus obscures."

A paper, without signature, dated 1^o October 1691, and entitled "Continuation de Reflexions sur l'état des choses, principalement sur les mesures à prendre touchant la prochaine assemblée du Parlement." The date is in the handwriting of Dykevelt's London correspondent, extracts from whose letters appear in the present as well as in the last report of the Commission. "Preliminaire secret, sur un projet de paix."

5 October 1691. This paper is in the handwriting of Dykevelt's London correspondent.

A letter without address from the Count of Nassau, dated Namur, March 20, 1692, complaining of the hay furnished to the garrison.

Le Comte de Windischgrätz to Dykevelt, the Hague, 7 September 1693. Complimentary.

Four letters from the Duke of Schleswig Holstein, without address, dated respectively Malines, 4 March (two of this date), 5 March, and 6 May 1694.

A memoir, unsigned, of the military services of Jean Adolf Duke of Schleswig Holstein.

From M. Emanuel, Elector of Bavaria, to Dykevelt, Brussels, 22 April 1694. Complimentary.

From the same, probably to the same, Brussels, 13 May 1695, asking his influence with the King (William III.) in support of some important matter of which the Elector had spoken to his correspondent in confidence.

From the same to Dykevelt, asking for his good offices

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

with William III. and the States General in a matter not stated.

Copy of a letter from Callières, probably to Dykevelt, dated Versailles, 16 September 1694.—“ . . . S[ic] M[ajesté] desirant sincèrement de contribuer autant qu'il est en son pouvoir au prompt rétablissement du repos public, elle attendra seulement que M^{rs} les Etats Generaux, qui savent mieux qu'on ne leur peut marquer quels sont les passeports et precautions necessaires pour la seureté de celui que S. M^{te} enverra, s'expliquent à vous de ce qu'ils pretendent faire pour cet effet, et de quelle manière leur député sera autorisé, apres quoy, Monsieur, vous les pouvez assurer qu'il ne sera pas perdu un moment de temps de ce coste icy à donner un bon achèvement.”

The Duke of Württemberg to Dykevelt. Ghent, March 20, 1695. On some military movements.

The Duke of Luxembourg. (No address). Paris, 24 May 1695. Thanking his correspondent, probably Dykevelt, for a passport he has sent him.

The elector of Cologne to Dykevelt, Bonn, “ce (no day given) d'Août 1695,” asking Dykevelt to support his just pretensions with William III.

From the same to the same. Bonn, 3 May 1698. To Dykevelt, asking for his good offices to secure to the Catholics of certain parishes beyond the Meuse the rights secured by the treaty of Nimègue to those of Maestricht and its dependencies, of which the said parishes formed part at the time of the treaty.

From Keppel (Lord Albemarle), Kensington. 8 May 1696. No address. “Sa Majesté ayant vu et considéré ce que vous lui marquez dans la vostre du 22^e d'Avril au sujet de la lettre du duc de Holstein Pleun, elle m'ordonne de vous dire pour reponce que son opinion est que le dit duc pourra bien se defaire de son equipage, ou du moins de cette partie qui lui est le plus à charge, et que l'estat devroit lui accorder un mois de ses traitemens extraordinaires puis qu'il pretend dans l'extrait de sa lettre (que vous avez envoye au Roy) qu'il s'est mis en fraix et en depence pour aller en campagne. Voila, Monsieur, les sentimens du Roi, les quels sont tout à fait conformes avec ce que vous lui avez desja marqué de la veu de Mons^{rs} Le Pensionnaire Heynsius. . . . Le voiage du Roy est toujours arreté pour samedi, il doit s'embarquer à Marregett encore le mesme soin si le vent le permet.”

From the same to Dykevelt. London, 21 April 1702. “J'ay en toute ma vie tant des raison d'estre persuadé que vous m'honoriez de vostre amitié qu'il ne m'est jamais resté aucun sujet de doute sur ce sujet. La manière obligante dont vous volvez bien en particulier prendre part à la douleur que nostre grande perte [the King's death] me cause m'est doné tres grande consolation. Je vous en remercie, Monsieur, de tout mon cœur et je vous prie de croire que faisant un tres grand cas de vostre amitié personne ne peut vous en demander la continuation avec autant d'empressement que je le fais.

“On me maude, Monsieur, qu'il y a de l'apparence que vous devez passer dans ce pais icy. Je vous assure que je me fais un vrai plaisir de vous voir icy avec la qualité d'ambassadeur extraordinaire. Vous volvez bien, Monsieur, que je vous y offre mes services en tout ce qui dependra de moy, tant que je me trouverais dans cette ville. En cela comme en toute autre occasion il ny a rien que je ne fasse pour vous convaincre du zele tres parfait avec lequel j'ay l'honneur d'estre, &c.”

“Memoire des demands pour my lord Mainard Duc de Schomburg et de Leinster tant de son chef comme heritier pour un tiers de feu my lord Frederick Mareschal Duc de Schomburg son pere, que comme legataire de feu dame Suzanne d'Annale d'Haucourt Mareschale de Schomburg sa belle mere, et encore en qualité d'heritier universel par le testament de deffunt my lord Charles duc de Schomburg son frere.”

Copy of a paper relating to the same matter and signed by “le Comte de Schomburg et Mertola,” and headed “Project de quelle manière je suis intentionné de partager avec mon pere Meynard.”

Copy of an agreement between Meynard, Charles, and Frederick, counts of Schomburg, relating to the same matter.

“Memoire pour Monsieur le Mediateur sur les affaires de messieurs de Schomburg.”

A paper without signature or address, dated Paris, Sep^r 28, 1696. “ . . . Il est venu un exprès de l'Abbé de Polignac qui porte qu'il y a parmy le Polonois assez de disposition en faveur du Prince de Conty, et que si on vouloit faire quelque depense, il ne desesperoit pas de faire tomber sur luy la couronne, mais la difficulté est de trouver l'argent. Le Prince n'en a point, et le Roy deja abimé de dettes n'oublie aucun moyen de s'endetter encor d'avantage pour avoir de quoy fournir aux depenses les plus pressantes, ayant besoin indubitablement de 80 millions d'extraordinaire tous les ans.”

From Lady Mordaunt, wife of Viscount Mordaunt, afterwards Earl of Peterborough, to (Dykevelt?), dated “Londre, ce 14 Mars,” no year given. “. . . Il y a des gens qui pretende que nostre gran ministre n'ey pas le longue dure, mais je crois que soit trop penetrer dans lafaiere que de s'imaginer ce la estau un home qui a fait toute, est qui ne refusara rien ou ne dois pas aller plus loin que l'avis qu'il dona de faire entrere le pere jesuite dans le conseil, une chose que les Catolick memme desaprove est donna occasion à Monsieur Cheridon quan il estoit dernièrement icy de dire que cettoit le consielle don Spenser qui ruina Eddart le second est quel pourrais estre auy persion à Jaque le second. On parle de quelque dessordre à nostre cour, mais on nonsey pas les raison. Je ne m'en etone pas. Je vous assure qu'il y a un sertain blondin qui fait bien savoir ce qu'il peu penetrer est que l'on a des nouvelles bien fraiche chez Madam de Denmark qui est grosse. Mon voisin est Monsieur Sidue je (a word obliterated here) norat pas la permission de nous faire visite stanne (cette année). Quan nous some ensemble nous faisons mille veu pour nos illustre persone, est avons le plaisir de pouvoire nous dire nos sentiment san danger. Monsieur, je vous ay did les miens aus long une chose entraine, lotremet je me suis éloignée. Je vous prie de donner l'encloue as son altese Royal, est de l'assurer que j'atendois le depart de Monsieur Rossole pour luy ecrire.”

Same, Nov. 28 “nostre style,” no year, to Dykevelt. “On fait, quelquois scrupule de respondre moy, monsieur, vous voyez je comence avec vous, dans le temps mesme le plus commode quant on estime le mary absent, faut il que je vous dise que je ne suis pas aise quil ne l'est pas puis que hors de saison il me la faut quitter quant son absence ne sera profitable ny à luy ny à ses amis. Sy vous scavez combien de fois il a souhaité ses affaires entre les mains de Monsieur Dyckvelt vous auriez reconnue la bonne opinion qu'il a de vous et la confiance qu'il a en vostre amitié. Comme les affaires ne sont point de nostre province nous avons à peine droit d'en parler, mais ayant ven de la main proper de M^{me} de Wildts que tout seroit prest la fin de Septembre et sachant qu'on pretendoit n'attendre que my lord il y a sept semaines, je peult du moins savoir que je vous ecries des plaints au commencement de Decembre. Il faut que j'en fasse puisque qu'en verité je trouve qu'il est trop patient. Je peux mesme vous ecrire des nouvelles avec moins de contrainte que my lord il m'a ditt qu'il m'en vouloit charger quant il seroit icy, mais la catholicté domine sy fort que je crains la galanterie de la cour ne mettera pas une dame en seureté. Je vous diray pourtant que sy vous vous negligé ils sont bien alertes icy. Tous les colleges, tous les eveches seront remply de Catholiques et les ecoles. Cely de Westminster, D^r Busby étant mort, aura un jesuit. Presque tous les sheriffs seront papist, on met tous les grands seigneurs hors les provinces, comme my L^d Bridwater et my L^d Abington. Ont va lever des nouvelles troupes. Que voulez vous davantage. Il me semble qu'en voila asses et que ma lettre est asses longue.”

Same to same. “Hege, le 13 de Janvier[17].” The writer asks her correspondent to use his influence in order to have her appointed lady of honour to the Princess of Orange. “Je vous supplie de preparer son esprit en ma faveur, est de luy faire comprendre comme bien on serais sensible a l'obligation du don ou aux refus, sachans qu'elle a esté pour vint anneé dans nostre famille par Madame Peterbarow a la mere de la Princess est a la Roynie presente est sy on veut contene un peu sur soit je croy que j'y puis pretendre par quelque petit service est hasard a un honneur qui a esté mon out est cely que beaucoup de persone en Engleterre croyent que je pourroit remplier avec justice est en relever l'honneur aus temps (autant) que persone qui l'a possedé. Je puis deer cecy de moy memme quelle ny a persone qui servirais lurs altesse avec plus ou tans de zelle que moy. J'en es donne une prouve en la (illegible) de moy [a word missing here] memme est en bien est honneur cy j'avois en plus a sacrifier je l'orois fait tout ce qui estoit de mon sex a faire n'etoit que de rendre mes respects a son Altesse dans l'absence de ce grand prince est on courage moïn gran que le sien aurois sugombee. Mais elle a trouvee sa cou-

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

EARL OF DENEIGH.EARL OF
DENEIGH.

solution dans sa raison est n'a en a faire d'ayed d'outres. Mais j'espere avoire l'honneur de l'accompagner dans un pais ou je luy serais plus necessaire est ou je croy que les occasion naiterois de les convaincre que l'on soit devoacé a leur interest. Monsieur sy ont pouvois je flatter que vous en agirois ou frais amis on ceroit trop heureux. Vous savez combien my lord est sensible a tout ce qui me touche est sy son altesse m'en vouloit faire la grace sur ce que vous luy en pourriez dire qu'il en aurois une reconnaissance qui ne finerois q'avec sa vie."

Same to same. "Le 30 de Decembre." " Nous n'avons point d'ntre nouvelle que la malady de la Roine", qui se trouva malle hier, est on crains fort quelle ne fasse fause couche. Elle devoit sortir une proclamation lundy pour faire un remerciement pour sa grosses est de prier dans nos eglise jusquesqu quell fut acouchée."

From Viscount Mordaunt, dated "Lundy Martin," and probably addressed to Dykvelt. "On trouve le Roy si dispose a faire des difficultes a vostre egard, sy chagrin de vostre arrive que ceux qui ne sont pas de la cour craignent de vous venir voir de peur de les donner des pretextes. Plusieurs seigneurs mais particulièrement my L^d Hallifax voudroit vous venir saluer il pretendoit vous envoyer son frere M^{ons} Savell (qui a encore sa charge quoi qu'il croit la perdre tous les jours) pour vous faire ses compliments, mais il ne revient pas de deux ou trois jours de la campagne. C'est pourquoi il ma prie de vous faire ses baise-mains et de vous dire qu'il ne vient pas vous voir qu'il ne sache que vous le trouvez a propos. Il y a plusieurs autres qui sont dans la mesme peine, non pas pour eux memes mais de peur quant disant que les gens mail affectoné vous frequenter ne les donne lien d'agir selon leurs inclination. Je me donnerois souvent le plaisir de vous venir trouver ches vous si ce nestois pour la mesme raison, car de vous voir ailleurs seroit de la derniere consequence. Sy je vous voyois en quelque endroit particulier ils le scauroit sans doute et en feroit des affaires facheuses. Il faut que vous croyes quont vous espie comme un amant jaloux et quont seroit bien aise de vous revoir ches vous. Quant vous le trouverois le plus a propos je viendrois quelque soir ches vous. (Sy il y a du monde vous me recevrez comme sy cestoit la premiere visite). J'amenerois avec moy un gentilhomme que je voudrois bien vous faire connoitre. Il s'appelle S^r Micheal Wharton, c'est le fils d'un gentilhomme du North qui a six milles pistoles de rent et cinquante milles dans sa poché, mais il vitt fort particulièrement dans la ville et ne sera [a word torn away] fort remarquable. Il a servi dans tous les Parlements hors celley. Cest le plus honeste homme du monde, d'un fort grand interest aux pays, mais outre cela l'esprit du monde le plus juste, et qui scait mieux lestat des affaires que personne. Il peut venir ches vous moins observe parce que cest sa custume de marcher quelque fois les rues en manteau sans equipage. Surtout vous poves avoir une entiere confiance en luy, et cest ce quont peut dire de peu de gens, et vous devez estre extremement sur vostre garde. Cest le heur du berger, cest un moment critique, on presse fort, et les offres sont sy grandes qu'il faut la derniere vertu pour estre a l'espreuve."

From the same, dated 26th June, but without address.

From the same to Dykvelt, without date.

J. Williamson to Dykvelt. The Hague, 20 Aug. 1698.

From the same to the same. The Hague, 24 Nov. 1698.

The Earl of Portland to Dykvelt, Windsor, 26 April 1699. 1 May Same to same, Kensington, 26 Jan. 5 Feb., no year. "

Il i a une autre chose, Mons, dont je serois tres aise de savoir vostre sentiment, c'est que comme nous avons tous les jours une infinite d'advertissements et d'advys des desseins que lon continue de trainer contre la vie du Roy, qui nous tiennent dans des inquietudes insupportables a tous qui nous interessons pour sa conservation: Il i a des gens qui sont de sentiment que pour s'en delivrer une fois le moyen de cela seroit d'aller a la source de parler a M. de Calieres de tout ce qui est passe et decouvert de cette nature qu'il est paru clairement a tout le monde que le ministre de France (sans parler du Roy) i a en la main et que le Roy Jacques l'a autorisé, temoin l'affaire de Gradvall et la conjuration de l'annee passée, que cest une chose execrable et dont le Roi de France devoit pour son honneur et sa gloire se justifier en temoignant son ressentiment et empechant la chose autant qu'il dependra de lui, et cela publiquement, et que comme sans cela il ni a pas moyen de vivre dans ce monde, quoy que le Roy de France sache par experience combien le Roy d'Angleterre a eu abomination de telles maximes que l'on est obligé par necessite de lui declarer que si l'on ne voit pas clairement que le Roy de France fasse ce qu'il peut faire pour empecher ces ministres et le Roy Jacques a continuer ces menaces que l'on trouvera assez de gens en France que voudront par plusieurs mouvements s'employer a vanger le Roy d'Angleterre des barbares cruautés dont il est menacé tous les jours. Je ne say si vous n'avez peut estre pas deja parle a M^r de Calieres sur ce sujet. Je vous supplie de me le faire savoir et de me mender ce que vous jugez de ceci. L'on songe a tous quant on ne sait quel remede trouver a ces maux."

Same to same, Kensington, 26 March, no year. " . . . Jay bien recu aussi, Monsieur, celle par laquelle vous prenes la peine de me marquer la conversation que vous aves eu avec M^r de Calieres. Je croy qu'il a compris la chose et dessein que l'on a eu de lui faire comprendre que le Roy de Fr^e aura a craindre pour soy mesme si il n'empeche ces attentats abominables. Ceux qui croyent bien connoistre le genie du Roy et de sa cour assurent que hors un pareil discours qui approche d'une declaration ou d'une menace il ni a pas moien de mettre fin a ces machinations, et ils assurent que cela le fera uniquement. M^r le Pensionaire pourra, je croy, vous informer si vous ne l'estes deja que par M^r L'Electeur de Brandebourg nous sommes informes de la maison Madame de Maintenon que l'on a envoié des gens en Hollande et pour passer de la en ce pais afin d'assassiner le Roy. Apres cela nous avons estes informes que deux de ces gens, dont on nous a mandé les noms et fait la description, estoit tombes malades, et par la lettre si jointe de la mesme main vous verrez que l'on a remplacé ce défaut par deux autres qui doivent remplir leurs places. Comment pourra toujours se garantir contre ces dangers qui seront peut estre encore plus grands apres la paix faiste que durant la guerre si le mesme esprit regne sans crainte ni retenue, car les interets de la France seront toujours plus ou moins la destruction de nostre Roy. J'ay mande par la poste precedente mes apprehensions quant sa Maj^e passera en Hollande si la Haye est remplie de Francois quant il i sera la curiosité li i menera de Delft, des scleretés ne se distinguent pas a la veue des honestes gens, si la question si l'on pourra trouver quelque remede a cela et prendre des precautions que je crois tres difficiles. Cependant il i faudra songer. . . . Je ne vous dis rien de ce qui se passe au Parlement puisque [sic] say que vous en estes exactement informe. J'ajouteray seulement que celon les apparences nous aurons bientost une bonne fin de cete session."

Same to same. Du camp de Bellhardy (Beltrawry) du 4^e, the rest of the date is torn away, but the contents show that the letter was written three days after the battle of the Boyne, July 1, 1690. The first part of the letter is in another handwriting, the rest in the Duke of Portland's. "Je suis tres-marry que j'ay été si long temps sans vous écrire et vous mander les particularités de ce qui se passe icy; mais, je vous prie de croire, qu'il m'est impossible de satisfaire à ce que je dois à mes amis, le service de l'armée ayant extrêmement occupé pendant que nous étions à portée d'une armée ennemie si considerable. Je croy que la perte de la bataille au Pais-Bas nous touche aussi sensiblement qu'à vous, et j'espere que la douleur que vous en aurez en sera beaucoup moderée par les nouvelles que vous recen d'icy de la grace que le bon Dieu nous a faite premierement de nous conserver la personne et la vie du Roy d'un aussi dangereux coup que celui du canon dont il a été blessé, et puis de luy donner une si signalée victoire sur ses ennemis par le gain d'une bataille où malgré une si grand blessure, milliers de temoins publieront dan le monde avec quelle vigueur et courage il a agi et combien le succès de cete grande journée pour l'interest protestant, luy est, apres Dieu, dû uniquement. La relation que Tromer vous en aura communiqué est si modeste, et parceque le Roy l'a voulu voir devant qu'elle fut envoyée, si fort éloignée de toutes flatteries, que beaucoup de particularités fort essentielles à notre avantage y ont été omises. La maniere dont les ennemis ont été battus et la perte qu'ils ont faite les a tellement terrifiés que tout ce qui a resté ensemble le leurs armées a marché toute la nuit jusques à la porte de Dublin, qu'ils ont ansey quitté hier sans bruler ny piller, se dispersant par tout le pais, le Roy Jacques retirant avec une troupe de ses gardes vers le west de l'Irlande. Il n'y a que le corps des Francois et quelques peu des Irlandois avec lesquels Mons^{ieur} de Lauzun s'est retiré qui soit demeuré

* Mary of Modena.

† James II.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

ensemble. Dans Drogheda ils avoient laissé une garnison de trois mille hommes ou le Roy avoit envoyé un détachement pour l'attaquer, mais ils se sont rendus moyennant la vie et la liberté de s'en aller sans armes et sans bagage. Hier sa Maj^{te} a marché avec son armée jusque icy à neuf milles de Dublin, où un grand nombre des Protestants de la dite ville se sont vus rencontrer versant des larmes de joye." Here the amanuensis ends and Lord Portland continues]. "Jespere que ce succes pourra nous faire songer a reparer la perte que nous avons soufferte aus Pais Bas, qui nous a touche sensiblement; mais il faut prendre le bon et le mauvais que le bon Dieu nous l'envoie. Si nous avions perdu la bataille ici et quelle se [one or two words torn away] gagnée la bas, je croy que les choses auroit este en beaucoup plus mechant estat."

The Marquis of Normanby to Dykevelt, July 10 (1699). Complimentary.

From the Duke of Atholl, Bath, 27 June, no year, nor address. Defends himself against suspicions cast upon his loyalty. As I writ in my last I did (before my coming from Scotland) recommend to my sone to serve his ma^{ty} faithfully, and gave him all the power and commission I had the better to inable him to it, and I hope or now it is known to his Ma^{ty}, and had not I been sure of his readines to discharge his duty I had not intrusted him. And though I have always studied to make my actions and professions anserable, yet the vigilant malice of my enemyes hath inverdorr to misrepresent me otherways by informing what makes for their designs, and omitting what would justifie me, which they have most dising enough done in the case of my mens raising in armes, for that some of them [w]ur in armes is treu, but it was by order of the Committee of Estates for intercepting of Dundee's descent into the countree, and for securing of it against the highlanders that uer joined with him, if they should offer to plunder. So that I, having putt thus my small intrest in a condition to serve the King and defend itself, and given full directions to my sone therein, I presumed upon his Ma^{ty}'s goodness (my indisposicione daily increasing) that he would not take it ill that I came to this place for recovering of my halib, if it please God, since I am not so capable for want of health to serve his ma^{ty} as I have been formerly, and I hope his ma^{ty} will give me his protection. I am glad to hear of the surrender of the Castle of Edinburgh, and of the success of his ma^{ty}'s forces in Scotland. I wish his armes may be attended with the same success every wher."

From the Bishop of London (Compton) to Dykevelt, June 16, no year. "Vous pouvez bien temoigner combien je suis éloigné de mesler dans les affaires publiques. Neanmoins je me trouve obligé à present par l'amitié que vous avez en toujours pour moy de vous communiquer un affaire de consequence qui vous touche. C'est que l'embassadeur d'Espagne et le Resident de Venise, à ce qu'on dit, ont rapportés à quelques uns que vous aviez dit à eux [que vous] aviez gagné soixante seigneurs par [dont que vous] étiez icy pour le parti du Prince. Lequel a bien surpris ceux qui l'ont entendu, come vous pouvez bien croire. Je le laisse à vous d'en aviser, vous suppliens de cacher mon nom."

From Lord D'Arcy, without address, London, Ju. 17, no year. "... Depuis mon arrivé icy qui estoit que Moredy au matin j'ay fort peu appris de nouveau. Hier my lord Devenshire parut devant la justice en chef pour recevoir sa sentence, qui estoit de payer trentes milles livres d'Angleterre et de demeurer en prison jusque au temps qu'il l'aura payez. Hier j'allay a Windsor on j'ay treuveux leurs majestés en bon sentez. Le Roy a este un peu incommodé de la goute, mais cela est a cet heur passe. Mons^{te} le Prince de Denmark est parti aujourd'uy pour aller chez luy, on il passera six semaines. On a beaucoup parler icy d'un dissolution du Parlement, mais ont croyt que cela est differé pour quelque temps. Je ne vou pas vous incommoder d'avantage seulement de vous prier de faire mes tres humbles devoir a son Altesse et a Madame la Princess, et de vous assurer que si je vous puis faire quelque service dan ce pais vous ne trouverez jamais personne plus rejoyut de l'ocacion que," &c.

Lord Lexington. without address, Paris, Oct. 27, no year. Complimentary.

A letter without date or address, signed J. Cutts, (Lord Cutts?). Probably addressed to Dykevelt. "Pour quelques raisons de consequence que je vous diray quand j'auray l'honneur de vous voir j'ay resolu de ne point partir d'icy que Marôys prochain. Alors je partiray avec la poste, je veus dire dans la nuit au même temps que les lettres partent si bien que si vous trouvez bon de me donner votre [pa]cket, j'en prendray un soin particulier. Vous m'avez demandé, Monsieur, les noms de ces messieurs que j'ay mené chez vous. De peur que vous ne les sçassiez pas bien je vous les diray icy. My lord Highton fils de my lord Clare, monsieur Herbert, cousin de my lord Herbert of Churbery, Sir Serscoe How avec deux de ses freres, et je erois que Monsieur Lusort Gowre, beau-fils de my lord de Bath au[r]a l'honneur de vous voir devant que je parte. Il y a beaucoup d'honnêtes gens qui seront bien aise d'être connus de vous, mais je ne le crois pas à propos de vous embarrasser de tant de visites; aussi il n'est pas necessaire de vous mener ceux qui ne sont pas de gens de consequence. Je vous prie, monsieur, de m'envoyer la lettre qui [je] vous ay prêtée. Elle a été écrite de l'Attorney-Generell en Irlande a my lord Tyrconnell icy."

A letter, without signature, addressed to Dykevelt, and dated London, 18 October, no year. "Je suis asses empêché comment vous faire comprendre sans nome personne de quelle part cette lettre vous vient. Vous devriez pourtant poutester quand je vous diray que j'apprehende fort que vous n'ayez oublié celle qui vous serroit d'interprete quoy qu'avec bien de la peine. Quinze jours apres que vous estes parti de ce pais Mr. R. et moy nous sommes brouillés d'une maniere a ne vous voir pas si tost et ainsi cette voye de vous faire venir de mes nouvelles me manquant il sera tres necessaire que vous me fassiez sçavoir comment je vous pourray cerir surement. J'aurois bazarde de vous ecrire plus tost come je le fait à cette heure sans que nous estes aus bains, mais j'espere que ni mon silence ny aucune manvaise office qu'on ait pu me rendre aupres de vous n'aura fait aucune impression chez vous, puis que je suis et seray toute ma vie dans les mesme sentimens on vous m'avez quand vous m'avez fait l'honneur de me venire voir en ce pais icy."

A letter without date or signature, but written by a Frenchman, and addressed, as the contents show, to William III. :—"L'inclination et la haute estime que tout le monde se sent forcé d'avoir pour un heros de vostre carateler, le dur et honteux esclavage sous lequel je prevois que la France va gemir pour jamais s'il faut que vous generaux desseins viennent à manquer de succes, et quelques outrages que j'ay recueus en mou particulier de la cour, m'obligent à faire ce par cy tout dangereux que je le connoisse. Je scais aussi certainement que si j'envoiois l'appareil dressé qu'une mort cruelle m'est destinée si je suis assez malheureux pour que mon entreprise soit decouverte, je le seais, j'en suis sur, et je compte la dessus sans que ma fermeté et ma resolution en soient pourtant en nulle maniere ébranlées. En effet puisque c'est une necessité pour nous de mourir et que nous ne pouvons mourir qu'une fois, que nous exposons tous les jours nostre vie pour satisfaire des passions criminelles, et que milles maladies différentes viennent nous l'arracher lorsque nous nous y attendons le moins, et que nostre jeunesse ou nostre temperament semblent nous permettre de la pouvoir conserver plus long temps, je crois que je n'en saurois faire un meilleur usage que de la sacrifier pour le salut et la liberté d'une patrie, pour arcter le cours d'une puissance arbitraire et immodérée qui immole tout à ses interests et à sa conservation, et qui fait pour cela de gaieté de cœur de millions de miserables, et enfin pour avoir l'honneur de seconder les justes et magnanimes intentions d'un heros qui merite d'estre le maitre du monde autant par sa moderation que par son habilité et la grandeur de son courage. . . . Si vostre Majesté pouvoit ignorer l'estat déplorable où la France est reduite, je luy ferois un recit abrégé des maux qu'elle souffre, je luy representerois les provinces desertées par un nombre infini d'impos qui y entretiennent une eternelle famine au milieu même des moissons les plus abondantes aux qu'elles le laboureur n'ose toucher et qu'il se voit enlever pour le payement d'un millions de subsides. Je luy parlerois des loix les plus reverés et des privileges les plus anciens de la nation en general et des particuliers que la cour a abolis pour jamais. Le luy ferois voir le clergé, les Parlements, les universités, les plus celebres du Royaume d'écrites d'en registrer sans examen et sans repliche tous les ordres de la cour quelques contraires qu'ils puissent estre à la religion et aux anciennes constitutions de l'estat, et enfin les supplices cruels et les morts honteuses qu'on ordonne à tous momeus sans forme ny proces, mais V. M. en scait autant et plus que moy la dessus. Toutte la nation est au desesper, et about vostre Majesté entendroit dans les assemblées les plus nombreuses tout le monde murmurer contre le gouvernement et souhaiter quelques revolution jusque la que j'ay ou dire à plusieurs magistrats et de gens de la premiere qualité qu'ils voudroient de tout leur cœur que V. M. gagnast quelque bataille et qu'elle fust

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

EARL OF DESIGH.

desja dans Paris. Si je suis donc aujourd'hui criminel, tous les François sont coupables. La seule différence qu'il y a entr'eux et moy est que j'ose entreprendre ce qu'ils n'osent que penser. Je ne suis pas moins innocent qu'eux, mais je suis plus hardi, je ne crains point de reproches qu'on peut faire à toute nation." The writer advises the King as to the most favourable way for conducting his next campaign. The letter is in two different handwritings, while some blanks are filled in by Dykevelt.

A document entitled "Extrait de l'Imprimé Intitulé L'Observateur que la chambre basse condamne." It is in the same handwriting as the News Letters of 1686-93.

A document without date or signature, entitled, "Memoire pour La Confidente."

A list of the members of the Privy Council, the cabinet, the Order of the Garter, the House of Lords, without date. This also is in the same handwriting as the News Letters of 1686-93.

NEWS LETTERS 1686-93.

A Londres le 1^{er} Juillet 1691, Vendredy. "Ce matin l'on a recen icy deux bonnes nouvelles d'Irlande. L'une que la flotte marchande de Smyrne et de la Mediteranée est arrivée à Kinsale, l'autre qu'on avoit tellement ruiné a coups de canon les fortifications d'Athlone le 7 Juillet 27 Juin que le lendemain on devoit passer la rivière, et donner l'assaut dans de mesures où l'on voyoit les ennemis en petit nombre. J'ay vu les lettres du camp de ce jour la, et celles de Dublin datées deux jours aprez portent qu'on y parloit quatre contre un que le 9 Juillet la place aura 29 Juin été prise. A cela il y a toute sorte d'apparence. Mais l'autre nouvelle de la flotte marchande arrivée à Kinsale a produit aujourd'hui la cour et à la ville mille contestations et plusieurs gageures quoy que le secretaire de Mr. Coninsby l'un des gouverneurs d'Irlande ecrive expressément par apostille à Mr. Brichman qu'au moment qu'il alloit fermer sa lettre il avoit en avis de Cork que la flotte marchande étoit proche Kinsale au nombre d'environ 80 voiles. Ce fait est constant qu'on a vu autant de voiles. Mais plusieurs personnes non Jacobites, et Jacobites, ont affirmé et parié que c'est la flotte de France qui a paru à Kinsale cherchant la marcheande. Aujourd'hui j'ay entendu cent personnes à Witehall raisonner contradictoirement sur cela. J'ay demandé en particulier, et de votre part, au comte de Pembroke son opinion sur ces deux opinions qu'on affirme également. Il m'a assuré que c'est la flotte marchande qui est à Kinsale, et qu'outre la lettre de Mr. Brichman il a reçu par des marchands qui ont des lettres de Kinsale même que la flotte de Smyrne étoit enfin heureusement arrivée proche le port. Il m'a dit que je pouvois vous en assurer et parier. Cependant l'ambassadeur d'Holande qui a entendu ce matin les débats a dit qu'il ne pouvoit croire que la flotte marchande de Smyrne eut manqué à passer derrière l'Ecosse, et qu'il étoit vray qu'elle fut arrivée à Kinsale il y a des gens qui auroient envoyé un express à Dublin et à Londres, &c. Quoy qu'il en soit nous sçaurons la vérité au premier jour.

"On receut hyer des lettres du 8 Juillet 25 Juin de l'admiral Russell qui étoit proche l'isle d'Ouessant. Il marque qu'il n'avoit pu apprendre de nouvelles certaines de la flotte de France, que quelques-uns des batimens de pecheurs qu'il avoit rencontrés disoient qu'elle étoit rentrée dans Brest, mais d'autres disoient qu'elle avoit pris la route d'Irlande, et qu'il avoit été résolu dans un conseil de guerre d'aller la chercher de ce côté-là pour la combattre et pur garantir la flotte marchande.

"C'est une chose assez étrange qu'on ne soit pas bien informé de la route de la flotte de France. Elle gagne beaucoup si par quelque stratagème elle fait easter d'elle et des cotes de Bretagne la flotte d'Angleterre. J'ay vu des lettres de L'Isle de Jerzay écrites depuis sept jours, qui assurent que la consternation étoit si grande sur les cotes, sur tout à St. Malo, qu'on avoit déjà transporté les marchandises et les meubles sur l'avis que la flotte Angloise approchoit, et que peu de monde pouvoit bruler ce pais là."

Same date. "* Apres ce que my lord Sydney vous a dit touchant le capitaine de vaisseau que bien des gens soupçonner d'être Jacobite il y a leu de ne le plus soupçonner puisque luy-même en répond. Je desabuseray quelques personnes, mais non Mr. Filpatrick, qui n'a pas meilleure opinion de luy que du lord dont je vous envoyay le nom en chiffre et que vous montraies à 33. Luy, le comte et la comtesse et plusieurs autres assurent positivement que ce lord est le plus adroit Jacobite qui soit icy employé. Ils n'ont fait remarquer une chose que je sçay bien, c'est qu'il se promène souvent à l'écart et seul à seul avec Mr. Boklay. Je leur ay répondu que ce Mr. Boklay a une belle femme, my lady Sophie, qui est presentement à Paris aprez de la Reyne Jaquette, et que ce lord l'a souvent baizé com'il a voulu, que c'est la véritable cause pourquoy il fréquente tant le mary, qui d'ailleurs est une tête sans cervelle guér propre à l'entretenir, luy qui l'a bonne.

"Hyer, en raisonnant seul à seul avec Mr. de Ronquillo, (qu'on nomme déjà comte de sans qu'il ait encore divulgué la mort de son frere), pour tacher de penetrer le principal motif de l'ambassade de my lord Lexington en Espagne, aprez un long discours il me vint dans l'esprit de dire que, peut être, c'est pour disposer le Roy d'Espagne a donner le reste des Pais-Bas à l'Electeur de Baviere comme autrefois Philippes Second les donna à sa fille et à son gendre. Aussitot je remarquay qu'il grinçoit les dents, seroit il poing et qu'il eclata de son oeil avec une colere que je creus qu'il alloit se jeter sur moy il fit un serment horrible que si le Roy d'Angleterre, le meilleur amy du Roy d'Espagne étoit capable de luy faire faire une telle proposition c'étoit se declarer plus son ennemy que ne l'est le Roy de France, et qu'il conseileroit de s'accorder incontinent avec luy en luy donnant plutôt les Pais-Bas qu'à l'Electeur de Baviere; que le Roy de France pour un si beau present ne luy feroit plus la guerre, et luy donneroit incontinent en échange Casal, Pignerol, Perpignan, avec d'autres pais et plusieurs millions, &c. Apres que je l'eus laissé parler avec furie contre moy d'ozer luy debiter une telle sottise, je commençay aussi à crier en colere, mais sans jurer ny luy dire des injures comm'il m'en disoit, et je me levay crainte de quelque coup de poing en le blamant de ne vouloir pas que dans une conversation libre et sans consequence je luy disse mes imaginations aprez avoir souvent écouté les siennes. Je voulois m'en aller en grondant, mais il me pria de rester. Je me fis presser plusieurs fois, et comme je m'assis tout contre luy je luy demanday s'il y avoit secreté de son poing. Il m'avoua qu'il avoit été sur le point de me frapper. Je luy avouay que j'étois plus fort que luy, et qu'avant qu'il eut appelé du secours j'aurois en le temps de sortir. Il prit cela en riant, et peu à peu nous raisonnâmes de sens rassis. Il me voulut persuader que les Pais-Bas étoient le plus beau fleuron de la couronne du couronne du Roy d'Espagne, qui luy conservoit tous les autres. Je luy dis en colere pourquoy donc il ne le conserve pas mieux avec des troupes et de l'argent, et qu'il s'en repose sur les soins du Roi et des Etats généraux? Il attribue cela au malheur du gouvernement d'Espagne et aux conseillers d'état: qu'aussitot qu'il sera du nombre il espere d'y faire changer de conduite, &c. * * *

"On a arrêté plusieurs marchands Anglois et François qui ont porté du plomb, de la poudre et autres choses nécessaires à la France. Les warans sont pour crime de trahison, mais il est a craindre qu'on ne leur pardonne quoyque convaincus."

A Londres le 1^{er} Juillet 1691, Mardy. "Avant hyer dimanche j'eus l'honneur, monsieur, de vous écrire extraordinairement par Mr le Capitaine Golstein que la Reyne depecha au Roy pour luy porter la bonne nouvelle de la prise d'Athlone dont vous auez sceu par luy des circonstances et vous en pouvez voir d'autres dans la gazette cy jointe.

"Nous recevons le meme jour dimanche et hyer lundy par deux postes d'Holande plusieurs autres bonnes nouvelles sur tout touchant les Tures et l'Empereur et la levée du siege de Conj en Piedmont. Nous rendrons icy de bon coeur nos actions de grâces au bon Dieu, et nous le prions de continuer à abaisser la puissance de France, qui a tant fait de mal à ses voisins, sur tout aux Protestants.

"Tout ce qui se publia icy Vendredy dernier sur les lettres d'Irlande à Mr Brichman touchant la flotte de Smyrne s'est trouvé faux. Elle n'est point encore arrivée à Kinsale, et on l'en eroit bien loin. On ne sçait pas non plus si les vaisseaux qu'on avoit vus étoient la flotte de France. On n'a point de nouvelles certaines de l'endroit où elle est. Apparemment elle cherche la flotte marchande, ou elle se promène loin pour tacher de faire promener celle d'Angleterre et d'Holande, qui étoit revenue il y a quelques jours vers l'entrée de la manche semblant prendre la route d'Irlande.

"Mr de Ronquillo est transporté de joye d'être fait conseiller d'état, qu'il eleve par dessus tous les employs d'Espagne. Il partiroit des demain s'il avoit quelque argent et un navire. Il se prepare au pis aller qui est le paquebot. Il m'a parlé de 37 d'une manière que je voy

EARL OF DESIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH

que sa colere est passé. Une lettre de 381^a fort rejouy, et les bonnes nouvelles.

"L'archevêque d'York preta hyer serment à genoux à la Reyne, ayant des mains entres les siennes.

"Il y a quatre jours qu'il y eut quelque eumeute à la ville vers Temple-barre dont on pourra faire du bruit en dehors, mais ce n'est rien. Un sherif vouloit prendre des voleurs dans un endroit qui a été long temps privilegié. Les interesses tiraient, il y eut quelques gens blessez. On envoya a Witehall. Le duc de Lenster commanda a un officier de prendre 40 gardes dulcorps et 100 soldats avec ordre de ne point faire aucun mal qu'à la dernière extremité. On prit une douzaine de cete caillaie qu'on pursueit en justice, et tout cela n'a eu aucune suite."

A Londres le 30^e Juillet 1691, Vendredy. "La poste ordinaire d'Irlande n'est point arrivée depuis la prise d'Athlone. Mais l'on a apris la suite par une autre voye, si ell'est bien seure. C'est par les maitres de quelques navires galois partis de Dublin pour Withaven proche Carille au nord d'Ang^s, qui ont raporté que le bruit étoit generalement repandu dans Dublin que l'armée Irlandoise s'étoit separée pour aller partie vers Limerik, et partie vers Galloway, et que cete separation s'étoit fait avec tant de precipitation qu'ils avoient laissé huit pieces de canon, et qu'on leur a tué beaucoup de monde de leur arriere garde. On exagere fortement sur la perte, mais il faut attendre la confirmation. C'est ce que m'a dit aujourd'huy my lord Pembrok, et qu'il croit que la flotte marchande de Smyrne est retournée vers Lisbonne à cause du vent contraire. Il m'a dit aussi que les vaisseaux de guerre François qui sont dans Dunquerque ont tenté d'en sortir en faisant avancer quelques frigates legères, mais que les vaisseaux Anglois et Holandois qui les bloquent ont empêché leur dessein en tirant si à propos le canon qu'une de ces fregattes a été sur le point de couler à fonds et que les autres l'ont ramené deurs le port sans mats ny voiles.

"Ce soir une poste d'Irlande est arrivée qui ne porte autre chose sinon que depuis la prise d'Athlone les ennemis ont abandonné Sligo, Leusboroug et generalement tout le nord, allant en diligence vers Gallouaj et Limerik. Notre armée marchoit à eux il y a six jours. Assurement ils ne tiendront plus la campagne."

A Londres le 31^e Juillet 1691, Mardy. "Tout la ville de Londres est en joye (celle d'Amsterdam le sera bien tôt) pour la bonne nouvelle de l'arrivée de la flotte marchande de Turquie à Kinsale. Avant hyer l'on en eut un avis incertain, hyer matin un autre fort apparent, mais hyer au soir la Reyne recent un expres du commandant de cete riche flotte. Les interesses partageront le profit avec les assureurs. Il faut avouer que la flotte de France a manqué un grand coup qui auroit chagriné extraordinairement toute l'Angleterre et la Hollande, Dieu soit loué tant de cete nouvelle que de huit ou dix autres bonnes que sa providence nous a envoyées de l'orient, de l'occident et du midi. Un bon événement en Flandres ou vos etes et un autre par mer mettront la France en état de proposer une paix acceptable comme pourroit être celle des Pyrenées. C'est ce qu'on fait insinuer a 40^e par l'homme que vous sachez sur tout qu'on doit penser à proposer quelque chose sur la diminution de la puissance maritime dont ce traité ne pouvoit faire mention, l'assurant que sans cela on ne pouvoit traiter. On luy insinue aussi que les Jacobites d'icy assurent que ce n'est pas contre la gloire de la cour de France de proposer une paix acceptable puis que l'utile est preferable à tout, et que c'est une nécessité absolue de se tirer d'un pas dangereux en tachant de contenter les allies avant la campagne prochaine puis qu'ils auroit encore plus de forces et la France moins; qu'on doit compter sur la paix de Hongrie et sur la reduction entiere d'Irlande. Que si l'on a icy un avantage par mer, on peut des cet hyer faire descendre les troupes d'Irlande en France. Tous ces avis et autres semblables sont ajustez avec zelo le mieux qu'on a pu, et l'on voudroit bien que cela fit assez d'impression qu'on prit le party de proposer au Roy et a ses allies une paix acceptable. J'ay veu par les lettres de M^r de Mejercon que la cour de France a un veritable chagrin, on pour mieux dire desesperer, de la levée du siege de Conj, et encor plus de la manière dont on l'a levé qui rompt, dit-ils, les mesures d'Italie et sera prejudiciable aux affaires du Conclave. Ce ministre ne peut à present s'empêcher d'aprehendre pour la France. Je croy que M^r Lenthe aprehende encor davantage. J'ay veu autrefois de leurs lettres qui assuroient que la cour de France avoit non seulement 400^e hommes, mais aussi le fonds pour les entretenir pendant l'année 1691 et 1692, et qu'on travailloit au fonds pour l'année 1693. Les ministres meme de France n'oseroient meutjr si hardiment.

"Les lettres d'Irlande du 15^e portent que les deux armées n'étoient qu'à cinq milles l'une de l'autre, et que les rebelles dans leur desespero disoient qu'ils vouloient hazarder une bataille. C'est ce que l'armée du Roy souhaite, quoy que peut être elle feroit mieux de les reduire par les autres moyens.

"Une voute de la Tour, out étoit la poudre, a enfoncé. Il n'y a eu d'autre mal que la mort de trois ouvriers. La moindre étincelle auroit produit un grande desordre."

Du 31^e Juillet 91. "J'allay voir hyer la comtesse à la campagne, qui me dit qu'elle est bien informée des intrigues de my lord Rochester pour rentrer dans les affaires, et qu'il avoit pris de si bonnes mesures pendant la maladie de my lord Chambellan que s'il étoit mort il auroit eu sa charge et sa place au conseil du cabinet. Ajoutant que si ce lord étoit dans le gouvernement ce seroit encor pis que my lord President et qu'on aymeroit mieux que celui cy continuât, quoy qu'il n'y ait point d'apparence dit-elle qu'il subsiste dans le ministère, disant qu'il y a une si forte caballe contra luy qu'on le ruinera au parlement et peut être meme à la cour. Je contestay fort tout ce qu'elle me dit. Elle me parut être persuadée que cela arrivera, sur tout que my lord Rochester rentrera dans les affaires, quoy qu'elle le croyo Jacobite et autant attaché aux évêques que son frere le comte de Clarendon. Je luy demanday qu'est ce que la caballe dont elle me parloit vouloit faire de my lord Nottingham. Elle me repondit qu'il demeureroit comm'il est et qu'on ne l'attaquera pas.

"Elle a remarqué une chose que d'autres ont aussi remarqué, nonnemen le pauvre gouverneur. C'est que my lord Godolfin fait bien plus sa cour a la Princesse qu'à la Reyne, chez laquelle il ne va presque jamais qu'à l'heure du conseil, au lieu qu'il jûne et va reglement chez la Princess. Ell'est à present à Tunbridge. Il partit hyer pour y aller avec my lord Shrewsbory. La comtesse m'assura en parlant de luy qu'il n'auroit pas voulu en cas de mort être chambellan, parce qu'outre qu'un baton blanc signifie qu'on est vieux, c'est qu'il ne pense point à de nouvelles charges quoy qu'il vœuille être courtaisn.

"Elle me dit aussi que my lord Halifax pense toujours à remonter sur sa bete et à s'unir à quelque caballe, mais que personne ne veut de luy. Je luy dis qu'ell'est mal informée, et que son mary meme est de ses amis. C'est surquoy elle se recria fortement ne comprenant pas qui sont les personnes qui m'informent si mal. . . . De bruit est repandu ce soir que my lord Darmonth est arrêté. Je n'ay pas le temps d'aller à Witehall, pour en aller apprendre le sujet."

A Londres le 31^e Juillet 1691, Vendredy. "La poste d'Holande du 20^e qui arriva avant hyer nous a apris la mort de Mr. de Louvoys. Le chagrin de la decadence des prosperitez de France y peut avoir autant contribué qu l'apoplexie. C'est une veritable perte pour le Roy Louis, qui aymeroit mieux avoir perdu une bataille en Allemagne, ou en Catalogne, car pour en Flandres, ou en Italie, la consequence luy en seroit extraordinairement sensible. Des six ministres persecuteurs des Protestants qui ont revouqué l'edit de Nantes en voila quatre au tombeau, Le Tellier, Colbert, Seignelay et Louvoys. Les deux plus mechants restent encore, l'archevêque de Paris et le Jesuite la Cheze qui apparemment ne sont guere contents, car ils n'ont pas sujet de rire. J'avois toujours esperé que Mr. de Louvoys porteroit son maitre à changer de conduite à l'égard des Protestants, sujets et voisins, et qu'il pencheroit à faire une paix juste et memes à reformer l'Eglise Romaine plutot que de laisser tomber entierement la France en decadence: elle paroît en être encore éloignée: mais toutes choses sont possibles à Dieu, et les causes secondes sont bien disposées.

"Il est bien vray que my lord Darmonth est arrêté par ordre de la Reyne. On croit que c'est sur quelque decouverte que my lord Preston a fait. On l'a interrogé et il faut croire qu'on ne l'a pas trouvé embarrassé puis qu'il n'a pas été envoyé à la Tour. Au contraire il a sa maison pour prison, et a eu la permission d'aller à la campagne se promener. On attend les ordres du Roy pour sa liberté entiere. J'ay toujours observé autant que j'ay pu que luy et my lord Eversham, les deux commandans des forces mourantes du Roy Jacques se sont mieux comportez que les autres Jacobites, et ils ont eu raison d'en user ainsi exterieurement parce qu'ils étoient plus observez outre qu'il se peut faire que leur cœur est changé, et s'il ne l'est pas encore on ne doute pas qu'ils ne changassent s'ils étoient en employ ou en charge.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

EARL OF DESBIGH.

“On travaille à Witshall à une terrasse dans la rivière depuis l'appartement de la duchesse de Grafton jusqu'à l'appartement de my lord Portland. Vous savez que dans l'entredeux sont les logemens du Roy et de la Reyne. Les debris de l'incendie arrivée il y a quelques mois serviront à faire le fondement. On ne rebatira plus la galerie. On joindra ce grand espace au jardin privé qui par ce moyen ira jusques à la rivière et joindra à la terrasse. Cela sera beau. On racommode l'appartement de my lord Portland et celui de my lord Monmouth qui donne sur le jardin privé. On fera des appartemens et ailleurs à loisir pour les seigneurs qui ont perdu les leurs. La Reyne a donné à my lord Devenerch comme grand maître la chapelle du Roy Jaques, ou il se logera assez commodément pour tenir table.

L'admiral Russell a écrit du 24 qu'il a rencontré à dix lieues de Kinsale la flotte marchande de Smyrne, et qu'il la conduira jusques à Plymouth. Comme le vent à été bon elle y doit être aujourd'hui ou elle ne s'arrêtera pas, mais viendra droit dans la Tamise.

“Le bruit est répandu ce soir que les vaisseaux bloquez dans Dunquerque sont sortis la nuit avec la haute marée. J'ay entendu my lord Helan raconter cela à my lord Devenerch et ajouter que les vaisseaux Holandois en estoient cause par telle et telle raison. On a eu occasion de le contredire et de faire voir que les vaisseaux Holandois ont gardé leur poste, &c.”

A Londres, Samedi 24 Juillet. “Dieu soit loué, le Roy a gagné une bataille en Irlande. Mr. Smitan, qui en a porté la nouvelle à la Reyne la porte au Roy. Mr. de la Mellonière nous cont que jamais il n'a vu de troupes se mieux battre que les ennemis, et que la victoire a balancé pendant deux heures, mais qu'enfin les troupes du roy se sont surpassées, chaque homme ayant combattu. Le regiment de Portland arriva à propos pour soutenir une aile qui ploit. Mr. Holzappe fut tué et le colonel Herbert, frère de Torington. Les ennemis ont perdu cinq à six mille hommes et nous cinq cens. Le regiment de Ruvigny a perdu 20 officiers, le Prince de Hesse blessé dangereusement. Toutes les lettres portent que le general St. Ruth a été tué d'un coup de canon. (La seule circonstance facheuse est que 4 bataillons se sont jettés dans Galloway, mais on ne crois pas que la ville se veuille défendre.) Mr. de Ginkle a envoyé un détachement pour se saisir des provisions des ennemis ce qui achèvera leur perte. Ils ont laissé canon, bagage et drapeaux. Le courrier va partir. Je n'aj pas le temps de vous en dire davantage. La joye est icy si grande qu'on ne la peut exprimer. Dieu veuille conserver le Roy, et luy donner un pareil bon leur en personne. On a détaché des vaisseaux pour bruler à Limerik les navires de transport.”

A Londres le 24 Juillet 1691, Mardy. “Samedy dernier, Mr. Smitan, ayde de camp du general Ginkel, arriva icy d'Irlande, et la Reyne l'envoya à camp du Roy le même jour pour porter la bonne nouvelle d'une bataille gagnée. Je vous écris, monsieur, par cet exprez qui me dit qu' aussitôt qu'il auroit rendu compte au Roy il iroit vous chercher pour avoir l'honneur de se faire connoître à vous. Il me laissa soixante guinées des cent que la Reyne luy avoit donné, afin que je luy envoyasse une lettre de change sur Mr. Vanderesse, qui est à présent en Holande. Je prens la liberté de mettre la lettre de change dans votre paque, et je vous supplie tres humblement, monsieur, de faire en sorte que Mr. Smitan la reçoive. En cas qu'il fut party pour revenir icy, ayez la bonté de me renvoyer la lettre de change, car sans cela le commis de Mr. Vanderesse ne restitueroit pas l'argent.

“En fin la riche flotte de Smyrne est entrée dans la Tamise et la partie qui appartient à la Holande y arrivera bien tot. Cette nouvelle contribue encor plus à la bonne humeur des Anglois que tant d'autres que rejoignent depuis un mois.

“On a des lettres de l'Admiral Russell du 24, mais qui ne disent rien, sinon qu'il alloit chercher la flotte des ennemis sur leurs cotes. Quelques-uns de leurs vaisseaux ont rencontré quelques navires marchands partis d'icy pour les Barbados, chargés de provisions, l'un d'entreux s'est sauré de bonne heure à Falmouth sans sçavoir si les autres ont été pris.

“On a mené aux Dunnes un gros navire marchand qui a chargé à Amsterdam du canon et autres choses pour France apparemment quoy qu'il dise que c'est pour St. Sebastien en Espagne. Si l'on ne pend quelques marchands, qui font secrettement commerce avec l'ennemy, on aura bien de la peine à les empêcher. Ils sont bien plus coupables que les voleurs de grand chemin. Cependant les marchands Anglois prisonniers, ou en fuite, trouvent icy des personnes qui sollicitent leur grace, nommement Mr. Shepert, confident de my lord cham-belan. Il y a un marchand de même nom que luy qui est le plus coupable et qui est en fuite, qui donneroit plusieurs milliers de guinées pour avoir sa grace. Cela seul marque son crime. L'on a toutes les preuves nécessaires. . . . Le pauvre baron de Riedzell est venu d'Irlande, et est party pour la Holande aujourd'hui. Le baron de Gortz m'avoit donné ordre d'avoir soin de luy. J'ay eu occasion de luy rendre plusieurs services. Pour recompense cet esprit malade s'est jetté sur moy ayez m'avoir parlé civilement, mais de temps en temps il montre ce qu'il est. Le baron de Gortz vous fera l'histoire de ce qui me regarde, et vous en rirez. Je croy que vous etes campez ensemble.

EARL OF
DESBIGH.

“La poste d'Holande est arrivée aujourd'hui sans aucune nouvelle, sinon qu'il n'est pas possible que le Roy aient à Gerpines puisse attaquer le duc de Luxembourg à Florennes. Ce ne sera pas un grand malheur s'il n'y a pas de bataille. Le Roy ne sera pas en danger et son armée se conservera pour agir l'hiver si les ennemis agissent à leur ordinaire. Il ne leur reste que les trahison et les incendies en partage.”

A Londres le 3 Août 1691, Vendredy. “Depuis la bataille gagnée en Irlande on a appris que les troupes du Roy se sont saisies de deux bons châteaux sur le Shannon remplis de provisions, et qu'elles marchaient à Galloway. Il y a cinq jours qu'elles ont den certe arrivées devant cette ville, et on croyoit qu'elle capituleroit avant que d'être assiégée. C'est ce que nous attendons d'apprendre à tout moment. Vous verrez, monsieur, dans la gazette cy jointe les noms des officiers ennemis tuez ou prisonniers.

“L'on avoit préparé une proclamation pour accorder aux rebelles leurs biens s'ils se rangeoient à leur devoir. Mais on dit que depuis la prise d'Athlone et le gain de la bataille il n'est plus à propos de publier la proclamation. Il y a apparence qu'on attend en Irlande les ordres du Roy sur cela. My lord Burlington et quantité d'autres qui ont leur bien en ce pais-la ne souffriraient qu'on accordât grace aux rebelles, qui recommenceroient dans quelque armée leur rebellion s'ils estoient assez forts. On aymeroit bien mieux que ce royaume étant purgé des raperies et des mechans papistes, fut habité par des refugiez. Si le roy en établisoit un bon nombre en Irlande cela empêcheroit la plus-part de retourner en France en cas que la paix se fit et en cas que par la paix on obtint leur retour avec la liberté de conscience, ou que la cour de France par politique l'accordât par avance d'une manière a s'y pouvoir fier. Il y a lieu de croire que si sa puissance est fort abaissée elle mettra en usage toute sorte de moyens pour tacher de se maintenir. J'aymerois mieux que tous les refugiez fussent en Irlande que si, sous quelque pretexte que ce fut, ils retournoient en France.

“On parle icy avec execration du vice-amiral Anglois, Reyt, qui commande l'escadre qui est aux Indes Occidentales. Il a par trahison manifeste laissé échapper dix ou douze navires de France chargés de toute sorte de provisions. Chacun dit à présent qu'on a averty depuis long temps l'admirauté que c'est un Jacobite, et qu'on a eu tort de l'employer dans un poste si important. Le chevalier Lander vice-chambellan m'a dit que le coup que ce commandant a voulu manquer étoit plus utile aux affaires du Roy que le gain de cinq cens mille pieces. On luy fera son proces s'il n'échappe.

“Trois navires marchands Anglois chargés de drap pour la Moscovie de la valeur de cent mille eens ont été pris sortant de la Tamise par les armateurs sortis de Dunquerque non obstant le blocus. Cela fait craindre pour la flotte marchande qui vient de Virginie et des Barbados par derrière l'Ecosse, dont les droits du roy à la coutume seront fort considerables.”

Du 28 Juillet 91. “J'ay eu la curiosité de lire soigneusement depuis trois ou quatre mois tous les petits écrits faits en Holande sur le sujet de l'affaire de Mr. Bayle philosophe à Rotterdam, que Mr. Jurien a dénoncé au magistrat comme auteur du diabolique livre qui fait tant de bruit, intitulé ‘Avis Important aux Refugiez.’ J'ay vu plusieurs lettres écrites d'Holande pour ou contre Mr. Bayle, et je me suis entretenu avec de ses amis et de ses ennemis. Apres tout cela je suis entièrement convaincu, de même que l'amy froid, et quantité d'autres personnes qui ont examiné l'affaire, que c'est Mr. Bayle qui a composé ce detestable livre sous le nom d'un papiste outré contre les reformez en general, contre les états genezaux, et sur tout contre le Roy touchant l'expédition d'Angleterre, dont il est l'ennemy caché, quoy que le même auteur ait fait une preface au livre pour servir de contre-poison. Il est idolâtre de la personne du Roy de France et fort attaché aux intérêts du Roy Jaques. Je ne sçay si vous avez leu ce livre, qui est aussi bien écrit que se puisse, et dont pourtant personne en France n'a voulu s'en dire l'auteur quoy que du commencement Mr. Bayle en assurât que c'étoit Mr. de Pellisson, et que son amy Mr. de la Bastide avoit fait la belle preface à Londres. Mais on a sçeu certainement que ny l'un ny l'autre n'y ont point de part, et que le livre n'a été imprimé ailleurs qu'en Hollande, quoy que Mr. Bayle eût dit cent fois qu'il avoit été imprimé à Paris avec privilège. Tout cela a été verifié faux. Son amy Mr. Beaulnal n'est guere moins capable que luy.

EARL OF
DENVIGH.

"Je voy icy nos principaux réfugiés fort chagrins de ce qu'après les preuves qu'on a mises entre les mains du magistrat, on souffre en Holande un tel homme qui est beaucoup pire qu'un espion. On sçait que quelques Arminiens considerables le protegent et les Sociniens aussi. Si c'étoit un homme né sujet de l'état il n'y auroit rien à dire, mais c'est un méchant François réfugié qui écrit contre l'état, qui decrie sa conduite et celle du Roy. Car pour son libertinage et son irreligion qui paroissent dans ces autres ouvrages on souffre cela en d'autres gens ses semblables, mais qui n'écrivent point contre le gouvernement. Lorsque vous serez à Utrecht, et que vous aurez du loisir, ce qui est rare, je souhaiterois qu'il vous plût de faire venir chez vous Mr. Saurin pour vous informer de cette grande affaire pour les réfugiés, dont vous êtes protecteur, afin que vous en sachiez la vérité."

A Londres le 7 Août 1691, Mardy. "Il y a trois jours
28 Juillet

qu'un valet que Mr. de Scravemour envoya à madame sa femme porta par occasion des lettres qui marquoient que le 20 l'armée prit d'assaut le fort de Gallouy qui commande la ville et qu'aussitôt le gouverneur demanda à capituler; que l'on convint des articles excepté qu'il demanda quatre jours pour voir s'il luy viendrait du secours, mais qu'on ne luy en accorda que deux. Dans ce moment la valet partit et personne ne doute que la ville qui est riche ne se soit rendue le second jour. Il faut avouer que le general Guinckel a du bonheur puis qu'il a pris dans une quinzaine de jours deux bonnes places et gagné une bataille. Un plus habille auroit pu n'en pas tant faire. Le feu duc de Schonberg n'auroit pas passé le Sclanon dans Athlone, ny l'azardé une bataille decisive dans l'endroit ou on l'a donnée, mais ses eccliers en fait hardiment l'un et l'autre, et le bon Dieu les a fait heureusement reüssir. Un exprez vient d'arriver avec les articles de la capitulation. La Reyne a pris une bonne resolution et digne de sa pieté en donnant des ordres pour une reformation publique les jours de dimanche afin d'obliger d'autant plus le peuple d'aller à l'église, et d'empescher certaines personnes libertines d'aller courir aux cabarets aux environs de la ville. Il n'y aura ny carrosses de luège ny cabaret pour boire ny manger, et on punira les blasphemateurs, &c. Ce bon ordre commença avant hier dimanche et en remarqua que les églises étoient plus remplies qu'à l'ordinaire. On croit que cela diminuera les droits de l'exécise, parce que le peuple boit plus le dimanche que les autres jours, mais n'importe, la Reyne a bien fait.

"Mr Menardeau Champré, fils d'un conseiller au Parlement de Paris, est venu icy, quoyque papiste François, pour accompagner, dit-il, son amie Mad^e de la Perinne, fille de Monginot medecin, laquelle ayant abjuré en France vient faire une serieuse repentance en Ang^e, dit-elle, et son amy luy a obtenu un passeport par le credit du duc de la Feuillade. Tout cela est suspect. Aussi my lord Nottingham a-t-il jugé à propos de faire arreter Mr Menardeau et il l'a interrogé. Il a en la precaution en passant au camp du Roy d'obtenir un passeport de my lord Sydney par le moyen de M^r de Letang, et de M^r Menard ministre, qui auroient pu se dispenser de parler pour un homme de qualité papiste, amy, ou amant, de Mad^e de la Perinne, puis qu'il l'avoit conduite en bien de secreté, quelle necessité à luy de vouloir voir la Hollande et l'Ang^e en temps de guerre. Cela sent l'espion ainsi que my lord Nottingham luy a dit et luy a allégué l'exemple du capitaine Genes. Sans le passeport qu'il a surpris on le retiendrait en prison pour quelque échange des prisonniers d'Orange, mais on dit qu'on le va renvoyer en Hollande. Si j'en avois été creu on l'auroit fouillé, car il pourroit bien avoir porté des lettres icy et en pourra remporter. M^r de la Bastide le vid dez qu'il arriva. Il est amy de madame de Monginot, qui pria son beaufreux M^r de la Salle d'être caution de M^r Menardeau. Mais il n'a en garde de faire cette folie. Madame de Nottingham meme qui le conoit l'en a détourné, et d'autres aussi, et s'il avoit été capable d'offrir son cautionnement on l'auroit refusé. La cour de France jouë quantité de reports pour avoir des espions et des correspondans par tout.

"Enfin, M^r de Ronquillo est mort ce matin. Il y a trois jours qu'il tomba en rechute. Je l'allay voir. Je le trouvoy priant S^t Jaques de Compostello patron d'Espagne, c'étoit le jour de sa fete. J'avois accoutumé de le railler sur ces sortes de devotion et de luy parler de la veritable. Il m'entretint sur le sujet de Roy, sur vous, et my lord Portland. Il esperoit de bien servir la bonne cause dans le conseil d'Espagne. Il me dit pourtant qu'il se sentoit foible et qu'il étoit resigné à la mort; que s'il avoit en quelque argent pour les frais de son voyage qu'il seroit party; qu'il attendoit dans six jours deux mille cinq cens pieces par le moyen de M^r Houblon et autres marchands de Londres qui ont commerce en Espagne ausquelles il donneroit quinze et vingt pour cents d'interest; qu'après avoir recu cet argent il partiroit sans ses domestiques. Je le fus voir hyer au soir sur ce que j'apris qu'il étoit si foible que la nature ne faisoit point de fonction. Quoy qu'il fut extrêmement assoupy il parla un peu lors qu'on me nomma, mais aussitôt il s'assoupit. Je luy parlay fortement, il ne repoudoit presque rien et n'ouvroit point les yeux. Les medecins me dirent qu'il n'y avoit plus de remèdes, et qu'il ne vivroit pas un jour. Il est mort ce matin sans souffrir. Son secretaire avoit hyer demandé à my lord Nottingham la protection de la Reyne pour les domestiques, qui ont plusieurs creanciers comme avoit leur maître, et que la justice pourra poursuivre. On luy fit une bonne reponce. Ils m'ont protesté aujourd'huy qu'ils n'avoient pas dequoy durer demain. J'ay conseillé au gentilhomme Dom André de partir incessamment pour Madrid afin de solliciter le Roy d'Espagne d'envoyer dequoy payer les dettes. Si le defunt avoit en son present d'ambassade ils l'auroient vendu pour vivre. Vous sçavez, monsieur, mieux que moi que c'est une perte pour les affaires d'Espagne, et qu'il n'y a guère de conseillers d'état d'une telle capacité que M^r de Ronquillo. ***

"On m'écrit de Constantinople que M^r de Villiers autrefois ecuyer et presque gouverneur du Prince de Nassau de Frize, qui l'avoit voulu marier à l'insceu du Roy avec la fille du duc de Zell, se tua luy-meme d'un coup de pistolet l'année derriere. Il se faisoit nommer Vanier. Il étoit dans les intrigues d'état et jonoit au double. Je l'avois fort connu. Icy il y a environ quinze ans lors qu'il y vint de France sortant de chez les moynes."

A Londres le 10 Aout 1691. Vendredy. "J'ay remarqué, monsieur, dans votre dernière lettre que vous êtes convaincu de plus en plus que le duc de Luxembourg a des ordres précis de ne point combattre. Sur ce fondement ne peut on pas croire que le dessein de la cour de France est de se conserver pour l'hyver prochain afin de recommencer leurs intelligences dans les principales villes Espagnoles et bigotes pour les faire soulever. Cela étant pourroit on pas dès à present faire sortir de ces villes par precaution les personnes suspectes quelles qu'elles soient, sur tout certains eclesiastiques. C'étoit le sentiment de feu Mr. de Ronquillo que le Roy d'Espagne doit conserver comme ses yeux ce qui luy reste aux Pais-Bas, mais qu'il doit profiter de l'exemple de Montz en faisant sortir de bonne heure des autres villes les personnes qui sont soubçonnées d'aymer le gouvernement de France. Si on ne les conoit pas toutes, l'on en peut decouvrir la plus part par le moyen des eclesiastiques affidés et par les confessions sans compter les monitoires. On ne leur fera pas grand tort en leur faisant changer de demeure pendant la guerre de Bruges à Bruxelles, de Gand à Anvers. Lorsque les troupes de France seront en grand nombre en quartier proche ces villes il est à craindre que les intelligences n'éclatent non obstant les fortes qu'on y pourra mettre.

"Les seigneurs juges ou gouverneurs d'Irlande ont fait publier la proclamation 7 en faveur des rebelles qui voudront se soumettre au gouvernement. L'on espere que cela achevera de les reduire bientot. Sinon on s'apliquera à ne plus leur donner de grace. Les Irlandois qui sont icy ne sont pas bien-aise de cette proclamation, mais elle est judiciaire et Chretienne.

"On planta hyer au parc environ 40 drapeaux ou etendards fort uséz qu'on a pris à la dernière bataille d'Irlande, que my lord Inchiquin a portez. Le peuple est bien-aise de voir cette marque de victoire. Il y en a un avec la devise de Constantin, En ce signe de la croix je vaincray, mais on a mis à sa place une harpe, les armes d'Irlande.

"J'apris hyer qu'on a trouvé dans une charette venant de Douvres un paquet de lettres caché dans des hardes venant de France dans quelque barque adressé à un marchand de Londres pour les envoyer en Ecosse. Le

EARL OF DENVIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

paquet fut porté aux commissaires de la Douane, qui l'envoyèrent à my lord Nottingham, le quel expédia deux warrants pour arreter le carérier et le marchand. Si l'on étoit bien soigné et bien disposé pour ces sortes de choses on arretoit plus de gens qu'on ne fait.

"Il y a trois jours que je vous fis sçavoir la mort de Don Pedro de Ronquillo. Ses domestiques ne savent que devenir. La Reyne aura soin d'eux. Je croy qu'il faudra qu'elle les loge et les nourrisse jusques à ce que la cour d'Espagne y ayt pourveu. La Reyne-donairière a fait une action inhumaine en ce qu'elle n'a point voulu permettre qu'on enterat le corps de cet ambassadeur dans son chapelle de Sommerset, où qu'on l'y mit en depos. Il faut être bien Jacobite pour en user de la sorte, d'autant plus qu'il n'y a point dans Londres d'autre chapelle papiste ou a été obligé de l'enterer à Westminster parmi les Protestants, qui n'ont pas eu la dureté de refuser. Si la Reyne n'étoit la bonté même elle l'auroit fait enterer à Sommerset nonobstant les pitoyables scrupules de la Reyne donairière, dont les emissaires disent qu'il étoit juif. Personne ne sçait mieux le contraire que moy, puis que pendant les derniers jours de sa vie il étoit si papiste qu'il ne prioit presque que les saints. J'ay eu occasion ce matin sans faire semblant de rien, de dire à my lord Faversham que les Jacobites et les papistes memes trouvoient l'action de la Reyne-donairière sa metresse destituée d'humanité et de raison. Il a levé les epaules me disant que personne ne peut repandre de son humeur.

"Le duc de Niucastel est mort. Voilà une jarretière vacante. Il se peut faire que le Roy la donnera à M. le Landgrave de Hesse, s'il la donne à un Prince en dehors, et s'il la donne à des sujets il y a bien de gens qui souhaiteroient que ce fut au comte de Portland. Il ne faut pas douter que le duc de Lenster, le duc de Schonberge n'y prétendent de même que my lord Nottingham et autres. Le duc de Niucastel a laissé à son genére le comte de Clare huit ou dix mille pieces de rente, et il en avoit déjà tant. Comn'il est grand menager et campagnard ce sera le plus riche seigneur d'Angleterre.

"On parle déjà qu'on pourra embarquer dix mille soldats en Irlande aussitôt que la grace sera acceptée par my lord Tirocnell et par ces autres qui sont à Limerik."

A Londres le 1^{er} Aout 1691, Mardy.

"... L'affaire de my lord Dartmouth bien loin d'être finie comme ses amis le disoient est aggravée de beaucoup puis qu'on l'a été prendre à son maison de campagne et qu'on l'a transféré à la Tour. Le warrant porte que c'est pour crime de haute trahison.

"On dit qu'on n'a pas sujet d'être content de my lord Preston qui, depuis sa grace, n'en use pas bien. On l'a fait revenir icy de la campagne où i étoit allé sans permission. Mr. Crone, autre traitre, qui a eu aussi son pardon s'est absenté. L'indulgence ne gagne pas ces sortes de gens. My lord Nottingham a interrogé aujourd'hui my lord Preston, et on l'a envoyé en prison, non à la Tour.

"La Reyne envoya hier un expres au Roy. On croit que c'est sur les lettres interceptées qui venoient de France par Donvres en Ecosse.

Le Parlement s'assembla hier et fut prorogé pour deux mois.

"Le Roy a envoyé une commission au duc de Lenster pour être general des troupes d'Ecosse comm'il l'est de celles d'Angleterre. La Reyne ne pouvoit lui donner cette commission parce qu'elle n'a pas encor été declarée Regeute par acte du Parlement d'Ecosse pendant l'absence du Roy.

"Les ministres réfugiés en Ang^{re} ont nommé, avec l'approbation de l'évêque de Londres, deux d'entr'eux pour deputés en Hollande au synode de Naerden, afin d'agir d'un commun concert contre les ministres Sociniens et autres novateurs.

"Il y a de gens qui disent que les magistrats d'Amsterdam pouront empêcher que le synode Wallon ne reçoive des deputés étrangers dans leur assemblée. Mais il s'agit d'orthodoxie entre réfugiés et réfugiés, non entre Anglois et Hollandois."

A Londres le 7^{me} Aout 1691, Vendredy. "Une poste d'Irlande du 11^{me} est arrivée aujourd'hui. Elle nous apprend que les principaux rebelles ne se veulent point accepter l'amnistie, et qu'ils font mine de se vouloir défendre dans Limerick. Il n'y a que le comte de Clericiard, qui est fort riche, qui a pris le bon party en se soumettant. On ne sçait pas encore si le general Ginckel assiegera cette maudite place, on s'il se contentera de la bloquer haut et bas long du Shanon afin de faire crever les ennemis de faim, quoy qu'on dise qu'ils ont des provisions pour plusieurs mois, et que la France continuera d'y en envoyer.

"La comtesse de Dorset, jeune, belle, riche et sage, mourut hier de la petite verolle. La Reyne l'a regretté beaucoup. C'étoit l'une de ses dames d'honneur.

"My lord Dartmouth, qui a la permission de voir ses amis à la Tour, a demandé de M^{re} Le Paz si vous luy aviez fait quelque reponce sur son sujet. Il croit de sortir bien tôt, mais ce n'est pas le sentiment de quantité de personnes.

"Il y en a plusieurs qui murmurent contre l'admiral Russell de ce qu'il ne fait rien, et de ce qu'il écrit si peu souvent à l'admiranté. Les Jacobites disent que les deux flottes ont de semblables ordres, de ne point combattre."

A Londres, le 11^{me} Aout 1691. "On recent hier avis que la grande flotte d'Ang^{re} et d'Holande est revenue dans la manche à Torbay, sur la nouvelle qu'elle a eu que la flotte de France étoit rentrée dans Brest. Une campagne perdue comme celle-cy en ne faisant rien par mer, donne sujet de parler contre l'admiral Russell et contre ceux qui luy servent de conseillers sur la flotte. On m'a assuré que my lord President même parloit contre luy.

"My lord Preston est sorti de prison en donnant caution de comparoitre devant les juges à la prochaine session.

"Mr. Menardeau est toujours arrêté chez un messenger, mais il parle à qui il veut. Personne ne doute à present que ce ne soit un espion dont la cour de France s'est servie pour le faire venir en seureté dans Londres avec la fille de Monginot, qui est une veritable coquette quoy qu'elle ayt abjuré. Icy la [two or three words wanting] J'ay dit à son pere qu'il en est la dupe. Il souhaiteroit bien que cet homme fut renvoyé vite à Paris. Il a dit en Hollande et icy que le Roy de France souhaite la paix nonobstant sa grande puissance, et qu'il ayt en main le fonds d'argent necessaire pour l'année prochaine et les recreues assurées: qu'il veut laisser tout le commerce à ses anciens amis les Hollandois, afin qu'ils reparent leurs pertes, et qu'à leur consideration il reconnoitra le Roy Guillaume pour Roy d'Ang^{re} puis qu'ils l'ayment tant, &c.

"La Reyne fait donner trente cinq pieces par semaine, outre le logement, aux domestiques de feu M^{re} l'ambassadeur d'Espagne pour leur entretien jusques à ce que la cour d'Espagne y ayt pourveu, laquelle sera sans doute sensible à cette generosité, et sera excitée par là à rapeler les domestiques et à payer les creanciers du [two or three words wanting] en grande nombre. On ne se lasse point de parler contre l'action de la Reyne donairière de n'avoir pas voulu qu'on l'enterrât à Sommerset, où l'on enterre tant d'autres papistes. En m'entretenant par occasion avec l'envoyé de Portugal sur cette action il m'a dit que la Reyne donairière avoit bien fait, et qu'il falloit se moquer des Anglois qui la blament. Je luy ay dit qu'il falloit se moquer des Portugais qui l'approuvent, et qu'il doit compter que le Roy d'Espagne s'en ressentira. Il m'a parlé de cette puissance comme d'un rien. Jugez par là l'humeur Portugaise.

"M^{re} de Ronquillo en mourant a déclaré par son testament que son uveu étoit son fils naturel, et luy a donné le bien dont il pouvoit disposer. Il n'a pas encore eu le moyen de prendre le deuil.

"Le vieux oncle de Swede M^{re} [two or three words wanting] qui a vey icy six differents gouvernemens est mort. Il ne manque pas de creanciers non plus, ny ses domestiques de misère, mais il n'est pas à propos que la Reyne les nourrisse.

"On dit qu'il y a plusieurs dames de qualité qui souhaitent de remplir la place de dame d'honneur de la comtesse de Dorset, comme la comtesse de Nottingham, la comtesse de Suffolk, amiable veuve que la voix publique destine à 38^{me}, la comtesse de Mountmouth, madame Lansdon fille de monsieur d'Omerquerque, madame Obrian, aussi amiable veuve, fille de my lord President, madame Obrian soeur de my lord Villars, qui a été fille d'honneur. Mais on dit que la comtesse de Styrum l'emportera sur toutes, si elle y pretend sans donner même la jalousie puis qu'elle a été la première. On croit qu'elle n'est pas assez riche pour soutenir la dépense qu'il faut faire.

"Un jeune Prince de Nassau Disembourg, d'environ viugt ans, est arrivé icy. Il a veu la Reyne, qui la bien reccu. Il vient voir la pais pendant la guerre. J'ay dit cela à son gouverneur, qui m'a dit qu'il avoit déjà fait une campagne, et qu'il continuera. Je ne luy ay pas été inutile à Witchall.

* A cypher for a surname.

EARL OF DENBIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

"Le vieux docteur Sandcroft, l'opiniâtre, cy devant archevêque de Cantorbéry, a quitté cette ville pour aller achever sa vie dans la province de Suffolk. Plusieurs Jacobites qui le reconnoissent luy ont présenté leurs enfans pour les benir. Le Colonel Ogletorpe m'i dat qu'il luy a mené le sien. J'ay pris occasion de luy parler de sa rebellion interieure. Je croy qu'il est fâché de n'avoir pas pris du commencement le bon party. Il avoit toujours compté sur l'Irlande, à present il ne sçait plus surquoy avoir esperance."

A Londres, le $\frac{21}{22}$ Août 1691. Vendredy. ".
L'on a donné des ordres à l'admiral Russell de retourner incessamment sur les cotes de France pour tacher de faire quelque chose. Le public sur tout les Torsy murmurent fort contre luy comme s'il avoit tort : on ne l'accuse pas de manquer d'affection mais de capacité. Le conseil du Cabinet a dure aujourd'huy trois heures, et l'on y a fait venir les commissaires de l'admirauté, et de l'office de la marine. Lors que le chevalier Haddock est entré un Tory m'a dit que s'il avoit commandé la flotte, et une telle flotte, il avoit mieux fait que Mr. Russell."

A Londres, le $\frac{28}{29}$ Août 1691, Mardy. ".
La Reyne a choisy la comtesse de Nottingham pour l'une de ses dames d'honneur à la place de feüe la comtesse Dorset. Chacun, excepté peut être les concurrentes approuve ce choix, puisque la dame a toutes les qualitez necessaires et que le comte se epoux rend journellement services à leurs Majestez."

LETTERS TO ISABELLA, COUNTESS OF DENBIGH.

Lord Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh. "Ce premier jour de May. Je vous salue tres respectueusement et tres tendrement, ma tres aimable comtesse, et ne saurois vous dire combien je suis affligé d'une goutte qui fait de la peine à tant de personnes à la fois. Je veux me flatter qu'elle ne durera pas, et que votre voyage d'Argeville ne sera pas différé pour fort long temps. Nous sommes dans une vraye impatience de vous voir, Monsieur le Conte et vous, et de vous y faire le mieux que nous pourrons les honneurs de notre societe. Je ne vous parle pas de nostre chetive isle, car en effet je n'en sçais que ce que la gazette m'en apprend. Vous en serez peutestre surprise, c'est pourtant vray. Je vendroy pouvoir l'oublier aussy vite et aussy aisement qu'on y est oublié, par ses amis j'entend, car pour ses ennemis ils ont d'ordinaire la memoir tres bonnes. Avertissez nous de votre route, car soit que vous veniez par celle du Molins soit que vous veniez par celle de Bourgogne nous irons au devant de vous et nous vous attendrons dans une maison du seigneur ou à [illegible] a Montargis. La cour doit être a Fontainebleau dans le commencement de Septembre. Ce voisinage nous fera trop d'honneur. Incapable d'en soutenir l'éclat je me retirerois dans ce temps la avec mes chiens dans la foreste de Montargis. Mais vous serez en état de nous venir voir avant ce temps la. Recevez, ma chere comtesse, les assurances d'un tendre et respectueuse attachement qui ne finira qu'avec ma vie. Faites s'il vous plait ma cour a monsieur le conte, que j'assure de mes respects, et a qui je souhaite de tout mon coeur un retablissement prompt et parfait. Je ne saurois vous dire avec quel plaisir j'apprens que vous estes contente de la conduite de my Lord Peilding et du progres qu'il fait."

The above is added to a letter from Lady Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh.

Lady Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh, March 24. ".
Vous aures après ce que cest passé au Parlement au sujet du Prince de Gall. Pultenay a fait la proposition de demander au roy qu'il établit cent mille livres sterling à son fils sur la liste royale, come il les avoit luy du tems de son pere. On dit que ce premier a fort bien parlé et avec beaucoup de rigueur. La proposition a esté rejetée dans la chambre des communes par une pluralité de 30 voix. Cette rigueur, ma chere comtesse, ne medifie point. Je suis sur qu'une petite veu de gouverner la maison du prince la fait naistre, et que nous verrons ces braves retomber dans le decouragement come ils sont fait sans rime ni sans raison. Malgré l'extremité de M^{re} de Windham Mr. son pere alla à la chambre pour donner la voix pour le prince. Il ne me paroist pas que tout cela respond à ces propositions d'accommodement dont vous et moy avons entendu dire qu'il estoit question, mais nous sommes trop loing pour en juger. L'affaire a été rejetée par une tres grande majorité dans la chambre des pairs."

Same to same, March 25 (1740?). ". apparament la Gazette de Hollande. Jay trouvé bien singulier ce que celle d'aujourd'huy dit que le D. de Grafton a fait metre dans celle d'Angleterre que S. M. ayant sceu qu'on navoit point eu égard à les ordres a jugé à propos de declarer que toutes personnes qui irons faire leur cour au P. ou à la P. de Galle ne seront point admise à la presence en aucune de ses maisons. Ho! la belle affiche d'un pere et d'un roy, et vos, messieurs, attendent toujours des circonstances."

Lord Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh. "A Londres, 12^e Fev. 1739." "La lettre que vous m'avez fait l'honneur de me couper m'a été rendue avec celle que vous m'avez fait l'honneur de m'ecrire, ma tres chere comtesse. J'ay fait remettre la premiere a son adresse dans l'instant que je l'ay rescue. Vous me croirez facilement quand je vous assureray que mon impatience d'être hors de ce pay est extreme. Je veux l'être meme dans tout le mois prochain a quelque prix que ce soit. On ne sauroit payer trop chere la consolation d'être detache de cette malheureuse isle. Elle l'est encore plus que vous ne sauriez comprendre. Je souhaite une meilleure santé a Mons^{re} le compte de tout mon coeur. Ayez la bonté de l'en assurer et de luy faire mes tres humbles complimens. Adieu, chارمانة comtesse. Soyez persuadée du tendre et respectueuse attachement que vous a véné pour sa vie Le Bolingbroke."

Extract from a letter dated ce 18^e Janvier 42, written by Lady Bolingbroke, and addressed "Madame la Comtesse de Denbigh, in Hanover Square." After alluding to other matters, the writer proceeds "je laisse la plume à l'hermite," that is to Lord Bolingbroke, whom she frequently mentions by this term, and who in his own hand writes: "Je n'abuseray surement la permission qu'on me donne d'ajouter quelques lignes de griffonage à celui qui est dessus. Je souhaite donc que vous soyez actuellement quitte, ma chere comtesse, de cette indisposition passagere. Je vous remercie de la bonne nouvelle que vous nous avez donnée de B. dans le temps que je l'ay cru mort selon ce que je devoy naturellement croire sur les relations de son fils et de notre ami Pope, et que j'étois penetré de la plus vive affliction. La maladie du voyageur me fait une peine infinie. Tout ce qu'il a de nerf est dans son esprit. Je luy vendrois un peu plus de materialité. Me prometrez vous de le saluer icy? J'ecriray à l'abbé des que je le sauray arrivé. Tenez nous parole, Madame, et venez nous voir. Les agrements qui vous manqueront dans cette retraite seront abondamment recompenses par l'éloignement dans lequel vous y serez d'une autre scene qui est assurément tres vilaine, que je souhaite moins vilaine, et que je ne me flatte pas de voir jamais belle. Adieu, madame, je vous respecte, je vous honnore et je vous aime de tout mon coeur. J'assure de mes respects monsieur le conte et mons^{re} votre fils."

Same to same, July 3 [1746]. ".
Vous sçavez que Mr de Goor^{re} est fait conte. On m'a assure qu'il avoit fait mettre O'Brien dans la patente en cas de mort de ses fils ou heritiers masles. Vous aures sceu aussy que Mr. Spenser a fait un testament que sa grande mere lavait obligé de faire out il laisse le bien de Sunderlan à Mr Pitt en cas de la mort de son fils. On avoit dit qu'il avoit fait un codicil à Bath pour changer ce testament, dont Mr Sherterfield est un des executeurs, mais come ce codicil na pas encore paru peutestre nen a til pas fait, et il le peut qu'un jour Mr. Pitt se trouve avec 9 ou 10 mille livres de rente. Voila ma chere comtesse, les jeux de la fortune et le comble de liniquité de cette vieille Malboroug, qui fait oster aux Spencers cadets le bien de leur famille, car quant à celui quelle avoit accumulé elle pouvoit sen croire la maîtresse. Le patriotisme est une belle chose quand il rend bien, car on le peu quitter ensuite quand on veut pour quelque autre recolte. Nous sommes parvenus vostre serviteurs et moy a la plus parfaite indifferance pour tout ce que nous voyons se passer. Nous navons plus affaire au monde, Dieu mercy, ni lui à nous. Je ne m'intéresse qua vostre bonheur et celui de deux ou trois amis de plus sur laterre, et a la paix du genre humain. Donné moy de vos nouvelles, ma cher comtesse, et de celles de la santé de noireau et contés de nostre part sur l'attachement le plus tendre pour vous et pour les vostre."

The following is interpolated by Lord Bolingbroke in one of Lady B's letters to Lady Denbigh, dated "ce 8^e Avril." "Je vous jure, ma tres chere comtesse, que vostre santé et celle de M. le comte de Denbigh m'intéresse beaucoup plus sensiblement que celle de tous les corps politiques de l'Europe. Le corps politique de la G. Bretagne me paroist souffrir autant que jamais de deux maux qui vont rarement ensemble, une consommation et une lethargie. Winchelsea m'a mandé dans le mois de Fevrier qu'il n'y avoit pas la moindre apparence d'affaires parlementaires. Ceux qui ont le pouvoir en main ne fourniront point d'occasion à ceux qui opposent, et sans occasion, ajoutez comment une minorité peut elle

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

opposer avec effect. La mort de la reine, la rupture du Roy et du Prince et les plaintes de tous nos marchands ne fournissent elles donc point d'occasion? Ouy elles en fournissent et qui pouvoient être passées bien loin, mais elles ne le seront pas. Le Winchelsea me parle dans cette lettre de son mariage, il m'en paroît très content. Il m'exhorte à venir vivre avec mes amis. Je n'en feray rien. Mon parti est pris pour le reste de mes jours, et je m'aurois point de plaisir à vivre avec des amis qui sont enchainés et qui osent à peine faire mine de vouloir secouer leurs chaînes. Je ne demande que de m'arranger le façon à pouvoir vivre loin d'eux sans trop d'incommodité. Ces arrangements ne sont pas encore faits. Je voudrois pouvoir les faire sans être obligé de passer la mer. Je ne sais pas encore si j'en viendray about. Adieu chere contesse, aimez moy toujours. Je le meriteray toujours par mes sentimens pour vous. Je souhaite de tout mon cœur le retablissement de votre pauvre Estropie, à qui je suis très parfaitement devoué. Oserais je vous charger de mes compliments pour my lord Feilding."

Lady Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh, "à Bath ce 12^e Sep^r, v. s." " . . . La mienne [santé] est bien foible et celle de mon camarade [Ld. Bolingbroke] n'est guerre meilleure malgré les eaux qu'il prend. La douleur de la sciatique ne cesse point. Je conte plus sur la douche qu'il a commence ce matin, mais la seul endroit où on la peut prendre est sy vilain et sy incommode qu'en cherchant du soulagement d'un côté on est presque sur de s'enrhumer de l'autre. Tout est calculé icy pour les assemblés et pour les bals, et rien pour la commodité des malades. Vos Anglois sur ces articles sont plus brutes que les Allemans, car vous savez qu'à Aix la Chapelle on est fort bien pour tout ce qui regarde la santé."

Same to same. "A Battersa ce 22^e Octobre." " . . . Je ne vous manday point samedi la mort de la d. de Malbroug, qui faisait la nouvelle de la ville, parce qu'on ne savoit encore rien de son testament, la seule chose qui pouvoit exciter la curiosité. Elle laisse pour 94 mil livres sterling de legs, un de 20m à my lord Schesterfield avec la reversion de Wimbeldon en cas que Mr. Spencer qui est son heritier universel et son fils Vincent a mourir; 10 mille livres à Mr. Pitt avec la reversion dans la meme cas des terres qu'elle a dans la province de Bukingam; 2,500 pieces à chacun de les executeurs testamentaires, dont my lord Marchemon est un, levesque d'Oxford, un vieux medecin qui demeureroit ches elle, et un avocat avec cette meme reversion de tout son bien à partager entre eux. Voila les principaux articles que jay retenus, mais surement il sera imprimé."

Extract from a letter from Lady Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh, dated "a Battersa ce 13." "Je rouvre ma lettre, ma chere contesse, pour vous supplier de charger mon amy Rotembourg de me choisir un tres bon fromage de vos cantons pour faire Welches Rabbit. Le plus gras est je croy le meilleur. Je lui seray bien obligé de me faire cette petite commission."

Lady Bolingbroke's later letters speak invariably of the wretched state of her health, and are in the handwriting of her maid. " . . . La mienne [santé] est toujours detestable, et dans le 24 heures je n'en ay pas deux ou trois sans souffrir." 16 Decr. 1749."

"Ce 19^e Decembre, v. s. 1749, Londres." " . . . L'hermite et moy sommes retiré avant dix heures du soir. Il me tient fidele compaignie et c'est presque toute son occupation. C'en est une bien propre à donner la spleen, mais il ne m'en temoigne aucune. Je ne puis dire qu'à vous combien je suis touché de son amitié et de ses attentions."

From Frances du Pont, Lady Bolingbroke's maid, to Lady Denbigh. "A Londres ce 13 Mars 1750, v. s." After describing Lady B's illness and prostration of health, the writer proceeds. " . . . Elle est d'une si grande foiblesse qu'elle ne peut dire une seule parole à my lord, qui est dans la plus grande affliction. M^{re} est penetré de toutes ses bontés et de son assiduité au près d'elle. Il ne fait que pleurer. Il a fait venir un tres habile medecin qui lui donne encore quelque esperence. En fin, Madame, il fait tout ce qui est en son pouvoir pour conserver une personne qui luy est si cher et à qui il est tendrement attaché."

Four letters from Lord Bolingbroke to Lady Denbigh, not in his own handwriting, but three of them signed by him with a tremulous hand:—

"Battersea, Friday, June 15th, 1750." "I should be ashamed of not having writ to you during so long a time, madam, if I had not been quite unable to perform the duties of friendship, and even those of social life. Affliction has overwhelmed me and has brought upon me all the infirmities of age much faster than I could have feared. What I can do I do to resist both, but the reminiscence of loss I am not yet able to stand, especially when I am [a word or two torn away] it by one whom I know to be tenderly affected by it. There [is] a sort of contagion in tender sentiments, and I could return a formal compliment to any indifferent person with much more ease than I feel in writing upon the same subject to your ladyship. To write however I resolved, though, unable to write with my own hand, I am forced to borrow another. Be pleased to excuse this as well as my long silence. Let me have your pity. I deserve it. I never can deserve your blame, because I can never cease to be with great respect and truth, madam, your ladyship's most obedient and most humble servant."

"A Battersea, ce 25 Juillet 1750." After Lady Bolingbroke's death. "Je ne sais, dans le desordre d'esprit et de cœur dans lequel j'ay été et dans lequel je suis, si j'ay répondu à la lettre que vous m'avez fait l'honneur de m'ecrire du 2 d'Avril. Si je n'y ay pas répondu ce desordre peut me servir d'excuse; et si je ne vous écris pas presentement de ma main c'est que je ne puis pas m'en servir. Mon cœur est déchiré, mon esprit accablé et mon corps estropié; enfin je suis le plus malheureux des hommes, et la plus grande consolation que j'ay est de songer que je suivray bientost celle qui faisoit toute ma consolation pendant qu'elle vivoit. Je scay bien qu'elle souffroit de grandes douleurs. Je les sentois pour elle très vivement, mais on se flatte pendant le vie, on ne peut plus se flatter après la mort des personnes qu'on aime. Continuez à me plaindre et à m'aimer, ma chere contesse. Je vous seray toujours tendrement et respectueusement attaché, et dans les malheurs de ma vie, car je ne scaurois plus avoir de bonheur, je seray constamment votre très obeissant serviteur."

"Londres ce 6 Avril 1751." "J'ay vu Milord Fielding, Madame, et il m'auroit vu desja chez luy pour le remercier de l'honneur qu'il m'a fait si j'avois été depuis quelque temps en état de rendre des visites, mais il y a plus de deux mois que j'ay un rhume qui se continue ou se renouvelle à tout moment avec une toux qui a été très violente, et une foiblesse et une langueur qui sont excessives. Après les evenemens qui me sont arrivés je n'en ay point à craindre. Je souhaiterois seulement d'aller au tombeau avec des incomodités moins difficiles à soutenir que quelques unes que j'éprouve. De quelque façon que j'y vas je conserveray pour vous jusqu'à la fin de ma vie l'attachement le plus tendre et le plus respectueux avec lequel j'ay l'honneur d'être, madame, votre très humble et très obeissant serviteur. J'assure M^{re} le comte de mes très humbles respects."

"Battersea, ce 8 Aoust 1751." "Dans le desordre et l'attendrissement où nous étions tous deux hier, ma chere contesse, j'ay oublié de vous prier de me communiquer ce que vous pouvez rappeler de tout ce que la pauvre defunte peut vous avoir dit ou écrit touchant la sûreté dans laquelle elle me croyoit ou elle ne me croyoit pas contre les intentions de ses heritiers. Cet éclaircissement pourra m'être utile. Ajoutez y, si vous en avez, quelque anecdotes touchant l'intention des Montmorins depuis leur mariage de me faire le procès qu'ils me font actuellement. Je veux vous embrasser avant que vous partiez, mais je ne veux pas aller chez votre seur luy montrer le visage desagréable d'un homme inutile. Adieu chere contesse. Je vous suis attaché avec tout le respect et toute la tendresse possible." From "Adieu chere contesse" to the end is in Lord Bolingbroke's own handwriting.

From "S^e de Villette, Abbess", daughter of the second Lady Bolingbroke, to the Countess of Denbigh. "A Sens ce 6^e 10^{bre} 1750." " . . . Les dernieres lettres que j'ay reçues de la part de M. Bolingbroke m'inquiette. Cette playe de la joue n'est pas encore réformée. Il en souffroit plus de douleur et s'en prenoit à l'imbecillité de son donneur d'emplâtres, mais il me mande de ne me pas inquieter, qu'il ne s'agit que de souffrir un peu plus longtems, et que d'ailleurs à tous égards il se porte mieux. Ces nouvelles étoient accompagnées de tendres assurances de son amitié. Cette lettre de 25 Novembre m'apprend ausy que le rumatisme qu'il avoit M^{re} sa seur s'est tourne en paralisie sur tout le corps, et que l'on preparoit ce qu'il falloit pour la conduire aux eaux de Bath."

Same to same. "A Sens ce 19^e Janvier 1752." "Hélas ma chere contesse, pour comble de mes malheurs je ne recois point de vos nouvelles. Est ce que vous craigniez de m'apprendre la perte douloureuse que j'ay faite. Il y a aujourdhy 15 jours que je la scay. Co pauvre milord a fini plus promptement que

EARL OF DENBIGH.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

je ne le croyois. Il est mort le 24 de Decembre. Ce triste evennement vous aura été mandé sans doute, et sans doute vous y'aurez pris part et pour luy et pour moy. C'est M^r Chetwiud qui avec la douleur la plus sensible m'a annoncé cette nouvelle. Vous jugerez aisément, vous qui avez un coeur si bon, de ma situation cruelle. J'ay perdu une mere, un pere, un ami [Bolingbroke] tendre, et dans quelle circonstance quand on luy met le poignard dans le sein par cet infame proces. Vous sçavez sans doute qu'il a chargé son ami M^r Chetwiud de poursuivre le proces comme étant son executeur testamentaire. Il a fait ce testament et l'on ne sçaura point ce qu'il contient qu'après le jugement du proces. Les audiences n'ont pas été interrompues. Il n'y en a plus que trois ou plus quatre a donner aux avocats. Céluy de notre cher defunt est applaudi généralement, et le public fait des vœux pour le gain de sa cause en haine de l'indigne adversaire, qui est méprisé comme il le merite. C'est beaucoup dire, mais malgré le mouvement que ce donnent nos amis surtout notre cher Marquis de Mafignon, je suis toujours dans la crainte parce que j'ay peur que la forme n'importe le fond. Ce qui m'accable encore plus s'est que depuis ce fatal événement tous ces pauvres domestiques qui criaient icy ne donnent pas un signe de vie. Il faut apparemment que toutes empêchent d'écrire jusqu'à ce que l'on sçache les dispositions du testament.

Same to same. "A Sens ce 20^e Fevrier 1752." "Je croyois, ma chere comtesse, avoir à vous mander aujourd'hui le jugement du proces, mais un ceremoniale qu'avait à faire le parlement au sujet de la mort de M^{le} Henriette de France a fait remettre la derriere audience a huitaine. Ainsi je reste encore dans l'inquietude, et je n'ay pas voulu mettre cet intervalle à ma lettre. La lecture du memoire ma déjà mis le coeur plus à l'aise, puisque j'y vois la reputation de feu ma pauvre mere et celle de mon beau pere a couvert et bien defendre. J'ay eu l'honneur d'écrire a milord Westmoreland, et je le prie de vous dire combien j'étois content de ce memoire. Je voudrais que tous ceux qui ont vu ce libelle difamatoire des indignes adversaires pussent le lire. Vous ne sçauriez croire combien mon coeur est blessé que quelqu'un puisse entreprendre un moment contre la memoire de ses chers defunts."

Sir William Wyndham to Lady Denbigh, London, Feb. 28, 1736. "... Our world here has been in great agitation upon an application offered in Parliament to be made to the King for settling 100,000 per ann. on the Prince of Wales and half as much as a jointure on the Princess. For all the particulars I refer you to Harriott, who I know has wrote to you, only in [a word torn away] lett me tell you that the young man has behaved himself with so much firmness & a donnee de si bonnes preuves that he has established a character that is worth double the thing that was asked for him, and that will redound to his honour, and to the advantage of all his family, whatever some parts of it may think at this moment."

Same to same, 29 June 1737. "... Vous aures peutêtre appris que le Roi a ostes la compagnie des gardes du corps qu'avait my lord Westmoreland, qui a a différentes fois acheptés tous les emplois qu'il a eu dans les troupes excepté les gardes du corps, et qu'il l'a donnee au Duc de Montagu sans rembourser my lord Westmoreland d'un liard de 7,000l. quil a payes pour les autres charges. Il arrive que le D. de Montagu a, il y a quelque temps, vendu cette mesme compagnie pour 10,000l. La Duchesse de Malbro a dit la dessus, sure this is odd to take this away from L^d Westmoreland, who has bought every [thing] he had to give it to the Duke of Montagu who has sold everything he had. Nous ne sommes plus dans ce moment les objets de colere de la derriere. Son indignation est a present tournee devers le Roi et la Reine. Elle a refusé absolument d'admettre la Reine tenanciere de quelque chose que S.M. vouloit acheter dans la terre de Wimbeton, et l'admission par la coutume de cette seigneurie est necessaire pour l'achepteur. Sur quoi le Roi lui a ostes une pension qu'elle avoit comme garde du parc de Windsor. Cette pension n'est pas annexes a l'octroi que la Duchesse ou de la capitainerie mais est confere par des lettres sous le sceau privé qui sont revocables, non obstant quoi elle declare guere ouverte et vent intenter un proces contre le Roi."

Lord Winchelsea and Nottingham to Lord Denbigh, Burley, Oct. 9, 1734, upon the death of his wife, née Lady Frances Feilding.

Same to same. July 15, 1737. "... I beg you will make my compliments to Lord and Lady Bolingbroke, and assure my lady y^e I should be extremely glad to serve both my lord and her to the utmost of my powers. I know the D[uchess] of N[orfolk] has been in several different minds about Dawley, & do believe if it was sold shee would be extremely sorry. Nothing would quicken her desire of buying like having somebody about it, tho' I believe, considering the furniture and all belonging to it, it may not be dear, yet the truth is there are few people who have money y^e have the spirit to lay it out. I would have endeavored to have put the buying of it into Delme's head, who has lately married a fine young woman who is our cousin, Sir John Shaw of Eltham's daughter. But they tell me he is gone down to Hampshire, to a little house he has there. However, I will speak to Corry y^e he may see what he can do in it, and I will desire a person who will have a great deal to do with Delme in relation to my lord Burlington's affairs, who is now paying of 25,000l. mortgage, part of 75,000l. which he owes to Delme, and will pay by Christmas next y^e other 50,000l. When such a sum comes in at once to Delme, y^e may be y^e lucky moment to hit his fancy with a purchase. I shall certainly take care to get your Ladyship a ticket when they come out. I have had much to do to prevent Lady Betty Feilding laying out her whole estate in lottery tickets. But, however, she begins to be satisfied, because they are already under par, and I do not doubt before the tickets are delivered they will at least be six shillings under 10l., which is y^e 3l. per cent. they allow for prompt payment."

Same to same, Eastwell, Jan. 21, 1737-8. "... At the end of all these journeys and fatigue I find myself engaged in one in which I must jog on for life, for to conclude the whole last Wednesday I was married to Mrs. Feilding's sister. You see God's revenge against murder. I must be marrying other folks & so am in for it myself, & you cant imagine how well it sets upon me. ... Lady Betty & my daughter & they [Mrs. Feilding and her sister] have lived together these four months, and you cant imagine how great they are. It fits them and suits them almost as much as it does me. We shall all pack up in one charming house in Jermyn Street till I can get a better. My daughter's fancy she made the match, for she one day of her own accord started up after dinner and told one of the sisters that she had dreamed that her papa would marry her. She mistook the sister, so when I set her right she told me it was all one to her if it was but one of them, for all she wanted was to have some brothers and sisters. My daughter never will say anything she is bid to say, so she was not taught, but says everything that comes into her head, so tis all her own invention as you may judge by the question she asked my Lady Winchelsea the next morning after wee were married, when she came into our room before wee were up, Pray Madam how do you like being married, which was a sort of question no body could bid her ask."

Same to same. January 4, 1738-9. "... Your friend Bristow and I differ upon this second lottery. He does not like going into this, because not so good as the first, the tickets being now dearer then the last. But still in this there is a profit of 6 3/4 cent. upon our money, which is high interest enough, and the chance of a prize or two of value will tempt me to venture, as in the last, as far as 100 tickets, and so lett the money run a second time through y^e lottery, tho my gain in y^e last is not near what profit you have made, supposing you have even no other prize than y^e 10,000 livres, for if you had but 25 tickets y^e prize is more vastly in proportion to y^e money you put in then y^e 14,000 livres I have gained upon 100 tickets which cost me above 1,500l. sterling. I would therefore advise you to venture as I do a second time; for what you may have gained, be it 400 or less, it is of no great consequence, but y^e gain of a great prize of 50 or 60,000 livres might answer y^e end I propose, and the mortgage be assigned over with my lord's consent to some person in trust for you. ... Charles Feilding is gone down to his regiment. He was in hopes of a company of y^e guards, but has not got it. He has, however, besides a fine boy that Lord Denbigh was godfather to last summer, has (sic) got his wife with child again. I cannot say anything to brag of myself, having only made a miscarriage this last autumn."

Same to same. April 15, 1739. "... As bad as things still are in this country I am mighty unwilling to give up the pleasing idea that the authors of all our mischief, S^r Robert and your old friend Horace, may still come to be hanged, for I think it is impossible for them to go on long, and when they fall no one can tell what will become of them."

* Her age is not given, but her parents were married in 1720.

EARL OF
DENBIGH

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

A letter without signature, but in Lady Westmoreland's handwriting, to Lady Denbigh, dated London, Novr. 19. [1745] " . . . There has been some long days in the House to as little purpose as usual. Harry Fox exerted all his eloquence on the patriot side in laying open and exclaiming against abuses in offices, whilst others whom that part would have better become distinguished themselves on the side of the ministry. Is not this matter of melancholy speculation, and dont it tempt one to think all virtue is occasional, and to doubt it even when it seems most innate? I must own to my sorrow that a pretty long attention to the characters of people has almost confirm'd me in this opinion. These reflections are unfashionable where all things take their value from a specious outside, but perhaps may not seem unnatural to you, who I believe are so particular as to bestow your esteem where you think there is some real merit, and for this reason I am doubly proud and happy in the share you are so good as to assure my lord & me of. No news is come since that of the surrender of Carlisle & M. Wades marching towards the rebels. Every body is full of anxiety for the event of their meeting, as the late bad weather must have harass'd our troops extremely in their march. If he is not successful we must expect the utmost confusion here, and indeed everything bears a dismal aspect. If the rebels should come southward sure you won't think it advisable to stay in the country, since I am told they would probably come by Coventry, tho' I must own nothing but fear would drive one to this town, for I never knew it half so disagreeable, and in five days have repented leaving the country twenty times."

Lady Westmoreland to Lady Denbigh, "London, Feb. 9th [1748]." " . . . The only news I can tell you is that Lord Chesterfield resigned the seals yesterday. I apprehend this occurrence to be of very little importance to the world, for as his going in produced no good effects, his going out can produce no bad ones. Some people infer from it that there will be no peace, as he has been always very strenuous for one, but I rather believe he has taken a disgust from some personal indignities. I own I am curious to see what part he will take and what set he will enter into, for if his late friends the Germans treated him rather with contempt when he was a minister, what will they do now, and I can hardly think his old friends will receive him with open arms. Mr. Murray is trying to succeed him, but most people think the Duke of Bedford will be the man. . . . Lady Firebrass tells me you have a mind to make another trial at Miss R-t-s.* You know you may command my offices to the utmost extent of my power. I have tried the L--ds, but find they don't care to interfere. I believe she wishes well to it, but is afraid the rest of the family would be displeased with her meddling in it, and poor Nancy Rider, who might have been of some use, has, I am afraid, not many days to remain in this world. Our last hope is in Ward, but I doubt she is past all human relief, so that I dont see any other method we can take than to propose it in form to the guardians and to insist upon the girls being made acquainted with it, and likewise how her father received the proposal. I believe she is not in town, or if she were, I dont see how Lord F[ielding] could speak to her, so I should think there is no use in his coming till the way is a little opened for him."

Same to same, "London, April 9th [1748]." " . . . We are in hourly expectation of hearing Maestricht is invested, and they say it will cost the French very little trouble, which they lay to the charge of your compatriotes who have used no precautions to put it in a state of defence. I find the best we hope for is that the allies may act the audience, for should they try to prevent it by a battle it would probably hurt themselves most. Notwithstanding this appearance, many people say a peace will be concluded in less than a month. My lord is of that opinion, but I own I want faith, for, now the expence of the campaign is made, why should the French forgo all the advantages they have so fair a prospect of this summer, when in all probability they may make their own conditions at the end of it. Her Grace of Queensberry has encroached a good deal of late upon Heideggers province by opening her house to the town with several balls and masquerades, and has created a stage where the Argyle family have acted several plays. I had the honour to be at one, and they did it very well. The last play they chose was a tragedy call'd the unhappy marriage, which is at present so really and fatally perform'd in their own family that I should have thought they had enough of that subject, for poor lady Mary Cook is one of the greatest objects of compassion I ever met with. All her desire when she is sensible (which is not often) is to die, & I believe all her friends join with her in it, and dare say their desire will be very soon accomplish'd."

Same to same, July 8, 1745. " . . . I cannot but lament the disastrous condition of our affairs abroad, tho still I lament more the miserable estate of them at home, considering the latter as the root of all other evils. If disappointment could avail to make people wise I should rejoice rather while others mourn, accounting wisdom a cheap purchase even at the price of so much disgrace. But I do not expect that a drunken coachman will leave the box from a sense of his inability to hold the reins, nor a minister in this country take shame to himself from the calamities that attend his impotent measures. Upon hearing the news from the Rhine I did in the instant smell the artifice of the country housewife strewing sugar upon her custard that the mouldiness might not appear. As much as I endeavour to stupyfy my curiosity about all political nonsense, and as great a proficient as I pretend to be in that study, I must confess my frailty to give way to the present crisis, and I can't help being anxious to learn how the present confusion will wind up."

Same to same, Dec^r 2, 1747. " . . . My own notion upon inspection of the state barometer is that we shall have no more campaigns, that the Temple of Janus will be shut about the vernal equinox, that after the money granted, all the good ends to be expected from war to England will be obtain'd, that a Stadtholder being fix'd upon the Disunited Provinces, and thereby that due consistence acquired which that state wanted, all the good ends sought for from war to Holland will be obtained. I can never suffer it to enter into my head that a committee of the shrewdest gamesters having made up their purse of eleven millions (how easily soever they come by it) will go to squander away every stiver of it without prospect, without possibility of leaving room for a pretence for such another collection. Why, madam, do I not felicitate you upon the beautiful prospect? You, who have taken part with those who from the beginning opposed the wars, who have so long languished to see the end of it? Because the enemy will herein triumph, well knowing that subdued as they are abroad, and brought to shame in the common concern, they have gained a decisive victory at home, and made all things here to bow down under their feet. By the like generous maxims have they not all along govern'd themselves, exulting in their dishonour, glorying in the shame, while the industry and the fruit of it, the property of their fellow subjects and the honour of the while has been minted and dealt out to strangers, thro' their own sticky fingers retaining some poundage, and all the filth of their dirty labour. But I stifle indignation lest my paper grow so hot as to burn your fingers in the reading. Let me turn to more quiet thoughts and give you a short scheme of our domestic pastimes. In the morning when the weather permits (and so fine weather never has been known), Madam tucks herself up and sets out upon her walk, sometimes of a mile, sometimes two miles. That finished, as likewise the breakfast, our little company, consisting of Lady Lambard, Mrs. Foot, Miss Rider, and ourselves repair to the work room, where one of the two former have generally held forth out of Ralph's history of the miserable reign of Charles the Second (the melancholy consolation and example of the wretched doings under the present), and so to dinner. That being over is succeeded with the diverting eagerness of Lady Lambard at Back Gammon for about an hour and half. The evening closes with another lecture, unless he Peckham family or St Philip Boteler's, where L^d and L^{dy} Folkstone have been for some time, convert it into a quadrille."

Lord Westmoreland to Lady Denbigh, Mereworth, Jan'y. 6, 1747-8. " . . . I confess there appears to me in my lonely cell no ray of hope that the friends of Holland can gather a sufficient strength in time to oppose the torrent which threatens to break in upon her some few months hence, if it be true (what I am confidently told) that the Swiss cant come to bear a part in her assistance before Midsummer, nor the

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

* Miss Jane Roberts daughter and co-heir of Sir Walter Roberts Bart. of Glasenbury, Kent. She afterwards, 1754, married George 3rd Duke of St. Albans.

† The Countess of Denbigh was a Dutch lady, the daughter of Peter de Yonck, Esq. of Utrecht. It was probably through her that the letters to Dyckvelt came into the possession of Lord Denbigh's family.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

Russians until a month later, in which case our conjurers will have enough to do to lay the Devil which above thirty years ago their own art was so busy in raising. In all works of importance I love method, and your ladyship will bear me witness how earnest I have been to preserve a due method in our proceedings by hanging up half a dozen of the principal actors in that conjuration, and I am more persuaded every day that it will require some more holy man to do the office of laying. It is said the King will go early in the summer to Hanover: that the Duke will not return to the army. If no good is to be done I am glad of it for his sake: if otherwise, it will remain a grief upon my mind that while England is to be the Squire of the common cause, and contribute so largely to pay the reckoning, none of her sons are found worthy of conducting the order of the feast, nor will be entitled to the glory resulting from the accomplishment of so great a work."

Same to same. Undated. "I have so sorry an account to give you of the wisdom of this world that upon my faith I am ashamed to go about it. . . . Our young royal hero you may suppose ere this got to the Hague environ'd with the chiefs of your nation waiting from his lips the happy destiny of their deliverance, and as our politicians of the anti chamber have ears which reach to the inmost recesses of the cabinet, and hate to conceal the knowledge they fetch from thence, we are already inform'd that while our gallant takes up his station behind the Meuse, there to keep danger at a distance, your Belgick Mars will wait his virgin laurels upon the interior frontier. In the mean time I must not forget to own the vanity of my former prophecy when I told you that the Temple of Janus would be shut by the end of April. That imagination is indeed now vanish'd, but so near was it to prove a reality, that the wise ones not many months since thought it quite settled with regard to our more distant enemy, and more than three quarters with regard to our enemy nearer home. But alas! just in the critical instant, when the tender plant Peace was peeping out of the ground, a pinching north-east wind set furiously in and blasted all our hopes. Be it so. The device for Holland now is Cita mors, aut victoria letu, which my lord will readily explain to you. Permit us then to borrow your state's motto, Concordiæ res crescent paræ, since it was never known nor can be traced in history that unanimity, concord, and a certain sameness of thought and counsel arose to such perfection as at present amidst the three great powers of an English government. Strange would it be if our affairs, little as they are, under so blessed an union should run counter to the Rule, and instead of being crescent should turn out to be in the wain."

Same to same. Hanover Square, April 26, 1748. " . . . Yesterday Lt Sandwich's servant brought a paquet intimating the signing of preliminary articles of peace and a suspension of arms, the poor people in and about Maestricht only excepted. This exception appears to me so trifling and shameful that I suppose it will not last long. The terms are said to consist in a reciprocal restitution of Cap Breton, the Netherlands Savena, and Final, and Savoy, and in short a restitution of every place taken on the one side and on the other, with a settlement for Don Philip in the duchies of Parma and Placentia with a small district (I think) out of the Milanese thereto adjoining. Thus ends the war, that ill-timed brat of the Granville policy, foster'd by hags who had just so much art as to lay their spell upon the parent, but not the power to raise the half-begotten offspring to any growth or stature. And thus the very terms of peace (a trifle varied for the worse on our part) which at the opening of the present sessions were repudiated with so laconic a disdain are now thankfully embraced under the private satisfaction of having a full Exchequer without any war to carry on. Those who appeared most sanguine before the supplies were granted have now, on the entrance into the field most complain'd of their utter inability to do anything from the want of men, money, and every other necessary. That infamous court which has engaged to furnish 60,000 men, and has already touch'd good part of the consideration money, has fallen short of their quota but two thirds of their number, while your countrymen have fallen short of theirs three fourths. Judge then of the mercy of Providence in sending us so merciful a conqueror, who having given due correction knows when to hold his hand and receive the humble penitents into his most Christian grace. 'Think of a most illustrious servant resigning his office because a peacefull and not a warlike minister, and then a few weeks after his very counsels adopted and his prognostications fully verified. Be pleased likewise to call to mind the eternal din for making use of our marine, a measure so long rejected as coming from those who were held for outcasts, taken up at length by our all-sufficient rulers, and the principal cause under heaven of disposing the heart of the invincible land-power to the moderation he has now made appear."

Lady Westmorland to Lady Denbigh. London, April 30 [1751]. " . . . As to the great intention* that has lately happen'd I wish it may produce those salutary effects you seem to hope from it, but I own as yet I see no change it has made or is likely to make. The Princess is to be declared sole Regent, with the assistance of a council in whom the whole power will rest, so that hers will only be nominal. It has been reported that some part of the ministry were to be dismissed, but I find people differ in opinion whether it will be so or not. I am sure I don't care, for they all aim at the same point. The Prince's papers 'tis said have been all deliver'd up and amongst them a will, wherein he leaves 500,000*l.* for the payment of his just debts. Perhaps you will ask where are the assets? 'Tis answered, in an arrear of 50,000*l.* for eight years, and an appeal to some body's conscience for a legacy of 100,000*l.* from his grandfather. However 'tis thought if the tradesmen are paid the Parliament must do it."

Lord Westmorland to Lady Denbigh. "De Mereworth, le 23^{me} Juillet, N.S., 1752. . . . Ce n'est pas peut-être pour vous nouvelles que la processe intentée contre l'imprimeur Owen, suivant l'adresse de la chambre basse, pour avoir fait imprimer la memoire de M^r Murray, est finie, la jurie l'ayant trouvée Not Guilty, au grand déplaisir (sans doute) de ceux qui l'ont poursuivi en justice, aussi bien qu'au grand contentement d'une nombreuse assistance de personnes distinguées jointe aux acclamations effrénées du populace dont la cour retentissoit."

W. B. to Lady Denbigh. "A Florence ce 12 Oct^r 1736. . . . Le lendemain nous allâmes coucher a Luques . . . Quand j'y passois Lady Walpole avoit arrêté une maison de campagne à une mille de la ville pour son hiver prochain, et pendant mon voyage par Livourne elle y est allée de Florence où elle avoit séjourné long tems. L'on n'a pas pu attribuer son choix aux attraits de la campagne de Luques parce qu'il y a quelque tems qu'elle avoit fait une connoissance particulière avec un chevalier Luquois beau et bien fait, dont les affaires le rappelloient dans son pais. L'historie scandaleuse dit qu'elle cherche à s'en défaire de son ami qui sortit avec elle d'Angleterre. Elle ne veut parler qu'italien, et évite tant qu'elle peut la rencontre de ses compatriotes. La jeunesse Angloise est fort choquée de cette préférence. Elle en est si mortifiée qu'elle n'a trouvé d'autre raison que la bizarrerie de la dame pour la justifier. L'on convient qu'elle a beaucoup d'esprit. Elle apprend le latin et fait la savante. L'on dit que ce sera une seconde Reine Christine, d'autres ajoutent, si elle ne l'est déjà."

Same to same. Florence, 9 Nov. 1736. " . . . Vous savez que les femmes de ce pais ont toujours été les esclaves des hommes, autrefois assujettis à des maris jaloux qui les enfermèrent; aujourd'hui ayant secoué ce premier joug elles ont pour tyrans leurs Chitibeaux. Il faut savoir que ce chitibeaun est ordinairement du même age et de la même condition de la dame qu'il sert, choisi par les parens avant le mariage a servir dans l'absence du mari, car il faut savoir que messrs les chitibeauns tiendraient pour un affront si l'on croyoit leur passion purement platonique. Ces pauvres femmes ne font donc que changer de tyran, le mari de nuit et le chitibeaun du jour. L'on dit que le dernier fait le maître plus que l'autre. Il ne quitte jamais la pauvre femme, la désolée et ne la permet de regarder autre que lui. J'ai oublié de dire qu'il est aussi à vie. Comme les femmes en Italie ont toujours été mercenaires, même celles du plus haut rang, autre fois l'on passoit le marché avec le mari, aujourd'hui avec le chitibeaun. Ils n'y a pas d'autre chemin tant elles sont vieilles. Pour couper court c'est un pais on l'on vit bien et a bon compte, mais fort débauché et point propre a la jeunesse."

Same to same. "Boulogne, 25 Aout 1737. . . . My Lady Walpole est a Pise toute seule avec Sturges entre les docteurs qui l'admirent fort. Vous savez que Pise est une université. Il faut savoir qu'elle

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

* The death of the Prince of Wales, March 20, 1751.

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

ne goute plus en apparence que les viellards qui la compose, et ce qui me surprend fort, par tout on elle a été elle a passé pour être insensible à l'amour. Voila un effet merveilleux de l'air de l'Italie, mais je doute de sa verité presque autant que de celle de leurs miracles. Il y a trois mois qu'elle donna de l'ombrage au Saint Siège. L'on pretendoit qu'elle avoit ébranlé la croyance des Toscans, non pas en les debauchant à notre Eglise, mais à la Deïssie, et l'on croya l'accusation si bien à Rome que l'Inquisition avoit reçu les ordres pour en faire les perquisitions. L'on y travailloit à Florence et l'on avoit examiné plusieurs personnes là-dessus quand le Grand Duc mourût, ce qui mit fin à tout ce tripotage. Personne n'auroit dit mot à elle mais on voulût à quelques uns de ses amis qui sont depuis quelque tems devenus les objets de la haine de ceux qui dominent à Rome. Vous scavez que le Pape d'apresent est Florentin. Voici un beau role que jouë la fille du premier ministre d'Angleterre. Femme sçavante, chef d'une secte, jeune, belle et insensible à l'amour."

H. Speed to Lady Denbigh. "Londre, ce 31^{me} Aout. . . . Je vais a present vous conter une nouvelle plus serieux, et quoique vous autre campagnards ne veulent pas croire le ménaçe qu'on nous fait au sujet du Pretendant, les courtisans (cest à dire les gens sensé ne vous en déplaise madame) le craigne extremement, la verité est, selon que j'ai ouï dire, que son etandart est levé dans les Highlands, et ils nous ont pris deux campagnis entiers du Regiment Royall Eccossoises, et il en a fait imprimer et donner au publick sa declaration ou il constitua sur fils aîné Regent du Royaume et nous promets un entier liberté de conscience et un free Parlement. Si tout ceci ne vous alarme pas, madame, je plains votre endurcissement. Notre grand consolation et nos esperance ici sont foudra sur le courage et l'abbilité du chevalier Cope et la bravoure de son armé, qui et d'envirion seize a dix sept sans hommes. On attend le duc D'Argyle et my lord Glinorely chaque jour, ainsy vous voiez qu l'air de l'Ecosse ne les conviens pas."

Henrietta Janssen to Lady Denbigh, Wimbledon, June 8 " . . . To be sure the noise of Young's affair has reached Bath, but what is most surprizing is that the whole town wishes him joy that he has proved himself a cuckold, and he goes about himself to all his acquaintance to tell them how happy he is to be, being almost sure to get a divorce and be a free man. He desires all us girls to behave well towards him, being he desins one of the number the happiness to be his second. Madam de Villet, my L^a Bulingsbrookes Lady, who is lately come over, being at court the birth day, and seeing the rout every body made with him, L^a, says she, what a country this is that one wishes a man joy for what in another country he would be ashamed to show his head for. But you know there is very little honour left here."

Same to same. Monday, June 29 " . . . Have spoke to my brother Steven to buy 2 pounds of snuff and send it next Thursday."

Same to same. "London, Saturday morning. Having been in town this week have got the tickets, the numbers of which have sent y^r ladyship inclosed; y^r snuff also have sent. As I do not take any, do not know wether it is good. It was recommended to me as such, but, if you do not like it, can be changed."

. . . . Sophy How has bin the talk of the town of late, for she is gone out of her senses and has exposed her self to the last degree, for about three days ago she ran away from Richmond dressed in mens shoes and breeches, her head dressed and a clock of a riding hood on. So she came up by water, landed at Whitehall, walked through the park, and by the time she got half way she had a hundred mob who followed her to St. Jameses Coffee House, where some gentlemen that knew her came out and beg her for God's sake not expose herself so, but all vain, for she made a speech, told the mob who she was and that she was a going to her nunt, by whom she meant Mr. Lowther who she is in love with, and by the way the town says she is with child by, but he now is cruel. So on she walk till she came to L^a Lowthers. She knocked at the door and inquired for him. The porter said he was at home and he would let him know it, but when he heard it he got out the back way and would not see, at which she was so enraged that she stormed, swore, and cursed and toar herself to pieces to that degree that the were forced to send to her mother and friends, and they have confined her. It is certain he has bin unkind, but, however, I have thought her a little out the way ever since I knew her . . . "There has bin a terrible rout about Wharton and Seardsdale drinking the Pretender's health under the Prince's nose. Scarborough has sent a challenge to Sears, by Argyle, which he would not accept of, but desired to be excused, being not the chief aggressor, being forced by Wharton, who drew his sword at him and swore he would kill him. Argyle made answer that, indeed, my lord, since so great a coward as Wharton could terrify you, shall go and acquaint Scar—h, who now waits for you in the park with sword and pistol, that it is not worth his while to trouble his head about such a poltrone, but that when ever he met him he would set a mark upon him that the whole world should know him by cutting a piece off his nose. Am sorry for the one because he is my L^a friend. I do believe they were all drunk, but however it was a very ridiculous thing, and they have made themselves the joke of the whole town, but most for their silly behaviour afterwards, all except S^r Jerry Duce, who is come of the best. Wharton is turned out of all his set, and now its reckoned scandalous to keep him company, for he said he only did [it] to be revenged of the schemers, two of them having refused him going in a party with them, so he is excluded."

EARL OF
DENBIGH.

R. Liddell to Lady Denbigh, "May 10, 1744. . . . The town thus apace, because it is call'd May, tho' to judge by the weather it might well pass for January. We have no public appearance of spring by any warmth in the air, except some symptoms of its influence in a few girls who have pretty hastily disposed of themselves without consent of parents. Lady Caroline Lenox married herself a few days ago to Harry Fox, and discovered it to the duke and duchess on Tuesday, who have sent her to her husband, and went themselves to Goodwood yesterday. The discovery was made so mal-a-propos as to have spoild a ball which was designed for last night, and the disappointed people who were invited have lost their dance. The duke and dutchess bear it heavily. The new married couple are retir'd to Mrs. Digby's, who you know was always good to her brothers. An only daughter of James Bateman's (a brother of my lord's), a girl who will have fifty thousand pounds, stole match about the same time with a son of George Dashwood's. Fathers, in short, must sooner consult or easier forgive the constitutions of their daughters, or not depend so much upon England's being a cold climate. . . . My lord Berkeley suffers his lady to retain the appointments of maid of honour still, tho' I hope he has incapacitated her for the title. There is to be no new one in her room, and she is to receive not the board wages, but the 200^l. a year, the smallest pension, if it could be look'd upon in that light, that ever lord's lady accepted. Norborn Berkeley has lost his Turkey Bill in the House of Lords by two voices only. He is chagrin'd about it, but not so deeply I hope as to create a vacancy in Gloucestershire for knight of the shire. Poor Pope will soon determine a dispute between Dr. Thompson and the faculty of Physicians. The former, in whose hands he is, and pretty roughly treated with violent purgations, says those are the only means to restore him, and they will effect it; the latter says every repetition hastens his end, which they pronounce not far off.* If this contest did not serve physick, tarr water would now put an end to it, for more of that liquor is drank at present in London than any of other, and families that go out of town pack up the Norway tarr with them. To put a stop to this practise the doctors have ingeniously found out that it is very prejudicial to those who would have heirs to their family, and ascribe effects to it I shall not explain to you. Without crediting the truth I like the invention of the physicians, which I think may answer their intent."

A. Lambert to Lady Denbigh, Spa, 14 [no month given] 1742. . . . Lady C. Kanmere and myself being curious, when (went) to Aix to see the King [of] Prusha, who was very gracious to us, and invited us to dinner. He's low, but his figure welenough. He has witte, but I think he seems to be of an odd composition all together, and I will promiss you he holds England very cheap and all that's in it. There was with him his brother that is about 16, qui a l'aire assez sotté, the Prince of Brunswick, a good Germain looking man, the Duke of Holstien, a fine old gentleman, and I dare say has been very galant, and is so still as the[y] say as t^r as his age will permit. He is much like the old courtiers in France."

Same to same: "The 9 Sept. . . . Wee are so full of joyceing and illumination on the arrivall of our King that for this three days this place [not named],

* Their prophecy was fulfilled not many days afterwards. Pope died May 30, 1744.

EARL OF
DENBIGH

and everybody in it, really are mad. Wee see nothing but English and Germain drapaux, and every body saying never King ever had such victory in one campagne. De la guerre passons a l'amour. To-morrow Madame le Marquis de Pompadure is to be presented to the Queen I suppose you know who she was before she took the name of marquise. Her father was a footman as they say, but her real one was Monsieur Monmartele. They say she is to be made dame a tour to Madame la Dauphine. He appartement is ready at Court. She is the topik of discourse."

Lady Firebrace to Lady Denbigh, undated (1751).
" . . . I have talk'd the death of Fred^k [the Prince of Wales] over with our friends and they all seem to like it. My Lord and Lady Allworthy say little, but I believe they think something might be done if the people would exert them selfs on this occasion, but the English spirit is quite lost I have too much reason to fear, or I think Providence has made a good beginning for us, and more then we could expect at this time, & the death of the K—g of S—n sure is no bad thing, but how it will turn out God only knows, we can only hope for the best. Here is fine confusion between the old Ca—n and his mi—s, and nobody knows who is to be in or who out not two days together, for Co—d was thought to be trick'd out of favour for some time, and all his party turn'd out, but all is made up again: strange revolutions, and there is but one that can be of any consequence or do good to this pore Kingdome, and I wish it was in our power to cultivate that thought in every man's mind, and then we should have some comfortable hopes of success. But I fear we have not virtue enough to begin, nor resolution enough to execute so good an undertaking, so whither we shall tumble down the precipice or struggle for liberty time only can determine. Our dear cus^d Bacon is very well, and if his friends would distinguish themselves above the rest of the world they should bring him from his travels and settle him in this country. The Princess of Wales, that was so much cry'd up for her great sense and humanity, is turn'd out quite feut for the rest of her worthy family, for she has given up all the private papers that belong'd to her hus^d friends, and has falling at old George's feet & betray'd the whole party as far as she was able. No good woman com'd do more. Dr Lee, like a wise man, had prepared for the worst, and made friends at St. James', but Lord Eg—t and most of his toady-eaters are in a bad way, and show fine long faces, and all their golden dreams are vanish'd into smoke."

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN.

On a former occasion, I presented to the Commission an account of the Manuscripts of Trinity College, Dublin, and mentioned that the collection occupied fourteen presses, lettered A to N. Of the Manuscripts contained in the presses A to E, inclusive, I then submitted a complete but compendious catalogue, which was printed in the Fourth Report of the Commission. In continuation, I now beg to present a catalogue of the Manuscripts contained in presses F and G. Most of these were presented to the College by Sir Jerome Alexander, Justice of the Common Pleas, Dublin, 1674, and by John Stearne, Bishop of Clogher, 1741.

In this portion of the collection, which consists largely of transcripts, the following Manuscripts may be specially mentioned:—

An illuminated copy, on vellum, of Jocelin's "Life of St. Patrick," and St. Bernard's "Life of St. Malachy."

Works of S. Bonaventura and Pseudo-Abdias.

Chartulary, on vellum, of Monastery of All-Hallows, Dublin.

History of the family of De Burgo, or Burke, in Latin and Irish, with coloured drawings.

Survey of parts of Ulster, made between 1st December 1618 and 28th March 1619, by Nicholas Fynnar and others, by authority of commission from James I., dated 28th November 1618; with maps.

Keating's History of Ireland, in Irish.

Heraldic and historical collections by Daniel Molyneux, Ulster King-of-Arms, 1597-1633.

Letters and despatches of Joseph Avery, Envoy from Charles I. to Denmark, Sweden, and Saxony.

Journals of House of Lords in Ireland.

Copies of Enrolments of Patents under the Great Seal of Ireland; of leases under Court of Wards in Ireland; papers relative to Irish civil, military, and ecclesiastical affairs in the sixteenth and seventeenth century.

Documents connected with Plantations in Ireland. Pedigrees, genealogies, obits, and heraldic collections, relating to English and Irish families.

Extracts from Registers and Chartularies.

Old English psalter and poems; transcripts of writings of Sir John Davies; and of English historical and legal documents.

"Aphorismal Discovery of Treasonable Faction,"—a narrative of affairs in Ireland from 1641 to 1652.

Chapter Book of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, 1670.

Proceedings of House of Convocation in Ireland, 1703.

Lists of officials and holders of Patent Offices in Ireland.

History of Kerry, by Charles Smith.

Of the documents here relating to Irish affairs in the seventeenth century, the most numerous are those known as the "Depositions" on the movements which commenced in Ireland in 1641. The "Depositions" of earliest date in the series are those taken before the Lords Justices, Privy Council, and chief officials of the English Government in Ireland during the first stages after the rising in October 1641. Amongst these are examinations taken on the rack by order of the Government at Dublin, a report of one of which will be found in our Appendix.

The greater numbers of the "Depositions" subsequently made from the end of 1641-2 to 1647 were taken under a Commission issued in the King's name at Dublin, on the 23rd of December 1641, by the Lords Justices, Sir William Parsons and Sir John Borlase. These temporary Governors had already been impugned for arbitrary and illegal proceedings. In this instance they paid little regard to constitutional precedent or public opinion, and ignored the existing courts and magistrates. Henry Jones, Dean of Kilmore, and seven clergymen of no eminence in the Established Church, who had retired to Dublin from the disturbed districts of Ireland, were nominated by the Lords Justices to take examinations concerning the "robberies and spoils" alleged to have been "committed upon" the King's good subjects there, British and Protestant; "the traitorous or disloyal words, speeches, or actions" uttered or committed subsequently to the 22nd of October 1641, and all other circumstances in relation "thereto." The Commissioners so appointed were Henry Jones, Dean of Kilmore, Roger Puttock, William Hitchcock, Randal Adams, John Sterne, William Aldrich, Henry Brereton, and John Watson.

Any two or more of them were empowered to call before them from time to time, and examine on oath upon the Holy Evangelists, all persons robbed and despoiled. The Commissioners were directed to reduce all these examinations to writing, and to return them, under their hands and seals, to the Lords Justices and Council of Ireland.

A second Commission, which, as well as the preceding one, will be found in our Appendix, was issued on the 18th of January 1641-2, by the same Lords Justices, to the same clergymen. In addition to taking examinations relative to such persons as had been robbed, spoiled, or deprived of their lands, rents, goods, or chattels, this Commission authorised the taking also of evidence as to the number of persons who had been murdered by the Rebels, or who had perished by famine since the 22nd of October 1641, with particulars of all circumstances connected with them. For the better performance of this service, all incumbents and officials of churches were required to give in to the Commissioners the names and number of the poor so spoiled who had been buried in their respective parishes; and thereafter, in and about Dublin, weekly bills were to be returned of the persons so buried.

From the 30th of December 1641 to the 8th of the following March, the persons examined by the Commissioners numbered six hundred and thirty-seven; and the whole of their losses were estimated by themselves to amount to above six hundred and thirty-five thousand three hundred and seventy-five pounds, four shillings and ninepence. This sum the Commissioners represented to have been hardly the five-hundredth part of the full losses of the whole kingdom. That a larger number of despoiled persons did not present themselves for examination up to March 1642 was ascribed by the Commissioners to various causes, such as imprisonment, departure to England, danger of the ways, sickness, and difficulty of accurately estimating their losses within the period named. Out of the whole province of Munster

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

no person had presented himself for examination. From Comaught there were but eleven,—from the county of Leitrim. From Ulster and Leinster the results were as follows:—

| | | "ULSTER. | | Examinates. | | Alleged Losses. | |
|-------------|---|----------|---|-------------|----|-----------------|--|
| Counties. | | | | | | £ s. d. | |
| Louth | - | 6 | - | 4,332 | 1 | 4 | |
| Cavan | - | 113 | - | 47,418 | 7 | 0 | |
| Fermanagh | - | 94 | - | 26,947 | 10 | 8 | |
| Armagh | - | 8 | - | 3,802 | 12 | 8 | |
| Tyrone | - | 2 | - | 1,667 | 0 | 0 | |
| Londonderry | - | 1 | - | 1,911 | 0 | 0 | |
| Monaghan | - | 31 | - | 36,181 | 0 | 8 | |

None appearing out of the counties of Down, Antrim, or Donegal."

"LEINSTER.

| | | | | | | |
|----------------|---|----|---|---------|----|---|
| Dublin | - | 72 | - | 120,032 | 15 | 3 |
| Kildare | - | 57 | - | 98,967 | 17 | 4 |
| Wicklow | - | 65 | - | 132,457 | 14 | 2 |
| Wexford | - | 38 | - | 62,519 | 12 | 4 |
| Carlow | - | 16 | - | 10,270 | 1 | 8 |
| Kilkenny | - | 5 | - | 8,312 | 0 | 0 |
| Meath | - | 46 | - | 33,678 | 14 | 3 |
| Westmeath | - | 7 | - | 3,512 | 12 | 0 |
| King's County | - | 9 | - | 11,525 | 4 | 8 |
| Queen's County | - | 14 | - | 18,884 | 15 | 9 |
| Longford | - | 28 | - | 16,440 | 10 | 8 |

A series of extracts from these depositions to March 1641-2 was compiled by the Commissioners as an Appendix to a "Remonstrance," which, with a commendatory letter from the Government at Dublin, was presented to the English House of Commons by Dr. Henry Jones, as a delegate from the Protestant clergy in Ireland. Jones was appointed by the Clergy to solicit relief in England for the distressed Protestants in Ireland from charitable persons as well as from the Parliament. In their "Remonstrance" the Commissioners "Humbly represented the lamentable condition" of themselves and their brethren, the poor, despoiled, "and distressed ministers of the Gospel in Ireland, with the widows and orphans of such."

The views entertained by these Commissioners who had been appointed to take depositions were expressed by themselves as follows:—

"There hath been beyond all parallel of former ages, a most bloody and Anti-christian combination and plot hatched by well-nigh the whole Romish sect, by way of combination from parts foreign with those at home, against this our Church and State; thereby intending the utter extirpation of the reformed religion and the professors of it: In the room thereof setting up that idol of the Masse, with all the abominations of that whore of Babylon: this also aiming at the pulling down and defeating the present State and Government of this kingdom under his sacred Majesty, theirs and our undoubted sovereign; and introducing another form of rule ordered and moderated by themselves, without dependence on his Highness or the kingdom of England."

"Copies," they added, "of such and so much of the depositions as answer to the particulars of this our Remonstrance we have hereunto annexed; that both the validity of our proceedings, and the truth of this our said Remonstrance, may the better appeare. Upon view of all which, it doth very evidently appeare that in the present most dangerous designe against this kingdom, the Popish faction therein hath been confederate with forraign States, if we may rely upon the report made thereof by the conspirators themselves and their adherents here."

The Irish Roman Catholics—amongst whom were some of the most eminent and wealthy of the nobility and gentry—totally repudiated the sentiments thus ascribed to them. In addresses to the King and Queen they asserted their loyalty, and protested against the "untrue suggestions and informations" given of them, as subjects in Ireland. They also denounced the courses pursued by the Lords Justices and averred that the latter, with the needy Government officials in the Puritan interest, were engaged in schemes to enrich and advance themselves by the ruin and extirpation of the Irish nation.

By a third Commission issued by the Puritan Lords Justices on the 11th of June 1642, another Protestant clergyman, the Rev. Edward Pigott, was appointed Commissioner for examinations, the taking of which was continued during the subsequent years. Some of these "Depositions" were also taken before Sir John Temple.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

He was closely connected with the Puritan party, and used the collection partly as the basis of his one-sided "History of the Beginnings and first Progress of the General Rebellion raised within the Kingdom of Ireland upon the three and twentieth day of October in the year 1641." In the preface to this work, first printed in 1646, Temple referred to the "Depositions" as follows:—

"And that I might in some measure compass my designe herein, and give satisfaction even to the most curious inquisitors after truth, I did with great care and diligence turn over the very originals or authentick copies of the voluminous examinations remaining with the publick register, and taken upon oath, by vertue of two severall Commissions issued out under the Great Seal of this kingdom, to examine the losses of the British, the cruelties and horrid murders committed by the Irish in the destruction of them."

The "Depositions" of later date in this collection are mainly in relation to the charges against persons arraigned before the Parliamentarian High Court of Justice, established in Ireland in 1652, some of the members of which were appointed a Committee for examinations concerning murders and massacres committed since the 23rd of October 1641. For the use of this Court certified copies of depositions of earlier date appear to have been supplied chiefly by Henry Jones. For his services he was paid an annual salary, appointed Bishop of Clogher, and subsequently became Scout Master General to the Parliamentarian army.

Amongst the latest documents in the present collection connected with the original Commissioners is the following, in the volume relating to the county of Carlow:—

"Memorandum that the day of the date hereof, Doctor Henry Jones and Henry Brereton, Minister of God's word, appeared before me, Richard Teige, Esq., Mayor of the City of Dublin, in Ireland, and did on their corporall oathes depose that the writings hereunto annexed are to the best of their knowledge true and perfect copies of the original examinations taken before them, the said Henry Jones, Henry Brereton, and other Commissioners authorised to take the said examinations upon oath, by vertue of several commissions to that purpose to them and others directed under the great seale of Ireland. In testimony whereof I have hereunto affixed my seale of office of Maioraltie and subscribed the 6th day of July 1652.

(Seal.) RICHARD TIGE, Mayor, Dublin."

This is followed by copies of "Depositions," from 1641 to 1645, entitled:—

"Depositions of Protestants, the King's loyal subjects, taken at the city of Dublin, in the kingdom of Ireland, on the days and in the months and yeares hereafter particularly expressed and putt upon every of their depositions: Before Henry Jones, Doctor in Divinity, Dean of Kilmore, Roger Puttocke, William Aldrich, William Hitecheock, Randall Adams, John Sterne, Henry Brereton, and John Watson, clerks. And the rest of the depositions taken before them and Edward Pigott, clarke, or some of them. By force of his Majesty's severall Commissions above written to them directed under the broad seale of the said kingdom of Ireland."

The truthfulness of the "Depositions" was publicly impugned, in 1685, by the Earl of Castlereagh, an English peer, who had taken an active part in the affairs of Ireland. Writing on this subject, Castlereagh referred to the misleading "Muster Rolls" of Sir John Temple, "of whom," he says, "the subsequent scribblers borrowed all their catalogues." "Temple," adds Castlereagh, "repeats the same people, and with the same circumstances, twice or thrice over, and mentions hundreds as then murdered, that lived many years after; may, some even this day alive."

The statements in the "Depositions" were discussed as follows in a tract published by John Curry, M.D., in 1747, entitled "A Brief Account, from the most Authentic Protestant writers, of the causes, motives, and mischiefs of the Irish Rebellion on the 23rd October 1641, in a dialogue between a Dissenter and a Member of the Church of Ireland as by Law Established":—

"Dissenter." But, what say you to the numerous depositions, given in upon oath, to prove the reality of these murders, perpetrated by the Irish Papists on the British Protestants, during that Rebellion?

"Churchman." I say, that those depositions were the very things which these Irish Papists so often prest, and challenged their enemies to submit to a fair and public scrutiny; and I must further say, that so honest, and so often repeated a challenge could not have been

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

declined by these enemies, thro' any other motive but a consciousness that there was no truth in them—besides, the characters of those authors, who first published them, are such, and the passages related in them so manifestly incredible, that I am amazed every Protestant of sense is not ashamed to quote them.

“Diss[enter]. Pray who are those authors, whose characters you are pleased to make so free with?”

“Ch[urchman]. The first, and principal, in malice, as well as time, were, I think, Sir John Temple, and Doctor Edmund Borlace; of whom, the former, being a Privy Councillor, and Master of the Rolls in Ireland, during that Rebellion, was so much interested in the condemnation of the Irish, both in point of fortune and character, that that consideration alone is sufficient to invalidate, or at least render suspicious, his own, and every other testimony, he hath brought against them; and as for the latter, Doctor Nalson has past this severe censure upon him: ‘Besides the nearness of his relation to one of the Lords Justices (Sir John Borlace, whose son he was) and his being openly and avowedly a favourer of the faction, and of the men and actions of these times (the English Rebels) he is an author of such strange inconsistency, that his book is rather a paradox than an history.’”

“Diss[enter]. But what are the passages, sworn to in these depositions, which you are pleased to call manifestly incredible?”

“Ch[urchman]. Not to trouble you, or myself, with the recital of many of those horrid falsehoods which have been sworn to in these depositions, as they have been communicated to us in Temple’s and Borlace’s lying and infamous legends, can anything be more ridiculous, or incredible than the few following passages, which we find in them? viz.: ‘That a proctor to a minister, altho’ he was diversely wounded, his belly ript up, and his entrails taken out, and left above a yard from him, bled not at all, until he was removed? That an Irish rebel thrust thrice at a young woman’s naked body with his sword drawn, and yet never pierced her skin? And that hundreds of the ghosts of the Protestants, that were drowned in Rebels at Portmadown Bridge, were seen wandering about that place, and heard crying for revenge.’”

“Diss[enter]. And have these things been sworn to in those depositions?”

“Ch[urchman]. They have, and by pretended eye-witnesses too.—And now, pray tell me, since passages, thus manifestly false and incredible, have been solemnly sworn to, on this occasion, by pretended eye-witnesses, what are we to think of so many other affidavits, in that history, (which are by far the greater number) taken on hearsay, or private belief only, and from the lowest, and most prejudiced of the people?”

Further references to these “Depositions” were made in an answer to this tract by Walter Harris, to which a rejoinder was published by Curry, in 1758, under the title of “Historical Memoirs of the Irish Rebellion of the year 1641.”

An examination of these “Depositions” was subsequently made by the Rev. Ferdinand Warner, of Jesus College, Cambridge, who in 1767 wrote of them as follows in his History of Ireland.*

“The reader hath been informed in the third book, that two commissions under the great seal were issued out by the Justices, to the Dean of Kilmore (Henry Jones), and seven other clergymen; one within two months after the breaking out of the rebellion, and the other in the January following: the first of these was to enquire into all the robberies that had been committed, with the particulars of the value, time, and place, and of all truitorous and disloyal speeches: the other to enquire what lands had been seized, and what murders committed by the rebels, what numbers of British people had perished in their flight from them, and how many had turned Papists since the twenty-second of October. In the June following, another commission—not mentioned by any historian—passed the great seal, in the same words with the last, and directed to the same persons except one: the reason of which I take to be, that one of the commissioners was then dead, and another named in his room. A copy of this commission is at the head of the manuscript in my possession, already mentioned; a duplicate of which book is among the Harleian manuscripts in the Museum. It hath also been taken notice of, that the examinations, by virtue of these commissions, are in two and thirty large volumes, in folio, deposited in the College Library at Dublin; besides one which contains the examinations that were taken by Archdeacon Byss for the province of Munster; and which Borlace—among his other falsehoods—says, was smothered with great artifice. In these books, besides the original examinations signed by the Commissioners, there are several copies of others, said to be taken before them, which are therefore of no authority; and there are many taken ten years after, before Justices of peace appointed by the Commissioners of the English Parliament. As a great stress hath been laid upon this collection, in print, and conversation, among the Protestants of that kingdom, and the whole evidence of the massacre turns upon it, I took a great deal of pains, and spent a great deal of time, in examining these books: and I am sorry to say, that they have been made the foundation of much more clamour and resentment, than can be warranted by truth and reason.

“There is one circumstance in these books—not taken notice of, as I perceived, by any body before me—that though all the examinations signed by the Commissioners are said to be upon oath, yet in infinitely the greatest number of them, the words ‘being duly sworn’ have the pen drawn through them, with the same ink with which the examinations are written; and in several of those where such words remain, many parts of the examinations are crossed out. This is a circumstance which shews, that the bulk of this immense collection is parole evidence, and upon report of common fame: and what sort of evidence that is, may be easily learnt by those who are conversant with the common people of any country; especially when their imaginations are terrified with cruelties, and their passions heated by sufferings. Of what credit are even depositions worthy—and several such there are—that many of the Protestants that were drowned, were often seen in erect postures in the river, and shrieking out ‘Revenge,’ to the terror of the whole country, even of the murderers themselves? But what will put the matter out of all doubt with impartial people, that no other examinations in these volumes are to be depended on, than what are sworn, is that no other are to be found in the manuscript collection in my possession, and its duplicate in the Museum; signed with the same signatures of the Commissioners, which I saw so often repeated in those two and thirty volumes, and which is therefore as much an original as that collection. The commission was finished in July this year [1643]; but there was one examination added in October; and on the eighth of November they attested, that they have examined and compared the above extracts with the original examinations with which they find them to agree.” Here then it is only that we can expect the most authentic account of the Irish Massacre; and I conceive the reason for making a duplicate of this collection was to send one copy to the King and Council, and the other to the English Parliament.

“Having thus established the authority from which I write of this tragical event, I must now endeavour to ascertain from it, as near as may be, the number of British and Protestants that were destroyed, out of war, by the Irish in this Rebellion. Though it is impossible, even from this authentic evidence of the murders, to come at any certainty and exactness as to their number, from the uncertainty itself of some of the accounts that are given in, yet it is easy enough from hence to demonstrate the falsehood of the relation of every Protestant historian of this rebellion. Indeed to any one who considers how thinly Ireland was at that time peopled by Protestants, and the province of Ulster particularly, where was the chief scene of the massacre, those relations, upon the face of them, appear incredible. It is very observable that Lord Clarendon, when he mentions this massacre in his history of the rebellion in England, says, ‘that there were forty or fifty thousand of the English Protestants murdered, before they suspected themselves to be in any danger, or could provide for their defence.’ But in his vindication of the Marquis of Ormonde, written at Cologne, if not under the inspection, yet with the help of memoirs given him by the Marquis, he wisely avoids naming any number; and says, ‘that in the space of less than ten days, the Irish murdered an incredible number of Protestants, without distinction of age, or sex; and that many thousands perished by cold and hunger.’ Had no writer gone beyond this last account, which may be called the Marquis of Ormonde’s—the best judge in the world of that event—I presume it would never have occasioned any dispute. But when this number hath been extended by some to ‘above an hundred and fifty thousand,’ by others to two, and even to ‘three hundred thousand,’ at a time when there were not so many more British in

* In the preface to this work, Warner suggested that Government should put in force in England, “in the gentlest manner,” such laws as would prevent the entrance of Popery in that kingdom.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

the whole kingdom, it made the relation impossible to be credited by men of sense. Lord Castlehaven hath assured us, that Sir J. Temple mentioned hundreds, as then murdered, that lived many years after; nay, some were even alive when he wrote his memoirs: and his Lordship observes further, that not a tenth part of the British natives reported to have been thus murdered, lived then in that kingdom out of cities and walled towns, in which no such massacre was committed. Father Walsh, who is allowed to have been 'honest and loyal,' hath affirmed that after a regular and exact enquiry, he computed the number might be about eight thousand.

"But setting aside all opinions and calculations in this affair—which, besides their uncertainty, are without any precision as to the space of time in which the murders were committed—the evidence from the depositions in the manuscript above-mentioned stands thus. The number of people killed, upon positive evidence collected in two years after the insurrection broke out, adding them altogether, amounts only to two thousand one hundred and nine; on the report of other Protestants, one thousand six hundred and nineteen more; and on the report of some of the rebels themselves, a further number of three hundred; the whole making four thousand and twenty-eight. Besides these murders, there is in the same collection, evidence, on the report of others, of eight thousand killed by ill usage: and if we should allow that the cruelties of the Irish, out of the war, extended to these numbers—which, considering the nature of several of the depositions, I think in my conscience we cannot—yet to be impartial we must allow, that there is no pretence for laying a greater number to their charge. This account is also corroborated by letter, which I copied out of the Council books at Dublin, written on the fifth of May, sixteen hundred and fifty-two—ten years after the beginning of the rebellion—from the Parliament Commissioners in Ireland, to the English Parliament. After exciting them to further severity against the Irish, as being afraid 'their behaviour towards this people may never sufficiently avenge their murders and massacres, and lest the Parliament might shortly be in pursuance of a speedy settlement of this nation, and thereby some tender concessions might be concluded,' the Commissioners tell them that it appears, 'besides eight hundred and forty-eight families, there were killed, hanged, burned, and drowned, six thousand and sixty-two.'

"The number given in these accounts—small as it is, compared with what hath been given by other Protestant writers—yet is surely great enough to give a horrible idea of the force and savage cruelty which was at that exercised by the Irish. But, in abatement of these examinations, it must be observed, besides what I have already hinted appears upon the face of them, that soon after the Restoration, when the claims in favour of Innocents were canvassed, and the House of Commons desired that none of those whose names could be found in that collection might be heard relating to such claims, the Duke of Ormonde, then Lord Lieutenant, and no friend to the Irish, for good reasons, rejected the proposal. His Grace, it is probable, knew too much of those examinations, or the methods used in procuring them, to give them such a stamp of authority; or otherwise, it would have been the clearest and shortest proof of the guilt of such as were named in them. The truth is, the soldiers and common people were very savage on both sides; and one would hope for the sake of humanity, that the enemies of each side have greatly aggravated the others cruelty. I have, however, been of opinion, since my knowledge of this part of Irish history, that these extravagant reports have been owing also to the friends of each side; who have been bigotted enough to think, that they did God service in such barbarities, and have therefore assumed a merit to their party beyond the measures of truth.

"Hence it was, no doubt, that the priests made a report, when Dr. Maxwell was prisoner amongst them—as he said in his deposition—that the persons slaughtered in the first six months, amounted to one hundred fifty-four thousand; and to this wicked zeal, and not to the reality of the fact, I hope, is to be attributed Dr. Borlase's account of the services performed by Sir W. Cole's regiment in the first year of the rebellion, and almost all in the province of Ulster. He says that besides two thousand four hundred and seventeen rebels killed in several engagements, there were 'starved and' 'furnished of the vulgar sort, whose goods were seized' 'on by this regiment, seven thousand.' If this is true, the Irish, though the first aggressors, have but too much reason to reeminate; and both sides will do well to guard against or to extinguish those unchristian animosities, which led the way to every species of barbarity, and ended in desolation, pestilence, and famine. Whether the account which I have given above of this great event in the Irish history, will satisfy the reader of either party, I don't know: but I have taken great care and pains in the enquiry, and I write, not to please, but to inform; not to irritate parties, but to unite them in the exercise of civil social duties."

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Some years after the appearance of Warner's work, Dr. John Curry again wrote as follows with reference to these "Depositions":

"I shall now briefly consider the nature of that evidence which has hitherto induced so many people, learned and unlearned, to give, or at least seem to give, credit to those horrible relations of murders, and massacres, which have been imputed to these insurgents. Evidence that, in itself, is so manifestly futile, contradictory, or false, that I am persuaded every person of common sense would be ashamed to produce the like upon any ordinary occasion.

"The evidence I mean, is that huge collection of manuscript depositions (consisting of thirty-two folio volumes) which are said to have been sworn, on the subject of the outrages and depredations committed by the insurgents in this war, and are now in the possession of the University of Dublin. From this enormous heap of malignity and nonsense, Temple and Borlase have selected such examinations as appeared to them the least exceptionable, and consequently, the most likely to obtain credit to their horrible narrations. To these therefore, I shall refer the reader, as a select specimen of the rest; after I have submitted to his consideration, what Dr. Warner (who, it seems, underwent the drudgery of perusing and examining the whole collection,) has left us as his opinion of it.

"'Hundreds of the ghosts of Protestants,' (says Temple, from these depositions) 'that were drowned by the rebels' at Portnadown Bridge, were seen in the river bolt-upright, and were heard to cry out for revenge on these rebels. One of these ghosts was seen with 'hands lifted up, and standing in that posture, from the 29th of December to the latter end of the following 'Lent.'"

Michael Carey, of Philadelphia, who, in 1823, devoted much attention to the contents of these "Depositions," considered that they might fairly be divided into four classes. Carey's suggested classification of them, and his views on the subject generally, were as follow:—

"[Class] I. Those [Depositions] which assert things contrary to the order of nature, as the appearance of ghosts, etc.

"II. Those which rest wholly on hearsay.

"III. Those which are so manifestly improbable as to preclude the assent of rational beings.

"IV. Those which are drawn up without any internal evidence of their falsehood.

"That the two first classes are to be rejected without a moment's hesitation, no man will dare deny. That they ever were admitted, and that such men as Carte, Warner, Leland, and Hume, should have drawn from them any portion of the materials of their histories, will be matter of eternal astonishment.

"The third class merits the same fate. Comments on such legends would be insulting the understanding of the reader. I presume that every account of this description is nearly on a level with the story of the ghosts that were perched in the river, screaming for revenge, from Christmas till the end of Lent; and is entitled to the same unqualified rejection.

"The fourth class alone is entitled to any consideration; and even that stands a fair chance of being involved in the same condemnation. Perjury was the order of the day; witnesses were suborned to shed innocent blood, and where we can establish beyond contradiction the absolute and unqualified perjury of so many of the witnesses, who swear positively to impossibilities, or to tales of 'what this body heard another body say,' and, above all, when such a man as Sir William Petty boasted that he 'had witnesses that would 'swear through a three-inch board,' we are warranted in rejecting even that small portion of the evidence which wears a plausible appearance, for it would be extraordinary if none of the perjurers could tell a consistent tale. No reason would be sufficient, short of what I have already stated, that the confiscation of 10,000,000 acres of the soil of Ireland, projected by the London Adventurers, sanctioned in part by the Long Parliament, and in a great measure carried into effect by Oliver Cromwell, depended for its justification on this history, which interested so many thousands in the support of it."

Carey further observes, "I trust the reader will agree that it fully realizes Warner's description, and is nothing more than a collection of 'idle silly tales,' of 'what this body heard another body say.' One man swears that he 'heard and verily believeth;' another, that he 'heard it credibly reported among the rebels themselves;' a third, that 'an Irish gentleman told him and others;' a fourth, that 'he was informed;' and a fifth that 'a woman absolutely in' 'formed this deponent.'"

Dr. Warner's account of the depositions was impugned as follows, by the late Rev. James Seaton Reid, D.D., in his "History of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland," published in 1834:

"In stating the grounds of his [Warner's] computation, he makes the following observation, which has thrown considerable discredit on the authenticity of the depositions above referred to:—'There is one circumstance in these books, not taken notice of as I perceived by anybody before me, that though all the examinations signed by the Commissioners are said to be upon oath, yet, in infinitely the greater number of them, the words being duly sworn have the pen drawn through them, with the same ink with which the examinations are written; and in several of those where such words remain, many parts of the examinations are crossed out. This is a circumstance which shows that the bulk of this immense collection is parole evidence, and upon report of common fame.' Hist. ii. 7. Entertaining some doubts of the accuracy of this sweeping assertion, I consulted the 'books' of depositions in the College Library; and, assisted by a friend, examined a good many of the volumes, time not permitting me to go over the whole, with the view of determining this point, which was readily done by referring to the beginning of each deposition; but we could not find a single one in which the words being duly sworn were crossed with the pen, or otherwise obliterated. It is probable some such cases do occur; but to assert, as Warner has done, that they occur 'in infinitely the greater number of them,' is a very incorrect and exaggerated statement."

Had Dr. Reid examined the entire collection, as has been done for the purposes of the present Report, he would have found that Warner's statement was, in the main, correct. Innumerable instances occur in which not only the words "duly sworn and examined" have been struck out, but also many passages, and, in some instances, entire pages, have been so dealt with. Of this a notable example is furnished by the volume for the county of Waterford, in which few pages can be found which have not been thus cancelled.* The examinations, it may also be observed, were taken in the absence of the persons who were accused. It has not hitherto been noticed that large numbers of the depositions purport to have been taken from persons such as cooks, carpenters, bricklayers, husbands, weavers, servants, mariners, labourers, and others in humble or dependant positions, whose illiterateness is indicated by the fact that their depositions are signed with marks. Some of the depositions are stated to be those of persons unacquainted with the English language, and taken through the medium of interpreters.

Few of the persons examined make direct statements from their own personal knowledge. From independent sources it appears that in cases where persons were not actually subjected to the "rack," threats of it and of other tortures were effectively used to obtain assent to the insertion of unfounded allegations in the "Depositions"; while statements were excluded which might tend to prejudice the acts of the Government under whom the Examiners were employed.

A remarkable instance of the unreliability of statements in the "Depositions" has been recently brought to light from unpublished records in the case of Henry O'Neill, son of Sir Torlogh O'Neill. At the Court of Transplantation at Athlone, in 1655, the Attorney-General produced depositions, taken in 1642, in which Charity Chappell and George Littlefield, of Armagh, declared, with much circumstantiality, that O'Neill had been in rebellion in 1641, and had plundered to a large amount. O'Neill, however, obtained permission to have Chappell and Littlefield examined in Court. There both of them admitted that they were not acquainted with the facts from their own knowledge, but, on the contrary, knew O'Neill to have always assisted the English. The Court consequently set aside the statements in the depositions, and decided in favour of O'Neill.

The "Depositions" were originally kept in bundles for their respective localities, and under an arrangement by which each paper might be found by reference to its number in an index of names, still extant in this collection. The present arrangement of the entire in books appears to have been made many years since. It is to be regretted that the papers were on that occasion bound in neither chronological nor numerical sequence—an oversight which renders reference to them tedious and onerous.*

Among other documents of interest of this period, given in our Appendix, are the "Petition from Despoiled" and "Distressed Ladies and Gentlewomen in Dublin;" and a characteristic letter from Lord Glamorgan, afterwards Marquis of Worcester, addressed, during his Irish negotiations, to Nicholas French, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ferns.

Of the papers in the collection connected with the English army in Ireland towards the middle of the seventeenth century, some of the more important are those given in Appendix VI., comprising an Army List, with the names of the principal officers, their quarters, weekly charges, and particulars of numbers and supplies.

Among the papers before us is a remembrance from the county of Louth (Appendix V.) to Colonel Michael Jones, and there are also here sets of cyphers used in Governmental correspondence from 1649 to 1665. These cyphers, given in Appendices X. and XI., may be of service in elucidating documents of the time in other collections.

Some short accounts or narratives of services against the Irish during the wars of the seventeenth century are likewise to be found amongst these papers. Of these perhaps the most important is that written by Major William Meredith, in 1656. In this relation, which is given in Appendix VIII., Meredith details the several military affairs in which he was engaged in Ireland from 1649 to 1653.

A remarkable paper connected with the abortive projected plot for a change of Government in 1663, by the party styled "the old Cromwellists," is now for the first time printed in Appendix XII. This is a brief narrative by Sir Theophilus Jones, detailing his interview, in 1663, with Colonel Alexander Jephson, who shortly after, in the same year, was, with some of his confederates, arrested, tried, and executed at Dublin for treason. The narrative by Sir Theophilus Jones has the appearance of having been prepared with great caution. Some hitherto unknown particulars in connection with the persons engaged in the plot to which it refers are given in my account, in the present Report, of the petitions addressed to the Duke of Ormonde.

The manuscript here known as the "Annals of Clonmacnoise" is a copy of an English version of a now missing Gaelic original. The translation was finished in 1627 by Connell MacGeoghegan, a gentleman of an old Irish family resident at Lismoyne, in the county of Westmeath. The annals commence at an early period, and extend to the fifteenth century. The chronology does not in all cases accord with that of other Irish annals. The translation is, however, valuable, as giving literal English versions of peculiar Gaelic phrases and idioms, and as exhibiting, to some extent, the pronunciation of Gaelic in the early part of the seventeenth century. A specimen of the style of the work is afforded by the "Dedicatory Epistle," which is given in Appendix I.

One of the most interesting manuscripts in this part of the collection is that entitled "An Aphorismal Discovery of Treasonable Faction." This is an original personal narrative of affairs in Ireland from 1641 to 1652. It is written in English, but with many peculiarities of orthography, unusual and semi-foreign words, and replete with extracts from, and references to, authors in Latin, Italian, Spanish, and Irish. The writer supplies no information as to his name, beyond the letters "P.S." or "N.S." at the ends of the "Epistle Dedicatorie," and the "Address to the Reader." He, however, gives us to understand that he was a man of the sword; "an eye-witness of all the storie;" that he was equally allied, by blood, with both ancient Irish and Anglo-Irish; and that his ardent desire was to per-

* The allegation by Dr. Reid in relation to Warner's account of the "Depositions" is repeated in the editions of the "History of the Presbyterian Church," published in 1835 and 1867. Mr. W. H. Lecky, in a recent work, mentions these "Depositions" and the statements of Warner and Reid in reference to them.—"History of England in the Eighteenth Century" London: 1878. Vol. iii, pp. 143-151.

* Some of these "Depositions" and "Examinations" have been recently printed for the first time in the Appendices to the "Contemporary History of Affairs in Ireland, 1641-1652." London: B. Quaritch.

petuate the memory of General Owen O'Neill. To the latter, under the title of Don Eugenius O'Neill, the work is dedicated. A considerable portion of it is occupied with an account of Owen O'Neill's proceedings while General of the Ulster forces, from the period of his arrival in Ireland from the Continent in 1642. In his "Epistle Dedicatorie" the author notices the history and position of the native Irish in Ireland. Having referred to the enterprise undertaken on their behalf by O'Neill, and to the remote antiquity of the race of Niall as ruling in Ulster, he concludes as follows:—

"This, Sir, is the justice of your cause, the equitie of your warfare, and the antiquitie of your regall claime, which noe other nation under the cope of Heaven, that we knowe, can bragge of so long continuance in actual possession as your predecessors, hearde upon 3000 yeares, except 99 yeares, which is betwene the stilinge Henry the 8 Kinge of Ireland, and the beginninge of the now war 1641 as above mentioned, and that same not without claime. To sett out your enemies to the world's viewe by such an unpolished pen (as mine is) were rather a timoritie in me then any way suiteinge to your greatnesse, and worth. All the best sort of antiquarists and historiographers doe hold you for bloude noe less than royall, in behaviour a prince, in armes Mars, in bounty Alexander, in wisdoms Salomon, in faithfulness David, in learning Euclides, and in languages Gaolglas,* in sayinge onely Don Eugenius Oneyll—is praise enough, as comprehending all the former epitomes, live then in heaven, the earth beinge not worthy of such a master peece, to gett your jorvall, a crowne of glorie for your religious intentions, which is the dayly desire of, sir,

"Your most humble and faithfull servant,

"P.S."

The author's address "to the Reader" is as follows:—

"Sir, I never yett durste hazarde my short scantlinge of knowledge to be tried by the just standarde of your judgment, nor putt those few graines of mine upon the indifferent scales of your censures, as beinge conscions to myself how much they are wantinge, both in weight and measure; I have severall times disclaimed the publication of this Discoverie (though sure I was posterity would reep some benefitt by it) beinge now earnestly solicited by pregnant witts that I should take it in hand, not for any abilitie I had, but as an eye-witnesse of all the storie, 'plus valet oculus testis quam auriti decem.' I must confesse my whole scope is onely the discoverie of faction, and not a whole historie of all the proceedings of this warr, not that I want knowledge of the passages, but as alienat from my being of sworde carier, doe reserue the same to its genuine authors of better abilitie and leasure. An ardent desire I have to make him live still in your memories, in whose great hopes while he breathed all well affected Catholicks lived. This dulled my sense against other tender impressions and violent driven me either upon the rocke of your just reprove, or unto the armes of your good favour: I knowe not yett whether be mine the hazarde, see his be the prayse. Knowe, sir, I am indifferent betwene both ancient and recent Irish hearin concerned, as my purest bloude equally flowinge through their channells these 300 yeares. Beinge soe intimate unto both, 'sed magis amica veritas;' if any thinge I seeme to transgresse the true limitts of a historian, or shewe meself somewhat bitter, rather inclininge to the one side then unto another, it is not the want of affection to either, but the obligation of a publicke scriver warranteth to tell truth, and passion the other, lett hit where it may. I would to God all were not true, though bounde in conscience to a recantation and publicke satisfaction to the lossed: take it therefore as true as the author is a man, the argument is generall, the publicke minister may meeete with his experience, the souldier with his practice, the phisitian with his aphorismes, the schollar with his readinge, and every of these in his own element paralell both the aphorisme, example, and authoritie; the methode is not soe vulgar, for though bookes of civill discourse be full of axioms, philosophers of prooffe, and historians of instances, yett shall ye heardly meeete them all combined in one complement to invite your curious pallat. I have fetched from farr and neere those sweete druggs from the shoppes of those exceddinge apothecaries to give a relish beyonde its nature to those abominable viands, treason, and faction, leaste the poysen thereof without such shamples would cause a deadly vomitt. What else is to be observed your judgment may descerne; whereunto I shall subscribe and your favour accepte, whereupon I rely.

"Yours, as his owne,
"P.S."

The manuscript, which is a small folio volume, is unfortunately defective at the end, and some portions towards the centre have been lost through decay from damp. It now consists of two hundred and thirty leaves, written closely on both sides. Most of the writing is in a very minute character, and replete with obscure contractions. The entire volume appears to have been penned by one expert hand; the Gaelic passages are written in the Irish character; and from their style it may be inferred that the author was a proficient in that, as in the other languages, from which he quotes.

The work is divided into Books, Chapters, and Sections, as follows:—

| Books. | Chapters. | Sections. |
|---------------|---------------|------------|
| I. | I. to XXVIII. | 1 to 201. |
| II. | " " XXXI. | 202 " 326. |
| III. | " " XLIIIA.] | 327 " 492. |
| IV. [Part I.] | " " XVIII. | 493 " 597. |
| IV. [" 2.] | " " XXV. | 598 " 696. |
| V. | " " XL. | 697 " 890. |
| VI. | " " XXX. | 891 " 999. |

Each chapter commences with an "Aphorism," intended to apply specially to the subject treated of in the portion of the narrative which follows. The general style of these aphorisms—derived mainly from Guicciardini and Sir Robert Dallington—may be judged from the following specimens.

"Noe necessitie can be forcible enough, nor pretence warrantable to urge a man to be disloyall, or make breache of his worde and faith to his Prince. It is, therefore, hatefull in all men, but more when it is in a person noble by bloude, and a souldier, and most of all when it is accompanied with ingratitude, whose seldome escapes the due rewarde for such an offence.—Frans cedior quam aperta violentia."

"All creatures are naturally skilfull and cuning to knowe not only their owne good, but what may hurte and annoy theire enemye. And therefore the dragon biteth the elephant's eare, and thence sucketh his bloude; because he knoweth that to be the only place which he cannot reach with his tronke, to defende. See the partie iniured, if he finde noe other way, revengeth himself upon the iniurer, by infusing ill counsell into his eares. A prince therefore must either not wronge his neighbour, or not take his advice whom he hath wronged. Quelibet extinctos injuria suscitai ignes."

"Example is of greater force than precept. It therefore behoueth a generall, as well to be a good souldier, as an able director; that by his presence and personall performance of what he commands others they may be encouraged to endure any paines, or undergoe any dangers, for upon his actions and vertue especially depends the successe of all the service. Whereupon the Greeke leader truly inferred, that an armie of sheepe led by a lion was better than an armie of lions led by a sheepe.

"Primus arenas

Ingridiar, primusque gradus in pulvere ponam—
Dux an miles eam."

"Friendship in courte, is lickie musick at a feaste, a man has nothing but a sweete sounde for his money; or rather it is lickie those apothecarie druggs, which are hott in the mouthe and cold in the operation. It is quicke to promise and slowe to performe; receiuinge substance and returninge smake; sometimes it mounth the client's cause, but seldome nrgeth it to preuayle.

"Usibus edocto si quidquam credis amico; Vive tibi, et longè nomina magna fuge."

"The dolphin findinge himself vnable to hurte the crocodile by reason of his hearte [hard] scales which noe weapon can pierce, diueth under him and with his sharpe finne stricketh him vnto his belly, beinge softe and tender, and soe killeth him. What nature hath taught the creature, experience hath taught man. To strike the enemy wheare he may be most hurte, and leave things impossible unattempted: for, prudence is of force where force preuayles not. And therefore direction is left to the Commander, execution to the souldier, whose is not to aske why, but to doe what he is commanded.

"Tuis, o Regina, quod optes, Explorare labor; mihi jussa capessere fas est."

* Gaolglas.—According to the native Irish legends, the Gaelic name of the author was first reduced to order, in remote times, by Gaolghil Glinis.

"Five things are required in a General: knowledge, valour, foresight, authority, and fortune: he that is not renowned for all, or most of these virtues, is not to be reputed fit for this charge; nor can this glorie be purchased but by practice and prooffe, for the greatest fencer is not alwaies the best fighter, nor the fairest tilter the ablest souldier, nor the greatest favorite in courte the fittest commander in a campe. That Prince therefore is ill advised, who confers this charge upon his minion, either for his courtship or what other respecte, neglectinge those more requisite and more noble properties.

"Tiberius hortabatur senatum vt eligeret proconsulem in bello contra Tacfarinatem, gnarum militie, corpore validum et bello suffecturum."

"While the crocodile sleepes gaping with open mouth, the Indian ratt shoots himself into his belly and knawes his guts in sunder, soe intreth mischief at the open gates of securitie, self-conceited confidence in our owne strenght, and overweeninge credulitie of another's nonesie, hegets in men this supine negligence. But a watchful providence prevents an eminent danger.

"Metiri sua regna decet, viresque fateri."

"He that weareth his hearte in his foreheade, and is of an honest and transparent nature, through whose words, as through cristall, yee may see unto every corner of his thoughts; that man is fitter for a table of goode fellowship then a Councill table; for upon the theater of publicke employment either in peace or warr, the actors must of necessitie weare vizards, and change then in every scene. Because the generall good and safte of a state is the center in which all there actions and counsailes must meete: to which men cannot alwaies arrive by plaine pathes and beaten waies. Wherefore a Prince may pretende a desire of friendship with the weaker, when he meanes, and must contracte it with the stronger. He may sometimes leave the comon highway, and take downe an unused-by-path, in the lesser of dangers, soe he be sure to recompence it in the greater of safte.

"Brutus erat stulti sapientis imitator, ut esset Tatus ab insidiis, dire tyranne, dire."

"All plants and other creatures have their growth and increase to a period, and then their declination and decay, except only the crocodile whoe ever groweth bigger and bigger even till death. Soe have all passions and perturbations in man's minde, their intentions and remissions, increase and decrease, except only malicious revenge. For this, the longer it lasteth, the stronger it waxeth, and worketh still even when the maligne humours of avarice and ambition are settled or spent. Wherefore such fierie spiritts as these, after for innovation then administration, are alwaies most dangerous in a state.

"In id nati ut nec ipsi quiescant, nec alios sinant."

"Nature yeldeth for man's use the bud, the flower, and the fruite. But if he will the flower for his pleasure, he may not nipp off the budd; and if he will enjoye the fruite for his use, he may not rash off the flower; soe in a man's actions, he must suffer every precedent cause to ripen and have his season, if he will reape the fruite of a wished effecte. It is therefore a well-grounded deliberation in states not to snatch greedily at the flower of a faire offer, except it certainly bringe with it the sweete fruite of profit: nor enter into a warr, though for a just revenge and lawfull recovery of their owne, except there appeare pregnant and demonstrative assurances of the good successe.

"Anno cante descendentes in pericula."

The author of the "Aphorismical Discovery" writes in the tone of a loyal Irish adherent of Charles I., whose cause, he seeks to prove, was wrecked by the policy pursued by Lords Ormonde, Clanricarde, and Castlehaven, together with General Thomas Preston and their lay and ecclesiastical associates. All these, as well as the Confederate Catholics—both laity and clergy—who opposed the views of Owen O'Neill and the Nuncio, Rinuccini, and their followers, are censured as a "treasonable faction" by the author, in severe terms. The "Ulster party" are represented throughout as pursuing an upright, unselfish course, and their merits and sufferings are expatiated on with feeling and commiseration.

The chief interest in the earlier parts of the narrative is centred in General Owen O'Neill, the Marquis of Ormonde, and the Supreme Council of the Irish Confederates. After the withdrawal of Ormonde and the death of Owen O'Neill in 1649, prominent places in the narrative are assigned to the proceedings of the Lord Deputy Clanricarde, the negotiations with the Duke of Lorraine, and the acts of Major-General Hugh O'Neill. The latter, an officer of high repute, had left the Continent to join the Ulstermen at home, under his uncle, Owen O'Neill.

As specimens of the narrative, we may take the following two chapters from the second part of the fourth book relative to Major-General Hugh O'Neill's precautionary measures at Clonmel, and his successful defence of that town against Oliver Cromwell in 1649-50.

"Chapter IV. When the stomocke bath receaved plentie of foode, all the heate in the exterior parts hath recourse thither, to dispose it to nutriment and expell what is hurtfull, for nature defendeth herself rather against an intestine than forraigne enemy (as beinge the more dangerous, either to the health of a man or safte of a state), and therefore she draws all her forces from these suburbs of the bodie of a man to this metropolis of the stomocke. As it fares in this direction of nature, soe stands it in the discipline of warrs, and as in the bodie, soe in a garrison towne, the chiefest forces must be naturall, and of our owne subjectes, for if the major parte be mercenaries and strangers it is alwaies in their power to corbe or crosse our commande, and to give us the place at their owne pleasure.—"Neminem ignotum militem inter suos admittendum."

"Wee have made mentione of Major-generall Huigh Oneylle, that he was commanded by My Lord of Ormond unto Clonnell, no. 587. Upon his arrivall thither (as an experimented warrior) was not idle, providinge the futuration of a hearde siege, builded braue workes for the defence of that towne, wherof was then governor and chiefe commander; he comaunded a partie to Feards, another to Cahire castle, to assiste one Mr. Mathews, an uterine brother to My Lord of Ormonde; seating himself thus, the enemy did leaguer Feards, and was yielded upon quarter of lines and armes, after some losse on either side; the defendants went to Clonnell, but the enemy marched towards Cahire castle aforesaid; the place was stronge, men, provision, and amunition enough, two stronge grates, a drawinge bridge, a goodly bawon, a large and stronge-walled base courte. When Mr. Mathews, the propriator, had notice of the enemies approche, consulting with the captains about the best posture of defence, agreed not: the Vlstermen, as unto him strangers, were not of opinion to quit the castle altogether, and fight only in the outward bawon (as he desired), leaste necessitated upon any occasion to have recourse unto the castle, would be kepte out to their-exceedinge prejudice. The gentleman cleered this doubt, promising faithfully, as a Christian to both relinc and admite them upon all occasions to and from the castle. Condescendinge to his Ormondian attestations and quiettes, marched unto the outward bawon, he and his remaine in the castle; this Vlster partie was the matter of foreshore men, scarce seating themselves there, when the enemy in a flourishing equipage undauntedly marched towards the castle, as confident of no opposition, but deceaved, for the Vlstermen (noe more then the marlin hauke before the sparrowe, or the wolfe before the lamb, the keite before the chicke, or the fox before the hen) could contain themselves before those without offeringe offence, therefore with more then earnest levell discharged a volly amonge their rancks (beinge an infallible butt), caused the enemy to recoile and looke more narrowe unto himself, where both assaillant and defendant fought for half an hower, to the eternall praise of the defendants and exceedinge losse of the enemy.

"But observinge the multitude (as now sensible of their former prejudice) to drawe forward in a maine bodie, and the ordinance plaunted against the defendants, a captain goes to the castle doore, suinge the gentleman of the castle the complaunce of his former and past engagement, to give the souldiers way to enter the castle for their safte, and promised to make good the same against the enemy, as not beinge able to withstande the enemy in the foresaid bawon. The gentleman (notwithstandinge his severall attestations to the contrary) would not by any meanes give admittance. The captain, too late understandinge, by this perjurous action, that he was betrayed, must now fight or suffer, returninge with this unexpected and sadd answer unto his men, he founde (as God did dispose for the behoofe of those innocent poore men) a trumpeter from the enemy, presnting himself, desiringe a parley, which was granted, and did capitulate for quarter, both stout and honorable, was easily granted, to marche with banners displayed in bodie and posture of fight, with all their armes, bagg and baggage, and allsoe a passe or billette to continue in

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

the English quarters for a month, if they pleased, which accepted (and granted only to this Vlsiter partie), marched in the foresaid posture, accordinge orders, towards My Lord Cromwell. His Lordship made much of them, and was pleased to tell the captain that if [he] did continue with him in his armie he would use him well, and give him a monthe's meane before hande. The captain gallantly answered (to My Lord's admiration) that for a world [he] would not chauce places, would rather undergoe any penaltie, nay, the basest death that could be invented, rather then give a stroke against his religion, or swarve from his principles. After some conference upon this stringe, tooke his leave and marched away, refreshing himself and his men for a weeke in the country, accordinge his said billett, arrived to Clonmell.

"Huigh Oneylle, resident in towne with the matter now of 1,500 men and some horse of Major Fennell (whose still kept with him), he alwaies behaved himself both wise, couragious, and fortunat, against Cromwell and his partie, whoe kept a siege unto the towne, now almost from Christmasse last untill now about May, this yeare, not only in a defensive, but offensive waye, with many valiant sallies and martiall stratagems, to the enemies mightie prejudice, did loose some daies 200, other dayes 300, other 400, and other 500 men: this losse was soe often and comon, that My Lord Cromwell was wearie of the place, that if his honor did not impede his Lordship would quit the place and raise the siege; revolging this and many other things in his brest, and among the rest, that he was confident of noe reliefe to come to this towne, and therefore a staine in his honor to quit such a place, beinge for the conquest of a whole kingdome, havinge men enough at a call after soe much losse to raise his siege, would discourage his proper and alien men joininge with him, thought by those and other such motives, to tyre this braue warrior, loosenge dayly men and ammunition, without the leaste expectation to be with either supplied (though all this while severally promised by Preston from Waterford), notwithstanding that My Lord Cromwell observed these conceptions to be sufficient grounde to weare out the invincible courage of Major Oneylle, nevertheless was most desirous to knowe some other way or stratageme to, abbreviat the busines, studyng all devices, none came to any purpose, the dexterite and vigilancie of the Major was such, crossinge eache his attempts, proving too fatal to the enemye.

"Chapter V. Sparinge is a good revenue to a privat man, but to a prince nothing is worse beseeching his honor, nor indeede more prejudicial to his affaires, for there is noe baite to the goulden hooke, nor weapon to the silver speare, nor forte, be it neuer soe stronge, that can longe hold out against the mulet charged with treasure.

"Argenteis pugna hastis et omnia vinces.

"My Lord Cromwell tumblinge and tossing, hammeringe the former motives unto his braines, hittinge upon noe settled resolution, though his armie was both stronge and numerous with the access of dayly reliefe, his managment martiall, his attempts various and valiant, his campe plentifull of both provision, meanes, and all other necessaries conducing to his intent. Yett the dexter deportment of his antagoniste did frustrate and avoide all and singular the former abilitiments in such manner that the Lord Cromwell must studie some device other then the strength of the bodie of his armie; he now remembers that sparinge is not beseeching his honor, now a prince, noe privat man: to fish in the muddy waters of distracted Ireland, is by a golden baite; he intends, insteade of peeke and musket, to use silver speares, as better weapon, and to charge his guns not with brazen bullets, but with treasure, those extravagant unto the theoricke of other martiiallists must have for the execution a good gunner, practitioner in the arte, such not knowne yett unto My Lord Cromwell. At length, by the enformation of some of Insecuyns partie, or other proper surmishes, litted upon a fit instrument of treacherie, Major Fennell, above mentioned, an ambitious and covetous traitor, was sued unto to be the actor of the tragicke of betrayinge both men and towne, for his paines was offered 500*l*. The bargain was made, the condition accepted, bonds for payment, My Lord Cromwell's honor engaged; the time of performance, on Fennell's parte, was the verie next night (after the covenant was indorsed), about 12 alocke, that he, with such as were of that treason and conspiracie guiltie, would garde such a gate, and would open the same, at the said peremptorie hower, for the intringe of 500 men of my Lord Cromwell, and then to simulat an opposition to the rest. This concluded upon, the Major-generall, by some inspyringe good angell (though severally and deservedly heretofore suspicious of this Fennell), could take noe rest that night, therfor passinge the rounde was enformed that Fennell was more then ordinarie actine that night, walked where he was, whom he founde verie basic, and whearas all the gate guards should be mixt with two parts of the Vlsitermen, the third of the natives, or all of the northeren, by commande, as preventinge any such rupture; beside this order, contrarie to this commande, and against this solid and well grounded custome, he founde Fennell guardinge that gate with his onely natives (which confirmed his former jealousies of him), asked Fennell what he did there? whoe answered that it was his taske to keepe that poaste that night, the major whisperinge one of his men in the care, commandinge him (sendinge by him his glove for a token) to cause the Tollsher garde to come forthwith unto him there, in this meane while spoke neuer a worde.

"The tollsher garde nowe arrivinge, the Major caused the former to be divided unto severall poastes, and to picke out of the respective centries that sett number of men that was alreadye at that gate; this don, he added as surplus 500 men; then brings Fennell aside and questioned him for not observinge his orders in the posure of the garde there. Sir, said he, you are like to suffer for it, if you doe not freely tell me the truth. The other knowinge himselfe guiltie, and beinge sure that his plott was either discovered or like now to marr, did humbly supplicat the Major to pardon him, and that he would truly and really tell him all veritie; which promised, told him succinctly all the passage as formerly, and withall that the hower was drawinge on that he should open the gate. I doe, said the major, pardon you soe you swear fealtie unto me for the future, and I will doe the same unto you, all which was incontinently accomplished. Adviecinge, therefore, with the rest, what best to doe in that extremitie, they resolute to open the gate the peremptorie time, accordinge the former covenant. The enemye was watching his opportunitye, observinge the signall, marched towards the gate, 500 did enter, the rest nolens volens were kept out, and all that intred were putt to the sword; thus did God discover this treasonable plott under Major Huigh Oneylle.

"My Lord Cromwell, certified of this preposterous issue of his late bargain with Fennell, was mighty troubled in minde, and therefore did sende for other armies and greate ordinance, which beinge come, did plante his ordinance against the towne walle, with continuall thundering of shott, made a greate breache for both horse and foote assayllable. The Major-generall all this while was not idle, for he caused a counterscarfe to be made, with a huge ditche, right oppositt unto the said breache. Then began the assaulte verie fierce and couragious, the defendants (as if invincible, which was the same phrase that Cromwell himselfe gaue them) opposed soe manly, that three severall times they beate the enemye backe. The adncere generall observinge the mortalitie of his men, the breache soe large, and they soe often repulsed by a handfull of men in respect of his multitude, determined to loose all at once, or win the garland. Commandinge therefore both horse and foote, pell mell, that such a neape in such an occasion was seldom scene, that by the very thronge severall of them perished, advancinge forwarde unawares (both opposition and assaulte beinge soe furious and hott), not observinge either ditche or counterscarfe, fell headlonge unto the said ditche, from whence was no redemption or possibilitie of reconcer, but there were massacred and butchered. Their seconds and comrads seeinge what hapned, retired, neither the threats of the Generall, nor the bloudie sword of inferiour officers was sufficient enough to keepe them from turninge tayle to the assaulte, and turned to the campe, leavinge Major-generall Oneylle in the possession of a bloudie walle.

"This siege did continue now 5 moneths. But this assaulte finished, the Major had noe ammunition more then what the soldiery did carie in their vandeliros about them (though Generall Thomas Preston did too often promise a supply thereof), wherefore must now looke to himself, to continue before a stronge enemye now exasperate in such tennine condition as he was at present, is noe visdomme, observinge which, he called for a councill of warr; after many overtures, accordinge the extenuitie of affaires, did conclude to marche away, and invited such of the natives as were both able and well affected (others were there that were deeply engaged in treasonable faction, whom the Major well knewe).

Marchinge therefore, with a dumb drum over the bridge, and towards Waterforde, that parte of the towne was slightly besieged, and affarr off, and thns the Major deserted Clonmell and went to Waterforde, leaving Cromwell in the siege, as aforesaid.

"Cromwell, after the said skirmishe in his campe, troubled in minde, without rest or sleepe all that night, verie early next morninge, walkinge solitarie abroad in sight of the towne, thought verie strange that neither centrie or scout did apere on the wall or abroad, nor the signall of attune giuen either by drumm or trumpet accordinge custome; weainge all these matters in a ouious waye, to be truly enformed of the silent behaviour of the warlike defendant, perswadinge himself to procede of some martiall stratageme, comanded some scout (as explorators) towards the towne, whoe durst not venture too farr, and turninge backe to theire generall without other intimation then what already by diuerse inductions of fallible promisses he gathered. This time was spent, untill about ten of the clocke in the morninge, some of the townsmen (as of the Ormondian faction) went to the campe, gane the Generall notice of Major-generall's desertinge the towne last night, who could scarce beleue it, but further attestinge the same to be true, commended the Major for a brave souldier, and accused his owne retrograde fortune as not able to win one pettie-towne perforce (after all his victories), or wreste it by fine force out of the hands of one single man (whoe properly was noe more compared unto his multitude), soe longe a time without reliefe. Upon this the generall did dislodge and marched to the towne; the armie intreinge (notwithstandinge the submission of the former informers), the inhabitants were both pillaged, rifled, and plundered, withoute respecte of persons, or mercie of degree; appointinge commanders and garrison there, marched with all expedition towards Waterford, to recover there what by Huigh Oneylle he lost in Clonmell; arrivinge thither, sate before the towne, but, scarce seatinge himself there, when receaved commands from England to apere there upon sight. In obedience herof (appointinge Earthon [Ireton] Lord Deputie-generall of the armie), hoisinge saile, went for Englande; but sure, though fortunat can little boaste of his service in Ireland; as havinge all he had therein by the distraction and division of the nation, treacherie and faction of corrupt members, and Clonmell for want of amunition, but here not exposed to any purpose since his arrivall to Ireland.

"Cromwell, dispatched for England, Earthon, his Deputie-generall, began now to rouse himself, and by proper acts to win honor; did layger Waterforde neerer home, and another siege he layed unto Ticrohan, Sir Luke Fitz-Gerald's house. Major-generall Neylle, arrivinge unto Waterforde, was not permitted to inter the city for severall moities; the one, that Preston was not soe kinde or loyall-hearted that he would willingly entertaine this warrior, the other, that the city was thought too narrow for both parties, and also that the plague was within the towne. By these and such other surmishes the Major and his partie was kept out, and must continue as centinells or safeguarde betweene the enemye and cittie, neither towne or Governor Thomas Preston allowinge them any meanes or provision other then what they could haue from the contrie, havinge such a stronge enemye at theire nose, untill Diego Preston, condolinge theire case, did share with them one moytie of the garrison souldiers meane and provision 18*l*. le price, and some amunition brende, per weeke; wherby mightie relieved, sure the enemye would choose any other to be his neighbour rather then Huigh Oneylle, as havinge by wofull experience a sadd tryall of his courage and deportment errie day with some bickeringe. By those daylie actions, and by the reepneesse of the plague (as well in the towne, as now in the campe), Major Neyll's partie did decrease, wherby the enemye was encouraged to drawe neerer home by inches. The warie Major observinge his future danger, resolved before he were blocked up to save himself, wherfore, adviced his foote to sarve themselves the best they could, and betake themselves the shortest cutt towards Limbricke, and that he and Major Fennell, with theire fewe horse, would awaye; all which was putt in execution the same night. But next morninge the enemye had intelligence herof, comaunderd a partie of horse after him, dispatched, pursued him the matter of 30 miles towards Kimalloge, but bootlesse, for the Major went alonge to Limbricke; the enemye returned to Waterforde, whom wee leaue for a while, and speake of other matters at this time occuringe."

After a description of the siege of Limerick by Ireton in 1651, the narrative is carried into the year 1652, with many valuable details in connection with the movements of Colonel Richard Grace, and other Royalists who held out in arms in Ireland, under great difficulties, to a period later than has been generally supposed. The volume terminates abruptly as follows, with a passage from Luanan, at the commencement of chapter xxx. of the sixth book—all the remainder having unfortunately disappeared:

"A state lately lost by the crueltie and oppression of the prince, beinge newly conquered, is preserved by the contraire meanes, and better kept by lone than by force; the victor prince must thinke that he is as well the states, as the state his, and therefore he ought to be well adviced, not only how he gouerne himself amonge these newe subiects, but alsoe in his absence what gouernor he substitute to keepe them in obedience, leaste what he gott by the ounce he loose by the pounde, and with more dishonor in the deprivation then he had glory by the purchase.

"—Vrbi pater est, vrbiq; maritus :
Iustitia cultor, rigidi servator honesti :
In commune bonus."

* * * * *

Throughout the work we find abundant novel matters of interest in the author's accounts of what he styles the "tragedies and comedies rife upon this bloody stage of "war." He appears to have possessed a singularly intimate and accurate knowledge both of the personal characteristics and the antecedents of the families of the various personages whom he mentions. Another remarkable feature in the book is the number of original documents, not elsewhere accessible, which the author introduces in connection with his narration. The originals of several of these appear to have been transmitted to the Continent. In some cases where Latin instruments are introduced the author appends his own English translations, with the object, he says, of aiding the readers of his book. The large amount of matters treated of, and the style of arrangement of the whole, may to some extent be gathered from the synopsis in our Appendix, mainly in the author's own words, epitomising the chief contents of the various sections into which the volume is sub-divided. This may perhaps also bring to light other copies of the entire or portions of the work, and thus aid towards the identification of the author.

Of the history of this manuscript of the "Aphorismical Discovery" little is known. From internal evidence we may assume it to have been written between the years 1652 and 1660. Somewhat later it was in the possession of Dr. John Madden, President of the College of Physicians in Ireland towards the close of the seventeenth century. After Madden's death it passed with other MSS. which he had acquired, to John Stearne, Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, appointed Bishop of Clogher in 1717. It formed part of the collection which Stearne subsequently presented to the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, where it has since that time been preserved.

The authority of Carte's "Life of Ormonde," hitherto accepted by historic students as the standard work on the affairs of which it treats, is not a little impaired, in many parts, by the statements in the "Aphorismical Discovery." Carte inspected the "Aphorismical" manuscript in 1733, and it would appear that, finding its author's views opposed to his own personal and political predilections, he sought rather precipitately to depreciate the accuracy of the work, but without adducing any specific instance of error or misrepresentation in it. Carte's acquaintance with its contents appears to have been superficial, and he fell into the grave error of alleging that its author styled himself Secretary to General Owen Roe O'Neill, for which statement there is no authority to be found in the manuscript.

In addition to its high literary interest as a specimen of an unique Hiberno-English composition, the "Aphorismical Discovery" must be regarded as of rare historical value. So far as at present known, it is the only contemporary work extant, in the English language, which discloses the views and aims of an important portion of the Irish people known as the Native or "Ulster party," which at one time exercised no inconsiderable influence on the public affairs of these kingdoms. The information embodied in the "Aphorismical Discovery" is thus an important accession to the materials hitherto available towards completing our knowledge of British history in the seventeenth century.*

* Since this Report was presented, the publication of an edition of the "Aphorismical Discovery," limited to a small number of copies, has been undertaken by the Irish Archaeological and Celtic Society of Dublin, under the title of "A Contemporary History of Affairs in Ireland from 1641 to 1652, with an Appendix of original letters and documents." London. B. Quaritch.

In the following, as in my preceding, catalogue of portion of the collection of Trinity College, Dublin, printed in the Fourth Report of the Commission, the manuscript volumes are enumerated according to their local sequence in the presses :

F.

Journal of House of Lords in Ireland, 1661-1666. Fol. Collections by Sir William Davys, Recorder of Dublin; his speeches, deeds of fee-farm, etc.—The Parson's Law by W. Hughes.—Speech of Sir Maurice Eastace.—Rules for Dublin Corporation, 1672.—Opinions of Sir H. Fiuch, 1666-1672. Fol.

Book of Enrolments of Letters Patent in Ireland, 9-12 Charles I. Fol.

Journals of House of Lords in Ireland, 1639-1646. Fol.

Journal of House of Lords in Ireland, 1634-1635.—Letters patent of James I. for creation of Irish Peers. Fol.

Journal of House of Lords in Ireland, Session 1635. Fol.

Dudley Loftus on Office of Surveyor-General.—Claim of Adventurers on barony of Carey.—Sir R. Bolton on laws in Ireland, with Sergeant Mayart's answer.—Precedence in English Chancery suits.—Legal rights of widows.—Consecration of Churchyard at St. Patrick's, Dublin.—Documents relating to lands in Dublin, Limerick, and Tipperary.—Customs in Cities and Corporate Towns.—Wills and settlements connected with Sir William Davys, 1664, and Sir Paul Davys, 1672.—James I. on courts of Justice in Ireland, etc. Fol.

Liber Niger, compiled for John Alan, Archbishop of Dublin. Transcript. Fol.

Book of Enrolments of Letters Patent under Great Seal of Ireland, 12 and 13 Charles I. Fol.

Proceedings of Lower House of Convocation at Dublin, 1703, and of Committees for elections, grievances, and for works of charity, etc.—Names of clergy summoned to Dublin, 1703. Fol.

Irish-Latin Dictionary of Words in Scripture. Fol.

Book of Leases of Court of Wards in Ireland, 3 to 8 Charles I. Fol.

History of House of Ormonde, by William Roberts, Ulster King-of-Arms. Fol. Imperfect. See Appendix II. Statutes and charter of Trinity College, Dublin, from Charles I.—List of Military Regiments and their Officers in Ireland under James II.—Incomplete. Fol.

Collections relative to religious houses in Ireland. 2 vols. Fol.

Chapter Book of St. Patrick's, Dublin, from 1st March 1670 to 18th May 1678. Fol.

Names of former Archdeacons and Deans in Ireland.—Pedigrees of Magennis, and other Irish families.—Kings and Saints of Ireland.—Extracts from records in Bermingham Tower, and from Collections of Christopher Cusacke.—Account of hosting at Tara, 1593.—Extracts from Chartularies and Annals.—List of Members of House of Commons, 1639.—Transcript by Daniel Molyneux, of Latin version of Donegal Annals, 1547-1558.—Annals of Ireland by Duaid Mac Firbis, 1666, etc. Fol.

Survey of Ulster, by Nicholas Pynnar, 1618; maps of Londonderry, Culmore, and Coleraine. Fol.

Declaration for settling Ireland, 1660.—Plantation of Ulster: Instructions of James I. and complaints of Nobility and Gentry.—Answer to "Discovery of Gaping Gulf."—Documents of Stratford Lanthony and Whalley de Stanlawe.—Treaty between Charles IX. and Elizabeth.—Examination respecting gold in King's County, 1670.—Surrender of Chester, 1645.—Irish weights and measures.—Commission of Charles I. for Public Accounts.—Rents of Archbishop of Dublin, and of Christ Church, Dublin.—Desires by Church of Ireland Commissioners, 1648.—Letter from Scotch Parliament to Presbytery in Ireland.—King's Answer to the Kirk, 1583.—Declaration of the Kirk, 1643.—"Gagge for New Gospellers."—Additions to Godwin's catalogue of Bishops.—Discourse on foreign traffic of England.—Instructions for trial of mutineers at Guisnes, temp. Henry VIII.; and for Sir John Digby, Ambassador in Spain.—Sir Robert Cotton's remonstrance on treaties.—Lord Russell's march from Calais to Duke of Norfolk's camp.—Articles against Edmund, Duke of Somerset, Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Essex, Earl of Bristol, and Duke of Buckingham, with answers, speeches, etc.—Deaths of Essex and Buckingham.—Battle of Lutzen, 1632.—Passages at Isle of Rhé.—Letters of Gabriel Brown, 1626, and Captain Caldwell, 1629. Siege of Bois-le-Duc, 1629.—Parliamentary speeches and addresses from end of reign of James I. to 1240.—Poems on Prophecies, etc. Fol.

Information against Sir John Elliot, 1629.—Case of Sir John Henningham, 1627.—Sergeant Doddridge on Duchy of Cornwall.—Coke's speech in Temple, 1614.—Treatises on the several courts, office of Lord Treasurer, levying money, and alienation.—Arms of various families in England and Ireland. Visitations of Thomas Benold, Clarencieux, 1531.—Decree against King-of-Arms for false pedigree of Earl of Kent.—Heraldic collections, by John Hooker, 1575.—Treatises on Kings and Office of arms, etc. Fol.

Collections of Samuel Foley, Bishop of Down and Connor; on temporalities of dioceses of Armagh, Meath, and Clonmacnoise; and on controversy respecting Primacy.—Index to patentee estates.—Collections concerning Charles I.—Defence of settlement of Ireland, in answer to Sir R. Nagle, etc. Fol.

Ordinance of Edward III. on customs.—Plantation in King's and Queen's Counties, 3 and 4 Philip and Mary.—Charge for forces in Ireland, 1603-1622.—Commission of James I. for taxing Armagh, and orders concerning Church of Ireland and its possessions, lands and endowments, free schools, charities, etc.—Previous state of Church in Ireland, by Thomas Crewe.—Reasons why the King's service is much abused in Ireland.—Receipts and issues, military establishment, civil lists, instructions to Commissioners, and report on revenue, 1616-1629.—Documents for trials of Lords Dunboyne, Mountnorris, and Clanbrasil.—Commission for Defective Titles.—Deputy Falkland's demurrer.—Grievances of Lords and Commons, and arrears of military list, 1640-1641.—Desires of General Convention, 1660, and instructions to Irish Agents.—Customs, Excise, Imports and Exports, Civil and Military Lists, 1658-1669.—Answers to objections to Bill for Settlement, and abstract of provinces in the Act.—Accounts of Vice-Treasurer Anglesey, 1660-1666.—Estimate of poll-money in Ireland.—Patent of Sir William Dungan.—Rules for Dublin Corporation, 1671, etc. Fol.

Depositions and Examinations, 1641-1652, respecting losses, chiefly of British subjects, and acts of insurgents, in city and county of Dublin, and elsewhere in Ireland, during wars begun in 1641. 2 vols.

Depositions and Examinations in relation to similar matters in Province of Leinster: County of Wicklow. 1 vol.
" " Counties of Carlow and Kilkenny. 1 vol.
" " County of Kildare. 1 vol.
" " King's County. 1 vol.
" " Queen's County. 1 vol.
" " County of Meath. 1 vol.
" " Counties of Westmeath and Longford. 1 vol.
" " County of Wexford. 2 vols.
" " County of Waterford. 1 vol.
" " County of Tipperary. 1 vol.
" " County of Cork. 6 vols.
" " Counties of Cork and Kerry. 1 vol.
" " Counties of Clare and Limerick. 1 vol.
" " Counties of Roscommon and Galway. 1 vol.
" " Counties of Leitrim, Sligo, and Mayo. 1 vol.
" " County of Cavan. 2 vols.
" " County of Louth and Monaghan. 1 vol.
" " County of Fermanagh. 1 vol.
" " County of Armagh. 1 vol.
" " County of Down. 1 vol.
" " County of Antrim. 1 vol.
" " Counties of Tyrone, Derry, and Donegal. 1 vol.

Miscellaneous papers connected with preceding:—Relation by Owen O'Connell, 1641.—Examinations of Captain Mac Mahon and others.—Accounts by R. Byssie and Henry Jones.—Correspondence of Mountgarrett, Gormanston, Lords of Pale, Lenthall, Michael Jones, and Preston.—Accounts of civil and military proceedings in Armagh, Cavan, Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, by J. Cleland, U. Vigers, Lord Conway, Colonel Chichester, Sir F. Willoughby, Sir M. Earnly, and Harrison.—

Acts of Confederate Catholics; Transactions with Glamorgan.—Instructions for Commissioners on treaties.—Cases of despoiled subjects, etc. Fol.

Index of names in preceding Depositions. Incomplete. Fol.

Notes from Records in Birmingham Tower, Dublin, 1678. Fol.

Book of Lower House of Convocation at Dublin, 1703, 1704, 1705, and minutes of Convocation, 1711-12. Fol.

Commission for Plantation of Munster, and instructions for Sir William Drury, 1586.—Letters from Deputy and Council in Ireland to Council in England, 1605-6.—Council orders and instructions, 1610-15.—Observations on Sir Cahir O'Doherty's revolt in Ulster.—Examinations in 1615 on Ulster revolts.—Letter of Sir W. Raleigh to his wife.—Military lists, 1616, 1522, 1631, 1640.—Estimates and Civil lists.—Plantations in Leitrim, King's County, Queen's County, Westmeath, Ulster, and Longford.—Pecis in Council Chamber.—Papers on Revenue, Customs, and Excise, 1625-81.—Charles I.'s Order to Council in Ireland and letters of Graces, 1626.—Case of O'Byrnes, co. Wicklow, 1628.—Proceedings relative to the King's claim to the Province of Connaught, 1635.—Debts of Revenue, 1670.—Accounts of Lord Ranelagh, 1675.—Civil and Military list, 1676.—Customs and Excise, 1681.—Sir Geo. Radcliffe's answer to Commons in Ireland, 1640.—Report on Sir Geo. Carteret's Accounts, 1683.—Patents of bishoprics in Ireland, 1672, 1683, etc. Fol.

Translation of Maurice Regan's Narrative.—Voyage of Sir R. Edgecumbe.—Breviate by Patrick Finglas.—Abstract of Pandarms.—Limerick Statutes, 1453.—Chancellor Cusacke's Letter on Ireland, 1552.—Letter to John Long, Archbishop of Armagh, 1588.—Exploits of Waterford citizens.—Notes of Bishop John Bale.—Battle at Clontarf.—Speech of Sir John Davies, and his letter to Earl of Salisbury.—Robert Roth on Ormonde family. Prosecution of Nicholas Nugent, 1582.—Usher's speech 1637.—Advertisements for Ireland on trade.—Extracts from records of St. Patrick's Cathedral and Birmingham Tower, Dublin.—Constitutions of Bishop Ledred, etc. Fol.

Extracts from Irish Council Books, Hen. VIII. to James I.; and from Records in Birmingham Tower.—Sir Richard Bolton's Declaration on Laws of Ireland.—Thomas Cave's instructions for Customs and Commerce in Ireland.—Case of Byrnes, 1627.—Office of Treasurer of Ireland, 1667.—Proceedings of Londonderry Society, 1635.—Election of Magistrates in Cork.—Defence of proceedings in Castle Chamber against Recusants.—Sentences in cases of Viscount Falkland and Lord Mountnorris.—Papers concerning Parliaments in Ireland, 1613, 1661.—Prince Rupert on Dutch war, etc. Fol.

Letters of the following:—Oliver Cromwell, 1647; Col. Michael Jones, 1647-8; Henry Jones, Bishop of Clogher and of Meath; Lord Dunboyne, 1648; Arthur Graham, 1649; Lord Castlehaven; Captain Rochford, 1649; Lord Clanbrazil, 1649; J. Cuffe, 1653; Edmund Ludlow, 1659.—Ormonde's Declaration, 1648.—Remonstrance of Army in Munster, 1648.—Louth petition to Col. Jones. [See Appendix VI.]—List of army in Ireland, with their charges and supplies, 1648. Speech of Sir Richard Blake, 1648.—Queen's answer to the Irish Agents.—Cessation with Lord Inchiquin.—Surrender of Limerick, 1651.—Proclamations by Jones, Hewson, etc., 1649-52.—Passages in Parliament, 1652.—High Court of Justice at Dublin, 1652.—Provision for Plague, 1653.—William Meredith's Relation of War, 1649-53. [See Appendix VIII.]—Transplantation of Scots.—Assessment of Meath, 1656.—Ralph King's charges against Sir Hardress Waller.—Articles by Sir Charles Coote against Jones, Corbet, Ludlow, etc.—Parliamentary proceedings, 1661.—Case of Lord Ikerrin. Notes on Act of Settlement.—Cyphers in correspondence, 1649-1665. [See Appendix X., XI.]—Sir Theophilus Jones on Conspiracy of 1663. [See Appendix XII.] Petition of Colonel Talbot, 1670, etc. Fol.

Annals of Ireland in English by Connel Mac Geoghegan, 1627; styled "Annals of Clonmacnoise": "A booke containing all the inhabitants of Ireland since the creation of the world until the conquest of the English. . . . Alsoe of certaine things happened in this kingdome after the conquest of the English until the sixth year of the reigne of King Henry the Fourth in the year of our Lord God 1408." Transcript by Thady Daly, 1684. Fol. pp. 286. Last entry in Annals under A.D. 1466, in Irish. [See Appendix I.]

Transcript of letters and documents. Letters: to Lord Winchester, on death of Queen of Scots, 1586; Queen Elizabeth to Duke of Wirtemberg, 1563; Lord

Norris to the King; Secretary Davison to Earl of Essex; Sir Henry Doewra to Secretary Davison, from Derry, 1600. Letter of Sir Richard Bingham; the Bishop of Lincoln's submission to the King.—Godly admonition by the Earl of Essex.—Argument upon the question of Impositions, divided and digested into sundry chapters, by Sir John Davies, knight, his Majesty's Attorney-General for Ireland.—Fol. Imperfect.

History of Ireland, in Irish, by Geoffrey Keating. Fol.

Entries of leases of lands belonging to wards, 1626-28.

Pedigree of families in Ireland. Fol.

Acts of Lower House of Convocation in Ireland, 1703. Fol.

"The booke of visitation by Tho. Benold, alias Clarenceux, King of Armes, anno 1531, 23 Henry VIII." Fol. Transcript.

Lancashire and Yorkshire, Visitation by William Tonge, Norroy, 1580. Fol.

Pedigrees and obits of families in Ireland. Fol.

"Aphorismical Discovery of Treasonable Faction" narrative of affairs of Ireland, 1641-1652. Fol.

Entries of Enrolments of Patents in Ireland from the fifth to the ninth year of the reign of Charles I. Fol. 2 vols. Imperfect.

Compendium of course of pleadings in Star Chamber, and reports in cases in that Court, 1625-1628. Fol.

Extracts from registers of baptisms in Dublin, 17th century. Fol.

List of Fugitives from Ireland, under government of James II.

Account of Conquest of Ireland, from Cambrensis. Book of Howth, etc. Fol.

Roll of subsidy by Sir Arthur Chichester, 1615.—Letters Patent for Earl of Ossory, 19 Hen. VIII.—Exemplifications of Acts for Earl of Ormonde, 35 Hen. VIII., and 15 Eliz.—Letters from Lord Somers to William III., 1698.—Commission from Oliver Cromwell, partly obliterated. Payments to army in Ireland, 1649-1656.

Jocelini Vita S. Patricii; S. Bernardi Vita S. Malachie. Fol. vell. Illuminated. Imperfect.

History of England to reign of Hen. VI., in Old English; chronological tables. Fol. vell., gilt, illum., and with drawings. In front, entries connected with Sir Arthur Chichester, temp. James I.

Argument of Sir John Davies on Impositions.—Question on exposition of statutes concerning ecclesiastical causes. Fol.

Tables of offices and fees in Westminster, King's household, castles, parks, etc.—Catalogue of nobility of England, Courts, Councils of North Wales, the Admiralty, Towns, Islands, &c., 1615. Fol.

Application of histories concerning Ambassadors, by Francis Thynne, 1578. Fol.

History of honours of Barons of Scotland, ascribed Daniel Moyleux.—Ceremonies at internments, etc. Fol.

Forms at Coronations, Baptisms, and Creations of Peers. Fol. vel.

Historia familie de Burgo.—History of family of De Burgh or Burke, in Latin and Irish: Agreements, in Latin, 1582-84, between Burkes and Barroets at Belleck, with Irish signatures of O'Huigin, O'Clérigh, Mac Richard, Mac Philip, Barrett, O'Rodaigh, etc. "A note of the rising out of Connaught." Large colored drawings of Christ's Passion; colored figures of chiefs of the De Burghs, with arms, 4^{to}, vel.

Letters from Inter-Nuncios to Peter Walsh and Roman Catholic clergy.—Acts of Dominican Chapter, 1678-1682; and of Diocese of Meath, 1686.—Extracts from Dublin registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, 17th century.—Military establishment in Ireland, 1690. 4^{to}.

Collections respecting Peers of Ireland. 4^{to}.

Proceedings of High Court of Justice, Ireland, 1652-1654.—Proceedings of Army in Ireland, 1641-1652. 4^{to}.

Charter of Charles I. to Trinity College, Dublin. 4^{to}.

Pedigrees of Noblemen and Gentlemen. 4^{to}.

Guido de Colonna de Bello Trojano. Formulæ for Epistles. 4^{to}, vell. illum.

Declaration by Thomas Lee on the Government of Ireland, 1594, "to the Queen's most excellent majesty."—Apologia by Nicholas French, Bishop of Ferns.—Sir John Davies on Impositions.—Genealogy of English families, by William Camden.—Lives of Popes with portraits in pen and ink.—Informations on burning of London, 1607.—"The play of the blyssyd sacrament."—Poems by Sir John Davies, Dr. Corbett, etc. 4^{to}.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Leicester's Commonwealth.—Apologia pro Puritanis.
—Catalogue of Theological Controversy, 1689. 4^{to}.
Extracts from Chancery Rolls, Registers of Monasteries, and Inquisitions.—Grants to Peers of Ireland.
Extracts from Registers, Rolls, and Charters, by Daniel Molyneux. 8^{vo}.
Lists of the Dublin Society, 1693; Officials of Trinity College, Dublin; Mayors and Bailiffs of Irish cities. 4^{to}.
Extracts from Inquisitions, and Exchequer and Chancery Records, by D. Molyneux, etc. 4^{to}.
Formulary of Instruments and documents for Court. 4^{to}. vell.
View of state and condition of Ireland from 1640; ascribed to Edward, Earl of Clarendon. 4^{to}.
Lists of legal officials and patents in Ireland.—Carmina Sacra et Epigrammata Divina. 4^{to}.
Register of Monastery of All-Hallows, Dublin. 12^{mo} vellum.
Extracts from Records in Tower of London, Lincoln Rolls, Tewkesbury Annals, Armagh Registers, Irish Annals, Book of Howth, Bernard André, Richard Cragh, Luke Wadding.—Irish voyages of Richard II. and Sir Richard Edgecombe.—Proclamation of Henry VIII., 1541.—Ptolemy's Geography of Ireland.—Desmond Inquiry, 1584. 8^{vo}.
Statutes of Trinity College, Dublin, 1628, signed by William Bedell, Joseph Travers, David Thomas, etc. 8^{vo}.
Cases in Morality and Theology. 4^{to}.
Discourse on ancient Weights, Measures, and Money. Medius, by Simon Tripp, dedicated to Dudley, Earl of Leicester, 1573. 4^{to}.
Dialogus inter Discipulum et Magistrum. De Commemorazione Defunctorum, Inventionem Crucis, Penitentiam, &c. Algorismus. Turpinus de Carolo Magno. Miracula et Lamentationes B. Mariae. De Purgatorio S. Patricii. Vita Guidonis. Meditationes Bernardi. Religious treatises in Irish. 4^{to}. vell. illum.
Hugo Burches on private psalm meetings; dedicated to Tohy Mathew, Archbishop of York, 1611. 4^{to}.
Common-place book. 4^{to}.
Questions in Divinity from sermon-writers, 1590. 4^{to}.
Jacobi de Voragine Legenda Sanctorum. 4^{to}. vell. illum.
Works ascribed to Thomas à Kempis. 4^{to}. vell. illum.
Thomas Stevenson's Summarium Questionum et Articulorum Fidei; collected at English College, Rome, 1601. 4^{to}.
Commentary on Hosea. 4^{to}.
Collections on Logic and Ethics, by Henry Beresford. 1686. 4^{to}.
Collections relating to civil and ecclesiastical law of England. 4^{to}.
Psalms, songs, etc. with music.—“Introductio musica elementaria et harmonica.”—“This is the first buke ‘‘addit to the four psalme bukks for songis of four or fyve partis meit and apt for musitians to recreate ‘‘their spiritis when as they shall be overcum with ‘‘hevines or any kind of sadnes not only musitians but ‘‘also even to the ignorant of a gentle nature hearing ‘‘shal be comfortid and be mirry with us, 1569.— ‘‘Pp. 1–33. Psalms set to music by Maister Andro ‘‘Blakehall in Halyrude hous, 1569. Pp. 34–112: Aires, ‘‘catches, roundels, and sonnets ‘all noted with the ‘‘‘tenor or common part they are sung with.’ 1. Flee ‘‘my tears or lachryme. 2. Do not, O, do not, price ‘‘thy beantie. 3. Why presumes thy pride. 4. What if ‘‘a day or a month. 5. Care, goo thee away from me. ‘‘6. With my love my life was nestled. 7. Mistress ‘‘mine, well may you fare. 8. Sleep, sleep, O sweet, ‘‘dear lady, sleep. 9. Good men, show if you can tell. ‘‘10. Disdaine that see doth ill me,” etc. Small 4^{to}. paper; colored capitals and rubrics.
Collections on Divinity by John Beresford. 4^{to}.
Collections of thoughts from several authors, by Casar Williamson. 4^{to}.
Ordinal of Alchemy, in English verse, by Thomas Norton. 4^{to}.
Theologica Polemica, from Bellarmine, Ussher, Downham, etc. 4^{to}.
Observanda in Demosthenem et Isocratem, etc. 4^{to}.
Old English Psalter. 4^{to}. vellum: “Here beginyth the ‘‘sauter which is red comenli in churchis.”—Formerly belonged to Edward Singe, Bishop of Limerick, given to him by James Stearne, Archdeacon of Limerick, 1662.
Sermons and notes on Scripture, 12^{mo}.
Officia Beate Mariae. 12^{mo} vellum; gilt and illum.
Sermons on the Canticles, etc. 8^{vo}.
De creatibus mundi—Latin poem. 12^{mo} vell.
Sermons, poem, and college exercises. 12^{mo}.
Ethical extracts, by Francis Parker, 1644, etc. 12^{mo}.
Sermons on Scripture texts. 12^{mo} 2 vols.

The Christian's Delight, by James Wallace. 12^{mo}.
Notes on Scripture, by Linford, Hill, etc. 12^{mo}.
Annotations from Aristotle's Physics, etc. 12^{mo}.
Orationum fasciculus. 12^{mo}.
Balm for the wounded soul, by Samuel Kello, dedicated to Lady Frances Beddingfield. 12^{mo}.
Collections by Samuel Winter, appointed Provost of Trinity College, Dublin, 1652; accounts of livings in diocese of Meath; lands granted to Trinity College by James I.; Cromwell's articles. Marriages and Christenings solemnized by Winter; with his own accounts, and those of the College rents.
Hebrew Psalter. 12^{mo}. vellum.
Ancient Statutes of England, Rolls, Writs, and Formularies. 12^{mo}. vellum, gilt, and illum.
Ancient English Statutes. 18^{mo}.

G.

Systema Theologicum, by R. H. Fol.
Body of Ancient History, from the Creation, with remarks on History of England, etc. Fol.
Proofs of claim of Lady Anne Clifford to Baronies of Clifford, Westmoreland, and Vesey.
Summonses to Parliament of England, compiled from Rolls by William Dugdale. 2 vols. Fol.
Abstract of Journal of Parliament at Westminster, from first to fourth year of James I. Fol.
Names and Arms of the chief families of Great Britain and Ireland. Fol.
Red Book of Exchequer of England, copied from the original, by Nicholas Charles, Lancaster Herald, 1580. Welsh annals. Extracts from Domesday Book. Fol.
Parliamentary argument, 1640, by Edward Bagshawe, on legality of Canons. Report of Rouse against Mainwaring, 1628. Sir Robert Cotton's Relation of proceedings against offending Ambassadors. State letters, 1603, of James I., Sir Thomas Parry, Lord Cecil, etc. Speech in Parliament of Salisbury, Lord Treasurer. State of Scottish Commonwealth, and cause of mutinies.
Collections, from various authors, on Ecclesiastical and Civil subjects. 3 vols. Fol.
Common-place book of extracts from Greek and Latin authors. Fol.
Commentaries on Virgil, by Donatus, Servius, etc. Fol.
Genealogical tables of families in England and Ireland. Fol.
Common-place book of extracts from writers on legal subjects. Fol.
Treatise on King's Courts and processes in Exchequer and Star Chamber. Cases and Reports from Henry VIII. to Philip and Mary. Remonstrance of Commons to James I., relative to imposition of duties. Extracts from Guicciardini. Fol.
Dialogue explanatory of body of Divinity, by Primate James Ussher. Fol.
Common-place book of extracts from legal works. Fol.
Correspondence and papers of Sir Francis Walsingham, 1570–73. Fol. 1570 to 1572–3.—Contemporary transcript. Fol.—“Instructions for Mr. Francis ‘‘Walsingham, Esquier, sent by the Queen's Majestic ‘‘to the French King, the 11th of August 1570, in the ‘‘twelfth year of her Majestic's reign.”—Letters of Queen Elizabeth, William Lord Burleigh, and others, to Walsingham, with his letters to the Earl of Leicester, Sir William Cecil, principal Secretary of State, Walter Mildmay, of her Majesty's Privy Council, etc.—The last Queen's letter in the volume is that “given under our ‘‘signet at our Manor of Greenwich, the 19th of March ‘‘1572–[3], intimating to Walsingham his recall and the ‘‘appointment of his successor, the bearer, Valentine ‘‘Dale, Doctor of the Laws and one of our Masters of ‘‘the Requests extraordinary.”—The last paper in the volume is one entitled “Reponsec aux Messieurs les ‘‘Ambassadeurs de France, 20^{me} Aout, 1572.”
Arms and genealogies of English and Irish Peers; grants to officers of arms, etc.
Reports of Cases, during early years of reign of James I. Fol.
Statutes of England from Edward I. to Henry VI. Fol. vell. illum.
A History of Kerry, by Charles Smith:
“This MS. was not that from which my history of Kerry was printed, but from an abridgment of this as far as to page 403, many parts of this being thrown into the notes, particularly the chapter on counties palatine, p. 120; and my chief reason for abridging this was want of encouragement to print it entire. O tempora! O mores! C. H. Smith.”

Forenoon Exercises by William Hull, of Ashbourne.

Fol.
Hortus Siccus. Fol.

Common-place book on various subjects, alphabetically arranged. Fol.

Circulus ingeniarum artium, by Alexander Richardson. Fol.

Chronological, Historical, and Theological collections. Fol.

Lectures by William Hull, of Ashbourne. Fol.

Common-place book of Roger Boyle, and epitome of treatise by Sir Kenelm Digby. Fol.

Bible. Vulgate version. Fol. vell. Illum.

Collections on Natural History, by Henry Bridgeman. Theological observations. Fol.

Treatise on the Revelations, by Mahon. 4^o.

Treatise on Ireland during reign of Elizabeth, with maps. 4^o. Imperfect.

Letters and despatches of Joseph Avery or Averie, envoy from Charles I. to Denmark, Sweden, and Saxony.—Contemporary transcript. Imperfect.—The papers, 1631 to 1640, include instructions from Charles I. for Avery, despatched by him to the King of Denmark, and employed to negotiate with the Chancellor of Sweden, and the Elector of Saxony; Correspondence of Avery with Viscount Dorchester, Secretary Coke, Secretary Harry Vane, Francis Windebank, the Queen of Bohemia, the Prince Elector-Palatine, and the Earl of Arundel.—Note of such monies as have been issued out to the King of Denmark upon the late wars in Germany, Hamburg, 10 Oct. 1631.—“Sum of the propositions which were made by the English sub-delegate “Joseph Avery to the delegates of the King of Denmark and Norway, 23 Nov. 1631.—A brief calculation “or computation, taken out of the inventories and “other writings, of the estate belonging to the inheritance of the late Dowager Queen of Denmark.—Philip “Barlamachi’s account for sundry great sums disbursed “by him, by order from his Majesty of Great Britain “for the service of the King of Denmark, 24 August, “1632:

“In the year 1625, Colonel Macay and Sir James Leases undertook to carry over certain number of men to Count Mansfeld, and received here from me and in Scotland by my appointment the sum of four thousand pounds. The men coming too late at Hamburg to serve Count Mansfeld, were entertained in the King of Denmark’s service—4,000*l*. There was sent to the King of Denmark, by the hands of Sir Charles Morgan, in the year 1627, a collar of rubie ballasses, for to raise money upon in necessity, if from hence the provision for the entertainment of the fower regiments should faile; but the provision for the said entertainment having been duly made, and besides that money paid unto the ambassador for the said King’s assistance, the collar must be by him restored in integro, without his Majesty’s charge of any money borrowed upon the same.”

Depositions, letters, and papers connected with affairs, 1798-9, in the counties of Mayo, Tipperary, Wexford, Carlow, Dublin, and Kildare; with letters addressed to Sir Richard Mnsgrave, Bart., author of the “Memoirs of Rebellions in Ireland,” published in 1801.

Common-place book of Bishop Nicholson: extracts from Purchas, Guicciardini, Barozius, etc.

Poems by Dr. John Donne, Ben Jonson, Roger Aston, Sir Henry Wotton, Richard Corbet, Francis Beaumont, Philip Massinger, Thomas Raudolph, George Herbert, William Browne, Walter Aston, etc. Transcript. Imperfect.

Petition of Sir John Eliot, when in prison. Office and fees of Sergeant-at-Arms. Rules of order in Parliament. Passing of Bills. Collections relative to proceedings of House of Commons, by William Lambard. Precedents in Parliament. Parliamentary order and usage, by John Vowell. Modus tenendi Parliamentum. Patent from Charles I. for Star Chamber at Dublin, with cases, precedents, and trials there. Proceedings in Dublin Star Chamber in reigns of Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I. Creation fees, and privileges of Kings-at-Arms. Royal Writs.

On Courts of Exchequer, Angmentations, and First Fruits, by Sir Thomas Fanshawe. Lectures in Middle Temple, by James Whitlock, 1619. Act on lands and houses of Ecclesiastics in Ireland, 1616. Propositions on government of Ireland, 1631. Directions of James I. for Courts in Ireland. Remonstrance from English merchants at Rotterdam. Letter of Ormonde from Bruges, 1656. The King’s Declaration, 1651. Resolution of Judges against Recusants, 1626-7. Remembrances of order to be observed in House of Lords. John Dodderidge and William Camden on Antiquity of Parliaments. Case of Ambosyna. Arraignment of Earl and Countess of Somerset. On Master of Rolls and his Office. Attainder of Thomas, Earl of Strafford. Speech against settling kingdom on Oliver Cromwell. Case on Londoners’ prize wines in Ireland. Proclamation relative to weights by James I.; and by Lord Deputy and Council in Ireland, in 1627. Advices on contribution from Catholics to Charles I. Writ of error in case of Priors of Lanthony and Mullingar, etc. Fol.

On liveries of lands, wardships and Court of Wards; Compositions for alienations; Escheatorships; and on Tenures. Proceedings in Court of Wards, under Elizabeth and James I. Fol.

Process of Bills in Parliament. Arguments on the liberty of the subject, by Dudley Digges, Edward Littleton, John Selden, Edward Coke, etc. Speech of Sir John Eliot, 1628, and Charles I., 1640. Letter of Oliver St. John to Mayor of Marlborough. Proceedings in Parliament against Francis Bacon, etc., 1620-28. Papers relative to Parliament by Robert, Earl of Salisbury, and Judge Dodderidge, etc. Fol.

On Marshal, Steward, and Constable of England, by Sir Robert Cotton. On Lord Steward, by William Camden. On Combats, by Sir Robert Cotton, Sir Edward Coke, and Francis Tate. On Heralds and Courts Military, by Thomas Thynne. On Heralds and Marshals, by John Dodderidge. On Nobility and Baronage of England, by John Selden. Fol.

Cases in Court of King’s Bench, under James I. and Charles II. Fol.

Readings on Statutes, by Yelverton, Chamberlayn, Gerard, Crew, Cresswell, Lenthal, Rigby, Jones, and Hern. Fol.

Reports of cases in King’s Bench and Exchequer, under Charles I. 2 vols. Fol.

Readings and reports, by Sir Francis Moore. Fol.

Arguments against Ship-Money, by Oliver St. John, 1640. Remonstrance, King’s Letter, and arguments of Judges and lawyers on same case. Trial of Thomas Harrison for insult to Sir Richard Hinton, Justice of the Common Pleas, etc. Fol.

Proceedings in Parliament of England, 1640, with impeachments of Strafford and Land, and speeches of Pym, etc. Fol.

Compendium on Court of Exchequer, by Sir Thomas Fanshawe. Discourse on Exchequer, by W. Byrde, and cases in that court, under James I. and Charles I. Fol.

Oath tendered to the Scotch in and about London, under Charles I. Queries on the liberties of the people of Ireland. Case of tenures in Ireland, 1637. Passages of State in reign of James I. State of Palatinate, Sermons by John Cooper. Journey to France, etc. Fol.

True presentation of past Parliament, by John Dodderidge. Declaration on Statutes of England in Ireland, by Sir Richard Bolton. Discourse of Parliaments. On Sergeanties and personal service to the Kings of England. On exposition of Statutes. Sir Francis Bacon on naturalization of Scots. On foreign confederacies of England, from Henry I. to James I. Ducatus Lancastrie, by William Fleetwood. Observations on English and Spanish fleets, by W. M., 1624. Fol.

Abridgement of Parliament Rolls, by Sir Robert Cotton. Fol.

Practical Geometry, by John Goodwyn. Fol.

Observations concerning wrecks and inundations, by — Byrde, of Hackney. Crown property in shores and sea-lands. Lectures at Inns of Court on Statute 23, Henry VIII. Exchequer cases, 1637-8. Fol.

Proceedings in Star Chamber, under Charles I., against William Prynne and others. Information against Earl of Bedford for libel. Treatises on the Court, Judges, and officers of the Star Chamber. Fol.

Declaration of James I. on duels, 1616. The Tree of Commonwealth, by Edmund Dudley. Sir Charles Blount’s defence of his marriage. Trial of Sir John Perrott. Answers to the Information of Attorney-General Heath. William Prynne on the illegality of the sentence of exile and imprisonment passed on him. Journey to France. Fol.

On the Star Chamber, its establishment in Dublin, and precedents of cases. Fol.

Conference before Lords of Council and Judges, 1611, on Prohibitions. Fol.

Characters of Projectors and Puritans. Robert, Earl of Salisbury, on the office of Secretary. Speeches of Sir John Finch, 1639. Defects of wines. Readings by Bagshot at the Middle Temple, 1639. Character and maxims of Wallenstein. Negotiations of Sir Richard Weston, 1622. Laws of New England. Charge against, and answer of, Viscount Wimbleton, in connexion with voyage to Calais. On daring of Kingdom, in 1623, by Sir Robert Cotton. Mainwaring on Piracy. Sir Walter Raleigh on Spain and the Netherlands, 1602. Sir Robert Cotton on repressing increase of Priests, Jesuits, and Recusants, and on Extremities of Princes. Condition of England, and account of death of Sir Thomas Overbury. Description of Helvetian League, by Isaac Wake, 1639. Decision of Judges in relation to Popish Recusants, 1626-7. Fol.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Answer by Lord Henry Howard to Inveective against the regimen by women. History of Thomas, Cardinal Wolsey, by George Cavendish. Fragmenta Regalia, by Robert Naunton. Trial of Mervin, Earl of Castlehaven, 1631. Forerunner of Revenge on Duke of Buckingham, by George Eglisbam. On behaviour, character, and death of Duke of Buckingham. Account of Embassy to Spain, by Sir Walter Aston. Proceedings against inculcated Ambassadors, by Sir Robert Cotton. Propositions to Charles I. by Earl of Strafford for restraint on Parliament and increase of Revenue. Fol.

Letter of Sir Philip Sydney to Queen Elizabeth, on her projected French marriage. Discourse on training men for defence of England. On antiquity and privileges of Cities, Boroughs, and Towns, by Francis Tate, of the Middle Temple. Sickness and death of Prince Henry, 1612. Sir Walter Raleigh on War, Mohammed, Conquest of Spain, and Saracen Empire. Observations on Normandy. Argument by Sir John Davies on Impositions, etc. Fol.

De Sepultura, by Sir Henry Spelman. The Parson's Law, by William Hughes, of Gray's Inn, 1639. Lectures in Middle Temple, 1619, by James Whitlock. Case between Woodley and Mannering, 18 James I. Proceedings in Council on Commendams, 1616. Fol.

Breviate on London and Westminster Courts of Record, 1588. On Particular Estates, by Sir John Dodderidge. On Original of Courts, by Sergeant Fleetwood. On law of nations with respect to navigation. England's Epinomis, by John Selden. Inquiry on innovated offices, 1623. Letter from the Great Mogul to the King of England. Account of Connaught by Sir Richard Bingham. Letter from Orleans, by Thomas Killigrew, on Nuns at Tours, 1635. Letters, opinions, and essays, by Francis Bacon. Letters from Queen Elizabeth to the King of Scotland. Sir Thomas Bodley's Autobiography. Letters from Lords of Council to James I. on revenue, 1608. State letters in reign of Elizabeth and James I., and Aphorisms. Fol.

Account of the Low Countries and Archduke Albert. On division of England into shires, and on episcopal jurisdiction. Report to Parliament on voyage of Charles I. to Spain. Challenge from Earl of Northumberland to Sir Francis Vere. On free trade and Incorporated Societies. Letters of Sir W. Raleigh. Pleading of Sir Thomas Monson, 1616. Sir Walter Raleigh's Ghost. Treatise on Courts, Parliaments, and Judges. Controversy on Baron of Abergavenny. Charge of Sir John Davies at York, 1620. On powers of Houses of Peers and Commons [1621], and on diminution of coin, by Sir Robert Cotton. Speech of Chancellor Egerton to Judges in Star Chamber, 1603-4. Fol.

Form of proceeding in Ecclesiastical causes. Fol. Grants, from Charles I., of Caribbee Islands to James, Earl of Carlisle, with evidences and deeds from the latter to Lord Willoughby. Charter from Charles I. for the Company of Massachusetts Bay, 1628.

Lord Carlisle's case on Patent for Barbadoes and Caribbees. Description of Barbadoes.

Abdias [Pseudo]: Certamen Apostolicum. In Lombardic character. 4^{vo} vell. Imperfect.

Biblia Sacra. Vulgate version, 1609. Interleaved with commentaries. 4^{vo}.

Sermones in Decem Præcepta, sive Præceptorium Johannis Nider, etc. Sac. 14. 4^{vo}.

Bonaventura de Theologica Veritate. Sac. 14. 4^{vo}. Heroldi Discipuli Sermones super epistolas Dominicales, circa 1441. 4^{vo}.

Innocentius III. de Missarum Solemnibus. Philosophia Pauli de Venetiis. Sac. 15. 4^{vo}.

APPENDIX.

I.

ANNALS OF CLONMACNOISE.

AUTHOR'S DEDICATORY EPISTLE.

To the worthy and of great expectation young gentleman Mr. Terence Coghlan his brother Connell MacGeog.

I 120.

hagan wisheth longe health with good success in all his actions.

Among all the worthy and memorable deeds of Kinge Bryan Borowe sometime King of this kingdome, this is not of the least accompt, that after hee had shaken off the intollerable yooke and bondage wherewith this land was cruelly tortured and harried by the Danes and Normans for the space of 219 years that they bore sway and received tribute of the inhabitants in generall and though they nor none of them ever had the name of King or monarch of the land yet they had that power as they executed what they pleased and behaved themselves so cruell and pagan-like as well towards the ecclesiastical as temporalls of the kingdome that they broke downe their churches, and razed them to their very foundations, and burnt their books of chronicles and prayers, to the end that there should be no memory left to their posterities and all learning should be quite forgotten. The said King Bryan seeinge into what rudenesse the kingdome was fallen after settinge himselfe in the quiet government thereof, and restored each one to his ancient patrimony repayed their churches and houses of religion, he caused open schoole to be kept in the severall parishes to instruct their youth which by the said long warres were growen rude and altogether illiterate. He assembled together all the nobilitie of the kingdome as well spirituall as temporall to Casheell in Monnster and caused them to compose a book containinge all the inhabitations, events, and septs that lived in this land from the first peopleinge and inhabitation and discovery thereof after the creation of the world until that present [time] which book they caused to be called by the name of the Psalter of Casheell; signed it with his own hand together with the hands of the Kinges of the Five Provinces, and also with the hands of all the bishopps and prelates of the kingdome, caused severall copies thereof to be given to the Kings of the Provinces, with straight charge that there should be noe credit given to any other chronicles thenceforth, but should be held as false, disannulled, and quite forbidden for ever. Since which time there were many septs in the kingdome that lived by itt, and whose profession was to chronicle and keep in memory the state of the kingdome, as well for the time past, present, and to come; and now because they cannot enjoy that respect and gaine by their said profession as heretofore they and their ancestors received, they sett naught by the said knowledge, neglect their bookes, and choose rather to put their children to learn English than their own native language, insoomuch that some of them suffer taylors to cutt the leaves of the said books [which their ancestors held in greate accompt] and sleepe them in long peeces to make their measures of, that the posterities as like to fall into meere grosse ignorance of any things hapened before their time. Ireland in old time in the raigne of the said Kinge Bryan, and before, was well stocked with learned [men and colledges] that people came from all parts of Christendome to learn therein, and among all other nations that came thither, there was none so much made of nor respected with the Irish as was the English and Welchmen to whom they gave severall colleges to dwell and learn in; as to the Englishmen a collage in the town of Mayo in Connaught which to this day is called Mayo of the English, and to the Welchmen the town of Gallen in the King's county which is likewise called Gallen of the Welchmen or Wales, from whence the said two nations have brought their characters, especially the English Saxons, as by conferringe the old Saxons characters to the Irish which the Irish never change you shall find little or noe difference at all. The earnest desire I understand you have to know these things made me to undertake the translatinge of the old Irish book for you, which by long lyinge shut and unused I could hardly read and left places that I could not read because they were altogether growne illegible and put out, and if this my single labour shall any way pleasure you I shall hold myself thorough[ly] recompensed and my paines well employed which for your owne readinge I have done and not for the readinge of any other curious fellow, that would rather carp at my phrase than take any delight in the history, and in the mean time I bid you heartily farewell from Lyeuan[n]aghen, the 20th of April 1627.

Your very loving brother,

CONNELL MAGEOGHAGAN.

The names of the severall authors which I have taken for this booke: Sainte Colum Kill, Sainte Bohine,

4 E

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Callogh O'More, Esquire, Venerable Bede, Eochye O'Flannagan, Archdean of Armagh, and Clonfacha, Gillemerne Mac Connemaboght, Archpriest of Clonmaicknose, and Keilachur Mac Con alias Gorman; Eusebius; Marcellinus; Moylyne O'Mulchonrye and Tanarye O'Mulconrye, two professed Chroniclers.

II.

HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ORMONDE, BY WILLIAM ROBERTS,
ULSTER KING-OF-ARMS, 1648.

Dedication, Address to Reader, and Table of Contents :

To the most honourable James, Marquess of Ormond Earle of Ormond and Osserie; Viscount Thurles, Baron of Arkloe, Lord Lieutenant Generale and Generale Governour of Ireland, and Chancelour of the Universitie of Dublin, &c.

May it please your Excey.

When his Maiestie was last pleased to comand me hither (after I had borne some parte in the militarie charges of all his dominions) finding all inclinations to a more active service made vsels by the present Cessation, I beganne thereupon to resolve upon something that might not be unsutable to my present charge, that I might not leane the world without a witnes of the zeale I haue to serue your Excellency. This designe, as too full of boldness, and aboue my reach, found me fearfull in the vndertaking, till I considered that the Heros of former times are now lesse knowne by their statues of brass and marble, than those of ivory and gold: Those humble thoughts and purposes which at first devoted me to your service, were at last determined by the duties of my place, and upon their suggestion your most noble family became my argument; and because this present search seemed farr too mean to be numbred amongst those rich memorialls which your name and person may iustly challenge, I had once in my intentions confined it to the priuate use of those that may succeed me, as the following preface may witnes: intending it should only serue to pointe out the way for those who shall henceforth take pleasure in tracing the descents of your most noble lyne: But some of the most learned and best seasoned iudgements of this kindome not disdain- ing to peruse it, did not a litle raise me; for besides their fauorable opinions of it, they left me assured that your Excellency is not less easy in accepting what is sincerely meant than what is happily effected; and therefore I humbly beseech your Excellency to pass by the rudeness of the draught, and to consider it only as an earnest of the zeale and duty, which together with the remainder of my life and services haue deuoted me

Your Excellencie's most obseruant and humble seruant,
WM. ROBERTS, VLUSTER, etc.

To the noble and Iudicious Readers, etc.

After his Maiestie had graciously conferred on me the office of Vluster King of Armes, etc., (and as a cheife part of those seruises I am obliged to the nobility of this realme) I forthwith resolved strictly to peruse their genealogies, and correct such errors, as (through the mistakes, abuses, or ignorance of former times) had crept into them; (As the duty of my office guided me). I beganne with this most honorable line; and had not proceeded farr in my search, but I found Chronicles and other authors at variance touching the more ancient surname of this family, some affirming Becket to be the name, and one Walter Becket (said to be brother to Thomas Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury) to be father to Theobald Walter first Butler of Ireland, being the first of this family (that it appears) came into Ireland; this error hath been followed by many pedegrees, and (as I may collect) hath been belied about two hundred years: But the Hon^{ble} Sir James Ware,* knight (from whose fauour by the sight of diuers old Records in his custody, I must ever acknowledge I haue received speciall furtherence in this businos) being guided by better authority, says, that the aforesaid Theobald Walter was sonn to Horueus Walter, and brother to Hubert Walter, Archbishop of Canterbury: this assertion is directly contrary to the former; and therefore must needs conclude an error in the received pedegrees, or in those that contradict them. And since they neither dispute the difference, but positively contradict one the other, it belongs to me to cleere the doubt, which, otherwise may give sufficient cause to any to doubt the truth of either, or to suspect (that about this time) some staine of illegitimation clouded the direct line of this family, (from which noe line can proue itself to be more free) the ensuing discourse takes noe other notice of bare traditions then to confute them by records; and in drawing downe this line from its apparent ancestour, liuing in the reigne of King William the Conquerour, and prouing the ancient surname to bee Walter, I use noe other records then such as the severest iudgements must conclude above all exception. Though sometimes I meddle with acts, as well as persons of honour, I herein confound not the seuerale charges of the Herald, and the Historian; but ascribe particular actions to particular authors, to fix such distinctive characters upon such person, as for the future may secure this race from such confusions and mistakes, as haue formerly abused it; and I herein shewe it is as much my duty to record acts of honour, as genealogies. This performance cannot but be very useful to this noble family, if it be considered how oft in former times their rights haue been questioned by pretenders to their estates, and honors, and attempted to bee encroached on by forgeries; I oftne meet records which shewe to what greatness of revenue this family hath been sometimes rayzed by the bounty of their Princes and the merit of their services, and also what diminutions it hath sometimes felt by female heires, which together with their most famous services done their Sovereignes, in warre and peace may be collected out of the publike records of both kingdomes; most infallible guides in such vndertakings, but this I haue omitted, as little contributing to my principall intentions, hoping (in future times) it may engage the serious endeavour of some learned Historian: If I haue been somewhat numerous in my proofes, and urged many, where one might serue, it is because I would not be troubled with replyes, and in setting up so many lights my aime hath been to leane noe corner for scruple or tradition; nor in fixing the original of this family before they came into Ireland, and in proueing their descent, from that time to this, I haue not (as* some haue done) contented my selfe with saying soe, or relied on common story, or referred the reader to some manuscripts in the custody of some private persons, hard to come by. But I haue followed publike and authentic records, such as offer themselves to all, that refuse to be satisfied, otherways than beholding the very originals.

I haue here done what hath been a work of duty, and in what I am not able to giue, I shall bee ready to receiue better satisfaction. Perhaps the proofes which Histories, (though most classically) afford me in matters circumstantiall, may be quarelled by the sophistry of some; but those records which are produced concerning the surname, and matters of genealogy, I am assured are levelled right, and I am soe farr from suspecting my selfe mistaken that I dare put my selfe upon the test of Common Lawyers, Antiquaries, Historians, and Herald, (the competent iudges in arguments of this nature) who (I am confident) will find my proofes soe clearly convictive, that the conclusions deduced from thence can finde noe opposers, except amongst those, who when their reason is satisfied, yet love to exercise their contradicting humour, and, where this prevails, the greatest uncertainties finde stiffe abettors, and the strongest evidence, willfull gainsayers. But such (if they haue not been well versed in arguments of this nature) may as well mistake them selues, as those Philosophers, who deriued our pedegree from men who first grewe out of the earth like plantes, viz., Euripides†, Aculian‡, and Avicon‡, and others that wee succeed not one the other by generation, as Phirro; or Zeno, who labour'd to ont face experience, by asserting there is noe such thing as motion in the world. I haue carried the search of this pedegree as farr as King William the Conqueror's time, and there concluded it, untill I meet with such records, as shall lead me through the darknes and confusions of those former times; and untill then I cannot add one rundell more, for haue ever and in detestation the servile demeanour of those, who to flatter the vanity of some, haue (for want of sufficient testimonies) abused the trust imposed on them and borrowed such names and persons to lengthen out a pedegree; as may more easily appeare to bee the issue of men's braines than loynes; such persons come little short of some amongst forraign nationes, who (when they were not of eminence enough to dare to claime kindred

* Sr. John Ferrie his Pedegree of the Lacys in his booke called Lacys Nobility, etc.

† Vincent his printed Pedegree of Sackville, Earle of Dorset, &c. And diuers others printed Pedegrees.

‡ Cornelius Ascripps. De vanitate scientiarum.

* In Historia Co-nobiorum Cisterciensium Hibernie printed at Dublin. 1620.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

with some God or Goddess) yet could deride their pedigree so far, as to bring it at last from some "incubus, some bear, or some overgrown ape that begot their first human ancestor, on some strange woman found in a wilderness: and tradition hath at last been made the record to prove such originals. But those fooleries, cannot reflect upon any but mere pretenders to Heraldry. When I first entered on this task, less than one year (as I then conceived) would perfect it, but the many errors I found necessary to be corrected, have doubled my labour. When the first Cessation here began, according to the model I had before projected and the materials I had gathered; I began to build, and not sooner, least my several charges in the army might interrupt my progress. The duty of my place and the love which all owe to truth should vindicate this undertaking, but most especially my zeal and study to do some small services for him who hath done so many great ones for our Sovereign. Every day shows us that brass and marble have their periods, and sepulchres, (as well as the bodies they intomb) may be turned to dust; the present age of popular tumults endeavour to silence their testimonies, which statues and old inscriptions, were wont to afford the industrious Herald, and unless that sacrilegious zeal, which spends itself in defacing those marks of honour which upbraid unto the vulgar obscure or stained originals, meet with a timely check, it will be ere long as easy to find a distinction of men in the loynes of Adam, as in the monuments of their different virtues and deservings. I cannot here but take notice that the common defacers of those monuments of noble families have been often noted to be such, whose descents none know or all know not to be free from the foulest stains; and though they pretend a zeal to pull down idolatry, yet it may appear to be far more probable, that such sacrilege proceeds from the defects of testimonies, or monuments of their own ancestors, unless erected to their infamy, and therefore think the public marks of other men's honours, render them the more contemptible. Doubtless some of these have defaced sometimes the monuments of their own forefathers, and therein affront them selves, and punish their ancestors, for having more children than they ever dur'd to call their own. To conclude, church monuments and the like which respect a family are incapable of multiplication, and therefore less fit to preserve, because one and all doe dye together. But memorials of this kind are communicable, and though they may perish in the hands of one, yet they may live in the care of another. And as in times of trouble, princes and noblest personages have sometimes owed the thanks for their safety to a cavel-cottage, rather than to a palace; so perhaps this mean and humble peece may afford a shelter to the memory of this family, when time or enemy shall deface more glorious monuments.

Thus (noble and judicious readers to whom only I intend this), I here offer the fruit of my duty, zeal, and industry, which if it gaine soe far upon you as to render you easy in despending with what may seeme lesse exquisite, or polished, I shall be then encouraged to listen to those thoughts which call upon mee to doe the like for you. And though your care, added to that of your ancestors, may have proved soe happy as to secure your lines from intrusions and defects, yet somewhat perhaps may be found, which may refresh the colours, and render your races much brighter to posterity, etc.

A Breife Collection of the chiefe matters containyng in this booke and proved by records, etc.

Walter pruned to be the ancient surname of this family from the time of King William the Conquerour, unto the time that Edm^d and Walter, 6th Butler of Ireland, was created Earle of Carrick, when the addition of surname, according to the custome (which is now also used) was omitted.

Walter pruned to be used as the surname of this family for seven generations in a direct line, and also pruned not only to be the surname, but also to be used as the surname of this family in several collateral lines.

Walter, a Saxon word, antiently a name of office signifying according to Camden,† the Generall or Governor of an army, and according to Verstegan, the chiefe ruler or officer over the King's forrests, etc.

Walter became a surname from a name of office, as Butler is become the surname of this whole family, from the ancient and honorable office of Butler of Ireland;

the word Walter also became a Christian name, as many surnames are commonly given as prenoms, at times of baptisme, amongst us at this present.

Becket in several pedigrees, both in prints and otherwise, said to be the surname of this family; and that Theobald Walter first Butler of Ireland, who was the son of Herveus Walter, was son to Walter 2^d son to Gilbert Becket, who was father to Thomas Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Records questioned which mentions the relation of the ancestors of this family, to St. Thomas Becket, and divers imposturous practises shewne and discovered, which have not only through covetous ends preiudiced noble families; but alsoe attempted their ruine.

Several Chronicles and other authors which have said Becket was the ancient surname of this family; in that particular disproved by records; and several other matters printed in prejudice to this family corrected both in the same and the like authors; with other the like errors in the same Cronicle discovered.

Several proofes not only by records and classical authors but also by circumstances of time, and the like reasons, reducing their arguments to absurdities, who would affirme Theobald Walter first Butler of Ireland to be son to St. Thomas Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury his younger brother.

Becket pruned to be the fixed surname of Thomas Beckett's family for several generations when the name Walter was the fixed surname of this family, as aforesaid.

The great wrong, and dishonour shoven that such persons have done this family, who have affirmed Theobald Walter aforesaid, to be son to one Walter Becket, and yet where the surname was fixed in the family never to use his father's surname in any of his writings since that was the custome of illegitimate children in ancient times.

The extraction of the said Theobald Walter from the time of K[ing] William the Conquerour, his honorable descent, education, and allyance by consanguinity pruned.

A probability shovne, how, according to the words of Camden, in his Britannia, the said Theobald Walter might be allyed to St. Thomas Beckett, by affinity, by reason of Thomas Fitz Theobald de Heili his marriage with the said St. Thomas Beckett's sister.

Noe Earle of Ormond, or heire of this family, named Thomas untill about 300 years after Thomas Beckett's time, when the preists of the Hospitall dedicated to St. Thomas Beckett perswaded James, Earle of Ormonde and Wiltshire, for the good of his owne soule, and the soules of his ancestors and successors to bestow a mannor of great consequence, upon them and their successors.

In the petition presented to the Parleme^{nt} for the confirming the said mannor to the said preists, it is alleged that the ancestors of the Earle of Ormond were of the blood of the said St. Thomas Becket which petition is here fully questioned.

The life of Hubert Walter, brother to Theobald Walter 1st Butler of Ireland, written by Francis Goodwin, Bishop of Hereford; wherein is shoven when he was by King Richard the First made Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chief Justice of England, Lord High Chancellor of England, and high Governor of all his Dominions immediately under him, etc.

A Discourse concerning Herveus Walter, father to the said Theobald Walter, and Hubert Walter, shewing how they had their education under Ranulph de Glanville, Chiefe Justice Generall of England, the great composer of the English lawes, and how it was then, and hath been since, the custome of the Kings of England to commit the tuition of great persons' children, being infants, unto such eminent persons as the said Ranulph de Glanville was.

The said Hubert Walter rose to his preferments by the very same steps that many famous princes of the Royall blood rose to the like preferments.

The parentage, education, and first preferments of St. Thomas Becket; the history of his life, Hubert Walter, and Thomas Becket comparatively discoursed of.

The office of Butler of England and Butler of Ireland discoursed of, and shovne, and also how that the prime Earle of England (when the title of Earle was the next title to the Prince, (there being noe Duke or Marquess created in England long after that time) was Butler of England when Theobald Walter was made Butler of Ireland.

The great honour of the office of Butler of England, or Ireland, and the great revenues enjoyed by reason of the said offices.

* Augustin, de Civitate dei, L. 15. cap. 23. Zanchius de operibus Dei, L. 15. c. 23. Vives, etc.

† Clarendon K[ing] of Armes

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

The great mistake of those who have compared the office of Butler of England or Ireland to that of cup-bearer to the King, which is commonly [executed] by men of noe higher degree than knights, and the office of Butler of England never executed by any but Earles, as I finde by my search.

The King of Bohemia, anciently in right of that Kingdome, Butler to the Roman Empire, as the heyre male of this family is by hereditary right Butler of Ireland.

What services at solemne coronations, and never else, are to bee performed by any person being Butler of England or Ireland, and the great reward of that dayes service.

Theobald Walter, first Butler of Ireland, pruned to bee an honorary and Parliamentary Baron both in England and Ireland, and also all the heyres males, in the direct line descending from him, unto the time that Edmund Walter, 6th Butler of Ireland, was created Earle of Carricke, were also honorary and Parliamentary Barons, and had as much privilege, to sitt and vote in Parliaments in England and Ireland, as any nobleman in England or Ireland hath, at this present.

A discourse concerning the Antiquities of the Armes of this family, but chiefly proving by the disaffinity betwixt the armes of the said Theobald Walter, and the said Thomas Beckett's armes, that the said Theobald Walter was not sone to Thomas Beckett's brother.

Seuerall matters corrected concerning the armes of the nobility of this family, which uncorrected might tend to the great dishonour and preiudice of the whole family.

The heires male of this family, in the direct line, from Hervens Walter who lined in the time of King William the Conquerour, vnto this day, ssecessively, proved by the publique records of England and Ireland.

The marriages of the aforesaid heyres males* pruned after the like manner, wherein is specially to bee observed, what heyres of great and noble persons, besides the heyres and coheyres, of great princes of the Royall blood, have matched with the heyres males of this family, in the direct line.

The first Earle of Ormond married to Lady Elynor Bohun, whose mother was daughter to King Edward the First, sister to King Edward the Second, and aunt to King Edward the Third.

Thomas, first of that name, Earle of Ormond, was great grandfather to Queen Ann, the wife of King Hen. the 8th, and mother to our late Queene Elizabeth, soe as King Edward the First was great grandfather to the second Earle of Ormond, was great grandfather to the said Queene. And soe, as all the Earles of Ormond from the first, have descended out of the loynes of Kings of England, soe have seuerall Queenes of England descended out of their loynes. Thomas, Earle of Wiltshire and Ormond, [was] father of the foresaid Queene Anne.

The most honourable offices, titles of honour, foundations of religious houses, times of deace, places of buriall, and other remarkable passages, concerning the heyres males of this family in the direct line.

Edmund Walter, Earle of Carrick, father to the first Earle of Ormond, and five Earles of Ormond in a direct line, successively following him, were all chiefe Governours of Ireland either by the style of Custos Hibernie, Justiciarius Hibernie, locum tenens Hibernie, or Deputatus Hibernie.

Seuerall of the ancestors of the said Earle of Carrick, Chiefe Governours of Ireland, by the style of Justice of Ireland, before any of this family was an Earle.

Pierce, Earle of Ormond and Ossory, father to James, Earle of Ormond and Ossory, was twice Lord Deputy of Ireland, and in the said James his life time the statute was made that noe Irishman borne should be chosen Governor of Ireland, viz., Justice of Ireland.

James, second Earle of Ormond, first Lord of the Royalties to the County Palatine of Tipperary.

The other great offices of severall Earles of Ormond, as Constable of Ireland, Lord High Treasurer of England, Lord High Treasurer of Ireland, Lord High Admirall of Ireland, Generalls, at home, and in forraigne parts.

A discourse of the Earldome of Carrick, how it went from this family, and also the Earldom of Wiltshire; also concerning the titles of Earle of Ossory, Viscount Thurle, Baron of Areklo, their originall.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

James, Earle of Ormond and Wiltshire, and Thomas, Earle of Ormond and Ossory, both knights of the Garter.

The said James, Earle of Ormond and Wiltshire, murdered, and twenty years after he was dead attainted by Richard the Third the Usurper, because he faithfully served King Henry the Sixth.

Seuerall corrections of errors, and mistakes in Acts of Parliament, old records, chronicles, and other authors, noted in severall parts of this booke, concerning severall particulars touching this family.

Severall records together inserted in this booke, to which the matters contained in the severall pages doe referre for double satisfaction to the reader.

The title of Earle of Ormond taken from this family, and given to the family of Bullen, where it continued for nine yeares, and all that time was not used by any of this family.

The said title restored by Act of Parliament to this family by King Henry the 8th, and the titles of Earle of Ossory, Viscount Thurles, and Viscount Mont Garrett, after the taking away of the title of Earle of Ormond, for a time given by King Henry the 8th to the said family.

From what ancestours in a direct line severall of the families of the Butlers doe spring.

No family in his Maties dominions hath vnder one surname beene longer honour'd with the title of Earle having soe many Nobility and Peers of one surname.

Though the Earldome of Kildare be twelve yeares ancienter than the Earldome of Ormond, yet the Earldome of Carrick which failed in this family in the issue male of Thomas, first of that name Earle of Ormond, was above eight months ancienter than the Earldom of Kildare, etc.

III.

DEPOSITIONS RELATIVE TO AFFAIRS IN IRELAND, A.D. 1641-42.

EXAMINATION OF WITNESS ON THE RACK, AT DUBLIN, 1641-2.

"Hewe Mac Mahowne his examination, the 22th of March 1641[-2.]

"Taken at the wrack.

"He sayeth that Sir Phelim O'neale, the Lord Maguire, and Phillippe mac Hewe O'Realye, wer the firste complottores, and contriuerz of the late rebellyone in Ireland.

"He further sayth that the sayde Phelime, the sayde Lord Maguire, and the sayde Phillippe mac Hene O'Really did tell him, this examinate, that all the parties whoe were Parlemeute men, att the sessiones of Parlemeute houlden about May laste that wer Papistes, did knowe of the intended rebellyon in Ireland; and did aprone of the said rebellyon.

"He further sayth that Phillippe mac Hewe O'Really did tell to this examinate aboute Maye laste att Dublin that the committee or agentes whoe wer employed into Inglande by the Parlemeute would procure an order or commissione from the Kinge to authorise the Papistes of Irelande, to prosiede in their rebellious courses, and that the sayde Phillippe mac Hene O'Reallye did also tell him the same againe in October laste, in the county of Monahone, a little before the 23 of October, att which time this examinate came to this towne. He also sayth that Coll. Mac Bryane Mac Mahowne upon a Wensdaye being the 20th of October laste, did att his owne howse tell to this examinate, that the Kinge had giuine a Commission to the Papistes of Irelande, to seize upon all the garisons, and strong houldes in Irelande, and that this examinate shoulde see the sayde Commissione att his comynge to Dublin, and that Captaine Bryane O'Neale, grande childe to Sir Turlo Mac Henrye shoulde bringe this examinate to the agente, whoe was one of the committees, that did bringe the Commissione out of Irelande, butt the agentes names the sayde Coll. Mac Bryane did not, or could not tell him.

"He further saythe that his nephewe Phillippe Mac Hewe O'Reallye, about six dayes before 23 of October laste, beinge att his owne howse of Bellanekaricke, did tell this examinate that the Lorde Maguire would be att Dublin upon the 23 of October laste, to take the Castle of Dublin, and this examinatee did then promise to bee ther att the same tyme, to the same end and purpose, if he did see the Committeion.

"He saythe further that Arte mac Hewe oge mac Mahowne, came in the companye of the examinate to this cityty of Dublin, to assiste in the takinge of the

* "Diuers being omitted and some sett downe false in former Pedegrees, etc."

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Castle of Dublin. He further sayth that Coll. Mac Bryan Mac Mahowne did procure Roury oge mac Patrick Mac Mahowne to perswade Pattricke Mac Arte Mac Mahowne, and towne other Mac M'hownes whose names he knoweth not, and Donnoghie . . . llye to com to Dublin to assiste in the takinge of the Castle of Dublin.

"He further sayth that Captain Bryane O Neale meeteinge with this examinate at Finglasse neire to Dublinge, upon the 22^d of October did tell this examinate that ther would bee 20 persones out of every countie in the kingdome to assiste in the takinge of the Castle of Dublin.

"Who were all apprehended in the house in Dublin together with this examinate.

Fr[anciscus] Willoughby.

Endorsed: "22 Martii 1641[-2.] Examination of Hughe Mac Mahowne taken at the rack."

COMMISSIONERS FOR TAKING EXAMINATIONS.

1. Charles, by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the faith, etc. To our welbeloved Henry Jones, Dean of Kilmore, Roger Puttock, William Hitchcock, Randall Adams, John Sterne, William Aldrich, Henry Brereton, and John Watson, Clerks, greeting. Whereas divers wicked and disloyal people have lately risen in arms in severall parts of this kingdome, and have robbed and spoiled many of our good subjects, Brittish, and Protestants, who have been separated from their settled habitations, and scattered in most lamentable manner. And forasmuch as it is needfull to take due examination concerning the same. Know ye, that We reposing especial trust and confidence in your care, diligence, and provident circumspection, have nominated and appointed you to be our Commissioners; and do hereby give unto you, or any two or more of you, full power and authoritie from time to time to call before you, and examine upon oath on the holy Evangelists (which hereby we authorize you, or any two or more of you, to administer) aswell all such persons as have been so robbed and spoiled, as all the witnesses that can give testimony therein, what robberies and spoiles have been committed on them, or any other to their knowledge, since the two and twentieth of October last, or shall hereafter be committed on them, or any of them, what the particulars were, or are, whereof they were or shall be so robbed or spoiled; to what valew, by whom, what their names are, and where they now or last dwelt that committed those robberies, on what day or night the said robberies or spoiles committed or to be committed, were done; what traitorous or disloyal words, speeches, or actions were then, or at any other time uttered or committed by those robbers, or any of them; what violence or other lewd actions were then performed by the said robbers, or any of them, and how often; and all other circumstances touching or concerning the said particulars, and every of them. And you our said Commissioners are to reduce to writing, all the examinations, which you, or any two or more of you shall take as aforesaid: and the same to return unto our Justices, and Councell of this our realm of Ireland, under the hands and seales of you, or any two or more of you as aforesaid. Witnessse our right trusty and well-beloved Councillors, Sir William Parsons, Knight and Baronet, and Sir John Borlase, Knight, our Justices of our said realm of Ireland. At Dublin the three and twentieth day of December, in the seventeenth yeare of our reigne [1641].

CARLETON.

2. Charles by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, etc. To our well-beloved, Henry Jones, Dean of Kilmore, Roger Puttock, William Hitchcock, Randall Adams, John Sterne, William Aldrich, Henry Brereton, and John Watson, Clerks, greeting. Whereas divers wicked and disloyal people have lately risen in arms in severall parts in this kingdome, and have robbed and spoiled many of our good subjects, Brittish and Protestants, who have been separated from their settled habitations, and scattered in most lamentable manner; and many others have been deprived of their lands, rents, goods, and chattles. And forasmuch as it is needfull to take due examination concerning the same. Know ye, that We reposing especial trust and confidence in your fidelities, care, and provident circumspection, have nominated and appointed you to be our Commissioners; and do hereby give unto you, or any two or more of you, full power and authority, from time to time, to call before you and examine upon oath (which we hereby authorize you, or any two or more of you, to administer on the holy Evangelists) aswell all such persons as have been so robbed and spoiled, or deprived of their lands, rents, goods, or chattles, as all the witnesses that can give testimony therein, what robberies and spoiles have been committed on them, or any other to their knowledge, since the two and twentieth of October last, or shall hereafter be committed on them, or any of them; what lands, rents, goods, or chattles, any person or persons, have since that time been deprived of, by occasion of this rebellion, what the particulars were, or are in lands, rents, goods, or chattles, whereof any person, or persons were or shall be so robbed, spoiled, or deprived; to what valew, by whom such robberies or spoiles were committed, what their names are, and where they now or last dwelt that committed those robberies, or spoiles; on what day or night the said robberies or spoiles committed, or to be committed were done; what traitorous or disloyal words, speeches, or actions were then, or at any other time uttered or committed by those robbers, or any of them; and what unfitting words or speeches concerning the present rebellion, or by occasion thereof were spoken at any time, by any person or persons whatsoever; what violence or other lewd actions were then performed by the said robbers, or any of them, and how often; what numbers of persons have been murdered by the rebels, or perished afterwards on the way to Dublin, or other places whither they fled [since the two and twentieth] day of October last, and all other circumstances and things touching, or concerning the said particulars and every of them, either before the three and twentieth of October, or since. And for the better performance of this service, all incumbents, curats, parish-clerks, and sextons of churches in this kingdome, are hereby required to give in to you our said Commissioners, to the best of their knowledge, the names and numbers of the poore so spoiled, who have been buried in their respective parishes, and hereafter in and about Dublin, they are to give in weekly bills under the hands of the ministers, or church-wardens of such parishes, of such of the said persons as shall be so buried in the said parishes. And you our said Commissioners, or any two or more of you as aforesaid, are to reduce to writing all the examinations which you, or any two or more of you shall take as aforesaid, and the same to return to our Justices, and Councell of this our realm of Ireland, under the hands and seales of you, or any two or more of you, as aforesaid. Witnessse our right trusty and well-beloved Councillors, Sir William Parsons, Knight and Baronet, and Sir John Borlase, Knight, our Justices of our realm of Ireland. At Dublin the eighteenth day of January, in the seventeenth yeare of our reigne [1641-2].

CARLETON.*

IV.

PETITION FROM DESPOILED AND DISTRESSED LADIES AND GENTLEWOMEN IN DUBLIN, 1641-2.

To the honorable the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses in the Commons House of Parliament assembled in the Kingdom of England.

The severall undernamed despoiled and distressed Ladies and Gentlewomen now residing within the City of Dublin and others in the Kingdom of Ireland,

In humble manner represent their miserable condition. Shewing that of your Suppliants some have by God's great mercy and goodness with the great hazard of their lives and the utter loss of their whole estates, escaped the fury of the Irish Rebels, whose unparalleled cruelty exercised on such as fell within their power, doth sufficiently appeare.

Some of them although resident in and about the city of Dublin yett had their estates lying further off and the countrie possessed by the rebels.

The whole livelihood also of others, consisting in certaine sommes of money, being the legacies left unto them by their deceased parents, all being either in the hands of such are now in actual rebellion or of such as were by the rebels slaine or wholly stript out of all, and therefore disabled to answer the necessities of your suppliants.

By all which your Petitioners are destitute of all means of reliefe and now ready to perish, some of them being reduced to such extremities that the selling away of their ordinary attire and necessary wearing apparell at great undervalues is the greatest part of their present supply.

And whereas of your Petitioners many are of honorable condition, and others of the better rank of gentle-

* George Carleton, Clerk and Keeper of the Hanaper, and Clerk of the Crown in Ireland.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

women, whereby they are incapable of the ordinary provision already by your charitable and pious care designed for the other poore of the inferior sort, and therein your suppliants left destitute and laid open to apparent ruine if not taken into your consideration : May it therefore please your Honours, among others your actes of charity, to comiserate the most distressed condition of your petitioners in thinking of such wayes and meanes for their present sustenance and subsistance as in your wisdomes shalbe thought fitting.

That by adding hercof to your other great workes of pietie you may alsoe add unto the list and oblige to be in the number of your daily votaryes whose names are here subscribed.

ANNE DOWRA.
MARY LEIGH.
ANN EDGORTH.
ALLICE MOORE.

ANNE DOWRA.
ELIZA DOWRA.
MA. WYLOUBY.
MARtha CULME.
REBECCA HEWETSON.
REBECCA HEWETSON
fil[ia].
MARI BLARE.

ANNE BLAYNEY.
JANE MOORE.
ELIZABETH ROFER.
MARIE BLAYNEY.
ALICE HAMMILTON.
MARY BUTLER.
ELYZA WYREALL.
DOROTHY MOIGNE.
MARY ARUNDELL.
ALICE HAMMILTON.
VALENTIN HAMMILTON.
JODETH ALLEN.

V.

MARQUIS OF WORCESTER.

LETTER TO NICHOLAS FRENCH, BISHOP OF FERNS, FROM EARL OF GLAMORGAN, SUBSEQUENTLY MARQUIS OF WORCESTER.

My most Honored Lord,

This vanity I only pretend unto that, what I say I am ready at any time to signe and seale and even to witness the truth thereof by the effusion of the last drop of blood in my whole body. Hoc posito, knowe, my deare Lord, that had I a thousand businesses yet must take a time to be delivered of what methinks I am with childe of, which is nothing els but a gratitude towards your Lordship in the King my grations master his name, and mine owne, and as I hope in Allmighty God that one day his Majestie will have have you a hosome Counsellor and then return his parte of thankfulnessse, soe for the present in mine owne behalfe lett me say verisimum hoc : make use of my poore endeavours, comand them, and if ever religious man shewed more obedience to his superior, or ever soldier ranne upon eminent danger upon the orders of his Comander-in-chiefe, such is the power you may boldly challenge over me, and what I voluntarily offer, and will make good upon the least intimation of your Lordship's pleasure. But the clocke stricken foure, and I am sensible of detaining you from your serious occasions, which will, I am most confident, render you famous to all posterity, and noe man more hartly wisheth it than,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most really obedient and devoted servant,
GLAMORGAN.

We[d]nesday morning, 23^d of Sept. 1646.

I have left this bearer, Major Anderson, with orders concerning the 400*l*. not doubting but your Lordship will be pleased to doe therein what he shall tell you, it importing very much and also the publicke service.

Endorsed : Lord Glamorgan to Ferns, the titular Bishop.

VI.

COUNTY OF LOUTH, 1648.

REMONSTRANCE TO COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF PARLIAMENTARY FORCES.

The humble petition of the gentry and other inhabitants of the county of Louth :

To the Hono^{ble} Collonell Michaell Jones, Comander in Chief of all the forces in the Province of Leinster :

The said petitioners doe humbly make bould to remonstrate the sadd grievances of the said county which are as followeth, videlicet.

1. That the said county hath bene charged by the dockett in 19*l*. per weeke, which was very greivous vnto them, and more then was paid by others at the English quarters, having regard to there abilities.

2. That notwithstanding the said inhabitants were thus greivously overcharged, when some case was expected in hiew thereof they weare charged in six shillings per weeke for euery shilling formerly paid by them, whereas in Meath they only pay six shillings for every halfe crowne formerly paid by them although the ability of the county doth far surpass the county of Louth.

3. That over and above the said sume Collonell Cooke demanded 15*l*. more per weeke of the said county of Louth, and hath given order to the tenants to pay the same; which is likely to banish them, they not being any way able to support soe great a burthen.

4. That likewise the severall Captains quartered in the said county hancinge hitherto meanes applottred for threescore horse for each Captain, moreover they demaunde allowance for 12 horsemen for each Captain, and soe rateably for the severall officers.

5. That by reason of this overcharge the inhabitants are soe farr disabled that if some speedy course be not taken for their ease they cannot be able to relieve themselves, much lesse to paye any contriubion, or follow their tillage.

6. That since these troopers quartering in the said county of Louth, these townes ensueinge have bene plundered and wasted by the enemy, videlicet, Drumcarry, heretofore bearing 4 horsemen, or 2*s*. per weeke, is burnt and pillaged by the enemy.

Tollaghdonnell, sessed with one horseman and a halfe, twice plundered by the enemy, and not able to pay any.

Braganston plundered ; Williamston plundered.

Pepperston, charged with 7 horsemen or 42*s*. per weeke, plundered.

Lisrany, charged with 6 per weeke, plundered by the enemy.

Nislyrath, charged with 15*s*. per weeke, plundered by the enemy.

Bewly, plundered by the enemy.

Newton Stallbone, plundered.

Johnston, burnt and plundered.

Killalye, plundered.

Dercanagh, plundered ; besides diners other townes plundered a little before the quartering of the said troope at Ardee, Droongoolston, Clintonston, Killingrowie, and diners others.

6. The townes hereafter mencioned, being neere vpon the enemy's quarters, [are] charged with horse, and yet pay noe contriubion or other maintenance by reason of there disability and adiacency to the enemy, viz.

Setontowne, 6 men and a halfe
Killany, six horsemen
Dromurrie, one horseman
Cowerythagh, one horseman demi
Greatewood, fine horsemen
Tully, foure horsemen
Annaghymnan, one horseman
Searragh, one horseman
Kenviskrath, demie horseman paies nothinge.

7. The said inhabitants are enforced to send 20 men per weeke to Dundalke for building of scones, besides the carrying of tymber and fires thither, 10 miles distant, and for their leist neglect are and have bene greivously punished by fine and imprisonment, which pressures are soe intolerable as there are no lands able to beare them.

The premisses tenderly considered, the petitioners humbly pray that your honour would be pleased in regarde of the petitioners present disability, occasioned as aforesaid, besides the daily incursions of the enemy vpon them, to give present order that the horse now quartered on the petitioners may be taken off and removed ; and that your honour would be pleased likewise to issue a Commission for findeing out of the quantity of corne and other abilities of the inhabitants, and for sassing of them accordingly.

And they shall pray, etc.

Endorsed, 1648. The humble petition of the gentrie and other inhabitants of the county of Louth.

VII.

BRITISH ARMY IN IRELAND, 1648.

ARMY LIST, WEEKLY CHARGES, AND DISTRIBUTION OF COSTS.

1648.

Garrisoned at Kildare and other Castles in that county.

Collonell Fenwick :

Leonard Thickpenny, his Lievt.

Hen. Hargrave his Ensigne.

2 Sargents.

3 Drom^{rs}.

3 Corporalls.

34 soldiers.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN

Leivt.-Coll. Huetson :

Thomas Huetson, his Leivt.
Thomas Huetson, his Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
2 Drom^{ns}.
3 Corporalls.
52 soldiers.

Sargent-Major Brereton :

Thomas Barrnigh, his Leivt.
Thomas Barrey, his Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
2 Drom^{ns}.
3 Corporalls.
43 soldiers.

In England, Capt. Tho. Stanley, by license

Andrew Coole, his Leivt.
Charles Stanley, his Ensigne. his vnder officers.
28 soldiers.

Capt. Jeromy Hartley :

John Jordan, his Leivt.
Robt. Leigh, his Ensigne.
7 his inferio^r officers.
43 soldiers.

Capt. Henry Paynamah :

Henry Bellingham, his Leivt.
Henry Borrowes, his Ensigne.
7 his inferio^r officers.
40 soldiers.

Capt. George Corlett :

Symon Prestley, his Leivt.
Anthony Corlett, his Ensigne.
7 his inferio^r officers.
43 soldiers.

Capt. Richard Dixon :

Fran. Brereton, his Leivt.
Raph. Smyth, Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
38 soldiers.

In England, Captaine Robt. Fenwick :

Thomas Payne, his Leivt.
John Hodges, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
38 soldiers.
The Chaplaine.
The Quarter^{ms}.
The Chirurgion.
Two [Surgeon's] Mates.
Provost Marshall.
The Carriage M^r.
Officers - - - 91
Soldiers - - - 359
Staff officers - - 7

Gar[risoned] at Dublin.

Collonell Castles :

George Higbedd, his Capⁿ. Leivt.
Thomas Perkins, his Ensigne.
3 Sargents.
3 Drom^{ns}.
3 Corporalls.
105 soldiers.

Leivt. Collonell Slade :

John Jones, his Leivt.
John Clemans, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
90 soldiers.

Major Purefoy :

Pet. Purefoy, his Leivt.
Tho. Man, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
69 soldiers.

Captain Coles :

Tho. Wills, his Leivt.
John Loc, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
90 soldiers.

Captaine Richardson :

Francis Lawrence, his Leivt.
Thomas Vaughan, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
62 soldiers.

Capt. Ed. Musam :

Joseph Taylor, his Leivt.
Mathew Philipp, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
67 soldiers.

Capt. Sam. Brereton :

Lewis Griffith, his Leivt.
John Clarke, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
60 soldiers.

Capt. Arth. Camell :

Rich. Stanniard, his Leivt.
Symon Moston, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
58 soldiers.

Captaine Aries :

William Selbyes, his Leivt.
Natha. Bewerter, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
74 soldiers.

Capt. Henry Piers :

Ralph Hall, his Leivt.
Phillip James, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
78 soldiers.

Capt. Alexand. Castells :

Thomas Lloyd, his Leivt.
Zachary Moore, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
87 soldiers.

| | |
|------------------------|-----|
| Officers of the Staffe | 7 |
| Officers - - - | 112 |
| Soldiers - - - | 840 |
| [Staff officers] | 7 |

Garrisoned at Drogheda.

Collonell Hungerford :

John Symons, his Leivt.
George Andrews, his Ensigne.
3 Sargents.
3 Drom^{ns}.
3 Corporalls.
83 soldiers.

Leivt. Coll. Foulke :

Robt. Babbington, his Leivt.
Thomas Tomlinson, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
100 soldiers.

Sarjant-Major Miles Aston :

Rich. Hollyocke, his Leivt.
Ed. Grice, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
83 soldiers.

Captaine George Mason :

Rich. Smyly, his Leivt.
Michell Russell, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
65 soldiers.

Deceased, Captaine George Mason, formerly Captn.
Leivt. to the Collonell.

Capn. Fran. Haslam :

Thomas Statford, his Leivt.
John Wright, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
68 soldiers.

Capn. Croxton, Captaine :

Obedigh Hynd, his Leivt.
James Jones, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
73 soldiers.

Capt. Mackworth :

Wm. Edwards, his Leivt.
Henry Guitker, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
77 soldiers.

Captaine Foxe :

Thomas Foxall, his Leivt.
Richard Parsons, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
85 soldiers.

Capt. Rowe :

Abraham Smyth, his Leivt.
Anthony Turnor, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
74 soldiers.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Capt. St. John Hungerford :
Phillip Easthope, his Lievt.
Anthony Aston, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
75 soldiers.
The Officers of Staffe 7
Officers - - - 102
Soldiers - - - 783
Officers of Staffe - 7

In garrison at Dublin.
Collonell Kimpston.

George Wright, his Lievt.
Roger Kimston, his Ensigne.
3 Sargents.
3 Drom^{rs}.
3 Corporalls.
153 soldiers.

Lievt. Coll. Nappier :
Barat, his Lievt.
In England, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
31 soldiers.

Sarjant-Major Farrer :
Edw. Roberts, his Lievt.
Robt. Foxe, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
66 soldiers.

In England, Captaine Gylam Calbart :
Rich. Dyars, his Lievt.
Stephen Dowdall, his Ensigne.
2 Sargants.
1 Drom^{rs}.
3 Corporalls.
30 soldiers.

Captaine John Dawson :
Richard Ven, his Lievt.
Griffith Davis, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
64 soldiers.

Captaine John Pickin :
Rich. Edgley, his Lievt.
Willm. Evans, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
60 soldiers.

Capt. Hugh Poole :
Michael Harrison, his Lievt.
Homfrey Kineston, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
59 soldiers.

Capn. Edward Peirs :
Rich. Kennedy, his Lievt.
George Chamberlain, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
81 soldiers.

Capt. Oliver Jones :
Tho. Latham, his Lievt.
Edward Phillippis, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
85 soldiers.

In prison with the rebels.
Captaine Richard Perkins :
Slayne, his Lievt.
Wm. Graham, his Ensigne.
6 officers inferior.
33 soldiers.

Officers of the staff, 7.
Officers - - - 100
Soldiers - - - 663
Staff officers - 7

Collonell Longe, Capt. :
Tho. Pudsey, his Lievt.
Wm. Morgan, his Ensigne.
3 Sargents.
3 Drom^{rs}.
3 Corporalls.
70 soldiers.

Lievt. Collonell Rochford :
William Moore, his Lievt.
Tho. Babbington, his Ensigne.*
7 inferior officers.
64 soldiers.

Sarjant-Major Read :
Tho. Lewis, his Lievt.
Ed. Knight, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
64 soldiers.

In garrison at Powerscourt.
Captⁿ Dannel Smythe.
His Lievt, James Adams . . .
His Ensigne, Roger Wilton.
7 inferior officers.
70 soldiers.

[At] Killnecargey.
Capn. Fælix Longe.
Edw. Kerikone, his Lievt.
Wm. Smythe, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
56 soldiers.

[At] Killnecargey.
Captain Henry Lewis :
Hugh Higgins, his Lievt.
Peter Roch, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
49 soldiers.

Garrisoned at the Castle of Wickloe :
Willm. Maddock, Lievt.
Edw. Horton, Ensigne.

At Castle Wickloe and Powerscourt :
Captain Richard Deron :
His Lievt. [oblit].
His Ensigne [oblit].
7 inferior officers.
50 soldiers.

In garrison at Powerscourt :
Edward Dyer, Lievt.
Hugh Mungomery, Ensigne.

Captaine Robt. Pigott :
His Lievt.
His Ensigne.
7 inferior officers
27 soldiers.

At Killnecargey garrison :
Captaine Freeman.
His Lievt. Wm. Granger.
His Ensigne, Henry Vyell.
7 inferior officers.
46 soldiers.

In garrison at Ould Court, Com. Wicklee :
Capn. Peyton Lehunte.
His Lievt. Thomas Johnson.
His Ensigne, Robt. Smythe.
7 inferior officers.
45 soldiers.

Officers of the Staff, 7.
Officers - - - 102
Soldiers - - - 941
Staff off. - 007

Sir Henry Tychburne, Collonell :
Will. Longe, his Lievt.
John Smyth, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
76 soldiers.

In garrison at Drogheda :
Lievt.-Coll. Frann. Moore.
His Lievt., Roger Gregory.
His Ensigne, Francis Barrowes.
7 inferior officers.
29 soldiers.

Sarjant Major Cadogan :
John Salisbury, his Lievt.
Tho. Barten, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
68 soldiers.

Captaine John Martyn :
Henry Crosby, his Lievt.
Thomas Crosby, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
37 soldiers.*

* In the margin here :—"All the rest but those that are quoted in the margene are garrisoned at Killnecargey, com. Wickloe."

* In the margin at foot :—"Turne over two leaves then the Regiment cometh after."

C IN COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

[Garrisoned at Dublin.]

Colonell John Moores, Collonell.
Tho. Crofts, Capn. Leivt.
Vacat, Ensigne.
1 S'jant.
2 Dromⁿ.
2 Corporalls.
26 soldiers.

Leivt. Coll. Blagrove:
Vacat his Leivt.
Andrew Troye, his Ensigne.

1 Sargent.
1 Drommⁿ.
3 Corporalls.
20 soldiers.

Thomas Grene, Capitaine
Leonard Eley, Leivt.
Rich. Dowse, Ensigne.
1 Sargent.
2 Corporalls.
16 soldiers.

In England:
Phillipp Higginbottom.
Thomas Moore, his Leivt.
Michell Lewlin, his Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
1 Dromⁿ.
1 Corporall.
5 soldiers.

Arthur Ward, Captn.:
Leivt. Luke Donnelan.
Hugh Lewis, Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
3 Corporalls.
8 soldiers.

Captaine John Cross: *
Vacat. his Leivt.
Wm. Sargent, his Ensigne.
1 Sargent.
2 Corporalls.
11 soldiers.

Captaine Peter Kinnard:
Arthnr Gibb, his Leivt.
Willm. Trymr, Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
3 Corporalls.
1 Drom.
40 soldiers.

Thomas Mulleneux, Capitaine.
James Audley, Leiflt.
Mathew Potter, Ensigne.
1 Sargent.
3 Corporalls.
1 Drom.
15 soldiers.

In Engl[and] Capitaine Wm. Arnold:
William Trafford, Leivt.
James Brabazon, Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
1 Drom.
3 Corporalls.
25 soldiers.

Sir Walsingham Cooke, Capⁿ.
Edward Dudleston, Leivt.
Edward Bently, Ensigne.
2 Sargents.
3 Corporalls.
1 Drom.
30 soldiers.

Staffe Officers, 7.
Officers - - 100
Soldiers - - 196
Staff Off[icers] - 007

Fyerlocks out of Munster:
Captaine John Parsons.
Richard Wilbraham, Leiflt.
3 Sargents.
2 Dromⁿ.
3 Corporalls.
98 soldiers.
Officers - - 10
Soldiers - - 98

Thomas Bringhurst, Towne Major of Dublin.

A Sargent.
A Corporall.
A Drom.
50 Footemen, to guard the marketts, etc.
Off[icers] - - 04
Sold[iers] - - 50
Officers - - 14
Sold[iers] - - 148

Part of Sir Henry Tichburne's Regim^t.

Captaine Caen Ó'Hara.
Thomas Kelly, his Leivt.
Robt. Haldon, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
39 soldiers.

Captaine Eustacc:
David Jones, his Leivt.
Robt. Aldridge, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
32 soldiers.

In garrison at Trymm.
Captaine Cosby:
Robt. Sterne, his Leivt.
John Norton, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
47 soldiers.

Captaine Gore:
Thomas Everard, his Leivt.
Henry Battin, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
36 soldiers.
Officers - - 90
Soldiers - - 364
Staff Off. - - 007

Lord of Castle Stuart:
William Kinge, his Capt. Leivt.
Nichs. Storke, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
48 soldiers.

Captaine Ball:
Edwa. Fisher, Leivt.
John Bruncker.
Sargents.
3 Corporalls.
1 Drom.
42 soldiers.

Sir Erasmus Barrowes, Leivt. Collonell.
Noe company.

Garrisoned at Trymm.
Sargant-Major Owens:
Mathias Tubman, his Leivt.
John Davis, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
59 soldiers.

Sir William Brownloe:
His Leivt. Edw. Ratlidge.
His Ensigne, Owen Osburne.
This Company is reduced.
6 inferior officers.
13 soldiers.

Capⁿ. Edw. Chichester: *
Michell Nuby, his Leivt.
Wm. Grove, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
43 soldiers.

Sir Arthur Blundell's:
This company is alsoe reduced.
Officers - - 5
Soldiers - - 10
Officers of the staffe, 7.
Officers - - 54
Soldiers - - 215
Staffe Off. - - 007

In garrison at Athboy:
Collonell Robt. Baylv.
Tho. Gower, his Leivt.
James Gardner, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
49 soldiers (53).*

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

* In margin here:—"All this Regiment is now garrisoned at Dublin: I believe they will be reduced to 4 companies and the now standing officers will sent over to fetch over supplies to recruits."

* This and the other numbers within parentheses are entered in the margins.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Leivt. Coll. Wheeler's :
Law. Sweetman, his Leivt.
Rich. Wandesford, his Ensigne.
Soldiers, 43 (47.)

Major John Stephens :
Fran. Gibben, his Leivt.
Antony Troy, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
40 soldiers.

Sir Thomas Rothram ;
Fran : Lucas, his Leivt.
Parr Selbey, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
37 officers [sic. in MS.] (41.)

Sir William Gilbert :
Will. Gilbert, his Leivt.
Ant. Pigott, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
29 soldiers (35.)

Captaine Arth. Weldon :
Thos. Manboy, his Leivt.
Danielle Yates, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
39 soldiers (43.)

Captaine Arthur Graham's :
Christo. Sibthorpe, his Leivt.
Benjamin Chapman, Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
60 soldiers.

Cap^a Burrowes :
Hugh Madden, his Leivt.
Georg Smyth, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
36 soldiers (40.)

In Garrison at Trim :
Captaine Cosbey.
Thomas Jones, his Leivt.
John Norton, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
30 soldiers (34.)
Officers of the Staff, 7 :
Officers - - - 90
Soldiers - - - 363
Staff Off. - - - 007

In garrison at Mannooth :
The Earle of Kildare's Regiment.
His Cap^a. Leivt. James Oliphant.
His Ensigne, Thomas Lovett.
2 Sargents.
2 Droms.
2 Corporals.
40 soldiers.

In garrison at Kilsagblin and Donsagblin, Com. Dublin :
Sir John Sherlock.
His Leivt. Antony Poulton.
His Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
49 soldiers.

† In garrison at Munnooth :
Major Williams.
His Leivt. George White.
His Ensigne, Lewis Hovenden.
7 inferior officers.
60 soldiers.

Deceased since the muster
Sir Dudley Loftus, deceased.
His Leivt. Richard Weldon.
His Ensigne, Richard Churchie.
7 inferior officers.
46 soldiers.

Garrisoned at Bullock :
Cap^a Rich. Newcomin.
His Leivt., Valentine Wood.
His Ensigne, Arthur Whitehead.
7 inferior officers.
60 soldiers.

In Dublin garrison :
Capt^a Tho. Fortescue. Itchingham.
His Leivt. Edmond Walsh.
His Ensigne, Walter Ayscough.
7 inferior officers.
34 soldiers.

In margin : This Company is made over to Captain Itchingham.

In garrison at Slane :
Captaine Richard Burrowes.
His Leivt., Robt. White.
His Ensigne, John Powell.
7 inferior officers.
60 soldiers.

In garrison at Naasse :
Captaine John Paulr.
His Leivt., John Browne.
His Ensigne, John Philpott.
7 inferior officers.
47 soldiers.

In garrison at Clancurrey :
Capt^a Ralph Allen.
His Leivt., Walter Weldon.
His Ensigne, Robt. . . .
5 inferior officers.
28 soldiers.

Officers of the Staffe, 7.
Officers - - - 88
Soldiers - - - 474
Staff - - - 007

In garrison at Dublin :
Sir John Borlase.
Willm. Neur, his Cap^a Leivt.
John Morgan, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
72 soldiers.

Leivt. Coll. Reius :
Nic. Bagsbawe, his Leivt.
Robt. Cusacke, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
75 soldiers.

Sarjant-Major Lambert :
Jo. Fleetwood, his Leivt.
James Leigh, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
37 soldiers.

Capn. Edgworth :
Alexand. Smart, his Leivt.
Edw. Burrowes, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
50 soldiers.

Sir Robt. Newcomin :
John Waldrom, his Leivt.
George Todpole, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
40 soldiers.

In garrison Com. Kildare
Capt^a Henry Leigh.
Charles Morgan, his Leivt.
Arth. Leagh, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
59 soldiers

In garrison Com. Kildare :
Capt. Raudon.
John Watson, his Leivt.
Arth. Oxley, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
48 soldiers.

In garrison Com. Kildare :
Capt. Charles Blundell.
Isack Daniell, his Leivt.
Jonas Wheeler, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
81 soldiers.

Officers of the Staff, 7.
Officers - - - 90
Soldiers - - - 531
Staff Officers - - 007

Dublin Garrison :
Collonell Willoughby, Captaine.
Vincent Bradston, his Leivt.
Wm. Donnelan, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
64 soldiers.

Com. Dublin :
Leivt.-Coll. Fernly.
Fran. Tour, his Leivt.
Robt. Walshe, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
68 soldiers.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Merryounge garr[ison]:
Major Carey Dillon.
John Withers, his Lievt.
Thomas Davis, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
47 soldiers.

At Mallahellerd, [sic.] Com. Dublin:
Sir Fraan. Willoughbey.
Thomas Bradston, his Lievt.
Tobias Barnes, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
72 soldiers.

At Ratooth, Com. Dublin:
Sir Thomas Wharton.
Thomas Chambers, his Lievt.
Gilbert Nicholson, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
66 soldiers.

At Naase, Com. Kildare:
Captain Adam Pate.
John Craven, his Lievt.
Robt. Harison, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
66 soldiers.

At Feashnishstowne, Com. Meath:
Absent: Capⁿ Francis Medhapp.
Jeffrey Philipps, his Lievt.
John Nelson, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
61 soldiers.

Garrisoned at Donnaghadey, Com. Kildare:
Captain John Killingsley.
David Carey, his Lievt.
James Skelton, his Ensigne.
6 inferior officers.
26 soldiers.

Garrisoned at Castle Martin, Com. Kildare:
Captaine Nicholas Wall.
Henry Breun, his Lievt.
Jasper Rochford, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
36 soldiers.

The Officers of Staffe, 7.
Officers - - - 89
Soldiers - - - 495
Staff officers - - 007

Collonell Wm. Flower Captaine:
Tho. Flower, his Lievt.
Will. Griffith, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
74 soldiers.

Lievt. Coll. Culme:
Henry Harrison, his Lievt.
Rich. Gibbons, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
80 soldiers.

Major James Parsons:
Hen. Scott, his Lievt.
Robt. Cooke, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
70 Drogunes.
9 Footemen.

Capⁿ Edward Fisher:
Henry Bishop, his Lievt.
Will. Tallis, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
49 soldiers.

Capⁿ Amedeus Culme:
Edward Ashton, his Lievt.
John Wild, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
46 soldiers.

Capⁿ John Vsher:
Roger Trasey, his Lievt.
Michell Marrell, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
70 soldiers.

Capⁿ Richard St. George:
John Naughten, his Lievt.
Art. St. George, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
36 soldiers.

Capⁿ Will. Draper:
Edw. Clements, his Lievt.
Walt. Esmond, his Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
67 soldiers.

Capⁿ John Itchingham:
Josias Dawson, Lievt.
Thomas Tuke, Ensigne.
7 inferior officers.
45 soldiers.

In margin.—This company is exchanged with Captaine Manwaringe.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Officers of the Staffe, 7 | |
| Officers - - - | 90 |
| Soldiers - - - | 546 |
| Staff Off. - - - | 007 |
| Trayne of Artillery about | 200 |
| And are not yet full in any mea- sure for a considerable mart- ching army - - - | 050 |

Want carriage exceedingly. The Governm^t hath formerly writt for 504 carts, which wilbe as smale a trayne as can be to march with a considerable army to doe the affaires of the kingdome, as it ought to be done.

Total of the foote besides the Trayne:—
Officers - - - 1,303
Soldiers - - - 6,518
Both - 7,821

Collonell Michell Jones:
Michell Cusacke, his Lievt.
John Williams.
Wm. Wootton, his quarterm^r.
James Really, Chaplaine.
Chirurgion, one.
3 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
109 Horsmen.

Major John Villers:
Thomas Jackson, his Lievt.
John Rose, his Cornet.
Richard Cocke, Quarterm^r.
3 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
1 Chirurgion.
56 Horsmen.

Captaine Otwaye:
Hen. Lannd, his Lievt., Richard Tomson. his Cornett, Wm. Billingsley.
Quarterm^r, Moyles Smyth.
6 inferior officers.
60 horsemen.

Captaine Robert Glegg:
John Dunsterfield, his Lievt.
Nicholas Grene, his Cornett.
Henry Morgan, his quarterm^r.
6 inferior officers.
68 horsmen.

Henry Fisher, Captain:
Peter Ashonhurst, his Lievt.
Mathew Wilder, Cornett.
Peter Byrom, quarterm^r.
3 Corporalls.
1 Trumpeter.
60 Horsmen.

Capⁿ Will. Parsons:
Robt. Irvine, his Lievt.
John Hudson, his Cornett.
Hugh Udall, his quarterm^r.
6 inferior officers.
33 Horsmen.

Capn. Wm. Merideth:
Adam Mulleneux, his Lievt.
John Beast, his Cornett.
Wm. Brookes, his quarterm^r.
6 inferior officers.
62 Horsmen.

Captaine John Annesley :

George Hart, his Leivt.
Wm. Lawrance, Cornett.
Alexand. Marshall, quartermr.

6 inferior officers.
50 Horsmen.
Officers - - 081
Horsmen - - 491

Garrisoned at Drogheda, and in the quarter about it :

Collonell Chidley Coote :

Thos. Proctor, his Leivt.
Samnell Thomas, his Cornett.
Thomas Salte, his quartermr.
Will. Aldridge, Chaplaine.
6 inferior officers
97 Horsmen.

Major William Aston :

Vacat, his Leivt.
James Grant, his Cornett.
Hugh Massey, quartermr.
Corporalls, one.
Trumpeters, 2.
28 Horsmen.

Captaine Thomas Hunte :

Ar[thur] Purefoy, his Leivt.
Will. Gun, his Cornett.
Daniell Clemes, his quartermr.
6 inferior officers.
60 horsmen.

Capt^a John Campbell :

Arth. Hamilton, his Leivt.
John Moore, his Cornet.
Robt. Purdy, his quartermr.
6 inferior.
62 Horsmen.

Capt^a James Peasley :

Samuell Harris, his Leivt.
Tho. Golborne, his Cornet.
Rich. Grimes, his quartermr.
4 his officers.
43 Horsmen.

Captaine Emanuell Pallmer :

Arthur Trivis, his Leivt.
Robt. Roper, his Cornet.
Vacat, his quartermr.
5 inferior officers.
39 Horsmen.

Captaine Richard Edmonds :

Henry Astley, his Leivt.
Thom. Carlon, his Cornet.
James Carlon, his quartermr.
5 inferior officers.
60 Horsmen.
Officers - - 070
Soldiers - - 389

Garrison at Athboy and about it :

Collonell Punsonbey :

Willm. Dixie, his Leivt.
John Stanes, his Cornett.
Thomas Crosbey, his quartermr.
Joseph Berry, Chaplaine.
Thomas Kerkham, Chirurgion.
Richard Erton and Roger Johnson, his Mates.
2 Trumpeters.
3 Corporalls.
46 Horsmen.

Major Slaughter :

Horsmen, 4^r.

Captaine Hanns Hamilton

Michall Doyne, his Leivt.
James Clarke, his Cornet.
Thomas Johnson, his quartermr.
5 inferior officers.
47 horsmen.

John Michell, Captaine :

John Tench, his Leivt.
Cormack o Deblin, his Cornet.
Edward Edmonds, his quartermr.
5 inferior officers.
33 Horsmen.

In prison with the Irish, Captn. William Hamilton :

In prison with the Irish, his Leivt. Henry Lestrangle.

John Ruxton, his Cornet.

Vacat, quartermr.
5 inferior officers.
55 horsmen.

Capt^a Henry Punsonbey :

his Leivt. his Cornet.
his quartermr.
39 Horsmen.

Captaine Richard Woodward, in restraint at Dublin upon suspicion of the Scotts business :

His Leivt. and most of the troope rann to the Irish since the muster, and soe to the foote.

The Cornet in prison with the Irish.

The quartermr. and about 20 horsmen left, as is credibly reported.

Captaine Robt. Johnson : a very good man.

In England : his Leivt.
In England : his Cornet.
Larken, his quartermr.

1 Corporall.
1 Trumpeter.
24 horsmen.
Officers - - 80
Horsmen - - 329

Sir Thomas Armstronge, Collonell :

Rich. Ball, his Leivt.
Hans Gram, his Cornet.
Thom. Hemeshawe, his quartermr.
Corporalls, 3.
Trumpeters, 3.
Robt. Chambre, Chaplaine.
John Robinson, Chirurgion.
66 Horsmen.

The Lord Moore :

Garrat Moore, in Engl[and], his Leivt.
Tho. Pilkinton, his Cornet.
Rowland Davis, quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
54 Horsmen.

Absent : Earle of Strafford :

In prison with the Irish : Nicholas Fitzgerald-

Vacat : Cornet.

Quartermr. George Carowthers.

1 Corporall.
1 Trumpeter.
20 { 13 Horsmen, mounted.
7 unmounted.

The Earle of Cavan :

Leift. Antony Harman.

Vacat { Cornet and Quartermr.

7 inferior officers.
40 Horsmen.
Officers - - 34
Horsmen - - 180

Sir Thomas Merdeth, Capn. :

Wm. Crofton, his Leivt.
Tho. Blihe, his Cornet.
2 Corporalls
1 Trumpeter.
27 Horsmen.

Sir John Hoy, Capn. :

John Hunt, Leivt.
Robt. Plunket, Cornet.
Wm. Moore, Quartermr.
2 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
37 Horsmen.

Lord Grandison, Capn. :

Wm. Sachevervill, his Leivt.
Walter Coxe, his Cornet.
Thomas Bignall, his Quartermr.
1 Corporall.
1 Trumpeter.
26 Horsmen.

Captaine Tho. Harmons :

Ri. Moncke, his Leivt.
In Eng. Tho. Kennedy, Cornet, ——— England.
Rich. Broune, Quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
41 Horsmen.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE
DUBLIN.

Sir Patrick Weymes, Capn. :
John Downe, Lievt.
John Chambré, Cornet.
George Clarke, quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
a Chirurgeon.
62 Horsmen.

Sir John Gifford, Capn. :
Wm. Moore, his lievt.
Abra. Walker, his Cornet.
Georg. Bass, his quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
1 Chirurgeon.
2 Trumpeters.
46 Horsmen.

In England : Sir Adam Loftus :
Thomas Graham, Deceased.
Made Lievt. : John Wibrowe.
Charles Walkins, quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
2 Trumpeters.
32 Horsmen.

George Cressy, Capn.
vacat: Lievt.
Abrah. Read, Cornet.
John Heur, quartermr.
1 Corporall.
1 Trumpeter.
15 Horsmen.
Officers - - 56
Horsmen - - 245

Captaine Abraham Yarnier :
Walter Withers, his Lievt.
Rich. Ellyott, his Cornet.
Archball Armstronge, quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
1 Chirurgeon.
2 Trumpeters.
42 Horsmen.

Capt. Will. Tychburne. Capn.
Peter Graham, his Lievt.
Robert Hamilton, Cornet.
James Elliott, quartermr.
3 Corporalls.
1 Trumpeter.
42 Horsmen.

Major Arthur Dillon :
his Horsmen, 6.

Capⁿ Henry Smyth :
Provost Marshall. 1 Corporall.
1 Trumpeter.
20 Horsmen.

Collonell Marcus Trevor
James Doyne, his Lievt.
Fran. Marbles, his Cornet.
George Walsh, his quartermr.
1 Trumpeter.
1 Corporall.
25 Horsmen
Officers - - 8
Horsmen - - 135

Total of Horse { Officers - - 9
Horsemen - - 1769
41
2168

The weekly charge of the vnder officers and soldiers now residing in Dublin, as they are now paid, the 13th of May 1648.

Collonell Castles :
3 serjants at 4s. each - 00 : 12 : 00
3 drummers at 3s. each - 00 : 09 : 00
3 corporalls at 3s. each - 00 : 09 : 00
108 soldiers - - 10 : 16 : 00
Lievt. Collonell Slade :
2 serjants - - 00 : 08 : 00
2 drummers - - 00 : 06 : 00
3 corporalls - - 00 : 09 : 00
89 soldiers - - 08 : 18 : 00
Sarjant-Major Purefoy :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
69 soldiers - - 06 : 18 : 00

Capn. William Chambers :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
84 soldiers - - 08 : 08 : 00
Capn. Abraham Cole :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
93 soldiers - - 09 : 06 : 00
Capn. Thomas Bromidge :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
93 soldiers - - 09 : 06 : 00
Capn. Edward Richardson :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
63 soldiers - - 06 : 06 : 00
Capn. Edward Nusam :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
69 soldiers - - 06 : 18 : 00
Capn. Samnell Brereton :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
74 soldiers - - 07 : 08 : 00
Capn. Arthur Camell :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
Capn. Edward Aries :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
80 soldiers - - 08 : 00 : 00
101 : 18 : 00

Collonell Kennastone :
his officers - - 01 : 10 : 00
158 soldiers - - 15 : 16 : 00

Lievt. Collonell Nappers :
2 sarjants - - 00 : 08 : 00
1 drummer - - 00 : 03 : 00
1 corporall - - 00 : 03 : 00
26 soldiers - - 02 : 12 : 00

Sarjant Major Farrers :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
81 soldiers - - 08 : 02 : 00

Capn. John Dawson :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
71 soldiers - - 07 : 02 : 00

Capn. Siloam Collard :
his officers - - 00 : 16 : 00
32 soldiers - - 03 : 04 : 00

Capn. Hugh Pooles :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
63 soldiers - - 06 : 06 : 00

Capn. John Perkens :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
62 soldiers - - 06 : 04 : 00

Capn. Edward Peirse :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
84 soldiers - - 08 : 08 : 00

Capn. Oliuer Jones :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
81 soldiers - - 08 : 02 : 00
75 : 14 : 00

The Earle of Kildare :
his officers - - 01 : 00 : 00
40 soldiers - - 04 : 00 : 00

Sir John Sherlocke's :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
48 soldiers - - 04 : 16 : 00

Sarjant Major Williams :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
58 soldiers - - 05 : 1 [MS. torn.]

Sir Dudley Loftus :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
46 soldiers - - 04 : 12 : 00

Capn. Richard Newcomen's :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
70 soldiers - - 07 : 00 : 00

Capn. Thomas Fortescue's :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
97 soldiers - - 09 : 14 : 00

Capn. John Paine :
his officers - - 01 : 03 : 00
47 soldiers - - 04 : 14 : 00

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

| | | | |
|--------------------------------|---|---|---------------------|
| Capn. Ralph Allen: | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 00 : 16 : 00 |
| 28 soldiers | - | - | 02 : 16 : 00 |
| | | | 52 : 02 : 00 |
| Sir John Borlase : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 74 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 08 : 00 |
| Leivt. Collonell Ryves : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 76 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 12 : 00 |
| Sarjant-Major Lambart : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 68 soldiers | - | - | 06 : 16 : 00 |
| Capn. Edward Aston : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 37 soldiers | - | - | 03 : 14 : 00 |
| Sir Robert Newcomen : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 45 soldiers | - | - | 04 : 10 : 00 |
| Capn. Henry Leigh : | | | |
| 1 corporall | - | - | 00 : 03 : 00 |
| 10 soldiers | - | - | 01 : 00 : 00 |
| Capn. Gilbert Rawson : | | | |
| 13 soldiers | - | - | 01 : 06 : 00 |
| Capn. Charles Blundell : | | | |
| 1 corporall | - | - | 00 : 03 : 00 |
| 4 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 08 : 00 |
| Capn. John Edgworth : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 50 soldiers | - | - | 05 : 00 : 00 |
| | | | 44 : 18 : 00 |
| Collonell Francis Willoughby : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 71 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 02 : 00 |
| Leivt. Collonell Ferneley : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 71 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 02 : 00 |
| Sarjant Major Cary Dillon : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 50 soldiers | - | - | 05 : 00 : 00 |
| Sir Thomas Wharton : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 55 soldiers | - | - | 05 : 10 : 00 |
| Capn. Adam Pate : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 76 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 12 : 00 |
| Capn. Francis Mednpp : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 63 soldiers | - | - | 06 : 06 : 00 |
| Capn. John Billingsley : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 30 soldiers | - | - | 03 : 00 : 00 |
| Sir Francis Willoughby : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 78 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 16 : 00 |
| | | | 58 : 12 : 00 |
| Collonell William Flower : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 67 soldiers | - | - | 06 : 14 : 00 |
| Leivt. Collonell Culme : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 80 soldiers | - | - | 08 : 00 : 00 |
| Sarjant Major Parsons : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 10 : 00 |
| 41 dragoones | - | - | 06 : 03 : 00 |
| 21 foote | - | - | 02 : 02 : 00 |
| Capn. Edward Fisher : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 47 soldiers | - | - | 04 : 14 : 00 |
| Capn. Amady Culme : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 46 soldiers | - | - | 04 : 12 : 00 |

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

| | | | |
|-----------------------------|---|---|-----------------------|
| Capn. John Usher : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 69 soldiers | - | - | 06 : 18 : 00 |
| Capn. Richard St. George : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 39 soldiers | - | - | 03 : 18 : 00 |
| Capn. Willm. Draper : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 72 soldiers | - | - | 07 : 04 : 00 |
| Capn. John Itchingham : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 03 : 00 |
| 52 soldiers | - | - | 05 : 04 : 00 |
| | | | 66 : 03 : 00 |
| Collonell Fenwicke : | | | |
| 2 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 04 : 00 |
| Leivt. Collonell Huetson : | | | |
| 2 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 04 : 00 |
| Sarjant Major Brereton : | | | |
| 4 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 08 : 00 |
| Capn. Thomas Stanley : | | | |
| 3 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 06 : 00 |
| Capn. Jeremy Hartley : | | | |
| 2 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 04 : 00 |
| Capn. Henry Pakenham : | | | |
| 1 soldier | - | - | 00 : 02 : 00 |
| Capn. George Corlett : | | | |
| 1 soldier | - | - | 00 : 02 : 00 |
| Capn. Richard Dixon : | | | |
| 1 corporall | - | - | 00 : 03 : 00 |
| 6 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 12 : 00 |
| Capn. Robert Fenwicke : | | | |
| 2 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 04 : 00 |
| | | | 02 : 09 : 00 |
| Collonell Long : | | | |
| 8 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 16 : 00 |
| Leivt. Collonell Rochford : | | | |
| 1 corporall | - | - | 00 : 03 : 00 |
| 11 soldiers | - | - | 01 : 02 : 00 |
| Sarjant Major Read : | | | |
| 4 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 08 : 00 |
| Capn. Daniell Smith : | | | |
| 1 soldier | - | - | 00 : 02 : 00 |
| Capn. Felix Long : | | | |
| 3 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 06 : 00 |
| Capn. Henry Lewis : | | | |
| 4 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 08 : 00 |
| Capn. Richard Devon : | | | |
| 5 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 10 : 00 |
| Capn. John Pigott : | | | |
| 4 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 08 : 00 |
| Capn. Paiton Lehmt : | | | |
| 6 soldiers | - | - | 00 : 12 : 00 |
| | | | 04 : 15 : 00 |
| Capn. John Parsons : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 01 : 07 : 00 |
| 100 soldiers | - | - | 10 : 00 : 00 |
| Major Bringhurst : | | | |
| his officers | - | - | 00 : 17 : 00 |
| 48 soldiers | - | - | 04 : 16 : 00 |
| Martiall Peake : | | | |
| 10 men | - | - | 01 : 00 : 00 |
| The warders of the | | | |
| Castle | - | - | 00 : 16 : 00 |
| | | | 18 : 16 : 00 |
| In all | - | - | £425 : 07 : 00 |

Endorsed: May 13, [16]48. The assessed charge of the vnder officers and soldiers in Dublin.

A distribution of the contract made with the Parliament for supply of the British Armies in Ireland, Martij 31^o 1648, for the provinces of

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

| To be landed at | Leinster. | | Munster. | | Vlster. | | Conought. | |
|--|-----------|--------|-----------|-----------------|---------|--|-----------|--|
| | Dublin. | Corke. | Dundalke. | Derry. | Sligo. | | | |
| Wheate, 2,348 quarters, viz. - - - - - | 0990 | 0825 | 0268 | 0100 | 6125 | | | |
| Rye, 3,655 quarters, viz. - - - - - | 1500 | 1250 | 0335 | 0200 | 0300 | | | |
| Cassocks and britches, 16,000, viz. - - - - - | 6000 | 5000 | 2500 | 12 ^o | 1200 | | | |
| Shirts, 16,000, viz. - - - - - | 6000 | 5000 | 2500 | 1300 | 1200 | | | |
| Shooes, 16,000 paire, viz. - - - - - | 6000 | 5000 | 2500 | 1300 | 1200 | | | |
| Stockings, 16,000 paire, viz. - - - - - | 6000 | 5000 | 2500 | 1300 | 1200 | | | |
| Knapsackes, 10,000, viz. - - - - - | 3600 | 3200 | 1600 | 0800 | 0800 | | | |
| Broad cloath for Troopers, 16,000 yards - - - - - | 5600 | 5250 | 2575 | 0850 | 1725 | | | |
| Hats for the foote, 16,000, viz. - - - - - | 6000 | 5000 | 2500 | 1300 | 1200 | | | |
| Hats for Troopers, 4,500, viz. - - - - - | 1700 | 1400 | 0700 | 0233 | 0467 | | | |
| Powder, 46 barrells, viz. - - - - - | 0180 | 0130 | 0050 | 0040 | 0050 | | | |
| Match, 46 tone, viz. - - - - - | 0018 | 0013 | 0005 | 0004 | 0005 | | | |
| Iron, 20 tonnes, viz. - - - - - | 0005 | 0006 | 0002 | 0002 | 0002 | | | |
| Sackinge, 200 peces, viz. - - - - - | 0066 | 0066 | 0036 | 0016 | 0016 | | | |
| Muskets with matchlocks, 1,400 - - - - - | 0468 | 0466 | 0200 | 0136 | 0130 | | | |
| Snap hance muskets, 600, viz. - - - - - | 0200 | 0200 | 0100 | 0050 | 0050 | | | |
| Swords for horsemen, 1,000 - - - - - | 0400 | 0300 | 0150 | 0100 | 0050 | | | |
| Swords for footemen, 5,000 - - - - - | 2000 | 1500 | 0750 | 0375 | 0375 | | | |
| Pikes, 1,500, viz. - - - - - | 0500 | 0500 | 0250 | 0125 | 0125 | | | |
| Bullet, 45 tonnes, viz. - - - - - | 0018 | 0013 | 0005 | 0004 | 0005 | | | |
| Fistolls, 1,000 paire, viz. - - - - - | 0340 | 0330 | 0150 | 0120 | 0060 | | | |
| Monies to land with the premisses 20,000 ^l . ster. - - - - - | 10000 | 5000 | 2500 | 2500 | | | | |
| More to be landed on the bay of Sligo as nigh as may be to Ballishannon for the garrison of Enniskillin. | | | | | | | | |
| Wheate, quarters - - - - - | 40 | | | | | | | |
| Rye, quarters - - - - - | 80 | | | | | | | |
| Powder, barrels - - - - - | 10 | | | | | | | |
| Match, tuns - - - - - | 01 | | | | | | | |
| Bullets, tuns - - - - - | 01 | | | | | | | |

Endorsed: March 31 [16]48. The distribution of the contract for Ireland.

VIII.

IRELAND: 1649-53.

NARRATIVE OF PASSAGES IN IRELAND, 1649-53, WRITTEN BY MAJOR WILLIAM MEREDITH, IN 1656, FOR DR.
HENRY JONES, BISHOP OF CLOCHER.

For my much Honored Friend Doctor Henry Jones, these:

Worthy Sir.

In obedience to your commands rather than my inclination, I have reduced many services at wh^{ch} I l was present into some method; I studied nothing out truth in there relation, wh^{ch} I can assure you, [you] have perfect as any eye wittnes can give a thing, and which I hope will answer your expectation; from him who is,

Sir, your most faithfull friend and servant,

June 7th, 1656.

W^m MEREDITH.

A relation of several services; at the which I was present in the warre of Ireland from the yeare 1649 untill 1653.

About two dayes after the storme and takeing of Drogheda [in September], in the yeare 1649, the Lord Lt. sent Coll. Chidley Coote with his own and Lt. Gen^l Jones his regiment of horse, and Coll. Castle's regiment of foot, to possess Dundalke; those regiments having marched all night, arrived at Dundalke the next morning, which they found the enemy had newly quitted, soe that without further trouble there was left there as Governor Coll. Punsonby (then Major to Coll. Coote), with his troope and some few foote, and the regiments both horse and foote marched immediately that day back to the campe which was then in the fields nere Drogheda; and about a day or two after the same party, together with Coll. Venable's regiment of foote and two troopes of dragones, were sent vnder the command of Coll. Venables to reduce some part of the north, and for that purpose gunnes for battery and victuall were sent to attend him by sea in a man of warre; the first place they marched to was Carlingford and the same day the party came thither the shipe came into the harbor, and pased the fort which lyes in the mouth of it, without any prejudice, though they made severall shottes at her as she past; that night we encamped on the south side of the towne in fields nere adioyning, and the shipe cast ancor nere the Castle. The next day preparations were made to land our gunes and to rayse a battery, in order to which gardes were placed nere the Castle, but before we eather landed gunes or made our battery, the enemy came to a parly and the Castle was surrendered vnto us on Articles.

The next day after the surrender of Carlingford, Coll. Venables toke Lt. Ge^l Jones his regiment of horse, and marched by the waterside vnder the mountaine vnto the Newry to summon that place; we passed the river at forde about a mile below the Newry, the remainder of the party were left with Coll. Coote to come the other side of the mountaine with the carriages, the way we marched not being passa^{ble} for carriages. The same evening we came to the Newry and faced it. the Governor came out and treated, and soe nere concluded that the horse were admitted into the towne and marched through it to passe the bridge, to quarter on the other side the water, where was most conveniency, and the next day the castle was surrendered on articles. We rested at the Newry untill the rest of the party came vp, which was thre [sic] day after: in which tyme there came a cornett, and two or three more from Lisnagarrie, who assvred vs that if wee would advance we should have that place surrendered vnto vs. Vpon which invitation, by advise of the officers, we advanced from the Newry, having left an Ensing and some few men in the Castle. The first night we lay at Drummore, sixteen miles from the Newry, and incamped in a field south-west of the said towne by the heigh way side well inclosed with heges, not having any intelligence of any enemy being nere vs; but about three houres after we were incamped there came advertisement from Dundalke that Coll. Trevor was attending vs with a considerable party of horse, and resolved to falle on vs before we got to the Newry. Vpon which intelligence orders were sent that the horse should draw into the foote quarters which was a field, on the out side of which the horse lay; but the orders being cursoryly given, and noe alarm generall in the campe, there was but litell notice taken of them; for I cannot tell whether through the negligence of him that caried the orders or those that gave them; but certaine truth it is that they were never knowne to halfe the horse (and the dragones never heard of it at all) which omition had like to have bine our totall ruin, and was the only cause of the greatest part of the lose we afterwards sustayned: The enemy, according to the intelligence, naving costed vs all that day on the left hand, had by there scoutes, which they kept on the topes of hills, whiles there party kept the bottoms, sertaine intelligence of our motion, and were soe confident (as I haue since heard) that some of them came into the out side of the quarter and viewed the order of our quartering, and afterwards returned and gave an account of the same party; vpon which the enemy resolved to attempt our quarter, which accordingly they did an houre before day the next morning, and we having scouters abroad (the strength of our garde being in the quarters) the enemy found noe resistance; but followed the scouters into the gard who at once had received the alarm and the enemy; they pursuing the scouters soe close that they came to the garde as some as the scouters; soe that with very smale or noe dispute they routed the garde and persued them through the quarter, which soe sudden rout of the garde had the like influence on all the campe, being in noe order to receive an enemy, or defend themselves, judged of there owne condition by that of there fellows; and fell to a totall rout which had never bine recovered had it not pleased God that the situation of the place was such, being incamped with a very strong hedge on most partes, and a bogue behinde it, that our men could not riddly find how to get away, the morning proving extraordinary darke, by which meanes likewise it pleased the Lord, that the enemy were not sensible of there owne advantage, but stood with the grose of there horse, which was about 400, on a hill nere, judging by the smale resistance which they had heard made, that we had bene totally routed by there first parties, and that those parties would keepe vs soe from rallying, that they should have nothing to doe, when it was day but to picke vp a scattered party, wholly strangers in the country, and this I know to haue bene there opinion of vs, by the relation of some of there chiefe officers since; but the same providence that guided and garded vs misguided them, for the forward parties who were ordered in case they got in to the quarter to stay there and not persue, but to kepe vs from rallying, contrary to there orders followed the persuit of the garde and soe left vs though all sooner, to recollect our selves, and the day braking, noe sooner were [we] sensible of our owne miscarriages then the enemy could be who were some distance from vs sounding levitts* for joy of there supposed victory; vs perceiving our selves in soe great disorder made he greater hast to vnite againe; very sodenly we had rallied about forty or fifty horse, which being drawne vp on a smale rising ground which was in the field; those that had before hid them selves in holes and diches, immediately toke vp there armes againe and repayed to vs; and before it was soe light as the enemy could diserne what we were we had rallied four or five smale bodies of horse and a hansom body of foote of 400; and as if every one had bine ashamed of what was before done, there was noe other voyse amongst the soldiers but to redeeme there past miscarriages by presently fighting, which forwardnes of theres I confes was a good argument to ingage the enemy, and therefore went to the Commander in Chiefe and declared vnto him the probability of good succes if we went out and fought; but I was answered he would not ingage but on the ground we stood, with which answer I returned to my charge, and the soldiers still desiring very much an engagement I went againe to the Commander in Chiefe, and desired at least he would permit me to take a smail party of horse and to advance towards the enemy, to search a tent of Maior Villers where in there was a fortnight's pay for the Lt. Ge^l. regiment; telling him besides it would be a countenance to some who lay hid betwene vs and the enemy, to repaire to vs; vpon which I was permitted to take 40 or 50 horse, and advanes towards the enemy which I did, and was noe sooner within neere halfe musquet shot of them, where we drew vp, but they immediately sent a good party to charge vs; but it pleased God to order the business soe, that after a long and sharpe dispute betwene those two parties only that we routed them, and followed them soe close that there maine body toke the rout likewise, soe that that party together with some more of the Lt. Ge^l. regiment which came in with Capt. Cusacke and Lt. Thompson; we had the persuit of them vnto the Band [Bann] water towards Newry, being 7 miles in the persuit; we recovered all our prisoners and two standards which they had taken of ours: killed many of theres; and toke many prisoners of theres, whereof there was two Capt. of horse, and other inferior officers. The rest of the horse were employed in the persuit of one Maior Chatfield; who was drawne vp in the towne with a 100 horse, and had prisoner with him Maior Viller and Capt. Vsher, both which on the persuit were recovered, and the officer that had the charge of them came in to vs, being a Cornett. Thus it pleased the Lord to disperse that cloud which threatened vs with soe great a storme, with which vndoubtedly we had bine destroyed, had not God bine our mighty helper and defender.

As some as we were returned from the persuit the party beganne there march vnto Lisnegarvie; into which they were very welcomely received that night; the party quartering in the fields nere to it; and next day with the addition of one trope of horse which were of that contry and then joined with vs vnder the command of Maior Bruffe we marched vnto Belfast and faced that place, which was within thre or four days surrendered vnto vs on Articles; about ten days after the surrender of the towne Lt. Ge^l. Jones regiment marcht back vnto Dublin and what afterwards was done in those partes Sr Theophilus Jones can best give an account of, being there with his regiment from a little whilest after we came away untill all action was finished in those partes.

In the month of November, 1649, there was about 700 foote and 300 horse (which had bine left sick at Dublin) to be sent to the army then before Rosse; two tropes of the Lt. Ge^l. regiment were ordered to march, with the which was Capt. Otway's and my trope. Otway had the charge of all the horse and Maior Nelson of the foot. The army having intelligence of our march provided to intercept vs, and accordingly the Lord of Inchequin with 1,500 horse and 1,000 foot was ordered to attend our passage through the county of Wexford, which the Lord Lt. and we, haueing bothe intelligence of, we rested at Arklow two dayes to refresh the men who were but newly recovered out of sicknes, and likewise to attend the more convenient meting of a great party of horse from the army, which by apointment should haue meett vs, at a place caled Glascarige, mid way betwene Wexford and Arklow, where we intended to haue laine the night we removed from Arklow; but on our march all that day haueing certaine notice of the enemy's being in the contry to attend vs; and not metting the horse as was before appointed though the poore men were very much tired with the days march before; yett all the officers agreed that it was better to march seaven miles farther [before] they rested, judging thereby they should deceave the enemy, whom by all there intelligence they thought to lye in some convenient place nere to fall on our quarters the morning following; on which resolution we made no stay at Glascaricke, but marched straight towards Wexford, which the enemy, who lay waiting there preay but two miles from thence, haueing notice of by ther scouters, immediately followed vs with all there [Ms. torn] the rest of there foote being ordered to follow with what speede might be and with halfe a mile or lesse of the villadge we intended to haue baited at; (the quar^{ms} haueing bine sent before to take vp the best conveniency) and in the meane tyme the party being at a halt, and many of the men being falen aslepe; (the quar^{ms} returning to vs;) there was order given to the officer that commanded the reare to give a false alarm the better to enforce the soldiers to march, which the officer going to doe, riding some distance from his trope, the night being cleere moneshine, spied the enemy in great bodies marching on the strand after vs, soe that that proved fortunately an alarm in deed which was intended but a false one; the enemy perceiving they had impeached our reare, which was all they intended to have done untill there foote came up, slackened of the pace they were before at and beganne to order themselves, being about thrice muskett shot from vs, which gave vs tyme to overcome the distraction we were in, some of vs beleveing it was the false alarm only and soe toke noe notice of it; but after a little tyme, it pleased God we gott into some order; and being resolved to ingage all our horse first, with only some foote with the first trope that charged, we were forced to advance towards the enemy to gaue ground to draw vp on, which was in this order: the horse in six single divitions, only on the flanks of the forward divitions of horse there was 160 musketers sixty on each flanke, the grose of the foote in the reare of all. And this order we were constrained to make vs of through the narrownes of the strand, haueing on one hand a very steepe and hegh sandbanke and on the other hand a flowing sea, which doubles through the great goodnes of God was for our advantage, for though

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE
DUBLIN

they were more in number than wee, yett we could bring as many hands to fight at once as they, we suffered not them to advance on vs; (our men being though very weak yett through the great mercy of our good God very coragious) but immediately advanced towards them, my trope being the first to charge we advanced very neere the enemy and then gave them a volle of all our musketes, and afterwards fell on with our horse; the first division of theres disputed it some tyme; and then gane backe, though with good regard to the routing of those that stood behind them, and fell off to the right and left hand soe that we were then to deale with a fresh body of at least 150 horse which were standing in good order; we being disordered with the former charge mett them with disadvantage inough besides there number, and after a hott dispute my Lt. and selfe being both wounded and ovr horses killed vnder vs and severall of ovr men killed and wounded, my trope was forced backe; on which most of ovr horse took the rout, the enemy persevring them, untill they came vnto our mayne body of foote (who by the assistance of God were the stay of that service) they haneing lett ovr owne horse passe by them receaued the enemy with soe great a volle of shott from amongst there pikes (which were placed in the ranne, that therewith severall of the enemys chiefe officers being kild and wounded the rest were content to beleue that we had barricaded the strand with our waggons (as they have since tould me) and soe retired in great confusion at least a quarter of a mile, which gaue our men tyme to debate what was best to be done, and it being resolved to ingage the enemy againe, the horse (all but a 100 which ranne straight to Wexford) were drawne vp as before, and just as they were advancing there came one Lt. Ed. Warren, of the Lord L^r regiment, who had bin shuffled amongst the enemy and could not before gett from amongst them, who assured our party that if they charged speedely they would find the enemy in as great or greater disorder than we, soe that our horse immediatly advanced, and haueing marcht nere a quarter of a mile mett the enemy (who were content againe to receave the charge rather than give it) and were soner [sic] beaten even to a totall rout, soe that party of ours had the persuit of them at least a mile, in which they toke two standards and the Cornetts ou[c] the Lord of Inchequins the other his sonnes and severall other prisoners; the enemy lost severall men kild and thre of there best officers wounded almost to death. We lost only dead, thre of my trope and one of my Lord L^r and some more wounded, and my L^r taken prisoner; after which incounter we marched immediatly to Wexford where we arived that morning early and were with boates ferried ovr into towne.

After the Lord Lt. drawing out of winter quarters in county of Corke in the month of February, 1649, my trope was left in the county of Limbricke with Col. Ingoldesby's regiment of dragones; the party was speedely dispersed into severall castells in nature of garisons to awe Kilmallocke and Limbricke, and other garisons the enemy had in that county. My trope was left with a smale party of dragones at a place called Knocklong within five miles of Kilmallocke, and ovr service being to distresse the enemy, I drew forth in March one Saboth day about 60 horse and a dosen dragones with intention to prey Kilmallocke; and within about an houres tyme we were masters of all the catle and horses which were on that side the towne, being about 200, the enemy speedely toke the alarm, and before we had gott a quarter of a mile from the towne, there were a very great body of foote of at least 800 in our reare, but in noe order; and on our right a boddy of horse which were making vp another lane to gett before vs which we perceiving I left my Cornett and quar^{ter} with about 15 horse to dally with the foote, to hinder there too quicke advance on vs, and with the rest of the horse we made all the hast we could to gaine the tope of a hill where the two highwayes mett, for which the enemy's horse strove likewise but haueing gained it first, they mad a stand about muskett shott from vs; then haueing given order for the driving away of our bottey with all speede by som dragones on foote and mounted horsemen to the garison, we advanced, with the rest of the horse (except that smale party who had the foot at a bay) expecting what their hors would doe; towards the enemy commanded by Major Ge^l. Stevenson, the Governor of the towne, but before we came to joyne horse heads they beganne to runne and we persued them to a smale garison of theres about a quarter of a mile; the foote seing there horse routed, toke the rout likewise to a litle bogge betwene them and there horse; soe that our smale party had the killing of as many as they pleased, which by reason of the hogge betwene we could not assist in, the enemys greatest losse was in officers. There were kild in all nere 40 men, and Maior Ge^l. Stevenson there receaved his deaths wound of which after he died; we had not one man eather killed or wounded.

In May, 1650, my trope was commanded from Loghguir, where we then quartered, to march to a place caled Clonetway, in the county of Limbricke to relieue Maior Penifather who then lay there. I had not bin there ten days when the enemy had layd a designe for the taking of my trope horses and a trope of dragones which lay with me, which they attempted to doe by foote and a few horse which they led over the mountaine, and layd there ambush in a very thick and large wood nere which our horses grased: we had a good gard abroad with the horses; but the enemy shewing soderly out of the wood, with a smale party of about 20 foote and six horse, were presently amongst the garde before they could gett one horse mounted, and dispersed them; soe that they had the full possession of all the horses and immediatly drove them towards the Redde Share*; one Major Burne who commanded in chiefe keeping on the edge of the wood; with about 300 foot to make good the business; as some as the alarm came to the garison, my Lt. and I being within, caused our two horses (which were within at soyle and were the only horses that were left of both the troopes) to be saddled and immediatly ridd out and found by the men whom we mett making to the garison that the enemy had driven away all our horses, vpon which we presently followed them, and ordered ovr men to follow vs on foot with what speed they could. We had not ridded farre, when on a smale heath betwene the garison and Red Share we might see the smale party of the enemy, (as secure) driving the horses soile^{ly}, and there maine body on there right hand by the wods side marching towards the Passe; we ridd as hard as we could after them; and at the end of the heath we came soe nere as to speake to them, vpon which they drey vp, and called to vs to come on; (our losse was sufficient invitation) they had a smale bogge on there right hand and a litle plash of water betwene vs and them; and we judgging it noe tyme to dally, there maine body being advancing towards them, we presantly charged them; there foot, immediatly skipt into the smale bogge soe that we two had only to deal with the six horse men, who after a few blowes interchange began to thinke of following there bouty; which I believe they thought to have out ridd vs withall (by the pace they kept); then haueing their backs to us, they fought with us after the Parthian manner with a halfe face; but in halfe a miles rideing we had dismounted all of them (but one) whose horses still as there masters fell ranne amongst ours. He that continued on horsebacke drove the horses soe violently, thinking to outride us, that we ridd nere a quarter of a mile before we could head him, our horses being soe out of wind, whom we soeddenly alsoe dismounted, after we overtoke him, and then were soe masters of our horses againe; and those they brought with them, without ovr least hurt; our men on foot which we had ordered to follow vs; mett with there maine body and skirmisht with them; soe that they came not in to preiudice vs; but on the contrary toke the mountaine to save themselfe which way our men followed them. But when they were on the tope of the mountaine ovr men perceived their horses in the bottom and soe left off the persuit, and came vnto vs.

In June that yeare my trope was comanded to march with the Lord Broghill and St. Harres's Waller into Kerry; and by the way we toke in Ballealaban, on conditions: there was not much considerable done we staying not past three wekes there. We left behind vs, on ovr retorne backe againe, as Governor there Major Pardon with 3 troopes of horse and a trope of dragones, and 100 foot; and soe we returned. On our retorne I was sent to Loghguir to lye with Coll. Ingoldesby, then Governor there, thre troopes more and one of dragones and 3 companies of foote; about the beginning of July the enemy from Limbricke desired the taking of all our horses, and sent Coll. Pennell with 600 foote and 400 horse on that service, who because we kept continuall patrolles of horse on the vsual road to Limbricke, for the more privacy of his designt toke a by way thre miles wide of the heigh way, which occasioned that before he could gett within thre miles of Loghguir it was clere day, and soe judgging he could doe noe good on his first designt, therefore halted his party to rest there a while, and sent a smale party only towards our garrison to catch some prisoners; we [lost] on[ly] two or three of our troopers, and one of them escaping gave vs the alarm, which was the reddier answered, most of our men haneing taken vp there horses before by order (we haneing intention to attempt something on the towne of Limbricke that day) we reddily drew forth about 200 horse and forty dragones with the which we followed the enemy partly by there tracke untill we came soe nere that we sawe the enemy orderly drawne vp, as we judged to fight vs. We then halted and drew our selves into better order. I sent a cornett with thirty choyse horse before [Ms. torn] we were resolved to sett on them, but they beganne to drawe off and march away, vpon which Coll. Ingoldesby sent orders to the Cornett to impeach there reare if possibly but they marched soe fast away that in about a miles march, in an open field, he could nere doe it, untill they marching through a smale wast towne gave him an opportunity, and then he made the enemy loke about by a furious onsett; in which encounter we had three men slaine and some wounded; and the cornett and his party violently bett backe on vs, which made the enemy drawe vp; by which tyme we were come within halfe muskett shot of them, and makinge noe stay, we straight gave on them; but before we came to hantly bloes they rane and we had the persuit of them five miles to Limbricke towne; we killed and toke [m]any of there horsemen; and one Capt. of Horse we toke and at least two hundred horses; there foot escaped the sword by reason of a smale river (which they toke like dogges:) and our eager persuit of the horse, but many of them were drowned in that river which as I remember is named Aahcottiey.

* In Gaelic - Beanna-dhearg - the "red gap or chasm," in the mountain of Sliah Rengh, on the borders of the counties of Limrick and Cork.

The latter end of that sommer the Lord Ireton be-seiged Limbricke, and whilst he was busy there the Lord Clanrickard came over the Shannon and toke severall garrisons which my Lord Ireton had placed in the Kings county; vpon which there was sent 500 horse and dragones, with Coll. Abott and myself, to joyne with Coll. Axtell and Coll. Sankey for the stoping of the enemy: our party randevond about Roserea where mett vs Coll. Shelburne and Coll. Cooke vnexpected with some Leinster force; which made vs in all nere 3,000 horse and foote. From thence we marched to Birr and lay that night there; and the next day hauing notice about eleven a clocke that the enemy were incamped in a fast piece of ground called the Island of Melicke, we marched straight thither; and found that the enemy had possessed the passes and fortified on some of them, but the army being drawn vp, about an hour before night we fell on, and presautly gained the first passe, whereon there stood a smale stone castle, and afterwards gained three passes more, which struck such a terror in there campe that they fled and left vs only there campe to ransacke; the night fell on which hindered the persuit, but many of them kild and more drowned in the river Shannon.

After the taking of Finae, and the defeate of the enemy there by Sr Theo. Jones, my trope was left there in garrison with a company of foote; the enemy being wholly master of the county of Cavan, vpon which we made severall incursions, and in the year 1652, in the month of Sept., haneing intelligence brought of a good advantage to be taken vpon the enemy who lay then at a place called Stragvagneboe; we marched out about three score horse, and marched all night, and by breake of day next morning, we were in the place where we expected the enemy to hane binne, but they haneing intelligence from our owne spy (as we afterwards heard we mist them and gott only about 40 cowes having missed of our intended designe and findeing the country alarmd, we resolved to march home with what speide we could, the enemy being very strong in the country: but before we had marched two miles, we were persued by about sixe score horse, and some light foot that costed the country, to gett between vs and home; they followed vs soe fast that we could not without great disorder avoyd fighting them they haneing sent a party of horse to impeach our reare, on which we drew vp and [were] incountered by a like party who after a litle scuffle were bett backe to there maine body which was drawne vp on the other side of a very depe ford called Belanagelagh or the Cockford nere the Blackbull. My Quarter^{ma} who had the command of the forward party persued them through the ford vnto their maine body, and we following him at a convenient distance to succor him if occasion should be, were before we were aware engaged soe nere the ford, that we judged it better to attempt the enemy through the ford on there owne ground though with disadvantage, then to give them our backs soe nere, in shifting our ground; and instantly we marched into the ford; the enemy being commanded by Coll. Re [i] ly, (Phi. McHew's only sonne), whom it semes was a gallant person, resolved not to stand and receive vs, but advanced to the ford like-wise, soe that nere the middle of the forde we mett; and I may safely say was the hottest encounter that ever I was in, we being intermingled for above halfe an hour, when our men being over borne by there number, and tired out with wounds and labor, were forced to quitt the ford; but being recaled againe by there officer, gave on afresh againe, and then it pleased God to deside the matter finally, for there Coll. falling dead in the forde and ten of there best men, the rest beganne to save themselves by there heeles rather than there hands: we persued them two miles and dismounted 40 or 50 of them, whose horses we brought away with vs; they had about 30 men wounded, and of ovr part we lost not one man, but my selfe, my Lt, 3 Corporalls, and 13 men dangerously wounded, but all afterwards recovered, prayed beee God.

Endorsed: Major Meredith's relation of passages from the year 1649 to 1653. Received July 17, 1656.

IX.

“APHORISMICAL DISCOVERY OF TREASONABLE FACTION.”

Contents:—

- Epistle Dedicatorie to Don Eugenius Oneale.
- Ireland compared with Colchos.
- Ancient attempts upon Ireland.
- Meilds or Miletus, King of Spain.
- The Oneylls descend from Eremon.
- The Danes attack Ireland.
- Battle of Clontarf.
- King O'Mellaghlin of the Oneylls.
- Pope Adrian IV. and Henry II., King of England.
- Entrance of the English into Ireland.
- Claim of King of England not condiscussed to by the Oneylls.
- Henry VIII. styles himself King of Ireland.
- The Oneylls wage war with England.
- Shane Oneyll, chief of the family.
- Con Oneyll, heir-apparent to Shane.
- Ferdinand Oneyll created Baron of Dungenan.
- His son and heir, Hugh Oneyll, bred at Courte.
- Earl of Desmond raised in arms
- Hugh Oneyll created Earl of Tyrone, in exchange of the fatal name of Oneyll.
- Conflicts between him and the Queen's forces.
- Tyrone and Tyrconnell [withdraw] to Rome.
- Sir Charles O'Dochardy began commotions in Ireland.
- Tyrone's sons, Henry, Brian, and Shean.
- Brian Oneyll executed.
- Shean Oneyll survives his father and brother, and is nominated Earl of Tyrone.
- Tyrone and Tyrconnell slain in Spain.
- Tyrone's only son, Hugh Oneyll, of the age of nine years in 1641.
- Owen Oneyll, Colonel in Flanders, cousin-german to the late Earl of Tyrone.
- 1641. Owen Oneyll nominated chief Commander for the expedition to Ireland.
- His companions and captains, Con Oneyll, Hugh Oneyll, Brian Roe Oneyll, his son, Henry Roe Oneyll, Daniel O'Kahan, Brian Mac Phelim Birne, Owen O'Dochardie, Gerald Fitz Gerald, etc.
- 1642. They arrive in Ireland about the latter end of July.
- Justice of Oneyll's cause.
- Equity of his warfare.
- Antiquity of his regal claim.
- His ancestors in actual possession for nearly three thousand years.
- Epitome of the merits of Don Eugenius Oneyll.
- Epistle to the reader.
- Book I.
- Chapter I.
- 1641.
- 1. State of the Kingdom of Ireland, 1641.
- 2. Parliaments in England and Ireland.
- „ Proposed repeal of Poyning's Acte.
- 3. Letters of grace from Charles I.
- 4. The ministers of State in Dublin.
- 5. Treachery of Patrick Darcy or Dorchy.
- 6. The grounds of this warr.

7. The plott discovered.
8. Sir Phelim O'Neill takes Charlemont for the King.
9. Cruelties of Sir Charles Coote.

II.

10. Intended destruction of Catholic religion, Monarchy, and Irish nation.
11. The ground of the Irish warr.
12. The advantage of the State.
13. The oath.
14. Five hundred killed near Drogheda.
15. Sir Phelim Oneyll, Generall.
16. The Brians raised.
17. Dominick Fanning, Mayor of Limbricke.
18. Proceedings of Castleconnell, Oliver Stephens, Daniel Carty, O'Connor Keyry, and O'Salleavans.
19. Montgerrott.
20. Kevanaghs and Byrnes.
21. Sir Morgan Kevanagh.
22. Molloy's.
23. Captain Smith and his comrads killed.
24. One Irish killed.
25. Dempseys raised.
26. Abbey of St. Bernard.
27. Bernaby Dempsie.
28. Westmeath in armes.
29. Arms given by the State.
30. Bernaby Geoghegan and Teige Conon.
31. Captaine Digby slaine.
32. Dayns in arms.
33. Kildare county.
34. Oliver Dungan's prey.
35. The McDaniel prey.
36. Mac Thomas.
37. Fferrals in arms.
38. Sir James Dillon.
39. Thomas Dillon deceived.
40. Dillon appointed Colonel by Sir Phelim O'Neill.
41. Sir Phelim's letter to Sir James Dillon.
42. The Conaghtmen.

III.

31. Drogheda leager raised.
32. Kilsallehan skirmish - 500 killed.
33. Ormond-General for his Majesty.
34. Ormond cheated the Irish.

IV.

34. Gerrott Fennell.
35. Dorchy, spie for Ormond.
36. Dillons, Taafs, and Moores.
37. Clanricarde's behaviour.
38. The Lord Forbush [Forbes].
39. Clanricarde for the Parliament.
40. The Ulstermen's actions.
41. English and Scotts of Ulster.
42. Monroe come to Ireland.

V.

38. Hugh MacPhelim Byrne.
39. Robert Harpold, Walter Bagnall.
40. Cowardlinesse of the English.
41. Sir Simon Harquett [Harcourt] leagers Moy Castle.
42. Brave defendants.
43. The treacherie of this commander.
44. The enemy's maxeme.
45. Sir Simon, 18 commanders, and 500 [men] slaine.
46. Carrickfergus surprised.
47. Sir Phelim's courage.
48. Wise Ulsterman; Sir Robert Steward.
49. James Fleminge of Cabragh, how well behaved.
50. Four hundred men lost.
51. Lynce hill siege.
52. Bernaby Geoghegan, commander in the castle.
53. Brave defendants.
54. Five hundred men and 12 officers killed.
55. Quarter now complied with.
56. All the defendants hanged.
57. Baggall seidge.
58. A stout blackamoore.
59. Stronge faith.
60. The Moore killed, with 7 score and 20.
61. Francis FitzGerald, a Franciscan frier.
62. Geyssell seidge.
63. Viscount Clanculirry builded ordinance.
64. Geyssell leagured.
65. Teige Conon.
66. Greenfield beaten by Teige Conon.
67. How Geyssell was deserted.

VI.

48. Want of ammunition.
49. Hugh Mc Phelim, commander of Linster.
50. The nonsense of Montgerrott.
51. The disobedience of the Irish.
52. Treasonable conceit of Montgerrott.
53. Ignorant seating of soldiers.
- 54-1. Cnocterife battle.
55. Dermott Kevanagh slaine.
56. Gerrott FitzGerald killed.
57. Dutchesse of Bughingham.
58. Antrim and Castlehaue.
59. Castlehaue to Dublin caried.
60. Phillipstowne quarter.
61. An image of Our Lady made fire by Coote.
62. Not known how [Coote] was killed.
63. Sir Charles Coote's epitaph.
64. Fr. Francis Sullivan agent for Spaine.
65. Reddshanks in Ulster for the Irish.
66. Cullraghan siege.
67. Antrim's mistake.
68. Antrim prisoner by Montroe.
69. How the Irish Lords of Ulster were.
- 70-9. Sir Phelim Oneyll's eudeamours.
71. Sir Phelim stiled himself Tyrone.
72. The cause of his disrepect.
73. Congregation of Ardmac.
74. Thomas Deiz [Bishop of Meath] excommunicated.
75. The disunion of the Nugents, why.
76. Ould [Earl of] Westmeath absolved.
77. Westmeath, Dillon, and Taaff in England.

VIII.

1642.

63. Why the Irish declined.
64. The clergie sence.
65. Viscount Clannmorish, of the Bourkes, in armes.
66. Periruinge Dorchy.
67. Clannmorish deade.
68. One Barry, generall of Monster, not reall.
69. Oliver Stephens and his mother.
70. The foolerie of the mother.
71. Bravery of Stephens.
72. Liscarroll skirmishe.
73. Insiehyn prisoner.
74. Stephens acte and deathe.
75. Oliver Stephens killed at Liscarroll.

IX.

68. The Supreme Council elected, and what they be.
69. The foolerie of the Irish.
70. Why Castlehaue did relinqish the English.
71. Hugh Birne, Lientenant-Generall for a runinge armie.
72. Reformation and institution of Colonells.
73. Faction see soone.
74. Daniell O'Kahan's speech to Sir Phelim Roe.
75. General Owen Oneyll's frigate arrived.

X.

75. Tyrconnell's skirmish.
76. The Ulstermen in a poore condition.
77. Owen Oneyll appointed Generall.
78. [Daniel O'Kahan] a brave linguiste.
79. Daniel Kahan's valor.
80. Leysley's opinion and feare.
81. General Owen Oneyll knew Leysley to be the author.
82. Oneyll's letter to Leysley.
83. Leysley goen for Scotland.
84. Colonells of Ulster.

XI.

83. The supreme counccells suspicion of Owen Oneyll.
84. Preston arrived.
85. Preston chosen Generall.
86. Bowltun's opinion of the Irish.
87. General Preston marched to take garrisons.
88. Garrisons yielded.
89. Preston's first treasonable faction.
90. Cluncourie skirmish.
91. Edward Tuite killed.
92. Captain Bernaby Geoghegan's opinion.

XII.

88. Owen O'Neill commands march to Cluncise.
89. Cluncise skirmish.
90. Hugh O'Neill taken prisoner.

90. Francis Sullenan.
91. Richard Ferrall.
92. John Bourke.
92. General Owen O'Neill and the keraghts.

XIII.

93. Daniel O'Kahan in action.
94. Daniell O'Kahan murdered.
95. Richard Bellinge, poet.
95. Fitzpatricke executed.

XIV.

97. General Owen O'Neill at Kilkenny.
97. Sir Phelim O'Neill, now Colonel.
98. Don Antonio and Captain Deoran.
99. Gerald Cron FitzGerald from Flanders.
99. His actions in the county of Kildare.
100. Con Mac Cormack O'Neill, and Shane O'Kahan.

XV.

101. Services in Connaught and at Athlene.
102. Don Diego, Mac Thomas, Roger Moore.
102. Christopher Gawly killed.
102. Sir James Dillon, Governor of Westmeath.
103. Lientenant-Colonel Brian Ferrall.
104. Roconnell skirmish.
105. Andrene Tuite taken prisoner and escaped.
106. The losse at Roconnell.
107. David Shorne, a German carpenter.
108. Roundheads slaughtered.
109. A young gentleman of the Dillons slaine.
110. A seminge treason

XVI.

- 111-112. Timolin quarter.
113. Arthur Fox bravely behaved himself.
114. The siege of Rosse.
115. The battle of Ballibegg.
116. A sound advice of Hugh McPhelim.
117. What Thomas Preston [did] in this action.
117. Thomas escaped.
117. Sir Morgan Kevanagh killed.
117. Colonel Cullin prisoner.
118. Prestonian treachery.
119. Camp near Burrish, county of Catarlogh.
120. Defence of Rosse.

XVII.

1643.

121. Treason between Montgerrot and Preston.
122. Ballinakill taken by Preston.
123. Cloghla skirmish in Monster.
124. Agents for his Majestie.
125. Sir Robert Thibott.
126. Moore fostered Sheane Oneyll, late Tyrone.
126. Mellefonte, a Monesterio of S. Bernard's order.

XVIII.

127. First Cessation with Ormond.
128. Timolin and Rathnel won by Mac Thomas.
129. Castlehaven's treasonable mercie.
129. Ballilinan taken from English and Scotch garrison.
129. Burrosse, Commander of Dullarstown.
130. Captain FitzGerald's courage.
131. Dullarstown taken.
132. Castlehaven, patricidius.

XIX.

133. General Owen O'Neill at Portlester.
134. Portlester skirmish.
135. Brave courage of comon souldiers.
137. Owen Oneyll's speeche.
138. General Owen O'Neill's merits.
139. Manisterenin an Abbey of S. Bernard.

XX.

140. First Cessation conehended 15 Septembris 1643.
141. Thirty thousand pounds, and 800l. to the Naase garrison.
141. Ormond's tricks.
142. Exchange of prisoners.
142. Colonel Cullin cheated by the Councell.
142. Daniell Oge Kevanagh, how by the Councell abused.
143. The Councell's proeedinge in dividing quarters.
144. Garrisons taken by Fa. Thomas Fleming.
145. Costllagh, Taaffe, Walter Dungan, and Dillon.

XXI.

146. Poor condition of Irish nation.
147. Clanricarde, Tomond, Castlelagh, and Taaffe.
147. Those peeres will not sweare the oath of allegiance.
148. Injustice to ancient Irish.
149. Scarampo arrived.
149. A wise man.
149. Edmond Dempsie, consecrated [Bishop of Laghlin].
149. Emer McMahan, consecrated Bishop of] Clogher.
150. Assembly ordains model of government.
151. Bellings, agent for a Nuncio [1644].
152. Bellinge's character.
153. The diversitie of motives.
154. A strange passage.
155. Redshanks gone to Scotlande [1644].
156. Author's observations as to dates.

XXII.

1644.

157. The Councell debate on the war and commanders.
157. Castlehaven to Ulster.
157. His character.
158. Clanricarde and Coote cousins.
158. Galway Fort an ancient Monastery of S. Augustine.
159. A brave and faithful subject Clanricarde.
159. Clauricarde and Ormond.
159. Colonel Bourke disbanded.
160. A brave armie.
160. A tiplinge Commander.
160. Fyana skirmish.
161. Captain FitzGerald escaped.
162. Fyana burned.
163. Preparations in Westmeath and King's County.
164. General Owen O'Neill and Castlehaven.
165. General O'Neill's advice.
166. Castlehaven at Blackwater.
167. Blackfoord skirmish.

XXIII.

168. General O'Neill marches to Muncaghan.
168. David [Shorne], the German, taken prisoner.
169. General O'Neill's advice to Castlehaven.
170. Treason of Castlehaven, Leinster, Zeudo-General.
171. Castlehaven flies to Cavan.
172. General O'Neill left alone.
173. Henry and Brian Roe O'Neill pursue the enemy.
174. Castlehaven given 30,000l. for the expedition.
174. Loss of moytie of army by Castlehaven.
175. Castlehaven proved traytor.

XXIV.

176. Affront to Antrim by Supreme Council.
177. Bravery of the Irish Scots in Scotland.
177. Edenborough skirmish.

XXV.

178. Bellings arrives in Ireland.
178. Renucini, Prince and Archbishop of Fermo.
178. Belling's tragedy.
179. The Queen of England's inticing speech.
180. Renucini sends Spindola precursor to Ireland.
181. Spindola came to Kilkenny.
181. The Queen of England advises Nuncio's return to Rome.
182. Death of Spindola.

XXVI.

183. Ormond created Marquess, and Lord Lieutenant.
184. Fiction, collusion, and treachery against the King.
185. Commission from the King to Clammorgan [Glamorgan].
186. Taaffe, General in Conaght, and how he behaved.
187. Taaffe disbanded.
187. Archbishop [Quelly] of Tuam, General.
188. Treason of Sir James Dillon.
188. [Archbishop Quelly] executed at Sligo.

XXVII.

189. Castlehaven, General for Munster under Supreme Council.
190. Actions of Insiehyne.
191. Bryan taken prisoner, died in Kilkenny.
191. Thought to have been poisoned.
192. Castlehaven's treachery.
193. Two Generalls by faction of one party at once in Preston, and Castlehaven.
194. First treason of Captain Fennell for Caperquinn.

XXVIII.

195. Nuncio arrives at Kilkenny.
196. Digby arrived to Ireland.
.. His treason.
197. Digby, godfather to one of Ormond's brood.
.. Ormond's Mercuries, Taaffe and Costellagh.
198. Peace concluded with Clanmorgan.
199. Clanmorgan imprisoned at Dublin.
200. Clanmorgan's peace rejected.
201. MacGillacoinny, Provincial of Friars Minors.

Book II.

Chapter I.

1645.

202. Ould Laurence Esmond, Governor of Duncannon.
- 202.* Siege of Duncannon.
203. Captain Laurence Loran.
204. Duncannon surrendered.
.. Oliver Darcy, afterwards Bishop of Dromore.
.. Ormonde's loyalty.
205. Thomas Roche made Governor of Duncannon.

II.

206. Clanmorgan's wife, daughter of Earl of Tomond.
207. Colonel Adams, Governor of Bonrattie.
.. The first stringe of Ormonde against Clanmorgan.
208. The second stringe, to deceive loyalists.
209. Three armies commanded to the field.
- [210.] Richard Ferrall, by Owen O'Neill made Colonel and soe is Captain Lewes Moore.
- [211.] Muskrie's partiality.
212. Lientenant-Colonel Bernaby Geoghegan killed.
213. He is interred at Limerick.

III.

214. General Preston in Conaght.
.. Leagers Roscommon.
216. Garrison surrenders.

IV.

1646.

217. General Owen O'Neyll in the North.
.. General Montroe's army.
218. Lagan army under Sir Robert Steward.
219. Emulation between Montroe and Steward.
- 220-21. General Neyll's oration at Benborbe.

V.

222. Montgomery and Montroe. Generals at Benborbe.
223. The battle of Benborbe.
224. Combat between Henry O'Neyll and Montroe's son.
225. Loss and gain at Benborbe.
226. Slaughter at Benborbe.
227. Ormond and Montroe.
.. A brave summ [100,000.] to Ormond.
228. Roger Maguire and Phelim Mac Tuhill O'Neyll.
229. Boetius Egan sent with colors to Nuncio.

VI.

230. Colloguing Digby.
231. Thomas Tyrrell, the lawyer.
.. A malicious barrister.
232. Geffry Browne, a venomous viper.
233. Commissioners to Ormond from Supreme Council.
234. Treaty with Ormond.
.. Walter Butler, Knight Baronet.
.. Montgerrott.
.. Sir Edward Butler created Lord of Galmoy.
235. Captain Art Geoghegan killed.
236. Muskrie's crastinations.
.. Bonratty surrendered.
237. Mallarny taken by Insichyune.

VII.

238. Three victorions armies in the field.
.. Preston's volubility.
239. Sir James Dillon's facility.
240. Ormond marched to Kilkenny.
.. The clergie decrees.
.. Brown's contumacy.
.. Mac Thomas and the Leinster foot.
.. Browne and Charles Kevanagh's fidelity.
241. General Owen O'Neill marching.
.. Ormond at Kilkenny.
.. Mac Thomas's gallantry.

241. Thibott Butler's irreligious resolution
242. Ormond's flight.
.. The sudaine change of affaires.
.. Preston's intended treachery.

VIII.

243. Athlone surprised by Thibott Gawly.
244. The malice of George Dillon.
245. Colonel Butler's behaviour.
.. Kilkenny Castle taken.

IX.

246. Ormond's peace rejected.
.. A new Supreme Council.
.. Preston newly sworn.
247. General Owen O'Neill in Leyse.
.. Sir John Pigott's alliance with the O'Neills.
248. The Ulster courage.
.. Bryan Dwyne saved.
.. Pigott slaine.
.. Disert taken.
249. Cause of Preston's delay.
250. A blind man might see through Preston's glass.
251. Sir James Dillon's treacherous revolt.
.. Preston's malapert juggling.

X.

252. Preston's relapses.
253. Clanricarde's engagement.
.. Such as did not sign this engagement.
.. Ormond and English and Irish factionists.
254. The Nuncio and Council stole away.
.. Preston's treason.
255. Preston's flexibility.
.. Clanricarde's character.
256. Queries against Preston.
257. Preston's poor shift.
258. Preston's wavering.
259. General Neyll's prevention.
.. Preston's second engagement to Ormonde.
260. Sir James Dillon's stratagem failed.
261. Ormond and his peere's plot interrupted.

XI.

262. Costlagh's desigine to become Catholick.
.. Costlagh reconciled.
263. The reach of General Owen O'Neill's wit.
.. Colonel Fox in Athlone.
.. The posture of the Ulster army.
.. The refraction of Galway county reduced.
264. Where Ormond and his Peeres on Christmas.
.. Ormond's flight.
265. Henry Roe's courage.
.. Sir Theophilus Jones and others prisoners.

XII.

1646-7.

266. Andrew Boy Tuite's restraint.
- .. Tuite sent into the Council.
- .. The injustice of the Council.

XIII.

267. The proportion of the Irish armies.
.. The treacherous Council newly assumed.
268. The loyallest in all Monster.
- .. Lieutenant General Butler's censeritie 269. Muskry's devilish plott.
.. His false intimation.
.. Muskry zeudo-general.
270. Muskry's character.
271. The relapsinge Councell newly assumed.

XIV.

272. Ormond's character.
273. His grandfather, Thomas Butler, Viscount Thurles.
274. Ormond bred in the bosome of Canterbury.
.. Ormond's promotion by Charles I.

XV.

275. Ormond and his traine of Peeres, disloyal.
276. Ormond's motion to the Parliament.
.. Dublin given to the Parliament.
.. Ormond's conditions.
.. Ormond goes for England.
277. His collusion.
.. His treacherous excuse.

XVI.

278. Digby's design in France.
 „ Castlehaven and Taaffe at Kilkenny.
 „ Clanricarde's collusion.

XVII

279. The Council covenant with Owen O'Neill.
 „ Sir Richard Blake factioner.
 „ Richard Fferrall, Lieutenant General.
 „ Hugh O'Neill, Major General.

XVIII.

280. Preston's tergiversations.
 „ His known treachery.
 281. The behaviour of Preston's camp.

XIX.

282. Colonel Jones' advantage and noble proceeding.
 283. The Supreme Council's object.
 „ Reformed Colonells recruiting.
 „ Antrim and Montro's is foolerie.
 „ The Council's known partialitie.
 284. The composure of the Vister armie.
 „ The Provincial Council's collusion.
 „ Sir Luke Dillon's craft.
 285. The spies deceived by General Neyll.
 „ General Neyll's partie in Sligo.
 „ Their valour and behaviour.
 286. The Vister army turned from Sligo.
 „ Alexander McColla McDonnell in Clounnell.
 „ Taaffe General in Munster.
 „ Clangarye's regiment.

XX.

288. Preston's character.
 „ His nigardnesse.
 „ Barnwall's true intelligence.
 „ Owen O'Neill's intelligence and offer.
 „ Preston's bootlesse garrisons.
 289. His small deuotion.
 290. Costlagh now Commander.
 „ Thibott Buttlar for his demeritts honored.
 „ The posture of Preston's field.
 291. The redd-shanks in a poore case.
 „ The Irish horse in distresse.
 „ The battle of Lincchill.
 292. Preston and his new commanders' fight.
 „ Cruell quarter.
 „ Charles Geoghagan.
 „ Barnwall punished for his censureitie.
 „ Preston and Council's inhumanitie.
 293. How often Preston deceaued ?

XXI.

294. The wauering intention of the Council.
 „ Ferns and Dorchy, agents.
 295. Owen O'Neill's commendations.
 „ Owen in Kilbegan.
 „ The Council neuer keep promise.
 „ Comissioners bride mutinie.
 „ How soone they breake faith.
 „ Alexander McDaniel.
 „ A tedious marche to relieue Clounnell.
 „ Insichuyne's feare.
 „ Castle Jordan.

XXII.

296. Muskry's action.
 „ Taaffe, General.

XXIII.

297. Jones in the field against Owen O'Neille.
 298. General Neyll's reasonable requeste.
 „ The impietie of the Council.
 299. Treacherie of Gouernors.
 „ General Neyll's obedience.
 „ The Council's intions.
 „ The General's stratageme.
 300. Athboy taken.
 „ Perjur'd Captains surrender it.
 „ General Neyll readie to marche to their relief.

XXIV.

301. The contestation of Jones and his auxiliaries.
 „ Their sense of Owen O'Neille.
 302. The Council's intente.
 „ General Neyll marching to Dublin by orders.

XXV.

303. General Neyll marches towards Lincchill.
 304. General Neyll's oration at Lincchill.
 305. Criticke or successful daies.
 306. The burninge of Dublin and Meath countys.
 „ Hugh O'Neill's vigilance in this expedition.
 „ The inhumanitie of the Leinster horse.
 „ Ulstermen return to Castle Jordan.
 „ They desire winter quarters.
 „ The Council's answere.
 „ General and Council for winter quarters dispute.
 307. The armie's resolution.
 „ Theyre wants and injurie considered, most regular.

XXVI.

308. The Council's knaverie.
 „ Owen O'Neill's answere to the agents.
 309. The just cause of his anger.
 „ The French agent's intimation to Owen Oueyll.

1647.

- „ Council's false accusation against Oueyll.
 310. Owen Oueyll reprouing the said accusations.
 311. Returne of French agent to Kilkenny.
 „ General Neyll disproved the Council.
 312. General Neyll's reasons rejected.
 313. Muskry tender of the enemie.
 „ The General's reply.
 „ The Vister armie scattered.

XXVII.

314. Ministers suborned by Council to murder O'Neill.

XXVIII.

315. Three or 4 regiments of General Neyll disbanded.
 „ Owen O'Neill's letter to the Council.
 316. The Council's intention in those affaires.

XXIX.

317. Character of Taaffe, General of Munster.
 318. Why this tragedie was hither reserved.

XXX.

319. Taaffe's conditions decyphered.
 „ Insichuyne a degenerat Irish.
 320. Cnocnados battle in Munster.
 321. Treachery of General Taaffe.
 „ The noble behaviour of Richard Butler.
 322. McDaniel's feates.
 „ Reddshanks killed.
 „ Alexander McDaniel prisoner.
 „ By Captaine Foordome cruelly killed.
 „ The bloody covenant of Insichuyne and Taaffe.
 „ The boldnesse of Taaffe.
 „ McDaniel's epitaph.
 323. O'Sullivan and Daniel McCarty's loyalty.
 „ Taaffe and Belling's hostile proceedings.
 „ Moygue yielded.
 324. Insichuyne with a small party taking garrisons.
 „ Major General Neylle had notice hereof.
 „ McThomas sent to Linster.

XXXI.

325. General Neyll proved prophet.
 „ The enemy in the county of Wicklow.
 „ The inhumanity of Butler and Bagnall.
 326. Crueltie of those Commanders.
 „ Council and Comanders cause destruction.

Book III.

Chapter I.

1648.

327. The Council's treacherie against Oueyll's sense.

II.

328. Ormond's wellcome to England.
 „ His continuance and flight.
 „ False surmise of factionists.

III.

329. The cause why Ormond left England.
 „ How he thrived in Paris.
 „ The Nobility's loyalty.
 „ Ormond's faction with the Queen.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

330. Ormond's Mercury, Col. Barry, arrived to Ireland.
 „ How deccaned in Jones.
 „ Insichynne's character.

IV.

331. The inconstancie of Insichynne.
 „ Clergy executed by Insichynne.
 „ Joins now with Ormond.

V.

332. How the Councell used vizards.
 „ Their joining with Insichynne, against oath, and disclaiming their associate Owen Oueyll.

VI.

333. The noble resolution of Colonel Jones.
 „ He denies Ormond's conjunction.
 334. The Assembly's acte to send agents, and how?
 „ The wronge exhibited to the Spauiard.
 „ What the Spanish agent said of Ormond.
 „ Sir Richard Blake.

VII.

335. Blacke design of Councell against Oueyll.
 „ And how prevented.

VIII.

336. Agents for France.
 „ All wayes attempted for faction.
 „ Sedacing of regulars.
 „ Thomas Makiernan's prayse.

IX.

337. The foolerie of the Councell.
 „ Mediation of the Queene of England.
 „ Marchant, Commissary General.
 „ Fa. Redmond Caron's illegal powers.
 338. The Council's deceit and colation.
 „ They onely desire O'Neill's disobedience.

X.

339. General Neyll's motion rejected.

XI.

340. Abuses offered General Oueyll by the Councell.
 „ They lay in waite of Generall Neyll's life.
 „ Treatie of Cessation, and why?

XII.

341. Supream Councell incline to Insichynne.
 342. Insichynne's bloudie behaviour.
 „ Francis Mathewe executed.
 „ Barry, Ormonde's Mercury.
 343. The Councell's ability to aid the enemy, but to friends plead povertie.

XIII.

344. The Councell brings in forraigners and enemies insteade of Confederats and loyal servants.

XIV.

345. Preston and Montgerrott lost 3 battles
 „ Remarks on Castlehaven, Taaffe, and General Neyll.
 „ Ingratitude of supposed Catholicks.

XV.

346. Agents for Insichynn's Cessation.
 „ Cessation concluded.
 „ Means for 8,000.
 „ Four thousand onely appeared.
 347. Congregation declare against Cessation.
 „ The Councell's disobedience.
 „ The promptitude of Prestou to do naught.
 348. The Nuncio and clergy to be apprehended.
 „ The clergie excommunication.
 349. Excommunication sent to Kilkenny and published.
 „ Castlehaven and Dr. Fennell, excommunicated.
 350. The politick observation of General Neylle.
 „ He gathereth his armie.
 „ Iveagh, Sir Phelim O'Neyle, and McDaniel, apostats.
 „ The disobedience of the keraghts proved fatal.
 „ Preston with a brave armie in Roscrea.

XVI.

351. Owen Oueill's advice to the Nuncio.
 „ His intention touching his Lordship's safety.
 352. My Lord Nuncio did send for Mac Thomas.

352. Fitz Gerald's, descended from House of Florence.

„ My Lord Nuncio's zeale towards Mac Thomas.
 „ The flint obdurateness of Mac Thomas.

353. The excommunication published in Roscrea.

„ Mac Thomas's behaviour there.
 „ The irreligious oath desired by Preston.
 „ Richard Geoghegan's brave resolution.

354. My Lord Nuncio in Kileolgan.

„ Strength of Owen O'Neill's army, and power of his enemies.
 „ The Catholick General's courage.

355. Peter Walshe, apostat Fryer, author of the Apeale.
 „ Richard Lalesse, attorney.

„ Apostolos refutatorios.

356. A letter for his Holinesse from my Lord Nuncio.

357. Propositions exhibited by Nuncio and clergie.

358. Reasonable conditions of the clergie.

359. The Councell's gyrynge answare.

„ The faithlesse Councell.

„ The Councill's impossible conditions.

XVII.

360. The brave title of the Supream Councell.

„ Their bloudie covenant.

361. The Councell's illusion.

„ The grounds of the clergie for their diffidence.

362. Characters of Preston and Taaffe.

„ Richard Bellings' acts with Taaffe.

363. Barristers, druggists, and poets in the Council.

„ Gerrott Fienell of greate concumerment with Taaffe.

364. The Vister armie, the only supporte of Ireland.

„ Clauricarde appointed Generall of Conaght.

„ 20,000l. did the Nuncio spend, and wherefore?

„ The Councell's condition not observable.

365. Objections against the Councell's answare.

„ Injustice of the Councell to General O'Neyle.

„ Preston and Castlechaun traitors.

366. The Councell's illusion herein.

367. Prelates taught to be vary of Preston and Taaffe.

„ The Councell, perjured in their declaration.

„ Maigne assured to Insichynne.

368. Nobilitie and prelats of Monster, excluded from government.

„ The Councell's answer is to gyre the clergie.

„ The clergie motiues for issuinge their censures.

XVIII.

369. The Catholick Generall doe marche to Kilhigan.

„ The Dillons' intencion towards Owen Oueyll.

XIX.

370. Preston's diabolical intent.

„ The Nuncio escaped.

„ Preston's blacke designe against the Nuncio.

371. The inhumanitie of Preston towards the innocent.

„ Whoe are Preston's enemy.

XX.

372. Treachery of Ambassadors.

„ Ormond and his complices.

373. Dr. Tyrrell's letter.

374. Another letter sent unto My Lord Nuncio.

„ This proves all our former surmises of those men.

375. The Councell and their adherents factionists.

„ The Councell's knavery discovered.

376. Letter to Owen O'Neill from Major Mortimer.

XXI.

377. Ormond could not choose but prone bad.

378. Querics against the Council and agents.

„ Ormond the sole cause of the King's miseries.

„ The foolerie of Prince and Queene.

„ My Lord Jermyn's bribe, and how worked.

„ How the refractorie clergie will be reputed.

„ Ormond the God of those Philistines.

379. Decree against Preston and Taaffe's chaplains.

XXII.

380. The clergie vindication against the Councell.

„ Whoe signed the declaration.

381. How they taxed the Nuncio and clergie.

382. Eighteen Bishops did signe declaration.

„ The end of the Cessation.

„ Councell, a mixture of spirituall and temporall.

„ Practices used by malignant party.

383. The Canon Lawe prescribes the subordination.

„ False traitors.

385. Subsidy from clergy transferred to Insichynne.
 " The treachery of the Council.
 386. [The Cessation] not concluded by authority.
 " The conclusers of the Cessation [were] periurers.
 " Roe Supreme Council then extante.
 387. Their proclamation [of Cessation] not to be feared.
 388. The effects of their Apaele.
 389. Apostolls and their nature.
 " Nuncio confirms the Excommunication.
 390. The malignitie of the Cessation.
 " Preston now stronge, but against his foes weake.
 391. Imitators of Henry VIII.
 392. The Supreme Council's heretical oathe.

XXIII.

393. The Council is cause of all this distemper.
 394. What the oathe of Association imports.
 " It is contrarie to this last now sworne.
 " Obiections against the Council's oathe.

XXIV.

195. The Council void of shame.
 " What the Council is qualified with.
 " Henry the 8 there exemplaire.

XXV.

196. To frame a religious oathe, expounde and comute the same, are acts of ecclesiasticks, but now
 Council do assume the same to themselves.
 " Clanmalir, Mac Thomas, Sir Walter Dungan, Sir Thomas Esmond, and Shanky, ministers of the diabolical oathe.
 397. The validtie of the Excommunication.
 " The ignorant behaviour of the Council and its divines.
 " The true Canon Lawe.
 398. [The Council threaten] a greater persecution than that of Queene Elizabeth.
 399. The behavior of the Council in this acte.

XXVI.

400. Oneyll's forces less by two-thirds than Preston's.
 " The Generall's humanitie.
 " Owen O'Doghdi's courage.
 " He caried away 80 horse.
 " Fr. Dominick Dillon's contumacie.
 " The Catholicke Generall's declaration.
 " The Nuncio went to Galway.
 401. Roger Maguire and Lewis Moore to Lowe Linster.
 " Bryan McPhelim and Charles Kevanagh did adhere unto Owen [O'Neill].
 402. Diego Preston is sent to Lowe Linster.
 " Ballikelly treacherously taken.
 " The Vlstermen hindered to kill their enemies.
 403. Phelim McTuhill's gallantry.
 " John Coghlan's mischievous intent.

XXVII.

404. Clanricard against Oneyll in Conaght.
 " Dermott O'Bryan died.
 405. Ferrall how used by Clanricard and Taaffe.
 " Goes to the countie of Longford.
 " Clanricard's intention.

XXVIII.

406. The new confederacie of Owen Oneyll in Conaght.
 " Marched with a small armie to Conaght.
 " Clanricard and Taaffe's feare.
 407. Composure and strenght of Conaght armie.
 " The Conaght armie distracted. Why?
 " 300*l*. pension for infringeinge oathe and covenant.
 408. Clanricard's [claim] to Aghananire, and how did loose the possession.
 " [Aghananire] now is the bribe of perjury.
 " Unconstant and waninge Conaghtmen.
 409. Preston did leaguer Athlone.
 " The inhumanitie of Preston's armie.
 " Sir James Dillon's ungody proclamation.
 " The good and bad fryers.
 " The good banished, and the bad continued.
 410. Sir James Dillon's genealogie.

XXIX.

411. Purcell and Clanricarde leaguer Athlone.
 " Coghlan and Kelly agents to Owen Oneyll.
 412. Redd-coates chased from Conaght tower.
 " Captain Gawly came to Clanricard.
 " How maliciously used.
 " Clanricard's treachery, by Purcell's meanes.
 " Gawly's speech unto him reasonable.

413. Clanricard's dishonourable excuse.
 " His offer of composition.
 " Clanricard coacted conditions for Athlone.
 " Athlone yielded.
 414. An armie sent to Balimore.
 " Oathe of the factionists there.
 " Captains Brimingham Daly in Athlone.
 " Clanricarde to Motanaheny.
 " The inhumanitie of Clanricarde.
 415. His impious and dishonourable actions.

XXX.

416. The hereticall proceedings of the Council.
 " The Nuncio's Dean and Fr. Paul Kinge.
 " Peter Walshe's extraction.
 417. Thomas Mac Kiernan, Provincial [of Friars Minors] committed by Richarde Bourke.
 " His sufferings in Athlone.
 418. Enlargement of Lord Montgomery from prison.
 " The covenant and morgage of Athy.
 " Earl of Westmeath liberated.
 419. Diego Preston leaguers Athy.
 " Generall Neyll's oven there.
 " Wise underminers.
 " How they thrived.
 " The assailants acted as fools or slanes.

XXXI.

420. A poast sent for Generall Oneyll.
 " Arruinge to Balimore.
 " The apostats flye.
 " The Generall's souldierlike opinion.
 " In severall wayes they flye.
 " Colonel of horse of Insichynne's taken prisoner.
 421. Offenders pardoned through Ladic Clanmaliric.
 422. Clanmaliric and Bernaby Dempisie.
 423. Diego Preston's cowardize.
 " Sheane O'Hagan's noble behauoir.
 424. A letter fraught with treason and faction.
 425. An exposition of this letter.
 426. FitzGerald's genealogy.
 " Owen Oneyll more English than [some of] those.
 427. Dungan's extraction.
 428. The descent and progenitors of those subscribinge unto this instrument against the Catholicke Generall.
 " Sir Robert Thalbott—how made gentleman.
 429. How the Vlstermen were deceaned.
 430. Roger Maguire and Lewis Moore come to Athy.
 " Thomas Ouenton's ingratitude.
 431. Hugh Oneyll commanded to take Ballilehan.
 " The castle won.
 " A riche place.
 " Ouenton committed prisoner.
 " To feare a friende brought all this mischief.

XXXII.

432. The Generall easie to be satisfied.
 " Richard Buttlr's oathe.
 " How easie a matter was it to dislodge Preston.
 " They had not the courage to expecte the numbering of his armie.
 433. This pusillanimitie is Excommunication fruite.
 " Prestonian inuention.
 434. Thirty Prestonian horse unciuillie behane.
 " Bryan Roe not pleased, and why?
 " Ralliers taken prisoners.
 " The Generall's fatherlie care of them.
 " Are dismissed with horse and armes.
 435. The ciuilitie of this campe.
 " Mr. Sweetman's intimation.
 " The impious principle of Preston.
 436. Richard Buttlr of Killoosenhan taken prisoner.
 437. Clanricard's intente towards my Lord Nuncio.
 " Three thousand pounds from the towne of Galway.
 " False gassetts and attestations of the factionists.
 " The Catholicke Generall's true intimation.

XXXIII.

438. Preston tooke sanctuary; if the lawe were obserued as in Catholicke contries, that would not doe, he beinge a traytor.
 " Preston's power ever in destruction of good men.
 " The condition of the poore friors of Stradbally.
 " Cruelty of Preston's troopers.
 " Fr. Paull wounded.
 439. Faire words but abominable deeds.
 " False promiser and worse complacency.
 " Vlster souldiers' feare of Excommunication.

440. The Colonell and Fr. Paale's conference.
 „ Preston's order against imunity of Holy Church.
 „ Fryers' quarter sweared but not complied with.
 441. Perjurie comon with the factionists.
 „ How Preston's troopers behaved in the Abbey.
 „ Colonell Synott, a braue instrument of periurie.
 „ The miracle and God's indignation.
 442. Kate Tyrrell, Dr. Shiell's wife: Preston's offer unto her.
 „ Rejected.
 „ Second time attempted, rejected.
 „ 3. Attempted.
 „ Rejected.
 „ 4ly. By a letter attempted.
 „ By a braue resolution relected.
 „ The crueltie and inhumanitie of Preston.
 „ More then a woman's courage.
 „ Poore sickbrained Preston.
 443. Captain Hagan's courage.
 „ What Captain Hagan did acte against them.
 „ A dispatche sent for reliefe.
 444. The ordinance against the Monesterie.
 „ A crosse planted in the steeple by Fr. Thomas Brimingham.
 „ What doe Preston with the crosse.
 „ How well Preston improved in religion.
 „ His opinion of the crosse.
 „ Costillagh became gunner.
 „ His joy for killinge fryers.
 „ The Prior's attestation touchinge this pointe.
 445. The access of Puritants to Preston.
 „ Cosbye's misenformation.
 „ Preston's order against the fryers.
 „ A petition to Preston by Fr. James Geoghegan.
 446. Cosby's quarter at the surrender of Stradbally.
 „ Adam Loftus, solicitor for the quarter.
 „ Generall Oneyll's donation to the fryers.
 447. Preston's behaviour towards the fryer.
 „ Dillon's verdict against the fryer.
 „ His non-sense in religion discovered.
 „ Extranagant proceedings of Preston and Dillon.

XXXIV.

448. Preston, against S. Dominicke and S. Francis.
 „ The reliefe is sent for to Reban.
 „ Preston's colusion.
 „ His desire to drinke fryers blonde.
 „ Fr. John Barnwall and Fr. John Dormer.
 449. The poore posture of the defendants [in the Monastery].
 450. Phelim McTahill's undaunted marche.
 „ Horse and foote putt to flight.
 „ Captain Hagan's courage.
 „ Seven score killed, and spoile taken.
 451. Nenagh taken.
 „ Falkland forte taken, and how?
 „ Coghlan's cowardize.
 452. Birr taken.
 „ The garrison of Stradbally stole away.
 „ The Generall's proclamation.
 „ Preston's flight.
 „ Major Doghardy's speeche to Preston.
 452. Tongue-tyed dastardly cowards.
 453. How Preston used Hugh Sheill.
 „ The Catholicke Generall's letter unto Preston.
 „ Preston's continuing treacherie.
 „ An unindifferent exchange of prisoners.

XXXV.

454. A runninge armie indeede.
 „ Richard Buttlr's treachery.
 „ Insichyne's cruell and bloudie quarter.
 455. Message to Lieutenant-Generalli Ferrall.
 „ The Catholicke Generall's suspition of Ferrall.
 „ His delays the cause of noe service.
 „ Clanricard here arriued.
 456. Linster and Monster forces marched to Birr.
 „ The siege of Falkland forte.
 „ Dillon, Sir John Dungan, and Morish FitzGerald
 „ Lisagh Ferrall taxed with my Lord Dillon's escape.
 457. Clanricard's accustomed treacherie.
 „ A foolish Captain, disobedient and treacherous.
 „ Falkland forte yielded.
 458. The skirmish.
 „ A madd courage of drunken sotts.
 „ Their desearned miscarriage.—Lewcs Moore and Con Oneylle wounded.

XXXVI.

459. The Ulster souldiers offer to beate the enimie.
 460. The Councell of warres motives for battell.
 461-2. The Generall's speeche.
 463. The Catholicke armie dislodged.
 „ Military proceedings at Kilkenny, Kibbegan.
 „ Crowe, and Baskueagh.

XXXVII.

464. Owen O'Neill offended by the Dillons.
 „ The Provinciall enlarged.
 465. Faghny Ferrall's plainesse.
 „ The Generall proued prophet.

XXXVIII.

466. The Cessation continuance.
 „ Peter Walsh, apostat fryer.
 „ Walsh's Quercos were fathered upon the Bishope of Ossory.
 467. This is our case as Confederates.
 „ The continuance of Catholicke religion in Ireland.
 468. Poore beggers won by baites.
 469. Walsh his letter.
 470. A comentarie upon the former letter.
 „ Walsh his doctrine.
 471. Against the Gospell.
 „ What nuns were obedient to superiors.
 „ Publican and Pharesey.
 „ The upright clergy are denounced as sinfull.
 472. Rosse Geoghegan, Bishop of Kildare, persecuted by Peter Walshe.
 „ Peruse this against Walshe and his party.
 „ Walshe's diuines.
 473. A description of those diuines.
 „ Peter Walshe.
 „ John Dormer.
 „ Antony Sweetman.
 „ James Delaware.
 „ James Thalbot, Dr. Thalbot.
 „ Paule Synot.
 „ Symon Wafer.
 „ Bonventura and Lodowicke.
 „ Thomas Balie.
 „ Thomas FitzGerald's daughters.
 „ Detracting rhymes by Thomas Deaz, Bishop of Meath.
 „ Oliver Deaz and the clergie of Meath.

XXXIX.

474. Roger Maguire with some of the Catholicke armie marched to Jamestowne, and what there?
 „ Carradrumruske besieged.
 „ A manly assaulte.
 „ Roger Maguire killed.
 „ His omission in relation to his office.
 475. The forwardnesse of the assayllants.
 „ Their consternations and lamentations.
 „ How tender of their promise.
 „ Roger Maguire in Cavan interred.
 476. Colonel Sheane O Kenedy and Donogh O'Con
 „ Laghlin O Donnellan's humanitie.
 „ Colonel Kenedy goes to Upper Ormond.
 „ The Captain Ruairk's treacherie.

XL.

477. Ormond verie busie.
 „ Deceitfull intimation of Ormond.
 „ His contrarie oathes.
 478. Royall esteeme of Councell towards Ormond.
 „ The Zeudo-Councill's colusion.
 „ Metamorphosis of government by Ormond.
 479. The assembly summoned by no power.
 „ The madness of this Zeudo-Councell.
 480. The Anti-Assembly subject to Ormond.
 „ The faction intend to make Ormond King.
 481. Articles granted by Ormond to Catholicks.
 „ Worse than the Oathe of Supremacie.
 482. This smooth knave and cycophant Catholicks.
 „ Treatment of Religious in Kilkenny.
 „ Their treason is for obeying their superiors.
 483. The Assembly's warrant against fryers.
 „ Excommunications against the Councell.
 484. Act of Waterford Congregation against the Peace.
 485. The excommunications of Bulla Cœnæ Domini and Canons against the Councell.
 486. The Nuncio and his Congregation are only publishers of former laws.
 „ Assembly and Councell involved in Canons.
 „ Edmund Reyly, Vicar-General of Dublin, deposed, and Lawrence Archbold assumed by the Councell, Assembly, etc.

XLI.

487. Peace concluded with Ormond and Inchiquin.
488. The Commissioners by Ormond intrusted to the Government.

XLII.

489. The Assembly, in their Articles, make no mention of the Regulars.
490. Great Ormond's gyryinge grante to Regulars.
,, Insichyne's engagement as addition to the former.

XLII [A.]

491. Puritant Colonells become of Ormond's party.
492. All eqnitie banished by Ormond.
,, The chief charge of Strafford's beheadinge.

Book IV.

Chapter I.

1649.

493. The contrarieties in Caron's power.
,, Statute of the Order [of S. Francis.]
494. Caron in Kilkenny.
,, Duration [of] Commissary Visitator's power].
,, The extraordinarie charge of Caron.
495-504. Fr. John Ponce and Archbishop of Dublin.
,, Father Ponce's answer to Father Peter Walsh.
505. Sir Thomas Esmond, a son of Lawrence Esmond.
,, The cause of Charles Kevanagh's restraints.
,, His escape.

II.

506. Hugh McPhelim's long restraint.
,, Major Geoghegan, Mathew and Edward Geoghegan enlarged by Owen O'Neill.
507. Strange proceedings of Ormond.

III.

508. Ormond's liberality in granting custodiams.
,, The generous act of Major Nicholas Mortemer.
,, Mortemer gott custodiams, but all to noe purpose.
,, Democracy introduced by the late Council.
509. Ormond's letter to Jones.
,, His character of Cromwell and the Parliament.
,, His offers to Jones.
510. Answer of Jones to Ormond.
,, He calls Ormond's authority in question.
,, Jones taxes him of deserting the King.
511. Ormond's reply to Jones.
,, He means Owen O'Neylle.
,, He gives for excuse that he was forced to surrender Dublin for the Vlster armie, and the foreigner is my Lord Nuncio.
,, His jealousie with Owen Oneylle.
512. Letter from Jones to Ormond.
,, The cause of Ormond's second reply.
,, He is verie suspicious of Ormond's signes.
,, His opinion of those Catholics, that they stande still bounde to the oath of Association.
,, Owen Oneylle should be deluded.
,, Jones answers ad hominem.
,, Taxes Ormond with the King's beheading.
,, Taunt for the surrender of Dublin.
513. Ormond's desire and jealousie.
,, His opinion of Owen Oneyll.
,, Positive contradiction in Ormond's offers.
,, What he was taxed with by Jones.
514. Major Generall Hugh Oneylle.
,, Ballinalecke won.
,, Walter Dardis appointed Gouvernor.
,, The feare of Ormond and Inchiquin.
515. Extraordinary courage of a handful of men.
516. Thomas Husse revolted.
,, Bryan Roe O'Neill taken prisoner.
517. He was rescued by Richard Buttler.
,, By means of my Lady of Thurles released.
518. The poore condition of [the Marquess of] Antrim.
,, Bryan McPhelim's generositie.
,, Antrim did looke to be Generall, but failed.
519. Clangary taken prisoner, and his party killed.

IV.

520. Colonell Jones' prophesie to Ormond pruned true.
521. Roger Moore's foolerie.
,, Owen Oneyll's and Roger Moore.

522. Ormond's preparations.
,, Edmond Buttler's army.
,, Excommunicated by this act.
,, Patricke Money.
523. Buttler's order against Money.
,, His intention in the former order.

V.

524. Ormond's intent in favor of Parliament of England.
525. Maryborough heseiged.
,, Lieutenant Daniell Oneyll's treacherous subornation.
,, Terlagh Oneyll and Meilds Reyly revolted from religion and countrie.
,, Captain Phelim Oneyll's generous resolution.
,, The constancy of Captain Phelim Oneyll.
526. Reban demolished.
,, Five companies in Athy.
,, The treacherie of Patrick Modorra McCamell.
,, Captain McCana prisoner; 30 killed.
527. John McJames Bryan, Governor of Maryborough.
,, Athy summoned.
,, Conditions granted by Ormond.
,, Purcell opposed the conditions.
528. Captain Hagan's stout answer.
,, Honorable conditions now granted.
,, Captain Hagan's character.
529. Malice of Purcell.
,, Misbehaviour of an Vlster trooper.
,, Captain Hagan's vigilancy.
,, Mac Thomas' answer.
,, Captain Hagan's answer and challenge.
530. McThomas did cudgel the Lieutenant.
,, Manly desire of Captain Shean O'Hagan.
,, Redmond Mellan dismissed.
,, The friars of Athy committed by Purcell.
531. Captain Hagan's several suits to Castlehaven.
,, Inhumaine proceedings of Purcell.
,, Captain Hagan's courage.
,, Sir Walter Butler.
532. Purcell's cruell intention.
,, McThomas his [O'Hagan's] good friend.
,, The Vlster party's loss of this.
,, Captain Hagan marched to Vlster.
533. The continuance of this armie neere Athy.
,, Sir Robert Thalbott against the clergie.
534. The armie take garrisons.

VI.

535. Caron and his apostate friers.
,, Safe conducte sent to the Provinciall.
,, [The Provinciall] fled away.
536. The Provinciall's proposals to Caron.
537. Irregular proceedings of Caron.
538. Archbishop of Dublin's certificate.
,, Castlehaven's cruelty.
539. Castlehaven, Caron, and their adherents, excommunicate.
540. Paul Geoghegan's letter to Father Patrick Brennan.
,, Caron's answer to Geoghegan.
541. Barnwall's intimation of mutiny.
,, His colloquinge, halteinge.
542. The refractorie fryers.
,, Edmund Buttler's behaviour.
,, Caron goes to Rosse.
,, Father James Tyrrell and Father O'Mellaghlin.
,, What other fryers obedient.
,, Caron's Zeudo-Chapter.
543. Sweetman, Plunkett, and Dormer, denounced as apostates by the Provinciall.
544. Thomas Makyernan's behaviour.

VII.

545. Reflections on Ormond's movements.
546. Sir Rob. Talbott commanded to Glanmalure.
547. Ormond oblivious of his covenant.
548. Agents from Finglasse to Owen Oneylle.
,, Sir Richard Barnwall's voluntary perjurie.
549. Ormond permits Oneyll to buy powder.
,, Colonell Monke.
550. Drogheda and Trim yielded to Inchiquin.
,, Vlster partie sent to Dundalk for amunition.
,, Crueltie of Insichyne.
,, Captain Sheane O'Hagan prisoner.

VIII.

551. Ormond and Inchiquin's covenant with O'Neill.
552. Mac Thomas deposed by Ormond.
,, Sir William Vaghan, of Inchiquin's party.

553. MacThomas, Commissary-General.
 „ Luke and Francis Taaffe.
 „ Captain Christopher Reyllie's character.
 „ Betrayed Ballisonan to the Parliament.
 „ Sir James Dillon's senceritie for the cause.
 „ Reyllie's behaviour.
 554. Ormond's breach of covenant.
 „ His false declaration.
 555. Sir George Montroe marches with Scotts to Inis-killen.
 „ Sir William Cole's conditions with Monro.
 „ Sir Charles Coote addresses Generall Neyll.
 556. The poor condition of General Neyll.
 „ His politticke application.
 557. Coote's message.
 „ Generall Neyll's reasons for accepting Coote's invitation.
 „ The Scotts raise the siege of Londonderry.
 „ Coote's friendly ostentation and intertainment.
 „ Generall Neyll poisoned by Coote.

IX.

558. Ormond's party found fault with Generall Neyll.
 „ They were themselves guiltie of all crime.

X.

559. Good and bad gamsters.
 „ Colonell Jones wisely behaved himself.
 „ He proved a good gamster.
 560. Character of Ormond's campe at Finglasse.
 „ Ormond's intent.

XI.

561. Ormond's smiling fortune.
 „ He is regarded as an oracle.
 562. Now begins his frowning fortune.
 „ The division of his armie.
 „ Major Charles Geoghegan.
 „ The senseless or treacherous siege of Dublin.
 563. Jones' watchfull eye.
 „ Geoghegan resists; he is not relined.
 „ Ormond fled away.
 „ Vaghan killed.
 „ What Insichuynes's partie had don.
 „ Captain Richard Geoghegan killed.
 „ The Earl of Fingalle prisoner, died in durance.
 564. The defeat, 2 Aug. 1649.
 „ The intention of Ormond towards the clergy.
 „ An English captain's intimation.
 565. MacThomas, his politticke invention.
 „ Ballisonan yielded.
 „ Sir Thomas Armstronge, Commissary of Horse.
 566. Inchiquin was not at the defeat of Dublin.
 „ Ormond's rendezvonz at Tigherahan.
 „ Ormond's army to no purpose.

XII.

567. Ormond and Cromwell, and their characters.
 „ Cromwell landed.
 „ The loitering behind of Ormond.
 568. Cromwell 12,000 strong.
 „ Cromwell's principle in war.
 „ The courage of the besieged [in Drogheda].
 „ Ormond promised relief, but did not comply.
 569. The siege of Drogheda.
 570. Drogheda taken.
 „ The moat yielded.
 „ Quarter not observed.
 „ Captain Teige Conor escaped.
 „ Captains Mathew and Thomas Geoghegan killed.

XIII.

571. Sir Richard Blake's letter to the Nuncio.
 „ Blake more rigorous than Queen Elizabeth.
 „ Valentine Brown and George Dillon apostates.
 572. A friendly advice to my Lord Nuncio.
 „ The iniquitie of those quondam Catholicks.
 573. My Lord Nuncio tooke his journey for France.
 „ Ingratitude of agents.
 „ Sir Nicholas Plunkett knighted by the Pope.

XIV.

574. Ormond and Inchiquin in Kilkenny.
 „ The behaviour of the army.
 575. Agents despatched by Ormond to O'Neill.
 „ The return of the Agents.
 576. The manning of Wexford and Ross.
 „ Generall Neylle sicke.
 „ Seven thousand Ulster joine with Ormond.

XV.

577. Cromwell in Wicklow and Wexford.
 „ Governor of Wexford's character.
 „ Wexford taken.
 „ Edmund Buttler killed.
 „ Friars killed.
 578. The intended courage of Ross garrison.
 „ They are commanded to desert the place.
 579. The stupendous bridge made by Cromwell.
 „ The number of Ormond's army.
 „ His publicke mistake.
 580. Cromwell's retreat to Inishdeoge.
 „ The willingness of the Ulster army to fight.
 581. Dispute on the composure of the battle.
 „ Lientenant General Ferrall's sense.
 „ Ormond's behaviour.
 „ Cnoctagher yielded to Cromwell.
 „ Carrig yielded.

XVI.

582. Ormond proceeds to Waterford.
 „ Ormond's Mercury for treason.
 „ Arrested by the Generall, but remitted to Ormond.
 „ Sumons to Waterforde.
 583. A bribe of Charles Geoghegan's education.
 „ His constancie in a siege of Perpignan.
 584. His duel with the French General's son and killed him.
 „ His arrival in Ireland.
 585. His manly advance to his fatal service.
 „ Major Geoghegan killed.
 „ Buried in Kilkenny.
 „ His Catholicke will.
 586. Ormond's mistake.
 „ Lient.-General Ferrall routed.
 „ John Hagan taken prisoner.
 „ Passage taken by Cromwell.
 587. What in other men is treason is in Ormond a mistake.

XVII.

588. Lamentation for Generall Neylle.
 589. Results of his death.
 590. His loss to the poor Northern people.

XVIII.

591. Ormond's colution.
 „ Clonmacnoise Congregation.
 592. The facile credulitie of the Prelates.
 „ The Bishop of Clogher, etc.
 „ Acts of the Congregation, not observed.

XIX.

593. Geoghegan's motion to Sir Robert Thalbott.
 „ Geoghegan and all his men killed.
 594. The treacherous behavior of Thalbott.
 „ His base surrender.
 „ Rewarded by Ormond.
 595. The Geoghegans' honorable miscarriage.
 596. Ormond's courage.
 597. Ormond's illusory order to Walter Butler.

[Book IV.—PART II.]

Chapter I.

1650.

598. Preston going to Waterford.
 „ Bishope of Drumore [Oliver Darcy].
 599. Athy taken from Cromwell's party.
 „ The cause of breaking the Leinster party.
 „ Sir Thomas Armstrong's letter to Cromwell.
 „ Castlehauen's treacherous answer.
 „ General Ferrall and Colonel Moore depart.
 600. The Bishop of Dromore [appointed, Vice-General.
 „ Castlehauen and Armstrong march to Clarc.
 601. Leinster left naked to the enemy.
 „ John Bryan a degenerate Byrne.
 „ All garrisons belonging to Ormond yielded
 „ Munster yielded by Inchiquin's party.
 602. Kilkenny siege.
 „ The towns-men's treacherie.
 „ Sir Walter [Butler] forced quarter.
 „ Uncivil behaviour against Church's immunity „ Sir Walter dies.

II.

603. Ulster Provincial Assembly.
 „ Competition for the Generalship of Ulster.
 „ The reason of election.
 604. Bishop MacMahon, elected General.
 „ The Bishop deceived by Ormond and Clanricarde.

III.

605. Father MacKyernan's suite against Caron.
 606. Commission of the Vice-General of the Franciscan Order, disannulling Caron's authority.
 607. Father Paul King's letter against Caron.
 608. Justice was on the Provincial's side.
 Caron's letter to the Father Provincial.
 The Commissarie-General's authority.

IV.

609. Hugh Oneyll's affairs in Clonmell.
 „ Feards taken by the enemy.
 „ A party [sent] to Cahir Castle.
 „ The dispute of the Ulster party and Mr. Mathewe.
 „ His perjury.
 „ The enemy and Vlistermen fight.
 610. God's providence: a braue quarter.
 „ The Captain's gallant resolution and answer.
 611. Fennell with Hugh Oneyll in Clonmell.
 „ Longe siege.
 „ Great loss.
 „ Doubtful conceptions of Cromwell.

V.

612. Cromwell bargaines with Major Fennell.
 „ Fennell agreeed for 500l. to betray both towne and Major [Hugh O'Neill] to Cromwell.
 „ But how discovered.
 613. The Major's behaviour in this business.
 „ The Major and Fennell swear fealty to each other.
 „ Five hundred of the enemy killed.
 614. Cromwell's trouble and design.
 „ Major Oneyll's inventions.
 „ Cromwell's determination.
 „ A brave assault and great mortalitie.
 „ The enemy repulsed.
 615. Thomas Preston's faithlesse compliancie.
 „ Major Oneyll with his party marched away.
 „ Cromwell mightie pensive.
 „ His opinion of Major Oneyll.
 „ The enemy intred the towne.
 „ A garrison left there.
 „ Cromwell went for England.
 „ Earthon [Ireton] Deputy.
 616. Cromwell had no cause to boaste in Ireland.
 616. [a] The poore case of Major Neylle.
 „ The inhumanitie of Diego Preston.
 „ Major Oneyll takes his course for Limbricke.
 „ Pursued by the enemy in vaine.

V. [A.]

617. The Bishop of Dromore, Vice-General of Leinster.
 „ He invites the Byrnes and Kavenagh's, but idly.
 „ Colonel Arthur Fox came to him with a party.
 „ 3,000l. did the Bishop [Oliver Darcy] leane.
 „ Colonel Fox did oppose him.
 „ [Dromore] writes a conterfeite letter.
 „ Colonel Fox deceived by him.
 „ Dromore sells the provisions of the garrison.
 „ Fox because true and loyal was kept out by Dromore.
 „ Bedlowe [Bellow] and Dungan trusted by Dromore.
 „ Bedlowe treacherously deserts the castle.
 „ Oliver Dungan's death.

VI.

618. Brave behaviour of the Ulster army.
 „ Faithlessness of Ormond and Clanricarde.
 619. Letter of Armstronge intercepted.
 „ Ormond's speech in Athlone.
 „ All treachery and deceit.
 620. Daniel Oneyll, Ormond's creature.
 „ Sir Thomas Armstronge's speeche.
 „ Armstronge and Daniel O'Neill with the enemy.

VII.

621. The Ulster army marched to Tyrconnell.
 „ The mistake of MacMahon, Bishop of Clogher.
 „ The Ulster forces encamp at Letterkenny.
 622. An Irish druid or prophett diswaded battle.
 „ A counsell of warr's resulte.
 623-624. Henry Roe Oneyll's speeche in the councill.
 625. [Emer MacMahon] the Bishop-General of Vlistern.
 „ Brave behaviour of Phelim McTuhill O'Neill.
 „ Letherkeny battle.
 „ The courage of the Irish foote.
 „ Overmatched and slaughtered.
 626. Henry Roe Oneyll's behaviour.

626. Henrie circumvented, forgerie quarter, was taken.
 627. Sir Phelim [O'Neill] saved.
 „ The Prelate-General in a poore condition.
 „ Maguire betrayed them.
 627. The Prelate General taken prisoner.
 „ Lieutenant-General escaped.
 „ Prelate-General hanged by Sir Charles Coote.
 628. Some prisoners caried to Londonderry.
 „ 4,000 killed, beside chiefe commanders.
 „ Henry Roe Oneyll beheaded and hanged.
 „ His speeche before his death to Sir Charles Coote.
 „ His charitable requeste, but inhumanlie denied.
 629. The moane for the familie of Oneyll.
 630. Doctor Owen Shiell's life and death.

IX.

631. Major Luke Guire, Governor of Ticrohan.
 „ The strength of Ticrohan.
 „ Ticrohan siege.
 632. Sir Robert Thalbot, Governor of Ticrohan.
 „ The lady of the house deceived in Talbot.
 „ The change of Ticrohan defence in Talbot's time.
 633. Treacherie discovered by an Vlisterman.
 „ Michael Gaynor.
 „ A greate mutinie.
 „ Guire and his partie thriued.
 634. Thalbot and the lady sent to Ormond.
 „ Castlehaven, commander of the reliefe.
 „ Clanricard and Westmeath accompany him.
 „ The enemy's posture.
 „ The skirmish at Ticrohan.
 „ Major Guire's humanitie.
 635. Colonel Wall's treacherie.
 „ Conference between Castlehaven and Captain Fox.
 „ Peter Walshe, author of this murder.
 636. Castlehaven's ungodly doome; enformer and judge.
 „ Clanricard and Westmeath intercessors [for Fox].
 „ Castlehaven's answer to a priest.
 „ Castlehaven's rancor to the Irish.
 637. Captain Fox executed.
 „ The author's sense touchinge this reliefe.
 638. Ticrohan quarter.
 „ Yelded by Thalbot.
 „ Braue quantitie of provision founde in Ticrohan.
 „ Ormond's jealousy.
 „ Prooffe of Ormond's disloyaltie.
 639. Major Guyre tryed.
 „ Acquitted by a councill of warr.

X.

640. The Discalciat Carmelitts have no fundation in Ireland.
 „ Fr. Roe, Provinciaall of the Discalciat Carmelitts, attorney for the Apeale.
 641. Comitted and to be tryed by the Inquisition, but escapes.
 „ He arrived in Ireland.
 „ The Bishope of Drumore writes to him.
 642. Father John Roe's letter to Drumore.
 „ Their thriving in Rome.
 643. Their stiff-necked heartes.
 „ The censure's effecte.
 „ Sir Richard Blake's house, the first infected.

XI.

644. Sir Robert Thalbot intrusted by Ormond with Castle of Athlone.
 „ The defence of Conaght.
 645. Crnel behavior of Ormond in Conaght.
 „ Destructive proceedings of Ormond's army.
 „ The description of Ormond's habitation.
 „ Compared unto Nero.
 „ The Congregation of Jamestowne.

XII.

646. Their [the Congregation of Jamestowne's] sense against Ormond and his government.
 646. Excommunication against the opposers of the Jamestown declaration.
 „ The Bishop of Drumore agent to Ormond.
 „ A comette chosen by the Congregation.
 647. The Excommunication confirmed.
 648. Ormond and his complices' fetche of treacherie.
 „ The summ of Costlagh's letter.
 „ Ireton's safe-conduct to Costlagh.

XIV.

649. Costlagh's aduice to the Ladies Dillon.
 „ Letters intercepted by Westmeath.
 650. Clanricard writes unto the clergie, and why?
 „ Three Vlistern regiments.

XV.

651. Caron's faction against Thomas Makyernan.
 „ Those who submitted and were absolved.
 652. Chapter resembles Parliament.
 „ The reconciliation of those apostats.
 „ A new Provinciall and his Diffinitors.
 653. They turne to their former vomitte.
 „ Walsh the ring-leader o fthis apostat crue.
 „ Ormond and his peeres.

XVI.

654. Fetch of Clanricarde to hinder clergy's act
 655. Iretion in campe before Athlone.
 „ [The Protestant Bishop of] Clogher.
 „ John Dalton's censeritie with [Colonel] Jones.
 „ Bishop Jones' relation touchinge Dillon.
 „ A safe-conduct to Dillon.
 656. Sir Nicholas White.
 657. Delvin taken.
 „ The enemie beaten from Rachra.
 „ Losse of enemy at the siege of Athlone.
 „ The enemie marched and dislodged.
 658. Clanricard before Kilcolgan.
 „ The courage of William Bourke.
 „ Owen O'Dochardy.
 „ Kilcolgan yielded.
 „ Cloghan won.
 „ Clanricard's intention discovered.
 659. Hugh Oneyll desires reliefe.
 „ But how complied with?
 „ Greate faction in Limbricke.
 „ Hugh Oneyll's second address for reliefe „ Treacherie of Ormond and Clanricard.
 660. Major Taaffe, chiefe comander.
 „ His armie slaughtered.
 „ Many intelligences and motiues against Taaffe.
 „ Taaffe and Sir James Dillon put in safitie.
 „ The skirmish of Lusmach.
 „ Lieutenant-Colonel Sheane OHagan killed.
 „ Dochardy and his party saued.
 „ Characters of Major Taaffe and Sir James Dillon.

XVII.

661. The Bishop of Laghlin and Clonmacnose campe.
 „ Earl of Westmeath voted Generall of Linster.
 „ His grandfather's deportment.
 662. How Westmeath behaued himself.
 „ Ormond and Clanricard.
 „ How ill some of those dellegatts behaued.
 „ Proceedings of Sir Richard Barnwall, Patricke
 „ Bryan, and Sir Walter Dungan.
 663. Catholic Bishop of Killaloe, in restraint.
 664. Assembly in Loghreagh, in November.
 665. Sir James Preston and Major Richard Grace.
 666. Reduced condition of Ormonde.

XVIII.

667. Resulte of Ormonde's proceedings.
 „ His jorneye for France.

XIX.

668. Clanricarde, manager of Ireland for the King.
 669. Clanricarde pretended sole authoritie.

XX.

670. Indications of Clanricarde's fall.

XXI.

- 671-5. William Bourke Fitz John of Castllecken.
 676. Observations on his speech.

XXII.

677. A seeminge recantation of the Assembly of Loghreagh of an instrument against the Nuncio.
 „ Their colloquinge.
 678. Queen Elizabeth and Henry the 8th lawe is here instanced.
 „ The inhumanitie of those [anti-Catholics].
 „ Another Nuncio banished by the Irish.
 „ Why Wednesday is fasted?
 „ The fraude of Excommunication.

XXIII.

679. This anti-assembly dissolved.
 „ The proude behavior of this Peere [Clanricarde].
 680. The Christianitie of Clanricard.
 681. Clanricarde's disposition disciphered.
 „ Like his father, against the Irish.
 „ What company this Peere resorts unto.

682. His violence against the Bishop of Clonmacnoise
 „ His tipplinge moode.
 683. In his promotion is discovered.
 „ Is both proude and haughtie.
 „ The change of Clanricarde by his promotion.
 „ Nero's beginnings and his are alike.

XXIV.

684. Treacherie of Clanricarde, the newe Lord
 Deputie.
 685. Vlster and Conaght forces.
 „ The fetche of this newe Deputie and his factioniers.
 „ Colonel Charles Molloy agent to Clanricarde.
 686. Richard Burke and Randle McDaniell.
 „ Vlster partie deceaued by Costllagh and Sir James Dillon.
 „ Their perfidious adresse.
 „ Charles Molloy, Lewes Moore, and John Ftiz
 „ Patricke's untoward compliance.
 687. Despatches to Fitz Patricke and his answer.
 „ Ulster party deceaued in their opinion.
 688. The Vlster partie march to Killibie and Ferkall.
 689. Colonell Bourke deceaued the enemie.
 „ Alexander McDaniell's application.
 „ The faithfull compliance of Costllagh.
 690. Sir Walter Dungan's cheating department.
 691. The Conaght partie, disauowing in the Deputie „ Henry Dillon, prisoner.
 „ The Vlster partie went to the countie of Cavan.

XXV.

692. Clanricard's treacherye.
 „ He acteth all things for the enemie's auaile.
 693. Reynolds and Standly march to Dunore.
 „ Irish garison of Dunore.
 „ Conly payed contribution.
 694. Standley's returne.
 „ The enemie's inhumanitie.
 „ The freedome of Dunore picladed.
 „ Reynolds' promise.
 „ The cause of Dunore's unhapy takinge.
 „ The fattall behavior of the warde.
 695. James McNeyley Geoghegan killed.
 „ William Dea behaued himself very well.
 „ Dunore taken.
 „ A very rich place.
 „ Covetousnesse did hoode justice.
 „ Fifty killed in Dunore.
 „ It was restored.
 696. Ballimore taken.
 „ Netterville banished thence.

Book V.

Chapter I.

1651.

697. How cruell Westmeath's men were to the naties.
 698. The inhumanitie of those seeminge Catholicikes.
 „ False surmishes of defences.
 699. Sumons to Fyena.
 „ Captain Scurloge revoulted.
 „ Lieutenant-Colonell James Barnwall.
 „ Earl of Westmeath's character.
 „ The Earle desireth succor.
 „ The Provinciall Conncell's desire.
 „ O'Reilly and McDaniel defend Fyena.
 „ Westmeath's sudaine and unexpected departure.
 700. Five hundred men [sent] to the Toghar defence.
 „ Deserted the place.
 „ The garrison tipplinge, the enemie killinge.
 „ Philip O'Reilly fled.
 701. Irish killed or taken prisoners.
 „ Manus O'Cahan killed and others.
 „ Alexander McDaniell and others taken prisoners.
 702. Fyena taken.
 „ The crueltie of the enemie towards their prisoners.
 703. The unchristian department of Westmeath's men.

II.

704. Antony Geoghegan, Prior of Connallmore.
 705. Selected for Ireland by Congregation of Cardinals.
 706. Letter from Dionisius Massarius to Crelly.
 707. Letter from Massarius to Antony Geoghegan.
 708. The Congregation, the linguist of his Holiness.
 709. Reasons for advancement of Antony Geoghegan.
 „ Prior of Connallmore, in Catholicke times, a Lord
 „ of Upper House of Parliament.
 „ The Nuncio's esteeme of Anthony Geoghegan.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

709. Oliver Deize's false intimation against this qualified person.
710. Thomas Fleming, Archbishop of Dublin, a braue prelate.
" His advice to the Prior.
" Bishope of Clonfert, braue stickler hitherunto.
" The Prelates come to the Prior's chamber.
" Fr. Hugh Bourke's judgment of the Prior's power.

III.

711. Father Bourke's frequenting of Courts.
" His suite in Denmarke.
712. His intentions herein fayled.
" His labours and insinuations to foraigne princes.
" His appointment by the Franciscan Generall.
" [Father] Luke Wadding's opposition.
" Bourke made Bishop through King of Spain.
713. Earle of Birrhaue, O'Sullivan, agent for Ireland.
" The Prelate's noncompliance betrayed the trust reposed by the King in him.
" Birrhaue hoysed sayle.
" The Prelate's character.
714. His foolish assertion.
" Walter Linche, his inconstancie.
715. Instructions from Rome by Father Prior.
716. Tuamensis his letter to my Lord Primat.

IV.

717. The condition of the Bourkes.
" John Bourke graduated Doctor.
" His pretences.
" Vicar-Generall and Bishope of Clonferte.
" By craft elected Archbishop of Tuam.
718. Now antagoniste of the nation.
" His colution discovered in his letter.
719. A palpable falsehood.
" Bishope of Down and Doctor Meara chosen agents.
" Oliverus Bourke, a Dominican fryer.
" What zeale Clanricarde had.
720. Tuam's intention.
" Clanricard's surmise.
" Proofs against Tuame.
" My Lord Primat's answere.

V.

721. My Lord Primat's desire to conferr with the Prior.
" His letter in behalf of Thomas Makymernan.
722. Clonmacnosc's letter to my Lord Primat.
" The constancie of Clonmacnosc.
" An inductive sense of this letter.
723. Fa. Thomas Makymernan came to Father Prior.
" Costillogh, Sir Luke, and Sir James Dillon,
" treatinge of the surrender of Athlone.
" Sir James Dillon, Sir Robert Thalbot, John
" Bellewe and Stephen Dexter, agents to the "emie.
" The Prior's letter to my Lord Primat.

VI.

724. Duke of Lorraine, Protector of the nation.
725. Stephanus Hinius, Abbott of S. Catherine.
" Clanricard's power.
" Viscount Taaffe, Sir Nicholas Plunkett and Gefry " Browne, agents by Clanricarde appointed to the " Duke of Lorraine.
726. The Bishope of Fearnos' letter of advice to the " said agents.
" Clanricard's incomings.
727. The protectorship of the Duke of Lorraine.
728. Conditions in Latin translated into English.

VII.

729. The reasonable intention of Costilagh.
730. Costilagh writes to Sir Thomas Armstrong.
731. Sir Thomas Armstrong's letter to Costilagh.
" James Tuite agent for Costilagh.
" Costilagh's endeavours for Athlone.
732. Linster forces ordered to Conaght.
" Dillon and Westmeath's forces.
733. The continuance of Limbrick sledge.
" Mortagh O'Bryan and David Roche.
" Castlehaven's comission to Munster.
" His treachery there.
" His hostile behaviour in Tomond.
734. His contestation with Hugh Oneyll and Dominick " Fanninge.
" He brought Limbricke to a sadd condition.

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

735. Clanricard did disbande 3 regiments in Conaght,
" Richard Bourke, Randle McDaniell, and
" Donogh O'Connor, and why?
736. Costilagh's treachery now discovered.
" Makes his conditions with Sir Charles Coote.
" Perfidie of Costilagh.

VIII.

737. The emulation of Costilagh and Westmeath.
" The factionists, Presbyterians.
" Costilagh commanded the surrender of Athlone.
" His perfidie discovered.
738. Surrender of Athlone prejudicious to the Irish.
" Terence Coghlan, Anthony Brabson, Luke Dillon,
" Thomas Leicester.
739. Daniell Keenanagh.
" Charles Keenanagh.
" Lewis Moore.
" Lewis, his inconstancie, foolerie, and treachery.
" Walter Dungan.
740. Robert Nugent and James Keylin.
" Alexander Hope betrays the island of Desert.
" Nicholas Nugent hanged.
" The island surrendered by Westmeath.

IX.

741. Patrick Bryan's letter to Ormond.
742. Bryan's letter to Edward Butler.

X.

743. Bryan insinuates the title of Ormond to the " sceptre of Ireland.
744. He dispenses him from solemn oath.
" The encrease of faction.
" A strange passage.
745. Hugh Oneyll, Governor of Limbricke.
" Castlehaven's disloyaltie and actions disciphred.
" Muskrye, how powerfull.
" Loyaltie of David Roche and Mortagh O'Bryan.
746. Ormond and his faction, confirmed traytors.
" A poore Catholick's aduice.

XI.

747. Clanricarde's stratagem to the enemy avail.
" Irish not permitted by Clanricarde to fight.
748. Daniell Keenanagh's courage.
" Clanricard's intention.
" Portunmy yielded.

XII.

749. What Clanricarde is.
750. Castlehaunc's treachery.
" The Irish went to Galway.
" Ireton and Coote together.
" Limbricke blocked.
" Lett any man judge Clanricarde.
751. Appointment of Gouvernor of Galway.
" Preston, Bryan Roe, Arthur Fox, and Guire.
" Preston created Viscount Taragh.
752. The busnesse of Clanricarde and Westmeath.
" Bryan Roe's constancie.
" Clanricard's answere to Bryan Roe Oneyll.
" Bryan Roe's reasonable obiection.
" The enemy's confidence in Clanricarde.
753. Sheep Island manned by the enemy.
" Bryan Roe's courageous resolution.
754. Clanricarde intende to hinder future service.
" His choosinge of Costilagh Lord-Justice and " Generall, notwithstandinge his impeachment of " treason.
" Seuerall petitions to Clanricarde against Costilagh.
" Westmeathe's answere.
" Walter Dungan's resulte.
755. Cankered action of Prelats.
756. Industry of Prior Anthony Geoghegan.

XIII.

- " The Primat addresses the Metropolitans.
757. Tuamensis and Cassellensis will not be conformable.
" Thomas Fleming, Archbishops of Dublin.
758. The Archbishops died at Galway.
" Edmond Dempsey, the onely Bishope in Linster.
" Bryan Fitz Patrick, Vicar-Generall of Ossory.

XIV.

759. Thomas Deiz, Bishope of Meathe, excommunicated.
" Died in Galway.
760. Oliver Deize true nephewe unto this defuncte.
" Noe Chapter in Meathe.
" Oliver, his persuerance in malo?
" Anthony Geoghegan, Vicar-General of Meath.

XV.

761. Queres penned by a Catholike Englishman.

XVI.

762. Our militia in Couaght in a poor takinge.
763. The Provinciall Councell of Vlster to the Primat.
763. The Primat's answer.
" Drumore doe not much care.
" Drumore got his owne desire from the Conncell.
764. My Lord Primat did excommunicate the Councell.
" Whoe recalled all they granted Drumore.
" His cause of not appearing in the Congregation.

XVII.

765. Acts (in Latin) of the Congregation at Cloghwater.
766. English translation of these acts.

XVIII.

767. The Lord Primate, Kilmore, Clonmacnoise, and the Abbot of Kilmegan, and other Divines, appointed delegates on dissolution of Congregation.
768-72. Acts in Latin of Ecclesiastical Congregation, dated last day of August, 1651.

XIX.

- 773-9. English translation of preceding acts.
780. The zeale of the Congregation of Armagh.
" Clonmacnose and the Prior of Conall appointed agents.
" Edmond Dempsey, Vice-Metropolitan of Linster.
" The clergie of Conaght's refraction.
" The clergie of Monster's behaviour.

XX.

781. The behaviour of Clanricarde, Generall in Conaght.
" His counter-maunding orders for destruction.
" The inhumanitie of Conaght men.
" The Generall [Clanricarde] noe souldier ora traitor.
782. Art McHugh Boy Oneyll and Teige Conor go towards Mortagh O'Bryan to Tomond.
" The Linster forces scatteringe.
" Bellaleige taken by the enemy.

XXI.

783. The non-admittinge a councell of warr against Costlagh was greate cause of this distemper.
" A Cabinett councell held by Clanricarde.
" Danger of Leinster party.
784. Intelligence sent unto the enemy.
" The publicke treachery of Clanricarde.
" All by Divine disposition.
" Bryan McPhelim [Byrne] did stay behinde.
" Coote and Venables with their armie to Ballimore.

XXII.

785. The malice of the factioniers discovered.
786. The Duke of Lorraine's letter to the Prelats.
787. A confutation of the factionists' former assertion.
" Devellish and false surmishes of factioniers.
788. Doctor Edward Tyrrell's letter.
789. Observations on his testimonie.

XXIII.

790. Lord of Westmeath appointed Generall of Linster.
" Bellanacargie besieged by Venables.
" Westmeath denied relife to the Vlster men.
791. My Lord Primat's letter to the gentry of Vlster.
792. The gentry's answer therupon.
793. Bellanacargie reliev'd, and Venables endamaged.

XXIV.

794. Commissioners for Linster affairs.
795. John Fitz Patrick's raisinge and service.
" His alliance with Insichayne and Westmeath.
" Lieutenant-Colonell Richard Grace.
" What Coote did in Millicke.
" Why John Fitz-Patrick stayed in Leinster.
796. What did hinder his goinge to Ballimore.
" His asseverations for religion.
797. Westmeath and his Commissioners.
" Fitz-Zymons and Clannalirie appointed Colonells by [Earl of] Westmeath.
797. The government of both Generall and Commissioners in levyinge of moneye and corne.
" Their disservice against God, nation, and King.
" Clanricarde's endeavours to work devision.
" Fitz Patrick discoovers himself for the faction.

XXV.

798. Samons for a Generall Assembly in Jamestowne.
799. Clanricard's factionall letter to Drumore.
" Clanricard's Post Scripta.
800. The malice and falsitie of the former letter.
" His contradictions in his letter.
" The King's course thereupon.
801. What the Duke of Lorraine doe undertake.
" Is this soe prejudicious as Clanricarde made it.
" His intentions in the Generall Assembly.
" The fate of Loghreach.
" Pharacie-like contumacie.
" Drumore's character.
802. He [Clanricarde] means Ormond.
" The genius of factionists.
" Drumore's trade in Kilkenny.
803. Why Clanricard opposes all confederacie.
804. Clanricard's letter to Westmeath.

XXVI.

805. What veritie may be contained in those [Clanricarde's letters] you see.
806. Gyrringe his Majestie in his now distresse.
" Clanricarde's foraigne dispatches.
807. The impossibilitie of his assertion.
" Proper intrest his objecte.
808. Clanricard's letter for Sir Walter Dungan.

XXVII.

809. Clanricard's ciphers and whoe haue the keye?
" His continuall complaint of Fennensis.
" Clanricarde dissembles his departure.

XXVII. [A.]

810. Anthony Geoghegan, Vicar [Generall] of Meath.
811. The Congregation of the province of Linster.
" Bryan McPhelim, Daniell Kevanagh, John Fitz Patrick, and Roger Moore.
812. Geoghegan, Fox, and O Mellaghlin, agents.
813. Clergie instructions.
814. The clergie intentions herein.
815. John Fitz Patrick periered.
" Kevanaghs and Byrnes constant.
" Roger Moore, weak.
" The clergie deceaved in this acte.
" The instabilitie of Clanricarde.
" The summons for the Assembly of Jamestowne.
" A privat comtermande therof.
" The Assembly adjourned.
817. The Assembly-letter to Clanricarde.
818. Clanricarde adjourned the Assemblie.
819. The Province of Vlster's power for their agents.
" Agents for Galway.

XXIX.

820. Endeavors for rent and divison at Limerick.
" Doctor Fennell's character.
821. The siege of Limbricke.
" The disputes of Ireton about the raisinge of the siege.
" His resolution.
" His inticing baibes to Hugh Oneyll.
" Hugh Oneyll's results to Ireton.
822. Ireton's desperation.
" His application to Major Fennell.
" Fennell, Castle Connell, Colonell Grady, and Colonell Macnamara combined to betraye Limbricke.
" Fennell's inhumanity.
" Hugh Oneyll to Fennell as our Savior to Judas.
" Fennell's answer like Pilate's.
823. Hugh Oneyll delivuring his sword to Ireton.
" Ireton's civill behaviour towards him.
" His tender care of Major Neylle.
" The Bishop of Emly, Major-Generall Purcell, and Mr. Baron hanged.
" Dominick Fanning in sepulchro paterno deltnit.
" Humanity of Parliamentary Captain to Fanning.
" Dominick Fanninge executed.
824. Ireton died.
" His noble care of Hugh Oneyll.
" O'Neill and McDaniel remitted to England.
825. Humanity of Ireton and enemity of Fennell.
" The takinge of Limbricke.

XXX.

826. Clanricard's grand councell in Galwaye.
827. Power of Commissioners of Linster.
" Clannalirie, Wm. Tyrrell, and Bryan Dempsey.

827. Major Teige Unor had a passe.
828. The Provincial Council of Ulster's letter.
829. Linster Assembly's answer.
830. A comment upon the former answer.

XXXI.

831. The Assembly of Munster's declaration.
832. The Assembly of Munster's letter.
833. Muskrie's colation.
834. Linster Assembly's obiecte.
834. A strange passage.

XXXII.

835. Clanricarde and his grand counsell's endeavours.
835. Shea, agent to Lorraine.
835. Fr. Francis Gruaierke agent from Vlster.
836. [Bishop of] Clonfert's letter to the Assembly of Linster against [Earl of] Westmeath.
837. Disprovm't of Westmeath his assertion.
837. What conduced to the surrender of Galway.
838. Letter to Clanricard from Linster Assembly.
839. Instructions from the said Assembly to be moved by George Barnewall unto Clanricarde.
840. Letter in behalf of this agent.

XXXIII.

841. Barnewall preferred as agent.
842. Expounded this riddle.
843. Richard Grace carried away powder from Pallice.
843. The composure of the Linster Irish armie.
844. A frivolous request in the third instruction to Commissioners.
845. Power of Provincial-Generall of the Minors.
845. Malice discovered.
846. [Who were] the best servitors in Linster for the Irish.
847. All colloquing and juggling.
848. What will any indifferent man make of this other than deceipt?
849. The Governor of Dublin and Sir Walter Dungan.
849. Braue Dungan.
850. Instruction of Leinster Commissioners.
850. Colonell Poore, agent from Muskrye to Linster.

XXXIV.

851. Captain Kelly tooke Major Owens prisoner.
851. Both the ladies Dillon taken prisoners.
852. Major Owen's policie, and the Irish foolery.
852. John Fitz-Patrick, his treachery.
852. Colonell Power agent from Muskry.
852. Sir Walter Dungan, Owens, and Fitz-Patrick
853. Contradictory assertions.
854. Patrick Bryan agent for Muskry to Linster.
854. His character.
854. Edmond Duyre, sub-delegate unto Bryan.
855. Colonell Duyre's letter to Linster Assembly.
856. Instruments of union and confederacie.
857. Poor Convocation of Linster.
857. Sir Walter Dungan's character.
858. John Fitz-Patrick submitted to the enemie.
858. Those for whom he made his conditions.
858. Declaration by Assembly against Fitz-Patrick.
858. An excommunication issued against Fitz-Patrick.
859. Richard Grace and Daniell Carroll.
859. Thibolt Gawlye and Captain Dalton join Grace.
859. Grace summoned to the Assembly.
859. Treachery against Grace intended.
859. Why Grace was persecuted.

XXXV.

860. The abuse don by these Commissioners unto the Bishope of Laghlin.
860. Sir Robert Thalbot came to the Assemblye.
860. The Bishope of Laghlin speakes to Sir Robert.
860. The Bishop convicted.
861. Sir Robert impeached of treason.
861. Grace reconciled came to the Assemblye.
861. Sir Robert's challenge unto Grace.
861. [Grace] his satisfactory answer in the Assemblye.
861. Grace his challenge unto Thalbot.
862. The ministers did deceane this braue prelate.

XXXVI.

863. What did the grande Councell in Galwaye.
864. Letter of Lorraine's agent to Leinster Assembly.
865. The Commissioners of Linster's humor.
866. Preston's letter to the Bishope of Laghlin.
867. The impossibilitie of compliance [with Preston's request].

868. The repete of Taragh and Tyron by the Kings of England, and why?
869. Hugh Oneylle and George Guire's letter to the Commanders of Linster.
870. All which is nothinge to the Assemblye of Linster.
870. The messenger of those letters, William Heyn, lay brother of the Order of Minors.
870. The treacherie of Wm. Heyn.

XXXVII.

871. Clanricard's tragedie against Anthony Geoghegan.
871. Partial judge; tyrannical doome.
872. Father Anthony Geoghegan arraigned, and why.
872. The pleadinge of Fr. Vicar, Father Thomas Makyernan, and Father Teige Eygan will not avayl.
872. Tuamensis suspected of indifferencie.
873. The Father advised to open the keye.
873. Clanricarde's desire to spill innocent blood.
874. Clanricarde's two quæres.
874. A Congregation did sitt upon them.
874. Their result thereupon.
874. They are sent unto the Convents.
874. The Augustines impiously held with Clanricard.
875-6. Clanricarde did absent himself to capitulat.
875-6. His malice discovered.
875-6. Father Anthony dismissed by the Councell.
875-6. George Barnewall's perurie.
875-6. Mortagh O'Bryan went awaye.
875-6. Excommunications incurred by Clanricarde.

XXXVIII.

877. The consort between Clanricarde and Preston.
878. Clanricard's letter to Generall Ludlow.
878. His false and jugglinge intimation.
879. Ludlow's answer unto Clanricarde.
880. He [Clanricard] cares not what he writes.
880. Dillon Costlagh an attainted traitor.
880. The metaphysical information of Clanricard.
880. His equivocations.
881. Costlagh appointed agent by Clanricard.

XXXIX.

882. Gerald Fitzgerald's letter to the Parliament.
882. His desire herein.
882. Sir Richard Barnwall and Walter Bagnell, Commissioners, in company of Costlagh, go to Dublin.
883. The Commissioners of Parliament's answer.
884. Dispatch between Clanricarde and Assembly.
884. [The Bishop of] Clonfert's intimation verified against Westmeath.
885. Proposals of Irish agents to the Parliament.
886. The Commissioners answer.
887. Imbecillitie of [Linster Assembly] agents.
887. The wavering humor of those factions members.

XL.

888. The mistake of Clanricarde.
888. The number of the forces he might make up.
888. [Sir Robert] Thalbot a Presbyterian.
889. Thalbot agent for the Irish.
889. Reynold's answer unto Thalbot.
890. Their dispatches to Clanricarde.
890. Westmeath and Drumore, Clanricarde's Mercuries.

[Book VI.]

Chapter I.

1652.

891. The desire of the well affected.
891. Sir Walter Dungan's drift.
891. His disservice in Rosse.
892. Sir Walter Dungan's advice and behaviour.
892. Captain Fitz-Patrick's service.
892. Charles Kevanagh's service.
893. The Byrnes' service.
894. Grace and Gawly recover Major Shorne's prey.
894. John Fitz-Patrick.
895. Colonell Walter Brenagh's service.
896. A braue piece of service, a fine stratageme.
897. Mightie discouragement unto this partie what John Fitz Patrick has here don.
898. Lieutenant Barnewall's prey from Mollingare.
898. Lieutenant Colonell Duyne, his service.
898. Leutenants Carroll and Egan join with Grace.
898. The Vlster souldiers couraged.
898. Kildare prey [taken] by Grace.

898. Byrne's service at Castlolla.
 „ Kevanagh's service against Katarlagh enimie.
 „ Captain Naisse, his valour and deathe.
 „ Colonell Cooke killed.

II.

899. Clanricarde's treacherous acts.
 „ His sense upon the surrender of Galwaye.
 900. Doctor Teige Egan's letter to Clanricarde.
 „ The character of Clanricarde's diuines.
 901. Clanricarde's choice of diuines.
 „ Fr. Valentine Browne's character.
 „ The Augustines of Galwaye's opinion.
 „ The Loyollas retrograde resulte.
 „ Father Teige O'Gorman, a [Priar] Minor.

III.

902. Clanricarde's acts in Yre Conaght.
 903. Letter from Clanricarde to Phillipe O'Reyllye.
 904. Another from Clanricarde to General Ferrall.
 905. Disimulation of change [by Clanricarde].

IV.

906. Sir Richard Blake, Sir Valentine Blake, Sir Robbucke Linche, and Sir Oliuer Frenche, Clauricarde's minions.
 907. How monneys [were] dispursed.
 908. Clanricarde does still disclaime his proper actc.
 909. His assurance of diuine assistance is strange.
 „ Clanricarde's guilt.
 „ The misapplication of his frigatt's dismisce.
 910. Castlhanen's encomiums.
 „ Palpable dissimulation of Clanricarde.
 „ Clanricarde's character.
 „ His fetche and intention.

V.

911. Harmony of Clanricarde and Linster Assemblyc.
 912. Hugh O'Kelly's letter to Sir Walter Dungan.
 913. The Kellys' letter to Sir Walter Dungan for union.
 914. The character of the Linster Assembly members.
 915. The factions comandars.
 „ Traytors promoted.
 916. The reall and loyall comandars' behaviour.
 „ Sir Walter Dungan's treacherous behaviour.
 „ Sir Walter rescued by Major Charles Kavanagh.
 „ Charles now prisoner without rescue.
 „ Sir Walter's treacherous flight.
 „ Daniell Kevanagh's behaviour.
 „ Forty-eight Irish killed and 500 English.
 917. Colonell Richard Grace proceeds to Roscrea.
 „ Pembroke Herbert's valor.
 „ Twenty horse against 150.
 „ The enimie's opinion of the Irish.
 918. Commissioners of Linster headstrong.
 „ Instructions of the provinces for peace.
 „ Leinster Commissioners's authoritie restrained.

VI.

919. The Commissioners of Linster for settlement.
 „ Sir Richard Barnwall and Bagnall [addresse themselves] to Reynolds in Birr.
 920. The non-authoritie of these Commissioners.
 921. Their deceitful behaviour.
 „ Sir Walter Dungan's character.
 922. The Irish Commissioners in Gowran.
 „ Joined by three noblemen only in Linster.
 „ The foolerie of those Comaunders.
 923. Answer of English Commissioners to the Irish.
 „ Irish Commissioners inhibited to further treatc.
 „ They breake up.
 „ Their pastime in Galmoye's house.
 „ They are comanded for Kilkenny.
 „ They are committed.
 „ Ludlow's answerc.
 „ Commissioners enlarged.
 „ The English [Commissioners] will not alter their proposalls.

VII.

924. The Irish [Commissioners] never [act] accordinge to instructions.
 925. The Irish condition for reall estate.
 „ Irish Commissioners satisfied only by mediation of „ Captain Vernon for their estates.
 926. The said Captain's engagment as desired.
 927. Poore people and treacherous villians.
 928. The blindness of those Commissioners.
 929. Articles of agreement, 12 May, 1652.

930. Answer to the fourth article.
 931. Commissioners' confirmation.
 932. Addition to Articles touching real estates.
 933. Articles for arrears.
 934. Places of layinge downe armes.

VIII.

935. The grounds of the Irish warr.
 „ Lawfull by all law.
 936. Death of heresiarchs as antagonists of Holy Churchc.
 „ Princes fauoured by God as adheringe unto His Church.
 „ When did France decline ?
 „ When did England flourish ?
 937. Madd people of Ireland to accept such conditions.
 938. Authors of former instructions not nominated.

IX.

939. Treacherous and blinde Commissioners.

X.

940. Prefidious agents unmindful of instructions.
 941. Prediction of their future punishment.
 942. How God will punish them and their posterity.

XI.

943. No man can excuse these agents.
 944. Peace proclaimed in Kilkenny.
 „ Daniell Carroll.
 „ Congregation of Linster.

XII.

945. Colonell Grace's service in Birr.
 946. Grace and his enimie's trumpeter.
 „ Loughlin O'Morra.
 „ The skirmish of Nenagh by Grace.
 „ Colonell Gawleye's courage.
 947. The Irish horse masters of the enimie's camp.
 „ Loughlin O'Morra's dexteritie.
 „ The Irish were victorious.
 948. Grace, his answer to the trumpeter.

XIII.

949. Westmeath and three more of these Peace-makers in restraint with Lieutenant-Colonel Richard Dayne.
 „ The Bishop of Drumore's misinformation to Dayne.
 „ The agents enlarged, to the dishonor of Dayne.
 950. The mischief of these agents now at libertie.
 „ Such as stole away from Grace.
 951. Linster Congregation sittinge.
 „ Clanricard's disclaimer against this peace.

XIV.

952. The Congregation acte [in Latin] against those Agents.
 953. The former acte in Englishc.
 954. Colonell Grace, his senceritie.
 955. Grace, his declaration.
 „ The clergie decree published this same day [27th
 May, 1652].
 956. An oathe sworn by the Commanders of this partie.

XV.

957. How willinge is Lewes Moore to breake square with loyaltie.
 „ Clanricard's recantation.
 958. Lowe Linster mon stedfastc.
 „ The cause of Daniell Kevanagh's surrender.
 959. Bryan McPhelim's senceritie.

XVI.

960. The poore posture of Grace' partie.
 „ Birr plundered and demolished by Grace.
 961. Grace and his partie go to Conaght.
 „ The enimie's preparations.
 „ A letter of intelligence to Grace.
 „ The Irish demeanour.
 „ Dinerstie of opinions did marr tho busines.
 962. Another letter of intelligence.
 „ Colonell Daniell Carroll.
 „ The enimie apceringe.
 „ Colonell Carroll's flight.
 963. Mellaghlin O'Morra's aduice.
 „ The skirmishe neere Loghbreagh.
 „ Gawly and Bourke killed.
 „ Thomas Geoghegan slaine.
 „ Daniell Carroll submitted.

XVII.

964. The foolish credulitie of the prouince of Vlster.
 Hameltowne surprisid by the Vlster forces.
 965. Clanricard's army in Vlster, 9,000 strong.
 Clanricard's drift for distruction.
 Bellashany taken.
 966. Sir Charles Coote, 3,000 men stronge.
 Bellashany regained by Coote.
 The willfull omission of Clanricarde.
 967. Venables repaired the Castle of Bellanacargie.
 Clanricarde continuinge in Therbert all the while, with 9,000 and the enemie with only 2,500
 stronge.
 Three thousand beefes did Clanricarde take from the keraghts.

XVIII.

968. The gentry of Vlster.
 Clanricard's character.
 969. The consideration of the Vlster armie at Therbert.
 Clanricarde is the enemie's harbinger.
 970. He now deserts Vlster.
 His extraordinary dispatch in submitting.
 Conditions made by him.
 971. Clanricarde's treacherie and mistrusts.
 972. He betrayed a whole nation.
 973. Clanricard's parallels in Scripture.
 Whom did Clanricarde persecute?
 He goes to England with Drnmore.

XIX.

974. The enemie's stratageme in the county of Wicklow.
 Edmund Reylly and Fr. Laurence Birne.
 The character of those members.
 Hugh McPhelim goes to Spain, and Bryan
 McPhelim to Inishbofiny.

XX.

975. Muskrye's treacherie.
 976. Mortagh O Bryan's behavior and flight.

XXI.

977. Grace and his party in woods and bogs.
 978. Cessation of arms for three days.
 979. Articles of Agreement between Colonell Jerome
 Sanchye and Colonell Richard Grace.
 980. Additions to Articles.

XXII.

981. Good conditions for clergy in Grace's articles.
 Edmund Dempsey, Bishope of Laghlin, and Anthony Geoghagan, Bishope of Clonmacnosc.

XXIII.

982. Baseness of some acts and agents.
 983. The Irish termed Tories.
 Colonel Bagnall executed.
 984. Henry Dempsey and Major Earnaby Dempsey hanged.

XXIV.

985. Gentry and commons of Munster executed.

XXV.

986. Executions, contribution, transportation, and persecution.
 987. Lientenant-General Richard Ferrall and Colonell Meyldes Reylly Mac Edmond, capitulate.
 988. Colonell Meyldes Reylly rescued.
 Lientenant-General Ferrall embarked for Spaine.

XXVI.

989. The poore remaine of Vlster forces.
 990. Agents appointed to treat with Commissioners of State of England.
 991. Colonell Mullmory McSwanny, agent for treaty.

XXVII.

992. The Commissioners could not agree.

XXVIII.

993. The second Commission to treat.
 994. The cleargie issue Excommunication.
 995. Lisagh Ferrall sent to Kilkenny.

XXIX.

996. Irish flock to the island of Inishbofinny.
 997. Island of Inishbofinny surrendered.
 998. Bloudie tragedie on the strand of Inishbofinny.

XXX.

999. A state is better kept by love than by force.

X.

CYPHERS USED IN IRISH GOVERNMENT CORRESPONDENCE OF CROMWELLIANS, 1649-59.

A.

- Armeye, 24.
 Armes, 25.
 Ammunition, 26.
 Artillery, 27.
 Articles, 28.
 Antrim, 29.
 Association, 30.
 Assure, 31.
 And, 32.
 At, 33.
 As, 34.
 Are, 35.
 Agent, 36.
 Action, 37.
 Assist, 38.
 Authority, 39.
 All, 40.
 At, 41.
 Against, 42.
 Attempt, 43.
 Any, 44.
 Armestronge, Sir Th[omas],
 45.
 Away, 46.
 Awry, 47.
 [blank], 48.
 [blank], 49.
 [blank], 50.

B.

- Bishop of Clogher, 52.
 both, 53.
 beleeve, 54.
 betray, 55.
 behold, 56.
 buisnes, 57.
 besiege, 58.
 betweene, 59.
 before, 60.
 Brittish, 61.
 be, 62.
 by, 63.
 but, 64.
 being, 65.
 better, 66.
 best, 67.
 Birne, Lt. G., 68.
 [blank], 69.
 [blank], 70.
 [blank], 71.
 [blank], 72.
 [blank], 73.

C.

- Canon, 74.
 Campe, 75.
 Castle, 76.
 Costelagh, 77.
 Conaght, 78.
 Corke, 79.
 Catherlagh, 80.
 county, 81.
 country, 82.
 Colonell, 83.
 commaunde, 84.
 company, 85.
 condition, 86.
 court, 87.
 can, 88.
 came, 89.
 come, 90.
 conclude, 91. commissioners, 92.
 caution, 93.
 Clanricard, Marquis, 94.
 conferre, 95.
 confute, 96.
 conspire, 97.
 could, 98.
 Carricke, 99.
 Cromwell, Lt. General, 100. correspondency, 101.
 conceive, 102.
 call, 103.
 care, 104.
 cary, 105.
 clergy, 106.
 Catholique, 107.
 Confederate, 108. city, 109.
 castle, 110.
 crowne, 111.
 crownes, 112.
 Cruise, Lt. Col., 113.
 Culpeper, Col., 114.

D.

- Day, 116.
 designe, 117.
 desire, 118.
 doe, 119.
 donne, 120.
 denie, 121.
 Dublin, 122.
 Derry, 123.
 Droghedat, 124.
 Duncanon, 125.
 despatch, 126.
 declare, 127.
 descry, 128.
 did, 129.
 [dote], 130.
 doubt, 131.
 Digby, Lord, 132.
 [blank], 133.
 [blank], 134.
 [blank], 135.

E.

- England, 141.
 English, 142.
 Euery, 143.
 End, 144.
 Entertaine, 145.
 Escape, 146.
 examine, 147.
 excuse, 148.
 either, 149.
 euer, 150.
 engage, 151.
 endeavour, 152.
 expect, 153.
 exceede, 154.
 each, 155.
 enter, 156.
 expresse, 157.
 [blank], 158.

F.

- foote, 162.
 feare, 163.
 Fermanagh, 164.
 fire, 165.
 Flanders, 166.
 forces, 167.
 France, 168.
 French, 169.
 free, 170.
 faile, 171.
 finde, 172.
 first, 173.
 Fairfax, Lord, 174.
 faction, 175.
 favour, 176.
 faithfull, 177.
 friend, 178.
 fight, 179.
 faile, 180.
 flee, 181.
 fitt, 182.
 for, 183.
 from, 184.
 full, 185.
 fall, 186.
 fortifice, 187.
 finish, 188.
 forcibly, 189.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

found, 190.
fort, 191.
force, 192.
Fleet, 193.
[blank], 194.
[blank], 195.
[blank], 196.

G.

Galloway, 198.
goe, 199.
general, 200.
gett, 201.
give, 202. gave, 203.
gouverne, 204.
goode, 205.
governour, 206.
government, 207.
greate, 208.
gaine, 209.
guile, 210.
gonne, 211.
guarison, 212.
gratify, 213.
guilty, 214.
[blank], 215.

H.

Holland, 221.
Hopton, Lord, 222.
hors, 223. happen, 224.
have, 225.
hath, 226. had, 227.
he, 228.
him, 229.
his, 230.
hast, 231. hostility, 232.
house, 233.
heere, 234.
hope, 235.
how, 236.
honour, 237.
harbour, 238.
[blank], 239.
[blank], 240.

Imagine, 243.
J. Jones, G., 244.
Inchiquin, 245.
Ireland, 246.
Irish, 247.
In, 248. is, 249.
if, 250.
instruction, 251.
intent, 252.
immediately, 253.
intelligence, 254.
into, 255.
it, 256.
interest, 257.
Jones, Sir Theophilus, 258.

K.

King, 261.
kingdome, 262.
knowledge, 263.
Kinsale, 264.
Kildare, Earle, 265.
knowne, 266.
knowe, 267.
kinde, 268.
knewe, 269.
kill, 270.
Kilkeny, 271.
Kildare, Co., 272.
Kildare townne, 273.
King's County, 274.
keepe, 275.

L.

League, 280.
leave, 281.
leavy, 282.
Leinster, 283.
Limbrick, 284.

life, 285.
liberty, 286.
London, 287.
losse, 288.
lost, [blank]
Lambert, Lord, 289. labour, 290.
land, 291.
lend, 292.
lett, 293.
Leixlip, 294.
letter, 295.
lord, 296. least, 297.
Lisle, Lord, 298.

M.

man, 301.
men, 302.
Monke, Col., 303.
money, 304.
Monnster, 305.
make, 306.
Muskery, 307. majesty, 308.
me, 309.
may, 310.
must, 311. more, 312.
many, 313.
my, 314.

N.

Newes, 316.
negotiation, 317.
Nuncio, 318.
neutrall, 319.
noe, 320.
not, 321.
never, 322.
neverthesles, 323.
now, 324.
new, 325.
nor, 326.
nothing, 327.
north, 328.
nation, 329.
neere, 330.
native, 331.

O.

Ormond, 332.
Owen O Neale, 333.
overture, 334.
oppose, 335.
of, 336.
on, 337.
or, 338.
open, 339.
opinion, 340.
one, 341.
onely, 342.
our, 343. out, 344.
occasion, 345.
O Neale, Daniel, 346.
obey, 347.
ordinance, 348.
order, 349.
opportunity, 350.
observe, 351.

P.

Parliament, 357.
Pope, 358.
People, 359.
Prince Rupert, 360.
Preston, General, 361.
proposition, 362.
power, 363.
powder, 364.
prepare, 365.
provide, 366.
part, 367.
put, 368.
place, 369.
past, 370.
private, 371.
possessor, 372.
party, 373.
principall, 374.

particular, 375.
peace, 376.
passe, 377.
possible, 378.
[blank], 379.

Q.

Queene, 383.
Queen's County, 384. quarter, 385.
quick, 386.
quickly, 387.
[blank], 388.

R.

Religion, 391.
Roscommon, Earle, 392. reason, 393.
Regiment, 394.
ratifie, 395.
reliefe, 396.
rest, 397.
rendevouz, 398.
right, 399.
remaine, 400.
receive, 401.
[blank], 402.
[blank], 403.

S.

see, 406.
soe, 407.
sence, 408.
since, 409.
shall, 410.
send, 411.
some, 412.
same, 413.
soone, 414.
such, 415.
ship, 416.
service, 417.
state, 418.
skirmish, 419.
stay, 420.
storme, 421.
Scotts, 422.
Scotland, 423.
should, 424.
surmount, 425.

T.

Taafe, Viscount, 429.
then, 431.
treate, 432.
treaty, 433.
time, 434. trouble, 435.
to, 436.

A.

95.
96.
97.
98.

B.

101.
102.
103.
104.

C.

105.
106.
107.
108.

D.

109.
111.
112.
113.

E.

114.
115.
116.
117.

F.

119.
120.
121.
122.

G.

123.
124.
125.
126.

H.

128.
129.
130.
131.

I.

133.
134.
135.
136.

K.

137.
138.
139.
140.

L.

90.
91.
92.
93.

M.

25.
26.
27.
28.

N.

30.
31.
32.
33.

O.

35.
36.
37.
38.

P.

40.
41.
42.
43.

Q.

45.
46.
47.
48.

R.

50.
51.
52.
53.

S.

55.
56.
57.
58.

T.

60.
61.
62.
63.

V.

65.
66.
67.
68.

W.

70.
71.
72.
73.

X.

75.
76.
77.
78.

Y.

80.
81.
82.
83.

Z.

85.
86.
(blank)
(blank)

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

29. Nulls.
34. 79.
39. 84.
44. 87.
49. 88.
74. 89.

A.

Ab, 144. ac, 145.
ad, 146.
ae, 147.
af, 148. ag, 149.
ah, 150.
ai, 151.
ak, 152.
al, 153.
am, 154. an, 155.
ap, 156.
aq, 157.
ar, 158.
as, 159.
at, 160.
av, 161.
aw, 162.
ax, 163.
ay, 164.
able, 165.
apon, 166.
action, 167.
ance, 168.
and, 169.
away, 170.
army, 171.
armes, 172.
Antrim, M., 173.
Armenstrong, Sir
Tho., 174.
Arcloe, 175.
ammunition, 176.
arive, 177.
assure, 178.
artillery, 179.
arreare, 180.

B.

Ba, 181.
Be, 182.
Bi, 183.
Bo, 184. bu, 185.
By, 186. bd, 187.
bl, 188.
br, 189.
Belfast, 190.
Bortase, Sir John,
191.
Ballisonan, 192.
brother, 193.
betray, 194.
beleive, 195.
betweene, 196.
better, 197.

C.

Ca, 198.
ce, 199.
ci, 200.
co, 201.
cou, 202. come, 203.
cu, 204.
ch, 205.
cl, 206.
cr, 207.
ct, 208.
cy, 209.
Catherlagh, 210.
Castledermot, 211.
Corke, 212.
Clonmel, 213.
Cromwell, Lt.-
Generall, 214.
Clanrickard, Marquis, 215.
Castlehaven,
Earle, 216.

Clogher, B[ishop

of], 217.
Castle, Colonel,
218.
Coote, Colonel,
219.
Captaine, 220.
Colonell, 221.
Commander, 222.
Chiefe, 223.
Conaght, 228.
Carick, 229.
Cashel, 230.

D.

Da, 231.
de, 232. di, 233.
do, 234.
dom, 235.
don, 236.
dn, 237.
dy, 238.
dle, 239.
dr, 240.
dw, 241.
Dublin, 242.
Drogheda, 243.
Dundalke, 244.
Duncanon, 245.
desire, 246.
designe, 247.
danger, 248.
deny, 249.
Dungan, Sir
John, 250.
Dardiz, S, 251.
Dillon, Cost., 252. delay, 253.
Derry, 254.
(blank), 255.

E.

Ea, 256. eo, 257.
ei, 258.
eo, 259.
ev, 260.
ew, 261.
ey, 262.
eb, 263.
ec, 264.
ed, 265.
ef, 266.
eg, 267.
eh, 268.
ek, 269.
el, 270.
em, 271.
en, 272. once, 273. end, 274.
ep, 275.
eq, 276.
er, 277.
es, 278.
et, 279. ex, 280.
ey, 281.
England, 282.
English, 283.
Eustace, Sir
Maurice, 284.
Examine, 285.
Example, 286. ever, 287.
evill, 288.
exact, 289.
effect, 290.

fa, 291.
fe, 292.
fi, 293.
fo, 294.
fu, 295.
fy, 296.
Fairfax, Lord,
297.
fl, 298.
fr, 299.
ft, 300.
Fenwick, Col., 301.
foote, 302.
fortes, 303.
flecte, 304.
fall, 305.
false, 306.
full, 307.
finde, 308.
found, 309.
firmo, 310.
feare, 311.
former, 312.
frame, 313.
France, 314.
Finglas, Major,
315.
Fingal, Earl, 316.
faire, 317.
fight, 318.
feild, 319.
Fernes, Bishop of,
320.
FitzGerald, Sir
Luke, 321.

G.

Ga, 322. ge, 323.
gi, 324.
go, 325.
gu, 326.
gw, 327.
gy, 328.
gh, 329.
ght, 330.
gl, 331.
gn, 332.
gr, 333.
Gifford, Sir Jo., 334.
guarison, 335.
gibe, 336.
Galloway, 337.
Jo, 341.
Grandison, Lieut.-
Col., 338.
generall, 339.
grounde, 340.
[blank], 341.
[blank], 342.

H.

Ha, 343. he, 344.
hi, 345.
ho, 346.
hu, 347.
Hewetson, L^t Col., 348.
horse, 349.
heere, 350.
hither, 351.
hence, 352.
hinder, 353.
haste, 354.
him, 355.
however, 356.
hard, 357.
Harman, Major,
358. have, 359.
had, 360.

F.

ja, 361.
je, 362.
jo, 363.
ju, 364.
jb, 365. jc, 366.
jo, 367.
jf, 368.
jg, 369.
ih, 370.
ic, 371.
im, 372.
in, 373.
ip, 374.
ig, 375.
ir, 376. is, 377.
it, 378.
ix, 379.
ih, 380.
Jones, Generall,
381.
Jones, Sir Theo., 382.
ission, 383.
ition, 384.
ing, 385.
Inchiquin, Lord,
386.
Irish, 387.
Ireland, 388.
Jealous, 389.
Instinct, 390.
(blank), 391.
(do.), 392.
(do.), 393.
(do.), 394.
(do.), 395.
(do.), 396.

K.

ke, 397.
ki, 398.
ku, 399.
Kilkenny, 400.
Kinsale, 401.
King, 402.
Kildare, Earl., 403.
Kildare towne,
404. kill, 405.
(blank), 406.
(do.), 407.
(do.), 408.
(do.), 409.
(do.), 410.

L.

La, 411.
Le, 412. li, 413.
lo, 414.
lu, 415.
ly, 416.
London, 417.
Lisle, Lord, 418.
Lane, Geo., 419.
Londonderry, 420.
Long, Col., 421. life, 422.
live, 423.
leave, 424.
linger, 425.
long, 426.
Leivtenant, 427.
last, 428.
letter, 429.
li[ke], 430.
li[m]brick, 431.
L^t Generall, 432.
Loughlin bridge,
433.
Little, 434.
Lesse, 435.
Let, 436.

M.

Ma, 437. me, 438.

mi, 439.
mo, 440.
mu, 441. md, 442.
mp, 443.
mr, 444.
my, 445.
Monster, 446.
Monke, Col., 447.
money, 448.
Merekin, Sir
Tho., 449.
Maurice, Prince,
450.
March, 451.
more, 452.
men, 453.
mine, 454.
minde, 455.
mend, 456.
Magazeene, 457.
made, 458.
[blank], 459.
[do.], 460.
(do.), 461.
(do.), 462.
(do.), 463.
(do.), 464.
(do.), 465.

N.

Na, 466.
ne, 467.
ni, 468.
no, 469.
nu, 470.
ny, 471.
nc, 472.
nd, 473.
nk, 474.
nq, 475.
nr, 476.
ns, 477.
nt, 478.
ny, 479.
not, 480.
none, 481.
now, 482.
ng, 483.
neere, 484.
never, 485.
Neale, Owen,
Gen., 486.
Neale, Daniell,
487.
Neale, Sir Phelim,
488.
Nuntio, 489.
noice, 490.
necessary, 491.
[blank], 492.
[do.], 493.

O.

oe, 494.
oi, 495.
on, 496.
one, 497.
ow, 498.
oy, 499.
oa, 500.
ob, 501. oc, 502.
occasion, 503.
occurre, 504.
od, 505.
of, 506. offer, 507.
og, 508.
oh, 509.
ofend, 510.
ok, 511.
old, 512.
oi, 513.
om, 514.
on, 515.
oo, 516.
op, 517.
open, 518.

or, 519.
os, 520.
ot, 521.
ox, 522.
oy, 523.
Ormond, 524. officer, 525.
ought, 526.
one, 527.
onely, 528.
obey, 529.
obtaine, 530.
obstinate, 531.
order, 532.
ordinance, 533.
other, 534.

P.

Pa, 535. pe, 536.
pi, 537. po, 538.
pu, 539.
Preston, Generall,
540.
Parliament, 541.
provision, 542.
pay, 543.
passe, 544.
put, 545.
present, 546.
party, 548.
Plunket, Sir Nichoias, 549.

Q.

qu, 550.
Queene, 551.
quickly, 552.
quite, 553.
quantity, 554.
quiet, 555.
question, 556.

R.

Ra, 557.
re, 558.
ri, 559. rise, 560.
ro, 561.
ro, 562.
Rupert, Prince,
563.
Regmt, 564.
Rely, Fa, 565. reguard, 566.
require, 567.
revenge, 568.
rd, 569.
reade, 572.
Rosse, 573.
Roscomon, E., 574.
Rochford, Fen.
Cap., 575.

S.

sa, 576.
se, 577.
si, 578.
so, 579.
su, 580. sure, 581.
sir, 582.
sp, 583.
speake, 584.
speede, 585.
st, 586.
sw, 587.
sy, 588.
sm, 589.
str, 590.
Scottie, 591.
Scotland, 592.
some, 593.
scone, 594.
ship, 595.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

TRINITY
COLLEGE, DUBLIN.TRINITY COLLEGE
DUBLIN.

| | | | | | |
|--------------------|--------------------|--------------|------------|------------|------------|
| sea, 596. | wy, 680. | To descipher | 87, null. | 106, c. | 125, g. |
| sc, 597. | Wexford, 681. | numbers. | 88, null. | 107, c. | 126, g. |
| sl, 598. | Wickloe, 682. | a, 60. | 89, null. | 108, c. | 127, null. |
| strong, 599. | Waterford, 683. | b, 50. | 90, l. | 109, d. | 128, h. |
| stay, 600. | wh, 684. | c, 40. | 91, l. | 110, null. | 129, h. |
| steale, 601. | when, 685. | d, 30. | 92, l. | 111, d. | 130, h. |
| suffer, 602. | what, 686. | e, 70. | 93, l. | 112, d. | 131, h. |
| stand, 603. | where, 687. | f, 80. | 94, null. | 113, d. | 132, null. |
| sword, 604. | wherein, 688. | g, 90. | 95, a. | 114, e. | 133, j. |
| severall, 605. | whence, 689. | h, 20. | 96, a. | 115, e. | 134, j. |
| sincere, 606. | while, 690. | i, 10. | 97, a. | 116, e. | 135, j. |
| such, 607. | White, Sir | k, 9. | 98, a. | 117, o. | 136, j. |
| shall, 608. | Nicholas, 691. | l, 100. | 99, null. | 118, null. | 137, k. |
| sufficient, 609. | Warren, Col., 692. | m, 0. | 100, null. | 119, f. | 138, k. |
| suspicion, 610. | Westmeath, Earl, | n, 8. | 101, b. | 120, f. | 139, k. |
| | 693. | o, 7. | 102, b. | 121, f. | 140, k. |
| T. | Wall, Cap., 694. | p, 5. | 103, b. | 122, f. | 141, null. |
| ta, 611. | with, 695. | q, 0. | 104, b. | 123, g. | 142, null. |
| te, 612. | | r, 0. | 105, c. | 124, g. | 143, null. |
| ti, 613. | X. | s, 0. | | | |
| to, 614. | xa, 696. | t, 1,000. | | | |
| tu, 615. | xe, 697. | v, 6. | | | |
| two, 616. | xi, 698. | w, 1. | | | |
| Trim, 617. | xo, 699. | x, 4. | | | |
| take, 618. | xn, 700. | y, 2. | | | |
| troope, 619. | (blank), 701. | z, 3. | | | |
| Ticroughan, 620. | (do.), 702. | | | | |
| Tymolin, 621. | (do.), 703. | To descipher | | | |
| tg, 622. | (do.), 704. | letters. | | | |
| th, 623. | (do.), 705. | 25, m. | | | |
| tl, 624. | | 26, m. | | | |
| ton, 625. | Y. | 27, m. | | | |
| tr, 626. | ya, 706. | 28, m. | | | |
| treat, 627. | Yarner, Lt.-Col., | 29, null. | | | |
| trye, 628. | 707. | 30, n. | | | |
| the, 629. | ye, 708. | 31, n. | | | |
| them, 630. | yet, 709. | 32, n. | | | |
| there, 631. | y[ie]l'd, 710. | 33, n. | | | |
| thaire, 632. | yon, 711. | 34, null. | | | |
| thing, 633. | your, 712. | 35, o. | | | |
| thinke, 634. | [blank], 713. | 36, o. | | | |
| thon, 635. | (do.), 714. | 37, o. | | | |
| thence, 636. | (do.), 715. | 38, o. | | | |
| throaten, 637. | (do.), 716. | 39, null. | | | |
| therefore, 638. | (do.), 717. | 40, p. | | | |
| Taafe, Lord, 639. | | 41, p. | | | |
| Talbot, Sir Henry, | Z. | 42, p. | | | |
| 640. | za, 718. | 43, p. | | | |
| Thomas, M', 641. | ze, 719. | 44, null. | | | |
| this, 642. | zi, 720. | 45, q. | | | |
| trouble, 643. | zo, 721. | 46, q. | | | |
| that, 644. | zu, 722. | 47, q. | | | |
| V. | zeale, 723. | 48, q. | | | |
| Va, 645. | (blank), 724. | 49, null. | | | |
| ve, 646. | (do.), 725. | 50, r. | | | |
| vi, 647. | (do.), 726. | 51, r. | | | |
| vo, 648. | | 52, r. | | | |
| vu, 649. | Numbers. | 53, r. | | | |
| vb, 650. | 1, w. | 54, null. | | | |
| vc, 651. | 2, y. | 55, s. | | | |
| vd, 652. | 3, z. | 56, s. | | | |
| vf, 653. | 4, x. | 57, s. | | | |
| vi, 654. | 5, p. | 58, s. | | | |
| Vlster, 655. | 6, v. | 59, null. | | | |
| vm, 656. | 7, o. | 60, t. | | | |
| vn, 657. | 8, n. | 61, t. | | | |
| vnder, 658. | 9, k. | 62, t. | | | |
| vp, 659. | 10, j. | 63, t. | | | |
| vr, 660. | 20, h. | 64, null. | | | |
| vs, 661. | 30, d. | 65, v. | | | |
| vse, 662. | 40, c. | 66, v. | | | |
| vt, 663. | 50, b. | 67, v. | | | |
| vpon, 664. | 60, a. | 68, v. | | | |
| vnto, 665. | 70, e. | 69, null. | | | |
| (blank), 666. | 80, f. | 70, w. | | | |
| (do.), 667. | 90, g. | 71, w. | | | |
| (do.), 668. | 100, l. | 72, w. | | | |
| (do.), 669. | 0, m. | 73, w. | | | |
| | 0, q. | 74, null. | | | |
| | 0, r. | 75, x. | | | |
| | 0, s. | 76, x. | | | |
| W. | 1,000, t. | 77, x. | | | |
| wa, 670. | | 78, x. | | | |
| we, 671. | Monthes. | 79, null. | | | |
| wi, 672. | March, 727. | 80, y. | | | |
| wo, 673. | April, 728. | 81, y. | | | |
| war, 674. | May, 729. | 82, y. | | | |
| went, 675. | June, 730. | 83, y. | | | |
| win, 676. | July, 731. | 84, null. | | | |
| winter, 677. | August, 732. | 85, z. | | | |
| wr, 678. | | 86, z. | | | |
| write, 679. | | | | | |

Alphabetical letter, nulls:—

| a. | c. | i. | n. | r. | w. |
|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|-----|
| 20. | 40. | 17. | 42. | 60. | 62. |
| 5. | 12. | 11. | 21. | 49. | 38. |
| b. | f. | k. | o. | s. | x. |
| 50. | 16. | 14. | 37. | 57. | 39. |
| 9. | 3. | 1. | 22. | 63. | 56. |
| c. | g. | l. | p. | t. | y. |
| 10. | 30. | 23. | 45. | 69. | 59. |
| 2. | 13. | 4. | 33. | 52. | 70. |
| d. | h. | m. | q. | u. | z. |
| 19. | 48. | 35. | 36. | 58. | 57. |
| 7. | 8. | 18. | 24. | 25. | 28. |

Countries:—

| | |
|-----------------------|--|
| England, 71. | Cashell, 116. |
| Scotland, 72. | Clare, 117. |
| France, 73. | Thomond, 118. |
| Ireland, 74. | Mallow, 119. |
| Spain, 75. | Killmallock, 120. |
| Holland, 76. | Dungarvan, 121. |
| Denmarke, 77. | Dungannon, 122. |
| Germany, 78. | Trim, 123. |
| Seas, 79. | Dingle, 124. |
| Provinces:— | Wickloe, 125. |
| Mounster, 80. | Cappaghquin, 29. |
| Leinster, 81. | Blarne, 26. |
| Ulster, 82. | Persons and People:— |
| Connaught, 83. | English, 126. |
| Meath, 84. | Dutch, 127. |
| Wales, 85. | French, 128. |
| Cornwall, 86. | Spannish, 129. |
| Mountaines, 87. | Scotch, 130. |
| Coasts:— | Welsh, 131. |
| The North, 88. | Danes, 132. |
| The West, 89. | Irish, 133. |
| The South, 90. | Swedes, 15. |
| The East, 91. | Turkes, 6. |
| Counties, Cities, and | Gen. Cromwell, 134. |
| Townes:— | Gen. Fleetwood, 135. |
| Dublin, 92. | Lt.-Gen. Ludlow, 136. |
| Kilkenny, 93. | Mr. Corbett, 137. |
| Corke, 94. | Mr. Jones, 138. |
| Lymerick, 95. | Com ^{rs} of Parliam ^t , 139. |
| Galloway, 96. | Consoll of State, 140. |
| Sligo, 97. | Com ^{rs} of Revenue, 141. |
| Leytrim, 98. | Sir Hard. Waller, 142. |
| Rosecommon, 99. | Col. Zanchie, 143. |
| Mayo, 00. | Adjut ^{nt} Gen. Allen, 144. |
| Kerry, 000. | Sir Cha. Coote, 145. |
| Waterford, 100. | Col. Hnsou, 146. |
| Tipperary, 101. | Col. Axtell, 147. |
| Wexford, 102. | Col. Richards, 148. |
| Athlone, 103. | Col. Sadler, 149. |
| Drogheda, 104. | Col. Stubber, 150. |
| Catherlagh, 105. | Col. Ingoldsby, 151. |
| Clonmell, 106. | Col. Lawrence, 152. |
| Yoghill, 107. | Col. Hen. Cromwell, 153. |
| Kinsale, 108. | Col. Phaier, 154. |
| Bandon, 109. | Col. Sanders, 155. |
| Fort Cromwell, 110. | Lt. Col. Nelson, 156. |
| Baltimore, 111. | Major Wallis, 157. |
| Castlehaven, 0. | Col. Abbott, 158. |
| Londonderry, 112. | Commissary Gen. Rey- |
| Coleraine, 113. | nolds, 159. |
| Carlickfergus, 114. | Lord of Corke, 160. |
| Charlemount, 115. | Lady Corke, 161. |
| | Lord Broghill, 162. |

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Lady Broghill, 163.
Fra. Boyle, 164.
Robert Boyle, 165.
Sir W^m. Fenton, 166.
Sir A. Loftus, 167.
Lady Rannalagh, 168.
Judge Donolane, 169.
Ch. Justice Cooke, 170.
States Attorney, 171.
King, 172.
Ormond, 173.
Inchiquin, 174.
Clanrickard, 175.
Castlehaven, 176.
Lord Muskry, 177.
Parliament, 186.
Col. Sydney, 183.
Lord Com^r Whitlock, 184.
Mr Scott, 185.
Commonwealth, 187.
Committee, 188.
Independants, 178.
Anabaptists, 179.

Presbyterians, 180.
Papists, 181.
Old Protestants, 182.
Cavaliers, 189.
Army, 190.
Admirall, 191.
Gen. Blake, 192.
Parliament Fleete, 193.
French Shippes, 194.
Parliament Frigott, 196.
Commander of Irish
Sea, 197.
Man of Warre, 202.
Governor of, 203.
Comander of, 204.
Vice Admirall, 206.
Sir Theo. Jones, 198.
Scoutmaster Gen^l, 199.
Quarterm. Gen. Vernon,
200.
Lord Bishop of Clogher,
201.
Duke of York, 205.

Ratification, 128. shipp, 188.
Readie, 138. strength, 198.
Remonstrance, state, 208.
148. supply, 218.
revolte, 158. transport, 228.
Sea, 168. treatie, 238.
secret, 178. understand, 248.

wait, 258.
which, 268.
what, 278.
when, 288.
why, 298.

TRINITY COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

Names of Persons and Things:—

Lord Protector, 129. Anabaptists, 210.
Lord H. Cromwel, 139. Ormonde, 220.
Lord [Chancellor] Steel, 149. Irish, 230.
Lord Deputy Fleetwood, Priests, 240.
159. Jesuits, 250.
Leivt. Gen. Ludlow, 169. Conncel, 260.
Coll. Herbert, Secret[ary]. Coll. Cooper, 270. to the Conncell, 179. Lord. Broghill, 280.
Sir Hardress Waller, 189. Armie, 290.
Sir Charles Coote, 199. Scotland, 300.
Coll. Sanders, 209. Ireland, 301.
Coll. Abbot, 219. Presbiteriens, 302.
Coll. Lawrence, 229. Independents, 303.
Coll. Sankey, 239. Levellers, 304.
Coll. Morgan, 249. Royalists, 305.
Coll. Thomlinson, 259. partie, 306.
Lord Inchiquen, 269. faction, 307.
Mr. Berry, 279. rising, 308.
Lord Lambert, 289. general, 309.
Lord Rich. Cromwell, 299. Leivt. Gen., 310.
Lord Chief Justice Pepyes, Maj. Gen., 311.
130. Major, 312.
Lord Chief Baron Corbet, Captain, 313.
140. Lieutenant, 314.
Rob. Goodwin, 150. officers, 315.
Maj. Gener. Harrison, 160. troupe, [316.]
Coll. Rich, 170. Regiment, 317.
Coll. Danvers, 180. Horse, 318.
Vic. Admir. Lawson, 190. foot, 319.
Mr. Wildman, 200.

Absolute, 48. My, 314. G, 15.
Able, 49. Observe, 351. H, 600.
Aloud, 50. Plunket, Nic., I, 14.
Bishop, 69. 379. K, 570.
Beate, 70. Quiet, 388. L, 8.
Beaten, 71. Resolue, 402. M, 591.
Broken, 72. Resolution, 403. N, 19.
Beseech, 73. several, 426. O, 590.
Dealing, 133. true, 447. P, 7.
Denounce, 134. truth, 448. Q, 700.
Death, 135. understand, 462. R, 710.
Event, 158. write, 487. S, 800.
Fale, 194. A, 17. T, 5.
Furnish, 195. B, 550. V, 802.
Flight, 196. C, 20. W, 4.
Graunt, 215. D, 552. X, 810.
Helpe, 239. E, 18. Y, 809.
Heare, 240. F, 556. Z, 3.

Endorsed: Rochford Cypher.

XI.

CYPHERS USED IN IRISH GOVERNMENT CORRESPONDENCE, 1665.

[16]49 officers, K. The Earle of St. Albans, 48.
The new Soldiery, I. Lord of Antrim, 47.
Adventurers, H. Lord of Anglesey, 46.
Dublin ordinance, G. Duke of Yorke, 45.
False admeasurement, F. Duchesse of Yorke, 44.
Discoverer, E. Lord Chanceller of Eng-
A thousand pounds, D. land, 43.
Hundreds, C. Lord Bristol, 42.
Bribery, A. Lord Duke of Ormond, 41.
Discovered, B. His Duchesse, 40.
Plotters in England, L. Sir George Lane, 39.
Plotters in Ireland, M. Earl of Ossory, 38.
Phanatique, N. House of Commons there,
Bill for Settlement, O. 37.
The Acte for Settlement, P. House of Lords there, 36.
The Declaration, R. Prorogued, 35.
Instructions, S. Dissolved, 34.
Comm^r of Claimes, T. To send over here, 31.
Sir Rich. Rainsford, V. To send over there, 30.
Churchill, W. Military Employement, 29.
Brodericke, X. Determine att pleasure, 28.
The 3 Com^r there, Y. Sale of offices, 27.
The King, Z. Lord President of Con-
His Queene, aught, 26.
The Queene Mother, 50. Lord Fitzharding, 25.
Abbott Mountague, 49. Lord Lotherdale, 24.

Sub-number 4.

| A. | E. | J. | N. | R. | W. |
|-----|------|------|------|------|------|
| 5. | 9. | 14. | 18. | 23. | 27. |
| 32. | 36. | 41. | 45. | 49. | 54. |
| 58. | 63. | 67. | 72. | 76. | 81. |
| 85. | 89. | 104. | 108. | 113. | 117. |
| B. | F. | K. | O. | S. | X. |
| 6. | 11. | 15. | 19. | 24. | 28. |
| 33. | 37. | 42. | 46. | 51. | 55. |
| 59. | 64. | 68. | 73. | 77. | 82. |
| 86. | 101. | 105. | 109. | 114. | 118. |
| C. | G. | L. | P. | T. | Y. |
| 7. | 12. | 16. | 21. | 25. | 29. |
| 84. | 38. | 43. | 47. | 52. | 56. |
| 61. | 65. | 69. | 74. | 78. | 83. |
| 87. | 102. | 106. | 111. | 115. | 119. |
| D. | H. | M. | Q. | V. | Z. |
| 8. | 13. | 17. | 22. | 26. | 31. |
| 35. | 39. | 44. | 48. | 53. | 57. |
| 62. | 66. | 71. | 75. | 79. | 84. |
| 88. | 103. | 107. | 112. | 116. | 120. |

aw, 121. ef, 183. ju, 245. ac, 131. eg, 193. Ka, 255. ad, 141. el, 203. ke, 265.
af, 151. else, 213. ki, 275.
ag, 161. en, 223. ko, 285.
aj, 171. end, 233. la, 295. am, 181. op, 243. le, 126.
an, and, 191. cr, 253. lest, 136.
as, 201. es, 263. let, 146. at, 211. est, 273. li, 156.
aw, 221. ew, 283. lo, 166. ba, 231. ex, 293. low, 176. be, 241. fa, 124. lu, 186. bet, 251. fe, 134. ma, 196.
bi, 261. fend, 144. me, 206. bit, 271. fer, 154. men, 216. but, 281. fi, 164. mi, 226.
ca, 291. fitt, 174. my, 236.
can, 122. first, 184. mo, 246. cause, 132. fo, 194. mu, 256.
ce, 142. for, 204. na, 266.
co, 152. force, 214. ne, 276.
com, 162. foot, 224. ni, 286. cost, 172. fu, 234. no, 296.
cn, 182. ga, 244. not, 127.
da, 192. ge, 254. nu, 137.
day, 202. gi, 264. oc, 147.
dain, 212. go, 274. od, 157.
dar, 222. gu, 284. op, 167.
de, 232. ha, 294. ot, 177.
des, 242. hand, 125. ow, 187.
det, 252. he, 135. or, 197.
di, 262. bel, 145. pa, 207. dif, 272. head, 155. pe, 217.
dis, 282. hi, 165. pi, 227.
do, 292. him, 175. po, 237. don, 123. his, 185. pu, 247.
dow, 133. ho, 195. qu, 257.
du, 143. hu, 205. ra, 267. eb, 153. Ja, 215. re, 277.
ec, 163. Je, 225. ri, 287.
ed, 173. jo, 235. ro, 297.

Lord Ashley, 23.
 Lord Priuy Seale, 22.
 Secretary Bennett, 21.
 Marquis of Dorchester, 20.
 Sir William Petty, 19.
 Lord Massareene, 18.
 Lord Orrery, 17.
 Lord Kingston, 16.
 Lord Conway, 15.
 Chancellor of Ireland, 14.
 Chiefe Baron of Ireland,
 13.
 Lord Coloony, 12.
 Townes in Mounster, 11.
 Sir Theophilus Jones, 10.
 Sir John Temple, 9.
 Mr. Temple, 8.
 Sir William Domville, 7.
 Mr. o Neile, 6.
 Lady Ranalugh, 5.
 Displeased with proceedings, 4.
 Fully resolved, 3.
 Charge of treason, 2.
 Former proceedings, 1.
 And and or, 100.
 Anerse, 99.
 Restitution, 98.
 Qualification, 97.
 Libells, 96.
 Lord Clancarthy, 95.
 Dr. Gorge, 92.
 Sir James Shane, 93.
 Conaught purchasers, 91.
 Blackwell's estate, 90.
 Hunckes estate, 89.
 Decrees, 88.
 Made good, 87.
 Nobility heere, 86.
 Solicitor heere, 85.
 Attorney heere, 84.
 Letters opened, 83.
 Privy Council here, 82.
 Prime Council there, 81.
 Archbishop of Dublin, 80.
 Juncto, 79.
 Parliament heere, 78.
 Consultation, 77.
 Re-assumed, 76.
 Vnprofitable land, 75.
 Vnrestorable houses, 74.
 Informer, 73.
 Spye, 72.
 6th parte, 71.
 Troubled in mind, 72.
 Committee, 69.
 English Acre, 68.
 Irish Acre, 67.
 Letter for Antrim, 66.
 Papers, 65.
 Portugall, 64.
 Battanill, 63.
 Ireland, 62.
 Souldiers, 61.
 Halberdeers, 60.
 Promiscos, 101.
 Advantage, 102.
 Scandall, 103.
 To blast, 104.
 M^r Richard Jones, 105.
 M^r John Keating, 106.
 Adhacrentes, 107.
 Interpreted, 108.
 Character, 109.
 Forcited subscriptions,
 110.
 A Letter from the King,
 111.
 A Letter for Roscomon,
 112.
 A Letter from Priue Councel, 113.
 Custodiams, 114.
 Reprisalls, 115.
 Preuius, 116.
 A Lease, 117.
 Customes, 118.
 Excise, 119.
 Chimney Money, 120.
 To passe patents, 121.
 Earle of Warwicke, 122.
 Earle of Corke, 123.
 Earl of Arran, 124.
 Dicke Talbot, 125.
 Coll. Legge, 126.
 Sir Thomas Clargos, 127.
 Duke of Albemarle, 128.
 Old proprietor, 129.
 Accomptable, 130.
 Frinds, 131.
 Noe frinds, 132.
 Enemyes, 133.
 Revenue of England, 134.
 Revenue of Ireland, 135.
 Defray, 136.
 Penny an acre, 137.
 My Lord Ranalough, 1.
 My Lord Drogheda, 138.
 My Lord Dunganng, 139.
 Knight Marshall, 140.
 Maj. Goodwin, 141.
 Earl of Carlingford, 142.
 Intercept, 143.
 Be wary, 144.
 Duke of Buckingham, 145.
 Courtier, 146.
 Restoring, 147.
 Taken away, 148.
 Purveyance, 149.
 Courte of Wards, 150.
 Tryannual Parliament, 151.
 [M.S. torn.], 152.
 Noe hopes, 153.
 Receiue, 154.
 Eschequer, 155.
 Mr. Conentry, 156.
 Adnuise, 157.
 Betrayers of Mounster, 158.
 Earl of Southampton, 159.
 Reduce, 160.
 Those whoe serued under Olinier, 161.
 I feare, 162.
 Raysed money, 163.
 Ranneth out, 164.
 Is displeased, 165.
 To appeale, 166.
 Secure the peace, 167.
 Vanderstands, 168.
 noe faith, 169.
 hould all advantage, 170.
 Worcester house, 171.
 Somersett house, 172.
 generally beloned, 173.
 generally hated, 174.
 Agreed, 175.
 Money, 176.
 hane drawne Bills, 177.
 The Country gentlemen,
 178.
 Lord of Musgrye, 179.
 Sir Robt. Byron, 180.
 Seizure, 181.
 Custome, 182.
 Sir Nich. Armorer, 183.
 Sir Daniell Bellingham,
 184.
 halfe yeares rent, 185.
 Company of foot, 186.
 Troupe of horse, 187.
 Mounster, 188.
 Connaught, 189.
 Vlyster, 190.
 Leinster, 191.
 Gouernor of Derry, 192.
 not right, 193.
 Remoind into the other
 prouince, 194.
 England, 196.
 Graunts, 197.
 Acre, 198.
 Robin Leigh, 199.
 Difference between man and wife, 200.
 for Sir Maurice Berkeley,
 201.
 Adam Loftus, 204.
 Sir Arthur Forbes, 205.
 Secretary Maurice, 206.
 Custodiam Rents, 207.
 Arrears before '49, 208.
 Recommended thither, 209.

Young Sir Maurice Eustace, Cormuck o Neile, 235.
 210.
 Renersion, 211.
 A place, 212.
 M^r of the Rolls, 213.
 Auditor General, 214.
 Confirmed, 215.
 Duke of Ormond, 216.
 That party, 217.
 Maj^r Goodwyn, 219.
 Assignees, 220.
 My Lord Dillon, 221.
 My Lord Bringham, 222.
 Sir Robert Talbot, 223.
 John Walsh, 224.
 Secured, 225.
 English interest, 226.
 List of restorable persons,
 227.
 Army, 228.
 Greate joy, 229.
 Wee drinke solemnly, 230.
 Patrons, 231.
 Muster rowls, 232.
 sould their estates, 233.
 The bookes of Grocers' Hall,
 234.
 His injunction, 236.
 My Lady o Neile, 237.
 In general words, 238.
 A preference, 239.
 Satisfiable debentures, 240.
 Stated, 241.
 Sir Robert Rooth, 242.
 My Lord Inchiquin, 243.
 Mrs. Frances Jones, 244.
 Recommended thither, 245.
 Treasurer for the [16]49
 security, 246.
 Dublin, 247.
 A marriage, 248.
 Lord Ranelagh, 249.
 Decrees since the 2^d of
 July, 250.
 The farming of inland Excise and licensing Ale, 251.
 Sir Hanns Hamilton, 252.
 Coll. Clayton, 253.
 The Dutch, 254.
 For the fleet, 255.
 [M.S. torn.]

XII.

NARRATIVE BY SIR THEOPHILUS JONES OF HIS CON-FERENCE WITH COLONEL ALEXANDER JEPHSON, IN RELATION TO CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT OF CHARLES II., IN IRELAND, A.D. 1663.

A narrative of what passed in discourse betweene Alexander Jephson, of Trim, in the Co. of Meath and mee, Sir Theophilus Jones, at Lucan, on Tuesday, May 19, 1663, whereof I, Sir Theophilus Jones, gave an account to His Grace the Duke of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, on oathe, on next morning being Wednesday, May 20, 1663.

On Tuesday, the 19 of May 1663, Colonel Jeofferies and I (Sir Theophilus Jones) being at Lucan, about 5 miles from Dublin, and walking neere the bridge of Lucan, expecting the Lord Angier's troope, which he,
 the said Col. Jeoffries, commanded as Lieutenant, which troope were marching that way to Dublin, and to he that night quartered at Lucan; betweene 9 and 10 in the morninge he discovered the said troope on their march towards us, and we thereupon walking over the bridge at the end thereof we mett with Alexander Jephson aforesaid, who being newly allighted wee saluted him, and immediately after the troope marched over the bridge and drewe up neere it; and while Col. Jeofferies was ordering and providing quarters for his men, he, the said Mr. Jephson, began a discourse with me, Sir Theophilus Jones, of the Court of Claimes, and of their judging [away] estates from the English, and he, the said Jephson, said that he never observed so generall a discontent among the English as at present by reason of those proceedings; and that it was not possible that the English should long beare it, or wordes to that purpose. He often asked me when Lucan would come to triall. I answered, that the 17 or June was appointed for the trial, and that I doubted not of goodde successe, for that the Sarcfields would be found guilty enough. On which the said Jephson replied, saying, If you loose it (as I beleeve you will), yet if it be not your owne fault you shall have it againe before seaven thousand yeares be over;
 I surely (said I), before then or never. He then asked me if halfe a dozen horsemen, herty good fellowes (as he called them) had not that day passed towards Dublin. I told him that there passed that way some of Lientenant Thomson's men going (as they said) to be mustred at Dublin. They are not those, said Jeph[son], whom I enquire after, but some of mine owne; I then told him that they might passe and I not see them; soone after, he would have taken leave and be gone, for (said he) I must be at Dublin to prepare for a trial I have on Thursday at the Court of Claimes.
 I told him that he should do well to see his horse first shodd (for I then espied his having cast a shoe), which he conceiving necessary to be done, one of my servants led his horse to the forge; whereupon I desired him to walke into the house; he asked me how my wife and children did; I sayd they were well; I will see

TRINITY
COLLEGE,
DUBLIN.

them, said he; and wee having viewed the troope, which was drawn up neere us, Col. Jeofferys, Mr. Jephson, and myselfe, walked together toward the house, and when wee were entering the house, he, the said Jephson, desired to speake a word with me privately; on which I desired Col. Jeofferys that he would be pleased to walk in, and that I would immediately waite on him, which he did accordingly. And then walking aside with the said Jephson, he, the said Jephson, asked me how long I had knowne Col. Jeofferys; I answered, not very long, and only since my last being in England; he, the said Jephson, then advised me to beware of him; I asked why? he was (said he) lately at Trim, and spoke well of the Commissioners, saying that they were just men, and much to that purpose. I told him that in that I apprehended no danger in him, and so desired him to walke in; and being entred the hall, he espied some preparations for dinner, and said, I cannot dine with you; but if you and I (said he) may go into some roome I have something to say to you. On which I led him into the buttery, being the roome next at hande, calling for a tankard of ale and a bottle of cidar, with a dish of meate for him; and while those things were in preparing, he, the said Jephson, said, I knowe you love the English, and turning about made a little pause: (I supposing in that and in former passages mentioned that something was to be gotten out of him,) I said that I hoped he made no question of that; thereupon he said, that Providence had led him to me, and that if I would be secret he would discover that to me which would be to mine advantage, or wordes to that effect. I replied that I hoped he would propose nothing to me but what was honest and just, and in that he might be well assured of secreacie from me. He answered, that it should be nothing but what was for the good of the English and the preservation of the English interest: If so (said I), you shall then have not only secreacie but assurance of what I may contribute toward it. By which time meate being brought in, and having eaten a litle and being after more private, he then began, saying; well, will you be secrete; but if you will not, heere are none but you and I; and if you bringe me before the Counsell board, I will denie every thing and criminat you and make you black enough; and much more to that purpose. I answered, that he need not feare his being brought into danger or trouble by me, for revealing any secrete that was for the good of the English interest; he then said he would tell me nothing but what was for the good of the English and the preservation of the English interest. And thereupon laying his hand on a large sword which he then had by his side, he said that he had not worne that sworde in thirteene yeares before; and that hee had made his will and left his wife and 13 children behind him, and was then going to Dublin, where hee said that hee and many more were resolved to adventure their lives, and that before seven thousand yeares (his former expression), they doubted not to secure the English interest, which was now said he on ruining. And further said that they were assured of the Castle of Dublin and of Corke, Limerick, Waterford, and Clonmel. I told him that this seemed to be a very high undertaking and required many weighty considerations for effecting it, particularly a good army and money to maintaine it. Thereupon the said Jephson said, we want not an army, for there are 15,000 Scots excommunicated in the North by the Bishop of Downe and the rest of the Bishops, which he said were ready within two dayes, and that they doubted not but that our owne Army would joine with them. And that (as he said) they had a banke of money in Dublin sufficient to pay off all the arrears of the army, both in Oliver's time and since the King came in; and that he did not knowe from whence the banke of money should come, if not (said he) from Holland; and that (if he were not mistaken) he did see three or four firkins caried into Mr. Boyd's house; and that he himself could command out of the banck £500 (said he) to-morrow. Farther, he said, that they had a wise counsell of considerable persons such (said he) as you are not aware of, who managed this business, and that if I had seene the scheame and modle of all things, which were particularly sett doune in writing, I would wonder at the exactnes of it. He said also that Mr. Roberts, who had been heere auditor under Oliver, was for 2 months past casting up the arrears of the army and had now perfected it; so as it was knowne what was due to every one, and that such as would joine with them should be paid off every where. That there were 1,000 horse in Dublin for the securing the city, which hee said Sir Henry Ingoldesby was to

appeare withall as soone as the Castle was taken, and a flagg put up, of which he said they no way doubted. That they intended to offer no violence to any but such as opposed them. That the Lord Lieutenant's person was to be seized on, but to be civilly treated; that severall other persons were to be secured, and particularly that he, the said Jephson, was to seize on the Earl of Clancarrthy and on Col. Fitzpatrick. That every party had their particular orders to surprize each of the guards in the city: And said further, that one McCormick or McDvitt, see he expressed it, for hee said hee knew him not, was a great person in this action. He said that there were six ministers in Dublin who went about in priwigs, but laid them by when they were in prayer, and that these were to be in the streete to see that no plunder or disorder should be committed. That a declaration was ready, of which he said many thousand copies were printed, which should be dispersed, declaring that this undertaking was for securing the English interest in the three kingdoms which was on ruining by the countenance given to Popery. That all the English should possesse such estates as they had on the 7 of May 1659. That religion should be settled according to the solemn League and Covenant; adding, that they would overturne the 3 kingdomes. He said that the word which was to be given on the taking of the Castle was for the King and English interest. In conclusion, he told me that they had resolved, after the taking of the Castle and City, to offer me the command of the Army, which he said would be 20,000 men; and that I should runne no hazard in it, but might sit still and not appeare until the whole worke were done, saying, that there were but two persons onely (whom he named not) who (said he) were against me in this, they saying that I was not to be trusted, being too greate a creature of the Duke's; but that these prevailed not therein, all the rest being for me, he farther adding, that, being offred that command, if I should refuse it, that they had others in view, and said that then I should looke to my selfe; and with many expressions of kindnes to me, he advised me not to refuse it, with much to that purpose: After which we parted, hee going forthwith toward Dublin.

This is the substance to the best of my remembrance of the passages and discourses then had with Mr. Jephson; briefe heades whereof I carefully committed forthwith to paper for helping my memory, whereby I might give his Grace the best account I could of it, which was done by me according to my duty the then next morning, as is herein formerly mentioned.

Endorsed: Sir Theophilus Jones, his Narrative of the passages with Alexander Jephson, concerning the late conspiracy, May 19, 1663.

On a future occasion, I hope to submit to the Commission a further Report on Manuscripts in the collection of Trinity College, Dublin.

JOHN T. GILBERT.

Villa Nova, Blackrock, Dublin, 27th December 1880.

THE MANUSCRIPTS BELONGING TO THE EWELME ALMSHOUSE, IN THE COUNTY OF OXFORD.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

The Rev. W. W. Harvey, rector of Ewelme, and an ex-officio trustee of the Almsouse, has drawn up an account of the manuscripts, and with the consent of the other trustees has sent it to the Commissioners. From his account, not having seen the original documents, I have made large extracts, and the results are below.

In the 15th Henry VI., William de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and Alice his wife, obtained a license from the King to found an almsouse for two chaplains and 13 poor men. They accordingly founded such almsouse, which has continued to the present day, and endowed it with three manors. The manuscripts consist chiefly of documents relating to these manors. Alice, the wife of the Earl Suffolk, was the daughter of Thomas Chaucer, son of Geoffrey Chaucer, the poet. Thomas Chaucer by his marriage became lord of the manor of Ewelme, and his tomb is in Ewelme church.

Some of the documents show the rate of wages, and prices of building materials, horses, and other beasts in the 14th and following centuries, and there are long lists of chamber furniture and furniture for the chapel, temp. Edw. IV., with service books and two or three romances. The court rolls shew the customs of manors and the regulations for tenants, and the use of the common lands.

EWELEME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.EWELEME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

A. 1. Middle of 14th century. Fragment of a roll containing medical and other recipes, some in French and some in Latin. The third line is "Explicuit signa 'mortis hominis.'" The fourth line is the heading of a recipe, "Pour dolour et duresse de ventre." It contains a receipt for making gunpowder, in Latin, as an experiment for the laboratory; but makes no mention of its use for military purposes. The battle of Crécy had not yet been fought. There are altogether 141 lines.

A. 2. 33 Edw. III., Feb. 3. John, Abbot of the monastery of Grestens, in Normandy, in the diocese of Lisieux, and the convent of the same place, release to Sir Thomas de la Pole, his heirs and assigns, all their right in the manors of Norton, co. Somerset, Connok, co. Wilts, Ramrugge, co. Hants, and Mersch, co. Bucks, which he held for the residue of a term of 1,000 years, for which the said manors and other manors had been demised by the abbot and convent to Erdeman de Lembergh, who assigned the said four manors to Sir Thomas de la Pole.

A. 3. 14th century. Copies from a psalter of the following entries in Latin:—This psalter belongs to Dom. Edmund de la Pole, K^t, by gift from his mother, Lady Katherine de la Pole.—And in French, Pray for the soul of Lady Katherine de la Pole [mother of Mons' Edmund de la Pole, who gave this psalter to the said Edmund with her blessing.—Dates of the births of all the children of Sir Edmund de la Pole.—Birth of Elizabeth, the daughter of Edmund de la Pole and Dame Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Richard de Handle, 14 July 1362.—Birth of Katherine, daughter of Edmund and Elizabeth, 1369.—Birth of Walter, son of the said Edmund de la Pole and Dame Matilda, his wife, daughter of John Lovet, of the county of Bucks, 1371.—Birth of Cecily, daughter of Edmund and Matilda, 1373.—Birth of Ed. de la Pole, son of the said Walter de la Pole and Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas de Bradston, K^t, A.D. 1391, and the 15th year of the reign of Richard the Second after the Conquest.

A. 6. 1380, January 14. London. (French.) Lease by Sir Michael de la Pole to Richard Willkokes, of Mersch, of the manor of Mersch, and 200 sheep, and the appurtenances of the manor, for 10 years, at the yearly rent of 50 marks. The lessee was to do all repairs, except to the hall and the kitchen; the lessor was to supply timber [meresne] to repair the mill.

A. 7. Three rent rolls of . . . de la Pole for property in the county of Lincoln.

A. 10-19. Various conveyances and documents (1433-1435) relating to the manors of Mersch, co. Bucks, Grafton, co. Northampton, Norton, Connok, co. Wilts, and Ramrugge, co. Hants.

A. 20. 15 Hen. VI. Royal pardon to John Hampden, of Hampden, Esq., Richard Restwold, Esq., and Andrew Sperlynge, for their trespass in having without the King's license purchased from William de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, the manors of Norton, Connok, and Ramrugge, which were held in chief of the King.

A. 21. 15 Hen. VI., July 3.—The King licenses William de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and Alice his wife, to found an almshouse at Ewelme, co. Oxford, for two chaplains and 13 poor men, to be appointed by the Earl and Countess, or either of them; the chaplains to celebrate divine service, and the chaplains and poor men to pray for the good estate of the King, Earl, and Countess during life, and for their souls after death, and for the souls of the King's progenitors, and for the souls of the parents, friends, and benefactors of the Earl and Countess, and of all faithful dead; the said almshouse to be for ever called Ewelme almshouse. The said chaplain and poor men to be a corporation, and to have a common seal, with power to take real estate and prosecute and defend actions. License to the Earl and Countess and all other persons to grant to the said chaplains and poor men real estate to the yearly value of 100 marks, and for the chaplains and poor men to hold such, notwithstanding the statute of mortmain, provided that by inquisitions duly taken and returned into Chaucery it be found that such grants are without prejudice to the King or his heirs. (A memorandum is indorsed that on the 21st of February, in the 20th year of the King, the chaplains and poor men purchased lands and tenements of the yearly value of 59*l.*, in part satisfaction of the within mentioned 100 marks.)

A. 22. Agreement by the Earl and Countess of Suffolk to endow the chaplain and poor men of the Ewelme Almshouse with the manors of Connock and Ramridge.

A. 23. 20 Hen. VI., Feb. 24. Royal license to Wm. de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and Alice, his wife, to grant the manor of Mersch, with the appurtenances, except the advowson of the church of the said manor, and the manor of Connok, with the appurtenances, and the manor of Ramrugge, with the appurtenances, except the advowson of the church of the manor, all held of the King in chief and worth 59*l.* yearly, to the said chaplains and poor men, and license for the latter to receive the grant, notwithstanding the statute of mortmain.

A. 24. Final agreement of the Earl of Suffolk and the Countess to endow the almshouse with the manors of Mersch, Connok, and Ramridge.

A. 25. Original copy of the Statutes of the Hospital.

A. 26. 1480, Lambeth. Ratification by Thomas, Cardinal Priest of St. Cyriac in the Baths, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Papal Legate, of the Statutes of Ewelme Almshouse, which had been laid before him by Master William Marton, Master of the said Almshouse, in compliance with the last wills of the said Earl and Countess of Suffolk. (The Statutes are set out on two large skins of vellum, and illuminated. Dated from "Lame byche.") The seal has been removed.

A. 28. 1641. Copy of the Charter of the Corporation of Andover. A.D. 1437.

A. 29. 22 Hen. VI. Tripartite agreement between William Earl of Suffolk, founder of the Priory of Our Lady of Snape, William, Abbot of the Monastery of St. John of Colchester, in the diocese of London, and William, Prior of Snape, made in consequence of disputes which had arisen with respect to the rights of patronage and visitation of the said Priory. The Earl of Suffolk claimed the right of presentation as representative of the founder, subject to institution by the Bishop of Norwich as diocesan; the Abbot of St. John of Colchester claimed to present, and asserted that his convent had always exercised visitatorial rights over the Priory of Snape; while the Prior of Snape asserted that the convent elected their own prior. The case having been fully argued by counsel it was agreed that on every avoidance the Earl and his successors should nominate a monk of the order of St. Benedict to the Priory of Snape; that the Abbot and Convent of St. John of Colchester should present this nominee to the Bishop of Norwich for institution; and that they should abandon all claim of visitation and exercise of spiritual jurisdiction over the Priory of Snape, and continue to receive an annual rentcharge of 6*s.* 8*d.* from the Priory according to custom. (At the foot is a notice of the nomination by the Duchess of Suffolk in 1461 of a Benedictine monk to the Priory of Snape, charging the Abbot of the Monastery of St. John, Colchester, to present him to the Bishop for institution; and a marginal memorandum gives the name of the nominee as John Stanground, a Benedictine monk, "expresse professum," late Prior of Hockesley.)

A. 30.—12 Hen. IV. Court roll of the manor of Connok, Sir Thomas de la Pole being the lord. John Whyte comes and takes the whole site of the manor to hold the same to the said John and Edith his wife, for their lives and the life of the survivor of them, at the yearly rent of 20*l.* When an entire fifteenth is paid to the King within the year the lord in that year to pay half the fifteenth, but in the other years nothing. The said John is to have every Christmas day a vesture of the suit of the lord's valets, or 6*s.* 8*d.*, at the lord's option. The homage make various presentations; among others, that Thomas Pope, the lord's naif by blood has elogned himself from the demesne; so his nearest relatives are ordered to bring him in before the next court under a penalty.

—Hen. IV. (date destroyed). John Bayes takes a tenement of the lord and gives 13*s.* 4*d.* as a fine for entry, and does fealty.—The homage present a tenement as ruinous, and the pound as in a bad state.—John Pope and Philip Pope are fined 6*d.* for the absence of Thomas Pope the lord's naif (mentioned in the preceding roll), to be paid at the next court if the lord so please.

A. 31. Rolls of Computi for the manor of Mersch. 18-19 Ric. II. to 1505.

In the first is entered the payment of rent resolute called "Le Fryth" for the said manor, 2*s.*—For a demise of the mill in this year, 13*s.* 4*d.*; the whole amount laid out on the mill was 31*s.* 10*d.* The steward's fee for the year 13*s.* 4*d.*, and the heyward's 6*s.* 8*d.*—For the fifteenth granted by the laymen to the King, 8*s.* 11*d.*

In the roll for 8-9 Hen. IV., the receivers charge themselves with 21*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* rent of the tenants in bondage; and with 14*s.* 4*d.* for the sale of the goods and chattels of Richard St. John, as appear by the court rolls.—There was a loss of 12*s.* in rent because three quatrions, each of which used to be let for 4*s.*, were vacant and in the lord's hands. The payment called "Le Fryth" to the King, amounted to 3*s.* 9*d.*, being 1*s.* 3*d.* for each of three virgates of land.—And 8*s.* 11*d.*

were paid to the King for the fifteenth granted to him in that year.

In the roll for the 13-14 Hen. IV. are entries of receipts of 3s. 4d. and two capons as the perquisites of a view of frankpledge, at a court holden on Friday after All Saints' day, and 23s. 4d. and two capons as the perquisites of a court held in April.—Vacant lands consisting of 4 virgates, 1 quarteron 10 acres and a half, 1 croft, 2 gardens and 2 closes were sold for 21s. 6d.—The payment called "Le Fryth" for land in the lord's hand was 6s. 4d.—Two carpenters and a plaisterer were paid 2d. per day each for work; and two pairs of gloves for the carpenters cost 4d.—John Reeche the lord's preceptor was paid 38s. 4d.

In the roll for 19 Hen. VI. it appears that 22l. 15s. 10d. was received from rents of assize of the free, naif, and cottar tenants.—The demesne land was let at 6l. 13s. 4d. yearly.—The perquisites of two courts including heriots of the value of 43s. 8d. came to 49s. 3d.—The total receipts, with the arrears, amounted to 86l. 11s. 9d.

A. 32. Court roll of the manor of Mersh for 7 Ric. II. (damaged).—William Thomas is in mercy for selling a horse without the lord's license.—Richard St. John gives two capons as a fine for leave to hold a messuage.—Another man has leave to hold a cottage at the yearly rent of 2s. and doing one day's mowing at his own costs.

10 Hen. IV. Rental of the manor of Mersh.

A. 33.—18 Ric. II. Rent roll of the manor of Ramridge, Thomas de la Pole being the lord. In this it is stated that John de Brugge, parson of the church of Wee, held a messuage and a virgate of land at 8s. yearly.

13 Hen. VI. Rent roll of this date. Indorsed with payments to 25 labourers at 2d. per day each.

Computi for the same manor.—21 Hen. VI. In this is entered a payment of 4l. to the sheriff of Hants as a fine paid to the King's Bench, 20 Hen. VI., by the poor men of the Alms-house of Nywelme [Ewelme], called Nywelme Alms-hous, for license to agree with the Earl of Suffolk and Alice his wife, in a plea of covenant for the manors of Conuck, Ramryge, and Mersh.—And in 1447 a payment to the bailiff of Andover as a fine for his releasing the lord's suit at the law court and hundred court at Andover.—In 1455 and 1456 are accounts of various payments for repairs; 300 lath nails cost 13d. The great chamber of the manor was tiled.

W. Marton succeeded John Synesbury as Master, 1 Feb. 1455, and first assumed the title of "Magister." The last of these computi is for 1494.

A. 34. Court rolls of the manor of Ramridge, 1378, and 1435 to 1496.—In 1378 Sir Michael de la Pole was lord of the manor. In this year he had for heriot a sow, value 3s., on the death of a tenant; and from divers tenants 6s. 9d. for pannage for 61 pigs and 48 hogs; and 4s. 7½d. for the agistment of 24 cows, 20 oxen, and 13 heifers.—John Brugge, parson of the church of Wee, takes a messuage and a virgate of land at the yearly rent of 8s., and finding a man to do three Bedrepes, or paying instead 12d., at the lord's option. He pays no fine for admission because the messuage not having been occupied for ten years, and being ruinous, he has agreed to repair it and keep it in repair.

Court roll of the manor for 13 Hen. VI.—At this court 25 tenants come and do fealty to the lord, W. de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, and Alice his wife.

Court roll of the manor for 24 Hen. VI. The homage present that three tenants had ploughed a quantity of land, the lord's soil in Clyde furlong, to the damage of the lord and his tenants; so they are in mercy.—William Cully is chosen to the office of mower and keeper of the lord's wood, and he is sworn.

In 25 Hen. VI. The homage present an encroachment of half an acre of the lord's soil.—And that John Blyset had rooted up the briars and thorns growing in a hedge of John Kyte the lord's naif between his land and the land of the said John Kyte; so he is in mercy.—And that John Blyset had cut down 10 oaks in the lord's wood, without license, for making his hedges.—And that John atte Hegge, the tenant of John Rogger by his order has surcharged the lord's pasture, where the tenants have common, with 300 sheep and his beasts; so he is in mercy, and he is ordered to remove them under a penalty of 5s.

In 28 Hen. VI. the homage is ordered to view a certain bound or mete between the lord's land, called Fairfold, and land of the rector there.

Also John atte Hegge is presented for driving 100 sheep backwards and forwards (facit chaceam et rechaceam, chasse et rechasse) from the land and tenements called Gysnerhale, to the north field of the Lord's Manor. So he is in mercy.

In 29 Hen. VI. the lord had for heriots a horse of the value of 6s. and a cow of the value of 5s.

In 33 Hen. VI. a tenant was ordered to reside in a tenement which he held, according to the custom of the manor, under pain of forfeiture.

In 38 Hen. VI. a man took a cottage and gave a hen as a fine and did fealty, but he was not to give a heriot when it accrued because the cottage was not heriotable.—It was presented that Alice, who was the wife of William Bryght (he died in the preceding December), and who held a messuage while sole and chaste, had married, and so the messuage remained in the lord's hands.—The customary charge for agistment was for cows 1d., and for heifers ½d.

In 1 Ric. III. John Dawnsey took of the lord a messuage, &c. to himself, and Agnes his wife, and John his son, successively one after the other; and he was yearly to wash and shear the lord's sheep, with one mau.

In 2 Ric. III. the homage say that the rector ought to pay yearly for "werke solenne" 12d., but he withheld it and refuses to pay. So he is in mercy. And it was ordered that he should be distrained against the next court.

In 2 Hen. VII. the homage present that the rector of Wee has withdrawn 12d. per annum, called "Werke syling;" so the rector is ordered to shew against the next court a sufficient exoneration from it, if he has anything to shew, or he is to be distrained for the arrears.

In 3 Hen. VII. William Hedyngton, rector of the church of le Wee, comes and takes of the lord a cottage and six acres of land in Penyton, to hold to the said William as long as he is rector of the said church, paying yearly to the lord 23s. 4d., and 12d. for customary works. And whereas John Blake was the pledge of John Byrshop, late tenant of the said cottage for sufficiently repairing the same, the said John Blake gave to the said rector 12 measures of barley, in consideration of being exonerated from the said repairs; and the rector engaged that he would make a new barn to the said cottage within three years. And the steward and the tenants of the manor agreed that the said William should not be a titling-man, a collector of rents, or do suit of court for the said cottage, but should be quit thereof as long as he should be rector of the said church. And the said rector gave as a fine for his entry two chickens, value 2d.

In 4 Hen. VII. the homage present, that whereas the rector of le Wee had six pieces of timber delivered to him for the repair of his tenement, he sold the timber and did not effect the repairs therewith: so the woodward was ordered to arrest the timber, and keep it to the use of the lord and answer for it.

In 5 Hen. VII. the steward directs the woodward to deliver from the lord's coppice to Henry Burbage, timber for two groundsylls and two walpates, and to Thomas Wale timber for two walpates, one thrust, and two bemes.—William Hedyngton, rector of the church of le Wee, comes and surrenders to the lord a cottage and garden and six acres of land in Penyton Garston, whence nothing has accrued to the lord for a heriot, because it is not heriotable; and whereas the said rector had delivered to him for the new building of the said cottage, twelve measures of barley, value 4s., and five pieces of timber, value 8d.; the said rector is to pay back to the lord before Easter next 4s. for the barley and 8d. for the timber, seeing that he has done nothing towards repairing the cottage.—Various tenants are presented as allowing their hedges and fences at Penyton Butte to lie open and broken, to the damage of all the tenants of the manor.

In 12 Hen. VII. William Hedyngton, rector of the parish church of le Wee, is presented as having taken in from the farmable soil of a tenant, land, one perch in length, and four perches in breadth; the homage are directed to cite him to the next court to answer for the encroachment, and they are to give their verdict thereon under a penalty of 3s. 4d.

A. 35 A. Rental Accounts of Ewelme Alms-house, 1461 to 1467.

In 1 Edw. IV. is a receipt of 6s. 8d. from John Wodehyll to the use of the Duchess of Suffolk, and various sums received in respect of the manors of Ramrugge and Connok.

In 3 Edw. IV. are entries of sums in respect of goods found in the chambers of deceased members of the Alms-house, which became, on death, the common property of the community; and of a payment of 20s. to Sir Edmund Rede, their steward for the manor of Mersh, as his fee.

In 6 Edw. IV. is an entry of the receipt of 6s. 8d. for ten cart-loads of flints sold; and of 7s. 8d. from the sale of underwood in Ramrugge.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

A. 35 B. Ewelme Audit Accounts, 1461-1514. In these are entries of money received in respect of the chambers of various members, and various payments. In the first the payment to the Master, W. Marton, is 10*l.*, and to the Grammar Master, 10*l.*, and to the poor men, 36*l.* 12*s.* The above items, slightly varied, recur regularly until 1505, when the stipends of the poor men amounted to 39*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*, the statutable amount being 42*l.* 18*s.*—In 1482 a father paid 6*s.* for a licence to marry his daughter.—In 1500 they received 6*l.* on sale of 168 oaks; they lent 13*l.* to the Duchess of Suffolk, and this loan is posted yearly as an arrearage until 1513.—In 1501 is entered as an arrearage 20*l.* lent to Edmund de la Pole, late Earl of Suffolk, while he was in favour with the King, and a receipt of 43*s.* 4*d.* from a late Almsman of the House, by way of correction, because he was possessed of an annual rent of over six marks at the time of his admission, contrary to the statutes of the House. This is signed by Richard, Bishop of Hereford, before whom, by the King's command, it was made. The accounts for 1505 and 1507 were also audited and signed by the same bishop.—In 1504 40 oaks at Ramrugge were sold for 40*s.*, and in 1506, 10 oaks for the repair of the parish church of Wee, for 8*s.* 4*d.*—From 1701 to 1750 the fines paid on admission are treated as divisible into 10 parts, of which Domus has three, the Master three, the Grammar Master two, and the 13 poor men two. From 1701 to 1734 Almsmen were allowed to be non-resident, but 8*d.* weekly was deducted from their pay. In 1701 were three non-residents; in 1709 there were five. A charge of 10*s.* occurs regularly for shaving the Almsmen by "Barbitonsor." From 1701 to 1744 window tax is an annual charge. The accounts usually show a balance in hand, but sometimes the balances were adverse. From 1739 to 1749 the amount paid in law expenses regarding the manor of Marsh Gibbon was 295*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* Mr. Howell, the Grammar Master, who, in 1698, refused to sign the audit account, having "scruples concerning certain salaries," continued to withhold his signature until 1707. In 1713 Mr. Howell adds to his signature, "Not approving this account, I sign 'it as usually by way of acknowledgment of what I 'have received therein.'" Dr. Woodford, who was Master from 1730 to 1758, resided first at Epsom, and from 1746 at Bath; his travelling expenses for attendance at the audit are regularly charged, with coach and four horses for moving from court to court. In 1731 the price of a bottle of port and a bottle of French wine was 5*s.* 3*d.*

A. 36. Temp. Edw. I. (Copy). Grant by Clementia de Languilers, widow, of all her land of Appulby, Ryseby, High Ryseby, and Santon, as well in demesne as in service, unto her son Guy, and the heirs of his body, with remainder to the donor, or to whomsoever she should choose to give them. Clause of warranty, and if she should fail in her warranty, she substituted all her lands in the diocese of York.

1 Hen. IV. Michaelmas term. Record of a judgment for recovery, by Robert Nevill, K^t, against John de Cotes, chaplain, and John de Clifton, of the manor of Appulby, co. Lincoln, which Clementia de Languilers gave to her son Guy. (Robert Nevill was sixth in descent from Guy).

19 Ric. II. Rental of Robert Nevill, of Horneby, K^t, lord of Appulby.

1 Hen. V. May 27. Inquisition on the death of Robert Nevill, K^t. It was found that he died seised in fee of the manor of Appulby in Lindsey, co. Lincoln, and the advowson of the Priory of Thornholm in the same county, held in chief of the King by knight service; and that he held no other lands or tenements of the King in the same county when he died, and that he died on the 4th of April then last; and that Margaret, wife of Thomas Beaufort Earl of Dorchester, was his cousin and next heir, she being daughter of Thomas Nevill, K^t, who was son of the said Robert, and that she was of the age of 28 years and upwards.

1 Hen. V. Aug. 14. Court Roll of the manor of Appulby, Thomas, Earl of Dorchester (afterwards Duke of Exeter) being lord.—And View of Frank-pledge, with the great Court of the Earl of Dorchester held at Appulby.—Statement showing the descent of the manor of Appulby from Margaret, Countess of Dorchester, who died without leaving issue, to her aunt Margaret, wife of Sir William Haryngton, and John Langton, K^t, son of her deceased aunt Joan, and how by partition the manor was allotted to Sir John Langton (and from him descended to his son John Langton), whose possession was disturbed by William, Duke of Suffolk. John Langton therefore prays that he may be reinstated in possession.

A. 37. Middle of 15th century.—An estimate of the costs of repairing Wingfield Church, co. Suffolk, lengthening the chancel, and building a new arched recess for "my Lord's fader and his moderes tombo." Our Lady's Chapel to be also lengthened even with the Chancel, and windows to be made on the south side and north side of the Chancel, walls heightened, and clerestory windows worked in.—Total estimate, 75*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*—Some of the items of expenditure are as follow:—

| | | | |
|--|---|---|---|
| xxxvii. tons of Lyncolnshire stoon at vis. vii l. , and for carriage per ton, ii l. i. | - | - | xix l. xiii l. viii l. |
| viii. ton of Kingmelle stoon and cariage - | - | - | iii l. ii l. ii l. |
| x m. bryke, the M. 6 s. with cariage - | - | - | iii l. ii l. iii l. |
| xxiii. chaldre lyme at vii s. with cariage - | - | - | viii l. viii l. |
| Two water paylles, viii l. —viii. bolles for mortar, xvi d. —iii l. shovels, xvi d. —xii. bordes for syntres, i l. d.—sand, xiii l. i l. d. | - | - | |

A. 38. 33 Hen. VI. A certificate of Absolution. Endorsed with the name of Maister John Gautier.

A. 39. *Account of moneys found in the common chest by W. Marton on his appointment as master, the 1st day of the moneth of February, the xxxiiird yere of King Harry the VIth, who, "on the sayde day toke deliveraunce of the key of the comyn chest in the comyn hall, loken nuder iii. lokys, and the sayde Saturday founde in the comyn purse lokyn within the sayde chest in money, iii*l.* xii*s.* iii*l.," John Clyfford, John Bostok, and Thomas Welynton beyng present.

20 Hen. VII. Found in the treasury the 4th of December:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|--|---|-----|----|
| In a bag of old leather - | - | 19 | 0 |
| In a linnin purse, in old gold - | - | 15 | 17 |
| In an old canvass bag - | - | 8 | 11 |
| In a leather bag with a scal - | - | 4 | 3 |
| In a new bag of new leather - | - | 15 | 0 |
| In an old bag, for the wages of the rector of Bryghtwell - | - | 3 | 6 |
| In an old bag, of the receipts of T. Moyse - | - | 1 | 6 |
| In a little tawny purse, of the receipts of the receiver Alwyn - | - | 2 | 3 |
| In a bag with a lock, of the receipts from Mershe - | - | 41 | 5 |
| In a leather bag - | - | 0 | 15 |
| Bad money in a bag of old leather - | - | 1 | 3 |
| Copper money in a little red case - | - | 0 | 2 |
| For divers silver pledges - | - | 6 | 16 |
| In an open bag - | - | 8 | 14 |
| Total - | - | 128 | 7 |

1681. Aug. 8. A full and perfect inventory of all the common goods notable of the Alms-house of Ewelme, in the co. of Oxford, as followeth.

Imprimis, one long table in the common hall.

Also, one side cupboard in the same hall.

Also, 2*s.* 9*d.* in a leather purse in the tresurie.

And nothing more, whether jewells or anything else.

Signed by John Luffe, Master; Samuel Everard, Teacher of Grammar, and others.

A. 40.—38 Hen. VI. Receipt (in Latin) by Robert Chamberleyne, "peantrer," and Thomas Stephens, coppersmith, citizens of London, to Simon Brailis, chaplain, servant of the Duchess of Suffolk, for 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in full discharge of 125*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* owing to them for a bargain of certain marble stone sold by John Essex marbler, and by them to the said Simon on account of the said Duchess.

A. 41.—1 Edw. IV. In the great roll of this year, in Kingston-on-Hull. The account of Robert Sanderson, sheriff of the town of Kyngeston-on-Hull, from Michaelmas 39 Hen. VI. to Michaelmas 1 Edw. IV. He accounts for 70*l.* paid by the Burgesses of Kingston-on-Hull for the fee farm of the town of Kingston and for two other sums amounting in all to 77*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*—The following payments to Alice, widow of the Duke of Suffolk, of sums in respect of the yearly sum of 50*l.*, part of the said fee farm of 70*l.*, which had been granted by the King to Michael de la Pole, son of William de la Pole, and of one-third of the yearly sum of 20*l.* other part of the said fee farm which had been granted by the King to William late Duke of Suffolk, the King having granted to the said Alice the wardship of the lands, &c. of the Duke during the infancy of his heir.—Then follow receipts by Alice to the

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

late sheriff of Kingston-on-Hull for a third of the said yearly sum of 20*l.*, and for 50*l.* part of the 70*l.* fee farm.

A. 42. A.D. 1462, 2 Edw. IV. Henry, Prior of the House of St. Michael, of the Carthusian Order, and the Convent of the same place, after reciting that William, Duke of Suffolk, had given the manor of Rymeswell in the co. of York to the Convent,—grant to the Duchess of Suffolk that a priest shall every Friday during her life say and read the 7 penitential psalms, and celebrate masses with the office Reminiscere, specially praying for the Duchess and her son, now Duke of Suffolk. They also agree to celebrate the anniversary of the death of the late Duke for ever. They also agree to make two stone images, one in the likeness of the late Duke and the other in the likeness of the Duchess, each image holding in its right hand a dish, the emblem of bread and baked meats (panis et pistarum), and in the left hand a jug, the emblem of ale; before which images the Prior and his successors shall every day distribute to two indigent almspeople, one male and the other female, two convent loaves each weighing 1½ lbs., and two jugs full of convent ale, each jug containing one pottle, two messes of convent pottage, and two messes of a convent dinner: likewise on Sundays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, four kinds of baked meats properly cooked, and on Mondays and Wednesdays of baked meats similarly cooked. The two poor persons are not to be bound to abstinence like the monks of the convent. They grant a penalty of 10*l.* for each breach of the agreement, and give the Duchess and her heirs power to distress in Rymeswell.—Indorsed are the names of the inmates divided into Fratres Hospitalis, and Sorores. Under the first head six names are given with the names of the persons who recommended them: against the names of four are the words “valens et potens,” against another “pauper et senex,” against another “juvenis sed infirmus.” The “sorores” are described as eleven widows, weakly; and six girls, weakly.

A. 43. Accounts of receipts from the manors of Rambrugge, Mersh, and Connok. 1454–1456. At p. 12 are payments to Edward Queriton “for scole lyre and for strawynge of the scole.” The payment to him for 9 weeks’ commons was 6*s.* and for 7 weeks 4*s.* 8*d.*

Expenses of Ewelme Almshouse, 33 Hen. VI. (32 pp.) Among them are,—For a purse with counters 4*d.* For the writting of two rolls, 4*d.* For the expenses of Master William Marton at Oxford for the reformation of the Statutes 6*s.* For a horse for Master William Marton to London for three days 12*d.* To Doctor T. Bonefruct for his labour in reforming the Statutes 20*s.* For halloved bread (pane benedicto) on St. Luke’s day 1*d.* For a chest in the common hall for keeping the muniments 8*d.* For a little bell for ringing to divine service when the church bell was broken 2*s.* For a church bell called the common bell of the Alms-house 3*s.* 4*d.* For the expenses of taking seisin of two acres of land in Bensyngton, given by T. Wellyngton, late a poor man of the House, 2*d.* For making a box for the custody of jewels 6*d.*—p. 32. For the 36th week on the day of the translation of St. Swithen, 36 Hen. VI., the payment to the poor men altogether was 7*s.* and not more, because “in that week our Lady Foundress visited and punished” some, as shall be told in a more convenient place in “this book.”

A. 44. Two acquittances by Lord Hastings, dated respectively in 1462 and 1465, for the payment of 10*l.* the moiety of a fee for life of 20*l.* per annum charged on the manor of Langham, co. Essex, the estate of the Duchess of Suffolk.

A. 45. 4 Edw. IV. Power of Attorney by John, Duke of Suffolk and Lord of Gyle, to re-enter and obtain possession of a manor and estate in the counties of Lincoln and Nottingham, demised for life by Michael, Earl of Suffolk, to Robert Bolton, deceased. Dated at the Castle of Wyngfeld and signed by the Duke.

A. 46. A paper endorsed “Ye demande of Sir John Boteler, knt., for a stone wall in Berwyk.”—Account of depositions made 7 Aug. 6 Edw. IV., by several persons, servants to the Duchess of Suffolk, regarding the stones of a wall which Sir John Boteler alleged to have been standing on his manor of Berewyk, and to have been carried away and used for the repair of the manor of Ewelme. They say that such a wall was once standing there, but that in the lifetime of Margaret Berewyk, a former owner of the manor, the stones of the wall were sold to Thomas Chaucer, Esq., and were used for the reparation of the church of Ewelme, and not for the reparation of the manor of Ewelme.

A. 47.—6 Edw. IV. Steward’s account of the disposal of seven score and eight yards, three quarters, and one nailed of “reed wurste,” bought by Stanley for the wardrobe at Ewelme. (Indorsed “Tapyts of red w[ursted] wrought into divers Tapetes, Coveryngs, Cupboard “Clothes, and wyndows, in the mouth of . . . in the “6th yer of K. Edw. ye iiiijth.”)

6 Edw. IV., Aug. This is the stuff of bedys and hangyngs of chamberys at Ewelme there hanged in the monthe of August.

Of Ewelme stuff:—

In the great chamber the bed of Aras of Orchia, Selon, Tester, and coverynge.

In the chamber of vi. Seyntes, the bed of Aras, Selon, Tester, and coverynge of Bergerye.

Item, the Tapyte of Tygrys.

In the stede of a tapyte the coverynge of a bed with cages and byrdys.

In the chamber of Apeclogge my ladies closet, iii. tapyts of conterfete Aras of hawkynge and huntynge.

In stede of a tapyte a coverynge of bed of men and women pleying at cards.

Of London stuff:—

The long tapyte of Aras of Dame Dehone.

The tapyte of Aras of Arcules Tornay.

iii. tapytys of Aras of Locus Perfectionis.

A tapyte of Aras of gold of Arkenbald.

A nobler tapyte of Aras withoute gold of Civitas Pacis. In the Chapell a tapyte of Aras, xv. signes of the Doom.

A tapyte of the story of Seynte Anna of Aras.

In the gret plas ii. tapyts of Aras of gold, bothe of the Seven Seyntes.

In the gret wardrope left on Seint Laurence even a tapyte of Aras of gold of Tygres.

Another tapyte of Aras withoute gold De Guerre.

A bed of blewre clothe of Gold, Selon, Tester, and coverynge.

A bed of blewre Saten and browdyd with carantynes palle and skynes.

A bed of blewre Bawdekyn with braynches and flowers of rede and whyte.

A bed, red clothe of golde of Bawdekyn with byrds.

A bed of red Scendell embrowded with chayers and amyses.

A bed of red Sarcenet embrowded with my lordes armes and his creste.

A bed of Bawdekyn of clothe of gold paled with whyte and red.

A bed of Bawdekyn of red and greene worke.

A Sperver of Crymosyn damaske and fregoned with gold and sylk.

Item, two bankeres of tapcery work with men and women hawkynge and huntynge.

A cupborde clothe of Aras withoute gold.

Item, vi. Kochenys of Aras with ymagerye withoute golde.

Item, a square standarde and covered with blakke lethure and bounden with yrne, with ii. lokys, the ton lokke broken, and the key with my lady.

Item, a gret Standarde of the Chapell, bounde with yerne, and ii. lokkys.

Item, iiij. pelowes of downe covered with fosteon of v. quaterys long and in brode iii. quaterys.

A long koscheon of fethurs coveryd with whyte lethur of v. quaterys long and halfe yarde brode.

A koverynge for a presse of canvas of chekerworke.

iii. koschens of clothe of goide upon rede saten, on y^d of long and ii. square.

A long koscheon of blewre felwet and a square kosshon of the same.

A long koscheon of red velvet and iii. square kosshons of the same.

Item, viii. newe square kosshons of verdure.

Item, iii. tapyts of totebonys.

A large gilt chalyis of London.

An horn of yvory of Wardelheid.

The stuff of Wyngfeld, delivered by James:—

In the Gontylwemen closet the longe tapyte of conterfete Aras of Hontyng at the Boore.

The Gardevyande of the Butterye lokked with the stuff withynne that came fro Wyngfeld.

The stuff of the chapell that came fro Wyngfeld.

A crucifix, with Mary and John, of silver, and ii. silver basyns for the Awmes, ii. high chandeles of sylver.

An hohe chalyis of silver, i. pix of gold, i. pix of silver, i. pax brede of gold.

i. cruette of silver, square.

An holy water scopette and holy water spryngell. (Endorsed “The olde hylle cancelled.”)

6 Edw. IV., Sept. 10. Stuff brought from Wyngfeld to Ewelme in a Standard, and re. by Robert Newell, delivered 10th d. of Sept.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

Frounte and contrfrounte of blu, white, and purpelle velvet and damask paled, embrowded with of gold, a leytron cloth of the same sute. A chesible, ii. tunicles, three Aubes with fanons stoles and parures of the same sute, with amyce also.

A corporas of the same sute.

A frontell of blu cloth of gold, with lymons.

A frounte and contrfrounte of red cloth of gold upon damask, with a frontell of rede cloth of gold of damask.

A frounte and contrfrounte of rede cloth of baudekyn, with grehounds.

A leytron cloth of rede cloth of baudekyn, with Swanes.

A frounte and contrfrounte of rede cloth baudekyn of gold, with squerrels and birds, and a frounte of rede cloth gold, with velvet upon velvet.

A frounte, contrfrounte, and stole of rede satyn embrowded with Kardynals hatte.

A chesible, aube, and stole fanons and amys of clothe of gold, i. yard baudekyn of grehounds.

A chesible, aube, amys, stole and fanons of blu damask.

A cope of rede cloth of gold of baudekyn, with birds orfired with russet cloth of gold of damask.

ii. corporas, with ii. castis persone of rede cloth of gold of baudekyn.

A corporas, with an old caste of red bankyn.

Canope for hanging of the pyx, of rede and white cloth of gold of baudekyn, with birds. (In margin, Broken by my lady.)

An open canope of rede cloth of gold of baudekyn with alaunts.

An open canope, knytte with knots of gold, with a baton above garnysshed with perle.

ii. auter corteyns of rede tarteren.

ii. auter corteyns of white tarteren.

A taweill or voile for a patyn for the Auter, embrowded with silk and gold and freged.

vi. Auter cloths and iii. wassing toweill for the Auter.

Two small snper altare covered with lymen cloth.

Item, a sepulture of rede Jasper stone garnysshed aboute with brode plate of silver and gilt.

iii. frontes, iii. contrfrontes, iii. frontells, ii. chesibles, with alle the parours, manicles, stole, and fanons longing to the same.

ii. chasibles, also of white fastien, with crosses, flowers of rede Bukeskin, and i. veaill of lymen cloth with a grette crosse of red Bukeskin and flowres.

Item, ii. kerdynys for ii. square cushions of rede and white cloth of gold of baudekyn, with lyons, tasseld on the corners with silk.

Item, x. surplices for the chapell, beside iii. delivered afore to my lady at Westhorp, and a crosse bow of my lord's garnysshed with gold.

Item, a masse boke covered with white lethur with a laten clasp and the other broken; and a large Antifener noted, covered with white lethur, and claspes of laten and gilt, tasseld with silk, and a registre pyne of silver.

Item, another Antifene with the legende pyynes covered with white lethur, clasped with laten.

Item, a boke for rectors, covered with white lethur and clasped with laten.

Item, a collectall boke covered with white lethur, tasseled with grene silk, and clasped with laten.

Item, a lectornall covered with lethur, &c.

Item, iii. processionalls, ii. covered with white and oon with rede lethur.

Item, a large boke of pryked songe, bounden and covered with rede lethur.

Item, a quaire of a legende covered with a soliped.

Item, a frensh boke of quaterfit, bound, covered with rede lethur, clasped with tissue of threde and laten.

Item, a frensh boke of Temps Pastour conteyning divers stories, in the same cover in rede lethur bossed and clasped with laten.

Item, a frensh boke of La Cite des Dames, covered &c.

Item, a boke of latyn of the moral Institution of a prince, conteyning xxvii. chapters, covered &c.

Item, a frensh boke of the tales of philosophers, covered in black damask, bossed and clasped with silver and gilt.

Item, a boke of English, in paper, of y^e pilgrymage, translated by dom. John Lydgate out of frensch, covered with blak lethur.

Item, a Seynt John's hede peynted with silver feriel.

Item, iii. tapits of Aras, oon part of thassawe Damonis, and the other a litle oon of men and women hawkyng.

Item, a coveryng of 2 tapsterye with a lyon.

A pane of manyver, doubled with rede wollen cloth, for a large bedde.

A pane of manyver, doubled with crimsyn cloth, for a cradell.

Item, an hedeshete of manyver, doubled with ereymosin cloth, for a cradell.

A materas of blu bukeskin for a cradell. (Endorsed Robert Newelme. Stuff of the warderobe caried fro Wyngfield to Ewelme).

6 Edw. IV. Dec. 25.—Delivered by Alson Croxford att Ewelme.

Various lengths of lawn sheets, measured in yards, ells, and nails.

Item, a mantell of crymosyn cloth of gold tissue, furred with ermyne and powdered; a pane of blew cloth of velvet furred with ermyne and powdered.

Item, an headshete of the same, conteyning in length iii. yards and half a quarter large, and in brede iii. quarters sanz half the naell, furred with ermyne and powdered.

Item, a mantell for every day, of scarlet, furred with minyver, purled and powdered with crimsyn.

Item, a pane and a headshete for the cradell, both furred with minyver.

Two small pieces of parchment are attached to this last list; one is an indented memorandum of a delivery to James Brussells by my lady out of her standard at Ewelme of two large "cushions of cloth of gold of "damask for the seel of the font." The other is an account of stuff remaining in the hands of Alice Croxford after a deliverance of various articles to W. Seecole.

The endorsement is "iii. billes of certayn stuff delivered by Alson Croxford into the Norserye, and i. bille indented of stuff delivered your lady, and i. other bille."

A. 48. Three letters by Alice, Duchess of Suffolk, to William Bylton (in two of them she addresses him as Cok (Cook) of Bylton). In one she asks him to put her books in a safe place. In another she says, "take my litell "coffe of gould and wrappe it sure and fast in some "cloth, and seale it wele and sende it heder to me." In the other she says, "send me by Richard Frere, berer "hereof, xxli. in grotes out of a bagge leeing upon the "coffe in my closet: . . . And I woll also that ye "take out of the said bagge for Joh. Simonds i. noble, "the marshal i. noble, yourself i. noble, Sharples i. noble, "the grome porter iiis. iiijd., Thomas Baker iiis. iiijd., "William of the stable iiis. iiijd., and for Richard Page "xxd. And write these names in a bille that I may se "ritely what have been taken out of the said bagge. "To Adam Browder i. noble. Take good hyde aboute "yow, for shewes ben nyghe."

The letters have not the date of the year. They are all signed "Alyce," and one has outside a seal of the arms of De la Pole impaling Burghersh.

A. 49. A paper headed "For costage of Bylton "thyngs." There are the items of cost of building "a new house of 6 parts;" the total is 3*l.* 1*5s.* 7*½d.* Then follow certain payments to a labourer "for schre- "dyng of eshs & kyddyng" at 4*d.* per day and to a hedger at 5*d.* per day, and other payments, and to "the "bailly for his labor for a yere xlviii. viiij*d.*; and a memorandum of the sale of two "eshys" for 12*d.*, and of the "esh schredynys and y^e kyddys" for 3*s.* 4*d.*

A. 50. 7 Edw. IV., May 3. Grant (in Latin) by Alice Duchess of Suffolk and John Duke of Suffolk, to Joan, widow of John Cole, late of Nedeham Market, co. Suffolk, of the wardship and marriage of Robert Cole, son and heir of the said John Cole, deceased, and the wardship of all lands and tenements which the said John Cole held of them by knight-service; and if the said Robert shall die under age they grant to her the wardship and marriage of any minor heir of Robert until some heir shall attain full age. (The Duke's name has been erased.)

Reply by the Duchess of Suffolk to Sir Symon Brails, "her chaplain, with reference to this grant. "Syr Symonds,—I recommaund me to you, and whereas ye "write to know whedir the patent be my lord of the "ward of Colys sonne de herede in heredem, shuld "be any prejudice to my lord or not. As for that and "if my lord be soo agreed that he shall have yt in "that maner of foorme, then as longe as any of the "heyrers of Colo both Brothers and Systers, and all "other that are or shall be heyrers of the same have "disseynt, they and there heres beyng within age at "the time of there ancestors disseynt so long my lord "shall not have the ward, nor never shall have till "som be off full age. And so I woll the pleynesse "should be understood to you. Late my lord doo as yt "please hym. Wreten at London."

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

A. 51. 3 Ric. III. Lease of Connock Manor to W. Pope and Joan his wife, for 20 years, at the yearly rent of 22*l*.

A. 52. 22 Hen. VII. Rent roll of Sir Richard Emson, for various localities.

A. 53. 1527-1546. Subsidies contributed by the Hospital to King Henry VIII.

A. 54. 3 Eliz. Award of Arbitrators commissioned by the Court of Chancery to decide with respect to an acre of land extending westward from the church pale of Wey to a place called "the Tole Bowthe," claimed by the Master and poor men of the Ewelme House, plaintiffs, on the one part, and by Robert Noyces, tenant of John Ryves, Esq., defendant, on the other part. Evidence having been taken on behalf of the defendant, and none having been adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs, it was adjudged that the plaintiffs should renounce all right and title to the property, "to the forshow & the profite for pieage & stallage of bowthes and standing on the said forshow at the time of the "faire"; but seeing that the Alms-house of Ewelme was a corporation of poor men, and that it is a charitable deed to help the poor, and that the Queen's Majesty is patroness thereof—that the defendants should pay to the Master and poor men for the use of their house 40*s*. on delivery of a deed of release.

A. 55. 5 Eliz. Release given by Dr. Key on resigning the Mastership to his successor Alexander Bolton.

A. 56. 13 Eliz. Expenses incurred by the Master in holding court for the half year ending Lady Day 13 Eliz.—4 July. At Uxbridge for supper 14*d*.; horse-meat, evening and morning, 10*d*.; for mending a saddle and two garthes, 10*d*.—5 July. Dinner at Aylesbury, 12*d*.; Horse-meat 7*d*.; showing 7*d*.—8 July. Dinner at Cricklade at bayte 12*d*.; horse-meat 5*d*. 9 July. At Uphaven, for showing 6*d*. 11 July. At Kingscleare, going to London, horse-meat and drink, 10*d*. At Reading, at bed for supper, 16*d*.; horse-meat 12*d*. 12 July. At Colbrook, for dinner 12*d*.; for horse-meat and removes, 8*d*. Total, 11*s*. 9*d*.

E. 1. 3 Car. I. April 30. Royal Commission for the visitation of Ewelme Alms-house. The commissioners were William Earl of Banbury, Thomas Earl of Berkshire, the Bishop of Oxford, James Whitelock and James Croke, Justices, Edward Clarke, one of the Masters in Chancery, the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford, John Prideaux, S. T. P., and eight others.

E. 5. 1672. Petition of W. Tayleur, clerk, rector of Wey, co. Hants, to the Lord Chancellor; stating that as rector he was seised of certain glebe lands on which stalls and booths were erected for the Weyhill fair, and that the rector and his predecessors had demised the same for an annual rent to the tenant of the Ramridge farm, of which the Master and Brethren of the Ewelme Hospital were the owners; that the rectors ceasing to reside, by reason of the ruinous condition of the Rectory house, the tenants of Ramridge farm did little by little draw the trade of the fair on to their own grounds by setting up standings for tradesmen, pens for sheep, and such like. The petitioner prays a commission for the examination of certain aged witnesses; and that Dr. James Hyde, the Master of Ewelme Hospital, and W. Drake the tenant, be called upon by subpoena to join the petitioner in a commission for examining the witnesses, &c.

E. 6 and E. 7. 1743-1747. Proceedings in the suit of Attorney-General v. Townsend, and by Revivor v. W. Guy et ux. Mary Townsend as owner of the small manor of Westbury, within the parish of Marsh Gibben, claimed the whole waste and cottages in the manor owned by the Ewelme Charity. There is a list of 35 documents produced by the Attorney-General, including many of those noticed above. All these documents are indorsed by the Court, and signed as exhibited.

E. 10. Sketch of inscription for the Chaucer tomb.

E. 11. Admission of various alms men.

E. 12. A memorandum concerning certain memorial slabs covered by the pavement of St. John's Chapel.

E. A. 1500-1800. Ewelme audit account, and also the account for 1840.—From these it appears that the statutable stipends of the Master and Grammar Master, 10*l*., remained fixed at that sum until 1639, when they were advanced respectively to 30*l*. and 20*l*. per annum. In 1643 a return was made to the statutable amount, but they were raised again in 1648. In 1635 a sum arising from fines on renewals was divided, and 65*l*. 14*s*. was awarded to Domus; of this sum 43*l*. 12*s*. 3*d*. went for extraordinary expenses, and a balance of 22*l*. 1*s*. 9*d*. was divided between the two chaplains, the Master receiving 14*l*. and the Grammar Master 8*l*. 1*s*. 9*d*., "ad augendum

"minutam antiquam illorum pensionem, auctâ eie-
"emocyriorum pensionis septies per plurimos annos;
"commissionariis æquum consentibus augeri stipendia
"Magistri et Ludimagistri." In 1668 a sum of 39*l*. was divided, and a memorandum is added that the poor men had their share, and they having all the shares of the poor men dead, which are four, among them, have for the same reason allowed the Master the School-master's share now dead, he paying and doing all the business of the Hospital. The Master's expenses in "riding progress" to hold courts is a constant item from 1627, when they were charged at 5*l*. 3*s*. 4*d*., with a further sum of 4*l*. 10*s*. for horses for the Master and Minister; also 6*l*. for W. Bankes, Grammar Master, and a clerk. On the death of W. Banks in this same year, 5*l*. are allowed to his widow for expenses incurred by him, and in 1631 a payment in full of 25*l*. In 1639 the travelling expenses amounted to 16*l*. 16*s*. 10*d*., but from 1643 they are charged regularly at about 4*l*. or 5*l*. In 1646 there is an entry that the Master was paid 6*l*. for a troublesome journey of nine days; that the Grammar Master was paid 1*l*. for his journey of two days, and that the steward was paid 3*l*. for nine days. In 1654 travelling expenses amounted to about 1*l*. per diem for from six to ten days, and one third of the same amount is charged for the steward's expenses. In the next year the allowance for the Master's expenses is fixed at 10*l*., and for the steward's at 2*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. In the next century the Master travels in a coach and four at a cost of 23*l*. 16*s*. 11*d*., residing successively at Epsom, Bath, and Bristol.

The statutable pay of 14*d*. per week for the Almsmen and 20*d*. per week for the Minister continued until 1634, when the Minister received 2*s*. 6*d*. and the Almsmen 2*s*. per week. In 1639 they received collectively 70*l*. 4*s*. 6*d*. for 53 weeks.

Gratuities were first made in addition to their stipends, "in augmentationem victus" in 1559; and in 1630 there was awarded to them 1*l*. "in hac magna annone caritate".

Coats and badges in accordance with the statutable provisions were given to the Almsmen in Dr. Kelly's first year of office, 1759.

Ten shillings per annum were paid to the Barber for shaving the men from 1633 to 1643. In 1670 he resumed his work and continued until 1840.

The funerals of two deceased Almsmen were defrayed by Domus in 1559.

In 1633 a feast at audit was established at an outlay of 3*l*. or 4*l*; but this was afterwards changed for a small money payment to each Almsman. In 1695 there is a charge for Bacon, Pullets, Beef, and Ale at two meetings for auditing the accounts; and a charge of 5*s*. 6*d*. for a bottle of port wine and a bottle of French wine.

Non-residence of the Almsmen was sanctioned from 1681 to 1734; as many as five and six being non-resident at the same time: they received only 1*s*. per week, the full amount for residents being 20*d*. per week.

Between 1461 and 1539 the property of the Almsmen found after death was considered to be the property of Domus, and was regularly carried to account under the title "De Cameris". Fines for irregular attendance on the prescribed services in church were levied as "Corrections" from 1461 to 1546.

Repairs in 1590 cost 89*l*. 13*s*. 6*d*. and in the following year 12*l*. 5*s*.; in 1634, 57*l*. 14*s*. 2*d*., and in 1778, 100*l*. were expended in repairs.

Additional buildings for the Grammar Master's house and repairs to the Alms-house cost 307*l*. in 1774.

In 1565 a clock in the cloister became a yearly charge, and continued so for more than a century. In 1684 for entertaining the Archdeacon about Hospital business, 7*s*. With 1764 a yearly charge of 4*s*. commences, and was continued for many years for a room in the cloister to store materials for repairs.

Saint John's Chapel.—1563. Received of Sir Edward Umpton, for breaking the ground of the Chapel of St. John, for the burial of his brother, Henry Umpton, 6*s*. 8*d*.

1637. Delivered to the Schoolmaster the sum of 6*l*. for the making of 14 seats in the Chapel for the Schoolmaster, Minister, and 12 Almsmen.—1740. Paid for a rope for the Saint's bell, 2*s*.—1793. For rails round the Duchess monument 39*l*. 7*s*. 4*d*.

Dividends were first instituted in 1630, when a fine of 5*l*. was divided into ten parts, of which the Master, Grammar Master, and poor men had each three shares, and Domus had one share. In the next year a fresh distribution was made, when Domus and the Master had each three shares, and the Grammar Master and the Poor Men severally had two.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

This continued to be the ratio until fines ceased to be divided after 1744, and the Poor Men then ceased to attend the Audit account. In the year 1646 a sum of 154*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.* was exceptionally divided "in these difficult times in which neither the Master, nor the School-master, nor the Almsmen have received their pensions for many years." Domus, had 14*l.*, the Master had 56*l.*, the Schoolmaster had 42*l.*, and the Almsmen had the balance of 42*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.* In 1637 the sum of 405*l.* was divided; in 1654 the sum of 639*l.*; and in 1734 the sum of 420*l.* is entered as the share of Domus in a fine of 1,400*l.*

Receipts on the sale of timber frequently occur.

In 1644, Puritan times are indicated by the Steward writing the yearly account in English. Latin is resumed in 1646 until 1652 when English is again used. The account for 1717 is lost.

M. R. C. 1. Court rolls of the three manors of Connock Mersh, and Ramrudge, 1554-1573.

Connock, 3 Mary. No tenant except the farmer to keep geese under a penalty of 5*s.*—Every tenant shall keep only two plough beasts for a virgate of land, and only one for half a virgate, under a penalty of 6*s.* 8*d.*

Connock, 4 Mary. There happens to the lord for a heriot, for every virgate of land, two calves of the value of 4*s.* 4*d.*

The homage present that Thomas Manyngge has cut down a tree called an elm in the lord's wood without license, and he has forfeited his holding, according to the custom of the manor.

Connock, 1 Eliz.—Ordered that no one shall depasture his beasts in the cornfields before the feast of the Conception of the Virgin Mary under a penalty of 2*s.*, nor his sheep before the feast of St. Leonard under a penalty of 3*s.* 4*d.*—Two persons are chosen to place the bounds called the Merestones, in their proper places, and no tenant is thereafter to remove them under a penalty of 20*s.* for every stone so removed.—The homage present four persons as naifs of the manor, and that two of them remain out of the demesne: it was ordered that they should be brought in at the next court.

Mersh, 1561. View of Frankpledge.—Ordered that the inhabitants of the vill sufficiently repair the Butte and Stocke, under a penalty on each defaulter of 3*s.* 4*d.*—Ordered that every one shall make a stye for keeping his pigs under a penalty of 3*s.* 4*d.*

Mersh, 1562. The Constable presents several assaults. The Lord gave a license to John Kyng to hunt within the manor.—The tenants are ordered to scour all the ditches on the south and north sides of the vill of Mersh and about the highways under a penalty of 3*s.* 4*d.*

Marsh Gebyn, 1566. Estrays. A colt, value 12*d.*; a sheep, called a thewe, value 18*d.*; another, called a tegge, value 16*d.*—The homage present that John Kyng, farmer, has annexed four acres of the demesne land, which he holds by demise, to a free cottage of the said John, in the occupation of Roger Thornelby, his tenant; and they present this least John or his heirs might hereafter claim the said four acres as free, and appertaining to the cottage.

Ramrudge. By the death of Edward Benton, there fell to the lord, as a heriot, a brown cow, value 16*s.*; and Agnes, his wife, has the estate of a widow.

Marsh Gebyn, 1567. Licenses to sell ale and other victuals.—Ordered that no tenant shall keep for a virgate of land more than six beasts, and so in proportion; and that no one shall agist strange beasts, under a penalty.

Ramrudge.—Ordered that all the tenants shall, in proportion to their holdings, dig a ditch, called the Heathe ditch, 3 feet deep and 3 feet wide, under a penalty; and that all the tenants shall keep the two meadows, called Ellemeade and Moremeade, without beasts.

Ramrudge, 1568.—John Grace is forbidden to make new pathways over the land of Peter Noyse.

Marsh Gebyn.—The jurors say that the tenants of a house and lands, called the Church house, have no writing or evidence to shew.

Marsh Gebyn, 1569.—The jurors present that a gelding of the colour "grey ambling," came into the manor as an estray, value 12*s.*

Connock, 1571.—In consideration of a fine of 2*l.*, paid by Richard Myles, and his building a new house in place of one that had been burnt, they give him licence during his life to let the said house to any person of good repute.

Connock, 1572.—All the tenants are to collect their sheep into one fold, and each tenant is to find hurdles according to his proportion.—Presentment for depastur-ing strange cattle in a field called Chancroft, contrary to the ordinance; the offender was amerced in 6*s.* 8*d.*

Marsh Gebyn, 1573.—The jurors say that John Braschy, butcher, lately convicted of felony, had, on the day of his conviction, "a coveyrnge," a piece of newe wollen cloth, and a horse, all valued at 10*s.*, and they are seized into the lord's hand, under the charge of the bailiff.—Heriots; a red mare, value 20*s.*, and a red cow, value 10*s.*

Connock.—John Phillips is ordered to repair his barn and cover his dwelling-house with straw, under penalties.

(Documents relating to the Manor of Marsh.)

M. 1. & 2. Court rolls of the manor of Marsh, 1557-1696.

1619. The records of the courts baron are in Latin; the bye-laws or "Bileges," are in English. Elaborate orders are given for controlling common rights and stocking open field lands, e. g., every inhabitant shall sow in the cornfield half a bushel of pease for every yard-land, under a penalty of 10*s.* And no person shall gather any pease until the most part of the inhabitants are agreed.

It is ordered that no one keeping a team or draught shall put yearly on the common more horses than one sucking colt and one breeder for every team, under a penalty of 20*s.*

1637. Presentation for pound-breach by lifting the gate off its hinges and letting out 60 sheep impounded for trespass on one of the lord's fields. One is fined 16*d.* for shooting a hare, cum bombard, within the demesne.

1639. Heriots; a horse, value 3*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, and a mare, value 1*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

1649. Ordered that none shall lese any pease or beans after harvest is home, under a penalty of 3*s.* 4*d.* for every wadd or burthen.

1653. Seven persons are fined 6*d.* for selling ale in unlawful measures.

1654. Seven persons are fined for building cottages on the waste, not having four acres of freehold land as the Statute required.

After the Restoration the steward writes again in Latin.

1662. Fine for turning sheep badly castrated into the common. All rams are to be taken out of the common on St. Bartholomew's day, and not to be sent in until St. Matthew's day.

1673. Order for every tenant to ring his pigs before the 1st of November, under a penalty of 10*d.*

1681. Ordered that the cows be branded with pitch on May day and Lammass day.

M. 3. List of tenants.

M. 5-28.—1627-1846. Leases of property in Marsh. From a lease in 1596, a yard of land is seen to be 30 acres.

R. (Documents relating to the Manor of Ramrudge.)

R. 1, 2, 3. Court rolls of the manor of Ramrudge, 1609-1696.

R. 2. 1648. License to break up and inclose Clanfield Down on payment of 20*l.* by the copyholders of Clanfield and Nutebeme.

R. 3. 1653. Mock presentment of Edward Walker for locking the Buttery door contrary to the custom of the manor, signed Nicolas Nemo.

1658. T. Drake, Esq. is presented for not allowing a sufficient churchway, contrary to the statute.

(On the Restoration the court rolls were again written in Latin: the presentments are in English.)

1661. The farmer is presented for straightening [straitening] the Churchway in Riderone.

R. 4. 1646-1672. List of tenants.

R. 5, & 6. Court rolls for Ramrudge and Connock, 1508-1633.

1613. It is presented that the custom of the manor of Connock is that the widow of a deceased tenant shall have and enjoy the customary lands of her husband during her widowhood.—A bylaw that every copyholder shall plant ten young plants of elm, oak, or ash yearly and defend them by staking or bushing until they do prosper and grow, until the said grounds be properly stored with young sets.

1635. Ramrudge. The jury present that if a tenant die, his executor shall enjoy and have his tenements and their respective profits from the time of his death until the feast of St. Michael then next, and not longer.

R. 7-11. Leases of property in Ramrudge, 1517-1839.

EWELME
ALMSHOUSE,
OXFORD.

C. (Documents relating to the Manor of Connock.)

C. 1-2. Leases of property in Connock, 1534-1838.

C. 5-8. Court roll for the manor of Connock. 1522-1746.

1622. The homage present that the tenements of a certain tenant are ruinous, and that a piece of timber called "the first pece," and another piece called "the Bydereson," and the rafters are broken, and the ground-sell and the wall-plate of his hall are ruinous and in decay.

1629. A list of naifs under age, is given, with the names of the persons with whom they lodge. The court orders all the naifs to appear here at the next court under the penalty of 20s.—The usual court orders are given that no swine shall be allowed to run at large unless they be ringed; and that no little pigs be allowed in fields where any grain is sown; and that the tenants, according to the custom of the manor, put the pound in repair (faciant sufficienter pinfold); also, that if any one tether any horse, or mare, or calf in any furlong sown, before all the grain there be carried off, or in any meadow whereby the hay may be damaged, he is to pay a penalty.

1541. Order, that no tenant shall keep geese or ganders under a penalty of 12d.

1555. A presentment that one maliciously took his sheep into the cow pasture, against the ancient custom, reviling the lord, pessimis suis opprobriis, on Sunday, before the feast of St. Michael, so he is in mercy.

1592. A presentment that John Phillips is a naif of the manor, and that Christiana, wife of Matthew Chamberlayne, and sister of John Phillips, is a naife, and she has never made composition with the lord for her marriage.

1650. A presentment that the common pound being decayed, must be repaired by the inhabitants under a penalty of 6d. for each defaulter.

1649. Divers merestones in this manor are wanting, and new merestones are to be set by the tenants upon the 1st day of Nov. next, under a penalty of 5s. They are to meet upon the green at the end of the village by 8 of the clock in the morning for the doing of the same.

1653. Nicholas Stevens, gent., is fined 10s. for ploughing one furrow from the common, and he is ordered to plough the same back at the next ploughing.

1654. Nicholas Stevens is fined for disobeying the order made at the last court, and for non-attendance to set the merestones.

1656. Various tenants are presented for having foul chimneys, and are ordered to clear the same under a penalty of 10s.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

MANUSCRIPTS IN THE POSSESSION OF THE GOVERNORS OF QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY.

Fifty-seven rolls and one hundred and one other documents were laid before me, which I examined to see if there was anything serviceable for this Commission. Nearly all the documents seem to relate to, or to have been once in the custody of, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral and relate to the property of the Bishoprick of London, or of the Dean and Chapter in London, and the manors of Sutton, Chiswick, Willesden, and Acton. There are counterparts of leases, presentations to prebends, canonries, and churches, rentals, compoti, and Exchequer acquittances to the Dean and Chapter as guardians of the church while the see of London was vacant. A long roll of the 17th century gives a description of the manor of Eccleshall co. Stafford. There are several Court rolls of the 14th and 15th centuries. Here too are original letters patent by which King Charles II. granted an annuity of 1,000*l.* to Louise de Querouaille, Duchess of Portsmouth, which she afterwards sold to Lord Waldegrave, and which Lady Waldegrave assigned to the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty. There are three deeds of the 12th century and seventeen of the 13th century, being mostly dealings with land by or in favour of the Dean and Chapter. Ralph de Diceto, the historian, and Dean of St. Paul's, is named in two of the deeds of the 12th century. The following are all the documents that seem worthy of special notice:—

12th century. Ralph de Ely, canon of the church of St. Paul's to all his men of Chesevick, &c. He grants to Amfelisia, daughter of William de Ludesdone and John her son, and their heirs, a moiety of the land which was of Pasturell, and an acre and a half of the remaining moiety. To hold of the grantor and his successors at the rent of 5*s.* 3*d.* Witnesses, Henry, treasurer of London and twelve others named. Seal gone. Attached to this are two small deeds of confirmation by Ralph de Diceto, Dean of St. Paul's, and the Chapter, and Ralph de Hely canon of St. Paul's of the same land. (25.)

13th century. Roger, archdeacon of Colchester, declares that with the consent of Eustace Bishop of London and the Chapter he relinquishes to the church of St. Paul's, London, the area and houses which he possesses in the courtyard (atrium) of the said church, so that he who for the time being shall succeed in the office of archdeacon in the church of St. Paul may possess the said houses and area, and on the 3rd day of December, yearly pay one mark to the said church, of which half a mark is to be to the brethren and his co-canons who shall be present at the commemoration founded by his progenitors, and half a mark to the clerks of the choir, they being present in like manner. Among the witnesses named are Martin Pateshulle, Geoffrey de Lucy, archdeacon of London, and Alexander, archdeacon of Salop. (7.)

1241. Osbert de Northbroc having been accused by Alexander, treasurer of London, of inciting the parishioners of Chesevick not to leave their best beast to the church, when dying, as usual, and patronising the claiming freedom by some tenants of Sutton, contrary to the oath which he took never to do anything against the church of London, he purged himself by corporal oath before the said Treasurer and the parishioners of Sutton and Chesevick on Sunday before the feast of the Holy Cross, 1241. He agrees that if he be convicted of breaking the oath he will pay to the Treasurer or his assigns ten silver marks, and as often as convicted. Witnesses, G. de Lusey, Dean of St. Paul's, Henry de Cornhulle, Chancellor, and six others named, among whom is John vicar of Chesevick. (46.)

1 Boniface (Pope), 13 Kal. Mart. Rome. Bull giving an indulgence of three years and as many quadragesmas to all visiting the chapel of Moswelle on the feast of the assumption of the Virgin. Seal gone. (66.)

1254. 3 Id. Nov. Fulk Bishop of London to all, &c. Award by the Bishop on a dispute between Alan the Abbot and the convent of St. Melanie of Rennes and the monastery of Hatfield Regis with regard to the right of presenting, and ordaining, and celebrating the election of a prior in the same monastery, of which Hugh de Ver Earl of Oxford is patron. Whenever the monastery of Hatfield Regis is vacant of a Prior, the assent of the Earl or his heirs or successors being asked, the monks of the monastery shall have free power to elect a Prior, and the elect being presented to the said Earl the patron and his heirs, the said Earl, his heirs and successors together with the convent of Hatfield shall present to the Bishop of London, praying confirmation. The Prior shall however give notice of the death of the predecessor to the convent of Rennes. Other regulations. Sealed by the Bishop, Hugh de Ver, the Abbot of St. Melanie, Thomas the Prior, and the Convent of Hatfield, and Walter the Dean, and the Chapter of St. Paul's. Labels for six seals, but the seals are gone. (20.)

1296. 1 Kal. April. A dispute having arisen between John Moday and Master Ralph de Baudac, Dean of St. Paul's, farmer of the manor of Sutton, about a fishery for salmon in the Thames which the said John claimed opposite the manor of Sutton, under the house which John there holds, and about suit to the court of Sutton; which suit John, for a tenement which he holds in Sutton, denied; at length John renounced his claim to the fishery, and acknowledged the suit to the court of Sutton for the tenement; and the Dean released to John all trespasses hitherto. Seal of John remains. (35.)

1301. 5 Id. Oct. Waltham and London. The Abbot of Waltham and the Dean of the church of London as executors deputed of the tithes and obventions granted for 6 years by the Holy See to King Edward as an aid to go to the Holy Land, to the Official of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, prohibiting his interference with the archdeacon of Glastonbury and other employés in the matter. (43.)

14th century. On account of the weakness of John de Lyntone, rector of the parish church of St. Vedast, London, and chamberlain and a minor canon of the church of London, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's dispense with his attendance at canonical hours, and absolve him from his oath in that respect. They save to him his share of rents and emoluments of the minor canonship, his chantries, and the office of cardinal, and other privileges. (82.)

14th century. 3 Kal. Mart. 18th of consecration. R. [de Braybrooke] Bishop of London to the Dean and

QUEEN
ANNE'S BOUNTY.QUEEN
ANNE'S BOUNTY.

QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY.

Chapter of St. Paul's; commanding them to prevent the congregation of buyers and sellers in the church, and threatening excommunication if they continue to turn out their goods, and scatter them on the pavement. (58.)

13 Edw. II, Aug. 14. The king, then in the marches of Scotland warring against the Scots, directs the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's to advance to the Exchequer at Westminster their proportion of the tenth granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury. Witness, J. Bishop of Winchester. By writ of Privy Seal. (3.)

1322, 15 Kal, Sept. Acknowledgment by John, prior of St. Bartholomew, in London, collector of 5d. of every mark of the goods of ecclesiastics in the archdeaconry of London and Middlesex, granted to the king by the prelates and clergy of the province of Canterbury, that he has received by the hands of John de Patenaye, minor canon of the church of St. Paul, of London, for the prebends of the canons of the said church the following sums, viz., for the prebends of Holebourne, 2s. 11d.; Twyforde, 22d.; Consumpta per Mare, 5d.; and Pourtepol, 2s. 11d. (12.)

1322, Feast of St. James the Apostle, London. Acknowledgment by John, abbat of Walestone and the convent, deputed to collect 5d. of every mark of the goods of ecclesiastics, granted to the king from the prelates and clergy of England in parliament at York, by the reverend father Stephen, Bishop of London, in the archdeaconry of Essex and Colchester, that he has received by the hands of John de Patenaye, Dean and the Canons of the church of St. Paul, London, for the following manors, viz., Ronewell, 13s. 1d.; Tillyingham, 11s. 11d.; Westlee, 5d.; Nortone, 16d.; Hobrygg, 16s. 4½d.; Chyngford, 11s.; the churches of Borham, 8s. 11½d.; the pension of Orfole, 3s. 9d.; Tillyingham, 6s. 18d.; Hebrygge, 4s. 7d.; rent in Maldone, 2s. 1d. (26.)

1324, 16 Kal. Sept., Wykham. Stephen, Bishop of London to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. He has received a letter from Walter Archbishop of Canterbury, dated Otteford, Ides of August, directing prayers and processions in churches and chapels for the welfare of the King and kingdom, and granting 40 days of indulgence. He requests the Dean and Chapter to put the letter in force in St. Paul's and other churches within their jurisdiction. (63.)

1325, Oct. 27, Chapter House. Grant by Roger . . . to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's of his messuage in the parish of St. Mary Magdalen, in Oldfisse Street, London, which he had by feoffment from Ralph de Wandlesworthe, citizen and cordwainer of London, and three shops in the parish of St. Pancras, in Sopereslane, London, two of which, on the west side of the said street, the said Roger had by feoffment from Robert le Callere; to find by the issues thereof the support of a chaplain for ever in the said church to celebrate divine offices, &c. for the said Roger, &c. as below stated. The Dean and Chapter agree that a chaplain shall for ever celebrate &c. in the said church at the altar of St. John the Evangelist on the south side of the said church; the chaplain to have a key of the said chapel and free ingress and egress, and for the chest for his vestments, books, &c., and to have the use of the chapel in common with the chaplain for John de Brayford. Long regulations follow. Witnesses, Stephen Bishop of London, Hamo de Chigwell, Mayor of London, John de Cotom and Robert de Mordone, sheriffs, two aldermen, and many others named, including Robert de Baldok, Chancellor, the last being Henry de Brayce the scribe. Seals gone. (51.)

1325, Oct. 27. Indenture between Roger de Waltham canon of the church of St. Paul of the one part, and John de Everdone, the Dean, and the chapter of the said church of the other part. The foundation deed of the chantry of Roger de Waltham. A long deed about 3 feet by 2 feet, with an additional half skin of additional payments and distributions to be made. Seal of Roger de Waltham. (59.)

1326, 20 Edw. II, Oct. 3. Indenture between Roger de Waltham of the one part, and John de Everdon, the Dean, and the chapter of St. Paul's of the other part. Roger, by the King's license gives to the Dean and chapter his messuage in the parish of St. Augustine, near Distaf lane, which he had by feoffment from John Matefrey, citizen of London, To hold of the King, and finding from the issues of the said messuage one chaplain in the said church for the King and his parents, &c. to celebrate, &c. &c. and finding provisions for the poor, and doing for the said Roger as below stated for ever. The Dean and Chapter bind themselves to furnish a chaplain to celebrate divine service in the chapel of St. John the Evangelist on the south side of the said church. The privileges and duties of the chaplain are set out. Witnesses, the same as those to the first above-mentioned deed of Oct. 27, 1325. (32.)

1329, July 27. In chapter. Indenture between John de Everdon, the Dean, and the Chapter of St. Paul's of the one part, and Roger de Waltham of the other part. Whereas the said Roger has by two indentures given to the Dean and chapter, and their successors, certain tenements in the city of London, and certain precious vestments to the church for the support of certain chantries and other pious works to be done for the said Roger; the Dean and Chapter declare that they have by the gift of the said Roger, 1st, one messuage near the old fishery (piscariam) now containing two dwellings and three shops in Sopereslane, and 2dly, one messuage in Distafane, lately built by the said Roger, containing ten mansions, in order that by the issues of all the said tenements may be sustained two chantries and other pious works to be done for the said Roger as below mentioned, viz., that two chaplains for ever for the said Roger and his benefactors and friends, living and dead, at the altar of St. Laurence behind the upper part of their south choir lately by their permission built by him, every day before prime shall celebrate, &c., &c. Minute regulations follow, and the Dean and Chapter confirm them. Witnesses, John the Dean, John de Elham, archdeacon of Essex, William de Melford, archdeacon of Colchester, and seven others named, including Roger de Waltham. (9.)

1329, 6 Id., Oct. John de Everdon, the Dean, and the Chapter of St. Paul's, to all, &c. Regulations with regard to the candles and offerings to the chantry founded by Roger de Waltham. (23.)

1329, Nov. 12, Fulham. Insuperimus and confirmation by Stephen Bishop of London, of the above-mentioned deed of 27 July 1329. (47.)

1334, 4 non. Nov. In chapter. John de Everdone, the Dean, and the Chapter of St. Paul's present Geoffrey de Houghton to be chaplain of the chantry lately founded in their church for the soul of Martin de Pateshulle, vacant by the death of dom. William de Wycombe, on the nomination of their venerable brother Master Gilbert de Bruer, to whom by the course of this residence it now belongs to nominate. (14.)

1337. Chapter house. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's lease to Roger de Waltham their manor of Suttone, with the tithes to them belonging within the said manor, and the store and implements below mentioned, while Roger shall live and be canon of London, and answer the ferm and not be elected and confirmed a bishop, yielding yearly two fermis in bread and ale, &c., and 50s. and three marks of the old increment, and four marks of the increment made by Philip de Hadham, &c., &c. List of store and stock. Seal gone. (64.)

1353, 11 Kal. June. Gilbert the Dean and the chapter of St. Paul's appoint Henry Bever, chaplain of the chapel in the church founded for the souls of Ralph and Margery, progenitors of St. Roger, to be their attorney to receive and distrain, and give receipts for all arrears of rent belonging to the said chapel in London and the suburbs. Seal gone. (22.)

1357. Morrow of the feast of the Ascension. List of things in the chapel of the Virgin in St. Paul's (28 lines), and delivered to Adam de Gaddesby and Adam de Pridwelle, pitanciaris of the said chapel. (19.)

1369. Compotus of Adam de Eyston, chaplain, occupying a chantry in the church of St. Paul for the soul of Roger de Waltham, of the rents of shops and houses belonging to two chantries, from the Feast of the Nativity, 1368, to the like feast following. The shops and houses were in Soper's Lane, Old Fish Street, and Distaf Lane, and a tenement held by Thomas rector of the church of St. Augustine, with two shops. Total, 14l. 7s. 8d. (70.)

23 Edw. III. Monday after the feast of SS. Philip and James. Record of the probate in the Hastings of London, of the will, dated on Saturday after the Feast of SS. Fabian and Sebastian, 1348, of Simon de Bockyng, citizen and goldsmith of London. After giving certain realty in London to his wife Lucy for life, and making gifts in favour of his children, Agnes, Thomas, and Cecily, he wills that if all his children and their heirs die, the tenement which he inhabits in Wood Street shall remain for ever to the alms of the goldsmithry of London for his soul, finding a chaplain to celebrate divine service in the church of St. Peter, of Wood Street, by the view, &c. of the warden of the goldsmithry of London, for his soul and the souls of his father and mother, &c.; and the rest of his tenements,

QUEEN
ANNE'S BOUNTY.

&c. to be sold by his executors, &c., the proceeds to be applied to pious uses for his soul. He appoints his wife Lucy principal executor, and the others are his son Thomas, Edmund de Basyngstoke, and William, late his apprentice. (15.)

45 Edw. III. Compotus of dom. Amand Fithing, canon and stagiary of the church of St. Paul, London, as well of moneys received from the box (pyvide) in the said church, in the 45th year of King Edward III., as from divers tallages levied in the King's Exchequer from a certain assignment to the dean and chapter there made in full satisfaction of 500 marks formerly lent by them to the King. Sum total of expenses and deliveries 32*sh*. 12*s*. 6*d*., and he owes 4*l*. 8*s*. 5*d*. At the back is a list of receipts from houses in London: (29.)

Temp. Edw. III. Copies of three petitions to the Dean and chapter of St. Paul's. 1. By Roger le Honte, of Chesewyk, and Avise his wife, daughter and heir of John Sagrym; 2. By Richard de Dene and Joan his wife; 3. By Nicholas de Hamptone; all complaining of disseins by Sir William de Scothe, canon of St. Paul's, under pretence that the lands belong to the prebend of Chesewyk, and praying for redress. On the back is an entry that because the statute of the church of St. Paul says that no free man shall enter the bond land of the church, and Avise Sagrym, a bond tenant, took to husband Roger Grencelef, a free man, the prebendary seized the land to save the right of the church of St. Paul. As to the second petition, he seized for the same cause. As to the third petition, because Nicholas de Hamptone was a free man, the prebendary would not receive him until the dean sent him his letter to receive the said Nicholas to the bond land, taking from him a reasonable fine; and so the prebendary received the said Nicholas to the said land, and reserved money from the said messuage and outillage in satisfaction of part of the fine by the assent of the said Nicholas. (39.)

14 Richard II., May 27. The King authorises Robert Bishop of London to unite, annex, and incorporate certain chantries, viz., the chantry founded for the soul of Walter Thorp, the chantry of St. Olive, the chapel of Isabella Rokerelle, another chantry of the said Isabella Rokerelle, and the chantry of John Deyngham, in such manner and form as he shall think fit. The estimated yearly value of the property belonging to each amounts to 29 marks. Seal gone. (5.)

1441, June 25. Robert Bishop of London to the Dean and chapter of St. Paul's, ordering them to pray and direct all religious houses in their jurisdiction, rectors, vicars, and chaplains to pray and make processions for the success and safe return of Richard Duke of York, who has made an expedition against the French, and promising 40 days of indulgence. Seal gone. (2.)

1448, April 3. Hadham. The same to the same. On the 1st of April he received a letter from John Archbishop of Canterbury, dated 12 March 1447, asking him to make processions and prayers for the welfare of the kingdom; so he bids them do so in St. Paul's and in other churches within their jurisdiction. (41.)

1448. Note on paper of the weight of the iron grating (canelli) before the altar of St. Erkenbald, in the year 1448, erected by the hands of Stephen Champard, the workman (fabri), at the expense of the Dean and Chapter, on the 6th of June of the aforesaid year. 1,438 lb.; price of every lb., 4*d*.; total, 63*l*. 2*s*. Expenses in iron, 1,438, each hundred, 5*s*.; total, 3*l*. 16*s*. 8*d*., &c. (94.)

1457, Dec. 16. Declaration of Roger Mersshe, clerk, and Robert Valance, executors of the testament of Walter Sheryngton, clerk, deceased, late Chancellor of King Henry VI. for the Duchy of Lancaster. Reciting that the King by letters patent dated Westminster, 19th March, in the 24th year, inter alia, gave licence to the said Walter Sheryngton to found a chantry or chantries with one, two, three, or four chaplains daily in the cathedral church of St. Paul, or in the conventual church of the Priory of St. Bartholomew, in West Smythfeld, or in any other churches, or in the cemetery of St. Paul's, called Pardonerchewah, or any other cemetery or cemeteries or consecrated place or places, for the good state of the King and his consort, and of Walter while alive and of his soul after death, and for the souls of his ancestors, &c.; and that he might call it Shiryngton chantry, or chantries, for ever, and might give the presentation to the chantries to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and to other ecclesiastics; and reciting that the said Walter in his lifetime built a chapel near the north door of the said cathedral church, commonly called the; and also proposed and began to erect a chantry for two

perpetual chaplains in the chapel, which the executors with his goods since his death had completed; and they had constituted a perpetual chantry for two chaplains in the said chapel, now called Shiryngstone's Chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. Nicholas, and had made the said chantry to be called Shiryntone's chanterie, and had appointed first perpetual chaplains:— They have granted and confirmed to Master William Say, the Dean and the Chapter of St. Paul's, for ever, the advowson and patronage of and nomination to the said chantry. (13.) 1470, May 26. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's appoint Master John Ixworth, D.D., Robert de Appiltone, John Fraunceys, John Launce, James de Sulynago, and John de Seryvanis, jointly and severally, their attorneys at the papal court in suits touching the dean and chapter. At the foot is the notarial certificate of Dionysius de Popham of Norwich diocese.

1492, May 17. William Warley the Dean and the Chapter of St. Paul's lease to Richard Spencer, principal registrar of the Court of Canterbury, the messuage and garden adjoining, situate in the corner or west angle of Pater Noster Row, which Thomas Coke, LL.D., lately held, and situate between the great tenement of Lord Bergavenny and the land of the commonalty of London on the South, and the land of the said commonalty and the stone wall called the Town wall on the part of the West, and another tenement of the said Dean and Chapter on the North, and the King's highway of Paternoster Row aforesaid, and a tenement of the priores and Convent of Cheshunt on the East, for 99 years, at the rent of 23*sh*. 4*d*. The lessee to repair and keep in repair. Seal gone. (38.) (There are subsequent leases of this house.)

15th century. Memorandum that the King has confirmed the following gifts to the church and the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, for chantries, obits, and the fabric of the said church:—ten in the parishes of St. Mary of Somerset, St. Vedast, and Benet Sherchog, Benetfynk, St. Botolph without Aldrechange, St. Nicholas Goldabbey, Mary Magdalene in Oldfishstrete, and St. Michael ad hlada, St. Brigit and St. Margaret in Friday Street, St. Michael of Hoggestone in Wodestrete, and St. John Zakary, St. Andrew of Powleswharf, St. Mary of Aldermanbury, for the repair of the church of St. Michael of Basynghe, St. Mary Magdalen Olde fishestrete, and the street of Chepe. (63.)

3 Hen. VIII., Aug. 18. John Bags, Esq., bailiff of the vill and hundred of Tenterden and the jmrats there, to all, &c. Exemplification from the rolls and records of the King's court of the said vill and hundred of proceedings in suit by Richard Fleming, clerk, M.A., and Thomas Bolgrave, clerk, chaplain of the perpetual chantry of St. Mary the Virgin and St. Nicholas, near the North gate of the church of St. Paul and the libraria there, founded by Walter Shiryngton, clerk, late Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and finished by Thomas Lyseux and three others, his executors, called Shiryngton's chantry, who late brought a plea of land against James Anchor in the form of a writ of juris utrum for the manors of Morghve and Eatysdene and a toft, &c. The pleadings are set forth. A skin of vellum about 2 f. 6 i. by 2 f. 3 i. Fragment of seal. (44.)

14 Hen. VIII. Folio. 36 leaves of vellum. Account of all the bailiffs, receivers, &c. of Cuthbert Tunstall Bishop of London, in the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Sussex, Essex, and Hertford, for one year to Michaelmas. 14 Hen. VIII. (83.)

36 Hen. VIII., Nov. 6. The King's writ to Robert Bishop of St. Asaph, directing him to make a return to the Court of First fruits and Tenths at Westminster to the questions annexed. He is to certify the amount of all promotions then vacant within his diocese and the days when they became vacant; of whose presentation, nomination, or donation every of the same be, and the names of those who have taken any of the mesne profits; the names of any who have taken any promotion within his diocese since the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist in the 35th year to the like feast next ensuing, and the day when they were instituted, collated, or inducted, and the names of the promotions and the counties where they lie. The return of the Bishop, dated 1544, last of December, is annexed. Part of the seal remains. (77.)

1563. A leaf of paper, the top torn off. These are the words of the testament of William Dobson, citizen and draper of London, son to John Dobson of Patterdale, dated the last of September 1563, and proved in February 1563 (86), and one leaf showing the devise of his real estate. (86a.)

QUEEN
ANNE'S BOUNTY.QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY.

1599. Folio, 11 written leaves and a folding plan between fos. 6 and 7, and 2 pp. of index. A survey of certain several woodds and groves situate, lying, and being within the parishes of Edlemontoun, Tottenham, and Enfield, within the countie of Middlesex, parcel of the possessions of the Right Honourable Sir Robert Cecil, kt., principal Secretary unto the Queen's Majesty, Master of her highnes courte of varden and liveries, and one of her Majesty's most honourable privie counsaile, which saide surveye was made and taken according unto the standard measure by Israel Amyce, gent. in the month of December, in the 42nd yere of her Majesty's reyne, and the platformes of the said woodds made after the intche divided into two partes or divisions. Each page is occupied with a coloured plan or plans and descriptions, and the owners of the adjacent lands are named. (96.)

1633. Three brief sheets, St. Martin Orgar. An abstract of the cause (and the proofs), Dyamond and Baldry v. Walton, Claxton, and King, impeaching certain dealings with the church lands. (85.)

10 Car. I., Feb. 7. Rough copy (6 pp.) of the Decree of the Lord Keeper in the case between Richard Dyamond and William Baldry, late wardens of the church of St. Martin Orgar in London, on behalf of themselves and the inhabitants of the said parish, plaintiffs, and Bryan Walton, clerk, Thomas King, now deceased, and Edwin Claxton, defendants, to set aside leases made by Walton of houses in the parish of St. Olave. (88.)

1662, June. Deed apportioning the several rents on houses built upon the site of the Bishop of London's palace in London. Signed by Sir Robert Hyde, C.J., and Sir Geoffrey Palmer, A.G. (79.)

1705, May 9. Counterpart lease, on paper, by Richard Hind, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, brewer, to Ralph Sterrop, citizen and spectacle maker, of two messuages on the north side of St. Paul's churchyard, and adjoining together (the occupants names are given) for 7 years from Christmas day last, at the rent of 34*l.* Signed and sealed by R. Sterrop. On the back, 1720, May 3. In consideration of 115*l.* Sterrop assigns the houses to the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord Mayor of London for the residue of the term. They were bought in pursuance of the Act of 1 Anne for the finishing and adorning the church of St. Paul. (73.)

1714. Abstract of the account of the imposition upon coals and other moneys received and paid into the office of the clerk of the works for the rebuilding of the cathedral church of St. Paul, from 23 June 1713 to 23 June 1714, in pursuance of Act of Parliament. The receivers are charged with 50,027*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.*, and are allowed 49,763*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* Balance in hand, 264*l.* 3*s.* 5*d.* A sheet of parchment, signed by [W. Cantuar] and Jo. Lond. (74.)

1719. Abstract of the account of moneys received and paid (as the last above) from 24 June 1718 to 24 June 1719, pursuant to the Act of 8 Will. III., and a former Act of 1 James II. Charge 60,171*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* Discharge 7,258*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* In hand 52,912*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* Signed by W. Cant. and Jo. Lond. (75.)

ROLLS.

Temp. Edw. II. and beginning of the reign of Edw. III. A small roll of proceedings in matrimonial causes. Attached to it on small pieces of vellum are the results of examinations of witnesses. (52.)

1313. 2 Id. June. Inventory of silver vessels, made at Stebbenheth. Two charyors, 8 pelves, 2 pelves, for the chapel, one pot (olla cum calulo), 5 great pots, a hexagonal pot for water, one pot cum duobus tuellis for water, a third pot cum tribus tuellis for water, one salt cellar with an image, one cup without a cover, one cup for the lord and 5 other cups. Note that all other cups written in previous inventories have been given to divers friends. 74 spoons, one platu for spices cum scuto, one vase for spices, one nut with a silver foot, 36 silver plates (disci), 6 deep plates, 24 salt collars, 13 pieces of silver, some gilt. Sum of all, 149*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*, according to the weight of the vessels. Also a great gilt cup left to the lord Hugh de Veer, together with pat. ar. de Ambra and appendages which belonged to his mother, 3 other cups, 2 silver phials, 2 censurs, one silver thurialer with spoon, one new phial with oil for the sick, and two others larger with crism and holy oil. Sum 11*l.* 14*s.* 10*d.* according to weight. (17.)

1313. Memorandum of proceedings for the choice of bailiffs in the manors of Orseth, Leyndon, Crondone, Chelmsford, Sutham, Wykham, Cosford, Sonnebry, Loddsworth, Stokes within Galdcote, Stooteford, Claketone, Reynes, Stebbenheth Hakoney and Haryugey, Hadham, and presentation of customs. (19.)

11 Edw. II. Extract from the Great Roll of the Pipe of the account of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, guardians of the temporalities of the Bishoprick of London, the see being vacant. Ende, In the sauro 200*l.*, et habet de surplusagio 21*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* (25.)

10 and 11 Edw. II. Court held at Great Benes before Richer de Refham and William de Leye, guardians of the Bishoprick of London, the see being vacant, on Wednesday in the Vigil of the Epiphany, 10 Edw. II. Evidence and judgment for Christiana, daughter of Peter de Guldnyngam as to land. With it is another proceeding in 11 Edw. II. in the same matter, and a list of jurors. (24.)

Court rolls for the manor of [], 31 Edw. I. (36), for the manors of Leyndon; 11 Edw. II., Chelmsford, Suthminstre and Reynes, Wykham, Coppord and Claptone. That for Reynes contains the plea of Christiana, daughter of Peter de Guldnyngam (28.)—Haringay, 12 Edw. II. (53.)—Suthminstre, temp. Hen. IV. (9 and 22.)—Sonbery, 4 Hen. IV. (13.)—Suthminstre, 6 Hen. IV. (12.)—Bishops Wykham, 6 Hen. IV. (18.)—Lodderworthe, 6 Hen. IV. (39.)—Leyndon, 6 Hen. IV. (42.)

1319, April 13. Chapter House, Hereford. Inexpimus by John the Dean and the Chapter of Hereford, of a charter or ordination dated the Vigil of Easter, 13 Edw. II., whereby John de Henlece, canon in the church of Hereford, by the King's license has given to God, St. Mary, and the church of St. Ethelbert, and dom. Richard, called of Credelee, chaplain and vicar of the cathedral church aforesaid, and his successors, celebrating daily service for the souls of his father and mother, and Thomas le Breton, formerly canon of Hereford, and the souls of all faithful, &c., at the altar of Anne, mother of Mary, mother of Jesus Christ, in the aforesaid church, two messuages and 97 acres of land, and 3 acres and 1 rood of meadow, and 16*s.* yearly rent in Hereford, Overbroynton, and Waheye, as in the feoffment appears, viz., one burgage with the buildings and appurtenances in the city of Hereford, in the street called Bihindethewalle, between the houses of Robert de Gloucester, canon of the said church, and the houses of Elias Chaplan, vicar of the said church, and also a messuage and land in Overbroynton, in the fee of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford (and other lands and rents described), to hold to the said Richard de Credelee and his successors, chaplains to the said chantry, as contained below: the donor is to present during his life, and afterwards the Dean and Chapter. The Dean and Chapter confirm the charter. Seal gone. (44.)

28 Hen. VI. rot. 423. Hillary term. Copy of record. Thomas Losoure, Dean of the church of St. Paul, and guardian of the spiritualities of the Bishoprick of London, was summoned to answer Marmaduke, Bishop of Carlisle, that he should permit him to present to the Chancellorship of St. Paul's. (49.)

1451, Nov. 26. Memorandum that on this day William Wykham, Roger . . . and Ralph Tanfield, executors of Robert, Bishop of London, delivered to the Dean and Chapter one pontifical book in two volumes, a mitre (described with its weight), a pastoral staff of silver (described with its weight); also by gift of H., Cardinal of St. Ensebini, Bishop of Winchester, son of John, Duke of Lancaster, in 1447, a great cup of silver, gilt all over, with hexagonal foot, with images of the crucified, Mary and John, &c., weighing 50½ oz.; also a casula of purple gold cloth, very precious, with the arms of the cardinal at the back, which are the arms of England and France, &c., with an alb, stole, amice, and maniple, and a casula and stole and maniple, frontal and counterfrontal of white cloth, and other things. (50.)

39 Hen. VI. Oct. 20. Lease by William Say, S.T.D., the Dean, and Chapter of St. Paul's, to Roger Frende of the parish of Willesden, yeoman, of a field called Goders-hille, in the parish of Acton, co. Middlesex, and a croft called the Denes Rydding, and now called the Denes fyve acres, and a great field called the Pylle and one rood of meadow called the Denes fyve swaythes, in the parish of Willesdene, for 99 years, at the rent of eight marks sterling, four bushels of white meale, each of the value of 10*d.* or 10*d.* and four of ote meale, each of the value of 12*d.* or 12*d.* (55.)

ALFRED J. HOBWOLD.

MANUSCRIPTS IN THE POSSESSION OF EDWARD HAILSTONE, ESQ., F.S.A., AT WALTON HALL, NEAR WAKEFIELD, YORKSHIRE.

The museum, that used to attract tourists to Charles Waterton's ancestral home, has in these later years been replaced by the library which the present occupant of the uniquely picturesque mansion has formed in the rooms where the naturalist and traveller prepared his specimens or preserved his curiosities. Familiar to men of letters by his "Portraits of Yorkshire Worthies, in Two Volumes" (1869), Mr. Hailstone has long been known to dealers in old literature for his alacrity in buying folios and pamphlets, chap-books, and broadsides, that contribute anything to the illustration of the shire of three ridings. But though they are chiefly remarkable for an almost perfect series of works, written by Yorkshire men, or having some relation to the history of the county, the literary treasures of Walton Hall comprise the scarcely less valuable collection of ancient charters, MS. volumes, and miscellaneous writings described in the ensuing lists.

(a.) Books.

I. A Collection of MS. bibles, missals, breviaries, and other devotional works, including copies of:

- (a.) Biblia Sacra, of the 12th, 13th and 14th centuries.
- (b.) Alberti Magui De Landibus Gloriosæ Virginis, of the 14th century.
- (c.) Alexandri de Villa Dei Doctrinale, of the 14th century.
- (d.) Flores Decretorum, of the 14th century.
- (e.) Historiæ Veteris et Novi Testamenti, of the 14th century.
- (f.) Various versions of the Horm Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, of the 14th, 15th and 16th centuries.

Consisting of thirty-seven volumes, this remarkable collection of sacred and devotional writings comprises several rare and choice works that are beautiful specimens of mediæval calligraphy and illumination.

II. 1584-1637. The Herald's Visitations of Shropshire. Folio. A volume of emblazoned pedigrees by heralds who visited Shropshire in the years 1584, 1623, and 1637.

III. 1683-1734. Three Pocket Books of the personal accounts and private memoranda of Abraham Sharp, mathematician and astronomer, who was for some years Flamsteed's assistant in the Royal Observatory at Greenwich. (a.) Account Book, setting forth the astronomer's personal expenses from the year 1693 to the year 1734; together with scientific memoranda made at times before or after those dates. (b.) Book of Memoranda, containing a list of books that was probably the inventory of the mathematician's library at an early period of his career. (c.) Book of mathematical and miscellaneous notes, some of them having been made as early as the year 1683. Bound in vellum covers fitted with a clasp, these little books are of one size and manufacture; the handwriting of their entries being so minute as to be illegible to persons of failing vision without the aid of a magnifying glass.

IV. Armorial Bearings of the principal families of Yorkshire. Folio. No date.

V. Collection of Coats of Arms and Descents of several families of the nobility and gentry of the East Riding of Yorkshire. Folio. No date.

VI. Pedigrees of Yorkshire Gentry, by Thomas Beckwith, F.S.A., painter of York. Folio. No date.

VII. Collection of Church Notes and of Transcripts from Church Registers of the North Riding of Yorkshire, made by Mr. Dixon, of Middlesham. Containing also copies of deeds and court rolls.

(b.) Miscellaneous and Separate Writings.

(1.)—Richard I. Quitclaim by Ernold the Abbot and the Convent of Rievaulx to Thomas de Horburi in respect to certain houses in the west part of Blakeber.

(2.)—Charter of a grant, by Mathew the son of Sax, to the monks of the church of Rivaux, of four acres and half a perch of arable land in a place called Blakeber, in which to make workshops "in quibus facient fer-rum et utensilia et alia necessaria domui Reinali," et totam mineriam et totum mortuum boscum ex parte mea de Floctum et de Sittlington ad usus earundem fabricarum, ita ut nullus alius in hiis locis fabricem, nisi predicti monachi, habeat;" together with other concessions. Not dated, but made probably towards the end of the twelfth century. Also, a subsequent undated charter by Thomas de Horbire, made in confirmation of the above grant by his father Mathew, the son of Saxe,

"deo et ecclesie Sancte Marie Rivalis et monachis ibidem deo servientibus."

(3.)—1202-14. Charter by William de Mewi to the canons of the church of St. Peter and St. Paul of Plimton. Confirming a grant in perpetual almoigne, made in former time to the said canons by Walter de Mewi, grandfather of Gilda, the wife of the aforesaid William, of two ferlings of arable land of his demesne, and eight acres of arable land; it being stipulated in the confirmatory deed that the said William, and his heirs, are to hold the same land of the canons of the church aforesaid at an annual rent of six shillings. Not dated, but appearing from internal evidence to have been made in the above given time. Printed at large in the Fifth Volume of the "Archæological Journal."

(4.)—Charter by Gillebert de Ferrers to the canons of the church of the Blessed Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul of Plimton. Confirming the charter by which his mother Sibilla del Pin gave to the said canons the chapel of St. Martin in the manor of Blakestone, and the site of the place with the garden, and all the land from the Werpat to the old fountain of St. Martin, and the whole of Linesham, with other possessions; and also granting, together with other privileges, to the same canons and their servants for ever liberty to fish through all the waters of the grantor's lands. Not dated, but made apparently in an early year of the thirteenth century.

(5.)—Charter of the grant by Gillebert de Ferrers, son and heir of Sibilla de Pinn, to the canons of the church of St. Peter and St. Paul of Plimton, in perpetual almoigne, of the chapel of St. Martin of Blakiston and of certain lands lying between Plaistowe and Wlfpitte, together with liberty of fishing in the grantor's waters, and other possessions and privileges, the grant being made for the salvation of the grantor's soul and of the souls of his ancestors. Not dated, but made apparently in an early year of the thirteenth century. Printed at large in the Fifth Volume of the "Archæological Journal."

(6.)—1221. Indenture of an agreement between the Abbot and Convent of Fountains of the one part, and the Prior and Convent of Newburgh of the other part.
"Notum sit omnibus presentibus et futuris quod controversia mota inter Abbatem et Conventum de Newburgh ex altera parte super quodam muro et fossato leuato in territorio de Swetton uersus Dallinge in hunc modum conuenit, scilicet quod predictus murus et fossatum in perpetuum remanebant Abbati et Conuentui de Fontibus quieti de Priore et Conuentu de Newburgh ad faciendum inde quicquid ipsi monachi uoluerint, Et dicti Prior et Conuentus de Newburgh habebunt terram suam in Swetton cum pertinentiis plenarie in perpetuum extra predictum murum et fossatum; scilicet, non licebit Abbati et Conuentui de Fontibus neque Priori nec Conuentui de Newburgh erigere murum nel fossatum nel domum in Swetton nel in territorio eius extra loca que prius fuerunt habitata nel clausa nisi ex consensu utriusque partis, Hiis testibus &c. &c."

(7.)—Charter of the grant for ever by Ydonea, daughter of Adam, the son of Philip, of Shitlicton, to Ralph de Horbire and his heirs, of the half of the town of Saltunestall, and all the grantor's land in the town of Osesece and in the town of Floctun, together with her half of the mill of Shitlicton. Not dated, but made apparently in an early time of the thirteenth century.

(8.)—Grant for ever by Robert de Bry, and Beatrix his wife, of all their right and land in the wood of Brantum to Ralph de Horbire, son of Thomas de Horbire. Not dated, but appearing to have been made in an early time of the thirteenth century.

(9.)—Acknowledgment by Ralph de Horbire that he is bound to pay a yearly rent of three shillings of silver to Master Gilbert, rector of the church of Thornil, for the eight and a half acres of arable land, with appurtenances, in the territory of Migeleha, to be held by him for life of the said rector and church. Not dated, but of the same period as the immediately preceding grant.

(10.)—Grant by William, the son of Jordan of Floctun, to Ralph de Horbire and his heirs, of all the grantor's right in certain land and a pit at Shitlicton. Not dated, but of the same period as grant No. 7.

(11.)—Grant for ever by Ingeramus, the son of Aldred of Kirkeby, to Ralph de Horbire, his heirs and assigns, of all the lands and possessions which Idonea, the daughter of Adam, the son of Philip of Shitlington gave to the same Ralph and his assigns. Not dated.

E. HAILSTONE, Esq.

(12).—1236. Lease to farm for thirteen years, by Thomas of Horbire, son of William of Horbire, to Ralph de Horbire, son of Thomas of Horbire, of the one half of the mill of Horbire and Shitilgton, "cum stagno et cum tota sequela et omnibus consuetudinibus hominum suorum villarum Horbire et Shitilgton qui debent sequela et consuetudines ex parte sua dictis molendinis et stagno &c."

(13).—Charter of the grant, by Ralph de Horbire for ever to God and the blessed Mary and the Convent of Kyrkestal, of an annual rent of one mark of silver, for ever, out of the land which Robert, the son of Swain of Horebyri holds, and from whatever person shall hold the said land; the grant being made for the salvation of the grantor's soul, and of the souls of his wife and heirs.

(14).—17 Edward I. Quitclaim by Margareta de Ripariis, widow of Baldwin de Insula, earl of Devon, to the Abbot and Convent of St. Benedict, of Bockland, co. Devon, of all right and claim which she ever had or was able to have by name of dowry in the churches of Bockland and Walkhampton in the said county. Dated at Westminster.

(15).—Grant by Robert de Birley, of Podeskese, to the brothers of the Hospital of Jerusalem, for ever, of an annual rent of twelvecpence. Not dated, but appearing to have been made about the year 1300.

(16).—Grant by Adam, the son of Attun of Pudesreshey, of an annual rent of one penny to God and the blessed Mary and the brothers of the Hospital of Jerusalem serving God there. Not dated, but made about the year 1300.

(17).—1316. Agreement between Thomas the Abbot and the Convent of Bokeland of the one part, and Mathew the Prior and the Convent of Plimpton of the other part, for the settlement of a controversy and lawsuit had between them, "super quadam secta ad hundredum sanctorum Abbatis et Conuentus de Rougeburch quod tribus septimanis in tres septimanas de tenemento quod dicti Prior et Conuentus tenent in Oldeblakiston infra precinctus hundredi predicti."

(18).—3 Edward III. Grant by Robert le Bosseger of a tenement in Plympton to Robert Rosel, his heirs and assigns, for ever.

(19).—1350. Grant in perpetual alms, by William Scott of Neuton to God, the blessed Mary, "et fratribus et milicie templi Jerusalem," of a toft in Pudesedaia, containing two acres of arable land. Not dated, but made about the year 1350.

(20).—1350. Grant by John of Byrle to the Prior and Brothers of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, of a piece of land in Podessey, for ever. Not dated, but made about 1350.

(21).—1350. Grant for ever by Matildis, the daughter of Gregory of Pudegesia, widow, "Deo et beate Marie et fratribus milicie templi Jerusalem," of a toft in Pudegesia, containing two acres of arable land; the grant being made for the safety of the grantor's soul and the welfare of the souls of her ancestors.

(22).—7 Henry V. Lease for sixty-five years, at a yearly rent of 13s. 4d., by John the Abbot and the Convent of Bokelon to William Pomeroy and Christiana his wife, and their daughter Amisia, of all those holdings at Buttysworthy and Gotor which John Staci has held of the same abbot and convent in the manor of Walkampton. It is stipulated amongst other things that the said tenants "facient sectas ad curias nostras legales apud Horrebriggis bis per annum vsque ad festa inuencionis sancte crucis et Sancti Michaelis et hoc per rationabilem summonicionem octo dierum, Et ad reparacionem gurgitis nostre piscarie tociens quociens moniti fuerint, Et guldabunt ad quamlibet marcam unum denar' et ad dimidium marcam obol' Et habebunt mercurium sufficiens pro reparacione domorum suarum ibidem faciendarum pro liberatione cellarii vel ballivi, Et sustentabunt domos et clausuras bene et competenter."

(23).—17 December, 9 Henry VII. Affidavit of Sir John York and Sir Edmund Smyth of Wakefield, priests, respecting the answers made to them by Sir Richard Legh, vicar of the parish church of Warmfeld, when at the request of William Watson they enquired of the said vicar of Warmfeld, whether he was ever enfeoffed in "the lyvelode of John Hyppron of Lofthouse."

(24).—14 Henry VII. Lease to farm for sixty years, at a yearly rent of eight shillings and sixpence, by the Abbot and Convent of St. Mary of Bockland, to Roger Odymer and his wife Joan, of the holding now in the hands of Thomas Brent of Schafe; the said term of sixty years to begin on the expiration of Thomas Brent's term of tenancy. Amongst other things this lease contains stipulations that the said Roger and Joan "facient sectas ad curias nostras legales apud Horebrygge bis per annum annuatim ibidem tenendas per rationabilem summonicionem octo dierum durante termino predicto, facient etiam comunem sectam ad molendinum nostrum de Byklegh cum omnibus granis et brasiiis enis molend', Et venient ad reparacionem gurgitis nostre piscarie ibidem tociens quociens moniti fuerint durante termino predicto, Et habebunt mercurium sufficiens pro reparacione domorum suarum ibidem reparandarum."

E. HAILSTONE, Esq.

(25).—1646. Mercurius Caeliens, Sive Almanack et Prognosticon Vel Speculum Anni. This copy of the printed calendar contains manuscript accounts, in the hand writing of John Sharp, of moneys received or disbursed for General Fairfax in the years 1650, 1653, 1654, 1655, 1656, and 1657.

(26).—13 August, 1649. Letter from Sir John Maynard, knt., to John Sharpe of Little Horton, in the parish of Bradford. About rents, discontented tenants, and other matters of the writer's private business. "Pamlets," says the writer, "are all false as fame which is Mendax. The Parliament will mayntayne the law of the land and have see declared in their last Declaration, which should give every rational man satisfaction. For those that refuse to pay Tith-hay in Bradford, I pray you put half-a-dozen of the richest of them in sute." Also two other letters on private matters from the same writer to the same correspondent, dated 27 February and 2 May 1649.

(27).—12 December 1650. Order by the Commissioners of the Militia of the county of Yorkshire, that Sir John Maynard be forthwith discharged of "the horse and pay" laid upon him for the rectory of Bradford at the petition of Lady Slingsby, and that Nicholas Yeoman of * and Mr. Robert Burows, of Hutton Pannell, be instead required to pay between them to Lady Slingsby, of Kippax, the sum of seventeen pounds and four shillings "in leue of a horse by her set forth for the service of the Parliament in Scotland."

(28).—24 August 1658. Letter from Lady Maynard to Mr. John Sharpe at Little Horton in the parish of Bradford. Announcing that the writer has been left her late husband's sole executor, with the estate in Bradford to herself for life, with remainder to her son. Mr. Sharpe is requested to look after the writer's rents, and to visit her at Tooting. Also eight other letters on private matters from the same writer to the same correspondent written in the years 1659, 1660, 1662, 1663, 1664, 1665.

(29).—8 January 1672. Release by Dame Mary Maynard of Tooting co. Surrey, widow of Sir John Maynard, knt., deceased, to Mary Sharp, of Little Horton within the parish of Bradford, co. York, widow, and to Thomas Sharp, gentleman, executors of Mr. John Sharpe, late of the last named parish, deceased.

(30).—1701-1727. Collection of twenty-three tables, in Abraham Sharp's curiously minnte handwriting (each table being a single and twice folded sheet of small foolscap paper); being a series of careful records of atmospheric observations made in the years 1701, 1704, 1705, 1706, 1707, 1708, 1709, 1710, 1712, 1713, 1716, 1717, 1721, 1723, 1727.

(31).—1706. Six sheets, in paper wrapper, of calculations and tables, in John Flamsteed's handwriting, for finding the Longitude and Latitude, the Right Ascension and Declination being given; and for finding the Right Ascension and Declination, the Latitude and Longitude being given. With this inscription at the head of the first sheet, "Johannis Flamsteedii Astronomi Regii Tabulae Subsidiariae ad Sharpio suo dono data," January 29, 1705.

(32). Broadside (printed) with the heading, "The Quadrature of the Circle deduced from two different series, whereby the Truth is proved to Seventy-two Figures, by Abraham Sharp."

Besides the writings noticed in the foregoing catalogues Mr. Hailstone has in his collection a large number of carefully arranged papers and deeds (relating chiefly to the county of his birth and his special literary subjects) that would be studied with interest by topographers and local annalists, though the value of the documents to general historians is insignificant.

In conclusion it affords me much pleasure to acknowledge the cordiality with which I was received at Walton Hall, and the assistance which Mr. Hailstone afforded me for the accomplishment of the purpose of Her Majesty's Commissioners on Historical MSS.

JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

FIVE DEEDS BELONGING TO THE CHURCH OF ST. ANDREW, WORCESTER.

These deeds relate to houses in the city of Worcester, and beyond the names of certain streets in Worcester, and the proprietorship of certain property, do not contain anything of particular importance. The earliest of the deeds is in the reign of Edward I., and the latest in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. To the last the seal of the bailiffs of Worcester is affixed, because, as therein stated, the seal of the grantor was not known; a late instance of what in earlier times was not uncommon.

Abstracts of the deeds follow. With the deeds are copies of the first, second, and third, and also of two other deeds, one of the 35 Edw. I. (seemingly the deed referred to in the second of those noted below) and one of the 35 Hen. VI., both relating to property in Worcester.

Temp. Edw. I., no date. Deed poll, whereby Thomas de Clifone, called le Knyst, citizen of Worcester, gives and confirms to Henry de Stodley, sadler, citizen of Worcester, in fee, a tenement, situate between the donor's tenement and a tenement of Roger de Scheldesleye, in a street called Wodestathe stret in Worcester. To hold of the chief lords of the fee, paying yearly to Simon le Fraunceys and his heirs, 3s. 6d. at the usual quarterly terms according to the custom of the said city, and 6d. for the support of a light before the cross in the church of St. Andrew, on the feast day of St. Andrew; and to Roger de Scheldesleye and his heirs 1d. at Easter. The consideration for this grant was 100s. Witnesses, Walter le Euneys, William Colle, then bailiffs of Worcester, Wlston de Salope, William Parson, Roger de Scheldesleye, William Mose, Gilbert le Hope, Philip le Especer, Hugh Lovet, and others. Seal gone. Indorsed: "Carta de dono Thomæ Militis."

35 Edw. I. Feast of St. Kenelm, king and martyr, Worcester. Deed poll, whereby John Dorlyng, citizen of Worcester, states that he is thereby bound to dom. William de Wynchcombe, rector of the church of St. Andrew of Worcester, and all the parishioners of the said church, to amend, repair, and build the tenement situate between the tenement formerly of Robert Alyne and the tenement of Thomas de Ronthale, in the street called Worcester Brudeport, within one year from the date of the deed, and afterwards to keep it in good condition; and the said rector and parishioners may levy yearly 15s. 2d. from the said tenement for the use of the said church, which 15s. 2d. of rent to them for the said tenement, which he bought of them, he is bound to pay, as by the charter of feoffment appears. If he fail to build the house within the term aforesaid he binds himself, and his heirs and executors to them in 20l., to be paid in the church of St. Mary of Worcester, 15 days after the default, to which payment, the said rector and parishioners bringing the deed with them, he binds himself, his heirs, executors, goods, and chattels, lands and tenements, to the distress or coercion of the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, and the distress of any other ecclesiastical or secular judge whom the rector and parishioners may choose, until they are satisfied the 20l. and all expenses. And he binds himself in the form aforesaid in 40s. by way of aid to the Holy Land, and 100s. for Queen's gold, if he fail to build the house within the term. When the house is built to the satisfaction of true and lawful men the deed is to be returned to him or his heirs. Witnesses, William Colle, John Lony, then bailiffs of Worcester, John Conyon, William Rokulf, Henry de Astone, and others. Seal gone.

10 Hen. V. Feast of the Annunciation of the B.V.M., Worcester.—Indenture, whereby John Grene, rector of the church of St. Andrew, demises to Robert Nelme a parcel of a garden to the manse of the rectory of the said church, contiguous to the house of the said Robert, late of Walter Clare and Agnes his wife, which parcel is now inclosed, and was lately held by the said Walter and Agnes by grant from Master Robert Osebach, the late rector, at the yearly rent of 12d. for their lives, to hold the said parcel to the said Robert Nelme and his assigns for 40 years from the date thereof at the yearly rent to John and his successors of 40d., payable quarterly. If any portion is in arrear for two weeks John and his successors may enter and expel the lessee and his assigns. Witnesses, Baldwin Thorne, William Morrys, Robert Dyer and others. Seal gone.

35 Hen. VIII. July 4. Deed poll, whereby John Bartenele, of the city of Worcester, chaplain, gives to Thomas Stokes and Elizabeth his wife, and Edmund Grene and Anne his wife, daughters of Richard Style, late deceased, a tenement with the appurtenances, in the city of Worcester, in the street called Bradport, adjoining a tenement late belonging to the monastery of St. Mary the Virgin of Worcester on the south, and the tenement of Thomas Lytulton on the north, and extending from the said street in front to the garden formerly of Robert Sutton, dyer, and which said tenement descended to the donor from his grandfather Nicholas Bartenele. To hold the same to the said Thomas Stokes and Elizabeth his wife, and Edmund Grene and Anne his wife, and their heirs and assigns for ever of the chief lords of the fee. Clause of warranty. Witnesses, Thomas Body, Richard Goodyere, Henry Huyet, and many others. Seal of red wax.

9 Eliz. March 20. Deed poll, whereby John Wallesgrove, alias Flytt, of the city of Worcester, mercer, enfeoffs and confirms to Thomas Collynge, the younger, Arnold Hall, Edmund Lokier, Thomas Bromley, John Peerson, Robert Colly, John Chappell, and John Cookesey, eight cottages or tenements, and eight gardens thereto belonging in Powyk Lane in the city of Worcester, on the south side of the said lane, to hold to the feelees, their heirs and assigns for ever, for the uses and purposes of the last will of the said John Wallesgrove; and because his seal is unknown the seal of the bailiffs of the city is affixed. The grantor's seal is gone; the seal of the bailiffs remains. At the back is a memorandum of inrolment of the deed on the 25th of March in the book of pleas of the city of Worcester.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

MANUSCRIPTS BELONGING TO BISHOP BUBWITH'S ALMSHOUSES, WELLS, SOMERSET.

BISHOP
BUBWITH'S
ALMS-
HOUSES.

In the early part of this year the documents noticed in the following report were discovered in an old oak press in a disused room of Bishop Bubwith's Almshouse in Wells. Their existence had not been suspected, and the amount of dust which covered them seems to show that they had lain there unnoticed for a considerable length of time. The first thing to be done was to get the parchments and papers into some sort of chronological order, and for his assistance in this work, as well as for much useful information, my best thanks are due to Mr. Serel, of Wells, as they are also to Mr. Garrod, the master of the Almshouse, for the ample facilities which he afforded me for the examination.

Numerous as the documents are, and interesting locally, they are not of such a nature as to require a very detailed report, for they consist almost exclusively of the annual accounts of the hospital, and of deeds, &c. relating to the property of the hospital, for the most part in Wells itself and the immediate neighbourhood. A few deal with small properties in Glastonbury, three with other small parcels of land in Sherborne, and one with some land in Midsomer Norton.

These deeds, about 260 in all, begin in the 13th and end in the 16th century. A few which have no date belong apparently to about the same time as the earliest which bears a date, viz., 1236. Many of the earlier documents are beautiful specimens of calligraphy; and all, both early and late, are remarkable for the great number and perfect condition of the seals. Several of the seals of the 15th century have the peculiarity of a ring or twist of grass impressed into the wax around the edge of the impression.

The account rolls and books commence with the year 1441, about the date of the foundation of the Almshouse. Only seven remain of the 15th, and 40 of the first three-quarters of the next century; but from the year 1582 they run in an almost unbroken series to the year 1732.

Perhaps I may be allowed to notice here that the discovery of these documents directed our attention to a fine old chest, supposed to be the original chest provided by the directions of Bishop Bubwith, which had never been opened within the memory of any of the authorities of the hospital. The chest is indeed a well-known one; it stands in a place of honour in the common hall, and it has been exhibited at the Kensington Museum, and also before meetings of the County Antiquarian Society. It did not seem, therefore, a likely place for a discovery of unknown papers. However, when opened with a picklock, it proved to be full of parchments covered with dust and cobwebs. These are, indeed, of no great value, being for the most part old leases, &c. of the beginning of 16th century, with a few deeds of the time of H. VI. enclosed in a smaller box; but I mention the circumstance as a curious instance how old documents

BISHOP
BUBWITH'S
ALMS-
HOUSES.

may be lying unnoticed almost under the eyes of many persons who are interested in finding such things.

8 small deeds, undated, with 9 of the seals perfect.

A.D. 1236.—1 deed, with good seal of Margaret, widow of Edward of Mealsbury.

A.D. 1249.—1 deed, with good seal of Radulf Page, fil Alwyn de Vinell.

A.D. 1300.—An inseximus. Good seal of the Abbey of Bath, with the prior's seal impressed on the reverse.

A.D. 1300.—1 deed, with good seal of Cristina Swuyn.

E. II.—22 deeds, with 21 seals. One of these mentions "unam shoppam in solario."

E. III.—38 deeds, with 32 seals.

R. II.—23 deeds, with 27 good seals, particularly one of the prior of Glastonbury.

H. IV.—23 deeds, with 34 good seals, including two of the prior of Glastonbury and several of the towns of Bristol and Wells.

H. V.—10 deeds, with 10 seals.

H. VI., A.D. 1437, Sept. 30.—An agreement between the executors of Bishop Bubwith's will and the city of Wells for the building of the almshouse, and rules for the election of members.

84 other deeds, with 86 seals, including good impressions of the old seal of the cathedral, of the abbey of Malmesbury, of Sir J^e. Stoughton, Wm. Carent, Edmund Hungerford, Miles, &c.

E. IV.—26 deeds, with 35 seals.

1483.—2 deeds, with 3 seals.

A letter from the Abbot of Malmesbury.

A.D. 1448.

Be hit y known to alle trewe Crysten men, that this present wrytynge shall come to that y Thomas Abbot of Malmesbury, that wheras hit ys noysed & opynly declared by on mayster John Regnold, chanon of Welles, & other of hys counceill, that Hugh of Besely, Thom's Wayfer, & Thom's Harryes, had never lyvery nekeher possession of the maner of Mellesburgh & Wokehole on Robert Longe of Wroxals in the counte of Wiltes, Esquier, and Water Evard, of Malmesbury, in the same counte, Esquier, þ^r wher as they wer in dayng and in examinacion at Welles by twene þe sayde mayster John Regnolds on the on party and John Wayfer of Sherston on the other party that on John florest of Wokyhole in the counte of Som^r husbondeman, & William Wheler of þ^r said towne of Wokyhole, husbondeman ten^{tys} of the sayd maner of Mellesburgh, by rygte straye examinacion & a parte on ych after oþ made seyth by heer yowthes þ^r thay wer pseynt & say when Thom's Wayfer flader of the sayde Thom's Wayfer delveryd possession unto to be sayde Hugh & to hys composners of the sayde maner of Mellesburgh & Wokyhole and ther þ^r said Hug brake a bough in þ^r pseynt of the saydon John florest & Will. Wheler & mony other, and this the saydon Robt. Longe & Water Evards saydon to me when þey came home and a pon that þ^r said Hugh hyld a courte a pon the sayd maner in hys owne name & hys composners and þ^r said John florest & William Wheler a pon þ^r said gr^{ntes} (erasure) recv^{yd} eynch of them by j.d. unto þ^r said Hugh. Also ther as hyt y noysed & sayde by the sayd Mayster John & other of hys counceill þ^r the sayde Thomas Harryes, the wch was seysed of all þ^r sayde maner by the s^{nyber}, had relesyd under hys seale alle the rygt & clayme that he had in the sayde maner unto on John Stourton of Preston, hyt was nev^r so, for þ^r sayde Thomas Harryes came by fore me at my maner of Cowfold & brougte wth hym on Thomas Paternost of Sherston in the counte of Wiltes, gentylman, John Trapnell of the sayde towne of Sherston in þ^r sayde counte, gentylman, & Robt. Hert, of the sayde towne, in the sayde counte, youman, wth mony mo of the same towne of Sherston: and they þ^r forsayde Thom's Harryes wth all thes p ones abovesayde made feyth & growth unto me that h ever relesyd as the sayd mayster John above wryton seyth & noyseth, but þ^r was sole seysyd by the s^{nyber}, & so dyed seysyd; but þ^r same reles the wych þ^r they suppose shold be the reles of Thom's Harryes, hyt was ymad & forgyd by on John Rewis in Alsou hales howse at Sherston, as hyt ys opynly knowe by alle þ^r towne of Sherston. In the witenes of the wych thyngs this pseynt letter I have yputteto my seale ygeve at Malmesbury the xv daye of Marehe the yer of kyng "Harry þ^r now ys after the conquest of the xxvith," Good impression of the Abbot's seal, but broken.

Certificate to the same effect from Walter Evard of Malmesbury. Seal of the borough of Malmesbury.

25 H. VI.

Dec. 15.—Another to the same effect. All three in English.

2 H. VIII.

Dec. 31.—"To all trewe Cristeu peopll to whom thes p'sent wrytyngs shall come to hire or see, Jhon Tyler, late master of the towne of Welles, of the age of lxxij yeres, William Brigger of the age of lxx yeres, William Godwyne of the age of lxx yeres, John Pomrey of the age of lxxij yeres, John Jouns of the age of lxxii yeres, Harry James of the age of lxxii yeres, Richard Knyght of the age of lxxx yeres, William Lacy of the age of lxx yeres, and Mathewe More of the age of lxx yeres, sendeth gretyng in oure Lord God ev^rlastyng. Where it ys a meritory dede to bere wittenes of eny thyng that ys trewe, we testyfic of a trouth that one John Henbury," &c., &c. was seised in fee of a messuage in Glastonbury, that his daughter married to one John Belton is his heiress and is now living, &c., &c."

1586.

Feb. 27.—A license, signed by Cristofer Kenn and Will^m Borowmay, magistrates, to R. Corfylde of Wynscombe, "foresamuch as he hath used baking of bread "there of long time & behaved himself honestlie "therein," to buy in the markets of Welles & Axbridge weekly 10 bushells of corn; viz^t, in Welles market 3 bushells of wheat & two of barley or beanes, & in Axbridge markett 3 bushells of wheat & two of barley or beanes, at such prices as for the time the market shall weekly goe, & not above, & at such hours as shall be appointed for bakers to buy. He shall give to the constable a written account of the quantities bought and the prices. This license to endure until the Feast of St. Michael next after the date.

J. A. BENNETT.

A MANUSCRIPT in the DIOCESAN LIBRARY of DERRY, in IRELAND.

DIOCESAN LIBRARY,
DERRY,
IRELAND.

A large folio volume, measuring about 17 inches by 11 inches, containing 13 leaves not numbered and 105 leaves numbered 12–116. Eleven of the thirteen are occupied with additions to the text. A single leaf and a quire of 12 (foolscap size) are loose in front. These are headed, "The 3^r booke concerning a collection of sizes "serving for vessells of capacite in liquide and drie wares." This is divided into four chapters.

The whole work is a treatise on ancient weights and measures, seemingly by William Harrison, who assisted Raphael Holinshead in compiling the Chronicles of England, printed in 1577 and 1587.

The text begins imperfectly on fo. 12, "barlie the "more auncient of both laid in also with our wheat, "which later was such as was sowed in Egypt at the "time of the deliverie of Israel." At the top of the page is an addition of six lines beginning "sundry peeces "thereof which have had the word esterling stamped "upon them."

The work is by way of question and answer between Scholar and Master.

Fo. 12 b. ends with "Scholar. Then let us leave "it I pray you as it is, and go in hand with linale "dimension, for I have even enough of the naturall "graine, with which I have shaken hands, as the poet "did with his friend when he said, Vale bonis avibus "nunquam rediturus amice."

Fo. 13 a. Of lineall dimension according to the Romaine size, used in the time of Augustus. Cap. 1.* (Harrison quotes old authors and inscriptions and gives drawings of the foot).

Fo. 22 a. Of such areall dimensions as the Romans used in the beginning of their Empire, &c. Cap. 5.

Fo. 27 a. Of the like dimensions used in our time in the cite of Rome, and their comparison with the ancient. Cap. 7.

Fo. 27 b. Of lineare and areall dimension as it stode with the Grecians when their commonwealth of Athens most flourished. Cap. 8.

* Cap. 4. originally.

DIOCESAN LIBRARY
DERRY,
IRELAND.

Fo. 30 b. Of the like dimensions some time in use amongst the Hebrews. Cap. 9. (He gives the dimensions of the Ark.)

Fo. 35 a. Of lineare dimension used according to the manner of England in our times, with the correction of our foote. Cap. 10.

Fo. 38 a. Of areall dimension presently used in England. Cap. 11. (In this the author alludes to the increase of careful husbandary, and to the common dispute whether plus vel minus in a Court Roll or evidence contains whole acres or fractions).

Fo. 41 b. The Second Booke which entreateth of the sizes of weightes after the standares of sundrie nations. Cap. 1., of the balance.—Cap. 2., of the uncia or 12th part of the Assis.—Cap. 3., of the Denarius.—Cap. 4., of the small weighte of the Grecians.—Cap. 5., of the Jewish proportions.—Cap. 6., of the Golden Shekel.—Cap. 7., of the proportion of the English ounce commonly called the Troian.—Cap. 8., of the ounce averdupois and Greek and Roman.—Cap. 9., of the Roman pound.—Cap. 10 of the Grecian Mna and his partes.—Cap. 11., of the English poundes, and how they are divided into their severall partes.—Cap. 12., of the Hebrue Manch and his partes.—Cap. 13., of the triple distinction of poundes at this daie in use amongst sundrie forrein nations.—Cap. 14., of great weightes as Talents or Quintalles, &c., heretofore and now in use among divers nations.

Fo. 85. The third book containing the sizes of measures serving to the capacitie of liquid and drie wares. 1. of the sponefull, which some imagine to be the basis and foundation of all measure by capacitie.—2. Of the measures of the Romans serving for liquid wares.—3. Of the liquid measures of the Grecians.—4. Of the liquid measures of the Hebrews.—5. Of the present liquid measures of England, and their sizes, wherein their reformation and manner of upright keeping is sufficiently delivered, (the author mentions the thimblefull, ounce equalling a quarter of a pint, sometimes called a gyll, and the half part thereof a gyllot, gill, half-pint or mudge or cheopinot, pint, quart, potle, gallon, firkin, rondelet, kilderkin, barrell, hoggshead, pipe, tonne, puncheon).—6. Drie measures of the ancient and present Romans.—7. Drie measures of the Greeks.—8. Drie measures of the Hebrews.—9. Of the drie measures of England as they stand in the year of grace 1587. (The author mentions quarter of pecke, tocke, half-pecke, pecke, talbot or half-bushel, bushel, strike, coome, quarter, chaldron).—10. Ancient measures of sundrie foreign nations whereof we have no more ample and large notice than only their names and doubtful proportions remaining. It ends on fo. 116, where a note (holograph) cancelled says his labours were vain because on Saturday the . . . a proclamation of new standard weightes came out.

In the diocesan library of Derry are also vols. 2, 3, and 4, in large folio of Harriſon's "Chronologie," from the earliest times to the year 1593, extracts from the 16th century portion are given by Mr. Furnivall in the appendix to his edition of Harriſon's Description of England, for the New Shakespeare Society.

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

DIOCESAN LIBRARY,
DERRY,
IRELAND.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE REPORT ON THE MANUSCRIPTS OF G. H. FINCH, ESQ., M.P., AT BURLEY-ON-THE-HILL.

G. H.
FINCH, ESQ.

After I left Burley-on-the-Hill a letter by Oliver Cromwell was found, of which an abstract is below. From the original being there, it is to be presumed that something occurred to prevent its delivery.

1657, Aug. 11. Westminster. Oliver, by the grace of God, Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and the dominions and territories thereto belonging, to the High and Mighty Emperor Sultan Mahomet Kan, Chiefe Lord and Commander of the Mussulman Kingdome, sole and supreme Monarch of the Eastern Empire.—After noticing that piracies occurred, and that the pirates found places of retreat and succour in the Sultan's dominions, Oliver gives "an instance (to omit many others) in the late surprisall of an English ship called the 'Resolution,' which, being laden with cloth, tynn, lead, and money, to the value of 200,000 dollars, and bound for your owne port of Scanderone, was yett in her passage (near Candy) assaulted by seaven ships of Tripoly (part of your Majesty's fleet, and then actually in your service), and by them carried to Rhodes, another of your Majesty's ports, where wee are informed the Captain Bassa hath been so far from dis-owning the action that he hath, in scorn and contempt of the Capitulations, secured the ship and goods, and also the Master, mariners, and passengers, who had not a ragge left to cover them." Oliver says that he cannot pass it over without a due consideration and representation to the Sultan as a manifest breach of peace: and requests him to command a complete restitution of the ship, goods, and money, and release of the men; and to take course for suppressing the Pirates, &c.; and has given order to his ambassador at the Porte to inform the Sultan more particularly, Oliver desiring to understand the Sultan's resolution thereon.—At the foot is the tremulous signature of "Oliver, P."

ALFRED J. HORWOOD.

CIRCULAR OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMISSION.

HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

Rolls House, Chancery Lane, 1869.

Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint under Her Sign Manual certain Commissioners to ascertain what MSS. are extant in the collections of private persons and in institutions which are calculated to throw light upon subjects connected with the Civil, Ecclesiastical, Literary, or Scientific history of this country. A copy of the Commission is enclosed, which will best explain the object Her Majesty has in view.

The Commissioners think it probable that you may feel an interest in this object, and be willing to assist in the attainment of it, and with that view they desire me to lay before you an outline of the course which they propose to follow.

If any nobleman or gentleman express his willingness to submit any paper or collection of papers within his possession or power to the examination of the Commissioners, they will cause an inspection to be made by some competent person, upon the information derived from whom the Commissioners will make a private report to the owner on the general nature of the papers in his collection; such report will not be made public without the owner's consent, but a copy of it will be deposited and preserved in the Public Record Office, to which no person will be allowed to have access without the consent of the owner of the papers reported on.

Where the papers are not more insulated documents, but form a collection which appears to be of Literary or Historical value, a chronological list or brief calendar will be drawn up, and a copy thereof presented to the owner, and to no other person without his consent, but the original of such calendar will be deposited for preservation in the Public Record Office, to which no person will be allowed to have access without the consent of the owner of such collection.

The Commissioners will also, if so requested, give their advice as to the best means of repairing and preserving any papers or MSS. which may be in a state of decay, and are of Historical or Literary value.

To avoid any possible apprehension that the examination of papers by the Commissioners may extend to or include any title deeds or legal documents, I have to call your attention to the fact that nothing of a private character or relating to the titles of existing owners is to be divulged, and to assure you that positive instructions will be given to every person who examines the MSS. that if in the course of his examination any title deeds or other documents of a private character chance to come before him, they are to be instantly put aside, and are not to be reported on or calendared under any pretence whatever.

The object of the Commission is solely the discovery of unknown Historical and Literary materials, and in all their proceedings the Commissioners will direct their attention to that object exclusively.

In no instance will any MS. be removed from the owner's residence without his request or consent, but if for convenience any MSS. be intrusted to the Commissioners, they will be deposited in the Public Record Office, and be treated with the same care as if they formed part of the Public Muniments, and will be returned to the owner at any time specified by him.

The costs of inspections, reports, and calendars, and the conveyance of documents, will be defrayed at the public expense, without any charge to owners.

The Commissioners will feel much obliged if you will communicate to them the names of any gentlemen who may be able and willing to assist in obtaining the objects for which this Commission has been issued.

I have the honour to be,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN ROMILLY.

CIRCULAR
OF THE
SECRETARY
OF THE COMMISSION.

CIRCULAR
OF THE
SECRETARY
OF THE
COMMISSION.

INDEX TO EIGHTH REPORT.

A.

- Aahcottey, the river; 602 a.
 Abbeville; 33 a, 34 b.
 Abbot, Abbott:
 Alice, of Cambridge, will of; 332 b.
 Col. Daniel; 511 a.
 — petition of; 530 b.
 Henry, letter of; 289 b.
 Abell, John, counter tenor; 12 b.
 Aberbrothock, abbot of, Henry; 300 b.
 Aberconway, document dated at; 347 a.
 Abercorn: lands and barony of; 307 b, 308 b.
 Earl of, James (1610); 309 b.
 — charter by (1647); 309 b, 310 a.
 — his troops; 494 b.
 — (1712); 74 a.
 Abercromby:
 Capt., letter of; 39 b.
 Col., letter of; 38 a.
 Major, letter of; 37 a.
 Col. Robt., letter of; 293 b.
 Aberdeen; xxii, 215 b.
 documents dated at; 301 a. rendezvous of troops at; 302 b.
 Carmelite friars of; 297 b.
 — conveyance to; 301 a.
 King's College; xvii, 297 a, 301 a.
 St. Paul's chapel in; 300 b.
 Bishop of (1520), G., document signed by; 302 a.
 — Elphinstone (1491); 304 b, 303 b.
 Earl of, his MSS.; xx.
 Abervenny:
 Lord, Henry (1666); 104 a.
 — George, deceased; 104 a, 104 b.
 — John (1666), Act touching, &c.; 104 a.
 — deceased (1669); 137 b.
 — the now (1669); 137 b.
 Lady Elizabeth Dowager; 104 a, 106 b, 136 a, 137 b.
 barony of; 585 a.
 Abernethy, in Strathern; 298 b.
 Aberty, Major, letter of; 39 b.
 Abigal, Mrs., ballad on; 19 a.
 Abingdon; xxii, 3 a, 158 b, 266 a, 332 b.
 monastery of; 342 b.
 Lord and Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Abington:
 Lord (c. 1688); 538 b.
 Little, vicar of; 333 a.
 Abirbuthnot. See Arbutthott.
 Abircorn, Lord of; 307 a.
 Abirnithy, M. de, witness; 305 a.
 Abney:
 Mr., of Leicester; 436 a.
 Philip, of Leicester; 419 a.
 Abott, Col., in Ireland; 602 a.
 Aboyne, Earl of, letter of (1679); 299 b, 304 a.
 Abraham, address to the sons of; restoration of the Jews (1785); 289 a.
 Absentee tax, the, in Ireland; 194 a, 203 a, 204 a.
 Acadebeck, Persian merchant; 23 a.
 Acapulco, letter dated at; 23 b.
 Accadie, 50 b.
 Accounts:
 method of keeping, in Ch. Ch., Canterbury; 343 b.
 Commissioners (Act 19 & 20 Car. II. c. 1.), report, &c. of; viii, 128 a-133 b.
 Aedenn; 324 b.
 Acheson, Sir Archibald, his son; 195 a.
 Achilles, the ship; 223 a.
 Achoury, dean and church of; 516 b.
 Ackworth, co. York; 274 a.
 Acliffe church, 246 a.
 Acosta, Francis de, a Jesuit; his journey to Persia; 23 a.
 Acre: capture of; 351 a.
 fortress of; 345 b.
 Acres, Nicholas, son of; xvi, 406 b.
 Acton Burnel, statute of; 324 b, 350 a.
 Acton, Ro., document signed by; 209 b.
 Acton, Middlesex, manor of; 632 a, 635 b.
 Aconha, Don Diego Sarmiento de; 213 b.
 Adair:
 Andrew, petition signed by; 538 a.
 I 120.
 Adair—cont.
 Robert, letters of; 289 b, 291 a.
 Wm., letter of; 295 a.
 Adalardenn; 324 b.
 Adam:
 Mr., his dispute and duel with Charles Fox; 205 b.
 John, of Cambridge, will of; 332 b.
 Adams:
 Col., Governor of Bonrattie; 605 a.
 Lieut. James; 592 b.
 Randall, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
 Adamstowne, co. Meath; 499 a.
 Addams, Richard, 139 b.
 Addock, Thomas, a prisoner at Leicester; 433 b.
 Addington; 335 a.
 Addison:
 E., letter of; 289 b.
 J., letters of; 289 b, 291 a, 292 b, 293 a, 294 b.
 Joseph, Secretary of State, &c.; xi, 46 b, 49 b.
 — letters of; 47 a, 49 a, 60 a.
 — letters to; 15 b, 58 b, 59 a.
 — examinations by; 45 b.
 — introduction by; 59 a.
 — his Campaign; 16 b.
 — and the "Spectator"; 460 a.
 William, letter of; 24 a.
 Addy, William, of Athy, petition of; 538 a.
 Adedes, barony of; 99 a.
 Adelmarr, Caesar; 226 b.
 Adichel, Henry de; 357 a.
 Adisham (Eadesham) manor of; 315 b, 326 a, 326 b, 330 a, 340 a.
 Adkinson, Miles, soldier; 534 b.
 Adlington, John; 365 a.
 Administrators' accounts, Act for continuing and ordering; 118 b, 122 a.
 Admiralty, the; 247 b.
 letter to; 256 b.
 letters, &c. concerning; 45 a.
 documents dated at; 37 b, 286 b, 393 b, 394 a.
 Act touching jurisdiction of (1670); 141 b. commissioners, letter to; 245 b.
 — petitions to; 245 a.
 Adred, Robert, of Beccles, will of; 333 b.
 Adrian IV., Pope, bull of; 317 a.
 Adventure, the ship; 243 a.
 Aelgar:
 a priest; 323 a.
 his son Hely; ib.
 Æsop, life of; 63 b.
 African slave trade; 293 a.
 Agar, or Egar, Charles, convicted of treason; 538 b.
 Agard:
 Philip, commissary; 336 a.
 William, commission to; 432 a.
 Aghamote, quartermaster; 547 a.
 Aghanannure; 608 a.
 Aghene, Kent, deeds relating to; 328 b.
 Aghmooty, Arthur, petition signed by; 538 a.
 Aghrim or Aughrim:
 manor, co. Galway; 518 a, 525 b, 536 b. battle of; 447 b, 493 a.
 Aglan, William, clerk; 234 a.
 Agmondesham, camp at; 224 b.
 Agnes, one of the Scilly islands; 257 a, 258 a, 258 b.
 Agnew, Sir A., with the Blair garrison; 314 b.
 Ahmuty:
 Lieut., letter of; 289 b.
 Colonel, letters of; 289 b, 293 b, 294 b, 295 a.
 Aiguemorte, prisoners at; 285 a.
 Aillesbury, Earl of:
 letter of (1667); 439 b.
 — (1671); 440 a.
 letters of (1707); 32 b.
 letter of (1793); 295 b.
 Ailsa, Marquis of, his MSS.; xx.
 Ainslie, Miss, MSS. of; xx.
 Airle, Earl of, his MSS.; xx.
 Aissbford, Will., clerk, of Feniton St. Andrew, will of; 334 b.
 Aitkins, Alexander, petition of; 503 a.
 Aix:
 letter dated at; 194 a.
 magistrates of, letter of; 39 b.
 the King of Prussia at; 571 b.
 Akatur, Juliana le, gift by; 323 a.
 Akenside, Dr. Mark; 226 b.
 examination of; 232 b.

Akenside—cont.

- his application to Cambridge University; ib.
elected censor, &c.; ib.
Dr. Harvey's works edited by; ib.
- Aketon, Vicar of; 335 a.
- Alan:
John, Abp. of Dublin; 581 a.
Walter; 262 b.
- Aland:
Fortescue, letter of; 23 b.
Henry, petition of; 531 b.
- Alba, Bishop of, Jordan; 266 a.
- Alba Notele, W. de, corrody to; 347 a.
- Albani, Cardinal and Pope; 22 a.
- Albano, Bishop Cardinal of, nuntio; 344 b, 345 b, 346 a.
- Albany, Duke of:
brother of James III. of Scotland; 298 b.
John (1524); 308 b.
Robert; xvii, 304 a.
- Albany, Sir Robert, and Edwd. Staverton; Sir Henry Nevill and Eliz. Lady Perriam v.; 284 a.
- Albemarle, Duke of; 115 b, 275 a.
Master of the Trinity House (1660); 249 a, 250 a.
letters of (1661); 212 a, 439 a.
letter to (1663); 219 a.
(1664); 252 b.
his troop (1663); 504 b.
(1666); 253 b.
letter of (1667); 387 b.
(1668); 120 b.
his death (1670); 254 a.
portraits of; 235 b, 253 a, 257 a, 258 b. late, George (1670); 147 a.
privilege case (1670); 151 b.
Christopher (1670), estate Act; 147 a.
- Albemarle, Earl of:
Keppel, letter of (1696); 558 a.
letters of (1706); 32 a.
letters of (1707); 32 b.
letters of (1709); 36 b, 37 a.
letter of (1710); 38 a.
letter of (1711); 39 b.
letters of (1712); 40 a.
letter of (1714); 57 a.
letter of (1715); 40 b.
- Alberghotti, M., letter of; 38 a.
- Albert, Archduke; 585 a.
letter of (1617); 214 a.
- Albert L., King of the Romans; 49 b.
- Albin, Robert, corrody to; 2 a.
- Albhold, Ralph, of Leicester; 405 b.
- Alborne, Wilts; 162 b.
- Alby:
College of Jesuits at; 218 a.
letters dated at; 218 a, 218 b.
Bishop of; 30 b.
- Alchinden, Johannis de, MS. work by; 234 a.
- Alcide, the ship; 226 a.
- Aldbrough, co. Suffolk; 243 a, 256 b. bailiffs of, letter to; 256 a. petition from; 238 a.
ships of; 242 b.
- Alden, Philip, petitions of; 502 a, 510 b.
- Aldenham manor; 150 b.
- Alderley, document dated from; 374 a.
- Alderncy; 138 b, 146 a.
- Aldersey:
John, Mayor of Chester, petition of; 385 a.
Philip; 367 b.
Wm., late Mayor of Chester, letter to; 378 a.
— the younger, mayor of Chester; 384 b.
- Aldham, Thomas, of Syreleston, will of; 333 b.
- Aldington; 319 b.
rector of; 342 b.
- Aldm . . . Richard, letter of; 381 a.
- Aldred of Kirkeby, his son; 636 b.
- Aldrich, Aldridge:
—; 251 a.
Ensign Robert; 593 b.
William, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
— chaplain; 596 a.
- Aldsworth:
auditor; 133 a.
major; 553 a.
- Aldworth:
Charles, and Windsor election (1711); 284 a.
Richard; 507 a.
Thos., alderman of Bristol, letters of and to; 379 b.
Wm., auditor-general to the Queen Dowager (1694), letter to and order of; 284 a.
- Ale, the purgiog, a quack medicine; 229 b.
- Alebury upon Seaverne, manor, co. Gloucester; 148 a.
- Alec or Aleck, Dr.; 155 a, 155 b, 158 a, 159 b.
- Alen, John, of Leyke; 414 a.
- Alexander III., Pope, bulls of; 317 a. apostolic letters of; 325 a.
- Alexander IV., Pope, bulls of; 263 b, 318 a, 345 b.
- Alexander VI., Pope, bulls of; 318 b.

Alexander III., of Scotland; 323 b.

Alexander:

Lord Judge; 507 b.

Sir Jerome; 550 b.

MSS. presented to Trin. Coll., Dublin by; 572 a.

Capt. Mathew, letter of; 291 a.

Alexandria; 27 a.

Aleyn:

Ralph, monk, complaint by; 265 a.

William, of North Lopham, will of; 334 a.

— of Pakefield, will of; 333 b, 334 a.

— of Wokingham, will of; 335 b.

— and Alicia; 423 a.

Alfonso, Mr.; 240 a, 242 a.

Alford; 29 b.

Algiers; 287 b.

articles of; 251 a.

captives in; 94 b, 241 a, 241 b, 243 a, 254 b.

pirates of; 235 b note, 242 b, 243 a.

Albampton, manor of; 125 a, 125 b.

Alicant; 239 b.

letters dated at; 17 b.

garrison of; 17 a.

malignant disease at; 233 a.

Alien merchants, petition against; 266 a.

Alisham; 333 b.

Alland, Henry, petition of; 525 a.

Allardes, Allardice, George:

of Allardes, of the Edinburgh Mint; 81 a, 81 b.

letter of; 82 b.

account, &c. of; 81 a.

mem. by; 83 a.

memorial from; 83 b.

death of; 82 a, 82 b.

Allardice, Mrs. Barclay, her MSS.; xx.

Allcoate, William, protection for; 440 a.

Allegiance, oath of; 362 a.

Allen:

—, prisoner in King's Bench; 119 b.

Dr. (alias Aylett, alias Ayloffe, alias Aleck, alias Elyott, which see); 155 a, 156 b, 157 b.

Lieut.-Col., letter of; 289 a.

Ensign, petition of; 516 b.

Mr., of Bath, Pope's friend; 54 b, 56 b.

— at Twickenham; 55 b.

— mayor of Chester (1698), letter to; 392 b.

Alderman; 393 a.

Edward, player; 430 b.

Geo., letter of; 289 b.

Jodeth, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.

Capt. Ralph; 594 b.

— weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.

Richard; 121 b.

— examination of; 121 b.

Mr. Robert, of the Trinity House; 236 a.

Sir Thomas, of the Trinity House; 254 b, 255 a.

— of Somerton Hall, letter to; 258 a.

Thos.; 159 a, 159 b.

— letters of; 158 a, 158 b.

William; 365 b.

— soldier; 534 b.

— mayor of Chester (1710), letter to; 395 b.

Allerdas, Sir James, precept by; 306 b.

Allerton, co. York; 271 a.

Allisoe, land called; 7 b.

Allocaciones, note on; 322 a.

Allsopp, Alsop:

Mr.; 219 b.

Durant, affidavit of; 139 a.

Roger, Marshall General, letter of; 437 b.

Allworthy, Lord and Lady; 572 a.

Allyate, Bassianus de, of Milan, letter to; 350 b

Almack, Richard, Esq., his MSS.; xx.

Almanza:

defeat at; 17 a.

battle of; 33 a.

officers killed at; 51 a.

Almari, Richard; 266 a.

Almelo, M. d', letters of; 31 b.

Almond, Thomas; 399 b.

Alouso, Don; 30 a.

Alresford, parson of; 234 a.

Alston:

Sir Edward, his estate; 6 a.

— president of the College of Physicians; 234 b.

Thomas, order by; 3 a.

Sir Thomas, letter of; 11 a.

Sir W.; 6 a.

William; ib.

Altars and shrines at Canterbury, deeds relating to; 320 a.

Althrop, letter dated at; 33 a.

Alum works in Aldgate; 229 a.

Alured:

Henry, his invention; 259 b.

Tho., remonstrance by; 214 a.

Alva, near Stirling; xii, 84 b, et seq.

Alwethir, Robert, parson of Redenhall and Alburgh, will of;

334 a.

Alwington, parish, MSS. of; xxii.
 Alwyn, —, receiver; 627 b.
 Alyine, Robert, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Alyn, Geoffrey, of Terrington, will of; 334 a.
 Alysander, Christopher, payment to; 427 b.
 Amboise; 321 a.
 Amboyne:
 case of; 584 b.
 surprise of; 553 b.
 Ambrose:
 Edward, his proposal; 78 a.
 Jonathan, of the Mint; 66 a.
 — petition of; 68 b.
 Amelia, Princess, letters of; 57 b.
 America:
 War of Independence; 287 b.
 distressed Protestants in; 59 b.
 English plantations in; 78 a, 287 b, 288 b.
 the stamp duty in; 190 b.
 her mischievous designs on Ireland; 204 b.
 North; 24 a.
 — Mr. Pitt's plan for peace with; 189 b.
 Amesbury, document dated at; 346 b.
 Amherst:
 Lord (1793), letter of; 287 b.
 Capt. Jeffery, letter of; 289 a.
 K., letters of; 290 b, 292 b.
 W. K., letter of; 294 a.
 Amiens; 283 a.
 St. John of pilgrimage to; 298 b, 302 a.
 Ampleforth, St. Lawrence Coll.; xxii.
 Amptill; 4 b, 5 a, 5 b, 6 b.
 document dated from; 379 a.
 Amsterdam; 138 a.
 the Bank of; 13 a.
 description of prisons at; 61 b.
 tin consigned to; 91 b, 92 b. jewel merchants at; 209 a. magistrates of; 565 a.
 East India ships at; 533 a.
 Amyand, Claudius, surgeon, his bill; 13 b.
 Amyce, Israel, survey by; 635 a.
 Amydas, Mr., of the Mint; 65 b.
 Amyse, John, of Hynterisham (Hintlesham?), will of; 333 b.
 Anaghmore, lands of; 525 b.
 Anathemas:
 in the Scotch language; 300 a. used by Abp. Winchelsey against abstractors of Church goods, &c.; 353 a. of Archbishop Theobald; 319 b.
 Ancaster:
 Duchess of (1790), letter of; 293 b.
 House; 112 b.
 Anchier, John, of Sudbury, will of; 334 a.
 Anchor, James, 634 b.
 Anchovies; 254 a.
 Anderson:
 Major; 590 a.
 Sir Edmund, justice; 272 b, 273 a.
 Lient. James, letters of; 289 b, passim.
 John; 158 a.
 — of Chester; 361 b.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 — mayor of Chester (1680), letters to; 391 b.
 Robert, letter of; 292 b.
 Capt. Robert, letter of; 293 b.
 Robt. of Chester; 361 b.
 Thomas, of the Mint; 69 a.
 William, letter of; 294 a.
 Anderton:
 Sir F., of Lostock, prisoner; 50 a.
 Matthew, judge of Admiralty Court; 361 a.
 Andover: corporation of; 625 b.
 charters concerning; 263 b.
 bailiff, &c. of; 626 a.
 André:
 Bernard; 583 a.
 Dom, servant of Ronquillo; 564 b.
 Andreu, James, clothworker, will of; 339 a.
 Andrew, Will., of Maidenhead, will of; 335 b.
 Andrewes, Andrews:
 Bishop, his will; 259 a.
 Col.; 255 b.
 Dr., evidence by; 229 b.
 — Provost of Dublin College; 487 b.
 — letter of Lord Taaffe; 488 a.
 Edward, petition of; 255 a.
 Francis, provost of Trinity College, Dublin; 180 b.
 — letters of; 192 b-195 a, passim.
 Ensign George; 591 b.
 Sir Matthew; 166 a.
 Nicholas, requisition by; 438 a.
 Ric., player; 430 b.
 Wm., steward to Abp. of Canterbury, letter to; 150 b.
 Andros, Sir Edmund, governor of Gnersey; 34 b.
 Angel, the ship; 241 b.
 Angell, Mr., preacher, of Leicester; 429 a.

Angell—cont.

Ann, widow, petition of; 152 a.
 Justinian, letters, &c. about his patent; 255 b, 256 a, 256 b.
 Matthew, of Wapping; 239 a.
 William, letter of; 381 b.
 Angers; 193 a.
 St. Maurice of; 321 a.
 Angewell, Richard, of Thetford, will of; 333 b.
 Angier, Lord, his troop (1663); 623 b.
 Anglesea, ship money; 383 a.
 Anglesey, Earl of; 538 a.
 Arthur, petitions of (1663); 501 a, 504 a, 511 b, 523 a. vice-treasurer in Ireland (1663); 507 a, 514 b, 516 a.
 521 a, 538 a, 542 b, 544 a, 581 b. reports by (1663); 511 b, 536 a, 539 b. lands given to; 497 b, 499 a.
 his troop (1663); 504 a, 509 b, 548 b.
 (1668); 167 b, 170 b, 171 a, 173 a, 173 b.
 (1668), mem. to; 121 b.
 letter signed by (1668); 388 b.
 (1669); ix, 128 b, 130 b, 131 a, 136 b.
 petition of (1669); 136 b.
 (1670); 138 b, 144 a.
 (1671); 164 b.
 his secretary (1715); 59 a.
 Anhalt, Prince of:
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
 warrants by (1713); 14 b.
 letter of (1715); 40 b.
 Annagh lands; 505 a.
 Annaghleque, lands of; 525 b.
 Annaghymynnan, co. Louth; 590 b.
 Annals of the Four Masters; 442 b.
 Annapolis Royal, governor of; 50 b.
 Anne of Cleves, grant to; 277 b.
 Anne, Queen of James I.:
 at Leicester; 428 b.
 — presents to her retinue there; ib.
 her visits to Worksop and Leicester; 441 a. picture of; 257 a.
 Anne, Queen or Princess:
 letters of; x, 1 b, 15 a, 16 a, 16 b, 27 a, 37 b, 41 a, 51 b, 57 a.
 letters to; 15 a, 57 a.
 document signed by; 70 b.
 warrants of; 80 a, 393 b, 395 b.
 indenture by; 82 a.
 address on her accession; 260 a.
 her coronation medals; 86 b.
 papers concerning Duchess of Marlborough and; x, 15 a.
 her policy towards France; 18 a. death of her son (1708); 35 a.
 her instructions to Marlborough (1709); 36 b. and Lord Godolphin; 562 b.
 Bishop O'Rourke and; 442 a.
 Lord Somers and (1710); 39 a.
 her aversion to the King of Hanover; 52 a. designs for medals in her honour; 86 b.
 lists of officers of her army; 37 b.
 military estimates; 37 b.
 Bounty office, MSS. in, report on; 632 a.
 Annesley:
 Sherlock v., cause of; 51 a.
 Lord, son-in-law of Lord Rutland, a candidate for Leicester (1670); 439 b.
 Sir Arthur, Viscount Valencia; 206 a, note.
 Hewe, of Kiddingington; 420 b.
 John, petition of; 516 b.
 Capt. John; 529 a, 596 a.
 — petitions of; 508 a, 531 b.
 Annis, Captain; 4 b.
 Annisley, Mr.; 13 b.
 Annshame, Nicholas, of Dublin, petition against; 528 b.
 Anonymous letters; 158 b, 380 a.
 Anpich (?) in Bohemia; 220 b.
 Ansdell, Henry; 376 a.
 Anstey, Lucretia, letter of; 295 b.
 Antis, Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Anstruther:
 Capt., letter of; 289 b.
 Lient. D., letter of; 290 a.
 Antelope, the ship; 243 a, 247 b.
 Antibes; 194 b.
 letter dated at; 194 a.
 Anti-Cato, pamphlet; 25 b.
 Antingham; 334 a.
 Anton, John; 151 a.
 Antonie, Cardinal, dispute with his servants at Rome; 554 a.
 Antonio, Don; 604 a.
 Antrim; 493 b, 496 a, 604 b.
 James II.'s lands in; 497 b.
 Marquis of (1641); 603 b.
 — (1648); 28 a.
 — (1649); 610 a.
 Marchioness of Rose, petitions of; 501 a, 503 a, 520 a.
 Antrobus:
 J. C., Esq., his MSS.; xx.
 William, licence farmer, petition of; 529 a.
 — defendant; 551 a.

- Antwerp ; 26 a, 30 a, 36 b, 564 b.
letters dated at : 40 b.
bond by ; 30 b.
governor of, letter of ; 39 b.
magistrates of, letter of ; 35 b.
English troops at (1709) ; 38 a.
- Anyon, —, 374 a.
- Aplin, Capt., letter of ; 289 a.
- Apothecaries : injured by the College of Physicians ; 230 b.
their petition ; 231 a.
of London ; 233 b.
Company, the ; 231 b.
- Apparel, excess in, dialogue on ; 93 a.
- Appilton, Robert de ; 634 b.
- Appleby :
co. Lincoln, land of ; 627 a. court roll of manor ; ib.
n. Manley, cause of ; 239 a.
John, armourer, of London ; 75 b, 76 b.
— his proposal ; 77 a, 78 a, 79 a.
Joshua, his scheme ; 232 b.
Robert, of Leicester ; 414 a.
- Appledore, Kent, manor of ; 328 b.
- Appleton :
Berkshire, deeds concerning ; 262 b.
co. York ; 271 a.
- Appleton, Elizabeth ; 229 b.
- Appleyard :
Sir Mathew, commissioner ; 275 a.
— lands held by ; 520 b.
- Appowell, Thomas, of Wells, will of ; 335 b.
- Apps, Wm. ; 164 a.
- Aprene, Will, rector of Crudwell, will of ; 333 a.
- Apsley :
Sir Allen, licent. of the Tower ; 87 b, 98 b.
— deceased, one of surveyors-general of Navy (temp. Charles I.) ; 148 b.
— his creditors ; 148 b.
— commission, &c. to ; 280 a.
— receiver-general of Jas. Duke of York ; 280 b.
Col. John, answer to his petition ; 124 a.
- Apton Hall in Canewdon, deeds concerning ; 262 b.
- Apsdrefeld, Henry de, commissioner ; 326 b.
- Apsydens, Herts ; 333 a.
- Arabic Lexicon, by Castell ; 226 a, 230 a.
- Aragon : kingdom of ; 17 a, 18 a.
Ferdinand of ; 22 b.
- Arbroath :
document dated at ; 300 b.
abbot of ; 323 b.
— Henry ; 297 a.
church and monks at, grant to ; 300 b.
- Arbuthnot, Arbuthnot :
Viscount, John, Mr. Fraser's report on his manuscripts ; xvii, 297 a.
— Robert, first ; 299 a.
— licence to ; 302 b.
— letter to ; 303 a.
— Robert, second, high sheriff of Kincardine ; 299 b.
— letters to ; 305 b, 304 a.
— his military service ; 299 b, 302 b.
— his death ; 299 b.
— John, late, his arrangement of the family muniments ; 299 b.
- Admiral ; 287 b.
— letters of ; xiii, 288 b, 289 a.
- Dr. ; 59 a, 226 b.
- Mrs. ; 56 a.
- Alex., of King's College, Aberdeen ; xvii, 297 a, 300 a, 301 a.
- Andrew ; 297 a.
- David and Robert ; 298 a.
- Hew ; 297 a.
— his son Duncan ; ib.
- Dr. John, physician to Queen Anne ; 231 b.
- James, infirmity to ; 302 a.
— his pilgrimage to Amiens ; 298 b, 302 a.
- Philp of ; 297 a, 297 b.
- Robert, and his wife Marion, indulgence, licence, &c., to ; 298 b, 301 a, 301 b.
— of Fyndowise, licence to ; 302 b.
- Sir Robert (1615) ; 299 a.
- Archbold, Christopher, of Tymolyn, petition of ; 528 b.
- Lawrence, vicar-general of Dublin ; 609 b.
- Archdekin, James and John, petition of ; 513 b.
- Archell, John, petition of ; 545 a.
- Archer :
Patrick, petitions of ; 522 a, 531 a.
Peter, petition of ; 514 b.
— his brother James ; ib.
Richard, account book of ; 417 a.
— his dispute with mayor &c. of Leicester ; 432 a.
— petition of ; ib.
- Archers, English and Welsh, wages of ; 208 b.
- Archery, &c., order for encouragement of ; 363 a.
- Archers, Court of, 136 b.
- Archeater, co. Northampton ; 8 a.
- Arco, Comte d', letter of ; 37 a.
- Arcof, Nabob of ; 296 b.
correspondence, &c., respecting (1792) ; 295 b.
- Ardee, co. Louth : member for ; 502 b.
troops at ; 590 b.
St. John's Priory ; 517 a.
- Arden, Francis, of Parkhall ; 427 b.
- Arderne :
James, letter of ; 391 b.
Walkelino de ; 357 a.
William de, witness ; 407 b.
forest of ; 406 b, 407 a.
- Ardkeena ; 466 b.
- Ardmannach, Earl of ; 306 a.
- Ardnefudden, co. Galway, lands of ; 525 b.
- Ardree, co. Kildare ; 508 a.
- Ardscall, co. Kildare ; 508 a.
- Arduthie, lands of ; 301 a.
- Aremberge, Count of ; 95 a.
- Arenberg :
Duke of (1709), letter of ; 37 a.
Duchess of, letters of (1706) ; 31 b.
— letter of (1709) ; 37 a.
- Argent, Jo., physician, report by ; 229 a.
- Argenteuil, letter dated at ; 28 a.
- Argier :
captive in ; 245 a.
pirates of ; 239 b, 241 a.
expedition against ; 246 b.
See Algiers.
- Argyll, Duke of :
his MSS. ; xx.
letters of (1706) ; 32 a.
to have the garter (1709) ; 43 a.
(1713) ; 14 a.
letters of (1713) ; 40 b.
complaint against ; 40 b.
letters of (1716) ; 40 b.
letter to ; 41 a.
letter of (1728) ; 62 a.
his character (1736) ; 315 a.
(1745) ; 571 a, 571 b.
(1754) ; 224 b.
(1756) ; 222 b.
(1757) ; 224 a.
letters of (1761) ; 287 b.
- Argyll, Marquis of, document signed by (1642) ; 302 b.
- Argyll, Earl of :
C., document signed by (1520) ; 302 a.
Archibald, his rebellion (1685) ; 308 b, 310 a.
- Argyll family, plays acted by ; 569 b.
- Aries, Capt. ; 391 b.
- Capt. Edward, weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.
- Arkenhead, a Scotchman ; 20 a.
- Arklow ; 544 b.
the army at (1649) ; 600 b.
- Arleby, James, trooper ; 11 b.
- Arlington, Earl of (1666) ; 102 a, 102 b.
(1668) ; 116 b.
letter to (1669) ; 219 a.
letter to (1670) ; ib.
(1670) ; 152 a, 154 b, 156 a, 157 a, 157 b, 158 a, 159 b.
letter of ; 210 b.
(1671) ; 155 b, 164 a, 254 b.
document signed by (1672) ; 440 a.
letter of (1673) ; 390 a.
- Arlington, Lady, Isabella, Act for naturalising (1666) ; 101 b.
- Arlon, William, of Athy, petition of ; 510 b.
- Armada, the Spanish ; 282 a.
- Armagh, Market Hill ; 192 a. congregation of ; 603 b, 615 a. co., losses in, during rebellion (1641) ; 573 a.
diocese ; 581 b.
Archbishop of (1588), John Long ; 582 a.
— (1663), John Bramhall, report by ; 516 a.
- Armitage :
Sir John, commissioner ; 275 a.
William, order signed by ; 275 a.
- Armorer, Sir Nicholas ; 521 a.
petition of ; 514 a.
- Armston, John, letter of ; 438 b.
Thomas, letter to ; ib.
- Armstrong :
Col., letter of ; 39 b.
Archball, quartermaster ; 597 a.
John, letter of ; 90 a.
Sir Thomas ; 611 a.
— letters of and to ; 611 b, 612 a, 614 a.
— speech of ; 612 a.
— list of his regiment ; 596 b.
— his troopers ; 507 b, 529 a, 546 b.
— quartermaster-general ; 543 b.
W., letter of ; 289 b.
William, letters of ; 290 b, 291 a, 293 a, 295 a.
- Army :
disbanding the (1679) ; 391 b.

- Army—cont.
 commissioners for the, letters of; 385 b, 386 a, 386 b.
 — petition to; 386 a.
- Arnold:
 Brigadier-General, letter of; 289 a.
 T., member of Parliament; 72 a.
 Capt. Wm.; 593 a.
- Arnott, Lieut. Fredk. Maitland; 291 b, 292 a.
 letter of; 291 a.
- Aro, Don Louis d'; 30 b.
- Arran, Earl of:
 James, letter of (1549); 298 b, 302 a.
 (1688); 275 b.
 (1715); 40 b.
 (1762); Sir Arthur Gore; 180 b.
- Arras, the King of Spain and; 28 b.
- Artaine, co. Dublin; 519 b.
- Artaldus, Jo. Loysius; 22 b.
- Arthington, Henry, order signed by; 275 a.
- Arthur:
 Prince, his tutor; 331 a.
 John, petition of; 523 a.
 — replication of; 551 b.
- Artois, deputies of State, of, letter of; 39 b.
- Arundel, Arundell, Lord, of Warton, his MSS.; xx.
- Arundel, Earl of:
 Richard, grant to (23 Ed. III.); 358 a.
 (1364), Richard; 412 b.
 (temp. Car. I.); 244 a, 584 a.
 at the Hague (1636); 554 a.
 his books and pictures; ib.
 and Surrey, Earl of (14th century), his son; 342 a.
 Lord of Terice (1668); 166 a.
 — Richard, letter to (1670); 142 b.
 — privilege case of (1671); 164 b.
- Arundel:
 Capt., letter of; 37 a.
 Capt. Christopher; 546 a.
 — petition of; 547 a.
alias Hall, Martha, petition of 528 a.
 Mary, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Thomas, Abp. of York, elected Abp. of Canterbury, 340 a.
- Arundeuille, Roger de; 356 b.
- Arzelliers, Marquis d', letter of; 37 a.
- Asceline, John, son of, of Leicester; 404 b.
- Ascombe, Edmund, of Hounslow, will of; 332 a.
- Ascomb, Edw., of Wyntorp; 264 b.
- Ash, Kent; 327 b, 340 a.
- Ash Bucking, church of; 323 a.
- Ash, James; 126 a.
- Ashe, Thomas; 104 b.
- Ashbourne; 584 a.
- Ashbrooke, Thomas, petition of; 381 b.
- Ashbury, Berks; 262 b.
- Ashbury, Joseph; 16 a.
- Ashby, document dated at; 87 b.
 James I. at; 435 b, 441 b.
 Lady Catsbie's house at; 434 b.
- Ashby-de-la-Zouch; 419 a.
 documents dated from; 379 b, 433 a. muster at; 433 b.
 Anne of Denmark at; 428 b.
- Ashdown, forest of, Sussex, Act for improvement of; 117 a.
- Ashfield; 334 a.
- Ashford, Thomas, prior of Selborne; 264 a.
- Ashfordby, Charles, prebendary of Leighton; 116 b.
- Ashley, Lord: order by (1661); 90 a.
 (1667); 107 a.
 (1668); 124 b, 167 b, 168 a, 173 a.
 (1669); 129 a.
 letter of; 131 b. order in Council addressed to; 131 b.
 (1670); 142 a, 152 a.
 letters of (1671); 439 b, 440 a.
- Ashley, Anthony, Act touching; 142 a.
- Asbonhurst, Lieut. Peter; 595 b.
- Ashridge, documents dated at; 346 b.
- Ashton, Asheton:
 Lieut. Edw.; 595 a.
 Rauf, sheriff of co. Lancaster, acknowledgment of; 376 a.
 Sir Roger; 88 b.
 Sir William, lands held by; 520 a.
- Ashurst:
 Hen., letter of; 37 a.
 W., letter of; 386 a.
- Ashwell, Herts; 335 b.
- Ashwin, John; 113 b.
- Ashworth, James, petition of; 147 a.
- Ask, Eleonor; 266 a.
- Aske, Robert, goldsmith; 65 a.
- Askew:
 clerk of the Trinity House; 254 b.
 Dr. Anthony, examination of; 232 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 242 a.
 — certificate of his losses; ib.
- Askham, co. York; 271 a.
- Asquith, Christopher, salter, arrest of; 88 a.
- Asse, Robert, gift by; 323 a.
- Assewi, William, brother of Leicester; 404 b.
- Assheby, Richard, commission to; 413 a.
- Assurance, Royal Exchange, policy; 13 b.
- Astburie, —, 370 b.
- Astley, Ashley:
 Sir Jacob, letter to; 211 b.
 Lieut. Henry; 596 a.
 Thomas, esquire, of Blakeney (?), will of; 334 a.
- Aston, co. Derby; 420 a.
 Mr., of Chester; 396 b.
 Ensign Anthony; 592 a.
 Sir Arthur, at Drogheda; 500 b, note.
 Capt. Edward, weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Henry de, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Sergeant-Major Miles; 591 b.
 Randal, of Chester; 361 b.
 Richard, justice in Ireland; 488 b.
 Robert, conspirator; 434 a.
 Roger and Walter, poems by; 584 a.
 Sir T., lines on; 63 b.
 Sir Thos., letter to; 396 a.
 Sir Walter; 585 a.
 — ambassador; 214 b, 216 a.
 William, instructions for; 99 a.
 Major William; 596 a.
 Sir William; 549 b.
 Tyrrold, deeds concerning; 262 b.
- Astorgius, Cardinal of Benevento; 264 b.
- Astrachan; 23 a.
- Astrop, letter dated at; 557 b.
- Astwicke; 4 b.
- Aswicke; 5 b.
- Aswy, Rich., gift by; 323 a.
- Asynton, Suffolk; 333 b.
- Ath, governor of, letter of; 39 b.
- Athavoike, co. Limerick; 504 b.
- Athboy, garrison at, in 1648; 593 b, 596 a.
 taking of; 606 a.
- Atheism, profaneness and swearing:
 Acts for punishing, &c. (1667); viii, 111 a, 112 a.
- Atheling, Edgar; 366 a.
- Athenree, Lord, his lands in Galway co.; 498 b.
- Athgoe, co. Dublin; 499 a.
- Athlone; 517 a. governor of; 442 a, 517 a.
 garrison; 530 b.
 fortifications, bombardment of; 561 a. siege and taking of; 561 b, 562 a, 604 a, 605 b, 608 a, 608 b, 612 a, 613 a, 614 a, 614 b.
 castle; 612 b.
 Court of Claims at; 532 b.
 Court of Transplantation at; 576 a. barony, survey of lands in; 517 b, 518 a.
 Earl of, grant to; 498 a.
- Athlunney, co. Meath; 500 b, 540 b, 545 a.
- Athole, Duke of:
 his MSS.; xx.
 letter of; 560 a.
 summons against (1708); 45 b.
 his gardener (1745); 314 a.
 and Duchess of, letters of; 54 a.
- Athole, Earl of (1321); 354 b.
- Athy; 610 b.
 siege of; 608 b.
 capture of; 611 b.
 friars of; 610 b.
 meeting at; 510 b. innkeepers of, petition of; 538 a.
- Atkins:
 doctor to Lord Essex; 228 a.
 Dr., his report on the plague in 1630; 229 a.
 Alexander, petition of; 513 a.
 Sir Robert; 171 b.
 — speech of; 168 a.
- Atkinson:
 Ensign; 380 a.
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 — of Dnnstable; 5 a.
 Mrs.; 279 a.
 Michael, letter of; 294 b.
 William; 380 b.
 Lieut. William, letters of; 290 b.
- Atterbury:
 Bishop (1715); 59 a.
 Thomas, Jacobite; 50 b.
- Attleborough; 333 b.
- Aubery, W., document signed by; 227 b.
- Aubrey, Will, of Woolpit, will of; 334 a.
- Auby, John, clerk, induction of; 276 a.
- Auchmuty, Lieut., letter of; 290 a.
- Auckland, Lord (1792), letter of; 295 b.
- Audegnies, Baron d', letter of; 37 a.
- Audenard:
 governor of, letter of; 39 b.
 magistrates of, letters of; 35 b, 39 b.
- Audley:
 Lord v. Lord Cottington (1641); 170 b.
 James (1670), petition of; 140 a.
 Lady (1669), deposition respecting; ix, 137 a.

Audley—cont.

- Edmund, Bishop of Salisbury; 269 a.
 Lieut. James; 593 a.
 End, Essex; 287 b.
 — MSS. of Lord Braybrooke at, calendar of; xü, 277 a-296 b.
 Augener, Gilbert le, of Leicester; 413 b.
 Augmentation, Court of, mem. touching grant of offices formerly belonging to; 282 b.
 Augustus, King; 32 b.
 letters of (1707); 32 a.
 (1708); 34 a.
 Aunigen; 283 a.
 Aula:
 Andrew de, nephew of Abp. Becket; 320 a.
 Hugo de; 344 a.
 Aulnage, see Subsidy.
 Aumale, Duke d' (1600); 283 a.
 Aumale d'Haucourt, Suzanne d'; 558 a.
 Aumont, Marshal d'; 218 a.
 Aunay, Abbess d', letter of; 39 b.
 Augier, Lord, his troop (1663); 529 a, 531 b, 539 b, 543 b.
 Aunsell, John, of Smailburgh, will of; 334 a.
 Auplie, John de; 87 b.
 Aurifaber:
 Reginaldus; 344 a.
 Roger, witness; 408 b.
 Auriol, J. L., letter of; 290 a.
 Austin, Austen, Thos.; 148 b.
 Sir Thomas; 523 b.
 Wm., bailiff of new Windsor, certificate of; 282 a.
 Austria:
 Archduke Albertus of; 95 a.
 the Archduke, treaty with; 283 b.
 Don John of; 28 b.
 Princess of, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 letter of (1709); 37 a.
 Austwick:
 Richard, of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Thomas; 272 b.
 Authermoney, lands of; 306 b.
 Authinmulty, Sir James, witness; 306 b.
 Auvergue:
 Prince d', letters of (1705); 31 b.
 Princess d', letters of; 37 a, 39 b.
 M. d', letters of; 32 a.
 Auverguere, M. d', letter of; 35 b.
 Avaux, Count d', letters of (1705); 31 b.
 Avene, arrura, spring ploughing; 322 a.
 Avenyng, John, of Cirencester, will of; 332 b.
 Averell; 192 b, 193 a.
 Avering, Mr., of Leicester; 440 a.
 Avery:
 John, of Dublin; 548 b.
 Joseph, letters, &c. of, relating to his embassies (1631-1640); 572 a, 584 a.
 William; 369 b.
 Avignon, documents dated at; 352 b, 354 a.
 Awstyn, William, of Leicester; 408 b.
 Awusham:
 Nicholas; 503 a.
 Robert, deceased; 107 a.
 Awson, Henry, petition of; 106 b.
 Axbridge market; 639 b.
 Axtell:
 Col., in Ireland; 602 a.
 Col. Daniel, governor of Kilkenny; 501 a.
 Aycastre, John, Abbot of Topholme; 267 b.
 Aylemer:
 Thomas, grocer, of Norwich, will of; 333 b.
 Will., rector of Combs, will of; 334 a.
 Aylesbury; 8 b, 9 b, 10 a, 125 b, 630 a.
 Earl of (1667); 111 a.
 — Robert (1666), writ of summons to; 101 a.
 — letter of (1717); 57 a.
 Aylett, Dr.; 155 a, 157 b.
 Ayleward, Symon, of Winchester, will of; 335 a.
 Ayliffe, Mr.; 165 b, 219 b.
 Aylmer:
 Sir Christopher, petition of; 501 a, 511 a, 511 b.
 — v. Viscount Massereen; 531 b.
 Gerald, of Balrath; 501 a, 531 b.
 James, petition of; 521 a.
 Ayloff, Ayloff:
 Col., his regiment; 3 a.
 Dr.; 155 a, 155 b, 157 b, 158 a.
 Mr.; 107 a, 153 b.
 Henry, King's Remembrancer, warrant to; 68 b.
 Aynho, the hospital at; 269 a.
 Aynsley, Gan., letter of; 46 b.
 Ayres:
 Gabriel, proposal of; 77 a.
 Thomas, trooper; 518 b.
 Ayseough:
 Henry, petition, &c. of; 151 a.
 Ensign Walter; 594 a.
 Ayseleage, royal forest of; 263 b.
 Ayton, Sir John, gentleman usher of the Black Rod, petitions of; 102 b, 137 a.

B.

- Baars, William, of Bredon; 413 a.
 Baas, Princess of (1709), letter of; 36 b.
 Babbington, Babyngton:
 Mr., a candidate for Leicester; 440 b.
 Abraham, letter of; 386 a.
 Antony, depositions concerning; 432 a.
 Lieut. Robt.; 591 b.
 Ensign Tho.; 592 a.
 William, justice; 415 b.
 Babrane, John, of Rothsley; 414 a.
 Bacaneld, councils of; 321 a.
 Bache, near Chester; 358 a.
 Bache, Simon, of Leicester; 422 a.
 Bacheval, the, Chester; 358 a.
 Bachewurthe, Geoffrey de, witness; 1 b.
 Backwell:
 Alderman, letter to; 219 a.
 Barnaby; 125 b.
 Edward; 125 b.
 Alderman Edward; ix, 131 a, 131 b, 132 b.
 — certificate of; 131 b.
 John; 125 b.
 Bacon:
 Lord, letter of; 2 b.
 Sir E. (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Sir F., attorney-general; 237 b.
 Sir Francis; 584 b.
 N., document signed by; 65 a.
 Nath., letter of; 10 a.
 Bacoun, John, clerk; 339 b.
 Bada Dujardin, M., letter of; 38 a.
 Badajoz, tercias de; 22 b.
 Baddeby, vicar of; 211 a.
 Baddeley, document dated from; 389 a.
 Badersmere, Barth. de, his refusal to admit Queen Isabella into Leeds Castle; 354 a, 354 b.
 Baden:
 Prince of, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 Princess of, letters of (1707); 32 a.
 Louis de; 16 a.
 Prince Louis of (1689); 15 b.
 Dourlach, Prince of, Henry, letters of (1707); 32 a.
 Badley Hall, Essex; 262 b.
 Bagenall alias Corbet, Katherine, petition of; 502 b.
 Bagley, Mr., of the Mint; 75 b.
 Bagnall; 606 b, 617 a.
 Col., executed; 618 a.
 Sir Samuel; 398 a, 398 b.
 Thomas; 361 a, 528 a.
 Walter; 603 a, 616 b.
 Bagnall, alias Blakny, Mabel; 543 b.
 Bagnell v. Giles; 150 b.
 Bagot:
 Lord, his MSS.; xx.
 Clement, merchant of Bristow, mem. touching; 368 a.
 Hugh; 389 a.
 Bags, John, of Tenterden; 634 b.
 Bagshaw:
 et al. v. Bagshaw; 170 b.
 Edward; 583 b.
 Lieut. Nic.; 594 b.
 Bagshot, readings by; 584 b.
 Bagworth Park, letters dated at; 431 b.
 Bahamas Islands, seal for; 91 a.
 Baiard, Comte de, letter of; 37 a.
 Baillie, Bailly:
 Bernard, parson of Lambintoun; 306 b.
 Geo., of the Treasury, warrant by; 79 a.
 — document signed by; 70 b.
 Richard, witness; 306 b.
 Capt. Simon, letters of; 295 b.
 Wm., letters of; 293 b, 295 a.
 — of Leicester; 420 b.
 — Bishop of Cloufart, petition of; 501 a, 521 b.
 Bain, Capt., letter of; 288 b.
 Bainbrigg, Henry; 106 b.
 Baines, Edward, petition of his wife Mary; 531 b.
 Baird, David, letter of; 295 b.
 Baker:
 —; 123 b.
 Admiral, letters of; 47 b.
 Agnes, of Mutford, will of; 334 a.
 — of Peckham, will of; 335 b.
 Geo.; 156 a, 157 a.
 — information of; 159 b.
 Capt. Henry, his company; 509 b.
 John, of co. Leicester, petition of; 418 b.
 — of Peckham, Surrey, will of; 332 a.
 — of Winchester, will of; 334 b.
 Matthew, of the Shipwrights' Company; 261 a.
 Robert, of Attleborough, will of; 333 b.
 Roger, of Willoughby; 413 b.
 Thomas; 629 b.

Baker—cont.

- Lieut. W., letter of; 291 a.
 W. R., Esq., his MSS.; xx.
Bakers at Leicester, Act for; 496 b.
Bakete, Geoffrey le, of Leicester; 408 b.
Bakewell, Richard, of Derby; 437 b.
Baladine, Mrs.; 278 b.
Balati, Abbé; 30 b.
Balden, Thomas; 341 b.
Baldingham; 334 a.
Baldok, R. de, Bishop of London; 350 b.
 Robert de, chancellor of St. Paul's; 633 a.
Baldry, William, churchwarden; 635 a.
Baldwin;
 Dr., 128 a.
 Mr., 219 b.
 John, of Walpole, will of; 333 b.
 Robert, of Asyngton, Suffolk, will of; 333 b.
Bale, Bishop John; 382 a.
Balfour;
 Lieut.-Col., letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 David, of Petcullo, obligation by; 308 a.
 Frank, letter of; 290 a.
 Lieut.-Col. James, letters of; 292 b, 294 b, 295 a.
 John, sheriff-depute; 307 b.
 Michael de, witness; 303 a.
Balgriffin, co. Dublin; 499 a.
Balie, Thomas; 609 b.
Balimore; 608 a.
Ball;
 Captain; 593 b.
 John, clerk of works; 12 b.
 — of Kilkenny, petition of his wife; 516 a, 516 b.
 — — — petition of; 534 a.
 — — — names of his debtors; 534 b.
 John, of Wermondeford, Essex, will of; 334 b.
 Lieut. Rich.; 596 b.
 Thomas; 121 a.
 — — — petitions of; 528 b, 531 b.
 William, inquisition by; 406 a.
 — of Colchester, will of; 335 b.
Ballantine, one, killed in the Porteous riots; 311 b.
Ballases, ruby, a collar of; 584 a.
Ballagelahan, capture of; 601 b.
Ballikegg, battle of; 604 a.
Ballikelly, taking of; 608 a.
Ballilehan, siege of; 608 b.
Ballilinan, capture of; 604 a.
Ballimore; 615 a.
 taking of; 613 b.
Ballina; 482 b, 492 a, 492 b.
Ballinmalecke, taking of; 610 a.
Ballindromby, concealed lands of; 531 a.
Ballingare, concealed lands of; 531 a.
Ballinikill, co. Carlow; 515 b. capture of; 604 a.
Ballintaye; 496 b.
Ballintobber; 466 b.
 castle of; 441 b.
 — grant of; 442 a.
Balliol, Alexander de, his tenements in Dover; 346 b.
Ballsoman, surrender of; 611 a.
Ballromston; 521 b.
Ballybarney, co. Kildare; 508 a.
Ballyboy, barony of; 540 b.
Ballybridges, co. Meath; 546 b.
Ballyconlogher, co. Wexford; 508 a.
Ballyeuilan, co. Kildare; 508 a.
Ballyduffe, co. Longford, lands of; 524 a.
Ballyhead, alias Headstowne, co. Kildare; 508 a.
Ballymacmahugh, co. Kilkenny; 544 b.
Ballymadrogh, lands of; 506 a.
Ballymalo; 502 b, 503 a, 507 a.
Ballymore Eustace, co. Dublin; 498 a.
Ballymearney, co. Kildare; 508 a.
Ballyneacree, co. Kildare; 508 a.
Ballynaweeney barony; 540 b.
Ballys, Rob. of, Thetford, will of; 334 a.
Ballyshannon; 495 b, 599 a.
Ballyvase, co. Kildare; 508 a.
Balmadunn, lands of; 506 a.
Balmaharg, Malcolm of, witness; 305 a.
Balmains, Balfmane;
 co. Fife, lands of; 304 a, 306 b, 307 a. portioner of; 306 b.
 reversion of; 308 a.
Balmerino, Lord;
 letter of (1645); 10 a.
 J., letter of; 8 b.
 letter to (1708); 45 b.
 letter of (1711); 39 b.
 trial of (1746); 288 b.
Balnamone; 302 b.
Balrath; 531 b.
Balston;
 Dorothy; 123 a.
 — — — petitions of; 123 a.

Balston—cont.

- Judith; 123 a.
 — — — petitions of; 123 a.
 Mary; 123 a.
 — — — petitions of; 123 a.
Baltimore, "the last Lord" (1793), his natural daughter; 296 a.
Baltwein, Madame, letter of; 38 a.
Balward; 306 a.
Balwery; 307 b.
Bambricke, John, petition of; 546 b.
Bampton, Oxon, vicar of; 332 b.
Banbury; 219 b, 377 a. fair; 101 b.
 garrison; 9 b.
 Earl of, Wm. (1627); 630 a.
 — Nicholas (1670), petition of; 139 b.
 Sir Henry, letter of; 393 a.
Bancroft, John, trooper; 543 a.
Band, William; 104 a.
Bandon, Mr.; 17 b.
Banes, Edward, petition of his wife; 516 a.
Banester, Thos.; 370 b.
Banger, Elizabeth, letter of; 37 a.
Bangor;
 Bishop of (Ryngestede), his death (1366); 338 a.
 — Robert (1667), writ of summons; 111 b.
 — — — (1670); 154 b.
 — Hoadley; 17 b.
 — (1783); 57 b.
Bangor and St. Asaphs, Bishops of, Act to enable them to let lead mines in their soil; 154 b.
Banister, Wm., receipt by; 13 b.
Banks;
 Sir John, Chief Justice; 208 a.
 — Attorney-General, orders concerning; 209 a, 209 b.
 — Chief Justice, letters and orders of and to; 209 b, et seq.
 Ralph, Esq. of Kingston Lacy, manuscripts of, report on; xiii, 208 a.
 Sir Ralph, instructions and letters to; 210 b, 211 a.
 W., grammar master of Ewelme Hospital; 630 b.
Banks, Sir Joseph, letters of; 289 b.
Banks in Ireland, failures of; 188 a, 196 b, 199 a.
Bann water, the; 600 a.
Bann, William, of Ratcliffe, mariner; 241 b.
Banner, William, of Bristol, will of; 332 a.
Bannerman, Alexander, of Elsieck; 301 a.
Bannister, John, doctor; 228 a.
Bantry, in Kerry, French landed at; 496 a.
Baptists, the; 155 b, 157 b.
Barange, M., letter of; 40 b.
Barat, Lieut.; 592 a.
Barbadoes; 119 a, 585 a.
 papers relating to; 47 b.
 cavaliers sold as slaves in; 500 a, 514 b.
Barbara, Argila in; 239 b.
Barbary;
 Sallee in; 241 b, 242 a.
 — 1,400 Englishmen captives in; 242 b.
 Muley Zedag, a king in; 240 b.
Barber;
 — bailiff; 123 b.
 Mr.; 9 b.
 Christopher, garter; 231 a.
 John, coiner, pardoned; 502 a.
 Ralph, trooper; 510 a.
 Robert; 376 b.
Barberini, Cardinal; 554 a.
Barbers and surgeons of London, petitions of; 229 a, 230 b.
Barbor;
 John, prisoner, petitions of; 534 b, 545 a.
 — pardon to; 535 a.
Barcelona; 20 a.
 letters dated at; 17 a, 25 a, 27 a, 36 a, 40 a, 50 b, 58 a, 193 a.
Barclay;
 David, of Mathers; 301 a.
 Colonel David; 303 b.
 Oliver, trooper; 516 b.
 Ro., letter of; 9 a.
Bard, Hugh; 356 b.
Bardis, Adrian de; 266 a.
Bardney, Abbot of; 267 b.
Bardulf, William, witness; 407 b.
Bardy, Denis, trooper; 539 b.
Bargeyn, Hugh; 367 b.
Bargrave, Dr. John; 117 a.
Barham; 340 a.
Barillet, President; 282 b.
Barillon, Monsr.; 557 a.
Barkeby, Wm. de, of Leicester; 405 b.
Barker;
 v. Deane, writ of error; 139 b.
 of Newgate Market; 227 a.
 Andrew, collector at Hull; 240 b.
 Charles; 22 a.
 Francis, of Pontefract; 276 a.
 Sir John, of Woodbridge; 258 b.

Barker—cont.

- John, on Coventry committee; 7 b.
- merchant of the Staple, will of; 332 a.
- parson of Westwick, Norwich, will of; 334 a.
- Joseph, of co. Herts; 7 b.
- Margery, relict of Richard; 513 a.
- Robert, clothmaker, of Colchester, will of; 335 b.
- William, petitions, &c. of; 140 b.
- of Thelneham St. Nicholas, will of; 334 a.
- trooper; 503 a, 534 b.

Barking; 332 a.

Allballows; 259 a.

Barkley

Capt., letter of; 289 a.

Sir J.; 218 b.

Barkstead, John, Lieutenant of the Tower; 95 a.

Barley, prices of (1252-1262); 343 b.

Barling Abbey, co. Lincoln; 265 a.Barlings, Abbot of; 267 b.*Barlow:

E. H., letter of; 293 b.

G. H., letters of; 290 a, 294 b.

— Secretary of Government, Calcutta, letters of; 296 a.

Sir George; 288 b.

— Governor General of India, letters of; 288 a.

Ralph; 375 a.

Thomas, Bishop of Lincoln; 454 b.

Barmelyng, West, manor of; 329 a.Barnadiston:

Sir Samuel, deputy governor of East India Co.; 167 a, 167 b, 171 a, 173 b, 174 a.

— orders touching; 167 b.

Barnarde, Will., of Chaddesley, will of; 335 b.Barnardeshall, within liberties of Chester, manor of; 370 b.*Barnardiston

Sir Samuel; 108 b.

Thomas, Knt., of Barnardiston, will of; 334 b.

Barnardo, Sir Philip, consul at Genoa; 245 b.Barneboy, co. Galway, lands of; 522 b.*Barneham, Sir Robert; 121 a.*Barner:

Major-General, letter of; 38 a.

M., letter of; 37 a, 39 b.

Barnes rectory, Surrey; 323 b.Barnes, Ensign Tobias; 595 a.*Barnet; 71 b.*Barnett, —, secretary to Lord Carlisle; 246 a.

Barnhill; 301 a.

Barns and Cochno, Hamilton family of; 308 b.Barnsmore, mountains of; 477 a.*Barnstaple, Devon, 116 a, 335 a, 378 b.

the river of; 138 a.

Barnston, Trafford; 401 b.Barnys, lands of; 309 b.*Barowall, Barnewall:

— in Ireland; 606 a, 610 b.

Lieut.; 616 b.

George; 616 a, 616 b.

Lieut.-Col. James; 613 b.

Mrs. Jane; 547 b.

Matthias, of Brymore; 514 a.

Fr. Johu; 609 a.

Sir Richard; 610 b, 613 a, 616 b, 617 a.

— petitions of; 501 a, 509 b, 511 a.

Baron, Mr., hanged; 615 b.Barons, George, certificate touching; 143 a.*Barowe:

John, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.

Richard, of Leicester; 413 b.

Thos., mayor of Chester (temp. Hen. VII.); 386 b.

Barre, M. de la; 30 b.Barreau; 21 b.*Barret, Barrett:

pirate; 399 a.

signature; 582 b.

family, at Belleek; 582 b.

Robert, petition of; 114 b.

Barrey, Ensign Thomas; 591 a.Barrier treaty, the; 40 b.*Barrington

Lord (1752), letters of; 287 b.

— (1754); 225 a.

— (1756); 221 a.

— his motion (1756); 223 a.

— speech of; ib.

— his seat at Becket (1771); 192 b.

Francis, of Tofts; 50 a.

John, formerly Shute; 50 a.

Wm., statement, &c. of; 103 a.

Barnigh, Lieut. Thomas; 591 a.Barnon, Mrs. Susanna; 279 a.*Barronsdale, Dr., president of the College of Physicians;

228 a.

Barrow, Lieut. Humphry, his bond; 502 b.Barrowes, Christopher, bailiff of New Windsor, certificate of;

282 a.

Barry:

one, general of Munster; 603 b.

Barry—cont.

Col., Ormond's Mercury; 607 a.

Edmund, his lands in Cork co.; 498 b.

Ma., document signed by; 99 a.

Mathew, certificate signed by; 507 a.

Richard, certificates by; 528 a, 543 a.

— report by; 539 b.

Sir William, 521 b.

Barrymore:

barony of; 99 a.

Earl of, letter of (1709); 37 a.

— letter of (1710); 38 a.

— (1712); 17 b.

Barsham, North; 333 b.Barten, Ensign Tho.; 592 b.*Bartenale, John of Worcester; 638 a.

Nicholas; 638 b.

Barthelot, Roger, ironmonger of London, will of; 333 a.Barthomley, co. Chester, church; 152 a.*Bartillat, Sr. de, Estienne Jehannet, accounts of Treasury in France given by; 553 a.

Bartiudale, Lodowick; 146 b.Bartlett, Capt.; 248 a.*Bartlot, Richard, President of the College of Physicians; 226 b.

death of; ib.

Barton:

Kent, manor of; 326 a.

minister of; 4 a.

Father, letter to; 218 a.

Daniel, his proposal; 78 a.

Francis, woolcomber; 390 a.

Godfrey, vicar of Reynolds; 5 a, 5 b.

Henry, petition of; 516 b.

— trooper; 521 b.

John, of Belfast; 529 b.

Richard, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.

Barwell:

Dr., of the College of Physicians; 235 a.

Mr.; 291 b.

Barwicke, Robt., order signed by; 275 a.Basford, hundred of; 3 b.*Bashall, co. York; 377 a.*Basing:

the armies at; 5 b.

church of; 263 b.

charters concerning; 263 b.

Basingstoke:

charters concerning; 263 b.

grant of; 263 b.

Edmund de, executor; 634 a.

Baskneagh; 609 b.Basnage, M., letters of; 36 a, 37 a.*Basnett:

Joseph, of Chester; 361 b.

— commission to; 362 a.

Nathaniel; 361 b.

Bass, George, quartermaster; 597 a.Bassa, Capt., Turkish pirate; 640 b.*Basset, Basset:

Sir Radulph, witness; 407 a.

Ralph, witness; 406 a.

Richard, charter of; 405 a.

Thomas, witness; 404 b.

William; 247 b.

Sir William, witness; 407 a.

Bastide:

Mr. de la; 564 a.

Lieut. John, plan by; 22 a.

Bastwick:

John; 226 b.

Dr. John, papers relating to his case; 210 a.

— licence to practise granted to; 229 a.

— certificate to; 229 b.

Susannah, payment to; 95 a.

Bate:

John; 281 b.

Peter, lands held by; 520 b.

Bateman:

Lord (1754); 225 b.

— and Lady (1738); 13 b.

Lady Anne, letters of; 51 b.

James, his daughter's runaway match; 571 b.

Nathaniel, letter of; 289 b.

Sir Wm.; 163 b.

Bates, Sir John, at Delph; 553 a.Bath, 13 b, 53 a, 54 b, 63 a, 200 a, 222 b, 571 a, 627 a, 630 b.

letters dated at; 54 b, 56 a, 567 a.

Lady Bolingbroke's opinion of; 567 a.

mayor of; 13 b.

— letter to; 58 a.

Abbey of, seal of; 639 a.

Bath and Wells, Bishop of:

(1206) Joceline, documents relating to consecration of; 320 b.

(1301); 632 b.

(13 Edw. IV.); 415 b.

(1502) King, will of; 335 b.

(1505) King, his death; 336 a.

- Bath, Marquis of, his MSS.; xx.
 Bath, Earl of:
 John (1670), letter of; 147 a.
 his son-in-law; 560 b.
 Bath, Sir Luke:
 grant to; 499 a.
 petition of; 521 a, 539 a.
 lands given to; 497 b.
 Bathon, Henry de; 352 b.
 Baths, public, Dr. Chamberlain's project for; 230 a.
 Bathurst:
 Sir Benjamin; 50 b.
 — and Lady, letters to; 54 a.
 H., letter of; 294 a.
 R., letters of; 289 b, 293 b.
 Samuel, of Dublin; 512 a.
 Batt, Thomas, lands held by; 520 b.
 Batten:
 Sir William, of the Trinity House; 248 b, 249 b, 250 b, 251 b.
 — his view of Dover harbour; 252 a.
 — surveyor of the navy; 252 b.
 Lady; 254 a.
 Battersca; 332 a.
 letters dated at; 567 a, 567 b.
 Battin, Ensign Henry; 593 b.
 Battle:
 Abbey, refectory of; 266 a.
 abbot of; 339 a.
 — election of; 336 a.
 Battle, trial by, instance of; 406 a, 406 b.
 Batts, Mr., 160 a.
 Baud:
 Mr., secretary; 20 a.
 Claude, secretary to Count Briancon; 45 b.
 Baudae, Ralph de, Dean of St. Paul's; 632 b.
 Baudewene, William, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Baudewin, William, inquisition by; 406 a.
 Baume, L'Abbe de la, letter of; 289 b.
 Bavand:
 Richard; 395 b.
 Thomas, letter of, 384 a.
 — the late, certificate touching estate of, 384 b.
 Bavaria, Elector of:
 (1689); 15 b.
 Emanuel (1694); 557 b, 561 b.
 letters of (1705); 31 a.
 letter of (1711); 39 b.
 Bavaund, Richard, treasurer of Chester; 370 a.
 Baxter:
 an actor; 23 b.
 Nicholas, appointment of, 281 a.
 Bayard, Stephen, letter of, 292 b.
 Bayes, John; 625 b.
 Bayle:
 Mr., philosopher, Jurieu's charges against; 563 b.
 Wm.; 282 a.
 Bayley hole; 255 b.
 Bayley, Bayly:
 Captain, at Scilly; 257 a.
 Mr., friend of E. S. Pery; 183 a.
 J. W., Esq., his MSS.; xx.
 Capt. Nicholas; 542 a.
 — his company; 503 a.
 petition of; 551 a.
 Colonel Robt.; 593 b.
 Thos., deposition by; 209 b.
 Bayloll, Rob. de; 262 b.
 Bayonne, merchants at; 257 a.
 Bayton, John, of Ludlow, will of; 334 b.
 Beach, Sir R., letter to; 256 a.
 Beachcroft, Saml., letter of; 293 b.
 Beachy point; 253 a.
 Beadle, John, petition of; 531 b.
 Beale:
 Mr. Auditor; 129 b.
 Josias and Barbara, of Dublin; 548 b.
 Mrs. Mary, picture by; 232 b.
 Beamman, Jo., petition of, 153 a.
 Beaminster; 210 b.
 Beaumont, Ja.:
 petition of; 153 a.
 W., his MSS.; xx.
 Bean, Samuel, letter of; 290 b.
 Beane, Edward, ship owner; 245 a.
 Bear-baiting, payment for; 427 b.
 Beard, Thomas, trooper; 525 a.
 Beast, Cornet John; 595 b.
 Beaton, Robert, of Creich, grant to; 301 a.
 Beaton, Capt., letter of; 294 b.
 Beauchamp:
 Lord, letters of; 195 b.
 — (1764); 287 a, 287 b.
 — (1779); 205 a, 207 a.
 John, petition of; 510 a.
 Beauchamp Roding; 332 b.
 Beauchamp St. Paul; 335 a.
 Beaucherk, Lord Sidney (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Beaufiz, John, of Loose; 329 a.
 Beaufort, Duke of (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Beaufort, Thomas, Earl of Dorchester; 637 a.
 Beaufoy, H., letter of; 296 a.
 Beaulieu Abbey; 345 a.
 Beaumaris; 388 a.
 document dated from; 379 b.
 Castle; 359 a.
 ship-money; 383 a.
 Beaumont:
 Viscount (27 Hen. VI.); 415 a.
 Francis, poems by; 584 a.
 H., letter of; 440 b.
 Sir Harry, his marriage at Leicester Abbey; 428 a.
 Sir Henry, candidate for Leicester; 440 b.
 — letter of; ib.
 — his house at Newark; 441 a.
 John, steward of Leicester; 415 a.
 Mr. Justice, letter to; 432 b.
 Beaunel, Mr.; 564 a.
 Beauverne, John de, certificate of naturalization; 164 b.
 Beauvoir des Granges, Peter; 7 a.
 Beauvoys, hostages of; 407 b.
 Beavans, John; 550 b.
 Beaven, Nathaniel, of Chester; 361 b.
 Bebb, Joho, letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 292 b, 293 b.
 Bebtou, John, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Beby, Henry of; 413 b.
 Beeclae, Marquis de, letters of; 38 a, 39 b.
 Beecles; 333 b, 334 a.
 Becher, John Harman, letter of; 294 a.
 Becke, Thomas, Bishop of Lincoln; 211 a.
 Beckenham; 335 a.
 Becket:
 Christoper, of Leicester, deposition of; 433 a.
 Gilbert, father of Thomas; 587 b.
 Richard, of Bedford; 8 a.
 Archbishop Thomas, forged brief purporting to be by;
 265 b.
 — records relating to; 317 a, 318 a, 319 b, 220 a, 320 b.
 — his shrine, oblations made at; 320 a, 330 b, 344 a.
 — his alleged brother Walter; 586 a, 587 b.
 William, of Leicester, baker; 433 a.
 Beckett:
 Lord Barrington's seat at; 192 b. letter dated at; ib.
 Beckford:
 Alderman; 190 b.
 Mr., speeches of; 222 b, 223 a.
 Beckham:
 John, deceased, act for provision of his children; 121 b.
 Richard, act to enable him to sell lands; 140 b.
 — his father and brothers; 140 b.
 Beckley; 334 b.
 Beckwith, Thomas, of York; 636 a.
 Beconsfield, letter dated at; 199 b.
 Bed stuffs, &c. at Ewelme, description of; 628 b.
 Beddingfield, Lady Frances; 583 b.
 Bedell, William; 583 a.
 Bedford; 1 a, 7 a, 379 a. full of prisoners (1645); 9 a.
 fort at; 3 a, 5 a.
 gaol at; 8 b.
 garrison; 9 a.
 Mount at; 5 a, 7 b.
 the Swan at; 7 b.
 the White House; 8 a.
 Boteler's house near; 8 a.
 the works at; 3 a, 7 b.
 Level, Adventure lands in; 165 a.
 — act for settling taxes on Adventurers' lands in (1667);
 109 a, 113 b.
 — petitions against; 109 b.
 — report of committee on; 110 a.
 — commissioners under; 153 b.
 Bedfordshire; 210 a.
 deeds relating to; 262 a.
 lieutenant of, letter of; 379 a. committee, proceedings, &c. of; x, 1 a, 2 b, 3 b, 5 a-7 a, passim.
 ship money in; 2 b.
 light horse, furnished by; 8 b.
 Bedford, Countess of, Kathren, letter of; 8 b.
 Bedford, Earl of:
 libel by; 584 b.
 Edward, suit against (1610); 61 a.
 Francis (1667); 109 b.
 his daughter, Diana (1669); 137 b.
 letter of (1687); 555 a.
 Bedford, Duke of:
 his MSS.; xx.
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
 Wriothesley, letters of; 51 b. to succeed Lord Chesterfield (1748); 569 a.
 letters of (1750-54); 287 b.
 on the claims of King of France to St. Lucia (1751);
 284 a.
 (c. 1754); 220 b.
 letters of (1754); 285 a.

- Bedford, Duke of—cont.
 letters to; ib.
 (1756); 221 a, 222 b.
 speech of; 223 a.
 (1757); 224 a.
 Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; xviii, 193 a, 221 a, 451 a.
 letter to; 175 b.
 pamphlet dedicated to (1757); 448 b.
 (1762); 189 b.
 letters of and to (1763); 277 a, 285 b, 286 a, 287 a.
 (1764); 287 a.
 (1769); 191 a.
- Bedford, Duchess of (1732); 63 a.
 (1769); 191 a.
 Diana, letters of; 51 b.
- Bedill, John, alias Selatter, of Stratford-on-Avon, will of; 334 b.
- Bedingfield; 123 b.
 Sir H., his MSS.; xx.
- Bedyll, Will., of Burnham St. Gregory, will of; 334 a.
- Beech, Hampshire; 263 b.
- Beedles, Matthew, his estate; 3 b.
- Beel, Will., of Pinchbeck, will of; 333 a.
- Beenham Valence, deeds concerning; 262 b.
- Beeston, Mr., of Chester; 377 b, 378 a, 379 a.
- Beg, Mathew, his lands in Dublin; 504 a.
- Begg, Jack; 480 a, 480 b.
- Beggebury, John, of Cranbrook, will of; 340 a.
- Beghall, co. York; 274 a.
- Begne, M. le, or Baron de, letters of; 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
- Begolla:
 Mons. Michel de; 279 b.
 Michael de, chirurgion, appointment of; 281 a.
- Bekwith, John; 271 a.
- Beky:
 John, witness; 270 b.
 Thomas, constable of Pontefract; 270 b.
- Bela; 466 b.
- Belaghnadarn; 466 b.
- Belanagare, co Roscommon; xviii, 441 b, 442 a, 470 a, 484 b.
 letters dated at; 456 b, 477 a, 482 a, 485 a, 486 a.
- Belanagelagh, ford called; 602 a.
- Belassey. See Bellasis.
- Belcarres, Earl of:
 letter of (1709); 37 a.
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
 letter of (1711); 39 b.
- Belcher, Richard; 281 a.
- Belesye, Monsr., 278 b.
- Belfast:
 493 b, 496 a.
 surrender of; 600 b.
- Belfore, Charles; 551 a.
- Belgard lands, co. Kildare; 505 a.
- Belgrave, co. Leicester; 420 b, 423 a.
- Belgrave:
 George, a candidate for Leicester, letters concerning;
 433 b.
 — his "proud and saucy enterprise, &c."; 433 b.
 Roger de, of Leicester; 412 a.
 Thomas, chaplain; 634 b.
- Belhaven:
 Margaret, Lady (1666), petition, &c. of; 102 a, 102 b.
- Bell:
 Henry, petition of; 543 b.
 John, bishop of Mayo; 336 a.
 Phillip, petition of; 125 b.
 Thomas, trooper; 523 b.
- Bellaghanan; 495 b.
- Bellaigle, taking of; 615 a.
- Bellamy, Robert, act to enable him to sell lands; 137 a, 141 b.
- Bellam, Great and Little, with the Pill, co. Kildare; 508 a.
- Bellanaeargie:
 siege of; 615 a.
 castle; 618 a.
- Bellanekearicke; 588 b.
- Bellannure, co. Kildare; 508 a.
- Bellashany; 618 a.
- Bellasis:
 Lord, his regiment at Leicester (1660); 439 a.
 — John (14 Chas. II.); 275 a.
 Lady, grant to; 498 a, 499 b, 499 a.
 — the Duke of York's addressee to; 498 note.
 Sir Henry, deceased; 141 b.
 — Commissioner; 275 a.
 Dame Susan, widow, act touching, 141 b.
- Belleck; 582 b.
- Bellend, Arthur, of Chester; 361 b.
- Bellendorf, M., letter of; 38 a.
- Bellenham, Stephen, of Loose; 329 a.
- Belleport, documents dated from; 379 b.
- Bellespine, M., letter of, 38 a.
- Bellew:
 Lord (1690); 496 b.
 or Bedlowe, his treachery; 612 a.
 John; 614 a.
 Sir Patrick; 479 b.
- Bellewstowne, co. Meath; 499 a.
- Belling, Marcus, son of Walter, petition of; 514 b.
- Bellings, Richard, poet; 604 a.
- Bellingham:
 Sir Daniel, deputy vice-treasurer, &c. in Ireland; 521 a, 528 a, 530 a, 530 b, 534 b, 538 a, 543 a, 547 a, 549 a.
 — certificates by; 543 b, 544 a.
 Lieut. Henry; 591 a.
 Henry, Commissioner, co. Louth; 532 a.
 John; 360 b.
- Bellings:
 —, agent; 604 b, 606 b.
 Richard; 607 b.
- Bello Campo (Beauchamp), Walter de, steward of Edw. I.'s household; 357 b.
- Bellomont, Robert de; 403 b.
- Bellomonte, William de, witness; 270 b.
- Bells, horse racing for; 366 a, 366 b.
- Bellwarthill, lands of; 310 a.
- Belou, Peter; 115 a, 115 b, 140 a.
 petition, &c. of; 115 a, 115 b.
 deposition of; 140 a.
- Belsize and St. John's Wood, 161 a.
- Belton, John, of Glastonbury; 639 b.
- Beltram, John, ship-master; 373 b.
- Beltrawy, camp of, letter dated at; 559 b.
- Belturnbet; 495 a, 495 b, 497 b.
- Belvedere, Earl of, Geo. Rochfort (1774); 195 a.
- Belvoir Castle; 9 b.
 letter dated at; 440 b.
 James I. at; 435 b.
- Benares; 288 a-294 a, passim.
- Benborbe, Ireland; 605 a. battle of; ib.
- Bence, A., of the Trinity House; 251 b.
- Bender, document dated at; 40 a.
- Bendish, Tho., on Cambridge committee; 10 a.
- Bendyshe, Thomas, of Hadleigh, Suffolk, will of; 332 a.
- Bene, Robert, of Walton, will of; 333 b.
- Benedict XI., bull, &c. of; 350 a.
- Benevento, Cardinal Astorgius of; 264 b.
- Benewick, Felicia, relict of Alexander de, conveyance by;
 407 b.
 her daughter Aueline; ib.
- Benezet, Claude, letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 295 a.
- Bengal; 288 a, 288 b, 291 b.
- Benger, Richard; 324 a.
- Benham:
 rector of; 307 b.
 John of, witness; 301 a.
 Urban de, witness; 1 b.
- Benholm, co. Kincardine; 297 a.
- Benignani, letter dated at; 25 a.
- Benmore and Benbegg, co. Galway, lands of; 522 b.
- Benne, John, stock fishmonger, of London, will of; 333 a.
- Bennett, Bennet, Benet:
 — bailiff; 123 b.
 Col., letter of; 38 a.
 Mr., sheriff of Dublin; 506 b.
 Ben., letter of; 40 b.
 Capt. H., letter of; 292 b.
 Henry, of Chester; 361 b.
 — mayor of Chester, letters to; 392 b.
 Sir Henry, envoy, instructions to; 30 b.
 — secretary; 28 b.
 — note by; 30 a.
 — documents signed by; 64 a, 86 b, 90 a.
 — answer to his petition; 504 b.
 — replication of; 529 b.
 Rev. J. A., his report on MSS. of R. Banks, Esq.; xiii,
 208 a.
 — his report on the MSS. of G. Wingfield Digby, Esq.;
 213 a.
 — of Wells almshouses; 638 b.
- Sir John; 218 b.
- John, master of the "Grace"; 245 a.
- Peter, mayor of Chester (1696), letters to; 392 a.
- Roger; 331 a.
- William, mayor of Chester (1652-3); 385 b, 386 a.
 — letter of; 386 b.
 — letters to; 385 b, 393 a.
 — certificate of; 393 a.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 — deposition before; 385 b.
- Benold, Thomas, Clarendieux; 581 b, 582 b.
- Benskin, Thomas; 104 a.
 petition of; 104 a.
- Benson:
 Lieut.-Col., letter of; 289 a.
 John, petition of; 504 a.
- Bensynngton, land in; 628 a.
- Bent, William, trooper; 507 a.
- Bentnick, Baron de, letter of; 37 a.
- Bentle, Wm., of Chester, copy of his will (1483); 368 b.
 — his widow; ib.
 — his parents; ib.
- Bentley, Thomas, president of the College of Physicians; 226 b.
- Bently, Esign Edward; 593 a.
- Benton, Edward and Agnes; 631 a.
- Benyngton:
 John, son of Will.; 264 b.
 William, son of Roger de; 264 b.

Berchley, Hughe, acknowledgment by; 382 b.
 Bercla, Mairoria, of Craufurdjohne, infetment by; 308 a.
 Berford, William de; 347 b.
 Beresford :
 Francis, of the Mint; 68 a.
 Henry and John, collections by; 583 a.
 Lawrence, his estate; 3 a.
 Michael; 155 b, 156 b, 159 a.
 — information of; 157 a.
 Berewyk, Margaret; 628 a.
 Bergavenny, Lord (1492); 634 b.
 Bergeick, Count, letter of; 38 a.
 — capitulation of Mons (1711), declaration; 40 a.
 Bergh, M. van, letter of; 36 a.
 Berghes, Prince de, letter of; 38 a, 39 b.
 Princess of, letter of; 37 a.
 Bergholt, East; 333 b.
 Bergomi, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Bergues, canal of; 287 a.
 Beringhen, Camp de, letter dated at; 17 b.
 Berington, C. M., Esq., his MSS.; xx.
 Berkeley, Lord :
 Thomas; 263 a.
 — James, grandson of; ib.
 Maurice (1505); 263 a. president of Connaught (1663); 515 b, 533 a.
 commission to (1667); 280 a.
 privilege case (1668); 116 a.
 George (1668); 166 a, 171 b.
 — petition of (1670); 153 b.
 — pedigree, &c. of; 153 b.
 letters of (1707); 32 b.
 James (1715), master of the Trinity House; 260 b.
 — in command of fleet (1720); 50 a.
 — his marriage (1744); 671 b.
 Berkeley :
 Lady; 54 a.
 Bishop; 443 b, 451 a, 458 b.
 Sir Charles; 278 a.
 David, of; 305 a.
 G., chairman of committee; 233 a.
 Ensign Henry, letters of; 31 b.
 Henry, letter of; 39 b.
 Lieut. Henry Lionel, letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 292 b, 294 a, 295 b.
 Sir Maurice, vice-president of Connaught; 529 b, 540 a, 550 a.
 Norborn, his Turkey Bill; 571 b.
 Richard, letter of; 37 a.
 Thom. de; 347 b.
 Will., Earl of Nottingham; 263 a.
 Berkhamstead Castle, letter dated at; 268 b.
 Berkshire; 210 a.
 Lord Lieutenant of, letter to; 282 a.
 deeds relating to; 262 b.
 committee of, letter of; 8 b.
 hundreds, bailiffs of; 87 b.
 Earl of, High Steward of Oxford, letter to (1666); 105 b.
 — Thomas (1627), commissioner; 630 a.
 — (1668), petitions of; ix, 117 a, 118 b.
 — (1670); 174 b.
 Countess of, Elizabeth (1668), petition of; 117 a.
 Berkscro in Sheppey, manor of; 318 b, 329 b.
 Berlin, Mr. de, invention by; 260 b.
 Berlin; 250 b.
 letter dated at; 57 b.
 Berl, John Jacob, certificates touching; 143 a.
 Bermondsey Abbey; 265 b.
 Bermuda, document dated at; 40 b.
 Bernage, M. de, letter of; 38 a, 39 b.
 Bernak, John de; 263 a.
 Bernarde :
 John, witness; 1 b.
 — 281 a.
 Sir John, to succeed Pelham; 224 b.
 Berne, letters dated at; 47 b.
 canton, Switzerland; 200 b.
 Berne, Jenny; 480 b. or Bernes, Peter, prior of Selborne; 264 a.
 Berners, Ralph de; 347 a.
 Bernis, Cardinal; 198 a.
 Berord, John; 281 b.
 Berrey, Thomas, of Needham Market, will of; 334 a.
 Berrie, Wm., letters of; 290 a, 294 a.
 Berrington, the ship, letter dated on board; 289 a.
 Berry :
 Due de (1763); 286 a.
 Joseph, chaplain; 596 a.
 Robert, mayor of Liverpool (1594), letter of; 376 a.
 Berthona, manor of; 349 b.
 Bertie, Bertie :
 Capt.; 547 a.
 Mr., his removal; 78 b.
 Henry, Lord Norrey's younger brother (1670); 151 b.
 James, letter of; 77 b.
 Capt. Richard; 548 b.
 — petition of; 541 b.
 Bertles, Capt., justice at Athlone; 517 a.

Bertone, Robert de; 235 a.
 Berwick, Duke of :
 Marshal (1709); 20 b, 21 a, 33 a.
 letters of; 37 a, 38 a, 39 b. in Ireland; 495 b, 496 a.
 Berwick manor (Wilts?); 628 a.
 Berwick-upon-Tweed; 142 a, 212 a. documents dated at; 344 b, 351 b, 352 a.
 alleged bribery at; 225 b.
 proposed free port; 247 b.
 Besancon University; 480 b, note.
 Bescey :
 Hugh of; 639 a.
 Robt., letter of; 283 b.
 Bessborough, Earl of, his relations with Archbishop Stone; 176 b, et seq.
 — his ambitious designs; 179 a.
 Bessilsleigh, Berks, advowson of; 262 b.
 Best :
 Mr., sheriff of Dublin; *506 b.
 Jo., letters of; 250 b.
 T.; 240 b.
 Betele; 334 a.
 Bethel, Mr., letter to; 160 a.
 Sir Hugh, commissioner; 275 a.
 Bethersden, Kent; 329 a.
 Bethune, Sir J. Lindsay, of Kilconquhar, peerage adjudged to 304 a.
 Sir John, his MSS.; xx.
 Betone, David, of Northmelgund; 306 b.
 Betoun :
 Cardinal David, charters by; 304 b, 306 b.
 his illegitimate children; 304 b, 306 b.
 Archbishop James, charters by; 304 b, 306 a.
 John, of Creicht, witness; 306 a.
 Betson, Robert, of Aston; 420 a.
 William; ib.
 Bette, Baron de, letters of; 32 a, 37 a.
 Bettiscome, Mr., of Symondsbury; 116 a.
 Bettisfield, document dated from; 382 b.
 Betty, John, petition of; 516 b.
 Bever, Henry, chaplain; 633 b.
 Beveren, ambassador in England; 554 a.
 Beveridge, Dr.; 27 a.
 Beverley, co. York; 159 b.
 letter dated at; 211 b.
 Beverly :
 Bevan, of Chester; 396 b.
 George, letter of; 397 b.
 James, letter to; 3 a.
 — document signed by; 6 a.
 — of Cawood; 276 b.
 Bevers, John, of "Edmeston," will of; 335 a.
 Bevres, Comte de, letters of; 39 b.
 Bewarris; 398 b.
 Bewers, Suffolk; 209 b.
 Bewerter, Ensign Natha.; 591 b.
 Bewly, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.
 Bey, Marquis de; 25 b.
 Beycham, Richard, of Hertford, will of; 335 a.
 Beytham, John, of Stratford, will of; 332 b.
 Bezantine, Capt. in James II.'s army; 494 a.
 Bezieres; 193 b.
 Bezons, M. de; 20 b.
 Bianchini, Tomazo; 45 b.
 Bickerstaff, Isaac, letters to; 24 a.
 Bickerstaffe, co. Lancaster; 39 b.
 Bickerton, co. York; 272 b, 273 a.
 Biddenden, Thesdenne in; 329 a.
 Biddenham, Bidnam; 3 a, 9 b.
 Sir W. Boteler at; 10 a.
 Biddle, Geo. Edwd., letters of; 292 b, 293 a.
 Biddulph :
 John, letter to; 269 a.
 Col. Myddleton, his MSS.; xx.
 Bideford, letter dated at; 147 a.
 Bideford, the ship; 223 a.
 Bie, Governor, letter of; 293 b.
 Bigamy, discourse on; 16 b.
 Bigbury; 332 a.
 Bigg, Beatrice; 4 a.
 Biggleswade : committee at; 5 b.
 parish of; 6 a.
 Biggs :
 Abraham; 278 a.
 John, petition of; 124 b.
 Bignall, Thomas, quartermaster; 596 b.
 Bigod, Elizabeth, of South Stoke, Oxon, will of; 334 b.
 Bigot, Roger, witness; 270 a.
 Bilbao; 507 b.
 — tin sold in; 92 b.
 Bilburgh, co. York; 271 a.
 Bill, Habees Corpus, in Ireland, speech on; 184 b.
 Bill :
 John, Acts concerning his lands; 137 a, 140 a, 148 a.
 — of Ashwell, will of; 335 b.
 Billers, Edward, of Leicester; 419 a, 439 b.

- Billesden:
 John, of Coventry; 422 a.
 — of Leicester; ib.
- Billet, Robert, deposition of; 236 b.
- Billing, Matthew, scrivener; 6 a.
- Billingbear, Berks; xii, 277 a, 283 b, 284 a, 287 b.
- Billingham, Charles; 82 b.
- Billings, Capt.; 378 b.
- Billingsley:
 Capt. John, weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Cornet William; 595 b.
- Bilsby, co. Lincoln; 265 a.
- Bilington: canons of; 337 a, 337 b.
 church of; 341 b.
- Bilson, Mr., letter of; 57 a.
- Biton, co. York; 271 a.
- Bilton:
 John; 102 a.
 — petition of; 120 a.
- Byng, Sir George. See Byng.
- Bingham:
 Col.; 163 a.
 Sir Charles; 202 b, 203 b.
 George, letter of; 294 b.
 Sir Richard; 398 a, 398 b, 585 a.
 — letter of; 582 b.
 Wm.; 117 a.
- Bingley:
 James, auditor of the Exchequer, certificate touching; 361 a.
 Jo., letters of; 399 a, 400 a.
- Birbury; 269 a.
- Birch:
 v. Fuller, writ of error; 115 a.
 Mr.; 164 b.
 — stoppage of his house in Dublin; 196 b.
 Charles, letter of; 295 a.
 R., letter of; 291 a.
 Richard, letters of; 295 b.
 — petition of; 113 b.
- Birekly, Maurice, petition of; 511 b.
- Bird:
 Major Abner, letter of; 37 a.
 Hamilton, letter of; 290 a.
 Obadiah, petition of; 418 b.
 Richard, of Chester; 369 a.
 Shearman, letter of; 295 b.
 Walter, licence farmer, petitions of; 521 a.
- Birds, John a., case of; 165 b.
- Birkenhead, Richard, Rice Williams v.; 371 b.
- Birkhouse, Henry, letter of; 380 b.
- Birkina, Johan de, witness; 270 a.
- Birley, Robert de, grant by; 637 a.
- Birmingham, Mrs.; 467 b.
- Birne:
 Brian Mac Phelim; 602 b.
 Denis; 511 b.
 Hugh, Lieut.-General; 603 b.
 Fr. Laurence; 618 a.
- Biron, Sir Robert, his company; 511 b.
- Birr; 617 a, 617 b.
 troop at; 543 b.
 gaol; 545 b.
 army near; 602 a.
 taking of; 609 a.
- Birrhauen, Earl of (1651); 614 a.
- Birton, Little, co. Kildare; 508 a.
- Biscay, Bay of; 223 a.
- Bischof, M. de, letter of; 38 a.
- Biscoe, T., letter of, 385 b.
- Bishop:
 Christopher, soldier; 545 b.
 Lieut. Henry; 595 a.
 John; 626 b.
- Bishops:
 their power to license medical practitioners; 230 b.
 defunct, their chattels; 325 a.
- Bishopshourne; 340 a.
- Bishopston; 332 b.
 manor of, Wales; 169 b.
- Bisse:
 Elizabeth, petition of; 151 a.
 Jo., document signed by; 503 a.
 — report by; 536 a.
- Bisset, Walter, of Easter Kinneff; 301 a.
- Bisseye, Little, land in; 1 b.
- Biston, John, letter of; 386 b.
- Bittlesden, Bucks, monastery of; 265 b.
- Blaby:
 document dated at; 439 a.
 Ricard de, witness; 408 b.
- Blacecot; 324 b.
- Black:
 Mr., the archaeologist; 362 b.
 Capt. Samuel, letter of; 293 a.
- Black Book, the, in the Tower; 170 a.
- Black Rod, gentleman usher of. See Ayton, Sir John; Maxwell, James.
- Blackall, Dr., a bishop; 41 b.
- Blackborne, Robert, secretary to the East India Co.; 108 a, 166 b, 167 a.
 — orders, &c., touching; 167 a, 167 b.
 — examination of; 167 a.
- Blackburn, Dr., letter of; 57 a.
- Blackett, John, merchant, petition of; 507 b.
- Blackford; 521 b.
 skirmish; 604 b.
- Blackheath, Lutherans encamped on (1709); 47 a.
- Blackmore, John, payment to; 94 b.
- Blackstone:
 Mr. Jo., M.P.; 7 a.
 Robert; 112 b, 113 a.
 — petitions of; 112 b, 113 a.
 Thomas, lands held by; 520 a.
- Blackwall, —; 102 b.
- Blackwall; 157 a, 235 a, 239 b, 250 a.
 Globe stairs; 258 b. point; 253 b.
- Blackwater; 604 b.
- Blackwell:
 Mr., receiver in Ireland; 522 a.
 John, payment to; 94 b.
 — petitions, &c. of; 136 a.
- Blackworth; 150 a.
- Blacon, near river Dee; 375 b.
- Bladen:
 Martin, of the Mint; 64 a.
 — letters of; 70 b, 71 a.
 Dr. Thomas, minister of St. John's, Dublin, petitions of; 528 b, 538 b.
 William, King's printer, petitions of; 501 b, 504 a.
- Blagall siege; 603 a.
- Blagrove:
 Lieut.-Col.; 593 a.
 George; 104 a.
 — petition of; 104 a.
- Blague, M., instructions to; 28 b.
- Blair; 313 b. relief of; ib.
 siege of; 314 b.
 Castle; 314 a.
- Blair:
 Col., of First Brigade at Cawnpore, letters of; 289 b, 290 a.
 Major, letter of; 296 a.
 Capt. Robert, letter of; 294 a.
 Capt. Thos., letter of; 290 b.
- Blake:
 Mrs.; 278 b.
 Capt. George, of the Trinity House; 249 a, 249 b.
 John; 626 b.
 Joseph, of Red Lion Square; 72 a.
 Martin, of Galway, petition of; 511 b.
 Patrick, of Galway, petition of; 530 a.
 Peter, of Wimbitsham, will of; 334 a.
 Sir Richard; 582 a, 606 a, 607 a, 611 a, 612 b, 617 a.
 Colonel Robert, payment to; 94 b.
 Sir Thomas, petitions of; 500 a, 501 a, 525 a.
 Ulrick; 541 b.
 Sir Valentine; 617 a.
- Blakeber, west part of; 636 a.
- Blakehall, Andrew, music by; 583 a.
- Blakenalle, John and Eliz., of Leicester; 423 a.
- Blakeney (?); 334 a.
- Blakepul, the; 358 a.
- Blakestone manor; 636 b.
- Blakeuill, Richard, lands held by; 520 b.
- Blakiston:
 St. Martin's chapel; 636 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 542 b.
- Blakistoun, place of; 309 b.
- Blakny alias Bagnall, Mabel; 543 b.
- Blakstone, Robt. See Blackstone.
- Blanchard, John; 361 a.
 — petition of; 399 b.
- Blancherd, Phineas, trooper; 504 a.
- Blanchuains, Robert, comes; 404 b.
- Blanc:
 Major; 40 b.
 — prisoners taken by; 50 a.
- Bland or Blund, Peter, Constable of the Tower; 87 b.
- Blandford; 220 b.
 Forum; xx.
 Marquis of, letters to (1812, &c.); 13 b.
 — John, letters of; 51 b.
 — William, letters of; ib.
- Blaney, Dame Jane, petition of; 516 a.
- Blankenburch; 242 b.
- Blankford, document dated at; 353 b.
- Blanshard:
 Rev. F., letter of; 289 b.
 Rev. J., letters of; 292 b, 293 a, 294 a.
 Rev. Thos., letter of; 289 b.
- Blany; 493 b.
- Blanzac, Comte de, letter of; 37 a.
- Blaquiere, Sir John, secretary in Ireland; 193 b, 194 b, 195 a, 195 b, 202 b, 203 a.

- Blare, Mary, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Blatares, Matthew, work by; 23 b.
 Blatou, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Blayney:
 Lady, letters of and to; 57 a.
 Anne and Marie, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Blaythwayt, W., letters of; 31 b.
 Bleaching Bill, the; 313 a.
 Bledes, Francis, soldier; 548 a.
 Blean:
 Forest, Kent; 327 a. pasture and forest; 320 b.
 Wood, grants of; 319 a.
 Blease, John; 379 a.
 Blease, Robt., sheriff of Chester (1606); 403 a.
 Blegborough, Dr.; 233 b.
 Blenau, M., letter of; 39 b.
 Blencowe, William, Fellow of All Souls; 50 b.
 Blenheim; 54 a, 219 b.
 building of; 25 b.
 work at; 26 a.
 the Sunderland library at; 27 b.
 Blennerhassett:
 Capt. John, petition of; 503 b.
 Wm.; 151 b.
 Bletchingley; 333 a.
 Gilbert de Clare's house at; 352 a.
 Bletsoe, minister and constables of; 4 a.
 Bletsoe, William; 6 a.
 Bletso, Thomas, licence farmer, petition of; 516 b.
 Bliam, document dated at; 347 b.
 Blihe, Cornet Tho.; 596 b.
 Blisse, John, of Wroton, will of; 333 b.
 Blois, Peter of, witness; 328 a.
 Blondeau, Peter, payment to; 95 a.
 Blood:
 Col. Holcroft, letters of; 31 b.
 Neptune, Dean of Kilfenora, petition of; 516 a.
 Thomas "the notorious colonel;" 155 b, 157 b, 158 a, 159 b.
 — young son of; 159 b.
 — and the plot of 1663; xviii, 502 a.
 — of Dublin; 523 a.
 Blount:
 Mrs.; 55 b; 56 a.
 Am., commander of musters, co. Stafford, letter of; 379 a.
 Sir Charles, his marriage; 584 b.
 Elizabeth, wife of Sir Humphrey, of Kinlet, will of; 334 b.
 John, of Leicester, indenture by; 418 a.
 Katherine, of Shelsley Walsh, will of; 335 a.
 Will. le and Lucy, grant to; 265 b.
 — will of; ib.
 Blounville, John de, escheator; 2 a.
 Blouts, Thomas de, of Leicester; 404 b.
 Blow, Dr., composer; 12 b.
 Blower, John; 342 b.
 Blowere, tithes of; 317 b.
 Bloxam v. Sandeland; 170 b.
 Bloxham; 332 a.
 Bloxton:
 a tailor; 155 b.
 Bernaby; 155 b (note), 156 b.
 — deposition of; 158 a.
 Bludder:
 Sir Thomas, letters of; 399 a, 399 b.
 — victualler of the navy (1610); 399 a.
 Blund: or Bland, Constable of the Tower; 87 b.
 Robert le; 344 a.
 Stephen, son of Andrew, gift by; 323 a.
 Blundell:
 Sir Arthur; 593 b.
 Captain Charles; 594 b.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Dorathée, abbess of the Benedictines at Brussels, letter of;
 37 a.
 Galfridus, de Cossebi; 405 a.
 Blundhill, Thomas de, constable of the Tower; 87 b.
 Blunsden St. Andrew; 332 a.
 Blunt:
 Colonel; 497 b.
 — his lands in Limrick; 498 b.
 Sir Charles, letter of; 294 b.
 Sir H.; 134 a.
 Sir Henry; 134 b.
 John, solicitor, statement touching; 111 a.
 Bluntisham; 335 a.
 Blyset, John; 626 a.
 Blythburgh; 334 a.
 Blythe; 238 a.
 Bond, Convent, daily allowance for; 343 a.
 Board, Thos.; 151 b.
 Bobi, Hugo de, witness; 270 a.
 Bocharius, Ierius, clerk to Edw. I.; 345 a.
 Bocking; 335 b.
 letter dated from; 158 b.
 lands in; 319 a.
 manor of; 322 a, 322 b, 323 a.
 Park; 322 a.
 tithes of; 318 a.
 Bockland:
 St. Mary of; 637 a.
 abbot, &c. of; ib.
 Bockyng:
 Simou de, goldsmith, his will; 633 b.
 St. Benedict convent; ib.
 Boeton, document dated at; 353 a.
 Boeton Monchensy, Kent, lands in; 329 a.
 Boeton:
 John, master of Canterbury Grammar School; 339 a.
 — emphatic form of his institution; ib.
 Boddam:
 Charles, letter of; 290 a.
 Hon. R. H., letter of; 293 b.
 Boden, Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Bodkin:
 Ambrose, petitions of; 529 b, 550 a.
 Michael, of Galway, petition of; 510 a.
 Nicholas, of Galway, petition of; 550 a.
 — and John, of Galway; 529 b.
 Robert, of Galway, petition of; 503 b.
 Bodley, Sir Thomas, his autobiography; 585 a.
 Bodney, Norfolk; 332 a.
 Bodvell, Bodvile:
 Anne; 104 b, 105 a.
 Elizabeth; 104 b.
 Griffith, petition of; 104 b.
 — case of; ib.
 John, deceased; 104 b, 105 a.
 Sarah; 104 b.
 Thomas; 105 a.
 — petition of; 104 b.
 Body, Thomas, of Worcester; 638 b.
 Boevoy, Isabella, certificate touching; 143 a.
 Boghall; 303 a.
 Bohemia; 220 b.
 Kiaf of, hereditary butler of Ireland; 588 a.
 Queen of, Elizabeth; 584 a.
 — jewels in the hands of; 209 a.
 — her players (1630); 229 a.
 Bohun:
 —; 497 a.
 Lady Elynor, married to first Earl of Ormonde; 588 a.
 Humphrey de, Earl of Hereford; 266 a, 412 b.
 — bribe to; 266 b.
 Boidele, Boiddell:
 Richard; 356 a, 356 b.
 William; ib.
 Boidens, John, bookseller, of London, will of; 334 b.
 Bois Fresno, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Bois-le-Duc, siege of; 581 a.
 Boiesmont, M., letter of; 38 a.
 Boiteux, Capt. of Bouloign; 283 a.
 Boizard, his Traité des Monoyes; 72 b.
 Bokkyng:
 Nicholas, petition of; 268 b.
 — John, his son; ib.
 Boklay, Mr., and his wife; 561 b.
 Bold:
 document dated from; 387 a.
 John, of Adisham, will of; 340 a.
 Radulph; 367 b.
 Bolger, John, trooper; 525 a.
 Bolingbroke:
 inquisition at; 411 b.
 honor, indenture concerning; 412 a.
 Earl of (1668); 166 a, 173 a.
 — letter of (1710); 76 a.
 — (1715); 40 b.
 — Lord Stair's interview with (1716); 1 a.
 — Lord Stair's letter about (1716); 41 a.
 — document signed by; 40 b.
 — letters of, to Lady Denbigh; xi, 566 a et seq.
 — and Lady, their deaths; 567 b.
 Bollaert, M., letter of; 40 b.
 Bollend, Thos., of Chester; 361 b.
 Bolles, Richard, of Haugh, Linc., will of; 332 a.
 Bolley, John, of Hollingbourne, will of; 333 a.
 Bollington priory, co. Lincoln; 265 a.
 Bolneshurst town, tax on; 10 a.
 Bologna, letter dated at; 570 b.
 Bolston, co. Pembroke; 379 b.
 Bolstrode:
 le Chevalier, at Brussels, letter to; 212 b.
 Sir R., letter to; 212 a.
 Bolter:
 Major, letter of; 295 b.
 Mr., executor of Sir J. Cutler; 231 b.
 Bolton on Dearn, co. York; 271 b.
 Bolton, Duke of:
 letters of (1705); 31 b.
 — (1706); 32 a.
 letter of (1709); 37 a.
 — (1710); 38 a.
 — (1711); 39 b.
 letters of; 59 a.
 (1737); 18 b.
 Bolton:
 Alex., master of Ewelme Hospital; 630 a.

Bolton—cont.

- Daniel; 24 a.
 Dame Margaret, petition of; 513 b.
 Nicholas, petition of; 551 a.
 Sir Richard, letter of; 217 b.
 —; 581 a, 582 a, 584 b.
 — Lord Chancellor of Ireland, petition of his widow, Margaret; 501 b, 507 b.
 Robert, of Cambridge, will of; 335 b.
 — demise to; 628 a.
 Will., vicar of Little Abington, will of; 333 a.
 Sir William; 98 b.
 Bombay; 288 a.
 Bomely or Bomelius, a quack; 227 a.
 Bond:
 Denis, president of Council of State, order by; 386 a.
 Dennis, letters of; 247 b, 248 a.
 Rich., of Uffington, will of; 333 b.
 Silvanus, deposition of; 236 b.
 Thomas, of Exeter and of the "city of the Groyne in Galicia," will of; 334 h.
 Bonefruct, Dr. T.; 628 a.
 Boneham, John, of Hasebury, will of; 334 b.
 Bonelle, Samuel, rector of Braylesford; 26 b.
 Boney, Robert, clerk, of Leicester; 422 a.
 Boniface VIII., pope:
 bulls, letters, &c. of; 318 a, 345 a, 345 b, 346 a, 348 a, 349 b, 632 b.
 his condemnation of the Colonna family; 346 a.
 his dispute with Philip IV.; 348 b. his detractors put to silence; 351 b.
 Boniface IX., bull of; 264 b.
 Bonn, letters dated at; 558 a.
 Bonnell, Lt.-Col., his company at Leicester; 438 b.
 Bonner, John, ship's mate, captive; 246 b.
 Bonrattie, governor of; 605 a.
 Bonratty, surrender of; 605 a.
 Bonus, Adam, of Litchfield, deposition of; 434 b.
 Bonwick, Benjamin, receiver of Reigate manor; 280 b.
 Boode, Henry, of Burnham, Essex, will of; 333 a.
 Booker, Richard, of Newcastle, co. Stafford, petition of; 544 b.
 Books:
 price of; 13 b.
 (15th century), list of, at Caistor; 268 a.
 unlawful, seized at Leicester; 430 b. service or mass, at Ewelme; 629 b.
 Boone, Christopher; 167 b, 173 b, 174 a.
 — orders, &c. touching; 167 b.
 — petition of; 107 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 288 b.
 Bootelle, Inez Diaz; 22 b.
 Booth:
 Capt., letter of; 296 a.
 Geo., of Chester; 361 b.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 J. S., letters of; 289 b-293 a passim.
 James; 278 b.
 Nathaniel, receiver of Royal aids in co. Chester; 388 a. receiver (of excise, Chester), letter of; 390 a.
 Robert, Justice; 510 b, 533 a.
 — certificate by; 533 a, 533 a.
 Will., Archbp. of York; 262 b.
 Bootham, co. York, hospital at; 151 a.
 Boothman, Elizabeth, petition of; 531 b.
 Boothroyd, his History of Pontefract; 271 a.
 Boras, documents dated from; 377 a, 380 a.
 Borcke, M. de, letter of; 39 b.
 Bordeaux; 109 a, 193 a, 214 a, 218 a, 369 a, 375 b, 553 b.
 letter dated at; 193 a.
 merchants at; 257 a.
 wines; 239 b, 240 a.
 boy canon of; 350 b.
 Bordeman, Mrs. Elizabeth; 118 b.
 Bordley, Bordelly, co. York; 271 a.
 Boreman, George, petition of; 119 a.
 Borham, churches of; 633 a.
 Borlase, Borlace:
 Dr. Edmund; 574 a.
 Sir John, Lord Justice of Ireland; 574 a, 589 a.
 — depositions taken by; 572 b.
 — his regiment; 594 b.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Borley, Essex, manor of; 319 a, 322 b.
 Bornbam Hall, Essex; 262 b.
 Borough English, custom of, in Leicester; 407 a.
 Boroughs, Edwd., of Chester; 361 b.
 Borowmay, William, Justice, co. Somerset; 639 b.
 Borreshowie, lordship or barony of, co. Mayo; 521 a, 527 a.
 Borrowe, King Bryan, his benefits to Ireland; 585 b.
 Borrowes, Ensign Henry; 591 a.
 Borstall, royalists at; 9 b.
 Borthwick, Lord, John; 304 b, 306 b.
 Boscawen:
 Admiral, his victory; 226 a.
 Mrs., letters of; 54 a.
 Hugh, warden of the Stannaries; 91 b.
 Bosco:
 Dominus Ernaldus de, witness; 406 a.
 Ernulfus de, witness; 404 b.
 Bosseger, Robert le, grant by; 637 a.
 Bosseville, Godfrey, on Coventry committee; 7 b.
 Bossu, Robert, charter of; 403 b, 404 a.
 Bostok, John, canon residentiary of Sarum, will of; 332 a.
 — of Ewelme; 627 b.
 Boston; 242 b, 252 a.
 port of; 94 a.
 the river Trent and, Act for improving the navigation between (1670); 153 a.
 St. Botulf; 324 b.
 Governor of (1684); 30 b.
 Bosume, Essex; 332 a.
 Bosville, Robert, answer of; 124 a.
 Boswell:
 John, petition of; 547 a.
 W., mem. by; 83 a.
 Wa., of the Edinburgh mint, letter of; 83 b.
 Sir William, letters of; 553 a, 553 b, 554 b.
 — commission to; 209 a.
 Bosworth, letter dated at; 432 b.
 Boteler John:
 Sir John; 628 a.
 John, of Brounfeld, Essex, will of; 332 b.
 Sir Philip; 569 b.
 Robert, of Leicester; 414 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 11 a.
 Sir Thomas, letter of; ib.
 William or Sir William, letters of; 2 b, 9 a.
 — letters to; 3 a, 6 b, 7 b, 8 a, 8 b, 9 b, 10 a.
 — his land; 7 b.
 — on Bedford committee; 3 a.
 — documents signed by; 6 a, 9 a, 10 a. See Butler.
 Boterell, Thomas, draper of London, will of; 335 a.
 Bothaw, St. Mary, church of; 319 b.
 Bothner, or Bothmar:
 Baron; 41 a.
 — letters of; 31 b, 32 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b, 40 b.
 — relation by; 32 a.
 Bouchain:
 siege of; 39 a.
 governor of, letter of; 39 b.
 memorials of its capitulation (1711); 40 a.
 Bouere, Alexander de, inquisition by; 406 a.
 Bouffiers, Marshal; 17 a.
 letters of; 17 b, 37 b.
 Boughley:
 v. Ramsden, writ of error; 151 a.
 Bold, warden of the Fleet; 116 a.
 Boughton:
 near Chester; 358 a.
 St. Giles's Hospital, mastership of; 361 a. two parishes of; 316 a.
 Aluph, Kent, rector of; 328 b, 337 a.
 under Blean, Kent, church of; 330 a.
 Bouillon:
 Cardinal, letters of; 38 a, 40 a.
 Duke of; 283 a.
 Bount, Walter de, witness; 270 a.
 Boulborne, Thos., of Chester; 361 b.
 Boulogne, Bay; 85 a.
 Boulter; 156 a.
 Margaret; 155 b, 156 a, 156 b.
 — deposition of; 157 b.
 Wm., letter of; 89 b.
 Boulton:
 Major Charles; 550 b.
 Richard; 231 b.
 Bound, Cuthbert, minister in Dorset; 209 b.
 Bounty Office, Queen Anne's, manuscripts in, Mr. Horwood's report on; 632 a.
 Bourbon:
 Armand de; 40 b.
 Louis de, Prince de Condé, letters of (1660); 28 a.
 Bourcards, Capt., letter of; 38 a.
 Bourchier, Henry, Earl of Essex; 263 b.
 Bourman, Joan, of the Isle of Wight, will of; 335 a.
 Bourg; 283 a.
 Marquis de, letters of; 31 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
 Bourghull:
 Bishop of Coventry (1414), his death; 340 b.
 — his will; ib.
 Bourmainaire, M. de, letter of; 40 b.
 Bourgneuf, Burniff, France; 509 a.
 Bourke, Col. William; 543 b.
 Bourne:
 Lines; 332 b.
 Robert, of Wapping; 239 b.
 Bourser, Robert le, a pilgrim, his murder and burial; 348 b.
 Bovey, Gerard, button maker, petition of; 71 b.
 Bowall, John, D.D., Solicitor-General, grant to; 277 b.
 Bowden, Dr., of Dublin; 475 b.
 Bowen:
 alias Hoveden, Alice; 535 b.
 Arthur, of the Guard of Horse; 511 a.
 Griffith, petition of; 154 a.
 Henry, letter of; 291 a.
 Owen, letter of; 290 a.
 Bower or Bowyll, Rich., of Sherborne, will of; 335 b.

- Bowerman, lease to, &c. from Trinity House; 252 a, 253 a, 253 b, 256 a, 256 b.
 Bowers, Henry, letter of; 244 a.
 Bowes:
 Lord Chancellor for Ireland; 488 a.
 Sir Jerome; 381 a.
 Jo.; 379 a.
 Martyr, or Sir Martin, of the Mint; 65 a, 65 b.
 Bowles:
 Diana, of London; 5 b.
 Sir Wm.; 163 b.
 Bowlonde, Edith, of All Hallows', Winchester, will of; 332 b.
 Bowman, Mr.; 250 b.
 Bowmer, Lieut.-Col. John; 549 b.
 Bowring, Hugh, affidavit of; 142 a.
 Bowser, Capt., letter of; 294 b.
 Bowsfield:
 Joseph, petitions of; 512 a, 521 b.
 — his release; 518 b.
 Bourke:
 Viscount, of Mayo, Theobald, petition of; 549 a.
 Colonel; 604 b, 613 b.
 Lady Ann, her lands in Galway co.; 498 b.
 Fr. Hugh; 614 a.
 John, letter of; 38 a.
 Sir John, of Derimac Laghay, petition of; 539 b, 549 a.
 John; 604 a.
 Dr. John; 614 a.
 Oliver; ib.
 Richard; 608 b, 614 b.
 — of Turlagh, petition of; 516 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 541 b.
 — lands held by; 520 b.
 Sir Ulick, petition of; 547 a.
 William; 613 a.
 — his lands in Limerick; 498 b.
 Bowyll or Bower, Richard, of Sherborne, will of; 335 b.
 Boxley:
 church and monastery of; 341 b.
 monastery of; 329 a.
 Boxted, Essex; 333 a.
 Boy:
 James, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Ryce; 210 a.
 Boyce, John, defendant; 529 b.
 Boyd:
 Mr., payment to; 526 a.
 — his house in Dublin; 624 a.
 Andrew; 239 a.
 — grant of coal tax to; 238 a.
 J., letter of; 295 a.
 Thomas, of Dublin; 518 b.
 Boyer, Stephen; 282 a.
 Boyle:
 Henry, Secretary of State; 20 b, 32 b, 37 b, 43 b.
 — letters of; 33 b, 36 b, 37 a, 38 a, 38 b, 44 a.
 — Speaker of Irish House of Commons; 174 b.
 — made Earl of Shannon; ib.
 — events leading to his resignation; 176 b, et seq.
 Michael, Bishop of Cork, petition of; 501 a.
 Roger, common place book of; 584 a.
 Boynagh parish, co. Galway, lands in; 351 b.
 Boyne, the, battle of, letter concerning; 559 b.
 Boynton, John, commissioner; 275 b.
 Boys:
 Sir John; 508 a.
 — governor of Duncannon fort; 542 b.
 Boyse:
 Richard; 121 b.
 — information of; 121 b.
 Brabant:
 State of; 32 a.
 the States of, letter of; 37 a. deputies of State of, letters of; 35 b, 39 b.
 Brabazon:
 Edward, letter of; 213 a.
 Ensign James; 593 a.
 Roger; 347 b.
 Braborne:
 Dr. Wm.; 120 b, 121 a.
 — answer of; 121 a.
 Brabson, Anthony; 614 b.
 Bracina, William de, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Bracke Cloonbegg, co. Galway, lauds of; 522 b.
 Brackenburg:
 James, soldier; 547 a.
 Robert; 65 a.
 — of the Mint; 70 b.
 Brackley:
 Hospital of St. John at; 266 a, 269 a.
 election (1754); 285 a.
 Brackyn, Sir John, his estate; 3 a.
 Braconnier, his mission to Eugene; 16 a.
 Bracy, Daniel, his children; 4 a.
 Bradbryg, John, of Sinfold, will of; 335 b.
 Bradbury, Elizabeth; 122 b.
 Braddock, General, his defeat; 226 a.
 Braddy, J., document signed by; 211 a.
 Bradeford, Robert de 258 a.
 Bradewell, Thomas, rector of Shoreham, his will; 338 a.
 Bradfield; 334 a.
 Bradford-on-Avon; 332 b.
 Bradford, co. York:
 Horton in parish of; 637 b. rectory of; ib.
 Bradford, Ford in parish of, Somerset; 265 a.
 Bradford, Earl of, his MSS.; xx.
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
 letter of (1717); 57 a.
 Bradford, William, petition of; 531 b.
 Bradgate, Thomas, clothier, of Leicester, loan to; 427 a. list of tenders to; ib.
 Bradley, Joseph, of Pontefract; 276 a.
 Bradocke, John, petition of; 504 b.
 Bradshaw:
 John, president, letters of; 247 a, 247 b, 385 a.
 — excepted from general pardon; 30 a.
 Josbna; 369 b.
 Lieut., Paris, letter of; 295 b.
 Richard; 365 a.
 — mayor of Chester (1649), letter to; 385 a.
 Robert, of Leicester; 499 b.
 Capt. Sam., letter of; 291 a.
 Bradson, Thomas, of Meath, a prisoner in Dublin; 529 b. petition of his wife Ann; ib.
 Bradston:
 Sir Thomas de; 625 a.
 Lieut. Thomas; 595 a.
 Lieut. Vincent; 594 b.
 Bradwell manor; 268 a.
 Brady:
 Dr.; 480 a.
 Edwd.; 392 b.
 Sampson, letter of; 38 a.
 Braganston, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.
 Bragard, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Bragot, Thos.; 367 b.
 Brailes; 335 a.
 Braillis, Simon, chaplain to Duchess of Suffolk; 627 b, 629 b.
 Bramhall, John, Abp. of Armagh; 516 a.
 Bramford, Thomas, of Felixstow, will of; 333 b.
 Brampton, Master of the Court of Chancery (1670); 144 b.
 Brampton:
 Capt. John, at Athlone; 530 b.
 Robert, of Attleborough, will of; 333 b.
 Bransbott, Hants, parson of; 266 a.
 Brances, Dne de; 286 a.
 Brandenburg, Count Henri de, petition of; 49 b.
 Brandreth, Henry, letter of; 386 a.
 Brandshagen:
 Dr., payments, &c. to; 85 a.
 Dr. Justus, reports, &c. by; 84 a, et seq.
 Brandy:
 bill, imposition on (1670); 143 a.
 whether "a strong water perfectly made," submitted to a jury; note, 143 b.
 foreign, Act to prevent importation of (1670); 145 b.
 — bill about, message (1670); 150 a.
 French and English; 232 b.
 Branthwait, Doctor; 25 b.
 Branthwayte, Richard; 115 a.
 Brantum, wood of; 636 b.
 Brascby, John, hntcher of Marsh Gebyn; 631 a.
 Brassington, Rob.; 341 b.
 Brathwaite, Col. John, letter of; 295 b.
 Brattel, Brattel:
 Mr., of the Mint; 67 a.
 Charles, petitions of; 67 a.
 Daniel, of the Mint; 67 a.
 — petition of; 67 a.
 John, of the Mint; 66 b.
 Branche:
 Dame Margaret and Sir Philip; 268 a.
 Will., of Fleet, will of; 334 b, 335 a.
 Braunston:
 Robert, of Leicester; 414 b.
 Roger, Burgess of Leicester; 413 b.
 Braunstone; 422 a.
 Braxton, Edward, petitions of; 500 b, 547 b.
 Bray:
 Edmund, letters of; 37 a, 38 a.
 H. de, escheator to Edw. I.; 346 a.
 John, disbanded soldier; 529 b.
 Sir Reginald, will of; 335 b.
 — tutor to Prince Arthur; 331 a.
 Braybrooke, R. de, Bishop of London; 632 b.
 Braybrooke of Braybrooke, Lord:
 Mr. Jeaffreson's report on manuscripts of; xii, 277 a-296 b.
 papers illustrative of his genealogy; 287 b.
 letter to (1801); 287 b.
 2nd lord; 277 a.
 Richard, 3rd; ib.
 — Jane, Lady, wife of; ib.
 Braye, Braye, wood, Windsor forest; 282 a.
 Braye, Henry de, witness; 633 a.
 Brayes, John, his holding in Tipperary; 498 a.
 Braylesford, near Derby; 26 b.
 Braynsford, John de; 633 a.

- Brazil; 553 b.
 Breadalbane, Marquis of, his MSS.; xx.
 Breche, Andrea de la, witness; 407 a.
 Brechin :
 archdeacon of; 308 b.
 Bishop of, Forbes; xvii, 298 a, 299 b.
 — (1580), Alexander; 301 a.
 chanter of; 301 a.
 and Nevar, lord of; 306 a.
 Brecknock :
 prior of, charges against; 266 b. priory of; 266 a.
 Breda, Charles II. at; 99 b.
 Bredgar, Trinity College of; 329 a.
 Bredon; 413 a.
 Bredwardin :
 Thomas, his ineffectual election as archbishop; 336 b, 338 a.
 his death; 337 b.
 Breer, Will., of Crawley, Sussex, will of; 335 a.
 Brember : honour of; 349 b.
 Nicholas and Idonea, demise to; 342 a.
 Bremen, tin sold in; 92 b.
 Brenagh, Col. Walter; 616 b.
 Brenan, Father Patrick, letter to; 610 b.
 Brenn, Capt.; 534 b.
 Brent, Thomas, of Schafe; 637 a.
 Breouse, Will. de; 349 b.
 Brereton :
 letter of; 387 a.
 Lord, Wm. (1669); 128 a.
 Mr.; 11 a.
 Sergeant-major; 591 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 b.
 Andrew, letter of; 380 a.
 Lieut. Fran.; 591 a.
 Henry, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
 John; 400 a.
 Owen; 374 a.
 Richard, of Eccleston, letter to; 382 a.
 Capt. Sam.; 591 b.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Sir Wm.; 385 a.
 — letters to; 382 a, 398 b.
 Brerewood :
 John, letter of; 387 b.
 Robert; 374 a.
 — counsellor; 383 a.
 — mayor of Chester, letter to; 374 b.
 — recorder of Chester; 365 b.
 — ousted from his place "for his loyalty;" 387 b.
 Bressy, Benjamin; 120 a.
 Brest; 197 b, 223 a, 561 a, 565 b.
 Breth, Richard la, of Leicester; 405 b.
 Breton, Cape; 570 a.
 Breton, John, of Colchester, will of; 332 b.
 Breton, Thomas le, canon of Hereford; 635 b.
 Brett :
 his pamphlet; 491 b. answer to his petition; 518 b, 519 a.
 Colonel; 517 a, 531 b.
 Henry, Richard, and Major; 51 a.
 Col. John; 545 b.
 — petition of; 510 a.
 Richard; 278 a.
 — letter of; 39 b.
 Breun, Lieut. Henry; 595 a.
 Brewers : of London; 146 a.
 at Leicester, Act for; 426 a.
 Brewerton, Henry, lands held by; 520 b.
 Brewood, John, of Horkesley, will of; 332 a.
 Brewster, Richard and Isabella, of Stanton Wyvill, deed by; 423 a.
 Brian Borovoy, O'Brian posterity of; 486 a.
 Briancon; 20 a, 21 b.
 Count of (1708); 19 b, 20 a, 32 b.
 Letters of; 17 a, 20 b, 25 a, 31 b, 36 b, 47 b, 58 a.
 — his secretary; 45 b.
 Bribery; 393 a.
 Brick, co. Meath; 499 a.
 Brickenden, Mr.; 283 b.
 Bridewell prison; 119 a, 119 b, 163 b.
 Bridge, Kent; 337 a.
 Bridge :
 Andrew, of Soham, will of; 335 a.
 John; 390 b.
 Richd., of Chester; 361 b.
 — dyer of Chester; 361 b.
 Bridge silver at Leicester, remission of; 405 b, 406 a.
 Bridgeman :
 (Brichman), Mr., secretary; 561 a, 561 b.
 Henry, collections by; 584 a.
 Bridgenorth; 332 a.
 Bridges :
 Col., letter of; 295 a.
 Sir James, petition of; 140 b.
 — order touching; ib.
 Sir John; 140 a.
 Dame Mary; 140 a.
 Bridgham; 333 b.
 Bridgman :
 Lord (1664); 387 b.
 Sir Orlando, Lord Keeper; 113 a, 139 a, 162 b.
 — letter of; 114 a.
 — chief justice; 102 a, 234 b, 418 b.
 — commission to; 102 b.
 Bridgewater; 51 b.
 Earl of (1668); 166 a, 167 b, 173 a.
 — (1669); ix, 137 a.
 — (c. 1688); 558 b.
 — letters of (1705); 31 b.
 — letters of (1707); 32 b.
 — letter of (1710); 38 a.
 — letter of (1711); 39 b.
 Countess of, letters of; 51 b.
 Duke of, letters of; 51 b.
 Lieut. Robt., letter of, 293 b.
 Bridport; 332 b.
 Briell, Isle of the; 554 b.
 Brigger, William, of Wells; 639 b.
 Briggs :
 a player; 229 a.
 Hannab, wife of John; 66 b.
 Nicholson and, memorial of; 79 a.
 Brigham, Geo.; 379 a.
 Bright, William, of the Shipwrights' Company; 261 a.
 — and Alice; 626 b.
 Brightlingsea, Essex; 160 b.
 Brightman, Mr., of Caistor; 240 a.
 Brightwell, rector of; 627 b.
 Brigot, Richard, of the Mint; 64 b.
 Brinnea, relation of battle near (1711); 40 a.
 Brimingham :
 Capt.; 608 b.
 Fr. Thomas; 609 a.
 Bringhamst :
 Major; 598 b.
 Thomas, town major of Dublin; 593 b.
 Briscoe :
 Col. Henry, letters of; 292 b-295 b, passim.
 J., letter of; 37 a.
 Waleot, attorney, 146 b, 147 a.
 — petitions of; 147 a.
 Bristol; 11 b, 29 b, 63 a, 138 a, 216 b, 241 a, 243 a, 332 a, 333 a, 334 b, 335 a, 335 b, 368 a, 369 a, 378 b, 630 b, 639 a.
 letters dated at; 46 b, 380 a.
 mayor of, letters of; 46 b, 379 b.
 — letter to; 379 b.
 garrison; 8 b.
 mint at; xii, 70 b, 74 b, 79 a.
 port of; 94 a.
 proposed free port; 247 b.
 and London, Act for making inland passages for barges, &c. between (1668); 123 b. merchants of; 236 a.
 surrender of; 212 b.
 All Saints, vicar of; 335 b.
 the Hot Well; 54 b.
 Goldsmiths' Company of; 70 a.
 Bishop of, letter of (1711); 40 a.
 — Privy Seal (1711); 39 a.
 — a plenipotentiary (1713); 41 a.
 Earl of; 30 b.
 — 581 a.
 — letters of; x, 1 a, 54 a.
 — letters of and to (1622 and later); 214 b-217 b.
 — in Spain; 2 b.
 — charges against; 213 a, 216 b, 217 a, 217 b.
 — his ill will towards Buckingham; 217 a.
 — George Digby, letters of; 27 b.
 — letters to (1650-62); 28 a.
 — Lord Taaffe and; 28 b.
 — (1657); 154 a.
 — letters, &c. of (1653-1672); 218 a, 218 b, 219 a.
 — letters to (1657); 29 a.
 — letters of (1753); 287 b.
 — Geo. William, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland (1766); 482 a.
 — (1778), bishop of Derry, letters of; 195 b, 197 a-199 a.
 Bristol, Countess of, or Lady :
 letters of; 54 a.
 letter of (1623); 215 a.
 petition for her husband; 217 a.
 petition of (1663); 219 a.
 Bristow; 568 b.
 John, letters of; 291 a, 294 a.
 Wm., of Chester; 361 b.
 Brittas, Lady; 499 a.
 Brithnoth, manors given by; 322 b.
 Brithyne, Jehan, de Dieppe; 346 b.
 Brittain, Dr.; 253 a.
 Brittain, Duke of, Conan; 264 b.
 Brixy, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Broadway; 335 a, 335 b.
 Brocades, Lieut., letter of; 38 a.
 Brocas, Mary, v. Muscovia Company; 170 b.
 Brockett Hall, co. Hertford; 136 b.

- Brodbeck, wreck on shore of; 326 a.
 Brodrick, Brodericke :
 Lord Chancellor, letters of; 49 a, 58 b, 59 a.
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Sir Allen, lands given to; 497 b.
 — grant to; 499 a.
 — surveyor general in Ireland; 505 a.
 — petition of; 514 a.
 Sir John, his brother; ib.
 Brodricke, Sir St. John, petition of; 504 b.
 Broghill, Lord : lands granted to; 99 a.
 in Kerry (1650); 601 b.
 Brograve, Will., sen., draper of London and of Beckenham, will of; 335 a.
 Brohier :
 Capt. J., letters of; 292 b, 293 b.
 Capt. J. W., letter of; 294 b.
 Brojoe, Robert; 374 a.
 Broissia, Marquis de, letter of; 39 b.
 Broke, Robert atte, rector of Mongeham, will of; 340 a.
 Brokehampton, John, account roll of; 226 a.
 Broket, Edward; 271 a.
 Brokbell, Thomas de, demise to; 329 a.
 Bromall, Agnes, of London, will of; 333 a.
 Bromdean :
 Hampshire; 263 b.
 charter concerning; 263 b.
 Bromes, Suffolk; 290 b.
 Bromeley, Mr., burgess for Leicester; 433 b.
 Bromfield, Wm. (a Quaker), letter of; 39 b.
 Bromflett, Robert, of Whitechapel, deed by; 271 b.
 Bromham :
 co. Beds; 8 a.
 vicar of; 4 b.
 Bromidge, Capt. Thomas, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Bromley :
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Roger, letters of; 431 b.
 T., chancellor, letter of; 431 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 384 b.
 — of Worcester; 638 b.
 Bron, David, webster; 367 b.
 Brookard, Henry; 278 a.
 Brook, Kent, manor of; 318 b, 328 a.
 Brook, Brooke :
 Dr., censor; 231 b.
 Edward, letter of; 291 a.
 Gyles, mayor of Liverpool (1593), letter of; 375 b.
 H., letter of; 290 b.
 Henry, author; 442 b.
 — his "Farmer's Letters"; 442 b, 445 b, 465 a, et seq.
 — "The Spirit of Party" by; 444 b.
 — Charles O'Connor's attack on; ib.
 — an advocate for the Catholics; 451 b.
 — failure of his tragedy; 471 b.
 — O'Connor's remarks on; 477 b.
 Thomas, letters of; 292 b, 294 a, 295 b.
 W. A., letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 294 a, 294 b,
 295 a.
 William; 246 b.
 Brookes, Brooks :
 James and Samuel, soldiers in Ireland; 513 a.
 Job; 104 a.
 Capt. John; 253 a.
 Thomas, porter; 155 a, 155 b.
 Wm., quartermaster; 595 b.
 Brookesbancke, Mr., of Leeds; 275 b.
 Brookwood; 345 a, 345 b.
 Broome :
 Mr.; 254 a.
 Nehemiah, patent to; 248 a.
 Broomfield; 340 a.
 Broster, Richard, of Chester; 365 b.
 Brothertou, one, a tailor; 431 b.
 Brough :
 Lieut. Martin, his services as a Royalist; 500 b.
 — petition of his wife Elizabeth; 500 b, 533 a.
 Broughton :
 Lady; 159 a.
 G., consul, letter of; 47 b.
 J., letter of; 37 a.
 Mr. Justice; 49 b.
 Brouncker :
 Lord (1669), letter of; 131 b.
 C., letter signed by; 388 b.
 Brounkynghesthorpe, co. Leicester; 420 b.
 Brounfeld, Essex; 332 b.
 Browdrer, Adam; 629 b.
 Brown, Browne :
 —; 374 a.
 Colonel; 470 a.
 Lieut.-Col., letters of; 31 b.
 Major-General, governor of Newport Pagnell; 8 a, 9 b.
 Dr.; 231 a.
 — dissertation by; 475 b.
 Brown, Browne—cont.
 Mr.; 15 b.
 — letter of; 57 a.
 — counsellor-at-law; 232 a.
 — his wharf; 240 b.
 — of Leicester; 440 a.
 — connected with the Navy; 131 a.
 Mrs., of St. Paul's Churchyard; 228 b.
 Archibald, commissioner in Scotland; 83 a
 — letter of; 83 b.
 Christopher, of Kendal, will of; 333 a.
 Rev. D., letter of; 293 a.
 Dennis, his widow Beatrix; 550 b.
 Edward, player; 430 b.
 Dr. Edward, president of the College of Physician; 226 b,
 231 b.
 — his death and bequests; 231 b.
 Francis; 535 b.
 Gabriel, letters of; 531 a.
 Geoffrey; 605 a, 614 a.
 — petition of; 516 b.
 — and John; 543 b.
 George, presbyter, broadside by; 81 a.
 Hugh, of London, will of; 335 b.
 — of Panyer Alley, London, will of; 332 a.
 Capt. James, payment to; 526 a.
 James, his lands in Galway co.; 498 b.
 Lieut.-Col. James, letter of; 294 b.
 John; 156 a, 156 b.
 — information of; 157 a.
 — petition of; 516 b.
 — of the Mint; 65 b.
 — clerk of the Parliaments; 106 a.
 — letter to; 116 a.
 — petition of; 102 b.
 — documents signed by; 210 b.
 — of London, mercer; 420 a.
 — rector of Loughborough, letter of; 435 a.
 — of Wapping, captive; 241 b.
 — one of Duke of York's gentlemen waiters; 278 a.
 — ordnance founder, petition of; 244 b.
 — merchant, petition of; 507 b.
 Lieut. John; 594 b.
 Ensign Jonathan, letter of; 293 b.
 Mark, of Galway, petition of; 548 a.
 Martin, of Cloonfad; 466 b.
 Mary, her charge against L. Masterson; 539 a.
 Rd., letter of; 211 a.
 Rich., quartermaster; 596 b.
 Richard, letter of; 294 a.
 — an Irishman; 376 b.
 Sir Richard, of the Trinity House; 254 a.
 — chosen Master; 255 a.
 — letter to; 257 a.
 Robert, petition of; 514 a.
 — player; 430 b.
 — steward; 88 a.
 — defendant; 529 b.
 Sir T., his son Dr. Edward; 226 b, 231 b.
 Dr. Thomas, son of Dr. Edward; 230 a, 231 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 289 a.
 — prisoner; 545 a.
 — jun., vintner of London, will of; 332 b.
 Lieut.-Col. Thomas, letter of; 288 b.
 Valentine, apostate; 611 a.
 Fr. Valentine; 617 a.
 Sir Valentine; 503 b.
 William, letter of; 440 b.
 — poems by; 584 a.
 Brownlow :
 Mr., member of the Irish House of Commons; 178 a William, proposed Speaker of Irish House of Commons
 192 a.
 Sir William; 593 b.
 Brownsea Castle; 209 a, 209 b.
 Brownstown, lands of; 506 a.
 Broxburne, letter dated at; 209 b.
 Broyle Park, Sussex, Act for improvement of; 117 a.
 Bruay :
 Comte de, letter of; 37 a.
 Comtesse de, letter of; ib.
 Bruce :
 one, his influence over Irish Presbyterians; 177 b.
 Major, letter of; 295 a.
 Mr., commissioner in Scotland; 83 a.
 David, letter of; 323 b.
 Peter, D.D., letter of; 299 a, 303 a.
 Dr. R., letter of; 294 a.
 Robert, letter of; 294 b.
 — de, truce proclaimed with; 353 a.
 Brudenell :
 Lord (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Bruer, Gilbert de; 633 b.
 Bruère, Lt.-Governor, letters of; 289 a.

- Bruere :
 W., letters of; 290 a.
 M., letter of; 291 a.
 Bruffe, Major, before Belfast; 600 b.
 Bruges; 12 b, 338 b, 564 b.
 documents dated at; 28 a, 28 b, 584 a.
 bond by; 30 b.
 commandant of, letter of; 39 b.
 magistrates of, letters of; 37 a, 39 b. reduction of; 33 b.
 tin sold in; 92 b.
 Brugg, Will., monk of Canterbury; 339 b.
 Brugge, John de, parson of Wee; 626 a.
 Bruhe, Mr.; 220 b.
 Brumell, F., Esq., his MSS.; xx.
 Brumley, Hugh, trooper; 523 b.
 Brun, John de, priest, disability of; 350 b.
 Bruncker, John; 593 b.
 Brunerton, Thomas, soldier; 547 b.
 Brunham, John de; 358 b, 402 a.
 Brunker :
 Lord (1669); 128 b.
 H., petition of; 252 b.
 Brunkingthorpe, manor of; 414 b, 422 a.
 Brunman, William; 405 a, 408 b.
 Brunsell, Henry, prebendary of Ely, petitions of; 104 b.
 Brunswick; 285 a.
 Duke of (1623), defeated by Tilly; 215 b.
 — letters of (c. 1690); 31 a.
 — (1702); 41 a.
 — warrants by (1712); 14 b.
 — George (1713); 16 a.
 — (1765); 285 a.
 Prince of (1742); 571 b.
 the house of; 196 a.
 Lunenburg, Elector of (1706); 32 a.
 Bruntun, Lieut. James, letters of; 293 b, 294 a.
 Brus, Robert de, benefactor of Becket's shrine; 320 a.
 Brussells, James; 629 b.
 Brussels; 35 a, 212 b, 215 a, 218 b, 219 a, 242 b, 564 b.
 documents dated at; 17 b, 25 a, 29 b, 30 b, 38 a, 557 b.
 relief of (1708); 16 a.
 Conference and Council of State at (1711), letter of; 39 b.
 commandant of, letter of; 39 b.
 description of (1700); 61 b.
 Bruton; 335 a. subprior of; 264 a.
 Bruyn, Robert; 367 b.
 Bry, Robert, and Beatrix de; 636 b.
 Bryan :
 a prisoner, death of; 604 b.
 John; 611 b.
 John McJames, the governor of Maryborough; 610 b.
 Patrick; 613 a.
 — letters of; 614 b.
 — agent to Lord Muskerry; 616 a.
 Col. Teige, petitions of; 500 b, 551 b.
 Thomas, Chief Justice, will of; 332 b.
 Sir Wm., his case (15 Ric. II.); 169 b.
 Bryant, James, servant; 542 a.
 Bryce, B., letter of; 289 b.
 Brydges, J., paymaster, letters of; 31 b, 32 b, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b, 40 b, 57 a.
 Brygge, Joan, of Worcester, will of; 333 a.
 Brygges, Joan, of Salisbury, will of; 335 b.
 Bryllington, prior of; 271 a.
 Brymore, co. Dublin; 514 a.
 Brymstache, Thos. de; 367 b.
 Bryn, Wm.; 367 b.
 Brynge, Wm.; 281 b.
 Bubwith, Bishop, his almshouses at Wells, report on MSS. at; 638 b.
 Buerd, Wm.; 282 a.
 Buchan, James, Esq., his MSS.; xx.
 Buchanan, Capt. John, letter of; 290 b.
 Buck :
 Ferdinand, of Pontefract; 276 a.
 Nicholas, warder, petition of; 504 a.
 or Bush, Paul, a quack; 227 b.
 — letters in favour of; 228 a.
 Samuel, certificate signed by; 384 b.
 Will., tailor of London, will of; 333 a.
 Buckhounds; 279 b.
 Buckhurst :
 Lord, letter of (1592); 228 a.
 — letters of (1594); 377 b.
 — treasurer; 242 b.
 Buckingham; 334 b.
 Duke of, Henry Stafford (1481); 265 b.
 Buckingham, Marquis or Duke of (1619); 239 b, 581 a, 585 a.
 (1620), remonstrance to; 214 b. at Madrid with Prince Charles; 215 a. secret instructions to; 215 b.
 (1620), petition to; 240 a.
 petitions to (1621); 235 b, note, 241 a.
 speech of; 2 a.
 directions by (1622); 242 b.
 petitions to (1624); 241 b, 242 a.
 Buckingham, Duke or Marquis of—cont.
 letter of (1624); 242 a.
 letter to (1625); 217 a.
 petition to (1625); 436 a.
 commission to (1625); 209 a.
 letter to (1626); 217 b.
 letter of (1627); 243 a.
 Lord Bristol and; 217 a. notice of; 234 a.
 picture of; 237 a.
 George, second (14 Chas. II.); 275 a.
 (1666); 102 a.
 petitions, &c. of; 105 b, 106 b.
 his quarrel with Marquis of Dorchester; 106 b.
 petition of (1666); 102 b.
 his quarrel with Lord Butler; 102 a, 102 b.
 (1667); 114 b.
 (1668); 171 a, 173 a.
 report of; 167 a.
 (1669); 108 b.
 (1671); 161 b.
 letters of (1690); 31 a.
 letter of (1708); 45 b.
 Buckingham, Duchess of :
 (1641); 603 b.
 letter of (1714); 57 a.
 Buckingham, Lord, letters of; 195 b.
 Buckinghamshire : committee of, letter of; 8 b.
 Marquis of, Viceroy of Ireland (1778); 196 a.
 — letters of and to; 195 b, 200 b, 201 b, 204 a.
 Buckland, church of; xiii, 341 b, 637 a.
 rector of, excommunicated; 336 b.
 Buckle, Thomas, of Cambridge; 9 b.
 Buckler, Mr., of Cambridge; 9 a.
 Buckley :
 Mr.; 10 b, 27 a.
 Thomas, letter of; 10 a.
 — petition of; 147 a.
 Bucknell :
 alderman; 134 b.
 John, of the "Delight"; 241 a.
 Buckton :
 John, 379 a.
 — letter of; 379 b.
 Buckworth :
 Mr.; 134 b.
 John or Sir John, of the Mint; 66 b, 68 b, 70 b.
 Budd, Wm.; 374 a.
 Budden, George, of London, prisoner; 50 a.
 Budgell, Mr. or Es., letters of; 49 a, 57 a, 58 b, 59 a.
 Budock, Cornwall; 142 b.
 Budon; 413 a.
 Buenport, M., letters of; 39 b.
 Bulan, General, letters of; 32 a.
 Bulkeley :
 Lord (1788), letter of; 291 a.
 Richard, lands held by; 520 b.
 Thos., mayor of Bewarris, letter of; 398 b.
 Bull :
 Jacob; 123 a.
 John, junior; 123 a.
 — senior; 123 a.
 Nathaniel, of St. Paul's School; 439 b.
 Samuel, lands held by; 520 b.
 — agent for adventurers, petition of; 551 b.
 — of the Mint; 68 a.
 — his death; 68 b.
 Thomas, his heirs; 262 a.
 William; 367 b.
 — jurymen; 89 a.
 Bullen, family of, Ormonde title given to; 588 b.
 Buller :
 Colonel, at Clonmel; 549 b.
 J., letter of; 295 a.
 Bullet, Mons., of Besançon University; 480 b.
 Bulleyn, William; 227 a.
 Bullinge, Sir Henry, agreement of; 371 b.
 Bullock :
 customs at; 550 b.
 garrison at, in 1648; 594 a.
 Bullock, H. M., letter of; 24 a.
 Bulls, Papal; 317 a–354 b, passim.
 Bulmer; 335 b.
 Bulow, M., letters of; 36 b, 38 a, 39 b.
 Bulwyke, Philip (of London?), will of; 333 a.
 Bum boats, petitions against; 255 a.
 Bunbury :
 Sir C., MSS. of; xx.
 Sir Charles, letter of; 295 a.
 — commissioner of revenue; 59 a.
 Sir Henry; 394 a, 394 b.
 — letter of; 395 b.
 — letter to; 382 a.
 Bungay; 333 b, 334 a.
 Bunn, William, of Ratcliffe; 242 b.

Bunnage, Bunadage, Gabriel; 399 b, 400 a.
 Bunnell, Thos., of Brasenose College, Oxford, testimonial touching; 380 b.
 Bunt, Nicholas, of Fincham, will of; 334 a.
 Bunyan, John, his licence to preach as "a Congregational parson," exhibited at Leicester; 439 b.
 Bnoys, sea marks, &c., regulations, &c. concerning. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
 Burbach, Helyne de, of Leicester; 405 b.
 Burbache, William, of Thorp; 414 a.
 Burbadge, co. Leicester; 427 b.
 Burbage, Henry; 626 b.
 Barburg, documents dated at; 28 b.
 Burch, Robert de, of Leicester; 404 b.
 Burches, Hugo; 583 a.
 Burchett, Mr.; 49 b.
 — letter of; 33 a.
 J., letter of; 37 a.
 — letters of; 393 b.
 Josiah, of the Trinity House; 260 a.
 — letters of; 231 b, 232 a, 260 b.
 — of the Admiralty, letters to; 259 b.
 Burd, Joseph, of Dublin; 508 b.
 Burdet:
 John, of Leicester, conveyance by; 420 b.
 Sir John, commission to; 413 a.
 Lord Robert, witness; 410 b.
 William, witness; 406 a.
 Burdikin, Mr., of the Exeter Mint; 74 b.
 Bures, documents dated at; 404 b, 413 a.
 Burford, Eleanor; 154 b.
 Burges, Burgess, Burgeys:
 Dr., his meeting house; 47 a.
 Mr.; 210 b.
 David, letters of; 294 b, 295 b.
 Francis, jurymen; 89 a.
 Capt. H., letter of; 294 a.
 John, soldier; 545 b.
 Nicholas le, inquisition by; 406 a.
 — of Leicester, witness; 408 a.
 — conveyance by; 408 a.
 — his son; 410 b.
 — his widow, conveyances by; 410 a, 410 b.
 Robert, of Melton; 413 a.
 William, petition of; 521 a.
 Burgh; 333 a.
 in le Marsh, co. Lincoln; 265 a.
 Mr., letter to; 58 a.
 Adam; 268 a.
 Elizabeth, Lady, acts touching (temp. Henry VIII.); 102 a.
 John de; 341 b.
 T., letter of; 379 b.
 Burgherssch, Burghessche:
 Bartholomew de; 338 b.
 Sir Bartholomew de, junr.; 358 b.
 Robert de, excommunication of; 348 a.
 — seneschal; 350 b.
 Burghley, Lord:
 Treasurer; 376 a, 377 a, 378 b, 379 a, 379 b, 397 a, 397 b. mandate of; 376 b. letters of; 375 a, 376 a, 376 b, 377 b, 378 a, 380 a, 431 b.
 letters of and to; 583 b.
 letter to; 397 b.
 document signed by; 65 a.
 his house in the Strand; 376 a, 377 b, 378 a.
 his house at Theobalds; 380 a.
 his servant (1571); 227 a.
 Burgos; 193 a.
 Bargoyné:
 Lady, letter of; 291 a.
 Sir John; 6 a.
 — letter to; 3 a.
 — document signed by; 4 a.
 — order by; 3 a.
 — points and arguments in defence of his conduct (1783); 296 b.
 Peter, on Coventry committee; 7 b.
 Robert, letter of; 379 a.
 Robert, jurymen; 89 a.
 Burgundy, Duke of:
 his jewels (1602); 96 a.
 his army (1702); 17 b.
 Burke or De Burgo family, MS. history; 572 a, 582 b.
 Burke:
 his regiment under Louis XIV.; 46 a.
 Mr., an Irishman; 391 a.
 Edmund; 483 a, 483 b, 489 b.
 — letters of; 195 b, 199 b.
 — his pension on the Irish establishment; 479 a.
 Richard; 613 b.
 W., letter of; 294 a.
 Wm., Edmund's Cousin, the Honest William of Goldsmith's "Retaliation," letters of; 288 b.
 Barker, William, defendant; 529 b.
 Burlanachi, Philip, account by; 584 a.
 Burley:
 letter dated at; 568 a.

Burley—cont.
 James I. at; 441 b.
 William, petition of; 533 b.
 Burlington, Earl of:
 (1668); 166 a.
 his opinion of the Irish rebels (1691); 563 b.
 (1737); 18 b.
 his affairs (1737); 568 b.
 Burlington, Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Burlone, Henry de, corrody to; 2 a.
 Burton:
 B., letter of; 289 b.
 J., letter of; 294 a.
 J. P., letter of; 289 b.
 Burnaby, H., letter of; 40 a.
 Burnard, John, of Taunton, will of; 332 b.
 Burne:
 Abbot of, John, letter of; 269 a.
 Major, in Limerick; 601 b.
 John de, seneschal; 350 b.
 Robert of; 305 b.
 Burnet, Burnett:
 Mrs.; 26 a.
 Alexander, of Leys; 301 a.
 Bishop Gilbert; 26 a.
 — letters to; 26 a.
 — his history; 13 b.
 — extract from; 498 a, note.
 Sir J. H., his MSS.; xx.
 T., receipt by; 13 b.
 Thos., order to; 303 a.
 Burnham:
 Essex; 333 a.
 St. Gregory; 334 a.
 Thomas; 105 b.
 — petition of; 106 a.
 Burns, Robert, letter of; 289 b.
 Burows, Robert, of Hooton Pagnell; 687 b.
 Burr, one of, of Dublin, merchant; 540 b.
 Burrell:
 the attorney; 25 b.
 Mr.; 240 b.
 — letter of; 57 a.
 — a Commissioner of the Navy; 242 a.
 — of the Trinity House; 243 a.
 Rebecca, widow, petitions, &c. of; 160 b.
 Redmaine; 160 b.
 — indenture of; 160 b.
 William, letters of; 243 a, 244 a.
 Burridge, George; 249 a.
 Burrin, barony of; 508 b.
 Burriah, co. Catorlogh; 604 a.
 Burrishelew, lands of; 541 b.
 Burrosse, commander; 604 a.
 Burroughs:
 — widow; 401 b.
 Wm., letter of; 295 a.
 Burrow:
 Mr., preacher, of Leicester; 429 a.
 Reuben, letters of; 290 b, 293 b.
 Burrows, Burrowes:
 Captain; 594 a.
 Abraham, petition of; 509 b.
 Alexander, petition of; 51 a.
 Cosby, letter of; 290 b.
 Ensign Edw.; 594 b.
 Lieut.-Col. Sir Erasmus; 593 b.
 Ensign Francis; 592 b.
 Captain Richard; 594 b.
 Burton; 414 a.
 —; 193 b.
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Christopher, of Loughborough, will of; 335 a.
 Henry, papers relating to his case; 210 a.
 — petition of; 502 a.
 — petitions of his wife Elizabeth; 519 a, 527 a.
 John de, of Leicester; 421 a.
 John, rector of Garford; 271 a.
 Wm.; 397 a.
 Burton Lazars, document dated at; 347 a.
 Burtroun, Nicholas de, witness; 270 b.
 Burtt, Mr., of the Public Record Office; 213 a.
 Burujeres, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Burwell:
 Robert de, gift by; 323 a.
 Thomas, doctor of laws; 275 a.
 Bury St. Edmunds; 333 a, 335 a, 344 b.
 documents dated at; 346 b, 347 a.
 abbot of, apostolic letters to; 346 a.
 manor of; 322 b.
 monastery; 100 b.
 Bury:
 George, of Cranfield; 4 a.
 — his petition; 7 a.
 — his estate; 7 a.
 Thomas, of Lamberherst, will of; 340 b.

Busby :
 Dr., of Westminster School ; 558 b.
 Dr. Richard, of Westminster School ; 439 b.

Bush :
 — : 203 a.
 James, letter of ; 37 a.
 or Buck, Paul, a quack ; 227 b.
 — letters in favour of ; 228 a.

Bushell :
 Capt. ; 246 a.
 George, license farmer, petition of ; 505 a.
 — answer to ; 545 b.

Bushy, letters dated at ; 10 a.
 Bushy Park, letters dated at ; 201 b, 204 a.

Busini, William, witness ; 330 a.

Bussabat, a French officer ; 497 a.

Bussang, outrages at ; 214 a.

Bushe, John, of Steeple Morden, will of ; 332 b.

Bussy :
 M., letter of ; 39 b.
 Mr. de ; 285 b.

Bute :
 Marquis of, his MSS. ; xx.
 Earl of, his brother (1708) ; 45 b.
 — (1756) ; 222 b.
 — Mr. Pitt and (1756) ; 221 a.
 — his power ; 190 b.
 — (1762) ; 285 a.
 — wants to be Lord Chamberlain (1769) ; 191 a.

Butler :
 family in Ireland, alleged origin of ; 586 a.
 Lord, Thomas, petition of (1666) ; 102 b.
 — his quarrel with the D. of Buckingham ; 102 a, 102 b.
 Colonel ; 605 b.
 Dr., titular Metropolitan of Cashel ; 197 b, 198 a, 198 b, 199 a.
 Lord Cahir's brother ; 198 a.
 Lieut.-General ; 605 b.
 the Abbé ; 478 a.
 Corporal of Ormonde's troop ; 512 a, 536 a.
 Edmond ; 610 b.
 — his army ; ib.
 — killed ; 611 b.
 Capt. Edmond, report on petition of ; 535 b.
 Edward ; 497 a, 522 b, 537 a.
 — letter to ; 614 b.
 — trooper, petition of ; 522 a.
 — of Moynihora, petition of ; 508 a.
 Sir Edward, Lord of Galmoy ; 605 a.
 Sir Francis ; 533 a.
 George, ensign, petitions of ; 526 b, 528 a.
 James, of Killoshahan ; 535 b.
 — and Nathaniel ; 3 a, 6 b.
 Jo., his sons ; 6 b.
alias Ferrall, Joan ; 538 b.
 Mary, of Dublin, petition signed by ; 590 a.
 Pierre ; 74 a.
 Piers, Lord Dunboyne, petition of ; 548 b.
 Richard ; 606 b, 609 a, 610 a.
 — his oath ; 608 b.
 — of Killoshahan ; ib.
 — of Earl's Colne, will of ; 333 a.
 Col. Richard ; 495 b, 497 a.
 Thibott ; 605 b, 606 a.
 Thomas, Viscount Thurles ; 605 b.
 — son and heir of Jas. Duke of Ormonde, writ of summons to (1666) ; 101 a.
 Thomas, a Quaker, petitions of ; 502 a, 523 a.
 — receiver in Ireland, petition of ; 512 b.
 — petition of ; 521 a.
 — of Poularstown, his daughters and co-heirs ; 532 b.
 Sir W., of Bedfordshire ; 8 a.
 — letter to ; ib.
See Boteler.

Sir Walter ; 605 a, 610 b, 611 b.
 — his death ; 611 b.
 Sir William, his sons ; 3 a.
 William and Ellis, of Castletown ; 535 b.

Butler's Marston, co. Warwick ; 379 a.

Butt, William, physician ; 227 a.

Buttley, John, clerk, grant to ; 415 b.

Butter, Hugh ; 251 a.

Butterfylde :
 Harry, his traitorous speech ; 431 b.
 — examination of ; 432 a.

Butterworth, chapel ; 147 a.

Buttychyswordy, co. Devon ; 637 a.

Buwyk, Master John ; 266 a.

Buxton :
 —, execution at Clonmel of ; 481 b.
 John, a witness ; 155 a (note), 156 a, 156 b, 158 a.
 — letter, &c., of ; 157 b, 158 a.

Byas, M., letters of ; 32 b, 35 b, 36 a, 39 b.

Bydle, Richard ; 151 b.

Bylton, William, letters to ; 629 b.

Byrne, Riehd., 367 b.

Byng :
 Sir George, Admiral ; 17 a, 17 b, 48 b, 221 a.
 letters of ; 33 a, 47 b.
 at Ostend ; 33 a.
 in Plymouth Sound ; 54 b.
 his fleet ; 35 a.
 master of the Trinity House ; 260 b.

Bynham, John, of Leicester ; 415 b.

Bynion :
 Sir George ; 11 a.
 Thomas ; 124 b.
 Wm. ; 124 b.

Byrde :
 —, of Hackney ; 584 b.
 W., discourses by ; 584 b.

Byrle, John of, grant by ; 637 a.

Byrne :
 Edmond, petition of ; 536 b.
 Edmond McDavid ; 514 a.
 Edward and Edmond ; 522 a.
 Hugh McPhelim ; 603 a.

Byrnes, case of ; 582 a.

Byrom, Quartermaster Peter ; 595 b.

Byron :
 Lord (1648) ; 385 a.
 — (1669) ; 136 a.
 — Richard (1670), petition of ; 147 a.
 M., letter of ; 38 a.
 Sir Robert, his company ; 545 b.
 Wm. ; 123 a.
 — petition of, and report thereon ; 123 a, 123 b.

Bysbeton, William ; 273 a.

Byss, Byssie :
 Archdeacon, examinations by ; 574 b.
 Jo., certificate by ; 532 a.
 John, Lord Chief Baron, report by ; 511 b.
 R. ; 581 b.

C.

Cabal, the, in Ireland, about 1750, a history of ; 175 b, et seq.

Cabragh, co. Meath ; 499 a.

Cabragh ; 603 a.

Cachemay, Matthew, of Brailles, will of ; 335 a.

Cade, Gilbert called ; 265 a.

Cadiz ; 44 a, 50 b.
 expedition against ; 25 b.
 merchants at ; 257 a. malignant disease at ; 233 a.

Cadman, John, physician ; 230 a.

Cadogan :
 Lord, letter of (1714) ; 16 a.
 — letters of (1716, &c.) ; 40 b.
 — Marlborough's claims on ; 59 b.
 — (1729) ; 62 b.
 — (1735) ; 63 b.
 — his seat at Caversham (1771) ; 192 b.
 letter of ; 17 b.
 Brigadier, letters of ; 32 a.
 Major-General ; 33 b.
 Mr. ; 14 a.
 — letters of ; 35 b, 37 a, 38 a.
 Sergeant-Major ; 592 b.
 William, letters of ; 40 a, 40 b.

Cæsar :
 Sir Julius, Master of the Rolls ; 237 b, 239 a.
 — Admiralty Judge ; 245 b, 361 a.
 — letter of ; 434 b.
 — interview with ; ib.
 — report by ; 237 b.
 — his father ; 226 b.

Cage :
 Anne ; 140 a.
 Sir Anthony, deceased ; 140 a.
 Philip, deceased ; 161 a.
 Thomas ; 369 b.

Cahir :
 Castle ; 612 a.
 — defence of ; 578 b.
 Lord, his brother, Dr. John Butler ; 198 a.

Caillhou, the pears of ; 87 b.

Cairnes :
 Major, letter of ; 290 a, 290 b.
 Sir A., letter of ; 57 a.
 Lady, letter of ; 57 a.
 — letters to ; 26 a.

Caistor, Norfolk :
 lighthouse, &c. at ; 240 a, 242 b, 243 b, 251 b, 252 a, 254 a, 255 a, 256 b, 261 b.
 Sir John Fastolf at ; 268 a. inventory of goods and books at ; 268 a.

Caithness :
 Bishop of (1512), Stewart, receipt by ; 302 a.
 — (1532), Andrew ; 306 a.

- Caius :
Dr. John, President of the College of Physicians ; 226 a,
226 b, 227 a.
— annals written by ; xiv, 226 a, 226 b.
- Calais ; 27 b, 127 b, 244 a, 277 b, 334 b, 335 b. letters from ; 27 a.
letters dated at ; 336 a.
siege of ; 93 a.
ships of ; 242 a.
prisoners at ; 17 b.
tin sold in ; 92 b.
coach ; 218 b.
- Calandrini, Phil., and Charles I.'s jewels ; 553 b.
- Calbart, Captain Gylam ; 592 a.
- Calcraft :
Lieut., letter of ; 294 b.
John, letters of ; 225 b, 226 a.
- Calcutta ; 239 b, 293 a, 295 b.
documents dated from ; 289 a, 291 a, 294 b.
- Caideote, manor and church of ; 2 a.
- Caldewood, Mr., of Polton, his marriage ; 312 b.
- Caldoe, William, petition of ; 506 a.
- Caldwall :
Richard, M.D., President of the College of Physicians ; 227 a.
— licence to ; 234 b.
— his gift of lands ; 234 b, 235 a.
- Caldwall's lands, Lumley and ; 231 b.
- Caldwell, Capt., letters of ; 581 a.
- Caldye within our (Bristol) channel ; 379 b.
- Calehill, Kent, manor of ; 329 a.
- Cales, action off ; 239 a.
- Calestowne, co. Dublin ; 499 a.
- Calieres, M. de ; 559 a.
- Call :
Lieut.-Col., letter of ; 289 b.
Lieut.-Col. Thomas, letters of ; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 291 a.
- Callaghan, Francis, attainted ; 58 b.
- Callan :
Lord, his troop (1663) ; 517 a, 522 a, 523 b, 529 b.
Patrick ; 511 b.
Phillip Bane ; 511 b.
- Callen, assembly at ; 543 b.
- Callere, Robert le ; 633 a.
- Callières, —, letter of ; 558 a.
- Calstock, Cornwall, rector of ; 340 a.
- Calthorpe, Lord, MSS. of ; xx.
- Calton, Robert, of Norwich, will of ; 334 a.
- Caltragh, lands of ; 525 b.
- Calveley, Sir Hugh ; 365 b.
- Calvert :
George, letters of ; 380 b.
Sir George, letters to ; 214 a, 214 b.
— letters of ; 215 a, 215 b.
Thomas, letters of ; 289 b, 290 a.
- Calvo, M. de, letter of ; 38 a.
- Calway, John, trooper, petitions of ; 524 b, 541 b.
- Camae, W., letter of ; 290 b.
- Camague, lands of ; 506 a.
- Cambay :
chapter of, letter of ; 37 a, 39 b.
magistrates of, letter of ; 35 b.
deputy of the States at, letter of ; 39 b.
- Cambresius Eversus, by Archdeacon Lynch ; 457 a.
- Cambridge ; 155 b, 332 b–335 b, passim.
letters dated at ; 10 a.
committee, letter of ; 10 a.
garrison ; 9 a.
St. Botolph's church ; 61 a. county, justices of, charge against ; 46 b.
— horse to be raised by (1645) ; 8 a.
- Cambridge University :
Newton papers presented to ; xi.
discipline of ; 2 b.
proceedings against ; 219 b.
College of Physicians and ; 226 b.
Chancellor, &c. of, r. Mayor, &c. of Cambridge ; 169 b.
Jesus College ; 574 a.
Pembroke Hall ; 232 b.
St. John's College ; 232 a.
St. Peter's College ; 332 b.
— Abp. Wittelsley's legacy to ; 339 a.
Sidney Sussex College, letter dated at ; 11 a.
- Cambronne, M., letter of ; 38 a.
- Camen :
Lord, letter of (1792) ; 287 b.
William, the antiquary ; 582 b, 584 b.
— his Britannia ; 587 b.
Horse, son of Queen Anne at ; 53 a.
- Camelford ; 288 b.
- Camell :
Capt. Arth. ; 591 b.
— weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.
- Camera :
Phillip de ; 268 a.
Walter de, of Leicester ; 407 b.
- Cameron, one ; 40 b.
- Camma parish, co. Roscommon, lands in ; 518 a.
- Camoy, Lord, MSS. of ; xx.
- Camoy or Cameys, John de ; 170 a.
- Campbell :
— an Irishman ; 16 b.
Lady, letter of ; 289 b.
Major-General, letter of ; 289 a.
Mr., counsel for Crown (1827) ; 369 b.
Archibald, document signed by ; 13 a.
Sir Archibald, letters of ; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 292 b.
Colin, letters of ; 45 a.
Hume, his conditions for taking office ; 225 a.
Capt. J., letters of ; 295 b.
Capt. James, letters of ; 293 b, 294 b.
Captain John ; 596 a.
Genl. John, letter of ; 288 b.
Niel, letter of ; 290 b.
Patrick, a Dublin bookseller ; 14 a.
- Campden, Camdin, Viscount (1671) ; 440 a.
- Campden, Richard de, of Leicester ; 406 a, 406 b, 408 a.
- Campo, Marquis de, letters of ; 36 b, 37 a, 39 b.
- Camus, Madame, letter of ; 39 b.
- Canada :
river of ; 246 b.
Governor of (1684) ; 30 b.
- Canalotto, views by ; 63 a.
- Canary :
Islands, the ; 17 b, 257 a.
Company, the, patent declared illegal ; 102 b.
wine ; 253 a, 254 a, 256 b.
- Canbury, document dated at ; 403 a.
- Candalle, Duc de, letter to ; 218 a.
- Candia, Governor of ; 22 b.
- Candles used in lighthouses ; 243 b.
- Candlesby, co. Lincoln, charters relating to ; 264 b, 266 a.
- Candy ; 239 b.
wines of ; 246 b.
- Canewdon, Essex ; 262 b.
- Cannington ; 335 a.
- Cannitz, Prince (1767) ; 488 a.
- Cannons Town, co. Meath ; 499 a.
- Canon Frome, co. Hereford ; 101 b.
- Canterbury, 127 b, 232 a, 334 b.
documents dated at ; 61 a, 260 b.
mayor of, letter to ; 47 a.
Jew banished from ; 347 a. ransomed from the Danes ; 324 a.
Chartae Antiquae at, description of ; 15 a.
Burgate ; 352 a.
Eastbridge Hospital ; 342 a, 342 b.
city walls ; 318 b, 319 a. grammar school ; 339 a.
Prerogative Court of ; 361 a.
Queeningate Lane ; 318 b, 319 a.
St. Alphege parish ; 319 b.
St. Andrew's parish, Crown inn in ; 319 b.
St. Augustine's Abbey ; 317 a, 318 a, 318 b, 319 a, 320 b, 321 a, 326 b, 337 a, 341 a, 346 a, 348 a, 349 b, 350 a, 350 b
St. Blaise's altar ; 317 b, 320 a.
St. Dunstan's altar ; 317 b, 320 a.
St. Edmund de Redyngate church ; 337 b.
St. Elphege, rector of ; 340 a.
St. Elphege's altar ; 317 b, 320 a.
St. Gregory's Priory ; 327 a, 338 a.
St. John le Poor, parish of ; 337 a.
St. Mary of Bethlehem ; 338 b.
— monastery "de Alto Passu" ib.
St. Mary Bredin Church ; 337 b.
St. Mary de Castro, parish of ; 337 a.
St. Mary Magdalen church ; 339 a.
St. Mildred's mill ; 342 b.
St. Nicholas, Northgate hospital ; 343 a.
— Harbledown hospital ; 343 a.
St. Peter's rectory ; 319 b.
St. Sepulchre's nunnery ; 327 a, 337 a, 337 b.
tomb of St. Thomas ; 317 a, 317 b.
— oblations of ; ib.
- Canterbury, Archbishop of :
Dunstan ; 322 b, 328 b.
Siricius ; 324 a.
Athelstan ; 324 a.
Elphege ; 322 b, 324 a.
Stigand ; 328 b.
Anselm ; 317 a, 318 b.
— charters of ; 319 b.
Ralph, charters of ; 319 b.
William, legate ; 317 a.
Theobald ; 317 a, 323 a, 328 b, 329 b.
— his will ; 319 b.
See Becket, Thomas.
Baldwin ; 317 b, 326 b, 328 a, 330 b, 341 b.
— charter of ; 319 b.
Hubert ; 317 b, 320 a, 586 a.
Stephen Langton ; 330 a.
— charters, &c. of ; 319 b, 323 a.
Richard, legate ; 316 b, 317 a, 328 a, 330 b, 341 b.
Edmund ; 317 b, 320 a.

Canterbury, Archbishop of—cont.

- Edmund, charters of; 319 b.
 - Boniface; 320 b, 341 a.
 - charters of; 320 a, 344 a.
 - Kilwardby; 320 b, 327 b, 344 b, 345 a, 353 b.
 - Peckham; 320 a, 320 b, 326 b, 327 a, 329 b, 344 b, 345 a.
 - Winchelsey; 318 a, 336 b, 344 b, 347 a, 350 a, 350 b, 351 a.
 - outrage on; 349 b.
 - his canonization; 353 b, 354 a.
 - inventory of his "chapel"; 347 a.
 - his disputes with the archbishop of York; 351 b, 352 b.
 - Walter Reynolds; 321 b, 352 b, 353 a, 354 b, 633 a.
 - Simon Mepham; 320 a.
 - John Stratford; 330 a, 336 b, 337 a, 342 b.
 - Simon Islip; 324 a, 326 b, 328 a, 337 a, 338 a, 339 a, 341 a, 343 a.
 - college founded by; 324 a.
 - dispute with archbishops of York settled by; 320 a.
 - Simon Langham, short history of; 338 a.
 - his re-election; 339 a, 339 b.
 - cardinal and bishop of Palestrina; 338 b.
 - Wm. Wittlesey; 328 b, 338 b, 340 a, 349 a.
 - his will; 339 a.
 - Simon Sudbury; 339 a.
 - letter of; ib.
 - murder of; 339 b.
 - his will; 340 a.
 - Wm. Courtenay; 330 a, 340 a.
 - Thos. Arundel; 318 b, 319 b, 320 b, 323 b, 324 a, 328 b, 340 a - charter of; 320 a.
 - his will; 340 b.
 - John (1447); 634 a.
 - (1452), conveyance to; 268 a.
 - (1480); 625 b.
 - cardinal (13 Edw. IV.); 415 b.
 - Chichele; 323 b, 336 b, 340 b.
 - Henry Deane; 331 a.
 - death of (1500); 331 b.
 - his will; 334 b.
 - Morton, death of (1502); 331 b.
 - Warham; 331 b.
 - his dispute with Hen. VIII. and the bishops; 336 a.
 - (1587), document signed by; 227 b.
 - (1590), commission of; 361 a.
 - (1592), letter of; 228 a.
 - (1601), Simon Forman and; 228 b.
 - document signed by (1 611); 88 b.
 - (1617), letter of; 435 b.
 - (1622), G., letters of; 2 a.
 - Laud, (1634); 229 b.
 - (1636), document signed by; 209 b.
 - (1637), letter of; xiii, 209 b.
 - Wm. Juxon; 113 b.
 - deceased; 117 a.
 - (1662); 251 b.
 - Sheldon (1666), commission to; 101 a.
 - (1667); 107 a.
 - the late (1668); 121 a.
 - (1670); 254 b.
 - Dr. Sancroft; 566 a.
 - (1687); 230 b.
 - the non-juring, Spinkes; 27 a.
 - Thomas (1707), letter signed by; 395 a.
 - letter of (1727); 62 a.
 - Wake, letter of (1730); 100 b.
 - Dr. Moore, letters of; 57 b.
- Canterbury :
- archdeacon of, a foreign boy made; 350 b.
 - Black Book of; xx.
 - court of, registrar of; 634 b.
 - dean and chapter of, manuscripts belonging to, Mr. J. B. Sheppard's report on; 315 a, et seq.
 - dean of, Dr. Stanhope; 260 b.
- Cantilupo, Wm.; 357 b.
- Cantwell, Mr.; 482 b.
- Canvan, Morris, petition of 504 a.
- Cape, North; 239 b.
- Capel, Brigadier; 32 a.
- Capella :
- Barthol. de, licence to; 263 b.
 - Sir Henry de, agreement by; 263 b.
- Capelyne, William, agreement by; 260 b.
- Capemaker, Wm.; 367 b.
- Caperquinn; 604 b.
- Capes, Arthur; 114 b.
- affidavit of; 114 b.
- Capeyre, Francis; 143 a.
- Caple, Richard, petition of; 504 a, 504 b.
- Cappe, John, steward of Leicester guild; 416 a.
- Capper :
- Col. J., letter of; 293 b.
 - Col. F., letters of; 294 a.
 - Col., letters of; 294 a.
- Caps, kerchiefs, and hats, order correcting irregularities of women wearing; 363 b.
- Capynger, Robert, of Woolpit, will of; 335 a.
- Caraza or Caracion, Marquis de; 28 b.
- Carbery, Earl of (1670), privilege case; 140 a.

Card-playing, order; 368 b.

Cardenas, Don Alonzo de; 28 b.

Cardiff :

- letter dated at; 211 b.
- relief of; 11 b.
- ship-money assessment; 383 a.

Cardigan :

- ship-money; 383 a.
- Earl of (1668); 166 a.
- letters of (1707); 32 b.
- letter of (1709); 37 a.
- (1715); 40 b.
- letter of (circ. 1717); 57 a.

Cardonnel, A., secretary to Duke of Marlborough ; letters of, and to; 1 a, 12 a, 26 a, 35 b, 36 a, 40 b, 44 a.

Secretary at War; 14 b.

memorial to; 41 a.

Cardross, garrison of; 310 a.

Careless, Capt.; 156 a.

Carent, William, seal of; 639 a.

Carew :

- Col., MSS. of; xx.
- Will., knt., of Bury St. Edmund, will of; 323 a.

Carey :

- Capt.; 194 a.
- Lieut. David; 595 a.
- Lieut.-Col. James, commission to; 289 a.
- Michael, of Philadelphia, his opinion of the Irish "depositions"; 575 b.
- Symonah, Naturalisation Act; 146 a.
- Walter, of the Mint; 61 a.
- barony of; 581 a.

Caribbee Islands, grant of; 585 a.

Carington; 6 a.

Carington, Richard, trooper, petition of; 517 a.

Carion, Madame, letter of; 39 b.

Caris, M., letter of; 36 b.

Carisbrook; 335 a.

registers of; xx.

Castle, Charles I. at; 217 b.

Carle, Mariote, wife of Robt. de; 168 a, 172 a.

Carleton, near Chellington; 3 a.

constable of; 5 a.

Carleton :

- George (1641), documents signed by; 589 a, 589 b.
- Gilbert, clerk and vicar of Farningham, will of; 332 b.
- W., witness; 344 b.

Carlike, James, warrant to pay; 281 a.

Carlingford :

- surrender of; 599 b.
- Earl of, Theobald, petition of; 501 a.
- petitions of (1663); 503 a; 549 b.
- lands given to; 497 b.
- grant to; 499 a.
- grant to; 551 a.
- Count Tasse's descent from; 452 a, 452 b.

Carlisle; 212 a, 562 a.

document dated at; 347 b.

surrender of; 8 b, 569 a.

military assembly at; 347 b.

parliament at (1306); 350 b.

ship money; 383 a.

Carlisle, Bishop of :

- (35 Edw. I.); 165 b.
- (28 Hen. VI.) Marmaduke; 635 b.
- (1520); 357 b.
- (1713), Nicholson; 213 a.
- dean and chapter of, MSS. of; xx.

Carlisle, Earl of :

- James, grant to; 585 a.
- his secretary (1635); 246 a.
- Charles, marshal (1702); 86 b.
- letters of (1707); 32 b.
- and Lady, letters of; 54 a.
- Lord Sunderland and (temp. Geo. I.); 49 b.

Carlton :

- James, quartermaster; 596 a.
- Cornet Thom.; 596 a.

Carlos, Colonel; 120 a, 120 b, 254 a.

Carlow, Catherlogh; 522 b.

inhabitants, petition of; 512 b.

Lord Kildare's troop at; 522 a.

Castle; 502 b.

— prisoners in; 530 a, 534 b.

— country, specification of lands in; 520 b.

— specification of Lord Esmond's lands in; 526 b.

— James II.'s lands in; 497 b.

— losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.

— depositions relating to; 573 b.

— papers relating to affairs in (1798-9); 584 a.

Carlyle, Richard; 367 b.

Carmarden, Richard; 375 b.

Carmarthen; 140 a.

gaol; 46 a.

county, ship money assessment; 383 a.

— Steele's leases in; 24 a.

Marquis of, letters of (1705); 31 b.

— (1708); 35 a.

- Carmelites, the Discalciati; 612 b.
 Carnac, Genl. J., letter of; 295 b.
 Carnanbregy, co. Louth, lands of; 532 a.
 Carnarvon; 400 a.
 ship money; 383 a.
 Carnbee; 307 a.
 Carnegie, Carnegie:
 Capt., letter of; 295 b.
 Sir Alexander, of Balmamone; 302 b.
 Sir John, of Craig, licence to; 302 b.
 Carny, lands of; 306 b.
 Carolhorne (?), co. York; 271 b.
 Carolina, North:
 militia paroles, list of (1781); 289 a.
 Lutherans sent to (1709); 47 a.
 Caroline, Queen, the Duchess of Marlborough and; 18 a.
 Caron:
 Redmond; 607 a, 610 a, 610 b, 612 a, 612 b.
 Madlle. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Carothers, George, quartermaster; 596 b.
 Carpenter:
 Mr., letters of; 36 b, 38 a.
 Dr., Popish Archbishop of Dublin; 197 b, 198 a.
 — letter of; 488 a.
 Mr.; 485 b, 487 a, 487 b, 488 a.
 Mr. or Dr.; 489 b, 490 a, 491 a, 491 b, 492 b.
 — letters to; 490 a, 490 b.
 Dr. John, Catholic Archbishop of Dublin; 483 b, 484 b.
 John, of Mullingar, petition of; 518 b.
 Capt. Philip, serjeant-at-arms; 513 a, 514 b, 516 a, 525 a, 531 b, 538 b, 541 b.
 — petition of; 528 a.
 Richard, priest, of Ramsbury, will of; 335 a.
 Carr:
 Lady, pensioner of Duke of York; 279 a.
 Charles, of Chattoe, in custody; 46 b.
 Sir George; 532 a.
 Henry, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 Sir Henry; 239 a.
 Leonard, of Newcastlle; 240 b.
 Sir Robert; 167 b.
 Robert, of the Angel, Leicester; 432 a.
 Thomas, petition of; 508 a.
 — curate of Millbrooke; 5 b.
 — articles against; 5 b.
 Wm., petition of; ix, 115 a.
 Carradrumruske, siege of; 609 b.
 Carrell, —, letter to; 23 b.
 Carrick, Earl of, Edmund Walter; 587 a, 588 a.
 Carrickfergus; 102 a, 493 b, 603 a.
 orders for relief of garrison (1597); 397 b.
 Castle; 511 b.
 Carrickneveer; 535 b.
 Carrig, surrender of; 611 b.
 Carroll:
 Lieut.; 616 b.
 Daniel; 616 a, 617 b.
 Col. Daniel; 617 b.
 Carrow; 334 a.
 Carruthers family, of Holmains, MSS. of; xx.
 Carsbalton; 335 b.
 Carte:
 Mr., his unpublished history of Leicester; 404 a.
 Thos., his history; 463 b.
 — his life of Ormonde; 580 b.
 Carter:
 Christopher, commissioner; 275 b.
 Gilbert, quartermaster; 521 a.
 James, of Plymouth; 239 b.
 John, man killed by; 349 b.
 Richard; 105 b.
 — petition of; 106 a.
 Thomas, Master of the Rolls in Ireland, Archbishop Stone and; 176 a, et seq.
 — his wit and vivacity in society; 178 a.
 — succeeded by Henry Singleton; 179 a.
 — appointed secretary for Ireland; 180 a.
 Timothy, debt due to; 212 a.
 Wm.; 137 b, 138 a.
 — mem. of; 138 a.
 Carteret:
 Lord, document signed by (1723); 91 a.
 — (1751); 284 b.
 Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Dr.; 511 a.
 Sir G., vice-treasurer of Ireland; 50 b. or Cartwright, Sir George; 249 b.
 — of the Trinity House; 252 b, 253 a.
 — late treasurer of the navy (1669), letters, statements, &c. touching navy accounts; viii, 128 a-133 a.
 Sir George; 582 a.
 Carthagea, malignant disease at; 233 a.
 Cartwright:
 Capt., letter of; 40 a.
 or Carteret, Sir George; 249 b.
 J., of London, letter to; 217 b.
 Thomas, of Leicester; 419 a.
 Carty, Daniel, proceedings of; 603 a.
 Carvajal, Mons. de, letter to; 284 a.
 Cary, Carie:
 George, collector, co. Donegal; 530 a.
 James, clerk, petition of; 549 a.
 Mathew, licence farmer, petitions of; 516 a, 543 b, 551 a.
 — of Navan; 546 b.
 Sir Thomas, his son Patrick; 521 a.
 Carvill:
 Patrick; 511 b.
 Patrick Roe; ib.
 Case, Capt., of the Trinity House; 252 b.
 Casement, J., letter of; 290 a.
 Cashel:
 Metropolitan of (1778), titular; 197 b.
 the Psalter of; 585 b.
 Casket, the, lights at; 261 b.
 Cason, Sir Henry, his estate; 4 a, 4 b.
 Caspian Sea, the; 23 a.
 Cassan:
 city of; 23 a.
 Stephen, letter of; 290 b.
 Cassindoly, co. Fife, lands of; 304 b, 307 a.
 Castano, M., letters of; 37 a, 38 a.
 Casteau Cambresis, letter dated at; 28 a.
 Castele, Michael; 543 b.
 Castell:
 his Arabic lexicon; 226 a, 230 a.
 Michael, his heir; 13 a.
 Castells, Capt. Alexand.; 591 b.
 Castile; 17 a. constable of; 95 a, 97 a.
 — his visit to London; 98 a.
 King of, John of Gaunt; 412 b.
 Castle, Col. at Dundalk; 599 a.
 Castleacre, Norwich; 334 a.
 Castlebar, dedication dated from; 448 b.
 Castle Cary; 335 b.
 Castleconnell:
 proceedings of; 603 a.
 Lord, his lands in Limerick; 498 b.
 Castle Dermott, tithes of; 536 a.
 Castle Donington, co. Leicester; 418
 Castleford, co. York; 276 b.
 Castlehaven, Lord:
 letter of; 582 a.
 Mervin (1631); 585 a.
 his proceedings in Ireland (1641-50); 603 b, 604 a, 604 b 607 a, 607 b, 610 b, 611 b, 612 b.
 petition of (1670); 140 a.
 Temple's history impugned by (1685); 573 b, 575 a.
 Castlehaven:
 Countess of (1669); 137 a.
 deposition respecting; 137 a.
 Castlekeely lands, co. Kildare; 505 a.
 Castleknock, church town of; 550 a.
 Castleleeken; 613 a.
 Castlemaine, Lady, petition of; x.
 Castle Martin, co. Kildare, garrison at, in 1648; 595 a.
 Castle Menzies; 313 b.
 Castlereas; 474 a.
 Castlereagh:
 concealed lands of; 531 a.
 Viscount, letter of (1806); 296 b.
 letter of (1809); 287 b.
 Castle Ring manor, co. Louth; 508 a.
 Castles, Colonel; 591 a. weekly pay of his troop; 597 a.
 Castle Stuart, Lord of, his regiment; 593 b.
 Castleton, Viscount, George (14 Chas. 2); 275 a.
 Castletown; 535 b.
 co. Galway; 522 b.
 co. Meath; 519 b.
 Kendalena, rectory of; 516 a.
 Castlolla; 617 a.
 Catalonia; 17 a, 32 b, 218 a.
 Imperial troops in; 36 a.
 French army in; 39 b.
 Catcher:
 William, of Enfield; 416 a.
 — complaint against; 271 b.
 Catelyn, Will., of West Malling, will of; 332 b.
 Cates, Thomas, requisition by; 432 b.
 Catesbie, Robert, conspirator; 434 a.
 Catesby, Will., lease to; 265 b.
 Cathcart, Earl, MSS. of; xx.
 Cathcrall:
 Frances, grant to; 362 a.
 Samuel, late of Oriel College, Oxford; 362 a.
 Catherine, the Royal, ship; 251 b.
 Cathrigh. See Carlow.
 Catholics, Roman; 391 a. of Ireland, pamphlets, &c. See O'Connor, Charles. and Jacobites in Ireland, treatment of; 442 a.
 Irish, their alleged share in the rebellion (1641); 573 a. register of estates of (temp. Geo. I.); 401 a.

Catholics, Roman—cont.

- clergy in Ireland to be appointed by the Crown, scheme for; 198 b.
- Catly, Mrs., tenant at Leicester; 433 a.
- Cattle, Bill against the importation of (1668), amendments; viii, 120 a.
- Cattrell, Tho., petition of; 504 a.
- Catya, Stephen de la; 373 b.
- Caulfield, Col., exchange of; 35 a.
- Caulfield, Col., letter of; 37 a.
- Cauly, Abraham; 279 b.
- Cavallier, M., elector of Cologne, letters of; 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
- Cavan; 496 a, 497 b.
- county, losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
- skirmishes in (1652); 602 a.
- Earl of, his troop (1648); 596 b.
- Cavacagh, his regiment; 497 a. See Kavanagh.
- Cave:
- Mr., of Leicester; 428 a.
 - Sir Alex., high sheriff of co. Leicester; 436 a.
 - Francis, candidate for Leicester; 431 b.
 - Thomas, instructions by; 582 a.
 - sheriff of co. Leicester, writ of; 432 b.
 - letter to; ib.
- Cavell:
- Mary, petition of; 148 a.
 - Wm., deceased; ib.
 - petition of; ib.
- Cavenach, an Irishman; 16 b.
- Cavendish:
- Lady Arabella, letter of; 57 a.
 - George, his history of Wolsey; 585 a.
- Caversham, Lord Cadogan's seat at; 192 b.
- Caverson, M., letter of; 38 a.
- Caviare; 254 a.
- Cawdor, Earl, MSS. of; xx.
- Cawfield, Col., a prisoner; 33 a.
- Cawsell, Thomas, of Wallington, will of; 334 a.
- Cawston alias Rylyng, John, will of; 333 a.
- Caxton:
- his works, collection of; 92 b.
 - work printed by; 234 a.
- Caynbridge, John, of Leicester, his submission; 422 b.
- Cayrua, Richard, of Leicester; 405 b.
- Caysho, land in; 1 b.
- Cazal; 561 b.
- Caze, M. de la, letter of; 39 b.
- Cazier de Bermont, Madame, letter of; ib.
- Cecil:
- Lord; 105 b.
 - letters of (1603); 583 b.
 - commissioner (1604); 95 a, 95 b.
 - Sir Robert, letter of; 282 b.
 - letter of; 398 a.
 - letter to; ib.
 - his possessions in Edmonton, Tottenham, and Enfield; 635 a.
 - Sir William, letters to; 583 b.
- Ceely, Oliver; 164 b.
- Celestine, pope; 298 b.
- Celestine III., pope, bulls of; 317 a, 317 b.
- Celestine V., pope, bull of; 318 a.
- apostolic letters of; 344 b.
- his nuntius, salary of; 345 b.
- Cell, letter dated at; 27 a. See Zell.
- Cernay, Comtesse de, letter of; 39 b.
- Certiorari, writs of:
- Act to prevent abuses in granting (1667); 113 a.
 - reports on (1668); 116 a, 116 b.
- Cestria, Richard de, witness; 270 a.
- Cevennes, the; 16 b, 20 b, 36 b, 50 b.
- Chabert, Peter, letter of; 295 b.
- Chance, Thomas, master of Balliol; 340 b.
- Chaddeley; 335 b.
- Chaffin, John, prisoner, petition of; 534 b.
- Challoner:
- John le; 367 b.
 - Roger le; 367 b.
 - Thos. le; 367 b.
 - William le; 367 b.
 - William, coiner, petitions, &c., of; 72 a.
- Chalmers, Lieut. J. M., letter of; 295 b.
- Chalons; 218 a.
- letter dated at; 218 a.
- Chamberlain, Chamberlayne:
- readings on statutes by; 584 b.
 - Dr., his project; 229 b.
 - his baths; 230 a.
 - Mr., saddler; 523 b.
 - Francis; 279 a.
 - Ensign George; 592 a.
 - John; 115 b.
 - petition of; 115 b.
 - Matthew, his wife, a naife; 632 a.
 - Richard; 115 b.
 - petition of; 115 b.
 - deceased, late clerk of Court of Wards; 115 b.
 - Robert, petition of; 518 b.
 - "peauter"; 627 b.

Chamberlain, Chamberlayne—cont.

- Thomas; 115 b.
 - petition of; 115 b.
 - of Leicester; 411 a.
 - Sir Will., his marriage; 268 a.
- Chamberlain of a monastery, articles provided by; 343 b.
- Chambers:
- Capt.; 530 b.
 - Mr., petition of; 78 b.
 - Frances Lady, letter of; 293 b.
 - Capt. John; 527 b.
 - petition of; 502 a.
 - Leonard, trooper; 536 b.
 - Sir Robert, letter of; 289 b, 294 a.
 - Thomas, letter of; 77 b.
 - his proposals; 77 a.
 - Lient. Thomas; 593 a.
 - Sir Thomas; 166 a.
 - Capt. William, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
- Chambery; 31 a.
- Chamblot:
- Samuel, of the Trinity House; 259 a.
 - address signed by; ib.
- Chambre:
- John, physician; 234 b.
 - Cornet John; 597 a.
 - Robert, chaplain; 596 b.
- Chambrier, M., letter of; 38 a.
- Chambyr, John, canon of Chichester, will of; 335 a.
- Chamier, J., letter of; 294 a.
- Chamillart, M., letter of; 37 b.
- Champain, John, letter of; 290 b, 294 b.
- Champard, Stephen, iron work done by; 634 a.
- Champion:
- Henry; 139 a.
 - J., letters of; 291 a, 293 b.
- Champré, M. Menardeau; 564 a.
- Chancellor, the Lord (1666), commission to supply place of, in H. of Lords; 101 a.
- Chanclos, M., letters of; 36 b, 38 a.
- Chandernagore; 293 b.
- Chandler, his life of Waynflete; 266 a.
- Chandley:
- Sir John; 169 b.
 - Jeanne, late wife of preceding; 169 b.
- Chandos, Lord (1670); 174 b.
- Chandos:
- Duke of, letters of; 54 a.
 - (1720); 72 a.
- Chandos, M. de, letters of; 35 b, 39 b.
- Chani, William de, witness; 1 b.
- Channel, the British; 254 a.
- Chanterel, Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
- Chantries, &c. founded in St. Paul's Cathedral, documents relating to; 633 a, et seq.
- Chapel Izard; 505 a.
- Chapeleyn, Robert, of Wymondham, will of; 333 b.
- Chaplan, Elias, vicar of St. Ethelbert's, Hereford; 635 b.
- Chapleyn, Thomas, of Bungay, will of; 334 a.
- Chapman:
- Anne, widow; 154 b.
 - Ensign Benjamin; 594 a.
 - Charles, letter of introduction by Warren Hastings; 292 b.
 - John; 11 a.
 - of Compton Martin, will of; 332 b.
 - of Coggeshall, will of; 335 b.
 - Richard; 281 b.
 - Robert, letter of; 295 b.
 - Thomas, of Leicester; 420 b.
 - William le, inquisition by; 406 a.
- Chappell:
- lands; 252 a.
 - Charity, of Armagh, deposition of; 576 a.
 - John, of Worcester; 638 b.
- Chare, John, condemned to death; 46 b.
- Charing, Kent; 338 b.
- Charing, Adam de, hospital founded by; 341 b.
- Charlemont; 495 a.
- taking of; 603 a.
 - Earl of, MSS. of; xx.
 - Lord (1708), his complaint against Lord Peterborough; 36 a.
- Charles I.:
- grant by; 361 a.
 - his marriage; 1 a.
 - in Spain; 2 b.
 - his voyage to Spain; 585 a.
 - his visit to Leicester; 434 b.
 - letters of, &c. concerning his match with the Infanta; xiii., 215 b, 216 a, 216 b.
 - money furnished to; 215 b.
 - letter of (1626); 217 a.
 - letter to (1626); 217 b.
 - letters of (1630); 244 b.
 - letter of; 2 b.
 - charters of; 403 a, 582 b, 585 a.
 - grants of; 585 a.
 - proclamation by; 246 a.
 - writ of; 418 b.
 - his accession, &c., celebrated in Leicester; 429 a.

Charles I.—cont.

his visit to Leicester (1634); 436 b.
at Turbury (1636); 427 b.
his jewels, Job Harly, Calandrin, and (1626); 553 b. jewels pawned in the Low Countries by (1625); xiii, 209 a.
Lord Denbigh's present of a horse to (1637); 552 b.
letters of (1639); 552 b.
his interference in a sea fight; 253 b, 255 b.
speech of (1640); 584 b.
his consent to Lord Strafford's execution; 176 b. at Leicester (1642); 437 a. letter of, to mayor, &c., of Leicester; ib.
at Newark; 9 b. at Oxford; 3 a, 212 b. at Henneby (Holmby?); 429 a. at Newcastle; ib.
the Treaty of Ripon; 383 b. at Carisbrook Castle; 217 b.
picture of; 257 a.
his pictures and statutes; 1 b.

Charles, Prince, afterwards Charles II., letters of; 213 a.

Charles II.:

Memoire by, concerning his proposed descent upon England (1656); 28 b.
at the Hague; 99 b. at Brussels (1657); 154 a.
orders signed by (1656–57); 28 a.
document signed by (1657); 29 a. commission by (1657); 28 b.
letters patent of; 361 b.
documents signed by; 211 a.
proclamation by; 30 a.
his restoration; 438 b. letters, &c. to and from; 219 a. proposed loan to; ib.
letter to; 219 b.
grants by; 257 a, 261 b.
warrant by; 90 a.
his grant to the Duchess of Portsmouth; 632 a. slandorous words against (1663); 538 b. plot in Ireland against (1663); 500 a. thanked for his management of the war (1666); 101 a.
treaty of; 1 b.
his declaration for the settlement of Ireland; 509 b.
letters of (1667); 253 b.
money expended in service of, and lent to, by the late Marquess of Worcester; 111 b.
declaration of in Council, touching pardon in cases of duels (1668); 122 b.
petition to, of Parliament on the growth of popery; 164 b. message of, to both Houses of Parliament (1670); 174 a. extends his mercy to Quakers (1672); 390 a. treaties with (1681); 26 b.
congratulations on his escape (1683); 230 b, 258 b.
his illness and death; 259 a, 440 b.
picture of; 257 a.
the six under marshals of His Majesty's household, petition of; 144 a.
Sergeants-at-arms attending, petition of; 144 a. lists of officers, &c. of his household; 284 a.
his guard; 129 a.
privy purse; ib.
debts; ib.
buildings and gardens; ib.
jewels; ib.

Charles, Prince, his renunciation and pension (1707); 16 b.

Charles Edward, Prince, pass by; 313 b.

Charles, Prince, of Denmark, letters of; 31 a.

Charles, Archduke, letters of; 25 a.

Charles:

King of Spain, letters of; 25 a.
letter of (1706); 58 a.

Charles V., emperor; 22 b.

Charles:

Elizabeth, of Cambridge, will of; 335 a.
Nicholas, Lancaster herald; 383 b.

Charleton, Charlton:

Dr., censor; 231 b.
Mr., letter of; 57 a.
John, clerk of a troop; 541 b.
Jon., letter of; 89 b.
Dame Mary, affidavit of; 116 a.
Dr. Walter, death of; 231 b.

Charlotte:

Queen of England, has given birth to a prince (1763); 286 a.
Lord Taaffe and (1767); 488 b.

Charlotte Augusta Matilda, Princess Royal, letter of; 57 b.

Charlotte, the yacht; 257 a, 394 a.

Charminster; 335 a.

Charm, Baldewyn de, witness; 404 b.

Charnel, Sir John de, indenture by; 412 a.

Charnock:

Sir George, sergeant-at-arms, letters of; 391 a.

— order to; ib.

Robert, of Westwoning, letter to; 2 b.

Charter, Marie, deposition of; 46 b.

Charters, Samuel, letters of; 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.

Chart:

lands in; 319 a.

East, lands in; ib.

Great and Little, manors of; 329 a.

Chartham:

manor of; 328 a, 337 b, 344 a.

lands in; 319 a.

Alice, daughter of Thomas de; 330 b.

Chastel, Le Chevalier de, letter of; 293 b.

Chatfield, Major, in Ireland; 600 b.

Chatham; 245 b, 256 a.

alms-houses at; 252 b.

chest, the; 259 b, 261 a.

Chatham harbour; 258 b.

Chatham, Lord, his illness in the House of Lords (1778); xviii, 195 b, 196 a.

(1791), letter of; 294 b.

Chattoe, in North Britain; 46 b.

Chaucer:

Thomas, son of Geoffrey, at Ewelme; xiv, 624 b, 628 a.

tombof, inscription for; 630 a.

William le, of Cheapside; 323 a.

Canterbury Tales, MS. of; 226 b, 233 b.

Chaumont, camp at; 27 b.

Chaudeler, Matthew le, gift by; 323 a.

Chauntry, Richard, canon of Stoke College, will of; 332 b.

Chanvet:

H., letters of; 293 a, 293 b.

K., letter of; 292 b.

W., letter of; 294 a.

Chauvin, Mr., schoolmaster; 24 a.

Cheam, Cheyham; 334 a, 335 a.

Cheddar parish, MSS. of; xx.

Chedworth, Nicholas, of Hackney, will of; 333 a.

Chedyngworth; 413 a.

Cheeke, Robert, claims barony of Fitzwalter; 116 b.

Cornet Thomas, petition of; 504 b.

Cheese, prices of (1252–1262); 343 b.

Chelleham, Will. de; 344 a.

Chelmsford; 335 a, 635 a, 635 b.

Chelsea; 55 b, 157 b, 158 a.

Chenpyn, William, alias Robert Fool; 2 a.

Cheping, Berks, vicar of; 333 a.

Cheridon, Mons.; 558 b.

Cherringes, Adam de, hospital founded by; 264 b.

Cherrybounce; 156 a.

Chertebam, Will. de; 341 a.

Chertsey abbey; 344 b.

Cherwode, William de, endowment by; 343 b.

Cheselden, Pop's friend, a surgeon; 55 b.

Cheshyre, Lady, letter of; 57 a.

Cheslyn, John, petition of; 516 a.

Chessers, one, his apprehension; 502 b.

his design; 507 a.

Chester or West Chester; 9 b, 138 a, 191 a.

MSS. of corporation of, calendar of; xv, 355 a–403 b.

— history, value, condition, &c. of; 355 a–356 a, 403 a.

documents dated from; 356 a–403 a, passim.

mayors, aldermen, sheriffs, recorders, and others of, documents of and to, and referring to; 355 a–403 b, passim; and see also their respective names.

mayors' books; 366 b.

mayors and sheriffs (Edw. III.—1784), list of; 362 b.

sheriffs, their functions, &c.; 372 b.

sheriffs' books; 372 a.

constable of, H. de Lasey, charter by; 270 b.

dependence of burghers on Earls of Chester; 355 a.

commercial condition of (temp. Ric. II.); 355 a, 358 b.

populousness, &c. of (Hen. V.—Jas. I.); 355 a.

communications with Ireland; 355 a.

pardon to, by Henry IV.; 359 a.

distress and depopulation of (23 Hen. VI.); 359 b.

extreme poverty of (1 Hen. VII.); 359 b.

great charter (Hen. VII.); 359 b, 360 a. standard measures for; 361 a, 361 b.

re-incorporation of (Car. II., Jas. II.); 361 b.

corn market, orders; 363 a.

archery sports, orders; 363 a.

excessive feasting, churching of women, orders; 363 a.

women's caps, kerchiefs, &c., order; 363 b.

Whitsun plays, order; 363 b.

Earl of Leicester's visit to (26 Eliz.), orders; 363 b.

plate to be presented to Earl of Leicester by; ib.

embroiderers and weavers, orders; 364 a.

merchants trading to Spain and Portugal, order; 364 a.

barber surgeons, order; 364 a.

"waives" for, order; 364 a.

use of town hall by stage players, order; 364 a.

defence of, orders, &c.; 364 b, 365 a, 365 b, 384 a, 392 a.

clothing and weavers, controversy between; 364 b.

plate to be converted into coin, order; 365 a.

plague in, prevalence of; 364 b.

Prince Rupert's regiment in; 365 a. reduced to authority of Parliament, order (1646); 365 b.

plays at (1575); 366 a.]

horse races, regulations (1612); 366 a.

Chester or West Chester—cont.

card playing, order; 368 b.
 taverns and alehouses, order; 368 b.
 MSS. of, state of (1575); 369 b. discharged from being place of sanctuary of offenders; 370 a. assaults within the abbey (Ric. II.), inquisition; 370 b. brethren of, "who came with William the Conqueror"; 370 b.
 "noate of the cities plate" (1602); 371 b.
 citizens' right of common, Hoole Heath; 371 a. tenements for poor bedemen, agreement (temp. Hen. VIII.); 371 b. sale of horses, register (1655-1723); 372 a. new haven for, at Lightfootpool, order, &c. (1541); 373 b.
 day of thanksgiving for "deliverance from the Spanyardes" (1588); 374 b. representatives in Parliament; 375 a, 389 b, 391 b, 393 a, 394 a, 394 b, 395 a, 399 a, 400 a.
 "a sturges fish" brought before mayor; 375 b. harbour, called the "new key," order (1608); 382 a. inhabitants, list of (1628); 383 a.
 ship money assessment (1634); 383 a.
 surrender of (1645); 381 a.
 surrender of charters of incorporation, order (1652); 385 b.
 plague or other pestilence at (1654); 386 b. committals under Act of Uniformity; 387 a. charter, additions to; 387 b. petition to Parliament (the Dee); 388 a. controversy with the county (1667); 388 a, 389 a, 389 b. ancient custom on Christmas Eve at; 388 b.
 Quakers in; 388 b, 389 b, 390 a. weaving and wool combing introduced from Norwich (1674); 390 a. cleansing streets, &c., proclamation; 393 a. quarter sessions to be held at, orders (1578); 397 a.
 and Ireland, troops conducted to Ireland vid Chester, and communications between; 355 a-399 b, passim.
 plague understood to be in; 399 a.
 more devout observation of Sunday in; 400 a. plate (municipal), indentures; 400 b.
 Sacrament certificates; 401 a.
 abbey; 370 b.
 — court; 384 a, 391 b.
 castle; 360 a, 442 a.
 — mint in; 74 b.
 cathedral, divinity lectures; 377 a.
 St. Werburgh Monastery; 368 a.
 Friars minors, their church; 359 b.
 St. Nicholas Chapel; 363 b.
 Convent of Our Blessed Lady; 371 b.
 St. Bridget's; 392 a.
 Hospital of St. John the Baptist; 361 b.
 St. Ursula Guild or Hospital, indenture; 371 b. city or town hall, old and new; 355 a, 355 b, 363 b, 392 b. old shire hall; 576 b.
 bridges; 358 b, 362 a, 383 a.
 St. Trinity and St. Martin's wards, assessment schedules, 383 a.
 New or Water Tower, agreement for building (1320); 358 a. streets and lanes (temp. Edw. III.), list of; 362 b.
 city wards, &c. account; 362 b. limits of city liberties, divisions, &c.; 358 a, 358 b, 359 a, 365 b.
 Bridge Street and other streets, &c.; 365 b.
 Eastgate Street; 361 b, 365 b.
 Northgate Street; 363 b, 365 b, 368 b, 401 b.
 Northgate prison; 357 b, 368 b, 374 b, 377 a, 385 b.
 White Hart; 582 b.
 wharf or crane; 401 b.
 Rode-hee, the, variously spelt; 363 a, 366 b, 384 a, 401 b.
 — "Cros upon"; 363 a.
 High Crosse; 384 a.
 Gates, customs due at (temp. Edw. II.); 371 a.
 — 361 n-371 b, passim, 401 b.
 the Mint at; xii, 70 b, 74 b. pillory; 371 a.
 Goldsmiths' company of; 70 a. companies of; 363 a, 364 b, 384 b, 385 a.
 — MSS. of, calendar of; 402 a-403 b.
 entries touching the River Dee and; 355 a-401 a, passim.
 Pendice or Pentice Court; 362 b, 367 a, 369 a, 369 b, 370 b, 371 b, 372 b, 384 a.
 — chartulary and rolls; 369 b, 400 b.
 Peter of, witness; 270 b.
 Chester Rake, near Flokersbrucke; 371 a.

Chester, county:

— bailiffs and others of, precept to; 359 a.
 — bishops, abbots, &c. of, writ to; 359 a.
 — surveyor of Her Majesty's lands in (1594), letter to; 376 b.
 — controversy with Chester city; 388 a, 389 a.
 — commissioners for assessment; 389 a.
 — letter to; 389 a.
 — Royal aid and additional supply; 389 b.
 — commissioners for, letters of; 389 a, 389 b.
 — letters to; 389 a, 390 a, 391 b.

Chester, Bishop of:

(1513), his dispute with Abp. Warham; 336 a.
 (1573), writ to; 374 a.
 William (1588), letter of; 374 b.
 (1608), letter to; 382 b.
 George (1663), certificate, &c. signed by; 387 a.
 (1668); 166 a.
 John (1674), letter of; 390 a.

Chester, Mr. Deane, of (1593); 375 b.

Chester, Earl of:

— picture of; 366 a.
 — Hugh Lupus; 360 b.
 — pedigree of; 366 a.
 — Henry, charter of; 363 b.
 — Scot, pedigrees of; 366 a.
 — Ranulph; xv, 357 a, 357 b, 370 a, 371 b.
 — charter of; 363 b.
 — Randle Blannville, 4th; 355 a.
 — charters of; 355 a, 356 b.

Chester, Earls of, dependence of burghers of Chester on (12th century); 355 a.
 — genealogies of, from Hugh Lupus; 366 a.

Chester and Huntingdon, Earl of:

— John, charter to (18 Hen. III.); 421 b.
 — John Le Scot, charter of; 356 b.

Chester and Lincoln, Ranulph, Earl of; 337 a.

Chester, Henry, Esq.; 4 a.

Chesterfield, Earl of:

(1737); 18 a.
 — letters of; 54 a.
 — Pope and; 55 b.
 (1743); 54 b.
 — Duchess of Marlborough's legacy to; 567 a.
 — his resignation (1748); 569 a.
 — his friends the Germans; ib.
 (1761); 469 a.

Chesuden, William de, conveyance to; 413 b.

Chettle, Ralph, of Leicester; 434 b.

Chetwood:

— Dr., letters of; 31 b.
 — Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 — Dr. Knightley, letters of; 37 a.
 — Knightley, archdeacon; 276 a.

Chetwynd:

— Mr., executor to Lord Bolingbroke; 568 a.
 — — envoy; 19 b, 20 b, 21 b.
 — — letters of; 31 b, 32 b, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
 — letter to; 17 a.
 — J., letter of; 27 b.
 — John, letters of; 47 b.
 — — envoy to Savoy; 47 a.
 — — envoy at Turin, letters of; 27 a.
 — — robbery by; 337 a.
 — W., letter of; 37 a.
 — William, letters of; 47 b.

Chevallier, Lieut. J., letter of; 289 b.

Chevallier, M. de, letter of; 39 b.

Chew; 335 b.

Cheyne, Will., of Fen Ditton, will of; 332 a.

Cheyney, Thomas, his estate; 3 a.

Cheyney, Robert, knt., of Salisbury, will of; 335 a.

Chichele, Henry, elected Abp. of Canterbury; 340 b.

Chichester; 319 b, 334 b.
 — port of; 94 a.
 — diocese, visitation of; 335 b.

Chichester, Bishop of:

(1380), Rede; 339 b.
 (1502), Story, will of; 334 b.
 (1503), Story, his death; 335 b.
 (1668); 166 a.
 (1670), Peter, writ of summons to; 142 b.
 E. Hare; 12 a.
 (1732), his sermon; 315 a.

Chichester:

— Lord, letter to (1622); 214 a.
 — Earl of, MSS. of; xx.
 — Colonel; 581 b.
 — Sir Arthur; 582 b.
 — — governor of Knockfergus; 398 b.
 — — certificate of; 380 a.
 — — letters of; 381 a, 382 a, 382 b, 399 a, 399 b, 400 a.
 — — his servant; 436 a.
 — Capt. Edward; 593 b.

Chichley, Thomas; 129 a.

Chiffinch, Wm., page of the bedchamber; 12 b.

Chigwell, Hamo de, mayor of London; 633 a.

Chikewelle, Hen. and Alice de, their alleged divorce; 351 b.

Child, Childe:

— Mr.; 194 b.
 — Edward, of Christ's Hospital; 256 a.
 — Sir Francis, the banker; xi, 92 b.
 — — lord mayor, &c.; 100 a.
 — — his journal of travels abroad; 92 b, 100 a.
 — — his account book; 100 b.
 — — his works of art; 100 b.
 — Josiah, of the Council of Trade; viii, 133 b, 134 a.
 — Samuel, of Pontefract; 275 a.

Child—cont.

- Thomas; 115 a.
 W., organist at Windsor; 10 a.
- Child-stealing Bill (1670): amendments; 143 b.
 message concerning; 150 a.
- Childewic, Geoffrey de, witness; 1 b.
- Childs, W., allowance to; 7 b.
- Chillenden, prior of Christ Church, Canterbury; 316 b, 321 a.
- Chillingdon, co. Bedford, manor; 149 a.
- Chillingsworth, Mr., master of Leicester Hospital; 429 a.
- Chillington, minister of; 8 a.
- Chilton, document dated at; 347 b.
- Chilton, Christopher; 278 b.
- Chimay, Prince de, letter of; 37 a.
- Chingford manor; 633 a.
- Chippenham; 335 a.
- Chipping Norton; 334 b.
 Charles I.'s army at; 3 b.
- Chipping Wycombe; 332 b.
- Chippingdale:
 Dr., of Leicester, his suit; 434 b.
 — his lease of Newark Grange; 434 b.
 John, commission to; 418 a.
 — warrant by; 435 b.
- Chippit, Bartholomew, doctor; 228 a. forbidden to practice; ib.
- Chirche, John; 367 b.
- Chircke, John, of Leicester; 415 b.
- Chislett Levell; 248 a.
- Chister, William, of Whitechapel; 271 b.
- Chiswick:
 manor, &c.; 632 a, 634 a.
 — parishioners; 632 b.
- Chivas, siege of; 21 b.
- Chiver:
 Henry; 126 a.
 Seacole; 126 a.
- Chobham, Surrey; 136 a.
- Choiseul:
 Count de (1762); 285 a.
 Duc de (1762); 285 a.
 — letters to; 285 a.
 — (1763); 286 b.
- Cholmley:
 Lady; 109 a.
 Mr.; 339 a.
 Dame Margaret, wife of Edwd. Cooke, petition of; 109 b.
 Sir Robert, Lieut. of the Tower; 87 b.
 Thomas, of Carlisle, bond of; 383 b.
- Cholmondeley, Cholmundele:
 Lord, letter of (1710); 38 a.
 — "An ugly disagreement" with the Duke of Newcastle (1741); 288 b.
 — Hugh, letters of and to (1704); 393 b.
 — Lord Lieutenant of co. Chester (1705); 362 a.
 Lady; 380 a.
 Hugh de; 357 a.
 Sir Hugh, Vice President of Wales, letter to; 374 a.
 Reginald, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 Thos., warrant of; 387 a.
 indenture of; 401 b.
- Christchurch Twynham, incorporation of; 25 b.
- Christian Mary, the ship; 242 a.
- Christie, James, letter of; 289 b.
- Christleton, near Stanford Bridge; 401 b.
- Christmas and other festivals, order against observing; 384 b.
- Christmas Eve, custom at Chester upon; 388 b.
- Chudleigh:
 Col., letter of; 39 b.
 Mr., letters to; 60 a.
- Chudley, Capt. Edward, of the Trinity House; 260 a.
- Church:
 Mr., with Charles I.; 552 b.
 Jeremiah, letters of; 289 b.
 — letter of; 290 b.
 Roger; 334 a, 334 b.
- Church: absence from, acknowledgment and submission for; 380 a.
 lands, commissioners for sale of (1651), letter of; 385 b. enemies of the, denunciations of, and penalties against; 349 a.
- Churches, Commissioners for Plantation of; 303 b.
- Churchie, Ensign Richard; 594 a.
- Churchill:
 Lady, letter to; 37 a.
 General, letters of; 32 a.
 Mr.; 53 a.
 —; 286 a.
 —; letters of; 54 a.
 A., letter of; 38 a.
 Capt. H., letters of; 289 b.
 John and Lord, commissions to; 60 b.
 Jon., letter of; 37 a.
 Wm., letter of; ib.
 Major Wm., letters of; 31 b, 38 a, 39 b.
 Sir Winston and Lady, their wills; 25 b.
- Churching of women, order against excessive feasting at; 363 a.
- Chuselden, William of, of Leicester; 422 a.

- Chat, John de, sub-deacon; 345 b.
- Chymmyny, John; 281 b.
- Cimaroli, painting by; 63 a.
- Cinque Ports, MSS., belonging to; xx.
- Circars, the Northers, Grant's survey of (1784); 296 b.
- Cirencester; 332 b, 334 b.
 document dated from; 339 a.
- Civil Establishment of Ireland, pensions on; 183 b.
- Civita Vecchia; 20 a, 32 b.
- Clairmont, Comte de, letters of (1706); 32 a.
- Clairvaux, Comte de, letters of (1706); 32 a.
- Claketon, manor of; 635 b.
- Clanbrassil, Lord:
 trial of; 581 b.
 letter of (1649); 582 a.
 his regiment (1663); 521 b.
 Jas. Hamilton, his death (1758); 460 b.
- Clancarty:
 — his regiment; 494 b.
 Lord, certificate of (1663); 504 b.
 — lands restored to; 503 b.
 — to be seized; 624 b.
 — letters of (1707); 32 b.
 — and Lady, letters of; 54 a.
- Clancunrey, garrison at, in 1648; 594 b.
- Clandalko, co. Dublin; 342 a.
- Clandiboyes; 393 b.
- Clane, land in; 505 a.
- Clangary:
 — his regiment; 606 a.
 —, a prisoner (1649); 610 a.
- Clanmally, Viscount (1641, &c.); 603 a, 608 a, 615 a, 615 b.
- Clanmally, Lady; 608 b.
- Clanmorish, Viscount (1642); 603 b.
- Clanricarde:
 Earl and Marquis of (1607); 382 a.
 — letter of (1612); 339 b.
 — Lord Deputy (1649); 578 a.
 — his proceedings during the Irish rebellion (1641–1652); 602 a–618 a, passim.
 — his submission (1691); 565 a.
 Marchioness of, Anne, petition of; 501 a, 546 a.
 — her estate (1663); 518 a.
- Clapartoon, George, sub-dean of Stirling chapel; 309 a.
- Clapham, co. Beds, assessment at; 10 a.
- Clapham, George, trooper; 525 a.
- Clapham, John, of Clasley; 308 a.
- Clapton, manor of; 635 b.
- Clare; 334 b, 611 b. plantation of; 99 a.
 history of; 486 a.
 Gilbert de, his house at Bletchingley; 352 a.
 Walter and Agnes, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Earl of, writ of summons to Gilbert (1666); 101 a.
 — (1667); 112 b.
 — Act touching possessions of John, deceased; ib.
 — privilege case (1669); 128 a.
 — memorial of; 128 a.
 — Duke of Newcastle's legacy to (1691); 565 a.
 — (1715); 49 b.
- Clarence:
 Duke of, Lionel late, prayers for (1368); 338 b.
 (temp. Edw. IV.); 264 b, 415 b.
- Clarendon:
 Earl of, Chancellor (15 Chas. II.); 234 b.
 — report, &c. of; 110 a, 110 b.
 — Act for banishing (1667); 114 b.
 — his impeachment, papers touching; viii, 114 b.
 — (1667); 112 b, 116 b, 139 a, 162 a.
 — (1668); 124 a.
 — (1669); 137 a.
 — his History; 190 a, 574 b.
 — work ascribed to; 583 a.
 — his Short View of Ireland; 99 b.
 — Henry, certificate of (1659); 392 a.
 — (1691); 562 b.
 — and Lady, letters of; 54 a.
- Claret; 253 a, 254 a.
 given to the Earl of Leicester; 425 b.
- Clareton, co. York; 271 a.
- Clarevaux, John, of Dry Drayton, will of; 335 b.
- Charges, Sir Thos., M.P., letter to; 147 a.
- Clark, Clarke:
 v. Isack, suit of; 238 a, 238 b.
 Dr.; 17 b.
 — one of Duke of York's chaplains (1660); 279 a.
 Rev. Abraham Thos., letters of; 294 b, 295 b.
 Lieut.-Col. Alured, letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 Edward, master in Chancery; 630 a.
 George, quartermaster; 597 a.
 J., letters of; 54 a.
 James, letter of; 84 a.
 — steward of Duke of Ormond, letter to; 159 b.
 — of Leicester; 416 b, 425 a, 430 b.
 Cornet James; 596 a.
 John, letter of; 37 a.
 Dr. John, President of the College of Physicians; 231 b.

Clarke—cont.

- Ensign John; 591 b.
 Joseph Aikin; 71 a.
 L., engraver; 68 a.
 Matthew, his wife Sara; 239 b.
 Robert, on Cambridge committee; 10 a.
 Thomas; 417 a.
 — and Margaret, of Leicester; 432 b.
 — mayor of Leicester; 414 b.
 — letters of; 430 b.
 — letter to; 431 b.
 — accusation against his wife; 433 a.
 — of the Blue Boar; ib.
 — murder of his wife; 434 b.
 — his estate and will; ib.
- Clayton, Will., of Bocking, will of; 335 b.
 Claslogy; 308 a.
 Clatty; 306 b.
 Claverie, Sir John, his regiment; 439 a.
 Clavering, Essex; 332 a.
 Claxton, Edwin; 635 a.
 Clay, Nicholas, indulgence to; 415 a.
 Claymond, John, gift by; 266 a.
 Claymonde, John, sen., of Frampton, will of; 335 a.
 Clayton:
 Mr.; 134 b.
 — music by; 24 a.
 Mrs., letters to; 26 a.
 Mr. and Mrs., letters of; 54 a.
 Sir John, petitions of; 257 a.
 Sir Joseph, proposals by; 257 a.
 Han., certificate by; 506 a.
 Col. Randall, petition of; 521 a.
 Robert; 142 b.
 — petition, &c. of; 142 a, 142 b.
 — answer to; 142 b.
 — Bishop of Clogher; 447 b, 460 b.
 Thomas; 272 a, 273 a.
- Clarke, Wm., letter of; 385 a.
 Cleary, D.; 545 a.
 Cleland, J.; 581 b.
 Clemans, Ensign John; 591 a.
 Clements:
 Francis, deposition of; 236 b.
 John, President of the College of Physicians; 226 b.
 Clement IV., Pope, bulls of; 263 b.
 Clement V., Pope:
 letter to; 350 a.
 bulls, &c. of; 318 a, 350 b–352 b, passim.
 Clement VI., Pope, bull of; 337 a.
 Clement:
 Dr., plague doctor; 229 a.
 M., letter of; 38 b.
- Clements:
 Lieut. Edward; 595 b.
 Nathaniel, Deputy Vice-Treasurer for Ireland, suspicions against; 191 b.
 Richard, petition of; 160 a.
- Clemes, Daniel, quartermaster; 536 a.
 Clesghish Castle, co. Limerick; 504 a.
 Clenton, Thomas, goldsmith; 65 b.
 Clephan, Helen, relict of Robt. Arbuthnott; 301 a.
- Clerc:
 Geoffrey, mayor of Leicester, witness; 414 a.
 Nicholas, of Colchester, will of; 332 b.
- Clergy during the Commonwealth, proceedings touching; 210 b.
- Clerk, Clerke:
 prisoner; 394 a.
 Lord Justice; 51 a.
 Mr. Baron, of the Duchy of Lancaster Court; 417 b.
 Bart., document signed by; 227 b.
 Sir John, of Penicuik; 310 b.
 — letter of; 315 a.
 John, of Northampton, will of; 332 b.
 Colonel John, his company at Leicester; 438 b.
 John, letter signed by; 336 b.
 Peter; 268 a.
 Richard, of Sibton, will of; 333 b.
 — of St. Magnus, London, will of; 332 b.
 Rob., bondman; 267 b.
 Sir Talbot, petition of; 78 b.
 Thomas, of Potton, will of; 335 a.
 Wm., warrant for payment to; 280 b.
- Clermont:
 Lord, John, prisoner (1708); 46 a.
 — and his brother; 46 a.
 — prosecution of; 46 b.
- Clervaux, Comte de, letter of; 39 b.
- Cleveland:
 Earl of, Thomas (1644); 3 a, 4 a.
 — his estate; 5 b, 6 a, 6 b, 7 a.
 — petition of (1666); 102 b, 211 a.
 — papers touching his bill (1666); 102 a, 102 b.
 — the late (1668); 118 a.
 — (1670); 145 b.
 Duchess Dowager of; 101 a.

Cleves:

- evacuation of; 285 a.
 and Juliers; 211 b.
 Duke of, Philip; 22 b.
- Cleydone, W. de, custodes Abp. Cant.; 352 a.
- Cliff at Hoo, Kent:
 manor of; 330 a.
 — disputes about tithes of; ib.
- Cliff, rectora of, suit against; 318 a.
- Cliffe; 17 b.
 John, jurymen; 89 a.
 William, petition of; 550 a.
- Clifford:
 Lady Anne, her claim to certain baronies; 583 b.
 Francis, agreement by; 272 b.
 Geo., letters of; 40 b.
 Sir Ingram, deceased; 272 a.
 John, of Ewelme; 627 b.
- Clifton:
 Arabella; 149 b, 150 a.
 Sir Clifford, deceased, Act for payment of debts of; 149 b.
 Dame Frances, case of; 150 a.
 Lady Frances; 150 a.
 Sir Gervase, deceased; 149 b.
 — his widow?; 150 a.
 — money advanced to; 212 a.
 — manor sold by; 264 b.
 John, bailiff; 136 b.
 John de; 627 a.
 Katherine; 149 b, 150 a.
 Sir Richard, petition of; 506 a.
 — lands held by; 520 b.
 Thomas de, of Worcester, deed by; 638 a.
 William; 150 a.
 — case of; 150 a.
- Clifton-on-Teme; 335 a.
- Clinch:
 Dr., his paper; 456 b.
 — O'Connor's letter to; ib.
 — Dr. Curry and; 489 b.
 John, of Newcastle; 521 b.
- Clinton:
 Lord (1737); 18 b.
 Sir Henry, K.B.; 287 b.
 — letters of; xiii, 288 b, 289 a.
 — plan touching colony of Virginia offered to; 289 a.
 Sebastian, trooper; 530 a.
- Clintonston, co. Louth, troops at; 590 b.
- Clippers and false coiners, papers about; 71 a.
- Clipston, Henry, mayor of Leicester; 413 a; 422 b.
- Clipstone, parliament of; 346 b.
- Cliva, Aielwinus de; 329 b.
- Clobery; —; 156 b, 158 a.
- Cloghan; 613 a.
- Clogher, Bishop of; 334 a.
 (1643), E. McMahon; 604 b, 612 a.
 H. Jones; 573 b.
 — letters of; 582 a.
 —; 495 b.
 (1639), Catholic, John O'Molony; 493 b.
 letter of (1715); 58 b.
 (1717), J. Stearne; 580 b.
 (1741), J. Stearne, MSS. presented to Trinity College, Dublin, by; 572 a.
 (1756), R. Clayton, his pamphlet; 447 b.
 — his proposal to omit the creeds; ib.
 — his death; 460 b.
 (1774), John Garnet; 194 b.
- Cloghla skirmish; 604 a.
- Cloghnover, castle, town, &c. of, co. Galway; 546 a.
- Cloghruske, lands of; 518 b.
- Cloghvater, congregation at; 615 a.
- Clonagh lands, co. Kildare; 505 a.
- Clonalis, co. Roscommon; 441 b.
- Clonbiggin, co. Galway, town and lands of; 518 a.
 in Aghrim, co. Galway; 536 b.
- Cloncowin, lands of; 525 b.
- Clonetway, co. Limerick; 601 b.
- Clonfert, Bishop of:
 his petition to Boniface VIII.; 345 b.
 (1651); 614 a, 616 a, 616 b.
 (1663) W. Bailly, petitions, &c. of; 501 a, 503 b, 507 a, 521 b.
- Clonmacnoise; 615 a.
 congregation; 611 b.
 diocese; 581 b.
 annals of; 576 b, 582 a, 585 a. camp; 613 a.
 archpriest of; 586 a.
 Bishop of (1650); 613 b.
 — (1652), Ant. Geoghegan; 618 a. letter of, &c.; 614 a.
- Clonmel; 503 b, 549 b, 606 a, 624 a.
 letter dated at; 496 a.
 Cromwell's siege of, account of; 578 b, et seq., 612 a. executions at; 481 b, note.
- Clontarf:
 near Dublin; 531 b.
 battle at; 582 a, 602 b.
- Cloonekeene, co. Westmeath, land called; 537 b.

- Cloonfad; 466 b.
 Clos, John, Dean of Chichester, will of; 332 b.
 Close, E., letter of; 292 b.
 Cloth:
 export of; 134 a.
 petition for export of; 238 b.
 trade in Leicester, order concerning; 414 b.
 dealers in, grievances of; 418 b.
 Cloths, deterioration of, dialogue on; 93 b.
 Clotworthy, Sir John, instructions for; 99 a.
 Clonelec, Ralph, of Leicester; 405 b.
 Clowes, W.: serjeant surgeon; 229 b.
 — certificate by; ib.
 Clowmacnote, Bishop of; 30 a.
 Cloune, Bishop of (1365), commission to; 338 b.
 Cludd, Edw., letter of; 386 b.
 Cluncourie, skirmish; 603 b.
 Clunaise, skirmish; 603 b.
 Cluth, Gunnilda relicta; 341 a.
 Clutterbuck:
 —; 150 a.
 Sir Thomas, consul at Leghorn; 254 a, 255 b.
 — order to; 254 a.
 Cluzels, L. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Clypeston, John, agreement of; 357 b.
 Clyston, Henry, clerk, of Postwick, will of; 334 a.
 Clyve, rectory of; 320 a, 320 b.
 Cnocnados, battle; 606 b.
 Cnoctagher, surrender of; 611 b.
 Cnocterife battle; 603 b.
 Coals:
 the tax on; 238 a.
 petitions, &c. concerning; 239 a.
 Coat and conduct money:
 (1580); 397 a.
 (1597); 379 a.
 Coate, Sir Charles:
 lands granted to; 99 a.
 his children; ib.
 Coates, Coatten:
 Mr., of Leicester; 436 a.
 Alexander; 377 b.
 Charles, letter of; 295 a.
 William, of Pontefract; 275 b, 276 a.
 Cobbet:
 Col. Ralph, governor of Dundee, letter to; 299 a, 303 b.
 Major Robert, payment to; 94 b.
 Cobeham:
 Henry de, witness; 235 a.
 J., witness; 344 b.
 Cobham, Lord:
 letter of (1592); 228 a.
 in the Tower; 88 b.
 a Whig (1737); 18 a.
 Cobham, Sir John, his case, 1 Ric. II.; 169 b.
 Cobham:
 Kent, college of; 323 b.
 Surrey; 553 a.
 Cochet, Capt., letter of; 39 b.
 Cochnay, Easter, co. Dumbarton, lands of; 308 b, 309 a.
 Cochno, Barns and, Hamilton family of; 308 b.
 Cochnoch:
 Easter and Wester; 309 a, 310 a.
 castle of; 309 b.
 Cochran, A. D. R. Baillie, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 Cockayne:
 Mr., treasurer; 7 b.
 Wm., of Chester; 361 b.
 Cockburn:
 Mr., letter of; 48 a.
 Capt., letter of; 39 b.
 Patrick, minister, of Aberdeen, controversial letter to; 300 b.
 Cocke:
 Richard, quartermaster; 593 b.
 William, soldier; 548 a.
 Cockerell:
 C., letters of; 295 a.
 Lt.-Col. John, letters of; 291 a, 294 a, 294 b, 295 b.
 Cockes, a writer on medicine; 298 a.
 Cockford, the, ford called; 603 a.
 Cockin, Wm., sheriff and alderman of London, and governor of plantation of Ulster (1609); 339 a.
 Cockymouth, Sir Adam; 264 b.
 "Coqueett, Coast," 394 a.
 Coens, Bartholomew; 344 a.
 Cod, Henricus; 341 a.
 Coddie, John, of Yalding, will of; 334 b.
 Coddvyn, William, of St. George's, Southwark, will of; 332 a.
 Codex Leicestrensis:
 the, account of; 420 a.
 loan of; 439 b.
 Codryngton, Anne, of Codryngton, will of; 333 a.
 Coenulf of Mercia, charter of; 328 a.
 Coffin:
 Capt., letter of; 289 a.
 J. R. Pine, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 Coffy, Thomas, petition of; 545 b.
- Cogan:
 Anthony; 6 a.
 William; 527 a.
 Coggen, Mr. Anthony; 7 a.
 Coggeshale, John de, escheator; 2 a.
 Coggeshall; 335 b. rioters at; 46 b.
 Coggs, Mr., over against St. Clement's Church; 15 a.
 Coghil, John, lands held by; 320 a.
 Coghlan: cowardice of; 609 a.
 Conly, petition of; 530 b.
 Daniel; 278 b.
 John; 608 a.
 Terence; 614 b.
 — dedication to; 585 a.
 Coimbetore; 293 b.
 Coin, counterfeiting; 392 b, 393 a.
 Coinage: bullion, &c., papers concerning; 60 b, et seq.
 debasing the dialogue on; 93 b.
 Bill, papers touching (1666); 103 b.
 Coitts, main of; 308 b.
 Cok:
 John; 342 b.
 William, robbery by; 337 a.
 Cokayne, Richard, on Newport committee; 9 a.
 Coker:
 Mr. Secretary; 436 b.
 — correspondence with; 584 a.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Vice-Chamberlain, letter of; 38 a.
 Sir Edward, proceedings before; 61 a.
 — certificate of; 88 a.
 — Attorney-General, petition to; 417 b.
 — arguments by; 584 b.
 Sir John, Secretary of State, letter to; 244 b.
 — letter to; 245 a.
 — notes by; 246 b.
 or Cook, Lady Mary, her unhappy marriage; 569 b.
 Robert, of Lowestoft, will of; 335 a.
 T., letter of; 37 a.
 Thomas, Commissioner; 274 a.
 — son of Secretary, proposed burgess for Leicester;
 436 b.
 — — his election; 437 a.
 — of Bloxham, will of; 332 a.
 — L.L.D., his message in Paternoster Row; 634 b.
 See Cook.
 Coker, John, of Wells, will of; 334 b.
 Cokham, Emma de, licence to; 1 b.
 Cokke:
 Henry, of Walden, will of; 332 a.
 Thomas, of Bloxham, will of; 332 a.
 Cokkes, Richard, of Shankton; 423 a.
 Cokkys, William, of Shanton, conveyance by; 423 a.
 Colbert; 362 b.
 document signed by; 553 a.
 Colbrook; 630 a.
 Richard; 282 a.
 Colchester; 332 a, 332 b, 333 a, 335 b, 553 a.
 Abbot of, William; 262 b.
 archdeacon of, Roger; 632 b, 633 b.
 St. John's monastery at; 625 b. baize; 134 b.
 Lord, his regiment at Stirling (1690); 497 a.
 — MSS. of; xx.
 Cole:
 Greene v., writ of error; 151 b.
 Mr.; 429 b.
 Capt. Abraham, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Ar., letter signed by; 395 a.
 Christian, letters of; 47 b.
 John; 278 b.
 — of Needham Market, his widow Joan; 629 b.
 — his son Robert; ib.
 Sir John; 516 a.
 Michael, letter signed by; 395 a.
 Thomas, of Cowes, letter to; 257 b.
 Sir W., his regiment in Ireland; 575 a.
 Sir William; 611 a.
 William, soldier; 548 a.
 Colcbrook:
 Geo., letter of; 293 b.
 Sir George, letter of; 289 a.
 H., letter of; 289 b.
 Coleby, prisoner; 394 a.
 Coleman: musician; 12 b.
 John, gift by; 323 a.
 Colepeper, Peter, of Loose; 329 a.
 Coleraine; 493 b, 496 b.
 Coles:
 Captain; 591 a.
 Edward, letter of; 295 b.
 Coleshill, school at; 213 b.
 Colinton; 309 b.
 Collado, Luis; 22 b.

Colladon :

- Sir John ; 133 b.
- answer of ; 133 b.
- petitions of ; 140 a, 163 a.

Collard :

- Richard of the Mint, warrants to ; 81 a, 83 a.
- Capt. Siloam, weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.

Collart, Admiral ; 553 b.

Collic, William, of Worcester ; 638 a.

Collenberg, Comte, letters of ; 39 b.

Colles :

- Francis, petition of ; 147 a.
- John, note touching action against ; 141 b.

Colleton, Mr., speech of ; 220 a.

Collic, Thomas de ; 305 a.

Collier, Collyer :

- member of the Hamburgh Co. ; 147 b.
- Col., deputy-governor of Jersey ; 34 b.
- Jeremy, document signed by ; 13 a.
- Nathaniel, letter of ; 292 b.
- Col. Thomas, letter of ; 34 b.

Collier ships, waftage of ; 244 a.

Collins :

- Capt. ; 259 a.
- letter of ; 38 a.
- Faustin, soldier ; 534 b.
- John, of Worcester ; 150 a.

Collinson :

- Col., letter of ; 293 b.
- Sir Richard, of the Trinity House ; 236 a.

Collis, Mrs., MSS. of ; xx.

Colly, Robert, of Worcester ; 638 b.

Colyngge, Thomas, of Worcester ; ib.

Collyweston ; 332 a.

Colmanstown, co. Dublin ; 545 b.

Colmore, William, on Coventry committee ; 7 b.

Colmotte, town of ; 5 a.

Colne Comitatus ; 332 b.

Colnes, Suffolk, hundred, stewardship ; 277 b.

Cologne ; 574 b.

- chapter of, letters of ; 37 a, 39 b.
- elector of, letter of (1695) ; 558 a.
- letter of (1710) ; 38 a.
- letter of (1711) ; 39 b.
- (1751) ; 284 b.

magistrates of, letters of (1705) ; 31 a.

Colonna :

- the constable ; 554 a.
- General Marc Antonio ; 22 a.
- family, the, Pope Boniface's bitterness against ; 346 a.
- handed over to the inquisitors ; ib.

Colooney :

- Baron, Richard Lord Coote (1663) ; 519 a.
- Lord, lands held by (1663) ; 520 b.
- his troop (1663) ; 514 a, 546 b.

Colowe, lands of ; 525 b.

Colquhoun, James, provost of Edinburgh, letter of ; 313 a.

Colsyle, Agnes, of Kidderminster, will of ; 333 a.

Colt :

- George ; 144 a.
- John Dutton ; 144 a.
- answer, &c. of ; 144 a, 144 b.
- Thomas, petitions of ; 144 a, 144 b.

Colton, co. York ; 271 a.

Colton, Robert, son of Robert ; 377 a.

Columbo ; 293 b.

Colville :

- Mr. ; 132 a.
- John, affidavit of ; 133 a.

Colwall, Daniel, foreman of jury ; 89 a.

Colyear, M., letter of ; 38 a.

Colyer, Margaret, of Buckingham, will of ; 334 b.

Comaro, M., letter of ; 37 a.

Combe :

- Capt. James King, letter of ; 290 b.
- John, order concerning ; 3 a.
- Newell, in Kape Thamis, manor of ; 2 a.

Comberose, M., letter of ; 37 a.

Comberbach :

- Mr., Clerk of the Pentice at Chester, letter to ; 392 a.
- Richard, recorder of Chester (1705), recommendation signed by ; 393 b.
- Robert, letter of ; 392 a.

Combes, Will., of Stoke juxta Guildford, will of ; 334 b.

Combs, rector of ; 334 a.

Combuch, C. F., document signed by ; 12 a.

Comerford :

- John ; 462 a, 462 b, 471 a, 478 a.
- petitions of ; 500 b, 544 a.
- Nicholas, petitions of ; 518 b.

Coringe, Cuninge :

- John ; 383 b.
- receipt of ; ib.

Commons, House of :

- document dated from ; 394 a, 395 a.
- Speaker of (1706), letter of ; 394 a.
- petition of ; 266 a.

Commonwealth, Tree of, Dudley's ; 584 b.

Compiègne, document dated from ; 286 a.

Comport, Richard, petitions of ; 139 a, 139 b.

Compton church ; 264.

Compton Martin ; 332 b.

Compton Verney, co. Warwick, manor of ; 137 b.

Compton :

- General, Lieutenant of the Tower ; 90 a.
- Sir William, Master of the Ordnance ; ib.
- at Colchester ; 553 a.

Comrie, John, Act for naturalization of ; 126 b.

Comyne, Peirce, petition of ; 517 a.

Conallmore, prior of ; 613 b.

Conan, Duke of Brittany ; 264 b.

Condé :

- town of ; 36 b.
- Prince of (1600) ; 283 b.
- letters of (c. 1660) ; 28 a.
- (1765) ; 286 a.
- letter of (1803) ; 57 b.

Conduitt :

- Catherine, widow of John ; 63 b.
- John, M.P., his wife, the niece of Sir Isaac Newton, 60 b.
- his parliamentary notes ; 61 b.
- Master of the Mint ; 62 b.
- letters to ; 61 b, 62 b, 78 b.

Conell, Castle ; 615 b.

Conelly, Valentine, letter of ; 291 a.

Coney, Henry ; 361 a.

Conflans, document dated at ; 21 a.

Confy ; 498 a, 514 b.

Congyltoun, John of ; 307 a.

Coningsby :

- Lord, letters of (1705) ; 31 b.
- letters of (1707) ; 32 b.
- letter of (1709) ; 37 a, 54 a.
- letters of (1715) ; 59 a.
- Mr., his secretary ; 561 a.

Coningsock, Comte ; 41 a.

Conj in Piedmont, siege of ; 561 b, 562 a.

Connaught ; 604 a.

- account of ; 585 a.
- plantation of ; 99 a, 209 b.
- transplantations to ; 517 b.
- royalists transplanted to ; 500 a, et seq.
- army in ; 608 a, 615 a.
- defence of ; 612 b.
- the effect of pasture enclosures in (1762) ; 470 b.

Connell, John, letter of ; 37 a.

Connok, co. Wilts, manor, court rolls, &c. of ; 625 a-630 a, passim.

Connolly, Lieut.-Col. John, letter of ; 289 a.

Connor, Dr. Bernard, his history of Poland ; 464 a.

Conolly, Mr., letters of ; 49 a, 58 b, 59 a.

Conoway, Capt., of the Trinity House ; 260 a.

Conor, Teige ; 603 a, 611 a, 615 a, 616 a.

Conquest :

- Charles, his estate ; 6 b.
- Mrs. Dorothy ; 5 b.
- Sir Edmund ; 5 a.
- his sons, Miles and Richard ; 5 a.
- Lewis, grant by ; 3 b.
- Richard ; 5 b.
- his estates ; 3 b, 6 b, 7 a.
- ; 103 a.

Constable :

- Capt. Gregory, petition of ; 517 a.
- John ; 155 a.
- Marmaduke, of Wassend, deed by ; 273 a.
- concord by ; 273 a.
- Roger ; 281 b.
- Capt. William ; 507 a, 549 b.

Constantinople ; 291 a.

- letters dated at ; 557 b.
- patriarch of, Mathias ; 435 b.

Contarine, Rev. Thomas, of Elphin diocese ; 442 b.

Confi, Prince of (1763) ; 286 a.

Conty, Prince de ; 558 a.

Conventicles ; 388 b, 389 b.

- Act for continuance of a former Act touching (1668) ; 126 a.
- resolution of both Houses to thank the King for proclamation suppressing (1669) ; 136 a.
- Act to prevent and suppress seditious amendments, &c. to ; viii, 142 b.

Conway :

- document dated from ; 389 b.
- Lord ; 581 b.
- letter of (1626) ; 217 a.
- report by (1663) ; 532 a.
- his troop in Ireland (1663) ; 504 a, 504 b, 539 b.
- General, speech of ; 223 a.
- (1757) ; 224 b.
- his house near Henley ; 225 a.
- Field Marshal ; 288 b.
- Mr. ; 221 b.
- Denis, Popish Bishop of Limerick ; 198 a.

Conway—cont.

- Sir Edw., Secretary of State, letters of; 216 a, 216 b.
 - letters to; 216 b.
 - John, warrant touching; 280 a.
 - Thomas, letter of; 441 a.
 - Conyer, Mr.; 45 b.
 - Conyngham :
 - Lieut. John, letter of; 295 b.
 - W., letter of; 289 a.
 - William, petition of his wife Mary; 527a, 543 b.
 - Canyon, John, of Worcester; 638 a.
 - Cook, Cooke :
 - Capt.; 254 a.
 - Col.; 617 a.
 - and the Louth tenants; 590 b.
 - Leinster forces under; 602 a.
 - letter of; 151 b.
 - Mr.; 240 a.
 - instruction to; 240 a.
 - late incumbent of St. Michael's Chester, committed under Act of Uniformity; 387 a.
 - secretary; 247 a, 552 b.
 - Sir E.; 239 a.
 - Edward; 109 a, 109 b, 151 b.
 - Geoffrey; 361 a.
 - Henry; 166 a.
 - Hugh le, or le Ken, of Dublin; 265 b.
 - John, letter of; 229 b.
 - of Leicester; 413 b.
 - — gift by; 413 b.
 - of Wulpet, will of; 333 b.
 - M. H., letter of; 38 a.
 - Margaret; 109 b.
 - Nicholas, fisher; 414 b.
 - P. B. Davies, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 - Peter, John Hedon v. case of; 414 a, 421 a.
 - Sir Richard, Secretary in Ireland; 380 b.
 - Ensign Robert; 595 a.
 - Robert, clerk, will of; 333 a.
 - letter of; 386 b.
 - of Weytrode, will of; 333 b.
 - Thomas, player; 430 b.
 - of Bristol, will of; 335 a.
 - Walter, instructions to; 243 b.
 - Capt. Sir Walsingham; 593 a.
 - William, of Oundle, will of; 334 b.
 - alias Wright, of Sprowston, will of; 334 a.
 - clockmaker; 392 b.
- See Coke.
- Cookesey, John, of Worcester; 638 b.
 - Cookman, Major Henry, letter of; 38 a.
 - Coole, Lieut., Andrew; 591 a.
 - Cooleredan, co. Louth, lands in; 532 a.
 - Cooleragh, land of; 525 b.
 - Coombe, Mr., of Warwick; 434 a.
- Cooper :
- Lord Keeper, letters of; 31 b.
 - Mr., letters of and to; 244 a.
 - Allen, letter of; 290 a.
 - Sir A. Ashley, letter of; 212 a.
 - Benjamin, petition of; 246 b.
 - George, petition of his relict, Elizabeth; 523 b.
 - John, witness; 262 b.
 - sermons by; 584 b.
 - of Pontefract; 274 a.
 - John Mabel, letter of; 293 b.
 - Jona, letter of; 294 a.
 - Nich., letter of; 37 a.
 - Stephen, mercer; 6 b.
 - Thomas, of Chester; 361 b, 365 b.
 - burglar; 540 b, 541 b, 542 a.
 - William, of Waterford, petition of; 538 a.
- See Cowper.
- Coote :
- Lord (1663); 508 b.
 - Richard, petition of (1663); 519 a.
 - Col., letters of; 49 a.
 - C., letter of; 292 b.
 - Sir Charles; 521 b, 611 a, 612 b, 614 b, 615 a, 618 a.
 - articles by; 582 a.
 - his cruelties; 603 a.
 - his death; 603 b.
 - Col. Chidley; 533 a, 596 a.
 - at Dundalk; 599 a.
 - Col. Thomas, his company; 506 a.
- Cope :
- General, his orders; 12 b.
 - Sir John, his army; 313 b.
 - and the rebels; 571 a.
 - Sir William, MSS. of; xx.
- Copenhagen; 293 a.
- letter dated at; 16 b.
- Coper, William, witness; 262 b.
- Copinger, Miss, to be Duchess of Norfolk; 485 a.
- Copmanthorp, co. York; 271 a.
- Coppinger, Sir John, of the Mint; 65 b.
- Coppord, manor of; 635 b.
- Copthall, Essex, lease of mansion and park of; 277 b.

- Copton, near Faversham, manor of; 330 a.
 - Coquina, Edmund and John de; 268 a.
 - Corballis, lands of; 525 b.
 - Corbeck, M. de, letter of; 39 b.
 - Corbet, Corbett :
 - Col., letters of; 31 b.
 - Dr., poems by; 582 b.
 - Charles, petition of; 506 a.
 - Humphrey, of Stoke Newington; 441 a.
 - Sir Jo., a prisoner; 210 a.
 - John, grant of; 426 a.
 - alias* Bagenall, Katherine, petition of; 502 b.
 - Miles, letters of; 9 a, 9 b.
 - orders signed by; 9 a, 10 a.
 - Richard, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 - Richard, petition of; 506 a.
 - poems by; 584 a.
 - inq. post mortem of; 264 b.
 - Sir Rob.; 262 b.
 - Rowland, of Manton; 435 b.
 - Samuel, prisoner; 549 b.
 - Walter, Cristina, daughter of; 300 b.
 - Corbets, the, of Hadley; 262 b.
 - Cordage, foreign; 247 a.
 - Cordall, Wm., Solicitor-General, grant to; 277 b.
 - Cordwainers [of England], the; 116 b.
 - Corfe Castle :
 - description of; 208 b.
 - story of, book called; xiii, 208 a, 211 a.
 - Corfylde, R., of Wynscombe; 639 b.
 - Cork; 22 a, 138 a, 493 b, 495 b, 496 a, 624 a.
 - corporation of, MSS. of; xxiii.
 - houses in; 502 b.
 - hospital at; ib.
 - governor of; 527 b.
 - mayor, &c., security given to; 31 a.
 - natives of (1660); 99 a.
 - port of; 252 a.
 - taking off the embargo from (1762); 189 a.
 - expected attack by the French on (1779); 200 b.
 - county, specification of lands in; 520 a, 520 b.
 - James II.'s lands in; 497 b, 498 a, 498 b.
 - the army in (1649); 601 a.
 - magistrates in; 582 a.
 - Bishop of (1663), Michael Boyle; 545 b.
 - petition of; 501 a.
 - Earl of, Richard Boyle, petition of (1663); 503 b, 504 a.
- Corlett :
- Ensign Anthony; 591 a.
 - Captain George; 591 a, 598 b.
- Corn Bill for Ireland, speech on; 183 a.
- Cornbury, Lord :
 - letters of; 54 a.
 - commission to (1667); 280 a.
- Corner, Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
- Cornes, M., letter of; 37 a.
- Cornwall v. Hawes, writ of error; 123 a.
- Cornwalshe, John, of the Irish Exchequer; 499 b.
- Cornwell, Col., letters of; 31 b.
- Cornhell :
 - Gervase de; 318 b.
 - Ralph de, gift by; 323 a.
 - Reginald de; 341 a.
 - gift by; 323 a.
- Cornhulle, Henry de, Chancellor; 632 b.
- Cornish :
 - Henry; 125 a, 125 b.
 - his wife; 125 b.
 - Richard, gent., of London, will of; 334 b.
- Cornwaleys :
- Sir Thomas, treasurer of Calais, &c.; 277 a.
 - chartulary, &c. of; xiii, 277 b.
 - grants, &c. to; ib.
 - his heir; ib.
 - Anne, wife of Sir Thomas, grant to; ib.
- Cornwall :
 - Act for making rivers, &c. of, navigable (1670); 141 b.
 - tin lands, &c. in; 91 b.
 - petition, &c. of owners of; ib.
 - amount of tin raised in; 92 a.
 - duchy of; 164 b, 245 b, 581 b.
 - Earl of, Edmund, his halliffs (1291); 346 b.
 - Richard, grant by; 262 b.
 - charter by; 263 b.
 - letter of (1717); 40 b.
 - Countess of (40 Hen. III.); 87 b.
- Cornwallis :
 - Lord (1668); 166 a.
 - Charles, letters to (1741-1762); 288 b.
 - (1757); 224 b.
 - afterwards Marquis, Charles (1762-1805), calendar of papers of; 287 b-296 b.
 - letters of and to, &c.; ib.
 - printed "Correspondence of;" 288 a.
 - Charles second, Jane, daughter of; 277 a.
 - promotions in the East Indies, on recommendations from, &c. (1792); 295 a.
 - Mrs., letter of; 57 a.

Cornwallis—cont.

- Catherine, letter of; 295 a.
 John, letter of; 288 b.
- Corporations :
 Act for well governing of; 275 a.
 Commissioners for regulating; 389 a.
- Corr, Edmond, of Roscommon; 466 b.
 Corrigan, lands of; 525 b.
 Corry, —; 568 b.
 Corscomb; 332 a.
 Corsellis, Nic., letter of; 46 b.
 Corslack, Dr. Abraham, physician; 231 b.
 Corstowne, co. Dublin; 498 a.
 Cortain, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Corte, Capt.; 385 a.
 Corton; 333 b.
 Courayer, Henry le; 367 a.
 Corvieser, Alfvinus; 341 a.
 Corysa, or gravedo, an epidemic; 227 a.
 Coryton, Sir John, petitions of; 252 b.
- Cosby :
 Captain; 593 b, 594 a.
 — at Stradbally; 609 a.
 Licut., letter of; 289 b.
 Will., merchant of Dartmouth, will of; 334 b.
- Cosby, co. Leicester; 405 a.
 Cosford, manor of; 635 a.
 Cosin, Richard, document signed by; 227 b.
 Cossheaman, Will., of Cranbrook, will of; 332 a.
 Cossoney, Baron de, letter of; 37 a.
- Costello, Costlagh :
 the Dillons of; 542 b.
 Viscount Dillon, his proceedings in Ireland; 548 a, 604 a—616 b, passim.
- Costly, the Long and, ship named; 240 a.
- Costyn, Costeyn :
 Henry, of Leicester; 408 b, 410 b.
 — and Matilda; 419 b.
- Cotes :
 Mr., Comptroller of Chester, letter to; 378 a.
 Alexander, 375 a.
 Jo., of Woodcote; 219 b.
 John de, chaplain; 627 a.
- Cotgrave, William, mayor of Chester, letter of; 374 b.
- Cotha, letter dated at; 211 b.
- Cotland, a division of land, note on; 322 b.
- Cotom, John de, sheriff of London; 633 a.
- Cotta, John de la; 373 b.
- Cottingham, co. Northampton, churchwardens of; 104 a.
- Cottington :
 Lord, petition to (1631); 247 a.
 Sir F.; 2 a.
 — letters of and to; 216 a, 216 b.
 — document signed by; 210 a.
- Cotton :
 Sir R., at Epworth; 4 b.
 Sir Robert, his remonstrance; 581 a.
 — relation by; 583 b.
 — papers by; 585 a.
 — tracts by; 584 b.
 Robert, of Giding, prisoner; 50 a.
 Sir Thomas, letter to; 7 a.
 — examination of; 5 b.
 — his manors; 3 a.
 Thomas, letter of; 292 b.
 — steward of Leicester guild; 416 a.
- Cotton, co. Warwick; 377 b.
- Cotton wool, import of; 246 b.
- Cottrell :
 Richard, petition of; 504 b.
 Stephen, letter of; 233 a.
- Cotyngham, Thos.; 367 b.
- Coul, co. Angus; 12 b.
- Coulbrooke, Paul; 3 b.
- Coullez, M., letter of; 39 b.
- Coulthrop, Sir Robert, governor of Cork; 527 b.
- Council, the, Lords of; letters, &c., of, and to; 373 b–378 b, 380 a–383 b, passim, 387 b, 389 a–400 a, passim.
- Council of State, United Provinces, letters of; 35 b, 37 a.
- Council Orders about coinage, &c.; 61 a.
- Counter, Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
- Couper :
 Eliz., wife of Thomas, of Quennington, will of; 334 b.
 John, of Fletton; 413 b.
 — of Leicester, submission of; 421 b.
- Courchelet, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
- Courcy, Chevalier de, letter of; 37 a.
- Courriere, Baron de, letter of; 39 b.
- Courtenay, Courtney :
 Henry, of the Irish House of Commons, speech of; 175 a.
 John, son of Sir Philip; 169 b.
 Sir Philip; 169 b.
 William, letter of (1708); 46 a.
 — elected Abp. of Canterbury; 340 a.
- Courteville, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
- Courty, Henry; 278 b.
- Courthuy, Baroness of, letter of; 37 a.
- Courtier's Creed, the; 25 b.

Courtray; 32 a.

governor of, letter of; 39 b.
 magistrates of, letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 39 b.

Courveur, M., letter of; 37 a.

Cousins, Robert, of Leicester; 439 b.

Coventry; 332 b, 333 a, 335 b, 429 b, 474 a.

Corporation of, MSS. of; xxiii.

letter dated at; 434 a.

committee at; 7 b.

the rebels near; 569 a.

St. Michael's Church; 219 b.

James II. at; 219 b.

see of; 336 a.

Coventry and Lichfield, Bishop of :

(1320); 357 b.

(1355); 358 b.

(1454), signature; 267 b.

Coventry, Lord :

keeper (1667); 98 b.

— writ to; 418 b.

— letter of; 436 b.

(1753); 219 b.

(1757); 223 b.

MSS. of; xx.

Coventry, Mr.; 252 a.

secretary to Duke of York, letters to; 251 a.

Secretary, H., letter of; 391 a.

— letter to; 391 a.

Sir John; ix.

Sir Thomas, Lord Keeper, certificates to; 242 a.

— petition to; ib.

William, warrant countersigned by; 279 b.

— secretary to Duke of York (1660); 278 a.

Cow-pox, the; 233 a.

Coward :

pirate; 399 a.

Mrs. Mary; 279 a.

Cowdrey, Thomas; 279 b.

Cowerythagh, co. Louth; 590 b.

Cowes; 257 b.

Cowfold in Rotherwick, Hampshire; 263 b.

petition from; 263 b.

manor of; 639 a.

Cowling, Culyng, Kent; 327 b.

Mr.; 158 a.

Cownley, William; 279 a.

Cowper :

Lord Chancellor, letter of (1714); 57 a.

— letter of (1715); 58 b.

Countess, MSS. of; xx.

Lady, letter of (1714); 57 a.

Benjamin, of Yarmouth; 243 b.

Edw., examination of; 397 a.

Jervase, of Pontefract; 275 b.

John, of Pontefract; 275 b.

— mayor of Chester (1562), orders of; 360 b.

T., letter of; 392 a.

Thos., alderman of Chester, letter to; 389 a.

William, letter of; 293 b.

See Cooper.

Cows, Richard, of Dublin; 523 a.

Cowthorpe, Colthropp, co. York, lands, &c. in; 272 a, 273 a.

indentures, &c. concerning; 272 b.

Cowry, Stephen, of London; 6 b.

Cox, Cox :

Archdeacon, his Marlborough Papers, &c; 1 a, 1 b, 14 b.

24 b, 26 b.

M. de, letters of; 32 a.

Mr., 163 a.

— statement of his case; 163 a.

Hiram, letters of; 290 a, 291 a.

John, deputy to under-sheriff of co. Gloucester; 151 b.

Mary; 546 b.

Rich.; 74 a.

Sir Richard, his pamphlet; 442 b.

— Chas. O'Connor's character of; 443 a.

Cornet Walter; 596 b.

Coxon, Samuel, of the Trinity House; 249 b.

Coxson, Wm.; 382 b.

Coynt, counsellor of Marie de Medici; 554 b.

Crabeels, M., letter of; 37 a.

Crabhouse; 333 b.

Cracroft, Lieut., letter of; 291 a.

Cradock :

Dr., of Covent Garden; 221 a.

Francis; 119 a.

Johanne, wife of Robert, examination of; 433 a.

— depositions concerning; ib.

Sir Joseph, commissioner; 275 a.

Norrice, steward of Leicester; 419 a.

Craforth, Katherine, of Oakham, will of; 334 b.

Crafton, Duke, trooper, petition of; 517 a.

Crag, —, elected to the College of Physicians; 228 b.

Craggs :

Mr., junr.; 54 a.

— letters of; 35 b, 36 b.

James, secretary; 39 b, 57 b.

- Craggs, James, Secretary—cont.
— letters of; 27 a, 31 a, 31 b, 32 b, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
Lieut. Wm., letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b.
- Craig; 301 a, 302 b.
Major; letters of; 289 a.
- Cranbourne, Viscount, letter of (1604); 434 b.
- Cranbrook; 332 a, 332 b, 340 a.
church of; 337 b.
- Cranbury, near Winchester, letters addressed to; 63 a, 63 b.
- Crane:
Capt., of the Trinity House; 254 b.
Henry; 279 a.
Henry, jurymen; 89 a.
Hugh, purchase from; 263 b.
Sir John, letter of; 434 b.
Robert, of Wadlingfield, will of; 333 b.
Thomas, of Palgrave, will of; 334 a.
- Cranfield, co. Bedford, constables of, letter to; 4 a.
- Cranford, Roger de, witness; 404 b.
- Crannooh; 307 a, 307 b.
- Craven, Earl of:
(1668); 166 a.
(1670); 174 b.
of the Trinity House (1670); 254 a.
his regiment (1675); 390 a.
picture of (1680); 257 a.
his picture (1682); 258 b.
letter of (1792); 295 a.
- Craven, Lieut. John; 595 a.
- Crawford, Crawford, Craufarde:
Moor, gold mines in; xii, 84 b.
— Lodd-hill-house in; 84 b.
Priory, Fifeshire, Lord Glasgow's manuscripts at, Mr. Fraser's report on; 304 a.
Earl of (1543); 306 b. and Lyndsey, Earl of, John, petition, &c. of (1666); 102 a, 102 b.
Earl of, letter of (1710); 38 a.
— (1732); 314 b.
— John, his command of the Hessians in the '45 rebellion; 311 a, 313 b, 314 b. and Balcarres, Earl of, MSS. of; xx.
Hew, of Kilbirny, agreement by; 309 a.
— excommunication of; ib.
James and Thomas, precept to; 308 a.
Malcolm, infetment of; 308 a.
Lady Mary Lindsay, her death; 304 a.
Robert, of Paisley Abbey; 309 b.
- Crawfordjohn:
rector of; 306 b.
barony and lands of; 308 a.
church of; ib.
- Crawley, Sussex; 335 a.
- Craynsley, co. Northampton; 420 b.
- Creagh:
Sir Michael, lord mayor of Dublin, his regiment for James II.; 494 b.
Abp. Peter, of Waterford; 460 b.
Richard; 583 a.
- Creak, Thomas; 279 b.
- Creechtonne, John and Robert, precept to; 308 a.
- Creech, battle of, gunpowder before; 625 a.
- Credde, Richard de, of St. Ethelbert's, Hereford; 635 b.
- Credling, co. York; 274 a.
- Creed, the Countess's; 25 b.
- Creeks, the; 252 a.
- Creehy, Bricias de, witness; 305 a.
- Creich, R. Beaton of; 301 a.
- Creich; 306 a.
- Creichthoun, Abraham, rector of Crawfordjohn; 306 a, 306 b.
- Creif, the Hessians at; 313 b.
- Crelly, letter to; 613 b.
- Cremona; 34 a.
- Crespin, Abbé de, letter of; 37 a.
- Cresswell, —, readings on statutes by; 584 b.
- Cressy:
George, captain; 597 a.
Capt. George; 534 b.
Hugh; ib.
William; 146 b.
- Creveceur, Cravequer, Ham de, grant by; 345 a.
- Crew, Crew:
readings on statutes by; 584 b.
Lord (1666), his privilege case; 101 b.
— (1668); 166 a.
John; 152 a.
Sir Randall, serjeant-at-law; 287 b, 246 b.
Thomas; 581 b.
William, of Chester; 361 b.
- Crichton, Thos., letter of; 292 b.
- Crickley, Benj., alderman of Chester; 361 b.
- Crifford, John, of Royston, will of; 332 b.
- Cricklade; 630 a.
- Criminals, bodies of, allowed for dissection; 234 b.
- Criolli, Bertram de; 357 b.
- Crispe:
Capt., of the Trinity House; 254 b.
Capt. Edward, of the Trinity House; 253 a.
J., answers of; 136 a.
- Crispe—cont.
John, letter of; 291 a.
Sir Nicholas; 136 a.
Thomas; 136 a.
— answers of; 136 a.
- Crispine, Edmund, of London; 227 a.
- Crisploe, Incks; 125 b.
- Cristall, abbot and convent of; 413 b.
- Cristian, Robert, dean of Ospringe, assault on; 349 b.
- Croacards, foreign coins, suppression of; 347 b.
- Crocket, baillie, of Edinburgh; 311 b.
- Crockett, Lieut., letter of; 290 b.
- Crook, John, of Leicester; 420 a.
- Croft, Crofte:
Capt.; 379 a, 379 b.
— Francis, letter of; 379 a.
James, letters of; 431 a, 431 b.
John, of Ratcliffe, mariner; 243 a.
Robert, of Leicester; 420 a.
Walter, of Norforth, will of; 333 b.
- Croftes, Joane, of Leicester; 441 a.
- Crofton:
Craffon, Sir Edward, of the Mote; 516 b.
John, letter of; 291 a.
Lieut. William; 596 b.
- Crofts:
Col., letter of; 38 a.
Benjamin, petitions of; 512 b, 551 a.
Sir Henry; 121 b.
Lieut. Tho.; 593 a.
- Croissy:
Chevalier de, letter of; 59 b.
M. de; 31 a, 556 b, 557 a.
- Croke:
Sir Henry; 211 a.
James, justice; 630 a.
- Croker:
John, engraver; 68 b.
— petitions of; 67 b, 68 a.
— his appointment to the Mint; 68 a.
- Crokev v. Smith; 170 b.
- Croly, Katherine, of Athy, petition of; 510 b.
- Cromartie, Cromertie:
Lord, letter of (1703); 45 a.
— letters of (1705); 31 b.
— letter of (1709); 37 a.
— letter of (1710); 38 a.
— letter of (1711); 39 b.
— trial of (1746); 288 b.
- Cromer; 334 a.
Nich., of Bristol, will of; 333 a.
- Cromlin, co. Dublin, manor of; 549 a.
- Crompton, Wm., letters of; 387 b.
- Crompton:
Lord, Ralph (15th century); 263 a.
— his excentor; 266 a.
— his property and affairs; 267 b.
— Henry, commission to (19 Eliz.); 417 a.
— his going to Ireland (1599); 428 a.
— Mr. Lane murdered by; 229 b.
- Major (1646); 10 b.
- Ann, letters of and to; 11 a.
— petitions of; 11 b, 12 a.
- Mande de; 264 b.
- Oliver; 154 a, 158 b.
— letters of; 248 a, 385 b, 386 a, 582 a.
— Lieut.-General (1644); 3 a.
— in Isle of Ely; 8 a.
— Lord General, mayor of Leicester's visit to (1649); 429 b.
— his going to Worcester; ib.
— his siege of Clonmel, &c.; 578 b, et seq.
— in Ireland (1649); 611 a, 611 b.
— before Clonmel; 612 a.
— returns to England; ib.
— his storming of Drogheda; 599 a, 611 a.
— his measures for Ireland; 576 a.
— proclaimed Lord Protector; 386 b.
— proclaimed at Leicester; 429 b.
— protector; 28 b, 29 b, 235 b.
— grant by; 361 b.
— commission from; 582 b.
— ordinances of; 387 a.
— letters patent of, to inhabitants of Leicester; 418 b.
— (1633); 437 b.
— his orders for general fasts, &c.; 438 a.
— his undertaking with Mazarin; 29 b.
— his letter to the Sultan (1657); 640 b.
— excepted from general pardon; 30 a.
— notice of; 234 a.
— speech against; 584 b.
— prayer for, objection to; 300 b.
- Major Oliver; x, 1 a.
— petition of; 11 b.
— deceased (1651) his effects, &c.; 11 a.
- Richard, Lord Protector, address of Leicester corporation to; 438 a.
- T. or Thomas, letters of and to; 11 a.
— his brother Noll; ib.
Col. Vere, his troop in Ireland; 517 a.

- Crondone, manor of; 635 a.
 Crone :
 M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Mr., traitor; 565 a.
 Cronstrom, M. de, letters of; 31 b, 35 b, 37 a, 39 b.
 Crooke :
 Dr., plague doctor; 229 a.
 John, king's printer; 504 a.
 Cropely, Luke, suit of; 88 a.
 Croppe, John; 380 a.
 Crosby :
 Lieut. Henry; 592 b.
 John, of London, will of; 333 a.
 Sir Pierce, his lands; 511 a.
 Thomas, quartermaster; 596 a.
 Ensign Thomas; 592 b.
 Crosland, Sir Jordan, commissioner; 275 a.
 Cross, Crosse :
 Mr.; 369 b.
 —, payment to; 526 a.
 Edward, of Ratcliffe; 239 a.
 Captain John; 593 a.
 John, of Liverpool, mem. touching; 386 b.
 William, petition of; 525 b.
 —, alderman of Chester; 365 b.
 —, mercer, of London, will of; 334 b.
 Crosthwaite, opening of the Wad Mine in; 213 a.
 Croston, co. York; 272 a.
 Croston, lands of; 305 a.
 Crouch :
 John, musician; 12 b.
 Nicholas, letter to; 2 b.
 Crouchback :
 Edmund, son of Henry III.; 404 a.
 —, Earl of Leicester, charters of; 404 a, 409 a, 421 a.
 Crougham, John, of Rosecommon; 466 b.
 Crow, Crowe, 156 a, 156 b, 609 b.
 Mr., letters of; 32 a.
 —, payment to; 526 a.
 Christopher, consul, letter of; 47 b.
 Sir Saeveell, jewels of Chas. I. pawned by; 209 a.
 —, letters of and to; 243 a.
 Thomas, petition of; 525 b.
 Crowdon, Ferdinando, counterfeit of money, certificate touching; 392 b.
 Crowther :
 Brigadier, letters of; 37 a, 38 a.
 Dr.; 279 a.
 Croxford, Alison and Alice; 629 b.
 Croxton :
 Captain; 591 b.
 Miles, petitions of; 243 b.
 —, order concerning; 244 a.
 —, complaint against; ib.
 Croy, Princess de, letters of; 37 a, 37 b.
 Croydon, 332 a.
 letters dated at; 2 a, 2 b, 209 b.
 vicar of; 265 a.
 Croye, M. La Coste de, letter of; 38 a.
 Cruden, J., letter of; 289 a.
 Crndwell, rector of; 333 a.
 Cruger, Lt.-Col., letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 Cruice, Lawrence, son of Christopher; 548 a.
 Cruicestown, co. Dublin; 548 a.
 Crumwell, John de; 170 a.
 Crumlin; 548 b.
 Drynagh, near; 506 a.
 Crundale, church of; 319 b.
 Cruso, Capt. John; 249 b.
 Crusoe, Mr., of Yarmouth; 253 a.
 Crutheley, Benjamin, commission to; 362 a.
 Cuckson, Dr., incumbent of Millbrooke; 5 b.
 Cudmore, Capt. John, letters of; 291 a.
 Cuffe :
 J., letter of; 582 a.
 Sir James; 503 b.
 Lieut. Thomas; 521 a.
 Calavin, letter dated at; 466 b.
 Calavine, co. Sligo; 482 a.
 Calboy, Wester and Easter, lands of; 309 b.
 Culennemervan lands; 505 a.
 Culford Hall, Suffolk :
 document dated at; 288 b.
 expenses of household, account book (1704); 277 b.
 Culinge, tithes of; 317 b.
 Cullen :
 Viscount, Brian (1668); 117 a.
 —, answer of; ib.
 Viscountess, Elizabeth (1668); ib.
 —, answer of; ib.
 Cullin, Colonel; 604 a.
 Culloden :
 D. Forbes of; 310 b, 312 a.
 letter dated at; 312 a.
 Cullowe :
 William, petition of; 501 b, 504 a.
 Culraghan siege; 603 b.
- Cully :
 John; 513 a.
 Margaret; 375 b.
 —, warrant touching; ib.
 William; 626 a.
 Culme :
 Lieut.-Col.; 595 a.
 —, weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Capt. Annady, weekly charge of his troop; ib.
 —, Amedeus; 595 a.
 Martha, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Culpepper :
 Lord (1688); 555 b.
 John, of East Farleigh, will of; 340 a.
 Walter, his wife Johanna; 345 a.
 Culross :
 abbey of; 304 a.
 charters relating to; 307 a.
 Cumberland :
 ship money; 383 a.
 Duke of, his march against the rebels (1745); 313 b, 314 a.
 —, (1748); 570 a.
 —, (1751); 284 b.
 Earl of, George, conveyance to (25 Eliz.); 272 a.
 —, (1591); 239 a.
 Cumbwell, prior of; 337 a.
 Cumming :
 David, letters of; 291 a.
 Sir William Gordon Gordon, MSS. of; xx.
 Cumyn, Andrew, of Elphin; 466 b.
 Cunha, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Cuningsby, Lord (1707); 394 b.
 Cunningham, Cuninghame :
 Brig.-Gen., letter of; 289 a.
 Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
 Major, letter of; 38 a.
 Mr., of London; 471 a, 471 b, 472 b, 478 a.
 B., letter of; 291 a.
 Jo., letter of; 37 a.
 Lieut. John, letters of; 291 a, 294 a, 294 b.
 Mary, petition of; 519 a.
 Cupar; 305 a.
 document dated at; 307 b.
 Tolbooth, of, document dated at; 307 b.
 Cuper, M. de, letters of; 38 a, 39 b.
 Cuppage, Major, letters of; 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.
 Curfew bell, the, in Leicester; 426 b.
 Curfey, Curfy :
 Edward, letter of; 290 a.
 Major, letter of; 295 a.
 E. J., letter of; ib.
 Curleuach, Simon, alderman of Leicester; 405 a, 405 b, 408 a.
 Currants, import of; 246 b.
 Curreen, Henry, soldier; 545 b.
 Curriers [of England], the, 116 b.
 Curry :
 Dr. John, of Dublin, his connexion with Chas. O'Connor; 447 b.
 —, letter of; 485 b.
 —, letters to; 455 a, et seq.
 —, his historical memoirs of the Irish rebellion of 1641; 450 a, 462 a, et seq.
 —, his account of the Irish rebellion; 573 b, 575 b.
 See O'Connor.
 Martin; 484 b.
 Curson, Joan, of Ingoldsthorpe, will of; 334 a.
 Curtis :
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Capt. George, letter of; 294 a.
 Cusack :
 v. Usber, motion paper, &c.; 149 b.
 Capt., in Ireland; 600 a. chancellor, letter of; 582 a.
 Mr.; 463 a.
 Christopher, collections of; 581 a.
 John, his lands in Meath; 519 a.
 Lieut. Miehell; 595 b.
 Ensign Robert; 594 b.
 Cushell, George, license farmer, petitions of; 511 a.
 Custodes of shrines, &c., their accounts; 344 a.
 Customs, the :
 Bill for regulating; 250 b. regulations, &c. concerning. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
 farmers of; viii, 131 a. manorial, illustrations of; 625 b, et seq.
 Cutler :
 Sir John, architect; 230 a.
 —, loan by; 230 b.
 —, debt of the College of Physicians to; 231 b.
 —, his executors; ib.
 William, sen., 139 b.
 —, answer of; ib.
 —, jun., petition of; 139 b.
 Cuts :
 Lord, letter of (1702); 17 b.
 —, letters of (1705); 16 a, 23 b.
 J., letter of; 560 a.

Cyprus; 239 b.
 monasteries, &c. of; 22 a.
 Cyphers used in Irish Government correspondence :
 (1649-59); 618 b-623 b.
 (1665); 622 b-623 b.
 Cyrringe church; 316 a.

D.

- Daequille, Chevalier, letter of; 37 a.
 Daere :
 Lord, Francis (1661), of the Trinity House; 250 a.
 Thomas de; 264 b.
 D'Acuna, M., letter of; 39 b.
 Dade :
 Thos., junr.; 399 a.
 — senior; 399 a.
 Dagnall :
 Ann, answer of; 136 a.
 Marion, will of; 335 a.
 Richard, deceased; 136 a.
 Thomas v.; 136 a.
 Daie, Edmund; 376 a.
 Daintree, John, Wigston's Hospital and; 418 b.
 Dal Verme, Comte, letter of; 36 a.
 D'Alais, M., letter of; 38 a.
 D'Albenas, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Dalby :
 Edward; 386 b.
 Fior, letters of; 28 a.
 Richard, of Leicester; 429 a.
 Robert de, of Leicester; 421 a.
 D'Albyville, Marquis; 219 b.
 Dale :
 Dr. Valentine; 583 b.
 William, his proposal; 79 a.
 Dalhousie :
 Earl of, letters of (1705); 31 b.
 MSS. of; xx.
 Col., letter of; 37 a.
 Dalison or Davison, Sir Roger or Sir Robert; 87 b.
 Dalkeith :
 document dated at; 309 b.
 Castle; 297 b.
 Lord of (1388); 307 a.
 Dallamer, Lord (1669); 389 a.
 Dalley, Thomas, Vicar of Cheping, Berks, will of; 333 a.
 Dalling :
 Sir John, letter of; 289 b.
 — address to; 296 b.
 Will., canon of St. Mary Overy, will of; 332 a.
 Dallington, Sir Robert, aphorisms from; 577 b.
 D'Alloune, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Dallows, Mr., a debtor; 64 b.
 Dalmahoy, Thos.; 108 b, 109 a.
 Dalmás, Madame, letter of; 35 b.
 Dalmatia, province of; 22 b.
 Dalmatic, the, privilege of; 317 b, 318 b.
 Dalpowy; 313 b.
 Dalrymple :
 Lord, letters of (1705); 31 b.
 Major, letter of; 295 b.
 A., letter of; 289 a.
 C., Esq., M.P., MSS. of; xx.
 Sir David, letter of; 38 a.
 Major Stair, letter of; 295 a.
 Dalton :
 Captain; 616 a.
 James, fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford; 380 b.
 John; 613 a.
 Mi., on Cambridge committee; 10 a.
 Thomas and Alicia, of Leicester; 422 a.
 Sir William, commissioner; 275 a.
 Daluulsy; 306 b.
 Daly :
 Capt.; 608 b.
 Mr., of the Irish House of Commons; 200 a.
 Thady; 582 a.
 Damastown :
 co. Dublin; 498 a.
 lands of; 506 a.
 Dambir, Will., executor; 266 a.
 Damers, Thomas; 358 a.
 Danorezant, Madlle., letter of; 38 a.
 Dampier, H., opinion by; 233 b.
 Dampy :
 Earl of (1636), letter of; 269 a.
 — his secretary Floyd; 64 a.
 Thomas, commissioner; 275 a.
 Dancer, John, letter of; 37 a.
 D'Anere, Marquis, account of; 19 a.
 Dandridge, J., letter of; 292 b.
 Dane, Gilbert, seaman, petition of; 509 a.
 Danegeld, gold and; 319 a.
 Daneh, Ranulph de; 356 b.
 Danenh', Radulph; 356 a.
 Danes, the :
 in Ireland; 585 b.
 in Kent; 324 a.
 Danet :
 Gerard, of Brounekyngesthorpe, deeds by; 420 b.
 Robert, of Leicester, conveyance by; 420 b.
 — bond by; ib.
 William; 413 a.
 Daniel, Danyell :
 Major; 385 a.
 Mrs.; 6 b.
 Lieut. Isack; 594 b.
 Nicholas; 367 b.
 Richard, his wife Elizabeth; 6 b.
 Samuel, letters of; 291 a.
 Thomas, trustee; 6 b.
 W., goldsmith; 6 b.
 Danielstoue lands, co. Kildare; 505 a.
 Dannett :
 John, his manor; 414 b.
 Lucy, Wigston's Hospital and; 418 b.
 Richard, of Brunkingthorpe; 414 b.
 Dantzic; 30 a.
 city of, letter of; 37 a.
 tin sold in; 92 b.
 Danvers, Hugo; 405 a.
 Danvers :
 a witness; 155 a (note), 156 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 269 a.
 Will. and Joan; 262 b.
 Danyes, Hugh; 511 b.
 Darbshire, — (person); 382 b.
 Darbye, John, of New Sarum; 361 a.
 D'Arco, Comte, letter of; 38 a.
 D'Arcy, Darcy :
 Lord, his players, gift to (1599); 428 a.
 — letter of; 560 a.
 — (1668); 118 a.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Mrs. Ann; 535 b.
 Anthony; ib.
 Conyers, commissioner; 275 a.
 James, petition of; 123 a.
 — commissioner; 275 a.
 Lady Mary, payment to; 94 b.
 Nicholas, petition of; 550 b.
 Oliver, Bishop of Dromore; 605 a, 611 b, 612 a. or Dorehy, Patrick; 602 b.
 Sir Philip v. Prior of St. John of Jerusalem; 169 b.
 Dardis, Walter, Governor of Ballinaleck; 610 a.
 Darrell, John, demise to; 329 a.
 Darkins, William, trooper; 546 b.
 Darling, Adam, sub-sheriff of Dublin; 507 a.
 Darmiez, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Darr, co. Kildare; 551 a.
 Darrell, Dame Anne, "buried three former husbands;"
 139 a.
 Dartmouth; 248 b, 252 b, 333 a, 334 b.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 pirates near; 242 b.
 port of; 94 a.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xx.
 — elder of the Trinity House (1683); 258 a.
 — master; ib.
 — address signed by (1685); 259 a.
 — at Coventry (1687); 219 b.
 — admiral, letter to (1688); 259 b.
 — lands given to; 497 b.
 — grant to; 499 a.
 — arrest of (1691); 562 b.
 — committed to the Tower; 565 a.
 — in the Tower; 565 b.
 — letter of (1710); 38 a.
 — the seals given to (1710); 43 b.
 — letter of (1711); 40 a.
 — letter to (1711); 39 a.
 — documents signed by (1712); 40 b.
 Dartmouth, H.M. frigate; 388 a.
 Darwall, Roger; 361 a.
 Darwell : citizen of Chester; 395 b.
 — his son Richard; 395 b.
 Dasent, Sir Geo. W., MS. belonging to; xx.
 Dashwood :
 George, his son's runaway match; 571 b.
 J., letters of; 294 b.
 Sir James, his motion; 220 a.
 D'Assigny, Comte, letter of; 40 a.
 D'Auderny, Baron, letter of; 39 b.
 Dauenport, Rauf; 368 a.

- Daungyr, custom called; 328 b.
 Daunt, Thomas, lands held by; 320 a.
 D'Avana, Count; 219 b.
 Davenant :
 —, Inspector-General of Exports and Imports; 135 b.
 Mr., letters of; 31 b, 32 a, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a.
 Dr. (1709), letters of; 37 a.
 Dr. Charles, letter of; 35 b.
 Davenport :
 Charles; 390 b.
 Sir John, agreement of; 371 b.
 Ranhe, town-clerk of Chester; 369 a.
 W. Brouley, Esq., M.P., MSS. of; xx.
 David II., of Scotland, charters by; 301 a.
 Davidson :
 Alexander, letters of; 290 a, 293 b, 294 a.
 Lieut. James, letters of; 294 b.
 Lieut. John, letter of; 295 a.
 Davies, Davis :
 Monstr.; 278 a.
 Mr., a captain; 20 a.
 Mr., of Mount Sorrell; 439 a.
 Edward, trooper, petition of; 517 a.
 Edward, of Rosse; 528 b.
 F. H., letter of; 289 b.
 Ensign Griffith; 592 a.
 Isaac, petition of; 530 b.
 Ensign John; 593 b.
 John, of Oswestry, pardon to; 12 b.
 Sir John, Attorney-General in Ireland; 582 b.
 — arguments by; 582 b, 585 a.
 — charge of; 585 a.
 — speech of; 582 a.
 — his writings; 572 b.
 Jonathan; 155 a, 156 b, 158 a.
 Sir Paul, clerk of the Council in Ireland; 530 a.
 — Secretary of State in Ireland; 535 a, 550 b.
 — report by; 508 b.
 — report by; 532 a.
 — wills, &c. concerning; 581 a.
 Robert, petition of; 528 b, 531 b.
 — of Edinburgh (D. De Foe); 49 a.
 Major Robert, letter of; 292 b.
 Rowland, quartermaster; 596 b.
 Samuel, of co. Montgomery; 46 a.
 T. H., letter of; 290 a.
 Ensign Thomas; 595 a.
 W. R., letter of; 294 a.
 William; 140 a.
 Sir William; 549 b.
 — recorder of Dublin, collections by; 581 a.
 D'Avila :
 Col., letter of; 38 a.
 Brigadier, letter of; 38 a.
 Davison :
 Secretary, letter of; 582 b.
 — letter to; ib.
 David, of Wapping, letter to; 245 b. or Dalison, Sir Robert or Sir Roger; 87 b.
 William, pardon to; 360 a.
 Davy, Davye :
 Ales, inn-holder of Leicester; 431 b.
 John; 268 a.
 Richard, of Leicester; 416 b.
 Thomas, of Leicester, grant to; 415 b.
 — of St. Michael Coslany, Norwich, will of; 334 a.
 Dayat, Thomas, mayor of Leicester; 420 b.
 Dawley (place), Duchess of Norfolk and; 568 b.
 Dawn, Daun :
 Imperial General Count; 20 a.
 Comte de, letter of; 38 a.
 Marshal; 19 b, 20 b, 21 b.
 — letter of; 20 b.
 Dawnay, Sir John, commissioner; 275 a.
 Daws, Sir William, a bishop; 41 b.
 Dawson :
 Mrs., Duchess of York's woman of the bedchamber; 278 a.
 —, warrant touching pension; 280 b.
 J., letter of; 394 a.
 John, of St. Olave's, Southwark, will of; 332 b.
 Captain John; 592 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Lieut. Josias; 595 b.
 Lawrence of Leicester, pardon to; 415 b.
 Rich., of Uttoxeter, will of; 335 b.
 Thomas, letters of; 37 a, 38 a.
 William, action by; 276 a.
 — letter of; 290 a.
 Dawstowe, William, of Taunton, will of; 332 a.
 Day, Cornet; 158 b.
 Daycote, Richard de; 367 a.
 Daynens or Deynens :
 John; 109 a.
 — certificate touching; 109 a.
 Dayot, Mons., letter of; 290 a.
 Dayrel, Simon, witness; 408 b.
 Dayrolle :
 Mons., prisoner; 557 b.
 Mr.; 34 a.
 — at the Hague; 20 b.
 John, letter of; 37 a.
 M., letters of; 38 a, 39 b.
 De Burgo or Burke, family, MS. history; 572 a, 582 b.
 De Caors, letters dated at; 218 a.
 De Condé, letter dated at; 28 a.
 De Flautmarbeau, letter dated at; 217 b.
 De Foe :
 Daniel, letters of; x, 1 a.
 — his letters from Scotland on the state of feeling there (1708); 44 b, 48 a.
 — receipt by; 27 a.
 — in Newgate, letter about; 43 b.
 De Grey, Attorney-General; 203 a.
 De la Hay, Peter, certificate touching; 143 a.
 De la Rue, letters of; 29 a.
 De la Warr :
 Earl, MSS. of; xx.
 Isabella, Baroness Dowager (1670), petition of; ix, 146 b.
 — her house by Clerkenwell Close; 146 b.
 De Laet, Arnout; 143 a.
 De Latre, Jean, commission, &c. to; 280 a.
 De L'Isle and Dudley, Lord, MSS. of; xx.
 De Machines family, the; 355 a.
 De Marie, letter dated at; 217 b.
 De Peyster, Capt., letter of; 289 a.
 De Pleurs :
 Edward; 133 b.
 Hester; 133 b.
 De Pointis, Mr.; 496 b.
 De Robethen, letter of; 27 a.
 De Rosny, Mr.; 283 a.
 De Seynib, William, conveyance to; 405 a.
 De Somerfeld, letter of; 16 b.
 De Superville, letter of; 36 a.
 De Taxis, Don Juan, commissioner; 95 a.
 De Vaux, Sir Theodore, petition, &c. of; 140 a.
 De Vos, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Dea, William; 613 b.
 Deal, 251 b, 252 a, 256 a.
 Castle; 553 a.
 Dean, forest of; 11 b, 124 b.
 Dean, Deane :
 Barker v., writ of error; 139 b.
 Chief Baron, death of; 58 b.
 H., town clerk of Reading; 287 b.
 Henry, Abp. of Canterbury, death of; 331 b.
 — will of; 334 b.
 Richard, payments to; 94 b.
 Col. Richard, letter to; 247 b.
 Timothy, sheriff of Chester; 361 b.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 Deare, Lieut.-Col., letters of; 293 b, 294 a.
 Dearsley :
 Thomas, informer; 71 b.
 — petition of; ib.
 Death, the Black, vacancies in benefices caused by; 337 a, 337 b, 338 a, 338 b.
 Deaz :
 Oliver; 609 b.
 Thomas, Bishop of Meath; ib.
 Debates in Irish House of Commons; 174 b, et seq.
 Debentures and warrants (1660-73), book of; 277 a.
 Deblin Cornet Cormack & Co.; 596 a.
 Deboner, Alexander and Cecily le, of Leicester; 408 a.
 Debraux, Le Chr., letters of; 290 b.
 Debt, Debts :
 distrain and arrest for, letters patent touching; 407 b.
 National, proposed Bill in Ireland for payment of; 178 a. prisoners for, in and about London, &c., petitions of; ix, 152 a, 153 a.
 — Act for relief, &c. of; 152 b.
 for goods sold, Act to make assignable (1669); 137 a.
 Deekham :
 Mrs., of Astwicke; 4 b.
 Mary, of Aswicke; 5 b.
 Decon, John, tailor, of London, will of; 333 a.
 Deerow, Benjamin; 119 a.
 Dedem, Lt.-General, letter of; 35 b.
 Dedham, Essex, manor; 268 a.
 Dee :
 the river; xv, 355 a, 358 a, 374 b, 375 b, 381 b, 391 b.
 Act of Parliament for additional bridge over (1825); 362 a. navigation; 392-395 a, passim, 397 a, 401 b. claims to serjeanty of bridge at Chester; 358 b. company of owners and drawers of, book of; 365 b. order, &c. touching; 382 a. petitions touching; 386 a, 388 a.
 drainage of lands bordering on; 388 b. banking in; 389 a. bridge of; 303 a.
 mills, the; 386 a.
 return, exactions, and extortions of millers of; 371 b.
 — petition touching; 384 b, 385 a.

Decue, letter dated at; 61 b.
 Deeping Fens, co. Lincoln, Act for draining (1668); 126 b.
 Deering:
 Mr.; 132 a.
 Edward; ib.
 Deiz:
 Thomas, Bishop of Meath; 603 b, 614 a.
 — his nephew Oliver; 614 a, 614 b.
 Deke, Reginald, of Stoke by Clare, will of; 332 a.
 Dekin, William, of Beby, chaplain; 413 b.
 Dekon, Richard, of Budon; 413 a.
 Del Valle, M., letter of; 39 a.
 Delabene, Major, letter of; 38 a.
 Delafaye, Mr., letters of; 49 a, 58 a.
 Delamere:
 forest of, Act for improvement of; 105 a.
 Lord (1668); 120 a.
 Delamore, Wm.; 146 b.
 Delany, Dr. Patrick, dean of Down; 481 a.
 Delarocke:
 Richard, petitions of; 502 a, 527 b, 531 a, 536 a.
 Rosina, petition of; 518 a.
 Delaune, physician; 230 a.
 Delaval, Jago, petition against; 225 b.
 Delaware, James; 609 b.
 Delawarr, Lord:
 letters of (1705); 31 b.
 letter of (1708); 35 b.
 and Lady, letter of; 54 a.
 Delegates, Court of; 136 b.
 Delf:
 Hammond, of Outwell, will of; 335 b.
 Robert, of Oughtewell, will of; 333 b.
 Delft:
 description of; 61 b.
 journey to; 99 b. meetings at; 553 a.
 Delight, the ship; 241 a.
 Delinquents' estates, &c., papers concerning; 4 a.
 Delne, — his marriage; 568 b.
 Delmpeche, Col., letters of; 31 b.
 Deloraine, Earl of (1708) letter of; 35 b.
 D'Elorme, M., letter of; 40 a.
 D'El's, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Delsuextre, M., letter of; 37 a.
 D'Eltz, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Deluc, J. T., letter of; 291 a.
 Delval, M., letter of; 39 b.
 Delves, Richard; 542 a.
 Delvin, taking of; 613 a.
 Demaria, J., letter of; 290 b.
 Demesgrignes, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Demitilly, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Dempsie, Dempsey:
 Lieut.-Col.; 391 a.
 Bernaby; 603 a, 608 b.
 Major Barnaby, hanged; 618 a.
 Bryan; 615 b.
 Edward or Edmund, Bishop of Loughlin; 604 b, 614 b, 618 a.
 Henry, hanged; 618 a.
 Dempstartoun, Thomas of, witness; 307 b.
 Denain:
 chapter of, letter of; 37 a.
 Abbess of, letter of; 38 a.
 La Dame de, letters of; 39 b.
 Denbigh:
 document dated from; 377 a. county, ship money; 383 a.
 Earl of, report on his manuscripts, by Mr. R. B. Knowles;
 xi, 552 a, et seq.
 — Basil, letters of; 554 b.
 — endorsements by; 552 b.
 — (1667); xi, 118 b.
 — (1668); 167 b.
 — his interest in Lincolnshire; 50 a.
 — letter of (1708); 35 b.
 Countess of, Isabella, letters to; xi, 566 a.
 Lady, letters to (1745, &c.); 569 a, et seq.
 Deudermoude; 41 a. map of; 22 a.
 Dene:
 John, tanner, of Lynn, will of; 333 b.
 Peter de, canon of St. Paul's; 350 b.
 Richard le, petition of; 634 a.
 Denham, Bucks; 333 a.
 Walter de, corrody to; 2 a.
 Denman, Thomas, medics, Collyweston?, will of; 332 a.
 Denmark; 144 b.
 ambassador from; 258 b, 259 a.
 embassy to, temp. Charles I.; 584 a.
 Father Bourke in; 614 a.
 King of, his son Swane; 366 a.
 — (1620); 214 a.
 — (1631); 584 a.
 — letter of (1709); 36 b.
 — letter of (1710); 38 a.

Denmark,—cont.
 Dowager Queen of, the late (1631); 584 a.
 Prince George of; 560 a.
 — address to (1702); 231 b.
 Princess of (1705); 52 a.
 Dennison, Major John, petition of; 510 a.
 Denny:
 Sir Arthur, his company; 543 b.
 John; 11 a.
 Deusted manor, near Canterbury; 329 a.
 Dent:
 C. B., letter of; 293 b.
 Mons. Nicholas le; 278 b.
 Denteth, Robert, alderman of Chester; 361 b.
 Denton:
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Dr. William; 230 a.
 William, oath taken by; 231 a.
 D'Eon, Mons., or Chevalier; 285 b, 286 b.
 See Eon, d'.
 Deopham; 333 b.
 common at; 316 b, 318 b.
 church of; 317 a, 317 b.
 manor of; 322 b.
 Deorau, Capt.; 604 a.
 Depleurs, Hester; 140 a.
 Depositions connected with the rebellion in Ireland in 1641, and later; 572 b.
 Deptford; 131 a, 156 a, 238 b, 249 b, 250 a. almshouses at; 252 a, 252 b, 257 a, 258 b. yachts at; 34 a.
 church; 260 a.
 hall at; 253 b.
 lecturer of; 260 a.
 ship building at; 245 a, 245 b, passim.
 yard at; 259 b.
 Strond, document dated at; 260 b.
 Trinity House; 235 b, 253 a, 259 a, 261 a.
 — letters of and to; 239 a, 239 b.
 Depting, William of; 316 b.
 Derby; 422 a, 437 b. citizens of; 411 a.
 justices at; 411 a.
 mayor and aldermen of, letters of; 392 a, 392 b.
 shire, the baths in (1585); 425 b.
 Earl of (1581); 396 b.
 — letter of (1583); 397 a.
 — lord lieutenant of cos. Lancaster and Chester, letters to (1585-6); 374 a, 374 b.
 — (1586); 361 a.
 — (1588) wine given to; 427 b.
 — (1590); 374 b.
 — letter of (1592); 375 a.
 — Henry, letters patent to; 403 a.
 — letters of (1593); 375 a, 375 b.
 — letters to; 375 b.
 — William, letter of (1594); 376 b.
 — (1596); 377 b.
 — his players, gift to (1598); 428 a.
 — (1606); 380 b.
 — letter of; 380 b.
 — (1627); 383 a.
 — James (1646); 365 b.
 — Charles; 387 b.
 — letter of; 387 b.
 — letter to; 385 b.
 — letter of (1668); 389 a.
 — complaints of in privilege case (1670); 139 b.
 — certificate of (1677); 390 b.
 — (1678); 391 a.
 — letter of (1680); 391 b.
 — William, commission to (1701); 362 a.
 — proclamation of, as mayor of Chester (1702); 393 a.
 — letter of (1708); 35 b.
 — memorial of (1708); 79 a.
 Countess of (1606); 380 b.
 Sir Thomas, of St. Mary's, Leicester; 420 b.
 Dercamagh, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.
 Dereham, East; 333 b.
 Derezic:
 Lady, petition of; 501 b.
 — of Dublin; 511 b.
 Dericost, Mr.; 134 b.
 Deriffier, M., letters of; 39 b.
 Derimac Laghny; 539 b.
 Dering:
 Cha.; 74 a.
 Ed., warrant by; 68 b.
 "Derliche, Seneco," a Spaniard; 363 b.
 Dermot, Antony; 476 b, 487 b.
 Deron, Capt. Richard; 392 b.
 Derry:
 Bishop of, letters of (1715); 49 a.
 — agent to (1715); 58 b.
 — Geo. Stone; 176 a, 176 b.
 — Earl of Bristol, letters of (1778); 195 b, 197 a, 199 a.
 Derryleath lauds; 505 a.

- Dersy, Lermouth of; 307 a.
 Derwent, the river, co. Derby, application to make navigable; 392 a, 392 b.
 Derwentwater, Earl of; 50 a, 51 a.
 Derycke, William, of Leicester; 430 b.
 Desborough, Major John; 511 a.
 Desbrowe, Lord, John, payment to (1658); 95 a.
 Des Cartes, letter of; 18 b.
 Des Champs, Deschamps:
 M., letter of; 37 a.
 Mons., letter of; 295 b.
 Pere Thadée, letter of; 37 b.
 Desert, island of; 614 b.
 Deserters, warrant for apprehension of (1592); 282 a.
 Desmaretz:
 Colonel; 285 a.
 — letter to; 285 b.
 Mr., 286 b.
 — letter to; ib.
 J. P., letter of; 286 a.
 Desmond:
 Countess of (1667); 388 a.
 Earls of, the Geraldine, memoirs of; xx.
 Desnoyer, Madame, letter of; 37 a.
 Desolation, Cape; 236 b.
 Despensers, Sir Hugh, father and son (1321), documents relating to the destruction of their power; 354 b.
 Despinos, Princess, letters of; 35 b, 38 a.
 Desporcellets, or Desporcellets, Marquis, letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 38 a.
 Desseuille, Lieut.-General, letter of; 38 a.
 Destaing, M., letter of; 38 a.
 D'Este:
 Marquis, letter of; 38 a.
 Prince, letter of; 38 a.
 D'Esterre, Henry Martin, letters of; 295 b.
 Dethick, G., king-at-arms; 261 b.
 D'Etres, Nicholas, gunsmith, petition of; 507 b.
 Devenish:
 Mr., letter of; 39 b.
 Benjamin, letter of; 38 a.
 Edmond, of Dublin, deposition of; 397 a.
 Col. J., letter of; 35 b.
 Devereux Court; 24 b.
 Devic:
 Sir Henry, comptroller of D. of York's house (1660); 278 a.
 — commission to; 280 a.
 Deviller, Devillier:
 Sir John; 500 b.
 — petition of; 517 b.
 — grant to; 540 b.
 — petition of his wife Anne; 549 a.
 Devizes; 335 b.
 document dated at; 344 b.
 rival mayors of; 45 b.
 Devon:
 Countess of (1647), wine given to; 429 a.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xx.
 Baldwin de Insula; 637 a.
 Capt. Richard; 598 b.
 Devonshire; 210 a.
 royalists in; 9 b.
 Earl of, commissioner (1604); 95 a.
 — warrants to (1605); 87 a.
 — fined 30,000*l.*; 560 a.
 — his apartment at Whitehall (1691); 563 a.
 Countess of, letter of (1639); 436 b.
 — letters of (1640); 436 b, 437 a.
 — memorandum by; 437 a.
 Duke of, MSS. of, at Bolton Abbey and at Hardwicke; xx.
 — letter of (1710); 38 a.
 — Queen Anne and; 38 b.
 — and Duchess of, letters of; 54 a.
 (1754); 221 b, 224 b, 225 a.
 (1756); 222 b.
 (1757); 224 a.
 late Lord Chamberlain (1769); 191 a.
 D'Ewes, Sir Symonds, his journal; 94 a.
 Dewshall, manor, co. Hereford; 140 b.
 Dexter, Stephen; 614 a.
 Dey, Thomas, potter, of Heigham, will of; 334 a.
 Deye, Margery; 268 a.
 Deynham, John, his chantry in St. Paul's; 634 a.
 Deywall, Richard, petition of; 381 b.
 Dezvassuez, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Diamonds, &c. pawned by Charles I.; 209 a.
 Diceto, Ralph de, Dean of St. Paul's; 632 a.
 Dick:
 Lieut. Geo., letter of; 295 b.
 Wm., letter of; 294 a.
 Dickinson, Dickenson:
 v. Dean and Chapter of York; 162 a.
 Christopher; 162 a.
 John, agent for James I.; 211 b.
 Thomas, order signed by; 275 a.
 — petition of; 162 a.
 Wm.; 162 a.
 Dickson:
 James, letter of; 291 a.
 Major James, letter of; 293 b.
 John, of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Diego, Don; 604 a.
 Dieppe, 27 b, 244 a, 346 b.
 documents dated from; 282 b, 294 b.
 the fishers of, letter of; 35 b.
 Diesbach, Baron de, letter of; 39 b.
 Diest; 31 b.
 Digby, Lord:
 (17th century), correspondence, &c. of; 213 a.
 (1644); 217 b.
 award to; ib.
 letter of; 212 b.
 (1645), letter of; 211 b.
 (1646), letter to; 212 b.
 (1650-1657), letters of, from abroad; 217 h, 218 a, 218 b.
 letters to (1687); 219 b.
 letter to (1711); 219 b.
 letters to (1753-55); xiii., 219 b-236 a. candidate for Dorset; 219 b.
 letters of (1753-57); 213 a.
 Digby:
 —; in Ireland; 605 a.
 Captain; 603 a.
 Mr., payment to; 526 a.
 Mrs.; 224 b.
 Mrs.; 571 b.
 Lady Abigail, letter of; 213 b.
 C., letter of; 221 b.
 Sir Everard, at Dunchurch; 434 a.
 Francis, letters of; 219 a.
 Geo. Wingfield Esq., of Sherborne, report on manuscripts of; xiii., 213 a.
 H., letters of; 213 a, 221 b-224 b.
 James, at Dunchurch; 434 a.
 John, letters of and to; 218 a, 218 b, 219 a.
 Sir John, commission to; 2 b.
 — instructions for; 581 a.
 — afterwards Lord, letters of and to; 213 a, 213 b.
 — his embassy in Spain; ib.
 Sir Kenelm; 216 b.
 — letters of; 217 a, 219 a, 244 a.
 — his library; 219 a.
 — treatise by; 584 a.
 Robert, of Roscommon; 442 b.
 Lord Robert, letter of; 216 a.
 Sir Robert, letters to; 213 a, 213 b.
 Simon; 213 b.
 — letter of; 217 b.
 — at Dunchurch; 434 a.
 Thomas, petition of; 506 a.
 Digges, Sir Dudley, letter of; 214 a.
 — arguments by; 584 b.
 Dighton, James L., letters of; 294 a, 294 b.
 Dike, Mr.; 278 b.
 Dilke, Sir C. W., M.P., MSS. of; xx.
 Dillcock, William; 272 b.
 Dillingham, John, his gift for a riding school at Leicester; 440 a.
 Dillon:
 —; 613 a.
 and Farrell's bank, failure of; 188 a.
 Viscount or Lord, MSS. of; xx.
 — his estate (temp. Commonwealth and Chas. II.) 500 b, 542 b, 548 a, 551 a.
 — Thos., of Costello, petition of; 501 a, 549 b.
 — (1648); 609 a.
 — (1762); 472 a.
 Viscountess, Frances, petition of; 542 b.
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 the Ladies; 612 b.
 — prisoners; 616 a.
 Dr., of Dublin; 482 a.
 Andrew, of Riverstown; 514 b.
 Major Arthur; 597 a.
 — petition, &c. of; 503 a, 510 b, 548 b, 597 a.
 Major Carey; 595 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Fr. Dominick; 608 a.
 George; 605 b.
 — apostate; 611 a.
 Henry; 495 b.
 — prisoner; 613 b.
 James, petition of; 548 a.
 — and Ann, petition of; 514 a.
 Sir James, letters of and to; 28 a.
 —; 603 a, 605 a, 605 b, 608 a, 611 a, 613 a, 613 b, 614 a.
 — letter to; 603 a.
 — governor of Westmeath; 604 a.
 — his treason; 604 b.
 Lady Jane, lands held by; 517 b, 518 a.
 John, petition of; 544 b.
 Lucas, father of James; 548 a.
 Sir Luke; 606 a, 614 a, 614 b.
 Maurice, of Lisdoon; 535 b.

Dillon cont.

- Richard, petitions of; 516 b, 543 b.
- Robert, petition of; 514 a.
- Theobald; 537 b.
- son and heir of Sir Luke; 548 b.
- Thomas; 603 a.
- petition of; 517 a.
- Dimond, William, trooper; 538 a.
- Dinan, prison at; 34 b.
- Dines Hall, letter dated at; 24 a.
- Dinham, Dr. Edward; 548 a.
- Dinton, John, of Bourne, will of; 332 b.
- Diotson :
 - Walter, clerk of the church of the New Work, Leicester; 420 b.
 - Sir Vaultier, of Leicester; 423 a.
- Dirltoun, Lord, writ by; 304 a.
- Dirom, Capt. Alex., letter, &c. of; 293 b.
- Disbanding Act, temp. Will. III.; 187 b.
- Dischynotoun, Thomas, steward of St. Andrews; 306 a.
- Disenhurste, Peter de, Prior of Selborne; 264 a.
- Disert parish, co. Roscommon, lands in; 518 a.
- Dispensario, Walter; 357 b.
- Dissection, bodies of criminals allowed for; 234 b.
- Distillers of London, company of; 145 b.
- case of; 145 b.
- Dives, Sir Lewis :
 - delinquent; 4 b.
 - his woods; 6 b.
- Dix alias Lindsay, Mary, petition of; 518 b.
- Dix, Thomas, letter to; 2 b.
- Dixie, Dixey :
 - John or Thomas, 155 b, 156 a, 156 b, 159 b.
 - examination of; 159 b.
 - Lieut. William; 596 a.
 - Sir Wolstan, commission to; 418 a.
- Dixon :
 - Mr., of Middleham; 636 a.
 - Capt. Alexr., letters of; 293 b, 294 a.
 - Jo., his lands in Limerick; 498 b.
 - John, town clerk of Pontefract; 275 b.
 - Joseph Harrison, letter of; 291 a.
 - Capt. Richard; 591 a, 598 b.
 - Samuel, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 - Tobias, proposals by; 91 b.
- Dobbin :
 - Joseph, verses by; 24 b.
 - William, of Waterford; 535 b.
- Dobson :
 - John, of Patterdale; 634 b.
 - William, draper, of London; 634 b.
- Doecombe, co. Devon; 318 b, 324 a.
- Dochford, John, letter of; 40 a.
- Doctors of medicine, licensed by the bishops; 230 b.
- Doewra :
 - Anne & Eliza, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 - Sir Henry, letter of; 582 b.
 - governor of Lough Foyle, warrants of;
 - Thomas, prior of St. John; 265 a.
- Dod, W., Esq., MSS. of; xx.
- Dod, Dodd :
 - Luke; 116 a.
 - papers touching; 116 a.
 - Robt., Vicar of Islington (Ilslington), will of; 333 b.
 - Robert; 124 b.
 - answer of; 125 a.
- Doddington, Henry de, mayor of Leicester; 408 a.
- Dodderidge, Dodderidge :
 - Dr., letters of; 54 a.
 - John, certificate of; 88 a.
 - 584 b.
 - treatises by; 584 b.
 - Sir John; 585 a.
 - Judge; 584 b.
 - P., letter of; 56 b.
 - serjeant; 581 b.
- Dodeford, in honour of Leicester; 411 a.
- Dodford, Francis, petition of; 162 a.
- Dodson :
 - John, of Ratcliffe, captive; 241 b.
 - William, petitions of; 510 b, 548 b.
 - of Nottingham; 417 a.
- Dodsworth :
 - chapel; 264 a.
 - co. York; 274 a.
- Doe, Jane, widow; 153 b.
- Dofris, Alfred de, benefactor; 326 b.
- Doggel, John, priest, canon of Salisbury (?), will of; 333 a.
- Dogget, member of the Hamhurgh Co.; 147 b.
- Doghardy, Major; 609 a.
- Dogs, Isle of; 250 a.
- Dohna, Comte, letter of; 39 b.
- D'Oily, Col. Charles, letter of; 9 b.
- D'Oisy, Count, letters of; 38 b.
- Dokenton, John of; 370 b.
- Dokray, Jas., merchant of Droghdaa, mem. touching; 367 b.

Dolben :

- Dr., Bishop of Rochester; 255 a.
- Sir Wm., justice of King's Bench, death of; 392 a.
- Doling, Thomas, licence farmer, petitions of; 511 b, 516 a, 523 a.
- Dolman, Richard, of Dublin, petition of; 523 a.
- Dolmas, M., letter of; 35 b.
- Dombes, Monsieur le Prince de, articles of capitulation of Guingant; 282 a.
- Domesday :
 - Book, extracts from; 322 a.
 - the Kentish, of Christ Church monastery; 315 b.
 - comparison of, with the King's Domesday; ib.
- Domestic economy in monasteries, hints on; 324 b, 325 a.
- Dominica, Prince Rupert's Head, document dated from; 296 a.
- Dompre, M., letters of; 35 b, 37 a.
- Domville, William, document signed by; 517 b.
- reports by; 521 a, 524 a, 532 a, 540 a.
- certificate by; 547 b.
- Doncaster, Edlington, near; 44 a.
- Done, Wm.; 156 a, 156 b.
- information of; 157 a.
- Donegal :
 - Annals; 581 a.
 - Earl of, his troop (1663); 503 a, 507 b, 534 b, 541 b, 545 b.
- Doneham, Achard, lord of, "came with William the Conqueror;" 370 b.
- Donelao, Edmund; 541 b.
- Donelly, John and Loghlin; 532 b.
- Done's, at the Fleece; 155 b.
- Donevan, Cornelius, serjeant; 538 b.
- Dongan, Lord (1690); 496 b.
- Tho., document signed by; 503 a.
- Donington :
 - letter dated at; 433 a.
 - Park, letters dated at; 433 b, 434 a.
- Donnaghadey, co. Kildare, garrison at, in 1648; 595 a.
- Donne, Dr. John, poems by; 584 a.
- Donnelan :
 - Lieut. Luke; 593 a.
 - Ensign Wm.; 594 b.
 - John; 532 b.
- Donnelly :
 - Dominick, letter of; 295 b.
 - James, letter of; 292 b.
- Donsaghlin, co. Dublin, garrison at, in 1648; 594 a.
- Doo :
 - John le, seneschal of Christ Church; 322 a.
 - William, of Fincham, will of; 333 b.
- Dooner, Garrett; 498 a.
- Dopff, M., letters of; 31 b, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a.
- Dopping, Sam.; 74 a.
- Doraunt, Will., of Henstead, will of; 334 a.
- Dorby, James, serjeant; 551 b.
- Dorchester : 2 b, 210 b, 220 a.
- Bishop of, Ascewin; 324 a.
- Marquis of, Henry (1666), petition of; 106 b.
- (1688), gift by; 230 b.
- Lord, letter of (1709); 37 a.
- Earl of, Thos. Beaufort, his wife Margaret (1 Hen.V.); 627 a.
- Viscount; 584 a.
- Countess of, letter of (1708); 35 b.
- Lady, letter of (1714); 57 a.
- Dorchy or Darey, Patrick; 602 b, 603 a, 603 b, 606 a.
- Dore, alias Sadlar, Robert, of Devizes, will of; 335 b.
- Doreward, John; 262 b.
- Dorington, Capt.; 381 b.
- Dorisians :
 - Isaac, notice of; 234 a.
 - payment to; 95 a.
- D'Orivall :
 - M., a prisoner; 33 a.
 - exchange of; 35 a.
- Dorlyng, John, of Worcester, deed poll by; 638 a.
- Dormer :
 - C. Cottrell, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 - Geoffrey, of Thame, will of; 335 a.
 - Fr. John; 609 a, 609 b, 610 b.
- Dorney, Jo., on Gloucester committee; 11 b.
- Dorp, Admiral, charges against; 553 b.
- Dorrell, Sir Sampson, of the Admiralty; 98 b.
- Dorrell, see Darrell.
- Dorset :
 - election for; 219 b.
 - committee for, minutes of proceedings of; 210 b.
 - Marquis of, Henry (3 Edw. VI.); 426 a.
 - Earl of, Sackville, pedigree of; 586 b, note.
 - warrants to (1605); 87 a.
 - letter of (1606); 434 b.
 - (1607); 381 b, 435 a.
 - Thomas, letter of; 382 a.
 - — letter of (1607); 418 a.
 - — letter to (1607); ib.
 - Edward, commission to; 2 b.
 - (1629); 244 a.
 - (1633); 247 a.
 - petition to (1633); 229 b.

Dorset—cont.

- Earl of, commissioner (1604) ; 95 a.
- (1668) ; 126 a, 166 a.
- (1671) ; 161 a
- M. Prior and ; 15 a.
- Countess of, her death (1691) ; 565 b.
- Duke of, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland (1751) ; 177 a.
- Archbishop Stone's attempts to influence ; 178 b.
- his narrow escape from Ireland ; 179 a.
- his chaplain Garnet ; 194 b, note.
- Mr. ; 55 b.

Dort ; 99 b.

Dorvell, Arthur ; 125 b.

Douay :

- Scotch College at ; 38 a.
- governor of, letter of ; 39 b.

Douchall :

- Alexander, charters by ; 308 b, 309 a.
- William ; ib.

D'Oudenhove, Baron, letter of ; 36 a.

Douglas :

- Col., letter of ; 37 a.
- Madame, letter of ; 40 a.
- Governor of Leeward Islands ; 40 b.
- Earl of (1388), Archibald, witness ; 307 a.
- and Mar, Earl of, William (1382) ; 305 a.
- Archibald, of Glenbervie ; 301 a.
- James, Esq., of Cavers, MSS. of ; xx.
- James de, Lord of Dalkith, witness ; 307 a.
- Mary, letter of ; 295 a.
- W., letter of ; 293 b.
- Sir William, of Dalkith ; 297 b.
- Capt. Wm., letter of ; 295 b.

Dove :

- Anne ; 142 a.
- John ; 142 a, 142 b.
- of Leith ; 240 b.
- Lieut. M., letter of ; 295 b.
- Thomas ; 142 a.
- petition, &c. of ; 142 b.

Dover ; 34 b, 35 a, 98 a, 210 a, 240 a, 336 b.

- prior, &c. of, excommunicated ; 336 b.
- document dated at ; 351 a.

pilots at ; 256 a.

proposed free port ; 247 b.

Customs' officers, report of ; 127 b.

its privilege as a Cinque Port ; 346 b.

Marie de Medici at ; 552 b.

Castle ; 319 a.

— governor of ; 257 a.

Court of Loadmanage at ; 256 b.

harbour ; 251 a, 252 a, 252 b, 253 b, 254 a, 355 b.

St. Martin's Church or Monastery ; 316 a, 317 a, 317 b, 319 b, 326 b, 341 a, 341 b, 353 b.

Trinity House at ; 235 b, 238 b, 243 a, 246 a, 255 b, 256 a, nephew of Lord St. Albans ; 51 a.

261 a.

Dover, Lord :

(1669) ; 136 a.

and the Queen (1688) ; 555 b.

Dover, Corporal ; 542 a.

Dow, Major Alexr., letter of ; 292 b.

Dowdall :

- Mr. ; 490 b.
- Ensign Stephen ; 592 a.
- Lawrence, lands held by ; 517 b, 518 a.
- of Athlumny, petition of his son and heir Luke ; 540 b, 545 a.
- Luke, of Athlumny, petition of ; 500 b.

Dowell :

Allen, petition of ; 531 a.

Philp, of Camma parish ; 518 a.

Doveran, Jerome, lands held by ; 520 b.

Dowry, near Dunkeld, the rebels about ; 314 a, 314 b.

Down, Downe :

James II.'s lands in ; 497 b.

Bishop of (1651) ; 614 a.

— (1663) ; 520 b, 624 a.

and Connor, Bishop of, Foley ; 581 b.

— (1768), James Traill, sermons by ; 489 b, 490 a,

492 b.

Lord, letters of (1688) ; 269 a, 275 b.

Lieut. John ; 597 a.

Downes :

Francis, petitions of ; 107 a.

— act touching ; 107 a.

Robert ; 123 a.

Rt. Hon. Roger, Vice-Chamberlain of co. Palatine of Chester, petition to ; 383 a.

— certificate of ; ib.

Downham ; 334 a.

Hithe ; 333 b.

Geoffrey, of Beauchamp St. Paul, will of ; 335 a.

Downing, Sir George ; 388 b.

— of the Treasury ; 254 b.

Downs, the ; 33 a.

Downton ; 335 a

Dowse :

Anthony, letter of ; 386 a.

Sir John, channels damaged by ; 245 a.

Ensign Richard ; 593 a.

Dowson, Mr., of Chester ; 399 b.

Doyle :

Ellinor, petition of ; 538 a.

Wellbore Ellis, letter of ; 289 a.

Doyle :

Sir William ; 388 a.

— letter of ; 388 a.

Doyle :

James, lands held by ; 520 b.

Lieut. James ; 597 a.

Lieut. Michall ; 596 a.

D'Oyrie, M., letters of ; 40 a.

Dragoons, St. George's, their service against the rebels (1745) ;

313 b, 314 a.

Draiton, Ralph de ; 168 a, 172 a.

Drake :

Dr., his treatise on the blood ; 226 a, 230 a.

Lord Chief Justice, letters of ; 49 a.

Sir Francis ; 239 a.

— picture of ; 257 a.

George, letter of ; 289 b.

Dr. James, his death and character ; 231 b.

— his "Anthropologia Nova" licensed ; ib.

Joan, wife of Stephen Bryan, alderman of Norwich, will of ; 334 a.

John, of Pontefract ; 275 b.

Dr. Samuel, vicar of Pontefract ; 276 b.

— rector of Treeton ; 276 b.

T., presentment of ; 631 b.

W., tenant of Wey ; 630 a.

Drakes (ordnance), petitions, &c. concerning 244 b.

Draper :

Giles, affidavit of ; 142 b.

John, junr. ; 281 b.

Captain William ; 595 b.

— weekly charge of his troop ; 598 b.

Draycote, verdon's of ; 423 a.

Draycott, John, of Leicester ; 430 b.

Drayton ; 333 b.

Erasmus ; 140 a.

Thos., a constable ; 155 a, 156 b, 158 a.

— deposition of ; 157 b.

Dreams, a treatise on ; 420 a.

Drelinecourt, Peter, dean of Armagh ; 15 b.

Dremc, co. Edinburgh, lands of ; 305 b.

Dresden, capture of ; 220 b.

Devon :

Madame de, letter of ; 37 a.

Sieur ; 557 a.

Drey, Capt. Robert, his company ; 551 b.

Dreydon, Erasmus ; 140 a.

Drie, Marquis de (1708) ; 19 b.

Drinking, the prevailing vice in Ireland (18th century) ;

178 a.

Drinkwater :

Mr. ; 400 a.

Ralph, of Chester ; 403 a.

Driver :

Capt. ; 246 a.

J., letter of ; 292 b.

W., letters of ; 291 a, 294 a.

Drogheda ; 138 a, 367 b, 370 a, 493 b, 603 a.

siege of ; 500 b, 501 a, 505 a, 611 a.

storming and capture of ; 599 a.

surrender of ; 610 b.

leager ; 603 a.

troops garrisoned at, in 1648 ; 591 b, 592 a, 592 b, 596 a.

army of James II. at ; 560 a.

Drogheda, Earl of :

Henry ; 539 b.

his troop (1663) ; 504 a, 514 a, 516 b, 540 b, 545 b.

Dromeawell, co. Louth, lands in ; 532 a.

Dromederry, co. Wexford ; 508 a.

Dromgooleston, co. Louth, troops at ; 590 b.

Dromore, Bishop of, O. Darcey (1645-1652) ; 605 a, 611 b, 612 a, 612 b, 615 a, 617 b, 618 a.

Dromurrie, co. Louth ; 590 b.

Drovers, act to reform abuses committed by ; 123 b, 126 a.

Drowry, Thomas, of Yaxham, will of ; 334 a.

Druer, Robert, inquisition by ; 406 a.

Druet, John, of Bristol, will of ; 333 a.

Druid or prophet, an Irish ; 612 a.

Drumcarr, co. Louth ; 538 a.

burnt and pillaged ; 590 b.

Drumgansallagh, co. Tipperary, lands of ; 498 a.

Drummakill, garrison of ; 310 a.

Drummond :

General, letter of ; 296 a.

Mr., of the Edinburgh Mint ; 84 b, 85 b, 92 a.

Dame Dorothy ; 122 b, 147 b.

George, of Blairdrummond ; 82 b.

Drummond—cont.

- William, of the Edinburgh Mint, letters of; 83 a, 83 b.
- mem. by; 83 a.
- memorial of; 82 b.

Drummore, skirmish near, description of; 599 b.

Drumry; 309 a.

Drumtochir, mill of; 309 b.

Drury, Sir William; 582 a.

Dry Drayton; 335 b.

Dryden:

- Sir Henry, MSS. of; xx.
- John, poetry to; 15 b.
- his burial at Westminster; 231 b.

Dryland:

- Isabel (wife of John), of St. Bartholomew-the-Less, will of; 332 b.
- John, of St. Bartholomew-the-Less, will of; 332 b.
- of London, will of; 334 b.

Drynagh, near Crumlin, manor; 506 a.

Du Pin, Nicholas; 143 a.

Dubignon, Charles, examination of; 431 b.

Dublin; 58 a, 102 a, 138 a, 219 b, 265 b, 355 a, 372 b, 373 a, 375 b, 378 a, 378 b, 381 a, 381 b, 382 a, 382 b, 384 b, 386 b, 390 b, 392 b, 396 b, 397 a, 398 a, 398 b, 399 b, 400 a, 600 b.

- documents dated at; 15 b, 16 a, 23 b, 27 b, 58 b, 99 a, 181 b, 182 b, 196 b, 201 a, 206 b, 207 b, 211 b, 294 b, 374 a, 376 a–377 b, 381 a, 381 b, 382 b, 392 a, 395 b, 397 b, 493 a–495 b, 589 a, 589 b.

hay of; 248 a.

corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.

port of; 252 a, 254 a.

lord mayor of, his regiment for James II.; 494 b.

member for; 477 b.

governor of; 616 a.

postmaster of, letter to; 388 a.

sheriffs of (1663), charge against; 506 b.

despoiled and distressed ladies in, petition of (1641–2); 589 b.

Physico-Historical Society at; 443 b, 444 a.

Society, the; 583 a.

convocations in; 15 b, 581 a, 582 a.

parliaments at; 442 a.

troops garrisoned at, in 1648; 591 a, et seq.

army of James II. at; 559 b.

surrender of; 610 a.

siege of; 611 a.

parliament at, proceedings in (1756); 174 b.

supply of corn and flour for (1757); 183 a, 184 a.

freedom of, intended presentation to William Pitt of (1757); 182 a.

bills relating to, speeches on (c. 1761); 183 a. representation of; 194 a.

election of R. Morris for; 194 b.

city and liberties, houses, &c. in (1673); 90 b.

Mr. Boyd's house in; 624 a.

All Hallow's monastery; 572 a, 583 a.

Birmingham Tower; 582 a.

Bridge Street; 473 a, 506 b, 507 a.

Bride's Alley; 464 b.

Castle; 399 b, 501 b, 502 a, 504 b, 510 b, 624 a, 624 b.

— documents dated at; 58 b, 59 a, 200 b, 382 b, 392 b, 394 a, 397 a, 493 b–494 a, 501 a–552 a, passim.

— warder of; 504 a.

— prisoners in; 512 a, 512 b, 528 b.

— repairing of; 515 a.

— accounts of work and repairs at (1663); 525 b, 526 a.

— attempted taking of; 589 a.

Castle Street; 508 b, 527 a.

Christ Church; 581 a.

College Green; 476 a, 523 a. council chamber, fire at (1712); 73 a.

court of claims at; 623 b.

See Ormonde, Marquis of, report on his MSS., passim.

Cow Lane; 479 b, 490 b.

Custom House; 548 b.

Deer Park; 501 b, 518 b, 522 b, 536 b, 550 a.

Fishamble Street; 459 b.

Francis Street; 482 a.

Franciscans' College at, MSS. of; xxiii.

Galloway hill of; 518 b.

Granny Row; 492 a.

High Street; 504 b.

Lazy hill, near; 156 a.

Marshalsea, the; 502 a, 508 b, 529 b, 540 b, 543 b, 545 a.

Newtown, lands of; 518 b, 519 a.

Norris's coffee house; 466 a.

Phoenix Park; 469 a.

College of Physicians in; 230 b.

Phrapper Lane; 462 a.

St. John's minister of; 538 b.

— parish, petition of rector, &c. of; 528 b.

— Lane, tennis court in; 548 b.

St. Patrick's Cathedral; 572 b, 582 a.

Dublin—cont.

St. Patrick's cathedral, chapter book of; 581 a.

— churchyard; 581 a.

— dean of; 580 b.

St. Thomas Street; 537 a.

Schoolhouse Lane; 480 a.

Ship Street; 471 a.

Stafford Street; 475 b.

Star Chamber; 584 a, 584 b.

Stephen's or Stephen Street; 467 b.

— the Oratory in; ib.

his Majesty's storehouse at; 530 b.

theatre in; 16 a.

Trinity College; 442 a, 502 a.

— manuscripts of, Mr. Gilbert's report on; xix, 502 a, 572 a, et seq.

— Library; 486 a, 491 a.

— provosts of; 189 b, note, 192 b, 487 b, 583 b.

— provost of, petition regarding his emoluments; 501 a, 505 b.

— charter of Charles I. to; 582 b.

— statutes of; 583 a.

— Jacobitism in (1715); 1 a, 59 a.

Wood-Key, house on; 511 b.

Dublin county:

James II.'s lands in; 497 b.

grants to Lord Tyrconnell in; 499 a.

the Grange; 506 a.

specification of lands in; 520 b.

losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.

papers relating to affairs in (1798–9); 584 a.

burning of; 606 b.

Dublin, archbishop of:

(1649); 610 a.

(1651), Th. Fleming; 614 a, 614 b.

(1663), Margetson, petition of 501 a, 545 b.

John Alan; 581 a.

(1714 and 1715), William, letters of; 15 b, 49 a, 58 b, 59 a.

Roman Catholic (1763), Dr. Fitzsimons; 478 b.

Dr. Carpenter; 483 b.

(1778), Popish, Dr. Carpenter; 197 b.

Dublin, archbishopric of, forfeited lands in; 505 b.

Duc, Roger le; 323 a.

Duce, Sir Jerry; 571 b.

Duck, Stephen, letters of; 54 b.

Duckenfield:

Col.; 386 b.

John; 541 b.

Duckett, William, petition of; 126 a.

Duckington, Roger, warrant to; 375 a.

Duckworth, Richard, of Brasenose College; 439 b.

Dudeley, John, of Hatherington, Sussex, will of; 333 a.

Dudgeon, Henry, his invention; 238 a.

Dudgeon's Shoal, light at; 261 b.

Dudhope, the Laird of; 298 b.

Duddingston; 307 b.

Dudleston, Lieut. Edward; 593 a.

Dudley:

v. Berkley; 170 b.

Col., letter of; 37 a.

Edmond; 584 b.

Col. J., letter of; 35 b.

Duels, Act for preventing (1668); viii, 122 a.

Duff, Duffe:

James; 399 b.

John, of St. Mary's, London; 241 a.

Col. Patrick, letters of; 294 a–295 b, passim.

Duffield:

Edward, a cheat; 435 b.

Maria, letter of; 290 a.

Dugan:

—, his death; 490 a.

—, his collection of Irish MSS.; 490 a, 490 b, 491 a.

Dugdale, William; 563 b.

Duigenan, Dr.; 460 b.

Dujardin, M., letters of; 35 b, 37 a.

Duke:

John, his estates; 3 a.

Laurence and Matilda, gift by; 323 a.

Ricld.; 279 b.

Dullarstown, capture of; 604 a.

Dullington, Cambs.; 334 b.

Dumbarton; 298 b.

document dated at; 308 b.

"Watch Meal" of, impost; 308 b.

castle of; 308 b, 309 a, 310 a.

Lord (1688); 555 b.

— letter of (1709); 37 a.

— pardon to (1713); 51 b.

Dumfries; 394 b.

Dummer, Edm., letter of; 38 a.

Dun:

Sir Daniel, letter to; 237 b.

— Judge of the Admiralty, letter to; 238 a.

- Dunhar :
 Earl of, fifth (c. 1240) ; 300 b.
 — (1608) ; 299 a.
 Gavin, dean of Moray, witness ; 306 a.
 George de, Earl of the Marches ; 305 b.
- Dunbavan, Richard ; 383 b.
- Dunbavien, William, corporal ; 543 b.
- Dunboyne :
 manor of ; 548 b.
 incumbency of ; 549 a.
 Lord, trial of ; 581 b.
 — letters of (1648) ; 582 a.
 — Piers Butler, petition of (1663) ;
- Duncan :
 James, governor of Bombay, letters of ; 288 a.
 John or Jonathan, resident at Benares, letters of ; 290 a, 291 a, 292 b, 294 a, 295 a, 295 b.
 — instructions to ; 296 a.
- Duncaunon ; 495 b, 526 b.
 Fort ; 542 b.
 Governor of ; 605 a.
 siege of ; ib.
- Duncanson :
 Capt. R., letter of ; 292 b.
 Ensign William, letter of ; 290 b.
 Lieut. W. M., letter of ; 292 b.
- Dunch, Mrs., letter of ; 57 a.
- Dunchurch, Dunkirke ; 434 a.
- Duncombe, Duncombe :
 Alice, petition of ; 514 a.
 Charles, documents signed by ; 66 b.
 — of the Mint ; 68 b, 70 b.
 Sir Charles, warrant by ; 80 a.
 Sir John ; 389 a.
 Sir Saundes, medical practitioner ; 229 a.
 T., letters of ; 439 b, 440 a.
- Dundalk ; 590 b, 610 b. capture of ; 559 a.
- Dundas :
 Capt., letters of ; 294 a, 295 a.
 Mr., advocate ; 311 b.
 Henry ; 288 a.
 — letters of, 288 b, 294 a, 296 a.
 James, Esq., MSS. of ; xx.
 Robert, Esq., MSS. of ; xx.
 Lieut.-Col. Thomas, letter of ; 295 a.
- Dundee :
 document dated at ; 306 b.
 governor of ; 299 a.
 Lord (1690) ; 497 a.
- Dumfermline, 323 b.
 documents dated at ; 349 b.
 monastery of ; 303 a.
 abbot of, George ; ib.
 — Patrick ; 297 a, 300 b.
 abbot and convent of, grants to ; 300 b
- Dungan :
 —, his dragoons in Ireland ; 494 b.
 —, his extraction ; 608 b.
 Col., his regiment ; 391 a.
 Lady ; 503 b, 516 b.
 Sir John ; 609 a.
 Oliver ; 603 a.
 — his death ; 612 a.
 Thomas ; 390 b.
 Sir Walter ; 503 b, 514 a.
 — his proceedings in Ireland ; 604 a, 608 a, 613 a, 613 b, 614 b, 615 b, 616 a, 616 b.
 — letters to ; 617 a.
 Sir William ; 581 b.
- Dungannon, Lord (1670) ; 149 b.
- Dungenan, Baron of ; 602 b.
- Dungeness, lights at ; 238 b, 242 a, 244 b, 246 a, 251 a, 251 b.
- Dunkeld :
 the rebels near ; 313 l, 314 a, 314 b.
 canon of ; 306 a.
- Dunkin :
 James, letter of ; 295 a.
 W., letter of ; 292 b.
 Sir Wm., letter of ; 295 a.
- Dunkirk ; 72 b, 285 a, 562 a, 563 a, 563 b.
 document dated from ; 285 b.
 demolition of works (1763) ; 285 a, 285 b. reduction of ; 287 a.
 fortifications, &c. of ; 36 b. harbour, reduction of ; 86 b, 287 a. works of ; 95 a.
 coast off ; 260 a.
 the Spaniards at ; 553 b.
- Dunkitt, co. Kilkenny ; 514 a.
- Dunop, Capt., letter of ; 289 a.
- Dunlope, William, of Housel ; 12 b.
- Dunmore :
 Earl of (1688) ; 275 b.
 — latter of (1708) ; 35 b.
 — (1711) ; 40 a.
 Lady, letter of (circa 1717) ; 57 a.
- Dunn, Denis, petition of ; 534 b.
- Dunne, General F. P., MSS. of ; xx.
- Dunning, Mr., counsel ; 232 b.
- Dunnore, co. Kildare ; 540 a.
- Dunnose Point, Isle of Wight ; 250 b.
- Dunnottar, Dunottar ; 298 a, 304 a.
 letter dated at ; 303 a.
 charters of ; 305 a.
- Dunore :
 garrison ; 613 b.
 — taking of ; ib.
- Dunoyer, M. Petit, letter of ; 40 b.
- Dunsforth, co. York ; 271 a.
- Dunstable, estate in ; 5 a.
- Dunster, Giles ; 128 a.
- Dunsterfield, Lieut. John ; 595 b.
- Duntocher, mill of ; 310 a.
- Duntun-cum-Mello ; 5 a.
- Duntzfelt, C. W., letter of ; 294 a.
- Dunwich Haven ; 239 a, 245 a.
- Duplack, Thomas, trooper ; 539 b.
- Dupplin :
 Lord (1754), to succeed Pelham ; 224 b.
 — meeting at his house ; 225 a.
- Durand, John, letter of ; 290 b.
- Dureford Abbey, Sussex ; 266 a.
- Durham :
 bailiffs of (temp. Hen. II.), writ to ; 355 a, 356 b.
 county, lead mines in, Act for improving ; 105 a.
 Bishop of, Hugh, suspension of ; 317 a.
 — (1484) ; 269 a.
 — letter to (1616) ; 238 a.
 — letter of (1628) ; 229 a.
 — (1666) ; 103 a.
 — (1668) ; 166 a.
 Dean of, considerations of ; 105 b.
 John de, deed by ; 408 b.
 John, of Calais will of ; 335 b.
- Durnford, Edward ; 381 a.
- D'Ursel, Comte, letters of ; 39 a, 40 a.
- Dursley ; 335 a.
 Lord, in Plymouth Sound ; 34 b.
- Dury, Robert, of Dury, witness ; 306 a.
- Dutch ships in the Thames employed for Spain, ordnance given to ; 240 b, 241 a.
- Dutrossel, Brigadier, letter of ; 37 a.
- Dutton :
 Capt. ; 378 b.
 Aldreda de, witness ; 270 a.
 Geoffrey de ; 356 a.
 Hodard, Lord of, "came with William the Conqueror" ;
 370 b.
 Hugh ; 367 b.
 Hugh de ; 356 a.
 John, grant to ; 362 a.
 Sir John, letter of ; 374 a.
 Ralph de, of Leicester ; 408 b.
 Richard ; 365 b.
 — mayor of Chester ; 362 b.
 — letter to ; 374 a.
 — (1827) ; 369 b.
 Sir Thomas, Dame Alice, his wife ; 368 b.
- Duval, Duval :
 Chevalier, letter of ; 40 a.
 Monsr. ; 278 b.
 John, commission to ; 280 b.
- Duxton ; 332 a.
- Duyn :
 Lieut.-Col. ; 616 b.
 Bryan ; 605 b.
 Lieut.-Co. Richard ; 617 b.
- Duyn :
 Colonel ; 616 a.
 Edmond ; 616 a.
- Dwyer, Donnogh and Mary, lands held by ; 532 b.
- Diamond, Richard, churchwarden of St. Martin Orgar ;
 635 a.
- Dyar, John, of Taunton, will of ; 332 a.
- Dyars, Lieut. Rich. ; 592 a.
- Dyer :
 Lady v. Sir Richard Titchburn ; 170 b.
 Major, letter of ; 295 b.
 Lieut. Edward ; 592 b.
 alias Vynnyng, John, of Wincanton, will of ; 333 b.
 Robert, of Worcester ; 638 a.
 Major S., letter of ; 294 a.
- Dyke, Henry, consul at Trappony ; 245 b.
- Dykevelt, letters to ; xi, 552 a, 554 b, et seq.
- Dymock, John ; 367 b.
- Dyngley, Thos., of Kingston, will of ; 335 b.
- Dynham :
 Lord, goods bought by ; 267 b. letter to ; ib., note.
- Dynnis :
 George ; 375 a.
 Lenard ; ib.

Dyrltoun or Dreltoun :
 barony, Lothian ; 307 b.
 Lord ; ib.
 Dysart, Disert, taking of ; 605 b.
 Dysington, William de, witness ; 305 a.
 Dyve, Sir Lewis, letters of and to ; 218 a, 218 b.
 Dyxson, William, will of ; 335 a.

E.

Eaglescarne :
 co. Haddington ; 314 b.
 Mr. Stuart's manuscripts at, cport on ; 310 b.
 Ealdynton, Kent ; 327 b.
 Earith, on the Onse ; 9 b.
 Earle :
 General, letter of ; 37 a.
 Henry ; 279 b.
 Earl's Colne ; 333 a, 334 b.
 Earnly, Sir N. ; 581 b.
 Ears, loss of, by way of punishment ; 156 a, 157 a.
 East Loo :
 letter dated at ; 46 b.
 mayor of ; 47 a.
 Eastbourne priory, inventory of its possessions ; 264 a.
 Eastbridge Hospital ; 327 a. masters of ; 337 a, 337 b.
 Easte, Fraunces ; 376 a.
 Easthope, Lieut. Phillip ; 592 a.
 Eastland ; 134 a.
 Eastman v. Bishop of Winchester ; 169 b.
 East-Meon, Hilhampton in, Hampshire ; 263 b.
 Eastry, Estrege :
 manor of ; 315 b, 319 a, 326 b.
 church of ; 328 a.
 rector of ; 341 b.
 tithes of ; 326 b.
 prior of Christ Church, Canterbury ; 316 b, 330 b, 344 a, 352 b, 354 b.
 Eastwell, letter dated at ; 568 b.
 Eaton :
 Ann, widow, petition of ; 154 a.
 Thomas, of Chester ; 403 a.
 co. Chester ; 401 b.
 Eaton-Goton, constables of ; 5 a.
 Eaton Socton ; 9 a.
 Eatsdene, manor of ; 634 b.
 Ebarra, Fernando de, of London ; 369 a.
 Ebersdorff, document dated at ; 12 a.
 Eccleshall manor, co. Stafford ; 632 a.
 Ecclestone, Charles, coiner ; 71 b.
 Echlin, Robert, letter of ; 37 a.
 Eck, Dideric, of Pantaleon, states depnty ; 12 a.
 Economy, domestic, in monasteries, hints on ; 324 b, 325 a.
 Eeroyd, Richard, letter of ; 291 a.
 Edberman :
 Francis ; 374 a, 396 a, 396 b.
 — examinations of ; 396 a, 396 b.
 Eddison, Edmond, soldier ; 511 b.
 Eddystone Lighthouse ; 252 b. rebuilding ; 259 b, 260 b, 261 b.
 Edenborough skirmish ; 604 b.
 Ederington, Thomas ; 272 b.
 Edelmeton ; 335 a.
 Edgbaston ; 334 b.
 Edgcumbe :
 R., documents signed by ; 70 b, 85 a, 85 b.
 Edgcumbe, Sir R. ; 582 a, 583 a.
 Edgchill ; 219 b.
 Edgerly, Thomas ; 22 a.
 Edgley, Lieut. Richard ; 592 a.
 Edgworth :
 Ann, of Dublin, petition signed by ; 590 a.
 Captain ; 594 b.
 Capt. John, weekly charge of his troop ; 598 a.
 Col., letter of ; 37 a.
 Edinburgh, documents dated at ; 68 b, 81 b, 83 a, 83 b, 84 a, 302 a, 302 b, 305 b, 306 a, 307 b, 309 a, 309 b, 311 a, 313 b.
 Bow and corn market ; 311 a. lawn market ; 311 b.
 the Canongate ; 310 b, 311 b.
 Castle ; 313 b.

Edinburgh—cont.
 Castle, surrender of ; 560 a.
 Holyrood House ; 583 a.
 — documents dated at ; 302 a, 302 b, 303 b, 313 b.
 College of Physicians of ; 230 a, 230 b, 231 a.
 corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 Faculty of Advocates' Library ; 298 b, 300 a.
 — MSS. of ; xxiii.
 the Mint at ; 68 b, 69 b, 81 a, et seq.
 Nether Bow ; 312 a.
 St. Giles Church, document dated at ; 309 a.
 St. Mary's College Kirk ; 309 b. value of land near (1669) ; 134 a. theatre licensing in, correspondence about (1739) ; 310 b, 313 a, 313 b.
 the Porteous riots at, account of ; 310 b.
 University, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 — opposition by, to a proposed playhouse ; 310 b.
 Ramsay's remarks on ; 313 a.
 Bishop of (1708), letter to ; 45 b.
 — Catholic, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 Edindon, Edyndon
 Will. de, Bishop of Winchester ; 263 b.
 William, Bishop of Winchester, nominated archbishop ; 338 a.
 — his refusal and death ; 338 b.
 Edisbury, Ken., letters of ; 245 a, 245 b.
 Ediva, Queen :
 her benevolence to Canterbury ; 327 b. charter of donation by ; ib.
 Edlingthorpe, Edellingthorpe, Henry de, v. Hug. de Loath ; 168 a, 172 a.
 Edlington, co. York, letter dated at ; 44 a.
 Edmonds :
 v. the King, writ of error ; 161 b.
 Edward, quartermaster ; 596 a.
 Capt. John ; 537 b.
 John, clerk ; 420 b.
 Captain Richard ; 596 a.
 Edmonstone, Sir A., MSS. of ; xx.
 Edmonton, Middlesex, hundred ; 164 a.
 Edmonton or Edlemorton, Sir Robert Cecil's lands in ; 635 a.
 Edmunds, C., letter of ; 238 b.
 Edmundsbury ; 190 b, 192 b, 193 b, 194 b.
 letter dated at ; 201 b.
 Edward :
 Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester (1320), writ of ; 371 a.
 — grant by ; 371 a.
 the Black Prince ; 358 b, 359 a.
 — gift by ; 322 b.
 — his debt to Canterbury ; 339 b.
 — his knighting ; 341 b.
 — his marriage ; 342 b.
 — charter, writ, &c. by ; 358 a.
 — letters patent by ; 402 a.
 Prince (1791), his conduct at Gibraltar ; 295 a.
 Edward I. :
 charters, grants, writs, &c. of ; 319 a, 321 b, 344 a, 344 b, 346 a, 346 b, 347 a, 347 b, 350 a, 357 b, 358 a.
 his account of his dispute with the Earl of Hereford and the Earl Marshal ; 347 a. his letter to Abp. Winchelsey ; 344 b.
 Edward II. :
 his pardon to the City ; 88 a. grants by ; 1 b. mandate of ; 89 a.
 grants, &c. by ; 319 a.
 writs, &c. of ; 344 b, 351 a, et seq.
 prescribes simplicity at the tables of his nobles, &c. ; 353 a.
 in Scotland ; 633 a.
 Edward III. ; 358 a.
 letters patent of ; 358 a.
 charters of ; 328 a, 412 a.
 grants, &c. by ; 1 b, 319 a, 319 b. letter of, about his son Lionel, Duke of Clarence ; 358 b.
 his debt to Canterbury ; 339 b.
 Edward IV. :
 letters patent of ; 271 a, 415 b.
 grant by ; 282 a.
 pardon by ; 319 b.
 Edward VI. :
 letters patent of ; 402 b, 416 a.
 Edwards :
 Capt., letter of ; 295 a.
 Adam ; 119 a.
 James ; 119 a.
 John, order, franchise of Chester ; 364 a.
 Peter, of Chester ; 361 b.
 — commission to ; 362 a.
 Thomas, letter of ; 295 b.
 — petition of ; 67 b.
 W. M., letter of ; 385 a.
 Col. William, mayor of Chester (1607), petition to ; 381 b.
 Lient. Wm. ; 591 b.

- Edyndowny, co. Wfe, lands of; 307 b, 308 a.
- Effingham, Earl of :
MSS. of; xx.
letters of (1752); 287 b.
- Eft, camp d'; 25 a.
- Egan :
Mr.; 471 a.
Boetius; 605 a.
Lieut.; 616 b.
Dr. Teige; 617 a.
- Egar or Agar, Charles, convicted of treason; 538 b.
- Egerton; 340 a.
Chancellor, speech of; 585 a.
Sir P. de M. Grey, M.P., MSS. of; xx.
Philip, of Oulton; 401 b.
Sir Philip; 389 a.
Thomas, mercer; 65 a.
- Egges, Vincent, trooper; 521 b.
- Egham, the Thynnes of; 51 a.
- Eglisbam, George, paper by; 585 a.
- Egmont :
Earl of, MSS. of; xx.
— (1751); 572 a.
— (1754), the new ministry and; 220 a.
— (1767); 487 a.
Comtesse d' (1708), letter of; 35 b.
- Egremont :
Earl of (1754); 225 a.
— letter to (1762); 285 a.
— (1763); 285 b.
— letters of; 285 a, 285 b, 286 a, 287 a.
— letters to; 285 a, 285 b, 286 a.
— death of (1763); 286 a, 286 b.
- Egworth, co. Bedford, manor; 3 a.
- Eilwekes, William, son of, witness; 330 b.
- Eirick, John, of Leicester, commission to; 417 a.
- Ekden, Roger de, bailiff of Leicester; 406 a, 406 b.
- Elbe, the; 220 b.
- Elbotill and the Bernis, lands of; 307 a, 307 b.
- Elder, William, complaint against; 231 a.
- Eldon, Earl of (1804), letter of; 287 b.
- Eldred, Nathaniel, petition of; 115 b.
- Eleanor, Queen :
letter of; 344 a.
gift by; 319 a.
writ of; 346 b.
- Elections, parliamentary (1708); 32 b.
- Electer Palatine, the, loan to (1704); 16 b.
- Electer Prince, the :
(1670); 144 b.
(1709), letter of; 36 b.
(1710), letters of; 38 a.
(1751); 284 b.
- Eley, Lieut. Leonard; 593 a.
- Elham :
Kent; 324 a.
John de, Archdeacon of Essex; 633 b.
Robert de; 347 a.
Thomas, of Bungay, will of; 334 a.
- "Eli," letter, signed; 150 b.
- Eliot :
John; 118 b.
Sir John; 581 b.
— speech of; 584 b.
— petition of; 584 a.
Thomas, deputy surveyor-general in Ireland, survey signed by; 518 a.
- Elis, Margaret, widow of Thomas, petition of; 511 b.
- Elizabeth :
Princess, daughter of James I., at Leicester; 428 b.
— aid for her marriage; 429 a.
— of Bohemia; 436 a.
Queen; 376 a.
— charter of; 371 b.
— letters patent of; 360 b.
— her loan to the States; 30 b.
— commissions by; 209 b.
— grant by; 261 b.
— letters patent, &c. of, relating to Leicester; 416 b, et seq.
— her expected visit to Leicester (c. 1576); 425 b.
— letters of; 583 b, 585 a.
— letter of (1563); 582 a.
— (1585); 227 b.
— picture of; 257 a.
— Earl of Essex and; 226 a.
— memorandum, money transactions with King of Fraunce (1599); 282 b.
— her inquiries respecting Ralph Winwood; 283 a.
— and marriage of Hen. IV. of France; 277 a.
— slanderous words touching Earl of Leicester and; 396 a, 396 b.
- Elizabeth, barque of "Lerpoole;" 380 a.
- Elkington :
Robert, deputy steward to the Duke of Lancaster; 412 a.
Thomas, of Laugar, payment to; 432 b.
- Ellacombe, Rev. H. T., MSS. of; xx.
- Ellemeet, M., letter of; 35 b.
- Eller, Edwd.; 386 b.
- Elbery :
Robert; 156 b.
— information of; 159 b.
- Ellesmere :
Lord, Lord Chancellor; 203 b, 236 a, 418 a.
— letter of (1606); 380 b.
— document signed by; 37 b.
- Ellibank, Lord, his brother (1743); 54 b.
- Elliot :
Mrs., warrant touching pension; 280 b.
James, quartermaster; 597 a.
Mrs. Katherine; 278 a, 279 a.
Lieut.-Col. W., letter of; 294 a.
- Ellis, Ellys :
Mr., Member of Parliament; 224 a.
— of Leicester; 430 b.
Christopher; 392 b.
James, mayor of Leicester; 431 b.
John, of the Mint, letters of; 68 a, 82 a, 84 a.
— petition of; 80 a.
— report by; 68 a.
Matthew; 390 b.
William, alderman of Bristol, letter of; 379 b.
Sergeant Wm.; 160 b.
— answer of; 160 b.
Sir William; 495 b.
- Ellischan, castle, Lord Taaffe's; 455 a.
- Ellison :
—; 193 a.
—, letter of; ib.
William, petition of; 140 a.
- Elliston, Edw. of Essex; 7 b.
- Ellott, Robert, petition of; 516 b.
- Ellyott, Cornet Rich.; 597 a.
- Elmore, John, parson of Bletsoe; 4 a.
- Elphin; 466 b, 483 b.
diocese of; 442 b.
bishop of (1760); 466 a.
- Elphinstone :
Lieut.-Col., letter of; 290 a.
Andrew; 305 b.
John, of Pendreich; 305 b.
William, bishop of Aberdeen; 304 b.
- Els, M. van, letter of; 38 a.
- Elsick; 301 a.
— letter dated at; 304 a.
- Elsliott, Thomas, "member of Jesus Christ and his Commonwealth," letter of; 386 a.
- Elst, camp at; 22 a.
- Elstee, Robert of, rector of Wouldham; 346 b.
- Eltham; 139 a, 568 b.
document dated at; 87 a, 421 a.
- Elton, Richard, soldier; 548 b.
- D'Eltz, M., letter of; 35 b.
- Elverton, lands in; 319 a.
- Elvngbam :
Ralph de; 2 a.
Walter de, license to; 2 a.
- Elwes :
Henry; 114 a.
Jeremy; 114 a.
— answer of; 114 a.
- Ely; 332 b, 376 a.
document dated at; 353 b.
administrator of; 268 a.
isle of, Cromwell in; 8 a.
— horse to be raised by (1645); 8 a.
Ralph de, canon of St. Paul's, grant by; 632 a. dean and chapter (1666); 104 b.
Bishop of (1273); 351 a.
— (1299); 345 a.
— (1364), Simon; 412 b.
— (1429); 263 a.
— (1452), conveyance to; 268 a.
Lord (1688); 555 b.
— and Lady (1774); 195 a.
- Elyott, Eylett, or Eyllott, Dr.; 155 a, 155 b, 157 b.
- Elys, John, of Newbury, will of; 335 b.
- Embalming bodies, peculiar process of, forbidden; 348 b.
- Embargoes, taking off, from Cork and Limerick, letter about; 189 a.
- Embroiderers of Chester; 364 a.
- Emerson :
Lieut. C.W., letter of; 295 b.
Thomas, petition of; 519 b.
- Emigration deplored (1669); 134 a.
- Emila, co. Rosecommon; 442 b.
- Emly :
bishop of (1651); 615 b.
Lord, manuscripts of, Mr. J. T. Gilbert's report on; xviii, 174 b, et seq.
- Emme, Thomas; 342 b.
- Emonde, John, conveyance to; 423 a.

Empires, Roman and British, comparative view of (1785); 289 a.
 Emsburie, on the Ouse; 9 b.
 Emson, Sir Richard, rent roll of; 630 a.
 Enchanter, the British; 32 a.
 Enclosures by decrees in courts of equity, Act (1666); 102 b.
 Enfield, Middlesex: tenants of; 271 b, 416 a.
 Sir Robert Cecil's lands in; 635 a.
 Enghien, Comte d', letter of; 35 b.
 England:
 Major, letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 great distress throughout, 1315 and 1316; 352 b, 353 a.
 and Scotland, Act for the weal of both (1670); 142 b.
 New, gold from; 80 b.
 Engleys, William le, mayor of Leicester; 410 b, 421 a.
 English, Thomas, soldier; 542 a.
 Enham, Hampshire; 263 b.
 Ennis, Nicholas, petition of; 518 b.
 Enniskilling; 497 a. garrison of; 599 a.
 Enscome, Robert, of Ratcliffe, mariner; 242 a.
 Ent:
 George, censor; 234 b.
 Sir George, his house; 230 b.
 Eon, Monsieur d'; 286 a.
 See D'Eon.
 Ephemerides, Kepler's; 218 b, 219 a.
 Epsom; 627 a, 630 b.
 Epworth (co. Beds?); 4 b.
 Equiluz, Juan de:
 letters of; 214 a.
 instructions to; 213 a.
 Erbach, Comte d', letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 40 a.
 Erdyngton, Sir Thomas de, commission to; 413 a.
 Erith, office of ballasting at; 244 a.
 Erizzo, Cavaliere; 22 a.
 Erklarkare, of Waynflete, Will. de; 264 b.
 Erle:
 Lieut.-General; 33 b, 34 b.
 — letters of; 32 a, 33 a, 35 a, 35 b, 38 a, 39 b.
 Mr.; 25 a.
 Sir Walter, a prisoner; 210 a.
 Erle, John le; 367 b.
 Ernesby, Robert de, steward at Duke of Lancaster; 412 a.
 Ernold the Abbot; 636 a.
 Errington, Colonel; 523 b.
 Erroll, Earl of (1604), at Leicester; 428 a.
 Eskar, co. Longford; 535 b.
 Esker, co. Dublin, manor of; 549 a.
 Erskine, Erskync:
 A. J. W. H. K., Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 Sir John, his silver mines; 84 a, et seq.
 Sir Robert, witness; 305 b.
 Thomas de, witness; 307 a.
 Sir William, petition against; 238 b.
 — his patent; 239 a.
 Erton, Richard; 596 a.
 Eryk, John and Johan, of Leicester; 420 a.
 Esby, Stephen; 272 b.
 Escurial, the; 193 a.
 Esmond:
 Lord, the late (1663); 526 a.
 Lawrence, petitions of; 508 a, 526 a.
 — governor of Duncannon; 605 a.
 Sir Thomas; 608 a, 610 a.
 — Lawrence, father of; 610 a.
 Ensign Walter; 595 b.
 Espeeer, Philip le, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Esperon, Richard, demise to; 323 a.
 Espin, John, of Knytton, witness; 408 b.
 Esse, Gwydo de, gift by; 323 a.
 Essen, Roger de, license to; 2 a.
 Essendine, benefice of; 340 a.
 Essex; 210 a.
 horse to be raised by (1645); 8 a.
 Earl of, T. (1202); 356 b.
 — and Hereford, Humfrey de Bou (23 Hen. III.); 357 b.
 — (1225), W. de Mandeville; 264 b.
 — Bourchier, warrant of; 263 b.
 — (13 Edw. IV.), Henry; 415 b.
 — (temp. Eliz.); 209 b.
 — players of, gift to (1588); 427 b.
 — letters of (1590); 228 a.
 — (1592); ib.
 — his expedition to Spain (1597); 228 a.
 — (1598); 398 b.
 — permitted by Q. Eliz. to go and see "some other phisitions" (1599); 282 b.
 — Queen Elizabeth and; 226 a.
 — letter of (1642); 211 b.
 — letter to; 211 a.
 — physicians for his army (1643); 230 a.
 — (1644); 5 b.
 — letter of (1644); 3 a.

Essex, Earl of—cont.
 — (1645); 8 a.
 — (1668); 173 a.
 — report of; 169 b.
 — (1669); 129 b.
 — (18th century); 26 b.
 — letters of (1705); 31 b.
 — letters of (1706); 32 a.
 — letter of (1708); 35 b.
 — his regiment (1710); 38 b, 43 b.
 — letter of (circ. 1717); 57 a.
 — letters of (1786); 287 b.
 — letter to; 582 b.
 — (n. d.); 581 a.
 Essex, John, marbler; 627 b.
 Essington, John, his proposal; 77 b.
 Estant, John, of Estryston, will of; 333 b.
 Este:
 M. Rinald d', letter of; 35 b.
 Will., of Abingdon; 266 a.
 Estede, Walter, son of Richard de; 323 a.
 Estephamis, John, son of, of Leicester; 404 b.
 Esthaddon, in honour of Leicester; 411 a.
 Estirfethy, co. Kincardine, lands of; 302 a.
 Estirlyng, Thomas, witness; 421 b.
 Estleya, Thomas de, witness; 406 a, 407 a.
 Estooker, Somerset; 332 b.
 Estremos, letter dated at; 58 a.
 Estryston; 333 b.
 Estthaitmore or Qwarethill, co. Stirling; 307 a.
 Esturmy, Sir Robert; 347 a.
 Estwyke, chapel at; 262 b.
 Ethelred II., charter of; 324 a.
 Etherington:
 Toomes v., roll in writ of error; 119 a.
 Mr., clerk of the Trinity House; 257 a.
 Robert, application of; 123 a.
 Eton:
 letter dated at; 13 b.
 cost of board, &c. at; 13 b.
 Robert of, claims of; 358 b.
 Etton, John, of Frisby, will of; 334 b.
 Eugene, Prince:
 16 b, 17 a, 32 b, 33 b.
 letters of; x, 16 a, 36 a, 38 a, 39 b, 40 b. negotiations with (1708); 19 a, et seq.
 mission to (1706); 16 a.
 his chaplain; 442 a.
 Eugenius III., Pope, bull of; 317 a.
 Euncey, Walter le, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Eure:
 Lord (1668); 166 a.
 — George, petition of (1671); 164 b.
 Edward; 153 b, 154 a.
 Francis; 153 b, 154 a.
 — petition of; 154 a.
 Prudence; 153 b.
 Eusebius; 586 a.
 Eustace:
 old, of Confy; 498 a.
 Charles, letters of; 294 b.
 Captain; 593 b.
 John, of Ross, petition of; 512 b.
 Sir Maurice; 136 b, 495 b, 497 a.
 — order touching; 385 b.
 — Lord Chancellor, petition of; 505 a.
 — speech of; 581 a.
 Maurice, petition of; 530 a.
 Thomas, of Confy, petition of; 514 b.
 Evans:
 Brigadier, letter of; 37 a.
 Capt., letter of; 37 a.
 Col., letters of; 31 b.
 Richard, of Whittington, his death; 12 b.
 Robert; 361 a.
 Col. William, letter of; 35 b.
 William, trooper, petitions of; 534 b, 541 b.
 Ensign William; 592 a.
 Evard, Walter, of Malmesbury; 639 a, 639 b.
 Evaynes, Johu, mariner; 373 b.
 Evelin, Lieut. Thomas; 511 b.
 Evelyn:
 Lady, letter of (1714); 57 a.
 Henry, son of Richard; 7 a.
 Jo., letter of; 38 a.
 Richard, of Wotton; 3 b.
 Everard:
 Samuel, teacher at Ewelme; 637 b.
 Lieut. Thomas; 593 b.
 Everdole, John de, Dean of St. Paul's, indentures by; 633 a, 633 b.
 Everintune, Mayfelin family of; 262 b.
 Everwyksceyre, Darnall in; 324 b.
 Every, Mr., candidate for Leicester; 436 b.
 Evesham, letter dated at; 10 b.
 Evert, Major Edward, of Trin; 523 a.
 Ewart, S., letter of; 295 b.

Ewelme Almshouse, co. Oxford, report on manuscripts of, by the Rev. W. W. Harvey and Mr. Horwood; xiv, 624 b.
 Ewen, Thomas, grocer, of London, will of; 333 a.
 Ewens, Robert, of Limehouse, mariner; 240 b.
 Ewins, William, instructions to; 243 b.
 Exby, a footman; 156 b.
 Exchequer, "Royal Aid and Additional Supply" in; 389 b, 390 a.
 Exeter; 324 b, 334 b.
 document dated at; 74 b.
 Mint at; xii, 70 b, 74 b.
 port of; 94 a.
 siege of; 134 b.
 Goldsmiths' Company of; 70 a.
 Countess of (1668); 118 b.
 Bishop of (1807), W. Stapylton; 351 b.
 — (1513), his dispute with Abp. Warham; 336 a.
 — Anthony (1667), writ of summons; 114 b.
 Marquis of, MSS. of; xx.
 Duke of, Beaufort Lord Dorchester (temp. Hen. V.); 627 a.
 Exham:
 John, lands held by; 520 b.
 William, of Leicester 422 a.
 Exports:
 (English, 1669), list of; 135 a.
 and imports, office of Inspector-General 135 b.
 Exshaw; 478 a.
 his magazine; 485 b.
 Exstut, Richard, of Leicester, submission of; 422 a.
 Exton, John, letter of; 385 a.
 Eyberby, John, fishmonger of London, will of; 332 a.
 Eygan, Father Teige; 616 b.
 Eylett, Dr.; 155 b, 157 b.
 Eymes, Major, letters of; 31 b.
 Eymyng, Edmund; 377 a.
 Eynesford; 337 a.
 William de, gift of manor by; 328 .
 Eyr, Eyre:
 Lady; 121 a.
 Adam le, hospital endowed by; 342 b.
 Alan, mayor of Pontefract; 271 b.
 Col. Anthony; 278 b.
 Anthony, commission to; 280 a.
 Sir Christopher; 121 a.
 R., Solicitor-General, letter of; 47 a.
 Eyres:
 Mr.; 45 b.
 Col. Geo. B., letters of; 290 a, 292 b, 293 b.
 Eyrieke, Robert, of Leicester; 425 b.
 Eyston, Col., MSS. of; xx.
 Eyston, Adam de, chaplain; 633 b.
 Eyton:
 Capt. David, letter of; 35 b.
 Geoffrey of, of Leicester; 408 a.

F.

Facet, Dr. Adam, Commissary-General; 335 b
 Facio, N., letter of; 62 b.
 Faget:
 Baron de, letters of; 35 b, 38 a.
 Lieut.-General, letters of; 32 a.
 the Groffier, letters of; 32 b, 35 b, 37 a.
 M., his memorial relating to Bouchain; 40 a Faget:
 F.; 12 a.
 Robert; 370 a.
 Fagg, Sir John; 137 a.
 Fabye, Patrick, license farmer; 517 a.
 Fahy, Richard de; 370 a.
 Fairborn, Sir Stafford, letters of; 31 b, 35 b.
 Fairfax:
 Lord (1708), letter of; 212 b.
 Lady, letter of; 212 b.
 Colonel; 429 b.
 Brian, his library sold; 92 b.
 Charles, order signed by; 275 a.
 Guy; 271 a.
 Thomas; ib.
 Sir Thomas; 8 a.
 — his march westward (1645); 8 b.
 — his army; 9 b, 10 a.
 — petition of; 552 b.
 — banquet at Leicester to; 429 a.
 — letter of; 437 b.
 — passport signed by; ib.
 — accounts of; 637 b.

Fairfield:
 deeds relating to; 328 b.
 D., rector of Scotch College at Douay, letter of; 38 a.
 Fakenham; 335 a.
 Falaizau, M. de, letter of; 40 a.
 Falconbridge, Viscount, Thomas (14 Chas. II); 275 a.
 Falconer, William, defendant; 529 b.
 Falfield. See Mars.
 Falkland:
 castle and palace of; 301 a.
 Lord, his troop (1663); 503 a, 517 a, 519 b, 523 b, 530 a, 531 b.
 Viscount, Anthony (1683); 391 b.
 — letters concerning; 258 a.
 — petitions of; 258 a, 391 b.
 — case of; 582 a.
 Deputy; 581 b.
 fort; 609 a.
 — surrender of; ib.
 Fallan, Edmond; 518 a.
 Fallay, Hants, parson of; 266 a.
 Falley, Bucks; 332 a.
 Fallon:
 Bishop; 476 a.
 Donnogh McTeige; 518 a Edmond McConner; ib.
 Redmond; ib.
 Falmouth; 248 b, 252 b, 254 b. harbour; 249 a.
 pirates near; 242 b.
 Act concerning (1670); 142 b.
 Countess of, intended grant (1673); 255 b.
 Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a
 Falvey, Lieut. D., letter of; 291 Fane:
 Lord (1754); 295 b.
 Lady, letter of; 57 a.
 Sir Frank, commissioner; 275 a.
 Sir Geo. and Lady; 3 b.
 Fane's Bill; 141 a.
 Fanner, Edward, sheriff; 3 b.
 Fanning:
 Dominick, mayor of Limerick; 603 a, 614
 — execution of; 615 b.
 Robert, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 Fankuier, John, security for Newton; 66 a.
 Fanshawe:
 Sir Richard; 109 a.
 — Master of Requests; 524 a
 Sir Thomas; 584 a, 584 b.
 Farasin, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Farcy, J., letter of; 37 a.
 Farell, Brien, prisoner; 543 b.
 Farewell:
 Dorotay, widow, deceased; 141 a.
 — case of; 141 a.
 John; 141 a.
 — letter of; 37 a.
 Farfax, Paul, a quack; 227 b.
 Fargusson, Alexander, trooper; 540 b.
 Farington:
 George; 119 a.
 Samuel, of Chester; 361 b.
 Farleigh:
 East and West, manors of; 319 a, 329 b.
 — lands in; 329 a, 345 a.
 — mill at; 345 a.
 — church of; 329 a.
 Farley, Benjamin, letter of; 40 a.
 Farmer:
 Edw., on Northampton committee; 6 b.
 Jasper, petition of; 541 b.
 Farnese, Cardinal, letter to; 214 b.
 Farnsworth:
 Reresby v.; 161 b.
 John; 162 a.
 Farnham; 335 a.
 Castle, letter dated at; 46 b.
 Thomas; 415 a.
 Farnhurst chapel; 264 a.
 Farningham manor; 322 b, 324 a. church; 317 b, 319 b.
 Farnworthe: inhabitants of, petitions, &c. of; 375 b, 387 a.
 free grammar school; 370 b, 375 b, 387 a.
 Farquhar, John, letter of; 293 b.
 Farquharson:
 Col., MSS. of; xx.
 W. letters of; 289 b, 292 b.
 Far, Hugh, suit by; 529 b.
 Farre, Dr., of the College of Physicians; 226 b.
 Farrell:
 execution at Clonmel of; 481 b.
 Francis, of Mornyn; 540 a.
 Henrv, mayor of Pontefract; 272 b.

Farrell—cont.

John and Rose, lands held by; 518 a.
 Farrer, Frank, of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Farrer or Farrers :
 sergeant-major; 592 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Farrier, Dr., letter of; 57 a.
 Farrington :
 Brigadier, letters of; 31 b.
 Thomas, carrier; 382 b.
 — his wife; ib.
 Farthings; 383 a, 390 b.
 Farwell :
 Col. John, letter of; 35 b.
 Kath., letter of; 35 b.
 Fastolf :
 Sir John; 265 a.
 his messuage in Southwark; 263 a, 265 a.
 — his service in France; 268 a.
 — papers relating to; 268 a.
 Laurence, rector of Cliff, license to; 338 a Milcentia and Alicia; 268 a.
 Richard, citizen of London; 265 a.
 Fasts, public; 387 a.
 Father, Robert, of Tewkesbury, will of; 335 b.
 Fauch', Eustace de; 356 b.
 Faucett, Mr., chirurgion; 278 b.
 Faulkner, George, a Dublin publisher; 199 a, 444 a, 456 b, 467 b, 475 b, 476 b, 479 b, 480 b, 481 a, 483 b, 484 a, 486 b,
 487 a.
 Faulknor, W. H., letter of; 290 a.
 Faunt, George, sheriff of Co. Leicester; 438 b.
 Fauquier, Dr.; 85 a.
 Faverge, camp at, letters from; 21 a.
 Faversham; 330 a.
 abbot of; 330 a, 348 a, 350 a.
 mayor and jurors of; 242 b.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Lord (1691); 565 a.
 Fawar, George, requisition by; 439 b.
 Fawcett, Fawsitt :
 Mr., of Leicester; 436 a.
 Reynold, examination of; 431 b.
 Sir Wm., letter of; 295 a.
 Fawkes, Ayscough, Esq., MSS. of; xx.
 Fay :
 M. or Sieur de; 29 a.
 — instructions to; 29 a.
 Fayette, Marquis de la, letters of aud to; 289 a.
 Fayry, witness; 156 b.
 Feards :
 siege of; 578 b.
 taking of; 612 a.
 Fearn, Bishop of (1651); 614 a.,
 Feashnishstowne, co. Meath, garrison at, in 1648; 595 a.
 Featherstone, Thomas, letter of; 290 b.
 Feau, Sieur de, at Guise; 28 a.
 Feilding :
 Viscount, letters to (1631, &c.); 552 a, et seq.
 Lady Betty, and lottery tickets; 568 b.
 Charles; 74 a.
 — his regiment; 568 b.
 Felbingoe, M., letter of; 38 a.
 Folday, Henry de; 367 b.
 Feldys, co. Leicester; 420 b.
 Felixstow; 333 b.
 Felkersomb, Count; 16 a.
 Fell, Col. Thomas, letter to; 384 b.
 Fells, Henry, of Chester; 375 a.
 Fels, Comte, letter of; 38 a.
 Felton, Sir H.; 254 a.
 Felz, Col., letter of; 36 b.
 Fen Ditton; 332 a.
 Fen, John, of Clare, Norwicz dioc., will of; 334 b.
 Fender, William, trooper; 523 b.
 Fenestrelle, camp before; 19 b.
 Feniton St. Andrew; 334 b.
 Fenn :
 Mr.; 129 b, 130 a, 132 a.
 Burley; 279 a.
 Fennell :
 Captain, treason of; 604
 Col., in Limerick; 601 b.
 Dr.; 509 b, 615 b.
 — excommunicated; 617 a.
 Major, at Clonmel; 579 a, 579 b, 612 a, 615 b.
 — his treachery; 579 a, 612 a.
 Gerrott; 603 a.
 Fenrother, Robert; 65 a.
 Fens, the Great Level of. See Bedford Level
 Fenton :
 Viscount, letter to (1612); 88 b.
 Geff; 377 a.
 John, document signed by; 6 a.
 Sir Morris, his troop; 523 b.

Fenwick :

Colonel; 590 b.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 593 b.
 E., letters of; 289 b, 291 a, 292 b.
 Capt. Robert; 591 a, 598 b.
 Robert, action against; 276 a.
 Fenys, Will., Lord Say and Sele; 263 b.
 Feracall territory, King's Co.; 545 b. incumbent of; ib.
 Ferers, Gillebert de, charters of; 636 b.
 Fergus; 478 a.
 Ferguson :
 Mr.; 45 a.
 James, letter of; 290 a.
 Major Patrick, letters of; 288 b.
 Ferkal; 613 b.
 Ferma, Prince and Abp. of (1644); 604 b.
 Fermanagh co., losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 Fern Island; 255 b.
 Ferne, Kelso and, Commendator of; 302 a.
 Ferne, Sir John, pedigree by; 586 b, note.
 Fernebagh, Thos., alderman of Chester; 361 b.
 Fernleage, Kent; 327 b.
 Fernly or Fernley, Lieut.-Col.; 594 b.
 weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Ferns : agent; 606 a.
 Bishop of; 99 b.
 — Nich. French; 464 b, 582 b.
 — letters to; 576 b, 590 a.
 — and Chapter, indenture by; 61 a.
 — and Leighlin; 194 b, note.
 Ferny, letter dated at; 46 b.
 John, bailiff; 306 a.
 Fernys, Thomas; 367 b.
 Ferrall :
 —; 608 a.
 Licut.-Col. Brian; 604 a.
 Faghny; 609 b.
 Francis, of Mornyn; 535 b.
 alias Butler, Joan; 538 b.
 John, of Eskar; 535 b.
 Katherine and Margery, petition of; 517 a.
 Lisagh; 609 a, 618 a.
 Colonel or General, Richard; 604 a, 605 a, 606 a, 609 a, 611 b, 617 a, 618 a.
 Ferraris, Henry de, justice of Chester; 371 a.
 Ferrarois, the; 20 a.
 Ferrassieres, Comte Dohna, letters of; 35 b, 38 n.
 Ferraers :
 Lord, (27 Hen. VI.) of Groby, Sir E. Grey; 415 a.
 — Robert, high steward, &c., of liberty of Richmond and Middleham, co. York (1694), letter of; 284 a.
 Dorothy; 153 b.
 Sir Humphrey, deputy lieutenant of co. Derby, letter of; 379 a.
 Sir John; 434 a.
 John; 153 b.
 Martin, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, will of; 335 a.
 William, Burgess of Leicester; 423 a.
 Ferret, Joseph, minister of Pontefract; 276 a, 276 b.
 Ferrier, Sir Ralph, his case (Ric. II); 169 b.
 Ferrou, William, mayor of Leicester; 420 b.
 Ferrybridge :
 co. York; 276 a.
 lands in; ib.
 Feru, Andree le; 265 b.
 Festivals, regulations for service on, at Canterbury; 321 a.
 Fetherstone, Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
 Fethirkarne, rector of; 305 b, 306 a.
 Fettercraim, thanedom of; 301 a.
 Feuillade, Duc de la; 564 a.
 Fever, Thomas le, letters of; 25 b.
 Feversham, Earl of, Louis :
 (1685); 60 b.
 James II. and (1688); 556 a.
 (1691); 562 b.
 Farrington, Miss, MSS. of; xx.
 Ffennell, Gerrott; 607 b.
 Fferralls in arms; 603 a.
 Ffolkes, Sir W. H. B., Bart., MSS. of; xx.
 Ffoulkes, Joas; 168 a, 172 a.
 Fideli, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Field :
 Rev. Edmund, MSS. of; xx.
 Edward, mayor of Pontefract; 274 a, 274 b.
 — petition of; 274 b.
 William, of Pontefract; 275 a.
 Fielding, Isacell, letter of; 35 b.
 Fiennces :
 Lord, Nathaniel, commissioner (temp. Commonwealth); 94 b.
 — payment to (1658); 95 a.
 Comtesse de, letter of; 37 a.
 Fierres, Comte de, letter of; 40 a.
 Fierlants, M., letter of; 38 a.
 Fife, Earl of :
 MSS. of; xx.
 Malcolm, charters by; xvii 304 a, 304 b.

Fife, Earl of—cont.

- (c. 1315); 305 a.
 Sir Duncan, witness; ib.
 Duncan (1345), charter by; ib.
 Robert, witness (1382); 305 a.
 — (1393); 305 b.
 and Menteith (1388), Robert, witness; 307 a.
 Fife, Earls of, Macduff, privileges of; 298 a.
 Fifield, Davant; 332 b.
 Fifth Monarchy men; 155 a, 155 b, 157 b, 158 b, 159 b.
 Fighan, John; 545 a.
 Filby, Wm., order to pay; 281 a.
 Filewood, John, information touching; 136 a.
 Filmer, Sir E., Bart., MSS. of; xx.
 Filpatrick, Mr.; 561 a.
 Fin water; 497 a.
 Finae, taking of; 602 a.
 Finale; 570 a.
 Finch:
 Lord, letters of; 54 a.
 Mr., letters of; 54 a.
 Hon. Mrs., ode to; 24 b.
 G. H., Esq., M.P., report on MSS. of; xx.
 — postscript to; 640 b.
 Sir Henenge; 250 a.
 — report of; 255 a.
 — opinions of; 581 a.
 Jo., document signed by; 209 b.
 Sir John, speeches of; 584 b.
 Richard, trooper, petitions of; 507 b, 508 a.
 William; 282 a.
 Fincham; 333 b, 334 a.
 Finchingfield; 333 a.
 Finckenstien, Count, letter of; 40 a.
 Findon, Sussex; 263 a.
 Finett, Robert, of Ampthill; 4 b.
 Finenx, Piers, letter of; 38 a.
 Fingalle, Earl of, prisoner, death of (1649); 611 a.
 Finglas; 589 a, 610 b, 611 a.
 lands near; 547 a.
 Lt.-Col. John, his brother, killed at Drogheda; 500 b, 521 b.
 — his estate; 521 b.
 Mary; 518 a.
 Patrick; 582 a.
 Roger; 540 b.
 — of Ballromston; 521 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 500 b, 540 b.
 — alleged heir of Lieut.-Col. John; 521 b.
 Finisterre, Cape; 242 b, 255 b.
 Finlay, his bank in Dublin; 196 b.
 Fintry, R. Graham of; 298 b.
 Firbeck, co. York, Act for settling manor of; 141 a.
 Fire ships; 248 a.
 Firebras, Firebrace:
 Lady; 569 a.
 — letter of; 572 a.
 Sir Cordel, speech of; 223 a.
 Firsby, Roger and Agnes de, conveyance by; 413 b.
 Fischer, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Fish, Hum., order by; 3 a.
 Fisher:
 —; 156 b.
 Sir Clement, letter to; 213 a.
 Captain Edward; 595 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Lieut. Edward; 593 b.
 Captain Henry; 595 b.
 Matthew, an old soldier; 439 a.
 Philip; 258 b.
 — inventory by; ib.
 Richard, of Ipswich, letters of; 244 a.
 Thomas, of Winchelsea, will of; 333 a.
 William, jurymen; 89 a.
 — of Castleacre, Norwich, will of; 334 a.
 Fitch:
 Edward, of Ormonde's Life Guard; 516 a.
 Thomas, of the Mint; 67 a, 67 b.
 Fites, Elizabeth; 163 b.
 Fithing, Amand, canon of St. Paul's; 634 a.
 Fittor or Fytton:
 John, mayor of Chester (1593), letters to; 375 a, 375 b.
 Thomas de; 402 b.
 FitzFulcher, Hervey, gift by; 323 a.
 Fitzgerald, FitzGerald:
 Captain; 604 a.
 Mr.; 490 b, 491 a.
 —, chaplain; 467 b.
 Edmond, of Ballymalo, petitions of; 502 b, 503 a, 507 a.
 Sir Edmond, petition of; 504 a.
 — his whole estate wasted, &c.; 504 b.
 Capt. Edw., letter of; 46 b.
 Sir Edward, petition of; 500 a.
 Francis, friar; 603 a.
 Sir Gerald, MSS. of; xx.
 Gerald 602 b.

Fitzgerald, FitzGerald—cont.

- Gerald, petition of; 540 a.
 — his letter; 616 b.
 Gerald Cron; 604 a.
 Gerrott; 603 b.
 John; 543 b.
 Sir John, his regiment; 494 b.
 Sir Luke, of Tycroghan, his relict, Dame Mary; 522 b.
 — his son George; ib.
 — his house at Ticrohan; 580 a.
 Morish; 609 a.
 Nicholas; 596 b.
 Peirce, his lands in Kildare; 516 b.
 Symon; 517 a.
 Thomas; 609 b.
 Lieut.-Col. William; 516 b.
 William, petition of; 546 a.
 FitzGerald, the descent of; 607 b.
 FitzGibbon, John, of the Irish House of Commons; 192 a.
 Fitzhardinge:
 Viscount, Charles (1663); 551 b.
 Lord, MSS. of; xx.
 Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Fitzherbert, John, Remembrancer in the Exchequer, will of; 335 a.
 FitzHill, Ensign Cbas., letter of; 294 a.
 FitzHugh, Fitzhugh:
 family, of Ravenswath; 263 a.
 —, of Willden; 8 a.
 Lord, Henry; 263 a.
 — William; ib.
 Geoffrey; ib.
 Robert, clerk; ib.
 R. W., letter of; 295 a.
 Wm., v. John Chichester; 169 b.
 FitzJames, Mr.; 497 b.
 FitzJames' Bill (1670), amendments; 154 a.
 FitzJasper, Robert Martin, of Galway; 516 b.
 FitzJohn, Wm. Bourke, of Castleeken; 613 a.
 FitzLowys, Lowys; 415 a.
 FitzMichell, Margaret Archer, petition of; 516 a.
 FitzMorrice, Capt. Ulick, petition of; 530 a, 533 b.
 Fitzpatrick, FitzPatrick:
 —, second to Fox in a duel; 206 a.
 Capt.; 616 b.
 Colonel; 542 b, 624 b.
 — lands granted to; 511 a.
 — his estate in Galway; 532 b.
 Capt. Barnaby, petition of; 514 b.
 Bryan, Vicar-General of Ossory; 614 b.
 John; 613 b, 615 a, 615 b, 616 a, 616 b.
 Col. John, petitions of; 501 a, 527 b, 542 b.
 — certificate concerning; 543 b.
 FitzRoger; 347 b.
 Fitzroy, Fredk., letter of; 295 a.
 FitzSimon:
 Alan, de Wyton, gift by; 323 a.
 Dr. Patrick, Catholic Abp. of Dublin; 476 a—487 b, passim.
 Fitzsimons, Dr.; 456 b.
 Fitzsymons:
 James, petitions of; 500 a, 514 b.
 — his father Christopher; ib.
 Fitzwalter:
 barony of, adjudged to Benjamin Mildmay, 116 b. a carman, payment to; 526 a.
 Lord, Benjamin (1670), pedigree of; 116 b.
 — Robert; 116 b.
 Fitzwilliam, FitzWilliam:
 Lord (1670), v. Humberston, motion paper; 147 a.
 W., letters of; 374 a, 376 a, 376 b, 377 a, 397 a.
 Will.; 268 a.
 — petition of; 537 b.
 FitzZymons, Col.; 615 a.
 Flamang, Salomon le; 344 a.
 Flamborough Head; 255 b.
 Flamsteed:
 John, the astronomer, his property at Greenwich Observatory; 76 a.
 — his papers; 68 b.
 — his assistant, Abraham Sharp; 636 a.
 — calculations, &c. by; xiii, 637 b.
 Flanders; 19 a, 43 b, 158 b.
 tour through, in 1700; 61 a, 61 b.
 States of; 32 a.
 the States of, letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 39 b, 40 a. affairs of (1706); 16 a. service in; 26 b.
 loan to; 30 b.
 the English in; 30 b.
 list of English officers in (1709); 37 b, 38 a.
 coinage, &c. of; 73 a.
 Flanigan, William, trooper; 546 b.
 Flatholm, the, light at; 261 b.
 Flax. See Hemp.
 Fleet, co. Lincoln; 332 a, 334 b, 335 a.
 Fleet, Sir John, formerly lord mayor of London; 392 a.

Fleetwood :
 Lord (1658) ; 438 a.
 Dr., Bishop of St. Asaph's ; 34 a.
 Sir George, suit by ; 61 a.
 Lieut. Jo. ; 594 b.
 John, consul, letter of ; 47 b.
 Sir Miles ; 436 a.
 William ; 584 b.
 Flegge, John, of Needham Market, will of ; 334 a.
 Fleming, Flemynge :
 Comte ; 31 b.
 — letters of ; 35 b, 36 b, 38 a, 39 b.
 Lieut., letter of ; 289 b.
 General, letters of ; 32 a.
 Den., letter of ; 245 a.
 James, of Cabragh ; 603 a.
 Sir John ; 498 a.
 Richard, clerk ; 634 b.
 Fa. Thomas ; 604 a.
 Th., Alp. of Dublin ; 614 a, 614 b.
 Sir William, letter of ; 212 b.
 William le, of Leicester ; 410 b.
 — conveyance to ; 410 b.
 Fletcher :
 Michael, captive in Barbary ; 242 a.
 Lieut. Richard, report of ; 296 a.
 Thos. ; 156 a, 156 b.
 — information of ; 159 b.
 — mayor of Chester (1597), letter to ; 397 b.
 — bill of disbursements by ; 398 b.
 Fletton ; 413 b.
 Flines, Abbess of, letter of ; 40 a.
 Flint :
 county ; 388 b.
 ship-money ; 383 a.
 bailiffs and others of, precept to ; 359 a.
 Capt., letters of ; 294 b.
 Capt. W., letter of ; 294 b.
 Flockton, co. York ; 636 a, 636 b.
 Flokersbrok, Flokersbrucke (Flookers Brook) ; 358 a, 371 a.
 Flood :
 Henry, of the Irish House of Commons ; 193 b, 194 a, 203 a.
 William, soldier ; 547 a.
 Florence, Firenze ; 26 b, 282 b :
 letters dated at ; 47 b, 570 b. low moral condition of ; 570 b. resident at ; 22 a.
 Grand Duke of (1630) ; 244 a.
 — letter to ; 244 b.
 Flores, Marquis of, P. de Zuniga ; 213 b.
 Flotard :
 M., his papers ; 16 a.
 — letter of ; 40 a.
 David, letters of ; 36 b.
 Flotham ; 324 a.
 Flotte, Peter, Pope Boniface's description of ; 348 b.
 Flond, William, petition of ; 503 a.
 Flower :
 Thomas, soldier ; 543 a.
 Lieut. Thomas ; 595 a.
 William, report by ; 536 b.
 Colonel William ; 595 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop ; 598 a.
 Sir William, commissioner ; 515 b, 530 b, 536 b.
 Floyd :
 Mrs., letter of ; 57 a.
 Col., afterwards Sir John, Bart., letters of, 288 b, 289 b, 292 b, 295 b.
 Col. Matthew, letter of ; 288 b.
 Sir Philip, of the Mint ; 64 a.
 Richard, petition of ; 518 b.
 — v. Richard Philipp ; 541 b.
 Floyer :
 security for Newton ; 66 a.
 Peter, of the Mint ; 68 b.
 Fludd :
 Dr., of Oxford ; 228 b.
 — his works ; 229 b.
 Fludd's case (19 Jac. I.) ; 170 b.
 Flushing ; 138 a, 218 b.
 prisoners at ; 253 b.
 Flynn, Flynn :
 a bookseller ; 459 a.
 Michael ; 466 b.
 Roger ; ib.
 Flytt, alias Wallsgrove, John, of Worcester ; 682 b.
 Foakes, Wm., affidavit of ; 160 b.
 Foart, barony of, estate in ; 536 b.
 Fode :
 Ralph, inquisition by ; 406 a.
 Rich., of Shaldbourne, his will ; 262 b.
 Fol, Griffin le, of Leicester ; 405 b.
 Folcuille :
 John de, conveyance by ; 408 a.
 Robert de, witness ; 466 a.

Foley :
 G. R., letter of ; 292 b.
 Samuel, Bishop of Down and Connor ; 581 b.
 Folifote, Will., carpenter, of Cambridge, will of ; 333 a.
 Foliot, Jordan, witness ; 270 b.
 Foljambe, Godefroy ; 412 b.
 Folkestone :
 church ; 316 a.
 corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 Lord and Lady (1747) ; 569 b.
 Folliott, Lord, his company (1663) ; 529 b.
 Folville, le Sieur ; 555 a.
 Fonseca, John de, letter of ; 38 a.
 Font :
 M. de la, letter of ; 37 a.
 St. Pierre de la, letter of ; 35 a.
 Fontainebleau ; 30 b, 62 a, 566 a.
 Fontane, Mr., horses of Charles I. in charge of ; 552 b.
 Fontanedo Castle ; 553 a.
 Fontanelle, Monsr. ; 63 a.
 Fonzecca :
 Don Alfonso de ; 22 b.
 Don Pedro Rodriguez de ; ib.
 Fool, Robert, alias Wm. Chenpaysn ; 2 a.
 Foord :
 George, petition of ; 67 a.
 Mathew, his trustees ; 541 b.
 Foordome, Capt. ; 606 b.
 Foosse, Louis, of Abingdon ; 266 a.
 Foot :
 Mrs. ; 569 b.
 Topham, and Windsor election (1711) ; 284 a.
 Foot-ball (temp. Hen. VIII.) ; 363 a.
 Forbes :
 Lord, MSS. of ; xx.
 — (1490) ; 298 b.
 — or Forlish (1641) ; 603 a.
 — letters of (1708) ; 48 a.
 — letter of (1710) ; 38 a.
 Sir Arthur, petitions of ; 501 a, 521 a, 538 a, 544 a, 549 a.
 — his troop ; 508 a, 518 b, 530 b, 547 a.
 Duncan, of Culloden, letter of ; 310 b, 312 a.
 Lt.-Col. John, letter of ; 291 a.
 Bishop of Brechin, his "Missale de Arbutnott" ; 298 a, 299 b, 300 a.
 Sir William, Bart., MSS. of ; xxi.
 Forces, land, his Majesty's accounts (1669) ; 129 a.
 Ford :
 co. Somerset ; 265 a.
 Lieut., letter of ; 289 a.
 Mr. ; 59 a.
 Sir Richard, lord mayor of London (1671) ; 157 b.
 Thomas, his tennis court ; 98 b.
 Wm. ; 279 b.
 Fordoun :
 parish, in Mearns ; 300 b.
 lands and village of ; 301 a. hill of ; ib.
 Fordwich : importance of the quay at ; 326 b.
 rival interests at ; 326 b, 327 a.
 corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 Foreigners :
 holding English livings ; 323 a, 330 b. restrictions on, in Leicester ; 427 a.
 Forelands, North and South ; 240 a, 245 b, 256 b.
 Forest :
 Monsr. la ; 278 b.
 Alexander, provost of St. Mary's, Edinburgh ; 309 b.
 Edward, Esq. ; 87 b.
 John, of Wokyhole ; 639 a.
 Forestarius, Brian, witness ; 408 b.
 Forfar, Lord, Treasury Commissioner in Scotland (1708) ; 83 b.
 Forgeries of deeds, instances of ; 265 b.
 Forland, a division of land, note on ; 322 b.
 Forman :
 Archbishop Andrew, charters by ; 304 b, 306 a.
 Simon, the quack ; xiv., 226 a.
 — his examinations and confessions ; 228 a.
 — in Lambeth ; 228 a.
 Fornham St. Genovese ; 333a.
 Foromont, Mons. Claude ; 279 a.
 Forrest, Capt. Thos., letter of ; 290 b.
 Forrester ; 193 a.
 Forsett, Edward, Esq. ; 87 b.
 Forstall, Garrett, priest, petition of ; 543 b.
 Forster :
 Chief Justice, letter of ; 58 b.
 George, Oriental scholar and explorer, letters of ; 288 a, 289 b, passim.
 — resident at Nagpour, letters of ; 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a.
 H. J., letter of ; 293 b.
 H. P., letter of ; 291 a.
 Humphrey, of Harpedeu, will of ; 332 b.

Forster—cont.

- John, of London, will of; 332 b.
 Richard, lands held by; 520 b.
 — mayor of Dublin, letter of (1613); 400 a.
- Forstner, Baron de, letters of; 32 a.
- Fortescue:
 Earl, MSS. of; xxi.
 Hon. G. M., MSS. of; xxi.
 James, of the Irish House of Commons; 192 a, 195 b.
 Sir John; 282 b.
 — Chancellor of the Exchequer (1594); 376 b.
 — executor; 263 a.
 — letter of; 434 a, 434 b.
 — his son-in-law, Sir J. Poultney; 434 a, 434 b.
 Capt. Thos.; 594 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
- Forth, William, commissioner, co. Louth; 532 a.
- Forthir, lands of; 305 a.
- Fortnem, Lieut. John, letter of; 294 b.
- Poster:
 Sir Reginald; 163 b.
 Sir Robert, chief justice; 234 b.
 William, letter of; 291 a.
 — of Naas, petition of; 521 a.
- Foulden, rector of; 343 a.
- Foulke:
 Sir Francis, his company; 541 b, 544 a.
 — lands held by; 520 b.
 Lieut. Col.; 591 b.
- Foulness, lights at; 255 b, 261 b.
- Fountaine:
 James, surgeon-general in Ireland, petition of; 501 b, 502 a.
 — report on; 503 a.
- Fountains: dissolved monastery of; 162 a.
 abbey; xiii., 636 b.
- Fountain, alias Riley, Elizabeth, delinquent; 6 a.
- Fouquet, letters of; 28 a.
- Fourbour, Richard, and Wm. le; 367 a.
- Fourment, Claude, order touching; 280 a.
- Fovant; 332 a.
- Foway:
 St. Finbar's; 332 b.
 port of; 94 a.
- Fowke:
 John, prisoner; 516 a.
 Joseph, letters of; 290 a.
- Fowle:
 Thomas, of the Mint; 64 a.
 — letter of; 89 b.
- Fowler:
 John, medallist, petition of; 67 b.
 Thomas, mayor of Leicester; 427 a.
- Fowles:
 James, of Colinton; 309 b.
 Robert, his brother, grant to; ib.
- Fox, Foxe: agent; 615 b.
 Captain; 591 b.
 —, his execution; 612 b.
 Col., letter of; 295 a.
 — in Athlone; 605 b.
 Mr., a parson; 63 a.
 Arthur; 604 a, 614 b.
 Col. Arthur, in Leinster; 612 a.
 Lady Caroline; 225 b.
 Charles; 206 a.
 — his dispute and duel with Adam; 205 b.
 — little illness of; 221 b.
 Harry, his secret marriage; 571 b.
 — his eloquence on the patriot side; 569 a.
 Henry, letters of; xiii., 213 a, 219 b–221 b.
 — his influence over Lord Harrington; 179 a.
 — to be Secretary of State; 220 a, 221 h.
 — declines; ib.
 — gives way to Pitt; 221 a.
 — to succeed Mr. Pelham; 221 b, 224 b.
 — his treatment by the Duke of Newcastle; 222 a, 222 b.
 — at the Prince of Wales's levée; 222 b.
 — speeches of; 223 a, 223 b.
 — and the Chancellorship of the Exchequer; 223 b, 224 a.
 — paymaster of the forces; 224 a.
 — his audience with George II.; 225 a.
- John, of Kempsen; 5 a, 5 b.
 — his estate; 6 a.
 — senr., of Whitham in Selwood, will of; 335 a.
 Richard, Bishop of Winchester; 234 a.
 Ensign Robert; 592 a.
 Sir Stephen, paymaster-general of the land forces; viii., 129 a.
 — warrants by; 66 b, 68 b, 69 a.
- Foxall, Lieut. Thomas; 591 b.
- Foxhounds; 279 b.
- Foxon, Capt. Thomas, letter of; 35 b.
- Foyle, Lough; 397 b, 398 a, 398 b, 399 a.
- Framlingham, Suffolk; 277 b, 333 b, 334 a.

Frampton; 264 b, 335 a.

- Brigadier, his orders; 12 b.
 Capt. Wm.; 120 b.
 — answer of; 121 a.

France:

- the desolation of (1297); appeal to the Pope concerning; 345 b.
 Protestants in (c. 1600); 283 b. in 1609, observations on; 94 b. army of, in Flanders (1650), letters about; 217 b, 218 a. treaty with (c. 1655); 387 a.
 votes of Parliament touching goods manufactured in (1667); 102 b, 109 a.
 — of gold and silver in manufactures forbidden; 80 b.
 England's trade with (1674); 91 a. deplorable state of, letter to William III. showing; 560 b. prisoners of (1710, &c.), letters of; 37 b, 39 b. its relations with Ireland (1778); 197 a. projected invasion of Ireland by (1779); 200 b, 201 a, 202 a.
 her mischievous designs on Ireland; 204 b.
 "peace of 1763," papers touching; 287 a. suffering clergy in, subscription for (1792); 233 a.
 Court of, in mourning (1728); 62 a.
 — description of (1729); 62 b.
 — Pompadour at; 572 a.
 King of, mem. touching money transactions with Q. Elizabeth (1599); 282 b.
 — claims of, to St. Lucia (1751); 284 a.
 — and Queen of (1763); 286 a.
 Queen Regent of, letter to (1651); 218 a.

Francia, Simon, certificate touching; 143 a.

Francis, Frances:

- John, physician; 234 b.
 — foundation by; 264 b.
 — sheriff of Chester; 376 a, 376 b.
 — submission and prayer of; 374 b.
 Thomas, President of the College of Physicians; 227 a.

Franconville, M. de, letters of; 40 a.

Frank, Franck:

- F. Bacon, MSS. of; xxi.
 Henry, grocer, of London, will of; 335 a.
 John, of Tyrington, conveyance to; 423 a.
 — alderman and mayor of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Mathew, mayor of Pontefract; 274 a, 274 b, 275 a.
 Robert, recorder of Pontefract; 274 a, 274 b, 276 a.

Frankfort; 198 b, 218 b.

Franklin, Franklyu:

- Admiral; 223 a.
 Benj., plan of paper currency for Ireland by; 208 a.
 Dame Elionora; 103 b.
 Sir Richard, Act touching; 103 b.
 Samuel; 128 a.
 Thomas, petition of; 148 b.

Franks:

- Col., letter of; 37 a.
 Mr. A. W., his gift to the Antiquaries; 269 a.
 Richard, letter of; 35 b.
 Col. Richard, letter of; 38 a.

Fransham; 333 b.

Fraser, Frazer:

- Lord, of Stanywood and Muchells, letter of (1664); 299 b, 303 b.
 Sir Alexander, witness; 301 a.
 Col. C., letter of; 295 b.
 Crichton, letter of; 292 b.
 Dame Mary, Act for naturalizing; 106 a, 109 a.
 Paul, chanter of Brechin; 301 a.
 Major Simon, letter of; 289 a.
 Thomas, appointment of; 280 b.
 Mr. William, his report on Viscount Arbutnot's manuscripts; xvii., 297 a.
 — his report on Lord Glasgow's manuscripts; xvii., 304 a.
 — his report on the manuscripts of Miss Hamilton, of Barnes and Cochno; xvii., 308 b.
 — his report on Mr. A. C. Stuart's manuscripts; xvii., 310 b.

Frauenberg, M., letter of; 35 b.

Framcey, John, hospital refunded by; 341 h.

Framceys:

- John; 634 b.
 Simon le, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Francis, Mr., postmaster of Chester; 399 b.
 Fraxino, Galfridus de, witness; 330 a.
 Freake, Arthur; 507 a.
 Freboil, John, rector; 264 b.
 Freckleton, —; 379 b.
- Frederick:
 King of Prussia; 31 a.
 the Great, at Aix (1742); 571 b.
 Prince of Wales, and George II. (1751); 284 a, 284 b.
 — See Wales, Prince of.
 Alderman; 94 b.
- Free trade, opinion as to (1669); 134 a.
- Freeman:
 Captain; 592 b.
 Mr.; 41 b.
 —, of Leicester; 440 a.

Freeman—cont.

Capt. Charles, letter of; 293 a.
 George, petition of; 78 b.
 John, lines by; 24 b.
 — of the Middle Temple, indenture by; 418 a.
 Ralph, merchant, of London; 240 b.
 — Esq.; 72 a.
 Sir Ralph, of the Mint; 66 a.
 — warrant to; 86 a.
 — order to; 90 a.
 — case of (1670); 145 b.
 Thomas, merchant, of London; 110 a.
 William, President of the College of Physicians; 226 b.
 Freidmauntel, document dated at; 264 a.
 Freke, Col. Geo., letter of; 35 b.
 Fremont, Andree le; 367 b.
 French prophets, the; 46 a.
 French :
 —; 193 b.
 Dominick, petition of; 526 b
 — report on; ib.
 Edmond and John, of Bela; 466 b.
 Capt. Henry, petition of; 516 a.
 James, webster, of Leicester; 420 b.
 Capt. John, letters of; 294 a, 294 b.
 Nicholas, Bishop of Ferns; 582 b.
 — his "Bleeding Iphigenia;" 464 b.
 — letter to; 576 b.
 — letter to; 590 a.
 Sir Oliver; 535 b, 617 a.
 Richard, petitions of; 114 b.
 Capt. Richard, letters of; 289 b, 290 b, 292 b, 293 b.
 Robert, member of the Irish House of Commons, speech of; 175 a.
 Frende :
 John, of Harrow, will of; 332 b.
 — goldsmith, of London, will of; 334 b.
 Rich., of Prittlewell, will of; 332 b.
 Roger, of Willesden; 635 b.
 Frenyngham, John, of Loose, his feoffees; 329 a.
 Frere :
 G. E., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Richard; 629 b.
 Fresley, John, of Leicester; 420 a.
 Fresnoy, M. Lenglet du, letter of; 38 a.
 Frestwell, Lady, Lord Lex. and; 53 a.
 Friars, precise rules for conduct of; 346 a.
 Fribourg, letter dated at; 17 b.
 Friburg in Bregau; 35 b.
 — document dated at; 35 b.
 Fridayleyn, John, witness; 408 b.
 Friese, Lambin; 318 b.
 Friesland, State of; 32 a.
 Frinde, Mr., gold refiner; 65 b.
 Frisby; 334 b.
 Frise, Comte, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 Frobisher, Peter :
 heir of Sir Martin, petition of; 238 b.
 — report on; 238 b.
 Frodesham :
 John de; 367 b.
 Wm., of Elton; 368 b.
 Frollesworth; 413 a.
 Fromant, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Frontera, Marquis de; 25 b.
 Froste, John, clerk; 420 b.
 Frowde, Froud :
 Ashburnham, comptroller; 72 b.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Philip, secretary of Duke of York (1660); 279 a.
 Fruer, Richard, letter of; 400 a.
 Frunbaldus, filius Hachenild; 341 a.
 Frushard, James, letter of; 292 b.
 Fry :
 Anne, widow, petitions, &c. of; 146 b.
 Mountjoy, petitions, &c. of; 146 b.
 Fryer, Will., of Chipping Wycombe, will of; 332 b.
 Fryston, Water or Ferry, co. York; 276 a.
 Fryth, Charles, petition of; 79 b.
 Friend, Lieut.-Col. de, letter of; 289 a.
 Fuentes, Count (1600); 282 b.
 Fulham :
 — document dated at; 633 b.
 — House, document dated at; 382 a.
 Fullartou, Lieut.-Col. or Col. J., letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 293 b, 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.
 Fullartoun, John, scribe; 301 a.
 Fuller :
 Buch v., writ of error; 115 a.
 Dr., and Kilskeire rectory; 539 a.
 Robert, priest of Houghton, will of; 333 b.
 Thomas, will of; 262 a.
 Fulsbigh, Thome de; 367 a.
 Fulsham, Robert, clerk of the Pallant in Chichester, will of; 334 b.
 Fulton, M., letter of; 294 a.
 Fullwood, Rich., of Tamworth, will of; 334 b.

Furby, Benjamin, letter of; 40 b.
 Furly, J., letter of; 40 a.
 Farlye, E. G., letter of; 294 a.
 Furnes : canal of; 286 b.
 town of; 36 b.
 magistrates of, letter of; 31 t.
 Furnese, Sir Henry, letters of; 31 b 38 a.
 Furness, Sir William, letter of; 37 .
 Furneys :
 Ralph, of Leicester; 423 a.
 — his daughter Margaret, conveyance by; ib.
 Furrarium, tax of; 319 a.
 Furrsmen, Major-General; 293 a.
 Furrackabad; 288 b, 289 b, 290 a.
 Fusby, W.; 4 b.
 Futehe, John, of Fransham, will of; 333 b.
 Futtighur, mutinous movement at (1796); 296 a.
 Fyana, Fyena :
 skirmish 604 b.
 defence and taking of; 613 t Fyena : defence of; 613 b.
 taking of; ib.
 Fyndowrie; 302 b.
 Fynes :
 James, demise to; 6 a.
 John, justice; 331 b.
 Fyshe, Mr., letters of; 54 a.
 Fyvie, Lord of, President of Sessions; 434 b.

G.

Gable-pence at Leicester, remission of; 405 b.
 Gadalliere, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Gaddesbro :
 Geoffrey and Cecily; 408 a.
 Reginald, conveyance to; ib.
 Gaddesby :
 Adam de; 633 b.
 John, of Leicester, grant by; 415 b.
 Gaetani, Benedict, Boniface VIII.; 346 a.
 Gaffney, John, of Longwood; 521 b.
 Gage :
 Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 Geo., king's messenger; 214 b.
 Sir John; 162 b.
 Will., clerk, of Woolpit, will of; 333 b.
 Gagge, John, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Gahagan, Terence, letter of; 294 b.
 Gallot, M., letter of; 38 a.
 Gainsborough; 429 b.
 Gairdner, Robert, letter of; 291 a.
 Gaiteh, John, petition of his wife Ruth; 516 a.
 Gale :
 Alexander, petition of his relict Elizabeth; 534 a.
 R., letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 293 b.
 Galleia, project for a descent in (1709); 26 b.
 Galigai, an Italian; 19 a.
 Gall, Cape de; 242 b.
 Gallagher, James, lieutenant, petition of; 522 a.
 Gallas, Count, letters of; 32 b, 47 b.
 Gallen, in King's County, the Welshmen in; 585 b.
 Galliard, Edmond, ensigu; 551 a.
 Gallieia, city of the Groyne, in; 334 b.
 Gallions; 236 a, 253 b.
 Gallaway, Lord; 495 b.
 Galls, import of; 246 b.
 Galmoy :
 Lord of (1645), E. Butler; 605 a.
 Lord, his lands in Connaught and Clare; 549 b.
 Viscount (1663); 542 b.
 — (1689), Piers Butler; 493 b. barony of; 519 b.
 —, his house; 617 a.
 Galton (Gatton?), Mr. Adam, member for; 205 b.
 Galway; 463 b, 536 a, 562 a, 608 b.
 Pole money; 511 b. surrender of; 616 a, 617 a.
 fort; 604 b.
 — capture of; 564 a.
 garrison; 542 a.
 wine and strong water licenses in; 511 a. tenement in; 543 a.
 the penalties against Papists in, petitions arising from; 529 b.
 grand council in; 616 a. capitulation of, articles of; 58 a.
 specification of lands in; 520 b.
 James II.'s lands in; 497 b, 498 a, 498 b.
 licenses to trade in; 501 b, 503 b, 510 a, 511 b, 524 b, 529 b, 530 a, 540 a, 548 a, 550 a, 552 a.

- Galway, Galloway, Earl of :
 letters of; 1 a, 31 a.
 letters of (1705) 31 b.
 (1706); 17 a.
 letters of (1706); 25 a, 32 a.
 at Madrid; 18 a. commander in Spain; 27 a.
 his loss of Madrid; 60 a. letters of (1706-8); 25 a, 35 b, 44 a, 47 b, 58 a.
 letter to (1708); 33 a.
 letter of (1709); 36 b.
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
 letters of (1711); 40 a.
 memorial to; 50 b.
 letters of; 54 a.
- Gamble :
 his preferment; 192 b.
 Geo., under-sheriff; 5 a, 5 b, 6 a.
 Will.; 194 a, 194 b, 195 a.
- Gambledon, Mr.; 141 a.
- Gamel, William, inquisition by; 406 a.
- Gamuul, Gamull :
 Capt.; 364 b.
 Colonel, his regiment; 384 a.
 Edward; letter of; 399 a.
 Francis; 365 b.
 Thos., recorder of Chester (1610), letter to; 399 a.
 — petition to; 399 b.
- Ganwell, William, alderman of Chester, commission to; 361 b.
- Gan, Simon, of West Stow, will of; 335 a.
- Gand. See Ghent.
- Ganevill, Edmund de, college founded by; 342 a.
- Gangeroade, concealed lands of; 531 a.
- Gant, Wm.; 156 b.
 deposition of; 158 a.
- Gantford, Will., of Yalding, will of; 334 b.
- Gape, Mr., apothecary; 279 b.
- Gardener, Richard, letter of; xv., 397 b.
- Gardeyn, Richard; 367 b.
- Gardner :
 Mr.; 196 a, 197 b.
 Agnes, of Romney, will of; 340 a.
 Dr. Bernard, of All Souls'; 50 b.
 J. P., letter of; 290 b.
 Sir Onslow; 94 b.
 Robt. of Leyham, will of; 334 a.
 Mr. S. R., and the Digby MSS.; 213 a.
 — his history of the Spanish marriage; ib.
 Sam., petition of; 103 b.
- Gardner :
 Mr., curate of Barton; 4 a.
 G., letter of; 290 a.
 Ensign James; 593 b.
 John, affidavit of; 126 a.
 Y., letter of; 289 b.
- Gare, Alured de, gift by; 329 b.
- Garford, church of; 271 a.
- Gargrafe, John, discharged soldier; 530 a.
- Gargrave, Sir Thomas, commissioner; 272 b.
- Garkeith, Dr. John, of Deptford; 260 a.
- Garland :
 Mr., payment to; 526 a.
 — member of Parliament; 248 b.
- Garland, the ship; 239 a.
- Garnet, John, Bishop of Clogher; 194 b.
- Garnon :
 Patrick, petition of; 517 a.
 Roger, of Garnon-town; ib.
- Garnonstown, co. Louth; 517 a.
- Garrard, Richard, of Narford, will of; 333 b.
- Garrick; 192 b.
- Garrod, Mr., of Wells Almshouse; 638 b.
- Garstin :
 James, trooper; 523 b.
 Capt. John, letter of; 290 b.
- Garter : order of the, report on; 24 b.
 King of Arms, roll of peers by (1666-1667); 106 b, 113 b.
 — his roll of peers of England (1670); 139 a.
- Garth :
 Sir James, paper on medals by; 86 b.
 Dr. Samuel; 226 b, 231 a.
 — letters of; 54 a.
 — admitted a fellow of the College of Physicians; 231 a.
 — lecture by; ib.
 — appointed orator; 231 b.
 — censor; ib.
 — his prologue to Tamerlane; x., 16 a.
 Sir Samuel, lines to; 24 b.
- Garvab, Garvoch :
 church of; 300 b.
 Hill of; 297 a.
 hill, St. James' Kirk; 297 b.
- Gaskyn, John, of Charminster, will of; 335 a.
- Gassande, M., letter of; 35 b.
- Gataker, Thomas, parson of Redriffe, captive in Barbary 242 a.
- Gates :
 Major-General, letter of; 289 a.
 Capt. Daniel, of the Trinity House; 250 a.
- Gaubert, Gervase, gift to; 264 a.
- Gauden, Sir Dennis; 131 b, 148 b.
 — letter of; 116 a.
 — examination of; 132 a.
 — petition of; 119 a.
- Gaudy, rents of; 5 a.
- Gaunt, John of :
 indenture by; 412 a.
 lease by; 412 b.
 writ of; ib.
 license by; 413 b.
- Gautier, John, master of Ewelme Almshouse; 627 b.
- Gavel Act, the; 448 a, 449 b.
- Gavelkind tenants; 319 a.
- Gaveston, Tiers :
 excommunication of; 352 b.
 his surrender of Scarborough Castle; 354 a.
- Gavisnahan lands; 505 a.
- Gawly :
 —, killed; 617 b.
 Captain; 608 a.
 Colonel; 617 b.
 Christopher; 604 a.
 Thibott; 605 b, 616 a.
- Gaynesford, Margaret, of Carshalton, will of; 335 b.
- Gaynor, Michael; 612 b.
- Gaysway, Cristiana, of Nayland, will of; 332 b.
- Gaywood, R., engraver; 22 b.
- Geale, —, caudate for Dublin; 194 b.
- Geary, Wm., his estate; 4 b.
- Geashill Castle; 217 h.
- Gedeath, M. de, letter of; 35 b.
- Geding, lands in; 315 b.
- Gee :
 Henry, mayor of Chester (temp. Henry VIII.); 362 b.
 Thos., mayor of Chester (1540); 369 b.
- Geere, Mr.; 238 a, 240 a.
 instructions to; 240 a.
- Geford, Sir Thomas, his company; 529 b.
- Geils, Lieut.-Col., letter of; 294 b.
- Gelagh, Philip, prisoner; 543 b.
- Geld, Danegeld and; 319 a.
- Geldernalsen, M., letters of; 31 b, 32 b, 37 a, 40 a.
- Gell :
 F., letter of; 392 a.
 Mr.; 392 a.
- Gelston, Paul, warrant touching; 280 a.
- Genes, Capitaine; 564 a.
- Geneva, a history of; 63 b.
- Genoa; 20 a, 20 b, 21 b, 91 b, 247 b, 532 a.
 letters dated at; 37 a, 47 b.
 state of; 244 b, 245 b.
 consuls at; 244 b, 245 b, 256 b.
- Gent, Thomas, his History of Pontefract; 275 a.
- Geoghegan :
 Major; 610 a.
 — killed; 611 b.
 Antony, prior of Conallmore; 613 b, 614 b, 616 b.
 — letter to; 613 b.
 — vicar-general of Meath; 615 b.
 — bishop of Clonmacnoise; 618 a.
 Capt. Art., killed; 605 a.
 Capt. Bernaby; 603 a, 603 b.
 Lieut.-Col. Bernaby, killed; 605 a.
 Charles; 606 a.
 — his education; 611 b.
 Major Charles; 611 a.
 Conly, of Donore, his son Rosse; 535 b.
 Edward; 610 a.
 Fr. James; 609 a.
 James McNeill, killed; 613 b.
 Paul, letter of; 610 b.
 Richard; 607 b.
 Capt. Richard; 611 a.
 Rosse, bishop of Kildare; 609 b.
 Capt. Thos., killed; 611 a, 617 b.
- George I. :
 address on his accession; 260 b.
 letters of; 15 b, 57 a.
 letters to; 57 a.
 warrants by; 14 b, 78 b. review in Hyde Park by; 49 a. at Cambridge; 232 a.
 and the Prince of Wales, letters, &c. relating to quarrel between; 57 a.
- George II. :
 address on his accession; 232 a.
 address to, after the Pretender's defeat; 427 b. address of Irish Catholics to; 451 a. events of his reign, letters referring to; 567 a.

George II.—cont.

his relations with the Duke of Newcastle, Pitt, and Fox ; 220 a, et seq.
the Leicester House influence and ; 223 b, 224 a.
his audience with H. Fox ; 225 a. his Hanoverian dominions ; 225 b. and the Prince of Wales (1751) ; 284 a. and the Prince of Wales, letters, &c. relating to quarrel between ; 57 a.

George III. :

address on his accession ; 232 b. other addresses to ; 233 a.
letters of ; 1 b, 57 b.
letters to ; 57 b.
his picture delivered to Mr. de Bussy ; 285 b.

George IV., v. George Harrison, minutes of trial (1827) ;
369 b.

George :

Prince of Denmark ; 24 b.
— letter to ; 41 a.
— Lord High Admiral of England, warrant of ; 393 b.
Prince [of Wales, 1751] ; 285 a.
Capt. ; 259 a.
Richard ; 229 b.

Georgetown, inhabitants of, address of ; 289 a.

Gerald :

Hugh, precentor of Perigord, nuntius ; 352 b.
Robert, of Fomham St. Genovese, will of ; 333 a.

Geram, Thomas, inquisition by ; 406 a.

Gerard :

Lord, of Brandon, Charles (1667) ; 115 a.
— privilege case (1667) ; ix., 111 b.
— (1670) ; 389 b.
— letter to ; ib.
— his lodgings at Whitehall ; ib.
— Digby, petition of (1670) ; 151 b.
—, readings on statutes by ; 584 b.
Dame Jane, relict of Chas. Lord Gerard, petition of ;
151 b.
Samuel, of Chester ; 361 b.
Thomas, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to ; 359 b.
See Gerrard.

Gerard's Bromley, the papists at ; 49 b.

Geray, Richard and William ; 3 a.

Gerin, Robert, of Leicester, conveyance to ; 410 b.

Gerlach, Capt., letter to ; 289 a.

Gerlawe, John ; 282 a.

Gerlond, John ; 281 b.

Germaine :

Lord George, letters of ; 195 b, 201 a.

— letter to (1781) ; 289 a.

German Protestants in Chester, relief of ; 395 b.

Germany ; 147 b.

coinage, &c. of ; 73 a.

tin sold in ; 92 b.

the Protestants from (1709) ; 47 a.

German, James, of Athy, petition of ; 538 a.

Gerner, Dr. John ; 549 a.

Gernum, William, witness ; 407 b.

Gernun, William, witness ; 1 b.

Gerond, William, son of, witness ; 270 b.

Gerrard :

Alice, wife of Thomas, of Heynford, will of ; 333 b.

Charles, precept to ; 403 a.

Sir Francis ; 140 b.

— answer of ; ib.

— case of ; ib.

Sir Gilbert ; ib.

— commissioner ; 275 a.

or Girard, James, seal engraver ; 91 a.

Nathaniel, commission to ; 209 a.

Wm. ; 396 a.

— examination by ; 396 b.

— writ to ; 374 a.

See Gerard.

Gerrey, W., his estate ; 6 b.

Gersdorff :

Baron, letter of ; 39 b.

M., letters of ; 31 b.

Gervais, Mr., letter of ; 57 a.

Gervis, Col. Richard, letter of ; 10 b.

Gerye, George, of Little Stawton or Stoughton ; 3 a.

Geryn, Richard, of Leicester ; 421 a.

Getyn, John, of Northampton, will of ; 332 b.

Guiff, Wm., sheriff of co. Flint, letter of ; 377 b.

Geynes :

John, physician ; 227 a.

— death of ; ib.

Geynwill, Geoffrey de ; 347 b.

Geyssell, siege ; 603 a.

Ghazepoor, mausoleum of Lord Cornwallis, drawing of ; 296 b.

Ghent or Gand ; 12 b, 564 b.

letter dated at ; 558 a.

bond by ; 30 b.

hospital at ; 60 a.

redaction of ; 33 b.

taking of ; 35 b.

magistrates of, letters of ; 35 b, 37 a, 37 b.

Ghent or Gand—cont.

commanders of, letter of ; 40 a.

grand bailiff of (1711), letters of ; 40 a.

François Comte de, letters of ; 35 b, 37 a, 38 b.

Gherardini, Philippo ; 45 b.

Ghest, Mr., marshal ; 530 b.

Glisingien, abbess of, letter of ; 37 a.

Gibb :

Major, his regiment ; 10 a.

Lieut. Artbur ; 593 a.

Major Henry, his regiment ; 9 b.

Gibbon :

Mr., of Christ's Hospital ; 256 a.

Lieut. Fran. ; 594 a.

Colonel Robert, governor of Jersey ; 94 b.

Gibbons :

Patrick and Joan, petition of ; 511 b.

Eosign Richard ; 595 a.

Richard, petition of ; 114 b.

Gibbs, Gibbes :

Mr., preacher of Leicester ; 429 a.

Lieut.-Col. Alexander, letter of ; 289 a.

Richard, soldier ; 584 b.

Robert, trooper, petition of ; 505 a.

Sir Vicary, opinions by ; 233 b.

Major Zach., letter of ; 289 a.

Gibraltar ; 22 a, 194 a.

document dated from ; 295 a.

straits of ; 236 b, 239 b.

infectious distemper at ; 233 a.

the ship ; 226 a.

Gibson :

Mr. John, his books ; 13 b.

John, letter of ; 256 b.

Sir John, letter of ; 37 a.

R., clerk of the Trinity House ; 256 a.

— letter of ; ib.

— account by ; 256 b.

Major Seafoule, his company ; 530 a.

Gibstownepalmcr, co. Louth, lands of ; 532 a.

Giding, co. Huntingdon ; 50 a.

Giffau ; 82 a.

Gifford :

Dr., evidence by ; 229 b.

Mr. ; 8 b.

— minister of St. Dunstau's ; 251 b.

Ann, wife of Robert ; 2 b.

Dorothy ; 117 a.

John ; 125 b.

Sir John, captain ; 597 a.

Robert, minister of Chellington ; 2 b, 8 a.

— his petition ; 2 b.

Roger, president of the College of Physicians ; 227 b.

Sir Thomas, his company ; 538 a, 542 a.

Giggyswyke, Peter, of Blackmore, will of ; 335 a.

Giglis, Süvester, Bishop of Worcester ; 263 a.

Gigur, John, warden of Tattershall, letter of ; 264 b.

Gika, Alexander, Comte, letter of ; 293 b.

Gilbert :

—, of Alborne, Wilts ; 162 b.

A. L., letter of ; 289 b.

Alice, of Fovant, will of ; 332 a.

Charles, petition of ; 118 a.

Sir George, of Dublin ; 507 a.

— petition of ; 517 a.

Mr. John T., his report on Lord Emly's manuscripts ; xviii.,

174 b.

— the manuscripts of the O'Connor Don ; xviii., 441 b.

— Lord Talbot de Malahide ; xviii., 493 a.

— the Marquis of Ormonde ; xviii., 499 b.

— Trinity Coll., Dublin, xix., xxiii., 572 a.

John, patent to ; 244 a.

— petition against ; 244 b.

— Richard, petition of ; 118 a.

Thomas, prisoner ; 550 b.

William, petition of ; 118 a.

Sir William, his troop ; 594 a.

Lieut. William ; 554 a.

Gilby :

Anthony, commissioner ; 275 a.

Richard ; 280 a.

Gileagh, lands of ; 525 b.

Gilchrist, John, letters of ; 290 a, 295 b.

Gildeslaud, lord of ; 264 b.

Gildon, Mr., a poet ; 51 b.

Giles, Bagnell c. ; 150 b.

Gill :

— of Liverpool ; 376 b.

Wm., letter of ; 37 a.

Gillam, Jasper, keeper of the Pentice, Chester, petition of ; 399 a.

Gille of Helbric ; 376 b.

Gillcranky, pass of ; 314 b.

Gillman :

Lieut., letter of ; 294 b.

St. Leger, letters of ; 289 b, 295 b.

Gillot, Richard, mayor of Leicester ; 423 a.

Gillum, Lieut. Thomas, letters of ; 293 b, 294 a.

Gilquhammarie, Helen ; 308 b, 309 a.

Gimber, William, of Tempsford; 262 b.
 Ginkel, General; 563 a, 564 a, 565 a.
 Ginkell, Baron de, commander in Ireland; 58 a.
 Girard or Gerrard, James, seal engraver; 91 a.
 Girtford, Sandy and, parsonage of; 4 a.
 Glacister, Murthacus de, grant to; 305 a.
 Gladsmuir, officers captured at; 313 b.
 Gladstones, Alexander, minister of Kinneff; 303 b.
 Gladwin :
 Charles, letter of; 295 b.
 Francis, letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 292 b.
 Glamorgan :
 county, ship money assessment; 383 a.
 Lord, afterwards Marquis of Worcester, letters of; 576 b, 604 a.
 his commission; 604 b. or Clannmorgan, peace concluded with, &c.; 605 a.
 his wife; 605 a.
 Glanville or Glanvill, Ranulph de, Chief Justice; 587 b.
 Glanmalura; 610 b.
 Glauorought, barony of; 533 b.
 Glanville, Mr., letter of; 38 a.
 Glascearge, Glascarrieke; 600 b.
 Glasceur or Glasceour :
 Hugh, Burgess of Parliament for Chester city (1610); 399 a.
 — letter to; ib.
 Glaseor, William; 397 a.
 — writ to; 374 a.
 Glasgow; 394 b.
 document dated at; 309 a.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 University, MSS. of; ib.
 tumult at; 48 b. surgeons of; 231 a.
 Earl of, his manuscripts, Mr. Fraser's report on; xvii., xxi., 304 a.
 Bishop of (1388), Matthew, witness; 307 a.
 — (1393), Matthew, witness; 305 b.
 Archdeacon of; 307 a.
 Glasier :
 Mr.; 382 a.
 Wm.; 374 a.
 Glassenbury, Kent; 569 a, note.
 Glaslope, William, of Nottingham; 417 a.
 Glastonbury; 332 a, 335 b, 638 b.
 town of, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Archdeacon of; 632 b.
 prior of, seals of; 639 a.
 Glaswed, document dated from; 392 b.
 Gledhill, Col., letter of; 38 b.
 Glegg, Captain Robert; 595 b.
 Glegynnoch; 307 a, 307 b.
 Glesnalmond, Trinity College, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Glenbervie; 297 b, 301 a.
 Dramlithie chapel in; 298 a.
 Glencairu, Earl of (1708), letter of; 35 b.
 Glendovane in Strathern; 307 b.
 Glengarry; 12 b.
 Glenham; 333 b.
 Glenham, Sir Tho., governor of Oxford; 212 b.
 Glenorchy, Lord (1745); 571 a.
 Glenshields in Kintail, battle at; 22 a.
 Glin Castle, co. Longford; 521 a.
 Gloss, John; 279 b.
 Gloucester :
 letter dated at; 11 b.
 governor of; 11 b.
 Robert de, canon of St. Ethelbert's, Hereford; 635 b.
 county; 210 a.
 — deeds relating to; 262 b.
 — gaol; 151 b.
 Virginia, U. S., papers on capitulation of; 296 b.
 Gloucester, Earl of : his honour of Tonbridge (1290); 351 a.
 (1313); 352 a.
 (1360), his service as tenant of Tunbridge Manor; 338 b.
 Gloucester, Duke of :
 Humphrey; 100 b.
 (1413), Humphrey; 265 a.
 — warrant of; 263 b.
 Richard (13 Edw. IV.); 415 b. in Flanders (temp. Commonwealth); 442 a, 501 b, 517 a, 524 a.
 his death (1700); 24 b.
 Gloucer, John le; 367 a.
 Glover :
 Mr., letters of; 54 a.
 Nicholas and Eliz., of Leicester; 414 a.
 Gloves :
 the, privilege of; 317 b, 318 b.
 from France or Spain, dialogue on; 93 b.
 Glubb, James, trooper; 538 a.
 Gluvias, Cornwall; 142 b.
 Glyn, Glynn :
 Mr. Recorder; 384 b.
 Capt., letter to; 386 a.
 Thomas, chaplain, grant to; 415 b.

Goddard, John, letter of; 63 a.
 Goddefelowe, Thos.; 367 b.
 Godfrey :
 Mr.; 53 a.
 Mrs., grant to; 498 a.
 Brigadier, letter of; 40 a.
 Sir Edmund Bury, "sudden death of"; 390 b.
 — murder of; 391 a.
 William, mayor of Southampton (1709), letter of; 395 b.
 Godmersham :
 manor of; 328 a, 341 b.
 market and fair at; 328 a.
 church of; 328 a, 343 b.
 lands in; 319 a.
 Godolphin :
 governor of Scilly; 257 a.
 Lord Treasurer, letters of and to; x., 1 a, 15 a, 18 a, 26 a, 31 b, 36 b, 40 a, 41 b, 43 a, 43 b, 44 a, 54 a, 68 b, 75 a, 79 a, 81 a, 82 a, 84 a, 91 b, 92 a, 393 a.
 petitions, &c. to; 68 a, 81 a, 82 b, 92 b.
 warrants by (1696); 66 b, 81 a, 83 a, 84 a.
 Lord, Marlborough and; 38 b.
 — (1691), and Princess Anne; 562 b.
 Countess, letters of; 51 b.
 Wm., Duke of Marlborough's grandson, letter of (1710); 38 a.
 Godwin, his catalogue of bishops; 581 a.
 Godwyne, William, of Wells; 639 b.
 Godwyk, lands, &c. in; 423 a.
 Goelsen, Count of, Peter; 12 a.
 Goer, honour of; 349 b.
 Goerce; 554 b.
 Goertz, Baron, letter of; 37 a.
 Goes :
 Count de, letters of; 31 b, 32 a, 32 b, 40 a.
 P. de, letter of; 16 b.
 Gofort, Edward, trumpeter; 529 a, 543 b, 546 b.
 Goghegan, Bishop; 30 a.
 Goick, Baron de, letter of; 38 b.
 Golborne :
 Robert; 375 a.
 Cornet Thomas; 596 a.
 Gold :
 the Healing, papers on; 1 a, 15 a, 52 a.
 and silver coins, &c., papers concerning; 60 b, et seq.
 mines in Scotland; 84 b.
 Gold, Sir Thomas, merchant; 256 b.
 Golde, Mr.; 134 b.
 Golden Phoenix, the (prize ship); 129 a.
 Goldsmith, Goldesmyth :
 Alicia le, of Leicester; 413 b.
 Oliver, his "Retaliation"; 288 b.
 — his "Retaliation"; 489 b, note.
 — his "Deserted Village"; 442 b.
 Wm. de le, of Chester; 367 a.
 Goldstone, Thomas, prior of Canterbury; 331 a, 331 b, 334 b.
 Golize, letter dated at; 25 a.
 Gollisbon, Robert, of Tewkesbury, will of; 334 b.
 Goltstein, Captain; 561 b.
 Gomes, B., letter of; 289 b.
 Good :
 Charles; 120 b, 121 a.
 — act touching; 121 a.
 — answer of; 121 a.
 — petition of; 121 a.
 Lettice, 121 a.
 — act touching; ib.
 Goodall, Dr. Charles :
 gift by; 230 b.
 pictures given by; 231 b.
 Gooday, John, of Sudbury, will of; 334 b.
 Goodhewe, alias Hoo, Joan, of Canterbury, will of; 340 a.
 Goodladd, John, the Trinity House slandered by; 243 b.
 Goodman :
 Mr., lieutenant of the forest of Whittlewod; 114 b.
 Mr. Christopher, the preacher; 396 b.
 Goodnestone, Kent; 327 b.
 Goodrick, Goodrich :
 Sir Francis, Solicitor-General to James Duke of York, commission, &c. to; 280 b.
 — commissioner; 275 a.
 Sir John, commissioner; 275 a.
 Goodridge, of Christ's Hospital; 256 b.
 Goodwin, Goodwyn :
 v. Isted, writ of error; 109 a.
 Esquire; 517 a, 518 b.
 Francis, knt.; suit by; 61 a.
 — Bishop of Hereford; 587 b.
 John, his Geometry; 584 b.
 Miles, soldier; 545 b.
 Thomas; 121 b.
 — mayor of Derby (1698), letter of; 392 b.
 Goodwin Sands; 245 b.
 Goodwood; 63 a, 571 b.
 letter dated at; 63 a.
 Goodyere, Richard, of Worcester; 638 b.
 Gould, William, of Leicester, sherman; 422 a.

- Goray Gut, Holland; 243 a.
 Gorder, Capt. Thomas, of the Leopard; 46 a.
 Gordon :
 Duke of (1786), letter of; 289 a.
 Capt., letter of; 38 a.
 Sir F., letter of; 294 b.
 H. Mackay, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Hon. Lockhart, Judge Advocate General, letters of; 288 a,
 289 b, 290 a.
 Thomas, pamphleteer, letters of; 311 a, 314 b, 315 a.
 W. Cosmo, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Sir Wm., letter of; 35 b.
 Castle; 312 a.
 Gore, Middlesex, hundred, 164 a.
 (Bishop?) of Limerick; 193 a.
 Captain; 593 b.
 Col., letter of; 38 b.
 ensign, case of; 17 b.
 Mr.; 113 b.
 — to be Chief Baron; 58 b.
 Sir Arthur, his company; 540 b.
 — candidate for Speakership of Irish House of Commons; 180 b.
 — made Earl of Arran; ib., note.
 George, letters of; 58 b.
 J. R. Ormsby, Esq., M.P., MSS. of; xxi.
 Major John, letter of; 294 b.
 Gorend; 244 b.
 Gorge, Col., his company; 520 a.
 Gorges :
 General; 59 a.
 Dr. Robert, order touching; 279 b.
 Thos., commission to; 279 b.
 Gorgue, camp at, letters dated at; 217 b.
 Goring :
 Lord, George, commission to; 2 b.
 H., letter of; 38 b.
 Gorlingen, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Gorman, alias MacCon, Keelachar; 586 a.
 Gormanston, Viscount :
 MSS. of; xxi.
 (1640), letter to; 217 b.
 Lord; 581 b.
 Gormonston; 496 b.
 Gorney, John, of Wrington, will of; 334 b.
 Gorsuch, Mary, 139 b, 140 a.
 Gortgabbane, concealed lands of; 531 a.
 Gorturibane lands; 503 a.
 Gortnepoury lands; 505 a.
 Gortz, baron de; 553 b.
 Gosebriand, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Gosfield, letters dated at; 199 a, 200 a.
 Gosford, Lord, Arch. Acheson; 193 a, note.
 Gosling, Robert, letter of; 289 b.
 Gosnour, John, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 Gossena, Comte de, letters of; 37 a, 40 a.
 Gote, M. Van der, letters of; 32 a.
 Gottor, co. Devon; 637 a.
 Goodhurst, Apedale in; 338 a.
 Gondrick Castle; 212 b.
 Goulaine, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Gould :
 Col., letter of; 289 a.
 Sir N., letter of; 57 a.
 Goulding :
 alias Beale, Barbara, of Dublin; 548 b.
 Alice and Richard, of Dublin; 548 b.
 Richard, of Kinsaly; 506 a.
 Gouldinore Gutt; 243 b.
 Gounfrey, Thomas, mayor of Leicester; 421 a.
 Gowan :
 Capt., letter of; 289 b.
 — G., letter of; 290 a.
 Gower :
 Earl, John (1746); 566 b.
 — (1734); 225 a.
 — (1757); 224 a.
 — and the Lord Lieutenantcy of Ireland (1769); 191 a.
 — his office of Lord Chamberlain; ib.
 — (1778); 199 a.
 — at Trentham; 200 a.
 Sir Thomas, commissioner; 275 a.
 Isort, son-in-law of Lord Bath; 560 b.
 Lieut. Thomas; 593 b.
 Gra, Dame Thomasina and Sir John; 264 b.
 Grace :
 the ship; 245 a.
 Col.; 617 b.
 — his regiment; 28 a.
 James, petition of; 545 b.
 John, of Ramridge; 631 a.
 Major Richard; 613 a.
 Col. Richard, royalist in Ireland; 580 b, 615 a, 616 a,
 617 a, 618 a.
 Grady, Colonel; 615 b.
 Graffe Erice, of Riga, the ship; 109 b.
 Grafton, co. Northampton, manor; 625 a.
 Grafton :
 Duke of, letter to (1682); 258 a.
 — his regiment (1682); 67 b.
 — (1740); 566 a.
 — (1756); 221 a.
 — letter of (1764); 287 b.
 — letter of (1789); 293 b.
 Duchess of, her apartment at Whitehall (1691); 563 a.
 Graham, Graham :
 document dated at; 347 b.
 Mr.; 53 b.
 — letter to; 257 b.
 Col., letter of; 40 a.
 Lady Anne; 212 b.
 Arthur, letters of; 582 a.
 Major Colin, letter of; 288 b.
 F., letter of; 38 b.
 Sir Frederick U., Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Col. J., letter of; 37 a.
 John; 291 a.
 — petition of; 504 b.
 Capt. M., letter of; 35 b.
 Mary, petition of; 503 a.
 Lieut. Peter; 597 a.
 Sir Reginald, Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Robert, of Fintry; 298 b.
 — of Morphee; 301 a.
 Thomas, letters of; 295 a, 295 b.
 — lieutenant; 597 a.
 Ensign Wm.; 592 a.
 — letter of; 290 b.
 Mr. S., letter of; 35 b.
 Graige, the, Queen's co.; 545 b.
 Graignes, Isle of, Kent; 239 b.
 Gram, Cornet Hans; 596 b.
 Gramé, David of, witness; 365 a.
 Grammar schools, decrees concerning; 271 b.
 Grammont, Gramont :
 Count, letters of (1705); 31 b.
 — memoirs of; 493 a.
 — anecdote of his marriage; ib.
 Grana, Marquis de (1684); 31 a.
 Granard, Earl of, MSS. of; xxi.
 Granary, President de; 21 a.
 Granby :
 Lord, speech of (1756); 222 b.
 — (1754); 225 a.
 — (1757); 224 a.
 Grand :
 G., letters of; 290 a, 291 a.
 Lewis, letter of; 291 a.
 Grandbreucq, Comte de, letter of; 35 b.
 Grandison :
 Lord, his troop in Ireland (1663); 507 a.
 — petition of; 501 a.
 — his troop; 543 b.
 — list of his troop (1648); 596 b.
 — George, petition of (1663); 510 b.
 "Grandi Sono" (Grandison), Otto de; 357 b.
 Granford, John, trooper, petition of; 505 a.
 Grange :
 the, co. Dublin; 506 a.
 lands of; 525 b.
 Henry; 393 b.
 Granger :
 James, minister of Kinneff; 299 b, 303 b.
 Lieut. Wm.; 592 b.
 Granis in barony of Renfrew; 309 b.
 Gransell, priory of; 352 a.
 Grant :
 his regiment; 33 b.
 General, letter of; 295 a.
 A., letter of; 295 b.
 Col. Alexr., letter of; 35 b.
 Charles, letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b.
 Cornet James; 596 a.
 James, resident at Benares, letters of; 288 a, 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 293 b, 295 b, passim.
 — Political Survey of the Northern Circars, by (1784);
 296 b.
 Richard, letter of; 292 b.
 Grantham; 8 a, 431 a.
 rendezvous at; 9 b.
 Earl of (1727); 232 a.
 — letter of (1772); 193 a.
 William, trooper; 541 b.
 Granville :
 Mr., letter of; 39 b.
 Lord (c. 1754); 220 b.
 — (1756); 221 a.
 — (1757); 224 a.
 Grattan, Grattan :
 Major, letter of; 294 b.
 J., letter of; 290 b.
 Major John, letter of; 289 b.
 Assistant-General John, letter of; 291 a.
 Graulla, Eustace de; 370 a.
 Graunt, Daniel le; 347 a.

Grauntes, the, of Norbrooke, conspirators; 434 a.
 Gravedo, or corysa, au epidemic; 227 a.
 Graves:
 Christopher; 383 a.
 Dame Mary, petition of; 252 a.
 Gravesend; 98 a, 99 b, 246 a, 249 b.
 document dated at; 253 a.
 George II. at; 63 a.
 batteries, &c. at; 253 b.
 fort at; 258 b.
 Stephen de; 353 b.
 Graville:
 Earl of, Murehin; 30 b.
 Comite de; 28 b.
 Gray:
 of Wark, Lord, letter of (1644); 437 b.
 Col., letter of; 289 a.
 Mr., preacher, gift to; 428 a.
 Lieut. James, letter of; 291 a.
 John, M.P. for Leicester, letters of; 438 b.
 — letter to; ib.
 Sir John, letters of; 440 a.
 — at Leicester; 428 b.
 — gift by; 428 a.
 John de, document signed by; 404 b.
 Col. Robert, letter of; 289 a.
 William de, witness; 407 b.
 See Grey.
 Graydon, Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Great Glen, Leicester; 413 b.
 Greatbath, Daniel; 364 b.
 Greatwood, co. Louth; 590 b.
 Green, Greene:
 r. Cole, writ of error; 151 b.
 Lieut., letters of; 291 a.
 Mr., letter to; 211 b.
 Mrs. Ellen; 278 b.
 Henry, case of; 151 b.
 — justice; 412 b.
 — sailor; 236 b.
 Samuel, his proposal; 77 a.
 Susan; 399 b.
 Sir Wm.; 163 b.
 — answer of; 163 b.
 See Grene.
 Greenfield, William de, Abp. of York; 350 a.
 Greenfield; 603 a.
 Green-hamerton, co. York; 271 a.
 Greenland; 134 a, 239 b. killing of whales in; 240 b.
 Greensmyth, Jo., letter of; 386 a.
 Greenwich; 210 b.
 documents dated at; 210 a, 299 a, 376 a, 376 b, 377 a, 382 b, 416 a, 419 b, 432 a, 433 b.
 the plague in (1630); 229 a.
 Charles I.'s court at; 246 a.
 office of ballasting at; 244 a. ballast wharf at; 245 a.
 Royal Hospital at; 261 a.
 Royal Observatory; xiii., 76 a, 636 a. court of; 284 a.
 manor, document dated at; 583 b.
 East, manor of; 94 a.
 Greenwood:
 Mr., of Yarmouth; 240 a.
 Alice; 375 a.
 Greffendorff, M., letters of; 32 a, 35 b.
 Gregory IX., Pope, bulls of; 263 b, 317 b, 318 a, 344 a.
 Gregory X., Pope, letter of instructions by; 345 a.
 Gregory XI., Pope, bulls of; 318 b, 339 a.
 Gregory XII., Pope, bull of; 318 b.
 Gregory:
 Dr. David, of the Edinburgh Mint; 68 b.
 — letter of; 68 b.
 — payments to; 83 a.
 — letter of; 82 a.
 — professor of astronomy; 84 a.
 — mem. by; 83 a.
 — paper by; 83 b.
 — warrant to; 83 b.
 Henry; 139 a.
 John; 128 a.
 Lieut. R. B., letter of; 290 a.
 Robert, letter of; 292 b.
 Lieut. Roger; 592 b.
 Greham, Captain Arthur; 594 a.
 Gremesdich, John; 386 b.
 Grenadier regiment, its service against the rebels (1745);
 313 b, 314 a.
 Grene:
 one, of Leicester; 430 b.
 Edmund and Anne, of Worcester; 638 a, 639 b.
 John, mayor of Leicester; 415 a.
 — rector of St. Andrew's, Worcester; 638 a.
 Cornet Nicholas; 595 b.
 Thomas, mayor of Leicester; 415 a.
 Captain Thomas; 593 a.

Grene—cont.

Thomas and Emma, of Leicester; 422 a.
 See Green.
 Grenleef, Roger, free man, his wife, a bond tenant; 634 a.
 Grenlyng, Rich., of Wenhamston, will of; 333 b.
 Greuable; 20 b.
 letter dated at; 218 b.
 Grenville:
 Lady, letter of; 57 a.
 Mr.; 190 b.
 — at the Pay Office; 221 a.
 — speech of; 223 b.
 — to succeed Pelham; 224 b.
 Ann, wife of Bernard, petition of; 114 a.
 — answer to; 114 a.
 Bernard, petitions of; 114 a.
 — answer to; 114 a.
 G., speech of; 221 b.
 Lord George, speech of (1756); 223 a.
 Grescote, John and Henry de, of Leicester; 411 a.
 Gresley, Mr., his despatch; 215 b.
 Grestens Monastery, Normandy; 625 a.
 Gretchede, Robert, of Leicester; 422 a.
 Gretegoode, Richard; 367 b.
 Greves, Richard, petition, &c. of; 161 a.
 Greville:
 Sir F., Chancellor of the Exchequer; 237 b.
 Fowlke, letter of; 379 a.
 Sir Fulke, certificate to; 239 b.
 Wm., son of Sir Grevill; 137 b.
 Grey:
 de Ruthyn, Lord (15th century), bonds by; 267 b.
 Lord, in the Tower; 88 b.
 of Wark, Lord, letter of (1644); 3 b.
 — speaker, letter of (1645); 9 b.
 — (1670); 154 b.
 of Ruthyn, Susanna, Lady; 161 b.
 — execution of (1708); 34 a.
 Mr.; 134 a.
 Mrs. Dora, letter of; 283 b.
 Edm., Earl of Kent; 264 b.
 Sir Edward, Lord Ferrers; 415 a.
 Henry de; 412 b.
 — of Billingham, certificate touching; 284 a.
 John; 365 b.
 — of Rotherfield; 263 a.
 — de, witness; 407 b.
 Robert; 263 a.
 See Gray.
 Greyhound, the, of London, ship, order for her release; 360 b.
 Grice:
 Ensign Ed.; 591 b.
 Wm., deposition by; 385 b.
 Griffin:
 Lord, a prisoner (1708); x., 1 a.
 — (1708); 34 a.
 — the late (1708); 34 a, 46 a.
 — his reprieve; 34 a.
 — an outlaw (1708); 45 b.
 Lieut., letter of; 289 b.
 Edwd., warrant touching; 280 b.
 Sir Edwd., admitted to office of Treasurer of King's Chamber (1660); 284 a.
 — warrant to pay; ib.
 Essex, letters of; 46 a, 46 b, 54 a.
 Michel; 499 b.
 Robert, witness; 408 b.
 — soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 William, publisher, of London; 482 b. family, observations relative to (1784); 287 b.
 Griffith:
 Mr. and Mrs., letters of; 54 a.
 Miss Conway, MSS. of; xxi.
 Edward; 401 b.
 Henry, letter of; 37 a.
 Lieut. Lewis; 591 b.
 Mary, petition of; 549 b.
 Richard, John Williams v.; 377 a.
 — petition of; 506 a.
 Robert, sergeant-at-law; 533 b.
 — certificate by; 534 a.
 Rowland; 278 b, 279 b.
 Ensign William; 595 a.
 Grigg, Michael, his wife Mary; 5 a.
 Grimaldi:
 Marquis de, Governor of Bruges, letters of; 35 b, 36 a,
 37 b, 40 a.
 — letters of; 285 b.
 Grimalani, a Venetian; 21 b.
 Grimbaldstone, Dr. William; 231 a.
 Grimes:
 George, soldier; 534 b.
 Richard, quartermaster; 596 a.
 Grimesby, laws, &c. of; 270 b.
 Grimsbaw, Roger, warrant touching; 280 a.
 Grinstone, Lord (circ. 1717), letter of; 57 a.
 Gringaud, Charles, jurymen; 89 a.
 Grisons, the; 25 a, 27 a.

Groats, proclamation against circulation of; 416 a.
 Groby, Lord Ferrers of (27 Hen. VI.); 415 a.
 Grofhurst, Robert de, license to; 338 a.
 Grofton, Mr., payment to; 526 a.
 Grohin, John, of the order of Observantines; 301 b.
 Grope, Richard, of Long Ditton, will of; 332 b.
 Grosby, Lord of, Sir R. Willoughby; 267 b.
 Groscole, East, hundred of; 432 b.
 Grosso, advertisements from Spain to be procured by; 282 a.
 Grosvenor :
 letter so signed; 392 b.
 Leicester, Act touching; 104 a.
 Richard, letter to; 382 a.
 — warrant of; 387 a.
 Sir Richard, indenture of; 401 b.
 T., M.P., letter of; 391 b.
 W., letters of; 379 b.
 Grove :
 Alderman; 252 a.
 Capt. Edmund; 249 b.
 Col. H., letter of; 37 a.
 Stanhope, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Ensign Wm.; 593 b.
 Grovestein, M., letter of; 39 b.
 Guatke, Fr. Francis; 616 a.
 Graeber, Nicholas, letter of; 290 b.
 Gruff ap Res ap Eden, of Yale, will of; 332 a.
 Grumbkow, M., letters of; 32 b, 37 a, 40 a, 40 b.
 Grumbston, M. de, letters of; 31 b.
 Grumley, Thomas, trooper; 514 a.
 Grundeistonn, David, bailiff; 306 a.
 Grundstonn, Thomas of, witness; 307 b.
 Grymes, Mr., interview with; 434 b.
 Grys, John, of Norwich, will of; 334 a.
 Guadalaxara; 18 a.
 Guadalaxara, Lord Peterborough at; 16 b.
 Gualters, forest of; 148 b.
 Guaronami, Giacomo; 45 b.
 Guadgone, Wm., letters of; 291 a, 294 a.
 Gueldres, evacuation of; 285 a.
 Guernsey; 137 b, 138 b, 146 a.
 papers relating to; 47 b.
 threatened by the French; 34 b.
 inhabitants of; 7 a.
 Guethem, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Guiccardini, aphorisms from; 577 b.
 Guiche, Duc de, letter of; 38 b.
 Guidott, Wm., letter of; 38 a.
 Guiff or Keife :
 Nicholas; 115 a.
 — petitions of; 115 a, 115 b.
 — order touching; 115 b.
 Guilan; 23 b.
 Guilden Sutton, co. Chester; 401 b.
 Guildford; 155 a, 156 b, 157 b, 158 a, 210 a, 334 b.
 documents dated at; 344 b, 349 b.
 Stokes within, manor of; 635 a.
 Guilgrim, Daniel, a friar; 30 a.
 Guingant, siege of, articles of capitulation (1591); 282 a.
 Guiran, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Guire :
 —; 614 b.
 George; 616 b.
 Major Lake, governor of Tirohan; 612 b.
 Guiscard :
 Marquis de; 36 b, 37 a.
 — letters of; 16 a, 31 b, 32 b, 35 b, 37 a.
 — memorials of; 32 b, 37 b.
 — his treachery; 16 a.
 — letter touching (1709); 36 b.
 — Antoine, manifesto by; 32 a.
 Count, Harley stabbed by; 26 b.
 Guise, siege and relief of; 28 a.
 Guisnes, mutineers at; 581 a.
 Gutker, Ensign Henry; 591 b.
 Guldnygham, Goldingham, Peter de, his daughter Christiana; 635 b.
 Gulle, Channel of the; 244 b.
 Gulston, Mr., gift of lands by; 235 a.
 Gultoy, Robert, trooper; 521 b.
 Gun, Cornet Will.; 596 a.
 Guuell, Arthur, trooper, report concerning; 521 b.
 Gunfleet, the; 99 b, 254 a.
 Gun Flitt, the, buoy at; 243 b.
 Gunby, co. Lincoln, tenants of; 264 b.
 Gunfrey :
 Thos., of Leicester, conveyance to; 410 b.
 — witness; 410 b, 411 a.
 Gunman :
 —, his naturalization Act; 146 a.
 Capt. Christopher, certificate for; 143 a. bill to naturalize amendments, &c.; 143 a.
 Gunning, Sir H., Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Gunpowder :
 Treason, the, pamphlet on; 451 b.
 early receipt for; 625 a.
 Gartinavacan, co. Kildare; 508 a.

Guston, Kent, vicar of, excommunicated; 336 b.
 Guthrie, J. Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Guy :
 Henry, letter of; 38 a.
 W., suit against; 630 a.
 Guyberichs letters, the; 45 a.
 Gynenne, troops in; 218 a.
 Gwerselt, document dated from; 393 a.
 Gwilliam, Griffith; 136 a.
 Gwylerin, rector of Teynham; 339 a.
 Gwynn :
 Hugh, alderman of Ruthin, letter of; 399 a.
 Matt., physician, report by; 229 a.
 Roderick; 102 b, 103 a.
 Rowland; 102 b, 103 a.
 Sir Rowland or Rowland, letters of; 31 b, 35 b, 36 b, 37
 Sackville, letter of; 46 a.
 Gydé, William, of Leicester; 422 a.
 Gylle, Lord of; 628 a.
 Gylys, Agnes, of Crabhouse, will of; 333 b.

H.

Habat, Adrian, a quack; 230 b.
 Habaud, Mr., letter of; 35 b.
 Habes Corpus, precedents of persons carried to House of Lords by; 105 b.
 Habbam, Richard, of Upwell, will of; 333 b.
 Hachenild, Frambaldus fil.; 341 a.
 Hacker, Colonel; 429 b.
 Hackington; 340 b.
 chapel; 318 a.
 Hacklnt's voyages, books of; 25 a.
 Hackney; 333 a, 584 b.
 manor; 102 b.
 — tenants of; 243 b.
 marshes, Middlesex; 46 a.
 Haddenham, Cambridge; 332 a.
 Haddington, constabulary of; 308 b.
 Haddock :
 Capt.; 248 a.
 Chevalier; 566 a.
 Sir R.; 257 b.
 Haddon, Mr., letter of; 48 a.
 Hatfield, Fryer, letter of; 290 a.
 Hadham :
 co. Hertford; 117 a.
 document dated at; 634 a.
 manor of; 635 b.
 Philip de; 633 b.
 Hadleigh :
 Suffolk; 332 a, 332 b.
 — manor of; 322 b.
 prior at; 349 a.
 tithes of; 318 a.
 Hadley; 332 b.
 Shropshire; 262 b.
 Katherine; 170 b.
 Haerlem, description of; 61 b.
 Hagan :
 Captain; 609 a.
 —, his character, &c.; 610 b.
 John, prisoner; 611 b.
 Hagley, Lord Lyttelton's seat; 206 a.
 Hagney Abbey, co. Lincoln; 265 a.
 Hagnetan, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Hagein, Baron de, mayor of Lille, letter of; 37 a.
 Hague :
 the, 20 a, 36 b, 570 a.
 documents dated at; 12 a, 36 b, 40 a, 44 a, 47 b, 57 a, 57 b, 553 a, 553 b, 554 b.
 the Prince of Orange's house at; 99 b. description of (1697); xi, 99 b.
 description of (1700); 61 b.
 Hailstone, Edw., Esq., F.S.A., Mr. Jeaffreson's report on his MSS.; xiii, 636 a.
 Hainault, States of :
 letter of; 38 b.
 declaration touching capitulation of Mons (1711); 40 a. deputies of, letter of; 39 b.
 Haines, Thomas, of Bristol, mariner; 241 a.
 Hair, Willoughby; 290 b.
 Hakett, Wm.; 370 a.
 Halbowing fort, governor of; 504 a.
 Haldane :
 —, of the Edinburgh Mint; 84 b.
 Capt., letter of; 294 b.
 Mr., memorial to; 311 b. candidate for Clitheroe; 49 b.
 of Glenegles; 85 b.
 Henry, letter of; 290 a.

Haldane—cont.

Lieut. Henry, letter of; 289 a.
John, letter of; 289 b.

Halden :

Kent; 332 b.
Poppysdenn in; 328 b.

Haldon, Ensign Robert; 593 b.

Hale :

Young, at Nice; 195 a.
Bernard, letter of; 289 a.
John, of Finchfield, will of; 333 a.
Sir Matthew; 234 b.
— chief baron; 234 b.
Richard, of Worcester, will of; 335 b.
— le; 367 b.
Rose; 140 a.
William; 140 a

Hales :

Chris., on Coventry committee; 7 b.
Sir Edward, James II.'s flight with; 555 b.
Jo., on Coventry committee; 7 b.
Col. Jo., letter of; 37 a.

Halewell, Johu, of Bighury, will of; 332 a.

Halewik, Rich., of Hertfort, Norwich dioc., will of; 334 a.

Haley :

Henry, of the Mint, warrants to; 81 a, 83 a.
James, of Limerick; 535 b.

Halfeppennie, Serjeant Thomas; 379 a.

Halford, —; 148 a.

Halford, Henry, Henry Vaughan afterwards; 233 a.

Halforth, Thomas, of Leicester, conveyance by; 422 a.

Halgh, Richard del; 367 b.

Halgreen, Laird of; 299 a, 302 b.

Halhurton :

family, at Eaglescarnie; 310 b.
Margaret, daughter of Thomas; ib.
George, of Eaglescarnie, warrant to; 314 b.
John of; 306 b.
Thomas, letters to; 315 a.
Sir Valter of; 307 b.
Sir Walter, writ by; xvii, 304 a.
— of, charter, &c. of; 307 b.

Halifax :

Lord, writ of summons (1668); 116 a.
— letters of (1685); 554 b.
— (1691); 562 b.
— his brother Savile; 559 a.
— (temp. Anne), letters of; 54 a.
— letters of (1705); 31 b.
— letter of (1708); 35 b.
— letters of (1709); 37 a.
— letters of (1710); 38 b.
— (1715); 64 a.
— George, warrant to (1716); 85 b.
— (1754); 225 a.
— Lord Lieut. of Ireland (1761); 451 a, 468 b.
— his speech on agriculture and the linen trade; 469 b.
— letters of (1763); 286 b.
— letters to; 286 a, 286 b.
— appointed Secretary of State for the Southern Province; 286 b.
— (1769); 191 b.

Hall :

Mr.; 390 a.
Arnold, of Worcester; 638 b.
Henry, of Chester; 361 b.
— petitions of; 144 a, 144 b.
John; 111 a.
— letters of; 290 b, 291 a.
alias Arundell, Martha, petition of; 528 a.
Phineas, letter of; 293 b.
Lieut. Ralph; 591 b.
Roger of; 370 b.
Thomas, security for Newton; 66 a.

Hallam :

Mr., mayor of Leicester; 425 b.
Capt. John, petition of; 540 b.

Hallane, Camp d', letter dated at; 17 b.

Halle, Hamo atte :

chantry founded by; 328 a. license to; 343 b.

Halleknaue, Robert, of Leicester; 404 b.

Halliwell :

Mrs. Katherine; 156 b.
— deposition and petitions of; 158 a, 158 b, 159 a.
Richard, alias Holloway; 155 a–159 b.
— his "letter to the church"; 155 b, 158 b.
— letter of; 158 b.
— letter to; ib.

Hallowed, Nicholas; 403 a.

Hally, James, and Thos. Walcott; 541 b.

Halpeny, James, petition of; 519 h.

Halsall, Edward, affidavit of; 140 a.

Halse :

Dr., letter of; 57 a.
John, son, of Corscomb, will of; 332 a.

Halse—cont.

Richard, his petition; 533 a.

— burglar; 541 b.

Halsewell, Richard, physician; 234 b.

Halston :

charch of; 317 b, 319 b, 320 a, 329 b.
land in; 329 b.

Halton, Neele Lord of, constable of Cheshire, "came with William the Conqueror"; 370 b.

Halywell, Alicia; 268 a.

Hamaaco beds, sleds, &c.; 230 a.

Hamburg :

letters dated at; 35 b, 36 b, 584 a.
tin consigned to; 91 b, 92 a, 93 b. company, the. See Merchant Adventurers of England.
Merchants' Company, the; 122 b.

Hamburgers, the; 32 a.

Hamden, Richard, Esq.; 72 a.

Hamel, Emir de, minor brother of the Observantines; 301 a.

Hamelen woods; 63 b.

Hameltowne; 618 a.

Hamelyn, John, of East Harling, will of; 333 b.

Hamerton, John, commissioner; 272 b.

Hamey :

Baldwin; 226 b, 230 a.
— manuscript work by; 234 a.
— MS. life of; ib.
— licensed to practise; 229 a.
— knighted; 230 a.
— his death; 230 b.

Hamilton; 493 b.

his dragoons; 313 b, 314 a.

Duke of, MSS. of; xxi.

— (1655); 120 a.

— letter of (1708); 35 b.

— letter of; 57 a.

— and Duchess of, letters of (1708); 48 a.

— letters of (1710); 38 b.

— his servants and the papists (temp. Geo. I.); 49 b.

Duchess of, letter of (temp. Geo. I.); ib.

Lord (1663); 507 b.

— death of; ib.

Mr., Charles I.'s horses and; 552 b.

Miss, of Barns and Cochno, Mr. Fraser's report on the manuscripts of; 308 b.

Brig.-General, letter of; 289 a.

Lieut.-Col., letter of; 289 a.

Lord A. (1710), letters of; 38 b.

Alice, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.

Lieut.-Col. Alexr., letter of; 35 b.

Andrew, of Cochnoch; 309 a.

— captain of Dumbarton Castle, charter to; 308 b.

— agreement by; 309 a.

Col. Andrew, letter of; 40 a.

Anthony, writer of the Grammont Memoirs; 493 a.

Lieut. Arthur; 596 a.

Baillie, of Edinburgh; 311 b.

Claud, of Cochnoch; 309 b.

— abbot of Paisley; 308 b.

— (temp. Car. II.), fined for attending conventicles; ib.

Sir D., physician, letters to; 14 b.

Elizabeth, her marriage to Count Gramont; 493 a.

Mrs. Eliz., letter of; 35 b.

Sir Francis, petition of; 503 b.

— his troop; 506 a, 516 b, 541 b.

Gavin, of Raploch; 308 b.

— grant to; 309 a, 309 b.

— of Roploch, pension to; 309 b.

— charter by; ib.

George, grant to; 519 b.

Sir George, receiver-general for Ireland; 509 b.

Captain Hanns; 596 a.

Sir Hans; 509 b.

James, petition of; 521 a.

— payments, &c. to; 85 a.

— report by; 84 a.

John, killed at Aughrim; 493 a.

— archbishop of St. Andrew's; 308 b.

— with the Earl of Argyll (1685); 308 b.

Patrick; 304 b.

R., letter of; 291 a.

Lieut.-Gen. Richard in Ireland; 493 a.

— letters to; ib.

— his brother George; ib.

Sir Robert; 275 b.

Robert, of Barnes, grant to; 310 a — his son John pardoned; ib.

Cornet Robert; 597 a.

Thomas, report by; 84 a.

Valentine, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.

William, petition of; 84 a.

Captain William; 596 a.

William Gerard, Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland, letters of; 189 a–193 b, passim. 195 b, 202 b.

— letter to; 201 b.

— his opinion of the House of Commons; 191 a.

- Hamilton, William Gerard—cont.
 — the attempts to remove him from office; 203 a.
 — O'Connor's remark on (1763); 477 b.
 Hamlyn, Nich., of Farnham, will of; 335 a.
 Hammon, Henry, of Gravesend, mariner; 240 b.
 Hammond:
 Colonel; 437 b.
 Ant., of Navy Office, letter of; 35 b.
 Jo., document signed by; 227 b.
 Richard, letter of; 158 b.
 Hamo, vicecomes; 316 b.
 Hamon, William, of Broomfield, will of; 340 a.
 Hammond, John, of West Moulsey, will of; 332 b.
 Hamp, Henry, questions to be put to; 114 b.
 Hampden, Hamden:
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Sir Edmund, a prisoner; 210 a.
 John, his case; 210 b.
 — of Hampden, pardon to (15 Heu. VI.); 625 a.
 R., warrant by; 69 a. proposed ambassador; 49 b.
 Hampshire, charters relating to; 263 b.
 Hampson, Robert, petition of; 109 b.
 Hampstall Ridware, co. Stafford, manor of; 150 b.
 Hampton Court; 63 a, 190 b, 555 a. documents dated at; 12 a, 84 b, 86 a, 189 a, 189 b, 202 a, 381 b, 524 b.
 Hamptone, Nicholas de, petition of; 634 a.
 Hanson, Capt. Brian, of the Trinity House; 251 a.
 Hanbridge, near Chester, proclamation touching; 384 a.
 Hanbury:
 Mr., letters of; 57 a.
 Mrs., letter of; ib.
 Hancock, John, president of Congress; 206 a.
 Hand:
 Thomas, alderman of Chester; 361 b.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 — mayor of Chester (1701), letter to; 393 a.
 Handcock:
 Mr.; 193 a.
 James, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Wm.; 403 a.
 Handisye, Col., letters of; 31 b.
 Handle, Richard de, his daughter Elizabeth; 625 a.
 Handys, Thomas, of London, will of; 335 b.
 Hangings, arras, &c. at Ewelme, description of; 628 b.
 Hangman, the, paper burned by; 115 a.
 Hankye, Mr.; 366 a.
 Hankyn, Wm, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 Hamner; 382 b.
 document dated from; ib.
 Thomas, letters of; ib.
 Sir Thomas; 388 b.
 Hanny, Sir Robert, his soldiers; 518 b.
 Hanou, abbot of, letter of; 37 a.
 Hanoover, documents dated at; 16 a, 19 a.
 — Elector of, letters of (1703); 31 a.
 — letters of (1707); 32 a.
 — (1708); 19 b, 34 a.
 — letter of (1709); 36 b.
 — letter of (1710); 33 a.
 — (1713); 41 a.
 envoy from (1708); 34 a.
 House of, Q. Anne and; 52 a.
 Hanoverian troops, debates on; 223 a.
 Hansworth, rector of; 276 b.
 Hanworth:
 letter dated at; 211 a.
 Alby by; 334 a.
 Hanysend, John de, citation of; 352 a.
 Happisford, Robt., of Barham, will of; 340 a.
 Hara, Col. Alexander, letter of; 35 b.
 Harbarde, Lord (1582); 430 b.
 Harbert, John, affidavit of; 107 b.
 Harborough, Lord (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Harby:
 Dame Elizabeth, petition of; 160 b.
 Job, and Charles I.'s jewels; 553 b.
 Harcourt:
 Earl, Simon, lord lieutenant of Ireland (1772); 193 a, 195 b, 202 b.
 — his reception there, &c.; 193 a. or Harquett, Sir Simon; 603 a.
 — killed; ib.
 M. d', ambassador, letters of; 12 a.
 Marechal, letter of; 38 a.
 Lord Chancellor, letters of; 54 a.
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Hardborne, Lancashire; 377 a.
 Hardi, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Harding:
 John, petitions of; 507 b, 508 a.
 Ralph, letter of; 291 a.
 Capt. Richard, letter of; 294 b.
 Sir Robert, recorder of Leicester, his death; 440 a.
 Simon, citizen and salter of London, will of; 371 b.
 Thos. v. Sir J. Sutton; 169 b.
 Hardware:
 W., letter of; 294 a.
 William, of Woodbridge, will of; 334 a.
 George, petition of; 246 b.
 Henry, mayor of Chester (temp. Eliz.); 369 b.
 — examination before; 396 a.
 Hardwick, co. York, manor of; 273 a.
 Hardwicke:
 Lord, lord Chancellor; 203 b, 221 a, 221 b, 222 a, 224 a.
 — to be Lord President; 224 a.
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Thos.; 156 a, 156 b.
 — information of; 157 a.
 Lieut. Thos., letter of; 295 b.
 Hardy:
 Sir Charles, admiral; 202 b.
 Capt. Charles, of the Trinity House; 260 b.
 Ed., on Northampton committee; 6 b.
 Henry, jurymen; 89 a.
 Robert, of Stickney, will of; 333 a.
 Sir Thomas, of the Trinity House (1713); 236 a, 260 b.
 Sir Thomas Duffus, suggestions of, touching the Chester corporation MSS. 355 b.
 Hare:
 Dr., letters of; 54 a.
 Edward, chaplain, his narrative of Marlborough's campaign; xi, 12 a.
 Dr. Francis, letter of; 37 a.
 Sir T., MSS. of; xxi.
 Lieut. Thomas Friskey, letter of; 295 b.
 Harleour, church of St. Martin at; 265 a.
 "Harforth, Lord of" (1606); 380 b.
 Hargrave:
 Ensign Henry; 590 b.
 Wm.; 111 b.
 Hargreave, Jeremiah, petitions of; 147 a.
 Harlewrite, Richard le, of Leicester; 410 b.
 Harlunge, Edward, of the Mint; 66 a.
 Harleston, Roger; 381 b.
 Harley:
 Edward, of the Mint; 66 b.
 Frances, widow of Edward; 66 b.
 Secretary; 395 a.
 Robert, Secretary of State, letters of; 1 a, 15 b, 31 b, 35 b, 40 a, 43 b, 57 a.
 — letter to; 16 b.
 — recommendation to; 393 b.
 — Queen Anne and; 41 b, 43 a.
 Sir Robert, of the Mint; 66 a.
 Thomas, petitions of; 500 a, 511 b, 513 a, 21 b.
 Harling:
 document dated at; 354 a.
 East; 333 b.
 Sir Robt., marriage settlement of his daughter; 268 a.
 Harlington: estate at; 5 b.
 park; 6 a.
 Harlow, William; 530 a.
 Harman, Harmon:
 Major; 534 b.
 Lieut. Antony; 596 b.
 John, senr., of Westleton, will of; 332 b.
 Nicholas, of the Battle-axes; 511 a.
 — petition of; 516 a.
 Major Thomas; 536 a.
 — commissioner; 515 b.
 — of Ormonde's Guards; 506 b.
 — his troop at Carlow; 512 b.
 Thomas, report by; 536 b.
 Harmondsole, Greenway at, Kent; 324 a.
 Harmons, Capt. Thomas; 596 b.
 Harney, Edmund, letter of; 385 b.
 Harpen; 332 b.
 Harper, Harpur:
 Col. Gabriel, letters of; 288 a, 289 b, passim, 290 a, 292 b.
 Henry, grant to; 361 a.
 John, of Chester, agreement of; 371 b.
 Thomas; 361 a, 379 a.
 — master of hospital at Spittal Boughton; 380 b, 383 a.
 Harpham, Richard, of London, will of; 335 b.
 Harpold, Robert; 603 a.
 Harpour, Will., of Holton, will of; 334 a.
 Harrington:
 Lord, his report on the Gunpowder Plot; 434 a.
 — letter of (1604); 434 b.
 Capt.; 531 b.
 Francis, letter of; 431 b.
 Sir James, letter of; ib.
 J. E., letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 293 b.
 J. H., letters of; 293 a, 294 a.
 Sir William, his wife Margaret; 627 a.
 Harris:
 his works; 463 b.
 Edward, gaoler of Worcester county gaol; 150 a.
 Henry, of the Mint; 67 b.
 — patent of engraver to; 68 a, 68 b.
 Jos., verses by; 24 a.

Harris—cont.

- Philip, affidavit of; 116 a.
 - Richard; 116 a, 150 a.
 - certificate touching; 116 a.
 - taken by the Turks; 243 a.
 - of Glastonbury, will of; 332 a.
 - Lieut. Samuel; 596 a.
 - Thos.; 639 a.
 - letters of; 293 a, 293 b, 294 a, 295 b.
 - of Blunsden St. Andrew, will of; 332 a.
 - Walter, editor of Sir J. Ware's works; 450 a, 455 a.
 - pamphlets by; 450 a, 455 a, 459 a.
 - a bookseller's opinion of; 459 a.
 - his answer to Dr. Curry; 574 a.
- Harris's Ferry, Susquehanna River; 288 b.
- Harrison:
- Dame; 136 a.
 - Dr., his proposed Bill; 233 b.
 - Major-General; 158 b.
 - Mr., lues by; 24 a.
 - late incumbent of St. Oswald's, Chester, committed under Act of Uniformity; 387 a.
 - Alexander; 396 b.
 - examination of; 396 b.
 - Capt. Brian, of the Trinity House; 252 b.
 - deceased; ib.
 - Geo., the King v., minutes of trial (1827); 369 b.
 - Lieut. Henry; 595 a.
 - James, of St. Michael's, Oxford, will of; 335 a.
 - John, petition of; 525 b.
 - bailiff, petition of; 161 b.
 - Mathew, answer of; 552 a.
 - Matthew, comptroller of Ormonde's household; 523 b.
 - Lieut. Michael; 592 a.
 - Ralph, petition of; 527 a.
 - replication of; 541 b.
 - Richard; 136 a.
 - mayor of Chester (1667-68), letters of and to; 388 a, 388 b, 389 a.
 - Ensign Robert; 595 a.
 - Thomas, trial of; 584 b.
 - William, letter of; 385 b.
 - his assistance to Hollishead; 639 b.
 - his Chronology and Description of England; 640 b.
 - player; 430 b.
- Harrow; 332 b.
- lands at; 342 a.
- Harsch, M. Ferdinand, letter of; 35 b.
- Harry, Benet ap; 374 b.
- Harryman, James; 146 b.
- Hart:
- Alex., of Ipswich, will of; 334 a.
 - Geo., letter of; 291 a.
 - Lieut. George; 596 a.
 - Robert, of Harwich; 241 a.
- Harteshorne, Robert, of Leicester; 419 a.
- Hartford, Earl of (1708), letter of; 35 b.
- Hartington, Lord:
- (1754), H. Fox and; 179 a, 220 a, 222 a, 224 b.
 - his anger with the Duke of Newcastle; 222 a.
 - Lord Lieutenant of Ireland (1755), his character and conduct; 179 a, et seq.
 - dissatisfaction with; 181 b.
- Hartland; 333 a.
- parish, MSS. of; xxiii.
- Hartle, Major, letter of; 294 b.
- Hartley:
- Lieut.-Col., letter of; 290 b.
 - B., letters of; 290 a, 295 b.
 - Lt.-Col. James, letter of; 294 b.
 - letter of; 294 a.
 - Captain Jeremy; 591 a.
 - weekly charge of his troop; 598 b.
- Hartlibb, Samuel, payment to; 93 a.
- Hartlip, parish of; 348 b.
- Hartopp:
- Col., letter of; 37 a, 40 a.
 - Col. T., letter of; 35 b.
 - Sir Thomas, sheriff of co. Leicester; 436 a.
 - Sir William, letters of; 440 a.
- Hartpoole, Capt. William, petition of his widow; 501 a, 505 a.
- his father Robert, of Shrule; ib.
- Hartwipp, Geo., ship master; 369 a.
- Harveian Museum, the; 230 a.
- Harvey, Harvy:
- Dr., Dr. Lawrence's life of; 232 b.
 - his gift to the College of Physicians; 229 b.
 - Mr., parson of Banbury; 377 a.
 - Mrs.; 249 b.
 - Sheriff; 388 b.
 - Francis, petition of; 516 a.
 - recorder of Leicester; 428 b.
 - Sir George, of the Tower; 87 a.
 - John I., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 - Robert, alderman of Chester; 365 a.
 - commission to; 361 b.

Harvey, Harvy—cont.

- Robert, mayor of Chester (1640), letter to; 383 b.
 - Thos, sheriff of Chester (1606); 403 a.
 - of Tollard Royal, will of; 333 a.
 - Wm., mayor of Chester (1678), letters of; 391 a.
 - letters to; 390 b, 391 a.
 - depositions taken before; 390 b.
 - notice of; 234 a.
 - Rev. W. W., his account of the manuscripts of Ewelme Almshouse; 624 b.
- Harvice, Mr., payment to; 526 a.
- Harvieston; 301 a.
- Harwarden, document dated from; 375 b.
- Harwarr, Mr., of Gravesend; 249 b.
- Harwell:
- Berks, deeds concerning; 262 b.
 - William, of Warwick, will of; 332 a.
- Harwich; 244 a, 256 b.
- petition from; 238 a.
 - mayor of, letter of; 244 a.
 - lighthouses at; 252 b.
- Harwood, Mr., mayor of Poole, letter to; 245 a.
- Haryot, Will., sen., draper, of London, will of; 333 a.
- Haselbere; 208 b.
- Haselbury; 334 b.
- Haselrigg, Hazelrigg:
- Sir Arthur; 438 a.
 - letter about; 212 a.
 - letter to; 438 b.
 - at Leicester; 429 b.
- Hasfield, Walter de, his son; 323 a.
- Haslam, Capt. Francis; 591 b.
- Haslington, co. Chester:
- Act for erecting into a parish; 152 a.
 - hall; 152 b.
 - chapel of ease; 152 a.
- Hasloze, Wm.; 367 b.
- Hasting, J. de, Llaneddok rectory presented by; 345 b.
- Hastings; 332 b.
- St. Mary's hospital; 340 a.
- Hastings, Lord:
- acquittances by (1462 and 1465); 628 a.
 - Edward (4 Hen. VII.); 420 a.
 - (Hen. VIII.), steward of Leicester; 416 a.
 - (1625); 436 a.
 - Ferdinando, commission of array to (1640); 436 b.
 - letter of (1640); ib.
 - (1670); 153 b.
- Hastings:
- Mr., under-sheriff of Middlesex; 146 b.
 - Beaumont; 101 b.
 - petitions of; 101 b.
 - recognizance of; 101 b.
 - Edward, letter of; 432 b.
 - Sir Edward, steward of Leicester; 417 b.
 - Mr. Morton and; 433 a.
 - Francis, letter of; 432 a.
 - commissions to; 417 a, 432 a.
 - George, letter of; 432 b.
 - Sir George, letter to; 432 b.
 - commission to; 417 a.
 - his players; 427 b.
 - Sir Henry, commission to; 418 a.
 - brother of Lord, letter of; 436 a.
 - Knevet; 101 b.
 - petitions of; ib.
 - recognizance of; ib.
 - Laurence de, Earl of Pembroke, his will; 337.
 - Richard; 266 a.
 - Richard, Lord Willoughby, will of; 335 b.
 - W., warrant by; 435 b.
 - Walter, commission to; 418 a.
 - Warren; 291 a, 291 b.
 - letters of; 288 b, 289 a, 290 b, 292 b.
 - William L.; 65 a.
 - William, de Hastings; 415 b.
- Hastinkes, John de, witness; 300 b.
- Hatch, J., letter of; 295 b.
- Hatfield, John, abbot of Walden, instrument drawn at order of; 281 a.
- Hatfield:
- Governor, letter of; 289 a.
 - Regis, monastery of, dispute about electing a prior of; 632 b.
- Hathbrand, Prior Robert; 338 b, 342 a.
- Hatherton:
- document dated from; 400 a.
 - Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
- Hatheryngton, Sussex; 333 a.
- Hatton:
- Lord, Chancellor, letter of (1590); 374 b.
 - (1666), privilege case; 103 a, 103 b.
 - (1670); 138 b.
 - Christopher, of Kirby, writ of summons to (1670); 146 b.
 - Sir Christopher, money advanced to; 212 a.
 - Lady Elizabeth, at Brownsea Castle; 209 a.
 - Tho., document signed by; 209 b.

Hatton—cont.

Thos., agreement of; 372 a.
Hattost, Robert, grocer, of London, will of; 332 b.
Haucourt, Suzanne d'Anmale d'; 558 a.
Hauerings or Haverings, Richard dc, of Leicester; 405 b, 406 a, 407 a, 408 a.
Haugh; 332 a.
Haughton, James; 140 a.
Hauhill and Monturpye, tenants of; 308 a.
Hauley, Robert v. I. Shakell; 169 b.
Haultery, Thomas, soldier; 348 a.
Haute, R. de, rector of Westerham; 352 a.
Haverford West; 50 a.
Haversham, Lord, Anne's interview with (1708); 42 a.
Havile, Steph., of Oxford, will of; 332 b.
Havre de Grace, siege of; 227 a.
Havy, Isaac, a French prophet; 46 a.
Haward:
 John, of Leicester; 411 a.
 M., letter of; 40 a.
 William; 357 b.
Hawarden:
 Castle of, document dated from; 381 b.
 Edard, Lord of, "came with William the Conqueror"; 370 b.
Hawardyn:
 John; 367 b.
 Richard, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 Thos., mayor of Chester, agreement of; 371 b.
Hawes:
 Cornewall v., writ of error; 123 a.
 Nicholas; 170 b.
Hawker, Mr., of St. Killock, letter to; 246 a.
Hawkeridge, Capt., petition of; 245 b.
Hawkesbury:
 Lord (1792), letter of; 295 a.
 Catherine, letter of; 294 b.
Hawkesworth, Walter, commissioner; 275 a.
Hawkins:
 Sir John; 252 b.
 John, of Turkdean, will of; 332 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 293 b.
 Lieut. Thomas, letter of; 295 b.
 William, bond of; 284 a.
 — Ulster, king-at-arms; 59 a.
 — coiner; 71 b.
Hawkyng, Rich., priest, of Middleton, will of; 333 b.
Hawles:
 Shirley v.; 162 b.
 Thomas; 117 a, 118 a, 162 b.
 — petition of; 117 a.
 — answers of; 118 a, 162 b.
Hawley, Cornet, of Lord Shannon's troop; 537 b.
Haworth:
 Counsellor Richard, opinion of; 385 b.
 R., petition of; 386 a.
Hawtryns, Thomas, of Littledean, will of; 334 b.
Hawys, Henry, mayor of New Windsor, certificate of; 282 a.
Hay:
 Lord (1709), letter of; 37 a.
 Major, letter of; 290 b.
 E., letter of; 289 b.
 Mr. Secretary E., letters of; 290 a, 290 b.
 Edward, letters of; 288 a.
 John of; 305 a.
 — his daughter Christian, charter by; ib.
 Nicholas, de Fudy; 308 a.
 Lieut. Rich., letter of; 295 b.
 William, of Urie; 301 a.
 Lord William, his proposals; 32 a.
Haydon, B. R., letter of; 14 a.
Haye:
 Robert, president of the College of Physicians; 227 a.
 M. de la, letter of; 35 b.
Hayes:
 Corporal of Ormonde's troop; 536 a.
 Edward, trooper; 525 a.
 Israel, discharge by; 74 b.
 Jacob, recorder, &c., of Wokingham; 284 a.
 Dr. Macnamara, letter of; 289 a.
 Thomas, of Bury St. Edmund, will of; 335 a.
 Wm., petition of; 142 a.
Hayford, Christopher, of Pontefract; 275 a.
Haylly, James, petition of; 514 a.
Hayne, Samuel; 164 b.
Haynes, Haines:
 H., letter of; 67 a.
 — of the Excise Office; 73 b, 76 b.
 Hopton, letter of; 86 b.
 — petition of; 67 a.
 — report by; 67 b.
Haynys, John, clerk, of Strampeshaugh, will of; 333 b.
Hayselle:
 George, of Wisbeach, indenture by; 431 a.
 — chief player; ib.
Hayter, Henry, of Kingston-on-Thames, will of; 332 b.

Hayton, Robert, patent to; 258 b.
Hayward:
 Sir Edward, his patent; 244 b.
 James, of North Barsham, will of; 333 b.
Haywood:
 the, co. Hereford; 140 a.
 Thomas, warrant touching; 280 a.
Headley, Thomas, of Snaith; 275 b.
Health, board of, proposed; 233 b.
Heard, Major, his company; 531 b.
Hearne:
 Mr., of Fleet Street; 6 b.
 Sir Joseph, patent to; 77 b.
Hearsey, Capt. A. W., letters of; 291 a, 294 a, 294 b.
Hearth money or tax:
 387 a, 389 b.
 acts touching; 121 b.
 bill for collection of; 150 a. collectors, action against; 258 b.
 letter about; 275 b.
Heath:
 Attorney-General; 584 b.
 Mr., solicitor; 163 b, 164 a.
 Sir Robert, letters of; 243 a, 244 a.
 — letter to; 245 b.
 — his wharf; 245 b.
Heatley:
 J., letter of; 294 a.
 P., letter of; 291 a.
 Patrick, letter of; 289 b.
" Heaven," tavern in the Palace of Westminster; 155 b, 156 b.
Heavytree, Devon, 279 b.
Hebburne:
 Alexander; 307 a.
 Sir Patrick of, of Valehtoun; 307 a.
Heblethwaite, Sir Thomas, commissioner; 275 a.
Hebson, Joan, of St. Mary Magdalen, Southwark, will of; 335 a.
Hecknell, Richard; 382 b.
Hector in Highlake, document dated from; 393 b.
Hector and William, the ship; 245 a.
Hede, Isabel, of St. Margaret's, Southwark, will of; 333 a.
Hedges, Sir Charles, Secretary of State, letters of; 27 a, 31a, 31 b, 47 a. letters to; 16 b, 25 a, 47 b, 58 a.
Hedingham, alias Henningham, honour and manor of, claim to; 117 a.
Hedley, one, of Leicester, his slanders; 434 b.
Hedon, John, action against Peter Cook by; 414 a, 42 a.
Hedynghon, William, rector of Wee; 626 b.
Heemes, M., letter of; 37 a.
Heemes, M. A. de, letter of; 35 b.
Heespem, M., letters of; 35 b, 37 a.
Hegge:
 John, notary of Norwich, will of; 332 b.
 John, atte; 626 a.
Heidelberg; 198 b.
 MSS. at; xxiii.
 siege of; 215 a.
Heigham; 334 a.
Heili, Thomas Fitz Theobald de; 587 b.
Heines, Mr., of Layton; ib.
Heinsius:
 letters of; 31 a.
 Antony, states deputy; 12 a.
Heisenberg, M., letter of; 40 a.
Heiur, John, quartermaster; 597 a.
Helan, Lord (1691); 563 a.
Helby, port of; 381 a, 398 a.
Heldevier, M., letter of; 35 b.
Heligoland, lighthouse at; 32 a.
Hely, Ralph de, canon of St. Paul's; 632 b.
Helyon, Sir Walter de, justice; 421 a.
Hemborough, co. York, Long Cliffe in; 276 b.
Hemelden, in honor of Leicester; 411 a.
Hemeshawe, Thomas, quartermaster; 596 b.
Hemingburgh's Anols; 347 b.
Heminge, Benjamin, consul, letter of; 47 b.
Hemings, Richard, petition of; 148 a.
Hemington, Robert, letter of; 37 a.
Hemp and Flax, Act to encourage sowing, &c.; 101 a.
Hemsted, Herts; 231 a.
Henbury, John, of Glastonbury; 639 b.
Henchel, Tileman, letter of; 293 b.
Henchin, Madame, letter of; 37 a.
Henchman, Thomas, letter of; 290 a.
Hencell, Tilman, letters of; 295 a, 295 b.
Hendeman, John; 361 a.
Heneage:
 Sir Geo., letter of; 27 b.
 Sir Thomas, of the Duchy of Lancaster, letter to; 432 b.
Henderson: of Edinburgh; 312 a.
 Elias, suit by; 245 a.
Hendy, Arthur, petitions of; 527 a, 531 b.
Henigan, Mr.; 490 a.

- Henketom, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Henlee, John de, canon of Hereford; 635 b.
 Henley :
 on Thames; 335 b.
 Park Place, near; 225 a.
 a coachman; 156 b.
 A., letter of; 38 b.
 J., warrant by; 68 b.
 Sir Robert, petition of; 109 b.
 Hennage, Mr., master of the king's woods beyond Trent, order to; 373 b.
 Henneby (Holmby?) Charles I. at; 429 a.
 Henningham :
 Sir Jo., a prisoner; 210 a.
 Sir John; 581 b.
 Henrietta Maria, Queen :
 letter of; 30 b.
 her bounty to Lord Bristol; 219 a. picture sent by Lord Fielding to; 552 b. her mother at St. James'; ib.
 deceased; 280 a.
 her Secretary. See Wintour, Sir John.
 Henry, Cape; 236 b.
 Henry, Prince of Wales :
 afterwards Henry V., grant of; 359 a.
 writ of (1400); 370 b.
 his death (1612); 585 a.
 Henry, Prince of Prussia, letter of; 57 b.
 Henry I., charters, &c., of; 318 b, 422 b.
 Henry II. :
 charters, &c., of; 318 b, 355 a.
 Lord Lytton's History of; 451 b, 487 a.
 Henry III. :
 charters, &c., of; 1 a, 319 a, 357 a, 357 b, 407 a, 407 b.
 grant by; 1 b.
 confirmation of grant by; 265 b. mandates by; 87 b, 89 a.
 writ of; 88 a.
 his household retinue, &c.; 93 a.
 Henry IV. :
 charter, &c., of; 319 b, 359 a.
 grants by, letters patent of, &c., concerning Leicester; 414 a, 414 b.
 Henry VI. :
 letters patent of; 265 a, 271 a, 359 a, 359 b. relating to Leicester; 414 b. writ of precept by; 370 a.
 Henry VII. :
 his license (in English) to elect an Archbishop; 331 a.
 letters patent, &c. of, relating to Leicester; 415 b.
 Henry VIII. :
 grants of; 360 a, 360 b.
 letters patent, &c., of, relating to Leicester; 415 b, 416 a. writ by; 370 a.
 his dispute with Abp. Warham; 336 a.
 letters of; ib.
 treatise on the troubles of his reign; 93 a. book of values of his possessions (33 & 34); 93 a.
 College of Physicians founded by; 226 a, 226 b.
 grant by, to Anne of Cleves; 277 b.
 picture of; 231 b.
 Henry IV., of France; 277 a. description of his marriage with Mary de Medicis; 283 a. instructions to Sir Henry Neville, English Ambassador to; 283 a.
 Henry, Mr., preacher; 470 a.
 Henshaw, Thomas, of Leicester; 429 a.
 Henstead; 334 a.
 Hepay, Oliver, keeper of Northgate gaol, Chester; 368 b.
 Hepburn, Sir Patrick, of Walschoun; 305 b.
 Herberisfeld in the Weald; 329 a.
 Herbert :
 Lord, of Cherbury, his brother; 560 b.
 — deceased (1709); 37 b.
 — (1727); 232 a.
 Col., killed in Ireland; 569 a.
 George, petition of; 121 b.
 — poems by; 584 a.
 John, letter of; 291 a.
 Pembroke; 617 a.
 Richard; 124 b.
 — petition of; 124 b.
 — — report on; 124 b.
 Zouch; 121 b.
 — petitions of; 119 a, 119 b.
 — answer to; 119 b.
 — report on; 120 a.
 Herciatura, rent paid by; 322 a.
 Hereford :
 letter dated at; 211 b.
 Bibindethewalle, street called; 635 b.
 county; 210 a.
 archdeacon of, witness, 270 a, 270 b.
 dean and chapter of (1319); 635 b.
 Bishop of, Richard (1501); 627 a.
 — (1670); 154 b.
 — John Trilleek; 262 b.
 Hereford—cont.
 Bishop of, F. Goodwin; 587 b.
 Earl of, Edw. I.'s account of his dispute with (1297); 347 a.
 — (1364) H. de Bohun; 412 b.
 — (1352) Humphrey de Bohun; 266 a.
 Herford :
 John; 367 b.
 Charlotte Sophia Abbess of, letter of; 35 b.
 Thomas, priest, petition of; 543 b.
 Heriots, illustrations of; 626 a, 626 b, 631 a, 631 b.
 Herle, William de, justice; 411 a.
 Herlyng, Robert, clerk, of Sandwich, will of; 340 a.
 Herman, F. H., letter of; 289 b.
 Hern :
 readings on Statutes by; 584 b.
 Fredk., letter of; 38 b.
 Henry; 112 b.
 — petitions of; 112 b, 113 a.
 John; 543 b.
 Sir Joseph, patent to; 78 b.
 Rebecca; 112 b.
 — petitions of; 112 b, 113 a.
 — deceased; 112 b.
 Hernonville, camp at, letter dated at; 218 a.
 Heron :
 John; 159 b, 160 a.
 — answer of; 159 b.
 Herperfeld; 1 b.
 Herrick :
 Robert, mayor of Leicester, letters of; 431 a, 431 b.
 William; 417 b.
 Herries, Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 Herriet, Richard de, witness; 270 a.
 Herring busses; 251 a.
 Herrings, exportation of; 237 b, 246 b.
 Heris, Thos., petition of; 150 b.
 Herschell, Dr., telescope by; 57 b.
 Hert, Herte :
 John; 370 b.
 Robert, of Sherston; 639 a.
 William; 370 b.
 Hertelbury; 337 b.
 Hertford; 334 a, 335 a.
 county; 210 a.
 — ship money; 2 b.
 — committee for; 9 b.
 — dragoons, furnished by (1645); 8 b.
 — horse to be raised by (1645); 8 a.
 Marquis of, MSS. of; xxi.
 Earl of (1763); 277 a, 287 a.
 — (1764); 287 a, 287 b.
 Lady, (1764); 287 b.
 Hertwell :
 Will., cutler of London, will of; 333 a.
 Sir Will., of Preston, will of; 335 b.
 Hervey, Hervy :
 Lord, letter of (1708); 35 b.
 — letter of (1709); 37 a.
 — letter of (1711); 40 a.
 Lady, at Winchester; 63 a.
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Agnes, wife of Thomas of Wramplyngham, will of; 333 b.
 John, Dean of Hereford, will of; 332 a.
 Ralph, petition of; 103 a.
 Richard, of Meldreth, will of; 335 b.
 Herward, William; 268 a.
 Heryng, Richard, of Walsingham, will of; 334 a.
 Heryonge, Robert, of Hoxton, will of; 332 b.
 Heselrige, A., letter of; 290 b.
 Hesewell, John, of Cambridge, will of; 332 b.
 Hesse :
 Prince of, wounded in Ireland; 563 a.
 Landgrave de; 565 a.
 Cassel, Landgrave of (1702); 12 b.
 Landgrave and Prince of, letters of (1705); 31 a.
 Landgrave of, letters of (1707); 32 a.
 Prince Henry of, letter of; 35 b.
 Frederick, Landgrave of, letter of; 35 b.
 Landgrave of, letter of (1709); 36 b.
 the Hereditary Prince, letter of (1709); 36 b.
 Prince Wm. of, letters of (1710); 38 b.
 Prince of, letters of (1711); 40 a.
 Landgrave of (1710), letter of; 38 a.
 — (1713), warrants by; 14 b.
 Landgrave of; 41 a.
 Prince of (1745); 314 b.
 troops of; 31 b.
 Cassel, troops of; 41 a.
 Hessian troops, debates on; 223 b.
 Hessians, the, their movements during the '45 rebellion; 311 a, 313 b, 314 b.
 Heswall [co. Chester], 374 a.
 Hetene, Roger de, release to; 408 a.
 Hethe, Hlamo de, Bishop of Rochester; 323 b.

Hether :
 John, of Winford, will of; 335 b.
 John and Johanna, of Derby; 422 a.
 Hettriton, Emma, of Alby by Hanworth, will of; 334 a.
 Hetterman, M., letters of; 37 a, 38 b.
 Hetzler, M., letter of; 40 b.
 Heurliet, Mons., his house in the Isle of the Briell; 554 b.
 Heveningham, W., order signed by; 10 a.
 Hewtson, Rebecca, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Hewett, W., letters of; 289 b, 290 a.
 Hewitt :
 James, Lord Lifford; 488 a.
 Thomas, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Hewlett :
 Ge., of Dublin; 528 b.
 William, prisoner, petition of; 502 a.
 — petition of; 512 b.
 — Mary, wife of, petition of; ib.
 Hewson :
 proclamation by; 582 a.
 Colonel, gift to; 429 a.
 Hey, Robt.; 365 b.
 Heydon, lawsuit against; 268 a.
 Heyhall, co. Lancaster; 431 b.
 Heylyn, J., letter of; 62 b.
 Heyn, William, lay brother; 616 b.
 Heynes :
 Hezekiah; 136 a.
 — answer of; 136 a.
 Heynford; 333 b.
 Heynsius, Le Pensionnaire; 558 a.
 Heynstown, co. Louth : lands of; 532 a.
 Louth and, manor of; 511 b.
 Heyricke :
 John, mayor of Leicester; 416 b, 430 b.
 Robert, of Leicester; 417 b, 430 b.
 William, Burgess for Leicester; 433 b. See Herrick.
 Ilibernia, Alan son of Ralph de; 323 a.
 Hiecock, John; 373 b, 386 b.
 Hiecocke, Richard, of Chester; 399 b.
 Hieheman, Thos., 282 a.
 Hiekes, Richard, prisoner at Leicester; 433 a.
 Hickling, Notts; 423 a.
 Hicklyn, Mr.; 429 b.
 Hickman :
 Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
 Lieut. Thomas, letters of; 290 a, 295 a.
 Wm.; 163 b.
 Hiffernan, Lieut. Michael, letter of; 293 b.
 Higbedd, Capt. Lieut. George; 591 a.
 Higden, —; 160 a.
 Higden's Polychronicon, manuscript of; 226 b, 233 b.
 Higginbottom, Philip; 593 a.
 Higgins :
 Capt., letter of; 290 a.
 Mr., proctor; 15 b.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Lieut. Hugh; 592 b.
 J., letter of; 291 a.
 Higginson, Richard, of Chester; 361 b.
 High Hill, Sir Roger of the, steward of Chester, his controversy with mayor of Chester; 370 b.
 Higham :
 one, a London tailor; 431 b.
 Roger; 150 a.
 Gobyon, co. Beds; 4 a.
 Highbury. See Newington Barrow.
 Highemughe, Robert; 375 b.
 Highens, Col., letter of; 38 b.
 Highgate, Philip, trooper; 536 b.
 Highland robbers in 17th century, means of defence against; 310 a.
 Highway robberies, Act to prevent (1668); 123 b.
 Highways Bill, amendments to (1670); 143 b.
 Highland Gobyon, parsonage of; 3 a.
 Hildyard, Robert, warrant by; 439 a.
 Ithampton in East-Meon, Hampshire; 263 b.
 Hill :
 v. Buxton; 170 b.
 —, his regiment; 33 b.
 —, lighthouse man at Caistor; 243 b.
 Lieut.-Col., his troop; 533 b.
 Mr., regiment given to; 43 b.
 — letter of; 57 a.
 Mrs., her death; 193 a.
 Mrs. Abigail, her conduct, &c.; 14 b, 52 a.
 — letter of; 57 a.
 — Lord Somers and; 38 b.
 — Q. Anne and; 41 b.
 Arthur, made Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland; 179 b.
 alias Thompson, Barbara, petition of; 542 a.
 Brigadier, letter of; 38 b.
 Cassandra, petitions of; 502 a, 535 a, 542 b.
 Charles, letter of; 291 a.
 Ensign Charles, letter of; 294 b.
 Christopher; 279 a.

Hill—cont.
 Daniel, waterman; 279 b.
 Jack, of the Customs; 315 a.
 John, letter of; 292 b.
 — soldier; 534 b.
 — mayor of Pontefract; 271 a, 275 a.
 — sergeant-at-mace, petition of; 116 a.
 — waterman; 279 b.
 — son of John; 377 a.
 alias Morgan, Mary, her husband Richard; 522 a.
 Lt.-Col. Moyses or Moses; 504 b, 529 b.
 Nathaniel, vicar of Reynolds; 5 b.
 Richard, of Tewkesbury, will of; 335 b.
 Sir Roger, Steele and; 49 b.
 Rowland, waterman; 279 b.
 Simeon, of Okeford, will of; 335 b.
 Thomas, letters of; 61 b, et seq.
 — baker-general in Ireland; 535 a.
 Warren; 279 b.
 Hillard, John, goldsmith; 65 b.
 Hilles :
 Gilbert de, endowment by; 328 a.
 — licence to; 343 b.
 Hillman, William, trooper, petition of; 517 a, 523 b.
 Hillsborough; 493 b, 496 a.
 Lord, letters of; 195 b.
 — Wills (1778); 197 a.
 — letter of (1779); 202 a.
 — (1779); 205 a, 205 b.
 — letter of (1792); 295 a.
 Hillyard, Sir Robert, commissioner; 275 a.
 Hilton :
 Edward; 380 b.
 John, of Chester; 361 b.
 Hinchinbrook :
 Lord, letter of (1791); 294 b.
 — (1792); 295 a.
 Hincley, co. Leicester; 420 b.
 Hind, Richard, of Holborn; 635 a.
 Hinde, Mr., preacher, of Leicester; 429 a.
 Hines or Hind :
 Henry, founder, of London; 75 b.
 — contractor for copper; 76 b.
 — founder, proposal of, &c.; 77 a, 78 a, 79 a.
 Hindostan; 59 b.
 Hinius, Stephen, abbot; 614 a.
 Hinsley, Thomas, petition of; 113 b.
 Hinton :
 —; 156 a, 156 b.
 Dr. John, information of; 157 a.
 Wm.; 157 b.
 Hippocrates, a physician; 227 b.
 Hippon, Robert, keeper of Pontefract Park; 273 a.
 Hirm, Henry; 367 b.
 Hitchcock, William, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
 Hitchin; 335 b.
 Thomas, mayor of Pontefract, pardon to; 274 a.
 Hitching, John, commissioner; 275 b.
 Hitchmouth, Thos., vicar of Warfield, inventory of goods of; 282 a.
 Hoadley :
 Bishop; 17 b, 27 a.
 — letters of; 54 a.
 Dr. Benjamin, Fellow of the College of Physicians; 232 a.
 Hoar, Hoare :
 Mr., the banker; 232 b.
 Abraham, prisoner; 543 b.
 James, of the Mint; 64 b, 68 b, 70 b, 73 b, 79 b, 89 b.
 — of the Mint, documents signed by; 66 b.
 — order to; 90 a.
 — warrant to; 86 a.
 Hobart :
 Lord (1797); 296 a.
 — letters of; 296 a.
 Anthony, petition, &c. of; 153 b.
 Sir Henry, justice; 274 a.
 James, deceased; 122 b.
 Joshua, of Ross, petitions of; 502 a, 528 b, 545 a, 546 b.
 Prudence, deceased; 153 b.
 Hobashe against Pycondale; 371 a.
 Hobbs :
 William; 279 a.
 — appointment of; 281 a.
 Hobland, Mr.; 134 b.
 Hobrygg manor; 633 a.
 Hochheimer, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Hochstet, battle of; 446 b.
 Hockering, Capt. William, captive in Algiers; 243 a.
 Hockering; 333 b.
 Hockesley, prior of; 625 b.
 Hockins :
 Samuel, at Scilly; 258 b.
 — letter to; ib.
 Hockley-in-the-Hole; 63 b.
 Hodden, Richard, agent for Major Richard Hodden; 529 b.
 Hoddissone, Margery; 268 a.
 Hode, William, inquisition by; 406 a.
 Hoden, Major Richard, his lands in King's Co.; 529 b.

- Hodges :
 Ensign John ; 591 a.
 Robert, trooper, petition of ; 505 a.
 Wm. ; 399 b.
- Hodgkin, Michael ; 384 b.
- Hodgkins, —, smith of the Mint ; 89 b.
- Hodgeson :
 Anna, of Tanshelf ; 276 b.
 Capt. Bco., letter of ; 9 b.
 Richard, of Tanshelf ; 276 b.
- Hodieroe, John, soldier ; 546 b.
- Hodiernus, William, of Leicester ; 404 b.
- Hodson :
 Ben., letters of ; 3 a, 5 a.
 Ralph, of London, will of ; 335 b.
- Hodynges, Ralph de, of Leicester ; 421 a.
- Hoe, Mr. ; 482 b, 492 a, 492 b.
- Hoffmiller, M., letter of ; 37 a.
- Hogan, Anne ; 107 a.
- Hogarh, W., portrait taken by ; 62 b, 63 b.
- Hoghton :
 Richard ; 368 a.
 — Mariona, his wife, mem. touching ; 368 a.
- Hohendorff, M. de, letter of ; 40 a.
- Hoill, the, lands of ; 309 a.
- Hokenhulle, Hugh de ; 867 a.
- Hokynbery, in the Weald ; 329 a.
- Holand :
 George, of Leicester, lease by ; 420 b.
 Thomas, son, of George ; ib.
- Holbeach, co. Lincoln ; 324 b.
- Holbeck, Walter, mayor of Leicester ; 422 b.
- Holbroke, Robt., of Chew, will of ; 335 b.
- Holcote, Robert, vicar of Hampton, will of ; 332 b.
- Holecott, George, of Pontefract ; 276 a.
- Holeroff :
 Richard, and John O'Maddin ; 538 b.
 Wm., late mayor of Chester ; 360 b.
- Holdenby, letters dated at ; 554 b.
- Holder :
 Thomas ; 281 a.
 Tobias, warrant touching ; 281 a.
- Holdernes, Lord :
 (1756) ; 221 a.
 (1757) ; 223 b.
- Holewest, in Romney Marsh ; 326 a.
- Holford, Mrs., letter of ; 57 a.
- Holgate :
 Staunton v. ; 161 a.
 John, plea of ; ib.
 William ; 272 b.
- Holgheway, near Chester ; 358 a.
- Holl :
 Mr., letters of ; 31 b.
 Robert, letter of ; 35 b.
- Holland ; 152 b.
 State of ; 32 a.
 coinage, &c. of ; 73 a. postal arrangements with (1659) ; 99 a. tin in ; 92 a.
 prosperity of trade (1669) ; 133 b, 134 a. prosperity of trade of Dutch attributed to fidelity in their seal ; 133 b.
 the war with ; 152 b.
 tour through, in 1700 ; 61 a, 61 b.
 diary of journey through ; 99 b.
 prisoners in ; 253 b.
 plague in ; 387 b.
 affairs in (1636, &c.) ; 553 b, et seq.
 money from, for Ireland (1663) ; 624 a.
 the French in (1748) ; 569 a, 569 b, 570 a.
 East India Co. of, 134 a.
 co. Lincoln ; 411 b, 412 a.
 Lord (1400) ; 266 a.
 — letter of (1632) ; 229 b.
 — (1637), letter of ; 211 a.
 one, warden of the Mint ; 64 b.
 Governor and his brother, papers touching alleged peculiations of ; 296 b.
 Cornelius (regicide) ; ix, 125 b.
 Gervas ; 150 a.
 John, letters of ; 292 b, 293 b.
 — of Chester ; 361 b.
 — commission to ; 362 a.
 Will., of Framlingham, will of ; 334 a.
 — toll gatherer, complaint against ; 271 b.
- Hollane, Hen. de, of Westelce, sentence against ; 350 a.
- Holles :
 Lord (1668) ; 166 a, 167 b, 171 a, 173 a.
 — speech of ; 169 b.
 — pamphlet attributed to (1669) ; ix.
 — (1670) ; ix, 142 a.
 — Denzell (1670) ; 150 b.
 — answer of ; ib.
 Lady, Esther, wife of Denzell, Lord Holles (1666), Act for naturalizing ; 101 b.
 Denzil ; 118 b.
- Holles—cont.
 Denzil, letter of ; 211 b.
 — letter to ; ib.
 Lady Frances, deceased ; 198 a.
 G., one of the Masters of Requests ; 154 a.
- Holliman, Thomas, solicitor ; 6 a.
- Hollingbourne, Kent, 117 a, 333 a, 346 b.
 manor of ; 329 a.
 land at ; 318 b, 319 a. gallows at ; 326 a.
 prepositus de ; 329 b.
- Hollingshead, Ralph, late receiver-general in Cheshire ; 391 b.
- Hollins, Richard ; 136 a.
- Hollinshead, R., his Chronicles ; 639 b.
- Hollis, Charrells, a thief ; 434 b.
- Holliwood :
 Great, lands of ; 506 a.
 Little, lands of ; 506 a.
- Holloway :
 Mr., letter of ; 57 a.
 Jonathan, his proposal ; 77 a, 78 a.
 Richard. See Halliwell, Richard.
- Hollyocke, Lieut. Rich ; 591 b.
- Hollywood, Christopher, of Artaine, alleged murder, &c. by ;
 519 b.
- Holman :
 Michael, petitions of ; 109 b.
 — deceased ; ib.
 Richard ; 109 b.
- Holmby, James I. at ; 441 b.
- Holme :
 Randal or Randle, jun. ; 365 b.
 — alderman of Chester, information taken before ; 383 b.
 — mayor of Chester (1643), letter to ; 384 a.
 — petition of ; 386 a.
 Robert, letter of ; 291 a.
- Holmes :
 an Irishman ; 16 b.
 Mrs., deposition of ; 157 b.
 Bridgit ; 278 a.
 John, waterman ; 279 b.
 Nicholas ; 393 b.
 Peter and Bridget, petition of ; 548 b.
 Sir R., governor of the Isle of Wight ; 257 b.
 Robert, letter of ; 291 a.
 Samuel, a Scotch apothecary ; 155 a, 155 b, 156 a, 156 b, 157 b.
 — deposition of ; 157 b.
 — his servant, deposition of ; ib.
- Holond, William, toll gatherer ; 416 a.
- Holscher, Rev. R., letter of ; 295 b.
- Holstein :
 Duke of (1702) ; 16 a.
 — letters of (1705) ; 31 a.
 — (1706) ; 31 b.
 — letter of (1709) ; 36 b.
 Prince of, letter of (1709) ; 36 b.
 Duke of, letter of (1710) ; 38 b.
 — (1742) ; 571 b.
 Princess of, letters of ; 37 a, 40 a, 40 b.
 Beck, Princess of, letter of ; 35 b.
- Holt :
 Lord Chief Justice ; 35 a, 231 b.
 Mr., his opinion ; 258 b.
 C., letter of ; 219 b.
 G., letter of ; 38 b.
 J., opinion by ; 440 a.
 John, carman, payment to ; 526 a.
 — de, steward of Leicester honor ; 410 b.
 Richard, petition of ; 147 a.
 — of Drumcarr ; 538 a.
 Robert, letters of ; 293 a, 293 b.
 H. Neville of ; 439 a.
- Holton ; 334 a.
- Holy Land, the : conquest of ; 318 a.
 contributions for relief of ; 345 a, 345 b, 348 a. miserable condition of the Christians in ; 351 a.
 new crusade to ; ib.
- Holyhead ; 378 b, 381 a, 382 a, 395 b, 397 a, 397 b, 398 a, 399 b.
 pirates in bay of ; 397 a.
- Holyrood, abbey of, charters relating to ; 307 a.
- Holzape, Mr., killed in Ireland ; 563 a.
- Hlome, Lieut. J., letter of ; 292 b.
- Hompesch, Comte de, letters of ; 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b, 40 a.
- Homptone, Ree of ; 262 b.
- Honderson, Wm., 367 a.
- Honecote, Galfridus de ; 405 b.
- Honekote, Ralph de, of Leicester ; 421 a.
- Honey, prices of (1252–1262) ; 343 b.
- Honeywood, Robert, President of Council of Trade ; 247 a.
- Honman, Wm., letter of ; 295 b.
- Honorius IV., Pope, bulls of ; 318 a, 345 b.
- Honte, Roger le, of Chesewyk, grant to ; 636 b.
- Honyman :
 Andrew, afterwards Bishop of Orkney ; 299 b.
 — letters of ; 299 b, 303 b.

Honywood, Col. P., letter of; 35 b.
Hoo : hundred of; 334 b.
 woods, Kent; 322 a.
alias Goodhew, Joan, of Canterbury, will of; 340 a.
 John; 370 b.
Hood, Sir A. Acland, Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
Hooft, M., letter of; 37 a.
Hook, Hooke :
 Mr.; 55 a, 56 a.
 Mr., architect; 230 a.
 M., letter of; 38 b.
 William, letter of; 35 b.
Hooker :
 Mr. Justice; 154 b, 156 a.
 John; 581 b.
Hooke :
 town of; 371 a.
 Heath, inquisition whether it is holden of Earl of Chester, &c.; 371 a. bounds of; 371 a.
Hooper :
 Richard, of Deal; 241 b.
 Thomas, soldier; 545 b.
Hooton Pagnell; 637 b.
Hope :
 Alexander; 516 a, 614 b.
 Gilbert le, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Richard del; 367 b.
Hopkey, Col., letter of; 40 a.
Hopkin, Mr.; 49 b.
Hopkins :
 Lieut. Gerge; 533 a.
 Henry, warden of the Fleet prison, London, letter, &c. of; 383 a.
 Jenkin, petitions of; 550 b.
 Richard, burglar; 540 b, 541 b.
 — prisoner; 542 a.
 Thomas, Esq., letter to; 46 a.
 W., hearth tax collector; 258 b.
 — action against; ib.
Hopkinson, Rev. F., LL.D., MSS. of; xxi.
Hopper, Ensign W., letter of; 290 a.
Hops, import into Ireland prohibited, except from Great Britain; 206 b, 207 a.
Hopton :
 co. York; 271 a.
 Sir Edward and James, sons of Sir Richard, case of; 101 b.
 Sir Ralph, afterwards Lord; 125 a, 125 b.
 Richard, son of Sir Richard, Act respecting; 101 b.
 — case of; 101 b.
 Sir Richard, deceased; 101 b.
 Walter, son of Sir Richard, case of; 101 b.
Hoptoun, the Hessians at; 313 b.
Horan, Cornelius, servant to Robt. Shapeote, petition of; 502 a, 513 a.
Horbury, Horbire, co. York : mill at; 637 a.
 Swain of, his son; 637 a.
 Ralph and Thomas de; 636 a, 636 b, passim.
 Thomas and William de; 637 a.
Horby, John, document signed by; 10 a.
Horde, Thos., letter of; 38 b.
Hords, Thomas, of Bridgenorth, will of; 332 a.
Horkesley; 332 a.
Horn, Mr., of Oxford; 283 b.
Horncastle, Richard, Abbot of Bardney; 267 b.
Horne :
 M., letter of; 37 a.
 Brigadier-General Matthew, letters of; 292 b, 293 a, 293 b.
 Ralph; 148 a.
 — answer of; 148 a.
 Lieut. W., letter of; 294 a.
Horneby; 627 a.
Hornes, M. H., Comtesse de, letter of; 37 b.
Horrebow, Captain J., letter of; 293 a.
Horse corn, prices of (1252–1262); 343 b.
Horse races or racing; 363 a. order for regulating; 366 a. ordinance against (1654); 387 a.
Horses :
 price of, in 1278; 353 b.
 register of sales (1655–1723); 372 a.
Horsey Down. See Horsleydown.
Horsham; 333 a.
Horsington, co. Lincoln, deeds relating to; 254 b.
Horslegh, land in; 351 b.
Horsley, Surrey; 324 a, 335 a.
Horsleydown; 250 a.
 St. John of Jerusalem mills; 136 a.
Horsman, Edw., letter of; 386 b.
Horsmonden, Kent, Grovehurst in; 338 a.
Horton :
 co. Gloucester, manor; 119 a.
 co. York; 637 b.
 Little, letters addressed to; ib.

Horton—cont.
 Mr.; 393 a.
 Ensign Edward; 592 b.
 Lady of, Eliz. Kirby; 337 a.
Horts, —; 193 b.
Horwode, Richard, vicar of Sandridge; 2 a.
Horwood, Mr. A. J. :
 — his report on the MSS. of the Duke of Marlborough; 1 a.
 — of the College of Physicians; 226 a.
 — of Trinity House; 235 a.
 — Ewelme Alms-house; 624 b.
 — Queen Anne's Bounty Office; 632 a.
 — St. Andrew's, Worcester; 638 a.
Horwoode, W., sheriff of co. Stafford, letter of; 379 a.
Hoskins, Mr., light keeper; 257 b.
Hotchkin, Robert, Act to enable him to sell lands; 140 b.
Hoth, the lighthouse upon; 248 a.
Hotham :
 Bishop, his mortuary roll; 343 a.
 Sir John, commissioner; 275 a.
 — the business of Hull and, papers relating to; 211 b, 212 a.
Hotoft, Richard, bailiff of Leicester; 422 a.
Houblen, —; 220 a.
Houblon, London merchant; 564 b.
Houebye (Holmby?), Charles I. at; 427 b.
Hough, Bishop (1736), letter of; 269 a.
Houghton; 6 b, 25 b, 333 b.
 Conquest, co. Beds; 3 b, 5 a, 103 a.
 Green; 395 b.
 Hall, co. York; 273 a.
 Lord, son of Lord Clare; 560 a.
 Mr., his papers; 59 a.
 Aquila, trooper; 338 a.
 Geoffrey de, chaplain; 633 b.
 Henry; 396 a, 397 a.
Houlston, Capt. Nicholas; 253 a.
Hounslow; 332 a.
Housden, Jane, coiner; 71 b.
Household :
 account books (1660–1673 and 1704); 277 b.
 Under Marshals of his Majesty's, petition of; 105 a.
Housel, co. Renfrew; 12 b.
Houseman, Mr. :
 the painter; 253 a.
 portrait by; 235 b.
Houses of Parliament, petition the King, on growth of Popery, and suggest remedies (1671); 164 b.
Honston, James, letter of; 288 b.
Hove; 335 a.
Hoveden, alias Bowen, Alice; 535 b.
Hovenden :
 Ensign Lewis; 594 a.
 Lieut. Nicholas; 549 b.
How, Sophy, her strange conduct; 571 a.
 — Mr. Lowther and; ib.
Howard :
 Lord (1571); 156 b, 157 a, 158 a.
 — of Charlton (1568); 118 a, 166 a, 167 b, 171 a, 173 a.
 — (1670); 158 a.
 — Henry, of Castlerising (1670), writ of summons to; 146 b.
 — (1671); 155 b.
 — of Effingham, letter of; 431 b.
 — Charles, High Admiral; 248 b.
 — letter of; 228 a.
 — — warrant of; 361 a.
 — Wm. of Naworth (1610); 366 a.
 Lady, letter of (1714); 57 a.
 Col., his troop; 541 b, 545 b.
 Sir Charles; 147 a.
 Lord Ed.; 212 a.
 Edward, prisoner; 50 a.
 of Norfolk, Fredk., letter of; 37 a.
 George; 279 a.
 Gorges; 476 a, 478 a.
 Lord Henry, paper by; 585 a.
 Henry, commission to; 280 a.
 Dame Katherine, widow, petition of; 147 a.
 Sir Robt.; 170 b.
 — deceased; 147 a.
 Madame Walbury; 278 a.
 Wm. (1610); 366 a.
 de Walden, Barony of; 287 b.
Howe :
 Lord (1792), letter of; 295 a.
 Brigadier, letter of; 36 a.
 Captain, afterwards Lord, his defeat of the French; 226 a.
 Mr., letters of; 32 a, 37 a, 57 a.
 — vicar of Ampthill; 5 b.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Mr. J., letter of; 35 b.
 John; 382 a.
 Sir Scroope, and his brothers; 560 b.

Howell :

- a weaver, letter to ; 158 b.
- Mr., grammar master at Ewelme ; 627 a.
- Capt. George, letter of ; 294 a.
- John ; 367 b.

Howgton, Lawrence, apprehended, 373 b.

Howlet, John ; 281 b.

Howlett, Edward, trooper, petition of ; 514 a, 525 a.

Howlett's Park ; 327 a.

Howston :

- Alexander, petition of ; 504 b.
- John, petitions of ; 523 b, 524 a, 524 b.
- report on ; 524 a.

Howth :

- book of ; 583 a.
- Earl of, his servant (1663) ; 537 b.

Howys, John, declaration of ; 268 b.

Hoxton ; 332 b.

- letter dated at ; 11 a.

Hoy :

- Sir John, captain ; 596 b.
- Richard, of Athy, petitions of ; 510 b, 538 a.

Hoyd, Michael de la ; 390 b.

Hoyle :

- Capt. Edmond, petition of ; 504 a.
- Thomas, order signed by ; 275 a.
- Hubbartstown, co. Kildare ; 508 a.
- Hubberthorne, Richd., certificate touching ; 386 a.

Hubert :

- Archbishop, witness ; 270 a.
- Mrs. ; 278 a.

Huehinson, Daniel, petition of ; 543 b.

Huekle, John, common clerk of Leicester ; 439 b.

Huestermoll, custom of, at Leicester ; 411 b.

Huddebovill, John ; 342 a.

Huddestou, J., letters of ; 294 b, 295 a.

Hudson :

- Capt., at Bedford Mount ; 8 a.
- Anne, of Cambridge, will of ; 335 b.
- Capt. Charles, letter of ; 289 a.
- Cornet John ; 595 b.

Hudson's Bay ; 36 b.

Huete ; 18 a.

Huerton :

- Lieut.-Col. ; 591 a.
- weekly charge of his troop ; 598 b.
- Ensign Thomas ; 591 a.
- Lieut. Thomas ; 591 a.

Huett, Mr., of Ampthill ; 7 a.

Huett or Huitt :

- Robert, a papist ; 5 b, 6 b.
- alderman of Chester ; 361 b.

Huffel, M., letters of ; 36 b, 38 b.

Hughes :

- Dr. ; 475 a, 475 b.
- Benjn., letter of ; 292 b.
- Lieut. John, letter of ; 291 a.
- Owen ; 364 b.
- W., the Parson's Law by ; 581 a.
- William, of Gray's Inn ; 585 a.

Huguenots, the ; 29 b.

Huickes, Edwd., of Chester ; 361 b.

Huldmand, Sir Fredk., letter of ; 295 a.

Hulfeld, Wm. le ; 367 b.

Hulks :

- John ; 120 b, 121 a.
- Lettice ; 120 b, 121 a.

Hull, Kingston-upon-Hull ; 240 b, 242 b.

- port of ; 94 a.
- mayor of, letter to ; 244 a.
- sheriff of, his account, 39 Hen. VI. ; 627 b.
- petition from ; 247 b.
- merchants of ; 239 b.
- proposed free port ; 247 b.
- Sir John Hotham and, papers relating to ; 211 b, 212 a.
- Trinity House at ; 235 b, 238 b, 239 a, 239 b, 244 a, 247 b,
- 251 a, 255 b, 261 a, 261 b.
- Thomas ; 278 a.
- v. Henry Hurleston and Jas. Knowsley ; 385 b.
- William, of Ashbourne, exercises and lectures by ; 584 a.

Hulle, Madle. le, letter of ; 38 b.

Hulme, Abbey of ; 268 b.

Hulse :

- John ; 120 b, 121 a.
- Lettice ; 120 b, 121 a.

Hulton :

- Edward ; 365 a.
- Hugh, sheriff of Chester ; 368 b.

Humber :

- the river ; 247 b, 256 a.
- sand ; 255 a.

Humberston :

- Lord Fitzwilliam (1670) v. ; 147 a.
- Major ; 205 b.
- Mr. ; 285 a.
- Mathew, jurymen ; 89 a.

Humberston—cont.

Ralph, of Leicester ; 415 b.

William, of Leicester ; 413 b.

Humborn, John ; 279 b.

Hume :

David ; 287 b.

— letters of ; xiii, 277 a, 287 a.

— his History ; 354 b.

— &c., O'Connor's remarks on ; 463 b, 465 a, 468 a,

469 b, 470 b, 471 a, 471 b.

— O'Connor's letter to ; 471 b, et seq.

Sir John, at Leicester ; 428 b.

Tho., steward of Ormonde's household, certificate by ; 519 a.

Sir William, at Leicester ; 428 b.

Humes — ; 156 b.

Humet, William de, witness ; 404 b.

Humphrey, Lieut. Isaac ; 289 b.

Humphreys, Humphreys :

Joseph ; 156 a, 156 b.

— information of ; 157 a.

Capt. R., letter of ; 291 a.

Thos. ; 279 b.

Hungary :

Confederate Evangelic States in, address from ; 37 b.

war in (1710), papers relating to ; 38 b.

Hungeat, Henry ; 107 a.

Hungerford :

Colonel ; 591 b.

Sir Edmund, seal of ; 639 a.

Robert de, witness ; 411 a.

Capt. St. John ; 592 a.

Hunsdon, Lord :

J., letter of (1586) ; 431 b.

letter to (1586) ; 227 b.

letters of and to (1588) ; ib.

warrant of (1592) ; 375 a.

letter of (1598) ; 375 a.

Hunsingore, co. York ; 272 a, 273 a.

Hunslaerdyck ; 554 b.

Hunt :

Barthol., payment to ; 429 b.

Edmond ; 158 a, 159 a.

Henry, complaint against ; 231 a.

Lieut. John ; 596 b.

Mrs. Mary, letter to ; 158 a.

Robert, petition of ; 550 a.

Captain Thomas ; 596 a.

Thos. ; 155 a, 155 b, 156 a, 156 b, 157 b, 158 a, 159 b.

— receipt and other papers of ; 158 a.

— letter to ; 158 a.

— answer of ; 161 a.

Thomas Le ; 482 a, 487 a.

Hunteley, Hugh, of Duxton, will of ; 332 a.

Hunter :

Capt., letter of ; 294 b.

Andrew, letters of ; 290 a, 293 a.

James, letter of ; 291 a.

John, letter of ; 294 b.

Major Orby, letter of ; 294 b.

Richard, of Whitby ; 241 b.

Ro., letter of ; 27 a.

Col. Robert, governor of Virginia ; 46 b.

Samuel, clerk of the Trinity House ; 259 b.

Lieut. Samuel, letters of ; 295 a, 295 b.

Capt. W., letter of ; 291 a.

Wm. Orby, letters of ; 290 b, 291 a, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a, 295 b.

Huntheim, M., letters of ; 38 b.

Huntingdon ; 9 b, 210 a, 379 a.

letters dated at ; 214 b, 379 a.

garrison ; 9 a.

county, committee of, letters of ; 9 a, 9 b.

— horse to be raised by (1645) ; 8 a.

Huntingdon, Earl of :

John, charter to (18 Hen. III.) ; 421 b.

Francis, letter of (3 Edw. VI.) ; 425 b.

Henry (22 Eliz.) ; 417 a. letter to, &c. (1584) ; 430 b, 431 b.

his house at Leicester (1585) ; 425 b.

letter of (1586) ; 431 b.

letter to ; ib.

Henry, his stewardship of Leicester (33 Eliz.) ; 417 a, orders and letter of (1590) ; 432 a.

417 b.

letters of (1591) ; ib.

letters of (1592) ; 432 b.

letter of (1595) ; 432 b.

(1597) ; 379 b.

George, letter of (1597) ; 379 b.

and his lady, gift to (1597) ; 432 b.

gift to (1598) ; 428 a.

George, letter of (1598) ; 433 a.

— (1599) ; *ib.*letters of (1600) ; ib.

— (1601) ; 433 a, 433 b.

his coat and cognizance (1601) ; 433 b.

Huntingdon, Earl of—cont.
 letter of (1602); 434 a.
 his house at Leicester, James I.'s visit to; 441 b.
 Henry, letter of (1603); 434 b.
 Geo., letter of (n. d.); 434 b.
 — (1604); ib.
 Henry, letters of (1605); 434 a.
 (1605), the new and the old; 428 b.
 letter of (1607); 434 b.
 Henry, steward of Leicester (1609); 418 a.
 letters of (1608-10); 435 a.
 — (1616); 435 b.
 letter of (1620); 436 a.
 — (1625); ib.
 — (1630); ib.
 — (1634); 436 b.
 — (1639); ib.
 commission of array to (1640); 436 b.
 Theophilus (1657), commission by; 418 a.
 letters of (1684); 440 b.
 letter of (1685); ib.
 (1723), commission by; 419 a.
 (1729), Theophilus, commission by; ib.
 Huntingdon, Countess of:
 (1368), Juliana, her will; 338 b.
 Lucy, commission by (1657); 418 a.
 Lucy, Dowager, petition of (1666); 104 a.
 Huntington:
 John, innholder, petition of; 507 b.
 Samuel, letter to; 289 a.
 Huntly, Earl of, Ar., document signed by (1520); 302 a.
 Huntly, Marquis of, MSS. of; xxi.
 Huntman, Rich., of Wickham, will of; 334 a.
 Hunton, Kent, lands in; 329 a.
 Hunton, William, of Kingston-on-Thames, will of; 333 a.
 Huntynodon-Wode, Chester; 353 a, 358 b.
 Hupton, Charles, his estate; 3 b.
 Hurlman, Ralph; 413 a.
 Hurlestone, Hurlston:
 Henry; 385 b.
 late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 Capt. Nicholas, of the Trinity House; 250 b, 252 b.
 — death of; 253 a.
 John, commission to; 362 a.
 Hurly, Sir Maurice or Morris:
 petition of; 500 b, 518 a.
 — report on; 536 b.
 Hursley, church of; 263 b.
 Hurst:
 Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of John Hurst, Sussex man; 156 a, 156 b.
 — examination of; 157 b.
 James, serjeant; 545 a.
 John, a Cambridge man; 155 b, 156 b, 157 a.
 — a Yorkshireman; 156 a, 157 a, 158 a.
 — his wife; 156 b.
 — examination of; 157 a.
 — a Sussex man; 156 a, 156 b, 159 a.
 — examination of; 157 b.
 Richard, of St. George beside Eastchepe, will of; 333 a.
 Samuel, of Pontefract; 276 a.
 Hurstbourne:
 letter dated at; 63 a.
 Park, Hants, MSS. at, described; xi, 60 b.
 Harteache, Henry; 367 b.
 Husband:
 Mr.; 275 b.
 John, defendant; 529 b.
 — soldier; 534 b.
 Husbandry, old French treatise on; 324 b.
 Huse:
 — grant to; 261 b.
 Thomas, of Sturminster Castell, will of; 335 a.
 Hussars, the, their service against the rebels (1745); 313 b, 314 a.
 Hosse, Thomas; 610 a.
 Husseburne, William de, witness; 1 b.
 Hussey:
 Bartholomew; 508 a.
 John, of Kingston-on-Thames, will of; 334 b.
 Vere Warner, letters of; 291 a, 295 b.
 Hustings Court, the; 151 b.
 Hutesch, Thomas, reader of Divinity Lecture in Chester Cathedral, death of; 377 a.
 Hutchinson:
 Mr., memoranda of; 26 a.
 Daniel, alderman of Dublin, petition of; 539 b.
 Capt. J., letter of; 292 b.
 John, letters of; 293 b-295 a, passim.
 — of Brome, letters of; 290 b.
 John Hely, prime serjeant and provost of Trinity College, Dublin; 189 b, 190 a, 193 b, 202 b, 203 a, 203 b.
 — letter to; 191 a.
 Thomas, non-juror; 27 a.
 Hutchinstoun, co. Dumbarton; 309 a.
 Hutte, Thomas, of Loughborough; 414 a.

Hutton:
 Edward; 365 b.
 Leon, of Oxford University; 435 a.
 Mattw., certificate by; 66 b.
 — witness; 66 a.
 — commissioner; 275 a.
 Sir Richard, justice; 584 b.
 Huxly, Huxley:
 George, commissioner; 62 a.
 Richard; 368 a.
 Huyet, Henry, of Worcester; 638 b.
 Huyghens, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Huylenbroeck, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Huys:
 David, prior of Friars' Preachers; 266 a.
 Thomas, physician, his death; 226 b, 227 a.
 Hyebe:
 Robert; 341 b.
 Roger, of Leicester; 414 b.
 Hyde:
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Dr. James, master of Ewelme Hospital; 630 a.
 John, of Sonning, will of; 333 a.
 Lawrance; 110 a.
 — warrant by; 68 b.
 Sir Robert, chief justice; 635 a.
 William, affidavits of; 139 b.
 Hyder Aly, narrative of second war with (to Sept. 1782); 296 b.
 Hydrabad; 288 a, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a, 295 a, 295 b.
 Hygham, Wm.; 281 b.
 Hygdon, John; 281 b.
 Hygom, William, of Leicester, mortgage by; 423 a.
 Hyham Gobyon, minister of; 4 a.
 Hyll, John, senr., leather seller, of London, will of; 335 a.
 Hylle, Richard, knt., of London, will of; 332 b.
 Hynd, Lieut. Obadiah; 591 b.
 Hyndford, John, of Estooker (Esstover, Somerset?) will of; 332 b.
 Hyndley, deputy to W. G. Hamilton; 191 b, 192 a.
 Hyndman, William, letter of; 291 a.
 Hynoisio, Marquis della; 22 b.
 Hynterisham; 333 b.
 Hynton, Thomas, of Fleet, Linc., will of; 332 a.
 Hyppesley, Lady, deceased; 162 b.
 Hyppron, John, of Lofthouse; 637 a.
 Hyssing, Mr., his portrait of Walpole; 313 a.
 Hythe:
 mayor of, letter of; 46 b.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Hospital of St. Bartholomew at, MSS. of; ib.

I.

Ibgrave, Thomas, embroiderer, grant to; 94 a.
 Ibstock, co. Leicester, manor of; 423 a.
 Ickham:
 lands in; 319 a.
 manor of; 327 a.
 Idsinga, M., letter of; 39 b.
 Iffey, Robert, soldier; 534 b.
 Ifield, tithes at; 348 b.
 Ignace, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Ikerrin, Lord; 582 a.
 Ilchester; 220 b.
 Lord, letters of (1753-1756); xiii, 213 a, 224 b, 225 a, 225 b.
 — (1754); 222 a.
 — (1756); 221 b.
 — (1757); 223 b, 224 a.
 — his account of his brother Fox's conduct; 222 a, 224 b, et seq.
 Iles:
 Capt.; 156 a, 156 b, 157 b.
 Mrs.; 156 a, 156 b, 157 b.
 Illegitimation precedents; 102 a.
 Imhoff, Julius; 290 b.
 Imhoffe, Baron d', letters of; 32 a, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 40 b.
 Imports, English (1669), list of; 134 b.
 Ince:
 John de, senior; 367 b.
 Nicholas, alderman of Chester; 365 b.
 — information taken before; 383 b.
 — petition of; 386 a.
 William, commission to; 362 a.
 Incbebrick, rector of; 306 a.
 Inchiquin:
 Lord; 582 a.
 — a prisoner (1642); 603 b.
 — (1644); 604 b.
 — (1645); 605 a.
 — (1647); 606 b, 607 a.

Inchiquin -cont.

- Lord (1648); 609 a.
- (1649); 610 b.
- in Wexford; 600 b.
- (1651); 615 a.
- certificate of (1663); 504 b.
- (1691); 564 b.

Inchmartyn; 306 b.

Indemnity :

- Act of; 123 a.
- committee for at Haberdasher's Hall, London, certificate to; 386 a.

Indies, William de, Gwillerin; 339 a.

Indies, East India; 130 b, 282 a, 287 b.

- observations on English possessions in (1785); 289 a.

Bill for (1783); 57 b.

unrated goods of; 90 a.

prize ships; 129 a.

Company; 107 a, 107 b, 129 a, 130 b, 131 b, 132 a, 288 a.

— petition, answer, &c., of; 107 b.

— Skinner v.; ix, 165-174.

— its right to coin; 72 b.

— dispute with; 235 b.

— complaints against; 241 a.

— ships of; 243 b.

— money lent to; 248 b.

— petition against; 240 a.

— papers of (1786); 289 a.

— resolution of regret by court of directors of, on death of Marquis Cornwallis (1806); 296 b.

— losses inflicted by Portuguese on; 553 b.

— and West, Dutch trade with; 553 a.

Indies, the West; 24 a, 223 a, 239 a, 282 a.

expedition to (1707); 17 b.

medicine, &c. for troops in; 231 a.

Company, in Brazil; 553 b.

"much money sent to" (1669); 134 a.

Indulgences granted to pilgrims to Rome; 345 b.

Inestenberg, Countess of (1767); 488 a.

Inet, —, a sailor; 236 b.

Influenza, the, observations concerning; 233 a.

Ingelby :

manor of; 264 b.

North, chapel of; 265 a.

Ingeramus, son of Aldred of Kirkeby; 636 b.

Ingilby, Sir Henry, MSS. of; xxi.

Ingils :

Capt., letter of; 289 a.

Mr., of the Trinity House; 236 a.

Alexander, of Tervot, witness; 306 a.

Alexander, of Terwait; 305 b.

Inglishcomb, Somerset; 362 a.

Ingoldsby or Ingoldsbys :

Lieut.-General, letters of; 32 a, 35 b, 37 a, 38 b, 40 a.

Col., his dragons in Ireland; 601 a.

— governor of Loughur; 601 b.

Sir Henry; 624 a.

R.; 74 a.

Ingoldsthorpe; 334 a.

Ingram :

Lord, Henry, deceased (1670), Act for trustees to sell lands of; 151 a.

— his son; 151 a.

Sir Arthur; 151 a.

Thomas, of Stortford, will of; 333 a.

Sir Thomas, commissioner; 275 a.

Ingylden, Sir Thomas, indenture by; 266 a.

Inishbofinny Island; 618 a.

Inishdeoge, Cromwell at; 611 b.

Innes :

Lieut.-Col., letter of; 288 b.

John, letter of; 291 a.

Innskilling; 395 a, 494 a, 494 b, 495 b, 611 a.

Brief, Commissioners for, letter of; 395 a.

Innocent III., pope, bulls of; 317 b.

Innocent IV., pope, bulls of; 318 a.

Innocent VI., pope, bull of; 318 a.

Innocent VIII., pope, bull of; 266 b.

— licence by; 301 b.

Inoculation, the Vaccine; 233 a.

Insula, Baldwin de, Earl of Devon; 637 a.

Insula, Johannes de, v. Bishop of Winton; 168 a, 171 b.

Insurance Office, the Amicable; 231 b.

Insurrection in Kent (1450), declaration of grounds of; 266 b.

Inten, Lancelot; 259 a.

Interest on money (1669); 134 a, 134

Inventions; 120 b.

Inventories; 371 b.

Inverbervie :

burgh of; 302 a.

Council House of; 301 a.

Lord (1641); 299 a.

Ipres :

town of; 36 b.

magistrates of, letter of; 35 b.

bond by; 30 b.

Ipsstoke, co. Leicester; 415 b.

Ipswich; 94 a, 240 a, 256 b, 333 a, 333 b, 334 a, 335 a, 335 b.

letters dated at; 244 a.

petition from; 238 a.

ships of; 242 b.

bailiffs of, their agreement with Christ Church, Canterbury; 343 a.

— and portmen, petition of; 242 a.

Dunham Bridge near, quay, &c. at; 245 b.

Iragh, in barony of Foart; 536 b.

Ireland :

History of, dissertations on, by Chas. O'Connor (1753), extracts from; 443 b.

Parliamentary History of; xxiii.

Chief Baron Willes' memoranda on; ib.

Commissioners of Court of Claims in; 388 a.

House of Convocation in; 572 b.

Court of wards in; 572 a, 581 a.

House of Lords in, journals of; 572 a, 581 a.

College of Physicians in; 580 b.

Lord Lieutenant, General of forces in (1598); 398 a.

Lord Deputy of (1608), petition to; 352 a.

— (1610); 399 a.

— (1611); 399 b.

— (1660); 154 a.

Viceroy of (1447), Earl of Shrewsbury; 493 a.

— (1689), Tyrconnell, letters of; 493 a, et seq.— Lord Harrington (1755); 179 a et seq.

— Lord Bristol (1766); 482 a.

— Lord Townshend (1769); 492 b.

— Duke of Bedford; 193 a, 221 a, 451 a.

— Earl of Halifax; 451 a, 468 b.

— Earl of Northumberland; 477 b.

the Danes and Normans in, devastations of; 585 b.

King Bryan Borowe's benefits to; ib.

trade with Chester (temp. Ric. II.); 355 a.

soldiers for, muster rolls; 398 b.

regiment serving in, muster roll and paymaster's bill (1550) 396 a.

troops sent from England to (1593); 375 b.

troops for (1594-97); 376 a, 378 a, 378 b, 379 a, 379 b, 381 b, 382 a.

soldiers for; 397 a, 397 b, 398 a, 398 b.

muster rolls, soldiers for service in (1596); 397 b.

bill, transportation of troops to (1598); 398 b.

passes (1600-5) for sick soldiers returning from; 398 b.

treasure for payment of army and garrisons of (1607); 381 a.

wars against rebels of (17 Car. I.); 361 b.

state of (1641); 602 b.

rebellion in (1641), tracts, &c. relating to; 450 a, 460 a, 463 a.

— depositions connected with; 572 b, 588 b.

— different estimates of the number of persons killed during; 575 a.

— dialogue between a dissenter and a churchman on; 574 a.

various counties of, in which depositions and examinations were taken, respecting losses (1641-1652); 561 b.

affairs in (1641-1652), personal narrative of; 576 b.

distressed protestants in (1641); 573 a.

rebels in (1642); 99 a.

British forces in (1645); 8 a, 9 a, 9 b, 10 b.

transplantations in (temp. Commonwealth); 517 b.

British army in (1648) list of, weekly charges, &c.; 590 b-598 b.

— contract for supply of; 599 a.

affairs of (1648); 27 b.

expedition to (1649); 11 b.

events in (1649-53), narrative of; 599 a, et seq.

men transported to Spain from (1657); 28 b, 30 a, 95 a.

postal arrangements in (c. 1659); 99 b.

general convention of (1660); 99 a.

Charles II.'s declaration for the settlement of; 509 b.

conspiracy in (1663), Col. Jepson's connexion with, Sir wolves in, scheme for destroying (1663); 501 b, 504 a.

Theo. Jones's narrative of; 623 b.

proposed "Office of Address" for English settlers in,

&c. (1663); 510 a.

lighthouses for (1664); 252 b.

committee of adventurers in, petition of; 102 a.

Cattle Bill (1666), papers touching; viii, 102 a.

— (1669); 134 a.

trade, &c. in (1669); 134 a.

population, wealth, condition, &c. of, report on (1673);

90 b.

fugitives from, list of, temp. Jac. II.; 582 b.

James II.'s campaign in, letters concerning; 494 a.

battle of the Boyne (1690); 559 b.

James II. in; *ib.*the campaign in (1691), letters concerning; 563 a, et seq.

papers relating to, in reigns of William and Anne; 58 a.

Ireland—cont.

conduct of William III. towards; 446 a, 449 a, 452 b, 453 a. foreign coins current in (1692); 73 b.
 James II.'s private estate in (1693); 497 b. papers about erecting a Mint in (1698); 73 a.
 Privy Council of (temp. Anne); 50 b. depression of industry in (1704); 446 b, 448 b.
 Wood's half-pence in; 76 b, et seq.
 men levied in (1708); 20 a.
 Lutheran families sent to (1709); 47 a. famines in (1709 and 1710); 448 b.
 — between 1727 and 1756; 449 b.
 Privy Council, letter of (1711); 74 a. foreign coin current in (1711); 74 a.
 Privy Council of, letter of (1712); 73 a. state of, letter on (1715); 15 b.
 people of, appeal to the, pamphlet called (1749); 442 b.
 — counter appeal to the, by C. O'Connor; ib.
 the prevailing vice and principal occupation of (about 1750); 178 a.
 Presbyterians and Papists in (1751); 177 b.
 Roman Catholics of, case of, Charles O'Connor's pamphlet called (1755), extracts from; 445 b.
 state of agriculture, &c. in (1755, &c.); 447 a, 449 a, 449 b, 451 a.
 Registry Bill, proposal for (1757); 450 a, 460 a.
 House of Commons in, 1756–1785, papers relating to; 174 b, et seq.
 state of (1757), maxims relative to; 457 a. language and literature of, Dr. Johnson's letter on (1757); 444 a.
 Civil establishment of (c. 1761); 185 b. annual Parliaments in, speech in favour of; 185 b.
 method of augmenting troops in, speech on; 187 b. public credit of, speech on; 188 a.
 banks in, failure of; 188 a.
 the effect of pasture enclosures in (1762); 470 b.
 Lord Trimleston's negotiations concerning (1762); 471 b, 472 a, 473 a, 474 a.
 the Whiteboys in (1766); 481 b, et seq.
 Catholics in, their deprivation of education; 442 a. freedom of trade for (1774); 195 a, 195 b, 202 b, 204 a, 205 b, 206 b, 207 a.
 the Protestant Dissenters in (1778); 200 a, 206 a, 207 b.
 Catholic clergy in, to be appointed by the Crown, scheme for (1778); 198 b. proposed large emigration from (1778); 197 a. disaffection of Roman Catholics in; 197 a. large imports of coarse woollens into (1778); 199 a.
 distress of merchants in; ib.
 schemes for alleviation of misery in; 199 a, 199 b.
 Lord North's views of the friendly disposition of England towards (1779); 201 b, 204 a, 207 a. bad condition of (1779); 201 a. means for its defence against invasion; ib.
 projected French invasion of (1779); 200 b.
 the independent companies in (1779); 200 b.
 the Presbyterians in (1779); 206 a, 207 b.
 tin sold in; 92 b.
 taxation of, by the English Parliament; 190 b. statutes regarding export of wool from; 207 a, 208 a. plantations in; 572 b.
 Presbyterian Church in, Reid's history of; 576 a. bishops of, consecrated before the Conquest; 321 a.

Ireland :
 Francis; 278 a.
 Robert, letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 294 b.

Iremonger, Humphrey, his estate; 7 a.

Ireton, deputy in Ireland; 580 a, 612 a, 613 a, 614 b.
 — his siege of Limerick; 580 a, 602 a, 615 b.
 — before Athlone; 613 a.
 — his death; 615 b.

Ironmonger, Humphrey, delinquent, and Martha; 5 a.

Irskyn, Robert de, witness; 305 a.

Irvine, A. F., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.

Irving :
 George, advocate, letters of; 310 b, 311 b, 312 a.
 Dr. Ralph, letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 293 a.
 Lieut. Robert; 595 b.

Irwin, Irwine :
 Viscount, Henry, deceased (1670), Act for trustees to sell lands of; 151 a.
 his son; 151 a.
 Mr.; 459 a.
 James, letter of; 295 b.

Isabella :
 Queen of Edw. II., refused admission into Leeds Castle; 354 a, 354 b. of Nassau, wife of Lord Arlington (1666), Act for naturalization; 101 b.

Isack, Clark v., suit of; 238 a, 238 b.

Isam, Sir Charles, MSS. of; xxi.

Islay, Lord, His Majesty's advocate; 311 a, 312 b, 315 a.

Isleworth; 133 .

Islington; 105 a.
 vicar of; 333 b.

Islip, Simon :
 canon of Lincoln, elected Abp. of Canterbury; 338 a.
 his death; ib.
 College at Oxford founded by; 324 a.
 his college in difficulties; 339 a.

Israel, Manasseh Ben, payments to; 94 b, 95 a.

Ist, Geo., letter of; 57 a.

Isted, Goodwin v., writ of error, 109 a.

Italy; 134 a.
 Prussian troops in (1708); 33 b.

Itchingham, Capt. John; 594 a, 594 b, 595 b.
 weekly charge of his troop; 598 b.

Itteringham; 334 a.

Ivon :
 Alice, wife of; 405 b.
 Stephen, son of; ib.

Iveagh, apostate; 607 a.

Ives :
 Mrs. Arabella; 291 b, 292 a.
 Edward Otto, resident at Lucknow, letters of; 288 a, 290 b, 291 a, 291 b, 292 b, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a, 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.
 — letter to; 295 a.
 Ernest, letter of; 295 b.

Ivory :
 P., letter of; 291 a.
 Capt. William, petition of; 510 a.

Ivoy, M., letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 38 b.

Ivry, M., letters of; 31 b.

Ivy, alias Jones, Edward; 392 b.

Ixworth, John, D.D.; 634 b.

J.

Jackman, Jakeman :
 Arthur; 101 b.
 — petition of; 102 a.
 John, trooper; 540 b.
 — petition of; 549 b.
 Miles, soldier; 534 b.

Jackson :
 Mr.; 196 a.
 B. H., letter of; 61 b.
 Elizabeth, accused of witchcraft; 228 b.
 H., his invention for bardening wood; 233 a.
 John; 115 a.
 — petition of; 516 a.
 — brewer, of London, will of; 335 a.
 Richard, mayor of Pontefract; 271 a, 271 b.
 — of Leicester; 430 b.
 Simon, of Wyberton, will of; 335 a.
 Lieut. Thomas; 595 b.
 Thomas, of Chester; 361 b.

Jacob :
 Sir John; 136 a.
 — answers of; 136 a.
 Robert, physician; 227 b.
 Will. of Lavenham, will of; 334 a.

Jacobites :
 proceedings against; 34 a.
 and Catholics in Ireland, treatment of; 442 a.

Jacquín, M., letters of; 38 b, 40 b.

Jahnus :
 General, letter of; 35 b.
 M., letters of; 37 a, 38 b, 40 a.

Jakes :
 Thos.; 367 b.
 — of Leicester; 420 b.

Jamaica; 50 b, 155 b, 157 a, 223 a.
 papers relating to; 47 b.

James I. :
 his accession, welcome on; 228 b.
 his accession, proclamation of, at Leicester; 428 b. letters of; 213 a, 214 a, 214 b, 434 b, 583 b.
 — concerning the Spanish match; 214 b, 215 a.
 letters patent, &c. of; 361 a, 402 b.
 charter, &c. of; 257 a, 418 a, 418 b.
 indenture by; 98 b.
 note by; 213 b.
 speeches of; 2 b, 216 b.
 warrants of; 87 a, 87 b.
 writ of; 88 b.
 his decision concerning barony of Roos; 105 b.
 loan to (1617); 147 b.

- James I.—cont.
 picture of; 257 a.
 the constable of Castile and (1604); 98 a.
- James II.:
 addresses on his accession; 230 b, 259 a. charters by; 261 b.
 letters patent of; 361 b, 362 a.
 in Warwickshire (1687); 219 b.
 French opinions of his affairs (1688); 555 a.
 his son the Prince of Wales; 555 a, 555 b. account of his flight; 555 b.
 his landing at Kinsale; 493 a.
 in Ireland; 559 b.
 his private estate in Ireland; 493 a, 497 a–499 a.
 "James the Third"; 18 b.
 James III. of Scotland, letter of; 298 b.
- James IV. of Scotland: letter of; 298 r.
 document assigned by; 307 b.
- James V. of Scotland:
 licences by; 298 b, 302 a.
 confirmation by; 308 b.
- James VI. of Scotland:
 letters of; 298 b, 299 a, 302 a, 302 b.
 his Queen's coronation; 299 a.
 charter by; 309 b.
- James VII. of Scotland; 308 b. remission for crime by; 310 a.
- James:
 Anne; 170 b.
 Esau, Phillip; 591 b.
 Harry, of Wells; 639 b.
 Lieut.-Col. W., letter of; 292 b.
- Jamestown; 463 b, 609 b. assembly in; 615 b.
 congregation; 612 b.
 letter dated at; 466 b.
 the council at; 467 a.
- Jamies, Walter, letter of; 374 b.
- Jan, Thomas, Bishop of Norwich, will of; 332 a.
- Jane, Thomas, Bishop of Norwich, his death; 333 b.
- Janssen, Henrietta, letters of; 571 a.
- Jany, the baker; 268 a.
- Jarrett, Robert, letter of; 290 b.
- Jassane, M., letters of; 40 a, 40 b.
- Jeafferson, Mr. John Cordy:
 his report on Lord Jersey's MSS.; xi, 92 b.
 — Lord Portsmouth's MSS.; xi, 60 b.
 — Lord Braybrooke's MSS.; xii, 277 a.
 — Chester records; xv, 355 a.
 — Leicester records; xvi, 403 b.
 — Pontefract records; xvi, 269 a.
 — Mr. E. Hallstone's MSS.; xiii, 636 a.
- James, Cornet; 530 b.
- Jebbes, John; 268 a.
- Jefferson, Thomas, letter of; 289 a.
- Jeffery, Sir Robert, certificate of; 392 b.
- Jeffes, John; 102 b.
- Jeffreys, Jefferies:
 Col., with Sir Theo. Jones at Lucan; 623 b.
 Mr., agent to Bishop of Derry; 58 b.
 Edgar, letter of; 291 a.
 Sir George, Chancellor, his agent; 50 b.
 — letter of (1688); 219 b.
 Henry Edgar, letters of; 290 a, 291 a.
 James, letters of; 40 a.
 Sir Jeffery, warrant by; 80 a.
 Thomas; 146 b.
- Jekyll:
 E., letter of; 57 a.
 Sir Joseph, chief justice of Chester; 392 a.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 — warrant to; 393 b.
- Jelle, Will., butcher, of London, will of; 332 b.
- Jendakever, M., letter of; 37 a.
- Jenkins:
 and Reade, action by; 228 b.
 Sir Leoline, Judge of the Admiralty; 141 b, 255 b.
 Tobie, commissioner; 275 a.
- Jenkinson:
 Mr.; 286 b.
 C., letter of; 285 a.
 J., letters of; 195 b.
 Thomas, soldier; 547 b.
- Jenkin, John, alias Pendyne, of St. Columb. will of; 335 a.
- Jenner, Dr. Edward, his petition; 233 a.
- Jenningham, Sir Henry, grant to; 94 a.
- Jennings, Jennens, Jenyns: family; 26 a.
 Admiral, letters of; 47 b.
 Mr. and Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Sir John, sheriff; 2 b, 17 b, 50 b.
 — letters of; 40 a, 50 b.
 — commission to; 2 b.
- John; 392 b.
 — grant to; 2 a.
 Nicholas, letters of; 394 a, 395 a.
- Jenyc, William, of Glastoubury, will of; 332 a.
- Jeouer, John, petition of; 517 a.
- Jepson, Jepson; 203 b.
- Col. Alex., his connexion with the 1663 plot; 502 a.
 — his interview with Sir Theophilus Jones; 576 b, 623 b.
 — his plot; 546 a.
 — traitor, his estate; 544 b.
 — grant of his goods, &c.; 547 b.
 Colonel Will., payment to; 94 b.
- Jernyn:
 Lord; 30 b.
 — letters to (1645); 211 b, 212 b.
 — his bribe (1648); 607 b.
 — his daughters; 51 a.
 Henry, master of horse to D. of York (1660); 278 b.
 — warrant for payment to; 280 b.
- Jerrard, Lord (1670); 389 b.
- Jersey; 137 b, 138 b, 142 a, 146 a, 561 a.
 papers relating to; 47 b.
 Dr. Hoskins' MSS. in; xxiii.
 royalist inhabitants of; 94 b. expected French invasion of (1708); 34 b.
 New, papers relating to; 47 b.
- Jersey, Earl of:
 MSS. of, Mr. Jeafferson's report on; xi, 92 b.
 at the Hague (1697); 100 a.
 letters of (1706); 32 a.
 letters of (1707); 32 b.
 letter of (1708); 35 b.
- Jerusalem:
 the church of; 13 a.
 St. John of, fraternity of; 301 b.
 — Hospital of; 637 a.
- Jervis:
 Mr.; 122 b.
 J., counsel for Crown (1827); 369 b.
- Jesne, Bartholomew le, witness; 407 a.
- Jessen, Thomas, petition of; 523 b.
- Jesuite, M., letter of; 40 a.
- Jesuits, the; 198 b, 387 b, 390 b.
 resolutions of House of Lords touching; 102 b.
- Jenne, M. le, letters of; 40 a.
- Jew, Jews:
 Bill, the, repeal of; 219 b.
 banished from Canterbury; 319 a. excepted from an inheritance; 408 a. address on restoration of (1785); 289 a.
- Jewels; 129 a. pawned by Charles I.; xiii, 209 a.
- Jews, John; 278 b.
- Jhonston, —, letters of; 8 a.
- Joachimi, Sir Albertus, ambassador to England; 554 a.
- Johbins, Stephen, trooper; 11 b.
- Johson, Sir Francis, Lieut. of the Tower; 89 a.
- Jocelin, his life of St. Patrick; 572 a, 582 b.
- Jocelyn, Robert, Lord Newport; 443 b.
- Jodrell:
 Mr., our clerk of Parliament; 395 a.
 Sir Paul, letters of; 293 b, 294 a.
 Paul, order by; 68 a.
- John, King:
 charters, grants, writs, &c. of; xv, 319 a, 344 a, 355 a, 356 b.
 his charter to Leicester; 416 b. confirmation of gift by; 264 a.
- John XXII., pope, bulls of; 318 a, 353 a, 354 a.
- Johnes:
 John, alias Mosse, priest; 380 b.
 Ric., player; 430 b.
- Johnson:
 —, his petition to House of Commons (1716); 396 a.
 Governor, and American independence; 196 a.
 Mr., preacher, of Leicester; 425 b.
 — deceased; 431 b.
 — candidate for Leicester; 431 a.
 Abraham, petition against; 244 b.
 Charles, medley writer; 50 b.
 Francis; 156 b.
 — examination of; 159 a.
 Frank, letter of; 290 b.
 Hugh, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 James, servant of Robert Turrett; 434 a.
 Joh; 280 a.
 John, of Dublin, petition of; 537 a.
 Lodowick, huntsman, commissions to; 280 a.
 Matthew, clerk; 12 b.
 Michael, of Chester; 361 b.
 — commissions to; 362 a.
 Peter, of the Mint; 69 a.
 Mrs. R., letters of; 291 a, 293 b.
 Richard, M.P. for Milborne Port, letters of; 288 a, 289 b, 290 a, 293 a, 293 b.

Johnson—cont.

- Capt. Robert; 596 b.
 Roger; 596 a.
 Sam., president of Royal Burrows Committee; 81 b.
 Dr. Samuel, his letter to Chas. O'Connor about Ireland; 444 a.
 Samuel, of Canterbury; 232 a.
 — his life of Sir Thomas Browne; 226 b, 232 b.
 Thomas, of Deptford; 254 a.
 — quartermaster; 596 a.
 — trooper; 525 a.
 — letter signed by; 335 a.
 Lient. Thomas; 592 b.
 Rev. William, letter of; 290 a.
 Wm., letter of; 290 b.
 Johnston, co. Lonth, burnt and plundered; 590 b.
 Johnstone:
 Col. G., letter of; 290 b.
 George, acting resident at Lucknow, letter of; 293 b.
 John, of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Mrs. (Madras), letter of; 294 b.
 Samuel, letter of; 289 b.
 Thomas, in custody; 302 a.
 Joi, Johannes de, witness; 404 b.
 Joliffe, Mr.; 167 b.
 Jones:
 Lord, Philip, payment to (1658); 95 a.
 — readings on statutes by; 584 b.
 Mr., copper coiner; 79 a.
 — counsel for East India Company; 165 b.
 Bry., report on repairs, &c. at Dublin Castle by; 526 a.
 Lieut. David; 593 b.
 Dean (circ. 1717), letter of; 57 a.
 Edm., order by; 3 a.
 Edward Ewer, letter of; 290 b.
 Ensing Ewer, letter of; 293 b.
 Elizabeth, wife of Henry of Stillorgan, petition of; 512 a.
 Gilbert, petitions of; 502 a, 530 b.
 Henry; 280 a.
 Dr. Henry, delegate from Protestant Irish Clergy; 573 a.
 — Dean of Kilmore, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b, 589 a.
 — Bp. of Clogher; 573 b.
 — accounts of; 581 b.
 — letters of; 582 a.
 — narrative written for; 599 a.
 Henry, of Dublin, petition of; 541 b.
 — of Stillorgan, petition of; 502 a.
 — and Elizabeth, petition of; 502 a.
 — lands granted to; 99 a.
 James, agent for Col. Wm. Legg; 551 b.
 Ensing James; 591 b.
 John; 155 b, 156 a, 156 b, 157 a, 159 b.
 — information of; 157 a.
 — waterman; 279 b.
 Lient. John; 591 b.
 Col. or Col. Michael; 593 b, 606 a, 607 a, 611 a, 613 a.
 — correspondence of; 581 b, 582 a.
 — governor of Dublin; 576 b.
 — his surrender of Dublin, &c.; 610 a.
 — petitions of; 510 a, 539 a.
 — petition to; 582 a.
 — his answer to petition; 521 a.
 — lands granted to; 99 a.
 — commander in Leinster, petition to; 590 a.
 Nevil, surveyor-general of Ireland, prosecution of; 177 a.
 — his expulsion from office; 178 a.
 Capt. Oliver; 592 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Owen, mercer of Chester, certificate touching; 361 a.
 Philip; 154 a.
 Richard; 4 a, 7 b.
 — petition of; 544 a.
 — of Littleington, articles against; 5 a.
 — of Southwark, proposal of; 77 a, 78 a.
 Sir Samuel; 139 a.
 — petition, &c. of; 139 b.
 Sir Theophilus; 582 a, 605 b.
 — petitions of; 512 b, 541 a.
 — at Dundalk; 599 a.
 — his march to Dublin; 600 b.
 — Fines taken by; 602 a.
 — grant to; 551 a.
 — his troop, &c.; 503 a, 510 a, 518 b, 546 b, 549 b, 551 b.
 — his narrative of conference with Col. Alex. Jephson; 576 b, 623 b.
 Thomas, trooper; 539 b.
 Lient. Thomas; 594 a.
 Lient.-Col. W., letter of; 293 b.
 William (servant of Lord Hatton); 103 a, 103 b.
 Sir Wm., the Oriental scholar, &c., letters of; 288 a.
 — suit against; 245 a.
 — soldier; 540 b.

Jonquiere, Mons. de la, ensign; 62 b.
 Jonsun, Ben, poems by; 584 a.
 Joys, John, of Wells; 639 b.

Jordan Castle; 606 a, 606 b.

Jordan:

- Bishop of Alba; 266 a.
 of Flockton, his son William; 636 b.
 —, a tailor, of Dublin; 489 a.
 Lieut. John; 591 a.
 Sir Joseph, of the Trinity House; 256 b.
 Margaret, of Lowestoft, will of; 334 a.
 William, of Burton; 414 a.
 — petition of; 526 b.
 — — report on; ib.
 Joseph, Emperor, letter of (1706); 24 b
 Jourdain, William, soldier; 545 b.
 Joy:
 Capt.; 255 b.
 Benjamin, letter of; 290 b.
 Joyce, Thomas, clerk; 4 a.
 Joyner:
 Margery; 157 b.
 Robert; ib.
 Juan or John, Don; 29 a, 30 b.
 — memorials to; 29 b, 30 a.
 Jubilee, the Roman (1300), indulgencies granted to pilgrims at; 345 b.
 Judson, Ralph, certificate signed by; 384 b.
 Judy, Walter, of Walsingham, will of; 334 a.
 Juilliers, land of; 553 b.
 Juliers, Cleves and; 211 b.
 Jurieu:
 letters of; 16 b, 36 a.
 his charges against Bayle; 563 b.
 Jus, Wm. de; 367 a.
 "Justus from Colnyll," packet so directed to Sir H. Nevill; 282 b.
 Juvenis, Stephen, gift by; 323 a.
 Juxon:
 Sir Wm., executor of will of Archbishop Juxon; 113 b.
 — Act to enable him to recover part of the archbishop's estate; 113 b, 117 a, 147 a.
 — petitions of; 117 a, 147 a.
 — order touching; 147 a.

K.

- Kagworth, Richard clericus de; 370 a.
 Kalb, Baron de, letter of; 288 b.
 Kaldrogh lands; 505 a.
 Kanik, forest of; 406 b, 407 a.
 Kanmere, Lady C.; 571 b.
 Kape Thamis, parish of; 2 a.
 Kappagh lands; 505 a.
 Katarlagh; 617 a.
 Katherine, Queen, mother of Hen. VI., indenture by; 414 b.
 Katterlyn, territory of, Rathe in; 300 b.
 Kaunitz, countersignature; 12 a.
 Kavanagh:
 —, his regiment; 493 b.
 Major Charles; 617 a.
 Daniel Oge; 604 a.
 Dermott McEdmond; 514 a.
 Gerald McEdmond, of Ballyknock; ib.
 — McMurtagh; ib.
 See Kavanagh.
 Kay:
 Sir David, doctor of law, examination before; 307 b.
 Sir John; 87 b.
 Kearnan, Capt. Thos., letter of; 290 b
 Keating:
 C., letters of; 289 b, 290 b.
 Geoffrey, his history of Ireland; 572 a, 582 b.
 Maurice, grant to; 505 a.
 — petition of; 307 b.
 Kebeelle, Thomas, of Leicester; 420 a.
 Keeble, Commissiouer; 124 b.
 Kecck, Mr., counsellor; 251 b.
 Keeke, Samuel, patent to; 258 b.
 Keeling, Chief Justice; 155 a.
 Keene:
 Dr., letter to; 245 a.
 Jeffrey, usher to James I.; 441 b.
 Keere, Mr.; 207 b.
 Kefford, Anthony; 4 b.
 Kegan, Conly, petition of; 546 b.
 Kegworth or Ratelyff Green; 416 b.
 Keife or Guift:
 Nicholas; 115 a.
 — petition of; 115 a.
 — order touching; 115 b.
 Keighley:
 J. F. or J. J., letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 291 a.
 Tho.; 74 a.
 Keighrau, Pat., of Dublin; 459 a.

Keightley, Thomas, commission to; 280 b.

Keith :

Mr.; 220 b.

Robert, in Barnhill; 301 a.

— of Dunnottar, Earl Marischal; 298 a.

— his daughter Margaret; ib.

Sir William, Great Marischal; 297 b, 305 b.

— his son, Sir Robert; 305 b.

Kelet, Will., clerk in Chancery, will of; 333 a.

Kelett, Thomas, of Horsham, will of; 333 a.

Kelinge :

E., letter of; 247 a.

Thomas, goldsmith; 65 a.

Kellam, Frank, of Pontefract; 275 b.

Kellan, John, petition on behalf of; 500 b.

Kellen, John; 533 a.

Kellew, Jolteram de; 356 a.

Kellistown, co. Kildare; 508 a.

Kello, Samuel; 583 b.

Kells; 495 b.

Kellum :

Brigadier G., letter of; 35 b.

Genl., letter of; 57 a.

Kelly :

Dr., master of Ewelme Almshouse; 630 b.

Lieut., letter of; 290 b.

Capt.; 616 a.

Mr., historian of Leicester; 403 b, 404 a, 425 a, 430 a.

Lient. B. H., letter of; 294 b.

Charles, of Rome; 490 a, 491 b.

Dominick, charged with murder of Sir Edmundbury

Godfrey; 391 a.

Edmond, his lands in Roscommon; 531 a.

alias Osbalston, Elizabeth; 535 b.

Hugh McTeige; 518 a.

John; 545 b.

Col. John, petition of; 503 b.

Loghlin; 532 b.

— McEdmond; 518 a.

Mrs. Miriam, letter of; 294 a.

Teige; 518 a.

— petition of; 504 b.

Lieut. Thomas; 593 b.

William; 545 b.

— petition of; 522 b.

Kelmeron, Thomas de, witness; 305 a.

Kelsey upon Humber; 238 b, 239 a.

Kelsey, Mr.; 77 a.

Kelseye, Robert le, gift by; 323 a.

Kelso and Ferne, Commendator of; 302 a.

Kelston, Alan, of Wells-by-the-Sea, will of; 334 a.

Kelureny lands; 505 a.

Kelveden, rioters at; 46 b.

Kelyng, John, clerk, grant to; 415 b.

Kembdie, Duncan, of Aberdeen; 301 a.

Kemp :

one, a bailiff, killed; 46 b.

T., letter of; 78 b.

Kempis, Thomas a; 583 a.

Kempson, estate in; 3 b, 5 a, 5 b.

Kempton, William, of Aldborough, captive; 243 a.

Kempton, Sir John, of the Trinity House; 255 a.

Kensworth, alias Penke, John, schoolmaster; 272 a.

Kendal; 333 a.

Duchess of, letter of; 49 b.

— letters to (1720); 57 a, 57 b.

Kendall, John, prior of St. John; 265 a.

Kenilworth, charter dated at; 2 a.

Kenmare, Lord (1762); 474 a.

Kenn, Christopher, justice, co. Somerset; 639 b.

Kennaston, Colonel, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.

Kennaway :

Capt., afterwards Sir John, resident at Hyderabad, letters of; 288 a-295 a, passim.

— letter to; 295 a.

Richard, letter of; 290 a.

Kennedy :

Colonel; 609 b.

Alexander, of Urwel; 306 b.

— and Gilbert; 307 b.

H., letter of; 7 b.

Hugh, archdeacon, witness; 305 b.

Sir Hugh, provost of St. Mary's of St. Andrew's; 306 b.

J., letter of; 289 b.

John, licence by; 306 b.

Lieut. Richard; 592 a.

Sir Richard, baron of Exchequer; 537 b.

— baron of the Exchequer, report by; 511 b.

— certificate by; 532 a.

— document signed by; 503 a.

Robert, a trustee; 541 b.

Lieut.-Col. Thomas, letter of; 35 b.

Cornet Thomas; 596 b.

Kennelly, George, of Dublin; 528 b.

Kennix, Margaret, a quack; 227 b.

Kensington; 142 a, 219 b.

letters, &c. dated at; 13 a, 27 a, 41 a, 42 b, 43 b, 51 b.

Kensington—cont.

letters dated at; 558 a, 559 a, 559 b.

Council Chamber, documents dated from; 393 b, 394 a, 395 b.

court at, document dated from; 395 b.

Holland House; 225 a.

— letter dated at; 219 b.

Kent :

deeds relating to; 264 b.

dragoons furnished by; 8 b.

insurrection in (1450), declaration of grounds of; 266 b.

ravaged by the Danes; 324 a.

sea encroachments in; 248 a.

justices of assize; 239 a.

Earl of, false pedigree of; 581 b.

— (1473), Edm. Grey; 264 b.

— Antony (1666), writ of summons to; 101 a.

— (1670); 153 b.

Duke of, "the Bugg;" 19 a.

— (c. 1717), letter of; 57 a.

Geoffrey de, of Leicester; 411 a.

John, corrody to; 339 b.

Nicholas de, of Leicester; 408 b.

Thomas, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.

— serjeant; 529 b, 538 a, 542 a.

Kent de Souch, Castle of; 411 a.

Kenvirskrath, co. Louth; 590 b.

Kenynnton, document dated from; 359 a.

Kenyon, Lloyd, Attorney-General, opinion by; 233 a.

Keogh, Doctor; 185 a.

Keppel, M., letters of; 40 a.

Keppilfox, M., letters of; 38 b.

Keppler, his Ephemerides; 218 b, 219 a.

Kerikone, Lieut. Edw.; 592 b.

Kerkes :

John, of Chester; 361 b.

Samuel, of Chester; 361 b.

Kerkham, Thomas; 596 a.

Kerr :

Lieut.-Col., letter of; 37 a.

Lord Mark, letters of; 35 b, 37 a.

Lord John, letter of; 35 b.

Thos. Wm., letter of; 291 a.

Kerrivan, Patrick, petition of; 529 b.

Kerry :

lands in; 501 b.

army in (1650); 601 b.

History of; 572 b, 592 b.

Kersey; 334 a.

Kertelyng :

John, clerk; 268 a.

— receiver-general; 268 a.

Kervan, Capt. Dominick, petition of; 551 b.

Kesteyen, Robert, his wife; 422 a.

Ketene :

Geoffrey de, gift by; 408 b.

Roger of, his widow Alicia; 408 b.

Kettleby, co. Leicester; 65 b.

Kettleby, co. Lincoln; 434 a.

Ken, Hugh le, or le Cook, of Dublin; 265 b.

Kevanagh :

Charles; 605 a, 608 a, 610 a, 614 b, 615 b, 616 b.

Daniel; 614 b, 617 a, 617 b.

Dermott; 603 b.

Sir Morgan; 603 a.

— killed; 604 a.

— See Kavanagh, Cavanagh.

Key :

Beatrice; 4 a.

Dr., master of Ewelme Almshouse; 630 a.

Thomas, of South Petherton, will of; 332 a.

Keylin, James; 614 b.

Keylwey, Robert, commissioner; 271 b.

Keyry, O'Connor, proceedings of; 603 a.

Keysersfeldt, M., letter of; 37 a.

Keyshee, parish of; 10 a.

Keysy, Henry, potecary, of Cambridge, will of; 334 b.

Khanpoor, mutinous movement at (1796); 296 a.

Khaun, Hyder Beg; 292 a, 292 b.

Kidderminster; 333 a.

Kiddington, Notts; 420 b.

Kidenot, William, witness; 330 a.

Kidderminster, Edmund; 139 a.

Kielmaussege, Madame, letter of; 57 a.

Kilbeg; 495 b.

Kilbegan; 606 a, 607 b, 609 b.

— abbot of; 615 a.

Kilbirny; 309 a.

Kilbride; 545 b.

Kilcolgan; 607 b, 613 a.

— yielding of; 613 a.

Kilcoquhar; 304 a.

— maniments at; ib.

— lordship of; 305 b.

Kilcullen; 551 a.

Kildare; 616 b.

English garrison at, list of, in 1648; 590 b.

Kildare—cont.

county, James II.'s lands in; 497 b.
 — list of lands in, held in custodiam by the Earl of Kildare; 508 a.
 — losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 — garrisons in (1648); 594 b.
 — specification of lands in; 520 b.
 — papers relating to affairs in (1798–9); 584 a.
 Bishop of (1648), Geoghegan; 609 b.
 — (1663), Thos. Price; 536 a.
 — (1712); 74 a.
 the Corporal of; 217 b.
 Earl of (1396); 378 b.
 — his regiment (1648); 594 a.
 — weekly charge of; 597 b.
 — Wentworth, petition of (1663); 501 a, 507 b.
 — lands held in custodiam by; 507 b.
 — his troop at Carlow; 522 a, 534 b, 538 a, 547 a.
 — letters of (1714); 49 a, 58 b, 59 a.
 — drawn to the side of the Papists (1751); 177 b.
 — made Duke of Leinster; ib., note.
 — his relations with Lord Hartington; 179 a.
 Earldom of; 588 b.
 Kilfenora, Dean of, Neptune Blood; 516 a.
 Kilhill; 301 a.
 Kilkenny; 534 a, 609 b, 611 b, 617 a, 617 b.
 — letter dated at; 495 b.
 — siege of; 611 b.
 — St. John's; 317 b.
 — Rothe's Register of; xxiii.
 — licences to trade in; 501 b.
 — conventicle at; 521 a.
 — assizes at; 543 b.
 — Castle, MSS. at, Mr. Gilbert's report on; 499 b.
 — taking of; 605 b.
 county, governor of; 58 b.
 — losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 — James II.'s lands in; 497 b.
 — specification of lands in; 520 b.
 Killala, Bishop of (1701), O'Rourke; 442 a.
 Killalee:
 — Bishop of, E. Worth, petitions of; 501 a, 522 b, 536 a.
 — (1650); 613 a.
 — (1712); 74 a.
 Killaloe, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.
 Killany, co. Louth; 590 b.
 Killcocke, lands and customs in; 505 a.
 Killconell parish, co. Galway, lands in; 532 b.
 Killcoole, in barony of Foart; 536 b.
 Killcorby; 394 b.
 Kilderrill parish, co. Galway, lands in; 532 b.
 Killeigh, monastery of; 217 b.
 Killeyneane, manor of; 548 b.
 Killgasse parish, co. Roscommon, lands in; 540 a.
 Killgyver parish, co. Mayo, lands in; 526 b.
 Killian parish, co. Galway, lands in; 532 b.
 Killigrew, Killigrew:
 — Dr., chaplain to Jas., Duke of York, order to pay; 281 a.
 — Mr.; 215 b.
 — Mrs.; 278 a.
 — letter of; 57 a.
 — Sir Henry; 282 b.
 — letter of; ib.
 — Henry; 278 b.
 — Dr. Henry; 278 b.
 — Sir John, petition of; 239 a
 — patent to; 241 a.
 — Sir Peter; 142 b, 217 b, 254 b.
 — Thomas, letter of; 585 a.
 — of Penryn, will of; 333 a.
 — Thomas, groom of His Majesty's bedchamber (1667), petition of; 115 a.
 Killihie; 613 b.
 Killingrowle, co. Louth, troops at; 590 b.
 Killingsley, Capt. John; 595 a.
 Killinvoey parish, co. Roscommon, lands in; 518 a.
 Killmainham prison; 520 b, 539 a, 541 b.
 Killmeede, co. Kildare; 508 a.
 Killnebooly, co. Kildare; 508 a.
 Killnecargey, co. Wicklow, garrison at, in 1648; 592 a, note, 592 b.
 Killnennas parish, tithes of; 535 b.
 Killosbragh, co. Galway, lands of; 522 b.
 Killoskehan; 535 b.
 Killsallchan; 603 a.
 Kilmastrany, co. Sligo; 442 a.
 Kilmainehed, letters dated from; 377 a, 377 b.
 Kilmallocke:
 — capture of; 601 a.
 — Knocklong near; ib.
 Kilmallog; 580 a.
 Kilmarnock, Lord (1746), trial of; 288 b.
 Kilmore; 615 a.
 — Dean of, H. Jones; 572 b.
 — and Ardagh, Bishop of, R. Maxwell, petitions of; 501 a, 521 a.

Kilpatrick:
 — parish of; 308 b.
 — barony of; 309 b.
 Kilquhuus; 305 b.
 Kilsaghlín, garrison at (1648); 594 a.
 Kilsuire, co. Meath, rectory, dispute about; 538 b.
 Kilwillington:
 — commendator of; 309 a, 309 b.
 — abbey of; 308 b, 309 a.
 — abbot of, Alexander; 309 a.
 Kimpston, Colonel; 592 a.
 Kimston, Ensign Roger; 592 a.
 Kinaston, Edward, letter of; 379 a.
 Kincaidine:
 — assessment for; 299 a, 303 b.
 — lands in, valuation of; 301 a.
 — Janitor de; ib.
 Kincraggy, Sir James, precept by; 307 a.
 Kindersley, N. E., letter of; 294 b.
 Kinston:
 — Ensign Homfrey; 592 a.
 — John, of Chester; 361 b.
 King:
 — the, MS. book on his dignities, &c.; 208 h.
 — Dr.; 455 a.
 — Archbishop, MSS. of; xxi.
 — Mr.; 131 b.
 — solicitor; 387 b.
 — Bartholomew, of Leicester, ejectment of; 418 b.
 — Edward, of Gray's Inn, petition of; 116 b.
 — patent to; 248 a.
 — Sir Edward, discussion at his table; 468 a.
 — Capt. Francis, petitions of; 511 b, 517 a.
 — Sir Henry; 470 a.
 — John, licence to; 631 a.
 — Oliver, Bp. of Bath and Wells, will of; 335 b.
 — his death; 336 a.
 — Father Paul; 608 b.
 — letter of; 612 a.
 — Sir Peter, justice; 276 a.
 — Sir Peter, Sir R. Onslow, and; 35 a.
 — chief justice (1715), letter of; 40 b.
 — Ralph, charges by; 582 a.
 — Sarah, relict of Deane, petition of; 518 b.
 — Thomas; 635 a.
 — Lieut.-Col. W. Ross, MSS. of; xxi.
 — Lieut. William; 593 b.
 Kingdon, Mrs., letters to; 25 b.
 Kingest, Richard de; 357 a.
 Kinglega, Richard de; 356 a.
 Kingmelle Stone; 627 b.
 King's Bench Prison; 105 b, 119 a, 119 b, 121 b, 165 a.
 — prisoners in, petition of; 153 a.
 — Act to prevent abuses in (1668); 126 a.
 King's Bench, Chief Justice of (1670), sickness of; 147 a, 149 b.
 King's County:
 — James II.'s lands in; 497 b.
 — plantation in; 581 b, 582 a.
 — gold in; 581 a.
 — specification of lands in; 520 b.
 — Pole-money in; 546 a.
 — losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 King's Lynn, Norfolk:
 — Bill to improve port of; 392 a.
 — document dated from; 392 a.
 King's Somborne, Hampshire; 263 b.
 Kingsclere; 630 a.
 Kingsdown, sea-mark upon; 244 b.
 Kingsland, Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Kingsmyll, Dame Bridgett, petition of; 109 b.
 Kingston-on-Hull. See Hull.
 Kingston-on-Thames; 332 b, 333 a, 334 b, 335 b.
 — corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 — free school at; 431 b.
 Kingston Chapel, Dorset; 208 b.
 Kingston Lacy, Dorset, Mr. Baukes's MSS. at, report on; xiii., 208 a.
 Kingston Seymour; 334 b.
 Kingston, Kingstown:
 — Lord (1663); 505 a, 505 b, 539 b.
 — commissary general in Ireland (1663); 522 a.
 Kingswood, rioters from; 46 b.
 Kinlet; 334 b.
 Kinloch, Joseph Yorke, letter of; 293 a.
 Kinnaird, Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 Kinnard, Capt. Peter; 593 a.
 Kinniff:
 — tenement of; 300 b.
 — parish of; 299 b, 303 b.
 — Easter; 301 a.
 Kinnoul, Earl of, MSS. of; xxi.
 Kinsale; 102 a, 561 b, 562 a, 563 a.
 — James II.'s landing at; 493 a.
 — merchant fleet at; 561 a.
 — natives of (1660); 99 a.

Kinsale—cont.

drawing of; 22 a.
 expected landing of the French at (1779); 200 b.
 Kinsale, lands in; 506 a.
 Kirby Hall, co. York, manor; 162 a, 162 b.
 Kirkby Mallory, co. Leicester; 420 b.
 Kirkby:

Colonel, governor of Chester, letter to; 74 b.
 Aldred of; 636 b.
 Elizabeth, Lady of Ilorton, monition to; 337 a.
 Henry de, witness; 270 b.
 R. de, heir of John; 349 a.

Kirkcudbright, Burgh of, MSS. of; xxiii.

Kirke:

Col., letter of; 38 b.
 Consul Thomas, letters of; 47 b.
 Kirketoun, Peter de, witness; 270 b.
 Kirkewoode, Richard, chaplain; 413 b.
 Kirkforthir; 304 a, 305 b, 306 a, 307 b.

Kirkham:

document dated at; 353 b.
 Wm., 279 a.

Kirkland, Lt.-Col. Moses, letter of; 289 a.

Kirkley; 334 a.

Kirkpatrick:

John, letter of; 290 b.
 Capt. Wm., resident with Mahajee Scindiah, letters of;
 288 b-292 b, passim.

Kirkstall convent; xiii., 637 a

Kirvan, Patrick, petition of; 543 a.

Kirwan, Bishop; 476 a.

Kitchen, Robert; 240 b.

Knapton, Lord, Sir John, his daughter; 190 a, note.

Knaresborough, house of St. Robert at; 415 a.

Knecht, A., letters of; 289 a.

Kneller, Sir Godfrey, letter to; 26 b.

Kneyl, M. le Col., letter of; 37 a.

Knyghtecote, John de, of Leicester; 410 b.

Knight:

Edward, licence farmer, petition of; 517 a.
 Capt. Edward; 529 a.
 Ensign Edward; 529 b.
 Francis, alderman of Bristol, letter of; 379 b.
 —, petitions of; 521 b, 541 a.
 Henry, of Deal, 256 a.
 John, deceased, Act for settling lands of; 151 b.
 — soldier; 534 b.
 Richard, of Wells; 639 b.
 Robert, seaman, petition of; 509 a.
 Thomas and Marie his wife, petition of; 383 a.
 Valentine; 105 a.
 William; 374 b.
 — yeoman of the Crown, will of; 333 a.

Knighthley:

Mr.; 9 a.
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 R., letters of; 8 a, 8 b.
 Sir R., Bart., MSS. of; xxi.

Knighton:

Wm.; 4 b.
 or Knynton Field, land in; 408 b.

Knigt, Thos.; 397 a.

Knock; 537 b.

Knockfergus; 159 b, 398 b.

governor of, certificate of (1601); 380 a.

Knocklong, near Kilmallocke; 601 a.

Knockmoy rectory, dioc. Tuam; 525 a.

Knockroe, concealed lands of; 531 a.

Knockworreh, concealed lands of; ib.

Knokyn, Roger, of Newbury, will of; 333 a.

Knogue, town of; 36 b.

Knollys:

Lord, letter of; 213 a.
 — document signed by (1611); 88 b.
 Fr., letter of; 431 a.
 Rich., draper, of London, will of; 392 b.
 Sir William, of the fraternity of St. John of Jerusalem;
 301 b.

Knott, Richard, of St. Katherine, mariner; 241 a.

Knottesford; 397 a.

Knottingley:

lands in; 276 a.
 mills, co. York; 274 a.
 Knowle, admiral; 223 a.

Knowles:

John, of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Mr. R. B., his report on Lord Denbigh's manuscripts;
 xi., 552 a, et seq.
 Sir Rob.; 165 b.

Knowsley; 380 b.

James; 385 b.

— petition of; 381 b.

Knox:

John, of co. Longford; 523 b.
 — attainted of murder; 524 a.

Knox—cont.

Katherine, married to Claud Hamilton; 308 b.
 W., letters of; 195 b, 200 a.

Knogle, John, master of Lingfield College, will of; 334 b.

Knudson:

Col., letters of; 289 b, 290 b.
 Capt., letter of; 290 a.

Knyghtcote, Roger de, of Leicester; 412 a.

Knypes, William, jurymen; 89 a.

Knyphansen, Lieut.-Gen., letter of; 289 a.

Knytekote, John de, of Leicester; 421 a.

Knyvet, John, Esq.; 268 a.

Koeb, M. de, letter of; 37 a.

Konigsegg, Comte, letters of (1706); 31 b.

Koniz, M., letter of; 40 a.

Korbreyliiss, M., letter of; 38 b.

Koseritz, Col., letter of; 37 a.

Kraft, M., letter of; ib.

Krayer, M., letter of; 40 a.

Kybell, Thomas, serjeant-at-law, grant to; 415 b.

Kyd:

Col., letters of; 290 a, 291 a, 294 a.

Col. Robert, letter of; 293 b.

Lieut.-Col., letter of; 290 b.

Capt. A., letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 294 b.

Kyle, Samuel, letter of; 289 b.

Kylligrew. See Killigrew.

Kynarton, near Chester; 358 a.

Kynaston, John, sheriff of Chester; 361 b.

Kynderton, document dated from; 375 b.

Kyneale, manor of; 120 a.

Kyninmond:

Sir James of, charter by; 307 a.

Sir John; 307 b.

Kynloch, Sir John of, witness; 307 b.

Kynwle, rector of; 305 a.

Kyrekham, Henry, son of Thomas; 377 a.

Kyrle, Sir Richard; 519 b.

Kyrn, Henry, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.

Kyrton, John, will of; 335 b.

Kysing, Thomas, mercer, of London, will of; 334 b.

Kyte, John, naif; 626 a.

L.

La Bastie, M., letter of; 38 a.

La Bene, Major, letter of; 37 a.

La Bruere, document dated at; 346 b.

La Chaise, the Jesuit; 562 b.

La Fere, letter dated at; 28 a.

La Gard, Madam; 278 b.

La Hogue Bay; 35 a.

La Lomelline; 27 a.

La Mantoule, camp at, letters from; 19 b.

La Roche, Mons. and Mrs.; 278 b.

La Touche, Lieut. of the Tower; 88 a.

La Touche, Gladowe & Co., Dublin bankers; 196 b.

La Vie, Mrs., letters of; 57 a.

Labadie, Madame, her flight with Queen Mary; 555 b.

Labarre, M., letter of; 37 a.

Labbe, Henry; 370 a.

Labouchardiere, Mon., letters of; 293 b, 294 b.

"Labourers' wages the test of a nation's wealth" (1669);
 134 a.

Lacam, Benjn., letters of; 291 a, 292 b, 293 a.

Lacauls, Mrs. Catherine, warrant for payment to; 280 b.

Lackie or Leckie, Rev. William, and the Plot of 1663; 502 a,
 502 b.

Lackie, Isabel, petition of; 550 a.

Lacy:

Alesia de, Countess of Lincoln, inq. p. m. of; 411 b.

Gilbert de, witness; 270 b.

Henry de, Earl of Lincoln; 269 a.

— charter by; xvi., 270 b.

Roger de, charters of; 269 a, 270 a.

William, of Wells; 639 b.

Lacys, pedigree of the; 586 b, note.

Lad:

Mr., of Yarmouth; 240 a.

Robert, of Eynesford; 337 a.

Ladisferoun, co. Fife, lands of; 308 a.

Laffen, John and Stephen; 543 b.

Lagare, Henry, son of Wolno de; 235 a.

Laghlin, Bishop of:

(1643), E. Dempisie; 604 b.

(1650); 613 a.

(1651); 616 a.

(1652), E. Dempsey; 618 a.

Laghton, John de; 367 a.

- Lahy, John; 545 a.
- Lai, Wm. de; 357 a.
- Laing, Malcolm, and the "Ossian" controversy; 444 b.
- Laird, John, letter of; 290 b.
- Laisne, Peter, writing master, commission to; 280 b.
- Lalesse, Richard; 607 b.
- Lalling, Essex, manor of; 322 b.
- Lalo, Col. S. de, letter of; 35 b.
- Lamartinerie, M., letters of; 35 b, 37 a.
- Lambard :
 William, collections by; 554 a.
 Lady; 569 b.
- Lambart, Sergeant-major, weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
- Lambe :
 —, a quack; 229 a.
 Alice, of Wells (by the sea), will of; 333 b
 John, doctor; 229 a.
 — tyler, of London, will of; 333 a.
 — of Leicester; 412 a.
 Thomas, letter of; 386 a.
- Lamberherst; 340 b.
- Lamberg, Cardinal, letters of; 31 b, 35 b.
- Lambert :
 A., letter of; 289 b.
 —, letter of; 571 b.
 Col., letter of; 37 a.
 John, major-general, letter of; 274 b.
 — of Sutton in Holland, will of; 332 a.
 — Lord, major-general (1654), letter to; 386 b.
 M., letters of; 37 a, 38 b.
 Milo, mayor of Leicester; 415 b.
 Sir Oliver; 381 b, 382 a.
 Sergeant-major; 594 b.
 —, Burgess of Leicester, his house burnt; 406 a, 406 b.
- Lambeth; 117 a, 139 a, 155 a, 332 b.
 documents dated at; 27 b, 353 a, 625 b.
 Horse, letter dated at; 62 a, 218 a.
 Library; 100 b.
 — MSS. in; xxiii.
 College of Secular Canons at; 317 b, 320 a.
 Simon Forman in; 228 b.
- Lambintoun, parson of; 306 b.
- Lamkin, Thos., waterman; 279 b.
- Lamley church; 267 b.
- Lamley, co. Nottingham; 432 a.
- Lamott, Michael, trooper; 538 a.
- Lamplewe, Mr., lighthouse keeper; 244 b.
- Lancaster :
 Assizes; 71 b.
 inquisition held at; 417 b. county, woollen manufactures in; 208 a.
 — ship money; 383 a.
 Duchy of, chancellors of; 51 a.
 — chancellor of, warrant to (1605); 87 a.
 — court room of; 70 a.
 — privileges of tenants; 271 b.
 Duke of (9 Ric. II.) v. Sir John Stanley; 169 b.
 — (1447), John, his son, Bp. of Winchester; 635 b.
 — Henry (Edw. III.), grants to and by; 411 a, 411 b, 412 a.
 — — his death (35 Edw. III.); 417 b.
 Earl of, Thomas, warrant by (2 Ed. II.); 411 a.
 — letter to (1314); 352 b.
 — — his intercession with the Pope for the canonization of Abp. Winchelsey; 353 b, 354 a.
- Land Guard Fort, letters dated at; 23 b.
- Land :
 Tax, the; 35 b. value of (1669); 134 a, 134 b.
- Land's End, the; 257 a.
- Lands, abbey, regulations for division and cultivation of, &c.; 322 a, 322 b.
- Lane :
 Mr., murdered by his servant; 229 b.
 Sir George, secretary to Lord Lieut. of Ireland, petition of; 501 b.
 — petition of; 503 b.
 — secretary to Duke of Ormonde, petition of; 550 a.
 Sir Richard, petitions of; 529 b, 534 b, 537 a, 540 a, 543 b, 545 b.
 — — plaintiff; 551 a.
 Sieur de, letters of and to; 29 a.
- Lanesborough, Lord :
 (1773); 193 b.
 (1774); 195 a.
- Laufance, Abp., the anniversary of his death, distributions on; 326 a.
- Langalerie, M., letter of; 40 a.
- Langar, co. Nottingham; 432 b.
- Langdale, Mathew, lands held by; 520 a.
- Langdon :
 manor of; 326 b.
 abbot of; 336 b, 348 a.]
- Langelee, Geoffrey de, witness; 1 b.
- Langeleye :
 charter dated at; 2 a.
 W. de; 2 a.
- Langley, Marquise de, letters of; 35 b, 37 a.
- Langford, Hercules; 535 b.
- Langham Water, gold in; 84 b.
- Langham, Essex, manor; 628 a.
- Langham, Sir James; 128 a.
- Langhes, Fiefs de; 22 a.
- Langley, documents dated at; 349 a, 353 a.
- Langousque, camp at; 218 b.
- Langrege, Elizabeth; 234 a.
- Langrenis, Melgum and, near Largo Law, claim to lauds of; 308 a.
- Langrish :
 Thomas; 137 a.
 — petition of; 137 a.
- Langston, Lieut.-General, letter of; 35 b.
- Langton :
 Christopher, expelled from the College of Physicians; 226 b.
 Sir John, and Appulby manor; 627 a.
 John, letter to; 384 b.
 Simon, brother of the archbishop; 330 a.
 Thomas, affidavit of; 125 b.
 — Bishop of Salisbury; 262 b.
 — Bishop of Winchester, will of; 332 a.
 Walter de, Bp. of Lichfield; 351 b.
- Langoullers :
 Clementia de, grant by; 627 a.
 — her son Guy; ib.
- Lanier, Sir John; 556 a.
- Laniot, Piers, hostage of Beauvoys; 407 b.
- Lankeet, J. W., letter of; 295 b.
- Laund, Lieut. Henry; 595 b.
- Lanniere, one, lease to; 242 a.
- Lapidge, William, of Pontefract; 276 a.
- Lansdon, Madame; 565 b.
- Lansdowne, Marquis of, MSS. of; xxi.
- Lanthony :
 Stratford, documents of; 581 a.
 prior of; 584 b.
- Lapham, Wm.; 370 b.
- Lapworth; 434 a.
- Laragheor Rectory, co. Meath; 537 b.
- Largo; 304 b, 308 a.
 Law, in Fife; 304 b.
 — lands near, claim to; 308 a.
- Larken, quartermaster; 596 b.
- Larkins, Wm. :
 accountant-general under Warren Hastings, letters of; 288 b.
 letters of; 290 a, 293 a, 293 b.
- Larmerer, John, mayor of Chester (1394); 370 b.
- Larpent, John, junr., letters of; 286 b, 287 b.
- Larraghs, co. Kildare; 506 a.
- Lascells, George, signature in a MS.; 101 a.
- Lasci, Walter de, charter of; 370 a.
- Laspiur, M., letter of; 35 b.
- Lateran, document dated at; 350 a.
- Latham, superiority of; 304 a, 305 b, 306 a, 306 b.
- Lathom; 140 a.
 document dated from; 375 a.
 "my (Earl of Derby's) house," document dated from (1594); 376 b.
 John; 272 b.
- Latham, Lieut. Thos.; 592 a.
- Latteragh parish, tithes of; 535 b.
- Lattre, Jean de; 280 b.
- Latmyer, Edith, of Stalbridge, will of; 335 a.
- Land :
 Abp. Wm., notice of; 234 a.
 See Canterbury, Abp. of.
- Lauder :
 John, archdeacon of Teviotdale; 309 a. chevalier; 563 b.
- Lauderdale :
 Duke of, John, warrant by (1679); 314 b.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xxi.
 — John, second, letters of (1640-41); 315 a.
 — General of the Edinburgh Mint, representation by (1708); 83 a.
 — letter of (1709); 81 b.
 — Charles (1718); 82 a.
 — warrant to (1718); 83 b.
 — letter of (1729); 84 a.
- Launaens :
 William, French doctor; 227 b.
 — licence to; ib.
- Launce :
 John; 634 b.
 Robert, of Moudham, will of; 334 a.
- Lannecon Corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
- Laund, co. Leicester, Convent of St. John the Baptist, agreement of Prior of; 370 b.
- Laune, Peter, commission "to be tutor to Duke of Cambridge," &c. (1666); 279 b.
- Launnesse, Richard, of Leicester; 404 b.

- Launoy, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Lauragais, Comte de; 236 a.
 Laurence, Mr., letter of; 57 a.
See Lawrence.
 Laurencekirk in the Mearns; 299 b, 304 a.
 Laurens, Will., of Boxted, Essex, will of; 333 a.
 Laussee, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Lauzan, M. de; 555 b, 559 b.
 Lawell, Thomas, of Lincolnshire, will of; 334 b.
 Lavenham; 334 a, 335 b.
 Laviernie, M., letter of; 37 a.
 Law;
 John, letter of; 295 b.
 Thos., letters of; 290 b, 292 b.
 Lawdesfroune, co. Fife, lands of; 308 a.
 Lawedir, Robert of, witness; 305 a.
 Lawles, Walter, petition of; 514 b.
 Lawless & Co., Dublin bankers; 196 b.
 Lawrence, Lawrance;
 Capt.; 156 a, 156 b, 157 b.
 Dr., his life of Dr. Harvey; 232 b.
 Lieut. Francis; 591 a.
 Henry, petition of; 503 a.
 Isaac; 156 a, 156 b.
 — answer of; 158 a.
 Lady; 137 b, 158 a.
 Cornet Wm.; 596 b.
 Lawry, Christopher, minister of Bletsoe; 4 n.
 Laws, J., letter of; 35 b.
 Lawson, Sir John, Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Lawton, Thomas, letter of; 380 a.
 Laycocke, Thomas; 278 b.
 Laynase, Comte, letters of; 36 b, 40 a.
 Layton; 5 b.
 Leigh estate in; 5 b.
 Le Blanc, M., letter of; 38 a.
 Le Clerc et Cie, of Nice; 194 a.
 Le Fevre, Thomas, letter of; 37 a.
 Le Fevre, Mr., letters of; 47 b.
 Le Gross, J., letter of; 294 b.
 Le Lon, Esther, wife of Denzell Lord Holles, Act for naturalizing; 101 b.
 Le Paz, M.; 565 b.
 Le Strange, H.S., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Le Tellier; 562 b.
 Le Zach, Alan, witness; 407 b.
 Lea;
 Mr., of Chester; 380 b.
 Thomas, keeper of the Dublin Council Chamber, petition of; 503 a.
 Leabrook, Thomas, of the Mint, warrant to; 81 a.
 Leach, Henry; 278 b.
 Lead mines of co. Durham, Act for improving; 105 a.
 Leadbeater, Ensign W. E., letter of; 289 b.
 Leagh, Ensign Arthur; 594 b.
 Leah, Nathaniel; 528 a.
 Leake;
 Mr., of Christ's Hospital; 255 a.
 Sir Francis; 156 a.
 Sir John, vice admiral; 17 a, 20 a.
 — letters of; 17 b, 47 b.
 — instructions to; 32 b, 34 a, 47 a.
 — master of the Trinity House; 260 b.
 Leasely (Leslie?), Sir James; 584 a.
 Leat, Nicholas, letter of; 213 b.
 — letter to; ib.
 Leather;
 exportation of; 369 a.
 Bill to give liberty to buy and export (1668); 116 b.
 Leathes;
 Capt., letter of; 40 a.
 Moses, letter of; 40 b.
 Lecamus, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Leicester, Thomas; 614 b.
 Lecheraine, Lescheraine;
 Count; 16 b.
 — letters of; 31 b, 36 b.
 — memorial by; 41 a.
 Lechnere;
 Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Sir Edmund, Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Leckie, Lecky;
 D. R., letter of; 290 a, 291 a.
 R. D., letter of; 290 b, 292 b.
 Mr. W. H., his history; 576 a. or Lackie, Rev. William, and the Plot of 1663; xviii., 502 a, 502 b.
 — his wife Isabel; 502 b.
 Leconfield, Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 Lede;
 Madame de, letters of; 35 b, 40 a.
 James de, of Leicester, conveyance by; 410 b.
 Ledesham, Roger; 367 b.
 Ledgingham;
 Portbury, v.; 128 a.
 Warwick, petition of; 141 b,
 Lediferin, lands of, grant of; 304 b.
 Ledlie, Robt., letters of; 290 b, 294 a.
 Ledred, Bishop; 582 a.
 Lee;
 Kent; 332 b.
 Dr.; 572 a.
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Fra., document signed by; 13 a.
 Francis, of Pontefract; 275 a.
 Sir George, to succeed Pelham; 224 b.
 — his conditions for taking office; 225 a.
 J. H., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 John; 156 b.
 — deposition of; 158 a.
 — of London, will of; 335 b.
 Richard, of Wigston's Hospital, Leicester, petition of; 418 b.
 Thomas, declaration by; 582 b.
 Leech;
 Charles, of Chester; 361 b.
 John, official of Canterbury; 338 a.
 Leeblands, William, payment to; 212 b.
 Leeds; 275 b. convent of; 329 a.
 priory, Kent; 320 b, 327 a. prior of; 339 a.
 Castle, letter dated at; 212 b.
 — Queen Isabella refused admission into; 354 a, 354 b.
 — threatened attack on; ib.
 Duke of, house bought of; 13 b.
 — (temp. Anne); 51 b.
 — (1754); 225 a.
 — (1757); 223 b.
 Leeke;
 John, affidavits of; 151 a, 151 b.
 Mr. John, of Christ's Hospital, his mathematical abilities; 256 a.
 — certificate by; ib.
 Leeward Islands; 223 a.
 Governor of; 40 b.
 papers relating to; 48 a.
 Leffe, John, mayor of Leicester, witness; 408 b, 409 a.
 Lefroy, T. E., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Legendre, John, certificate touching; 143 a.
 Legge;
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Colonel William, of the Ordnance; viii., 90 a, 129 n, 129 b, 551 b.
 — treasurer of the Ordnance, examination of; 132 a.
 Mr., to succeed Pelham; 224 b.
 Will., governor of Oxford; 212 b.
 —, speeches, &c. of; 221 b, 222 b, 223 a, 223 b, 225 b.
 Chancellor of the Exchequer (1754); 220 a, 222 a.
 Leggatt, George, consul at Genoa; 256 b.
 Leigh;
 Henry, warrant of; 387 a.
 Hugh de; 367 b.
 John, of Addington, will of; 335 a.
 Sir John de; 358 b.
 Sir Richard, vicar of Warmfield; 637 a.
 Richard; 386 b.
 Thos., letter of; 239 b.
 W. J., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 — his gift to Magd. College; 269 a.
 Leghorn; 19 b, 91 b, 247 b. letter dated at; 47 b, 244 b.
 tin sold in; 92 b.
 malignant disease at; 233 a.
 consuls at; 236 a, 244 a, 244 b, 254 a, 255 b.
 Lehnnt;
 Capt. Paiton; 598 b.
 Captain Peytou; 592 b.
 Col. Richard, petition of; 510 a.
 — answer to his petition, &c.; 518 b, 519 a.
 — hands claimed by; 531 b.
 Le Huete, Thomas; 482 a, 487 a.
 Leicester; 8 a, 75 a.
 letters dated at; 9 b.
 corporation of, Mr. Jeaffreson's report on manuscripts of; xvi., 403 b, et seq.
 Abbey; 428 a.
 — letter dated at; 437 a.
 — Gate; 425 b.
 All Saints' parish; 407 b, 410 b.
 Appelgate in St. Michael's parish; 422 a.
 "Angel Inn" at; 427 b, 428 a, 428 b, 432 a.
 Aulneger's office in; 438 a. bishop's fee; 419 a, 437 a.
 "Black Lyon" in; 439 b.
 the "Blue Boar" in; 433 a.
 the "Spittle," near; ib.
 the six bridges within; 413 b.
 Butt Close; 428 a.
 Castle, documents dated at; 411 b, 412 a. college of; 333 a.
 Dead Lane; 427 a.

Leicester—cont.

Dillingham's riding and fencing school at; 440 a.
 East Gate; 415 b.
 Le Frerelane in; 414 a.
 Fuller's Road; 410 b.
 Galowtregate; 423 a.
 grammar school; 439 b.
 Fullers' Street; 408 a, 408 b.
 High Cross; 425 b.
 High Street; xvi., 406 b, 420 b, 422 a, 425 b.
 Humbirstongate; 410 b, 411 a.
 Kowheye, near; 421 b.
 market place at; 413 b, 426 a.
 Mawremeadow and Mawremill; 414 b.
 Newark college or hospital; 418 a, 418 b, 419 a, 420 b, 423 a.
 Newark Grange, lease of; 434 b.
 St. Nicholas' parish; 405 b, 408 a.
 ——— graveyard; 408 a.
 North Bridge; 410 b.
 North Gate; 425 b.
 "Le Pyngulle," near the water Sore; 413 b.
 King's way, called Rodyk; 414 b.
 Saturday market; 410 b. swine market in; 423 a.
 St. John's Hospital; 405 a, 411 a.
 St. Leonard's Hospital; 413 b.
 St. Margaret's parish; 420 a.
 St. Martin's; 428 a.
 ——— church; 413 b.
 ——— parish; 405 b, 418 b.
 ——— Easter book of; 425 a.
 St. Mary's; 420 b.
 ——— church; 414 b.
 ——— college, rental of; 417 a.
 ——— new college; 422 a.
 ——— vicarage; 436 b. old town hall, building the; 412 b.
 West Bridge; 415 a.
 West Gate; 415 a.
 Wigston's Hospital; 418 b, 432 a, 438 b.
 ——— suit by; 418 b.
 ——— petition of chaplain, &c. of; 419 b. artisan and dealers of, not freemen, petition against; 417 b. brewers in (1584); 431 a.
 Chamberlain's accounts of; 427 b. friars preachers at; 411 a.
 guild at; 420 b, 421 a, 422 a, 422 b.
 merchants' guild of; 404 b, 405 a.
 Corpus Christi guild, rentals of; 415 a.
 ——— accounts of; 416 a.
 hall books of; 427 b.
 ——— general description of their contents; 430 a.
 Portemanmote court at; 403 b, 411 b, 413 a, 414 a, 421 a.
 ——— charter reforming laws, &c. of; 409 a. maintenance of schoolmaster and theological lecturer at; 417 b.
 recorder of, letter of; 436 b. recorders of; 431 a, 432 a, 440 a. grants of fairs, &c. at (Ed. III.); 411 b. clothing trade in, order concerning; 414 b.
 loans levied on, by Henry VIII.; 416 a. military service to be rendered by; 416 a. commission for array, &c. of; 416 b.
 Acts and orders for regulation of traders, &c. in; 426 a. expected visit of Q. Eliz. to; 425 b. a decaying and impoverished borough, petition for relief of (temp. Eliz.); 431 b.
 the dissolved colleges, hospitals, &c. in (temp. Eliz.); 432 a.
 the plague in (1593); 432 b.
 election of burgesses for (1584 and 1586); 431 b.
 ——— (1592); 432 b.
 ——— (1601); 433 b.
 Queen Anne of Denmark's visit to (1603); 441 a.
 Prince Charles's visit to (1604); 434 b.
 James I. at; 435 b, 441 b. plague at (1607); 434 b.
 ——— (1610); 435 a, 435 b.
 putting down the "gibbitt" at; 434 b.
 lottery at, for the settlement of Virginia; 435 b.
 visit of Charles I. and his queen to (1634); 436 b.
 levying of ship-money at (1635); 436 b.
 election for (1639); 436 b.
 Charles I. expected at (1642); 437 a. loan by, to the king; ib.
 levy on, for 2,000*l.* (1645); 437 b.
 capture of; 7 b.
 military defence of, injuries to poor people by (1645); 437 b. taken by Fairfax (1646); ib.
 quartering troops on, letters, &c. concerning (1659); 438 a, 438 b. proclamation of Charles II. at (1660); 438 b, 439 a. fanatics and misled persons in (1660); 439 a. how affected by the London plague (1665); 439 b.

Leicester—cont.

new charter for (1684); 440 b. announcement at, of the serious illness, and death of Charles II. (1685); 440 b. county; 210 a, 379 b.
 Earl of, Edmund Crouchback, charter of (1277); 409 a, 421 a, 423 a.
 ——— great charter, translation of; 423 a.
 ——— grant to (51 Hen. III.); 421 b.
 ——— R. de Medland (37 Hen. III.); xvi., 406 a, 406 b.
 ——— Simon de Montfort, charter by (28 Hen. III.); 421 b.
 ——— charter of; xvi., 407 a, 422 b.
 ——— Robert, charters of; 421 b, 422 a, 422 b.
 ——— Robert Dudley (temp. Eliz.) document signed by 65 a.
 ——— slanderous words touching Q. Eliz. and; 396 a, 396 b.
 ——— letter of (1569); 374 a.
 ——— letter to (1571); 374 a.
 ——— Dudley, dedication to (1573); 583 a.
 ——— letters to; 583 b.
 ——— chamberlain of Chester Palatinate, letter of (1578); 396 b.
 ——— proclamation of; ib.
 ——— letter signed by (1584); 431 a.
 ——— his coming to Leicester (1584); 430 b.
 ——— his visit to Leicester (1585); 425 b.
 ——— orders for his reception at Chester (1584); 363 b.
 ——— "delyteth not in banquettes"; ib.
 ——— esp. &c. to be presented to; ib.
 ——— his letter touching "Mr. John Edwards"; 364 a.
 ——— in Ireland (1641); 524 b.
 ——— (1710), letter of; 38 b.
 ——— (1801), letters of; 287 b.
 Earls of, ancient, documents relating to; 403 b.
 Countess of, Petronilla, charter of; 421 b.
 Sir Peter; 389 a.
 ——— letter to; ib.
 Wm., mayor of Chester (1610), letters of; 399 a.
 Leicestrensis, the Codex: account of; xvi., 420 a.
 loan of; 439 b.
 Leiffrede, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Leige, John; 279 a.
 Leigh:
 Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 ——— (1667); 113 b.
 ——— Thomas (1670), Act to enable him to sell lands; 150 b.
 ——— petition of; ib.
 Edward, letter of; 35 b.
 Essex; 238 b, 252 a.
 Frizweed, widow, petition of; 544 b.
 ——— grant of Jephson's goods to; 502 a.
 ——— certificate concerning; 547 b.
 Humphrey, sergeant-at-mace, House of Lords, petition of; 102 b.
 Captain Henry; 594 b.
 ——— weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Honora, Mary, and Jane, grand-daughters of Thos. Lord Leigh (1670); 150 b.
 Ensign James; 594 b.
 John, his estate; 3 a.
 Mary, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Ensign Robert; 591 a.
 Lady, of Stonely; 7 b.
 Sir Thomas, delinquent; 3 a.
 ——— delinquent, his wife; 5 b.
 ——— deceased; 150 b.
 ——— creditors of, petition of; 150 b.
 Thos., warrant signed by; 375 b.
 ——— grandson of Thomas Lord Leigh, Act to enable him to sell lands; 150 b.
 ——— petition of; 150 b.
 Will., on Gloucester committee; 11 b.
 Leighton:
 tithes of; 11 a.
 Buzzard, manor of; 4 b.
 Low, minister at; 260 a.
 Sir Baldwin, Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Sir Thomas, delinquent; 11 a.
 Thos., letter of; 379 a.
 Leinster; 603 b.
 ——— plantation of; 99 a.
 ——— assembly at; 616 a, 617 a.
 ——— congregation of; 617 b.
 ——— losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 ——— the effect of pasture enclosures in (1762); 470 b.
 ——— Duke of (1691); 562 a, 565 a.
 ——— commission as general to; 565 a.
 ——— Lord Kildare made (1766); 177 b, note.
 ——— (1774), his will; 194 a.
 ——— his son, Marquis of Kildare; 194 b.
 Leith; 215 b, 240 b, 247 b, 302 a.
 Trinity House at; 261 a.
 Leith, J. F. Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Leitrim, plantation in; 582 a.

Leland :

- Dr., of Dublin ; 486 a.
- his proposed political history of Ireland ; 486 b.
- Librarian of Trin. Coll., Dublin ; 491 a.
- John, petition of ; 549 a.

Lelwe, M., letter of ; 38 b.

Lely, Sir Peter, paintings by ; 106 b.

Leman, Sir William ; 153 b.

Lemberg, Erdeman de, demise to ; 625 a.

Lemmens, Lemmons, M., letters of ; 37 a, 38 b.

Lendage, Robert, of Kingston Seymour, will of ; 334 b.

Lenthall :

- Kent ; 327 b.
- vicar of ; 337 a.

Lennox, Lenox :

- Earl of (1587), Matthew ; 302 a.
- document signed by (1611) ; 88 b.
- Duke of, his secretary (1635) ; 246 a.
- meeting Marie de Medici (1637) ; 552 b.
- Duchess of (1700) ; 310 a.
- Lady Caroline, her marriage to Fox ; 571 b.

Lens :

- camp de ; 39 b.
- magistrates of, letter of ; 39 b.

Lens, Serjeant, opinion by ; 233 b.

Lente, C. de, Danish ambassador, memorial by ; 258 b.

- answer to ; 259 a.

Lenthall, Lenthall :

- correspondence of ; 581 b.
- readings on statutes by ; 584 b.
- Mr. ; 153 b.
- Sir John, marshal of the King's Bench ; 113 b, 119 a, 121 b, 126 a, 154 a.
- letters of ; 104 a, 119 b.
- letter to ; 104 a.
- petitions of ; 105 b, 117 a, 119 b.
- answers of ; 117 a, 119 a, 119 b.
- writ to ; 106 a.
- William, Speaker, letters of ; 3 b, 9 b, 10 b, 230 a, 385 a, 437 b.
- writ of ; 438 a.
- of Bessilsleigh ; 262 b.

Lenthe, Mr. ; 562 a.

Leonard, Peter, his wharf ; 246 a.

Leopold :

- Emperor (1701) ; 442 a.
- letters of (1704) ; 24 b.
- Archduke and the Infanta, treaty of marriage (1763) ; 286 a.

Lepell, Brigadier, letters of ; 38 b, 40 a.

Lepers :

- hospital for, at Romney and Waynesflete ; 264 b.
- female, hospital for ; 325 a.

Leptone, Rauf, parson of Alresford ; 234 a.

Lequar, Pole, servant ; 507 b.

Lerida, relation of battle of (1710) ; 38 b.

Lerma, Duke of, letter to ; 213 b.

Lermouth, James, provost of St. Mary de Rupe ; 307 a.

- Sir Patrick of Dersy, precept to ; ib.

Lerpole. See Liverpool.

Lescailleide, M. de, letter of ; 35 b.

Lescheraime. See Lecheraine.

Lescrop, Richard, treasurer ; 407 b.

Leslie :

- in Ireland ; 603 b.
- Charles ; 392 a.
- Major-Gen., letters of ; 289 a.
- Eufamia, spouse of James Lindsay ; 307 a.
- Matthew, letters of ; 291 a.

Lesly :

- Mr., old and young ; 40 b.
- Dr., his book ; 455 a.
- Robert, bishop of Raphoe, petition of ; 514 a.

Lesses :

- the abbey of ; 265 b.
- abbot of ; 323 a, 339 a.

Lespaignol, M., letter of ; 35 b.

Lessells, Colonel ; 527 b.

Lessintone, John de, witness ; 1 b.

L'Estant, M. de, letter of ; 40 a.

Lestic, Nicholas de, witness ; 422 b.

Lestrange, Lient. Henry ; 596 a.

Latang, M. de ; 564 a.

Leth-Mogha and Leth-Quin, ancient parts of Ireland ; 486 a.

Letheringham ; 334 a.

Letherkeny or Letterkenny, battle of ; 612 a.

Lethulier, —, member of the Hamburgh Co. ; 147 b.

Lethers, forms of, used in the monastic chancery ; 344 b.

Leutrum, Baron (1711), letters of ; 40 a.

Levant, the ; 19 b, 239 b.

- company ; 243 a.
- plague of ; 233 a.
- limits of ; 236 a.
- wines of ; 239 a.

Leven, Earl of :

- letters of (1705) ; 31 b.
- letters of (1706) ; 32 a.
- letters of (1707) ; 32 b.
- letter of (1708) ; 35 b.

Leverett, James :

- a quack ; 229 b.
- examination of ; ib.

Levett, Dr., gift by ; 232 a.

Levinge :

- Sir Richard, to be Chief Baron ; 58 b.
- Richard, appointed recorder of Chester ; 361 b.
- commission to ; 362 a.
- letters of ; 387 b.
- Sir Richard, letter of ; 392 a.
- mem. of ; 16 a.

Levyngg, John, of Sudbury, will of ; 335 a.

Lewes :

- Archdeacon of, witness ; 1 b.
- John de, priest, excommunicated ; 348 b.

Lewin, Edmund ; 358 b.

Lewis, Mr. :

- secretary at Brussels ; 35 a.
- letter of ; 57 a.
- Dr., late master of St. Crosse ; 117 a.
- judge of the Admiralty ; 227 a.
- Captain Henry ; 592 b, 598 b.
- Hugh, of Ipswich, will of ; 333 a.
- Ensign Hugh ; 593 a.
- John, trooper ; 539 b.
- Lieut. Tho. ; 592 b.
- Rev. William, letter of ; 289 b.
- William, petition of ; 504 b.
- trooper ; 523 b.

Lewknor, R., chief justice of Chester, letters of ; 380 a, 380 b, 381 b.

Lewlin, Ensign Michell ; 593 a.

Lewyn, William, document signed by ; 297 b.

Lex., Lord, Lady Frestwell and ; 53 a.

Lexham, William, of Walsingham, will of ; 333 b.

Lexington :

- John de ; 357 b.
- Lord, letter of ; 560 a.
- ambassador in Spain (1691) ; 561 b.

Ley, Leye :

- Mr., preacher of Chester ; 383 b.
- John ; 403 a.
- William de ; 635 b.

Leybourne, Sir William de, warrant to ; 347 a.

Leyden :

- description of ; 61 b.
- university of ; 232 b.

Leyham ; 334 a.

Leyke ; 414 a.

Leyndon, manor of ; 635 a, 635 b.

Leynes, Gerald, of Knock, petition of ; 537 b.

Leynham, alias Plummer, Sir John, his wife Margaret ; 262 b.

Leynton :

- John, gift to ; 267 b.
- pardons to ; 266 a.

Leys ; 301 a.

Leysdown :

- in Sheppey ; 318 b.
- manor of ; 329 b.

Leyse, Beaumont, his servant ; 426 a.

Leyton :

- lands at ; 7 b.
- Low, Essex ; 251 b.

Leziman, Guido de, witness ; 407 b.

Liancourt, Countess de, letters of ; 38 b.

Libels conveyed in drinking toasts, in Irish society ; 178 a.

Libreto, Bernardo de Eciide, a foreign boy, made archdeacon of Canterbury ; 350 b.

Liebenstein, Prince (1767) ; 487 b.

Lichfield :

- Lord and Lady, letters of (circ. 1717) ; 57 a.
- Bishop of (1306) ; 350 b.
- (c. 1307), W. de Langton ; 351 b.

Lichfield and Coventry :

- Bishop of (1414), his death ; 340 b.
- letter of (1791) ; 294 b.

Lichtenstein, Prince of :

- letters of (1705) ; 31 b.
- (1706) ; 25 a, 58 a.
- letter of (1709) ; 36 b.
- (1710) ; 38 b.

Liddale, John ; 306 b.

Liddell, R., letter of ; 571 b.

Liege ; 31 b.

- citadel of ; 17 b.

- magistrates of, letter of (1705) ; 31 b.

- chapter of, letter of ; 37 a.

- deputies of the States of, letter of ; 40 a.

Lienenroot, de, ambassador, letter of ; 16 a.

Life Guard, the (1667) ; 115 a.

Lifford :
 Lord, Chancellor for Ireland (1767) ; 488 a.
 — letter of (1778) ; 196 b.
 Lifford's petition ; 165 b.
 Light, Capt. Francis, letter of ; 292 b.
 Lightfoote, Ralph, soldier, petition of ; 531 b.
 Lightfoote, Roger, sheriff of Chester ; 368 a.
 Lightfootpole, timber for making new haven at, order (1541) ; 373 b.
 Lighthouses ; 395 b.
 — erection, &c. of, papers concerning. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
 Lilborne, Col. John, payment to ; 94 b.
 Lille :
 the States, &c. of, letter of ; 37 a.
 town of ; 36 b.
 camp before ; 17 a.
 taking of ; 33 a, 35 a, 36 a.
 Comte de, letter of ; 38 b.
 magistrates of, letter of ; 39 b.
 commandant of, letter of ; 39 b.
 Lilleburn, in honour of Leicester ; 411 a.
 Lillers, M. Carnin, letter of ; 38 b.
 Lillok, co. Fife, lands of ; 307 b.
 Lilly, Francis, Trinity House v. ; 261 a.
 Limehouse ; 238 b, 240 b, 241 b, 259 a.
 parishioners of ; 237 b.
 Reach ; 256 b.
 Limerick ; 174 b, 200 b, 535 b, 562 a, 612 a, 613 a, 624 a.
 — corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 — treaty of ; 34 a.
 — surrender of ; 53 a.
 — attempt to take the embargo off (1762) ; 189 a.
 — bishopric of, Popish ; 198 a.
 — force to be raised in ; 201 b.
 — subscription by Catholics for recruiting in ; 202 a.
 — letter dated at ; 202 a.
 — Articles of ; 482 b.
 — James II.'s lands in ; 497 b, 498 a, 498 b.
 — rendition of ; 498 b.
 — the rebels in (1691) ; 565 a.
 — siege of, by Ireton ; 580 a.
 — surrender of ; 582 a.
 — the army in (1649) ; 601 a.
 — siege of, by Ireton ; 602 a, 614 a, 615 b.
 — mayor of ; 603 a.
 — Bishop of, Ed. Singe ; 583 a.
 — E. Sexton Pery elected member for ; 183 a.
 Liming, St. Mary's church ; 326 b.
 Linnæe, Thomas, first president of the College of Physicians ; 226 a.
 — his death ; 226 b.
 — signature of ; 234 a.
 Linange, Comte de, letter of ; 37 a.
 Lincehill :
 battle of ; 606 a.
 march towards ; 606 b.
 Linche :
 Sir Robbucke ; 617 a.
 Walter ; 614 a.
 Lincoln ; 6 a, 210 a, 324 b.
 — execution at ; 71 b.
 — parliament at (1301) ; 347 b, 348 a.
 — (1315) ; 353 a.
 — the navigation of the Foss Dyke from ; 435 b.
 — rolls ; 583 a.
 — prebendary of ; 11 a.
 — Cathedral ; 265 a.
 — county ; 334 b.
 — — charters relating to ; 264 b.
 — — stone from ; 627 b.
 — — election in ; 50 a.
 — — horse sent to ; 10 a.
 — — Charles I.'s manors in ; 209 b.
 — — horse to be raised by (1645) ; 8 a.
 — dean and chapter of, agreement of (1507) ; 370 b.
 — Bishop of (1281) ; 421 a.
 — — (1334), Henry, licence by ; 265 a.
 — — (1342), T. Becke ; 211 a.
 — — Beek, his death ; 337 a.
 — — John, of Tynewell ; 412 b.
 — — (13 Edw. IV.) ; 415 b.
 — — agreement of (1507) ; 370 b.
 — — (1513), his dispute with Abp. Warham ; 336 a.
 — — (1622), Lord Keeper, petition to ; 241 a.
 — — (1624), report to ; 241 b.
 — — (1625), John, letter of ; 436 a.
 — — (1637), suspension of ; 209 b.
 — — (1667), William, writ of summons ; 111 b.
 — — (1675-1691), Thos. Barlow ; 434 b.
 Earl of, Edw. (1578), Lord High Admiral, warrant of ; 360 b.
 — — (1671), Act to enable him to settle a jointure ; 153 b.
 — — Henry de Lacy ; 269 a.
 — — charter by ; 270 b.
 — — John de Lacy (22 Hen. III.) ; 357 a, 357 b.

Lincoln—cont.

Earls of, Lacy, pedigrees of ; 366 a.
 Lord (1714) ; letter of ; 57 a.
 Countess of (1668) ; 121 a.
 — — Alesia de Lacy, her death ; 411 b.
 Will., Abbot of Barlings ; 267 b.
 Lincolnia :
 Willard de, inquisition by ; 406 a.
 — witness ; 408 b.
 Linden, M., mayor of Menin, letter of ; 35 b.
 Lindores, abbot of, Guido ; 300 b.
 Lindsey, Lindsay :
 Earl of (1666) ; 211 a.
 — (1671) ; 440 a.
 — Robert (1668), petition of ; 117 a.
 Alexander, precept to ; 307 a.
 Lord, of the Byres, ancient peerage of ; xvii., 304 a.
 Col. ; 153 a.
 David, minister at Leith ; 302 a.
 — Lord (1483) ; 305 b.
 — his brother John ; 305 b, 306 a.
 — of Piteravy ; 307 b.
 — his spouse, Jonct Ramsay ; ib.
 — of Month ; 307 b.
 — his brother John ; ib.
 — of the Month, the poet ; xvii., 308 a, 308 b.
 George ; 306 a.
 James, rector of Benham ; 307 b.
 Capt. John, letter of ; 294 b.
 John, master of, of Peterowry, claim of lands by ; 308 a.
 Sir John of, charter to (1440) ; 307 a.
 — charter to (1437) ; 307 b.
 John, Lord, grant to (1454) ; 305 b.
 — lands resigned by (1497) ; 307 b.
 — charter to (1524) ; 308 b.
 — warrant to (1623) ; ib.
 Sir John, of Peterowry, infinement of ; 306 a, 307 a.
 — his spouse, Elizabeth Lundy ; 307 a.
 Hon. Robert, letters of ; 289 b.
 Robert, letters of ; 290 a, 290 b.
 — in Pitseottie ; 304 b, 307 a.
 Patrick, of Kirkfordin ; 305 b, 306 a, 307 b.
 — Lord of, charter to ; 306 a.
 — of Eaglescarnie ; 310 b.
 — his connection with the Porteous riots ; ib.
 — letters to ; xviii., 311 a-315 a.
 Sir Patrick, infinement of (1498) ; 307 b.
 — (1521) ; 307 a.
 — sign manual of ; ib.
 Patrick, infinement of (c. 1500) ; 307 a.
 — obligation to (1510) ; 308 a.
 — charter by (1524) ; 308 b.
 — his lands, &c. (1565) ; 306 b.
 — his son James ; ib.
 — (1574) ; 304 b.
 Walter, precept to ; 307 a.
 Sir William and Christian of (1382) ; 307 a.
 Lord, guardian of Queen Mary ; 304 b. alias Dix, Mary, petition of ; 518 b. late Countess of, Bridget (1667) ; 109 b.
 Linen trade with France (1674) ; 91 a.
 Linessham ; 636 b.
 Lingfield, college of ; 334 b.
 Lingley, Joseph, of Chcester ; 361 b.
 Links, John, of Limehouse, mariner ; 240 b.
 Linlithgow ; 299 a.
 — documents dated at ; 302 a, 351 b.
 Linnaere, Oliver, discharge of ; 23 b.
 Lintello, M., letter of ; 35 b.
 Lintels, Baron of ; 12 b.
 Linton, Kent, lands in ; 329 a.
 Lintz, letter dated at ; 22 a.
 Lion, Comte de, letter of ; 37 a.
 Lion, the ship ; 239 a.
 Lionel, the ship, of Harwich ; 241 a.
 Lion's Whelp, the ship ; 399 a.
 Lire, M. de la ; 287 b.
 Lisboun ; 17 a, 91 b, 285 a.
 — documents dated at ; 16 a, 25 a, 36 b, 37 a, 44 a, 47 b, 58 a, 60 a, 290 b.
 — merchants at ; 257 a.
 — river, St. George in ; 50 b.
 — a bull feast at ; 62 a.
 — tin sold in ; 92 b.
 — St. Patrick's College in ; 482 a, 482 b, 487 a.
 — bay of ; 238 a.
 Lisborn ; 493 b, 496 a.
 Liscarroll skirmish ; 603 b.
 Lisdosson ; 535 b.
 Lisguile, co. Galway, lands of ; 522 b.
 Lisieux diocese, Gresten's monastery in ; 625 a.
 Lisle :
 Lord, Philip, his troop in Ireland (1646) ; 11 b.
 — letter of ; ib.
 — commissions by ; ib.
 — payment to (1658) ; 95 a.
 Commissioner ; 124 b.

Lisle—cont.

- John, of the Council of State; 248 a.
Viscountess, Joan, will of; 332 a.
- Lisley Viscount, Arthur Plantagenet, K.G., &c., &c., letters patent by; 360 b.
- Lismacnedum, co. Galway, lands of; 522 b.
- Lismore :
treasurer of; 317 b.
lands near; 503 b.
Lady (1763); 475 b, 476 b.
- Lismoyne, co. Westmeath; 576 b.
- Lisnagarvie, march upon; 599 b, 600 b.
- Lispowell, co. Dublin; 547 b.
- Lisrany, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.
- Lissnegappell, co. Galway, lands of; 522 b.
- Lister :
Ed., physician, report by; 229 a.
Lieut. Michael, letter of; 40 a.
Martin; 226 b.
— admitted to practise; 230 b.
Matthew, notice of; 234 a.
- Liston; 335 a.
- Litote, Richard, will of; 265 a.
- Litleton, Mr., gentleman waiter of Duke of York; 279 a.
- Lister, Brother John, of the Observantines; 301 a.
- Littell, Richard, petition of; 534 b.
- Little :
Capt., letters of; 294 a, 295 a.
Capt. John, letters of; 294 b.
John Thomas, soldier, petition of; 509 b.
Thomas, trooper; 521 b.
William; 527 a.
- Littlecart, E., comr. of musters, co. Stafford, letter of; 379 a.
- Littledean; 334 b.
- Littlefield, George, of Armagh, deposition of; 576 a.
- Littleharle, letter dated at; 46 b.
- Littlemore, prioress of; 266 a.
- Littler :
Mr., of Deptford; 250 a.
— mayor of Chester, letter to; 380 b.
John, mayor of Chester (1606); 403 a.
- Littleton :
Mr., his "letter to Mr. Poyntz"; 63 b.
Mr. Baron; 150 b.
Edward, arguments by; 584 b.
Lord (1765) letters of; 287 b.
See Lyttleton.
- Littletons, the, conspirators; 434 a.
- Litlington :
parishioners of; 4 a.
parsonage of; 5 a.
- Livham, John, of Maidstone, will of; 335 a.
- Liveries, taking and wearing, laws against; 415 b, 416 b.
- Liverpool; 138 a, 375 b, 376 a, 380 a, 380 b, 381 b, 386 b, 391 a, 395 b–399 a, passim. documents dated from; 375 b, 393 a, 395 b.
ship money, 383 a.
- Lutherans settled in (1709); 47 a. corporation of, cheesemongers of London v.; 393 a.
mayor of; 375 b.
— letters of; 375 b, 395 b.
— letters to; 398 a.
Lord (1796) letters of; 296 b.
- Livesey, Sir Michael; 153 b.
- Livingston, T. Fenton, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
- Livorno, consuls at; 254 b.
- Lizard Point, the; 239 a, 241 a, 250 b, 252 b, 261 b.
- Llanccaddok, rectory of; 345 b.
- Llandaff, see of; 336 a.
- Llandaff; 336 a.
- Bishop of, Francis, writ of summons (1667); 111 b.
— (Ric. II.) v. Earl of Warwick; 169 b.
— commission to; 337 a.
- Llewellyn, Lieut. R., letter of; 290 b.
- Lloyd :
Sir Charles; 124 b.
— answers of; 124 b.
Charles, letters of; 293 a, 293 b.
Capt. letter of; 295 b.
David, clerk of the Pentice of Chester, mem. book of; 369 a.
— lieutenant of Chester, letter to; 374 b.
— mayor of Chester, application to; 374 b.
— letters to; 376 a, 376 b, 377 a.
— (1594); 397 a.
— letters of; 376 a, 376 b, 377 a.
Edward, proceedings against; 59 a.
— committed to sergeant-at-arms; 103 a.
— letter to; 212 b.
— prisoner; 529 a.
Francis; 121 b.
Henry, of Chester; 361 b.
— commission to; 362 a.
Humphry; 364 b, 365 b.
John, letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 293 a.
— of Yale; 374 a.
Jonathan, letters of; 292 b.
Mr., of Chester, letter to; 384 b.

Lloyd—cont.

- Peter, of Chester; 361 b.
- Philip, of the mint, documents signed by; 65 a, 66 b.
— order signed by; 391 b.
- Sir Richard, his report; 258 b.
- Thomas, letter of; 38 b.
- Lieut. Thomas; 591 b.
- Loadmanage, court of; 256 b.
- Lochleven, Queen Mary at; 304 b.
- Lock :
Mathew, secretary to the army in Ireland; 550 a.
Mr., secretary to Lord Admiral of England (1600) letter to; 282 b.
- Lockart, Sir William, payment to; 94 b.
- Locke :
Nicholas, gardener, petition of; 520 b.
William, of Ratcliffe; 239 b.
John, of the guard, Dublin; 545 b.
- Lockier, Edmund, of Worcester; 638 b.
- Loddesworth, manor of; 635 a, 635 b.
- Loddington, co. Leicester; 164 b.
- Lodelaw, Robert de, anniversary of; 327 a, 329 a.
- Lodge, Henry, letters of; 291 a, 292 b, 295 a.
- Loe :
Ensign John; 591 a.
Thomas, petition of; 521 b.
- Loffingem, lists of officers taken at (1708); 38 a.
- Lofthouse; 637 a.
- Loffie, Rev. John, letter of; 295 b.
- Loftus :
Sir Adam, captain; 597 a.
Adam; 609 a.
Sir Dudley; 581 a, 594 a.
— weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
Thomas, patron of Kilsire rectory; 539 a.
- Log-foile. See Foyle Lough.
- Logganer, John; 367 a.
- Loggin, Robert, petition of; 104 a.
- Loghbracklan; 493 b.
- Loghguir, troops at; 601 b.
- Loghnanastown, lands of; 506 a.
- Loghrehagh; 613 a, 615 b, 617 b.
- Logie-cowie; 301 a.
- Lokeswelle, Simon de; 367 a.
- Lombe (?), William, letter of; 382 b.
- Lomond, Loch; 310 a.
- Londsdale, Richard, of Coventry, will of; 335 b.
- London and Westminster :
mayor or lord mayor, &c. of, privileges of; 50 b.
— mandate to (temp. Hen. III.); 87 b.
— fined by Edward II.; 88 a.
— licence to (12 Ed. III.); 89 a.
— letter of (39 Ed. III.); 412 b.
— writs to (temp. Ric. II.); 87 a, 88 a.
— (1583) letter of; 227 b.
— (1588) letter of; ib.
— letter of (1629); 244 a.
— letter to (1670); 158 b.
— (1678); 256 b.
— letter of (1699); 393 a.
— information to (1716); 84 b.
- Apothecaries' Company; 231 a.
- Apothecaries of; 233 b.
- Barbers and Surgeons of, their petitions; 229 a, 230 b.
- Cheesemongers of, v. Corporation of Liverpool; 393 a.
- Grocers' Company; 227 b.
- Insurance Office, the Amicable; 231 b.
- Mercers Company; 145 a, 249 a.
- merchants of, their fund against the Turks (1616); 238 b.
— importers of brandy, petition of; 143 a.
- midwives of, petition of (1616); 229 a.
— (1634); 229 b.
- "office of address" in; 501 b, 510 a.
- prisoners for debt in and about, &c., petitions of; 152 a, 153 a.
— Act for relief of; 152 b.
- recorder of (1683); 232 a.
- sheriffs of, writ to; 116 a.
- Shipwrights' Company; 261 a.
- Watermen's Company; 251 b, 254 a.
- churchyards; 144 b.
- coal dues; 144 b.
- plague in (1563); 227 a.
- shops closed on day of thanksgiving from deliverance from Spanish Armada; 374 b.
- new buildings in, papers about (17th century); xi., 98 a.
- plague in (1630); 229 a.
- dragoons furnished by (1645); 8 b.
- plague in, foretold (1661); 209 a.
- the plague in (1665); 134 a, 152 b, 253 a.
— the College of Physicians' proceedings during; 230 a.
- the great fire of (1666); x., 102 a, 128 a, 131 a, 134 a, 145 a, 148 a, 152 b, 162 a.
— Judicature Bill; 109 a.
- Bill for rebuilding, proviso, &c. (1667); x., 111 a.

London and Westminster—cont.

act for the better rebuilding (1668); 126 b.
 partly rebuilt with Dutch money (1669); 134 a. rebuilding (1670); 145 a, 145 b.
 — additional Bill (1670), amendments and proceedings on; 144 b.
 relief of sufferers from fire, Bill respecting, message (1670);
 150 a.
 "trade was on long credit, now (1669) in ready money;"
 134 a.
 a river quay on north side, recommended (1670); 144 b.
 unfree artificers, &c. turned out of work by freemen
 (1670); 145 b.
 burial places for (1670); 145 b.
 honour done to Pitt's administration by (1757); 181 b.
 Aldermanbury, St. Mary's parish; 634 b.
 Aldermanchurch; 328 b.
 Aldermay Church, rector of; 323 b.
 Aldersgate, St. Botolph's parish without; 634 b.
 Aldgate St. Botolph's parish, alum works in; 229 a.
 Allhallows the Great and Less; 145 a, 323 b.
 Allhallows, Bread St.; 386 b.
 Arundel House; 155 b.
 Old Bailey; 71 b, 125 b.
 Bedford Head; 315 a.
 Benet Sherehog parish; 634 b.
 Benetfynk parish; 634 b.
 Berkeley House; 53 a.
 Billingsgate; 251 b.
 — St. Botolph; 145 a.
 — Sun Tavern; 256 b.
 Byschopp Street, the Plow in; 158 a.
 Bishopsgate, Black Bull in; 435 b.
 Blackfriars, St. Anne's, church and parish; 145 a.
 Blackwell Hall; 138 a.
 — governors of; 138 a.
 Bloomsbury Square, records of Chester at; 362 b.
 Bow Church, fall of steeple of; 354 a.
 — difficulties with the parson, on rebuilding; ib.
 — churchyard; 323 b.
 Bow Lane; 377 a.
 Bridge; 238 b, 255 b.
 — encroachments near; 259 a.
 — inconvenience of building houses on; 245 a.
 Broad Street; 121 b.
 Brook House, document dated at; 129 a.
 — Commissioners, the; 129 b.
 — report, &c. of; 128 a-133 b.
 — letters to; 129 b.
 Bunhill, Blue Anchor Alley; 158 b.
 Candlewick Street, St. Clement; 323 b.
 Catherine Street, Strand; 483 b.
 Chancery Lane, deeds relating to; 265 a.
 Charing Cross; 391 a.
 — Bull Head tavern; 154 b, 156 b, 157 a.
 Charles Street, document dated from; 285 a.
 Charterhouse; 24 a.
 — letter dated at; 244 a.
 Cheapside, Grasshopper in; 438 b.
 Chepe, street of; 634 b.
 Christ's Hospital; 22 a, 138 a, 255 a.
 — governors of; 138 a, 256 a, 258 b.
 — letter to; 256 a.
 — the new foundation at (1675); 236 a, 256 a, 258 a.
 — mathematical school of; 257 b, 258 a, 260 a.
 Clarendon House; 154 b, 155 a, 157 b.
 Clerkenwell Close; 146 b.
 — Green; 231 a.
 Clifford's Inn; 121 b.
 Coleman St., Bell Alley; 157 b.
 — White's Alley; 145 b.
 Conduit Street, document dated from; 295 a.
 Cornhill; 392 b.
 — St. Michael's; 332 a.
 Covent Garden; 137 a.
 — parson of; 221 a.
 — the Piazza; 155 b.
 — St. Paul's, inhabitants, petition of; 126 b.
 Cripplegate, St. Giles' without; 259 a.
 — St. Giles' Church; 145 a.
 Crooked Lane, St. Michael; 323 b.
 Custom House; 135 b.
 Denmark House, document dated at; 209 b.
 — or Somerset House; 95 a.
 Derby House, documents dated at; 2 b, 3 b, 7 b-10 b, passim.
 Distaff Lane, St. Augustine's parish, near; 633 a, 633 b.
 Doctors Commons; 230 b, 240 b.
 Dorset House; 418 a.
 Drury Lane, Little; 159 a.
 — Queen St., the White Swan; 155 b, 157 a.
 — Theatre; 1 a, 24 a.
 Duke Street, the Squirrel in; 390 b.
 Durham House; 98 a.
 Eastcheap, St. Clements; 229 b.
 — St. Leonard's; 323 b.
 — St. George's; 333 a.

London and Westminster—cont.

Ely House; 163 b, 164 a.
 — hospital, Commissioners of, letter of; 386 b.
 Essex House, letter dated at; 211 b.
 Exchange; 156 a, 157 a, 251 b.
 — Royal; 272 b.
 Fetter Lane, the Magpie in; 387 b.
 Old Fish St.; 633 a, 634 b.
 Fitzroy Square, Warren Street, letters dated at; 13 b.
 Fleet gate, the; 151 a.
 — prison; 146 b.
 — prisoners in; 102 a, 103 a, 105 a, 110 a, 115 a, 118 a,
 139 b, 165 a.
 — Street; 6 b.
 — Carmelites church in; 265 a.
 Foster Lane; 335 b.
 Friday Street; 323 a, 634 b.
 Frying Pan Alley; 155 b, 158 b.
 Garraway's; 62 a.
 Golden Square, the Tabernacle near; 80 b.
 Gracechurch St., All Saints; 323 a.
 Gray's Inn; 153 b, 157 b, 210 b, 440 a, 440 b, 585 a.
 — letters, &c. dated at; 211 a, 388 b, 389 b, 390 a, 390 b, 391 b.
 — Lane; 156 b, 159 a.
 Grocers' Hall; 102 a.
 Guildhall, document dated from; 387 a.
 Gurney House, document dated at; 385 b.
 Haberdashers' Hall; 386 a.
 Half-moon Alley; 158 b.
 Hanover Square, letter dated at; 570 a.
 — George Street; 62 a.
 — Lady Denbigh in; 566 b.
 Haymarket; 154 b, 157 a.
 — lease of; 51 a.
 Herald's Office; 230 b.
 — library; 99 b.
 Hermitage Stairs; 258 b.
 Hill Street, document dated from; 285 b.
 Holborn; 101 b.
 — St. Andrew's; 635 a.
 — prebend of; 633 a.
 — Bridge, "that the way at, may be raised," suggested
 (1670); 144 b.
 — Queen's Arms at; 10 b.
 — Durham Yard; 129 a.
 — the King's Gate; 439 a.
 — St. Andrew's; 145 a, 335 a.
 Hyde Park; 99 a.
 — review in; 49 a.
 Jermyn St.; 568 b.
 — near St. James's church, letter (of Sir Isaac Newton's) dated from; 392 b.
 Jewry, St. Lawrence; 332 a.
 Old Jewry; 265 a.
 King Street, Westminster; 140 a.
 — Three Sugar Loaves in; 440 b.
 Knight Rider St.; 227 a.
 Leadenhall Market, tanners frequenting, petition of; 116 b.
 Leicester Fields, St. Martin's Street; 81 b.
 — House, the political influence of; 222 a, 223 b, 224 a.
 Lincoln's Inn; 376 b.
 — Fields; 98 b.
 — Sir F. Child's house in; xi, 92 b, 100 a, 100 b.
 Littlewood Street; 228 b.
 Long Lane; 227 a.
 Marlborough House; 56 a.
 — building of; 27 b.
 Merchant Taylors' Hall; 94 b.
 Milk Street, St. Mary Magdalen; 323 a.
 Newcastle House; 222 a.
 Newgate; 392 b.
 — letter dated at; 46 b.
 — prisoners in; 46 a.
 — Jacobites committed to; 34 a.
 — De Foe in; 43 b.
 — rebuilding of; 232 b.
 — market; 59 a, 227 a.
 — the Blackedogge, document dated from; 386 a.
 Northumberland House; 45 a.
 Pall Mall; 59 a, 63 a, 154 b, 157 a.
 — letters dated at; 13 b, 201 a.
 — East, College of Physicians in; 226 a.
 — Fields, lease of; 51 a.
 Panyer Alley; 332 a.
 Park Lane, letter dated from; 294 b.
 Paternoster Row; 229 b, 634 b.
 Paul's Wharf, St. Andrew's parish; 634 b.
 Pettycoat Lane; 155 b.
 — the Frying Pan; 157 b.
 Piccadilly, Lord Sunderland's house in; 13 b.
 — lease of; 51 a.
 — Crown and Sceptre tavern in; 391 a.
 Portmao Square, letters dated at; 195 b, 196 a.
 Poultry Counter; 64 b.
 — Compter, prisoner in; 239 a.
 Privy Garden, letter dated at; 62 a.

London and Westminster—cont.

- Queen Street, letter dated at ; 556 b.
 — the Runner in ; 260 a, 260 b.
 Red Lion Square ; 72 a.
 Saddlers' Hall, document dated from ; 386 a.
 St. Alban's ; 236 b.
 St. Andrew Wardrobe ; 145 a.
 St. Bartholomew, prior and priory ; 633 a, 634 a.
 Great St. Bartholomew ; 392 b.
 St. Bartholomew's the Less ; 226 b, 262 b, 332 b.
 — Hospital ; 231 b.
 St. Benet's church ; 323 b.
 St. Clements ; 323 a, 323 b.
 St. Dionis Backchurch ; 323 b.
 St. Dunstan's ; 251 b.
 — in the East ; 317 b, 323 b.
 — in le West, church of ; 265 a.
 St. Giles's, lease of ; 51 a.
 — in-the-Fields, church ; 145 a.
 St. Gregory ; 145 a.
 St. James's ; 35 a, 66 a, 154 b, 284 b, 285 b.
 — letters, &c. dated at ; 36 b, 43 a, 208 a, 211 a, 286 b, 374 a, 375 a, 393 b, 394 b, 395 b, 396 a.
 — Marie de Medici at ; 552 b.
 — chapel burnt ; 556 a.
 — church ; 145 a, 233 b.
 — Queen Mary at ; 13 b.
 — coffee house ; 571 a.
 — Fields, lease of ; 51 a.
 — Market ; 51 a.
 — Park ; 99 a.
 — Square ; 51 a.
 — Street, letter dated at ; 191 a.
 — Bennett Street ; 23 b.
 St. John's Street, Hick's Hall in ; 71 b.
 St. John Zachary parish ; 634 b.
 St. Katherine ; 238 b.
 St. Katherine's Hospital, near the Tower ; 89 a.
 St. Lawrence's church ; 323 b.
 St. Magnus, Bridge Foot ; 145 a.
 — church ; 323 a, 323 b, 332 b.
 St. Margaret's, Westminster ; 264 b.
 — inhabitants of, petition of ; 126 b.
 — vestry of, letter of ; 126 b.
 St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, inhabitants of, petition of ; x., 126 b.
 — workhouse ; ib.
 St. Martin Orgar ; 635 a.
 St. Mary's ; 241 a.
 St. Mary of Somerset parish ; 634 b.
 St. Mary de Arenbus church ; 323 b.
 — Colechurch ; ib.
 — Vetus church ; ib.
 St. Michael ad blada parish ; 634 b.
 — Bassishawe ; 283 b.
 — of Basynghe ; 634 b.
 — Paternoster ; 323 b.
 — versus Pontem ; ib.
 — Queen Hythe ; 145 a.
 — in Riola ; 323 b.
 St. Nicholas, Coldabbey parish ; 634 b.
 St. Pancras' parish ; 633 a.
 St. Paul's ; 144 b, 209 a, 344 b.
 — muner at ; 347 a.
 — congregation of buyers and sellers in ; 633 a.
 — contributions for repair of ; 361 a.
 — rebuilding of, account of monies received and paid for (1713-14) and (1718-19) ; 635 a.
 — dean and chapter of ; 230 a, 345 a.
 — manuscripts in Queen Anne's Bounty Office, relating to ; 632 a, et seq.
 — churchyard ; 228 b, 635 a.
 — school ; 145 a, 439 b.
 — cemetery, called Pardoncherchew ; 634 a.
 St. Saviour's Mill, wharf at ; 246 a.
 St. Stephen's, Westminster, document dated from ; 399 a.
 St. Thomas's Hospital ; 437 b.
 St. Vedast's church ; 323 b, 341 b.
 — parish ; 634 b.
 — rector of ; 632 b.
 Savile House, levée at ; 222 b.
 Savoy Hospital, commissioners for managing, letter of ; 386 b.
 Sergeant's Inn ; 136 a, 145 a, 217 b.
 — judges and sergeants of ; 145 a.
 Shipwrights' Hall ; 257 a.
 Shoe Lane ; 227 a.
 — the Opera or Paradise in (show) ; 148 a.
 Smithfield, West ; 634 a.
 Soap Lane ; 433 b.
 Soho, letter dated at ; 62 a.
 — Thift Street, over against the Morrocko, near ; 396 a.
 Somerset Chapel, opposition to Ronquillo's burial at ; 564 b.
 Somerset House ; 98 a.
 — documents dated from ; 375 a.
 — or Denmark House ; 95 a.
 Somerset Place, document dated at ; 373 b.

London and Westminster—cont.

- Soper Lane ; 633 a, 633 b.
 South Street, document dated from ; 285 a.
 Southampton House, document dated from ; 387 a.
 Stamp Office, letter dated at ; 23 b.
 — Steele's post in ; ib.
 Stanbope Street, letters dated at ; 205 b, 207 b.
 Stone, Bothaw, near ; 323 a.
 Strand, the, document dated at ; 382 b.
 — Lord Burghley's house in ; 377 b.
 — letter dated at ; 376 a.
 — King's Arms in, 390 b.
 — St. Clement's Church ; 15 a.
 — St. Clement Danes, meeting-house in ; 47 a.
 — Salisbury House ; 22 b.
 Suffolk House, letter dated at ; 2 b.
 Swallow Street, lease of ; 51 a.
 Swan-with-two-Necks ; 229 b.
 Temple, documents dated at ; 13 b, 150 b, 391 b.
 Temple Bar ; 431 b.
 — deeds relating to ; 265 a.
 — the Devil's at ; 59 a.
 — sanctuary near ; 562 a.
 Temple, Inner ; 141 a.
 — letter dated at ; 23 b.
 — Remembrancer's Office ; 66 b.
 — Middle ; 418 a, 585 a.
 Temple stairs ; 99 b.
 Tothill Fields, workhouse in, Westminster ; x., 126 b.
 — Street, the "Fleece" ; 155 b.
 Tower, documents dated at ; 46 a, 46 b, 354 a.
 — prisoners in ; 46 a, 101 b, 102 b, 210 a, 390 b, 555 b, 565 a, 565 b.
 — orders concerning ; 88 b.
 — warders of ; ib.
 — Lord Bristol in ; 217 a, 217 b.
 — Arabella Stuart in ; 226 a.
 — Jacobites committed to ; 34 a.
 — pear trees near ; 87 b.
 — earthen wall of, pulled down by citizens ; 88 a.
 — accident at ; 562 b.
 — Constable of ; 87 a.
 — Constable, mandate to ; 89 a.
 — constables of ; 87 b.
 — Lieutenant of ; 95 a, 137 a, 251 a.
 — letter to (1611) ; 88 b.
 — lieutenants of, list of ; 87 b.
 — wardens of ; ib.
 — Court of Record in ; 88 a.
 — keeper of Records in ; 114 b.
 — ordnance office in ; 89 b.
 — Petty Gates, near ; 89 a.
 — Hamlets ; 247 b, 258 a.
 — lieutenant of ; 260 b.
 — Hill ; 88 b, 315 a.
 — Trinity House, master and governors of, letter of, 391 b.
 — letter to ; ib.
 — petition referred to ; ib.
 — masters and others of ; 120 b.
 — answer of, to a petition ; ib.
 — report on MSS. of ; 235 a.
 — mint in the ; 63 b, 392 b.
 — mint office, document dated from ; 393 a.
 — papers concerning ; 60 b, 63 b, et seq.
 — Traitors' Bridge or Stairs ; 88 b.
 Walbrook, St. Stephen's ; 335 a.
 Warwick Lane ; 230 b, 235 a.
 Water Lane, Trinity House in ; 249 a, 249 b, 250 a, 250 b.
 — fire at (1666) ; 235 b, 253 b, 254 a, 254 b.
 — fire in (1714) ; 235 a.
 Waterman's Hall ; 251 b.
 Watling Street ; 376 b.
 — deeds relating to ; 265 a.
 Westminster ; 15 b, 163 b, 164 a, 355 a, 384 b.
 — documents dated at ; 2 a, 3 b, 8 a, 8 b, 10 b, 61 a, 87 b, 89 a, 234 b, 270 a-275 b, passim, 344 b, 346 a-347 b, 352 a, 357 a-362 a, passim, 390 a-396 a, passim, 402 b, 407 a, 411 b, 413 a-418 b, passim.
 — Abbey, Hen. VII.'s chapel in, foundation of ; 331 b.
 — abbot of, apostolic letters to ; 346 a.
 — corporation of the poor of, president and members, letter to ; 126 b.
 — complaint by a monk of ; 265 a.
 — Cockpit ; 54 a.
 — letters dated at ; 24 a, 212 a, 386 a.
 — political meeting at ; 223 a.
 — the Gathchouse ; 71 b, 156 a, 159 a.
 — Hall ; 160 a.
 — Dr. Sacheverell's trial in ; 49 b.
 — Palace Yard ; 76 b.
 — Old Palace Yard, letter dated at ; 315 a.
 — St. John's Head, otherwise "Heaven" in ; 155 b, 156 b, 157 a, 157 b.
 — Dog Tavern, near ; 157 a.
 — Queen's Court, document dated at ; 385 b.
 — scholars at Christ Church ; 213 a.

London and Westminster—cont.

- school; 439 b.
- — to have a Jesuit master; 558 b.
- Star Chamber; 8 b.
- Edward of; 87 b.
- Whitechapel, St. Mary Matefellow; 271 b.
- Whitehall; 2 b, 154 b.
- documents dated at; 27 a, 33 a, 34 b, 47 a, 59 a, 71 b, 74 b, 86 a, 90 a, 200 a, 216 a, 228 b, 285 b, 286 a, 287 b, 378 a, 378 b, 379 a, 380 b, 381 a, 381 b, 382 b, 385 b, 386 a, 386 b, 387 a, 387 b, 393 a, 399 a, 399 b, 400 a.
- alterations at, after the fire (1691); 563 a.
- banquetting house; 98 a, 174 a.
- Council Chamber, document dated from; 395 a.
- Court at, the, documents dated from; 378 a, 378 b, 379 a, 380 b, 381 a, 389 a, 390 b, 398 a.
- Painted Chamber, the; 167 b.
- — diagram of; position of table, &c., for, peers at conferences; 114 b.
- — the porter's lodge; 388 b.
- Scotland Yard; 389 b.
- — a lodging in; 23 b.
- Treasury Chambers, documents dated from; 388 a, 389 a, 389 b, 390 a, 439 b, 440 a.
- Winchester House; 158 a.
- Wood Street; 633 b.
- the counter prison; 154 a.
- St. Michael, of Hoggestone parish; 634 b.
- St. Michael's; 50 a.
- St. Peter's church in; 633 b.
- Worcester House; 111 a.
- York Buildings; 24 a.
- House, document dated from; 380 b.
- Bishop of, excommunicated by Alexander III.; 317 a.
- (12th century), Eustace; 632 b.
- (1254), Fulke; 632 b.
- (1294), letter of; 347 a.
- (1322 and 1329), Stepheu; 633 a, 633 b.
- (1306), R. de Baldok; 350 b.
- R. de Braybroke; 632 b.
- (14 Ric. II.) Robert; 634 a.
- — orders issued by; ib.
- (1429); 263 a.
- (1513), his dispute with Abp. Warham; 336 a.
- (14 Hen. VIII.), Tunstall; 634 b.
- (1604); 228 b.
- Thomas (1608), letter of; 382 a.
- (1634); 229 b.
- (1636), document signed by; 210 a.
- Compton, letter of; 560 a.
- his palace, houses built on site of (1662); 635 a.
- Lodovick; 115 a.
- petition of; ib.
- order touching; 115 b.
- Londonderry; 493 b, 494 b, 612 b.
- document dated at; 442 b.
- assizes at; 507 b.
- siege of; 611 a.
- county, losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
- specification of lands in; 520 b.
- James II.'s lands in; 497 b.
- Society; 582 a.
- Londy, Col., a prisoner; 47 a.
- Lone, Mr.; 184 a.
- Long Ditton; 332 b.
- Long Melford; 333 a.
- Long and Costly, the, ship named; 240 a.
- Long, Longe:
 - Colonel; 592 a, 598 b.
 - Christopher, mayor of Pontefract; 274 a, 274 b.
 - — document signed by; 274 b.
 - Capt. Felix; 592 b, 598 b.
 - — petition of; 510 a.
 - John, Abp. of Armagh; 582 a.
 - Lieut. Patrick; 542 a.
 - — petition of; 531 a.
 - Richard, letter of; 37 a.
 - Sir Robert; 128 a, 131 b.
 - Robert, commissioner; 275 a.
 - — of Wroxals; 639 a.
 - Walter, of Leicester; 405 b.
 - William; 386 a.
 - Lieut. William; 592 b.
- Longford:
 - gaol; 533 b.
 - assizes at; 539 a.
 - county, losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 - — specification of lands in; 520 b.
 - — plantation in; 582 a.
- Lord, letters of; 195 b.
- Longleat, the Thynnes of; 51 a.
- Longueville, Lady, letters of; 54 a.
- Longville, Lady (1667); 111 a.
- Longwood; 521 b.
- Lony, John, bailiff of Worcester; 638 a.
- Loe, documents dated at; 12 a.
- Loose, Kent, manor of; 329 a.
- Lopham, North; 334 a.
- Lopus, Dr., a Spaniard; 227 a.
- Loreau, Capt. Laurence; 605 a.
- Lord, Mr.; 465 a, 473 a.
- Lord Chancellor, the:
 - commissions for supply of his place in House of Lords 101 a, 103 b, 104 a, 128 a, 139 a.
 - order of (1665); 103 a.
 - petition to; ib.
 - letter of (1709); 37 a.
- Lord Chief Justice of England, the:
 - letter to (1608); 382 b.
 - reports of (1668); 116 a, 116 b.
- Lord Keeper, the:
 - letter to (1668); 119 b.
 - (1670); 139 b.
- Lord Privy Seal, the (1711); letter of; 40 a.
- Lord Treasurer, the late (1668); 124 b.
- Lords, House of:
 - report on, and calendar of, MSS. in; viii., 101–174.
 - absences from, &c., report touching remedy for; 122 b.
 - order of; 391 a.
 - Bishop's Lobby adjoining to, document dated from; 395 a.
- Loredi, Signor Cesare, letter of; 38 b.
- Loretto; 23 a.
- Lorraine:
 - Claude, painting by; 100 a.
 - Prince Charles of, letter of; 38 b.
- Lorraine, Duke of:
 - letter to (1617); 214 a.
 - (1649); 578 b.
 - letter of (1651); 615 a.
 - (1651); 614 a.
 - (temp. Chas. II.); 615 b, 616 a.
 - (1689); 15 b.
 - letters of (1705); 31 a.
 - letters of (1707); 32 a.
 - (1708); 19 b.
 - letter to (1709); 16 b.
 - letter of; 36 b.
 - letter of (1710); 38 a.
 - letter of (1715); 40 b.
- Loring, Sir Nigel; 358 b.
- Loseby, John, of Leicester; 439 b.
- Losenham, Kent; 324 a.
- Losoure, Thomas, dean of St. Paul's; 635 b.
- Lossowitz, in Bohemia; 220 b.
- Lostock, Lancashire; 50 a.
- Loterel:
 - Lord Andrew; 408 a.
 - — Andrew, of Leicester; 405 b.
- Lothian, Marquis of:
 - MSS. of; xxi.
 - letters of (1705); 31 b.
 - Earl of (1709), letter of; 37 a.
- Lottery, Lotteries:
 - the general, temp. Eliz.; 427 a.
 - the Royal Oak; 539 b.
 - — cost of licence for; 540 a.
 - sales of tickets for; 568 b.
- Lottum, Comte, letter of; 36 b.
- Louchore, Hugh of, witness; 305 a.
- Loudoun, Earl of:
 - letters of (1644, &c.); 1 a, 5 b, 7 a, 7 b, 9 b, 10 b.
 - document signed by; 302 b.
- Loueman, William, inquiry by; 406 a.
- Loughabre; 497 a.
- Loughborough; 335 a, 414 a, 417 a, 434 a, 437 b.
- inhabitants of; 433 a.
- rector of; 435 a.
- and the plague at Leicester; 435 a, 435 b.
- King's household at; 421 a.
- Loughborough, Lord:
 - Henry, letters to (1660); 439 a.
 - — letters of; ib.
 - — (1662); 439 b.
 - (1670); 139 a.
 - Edward, late (40 Eliz.); 417 b.
- Loughfoile. See Foyle, Lough.
- Louis d'ors, the new French; 73 b.
- Louis, Prince (1704); 17 a.
- Louis VII., his present to Christ Church, Canterbury; 321 a.
- Louis IX., or Saint, Boniface VIII.'s biography of; 348 a.
- Louis XIV.:
 - letters of and to; 218 a, 218 b.
 - Lord Preston's interview with (1684); 30 b.
 - his edict about coinage (1701); 73 a.
 - printed broadside, revocation of passes to the Allies by (1708); 38 a.
 - his regard for Louvois; 562 b.
 - character of; 17 b.
 - his will; 50 a.
- Louis XV., and his Queen, description of; 62 b.
- Louseby, Henry de, of Leicester; 421 a.
- Louth, Lord (1690); 496 b.
- Louth Park Abbey co. Lincoln; 265 a.

Louth, Ireland :

- and Heynestowne, manor of; 508 a, 511 b.
 - county, specification of lands in; 520 a.
 - Aymer's lands in; 532 a.
 - losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 - remonstrance from; 576 b.
 - petition from; 582 a.
 - gentry, &c. of, petition of; 590 a.
 - towns of, plundered, &c.; ib.
- Louvain, burgomaster of (1711), letter of; 40 a.
- Louvoys, M. de; 562 b.
- Louvoys, Louison, John, of the Mint; 65 a, 65 b, 66 a, 70 b.
- Lowat, Lord, his execution; 315 a.

Love :

- Mr., tax receiver; 7 b.
 - receiver for Newport garrison; 9 a.
 - at Newark; 10 b.
 - Grace, petition of; 109 b.
 - Henry, of Chelmsford, will of; 335 a.
 - John, of Reading, will of; 335 b.
 - Richard, D.D., late dean of Ely; 109 b.
 - W., letters of; 8 a, 8 b, 9 a.
- Loveday, Roger, his manor of West Farleigh; 329 b.
- Lovelace, Lord :
- (1668); 121 b, 166 a.
 - clause to Bill proposed by; 121 b.
 - of Hurley, John (1670), writ of summons to; 146 b.
 - John, petition of (1670); 145 b.
 - petition of (1671); 160 a.
 - Lieut.-Col., letter of; 289 a.
- Lovell :
- Lord (1400); 266 a.
 - Lady, endowment by; 267 b.
 - Gregory, letter of; 431 a.
 - John, of Watford, will of; 335 b.
 - Sir Salathiel, recorder of London, &c. (1700), commission to; 362 a.
 - Sir Salathiel, recorder of London, information taken before; 392 b.
- Loveman, William, of Leicester, gift by; 405 b.
- Lovetot, John de, commissioner; 326 b.
- Lovet, Lovett :
- Christopher, of Dublin; 528 b.
 - Hugh, of Worcester; 638 a.
 - Col. John; 260 b.
 - John, of co. Bucks, his daughter Matilda; 625 a.
 - Ensign Thomas; 594 a.

Loving, John; 123 b.

Lovygarig, Dermott; 514 a.

Low Countries, the :

- Duke of Marlborough in; 1 a.
- forces in; 31 a.
- Spanish, condition of (1684); 31 a.
- governor of; 32 a.
- Prussian troops in; 36 a.
- resolution, government of (1709); 38 a.
- state of her Majesty's forces in (1711); 40 a.
- English trade with (1604); 95 a, et seq.

Lowce :

- Linster; 608 a, 617 b.
 - Hercules; 278 b.
 - Robert, porter of the Mint; 67 a, 69 b.
- Lowestoft; 334 a, 335 a.
- lighthouse, &c. at; 240 a, 242 b, 243 b, 252 a, 256 a, 256 b, 261 b.

Lowndes :

- Mr., letter of; 38 a.
- his salt; 232 b.
- G. Alan, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
- William, certificate by; 66 a.
- notes by; 67 a.
- mem. by; 67 b.
- letters on; 67 b, 77 a.
- order signed by; 91 b.
- Mr. Secretary of the Treasury; 393 b, 394 b.

Lowther :

- Mr. and Sophy How; 571 a.
- Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
- Robert, letters of; 37 a, 38 b.
- William, letter of; 40 a.
- Sir William, chairman of committee; 91 a.
- commissioner; 275 a.

Loy, Lieut., letter of; 290 b.

Loyalton, Bartholomew; 367 b.

Lubeckers, the; 243 a.

Lue, F. de, letter of; 289 b.

Lucan; 491 a, 623 b.

bridge of; ib.

Lord, letters of; 195 b.

— (1779); 202 a, 205 a, 205 b, 206 a.

— his journey to Ireland (1779); 207 a.

— Patrick Sarsfield made; 494 a.

beirs of; 545 b.

Lucas :

- Col., letter of; 38 b.
- Mr., of Yarmouth; 240 a.
- Sir Charles; 523 b, 553 a.

Lucas—cont.

- Dr. Charles, member for Dublin; 477 b.
- Dublin patriot; 442 b, 444 b.
- Lieut. Fran.; 594 a.
- James, waterman; 279 b.
- Stephen, priest of Ulcomb; 337 b.
- Lord (1668); 122 b, 166 a, 167 b, 173 a.
- (1668); 137 a.
- letter to; 137 b.
- (1670); 153 b.
- (1688); 555 b.
- Lieut. of the Tower, letter of (1697); 89 a.
- charges against; ib.
- his regiment (1703); 23 b.

Luca :

- Johannis de Guynnygils de, will of; 333 a.
- Lady Walpole at; 570 b.
- Lucius III., Pope, bull of; 317 a.
- Lucknow; 288 a, 290 b, 291 b, 296 b, 294 a, 295 a.
- Luckstadt Fort; 245 a.

Lucy :

- Francis; 123 b.
- Geoffrey de, Archdeacon of London; 632 b.
- Sir Kingsmill, Act touching estate of; 123 b.
- Ri., letter of; 386 b.
- Sir Richard, deceased; 123 b.
- Thomas, letter of; 379 a.
- Ludbury, John de; 402 b.
- Ludesdon, William de, his daughter Amfelsia; 632 a.
- Ludford, Simon, a druggist; 226 b.
- Ludlam, Richard, letter of; 438 a.
- Ludlow; 334 b.

Castle, documents dated from; 374 a, 380 b, 399 b.

Col., to command dragoons; 8 b.

Edmund, letter of; 582 a.

General; 616 b.

Ludovic, Prince Palatine, his visit to Leicester; 427 b.

Luffe, John, master of Ewelme Hospital; 627 b.

Lugg, Mr., letter of; 57 a.

Lugo :

- Don Joseph Benitez de, letter of; 37 a.
- M. de, letter of; 38 b.

Luke :

- John, physician; 227 a.
- Sir Samuel, letters of; 2 b, 3 a, 4 b, 5 a, 7 b, 8 a, 9 b.
- letter to; 9 a.
- order to; 3 b.
- lease to; 4 b.
- Governor of Newport Pagnell; 3 b, 5 b, 7 b, 8 a.
- demise to; 6 a.

Lukes, John; 367 a.

Lamley :

- Lieut.-General, letters of; 35 b, 38 b.
- H., letters of; 37 a, 40 a.
- and Caldwell's lands; 231 b.
- Lord, licence to (1583); 234 b.
- his gift of lands; 234 b, 235 a.

Lummysden :

- John of, of Ardre; 306 b.
- John, of Glegyrnoeb, witness; 307 a, 307 b.
- Lumsden, J., letter of; 290 a.

Lumysden, Henry, witness; 306 a.

Lund, Francis, disclaimer of; 146 b.

Lundie :

- Mr., letter of; 57 a.
- Mrs., letter of; ib.
- Mr. M., letter of; 35 b.

Lundy :

- family of; 304 a.
- barony and lands of; 308 b.
- Andrew, bailie to William; 307 b.
- of Strathallie; 308 a.
- Elizabeth, spouse of Sir John Lindsay; 307 a.
- Thomas de, witness; 305 a.
- William, of Strathallie; 307 b.
- charter by; 308 b.

Lundyn, Walter de, grant by; 307 a.

Lunenbourg :

- Princes of; 30 b.
- troops of; 31 b.

Lungville, William de, witness; 270 b.

Luntrethin; 306 b.

Inqheris, kirk of; 308 a.

Lurgelsbem, letter dated at; 552 a.

Lushington, S., letter of; 295 a.

Lusmach, skirmish of; 613 a.

Lutegareshalle, documents dated from; 356 b.

Lutherans, settled in England and America; 47 a.

Lutheburg, Robertus de, witness; 408 a.

Luton, Lentone, document dated at; 349 a.

Lutterell, his troop; 494 b.

Lutterworth; 414 b.

- inhabitants of, letter of; 434 b.

Luttrell :
 G. F., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 James; 511 b.

Lutwyche, Edward, letter of; 391 b.

Lutzen, battle of; 581 a.

Laueners, Yauue de, witness; 270 a.

Luxembourg :
 Louis de, Abp. of Rouen; 268 a.
 Duke of; 563 b.
 — (1691); 564 b.
 — letter of (1695); 558 a. deputies from, letter of (1705); 31 b.

Luzzara, battle of; 442 a.

Lydcott, Col. Leonard, his regiment; 11 b.

Lydd, corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.

Lyde, Henry, his estate, &c.; 6 a, 7 a.

Lyden by Sandwich; 326 b.
 mill at; 351 b, 352 a.

Lydgate, John, his "Bochas;" 100 b.
 — "boke of ye pilgrimage translated out of frensh" by,
 at Ewelme; 629 a.

Lycnanaghen; 585 b.

Lych, John, of Chippenham, will of; 335 a.

Lylands parva, co. York; 271 a.

Lyle, Timothy, of Pontefract; 276 a.

Lyme, relief of; 2 b.

Lyminge, Stanford chapel in; 338 b.

Lymington :
 Viscount, John, his marriage; 60 b.
 — letter of (1733); 63 a.
 election at (1733); 63 a.

Lymne church; 316 a.

Lympe, rector of; 339 a.

Lynaker, Thos., sheriff of Chester; 361 a.

Lynam, Capt. Patrick, of the ship Trinity; 503 b.

Lynce Hill siege; 603 a.

Lynch :
 Sir William, at Nice; 195 a.
 Edmond; 545 b.
 Jeffry, petition of; 510 a.
 John, Archdeacon of Thom, his Cambrensis Eversus;
 457 a.
 Nicholas, of Galway, petition of; 537 a.
 Patrick Moore; 545 b.
 Symon, of Cranbrook, will of; 332 b.
 Thomas FitzStephen, petition of; 516 b.
 William Roe; 545 b.

Lynd, James, letter of; 291 a.

Lynden, M. de, letters of; 38 b, 39 b.

Lyndesay, David, of the Mount; 304 b.
 See Lindsay.

Lyndon, John, petitions of; 537 a, 548 b.

Lyndsay :
 Sir James de, witness; 305 a.
 Sir William de, lord of the Biris; 305 a.
 — grant to; 305 b.
 See Lindsay.

Lyne v. Clarke; 170 b.

Lyniall, Thos., of Chester, papers relating to; 396 b.

Lynn; 242 b, 246 b, 252 a, 256 b, 333 b, 334 a, 334 b.
 port of; 94 a, 240 b.
 ships of; 242 b.
 garrison; 9 a.
 Episcopi; 334 a.
 West; 333 b.
 co. Westmeath; 550 b.

Lynn, Henry, minister of Ilyham Gobyon; 4 a.

Lynne, Henry, clerk; 3 a.

Lynton, Robert, of London, will of; 335 a.

Lyntone, John de, rector of St. Vedast's, London; 632 b.

Lyonne, M. de, letters of; 219 a.

Lyons; 195 a, 321 a.
 documents dated from; 282 b, 283 a.
 council at; 345 a, 345 b.

Lyons, G. F., Esq., M.D., MSS. of; xxi.

Lyon or Lyons, Thomas, letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 291 a.

Lyons, Laurence, letter of; 292 b.

Lyrepol, John, citizen of London; 412 b.

Lysarde, Nicolas, painter, grant to; 94 a.

Lyseux, Thomas, executor; 634 b.

Lythgue; 305 a.

Lytton :
 Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 Mr., speech of; 220 a.
 Sir George, to succeed Pelham; 224 b.
 Sir Richard; 219 b.
 Lord (1779); 205 b.
 — death of; 206 a.
 — his work on Henry II.; 451 b, 487 a.
 — his application to O'Connor; 490 b, 491 a.
 G., his letters about quarrel between Geo. II. and the Prince of Wales; 57 a.
 Sir T., letter of; 57 a.
 or Lytulton, Thomas, of Worcester; 638 b.

Lytton :
 Rich., Knt., of the Exchequer, will of; 335 a.
 Sir William, sheriff; 2 b.

M.

Mabbott, Gilbert, petition of; 512 b.

MacAlester, Hector, paper by, touching subjection of Virginia;
 289 a.

MacArthur, McArthur :
 Major, letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 Genl., letter of; 289 a.

Macay, Colonel; 584 a.

McCumell, Patrick Modorra; 610 b.

McCana, Capt.; 610 b.

Maccarthy, Macartie, McCarthy :
 —, his regiment; 493 b.
 Col.; 391 a.
 Charles, of Carrickneveer; 535 b.
 Daniel; 606 b.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Owen, lands held by; 520 a.
 Col. Owen; 31 a.

Macartney :
 —, his regiment; 33 b.
 Lord, K.B., letter from (1785); 289 a.
 Sir George, of the Irish House of Commons; 192 a.
 Brigadier, letter of; 37 a.
 Brigadier G., letter of; 36 a.

Macaulay, McCawley :
 Col., MSS. of; xxi.
 Lieut. A., letter of; 294 a.
 Alexander, letters of; 288 b, 290 a.
 Lieut. C., letter of; 289 b.
 John, trooper; 521 b.

Maelesfield, Lord :
 MSS. of; xxi.
 his speech (1724); 25 b.
 letter of (1727); 62 a.
 Chancellor, letters of; 54 a.

MacCon, alias Gorman, Keilachur; 586 a.

MacConnemogh, Gillerneme; 586 a.

McConnor, Donnogh O'Kelly; 518 a.

McCormick, plotter; 624 b.

Maeculloch, Lazarus, a surgeon, letter of; 38 b.

MacCumhail, Finn; 459 b.

MacDaniel, McDaniel :
 apostate; 607 a, 615 b.
 Col. Alexander, petition of; 503 b.
 Alexander; 606 a, 606 b, 613 b.
 Margaret, petition of; 503 b.
 Randle; 613 b, 614 b.

MacDermott, McDermott : the great, anecdote of; 466 a.
 Major, of Emla; 442 b.
 Mr., of Usher's Quay; 465 a.
 Anthony; 479 b.
 James; 466 b.
 Michael, of Roscommon; 466 b.

McDevitt, plotter; 624 b.

MacDonagh, Terence and Owen; 442 a.

Macdonald :
 Alex., of Glengarry, pardon to; 12 b.
 Major Forbes Ross, letters of; 295 a, 295 b.

McDonnell :
 Alexander McColla; 606 a.
 Sir Randell; 382 b.

McDonall, Col. James, MSS. of; xxi.

Macdowall, Macdowell :
 H. M., letter of; 291 a.
 L. H., letter of; 290 a.
 H., letters of; 290 b, 292 b.
 S. H., collector at Bangalore, letter of; 285 b.

Maeduff, clan of, its privilege; 298 a.

McEdmond :
 Connor Kelly; 518 a.
 Col. Meylides Keilly; 618 a.

Maecdonia, archbishop of, his redemption from Turkish slavery; 435 b.

McEllycot, Hon. Roger, Brigadier, governor of Cork; 31 a.

Maces during the Commonwealth, order concerning; 437 b.

Macetowne, co. Dublin; 498 a.

MacFirbis, Duall, annals of Ireland by; 581 a.

McFirr, Terence, petition of; 522 b.

MacGeoghegan :
 the Abbé, his Histoire d'Irlande; 444 b, 463 b, 465 b.
 Connell, of Lismoyne; 576 b.
 — annals by; 582 a.
 — dedication by; 585 a.

MacGillacoinny, friar; 605 a.

McGillchristy, William; 543 b.

McGregor, Lieut. Robert, letter of; 295 b.

- McGwire, Phelémy; 511 b.
 Machado, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Machell, John, trooper; 541 b, 547 a.
 Machen, Will, wireseller, of London, will of; 332 a.
 MacHenry, Sir Turlo; 588 b.
 Machiavelli :
 note on; 56 b.
 translation of; 23 b.
 Machlin, court at; 30 b.
 Macintyre, Capt. John, letter of; 294 b.
 McIntegart, William; 511 b.
 Mackay, McKay :
 Rev. Duncan, letter of; 295 b.
 commander in Scotland (1690); 497 a.
 McKenna, Ferdora; 511 b.
 Mackenzie :
 Col. A., letters of; 294 a, 294 b.
 Col. H., letters of; 294 b, 295 a.
 John, letter of; 294 b.
 Col. M., letter of; 295 a.
 Major R., letter of; 292 b.
 Mackeson, H. B., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 MacKiernan, Thomas; 608 b.
 Mackinnon, Rev. D., letter of; 289 b.
 Mackintosh :
 Sir James; 37 a.
 W., letter of; 294 a.
 William, letters of; 40 b, 57 a.
 Mackullin barony, co. Galway; 516 b.
 Mackworth :
 Sir H., letters to; 57 a.
 Sir Humphry, letters of; 37 a, 38 b.
 McKwire, Thomas, of Blackeford; 521 b.
 Mackworth, Capt.; 591 b.
 MacKyernan, Father; 612 a.
 Maclean, Sir John; 45 a.
 Macleod :
 Capt., letter of; 290 b.
 Alexr., resident at Tanjore, letters of; 290 a, 295 a.
 Lieut. John, letters of; 293 b.
 Col. Norman, letters of; 288 b, 289 b, 292 b, 295 a.
 William, letter of; 295 b.
 MacMahon, McMahon :
 Bernard, letters of; 289 b, 295 b.
 Captain; 581 b.
 Emer, bishop of Clogher; 604 b.
 — Bp.-General of Ulster; 611 b, 612 a.
 Hewe, his examination; 588 b.
 Col. MacBryane; 588 b.
 — others of his family; 589 a.
 McNab, Mr., letter of; 295 b.
 Macnamara, Col.; 615 b.
 McManus, Richard, prisoner, petition of; 507 b.
 McPhelim :
 Bryan; 608 a, 610 a, 615 a, 615 b, 617 b, 618 a.
 Hugh, commander of Leinster; 603 b, 604 a, 610 a, 618 a.
 MacPherson :
 Mr., letter to; 289 a.
 James, M.P. for Camelford, letters of; 288 b, 295 a.
 — his "Ossian," &c.; 451 b, 452 a.
 — O'Connor's remarks on; 481 a.
 John, letters of; 289 b, 290 a.
 Sir John, letters of; 289 b.
 MacPhilip, signature; 582 b.
 McQuillan, Rowland, petition of; 511 b.
 MacRichard, signature; 582 b.
 McSwanny, Col. Mullmory; 618 a.
 McTeige, Hugh Kelly; 518 a.
 MacThomas in Ireland; 604 a, 605 a, 607 a, 607 b, 608 a, 610 b, 611 a.
 McTuhill, Phelim; 608 a, 609 a.
 McWilliam, Hugh Kelly, lands held by; 518 a.
 Madan, Capt. John, letter of; 294 a.
 Madden :
 Lieut. Hugh; 594 a.
 Dr. John, of College of Physicians in Ireland; 580 b.
 Madders, Thomas, priest, of Croydon, will of; 332 a.
 Maddington; 221 b.
 Madison, John, soldier; 543 a.
 Maddock, Lieut. William; 592 b.
 Maddraspatam; 257 b.
 Maden, Teige; 545 a.
 Madira :
 letter dated at; 47 b.
 tin sold in; 92 b.
 Madhouses, regulation of; 233 a, 233 b.
 Madocks, J., opinion by; 233 a.
 Madoets, Madoetz, M., letters of; 38 b, 39 b.
 Madras; 288 a, 288 b, 296 b.
 letter dated at; 294 b.
 " Courier," the (1789), libels in; 293 b.
 Madrid; 2 b, 18 a, 27 b, 60 a, 193 a, 285 a.
 letter dated at; 62 a.
 Prince Charles at; 215 a.
 Treaty of (1750), papers relating to; 284 a.
 Maerschalch, Comte le, letter of; 37 a.
 Maersigata, Comte de, letter of; 38 b.
 Maestricht :
 hospital at; 60 a.
 letter dated at; 552 a.
 siege of; 569 a, 570 a.
 Maffei, Count; 17 b, 21 b. letters of (1706, &c.); 31 b, 32 b, 36 a, 36 b, 38 a, 39 b, 47 b.
 Magennis, pedigree of; 581 a.
 Maghee, Capt. George, collector, co. Westmeath; 521 a, 544 a, 549 a.
 Maghull, Richard, submission of; 380 a.
 Magniss, Thomas; 511 b.
 Magnus, Francis, letters of; 290 b, 293 b.
 Magrath, Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
 Maguire; 612 b.
 Lord, Irish plotter; 588 b.
 Captain; 484 b, 485 a.
 Capt. J.; 482 b.
 Robt.; 608 b.
 Roger; 605 a, 608 a, 609 b.
 — killed; 609 b.
 Mahieu, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Mahon :
 —, treatise by; 584 a.
 Dominic, of Strokestown; 466 b, 471 b.
 Patrick and Charles, of Strokestown; 466 b.
 Mahony, Count, Spanish Ambassador in Vienna; 488 b.
 Maidenhead; 35 a, 335 b.
 Maidstone; 141 a, 335 a. chapel or college; 318 a.
 church; 316 a.
 collegiate church of, attack on visitors of; 337 a.
 gaol; 337 a.
 hospital at; 341 b, 350 a.
 thread "carried all over the world;" 134 a.
 lands in; 329 a.
 trial at; 329 a.
 Maignet, Comte de, letters of; 32 a, 35 b, 37 a, 38 b.
 Maiming and wounding, Bill to prevent malicious; 160 a.
 Maine :
 Lieut.-General, letters of; 37 a, 38 b, 40 a.
 Major-General Edm., letter of; 36 a.
 Maintenon, Madame de; 559 b.
 Mainwaring, Maynwaring :
 — (1598), letter to; 398 b.
 — paper by; 585 a.
 Arthur; 18 b, 26 a.
 — letters of; 1 b, 54 a.
 — letters to; 15 a, 15 b.
 — his illness; 54 a.
 Captain; 595 b.
 Dr.; 365 b.
 Dudley, constable of Dublin Castle; 504 a.
 George, of Chester; 361 b.
 — commission to; 362 a.
 Henrie, letter to; 382 a.
 Sir J., letter of; 392 b.
 James, mayor of Chester (1708), letter to; 395 a.
 John and Geo., of Chester; 361 b.
 John; 367 b.
 Peter; 361 a.
 Ralph, of Chester; 369 a.
 Rebecca, petition of; 528 b.
 Sir Thomas; 389 a.
 — letter of; 389 a.
 Maior, William :
 letter of; 438 a.
 bailiff of Leicester; 418 b. keeper of the gaol; ib.
 Mair, John; 367 b.
 Maister, of Woodbridge, will of; 333 b.
 Maitland :
 Mr., letter of; 35 b.
 Jo., letter of; 3 b.
 documents signed by; 3 a.
 Lieut.-General, letters of; 38 b.
 Majendie, Lewis, Esq., M.P., MSS. of; xxi.
 Major :
 John, the Scotch historian, witness; xvii., 304 b, 306 a.
 — of Gray's Inn; 440 b.
 William, petition of; 150 a.
 Majorca, Mayeyorke, Isle of; 239 b, 240 a.
 Makepays, Gregory, of Leicester; 407 b.
 Makernan, Thomas; 607 a, 610 b, 613 a, 614 a, 616 b.
 Makke, Emma, of Salthouse, will of; 334 a.
 Malachy II., of the Colmanian race; 443 a.
 Malaga; 239 b, 245 b.
 wines of; 239 a, 239 b. malignant disease at; 233 a.
 merchants at; 257 a.
 tin sold in; 92 b.

- Malahide, co. Dublin; 501 b, 508 a.
 Castle, co. Dublin, report on manuscripts at; 493 a.
- Malahow, lands of; 506 a.
- Malaulla, John de, witness; 305 a.
- Malbone, Jeffery, petition of; 535 a.
- Malby, Henry; 378 b.
- Malcolm, Lieut. John, letters of; 290 b, 293 a, 293 b, 294 b.
- Malden, Surrey; 120 b.
- Maldigham, Comte de, letter of; 40 a.
- Maldon:
 rent in; 633 a.
- Maldon, Thomas, mercer, of Sudbury, will of; 335 a.
- Maldonado, Francis Abarca, of Toledo; 23 b.
- Malmainz or Malemariz, Henry, grants by; 235 a.
- Malesherbes, Mon. de; 286 a.
- Malet:
 Sir Alexander, Bart., MSS. of; xxi.
 Charles Warre, afterwards Sir Charles, resident at Poonah, letters of; 288 b-295 b, passim.
 — letter to; 295 a.
- Maleville, Henry, son of Robert, of Carnbee; 307 a.
- Maley, Thady, petition of; 516 b.
- Malknecht, Baron de, letter of; 37 a.
- Mallaherd, co. Dublin, garrison at, in 1648; 595 a.
- Mallary, capture of; 605 a.
- Mallet:
 Mr., letters of; 54 a.
 David, lists by; 25 b.
 — letter of; 26 a.
 — books, &c. lent to; 14 a.
 William, commissioner; 272 b.
- Malling:
 abbey; 265 b.
 abbesses of; 265 b, 348 b.
 the nuns of; 265 b.
 West; 332 b.
- Mallore, Henry, witness; 406 a.
- Mallory, Thomas, acknowledgment by; 399 b.
- Malloy, M., letter of; 37 a.
- Malmesbury:
 letter dated at; 639 a.
 abbey, seal of; 639 a.
 abbot of, Thomas, letter of; ib.
 Earl of (1820), letters of; 287 b.
- Malo Luco, Peter de; 357 b.
- Malone:
 Anthony, Prime Sergeant; 174 b.
 — speech of; 175 b.
 — seeks to be Master of the Rolls; 176 a.
 — his influence with the Papists; 177 b.
 — succeeded by E. Stannard; 179 a.
 — his attempts to regain office; 180 a.
 — to be Chancellor of the Exchequer; 181 a.
 — his loss of popularity; ib.
 William, of Trim; 546 b.
- Malory, Ra., of co. Beds; 7 b.
- "Malo passu," Wm. de; 357 a.
- Malt Act, the; 35 b.
- Malynes, Gerard, letter of; 435 b.
- Man, Ensign Tho.; 591 a.
- Man, Calf of; 251 a.
- Man, Isle of; 376 b, 399 b.
 Castle Knushen, document dated from; 378 a. copper coinage in; 79 a.
 Act relating to; 315 a.
- Manboy, Lieut. Thomas; 594 a.
- Manby:
 John, complaint against; 137 a.
 William, of Leicester; 416 b.
 — commission to; 417 a.
- Manchester; 381 b.
 documents dated at; 374 b, 385 b.
 discharged from being Sanctuary for malefactors; 370 b.
 Chetham's Library, MSS. of; xxiii.
- Manchester, Earl of:
 (1644); 3 a, 3 b, 5 b.
 (1645); 8 a.
 — letter of; ib.
 — speaker, letter of (1646); 10 b.
 at Turin; 16 b.
 certificate of (1660); 284 a.
 (1667); 109 a.
 Edward (1670); 151 a.
 letters of (1707-8); 47 b.
 letter of (1708); 35 b.
- Mandeville, Mandivill:
 John, of Ballybrides; 546 b.
 Lord; 212 a.
 — (1671); 161 b.
 Will. de, Earl of Essex; 264 b.
- Manfeld, Robert, of Taplow, will of; 332 a.
- Mangam, Capt. de, letter of; 37 a.
- Manger, Rob., parson of Whentacereburgh, will of; 334 a.
- Mangie or Mangy:
 Capt. Geo.; 105 b, 106 a.
 — petition, &c. of; 105 b.
- Manilwar' or Mesuilwar', Radulph; 356 a, 356 b.
- Manilla, restitution of; 285 b.
- Manisterain Abbey; 604 a.
- Manley:
 Appleby v., cause of; 239 a.
 Thomas, at Oxford; 6 a.
- Mann:
 Daniel, answer of; 163 b.
 George; 279 a, 280 b.
 Samuel; 163 b.
- Mannen, Ensign Charles, letter of; 294 a.
- Mannenlooff; 16 b.
- Manning and Woodley, case between; 585 a.
- Manners:
 John, deputy lieutenant of co. Derby, letter of; 379 a.
 — eldest son of Earl of Rutland (1666), claims barony of Roos; 105 b.
 — called Lord Roos (1670), Act to marry again; 140 a.
 Sir Richard; 425 b.
 Russell, letter of; 295 a.
- Mannheim, release of; 214 b, 215 a.
- Manning, Cardinal Archbishop, MSS. of; xxi.
- Mannington, Philip, letters of; 295 b.
- Mannoch, Nic., mayor of Rye (1700), letter of; 393 a.
- Manors, customs of, illustrations of; 625 b, et seq.
- Mansebs and Mansebdars; 59 b.
- Mansel, T., letters of; 31 b.
- Mansell, Sir Thomas and Lady, letters of; 57 a.
- Manselli, Simon; 279 b.
- Mansett, hundred of; 7 b.
- Mansfeld, Count; 584 a.
- Mansfield:
 Lord, Lord Chancellor (1757); 224 a.
 J., opinions by; 233 a.
- Manson:
 E., keeper of the prison of the Northgate, Chester; 385 b.
 Mr., letter of; 289 b.
- Maunstone in Thanet; 340 a.
- Mante, letters dated at; 28 a.
- Manton, co. Rutland; 435 b.
- Mantua, Duke of, ban against (1708); 19 b.
- Manufactures, resolutions of both houses respecting English and foreign; 124 b.
- Mansfield, John, instrument drawn by; 281 a.
- Manyng, Thomas; 631 a.
- Maples, Richard, will of; 257 b.
- Maplesdon, Edward, second clerk of the Trinity House; 258 a.
 — bond by; ib.
- Mapother, Robert, petition of; 508 a.
- Mar, Earl of:
 John, warrant by (1623); 308 b.
 letter of (1708); 35 b.
 letter of (1709); 44 a.
- Marbeck, Roger, registrar of the College of Physicians; 227 b.
- Marbles, Fran., cornet; 597 a.
- Marbury, Eusebius, petitions of; 504 a, 504 b.
- Mare, Sir Robert de la, indenture by; 412 a.
- Marcellinus; 586 a.
- Marcere or Mercer, John, of Whitechapel, his will; 271 b.
- March:
 Pitt and, letter of; 13 b.
 W. de, treasurer; 346 b.
 Earls of, pedigree; 366 a.
- Marcham, lands in; 262 b.
- Marchant, commissary general; 607 a.
- Marchevale, M., letter of; 37 a.
- Marchin, John F. de, Comte de Graville; 28 b.
- Marchistone, Laird of; 84 b.
- Marchmont, Lord:
 letters of; 54 a.
 his daughter (1705); 82 b.
 letters of (1708); 48 a.
 (1737); 18 a.
 letter to; 27 a.
 (1741); 55 b.
 executor of the Duchess of Marlborough; 567 a.
- Marden, lands in; 329 a.
- Mardike, soldiers of; 94 b.
- Mardyke, fortification of; 29 a.
- Mare, Robert de la; 412 b.
- Marescall, Peter, witness; 1 b.
- Marescallo, Wm.; 356 b.
- Mareschal, Mareschall:
 Isabella la, v. Wm. de Valentia; 168 a.
 Ralph, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 Marg., Countess of Norfolk; 262 b.
 Comte de, letters of; 38 b.
- Marest, M. du, letter of; 40 a.
- Marewe, John, mayor of Leicester, witness; 411 a.
- Margaret, Queen of Hen. VI., order concerning the clothing trade of Leicester by; 414 b.
 — lease by; 415 a.
- Margaret, the ship, of Helbray; 397 a.
- Margate, Margett, Queen Mary at (1688); 555 b.
- Marjetson, James, Abp. of Dublin, petition of; 501 a, 545 b.

Margry, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Maria Theresa, Empress; 452 a.
 Mario, Mons., musician; 12 b.
 Mariot, John, printer; 229 b.
 Marischall, master of, letter of; 303 a.
 Marish, Captain of the Ordnance; 90 a.
 Maristoun; 308 b.
 Markby priory, co. Lincoln; 265 a.
 Markham;
 letter dated at; 344 a.
 John; 279 a.
 Marks, Lord, his regiment (1729); 62 b.
 Markyn, Edward; 374 a.
 Marlborough;
 Earl of, late (1669); 130 b.
 — Wm., (1670), writ of summons to; 142 a.
 Duke of, his MSS., Mr. A. J. Horwood's report on; x., 1 a, et seq.
 — John Churchill first, letters and papers of; 1 a.
 — his letters (1702-1712); 12 a.
 — Duke of Ormonde and; 17 a.
 — his relations with William and Mary; 13 a.
 — Q. Anne's gift of plate to; 25 b.
 — his estate; 26 b.
 — Anne's instructions to (1709); 36 b.
 — Charles, letters of; 51 b, 57 b.
 — (1753); 219 b.
 — (1754); 224 b.
 — (1756); 222 b.
 — (1757); 224 a.
 — his gift to Oxford (1797); 13 b.
 Duchess of Sarah, letters of; 26 a.
 — letter of (1738); 13 b.
 — her Green Book; 14 b.
 — letters, &c. of; 18 a.
 — her vindication; 1 a, 26 a.
 — mem. by (1708); 36 a.
 — (1712); 40 b.
 — letters of A. Pope to; x., 56 a, et seq.
 — letters of and to (1717 and after); 57 a, 57 b.
 — plot connected with; 57 a.
 — and the Spencers; 566 b.
 — (1737); 568 a.
 — her disputes with the king and queen; ib.
 — Elizabeth, letters to; 57 b.
 — Caroline, letters of and to; 57 a, 57 b.
 — letter to (1817); 14 a.
 Marlborough; 221 a.
 commissioners for distressed inhabitants of, letter of (1653); 386 a.
 mayor of, letter to; 584 b.
 Marley, Lieut. J., letter of; 291 a.
 Marlowe, Great; 61 a.
 Marly, document dated from; 285 b.
 Marmyun, Marmion, Lords of Quinton; 263 a.
 Marocke, straits of; 236 b.
 Marrant, Will., of Hadleigh, will of; 332 b.
 Marrell, Ensign Michell; 595 a.
 Marriott, Thomas, letter of; 290 b.
 Mars of Falfield, manor or tithing, co. Gloucester, Act touching;
 139 b, 148 a.
 Marseilles; 195 a.
 Marsh Gebyn or Gibbon;
 manor of; 627 a.
 entries relating to; 631 a, 631 b.
 Westbury manor in; 630 a.
 Marsh, T. C., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Marshall;
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Quartermaster Alexand.; 596 a.
 Corporal John; 523 b.
 John; 164 b.
 Ralph; 118 b.
 Radulph, treasurer of Chester, account of; 367 b.
 Thos., of Chester; 368 a.
 Marshalsea, the;
 71 b, 155 a, 156 a, 157 b.
 "the nasty jail of"; 152 b. prisoners in; 227 a, 243 b, 245 a, 252 a.
 Court, the; 105 a.
 Marsham, Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Marston, co. York; 271 a.
 Martan, William, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Marten;
 Henry; 541 b.
 — signature; 8 b.
 Sir Henry, Judge of the Admiralty; 240 a, 243 a.
 — letters of; 240 b, 241 a, 243 a.
 — letters to; 243 a, 245 a, 246 a.
 Oliver, action against; 276 a.
 Martham, Richard, of Winchelsea, will of; 332 b.
 Martin IV. Pope, bulls, &c. of; 263 b, 318 a, 345 b.
 Martin, Martyn;
 Mrs.; 157 a.
 Andrew, of Elphin; 466 b.

Martin, Martyn—cont.
 Elizabeth, answer of; 124 a.
 Gregory, petition of; 501 b, 524 b.
 Gerard, deceased; 154 a.
 Governor, letter of; 288 b.
 Henry, his lordship of Borislew; 521 b.
 John; 373 b.
 — of Leicester; 421 a.
 Capt. John; 592 b.
 P. Wykeham, Esq., M.P., MSS. of; xxi.
 Richard, of the Mint; 65 a, 65 b, 66 a.
 — bailiff of Leicester; 413 a.
 — lawyer; 532 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 293 b.
 — petition of; 511 b.
 William, webster, of Leicester; 420 b.
 — answer of; 124 a.
 Marton;
 monastery of; 2 a.
 William, master of Ewelme Almshouse; 625 b, 627 a, 627 b.
 — at Oxford; 628 a.
 Marvell;
 Andrew; 143 b, note.
 — of the Trinity House; 236 a, 255 a, 256 b.
 Marvin, Capt. Audley, speech of; 217 b.
 Mary;
 Queen of England, precept to mayor of Leicester by; 416 b.
 Queen of Will. III. (1694); 283 b, 284 a.
 — letters of and to; 57 a.
 — her letter to Anne; 13 a.
 — death of (1695); 57 a.
 Queen of Scots, charter by; 301 a.
 — her flight; 298 b.
 — her death; 582 a.
 Mary, the ship, mutiny on; 244 b.
 Mary and John, the ship; 245 a.
 Mary and Barbara, the ship; 243 a.
 Maryborough;
 assizes at; 537 a.
 siege of; 610 b.
 governor of; ib.
 Maryland, papers relating to; 48 a.
 Masbury, Thomas, corrody to; 343 a.
 Mascall, John, of London, will of; 333 a.
 Masci, Hamon de; 357 a.
 Masey;
 Hugh, mayor of Chester (temp. Edw. IV.); 368 a.
 John; 386 b.
 Mashall, Robt., of Walton, will of; 335 b.
 Masham;
 Lord and Lady (1710); 38 b.
 Lord (1718); 87 a.
 Mrs.; 18 b.
 — Q. Anne and; 43 a, 53 b.
 — her behaviour; 15 a.
 — abusive letter to; 26 a.
 Dame Mary; 109 a.
 Sam., letter of; 35 b.
 W., order signed by; 10 a.
 Mason;
 a gardener; 189 b.
 B., letters of; 292 b, 294 a.
 Captain George; 591 b.
 John Monck, letters of; 195 b, 205 a.
 — a revenue commissioner in Ireland; 205 a, note.
 — his unpopularity; 205 a.
 Moses, his wife; 237.
 Richard; 116 a.
 — petition of; ib.
 — writs touching; ib.
 Wm.; 163 b.
 — answer of; 163 b.
 Masquerade plot, the; 63 b.
 Mass or Service books, &c. at Ewelme; 629 b.
 Massachusetts Bay Company; 585 a.
 Massarano, Prince (1767); 488 b.
 Massarene;
 Viscount, petitions of (1663); 501 a, 504 b, 511 a, 511 b,
 521 a, 542 a.
 — his adventure (1663); 549 a.
 — his company (1663); 530 a.
 — lands held by; 520 a.
 — and Sir Chr. Aylmer; 531 b.
 Massé, engineer-general in Ireland; 494 b.
 Massett, Will., grocer, of London, will of; 333 a.
 Massey, Massie;
 Col., his regiment; 11 b.
 Ales, widow of Wm.; 397 b.
 Sir Edward; 389 b.
 — letter of; ib.
 Gerrard, letter of; 399 b.
 Hugh, quartermaster; 596 a.
 Richard; 375 a.
 — late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.

Massinger, Philip, poems by; 584 a.
 Massola, Fra., consul at Genoa; 244 b.
 Massom (Masham?) co. York; 383 a.
 Massonett, Dr., physician to Duke of York (1664), allowance to; 281 a.
 Master :
 Richard, President of the College of Physicians; 227 a.
 Strengham, at Fort St. George; 256 b.
 Masters, an apothecary; 229 b.
 Masterson, Laurence, prisoner, petition of; 539 a.
 Matchett, Wm., affidavit of; 121 a.
 Matefey, John, citizen of London; 633 a.
 Mateland, John; 279 a.
 Mathers; 301 a.
 Mathew :
 Capt., killed; 611 a.
 Toby, Abp. of York, dedication to; 583 a.
 Francis, execution of; 607 a.
 Mr., and the Ulster party; 612 a.
 Mathues, Bennet, deposition of; 236 b.
 Matignon, Marquis de; 568 a.
 Matthew, Peter, merchant, captive in Barbary; 241 b.
 Matthews :
 Mr., in Cahir castle; 578 b.
 G., letter of; 292 b.
 Mattocks, Lieut. John R., letter of; 293 b.
 Matucoff, M., letters of; 32 a, 32 b, 38 b.
 Maubert, Nicholas; 115 a, 115 b. order touching; 115 b.
 Maubeuge, town of; 36 b.
 Maud, Col. Robert, petition of; 503 a.
 Mauditt, Hugo, clerk, of Leicester; 406 a, 406 b.
 Maule, Major Geo., letters of; 293 b, 294 b.
 Mauleverer, Malliverer :
 Sir Richard, commissioner; 275 a.
 Sir Thomas; 271 a.
 Maunday :
 Thomas, of London, goldsmith; 437 b.
 letter of; ib.
 Maurice :
 John, trooper, petition of; 529 b.
 Prince, his surgeon; 9 a.
 — routed by Col. Rositer (1645); 9 b.
 Mr., candidate for Lincolnshire; 50 a.
 Mauricius; 293 b.
 Maxwell :
 Dr., his deposition; 575 a.
 Edward, letter of; 290 b.
 G., letters of; 46 a.
 Lieut.-Col. Hamilton, letter of; 295 b.
 James, late gentleman nsber of the Black Rod (1669); 137 a.
 Robert, Bishop of Kilmore, petition of; 501 a, 521 a.
 May :
 prior of, John; 300 b.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Baptista; 278 a.
 Henry, letter of; 392 b.
 John, of Leicester; 420 a.
 — del; 373 b.
 Thomas, of Wadhurst, will of; 333 a.
 William, of Enfield, complaint of; 271 b.
 Mayart, Sergeant; 581 a.
 Maye, Capt., his company; 541 b.
 Mayence, Elector of :
 letters of (1705); 31 a.
 — (1707); 32 a.
 letter of (1709); 36 b.
 — (1710); 38 a.
 Mayerne, Theodore : of the College of Physicians; 226 b, 229 a. notice of; 234 a.
 prescriptions by; ib.
 Mayew :
 President of Magd. Coll., Oxford, letter to; 263 a.
 Procurator-General at Rome; 269 a.
 Mayefin family, of Everintune; 262 b.
 Mayfield, Vicar of; 333 a.
 Mayflower, the ship; 240 b.
 Mayhew, R., chaplain to Ric. III.; 265 b.
 Mayle, Thomas, order signed by; 373 b.
 Marly, Patrick, "sovereine of New Rosse, alias Rosponste, co. Wexford," certificate of; 371 b.
 Maymond, E., letter of; 294 a.
 Maynard :
 Lord; 558 a.
 — (1674); 256 a.
 Lady or Dame Mary, of Tooting; 637 b.
 — letter of; ib.
 Sergeant; 147 b, 172 a, 235 b.
 — resolution touching; 107 a.
 — speech of; 168 a.
 — at the Trinity House; 250 a.
 Sir John, letter of; 637 b.
 — levy on; ib.
 Mayne, Capt. C., letter of; 294 b.

Maynooth, Mannooth, garrison at, in 1648; 594 a.
 Mayo : island of; 80 b.
 papers relating to affairs in (1798-9); 584 a.
 English college at; 585 b.
 Bishop of, J. Bell; 336 a.
 Viscount Bourke's estates in; 549 a.
 Viscount, Theobald (1663-4); 550 b.
 Mayors :
 Sheriffs and others, writ to (1607); 380 b. and others, order to; 391 b.
 Mazar, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Mazarin, Cardinal :
 letters to; x., 1 a, 27 b, 218 a.
 his opiniou of Prince Rupert; 552 b. his undertaking with Cromwell; 29 b.
 Mead :
 Mr., solicitor; 232 a.
 R.; 226 b.
 Dr. Richard, of Oxford; 231 b.
 Meadley, Cornelius, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Meadows :
 Mr.; 62 b.
 Phil., letter of; 47 a.
 Sir Philip, his letter; 33 b.
 — letter of; 36 b.
 Philip, payment to; 94 b.
 Meales, Richard; 365 b.
 Mealesbury, Edward of, his widow; 639 a.
 Meara, Dr.; 614 a.
 Meare, Capt. Thomas, his company; 531 b.
 Menres, Capt. J., letter of; 294 a.
 Mearns, sheriff of the; 297 a, 297 b.
 Measures, standard; 361 a, 361 b, 640 a.
 Meath :
 Bishop of (1778), titular; 197 b.
 see of; 198 a.
 James II.'s lands in; 497 b, 498 a. assessment; 582 a.
 grants to Lord Tyrconnell in; 499 a.
 burning of; 606 b.
 diocese; 581 b, 582 b.
 losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 Bishop of (1641), Thos. Deiz; 603 b.
 — (1648), —; 609 b.
 — (1651), —; 614 b.
 Earl of, his troop (1663); 509 b, 516 a, 516 b, 537 a, 540 b, 543 a.
 Mechlin :
 magistrates of, letter of; 35 b.
 Archbp. of (1708), letter of; 35 b.
 Mecine, Comtesse de, letter of; 37 a.
 Mecklenburg :
 the title of; 34 a.
 Duchy of, memorial, disputes about (1709); 38 a.
 Medhapp, Captain Francis; 595 a.
 Medici :
 Mary de, account of her arrival at Lyons; 283 a.
 — description of her marriage with Henry IV.; ib.
 — at St. James's; 552 b.
 — account of her voyage to England; 554 b.
 Pier Francesco de; 26 b.
 Medina Sidonia, malignant disease in; 233 a.
 Medina, Sir Solomon, at the Hague, letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 38 b, 39 b.
 Mediterranean, the; 27 a, 33 a, 35 a, 235 b, 239 b, 254 a.
 English ships in (1708); 20 a.
 Medland, Robert de, Earl of Leicester; 406 a, 406 b.
 Medlycott, Thomas, letters of; 58 b.
 Medupp, Capt. Francis, weekly charge of his troop; 59
 Medway, the river, baracado for; 240 b.
 Mee, M. du, letters of; 31 b.
 Meeke, Capt. Francis, petition of; 504 b.
 Megercron, M. de; 27 a.
 Megget Water, gold in; 84 b.
 Meighan, Thomas; 482 b.
 Meikle Fairlay, superiority of; 310 a.
 Meilds or Miletus, king of Spain; 602 b.
 Meirsch, M., letter of; 35 b.
 Mejereron, M. de; 562 a.
 Melbourne; 335 b.
 Melchbourn, manor of; 10 a.
 Meldreth; 335 b.
 Meldrum :
 David, canon of Dunkeld; 306 a.
 Sir John, his patent; 241 b, 246 a.
 — warrant to; 245 b.
 Melford, 332 b, 334 a.
 William de, archdeacon of Colchester; 633 b.
 Melfort, Lord, letters of (1689-1690); 493 a.
 Melgum and Langrenis, near Largo Law, claim to lands of 308 a.
 Melgrund, North; 304 b, 306 b.
 Melicke, Island of; 602 a.
 Melin, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Mell, Thomas, of Long Cliffe; 276 b.

- Mellan, Redmond; 610 b.
 Melle, John, of Horsley, will of; 335 a.
 Mellefont monastery; 604 a.
 Mellent, Earl of, Robert, charter of; 422 a.
 Mellesburgh, manor of; 639 a.
 Mellouaire, Mr. de la; 563 a.
 Mellorrie, Peter; 357 b.
 Melsame, Corporal John; 512 b.
 Melton; 413 a.
 Melton Mowbray, and the plague at Leicester; 435 a.
 Melville, Melville :
 Andrew, master of James VI.'s household; 299 a, 302 b.
 John, of Glenbervie; 297 b.
 — chapel erected to; 298 a.
 Robert, of Harvieston; 301 a.
 T., letter of; 293 b.
 Melvin, Thomas, his escape from the Turks; 241 b
 Menardiere, M. de la, letter of; 35 b.
 Mengarie, Roger de; 357 a.
 Memigar, Roger; 356 a.
 Menardcan, M., arrested; 565 b.
 Mendham; 334 a.
 Margery, of Canterbury, will of; 340 a.
 Mendlesham parish, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Mendoza, M. de, letter of; 38 b.
 Meneos, Don Francis de; 30 a.
 Menes, manor of; 264 b.
 Meniu :
 commandant of, letter of; 39 b.
 town of; 36 b.
 Mends, Mennes :
 Sir John; 128 b.
 — letter of; 131 b.
 — of the Trinity House; 248 b, 250 a, 251 a, 251 b.
 Sir Matthew, grant to; 4 a.
 — his rents; 4 b.
 — his estate; 6 b.
 Mentmore; 2 a.
 Menzies, Sir Robert, MSS. of; xxi.
 Menzikoff :
 Prince de, letter of (1710); 38 a.
 — letter of (1711); 40 a.
 Meonloghbegg, concealed lands of; 531 a.
 Meonloghmore, concealed lands of; ib.
 Meopham, Kent :
 manor of; 327 b, 330 b.
 church of; 330 b.
 Edmund and Simon de; ib.
 Merbach, M. de, letter of; 38 b.
 Mercer :
 Lieut. Henry, letters of; 295 b. or Marcer, John, of Whitechapel, his will; 271 b.
 Laurence, letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 293 a, 294 a.
 Wm., of Chester; 361 b.
 — of Leicester, conveyance by; 413 b.
 — licence to; 413 b.
 — conveyance to; 414 a.
 Mercers' Company of London, the; 145 a, 249 a.
 Merchant Adventurers of England; 122 b, 127 b.
 — otherwise the Hamburg Company (Salmon v.) case; 147 b.
 Merchants of the Staple, the; 127 b.
 Mercier, Mon., letter of; 293 b.
 Merdeth, Sir Thomas, captain; 596 b.
 Merdon church; 264 a.
 Merceroft, John, of Tavistock, will of; 334 b.
 Meredith :
 Brigadier, letters of; 32 a.
 Major, his troop; 500 b, 533 a.
 Major-General, letter of; 35 b.
 Cornet Charles; 545 b.
 — Robert; 517 a, 518 b.
 — certificate by; 515 b.
 Sir William, his troop; 514 a, 525 a.
 Capt. William; 595 b.
 Major William; 582 a.
 — narrative of events in Ireland, 1649-53, by; 576 a, 599 a.
 Meres, Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Meress, R., letter signed by; 386 b.
 Mereworth, letters dated at; 569 b, 570 b.
 Merey, Comte de, letter of; 37 a.
 Merian, M., councillor to the Elector of Mayence, letter of; 36 a.
 Meridene, Robert de, witness; 1 b.
 Merkes, John de; 357 b.
 Merlane, Gooseham Mill at; 324 b.
 Merlebridge, document dated from; 356 b.
 Merlin's prophecies; 431 b.
 Merrick, Mr., benefactor of the Trinity House; 254 a.
 Merryonge, garrison at, in 1648; 595 a.
 Merryweather, Lady, letter of; 57 a.
 Mersham, Kent; 343 a.
 lands in; 319 a.
 manor of; 325 b, 328 b.
 Harlakyn denn annexed to; 328 b.
 Mersshe, Roger, executor; 634 a.
 Merstham; 323 b, 324 a, 352 a.
 Meryke, Isabel, of St. Mary extra Muros, Winchester, will of; 333 a.
 Mesgrigny, Madame de, letters of; 35 b, 37 b, 40 a.
 Mesnager, Sieur; 39 a.
 Messine, Comtesse de, letter of; 36 a.
 Messioier, Arthur, servant; 378 b.
 Metham, Sir Thomas, grant by; 271 a.
 Methley, co. York; 275 a.
 Methuen :
 ambassador, letters of; 25 a, 31 b, 47 b.
 Jo., letters of; 44 a.
 Mr.; 16 a.
 Paul, envoy to Savoy; 47 a, 53 b, 59 b.
 — letters of; 58 a.
 Metingham, Sir John de, justice; 421 a.
 Mettingham, John de; 357 b.
 Metz, citadel; 286 a.
 Meverell :
 Dr., evidence by; 229 b.
 Othewell, President of the College of Physicians; 230 a.
 Mevis in the West Indies; 156 a, 157 b.
 Mewi, William de, charter by; 636 b.
 Meyer :
 E. C., letters of; 290 b.
 G., letters of; 292 b.
 G. C., letter of; 294 a.
 Lawrence or Capt. Lawrance, of the Trinity House; 250 a.
 — expelled; 250 b.
 Meynell, Mr.; 134 b.
 Meyrick, James, letters of; 290 a, 291 a, 292 b, 293 b, 394 b, 295 a.
 Meyvys, Mistris, of Leicester; 433 a.
 Meziriac, Monsiour, work by; 63 b.
 Mezquitta, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Michel, Michell :
 Colonel; 6 a.
 Sert. Major; 365 a.
 Andree; 281 b.
 Henry Chichley, letter of; 295 b.
 Captain John; 596 a.
 Thomas, of Canington, will of; 335 a.
 Michelstown, inhabitants of; 462 b.
 Michillone, Ralph, of Leicester; 410 b.
 Micklethwait, Mr., gift by; 231 b.
 Micks, Matthew, captive in Algiers; 241 a.
 Micoe, Mr. Alderman; 110 a, 110 b, 111 a.
 Middelmores, Rich., esquire, of Edgbaston, will of; 334 b.
 Middelworth, Willerin; 324 a.
 Middeltune Church; 316 a.
 Middle Aston, co. Oxford; 125 b.
 Middleburgh; 99 b.
 Middleham, co. York; 636 a.
 Middlesex :
 dragoons furnished by (1645); 8 b.
 gaol delivery for; 46 b.
 New Prison; 71 b.
 Earl of (1623), letters of; 241 a.
 Middleton; 333 b.
 Essex, manor of; 322 b.
 Viscount, MSS. of; xxi.
 Lord; 29 b.
 — (1688); 555 b.
 — his sons (1708); 34 a, 45 b.
 Lieut.-General; 30 a.
 Mr., brother of Lord Clermont; 46 b.
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Charles, prisoner; 46 a.
 David, pardon to; 360 a.
 — mayor of Chester, book of (temp. Hen. VIII.); 369 a.
 John, of Leicester, commission to; 417 a.
 — justice, of Leicester; 427 b.
 — petition of; 503 a.
 — in Kilhill; 301 a.
 Col. Thomas, of the Trinity House; 250 a, 251 b, 253 b.
 Capt. Pitts, letters of; 290 b, 291 a.
 Samuel; 291 b.
 — deceased; 291 b.
 Symon, petitions, &c. of; 136 a.
 Thos., letter signed by; 388 b.
 Middlewick, church at; 389 a.
 Midford, John, certificate by; 76 b.
 Midgeley (?), co. York; 636 b.
 Midhurst chapel; 264 a.
 Midsomer Norton, land in; 638 b.
 Midwives of London, their petition; 229 a, 229 b.
 Migeott, M., letter of; 36 a.
 Milan; 20 b, 22 b, 95 a, 96 a, 133 b, 282 b.
 letters dated at; 20 b.
 Milborn :
 R., letter of; 35 b.
 Major R., letter of; 37 a.
 Richard, letter of; 40 a.
 Milborne Port; 288 a.
 Milekau, M. (a major-genl.), letters of; 35 b, 37

Mildmay :

- Benjamin, afterwards Lord Fitzwalter, petition of ; 116 b.
- Frances, her case ; 107 a.
- Sir Henry, Bart., MSS. of ; xxi.
- Henry, deceased, amendments concerning lands of ; 107 a.
- Jane, wife of Henry ; 107 a.
- daughter of Henry, her case ; 107 a.
- Lucy, her case ; 107 a.
- Mary, her case ; 107 a.
- Capt. St. John, MSS. of ; xiii., xxi.
- W., order signed by ; 373 b.
- Walter, letters to ; 583 b.
- Sir Walter, commissioner ; 271 b.
- William, letter of ; 284 a.

Miles, John, petition of ; 525 b.

- Millett, Will., of Dartford, will of ; 333 a.
- Miletus or Melids, King of Spain ; 602 b.
- Milford Haven ; 379 b, 380 a, 385 a.

lighthouse at ; 251 a, 261 b.

Milkenap, the ship ; 239 a.

- Millard, Richard, of the Mint ; 66 a, 66 b.
- Millbroke ; 5 a.

Millbrooke, incumbent of ; 5 b.

Miller :

- James, letters of ; 294 a, 295 b.
- John, of Egerton, will of ; 340 a.
- Robert, of the Edinburgh Mint ; 81 b, 82 b.
- petition of ; 83 a.
- letter supporting ; 83 a.

Millery, M. de, letter of ; 40 a.

Millington :

- Sir Thomas, President of the College of Physicians ; 231 b, 235 a.
- his death and character ; 231 b.

Millner, Mr., memorial of ; 50 b.

Mills :

- Col., letter of ; 289 a.
- Mr., payment to ; 526 a.
- Miltonfallon, co. Connaught ; 540 b.
- Milne, Thomas and Elizabeth, of Leicester ; 414 a.

Milner :

- John ; 272 b.
- consul, letters of ; 47 b.

Milton :

- Earnest ; 4 a.
- Sarum ; 333 a.
- Michael, of Pontefract ; 276 a.

Milwood in Tuddington ; 4 a.

Minchin, —, lands set to ; 498 a.

Mindelheim, papers concerning ; 31 b.

Minehead ; 138 a.

Ministers, trustees of maintenance of ; 385 b.

Minorea, Minyorke, Isle of ; 239 b.

Minshall :

- John, mayor of Chester (1712), letter to ; 395 b.
- Richd., of Chester ; 361 b.
- Thos., of Chester ; 361 b.

Mint, the ; 103 b.

- coinage, &c. papers concerning ; 60 b, et seq.
- See London, the Tower.

Minto, Earl (1806), letter of ; 296 b.

Miranda, Diego de, a Portuguese, his journey to Persia ; 23 a.

Miremont, Marquis de, Bourbon ; 40 b.

Misarden, co. Gloucester ; 151 b.

Misnia ; 220 b.

Missal "de Arbuthnot," description of ; 300 a.

Missenden, abbey of ; 320 b.

Missing, Lieut. John, letters of ; 295 b.

Mistley, letter dated at ; 192 b.

Mitchell :

- Mr., stoppage of his bank in Dublin ; 196 b.
- Ensign Alexander, letter of ; 292 b.
- Admiral Sir D., letters of ; 31 b.
- David, petition of ; 238 a.
- John, collector, King's co. ; 546 a.
- defendant ; 529 b.
- Nicholas, petition of ; 510 b.

Mitre, the, privilege of ; 317 b.

Mocher, General, commander in Munster ; 200 b.

Moday, John, of Sutton, his dispute with the Dean of St. Paul's ; 632 b.

Modena :

- Prince and Princess of, contemplated marriage of daughter of (1763) ; 286 a.
- Duke of (1655) ; 28 a.
- letters of and to (1661-2) ; 29 b.

Modewode, Medwode, forest of ; 406 b, 407 a.

Mody, Wm. ; 367 a.

Moffat, John, letter of ; 290 a.

Mogul, the Great, letter of ; 585 a.

Mogyl, William, archdeacon, agreement by ; 266 a.

Mohun, Lord :

- Charles, Baron of Okehampton (1667), case of ; 114 b.
- writ of summons to (1670) ; 146 b.
- petition of (1671) ; 161 b.
- Warwick, deceased (1670) ; 154 b.

Mohun, Lord—cont.

- Warwick, deceased (1671) ; x., 161 b.
- letter of (1708) ; 35 b.

Mohun, Lady :

- letters of ; 54 a.
- Katherine, relict of Warwick, Lord Mohun ; 161 b.
- petition of ; 154 b.

Moicha, M., letter of ; 38 b.

Moigne, Dorothy, of Dublin, petition signed by ; 590 a.

Moimeric, M. de la ; 27 b.

Moimhora, co. Wexford ; 508 a.

Moir, Earl of :

- Sir John Rawdon (1766) ; 481 a.
- letter of (1813) ; 287 b.

Molakin, Nanfray ; 65 a.

Moldavia, Prince of ; 130 a.

Mole :

- Henry, of Leicester ; 430 b.
- M., letter of ; 37 a.
- William, of Leicester ; 420 a.

Molenschot, M., letter of ; 40 a.

Moles, Duke of :

- letters of (1706) ; 31 b.
- (1708) ; 33 a.
- letter of (1709) ; 36 b.
- letter of (1710) ; 38 a.
- letter of ; 39 b.

Molesworth :

- Captain, afterwards Lord (1708) ; 16 a.
- Col., letters of ; 38 b.
- Lord (1714), letter of ; 57 a.
- Mr., letters of ; 39 b, 49 a, 57 a.
- J., letter of ; 57 a.
- R., letters of ; 44 a.

Molié, M., letter of ; 35 b.

Mollingar ; 616 b.

Molloy :

- Mr. ; 482 b.
- Capt. Arthur, petitions of ; 500 a, 513 b.
- his service under Charles II. ; 500 a.
- Col. Charles ; 613 b.
- John, petition of ; 529 b.
- Capt. Terence, petitions of ; 500 a, 513 b.
- his service under Charles II. ; 500 a.

Molo, M. de, letter of ; 40 a.

Molony, A., letter of ; 290 b.

Molson, Lady ; 140 b.

Molwat, Jean Frederick, assumed name of Dykevelt 552 a Molynx, Mollinex :

- Lord (1678) ; 391 a.
- letter of (1715) ; 40 b.
- Mr., letter of ; 57 a.
- Daniel, Ulster king-at-arms ; 572 a, 582 b, 583 a.
- transcript by ; 581 a.
- Edmund ; 379 a.
- Nich., agreement by ; 265 a.
- receipt from ; ib.
- Richard, letter of ; 379 a.
- Thos., letter of ; 71 b.
- ; 392 b.
- letter, &c. of ; 392 b.
- his house in Cornhill ; ib.
- W. More, Esq., MSS. of ; xxi.

Monaghan co., losses in, during rebellion (1641) ; 573 a.

Monasteries, &c., domestic arrangements in ; 324 b, 325 a Monbodo ; 301 a.

Lord, MSS. of ; xxi.

Monceaux, Dame de (1599), reported death of ; 282 b.

Monck, Monk :

- Christopher and Elizabeth ; 436 a.
- Colonel ; 610 b.
- General George ; 438 a, 438 b.
- letters of ; 299 a, 303 b, 438 a, 439 a.
- letter to ; 438 b.
- his entertainment at Leicester ; 429 b.
- at St. Albans ; 438 b.
- in Scotland ; 30 a.
- of the Trinity House ; 235 b, 248 b.
- Lieut. Ri. ; 596 b.
- Richard, quartermaster ; 518 b.

Monckenemers, marsh called ; 235 a.

Monckton, R., letter of ; 47 a.

Mondragon, Duc de, letters of ; 32 a.

Money, Patrick ; 610 b.

Money :

- clipped and base, importation of ; 347 a.
- value of (1669) ; 134 a.

Mongeham :

- lands in ; 319 a.
- manor of ; 326 b.
- rector of ; 340 a.

Mongnot, médecin ; 564 a.

Mongois Wells, main of ; 308 b.

Monkeuesnode, "Denn" of ; 329 a.

Monks, admission of, regulations for ; 321 b.

- Monkton; 332 b. church of; 326 b, 328 b, 341 b.
 manor of; 327 b.
 tithes of; 318 a.
- Monmartele, Mousieur; 572 a.
- Monncillan, demolition of; 21 b.
- Monmouth:
 ship-money assessment; 383 a.
 garrison (1642); 111 a.
 Duke of, James, writ of summons to (1670); 146 b.
 Duchess of, letters of; 54 a.
 Lord, his apartment at Whitehall (1691); 563 a.
 Countess of (1691); 565 b.
- Monoux, Hum., document signed by; 9 a.
- Monro, Dr. John, fellow of the College of Physicians; 234 a.
- Monroe, in Ireland; 603 a.
- Mons: victory of; 12 b, 21 a, 26 b.
 taking of; 21 b.
 capitulation of (1711), declaration; 40 a.
 governor of, letter of; 39 b.
- Monsigil, counsellor of Marie de Medici; 554 b.
- Monson:
 Capt., letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 293 a, 295 a, 295 b.
 Sir J., letter of; 209 b.
 Sir Thomas; 585 a.
- Montacute; 332 a.
- Montagu, Mountagu:
 Duke of, letters of (1706, &c.); 32 a, 32 b, 36 a, 51 b.
 — a doctor of physic (1717); 232 a.
 — (1737), command given to; 568 a.
 Lord (1622), his son; 215 a.
 — of Boughton (1671); 440 a.
 — Edward (temp. Commonwealth); 94 b.
 — — payment to (1658); 95 a.
 Abbé; 28 a.
 Sir Edw. Hussey; 219 b.
 Charles, security for Newton; 66 a.
 — warrant signed by; 66 b.
 Lady Essex; 151 a.
 Fredk., letter of; 295 a.
 Sir H., sergeant-at-law; 237 b, 246 b.
 James, Solicitor-General, letters of; 45 b, 46 a, 46 b, 47 a.
 — opinion by; 81 a.
 Ralph, gentleman of the horse to Duchess of York; 279 b.
 Mr., his change of religion; 553 b.
- Montaigne's Essays; 25 b.
- Montargis; 566 a.
- Montargres, M. de, letter of; 40 a.
- Montauban; 285 b.
 letters dated at; 28 a, 218 a.
- Montbeliard, principality of; 59 b.
- Monte Aento, John de, of the Tower; 89 a.
- Monte Alto, Radulph; 356 a, 356 b.
- Montesquieux:
 M. le President; 63 a.
 Marechal de, letters of; 40 a.
- Montferrat; 16 b, 19 b.
- Montfort:
 Agnes de, charter by; 300 b, 301 a.
 M. de la Tour, commandant of Calais; 17 b.
 Simon de, witness; 357 a.
 — Earl of Leicester, his charters to burgesses of Leicester; 403 b, 405 b, 407 a, 408 a, 422 b.
- Montgomerie, Montgomery:
 Lord (1646), Charles I. and; 212 b.
 — (1648); 608 b.
 Mr.; 41 b.
 — letter of; 37 a.
 A., letter of; 293 b.
 Major H., letter of; 294 b.
 John, of Giffan; 82 a.
 Lieut. W., letter of; 295 b.
- Month or Mount, Lindsay of; 308 a.
 David Lindsay of; 307 b.
- Montmellon, camp at; 21 a.
- Montmerli, Monsieur, letter of; 290 b.
- Mont-Miral, Mons. Langy; 557 a.
- Montmorency:
 Baron de Neuville, letter of; 35 b.
 Princess of, letters of; 31 b, 38 b.
- Montney, Nathaniel, jurymen; 89 a.
- Montpensier, Duke (1600); 282 b.
- Montresor, Major, letter of; 40 a.
- Montroe; 606 a.
 General, his army; 605 a.
 — his son; ib.
 Sir George; 611 a.
- Montrose:
 royal burgh of, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Duke of, MSS. of; xxi.
 — (1700); 310 a.
 — (1737); 18 a.
 Marquis of (1648); 27 b.
 —; 212 b.
 Lord, letters of (1708); 48 a.
- Monturpye, Hauhill and, tenants of; 308 a.
- Monymail, document dated at; 300 b.
- Moody:
 Capt., letter of; 38 b.
 Ann, letter of; 35 b.
- Moone, co. Kildare; 508 a.
- Mooney:
 John, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 Richard, soldier in Ireland; ib.
- Moor, Moore:
 Dr., incumbent of Barton; 4 a.
 — Archbishop of Canterbury, letters of; 57 b.
 Mr., letters of; 49 a.
 —; 429 b.
- Lord, list of his troop (1648); 596 b.
 — his troop (1663); 521 b.
- Colonel; 611 b.
 Alice and Jane, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Bartholomew, post footman, petition of; 437 b.
 Capt. Brent; 504 b, 531 b.
 Col. Charles; 496 b.
 Dudley; 16 a.
 Sir Francis, readings, &c. by; 584 b.
 Lieut. Colonel Frann; 592 b.
 Francis, petition of; 71 b.
 Capt. Garrett, his company; 538 b, 543 b, 545 a, 596 b.
 John, of Pontefract; 276 a.
 — waterman; 279 b.
 Cornet John; 596 a.
 Sir Jonas; 76 a.
 Capt. Lewes or Lewis; 605 a, 608 a, 608 b, 609 a, 613 b, 614 b, 617 b.
 Nicholas, of Earl's Colue, will of; 332 b.
 Robert, of Pontefract; 274 a, 274 b.
 Cornet Randal; 546 b.
 Robert, of Naas, petition of; 521 a.
 Roger; 604 a, 610 a, 615 b.
 Lieut. Thomas; 593 a.
 Lieut. William; 592 a, 597 a.
 William, of Saulestown, petition of; 538 a.
 — quartermaster; 596 b.
 Ensign Zachary; 591 b.
- Moores, Colonel John; 593 a.
- Moors, the, capture by; 239 b.
- Moorsheadabad; 288 b, 290 a, 292 a.
- Moote:
 Agnes, of West Lynn, will of; 333 b.
 Robert, of West Lynn, will of; 333 b.
- Morant, J., custodes Archiepiscopatus Cant.; 352 a.
- Morat, Carlo, painting by; 100 b.
- Moray:
 Col. de, letter of; 39 b.
 C. H. D., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Robert, letter of; 46 a.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xxi.
 — James Stewart, afterwards; 304 b.
- Mordant, Mordant:
 —; 376 a.
 Lord or Viscount (1594); 376 a.
 — John, his widow (1644); 4 b.
 — (1667), constable of Windsor Castle, articles of impeachment against; 106 b.
 — answer to impeachment; 107 a.
 — (1670); 149 a, 149 b.
 — letters of (c. 1700); 559 a.
 — letters of his wife; 558 b.
 — letters of (1708); 34 a, 36 a.
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 General, letter of; 37 b.
 Sir J., commander; 224 b.
 Sir John; 59 b.
 Lieut. or Col. John; 291 b.
 — letters of; 291 a.
 John; 376 a.
- Mordington, Mr., letter of; 37 b.
- Mordone, Robert de, sheriff of London; 633 a.
- More:
 Adam, witness; 306 b.
 Edmund; 386 b.
 John, mercer; 89 a.
 — examination of; 374 a.
 Matthew, of Wells; 639 b. or Moore, Sir William, his son; 156 b, 158 a, 159 a, 159 b.
 — lord of Abircorn; 307 a.
- Moreton Hampstead; 324 a.
- Moreton:
 Capt. Henry, petition of; 503 a.
 Earl of, John (temp. Ric. I.); 356 b.
 — charters of; 355 a, 356 b.
- Morgan:
 Col.; 9 a.
 — governor of Gloucester; 11 b.
 —; 294 b.
 — letters of; 295 a, 295 b.
 Major-General, letter to; 28 b.

Morgan—cont.

- Mr., of the Mint; 82 a.
 — payment to; 83 a.
 Col. C., letters of; 293 b.
 Charles (Judge Advocate General), letter of; 296 a.
 Sir Charles; 384 a.
 Lieut. Charles; 594 b.
 David, petition of; 140 a.
 Henry, petition of; 511 a.
 Henry, quartermaster; 595 b.
 Ensign John; 594 b.
 John, petition of; 504 a.
 Josiah, letter of; 295 a.
 Philip, doctor of laws, commission to; 340 b.
 Rice, trooper; 550 b.
 Richard, of the Mint; 83 a.
 — and Mary, alias Hill; 522 a.
 Thomas, letter of; 10 b.
 Ensign William; 592 a.
 William; 151 b.
 — petition of; 78 b.
 Morgheve, manor of; 634 b.
 Morginne, Mr., conspirator; 434 a.
 Morin, Richard, witness; 407 a.
 Moris, Margaret, of Worcester, will of; 332 a.
 Morish, Daniel, trooper; 546 b.
 Morison, W., of Benholm; 297 a.
 Morland :
 Henry, vicar of Aketon, Norwich diocese, will of; 335 a.
 Samuel, clerk of the signet; 94 b.
 — payment to; 94 b.
 Morley :
 Colonel, his regiment; 438 a.
 and Mounteagle, Lord, Thomas, petition of (1666); 101 b.
 Cuthbert; 114 a.
 — petitions of; 114 a.
 Elizabeth, of Carrow, will of; 334 a.
 John, agreements by; 272 b.
 Richard; 279 a.
 Thomas; 279 a.
 — his case; 170 b.
 Mornyn, co. Longford; 535 b.
 Mornyn, co. Longford; 540 a.
 Morocco :
 Straits of; 239 b.
 Emperor of, Charles II.'s treaties with; 1 b, 26 b.
 King of, horses sent to Charles I. by; 552 b.
 Morpeth corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Morrey, Robert, mayor of Chester (1670), letters of and to; 389 a, 389 b.
 Morrice, Morris :
 Major, at Pontefract Castle; 276 b.
 Christopher, of Leicester; 439 b.
 John; 142 b.
 — petition, &c. of; 142 a, 142 b.
 — answer to; 142 b.
 Richard, of Wapping, captive; 241 b.
 Robert, bailiff; 5 b.
 — barrister-at-law, memorial of; 295 b.
 William, document signed by; 90 a.
 — letter of; 211 a.
 — of Worcester; 638 a.
 Morse, Thomas, of Stratford, will of; 334 a.
 Mortain, Earl of, King John, grants by; 319 a.
 Mortheirs, M. de, letters of; 40 a.
 Mortimer :
 barons of, Mortimer, pedigrees of; 366 a.
 Major, letter of; 607 b.
 Lord, Hugh (1069), with Wm. the Conqueror against Edgar Atheling, &c.; 366 a.
 — founded Wigmore Abbey; 366 a.
 James and Ellinor; 535 b.
 John, a necromancer; 265 a.
 Major Nicholas; 610 a.
 Robert de; 316 b.
 Thomas, of Balmauc; 306 b.
 Mortlake, Surrey; 155 a, 158 a.
 Mortals, Ralph de, witness; 421 b.
 Morton :
 Mr., of Leicester; 430 b, 431 a.
 — and Sir E. Hastings; 433 a.
 Regent, letter of; 298 b, 302 a.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xxi.
 — W., commission to; 2 b.
 Cardinal, his death; 331 b.
 John, Abp. of Canterbury, will of; 332 a.
 — prior of Selborne; 264 a.
 P., letters of; 553 a, 553 b.
 Thomas, presbyter of York; 266 a.
 Sir William, justice (1667, &c.); 112 a, 155 a, 156 a, 156 b, 159 a, 159 b.
 — letters of; 158 a, 159 b.
 Moruske, barony of; 526 b.
 Mosca; 23 a.

- Moscow, document dated at; 37 b.
 Mose, William, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Moseley :
 Honour; 156 b.
 — deposition of; 159 a.
 Thomas, of Leicester, loan to; 432 b.
 Wm.; 156 b.
 — deposition of; 159 a.
 Moses :
 Mr., solicitor to East India Co.; 167 a. examination of, &c.; 167 a, 167 b.
 Mosheim, his Ecclesiastical History; 199 a, 484 a.
 Mosly :
 Christopher, petition of; 506 a.
 Henry, clerk of the peace, co. Dublin; 506 b.
 Moss, Mosse :
 John, petition of; 140 a.
 —; 380 b.
 Rich., letter signed by; 386 b.
 Mossley, George, letter of; 375 a.
 Moston, Ensign Symon; 591 b.
 Mostyn, Lord, MSS. of; xxi.
 Moswelle, chapel of; 632 b.
 Motanabeny; 608 b.
 Mothe, Comte de la, letter of; 35 b.
 Mothe Hondaneoust, Comte de la, letter of; 37 b.
 Motte, M. la; 33 b.
 Mottly, Richard, of Athy, petition of; 510 b.
 Motte, J., letter of; 295 a.
 Mottershed, Thos.; 365 a.
 Motum, Robert, witness; 406 a.
 Motun, Jacobus de, inquisition by; 406 a.
 Motynden, Trinity House of; 329 a.
 Mousesley; 333 b.
 Monles, William, servant of Lord Burgbley; 227 a.
 Moulinarne, the rebels near; 314 a, 314 b.
 Moulins; 566 a.
 Moulsey, West; 332 b.
 Moultrie, General, letter of; 288 b.
 Moundeford :
 doctor to Lord Essex; 228 a, 228 b.
 Tho., president of the College of Physicians; 229 a.
 Monnox, Humphrey, on Bedford committee; 3 a.
 Montague. See Montag.
 Mountain, Mr., his influence at Clitheroe; 49 b.
 Mountaine, Sir Philip, commissioner; 275 a.
 Mount Alexander :
 Lord, his troop (1663); 505 a, 506 a, 518 b, 521 b, 536 b.
 — master of ordnance, document signed by (1663); 525 b.
 Mountayne, Thomas, grant to; 94 a.
 Mount Edgumbe, Earl of, MSS. of; xxi.
 Mountgarret :
 Viscount, outlawry of (1641); 59 a.
 — title of; 588 b.
 — (1641-48); 581 b, 603 a, 603 b, 604 a, 607 a.
 Mountjoy; 120 b.
 —, his patent; 252 a, 254 b.
 — letter signed by (1707); 395 a.
 —, his regiment; 493 a.
 Lord, letter of (1709); 37 a.
 — his death in Flanders; 53 a.
 — letter of (1715); 53 b.
 L.; 65 a.
 Mountmorris, Lord (1779); 203 a.
 Mountmorris, Lord, trial of; 581 b, 582 a.
 Mountrath :
 Earl of, lands held by; 520 b.
 — late (1663); 521 b.
 Mountsorrel, Mount Sorrell; 414 a, 437 b, 439 a.
 Moussaye, Madame de la, letter of; 37 b.
 Movarisky, Baroness de, letters of; 40 a.
 Mowth, Will., of Lynn Episcopi, will of; 334 a.
 Moxon :
 Rob., trooper, petition of; 505 a.
 William, of Pontefract; 276 a.
 Moy Castle; 603 a.
 Moyer :
 Capt., of the Trinity House; 235 b.
 Lawrence, of Low Layton; 251 b.
 Moygne, surrender of; 606 b.
 Moylagh rectory, dioc. Tuam; 525 a.
 Moyle :
 Colonel, in command at Edinburgh; 310 b, 311 b.
 Joseph, note by; 66 b.
 Moyses, T.; 627 b.
 Moyses, John, of Whitechapel, deed by; 271 b.
 Muchalls, letter dated at; 304 a.
 Muchberdesham, manor of; 322 b, 323 a.
 Mudd, Simon, of Longborowe, will of; 417 a.
 Muffett, D., physician; 228 a.
 Mugworthy, Thomas, vicar of Sevenoaks, will of; 335 b.
 Muldegheyn, Comte de, letter of; 37 a.
 Mullen, Gerard van, a quack; 230 b.
 Muley Zedag, a king in Barbary; 240 b.

Mulgrave :

- Earl of, Edmund, payment to (1658) ; 95 a.
- letter of (1689) ; 556 a.
- — 1690) ; ib.
- — (1691) ; 556 b.
- John, Lord Chamberlain, 12 b.

Mullaghmast, co. Kildare ; 508 a.

Mullaghmore, lands of ; 525 b.

Mulleneux :

- Lieut. Adam ; 595 b.
- Capt. Thomas ; 593 a.

Mullens, John, letter of ; 291 a.

Muller, Lieut. F. A., letter of ; 295 b.

Mullican, Mary, of Dublin, petition of ; 504 b, 531 b.

Mullin, David, prisoner ; 550 b.

Mullingar ; 470 a, 494 b, 518 b.

prior of ; 584 b.

Mulsho, Thomas, letter of ; 379 a.

Multon :

- Sir Alan de, his wife ; 264 b.
- Sir John de, letter of ; 264 b.
- Sir Thomas ; 264 b.
- Sir Thomas de, licence to ; 265 a.
- Radulfus, witness ; 404 b.
- Walter de, endowment by ; 343 b.
- William de, witness ; 270 b.

Multon Hall, co. Lincoln, manor of ; 264 b.

Mumford :

- Wm., a brewer ; 155 a (note) ; 155 b, 156 b, 158 a.
- deposition of ; 158 a.

Muncur, Thomas, de la Monthie ; 308 a.

Munday, David ; 278 b.

Munden, Sir John ; 27 a.

Muneaghan ; 604 b.

Munely, John ; 380 a.

Mungomery, Ensign Hugh ; 592 b.

Munk, Dr., of the College of Physicians ; 226 b.

Munox, Humphrey, letter to ; 3 a.

Munsey, Mr. ; 239 b.

Munster :

- plantation of ; 99 a, 582 a.
- surrender of ; 611 b.
- iusurrection in (1763) ; 474 b, 481 a.
- agrarian outbreaks in (c. 1760) ; 451 b.
- assembly in ; 616 a.
- the effect of pasture enclosures in (1762) ; 470 b.
- executions in ; 618 a.
- chapter of, letter of ; 37 a.
- Bishop of (1669) ; 128 a, 130 a.
- letters of (1707) ; 32 a.
- letter of (1709) ; 37 b.

Muntgrave, prior of ; 271 a.

Murar, Mr. ; 53 b.

Murehin, John F. de, Earl of Graville ; 30 b.

Mure :

- F., letters of ; 290 b, 291 a, 294 a, 295 a.
- William, letter of ; 289 a.

Murley, Robert, mayor of Chester (1669) letter to ; 359 a.

Murphy :

- Counsellor ; 473 b.
- John, of Dublin, merchant ; 385 b.
- Theodore, petition of ; 510 a.

Murray ; 312 a.

Mr., to succeed Lord Chesterfield (1748) ; 569 a.

— memoir of, prosecution for printing ; 570 b.

Major-General, letters of ; 32 a, 37 b.

Lieut.-Genl., letter of ; 39 b.

the Hon. Mr., brother of Lord Ellibank ; 54 b.

Daniel, letter of ; 295 b.

David, of Balward, witness ; 306 a.

Lord Edward (1711), letter of ; 40 a.

Hon. Mrs. Erskine, MSS. of ; xxi.

Mrs. Euphyan, petition of ; 243 a.

Lord George, paper by ; 313 b.

— his letter to the Duke of Cumberland ; 314 a.

Sir Geo. ; 14 a.

Col. John, letters of ; 292 b, 294 a, 294 b, 295 b, 296 a.

— letter to ; 295 a.

Sir John, letter of ; 296 a.

Sir P., sums paid by ; 313 b.

Sir P. K., MSS. of ; xxi.

Lieut.-Col. Peter, letter of ; 290 b.

Regent, documents signed by ; 298 b, 302 a.

Robert, alderman of Chester ; 361 b.

— commissions to ; 362 a.

Major.-Genl. R., letter of ; 35 b.

Sir Robert ; 134 a, 136 a.

William, Pitt's speech against ; 225 b.

— of Tullibardin, witness ; 306 a.

Murreaux, Thomas, constable of the Tower ; 87 a, 88 a.

Mursk barony ; 527 a.

Musam, Capt. Ed. ; 591 a.

Mussegros, Robert de, witness ; 1 b.

Muschamp, Major ; 541 b.

Muscovy :

ambassador from, arrest of ; 34 b, 35 a.

Czar of, letters of (1707) ; 32 a.

Musgrave :

C., letter of ; 40 a.

E., letter of ; 89 b.

James, letter of ; 295 b.

Sir Richard, letters to ; 584 a.

Col. Thos., letters of ; 290 a, 292 b, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a.

General Thomas, letters of ; 294 b, 295 a.

Muskerry :

barony of ; 99 a.

Lord, his proceedings in Ireland (1645-52) ; 605 a, 605 b, 606 a, 606 b, 614 b, 616 a, 618 a.

Viscount (1648) ; 28 a.

Musselburgh ; 158 b.

"Mustepha" ; 290 b.

— letter of ; 291 a.

Muster rolls, &c. of Leicester, temp. Eliz. ; 419 b.

Mustian, Mr., of Cobham ; 553 a.

Mutford ; 333 b, 334 a.

Mutte, Reginald, vicar of Sutton Courtenay, Berks, will of ;

332 b.

Mydwynter, Alice, of Northleach, will of ; 334 b.

Mydwyntre, Will, of Northleach, will of ; 333 a.

Myers, Thomas, letter of ; 294 b.

Myles :

John, of Apysden, Herts, will of ; 333 a.

Richard, of Connock ; 631 a.

Mylnes, John, of Lutterworth ; 414 b.

Mynchynne, Elizabeth, of Romsey ; 234 a.

Mynors, Capt. William ; 249 b.

Myriam, near Dublin, document dated from ; 399 a.

N.

Naas, co. Kildare ; 510 b.

Innkeepers of, petition of ; 521 a.

garrison at, in 1648 ; 594 a, 595 a.

garrison ; 604 a.

Naerden, synod at ; 565 a.

Nagle, Sir R. ; 581 b.

Nagpour ; 294 a.

Nails, documents referring to ; 625 b, 626 a, 632 a.

Nairn House ; 313 b.

Nairn, Naine :

David, letters of ; 16 b.

— Jacobite agent, letters of ; 25 a, 38 b.

Sir David ; 82 b.

Lady, letter of ; 40 b.

Nairs, war with the, account of, Tippoo Sultan's (1789) ;

293 b.

Naisse, Capt. ; 617 a.

Naizon, his dragoons ; 313 b, 314 a.

Najhaf Khan, narrative of (1779) ; 288 b.

Nale, the, co. Meath ; 548 a.

Nelson, Dr., his censure of Dr. Borlace ; 574 a.

Nemptwiche ; 397 a.

Nanur :

taken ; 57 a.

letter dated at ; 557 b.

garrison at ; ib.

magazines at ; 32 a.

Nangle :

Lieut.-Col. ; 498 a.

Edmond, licence farmer, petition of ; 529 a.

Lieut. Edmond, petitions of ; 530 b.

James, prisoner, petitions of ; 501 b, 533 b, 538 a.

Nantes ; 375 b, 552 a.

merchants at ; 247 a.

Napier, Col., MSS. of ; xxi.

Naples, letter dated at ; 47 b.

Napper :

Sir Robert, his sequestration ; 3 b.

— loan to ; 7 a.

Nappers, Lieut.-Col., weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.

Nappier, Lieut.-Col. ; 592 a.

Napstown, lands of ; 506 a.

Narford ; 333 b.

Nary, Dr. ; 487 b.

Naseby, field or battle ; 8 b, 501 b, 524 b, 554 b.

Nasmer, M. de, letter of ; 37 b.

Nassau :

W. de, document signed ; 12 a.

Lord of Odyek ; ib.

Princess of, letters of (1705) ; 31 a.

Princess Dowager of, letters of (1706) ; 31 b.

Princess of, letters of (1707) ; 32 a.

— letters of (1709) ; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.

Nassau—cont.

- Comte de, letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
 Wandenbourg, Comte, letter of (1711); 40 a.
 Weilbourg, Comte, letter of (1711); 40 a.
 Count of, letter of (1692); 557 b.
 Disembourg, Prince of (1691); 565 b. de Frize; 564 b.
 Naturalization Bill (1669); 134 a, 149 b.
 Natzmer, Lieut.-General, letter of; 40 a.
 Naughten :
 Lieut. John; 595 a.
 alias Teig, Katherine, petition of; 511 a.
 Nannton, Robert; 585 a.
 Nauze, Mr. de la; 62 b.
 Navan; 514 a, 523 a, 546 b.
 garrison; 525 a.
 Navigation, Act of, trade improved by; 134 a.
 Navy, the :
 accounts (1664-5); 128 a-133 a.
 commissioners of the; 128 b-129 b, 248 a.
 — letter of; 388 b.
 — letter to; 243 a.
 — reports, &c. of; 128 a-133 b.
 — reference to; 243 a.
 sick and wounded in, arrangements for care of; 231 a, 231 b. treasurer of, office of (1669); 136 b.
 merchant, of England; 134 b.
 Office, 130 b, 131 a.
 — documents dated from; 385 b, 388 b.
 — committee of; 247 b.
 Nayland; 332 b.
 Naylor :
 Francis; 122 b.
 — answer of; 123 a.
 Mary; 13 b.
 Sarah; 122 b.
 — answers of; 122 b, 123 a.
 Naze, the; 382 b.
 Nazmer, M. de, letters of; 38 b.
 Neale :
 John, letter to; 3 a.
 Thomas, of the Mint; 66 a, 71 a, 80 a.
 — letters of; 68 b, 71 b.
 — document signed by; 66 b.
 — warrants to; 66 b, 86 a.
 — his proposal; 77 a.
 Pendoche, letter of; 294 a.
 Richard; 379 a.
 Neasch, Walter; 302 b.
 Neave, J., letters of; 290 b.
 Needham :
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Edmund, petition of; 244 b.
 — his machine for scouring the Thames; 245 b.
 Needham Market; 334 a, 629 b.
 Neel, Christopher, grant to; 415 b.
 Negropont, letter dated at; 245 a.
 Negus, Daniel, letters of; 290 a, 295 b.
 Nelme, Robert, of Worcester, 638 a.
 Nelson, Nelson :
 Noell v., writ of error; 151 a.
 Major, at Rosse; 600 b.
 Lieut.-Col. John; 512 b, 521 a.
 Ensign John; 595 a.
 William; 151 a.
 Neltrop, Edward; 163 a.
 — statement of his case; ib.
 Nenagh :
 taking of; 609 a.
 skirmish of; 617 b.
 Nesbitt, Lieut. Col., letter of; 295 b.
 Nesselrod, Baron de (1709); 20 b.
 Nesson; 381 a.
 Nest, Thomas, trooper; 549 b.
 Netherlands, the; 147 b.
 provinces, proposed annexation to England of; 215 b.
 See Low Countries.
 Nethersole, Sir Francis, letter of; 214 a.
 Nethaway, John, of Taunton, will of; 335 b.
 Netterville :
 at Ballimore; 613 b.
 Lord, petition of; 501 a.
 Viscount, John, his children (1663); 513 a.
 Robert, petition of; 513 a.
 Netzme, M., letters of; 32 a.
 Neur, Captain William; 594 b.
 Neutrality, Act of, king of Sweden's declaration against (1710); 40 a.
 Nevville :
 M. la, letters of; 38 b.
 Madame de, letter of; ib.
 Nevar, Breechin and, lord of; 306 a.
 Neville, Nevell, &c. :
 Edward, deceased; 139 a.
 — son of the preceding; ib.
 — lease to; 283 b.

Neville, Nevell—cont.

- Elizabeth, late sister of Lord Abergavenny (1669), petition of creditors of; 137 b.
 Hon. Mrs. Francis, petition of; 104 a.
 Frank, commissioner; 275 a.
 George, deceased; 104 a.
 — son of preceding; ib.
 Gilbert, deceased; 139 a.
 Henry, deceased; 106 b.
 — grant to; 282 a.
 — of Holt, candidate for Leicester; 439 a.
 — requisition by; 439 b.
 Sir Henry; 282 a.
 — ambassador to France (1599-1600); xiii., 277 a.
 — letters to; 282 b, 283 a.
 — (1600); 283 a.
 — letters, &c. of; 283 a, 283 b.
 — letters to; 283 a, 283 b.
 — warrant of; 282 a.
 — grant to (1615); 283 b.
 — and Lady Perriam v. Sir Robert Albany and Edwd. Staverton; 283 b.
 Mary, widow, petition of; 104 a.
 R., paymaster of pensions; 287 b.
 Richard, alderman of Wokingham, Berks; 284 a.
 — defendant; 529 b.
 Richard Aldworth, letter to; 287 b.
 — certificates touching; 287 b.
 Richard Neville, letters of; 285 a, 285 b, 286 a.
 — letters to; 285 b, 286 a, 287 b.
 — minister at Court of France, letters to; 286 b.
 Richard Neville Aldworth, M.P. (1763); xiii., 277 a.
 — official papers of; 287 a.
 — letter to; ib.
 Sir Robert; 627 a.
 — of Horneby; ib.
 — inq. post mortem of; ib.
 Thomas de, witness; 422 b.
 Sir Thomas, his daughter Margaret; 627 a.
 Thomas, letter of; 37 b.
 William, petition of; 106 b.
 Princesse de, letter of; 37 b.
 New Abbey, lands of; 315 a.
 Newark : reducing of; 10 a.
 and garrison there during Civil Wars; 8 b, 10 b.
 Charles I. at; 9 b.
 siege of; 276 b.
 Sir Henry Beaumont's house at; 441 a.
 Newburgh :
 Lord (1657); 28 b.
 — (1670); 146 b.
 prior and convent of; xiii., 636 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 506 a.
 Newbury; 333 a, 335 b.
 battle of; 5 b.
 Newby, William, of Leicester, Lord Ferrers and; 415 a.
 Newcastle-on-Tyne; 75 a, 212 a, 239 a, 240 b, 242 b, 244 b, 250 b, 256 b, 376 b, 521 b.
 documents dated at; 344 b, 347 a.
 Goldsmiths' Company of; 70 a.
 port of; 94 a.
 coals; 251 a.
 Trinity House at; 233 b, 244 a, 249 a, 249 b, 255 b, 261 a, 261 b.
 mayor, &c. of, letters to; 237 b, 238 a.
 mayor of (1640); 383 b.
 ships trading to; 243 a, 243 b, 257 b.
 proposed free port; 247 b.
 merchant adventurers of, their petition to export cloth; 238 b.
 Newcastle, co. Dublin, manor of; 549 a.
 Newcastle, co. Stafford; 544 b.
 Newcastle, Duke of : privilege case (1668); 116 a.
 his death (1691); 565 a.
 his legacy to Lord Clare; ib.
 letters of (1706); 32 a.
 letter of (1708); 36 a.
 (1751); 284 b.
 (1753-57); 213 a.
 his motion for repeal of the Jew Bill (1753); 219 b, 220 a.
 Head of the Treasury; 220 a, 221 b.
 letter to (1754); 220 a.
 Steele's letters to; 1 a, 23 b.
 Mr. Pitt and; 220 b, et seq.
 a "shuffling rascal"; 224 a.
 "an ugly disagreement" with Lord Cholmondeley; 288 b. his retirement from office, &c.; 222 b, 223 b.
 letters of (1763); 287 b.
 (1765); 191 a.
 Newcome :
 Mr., of Leicester; 430 b.
 — his house; ib.
 — his regiment; 493 b.
 Robert, mayor of Leicester; 426 a.

- Newcomen, Newcomin :
 Captain Richard ; 594 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.
 Sir Robert ; 594 b.
 — weekly charge of his troop ; 598 a.
 Thomas, petition signed by ; 538 a.
- Newdegate, William, order for ; 3 a.
- Newell :
 Henry, bailiff of the hundred of Hoo, will of ; 334 b.
 or Newelme, Robert ; 628 b, 629 b.
- Newenham, Adam de, licence to ; 2 a.
- Newfoundland ; 36 b, 240 b.
 fish ; 246 a.
 pilchards from ; 246 b, 247 a. plantation in ; 236 a.
- Newgent, Garrett, of Athy, petition of ; 510 b.
- Newhaggard, co. Meath ; 499 a.
- Newhall, Lord, Scotch judge (1736) ; 311 b.
- Newhaven harbour ; 255 a, 255 b.
- Newington :
 Kent ; 348 b.
 church ; 318 b, 339 a.
 co. Oxford, with Britwell ; 324 a.
 — Bixbronde in ; 324 b.
 co. Surrey ; 249 b.
 Barrow, alias Highbury, Middlesex, Act for re-investing the manor of in His Majesty (1670) ; 148 b.
 — reasons for passing ; 148 b.
- Newkey ; 398 a.
- Newland ; 334 b.
 Martha, her perversion ; 46 b.
- Newmarch, Sir John, indenture by ; 412 a.
- Newmarket ; 33 b, 158 b.
 letters dated at ; 43 a, 214 b.
- Newnham, Devon, abbot of ; 169 b.
- Newod, terra de ; 264 a.
- Newport, co. Monmouth, ship-money assessment ; 383 a.
- Newport Pagnell :
 letters dated at ; 7 b, 8 b, 9 b.
 garrison at, &c. ; 1 a, 3 a, 4 b, 5 a, 5 b, 7 a, 7 b, 9 a, 9 b, 10 a.
 money for ; 9 a.
- Newport :
 Lord (1670) ; 141 b.
 — Robert Jocelyn ; 443 b.
 — dedication to ; 444 a.
 House ; 142 a.
 Lady (1711), letter of ; 40 a.
 Anne, of Ipswich, will of ; 333 b.
- Newry ; 493 a.
 surrender of ; 599 b.
 Bann Water, near ; 600 a.
- News letters :
 (1686-93) ; 561 b.
 (1711) ; 40 a.
 Italian, (1591) ; 282 a.
- Newstead, James I. at ; 435 b.
- Newton :
 near Chester ; 371 a.
 Kyme, co. York ; 271 a.
 one, his building ; 98 b.
 Mr., letters of ; 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
 Dr. ; 22 a.
 Dr. Henry, letters of ; 47 b.
 Sir Isaac, his Mint papers ; xi., 60 b, et seq.
 — a justice of peace ; 61 a.
 — his funeral ; 62 a.
 — agreement about his MSS. ; 63 b.
 — letters of ; 66 a.
 — patent of grant of Mint Mastership to ; 66 b.
 — letters, &c. of ; 392 b, 393 a.
 — his house near St. James's Church, in Jermy Street ; 392 b.
 James, complaint against ; 231 a.
 Joachim, keeper of the Fleet Prison, warrant of ; 375 a.
 John, of Whittlesford, will of ; 332 a.
 Rich., of Monkton, will of ; 332 b.
 Wm., clockmaker ; 393 b.
 — recommendation touching ; 393 b.
 — of Leicester, payments to ; 429 b.
- Newton Stallbone, co. Louth, plundered ; 590 b.
- Newtown :
 in Lintlithgow ; 307 b.
 Wm. Scott, of ; 637 a.
 lands of ; 506 a.
 co. Dublin, Mosly's house at ; 506 b.
 McCabe, lands, co. Kildare ; 508 a.
- Nice ; 194 a.
 letters dated at ; 194 b, 195 a.
- Nicholas :
 Mr., payment to ; 526 a.
 Edw., documents signed by ; 28 a, 86 a.
 James, letter of ; 294 a.
 Sir John, commissioner ; 275 a.
 Simon, letter of ; 257 b.
- Nicholas III., pope, bulls of ; 318 a.
- Nicholas IV., pope, his grant of a tenth of ecclesiastical benefices ; 345 a.
- Nicholl, Henry, replication of ; 543 b.
- Nicholls, Nicholles :
 Mr. Serjeant ; 435 a.
 Mr., the historian, of Leicestershire ; 425 a.
 Edward ; 521 b.
 — licence farmer, petitions of ; 529 a, 539 b, 545 a.
 — answer to petitions of ; 545 a, 546 b.
 — satisfaction to ; 546 b.
 Richard, late deputy-governor of Duke of York's territories in America, warrant touching ; 280 h.
 — deceased ; ib.
 — of Kilculleu ; 551 a.
 Capt. Simon, of the Trinity House ; 252 b.
- Nichols :
 Mr. J. Gough ; 264 a.
 John, the antiquary ; 404 a.
 Richard ; 278 a.
- Nicholson :
 Mr. ; 382 b.
 Bishop, common-place book of ; 584 a.
 and Briggs, memorial of ; 79 a.
 Edmond ; 381 b.
 Ensign Gilbert ; 595 a.
- Nickson, Christopher, trooper ; 521 b.
- Nicol, Galfrid de, of Leicester ; 404 b.
- Nicoll, William, of Braunstone, conveyance by ; 422 a.
- Nicolls :
 Mr., moneyer of the Mint ; 392 b.
 Sir Augustine, serjeant-at-law ; 441 a.
 Edw., on Northampton committee ; 6 b.
 Henry, petition of ; 523 b.
- Nicolson, —, an Irishman ; 16 b.
- Nider, Johannes ; 585 a.
- Nieuport, Viscount de, letter of ; 40 a.
- Night walkers at Leicester, Act for ; 426 b.
- Nightingale, Ann, letter of ; 294 b.
- Nightingall, Lieut.-Col. Miles, afterwards General Sir Miles,
 letters of ; 288 b, 294 a.
- Nimeguen :
 letter dated at ; 16 b.
 treaty of ; 557 a, 558 a.
- Nipho, Mons. ; 278 b.
- Nisbeth's heraldry ; 298 a, 299 a.
- Nislyrath, co. Louth, plundered ; 590 b.
- Nivelle :
 Princess of (1708), letter of ; 36 a. magistrates of, letter of ; 37 a.
- Niwantunum church ; 316 a.
- Nixe, Thomas, of Nottingham ; 417 a.
- Noailles, Marshal de ; 286 a.
- Noble :
 M. le, letters of ; 36 a.
 Richard, captive in Algiers ; 241 a.
- Noel, Noell :
 v. Nelson, writ of error ; 151 a.
 Lady Elizabeth, Act touching ; 101 b.
 Sir Martin, case of ; 151 a.
 — deceased ; ib.
 Thomas, case of ; 151 a.
- Nogelli, Comte, letters of ; 32 a.
- Nolan, Richard, licence farmer, petition of ; 544 b.
- Nollane, James, petition of ; 504 a.
- Nonconformist congregations (1671) ; 159 h.
- Nonconformists, both Houses thank the King for proclamation against (1669) ; 136 a.
- Noone, Anne and Thomas, depositions of ; 435 b.
- Norbery, John, trooper ; 521 b.
- Norbrooke ; 434 a.
- Norbury, John, mercer ; 89 a.
- Norden :
 Mr. ; 118 a.
 John, petition of ; 117 a.
- Nore, the ; 248 b, 261 b.
- Noreis, Robert le, witness ; 1 h.
- Noreys, Robert and Lucy ; 265 b.
- Norff, M., letter of ; 40 a.
- Norfolk :
 sheriff's account (temp. Mary) ; 277 b.
 Charles I.'s manors in ; 209 b.
 horse to be raised by (1645) ; 8 a.
 Earl of, Roger Bigod ; 357 b.
 Duke of, his camp ; 581 a.
 — (1437), wreck of ship belonging to ; 327 a.
 — Henry (1689) ; 86 a.
 — letter and warrant of (1689) ; ib.
 — his brother a prisoner (1715) ; 50 a.
 Countess of (1875) ; 262 h.
 Duchess of (1737) and Dawley ; 568 b.
 — Miss Copinger to be (1767) ; 485 a.
- Norforth ; 333 b.
- Norgaret, William de, proclamation against ; 350 a.
- Norham :
 documents dated at ; 346 b.
 treaty of ; 323 b.
- Northburgh, John de, of Leicester Hospital ; 411 a.

- Norice, one, of Wapping; 239 a.
- Norman :
- James, of Baldingham, will of; 334 a.
 - John, bailiff of Leicester; 413 a, 422 a.
- Normanby, Marquis of, letter of (1699); 560 a.
- Normandy; 585 a.
- coast of; 35 a.
- Normans, the, in Ireland; 585 b.
- Norragbegg, co. Kildare; 508 a.
- Norris, Norreys :
- , in Leicester gaol; 440 b.
 - Sir John, letters of; 38 b, 47 b.
 - Lord, letter of; 582 b.
 - James, Act for settling estate of (1667); 109 a, 109 b.
 - letter to (1670); 151 b.
 - Act to enable him to make conveyances during minority (1670); 151 b.
 - Lady, the Earl of Salisbury's niece (1606); 380 b.
 - Mr.; 238 a.
 - Francis, of Leicester; 425 b.
 - John, sheriff of Chester; 368 b.
 - Samuel, auditor to Dean and Chapter of Canterbury; 316 b.
- Northbroc, Osbert de, purging of; 632 b.
- North, Lord :
- (1594); 376 a.
 - Dudley, writ of summons (1667); 109 a.
 - and Grey, letter of (1708); 36 a.
 - letter of (1711); 40 a.
 - (temp. Geo. III.); 288 b.
 - letters of (1779); 195 b, 201 b, 207 a.
 - letters to; 201 a, 202 a, 206 b.
 - opposition to (1779); 205 a.
- Northall (Northolt) :
- Middlesex; 120 a, 120 b.
 - manor; 120 a.
- Northampton; 332 b, 335 a, 431 a.
- letters dated at; 6 b, 56 b, 344 a, 379 a.
 - justices at; 411 a.
 - the Black Monks assembled at (1375); 339 a.
 - committee of; 3 b, 7 b.
 - county, recusants in (1625); 27 b.
 - land revenue; 284 a.
 - land called Allisoe in; 6 b.
 - justices of, letter of; 46 b.
 - justices of; 51 a.
 - John, mayor of London; 89 a.
 - John de, hanged for murder; 326 a.
 - Earl of, commissioner (1604); 95 a, 95 b, 98 a.
 - document signed by (1605); 87 b.
 - (1609); 228 b.
 - (1666); 211 a.
 - privilege case, papers touching (1667); 114 b.
 - (1668); 166 a, 167 b, 173 a.
 - Marquis of (3 Ed. VI.); 416 b.
 - MSS. of; xxi.
- Northansen, information touching affair of; 37 b.
- Northburne, J. de; 341 a.
- Northbe, Edward, order signed by; 373 b.
- Northesk, Lord, Treasury Commissioner in Scotland (1708); 83 b.
- Northey :
- Edward, report by; 50 b.
 - opinion by; 80 a.
 - Sir Edward, Attorney-General; 232 a.
- Northfleet :
- church; 318 b, 319 b.
 - rector of; 348 b.
 - Dr. Browne's estate in; 231 b.
- Northfolk, John, of Leicester; 414 b.
- Northleach; 333 a, 334 b.
- Northumberland :
- Earl of (1404), Henry de Percy; 264 b.
 - (1459), Henry Percy, grant by; 266 a.
 - (1605); 228 b.
 - in the Tower; 88 b.
 - (temp. Charles I.), letters of; 1 a.
 - insipeximus by (1639); 243 a.
 - navy under; 217 b.
 - challenge from; 585 a.
 - letter of (1640); 230 a.
 - letters of (1642); 211 b.
 - letter to; ib.
 - letter of (1644); 3 b.
 - letters of (1645); 7 a, 7 b, 9 a.
 - (1667); 116 a.
 - (1669); 136 b.
 - picture of (1680); 257 a.
 - (1754); 225 a.
 - (1757); 223 b.
 - Hugh, Viceroy of Ireland (1763); 477 b, 479 a.
 - (1769); 191 b.
 - Archbishop Stone and; ib.
 - Countess of, privilege case (1671); 161 b.
 - Duke of, MSS. of; xxi.
 - with James II. (1688); 555 b.
 - Duchess of, letter of (1714); 57 a.
- North-west passage, the :
- voyage to discover; 235 b.
 - depositions concerning; 236 b.
- Northwich; 396 a, 397 a.
- Northwick; 347 a.
- Norton, co. Somerset, manor; 625 a, 633 a.
- Norton :
- Dudley, letter of; 382 b.
 - John, on Northampton committee; 6 b.
 - ; 271 a.
 - Ensign John; 593 b, 594 a.
 - Richard, letter of; 36 a.
 - Thomas, verse by; 583 a.
 - Welbury, commissioner; 275 a.
- Norturville, Robt., of Chester; 368 a.
- Norwall, William, of the Wardrobe; 93 a.
- Norway; 134 a.
- tin sold in; 92 b.
- Norwich; 143 b, 242 a, 324 b, 332 b, 333 b, 334 a, passim.
- Bishop's Registry, MSS. of; xxi.
 - Corporation, MSS. of; ib.
 - St. Michael Coslany; 334 a.
 - Mint at; xii., 70 b, 74 b, 80 a.
 - embezzlements at; 80 a.
 - Goldsmiths' Company of; 70 a.
 - petition from, about the weaving at; 50 a.
 - clothiers of; 118 a.
 - dean and chapter of, MSS. of; xxi.
 - mayor of; 210 a.
 - weaving, &c. introduced to Chester by persons from (1674); 390 a.
 - Sir John; 3 a.
 - Bishop of (1299), R. Walpole; 345 a.
 - (15th century), James, petition to; 268 b.
 - Thos. Jane, his death; 333 b.
 - (temp. Geo. I.), C., letter of; 49 b.
 - (1717), letters of and to; 57 a.
 - (1780), letter of; 289 a.
- Noryce, William, Justice of Leicester; 427 b, 430 b.
- Nostreville, Robert, account of; 369 b.
- Not, —, a quack; 227 b.
- Nott, Edward, governor of Virginia; 47 a.
- Nottingham; 431 a.
- documents dated at; 344 b, 353 b, 413 b, 432 a.
 - French prisoners sent to; 34 a.
 - assizes at; 432 a.
 - bailiffs of; 414 a.
 - corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 - tolls at; 415 b.
 - Richard II.'s court at; 414 a.
 - complaint of Leicester burgesses against; 417 a.
 - James I. at; 435 b, 441 b.
 - Charles I. at; 437 a.
 - Castle, licence of Henry VII. dated at; 331 b.
 - Earl of, David, his annuity (Geo. I.); 12 b.
 - interview with (temp. Anne); 50 b.
 - seals taken from; 53 b.
 - letters of; 54 a.
 - at Portsmouth; 54 a.
 - W. Berkeley (1484); 263 a.
 - commissioner (1604); 95 a.
 - Ld. High Admiral (1610), letter of; 399 a.
 - letter of (1611); 399 b.
 - licence by; 435 b.
 - (1661); 250 a.
 - (1668); 166 a.
 - (1675); 98 b.
 - picture of (1680); 257 a.
 - letters of (c. 1690); 31 a.
 - document signed by (1691); 86 a.
 - (1691); 562 b, 564 a.
 - and the vacant Garter (1691); 565 a.
 - letters of (1692); 58 a, 231 a.
 - letters to (1703); 45 a.
- Countess of, dame of honour (1691); 565 b, 566 a.
- Nottynge, Will., of Foster Lane, London, will of; 335 a.
- Noturville, Robert; 368 a.
- Nouo Castello, William de, witness; 408 a.
- Nowell, —, a doctor; 228 a.
- Noyer, Madame du, letters of; 40 a.
- Noyes :
- Mr., of the Trinity House; 260 a.
 - Peter, of Ramridge; 631 n.
 - R., his brother; ib.
 - Richard; 260 b.
 - Robert, of Wey; 630 a.
- Nozelle, Comte, letter of; 36 a.
- Nuby, Lieut. Michell; 593 b.
- Nugent :
- Lord, letters of; 195 b.
 - (1754); 225 a.
 - Earl, letters of (1778); 199 a, 199 b.
 - Mr.; 469 a.
 - Edmund; 498 a.
 - Nicholas; 582 a, 614 b.

Nugent—cont.

- Sir Robert; 144 a.
- petition, &c. of; 143 b.
- petition of; 551 b.
- Robert; 614 b.
- Sir Thomas; 143 b.
- Will.; 493 b, 495 b.
- Col. Will.; 496 b.
- Nun, Capt. Richard, petition of; 510 a.
- Nunnnkton, co. York; 271 a.
- Nurse, Samuel; 140 a.
- Nusam, Capt. Edward, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
- Nutley; 151 b.
- Nutman, Richard, of Tilney, will of; 333 b.
- Nutt, Lieut.; 289 a.
- Nycols, Thomas, of Fifield Bavant, will of; 332 b.
- Nylson, Thomas, of Norwich, will of; 333 b.
- Nyne, the river; 9 b.
- Nywe, Thomas, of Woltone; 342 b.

O.

Oadham :

- Mr., of the Mint; 67 a.
- Catesby, petition of; 67 a.
- Oak, the Royal, lottery called; 501 b, 539 b.
- Oakes, Richard, letter of; 295 b.
- Oakhams; 334 b.

Oakley :

- tax at; 10 a.
- Mr.; 3 a.
- Sir Charles, letters of; 295 b.

Oates :

- Lieut., letter of; 294 b.
- Richard, of Pontefract; 275 b.
- Titus, his charge against Lord Petre; 219 b.
- his plot against Charles II.; 390 b.
- in the pillory; 440 b.
- William, of Pontefract; 274 a, 275 b.

Oatlands; 209 b.

- documents dated from; 375 b.

Oats, prices of (1252–1262); 343 b.

Obdam, M. d', letters of; 31 b.

O'Beirne, Col. Henry, his daughter; 472 b.

Oblivion, Act of; 120 a.

O'Bryan, O'Brien :

- and Lord Power; 566 b.
- Dermott; 608 a.
- Dr. John, Bp. of Cloyne; 486 a, 486 b.
- Lucius; 479 a.
- Mrs., Lord Villiers' sister; 565 b.
- Mortagh; 614 a, 614 b, 615 a, 616 b, 618 a.

Observantines in Scotland, minor brethren of; 301 a.

O'Byrnes, of co. Wicklow; 582 a.

Oca, the river; 23 a.

O'Canan, Manus, killed; 613 b.

O'Carolan, Torlogh, Irish poet; 442 a.

Ockham, Lord (1725); 62 a.

Oekinga, M., letter of; 37 b.

O'Clérigh, signature; 582 b.

O'Connolly :

- Owen, his orphans' petition; 501 b.
- Col. Owen, his orphans; 521 a.
- Owen; 581 b.

O'Connor :

- Col., letters of; 31 b.
- Ensign; 390 b.
- Hugh, his lands in Roscommon; 503 b.
- Major Owen, petitions of; 501 b, 531 a.
- in Flanders; 442 a.

O'Conor :

- Charles, son of Sir Hugh, his career; xviii., 441 b.
- of Belanagare, notice of; 441 b, et seq.
- extracts from his works; ib.
- D. D., his grandson; 441 b, 455 a.
- his connexion with Dr. John Curry; 447 b.
- his dedication to the Duke of Bedford; 448 b.
- his treatise on the Irish Rebellion of 1641; 450 a.
- letters of; 455 a, et seq.
- Donogh; 609 b, 614 b.
- of Ballintobber; 466 b.
- Dominick, Charles, Owen, Roger, Denis, T., and Hugh; ib.
- Denis or Donchad; 442 a.
- his marriage; ib.
- Don, the, of Clonalis, Mr. J. T. Gilbert's report on his Manuscripts; 441 b, et seq.
- Sir Hugh, temp. Eliz., his covenant for his lands, &c.; 441 b.
- his four sons; 442 a.
- Major Teige, anecdote of; 474 a.

O'Corra family, the, of Cavan co.; 447 b.

Odams, John, of Tilney, will of; 334 a.

Odber, Richard, trooper; 540 b.

Oddyngeles, John de; 2 a.

Odchy, John and Isabella, of Leicester; 422 a.

Odell, Lieut.-Col.; 289 a.

Odiham, document dated at; 346 b.

Odington, co. Oxford, manor; 153 b, 154 a.

O'Dochardy :

- Sir Charles; 602 b.
- Owen; 602 b, 608 a, 613 a.

Odogherty; 382 b.

O'Doherty, Sir Cahir; 582 a.

O'Donnellan, Laghlin; 609 b.

Ody :

- Richard, son of Thomas; 376 a.
- examination, &c. of; 397 a.

Odyke, M. d', letters of; 31 b.

Odymer, Roger and Joan; 637 a.

Odyngsells, Margaret, wife of Jerad, of Long Egginton, will of; 332 b.

O'Fallon, Edmond, of Disert parish; 518 b.

O'Farrell, Mr., letter of; 36 a.

O'Ferrall, Richard More; 492 a, note.

Ofaly, Lady (1623), letters to; 215 a, 216 a.

Officers :

- Loyal Indigent, committee for (Star Chamber); 164 a.
- Bill for taking accounts of money given to; 164 a, 164 b.
- poor widows, petitions, &c. of (1671); 163 b, 164 a.
- answers to; 163 b.

Offices, Act to prevent corruption, &c. in sale of (1667); 112 b.

Offley :

- David, payment to; 94 b.
- Mr.; 150 a.

Offord, Ufford :

- John de, Abp. of Canterbury; 337 a.
- his death; 337 b.

O'Flaherty, Roderic, author of the "Ogygia"; 442 b.

O'Flannagan, Eochy; 586 a.

O'Gara, Colonel, descended from Fergal; 442 b.

Ogden, John, petition of; 440 b.

Ogilby :

- Sir Andrew of, Inchmartyn; 306 b.
- Robert, of Coul; 12 b.
- Sir Walter of, of Lantrethin; 306 b.

Ogilvy :

- Velt Mareschal, letter of; 37 b.
- M., letters of; 36 a, 38 b.

Ogle :

- Lady, Thomas Thynne and; 51 a.
- Mr., letter of; 57 a.
- Capt., letter of; 289 b.
- Edwd.; 279 a.
- John; 280 a.

Oglethorpe :

- Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
- Owen, bequest by; 265 a.
- Colonel; 566 a.

O'Gorman :

- Chevalier, letter to; 486 a.
- Teige; 617 a.

"Ogygia," the, author of; 442 b.

O'Hagan :

- Sheane; 608 b.
- Capt. Sheane, a prisoner; 610 b.
- Lieut.-Col. Sheane, killed; 613 a.

O'Halloran, Lieut. Joseph, letter of; 294 b.

O'Hara :

- Lieut. A., letter of; 294 a.
- Captain Caen; 593 b.

Oherry, land of, co. Galway; 516 b.

O'Huigin, signature; 582 b.

O'Kahan :

- Daniel; 602 b.
- speech of; 603 b.
- murdered; 604 a.
- Shane; 604 a.

Okeford; 335 b.

Okeham, letter dated at; 431 b.

O'Kelly :

- Edmond McConnor; 532 b.
- McFardraugh; 532 b.
- Hugh; 617 a.
- William Reagh, of Killinvoxy; 518 a.

O'Kenedy, Sheane; 609 b.

Okas :

- John, his dispute with the Leicester corporation; 418 a, 434 b, 435 a.
- William, of Leicester; 418 a.
- bond of; 417 a.
- letter of; 417 b.

O'Kieffe, Capt. Daniel, petition of; 511 a.

Okington, Cambs.; 332 a.

Okone, William, of Stanford; 414 a.

Okynston, John, of Okington, Cambs., will of; 332 a.

- Oldbury manor or tithing, co. Gloucester, Act touching; 139 b.
 Old Court, co. Wicklow, garrison at; 592 b.
 Oldelakiston; 637 a.
 Oldfield, Mrs.; 19 a.
 Oldham, Lieut.-Col. John, letter of; 294 b.
 Oldone, Richard, abbot of the monastery of St. Werburge, Chester; 368 a.
 Olecumbe, collegiate church of; 328 b.
 Olinghen, letter dated at; 20 a.
 Oliphant:
 Andrew, witness; 306 b.
 Captain Lieut. James; 594 a.
 Lieut. Wm., letter of; 295 b.
 Oliuer, Radulfus, of Leicester; 406 a, 406 b.
 Olivares, Conde of (1624); 216 b.
 Olives; 254 a.
 Ollyver:
 George, merchant of Bristol; 380 a.
 John, merchant of Bristol; 379 b.
 O'Lochan, Cuan, Irish writer; 443 a.
 Olyver, Sir Will., vicar of Croydon; 265 a.
 O'Maddin, John, Richard Holcroft and; 538 b.
 O'Mellaghlin:
 King; 602 b.
 agent; 615 b.
 Father; 610 b.
 Omerquerque, Mons. d', his daughter; 565 b.
 Omfray, Peter, mayor of Leicester, witness; 411 a.
 O'Molony, John, Roman Catholic Bishop of Clogher; 493 b.
 O'More:
 Mr., of Ballina; 482 b.
 —; 491 b, 492 a, 492 b.
 Callogh; 586 a.
 O'Morra:
 Loughlin; 617 b.
 Mellaghlin; 617 b.
 O'Mulchonrye:
 Moylyne; 586 a.
 Tanarye; ib.
 Omvers, Robert le, of Leicester; 405 b.
 O'Neill, O'Neill, Oneale:
 Art. McHugh Boy; 615 a.
 Capt. Bryan; 588 b.
 Bryan Roe; 610 a.
 Con; 609 a.
 Con MacCormack; 604 a.
 Cormack, petition of; 503 a.
 Cormock; 497 a.
 Daniel, of the Bedchamber; 510 a.
 — his answer to petition; 518 b, 519 a.
 Col. Daniel, petition of; 501 b.
 Daniel, petition of; 531 b.
 —; 612 a.
 Lieut. Daniel; 610 b.
 Don Engenis, dedication to; 602 b.
 — Shane, Con, Ferdinand, and others of his family;
 ib.
 Gordon, his regiment; 497 a.
 Sir Henry, petition of his wife Eleanor; 501 a.
 — his lands in Antrim; 503 a.
 — petition of his wife Eleanor; 549 a.
 Henry and Brian Roe; 604 b.
 — and Montroe's son; 605 a.
 — Roe; 612 a.
 — hanged; 612 b.
 Hugh, prisoner; 603 b.
 — his vigilance; 606 b.
 Major-Gen. Hugh, his defence of Clonmel; 578 b, et seq.
 — in Clonmel; 612 a.
 —; 606 a, 608 b, 610 a, 613 a, 614 a, 615 b, 616 b.
 — governor of Limerick; 614 b.
 Hugh, trooper, petition of; 516 a.
 Owen; 500 a.
 — his party; 515 b.
 General Owen Roe, in Ulster; 577 a, 578 a.
 — his secretary; 580 b.
 —; 603 b.
 — at Clunaise; 604 a.
 — at Kilkenny; ib.
 — at Portlester; ib.
 — at Muneaghan; 604 b.
 — in the north of Ireland; 605 a.
 — in Leyse; 605 b.
 —; 606 a, 606 b.
 — his death, &c.; 611 b.
 Sir Phelim, Irish plotter; 588 b, 603 a, 603 b.
 — Colonel; 604 a.
 — apostate; 607 a.
 Capt. Phelim; 610 b.
 Phelim McTubill; 605 a, 612 a.
 Sbeane; 604 a.
 Terlagh; 610 b.
 Sir Torlogh, his son Henry; 576 a.
 O'Neill (place); 17 a.
- Onslow:
 Lord, letter of (temp. Geo. I.); 50 a.
 — letter of (1792); 295 a.
 Mr., letter to; 18 a.
 — Speaker, letter to; 314 b.
 — letter of; ib.
 Sir Richard; 49 b, 64 a.
 — letter of; 37 a.
 — speaker; 35 a.
 Oostfrise, Princess Dowager of (1710), letter of; 38 b.
 Opera, the, R. Steele and; 24 a.
 Opera or Paradise, the, in Shoe Lane, London, show so called;
 148 a.
 Oppenheim; 198 b.
 Oranbegg, lands of; 525 b.
 Orange, the Prince of:
 (1599); 282 b.
 (1636); 553 b, 554 a.
 dines in the city (1670); 156 b.
 (1685); 557 a.
 his army (1687); 555 a.
 (1688); 556 a.
 French views of his proceedings (1688); 555 a. court mourning for (1708); 34 a.
 letter of (1709); 37 b.
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
 Maurice, his house; 99 b.
 William the First, painting of; 92 b.
 the Princess of (1600); 282 b, 283 a.
 — letters of, to Lady Churchill; 37 a.
 Orcheverd, Will., freemason; 266 a.
 Ordgarns; 316 b.
 Ordinance:
 Board of, letters of (temp. Anne); 32 a, 32 b, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b, 90 a.
 office of, account (1669); 129 a.
 Ordris:
 Stephen, son of Juon, conveyance by; 408 a.
 William; ib.
 O'Reilly:
 John, letter of; 290 b.
 Philip; 613 b, 617 a.
 or O'Realye, Philip mac Hewe, Irish plotter; 588 b.
 Philip McMalmore; 535 b.
 Orfole, pension of; 633 a.
 Orford, Lord, letters of (1710); 38 b.
 Orfordness, Suffolk, lighthouse at; 245 b, 252 a, 259 a.
 Orgarswick, deeds relating to; 328 b.
 Orina, Empress of Russia, letter to; 227 b.
 Orkney, Bishop of, Honyman; 299 b.
 Orkney, Earl of:
 letters of (1706); 32 a.
 his letter (1708); 44 b.
 letters of (1708); 48 a.
 letters of (1711); 40 a.
 (1712); 17 b.
 Orkney, Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Orleans:
 letter dated at; 193 a. letter from; 585 a.
 Orleans, Duke of:
 regent; 27 a.
 — petition from Ireland to; 484 b.
 (1763); 286 a.
 Orlebar, R., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
 Orme, Mr., of Chester, employed on Chester Corporation MSS.;
 355 b.
 Ormonde, House of, Roberts' History of; 581 a, 586 a.
 Ormond, Earl of:
 (35 Hen. VII.); 582 b.
 first, his wife; 588 a.
 and Ossory, Earl of, Pierce; 588 a.
 Ormond, Earl and Marquis of; 605 a, 605 b, passim.
 Ormonde, Marquis of, at Kilkenny Castle, Mr. Gilbert's report on his MSS.; 499 b, et seq.
 Ormonde, Marquis and Duke of:
 passport for; 30 a.
 made Marquis (1644); 604 b. and Lord Clarendon; 99 b.
 James, dedication to; 586 a.
 his connexion with the Irish Rebellion (1641); 574 b.
 his proceedings (1641–1650); 603 a, et seq.
 (1648); 27 b.
 (1649); 28 a.
 letter of (1656); 584 a.
 (1657); 218 b.
 letter of (1658); 29 b.
 (1661); 250 b.
 Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; 73 b, 185 a, 575 a.
 Chessers' design on his life; 502 b, 507 a.
 to be seized (1663); 624 b.
 description of the petitions presented to (1663); 499 b.
 documents signed by; 501 a–552 a, passim.
 calendar of petitions to, 1662–64; xviii., 502 b, et seq.
 republican plot against (1663); 500 a.
 (1666); 102 b.

- Ormonde, Marquis and Duke of—cont.
 lord steward of the household (1670), assault on, papers touching; viii., 154 b–159 b.
 letter to (1671); 158 a.
 (1686), letter of; 212 a.
 letters of (1706); 32 a.
 Duke of Marlborough and; 17 a.
 letter to (1712); 73 b.
 (1715); 40 b.
 his Conduct, a book; 59 a. governor of Kilkenny; 58 b.
- Ormonde, Duchess of:
 (1715); 40 b.
 letters of; 54 a.
- Ormond, Upper; 609 b.
- Ormsby:
 John, licence farmer, petition of; 527 a.
 Major Robert; 539 b.
- O'Rodaigh, signature; 582 b.
- O'Rorke:
 James; 481 b.
 Count; ib.
- O'Rourke:
 Thaddeus Francis, Bishop of Killala; 442 a.
 Capt. Tiarnan; 442 a.
- Orpington; 335 a.
 manor of; 322 b.
- Orr, Major, letters of; 294 b, 295 b.
- Orrebi, Philip de, justice of Chester; 356 a, 356 b, 370 a.
- Orrery, Earl of; 55 b.
 (1663); 520 a.
 petition of his officers, &c.; 501 b, 533 b.
 lands helds by; 520 b.
 letter of (1708); 36 a.
 (1711); 39 b.
- Orsa; 23 a.
- Orseth, manor of; 635 a.
- Orton:
 Richard, requisition by; 439 b.
 William, of Leicester; 419 a, 439 b.
- Osbaldston's case (1641); 170 b.
- Osbaldston, Mr., prebendary; 6 a.
- Osbaldston, alias Kelly, Elizabeth; 535 b.
- Osborn, Sir George, MSS. of; xxi.
- Osborn, Osborne:
 Henry, attack on; 312 a.
 John, counsellor, petition of; 516 a.
 Nicholas; 132 a.
 — examination of; ib.
 — petition of; 510 b.
 Sir Peter, at Guernsey; 7 a.
 Sir Thomas, commissioner; 275 a.
- Osborne, Ensign Owen; 593 b.
- Oscott, St. Mary's College, MSS. of; xxi.
- Oscache, Robert, rector of St. Andrew's, Worcester; 638 a.
- Osecece, co. York, town of; 636 b.
- O'Shanaghane, Shane, convict; 550 a.
- Osenburg, Bishop of, letters of (1706); 31 b.
- Osney, abbot of, John, commission to; 340 b.
- Ospring:
 hospital at; 320 b, 333 a.
 Eylwarton, near; 323 b.
 Dean of, Cristian, assault on; 349 b.
 Justus de; 341 a.
 Osbertus de; ib.
- Ossian controversy, the; 444 b, 451 b.
- Ossory:
 diocese of; 15 b.
 Bishop of (1648); 609 b.
 Earl of (19 Hen. VIII.); 582 b.
 — Thomas (1666); 102 a.
 — petition of; 102 b.
 — his quarrel with the Duke of Buckingham; 102 a, 102 b.
 — of the Trinity House (1675); 255 a.
 — letter of (1678); 212 b.
 — letter of (1687); 555 a.
 — Thomas; 552 a.
 — picture of; 257 a, 258 b.
 Countess of (1667); 388 a.
 — death of (1763); 285 b.
 — her sister; ib.
- Ossory, Upper, Baron of, Fitzpatrick; 514 b.
- Ossulton, Middlesex, hundred; 164 a.
- Osteleye, Thomas de; 342 b.
- Ostend; 12 b, 28 b, 33 a.
 garrison, &c. of; 33 b.
 surrender of; 43 b.
 the fleet at; 49 b.
- Ostenders, their fight with the Dutch; 253 b.
- Ostendorph:
 Katherine; 148 a.
 — answer of; 148 b.
- Osterley Park, Middlesex:
 MSS. at, report on; xi., 92 b.
 paintings removed to; 100 b.
- O'Sulleavans, —, proceedings of; 603 a.
- Oswald, —, Member of Parliament; 225 a.
- Oswestry, mayor of; 12 b.
- Otford, Kent, documents dated at; 349 a, 633 a.
- Otham, Kent, manor and church of; 329 a.
- Othen, Miss, MSS. of; xxi.
- Otterbourne:
 Hampshire; 263 b.
 wood of; ib.
 documents concerning; ib.
- Otto and Ottobon, constitution of; 353 a.
- Otway:
 Captain; 595 b.
 — at Rosse; 600 b.
- Oudenarde, battle of; 17 a, 19 a, 19 b, 25 a, 34 b.
- Ouenton, Thomas; 608 b.
- Ouessant, isle d'; 561 a.
- Oughtewell; 333 b.
- Oulton:
 Edward, mayor of Chester (1687), rental of Chester by; 372 a.
 Richard, mayor of Chester (1700), letter to; 393 a.
 co. Chester; 401 b.
- Oundle; 334 b.
- Ouse, the river, fords on; 9 b.
- Outhirothirstrody, lands of; 305 b, 306 a, 306 b.
- Outwell; 335 b.
- Over, Andrew, soldier; 534 b.
- Overcassel, documents dated at; 17 a, 17 b.
- Overbroynton; 635 b.
- Overbury:
 Sir Thomas, book ascribed to; 94 a.
 — his death; 585 a.
- Overton:
 Benjamin, of the Mint; 64 a.
 — receipts of; 70 a.
- Ovid, French MS. of his Metamorphoses; 100 b
- Owen:
 the printer, prosecution of; 570 b.
 Anthony; 380 a.
 Brother; 155 b.
 John, charge against; 435 b.
 Rev. John, letters of; 291 a, 294 b.
 Mary, answer of; 136 a.
 Robert, alderman of Ruthin, letter of; 399 a.
 Thomas, answer of; 136 a.
- Owens:
 Sergeant Major; 593 b.
 Major, prisoner; 616 a.
 Edward, trooper, petition of; 511 b.
- Owensworth, Francis, trooper, petition of; 533 b.
- Owston, co. York; 271 b.
- Oxburgh, Col. Hewart, his companies; 494 b.
- Oxen, price of, in 1278; 353 b.
- Oxenden:
 Sir George, letters to; 251 a, 254 a.
 — at Surat; 252 b.
 — present to; 254 a.
- Oxene, Jacobus de, monk of Canterbury; 338 a.
- Oxeneburne, Richard and Walter; 264 b.
- Oxenefort; 422 b.
- Oxenstiern, Comte, letters of (1706); 31 b, 36 a.
- Oxford; 4 a, 6 a, 63 a, 144 a, 209 b, 210 a, 332 b.
 document dated at; 419 a. council of; 352 a.
 Charles I. at; 3 a, 212 b. garrison; 8 b, 9 b.
 siege of; 7 b, 10 b.
 reducing of; 8 b.
 Parliament at; 105 a.
 Friars preachers in (1505); 266 a.
 Hustings Court at (14th century); 266 a.
 Physic Garden at; 235 a.
 Hospital of St. John, grant to; 264 a, 265 b.
 St. Michael's; 335 a.
 Circuit, justices of assize for, warrants to; 393 b, 395 b. county, committee of, letter of; 8 b.
 — lord lieutenant of, letter to; 282 a.
- Oxford University: collection for (1319); 354 a.
 in great straits from dearth of provisions; ib.
 scholars (1608); 283 b.
 the learned physicians of (1610); 435 a. professor of astronomy at; 84 a. medical degrees at; 226 b.
 All Soul's College; 50 b, 159 a, 231 b.
 — the windows in; 266 a.
 Balliol College, visitation of; 340 b.
 — MSS. of; xxiii.
 Brasenose College; 380 b, 439 b.
 Canterbury College, foundation of; 324 a, 341 b, 342 a.
 Christ Church; 176 a, note, 212 b.
 Corpus Christi College; 435 a.
 — MSS. of; xxiii.
 Exeter College, MSS. of; ib.
 Jesus College, MSS. of; ib.
 Lincoln College, MSS. of; ib.

Oxford University—cont.

- Magdalen College, MSS. in, reports on; xxiii, 262 a.
 — president and fellows, letter to; 264 b.
 — president, &c. of, statement by; 266 a.
 Merton College; 227 a.
 — MSS. of; xxiii
 — document dated from; 283 b.
 Merton Hall; 234 a.
 New College, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Oriel College; 363 a.
 — MSS. of; xxiii.
 Queen's College, MSS. of; ib.
 St. John's College; 232 a.
 — MSS. of; xxiii.
 Trinity College, MSS. of; ib.
 University College, MSS. of; ib.
 Wadham College, MSS. of; ib.
 Worcester College, MSS. of; ib.
 Duke of Marlborough's gift to; 13 b. scholars, dialogue between; 26 b.
 papal bull to (1484); 266 b.
 the Pope asked to promote the welfare of (1312); 352 a. vice-chancellor (1627); 630 a.
 Oxford, Bishop of;
 (1627), commissioner; 630 a.
 Walter, writ of summons to (1666); 101 a.
 (1681); 212 b.
 W., letter of (1709); 46 b.
 executor of the Duchess of Marlborough; 567 a.
 Oxford, Earl of;
 (1254), Hugh de Vere; 632 b.
 (s Ric. II.) v. Walter Sibill; 169 b.
 letter of (1620); 239 b.
 (1668); 117 a.
 letter of (1711); 39 a, 40 a.
 letters to; 68 a, 71 b, 73 a, 73 b, 74 a, 75 b, 78 b, 91 b.
 letters of (1712); 25 b.
 (1713); 14 a.
 petition to (1713); 67 a. prisoner in the Mint (1715); 90 a. character of; 16 b.
 dedication to; 81 a.
 Oxford, Countess of;
 Matilda de Veer (1366), her will; 338 a.
 Maud de Vere (1454); 262 b.
 Elizabeth (1663); 117 a.
 Diana, late (1663); 117 a.
 her sisters, Annie and Elizabeth; 117 a.
 Oxhill; 466 b.
 Oxley, Ensign Arthur; 594 b.
 Oxney, John, monk of Canterbury; 340 b.
 Oryster layings, the Duke of York's (1671); 160 b.

P.

- Pacey, Theo., soldier; 534 b.
 Pacheco, M., letters of; 31 b.
 Packer, J., letter of; 282 b.
 Packers, M., letter of; 36 a.
 Paddy, William, physician, report by; 229 a.
 Padsley, John; 65 a.
 Paedenborn, Bishop of, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 Paeris, Ranulph de; 357 a.
 Pagan, John, letter of; 290 b.
 Page;
 Dr.; 156 b.
 Agnes, of Polstead, will of; 333 b.
 Sir G. and Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 John and Cecily, conveyance by; 408 a.
 Radulf; 639 a.
 Radulfus, witness; 408 b.
 Richard; 629 b.
 William, letter of; 295 b.
 — of Willesden, will of; 332 b.
 Paget, Pagett;
 Lord (1667); 114 a.
 Edward, master of Christ's Hospital; 258 a.
 J., letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
 Katherine; 234 a.
 Pagham;
 benefice of; 337 a, 341 b.
 church; 343 b, 343 a.
 Pagnei, Col., memorial of, on capitulation of Bouchain; 40 a.
 Paine;
 Mr., steward at Duke of Richmond and Lennox; 142 a.
 Capt. John, surveyor at Dublin; 519 a, 522 b, 525 b.
 — certificate by; 519 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 or Payne, Thomas, of Ormonde's halberdiers; 528 a, 528 b.
 See Payne.
 Painters, Company of, v. Company of Plasterers; 170 b.
 Paisley;
 documents dated at; 309 b, 310 a.
 monastery of; 308 b.
 abbot of, Claud Hamilton; ib.
 precept, &c. by; 309 b.
 — John; 309 a.
 — William; 309 b.
 Pakefield; 333 b, 334 a.
 Pakenham, Capt. Henry; 598 b.
 Pakere, John, of Sandwich, clerk, pension to; 350 b.
 Pakker, Nicholas, of Wapley, will of; 335 a.
 Pakyngton, John, of Leicester; 420 a.
 Palatinate, the;
 defence of, contributions at Leicester for; 436 a. moneys issued for; 2 a.
 Council of, letter of; 214 a.
 Paatine, Elector or Prince;
 (1622), letter to; 214 a.
 Ludovic, his visit to Leicester; 427 b.
 letters of (1705); 31 a.
 letter of (1709); 36 b.
 letter of; 39 b.
 Pale, Lords of; 581 b.
 Paleotti, Marquis de, letters of; 37 b, 38 b, 40 a.
 Palermo; 19 b.
 Palestrina, Cardinal of, nuntio; 338 a, 344 b, 345 b, 346 a, 352 a.
 Palet, Thomas, of Leicester; 420 a.
 Palgrave; 334 a.
 Suffolk, house and manor of; 277 b.
 Paling, Richard, of Leicester; 419 a.
 Pallandt, Baron de, letters of; 36 a, 39 b.
 Pallium, the, privilege of; 318 a.
 Palmer;
 Mr., gift by; 232 a.
 Major, letters of; 290 b.
 Andrew, of the Mint; 66 a.
 Charles, letter of; 219 b.
 Edward, waterman; 279 b.
 Captain Emanuel; 596 a.
 Sir Geoffrey, Attorney-General; 234 b, 636 a.
 H., letters of; 245 b.
 Capt. H., letter of; 292 b.
 Henry, waterman; 279 b.
 Sir Jeoffrey, candidate for Lincolnshire; 50 a.
 John, son of Richard the; 408 a.
 — of Lambeth, will of; 332 b.
 Peter, inquisition by; 406 a.
 Ralph, his Life of Baldwin Hamay; 234 a.
 Ric., physician, report by; 229 a.
 Richard, defendant; 529 b.
 — soldier; 534 b.
 Thomas le; 2 a.
 Thomas, bailiff of Leicester; 419 a.
 Sir W., his widow; 4 b.
 William, petition of; 78 b.
 — resident with Mahajee Scindia, letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 294 a, 294 b.
 Major Wm., letter of; 295 b.
 William the, mayor of Leicester; 411 a, 421 a.
 Palherston, Lord (1714), letter of; 57 a.
 Palmes;
 Mr.; 17 b, 18 a.
 — letters of; 32 b, 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.
 — letter to; 36 a.
 — his mission to Savoy; 16 a.
 — his proposals; 33 a.
 — instructions to; 47 a.
 — memorial of; 77 b.
 General, letters of; x., 1 a, 59 a.
 — Francis, letters of; 19 a, et seq.
 Fra., letters of; 27 a, 37 b.
 Palmquist, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Palsgrave, Prince, of the Rhine, at Leicester; 429 a.
 Palyart, M., letters of; 38 b.
 Paman, Dr. Henry, of the College of Physicians; 234 b.
 Pampeluna, Bishop of; 338 b, 339 a.
 Pandsthous, Dr., character in a dialogue; 93 a.
 Pandulf the Legate; 319 a.
 Pangaert, M., letters of; 37 b, 38 b.
 Pannell [Paynell], Sir Wm., and Margaret, his wife; 170 a.
 Panton;
 Edward, petition of; 120 a.
 — answer to; 120 b.
 T., letter of; 38 b.
 Papillon, Mr.; 134 a, 134 b.
 Papists; 391 b, 393 b, 395 b. proclamation against, message, &c. of House of Commons to the King (1666); 163 a. in Ireland, disaffection of; 197 a.
 Parajiba, West Indies; 533 a.
 Parbroith, co. Rife, lands of; 308 a.
 Parefoy, Lieut.; 217 b.
 Paris; 40 b.
 letters dated at; 1 a, 23 b, 78 a, 30 b, 41 a, 62 a, 218 a, 218 b, 219 a, 285 a–287 b, 552 b, 555 a, 556 b, 558 a, passim.

l'aris—cont.

- treaty of (1763), papers touching ; 287 a.
University of ; 447 b.
Gazette, the ; 44 b.
the Louvre, letters dated at ; 27 b.
la grande poste de ; 30 a.
Archbishop of (1691) ; 562 b.
- Parisot, M., letters of ; 31 b.
- Parke :
Col., letter of ; 38 b.
Mr., letter of ; 37 b.
Governor of Leeward Islands ; 40 b.
George, letter of ; 74 b.
- Parker :
Lord (1753) ; 220 a.
Lady, letter of ; 57 a.
Lord Chief Justice ; 260 b.
— letter of ; 58 b.
Lord Chancellor, letter of ; 50 a.
Mr. Serjeant ; 45 b.
Francis, extracts by ; 583 a.
John, sergeant-at-law ; 151 b.
— his proposal ; 77 a, 77 b.
Robert, of Leicester ; 428 b.
Thomas, on Cambridge committee ; 10 a.
William, prisoner, petition of ; 502 a.
— prisoner in Carlow Castle, petition of ; 530 a.
- Parkes, Col. ; 43 b.
- Parkhall, co. Warwick ; 427 b.
- Parkham parish ; xxiii.
- Parkhurst :
co. Warwick ; 427 b.
Mr. ; 101 b.
Sir William, of the Mint ; 64 a, 64 b.]
— warrants, &c. to ; 86 a, 90 a.
— petition of ; 103 b.
- Parkins, Parkyns :
Mr. ; 417 b.
Mr., recorder of Leicester ; 432 a.
Rt., mayor of Leicester, letter of ; 432 a.
- Parkinson :
John, of Oulton ; 276 a.
Thomas, letter of ; 289 b.
- Parkman, William ; 530 a.
- Parley, Thomas, letter of ; 293 b.
- Parliament :
report of a (1640) ; 383 b.
committee of, order of (1652) ; 385 b.
petition to (1652) ; 386 a. commission for proroguing (1666) ; 101 a. petition of city of Chester to (circ. 1667) ; 388 a. prorogation of ; 111 b.
commission for proroguing ; 137 b.
writs of summons to. See names of peers.
Act concerning certain proceedings in (1669) ; 108 a.
trials in and privileges of, Act for limiting, &c. (1669) ; 108 a. prorogued (1669), proclamation and commission ; 127 a. privilege of, Act concerning (1670) ; 153 a. freedom of speech in, resolutions concerning, &c. ; 115 a, 118 b. opening of (1708) ; 35 a. journal of proceedings in ; 61 b. members of, poor abilities of, in 1765 ; 191 a. annual, in Ireland, speech in favour of ; 185 b.
- Parma, duchy of ; 570 a.
- Parmenter, Richard Le, of Leicester ; 408 a.
- Parnel, Alderman, of Chester ; 365 b.
- Parr :
Anne Lady, Acts (temp. Henry VIII.), touching ; 102 a.
Thomas, letter of ; 295 b.
- Parry :
Charles, letter of ; 76 a.
Edwd., of Chester ; 361 b.
Ensign Edward, letter of ; 291 a.
Thos. ; 279 a.
Sir Thomas, letters of ; 583 b.
- Parson, William, of Worcester ; 638 a.
- Parsone, William le, licence to ; 2 a.
- Parsons :
Sergeant-major, weekly charge of his troop ; 598 a.
Francis, petition of ; 418 b.
Major James ; 595 a.
Captain John ; 593 a, 598 b.
Ensign Richard ; 591 b.
Thomas, petition of ; 418 b.
Capt. Will. ; 595 b.
Col. William, petitions of ; 67 b.
Sir William, Lord Justice of Ireland ; 589 a.
— depositions taken by ; 572 b.
- Parssymour, John, of Leicester ; 412 a.
- Parthenia, C., letter of ; 294 a.
- Partman, Thomas ; 513 a.
- Partridge :
a witness ; 155 a, 156 b.

Partridge—cont.

- George, licence farmer, petition of ; 545 a.
John, licence farmer, petitions, &c. of ; 529 a, 539 b, 545 a, 546 b.
- Parye, Sir Thos., chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, petition to ; 435 b.
- Pascal :
Marquis de, letter of ; 36 b.
M., letters of ; 32 a, 35 b, 38 a, 40 a.
- Pasfield, Capt. ; 248 b.
- Pasley, Paslay, or Pezly :
Dame Katharine, widow ; 153 b, 154 a.
— plea and answer of ; 154 a.
- Passelewe, Robert, witness ; 1 b.
- Passes beyond seas, order of Council (1679) ; 391 b.
- Passeley, Roger, gent., of London, will of ; 333 a.
- Paston :
—, his charges ; 268 b.
Mr., his bill ; 119 a.
Edward, letter of ; 37 b.
— President of English College, Douay, letters of ; 38 b.
Sir J., and Fastolf's estate ; 268 b.
- Pasturs, Brigadier des, letters of ; 37 b, 38 b.
- Patam, John, of Leicester ; 416 b.
- Patching, Sussex ; 323 b.
- Pate :
General, his regiment ; 20 b.
Captain Adam ; 595 a.
— weekly charge of his troop ; 598 a.
Adrian, lands held by ; 520 b.
Edward, of Kettleby ; 65 b.
- Patenage, John de, minor canon of St. Paul's ; 633 a.
- Patenham, Vaux estate at ; 4 b.
- Paternost, Thomas, of Sherston ; 639 a.
- Paterson :
Col., letter of ; 296 a.
General, letter of ; 288 b.
J., letter of ; 294 a.
John, letter of ; 295 b.
— William, certificate by ; 303 a.
- Pateshill, Simon de, witness ; 270 a.
- Pateshull :
Martin de ; 632 b, 633 b.
Symon de ; 356 b.
- Patherish, co. Monmouth ; 384 b.
- Patric, Wm. and Robt. ; 356 a, 356 b.
- Patricio, Wm. ; 357 a.
- Patten, G., letter of ; 219 b.
- Patterdale ; 634 b.
- Patterson, Lieut.-Col., letter of ; 295 b.
- Patteson, Lieut. R.N. ; 289 a.
- Panent, Roger de, witness ; 270 a.
- Paur, Captain John ; 594 b.
- Paul, Symon, appointment of ; 281 a.
- Paulet, Pawlett :
Lord (1671) ; 161 b.
Sir Charles ; 219 b.
Lord William, letter of ; 40 a.
- Paull, Fr. ; 608 b, 609 a.
- Pannecote, G., letter of ; 7 a.
- Pauwitz, M., letter of ; 40 a.
- Pavia :
siege of ; 28 a.
camp before ; 218 b.
letters dated at ; ib.
quarrel at ; 28 a.
- Pawson, Wm., letter of ; 292 b.
- Paynam, Captain Henry ; 591 a.
- Payne, Payn :
Captain ; 515 a.
John, of Worcester, will of ; 335 b.
Capt. John ; 545 a.
Ralph, of Carisbrook, will of ; 335 a.
— of Tewkesbury, will of ; 335 b.
Sir Ralph ; 202 b.
Lieut. Thomas ; 591 a.
Walter ; 281 b.
Waterton, suit of ; 88 a.
Will., of Blythburgh, will of ; 334 a.
See Paine.
- Paynell, Sir Wm., and Margaret, his wife ; 170 a.
- Paynton, Nicholas, of Wolverston ; 240 a.
- Pench, John, letters of ; 289 b, 291 a, 292 b, 294 a.
- Peace, the (1709), papers relating to ; 37 b.
- Peacocke, Thomas, Fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford ; 380 b.
- Peake :
Serjeant ; 369 b.
F., Esq., MSS. of ; xxi.
alias Kemsworth, John, schoolmaster ; 272 a.
Martiall ; 598 b.
- Peace :
Brigadier, letter of ; 38 b.
Col., letter of ; 36 a.
Thos., letter of ; 294 a.

- Pearle :
 John ; 140 a, 140 b.
 Richard ; 140 b.
 — Act for relief of ; 140 a.
 Thos., petitions, &c. of ; 140 b.
- Pearls, &c. pawned by Charles I. ; 209 a.
- Pearse, James, chirurgion, warrant for payment to ; 280 a.
- Pearson, Colonel, letter of ; 295 a.
- Peart, John, petition of ; 125 b.
- Pease, prices of (1252-1262) ; 343 b.
- Peasenhall ; 333 b.
- Peasley, Captain James ; 596 a.
- Peasly, Capt. Francis, answer of ; 504 b.
- Peat, Samuel, letter of ; 292 b.
- Peate :
 Lieut.-Col. ; 507 a.
 Lieut.-Col. Adam ; 542 a.
- Peck, Robert, letters of ; 290 a, 290 b.
- Peckham :
 Kent ; 327 b, 329 b.
 Surrey ; 332 a, 335 b.
 Peter, of Denham, Bucks, will of ; 333 a. family ; 569 b.
- Pecock, William, of Stebbing ; 415 a.
- Pedley, Nicholas, petition of ; 109 b.
- Peebles, document dated at ; 344 b.
- Peers :
 Edmund, of Yarmouth, will of ; 333 b.
 Rich., of Shapwick, will of ; 332 b.
- Peers of England, petition of, touching precedence over those of Scotland and Ireland ; 118 a.
- Pearson, John, of Worcester ; 638 b.
- Peirce, Mr. ; 250 a.
- Peircy, James, petition of ; 528 a.
- Peirs or Peirse :
 Captain Edward ; 592 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.
- Peirson, Benjamin, information of ; 121 b.
- Peke :
 John, conveyance to ; 423 a.
 William, conveyance to ; 423 a.
- Pekerell, John and Agnes, of Leicester ; 423 a.
- Pelham :
 Lord (1709), letter of ; 37 b.
 Lady, letter of ; 294 b.
 Mr., letter of ; 57 a.
 Mr. ; 219 b.
 — doctor ; 228 b.
 — his illness and death ; 221 b, 224 b.
 — his administration ; 196 a.
- Pelary, letter of ; 9 b.
 — order signed by ; 10 a.
- Mary ; 150 a.
 — answer of ; 150 a.
- Robert ; 150 a.
 — answer of ; 150 a.
- Th., warrant by ; 69 a.
- Pelican, the ship ; 257 b.
- Pelle or Pette, Richard, of the King's household ; 422 a.
- Pellet, Will., of Steyning, will of ; 335 a.
- Pelliparius, Symo ; 344 a.
- Pellisson, Mr. de ; 564 a.
- Pelsant :
 one, preacher at Leicester ; 432 a.
 William., B.D., of Leicester ; 417 a.
- Pelter, Anthony, trooper ; 525 a.
- Pemberton :
 Henry and Peter, of Chester ; 361 b.
 Hugh, elderman of London, will of ; 332 a.
 Roger, licence farmer, petitions of ; 511 b, 516 a, 525 a.
- Pembroke county, ship money assessment ; 383 a.
- Pembroke, Earl of :
 (1 John), Wm., witness ; 404 b.
 (1312), Piers Gaveston and ; 354 a.
 Valence (1316) ; 262 b.
 (14th century), Hastings, his will ; 337 a.
 (3 Ric. II.) v. Thos. de Roos ; 169 b.
 (1596) ; 378 b.
 William, payment to ; 94 a.
 his players, gift to (1598) ; 428 a.
 and Montgomery, Philip, petition to (1630) ; 229 a.
 his reply ; ib.
 letter to (1632) ; 245 a.
 at Newcastle, with Charles I. (1647) ; 429 a.
 (1668) ; 117 a.
 William, petition, &c. of (1671) ; 162 b, 163 a.
 and Montgomery, Philip, late, petition of his creditors (1671) ; 161 b.
 (1688) ; 555 b.
 (1691) ; 561 a, 562 a.
 at the Hague (1697) ; xi., 100 a.
 High Admiral (1702) ; 260 a.
 Lord Lieut. of Ireland (1707) ; 16 a, 260 a.
 Lord High Admiral (1708) ; 231 b.
 letter of (1709) ; 37 b.
 Lord High Admiral (1709) ; 46 b, 50 b.
 (1763) ; 286 a.
- Pembroke, Countess of, Barbara ; 51 b.
- Penbrugge, Margaret, formerly wife of Sir Fulk of, certificate touching ; 370 b.
- Pencester, Steph. de, Lord Warden ; 346 b, 347 a.
- Pendlebury, Colonel, letter of ; 38 b.
- Pendreich ; 305 b.
- Penenden Heath, great Folkmote on ; 321 a.
- Pengelly, Thomas, opinion by ; 232 a.
- Penicuik, clerk of ; 310 b.
- Penifather, Major, in Limerick ; 601 b.
- Penkrich, bridge-keeper at Leicester ; 406 b, 407 a.
- Penn :
 General, of the Trinity House ; 248 b.
 Richard ; letter of ; 294 b.
 William, letters of ; 37 b.
 — heads for treaty of peace by ; 37 b.
 William, letter signed by ; 388 b.
 — his speech ; 219 b.
- Sir Wm. ; 131 b, 171 a.
 — articles of impeachment against, and his answer there- to ; 126 a.
 — an elder brother of the Trinity House ; 248 b, 250 a, 252 b, 253 b.
 — death of ; 254 b.
 — lands held by ; 520 a.
- Penne, Davies and Sibilla, grant to ; 94 a.
- Pennefather, Matt., muster-master general ; 58 a.
- Pennell, Capt. Richard, letter of ; 294 a.
- Pennington :
 James, letter of ; 295 b.
 Lieut. James, letter of ; 293 b.
 Thomas ; 122 a.
 — petition of ; 121 b.
- Pennsylvanian Loan Office, the ; 208 a.
- Penny :
 G., of Toller, his estate ; 210 b.
 John, of Leicester ; 420 a.
- Pennyfather, Matthew, petition of ; 503 a.
- Pennyman, Sir James, commissioner ; 275 a.
- Pennyng, John, brewer, of London, will of ; 332 b.
- Penrhyn :
 Cornwall ; 254 b, 333 a.
 inhabitants of, letter of ; 142 b.
 mayor ; 142 b.
- Penriddock :
 Edward, letter of ; 399 a.
 Capt. Edward, petition of ; 250 b.
- Pentecost, Will., gift by ; 323 a.
- Pentice, derivation of ; 369 b, 396 b.
- Pentland Hills, gold in ; 84 b.
- Pentlo, Capt., letters to ; 4 b, 6 b.
- Penyton : land in ; 626 b.
 Garston ; ib.
 — Butte ; ib.
- Peover, document dated from ; 392 b.
- Peper, Simou ; 281 b.
- Pepin, William, abbot of Leicester ; 405 a.
- Pepper :
 G., letter of ; 40 a.
 Thomas, trooper ; 503 a.
- Pepperdston, co. Louth, plundered ; 590 b.
- Pepry, John, of St. Olave's, Southwark, will of ; 332 b.
- Pepps, Pypes :
 John, clerk of the Trinity House ; 236 a, 254 b.
 — letters of ; 255 a, 255 b, 256 a.
 — death of ; 256 a.
- Pepps :
 Samuel ; 131 b, 133 a.
 — first master of the Trinity House ; xiv., 235 a, 255 a, 256 a, 259 b.
 — letters of, &c. ; 255 b, 258 a, 259 a, 261 b, 388 b.
 — clerk of the Navy Acts ; 254 b.
 Thomas ; 226 b.
 — examination of ; 230 a.
- Percival :
 Lord, letters of ; 54 a.
 Mrs. Crooke, Clarendon's saying about ; 190 a.
 Geoffrey, fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford ; 380 b.
 Sir Henry, petition of ; 506 a.
 — his father, Sir Philip ; ib.
 John, knt., late Mayor of London, will of ; 334 b.
 Jno. ; 74 a.
- Perey :
 Henry (Hotspur) ; 359 a.
 — (1314), letter to ; 352 b.
 — de (1312), Piers Gaveston and ; 354 a.
 — ; 412 b.
 Robert, of Wetheringsett, will of ; 334 a.
 Thomas, of Hocking, will of ; 333 b.
 — de, Earl of Worcester ; 264 b.
- Perhamstede, Kent ; 327 a.
- Perigord, precentor of ; 352 b.
- Perker, Will., of Walsingham, will of ; 335 b.

Perkins :

Henry, Act touching lands ; 120 a.
 Jane, Act touching lands ; 120 a.
 Capt. John, weekly charge of his troop ; 597 b.
 Captain Richard ; 592 a.
 Ensign Thomas ; 591 a.
 William, petitions of ; 502 b, 507 a.

Perks, Lieut. Edw., letter of ; 293 a.

Permin, Mr., commission to ; 280 a.

Perne, Corporal Robert ; 503 a.

Perpigoan ; 561 b.

Perrean :

J. P., letter of ; 295 b.

R. J., letter of ; 289 b.

Perriam, Elizabeth, Lady ; 284 a.

Perrine, Madame de la ; 564 a.

Perrott, Sir John :

viceroy of Ireland ; 441 b.

trial of ; 534 b.

Perry, Mr., of Christ's Hospital ; 255 a.

Perryman :

Ann Posthuma ; 6 a.

Dorothy, her daughters ; ib.

Elizabeth ; ib.

Perryn, Mrs. ; 155 b, 156 b, 158 a, 159 a.

Persia :

account of travels to ; 1 b.

king of, account of an embassy to (1604) ; 23 a.

Persons beyond seas, &c., upon whose lives estates depend, Act touching (1666) ; 101 b.

Persun, Alexander, deed by ; 410 b.

Perth :

documents dated at ; 305 b, 307 b.

King James's Hospital at ; xxiii.

Royal Burgh of ; ib.

synod at, in 1206 ; 300 b.

attack on (1716) ; 40 b, 41 a.

the Hessians at ; 313 b.

the Jacobites at ; 40 b.

St. William of, legend of ; 348 b.

Pery, Edmund Sexton :

correspondence, &c. of, report on ; xviii., 174 b.

elected member for Limerick ; 183 a memoranda of his speeches ; ib.

letter on his marriage ; 190 a.

elected speaker of the Irish House of Commons ; 192 a,
 192 b.

Lord Taaffe's interview with ; 479 a.

John, proposed coinage by ; 75 a.

Peryam, William, justice ; 272 b, 273 a.

Peseux, M. de, letter of ; 38 b.

Pesseux, Chevalier de, letter of ; 40 a.

Pesters :

M., letters of ; 36 a, 38 b.

N., letter of ; 37 b.

Petero, lands of ; 305 a.

Peterov ; 306 a, 307 a.

Peterow ; lands of ; 308 a.

Petcillo, Balfour of ; 308 a.

Peter the wild boy ; 63 b.

Peterborough, Earl of :

commission to (1667) ; 280 a.

deceased (1670) ; 149 a.

Henry, answers, statement, &c. of (1670) ; ix., 149 a, 149 b.

— his father and brother ; 149 a.

Viscount Mordaunt, afterwards, 1687–8, letters of his wife ; helping the Queen's flight (1688) ; 555 b.
 558 b.

his government of Tangiers ; 500 b.

at Tangier ; 551 b.

in Spain ; 1 a, 16 a, 18 a.

letter of ; 17 a.

instructions to ; 17 a, 60 a.

letters of (1705) ; 31 b.

letters to (1706) ; 47 b.

his recall from Spain ; 27 a.

(1707) ; 17 b.

at Guadalaxata ; 16 b.

letter of ; 25 a.

the Queen's dissatisfaction with ; 27 b.

proposed trial of ; 43 b.

letter of (1708) ; 36 a.

Lord Charlemont's complaint against (1708) ; 36 a.

letter of ; (1709) ; 37 b.

letter of (1720) ; 50 a.

letters of ; 54 a.

Peterborough, Countess Dowager of, Elizabeth (1670) ; 149 a.

petitions of ; 148 b, 149 a, 149 b.

Peterborough, Bishop of (1668) ; 166 a.

Petersfield ; 46 b, 324 b.

letter dated at ; 46 b.

Petit :

Mr., his "Jew's Apology" ; 490 b.

Claudius ; 109 a.

M., letter of ; 36 a.

Petitions, Lords' Committee for :

(1667, &c.) : 136 a, 139 b, 163 b, 164 a.

Petitions—cont.

orders of ; 115 b, 151 a.

report of ; 133 b.

statement to ; 163 b.

Petkum, H. :

Holstein resident ; 39 a, 40 b.

letters of ; 37 a, 38 a.

Petling :

Peter de, of Leicester ; 405 b.

Robertus de, witness ; 408 a.

Petra, Simon de, of Leicester ; 404 b.

Petre :

Lord (1668) ; 166 a.

— letter of (1684) ; 219 b.

Robert, agreements by ; 272 b.

Petrie, Wm., letters of ; 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.

Petseotly, Wester ; 307 a.

Pett :

Capt., shipwright ; 243 a.

Doctor ; 507 b.

Joseph, of the Shipwrights' Company ; 261 a.

Phineas, letter of ; 245 a.

or Pelle, Richard, conveyance to ; 422 a.

Pettit, Henry, prisoner in Fleet, &c. :

petitions of ; 110 a, 110 b.

— report on ; 110 a.

Petty :

John, deputy Surveyor General ; 532 a.

Sir William, his Irish witnesses ; 575 b.

Petty :

Duncan, archdeacon of Glasgow, witness ; 307 a.

John, of Bridge, penance done by ; 337 a.

Peveril, Hugo, witness ; 270 a.

Pexal, letter dated at ; 25 a.

Peyster, Capt. de, letter of ; 289 a.

Peyteyry, Peter, of Sherborne, will of ; 335 a.

Peyton :

Col., letters of ; 36 a, 40 a.

Mr., of the Mint ; 77 b.

Craven, of the Mint ; 61 a.

— letters of ; 68 a, 82 a.

Pezly [? Pasley], Lady ; 153 b.

Pharmacopœia Londinensis, the ; 229 b, 233 a.

Phelip, Thomas, of Leicester ; 420 a.

Phenney, Geo., governor of the Bahamas ; 91 a.

Phelips, W., MSS. of ; xxi.

Phiberd, Peter, petition of ; 513 b.

Philadelphia ; 575 b.

Philip :

Don, his duchies ; 570 a.

King ; 283 b.

of Macedon, Dr. Leland's history of ; 486 b.

Philip III., letter to ; 213 b.

Philip IV. :

of France, his dispute with Boniface VIII., ; 348 b.

edict by ; 349 a.

Philipp, Philip, &c. :

Ensign Mathew ; 591 a.

Richard, Richard Floyd v. ; 541 b.

Thomas, rector of Tempsford ; 269 a.

Thomas, of Montacute, will of ; 332 a.

Will. of Bosme, Essex, will of ; ib.

Philippine Islands, the ; 285 b.

Phillips, Philip, &c. :

Major-General, letters of ; 289 a.

Mr. ; 152 b.

E., letter of ; 68 a.

Edward ; 148 a.

Ensign Edward ; 592 a.

Humphrey ; 365 b.

Lieut. Jeffrey ; 595 a.

John, letter of ; 50 a.

— of Connock ; 631 b.

— naif ; 632 a.

— auditor of the Exchequer, affidavit of ; 132 b.

Col. Pawlett ; 533 b.

Richard, of Dublin Castle ; 518 b, 527 a.

— deputy commissary ; 523 b.

— his answer ; 541 b, 543 b.

— deputy mustermaster ; 547 a.

Thos., letter of ; 293 b.

— historian ; 480 b, 481 a.

William, letter of ; 294 a.

Phillippos, city of, now called Seris ; 435 b.

Phillipson, General Richard, letters of ; 294 b, 295 a.

Phillipstowne ; 603 b.

Philpott :

Ensign John ; 594 b.

Thos., letters of ; 290 b, 293 a, 295 a.

Philpstoun ; 307 b.

Phinland ; 84 b.

Phinney :

Edward ; 139 a.

— answer of ; ib.

Phiphoe, Kimbroe, widow, petition of ; 549 b.

Phippard, John, letter of ; 293 b.

- Phipps :
 Con., Chancellor of Ireland ; 74 a.
 Lieut. Thos., letter of ; 294 a.
 Phitone, Phitton :
 Hugh ; 357 a.
 Richard ; 356 a, 356 b.
 Phenix, the ship, wrecked ; 257 a, 257 b.
 Physic Garden, the ; 269 a.
 Physicians :
 their refusal to frequent divine service ; 227 b.
 College of, Mr. Horwood's report on manuscripts of ;
 xiv., 226 a.
 Picardy, descent upon ; 34 b.
 Piccolinomini, commander under Spain ; 553 b.
 Picke, John ; 279 b.
 Pickergill ; 383 a.
 Pickering :
 document dated at ; 347 a.
 Major ; 29 a.
 Sir Gilbert, payment to ; 95 a.
 Pickin, Captain John ; 592 a.
 Picot, Ralph, sheriff ; 329 b.
 Picoti, Robertus filius ; 356 b.
 "Pictavie et Cornubie," Richard Earl of ; 357 b.
 Pictures ; 282 b, 283 a.
 Piddocks, Leonard, of Ashby-de-la-Zouch ; 419 a.
 Piedmont ; 19 b, 28 a, 33 a, 218 a.
 Pierce, James ; 279 a.
 Pierpoint, Pierpoint :
 Lady Ann ; 140 a.
 Hon. Francis, deceased ; 136 b.
 Allison, afterwards Lady Read ; ib.
 Lady Grace ; 230 b.
 William ; 95 a.
 — of Nottingham ; 440 a.
 Piers, Capt. Henry ; 591 b.
 Pierstowne Marshall, lands of ; 514 a.
 Pignerol ; 561 b.
 letter dated at ; 19 b.
 Pignery, M., letter of ; 37 b.
 Pigot, Pigott, Pigott :
 Lord (1777) ; 288 b.
 Serjeant ; 545 a.
 AL, certificate by ; 506 a.
 Alexander, petition of ; 519 a.
 Ensign Ant. ; 594 a.
 Mr., letter of ; 57 a.
 Rev. Edward, commissioner in Ireland ; 573 a.
 George, serjeant-at arms ; 525 a, 529 a.
 Lieut. J. P., letter of ; 294 a.
 Sir John ; 605 b.
 Capt. John ; 598 b.
 Robert, servant to Sir Arthur Chichester ; 436 a.
 Captain Robert ; 592 b.
 Col. Thomas ; 505 a.
 Thos. sheriff of Chester (1594) ; 370 b.
 Pile, B., letter of ; 291 a.
 Pilgrims : to Canterbury, oblations by ; 344 a.
 — form of their certificate ; 352 a.
 to Rome at the Roman Jubilee of 1300, indulgences to ;
 345 b.
 Pilkington :
 Mr., of Leicester ; 417 b.
 — his house at Leicester ; 428 b.
 John, under sheriff of co. Leicester ; 428 b.
 Richard, petition of ; 531 b.
 Tho., security for Newton ; 66 a.
 Cornet Thomas ; 596 b.
 Pille, William, of Leicester, conveyance to ; 408 a.
 Pillebir, Richard de, Constable of the Tower ; 87 b.
 Pillory, the ; 156 a, 157 a, 371 a.
 Pilots, regulations, &c. concerning. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
 Pimm, Francis, son of John, petition of ; 539 b.
 Pinchbeck ; 333 a.
 Pindar :
 Sir Paul ; 136 a.
 Sir Peter ; 339 a.
 Pingnon, Marquis de, letter of ; 36 a.
 Pinto, Monsr. de ; 287 a.
 Pinu or Pin', Sibilla del, gift by ; 636 b.
 Pionville :
 M. de, letter of ; 40 a.
 M. de ; ib.
 Pipe, clerk of the, mem. touching grant of office of ; 282 a.
 Piper :
 Comte ; 16 a.
 — letters of ; 32 b, 36 a, 37 b.
 Comtesse de, letter of ; 37 b.
 Pippcott, Francis, his suit ; 3 a.
 Pirates ; 379 b, 380 a, 399 a, 399 b, 400 a.
 Turkish and other, certificates of losses by. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
 — Cromwell's letter about ; 640 b.
 Pisa, Lady Walpole at ; 570 b.
 Pisce, Richard ; 356 a, 356 b.
 Pistola, Bishop of ; 23 a.
 Pistrino, Symo de ; 344 a.
 Pitblatho, co. Fife, lordship of ; 307 b.
 Pitcarne :
 David, archdeacon of Brechin ; 308 b.
 Isobel, spouse of Patrick, Lord Lindsay ; 308 b.
 Piteruvy ; 307 b.
 Pittrburgh, John, of Leicester ; 414 a.
 Pitlochry, the rebels near ; 314 a.
 Pitman :
 Dr., of the College of Physicians ; 226 b.
 Mary, coiner ; 71 b.
 Pitcottic ; 304 b, 307 a.
 Pitt :
 Dr., censor ; 231 b.
 Mr., keeper of Newgate ; 46 b.
 Robert ; 150 a.
 — petition, &c. of ; ib.
 William ; 286 a.
 — letter of ; 57 a.
 Mr. Secretary (1761) ; 468 a.
 — letter of (1708) ; 46 b.
 — Secretary of State (1757), letter to ; 181 b.
 — his inactivity against Lord Bute ; 190 b.
 — Henry Fox and ; 213 a.
 — candidate for Dorsetshire (1753) ; 219 b.
 — Duke of Newcastle and ; 220 b, et seq.
 — H. Fox makes way for ; 221 a.
 — at the Prince of Wales's levée ; 222 b.
 — his artful, able speech (1756) ; ib.
 — his finest speech ; 225 b.
 — and the Sutherland estate ; 566 b.
 — the Duchess of Marlborough's legacy to ; 566 b, 567 a.
 and March, letter of ; 13 b.
 Pittaro or Pittarro, Wischarts of ; 298 b, 301 a, 302 a Pittenweem, robbery of excise office at ; 310 b, 311 a.
 Pittoni, painting by ; 63 a.
 Pla, Mark le, certificate of naturalization ; 164 b.
 Placentia, duchy of ; 570 a.
 Plague, the, in London, 148 a, 386 b, 387 b, 399 a, 400 a.
 Plagues in London : attempts to prevent ; 226 a.
 alleged causes of ; 229 a.
 Plaistowe, lands near ; 636 b.
 Plan, Roger de ; 356 b.
 Plantation trade, the ; 139 a.
 Plasshy, college of ; 333 a.
 Plate ; 363 b, 365 a, 400 b. inventory ; 371 b. order to convert into coin ; 365 a.
 Plate, John, letter of ; 37 b.
 Platevort, Alexander, trooper ; 525 a.
 Playdell, William, letters of ; 289 b.
 Player :
 Sir Thomas, letters of and to ; 387 a. chamberlain of city of London ; 133 a.
 Players :
 temp. Eliz., payments to ; 428 a.
 at Leicester, Lord Worcester's, their unruly conduct ;
 430 b.
 — memorandum touching others ; 431 a.
 Playter :
 Peter, of Cheam, will of ; 335 a.
 Thomas, expenses of ; 268 b.
 Playters, Sir Wm., 127 a.
 Pleas, Common :
 Lord Chief Justice of (1608), letter to ; 382 b. clerks, &c. of, case of (1641) ; 170 b.
 Plebion, Thomas, witness ; 330 b.
 Pledall, William, petition of ; 529 b.
 Piemondestone, church of ; 371 a.
 Plessen, M. de ; 27 a.
 Plesssets, John de, Earl of Warwick ; 265 b.
 Plesseto, John de ; 357 a.
 Plimton, Plympton :
 St. Peter and St. Paul, church of ; xiü., 636 b. prior, &c. of ; 637 a.
 Plit', Richard ; 357 a.
 Plomer, Thomas, of Swaffham, will of ; 333 b.
 Plot :
 gunpowder, papers relating to ; 434 a.
 late horrible (1678) ; 391 b.
 Plowden, R., letter of ; 290 b.
 Pluche, Noel Antoine, author ; 462 a.
 Pluckele, Osbert de, gift by ; 329 a.
 Pluckley :
 Kent ; 327 a.
 Helgarydena in ; 329 a.
 Plummer :
 Mrs., letter of ; 57 a.
 alias Leynham, Sir John, his wife Margaret ; 262 b.
 Plunkett, Plunkett ; 494 a. of Rathmore ; 566 b, 507 a. apestate ; 610 b.

Plunket, Plunkett—cont.

- Roman Catholic Primate of Ireland; 164 b.
 Capt.; 390 b.
 Charles; 466 b.
 Ignatius; 511 b.
 Mathew, of Louth, Ireland, his tenants; 511 b.
 Michael, of Oxhill; 466 b.
 — of Ardkeen; ib.
 Sir Nicholas; 611 a, 614 a.
 Robert; 466 b.
 Cornet Robert; 596 b.
 Walter, of the Grange, co. Dublin; 506 a.
 Sir Walter, lands held by; 520 b.
 Pluscarden, commandator of; 309 b.
 Plutarch's Lives; 63 b.
 Plymouth; 34 b, 239 b, 242 a, 248 b, 255 b, 259 b, 393 b, 563 a.
 port of; 94 a.
 threatened by the French; 202 b.
 pirates near; 242 b.
 proposed free port; 247 b.
 Sound; 34 b.
 Sutton water, &c. in; 164 b.
- Po :
 the river; 16 b.
 Leonard, physician; 228 a.
 — examination of; ib.
 — licensed to practise, &c.; ib.
 — censured and fined; 228 b.
- Pocock, John, of Maidenhead; 35 a.
 Podeskey, Podesresby; 637 a.
 Podington, document dated from, 375 a.
 Poell, Ensign, prisoner; 8 a.
 Poer, Dickon Le, witness; 408 b.
 Poetry, collection of; 24 a.
 Pohl, Lieut. Christian, letter of; 295 b.
 Poincar, Francis, a French prophet; 46 b.
 Pointis, Mr. De; 496 b, 497 b.
 Poisson, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Poissy, wines gathered at, for Ch. Ch., Canterbury; 344 b.
 Poitiers, documents dated at; 351 a.
 Poitou, Cornwall and, Earl of, Richard; 263 b.
- Poland :
 History of, by Dr. B. Connor; 464 a. and Russia (1768); 489 b.
 king of (1702); 16 a.
 — letters of (1705); 31 a.
 — letter of (1708); 36 a.
 — (1709); 36 b.
 — (1710); 38 a.
 — warrants by (1712); 14 b.
 — Augustus; 47 a.
 — Stanislaus; 34 a.
 — and queen of (1756); 220 b.
- Pole :
 Edmund de la, psalter given to; 625 a.
 — his mother Katherine; ib.
 — his children, dates of their births, &c.; ib.
 John de la; 402 a.
 Sir Michael de la; 626 a, 627 b.
 — lease by; 625 a.
 Sir Thomas de la, manors released to; 625 a, 625 b.
 William de la, Earl of Suffolk, Ewelme almshouse founded by; xiv., 624 b, et seq.
- Poledavies, sackcloth and, scaling of; 243 a.
 Poleman, Dr.; 163 a.
 Poley, Mr., letters of; 31 b.
 Polgrave, Will., tailor, of London, will of; 332 b.
 Poligrac, Abbé de; 558 a.
 Poll Bill, the papers touching (1666); 106 a, 128 a.
 Pollard :
 John, of co. Bucks; 7 b.
 Miles, soldier; 548 a.
- Pollards, clipped or foreign coins, suppression of; 347 b.
- Pollet :
 Dr., president of the College of Physicians; 232 a.
 — letter to; ib.
- Pollexfen :
 Major, letter of; 40 a.
 Mr., his treatise; 80 b.
 — Newton's reply to; ib.
- Pollyng, Henry, of Tolliton, will of; 335 a.
- Polstead; 333 b.
- Polton, Calderwood of; 312 b.
- Polwarth :
 Lord, letter of (1691); 557 b.
 — letter of (1709); 37 b.
- Pomeroy, William and Christiana; 637 a.
- Pomery or Pomeroy :
 Thomas; 169 b.
 Sir Thomas and Jane; 169 b.
- Pompador, Madame, or Marquise de; 287 b, 572 a.
- Pomry, John, of Wells; 639 b.
- Pon, Capt. Corneli du; 17 a.
- Poncio, Pablo Golarido; 22 b.
- Pondis, William, of co. Bedford, indenture by; 262 a.
- Ponde, William, of Corton, will of; 333 b.

Ponsobry :

- Col., governor of Dandalk; 599 a.
 Mr., his election to the Speakership; 180 a, 180 b, 181 a. or Punsobry, Capt. Henry; 596 b.
 John, elected Speaker of Irish House of Commons; 174 b.
 — narrative of events leading to his election; 176 b, et seq.
 — his resignation of the Speakership; 192 a.
 — late Speaker; 195 b.
 William Brabazon, of the Irish House of Commons; 192 a.
- Pont, Frances du, maid to Lady Bolingbroke; 567 a.
- Pontage at Leicester, redemption of; 406 a.
- Pontefract :
 Corporation of, Mr. Jeaffreson's report on MSS. of; xvi., 269 a.
 document dated at; 270 b.
 notes from parish registers; 276 a.
 made a free borough; 271 a. list of mayors; 275 a.
 Common Hall; 275 a. book of entries at; 274 a.
 order about trading of foreigners in; 273 b. its condition after the Civil Wars; 274 b. castle, surprise of; 276 b.
 — petition for its demolition; 274 b.
 — surrender of; ib.
 — order for its demolition; ib.
 — sale of materials of; 275 a.
- Park, survey of; 272 b.
- St. Giles' chapel; 276 a.
- Queen Elizabeth's school in, decree concerning; 271 b.
- Knolles' almshouse in; 271 b.
- Merchants' Guild at; 271 a.
- Trinity House, near; 271 b.
- Trinity Brethren and Sisters in; 274 a.
- St. Nicholas' Hospital, letters patent concerning; 273 b. honour of; 271 a.
- Pontington, Nicholas, v. Sir Philip Courtney; 169 b.
- Pontrell, Roger; 414 a.
- Pontysbury, Nich., of Shrewsbury, will of; 332 a.
- Pool, Poole :
 Sir Harry, his son (1608); 283 b.
 Capt. Hugh; 592 a.
 Sir James; 391 a.
 John, mayor of Chester (1664), letters to; 387 a, 387 b.
 Sir Wm., bond to; 283 b.
 mayor of, letters to; 245 a.
- Pooles, Capt. Hugh, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
- Pooley :
 Capt.; 385 b.
 Mr., payment to; 526 a.
- Poona; 288 b, 289 b, 290 a, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a, 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.
 resident at, letter of; 292 b.
 See Malet, C. W.
- Poore, Power, Colonel, agent to Lord Muskerry; 616 a.
- Pope :
 the (1708), letter to; 36 a.
 Leake's instructions about; 34 a. feeling in Rome towards; 19 b.
 the pretended Prince of Wales and; 32 b.
 doctor; 228 b.
 Alexander, letters of; 1 b, 54 a.
 — to the Duchess of Marlborough; x., 56 a, et seq.
 — critiques on; 460 a, 462 a.
 — Bolingbroke's reference to; 566 b.
 — his illness and death; 571 b.
 John and Philip; 625 b.
 Thomas, naïf; ib.
 W. and Joan, lease to; 630 a.
- Popery; 387 b.
 petition of both Houses to the King touching the growth of (1671); 164 b.
 Bill, the (1671); ib.
- Popes, lives and portraits of; 582 b.
- Popham :
 Chief Justice; 228 b.
 Dionysius de, of Norwich diocese; 634 b.
 E., letter of; 247 a.
- Poplar; 238 b, 250 a, 253 a.
- Rich., fishmonger, of London, will of; 335 a.
- Popoly, Duke de, letter to; 36 a.
- Pordom, Major, governor of Balleglahan; 601 b.
- Port Mahon; 20 a, 27 a, 33 a.
 surrender of; 35 a.
 taking of; 20 a.
- Port Nelson; 30 b.
- Portbury :
 v. Ledgingham; 128 a.
 Roger; 141 b.
- Porte lands, co. Kildare; 505 a.
- Portebrothok, laird of; 305 a.
- Porteous riots, the, account of; xviii., 310 b.

Porter :

- Capt.; 553 a.
- petition of; 245 b.
- Mr., of the Trinity House; 231 a, 258 a.
- Charles, solicitor to Duke of York; 279 b.
- commission to (1660); 279 b.
- Edward, soldier; 542 a.
- Endymion, letter of; 211 b.
- interrogation to; 217 b.
- George; 146 b.
- answer of; ib.
- Thomas, payment to; 212 b.
- Capt. Thomas, grant to; 244 a.
- Wm.; 367 b.
- of Peasehall, will of; 333 b.
- Portico, Robert; 65 a.
- Portington, Roger, commissioner; 275 b.
- Portland; 252 b.
- French fleet off; 211 a.
- lights at; 261 b.
- , his regiment in Ireland; 563 a.
- Earl of, Lord Treasurer (1631); 247 a.
- his houses in Pall Mall; 51 a.
- Thomas (1667), writ of summons; 111 b.
- (1689); 556 a.
- (1691); 556 b.
- letters of; 559 a.
- his apartment at Whitehall (1691); 563 a.
- and the vacant Garter; 565 a.
- letter of (1705); 44 a.
- letters of (1706); 32 a.
- (1707); 32 b.
- letter of (1708); 36 a.
- — (1709); 37 b.
- Lady (1714), letter of; 57 a.
- Margaret, of Alisham, will of; 333 b.
- Portlester skirmish; 604 a.
- Portman :
- Lord, his regiment (1708); 20 a.
- Mr.; 131 a.
- Portmanemote, at Leicester, charter reforming laws, &c. of; 409 a, 413 a, 414 a.
- Portmore, Lord (1710, &c.), letters of; 38 b, 40 a, 57 a.
- Portmadown Bridge; 574 a, 575 b.
- Portrush; 496 b.
- Ports, free, opening of; 247 b.
- Portsmouth; 33 b, 67 b, 80 b, 92 a, 131 a, 231 a.
- document dated at; 347 a.
- summons for military assembly at; 347 a.
- threatened by the French; 202 b.
- harbour; 17 b.
- Duchess of, letters of (1705); 31 b.
- letter of (1709); 37 b.
- Princess Anne and; 52 a.
- Earl of, MSS. of, Mr. Horwood's report on; xi, 60 b.
- Portswold manor, Southampton, Act for settling; 151 b.
- Portugal : 17 a, 39 b, 156 a, 394 b.
- importation of wines from; 206 a.
- treaty with (1706); 44 a.
- estimate of English forces for (1709); 37 b.
- trade with; 50 b.
- war in, account of; 60 a.
- King of, John, letter of; 25 a.
- letter of (1709); 36 b.
- — (1710); 38 a.
- Portuguese, losses inflicted on the East India Co. by; 553 b.
- Portunney, surrender of; 614 b.
- Pory :
- John, treasurer to the late Archbishop Juxon; 113 b.
- Katherine, petition of; 113 b.
- Robert, archdeacon of Middlesex; 117 a.
- petition of and order; 117 a.
- Post horses, regulations for keeping, at Leicester; 425 a, 425 b.
- Postwick; 334 a.
- Potherbach, near Chester; 358 a.
- Potin, William, witness; 235 a.
- Potkyn, William, registrar; 334 a, 336 a.
- Potle, Mr., plague doctor, at Leicester; 435 a.
- Pott, Robt. Perceval, resident at Moorsheadabad, correspondence of; 289 a-292 b, passim, 295 a.
- Potter :
- Mrs.; 51 a.
- Ensign Mathew; 593 a.
- Thomas; 105 a.
- Dr. Thomas, dean of Waterford; 539 b.
- Wm., secretary of Hudson's Bay Co., letter of; 38 b.
- Potton; 335 a, 335 b.
- Potts :
- J., order signed by; 10 a.
- James, of Dublin; 528 b.
- Potyn, Nicholas, obit of; 329 a.
- Pouce, Fr. John; 610 a.
- Poucet, document signed by; 553 a.
- Poularstown, co. Limerick; 532 b.
- Poulett, Earl of, letter of (1711); 39 b.
- Poulford, —; 377 a.

Poultney :

- Sir John, recommended as Burgess for Leicester; 434 a.
- recommended as recorder of Leicester; 434 b.
- Poulton, Lieut. Antony; 594 a.
- Pountney :
- Mr., a grazier; 157 a.
- Lieut. William; 504 b, 506 a.
- Pourtepol, prebend of; 633 a.
- Poussin, Gaspar and N., paintings by; 100 b.
- Poutow, letter dated at; 218 b.
- Povey :
- Thomas, treasurer and receiver-general to Jas. Duke of York; 279 b.
- warrants to; 279 b, 280 a, 281 a.
- licence farmer, petition of; 516 b.
- Walter, tailor, of London, will of; 335 a.
- Powdych, John, of Wisbeach, will of; 332 a.
- Powell :
- n. Bishop of Hereford; 170 b.
- Mr., harp player; 24 b.
- James; 278 a.
- Ensign John; 594 b.
- John, licence farmer, petition of; 516 b.
- Sir Richard, commission to; 280 a.
- Roderick, Queen's purveyor of beer; 431 a.
- Thomas, letter of; 377 a.
- Walter, petition of; 506 a.
- Power or Poore, Colonel, agent to Lord Muskerry; 616 a.
- Power :
- Andrew, of Mentmore, licence to; 2 a.
- Capt. Richard; 529 b.
- his company; 534 a.
- Thomas, vicar of Littleington, articles against; 5 a.
- carman, payment to; 526 a.
- Powerscourt, garrison at, in 1648; 592 b.
- Powis, Powys :
- Lord, Wm. (1667), writ of summons; 112 b.
- (1668); 166 a.
- Mrs., her flight with Queen Mary; 555 b.
- R., report by; 75 b.
- Mr. Serjeant; 45 b.
- Powtler, Thomas; 430 b.
- Pownall, Thomas, letter of; 207 b.
- Pownder :
- Henry; 376 b.
- William; ib.
- Richard; ib.
- Poynes, Sir Toby; 522 a.
- Poyning's Act; 602 b.
- letter relating to; 182 b.
- Poyntz :
- Mr., "Mr. Littleton's letter to"; 63 b.
- at Soissons; 62 a.
- General; 9 b.
- Prager, Lyon, letter of; 293 b.
- Prague; 23 a, 30 a.
- letter dated at; 214 a.
- Praison, Mr., conspirator; 434 a.
- Praslin :
- Due de (1763); 285 b, 286 a, 286 b.
- letters of; 286 a, 286 b.
- letter to; 285 b.
- Pratt :
- to be Attorney-General; 225 a.
- Captain; 429 b.
- Dr., letters of; 54 a.
- Mr., letters of; 49 a.
- Will., of Moncesley, will of; 333 b.
- Preistland, co. Louth, lands in; 532 a.
- Prendelgast, Philip de, indenture by; 61 a.
- Prendergast, Edmund, letter of; 37 b.
- Prendigest, Henry of, witness; 305 a.
- Presbyterians, the; 157 b.
- in Edinburgh (1708); 48 a.
- a spy among (1713); 14 a.
- in Ireland (1751); 177 b, 206 a, 207 b.
- Prescott :
- Mrs., MSS. of; xxi.
- Wm., letter of; 289 b.
- Presey, Thomas, of Bishopston, will of; 332.
- Prestley, Lieut. Symon; 591 a.
- Preston; 335 b.
- Wilts; 639 a.
- battle of; 40 b.
- the Cobler of, a farce; 50 b.
- near Faversham, manor of; 330 a.
- church of; ib.
- Lord, letters of (1684); 30 b.
- (1691); 562 b.
- imprisoned (1691); 565 a.
- released; 565 b.
- Brigadier; 17 b.
- Col., letter of; 36 a.
- Sir George; 535 b.
- Sir James; 613 a.
- Sir Richard, at Leicester; 428 b.
- Roger de, of Hickling; 423 a.

Preston—cont.

- General Thomas, in Ireland; 578 a, 579 a, 603 b-612 a, passim.
 — letter of; 616 a.
 — made Viscount Taragh; 614 b.
 William, of Drayton, his bond; 11 a.
- Prestonpaus; 313 b.
- Prestwich, Sir Thomas; 159 a.
- Pretender, the; 396 a.
 the Old; 36 b.
- Preton', Ellweker, witness; 330 b.
- Pretty :
 Matthew; 154 b, 156 b.
 — attestation, &c. of; 156 b, 158 a.
- Prettyman :
 Sir John; 142 a, 142 b, 164 b.
 Dame Theodosia, wife of preceding, petition of; x., 164 b.
- Pretymn, Sir John, letter of; 440 a.
- Pretz, abbeß of, letter of; 40 a.
- Price :
 a soldier; 390 a.
 Mr., receiver-general in Ireland; 498 b.
 Elizabeth; 401 b.
 Mrs. Elizabeth; 155 a, 156 a, 156 b, 157 a, 157 b.
 — depositions of; 157 a, 158 a.
 Capt. Garret; 385 b.
 H. P., letter of; 16 b.
 John, letter of; 386 a.
 Joseph, letters of; 292 b, 295 a, 295 b.
 Rich., letter of; 386 b.
 Thomas, note of action brought by; 141 b.
 — Bishop of Kildare; 536 a.
 William, soldier; 534 b.
- Prices, illustrations of; 134 a, 146 a, 277 b, 343 b, 353 b, 377 b, 534 b, et seq.
- Pricket, Abacuck, deposition of; 236 b.
- Pride, Mrs., and her children, resolution on Bill touching; 107 a.
- Prideaux :
 — John, commissioner; 630 a.
 R. W., Esq., MSS. of; xxi.
- Pridwell, Adam de; 638 b.
- Prié, Marquis de; 20 a.
 letters of; 31 b, 32 a, 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
- Priests; 390 b.
- Prigol, Madame de, letter of; 40 a.
- Primatt :
 Anne; 121 a.
 — petition of; 120 b.
 Josiah; 121 a.
 — petition of; 120 b.
- Primogeniture, charters affecting; 407 a.
- Primrose :
 Dr., treatise against; 230 a.
 Major-General; 17 b.
- Prince Royal, the :
 letter of (1709); 36 b.
 letter of (1710); 38 a.
- Prince, George, of Dunchurch; 484 a.
- Princhart —, a bailiff; 146 b.
- Pringle, Pringell :
 Mr., letters to; 244 b, 246 a.
 Capt. James, letters of; 292 b, 293 b.
 Robert, letters of; 59 a.
- Prior :
 Father; 614 a.
 Matthew, letters of; 31 b, 36 a, 37 b.
 — invective against; 15 a.
- Prisoners :
 for debt, Act for relief of (1667); 115 b.
 — Lords of Committee for relief of, petition to; 153 a.
 of war (1708), letter of, to Duke of Marlborough; 36 a. transportation of, Act touching; 142 a.
 taken by the Turks, Moors, &c., certificates concerning.
See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
- Prisons for debt, state of (1670); 152 a, 152 b, 153 a.
- Pritchard, Prichard :
 Samuel; 102 b, 103 a.
 Thos.; 102 b, 103 a.
- Prittlewell; 332 b.
- Pritty, Col. Henry, petition of; 501 b, 536 a.
- Pritzelwitz, M. de, letter of; 36 a.
- Privateers; 394 b.
- Privileges, committee of (House of Lords), proceedings, &c. of; 101 a, 118 a, 122 b, 136 a, 136 b, 147 a, 167 b.
- Price :
 Office, the; 44 a.
 money, &c., ancient custom for distribution of; 243 a.
 ships; 129 a.
- Proby, Mr. :
 letter of; 376 b.
 Peter; 374 b.
- Probyn, Peter, attestation by; 411 b.
- Proclamations about coinage, &c.; 61 a.
- Proctor :
 Henry, letter of; 375 b.
 J. of Newcastle; 250 a.
 Lieut. Thomas; 546 a.

Profaneness and swearing. See Atheism, profaneness, &c.

"Projet, L'Auteur du," letter of; 36 a.

Property, lay, assessment of a fifteenth; 346 b.

Prophecy of events in 1661 and 1688; 209 a.

Prosser, John; 106 b.

letter of; 106 b.

affidavit of; 136 a.

Protestants :

in the Cevennes; 16 b.

in Ireland, distressed (1641); 573 a.

German, letters about; 1 a.

Proverb; 152 b.

Provision books (1617-1673); 277 b.

Prowd, John, of the Trinity House; 256 a.

Prowde, Thomas, of Bristol, will of; 332 a.

Prujeau, Sir Francis, of the College of Physicians; 234 b.

Prussia, King of :

his title of Mecklenburg; 34 a.

(1705); 52 a.

letters of; 31 a.

— (1707); 32 b.

(1708); 20 a, 33 a.

the Prince of Orange and; 34 a.

letter of (1709); 36 b.

— (1710); 38 a.

letters of (1715); 40 b.

at Aix (1742); 571 b.

Machiavelli and (1742); 56 b.

his proceedings in Saxony (1756); 220 b.

his policy towards the Catholics (1778); 198 a, 198 b.

(1791); 295 a.

Prussia, Prince Henry of, letter of; 57 b.

Prynne, William :

petition of; 210 a.

papers relating to; ib.

of the Trinity House; xiv., 235 b, 250 a.

his death; 236 a, 254 a.

proceedings against; 584 b.

Psalter belonging to the De la Pole family; 625 a.

Pseudo-Abdias, works of; 572 a.

Pudsey, Pudesedaia :

co. York; 637 a, passim.

Col., letter of; 40 a.

Ambrose, commissioner; 275 a.

Lieut. Tho.; 592 a.

Puffendorff's works; 61 b.

Pugh, John, of Chester; 361 b.

Pughe, H., letter of; 37 b.

Pulbrigg, the; 358 a.

Puleston :

Sir R., MSS. of; xxi.

Richard, mayor of Chester (1705), recommendation signed by; 393 b.

Pulford, Herbert de; 356 a, 356 b.

Pultency :

Brigadier, letters of; 36 a, 38 b.

Mr., letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 38 a, 39 b.

Mrs., letter of; 57 a.

Wm., his proposition for an allowance to the Prince of Wales; 566 a.

Pulton, Mr., letters of; 32 b.

Pundit, Hurry; 293 a.

Punsonby, Colonel; 596 a.

Punt, Behroo; 292 b.

Purport, document signed by; 553 a.

Purbeck :

island of; 208 b, 209 a.

assessment of estates in; 210 b.

deputy lieutenants in; ib.

militia in; 211 a.

Purcell :

his dragoons in Ireland; 494 b.

Major-General; 608 a, 610 b, 615 b.

Mr. of Dublin; 471 a.

Henry, musician; 12 b.

John, of Rosecommon; 466 b.

William, of the Graige, Queens Co.; 545 b.

Purchas's Pilgrims, books of; 257 a.

Purches, Will., mercer and alderman of London, will of; 335 a.

Purcell, Mr., of Cashell; 15 b.

Purdon, Sir Nicholas, his company or troop; 530 a, 547 a.

Purdy, Robert, quartermaster; 596 a.

Purefoy :

sergeant-major, weekly pay of his troop; 597 a.

Major; 591 a.

Lieut. Arthur; 596 a.

Gamaliel, on Coventry committee; 7 b.

Humfrey, letter of; 432 b.

Lieut. Pet.; 591 a.

William, directions by; 247 b.

Purefoy, Wm.; 382 b.

Purife, Humfrey, recorder of Leicester; 432 a.

Purnock, his claim; 258 a.

Purpyn, Sir George; 416 b.

commission to; 417 a.

Purves, Dr.; 230 a.

Pusey, Sidney, E. E. Bouverie, Esq., MSS. of; xxi.

Pasignan or Pasiniant, M. de, in Ireland; 493 b.
 Putchen, Mr., of Leicester; 429 a.
 Putte, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Puttocke, Roger, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
 Puy:

Monsr. de; 278 a.

Mrs. de; ib.

Pychar, William, of Cambridge, will of; 335 b.

Pycondale; 371 a.

Pye:

Richard, letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 292 b.

Sir Robert; 170 b.

William, letters of; 289 b, 290 a.

Pykes, John, of Runighton, Holme (Runham or Runtun?), will of; 333 b.

Pykman, John, clerk, of Bath and Wells diocese, will of; 334 b.

Pyly, Margaret, of Lynn, will of; 334 b.

Pym, Lieut. John, petition of; 515 a.

Pympe, John, son of Reginald; 329 a.

Pynchpole, John, of London, will of; 335 b.

Pyndar, Sir Peter, letters to; 391 b.

Pyne:

Henry, letters of; 290 a, 290 b.

Jobu, petition of; 544 a.

Nicholas; 397 b.

Pyukney, Thomas, his case; 170 b.

Pykaar, Nicholas, surveys by; 572 a, 581 a.

Pyntes, Rich. of East Dereham, will of; 333 b.

Pyreston; ib.

Pyx, the:

assays of; 61 a.

trial of; 69 b, et seq.

Q.

Quacks, punishment of; 226 b, et seq.

Quaker, a:

his petition to the Duke of Ormonde; 502 a.

T. Butler, petition of; 523 a.

Quakers:

the; 219 b, 388 b, 389 b, 390 a.

opinion, Act against; 388 b.

meetings; 389 b.

Quarry:

Mr., his death; 24 a.

William, trooper, petition of; 510 b.

Quebec, Bishop of:

(1708); 46 b.

Jean, letter of; 46 b.

Queenborough, co. Leicester, Prince Rupert at; 437 a.

Queensberry, Duke of:

his removal; 16 b.

letters of (1706); 32 a.

— (1707); 32 b.

letter of (1709); 37 b.

— (1710); 38 a.

Queensberry, Duchess of, entertainments by (1748); 569 a.

Queen's County:

losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.

plantation in; 581 b, 582 a.

Queen's Hithe or Queenhithe:

the; 89 a.

St. Michael's; 323 a.

Quelch, John, churchwarden of St. John's, Dublin, petition signed by; 528 b.

Quellene, M., letter of; 38 b.

Quelly:

Abp. of Tuam; 604 b.

executed; ib.

Quency:

Matilda de, indenture by; 61 a.

Roger de, Earl of Winton, witness; 407 a.

Queenington; 334 b.

Queyningburgh, Thomas, de Wymandeswold; 423 a.

Queros, Don, letters of; 32 a.

Quicrouaille, Louis de, Duchess of Portsmouth, Charles II.'s grant to; 632 a.

Querton, Edward, payments to; 628 a.

Quessney, M. de, letter of; 37 b.

Quilter, Samuel, letter of; 127 a.

Quinci, Severus de, witness; 421 b.

Quine, Quynn, Henry; 382 b.

Quinton, co. Gloucester:

deeds concerning; 263 a.

vicar of, letter of; 263 a.

Quiros, M. de, letter of; 35 b.

Qynton, Walter, priest, of Ipswich, will of; 335 a.

Qwarebill or Estthuthmore, co. Stirling; 307 a.

R.

Raah, Bishop of, letters of (1705); 31 b.

Rabone, Richard; 374 a.

Raby, Lord:

letters of (1705); 31 b.

—; 32 a.

— (1707); 32 b.

(1708); 33 b.

letter of (1709); 36 b.

— (1710); 38 a.

(1711); 39 a.

letter of; 39 b.

Rachra; 613 a.

Raculore, manor of; 319 b.

Racy, Adam and Elizabeth, of Leicester; 422 a.

Radcliff:

Mrs., prisoner; 50 a.

Arthur, brewer, of London, will of; 332 a.

Edwd.; 140 b.

Sir George; 582 a.

Henry; 376 b.

Richard; ib.

William; ib.

Radewelde, John atte Broke de; 342 a.

Radford; 434 a.

Rading:

Lord Walter de, conveyance to; 410 b.

Walter; 439 a.

Radington, Sir Baldwyn of; 370 b.

Radnor, Lord, executor of Sir J. Cutler (1701); 231 b.

Radway, Thomas, of Cirencester, will of; 334 b.

Raffles, T. Stamford, Esq., MSS. of; xxii.

Rafman, John, steward of Sir J. Fastolf; 268 a.

Ragotski, Ragotzi, Prince:

letters of (1706); 31 b.

(1708); 26 b.

letter of; 37 b.

papers relating to (1710); 38 b.

Rahin lands, co. Kildare; 505 a.

Rahorrow parish, co. Roscommon, lands in; 518 a.

Rainborowe, Capt., before Woodstock; 10 b.

Raine, Lady de la (1738); 13 b.

Rainsborowe, C.; 553 a.

Rainsford:

Baron (1667); 112 a.

Henry; 278 b.

Rait:

William, of Halgrein, licence to; 302 b.

— Laird of Halgrein, letters of; 299 a, 303 a.

Raleigh, Sir Walter:

discourse by; 25 b.

in the Tower; 88 b.

his wine licence; 434 b.

letters of; 582 a, 585 a.

his Ghost; 585 a.

papers by; ib.

Raleigh, Will., Bishop of Winchester; 263 b.

Rallibarnagh, concealed lands of; 531 a.

Ralph:

the ship; 245 a.

James, his history of Charles II.; 569 b.

Ram Head; 252 b.

Ramas, Henry, letter of; 294 a.

Ramilles, battle of; 60 a.

Rampton; 335 a.

Ramridge, Ramrugge, co. Hants:

manor; 625 a, 628 a, 630 a.

rent roll of; 626 a.

court rolls of; 626 a, 631 a.

Ramsault, Monsr. de, letter of; 285 b.

Ramsay:

Sir Alexander, of Dalnuly; 306 b.

Allan, the poet; 310 b.

— letters of; xviii., 311 a, 312 b, 313 a.

— his son Allan, the portrait painter; 311 a, 312 b.

Governor Andrew, letters of; 290 b, 291 a.

David, petition of; 244 b.

James, of Clatty; 306 b.

Jonet, spouse of David Lindsay; 307 b.

— letters of resignation by; ib.

Sir Ness, of, grant to; 304 a, 304 b.

— his son John, grant to; 305 a.

Walter the, of Crannock; 307 a, 307 b.

Ramsbury; 335 a.

Ramsden:

Bonghey v., writ of error; 151 a.

John, of Pontefract; 274 a, 274 b.

William, of Pontefract; 275 b.

- Ramsay :
 co. Huntingdon, manor, Act for settling boundary of; 153 b.
 East, New Hall in; 262 b.
- Randal, George, letter to; 213 b.
- Randolph, Thomas, poems by; 584 a.
- Ranelagh, Viscount :
 Arthur, certificate by (1663); 505 b.
 — petition of (1663); 523 a.
 Roger, late, President of Connaught; 544 a, 548 a.
 the Prince of Orange and; 556 a.
 (1675); 582 a.
- Ranfurlie, co. Renfrew; 308 b.
- Rangrave :
 the, letter of (1708); 36 a.
 M., letter of; 40 b.
- Ranledge, Nicholas, mariner; 241 a.
- Rannoch, country of; 314 b.
- Ransoms demanded by Turkish pirates, &c. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
- Ranstone, Ranstorne, Lieut.-Col., letters of; 295 a.
- Rantzau :
 Major-General, letter of; 36 a.
 M. de, letter of; 37 b.
- Ranyard, A. C., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
- Raper, John, canon of Bilsington; 337 a.
- Raphoe, Bishop of, R. Lesly (1663); 514 a.
- Raplock, the Hamilton family of; 308 b.
- Rastall, Robert, trooper; 523 b.
- Ratclif, Ratcliffe, Ratelyffe :
 Mr., mayor of Chester; 381 b.
 — letter to; 399 b.
 — orders of; 400 a.
 Sir George; 143 a.
- Dr. John, a Fellow of the College of Physicians; 226 b, 232 a.
 — fined by the College of Physicians; 231 a.
 — reference by Queen Anne to; 53 a.
- John, mayor of Chester (1612); 361 a.
 — petitions to; 399 a, 399 b.
 — recorder of Chester (1607), petition to; 381 b.
 — letters of; 384 b, 385 a, 389 a.
 — M.P.; 388 a.
 — letters of; 388 a, 388 b, 389 a.
 — letters to; 388 a, 388 b.
 — the younger; 381 b.
- Robert, postmaster for Dublin; 397 a.
 William; 377 a. mariners, &c. of; 233 b, 239 a, 239 b, 241 b, 242 a, 242 b, 243 a, 249 b, 250 a, 253 a.
- Ratcliff-upon-Sore, co. Nottingham; 416 b.
 Highway; 233 b.
- Ratheonrath, barony of; 537 a.
- Ratheredan, co. Dublin; 499 a.
- Rathduffe, co. Westmeath; 550 b.
- Rathe, in territory of Katterlyn; 300 b.
- Rathlugg, concealed lands of; 531 a.
- Rathmines : fight at; 500 b.
 siege of; 547 b.
- Rathmore; 506 b, 507 a.
- Rathuealga, concealed lands of; 531 a.
- Rathsquilbine, co. Kildare; 508 a.
- Ratisbon, diet of; 30 b.
- Ratooth, co. Dublin, garrison at, in 1648; 595 a.
- Rattray :
 Col. James, MSS. of; xxii.
 Capt. John, letter of; 294 b.
 Capt. Wm., letter of; 291 a.
- Raven :
 Capt.; 255 b.
 John, of Shittington, will of; 333 a.
- Ravenna, archbishop of; 338 b.
- Raynescroft :
 Dorothea, petition of; 117 a.
 George, letter of; 383 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 117 a.
 — letter of; 375 b.
- Ravenspur, watchlight at; 238 b, 239 a.
- Ravenswarth, Fitz-Hughs of; 263 a.
- Ravenyug, John, of London, will of; 333 a.
- Rawden, co. York; 383 a.
- Rawdon :
 Lord, letters of; xiii., 287 b, 288 b, 289 a.
 Sir John, Lord Moira; 481 a.
 Major George, his troop; 531 b.
 George, petition of; 547 b.
- Rawledge, Nicholas; 241 b.
- Rawlet, Robert, mayor of Leicester; 422 b.
- Rawlings, John, letter of; 293 b.
- Rawlins, Giles; 278 a.
- Rawlyn, Katherine, of Lynn, will of; 333 b.
- Rawlins, Robert, will of; 335 a.
- Raworth, Robert; 210 a.
- Rawson, Capt. Gilbert, weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
- Ray, Thomas, petition of; 523 b.
- Raye, John, bailiff of Romsey; 234 a.
- Raymon, Mr., opinion by; 255 b.
- Raymond :
 Robert, report of; 25 b.
 Ro., report by; 50 b.
- Rayne, Capt. Robert, letter of; 293 a.
- Raynescroft, one, deer stealer; 433 b.
- Raynford :
 Sir Hugh; 386 b.
 Richard, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 — treasurer of Chester, account of; 367 b.
- Raynold, Richard, of Polton, will of; 385 b.
- Raynolde, Thomas, of Merton College; 227 a.
- Raynolds, John, of East Bergholt, will of; 333 b.
- Rea :
 James, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Richard; 11 a.
- Reachill, lands; 505 a.
- Read, Reade :
 Cornet Abrah.; 597 a.
 Dame Allinson; x., 136 b.
 — petition of; ib.
 Capt. Alexander, letters of; 292 b-295 b, passim.
 James; 278 a.
 — petition of; 551 a.
 Sir John, Bart.; x., 136 b.
 — answers of; ib.
 Lieut. John, letters of; 290 b, 294 a.
 Lieutenants; 392 b.
 — letter of; 295 a.
 Sergeant-major; 592 b, 598 b.
 Morgan, consul at Leghorn; 244 a.
 — letter of; 244 b.
 Richard, warrant touching; 280 a.
 William; 65 a.
- Reade and Jenkins, action by; 228 b.
- Reading; 284 a, 285 a, 287 a, 287 b, 335 b, 630 a.
 charter dated at; 2 a.
- Ready, Mr., of the British Museum; 269 a.
- Really, Chaplain James; 595 b.
- Reasons upon protests, Committee for Privileges to consider manner of entering; 137 a.
- Reban; 609 a, 610 b.
- Rebeck, fort of; 246 b.
- Rebellion of 1745 :
 papers relating to; xviii., 313 b.
 O'Connor's reference to; 445 a.
 letter about; 571 a.
- Rebendow, Comte de, letters of; 38 b.
- Reby, Roger and Margaret; 413 b.
- Reche, John; 626 a.
- Rechteren, Comte de, letters of; 36 a, 37 a.
- Record Office, Public, transcripts of Digby MSS deposited in; 213 a.
- Reculver, Kent; 248 a. church; 235 b, 342 b, 353 a. charter of; 328 b.
 steeple of; 251 b.
- Recusants; 376 a, 380 b, 390 b. papers concerning; 27 b.
 resolutions for disarming; 102 b.
- Redburn; 1 b.
- Redburnstoak, hundred of; 9 b.
- "Reddblank one Salmey Slide"; 377 b.
- Redde Share, co. Limerick; 601 b.
- Reddy, Dr.; 465 a, 465 b, 484 b.
- Rede :
 Sir Edmund, steward of Merish manor; 626 b.
 Robert, Bishop of Chichester; 339 b.
- Redenhall and Alburgh; 334 a.
- Redhead, Antony, of the Norwich Mint; 80 a.
 — a prisoner; 80 a.
- Redhode, John, of Chipping Wycombe, will of; 332 b.
- Reding, Kent; 319 a.
- Redman :
 Col. Daniel, his troop, &c.; 529 b, 542 b, 547 a, 550 b.
 W., document signed by; 227 b.
- Redmylde, Jane, daughter of the Duchess of Norfolk, will of; 333 a.
- Redriffe, Redrith; 238 b, 247 b, 250 a, 253 a. parson of; 242 a.
- Redshanks in Ulster; 603 b, 604 b, 606 a.
 — killed; 606 b.
- Ree of Homptone, John atte; 262 b.
- Reed, Reede :
 John, merchant of the staple, of Wrangle, will of; 335 a.
 Frederic baron, States' deputy; 12 a.
 M. de, letter of; 37 b.
 Baron de, letter of; 40 b.
- Reek, M., letter of; ib.
- Reeks, Robert; 146 b.
- Reeve :
 Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 John, letters of; 552 b.
 Wm., of Bulmer, will of; 335 b.
- Refham, Richer de; 635 b.
- Regan, Morice, his narrative; 589 a.
- Regency, the (1751); 284 a, 284 b.

- Regnier, M., letter of; 38 b.
 Regnold, John, canon of Wells; 639 a.
 Rehinder, Baron de, letters of (1706); 32 a, 36 a.
 Reid, Rev. J. S., his history of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland; 576 a.
 Reidesel, Baron, letter of; 289 a.
 Reigate manor, Surrey; 280 a, 280 b.
 Reignoldstown, co. Louth, lands of; 532 a.
 Reilly:
 Colonel, in Ireland; 602 b.
 Capt. Christopher; 611 a.
 Edmund, vicar-general of Dublin; 609 b, 618 a.
 Mich., publisher of Dublin; 444 b, 450 b, 456 b, 457 a, 458 b, 459 a, 462 b, 463 a, et seq.
 Meilds; 610 b.
 Reimond, magister, witness; 270 b.
 Reinaud, M., letters of; 36 a, 40 a.
 Reineuilla, Aldreda de, witness; 270 a.
 Reius, Lieut.-Col.; 594 b.
 Religion, diversities in, dialogue on; 93 a.
 Relleshe, Thomas, trooper; 546 b.
 Remingen, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Remy, Mons.; 293 b.
 Renda, Thomas, his proposal; 78 a.
 Rendham; 333 b.
 Renes, Great, court held at; 635 b.
 Renesse, of Utrecht; 553 a.
 Rennell, J.; 295 a.
 Rennes, convent of St. Melanie at; 632 b.
 Rensbell, William; 243 a.
 Rentals of lands in Kildare co.; 508 a.
 Rents, fee farm, Act for advancing sale of; 142 a.
 Renuilla, Thoma de, witness; 270 a.
 Renneinci, Princee and Abp. of Fermo; 604 b.
 Reredos, agreement of erection of a; 262 a.
 Resesby: manor, co. Derby; 161 b.
 v. Farnsworth; ib.
 co. Leicester; 420 b.
 Bridget; 161 b.
 Sir George; 162 a.
 Sir John, petition of; 161 b.
 — deceased, father of above; 162 a.
 — commissioner; 275 a.
 Mary; 162 a.
 Sir Thomas; 161 b.
 Rermyincham, Heury, sheriff of Chester; 368 a.
 Resolution, the ship; 248 a.
 Ressons, M. de, letter of; 37 a.
 Restenoth, prior of Berengarius; 300 b.
 Restwold, Richard, pardon to; 625 a.
 Retforth, John, of Wedmore, will of; 335 a.
 Revenue, the, papers concerning; 98 a.
 Reverby, chaplain of; 408 a.
 Revett, Mrs. J., letter of; 37 b.
 Rews, John, of Sherston; 639 a.
 Reyff, Roger, of Melford, will of; 332 b.
 Reynald, Griffith; 370 b.
 Reynes, manor of; 635 b.
 Reynold; 5 a.
 John; 414 a.
 — conveyance to; 422 a.
 — release by; ib.
 Richard, town clerk of Leicester; 411 a.
 William, of Mountsorrel; 414 a.
 Reynolds; 613 b. vicarage of; 5 b.
 Mr.; 465 a, 471 a.
 Bryan; 551 b.
 C., letter of; 295 a.
 Gen.; 616 b, 617 a.
 Henry; 381 a.
 Ja., memorandum by; 261 a.
 James, petition of; 504 a.
 John, of Belgrave, conveyance to; 423 a.
 Sir Joshua, consulted by the College of Physicians; 226 b, 233 a.
 — Goldsmith and; 489 b, note.
 Richard, mayor of Leicester; 420 b.
 Sir Robert; 539 b.
 S., letters of; 28 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 511 a.
 William, of Sherborne, will of; 332 a.
 Reyt, vice-admiral, his alleged treachery in the West Indies; 563 b.
 Reze, Owen, letter of; 377 a.
 Rhé, isle of; 243 a, 581 a.
 Ria, Henry de; 318 b.
 Ribeira, Comte, letter of; 37 b.
 Riccard, Sir Andrew:
 107 b, 165 b, 166 b, 167 a, 173 b, 174 a.
 answer of; 107 b. orders touching; 167 b.
 Rice:
 Griffith, letter of; 46 a. councillor; 487 b.
 Rich:
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Henry, Burgess for Leicester; 455 a.
 Samael, petition of; 151 b.
 William, an empiric; 227 a.
 Richard I., charters, &c. of; 319 a.
 Richard II.; 359 a. writs of; 87 a, 88 a.
 his death at Pontefract; 269 a. charters, &c. of; 319 b, 355 a, 358 b.
 writs, &c. of; 412 b, 413 a.
 Richard III.:
 Mint indenture by; 70 b.
 grant by; 265 b.
 letters patent of; 271 a.
 Richard:
 David ap, and Grace, his wife; 377 b.
 M., postmaster at Paris; 30 a.
 Robert, of Halden, will of; 332 b.
 Richardott, President; 95 a, 95 b.
 Richard's Castle and Chirk, Barons Mortimer of, pedigrees; 366 a.
 Richards:
 Col., letter of; 36 a.
 M., letter of; 90 a.
 Richardson:
 —, defendant; 210 a.
 Alexander; 584 a.
 Captain; 591 a.
 Capt. Edward, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Richard; 380 a.
 — mayor of Chester (1757), indenture of; 401 b.
 Robert; 151 a.
 Samuel, letter signed by; 386 b.
 Thomas; 361 a.
 — petition of; 547 a.
 Richell, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Richenda, Warnebold and Robert, son of; 300 b.
 Richman, W., church of Cranbrook given to; 337 b.
 Richmond:
 Surrey; 482 b.
 — documents dated from; 207 b, 378 a.
 co. York, archdeaconry of; 284 a. and Middleham, liberty, co. York; 284 a.
 Duke of, MSS. of; xxii.
 — letter of (1714); 57 a.
 — his travels with Mr. Hill (1727-8); 62 a.
 — a fellow of the College of Physicians (1728); 232 a.
 — operation on (1732); 62 b.
 — his reply to Lord Chatham (1778); 196 a.
 — letter of (1791); 294 b.
 — report to (1794); 296 a.
 — his daughter's marriage to Fox; 571 b.
 Duchess of (1729); 63 b. and Lennox, Duke of, Charles, statement on behalf of (1669); 116 b.
 — petition to (1670); 142 a.
 — petition of (1670); 146 b.
 and Somerset, Duke of, Henry; 360 b.
 Richmond Manor, document dated at; 370 a.
 Ride or Ryde, Henry; 108 b, 109 a.
 Ridel:
 Geoffrey, Archdeacon of Canterbury, excommunicated; 317 a.
 Stephen; 356 b.
 William, witness; 405 a.
 Rider:
 Mr., of Petersfield; 46 b.
 Jacob, letters of; 291 a, 294 a.
 John, letter of; 295 a.
 Thomas le, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Sir William, of the Trinity House; 249 b, 250 a, 250 b, 253 b.
 Miss; 569 b.
 Nancy; 569 a, note.
 Ridge:
 Counsellor John; 489 b.
 Robert; 139 b.
 Ridgeley, —, physician; 229 a.
 Ridgway, M., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 Ridon, John, of Battersea (Batrichesey), will of; 332 a.
 Riedezell, Baron de; 563 b.
 Rievaulx, convent of; 636 a.
 Riffier, M. de, letter of; 40 a.
 Rigby:
 —; 191 a, 191 b, 192 b, 193 a, 194 b, 221 b.
 —, readings on Statutes by; 584 b.
 Rigewell, Henry, of Dullington, will of; 334 b.
 Riley:
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 alias Fountayne, Elizabeth, delinquent; 6 a.
 Rillston, Edward, fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford; 380 b.
 Rind:
 Lieut. J. N., letters of; 290 b, 292 b.
 Lieut. J. W., letter of; 289 b.
 Ring, the, privilege of; 317 b, 318 b.
 Ringe, Major; 438 a.

- Ringmere :
 Thos. de, prior of Canterbury ; 319 a, 321 b, 325 b.
 — dispensation for ; 344 b.
 — Abp. Peckham's monition to ; 345 a.
- Rings, memorial ; 371 b.
- Riancucci, the Nuncio ; 464 b, 501 a, 578 a.
- Ripari, Margareta de ; 637 a.
- Ripon :
 Thomas ; 561 a.
 treaty of ; 383 b.
 Marquis of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Risborow, Wm. ; 279 b.
- Risburgh Monachorum ; 320 b, 324 a.
- Risely, assessment at ; 10 a.
- Rislett, Kent ; 248 a.
- Rismore ; 208 b.
- Ritchie, Rytche, Rytch, Capt. Barnabie ; 377 b.
- Rithe, Rich., of Rotherwick, petition against ; 263 b.
- Ritso, G., letter of ; 290 a.
- Riuella, Don, letter of ; 38 b.
- Rivaion, M., letter of ; 38 b.
- Rivers, Earl of :
 John (1646) ; 365 b.
 Thomas, privilege case (1670) ; 139 b. in Spain, &c. (1706) ; 16 a.
 letters of ; 16 a, 32 a.
 letters to (1706) ; 25 a.
 letter of (1709) ; 37 b.
 letter to ; 46 b.
 (1709), letter of ; 37 b.
 letter to (1709) ; 46 b.
- Riverstown, co. Meath ; 514 b.
- Rives, M. de, letter of ; 40 a.
- Robart, Anthony, music-master, order touching ; 280 a.
- Robemont, letter dated at ; 28 a.
- Roberdes, John, mayor of Leicester ; 420 a, 422 b.
- Robert, Lord, his company (1663) ; 545 a.
- Robert II. of Scotland, grant by ; 307 a.
- Robert III. of Scotland, charter by ; 305 b.
- Roberts :
 Lord, William (temp. Commonwealth) ; 94 b.
 — John, Lord Privy Seal (1666) ; 104 b.
 — — commission to ; 104 a.
 — — (1667) ; 111 b.
- r. Wynn ; 104 b.
 —, counterfeiter of coin ; 393 a.
- Mr., his history of the College of Physicians ; 233 b.
 — sum voted to ; ib.
 —, auditor ; 624 a.
- Charles Bodvell ; 104 b.
- Edward, auditor ; 509 b.
- Lieut. Edw. ; 592 a.
- Hugh, deposition by ; 209 b.
- Mary, petition of ; 529 a.
- Major R., letter of ; 294 b.
- Major R. C., letter of ; 295 b.
- Rice, usher to James I. ; 441 b.
- Robert and Sarah, case of ; 104 b.
- Sir Walter, his daughter Jane ; 569 a, notc.
- William, of Hitchin, will of ; 335 b.
 — Ulster king-at-arms, petition of his son Robert ; 501 b.
 — petition of his son Patrick ; 510 a.
 — his History of the House of Ormonde ; 581 a, 586 a.
- Robertson :
 Mr. ; 84 a.
 one, of Stralock ; 45 b. a criminal, and the Porteous riots ; 310 b, 311 a, 311 b.
 Dr., the historian ; 471 b.
 General, letter of ; 288 b.
 Lieut., R.N. ; 289 a.
 James, letters of ; 288 b, 291 a.
 Lieut. John, letter of ; 291 a.
- Robery :
 John ; 148 b.
 — answer of ; 148 b.
- Robethon, M., letters of ; 32 a, 32 b, 37 b, 38 b, 39 b, 40 a.
- Robinson :
 Mr., letters of ; 32 a, 35 b, 37 a.
 Christopher, judge in Ireland ; 483 b, 484 a.
 Cornet Francis ; 551 b.
 George, case of ; 151 a.
 Secretary G., letters of ; 288 b, 295 a.
 Henry, his proposal ; 77 a, 77 b.
 Dr. John, envoy to Poland ; 47 a.
 Sir John, Lieut. of the Tower ; 64 a, 64 b, 89 a, 90 a, 129 a,
 252 b, 254 a.
 — his connection with the Mint ; 64 a, 64 b.
 John ; 278 b.
 — of Chester, bond of ; 360 b.
 — surgeon ; 596 b.
 Lieut., letter of ; 289 b.
 M., letter of ; 40 b.
 Sir Metcalfe, commissioner ; 275 a.
 Lieut.-Genl. Robert, letter of ; 295 a.
 Sir Thomas, Secretary of State ; 222 a, 225 a.
 — speech of ; 225 b.
 — his dispute with Pitt ; ib.
- Robinson, Sir Thomas—cont.
 — Fox's compliment to ; 226 a.
 — speech of ; 222 b.
- Robson :
 Charles ; 116 a.
 James, affidavit of ; 116 a.
- Robucke, lands in ; 506 a.
- Robury, Richard, petitions of ; 502 a, 530 b.
- Robyns, John, will of ; 332 b.
- Roeh :
 Captain Adjutant, petition of ; 501 b, 539 b.
 Capt. James ; 547 a.
 Patrick, petition of ; 516 a.
 Ensign Peter ; 592 b.
- Rochdale, rectory ; 147 a.
- Roche :
 M. de la, letter of ; 36 a.
 Mrs., letter of ; 37 a.
 David ; 614 a, 614 b.
 Thomas, governor of Duncaon ; 605 a.
- Rochebrune, M. de, letters of ; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
- Rochebude, Marquis de, letters of ; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
- Rochele, Amice de, conveyance to ; 411 a.
- Rochelle ; 375 b.
- Rochester ; 238 b, 241 b, 251 b, 256 a, 348 b.
 letter dated at ; 248 a.
 bailiffs of, writ to ; 346 b. custom house at ; 244 a.
 prior and convent of ; 235 a.
 St. Andrew's Church ; ib.
- Rochester, Earl of :
 John (1667), writ of summons ; 111 b.
 Lawrence Hyde, report to (1684) ; 64 a.
 — his advice to Queen Mary ; 13 a.
 — letters of ; 31 a, 54 a.
 — his desire to re-enter into affairs (1691) 562 b.
 — at Portsmouth ; 54 a.
 — letter of ; 37 a.
 Dean of (1811) ; 352 a.
 Bishop of (temp. Hen. III.), witness ; 235 a.
 — Walter ; 316 b.
 — Waleran ; ib.
 — excommunicated by Alexander III. ; 317 a.
 — (11th century) ; 316 b.
 — (c. 1162), forged brief addressed to ; 265 b.
 — (1363), Wittlesey ; 264 b.
 — (14th century), Hamo de Hethe ; 323 b.
 — (1349) ; 337 b.
 — (1374), petition to ; 339 a.
 — (1665), testimonial by ; 439 b.
 — (1666), John, writ of summons to ; 104 a.
 — (1667) ; 112 b.
 — (1668) ; 173 a.
 — (1670) ; 174 b.
 — late, John (1670), Act for settling charitable uses devised by ; 136 b, 139 a.
 — (1673), Dr. Dolben ; 255 a.
- Rochford :
 Earl of, letter of (1709) ; 37 b
 — (1763) ; 286 b.
 — letter of ; ib.
 Countess of (1763) ; 286 b.
 Capt. ; 289 a.
 — letter of ; 582 a.
 Lieut.-Col. ; 592 a, 598 b.
 Ensign Jasper ; 595 a.
 Ralph, petition of ; 511 b.
- Rochford :
 Lord (1702) ; 17 b.
 Earl of (1708), letter of ; 36 a.
 James, of Larraghs, petition of ; 506 a.
 Rob. ; 74 a.
- Rock :
 Lieut. B., letter of ; 291 a
 Rev. Dr. ; 300 a.
- Rocke, or Roche, R., letters of ; 292 b, 293 a.
- Rockingham :
 castle, documents dated at ; 87 a.
 Lord, his privilege case (1666) ; 104 a.
 (c. 1754) ; 220 b, 225 a.
 (1757) ; 223 b.
- Rocksavage, documents dated from ; 374 b, 381 b, 400 a.
- Rockwood :
 a Yorkshiraman, conspirator ; 434 a.
 Ambrose ; ib.
- Roconnell skirmish ; 604 a.
- Roddam :
 Capt., letter of ; 290 a.
 Col., letter of ; ib.
- Rodes :
 Sir Edward ; 275 a.
 Francis, justice ; 272 b.
- Rodington, Henry de, mayor of Leicester ; 408 a.
- Rodipoll parish ; 210 b.
- Rodway v. Baber ; 170 b.
- Rodwell, Henry ; 383 a.

- Rodyngton, William de; 410 b.
- Roe:
- Bryan; 608 b, 614 b.
 - Er. John, of the Discalciat Carmelites; 612 b.
 - Henry; 605 b.
 - Sir Phelim; 603 b.
 - Richard, petition of; 510 a.
 - Sir Thomas, speech of; 91 a.
- Roebuck, Benjamin, letters of; 288 b, 293 b, 294 a.
- Roermond, plan of; 22 a.
- Roettier:
- Mr., engraver; 84 a.
 - his house at the Mint; 64 b, 89 b.
 - James, of the Mint; 68 a.
 - John, engraver; 86 b.
 - John, Joseph, and Philip; 67 b.
- Roger, Richard; 278 b.
- Rogers:
- v. Ingram; 170 b.
 - Dr. George, of the College of Physicians; 234 b.
 - J. J., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 - Richard, of the Mint; 66 a.
 - goldsmith; 65 a.
 - of Blantisham, will of; 335 a.
 - Robert, of Drayton, will of; 333 b.
 - Thomas, of Leicester, his horse; 437 b.
- Rogerson, Robert, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
- Rogger, John; 626 a.
- Roban, Chevalier de Leon, letter of; 37 b.
- Roban, Prince de, letter of; ib.
- Rojas et Sandoval, Don Francisco; 22 b.
- Rokerelle, Isabella, her chapel in St. Paul's; 634 a.
- Rokes, Thomas, sen., of Falley, Bucks, will of; 332 a.
- Rokesle, Richard, of Charing, will of his widow Alesia; 338 b.
- Rokley, Thomas, skinner, of London, will of; 333 a.
- Rokulf, William, of Worcester; 638 a.
- Rokynge, church of; 317 a.
- Roland, George and Agnes, of Leicester, conveyance to; 420 b.
- Rollo, Lord, MSS. of; xxii.
- Rolls, John, engraver, petition of; 68 b.
- Rolls, Master of the:
- warrant to (1605); 87 a.
 - (1688); 123 a, 133 b, 139 a.
 - order of; 122 b.
 - his office; 584 b.
- Rolvynedene, church of; 323 b.
- Romagnani, Fontanedo Castle, near; 553 a.
- Romain, Thomas, letter of; 37 b.
- Rome:
- letters dated at; 44 a, 197 a, 197 b, 554 a.
 - to Persia, account of travels from; 1 b.
 - state of (1708); 19 b.
 - St. Paul's near, letter dated at; 44 a.
 - earthquakes at (1703); 44 a.
 - news letters from (1691); 282 a.
 - St. Mark's, document dated at; 301 b.
 - English college; 583 a.
- Romer:
- Col., letter of; 36 a.
 - M., letter of; 37 b.
- Romescot, Kent; 316 a.
- Romford; 155 a, 157 b, 158 a.
- Romney:
- Earl of, of the Ordnance (1699); 89 b.
 - Kent; 340 a.
 - barons of town of; 264 b.
 - New, corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 - Old, Aghene, near; 323 b.
 - Marsh; 325 b, 346 b, 352 b.
 - Lepers' Hospital at; 364 b, 341 b.
- Romsey, abbess of; 234 a.
- Ronan, Capt. Joseph, letter of; 290 b.
- Rondon, Elias de, commissary; 338 a.
- Ronewell Manor; 633 a.
- Ronquillo, Don Pedro:
- Spanish ambassador; 31 a, 561 b.
 - counsellor of State; 561 b.
 - account of his death; 564 b, 565 a, 565 b.
 - distress of his servants; ib.
 - his natural son; 565 b.
- Ronton, co. Stafford, priory; 265 b.
- Roo, John, of St. Lawrence, Jewry, will of; 332 a.
- Rooke, Sir George, his fleet; 31 a.
- Roorback, Capt., letter of; 289 a.
- Roos:
- barony of, claim to (1666); 102 a, 105 b.
 - report on; 105 b.
 - Lord, John (1668); x., 117 a.
 - Act concerning (1670); 140 a.
 - (1671); 440 a.
 - Lady Anne, Act, illegitimation of her children; x., 102 a.
 - petition of (1668); 117 a.
- Roosendale, M., letter of; 36 a.
- Roosendall, Baron de, letters of; 40 a.
- Rooth, —, author of the "Analecta Sacra"; 461 a.
- Ropemakers, petition of; 247 a.
- Roper:
- Elizabeth, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 - John, of Westgate, gift by; 319 b.
 - demise to; 342 a.
 - Richard, petition of; 514 a.
 - Cornet Robert; 596 a.
 - William, petition, &c. of; 161 a.
- Roploch; 309 b.
- Roques, Roeques, M. des, letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
- Ros:
- Lord de, MSS. of; xxii.
 - R. de, commission to; 351 b.
- Rosa, Salvator, painting by; 100 b.
- Rosamond, an opera; 60 b.
- Roscommon; 466 b.
- letters dated at; 475 a, 475 b.
 - survey of lands in; 517 b, 518 a.
 - member for; 442 a.
 - James II.'s lands in; 497 b, 498 a.
 - surrender of; 605 a.
 - Earl of, Wentworth, petition of (1663); 501 a, 537 b.
- Roscrea:
- troops near; 602 a.
 - army in; 607 a.
- Rose:
- Chevalier, letter of; 38 b.
 - Mr., petition of; 67 b.
 - apothecary, action against; 233 b.
 - Cornet John; 595 b.
- Roseberry, Rosebery, co. Kildare; 541 a.
- Rosen, M. de, general in Ireland; 494 b, 497 a.
- Rosenkrantz, M., letter of; 38 b.
- Rositer, Col., his rout of Prince Rupert; 9 b.
- Roslyn Chapel; 313 a.
- Ross, Rosse; 610 b, 611 a, 611 b.
- siege of; 604 a.
 - corporation of; 517 a.
 - quay of; 522 a.
 - the army before (1649); 600 b.
 - New, alias Rosposte, co. Wexford, sovereigne of. See Mayly, Patrick; 371 b.
 - co. Hereford, vicarage and rectory, printed case of (1670); 154 b.
 - Ireland; 528 b.
 - co. Wexford; 512 b.
 - licences to trade in; 501 b, 503 b.
 - Mr., keeper of Duke of York's armoury; 279 a.
 - Andrew, letter of; 293 b.
 - Charles, editor of "Cornwallis Correspondence"; xiii., 288 a.
 - Francis, of Leicester; 438 a.
 - George, Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 - James L., letter of; 293 a.
 - John, deceased; 280 a.
 - Col. P., letter of; 290 a.
 - Lieut.-Colonel Patrick, letters of; 294 b, 295 b.
 - Will., Burgess, of Calais, will of; 334 b.
 - Major-General, letters of; 32 a.
 - Lieut.-Genl., letters of; 36 a, 38 b, 40 a.
 - Duke of, James (1497); 305 b.
 - (1499); 306 a.
 - Lord, letters of (1708); 48 a.
 - Treasury Commissioner in Scotland (1708); 83 b.
 - Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
 - Lady, letter of; 57 a.
 - (1690); 497 b.
- Rosscree; 617 a.
- Rossel, Robert, grant to; 637 a.
- Rosserra parish, tithes of; 535 b.
- Rosslyn, Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Rossolo, Mons.; 538 b.
- Rotarius, John, son of Walter, gift by; 408 b.
- Rotchford, Henry, of Kilbride; 545 b.
- Roth:
- M., letters of; 36 a, 38 b.
 - , procurator to King Augustus, letter of; 37 b.
 - John, of Kilkenny, petition of; 503 b.
 - Robert; 582 a.
- Rotherfield, John Grey of; 263 a.
- Rotherham, John:
- petition of; 71 b.
 - of Barnet; 71 b.
 - letter of; ib.
- Rotherwick:
- yeomen's petition from; 263 b.
 - church, assault in; ib.
 - Cowfold in, Hampshire; ib.
- Roths:
- Lord, document signed by (1676); 302 b.
 - Countess of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Rothram, Sir Thomas; 594 a.
- Rothsley; 414 a.
- Rothwell parish, co. York; 276 a.
- Rotier, Mr., engraver; 84 a. See Roettier.

Rotterdam :
 letters dated at ; 16 b, 39 a, 40 a.
 tin sold in ; 92 b.
 journey from ; 99 b.
 great frost at ; 554 a.
 English merchants at ; 584 a.
 Roubay, M. de, letter of ; 36 a.
 Rouen ; 244 a, 283 a.
 King's Chamber of Accounts at ; 265 a. document executed at ; 268 a.
 Archbishop of (1440) ; 268 a.
 Rough, of Edinburgh, a servant ; 312 a.
 Roughhead, Josias, of Bedford, Bunyan licensed to preach in his house ; 440 a.
 Rougheborough, abbot, &c. of ; 637 a.
 Rouillé, President ; 36 b.
 Roundkettle, Henry, of Ipswich ; 242 a.
 Rous :
 Francis, payment to ; 95 a.
 Wm. le ; 168 a, 172 a.
 Rousberghe ; 208 b.
 Rousseau, M., letter of ; 38 b.
 Roussillon ; 25 b.
 French army in ; 18 a.
 Routh, Dame Elizabeth, Act touching ; 141 b.
 Routhale, Thomas de, of Worcester ; 638 a.
 Rovido, Alessandro, of Milan ; 95 a.
 Row, Mr., letter of ; 36 a.
 Rowclyffe :
 Brian, of Cowthorpe ; 273 a.
 Sir John and Margaret ; ib.
 Rowden, Corporal of Ormonde's troop ; 536 a.
 Rowe :
 Mathias, payment to ; 212 b.
 Captain ; 591 b.
 Rowes :
 Mr., of Leicester, his death ; 441 a.
 William, mayor of Leicester, letter of ; 433 b.
 Rowland, Mr., of Bedford, surgeon ; 9 a.
 Rowledge, Nicholas, prisoner ; 237 b.
 Rowles, James, letter of ; 294 b.
 Rowlet :
 Ralph ; 65 a.
 Sir Ralph, of the Mint ; 65 b.
 Rowley :
 Hercules, of Dublin ; 196 b.
 John ; 399 a.
 Rowney, Herts, priory of ; 265 b.
 Rowston :
 co. Lincoln ; 116 b.
 co. York ; 271 b.
 Roxburgh :
 document dated at ; 348 b.
 Lord, letters of (1708) ; 48 a.
 Roysbrok, Walter, of Stowmarket, will of ; 333 a.
 Royston ; 98 a, 332 b.
 letter dated at ; 215 b.
 James I. at ; 441 b.
 Ruairk, Captain ; 609 b.
 Rubempré, Prince de, letter of ; 37 b.
 Rubens, painting by ; 92 b, 100 a.
 Ruekinge, Kent ; 327 a.
 Ruddocke, Capt., his company ; 541 b.
 Ruddings, Walter ; 439 b.
 Rudolph II., letter to ; 213 a.
 Ruds, William, son of Nicholas ; 238 a.
 Rudyard, A., letter to ; 259 b.
 Ruf, Herbert Le, witness ; 408 b.
 Ruffey, Col., letter of ; 37 b.
 Rufford, Will., of Clifton-on-Teme, will of ; 335 a.
 Rugby, Capt. ; 397 b.
 Raceley, Lt.-Col., letter of ; 289 a.
 Rughford parva, co. York ; 271 a.
 Ruislip, Middlesex, manor ; 120 b.
 Ruiz, Don Diego, letter of ; 38 b.
 Runage, David, of the Tower ; 90 a.
 Rupert :
 Prince ; 582 a.
 — letter of (1642) ; 437 a.
 — receipt by ; ib.
 — rented by Col. Rositer (1645) ; 9 b.
 — (1666) ; 253 b.
 — his narrative (1666) ; 219 a.
 — (1670) ; 144 b.
 — his surrender of Bristol ; 212 b.
 — his foot regiment, order touching ; 365 a.
 — Mazarin's opinion of ; 552 b.
 Richard, letter of ; 379 a.
 Ruperti, M., Lutheran minister ; 47 a.
 Rupibus :
 Bishop Peter de (c. 1205) ; 263 b.
 William de, witness ; 404 b.
 Ruremonde, Bishop of (1708), letter of ; 36 a.
 Rus, William ; 65 a.
 Rusby, John, mayor of Pontefract ; 275 b.
 Rushenden, Kent, manor ; 119 a.

Rushworth College, Norwich dioc. ; 342 a.
 Russel, Russell :
 Lord, his march from Calais ; 581 a.
 Lady, letter of (1714) ; 37 a.
 Lady John (1732) ; 63 a.
 Dr., of Stepney ; 254 b.
 Admiral, his proceedings ; 561 a, 563 a.
 — murmurs against ; 565 b, 566 a.
 Col., letter of ; 37 b.
 — letters to ; 255 b.
 Claud, letter of ; 291 a.
 Edward ; 365 b.
 George, licensee farmer, petitions of ; 509 a, 544 b, 548 b, 550 b.
 Jeremy, petition of ; 512 b.
 John, petition of ; 255 a.
 — portour ; 367 b.
 — of Sootes ; 414 a.
 Mathew, petition of ; 525 a.
 Ensign Michell ; 591 b.
 O., counsel for Crown (1827) ; 369 b.
 Robert, of Exeter, will of ; 334 b.
 — priest, of Cambridge, will of ; 335 a.
 — witness ; 1 b.
 Sir William, petitions of ; 115 a.
 — his daughter Anne ; 104 b.
 — letters of and to ; 243 a.
 William, petition of ; 255 a.
 Russhton, James, haberdasher, of London, will of ; 333 a.
 Russia ; 134 a. account of journey through (c. 1602) ; 23 a.
 tin sold in ; 92 b.
 Czar of (1708) ; 33 a.
 Emperor of, letter of (1710) ; 38 a.
 — letter of ; 36 b.
 — John Basilus ; 227 b.
 Empress of, Orina ; 227 b.
 Ruth, Capt., his ship ; 255 b.
 Rutherford :
 Mr., commissioner in Scotland ; 83 a.
 Robt., letter of ; 83 b.
 Samuel, letters of ; xvii., 299 b, 303 b.
 W. Oliver, Esq., MSS. of ; xxii.
 Ruthin ; 399 a.
 Rutland :
 land revenue ; 284 a.
 Earl of, his fleet (1623) ; 215 b.
 — privilege case (1670) ; 139 a.
 — letter of (1670) ; 439 b.
 — his son-in-law, Lord Annesley ; ib.
 — (1671) ; 440 a.
 — letters of (1685) ; 440 b.
 — precept by (1690) ; 441 a.
 — warrant by ; ib.
 Duke of, MSS. of ; xxii.
 — (1670) ; 140 a.
 — (1754) ; 225 a.
 — (1757) ; 223 b.
 Rutledge, Lieut. Edward ; 593 b.
 Rutter, Ralph, king's messenger ; 419 a.
 Rutton, Mathias ; 280 b.
 Ruvigny, —, his regiment ; 563 a.
 Ruxton :
 John, sheriff of Louth co. ; 531 b.
 Cornet John ; 596 a.
 Priscilla, petition for her son John ; 502 b.
 — wife of Lieut. John, petition of ; 529 a.
 Ryallon :
 Lord, letter of (1708) ; 36 a.
 — letter of (1709) ; 37 b.
 Ryan, Ja., lands held by ; 518 a.
 Ryder :
 Sir Wm. ; 167 a, 167 b.
 — order, &c. touching ; 167 b.
 See Rider.
 Rydyall, John ; 272 b.
 Rye :
 mayor and others of, letter of ; 393 a. harbour of ; ib.
 document dated from ; ib.
 corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 baven, decay of ; 246 a.
 Hubert de, gift by ; 322 b.
 Henry de, his heir ; 323 a.
 Ryghtwyse, Margaret, widow of Thomas, of Sall, will of ; 333 b.
 Rykemersworth, land in ; 1 b.
 Ryley, John, letter of ; 295 a.
 Rylyng, John, alias Cawston, hurer of London, will of ; 333 a.
 Rymeswell manor, co. York ; 628 a.
 Rynard, Francis, corporal and sergeant ; 541 b.
 Ryngolde, William, of Leicester ; 420 a.
 Ryppon, Robert, senr., of Lee, Kent, will of ; 332 b.
 Ryppynge, John, of Mutford, will of ; 333 b.
 Ryseby : land of ; 627 a.
 High, land of ; ib.

R ysheton, William; 272 a.
 R yswick, treaty of; xi, 100 a.
 R ysyng, Rich., of Antingham, will of; 334 a.
 Ryves :
 Lieut.-Col., weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 John, of Wey; 630 a.

S.

Sabbath, the, persons forbidden to work on; 251 b.
 Saberthwayte, James; 228 b.
 Sabine, Jos., letter of; 38 b.
 Sabyn, John, of Leicester; 413 b.
 Sacellan, Peter, witness; 306 a.
 Sacheverell :

Dr.; 44 a.
 — trial of; 18 b, 39 a.
 — at Westminster Hall; 49 b.
 Henry, of Ratcliff-upon-Sore; 416 b.
 Wm.; 150 a.

Sacheverill :
 Thomas, preacher at Leicester; 417 a, 492 a.
 Lieut. William; 596 b.

Sackcloth and poledavies, sealing of; 243 a.

Sackville, Sackville :

Lord, MSS. of; xxii.
 Sir J., letters of and to; 243 a.
 Lord G., speeches of (1756); 223 a, 223 b.
 Lord George; 221 b.
 — letter to (1758); 181 b, 182 b.

Sacrament certificates; 401 a.

Sacrist of a monastery, articles provided by; 343 b.

Sadderby, Henry, of Leicester; 413 b.

Saddleworth, co. York, chapel, 147 a.

Sadlar, alias Dore, Robert, of Devizes, will of; 335 b.

Sadleir, Anthony, letters of; 292 b, 293 b.

Sadler :

Sir Ralph; 51 a.
 Lady, gift of lands by; 235 a.
 Sir Ralph, the members for Leicester and; 431 a, 431 b.
 — letter of; 431 b.

Safediche; 371 a.

Saffron Walden, the Council of War at; 552 b.

Sagrym, Segrym, John, his daughter and heir; 634 a.

Saile, Hastings, mayor of Pontefract, letter to; 275 b.

Sailors, impressment of; 393 b.

St. Aignan, Duc de, letter of; 40 a.

St. Albans; 347 b.

letters dated at; 8 b, 61 a, 347 a.
 James I. at; 435 b.
 Abbot and convent of, grants, &c. to; 1 b. monastery, charters of; 1 a.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.
 Earl of, leases to; 51 a.
 — (1660); 219 a.
 — privilege case (1667); 108 b, 109 a.
 Duke of, George, letter of (1771); 287 b.
 — 3rd; 569 a, note.

St. Andrew, the ship; 242 a, 324 a.

St. Andrews :

documents dated at; 299 b, 303 b, 306 a, 306 b, 307 a, 307 b.
 Holy Trinity Kirk at; 307 b.
 port of; 308 b.
 See of, charters relating to; 305 b.
 church of, conveyance to; 300 b.
 St. Leonard's College at; 299 a, 303 a.
 University, MSS. of; xxiii.
 St. Mary de Rupe near; xvii., 304 a.
 — charters relating to; 306 b.
 archbishop of, Hamilton; 304 b.
 — his execution (1571); ib.
 — John (1555); 309 a.
 — charter by (1561); 309 a, 309 b.
 — Andrew Forman (1517); 306 a.
 — James Beton (1532); ib.
 — (1560); Hamilton; 308 b.
 — (1483); William; 305 b.
 archbishops of; 304 b.
 prior of, Thomas; 300 b.
 archdeacon of, Ranulph; ib.
 bishop of (1206); William; 300 b.
 — (1206); 297 a.
 — (1283); Fraser, charter by; 300 b.
 — (1388); Walter, witness; 307 a.
 — (1393); Walter, witness; 305 b.
 — (1452); James; 305 b.
 — charter by; ib.

St. Angelo, letter dated at; 218 b.

St. Antony de la Catua, the ship; 373 b.

St. Asaph, Bishop of :

Thomas (temp. Eliz.); 94 a.
 Robert, writ to; 634 b.

St. Asaph, Bishop of—cont.

Henry, writ of summons (1667); 112 b.

Isaac (1670); 154 b.

— writ of summons to; 142 b.

Dr. Fleetwood (1708); 34 a.

(1753), speech of; 219 b.

St. Bees, lights at; 261 b.

St. Bernard :

Abbey of; 603 a.
 his "Life of St. Malachy"; 572 a.

St. Bertin; 321 a.

St. Bohine; 585 b.

St. Bonaventura, works of; 572 a.

St. Catherine's; 85 b, 283 a.

St. Christopher's island; 24 a.

St. Clare, Lord, his son (1708); 33 a.

St. Colum Kill; 585 b.

St. Columb; 335 a.

St. Cyric in the Baths, Cardinal priest of; 625 b.

St. Davids :

ship-money assessment; 383 a.
 Bishop of, Abp. Peckham and; 320 a.
 — (1414), H. Chichele; 340 b.

St. Domingo; 285 b.

St. Edmund, William de, witness; 422 b.

St. Elawde, the ship, of Calais; 242 a.

St. Eloy, M., letter of; 36 a.

St. Fois, letter dated at; 218 a.

St. Gelain or Gislain; 28 b, 29 a.

St. George :

the ship, of Calais; 242 a.
 the, of London (Catch); 369 a.
 Fort; 256 b.

Council of; 296 b.

Ensign Art.; 595 a.

Cardinal; 23 a.

Chevalier, memoirs of; 59 b.

Oliver, letters of; 58 b.

Sir Oliver, his troop; 503 a, 517 a, 522 a, 530 a, 546 b.

Capt. Richard; 595 a.

— weekly charge of his troop; 598 b.

Lieut. William; 513 a.

St. Germain :

the Pretender at; 34 a.
 fair at; 23 b. en Laye, letters dated at; 16 b.

— council held at; 553 a.

Marquis, letter of (1635); 552 b.

St. Germans, Earl, MSS. of; xxii.

St. Gylain; 218 b.

St. Helen, family of; 262 b.

St. Hippolite, M. de, his services; 21 b.

St. Idefonso; 193 a.

St. Ives, co. Hunts.; 9 b.

St. John :

Lord (1645); 9 a.
 — his steward; 11 a.
 the Baptist, a finger of; 268 b.
 Bar., letter of; 3 a.
 Beauchamp, letter of; 9 a.
 Henry; 17 a, 210 a.
 — letters of; 32 a, 32 b, 37 b, 38 a, 57 a
 — documents signed by; 39 b.
 — Secretary of State, letters to; 40 b, 71 b.
 Mrs. Lucie, allowance to; 3 a.
 Oliver, letters of; 379 a, 382 a, 435 b.
 — letter of; 584 b.
 — arguments by; 584 b.
 Richard; 625 b.
 of Jerusalem, Hospital, grant to; 637 a.

St. John's :

warden of the Mint; 65 a.
 Mr., Lord Bullingbrook's brother (1712); 395 b.
 with Skeaghue Moone, co. Kildare; 508 a.
 Wood, Middlesex; 161 a.

St. Just, Madame de, letter of; 40 a.

St. Kallock; 246 a.

St. Lãudo, William de, inquisition by; 406 a.

St. Laurant, M. de, letter of; 36 a.

St. Laurent, letter dated at; 25 a.

St. Lawrence :

Hampshire; 263 b. in Thanet; 340 a.

St. Leger :

Sir Anthony, of the Mint; 64 a, 64 b.
 — warrant to; 90 a.
 — document signed by; 66 b.
 — his son; 64 a.
 George, petition of; 517 a.

St. Leofard, G. de, canon of Wells; 350 a.

St. Leonard's :

Hospital; 169 a.
 Forest of; 349 b.

St. Lo or Lawdo, William de, conveyance to; 405 b.

St. Lorenzo; 215 b.

St. Lucia, claims of King of France to (1751); 234 a.

St. Malachy, St. Bernard's Life of; 572 a.

- St. Malo or St. Maloes ; 36 b, 138 a, 561 a.
 St. Margaret at Cliff, vicar of, ex-communicated ; 336 b.
 St. Martiu, Camp de, letter from ; 28 a.
 St. Maurice, Comte, letters of ; 38 b, 40 a.
 St. Maurus, Nicholas de, witness ; 407 b.
 St. Mawe's Castle, Cornwall ; 249 a.
 St. Michael, Mount, Normandy, monastery of ; 263 b.
 St. Neots ; 9 b.
 St. Nicholas :
 in Thanet ; 248 a, 340 a.
 — church of ; 342 b.
 St. Nicholas's Gut ; 255 b, 257 a.
 St. Osithe, abbot of, v. John Rokell (15 Ric. II.) ; 169 b.
 St. Oswald's priors, co. York ; 273 a.
 St. Patrick :
 Munster ; 154 a.
 Jocelin's Life of ; 572 a, 582 b.
 St. Philip, of Ostend, the ; 109 b.
 St. Pierre :
 Abbé de, letter of ; 38 b.
 M., letter of ; ib.
 St. Priest, Mr. ; 26 a.
 St. Prisca, Cardinal of, Arnald ; 352 a.
 St. Quentin, letter dated at ; 28 a.
 St. Quintin, Sir William ; 64 a.
 — documents signed by ; 85 a, 85 b.
 St. Remy, Baron ; 21 a.
 St. Rist, Madame, letter of ; 38 b.
 St. Rutb, Geucral, killed ; 563 a.
 St. Saphorin, relation by ; 15 b.
 St. Saphorins, M., credentials to, from Berne ; 37 b.
 St. Sebastian ; 563 a.
 St. Terman or Terrenanus, of Arbutnott ; 298 b, 299 b, 300 a.
 St. Thomas :
 M. de ; 20 b.
 Marquess de ; 21 b.
 St. Tronce, Camp de, letter dated at ; 17 b.
 St. Valery ; 34 b, 35 a, 127 b.
 St. Venaut, siege of ; 217 b.
 St. Victor, M., letters of ; 40 a, 40 b.
 St. Vincent ; 289 b.
 Salamanca ; 17 a, 18 a.
 University ; 455 a.
 Salisbury, John de, mercer ; 367 a.
 Sallian, M., letter of ; 38 b.
 Salich, General, letters of ; 32 a.
 Salis, M. de, letters of ; 37 b, 40 a.
 Salisbury ; 107 a, 333 a, 335 a, 335 b.
 Cathedral, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 Bishop of, H. (1202) ; 356 b.
 — ex-communicated by Alexander III. ; 317 a.
 — (1493), Langton ; 262 b.
 — (16th cent.?), Audley ; 269 a.
 — Alexander (1666), writ of summons to ; 101 a.
 — (1668) ; 173 a.
 — (1670) ; 138 b.
 — Burnet, letters of ; 54 a.
 — (1704), his books ; 51 b.
 — letter of (1708) ; 45 b.
 Cape ; 236 b, 237 a.
 Marquis of, reports on his MSS. ; xxii.
 Earl of (1 John) William, witness ; 404 b.
 — document signed by (1605) ; 87 b.
 — (1606) ; 380 b.
 — letter of ; ib.
 — letters of (1607) ; 381 a.
 — letter of (1608) ; 382 b.
 — (1609) ; 228 b.
 — (1610), Robert, document signed by ; 211 b.
 — letters of (1611) ; 88 b, 399 b.
 — James, writ of summons to (1669) ; 127 a.
 — (1687) ; 209 b.
 — letter to ; 582 a.
 — Robert, papers by ; 584 b.
 the, French man-of-war, capture of ; x., 1 a, 45 b.
 John of ; 319 b.
 John, of Barnstaple, will of ; 335 a.
 canon of ; 333 a.
 Lieut. John ; 592 b.
 Capt. Thos. ; 120 b.
 — answer of ; 121 a.
 Salisch, M., letters of ; 36 a, 40 a.
 Sall ; 333 b.
 Sallangres, Madlle. de, letter of ; 37 b.
 Salle, M. de la ; 564 a.
 Sallowe, Roger de, his daughter ; 407 b.
 Salmon :
 Dr. Peter v. Merchant Adventurers of England ; 147 b.
 Peter, patent to ; 248 a.
 Salmon fisheries in the Thames ; 632 b.
 Salms :
 Prince ; 16 b.
 Prince of, letters of (1705) ; 31 b.
 Salope, Wlston de, witness ; 638 a.
- Salsbury, Wm., petition of ; 103 b.
 Salsbury, John ; 375 b.
 Salsedo, Peter ; 369 a.
 Salsinstall, Samuel, mayor of Pontefract ; 276 a.
 Salt, Captain ; 541 b, 548 b.
 Saltash ; 255 b.
 Salte, Thomas, quartermaster ; 596 a.
 Saltney, Le Londup in, called le Blakepul ; 358 a.
 Saltneyway ; 371 a.
 Saltcrway ; 371 a.
 Saltfleet ; 324 b.
 Saltfleet Haven ; 116 b.
 Saltfleetby, co. Lincoln, deeds relating to ; 264 b.
 Salthouse ; 334 a.
 Saltney marsh ; 370 b, 393 b.
 Saltoun, Lord of, letter to (1708) ; 45 b.
 Saltunestall, town of ; 636 b.
 Saluces, Marquisate of (circ. 1600) ; 283 b.
 Salusburie :
 Owen ; 376 a.
 John ; 375 a.
 Salvin or Selvin :
 Robert ; 112 b, 113 a.
 — petitions of ; 112 b, 113 a.
 Sam, John, soldier in Ireland ; 513 a.
 Samford, Will., of Bruton, will of ; 335 a.
 Samforth, Cristiana, of Kingston-on-Thames, will of ; 332 b.
 Sampson, the ship, of London ; 523 b.
 Samson, Major Richard, warrant touching ; 384 b.
 Samuel, Marcus ; 279 b.
 Sanchye, Col. Jerome ; 618 a.
 Sancerot, Dr., Abp. of Canterbury ; 566 a.
 " Sancto Amando, Amaurico de " ; 357 a, 357 b.
 Sancto Lando :
 William de, conveyance to ; 408 a.
 — witness ; 408 b.
 Sand, Col. Robert ; 543 a.
 Sanders :
 Edward, huntsman ; 279 b, 280 a.
 Col. Robert, petition of ; 510 a.
 Sanderson ; 493 b, 496 a.
 Capt., of the Charlotte ; 257 a.
 Sir William, master of the Trinity House ; 260 b.
 Sanderton, Mr., payment to ; 526 a.
 Sandford :
 E., letter of ; 293 b.
 Sir Richard, of the Mint ; 64 a.
 — letter of ; 70 b.
 Theophilus, his lands in Rosecommou ; 513 b.
 Thomas, of Leicester, commission to ; 417 a.
 — of Dublin ; 506 b.
 Sandhurst ; 327 a.
 Sandon, letter dated at ; 49 b.
 Sandridge :
 vill of ; 1 b.
 St. Leonard's church of ; 2 a.
 Sands, Mr., speech of ; 222 b.
 Sandwich :
 Earl of, Master of the Trinity House (1660) ; 235 b, 249 a.
 250 a.
 — (1662) ; 251 b.
 — (1669) ; 254 a.
 — (1670) ; 147 a.
 — and Lady, letters of (1714) ; 57 a.
 — (1748) ; 370 a.
 — (1751) ; 284 b.
 — letter of (1762) ; 285 a.
 — (1763) ; 286 b.
 — letter of (1763) ; 286 b.
 — letter to (no date) ; 287 b.
 Kent ; 320 b, 350 b, 352 a.
 ships of ; 242 b.
 corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 taking down steeple at ; 254 b.
 lands in ; 318 b.
 manor of ; 322 b.
 Lyden, near ; 324 a.
 deeds relating to ; 326 b.
 St. Clement's churchyard ; 337 a.
 St. Peter's ; 340 a.
 Nicholas de ; 345 a.
 port of ; 318 b, 345 b, 346 b.
 writ to mayor of ; 346 b.
 Sandy and Girtford, parsonage of ; 4 a.
 Sandys :
 Lord (1668) ; 166 a.
 — Henry (1669), writ of summons to ; 127 a.
 Col., his company ; 530 b.
 Edwin ; 109 a.
 J., letter so signed ; 393 b.
 Sir Miles, deceased ; 109 b.
 Col. Robert, petition of ; 507 a.
 Samuel, the younger ; 109 a.
 — the elder ; 109 a.
 — ; 109 b.
 William ; 139 a.

- Sandys—cont.
 William, petition, &c. of; 139 a.
 —; 278 a.
 Lieut. William, letters of; 293 b, 295 b.
 Sandysone, Richard, of Leicester; 412 a.
 Sanford, Thomas, of Leicester; 416 b.
 Sankey:
 Col., in Ireland; 602 a.
 H., petition signed by; 538 a.
 Sansio, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Santer, Robert de la, deed by; 408 a.
 Santon, land of; 627 a.
 Santry:
 church of; 566 a.
 Baron of, chief justice in Ireland (1663); 526 b.
 Sapote, John, Knt., of Hartland, will of; 333 a.
 Saragossa; 18 a, 60 a.
 document dated at; 40 a.
 Sarcefields, the; 623 b.
 Sardinia, Queen of, her death (1728); 62 a.
 Sares, John, of Whitechapel, deed by; 271 b.
 Sargent, Ensign Wm.; 593 a.
 Sark; 138 b, 146 a.
 Sarmiento de Acunha, Don Diego; 213 b.
 Sarner, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Sarracin; 23 a.
 Sarranton; 217 b.
 Sarsfield:
 M., letter of; 37 b.
 Fran., his lands in Limerick; 498 b.
 Capt. Patrick, deposition of; 390 b.
 Patrick, of Tully, petition of; 501 b.
 — made Earl of Lucan; 494 a, 495 a.
 — heir of Lucan; 545 b, 547 b.
 Peter, of Tully, his estate; 540 b, 547 b.
 — his son Patrick; 541 a, 547 b.
 Satterthwaite, Wm., answer of; 124 a.
 Sauce, Simon de la, of Leicester; 465 b.
 Saulestown; 538 a.
 Saunden, John, barber, of Cambridge, will of; 333 a.
 Saund, Nicholas, missal belonging to; 234 a.]
 Saunders:
 Capt. of the "Ruby"; 63 a.
 Sir Edmund, Lord Chief Justice; 232 a.
 — his opinion; 259 a.
 Col. Robert, D. O'Neill and; 519 a.
 Sir Thomas, of the Tower; 89 a.
 Sauderson:
 gaoler at Leicester; 433 a.
 Robert, sheriff of Hull, account of; 627 b.
 Saunford, Robert de; 263 b.
 Saunzavoyr, Sir Ralph, of Selgrave; 330 a.
 Saurin, Mr.; 564 a.
 Sausser, Robert le; 168 a, 172 a.
 Savage:
 Mr., letter to; 381 b.
 Mons. Arnaud, of Canterbury; 343 a.
 Boniface, of Pontefract; 272 a.
 Sir Edward; 387 b.
 John, affidavit of; 140 a.
 — letter of; 366 a.
 Sir John, mayor of Chester; 368 b.
 — letter of; 381 b.
 — letters to; 382 a, 382 b, 400 a.
 Jonadab, petition of; 150 a.
 Lord, document signed by (1635); 209 b.
 P.; 74 a.
 Philip; 278 a.
 Thos.; 365 b.
 Savary:
 Col., letter of; 40 a.
 M., letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 40 a.
 Major; letter of; 38 b.
 Savile, Savill, Savell:
 Lady Frances, Act for securing money to; 118 b.
 Sir George, his motion (1778); 197 b.
 — commissioner; 275 a.
 John, of Methley, order signed by; 275 a.
 Henry, vice-chamberlain (1685); 12 b.
 Thomas, of London; 282 a.
 Savorini, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Savoy; 33 b, 282 b, 570 a.
 envoy from (1707); 17 a.
 Cardinal of, dispute with his servants at Rome; 554 a.
 Savoy, Duke of:
 (1636); 553 a.
 (1705); 44 a.
 letters of; 31 a.
 (1706); 45 b.
 (1708); 1 a, 16 b, 17 b, 18 a, 25 a, 26 b, 32 b, 33 a, 33 b.
 mission to; 16 a.
 Imperial memorial against; 36 a. negotiations with; 19 b, et seq.
 (1709); 47 a.
 letter of (1709); 36 b.
 — (1710); 38 a.
 Savoy, the Prince of (1709), letters of; 36 b, 38 a, 40 a.
 Savoye, Eugene de, letters of; 14 a, 25 a.
 Sawcer, Wm.; 281 b.
 Sawford, Edward, his speech; 431 b.
 Sawyer:
 Edmund, his Memorials of State, Eliz. and James xiii., 277 a.
 — his "Winwood State Papers;" 283 a.
 Sir Robert, attorney general; 232 a, 258 a.
 Sir Roger, his opinion; 258 a.
 Sax, Matthew, son of; 636 a.
 Saxby, Elizabeth, of Northampton, will of; 335 a.
 Saxe:
 Prince of, letters of (1705); 31 b.
 Cardinal Prince of, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 Cardinal of, letters of (1707); 32 a.
 Eysnac, Duke of, letters of (1707); 32 a.
 Prince de (1710), letter of; 35 b.
 Gotha, commandants of regiments of (1710); 38 b
 — Prince William of, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 — Duke of (1709), letter of; 36 b.
 Saxham, Suffolk; 121 b.
 Saxmoundham, John, alias Cowper, of Glenham, will of; 333 b.
 Saxony: invasion of; 32 a.
 troops of (1703); 44 a.
 Frederick the Great's doings in; 220 b. embassy to, temp. Charles I.; 584 a.
 Say and Sale, Lord:
 letter of (1642); 211 b.
 letters to; ib.
 letters of (1644, &c.); 3 a, 5 b, 8 b, 9 b, 10 a.
 (1668); 166 b.
 W. Fenys; 263 b.
 Say:
 Thomas, of Abingdon, will of; 332 b.
 Will. de, gift by; 323 a.
 William, Dean of St. Paul's; 634 b, 635 b
 Sayer, John, petition of; 502 b.
 Sayle, Thomas and Hastings, of Pontefract, bequest, &c. by 273 b, 276 a.
 Sayneger, Ralph, of Ulcomb, will of; 340 a.
 Scanderovne; 239 b.
 port of; 640 b.
 Scarampo; 604 b.
 Scarborough:
 Castle, Piers Gaveston's surrender of; 35 a.
 Lady, letters of; 54 a.
 Earl of, letters of (1706); 32 a.
 — Richard (1715); 51 a.
 — (1745); 571 b.
 Scarcroft, co. York; 271 a.
 Scarlet, the wearing of, at Leicester; 426 b.
 Scarsdale, Lord (1745); 571 b.
 Scawen:
 Capt. Francis; 106 b.
 — Act for restoring; 106 b.
 Robert, petition of; 106 b.
 Sir William, letter of; 37 a.
 Schafe; 637 a.
 Scharneford, Robert and Baldwin de; 405 b.
 Scharp, Richard, gift by; 323 a.
 Schauue, Henry, of Leicester; 408 a.
 Scheld, the, passage of; 36 a.
 Scheldesley, Roger de, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Schelton, Ricardus de, witness; 408 a.
 Schepa, Robert, grant to; 415 b.
 Scherpe, John, sub-prior of Bruton; 264 a.
 Schenes:
 Henry, of Kilquhuus; 305 b.
 John of, witness; 305 b.
 — rector of Inchebrick, witness; 306 a.
 Schevelin, description of; 61 b.
 Schewas, John, inquisition before; 308 a.
 Scheyle, Matilda, Richard son of, conveyance by; 410 b.
 Schilde, M. de, letter of; 37 b.
 Schivas, William, archbishop of St. Andrews; 304 b.
 Schleswig Holstein:
 Duke of, letters of (1694); 557 b.
 — Jean Adolf, his services; ib.
 Schlik, Comte, letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
 Schlumdt, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Schmeling, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Schmettan, M., letters of; 31 b, 36 a, 37 b, 38 b, 39 b.
 Scholefield, Abraham; 147 a.
 Scholten, M. de, letters of; 36 a, 38 b.
 Schomberg and Leinster, Duke of; 558 a, 564 a, 565 a.
 (warrant signed (1689); 392 a.
 letters of (1706); 32 a.
 letter of (1708); 36 a.
 letter of (1709); 37 b.
 Schonborn:
 Comte de, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 — letter of; 36 a.
 Schools in Yorkshire, decrees concerning; 271 b.
 Schowis, Capt. Theodorus; 533 a.
 Schrader, M., letters of; 32 a, 36 b, 39 b, 40 a.

- Schrude, M., letter of; 38 a.
- Schulemberg :
 Major-General; 17 b, 19 b.
 — letters of; 40 a, 40 b.
 — —; 36 a, 36 b, 38 a, 40 b.
 — his memoirs; 26 b.
- Schutz, M. or Baron, letters of; 31 b, 36 a, 37 b.
- Schwaben, Col., letters of; 40 a.
- Schytz, Baron, letters of (1707); 32 b.
- Scilly isles :
 241 b, 252 b, 257 a, 257 b, 258 a, 258 b, 261 b.
 Lutherans transported to; 47 a. fortification of; 241 b.
- Scindiah, Mahagee; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 291 a.
- Scoble, the, account of; 22 b.
- Scobie, Henry :
 clerk of the Parliaments, document signed by; 274 b.
 — payment to; 94 b.
 — order signed by; 437 b.
- Scone, abbot of Reimbald; 300 b.
- Scotchmen, their eligibility for the College of Physicians; 228 b.
- Scotche, Sir William de, canon of St. Paul's; 634 a.
- Scotland :
 Edward II.'s wars in; 633 a.
 invasion of (1300); 347 b.
 — Pope Boniface's interference in; 348 a. war against (1314), subsidy from clergy towards; 352 b.
 Observantines in, order of (1482); 301 a.
 — Vicar general of, letter of; 301 b. expected invasion of (1549); 298 b. church of, general assembly of (1608); 299 a. foreign goods imported by (1664); 252 b. value of land and labour (1669); 134 a. labour cheap in (1669); ib.
 register of lands in, account of (1669); 136 a.
 and England, Act for the weal of (1670); 142 b.
 the conspiracy in (1703); 45 a.
 coinage commissioners in, letter of (1708); 83 b. de Foe's letters on state of feeling in (1708); 48 a. election of peers in (1708); ib.
 the elections in (1708); 41 b. silver mines in, report on (1717); 84 b, et seq.
 gold mines in (temp. Jac. IV.); xii., 84 b. its relations with Cromwell; 29 b. intending rising in; ib.
 clergy of, Walpole's quarrel with; 18 b.
 General Monk in; 30 a.
 Bank of, commissioners of; 81 a. papers relating to a Mint in; 81 a. war in, the clerical subsidy for; 354 a.
 Covenanters; 383 b. and treaty of Ripon; 383 b.
 English ambassador in; 378 a.
- Scots army about the Severn (1645); 8 b.
- Scots, king of (1596); 577 b.
- Scott, Scot :
 Mr., Duke of Atholl and; 45 b.
 —, letter of; 39 b.
 Col.; 285 b.
 Bridget; 162 a.
 Lieut. Hen.; 395 a.
 Hercules, letters of; 68 b, 81 b.
 Isaac; 162 a.
 Lieut. Jonathan, letter of; 291 a.
 John, commissioner; 275 a.
 Martha, wife of Colonel, petition of; 502 a.
 Michael; 358 a.
 Patrick, letters of; 46 a, 83 b.
 Capt. Richard, letter of; 295 a.
 — of the Admiralty; 247 b.
 Col. Thomas, petition of; 510 a.
 — answer to his petition; 518 b.
 — petition of his wife Martha; 519 b.
 Sir Walter, his "Heart of Midlothian"; 310 b.
 Major Wm., letters of; 296 a.
 William, of Balwery; 307 b.
 — of Newton; 637 a.
- Seravemour, Mr. de; 564 a.
- Seringeour, Margaret or Mariota, of Dudhope; 298 b, 301 b.
 — admitted into the order of the Observantines; 301 b.
- Scrivener, Rev. Henry; 320 a.
- Seroggs, Sir Wm.; 166 a.
- Serope :
 Mr. and Mrs., letters of and to; 25 b, 26 a.
 Edward; 376 a.
 Geoffrey Le, justice; 411 a.
 J., of the Treasury, letter of; 79 a.
 — signature; 85 a.
 Lord (1596); 378 a.
- Seryanis, John de; 634 b.
- Seadmore :
 Col. John, letters of; 47 b.
 S., letter of; 552 b.
- Seare, John, of Pontefract; 274 a.
- Seurloge, Capt.; 613 b.
- Seabrook, Thomas, warrant to; 83 a.
- Seafeld, Earl of :
 MSS. of; xxii.
 letter of (1708); 36 a.
 letters of (1709); 37 a, 83 a.
 — (1710); 38 b, 81 b.
 — (1711); 40 a.
- Sea Flower, the ship; 238 a.
- Seaforth :
 Earl of, in France; 51 a.
 Countess of Frances, complaint against; 50 b.
- Seager, John, affidavit of; 116 b.
- Seagrave, Stephen, of the Tower; 88 a.
- Seaman, Mrs.; 389 a.
- Sea marks, buoys, &c., regulations, &c. concerning. See Trinity House. MSS., report on, passim.
- Seamen :
 their protests against tempestuous weather; 369 a.
 Parliamentary commissioners for sick and wounded, letter of; 385 b. order touching; ib.
 order for impressment of (1653); 386 a. pay, &c. of, regulations and petitions concerning. See Trinity House. MSS., report on, passim.
- Searragh, co. Louth; 590 b.
- Seassaler :
 church; 316 a.
 manor and church of; 327 a.
- Seawell, John, of the Battlease Guard; 546 b.
- Seckendorff, M., letters of; 38 b.
- Secker, Archbishop, speech of; 219 b.
- Secole, W.; 629 b.
- Secrecy, committee of (1785), letter to; 289 a.
- Sedan, letter dated at; 218 a.
- Sedgmoor, battle of; 51 b.
- Seele, Thomas, provost of Trin. Coll., Dublin, petitions of 501 a, 505 b.
- Segane, Stephen; 357 b.
- Seger, Mr., Garter king-at-arms; 228 b.
- Segovia; 18 a.
- Segraue :
 Gilbert de, witness; 422 b.
 Stephen de, witness; ib.
- Segrave; 347 b.
 Nicholas de; 170 a.
 Sir Stephen and Sir Gilbert de; 265 b.
- Seignelay; 562 b.
- Seigneur, Geo., barber surgeon; 3 a.
- Seissan :
 M., letters of; 38 b, 40 a.
 Col., letter of; 37 b.
- Seitoun :
 Alexander, of Parbroath; 308 a.
 John, his nephew; ib.
- Sekker, Thomas, of Stropham, will of; 334 a.
- Selbey, Ensign Parr; 594 a.
- Selborne; 263 b.
 church of; 263 b.
 priors of, list of; 264 a. priory of; 263 b.
 — deeds relating to; 263 b.
- Selbrygge, John; 263 a.
- Selby, Willerin; 324 a.
- Selbyes, Lieut. William; 591 b.
- Selden, John :
 treatise by; 584 b.
 arguments by; 584 b.
- Seldon :
 John; 116 a.
 — order touching; ib.
- Seler, Peter, of Leicester; 411 a.
- Selgrave, near Faversham, manor of; 330 a.
- Selkirk, Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Sellerium, Laurence le. of Leicester; 421 a.
- Selling, church of; 349 b.
 assault on the Dean of Ospringe at; ib.
- Sellow garrison; 11 b.
- Selvin, Robt. See Salvin.
- Selwyn, Mrs., verses on; 24 a.
- Selycke, Count (1709); 20 b.
- Semar, Thomas, of Walden, will of; 332 a.
- Semliu; 27 b.
- Send; 332 a.
- Senewhere, document dated at; 351 a.
- Sennede, Agnes; 268 a.
- Sens, documents dated at; 353 b, 567 b, 568 a.
- Senys, Henry; 367 b.
- Septvaus, John, of Ash, will of; 340 a.
- Serampore; 293 a.
- Seras, kirk of, charter dated at; 307 a.
- Serel, Mr., of Wells; 638 b.
- Sergeant, John, of Dublin; 385 b.
- Sergeants-at-Arms, the King's :
 petitions of; 105 a, 144 a, 152 a.
 order touching; 105 a.
- Sergants of a monastery, their duties, &c.; 343 b.

- Sergeaut, Robert, of Stoke Nayland, will of; 332 b.
 Seris, ancient city of Philippos, now called; 435 b.
 Sermann, Geoffrey, of Sideling, will of; 334 b.
 Sernyse, Gilbert Grant, grant to; 307 a.
 Serranders, M. letter of; 38 b.
 Sersaoders :
 M., letter of; 36 a.
 Madame, letter of; 37 b. de Lana, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Servants, Act to prevent certain frands, &c. committed by (1670); 152 a.
 Sesia, Valley of; 27 a.
 Seton :
 Archibald, letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 293 a, 294 a.
 David, rector of Fethickarne; 305 b, 306 a.
 Setontowne, co. Louth; 590 b.
 Sevenoaks :
 chantry of; 324 b.
 vicar of; 335 b.
 St. John's Hospital at; 343 b.
 Severn, the; 8 b.
 Seville; 44 a.
 Sewall, Alice, of East Walton, will of; 333 b.
 Seward, Thomas, certificate concerning petition of; 509 b.
 Sewers, Commissioners of; 347 a.
 orders of; 88 a.
 Seymour :
 Lieut.-Gen. (1708), letter of; 36 a.
 Mr.; 53 b.
 Mr., his escape; 88 b.
 F., letter of; 439 a.
 Seynesbury, John, master of Ewelme Hospital; 626 a.
 Seyntlo, William de, gift to; 408 b.
 Seyton, Alexander, of Vruqhairt, charter by; 309 b.
 Shadwell; 233 b, 250 a. minister of; 258 a.
 church; ib.
 Upper, Tippins' Rents, near ye Sun Tavern; 394 a.
 Edwd., letter of; 36 a.
 Shadwell or Shodwell :
 John, v. Abp. of Canterbury (15 Ric. II.); 169 b.
 Sir John, physician to Q. Anne; 50 b.
 Shaftesbury; 220 a, 333 a.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
 — (1673); 255 b.
 — speech of (1677); 219 b.
 — (1753); ib.
 — (1754); 220 a.
 Shaghe, Wm.; 367 b.
 Shakerley :
 Sir Geffery, governor of Chester Castle; 387 b, 388 b, 389 a.
 Peter, of Chester; 361 b.
 — letters of; 392 a, 392 b, 393 a, 393 b.
 — orders signed by; 392 a.
 — M.P. for Chester city; 394 a.
 — letters of; xv., 394 a, 394 b, 395 a, 395 b, 396 a.
 Shakespeare :
 Thomas, of Lutterworth; 435 b.
 — letter of; ib.
 Shaklock, Symon called; 300 b, 301 a.
 Shaldbourne; 262 b.
 Shales :
 Charles, of the Mint; 68 b.
 Philip, petition of; 67 a.
 — of the Mint; 69 a.
 Shandoy, Lord (1604), his players; 428 a.
 Shanky; 608 a.
 Shannon, the river; 602 a.
 Shannon, Earl of :
 Henry Boyle made; 174 b.
 his troop (1663); 507 b, 508 a, 516 b, 537 b, 543 b, 546 b. (1779); 200 b.
 Shannonrock, co. Louth, lands of; 532 a.
 Shanton, lands, &c. in; 423 a.
 Shapcote, Robert, barrister, petition concerning; 502 a, 513 a.
 Shapwick; 150 a, 332 b.
 Sharp, Sharpe : of Moorfields; 157 b.
 Abraham, mathematician, MS. books of; xiii., 636 a.
 Archbishop; 299 b.
 J., Professor of Divinity; 13 a.
 John, of Horton, accounts of; 637 b.
 — letters to; ib.
 —; 119 b.
 Mary, of Little Horton; 637 b.
 Richard; 368 a.
 Thomas, executor of John; 637 b.
 William, of Leicester; 411 a.
 Sharples, —; 629 b.
 Shaw :
 Mr.; 489 b.
 Lieut. J., letter of; 295 b.
 Sir John, letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 38 b.
 — of Eltham; 568 b.
 Shea, —, agent to Duke of Lorraine; 616 a.
 Sheafe, physician; 230 a.
 Shearborne, Richard; 384 b.
 Sheares, Captain; 508 a.
 Shee, William, petition of; 516 b.
 Sheehy, —, execution at Clonmel of; 481 b.
 Sheep Island; 614 b.
 Sheffield, Alice, petition of; 148 a.
 Sheffington, Mr.; 433 b.
 Sheill, Shiell :
 —, his success; 192 b.
 Dr., his wife; 609 a.
 Hugh; ib.
 Dr. Owen; 612 b.
 Shelburne :
 Col., Leinster forces under; 602 a.
 Joseph, letter of; 291 a.
 Earl of, letter of (1763); 285 b.
 — speech of (1779); 206 a.
 — letter of (1780); 288 b.
 Sheldon, Major-Gen., on Duke of Berwick's council; 494 a, 496 b.
 Shelley, Lieut. Wm., certificate by; 438 b.
 Shelly, Major F., letter of; 294 a.
 Shelsley Walsh; 335 a.
 Shelton; 333 b.
 Margaret, wife of Sir Rauf, of Shelton, will of; ib.
 Shenfield, Essex; 137 a.
 Shepert, Mr.; 563 a.
 Shepeye, William of; 413 a.
 Sheppard, Shephard :
 Mr., of East India Company; 393 a.
 Mr., of London; 394 b.
 George, of the "Sampson," petition of; 523 b.
 — petition of; 525 b.
 Mr. J. B., his report on the manuscripts belonging to the dean and chapter of Canterbury; xiv., 315 a, et seq.
 Robert; 342 b.
 S., opinion by; 233 b.
 Capt. Thomas, petition of; 515 b.
 Thomas, Marshal-General, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Will., on Gloucester Committee; 11 b.
 William and N., petition of; 78 a.
 Sheppell, General, at Nice; 195 a.
 Sheppey :
 Isle of; 155 b.
 Leysdown in; 318 b.
 Shepton Mallet; 220 b.
 Sherante; 375 b.
 Sherard, Dr., gift of lands by; 235 a.
 Sherborne; 224 a, 332 a, 335 a. letters dated at; 216 b, 218 a.
 land in; 638 b.
 Lord Bristol at; 216 b, 217 b.
 Castle, Dorset, report on Mr. G. Wingfield Digby's manuscripts at; 213 a.
 Sheridan, Henry, petition of; 507 a.
 Sheringham; 333 b.
 Sherley :
 v. Hawles; 162 b.
 Elizabeth, wife of Thomas, petition of; 162 b.
 Thomas, petition of; 137 a.
 — physician to His Majesty (1671), petition of; 162 b.
 Sir Thomas; 137 a.
 Sherlock :
 r. Annesley, cause of; 51 a.
 Anne, petition of; 500 b.
 alias Fitzgerald, Ann, petition of; 551 a.
 Christopher, father of Sir John; ib.
 Sir John; 500 b, 594 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 Walter, lands held by; 518 a.
 Sherman, John, of Leicester, lease to; 415 a.
 Sherman :
 John le; 367 b.
 Nicholas le; ib.
 William le; ib.
 Sherrard, Lord (1671); 440 a.
 Sherriffe, one they call; 521 b.
 Sherston, co. Wilts; 639 a.
 Shert, Will., of Twinstead, will of; 334 b.
 Sherwin, Mr.; 220 a.
 Sheryngton :
 Walter, Chancellor of Duchy of Lancaster, his testament; 634 a, 634 b.
 his chantries; 634 a.
 Shewyn, Mr.; 94 b.
 Shilletoe, William and Anne, of Castleford; 276 b.
 Shingleton, Robert, extract from will of (1612); 366 a.
 Ship money :
 schedule of assessments upon divers cities, towns, &c. in cos. Chester, Lancaster, &c. (1634); 383 a. decision, the; 190 a.
 Sir John Banks' papers about; 210 a, 210 b.
 arguments against; 584 b.
 Shipbuilding, Act to encourage; 259 b.
 Shipley, Robert, of Dublin; 528 b.
 Shipman, Sir Abraham, deputy-governor of Chester; 384 a.
 Shipping and navigation, Act touching (12 Car. II.); 149 b.

Ships, regulations, &c. concerning. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.
 Shipton, Mr., his book; 231 a.
 Shipwarde, Henry, of Melton Mowbray, letter of; 435 a.
 Shirley :
 E. P., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 Sir Henry, committed to the Fleet; 103 a.
 Lady Fanny; 56 a.
 — letter of; 57 a.
 James; 22 a.
 — lands held by; 520 a.
 Shitlington : estate in; 4 a.
 co. York; 636 a, 636 b.
 — mill, &c. of; ib.
 Adam and Philip of; 636 b.
 co. Lincoln; 333 a.
 Shoe beacon, the; 255 a.
 Shomberg, Mr.; 28 b.
 Shonne, Richard; 403 a.
 Shore :
 Mr.; 288 a.
 J., letters of; 290 a, 293 b.
 John, afterwards Sir John, Lord Teignmouth, letters of; 288 b.
 Shoreditch; 155 a, 157 b.
 Shoreham, rector of; 338 a.
 Shorne :
 Major; 616 b.
 Daniel; 604 a, 604 b.
 Short, Shorte :
 Edward; 545 b.
 Henry, of Limchouse, captive; 241 b.
 John, killed by John de Northampton; 326 a.
 Richard; 367 b.
 Shorter, Sir John, merchant; 256 b.
 Shottum, John de; 367 b.
 Shotwickford; 371 a.
 Shovel :
 Sir Cloudesley; 17 a.
 — letters of; 47 b.
 — of the Trinity House; 260 a.
 — his death; 236 a, 260 a.
 Showers :
 Lt. Col., letters of; 294 b, 295 a.
 Melian, wife of Col., letters of; 294 a, 295 a.
 Shreveham Cristyane, prioress of Littlemore; 266 a.
 Shrewsbury; 332 a, 368 a.
 Duke of, letters of; 16 b, 31 a.
 — (1703); 44 a.
 — (1705); 31 b.
 — (1706); 32 a.
 — (1707); 32 b.
 — (1708); 36 a.
 — (1709); 15 a.
 — Queen Anne and (1710); 43 a.
 — letters of (1710); 37 b, 38 b.
 — letter of (1711); 39 b.
 — letter to (1713); 59 b.
 — letter of (1714); 57 a.
 — (1715); 58 b.
 Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
 John Talbot (1447), Viceroy of Ireland; 493 a, 499 b.
 — (1450); 264 b.
 — (1458); 262 b.
 — George (4 Hen. VII.); 420 a.
 — (1603); 441 a.
 — Gilbert, letter of; ib.
 — amendments to his Bill (1671); 162 b.
 — document signed by (1689); 86 a.
 — (1691); 562 b.
 Countess of (1605); 428 b.
 Shripton, Brigadier, letters of; 32 a.
 Shrines and altars at Canterbury, deeds relating to; 320 a.
 Shriveham, deeds relating to; 262 b.
 Shropham; 334 a.
 Shropshire, Salop; 208 b, 210 a, 379 a. gentlemen of; 219 b.
 Herald's Visitations of; 636 a.
 Shrove Tuesday, order for regulation of sports on; 363 a.
 Shrowder, Everard, of Brene; 361 a.
 Shuldham, Edward, clerk, parson of Thersfield, will of; 334 b.
 Shute or Barrington :
 John; 48 a, 49 a, 50 a, 52 a.
 — letters of; 49 b.
 Shuttleworth, Richard :
 warrants of; 375 b.
 chief justice, co. Denbigh, letter of; 377 a.
 Shylbrede, Sussex, priory; 266 a.
 Shylache, Richard de; 357 a.
 Sibbald, Henry, petition of; 511 a.
 Sibthorpe :
 Lieut. Christo.; 594 a.
 Wm., vicar of Yalding; 329 a.
 Sibten; 333 b.

Sichterman, Col., letter of; 36 a.
 Sicilian war, the; 349 b.
 Sicily : expedition to; 21 a.
 Prince and Viceroy of (1634); 245 b.
 Sideling; 334 b.
 Sidenham, Lord, William (temp. Commonwealth); 94 b, 95 a.
 Sidmouth, Lord (1796), letters of; 296 b.
 Sidney. See Sydney.
 Silk :
 trade with France (1674); 91 a.
 Throwers, Act touching (1668), proviso, &c.; 124 a.
 — Company of London, master and others of, petition of; 124 a.
 — statement touching; 124 a.
 Sill, Robert, licence farmer, petitions of; 512 a.
 Silacra, Laurence, witness; 408 b.
 Silver : mines in Scotland, report, &c. on; 84 b, et seq.
 vessels made at Stebbenheth, inventory of; 635 a.
 and gold coins, &c., papers concerning; 60 b, et seq.
 Silvester :
 Edward, of the Mint; 69 a.
 — smith, of the Ordnance Office; 89 b.
 Thomas, smith to the Mint; 68 b.
 Silvie, Robert, of Leicester; 439 b.
 Simeon, Simon, steward to Duke of Lancaster; 412 a.
 Simms, Capt.; 378 a.
 Simonds, Joh.; 629 b.
 Simons (? Soames); 159 b.
 Simpson :
 Lieut. Chas. L., letter of; 295 a.
 Edward, petition of; 551 b.
 J., letter of; 289 a.
 James, letter of; 288 b.
 Thomas, of Chester; 361 b.
 — town clerk of Chester; 361 b.
 Sinball, Isaac; 142 a.
 Sinclair, John, Scotch rebel, letter of; 49 b.
 Sinderbi, Alan de, witness; 270 a.
 Sing, Singe :
 Edward, Bishop of Limerick; 583 a.
 Francis, lands held by; 520 a.
 — commissioner, co. Louth; 532 a.
 Singleton :
 Henry, made Keeper of the Rolls in Ireland; 179 a.
 — his infirm state; 180 a.
 Sinigaglia, Bishop of; 338 b, 339 a.
 Sinzendorff, Connt. letters of (1705, &c.); 31 b, 36 b, 38 a, 39 b.
 Sion House, Middlesex, letter dated at; 211 b.
 Sisly, of Newton, Robert, son of; 371 a.
 Sissennerne, William de, witness; 1 b.
 Sittingbourne; 353 b.
 vicar of, admonished; 336 b.
 — deprivation of; 337 a.
 Sixeandtwent, Syxeantwendt :
 Simon, witness; 408 a.
 William, witness; ib.
 Skardon, Samuel, letter of; 290 b.
 Skarne lands; 505 a.
 Sleffington :
 R., on Coventry committee; 7 b.
 Thomas, commission to; 417 a.
 Skeld, the river, passing of; 35 a.
 Skelton :
 Mr., in the Tower; 555 b.
 Berill; 146 a.
 — his Naturalization Act; ib.
 Sir Henry, his widow; 246 b.
 Ensign James; 595 a.
 John, of Dublin, petition, &c. of; 528 a, 543 a.
 Richard; 528 a.
 William, petition of; 541 a.
 Skene, Mr. F., his report on, and calendar of, House of Lords' MSS.; viii., 101-174.
 Skeres, —, his wife; 227 a.
 Skerrett :
 Dominick, petition of; 513 a.
 Edmond, petition of; ib.
 Skerries, the rock; 251 a.
 Skerry, the, near Holyhead, lighthouse on, proposed; 395 b.
 Skete :
 Barth., of Wangford, will of; 334 a.
 Gentfrey, of Downham, will of; ib.
 John, senr., of Kersey, will of; ib.
 Skevington, Mr., high sheriff of Leicester; 428 a.
 Skinner, Skynner :
 v. East India Company; ix., 165 a, et seq.
 Mr., consul at Leghorn; 255 b.
 Elizabeth, petition of; 518 b.
 Fredk., examination of; 171 a.
 Henry; 282 a.
 Thomas; 108 b.
 — petitions, &c. of; 107 a, 107 b.
 — merchant, petitions of; 165 a-174 b, passim.
 Vincent, officer of the Exchequer; 361 a.

- Skippon :
 Lord, Philip, payment to (1658) ; 95 a.
 Major-General, gift to ; 429 a.
 Skipton, George, of Pontefract ; 276 a.
- Skipwith :
 Capt. ; 397 b.
 Henry, candidate for Leicester ; 431 b.
 — letter for his instruction ; ib.
 William, letter of ; 441 a.
 — his house at Leicester ; ib.
 William de, chief baron ; 412 b.
 Sir William, his house at Leicester ; 428 b.
 — Burgess for Leicester, deceased ; 435 a.
- Skopam, Edmund, of London, will of ; 335 a.
- Skrymgeour, Nicholas, heir to William ; 307 b.
- Skyres in Wootton, Hampshire ; 263 b, 264 a.
- Slade :
 Lieut.-Colonel ; 591 a.
 — weekly pay of his troop ; 597 a.
- Slains, within tenement of Kinnel ; 300 b.
- Slane :
 garrison at, in 1648 ; 594 a. barony, James II.'s lands in ; 498 a.
- Slaney, Abel, woollen draper, proposed new coinage by ; 75 a, 78 a, 78 b.
- Slater :
 John, defendant ; 551 a.
 — licence farmer, petition of ; 529 a.
- Slaughter :
 Major ; 596 a.
 John, jurymen ; 89 a.
- Slave trade ; 293 a.
- Slaves, royalists sold as ; 500 a, 514 b.
- Slayne, Lieut. ; 592 a.
- Sligo ; 493 b, 495 b, 562 a, 606 a. member for ; 442 a.
 bay of ; 599 a.
- Slinford ; 335 b.
- Slingelandt, M., letters of ; 31 a, 31 b, 32 b, 36 a, 37 a, 40 b.
- Slingsby :
 Col. ; 29 a.
 Lady, of Kippax ; 637 b.
 Mr. ; 219 a, 491 a.
 — of the Mint ; 66 a.
 Anne, petition of ; 140 a.
 Henry ; 151 a.
 — petitions of ; 140 a.
 — of the Mint ; 64 b, 70 b.
 — warrant to ; 86 a.
 Sir Thomas, commissioner ; 275 a.
- Sloane :
 Hans, or Sir Hans, President of the College of Physicians, &c. ; 59 b, 226 b, 231 b, 232 a.
 — letter of ; 57 a.
 — distraint on ; 232 a.
- Slodan, John and Matthew, petition of ; 508 b.
- Sloper :
 Capt., letter of ; 290 a.
 Lt.-Genl., letters of ; 289 b, passim.
 Capt. Granby, letters of ; 290 a, 290 b.
 John, letter of ; 290 a.
 Sir R. ; 288 b.
 Robert, letter of ; 291 a.
- Slothanny, the (prize ship) ; 129 a.
- Slough in Upton ; 332 b.
- Slymbridge, deeds concerning ; 262 b.
- Slyndon, Sussex, manor of ; 342 b, 343 b.
- Small :
 Major, letter of ; 289 a.
 General John, letter of ; 296 a.
- Smallburgh ; 334 a.
- Smalley, Will., alias Hewet, of Coventry, will of ; 332 b.
- Smallwell, John, clerk, of Leicester ; 414 b.
- Smallwood :
 James, tenant in co. Louth ; 519 a.
 W., letter of ; 289 a.
- Smaloyse, J., document signed by ; 301 b.
- Smarden, Kent :
 Schlepyn den in ; 328 a.
 rector of ; 350 a.
- Smart :
 Agnes, wife of John, grocer, of London, will of ; 334 b.
 Lieut. Alexander ; 594 b.
 C., letter of ; 295 b.
- Smethyng, Isabel, of Salisbury, will of ; 333 a.
- Smilan, Mr., aide-de-camp ; 563 a.
- Smith, Smythe, &c. : a witness ; 155 a (note), 156 b.
 Capt. ; 4 b, 6 a, 6 b.
 — collector ; 5 b, 6 b.
 — letter to ; 7 a.
 — ; 603 a.
 Dr., of Oxford ; 227 a.
 Mr., Chancellor of the Exchequer (1709), letter of ; 37 a.
 — ballaster of ships, &c. in Thames ; 120 a, 120 b.
 — mayor of Chester (1597), letters to ; 379 a, 379 b, 380 a.
 Mrs., letter of ; 57 a.
- Smith, Smythe, &c.—cont.
 Lieut. Abraham ; 591 b.
 Anne, of Pontefract ; 276 b.
 B. Piercy, soldier ; 548 a.
 Barnaby, waterman ; 279 b.
 Bernard ; 249 b.
 Charles, his History of Kerry ; 572 b, 583 b.
 Daniel, petition of ; 252 a.
 Capt. Daniell ; 592 b, 598 b.
 Edward, letter of ; 295 a.
 — cooper ; 250 b.
 — of Ormonde's guard of Battle-axes ; 521 b, 541 b.
 — his answer to petition ; 529 a.
 Sir Edward, priest, of Wakefield ; 637 a.
 Erasmus, adventurer ; 99 a.
 — petitions of ; 501 a, 527 b, 549 b.
 Lieut.-Col. George, at Navan ; 514 a, 523 a, 525 a.
 Capt. George ; 537 a.
 George ; 385 b.
 — letters of ; 239 b, 294 a.
 Ensign George ; 594 a.
 Gilbert, of Swythland, alleged sorceries of ; 436 a.
 Henry, of Oxford ; 430 b.
 Capt. Henry ; 597 a.
 J., letters of ; 36 a, 38 b.
 — warrant signed by ; 66 b.
 James, of the Excise, co. Chester ; 386 a, 386 b.
 — petition of ; 386 a.
 Major James, letter of ; 292 b.
 James B., letter of ; 295 a.
 Sir Jeremy ; 128 b, 129 a.
 — letter of ; 131 b.
 — of the Trinity House ; 255 a.
 John, of Bulmer, will of ; 335 b.
 — of Cawood ; 276 b.
 — of Sherborne, letter of ; 218 a.
 — of Sheringham, will of ; 333 b.
 — waterman ; 279 b.
 — farmer of Excise, petitions of ; 519 b, 587 b.
 — of Albemarle's regiment ; 529 b.
 — master gunsmith, in Ireland ; 541 b.
 Ensign John ; 592 b.
 Joshua, of Pontefract ; 276 a.
 Major Lewis, letters of ; 294 a, 294 b.
 Matthew, of Chester ; 396 b.
 — declaration of ; 396 a.
 Meyles, quartermaster ; 595 b.
 Miles, false coiner ; 534 b.
 Millysent ; 379 a.
 Nathaniel, letter of ; 294 b.
 Olyver ; 374 a.
 Peircy, petition of ; 506 a.
 Capt. R. ; 544 a.
 Ensign Raph. ; 591 a.
 Lieut. Richard ; 541 b.
 Richard, tailor, petition of ; 548 a.
 — Quaker, of Chester ; 389 b.
 — of Chipping Norton, will of ; 334 b.
 — of Bungay, will of ; 333 b.
 Robert, receiver for Cornwall, petition of ; 245 b.
 Ensign Robert ; 592 b.
 Robert Orme, letters of ; 289 b, 290 a, 292 b.
 Roger, deceased, agreement of ; 371 b.
 — sheriff of co. Leicester ; 433 b.
 Stephen, of Bromham ; 5 a.
 Symon ; 380 a.
 — of Long Melford, will of ; 333 a.
 T., document signed by ; 65 a.
 Sir Thomas, letters of ; 58 b.
 — letter of ; 237 a.
 — the elder, alderman of Chester, agreement of ; 371 b.
 — mayor of Chester (1596) ; 377 b.
 — letters of and to ; 377 b, 378 a.
 — sheriff of Chester ; 386 b.
 — ; 363 b, 389 a.
 — letters of ; 288 b, 389 a, 400 a.
 — letter to ; 388 a.
 William, of Leicester ; 420 b.
 — of Dublin ; 528 b.
 — of Liston, will of ; 335 a.
 Ensign Wm. ; 592 b.
- Smith's Bill (1671) amendments ; 161 b.
- Smithick v. East India Co. ; 170 b.
- Smithsby, Thomas, deceased, executors of, petitions, &c. of ; 136 a.
- Smithwick, Cornwall ; 247 b.
- Smolensk, governor of ; 23 a.
- Smollett :
 Mr. ; 286 a.
 Sir James, of Bonhill ; 310 a.
 Tobias, his son ; ib.
 Dr. Tobias, his History ; 465 a, 469 a, 471 a.
 — his notice of Dr. Warner's history ; 478 a.
 — his "Critical Review" ; 489 b.
- Smullane, John, petition of ; 518 b.
- Smyly, Lieut. Rich. ; 391 b.
- Smyrna fleet, the ; 561 a, 561 b, 562 a, 563 a.

- Snaith, co. York ; 275 b.
 Snape, prior and priory of ; 625 b.
 Snawell, Sedde ; 271 a.
 Sneed, Peter ; 383 b.
 Sneed, Richard, petition of ; 381 b.
 Sneed, Wm., murager of Chester, book of receipts and payments of ; 369 b.
 Sneyd, Rev. W., MSS. of ; xxii.
 Snodgrass, Ensign W., letter of ; 294 a.
 Snow, Mrs. ; 24 a.
 Soames, James ; 159 a.
 Mrs. ; 156 b, 159 a.
 Sobieski, King John ; 464 a.
 Soekhon, Daniel, of London, merchant ; 13 a.
 Sodbury Market [Chipping], Old and Little, freeholders, &c. of, petition of ; 119 a.
 Sodwell, Thos. ; 154 a.
 Soff, Col., letter of ; 40 a.
 Soham ; 335 a.
 Soignies, camp of, letter dated at ; 25 a.
 Soissons ; 62 a.
 Soke, Winchester ; 332 b, 335 a.
 Solares, Col., letter of ; 36 a.
 Sold ; 29 b.
 Soldiers, impressment of recruits ; 393 b, 394 a, 395 a, 395 b.
 Solomon, Temple of, in England ; 263 b.
 Somerledey, Robert de, his widow ; 408 b.
 Somerfeldt, M., letter of ; 37 b.
 Somerley :
 William ; 121 b.
 — note by ; ib.
 Somers, Lord :
 letters of (1698) ; 582 b.
 letter of (1708) ; 36 a.
 in the Privy Council (1708) ; 51 b.
 letter of (1709) ; 37 a.
 letters of (1710) ; 38 b.
 Duchess of Marlborough's remarks on ; ib.
 Somerset, county records ; xxiii.
 documents relating to ; 265 a.
 Somerset, Duke of :
 in the Tower (temp. Ed. VI.) ; 87 b, 88 b.
 Edmund ; 581 a.
 letters of (1705) ; 31 b.
 — (1706) ; 32 a.
 — (1707) ; 32 b.
 (1708) ; 52 a, 53 a.
 letter of ; 36 a.
 letter of (1709) ; 37 a.
 letters of ; 54 a.
 Somerset :
 Duchess of, letters of ; 54 a.
 Earl and Countess of, their arraignment ; 584 b.
 Lord John (1667) ; 111 a.
 Somerton ; 220 b.
 Hall, near Yarmouth ; 258 a.
 Roger de, v. Prior of Buthele ; 168 a, 172 a.
 Sommer William, petition of ; 507 b.
 Sonde, John, of Southwold, will of ; 333 b.
 Sonnerbury, manor of ; 635 a.
 Sonning ; 333 a.
 Sonnyngwelle Park, Windsor forest, grant of keepership of ; 282 a.
 Sootes ; 414 a.
 Sootherton, Mr. ; 228 a.
 Sophia :
 Electress of Hanover, letters of ; 31 a.
 Princess, letters of ; 54 a.
 Sorell, John, of Wisbeach, will of ; 332 a.
 Sothorn :
 George, of Katam, conveyance by ; 272 a.
 — deed by ; ib.
 Sothworth, John, mayor of Chester (temp. Hen. VI.) ; 367 b.
 Souch, Kent de, castle of ; 411 a.
 South, Oliver, of Drogheda, petition of ; 533 b.
 South Shields :
 ballast shore at ; 244 a, 244 b.
 wharf at ; 245 a, 245 b.
 Southacre ; 333 b.
 Southam, Thomas de, Archdeacon of Oxford ; 318 b.
 Southampton ; 63 b, 395 b.
 document dated from ; 395 b.
 port of ; 94 a.
 God's House at, records of ; xxiii.
 St. Michaels ; 103 b.
 St. Lawrence ; ib.
 Holy Rhodes ; ib.
 St. John's ; ib.
 Act for uniting of churches, &c. of ; ib.
 All Saints or All Hallows ; ib.
 proposed free port ; 247 b.
 Southampton, Earl of :
 title (temp. Eliz.) ; 94 a.
 (1604) ; 98 a.
 William, chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (temp. Chas. I.) ; 418 b.
 T., order by (1661) ; 90 a.
 (1666) ; 106 a.
 and Asbley, T., letter of ; 387 a.
 Southchurch, manor of ; 318 b, 322 b.
 Southerey, Simon ; 2 a.
 Southesk, Earl of, MSS. of ; xxii.
 Southworth, John, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to ; 359 b.
 Southick, Peter ; 109 a. certificate touching ; 109 a.
 Southill, minister of ; 5 b.
 Southwark ; 78 a, 155 a, 155 b, 156 a, 158 a, 250 a, 251 b, 323 a.
 Winchester House ; 158 a.
 deeds relating to ; 265 a.
 election in (1708) ; 32 b.
 petition from ; 78 b.
 message in ; 263 a.
 Bankside ; 156 a.
 Blackman Street ; 258 a.
 Horsemonger Lane ; ib.
 Swan Yard ; ib.
 Bridge Street ; 323 a.
 St. Mary's Convent ; ib.
 St. George's ; 126 a, 332 a.
 St. George's Church, Green Dragon, near ; 249b
 St. Margaret's ; 333 a.
 St. Mary Magdalen ; 335 a.
 St. Mary Overy ; 332 a.
 St. Mary Overy Abbey ; 265 b.
 St. Olave's ; 332 b, 334 b, 335 b, 635 a.
 St. Saviour's ; 259 a.
 St. Thomas's Hospital ; 256 b.
 Bishop of, MSS. of ; xxii.
 Southwell, cathedral ; 276 b.
 Southwell :
 Col. letter to ; 17 a.
 — letter of ; 36 a.
 Mr., letters of ; 30 b.
 — late Secretary for Ireland ; 180 a.
 Bowen, usher of the Black Rod ; 192 b.
 Lady E., letters of ; 54 a.
 Richard, his lauds in Limerick ; 498 b.
 Sir Richard, surveyor (temp. Henry VIII.) ; 93 a.
 — grant to ; 94 a.
 Sir Thomas, letters of ; 58 b.
 William, letter of ; 40 a.
 Southwiche, Southwicke, Thomas, trooper ; 547 a.
 Southwold ; 256 b, 333 b.
 haven ; 239 a, 245 a.
 Southworth, Will., grocer, of London, will of ; 333 a.
 Sovereign, the ship ; 247 b.
 Spaight, Thomas, a captive ; 245 a.
 Spain ; 376 a, 394 b. treaty with England, Austria, and Milan (1604) ; 95 a.
 English trade with (1604) ; 95 a, et seq.
 inquisition of, English merchants and ; 97 a. ambassador from (1608), letter of ; 213 a. embassy of Sir John, afterwards Lord Digby, in ; 213 a, et seq.
 the English match with ; ib.
 merchants trading for, petition of ; 112 a.
 custom touching debtors in (1670) ; 152 b.
 papers relating to negotiations with (1750) ; 284 a.
 and the Low Countries (1684) ; 31 a. coinage, &c. of ; 63 a, 73 a.
 English merchants in (1702) ; 27 a. war in, account of ; 60 a.
 Lord Peterborough in (1706) ; 16 a, 17 a.
 English troops in (1708) ; 19 b, 32 b.
 estimate of English forces for (1709) ; 37 b.
 Irish transported to ; 95 a. expected invasion of Ireland (1779) ; 201 a, 202 a.
 notes of a tour in ; 193 a, 193 b.
 King of, Melids or Miletus ; 602 b.
 — (1600) ; 283 b.
 — his assistance to Chas. II. ; 28 b, 30 a.
 — and the Netherlands (1691) ; 561 b, 564 b.
 — his death ; 12 a.
 — letters of (1707) ; 27 a.
 — letter of (1709) ; 36 b.
 — letter of (1710) ; 38 a.
 — letters of (1705) ; 31 a.
 — (1706) ; 51 b.
 Queen of (circ. 1586) ; 282 a.
 Prince Philip of, letter of ; 35 b.
 Spanheim :
 Baron or Mons. ; 34 a.
 — letters of (1705, &c.) ; 31 b, 32 b, 36 b, 38 b.
 Spaniards, the, prisoner taken by ; 217 b.
 Spanish :
 Armada, the, prayers for deliverance from ; 374 b.
 cloth, Act for better regulating manufacture of ; 113 b, 123 b, 126 a.
 Spann or Spanne, Edward ; 386 a, 386 b.
 Spanner, Edward ; 385 b.
 Spark, Robt., of Chester ; 361 b.
 Sparke, Will., of Fakenham, will of ; 335 a.
 Sparkes, Mr., preacher, of Leicester ; 425 b.
 Sparr, Baron, letters of (1706-8) ; 32 a, 36 a.

Sparrow :

- John, petition of; 102 b.
- Robert, petition of; 241 a.
- mayor of King's Lynn, letter of; 392 a.
- letter to; 392 a.

Speakers of Irish House of Commons, papers, &c. relating to;

174 b, et seq.

Speed, H., letter of; 571 a.

Speedwell, Her Majesty's ship (1704); 393 b.

Speke, Peter, letters of; 288 b, 289 b, 290 b, 292 b, 293 b, 294 a, 294 b.

Spence :

- Capt. Francis, petition of; 511 a.
- Thomas, stockfishmonger, of London, will of; 334 b.

Spencer :

- Lord, the late (1795); 57 b.
- letter of (1806); 233 b.
- Lady, her rents; 5 a.
- Mr., his will; 566 b, 567 a.
- the Duchess of Marlborough's legacy to; 567 a.
- Earl, MSS. of; xxii.
- Colonel, at Galway; 523 b.
- Hons. Chas. and John, at Eton; 13 b.
- their expenses; 54 a.
- Lord Charles, his motion (1734); 57 b.
- Lady Diana, letters to; 54 a.
- letter of; 57 a.
- Sir Edward; 115 a.
- Col. John; 536 a.
- petition of; 532 b.
- John, letters of; 51 b.
- Richard; 373 b.
- registrar of Canterbury; 634 b.
- Thos. le; 367 b.
- Hon. William; 13 b.
- chronology by; 22 b.
- petition of; 151 b.
- of Leicester, conveyance by; 413 b.
- licence to; 413 b.
- conveyance to; 414 a.

Spens :

- John, of Maristonn, witness; 308 b.
- Maurice of, grant to; 305 a.

Spenser :

- John, rector of St. Elphege, Canterbury, will of; 340 a.
- President of Corp. Ch., Oxford; 435 a.
- Thomas, of Downham Hithe, will of; 333 b.
- William, of Stamford, will of; 332 a.

Sperlynge, Andrew, pardon to; 625 a.

Sperte, Sir Thomas, comptroller of the King's ships; 260 b.

Spicer, Col., letters of; 40 a.

Spiegel, M., letters of; 38 b.

Spigurnel, Dame Elizabeth, of Selgrave; 330 a.

Spindola :

- in Kilkeny; 604 b.
- his death; ib.

Spinning work at Leicester for the poor; 430 b.

Spinola, order by; 214 a.

Spires, Bishop of (1711), letter of; 40 a.

Spithead; 34 b.

Spittal Boughton, hospital at; 380 b, 383 a.

Spourior, Roger, chamberlain of Leicester; 413 a.

Spottiswood, John, of that ilk; 315 a.

Spring :

- Edmond, petitions of; 107 a.
- Act touching; ib.

Sproston :

- Robert; 365 b.
- mayor of Chester; 383 b.

Sprot :

- Aldwin, witness; 330 a.
- Thomas and Juliana, of Mersham, corrody to; 343 a.

Sproston; 334 a.

Spry, Capt., letter of; 295 b.

Spurn Head; 247 b, 250 b, 251 a, 255 a, 255 b, 256 a, 256 b, 258 b.

Spurrier, Wm.; 101 b.

Spycer, John, of Tedbury, will of; 334 b.

Spynk, John, of Cromer, will of; 334 a.

Squibb :

- v.* the King, writ of error; 136 b.
- Edmond; 123 b.
- Lawrence, letter of; 338 a.

Stable, Walter, of Orpington, will of; 335 a.

Stables, John, letters of; 289 b, 290 a.

Staci, John; 637 a.

Staeke, Henry; 545 b.

Staff, the, privilege of; 318 b.

Stafferton, Richard, warrant to; 282 a.

Staffhorst, M. de, letters of; 32 a.

Stafford :

- discharged from being sanctuary for malefactors; 370 b.
- county; 208 b.
- archdeacon of, agreement by; 266 a.
- Viscount (1670); 139 b.
- and Lady, their tenants; 148 a.
- Viscountess, Mary (1670); 139 b.

Stafford—cont.

- Earls of (15th century), Hugh and Thomas; 329 b.
- Lord, his estate (1644); 5 a.
- Sir W. Howard, his estate (1644); 6 a.
- his creditors; 11 a.
- Mr., of Elphin; 464 a.
- Sir Edwd., mem. touching grant of offices to; 282 b.
- Capt. Fraunces; 398 b.
- Henry, Duke of Buckingham; 265 b.
- Hugh, of Elphin; 466 b.

Stage plays and players; 112 a, 364 a.

Stagisden, co. Bedford, manor; 149 a.

Stain, M. de, letter of; 38 b.

Stainbancke, Wm.; 383 b.

Staines; 155 b.

Staines, Dr., "Commissary General under the usurpers" (1671); 163 a.

Stainswick, manor of, deeds concerning; 262 b.

Stair :

- Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Lord or Earl of, review before; 12 b.
- his election in Scotland (1706); 53 b.
- letter of (1708); 36 a.
- letter of (1710); 38 a.
- envoy (1711); 39 a.
- letter of (1711); 40 a.
- letter of (1712); ib.
- letter to (1714); 27 a.
- letters of (1715); 23 b, 40 b.
- letters of (1716); 1 a, 41 a.
- letter of (1717); 40 b.
- letters of; 54 a.
- (1735); 63 b.

Stakes, near Havant, Hampshire; 376 b.

Stalbridge; 335 a.

Stalgate, John, of St. Lawrence, will of; 340 a.

Stallin, J., letter of; 282 b.

Stalou, Joan, of Norwich, will of; 333 b.

Stamford; 332 a.

deeds relating to; 264 b.

aldermen, &c. of, Richard II.'s writ to; 412 b.

New Place, near; 265 b.

Earl of (1642), Henry, warrant by; 437 a.

— petition of (1668); 117 a.

— (1671); 440 a.

— letter of (1709); 47 a.

Viscountess of, Ann, petition of (1668); 117 a.

Lient., letter of; 293 a.

John, mayor of Leicester; 432 b.

Stamp Office, the, Sir R. Steele at; 1 a.

Stampe, Comte, letters of; 38 b.

Stampu, Comte, letter of; 37 b.

Stamport; 240 a, 240 b, 242 b.

Standish, Wm.; 116 b.

Standley, —; 613 b.

Stanenbrugge, the; 358 a.

Stanes, Cornet John; 596 a.

Stanfast, Walter, alderman of Bristol, letter of; 380 a.

Stanfeilde, John; 375 b.

Stanford; 414 a.

town of; 271 a.

an Irishman; 16 b.

John, of Leicester; 417 a.

— commission to; ib.

Stanfordbrugge, near Chester; 358 a.

Stanforth, James and John; 8 b.

Stangenbergh; 26 b.

Stanground, John, monk; 625 b.

Stanhope :

co. Durham; 105 a.

Lord, letter to (1606); 380 b.

— warrant by (1717); 76 b.

— (1720); 50 a.

Dr., lecturer of Deptford; 260 a.

— Dean of Canterbury; 260 b.

Brigadier, envoy to Spain; 47 a.

General, letter of; 16 a.

Major-General, letters of; 32 a.

— his going to Spain (1708); 19 a.

Mr.; 18 a, 20 a, 27 a.

— letters of; 16 b, 31 b, 33 a, 36 b, 38 a, 47 b, 57 a.

— letter to; 59 a.

— his embassy (1714); 14 a.

— at Paris (1728); 62 a.

A., envoy extraordinary, instructions to; 13 a.

C., letter of; 76 b.

— menu. by; 77 a.

Charles, deceased; 125 a.

E. F., letter of; 290 b.

Edward, commission to; 432 a.

James, letters of; 17 a, 36 a, 40 a, 40 b, 58 a.

— letters to; 58 a.

Mary; 170 b.

— widow, petitions of; 125 a, 125 b.

— order on; 125 b.

Stanian, A., letters of; 47 b.

Stanislaus, King of Poland; 34 a, 286 a.

- Stanlawe, Whalley de, documents of; 581 a.
 Stanlay alias Walne, W., transcriber; 420 a.
 Stanley:
 Lord (temp. Hen. VI.); 367 b.
 Mr., candidate for Lymington; 63 a.
 Ensign Charles; 591 a.
 Sir Charles, Act to enable trustees to make leases, &c.; 110 a.
 — Act touching children and estate of; 112 b.
 Edward, of Ewlow, co. Flint; 396 b.
 Frances, recusant; 435 b.
 J., letter of; 24 a.
 — of the Mint, petition of; 80 a.
 — letters of; 82 a.
 — report by; 68 a.
 — receipt of; 70 a.
 Sir John, of; 370 b.
 — of the Mint; 61 a.
 John, merchant, of Dublin; 524 b.
 Cornet Michael; 516 a.
 Randal, captain of the Isle of Man; 376 b.
 — letter of free passage given by; 377 b.
 Thos., certificate signed by; 374 a.
 Sir Thomas, of Stanley; 415 b.
 — sheriff of Waterford, petitions of; 501 b, 543 a.
 — appointed mayor of Chester; 361 b.
 Captain Thomas; 591 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 b.
 Thomas, of the Mint; 65 b.
 William, letter of; 433 a.
 Stannere, Wm. and Margaret, of Chester; 368 a.
 Stannard, Eaton, made Prime Sergeant; 179 a.
 Stannaries, Wardens of the; 91 b.
 Stanoiard, Lieut. Rich.; 591 b.
 Stanton:
 v. Holgate; 161 a;
 Mr.; 9 a.
 Charley, carpenter, indenture by; 257 a.
 Penelope, widow, petition of; 161 a.
 Stanwardyn, Richard, draper, of Coventry, will of; 333 a.
 Stanyan, Mr., envoy; 27 a, 49 b. letters of; 31 b, 32 a, 35 b, 38 a, 39 a.
 Stanwood and Muchells, Lord Fraser of; 299 b, 303 b.
 Staple:
 Kent, manor of; 330 a.
 Margery, inq. post mortem of; 262 b.
 Staplehill, Walter, petition of; 500 b, 533 a.
 Staplehurst, lands in; 329 a.
 Stapleton, Stapilton:
 Mr., a preacher; 210 b.
 Bryan, prior; 271 a.
 Sir Henry; 151 a.
 John, petition of; 159 b.
 — letter of; 160 a.
 Sir Philip, deceased; 159 b.
 Richard de, witness; 270 b.
 Stapylidon, Walter, Bp. of Exeter; 351 b.
 Star Chamber, the; 61 a, 209 b, 210 a, 210 b, 217 a, 226 a, 229 b, 239 a, 244 a, 247 a, 417 b, 582 b, 584 a, 584 b.
 Starch; 398 b.
 Starenberg:
 Marshal, in Spain; 19 b.
 his relation of battle near Brihnege (1711); 40 a.
 Staresmore or Starsmore:
 Wortley, Lady, &c.; 163 a.
 Edmund; 163 a, 163 b.
 — answer of; 163 b.
 Starkey, Peter, Rice Williams v.; 371 b.
 Starr, Robert, petition of; 123 a.
 Starre, James, of Rawden, co. York; 383 a.
 Start, Lieut., letter of; 289 a.
 States General, the:
 letters of; 35 b, 37 a.
 their deputies at Brussels, &c., letters of; 35 b, 37 a, 39 b.
 letter to (1709); 37 b.
 extracts from resolutions of; ib.
 resolutions of (1711); 40 a.
 Statford, Lieut. Thomas; 591 b.
 Statutes, the, suggested public reading of in church; 138 a.
 Staughton:
 letters dated at; 11 a.
 Little, co. Bedford; 3 a.
 Parva, assessment at; 10 a.
 Staunton:
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Robert, deputy steward of Leicester; 415 a.
 Staverton, Edward; 284 a.
 Stawell, Mrs., letter of; 57 a.
 Stearne:
 Col., letters of; 38 b.
 James, Archdeacon of Limerick; 583 a.
 John, Bishop of Clogher; 580 b.
 — MSS. presented to Trinity College, Dublin, by; 572 a.
 Stebbing, lordship of; 415 a.
 Stebonheath or Stebbenhethe:
 in the Tower Hamlets; 247 b. silver vessels made at; 635 a.
 Stebonheath or Stebbenhethe—cont.
 Hakeney and Haryngeye, manors of; 635 a.
 Stedman, Mr., 162 b.
 Steedwell, John; 279 b.
 Steel, Steele:
 Mr., and the public news; 35 b.
 Owen; 383 b.
 Richard or Sir Richard, letters of; xi., 1 a, 23 b, 49 b.
 — letters to; 23 b.
 — petitions of; 24 a.
 — elected for Wendover; 49 b.
 Steeple Morden; 332 b.
 Steevens, Anthony; 279 a.
 Steingbens, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Stella, Comte, letters of; 38 b, 40 a.
 Stenboch, Comte, letters of; 38 b.
 Stepe, John, prior of Selborne; 264 a.
 Stephen:
 King, charters, &c. of; 318 b.
 W., letters of; 49 a.
 W. E., drawing by; 296 b.
 William, his son recommended to Magdalen College; 268 b.
 Stephens:
 Dr.; 56 a.
 Edward, of the Shipwrights Company; 261 a.
 Frances; 136 a.
 Major John; 594 a.
 Sir John, Governor of Dublin Castle; 512 b.
 — his case with Erasmus Smyth; 549 b.
 Oliver, proceedings of; 603 a, 603 b.
 — his death; 603 b.
 Richard; 136 a.
 — soldier; 527 b.
 Robert, suit of; 6 a.
 Sir Thomas, petition of; 119 a.
 William, letter of; 385 a.
 Stepney; 249 a, 250 a, 250 b.
 document dated at; 253 b.
 parishioners of, application by; 237 a.
 manor; 102 b.
 — tenants of; 243 b.
 Trinity House at; 254 b, 258 b.
 Mr., letters of; 31 a, 31 b, 32 a.
 —, Commissioner of Trade; 34 a.
 Mrs., letter of; 40 a.
 Sterling, Capt. Robert, petition of his widow Jane; 515 a, 517 a.
 Sterne:
 Mr., letters of; 49 a.
 John, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
 Lieut. Robert; 593 b.
 Sterrop, Ralp, spectacle maker, of London; 635 a.
 Sterton, co. York; 271 a.
 Stetter, Comte, letter of; 37 b.
 Steuky Hall, Norfolk; 122 b.
 Stevemouth, Kent; 248 a.
 Stevenage, Col., letter of; 36 a.
 Stevens:
 Francis; 148 a.
 Nicholas, fined; 632 a.
 Richard, of Broadway, will of; 335 b.
 Stevenson:
 General, governor of Kilmallocke; 601 a.
 — his death; 601 b.
 John, of Mountsorrel; 414 a.
 Thomas, collections by; 583 a.
 Stevynson, Thomas, parson of West Wrotham, will of; 333 b.
 Steventon, co. Bedford; 103 a.
 Steward, Stewart. See Stuart.
 Stewart, Sir M. R. Shaw, Bart., MSS. of; xxii.
 Stickney; 333 a.
 Stiles, John; 375 a.
 Still:
 John; 150 a.
 — answer of; ib.
 Mabel; ib.
 — answer of; ib.
 Still Vett, letter dated at; 216 a.
 Stillorgan, near Dublin; 502 a, 512 a.
 Stirling; 40 b, 304 b, 497 a. documents dated at; 40 b, 298 b, 306 b, 307 a, 344 b, 350 a. camp at, letter dated from; 40 b.
 Castle; 313 b.
 chapel royal of; 309 a.
 the Hessians at; 313 b.
 Alva, near; 84 b, et seq.
 Earl of IV., commission to; 2 b.
 Lieut.-Col., letter of; 292 b.
 Major, letters of; 294 a, 295 a.
 Miss M. E., MSS. of; xxii.
 Stirriling, Luke, infirmity of; 309 b.
 Stisted, Essex, manor of; 318 b, 322 b.
 Stockbury church; 339 a.
 Stockholm, letter dated at; 24 b.
 Stocks, the; 115 a.

- Stockton, Stockton :
Hugo de; 405 b.
Robertus de, witness; 408 b.
Thomas, lands held by; 520 b.
- Stoddan Willey, hundred of; 3 b.
- Stodley, Henry de, saddler, of Worcester; 638 a.
- Stoughton, Peter de, conveyance to; 413 b.
- Stok', Radulph de; 356 b.
- Stoke :
Kent; 233 b.
College; 332 b.
-by-Clare; 332 a.
juxta Guildford; 334 b, 635 a.
Nayland; 332 b.
Newington; 441 a.
South, Oxon; 334 b.
- Stokedale, Will., dean of the College of Leicester, will of; 333 a.
- Stokes :
sheepfolds at; 235 a.
Adrian, commissions to; 416 b, 417 a.
Elizabeth, of Worcester; 638 a, 639 b.
Kitty, natural daughter of Sir R. Sloper; 288 b.
Robert and Joan; 273 a.
Thomas, of Worcester; 638 a, 639 b.
- Stokyll, John, of Ashfield, will of; 334 a.
- Stokys :
Alice, of Send, will of; 332 a.
Robert, of Melbourne, will of; 335 b.
- Stombridge, William, letter of; 385 b.
- Stone by Ospringe, Kent :
Elverton in; 329 b, 330 a.
Semannus atte; 329 b. church of; 330 a.
- Stone :
Mr.; 221 b.
— his foundation school; 76 b.
Francis; 143 a.
George, D.D., Archbishop of Armagh, his rapid promotion; 176 a.
— his tactics to gain power; 176 b, et seq.
— his private character assailed; 177 a.
— opposition of the Cabal to; 177 a, et seq.
— Lord Hartington's conduct towards; 179 b.
— Lord Northumberland and; 191 b.
— Lord Taaffe and; 455 a.
— his sermon before the House of Lords (1759); 465 a.
— letters to (1760); 466 b.
— his death; 191 b.
— O'Connor's opinion of (1761); 467 a.
John, muster-master; 11 b.
- Stonehampton (?), co. York; 271 a.
- Stonehouse or Stonhouse, John, letters of; 290 b, 294 a.
- Stoneleigh; 7 b.
- Stonton Wyvill; 423 a.
- Stonyhurst; 384 b.
College, MSS. of; xxiii.
- Stootford, manor of; 635 a.
- Storf, M., letter of; 37 b.
- Storke, Ensign Nicholas; 593 b.
- Stortford; 333 a.
- Story :
Edward, Bp. of Chichester, will of; 334 b.
— his death; 335 b.
- Stothir, the, document dated at; 308 a.
- Stonbridge, tithes of; 11 a.
- Stoughton :
George, of Dublin, petition of; 530 a.
Sir John, seal of; 639 a.
- Stour, the river; 320 b.
- Stourmouth mill; 324 b.
- Stourton, John, of Preston; 639 a.
- Stow, West; 335 a.
- Stow's Survey of London, new edition of; 260 a.
- Stowell, Lord, letter of (1821); 287 b.
- Stowmarket; 333 a.
- Strabane, Viscount, dissent by; 59 a.
- Strachan :
David, of Westminster; 301 a.
John, of Thornton; 301 a.
— of Monboddo; ib.
- Strachey :
Sir Edw., Bart., MSS. of; xxii.
Henry, letter of introduction for; 295 a.
— letter of; 295 b.
- Stradbally :
lands in; 509 a.
surrender of; 609 a.
friars of; 608 b.
- Stradherlyng, lands of; 307 a.
- Strafford, Earl of :
Thomas, lord lieutenant of Ireland (1639); 209 b.
his propositions to Charles I.; 583 a. attainder of; 584 b.
trial of; 210 b, 217 b.
Charles I.'s consent to his execution; 176 b.
his beheading; 610 a.
- Strafford, Earl of—cont.
notice of; 234 a.
list of his troop (1648); 596 b.
Wm., petition, &c. of (1670); 143 a.
letter of (1711); 39 b.
a plenipotentiary (1713); 41 a.
master of the Trinity House (1713); 260 b.
letter of (1714); 57 a.
- Stragvaguehoe, co. Cavan; 602 a.
- Straiton, George, of that ilk; 301 a.
- Stralock; 45 b.
- Strampeshangh; 333 b.
- Strange :
Abraham, petition of; 544 b.
Peter, of Dunkitt; 514 b.
- Strangford, Viscount (temp. Chas. II.), bills for sale of his lands; 106 a, 141 a.
- Stranhaver, his regiment; 33 b.
- Strasbourg, letter dated at; 552 a.
- Stratford; 332 b, 334 a.
- Stratford-on-Avon; 334 b.
- Stratharie, Streharie, co. Fife; 307 b, 308 a, 308 b.
- Strathmore, Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Strathuair, Lord, letter of (1710); 38 b.
- Strathnaver, Lord, letter of (1709); 37 b.
- Strathspey; 312 a.
- Stratton, co. Bedford, manor; 3 a.
- Rob. de; 339 b.
- Straw :
Richard; 278 b.
— jnnr.; ib.
- Streatham, document dated from; 285 a.
- Street :
Henry, trooper; 521 b.
Humphry, petition against; 245 a.
Lawrence, letter of; 386 a.
Wm., of Chester, alderman and mayor; 361 b, 390 a, 390 b, 403 a.
— letters of; 389 a.
— commission to; 362 a.
- Strelley :
Nicholas; 123 a.
Park, co. Nottingham; 123 a.
- Strete, —, parson of Heswall; 374 a.
- Strettell, Edward, letter of; 294 a.
- Stretton :
Wm. de; 367 b.
Ynon de, of Leicester; 405 b.
- Streyn :
Richard, of Broadway, will of; 335 a.
Robert, of Broadway, will of; 335 b.
- Stribblehill, Francis and John; 51 a.
- Strichan, Lord, Scotch judge (1736); 311 b.
- Strick, Madame, letter of; 38 b.
- Strickland :
Lord, Walter, payment to (1658); 95 a.
Mrs., her right with Queen Mary; 553 b.
Sir Robert, commissioner; 275 a.
Sir Thomas, commissioner; ib.
W. C. Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
Walter; 106 a.
— petition of; ib.
— commissioner; 275 a.
- Stringer, Sir Thomas, of the Tower; 89 a.
- Stripe, John, editor of Stowe's Survey; 260 a. See Strype.
- Strinclin, John de, witness; 304 b.
- Strode :
Mr., relation by; 28 b.
Col. John, governor of Dover Castle; 257 a. of Hove, dioc. Chichester, will of; 335 a.
Margaret, Act for disposing of house and lands belonging to sisters of; 140 a.
- Strodes, St. Mary of; 235 a.
- Strokestown; 466 b, 471 b.
- Stroud, Major Joseph, his company; 521 b.
- Strowd :
Mr., servant to the Lord Deputy of Ireland 381 a.
Thomas, his daughter; 6 a.
- Strowthir, document dated at; 308 b.
- Struther, documents dated at; 306 b, 307 a.
- Struthers, estate of; xvii., 304 a.
- Strype, his edition of Stow's Survey; 236 a, 260 a.
- Stuart, Steward, Stewart :
Admiral; 315 a.
Col., letter of; 37 b.
— his capture by the "Seiks"; 294 b.
Ensign, letter of; 295 b.
Lieut.-Col.; 289 a.
— letters of; 294 b.
Mr., letters to; 277 a, 287 a.
Mr. Alex. Charles, of Eaglescarnie, Mr. Fraser's report on manuscripts of; 310 b.
Andrew, of Logie-cowie; 301 a.
Arabella, viewing of her corpse; 226 a, 228 b.
— cause of her death; xiv., 229 a.
Charles, letter of; 296 a.

Stuart, Steward, Stewart—cont.

- Capt. Charles, letter of; 295 b.
 Hon. Charles, letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 293 a, 293 b, 294 a.
 Charles, of the Mint, case of; 69 a.
 Charles (i.e., Chas. II.) Act prohibitory of correspondence with; 385 a.
 Daniel, of the Edinburgh Mint; 81 a.
 — his executors; 81 b.
 — warrant to; 83 b.
 — his death; ib.
 Dugald, brother of Lord Bute; 43 b.
 Lieut.-Col. F., letter of; 295 b.
 Col. J., letters of; 292 b.
 Eosign James, letter of; 294 a.
 James, afterwards Earl of Moray; 304 b.
 Sir James, marriage of his sister Peggy; 312 b.
 John, letter of; 294 b.
 Mary; 162 a.
 Ro., Regent of Edinburgh University; 313 a.
 Lieut.-Col. R., letters of; 292 b, 294 a.
 Sir Robert; 603 a.
 — army under; 605 a.
 Thomas, collector for Kincardine; 303 b.
 Walter, canon of Glasgow, witness; 305 b.
 Lieut. Wm., letters of; 294 b, 295 a, 295 b.
 Stucken, M. Van., Danish eucvy; 27 a.
- Sturdy:
 John, tallow-chandler, of London, will of; 332 b.
 Lence, widow of John, of London; 332 b.
- Sturgeon, taken on the Dee, dispute about; 375 b.
- Sturgeon, Andrew, petitions of; 502 a, 538 b.
- Sturges, —, with Lady Walpole; 570 b.
- Sturgys, Andrew, petition of his wife Mary; 514 b.
- Sturler, Mous., from Berne; 200 b.
- Sturminster Castell; 335 a.
- Sturry, bridge of; 328 b.
- Sturt:
 Mr., candidate for Dorsetshire; 219 b.
 H., letter of; 290 a.
- Styche, John; 367 b.
- Style:
 John, grocer, of London, will of; 333 b.
 Richard, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Wm., petition of; 124 a.
 — answer to; 124 a.
- Styles:
 —; 398 b.
 Wm., mayor of Chester (25 Eliz.); 402 b, 403 a.
- Stynton, Alice, wife of John; 432 b.
- Styrum, Countess of; 565 b.
- Suabia, Circle of; 32 a.
- Subsidy:
 and aulnage, Act for ascertaining the duties of; 118 a.
 Bill (1671), amendments, &c.; 165 a.
 Rolls, &c. of Leicester, temp. Eliz.; 419 b. list of lords who have not paid (1667); 114 b.
- Sudabgoz, M., letter of; 40 b.
- Sudbury; 334 a, 334 b, 335 a.
 document dated at; 61 a.
 Simon de, Abp. of Canterbury; 339 a.
- Suffolk:
 horse to be raised by (1645); 8 a.
 sheriff's account (temp. Mary); 277 b.
 Duke of, John (4 Edw. IV.); 628 a.
 — Michael; ib.
 — Wm. (temp. Hen. VI.), impeachment of; 114 b.
 — (1450) his acquittal; 266 b.
 — and his widow Alice, payments to; 627 b.
 — stone images of; 628 a.
- Duchess of (1 Edw. IV.); 626 b.
 — (38 Hen. VI.); 627 b.
 — (1641); 625 b.
 — Alice, letters of; 629 b.
 — grant by; ib.
- Earl of, Wm. de la Pole, Ewelme Almshouse founded by;
 xiv., 624 b, et seq.
 — Alice, his wife, grand daughter of Chaucer; ib.
 — T., papers signed by; 435 b, 441 b.
 — and Bindon, Earl Marshal; 50 a.
 — (1609); 228 b.
 — T., letter of (1625); 2 b.
 — (1642); 165 b.
 — Theophilus, account touching debts of (1646); 281 a.
 — his portrait; 287 b.
 — letter of (1812); 287 b.
- Countess of; 284 a.
 — account of receipts and payments for; 1699–1700; 284 a.
 — (1691); 565 b.
- Suilarde, John, grant to; 277 b.
- Saligny, Alured de; 356 a.
- Salleuan, Francis; 603 b, 604 a.
- Sullivan:
 Dr., 478 a, 479 a, 480 b.
 Dr. F. S.; 476 b.
 Florence, life-guard; 544 b.
- Sully House, in Forest of Dean; 11 b.

Sulynage, James de; 634 b.

Sumner, John, letter of; 289 b.

Sumptuary regulations under Edward II.; 333 a.

Sumptnor, John; 279 b.

Sunderland; 238 a.

- Earl of, Charles, warrants to; 12 b.
 — South Sea Company and; 49 b.
 — letter to; 17 a.
 — his library, &c.; 13 b.
 — his secretary, Wynn; 64 a.
 — letters to; 58 a.
 — Robert, fourth, letters of; 51 b.
 — letters, &c. of and to; 59 b, 60 a.
 — Robert, letters to; 1 a.
 — Charles, letters of; ib.
 — Robert, letters to (1671–84); 30 b.
 — letter of (1672); 219 a.
 — President, letter of (1688); 284 a.
 — letter of (1609); 557 b.
 — letters of (c. 1690); 31 a.
 — letters of (1705); 31 b, 44 a.
 — his embassy to Vienna (1705); 45 a.
 — letters of (1706); 27 a, 32 a, 47 b.
 — letter to; 27 a.
 — letter to (1707); 16 b.
 — letter of (1707); 27 a.
 — letters of (1708); 32 b, 48 a.
 — letters to (1708); 45 b, 46 a, 48 a.
 — letters to (1708–10); 19 a, et seq.
 — examination before (1708); 34 a.
 — the elections in Scotland and (1708); 42 a.
 — letter of (1709); 36 b.
 — letters to (1709); 25 a, 47 a.
 — letter of (1710); 38 a.
 — the seals taken from (1710); 43 b.
 — his dismissal (1710); 27 a.
 — letter of (1711); 40 a.
 — Lord Lieutenant of Ireland (1714), letters to; 49 a.
 — carver at the coronation of Geo. I.; 50 a.
 — his illness (1715); 59 a.
 — deputy in Ireland (1715); 15 b.
 — his children (1717); 57 a.
 — letters of (1717); 40 b, 57 a.
 — letters to (1717); 57 a.
 — his death (1722); 13 b.
 — his papers; 26 a.
 — his executors; 51 b.
 — (1729); 62 b.
- Countess of, Judith; 49 b.
 — Anne, letters of; 51 b.
 — estate, disposition of; 566 b.
- Sundernesse Point; 250 a.
- Sundt, Lieut. P., letter of; 293 b.
- Supple, James; 279 a.
- Supremacy, oath of; 361 b, 362 a.
- Surat; 252 b.
- Surgeons:
 their refusal to frequent divine service; 227 b.
 Barbers and, of London, petitions of; 229 a, 230 b.
- Surmont, M. de, letter of; 36 a.
- Surrey:
 deeds relating to; 265 a.
 dragoons furnished by; 8 b.
 election in; 50 a.
- Surry Martyne; 373 b.
- Surscau, Claud, warrant to pay; 281 a.
- Survile, M. de, letters of; 37 b, 38 b.
- Susquehanna River, U.S., official report (1788); 288 b.
- Sussex:
 Earl of, M., letter of; 50 a.
 — (1589) his players, gift to; 428 a.
 — deceased, Thomas (1668); 118 b.
 — T., document signed by; 65 a.
 — James (1668); 118 b.
- Sutham, manor of; 635 a.
- Sutherland:
 Duke of, MSS. of; xxii.
 Colonel; 494 b, 495 a.
 Lieut. Charles, letters of; 293 a, 294 a.
- Suthminster, manor of; 635 b.
- Sutor, Odo; 344 a.
- Sutton:
 in Holland; 332 a.
 manor (Surrey?); 632 a, 633 b.
 — fishing near; 632 b.
 manor, co. Lincoln; 412 a. marshes, co. Lincoln; 146 b. water, pool, &c. of, Plymouth; 164 b.
 Courtenay, Berks; 332 b.
 —; 156 a, 156 b.
 —; lodging at Chester; 380 b.
 Col., letter of; 37 b.
 Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
 Sir Edward, petition of; 504 b, 529 b.
 Hammond, of Wickford, will of; 332 a.
 John, of London and Kirkley, will of; 334 a.
 R., letter of; 40 a.

Sutton—cont.
 Robert, dyer, of Worcester; 638 b.
 Will, priest of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, will of; 335 a.
 Suwer, Johan de, hostage of Beauvoys; 407 b.
 Suze, Valley de; 21 a.
 Swaby :
 co. Lincoln, deeds relating to; 265 a.
 John de, will of; 265 a.
 Walter de, chaplain; 265 a.
 Swaffham; 333 b.
 St. Cyriac and St. Mary's, rectories within Swaffham
 Prior, co. Cambridge; 106 b.
 Swainston, Wm., letters of; 293 a.
 Swale, Sir Solomon, commissioner; 275 a.
 Swalecliff, Thornden Wood in; 327 a.
 Swanley, Capt. John, of the Trinity House; 250 b.
 Swartz, Col., letter of; 39 a.
 Sweden; 284 b.
 embassy to, temp. Charles I.; 584 a.
 embassy to (1656-7); 94 b.
 envoy from, during six governments, death of; 565 b.
 envoy from (1708); 34 a.
 court of; 24 b.
 king of, English and Scotch in service of (temp. Commonwealth); 30 a.
 — (1669); 130 a.
 — treaty with (1701); 41 a.
 — his declaration against the Act of Neutrality (1710);
 40 a.
 Queen of, letter to; 18 b.
 Sweet :
 Mr., letter of; 39 b.
 — letter to; 38 a.
 — accounts of; 31 b.
 Benjamin, letter of; 37 b.
 Sweetman :
 — apostate; 610 b.
 Mr.; 488 b, 608 b.
 Antony; 609 b.
 Lieut. Law; 594 a.
 Sweepstone, Richard and Alice de; 411 a.
 Sweepstone, Ralph; 408 b.
 Swift :
 Jonathan, seizure of books, &c. addressed to; 58 b.
 — the Examiner; 14 b.
 Peter, of Pontefract; 275 a.
 Swilly, Lough, affair of; 193 a.
 Swillington, Robert de, deeds relating to; 423 a.
 Swinhead fen; 12 a.
 Swintowne, Col., letter of; 36 a.
 Swiss Cantons, the, religious system of; 197 a.
 Swords, Prospect Point near; 472 b.
 Swurn, Cristina; 639 a.
 Swyke :
 Thomas, of Leicester; 420 a.
 — grant to; 415 b.
 Swylyngton, Lord Robert of (8 Ric. II.); 422 a.
 Sybald, Matthew, witness; 305 a.
 Sybald, James, vicar of Arbutthott; 298 b, 300 a.
 Syddowe, Henry, of Leicester, butcher; 433 a.
 Sydenham :
 Col.; 163 a.
 Dr., monument to; 233 b.
 Dr. Thomas, picture of; 232 b.
 Theophilus; ib.
 Major Wm., narrative of Second War with Hyder Ali
 (1782); 296 b.
 Sydney, Sidney :
 Lord (1691); 561 a, 564 a.
 — at Portsmouth; 54 a.
 — (1783); 57 b.
 — letter of (1788); 290 b.
 — grant of lands to; 498 a.
 Mons.; 558 b.
 Sir Henry, payment to; 94 a.
 Sir Philip, letter of; 585 a.
 Symes :
 Col., letter of; 295 b.
 Richard; 108 b.
 — petition of; 109 a.
 Symkings, James, of London; 546 b.
 Symms, Tho., on Cambridge Committee; 10 a.
 Symmys, Thomas, vicar of Mayfield, will of; 333 a.
 Symond :
 Richard, of Chedynghworth; 418 a.
 Thomas, graver, payment to; 95 a.
 Symonds, Col., letter of; 39 a.
 Symonsbury; 116 a.
 Symons, Lieut. John; 591 b.
 Symonson, Nicholas, of the Shipwrights' Company; 261 a.
 Symonstown, co. Kildare; 508 a.
 Symynges, John, President of the College of Physicians; 227 a.
 Synnow, John, of Southacre, will of; 333 b.
 Synott :
 Colonel; 609 a.
 James, petition of; 504 b.
 Paul; 609 b.

Syr, Alex., of Bradfield, will of; 334 a.
 Syria; 239 b.
 new crusade into; 351 a.

T.

Taafe, Count or Lord :
 Nicholas, sketch of; 432 a, 455 a.
 — his account of himself; ib.
 O'Connor's vindication of; 454 a.
 his death; 455 a.
 (1761); 467 a.
 (1762); 472 b.
 (1763); 477 a.
 Lord Northumberland, and (1763); 479 a.
 letter of; ib.
 letter to (1766); 481 b.
 letter of (1766); 482 b.
 his Observations on Affairs in Ireland (1766); 482 b-486 a, passim.
 pamphlets on, and other references to; 482 b-492 b, passim.
 letter of (1767); 487 b.
 his interview with Lord Chancellor Lifford (1767); 488 a.
 Queen Charlotte and; 488 b.
 Viscount, his proceedings in Ireland (1642, &c.); 603 b-607 a, passim, 614 a.
 Taafe :
 Major; 613 a.
 Luke and Francis; 611 a.
 Tabley, Lord de, MSS. of; xxii.
 Taddington, Peter de; 357 b.
 Taghboy parish, co. Roscommon, lands in; 518 a.
 Tailleir, John and Mary, petition of; 337 a.
 Tallier, John, of Chester; 376 a.
 Tailleir, Robert le, of Wimunde Wold; 404 b.
 Taillour, Elizabeth, wife of John; 386 b.
 Taisniere, battle of; 26 b.
 Talbot, Lord :
 (30 Eliz.), George; 273 a. de Malahide, Mr. J. T. Gilbert's report on his manuscripts at Malahide Castle, co. Dublin; xviii., xxiv., 493 a.
 Talbot :
 Bishop and Mrs., letters of (1714); 57 a.
 Capt.; 390 b.
 Colonel, petition of; 582 a.
 G., master of his Majesty's Jewel House, letter of; 388 b.
 Gulelmus; 370 a.
 James; 518 a.
 John; 143 b.
 — of Malahide, petitions of; 501 a, 504 a, 508 a.
 — Earl of Shrewsbury; 264 b.
 Sir John, commissioner; 275 a.
 Capt. Mark, deposition of; 390 b.
 Sir Neil; 391 a.
 Peter, his brother, a captive; 245 a.
 — Archbishop of Dublin; 164 b.
 Col. Phil., letter of; 36 a.
 Richard; 279 a.
 Col. Richard; 143 b.
 — answer of; 144 a.
 Roger, commissioner; 275 a.
 Sir Wm., deposition of; 390 b.
 — his accounts of James II.'s estates in Ireland, 499 a.
 William, prisoner, petitions of; 501 b, 546 a.
 Talbytt, Henry, Justice for Nottingham; 432 a.
 Talisch, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Taliafero, letter of; 213 b.
 Tallant, Mr., of Dublin; 528 b.
 Tallenstowne, co. Kildare; 508 a.
 Tallis, Ensign Will.; 595 a.
 Tame, Elizabeth; 368 a.
 Tamerlane, the play; x., 16 a.
 Tamworth; 334 b.
 Taucore, 288 b.
 Rajah of (1778 ?); 288 b.
 Tancred, Sir Richard, commissioner; 275 a.
 Tanfield, Ralph, executor of Bp. of London; 635 b.
 Tangiers; 156 b, 158 b.
 commissioners; 257 b. expedition to; 500 b, 551 b.
 Tanjore; 290 a.
 Tanners : of England, petition of; 116 b.
 ordinal of, at Leicester; 427 a.
 Tanshelf, Tanshall, co. York; 272 b.
 Tanton, Thos.; 146 b.
 Tapers during service, regulations for use of; 321 b.
 Tapestry, arras, &c. at Ewelme, description of; 628 b.
 Taplow; 332 a.

- Tappourley, Thome de ; 367 a.
 Tar water, its great use ; 571 b.
 Tara, hosting at ; 381 a.
 Taragh :
 co. Meath ; 499 a.
 Viscount (1631), Preston made ; 614 b, 616 b.
 Tarazena, Marquis de, letters of ; 32 a, 35 b, 36 b, 38 a, 39 b, 40 a.
 Tarbat, Viscount ; 51 a.
 Tarini, Count (1709) ; 21 a.
 Tarleton, Lt.-Col., letter of ; 289 a.
 Tarragona ; 18 a.
 letters dated at ; 25 a.
 Tarrega, letter dated at ; 58 a.
 Tas, M., letter of ; 37 b.
 Tasbrow, John, petition of ; 506 a.
 Tasburgh, John, petition of ; 514 a.
 Tascn, Count de (1708) ; 19 b.
 Tasker, George, the (ship) ; 379 b.
 Tassell, in Holland ; 244 b.
 Taswell, G., letter of ; 295 a.
 Tatam :
 George, of Leicester ; 427 b, 430 b, 431 a.
 John, of Leicester ; 431 a.
 Tate :
 Major, letter of ; 289 a.
 Francis, paper by ; 585 a.
 — treatise by ; 584 b.
 Robert, alderman of London, will of ; 333 a.
 Tateshall, Lady de ; 264 b.
 Tatham, Robert, of Pontefract : 275 b.
 Tattershall :
 warden of ; 264 b.
 goods taken from ; 267 b.
 expenses at ; ib.
 church building ; ib.
 Tannagh, Corballis, lands of ; 525 b.
 Taunton ; 332 a, 332 b, 335 b. documents concerning ; 265 a.
 relief of ; 8 b.
 Mr. ; 369 b.
 Tavistock ; 287 a, 334 b.
 parson of ; 221 b.
 Taxis, Prince of, letters of (1705) ; 31 b.
 Tay :
 Loch ; 310 a.
 Wm. ; 367 b.
 Taybridge ; 313 b, 314 b.
 Taylbus, Sir Robert ; 271 a.
 Taylor, Tailor, Tayler, &c. :
 the famous oculist ; 466 a.
 Andrew ; 396 a.
 Daniel ; 375 b.
 Mr. E. F., his report on, and calendar of, House of Lords' MSS. ; viii., 101-174.
 Edward, disbanded soldier ; 529 b.
 Humphrey, a trooper ; 8 a.
 John, his death ; 437 b.
 Lieut. Joseph ; 591 a.
 L. M., letters of ; 290 b, 295 b.
 Richard ; 365 b.
 — Fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford ; 380 b.
 — of Polstead, will of ; 333 b.
 Robert, weaver ; 390 a.
 Samuel, of Pontefract ; 275 b.
 Thomas, mayor of Pontefract ; 276 a.
 W. ; 156 a, 156 b.
 — information of ; 157 a.
 W., rector of Wey, petition of ; 630 a.
 Wm. le ; 367 b.
 William, minister of Southill ; 5 b.
 Capt. William ; 510 b.
 William, petitions of ; 521 b, 541 a, 541 b.
 Taymouth ; 313 b.
 Tayte, Margaret, widow, petition, &c. of ; 150 b.
 Teddington ; 3 b.
 manor of ; 3 a.
 Tedworth, letter dated at ; 44 a.
 Tees, the ; 249 a.
 Teig :
 James, son of Katherine, petition of ; 511 a.
 alias Naughten, Katherine, petition of ; ib.
 Teignmouth, Lord, Charles (1797), letters of ; 288 b.
 Telhier :
 M. le ; 27 b, 28 a.
 Mons. de or le, letters to ; 217 b, 218 a, 218 b.
 Tempest alias Triplandes, John ; 375 a.
 Templar, Lord, speech of (1756) ; 223 a.
 Templars, the, Clement V.'s dissolution of the order ; 352 a.
 Temple :
 Lord (1714) ; 14 a.
 — (1753), speech of ; 219 b.
 — (1734) ; 225 b.
 — (1756), at the Treasury ; 221
 — (1757) ; 224 a.
 Temple—cont.
 Major ; 8 a.
 Sir John, reports by ; 532 a, 540 a.
 — depositions before ; 573 a.
 — his history of the Irish Rebellion ; 573 b.
 — his " Muster Rolls " ; 573 b.
 Mary, petition of ; 237 b.
 Sir Richard, letters of ; 36 a, 40 a.
 — his message ; 219 a.
 Sir William ; 444 a, 460 b.
 Templeogue, castle of ; 501 b, 523 b.
 Tempsford, co. Bedford, deeds concerning ; 262 a.
 estate in ; 3 b.
 Tenant, a quack ; 228 b.
 Tench, Lieut. John ; 596 a.
 Tendryng :
 Richard, tailor, of London, will of ; 332 b.
 Will., of Colchester, will of ; 333 a.
 Tenham, church of ; 330 a.
 Tentebury, Stephen of, licence to ; 2 a.
 Teuterden :
 vill and hundred of ; 634 b.
 corporation, MSS. of ; xxiii.
 Terece, MS. copy of his comedies ; 100 b.
 Ternan :
 Edward, of Tusk ; 466 b.
 James, of Strokestown ; ib.
 Terrily, —, an Irishman ; 16 b.
 Terrington ; 334 a.
 Terry :
 Margaret, prioress of St. Sepulchre's Nunnery, Canterbury ; 337 a.
 — method of election of ; 337 b.
 Terryng, manor of ; 351 a.
 Tersender, M., letters of ; 32 a.
 Terveer ; 99 b.
 Tervoe, co. Limerick, Lord Emly's MSS. at, report on ; 174 b.
 Tervot ; 306 a.
 Terwait ; 305 b.
 Terynure, lands of ; 506 a.
 Tesbank, letters from ; 32 b.
 Tessé, Maréchal de, letter of ; 36 a.
 Test Act, the ; 197 b, 198 a, 198 b.
 Testa, W. de :
 nontius, extortions by ; 350 b.
 warning issued by ; ib.
 stipend to ; 351 b.
 Wingham College and ; 352 b.
 Teston, Kent, manor of ; 319 a, 329 b.
 Tetbury ; 334 b.
 Tetherby, alias Smith, Robert ; 380 b.
 Tetlowe, Thomas, sheriff of Chester ; 361 a.
 Tettall, Col., letter of ; 36 a.
 Teviotdale, Archdeacon of ; 309 a.
 Tewkesbury ; 334 b, 335 a, 335 b.
 taking of ; 11 b.
 Annals ; 583 a.
 Texel, the ; 17 a.
 Textor, Walter, son of Richard ; 323 a.
 Teynham :
 church ; 326 b.
 rector of ; 339 a.
 Thalbot :
 James ; 609 b.
 Dr. ; ib.
 Sir Robert ; 604 a, 608 b, 610 b, 611 b, 612 b, 614 a, 616 a, 616 b. See Talbot.
 Thame ; 335 a.
 Thames, the river :
 235 b, 239 b, 240 b, 245 b, 251 b, 254 a, 391 b.
 tolls demanded of strangers coming into ; 243 b.
 engine for cleansing ; 120 b.
 office of ballasting ships and cleansing ; 120 a. scouring and cleansing ; 244 b, 245 b.
 Act for preservation of ; 244 b, 245 b. damage to, by building houses on the bridge ; 245 a.
 salmon fishery in ; 632 b.
 Thamworth, co. Stafford ; 377 a.
 Thanet :
 Isle of ; 320 b.
 Earl of, Richard, governor of Tilbury (1683) ; 258 b.
 Thanksgiving, day of public ; 386 a.
 Theaker :
 Robert, petition of ; 253 a.
 — his instrument ; ib.
 Theatre, opposition at Edinburgh to license one ; 310 b, 313 a, 313 b.
 Thelnetham, St. Nicholas ; 334 a.
 Thenwall, Robert de ; 367 b.
 Theobalds :
 lease of ; 219 a.
 Lord Burghley's house at, document dated from ; 580 a.
 James I. at ; 435 b, 441 b.
 Theodore, Boris ; 23 a.
 Theomolin :
 le Prieur de, letter of ; 37 b.
 Prince de (1711), letters of ; 40 a.

- Therbert; 618 a.
 Therfield, parson of; 334 b.
 Thetford; 333 b, 334 a.
 Thickpenny, Lieut. Leonard; 590 b.
 Thisquen, M., letter of; 39 a.
 Thistleworth; 55 b.
 Thomaistun, Salomon de, witness; 305 a.
 Thomas :
 v. Dagnall; 136 a.
 Anthony, petition of; 136 a.
 David; 583 a.
 John, of Bristol, will of; 332 a.
 — vicar of All Saints, Bristol, will of; 335 b.
 — trooper; 543 a.
 Prince; 28 a.
 Rachel, letter of; 15 a.
 Richard, appointment of; 281 a.
 Robert, letter of; 248 a.
 Samuel, deceased; 136 a.
 Cornet Samuel; 596 a.
 Dr. Wm.; 279 a.
 William; 626 a.
 — prisoner at Chester; 380 b.
 Thomasson :
 Wm.; 367 b.
 — murager of Chester, book of receipts and payments, &c. of; 369 b.
 Thomé, Col., letter of; 40 a.
 Thonond :
 Lord, Marshal of France (1761); 476 a, 476 b.
 Earl of, his daughter; 605 a.
 Thompson, Thomson, Tomson :
 Dr., and Pope; 571 b.
 Mr., councillor; 257 a.
 — historian of Leicester; 403 b, 404 a, 425 a, 430 a.
 — attorney to Warren Hastings; 291 b.
 Lient. in Ireland; 600 a, 623 b.
 — his conspiracy; 531 b, 546 a.
 Andrew, letter of; 292 b.
 alias Hill, Barbara, petition of; 542 a.
 George; 128 a.
 Grace; 109 b.
 James; ib.
 John, near Castlereas; 474 a.
 Maurice; 165 b, 166 b.
 — answer of; 107 b.
 Lient. Richard; 529 a, 529 b, 535 a.
 —; 595 b.
 Major Richard, petition of his widow Barbara; 502 a.
 Robert, soldier; 543 b.
 Stephen, commissioner; 275 a.
 Lient. W. A., letter of; 295 b.
 William, his opinions; 258 b, 259 a.
 — commissioner; 275 a.
 — of Leicester; 419 a.
 — of the Mint; 61 a.
 Thonge, Will., potecary, of Northampton, will of; 335 a.
 Thongeston, William de, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Thoppe, Thos.; 365 b.
 Thornbury, manor, co. Gloucester; 139 b, 148 a.
 Thorne, Baldwin, of Worcester; 638 a.
 Thorneby, Roger; 631 a.
 Thorney, Anthony; 272 b.
 Thornhill :
 co. York, church; 276 a.
 — rector of; 636 b.
 Robert, of the Tower Court of Record; 89 b.
 — order touching; 279 b.
 — petition of; 508 b.
 Timothy; 243 a.
 Thornholm Priory, Lincoln; 627 a.
 Thornthwaite; 211 a.
 Thornton, Thorneton; 301 a.
 Capt. Laurence, petition of; 549 b.
 Sir Peter de; 358 b.
 Richard, schoolmaster; 271 b.
 Ensign Richard, prisoner; 8 a.
 Robert; 383 a.
 — of Chester, bond of; 360 b.
 Thomas, master of St. Leonard's Hospital, Leicester; 413 b.
 Thorowgood :
 Sir John; 7 a.
 William; 145 b.
 Thorp, Thorpe :
 co. Leicester; 414 a.
 Ings, co. York; 162 b.
 Underwood, co. York, manor; 162 a, 162 b.
 Agnes, of Cambridge, will of; 335 b.
 Robert, alderman of Norwich, will of; 333 a.
 Simon de, seneschall of Pontefract; 270 b.
 Walter, his chantry in St. Paul's; 634 a.
 Thoulon; 41 b.
 Throckmorton, Francis; 427 b.
 Throckmorton :
 Sir John, letter to; 374 a.
 Sir N. W., Bart., MSS. of; xxii.
 Throgbford, John, late sheriff of Chester, pardon to; 359 b.
 Throp, Thos., waterbailiff of Chester; 361 a.
 Throppe, Alderman; 364 b.
 Throsby, Mr., of Leicester; 404 a.
 Thrush, Thos., letter of; 293 b.
 Thungen, Baron de, letters of; 36 a, 37 b.
 Thurkeston, John, of Lutterworth; 414 b.
 Thurland :
 Edward, of Inner Temple, solicitor-general of Duke of York (1660); 279 b, 280 a.
 Sir Edward, attorney-general to Duke of York, commission, &c. to; 280 b.
 Thurles :
 my Lady of (1649); 610 a.
 Viscount, Thos. Butler; 605 b.
 — title of; 588 b.
 Thurloe :
 John, secretary, letters of; 386 b, 387 a.
 — orders signed by; 386 a.
 Thurlow, St. Peter's; 333 a.
 Thurmolin, prior of, letter of; 38 b.
 Thurstanton, Hugh de; 367 b.
 Thurston :
 A., document signed by; 17 b.
 Edmund, of Rendham, will of; 333 b.
 Thwaites, William, of Clonmel, petition of; 503 b.
 Thwayte, William; 271 a.
 Thwaytes, Thomas, Knt., mercer, of London and burgess of Calais, will of; 334 b.
 Thynne :
 Francis, treatise by; 582 b.
 Sir James, advance of money to; 212 a.
 John, of Egham; 51 a.
 Robert, patent to; 241 a.
 Thomas, treatise by; 584 b.
 — Lady Ogle and; 51 a.
 Tiaquin parish, co. Galway, lands in; 532 b.
 Ticehurst; 335 b.
 Tichborne :
 Sir Henry, his troop or regiment in Ireland; 504 b, 506 a 511 a, 523 b, 541 b, 546 b, 549 b, 593 b.
 — lands held by; 520 a.
 — marshal of the army; 547 a.
 Sir William, lands held by; 520 b.
 Tickell, Thomas, of Thornthwaite; 211 a.
 Ticrohan :
 Sir Luke Fitzgerald's house at; 580 a. siege, &c. of; 612 b.
 Tiell, Thomas, of Leicester, submission of; 422 a.
 Tigh, Richard, alderman of Dublin, petitions of; 513 b, 539 b.
 Tighehahan, rendezvous at; 611 a.
 Tighe, Teige, Henry, mayor of Dublin; 573 b.
 Tilbrooke, tax at; 10 a.
 Tilbury :
 Fort; 258 b, 324 a.
 camp at; 432 b.
 Baron of, Lord Vere, petition to; 244 b.
 Till :
 Captain, at Scilly; 257 a.
 Capt. Hugh; 258 b.
 Tillingham manor; 633 a.
 Tillman, Ralph, of Limerick; 543 b.
 Tillson, John; 363 b.
 Tilly :
 Comte (1708), letters of; 36 a, 36 b, 39 a.
 Marshal; 214 b, 215 b.
 Tilmanston, S. de; 341 a.
 Tilney; 333 b, 334 a.
 Tilson, Mr.; 35 b.
 Tilston, John; 361 a.
 Timberhithe, messuage at; 323 a.
 Timoliu quarter; 604 a.
 Tin, &c., papers concerning; 91 b.
 Tinctor, Nicolaus, of Leicester; 404 b.
 Tindale, Northumberland; 116 a.
 Tinghey, Henry, witness; 262 b.
 Tinsendorf, Count de; 14 a.
 Tipperary :
 sheriff of, petition of; 50. b.
 specification of lands in; 520 b.
 specification of Lord Esmond's lands in; 526 b.
 James II's lands in; 497 b, 498 a.
 papers relating to affairs in (1798-9); 584 a.
 Tipplers at Leicester, Act for; 426 a.
 Tippo, Sultan, account of his family, revenues, &c. (1789); 293 b.
 Tirimont, Comte de, letters of (1706); 32 a, 36 a.
 Tirlmont; 31 b.
 Tirlington, John, of Leicester; 439 b.
 Tirrell :
 Thomas, petition of; 547 a.
 Sir Timothy, replication of; 552 a.
 Tirryll, Col.; 4 b.

Tisdall :

- , 193 a, 193 b.
- Michael, petition of; 549 a.
- Philip, his relations with Archbishop Stone; 176 b.
- made Solicitor-General in Ireland; ib.
- Attorney-General in Ireland; 473 b.

Tisser, James and John; 118 b.

Tisted, West, church of; 263 b.

Titchwell manor; 263 a.

Titherton, alias Smith, Robert, a notorious malefactor; 381 a.

Titles of estates, Bill for registers to remedy uncertainty of; 134 a.

Tims :

- Capt.; 9 b.
- ; 134 b.
- Mr.; 134 a, 134 b.
- S., letter of; 8 b.
- Capt. S., letters of; 10 a.
- Silas, petition of; 255 a.

Tobacco :

- English, report on burlful nature of; 229 a.
- sale of, in Leicester; 436 b.
- order against smoking; 248 b.
- smoking, fine on; 235 b.
- Act prohibiting the planting of, in England and Ireland; 138 b.

Toceter; 398 b.

Toddington, co. Bedford; 122 a.

Todpole, Ensign George; 594 b.

Tofts, church of; 324 b.

Togher :

- land of; 525 b.
- defence; 613 b.

Toira, Marshal, his death; 553 a.

Toke, Simond, of Betele (St. Mary Magdalene), will of; 334 a.

Tokens, white farthing tokens; 435 b.

Toker, Will., of Soke, Winchester, will of; 335 a.

Toledo :

- , 17 a, 18 a.
- Cardinal of, letter to; 213 a.

Toleration Act, the, in Ireland; 199 b.

Tollaghdonnell, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.

Tollard Royal; 333 a.

Tollemache, John, Esq., MSS. of; xxii.

Toller, Dorset; 210 b.

Tollleston, co. York; 271 a.

Tollitore; 335 a.

Tolls under Duchy of Lancaster; 271 b.

Tolson, Lieut.-Col. Richard, letters of; 294 b, 295 b.

Tomdrain, Camp de, letter dated at; 17 b.

Tomkyns, Lieut., letter of; 293 b.

Tomline, T., certificate by; 438 b.

Tomlinson :

- Col., his troop; 386 a.
- Ensign Thomas; 591 b.

Tomlyn, Katharine; 394 a.

Tonge, William, Norrey; 582 b.

Toustal, Mr., lines by; 24 b.

Toustine Act, the, in Ireland; 195 a.

Tonyn :

- governor; 289 a.
- letters of; 288 b, 289 a.

Tooker, Arthur, bookseller; 22 b.

Tool, —; 497 a.

Toomes :

- o. Etherington, roll in writ of error; 119 a.
- Richard, application of; 123 a.
- Wm.; 123 a.

Tooting, Surrey; 637 b.

Toppelive, W., seneschal of Ch. Ch., Canterbury; 341 b.

Topham, Mr., letter of; 57 a.

Topleff, Topleffe, [? Topleff, co. York] rectory; 162 a, 162 b.

Topleffe, Christopher, trooper; 523 b.

Topping, Michael, letter of; 289 b.

Torhay; 27 a, 252 b, 565 b.

Torcy :

- M., letter of; 37 b.
- Marquis de; 39 a.

Tories :

- the Irish termed; 446 b, 543 a, 618 a.
- Irish, killing of; 501 b.

Tornham church; 316 a.

Tornor :

- Margaret, of Norwich, will of; 334 a.
- Wyba, of Hadley, will of; 332 b.

Torperlegh, near Chester; 358 a.

Torphichen, Lord, MSS. of; xxii.

Torrens, W. McCullagh, Esq., M.P., MSS. of; xxii.

Torrington, Lord :

- his brother killed (1691); 563 a.
- letters of; 54 a.
- documents signed by (1716); 85 a, 85 b.
- warrant by (1717); 76 b.

Tortosa, capitulation of; 33 a.

Totness :

corporation, MSS. of; xxiii.

Earl of, work by (1769); 491 b, 492 a.

Totten, John, letter of; 246 a.

Tottenham, Sir Robert Cecil's lands in; 635 a.

Touchby, Thomas, of Leicester; 420 a.

Touchet :

Ensign Peter; 290 b.

— letters of; 291 a, 292 b, 294 a.

Touchprest, M. de; 28 a.

Toulon; 45 b, 47 a, 195 a.

fleet at; 197 b.

Toulouse, Tholosa, in Aquitania, St. Mary's Convent in, document dated at; 301 b.

Tour et Tassis, Prince de la, letter of; 36 a.

Tour, Lieut. Fran.; 594 b.

Tournaments or jousts :

forbidden by the Council of Vienna; 352 b.

persons present at, threatened by the Archbishop; 353 b.

Tournay :

town of; 36 b.

letters dated at; 29 a, 336 a.

taking of; 21 a.

governor of, letter of; 39 b.

commandant of, letter of; ib.

Bishop and Chapter of, letter of; 37 a.

Bishop of, letter of; 40 a.

Tours; 193 a.

nuns at; 585 a.

Towcester; 7 a.

letter dated at; 3 b.

Towers, John, Esq.; 5 a.

Towneley, Colonel, MSS. of; xxii.

Towns, decay of, dialogue on; 93 a.

Townsend or Townshend, Lord :

ambassador; 21 b.

letters of (1709); 36 a, 37 a.

ambassador, instructions to (1709); 36 b.

letter of (1711); 39 b.

letters to (1714); 16 a.

— (1715); 17 b, 40 b.

letter to; 85 b.

memorial to (1716); 85 b.

letter of (1717); 40 b.

lord lieutenant of Ireland (1769); 492 b.

his administration of Ireland (1771); 192 a, 193 a.

unpopularity of; 193 a.

letters of (1778); xviii., 195 b, 196 a.

Townsend, Townshend, Towneshend :

commissary, letter of; 289 a.

Allanore, Lady, of Reynham, Mary, will of; 333 b.

Charles, letters of; 294 a, 295 a.

— speeches of; 222 b, 223 b, 224 a.

George; 151 a.

H., letters of; 380 a, 399 b.

— warrants of; 375 b.

Mrs. M., letters of; 294 b, 295 a.

Mary, of Westbury manor; 630 a.

Townsland, Admiral; 223 a.

Townson, Wm.; 399 a.

Tracy :

W. de, his lands at Docombe; 318 b.

William de, one of Abp. Becket's murderers; 324 a.

Trade :

Council of; 133 b, 247 a, 247 b.

— report of (1670); 137 b.

— letters of; 47 a.

Commissioners for, petition to; 50 a.

Committee of, list of names of; 136 a.

committee to consider decay of, minutes of proceedings;

viii., 133 b.

marks (1669); 134 b.

Trades' Unions (temp. Eliz.); 403 a.

Tradescant, John; 269 a.

Trafford :

Sir Edmonde, sheriff of co. Lancaster; 397 a.

Rich. of Oakham, will of; 334 b.

Lieut. William; 593 a.

Traill, James, Bishop of Down, sermons by; 489 b, 490 a, 492 b.

Transportation of prisoners, Act touching (1670); 142 a.

Trant, Mr.; 391 a.

Trapbam, Thomas, chirurgion, payment to; 94 b.

Traponell, John, of Sberston; 639 a.

Trappony, in Sicily, consul at; 245 b.

Trapps :

John, of the Mint; 69 b.

Wm.; 163 b, 164 a.

Trasey, Lieut. Roger; 595 a.

Travers :

Mr., letters of; 37 b, 39 a, 57 a.

— preacher at Leicester; 431 b.

James, petition of; 549 b.

Joseph; 583 a.

S., letter of; 36 a.

- Trawn, Marshal de, letters of (1706); 31 b.
- Trago, Roger, of the Delight; 241 a.
- Treasurer of a monastery, his method of keeping accounts; 343 b.
- Treasury :
 — Lords of the; 389 a, 389 b, 393 b.
 — letters of; 387 b, 389 a, 389 b, 390 a, 391 b.
 — letters to; 389 a, 391 b.
 — petition to; 388 b.
 — resolution of, on a petition; 391 b.
- Treaties; 26 b.
 — ratifications of (1701-2); 12 b, passim.
 — secret papers relating to the Definitive Treaty, &c. (1762-1763); 285 a.
- Treavor, Arthur; 121 a.
- Trederoft :
 — John; 194 b.
 — — minister, deceased; ib.
 — — executors of, petition of; ib.
 — John, Edward, and Nathaniel, children of John, deceased; ib.
- Trees for sea marks, letters about preservation of; 246 b.
- Treeton, co. York, rector of; 276 b.
- Treffrey, John, knt., of St. Finbar's, Fowey, will of; 332 b.
- Treganore, Hugh, corrody to; 2 a.
- Tregonwell, —, grant to; 261 b.
- Tregoz, John, constable of the Tower; 347 b.
- Trelawny :
 — Mr., his letter; 312 a.
 — Capt. Charles, letter of; 36 a.
 — Sir J. S., Bart., M.P., MSS. of; xxii.
- Trent :
 — the river; 435 b.
 — — Act for improving navigation between Boston and, amendments, &c. (1670); 153 a.
- Treutham :
 — co. Stafford; 200 a.
 — Francis; 117 a.
- Treplaundes. See Tempest, John.
- Treplow Heath; 158 b.
- Treswell :
 — Colonel; 503 b.
 — Col. Daniel, petitions of; 503 b, 543 b.
- Trethewy :
 — John; 125 a.
 — — plea and answer of; 125 a, 125 b.
 — — order on; 125 b.
- Trething, Lewis; 279 a.
- Treuert, co. Meath; 499 a.
- Treuer, Sir Richard, letter to; 382 a.
- Trevalnan, John; 280 b.
- Trevanion, Capt.; 388 a.
- Treves :
 — Elector of, letters of (1705); 31 a.
 — — (1707); 32 a.
 — — letter of (1709); 36 b.
 — — (1710); 38 a.
 — — (1715); 40 b.
 — the notorious London money-lender; 288 b.
 — Pellegrine, letters of; 288 b.
 — — acting resident at Benares, letters of; 290 a, 293 b, 295 b.
- Trevezze, Peter; 166 a.
- Trevor :
 — John, M.P.; 384 b.
 — Sir John, elected Speaker; 440 b.
 — Col. Marcus, in Ireland; 597 a, 599 b.
 — Col. Mark, his troop; 540 b.
 — Richard; 375 b.
- Trevors :
 — Mr., envoy; 30 b.
 — —, of Trevalen; 375 b.
- Triacle, a composition; 227 b.
- Trial of Peers of England, Act for better regulating the (1667); 113 a.
- Tribbeke, M., Lutherau minister; 47 a.
- Trilleck, John, Bishop of Hereford; 262 b.
- Trim; 523 a, 546 b, 623 b.
 — Parliament held at (1447); 493 a, 499 b.
 — the rebels near; 497 a.
 — garrison at, in 1648; 593 b, 594 a.
 — surrender of; 610 b.
- Trimleston :
 — Lord (1756); 450 b, 452 a, 455 a.
 — — (1761); 463 a.
 — — (1762); 471 b, 472 a, 473 a, 474 a.
 — — (1763); 476 a, 476 b.
- Triaulty :
 — the ship, of Dublin; 373 a.
 — — de la Catya; 373 b.
 — — of Dublin; 503 b.
- Trinity House :
 — Company; 120 a.
 — Corporation, report on MSS. of; xiv, 235 a, et seq.
 — See London, Trinity House.
- Trion, Sir Samuel; 161 b.
- Tripoli; 239 b.
 — pirate ships of; 640 b.
- Tripp, Simon, discourse by; 533 a.
- Trishaire :
 — Thos.; 156 a, 156 b.
 — — information of; 157 a.
- Trivis, Lieut. Arthur; 596 a.
- Trossuagh, lands of; 525 b.
- Troutman :
 — Samuel; 153 b.
 — — answer of; ib.
- Trowbryng, Robert, of Bridport, will of; 332 b.
- Troy, Ensign Antony; 594 a.
- Troye, Ensign Andrew; 593 a.
- Truelock, Trulock :
 — Mr., letter to; 106 b.
 — Thomas, petitions, &c. of; 103 a.
 — — messenger, petition of; 146 b.
- Truesdale, —, physician; 221 b.
- Trumbrygge, John, of Leicester; 414 a.
- Trumbull :
 — Mr., agent at Brussels; 242 b.
 — Sir William, letters of; 552 a, 556 b, 557 a, 557 b.
- Truro, Cornwall; 254 b.
 — inhabitants of, letter of; 142 b.
 — mayor; ib.
- Trussell :
 — Gilbert, mayor of Chester, inquisition before; 367 a.
 — Osman, witness; 411 a.
 — Sir Wm.; 370 b.
- Truth, the Naked (1709), paper so intituled; 37 b.
- Trym, Ensign William; 593 a.
- Tryour, Thomas, of Deopham, will of; 333 b.
- Tuam :
 — Abp. or Bishop of (1644), Quelly; 604 b.
 — — executed; ib.
 — — (1651); 614 a, 616 b.
 — — Jo. (1712); 74 a.
 — — Jo., letter of (1714); 59 a.
- Tubant, John; 357 b.
- Tubbe, Walter, licence to; 1 b.
- Tubman, Lieut. Mathias; 593 b.
- Tubney, Berks, deeds concerning; 262 b.
- Tuddington, co. Bedford; 4 a.
 — estate in; 6 b.
 — Park; 6 a.
 — rents at; 4 b.
- Tudenhams, North; 333 b.
- Tufton, A., letter of; 291 a.
- Tuit, Colonel; 498 a.
- Tuite :
 — Andrew, prisoner; 604 a.
 — Andrew Boy; 605 b.
 — James; 614 a.
- Tuitte, Edward, killed; 603 b.
- Tuke, Ensign Thomas; 595 b.
- Tulch-Fraser, co. Stirling, lordship of; 305 b.
- Tullamore, Lord, letters of (1714); 49 a.
- Tullibardin; 306 a.
- Tallibardine, Marquis of or Lord, letters of; 31 b, 36 a, 37 b.
- Tully :
 — James, petition of; 502 a, 540 b.
 — co. Kildare; 501 b, 540 b, 541 a, 543 b.
 — co. Louth; 590 b.
- Tulsk; 466 b.
- Tunbridge; 562 b.
 — manor or honor of; 320 b, 338 b, 351 a.
 — castle; 354 a.
 — ware; 63 a.
 — Lord, letter of (1708); 36 a.
- Tunis, pirates of; 239 b, 241 b, 242 b.
- Tunnab, Charles, his proposal; 79 a.
- Tunstall :
 — benefice of; 340 a.
 — Cuthbert, Bishop of London; 634 b.
 — James, player; 430 b.
- Tupholme, abbot of; 267 b.
- Turenne, Marshal; 38 b.
- Turin; 27 a.
 — letters dated at; x, 16 b, 19 a, et seq., 27 a, 33 a, 36 a, 47 b, 218 b, 552 b.
 — siege of; 21 b.
 — cathedral at; ib.
- Turing, John, letters of; 294 b.
- Turk, Symon, of Leicester; 403 b, 410 a, 410 b.
- Turkdean; 332 b.
- Turkey :
 — Sultan of, Cromwell's letter to; 640 b.
 — merchants, company of; 247 a.
 — the plague of; 233 a.
 — tin sold in; 92 b.
 — "full of money in transitu" (1669); 134 a.
- Turkish :
 — pirates; 235 b, 236 a.
 — — ships seized by; 640 b.

- Turks, the : expedition against (1482); 298 b, 301 b.
 campaign against (1738); 27 b.
 large number of ships taken by; 238 b.
 capture by; 239 b.
 woman taken prisoner by; 237 b.
- Turlagh; 516 b.
- Turnbull :
 Adam, letters of; 289 b, 295 b.
 Lt.-Col. George, letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 John, page; 278 a.
- Turner :
 Baron; 101 a, 138 b, 150 b.
 — order for; 127 b.
 Capt.; 553 a.
 Bartholomew, of Naas, petition of; 521 a.
 Charles, letter of; 14 a.
 Sir Charles, Commissioner of Trade; 34 a.
 Charles, of the Treasury, warrant by; 79 a.
 Christopher, of Milton Earnest; 4 a.
 Sir Ed., letter to; 212 a.
 Sir Edward, speaker; 252 a.
 John; 170 b.
 — of Dursley, will of; 335 a.
 Lieut. Saml., letter of; 290 b.
 Thomas, letter of; 292 b.
 — auditor; 419 a.
 Sir Thomas, Recorder of London (1683); 232 a.
 W. H., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 William, counter tenor; 12 b.
- Turnor :
 Ensign Anthony; 591 b.
 Edw., Attorney-General of Duke of York, commission to (1660); 279 b.
- Turnour, Lieut. Geo., letters of; 292 a, 293 b.
- Turpin, Turpin :
 Lady, gift by; 428 a.
 John, conspirator; 434 a.
 William, sheriff of co. Leicester, letter to; 431 b.
 Sir William, commission to; 418 a.
- Turrett, Robert, of Kettleby; 434 a.
- Turton :
 v. White; 161 a.
 Robert, petition, &c. of; 161 a.
- Turum, Wm.; 381 a.
- Turvill, Turvyle :
 Henry, letter of; 432 b.
 John, payment to; 429 b.
 — letter to; 437 b.
 — his bill for maces; 439 a.
- Tuscany, Duke of (1715), letter of; 40 b.
- Tutbury, Charles I. at; 427 b.
- Tutchin, Anthony, of the Trinity House; 256 b.
- Twamlawa, Liulpho; 356 a, 356 b.
- Tweddall, Capt.; 393 a.
- Tweed, Henry, of the Mint; 66 a.
- Tweeddale, Marquis of :
 letters of (1706); 32 a.
 letter of (1709); 37 b.
- Twickenham; 55 b.
 letters dated at; 56 b.
 Pope at; 54 b, 55 a.
- Twinstead; 334 b.
- Twisden :
 Mr. Justice; 116 b, 128 a, 138 b, 141 b.
 — order for; 127 b.
- Twiss, Lieut. Col. Wm., letter of; 296 a.
- Twyford : pool in; 263 b.
 prebend of; 633 a.
- Tyall, John, of Colchester, will of; 332 a.
- Tyars, Thomas, of Leicester; 425 b.
- Tychburne :
 Colonel Sir Henry; 592 b.
 Capt. William; 597 a.
- Tydd St. Giles; 335 b.
- Tydden-in-Alton, Hampshire; 263 b.
- Tye, John, of Melford, will of; 334 a.
- Tyce, John and Cecilia, grant to; 342 a.
- Tyes, Edmond; 272 b.
- Tygo, Dame Bate, chastwoman, of Lynn, will of; 334 a.
- Tykhull, Rauff, of Blechingley, will of; 333 a.
- Tyldesley, John de; 367 a.
- Tyler :
 George, letter of; 290 b.
 John, of Wells; 639 b.
- Tynayn, Robert, of Witchford (Wittfortb, Ely), will of; 332 b.
- Tyney, Edmond, Master of the Revels; 431 a.
- Tylor, Thomas, jun., of Beckley, will of; 334 b.
- Tymolyn, co. Kidare; 528 b.
- Tymplyn, John, of Ipswich, will of; 335 b.
- Tyndale, William, paper by; 92 b.
- Tyndall, John, commissioner; 272 b.
- Tyne, the river; 237 b, 238 a, 245 b.
- Tynemouth; 212 a. lights at; 257 b, 258 a, 258 b, 259 a.
- Tyneswyke, Richard and Alice de, hence to; 1 b.
- Tynewell, John of, Bishop of Lincoln; 412 b.
- Tyngewik, Nicholas de; 342 b.
- Tyngulle, Thomas and Agnes, of Leicester; 420 a.
- Tynterne :
 abbey; 323 b.
 abbot of; 345 a.
- Tyrawley, Lord :
 letter of (1708); 36 a.
 — (1709); 37 b.
 — (1711); 40 a.
 letters of (1714); 49 a, 58 b.
- Tyrconnell; 612 a.
 Earl of, lands given to; 497 b.
 — forfeiture of his lands; 498 a.
 — grant to; 499 a.
 — (1691); 560 b, 565 a.
 — his skirmish (1642); 603 b.
 Duke of, Richard Talbot, letters of (1689-1690); 493 a, et seq.
 Duchess of, letters of; 51 b.
 — letter of (1711); 40 a.
 Lady, her jointure; 25 b.
- Tyrlington, Franke of; 423 a.
- Tyrone; 616 b.
 county, losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
 Earl of, Hugh O'Neill created; 602 b.
 — his sons; ib.
- Tyrell, Tyrell :
 Dr., letter of; 607 b.
 Justice (1667); 112 a.
 Cate, wife of Dr. Shiel; 609 a.
 Edward, letters of; 40 a.
 Sir Edward; 497 b, 498 a.
 Dr. Edward, letter of; 615 a.
 Father James; 610 b.
 Sir James, his Chronicle; 354 b.
 Thomas, the lawyer; 605 a.
 Sir Thomas, executor; 263 a.
 William; 615 b.
- Tyrwhitt, Mr.; 369 b.
- Tysoe, co. Warwick, deeds relating to; 265 b.
- Tytne, Capt., his troop; 10 a.
- Tytus, Capt.; 255 b.

U.

- Udale, Robert, petition of; 103 a.
- Udall, Quartermaster Hugh; 595 b.
- Uffenharn :
 Alice, of Downton, will of; 335 a.
 John, of Downton, will of; ib.
- Uffington; 333 b.
- Ufford, John, dean of Lincoln; 337 a.
- Uggan, Vggan :
 Sir John, of Bolston, co. Pembroke; 379 b.
 Richard; 379 b.
- Ugtreth, Robert; 271 a.
- Uhthoff, J., assistant at Poona, letters of; 291 a, 294 b.
- Ulcomb, Kent, church, &c. of; 337 b, 340 a.
- Ulm, magistrates of, letter of; 37 b.
- Ulster :
 army, &c. in; 603 a, 605 b, 606 b, 607 b, 610 b, 612 a, 618 a. plantation of; 99 a, 399 a, 581 a, 582 a. surveys of; 572 a, 581 a.
 losses in during rebellion (1641); 573 a. revolts in; 582 a.
 Provincial Assembly; 611 b.
 Bishop General of, E. MacMahon; 612 a.
- Umpton, Sir Edward, his brother Henry; 630 b.
- Uncle, William, of Woodchurch, will of; 340 a.
- Undertakers, the, Cahal in Ireland called; 176 a.
- Underwall, Hamo; 342 b.
- Underwood :
 Mr., of Dublin; 196 b.
 James, a soldier; 9 a.
- Unicorn, the ship; 242 a, 245 b.
- Uniformity, Act of; 387 a.
- Union Act, the (1707); 394 a, 394 b, 395 a.
- Union Jack, the; 249 b.
- United Provinces; 283 b.
 plague in; 387 b.
- Upfield, Robert, trooper, petitions of; 534 b, 541 b.
- Uphaven; 630 a.
- Upwell; 333 b.
- Urban III., Pope, bulls of; 317 a.

Urban IV., Pope, bulls of; 318 a.
 Urban V., Pope, bulls of; 318 a, 338 b.
 Urban VI., Pope, bulls of; 318 b, 340 a.
 Urbick, M., letters of; 36 a, 37 b.
 Urganda, prophecy of; 32 a.
 Urie; 301 a.
 Urignon, G., letter of; 294 a.
 Ursel, Comte d', letters of; 32 a, 37 b.
 Ursinis, Latinus de; 264 b.
 Uxburn, co. York; 271 a.
 Ushaw College, MSS. at; xxiii.
 Usher:
 Cusack v., motion paper, &c.; 149 b.
 Capt., prisoner in Ireland; 600 b.
 alias Holmes, Bridget; 548 b.
 James, Primate; 583 b.
 Capt. John, weekly charge of his troop; 598 b.
 Robert, of Crumlin, his will; 548 b.
 Usury; 134 b.
 Utboff, James, letter of; 289 b.
 Utrecht; 553 a.
 letters dated at; 41 a, 557 b.
 Popish bishoprics of; 198 a, 198 b. congress at; 40 b.
 peace of; 395 b.
 Uttoxeter; 335 b.
 Uvedale, Alice, her marriage; 263 b.
 Uxbridge; 630 a.
 the army at (1688); 555 b, 556 a.

V.

Vaaghan, Ensign Thomas; 591 a.
 Vaccination, report on; 233 b.
 Vaccine establishment, a national; 233 b.
 Vaehan, Richard, Archdeacon of Surrey; 338 a.
 Vackerbadt, Comte de, letters of (1706); 31 b.
 Vackerhart, Comte de, letters of; 39 a.
 Vaghane, John, adventurer; 511 a.
 Valance, Robert, executor; 634 a.
 Valchtonn; 307 a.
 Valdez, Comte de, letters of; 39 a.
 Vale Royal, co. Chester; 401 b.
 Valée, M. la, letters of; 39 a.
 Valence, Aymer de, Earl of Pembroke; 262 b.
 Valencia; 18 a.
 letters, &c. dated at; 16 a, 16 b, 25 a, 27 a, 44 a, 58 a.
 Valenciennes, town of; 36 b.
 Valensis, Robertus, witness; 270 a.
 Valentia:
 Lady, daughter of Lord Lyttelton; 206 a, and note.
 Wm. de; 172 a.
 Valentine:
 Benjamin; 118 b.
 Robert, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 Valerianis, the, painting by; 63 a.
 Valery, General de, letters of; 39 a.
 Valethons, Sanson, of Derwbi, gift by; 408 a.
 Valeur, Her Majesty's ship (1706); 394 a.
 Valladolid:
 document dated at; 40 a.
 University; 455 a.
 Valliere, Marquis de la, letter of; 37 b.
 Valloniis, W. de, witness; 304 b.
 Valmonde, Lady (1738); 13 b.
 Valoniis, Alicia de; 300 b.
 Valoynes:
 Walter de; 345 a.
 William, Walter, and Peter, trespassers; 347 a.
 Valsasine, Comte, letter of; 39 a.
 Van Brock, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Van der Beke, M., letter of; 40 b.
 Van der Broeck, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Van der Heek, M., letter of; ib.
 Van der Kaa, M., letters of; 37 b, 39 a, 40 a.
 Van der Meere, M., letter of; 40 b.
 Van der Nath, Vandernath; 31 b.
 M., letter of; 36 a.
 Comte, letter of; 36 b.
 Van der Vehen, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Van Galen, Dr., of Utrecht; 553 a.
 Van Haren, treaty signed by; 12 a.
 Van Loor, Maria; 143 a.
 Van Mullen, a quack; 230 b.
 Van Rossensteyn:
 John; 143 a.
 Mauritz; 143 a.
 Van Stocken, M., letters of; 31 b, 36 a, 36 b, 37 b.
 Vanas, Major, letter of; 295 b.

Vanburgh:
 Sir John, letters of; 25 b, 39 a, 54 a.
 — letter to; 25 b.
 Vandal, M., letter of; 39 a.
 Vandegraaff, Governor, letter of; 294 b.
 Vandenbergh, M., letter of; 40 a.
 Vandeput, Mr.; 134 b.
 Vunderesse, Mr.; 363 a.
 Vander Heyden, Henry, postmaster, papers by; 99 b.
 Vanderkan:
 M., letter of; 36 a.
 P., letter of; 40 b.
 Vandeuil, Madame de, letter of; 37 b.
 Vandyck:
 portrait by; 232 a. notice of; 234 a.
 Vane:
 Henry, letters of; 247 b, 248 a.
 — Secretary of State; 584 a.
 Vanhouen, Francis, merchant; 209 a.
 Vannoe, "little Jacky"; 392 a.
 Vanschoonhoun, Parret, merchant; 209 a.
 Vargandt, Lieut., letter of; 295 b.
 Vargas, M., letter of; 39 a.
 Vauasor, Sir Henry; 271 a.
 Vaubonne, Marquis de (1708), letter of; 36 a.
 Vaudemont, Prince of, letters of (1707); 32 a.
 Vaughan:
 —, killed; 611 a.
 Lord (1665); 102 b.
 — (1668); 123 b.
 — privilege case (1670); 140 a.
 Lord Chief Justice, as Speaker of House of Lords, letter to; 114 a.
 —; 141 b, 160 a, 164 b, 315 a.
 — commission to; 139 a.
 Mr., of the Temple; 167 a, 171 b, 172 a, 173 a.
 Baron (1827); 369 b.
 Edward, Esq., grant to; 94 a.
 Sir Henry, report on case of; 122 b.
 afterwards Halford, Henry; 233 a.
 Dr. James, Dean of Achonry; 516 b.
 Sir John, Chief Justice of Common Pleas, commission to; 128 a.
 John, speeches of; 168 a, 169 a.
 Katherine, wife of John, of Bristol, will of; 334 b.
 Owen, licence farmer, petitions of; 505 a, 511 a.
 — answer to; 545 b.
 Sir William; 610 b.
 Vaux:
 Lord, his estate (1644); 4 b.
 Sir Theodore, petition of; 133 b.
 Vauxhall, manor of; 322 b.
 Vavasour, —, of the Trinity House; 258 a.
 Veagleman:
 Robert, clerk of the Trinity House; 257 a.
 — letters of; 257 b–259 a, passim.
 — letter to; 258 a.
 Veer:
 George, Knt., buried at Earls Colne, will of; 334 b.
 Matilda de, Countess of Oxford, her will; 338 a.
 Vegelin, M., letter of; 36 a.
 Vehlen, Comte, letter of; 40 a.
 Veile, Sir John, paymaster, letters to; 11 b.
 Velasco, Antonio de, letter of; 213 b.
 Veldon, Thomas; 499 b.
 Velen, Comte de, letter of; 37 b.
 Velers, Sir James, commission to; 413 a.
 Vellen, Comte, letter of; 36 a.
 Velnirtot, William de, of Leicester; 410 b.
 Ven, Lieut. Richard; 592 a.
 Venab', Wm. de; 356 a.
 Venables:
 —, at Ballimore; 615 a, 618 a.
 Col., in Ireland; 599 a.
 Sir Hugh de; 358 b.
 Tho., letter of; 375 b.
 William, of Kidertou, and citizens of Chester; 371 a.
 Wm. de; 537 a.
 Venice; 16 b, 23 a, 134 b, 283 a.
 letters dated at; 32 b, 47 b.
 the great canal in; 63 a.
 news-letters from (1691); 282 a.
 Venour, John de, grant to; 343 b.
 Ventris, Charles, his estate; 5 b.
 Ventry, Charles; 3 a.
 Venzat, Comte de, letter of; 39 a.
 Verceil, letter dated at; 552 b.
 Verd', Verdum, Wm. de; 356 a, 356 b.
 Verdon, Nicholas, son of John de, of Draycote; 423 a.
 Vere:
 Lord, Baron of Tilbury, petition to; 244 b.
 Sir Francis, challenge to; 585 a.
 Sir Horace, letter to; 214 b.
 Hugh de, Earl of Oxford; 632 b, 635 a.
 Maad de, Countess of Oxford; 262 b.

Vergreen, the Audience, commissioner; 95 a.

Vernemil, Sir J. Fastolf at; 268 a.

Verney :

Lord, sale of his books (1783); 234 a.

Lady Diana, Act for establishing marriage agreements of; 137 b.

Sir Grelliv, Act for establishing marriage agreements of; ib.

Sir Harry, Bart., MSS. of; xxii.

Richard; 137 b.

— letters of; 379 a, 392 b.

Vernon :

Mr., letters of; 31 b, 32 a.

— of the Prize Office; 44 a.

—; 285 b.

Mr. Secretary; 393 a.

— letter of; ib.

Admiral; 59 b.

Capt.; 617 a.

— of Clontarf; 531 b.

Edoárd, fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford; 350 b.

George; 152 a.

Grace, petition of; 119 a.

James, letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 40 b.

Secretary, James, letters of; 392 b.

John, letter of; 290 a.

Richard de; 356 b.

Warin de; 357 a.

Vernons, the, of Haslington; 152 a.

Vernum, Warin de; 356 a, 356 b.

Verrells, John; 126 a.

Verrue, siege of; 21 b.

Vers de Societé, 18th century; 63 b.

Versailles; 285 a.

letter dated at; 558 a.

Louis XV. at; 62 b.

Vertsauf, Richard, bailiff of Nottingham; 415 b.

Vertsauf, Richard, bailiff of Nottingham; 414 a.

Verveins; 217 b.

Vesci, Vesey, Vesey :

—; 192 b.

Viscount de, Thomas; 190 a, note.

Lady de; 265 a.

Mr., of Lucan; 491 a.

Vetch, Col., governor of Annapolis; 50 b.

Vetry, Francis, document signed by; 4 a.

Vggan. See Uggan.

Vickers or Wickers, W., senator; 12 b.

Victim, the, a tragedy; 50 b.

Victor Amadé, Duke of Savoy (?), letter of; 27 a.

Victor Amadeus, King, letter of (1636); 552 b.

Victoria, Ferdinand de, king's physician; 234 b.

Victory, the ship; 239 a.

Vienna; 33 b.

letters dated at, 14 a, 16 b, 17 b, 19 a, et seq., 24 b, 31 a, 36 a, 44 a, 47 b, 57 b, 484 b.

Court of; 32 b, 33 b.

Council of; 352 a, 352 b.

Vigo; 25 b.

coinage of gold and silver taken at; 80 a, 86 a.

Vigors, C.; 581 b.

Vilein, Robert the, his daughter Silverun; 408 b.

Villafranca, letters dated at; 218 a.

Villa Hermosa, Duke de; 212 b.

Villa Mediana, Count de, commissioner; 95 a.

Villa Viçosa; 25 b.

Villars :

Marshal, or Comte de; 20 a, 26 b, 44 a.

— letters of; 37 b, 38 a, 39 a, 39 b, 40 b.

— a prisoner; 17 b.

— Duke of Marlborough's victory over (1711); 40 a.

Villegas, M. de, letter of; 36 a.

Villelongue, Comte de, letter of; 37 b.

Villeroi :

the French king's secretary; 283 b.

Aligre, document signed by; 553 a.

Marshal de, letter of (1706); 31 b.

M. de; 34 a.

Villers, Villiers :

La baronne douairière de (1708), letter of; 36 a.

Capt. de, letter of; 37 b.

M. de, letters of; 39 a.

Major, in Ireland; 600 a.

— a prisoner; 600 b.

Mr. de, his death; 564 b.

Mrs., letter of; 57 a.

Dame Barbary, widow, petition of; x., 103 b.

Blase, of Leicester; 430 b.

Edward, of the Mint; 66 a.

— master of Duke of York's robes; 279 a.

— commission to; 280 a.

Sir Edward, his petition, &c. concerning Tynemouth lights;

257 b, 258 a, 258 b, 259 a.

Lady Frances, warrants to pay; 280 b, 281 a.

Sir George, his soldiers; 439 b.

Major John; 595 b.

Villet, Madam de; 571 a.

Villette, Sr. de, daughter of Lady Bolingbroke, letters of; 567 b.

Villeurs, Sir George, at Tilbury camp; 432 b.

Vimar, M., letter of; 36 a.

Vimare, M. de, letter of; 37 b.

Vimbodia, camp at, letter dated at; 58 a.

Vinbody, letter dated at; 25 a.

Vincent :

pedigrees by; 586 b, note.

John, of North Tuddenham, will of; 333

Capt. W., letter of; 293 b.

Will., senr., of Walsingham, will of; 334 a.

William, prisoner, petition of; 527 a.

— defendant; 529 b.

— prisoner; 545 b.

Vinegar, use of; 232 b.

Vinell, Alwyn de; 639 a.

Viner, Mr., minister of Barton; 4 a.

"Vineyard," the, case of, taken by Spain; 213 a, 213 b, 214 a.

Vinram, John, professor of theology; 306 b.

Vinter, George; 124 b.

Vintners of London, master and others of Company of, petition of; 126 b.

Violame, M. de, a prisoner; 17 b.

Virgate of land; 322 b.

Virgil, MS. copy of his Eclogues, &c.; 100 b.

Virgilins, a foreigner, rector of Meopham; 330 b.

Virginia; 158 b.

governor of; 46 b, 47 a.

papers relating to; 47 b.

adventure for; 237 a.

plan for subjecting colony of to English Government (1781); 259 a.

Company, governors of, letter of; 435 b.

— lottery for the settlement of; ib.

Virénia (Virginia?); 158 b.

Vitriol, elixir of, its use; 232 b.

Vivares, les; 36 b.

Viviano, painting by; 100 b.

Vlaedring; 554 b.

Vuiet, Martin, son of; 300 b.

Volga, the river; 23 a.

Volmar, Baron de, letters of (1706); 32 a.

Voltaire, his "General History"; 489 a.

Vooght :

Col., letters of; 31 b.

Vicomte de, letters of (1706); 31 b, 36 a.

Voragine, Jacobus de; 583 a.

Vos, M. Jolours de, letter of; 39 a.

Vosper, James; 128 a.

Vowell, John; 584 a.

Vrquhairt; 309 b.

Vrvel; 306 b, 307 b.

Vryberge :

M., States envoy; 34 a.

letters of; 31 b, 32 b, 36 a, 37 a.

Vsher, Captain John; 595 a.

Vuiros, Bernardo, councillor; 58 a.

Vuldre, Gervis; 386 b.

Vulson, M., letter of; 40 a.

Vyell, Ensign Henry; 592 b.

Vyner :

Sir Robert; 131 a, 131 b, 155 a, 155 b, 158 b.

— petition, &c. of; 163 b.

Sir Thomas, payment to; 95 a.

Vynyng, John, alias Dyer, of Wincanton (Vyncalton), will of;

332 b.

Vyse, Sir Richard, parson of Fallay; 266 a.

W.

Waad, Sir W. (1594), letter of; 376 a.

Wackerbart, Comte, letters of; 39 b, 40 b.

Wadding, Luke; 583 a, 614 a.

Waddy, Margaret, petition of; 547 a.

Wade :

Dame Anne, deceased; 161 a.

Brigadier, instructions to; 47 a.

Major-General, instructions to; 50 b.

General; 312 a.

Marshal; 569 a.

Richard, affidavit of; 136 b.

Will., of Tewkesbury, will of; 335 a.

Sir William, lieutenant of the Tower; 87 a, 88 a.

— letter of; 88 b.

— letter to; ib.

Wadhurst; 333 a.

Wadloe, Francis, petition of; 244 b.

- Wadlow, John, affidavit of; 109 a.
Wadyngton, William, fishmonger, London, will of; 333 a.
Wafar, Simon; 609 b.
Wagenheim, Colonel, letter of; 294 a.
Wager :
— Admiral, his capture of galleons; 33 a.
— Sir Charles; 315 a.
Wages; 377 b.
Waghorn, Mr.; 63 a.
Wagstaff, Thomas, of Yarmouth, about to go on pilgrimage to St. Jany's of Gales, will of; 334 b.
Wagstaffe, Mr.; 492 a.
Walish :
— Col. James, petition of; 500 a, 509 b.
— John and Margaret, petition of; 514 b.
Wainfleet, a writer on medicine; 228 a.
Wainsford, John, commissioner; 275 a.
Waite :
— Thomas, letters of; 195 b, 200 b.
— commissioner; 275 a.
"Waites," for Chester, order; 364 a.
Walith, Mr., paymaster of Navy; 129 b, 130 a, 130 b.
Waiting, Thomas, Fellow of the College of Plashy, will of; 333 a.
Wake :
— G., letter of; 36 a.
— George, Dr. of Laws, petition, &c. of; 104 a.
— Isaac, paper by; 585 a.
— William, Archbishop, letter of; 100 b.
Wakefield, Henry; 342 a.
Wakefield; 637 a.
— Walton Hall, near; xiii., 636 a.
Wakefield v. Marquis of Huntley; 170 b.
Wakeham, Richard, disbanded Esaign; 529 a.
Wakelyn, William, of Bowers; 209 b.
Walberswieke haven; 239 a, 245 a.
Walehtoun; 305 b.
Waleot, Mr., his invention; 260 a.
Waleott, Thomas, prisoner, petition of; 541 b.
Waldegrave :
— Lord (1756); 222 b.
— to be Head of the Treasury (1757); 223 b, 224 a.
— sale of Duchess of Portsmouth's annuity to; 632 a.
— Lady, letter of; 294 b.
— her assignment to Queen Anne's Bounty; 632 a.
Walden, co. Essex; 281 b, 282 a, 332 a.
— document dated at; 416 a, 416 b.
— abbot of, survey and extent of manors of; 277 a, 277 b.
— account book of wardens of church of; xiii., 277 a, 277 b.
— rental of manor of; 284 a.
Walding, Thomas, petition of; 518 b.
Waldingfield; 333 b, 335 b.
Waldrom, Lieut. John; 594 b.
Wale, Thomas; 626 b.
Waledone, abbot of; 633 a.
Walef, Baron de, letters of; 36 a, 39 a, 40 a.
Walemond, Richard de, gift by; 1 b.
Walensis, Robert and Eustace; 270 b.
Wales :
— coal of, exchanged for Irish cattle; 120 a.
— revolted against Charles I.; 212 b.
— marches of, council for, warrant, &c. of; 374 a.
— dioceses of, Abp. Peckham's visitation of; 320 a.
— their relations with the see of Canterbury; 320 b.
— Prince of, Arthur, son of Henry VII.; 402 b.
— afterwards Charles I., letters of and to concerning his match with the Infanta; 215 b, 216 a, 216 b.
— money furnished to; 215 b.
— afterwards Charles II., letter to; 211 b.
— letter of (1702); 57 b.
— letters of; 54 a.
— afterwards Geo. II., letter to; 15 b.
— (1716); 84 a.
— warrant by; 85 a.
— Frederick, his levée (1756); 222 b.
— and Princess; 222 b.
— his proposed allowance; 566 a.
— George II. and; 566 b, 568 a.
— his death, debts, &c.; 570 b, 572 a.
— answer of Treves, the money lender, to; 288 b.
— Princess Dowager of, and her children (1751); 284 a, 284 b.
Waleys, Stephen le, witness; 270 b.
Walford, Mr., of the Exeter Mint; 74 b.
Walgrave, Lord, death of (1763); 285 b.
Walker :
— v. Sir John Lambe; 170 b.
— Mr., town clerk of Chester; 362 b.
— Cornet Abra.; 597 a.
— Edward, Garter King of Arms, roll of peers by (1666-1667); 106 b, 113 b.
— — roll of peers by; 139 a.
— of Ramridge; 631 b.
— John; 174 a.
— petition of; 85 a.
— Thomas, letter to; 13 b.
Walker—cont.
— Randall, information of; 383 b.
— Thomas; 382 b.
— Sir Walker, commission to; 280 b.
— Will., of Newland, Heref. dioc., will of; 334 b.
Walkhampton, co. Devon; 637 a.
Walkin, Mr.; 39 a.
Walkins, Charles, quartermaster; 597 a.
Wall :
— Capt., his company; 530 b.
— Colonel, his treachery; 612 b.
— Mr., letter of; 284 a.
— James, seaman, petition of; 509 a.
— Captain Nicholas; 595 a.
— Peter, seaman, petition of; 509 a.
— Robert, son of John; 377 a.
— Ulick, petition of; 500 a.
— — his father Edward; ib.
— — petition of; 515 b.
— — his father Edward, of Ballinikill; ib.
— Wm., treasurer of Chester; 370 a.
Wallace, James; 583 b.
Wallenstein, his character, &c.; 584 b.
Waller :
— Mr., verses by; 217 b.
— Sir Hardress; 508 b.
— — charges against; 582 a.
— — in Kerry; 601 b.
— Sir W.; 5 b.
— Sir William (1684); 30 b.
— — letters of; 1 a, 3 b.
Wallsgrove, alias Flytt, John, of Worcester; 638 b.
Walley, Walley :
— Arthur; 365 b.
— Charles, alderman of Chester, commission to; 361 b.
— — mayor of Chester; 365 b.
— Ralph, of Chester; 361 b.
— Richard; 139 b.
— Robert, petition of; 139 b.
Wallingford; 287 a.
— corporation, MSS. of; xxiv.
— election (1754); 285 a.
— Lady (1714) letter of; 57 a.
Wallington; 334 a.
— deeds for; 262 b.
Wallis :
— Dr., deeeperer; 50 b.
— Jacob, petition of; 71 b.
— John, petition of; 126 a.
— — payment t 90 a.
— Luke; 482 a.
— Marshal; 27 b.
— Ralph, petition of; 503 b.
— — petition of; 543 b.
Wallop, Walloppe :
— Sir Henry; 61 a, 377 b.
— — Treasurer-at-War in Ireland; 378 b, 397 a.
— — Her Majesty's Treasurer-at-the-Wars (1597); 378 b.
— — letter to; 379 b.
— — letters to his deputy at Chester, and others; 379 a.
— J., warrant by; 76 b.
Walmesley :
— Thomas, serjeant-at-law, grant to; 272 a.
— — agreements by; 272 b.
— — Queen's justice; 273 a.
Walne, alias Stanley, W., transcriber; 420 a.
Walney; 635 b.
Walpole; 333 b.
— —, in a bad way (1715); 59 a.
— Lieut.-Col., a Scotchman; 34 a.
— Mr., letter of (1708); 35 b.
— — (1709); 37 a.
— — (1710); 38 a.
— — at Fontainebleau (1728); 62 a.
— — (1729); 62 b.
— Mrs., of Houghton; 25 b.
— Lady, her conduct at Lucea (1736); 570 b.
— — at Pisa; ib.
— Sir Edward; 219 b.
— Horace; 315 a.
— Ralph, Bishop of Norwich; 345 a.
— R., letter of; 40 a.
— Sir Robert; 26 a, 315 a.
— — letter of (1714); 57 a.
— — documents signed by; 70 b, 85 a, 85 b.
— — warrant by; 79 a.
— — "address" to; 63 b.
— — his excise scheme, foreign policy, &c.; 18 a.
— — his popularity; 18 b.
— — the Duchess of Marlborough and; 18 a.
— — Creed referring to; 25 b.
— — his ministry; 311 a.
— — his administration; 444 b.
— — portrait of; 313 a.
— Robert, letter of; 290 b.
— Will., of Thurlow St. Peter's, will of; 333 a.

- Walsall, Francis, D.D., chaplain, his sequestration; 4 a, 4 b.
- Walsh:
- Mr.; 19 a.
 - his History of the Irish Remonstrance; 474 a.
 - Father, his account of the Irish rebellion; 575 a.
 - Edmond, lands held by; 520 b.
 - Lieut. Edmond; 594 a.
 - George; 163 b.
 - answer of; 164 a.
 - quartermaster; 597 a.
 - Col. Hoyle; 543 b.
 - Peter, letters to; 582 b.
 - apostate friar, &c.; 607 b, 608 b, 609 b, 610 a, 612 b, 613 a.
 - Robert, petition of; 516 a.
 - Ensign Robert; 594 b.
- Walshman, Dr.; 233 b.
- Walsingham; 333 b, 334 a.
- Sir Francis, letters of; 227 b, 374 a, 396 a, 432 a, 583 b.
 - letters to; 396 b, 430 b.
 - farmer of customs at Chester; 360 b.
- Walter:
- meaning of the name; 587 a.
 - v. Walter (1641); 170 b.
 - John, of Bristol, will of; 335 b.
 - Richard, parson of Bramshott; 266 a.
 - Theobald, Herveus and Hubert; 586 a, 587 b.
 - W. G., letter of; 291 a.
- Walters, Mr., Admiralty solicitor; 46 b.
- Waltham; 347 b.
- abbot of; 345 a, 350 b, 632 b.
 - apostolic letters to; 346 a.
 - Cross, poor house at; 432 b.
 - John; 331 a.
 - Roger de, canon of St. Paul's; 633 a, 633 b.
 - Thos.; 367 b.
- Walton; 333 b.
- East; ib.
 - Hall, near Wakefield, MSS. at; xiii., 636 a.
 - dioc. of Norwich; 335 b.
 - priory; 264 b.
 - Bryan, clerk; 635 a.
 - Robert, draper, payment to; 94 b.
- Walworth:
- land in; 319 a.
 - manor of; 322 b, 328 a.
- Wandesford:
- Ensign Richard; 594 a.
 - Thomas, petition of; 551 a.
 - Wm., 143 a.
 - answer of; ib.
- Wandlesworth, Ralph de, cordwainer; 633 a.
- Wangenheim, Colonel, letter of; 294 b.
- Wangford; 334 a.
- Wanney, Sir Edmund; 358 b.
- Wanor, Richard, of Barking, will of; 332 a.
- Want, Norman le, gift by; 323 a.
- Wapley; 335 a.
- Wapping; 158 a, 233 b, 238 b, 239 a, 239 b, 241 b, 250 a, 253 a.
- Warburton:
- Bishop, on Voltaire; 489 a.
 - Mr.; 55 b.
 - P., counsellor; 383 a.
 - Peter, letter of; 375 a.
 - R. E. Egerton, Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 - Sergeant, recorder of Chester, 377 b.
 - William, of Leicester; 419 a, 439 b.
- Wareop, Edmond; 278 a.
- Ward de Bermingham, Lord, Edward (1670), writ of summons to; 147 a.
- Ward, Warde:
- Captain Arthur; 593 a.
 - Sir Christopher; 271 a.
 - George, bearward, payment to; 427 b.
 - Capt. John, of Pontefract; 274 b.
 - John; 151 b.
 - alderman and grocer, of London, will of; 333 a.
 - Leonard, of Pontefract; 274 a, 275 b.
 - Lidia; 160 b.
 - Margaret, of Beccles, will of; 334 a.
 - Peter, lands held by; 320 a.
 - Richard, letter of; 417 b.
 - Robt., certificate by; 506 a.
 - Lieut.-Col. Swain, letter of; 294 b.
 - Thomas, letter of; 434 b.
 - of Wymondeswold; 414 a.
 - William, priest, of Litteringham, will of; 334 a.
- Wardboyes, co. Huntingdon, manor, Act for settling boundary of; 153 b.
- Wardboyes Fen, co. Huntingdon; 153 b.
- Warden, William, lands held by; 520 b.
- Wardlaw, Sir Henry of, of Tory, witness; 305 b.
- Wardlow, Capt., and Spurn lights; 258 a.
- Wardour, Wm., clerk of the Polls; 128 a.
- Wards, court of; 217 b.
- Ware:
- letter dated at; 210 a.
 - Mr.; 398 a.
 - or Warre, Lieut.-Col. Charles, letters of; 291 a, 293 b, 294 a.
 - Sir James, his works; 450 a, 455 a, 586 a.
 - his niece's petition; 501 b, 520 a.
 - auditor-general; 507 a, 512 a, 550 b.
 - certificate of; 509 b.
 - James; 398 a.
 - letter to; ib.
 - John, of Castletown, petition of his orphans; 519 b.
 - alleged murder of; ib.
- Warret, note on; 322 a.
- Wareham river; 208 b.
- Warehorn; 324 a.
- Warewice, Radulf de; 341 a.
- Warfield, Berks, manor; 284 a.
- Wargrave:
- Berks; 283 b.
 - Momburyebarnes; 283 b.
- Warham:
- William, afterwards Abp. of Canterbury, lease to; 264 a.
 - his election; 331 b.
- Warin, John, alderman of Leicester; 405 a.
- Warkeworth, John, master of St. Peter's, Cambridge, will of; 332 b.
- Warlice, Griffin and William of; 405 b.
- Warley, William, Dean of St. Paul's; 634 b.
- Warmfield, vicar of; 637 a.
- Warmingham, John, of Chester; 361 b.
- Warmwell, Mr., prophecy by; 209 a.
- Warnebold and Richenda, Robert son of; 300 b.
- Warneford:
- Edward, son of Oliver; 376 b.
 - John, son of Elizabeth; 376 a.
 - examination, &c. of; 397 a.
- Warner:
- Armiger, payment to; 95 a.
 - Edmond, affidavit of; 109 b.
 - Dr. Ferdinando; 451 b.
 - his history of Ireland; 469 a, 470 b, 474 a, 475 a, 475 b, 476 b, 484 a, 574 a.
 - his treatment by Dr. Smollett, &c.; 478 a.
 - James, deceased; 148 b.
 - John, gent.; 234 a.
 - jun., armourer, of London, will of; 333 a.
 - Thomas; 268 a.
- Warr, Edward, his lands in Limerick; 498 b.
- Warren:
- Earl of (1312), Piers Gaveston and; 354 a.
 - (1314), letter to; 332 b.
 - Major, his troop; 529 a.
 - Mr., of St. Michael's, Wood St.; 50 a.
 - C., opinion of; 233 b.
 - Lieut. Ed., in Wexford; 601 a.
 - Elizabeth, petition of; 533 a.
 - Garret, trooper; 541 b.
 - Henry, petition of, &c.; 540 b, 543 b.
 - replication of; 547 b.
 - John, answer to his petition, &c.; 518 b, 519 a.
 - Col. John, petition of; 510 a.
 - Ensign John; 521 a.
 - William de, witness; 270 a.
- Wars of England, Civil, an epitome of, a manuscript entitled; 233 b.
- Warter, priory of, co. York; 159 b, 160 a.
- Warwick; 3 b, 332 a, 429 b, 434 a.
- letters dated at; 219 b, 379 a, 382 b.
 - county; 208 b, 210 a, 379 a.
 - deeds relating to; 265 b.
- Warwick:
- Earl of (1250), J. de Plessesis; 265 b.
 - (15th century), bonds by; 267 b.
 - letter of (1586); 431 b.
 - (1645); 8 a.
 - Nicholas de; 170 a.
 - Sir Philip; 131 b.
- Warsaw; 23 a.
- Wartenberg, Count, letters of (1705, &c.); 31 b, 32 b, 36 b, 38 a.
- Wartensleben, Comte, letter of; 36 b.
- Wartenslein, Count, letters of (1707); 32 b.
- Warter, J., letters of; 46 a.
- Warters, Anthony, vicar of Bromham; 4 b.
- Washer:
- Richard; 381 a.
 - Thomas; ib.
- Washington:
- General, letters of; 289 a.
 - letters to; ib.
 - George; 296 b.
 - Laur., direction of court signed by; 283 b.
- Washwhite:
- John; 155 b, 156 a, 156 b.
 - information of; 159 a.
 - petitions of; ib.

- Wassaner, Vice-Admiral; 34 b.
 Wassend, co. York; 273 a.
 Wastull, Wm. de, v. Matthew del Exchequer (18 Edw. I.); 170 a.
 Watch-meal tax :
 of Dumbarton; 310 b.
 of Kilpatrick; 308 a. account of; ib.
 Water, Andrea de, witness; 408 a.
 Water, John att, of Wells, will of; 332 b.
 Water, sea, experiments in distillation of; 232 b.
 Watere, Gamaliel atte, his widow Cecilia; 343 b.
 Waterford; 138 a, 450 b, 495 b, 496 b, 335 b, 538 a, 539 b, 542 a, 580 a, 611 b, 624 a.
 siege of; 580 a.
 port of; 252 a, 254 a.
 citizens of; 582 a.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiv.
 congregation; 609 b.
 houses in; 501 a. licences to trade in; 501 a, 503 b.
 sheriff of, petition of; 501 b.
 county, the "depositions" concerning; 576 a.
 Waterhouse :
 Thomas, alderman (of Dublin?), petitions of; 521 b, 529 a.
 — replication of; 541 b.
 Waterman, Wilke, of Leicester; 404 b.
 Waters :
 et al. v. Powell; 170 b.
 Benjamin, Blue Coat boy; 256 a.
 Waterton, Charles, the naturalist, his home; 636 a.
 Watford; 335 b.
 Watrman, Gamil le, of Leicester; 405 b.
 Watkin, Henry, chaplain of Willesthorp; 271 a.
 Watkins, Mr., of the Signal Office; 255 b.
 Watlington, Gilbert; 282 a.
 Watson :
 —; 494 a.
 captain in James II.'s army; ib.
 Lord (1666); 104 a.
 Dr., chaplain to Duke of York (1660); 278 b.
 Lieut. John; 594 b.
 John, commissioner; 572 b, 573 b.
 Mrs. M., letter of; 290 b.
 Richard, of Amphilh, delinquent; 5 a.
 Robert, petition and apology of; 383 b.
 — son of Richard; 5 a.
 Valentine, letter of; 247 b.
 William; 637 a.
 — M.D., tract by; 233 a.
 Watsonis, Robertus filius; 316 b.
 Wattenille, Anne de, letter of; 37 b.
 Watts, Wattes :
 Edmund, clerk, of Bridgham, will of; 333 b.
 George, witness; 66 a.
 Henry; 164 b.
 John, arrest of; 431 b.
 Thomas, of Beauchamp Roding, will of; 332 b.
 William, letters of; 290 b, 294 b.
 Watur, John, skinner, of Norwich, will of; 334 a.
 Wauchop, Wauchope :
 A., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 Francis, Esq., prisoner; 46 a.
 — letters of; 46 a, 47 a.
 Wauesur, John and William le, witnesses; 270 b.
 Waugh, Dr.; 27 a.
 Wayfer :
 John, of Sherston; 639 a.
 Thomas; ib.
 Wayhous, Reginald, of Leicester; 411 a.
 Waynflete : hospital for lepers at; 264 b. school at; 264 b.
 Erlarkare of; 264 b.
 Bishop, letters to; 264 b, 268 b.
 — executor; 263 a.
 — grant by; 263 a.
 — purchase by; 263 b.
 — indenture by; 266 a.
 — executor of Lord Cromwell; 267 b.
 — petition to; 263 b.
 Wayte :
 Nicholas, his corrody; 339 b.
 Robert, petition of; 153 a.
 Weald, the, Kent; 325 b.
 Weaver, the river, Bill touching; 396 a.
 Weavers; 364 a.
 Webb :
 —, secretary to the Duke of Lennox; 246 a.
 Major-General; 33 b.
 — letter of; 36 a.
 John, alderman of Bristol, letter of; 379 b.
 Rev. Thomas, MSS. of; xxii.
 William, under-sheriff; 2 b.
 Webber, Agnes, wife of Will., Pewterer, of London, will of; 332 b.
 Webster :
 George, letters of; 289 b, 294 a, 294 b, 295 b.
 John le; 367 b.
 John, Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 Symon le; 367 b.
 Weddall, John, rector of St. Andrew's; 306 a.
 Weddel, Mr., his claim on the Treasury; 71 b.
 Weddell, Andrew, letter of; 291 a.
 Wedderburn :
 epithet by; 206 a.
 Anne, letters of; 39 a, 40 a.
 Wedmore; 335 a.
 Wee, Wey, or le Wee, church and rector of; 626 a, 626 b.
 627 a, 630 a.
 Weede, Everard de, States deputy; 12 a.
 Weekes :
 Col.; 153 a.
 Blanche, petition of; 519 b.
 Weir, Daniel; 289 a.
 Weiss, M., letter of; 36 a.
 Welby, Mr.; 121 b.
 Weld :
 Lady, v. Archbp. of Canterbury; 170 b.
 Humphrey; 228 b.
 Sir John, Act touching; 118 a, 121 b.
 Welderen, M., letter of; 37 b.
 Weldon :
 Sir Anthony, tract by; 60 b.
 Captain Arthur; 594 a.
 George; 123 b.
 — petition of; 123 a.
 — answer of; 123 b.
 Mr. Kitt, of Dublin; 471 b.
 Lieut. Richard; 594 a.
 Lieut. Walter; 594 b.
 William, of Athy; 510 b.
 Welham, Walter de, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Wellie, Isabella de, Lady de Vesey; 265 a.
 Wellington, Welynton, Thomas, of Ewelme; 627 b, 628 a.
 Wellmotts, John, trooper; 523 b.
 Wells; 332 b, 333 b, 334 b, 335 b. election at; 219 b, 220 a.
 seal of; 639 a.
 market; ib.
 archdeacon of (1 John); 404 b.
 Bishop's registry of; xxiv.
 corporation, MSS. of; ib.
 Dean and Chapter of, MSS. of; ib.
 vicars choral of, MSS. of; ib.
 Bishop Bubwith's almshouses at, report on MSS. of; 638 b.
 by-the-Sea; 334 a.
 Lieut. Edmund, letters of; 290 b.
 Wels, Comte, letter of; 39 a.
 Welsh :
 John, information of; 392 b.
 Oliver, marshal of Dublin; 538 a.
 Capt. Thos., letters of; 289 b, 294 a, 294 b.
 William; 120 a.
 Welsh rabbits, reference to; 567 a.
 Welsted, Mr., letter to; 24 a.
 Welz, Count de, letters of (1705); 31 b.
 Welymet, Robert, of Lavenham, will of; 335 b.
 Wemes :
 Lord of, Michael, witness; 305 a.
 David of, witness; ib.
 Michael of, witness; ib.
 Wemyss :
 Major, letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 — address to; 289 a.
 R. G. E., MSS. of; xxii.
 Wendover, letter dated at; 49 b.
 Wenaston; 333 b.
 Wentwage, Walter, treasurer; 93 a.
 Wentworth :
 Viscount (1636), Thomas, instructions to; 209 b.
 — (1636), letters of; 211 a, 211 b.
 Lord, Thomas, son of Lord Cleveland (1644); 3 a, 4 a, 6 a, 7 a.
 Lady, Henrietta Maria; 121 b.
 — Philadelphia, petition, &c., of; 121 b.
 Davey, order signed by; 275 a.
 Henry, knt., will of; 333 a.
 Sir John, commission to; 245 a.
 Peter, of the Admiralty; 247 b.
 Sir Peter; 114 b.
 — questions to be put to; ib.
 — speech of; 212 b.
 Sir Thomas, commissioner; 275 a.
 Weodon, in honor of Leicester; 411 a.
 Werburton, Richard de; 367 b.
 Werlen :
 Robert; 278 a.
 Major-General Robert; 367 b.
 Wermondsford, Essex; 334 b.

Wermyncham :

- Henry ; 368 b.
- Cicilie, his wife ; u
- Wern, John, certificate by ; 76 b
- Werpert, the ; 636 b.
- Wesel, evacuation of ; 285 a.
- Wescenham, William ; 268 a.
- Wesnam, Thomas, trooper ; 536 b.
- West :
- Mr., letter of ; 57 a.
- a grazier ; 157 a.
- Matthew ; 281 b.
- Ralph del, bailiff of Nottingham ; 414 a, 415 b.
- Thomas, letter of ; 291 a.

Westbroke :

- Anne, Abbess of Romsey ; 234 a.
- Will, haberdasher, of London, will of ; 332 b.

Westbury, manor ; 630 a.

Westby, Edward, gent., of London, will of ; 333 a.

Westcliff, manor of ; 319 a.

Westclive, parish of ; 350 a.

Westcote :

- co. Warwick, deeds relating to ; 265 b.
- Lord (1779), inheritor Hagley ; 206 a.

Westeley, Jacob, letter of ; 552 a.

Westenhanger ; 324 a.

Westenhulme, Sir John ; viii., 135 b.

Westenra, Mr., payment to ; 526 a.

Westerfethy, co. Kincardine, lands of ; 305 a.

Westerham ; 323 b.

church of ; ib.

rector of ; 352 a.

Westerloo, Marquis de, letters of (1706, &c.) ; 32 a, 36 a, 37 b,

40 a, 40 b.

Westermiller, Messrs. ; 32 a.

Westfield, William, abbot of Battle ; 336 a.

Westgate, Kent ; 319 b.

Westhorp :

Suffolk ; 277 b, 629 a.

Milo ; 271 a.

Westlee, manor ; 633 a.

Westleton ; 333 b.

Westmeath ; 603 a.

specification of lands in ; 520 a, 520 b.

James II.'s lands in ; 497 b, 498 a.

plantation in ; 582 a.

losses in, during rebellion (1641) ; 573 a.

governor of ; 604 a.

Earl of (1642) ; 603 b.

— (1648-52) ; 608 b, 612 b, 614 b, 616 a, 617 b.

— governor of Leinster (1650) ; 613 a, 615 a.

— cruelties of his men (1651) ; 613 b.

Westmeston ; 301 a.

Westminster. See London and Westminster.

Westminster, Marquis of, his MSS. ; xxii.

Westmoreland :

Earl of, Charles, writ of summons to (1666) ; 101 a.

— (1670) v. Lord Holles ; ix., 150 b.

— command of body guards taken from (1737) ; 568 a.

— letters of (1748) ; 569 b, et seq.

— (1752) ; 568 a.

Lady, letter of (1714) ; 57 a.

— letters of ; 569 a, et seq.

Westoes, William, of Leicester ; 432 a.

Weston :

Lord, Richard, petition to (1630) ; 244 b.

Mr. ; 149 a.

Mr. ; 286 b.

Benjn., certificate of ; 118 b.

John, of Leicester ; 413 b.

— de, constable of the Tower ; 88 a.

— and Margaret ; 265 a.

Nicholas, of Dublin, petition of ; 516 b.

Sir Richard ; 2 a, 585 a.

Robert, mercer, of Mondon, will of ; 333 a.

Thos. ; 365 b.

Westphalia, circle of ; 32 a.

Westwell, Kent, manor of ; 328 b.

rector of ; ib.

lands in ; 319 a.

park, trespass in ; 345 a.

Westwick, Norwich ; 334 a.

Wetheringsett ; ib.

Wetherley, Sir Thomas, president of the College of Physicians ; 234 b.

Wetton :

Wm., arrest of ; 109 a.

— affidavit of ; 108 b.

Wexford ; 508 b, 611 a, 611 b.

governor of ; 611 b.

gaol of ; 533 a.

garrison ; 529 b.

port of ; 252 a, 254 a.

county, lands in ; 61 a.

— specification of lands in ; 520 b.

— James II.'s lands in ; 497 b.

— specification of Lord Esmond's lands in ; 526 a.

— losses in, during rebellion (1641) ; 573 a.

Wexford county—cont.

— marchings of the army in (1649) ; 600 b, 601 a.

— papers relating to affairs in (1798-9) ; 584 a.

bishop of (1778), titular ; 197 b.

Wexham, James, draper, of Hastings, will of ; 332 b.

Wey, Wee, co. Hants, rector, &c. of ; 626 a, 626 b, 627 a, 630 a.

Weyer :

Thos. ; 156 b.

— deposition of ; 157 b.

Weyhill fair ; 630 a.

Weymes, Capt. Sir Patrick ; 597 n.

Weymouster, charter dated at ; 2 a.

Weymouth ; 209 a, 239 b, 241 b, 509 a.

corporation, MSS. of ; xxiv.

garrison ; 210 b.

Lord (1688) ; 555 b.

— the Thynnes and ; 51 a.

— (1708) ; 52 a.

— (1771) ; 192 b.

— (1778) ; 199 a.

— letter of (1779) ; 200 b.

Weys, Paul, petition of ; 537 a.

Weytrode ; 333 b.

Whacker, Francis ; 137 a.

Whales, farming the killing of ; 240 b.

Whaley, Henry, adventurer ; 99 a.

Wharfs on the Thames, regulations, &c. concerning. See Trinity House MSS., report on, passim.

Wharnccliffe, Earl, MSS. of ; xxii.

Wharton :

Duke of, Philip, his wife (1762) ; 472 b.

Lord, Thomas (1709) ; 47 a.

— letter to (1709) ; 47 a.

— Thomas, petition to (1713) ; 67 a.

— his death (1715) ; 59 a.

— the late, ballad on (1715) ; 58 b.

— (1745) ; 571 b.

— letter of ; 211 b.

Capt. ; 132 a.

Humfrey ; 105 a.

Michael, commissioner ; 275 a.

Sir Michael ; 559 a.

P., letters of ; 3 b, 7 b, 8 a, 10 b.

— document signed by ; 2 b.

Philip, son of Sir Thomas ; 64 a.

— Magdalena, widow of ; 65 a.

Sir Thomas, of the Mint ; 64 a.

— his conduct as warden ; 64 b.

— petition of ; 543 a.

— Captain ; 595 a.

— weekly charge of his troop ; 598 a.

Dr. Thomas ; 120 a.

— portrait of ; 232 a.

— examination of ; 232 b.

Whateley, George, jurymen ; 89 a.

Wharton :

Ales and Robert ; 383 a.

John, of Leicester ; 423 a.

Wheat, prices of (1252-1262) ; 343 b.

Wheatacreburgh ; 334 a.

Wheate, T., letter of ; 90 a.

Wheeler, Wheler :

Col., letters of ; 36 a, 39 a.

— his company ; 529 a.

Lieut.-Col. ; 594 a.

Col. Charles ; 542 a, 543 b.

Sir Francis, his squadron ; 231 a.

John, of Guildford, will of ; 334 b.

— of Haddenham, Cambs., will of ; 332 a.

— joiner, of London, will of ; 332 b.

Ensign Jonas ; 594 b.

Thomas, of Soke (Winchester), will of ; 332 b.

William ; 639 a.

— petition of ; 516 b.

Wheelwright, Walter, the gift by his son ; 408 b.

Whetson, Leicester ; 413 b.

Whetehill, Adrian, of London, will of ; 335 a.

Whettratt, Simond, of Tydd St. Giles, will of ; 335 b.

Whipped for punishment, persons ; 386 a.

Whitacre, James, of the Mint ; 67 a.

Whitaker :

Admiral, letters of ; 47 b.

Sir Edwd., letters of ; 39 a.

— in the Mediterranean ; 20 a.

Henry, petitions of ; 147 a.

Laurence, letter of ; 8 b.

Whitbee, Robert, letter to ; 400 a.

Whitbread, Henry, of Cadington ; 7 a.

Whitby :

co. York, decayed piers of ; 241 b.

Roger, late his Majesty's Knt. Harbinger (1670), letter to ;

389 b.

White :

lands set to ; 498 a.

Turton v. ; 161 a.

Mr. Consul (Algiers), letter of ; 287 b.

Col., letters of ; 289 b-292 b, passim.

White—cont.

- Major C. H., letter of; 290 a.
 Lieut. Charles, letter of; 291 a.
 Clement, of Weymouth; 239 b.
 Fr., evidence by; 229 b.
 Frank, commissioner; 273 a.
 — recorder of Pontefract; 275 b.
 Lieut. George; 594 a.
 Lieut. Henry, letter of; 295 b.
 Hugh, of Henley-on-Thames, will of; 335 b.
 John; 127 a.
 — petition of; ib.
 —; 278 b.
 — and Edith, of Connok manor; 625 b.
 Nicholas, collector, co. Longford; 537 b.
 Sir Nicholas; 613 a.
 Philip; 255 b.
 Richard, of Chester; 367 b.
 — of Nayland, will of; 332 b.
 Robert; 278 a.
 — publisher; 552 b.
 Lieut. Robert; 594 b.
 Samuel, answer of; 161 a.
 T., letter of; 90 a.
 Thomas; 124 b, 125 a.
 — answer of; 125 a.
 Capt. Thomas, of the Trinity House; 250 a.
 Sir Thomas, late lord mayor, &c. of London, benefaction made to Chester by; 371 a.
 Walter, soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 William, petition of; 103 a.
- Whitechapel; 159 b.
- Whitcove, Thomas, of Leicester; 420 a.
- Whitehaven; 562 a.
- Whitehead, Benjamin, letters of; 291 a.
- Whiteing, Mary, petition of; 503 a.
- Whitelocke:
 B., of the Admiralty; 247 b.
 — letter of; 248 a.
 — commissioner of the Treasury; 94 b.
 Sir Bulstrode, payments to; ib.
 — Lord, payment to; 95 a.
 James, justice, commissioner; 630 a.
- Whitfield:
 Serjeant; 210 b.
 James; 395 b.
 Capt. Reynolde, his services and distress; 239 a.
- Whitgreave, F., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
- Whitham in Selwood; 335 a.
- Whithead, Ensiga Arthur; 594 a.
- Whithorne, Margaret, widow, petition of; 119 a.
- Whitla, William, letters of; 290 b, 291 a.
- Whitley:
 Morgan, commission to; 362 a.
 Roger, of Chester; 361 b.
 Col. Roger, mayor of Chester (1693), letter to; 392 a.
 Thomas, son of Roger, of Chester; 361 b.
 Will., petitions of; 153 a.
- Whitlock, James, lectures by; 584 a, 585 a.
- Whitmore:
 Charles, deceased; 122 b, 147 b.
 Robert of; 371 a.
 William, petitions of; 122 b, 147 b.
- Whitney, Thomas; 238 a.
- Whitshed:
 Mr., letters of; 49 a.
 chief justice, letter of; 58 b.
 — examinations before; 59 a.
 William, sheriff of Dublin; 540 b.
- Whittaker, Thos.; 392 b.
- Whittaker, fishing at; 213 a.
- Whiteharte, John, of Milton, Wilts, will of; 333 a.
- Whitell:
 John; 364 b.
 — letters of; 384 b, 385 a.
 — letter to; 385 a.
 — certificate signed by; 384 b.
- Whittington, co. Salop; 12 b.
- Whitllesford; 332 a.
- Whittlewood, forest of; 114 b.
- Whitton, Charles, trooper, petition of; 517 a.
- Whitworth:
 Charles; 35 a.
 — letters of; 16 b, 31 b, 32 a, 35 b, 37 b, 38 a, 39 b.
 John, letter of; 386 b.
 — letter to; 389 b.
 — certificate signed by; 384 b.
- Whityng:
 Paul, of Clavering, Essex, will of; 332 a.
 Robert, will of; 332 b.
- Whood, Mr., a painter; 13 b, 63 b.
- Whormby, John, clerk of the Trinity House; 236 a, 261 a.
- Whysand; 352 b.
- Wibbrand, Alderman Daniel; 526 a.
- Wibrowe, Lieut. John; 597 a.
- Wickendon, Mr., of Dover; 254 a.
- Wickford; 332 a.
- Wickham; 334 a.
 Barlow, letters of; 36 a, 40 a.
 Bartholomew; 377 a, 377 b.
 — petition of; 514 a.
- Wicklow; 174 b, 549 b. member for; 502 a.
 castle, garrison at, in 1648; 592 b.
 county, losses in, during rebellion (1641); 573 a.
- Wicksteede, Richard, letter of; 386 b.
- Widdington:
 co. York; 162 b.
 Lord (1670); 174 b.
 Jane, letters of; 39 a.
 Mary, letters of; ib.
- Widdrington:
 Lord (1667); 111 a.
 — (1668); 166 a.
 — prisoner (1715); 50 a.
 — letter of (1717); 40 b.
 Sir Thomas, speaker; 94 b.
 — commissioner of the Treasury; ib.
 — payment to; 95 a.
 Mrs., letter of; 40 a.
- Widmere manor, suit about; 61 a.
- Widmore, Christopher; 125 b.
- Wigan; 383 b, 399 b.
 document dated at; 399 b.
- Wigg, Thomas and Ann; 4 a.
- Wight, Isle of; 241 b, 250 b, 252 b, 235 a.
 Charles I. in; 553 a.
 petition from; 257 b.
 governor of; 257 b.
 intended camp in; 224 b.
- Wight:
 Mr.; 59 a.
 Capt. Andrew, letter of; 292 b.
 Jo., letter of; 315 a.
- Wightman:
 Brigadier, letter of; 36 a.
 James, of Barbidge; 427 b.
- Wigmore Abbey, founded by Hugh, Lord Mortimer, MSS. at; 366 a.
- Wignacourt, M., letter of; 40 a.
- Wigtoft, Thomas, rector of Calstock, will of; 340 a.
- Wigton, document dated at; 351 b.
- Wilton, Alan de, witness; 1 b.
- Wilbraham:
 G. F., Esq., MSS. of; xxii.
 Lieut. Richard; 593 a.
 Thomas, letter to; 382 a.
- Wilburgham family, their claim to the manor of West Farleigh; 329 b.
- Wilby, Robt., tallow-chandler of London, will of; 333 a.
- Wilcke, M. de, letters of; 37 b, 40 a.
- Wilcooke:
 Thomas, mayor of Chester (1670), letters to; 389 b.
 — certificate touching; 361 b.
- Wilde:
 Mr., preacher, of Leicester; 429 a.
 J., lease to; 242 b.
 Rob., parson of Wrasteling, will of; 334 b.
 Ensing John; 595 a.
- Wilden, co. Beds; 8 a.
- Wilder, Cornet Mathew; 595 b.
- Willey, Capt. William, of the Trinity House; 254 a.
- Wildman, Richard, of Pontefract; 275 b.
- Wildts, Mons. de; 558 b.
- Wilervall, Comte de, letter of; 40 a.
- Wilkes, Timothy, executor; 237 b.
- Wilkie, David, letters of; 13 b.
- Wilkins:
 Dr. David, letter to; 100 b.
 Mr. W., letter of; 36 a.
- Wilkinson:
 Brian, of Bradford, co. York; 373 a.
 Gilbert; 388 b.
 James, bond of; 360 b.
 Thomas; 377 a.
 Wm., letter of; 294 a.
- Wilkokes, Richard, of Merish, lease to; 625 a.
- Wilks, Thomas; 383 a.
- Willes:
 Mr., Member of Parliament; 225 b.
 Mrs., MSS. of; xxii.
 J. or W., resident at Furruckabad, letters of; 288 b, 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 294 a, 295 b.
- Willesden; 332 b.
 manor; 632 a.
 lease of lands in; 635 b.
- Willesthorp:
 co. York; 271 a.
 chaplain of; ib.
- William the Conqueror, brethren of Chester who came with; 370 b.
- William I., charters of; 318 b.

- William II., grant by; 318 b.
 William III.; 284 a.
 letters of; 57 a.
 documents by; 12 a.
 warrant by; 86 a.
 his absences from England; 13 a.
 his policy towards France; 18 a. address on his escape (1698); 231 b.
 letters to (1698); 582 b.
 letters referring to; 556 a, 556 b. letter to, on deplorable state of France; 560 b.
 his debts; 24 b.
 death and dissection of; 1 a, 24 b.
 his death; 538 a.
 Chas. O'Connor's view of his administration; 446 a.
 William Frederick, Prince (1819), letters of; 287 b.
 Willis:
 Mr., letter of; 39 a.
 Dr., his library; xxii.
 Major; 594 a.
 Sergeant-major, weekly charge of his troop; 597 b.
 David, soldier; 545 b.
 Sir Hanbury, his verses; 63 b.
 Sir Henry, lord of Ramsey manor; 153 b.
 John; 393 b, 595 b.
 — letter of; 292 b.
 — v. Richard Griffith; 377 a.
 — letter of; 392 b.
 — essay on tin by; 92 b.
 Lewis, alderman of Chester; 361 b.
 — petition of his widow Margaret; 515 a.
 Margaret, petition of; 504 a.
 Philip, of Chester; 361 b.
 Powell, of Chester; ib.
 Rice, v. Richard Birkenhead and Peter Starkey, record of proceedings; 371 b.
 Robert, soldier; 527 b, 542 a.
 Thos.; 156 a, 156 b.
 — information of; 157 a.
 W. J., counsel's opinion signed; 388 b.
 William, recorder of Chester; 361 b.
 — letters of; 389 b, 390 b, 391 b.
 letter to; 389 b.
 Williamson:
 A., letter of; 293 a.
 Alex., of Winceby, will of; 335 b.
 Cæsar; 583 a.
 Geo., letter of; 290 b.
 Lieut. H., letter of; 290 a.
 Lieut. Henry, letter of; 294 b.
 J., letter of; 559 a.
 Capt. James, letters of; 294 b.
 John, trooper; 521 b.
 Secretary (Sir Joseph); 391 a.
 — letter of; 390 b.
 — committed to the Tower; 390 b.
 Martin, of Oxford; 266 a.
 Philip, brewer, of St. Olave's, Southwark, will of; 334 b.
 Thos.; 377 a.
 — priest, of Burgh, will of; 333 a.
 Williamston, co. Louth, plundered; 590 b.
 Willis:
 Mr., proposed resident at Florence; 22 a.
 Dr. Thomas, his book; 462 a.
 Thomas, trooper, petitions of; 509 b, 527 a.
 Willoughby, Wylughby; 413 b.
 co. Warwick, deeds relating to; 265 b.
 Lord (1505), Joan, his wife; 266 a.
 — (1642), letter to; 212 a.
 — of Parham, Francis; 6 a, 102 b.
 — Wm. (1667), writ of summons; 109 a.
 —; 585 a.
 Col., his regiment; 533 a.
 —; 594 b.
 Sir Francis; 581 b, 595 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 Col. Francis, petition of; 542 a.
 — weekly charge of his troop; 598 a.
 — examination by; 589 a.
 Henry, of Lamley, recognizance of; 432 a.
 Lady Honoria, alleged lunatic; 231 a.
 John de, his heirs; 419 b.
 Ma., of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.
 Lady Maude; 263 a.
 — letter of; 264 b.
 Sir Robert, Lord of Grosby; 267 b.
 Robert de, of Leicester; 421 a.
 Wm., petition of; 102 b.
 Willows, Mr., preacher, of Leicester; 429 a.
 Wills:
 General, letter of; 36 a.
 Charles, letters of; 40 b, 90 a.
 Lieut. Thomas; 591 a.
 Wills, testaments, &c.: collection of, in Province of Canterbury (1500-1502); xiv., 332 a-335 b.
 of Simon de Boekyng, goldsmith; 633 b.
 Wills, testaments, &c.—cont.
 Thomas Fuller; 262 a.
 Rich. Fode; 262 b.
 Richard Litfote; 265 a.
 Willymot:
 Johu, of Leicester; 420 a.
 — mortgage by; 423 a.
 Wilme, William, mayor of Chester (1680), letter to; 391 b.
 Wilming, John, gift by; 323 a.
 Wilmington, Lord, letter to (1742); 18 b.
 Wilna, Bishop of; 23 a.
 Wilsby, William, petition of; 521 a.
 Wilshaw, Capt. Francis; 256 b.
 Wilson:
 Mr., letter of; 57 a.
 Major-General, letter of; 40 b.
 Alexander, provost of Edinburgh, his account of the Porteous riots; 310 b, 311 a.
 Andrew, and the Porteous riots; 310 b.
 — his execution, &c.; 311 a.
 Anthony, treasurer of sequestrations of Scotland; 120 a.
 — answer of; 120 a.
 Daniel, action by; 276 a.
 Edward; 380 b.
 alias Durnford, Edward; 381 a.
 Edward, surgeon; 236 b.
 — soldier in Ireland; 513 a.
 G., opinion by; 233 a.
 Henry, bailiff; 146 b.
 — lands held by; 520 b.
 Sir John Maryon, Bart., MSS. of; xxii.
 Capt. Lestock, letter of; 293 b.
 Sir Matthew, Bart., MSS. of; xxii.
 Peter; 480 b.
 Randall, of Chester; 361 b.
 Richard, petition of; 105 a.
 — affidavit of; 105 b.
 — petition of; 525 b.
 Robert, trooper, petition of; 505 a.
 Thomas, soldier; 548 a.
 Wm.; 154 b, 156 b.
 — attestation of; 156 b.
 — sailor; 236 b.
 — mayor of Chester, letter to (1671); 390 a.
 — rental of Chester (1686-87) by; 372 a.
 Wilton:
 in Cleveland, co. York, grant of manor and park of 277 b.
 J., letters of; 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 294 a.
 Ensign Roger; 592 b.
 Wiltshire; 210 a.
 Earl of (13 Edw. IV.), John; 415 b.
 — (Philip and Mary); 94 a.
 — and Ormonde, Thomas; 588 a.
 Wimbisham; 334 a.
 Wimbledon; 18 a, 18 b, 54 a, 55 a.
 letter dated at; 571 a.
 sold to Lord Bristol; 219 a. estate, the Duchess of Marlborough's; 567 a, 568 a.
 Viscount; 585 a.
 Wimborne; 220 b.
 Wimunde Wold; 404 b.
 Wineantou; 332 b.
 Winceby; 335 b.
 Winch, John, affidavit of; 133 a.
 Wincheap, land in; 319 a.
 Winchelsea; 332 b, 333 a.
 Lord (1670); 138 b.
 — (1754); 225 a.
 —; 566 b.
 — his marriage; 567 a.
 — and Nottingham, letters of; 568 a, et seq.
 — MSS. of; xxii.
 Winchester; 63 a, 150 a, 334 b, 335 a.
 documents dated at; 350 b.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiv.
 All Hallows; 332 b.
 St. Mary extra Muros; 333 a.
 St. Elizabeth chapel, near; 263 b.
 St. Giles's Hill without; 264 a. prior and convent of; 262 b. exempted from archiepiscopal jurisdiction; 346 a. charters relating to; 263 b, 264 a. councils of; 321 a.
 diocese of; 25 b.
 John of; 264 a.
 Bishop of (1194); 263 b.
 — (1200), Godfrey, gift by; 264 b.
 — (1244), Raleigh; 263 b.
 — (1255), bond of; ib.
 — Edward II. to be crowned by; 351 a.
 — his executors; ib.
 — (13 Edw. II.), J.; 633 a.
 — (14 Edw. II.); 168 a, 172 a.
 — (1362), W. de Edindon; 263 b.
 — (1366), Edyndon, nominated Abp.; 338 a.

Winchester, Bishop of—cont.

- Edyndon, his refusal and death; 338 b.
- (1379), Wykeham, grant by; 262 b.
- (1452), conveyance to; 268 a.
- Waynflete, letters to; 269 a.
- (1447), H., son of John, Duke of Lancaster; 635 b.
- (temp. Hen. VII.), Richard; 331 b.
- (1514), Abp. Warham's remarks on; 336 a.
- (1524), R. Fox; 234 a.
- (1546), Stephen, letter signed by; 373 b.
- (1555), letter of; 426 a.
- (1668); 117 a.
- (1708), Jonat., letter of; 46 b.
- (1711), letter of; 40 a.

Winchester, Winton:

- Earl of (39 Hen. III.), Quency, witness; 407 a.
- letter to (1586); 582 a.
- Quincy, pedigrees of; 366 a.

Winckel, Col. de, letter of; 37 b.

Wincott, co. Gloucester; 104 a.

Windebanke, Secretary Sir Francis; 247 a, 552 b, 584 a.

Windham:

- Justice (1667); 112 a.
- Mr.; 566 a.
- Major-General, letter of; 17 b.
- Sir W., his case, a libel; 58 b.
- letter to; 59 a.

Windischgratz, Comte de, letter of; 557 b.

Windsor or Windsor Castle; 13 b, 34 b, 222 b, 282 a.

- documents dated at; 34 b, 41 a, 42 a, 43 b, 52 a, 53 b, 57 b, 347 b, 407 b, 559 a.
- constable of (1667). See Mordaunt, John, Viscount.
- chapel of; 7 b.
- organist at; 10 a.
- King Henry's tomb at; 420 b.
- Forest, "the Ryding Forster" and Battelles' Walk or Battels Baylewieke; 282 a.
- Park; 18 a, 568 a.
- the works at; 12 b.
- schedule of an election poll taken at (1711); 284 a.
- constable of, Bulstrode Whitelock; 94 b.
- dean and chapter; 115 a.
- New, document dated from; 284 a.
- the Guildhall, document dated from; 282 a.
- Lord, his regiment (1715); 59 a.

Wine, Wines:

- 1,600 gallons of, presented to Christ Church, Canterbury; 321 a.
- duty (310,000*l.*) Bill (1668), petition against; 126 b.
- of Bordeaux; 239 b, 240 a.
- of France, supplied to Canterbury; 350 b, 353 b.
- of Spain and the Levant; 239 a.
- Act for better execution of laws concerning prices of (1667); 111 b.

Winford, Sarum dioc.; 335 b.

Wingfield:

- Castle, document dated at; 628 a.
- hangings, tapestry, &c. from, at Ewelme; 628 b.
- church, Suffolk, cost of repairing; 627 b.
- Richard; 397 a.

Wingham, Kent:

- church of; 316 a, 328 b.
- division of the great parish of; 327 b.
- college of secular canons at; ib.
- college of; 352 b.

Winnington:

- Sir Francis, warrant to; 281 a.
- Sir Thomas, Bart., MSS. of; xxii.

Winram, John, professor at St. Andrews; 304 b.

Winslowe, T., letter of; 386 b.

Winter, Wynter:

- Edward; 384 b.
- John, agreement by; 265 a.
- his will; ib.
- Robert, conspirator; 434 a.
- Samuel, provost of Trin. Coll., Dublin; 583 b.
- W., action against; 259 a.

Winterbottom, Wynterbothome, Wm., of Chester, mason; 368 a.

Winterfelde, Marquis or Baron de:

- letters of (1706); 32 a.
- letters of (1708); 36 a.
- letter of (1709); 37 b.
- letters of (1711); 40 a.

Winteringham, in Lindsey; 324 b.

Winterton, co. Norfolk:

- lighthouse, &c. at; 238 a, passim, 245 b, passim, 256 b, 258 a, 261 b.
- manor of; 265 a.

Wintle, J., letters of; 294 b, 295 a.

Winton, Sir Symon de, grant by; 264 a.

Wintour:

- Sir John, Secretary to the Queen-Mother; 124 b.
- petition of; 124 b.

Winwood, Sir Ralph; 277 a:

- his account of the marriage of Henry IV. of France; xiii.
- 283 a.
- letters of; 238 a, 282 b, 283 a.
- letter to; 283 a.
- order concerning Arabella Stuart by; 226 a, 228 b.

Winwood's State papers; 283 a.

Wirrall, Eliza, of Dublin, petition signed by; 590 a.

Wisbeach; 332 a, 377 a, 431 a.

Wischart:

- of Pittar; 298
- John; 301 a.
- James; 302 a.

Wise:

- Mrs.; 279 a.
- Edward, junr., certificate of; 287 b.

Wishart, Sir James, of the Trinity House; 260 b.

Wisman, Edward, seaman, petition of; 509 a.

Wiston, Sussex, manor; 137 a.

Withye, Edward; 384 b.

Witchcraft, cases of; 226 a, 228 b.

Witchford; 332 b.

Witehead, Henry, of Carington; 6 a.

Witham:

- manor; 125 a, 125 b.
- Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, MSS. of; xxii.

Wither, H., letter of; 36 a.

Withers:

- Col., letter of; 39
- Lieut. John; 595 a.
- Walter; 597 a.

Withybed, John; 161 b.

Wittenham, West, deeds concerning; 262 b.

Wittlesey, Will., Bishop of Rochester and of Worcester; 264 b.

Witting, George, of Shaftesbury, will of; 333 a.

Woburn Abbey, document dated from; 286 b.

Wodehill, John; 626 b.

Wodeton; 323 b.

Wodeward, John, of London, will of; 335 b.

Wodhall, John, vice-admiral's commissary general (Chester); 360 b.

Wodhull, Henry, monk of Abingdon; 342 b.

Wodsworth, W., letters of; 289 b, 290 a, 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 294 a.

Wogan:

- Hugh; 499 b.
- James, trooper; 527 a.
- Katherine, petitions of; 501 a, 505 a, 508 b.
- Wokehole or Wokyhole, co. Somerset, manor of; 639 a.
- Wokingham:
- Berks; 335 b.
- high stewardship of; 283 b, 284 a, 287 b.

Wolaston; 422 a.

Walburne, ceasers of; 9 a.

Walcott, Geo., on Coventry committee; 7 b.

Wolf, John, of Frollesworth; 413 a.

Wolfe, General, in command against the rebels (1745); 314 b.

Wolfenbuttle; 285 a.

Wollaston, Richard, master gunner; 94 b.

Wollastone, William, of Whelamton; 5 a.

Wolley, Mr., letter of; 228 a.

Wolley, Wm.; 151 b.

Wolseley, Lord, Charles, payment to (1658); 95 a.

Wolsey:

- Cardinal; 234 b.
- picture of; 231 b.
- Cavendish's history of; 585 a.

Wolsingham, co. Durham; 105 a.

Wolstenholme:

- John, letter of; 243 a.
- Sir John, letter to; 245 a.
- his narration concerning fishing; 247 a.

Wolterton, Robert, clerk of Bodney, will of; 332 a.

Wolton, Rev. Dr., sermon by; 260 b.

Wolverhampton; 77 a, 79 a.

- letter dated at; 79 a.

Wolverston:

- Suffolk; 240 a.
- Mr.; 512 a.

Wolves in Ireland, the, scheme for destroying; 501 b, 504 a.

Wolworth, Richard, of Wickwar; 335 b.

Wombwell, J., letter of; 290 b.

Wood:

- , to be Secretary for Ireland (1769); 191 a.
- objections against; ib.
- Lieut.-Genl., letters of; 36 a, 37 b.
- Mr.; 286 b.
- Abraham, deputy aulneger; 438 a.
- Sir Andrew, of Largo, admiral; xvii., 304 b, 308 a, 308 b.
- Auditor; 130 a.
- David, of Craig; 301 a.
- Capt. G., letter of; 290 b.
- Sir James, letters of; 36 a, 37 b.
- John, of Fettercairn; 301 a.
- Lieut.-Col. Mark, letters of; 291 a, 292 b, 295 b.

Wood—cont.

- Randall, mayor of Leicester; 425 b.
 Robert, letters to; 285 b, 286 a.
 — affidavit of; 116 b.
 — master of Christ's Hospital; 257 b.
 — of Norwich, will of; 333 b.
 Thomas, brewer, petition of; 507 b.
 Lieut. Valentine; 594 a.
 Will., priest, of Rampton and Yorkshire, will of; 335 a.
 William, of Wolverhampton, his coinage proposal; xii., 77 a.
 — letter of; 79 a.
 — memorial of; 77 a.
 — petition of; 76 b.
 — his office at Bristol; 79 a.
 — testing of his half-pence; 79 a, 79 b.
- Woodbridge; 333 b, 334 a. beacon at; 258 b, 259 a.
- Woodchester, Monastery of Dominick Friars at; xxiv.
- Woodchurch in Thanet; 340 a.
- Woodcote; 219 b.
- Woodfield, William, trooper; 538 a.
- Woodford:
 Dr., master of Ewelme Hospital; 627 a.
 James, letter of; 431 a.
- Woodhay, documents dated from; 377 a.
- Woodhouse:
 Horatio; 143 a.
 — certificate touching; 143 a.
- Woodland, Thomas, of Newark Hospital; 418 b.
- Woodley and Mannering, case between; 585 a.
- Woodnesborough, prior of Christ Church, Canterbury; 316 b.
- Woodstock; 1 a, 13 b, 40 a. charters dated at; 1 b.
 documents dated at; 265 b, 346 b, 415 b.
 Park; 60 b.
 James I. at; 435 b, 441 b.
 Edmund of, Lord Warden, &c., commission to; 354 a.
 —, carter, payment to; 526 a.
- Woodward:
 Mr.; 282 a.
 Col. Benj., his company at Leicester; 438 b.
 John, payment to; 90 a.
 Richard; 379 a.
 Capt. Richard; 596 b.
 Thomas, payment to; 90 a.
- Wool:
 woolfells, &c., Act for preventing frauds in exporting;
 127 a, 137 b-139 a, 160 b.
 report to the King concerning (1670); 137 b. exportation; 277 b.
 statutes regarding, in Ireland; 207 a, 208 a. manufacture; 134 a.
 — in Yorkshire and Lancashire; 208 a. trade in, Leicester guild, regulations for; 421 a. cloth, Act for better regulating manufacture of; 123 b, 126 a.
- Woolpit; 333 b, 334 a, 335 a.
- Woolwich:
 office of ballasting at; 244 a.
 ship building at; 245 a, 245 b.
- Woorspoels, Jan Fernando de; 23 a.
- Wootton:
 Skryves in, Hampshire; 263 b.
 Sir Henry, poems by; 584 a.
 William, quartermaster; 595 b.
- Worcester; 9 a, 332 a, 333 a, 335 b, 358 a.
 documents dated at; 46 b, 358 a. battle of; 429 b, 523 b.
 — thanksgivings for victory at; ib.
 Brudeport Street; 638 a. castle; 150 a, 150 b.
 Foregate Street, letter dated at; 62 b.
 Powyk Lane; 638 b.
 St. Andrew's Church, account of deeds belonging to; 638 a.
 St. Mary's Church; 638 a.
 St. Mary's monastery at; 638 b.
 Wodestathe Street in; 638 a. county; 208 b, 210 a.
 — gaol of, Act concerning (1670); 150 a.
- Worcester, Bishop of:
 (1349), John de Evesham; 337 b.
 (1365) Wittlesey; 264 b.
 — elected archbishop; 338 b.
 (1501), S. Gliglis; 263 a.
- Worcester, bishopric of; 49 b.
- Worcester, Earl of:
 (1399), Thomas de Percy; 264 b.
 (1582), Wm., his players; 430 b.
 — their unruly conduct at Leicester; ib.
 (1605), his players; 428 b.
 E., document signed by (1608); 87 b.
 (1609); 228 b.
 document signed by (1611); 88 b.
- Worcester, Marquis of:
 Lord Glamorgan, afterwards; 576 b.
 letter of (1646); 590 a.

Worcester, Marquis of—cont.

- Edward (1667); 111 a, 111 b the late (1667), large sums of money expended by, in service of Charles II.; x., 111 b.
- Worcester, Marchioness of:
 letter of (1666); 104 a.
 petitions of Margaret (1667); x., 111 a, 111 b.
- Worcester, W.; 268 b. petition and declaration of; 268 b.
 expenses of; 268 b.
 notes by; ib.
- Worden, Robert, commission to; 280 a.
- Wordsworth, James, letters of; 290 b, 291 a, 292 b, 293 a,
 294 a, 295 a.
- Workeman, Matthew, soldier; 548 a.
- Worsop:
 Queen Anne of Denmark's visit to; 441 a.
 letters dated at; ib.
- Worldham, East, church of; 263 b.
- Worley, Thomas, of Slough in Upton, will of; 332 b.
- Wormby, John, collector of customs; 260 b.
- Worship:
 Capt., letter of; 289 b.
 Mr., of Leicester; 431 a.
- Worsley:
 Dr.; 133 b, 134 a.
 Mr., instructions to; 47 a.
- Worth:
 Andrew, petition of; 123 b.
 Edward, Bishop of Killaloe, petitions of; 501 a, 522 b,
 536 a.
 Minnis, sluice at; 351 b.
- Worthing, Sussex; 264 a.
- Wortley:
 Lady v. Staesmore; 163 a.
 Mr., of the Treasury; 64 a.
 Sir Francis; 161 b.
 — deceased; 163 a.
 Dame Frances, widow of, petition of; 163 a.
 — answer to; 163 b.
 — commission to; 2 b.
- Wortmuller, M., letter of; 39 b.
- Wotton or Wootton, Surrey; 3 b.
- Wotton:
 Lord (1604); 98 a.
 (1668); 166 a.
 Edward, president of the College of Physicians; 226 b.
 T., Harwich pilot; 260 a.
 Will., draper, of London, will of; 333 a.
- Wouldham, rector of; 346 b.
- Wramplyingham; 333 b.
- Wrangle:
 M. or Comte, letters of; 36 a, 37 b, 39 a, 39 b.
- Wrangle, Wrangle:
 co. Lincoln; 335 a.
 manor of; 411 b, 412 a, 412 b, 418 a. writ to tenants of; 412 a.
- Wrasteling; 334 b.
- Wratislaw; 23 a.
 Count, John Wenceslaus; 12 a, 20 b, 32 b. letters of; 31 a, 31 b, 36 b, 38 a, 39 b, 40 b.
- Wraye, Sir Christopher; 6 a.
- Wregran, document dated from; 397 a.
- Wren:
 Mr., "his Royal Highness' secretary;" 388 a.
 — letter of; ib.
 — letter to; ib.
 Christopher; 230 a.
 Sir Christopher; 27 b.
 — letters of; 39 a, 57 a.
 — comptroller of works; 12 b.
 Mathew, secretary to Duke of York, commission to 280 a.
- Wrench, John; 393 b.
- Wrexham; 390 b.
- Wright:
 Dr.; 229 b.
 Alexander, letter of; 290 b.
 Capt. Andrew, letter of; 295 b.
 Edward; 377 b.
 — suit of; 274 a.
 — petition of, against his son; 522 a.
 Lieut. George; 592 a.
 Governor, letters of; 288 b, 289 a.
 J., of Ipswich, letter to; 256 b.
 Major James, letter of; 288 b.
 John, suit of; 274 a.
 — information of; 127 b.
 — of Chester; 361 b.
 — of Ely, will of; 332 b.
 — of Lapworth, conspirator; 434 a.
 Ensign John; 591 b.
 Mathew, suit of; 274 a.
 Nathan or Sir Nathan, letters of; 440 a, 440 b.
 Richard, of Chester; 361 b, 365 b, 375 b.
 — commission to; 362 a.

Wright—cont.

- Robert ; 365 a.
- suit of ; 274 a.
- mayor of Chester (1648) letters to ; 384 b, 385 a.
- of Castle Donnington, commission to ; 418 a.
- Thomas, alderman of Chester ; 361 b.
- petition of ; 500 a.
- petition of ; 509 a.
- baker, of Leicester ; 441 a.
- William, of Chester, letter to ; 387 a.
- of Chester, deceased ; ib.
- mayor of Oxford ; 103 b.
- alias* Cooke, Will., of Sprowston, will of ; 334 a.
- Wrightman, Major-General ; 22 a.
- Wrights, the, of Lincolnshire, conspirators ; 434 a.
- Wrighton ; 334 b.
- Wriothlesley, Lord, Thomas, Lord Chancellor (1546), letter signed by ; 373 b.
- Wroth, General, letter of ; 40 a.
- Wrotham, West ; 333 b.
- Wrottesley, Lord, MSS. of ; xxii.
- Wrotton ; 333 b.
- Wroughton, William, letter of ; 289 b.
- Wroxals, co. Wilts ; 639 a.
- Wulpin, Cecilia, widow of ; 323 a.
- Wulley, Florence, Bishop of Clogher, will of ; 334 a.
- Wulpett ; 333 b.
- Wulston, John, of Wolaston ; 422 a.
- Wurtemberg, Wirttemberg, Duke or Prince of :
 - letter to (1563) ; 582 a.
 - letter of (1685) ; 558 a.
 - letters of (c. 1690) ; 31 a.
 - letters of (1706) ; 31 b.
 - letters of (1707) ; 32 a.
 - letter of (1708) ; 36 a.
 - letters of (1709) ; 36 b, 37 b.
 - letter of (1710) ; 38 a.
 - letters of (1711) ; 40 a.
 - Charles Randolph (1712) ; 40 b.
 - warrants by (1713) ; 14 b.
 - his claims ; 59 b.
- Wurtzburg, troops of ; 44 a.
- Wyat — ; 251 a.
- Wyatt, Lieut. Charles, letters of ; 291 a, 294 a.
- Wybarne, Agnes, of Titchhurst, will of ; 335 b.
- Wyberton ; 335 a.
- Wyborton, manor of ; 6 a.
- Wybourne :
 - John ; 156 a, 156 b.
 - information of ; 159 a.
 - Stephen, of Southwark, will of ; 335 b.
- Wybunbur, Wm., junior ; 367 b.
- Wybunbure, Wm. de, senior ; 367 b.
- Wybunburg, Wm. de ; 367 a.
- Wyeat, Mr., of Leicester ; 430 b.
- Wyche, Richard, of Castle Cary, will of ; 335 b.
- Wyekam, Bartholomew Clement ; 376 b.
- Wyelf :
 - John ; 324 a.
 - his intrusion into Canterbury College ; 342 a.
- Wycombe :
 - High, borough of, MSS. of ; xxiv.
 - West ; 61 a.
 - William de, chaplain ; 633 b.
- Wye :
 - church ; 316 a.
 - Wm., prisoner at Chester ; 381 b.
- Wyggeston, John, mayor of Leicester ; 420 a.
- Wygston :
 - John, mayor of Leicester ; 422 b.
 - Roger, mayor of Leicester ; 422 b, 423 a.
 - Wyllian, mayor of Leicester ; 415 b.
- Wyke, Andrew de ; 262 b.
- Wykebam, Wykham :
 - manor of ; 635 a, 635 b.
 - William of, purchase by ; 263 b.
 - Bishop of Winchester, grant by ; 262 b.
 - Sir W. de, archdeacon of Lincoln ; 412 b.
 - William, executor of Jp. of London ; 635 b.
- Wyker, M. de, letter of ; 36 a.
- Wykes, Aquila ; 381 a.
- Wykewane, Robert de ; 408 b.
- Wylbram, Thomas, letters of ; 377 a.
- Wyld :
 - Walter, of Glastonbury, will of ; 335 b.
 - William, taken by the Turks ; 245 a.
- Wyles, John ; 268 a.
- Wylford, Thomas, son of Robert ; 376 b.
- Wyllington, William, of Bishopsbourne, will of ; 340 a.
- Wymington, mausion house, &c. in ; 6 a.
- Wymondeswold ; 414 a, 423 a.
- Thomas, son of John de ; 423 a.
- John, of Leicester ; 415 b.
- Wymondham ; 333 b.
- Wymondshall, Dame ; 114 b.

- Wyncall, Jo., his Latin speech to James I. at Leicester ; 441 b.
- Wychecombe, William de, rector of St. Andrew's, Worcester ; 638 a.
- Wyndham :
 - Baron ; 138 b.
 - Col. Edmond, his regiment ; 546 a, 547 a.
 - Francis, justice ; 272 b.
 - Thomas ; 125 b.
 - Sir William, letters of ; 568 a.
 - See Windham.
- Wyne, Thomas, of "Wyndey," will of ; 335 b.
- Wynet, Major A., letter of ; 295 b.
- Wyngefeld :
 - Edmund ; 7 a.
 - Elizabeth, delinquent ; 4 a, 4 b.
- Wynger, Henry, haberdasher, of London, will of ; 332 a.
- Wynngere, Thomas, of Leicester ; 412 b.
- Wynkfeld :
 - Elizabeth, wife of Sir John, of Letheringham, will of ; 334 a.
 - Henry, clerk, of Letheringham, will of ; ib.
- Wynkefeld, Sir John de ; 358 b.
- Wynkfeld, John de, of Ipswich ; 343 a.
- Wynn, Wynne :
 - Roberts v. ; 104 b.
 - Edward, commission to ; 362 a.
 - Francis, of Whithy ; 241 b.
 - G., letter of ; 39 a.
 - George ; 103 b.
 - alias* Bodwell, Griffith ; 105 a.
 - petition of ; 104 b.
 - case of ; ib.
 - Griffith, letter of ; 377 a.
 - Humphrey, letter of ; 212 b.
 - James ; 390 a.
 - John, his son ; 212 b.
 - Doctor Owen, of the Mint ; 64 a, 70 a, 71 a.
 - Capt. Owen ; 399 a.
 - Ensign Robert, letter of ; 291 a.
 - Rowland ; 167 a, 167 b, 173 b, 174 a.
 - orders, &c. touching ; 167 b.
 - Thomas ; 104 b.
 - W. W. E., Esq., MSS. of ; xxii.
- Wynor :
 - member of the Hamburg Co. ; 147 b.
 - Joan, of Bradford-on-Avon, will of ; 332 b.
- Wynscombe ; 639 b.
- Wynthorpe, Ayscough of ; 264 b.
- Wynwoode, Peter, mayor of Leicester ; 422 b.
- Wyrcetre, William, documents written by ; 268 a.
- Wyse :
 - Mr., of Waterford ; 450 b, 462 b, 468 a, 470 a.
 - Francis ; 542 a.
 - Sir Thomas ; 451 a.
 - Thomas, of Waterford ; 541 b.
 - petition relating to ; 501 a.
- Wysnesiche, Wisnesysche ; 371 a.
- Wytsand, port of ; 344 b.

X.

- Xavier, Prince ; 220 b.
- Ximenes, Marquis de, letter of ; 39 a.

Y.

- Yalding ; 334 b.
- vicar of ; 329 a.
- Yale ; 332 a.
- Yarmouth or Great Yarmouth ; 29 b, 94 a, 240 a, 241 b, 242 b, 249 b, 252 b, 253 a, 255 b, 256 b, 333 b, 334 b.
- Bill concerning, amendments, &c. (1670) ; 143 b.
- herrings, exportation, &c. ; 235 b, 237 b, 246 a, 246 b, 247 a, passim.
- ships of ; 242 b.
- lights and buoys at ; 243 b.
- the sands at ; 234 a.
- bailiffs of ; 252 a.
- letters to ; 244 a, 246 a, 256 a.
- petition of ; 247 a.
- Somerton Hall, near ; 258 a.
- Yarmouth, Lady :
 - (1756) ; 221 a.
 - Henry Fox and ; 220 b, 222 a.
- Yarner, Capt. Abraham ; 597 a.
- Yarwood, Randolph, petition of ; 148 b.
- Yate, co. Gloucester, freeholders, &c. of, petition of ; 119 a.

- Yate :
 Elihu, executor; 257 b.
 John; 11 a.
 William, mayor of Bristol (1597), letter of; 379 b.
 — letter to; ib.
- Yates :
 Ensign Daniel; 594 a.
 Richard, of Leicester, his daughters; 420 a.
 — deer stalker; 433 b.
 Thomas, a poor mariner; 433 b, 434 a.
- Yaxham; 334 a.
- Yaxley :
 Richard, conveyance to; 273 a.
 Robert, physician; 234 b.
- Ydny, rector of; 307 b.
- Ydonea, daughter of Adam, of Shitlington; 636 b.
- Yielden, assessment at; 10 a.
- Yeland, Ada de; 356 a.
- Yelland, beside Lancaster; 386 a.
- Yelverton :
 — readings on statutes by; 584 b.
 H., attorney-general; 238 b.
 Sir Henry, deceased; 161 b.
 — his widow, Susanna; ib.
 Katherine, lands held by; 518 a.
 Neville, Bill touching (1671); 161 b.
 Sir W.; 268 b.
 Sir Will., gifts to; ib.
- Yemalis, Arrura, service of; 322 a.
- Yeoman, Nicholas; 637 b.
- Yeomans, John, letter of; 295 b.
- Ylleghe, manor of; 322 b.
- Ymma, Elfyfu, manor given to Canterbury by; 324 a.
- Ynggylby :
 John, prior; 271 a.
 William; ib.
- Yonge :
 Sir George, letters of; 289 b–295 b, passim.
 — letter to; 289 b.
 Margaret, will of; 333 a.
 Peter de, of Utrecht, his daughter Lady Denbigh; 569 a, note.
- Yoredale, document dated at; 346 b.
- York; 6 a, 209 b, 212 a, 358 a, 417 a, 585 a, 636 a. documents dated at; 1 b, 211 b, 344 b, 352 b, 357 b, 383 b.
 corporation, MSS. of; xxiv.
 justices at; 34 a.
 Goldsmiths' Company of; 70 a. company of Merchant Adventurers, MSS. of; xxiv.
 mint at; xii., 70 b, 74 b.
 parliament at (1300); 347 b.
 — (1314); 352 b.
 Q. Elizabeth's progress to; 431 a. mayor, &c. of, letter to; 352 b.
 — certificate of; 46 a.
- Yorkshire : families, arms, &c. of; 636 a.
 Worthies, Portraits of; ib.
 Philosophical Society, MSS. of; xxiv. militia of (1650); 637 b.
 woollen manufacturers in; 207 b, 208 a. schools in, decrees concerning; 271 b.
- York :
 Archbishop of, Roger, suspension of; 317 a.
 — settlement of the dispute with the Abp. of Canterbury (1352); 320 a.
 — (1305), W. de Greenfeld; 350 a.
 — prevented from displaying his cross, &c. in the province of Canterbury; 351 b.
 — his attempt to prevent the Abp. of Canterbury from carrying his cross into the northern province; 352 b.
 — (1396), Arundel, transferred to Canterbury; 340 a.
 — (1460), W. Booth; 262 b.
 — (1519), Wolsey; 234 b.
 — Toby Mathew; 583 a.
 — Richard (1633); 383 b.
 — (1670); 174 b.
 — (1691), and Queen Mary; 562 a.
 dean and chapter; 145 a.
 — Dickinson v. (1671); 162 a.
 — answer of; 162 b.
 Duke of, Richard (15th century), warrant of; 263 b.
 — letter of his wife Cecily; 268 b.
 — (1441), his expedition against the French; 634 a.
 — (1460); 370 a.
 — afterwards James II.; 30 a.
 — (1657); 218 b.

York—cont.

- Duke of, commissions, warrants, &c. of (1660, &c.); 279 b
 — 281 a, passim.
 — household book of (1660–1673); xiii., 277 a, 277 b.
 — High Admiral (1662); 251 a.
 — his guards of horse (1663); 529 b.
 — reports to (1664); 252 a, 252 b.
 — petitions, &c. to (1664); 252 b.
 — motion by (1667); 111 b.
 — grant to; 236 a.
 — (1668); 120 b, 122 b.
 — (1669); 131 a, 131 b.
 — his oyster layings (1671); 160 b.
 — privilege case; 160 b.
 — income from ballast office secured to; 253 b.
 — his addresses to Lady Bellasis (1673); 498 a, note.
 — letter to (1674); 256 a.
 — picture of (1680); 257 a, 258 b.
 — congratulations on his escape (1683); 230 b, 258 b.
 — his estates in Ireland; 497 b, 499 a.
 — mourning for (1728); 62 a.
 — his wife (1791); 295 a.
 Duchess of (1660); 278 a.
 — deceased (1671); 280 b.
 New, letter dated at; 27 a.
 — Lutherans sent to (1709); 47 a.
 — papers relating to; 47 b.
 Virginia, U.S., papers relating to capitulation of; 296 b.
- Yorke :
 Hon. Col. (1751), letter to; 284 a.
 Mr.; 190 b.
 Hon. Mr., counsel; 232 b.
 — opinion by; ib.
 Col. J., letter of; 290 a.
 Joan, of Framlingham, will of; 333 b.
 Sir John, Commissioner; 275 a.
 — of Wakefield, priest; 637 a.
 John, of Leicester; 435 b.
 Philip, report of; 25 b.
- Youghal; 102 a, 138 a.
 port of; 252 a, 254 a.
 natives of (1660); 99 a.
- Young :
 — 166 a.
 — his divorce; 571 a.
 Alexander, servant to James VI.; 298 b, 302 a.
 Allen Edward, letter of; 289 b.
 Lieut. Chas. Wallace, letter of; 293 a.
 Henry, of Poplar, mariner; 241 a.
 Samuel, letters of; 290 a, 292 b, 294 a.
 Simon, petition of; 511 b.
 Thomas, of Chester; 361 b.
 Major Wm., letter of; 294 b.
- Youngson, Lieut. Wm., letter of; 295 b.
- Ysche, the river; 26 b.
- Ystele, Nich. de, register by; 336 b.
- Yugo, Robert, of London, will of; 332 a.
- Yuune de Luucners, witness; 270 a.

Z.

- Zagalaepor, fortaleza de; 22 b.
- Zampeschi, Brunoso, Venetian governor; 22 b.
- Zanten; 17 b.
- Zealand; 387 b.
- Zedag, Muley, a king in Barbary; 240 b.
- Zehe, Major, letter of; 39 a.
- Zelada, Marquis de, letters of; 40 a.
- Zelç, M. le, letter of; 36 a.
- Zell, Duke of (1691); 564 b.
- Zetland, Earl of, MSS. of; xxii.
- Zinsendorf :
 Count; 16 b, 20 b.
 — letter of (1715); 40 b.
- Zint, Baron de, letter of; 37 b.
- Zinzerling, M. or Baron, letters of; 36 b, 38 a, 47 b.
- Zoborow, Comte, letter of; 36 a.
- Zouch :
 Sir Allen; 122 b.
 — petitions of; 122 b, 123 a.
 Dame Katherine, petitions of; 122 b, 123 a.
- Zoutland, M., letter of; 37 b.
- Zuch :
 Alan la, of the Tower; 88 a.
 Alan Le, witness; 407 b.
- Zuniga, Pedro de, Marquis of Flores; 213 b.
- Zurich, Comte de, letter of; 32 a.

LONDON:

Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE.
 Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
 For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.